Hobby outlines plan for new taxes

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Claiming a lower offer he made last month is "off the table," Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby Monday laid out a special session spending plan that would require $6.7 billion in new taxes.

Hobby, who outlined the proposal to about 50 business and civic leaders, said he expects lawmakers will make reductions from what he called "an enormous amount of money to raise." The $28.2 billion proposal is $645 million less than the 1988-1989 spending plan the Senate approved during the regular legislative session but $215 million more than a compromise Hobby offered during House-Senate budget negotiations.

Because the Legislature never took a final vote on that offer, Hobby said it no longer stands. "A basic principle of negotiation is you make an offer, and if it's not accepted, it is withdrawn," he said.

With Gov. Bill Clements refusing to allow more than $2.9 billion in new taxes, lawmakers adjourned the regular session without passing a budget or a tax bill to pay for it. They return next Monday for a special session to write a spending bill for the fiscal year that begins Sept. 1. Comptroller Bob Bullock says they face a projected shortfall of $6.5 billion.

"We cannot afford to balance our budget at the expense of human services and public and higher education," Hobby told the business leaders. "Recent budget cuts have damaged our colleges and universities. So far, it is not irreparable, but another round of reductions might be."

The Democratic lieutenant governor said the Legislature could raise the money through a "pretty close to 2-percent" temporary increase in existing tax rates. He warned that as the combined state and local sales tax exceeds 7 percent, it becomes "an onerous, repressive, regressive, unjust tax." The combined rate in Midland is currently 6.25 percent.

Republican Secretary of State Jack Rains, one of Clements' closest advisors, said Hobby's plan already calls for too much in taxes. "This comes at a time when the average Texans' budget is down, his revenues are down, Texas business revenues are down," Rains said.

"I can't find an economist who says, 'When you're in a recession, tax your way out of it.' "

Rains also said Hobby raised the issue of a state income tax during his meeting with business leaders. "He made it clear in his view an income tax is coming," Rains said.

Hobby said "mention was made" of an income tax, but he ruled it out as a viable option for this summer. "It increasingly comes up at these meetings," he said.

Visitors from Thailand share views of America

By JAMILAH OWENS
Staff Writer

Two visitors to Midland from the exotic southeast Asian country of Thailand seemed unsurprised by the level of security they experienced upon entering the United States.

That security started even before the pair, Tipawan Phichaya-Anutarat, 26, and Kriengsorn Showpayun, 31, entered the country, they said.

Midland hostess Helen Greathouse, an avid traveler and frequent visitor of Bangkok, said that the two were issued American visas in Thailand on "my cognizance that they will return.

"The problem is that most Thai people who leave their country usually do not return. So the government has limited the number of visas issued," Mrs. Greathouse said.

Probably the greatest concern to the U.S. Government is the number of Thai nationals convicted for drug trafficking in this country, Ms. Phichaya-Anutarat said. As a result, American immigration officials closely scrutinize all Thai people who enter the U.S.

She recalled that at the Hawaiian airport where the pair entered the country, they were carefully checked for drugs because Thailand is known as "the land of drugs."

Despite the problems, Ms. Phichaya-Anutarat and Showpayun, whom Mrs. Greathouse has known since 1982, leapt at the opportunity to visit the United States. "I always had a dream of seeing something different from Thailand...," said Ms. Phichaya-Anutarat.

And Mrs. Greathouse was happy to help her Thai friends realize their dream, she said.

According to Ms. Phichaya-Anutarat, the trip from Thailand to the United States took about 18 hours by plane. The couple arrived in Midland, quite by coincidence, on the day before Mrs. Greathouse's birthday, via Singapore, Hong Kong, Hawaii, Los Angeles and Dallas.

When asked about their first impressions of Texas, Ms. Phichaya-Anutarat replied, "I like Texas very much because it is so different from Bangkok — too many people are there — the people here are so nice and it's quiet." The soft-spoken Showpayun said simply that Texas is "different."

Added Ms. Phichaya-Anutarat, "I like the food here, but I miss Thailand food — rice three times a day." For both, this was their first trip to the U.S., they said.

Because of the pair's experience in the Thai tourist industry and the many American movies released in their country, neither were surprised by what they saw in America, they said.

Ms. Phichaya-Anutarat said that in the movies, "We see Americans with big cars, houses and lots of jewelry."

Crude oil price edges above $20

By JOHN C. GIVEN
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Crude oil futures prices have closed above $20 per barrel for the first time in 1½ years, breaching a psychologically important trading barrier.

Yet the move may still not carry much long-term significance, analysts said Monday.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for July delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed at $20.06 per 42-gallon barrel, up 15 cents from Friday's close.

In two sessions since mid-May, the contract had reached prices of $20 or higher. But this was the first time it stayed above that level since Jan. 28, 1986, when it closed at $20.17, said Mary Ann Matlock, spokeswoman for the exchange.

Still, Thomas F. McKiernan of McKiernan & Co., which deals in oil futures contracts, noted that trading volume had been about half of normal levels, as the market remained in the doldrums awaiting the outcome of the June 25 meeting of oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Accordingly, he said he did not consider the surge past $20 as a bullish sign.

Light trading makes it easier to move prices in either direction, since there are fewer checks and balances.

McKiernan said traders "don't want to do anything until they see if OPEC will stay with the progress it has made (in restricting production to support prices), and not misbehave."

Madison Galbraith, senior energy specialist at Merrill Lynch Energy Futures, said that while it was not clear how strong the demand for gasoline would be this summer, it appeared that the market's momentum favored more buying, at least before the OPEC meeting.

Focus moves to plans for federal budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today the congressional spotlight on the Iran-Contra affair is growing dim and people "have gone back to their favorite television shows."

In a question-and-answer session with economics reporters from outside Washington, the president opened with a statement in which he said, "Some in Congress want to bust the budget. I won't let them and the American people won't either."

The president plans a series of speeches around the country in the coming weeks on his plans for changes in the federal budget process.

"I don't think there is a state that would put up with as Mickey Mouse an affair as we have at the federal level," he said.

He was asked, however, whether this would be enough to counter the spotlight that a reporter said was being cast on the administration's troubles by the Iran-Contra hearings being held by Congress.

"I think that spolight has been growing so dim in recent days that when you get a mile and a half way from the Potomac River, an awful lot of people have gone back to their favorite television shows and I don't blame them."

"I have never heard so much hearsay in all my life that wouldn't be permitted in a courtroom for a minute and a half and it's taken as gospel by those who want to go farther with this," the president said.

"But I shouldn't get lost in that," he added, and went on to say the budget has been a high priority of his administration "from the moment I came here."

Meanwhile Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, in a report to Congress, said U.S. vessels in the Persian Gulf protecting Kuwaiti tankers will be authorized to use force "in the face of attack or hostile intent indicating immiment attack."

Weinberger maintained that risks to U.S. naval forces from protecting the reflagged vessels are "moderate," but said, "There are some risks, particularly from unconventional threats, such as Iranian terrorism or sabotage."

Weinberger released an unclassified version of an administration plan sent to Capitol Hill late Monday describing plans to provide Navy protection to 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers which are being allowed to fly U.S. flags.

Earlier, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said that Reagan's televised speech Monday night may not be enough to regain momentum for the embattled president.

Dole said Reagan, "of course, was trying to get back the momentum. I'm not certain he did it with that speech, but it was an effort."

Reagan: 'If we don't do the job, the Soviets will'

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Foreign Affairs Editor
The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — There is no retreat in the Persian Gulf — that's the message that President Reagan imparted to the American people Monday night.

In fact, his warning that "if we don't do the job, the Soviets will," is the first volley in a major new counter-offensive against critics who have accused Reagan of dangerously escalating tensions by planning to use U.S. warships in the Gulf to escort Kuwaiti tankers flying the American flag.

The first shot was aimed over the head of Congress, where much of the criticism has been voiced against U.S. policy in the Gulf, and carried straight to the American people in Reagan's 16-minute nationally televised speech.

Although the president's address also was devoted to arms control, the budget deficit and last week's economic summit, Reagan's rhetoric on the Gulf had more bite than anything else he said. And today (Tuesday, June 16) another administration salvo will be fired — right at Congress.

Basin area officials hope sales tax shares indicate trend

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

City financial directors in Midland and Odessa were cautiously optimistic today that their cities' shares of the combined state and local sales tax indicates a bottoming out of the ravaged oil-based economy.

"I think we have felt for the bottom," said Midland Finance Director Troy Gifford, surveying the slightly more than $415,000 payment from the state Comptroller's Office the city received this month.

Relating the payment to the oil market, Gifford said, "As long as we have stability in the 18-dollar range (per barrel of oil), then we probably have seen the floor."

Based on the two figures, Gifford posited the existence of "perhaps a modest turn-around in place" in the local economy.

Odessa Fiscal Services Director Frank Muser called that city's $379,000 payment from the comptroller "a little more encouraging" than that of past months.

Not including payments received quarterly, which reflect in part sales made by a different set of retail outlets, this month's Odessa payment was the largest in the last 10 months, Muser said.

While Muser was "reluctant" to label the increase an indication of better economic times, he said, "Hopefully, in another six months, we'll see some pick up."

Midland's June sales tax check brought the city's total fiscal-year-to-date payments to about $3.45 million, a figure 14.5 percent below the amount received by June last year.

Odessa's total of about $2.88 million so far this fiscal year is running about 21.3 percent behind last year's pace.

The money represents the cities' shares of the combined state and local sales tax collected by the state Comptroller's Office. That combined tax in Midland totals 6.25 cents for every dollar spent.

One cent of the 6.25-cent rate goes to Midland city coffers under the arrangement.

The money received in June represents taxes collected on sales made in April and reported to the Comptroller by May 20. Tax on most Easter sales were included in this month's check, Gifford said.

While Midland projections made during last fiscal year's budgetary process for the sales tax receipts seem on target, Odessa is experiencing a serious shortfall under what was projected, Muser said.

Texaco asks court to overturn record $12 billion Pennzoil judgment

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Claiming an appeals court "glossed over" key legal errors, bankrupt Texaco Inc. Monday asked the Supreme Court of Texas to overturn the record $12 billion it owes Pennzoil.

Texaco attorneys filed the inch-and-a-half-thick, 352-page appeal with the high court minutes before it closed Monday afternoon. The document asks the Supreme Court to "reverse the unjust judgment rendered" by the First Court of Appeals in Houston earlier this year.

"The numerous legal errors that pervaded the trial and infected the verdict were glossed over by the Texas court of appeals in its headlong drive to affirm the judgment," the company said in a statement released with the filing. "The appeals court went through the motions of the appellate process but turned it's back on any meaningful review of the case."

Neither attorneys nor spokesmen for Pennzoil could be reached for comment Monday evening.

A Houston jury in 1985 awarded Pennzoil $10 billion in the case, ruling that Texaco had wrongfully persuaded Getty Oil to break a merger contract with Pennzoil and instead merge with Texaco. The appeals court reduced the award to $8.53 billion, but the judgement has grown to about $12 billion with interest.

The appeals court reviewed the case again this year after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that federal courts incorrectly excused Texaco from posting a $12 billion bond while it appeals the judgment. A bill designed to reduce that bond to a maximum of $1 billion died in the Legislature last month when sponsors could not round up enough votes to bring it up for debate in the Senate. Texaco filed for Chapter 11 protection under the federal bankruptcy code April 12.

Texaco Monday alleged that the original $10 billion judgment was "rooted in false premises — that there was a valid contract between Pennzoil and Getty and that Texaco had actual knowledge of such a contract."

Nation's mayors captivated by San Antonio, Texas

By DAVID SEDENO

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — More than 250 years after it was founded, San Antonio's history, warm climate and cultural diversity have captured the attention of the country's municipal leaders.

The U.S. Conference of Mayors Monday honored San Antonio as the nation's most livable city over 100,000, citing Mayor Henry G. Cisneros for leadership in creating an Arts and Cultural Advisory Committee and adopting a Historic Landmarks District Ordinance.

Cisneros, who was with his wife, Mary Alice, and their ill newborn son, was unable to attend the meeting in Nashville, Tenn., where the award was given.

But city officials credited the 40-year-old Hispanic mayor for spurring economic development as the state struggles to diversify from its petroleum-based economy.

"The award doesn't surprise me," said Acting City Manager Alex Briseno. "San Antonio is a livable place, a city that identifies with its cultural heritage, encourages art activities and historic preservation and does it within the context of a dynamic growing city."

The city was founded in 1718 when the Spanish viceroy wanted a halfway point between missions in east Texas and garrisons in northern Mexico.

Now, more than 10 million people visit San Antonio each year, pumping $1 billion into the city's coffers. Many of those tourists have stayed, said Frances Schultschik, spokeswoman for the City's Visitor's and Convention Bureau.

The top toursist attractions are the River Walk, a winding park with restaurants along the San Antonio River, several Spanish missions, Mexican markets, the King William Historic District and, of course, the Alamo, where Davy Crockett and Jim Bowie died with hundred of freedom fighters battling Mexico for Texan independence.

Tourism, the city's No. 2 industry behind the military, helps city dwellers, officials said.

"If a city is not attractive enough to go visit, you're certainly not going to want to live there," Ms. Schultschik said.

San Antonio is the state's third-largest city with a population of nearly 900,000, up from 785,880 in 1980, according to the U.S. Bureau of the Census.

Demographicaly, 52 percent of the population is Hispanic, 40 percent, white and 8 percent black.

"We are the center of South Texas. We are not a one-industry city. There is something here for everybody," said Nick Milanovich, vice president of the Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce.

Milanovich said the city's cost-of-living rate and unemployment rate of 7 percent is low, compared to other metropolitian cities.

City officials are looking closely at the $280 million budget to help many of the city's and senior citizens low-income families.

"We're not a rich city by any means. That's why we've tried to maximize our programs of public-private partnerships," Briseno said.

He said San Antonio's image will change with the award.

"San Antonio's perceived as being a sleepy little town and has not received very much recognition," Briseno said. "Now, we feel we will be able to be noticed as a wonderful place to visit and to stay."

Thousands of South Korean students fight police

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of students battled riot police with firebombs and rocks in Seoul and six other cities today, and mobs attacked at least three police stations in a southern city.

Students armed with wooden and iron clubs surged out of Seoul universities as rifle squads fired volleys of tear gas and police in armored cars pelted the crowds with tear gas grenades.

Hundreds of onlookers booed the police whenever they fired tear gas.

"Down with the military dictatorship," students yelled. Police huddled behind their shields as bottle bombs exploded in bursts of blazing gasoline.

Yonhap, the Korean news agency, reported that 42,000 students took part in anti-government rallies around the country, including protests in Seoul, Pusan, Kwangju, Chinju, Chonan, Chonju and Wonju.

Some of the worst fighting today was reported from the southern city of Chinju, where thousands of people took to the streets. At least three police stations were attacked by roaming bands of students, and one was gutted with firebombs.

About 1,500 students armed with rocks and firebombs battled police firing tear gas around the train station in the central city of Chonan.

Seoul and other cities have been hit by a wave of anti-government protests since opposition groups began a drive last week to oust President Chun Doo-hwan's government and force direct elections.

The center of Seoul, site of the worst battles in recent days, was relatively quiet. Police hurled tear gas grenades to break up hundreds of people demonstrating in front of Myongdong Cathedral when some of them attempted to march to city hall.

Most of the clashes today broke out around university campuses when students attempted to march into the streets. Political protests are common on South Korean campuses, but the violence appeared much more intense than usual.

Students took over the streets in at least two outlying areas of Seoul, pushing police back and bringing traffic to a halt. Triumphant students carrying flags emblazoned with revolutionary slogans ran up and down streets, taunting police.

Police headed by special martial arts attack squads stormed into Hanyang University in the capital as students hurled firebombs, bricks and rocks. Police were eventually forced to give way and hundreds of students surged into the streets to the applause of onlookers.

Several police were hit by firebombs and rocks and were seen being helped away. Students were also injured in the fighting, but officials said they had no figures. Associated Press photographer Kim Chon-kil, 58, suffered a broken arm when he was hit by a rock in fighting around Sogang University.

Police said today that nearly 7,000 people had been arrested during the past week of violent demonstrations.

That figure included more than 900 people arrested Monday in protests that swept dozens of campuses and prompted thousands of middle-class South Koreans to join demonstrations, police said today.

Monday's protests occurred in nine cities and involved at least 90,000 people, police said. The protests began last week to coincide with a convention of Chun's Democratic Justice Party that endorsed fellow former general Roh Tae-Woo to succeed him next February.

Chun has refused calls for direct elections, and says his successor should be chosen under the existing electoral college system, which opponents say favors the incumbent party.

A new coalition of political, religious and human rights leaders with the announced purpose of rallying the "power of the masses" against the government called for the current campaign of protest.

More than 10,000 people, including many families, attended a special Mass at Myongdong on Monday night to pray for the nation, then marched with candles to confront riot police. "Rise up! Rise up!" they chanted.

Cardinal Stephen Kim Sou-hwan, leader of the Catholic Church in South Korea, said: "All are struggling for democracy. In the name of God, and the people of Korea, I urgently ask the politicians to open a dialogue."

THAILAND

Also both have noticed first-hand that, "most people (in the U.S.) live a life of luxury unlike Thai people," Ms. Phichaya-Anutarat said.

Some Americans, she was sure, take for granted how much they have. In Thailand, for example, having a washing machine or lipstick is a luxury, and for most Americans, such things are normal, she said.

Still, the couple's aspirations for relocating to the United States are low. Showpayun said his thoughts about relocation remain just that — thoughts. And Phichaya-Anutarat said, "To pick up and start over in a new country would be costly.

"But if a revolution were to erupt, tourism would slow down in the country, we would no longer have a job, and maybe we would consider it," she said.

For now, Ms. Phichaya-Anutarat and Showpayun, whose marriage — unlike their parents — was unarranged, are content with their lives and are looking forward to opening a grocery store in the near future.

REAGAN

According to a senior administration official, the Senate and House leaderships will be sent a "major policy statement" intended to put Republicans and Democrats alike on the defensive if they continue to oppose a more prominent U.S. role in the Gulf.

"Basically we will make clear the purposes for which we have entered into this limited, but important engagement," Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Edward Djerejian said in an interview.

Key elements of the administration's rationale for expanding America's military presence in the Persian Gulf, according to Djerejian, are:

— "Limiting the possibility of the Soviets exploiting opportunities to enhance their military, naval and political presence . . .

— "Doing what the United States must do to support countries such as Kuwait that have borne the brunt of Iranian intimidation and destabilization."

Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., suggested Sunday that Reagan's policy in effect would pit the United states actively against Iran and not simply tilt U.S. forces toward Iraq.

Nunn charged that reflagging of Kuwaiti ships is "a symbol of an absence of policy" — not an excuse for one.

Former secretary of state Henry Kissinger made a similar point when he said: "By our getting involved, in effect on the Iraq side, we are taking on a belligerent commitment in a war in which it isn't clear to me how it is going to end."

Nunn added: "We've got to force the administration to have an overall policy before we decide this issue."

An Analysis

Yet Reagan asserted Monday night that he does have such a policy:

"Let there be no misunderstanding: we will accept our responsibility for these vessels in the face of threats by Iran or anyone else. If we fail to do so — simply because these ships previously flew the flag of another country, Kuwait — we would abdicate our role as a naval power."

The president used similar language to justify his dispatch to Beirut of several thousand Marines in an effort to play the part of impartial peacemaker in Lebanon's civil war.

One result of that exercise was the death of 263 Marines by Lebanese factions that didn't view them as a neutral force.

Reagan's chief justification Monday for introducing new military forces in the Gulf was that, if the United States abdicates this role, "we would open opportunities for the Soviets to move into this chokepoint of the free world's oil flow."

Reagan went on: "In a word, if we don't do the job, the Soviets will. And that will jeopardize our own national security as well as our allies'."

Reagan seemed to be saying that if attacked, the United States would go to war in the Persian Gulf, not just to protect our own "national security" but also to protect our allies.

Yet, in siding against Iran in the name of anti-communism, the United States is doing precisely what Moscow wants — helping Iraq, which has received thousands of tons of Soviet bloc weapons, stave off defeat.

OIL

"There's strong buying sentiment out here, and strong sentiment not to sell," he said.

"I can't justify the fundamentals, but the sentiment appears to be upward."

John H. O'Connell, an analyst at Refco Inc. Commodities, said the market does not expect the OPEC ministers to do anything that would raise its target crude price much above $18 a barrel. So demand will not justify prices in the $20 range during the rest of the year, he predicted.

"The higher it goes, the more bearish I get," he added.

John O'Dea, manager of international energy futures at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., attributed the recent market surge mainly to technical factors.

He said crude prices have been rising since April, putting increasing pressure on traders holding "short" contracts.

In short selling, a trader sells borrowed oil at the prevailing price in the expectation prices will fall, allowing the trader to make a profit by replacing the oil later with the same quantity bought at a cheaper price.

SPEECH

The minority leader, himself a presidential hopeful, was interviewed on the NBC-TV "Today" show.

Reagan, in his nationally broadcast speech Monday night, told the nation:

"The truth is we came home from this summit with everything we had hoped to accomplish. I was particularly gratified, for example, for the support our allies gave to our Persian Gulf policy; it was extended without hesitation."

That support, however, was limited to diplomatic rather than military backing.

Reagan also outlined a global arms control initiative, argued his case for worldwide elimination of agricultural subsidies, and renewed his plea for a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

He said the United States, in negotiations with the Soviets for reductions in intermediate-range nuclear weapons, will seek "global elimination" of the shorter-range missiles in that class. The offer comes in addition to proposals already on the table to eliminate the longer-range intermediate missiles in Europe.

The president answered critics of his plan to protect oil tankers in the Persian Gulf with American warships by saying, "If we don't do the job, the Soviets will." He said U.S. national security will be jeopardized if the Kremlin becomes the guardian of gulf oil.

Reagan disputed reports that, as he put it, "nothing was really accomplished at the summit, and the United States in particular came home empty-handed." He did say he "felt among the other six summit leaders a sense of unease about America's commitment to a consistent, enforceable plan to reduce our deficits."

He said he had "a special message...about actions that could jeopardize the kind of progress we made toward economic health last week in Venice as well as the prosperity that during the last six years all of us here in America have worked so hard to achieve."

The president recalled the passage two years ago of deficit-reduction legislation, but added:

"And what's happened to that restraint on wasteful domestic spending solemnly promised under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings? It vanished. And to pay for this lapse of faith you, the taxpayers, are going to be saddled with an approximately $100 billion bill over the next four years."

HOBBY

"I don't know whether it'll break the deadlock or not," Midland oilman Bill Roden, vice chairman of the University of Texas board of regents, said of Hobby's plan. "He's got no new ideas, it's just a matter of trying to get everybody working together."

The House Appropriations Committee begins deliberations this morning on drafting a compromise spending plan for the special session. Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said he suspects the panel will write about a $27.5 billion bill then wait to see if the House will support the $6 billion in taxes necessary to pay for it.

"If they reject that or they say they don't want to raise the revenues that amount, the we're going to have to come back in and start cutting," Rudd said.

TAX

Odessa fiscal experts now project the addition of $5.9 million to city coffers because of the sales tax, a figure $1.2 million below what was anticipated, Muser said.

A hiring freeze instituted in March 1986 is taking up much of that slack, he said. While the freeze has resulted in about $1 million in savings, Muser acknowledged "a little bit" of a decrease in the level of services offered by the city.

Hardest hit by the freeze have been the Odessa Police and Fire Departments, he said.

Gifford estimated that Midland total sales tax receipts for the current fiscal year will total $6.7 million, a figure slightly under the $7 million budgeted for this year.

Based on the most recent sales tax receipts, Gifford said the city probably will budget the same $7 million for the coming fiscal year.

"We're trying to be conservative," he said. "We try not to push the revenues."

Surveying other Permian Basin cities' June sales tax receipts, Big Spring's payment of almost $72,000 leaves the city about 10 percent behind last year's pace. Big Spring during June last year received a little more than $85,000.

A June payment of $24,600 for Lamesa left that city about 14 percent behind last year's pace. Lamesa during June 1986 received about $25,400 from the Comptroller's Office.

With Andrews' June receipts of about $31,000, that city remains 24.6 percent behind the pace set during last fiscal year. Andrews during the same period last year collected a little more than $35,000 from the Comptroller's Office.

TEXACO

Texaco claimed that Pennzoil violated a "bright-line, preventive rule" of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission when it solicited the merger while at the same time it had an outstanding offer to purchase Getty stock.

The company asked for "simple justice" and charged that the appeals court ignored New York, Delaware, Texas and U.S. laws in affirming the judgement.

In the brief submitted Monday, Texaco accused the appeals court of failing to "execute its judicial responsibility" by ignoring a $10,000 campaign contribution from Pennzoil attorney Joe Jamail to the first Houston judge that heard the case and by ignoring the second judge's admission that he had not read large parts of the transcripts of the case after taking over.

"The net effect is that Texaco has been denied its fundamental right to due process," the company said in its statement. "The Texas Supreme Court should refute an appellate court action which seems to say that the property of every person and the existence of every company is subject to the indifference, error or bias of an individual trial judge."

Victims' rights groups attack court's ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fight against racial and class prejudice will be helped by a new Supreme Court ruling that bars evidence in capital punishment cases about the impact of a murder on the victim's family, civil rights groups say.

But victims' rights groups are lamenting the ruling as "a slap in the face" to their cause.

A deeply divided court ruled Monday that the impact of a murder on the victim's family may not be considered when a convicted killer faces a possible death sentence. The 5-4 decision threw out the death sentence for a Maryland man convicted of brutally killing an elderly couple.

Richard Burr of the Legal Defense and Education Fund of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said the ruling shows the court "is really on guard against the intrusion of race and class prejudice" in capital punishment cases.

He said if the justices decided the case differently "it would have opened the door to bringing in race and class differences. The suffering of white victims' families would have been deemed more persuasive than suffering and death in black families," Burr said. "We're very heartened."

Gene Patterson, representing a coalition of victims' rights groups, said the decision "is a slap in the face to all victims of violent crime. It's a major setback to our movement because in essence the ruling says the rights of convicted murderers take precedence over the rights of innocent victims."

Victims' rights organizations argued unsuccessfully that society has a vital stake in meting out the harshest penalties in retribution for the harm done to families of those killed.

The court did not say whether its ruling applies retroactively to other death row inmates who were sentenced under laws that permit consideration of the impact of a killing on the victim's family.

But both civil rights and victims' rights groups said there were few on death row that would be affected anyway. The decision's main impact will be on future cases, they said.

Most states permit judges and juries to weigh the emotional, financial and psychological impact of a crime on the victim and family members. But it is believed relatively few apply that rule to cases in which the defendant faces the death penalty.

Monday's ruling applies only to capital punishment cases.

The court said the jury that sentenced Maryland killer John Booth to die may have been inflamed by evidence that the victims were dearly loved by family members who said they were devastated by the murders.

Justice Lewis F. Powell, writing for the court, said, "One can understand the grief and anger of the family caused by the brutal murders in this case. But the formal presentation of this information by the state can serve no other purpose than to inflame the jury and divert it from deciding the case on the relevant evidence concerning the crime and the defendant."

High court may rule on Deaver case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorneys for lobbyist Michael K. Deaver say they will ask the Supreme Court to review an appellate court's refusal to stop the former presidential aide's perjury trial.

The court will be asked to review Monday's ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals here dismissing Deaver's appeal of a pretrial ruling by U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson, said attorney Randall J. Turk.

"I guess I don't want to comment on the ruling," said Turk in announcing that the further appeal is planned.

Deaver, who resigned as deputy White House chief of staff in May 1985, is charged with lying to a congressional subcommittee and a grand jury that investigated his lobbying business for possible ethical conflicts.

Deaver had appealed Jackson's denial of his motion to dismiss the indictment on the ground that independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr. has no prosecutorial authority because he was appointed under an unconstitutional statute.

The appeals court ruled that Jackson's pretrial finding "is not a final order, and therefore is unappealable."

Deaver had contended that the seriousness of his constitutional challenge to the Ethics in Government Act entitled him to an exception.

Ohio town recalls soldier killed overseas

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP) — Flags flew at half staff as this Ohio community mourned Army Staff Sgt. Randall J. Harris, who was killed while guarding an airport in Honduras.

Harris, a military policeman, was shot three times Saturday night while checking the perimeter of the base. He was stationed at Fort Bliss in El Paso, Texas, but was on a four-month tour of duty that was scheduled to end this week at the Palmerola Air Base.

"His C.O. called from El Paso around noon and said they feel like it was a Honduran civilian that shot him," Harris' mother, Delphernine Harris, said Monday. However, she said it will probably be a week to 10 days before more details are released about the death of her son.

Capt. Ron Eschmann, press officer at the Honduran air base, where U.S. troops are stationed, said investigators are treating the shooting "as a criminal homicide and not as terrorist act."

Mrs. Harris did not know when her son's body would be returned to the states. She said he would be buried in Texas, where his wife, Cheryl, and three stepchildren live.

Harris was a 1971 graduate of Wilmington High School, where he was captain of the football team his senior year.

"I couldn't have anything but nice things to say about Randy," said Jim Knowles, his football coach and neighbor of his parents. "He was a tremendous athlete and a tremendous young man, the type of boy you would like to call your own son."

Reagan 'sees Red' in fight with Congress

By BARRY SCHWEID

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress sniffs a lame duck in the White House, and Ronald Reagan, the intended prey, is fighting back with a familiar weapon: fear of the Soviet Union.

He's done it before. Monday night, in a nationally broadcast speech, he tried again.

His pitch: If the U.S. Navy cannot protect Western oil in the Persian Gulf from Iranian missiles, the Soviets will step in.

"And that," Reagan said, "will jeopardize our own national security as well as our allies."

The Soviets already had volunteered to tote oil from Kuwait before the White House came up with the idea of putting the U.S. flag and American captains aboard 11 Kuwaiti tankers — and having the Navy see them through the gulf.

Otherwise, however, the Soviets are relatively quiet. They have no friends or allies in the area. At least, none is inviting Moscow to play the kind of role Reagan suggested was likely if "we would abdicate our role as a naval power."

Despite hoarseness in his voice, and a reading style that lacked the usual oomph, Reagan's line was tough, but not toward Congress, where Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia had urged him Monday to be cooperative, not confrontational.

Reagan showed his old familiar tough side to Moscow, and ironically, while also telling the nation he would go ahead with his first treaty with the Soviets to reduce medium-range nuclear weapons.

"In a word," he said, "if we don't do the job, the Soviets will."

The rhetoric was true to the Reagan tradition of blending patriotism with fear of the Russians.

But the concern of his critics in Congress and elsewhere is not over Soviet intentions. It is that Reagan's moves could snag the United States in the Iran-Iraq war.

Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who has advised the administration to delay implementation of the reflagging, said following Reagan's speech, "What we're really trying to do is find a way to tilt towards Iraq and we're basically describing it as a freedom-of-navigation problem. It seems to me that the administration has to put its cards on the table in this regard and tell the American people what we're really doing."

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said, meanwhile, that "by our getting involved, in effect on the Iraq side, we are taking on a belligerent commitment in a war in which it isn't clear to me how it is going to end."

Their comments suggest a growing unease with the administration's tactics as well as a perception that Reagan is a weakened president.

Nunn did not object so much to the U.S. taking over of the Kuwaiti tankers as to what he called "an absence of policy," while Kissinger, who in office readily applied considerably more force than Reagan, said he would back the administration if gulf passage were threatened.

But for Kissinger, it's just that he's "not persuaded that we are now facing a threat to freedom of navigation."

Reagan's rhetoric suggested otherwise; that the Soviets stood ready "to move into this chokepoint of the free world's oil flow."

And yet, the administration's plan for ending the Iran-Iraq war depends on cooperation with Moscow.

The cease-fire the United States hopes to steer through the U.N. Security Council could be vetoed and killed by the Soviets. Early next month, Assistant Secretary of State Richard W. Murphy will meet with Vladimir Polyakov, a senior Soviet diplomat, to urge the Soviets to support the resolution in the interest of free shipping.

HHS will fill congressional orders for AIDS booklet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Requests from members of Congress for millions of copies of an AIDS education booklet have prompted a policy change by federal health officials who say they will now fill the orders.

Twenty-five legislators have requested copies of the 36-page report by Surgeon General C. Everett Koop in the past month, said Steven C. Schwadron, an aide to Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass. HHS officials said Monday they have congressional requests for more than 5 million copies to send to constitutents.

The Public Health Service had limited distribution to 1,000 per congressional office after Studds requested and received copies for all 268,000 households in his district.

Studds, an acknowledged homosexual and leading advocate of AIDS education, urged his House colleagues to make similar requests, but Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., and others who did were turned down.

Public Health Service officials had said filling the congressional orders would have been impossible because the department had not planned for such widespread distribution.

Economic lesson from city of canals

The glorious old city that trade built half a millenium ago provided little economic inspiration to leaders of the seven leading industrial democracies. They met in Venice ostensibly to address the need for stimulating world markets, stabilizing currencies, heading off protectionism and dealing with the problems of Third-World debtor nations. They settled for a "frank exchange of views" and a relatively bland joint statement.

Part of the problem in Venice was a leadership vacuum. In recent economic summits, President Reagan has been able to control the agenda, but this year our own economic problems are so obvious that his clout was considerably diminished. Even agreements on non-economic issues — protecting sea traffic in the Persian Gulf and dealing with terrorism — were much more general than the administration had hoped. The Europeans, apparently, were more interested in avoiding risk than they were in getting anything accomplished.

The message from Venice is that we will not put matters right in the world until we begin to put matters right at home. As long as we consume $166 billion more than we produce, as long as the federal government spends nearly $180 billion more than it receives in revenue, we cannot expect to be a credible world economic leader. That fact appears crystal clear from the evidence now before us.

Since 1981, we have gone from being the largest creditor nation with $141 billion in net foreign assets to being the largest debtor nation. With foreign-trade deficits, our indebtedness will top $750 billion by 1990. As one observer noted recently, "We are being colonized economically." And no one expects economic leadership from a colony.

Japan and West Germany must help America, of course. While we deal with our own budget problems, they must stimulate their domestic economies. But we have to take the lead.

Taking the lead does not mean further dollar depreciation; it does not mean protectionism. It means, for the president, a serious look at tax increases. That's not a pleasant thought but it may be a necessary one. For Congress, it means responsible cuts in federal spending.

Another View: Secret government

Fawn Hall, secretary to Oliver North of the National Security Council staff, smuggled her boss's documents out of the White House last Nov. 25 as the administration shut down his Iran-contra operation. It was not a cover-up, she told Congress last week; she was merely "protecting" the enterprise. From whom? "From everyone." Outsiders were threatening the hostage negotiations and new aid for the Nicaraguan rebels.

Sen. Warren Rudman protested, "Well, it wasn't the KGB that was coming, Miss Hall; it was the FBI." No use. Ollie North's loyal aide knew who the real enemy was: not the Russians, not even the Sandinistas, but any opponent of the covert operation, including Congress.

This attitude could hardly be a more banal symbol of the power lust and contempt for constitutional government unfolding before the investigating committees. Witnesses like Richard Secord, the former general turned contra arms dealer, and even Robert McFarlane, the one-time White House moderate, voiced the same frustration over the need to share power with Congress and information about terrorism policy with the American people.

What did the Reagan administration do that was so wrong? Rep. Lee Hamilton, chairman of the House investigating committee, spelled it out in his summary of the first six weeks of hearings. The Reagan administration:

1. Created a private network to carry out U.S. foreign policy, contrary to law;
2. Enlisted philanthropists and profiteers to buy and sell arms for Iran and the contras;
3. Sent emissaries begging money from third countries;
4. Ransomed hostages, contrary to its own pious protestations;
5. Lied about it all. The hearings have already accomplished much by raising consciousness about the need for official accountability. They have advanced understanding about President Reagan's role in condoning the hostage negotiations. They have forced Reagan out of a defensive pocket of claimed ignorance, and then forgetfulness, to admit that he knew more about the arms dealings than previously acknowledged.

Reagan holds firmly to the claim that he knew nothing about the diversion of Iran arms proceeds to the contras. But that claim has itself become a diversion. What the hearings reveal is not a single shipment of cash in one direction. They show a pattern, in which money flowed surreptitiously through Swiss bank accounts in both directions, as needed by North.

Fawn Hall's candid testimony gave the game away. "Sometimes you just have to go above the written law," she said. The administration claims, first, that Congress didn't write the law to prohibit the Iran-contra dealings. If that argument doesn't work, it goes on to contend — in language less frank than Miss Hall's — that Congress lacks the constitutional power to do so.

What all this adds up to is a single, central offense: a government behaving above the law. "Our government cannot function cloaked in secrecy," says Hamilton. "It cannot function unless officials tell the truth. The Constitution only works when the two branches of government trust one another and cooperate."

Dictators, not democrats, create private governments, develop private budgets by dunning the wealthy, traffic with profiteers and lie to legislatures. Tyrants, not elected public servants, decide which laws apply to them.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, June 16, the 167th day of 1987. There are 198 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 16, 1963, the world's first female space traveler, cosmonaut Valentina Tereshkova, was launched into orbit by the Soviet Union.

On this date:

In 1567, Mary, Queen of Scots, was imprisoned in Lochleven Castle in Scotland.

In 1858, in a speech in Springfield, Ill., Senate candidate Abraham Lincoln said the slavery issue had to be resolved, declaring, "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

In 1883, baseball's first "ladies' day" took place as the New York Gothams admitted women spectators free to a game against the Cleveland Spiders. New York won, 5-to-2.

In 1903, Ford Motor Co. was incorporated.

In 1933, the National Industrial Recovery Act became law. It was later struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court.

In 1937, the Marx Brothers comedy "A Day at the Races" opened at the Loew's State and Grauman's Chinese Theaters in Los Angeles, one day before opening in New York.

In 1947, the Soviet newspaper Pravda denounced the proposed Marshall Plan to help Europe rebuild after World War II.

Student activists refute 'me' decade

WASHINGTON — Ever since Ronald Reagan's election in 1980, the many enemies of Ralph Nader have been licking their chops and drooling in anticipation of the consumer movement's demise. And the pro-business administration has indeed served them up slices of Naderism for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

Jack Anderson

But despite a number of setbacks, Nader and the activism he inspired have managed to survive more or less intact. In fact, one of his most controversial creations has risen almost Lazaruslike from the grave so gleefully dug for it by corporate freebooters and ultraconservative ideologues.

The Public Interest Research Groups, or PIRGs, are Naderism in its purest form, spinoffs founded in 1971 by the guru himself and Donald Ross. Concentrated on college campuses, PIRGs file lawsuits, get consumer issues on the ballot, lobby Congress and state legislatures, canvass voters and — as the name suggests — do research that exposes corporate abuses. It's no wonder that these pesky kids were top-priority targets of conservatives emboldened by Reagan's ascendancy.

And the PIRG purge had some initial success. By 1984, the movement's 24 state groups on 100 campuses had dwindled to 20. Student membership was down.

The conservative College Republicans urged students to "rid their states of this pestilence." Our associate Les Whitten learned that arch-conservative business and professional outfits like the Edison Electric Institute, the American Nuclear Energy Council and the National Legal Center were pushing the PIRGs determinedly toward oblivion, with the eager support of several self-interested corporations.

The future looked bleak for the PIRGs. But a funny thing happened on the way to the altar: The sacrificial lambs declined to cooperate with their executioners. They perversely proceeded to grow instead.

There are now 25 active state PIRGs, which count not only 500,000 student members on 115 campuses, but another half million among the public at large. A book on the PIRG movement, "More Action for a Change," by former Nader associate and Jack Anderson reporter Kelley Griffin, is due out this month. It provides both history and how-to for potential PIRG organizers.

Among the PIRG success stories Griffin salutes are those of Jill Siegel, who at 19 lobbied successfully for a New York law that protects hearing-aid customers from unscrupulous hucksters; Marsha Gomberg of Oregon, who posed as a patient to expose Medicaid fraud, indexed trees and wildlife to help put through a state wilderness-protection law and organized doctors to lobby against homicidal herbicides; and Karim Ahmed, doctoral candidate and father of two, who found time to organize a Minnesota PIRG that persuaded the legislature to enact an asbestos ban.

PIRGs have lost as many battles as they've won, but they keep on coming back. And their victories have been impressive, resulting not only in protection for the public but in punishment and great expense for the special interests they have challenged. For example:

— In Massachusetts, a PIRG collected 129,000 signatures to get a hazardous-waste cleanup bill on the ballot, then campaigned for it. It became law.

— In Missouri, a PIRG initiative forced 70 percent of the state's banks to shorten their check-clearing periods.

— PIRGs in Ontario and New York combined to sponsor an "acid rain caravan" that spread the word on toxic precipitation in eastern Canada and New England.

NATURE NOTE: You know about the swallows that return to San Juan Capistrano every March. You may even be aware of the buzzards that come back to Hinckley, Ohio, the same month every year. But have you heard about the Black Skimmers that return to Freeport, Texas, every spring? To the parking lot of a Dow Chemical plant, no less?

The fish-eating birds with black-and-white markings and bright orange bills first began congregating in the parking lot of the huge Dow plant on the Texas Gulf Coast some 20 years ago. The area is one of the most active bird-watching regions in the nation.

By the early 1970s, Dow Chemical had turned the parking lot over to the skimmers. It was packed with oyster shells, among which the birds carve out their nests, and is kept free of vegetation. A Dow retiree who is a "birder" is kept on the payroll as a consultant to watch over the flock, which will number well more than a thousand before they depart for the season in mid-August.

Not a bad endorsement for a company that brings you pesticides and polyvinyl chloride.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

'Docudrama' shows fallacy in power cocoon

WASHINGTON — In a film docudrama to be shown years from now, a tall, beautiful woman granted total invulnerability will take her place at the witness table and defiantly face the grim-visaged congressmen.

William Safire

"Is it a fact, mah dear," a caricature of a senator will drawl, "that you smuggled a passel of secret documents out to the accused, Colonel South, in yo' underwear?"

Amid sexist snickering, the cool beauty flashes him a look of scorn. She rises, snatches a sheaf of testimony from the table and stuffs it in the back of her dress. She slowly turns all the way around for the photographers, the hidden documents secured by her waist cinch, leaving the underwear question moot and the lascivious questioner bug-eyed.

Cut to the scrupulously fair committee chairman, played by an Asian Lewis Stone, who gently puts to the witness the question all America is waiting to hear:

"Doe, tell us the truth. Are you in love with Colonel South?"

A hush in the caucus room and in every living room and saloon with a television across the land. The witness hesitates, playing for time by leaning forward, reaching behind her neck and extracting the sheets of testimony one by one. Her lawyer drapes his knitted hat over the microphones and stage-whispers, "You don't have to answer that question."

Close-up on her eyes, beginning to form tears. "Mr. Chairman, Colonel South is a happily married man."

"We all know that, Miss," intones the understanding chairman. "Nobody here suggests that your relationship has been anything but honorably professional. But all America has an urgent need to know — in your heart, as you sit before us today, are you in love with Colonel South?"

Before she can answer, a man in a Marine uniform in the audience leaps to his feet, medals flashing in the media lights...

You can write the rest of the half-fictional scene yourself, as millions of viewers of the Iran-contra hearings already have. My point in taking a first crack at the screenplay is to suggest that the four-handkerchief docu-drama we will see on the screen in a few years will be closer to the truth than the real-life version we saw on the screen last week.

Romantics assume Ollie North and Fawn Hall must be in love — not the hanky-panky kind of love, but the pure, noble kind that is requited and sublimated in the passion of working side by side in a cause greater than self.

Not to have been caught up in such an office affair of the spirit is not to have lived. The elixir can be brewed in the crucible of a proxy fight in the executive suite, or produced in a struggle for supremacy in the academic world, or whipped up in the furious jockeying-for-position in the art world or show business or sports.

Most often, the field of politics is where people fall for each other and lose themselves in a cocoon of a cause. The place where straight arrows fly highest and fall to earth quivering with the greatest intensity is in the White House, most particularly in the Old Executive Office Building next door. (Where are you, Bud Krogh?)

I spent four years in suite 125 of those environs; speechwriters never make it to secret agent, but I know the feeling of being a member of a brave band of right-minded guys and gals, charged with responsibility no outsider can imagine, working all hours, with bright minds often in good-looking heads, growing ever more contemptuous of the villainous obstructers out there with little faith, less vision and a paucity of patriotism.

It stirs the youthful soul and warps the impressionable mind. What begins in justifiable enthusiasm for a good end (stopping communist penetration of this hemisphere is a good end) can easily overlook the need to proceed by ponderously lawful means.

At that point, the tight little band — loving the cause, loving this country, loving each other, loving every exhausting, exhilarating moment — is in desperate need of a boss with a large wet blanket. Directly above were Col. McFarlane and Adm. Poindexter, both military apparatchiks; the men responsible for operations were William Casey and Donald Regan, mature hands who should have known that bad means can corrupt and defeat good ends.

That is how an intelligent 28-year-old woman of fine repute with a top security clearance could put her loyalty to her team leader above "the written law." "Us against them" was the motto of the power cocoon, even when the FBI became "them." And the docudrama will leap to the conclusion that it was all for love.

CHARLEY REESE

Americans should decide side to support

We have to find a way to make American-based corporations cease supporting the enemies of this country. To expect them to do it on their own is to expect a frog to speak English. They're only interested in money.

Charley Reese

The latest but by no means only example of American-based corporations contributing to the enemies is Exxon. They operate the only refinery in Nicaragua, making fuel for Sandinista trucks, tanks and aircraft out of Soviet oil.

Of course these Sandinista vehicles are then used to kill the Nicaraguan democrats who are fighting with money supplied by the American taxpayers.

Peter Flaherty, spokesman for a coalition of conservative groups opposing Exxon's refinery operation in Nicaragua, said, "We will organize and demonstrate until Exxon is out of Nicaragua. Exxon's support for the communist Sandinista regime is outrageous."

If you're thinking about boycotting Exxon, you might as well boycott Chevron, too. They are in more or less the same position in Angola, where they have a cozy arrangement with the communist government, which uses their royalty payments to fund the Cuban and Soviet military who are killing the Angolan rebels who are also fighting with the assistance of the American taxpayers.

It seems to me that we Americans ought to at least stay on the same side, though I believe it was Tom Jefferson who said words to the effect that the only country a merchant is loyal to is the ground under his feet while he counts his money. Our rebel forefathers were somewhat bitter that many of the wealthier Americans and businesses remained loyal to the British and lived well on war profits while American rebel soldiers were starving and freezing.

So it's not a new problem. Some American corporations filed claims — and collected millions — for the destruction of their plants in Nazi Germany by Allied bombers. How does that grab you? Americans risk their lives and many die to destroy Nazi war plants only to be taxed after the war to reimburse the American corporations that actually owned them.

American corporations are heavily involved in the marketing of Soviet natural gas to our NATO allies and in fact over the decades actually built much of the Soviet industrial base. American banks to this day continue to finance the Soviet Union and its colonies.

In the meantime, we suckers back home are taxed and taxed to provide billions for defense against the people our own corporations are helping out. You begin to wonder if this is all a game of pin the tail on the donkey and we, the people, are the donkey.

I think it's time to take the profit out of the cold war. I think it is time to lobby hard for federal legislation that will bar any American corporation or its subsidiaries from doing business in a communist country.

There is, in reality, no such thing as non-strategic materials or technology in this high-tech world of industrial nations at war. Everything is war material. Every contribution is a war contribution. If, as some Americans are doing, you send bandages or ambulances or medicine or food to the Sandinistas, you are sending them war material. If you send food or medicine to a terrorist organization, as the National Council of Churches is fond of doing, you are sending them war material — terrorists have to eat and receive medical care just the same as soldiers.

Maybe we should have a national plebiscite to decide if we wish to fight for freedom or just make a few bucks. There is not much point in some Americans sacrificing and some Americans profiting on the same war, hot or cold. There is not much point in some Americans fighting communism (and over 100,000 have lost their lives to communist bullets) and some Americans supporting it.

I'm ready to draw a line and choose up sides.

SBC FACTS

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Southern Baptist Convention, meeting in St. Louis for its annual national session, has grown into the country's largest Protestant denomination since its founding 142 years ago.

Here are some facts about the convention and its annual gathering, which runs from today through Thursday.

MEMBERSHIP

The Southern Baptist Convention has 14.6 million members and is related to 37,116 churches. Cooperating Baptist churches are located in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, American Samoa and the Virgin Islands.

STRUCTURE

The church has an executive committee, based in Nashville, Tenn., and 20 national agencies — four boards, six seminaries, seven commissions, a foundation and two associated organizations.

PURPOSE

The convention's goal is to provide a general organization for Baptists to promote Christian missions at home and abroad, as well as Christian education, benevolent enterprises and social services deemed "proper and advisable for the furtherance of the Kingdom of God."

BELIEFS

Belief in the Bible and loyalty to basic theological concepts are hallmarks of Southern Baptists.

ORIGIN

On May 8, 1845, nearly 300 Baptist leaders gathered in Augusta, Ga., to discuss, among other things, differences between Northerners and Southerners over the issues of slavery, the right of Southerners to receive missionary appointments and the authority of a denominational society to discipline church members. On May 9, they decided to separate from the General Missionary Convention of the Baptist Denomination of the United States. The next day, the Southern Baptist Convention was organized.

SESSION HIGHLIGHTS

The most controversial issue at this year's session is likely to be a report from a committee that was formed in an attempt to reduce the theological-political split that exists between conservative and moderate factions within the church, largely over whether the Bible must be taken literally or whether other interpretations are permitted.

Related to this will be the election of a president. The two likely candidates are the current president, the Rev. Adrian Rogers of Memphis, Tenn., a conservative, and the Rev. Richard Jackson of Phoenix, Ariz., a moderate. Debate also is expected over what the church's future involvement should be with the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, a Washington church-state watchdog group.

'Peace report' may send Southern Baptists to war

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A "peace report" being presented at the Southern Baptist Convention's 130th annual meeting may wind up exacerbating tensions among factions that have been feuding for 25 years, observers say.

About 25,000 delegates are attending the three-day convention of the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

Among the items on the agenda for the meeting that opens today were recommendations by a peace committee and the election of a president.

Another potential problem emerged Monday when the Missouri Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights announced it would picket the convention to protest the Baptists' strong anti-abortion stance.

The 14.6 million-member denomination has been divided over whether the Bible should be interpreted literally or symbolically. Conservatives believe biblical stories should be considered historical fact, while moderates have argued that Baptists should be free to interpret certain passages.

The peace committee, headed by the Rev. Charles Fuller of Roanoke, Va., was to make its second attempt to bring together the two sides when it presented its report today. Delegates last year rejected the committee's report.

"It may be that the peace report will start a war," said Alvin C. Shackleford, director of the Southern Baptist Convention's news service, the Baptist Press.

"It's really hard to say. But one of the things about our conventions is that all of the messengers can stand and say whatever they feel."

The denomination's fundamentalist president, the Rev. Adrian Rogers, said he expected delegates to be ready to vote on the report today because it was uncomplicated and because it would "touch" the people.

Fuller said the committee, working until 4:15 a.m. Monday, produced a report that reflected its "diversity."

"Not everyone got all he or she wanted in this report," he said.

But the Rev. E. Glenn Henson, a leading Southern Baptist scholar who advocates splitting the denomination, said, "I can see no way to resolve the controversy we have engaged in for more than 25 years."

Thus far, the fundamentalists have held control in the battle. The peace committee was formed two years ago to help resolve the dispute. Conservative and moderate factions met separately Monday to prepare for the convention.

A North Carolina minister called on members of the denomination to acknowledge diversity of Christian experience and find a compromise. John Harris Hewett, of Asheville, in an address Monday to the moderate Southern Baptist Forum asked the pastors to choose harmony over dissonance and to pray that an indivisible union comes out of the convention.

Indianapolis gunman surrenders after holding women hostage for 16 hours

Stan Richard Beatty

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A gunman on amphetamines who said he took his girlfriend hostage because he loved her surrendered to police today after holding three women captive for up to 16 hours in a downtown office building.

The last of the hostages, the unidentified girlfriend, emerged sobbing from the King Cole Building at 7:22 a.m.

No one was injured in the standoff, which began at 3:15 p.m. Monday. Police Chief Paul A. Annee said he believed the women wore down the gunman by playing on his sympathy.

The man, identified by police as Stan Richard Beatty, 37, of Indianapolis, was taken to Wishard Memorial Hospital for observation because he had been taking drugs, police said.

Asked as he got into a squad car why he took his girlfriend and others hostage, the man said, "Because I love her."

Police said he faces five counts of confinement with a deadly weapon, one count of recklessness and one count of violating the state firearms statute.

The girlfriend, along with co-workers Cheryl C. Broadus and Beth Greene, were seized Monday in Legal Registry, a document filing service on the 10th floor of the building, which was partially evacuated.

The gunman found two other women hiding on the same floor about four hours later, but allowed them to flee down a staircase, officials said.

"This is unreal," said Mrs. Greene's daughter, Betsy, as she waited for news of her mother. "Hostages don't get taken in Indianapolis."

Annee said the gunman made "crazy demands" for the hostages' release, but he would not specify what they were. He said negotiators and police psychologists talked with the gunman by telephone.

Bankruptcy filed to protect PTL from suits, Falwell says

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The new leaders of the PTL ministry filed for bankruptcy court protection in part to stave off lawsuits that could have led to its liquidation, the Rev. Jerry Falwell said.

"The first thing we had to consider were lawsuits already filed against us with (potential) judgments we were unable to pay," Falwell told viewers of the "PTL Club" Monday.

One major lawsuit has been filed by builder Roe Messner, who contends PTL owes him $14 million.

"Many, many lawsuits were imminent which could have caused the assets here to be savaged, sold off, taken away from the ministry," Falwell said in his first "PTL Club" appearance since the ministry filed for reorganization Friday under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

PTL's petition, filed in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Columbia, showed that it owed 1,400 creditors $72 million; its assets were listed at $179 million.

Reorganization, Falwell said, would protect the ministry from legal action by creditors, including stations carrying "The Inspirational Network," the backbone of PTL's fund raising and a symbol of the ministry's credibility.

Within hours after PTL filed its petition, a television station in Fresno, Calif., canceled PTL's programs. The station, one of the ministry's top 20 unsecured creditors, said PTL owed $87,000.

One cable television company based in Denver canceled PTL's programs earlier this month and a second is threatening to cancel the programs, Falwell said.

Falwell also urged viewers Monday to mail the ministry an extra $50 each in addition to their monthly pledge for June.

Television appeals last month brought in $8.5 million. If the 200,000 people who responded to a "May Emergency" fund-raising campaign heed Falwell's latest plea, the ministry would raise $10 million.

Bakker and his family Monday continued to decline comment to reporters and photographers gathered outside the PTL-owned, lakeside home at Tega Cay where they've been staying since last week.

Meanwhile, the leader of a group of PTL partners, or regular contributors, who oppose Falwell as chairman of the ministry's board accused Falwell on Monday of "stealing a ministry that half-a million people supported for 12 years."

Don Lee of Marquette, Mich., challenged Falwell to disclose the salaries of PTL executives Jerry Nims and Harry Hargrave along with PTL attorney Roy Grutman.

Lee says 5,000 members are in his opposition group. PTL has 518,000 members.

Hahn claims Falwell lied

WEST BABYLON, N.Y. (AP) — Jessica Hahn, the former church secretary whose tryst with evangelist Jim Bakker helped bring down the leader of the PTL ministry, said Monday that his successor, the Rev. Jerry Falwell, lied to her.

"Jerry Falwell says he'll do things for me and he literally lies. Jerry started this big crusade...that he cared and wanted to pray for me and wanted to do what is right," said Miss Hahn, 27.

She said in an telephone interview that she spoke to Falwell, who succeeded Bakker as head of PTL, two weeks ago and that he said then he would arrange an emergency PTL board meeting on her behalf.

"I never heard from him again," she said. "I felt hurt. I felt betrayed."

A $150,000 trust fund was established for Miss Hahn after the 1980 tryst with Bakker, but it was frozen after the controversy began in March.

Miss Hahn said that since PTL filed Friday for protection from creditors under federal bankruptcy law, Falwell "is just stalling as far as the trust fund. That just makes me lose confidence in the man."

Falwell spokesman Mark DeMoss confirmed a telephone conversation took place. He said Falwell told Miss Hahn he would pay to fly her to Virginia, where Falwell's own church is located, so she could get away from publicity as long as she wanted.

"We left it wide open," DeMoss said of the invitation. He said she could stay for the entire summer if she wanted, while she was counseled and became involved with the church there.

DeMoss said he told Miss Hahn she should call Falwell back if she was interested in the invitation. And he said he called her late last week to repeat the offer and give her his office and home phone numbers.

Miss Hahn said she dislikes the term "hush money," which has been used by some to refer to the $150,000 trust fund.

"There's no such thing as hush money," she said. "I hate the words. Hush money is ridiculous.

NATION IN BRIEF

Trade deficit down slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's deficit in the broadest measure of foreign trade shrank slightly in the first three months of the year to $37.12 billion as the country continued to pile up international debt, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the imbalance in the nation's current account edged down 2.3 percent from the final three months of 1986, when the trade deficit hit a quarterly record of $38.0 billion.

The current account measures not only trade in merchandise but also trade in services, which includes such items as investment earnings, tourism and foreign aid.

While the United States has run a deficit in merchandise trade for 15 of the last 16 years, the current account recorded a surplus as recently as 1981 as Americans' earnings on overseas investments were enough to offset the merchandise deficits. In recent years, however, a flood of foreign goods has wiped out the cushion once provided by the investment earnings.

North gets limited immunity

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver L. North has been given limited immunity from prosecution in a move to compel his testimony before congressional committees investigating the Iran-Contra affair.

Also receiving limited immunity Monday was a former CIA official, Glenn Robinette, who installed a security system at North's house. Meanwhile, the Iran-Contra grand jury interviewed one of North's former colleagues at the White House.

North's immunity grant from U.S. District Judge Louis Oberdorfer means that nothing he tells the congressional panels can be used against him in criminal prosecution unless the special prosecutor had already obtained the information.

Linder thought to be advisor

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S-backed rebels who killed an armed American in Nicaragua six weeks ago say they selected their victim because they thought he was a Cuban adviser, The New York Times reported today.

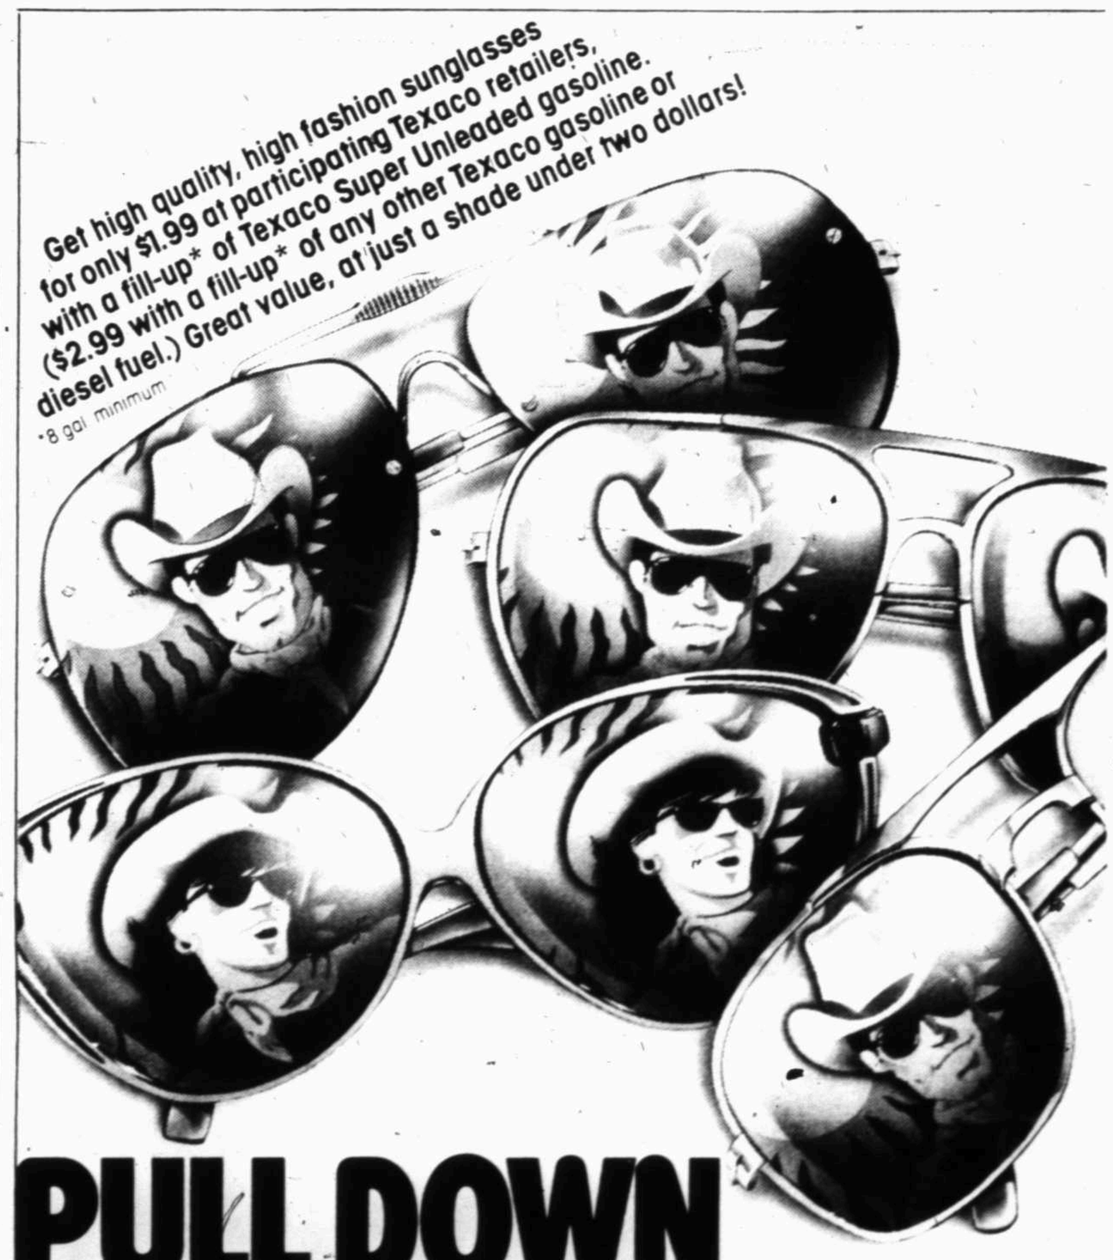

The rebels say that Benjamin E. Linder died immediately in an ambush on April 28 in a war zone in northern Nicaragua near the village of San Jose de Bocay, the newspaper reported.

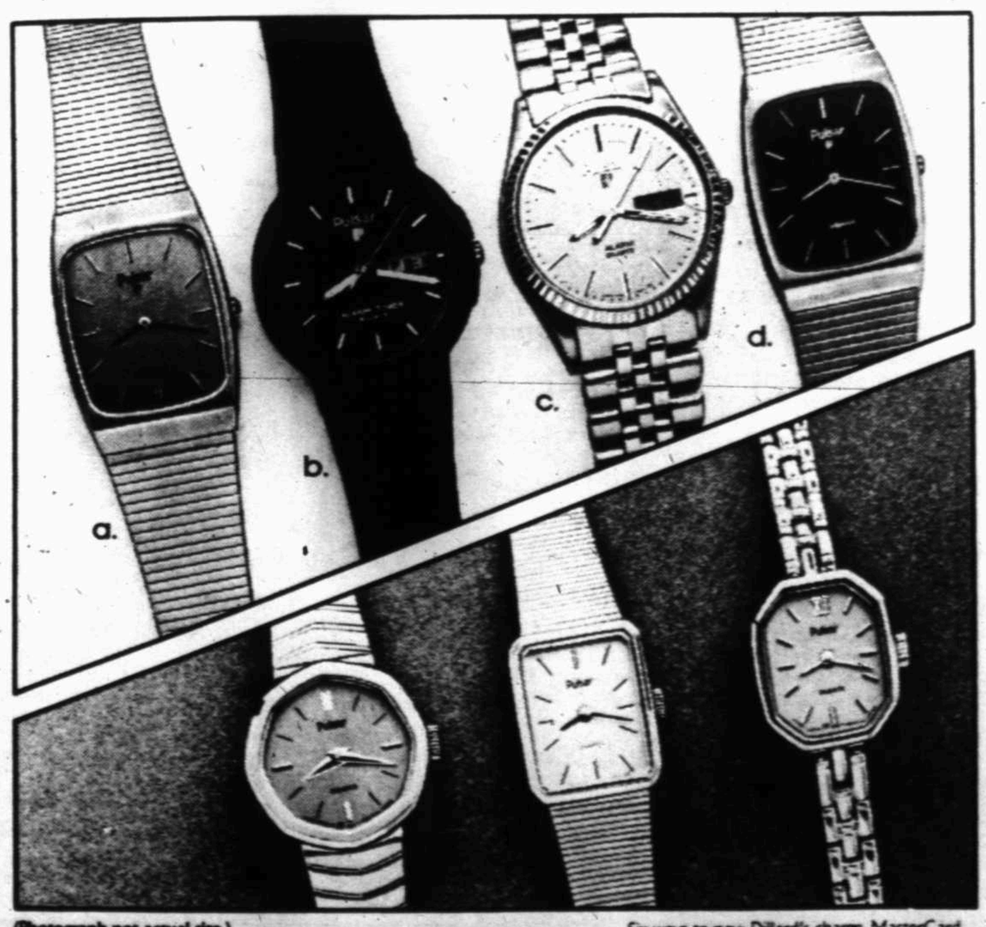

Nicaragua's leftist government and Linder's family have charged that he was killed by a bullet fired point blank into his head from less than 2 feet away after having been wounded by the rebels, the Times said.

His death has been the subject of a Congressional investigation in the United States and Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., has called on the State Department to make a thorough inquiry.

Linder, a 27-year-old mechanical engineer from Portland, Ore., and a committed supporter of the Sandinistas, came to Nicaragua to work on a rural electrification project.

At the time of his death, he was armed with a rifle and accompanied by armed and uniformed Sandinista militiamen, the paper reported.

Hot days continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

Continuing hot temperatures and a chance of thunderstorms are in the National Weather Service forecast for Wednesday. With a high in the upper 90s, there will be a 20 percent chance of afternoon storms.

There is a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms for tonight. Under partly cloudy skies, the low will be near 70. Winds will be out of the south at five to 10 mph tonight, increasing to 10-20 mph on Tuesday.

Monday's high was 13 degrees below the record high of 106 set for that date in 1960. Today's low of 64 was 16 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1981.

STATE

Strong thunderstorms, triggered by moist, unstable air, roared across North Texas between the Sherman-Denison area and near Dallas before dawn today.

There were no reports of severe weather although the thunderstorms produced briefly heavy rain, frequent lightning and gusty winds.

The North Texas storms came less than 12 hours after high winds toppled trees and power lines, and torrential rains dumped more than 4 inches of rain in parts of Northeast Texas on Monday.

Cooper, located about 80 miles northeast of Dallas, had some of the most severe weather Monday.

"We had one report of 4½ inches of rain in town, and we probably got that in a period of 45 minutes, not more than an hour," said Gary Thompson, an investigator with the Delta County sheriff's department in Cooper.

"The whole southeast part of the city is flooded," Thompson said after the storm, which hit Cooper about 6:30 p.m. "We've got numerous power lines down, and a lot of trees and stuff broken, lying in the road. We had high winds. I'm not sure of the velocity, but it wasn't a tornado."

NATION

Hot and humid conditions spawned widespread rain and thunderstorms today.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered from the mid-Atlantic states across the South, through the southern Plains, the High Plains and the central and northern Rockies.

Skies were mostly clear early today from California into the Southwest, across the Great Lakes region and in New England.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms scattered over Georgia, northern Florida and from the Carolinas across the southern Ohio Valley, the Tennessee Valley and lower Mississippi Valley into the southern Plains.

Police say cable converter box thefts increase

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Cable television converter boxes have become a favorite target of home burglars, who will sometimes ignore a television set and steal the decoding device instead, authorities said.

Theft of the boxes has become an increasing problem recently for the local cable franchise, Dimension Cable Services, according to a company official.

In the last four months, at least 26 of the boxes have been reported stolen, said Doug Smith, general manager of the cable service.

"What attracts people is they will get free cable service," Smith said. "They could get up to $65 worth of free service."

Smith said it is "not that difficult" to pirate cable services once a person has a converter box, and he admits the company is susceptible to ex-employees who are familiar with the technology used.

"It is probably like oil field theft — people are just very familiar with the equipment," he said.

Police said they are seeing more boxes stolen in home burglaries. The boxes are now one of the first targets, like videocassette recorders, television sets, jewelry, and firearms, said Cpl. Jim White, police spokesman.

"Yes, they are targeted (by burglars)," White said. "Sometimes they will leave the TV and take the box instead."

The boxes are re-sold to individuals, White said, because pawn shops and other businesses "won't touch them. They know the boxes are a secure item."

Smith said cable subscribers whose box is stolen are liable for the $250 fair market value of the devices, according to the agreement signed when service is established.

But, Smith said insurance usually covers the theft of the boxes.

Pirating cable service, with or without a stolen box, is still a major problem faced by cable operators, Smith said.

Following an audit, Dimension Cable discovered less than 1 percent of cable subscribers steal basic cable services.

"By cable standards, that is very low," Smith said. "But it is harder to detect theft of premium services.

"It does seem like a low percentage...but it translates into the bill you pay each month."

Texas law specifically prohibits theft of cable service, and depending on the circumstances of the offense, the crime is a class A or B misdemeanor, punishable by a fine and a jail sentence up to 180 days.

In the past year, about two dozen people have been prosecuted under the statute, said County Attorney Mark Dettman, whose office prosecutes cable thieves.

Dettman said those persons prosecuted are fined and have to pay restitution, and some offenders serve a few days in the county jail.

He said becoming a cable thief is easy.

"It is pretty simple," Dettman said. "We have had people go to extremes, to wire the connection next door and then bury it so they won't get caught."

Dettman said the offenders are not harmless cable television junkies, and he warns that they will be prosecuted.

"They are just thieves," he said. "They want to get something for nothing."

Dimension Cable avoids prosecution, if possible, but there are situations where it is unavoidable, Smith said.

"Over the last two or three months, we have found and reported on four different situations where we had successful prosecutions," Smith said. "Ultimately, it's up to the county attorney's office — we have no desire to fill the jail up with people who are stealing cable television. But sometimes it is necessary if we find the people just won't work with us."

Authorities said the stolen boxes are rarely recovered, but are a welcome find.

"We have documented cases that, if we can find who has the stolen box, the information usually leads back to the burglary itself," White said.

Man jailed for barricading himself in wife's house

From Staff Reports

MONAHANS — A 39-year-old Monahans man remained in the Ward County jail on a charge of burglary this morning after barricading himself in the home of his ex-wife for more than four hours Monday afternoon.

Police Chief David Mills said Thomas Andrew "Andy" Patrick was expected to be formally arraigned on a charge of burglary in connection with entering the home of his ex-wife about 3 p.m.

Mills said an officer responding to a disturbance call at the residence on South Bruce Street tried to talk to Patrick, but Patrick closed the front door and refused to talk and wonuldn't answer the telephone.

The Monahans police chief said reports that Patrick had two automatic weapons were erroneous, that there were two shotguns found in the residence after Patrick was persuaded to surrender about 7:10 p.m.

Mills said Patrick finally answered the phone and talked several times with a volunteer counselor.

Patrick finally agreed to talk with the woman in person and she and Texas Ranger Bob Favor went to the door of the residence and were admitted by Patrick.

A short time later, Mills said, Patrick agreed to surrender and was escorted from the house by the counselor and Favor.

The police chief said Favor was called in primarily for support "in case the situation escalated."

Mills said reports that hostages had been taken by Patrick were not true. "No shots were fired, no hostages were taken and there was no damage," he said. The burglary complaint against Patrick was filed by his ex-wife, Mills stated.

Midland officials unsure about impact of zoning decision

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Local officials say they are unsure what impact a recent Supreme Court ruling on zoning will have in Midland, while developers nationwide are calling the decision a victory for property owners' rights and cities are groaning about an anticipated increase in lawsuits.

Midland officials say it is too early to tell what impact the ruling — requiring local governments to pay property owners when it denies them full use of their land — will have.

Dave Thurbon, assistant planning director said the ruling could make it more difficult for cities to "down zone."

Under the new ruling property owners might be able to sue for losses when a city "down zones" their property from more lucrative commercial and industrial uses to residential uses, Thurbon said.

However, he said down zoning is rarely done in Midland and usually it is done at the property owner's request.

"I don't think the city has prohibited development unreasonably and we don't do a lot of down zoning unless the applicant wants it," Thurbon said.

Frank Mullins, owner of the Midland West Corp., said the Supreme Court ruling will let developers know where they stand by restricting zone changes.

"I think it will be a help in the way the city keeps switching around zoning and changing their minds," Mullins said.

The new questions about how local governments restrict the use of property through zoning arose after a Supreme Court decision last week.

Until he reviewed the case, City Attorney David Reagan declined to speculate whether Midland would see more lawsuits spring from the ruling.

The court decided on a 6-3 vote, that "taking" private property for public use applies to zoning laws or regulations that restricts how an owner can use his land and there must be "just compensation."

The ruling came out of a dispute between the First English Evangelical Lutheran Church and Los Angeles County.

After the church camp's buildings were leveled by a flood, the county imposed an ordinance that prohibiting the church from erecting new buildings.

In Midland, although a great percentage of the city is in a flood plain, building is not prohibited — just restricted, Thurbon said.

Court action curtails police power

Justices rule Constitution protects verbal protests

By DAN FREEDMAN
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In a decision that significantly curtails police arrest powers, the Supreme Court ruled Monday that even "provocative" verbal challenges to officers are protected by the Constitution's first amendment guarantee of free speech.

In an 8-1 decision, the court said officers cannot arrest people for uttering protests of police actions. The ruling leaves intact the ability of police to arrest those who physically obstruct officers, or those whose words present "a clear and present danger" of physical violence and not mere annoyance.

Monday's decision involved a Houston gay rights activist, Raymond Wayne Hill, arrested in 1982 in the city's Montrose neighborhood under a city ordinance that made it illegal to disturb a policeman "in any manner." Hill had been protesting the arrest of a friend by shouting at police, "Why don't you pick on someone my size?"

In the majority opinion, Justice William Brennan wrote that verbal criticism and challenge is protected under the first amendment's free speech guarantee.

"The freedom of individuals verbally to oppose or challenge police action...is one of the principal characteristics by which we distinguish a free nation from a police state," Brennan wrote. "The first amendment recognizes, wisely we think, that a certain amount of expressive disorder not only is inevitable in a society committed to individual freedom, but must itself be protected if that freedom would survive."

Chief Justice William Rehnquist was the lone dissenting voice. In a one-paragraph dissent, Rehnquist stated that without a Texas court decision on how the law might be tailored, he does not believe the Houston ordinance is unconstitutional.

The ruling affects Houston and about 31 cities with similar ordinances, including Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and Memphis, according to attorney Jeff Stumberg, of the National Institute of Municpal Law Officers.

A police spokesman in Houston said the city's 4,600 officers have refrained from using the ordinance for close to six years, arresting people they consider nuisances under disorderly conduct or "unreasonable noise" statutes. Such arrests have not been challenged in court, spokesman Dan Turner said.

St. Louis, which has an ordinance similar to the one in Houston that was challenged, will not be affected because police there use it mainly for physical obstructions, assistant city counselor George Hugel said.

Still, law enforcement spokesmen said the high court's ruling could undermine the confidence of a police officer making an arrest or conducting an investigation with a hostile crowd present.

"An ordinance that lets an officer make an arrest based on an interference is allowing him to defuse a situation that might escalate into something worse," said Stumberg. The Monday decision is "going to make it a little harder for officers to do their jobs."

Civil liberties advocates hailed the decision, characterizing it as a dramatic reaffirmation of the right of free speech.

"This decision confirms police do not have absolute power on the street," said James Harrington, legal director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, an affiliate of the American Civil Liberties Union. "I don't think this decision will affect the power of officers to make arrests. What it does limit is the arbitrary use of that power."

After his 1982 arrest, a Houston jury acquitted Hill of violating the ordinance. Nevertheless, Hill, a controversial Houston radio talk-show host in addition to being a gay activist, filed suit in Federal District Court in Houston, asking that the law be declared unconstitutional.

The lower court ruled against Hill, saying the law was neither vague nor overbroad, and therefore not unconstitutional. However, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in Houston reversed the decision, ruling that the ordinance was vaguely worded, presenting a "realistic danger" of abuse.

The high court agreed, concluding the law could be used to condone police conduct for which it was not intended.

Newest airline meets FAA rules, officials say

From Staff Reports

Federal Aviation Administration security rules have been met by Midland's newest airline scheduled to open July 1, airport officials said Monday.

Atlantic Southeast representatives agreed Monday to begin screening passengers for security at their hub — the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport — and they will screen passengers boarding in Midland, said Larry Roman, Midland Regional Airport deputy director.

"We feel like we have satisfied the problem," Roman said.

The problem arose from a FAA ruling that prohibited the commuter airline's unscreened passengers from entering Midland's secured gate area, said Vic White, aviation director.

Atlantic Southeast Regional Station Manager in Dallas, David Sellers, said the airline's passengers did not go through security at the Dallas-Fort Worth airport because it wasn't a requirement for commuter planes.

In Dallas-Fort Worth customers used to board from an unsecured area onto the plane, but now they will walk through a security checkpoint into a "sterile" area, Sellers said.

While screening passengers for security will cost the airline more, Sellers said fares will not increase.

"It's an additional cost. It will cost more than what we were proposing to do initially over there," he said.

Dirt being moved at start of dam project

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Dirt at the Stacy Reservoir Dam site southeast of Ballinger is being moved in preparing the foundation of the two-mile-long dam.

The initial construction phase of the $30.7 million dam-and-spillway project is the scraping of the base of what will be the earthen dam, which will be from 100 to 1,100 feet wide and will rise to 160 feet in height, according to Joe Pickle, secretary-treasurer of the Colorado River Municipal Water District (CRMWD). Top soil will be removed to the depth of root lines.

Test holes will be sunk through weathered rock at the north end of the 1,000-foot-wide concrete spillway (and) at the center and south ends for a geological evaluation, Pickle said.

Afterward, core trenchings will be made to evaluate and confirm the test-hole findings, he said.

Meanwhile, the dam contractor, Brown & Root USA Inc. of Houston, is stockpiling earth-moving equipment at the site, which is about 25 miles southeast of Ballinger. Equipment includes heavy-duty tractors, dump trucks, and 37-cubic-yard scrapers.

Crews already have cleared the heaviest brush and larger trees from the site for the base of the dam in preparing for scraping and test holes.

The Colorado River Municipal Water District will be operating the Stacy Reservoir, which is to supply water to six West Texas municipalities: Midland, Odessa, San Angelo, Abilene, Big Spring and Snyder.

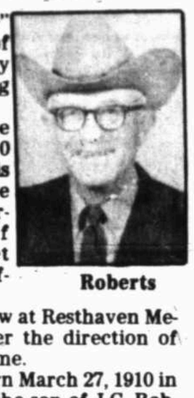

The project, which is to be completed by 1990, is to be operational later in the 1990s when the 30-square-mile basin is filled with water and water lines are constructed from the lake to towns and cities which will be using Stacy Reservoir water.

The overall Stacy Reservoir project is a $70 million program. Of the cost, almost $31 million is for construction of the dam and spillway and almost an additional $40 million is being spent to buy basin land, to relocate roads, to build havens for the endangered Concho Water Snake, to protect archaeological finds, and to pay engineering and other costs.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

Through the Volunteer Center's community program, the talents, resources, creativity, and energies of concerned and willing citizens are channeled to respond to human needs. Volunteers work along side paid staff to extend and enrich the social services being offered by local non-profit organizations.

Volunteers in this day and time are a luxury. More and more people are having to find employment compensation to make ends meet. The following are recommendations for agencies that have volunteers who are job seekers.

■ Develop a written job description for each volunteer in your agency. Specify the tasks and skills required to do the job and identify those skills that can be learned through the volunteer job. Be flexible in combining or negotiating those job descriptions to suit a volunteer's needs for developing a particular skill.

■ During the interview help the volunteer understand the specific skills that can be learned or documented through the volunteer role. Set goals and objectives.

■ Develop a formalized orientation and training program for your volunteers. This can be carried out in a large group process or in a one-to-one setting. Formalized training assists the volunteer to learn those specific skills and policies that can both assist the volunteer in doing the best job for you, but will also be easily documentable for a potential employer.

■ Keep records of the dates and hours of served on each volunteer. Include the training received and new tasks that have been performed. These records can be produced to document the work experience for a potential employer.

■ Give each volunteer an individual performance review. Go over the goals and objectives that you set together and offer the kind of feedback that the volunteer can both affirm accomplishments and take corrective action on ineffective or inappropriate behavior.

■ Encourage volunteers to take on new or more difficult tasks and greater responsibility. New challenges keep volunteers growing and enhance their employability.

■ Assist the volunteer in making contact with potential employers. Make personal referrals and recommendations to appropriate employment opportunities. You are an essential part of the support system that can assist a volunteer in obtaining regular employment.

■ Prepare letters of recommendation for employers with whom the volunteer is interviewing. Be sure to include skills and qualities that the volunteer demonstrated in their volunteer work.

"Opportunities for Volunteers" column is provided by Sylvia Quinones, executive director for the Volunteer Center. For more information on how to become a volunteer or on how your agency can sign up with the center, call 684-5866.

STACY

Midland is to pay for 16.4 percent of the overall $68- to $70-million cost of the dam-reservoir project.

The water district, which is headquartered in Big Spring, was organized in Big Spring in the late 1940s, and operates the E.V. Spence Reservoir near Robert Lee and the Lake J.B. Thomas southwest of Snyder. Midland, which gets much of its water from wells, also buys CRMWD water.

The reservoir which will result from the two-mile-long earthen dam will supply water to West Texas cities from the 1990s and well into the 21th Century.

The dam contractor, Brown & Root USA Inc., is an engineering-construction company which is an arm of the Houston-based Brown & Root Inc. Brown & Root is a subsidiary of the Dallas-based The Halliburton Co. Brown & Root, which was organized in 1919, has been building dams since the 1930s and specializes in a wide-range of heavy land-based and marine construction.

Currently, the CRMWD operates E.V. Spence Reservoir near Robert Lee and J.B. Thomas Lake near Snyder. The water district supplies water to its member cities of Big Spring, Odessa and Snyder and to contract cities of Midland, Pyote, Robert Lee, San Angelo, and Stanton. Other towns, including Rotan, Ira, Dunn, San Spring, Coahoma and West Odessa, are served indirectly through the member cities.

Customs not making special plans for papal visit

By JULI BRANSCON
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — The U.S. Customs Service has made no special arrangements to handle as many as 125,000 Mexican worshipers expected to cross the U.S.-Mexican border during the pope's September visit to San Antonio.

A check of the major ports of entry on the border revealed that the already overloaded stations have only limited capabilities to handle the influx.

Travelers could wait to cross the border for hours in traffic backed up across the Rio Grande. Even lengthier delays could occur at the border offices of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, where aliens must obtain border crossing cards before being allowed into the United States. It takes about 15 minutes to issue each card.

Charles Conroy, spokesman for the southwest region of the customs service, said from his Houston office that inspections would continue as usual, with no special plans for the Roman Catholic pope's visit.

The weekend of Pope John Paul II's Sept. 13 visit will be designated the same as a Mexican holiday, when traffic from Mexico to the United States is about twice the usual level.

But church officials expect many more Mexicans to cross as approximately 97 percent of Mexico's 80 million citizens are Catholic.

"The reports that I've heard from the cities along the border is that there is a greater interest in this visit (than the 1979 visit to Monterrey, Mexico)," said Father Larry Stuebben, Texas coordinator for the papal visit.

"There is a large, heavy population along the border itself," he said, estimating that as many as 2 million people in Mexico live within 200 miles of San Antonio.

Suspect arrested in slaying of U.S. soldier in Honduras

EL PASO (AP) — U.S. authorities have arrested a suspect in the slaying of an American soldier at an air base in Honduras, an Army spokesman said today.

Lt. Col. James Lawson, a spokesman at Fort Bliss, declined to identify the suspect but said he is not a U.S. soldier.

Lawson said he could not give the suspect's nationality or provide details of the slaying of Staff Sgt. Randall Harris, 34, until the investigation is completed.

On Monday, Harris's mother, Delphernine Harris of Wilmington, Ohio, said her son's commanding officer had called her from El Paso and told her "they feel like it was a Honduran civilian that shot him."

However, she said it will probably be a week to 10 days before more details are released about the death of her son.

Lawson said Harris, a military policeman, is expected to be buried with military honors this week at Fort Bliss National Cemetery.

Lawson said American authorities are holding the suspect because he was arrested on the Palmerola air base.

In Honduras, a U.S. military spokesman said the gunman had apparently entered the air base legally.

Harris was shot once in each leg and once in the back Saturday night about 400 yards from the main gate, Eschmann said by telephone.

Odessa city manager will become mayor of Waco

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — City Manager John Harrison was in Waco today reportedly finalizing an agreement under which he will take over the reins of that Central Texas city in about two months, a current and a former city counicimen said this morning.

"I knew he was disappointed about me not running again but I didn't think he'd do anything stupid just because I didn't," former Councilman Vern Foreman said facetiously this morning when asked to comment on Harrison's plans to leave Odessa.

Foreman said he knew Harrison had been looking at Waco because he had had an offer but, as late as last week, the former mayor pro tem said, Harrison had told him he didn't think he'd accept the Waco offer.

However, they apparently "sweetened the pot to the extent he felt he couldn't turn it down," the former councilman said.

Current Mayor Pro Tem J.L. "Barney" Barnett said, "I thought an awful lot of John and his ability. He's done a tremendous job and he was well qualified for it. We'll just have to go out on a search for another city manager and get one of his caliber," he said.

Asked what he felt it would take to obtain someone of Harrison's caliber, Barnett said he would not put a dollar figure on salary, "but it certainly isn't going to be a case of saving money," he stated. "When you've got a $40 million organization a guy's going to run...that's not the place to try to save money. So whatever it takes to get us a good one, that's my answer," Barnett said.

Foreman said he really hated to see Harrison leave and would still try to convince him to stay. However, he observed salary and fringe benefits aren't the only reason Harrison plans to accept the position. "It's an excellent career move for him," Foreman said.

Developers cannot build in a flood plain area unless they construct buildings one foot above the 100-year flood level determined by the Federal Emergency Management Act, he said.

Builders must also use a "cut and fill" method forming the dirt in the area to raise the buildings above the flood level, he said.

Police investigate robbery, aggravated sexual assault

From Staff Reports

Midland police are investigating the robbery and aggravated sexual assault of an 18-year-old store clerk late Monday.

The woman was assaulted in an open field near the Gulf service station and convenience store, 4401 W. Wadley, about 11 p.m. Monday, according to police reports. She was forced to go to the field by a man who also took about $200 cash from the store register, reports said.

The man was not armed, according to reports.

The suspect in the robbery and assault was described as a black man, with a short stocky build. He wore a red cap, a light pullover shirt, blue pants, and white tennis shoes, police said.

A 21-year-old man arrested Saturday night at a local nightclub has been charged with selling the designer drug Ecstasy, according to reports from the Midland County sheriff's office.

Todd Albert Brown, 1601 W. Louisiana Ave., was charged Monday with possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute. Bond was set at $50,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Brown was arrested near the front door of Garfields', 4519 N. Garfield St., about 11:25 p.m. by sheriff's officers. He had 20 of the methylenedioxymethamphetamine, also known as Ecstasy, pills in his possession when he was arrested, officers said.

Earlier, authorities had received a tip that the pills were being sold.

In other reports, police are investigating the burglary of a residence in the 1800 block of Western Drive. According to reports, a full set of men's golf clubs with bag and shoes valued at $1,116, a full set of ladies' golf clubs with bag and shoes valued at $900, a tool box with assorted tools valued at $1,500, four tires valued at $250, and a duffle bag valued at $240 were stolen from the garage of the residence.

The burglary occurred between June 10 and 8 a.m. Monday, police said.

Koop: AIDS stigma keeping people from being tested

HOUSTON (AP) — The stigma attached to being infected with the AIDS virus is hindering widespread testing for the disease, says U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop.

"Until we get over that stigma, we're going to have controversies over who should be tested and who shouldn't be," Koop told a news conference Monday.

"But right now, because there is no cure and no vaccine and the stigma is so great, individuals are not anxious to have it known that they are positive and they certainly are not anxious to reveal to you their contacts, who might also be positive," Koop said.

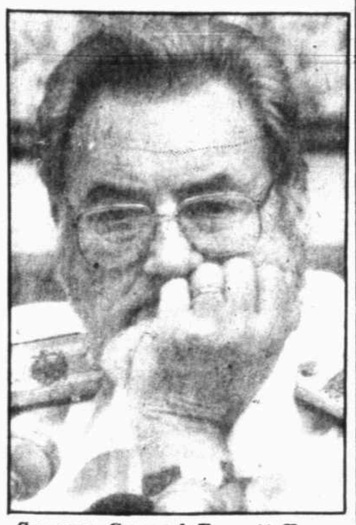

Koop said many people fear a positive test implies their homosexuality or use of intravenous drugs.

"There's no doubt about the fact everybody would like to know the status nationwide of the infection of the population by the AIDS virus," Koop said at a news conference. "At the moment, the knowledge the individual is carrying the virus of AIDS can be extremely detrimental to his life."

As an example, Koop cited a worst-case scenario of a person who could have undergone surgery in 1984 and required a great deal of blood during the surgery. He took a test for acquired immune deficiency syndrome when it became available a year later and the test showed positive.

"If suddenly it were known that he was positive, and he wasn't some very special person in the public eye or didn't have some very special way to prove his point, he could lose his job and with that the insurance that would pay for his final illness," Koop said.

"He could lose his housing, his children or grandchildren might be asked to leave the school where they wanted to be. His druggist might not want them behind the medications in their pharmacy. The pastor of his church might not want him worshipping in that congregation."

Surgeon General Everett Koop

Koop said that although no one person fit his scenario, he knew of cases where each of the elements of his story was true.

Koop said people who personally are opposed to testing know what might happen to them if the test comes back positive.

"That's one of the things that keeps people from getting testing," he said. "If you haven't been tested, you can't know who's positive and who's negative. We have to find some way to overcome that."

Anonymous testing is being performed in many places, but human nature does not always ensure that the people taking the tests remain anonymous, he said.

"Confidential testings are well meant, but many people think confidentialty is made to be breached and are concerned about it," Koop said.

Davis case scheduled to go to jury

By MIKE COCHRAN

STATE

FORT WORTH (AP) — A jury will be asked for perhaps the final time today to determine if millionaire defendant Cullen Davis was the man in black who gunned down four persons at the showplace Davis mansion on a hot summer night in 1976.

Two died, including a 12-year-old girl.

Attorneys were to swap closing arguments and then surrender Davis' financial fate to a jury of eight women and four men.

Jurors were expected to get the multimillion-dollar wrongful death case by midafternoon.

Davis, 53, an heir to a vast oil-related fortune, is accused in consolidated civil suits of killing two and wounding two in a bloody shooting spree 11 years ago at the glittery white mansion that he once called his "dream home."

Plainiffs are the defendant's ex-wife Priscilla, 45, and a former husband, Jack Wilborn, 66, whose daughter Andrea was the first victim of the bewigged gunman in black.

An Amarillo jury acquitted Davis in 1977 of murdering the child, but that verdict has no bearing on the current civil cases..

It is not his life but his fortune that is now at stake.

Another civil case stemming from the August 1976 shootings is set for fall but attorneys say privately they expect that suit to be settled or dismissed depending on the outcome of this trial.

In his farewell appearance Monday, Davis insisted that nothing stressful occurred that hot August day in 1976 to trigger what a psychologist called an "explosive blind rage.".

An "expert" witness testified that the mansion gunman acted in just such a rage when Davis's 12-year-old stepdaughter died in the basement of the remote $12 million mansion.

Priscilla Davis and a young mansion visitor, Bubba Gavrel, were wounded and Priscilla's boyfriend, Stan Farr, 30, was killed.

Davis, appearing for the fifth time in six days, left the witness stand before noon Monday after friendly and hostile questioning about his activities and his state of mind on Aug. 2, 1976.

In response to a series of questions about his state of the mind at the time, including his reaction to an adverse ruling in bitter high stakes divorce suit with Priscilla, Davis declared:

"Nothing I did that day put me in a stress situation...that reduced my judgment in any way."

In another area, Davis said he settled his suit with Bubba Gavrel out of court last year because it would have cost him twice as much to go to trial and win.

"It was just a matter of economics," he said, indicating that his decision did not imply guilt.

Though terms of the settlement were not disclosed, published reports put the figure at $1 million in land, cash and deferred payments.

Davis maintains he was in bed with his girlfriend, Karen Master, 38, when the shootings occurred. Now the defendant's third wife, she testified she was awakened at 12:40 that night and Davis was in bed beside her.

Land Bank to appeal lower interest rate

LUBBOCK (AP) — An attorney for the Federal Land Bank said he will appeal a bankruptcy judge's order that allows a Texas Panhandle couple to pay back their farm loan at 9.5 percent instead of the 10.5 percent the agency sought.

An order, entered Monday by bankruptcy judge John Akard, also scaled down the FmHA debt of Leland and Frances Smith of Dimmitt from $814,000 to $120,000.

Stephen Sakonchick II, senior Federal Land Bank attorney, contacted Monday, predicted that the 9.5 percent rate would result in higher interest rates being passed on to future FLB customers in order to cover costs.

Sakonchick said he will appeal the Smith case — and any others like it — to U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward.

The Smith case was the first filed in the Northern District of Texas under Chapter 12, which took effect in late November. Chapter 12 allows family farmers owing $1.5 million or less to reorganize for three years and protects creditors up to the fair market value of collateral.

"Everybody is filing Chapter 12 to keep hanging on to what they have rather than liquidate and face reality."

Stephen Sakonchick II
Federal Land Bank attorney

Sakonchick claimed that Chapter 12, now embraced by more than 100 farmers in the Northern District, could have a chilling effect on lenders wary of continuing business with a farmer on the verge of reorganization and reduced collateral values.

"Everybody is filing Chapter 12 to keep hanging on to what they have rather than liquidate and face reality," Sakonchick observed.

Lubbock attorney Bruce Magness said most Texas farmers who face bankruptcy are victims of mismanaged federal farm policy, not inefficiency.

Magness had asked, during the Smiths' bankruptcy hearing last month, that the interest rate on the loans against their 900-acre Castro County property be reduced to 8.5 percent. In an apparent compromise, the judge opted for 9.5 percent.

Akard also granted Magness' request for a 30-year amortization period, which Magness said would lower the Smiths' payments, and gave Sakonchick a "balloon" (balance due or refinance) payment in 20 years.

Those terms apply only to three notes totaling $136,500 the Smiths owe Westex Federal Land Bank in Dimmitt. The debt is not being reduced, but the terms must be renegotiated if the land is sold.

Akard's order also set out terms for paying the Smiths' other creditors.

District Chapter 12 trustee Walter O'Cheskey, a Lubbock financial consultant, said Akard's ruling is the first to deal with FLB interest rates in a contested plan confirmation.

In his view, the real issue is the type of rate, not the amount. The FLB usually offers variable, not fixed, interest rates, he noted. O'Cheskey pointed out that, in recent Chapter 12 negotiations, farmers chose the FLB's market rate because of the likelihood of an appeal of a lower rate.

Sakonchick said he will contend on appeal that 9.5 percent over 30 years prevents the FLB from receiving the value of its interest. He conceded, however, that market interest rates could fall below 9.5 percent at some point.

Worker burned in Amoco Oil Co. fire

TEXAS CITY (AP) — One man was severely burned and five others injured when a fire broke out at an Amoco Oil Co. facility, officials said.

Fernando Rodriguez, of Baytown, was airlifted to John Sealy Hospital on Monday afternoon, where he was treated for burns over 70 percent of his body, hospital officials said.

The others were treated and released from Danforth Hospital in Texas City, according to a Danforth spokesman.

The men were all employees of Mega Construction Co. of Pasadena, which had been contracted to perform insulation work at the facility, said Ray Thompson, Amoco spokesman.

Calls to Mega Construction on Monday were not answered.

The fire broke out around 2 p.m.

A forest fire could hit you right where you live.

Living near a forest means you have to be extra cautious about forest fires. Firesafe your area by clearing brush around your home and planting fire retardant vegetation. Use spark arrester screens on chimneys and vents. Install fire retardant material on roof and exposed understructure. And don't burn trash or leaves. These simple precautions could save your home and more importantly, your life. Remember, only you can prevent forest fires.

Black South Africans recall Soweto uprising

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Declaring their own holiday, hundreds of thousands of blacks stayed home today in commemoration of the 1976 student uprising in Soweto that sparked nationwide unrest.

Soweto, the township of 2.5 million blacks near Johannesburg, was almost totally shut down. Stores and municipal offices were closed. Trains carried about 5 percent of their normal commuter load. Buses and taxis did not run at all.

Many businesses around the country, accepting demands of black labor unions, designated June 16 as a paid holiday. The government has formed a commission to consider changes in holidays, but at present there are no official holidays of symbolic importance specifically for the 24 million black majority.

Reports from townships nationwide indicated security forces were acting with restraint and blacks were heeding a call by the United Democratic Front, the largest anti-apartheid coalition, to observe the anniversary "with maximum discipline and unity."

Soweto residents said that unlike some past stayaways, militant youths were not erecting street barricades or intimidating workers into staying home.

"It's like a Sunday, only tense," said a local reporter after driving through the township.

On June 16, 1976, police fired on Soweto schoolchildren protesting the required use of Afrikaans as a language of instruction in their schools. That set off a rampage of arson and rioting in Soweto and provoked months of nationwide unrest in which, by official count, 575 blacks were killed.

A year ago, 11 blacks were killed on June 16 when millions stayed away from work and school to commemorate the anniversary and protest the state of emergency President P.W. Botha declared four days previously.

That emergency was extended and reinforced last week.

Security forces today maintained a heavy presence in many townships. They set up roadblocks and used loudspeakers to urge residents to go to work.

Police headquarters said no major disturbances were reported by mid-afternoon. It said four people, including a 4-year-old child, were injured Monday when a hand grenade was thrown into a black town councilor's home in Guguletu, near Cape Town.

Two commemorative services were held at Soweto churches.

At the Evangelical Lutheran Church, there was overt defiance of a ban on unauthorized political meetings. Rapu Mokolane, a leader of the June 1976 protest and now general secretary of the South African Youth Congress, led about 200 people in cheers for the outlawed African National Congress, the South African Communist Party and the United Democratic Front.

At Regina Mundi Catholic Church, police complied with a request to move away and a service was held.

At Johannesburg's Central Methodist Church, about 125 people, two-thirds of them whites, attended an afternoon commemorative service.

The Rev. Peter Storey, a white Methodist leader, lit a candle wrapped in barbed wire to "remember the vision of the pain" of black South Africans.

The call for peaceful commemoration was widely heeded in townships throughout the Johannesburg region, in Port Elizabeth and around Pretoria. The stayaway was less effective in the Durban and Cape Town areas.

Poland cites 'popular value' of pope's visit

Hearst News Service

WARSAW — Poland's communist government Monday hailed the visit of Pope John Paul II as one of "enormously popular value" despite the pontiff's frequent praise for the goals of the outlawed Solidarity movement and his constant calls for greater political freedom.

In an interview, Jozef Czyrek, the number two leader in the Politburo here and party chief Wojciech Jaruzelski's foreign affairs expert, said the pope's weeklong pilgrimage that ended Sunday took place in an atmosphere of "popular interest, calm and dignity" and confirmed the communist-led stabilization of the country.

Czyrek thus downplayed the clash Friday in Gdansk in which about 10,000 supporters of the Solidarity trade union, which the government crushed in 1981, demonstrated after the pope criticized the regime at a mass for shipyard workers. The crowd was overwhelmed by the militia, which clubbed some demonstrators as they sat down and prayed.

Czyrek charged that western news media and the underground opposition had tried to use the incident "for political ends."

Another official said he was heartened because, for the first time in years, most Poles were demonstrating for something — the pope — rather than against something — the military regime.

In fact, despite press accounts stressing controversy, it was apparent from the moment John Paul II arrived that he was ready to compromise and did not want a suicidal confrontation with the communist authorities.

Will cuts force theater's final curtain call?

LONDON (AP) — The world-renowned Royal Shakespeare Company says that despite two Broadway hits, it is plagued by financial problems that may force the closure of its theatrical base at Stratford-upon-Avon.

The company issued a statement Monday saying its "only hope" is that private companies and banks will heed its urgent call for increased sponsorship.

"We have put out a lot of feelers in the City," London's financial district, the statement said. "All our efforts between now and December will go into finding an alternative solution."

The company, whose shows "Les Liaisons Dangereuses" and "Les Miserables" are big Broadway successes, confirmed a report in the London Sunday Times that its deficit could lead to closure of its theatrical base at Stratford-upon-Avon. William Shakespeare was born in the central English city in 1564.

"It's something that's being considered," said the company's spokesman, Peter Harlock. He said the Royal Shakespeare Company operates six theaters.

But he added that closing the Stratford-upon-Avon headquarters was less likely than closing its London base, the London Theater, at the Barbican arts complex.

"If you cut Stratford you don't have an organization. It's our headquarters; we're based there emotionally and geographically. All our Shakespeares (productions of Shakespeare's plays) originate there," he said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Nicaragua downs plane

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Defense Ministry said its troops shot down a plane that was attacking army positions, and Nicaraguan rebels acknowledged one of their aircraft crashed after being fired on by Sandinista troops.

But the rebels said the plane carried no weapons and was not conducting a military raid. No one was killed in the Monday night crash, they said.

Nicaraguan Defense Ministry spokeswoman Capt. Rosa Pasos said the plane "attacked Sandinista army positions with rockets" Monday at El Doradito Hill, about 125 miles north of Managua in Nueva Segovia province, which borders Honduras.

Government troops returned fire, and after the plane was hit, it headed toward Honduras "and apparently fell...four miles inside Honduran territory," she said. The plane's rockets caused no damage, she added.

In Tegucigalpa, Honduras, spokesman Aristides Sanchez of the Nicaraguan Resistance rebel coalition said the pilot and co-pilot of the downed plane were rescued from the crash site by other rebels.

Ferry sinks, killing 24

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A sightseeing boat carrying 81 people caught fire and sank off South Korea's southern coast today. The navy helped rescue 40 people, but officials said 24 others died and 17 were missing.

The Yonhap News Agency said 28 of those rescued suffered serious burns.

The agency said many of those aboard the vessel were women and elderly people. It said some jumped overboard, but many others, who apparently could not swim, stayed aboard and were burned or went down with the stricken vessel.

Yonhap said the crew members tried to put out the blaze with fire extinguishers, but they did not work and there was panic when passengers tried to reach life jackets that were roped together at the ceiling of the cabins.

Iran mining Persian Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — As the U.S. Navy prepares to escort Kuwaiti tankers in the Persian Gulf, Iran is mining the narrow approaches to Kuwait's Al-Ahmadi oil terminal, gulf-based maritime salvage executives said.

The mines, being planted by Iranian Revolutionary Guards and explosives experts, can be detonated by remote control or automatically tripped by ships passing over them, the executives said. Some of the mines are being buried in the seabed, where they will be difficult to detect with minesweepers.

Call Copy Craft today for complete line of Wilson Jones products

Ken Craft of Copy Craft is constantly shopping for the best quality products at the best prices. That's because Copy Craft is committed to offering their customers discount prices, as well as full service.

One example of the value Copy Craft offers their customers is being a direct dealer for Wilson Jones and carrying their full line of products.

These products range from the Cooke & Cobb line of folders including expanding folders, expanding wallets, file envelopes, etc. to a complete line of "computer paper shredders".

Wilson Jones Shredders: Wilson Jone's has radically improved waste handling, increased capacity, and reduced expensive operating space by 60 percent with their line of shredders resulting in the Wilson Jones shredder line being the world's most advanced shredder for personal or general use, for computer forms or high security shredding.

Features surrounding their shredders include safe finger proof operation, space saving design (under the shredder waste cart & front feed design), drive belts, permanently lubricated steel drive gears, and push button convenience. For a demonstration, please call Copy Craft and they will bring a shredder to your office for demonstration purposes.

Surge Suppressor's - your best buy for West Texas weather: In a normal 24 hour period, during bad weather and good, you will experience an average of at least three times a "electrical surge". Your telltale signs are your office lights dimming, then glowing extra bright for just a moment, and for your office copier and computer equipment, that surge can mean disaster.

Your copier and computer equipment are subject to damage from three power line threats: power spike, power surges and radio frequency interference.

All three can burn out electronic and electrical components, provide line noise which can lead to bad copies, loss of internal memory and other malfunctions including downtime and costly repairs.

Copy Craft has the following on hand to prevent the above malfunctions from occuring: Office Copier Surge Suppressor, Facsimile Equip. Surge Suppressor, Surge Suppressors for Personal computers and Peripherals (two, four and six receptacles and a four receptacle/two phone jacks), Power Control Center, static mats, filter screens for the CRT.

These are just a few of the Wilson Jones products Copy Craft offers to their clients. As usual, you will always find a complete line of computer hanging binders, diskette storage trays, three ring binders, accounting work sheets, three ring "D ring" binders, and can order any type of computer furniture that Wilson Jones carries.

If you haven't checked the savings and the service of a volume dealer in Wilson Jones products, you are paying too much when compared to the cost and lack of service you often receive from others.

Whether you are ordering Wilson Jones Products or the other fine line of products from Copy Craft's 7500 square foot warehouse, you can count on fast, professional service.

Ken and Letty Craft, Chuck Sonnenberg, Randy Robbins and Berniece Bassham of Copy Craft understand that you don't have time to stop what you're doing to put up new supplies. That's why Copy Craft offers FULL SERVICE.

Leaving things at the front door just isn't their style. In fact, Ken explains that they will even be glad to keep an inventory list of your supplies. Depending on your needs, Copy Craft can set up weekly, bi-weekly or monthly inventory service.

Because Copy Craft's 7500 square foot warehouse enables them to keep an extensive selection of products, their customers enjoy another benefit. For instance, on the occasion when a customer gets a defective diskette, Copy Craft's customer doesn't face a big ordeal to have it replaced. All it takes is a quick call to Copy Craft at 561-9118 and a replacement will be delivered.

The commitment to service goes on. Perhaps you need a price quotation on custom forms, such as letterheads, checks, invoices, statements or snap-out forms. Copy Craft will send an area sales representative to you to pick up a sample and call you back with the various price breaks based on the amount you need. You will find no hidden costs, only a straight forward response to exactly what your cost will be.

And during these days when efficiency is a top priority, you can count on Copy Craft to continue to have the highest quality products, like Nashua, at the best prices around. And, you don't have to make a choice between Full Service and Discount Prices.

Call 561-9118 for computer, copier and typewriter supplies, they'll come to you!

Steve Boone (right), H2S Instructor with Professional Oilfield Safety, Inc., instructs Kris Botkin of Vallen Safety Training with POSI's Morible Respiratory Protection Training Trailer. POSI courses help companies comply with various Texas and New Mexico State rules and regulations.

Keep safety practices up to date with POSI

One of the many professional services that Professional Oilfield Safety, Inc. (POSI) offers is assisting individuals and companies in complying with various Hydrogen Sulfide (H2S) Safety standards such as New Mexico Energy and Minerals Department, Texas Railroad Commission Rule 36, Federal OSHA, etc. This service includes items such as: Lease inspections, H2S concentration and radius of exposure tests, filing of applicable reporting forms and H2S safety training.

To insure compliance with the constant changes in industry standards, safety rules, and government regulations, many companies find it beneficial to use the services of a safety consulting agency.

Steve Boone, one of the safety experts at POSI, recommends that when considering the use of a consulting company, you hire only those who are qualified, by virtue of education, training, experience, and practical insight. The best guide to consultant selection obviously is first-hand knowledge of the consultant's capabilities. Checking references, credentials, financial stability, insurance, and getting to know the employees, will also assist you in deciding upon proper consultant selection.

POSI seriously recommends checking financial stability as part of the consultant selection process. As Boone stated, "In my opinion, a company takes an unacceptable risk when using a safety consulting firm which is financially insecure. The financially troubled companies probably will not be here over the long-haul, and therefore are unable to service your long-term safety needs. With POSI's impressive financial stability, our long-term existence is guaranteed."

POSI is not only economically sound, but continues to experience financial growth. This allows the employees to be active in various professional organizations and continuing education programs. This allows POSI's employees to be better prepared and "ahead of the rest".

Another practice POSI recommends, is that you take the time to meet the entire safety consulting staff. This will enable you to know the actual "safety professional" which will be working with you.

At POSI, we enjoy your dropping in, and try to be as accessible as possible. The better we get to know you, the better we can assist you in developing a safety program tailored to your specific needs. This also allows us to pick the best employee to work with you. Since our employees specialize in different areas, we choose the employee, based on education, experience, motivation and personality, which can best handle your safety needs.

For further information, or to request safety training or other services, call POSI at 699-7544.

China Acupuncture Clinic gets to the point

Are you ready to shed those extra pounds, quit smoking or eliminate those bothersome aches and pains? The China Acupuncture Clinic, at 409 Kent Street, offers a solution with massage and the ancient Chinese art of acupuncture.

Acupuncture, an important part of Chinese traditional medicine, has been used to treat medical problems for more than 2000 years.

Because of its wonderful theraputic effects, its simple operation and its minor side effects, acupuncture is practiced extensively in China and now in many foreign countries.

Dr. Stephen Jon, director, was graduated from the Shanghai First Medical College, and brings more than 30 years of experience to the clinic. He also researched acupuncture for six years at the Shanghai Acupuncture Institute. He brings his skills to the first Chinese acupuncture clinic in Midland.

The clinic offers traditional Chinese acupuncture for a variety of problems, including arthritis, asthma, muscle aches and tooth aches. This is the insertion of special fine, sterile needles into defined acupuncture points to restore the balance of the body's energy and promote healing.

Dr. Jon pointed out that disease results from the body's imbalances of ying and yang. The back of the body is known as yang and the front of the body is known as ying. Another way of understanding this, he said, is to correlate ying and yang to night and day, respectively. The science of acupuncture cures diseases because the balance of the body is restored.

In addition to ying and yang, Dr. Jon explained that disease results from obstructed meridians. The human body contains 14 meridians, 7 in the front and 7 in the back. Meridians are like streets or roads, with points in between, or bus stops, along the way, Dr. Jon explained. If some of the body's points or meridians are obstructed, then acupuncture can pass through the open obstruction and cure the disease.

Obesity can be cured with ear acupuncture. The doctor inserts a small needle in the ear, and patients can expect to lose three to five pounds a week. Some patients have reported losing eight to ten pounds a week.

Ear acupuncture is also used to help patients quit smoking. Applying the needle to a different area of the ear, patients can expect to stop smoking after three or four visits.

Pain control through massage and acupuncture has proven very effective for the clinic's patients. Treatments for chronic pain, headaches, backaches, foot, hand and leg problems are available.

Dr. Jon said that acupuncture is quite safe because no drugs are used.

The China Acupuncture Clinic is located at 409 Kent Street. Office hours are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon. Call Dr. Jon at 683-4767 for more details.

Spinks' power surprises in TKO victory

By BARRY WILNER

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael Spinks answered questions about his credentials as a heavyweight the best way any heavyweight can — with power punching against the power puncher of yesterday. Now he must do it again against the power puncher of today.

If he succeeds in that, there will be no disputing his claim as world champion.

Mike Tyson owns the World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council titles. Spinks has only his own claim to the title after a very impressive beating of favored Gerry Cooney on Monday night.

Spinks knocked down Cooney twice before stopping him in the fifth round. For Spinks, the first light heavyweight champion ever to move up and take the heavyweight crown, it matched the kind of punching power more associated with Tyson — and, for that matter, the reluctant warrior Cooney.

SPINKS, 30, landed 182 of 278 punches, including a devastating 84 of 101 in the fifth round. He staggered Cooney with a vicious right hand after Cooney missed a looping left hook. And Spinks kept battering the rusty Cooney, who had fought only seven rounds in three fights in five years, with a series of rights and some hard lefts. Twice, Cooney went down from rights; twice he got up only to find Spinks waiting to hit him some more.

When Spinks landed 15 consecutive punches to the head, Cooney's legs sagged and referee Frank Cappuccino stopped it.

"I slammed him with a lot of rights to the side of the head," Spinks said.

He landed so many punches that even he wasn't sure which ones did the damage.

"I think it was a left hook or a right outside hook that first dazed him. I shook him up with jabs or the outside right hands or straight rights. I was hitting him hard, but I was surprised he went down."

IN HIS two IBF title fights with Larry Holmes, Spinks showed little power. As a light heavyweight, he had 19 knockouts, but the question was, could he hit like a heavyweight? Ask Cooney, when and if he decides to talk about it.

"I felt, with my jab and hitting off my jab, I knew I could get him," Spinks said. "It was working very good. I had a sure shot throughout the fight."

Spinks will be anything but a sure shot against Tyson, who he was accused of ducking to fight Cooney. Now Spinks will have to wait for Tyson, and it probably will be at least a year.

Tyson is committed to fighting International Boxing Federation champion Tony Tucker, who Spinks refused to meet en route to the heavyweight unification showdown against Tyson. That led the IBF to strip Spinks of the title. Tyson also has two other bouts planned, starting in the fall with 1984 Olympian Tyrell Biggs.

"It's important for us to fight him," Spinks said of the 20-year-old Tyson. "I don't give away any fight plans. I'll fight like I fight everybody else — with all my heart and guts."

SPINKS said Cooney showed those same qualities.

"Gerry came to fight," he said. "He said once he got in the ring, he'd bring his all. I tip my hat to him. Gerry has nothing to be ashamed of. He can walk with his head high. He didn't lose to just anybody."

Cooney, who was the Invisible Man at a post-fight news conference, was, according to Spinks, fighting the Invisible Man.

"I didn't feel I just wanted to run around the ring," Spinks said. "I wanted to be there and not be there. When he punched, I wanted to be gone. I had to make Gerry miss."

Which he did. Cooney connected on only 68 of 220 punches, including just five of 26 in the final round.

Cooney never could trap Spinks on the ropes or in the corner. Cooney did land some good lefts in the third round, but couldn't take advantage of a cut over Spinks' right eye.

IT WAS Spinks who did the punishing.

"I fought smart," he said. "The ropes were really the place he wanted me to be. He cut the ring on me good, but he couldn't do what he wanted with it.

"It took me a long time to map out how I would fight Gerry. I didn't watch one film. I knew I wouldn't get much out of seeing all those knockouts. It would frighten me a little bit."

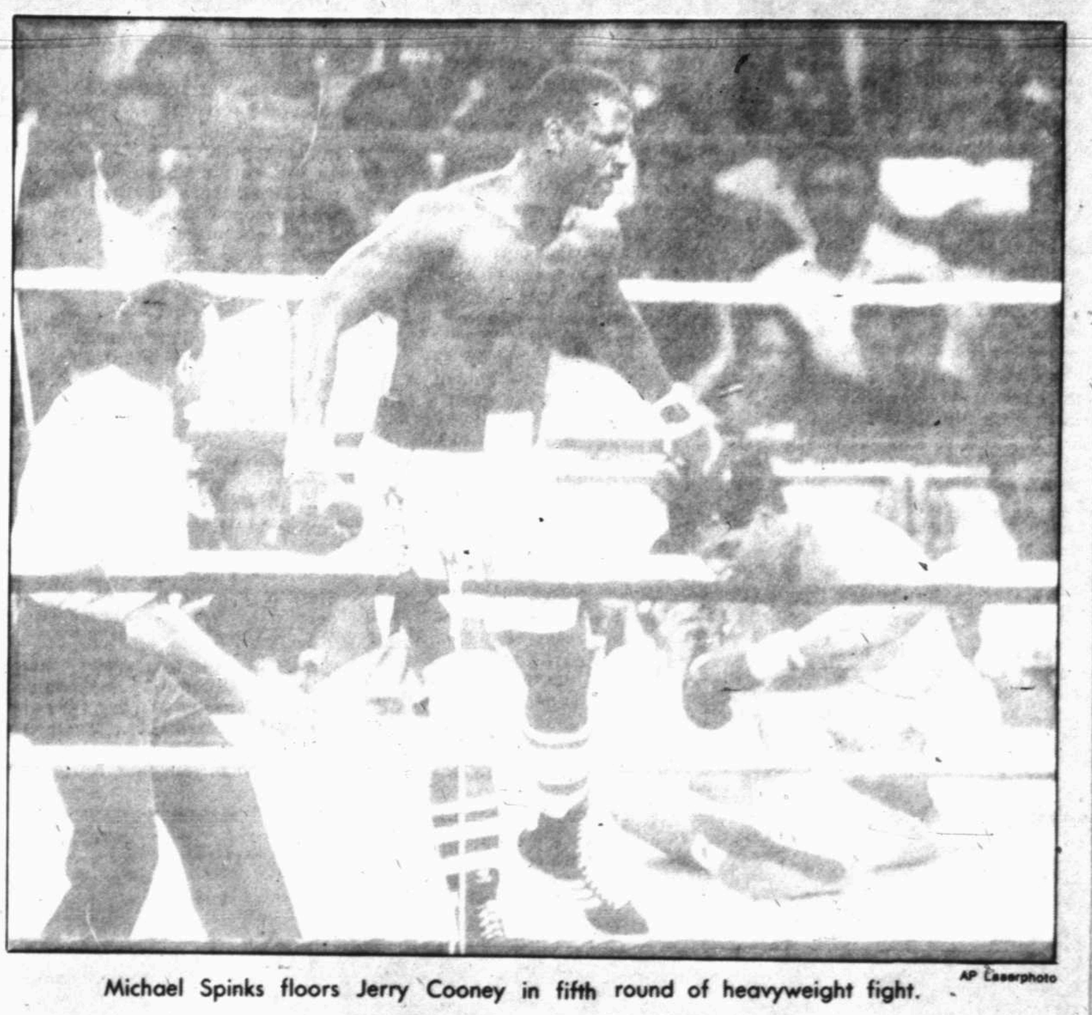

But Spinks wasn't being overly defensive. In fact, he considered it critical that he, the boxer, be the aggressor, the puncher.

"I wasn't thinking decision," he said.

Cooney was "disgusted and disappointed," with his performance, according to spokesman Rich Rose. After so few fights since losing to Holmes in a WBC title bout in 1982 and after such a weak showing against Spinks, Cooney isn't likely to be back in the picture — or the ring.

Which seems to leave Spinks and Tyson. Kevin Rooney, Tyson's trainer, has no problem with that matchup.

"Mike Tyson," Rooney said, "would eat this guy up."

Wichita defeats Angels

WICHITA, Kan.— Catcher Scott Rainey had four hits to lead the Wichita Pilots to a 6-4 Texas League victory over the Midland Angels.

The Pilots broke a 1-1 tie with five runs in the bottom of the fourth inning on a two-run homer by Chris Knabenshue and a two-run double by Rainey. Sandy Alomar then hit a sacrifice fly to right field to score Steve Miller, giving the Pilots a 6-1 margin.

In the top of the seventh, Joe Redfield hit a two-run homer for the Angels. In the top of the eighth, Redfield singled with two outs to score Doug Jennings and cut the lead to 6-4.

The Angels took an early 1-0 lead in the top of the third on an error by Pilot right-fielder Dave Cortez, which scored Doug Davis. The Pilots then tied it 1-1 in the bottom of the third on an RBI single by Alomar, which scored Rainey

Mets, Dodgers post TL wins

Associated Press

Pitcher Jose Bautista helped his own cause by singling home the winning run as the Jackson Mets took a 5-4 come-from-behind Texas League win over Arkansas.

Shreveport defeated Tulsa, 4-0, and San Antonio slipped past El Paso, 7-4.

Wayne Kirby had a two-run, bases-loaded single to cap a five-run rally by the Dodgers in their 7-4 victory over El Paso.

Jesus Alfaro had a two-run homer and the Diablos added another run to take a 3-0 lead.

Erik Sonberg, 1-0, was the winner and Mark Ambrose, 3-7, the loser.

The Mets Zoilo Sanchez doubled in the seventh inning before Bautista, 5-14 at bat this season, hit a grounder through the right side to drive home the winning run.

Greg Jeffries had a solo homer for the Mets in the fourth inning.

Bautista is 5-4. The loser was Ken Hill, 3-5.

Grades sideline UT gridders

AUSTIN (AP) — Several members of the Texas football team, including All-Southwest Conference tailback Eric Metcalf, have been declared academically ineligible for the 1987 season, the Daily Texan student newspaper reported today.

The newspaper quoted sources close to the University of Texas athletic program as saying the players had been delcared ineligible for football in 1987.

A counselor in the College of Liberal Arts, where most of athletes were enrolled, said the number of athletes lost for the season could grow to more than 20.

THE FULL list of athletes has not yet been disclosed, but includes sophomore split end Jeremy Robertson, senior lineman Michael Jackson, freshman lineman Stan Thomas, sophomore linebacker Bobby Rhodes and sophomore lineman Charles Seafous, the source told the newspaper.

"They're gone, and it's going to be hard for them to get back in," the source said. "Dean (Susan) Lippman is not playing anymore."

The source told the newspaper that Lippman, an associate dean in the College of Liberal Arts, has recently taken a harder stance regarding dismissals and appeals of athletes than the college has taken in the past.

"I have no comment, and I don't want to discuss it," Lippman told the newspaper.

ALL OF the players were projected to see considerable playing time in 1987, especially Metcalf. The All-SWC performer also doubles as a member of the UT track team, and won the 1986 national championship in the long jump.

Metcalf was expected to provide game-breaking potential to the Longhorn offense.

Leon Black, assistant athletic director for student affairs, said he did not know about the players being declared ineligible.

"It is news to me," Black told the newspaper.

Other members of the Longhorn coaching staff were unavailable for comment because they were attending a football camp, Bill Little, sports information director, said.

The source also told the newspaper three other football players, linebacker-defensive end Bobby Duncum, running back Darron Norris and defensive back Jorrick Battle, face a similar academic situation to that of former Longhorn tight end William Harris last summer in making up incomplete classes.

Harris was dismissed after failing to score high enough grades in summer lasses to bring his grade point average up to his college's required standards.

1938 — Slugger Jimmie Foxx did not get much chance to hit as the St. Louis Browns walked him six times in succession. The Red Sox won anyway, 12-8.

1957 — Relief pitcher Dixie Howell hit two home runs in the 3 2-3 innings he pitched to lead the Chicago White Sox to an 8-6 victory against the Washington.

1978 — After three ninth-inning near misses, Tom Seaver threw his first no-hitter of his 12-year career as Cincinnati beat St. Louis 4-0.

1986 — Charlie Hough of Texas pitched a no-hitter for 8 2-3 innings before the Rangers lost 2-1 to the California Angels. Hough took a 1-0 lead into the ninth and struck out pinch-hitter Ruppert Jones. He then got pinch-hitter Jack Howell to hit a fly ball down the left field line which left fielder George Wright dropped for a three-base error.

Wally Joyner followed with a single to end the no-hitter and tie the game. Doug DeCinces struck out but the third strike got away from catcher Orlando Mercado and Joyner moved to second. Reggie Jackson was intentionally walked. George Hendrick struck out, but the third strike bounced away from Mercado and Joyner scored from second base with the winning run.

Big Question: Can Longhorns play with Sooners?

Battles

You can hem. You can haw. You can spar. You can shadow box. You can dance around the issue. Or you can cut through all the red tape about season's prospects with one question.

What are Texas' chances of beating Oklahoma this fall? It was put to new Longhorn Coach David McWilliams without any preliminaries.

"I was fortunate enough to play in it for three years and I coached in it 15 years," McWilliams sparred, "It's one of those games that, up until two or three years ago, either team might win, regardless of past records."

"Texas hasn't been in that position, I don't think, for the last couple of years, so what I hope is that we can get ourselves playing well enough by then so that we can make it a competitive game."

McWilliams concedes, however, that personnelwise the edge definitely is Oklahoma's.

The significance lies in the game's tradition. The winner, if not before, emerges as a contender for national honors.

"We don't have 10 seniors back," says McWilliams, who was at Mission CC Monday for a round of golf with Texas Exes, "we will be the underdog. But a win for our team wouldn't make us a contender this year, but it would be a shot in the arm for the squad, not only for this year but for a couple of years down the road."

"Make no mistake," he adds, "The rewards for victory are good."

WHILE his first recruiting venture since returning to Austin after a year as head coach at Texas Tech was judged as excellent, McWilliams says the team is thin in spots and lacks depth at defensive tackle.

"This is especially important in the even defense we employ. Our defensive tackles are the heart, just like the nose guard is the heart of the odd defense. The defensive tackles must control the middle and be good pass rushers."

McWilliams feels he has two great defensive tackles in Steve Lewellyn and Ken Hackemack, but they are the only two coming back who have played."

WHEN MCWILLIAMS took over at Tech last year, he took one look at the offensive linemen and decided the Red Raiders would have to throw the ball. Unlike the linemen he was accustomed to at Texas, they didn't have the physical size to consistently muscle out the opposition.

So now that the Cleburne native is back in Austin, will McWilliams abandon the philosophy he employed with success last year?

"We have more size at Texas, but lack the depth. Paul Jetton is the only senior, although Carter Hill, injured last year, should be back.

"Last year we ran the offense because we needed to. But I wound up liking it, and liking what we did. You know we wound up third in the conference in total offense," advises McWilliams, "It saved our linemen from wear and tear. So we will throw a lot and force the defense to stop the pass, which will open the run."

AS FOR a Southwest Conference, whose reputation is in tatters from the SMU Death Penalty and charges of rules violations that have smeared every member of the conference, save Rice, McWilliams sees signs that the worst is over.

"There's no question that the bad publicity has hurt recruiting. More players than usual left the state as a result, but this past season, I felt the tide had turned," McWilliams says.

"The word on the street is that things are looking up and it is reflected in contacts with high school coaches and players."

For the SWC race, "I think when quarterback Kevin Murray decided not to come back, changed the picture. Texas A&M is still the team to beat, but Arkansas moved up with the Aggies. Those are the two tough ones."

And looking back at his year at Tech, McWilliams says, "I enjoyed it and, although I thought possibly it might happen someday, I never thought I'd be leaving so soon."

McWilliams feels Tech's program is one on the way up. "T. Jones (AD), and Dr. Laurie Cavazos have made a big difference in that program."

Execution of Celtics almost bungled by Lakers

Murray

The Lakers lined the Boston Celtics up against the wall and shot them Sunday. Finally.

The battleship finally ran down the rowboat. Russia took Kabul. Four aces beat two pair. Joe Louis knocked out King Levinsky. The 1927 Yankees won the pennant.

Magic Johnson can start to smile again. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar may play another 10 years. Pat Riley can take his tie off and let his hair dry. Larry Bird can go back to being white. Jack Nicholson can go back to playing wackos.

It's over. It wasn't a game, it was an execution. The Celtics should have been blindfolded.

What took so long? It was such a messy application of capital punishment, any judge in the land would have commuted the Celtics' sentence. The Celtics went out like the mad monk Rasputin. The Lakers had to try poison, shooting, choking and finally, so to speak, had to drown them in the Neva River.

HERE WAS a team that could barely walk, led by a guy who was too white to be any good and sporting a backcourt that could fit in a Volkswagen, and the popular call before the series started was that the Lakers should win it in four games — or less — or be ashamed of themselves. Some people thought the Humane Society should ban it. It was as one-sided as bullfighting. Vegas put the spread at infinity. The Celtics looked in poor light like Bonaparte's retreat.

The Lakers, who were supposed to run the Celtics right off the Seal Beach Pier, won the game and the championship on, of all things, defense.

The Boston Celtics didn't score a basket for the first 4 minutes 19 seconds of the third quarter and didn't score again until 7 minutes 47 seconds had elapsed.

The game ended to all intents and purposes at the half. The Celtics led by five, not nearly enough. The Celtics are like squirrels. They have to hoard points like nuts for the coming winter, otherwise known as the fourth quarter. They need a minimum of 15.

BASKETBALL games, like wars, have turning points. Gettysburg, Stalingrad. The turning point in Game 6 came when the Celtics still had a one-point lead in the opening minutes of the third quarter and were driving for the basket.

James Worthy was part of a double-team operation on the Celtics' Kevin McHale with an option to sag off on Boston guard Dennis Johnson when some instinct told him McHale was going to pass. Worthy tried to disappear.

"I didn't want him McHale to see me in the path of the ball." When McHale let it go, Worthy materialized. "I reached out to deflect it." He had only semi-possession of it. "I felt it was going out of bounds and I felt that if I could keep it in bounds, the 24-second clock would run down on them."

While he was fighting to keep the ball in fair territory, he looked out of the corner of his eye and saw a familiar apparition — Magic Johnson on the way to the basket. He half-rolled, half-threw the ball to Magic who swooped on the hoop for the dunk shot that put the Lakers ahead, 57-56.

And that was the old ball game....

THE CELTICS went quietly after that. The Lakers outscored the Celtics, 18-2, nearly 8 minutes into the period and 30-12 for the whole third period. After that, it wasn't a game, it was a procession, a clinic in free-flow basketball. The Celtics just became the instruments for the Lakers to give a symphony. The fourth quarter was a contest only if you consider Beethoven's Fifth a contest.

"Once you get in front of Boston, they have a hard time catching up. They play a slower game," Laker captain Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was to observe later.

So, while the series was convincing, the outcome indisputable, it wasn't the sweep adoring fans envisioned. It wasn't the one-round knockout, it wasn't 6-0, 6-0, 6-0, it wasn't the in-your-face humiliation Laker fans were hoping for. The Lakers shouldn't need intangibles like home-court advantages, air-conditioning, friendly atmosphere, Hollywood houses. They should have been able to beat this Celtic team on the side of Mt. Everest — in a snowstorm.

The poor Lakers are somewhat in the position of the guy who risked his life in a riptide rescuing the young child for his frantic mother — but when he brings him safely to her arms, she looks accusingly and says, "He had a hat."

The championship had a hat on it. But it might have drowned for L.A. if it were not for the remarkable talents of a Laker who may be the best ever to play his position in this league.

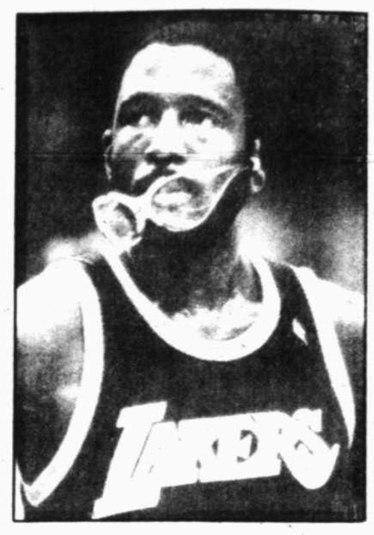

With Earvin Johnson, as with Bill Russell before him, you throw away a stat sheet in evaluating his effectiveness on a basketball court. Magic just does what has to be done. Steal, dribble, shoot, pass — he handles a basketball the way a river boat gambler handles a deck of cards. Or a magician a silk hat. Some night he may turn it into a bouquet of flowers.

What you look at with Magic Johnson are championships. This is the fourth world title the team has won since Magic joined them. One of the years they didn't, he was injured most of the year. When Kareem, for whom he caddied most of the year on court, became injured before the sixth game of the title series in his rookie year, Magic became a gunner and threw in 42 points before a startled Philadelphia figured he didn't have to deal off the ball if he didn't want. Magic is a one-man theater.

He adjusts. The Lakers, smelling a one-sided game, came out falling all over themselves Sunday. "We were over-anxious. We came out too ready," explained Magic after the game. The team was like a crew of Keystone Kops who run at a door only to find it isn't locked, and, when the Celtics so to speak threw it open on them, they crashed into one another. "We were too tight. We had to spread out, loosen up," Magic perceived. And corrected.

THE CELTICS could have found out they were about to see the old rabbit-out-of-the-hat, handkerchief-into-a-flower-vase trick from Magic if they got to the Forum early. The game was not until 12:45, but shortly after 9 o'clock a figure was out on the court in plain white-wrapper T-shirt and walking shorts, weaving in and around the chorus girls practicing their routines. Magic Johnson was rehearsing his own bag of tricks, hook shots, dribble-drives, layups, stuffs, behind-the-back-passes hours before the tip-off.

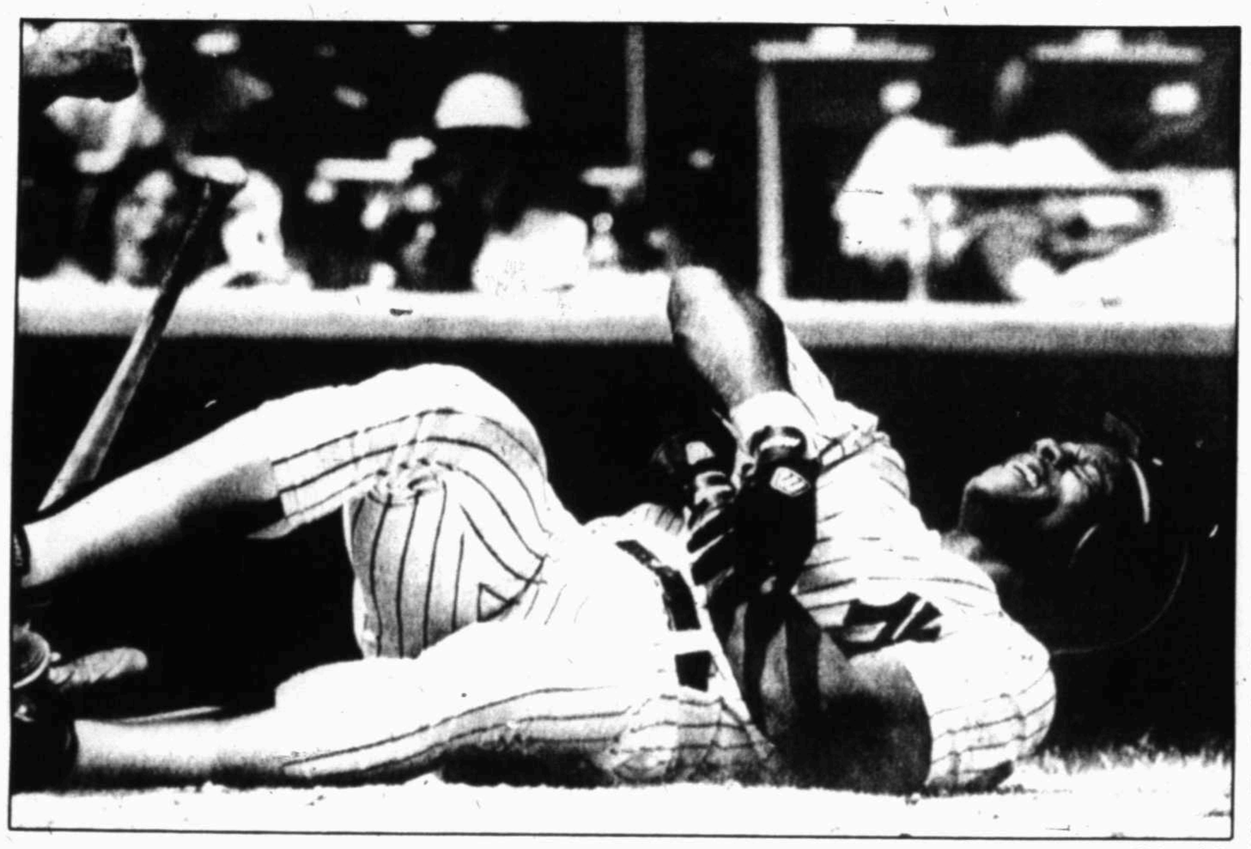

It's not the kind of dedication you expect to find in a superstar, but Magic thinks he is lucky to be on the Lakers. "This is the best team I ever played for," he said earnestly after the game. "No question this is a super team. I never played on a team before that had everything. Each team had something you had to get around. Not this team."

James Worthy
...key to LA victory

This team has everything all right. Magic Johnson. Other teams have had Mr. Clutch — or Mr. Outside or Mr. Inside. This team has Mr. Everything. And he comes with the title.

Yankees' Ricky Henderson hits ground in pain after being hit by a pitch.

Astros' Scott fans 14

By BRIAN TRUSDELL
Associated Press Writer

Mike Scott's memory must be failing him.

With a no-hitter and a Cy Young Award at the end of last season and an 8-3 start already this year, his performance Monday night against Cincinnati is the one that sticks out.

"It's the best I can remember pitching in a while," said Scott, who tied a career high with 14 strikeouts in a 4-0 Houston victory. "I wasn't getting behind the hitters."

Scott didn't walk one batter and allowed seven hits before Hal Lanier brought in Dave Smith in the ninth.

"Hal made a good move in calling for Smitty before he even talked to me because I would have probably tried to talk him out of it," Scott said.

Smith entered after Bo Diaz led off the ninth, reaching base on Terry Puhl's error. He then struck out three straight.

"I felt good from the first inning on," Scott said. "I had my good stuff tonight and when you have your good stuff, you should win the game."

Scott, who pitched a no-hitter in a 2-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants on Sept. 25 to clinch the NL West, has had good stuff much of this season.

His 14 strikeouts ties him with Seattle's Mark Langston for the major league lead with 116.

The 32-year-old right-hander struck out 14 on Sept. 14, 1986, in a 3-2 loss against San Diego and repeated the feat on Oct. 8 in Game 1 of the NL playoffs, beating the New York Mets 1-0.

"We had two guys who got the 'Golden Sombrero' tonight," Reds Manager Pete Rose said. "You know what the Golden Sombrero is don't you? It's the hat trick plus one. Our No. 1 and No. 8 hitters struck out four times each."

Ron Oester and Tracy Jones struck out three times each against Scott and once more to Smith.

Bill Doran, who was 2-for-26, homered off Bill Gullickson, 7-4, in the sixth for Houston's first run.

The Astros scored again in the seventh, off Frank Williams.

Expos 4, Mets 0

Dennis Martinez allowed only three hits and Dwight Gooden lost for the first time since returning from drug rehabilitation.

Martinez, 1-0, struck out six and walked three in his first complete game of the season. Martinez did not allow a New York runner past second base.

Pirates 3, Cardinals 1

Mike Dunne pitched a three-hitter in only his third major league appearance and Mike LaValliere and Andy Van Slyke hit RBI doubles to end St. Louis' four-game winning streak.

Former Midland Cub Mike Diaz hit his 10th homer in the eighth for Pittsburgh's final run.

Phillies 3, Cubs 2

Steve Bedrosian pitched the ninth inning to earn his NL record ninth consecutive save, his 16th, handing the Cubs their fifth straight loss.

Glenn Wilson scored from third on Lee Smith's ninth-inning wild pitch after Juan Samuel had apparently scored the lead run in the eighth on Von Hayes' double but was ruled out on an appeal play for not touching home plate.

'Lost' fly ball beats Blue Jays

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Detroit's Walt Terrell got the Toronto batters to hit the ball at his fielders. Jimmy Key did the same thing to the Detroit batters, but got different results.

AL

Alan Trammell, leading the American League with a .357 average, hit a line drive that Blue Jays right fielder Jesse Barfield did not see Monday night, and it went for a fourth-inning triple that gave Detroit a 2-1 victory in Toronto.

"I've never seen it happen before," said Key, who lost despite pitching a four-hitter.

Terrell and two relievers combined on a five-hitter for the Tigers in a game between two of the hottest teams in the American League East.

Detroit has won four in a row and 22 of its last 30 games. Toronto has lost two straight after a team-record 11-game winning streak.

The Tigers and Blue Jays were scoreless in the fourth inning with Bill Madlock on first base and one out. Trammell then hit a low liner to right, and Barfield lost the ball in the setting sun and stood with his arms up in the air as the ball rolled to the wall for a triple. Trammell scored when Larry Herndon hit a sacrifice fly.

Twins 5, Brewers 0

Bert Blyleven pitched a four-hitter for his 55th career shutout and Minnesota won in Milwaukee.

Athletics 7, Royals 6

Tony Phillips hit a two-run homer in the top of the ninth that put Oakland ahead and right fielder Mike Davis preserved the lead by throwing out Kansas City's Danny Tartabull at the plate in the bottom of the ninth.

Rangers 9, Angels 7

Pete Incaviglia, who had struck out six straight times, homered in his first two at-bats and powered Texas over California.

Incaviglia hit a two-run homer during a four-run first inning and connected for a solo shot, his 15th, in the third. Incaviglia and Pete O'Brien, who homered in the first and had an RBI double in the third, had three hits apiece.

Reliever Jeff Russell, 1-1, held the host Angels to one run in 5 1-3 innings. Chuck Finley, 0-3, took the loss.

Doug DeCinces hit a three-run homer for the Angels.

Yankees 9, Orioles 2

Mike Pagliarulo drove home four runs, three with a double in the sixth inning, and Tommy John won again as New York beat Baltimore.

The Orioles have lost 11 of their last 12 games.

Mariners 8, White Sox 2

Lee Guetterman and Jerry Reed combined on a five-hitter and Domingo Ramos hit a three-run, inside-the-park homer that helped Seattle over Chicago.

Piston rues Bird blast

DALLAS — The Detroit Pistons' Isiah Thomas had his chance on national TV, with the captive attention of everyone watching Game 2 of the NBA finals.

Teammate Dennis Rodmar got to speak his piece Monday, but from a tiny gym on the south side of Dallas with an audience of only those within earshot.

"I regret what I said," was Rodman's apology to Larry Bird and the rest of the basketball world, angered about his comments after Game 7 of the Eastern Conference final between the Pistons and Bird's Boston Celtics.

"I don't think he's the greatest player," Rodman said May 30 after covering Bird during the series that Boston won, 4-3. "Why does he get so much publicity? Because he's white. You never hear about a black player being the greatest."

Thomas' follow-up remarks — "I agree with Rodman. If he (Bird) were black, he'd be just another good guy" — took much of the attention away from Rodman and prompted the six-year veteran to apologize to Bird on TV.

Open in wrong groove

By BOB GREEN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — There's a good chance that the man who wins the U.S. Open this week will be playing with clubs likely to be declared illegal.

Tom Watson estimates as many as 90 percent of golf's touring pros carry at least one or two clubs with the controversial "box" or "square" grooves.

A spokesman for the U.S. Golf Association, John Morris, said the clubs — more specifically a method of measuring grooves on these clubs — will be considered at a U.S.G.A. executive committee meeting early next week.

"If the proposed method is approved, some of the clubs — specifically the Ping I-2 — will not conform to the Rules of Golf," Morris said. Any such ruling, however, will not be retroactive and will no affect players in the 1987 Open.

The "square-grooved" clubs, along with the one-piece ball, represent the "greatest change in golf equipment since the shift from hickory to steel shafts" a half-century ago, Watson said.

Both Watson, a 5-time British Open champion and once the leading player in the game, and Jack Nicklaus point to the equipment change as a principle reason for the exceptionally low scoring produced on the PGA Tour this year.

And both object to the phenomena.

"Maybe it is progress," Watson acknowledged.

"But there has to be a time to say, 'no more.'

"The U.S.G.A. has to do something. We can't let the integrity of the game be destroyed," Watson said.

The controversial clubs, now produced by most major manufacturers of golf equipment, first came on the market about two years ago.

Instead of the traditional "V" shaped grooves, these clubs contain square or box-shaped grooves which impart a greater spin to the ball and allow the player to exert greater control over his shots, particularly out of the rough in wet conditions.

"You can get in the rough and stop the ball on the green. Shot-making is reduced," Watson said.

"You spend years, hitting thousands of balls, learning to play different shots under different conditions. Now, someone comes along and can hit the same shot immediately just because of his equipment.

"I don't like it.

"It's making an ordinary golfer a good golfer and that's what the manufacturer wants. Did you ever hear an ad that didn't say it would make you hit it longer and straighter?"

Nicklaus agreed.

"It's taking shot-making out of the game," he said.

And that deeply concerns the U.S.G.A., the spokesman said.

"We believe that a player should not have an advantage because of equipment. It is a consistent policy. A player should win on the basis of skill, not equipment, not technology," Morris said.

Various tests of the clubs were made in U.S.G.A. laboratories, Morris said, "and we went down to Florida and had Greg Norman try the clubs."

"It makes a great deal of difference," Norman said. "You can put spin on the ball you never could before."

Norman, Nicklaus and Watson all agreed that the clubs greatly enhance the performance of weekend amateur players and suggested that perhaps those players should be allowed to continue to use them.

All agreed, however, that they should not be allowed in professional tournament golf.

"Maybe we should have a (PGA) Tour rule," Watson said.

"As much as he wants to dominate golf (PGA Tour Commissioner Deane) Beman is allowing the U.S.G.A. and the R. and A. to take the lead in this. He's probably right to do so," Nicklaus said.

"I wish the players could change the rules for the PGA Tour," he said.

GRADES

The source said the three players face academic dismissal if they do not achieve a passing grade in their summer courses.

Duncum and Norris are returning starters. Duncum, who was moved to defensive end in the spring, started at linebacker for Texas in 1986 before falling to a season-ending knee injury. Norris, the Longhorns' leading rusher at fullback in 1986, was moved to tailback in the spring.

All three players were unavailable for comment. But a member of the Duncum household said the dean allowed Duncum to make up an incomplete from the spring. If Duncum passed the class he would remain eligible to play, she said.

The Texas football team is also awaiting results from an NCAA investigation into the University athletic department.

The NCAA alleged UT coaches, players and boosters violated 19 categories of NCAA rules over a seven-year period.

Charges against the Longhorns range from coaches lending players money and cars to the players selling their complimentary game tickets.

UT representatives appeared before the NCAA Committee on Infractions June 4 in Kansas City. The results of investigation and any penalties to be levied against the university are expected soon.

BASKETBALL— Former New Jersey Nets guard Micheal Ray Richardson, expected to join the Jersey Jammers of the United States Basketball League, was released by another team because of an attitude problem. Richardson, 32, had a "serious, serious attitude problem," the New York Daily News reported in quoting Sal Davi GM of the USBL's Long Island Knights. "He thought he was in a bush league and he was ruining morale around here," Davi said.

Richardson, banned from the NBA in February 1986 for violating the league's drug policy a third time, was released Sunday by the Knights.

Davi said Richardson failed to report results of drug tests, threatened to punch him, missed two practices and a team bus, promised to play poorly on one occasion, was jealous because teammate Nancy Lieberman was making more money and "played no defense whatsoever."...

One of the more unusual new bridge books (Tops and Bottoms, by Matthew and Pamela Granovetter. Granovetter Books, 180 pp, paperback, $11.95. Available from The Bridge World, 39 West 94th St, New York N.Y 10024) brought back fond memories. Among its 52 hands, featuring the world's great players of yesterday and today, is this one played in a tournament many years ago by our senior scribe. It features one of his favorite plays for one of his worst results.

He offered North every encouragement to bid a grand slam with his cue-bidding sequence. Note that, because of his void in clubs, he studiously avoided asking for aces with four no trump. When North refused to cooperate, South reluctantly settled for a small slam.

West led a trump and, when dummy appeared, declarer was happy with his cautious approach. He won the opening lead, drew the rest of the trumps and cashed the ace-king of diamonds. Suddenly even 12 tricks became doubtful because of the 4-1 diamond split.

There was a chance. If West held the ace of clubs and declarer could create a second entry to dummy, a high club would be his 12th trick. To accomplish that, he embarked on a spectacular line. He cashed the ace of spades and then boldly finessed the ten of spades. When that won, declarer continued with the king of clubs, discarding the king of spades from hand! West won, but had only black cards to return and that gave declarer his second entry to dummy while allowing him to discard two diamonds on the black-suit winners.

What did this brilliant play earn our senior scribe? A cold bottom! At the other tables the lead was invariably the ace of clubs, allowing declarer to score all 13 tricks.

We found the book an enjoyable, if expensive, read.

Virginia, New Jersey plans debated

From The Associated Press

Saturday, June 16, 1787
PHILADELPHIA TODAY

The market was still a problem as the Evening Herald noted:

"Notwithstanding the additional accomodation provided by the public, we find the market people so attached to their old stations, that in Second and Market streets the foot pavements are impassable, and so much of the middle way is encroached upon, that there is hardly sufficient room for the passage of a single horse. This inconveniency, and the mischievous practice of engrossing (keeping the best produce for favored customers), demand the immediate attention of the officers employed in this department of the public police."

CONFEDERATION TODAY

Only New York, Virginia, North Carolina and Nathan Dane of Massachusetts appeared, so Congress did not meet.

CONVENTION TODAY

The Convention resolved itself into a committee of the whole on the Virginia and New Jersey plans. John Lansing (N.Y.) called for reading the first resolution of each plan — that of New Jersey sustains state sovereignty, that of Virginia destroys it. He gave several reasons for preferring the New Jersey Plan. So did William Paterson (N.J.). Both stressed that the New Jersey Plan was compatible with the delegates' instructions and with the wishes of the people.

James Wilson (Pa.) responded with a point-by-point comparison of the two plans, and arguments in favor of that of Virginia. Charles Pinckney (S.C.) cynically but presciently observed that "the whole comes to this: ...give New Jersey an equal vote, and she will dismiss her scruples, and concur in the national system." The debate which would take up the rest of June had begun.

1787 Constitution Daybook

DELEGATES TODAY

William Samuel Johnson dined at City Tavern and went out walking to find cheaper lodgings. His expenses were 9 shillings.

Rufus King wrote to Nathan Dane in New York. He is prohibited from writing concerning the Convention, even to obtain Dane's views on points of consequence. Dane hasn't informed him about the new administration in Massachusetts.

George Wythe wrote Virginia Gov. Randolph from Williamsburg. His wife was very ill, and he felt compelled to resign from the delegation to be with her.

LOOKING BACK
The New Jersey Plan

We will probably never know for sure to what extent the New Jersey Plan was put forward as an alternative to the Virginia Plan and to what extent it was a tactic to preserve an equal vote for the small states. While far less thoroughgoing than the Virginia proposals, it would have markedly strengthened the Articles of Confederation. A comparison of the two plans found in the papers of James Wilson and which is almost certainly the notes from which he spoke 200 years ago this day is as follows:

Propositions from Virginia	Propositions from New Jersey
1. A Legislature consisting of two or three branches.	1. A single Legislature.
2. On the original Authority of the People.	2. On the derivative Authority of the Legislatures of the States.
3. Representation of Citizens according to Numbers and Importance.	3. Representation of States without Regard to Number and Importance.
4. A single Executive Magistrate.	4. More than one Executive Magistrate.
5. A Majority empowered to act.	5. A small Minority able to control.
6. The national Legislature to legislate in all Cases to which the State Legislatures are incompetent, or in which the Harmony of the Union may be interrupted.	6. The United States in Congress vested with additional Powers only in a few inadequate instances.
7. To negative Laws contrary to the Union or Treaties.	7. To call forth the Powers of the confederated States in order to compel Obedience.
8. Executive removeable on Impeachment and Conviction.	8. ...by Congress on Application by a Majority of the Executives of the States.
9. The Executive to have a qualified Negative.	9. ...to have none.
10. Provision made for inferior national Tribunals.	10. None.
11. The Jurisdiction of the national Tribunal to extend to Cases of national Revenue.	11. ...Only by Appeal in the dernier Resort.
12. ...to Questions that may involve the national Peace.	12. Only limited and appellate Jurisdiction.
13. The national Government to be ratified under the authority of the People by Delegates expressly appointed for that Purpose.	13. The Alterations in the Confederation must be confirmed by the "Legislatures of every State."

Charges dropped as Bruce Willis moves

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Moonlighting" star Bruce Willis has moved out of his rented home and authorities have dismissed a case against him brought on by a noisy party, officials say.

City attorney's spokesman Mike Qualls said Monday that prosecutors determined there was insufficient evidence against Willis, who portrays wise-cracking detective Dave Addison on the ABC-TV series that co-stars Cybill Shepherd.

Willis, 32, last week appeared before a hearing officer to determine whether he would be charged with a misdemeanor for allegedly rushing at police officers and screaming obscenities as they sought to shut down a Memorial Day party at his Hollywood Hills home.

Neighbors said later they had complained several times about loud parties.

"During the hearing he was admonished for his conduct, promised to apologize to his neighbors, and the situation has ended because he moved his residence out of the area," Qualls said. He didn't disclose where the actor moved.

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — American conductor-composer Leonard Bernstein had a few bad moments but ended his visit to Munich on a bright note.

He received a 150,000-mark ($83,333) award Monday from the Munich Academy of Fine Arts to promote music eucation in the United States. The Ernst von Siemens Music Prize, sponsored by the Siemens electronics firm, is West germany's most prestigious music prize.

A Siemens spokesman said he understood Bernstein would distribute the money to the Indiana University School of Music, Harvard University, Brandeis University and the Tanglewood Music Center.

Bernstein had a bad weekend in Munich. Police said thieves took his watch, valued at $16,000, from the cloakroom of the German Museum on Saturday before he was to conduct a concert there.

That evening, there was a bomb threat and the concert hall was evacuated. Police said no explosives were found and the concert began an hour late.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo got a surprise party for his 55th birthday and said this should be an especially good year for him, since five is his lucky number.

"It always has been," Cuomo said Monday at a Capitol meeting room, where his cut a birthday cake inscribed "Mighty Mario at the plate." Cuomo, a former minor league baseball player, remains a softball enthusiast.

"If everybody could be as lucky as I have been over these 55 years, there would be very little trouble in the world," he told staff members and reporters.

Of the governor's lucky number, spokesman Gary Fryer said Cuomo "told me was married on the fifth, has five children, always bets the fifth horse and his favorite baseball player was Joe DiMaggio, who wore number 5."

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar held on to the new gains it has made in recent days, opening little changed on European foreign exchanges today. Gold strengthened.

Dealers said trading was lively but the dollar fell from highs reached in New York Monday, apparently because of a large sale of dollars by unidentified interests in the Far East.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell 0.40 yen to a closing 143.95. Later, in London, it was quoted at 144.10 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

—1.5115 Swiss francs, up from 1.5105

—6.0815 French francs, down from 6.08375

—2.0525 Dutch guilders, down from 2.0545

—1,318.05 Italian lire, down from 1,319.50

—1.3415 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3410

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.6345, compared with $1.6332 Monday.

Gold opened higher, pushed up by better closing prices in New York. It had weakened in Europe Monday as the dollar strengthened.

It opened in London at a bid price of $453.40 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $449.25. At mid-morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $452.75.

Bankers on threshold of worst quarter ever

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. banking industry is facing its worst quarterly performance in history as billions of dollars are drained into reserve funds to guard against Third World loan losses, federal regulators say.

More than 12,000 of the nation's more than 14,000 banks are making a profit, according to figures released by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. on Monday. But reserves for potential defaults by Brazil and other developing countries may more than offset those profits in the quarter now ending.

"The amounts they're allocating for reserves, just in the second quarter, are so tremendous that the aggregate net income for the industry will be around zero" and could well be a net loss, said John Quinn of the FDIC's research division.

FDIC Chairman William Seidman said it appears the quarter "will be the worst quarter in history" for the commercial banking industry, in both the rate and amount of earnings decline.

A loss would follow a record first quarter for the banking industry.

The FDIC's regular quarterly report said the 14,061 banks reporting data showed total net income of $5.29 billion for the three months ending March 31, the largest profit ever for a single quarter.

The FDIC said 2,019 banks reported a loss in the first quarter, down from 2,824 for the year 1986.

During the same period, however, there were 54 bank failures, also a record. Eighty-seven percent were west of the Mississippi River and represented problems in the farm and oil belts.

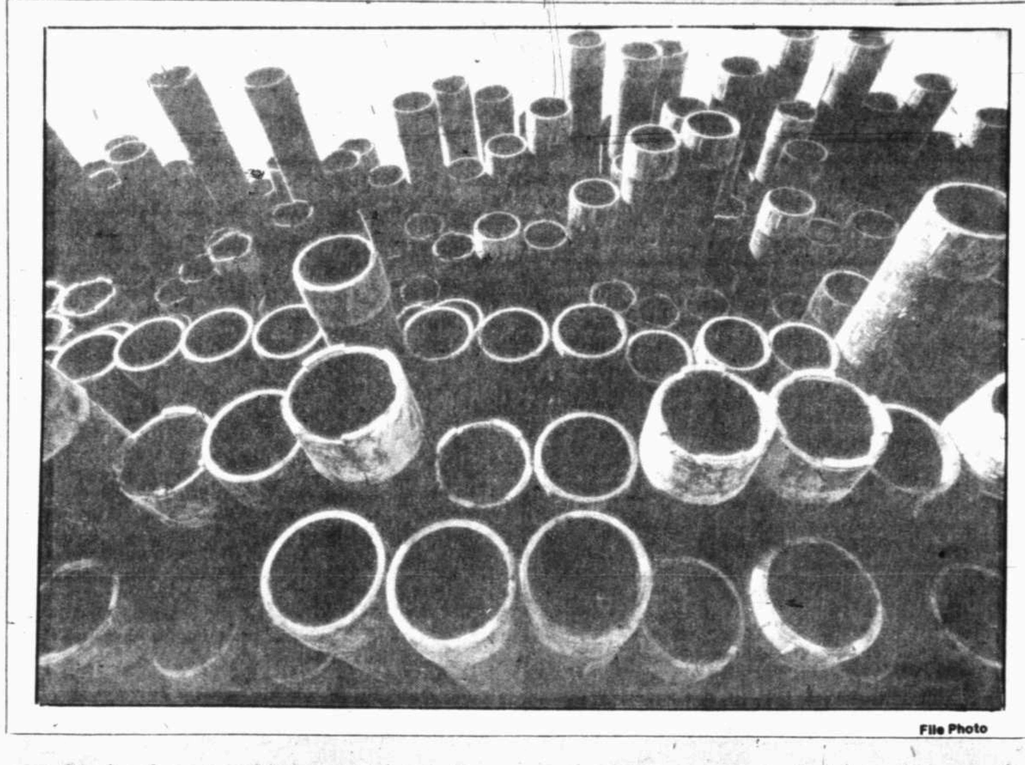

And the number of delinquent loans increased 40.5 percent over the first quarter of 1986, from 54,375 to 76,422, the FDIC said.

Of more immediate concern, however, are the Third World reserves. In recent weeks, four major lenders have set aside $5.5 billion in loss reserves against their foreign loans. More banks are reported to be considering the bitter pill.

Citicorp on May 19 set aside $3 billion against possible losses on loans to Brazil, and said it would declare a $2.5 billion net loss for the quarter as a result. Chase Manhattan Corp., Security Pacific Corp. and BankAmerica Corp. followed suit in establishing reserves.

But Seidman said that once those actions are completed, bank performance should improve, and he predicted significant recovery during the second half of the year.

The FDIC officials made the comments as they released the first quarter report. Quinn said one reason for predicting the loss was to begin preparing the public for the news in hopes of forestalling any panic when the second quarter report is released.

Stacks of excess oil field tubular goods are becoming more scarce as stabilized drilling activity uses up stocks left on the ground when plants stopped rolling pipe.

Pipe shortage hits industry

Tubular prices heading up

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

A growing shortage of pipe has prompted local pipe suppliers to warn operators against drilling without being assured of a pipe supply, adding that some planned completions could be delayed.

The shortage of pipe is reminiscent of deficiencies in 1973 and 1981 but suppliers say the reason behind today's shortage is different. The present shortage is not a supply-driven shortage, caused by high demand, but one created by long-idled steel mills.

When the rig count was 4,500 pipe manufacturers could not meet the demand, but when demand dropped the mills quit rolling pipe. Now, say suppliers, inventories have been used up, no one is making pipe and a shortage has developed.

Suppliers say the shortage is primarily affecting specific grades and sizes of pipe. Jay Morrison of Reliable Tubular & Supply Inc. says most of the shortage is being seen in "bread and butter" items.

"Pipe goods used in wells above the 9,000 ft. range are the most scarce. I called LTV last week trying to track down some 8 5/8-inch, 24 lb. pipe, and they said it would be September before they could supply it," Morrison notes.

He says he called about 20 of his usual suppliers and none had the pipe he needed. "I'm not saying it's not out there to be had, but I sure couldn't get my hands on any."

Morrison adds that the price of pipe is skyrocketing. Gary Bergman of San Antonio-based Superior Auctioneers & Marketing Inc. confirms that prices have taken a steep hike in the last few months. "The price of 4 1/2-inch, grade E premium pipe has tripled since last summer."

Notes Bergman: "Just a few months ago you could get good drill pipe for $1 to $2 per foot; today, the same pipe costs $2 to $6 per foot."

"New pipe is almost unheard of, and supplies of good used pipe are rapidly being exhausted," he said. Bergman says the prices being paid at auction for oil field pipe is increasing quickly.

One supplier points to additional problems as a result of lagging steel imports. "With the dollar's value falling, domestic pipe is much cheaper than imported pipe. We have not been importing any pipe for a long period, which adds to the problem."

Dick Sparks of Sparks International says the shortage is a nationwide problem and adds that a drastic shortage is also being seen in structural pipe and larger size pipe used for offshore piling. "We are scrounging pipe from anywhere we can."

Suppliers stressed that operators need to have their hands on the pipe before they begin to drill, and Morrison stressed the importance of accounting for the increasing price when figuring drilling costs.

General Motors, union sign quality-improvement pact

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. and United Auto Workers union officials have signed an agreement aimed at improving the quality of cars produced at GM plants throughout the United States.

UAW leaders told the Detroit Free Press, which obtained a copy of the agreement signed last week, that the so-called "Quality Network" could give the union a greater voice in determining how GM would subcontract work to foreign and independent domestic producers.

The newspaper reported that a summary of the agreement suggested workers would be rewarded with added pay or other benefits for improved quality efforts.

About a half-dozen UAW members would work full-time with GM executives at the company's major car and truck divisions on design, engineering and quality control, the newspaper stated.

The agreement sets the stage for both sides to negotiate more worker participation in company decisions during this summer's UAW-GM contract talks, union and company officials said.

"By providing high-value, high-quality products, we can improve our sales and thus the job security of all our employees," top GM executives said in a letter describing the program to rank-and-file workers.

"The production of world-class quality products is the key to our survival," the letter read.

The "Quality Network" agreement is separate from the national contract that GM and the UAW will negotiate this summer. But company and union officials said it could expand those negotiations to include greater worker participation in GM decisions.

U.S. production efficiency tops overseas producers

By MATT YANCEY
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor costs of U.S. manufacturers plummeted nearly 22 percent last year when compared with those of major industrial foreign competitors, largely due to the declining dollar, new government data shows.

But even minus the effects of the devalued dollar, the United States outpaced all of its nine major competitors in the international market in both improving manufacturing productivity and keeping a lid on wages.

The 3.5 percent increase in U.S. manufacturing efficiency in 1986 was more than twice the average improvement of major foreign producers, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said in a report Monday comparing productivity and labor cost trends of 10 countries.

It was the first time in the 37 years that the bureau has been making international comparisons that U.S. manufacturing productivity improvements outpaced those of all nine major foreign competitors.

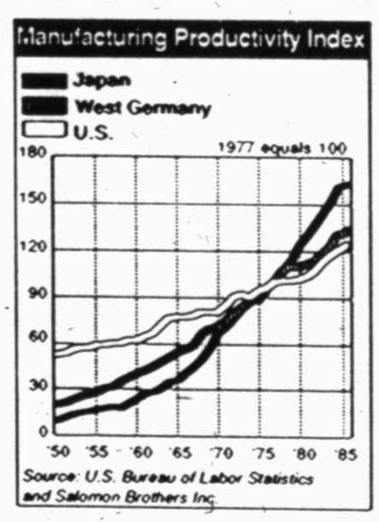

Because productivity improvements are the ultimate source for increases in "real" wages after inflation and a rising standard of living, declining U.S. gains in the 1970s averaging one-half to one-third the increases of Japan and Western Europe became a source of major concern.

"There isn't a single statistic that alone measures a country's competitive posture, but if there was one, growth in productivity would come the closest," Robert Ortner, undersecretary of commerce, said Monday.

Although less than the 4.5 percent productivity increase of 1985, the improved efficiency of U.S. manufacturers in churning out goods last year outpaced gains of 2.8 percent for Japan, 2.9 percent for Great Britain and 1.9 percent of West Germany and France.

U.S. manufacturers increased hourly wages and benefits only 2.9 percent, the lowest of any of the 10 major industrial powers, with labor costs for each item of goods produced in 1986 down by an average 0.6 percent.

In contrast, hourly wages and unit labor costs measured in local currencies rose by 3.5 percent and 0.7 percent, respectively, in Japan; 8:1 percent and 5 percent in Great Britain; 5.1 percent and 3.1 percent in West Germany, and 4.6 percent and 2.6 percent in France.

American productivity reversed recent trends and gained significant ground on all nine of the largest international industrial competitors.

SEC: Two-tier offer popular

WASHINGTON (AP) — The two-tier tender offer, a supposedly scurrilous tactic of corporate raiders, actually is more abused by managers trying to defend against takeovers, a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission said Monday.

Joseph A. Grundfest said in a speech that the two-tier offer as a hostile takeover tactic has virtually disappeared over the past four years and has not been used successfully in more than two years.

But as a defensive tactic, it is growing in popularity — even though it is just as coercive when used by management as by raiders, Grundfest said.

"Whatever abuse and coercion is associated with two-tier takeovers is now present primarily on the defensive side in hostile takeover battles," Grundfest said. "... Therefore, those who sincerely fear the coercion and abuse allegedly inherent in two-tier tender offers might want to scrutinize certain management defensive tactics more carefully than the tactics used by bidders."

Grundfest made the comments in a speech prepared for delivery to the United Shareholders of America, a group organized by noted corporate raider T. Boone Pickens Jr. to lobby for stockholder rights. Pickens was the subject of some of Grundfest's examples.

A two-tier tender offer is one in which a premium price is offered for a controlling block of stock and a lesser price offered for later purchases.

For example, if a company's stock sells for $50 a share, a two-tier offer may pay $70 a share in cash for a 51 percent controlling interest, with subsequent purchases at $60 a share in securities.

The two-tier offer supposedly coerces shareholders to sell quickly, to take advantage of the more lucrative "front-end" offer. Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, has called them "inherently coercive" and proposed they be barred in hostile takeovers.

But Grundfest said the facts do not support the charges. Two-tier offers in hostile takeovers have largely disappeared and can be easily defended against through fair price amendments to corporate charters, he said.

But while hostile two-tier bids "verge on extinction," he said, "two-tier bids are alive and well when used by managements" — often as defenses against one-tier cash offers by raiders.

Two-tier bids as defenses became popular in 1985, when Phillips Petroleum used one against a Pickens takeover bid, Grundfest said. Unocal also used it against Pickens, he said, offering $72 per share for the first 30 percent of its shares in a stock repurchase plan and $28 a share for subsequent sales.

IADC schedules dull bit seminar

From Staff Reports

The International Association of Drilling Contractors' Permian Basin Chapter will sponsor a seminar on grading dulled drilling bits Thursday at Midland Center, 105 N. Main.

All future IADC daily drilling reports and bit records will be updated to incorporate the new system. Gieck will present a complete description of the new improved system and possible causes of many dulling characteristics.

The public is invited to attend the seminar which costs $12.00. A barbecue is set for 12:00 noon with the seminar scheduled to run from 1:00 to 5:00 p.m. A cash bar and refreshments will be provided from 5:00 to 7:00 p.m. Charge for the seminar only is $5.00. Reservations can be made by calling 682-2521.

Tax correction may ease real estate tax woes

By ANDREW MANGAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas real estate interests, suffering through the worst economic slump in decades, received a lifeline in a technical corrections bill to the new tax law that rejects an Internal Revenue Service ruling on "passive income."

The tax provision, which was pursued most vigorously by Rep. Mike Andrews, D-Houston, in the Ways and Means Committee, seeks to overturn an IRS ruling that barred real estate losses incurred before 1987 from being applied against real estate income from installment sales.

Andrews said the Tax Reform Act passed last year specified that passive losses, such as those from real estate investments, could only be written off against "passive income" derived from similar sources.

While the Tax Reform Act of 1986 stated that income from real estate transactions would be considered passive, the December 1986 IRS ruling stated that income from real estate installment sales before Jan. 1, 1987 would not.

"The IRS ruling in this case was clearly not in line with congressional intent," Andrews said. "I am pleased that it will be overturned when this legislation becomes law, and I am hopeful that we can move swiftly toward that end."

IRS spokeswoman Johnell Hunter said the Tax Reform Act included changes in the passive real estate loss area because Congress perceived abuses by wealthy taxpayers who used real estate deals as a way to shelter their income.

"The tax bill says, 'Why should some people have an advantage because they have more money?' " she said.

Last week, Andrews and 21 of his colleagues on Ways and Means — including Reps. Bill Archer, R-Houston, and J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Austin, wrote a letter to Treasury Secretary James Baker asking him to withdraw the IRS ruling. A similar letter was signed by 12 members of the Senate Finance Committee, including Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

"I felt the legislation came down much harder on real estate that on other industries," said Bentsen. "And when the IRS issued a ruling that went even farther than Congress intended, I felt a technical correction was certainly called for."

According to Andrews, 8,000 commercial transactions totaling more than $9 billion and 4,000 residential transactions, or 4 percent, in the Houston area entered into between 1980 and 1986 would be affected by the IRS ruling.

"For some reason, the IRS took the position that if you had entered into an installment sale before 1987 you couldn't have taken any losses as passive income," said Jenard Gross, chairman of United Savings Association of Texas, who owns apartment buildings in the Houston area.

"Let's say you sold two properties in 1984-1985 and one is foreclosed and you got it back. Under the IRS ruling you couldn't use one to compensate for the other," Gross said.

Ms. Hunter said that shouldn't bother the owner, since, in addition to whatever installment payments were made, he would get the property back for resale.

Gross, however, said there are fewer buyers in Texas these days and property is sitting idle across the state. In the month of April alone there were 3,000 foreclosures in the Houston area, he said.

"Mike (Andrews) decided to grab the ball and run with it," Gross said.

The bill is expected to come to the floors of both houses of Congress within the next six weeks.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

'Treasury Direct' deposits posted on rollover date

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have been buying U.S. Treasury bills through the Federal Reserve Bank. I own both 13-week and 26-week U.S. T bills and, as they mature, I roll them over to buy new T bills. The new "Treasury Direct" system has me puzzled. In the past, I have received a discount check in the mail every time I rolled over a T bill. As I understand it, through Treasury Direct, that money will be sent directly to my bank account.

Will I have to wait for my monthly bank statement to know that the money has been deposited in my account?

Doyle

A. No. The money will be sent to your bank account electronically on the issue date of each T bill you buy. Under Treasury Department regulations, your bank must credit the money to your account on that date.

The Treasury auctions off 13- and 26-week bills every Monday, unless that's a bank holiday, in which case the auction is held on Friday or Tuesday. The T bills from the week's auction are issued the following Thursday — Friday, if Thursday is a bank holiday.

Simply by knowing the date of the auction, as you will when you roll over a T bill or make an initial purchase, you'll know the day on which the money will be credited to your bank account.

Let's say you buy a $10,000 T bill at the Monday, June 22, auction. You can be certain the amount of the "discount" — the difference between the T bill's $10,000 face amount and the lower price at which it was auctioned off — will be in your bank account Thursday, June 25.

That's a whole lot better than waiting for a discount check to arrive through the mail, where there might be a delay.

Q. I sometimes switch my investments from 26-week to 13-week Treasury bills. Will I be able to continue to do so when the Treasury Direct program is in effect for all T bills?

A. Sure. The Treasury Direct system provides much more versatility than the previous method of buying U.S. Treasury Securities.

After you purchase a T bill through Treasury Direct, you'll be able to automatically reinvest for up to an additional two years — without having to complete a reinvestment request each time.

And, if you change your mind after choosing a reinvestment schedule, you'll be able to do so by canceling your previous reinvestment request or changing the number of reinvestments. The change must be made at least 20 days before your T bill matures.

Q. I want to continue investing in Treasury bills but I do not want to participate in the Treasury Diect system. Is there any way I can "opt out?"

A. You can buy T bills through a brokerage firm or bank, as has been possible all along. For that service, you will be charged a fee.

If you want to avoid that charge by dealing directly with our federal government, you'll have to participate in Treasury Direct when all T bills are in that system. New 52-week T bills have been in Treasury Direct since February; 26-week bills go in during July and 13-week bills in October.

There is no provision for an individual investor to buy T bills after those dates and not participate in Treasury Direct.

Like you, some other readers object to Treasury Direct. I really don't understand why. Although it might take some getting used to, Treasury Direct is a safe, sensible and not all-that-complicated program.

Q. Does Treasury Direct cover only Treasury bills? Where can I get information about that system?

A. Treasury bonds and notes issued since August 1986 are in Treasury Direct. T bills are being phased in. You can obtain explanatory literature about Treasury Direct from the Federal Reserve Bank or branch serving your area. Your local bank can give you the Fed's address.

Houston Oil Trust cancels June distribution

HOUSTON (SWN) — Houston Oil Trust says there will be no amounts available for distribution to the unitholders in June. The trustee believes that based on the most recent independent petroleum engineers' estimates of October 31, 1986, that there may be no amounts available for distribution to unitholders in other months of the current year as a result of deposits to the special cost escrow accounts and that it is possible that there will be no amounts available for distribution during the remainder of the year.

For June, the working interest owner will place an additional $1,107,807.00 in special cost escrow accounts. To date through the month of June, the working interest owner will have placed a total of $49,914,010.00 in special cost escrow accounts.

Be suited for summer in this season's beachwear

By KAREN BACK
Copley News Service

All across America this summer, people of all shapes and sizes will flock to the beach to barbecue themselves and steak — the former on animal-print towels, the latter over mesquite coals.

The main staple of your summer beach wardrobe, unless you frequent nude beaches, is a bathing suit. Though the fashion trend this summer is toward a romantic look, this season's bathing suit designs are eclectic.

One of the top bathing suit manufacturers, Gottex, has a summer collection still influenced by the safari look spawned by films such as "Out of Africa." Their jungle theme collection includes a jungle print bathing suit that will make the natives go wild. Earth tones are featured in the collection — the main color is khaki accented with red.

Silver is in — gold is out — for this summer's suits. Gottex has one suit — a silver snakeskin-type print — that's a stunning knockout over a similar gold suit featured last year.

THEY ALSO have a whimsical line featuring the Hollywood '40s and '50s starlet feeling.

"Polka dots are very big and we've done a number of studies reminiscent of the Marilyn Monroe/Jane Russell era," says Deborah Childs, account representative for Gottex. "And, skirted suits are back."

Bathing suit cover-ups this year range from kimono-type jackets to piraos made from hand-screened, one-of-a-kind Italian fabric.

What is a pirao? Piraos, which are strong in Europe and just now catching on in the United States, are large, square pieces of cloth that can be tied in a variety of ways.

Let me count the ways. It can be tied like a sarong-type hip skirt, tied around the bustline, tied like a cocoon jacket or worn as a caftan.

A versatile accessory, it's useful for ladies who like to have a little something to cover their legs with when they stand up on the beach.

Another hot item for your summer wardrobe is the monokini — a one-piece bikini.

Where do you go in your monokini? If you're in New York, you'll probably head to the Hamptons or Jones Beach; if you're in California, Malibu is de rigeur.

Pack your vintage wine or cornflower blue paper plates with matching cups in a large teal canvas beach tote along with your wine carrier (that can double as an ice bucket filled with your favorite chardonnay or Perrier.

ONCE AT the beach, you'll want to sit on a tomato red beach chair with matching umbrella to make sure you're not tomato red or hot pink, another of the colors available in the chair/umbrella set.

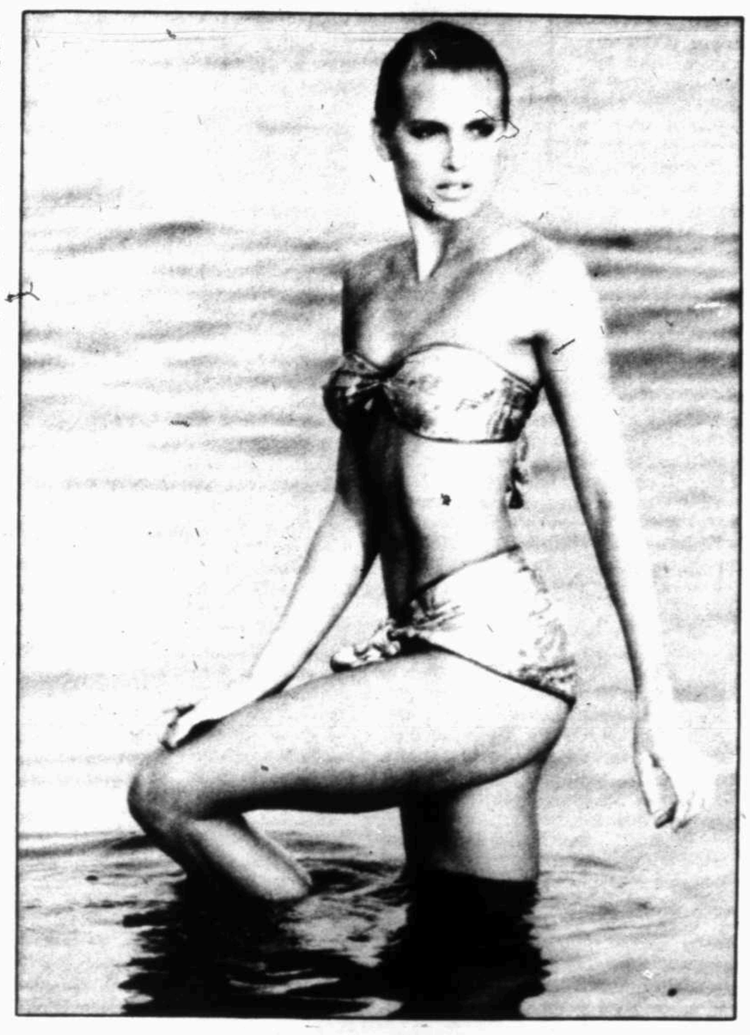

You'd rather lie on solid ground? Roll out your khaki exercise mat — it doubles as a beach mat. The one you want is foam with a washable cotton cover — not the kind you'll stick to.

If you want a thick book to read on the beach, try the 822-page "Destiny" by Sally Beauman, a story of love, money and incest featuring the relationship between a poor girl from Alabama and a wealthy French aristocrat.

Those who prefer something closer to reality might turn the pages of ABC-TV reporter Sam Donaldson's new book, "Hold On Mr. President!"

When you get home from the beach, wash the sand off in a luxurious bath spiked with almond oil and rose petals while reading "The Book of the Baths" by Catherine Kenner.

Maybe next time, you'll want to try a bath like the one Mary Queen of Scots always took. It was a wine bath — she insisted that bathing in wine preserved her beauty.

Two-piece swimsuits, such as the bikini (above left) and the "Nouba" sarong-wrap (above right), will be popular swimwear for tanning. Fashionable men's swimwear will include coordinate jackets, shorts and crewnecks (lower left), patterned bermudas and baggy kneebenders in graphic prints paired with colorfully screened camp shirts (center), and multicolored batik print shorts teamed with an oversized tee (lower right).

Swimwear sure to turn heads, raise eyebrows

By MARGARET MULREANY
Hearst News Service

Feel a little daring? Beauty and the beach — or the pool or even your own back yard — means tantalizing new swimwear guaranteed to turn heads and raise a few eyebrows this summer.

The summertime look also means more femininity as ruffles and bows replace those simple tanks from last year.

Provocative new shapes like the "monokini" — one piece that looks like a two-piece — and the "universal" suit that can be transformed from one piece to a two-piece — provide body-hugging style while creating the illusion of coverage.

And for the truly daring, glamorous sequins and sparkling rinestones are available. Skirted suits, perky halter tops and eye-catching designs with V neck, sheath or blouson styles round out the options for sun worshipers.

Colors this year are as bold as the designs — no timid pastels for these shapes — with splashes of hot pink, jade, purple, orange and royal blue accented by black.

There also are gleaming earthstones in metallic shades of copper, bronze and gold glow with subdued sheen. Belts, sashes and cummerbands add drama and are great figure shapers.

But the sizzle doesn't stop there — bikinis are back! Those sexy little two pieces are celebrating there 40th birthday with new bandeau tops and bottoms wider on the side and with a racy dip in front.

Other tops are cropped, twisted, knotted, boned and underwired. The two-piece swim suits can be mixed and matched with other two-piece suits.

These new, wilder looks are actually more flattering than they appear on the hanger. Still, for the more demure, the classic figure-flattering tanks are still available.

That's the good news. The bad news is you better shop early — all these new styles are selling faster than retailers can stock them.

Gems heat-treated

Copley News Service

Citrine gems are yellowish to golden to golden brown and red brown. Sometimes they're sold as "topaz or "Brazilian topaz."

Most citrine get color from the heat treatment of certain varieties of amethyst.

Much of the best-colored aquamarine is tinted by the same process.

DEAR ABBY

Loving letter could be best present

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Abby

DEAR READERS: This Sunday is Father's Day. You're broke? Not to worry. Here's a suggestion for a Father's Day gift that won't cost you a dime, but will probably be the best gift your father has ever received for any occasion.

It doesn't matter if you're 8 years old or 60, if you're lucky enough to have a father, sit down and write him a letter. It doesn't have to be a literary masterpiece; just a few sentences telling him how much he means to you, and why, will do. Of course, if you are in a chatty or sentimental mood, go ahead and express the thoughts you may have found difficult to verbalize. And when you sign it, be sure to add the date. Long after the neckties, shirts, sweaters and wallets are worn and discarded, I'll bet your Father's Day letter will remain — tucked away for safekeeping with the rest of Dad's important papers.

How do I know? Mine were.

"DEAR ABBY: My father wrote to you at least 12 years ago, and you put his letter in your column. You printed it twice on request. My father had it framed, and when we brought him here to live with us, he carried it in his hands for fear it might be damaged or lost.

"When he heard his letter had been framed and hung in the chapel of a cemetery, he said, 'What a pity it will be seen only by those for whom it is too late. It would accomplish more on the bulletin boards of high schools and colleges.'

"Abby, he made me promise that after he died I would write to you and ask you to run it again.

"He died one week ago at age 72. Please print it once more for my beloved father. — FAITHFUL READER

"DEAR READER: The letter that meant so much to your father has been requested more than any other. And here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person on earth. I always found time to go everywhere else but to see my old, gray-haired parents. They sat home alone, loving me just the same.

"It is too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give, and now when I go to visit their graves and look at the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them.

"I pray that you will print this, Abby, to tell those who still have their parents to visit them and show their love and respect while there is still time. For it is later than you think. — TOO LATE"

DEAR ABBY: I can relate to the wife who's approaching 40 and announced to her husband ("Frustrated in Downers Grove") that she had lost all interest in sex. "Frustrated" wants to know why. Let's give him a few reasons:

1. Does he bathe regularly?
2. Does his breath turn her off?
3. Does he wear clean clothes?
4. Does he consider her needs when having sexual relations?
5. Does he consider her needs when NOT having sexual relations?
6. Does he stimulate her desire for sex with "I love you," "You are wonderful," "You are all I need," before and after sex?
7. Does he remember special occasions?
8. Does he prevent her life from becoming a bore?
9. Does he share the problems that she has with the kids?
10. Does he consider her a "lovemate," not just a housekeeper?

If he will take a look at himself, I'm sure he can find plenty of love and sex at home. — SEX AT HOME AT 65

DEAR READERS: According to the newsletter "Update on Human Behavior," published by the Associated Psychotherapists of Colorado, there are more than 2 million female alcoholics, and their numbers are increasing at a faster rate than male alcoholics. Alcoholism usually starts later in life for women, but progresses much more quickly. Why? Because women have less water in their bodies to dilute it.

Women are more likely to drink alone, to hide their drinking, and to feel guilty and ashamed about it. They suffer more alcohol-related depression, and are more likely to develop other kinds of chemical dependencies — prescription drugs, for example.

Nine out of 10 wives stay with alcoholic husbands, but only one husband in 10 stays with an alcoholic wife.

ARE YOU AN ALCOHOLIC?

If you have experienced three or more of the following, the chances are high that you are an alcoholic, or are becoming one:

1. Absence or tardiness at work due to drinking.
2. Conflict or unhappiness at home due to drinking.
3. Drinking to overcome shyness or to build self-esteem.
4. Requiring increasing amounts of alcohol to "relax" and "unwind."
5. Having regrets about drinking.
6. Suffering financial difficulties because of drinking.
7. Pushing drinks on others; feeling uncomfortable when others don't drink.
8. Lack of concern about your family's welfare when you're drinking.
9. Decreased ambition since the onset of drinking.
10. Difficulty in sleeping due to drinking.
11. Drinking in the morning.
12. Poor job performance due to drinking.
13. Drinking alone.
14. Drinking to forget your troubles.
15. Loss of memory.
16. Resenting those who want you to stop drinking.

All right, so according to the results of the above test you are an alcoholic. Now what do you do?

For openers, find Alcoholics Anonymous in the telephone directory. Then attend a meeting at one of the chapters near you. There are no dues, and you need not identify yourself unless you want to.

If you need treatment, your local mental health professionals can help you choose among available community resources for expert, professional treatment. Another excellent source of help is The National Council on Alcoholism, 733 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Vacations should be kept secret

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

My husband says vacationers' houses are ripped off every summer because too many people broadcast they are leaving. I couldn't agree more. To tell someone you're going on vacation for two weeks is like sending crooks an engraved invitation to come in and take anything they want.

It's like I told him, I didn't tell anyone we were leaving town for two weeks with the exception of my next-door neighbor who comes in to make sure the plants don't die and to turn the porch light on and off each day.

And I'm certainly not stupid enough to let the papers pile up outside the door, so I told our paperboy to hold off on the deliveries. Face it, the more people who know you're leaving ... the more your chances are of being burgled.

As I was saying to the woman in the waiting room where I was making arrangements to board our dog, "You have to make sure the house looks lived in even when you're not there." She told me long grass was a dead giveaway. I hadn't thought of that. If it hadn't been for her, I probably wouldn't have thought to put an ad on the bulletin board in the supermarket for a boy to cut the grass the first two weeks of July.

When I told the postman we were leaving and to hold the mail, he said you couldn't trust anyone to keep a secret. That's why he recommended his nephew to come in and start the car while we were away, and if he couldn't come he'd get one of his friends at the gas station.

My husband asked, "How many people have you told already?"

I told him I hadn't told anyone with the exception of the travel agent where I picked up our tickets and, of course, the dry cleaners who wondered why I was having so many things cleaned, and I may have mentioned it to the woman at the department store where I bought a new piece of luggage, but my lips have been sealed.

Of course, I had to tell the people at the beauty shop where I have my standing appointment. You couldn't let them sit there holding the bag. That's ridiculous. We're all grown people here. And I did give the door key to the water softener man so he could deliver the salt, but he's very quiet. Rarely talks.

My husband took a deep breath as he asked softly, "How many people do you calculate you have told that we are going on vacation?"

"Thirty-five or 40 unless you're counting that nice lady at the bank where I got the traveler's checks, the 7 o'clock class at aerobics, the column I did on security and..."

"What column?" he asked. "Are you saying you mentioned it in a column which reaches..."

"Thirty-one million," I said, "but I didn't tell them where we're going!"

Booklet offers product skin-care tips

Copley News Service

First we had the phospholipid, that fatty substance found in skin cells that keeps moisture in the skin. Then came Complex 15, a skin-care product that used lecithin (a phospholipid product made of soybeans) to do the same job.

Now you can try a new, improved formula of Complex 15 by sending for two foil packets of Complex 15 and a copy of What You Can Do About Dry Skin. The new, fragrance-free Complex 15 improves on the old formula that carried the scent of lecithin.

Two foil-wrapped Complex 15 samples you'll receive are each good for about two applications. Use the cream for any dry skin problems. The product's makers have designed Complex 15 to restore your skin's natural capacity to retain water, and also protect it from further moisture loss. This non-greasy, hypoallergenic and non-comedogenic (does not cause acne) preparation will give your face something to smile about.

Send a postcard asking for two foil packets and dry skin booklet to Complex 15, P.O. Box, 025368, Dept. R, Miami, Fla., 33152.
