House plans vote on rejecting trade status with China

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers fed up with what they say are China's persistent human rights, weapons and trade abuses tried again today to reverse the administration's policy and strip China of its trade status with the United States.

The White House said the vote, coming later today, was too close to call.

"We clearly have the upper hand, but the engagement theorists don't have the guts to truly engage China and let them know their behavior is out of line," Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., said in urging the House to disapprove President Clinton's decision last month to extend China's "most-favored-nation" trade status for another year.

Congress has never succeeded in overturning a White House decision to extend MFN, and supporters of China trade said they expect to win again.

"I think we're going to prevail and we're going continue with MFN for China, which is the appropriate thing to do so that we can continue to have some influence on moving China in the right direction," said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, the House Ways and Means Committee chairman.

White House spokesman Joe Lockhart was a bit more cautious today. "The general feeling here is it's too close to call, and we'll be watching the vote very closely." Privately, Clinton aides said they expected that China trade ties would be approved.

House endorsement of the administration policy would remove the need for the Senate to address the issue.

Last year backers of MFN, a misnomer for normal trade relations enjoyed by almost every U.S. trading partner, won easily.

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The only person who ever got his work done by Friday was Robinson Crusoe."

If country and western is not your cup of tea, then one might call last week's music festival an an overdose.

However, we're convinced there are plenty of country swing faithfuls, and they got their money's worth last week in Snyder.

We had several out-of-town visitors drop in the office and we visited with others about town. The reaction was unanimous. The music festival was great and the host town is wonderful.

A city or business cannot buy that kind of goodwill. The folks involved in making the festival a success are worthy of praise and recognition.

Because there are so many people who went the extra mile, we would have to simply say "Thank you," to a multitude of Snyder citizens who again put the community's best foot forward.

Although we are reluctant to state names for fear of overlooking someone, Donna Fowler and the staff at the chamber and coliseum are clearly heroes in the eyes of the festival producers and music fans.

Donna, staff and a host of volunteers make it look easy. Donna broke away from her demanding duties Thursday long enough to put the chamber pitch on a prospective plant manager for Lorber Industries.

It's none of our business, but somebody probably deserves a day off. But that's not likely since the chamber's July 4th celebration is just around the corner.

Overheard at the coliseum from a couple of foot-patting visitors:

"My doctor told me that I had to realize he couldn't make me young again."

The toe-tapper said he had a response for his doc. "I don't want to be young again. I just want to keep gettin' older. I plan on being back next year."

McCabe resigns as assistant superintendent

Ann McCabe

Ann McCabe, assistant superintendent for the Snyder schools for the past three years, has resigned to join the Region 18 Educational Service Center in Midland.

McCabe will begin her new position as coordinator-elect of the teacher certification program on July 7. Her last day in the Snyder schools will be July 3.

"This was an opportunity that I could not pass up," said McCabe, a native of Big Lake. "The job falls right in line with my personnel skills. I think it will be very interesting."

McCabe will head the center's program whereby a person who has a college degree in an area other than education can become certified to teach in Texas public schools.

McCabe said her tenure in Snyder, has allowed her to do a lot of things she knew she could do, "and allowed me to accomplish a lot of things I did not know I could do.

"This group has been just wonderful to work with. They are all professionals who have the achievement of students foremost in their minds," McCabe added.

"I think the relationship between the district and the community is something that Snyder can be proud of."

"A big loss" is how Supt. Gayle Lomax describes McCabe's leaving. "I can't say enough wonderful things about Mrs. McCabe's work in the district.

"She has spent countless hours on many, many programs that have her earmark on them. She'll be missed here. We wish her the very best."

Lomax said he will have a recommendation for McCabe's replacement ready to present to the board at its July meeting.

Before accepting the position here as the assistant superintendent for instruction and personnel, McCabe spent some 12 years in the Andrews school system.

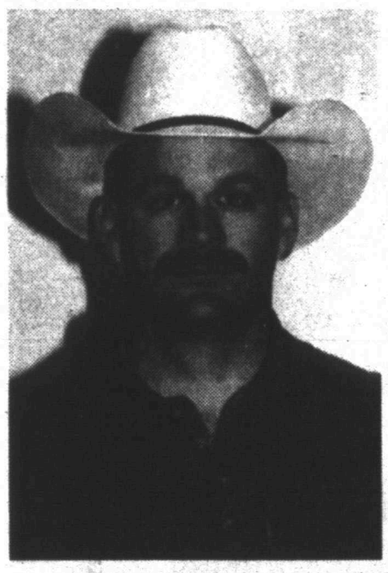

After receiving her undergraduate degree in 1976 and her master's degree in 1980 from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, McCabe taught fifth grade for three years and then headed the Chapter I reading program for five years. She left the district for three years and then returned as a teacher appraiser for one year.

In 1988, she was promoted to elementary principal, and in 1991 became director of personnel for the Andrews schools.

Before entering education, she worked for the City of Andrews and ARCO after moving to Andrews in 1957. She was reared in Big Lake and graduated from Reagan County High School and attended San Angelo Junior College.

In Snyder she served as a director of the chamber of commerce and the Senior Citizens Center.

Todd Danley to exit Western Texas

Todd Danley

Todd Danley, named NIRA coach of the year earlier this month, has resigned as Western Texas College rodeo coach and ag instructor.

The Las Cruces, N.M. native was a highly successful high school and college performer, and carried that success over as a coach at Western Texas. In 1995, his men's team placed third and his women's team fifth at nationals. The women were third in 1996 and the men placed fourth this past season.

WTC's men won either first or second in the Southwest Region during the three years Danley coached and the women placed second two of the three years.

The past year, WTC was named the Rawhide Team of the Year and Danley was chosen NIRA Coach of the Year.

Danley came to Snyder from Comanche, where he was assistant vice president at the Comanche National Bank. It was a homecoming of sorts, because Danley had been a student at Western Texas College in 1986 and 1987. The men's team won the Southwest Region both of those years. He received his associate of arts degree, Summa Cum Laude, in 1987.

He went on to Tarleton State University, was on the rodeo team there as well, and received a bachelor's degree in agriculture economics, Summa Cum Laude, in 1989, and a master's in finance in 1990.

He has a long history of rodeo experience and at the age of six won four buckles in junior rodeo competition. Ten years later, he was the New Mexico Junior Rodeo Association All Around Cowboy, and the following year was NMJRA president and year-end champion calf roper.

He was the New Mexico High School Rodeo Association State Champion All Around Cowboy and State Finals All Around Cowboy in 1985.

He has been actively involved in youth and civic activities, carrying on the tradition of the WTC Special Rodeo for special students, and bringing an anti-drug and alcohol message to Snyder public schools.

"Certainly we greatly regret the loss of an outstanding coach and faculty member," Dr. Harry Krenek, WTC president, said this morning. "We understand the reasons for his decision."

Danley was unavailable for comment this morning. Several sources said Danley is resigning to resume a career in finance. Before working for the Comanche National Bank, Danley had been employed with Cullen/Frost Bankers, Inc. and Edward D. Jones & Company.

Gay Hickman, WTC director of finance, will head the search committee to find a new rodeo coach. Dr. Krenek said that search will begin immediately.

Teen charged with murder in prom birth

FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — The teen-ager who gave birth at a prom was charged with murder after an autopsy concluded the child was strangled or suffocated, a prosecutor said today.

Melissa Drexler, 18, surrendered to authorities this morning. She was to appear in court today.

Drexler was also charged with endangering the welfare of her child, said Prosecutor John Kaye during a news conference today.

A janitor found the body of a baby boy June 6 in a plastic bag in the trash — after Drexler had returned to the dance floor during the Lacey Township High School prom.

"No one, as far as we know, knew she was pregnant but her," Kaye said.

Before any charges could be filed against Drexler, the county medical examiner's office had to determine whether the baby could have existed independent of the mother.

Fire chief urges fireworks safety

With fireworks going on sale today for the Fourth of July sales period, Snyder Fire Chief Terry Don McDowell is suggesting several rules to avoid injury.

"First of all, remember it is a violation of city ordinance 501 to discharge or even possess fireworks in the city limits," said McDowell.

McDowell recommends fireworks be purchased only from a licensed vendor and that the user find a safe play in the county to set them off.

"Use the fireworks in an open area, away from all houses and flammable materials," said McDowell. "Be sure that fireworks, especially aerial rockets and such, will not come in contact with, or land on, objects such as power lines, automobiles or dry grasslands."

McDowell said fireworks sold in Texas must be clearly labeled with safety instructions.

"Read and follow them," he urged.

Fireworks can be sold until midnight, July 4. Everyone is encouraged to follow all safety precautions, including:

—Keep a bucket of water handy while setting off fireworks.

—Never give fireworks to children.

—Don't try to relight or pick up a malfunctioning firework. Douse it with water.

—Don't set fireworks off in metal, glass or other containers or take the fireworks apart and mix the powder with anything else.

—Never point or throw the fireworks at another person.

—Store fireworks in a cool, dry place. Never carry fireworks in a pocket.

—Dispose of properly by dousing the remains to prevent a fire.

Diabetes tests urged for all adults at age 45

BOSTON (AP) — New federally endorsed guidelines recommend for the first time that all adults be tested for diabetes by age 45 to try to catch the disease before it begins its insidious destruction.

The guidelines, written by an international panel of experts, also lower the cutoff for declaring people diabetic and change the way the disease is classified.

The National Institutes of Health, which endorsed the recommendations, estimates that they could help identify 2 million of the 8 million Americans who have diabetes but don't know it.

The aim is to get these people started on diets, exercise programs and possibly drug treatment before the disease starts a cascade of complications that eventually damage the eyes, heart, kidneys and nerves.

The guidelines recommend using the readily available fasting plasma glucose test. The simple blood test costs $5 to $10 and requires that people not eat for eight hours beforehand.

The guidelines were released Monday at a meeting of the American Diabetes Association, which sponsored them. The World Health Organization plans to adopt them in slightly different form later this year.

Currently, there is no across-the-board recommendation for screening people for diabetes. Instead, doctors test patients when they have some reason to suspect they may be diabetic. Symptoms of diabetes can include excessive thirst, frequent urination and weight loss.

"The earlier we diagnose diabetes, the more likely we are to retard its progression and the development of complications," said Dr. James R. Gavin III of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute in Chevy Chase, Md., who headed the committee that drew up the guidelines.

A high level of sugar in the blood is the hallmark of diabetes. Gavin said that since the last diabetes guidelines were issued in 1979, doctors have learned that the disease begins its painless destruction at lower sugar levels than had been thought.

About 16 million Americans have diabetes, but only about half of them have been diagnosed with the disease. With the new guidelines, "I think we will begin to get into the missing 8 million," said Dr. Frank Vinicor of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta.

The new cutoff on the blood test does not change the total number of Americans with the disease; the 16 million figure was based on a different type of glucose test.

Among the new guidelines:

—Every adult should have a diabetes test every three years starting at 45. Those who get a high reading should have the test repeated on another day.

—Those at higher than usual risk may need to be tested earlier or more often. These include American Indians, blacks, Asians, Hispanics and anyone who is overweight or has high blood pressure, high cholesterol or a strong family history of the disease.

—The cutoff for declaring someone diabetic should be lowered from the current 140 milligrams of glucose per deciliter of blood plasma to 126.

—Doctors should abandon the categories of insulin-dependent and non-insulin-dependent diabetes. Insulin-dependent, which once was called juvenile diabetes, should be termed type 1. Non-insulin-dependent, traditionally known as adult-onset diabetes, should be called type 2.

—Contrary to earlier recommendations, pregnant women do not need to be tested routinely if they are white, under 25, of normal size and have no close family members with the disease.

Dr. George Alberti of the University of Newcastle upon Tyne in England said the WHO will adopt virtually the same guidelines for use worldwide.

"This is very much a world consensus based on logic," he said.

About 700,000 Americans have type 1 diabetes.

Researchers say gene flaws discovered for human obesity

NEW YORK (AP) — Three overweight people — including two children so fat they have trouble walking — have provided a scientific prize: the first genetic defects known to make people obese.

One child is an 8-year-old girl who weighs 190 pounds. Her 2-year-old cousin weighs 64 pounds, more than twice as much as most boys that age.

Their problem is something scientists had been hunting intensively around the world, a defect in the gene that tells the body how to make a hormone called leptin.

The third person is only moderately overweight in middle age, but she weighed 80 pounds at age 3. That's more than twice what most 3-year-old girls weigh.

Her problem turned out to be defects in a different gene, one that tells the body to make an enzyme. That finding gives a new hint for understanding the complex process of weight control in people.

The defects are described in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature and the July issue of the journal Nature Genetics. The work is reported by scientists from Addenbrooke's Hospital at Cambridge University in England with collaborators elsewhere.

Experts said the gene flaws cause obesity only very rarely and don't apply to the vast majority of fat people.

"They're real landmark papers," said Dr. Albert Stunkard of the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine. But there's "no big public health or therapeutic message. ... The average middle-aged, overweight woman is not likely to see much benefit from this."

Genes do play an important role in ordinary human obesity, but that probably comes from subtle variations in their functioning rather than major defects like the newfound mutations, said Rudolph Leibel of The Rockefeller University.

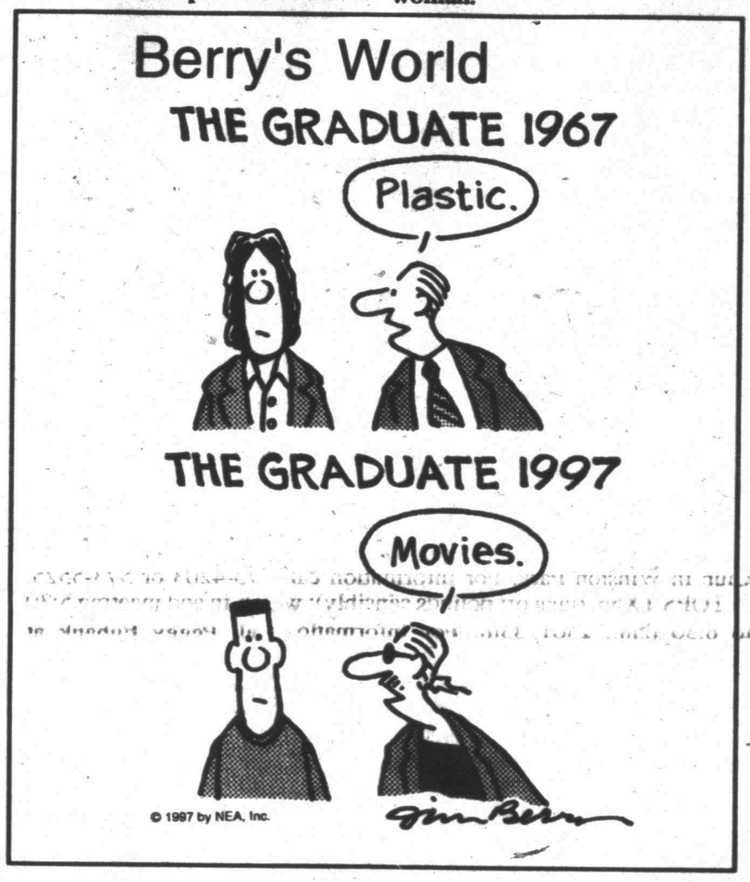

In the case of the 8-year-old girl and her cousin, the mutations in the leptin gene greatly reduce their leptin supply. So leptin injections might be useful in treating the kids, said one scientist familiar with the work, Arlen Price of the University of Pennsylvania.

Leptin was discovered in mice. Experiments showed it let the mouse brain keep tabs on how fat an animal was. Mice with defective leptin genes became very fat but lost weight when they got leptin injections.

Those results set off an intensive search for leptin gene flaws in fat people. None was found until now, which indicates such defects are very rare, experts said. But the new work does show that leptin is important in regulating body weight in people, as well as mice.

Everybody inherits two copies of the leptin gene, one from each parent. Both copies were defective in the children. Each of their parents was found to have one bad copy of the leptin gene, but they also had a normal copy. They are overweight but not extremely fat.

The Nature Genetics report deals with the middle-aged woman.

Old military bases could give new service as jails

DEAR ABBY: From coast to coast we are buying land and building new jails. Also, from coast to coast we are closing our armed forces bases.

During World War II, we had hundreds of German prisoners of war in this country, and we did not build new jails. We put the prisoners on one part of an established military camp and made maintenance men and helpers out of them.

We, the taxpayers, own the land that the bases are on. Many bases have security systems for at least part of the base. There are buildings near most bases where the families of the armed forces lived, and now the families of the prison workers could live there. Have the prisoners keep every piece of equipment, every building and the grounds in perfect condition. Some might even learn a trade.

If there is a natural disaster, go to the nearest base and there is a shelter ready to move into — the roads, lighting, etc., and all are in top condition and ready. Preparedness is a comforting and wonderful feeling.

Please do not use my name or address. Just sign me ...

ANONYMOUS IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Your idea seems sensible to me. However, there are many reasons why our closed military bases are not being utilized as prisons. Among them are toxic wastes in some locations, substandard buildings, and the fact that landowners in adjacent communities fear it would devalue their property. Also, local governments would prefer to turn the bases into moneymakers to generate more tax revenue.

DEAR ABBY: I am responding to "Fed Up in Huntsville, Ala.," who said that after four years of marriage her 70-year-old husband wants only to eat, sleep and sit.

Abby, this woman is describing the typical symptoms of depression in the elderly, which often goes unnoticed. I have been witness to this in my own family. I tolerated similar behavior in my 73-year-old husband who had already had two heart attacks. One day he cried out in anguish, "Why doesn't God take me right now?" Only then did I realize his "lazy" behavior was not voluntary. We saw a doctor the next day.

My husband is now taking antidepressants and is so thankful that he feels better. Our active life has resumed, he is once again playing golf, and we are even doing some traveling!

My only regret is that I did not recognize his problems sooner. I am ashamed to admit that I am a registered nurse. I hope my experience will help other senior citizens realize they may need help.

AN R.N. IN FLORIDA

DEAR R.N.: You have done a great service by writing. When an individual, especially a senior citizen, begins to exhibit unusual behavior, a visit to a physician should be the first order of business.

***

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago, my 58-year-old husband had a brief affair with his secretary. It was no secret; all the tongues in this little town were wagging a mile a minute.

Once, when I found a motel key in his coat pocket, he had the gall to tell me that he got tired of driving, so he checked into a motel to take a little nap. (Three miles from home!)

Well, last year he had some surgery that left him impotent, and since then, I couldn't ask for a more devoted husband. He sends me flowers, and phones if he knows he's going to be half an hour late. He even takes me on business trips, which he never did before.

Of course, I'm enjoying all this attention, Abby, but in your opinion, why has my husband turned over a new leaf?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Probably because there's not much left under the old one. Enjoy your good fortune.

Turtle lovers greeted 'Huffy'

TOPSAIL ISLAND, N.C. (AP) — She may or may not be a teenager, but she's definitely not a mutant, nor a ninja. Nevertheless, Huffy the turtle still has an admiring legion of followers.

A festive atmosphere surrounded the return of one of this island town's best-known residents Thursday.

Huffy is an injured loggerhead turtle rescued last August and sent to Sea World in Florida to recuperate. She was greeted by more than 100 turtle lovers as she and two other loggerheads arrived to christen the Karen Beasley Sea Turtle Rescue and Rehabilitation Center.

All three juvenile loggerheads had suffered shell injuries from boat propellers. Huffy, so named because she made a huffing sound when she was found last August in Surf City, almost died of her injuries.

Kids may annoy you, but you do love them. Give each of your kids a big hug today. Kids of all ages need to know you love them.

The first of two

William Hazlitt, an English essayist who died in 1830, pointed out that "we may be willing to tell a story twice, never to hear it more than once." Well, I hope you are not so in agreement with this that you won't read tomorrow's column! This deal from the final of the Australian National Open Teams last January featured instructive play at both tables. Rather than try to squeeze it all into one column, let's spread it over two days.

To test yourself, cover the West and South hands. You are East, defending against two hearts. West leads the diamond six: jack, ace, eight. What would you do now?

West's thin one-spade response picked off North-South's best suit. If you and your partner were North-South, would you get into spades after West's bid? True, North's second-round double strongly suggested spades, but South understandably went with his other four-card major.

West, Michael Courtney, led the diamond six. This was second-highest from a weak suit, which enjoys considerable popularity in certain circles.

Peter Gill won with the ace; then he found the perfect play, switching to the club four. After winning with the 10, Courtney realized what was required. He returned the spade two, which Gill ruffed. Now came the club jack, overtaken by West's queen, and a second spade ruff. Finally, Gill cashed the club ace to defeat the contract. Beautiful!

That must be a candidate for the Defense of the Year Award, given by the International Bridge Press Association.

Conference USA and WAC get alliance deal

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — It may be a year too late to help Brigham Young, but the Bowl Alliance has made a deal to ensure the Cougars will not have to endure the type of snubbing they got after their top-five finish last season.

Alliance officials agreed Monday to a pact that virtually guarantees Western Athletic Conference and Conference USA teams a spot in an Alliance bowl if they finish in the top six, beginning with the 1998 season.

It appears to rectify the snub the Cougars received last year, when they went 13-1 and were ranked fifth after the regular season, but were passed over for an Alliance bid.

BYU coach LaVell Edwards didn't dwell on the bad timing of the deal, but still saw room for improvement.

"It's better than nothing," he said. "I was hoping it wouldn't have to be the top (six), maybe the top eight, but beggars can't be choosers."

By going to the Cotton Bowl instead of the Alliance last season, the Cougars lost out on about $7 million. And the WAC took another shot when Wyoming was denied a bid to any bowls after finishing 10-2.

Bowl Alliance chairman Roy Kramer said neither of those situations were specifically mentioned and that negotiations with the WAC have been ongoing since the Alliance was formed.

"There has always been discussion as to what level of participation these conferences would have," he said. "They have been significant negotiations and we never got to a stone wall."

Beginning in 1998, if a WAC team doesn't qualify for the Alliance, a revenue-sharing agreement pays $1.6 million to the conference. That's up from the $1.2 million originally proposed.

Technically, there is no guarantee for the upcoming season, although the WAC becomes an Alliance member for promotional, marketing and still-to-be-determined voting purposes.

Under the rules that continue through this season, champions of the SEC, Atlantic Coast Conference, Big 12 and Big East are guaranteed four of the six spots in the Orange, Fiesta and Sugar bowls. The other two bids go to at-large teams. There are no guarantees for any other conferences unless one of their teams would form a No. 1 vs. No. 2 matchup.

Under the new agreement, a WAC or Conference USA team could still be passed over if there were multiple teams ranked in the top six who didn't have automatic bids to an alliance bowl. But it's likely that only a string of upsets in conference championship games would bring about such a scenario.

The agreement will last four years and begin with the 1998 season when the new Super Alliance takes effect.

The Bowl Alliance still has no agreement with Notre Dame, an independent, but said ongoing discussions are continuing.

West decides tourney sites for baseball

Snyder will be hosting two Little League district tournaments starting Saturday.

If you would like to know how Snyder got chosen for this honor you do not have to look very far. In fact, just look in the phone book under Monte West.

West is the district administrator who decides where all tournaments will be played.

"I try to divide it up so that towns take turns hosting these tournaments," West said.

The local CPA has been at his post as administrator for seven years now and has a total of 24 leagues in his district. He has control over both Senior Little League and the younger age groups as well.

All proceeds made from concessions and gate receipts during these tournaments will go to the Snyder Little League.

"They will be able to charge admission and keep all profits from ticket sales and concessions," West added, "which is usually a pretty good amount."

And he said that Snyder should get to host some sectional tournaments after the district titles have been decided. The money made from events like this, combined with private donations, is what allows Snyder to have such excellent facilities for youth baseball, he said.

Texas drops 6th straight with 1-0 loss to Angels

ARLINGTON (AP) — Allen Watson's arm, Jim Leyritz's bat and Jim Edmonds' glove gave the Anaheim Angels the edge over the Texas Rangers.

Watson pitched six shutout innings, Leyritz hit a fifth-inning homer and Edmonds made a nifty, game-saving defensive play to lead the Angels over the Rangers 1-0 Monday night.

Leyritz broke up the scoreless game with his ninth homer leading off the fifth, hitting an 0-2 slider from Darren Oliver (3-9) into the Angels' bullpen in left-center.

Watson (6-4) allowed six hits to win for the fifth time in six decisions.

Watson was in trouble early, but the Rangers stranded five baserunners in the first three innings. Texas wasted Will Clark's leadoff triple in the second, and also left the bases loaded in the third.

Shigetoshi Hasegawa started the seventh and escaped a jam by retiring Ivan Rodriguez on a grounder with a runner on third and two outs.

Rich DeLucia got one out in the eighth and struck out the side in the ninth for his second save.

The Rangers have dropped six straight for the first time since July 1995. Failure to hit in the clutch has contributed to the bad streak that has left Texas at .500 (36-36) for the first time since April 21 (8-8). Texas was shut out for the fourth time this season, one fewer than all of last year.

The Rangers are 8-for-54 with runners in scoring position over their last five games.

Armstrong takes regular flight title

Snyder's Ernie Armstrong won the regular flight of the Men's West Texas Golf Championship at Fairway Oaks Country Club in Abilene.

Armstrong followed up his first round 72 with a 75 on Saturday for a seven-shot victory. The district judge led by eight strokes after the first day and his 75 was the second best score of the second round.

Also competing was Snyder's Larry Anderson. Anderson, who opened by posting a 77 and an 80, shot 75 on Saturday and then closed with his best round of the tournament by shooting 73 on Sunday in the open division.

The tournament was divided into four flights, the open, regular, senior and super senior. The open division was the only group to play four rounds. The regular and two senior flights played 36 holes to crown their champions.

Pirates raid Houston 6-0

HOUSTON (AP) — Francisco Cordova pitched a two-hitter in his best career start and Jermaine Allensworth hit a bases-loaded triple in the eighth inning Monday night as the Pittsburgh Pirates snapped a six-game losing streak with a 6-0 win over the Houston Astros.

Cordova (6-5) pitched his second career shutout and second this season. He walked two and struck out five. The right-hander pitched a seven-hitter against Atlanta on May 9.

Allensworth, activated from the disabled list before the game, hit a three-run triple as the Pirates scored five runs in the eighth. Mark Smith brought home Allensworth with a double and Kevin Young's RBI double capped the inning.

Jose Guillen hit a solo homer in the fifth inning for Pittsburgh.

Ramon Garcia (3-5), making his fourth start of the season, allowed three hits over the first four innings and allowed only one runner to second until the fifth.

That's when Guillen gave Pittsburgh the lead when he hit a 1-0 pitch over the left-field fence for his sixth homer.

Garcia allowed five hits and struck out a career-high nine in seven innings.

After Thomas Howard's second-inning single, Cordova retired 11 of 12 before Spiers beat out an infield hit to open the seventh.

Cordova escaped, however, by striking out Jeff Bagwell, getting Luis Gonzalez on a fly to center and striking out Derek Bell to preserve a 1-0 lead.

Marine trip to motivate recruits turns violent

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — It was a day to motivate the 17- and 18-year-old Marine recruits, to build teamwork with a rafting trip and training. Some even patrolled their camp on the forested slopes of Mount Hood.

In the cool darkness of Saturday morning, one of those young guards heard screams for help. He awakened three adult escorts, and a few minutes later they found 33-year-old Henry Thompson.

He told them he and his 23-year-old female companion were attacked by two men as they slept in their tent. He said the woman was raped.

Thompson described the attackers as Marine sergeants.

The escorts gave first aid to Thompson then set out to find the two men they believed were responsible for the attack, the military said. They kept the suspects under watch until civilian authorities arrived at the remote western Oregon campground 75 minutes later.

Sgt. Rudolph Jackson, 29, a recruiting administrator in Portland, was arraigned Monday on charges of rape, assault, sex abuse and kidnapping. Sgt. Clinton Bergmann, 24, a recruiter in the Portland suburb of Milwaukie, faces kidnapping and assault charges.

Both were jailed at an undisclosed location.

The alleged attack was yet another blow to the military, which is under growing scrutiny and criticism for sexual misconduct in the ranks. The Marine Corps called the attack an aberration.

"This is a very isolated incident. What we're looking at here — this is two individuals that acted on their own," said Lt. Jeffrey Sammons, a 12th Marine Corps District spokesman who arrived here from San Diego. "The positive image that the Marine Corps portrays will definitely outweigh any of the negativity that this has.

"You can't hold 174,000 people in the Marine Corps responsible for the actions of two individuals who acted on their own," he said.

But Jackson's criminal past may raise questions about whether he should have been recruiting for the Marines at all.

Authorities in the Portland area have issued two warrants for his arrest in the past seven months, both in connection with stolen automobiles.

Jackson was sentenced to three years' probation after pleading no contest to car theft last year in Washington County, The Oregonian reported today. The county issued an arrest warrant last month after he failed to pay court-ordered restitution of $2,100.

Multnomah County authorities issued an arrest warrant last November after Jackson failed to appear in court to answer charges for what police described as a carjacking in downtown Portland in May 1996.

Records also show Jackson was convicted of burglary in Georgia in 1989.

Maj. James Cameron, in charge of Marine recruiting in Portland, said Jackson's criminal history caught him by surprise. He said the corps didn't know about Jackson's past because police never contacted the Marines.

Jackson was behind the wheel of one of the buses, which were carrying 130 recruits and 21 adult escorts to the Clear Lake Campground on Friday afternoon. The recruits meet monthly and recreational activities are held once or twice each year.

Several escorts, including Jackson and Bergmann, were released from their duties after the Marine camp was set up. A group, including the two suspects, went to a camp a half-mile away where relatives of a Marine were staying, Sammons said.

Somewhere between that camp and the Marine bivouac was where Thompson and his companion pitched their tent.

Thompson, who declined to comment Monday at prosecutors' request, has said he and his companion sat around a campfire with several Marines — including Jackson and Bergmann — that night but left when they started drinking rum.

Awakened by a noise, Thompson said, Jackson confronted him and pointed a flashlight in his eyes. He said he was beaten and taped to a tree and his companion was dragged into the bushes and assaulted.

"All of a sudden I heard her scream 'No, no, no!'" he said Saturday.

After someone cut him loose, Thompson said, he fled and his screams alerted the young sentry. After his rescuers helped him call 911, he returned to the tent and found his companion.

She was treated at a hospital and released.

Marine officials said they don't believe the attack would have any impact on the young recruits, including about 15 girls, who will be handed their assignments sometime over the next year.

Because the attack did not happen on military property, the military is waiting until the case is resolved in civilian court before taking jurisdiction.

"This is a very horrendous crime, the alleged crime they've committed," Sammons said. "We do not condone it."

New TV ratings more codes, more often

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those ratings that pop up at the beginning of each TV show are likely to soon change.

Just 5 months old, the TV ratings are expected to be augmented to give parents more information to shield children from excessive violence, sex and crude language.

The changes are still being negotiated, but parents are likely to see the letters "V," "S" and "L" show up alongside the ratings that now flash up in the upper left corner of TV screens for 15 seconds.

Depending on a show's content, one or all notations would be used to warn of violence, sex and potentially offensive language. The new codes are expected to be added to "TV-PG" for parental guidance suggested; "TV-14" for programs unsuitable for children under 14; and "TV-MA" for mature audiences only.

The ratings also would appear longer and more frequently.

After stalling last week, negotiations between the industry and the advocacy groups pushing for change are resuming.

"We are hopeful this will be amicably resolved by the middle of the week," said Jeff Chester, executive director of the Center for Media Education. He spoke for speaking for parents groups, children's advocates, educators and others negotiating the tougher ratings.

Broadcast and cable network representatives offered a 50-50 chance that a resolution could come today as requested by Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., who chairs the Senate Commerce Committee.

McCain has promised to move forward with a bill that would force stronger ratings if the industry and advocacy groups don't come to agreement by today. However, an aide said McCain is likely to hold off if he knows a deal is imminent.

Since they took effect Jan. 1, the TV ratings have been attacked by parents groups and key lawmakers for not giving parents enough information to make decisions about children's viewing choices.

Just as importantly, parents could rely on the ratings to block out objectionable shows from TV screens. New TV sets, as early as next year, will be equipped with a "v-chip" that parents could program, using the ratings, to zap unwanted shows.

Critics also want the TV industry to add "V," "S" and "L" to the current "TV-Y7" rating category, which designates children's programs suitable for children 7 and older.

But some broadcasters are opposed because it could apply to cartoons.

One alternative being discussed — instead of the "V" — is adding a special designation that would apply to cartoons or fantasy programs aimed at older children, such as "AV," for action violence, or "CV," for combat violence. Others support designations such as "A" for action adventure or "C" for comedic violence.

Another unresolved issue involves how to treat shows that contain a lower level of violence than their rating suggests.

For instance, an episode of "Melrose Place" may carry a "TV-14" rating, mostly for sexual content. So the show gets an "S." But its violence is mild — not intense — and thus is more on the level of "PG" rather than the higher "TV-14."

The industry doesn't want to add a "V" to the "TV-14" rating because it would indicate "intense" violence. One option in such cases is to use a lowercase "v," but industry members also don't like that.

There's general agreement, however, on making the description accompanying the "TV-PG" ratings more specific. The new description would be along the lines of "does contain moderate violence." The description now says shows "may contain ... limited violence."

Most shows are rated "TV-PG" including episodes of "Seinfeld," "Star Trek: Voyager" and "Montel Williams."

By tightening descriptions, critics hope to narrow the number of "PG" rated shows, which should give parents a better idea of content.

Broadcasters are worried that no matter what they do now, they may be forever hounded for even more changes.

For that reason, they want assurances from Congress that the addition of "V," "S" and "L" would head off any attempts to force stronger ratings or require more family-friendly programs.

Kansas inmates dismayed by court decision

LARNED, Kan. (AP) — In a building surrounded by high fences and barbed wire, Donald Hunt insisted that he will never commit another sex crime against a child. He just wants a chance to prove he can live by the law.

His chance for freedom took a blow Monday when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Kansas can indefinitely confine violent sexual predators for treatment after they serve their prison terms — even if they're not mentally ill.

Such people can be held if they are considered mentally abnormal and are likely to commit new crimes, the justices ruled in a 5-4 decision.

Three of the nine men confined at the Larned State Security Hospital under the state's sexual predator program said in interviews with The Associated Press that they were disappointed. But they said they planned to continue treatment and prove they could be safely released.

"I do not want another victim in my life," said the 57-year-old Hunt, who served six years in prison on for taking indecent liberties with a child. He said earlier this year that he has been able for 12 years to control his urges to fondle children.

Hunt said he believed drug dealers caused more pain and violence than he did, but noted the public reacts with fear to his crimes.

"My behavior and I are two different things," Hunt said. "But I know the public sees me as my behavior."

It was quiet at the hospital after Hunt and the others learned of the ruling by downloading it from the Internet.

Jerry Inman, a former pornographic photographer who served two years in prison, also for taking indecent liberties with a child, convinced the program coordinator that they deserved pizza from a local restaurant for dinner.

Inman, 48, a father of four, said he still plans to go home to his family.

"I'm either going to be released through the system or I'm going to be released through the courts," Inman said.

The Kansas inmate at the center of the ruling was Leroy Hendricks, who was convicted five times of child-molesting and has said his death is the only way to guarantee he won't commit crimes against children.

Hendricks declined to comment on the ruling. But attorney Tim Weilert said his client expressed disappointment at the ruling.

"I'm afraid it's a decision that has a great deal of potential for abuse," Weilert said. "I think the idea can be easily amended to eliminate the sexual aspects. We could see people being committed for driving under the influence or drug abuse."

None of the nine men confined under the program has been released since the sexual predator law took effect three years ago.

The law requires a judge or jury to decide beyond a reasonable doubt that an alleged offender is mentally abnormal or is likely to commit new crimes. Those committed to a mental health facility under the law are entitled to an evaluation every year.

The law was passed after the 1993 slaying of Stephanie Schmidt, a 19-year-old college student. Donald Gideon, who was convicted in her death, had been on parole after serving 10 years for raping and sodomizing a woman in 1982.

Five other states have similar laws: Arizona, California, Minnesota, Washington and Wisconsin.

Malcolm X's widow continued his work

NEW YORK (AP) — Pregnant with twins and already the mother of four girls, Betty Shabazz fell to her knees at Harlem's Audubon Ballroom and sobbed "They killed him!" after gunmen fired 16 shots into Malcolm X.

But the legacy of her husband did not die with him on Feb. 21, 1965. The life and preachings of the civil rights leader were reborn — recounted in his wife's own quiet way, distinct from his fervent style.

Mrs. Shabazz died Monday from burns she suffered in a June 1 fire apparently set by her troubled 12-year-old grandson. She was 61.

"Today America and the world has lost a champion of solid dignity and quiet strength," the Rev. Jesse Jackson said. "She never stopped giving and she never became cynical. She leaves today the legacy of one who epitomized hope and healing."

At her hospital bedside were her six daughters, in whom she said she tried to instill the determination that drew her to Malcolm X and stirred her to attend college, excel in academia and her career, and speak out on race and the relevance of her husband to blacks today.

"Her living life was very strong, and her fight here showed that endurance," said eldest daughter Attallah Shabazz, as she stood with her sisters outside Jacobi Medical Center in the Bronx.

"We are a family of daughters who got to learn a lot more about our mother, as have a lot of people around the globe," she said.

Born Betty Sanders in Detroit, she was adopted and raised by a Methodist family and went to the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama before heading to nursing school in New York.

She was 20 when she met the 30-year-old Malcolm X in 1956 at one of the Nation of Islam's main mosques. He was a minister and rising star, attracting converts and enemies for demanding black civil rights "by any means necessary" and referring to whites as "devils."

She married him two years later, convinced of the importance of his work.

"Betty's a good Muslim woman and wife," Malcolm X said in the autobiography he wrote with Alex Haley. "I don't imagine many other women might put up with the way I am."

By 1964, Malcolm X had broken with church leaders and was vilified for it, most notably by his replacement, the Rev. Louis Farrakhan. Seeking rebirth, he went to Mecca, became a Muslim and chose a new name, El-Hajj Malik El-Shabazz.

Upon his return to America, he softened his stance against whites and preached a message of self-reliance and determination for blacks. Former allies were not pleased.

One week after his home in Queens was firebombed, he lay dead at the hands of three men with ties to the Nation of Islam. They were eventually convicted.

Mrs. Shabazz was left a 28-year-old widow with little money and six children.

She raised their daughters alone in Mount Vernon, just outside New York City, while earning a bachelor's degree in public health education at Jersey State College and a master's degree in early childhood education.

She continued on, receiving a doctorate from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, and became director of public relations at Medgar Evers College in Brooklyn and later director of the school's office of institutional advancement.

Her boss, Medgar Evers President Edison O. Jackson, said Mrs. Shabazz was undaunted by the tragedies that befell her.

"Even though she had experienced major misfortune, tragedy in her life, she did not dwell on that," Jackson said. "She looked for the good, found the good and celebrated that. She used education as her vehicle of transformation."

Her daughters went on to careers as a playwright, singer and professional speaker. Mrs. Shabazz said her husband's influence could be seen in her daughters.

"I taught them about him by myself being disciplined and strict," she once said. "My children think my persona is me, when actually it is their father's."

Mrs. Shabazz frequently spoke in public, and it was usually on the subject of her husband's positive message for blacks, or of health and education for disadvantaged children. She also raised money for scholarships and books at Medgar Evers.

One public statement made headlines — her accusation in 1994 that Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan orchestrated her husband's assassination. Farrakhan denied involvement but admitted that his anti-Malcolm writings "helped create the atmosphere" that led to the assassination.

Mrs. Shabazz later reconciled with Farrakhan after her daughter Qubilah was charged in 1994 with plotting to hire a hit man to kill him. The charge was dismissed last month.

Given Mrs. Shabazz's commitment to troubled youngsters and her love for family, it was not surprising to friends when she took in Qubilah's son, Malcolm Shabazz, who was having trouble at his home in San Antonio.

Police said he used gasoline to set the fire because he chafed at his grandmother's strictness and wanted to return to his mother. He is in juvenile custody, but no formal charges have been made public.

Letter To The Editor

Have the courage

Dear Editor:

I opened my mail Friday, June 20, to find that my husband had been sent an anonymous letter concerning Little League baseball.

It contained part of the write-up that announced the Little League All-Star baseball team. Certain 11- and 12-year-old boys names were underlined, not all names, just eight of them. A question mark was placed beside the article. Above it was typed "Give Us All A Break! Something has to change in Snyder youth athletics!"

The purpose of this letter is to ask the person who sent this to my house to have the courage to talk to me face to face. I have some information and some of my own opinions I would like to discuss with you.

I want to know who you are. Please give me a break, quit hiding and whining. If you have a problem with the way Snyder Little League operates, there are ways to address the issues. They have organized meetings and Little League has national rules just for folks like you. Call me. I would love to talk to you.

Everyone has a right to their opinion! I want to exercise my right here and now just in case you don't rake up the courage to talk to me. I think that singling out any 11- or 12-year-old child to belittle them or put them down for making any All-Star team is pathetic! Grow up!

My son did not make an All-Star team either. I'm so proud of him because he has taken it like a man. Maybe you could learn a thing or two from him and the rest of the little boys who have gone on with their lives. Please get in touch. I've got a lot more I'd like to share with you.

Sincerely,
Susan Neves Grimmett

Skip X-ray exposure when you can

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am 37 years old and have perfect teeth. Nonetheless, my dentist insists on X-raying my mouth every year. I am uncomfortable about the unnecessary exposure to X-rays. Am I in danger?

DEAR READER: The amount of X-ray exposure during properly performed dental X-rays is trivial, providing you are properly shielded by lead aprons.

However, I share your concerns about unnecessary X-ray exposure. In 20 years, will a study indict dental X-rays as a cause of some disease or illness? I don't know, but — personally — I try to avoid such exposure when possible.

Ask your dentist to X-ray your teeth every two — or even three — years, unless he suspects a problem. In this way, you won't compromise your dental health and can reduce by 50 percent or greater your life-long exposure to dental X-rays.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Could switching from a six-cup-a-day coffee habit to two cups of green tea cause impotence? I changed over about two weeks ago and, as a healthy, non-smoking 42-year-old man, I am not ready for premature erectile dysfunction.

DEAR READER: I do not believe that your switch from coffee to green tea is a cause of impotence.

Why did you change habits? If you gave up coffee because of pressures at work or a nagging spouse, your sexual problem may have a psychological component.

On the other hand, if you are diabetic, consume alcohol or take any of a wide variety of medications, your impotence may be due to physical reasons.

I suggest that you begin investigating the problem by meeting with your family doctor, who can refer you to a urologist if necessary.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Impotence." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have arthritis in my knees and a touch of asthma. Is it safe for me — a 75-year-old woman — to walk on a treadmill?

DEAR READER: This is a decision best left to your family physician. Ordinarily, however, people your age benefit from walking, despite arthritis and asthma.

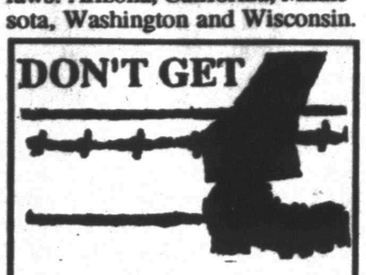

If you choose to exercise, you will, of course, avoid starting at a brisk pace. Take it easy for several sessions. Let your muscles and joints become accustomed to the new level of activity.

If your doctor agrees, you might want to use an inhaler, such as Serevent, before you exercise; this prescription product will often prevent asthma from causing wheezing and undue breathlessness.

You are probably aware of the spate of recent medical studies proving that an exercise program benefits the elderly. Therefore, assuming that your physician voices no objections, I applaud your plans.

Senate OKs keeping new Medicare fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate thwarted an attempt by Democrats today to strip from a massive budget-cutting bill a provision to charge Medicare recipients $5 for each visit they receive from home health-care workers.

Senators voted 60-40 mostly along party lines to retain the fee, which is designed to hold down home-care costs in a program that has grown from $4 billion in 1990 to an estimated $21 billion next year. The proposal is opposed by President Clinton and is omitted from the House's budget-balancing legislation.

"This is a program that is exploding in costs," said Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla. "Anybody who's looked at the facts realizes this and knows we've got to make changes."

But Democrats argued that the plan would mostly affect people who are ill equipped to afford the new payments because many of them need repeated home visits. Two-thirds of home health-care recipients are women, one third live alone and 43 percent earn less than $10,000 annually, they said.

"That is wrong and every senior knows it," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. "And every senior will know about it."

The Senate planned votes today on a series of Democratic amendments to the measure, which would cull $136 billion in savings from Medicare, Medicaid, veterans and other programs on the road to balancing the budget by 2002. Final passage by a solid bipartisan margin was likely Wednesday, the same day the House will probably approve a similar measure, though with less Democratic support.

In an effort to iron out partisan differences, Republicans were planning to add $1.5 billion to the bill to help low-income elderly pay Medicare premiums, now $43.80 and rising. Senate Republicans were also exploring restoring welfare benefits to legal immigrants who become disabled.

The Clinton administration, arguing they were spelled out in the bipartisan budget deal, wants both included in the bill. House GOP leaders agreed late Friday to address both problems before the legislation goes to President Clinton's desk.

Such changes "would advance the bipartisan process which began last month with the budget agreement," White House budget Director Franklin Raines wrote in a letter Monday to Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss.

Republicans also hope to drop the bill's proposed increase in the $100 annual Medicare deductible for higher-income elderly, and instead charge them higher monthly premiums. The White House wants to postpone such changes until Medicare can be reviewed as a whole.

But the GOP was resisting changes sought by liberal Democrats. These included a Democratic attempt to kill a proposal raising the Medicare eligibility age to 67 by 2027, the same as current law requires for Social Security. Democrats complained that the idea, which the White House also wants removed, would jeopardize health insurance coverage for people aged 65 and 66.

Defense spending bill nears House OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The defense authorization bill moving toward final passage in the House confronts President Clinton on Russia policy, the B-2 bomber and military base closings.

A fourth confrontation could await on Bosnia.

In action ending late Monday, the House voted to provide enough money — more than $300 million — to keep factory production lines open and thus preserve the possibility of buying nine more B-2 stealth bombers.

The nine planes would cost $27 billion.

The last-minute intervention of House Speaker Newt Gingrich helped spur the House to vote, 216-209, to retain the option of adding to the fleet of 21 radar-evading bombers. President Clinton opposes the move.

"It's not for pork. It's not for jobs," Gingrich, R-Ga., said in the final floor speech on the issue. "We buy weapons to defend America. We buy weapons to prevent wars when possible. We buy weapons to win wars when necessary."

In another swipe at Clinton, the House voted, 278-145, to retain a prohibition on shifting work at military bases slated for closure to the private sector. The language aims at the president's pre-election move to save jobs in politically important California and Texas by privatizing military aircraft maintenance work at closing bases in Sacramento, Calif., and San Antonio.

That had angered lawmakers in Oklahoma, Utah and Georgia, where bases would have gained jobs because of the closures. The administration argued that the House provision bans the money-saving practice of shifting aircraft repairs to the private sector.

Before recessing for the night, the House also passed, 215-206, a measure that would cut off arms-reduction aid to Russia if Moscow sells sophisticated new anti-ship weapons to China. Clinton strongly supports the so-called Nunn-Lugar aid as a way to reduce the old Soviet nuclear arsenal.

A sale of SS-N-22 missiles to China is pending and lawmakers said they could end up in the hands of Iran, where they could threaten Navy ships in the Persian Gulf.

The House today was to take up amendments that could cut off funding for the U.S. troop deployment to Bosnia. At least one version of the funding cut-off is expected to pass but will likely be little more than a symbolic gesture. The Senate was not expected to include the measure in its version of the defense bill, which also was pending. And Clinton would likely veto any legislation that contained such a cutoff.

Gingrich and other B-2 supporters framed the issue in terms of American lives, saying that without additional bombers, the United States might have to expose its military pilots to death or capture.

Opponents called the B-2 a Cold War relic and revived arguments that harkened back to the Reagan era when critics of defense spending recited how many school lunches or college tuitions one B-2 could buy.

"I don't want our kids to die in B-52s and antiquated B-1s," said Rep. Randy "Duke" Cunningham, R-Calif., a former Air Force fighter pilot.

Some Republicans who strongly support a balanced budget opposed the B-2 as a budget-buster. Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, chairman of the House Budget Committee, said not even the military wants the B-2.

Jury hearing trial testimony

Two people testified this morning in the trial of David Leon Wagner, 19, who is charged with indecency with a child under 17 years of age.

A 10-man, two-woman jury is hearing the case in 132nd District Court.

The alleged victim, a 14-year-old female, took the stand first, followed by Deputy Sheriff Brian Peterson.

Wagner, of 2101 Ave. I, was indicted by a Scurry County grand jury in December. The offense allegedly took place on Oct. 27, 1996.

Wagner is represented by Donald McPhail of Abilene. District Attorney Dana Cooley is prosecuting. District Judge Ernie Armstrong is presiding.

A second jury ruled Monday afternoon that Donny Carroll McClain, 37, remains incompetent to stand trial for a deadly assault that occurred in 1990. He was charged with aggravated assault after he allegedly hit his father with an iron pipe. McClain was committed to the Vernon State Hospital in 1991. His case is reviewed and a competency hearing held annually.

Doctors urging AMA to move slowly before okaying tobacco deal

CHICAGO (AP) — The nation's largest organization of doctors was urged by some of its own members to be careful before endorsing the proposed $360 billion settlement with cigarette makers.

"People who have been looking at this issue feel that there are a lot of loopholes," Dr. Albert Blumberg of Baltimore told an American Medical Association panel on Monday.

The seven-member panel will recommend a position on the tobacco deal to the House of Delegates, the policy-making body of the 292,000-member AMA. A vote on the recommendation was expected this week.

Before the settlement can take effect it must get congressional approval.

Dr. Lonnie Bristow, a former AMA president who helped to negotiate the agreement between the tobacco industry and state attorneys general, told the panel that fast action is needed. He said 3,000 American youths begin smoking each day.

Bristow urged the committee to forward two recommendations:

— A set of six "core principles" that mirror longstanding AMA policy on the issues surrounding tobacco. They range from Food and Drug Administration regulatory power over tobacco to disclosure of industry research on the health effects of nicotine.
