Carter may propose cut in income tax

NEW YORK (AP) — Senior Carter administration officials have begun discussing a possible 1981 tax cut that they say the president may propose this year, perhaps as part of the mid-year budget review in July, the New York Times reported today.

Several officials said Carter, under increasing economic and political pressure, was moving away from his previous stance of refusing to talk about tax cuts until the budget is balanced to fight inflation, the newspaper said.

Officials reportedly cited three forces behind the president's decision: The economy appears to be in a steep recession, price inflation slowed in April and May, and both Ronald Reagan and Rep. John Anderson, the Republican and independent presidential challengers, favor tax relief.

The major uncertainty, according to the Times, was whether Carter would ask Congress to pass legislation to cut taxes before it adjourns this autumn or in 1981.

Asked for comment on the story, White House press secretary Jody Powell noted that Carter has said several times that he would consider a tax cut for 1981 if the new federal budget shows fiscal restraint. But, he said, "we haven't made a decision on what we want to do, much less how we'll announce it."

All of the president's senior economic officers favor a tax reduction next year for both individuals and businesses, the newspaper said.

Officials told the Times that a decision on whether to make tax proposals with the mid-year budget would have to come by late next week. One official, asked if the review might include a tax statement, was quoted as saying, "a lot of people think that it is an appropriate time."

The review is due out July 14 or 15 and is expected to project a 1981 budget deficit of $12 billion to $20 billion, said the Times.

It also said there was speculation that the president might outline his tax program in a major policy statement at the Democratic Convention in New York in August.

Tax valuations go to residents soon

Midland property owners will be receiving their tax valuation notices in the next few days, and Mayor G. Thane Akins cautioned them not to be shocked over the increased amounts listed on the notices.

During a news conference today in City Hall, Akins explained all property has been revaluated for 1980. The city now has a tax base of more than $1.35 billion compared to last year's valuation of $830 million.

Because the state requires last year's tax rate to be included on this notice and applied to the new valuation, the taxes may appear quite a bit higher.

But, these tax amounts are "a nonsensical number. It is not in any way an estimate of your taxes for this year, and everyone should disregard it completely," he said.

Akins explained that most property owners will discover an increase in the appraised value of their property for 1980 over the 1979 rate. The average increase will amount to 63 percent.

Midland City Council, however, has not set a tax rate and a figure will not be adopted until after the budget is approved in September. After studying the budget as to how much income is needed, the council then will set a tax rate and it will be lower than the 1979 tax rate of 63 cents per $100.

Virgil Jones, city tax assessor-collector, estimated the tax rate should drop to about 39 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Akins pointed out the only number on the tax notice citizens should be concerned with is the valuation of property. Persons having questions about the valuations may telephone the city tax office, 683-4281. And if that doesn't satisfy them, they may appear before the Board of Equalization. Those sessions will begin July 9. The sessions dealing with mineral rights will start June 30.

The tax valuation notices apply to the following taxing districts: city of Midland, Midland Independent School District, Midland College and Midland County Hospital District.

Akins said the reappraisal was undertaken because inflation and other factors had affected property valued in every section of the city. "There were inequities in previous appraisals ranging from 50 percent to 200 percent under the market value of the properties."

He explained that the tax contract with other taxing bodies states: "To assure current equality and uniformity of assessments from time to time, provision shall be made for the continuous review of appraised values of all taxable property. The assessed value of such property shall be reviewed at least once every five years."

Jones said the highest inequity was found in land prices and commercial property.

He said he expects about 600 to 700 calls from property owners.

Physician testifies he organized tax protests

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Dr. Austin B. Tibbetts, testifying in his own defense in a tax-evasion trial in federal court in Midland, said Tuesday that he has been organizing tax protest meetings since 1965 to "discuss the tax system and other acts of government which we felt were not consistent with good government. It's that simple."

Tibbetts, a 59-year-old osteopath who organized the United Tax Action Patriots in Midland in the mid-1970s, has been accused by the U.S. Internal Revenue Service with tax evasion and failure to file proper 1040 Forms for the years 1974, 1975 and 1976.

However, Tibbetts claims that he legally "avoids" payment of taxes rather than criminally evading and defeating the tax system.

"I use the word 'avoid' rather than 'evade,'" the tax protest leader was quoted in a 1978 videotaped film, which U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton allowed to be played before the federal petit jury. "The courts make a special distinction between 'tax avoidance' and 'tax evasion,'" Tibbetts had said.

UNDER QUESTIONING by Mark McClellan, his co-counsel, Tibbetts said the objective of the UTAP was "to get people to come to public meetings and to make a concerted effort to study the Constitution, especially the Bill of Rights,... (to become) aware of government functions and what their (the people's) rights are, to take an active participation (in political processes), and to register to vote.

But Tibbetts said UTAP's "main goal" was to repeal the U.S. Constitution's 16th Amendment, ratified in 1913 and which authorized the levying of the income tax.

While Tibbetts was testifying, about25 Tibbett sympathizers sat quietly in the courtroom. Just outside, two armed officers wearing uniforms of the General Services Administration's Federal Protective Service scrutinized visitors to the third-floor courtroom of the George Mahon Federal Building and checked for prohibited items, such as weapons, tape recorders and cameras.

Tibbetts operated Lee Optical as an eye doctor in Midland from 1965 to 1976, when he relocated to Amarillo to manage a more lucrative practice.

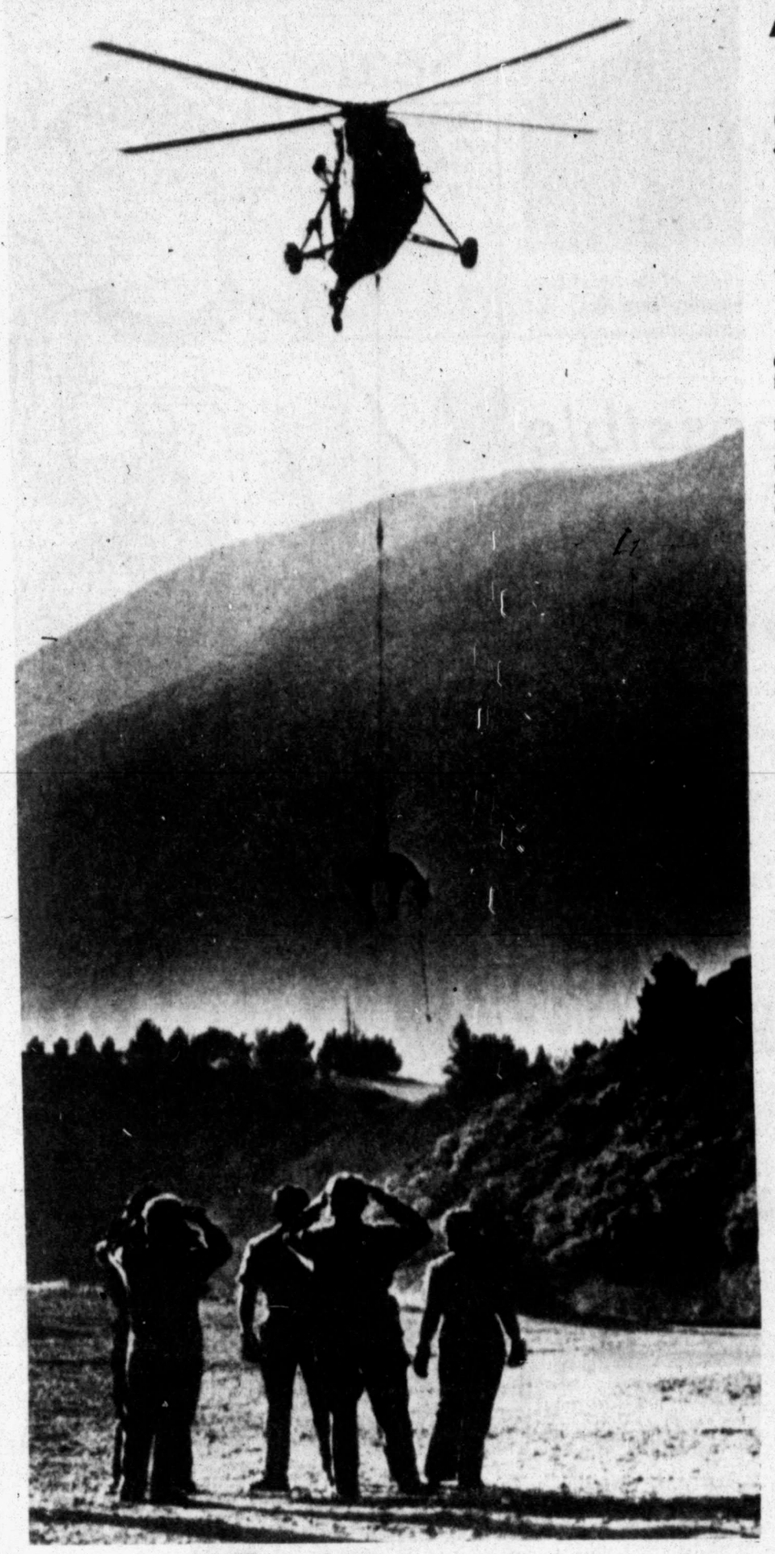

Even before that, Tibbetts said he was aware that he was under surveillance by the IRS.

IN EARLIER testimony by prosecution witnesses, IRS Special Agent Rex Stewart said he was assigned to surreptitiously attend a Tibbetts-led UTAP meeting in the Amarillo YMCA on June 22, 1978. He said he signed his name at the meeting as "Rex Stuart" to conceal his identity.

"Dr. Tibbetts stated that he had not paid any income tax for the past six years," Stewart said under questioning by Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck of San Antonio.

Stewart said Tibbetts told the tax protesters that they should use bank money orders and not bank checking accounts and should "operate strictly

Hearing scheduled on PPG plant here

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

The Texas Air Control Board (TACB) will report its preliminary findings on the potential chemical pollutant emmissions of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Industry scheduled to build a fiberglass plant outside of Midland during a public hearing at 7 p.m. Thursday in Midland City Hall Council Chambers.

Representatives from the TACB'sregional Odessa office as well as the Austin office will answer citizens' questions about the emissions of the plant at the Thursday hearing. Because it is not a meeting, citizens' comments will not be used in any decision-making, TACB attorney Don Postell said.

PPG representatives will also be at the hearing to give some details on the plant's operation.

Operating out of Pittsburgh, Pa., PPG's newest plant is scheduled to be built just east of the Midland Regional Air Terminal between Highway 80 and Interstate 20. Plans for the fiber glass factory have been under way since late 1978. The factory should be in operation sometime late 1980 or early 1981, according to company's planning records.

Before PPG can get a construction permit, however, it must have the approval of the TACB, which is still completing its study on the factory.

TACB spokesman, Dan Moczygemba, said the board has been reviewing PPG's plans for more than a month. "It normally doesn't take this long (to review a company's application)," Moczygemba said, "but this is a very complex industry."

The board must decide what type emissions will leave the potential factory's property line, Moczygemba said, including both controlled and non-controlled emmissions.

According to the Texas Clean Air Act, all new industries in Texas must conform to the rules and regulations of the TACB. Moczygemba said TACB

Americans are saving more, spending less

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are saving more and spending less as the deepening recession staggers income and further decimates a reeling housing industry, government figures show.

The Commerce Department reported Tuesday that people saved 3.9 percent more of their income in May than in April and spent 0.1 percent less.

At the same time, personal income — including wages, salaries, rents, stock dividends and interest, minus Social Security payments — actually increased a scant $3.1 billion, or 0.1 percent. But that did no more than offset an April decline, the first since July 1975, and leave the annual rate the same as two months ago at $2.07 trillion.

The figures represent a reversal over the last few months as Americans switch from hedging against inflation to cushioning against recession.

Savings at an annual $85.1 billion in May resulted in a savings rate of about 4.9 percent of after-tax income, compared with 4.5 percent in April and a recent low of 3.4 percent in December, the report showed.

May was the second straight month of decrease in personal spending. The purchase of long-lasting items such as appliances, furniture and cars, declined more than $23 billion in April and May.

Savings traditionally increase during a recession, as people try to prepare for possible job layoffs or cuts in overtime pay, economists say.

But while these savings provide mortgage money, they have done little to help the depressed housing industry. The fear of losing jobs or some income is keeping people from entering the home market, even as inflation is easing and interest rates are dropping, economists say.

The Commerce Department said housing starts plunged 11.5 percent last month, the fifth consecutive monthly decrease. May's seasonally adjusted, annual rate of 920,000 starts was the third lowest level in history, and was 49 percent below a year ago.

Not since February 1975 - during the depths of the last recession - have housing starts been so low.

"I would not underplay the difficulties facing homebuilders. They are critical," said Commerce Secretary Philip Klutznick.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist of the National Association of Homebuilders, estimates that unemployment in the housing industry has reached 926,000, and he anticipates little job relief until later this year.

At the current pace, it will take 12 months to sell off the inventory of homes, he said.

Sumichrast said the housing slump may be bottoming out, but the recovery will be slow and agonizing.

Klutznick also pointed to a slight increase in building permits in May as a sign that construction activity may be stabilizing.

However, James Christian, a senior economist for the U.S. League of Savings Associations, was more pessimistic. He predicted the housing slump will not end until late summer, partly due to the recession but also because mortgage rates will not soften much more.

Anderson says he alone can save U.S. from Reagan

By The Associated Press

John B. Anderson says that he alone stands in the way of the election of Ronald Reagan, "the former leading player for 18th Century Fox," as the nation's next president.

Anderson wrote off President Carter's chances when he declared in Hartford, Conn., Tuesday that "If I am not in the race, then ... Reagan can be picking his Cabinet."

The Illinois congressman based his assessment on a selective interpretation of national polling data released earlier in the day. But the fact remained that both the Gallup and Roper polls showed Carter within narrow striking distance of Reagan while Anderson was still in the preferential cellar.

Anderson chose to point to Gallup's figures showing that the president's approval rating has fallen to 33 percent, compared with 61 percent last December. And that, said Anderson, means that unless he pursues his independent candidacy, Reagan "won't have any opposition, he is so far ahead of Jimmy Carter."

But despite the decline in Carter's approval rating, Gallup showed the president in a virtual dead heat with Reagan, whether or not Anderson is in the race. In a two-way race, Reagan led Carter 45 percent to 42 percent; in a three-way battle, it was Reagan 36, Carter 35 and Anderson 23 percent. Given the poll's margin of error, that makes it too close to call in either case.

The Roper survey gave Reagan 40 percent to Carter's 36 in a two-way campaign. Curiously, Roper found that throwing Anderson into the equation would hurt Carter a bit more than Reagan while the Gallup poll found the reverse. Roper's three-way figures were Reagan 34, Carter 29 and Anderson 20.

In other developments:

—Reagan, in New York, met with a just-formed business advisory council of 40 top executives, including William M. Batten, chairman of the New York Stock Exchange. The prospective Republican nominee headed to Washington today, but planned no public appearances until an evening fundraiser in behalf of Citizens for the Republic, a conservative issues and lobbying group which he used as a political power base between presidential campaigns.

—President Carter's backers easily outvoted Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's camp during the initial drafting session Tuesday for the 1980 Democratic platform. The 15-member drafting subcommittee, on which only five Kennedy supporters sit, met again today behind closed doors, but it was clear the document would differ markedly from the 1976 issues statement by espousing the more conservative economic policies now favored by Carter.

—The Carter-Mondale campaign invited all of the President's nearly 2,000 convention delegates to visit Washington next month for pep sessions which almost doubtlessly will include a drop-by at the White House. Two obvious purposes: to keep them in line against Kennedy attempts to raid their ranks and to collect intelligence which might be useful in the fall campaign.

—Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee predicted a landslide victory for Reagan which would bring with it GOP control of the House and Senate. "This is going to be the biggest Republican year since 1952," he said.

Anderson, who headed into Ohio today, said in Hartford Tuesday that Reagan threatens to lead the nation into "the biggest arms race we've ever seen."

Reagan leads in new polls

NEW YORK (AP) — New Roper and Gallup presidential polls show Ronald Reagan edging President Carter alone or in a matchup including independent candidate Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill.

Head-to-head, the Republican former governor of California was preferred over Democrat Carter 45 percent to 42 in the Gallup poll and 40 percent to 36 in Roper figures.

In a three-way contest to include Anderson, the Gallup results favored Reagan with 36 percent to 35 for Carter and 23 for Anderson. Roper results were Reagan 34 percent, Carter 29 and Anderson 20.

The Roper survey of 2,000 voting-age persons was taken June 5 to 12. In a poll five weeks earlier, Carter had a 14 point lead over Reagan.

"Volatile may be an overworked cliche in this yeaar's election," the Roper group said, "but there is no other word to describe the present state of the electorate — unless it is 'disenchanted.'"

Gallup pollers questioned 1,224 persons last weekend.

The Roper poll's margin of error was estimated at 3 percent, and the Gallup poll's at between 2 percent and 3 percent.

A thick column of steam belches from the crater of Mount St. Helens while Mount Hood, a dormant volcano across Oregon's Columbia River, remains white in contrast to the ash-blackened slopes of its neighbor. Mount St. Helens was quiet Tuesday, but geologists warned that the volcano remains explosive. (AP Laserphoto)

Lava, more eruptions possible

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Geologists say that lava could start oozing from a dome growing inside the Mount St. Helens crater and that as many as seven other volcanoes in the Cascade Range could start erupting at any time.

H. William Menard, director of the U.S. Geological Survey, said Tuesday the other Cascade volcanoes have erupted at about the same time in the past, and it could happen again.

Menard first mentioned the possibility of simultaneous eruptions over the next 10 or 15 years last week during testimony before the U.S. Senate Appropriations Committee.

He mentioned the possibility again Tuesday in Vancouver.

"If the past is the best teacher, we'll have to expect eruptions from other volcanoes in the Cascades," he said.

Asked to explain Menard's position, Clem Shearer, USGS geologist, said:

"We could have half a dozen or more of these things go off at one time. There is a distinct possibility of all these things going off at once."

Other volcanoes in the Cascades include Mount Rainier and Mount Baker in Washington and Mount Hood in Oregon.

Shearer said Menard meant that the other volcanoes could erupt "at approximately the same time. And by that we mean in say 10 to 15 years, although there may be some overlap. They could go off at once or over a period of time; it could be either one of those possibilities, but we can't say which."

Meanwhile, another USGS spokesman said a dome forming in the crater of Mount St. Helens could turn into a lava flow.

"If that dome kept rising and was fluid enough, it could begin moving out to the north...through that breach in the crater," Donal R. Mullineaux said Tuesday.

He said further observation was needed to determine whether there had been any movement in the molten rock dome since it began forming after the volcano's last major eruption ended early Friday. At last report the dome measured about 660 feet in diameter and 132 feet in height.

Oregon Gov. Vic Atiyeh on Tuesday asked President Carter to declare his state a disaster area because of the volcano.

Atiyeh cited problems with ash from the volcano's last outburst — which Tuesday forced Portland officials to extend an air pollution warning — and "serious economic consequences" to the Port of Portland from mud that has made the Columbia River impassible to large ships.

Port officials estimate losses of as much as $5 million due to reduced shipping activity because of the mud, which was deposited after volcano blew its top May 18, killing at least 24 persons.

Since then, two lesser eruptions have blanketed much of Oregon and Washington with volcanic ash.

Throughout the Pacific Northwest, residents have been blaming the volcano for unseasonably cool and rainy weather, but that notion was rejected by Halstead Harrison, associate professor of atomspheric sciences at the University of Washington in Seattle.

"Our lousy June has nothing to do with the volcano," Harrison said. He said that although some of the ash from Mount St. Helens had spread through the stratosphere, which begins about 10 miles above the earth, the ash probably was blocking only one-tenth of 1 percent of the sunlight.

The volcano has exercised a much more devastating influence on fish, said Lyle Burmeister of the U.S. Forest Service.

He told said Tuesday that volcanic ash had killed insects along lakes and streams, further diminishing the chances of survival for fish in heavy ashfall areas. Earlier tests showed fish were bleeding to death from gills scraped by the ash.

And USGS Director H. William Menard said his agency had gone $1.5 million in the red from monitoring the volcano.

He said he asked Congress last week for another $4 million to continue research but insisted that scientists "will stay here as long as there is a hazard."

No damage, injuries reported in quake

WATSONVILLE, Calif. (AP) — A moderate earthquake that shook residents of the South San Francisco Bay area Tuesday night was centered near this Santa Cruz County town, the University of California Seismographic Station said.

There was no immediate report of damages or injuries.

Patty Murtha, a research assistant at the Berkeley station, said the quake measured 4 on the Richter scale and was reported at 9:52 p.m. PDT.

The tremor was felt as far north as Fremont, 50 miles away. Wastsonville is a farming area in the Salinas Valley, located about 25 miles south of San Jose.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 7.9 on the Richter scale.

Container firm signs with Big Spring Industrial Park

BIG SPRING — A new industry which will manufacture two-litre plastic soft drink bottles has signed a lease with options extending for 99 years on a 92,000 square foot building at Big Spring Industrial Park.

The announcement was made Tuesday by Western Container Corp. President John Dunagan.

Western Container was organized by 20 Coca-Cola bottlers in the southwest. Big Spring was selected as the site for the new manufacturing operation because of the available building and because of the Cosden Oil and Chemical Co. research project on small plastic containers, also being conducted at Big Spring.

Western Container Corp. was financed by $4½ million in revenue bonds issued through the Howard County Industrial Development Corp. The bonds were purchased by the First City National Bank of Houson.

The new industry initially will employ 45 people and operate 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Employees will work 12 hour shifts and will work four days with three off and then work three days with four off.

Employment will be handled through the Texas Employment Commission.

The plant is expected to produce 25 million to 30 million two-litre bottles per year. Plant manager will be Bob Jackson.

Projections indicate the company will indirectly spawn an additional 80 jobs in the Big Spring community and the annual economic impact on the state of Texas should be about $12,175,931.

Taxes wreak havoc with traditional methods of saving. They can ruin your plans for your financial future, for your retirement.

Federal and state income taxes combine to take 35%, 50%, 70% and even more of the interest earned by your savings.

But the Survival Kit provides long-term deferral of those taxes. The dollars that otherwise would go for taxes are left to compound and to earn interest on themselves. Depending on your tax bracket and the length of time you keep your money working, your savings can grow twice as fast. Or more.

Putting tax dollars to work for you can make all the difference in your planning for your future or your retirement years.

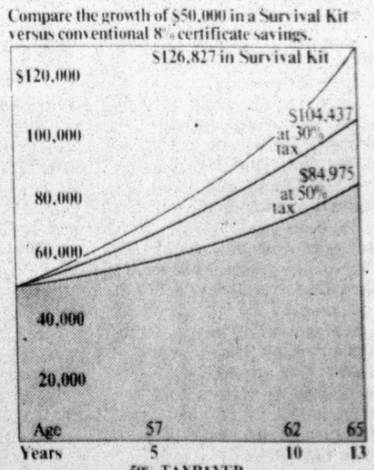

The Survival Kit can offer you this lifesaving advantage in growth because it is a group annuity plan underwritten by American Life and Casualty Insurance Company. But it is nothing like the traditional annuity which holds funds at a low, fixed rate of return.

Instead, the Survival Kit combines the advantages of a modern, high-return certificate savings account with the advantages made possible by this group annuity plan. In addition to the all-important deferral of taxes, you gain surprising withdrawal privileges, a variety of estate-planning benefits, and the option of choosing between lifetime retirement income payments or any other form of withdrawal that meets your needs. You are the one who decides how to withdraw your funds, and when.

CETA jobs unfilled while jobless list grows

Carter administration pondering what to do for recession relief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans out of work has swelled by more than 1.5 million this spring, yet 69,000 government-financed CETA public service jobs remain unfilled, the Labor Department reports.

The department's problems in filling the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act job slots while unemployment is soaring underscores the debate within the Carter administration over what, if anything, to do to counter a recession that threatens to send unemployment even higher.

Labor Department officials and leaders of organized labor have been urging President Carter to loosen his hold on the federal purse strings and propose expanded job-creating programs.

So far, Carter's top economic advisers have rejected those pleas. Instead, the administration is sticking to its current policy of fighting inflation through spending restraints rather than fighting a recession with increased government spending.

Carter has promised to reconsider anti-recessionary measures if the economy continues to deteriorate, and the administration has been reviewing steps it might take to lower unemployment, which has jumped from 6.2 percent in March to 7.8 percent in May — the steepest two-month rise in more than three decades.

But advocates of job-creating programs say the president's advisers have not tipped their hand as to what they may do or when they may do it.

"There's no clear indication one way or the other, whether to do something dramatic or to tough it out," said one Labor Department official, who declined to be named.

Another department official, also requesting anonymity, commented: "We're all pretty cynical about the chances of them (the White House) doing anything. If they do propose something, it would probably be a tax cut of some kind."

The AFL-CIO wants Carter to move immediately against the recession with a variety of spending programs to stimulate employment, but the federation's leaders have doubts about whether a president who has been criticized for changing economic directions too often would risk another change of course.

"I suspect they would love it if unemployment didn't get any worse, inflation comes down and interest rates come down so they won't have to do anything," said an AFL-CIO official.

But if the jobless rate keeps climbing to 9 percent or higher, as some economists now predict, the pressure will be building on Carter to propose public works projects and similar counter-recessionary programs.

One source of debate is over what measures the government should use and whether they would work as intended.

The Labor Department wants the CETA program expanded, yet it has been able to fill only 381,000 of the 450,000 job slots for which it has money this fiscal year.

As of the end of May, local CETA programs had filled 192,000 of the 250,000 positions available for the so-called "structurally unemployed" — poor, ill-educated youth chronically out of work. Of the 200,000 positions reserved for those who lose their jobs during recessions, 189,000 were filled.

A budget-conscious Congress, meanwhile, has voted to eliminate 100,000 CETA jobs by the end of fiscal 1981. Ironically, all the cuts would affect those left jobless by recession — the section of the program that the government has been most successful in keeping nearly filled.

Assistant Labor Secretary Ernest Green said some of the job-creating money has not been used because of constant uncertainty over how much Congress would give CETA from year to year. He said local governments also have had trouble creating jobs that meet the average annual salary limit of $7,800 set by Congress without violating union contracts or civil service rules.

Green said the department is taking "aggressive steps" to redistribute CETA money so that a maximum number of jobs can be created.

There is another paradox about the government's use of CETA to counter rising unemployment. Under a formula in an existing law, the number of CETA job slots rises as does the jobless rate, providing Congress agrees to spend the money. But most of those who lose their jobs in a recession may not be eligible for a CETA job, anyway.

Green estimated that 60 percent to 65 percent of the 1.7 million people who lost their jobs during April and May are skilled workers in the auto, steel and rubber industries who do not qualify for CETA jobs. In addition, anyone receiving unemployment compensation is not eligible.

Turtle race moved

Turtle owners who were grooming their animals for a heated race Thursday in Wadley-Barron Park will have to change plans. The city Parks and Recreation Department announced the race will be in Hill Park, located off Cuthbert Avenue between F and G streets.

The race will still start at 2 p.m. Prizes will be awarded to first, second and third place turtles. And two additional races have been added.

An entry fee of 10 cents will be charged for each turtle entered.

After the turtle race, the city is sponsoring the sixth annual Frisbee distance throw with top finishers winning prizes. It will be divided into three age groups: 6 to 8 years, 9 to 13 and 14 and up.

Free soft drinks will be available for all who participate or just want to watch.

Brothers sentenced and fined

U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton in federal court here Tuesday sentenced two Amarillo brothers each to a five-year term in the pentitentiary, fined them $10,000 and then ordered them on special parole for 10 years following their prison terms.

The brothers, Jerry Wayne Deas, 35, and Ronny Mack Deas, 30, were arrested Jan. 24 in Odessa and indicted for possession with intent to distribute a quart of methamphetamine, a narcotic stimulant. They pleaded guilty May 23.

Bunton said that the men, who previously have served prison time, do not have "what I would call 'desireable records.'"

"It's pretty obvious to the court that you have not learned your lesson," he told the brothers who, Bunton said, were motivated by "economic reasons" to deal in criminal activity.

Neither brother offered strong arguments for light sentencing, although the older brother, Jerry Wayne, said he had a wife and two children to support and that he has "a good job." He was self-employed.

"I know I've done wrong on that," he said of the offense.

His brother said he only had "a good job," and no wife and no children. He was a cattle buyer.

The Deas brothers were represented in court by Amarillo attorney Gene Storrs.

High temperatures should continue through Thursday, forecaster says

Despite scattered clouds and a chance of thunderstorms, temperatures should continue to be high through Thursday throughout the Permian Basin, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

All area towns reported partly cloudy conditions with high temperatures early today.

Midland sizzling temperatures should continue to keep the swimming pools in business as the mercury is expected to break the 100 degree mark again Thursday.

But a chance for thunderstorms tonight could bring some relief, said the weatherman.

The expected low temperature tonight is 70, and winds should be out of the southeast at 18-20 mph.

Daughter's letter favors punishment

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Lonna Beth Bartley wrote the judge that he might ought to punish her father for embezzling from the banks where he was a vice president.

And U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton agreed with the teen-age daughter, who had written him that her caring father would punish her and her little brother when they did something amiss.

"She deeply loves you," the judge told her father, and "...She recognizes that you need to be punished."

And the judge sentenced Lonnie M. Bartley, 39, to 10 years in prison for embezzling $22,200 from banks in 1978 and 1979. His ex-wife cried. He had pleaded guilty to the four-count indictment on May 23.

"I'm well aware of the fact that what I did was inappropriate," Bartley told the judge just prior to the sentencing, "...and I assure you that it'll never happen again."

Through he was convicted of stealing only $22,200 from the banks, Bartley actually purloined more than $250,000 from The First National Bank of Midland and Commercial Bank & Trust Co. in 1978, 1979 and 1980, according to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Bartley's attorney, John Hyde, who assured the judge that "there's a lot of good in this man," said that Bartley is "aware that he wronged society."

"He does in fact have great potential," Hyde said in pleading for a mitigated sentence.

Hyde noted that Bartley "lost his family and lost his community standing" in the aftermath of his being accused and convicted of the crime. "He has disgraced himself, and he's aware of that. He's a good person," Hyde said, noting that the Bartley case "bothers this court."

The judge acknowledged that the case, indeed, was bothersome. "We are aware it is a very grave offense," he said.

Though he admitted that sentencing is "not easy to do," the judge meted out two consecutive five-year prison terms to Bartley, gave him an another five-year term to run concurrent with the other two and also placed him on probation for five years. None of the counts in the indictment was dismissed.

"I do believe, Mr. Bartley, that there's a lot of good in you," Bunton said afterward. "...God bless you."

Bartley was an assistant vice president-loan officer at The First National Bank and later moved over to Commercial Bank & Trust Co., where he became a vice president-loan officer.

He was charged in the indictment with making loans to a "fictitious" person named R.R. Moore.

Wood jury completes first session

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A special grand jury empaneled to investigate the unsolved assassination of a federal judge heard briefly from the brother of a reputed Mafia kingpin before ending its first session.

Joseph Marcello, a New Orleans restaurateur and brother of Carlos Marcello, spent about 10 minutes in the grand jury room late Tuesday. The jury, empaneled only hours before, then adjourned until today.

Meanwhile, Carlos Marcello, 70, the "Little Man" who has been fighting deportation to Italy since 1953, was indicted Tuesday by a grand jury in New Orleans on racketeering, mail fraud, wire fraud and conspiracy charges. The federal grand jury was looking into the FBI's undercover Brilab, or bribery-labor, investigation.

Chief U.S. District Judge William Sessions sealed all subpoena records when he empaneled the San Antonio grand jury in open court Tuesday. He also sealed records containing the juror's identities.

"I chose to seal them (the records) because it is a special grand jury," Sessions said. "I would not comment on its purpose."

U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd had said earlier the panel would look into the unsolved 1979 assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. and a 1978 attack on then-Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr.

Boyd said he believes the attacks on Wood and Kerr were ordered by those with a multi-million dollar stake in illegal drug trafficking. The Kerr investigation has centered largely around a motorcycle gang.

Marcello would not comment on his appearance.

Another New Orleans restaurateur, Cirro Callico Sr., also was subpoenaed and asked to return today. New Orleans attorney Bill Crull, who accompanied Callico, said, "He can't tell them anything about the assassination. They think he may have some after-the-act information from some guy who went into his restaurant in New Orleans."

Wood, 63, was known as "Maximum John" because of the stiff sentences he handed down in drug cases. He was killed by a single shot from sniper as he left his townhouse for work on May 29, 1979.

Kerr escaped serious injury on Nov. 21, 1978, when several gun blasts were fired into his car as he drove to work.

There have been no arrests in either case.

A regular 18-month grand jury investigated both attacks until its term expired last month.

Sessions had known Wood for about nine years. And like the other judges in the Western District, he still is under round-the-clock armed guard.

Physician on trial says he organized tax protest meetings in Midland with cash and with bank money orders."

The indictment charging Tibbetts with tax evasion alleges that he shunned a bank checking account and opted to carry out business transactions with cash and money orders to "defeat" the income tax system and to conceal his income. Tibbetts, however, maintained that he stopped using checking accounts, for he had a "bad experience" with a bank in Houston in the 1950s.

Stewart said Tibbetts asserted that "a person should not keep records" but "if they did keep records, (they) should not turn them over to the Internal Revenue Service." Furthermore, the agent reported Tibbetts said the tax protesters "should claim enough exemptions or allowances to decrease their withholding (tax) to zero."

THE IRS AGENT said Tibbetts suggested the tax protesters should use the Fifth Amendment document, as well as the First Amemdment on basic rights, in filing their income tax forms, which would not list any money figures.

Stewart claimed Tibbetts said that those who do so might face criminal charges and might end up in the federal prison.

"The federal penitentiary was more or less a country club atmosphere, where you could sharpen up your tennis game, golf game and go swimming," Stewart said the defendant had opined.

"Dr. Tibbetts said he looked forward to taking his vacation in the federal prison," Stewart testified.

In his testimony, Tibbetts said his impressions of federal prisons is that they "look like country clubs."

He said he recalled saying "The Watergate burglars had had a vacation (in federal custody), and it might be I might have to take a vacation due to my activity."

TIBBETTS also acknowleged that he had passed out tea bags and envelopes for the protesters to send to their congressmen and senators in an apparent effort to conjure up a picture of the Boston Tea Party, in which colonialists protested taxation without representation.

In other testimony by government prosecution witnesses, IRS criminal investigator C.W. McMenamy of Amarillo said he had videotaped a television interview with Tibbetts. The IRS investigation was headed up by IRS group manager Jerry Stamps of Lubbock.

The videotape was played for the jurors, but comments of another tax protester were deleted by U.S. Deputy Marshal Steve Balog by cutting out the sound.

In that interview, Tibbetts dealt with the nuances between "evasion" and "avoidance" of paying income taxes. He said to avoid paying income tax is to take advantage of "loopholes." That, he implied, is his means. To evade is to "misrepresent" income and deductions, he said.

"We refuse to be intimidated," Tibbett had said, "and we refuse to relinquish our constitutional rights."

Prosecutors again questioning jurors

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Prosecutors resumed questioning prospective jurors for a third day today in the murder-riot trials of six Ku Klux Klansmen and American Nazis as two communists activists charged with trying to disrupt the proceedings were released from jail.

Earlier, two candidates for the jury told prosecutors they feared possible retaliation if they sit in judgement in the case.

A black woman raised the question Tuesday when prosecutors asked if there were any reasons why she could not serve on the jury hearing charges stemming from a bloody, leftist-sponsored "Death to the Klan" rally last November.

Theodora Parker paused and then answered, "I would be concerned about whether...my life would be safe."

Ronald Brooks suggested he should be disqualified because a relative was a Klansman. Under questioning, however, Brooks said his first concern was that "one of these groups is going to be disappointed when it's over. It is very possible retaliations could be taken."

Brooks was dismissed, but the prosecution approved Mrs. Parker as a juror. She still faces questioning by defense attorneys who will begin examining a pool of prosecution-approved jurors next week.

Judge James Long has told prospective jurors he does not plan to sequester the panel during the trial.

Meanwhile today, two supporters of the Communist Workers Party who were arrested Monday during a scuffle with police near the courtroom were released from jail today.

Air Control Board to report early finding on PPG plant standards parallel the federal standards of the Environmental Protection Agency, but that the groups are not related in their regulatory powers. Industries must be approved by both EPA and TACB, he said.

Findings of the TACB are a matter of public record, including application forms from the company. However, there are certain company records which are confidential, including those describing production rates and materials used in production.

Initial findings on the PPG plant indicate six chemical emissions will be made: flouride, sulfur dioxide, nitric oxide, carbon dioxide, boron and particulate matter.

Since the TACB has no regulation standards for any emission other than sulfur dioxide and particulate matter, the other emissions do not have to be controlled by the factory.

Sulfur dioxide and particulate matter are among the criteria pollutants set up by TABC, Moczygemba said. Controls must be made for the criteria pollutants, he explained, if the uncontrolled emmissions exceed reglatory amounts. Further, if the uncontrolled emissions exceed 1,000 tons a year for either of the two, the emission is regarded as an "EPA major source," which requires the TACB to make a yearly investigation of the plant.

For PPG, both the uncontrolled sulfur dioxide and the uncontrolled particulate matter emissions are projected to exceed 1,000 tons a year.

Without controls, the plant would emit 1,260 tons a year of sulfur dioxide and 11,674 tons of particulate matter, Moczygemba reported. However, with controls the company plans to use, only 819 tons of sulfur dioxide will escape, while only 42.3 tons of particulate matter will be released, he said.

Moczygemba said PPG's uncontrolled sulfur emission is still lower than that of a gas plant, which he said may emit 30,000-40,000 tons a year, if uncontrolled.

The TACB bases its review on a variety of tests, Lawrence Pewitt, engineer from the Austin TACB office, said Tuesday. "We use atmospheric dispersion models, for example," he said, "to determine what the impact would be, mathematically."

Pewitt said it would be difficult to compare the overall impact of the PPG plant on the air. "It is unique," he said. "I don't know how to compare it to any other plant. Compared to a power plant, for instance, (emissions would be) considerably less. However, (emissions would be) considerably more than an automobile," Pewitt said.

Most of the pollutants from the PPG plant would "disperse pretty rapidly," according to Moczygemba. The proposed 40-foot stacks, he said, would put the emissions at a height to be easily dispersed in the wind.

The plant initially planned to build 129-foot stacks. However, airport officials became worried the height would be a problem to incoming and outgoing planes, so the 40-foot stacks were suggested.

State representatives discuss decriminalization of intoxication

Texas State Reps. Mike Ezzell and Walter Grubbs met a packed room Tuesday in the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission building at Midland Air Terminal in the first of four public hearings to be held throughout the state on the decriminalization of public intoxication.

Some 60 area citizens, most of whom are involved with alcoholism programs, showed up to voice their opinions on the bill proposed to reduce criminal prosecution for public drunkenness by providing treatment to alcoholics.

Ezzell and Grubbs are members of a subcommittee studying the bill before it will proceed to the next session of the Texas Legislature.

If the Alcohol Services Act is enacted, Ezzell explained to the group, public drunkenness would no longer be a criminal offense. No other laws, such as driving while intoxicated, would be affected, however.

Only 13 persons actually spoke for the community at the meeting, with most of them concerned about the details of the bill rather than the overall legislation.

Jack Stovall, administrative officer at Big Spring State Hospital, however, opposed the bill. "Anything...that gives the drunk license to get drunk serves no other purpose than to drive him further into his illness," Stovall told the committee.

The 12-year veteran of the alcoholism counseling field said, "The idea of decriminalizing alcoholism — the idea of taking the drunk out of the court — won't help them one iota. No alcoholic will ever be motivated to change his lifestyle until he can hurt enough to want to change it," Stovall continued.

"It (the bill) would not help the drunk," he said, "but would further legitimize the use of alcohol by young people. Taking it out of the court justice system is not going to solve the problem."

The bill, patterned after laws in 36 other states already practicing decriminalization of alcohol, is designed to cut down the incidence of public drunkenness by taking the offender to a detoxification center for rehabilitation instead of to jail and through the courts.

The proposed legislation makes a distinction between an "intoxicated person" and an "incapacitated person." The intoxicated person is said to be someone who has simply had too much to drink, is not endangering himself or others and does not appear to need medical attention.

On the other hand, the bill defines the incapacitated person as someone in definite need of medical attention and who is "physically threatening or dangerous to persons or property." Such a person would be taken into "protective custody" under the new legislation.

The proposal is outlined in four sections detailing its action: Decriminalizing public intoxication; broadening the powers and duties of the Texas Commission on Alcoholism (TCA) to administer the act; establishing policies and procedures for four items; and giving Texas law enforcement officers the authority to respond to self-destructive behavior.

The bill proposes to decriminalize public intoxication by developing communtiy-based alternatives to jail.

The TCA will develop of system of services, establish minimum standards for the services and approve public and private facilities receiving funds appropriated for implementation of the act.

Policies and procedures will be established for voluntary treatment, emergency treatment, emergency commitment and involuntary commitment.

Other concerns about the bill voiced by members of the various alcoholism groups and law enforcement representatives included:

—Making an integration of treatment groups in aiding the alcoholic.

—Continuing funding for groups already fighting alcoholism.

—Placing a regulation, with enforcement, for alcoholics to stay in treatment centers long enough to change behaviors.

—Integrating juvenile drinking laws, open container laws and other intoxication-related laws with this new legislation, so that offenses will be similarly prosecuted.

—Creating a more definite guideline on what will police can do about intoxicated persons (not disturbing the peace).

—And creating regulations with "teeth in them" to enforce them.

Carter might veto huge weapons procurement bill if it retains B-1 bomber

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter might veto a huge weapons procurement bill if it retains a provision to revive the B-1 bomber, administration officials say.

"The man doesn't want that system," said one official, who asked not to be identified.

Officials said Carter also is concerned that House and Senate versions of the bill, while differing, could create a pattern of unacceptably high spending in future years.

The Senate Armed Services Committee last week rejected Carter's appeals and approved a $51.9 billion weapons procurement and research bill that would authorize spending about $5 billion more next year than he requested.

Earlier, the House passed an authorization bill about $1.2 billion higher than the Senate committee version.

The House and Senate will have to iron out the differences before the legislation goes to the White House, and administration officials said the president will make up his mind about a possible veto after looking at the final version.

They hinted Carter might be prepared to give ground on some items added by Congress, possibly accepting less than half the $6 billion difference between his $46.9 billion program and the House figure of $53.1 billion.

But they said he is adamantly against reviving the B-1, which he canceled in mid-1977 because of its soaring costs, then projected at almost $25 billion.

The House bill includes $600 million to prepare for production of a variation of the B-1 bomber to serve as a cruise missile launching plane by the early 1990s.

The Senate did not follow suit on the B-1 issue, but did add $66 million for preliminary work on stretching 155 FB-111A bombers and F-111D fighter-bombers and equipping them so they could penetrate Soviet air defenses.

Gen. Richard Ellis, chief of the Strategic Air Command, has been urging such an option to bolster U.S. strategic nuclear striking power until advanced weapons such as the MX mobile missile and the air-launched cruise missile become operational.

Senior defense officials are cool to that idea, contending it ultimately would cost about $10 billion for an airplane that they believe would become obsolete within about six years as the Soviets install advanced anti-aircraft missiles.

Rubber recycling urged as added energy-saver

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite the fact that Americans are discarding more than 200 million tires and millions of pounds of other used and worn-out rubber products every year, less than 4 percent of these potentially valuable raw materials are being recycled, says Timothy A. Baker, president of the Rubber Recycling Division of the National Association of Recycling

Baker claims that in addition to marring and polluting the environment, these rubber wastes are the potential source of vast quantities of energy savings. He points out the energy required to produce a pound of virgin rubber is 15,700 Btus, while that expended in the production of an equivalent amount of recycled rubber is 4,600 Btus — a saving of over 70 percent.

Natural rubber, the product of latex gathered from tropical trees and plants, still accounts for a large quantity of the rubber raw materials consumed annually by U.S. industry — about 1.7 billion pounds, Baker says. But the largest quantity — over 5.4 billion pounds — is synthetic rubber, derived from petroleum. Recycled rubber — with 271 million pounds — makes up only a small fraction of the total. "In addition to recycled rubber's positive energy and environmental attributes," Baker says, "there are serious supply factors to consider too. The raw material sources of natural rubber — Malasia, Indonesia, Thailand, Sri Lanka and Brazil — could in years ahead become uncertain for political and or economic reasons." he says.

Baker notes that recycled rubber is used in countless products, including tires of all types, hosing, mats, die-cut parts, carpet padding, molded products and sporting equipment.

Use of asphalt-rubber paving is also increasing, he says. This weather-resistant material is used on highways, in sports and recreational field surfacing, and on airport runways. Baker claims it extends pavement life four or five times, precluding expensive maintenance costs.

"American industry can, and should, use greater quantities of recycled rubber," says Baker, who is also president of Baker Rubber Inc. of South Bend, Ind. "Twenty years ago, recycled rubber made up 19 percent of the total raw materials used in the United States."

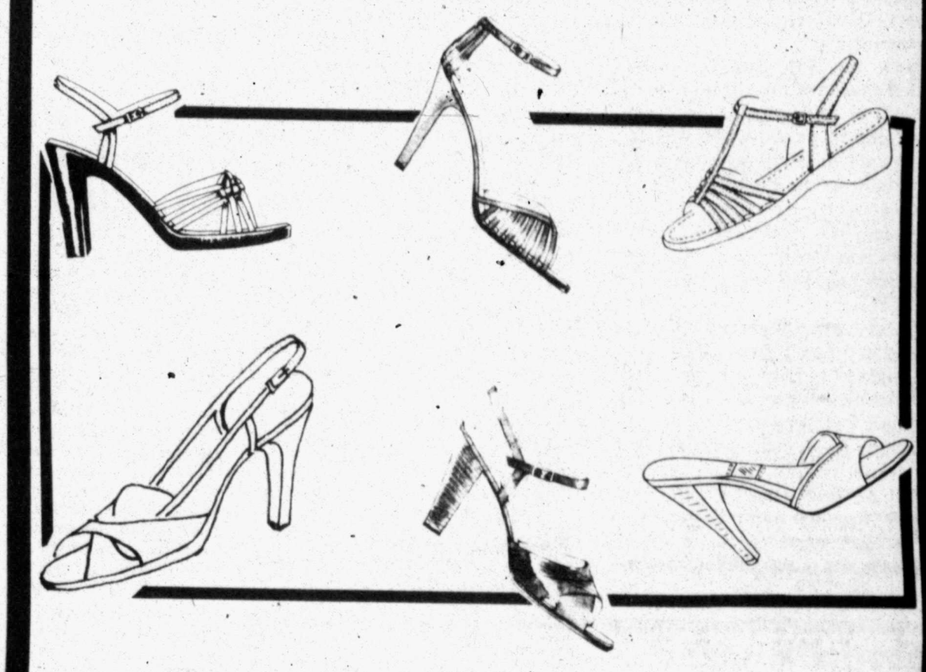

Citing just one area of possible increased use, Baker and other recycling experts agree that while most tires now manufactured contain less than 10 percent recycled rubber, this could readily be increased to 15 percent or even 30 percent without detrimentally affecting the tire's wear or performance.

Some tough questions

As long as progress is with us man will continue to conduct research and develop technology in order to make his life easier, more free and, of course, more profitable.

However, when man's limited intelligence and expertise become strained because of a multitude of factors, his endeavors may become evil, intentionally or otherwise.

First it was "test tube" babies. Although that development still is unfurling before man's eyes, it seems harmless enough at the present time.

Now the Supreme Court has ruled that new life forms created by virtue of "genetic engineering" can be patented. That ruling said the United States must grant a patent to Ananda Chakrabarty, a General Electric employee who developed in a laboratory a bacterium that eats crude oil more quickly and efficiently than natural bacteria.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger noted in the majority opinion that, "Congress is free to amend (the applicable patent law) so as to exclude from patent protection organisms produced by genetic engineering. Or it may choose to craft a statute specifically designed for such living things."

But Warren noted, under existing law the government has no choice other than to grant Chakrabarty's patent request.

It seems that modern-day free enterprise is beginning to border on a moral and religious question that's going to have to be answered soon. Is man getting too deeply involved in the dominion of the Almighty?

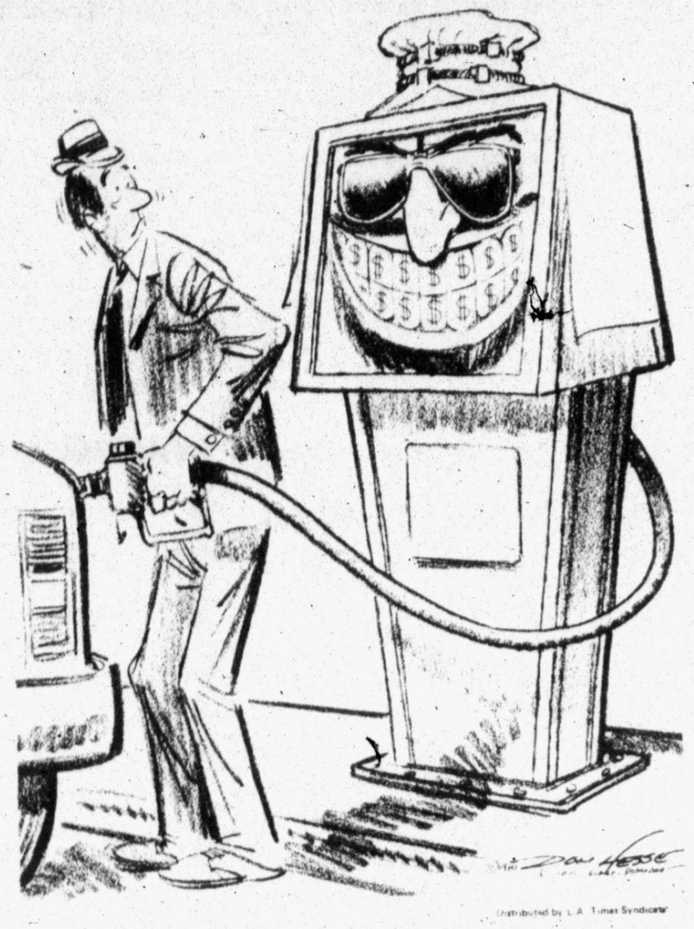

The implications, however, to that question extend much further. Does man only not "play God" when the result of his research becomes evil or destructive? Where does one draw the fine line between research that can prove beneficial to mankind and that which may be deemed beyond man's authority?

Certainly the Supreme Court does not wish to limit the free enterprise system or infringe on an individual's right to make an honest and decent living by the sweat of his own brow or the benefit of his own expertise. Yet with the advancements of recent years in the laboratory the Supreme Court is now being asked to rule on questions that may extend beyond the simple matter of who is right and who is wrong in a litigation.

They are difficult questions that cannot be easily or quickly answered.

The Supreme Court has upheld its responsibility in this matter initially.

We can only hope the court's decision was the correct one.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 18, the 170th day of 1980. There are 196 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: in 1815, the Battle of Waterloo in Belgium ended in a decisive defeat of Napoleon's forces by the British and the Prussians.

On this date:

In 1778, colonial troops moved into Philadelphia as the British withdrew during the Revolutionary War.

In 1812, the United States declared war against Britain.

In 1940, the Nazis captured the French port of Cherbourg in World War II.

In 1956, Air Vice Marshal Nguyen Cao Ky assumed office as premier of South Vietnam and vowed to spur the war against the Viet Cong.

Ten years ago, Britain's Conservative Party won a surprising victory in national elections.

Five years ago, the slayer of Saudi Arabia's King Faisal was publicly beheaded in front of the government palace in Riyadh.

Last year, President Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev signed the Salt II Treaty in Vienna. Carter later flew home to urge the Senate to ratify the arms limitation pact.

Today's birthdays: Singer Paul McCartney, a former Beatle, is 38. Actor Richard Boone is 63. Retired baseball star Lou Brock is 41.

Thought for today: Drunkenness is temporary suicide; the happiness that it brings is merely negative, a momentary cessation of unhappiness. — Bertrand Russell

ART BUCHWALD

Reagan's gesture didn't relieve the suspicion

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan made a very generous gesture the other day. He promised that if elected President he would have the White House physician examine him periodically, and that he would resign the office if serious evidence of senility or mental deterioration were detected.

This is the first time any presidential candidate has made such an offer, and Mr. Reagan should be commended for it.

The problem, as I see it, is how would any doctor know?

I asked a psychiatrist friend about this and he admitted it would certainly be a hard thing to prove.

"First of all," he said, "you can make a case for the fact that anyone who wants to be President of the United States does have mental problems. A person who thinks he can solve the nation's woes and deal with all the other crazy leaders in the world could easily be certified and put away, if he weren't running for the highest office in the land."

"I never thought of that," I admitted. "We do lock up people for a lot less."

"Secondly," he continued, "when a man becomes President he does things that no normal person would do. If Lyndon Johnson hadn't been President there would have been some question as to whether he had all his marbles. I cite his strange behavior of pulling a dog up by its ears, showing everyone his scar, and driving across the ranch in a jeep scaring the hell out of his cattle, not to mention putting 500,000 men in Vietnam, as things a psychiatrist might consider abnormal behavior."

"What you're saying, if I hear you correctly, is that what could be construed as abnormal for someone in your family is accepted as normal behavior once the person becomes President."

"That's correct. The same rules concerning senility and mental deterioration do not apply when someone lives in the White House, as opposed to a nursing home."

"If Nixon had agreed to do what Reagan has promised to do, is it possible that his White House doctors would have asked him to step down?" I asked.

"It's hard to say. We know Nixon talked to the paintings in the White House, and he was terribly paranoid about people who opposed him to the extent of making up an enemies' list. And you might wonder about a person who wanted everything he said put on tapes, and who then decided not to destroy them because it would prove he was innocent. But I'm not certain that the White House doctor would have said to him, 'Mr. President, please put on this white jacket. We're going for a ride in the country.'"

"Gerry Ford was sane, wasn't he?"

"It depends. Medically, I would say yes. But after he pardoned Nixon, everyone said he was crazy."

"How about President Carter?"

"We psychiatrists are very suspicious of anyone who says to the American people, 'I'll never lie to you.' And any person who keeps telling you that the worst of the recession is over should be watched very carefully. But I wouldn't recommend hospitalization yet."

"Then you think Reagan's promise to step down if his doctors believe he is senile or deteriorating mentally is pure hyperbole?"

"Frankly, the fact that he even mentioned it bothers me. It puts ideas into people's heads. As soon as he makes his first State of the Union speech and advocates tax cuts and at the same time demands a balanced budget, everyone's going to say 'Okay, Ronnie, it's time for the funny farm.'"

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Record hints at shady grant-making deals

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Ten months ago, departing White House Counsel Robert Lipshutz left behind a clear warning to Jimmy Carter and his political advisers: "It is a crime," he wrote in a confidential memo, "for anyone with grant-making authority to use that authority to affect the nomination or election of a candidate."

The lawyer's advice appears to have been honored more in the preachment than the practice. In fact, Carter aides openly boasted to a Washington Post reporter how they had used the grant-making power of an incumbent president to deflect Ted Kennedy's challenge.

While political motives for federal grants are difficult to prove, the extent and timing of the administration's largesse to important primary states establish a suspicious pattern. Rarely if ever has an administration used the spending power of the White House so blatantly. Here's just part of the record:

— On the eve of a crucial Florida vote, an electric cooperative in the Sunshine State was granted a billion-dollar loan only two months after the application was filed. Such loans normally take at least a year to process.

— A month before the New York primary, President Carter invited New York Post publisher Rupert Murdoch to lunch at the White House. Three days later, Murdoch's paper, third largest in the state, endorsed Carter. And six days after that, a Murdoch-owned Australian airline got a $290 million, low-interest loan from the Export-Import Bank.

— Similar cases of "grantsmanship" turned up in Illinois, New Hampshire, Maine, Massachusetts and Wisconsin at primary time.

— Prior to "super-primary" day on June 3, federal grants rained down on Ohio like volcanic ash from Mount St. Helens.

In a single day, for example, the office of Rep. Thomas Kindness, R-Ohio, was notified of one $829,000 community block grant, three summer youth recreation grants and an award to a local college, plus an announcement that a local historical site had been added to the National Register.

Other primary-time grants to Ohio — the only big state Carter carried on June 3 — included $1.4 million to Cincinnati for conversion of its train depot into a shopping mall, and more than $50 million to the recession-stricken Youngstown-Warren area.

Sometimes the White House gravy ladlers went too far. The announcement of a $9 million grant to Dayton for highway improvements, for example, turned out to be funds the community already had. "They misrepresented the facts," a county official told my associate Peter Grant.

Footnote: Justice Department officials also warned the White. House that is is illegal to promise jobs in exchange for political support or to utilize federal workers in political campaigns. Yet the hiring for the 1980 census was highly political, with first crack at the jobs going to Carter supporters.

In Springfield, Mass., as many as 15 census employees were put to work at Carter's campaign headquarters addressing envelopes and soliciting votes over the telephone, instead of doing the Census work they were paid to do. People on the federal payroll were also asked to work in the New Hampshire campaign, but plans to bus them to New Hampshire on Feb. 16 were aborted. Some of the census workers acknowledged to my reporter, Thomas Toch, that they had been pressed into political service.

JUDGING JUDGES: Another of Jimmy Carter's nominees for a federal judgeship is in difficulty. He is Stephen R. Reinhardt, a liberal labor lawyer whose political connections in both parties should have assured him smooth sailing through the confirmation process.

What has hung up his nomination — and made some of his influential backers a little uneasy — is a controversial Los Angeles Police Department report that raises questions about his possible ties to organized crime figures.

The report was supposedly requested by Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl Gates. But the chief, who enthusiastically supports Reinhardt's appointment to the bench, says it is not an official department document.

The report says Reinhardt "appears to have questionable links" to a number of notorious underworld figures. Reinhardt has termed these links "non-existent," and labeled the file garbage — "if it exists."

FREEDOM FENCE: Even before the mass Cuban exodus, intelligence officials had an inkling of an upsurge of dissatisfaction in Castroland. Last year, about 150 Cubans jumped the fence to take refuge in the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo — roughly three times the usual number.

LOOSE LIPS? Bemoaning the "leaks" of secret intelligence material to the Nosy Parkers of the press, Rep. Robert Lagomarsino, R-Calif., remarked at a top-secret intelligence briefing, "If we had had in World War II the kind of leaks that we have today, the thing might still be going on!"

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

Congratulations to the college graduation class of 1980. Now you can get out there and start hustling to pay back your parents who scrimped and saved to put you through nursery school.

As you step up to receive your diplomas, a little voice inside your heads will remind you that there's a good chance that your old high school SAT scores were about as valid as an Iranian visa.

And, if the truth be known, you probably should never have been let out of the eighth grade.

Although you are just now squeezing through the broken turnstile of life, you have already had a positive effect on the economy — particularly the brewing industry.

Every time your parents tried to call you, you were always gone for more gusto.

Forgive the ribbing, graduates. We oldsters like to think you're all good kids. I know that you didn't make this world what it is. We didn't either. I think it was our parents. Or maybe it was their parents. Anyway, good luck. And remember — as Tarzan once said to Jane, "It's a jungle out there."

NICK THIMMESCH

Though concern lingers, Saudi Arabia isn't vulnerable

Nick Thimmesch

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Many nations express concern about Saudi Arabia's security because of the Iranian revolution and the violence last November in the sacred city, Mecca.

Washington, Europe and Japan worry about all the oil being stopped. The men in power here have always been wary of radical states in the region. Others seize the moment to demean this kingdom by claiming it is terribly vulnerable to external threat, and weak internally as well.

To sit here and contemplate the sprawling fields of oil riches nearby, the vast stretches of seacoast, and the amount of territory to protect does give rise to that specialized concern felt in military situation rooms.

And yet there is good reason to believe that this huge land has a strong security cover, that its ruling royal family is managing the nation well and that the kingdom and its people will survive.

Those oilfields, in a secular way, are as sacred to Europe and the U.S. as Mecca is to Muslims. The nation or movement which would dare attack them would have the combined might of Europe and the U.S. to reckon with. There are such guarantees.

Moreover, Saudi forces (75,000 military, national guard and border police), trainable and tough, are rapidly increasing their skill. The U.S. has three military missions here, one a training unit commanded by a two-star general. The Saudis, short on manpower, deploy all soldiers in combat units and rely on U.S., British and French firms to supply support.

Saudi pilots check out well in flying the F-15 and the British Lightning, though teaching them how to operate the sophisticated weapons systems in these hot jet fighters is more difficult.

But who would the Saudis fight or fly against? South Yemen, a revolutionary state supplied by the Soviets, has long been a threat; indeed, the Saudis beat them back in a 1970 "border" fight. During Nasser's regime, Egypt and Saudi Arabia clashed, with Egyptian planes attacking several Saudi towns. Chaotic Iran is a potential aggressor, especially if it ever receives major Soviet support — a possibility.

Saudi officials also fear Israel's proclivity to impulsively strike, but also know that the U.S. would come down hard on Israel for such a deed. Israeli officials like to talk about the day coming when the U.S. and Israel will join in a mission to occupy the oilfields against threatening radical forces. Responsible U.S. officials are not buying any such Israeli-U.S. venture.) While angered by such audacity, the Saudis dismiss it as Israeli resentment against strengthening security bonds between their nation and the U.S.

Despite heightening concern about Saudi security, and the reality that pipelines could easily be cut, there never has been an attack, or even an attempt at sabotage, on any oilfield here. Aramco maintains good industrial security and Saudi coast guard vessels (to be complemented soon by navy forces) patrol the adjacent shores.

And for all the eyebrow-raising over the Mecca episode, careful analysis shows that: 1) There were no concurrent or following actions anywhere else in the kingdom; 2) The Saudi military went slow in crushing the small band of armed fanatics in order to allow thousands to escape from the Mosque area.

Though it got less press attention in the West, the charismatic demonstration by Shiite Saudis at Qatif several weeks later, which resulted in casualties when national guardsmen overreacted in the fashion of Kent State, held far more dangerous implications. In a kingdom where groups never demonstrate or protest, the Shiites, given to frenzy, could provide trouble in the future. The Shiite population is centered near the oilfields in the Eastern Province.

Altogether, however, Saudi Arabia is a remarkably stable nation. Soldiers aren't positioned everywhere as they are in military states or nations afflicted with the siege mentality. "We don't station a guard in front of every minister's house," one Saudi official cracked.

Automobiles are the greatest menace to public safety in Saudi Arabia. Their remains lie everywhere, and who knows the body count? They are the single expression of violence I saw in a nation where there is a strong atmosphere of implicit observance of the law.

Saudis, who account for less than half the workforce, are seemingly satisfied with their share of the oil riches. Their nation is being built. The two million guestworkers from upwards of 40 nations have not had major problems with the Saudis, and such harmony is quite remarkable.

So life goes on here, and how people keep their tempers at 120 degrees Fahrenheit must be attributed to Allah.

Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, head of the Iranian supreme court and influential member of the revolutionary council, announced in a Tehran news conference today that it is unlikely the parliament will discuss the fate of the American hostages soon. (AP Laserphoto)

Hostages' fate subject of vote?

By The Associated Press

The Iranian people should decide in a referendum whether to free or try the 53 American hostages if the new Parliament can't reach a unanimous decision when it debates the issue, which probably won't be for another three months, a Tehran newspaper declared.

Meanwhile, a member of the U.N. investigating commission said the group will not return to Tehran in the near future, and 14 more Iranians including a woman were reported executed — three of them hanged at the site of their crimes.

The newspaper Donyaye Iran quoted members of Parliament as saying the legislature is unlikely to take up the hostage issue until mid-September because until then it will be occupied with routine business.

"If Parliament cannot make a unanimous decision on the hostage issue, a referendum should be held and the nation should vote on whether they want the hostages freed or tried (as spies)," the paper said Tuesday.

The president of the Parliament, Yadollah Sahabi, said the body would begin its "real work" in 10 to 14 days. It is expected to take up debate on appointing an Iranian prime minister before turning to the issue of the hostages, who spent their 228th day in captivity today.

Iranian revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has ordered Parliament to decide the fate of the hostages. The body is dominated by members of the Islamic Republican Party, whose leaders have called for hostage trials as have the Islamic militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4.

The hardline clergy members have split with Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who has suggested that placing the Americans on trial is not in Iran's best interests.

The parliamentary division was noted by Hojatoleslam Moosavi Khovieniha, a spokesman for the Islamic militants who is now a member of the assembly. "Taking over the spies nest (the U.S. Embassy) for a while was uniting all of us. Now it seems to be dividing us," he was quoted as saying to the newspaper Enghlab Islami, organ of the Islamic party.

But Khovieniha indicated the militants had not dropped their demands for trials and return of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, now living in Egypt with his family.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said the exiled monarch recently contracted pneumonia and a fever, forcing temporary suspension of his treatment for lymph cancer.

Sadat said the shah had since recovered and was again undergoing chemotherapy. One of the doctors who has been treating the shah since his arrival in Cairo in March confirmed Sadat's report.

Harbor pilot loses his license

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Florida officials, citing a possible risk to lives and property, have lifted the license of John Lerro, who was guiding the freighter Summit Venture when it rammed into the Sunshine Skyway Bridge.

Lerro was told he could appeal that decision in Tallahassee next week. The pilot, however, said he would go to court if necessary to fight the emergency order issued by the state Department of Professional Regulation.

Tuesday's order came less than two hours after Lerro announced he would return to work today.

The 37-year-old deputy pilot was guiding the Summit Venture through the Tampa Bay shipping channel May 9 when the 608-foot phosphate freighter hit the bridge during a storm, sending a 1,400-foot section of the southbound span tumbling into the murky waters below.

A Greyhound bus and seven other vehicles plunged into the waters and 35 people were killed.

Through his attorney, Steve Yerrid, Lerro had said Tuesday he intended to return to routine piloting duties for his first regularly scheduled rotation since the accident.

DPR Attorney Ken Oertel had warned Lerro he would seek immediate suspension of his license if the pilot didn't voluntarily withdraw himself from the duty roster of the Tampa Bay Pilots Association.

The suspension order said the pilot "failed to take due regard to to existing circumstances and didn't properly react to the forseeable consequences of piloting in conditions of no visibility and high winds as he approached the Sunshine Skyway Bridge."

Lerro lacked the "necessary skill, judgment and presence of mind to pilot a vessel in a trustworthy manner," said the order signed by DPR Secretary Nancy Wittenberg. The agency regulates professional licenses.

Death of Harper's magazine mourned as 'end of tradition'

By JED HOROWITZ

NEW YORK (AP) — The death of Harper's magazine, the nation's oldest monthly, is being mourned as the end of an American tradition by scholars and writers across the country.

"I just heard the news...and I'm heartbroken," said Roger Angell, senior fiction editor of The New Yorker magazine, after Tuesday's announcement that Harper's will fold in August.

Founded in 1850, the magazine of literary and social commentary published new authors ranging from Herman Melville and Henry James to George Plimpton and Tom Wolfe. Other notable contributors included Mark Twain, Stephen Crane, E.B. White, William F. Buckley and Joan Didion.

"We're really sad about it, it's the loss of a real American tradition," said Mortimer B. Zuckerman, publisher of The Atlantic Monthly, Harper's main competitor. "We feel particularly sensitive because we are the last bearer of the tradition of the serious magazine."

"The narrowing of the numbers of magazines being published is a bad sign for writers and readers themselves," lamented Angell. "It's very bad for young writers, too."

Lewis H. Lapham, Harper's editor, said he received word Tuesday morning from the Minneapolis Star and Tribune Co., the magazine's owner since 1965, that the end had arrived. But he said he wasn't cynical about the demise of the magazine whose circulation had climbed to 325,000.

"It had a long and illustrious history, and it's never made money — not in more than 10 of its 130 years," Lapham said. He added that he had organized a group to buy the magazine, but that the owners rejected the bid because "they didn't think it was heavily enough capitalized."

Mrs. Hughes, the chapter's Outstanding Member award recipient, placed third in district. Patty Cooper was presented a plaque as educational director. (Staff Photo)

Laura Wettstein a runner-up in Texas National Teen-ager Pageant

Laura Wettstein of Midland was crowned Miss Texas Hospitality and was named second runner-up in the 1980 Texas National Teen-ager Pageant held in Fort Worth.

The daughter of Patricia Wettstein of Midland and the late William C. Wettstein was also one of the 10 finalists in the essay portion of the pageant on the subject "What's Right About America?"

Ms. Wettstein was presented with a tiara and banner, cash scholarship to the college of her choice, a watch and a charm for winning the Miss Texas Hospitatlity contest. She was presented a trophy as second runner-up in the pageant.

Ms. Wettstein will compete for the title of Miss National Hospitality in Orlando, Fla., in August.

There were 107 semi-finalist in the pageant which recognizes and honors outstanding teen-agers for scholastic achievement-leadership, poise-personality and appearance.

A recent graduate of Midland High School, Ms. Wettstein has participated in many activities such as Junior Rotarian, Association of American University Women, Midland High School representative to Girls State and Counselor; Washington Workshop National Advisor and secretary of the Midland High School Student Council.

Other honors inclue basketball secretary, baseball bat girl, German Club secretary, Pack-Backers, Junior Lioness and at the Midland County Convention she was chosen to be an alternate delegate to the Republican State Convention to be in Houston.

Ms. Wettstein was sponsored by the Midland Rotary Club and her wardrobe was coordinated and furnished by Grammer Murphy.

Cholesterol study moves toward answer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Every day, Dan Hipsley swallows six packets of a gritty, bulky, orange-colored substance mixed with liquid.

Hipsley is one of 225 Baltimore men and 4,000 in the nation who for four years have taken the substance in a regimen that three years from now may answer a lifesaving question:

Does less cholesterol in the diet reduce the chance of a heart attack and death from a heart attack?

The Johns Hopkins Hospital is one of 12 medical centers engaged in what is known as the Coronary Prevention Trial, seeking to resolve the 30-year debate.

The participants in the study — ranging from bandleaders to lawyers, from motorcyclists to pigeon fanciers — are all healthy men, aged 35 to 59, with no signs of high blood pressure, heart disease or diabetes.

But all have a high amount of low density lipoprotein, known as LDL, in their blood. One of the components of cholesterol, LDL is believed to be the substance which puts these men in the high risk of heart attack category.

Dr. Peter O. Kwiterovich Jr., director of the Hopkins portion of the study, screened more than 35,000 men in Baltimore to find the proper candidates. Nationwide, half a million men were screened.

The participants receive no pay for testing. But they get frequent free checkups. If a problem develops, they are referred to a specialist at their own expense.

Half of the trial participants take six packets a day of the bulky powder known as cholestyramine, which lowers the amount of LDL in the blood. The other half swallow the same amount of a similar-tasting powder which contains no medication.

Neither the doctors nor the patients know which group is on what. The procedure is known as a double blind trial, used to prevent any bias.

All the men have been placed on what Kwiterovich refers to as "a prudent, low-cholesterol diet," low in meat, eggs and dry dairy products.

The dropout rate has been low despite a recent 20-page report from the National Research Council, an arm of the National Academy of Sciences, which said people should not worry about how much cholesterol they eat, but should worry about calories.

That report has led to confusion on the part of the man on the street, according to Kwiterovich.

DEAR ABBY

Active life possible for MS sufferers

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to PREPARED FOR THE WORST, the woman with MS (multiple sclerosis) who was told by her doctor that eventually she would be paralyzed and confined to a wheelchair. How right you were to tell her not to accept her doctor's gloomy prognosis. She was debating whether to tell her 13-year-old about her disease in the hope that she might be more cooperative and understanding—yet she didn't want to frighten or upset her younger children.

I think ALL her children should be told.

She should also contact her local MS society. Members will invite her to meetings and put her in touch with other MS victims and provide her with a lot of helpful information.

PREPARED FOR THE WORST should also read "The Pursuit of Hope," an excellent and inspiring book by Miriam Ottenberg, a Pulitzer journalist, herself a person with MS.

I know firsthand about MS because I have it, too. My 8-year-old daughter and 11-year-old son were told what I have and how they can help. They are among my greatest assets. Without their help and my husband's constant assurance, I wouldn't be able to do the things I do today. I'm a substitute teacher, Brownie leader, team mom for my son's baseball team and active in my church and PTA.

I manage to keep my home going and keep up a moderately active social life. I realize that someday I could be paralyzed and in a wheelchair. But right now I am not, and I intend to use to the fullest everything I have. Every day I fight to keep my body on its feet and walking. It's a struggle, but it's well worth the effort when I see what I can still accomplish.—PAT HERMAN, OXNARD, CALIF.

DEAR PAT: Thank you for a wonderful letter. I received hundreds of letters from those with MS, and all were in complete agreement that no one should expect the worst and resign him/herself to a wheelchair. They also told me that telling the children and asking for their help bring the family closer together.

For those who want more information about MS, write to the National MS Society, 205 E. 42nd St., New York. N.Y. 10017.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I both work in jobs covered by Social Security. We have three young children. I know that if my husband becomes disabled or dies, the children would get monthly Social Security payments. Would the children be able to get any benefits if something happens to me?—ALICE

DEAR ALICE: You have the same rights and benefits under Social Security as your husband.

If you became disabled or die after working long enough under Social Security, your children can get monthly Social Security checks until age 18 or 22 if they go to school full time and remain unmarried.

If you have a child disabled before 22, your disabled child would get monthly checks as long as disability lasts.

DEAR ABBY: I chuckled over the letters from women with deep voices who were constantly called "sir" on the telephone.

My telephone voice is also misleading. Very often when I answer my telephone, the calling party will say, "May I please speak to your mother, honey?" This happened only yesterday, so I replied, "My mother is 78 years old, and I am 56. What can I do for you, HONEY?"—LITTLE GIRL VOICE IN DENVER

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 plus a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to ABBY, Letters booklet, in care of this newspaper.

YOU AND USDA

Living creatively in today's world means taking an active part in government affairs. When the "last recess bell" rings on any government issue, minute or all encompassing, it means you and I have to deal with the results—whether or not we have taken the time to put in our two cents worth!

Currently, there is a food grading consumer issue that you and I can plug in to prior to August 28, 1980, with pen, paper, our time and a small amount of effort. This issue happens to be one of the pet peeves of most shoppers I visit with because of the widely diversified grading systems utlized with different food items. So here's your change to respond to Uncle Sam's request for public comments on proposed options to change its food grading program. Let's take a look...

CONSUMER SURVEY

A recent nationwide consumer survey done for USDA applies to the foods it grades for quality. The Assistant Secretary of Agriculture for Food and Consumer Services, Carol Tucker Foreman, has stated: "Our grading program should be one that consumers can understand and use. Research indicates that the program may not be meeting consumers' needs. We will evaluate public comment on our options and propose changes in our grading regulations later if warranted."

The key note you and I need to recognize is the last sentence in Ms. Foreman's statement. Changes made (or not made) will be reflected through the number and type of comments received. Ms. Foreman further states: "Since public opinion is of vital importance at every step in the process of change, we are making special efforts to provide adequate opportunities for all citizens to participate. Personally, I agree with this statement of Ms. Foreman's and decided to bring it to your attention here through my column.

OPTIONS FOR CHANGE

The official options under consideration are published in the May 30 Federal Register, which is available at most libraries. Locally, this information may be viewed at the Midland County Library in the Periodical Room. Basically, the options for changes are:

1. Adopt a completely uniform grade name policy by using U.S. Grade A, B and C or U.S. Grades AA, A and B for all graded foods.
2. Keep the present system of grade names for meat, fresh fruits and vegetables and use U.S. Grades A, B, and C or U.S. Grades AA, A and B for all other graded foods.
3. Retain present grade names, but adopt a separate consumer color coding system in whih one color would represent each quality level for all graded foods.
4. Require grade labeling at the retail level if a product is graded and labeled at the wholesale or packer level. (Such labeling, even when the product has been officially graded at the wholesale level, is now voluntary).

VOICING YOUR COMMENTS

To let our USDA know what your opinions are on these options, send your written comments directly to:

Executive Secretarian
Attn: Annie Johnson

Midland students leave Thursday for foreign educational tour

Twenty-two Midland students, under the auspices of the American Institute for Foreign Study, will depart Thursday on an educational travel tour.

Sponsors are Mrs. Janice Saylor of Denver, Colo., former Midland High School teacher, and Mrs. M. A. Carter of Alto.

Joining the Midland group will be a group from Monahans under the sponsorship of Mrs. Peggie Vaughn.

Mrs. Charmane Crawford of Panhandle will be directing the tour as traveling principal.

The group will be in London two days at the beginning of the tour. Then, in addition to visiting Paris, Leysin, Switzerland and Rome, the students will spend seven days aboard the Victoria. Ports of call include Cannes, Monte Carlo, Barcelona, Palermo, Tunisia, Naples and Pompeii. After a stay in Florence, with trips to Pisa and Vinci, the group will continue to Greece.

The students will receive academic instruction to ameleorate their appreciation and understanding of the countries and cultures.

Students traveling on the tour will be David Bartus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Bartus; Howard Cunningham, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Cunningham; Nica Foreman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan W. Foreman; Brad Hughes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kingdon R. Hughes; Jana Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Jones; Laurie Karcher, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Karcher; Kristen Kiser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll F. Kiser.

Mary Ann Kleine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Kleine; Lyndee Knox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Knox; Mary Ann LaCaff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted LaCaff Jr.; Brian Lebow, son of Ms. Danie Lebow; Jenna March, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon March; Deborah Mashburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Mashburn; Lee Mason, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Mason; Marlee McCormick, daughter of Ms. Bobbie McCormick; Becky Munson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Munson; Dru Perry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Perry Jr.; Connie Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reu Richards; Janet Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Stone; Trayce Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Thomas; Sharon Stringer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Stringer, and David Watts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin E. Watts.

Anniversary observed

HOUSTON — Mr. and Mrs. Jim Flanigan of Houston, former longtime Midland residents, celebrated their 51st wedding anniversary here on June 8.

They were married June 8, 1929, at Durant, Okla.

Flanigan, who was born at Midland in 1904, was self-employed there from 1942 until his retirement in 1977. Mr. and Mrs. Flanigan moved to Houston at that time. He was active in the Elks Lodge and other organizations while residing at Midland. His father came to Midland in 1883, and his mother arrived here in 1903.

Worries over economy found to hit the middle-aged hardest

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — You're most susceptible to recession blues if you're middle-aged, says Emily Hardy, a staff psychologist in the University of Iowa Counseling Service.

Studies conducted following earlier recessions found that the increase in admissions to mental hospitals that accompanied a falling economy was most noticeable among people in their middle years, she says.

"This may occur for several reasons," Ms. Hardy explains. "If you're middle-aged, you're probably the breadwinner for a family, and your job may be threatened by rising unemployment. You're near the peak of your career and afraid that if you don't make it to the top now, you never will.

"You're still responsible for maintaining a roof over your children's heads, but you may also need to supply both economic and emotional support for aging parents," she adds.

How can you keep worries about making ends meet from overwhelming you?

First, reassess what is really important in your life, advises Ms. Hardy. This should put an end to the notion that having to repair the old car instead of buying a new one would be a disaster; that having to encourage teen-agers to get part-time jobs would blight their "carefree youth"; that having to give up the second (or third) TV set in the family would crumble family harmony.

Ms. Hardy believes people may have turned to "things" to fill major gaps in their lives. "You may buy more gadgets for the house or clothes you don't need because you feel bored or frustrated," she points out.

"But once you set your priorities straight," she continues, "you can give up a vacation trip to remodel part of the house into a small apartment for Granddad — who shouldn't live alone any more — or to pay tuition for night classes that could lead to a better position."

Your job worries shouldn't loom so large once you're able to tighten your belt when you need to, Ms. Hardy explains.

Americans' "work ethic" has led most of them to tie their identity almost entirely to their jobs, says Ms. Hardy, who believes this is a mistake.

"It really doesn't make sense to feel that you've become a nobody the minute you lose a job," she says. "You have exactly the same skills you had before the boss told you he had to let you go."

One remedy which Ms. Hardy suggests for this vulnerable "eggs in one basket" philosophy is to develop twin or triple identities off the job. "Cultivate a caring atmosphere in your block by showing genuine concern for your neighbors' problems and by getting them together for summer picnics," she urges. "Or volunteer to lead your child's Scout troop or other church or youth groups. You'll relax as they help you get reacquainted with the child in yourself.

"Cultivate a hobby such as woodworking or weaving which could provide extra income. An economic crunch won't be as likely to topple you if you put down emotional roots," Ms. Hardy says. "If you learn to savor small moments like the song of a cardinal or the spontaneous laugh of a child, you'll have your security blanket."

Golden class reunion held

The one and only class reunion of Midland High School's graduating class of 1930 was held this weekend.

Out of the 44 graduating, 23 class members were in town for at least one of the scheduled functions held Friday and Saturday. All but two, Isabelle Goldstein and Laura Helen Sowell, of the graduates were contacted about the reunion. Fifteen of the members still live in Midland County and 10 are dead.

Of those attending the reunion, 14 went to college with four receiving their degrees and two receiving their Ph.D.'s.Two went to business college.

Six of the 44 graduates attended Midland schools from the first grade. They are Bush Elkin, Wright Cowden, Addilese Haag, Alta Heidelberg, Juanita Johnson and Lonnie Smith.

The classmates had a chance to get reacquainted at a punch party held in the home of Mary Belle Pratt Speed Friday and Saturday was full with get-togethers all day and into the evening.

Four Midlanders were mainly responsible for the class reunion, Mrs. Ray Parker, Mary Belle Speed, Mrs. C. C. Thomas and Mamie Dell Smith. These women formed a committee to try and reach the other class members.

When asked why this is the first reunion the class has had, Mrs. Thomas said, "Nobody ever suggested it. The class president was killed early in a oil well accident and the president is usually the one who starts the ball rolling for a reunion."

Old city directories, probate records, colleges ex-student associations, calling people and having a course in genealogy helped locate the graduates, added Mrs. Thomas.

The 1930 Commencement Sermon, now known as baccalaureate, was held Sunday, May 18, at 11 a.m. ; class day exercises were at 8 p.m. Wednesday, May 21; and graduating exercises for the class of 1930 was at 8 p.m. Thursday, May 22.

Potential victims of crib death have help

By NANCY KERCHEVAL
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Sudden infant death syndrome. Crib death. A mysterious night stalker that last year claimed 8,000 innocent victims as they quietly slumbered.

When I was told my newborn son, Nathaniel, was a potential SIDS victim, I thought each time I looked at him might be the last time. Now Nathaniel is 4 months old and I'm confident things will be OK.

SIDS is the No.1 cause of death of infants in some U.S. communities. No one knows why the babies die, but Dr. Alfred Steinschneider — director of the SIDS Institute at the University of Maryland Hospital — and his staff are working to find a cure.

Nathaniel is among the 10 percent of 1,000 babies tested at the SIDS Institute who "flunked" his sleep study test. After his sleep was monitored for two hours, the test showed he stopped breathing for periods of eight seconds. Those episodes of apnea were too frequent, the doctors said.

SO AT THE age of one month, Nathaniel became a "bionic baby" with brown and green wires connecting electrodes on his sides to a monitor that blinks green lights in time with his breathing and heart beat.

If he should stop breathing for longer than 20 seconds or if his heart rate drops below 80, red lights flash and a warning alarm goes off.

The alarm sounded the second night Nathaniel was hooked up.

My heart raced and I was next to his bed in a second. He was all right, but I've never been so frightened.

The impact on mothers of potential SIDS victims varies. My reaction was shock. I thought Nathaniel was a perfect baby.

STEINSCHNEIDER EXPLAINED THAT SIDS is more prevalent in male blacks or Indians born to very young mothers living in lower socio-economic conditions.

Nathaniel was born to a white, middle-class, 28-year-old mother. The only thing he had against him was that he was male.

Having a baby on a monitor changed our way of life. There's the worry of leaving the baby, once I can find a babysitter willing to take the responsibility. There's the constant lugging around the cigar box-size monitor every time Nathaniel is in transit.

And, of course, there's the ever-present worry that the alarm will sound and no one will hear. Nurses advise parents not to run a vacuum cleaner or take a shower while the baby is sleeping. We finally hooked up an intercom system.

Nathaniel was lucky to be born in 1980. It wasn't until 1972, said Steinschneider, that doctors realized there were apparently healthy, hefty babies who had to be resuscitated by their parents.

"WHAT WAS INTRIGUING about this was that medicine knew about prolonged apnea way before 1972, but the problem was known to occur in low birth weight infants — preemies. We also believed as they got older, to around 5 pounds, it would go away," he said.

When it was found "there were full-term babies in post neo-natal periods who would suddenly stop breathing for no apparent reason — that shot down the other theory," he said.

The National Institutes of Health gave the SIDS Institute a $2.8 million five-year grant in September 1977, which has since been extended six months and increased to $3 1 million.

The first baby was tested July 1978.

The SIDS Institute, as well as studying about half the babies born at the university hospital, also accepts referrals from pediatricians throughout the country.

Midland site of Eagles' 1980 state convention

The Texas State Fraternal Order of Eagles and Auxiliary will have their 1980 state convention Thursday through Saturday in Midland.

National officers expected to attend as guests of the convention are Michael Goffrey of Milwaukee, Wis., investment counselor; W. P. Harper of Dallas, Southwest regional president; Judge William Hatten of Houston, grand tribunal, and B. J. Sims of Odessa, grand trustee.

There will be regular sessions and specialized workshops on particular topics.

Officers for 1980-81 will be elected.

A banquet will be held Saturday.

The state Eagles have contributed to the national Eagles' programs, including the Art Ehramann Cancer Fund, the Max Baer Heart Fund, Jimmy Durante Children's Fund and the Golden Eagle Fund.

Money for these "Big Four" projects were collected through promotion of parties, dinners and other fund-raising events.

There also is the newest Eagles' Care House in Chile, named for Frank Goffia, who served as an overseas' aid agency's international director many years prior to his retirement in 1979. This Care house is one of 30 projects which the Eagles and Care have established jointly in foreign countries.

The Order of the Eagles has been observing 1980 as the Year of the Family and has concluded its drive to finish the Bob Hope High School at the Hughen School in Port Arthur, a facility for handicapped youth. The Eagles also have financed another cottage at the Villages, a home for troubled youngsters in Bedford, Ind.

Directing the state convention will be Erle J. Robertson.

Highlight of the convention will be the presentation of the Bill Ringer Award, which will be given to Gary Wanzong of Houston, president of the Aerie there. This award is presented to state Aeries which have demonstrated excellence in promoting traditional Eagle programs, organizing new local lodges, signing new members and contributions to the betterment of the organization.

Woman gets $6.8 million

DENVER (AP) — A $6.8 million award to a woman who suffered a nearly fatal septic abortion after using the Dalkon Shield marketed by A. H. Robins Co. has been upheld.

A company spokesman said the decision will be appealed.

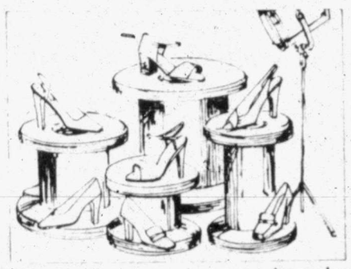

In a decision handed down Monday, Denver District Court Judge Robert Fullerton upheld the multi-million dollar award to Carie M. Palmer.

"Robins' marketing of the Dalkon Shield was characterized by a conscious decision...to market an inadequately tested, dangerous product by unethical and improper means, using false and misleading advertising," Fullerton said.

"The evidence showed that once the company was made specifically aware of the numerous dangerous side effects of the device, including the fact that the Dalkon Shield was causing septic abortions, it suppressed the information, made additional false claims, and then resorted to an effort to cover up the facts," the judge said.

A septic abortion is a miscarriage associated with infection of the uterus.

After a wedding trip to Corpus Christi, the couple will reside in Houston.

Boy Scouts research energy uses for the sun

NEW YORK (AP) — While energy czars juggle world resources, New York City Boy Scouts have been investigating some practical uses for the free energy from the sun.

The Solar Energy Workshop has given thousands of youngsters the opportunity to build and experiment with an array of sun-powered devices to cook meals, heat water and power electrical equipment.

The program, which started in Troop 70 under the direction of volunteer Jesse Slome, who originated it seven years ago, has spread and is now run during the summer for Scouts attending Ten Mile River Scout camps in upstate New York.

Slome, who has trained the leaders, including youngsters who started in the original group and now run workshops, got interested in the field when he did research for a college term paper on solar energy.

"Developing tomorrow's energy sources is everyone's concern, but it is particularly vital for our nation's young people whose world will depend on new and alternative forms of energy," Slome, 27, said.

The Solar Workshop was conceived during the 1973 energy crisis to stimulate the minds of its young participants. "We wanted to look beyond energy conservation," Slome explained, "for a long-term solution which would be meaningful, yet fun for kids to learn."

With an initial investment of $50, the workshop's creator began to build and test an assortment of solar cookers, as well as unusual solar devices such as sun-powered flashlights and radios, in an effort to interest the young audience.

Slome points out that one of the current problems facing acceptance of solar energy by adults is the belief that its use is limited to a few Southern states.

"Convincing a doubting young mind is even more difficult," Slome acknowledged. "A simple explanation of how the sun heats a home is inadequate. When someone actually feels the tremendous heat generated by a small solar oven then the concept, on a larger scale, becomes reality."

Part of the program's persuasive approach involves urban youngsters' cooking hot dogs with the sun in the snow. It is a point dramatically made.

Since its inception, a growing number of schools, summer camps and youth organizations nationwide have adopted many of the workshop's activities. The New York Scout Troop 70, which operates the program year-round, has produced several solar energy booklets and a kit of solar projects which youngsters can build.

Each summer, however, the program shifts into full gear as thousands of youngsters at Scout camps gather to fry eggs sunny-side up, and broil solar kebabs in the noontime sun.

"The most gratifying experience is knowing that what we're doing will have an impact on our country's future," Slome says. "Meeting teen-agers who cooked their first solar meal as part of the workshop, and who are now preparing to major in solar engineering at college, that's a pretty bright moment indeed."

SENIOR PARTIES

Gail Griggs, a Midland High School graduate, was honored with a taco party in the home of Mrs Don Hibbitts. Sheila Hibbitts was hostess.

Guests attending were Leigh Nell Russell, Daci Drilhing and Mrs. Harry Griggs.

Survey taken on fighting inflation

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — While food is the consumer's major concern, home economists responding to a survey seeking inflation-fighting tips overwhelmingly agree that credit, followed closely by clothing, offers better money-saving opportunities.

The survey, conducted by Botsford Ketchum Public Relations, a San Francisco advertising and public relations firm specializing in consumer products, sought to find out how inflation is affecting consumers and how business can best respond.

The "Penny For Your Inflation Thoughts" study was made among members of Home Economists in Business, a professional organization of graduate home economists in consumer-related industries such as foods and nutrition, textiles and clothing, home service, household products and institutional management.

Respondents reported that the majority of questions they receive from consumers are food-related, indicating that this area appears to be the consumer's primary concern and greatest challenge.

Buying sale items was the most frequently given tip for controlling the food budget, followed by better menu planning. Among other suggestions from the 252 responses:

—Use shopping lists; don't buy on impulse.
—Cut down on convenience foods.
—Substitute dairy and other protein sources for high-priced meat cuts.
—Make wise use of food coupons.
—Comparison shop.
—Shop for good nutritional value for the food dollar.
—Buy large cuts of meat and whole chickens; do own butchering.
—Plan menus to serve more than one meal.
—Cut down on serving-portion sizes.
—Serve more casseroles and one-dish meals.

Respondents had few specific suggestions for controlling costs in either credit or clothing but indicated that the best use of credit is no credit buying at all and that clothing costs can be controlled by simply curtailing purchases.

Inflation fighting can be best handled if consumers take inflation personally and use some creativity, according to one respondent who said, "Share everything from carpooling for groceries to bringing your own beverages and appetizers to parties."

Another home economist said, "Exchange your expertise for services needed; for example, mend a bachelor's britches or make a meal in exchange for stereo repair."

Questioned on saving energy, one respondent stated, "It's not the saving of energy that's hard — it's just the getting started."

Suggestions for energy conservation included:

—Don't preheat the oven.
—Turn off unnecessary lights.
—Make use of microwave oven as often as possible.
—Use energy-efficient window and fireplace treatment.
—Carpool as often as possible.

A positive attitude toward fighting inflation was another theory: "It's more fulfilling to rise to the challenge of inflation than to just approach it from the dreary standpoint, 'I have to do it to survive financially'."

Magna Charta Day observed here

The Midland Colony of the Magna Charta Dames met in the home of Mrs. Robert D. Hanley for a traditional observance of Magna Charta Day.

Mrs. George Holt Glass, regent, presided for the patriotic exercises and business session. Mrs. Bruce Pearson led the group in the pledge. Mrs. Hanley presented a gavel to the colony that belonged to Samuel D. Hanley, when he served as the first secretary of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce in 1915, and who purchased 85 acres of land as the beginning of Love Field.

Mrs. Warren Faller presented a program on the renowned Sureties signing the Magna Charta in 1215, who have living descendents.

Guests included Mrs. Max Perry and Mrs. R. L. Hughston.

DEATHS

Albert Daylong

Services for Albert Daylong, 86, of rural Midland will be at 4 p.m. Thursday in Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Jack Skidmore of Fort Worth officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

He died Tuesday in a Big Spring hospital following a lengthy illness.

Daylong was born Aug. 29, 1893, in Chanute, Kan. He moved to Knot and Ackerly and lived in Paris for several years. He moved from Austin to Midland in 1949. He was a retired farmer. Daylong served in the Army during World war I and was stationed in France and Germany. After his discharge, he returned to farming near Big Spring. He was a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors include three sons, Garland Daylong of Austin, Eldon Daylong of Hobbs, N.M., and Earnest Daylong of Bryan; five daughters, Estelle Roberts of Bangs, Violet Thompson of Big Spring, Frances Tatum of Gatesville, Georgia Green of Midland and Eva Hamilton of Washburn, Mo.; 38 grandchildren, several great-grandchildren and several great-great-grandchildren.

Dunn infant

Graveside services for the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Walker A. Dunn, 1109 W. Missouri Ave., were Tuesday in Babyland of Resthaven Memorial Park directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

The child died Tuesday in a Midland hospital.

Survivors include his parents; a sister, Susan Dunn of Midland; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Farned of Fort Stockton and Mona Shofner of Austin; and several aunts.

Alice C. Nesbit

SAN ANGELO — Graveside services for Alice Celestine Nesbit, 86, of Amarillo, sister of Noema Reed and aunt of Mrs C.H. (Marjorie) Benefield, both of Midland, were to be at 2 p.m. today in Fairmount Cemetery directed by Robert Massie Funeral Home.

Mrs. Nesbit died Monday in an Amarillo hospital.

She was born Feb. 29, 1894. She was married to Clyde David Nesbit who was employed by Santa Fe Railroad in San Angelo. The couple lived in San Angelo until his retirement. Mrs. Nesbit was an active member of First United Methodist Church in San Angelo for a number of years.

Other survivors include a sister, two nieces and a nephew.

Antonio Fierro

BIG SPRING — Services for Antonio R. Fierro were to be at 10 a.m. today in the Sacred Heart Catholic Church. Burial, with military honors, will be in Mount Olive Memorial Park directed by Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

Fierro, 68, died Monday in a Big Spring hospital after a long illness.

Fierro was born May 10, 1912, at Big Spring. He was a lifetime resident of Big Spring and a member of Sacred Heart Catholic Church. He was a disabled army veteran, having served in the European Theatre during World War II and was awarded the Purple Heart.

Survivors include two brothers, Martin Fierro of Odessa and Aniceto Fierro of Big Spring; two sisters, Victoria Hernandez and Stella Gonzales, both of Big Spring; and a number of nieces and nephews.

Lloyd R. French

Lloyd R. French, 75, 1408 Community Lane and longtime Permian Basin oil pioneer, died Tuesday morning at his residence following a lengthy illness.

Graveside services were to be at 11 a.m. today in the Greenleaf Cemetery in Brownwood directed by Morelock Funeral Home of Brownwood. Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home handled local arrangements.

Honorary pallbearers were to be William H. Potts; M.T. Stalter; Jim Sheeler; Robert L. Wood; J.C. Williamson; Ross Bruner; Bailey Griffith and Ralph Hamilton, both of Odessa; Richard Johnson of Abilene; and Jack Carlson of Brownwood.

Anonymous donor gives $1 million to Arizona police

PEORIA, Ariz. (AP) — An anonymous benefactor has left $1 million to the police department in this Phoenix suburb of 16,000 people.

"We're making our wish list now," Police Chief Don Cuker said Tuesday. Police were told of the gift last November and the money is expected to be released from probate in an out-of-state court by the end of 1980. The Arizona Republic reported the gift today.

The family of the donor requested that the gift remain anonymous.

Rebels average killing 10 politicians a day in Kabul

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Anti-communist Moslem rebels are assassinatkng members of Afghanistn's ruling pro-Moscow party at an average rate of 10 a day in the capital of Kabul, Western diplomats reported.

Most of the assassination victims are describe as Jow,tnpe members a0officials of the Khalq (People's) Party. But Afghan exiles said the rebels also have killed politicians' relatives with no connection to the ruling party.

The sources said the victims include supporters and opponents of President Babrak Karmal, installed when the Soviets began pouring in tens of thousands of troops to fight the rebels in December.

The sources refused to be identified for fear of reprisals from the Soviet-backed regime, and their reports could not be independently confirmed.

However, underground leaflets known as "night letters" have been warning of reprisals against Kabul residents supporting the country's Marxist government.

U.S. missiles will be based in Britain

LONDON (AP) — Reaction was mixed today in the two English villages picked as bases for a total of 160 U.S.-made nuclear cruise missiles. Some residents vowed to fight the decision, as did anti-nuclear activists who say it makes Britain a prime target for Soviet attack.

The government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher announced Tuesday that it will place the medium-range missiles in the villages of Molesworth and Greenham Common, about 60 miles north and west of London respectively.

The cruises, due to be installed in 1983 under the decision announced Tuesday by Defense Secretary Francis Pym, will be the first land-based U.S. nuclear missiles stationed in Britain, although the U.S. and British navies have had submarine-based missiles in Scotland for 20 years.

The cruises are among 572 new U.S. nuclear missiles — 464 cruises and 108 Pershing II rockets — being located in Western Europe as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's response to the Soviet build-up of SS-20 mobile missiles aimed primarily at Western Europe.

The bulk of the rest of the 572 cruises and Pershings are to be stationed in West Germany and Italy although some are to be placed in Belgium and the Netherlands.

The Kremlin has said installation of the U.S. missiles will disrupt the balance of power in Europe and warned that it will expand its own missiles program. According to the London-based Institute for Strategic Studies, the Soviets have about 690 medium-range missiles, including 100 SS-20s.

A spokesman for Britain's Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament said the decision to station the missiles in Britain "makes our country, already hosts to the biggest single concentration of American nuclear fire power overseas, America's number one forward base, and consequently the Russians' number one target for a pre-emptive or retaliatory nuclear strike."

Joan Ruddock, chairman of the Newbury local branch of the opposition Labor Party covering Greenham, said an opposition campaign would be launched immediately.

"The Cruise missiles are a deadly threat to us all and place this part of England in the front line of any future nuclear exchange," she said.

She added: "I believe it is our responsibility to see that the Cruise missiles do not come to Greenham, not just for the sake of those of us who live in the area but for the sake of Britain as a whole."

Lawmakers on the left wing of the Labor Party also attacked the decision. One of them, Bob Cryer, called it "a distinct escalation of the arms race."

At Greenham Common, where the Cruises are to be stationed on a U.S. Air Force standby base, Christopher Ayling, landlord of the Swan tavern, has pinned up a notice saying: "Any discussion of cruise missiles in this bar is absolutely forbidden."

Earlier this year the defense ministry ruled out U.S. proposals to base KC-135 aerial tankers at Greenham Common on grounds it was too near the Aldermaston atomic weapons research establishment and surrounded by residential areas. The tankers plan created massive local opposition, but not so the cruises.

Chile excluded from joint naval exercises

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a fresh attempt to disassociate itself from Chile's military government, the State Department is excluding Chile from joint naval exercises with Latin American countries.

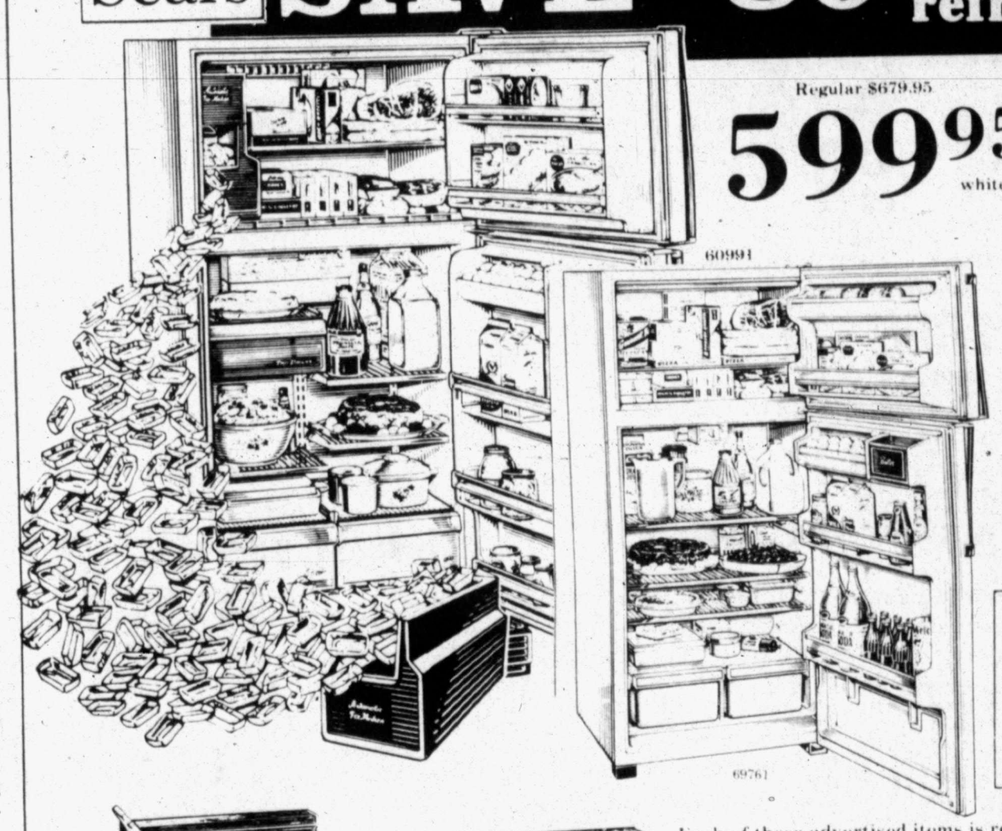

In Santiago, a member of the ruling junta, Adm. Jose Merino, responded by saying the Chilean navy wouldn't participate anyway, "even if they offer us the opportunity."

The U.S. decision was another reprisal for Chile's refusal to extradite three former secret police officials implicated in the 1976 slaying in Washington of Orlando Letelier, an outspoken opponent of the Chilean regime and the exiled former foreign minister under the late Marxist President Salvador Allende.

Declaring "Chile is not subject to the whims of some secondary officials in the U.S. State Department," Merino said Tuesday he has written U.S. Navy officials to say, "While the Soviet Union is demonstrating more interest in showing its flag in our part of the world, the United States is withdrawing from these waters over a banal political question."

New marijuana pills may be made for cancer patients

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government, widely expanding the allowed medical uses of marijuana, may soon make pills containing a derivative of the drug available to cancer patients.

The prescription pills would be sold through hospital and cancer center pharmacies to help chemotherapy patients avoid the violent side effects of the treatment.

The National Institute on Drug Abuse is rushing to make a million pills containing the marijuana derivative THC. The first 500,000 are to be ready by July 1, and if approved as predicted, the National Cancer Institute says they could be dispensed for therapeutic use by early fall.

Dr. John Macdonald, the institute's associate director for cancer therapy, said the pills could help up to 100,000 cancer patients avoid the often-violent nausea and vomiting that frequently accompany chemotherapy.

If the plan goes through, it will be the first time the government has made any form of marijuana available on a broad scale for medical use outside of tightly controlled experiments. Some patients with glaucoma and eye disorder now use it with federal approval in an effort to ease eye pressure.

Use of the pills still must be approved by the Food and Drug Administration, whose Oncology Advisory Committee plans to discuss it at a meeting June 26.

"They will almost certainly recommend its approval," Macdonald predicted.

A FDA spokesman, who asked not to be identified, noted the agency has been trying to encourage efforts to make marijuana more widely available for cancer patients.

Macdonald said the cancer institute hopes to distribute the pills to 400 to 500 pharmacies at comprehensive cancer centers and medical school hospitals around the country, where 2,000 to 10,000 doctors would be authorized to write special prescriptions for the pills for their patients.

If there is no cancer center or medical school in a large area, he said, the institute may seek to dispense pills through a community hospital's pharmacy but not through commercial pharmacies.

Normally, only 2,000 to 3,000 oncologists, or cancer specialists, are authorized to prescribe experimental cancer drugs. But Macdonald said, "We would like to make it available to doctors who are seeing cancer patients no matter what their specialties are."

Twenty-three states have legalized the medical use of marijuana since 1978, but it still is legally available only through the federal government.

About 800,000 Americans are struck by various forms of cancer each year, and 200,000 undergo chemotherapy. About half of them can use conventional drugs to avoid nausea and Macdonald said 2½ years of controlled studies have shown that marijuana has a "good, beneficial effect" on 30 percent to 50 percent of the patients.

Macdonald said five to 10-milligram capsules generally are given to patients, four to eight hours before chemotherapy starts and are continued every four hours until it stops.

The pills do make patients "high," Macdonald said.

Some older cancer patients who might not have used marijuana, alcohol or any other mind-altering drug may be uncomfortable with it and cannot take the pills, he said. Also, it is not recommended for heart patients because marijuana can speed the heartbeat and cause chest pains.

Yale co-ed working on bachelor's degree in Barbie

By MARTIN J. WATERS

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — One of Yale University's "scholars of the house" is studying a doll house.

When she's through, Ella King Torrey will have a bachelor's degree in the Barbie doll, which she views as a cultural artifact showing American society's "incredible consumerism, an obvious obsession with the more beautiful self."

Ms. Torrey is one of about a dozen seniors in Yale's Scholars of the House program, which frees students from formal course requirements so they can pursue approved research projects.

For the past 18 months, Ms. Torrey has been cluttering up her apartment not only with doll houses, but also with examples of the changing models of Barbie — the forever young, shapely and beautiful plastic figurine.

"She certainly is the icon of the 'me generation,'" said Ms. Torrey, "a denial of any sort of tradition."

No other doll before or since has approached Barbie's popularity.

Ms. Torrey, who admits having a Barbie doll as a child, figures that at least 120 million of the dolls — Barbie and her friends and relatives — have been sold since Mattel Inc. of Hawthorne, Calif., introduced the products in 1959.

Sales of the dolls and accessories have topped $1 billion, Ms. Torrey said, and show no sign of slackening.

Ms. Torrey, a 23-year-old Philadelphia native, jokes about her academic endeavor, which she expects to finish next spring.

"I don't have to go to any classes. I just play with my dolls," she said.

Ms. Torrey's research is due to culminate in an exhibition at Yale or in New York City — and eventually a book — on the history, development and meaning of the Barbie doll and its jumble of related dolls, doll costumes, houses, cars, recreational equipment and spin-off products.

What does this doll scholar think it all means?

"Barbie was designed to meet any little girl's fantasy. She's associated with the American Dream. Children are not immune to this. They inherit notions of the American Dream from their parents and from the society at large.

"The doll changes each year. It's always bigger and better and more deluxe. Barbie is one of our heroes, and maybe that's because there are so few real heroes," Ms. Torrey said.

"A society needs something that personifies its dream of itself, and maybe she's it."

Ms. Torrey originally was majoring in art. Then along came Barbie.

"I was very drunk one night in December 1978 with a bunch of friends," Ms. Torrey said in her blunt style. "Someone just said, 'Wouldn't you love to see a book on the Barbie doll?'

"I sort of woke up and said, 'That's it. That's it.'"

Ms. Torrey, drawing on her experience as a museum exhibition organizer in London and Boston during a year in which she took a break from college, decided to organize an exhibition on the Barbie doll — she calls it a "socio-cultural examination of art and artifacts."

She began studying the doll's evolution and collecting objects for the exhibition, with Yale paying some of the costs.

Barbie is surrounded by a changing array of several dozen other dolls, including her boyfriend, the Ken doll. Clothes and accessories range from a $1 set of hangers to the latest model of Barbie's "dream house," selling for up to $150.

Barbie's world has evolved along with her appearance, Ms. Torrey said, explaining: "In 1964, she was sort of the big girl from the small town, going to college, really a rather practical dream. By 1977, she became a superstar, that's what they called it, putting her way out of reach of the average little girl, with no indication of how to achieve the dream.

"Why do we want our idols to be so far away? Are our lives, this society, so unstable that we don't want them near? If the dream is beyond reach, then we don't really have to strive for it."

Mattel has been helping Ms. Torrey, although not financially.

Deadwood losing historic cat houses

DEADWOOD, S.D. (AP) — Deadwood's houses of prostitution have been in business since Wild Bill Hickok was shot to death in a nearby saloon. Now their doors have been padlocked, but some folks in this old gold mining town say they'll fight to keep alive a colorful remnant of the Old West.

More than a century of tradition ended Tuesday when a circuit judge signed an injunction allowing authorities to close the controversial brothels. The houses, which have operated since 1876 while city fathers looked the other way, will be closed at least through the summer.

A hearing on a permanent injunction is expected sometime in September. In the meantime, debate over the issue will continue in the Black Hills tourist town of 2,500.

Supporters of the women who earn their living in the brothels collected more than 1,000 petition signatures in an effort to keep the houses open.

They contend the dozen-or-so houses attract business to the area, and they point out that local madams have always given generously to local charities.

But others say the town can do without the reputation it has earned through the brothels.

"I don't want to take away from what has happened," said resident Thomas Blain of the role of prostitution in Deadwood's history. "But we don't have opium dens anymore, they don't shoot people on the streets anymore. Heritage is a thing of the past, we should leave it there."

Some businessmen have warned that a permanent shutdown will hurt the town financially. One madam estimates her business at $5,000 a week. Annually, the figure approaches an estimated $1 million.

"During hunting season, a lot of guys don't even bring their rifles," said Gary Keehn, manager of the Old Style Saloon, where Hickok died in 1876. Keehn said it's not unsual to get 30 to 40 inquiries a night.

Blain is not swayed by those arguments.

"If they're good for business, maybe we should franchise them like Colonel Sanders," he says.

Local law enforcement officers have been accused for years of ignoring the prostitution. Police Chief Robert Kelley said he is often chided for picking up drunks instead of "cleaning up the cat houses."

But authorities say there has never been a public outcry against the brothels. State officials had to take initial action without local help. Finally, Lawrence County States Attorney Craig Grotenhouse reversed an earlier stand and signed a complaint saying the brothels were a nuisance to the community.

The houses were closed after a May 21 raid.

The injunction apparently has discouraged at least one brothel owner. Rapid City lawyer John Fitzgerald said he plans an auction on behalf of one of his clients.

"Everyone can now have a piece of historic Deadwood," he joked.

Police board debating discipline

BALTIMORE (AP) — A police trial board that found Detective Stephen McCown guilty of breaking departmental rules when he shot an unarmed 17-year-old was deciding today on disciplinary action for the officer.

The board was to consider mitigating and extenuating circumstances before meeting privately to decide on a recommended punishment for the robbery detective, who shot Ja-Wan McGee thinking the youth and a companion were about to rob a pizza parlor.

McGee is paralyzed from the waist down and his family is suing the city and McCown for $15 million. McCown, 33, has been reassigned to administrative duty since the March 20 incident.

The 10-year veteran could be dismissed from the police force or the trial board could recommend a lesser penalty.

A final ruling on the board's recommendations must be made by Police Commissioner Donald Pomerleau. State's Attorney William Swisher declined to prosecute the detective on criminal charges.

After two days of testimony, the board met privately for one hour Tuesday before finding McCown guilty of four violations of departmental rules.

In his closing arguments, prosecutor Millard Rubenstein stressed that McCown was responsible for his actions.

"I think what we have here is a case where a police officer acted too quickly," he said. "Mr. McGee did not have a weapon and therefore there was not imminent danger."

But Thomas Bollinger, McCown's lawyer, argued that his client had to make a split-second decision.

"We can sit here and have the luxury of time...he didn't have that luxury," Bollinger told the trial board. "An officer is taught to act in a certain way. He is taught to be suspicious."

Earlier, McCown testified he was still not certain a robbery was not about to take place the night of the pizza parlor shooting.

He said he watched as Robinson "burst into the store" while McGee stood in the doorway and pulled a metal object from his pants. "At the moment I shot...I was convinced he was drawing a weapon," said McCown.

The object turned out to be a cigarette lighter.

The shooting has triggered considerable racial tension because McCown is white and McGee is black. Black leaders have said McGee would not have been shot if he were white.

"I just hope the commissioner acts as quickly as possible in a manner to satisfy not only the black community but good and honest citizens in the city," Kweisi Mfume, a black city councilman said after the verdict.

Other black leaders said they hoped the trial board's finding would ease tension.

"It's to be hoped that the verdict will increase the amount of confidence that should be in the judicial system and the police department," said Enolia P. McMillan, president of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"The sad thing is that McGee won't walk any more," added Mfume.

Officer won't be suspended in fatal shooting of suspect

CANEY CITY, Texas (AP) — A police officer who fatally shot an unarmed burglary suspect in the back will not be suspended from active duty, police chief Richard Wilson said.

Wilson said the death of Jeffrey Luckado, 18, of Virginia, was being investigated by the Texas Rangers, who would report their findings to the grand jury.

"It's all still under investigation at this time," Wilson said. "The officer is still with the department, and I have no plans to suspend him."

Patrolman Ron Loman fired his 9mm automatic pistol at the suspect without discharging a warning shot or yelling for Luckado to halt, Wilson said. Luckado died at the scene from a wound to the middle of his back.

Wilson said Loman answered all about 2 a.m. from a lounge customer who said someone was breaking into his car. Loman chased the intruder across the parking lot in his patrol car, Wilson said, and then jumped out and began grappling with the suspect.

"The officer got hit in the chest and the lower part of his body," the chief said. "Then the guy got free and started to run into some woods there."

Loman fired the single shot as the suspect ran, officers said. They later learned Luckado was wanted for auto theft in Virginia.

Family kills boyfriend

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A 14-year-old Sacramento boy who was visiting his girlfriend in her bedroom was shot 15 times and killed, apparently by members of her family, police say.

Officers said they found Marvin Keola, clad in a jogging suit, dead about 3 a.m. Tuesday at the South Sacramento home of 15-year-old Nurah Yahya, who bolted the house to stay with relatives at an undisclosed location.

Booked for investigation of murder were her father, Hazaam Yahya, 47, a factory machine operator who came to this country 21 years ago from Yemen; his wife Marie Elasa, 46, a California-born former teacher's aide; and the couple's son, Abdul, 14.

They were being held without bail pending arraignment today.

Preliminary autopsy report says blow instrumental in man's death

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Authorities have ruled that Sherod Luther Hart died when an unknown assailant drove a sharp-pointed instrument into the back of his head as he knelt in the doorway of his lakeside cabin.

A preliminary autopsy report stated that Hart, whose partially clothed body was found sprawled in the doorway of his isolated home, had been hit in the back of the head with a sharp instrument and had also been shot in the left arm.

Hart, 74, could have been killed by the blow or by a combination of the blow and a chronic heart condition from which he suffered, the report stated.

Investigators said Tuesday they had no leads in the case.

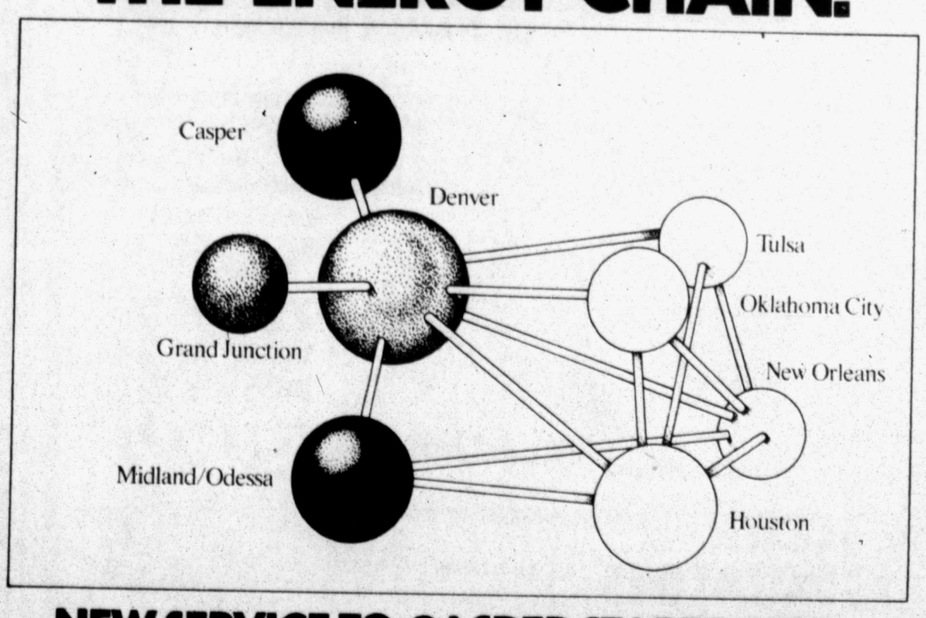

"We don't have anything," said Capt. W.T. Wallen of the Hunt County sheriff's department. "It's like trying to find a needle in a haystack. You know the needle's in there, you just have to find out where it is."

"We're working on every little thing we have, but we just don't have much right now," he said.

Hart's body was discovered Monday afternoon sprawled in the doorway of his isolated cabin by a sheriff's deputy on routine patrol. Hart was not wearing shoes, socks or pants.

From the position of the body, investigators concluded that Hart had been forced to kneel on the front steps of the cabin and place his head on the floor inside the front door.

Burning branches block a road late Tuesday as police, background, attempt to clear several other obstructions pushed into place by rioting crowds near Cape Town, South Africa. Tuesday's violence reportedly left more than 25 rioters dead and 150 wounded. (AP Laserphoto)

Many killed in Cape Town clash

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's police commissioner warned today his men will shoot to kill anyone found looting, burning or endangering lives, just as they did in racial clashes that reportedly left more than 15 dead and 100 wounded.

"This is what had happened in those cases where people had been killed in police action last night," Gen. Mike Geldenhuys told reporters as he defended the reaction of his forces who used shotguns, clubs and rubber bullets against rioters Tuesday in the mixed-race townships around Cape Town.

Geldenhuys did not give casualty figures for the violence, which erupted the day after police wounded 35 persons demonstrating on the fourth anniversary of the bloody Soweto race riots. One newspaper called the latest outbreak the worst since then.

The looting, arson, stone-throwing and vandalism erupted throughout the Cape Peninsula. One mixed-race area known as the Cape Flats was said to be "reasonably quiet" today after being held virtually under siege. The road to Cape Town's D.F. Malan Airport was strewn with burning tires, makeshift wooden barricades and rocks as bands of youths stoned passing motorists.

"People were killed and wounded in clashes between the police and colored people in Elsies River, Bonteheuwel, Ravensmead and Retreat in the Cape Town area today," Capt. Quentin Papenfus of the Police Directorate of Public Relations said. "No further details are immediately available."

The South African Press Association, quoting the Afrikaans-language newspaper Die Burger, said at least eight persons were killed and about 50 wounded in clashes with police in the mixed-race townships. The Cape Argus newspaper reported 14 dead and more than 100 wounded. But SAPA said an official source told the Cape Times "that he believed well over 15 people had died in the shooting in a number of separate incidents."

Sapa, the country's domestic news agency, said all official channels to sources of information about the number of people killed or wounded in the unrest were later closed off to the press on police instructions. The police directore issued a ban Monday night on journalists entering "troubled" areas without special police permission. journalists entering "troubled"

The violence was connected with the fourth anniversary Monday of rioting in the black ghetto of Soweto outside Johannesburg which kicked off an eight-month nationwide upheaval in 1976 and 1977. An official report said at least 575 people died in the troubles, but black journalists estimated the death toll at more than 700.

The first death reported as this tense, white-ruled nation marked the Soweto anniversary was a white police constable who was stabbed to death Sunday night as he helped disperse a group of mixed-race rioters in Cape Town.

Monday night police opened fire with shotguns to put down disturbances in the mixed-race township of Noordgesig adjoining Soweto and in black townships around Bloemfontein, wounding at least 35 persons.

On Tuesday the violence shifted to the Cape Peninsula, with its large population of mixed-race people, or "coloreds" as the white separatist government calls them. Die Burger, published in Cape Town and one of the country's leading Afrikaans newspapers, called the rioting in the colored townships the worst since 1976.

SAPA said the Cape Flats area was under "a virtual state of siege, with crowds of rioters stoning cars, looting shops, burning buildings and blocking roads with barricades of flaming car tires."

Juneteenth, day to be recognized

Juneteenth, hailed by Texas blacks as Emancipation Day and deemed by the governor and the Legislature as an official Texas holiday, has been proclaimed as a "day to be recognized" by Midland Mayor Pro Tem Gordon G. Marcum II.

"This is an historic thing," Juneteenth promoter Roosevelt Campbell echoed in the wake of Marcum's proclamation. "It means a helluva lot" to the blacks, he said of the holiday.

Though long hailed by Texas Negroes as an unofficial holiday, June 19 wasn't until last year authorized as a state holiday.

Juneteenth marks that occasion on June 19, 1865, when Union Gen. Gordon Granger, commander of Texas following the downfall of the South in the Civil War, announced the President's proclamation that "all Negroes are free."

The proclamation signed by Marcum notes that Union President Abraham Lincoln on Sept. 23, 1862, had issued the Emancipation Proclamation, which took effect on Jan. 1, 1863, and proclaimed that "all persons held as slaves within any state...shall thence forward and forever be free." However, Texas slaves did not get the "the word" until a 2½ years later when Granger made the announcement from the shores of Galveston Island.

Texas governmental offices, butapparently none others, will be closed on Thursday in recognition of the holiday.

In Midland, Juneteenth events will include a parade, gospel music and jazz, soul food, bingo playing, and a Black Cultural Exhibit on the grounds of the Tall City Lions' Club Den at Stonewall Street and Indiana Avenue.

—Parade. The 10 a.m. Saturday parade will start at Northgate Shopping Center at Lamesa Road and Nobles Avenue, proceed south on Lamesa Road, east on Front Avenue, south on Lee Street and east on Indiana Avenue to the Lions' Den.

—Religion and song: Religious services and gospel-choir singing will be held from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday, when jazz will take over. Booths featuring barbecue meats and the trimmings, drinks and the such will be provided. The celebration will continue into the night.

The celebrating will resume after church services on Sunday.

Pryor undergoes successful surgery

SHERMAN OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Doctors successfully performed a three-stage operation on critically burned comedian Richard Pryor, a procedure that removed dead skin from the burned upper half of his body, cleared his lungs and will allow him to resume special treatments.

The next step will be skin grafts, but doctors still were uncertain when those could begin on the 39-year-old entertainer.

"It would be the end of the week at the earliest," said Gary Swaye, assistant executive director of Sherman Oaks Community Hospital.

The one-hour, 15-minute operation Tuesday morning "went very well," Swaye said.

Pryor suffered the third-degree burns from the waist up in a fiery accident in his Northridge home June 9.

The primary focus of the operation was "debridement," in which as much of the burned, dead tissue as possible was removed, Swaye said.

Report says no boats coming to Florida from Cuba today

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Coast Guard surveillance showed no boats en route from Cuba to Key West today as federal officials continued to abandon once-busy government processing docks here.

"It's kind of slowed down to a crawl," said Coast Guard Petty Officer Chuck Jones of the Miami operations center. "It may be picking up later, but we haven't seen any (boats) that I know of."

Federal Emergency Management Agency spokesman Florence Gabriel said Tuesday there were possibly 20 boats left at the Cuban port of Mariel.

But in Key West, many of the federal offices and processing centers that once kept officials hopping from boat to boat now have closed down their operations.

The latest surge of Cuban refugees — 105 of them — came aboard three small boats that arrived here Tuesday afternoon. That pushed to 113,946 the total number of refugees who have landed in this country since the boatlift began April 20, said Coast Guard spokesman Henry Painter.

Not a single refugee stepped ashore here Monday. Federal officials said the ragtag boatlift was apparently over — except for "some dribs and drabs in the next few days."

Officials try negotiating again in New Hebrides

PORT VILA, New Hebrides (AP) — Government officials in the New Hebrides will make another attempt Thursday to begin negotiating with rebellious natives who took over the island of Espiritu Santo three weeks ago, a government spokesman said.

The natives rolled oil drums and trucks onto the Espiritu Santo airfield to prevent government negotiators from landing their plane on the island Tuesday, but rebel leader Jimmy Stevens later proposed preliminary talks aimed at beginning negotiations.

"I'm not placing any hopes on it," said Home Affairs Minister George Kalkoa. "If it all falls on the negative side we will have to use force. We will sit on the backs of Britain and France and say 'are you going to help us or not?'"

Kalkoa said the arrival of British troops in Vila has sparked anti-British feelings in the capital city. "This is the start of it," he said, referring to posters that said "Walter look out — British army go home." "Walter" is Chief island Administrator Walter Lini.

The slogans, daubed on roads, sidewalks and traffic signs overnight, protested the presence in the capital of 200 elite Royal Marime commandos, brought to the island at the request of the New Hebrides government.

The French have protested the presence of the troops and withdrew a force of 55 gendarmes they sent to the island last week.

Kalkoa blamed the French for encouraging the natives on Espiritu Santo to block the airfield Tuesday, saying French Resident Commissioner Jean Jacques Robert was trying to obstruct negotiations in an effort to stall independence for the islands, scheduled for July 30.

The island chain has been jointly run by France and Britain for 74 years.

Kalkoa accused Robert of conducting what he called a "secret war" to get French supporters into the government of the island.

He also accused Robert to trying to keep the island under French protection similar to the status of the large French possession of New Caledonia, approximately 250 miles to the southwest. He said the French were afraid the rebellion on Espiritu Santo would inspire islanders in New Caledonia to seek independence for their nickle-rich island.

Afghan thwarted in suicide attempt

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The puppet president of Soviet-occupied Afghanistan, Babrak Karmal, was stopped by his security guards in an unsuccessful attempt to kill himself last Friday, Radio Pakistan was quoted today by Indian news agencies.

The broadcast monitored here quoted reports from Afghanistan as saying Karmal was a virtual prisoner of his Russian advisers and his personal staff including cook and driver were Russians.

The report could not be independently confirmed. Several diplomatic sources here said they had not heard the report from their embassies in Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan.

An insurgent group based in Peshawar, Pakistan, reported today a Soviet armored column fought its way out of an ambush by Afghan rebels in the Sultani Valley with the help of pro-government Afghans. The column was trapped two days in the valley, about 45 miles west of the Afghan-Pakistani border, according to a spokesman for the National Islamic Front of Afghanistan.

The spokesman said 25 insurgents were killed before the fighting ended Sunday. He quoted participants as saying they saw 50 Soviet troops and pro-regime Afghans wounded or killed during the battle.

Western diplomats in Islamabad, Pakistan, reported that ani-communist Moslem rebels are assassinating members of Afghanistan's ruling pro-Moscow party at an average rate of 10 a day in Kabul.

Most of the assassination victims are described as low-ranking members and officials of the Khalq (People's) Party. But Afghan exiles said the rebels also have killed politicians' relatives with no connection to the ruling party.

The sources said the victims include supporters and opponents of President Karmal, installed when the Soviets began pouring in tens of thousands of troops to fight the rebels in December.

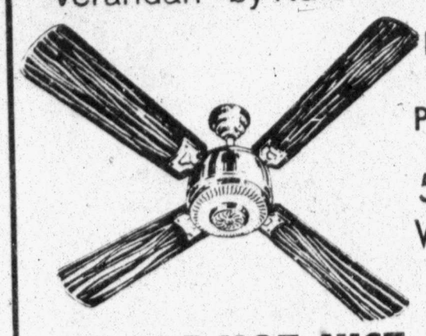

The sources refused to be identified for fear of reprisals from the Soviet-backed regime, and their reports could not be confirmed.

However, underground leaflets known as "night letters" have been warning of reprisals against Kabul residents supporting the country's Marxist government.

The leaflets said Karmal's Marxist regime, the third in little more than two years, survives only because of support provided by Soviet troops sent to help crush the Moslem rebellion.

Disco queen marries

NEW YORK (AP) — Disco Sally, the fast-talking, 80-year-old queen of Manhattan nightlife, wore white tennis shoes and danced the night away at her wedding to a 28-year-old dancing pal of two years.

Sally Lippman became the lawfully wedded wife of Yiannis Touzos, who dabbles in the "export business," at the stroke of midnight Tuesday.

The two, in matching pantsuits, said their vows after bouncing to the "wedding march" beat of Pink Floyd's "We Don't Need No Education."

The wedding — the second for the disco queen — took place at New York's newest glitter palace, the Magique discotheque, which was filled with bunches of white linen flowers and strewn with white rose petals for the occasion.

Mrs. Lippman, a former lawyer, wore a white satin pantsuit with black piping, a heart-shaped white satin cape and her favorite dancing shoes, white Nike sneakers. The groom's disco footwear was white Capezio dance slippers.

Civil Court Judge Bruce Wright conducted the non-sectarian ceremony as hundreds of wildly dressed Disco Sally fans, who paid $15 admission, watched the wedding and danced the night away.

The 4-foot, 10-inch bride, who was given away by her 6-foot, 6-inch bodyguard, was widowed in 1975 after a 50-year marriage to a man who, she said, hated to dance.

Sconiers' hot bat plagues Midland

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

If Daryl Sconiers hit everywhere like he does in Cubs Stadium, he'd be leading the American League in batting. Since he doesn't, he has to be satisfied with leading the Texas League at the moment.

After Sconiers powered a second inning homer and a third inning triple, the lefthanded swinging first baseman from Montana, Calif., was 15-for-19 at Cubs Stadium this year.

Sconiers and right fielder Mike Bishop stirred the cup in El Paso's 20-hit attack as the Diablos hung on to outgrit the Midland Cubs, 12-10, Tuesday night as the two teams began their battle for third place in the first half West Division race.

By breaking out of a one-run-in-19 innings drought, the Diablos pulled into a tie for third with five games to go, the next one at 7:30 p.m. tonight at Cubs Stadium.

Sconiers, signed out of Orange Coast Junior College in Costa Mesa, Calif., as an 18-year-old four years ago, batted .288 with 11 homers in Class A ball at Salinas last year, but is flirting with a league-leading .380 average this year.

"It's a case of holding my body back and I use my hands better than a year ago, they are much quicker," he explains his improvement despite the jump to AA. "As for Midland, I like the park. The infield is fast and the ball goes through in a hurry, but the big thing is the lights."

El Paso Manager Jim Saul marvels, "He's got something like 35 doubles already and the league leading total last year was 38."

SCONIERS and Bishop, with two doubles and a single, knocked in six runs between them as El Paso jumped to an 11-3 lead, their high run total for the season, after four innings, "but I knew with our pitching, it was a long way from over," said Saul.

The Cubs rallied for a run in the sixth, then knocked starter Bob Border, now 2-8, out of the box with four runs in the seventh and really made things uncomfortable for the Diablos in the eighth when Tom Grant boomed a two-run homer over the fence in left to close the gap to 12-10. However, lefthander Charlie Phillips came in to get the final three outs.

AS IT turned out, the difference for the Cubs may have been the third inning when they scored three times and could have had more if things had gone their way. For example, with runners on first and second, Mike Shepston blooped a ball into right. Bishop failed to make a shoestring catch, but got the runner on a force play at second. Scott Fletcher doubled home two runs, but became the second out trying to steal third, so when Dave Stockstill drove his bases loaded fly to center and Tom Brunansky made a one hand falling catch going away from the plate, it was the third out instead of another run.

Henry Mack started and walked only one, which was good, but gave up 11 hits in 2⅓ innings, which was bad. Newcomer Paul Semall was raked for five runs in the fourth, but then retired 10 in a row.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Herman Segelke, 4-4, goes against El Paso's Steve Brown, 6-6, tonight. Segelke, relegated to the bullpen, got a chance to start in San Antonio and responded with eight innings of five-hit ball in a 4-1 win...Lefty Tom Spino saw action in relief, the first time since leaving a game during the last homestand with a finger blister. "I never had a blister before in my life, but this year I learned to throw a slider and that did it."...After walking Sconiers purposely in the fourth, Semall got Daryl on a called strike in the sixth. "I was guessing," says Daryl. "He threw me two sliders for strikes and I was looking for an off speed pitch and he came in with a fastball."...In addition to Bishop, Rick Adams and Tom Bhagwat had three-hit nights for El Paso, Bhagwat contributing two doubles.

Ninth inning homers sink Pirates, 4-3

By The Associated Press

The Cincinnati Reds had their backs to the wall. So did Pittsburgh left fielder Bill Robinson ... looking up at ninth-inning home runs by Johnny Bench and Ray Knight that lifted the Reds to a 4-3 victory over the Pirates Tuesday night.

"Gosh, we needed it. We needed a performance like that," said Bench, who capped a 4-for-4 game by hitting a screwball off reliever Enrique Romo for the homer that tied the score.

Knight, the next batter, was guessing that Romo would throw a fast ball. He guessed right.

The sudden triumph ended Cincinnati's three-game losing streak and kept the third-place Reds within four games of the National League West-leading Houston Astros, who defeated the Chicago Cubs 7-1, and one game behind the Los Angeles Dodgers, who bowed to the Philadelphia Phillies 6-5.

The Pirates took a 3-0 lead against Cincinnati on Dave Parker's RBI single in the first inning and two runs in the third on an RBI double by Willie Stargell and a throwing error by Cincinnati shortstop Dave Concepcion.

The Reds began their comeback against Jim Bibby with two runs in the fourth on an RBI double by Knight and Junior Kennedy's sacrifice fly.

"It's good for the character of the ballclub to come back like that," said Bench, who also had three singles. "I think it makes believers out of people."

"We've been going downhill and I just hope this picks us up," added Knight.

Phillies 6, Dodgers 5

Eighth-inning singles by Larry Bowa, Manny Trillo and pinch hitter Greg Gross produced the winning run. The Dodgers led 5-3 entering the seventh but the Phillies tied the score on Pete Rose's bunt single, a walk to Mike Schmidt, Greg Luzinski's double and Bob Boone's grounder. Solo homers by Ron Cey and Dusty Baker and a three-run shot by Steve Garvey accounted for all the Los Angeles scoring.

Expos 2, Giants 1

Woodie Fryman pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the eighth inning to save the victory for David Palmer as Montreal ended a three-game losing streak. The Expos dealt Vida Blue, 9-3, his first loss since May 5 after seven straight triumphs. They scored in the second inning on singles by Warren Cromartie, Bob Pate and Ken Macha and Jerry White homered in the sixth for what proved to be the winning run.

Padres 2, Mets 1

Gene Richards singled home pinch runner Paul Dade with two out and the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth inning. With one out, Bill Fahey singled off the glove of loser Tom Hausman. Dade ran for Fahey and moved to third when third baseman Elliott Maddox fielded Dave Cash's grounder and threw wildly trying for a force at second. Pinch hitter Tim Flannery was given an intentional walk to load the bases and Gene Tenace, another pinch hitter, struck out before Richards slapped the first pitch past short.

Cardinals 3, Braves 2

Ted Simmons, who hit a solo homer in the first inning, doubled home the winning run with one out in the bottom of the ninth following Garry Templeton's single, a sacrifice and an intentional walk to Keith Hernandez. The teams had been tied since Dale Murphy hit a two-run homer for the Braves in the third.

'Dead arm' beats Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — J.R. Richard didn't have much time to think about his string of scoreless innings which ended quickly Tuesday, but that's about all the success the Chicago Cubs had as Richard and Joaquin Andujar pitched the Houston Astros to a three-hit 7-1 victory.

Doubles by Ivan DeJesus and Bill Buckner in the first inning put an end to 32 scoreless innings for Richard, which included three straight shutout victories.

"It's over, no sense in worrying about," said Richard. "Sure I thought about it and I thought about Don Drysdale's record (58.2 innings and six consecutive shutouts in 1968), but all I can do now is start over again."

Richard, 9-3, didn't allow another hit and struck out eight before leaving the game after five innings and Andujar finished to earn his second save. Andujar allowed one scratch hit, an infield single by Jerry Martin with two outs in the ninth. Richard complained of a "dead" arm and didn't start the sixth, but insisted it was nothing to worry about.

"I don't think I'll miss a turn," said Richard. "I like to finish what I start, but there's no need to go out and hurt myself because of one ballgame. Anyway, that's why we have a bullpen and it's a darn good bullpen."

The Astros jumped to an early six-run lead. They scored three in the first on a single by Enos Cabell and a run-scoring single by Alan Ashby and they added three more in the second on Jose Cruz's No. 3 homer.

Richard doubled in the third and scored on a single by Terry Puhl, who then stole second. Puhl's steal with a six-run lead incensed the Cubs.

When Puhl came to bat in the sixth, reliever Doug Capilla hit him in the back with a pitch and later said, "I didn't want to hit him in the cocoanut. But if I had missed, I would have thrown at him again."

Andujar then sent Mike Tyson sprawling in the seventh and when Andujar came to bat in the eighth, he was forced to hit the deck on a pitch by Bill Caudill.

Umpire Gerry Crawford warned Caudill, who proceeded to strike out Andujar, who also received a warning by Crawford.

"Id have gone after him again, but Im not a rich man," said Caudill, aware that another brushback pitch would cost him a fine.

"The umpire told me not to do it," said Andujar of possible retaliation, "or I'm out of the game."

Cubs Manager Preston Gomez admitted he had ordered Capilla to throw at Puhl and Caudill to throw at Andujar.

"If they get fined, I'd pay the fines," said Gomez, apparently trying to rouse his club, which has lost 11 of its last 15 games.

Morris tames Milwaukee

By The Associated Press

For a while, it was "no sweat" for Detroit Tigers' pitcher Jack Morris.

Then things got better.

"When I was warming up in the bullpen, I felt like I had nothing," the right-hander said Tuesday night. "But after I broke a sweat, I felt I was going to pitch a good game."

He did — a five-hit beauty for his second major league shutout and second consecutive complete game, helping the Tigers to defeat the Milwaukee Brewers 3-0.

The only run the Tigers needed to halt the personal three-game winning streak of Milwaukee left-hander Mike Caldwell came in the first inning — and it was unearned. Third baseman Don Money booted Jim Lentine's leadoff grounder. Lentine then took third on Alan Trammell's single and scored on Steve Kemp's sacrifice fly.

Trammell drove the final two nails in the Brewers' coffin with a homer in the eighth inning after Lentine had walked.

Yanks 8, Mariners 2

Dennis Werth, a sometime player with the Yankees, drove in three runs to help New York Tom Underwood post his sixth straight win.

"I'm used to the role of coming off the bench," said Werth, a right-hander who plays only against left-handers. "I even did it down in the minors."

Werth is batting .412 in 22 games with eight RBIs on 14 hits. "It's my job to produce," he said. "I'm glad for the opportunity. There are a lot of everyday players around here."

Twins 8, Blue Jays 6

John Castino drove in three Minnesota runs with a single, a double and a squeeze but and Doug Corbett pitched 4⅓ innings of scoreless relief to drop the Blue Jays into last place in the AL East.

Corbett, a 28-year-old rookie right-hander, is 4-2, has six of the Twins' eight saves and a 1.96 earned run average.

Orioles 5, Angels 3

Baltimore's Al Bumbry hit a two-run homer — barely — in the seventh inning which saddled the Angels with their seventh straight loss.

"I thought he caught the ball," Bumbry said after watching center fielder Bob Clark come within a whisker of a spectacular, leaping catch. "But when I saw him get up and not throw the ball back in, I knew it was a homer."

"I hit the fence about the same time the ball hit my glove," said Clark, who ran into the barrier in an attempt to get the line drive. After I looked into the glove, I knew where it was."

Reds Sox 6, A's 2

Carlton Fisk capped a four-run fifth inning with a two-run double and Mike Torrez scattered seven hits to help Boston beat the A's and give the Red Sox their seventh victory in eight games.

After Rickey Henderson's leadoff single in the first inning, Torrez retired 13 successive batters before Jeff Newman homered in the fifth inning.

White Sox 5, Indians 3

Two Cleveland errors, two walks and a passed ball gave Chicago the tying run in the eighth inning, then Todd Cruz's two-out, bases-loaded single in the same inning gave the White Sox their winning margin. Dewey Hoyt, just called up from the minors, helped halt the Indians' five-game winning streak, picking up his first major league victory with 2⅔ innings of scoreless relief.

Rangers find another 'Quirk' in downhill path

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The bases were loaded and the score was tied in the bottom of the ninth and Jamie Quirk knew he might never come this way again.

"I don't get many chances like that and I didn't want to blow it," said Quirk, a left-handed hitter and seldom-used utility infielder whose sense of humor has never flagged despite his flagging career.

After fouling off five or six pitches on a 1-2 count against flame-throwing Texas righthander Jim Kern, Quirk swung at an inside pitch and cracked his bat. He retrieved another, wiped pine tar on the handle, and stepped back into the box. After still another foul, he lifted a fly ball into medium center field and pinch runner German Barranca raced home from third to give the Kansas City Royals a 3-2 victory.

"I knew he was going to stay inside and try to jam me, because that's the best way to get a ground ball and a play at the plate" said Quirk. "I was just trying to hit a fly ball to the outfield. I kept telling myself, 'Don't swing at a ball. Just swing at strikes."

Willie Aikens singled off starter Gaylord Perry, 3-6, leading off the ninth and Amos Otis greeted reliever Kern with an opposite-field double, sending pinch runner Barranca to third. Still with none out, the Rangers elected to walk Clint Hurdle and face Quirk.

"I was a little bit surprised they didn't bring in (lefthanded Sparky) Lyle to pitch to me," Quirk said. "I guess they figured it was best to let me come to bat and goof up."

Breaking the bat turned out to be a lucky break, he said.

"I was glad he broke the bat because it didn't have enough pine tar on it. And in the American League you can't go back for more."

Quirk was filling in at third base for injured all-star George Brett. Earlier in the season he spelled all-star catcher Darrell Porter.

"In April they asked me to replace Darrell Porter, then comes June and they ask me to replace George Brett," said Quirk. "You can't do either one, so I figured I'd better win the game."

Perry scattered nine hits before he was relieved by Kern.

"I don't know what Gaylord's problem is," said Ranger Manager Pat Corrales.

Duran-Leonard fight should be staged in hospital ward

MONTREAL (AP) — A strenuous, two-hour heart checkup undergone by Roberto Duran and Sugar Ray Leonard's announcement that he had had a virus on and off for a week have fired the speculation and rumors that are a part of any major fight.

And their scheduled 15-round bout Friday night at Olympic Stadium, for Leonard's World Boxing Council welterweight championship, is a major fight on the key levels of money, fan anticipation and skill of the fighters.

"There will be a press conference to explain why he will not be with us this afternoon," was the announcement over the public address system Tuesday at the Paul Sauve Centre where Duran was to train.

REPORTERS AND cameramen started to hustle and push their way to the site of the news conference when Duran made a dramatic entrance, quickly turning the boos of disappointed fans into cheers.

Dressed in snow white togs, the Panamanian shadow-boxed for several minutes while bantering with the crowd, then put in several strenuous minutes of rope-skipping. He left the arena, his arms raised in a sign of triumph, a picture of health.

A few minutes later, at a news conference not attended by Duran, it was announced that an EKG given the challenger last Thursday had not satisfied the Montreal Athletic Commission and that he had undergone a two-hour examination Tuesday morning at the Institute of Cardiology here. That information was quickly followed by the announcement that Duran was in perfect health.

About 1½ hours earlier, Leonard said at a press conference following a light workout that "I had a slight virus, nothing serious. I had it on and off for about a week, but it's no problem now. I had no fever at all, just a little sore throat. That's all. It's no problem now."

Leonard said his weight was fine, about 148, just one pound over the welterweight limit, but that he had been down to 143 last week and felt weak. He took a brief break from working out.

AS FOR Duran, Bob Arum, co-promoting the closed circuit telecast, said, "Duran's EKG proved to be inconclusive. Some of the squiggly lines weren't right."

Noone seems to be sure why, but Dr. Guillermo Gonzalez, a leading cardiologist from Panama, said after Tuesday's intense examination, "There was no sickness, just a doubt. And that doubt was cleared to our satisfaction."

Gonzalez was called to Montreal by Carlos Eleta, Duran's manager. One source said Eleta called on Gonzalez because "Carlos thought maybe somebody was trying to pull a fast one." The statement was not explained.

"The doctor claimed Duran was so strong he broke some of the instruments," Arum said. And during his brief workout, Duran certainly showed no signs of physical or mental stress.

Duran has worked regularly since the faulty EKG last Thursday and Monday, on his 29th birthday, the former lightweight champion went through a hard workout that included four rounds of sparring before 5,000 people at the Place des Jardins.

Arum, who is co-promoting the closed circuit telecast with Don King, said closed circuit ticket sales were doing so well that he wished there were more locations. There are 1.6 million seats at 310 locations in the United States and Canada, according to Arum, who also said the live gate ticket sale passed 30,000 Tuesday.

THE OLYMPIC Stadium seats 77,263 for boxing. It is calculated that 41,000 tickets must be sold for the Olympic Installations Board, operator of the stadium, to break even. A sellout would bring a game of $7.5 million.

The Olympic Installations Board paid $3.5 million for the rights to the live gate, and tmat $3.5 million went to Leonard. With his share of other revenues, Leonard could gross a record $8 million to $10 million, according to Arum. Muhammad Ali's biggest payday is believed to have been the $6 million he got for fighting Ken Norton in New York's Yankee Stadium in 1976. Duran is expected to clear about $1.5 million.

Brother-sister act dominates TAC

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Coached by their parents, Carl and Carol Lewis of Willingboro, N.J., captured three first-place finishes in The Athletic Congress' ninth annual National Junior Track and Field Championships.

Carl Lewis, a University of Houston freshman, won the 200-meter dash in 20.66 seconds Tuesday night and the 100-meter dash in 10.16 seconds Monday night.

THE LAST time an athlete topped both events in a national juniors meet was in 1976 when Dwayne Evans won both on the way to taking bronze and gold medals in the Montreal Olympics.

Lewis, whose parents coach rival track clubs, won the National Collegiate Athletic Association title in the long jump a week and a half ago at Austin, Texas. He decided not to compete in the long jump in the juniors meet, fearing an injury before the U.S. Olympic Trials beginning Saturday in Eugene, Ore.

His sister won the 100-meter hurdles in 14.20 seconds Tuesday night.

Seven meet records and a high school record fell during the two-day event at the University of Tennessee's Tom Black Track.

On Tuesday night, defending champion Leslie Deniz, of Gridley, Calif., hurled the discus 174 feet 10 inches to be her own meet record of 166 feet 8 inches, set a year ago at Bloomington, Ind.

DENIZ, 17, is the national junior record holder with a throw of 175 feet 10 inches in Los Angeles in May 1979. She had a throw of 178 feet 8 inches in April at a hometown meet, but it was disqualified as a national high school record because not enough officials were present.

"I still want to hit it again before the summer is over," Deniz, an Arizona State signee, said of the throw. "Personally, I think it stinks. Any time you thrown a record and it's measured with a steel tape, I think it should count."

The Ambler Olympics Club of Philadelphia set a meet record in the women's 1,600-meter relay with a time of 3:41.17, 3-100 of a second ahead of the old record set by the Adams Track Club of Brooklyn in 1976.

Timothy Lewis, related to Carl Lewis, broke his own meet record in the 10,000-meter walk. The New York Athletic Club member from Clifton Park, N.Y., completed the walk in 46:50.6, bettering the 48:12.2 mark he set a year ago in Bloomington, Ind.

Defending champion John Zishka, of Lancaster, Ohio, ran 5,000 meters in 13:55.65 to break the old record of 14.11.8 set in 1975. It was shared by Alberto Salazar of Boston and Ralph King of North Carolina.

ON MONDAY night, Steve Stubblefield of Kansas City, Kan., bettered his previous best vault by three inches to set a new high school pole vault record of 17 feet 6 inches. Joe Dial, of Marlow Okla., who had held the old record of 17 feet 5¼ inches since April, finished in a tie for fourth at 15 feet 9 inches.

Sharon Ware of Berkeley, Calif., standing 4 feet 11 inches at age 16, set a women's 100-meter meet record of 11.34 seconds in nipping defending champion Michelle Glover, of Willingboro, N.J., by 15th hundredth of a second.

Lance Deal of Montana State hurled the discus 187 feet 4 inches to break the previous meet record of 183 feet 3 inches set in 1975 by Southern Cal's Darrell Elder. Defending champion Rodney Wilson of Villanova cleared the 110-meter hurdles in 13.86 seconds to better the 13.89 meet record set in 1977 by world record holder Renaldo Nehemiah.

The junior meet was the last opportunity for men 19 and under and women 18 and under to qualify for the U.S. Olympic trials which begin Saturday in Eugene, Ore.

The top two finishers in each event qualify for the national team that will compete in the Junior Pan Am Track and Field Championships in Sudbury, Canada, in August.

Indians, Pirates gain National LL victories

The National Little League city championship playoff tournament started off with a bang at Henderson Field Tuesday as the North Central Indians and the Mid City Pirates jumped to first round victories.

The Indians took the easiest victory of the day as they slugged their way to a 25-4 win over Western's Midland National Bank. The Pirates won a tough 9-6 decision over Tower's Orioles.

Jim Werner pitched the Indians to victory as Eddie Shumaker, Kevin Parks, Sonny Dykes and Johnny Hewitt helped the offense with doubles in the contest. MNB's Mooney Martinez was charged with the loss.

The Pirates' winning hurler was Dorey Thompson, and that was a big win since the Pirates moved into Thursday's 6 p.m. finals. The Pirates drew the second round bye.

North Central will have to meet the Eastern champions in today's 6 p.m. contest, and the winner will go against the Mid City crew in the finals Thursday.

Scott Mowles doubled and tripled to pace the Pirates' victory. Steven Rochard and David Danley also helped out with doubles and Douglas Hayes added a triple to the winning cause.

The Orioles got doubles from Orlando Luna and Rusa Savage. Luna was charged with the loss.

Wimbledon draw favors Sweden's Bjorn Borg

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Fate has beamed on Bjorn Borg in the draw for the Wimbledon tennis championships, which begin next Monday.

The bearded Swede, Wimbledon's champion for the last four years, will avoid big serving opponents in the early rounds.

The 24-year-old Swede said before the results of Tuesday's draw were declared that he feared early matches against big hitters. He explained they can cause upsets on grass courts, especially at the start of the tournament when players are getting acclimatized.

Not one left-hander of significance and not one player who has beaten him in the last two years was named in his half of the draw.

Borg was drawn against a qualifier in the first round and will not know who he is until the end of the week. In the sgcond round he is likely to play Raul Ramirez of Mexico.

Vitas Gerulaitis is Borg's likely semifinal opponent. But the American has never defeated Borg in 18 attempts.

John McEnroe, seeded to play Borg in the final, drew a first round match against fellow American Butch Walts. If McEnroe avoids upsets, his third round opponent should be Tom Okker of the Netherlands. Okker is a Wimbledon veteran who reached the semifinals in 1978 and the quarters last year.

Harold Solomon, No. 11 seed for Wimbledon, pulled out of the tournament a few hours after the draw was made because of an ankle injury. The 27-year-old American missed last week's London grass court championships at Queen's Club to receive treatment in France, but messaged the All England Club, which runs Wimbledon, that had to withdraw.

A Wimbledon spokesman said Solomon's seeding position will not be filled and that his place will go to a lucky loser in the qualiffying tournament, which is going on all this week at nearby Roehampton.

Of the top players, third-seeded Jimmy Connors of the United States had the toughest draw. He starts off against Richard Lewis of Britain, who has reached the second round only once in five years.

Desfor upsets Virginia Wade

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — A month ago, Diane Desfor was ready to quit tennis.

"I feel like that every couple of months," says the 25-year-old Californian.

She feels differently today — after beating Britain's top tennis star, Virginia Wade, for the second time in a week.

Her latest victory over England's reigning tennis queen came Tuesday in the $125,000 women's tennis tournament at Eastbourne, when Desfor lost three match points in the second set and came back to post a 6-4, 6-7, 6-2 decision.

"I felt I had nothing to lose," said Desfor. "When the three match points went in the second set, I decided just to come out swinging in the third."

Desfor, a psychology graduate from the University of Southern California, defeated Wade in two sets at Chichester last week.

"She played so well," said Wade. "She doesn't play like that against anyone else. On the whole, I played pretty well — but I was never in control."

Wade won the second set on a tie-breaker, 7-3, after coming back from 3-5. But from 2-2 in the final set, Desfor won four games in a row.

"A result like this can obviously shake my confidence," said the 34-year-old Wade, who is seeded No. 7 at Wimbledon next week.

Virginia Ruzici of Romania, seeded No. 12 at Wimbledon, was upset by Wendy White of Atlarta 6-4, 6-1.

Martina Navratilova, top seed for this tournament and Wimbledon, breezed by Tanya Harford of South Africa 6-4, 6-4. Tracy Austin, the No. 2 seed, beat Anne Smith of Dallas 6-0, 6-3.

Andrea Jaeger, a 15-year-old prodigy from Lincolnshire, Ill., trounced 31-year-old Rosie Casals 6-0, 6-3. Maureen "Peanut" Louie of San Francisco scored a 5-7, 7-6, 6-4 triumph over rising West German star Sylvia Hanika.

Craig Morton files libel suit

DENVER (AP) — Denver Broncos quarterback Craig Morton has filed an $11 million suit against the Rocky Mountain News claiming the newspaper libeled him in a headline over a story about a religious film in which Morton appeared.

The suit, filed Monday in Denver District Court, seeks $1 million in compensation for "loss of reputation" and $10 million in exemplary damages. Morton requested that the suit be tried before a jury.

The suit stems from an article which appeared in the News on June 11, with the headline "Blair, Morton Film Leads To Fraud Charge."

The article said fraud and theft charges had been filed against Norman Williams, the man who produced the film and who was accused of bilking an invester in the film.

Morton and the Rev. Charles Blair, pastor of the church which sponsored the film, acted in the production but had no connection with the criminal charges.

U.S. Olympians face cancellations

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A U.S. track and field team may be chosen next week, but the only tests for the American athletes scheduled so far against international competition have been cancelled because of the political situation surrounding the Moscow Olympics.

The Athletics Congress, the governing body for track and field in the United States, announced Tuesday that two invitational meets planned at Philadelphia and Berkeley, Calif., in July have been called off.

"We find the situation so highly politicized that the athletes might not enjoy the positive experience we were hopeful of providing," said Ollan Cassell, executive director of TAC.

CASSELL SAID meet officials at the University of Pennsylvania decided to call off the invitational scheduled July 22-23 there. As a result of that action, Cassell said, TAC also cancelled the other meet scheduled July 17-18 at the University of California.

He said athletes of some 78 nations which had decided not to participate in the Moscow Olympics were invited to the meets by TAC late last week. A number had already accepted, he said.

The American squad in both competitions was to have been made up of the 1980 U.S. Olympic track and field team selected at Eugene, Ore., June 21-29.

Cassell said published reports from Philadelphia that the meet there would have violated International Amateur Athletic Federation bylaws were "totally inaccurate."

"This will not violate IAAF rules," said Cassell. "As a matter of fact, we were certain to schedule those meets so as to not to conflict with the July 24-Aug. 2 dates for track and field at Moscow.

"Moreover, the IAAF has agreed with our position that none of its rules have been violated. The U.S. Olympic Committee voted not to accept the invitation to the Moscow Olympics, and we planned these invitationals in order to provide our athletes and those from other nations who wished to participate with the opportunity for international class competition."

In Philadelphia, meet director Jim Tuppeny, a vice president of TAC, said there "was a bit of confusion about the whole thing. There were some things that happened out there (Berkeley) that have made the thing a political situation."

HE DECLINED to be specific.

"I am disappointed, not embarrassed," Tuppeny said. "At least we're trying to do something to help the athletes."

Dave Maggard, athletic director at Berkeley, said he was "deeply disappointed" at the cancellation. The planned meet at the 22,000-seat Edwards Stadium became a sellout within 24 hours of its announcement last week.

But, almost as soon, opposition to the meet was heard.

According to Cassell: "Comments by politicians within the city of Berkeley and the surrounding area have created an unfavorable climate in which to hold the competition."

Maggard, who went before the Berkeley City Council on Monday night and got a first-hand feeling of that climate, said Tuesday, "I could not give them (the TAC) the kind of guarantees they were looking for."

Holman suspended

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — Marshall Holman has been suspended for 10 weeks and fined $2,500 in a precedent-setting disciplinary action by the Pro Bowlers Association.

The action came as a result of an emotional outburst during the recent PBA Doubles Championships in which Holman kicked a foul line light after a shot.

The fine is the largest in PBA histoy and the length of the suspension is the longest for misconduct on the lanes.

Holman, of Medford, Ore., got the news Monday during the $80,000 Fremont Northern California Open.

"It's a pretty heavy fine," Holman said, but he added, "It could have been worse. It could have been whatever the commissioner wanted. He had the power to expel me if he wanted to. That would have been bye-bye forever."

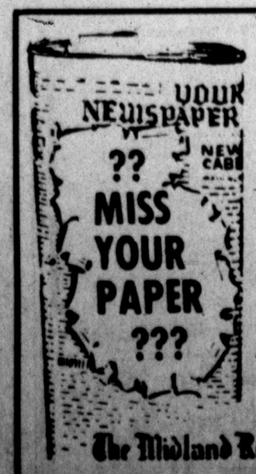

Colorado to watch recruiting

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — A five-point program aimed at keeping the University of Colorado football program from violating any more NCAA recruiting regulations was announced by CU Athletic Director Eddie Crowder Tuesday.

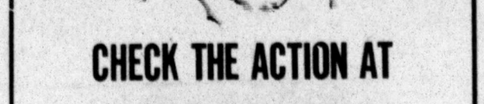

Crowder was docked a month's vacation for being involved in three recruiting violations.

In all, a university committee found 50 of the NCAA's 132 allegations of recruiting violations at Colorado to be correct.

Crowder said he would schedule monthly meetings with all staff members involved in recruiting for review of NCAA and CU recruiting rules and procedures. He added a log will be kept on student-athletes being recruited so the NCAA three-visit rule will not be violated.

Kuhn takes look at Cannon case

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn is looking into protests that have been filed over the New York Yankees' selection of Billy Cannon, Jr., in the third round of this month's free agent draft.

Cannon, a 6-foot-2 shortstop, had been expected to be a first-round draft choice. But just before the draft, his father, a former Louisiana State football star, sent telegrams to all 26 major league teams telling them they were not offering enough money and that young Billy would go to college instead.

When the Yankees picked the high school star from Louisiana on the third round, three teams — the Toronto Blue Jays, California Angels and Boston Red Sox — all objected to the selection.

Their contention was that the only reason that Cannon was available that late in the draft was because of the telegrams sent by his father, and that they were sent to scare off other teams and enable Cannon to be drafted by the Yankees.

"When there's someone that good you're told to stay off and don't draft, you've got to wonder," said Dick Bresciani, a Red Sox official.

The Cannons and Yankees deny that such a deal was struck.

"I talked to people with the Yankees," said the 42-year-old Cannon. "They just wanted to know if he was going to play baseball. We said if the money was right, he would."

Anyone want Mendenhall?

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Waive goodbye to John Mendenhall.

The Giants and their moody, complaining 31-year-old defensive tackle officially parted company late Monday when Mendenhall cleared irrevocable waivers. He is now free to negotiate a deal as a free agent with the team of his choice.

"His contract is terminated," Giants General Manager George Young said.

Young had been trying for months to work out a deal for Mendenhall, although his market value had slipped dramatically in the last year. Mendenhall, the Giants third round pick in 1972 from Grambling, developed a reputation in recent years as a chronic complainer.

The Giants would have settled for a very low draft pick, but there were no takers. Clearing waivers was not a surprise since any team picking up Mendenhall would assume his $115,000 contract. Now, he is a free agent and must work out a new deal with any interested club.

"I'm glad everything is finally over with," Mendenhall said from his antique auto repair shop in Lodi. "Nobody picked me up so I'm not surprised the Giants couldn't work out a deal. I'm a free agent with a chance to go where I want to."

Mendenhall, who enjoyed many fine seasons with New York, was a free agent after the 1977 season but returned to the Giants. A native of Houston, he has recently expressed a desire to play with the Oilers. He demanded a trade three weeks ago after Coach Ray Perkins admitted the club was looking to deal him.

"My whole thing is they were saying they were going to trade me so why not demand it," he said. "I'm happy now, relieved of a lot of things."

So are the Giants, intent on rebuilding with youth, with players who want to be Giants. Mendenhall, at one time the best player on the team, no longer fit into Perkins' plans.

"After sincerely contacting every team, I couldn't say that I was surprised he cleared waivers," Young said. "I was honestly hopeful he would be picked up and be able to continue his career."

Young saw no reason to hold onto Mendenhall through training camp when another National Football League team might develop a need for an experienced lineman.

"The coaches felt he wasn't in their plans," Young said. "We made every effort do what we could. We would rather go with young guys, we felt the same way with quarterback and other positions."

White takes aim on fights

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A "Texas Tough Guys" boxing contest held in Beaumont in April reaped illegal profits for the promoters, according to Texas Attorney General Mark White.

The bouts, which lured inexperienced fighters into the ring for a $1,000 prize, left one man paralyzed and attracted a $14,000 profit, White said.

A suit filed here Tuesday by White asks that the promoters be ordered to pay the 3 percent state gross receipts tax, and civil penalties. State District Judge Jim Dear set a July 9 hearing on the case.

The suit also asks that the promoters be banned from holding any more Tough Guy contests. Bubba Busceme, Dave Smith, Ken Boutwell, and Buddy Gilley were named as defendants.

White said the promoters did not have licenses and bonding required by the Texas Department of Labor and Standards.

The bouts were held on April 4 and 5. Peter LeBlanc, an unemployed Beaumont man, was left paralyzed and with possible brain damage after being knocked out.

White said the promoters had claimed the bouts were endorsed by the Beaumont Sports Association, a non-profit amateur athletic corporation. The profits were to be used for the promotion of amateur athletics, White said.

"However, the association received only $500 from the total net profit, and the promoters split a $14,000 profit in violation of the rules for exempt boxing groups. At no time were the promoters licensed or bonded as professionals, nor were the participating boxers," the release said.

Tom Nissalke

Tom Nissalke to head clinic

Tom Nissalke, Utah Jazz coach, will be one of four instructors from the NBA at the Northwest Basketball Clinics at Midland College July 7-11. Nissalke, after serving as an assistant at Milwaukee, became head coach of the Dallas ABA Chaparrals in 1971-72, moving to Seattle the following season.

In 1973, Nissalke returned to the ABA as coach of the San Antonio Spurs and wound up in Utah in 1975. In April 1976, he became coach of the Houston Roekets. He was named ABA Coach of the Year in 1971-72 and received the same honor in the NBA in 1976-77.

Also assisting in the clinic will be Robert Reid, Houston Rockets; Billy Paultz, Houston, and Don Ford, Cleveland.

Anyone interested in signing up may contact Midland College Coach Jerry Stone at MC (684 7851) or at home (697 5616).

Kingman goes on DL list

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Kingman, who led the major leagues in home runs last year with 48, was placed on a 15-day disabled list Tuesday by the Chicago Cubs because of a recurring shoulder injury.

Kingman goes onto the disabled list effective June 12 beeause the last time he played was June 11 in Houston.

He originally injured the shoulder May 17 against San Diego. He had been in and out of the lineup, and on the 17th in Houston he twice threw out baserunners. In doing so, he apparently aggravated the injury in his right shoulder.

Kingman had appeared in 42 games and had a .298 batting average with 10 home runs and 32 runs batted in.

Replacing him on the roster was left-handed pitcher George Riley, whom the Cubs recalled from Wichita.

Kingman will be eligible to begin playing again for a weekend series against St. Louis beginning June 27.

Milwaukee coaches feel inflation pinch

MILWAUKEE (AP) — All coaches in the Milwaukee public school system were dismissed from their jobs Tuesday in what the school board calls just a routine step in anticipation of readjusting their sports budgets.

Coaches expressed dismay at the news. Officials said the move is unprecedented, but that budget writers hope to avoid any severe budget reductions which would prevent rehiring of coaches in the autumn.

Lois Riley, school board president, said the dismissal notices were issued pursuant to a teachers' contract provision which requires 60 days' notice of dismissal before the start of the next school year.

A spokesman said Superintendent Lee R. McMurrin had recommended there be no budget cutbacks that would leave any coach without a job.

But board member Leon Todd acknowledged that interscholastic sports is "territory for trimming a little fat off the budget."

Riley said the board plans to act next week on budget recommendations designed to meet the fiscal squeeze of rising costs, inflation and restricted revenue.

"This is the tightest year financially in years," she said.

High school football coaches Don Gunderson and Dick Krueger said there have been signs of impending budget reductions affecting costlier sports, especially football.

"It is athletics that always gets picked on," Gunderson said, adding he will urge parents and other coaches to lobby the board against reducing sports.

Krueger complained about the manner in which the dismissal notices were issued, a day after the closing of the 1979-80 school year.

Pat O'Mahar, a teachers union spokesman, said the action "probably alienated a very important group of teachers and will have a major impact on morale."

Todd said he suspects the board will be unable to renew the contracts of all the coaches.

"It is a question of cutting reading and math versus athletics," he said. "We have got to trim athletics equally, or perhaps disproportionately."

However, it is unlikely that any sport will be seriously curtailed in the face of fans' protests, Todd said.

"The public would die," he said.

Penwell Raceway set for runoff

PENWELL — A record 225 entries are expected for the Southwest Bracket championship at Penwell Raceway Saturday with the winners of the seven car and one cycle competition to participate in a King of the Hill runoff for $1,500. Gates open at 1 p.m. and eliminations begin at 7 p.m.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, June 19, 1980

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Versatility is what sets you apart from the crowd, and personal financial gain is possible even when others find money and credit in short supply. Your competence in many different areas can lead to your making several major career shifts before you settle down to your life's work. Sympathetic and generous, you will always enjoy very close personal relationships. Just be careful not to overindulge offspring. In the next few months, romance takes a new and exciting turn. You meet someone who brings out all that is best in you!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Trust mate or spouse's intuition regarding financial matter. Pay no heed to unsubstantiated gossip. One who claims to know everything actually knows little or nothing of the truth.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Give serious consideration to proposition made by younger, less experienced person. Religion may now play a stronger role than usual. Look beyond the obvious when searching for answers.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Use energy judiciously. Work off frustrations at the gym or by taking a brisk walk. Loved one may have special plans regarding the upcoming weekend. Consult mate, spouse before issuing invitation to friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Expect a busy day with many last-minute changes of schedule. Career plans could need some revamping. Live up to your reputation for quick thinking by saving influential associate from embarrassing situation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Diplomacy helps resolve a mid-morning business snag. Complications regarding co-workers could surface. Be careful not to take sides in any office disputes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): More money should be coming in than going out now. Increase profits, income by exerting more effort where it counts. Compromise is the key to the successful conclusion of delicate negotiations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Leave nothing to chance where money is involved! Have lawyer go over contracts. Conservative approach works best with older community leader.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis is on cooperation and good will. A fine day for securing loans, favors. New plan of attack is needed to advance professional plans. Choose allies with care.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Overcome temptation to try to tackle too many things at one time. Work at slow, but steady pace. Lunch with co-worker could give you new insights into the way this person thinks.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Increased popularity and prestige could lead to an exciting employment offer. Try to be less blunt when speaking your mind. Make sure you know what you are getting into when flirting with a business acquaintance!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be realistic about the amount of work that can be accomplished today. Fulfill all promises and meet any deadlines. If a swift decision is requested by higher-up, trust intuition.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Business affairs are more active than usual. Schedule time carefully and postpone any unimportant meetings. Negotiations should go smoothly now. Obstacles to progress seem to melt away.

Recently, there has been something of a brouhaha about who invented point count bidding for contract bridge. To the best of our knowledge, the first publication of a complete point count system of evaluation is in a British book that appeared in 1933. The "Goren" count is based on the Milton Work structure from the days of auction bridge, with the distributional count adapted by a Toronto actuary, William Anderson. We have never claimed to be the originator or the first to publish a point count method, but we do like to think that the simplicity and accuracy of our methods have had something to do with the popularity of the game today.

Besides being a superb mathematician, Anderson was a solid, practical player. He sat West on this hand, and after opening one spade, he heard the opponents climb into game. By today's standards North's decision to make a takeout double was a trifle eccentric—an overcall of two hearts would be adequate.

Anderson seemed to view the enemy auction as a personal affront, because he doubled and led the queen of spades. Declarer won in dummy and immediately led a club, ducked to West's ten.

Now there was only one specific card to play to defeat the contract. If West continued with a spade, declarer would ruff two hearts as entries to his hand for two club ruffs, felling West's ace. The defenders would then get only a trump trick to go with the club.

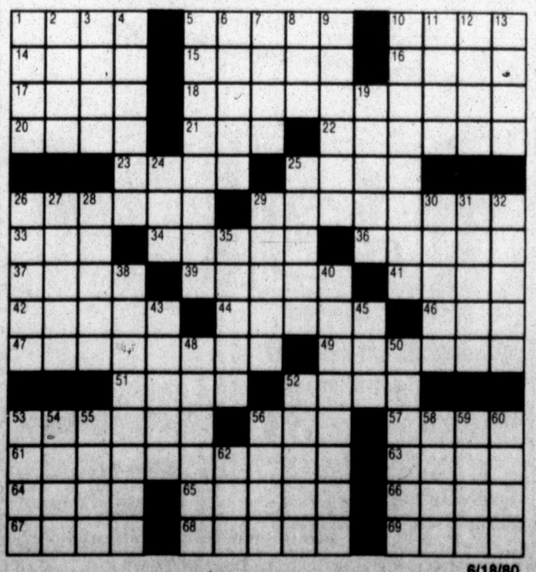

Anderson realized that it was imperative to prevent dummy from ruffing clubs, so he decided to shift to a trump. But the jack would not have been good enough. Declarer would win in dummy and, while he would still have to lose another club, he would not now lose a trump.

The winning defense was spectacular—West shifted to the king of trumps! Declarer was faced with a Hobson's choice: If he drew a second trump, he wouldn't lose a trump trick but he would have to surrender a total of three clubs. If he ruffed a club in dummy, he would set up West's jack of diamonds and now he would have to lose two clubs and a trump.

Have you been running into double trouble? Let Charles Goren help you find your way through the maze of DOUBLES for penalties and for takeout. THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Believe it, speak it, it's yours!

DEAR brothers, the longing of my heart and my prayer is that the Jewish people might be saved.

I know what enthusiasm you have for the honor of God, but it is misdirected zeal.

For you don't understand that Christ has died to make you right with God. Instead you are trying to make yourselves good enough to gain God's favor by keeping the Jewish laws and customs, but that is not God's way of salvation.

You don't understand that Christ gives to those who trust in Him everything you are trying to get by keeping His laws. He ends all that.

For Moses wrote that if a person could be perfectly good and hold out against temptation all his life and never sin once, only then could he be pardoned and saved.

But the salvation that comes through faith says, "You don't need to search the heavens to find Christ and bring Him down to help you," and,

"You don't need to go among the dead to bring Christ back to life again,"

For salvation that comes from trusting Christ—which is what we preach—is already within easy reach of each of us; in fact, it is as near as our own hearts and mouths.

For if you tell others with your own mouth that Jesus Christ is your Lord, and believe in your own heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved.

For it is by believing in his heart that a man becomes right with God; and with his mouth he tells others of his faith, confirming his salvation.

For the Scriptures tell us that no one who believes in Christ will ever be disappointed.

Jew and Gentile are the same in this respect: they all have the same Lord who generously gives His riches to all those who ask Him for them.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Drugs in feeds pose problems

Dear Dr. Solomon: You frequently write about the danger of popping pills indiscriminately; yet I read about drugs being fed regularly to cattle and poultry to help them gain weight. I can understand that eating the meat of animals that have been fed these drugs is not the same as taking the drugs directly, but I have to believe they are having some effect on me. Is there a real problem here, or am I being concerned about a problem that doesn't exist? — Ned.

Dear Ned: You have put your finger on a real problem, one that has concerned the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment (OTA). According to an OTA study, the drugs to which you refer may be contributing to the resistance of bacteria to antibiotics and may pose a danger to humans.

The addition of antibacterial drugs to animal feed is not a new development; it has been going on for more than 30 years. At present, about 60 percent of cattle, 90 percent of swine and veal calves, and almost all poultry are being fed these drugs. Although scientists are not certain how the antibiotics work, OTA notes that the drugs, by killing nonresistant organisms, probably aid the growth of drug-resistant bacteria.

While the extent to which these drugs have compromised the effectiveness of antibiotics in humans is not known, it is a fact that resistance has increased over the past 30 years. For example, while one percent of cases of salmonella were resistant to tetracycline in 1948, 40 percent were resistant in 1973.

OTA's report has been submitted to Congress.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Whenever a co-worker of mine wants to emphasize the value of a specific food, he says it is high in protein. He also insists it is advisable to eat meat at least twice a day in order to stay in top condition. I'm beginning to wonder: How much protein does a person actually need for good health? — Ed.

Dear Ed: According to the National Academy of Sciences, an adult man requires from 60 to 65 grams of protein daily; an adult women, 55 grams. Boys 10 to 18 years of age neet from 45 to 60 grams, while girls within the same age span should have from 50 to 55 grams. And children one to 10 years of age require 25 to 40 grams daily.

Since many foods now carry nutrition labels showing the amount of protein, vitamins, minerals and calories in each serving, you can have at least some idea of your daily protein intake.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Do a woman's calorie requirements change when she becomes pregnant? — Mrs. S.W.

Dear Mrs. W.: A woman's calorie requirements remain unchanged during the first few months of pregnancy. Starting with the fourth month, however, the ususal 2,100 calories a day needed by nonpregnant women of childbearing age should be increased to about 2,400 calories a day.

Northern Ireland has new security coordinator

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Sir Brooks Richard, a former diplomat who is believed to be one of Britain's senior intelligence officials, took over Tuesday as security coordinator in Northern Ireland to control intelligence operations in the strife-torn province.

Richard, 62, replaced 64-year-old Sir Maurice Oldfield, former head of Britain's Secret Intelligence Service, MI6, who is widely believed to be the real-life model for George Smiley, novelist John le Carre's spymaster in "Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy." He is quitting because of ill-health.

Richard has been deputy Secretary to the Cabinet since 1978, where informed sources say he has been coordinator of intelligence and security. He was ambassador in Saigon from 1971 to 1974 and in Athens from 1974 until 1978. He served in the Royal Navy in World War II.

'The Old Scotsman' plans new broadcast ventures

DALLAS (AP) — Gordon McLendon — the broadcast entrepreneur who took the radio industry by storm almost three decades ago with creation of the "Top 40" format — is planning new ventures in motion pictures and the infant subscription television business.

"The Old Scotsman" — the 1950s nickname synonymous with McLendon's broadcasts of sporting events "re-created" with information telegraphed from ballparks hundreds of miles away — last year sold the last station of his once-vast broadcasting empire, which included outlets in Dallas, San Francisco, Chicago, Detroit, Buffalo, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, San Antonio and Louisville.

"I miss air work very much," McLendon said in a recent interview at his Dallas office. "I don't miss radio or television at all. To me, the executive end of that business was always a drag. The only fun part was the on-the-air performance."

McLendon's "Top 40" innovations included giveaway promotions aimed at money-hungry listeners, announcers who quickly earned a place in American slang as "disc jockeys," and ratchet-jawed newsmen who seemingly attempted to set records for the number of stories read in five minutes.

Before that, he gained fame for his "live" broadcasts of sporting events hundreds of miles away. Armed with recorded sound effects, McLendon built the re-created broadcasts into the national Liberty Broadcasting System. That venture was scuttled when the major league baseball owners ganged up to keep Liberty out of their parks.

The entertainment field is still a multi-dimensional outlet for his creative urges, McLendon said, as well as an area of potential profit.

"Radio, after all, is a one-dimensional medium. ... I got tired of trying to be creative in one minute. I decided I wanted to paint on a broader canvas ... television," he said.

But economics, rather than artistic frustration, is the reason McLendon cited for selling his radio interests.

"The advent of FM as a true medium, instead of as an alternative to AM, split the pie in each market," he said. "The biggest of the stations are probably not making as much money as they did before."

McLendon, a major stockholder in Columbia Pictures, is executive producer of a forthcoming film, "Escape to Victory," with Sylvester Stallone, Michael Caine and Max von Sydow.

"We also have an agreement with the Bee Gees for a new picture," McLendon said.

The movie industry may become the most lucrative of all entertainment fields in the 1980s, he said, because of new movie markets.

"If you've got cable television fighting subscription television for movies, fighting the movie theaters for movies and fighting the television networks for movies, it will be a wonderful thing for the motion picture industry," McLendon said.

"He's got to make a pretty bad motion picture not to have a market for it," he said. "If he makes a good picture ... holy mackerel."

The 58-year-old broadcasting innovator recently announced he was venturing into subscription, or pay, television.

McLendon joined Dallas industrialist Clint Murchison's venture — Subscription Television Corporation of America — in the ownership of an STV franchise in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Recently, however, he announced the sale of the Dallas franchise and four other major markets to a California broadcasting company.

But the "The Old Scotsman" said he plans to be on-air host of "Money Reports," a program to be available on the Dallas subscription channel. McLendon said he will talk about investment in precious and strategic metals.

'Brubaker' a true story of convict torture, murder

By the Associated Press

BRUBAKER is a grim, often powerful prison movie based on the true story of convict torture and mass murder in a Southern penintentiary. The surprise in this movie is that it stars Robert Redford as the reformist warden who tries futilely to clean up the graphically depicted "snakepit" conditions. Although Redford gives a strong performance, it will be tough for any audience to believe the matinee-idol-handsome Redford as a prison warden. "Brubaker" is a strong statement for prison reform and its characters are either villains — the politicians and bureaucrats — or heroes such as Redford. It is rated R for graphic violence and plentiful obscenities. This is strong stuff, definitely not for youngsters.

Another new network joins TV business

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eight days after Ted Turner's costly, ambitious Cable News Network commenced operations, still another TV news network was delivered unto this world. Independent News Network, it is called.

The two newcomers share little more than a common mission — to undermine ABC, NBC and CBS.

Turner's CNN cost $40 million or so to launch; INN cost less than a million. CNN offers 24-hour-a-day programming; INN offers 24 minutes. CNN is on cable; INN is over-the-air.

Because of that last, though, INN reached more viewers in its inaugural week (June 9-13) than CNN could reach if fully one-half of its potential audience tuned in (an unlikely possibility).

Independent News Network is a fully produced, prime time news program that is transmitted by satellite to 27 stations across the country. The program originates at the parent station, WPIX in New York.

The hope behind INN is that independent television stations will be able to exploit the new popularity of news to snare some of the prime time audience from the major networks. Heretofore, most of the stations had tried to battle the networks' glossy entertainment schedules with a mixed batch of syndicated reruns and old movies.

INN also gives the locals a chance to offer national news, and thereby concentrate more on local coverage in their own news programs.

Although INN advertises itself as a "network news" program, the product is not exactly of Cronkite caliber. It uses WPIX's anchors — Pat Harper, Bill Jorgensen and Steve Bosh — and the "look" of the show is more like a big-city independent's production (which, essentially, it is) than a national news program.

While due emphasis is placed on top national stories — Mount St. Helen's, a presidential confrontation with Miami blacks, etc. — there is also some "soft" stuff, people features eschewed by major networks because of time limitations.

Sports and weather are also squeezed in. The problem is, INN doesn't have any more time than CBS, NBC or ABC. You get the feeling you're missing real news when you're watching an INN report that jogging can hurt your love life.

Worse, INN has fallen prey to the "happy talk" disease, which instantly jeopardizes its quest to be considered a serious news operation.

For example, after a field report from New Orleans about a few police squad cars that mysteriously burst into flames, one of the anchorman-jesters yukked:

"Maybe the next step is for cops to put fire extinguishers in their cars; that way, they can play fireman and policeman at the same time."

Jane Alexander roles describe her real person

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Control, warmth, inner strength — those words often are attached to Jane Alexander's portrayals in films, television and plays, and they can describe the actress herself.

She registers in person as she does in her roles, as an intelligent, controlled, compassionate woman. But she obviously isn't playing her own character as Eleanor Roosevelt or a supreme court justice. Such portrayals require work and study.

That's the Alexander method, and it may explain why she has attracted so many honors during her acting career.

Jane Alexander adds to her string of remarkable characters with this month's release of "Brubaker" by 20th Century-Fox. Robert Redford stars as a prison warden in the Midwest who employs unorthodox means to reform the penal system.

The film was suggested by the experiences of Thomas Murton, a University of Minnesota professor faced with putting his classroom theories into practice when he was appointed to head a prison.

"I came into the film late, which is not what I like to do," remarked Miss Alexander. "I prefer to have plenty of time to develop a character. Eleanor Roosevelt was the best in that regard; because of postponements in shooting, I had a year and a half to study her."

That was for the well-remembered TV biography, "Eleanor and Franklin."

Her late arrival on "Brubaker" was due to a change in directors as well as the gender of her character, a goveror's aide who encourages the prison reformer.

"The character was originally a woman," Miss Alexander explained. "Bob Rafelson, who was the original director, changed it to a man because he didn't want any suggestion of a romance. Rafelson was replaced after shooting started by Stuart Rosenberg.

"Both Stuart and Bob Redford wanted to switch the governor's assistant back to a woman. Possibly it was to include a woman in what is virtually an all-male cast. Also I think Bob likes the idea of portraying women in important occupations.

When filming resumed under Rosenberg ("Cool Hand Luke"), Miss Alexander reported to the location, 50 miles from Columbus, Ohio. Most of the movie was shot in and around the abandoned Junction City Prison Farm.

"Brubaker" adds another memorable film role to the Alexander string that began with her portrayal of James Earl Jones' wife in "The Great White Hope." That won an Oscar nomination as supporting actress, as did "All The President's Men" and "Kramer vs. Kramer." The latter is evidence of how she can make something memorable out of what could be a routine role.

She was cast as the neighbor who sympathizes with Dustin Hoffman's plight as solo parent of a young son.

"Both Dustin and (director-writer) Bob Benton were extremely receptive to making improvements," she remarked. "Before filming, we tossed around a lot of ideas. Even on the set we might discuss or rehearse a scene for half or three-quarters of the day before a foot of film was shot.

Salvation Army in second century of service to America

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Emily Taylor felt out of place, wearing a civilian skirt and blouse in a sea of spanking blue Salvation Army uniforms. But the Salvation Army means compassion to her, and she had given away her uniform to cheer up an unwed Indian mother.

Good works have always been the best-known aspect of the Salvation Army, and a theme of the army's National Centennial Congress here was how to infuse the social work with spiritual commitment.

"The spiritual nature of our movement is what makes us do the social work," said Maj. Robert Bridges of Baltimore. "The spiritual motivation is not just a game, but the whole reason for the work."

The four-day congress, attended by 12,000 Salvationists, marked the start of the Army's second century in America, where it was established in 1880, two years after it began in England.

Once a group of brass-band evangelists at street corners and soup kitchens, the Salvation Army has grown into a worldwide social service organization.

The largest gathering in the Salvation Army's 100 years in America, the congress included parades, preaching, strategy sessions for the '80s and a ceremony Sunday commissioning 182 new officers across the country. The conference ended Monday night.

At a "Council of War" Sunday, the Salvation Army set "battle objectives and battle plans" and appointed special task force coordinators in each of the Army's four U.S. territories.

Those plans stress reaffirming the Army's spiritual commitment and making sure it found expression in social work, more recruiting and improved officer training.

Soldiers and officers were asked to sign pledges of intensified commitment of "time, talents, means and influence in the cause of the "salvation war."

"We're planning a major offensive in social work, evangelism and youth work," said Capt. David Dluqose of Glens Falls, N.Y.

"We've got to remember the whole man, both his physical and spiritual needs," said Maj. Fran Taylor of Montgomery, Ala. "Never one without the other. We can never separate the spiritual objective — to bring people to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ — from our social work."

The new officers, graduating cadets from the Army's four U.S. "war colleges," vowed to "strive to lead mankind to its only Savior, and for Christ's sake, to care for the poor, feed the hungry, clothe the naked, love the unloveable and befriend those who have no friends."

They join 5,000 other commissioned officers, the Salvation Army's equivalent of ordained clergy. The Salvation Army has 400,000 soldiers in America, with more than 1,000 congregations, or corps.

Before the ceremony inside the municipal auditorium, four companies of cadets, along with bands, flag-bearers, tambourine troops and officers staged a rousing parade.

As the marchers passed Gen. Arnold Brown of London, the Army's international commander, they exchanged the Army's salute — right arm raised and index finger pointing heavenward — and the bands played, "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Computer age buries slide rule, eliminates popular UIL competition

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — As the closed-door competition ended, one of the coaches peered in through a slit in the curtains.

"This time," he said to no one in particular, "there is no next year."

The slide rule has been buried.

For 46 years, high-school math wizards have gathered here for the University Interscholastic League slide rules competition. This year's meet was the final one.

The slide rule — the hand-powered dinosaur of mathematics — gives way next year to state competition using the microchip marvels of the hand-held calculator.

Several coaches and officials agreed the slide rule was doomed to antique stores.

"Once you go to a calculator, you never go back to a slide rule," said Dr. John Cogdell, a University of Texas professor of electrical engineering who ran the contest.

Cogdell is designing next year's initial statewide calculator contest.

"It's more fun, it's quicker and it's more accurate," he said.

"You can hardly buy them (slide rules) anymore, except for the cheap little plastic jobs," said Jack Sell, coach of the Port Arthur Jefferson team.

At one time, slide rules were so popular in Texas that one of the largest manufacturers made a model designed especially for the state contest. The Texas Speed Rule was a scaled down, quicker-to-use model, the Ferrari of slide rules.

"They quit making them," said Cogdell. "They shipped the dies to Mexico and they were inadvertently destroyed. That's the end of it."

Sixty-one regional winners came here for the last state meet. It's a 30-minute race with 75 problems. Some of the contestants practice up to four hours a day. Many are already preparing for next year's calculator contest.

Slide rule training is rigorous. Sell said some coaches made the students practice with two radios blaring — each tuned to a different station — to teach the value of concentration. Others practice near busy windows on busy streets.

Sell initially resisted the coming of the computer age. He said he feared a calculator contest "would not be anything but a typing contest."

He has changed his mind, but Ford Roberson, 1968 state slide rule champ who now coaches the Andrews team, is still resisting.

"Would you learn anything if you could push a button and have it all handed to you?" he asked. "It's a little toy that's fun to play with," he said, adding, however, it can be a "great and powerful tool."

Steve Justiss, coach at Daingerfield, agreed the contest will be missed.

"There's as much reason to do this as there is to throw the discus," he said.

But Justiss, who learned the wonders of the slide rule after he was named math coach, said he was resigned to the calculator onslaught.

And Sell, now eager to move on to the new technology, admitted to a touch of nostalgia.

Tiny butterfly or giant mall?

By COREY SANDLER

GUILDERLAND, N.Y. (AP) — It seems almost like a rerun of the snail darter affair. On one side: a pale blue, two-inch butterfly. On the other: an $85 million super-shopping mall.

The would-be developers say, however, that they have the solution: a butterfly corral in the parking lot, behind an eight-foot chain link fence, with an observation tower for nature-lovers.

Opponents of the proposed Crossgates Mall say the Pine Bush site of the project is one of the last remaining homes for the Karner Blue butterfly. The 4,000 acres of stark sand dunes and pitch pines also provide a habitat for such scarce species of life as the prairie warbler, the hognose snake, the woodland jumping mouse, the spadefoot toad and the pine vole.

The Pine Bush is a seemingly misplaced piece of Cape Cod seashore, located 175 miles inland in upstate New York.

Maintenance of its peculiar ecology requires a natural or set fire every five to ten years. The fire prevents intrusion of alien hardwood trees and grasses.

A state hearing on the project is nearing the start of its fifth month and the Karner Blue butterfly is just one of the issues. Organized opposition to the project dates back nearly two years, and the opponents admit that they hope to drive away the developer by causing continuing, expensive delays.

The $130 million Tellico Dam project of the Tennessee Valley Authority was delayed for almost three years by a battle over the snail darter, a rare, three-inch fish protected by the Endangered Species Act. The authority ultimately transplanted the snail darters to another area and the floodgates were finally closed last November.

The Pine Bush was formed more than 10,000 years ago as water began to drain from glacial Lake Albany, once part of the last major ice sheet that covered all of eastern New York and New England north of New York City. The waters left a delta of sand, and over the years winds whipped the land into dunes.

Until the postwar construction boom of the 1950s, the Pine Bush area had been considered a useless barrier to development. In Revolutionary days, the Pine Bush constituted something of a "no-man's land," ruled over by highwaymen and renegade Indians who plundered passing stagecoaches on the King's Highway between Albany and Schenectady. Escaped slaves, convicts and other refugees from society also made the nearly inaccessible pine barren their home.

Today, the Pine Bush is a prime piece of real estate, located between affluent suburbs. No longer isolated, it is surrounded by urban sprawl and cut into quarters by highways.

Preservationists, joined by neighborhood groups, say the time has come to try to save some part of the Pine Bush.

"We do not have the right to pave over every piece of vacant land," said Don Rittner, president of the Pine Bush Historic Preservation Project.

"We welcome the environmental hearings," said Bruce Kenan, managing partner of the Pyramid Crossgates Co., a Syracuse-based group of shopping mall companies in the northeast. "We don't want ourselves or anybody else spoiling our environment."

Kenan said his company has done its homework on environmental concerns. Crossgates has proposed building a corral around a stand of lupine — the favorite habitat of the Karner Blue — on the mall site to keep people away.

"The rest of the questions are engineering problems," Kenan said.

Crossgates also has offered to purchase a 65-acre plot of undeveloped Pine Bush land and donate it to the City of Albany, "should the project be implemented."

Almost every day since February, attorneys and specialists for Crossgates and the state Department of Environmental Conservation have presented testimony on the economic and environmental effects of the proposed mall.

New irrigation system to be demonstrated

It used to be that a pump jack in the middle of a field of cotton caused more trouble than it was worth when it came to irrigating the land.

But a new system has been devised that not only takes pump jacks in stride, but walks over them.

This system, designed by Wade Rain Sprinker Irrigation, has been installed on the Roy Koonce farm south of Stanton. It will be demonstrated for all area farmers and other interested people at 11 a.m. Thursday on Koonce's farm off State Highway 137 10 miles south of Stanton. Afterward, a barbecue luncheon will be served.

Johnny McKnight of Stewart &Stevenson Services Inc. of Odessa, which installed the circle system, said Koonce has the only one in the country that can go over pump jacks. On Thursday, onlookers will see how it walks over a 22-foot high pump jack.

This system is located in a 160-acre field and can virtually water 142 acres in a circular manner. Before the new system, irrigation lines could walk up to a pump jack, but had to stop at that point. The system then had to be taken apart and moved to another part of the field past the pump jack.

McKnight said that now, all a farmer has to do after setting it up is push a button a button and go back to the house.

"This system is needed in the oilfield because there's always a pump jack in the way," he said.

This irrigation system, which uses pivotal points, isn't a new concept and has been used throughout the country. The unique aspect is that before it hadn't been capable of walking over large objects in the field. And in West Texas, those large objects are usually pump jacks.

While adding ease to the farmer's work, it also increases the efficiency of watering the crop, McKnight added.

Canada 'critical link' in Soviet grain embargo

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland sees it, Canada is "the critical link" to the survival of the partial U.S. embargo of grain sales to the Soviet Union.

If the Canadian government caves in to pressure and steps up grain sales to the Soviet Union, the entire embargo will be in jeopardy, Bergland said Tuesday.

President Carter is expected to discuss the grain embargo with Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and others at an economic summit meeting in Venice next Sunday and Monday, Bergland said.

Leaders of France, Germany, Great Britain, Japan and Italy also will attend the conference.

Bergland said the new Trudeau government has been put under increasing pressure from Canadian grain farmers to abandon its previous commitment to support the U.S. embargo.

"If the Canadians can hold the line politically and say they will stay with the United States, I'm convinced the rest of the world will stay hitched," he said in an interview with a group of reporters.

"But if the Canadians decide for their reasons that they have to pick up as much of the slack as they can ship (to the Soviet Union), ... that heightens the pressure on the Australians and that heightens the pressure on us and everybody else."

Carter imposed the partial embargo on grain sought by the Soviet Union on Jan. 4 in retaliation for its occupation of Afghanistan. Canada, Australia and the European Common Market countries pledged not to exceed their normal sales of grain to the Soviets.

Argentina, the only other major world grain exporting country, did not agree to the embargo and has been supplying the Soviet Union with some grain needed to make up the shortfall created by the U.S. action.

Argentinea was asked again recently at a meeting in Brussels to cooperate with the embargo and indicated it would "take it under advisement," Bergland said.

Bergland said he met with Australian officials here last week and asked them to continue their policy of restraining sales to the Soviets.

The Australians provided qualified support for continuing the embargo "to the extent they can," Bergland said.

Support for continuing the embargo, including the monitoring of transshipments of U.S. grain, also has been provided by Common Market leaders, Bergland said.

"If Canada kicks over the traces and decides to pick up the slack (in supplying grain to the Soviets), that'll put heavy pressure on the Australians. It'll put heavy pressure on us, matter of fact."

The pledges of support being sought by the United States affect the fifth year of a U.S.-Soviet Union grain agreement, which will begin on Oct. 1.

Under it, the United States agreed to supply the Soviets with at least 8 million metric tons of corn and wheat annually, and more than that if it was mutually agreeable.

Last fall the Soviet Union was given permission to buy up to 25 million metric tons of grain in the 1979-80 agreement year, and the Soviets were expected to take the full amount to help make up for a short 1979 harvest.

Carter canceled deliveries of 17 million metric tons but honored the basic agreement enabling Russia to buy 8 million. Further, the administration says it will allow the sale of 8 million metric tons in the final year of the pact, beginning Oct. 1.

So far, however, Moscow has not indicated it wants to buy any grain at all from the United States next year, Bergland said.

As he has previously, Bergland said there is no plan by the administration to remove the curbs and enable the Soviets to buy grain in excess of the 8 million metric tons until "the president finds they're no longer a threat to our security."

Bergland reaffirms embargo policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says President Carter will stand by his embargo of further U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union, regardless of what Ronald Reagan may say should be done.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., last week urged Reagan to announce he would lift the partial embargo if he is elected president.

Carter on Jan. 4 canceled the delivery of about 17 million metric tons of U.S. grain that the Soviet Union was expected to take this year. The presidential action was in retaliation for the Soviet occupation of Aghanistan.

Bergland, in a telephone interview with a group of farm broadcasters, was asked if there was a chance Carter would lift the partial embargo as a way of "beating Bob Dole to the punch" for his advice to Reagan.

"That depends on the Russians," Bergland replied. "So long as they are engaged in warfare and continue to undermine the security of the United States and the western world, we're not about to endorse that activity."

Bergland added, "I can't imagine endorsing the Russian presence in Afghanistan and the activities that surround that sorry spectacle."

Despite the Soviet Union's having made up some of the cutoff U.S. grain from Argentina and several other countries, Bergland repeated earlier assertions that "the Russians are going to be short about 6 or 7 million tons of feed they otherwise would have bought" and that this is hurting their livestock sector.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

Only the United States, he said, can provide feed, primarily corn, in quantities the Soviets need for livestock, particularly for pigs and chickens.

"The Russians know

they've got to negotiate with the United States, and the president, I'm sure, will not abandon ship now and capitulate to their whims and fancies," Bergland said.

Bergland was asked about recent reports that the Soviet Union is being supplied significant quantities of U.S. soybean meal and grain that initially were shipped to East Germany and other Soviet bloc countries.

"I don't know how much of it is true, how much of it is hearsay," Bergland said. "Frankly, we think (there is) some of both."

Shipments of U.S. grain have shown "a substantial increase" to Eastern Europe, he said.

"The Poles and the Romanians — and the East Germans, in particular — came to see me last November-December, telling me the Russians had told them they would no longer supply them with grain. And they asked me whether we would pick up that slack.

"We said, of course ... and we've done so. That is grain that they need for their own economy, and it's new business for the United States."

Insurance bill OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House-Senate conference committee has worked out a compromise bill to expand federal crop insurance throughout the nation and phase out disaster aid to farmers.

The compromise is slightly different from bills passed earlier by both houses. It now needs the approval of each house.

Beef prices up, but still below level of one year ago

DENVER (AP) — Average mid-June retail beef prices rose seven cents a pound from last month but still are slightly below prices a year ago, the National Cattlemen's Association reported Tuesday.

The association's monthly, 19-city survey showed the national average price of beef cuts on June 12 was $2.40 per pound, up seven cents from May but one cent under the average a year ago.

The survey showed average sirloin, T-bone and chuck roast prices were up since May, while ground beef and round steak prices had dropped.

Increased steak demand in summer was the principal reason for the increase since May, along with some decrease in beef production, according to cattlemen's association president Merlyn Carlson.

Portland, Ore., had the highest five-cut average at $2.88 a pound, while Kansas City and Phoenix were the cheapest at $2.08 per pound.

Denver's five-cut average was $2.24 per pound, up nine cents since May and 23 cents higher than a year ago.

Amoco finals Overthrust opener

DENVER, Colo. — Amoco Production Co. announced the completion of a wildcat well in the Overthrust Belt in which three productive zones were tested at a combined rate of almost 40 million cubic feet of natural gas per day.

The well, Amoco No. 1 Champlin-Fawcett and Sons, which is the discovery well for the Cave Creek field, is on a structure in northeast Utah about 15 miles north of Pineview field, and about 25 miles southwest of the Whitney Canyon natural gas discovery in southwest Wyoming.

Significant production potential was indicated at 11,500 feet in the Phosphoria formation which tested at the rate of 25.1 million cubic feet of gas per day and 500 barrels of condensate per day on a 39/64-inch choke.

In addition, two other productive zones, the Weber and Madison formations, flowed gas respectively at a daily rate of 12.45 million cubic feet plug 103 barrels of condensate on a 37/64-inch choke at 12,000 feet, and 2.44 million cubic feet of gas plus 78 barrels of condensate on a 56/64-inch choke at 15,400 feet.

The gas from each of the three zones is sour. The well reached total depth of 18,055 feet June 1, 1979. Its cost was approximately $8.4 million.

Amoco currently is drilling an outpost well, the No. 1 Champlin 846-Amoco "A."

It is about one mile north of the discovery.

The company, a subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), owns 83.33 percent working interest in the Fawcett and Sons well and in the outpost. The remaining 16.67 percent interest in each well is owned by Champlin Petroleum Co., a subsidiary of Union Pacific Corp.

STEPOUT RATES FLOW

Amoco also announced that a stepout development well in the Whitney Canyon field in the Overthrust Belt of southwest Wyoming has tested gas at the rate of 16.3 million cubic feet per day, through three perforated intervals in the Mississippian Madison zone.

The project, Amoco No. 1-A Champlin 457-Amoco "B", is two miles south of Amoco's No. 1 Kewanee-Federal, the field discovery.

The No. 1-A Champlin 457 Amoco "B" was drilled to 15,400 feet. The upper Madison now is being tested at rates up to 9 million cubic feet of gas per day. Two other Madison zones tested gas at the daily rates of 3.6 million and 3.7 million cubic feet, respectively.

Two other formation — the Ordovician Bighorn and the Devonian Darby — tested gas at non-commercial rates.

Amoco stakes locations for four tests in Post, West (Strawn) pool

Amoco Production Co., operating from Levelland, announced locations for four offsets or stepout to the Post, West (Strawn and Mississippian) field of Garza County, eight miles west of Post.

The field has one Strawn producer and one Mississippian well.

Each of the new projects are contracted to 9,200 feet which will allow for tests of the Mississippian.

No. 1 Dillard Morris is 990 feet fromnorth and 1,319 fet from west lines of section 1318, block 1, H&OB survey. It is 3/4 mile northeast of the Mississippian well and the same distance northeast of the Strawn well.

****

Amoco No. 2 Elmo Bush is 660 feet from south and 467 feet from west lines of section 1318, block 1, H&OB survey. It is an east offset to Strawn production and 1/2 mile southeast of the Mississippian oiler.

****

Amoco No. 2 Sylvia Winder, an east offset to the Mississippian well and a north offset to the Strawn well, is 2,439 feet from south and 467 feet from east lines of section 1320, block 1, H&OB survey.

****

Amoco No. 1 H. D. Veavers will be drilled 467 feet from north and 2,253 feet from west lines of section 1318, block 1, H&OB survey. It is one mile northeast of the Mississippian and Strawn wells.

LUBBOCK OFFSET

New Reserves Group of Midland no.3 Texas Tech is to be dug as a 5,900-foot project one location east of the discovery well of the Idalou, NOrth field of Lubbock County.

The drillsite is five miles northwest of Idalou and 2,466 feet from south and 990 feet from west lines of section 44, block D-7, EL&RR survey.

DAWSON PROJECT

The two-well Ackerly, North (Spraberry) pool of Dawson County gained a new sproject with the staking of Conoco, Inc., No. 1 Leroy Holladay and others.

It is a northeast offset to production and 1,667 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 11, block 34, T-4-N, T&P survey.

SCHLEICHER TESTS

Tucker Drilling Co., Inc. of San Angelo staked two projects in the three-well REG (5900 lime oil) pool of Schoeicher County, 13 miles northeast of Eldorado.

Each is contracted to 6,050 feet.

No. 1 Reichert is 1,200 feet south of production and 467 feet from north and 1,500 feet from east lines of section 47, block M, GH&SA survey. Ground elevation is 2,309 feet.

****

Tucker No. 4-50 Glass is 1,200 feet north of production and 700 feet from north and 1,400 feet from east lines of section 50, block M, GH&SA survey. Ground elevation is 2,306 feet.

ANDREWS AREA

Sun Oil will drill No. 1 Argo as a 7/8-mile north stepout to the seven-well Martin (Tubb oil) pool of Martin County, 14 miles southwest of Adrews.

Locarion is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 14, block A-41, psl survey.

Contract depth is 6,560 feet.

CRANE PROJECTS

Gulf Oil Corp. spotted two projects in the six-well Lea (Tubb oil) pool of Crane County, 10.5 miles west of Crane.

Each of the tests will be drilled to 5,000 feet for tests of the Tubb.

No. 109 P. J. Lea and others is 2,105 feet from south and 2,030 feet from east lines of section 39, block 32, psl survey.

****

ECTOR OFFSET

Exxon Corp. No. 89 Yarbrough & Allen will be drilled as a northwest offset to the Pennsylvanian discovery of the Yarbrough & Allen, West multipay field of Ector County.

Location for the 8,050-foot project is 760 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 25, block 14, psl survey.

The field has one Pennsylvanian producer.

KENT TEST

Jack G. Elam of Midland No. 1-60-B Wallace is to be dug as a 6,900-foot project in Kent County, 11 miles south of Clairemont.

The prospector is one location south of one of the four wells in the Elam (Stran) field.

Location is 2,173 feet from south and east lines of secton 60, block 4, H&GN survey.

CROCKETT TRY

Anderson Petroleum, Inc., of Midland staked its No. 1-3 Mayme Daniel and others as a long northwest outpost to troduction in the Ozona multipay field of Crockett County, 25 miles southwest of Ozona.

It is four miles from production and 1,375 feet from south and 1,500 feet from east lines of section 3, block NNN, W. P. Hoover survey.

Contrct depth is 7,900 feet.

The drillsite is surrounded by Canyon production in the American multipay field.

SUTTON LOCATIONS

HNG Oil Co. of Midland spotted two projects in the four-well Sawyer (Leonard) feld of Sutton County, seven miles west of Sonora. Each will be drilled to 8,300 feet.

No. 2-138 Richardson is 3/8 mile north of production and 933 feet from south and west lines of section 138, block B,d HE&WT survey. Ground elevation is 2,278 feet.

REAGAN WELL

Devon Corp. of Oklahoma City No. 2 Owens and others has been finaled from the Grayburg 5/8 mile east of the Barnhart (Grayburg) field of Reagan County, nine miles southeast of Big Lake.

The operator reported a 24-hour pumping potential of 70 barrels of 28-gravity oil, no water, through perforations from 2,043 to 2,259 feet after 3,000 gallons of acid and 40,000 gallons of fracture solution.

The gas-oil ratio is 285-1.

Location (amended) is 1,817 feet from north and 3,740 feet from east lines of section 6, HE&WT survey.

Estoril stakes three Winkler wildcats

Estoril Producing Corp. spotted locations for three wildcats in Winkler County.

No. 1-39 Bob Yates-University will be drilled as a 7,000-foot project four miles southwest of Wink and 1,980 feet from south and 2,090 feet from west lines of section 39, block 21, University Lands survey.

It is 4.5 miles northeast of the depleted War-Wink (Cherry Canyon) field discovery.

****

Estoril No. 1-39-A Bob Yates-University, also scheduled to 7,000 feet four miles southwest of Wink, is 1,980 feet fromnorth and 660 feet from west lines of section 39, block 21, University Lands survey. It is 4 1/2 miles northeast of the depleted War-Wink (Cherry Canyon) opener.

****

Estoril No. 1-45 Bob Yates-University, another 7,000-foot project four miles southwest of Wink, is 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 45, block 21, University Lands survey. It is 3 1/4 miles northeast of a the depleted War-Wink (Cherry Canyon) discovery.

FISHER WILDCAT

H. L. Hawkins Jr. of Houston No. 1 Half Moon Land & Cattle Inc. is to be dug as a 6,000-foot wildcat in Fisher County, eight miles northeast of Rotan.

Drillsite is 467 feet from north and east lines of section 122, block 1, H&TC survey.

Drillsite is 1 3/4 mile northwest of the one-well Ida, West (Strawn) field and 1 7/8 miles southeast of the reopener and lone producer in the Lena M. Green (Strawn) field.

TERRELL COMPLETION

Mobil Producing Texas & New Mexico No. 1-A B. F. Foster, project in Terrell County, 1 5/8 mile northeast of a dual Ellenburger and Strawn gas well in the Brown-Bassett multipay field, has been completed from the Pennsylvanian.

Operator reported a calculated absolute open flow potential of 260,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 13,835 to 134,188 feet.

Total depth is 17,968 feet and plugged back depth is 14,280 feet.

The field's regular Ellenburger production is at an average depth of 13,750 feet.

Wellsite is 2,207 feet from north and 752 feet from east lines of section 19, block 161, GC&SF survey and 18 miles south of Sheffield.

EDWARDS OUTPOST

William Perlman of Houston will drill his No. 1-29 Beam as a 5.5 mile west outpost to Canyon gas production in the Sawyer multipay field of Edwards County, 18 miles northwest of Rocksprings.

The projeect 1,650 feet from south and 1,033 feet from east lines of section 29, HE&WT survey.

Contract depth is 6,000 feet.

REAGAN OILER

Saxon Oil Co. of Midland No. 2 Gardner recently was completed as a 1 5/8-mile east extension to Spraberry production in the Benedum multipay field of Reagan County, 21 miles northwest of Big Lake.

The operator reported a daily pumping potential of 36 barrels of 39-gravity oil and 166 barrels of water, with a gas-oil ratio of 1,083-1.

The gas-oil ratio is 1,083-1.

The completion was through perforations from 6,561 to 8,136 feet after 3,000 gallons of acid and 140,000 gallons of fracture solution.

Location is 1,200 feet from south and east lines of section 49, block Y, TCRR survey.

UPTON PROJECT

John L. Cox of Midland will dig No. 1-36 Neal will be drilled 3/4 mile northeast of one of the eight wells in the Benedum (Fusselman oil) pool of Upton County, 15 miles northeast of Rankin.

The project site is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 36m block Y, TCRR survey. Contract depth is 11,700 feet.

1,003 Texas strikes final

AUSTIN (AP) — Wildcatters are having greater success in Texas this year than in 1979, the Railroad Commission reports.

The commission says drillers have logged 657 gas and 346 oil discoveries so far this year, compared with 621 gas and 202 oil finds during the comparable period of 1979.

Completions total 5,418 oil and 2,555 gas wells, against 3,589 oil and 2,654 gas wells a year ago.

During the first 15 days of this month, 58 gas and 26 oil discoveries were reported, while 101 exploratory and field tests resulted in dry holes.

Eight oil finds were reported in Southeast Texas, four each in deep South Texas and North Texas, three in West Central Texas, two each in the Panhandle and Refugio areas and one each in the San Angelo, Midland and Lubbock areas.

Twenty-six gas discoveries were in deep South Texas, 13 in Southeast Texas, nine in West Central Texas, seven in the Refugio area and one each in North Texas and the Midland and San Angelo areas.

Mobil Producing schedules two Loving County wildcats

Mobil Producing Texas & New Mexico Inc. spotted locatons for a pair of wildcats in Loving County, six miles northeast of Mentone.

Each of the projects will be drilled to 7,000 feet.

No. 1-E W. D. Johnson and others is 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 40, block 53, T-2, T&P survey and two miles northwest of the one-well Wheat (Cherry Canyon) field which produces at 6,610 feet.

****

Mobil Producing No. 1-F W. D. Johnson, 1 5/8-mile northwest of the Cherry Canyon well, is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 40, block 53, T-2, T&P survey.

VAL VERDE TEST

The McCoun Co., Inc., of Tyler spotted a 2,500-foot wildcat in Val Verde County, four miles southeast of Del Rio.

It is No. 1 Marshall, 1,100 feet from north and 600 feet from east lines of section 20, block 3, I&GN survey, abstract 1026 and 5,800 feet southeast of a 1,000-foot dry hole.

FISHER EXPLORER

Stringer Oil & Gas of San Antonio No. 1 L. L. Stuart has been staked as a 6,600-foot wildcat two miles east of Claytonville in Fisher County.

Location is 660 feet from south and west lines of section 205, block 3, H&TC survey.

The drillsite is 5/8 mile southeast of the Claytonville multipay field which produces from the Canyon lime at 5,695 feet and from the 5,200 and 5,400 Canyon sand zones.

NOLAN WILDCATS

Stringer Oil & Gas also will drill No. 1 J. Hogue as a 6,600-foot wildcat in Nolan County, 3 1/2 miles southwest of Sweetwater.

Drillsite is 750 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 57, block 22, T&P survey.

The location is one mile east of the Estaban multipay field and separated from it by a 6,816-foot dry hole.

****

Asora Inc. of Abilene No. 1 Sneed is a 5,700-foot wildcat in Nolan County, two miles north of Hylton and 5/8 mile southeast of the Arriba Libra (Jennings gas) field.

Location for the new test is 990 feet from north and 467 feet from west lines of section 182, block 64, H&TC survey.

It also is 3/4 mile southeast of the Caddo oil discovery in the Arriba Libra pool.

COKE PROSPECTOR

Kenai Oil & Gas Inc. of Midland No. 1 Price is a new 5,900-foot wildcat four miles southwest of Robert Lee in Coke County.

The drillsite is one location west of Kenai No. 2 Price, an active wildcat, and 660 feet from south and west lines of section 286, block 2, H&TC survey.

The No. 2 Price, originally staked as No. 1 Byrne, was making hole below 236 feet on a 5,900-foot contract.

The new wildcat also is 1 1/4 miles northeast of the depleted Robert Lee (Palo Pinto) field.

It also is 5/8 mile northeast of a a 6,800-foot wildcat, Enrich Oil Corp. No. 1 Bobby Baker, and 3/4 mile northeast of Enrich No. 1 M. O. Baker, another 6,800-foot test.

RUNNELS TEST

Crown Exploration Co. of Abilene will dig No. 1 H. White as a 4,400-foot wildcat three miles east of Winters in Runnels County.

It is 2,008 feet from north and 467 feet from east lines of W. M. Baggs survey No. 326.

It is 2,310 feet northeast of the lone well in the Cecile (Gardner) pool which produces gas at 4,195 feet.

Leasing plan gets approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, declaring offshore oil and gas leases one of the "most environmentally benign" energy sources available to the country, has given final approval to an accelerated leasing program covering the next five years.

Andrus' action came despite strong objections from environmental groups that had sought to delete sales off Alaska and Northern California.

The program announced Tuesday provides for 36 offshore lease sales through 1985, a 20 percent increase over what Andrus had recommended one year ago, before President Carter unveiled his latest program to increase domestic energy supplies.

"It would be a crime to prevent us as a nation from realizing the immense benefits of this unique asset," Andrus said in announcing his decision. "I have worked hard to make certain that the program provides to the public the financial return and the environmental protection it requires and deserves."

Frances Beinecke, an attorney with the Natural Resources Defense Council, said her group was disappointed in Andrus' decision and termed some minor changes made in the final schedule "meaningless." She said the group was considering court action to block some sales.

The council had argued that oil drilling in Alaska's North Aleutian shelf should not be permitted because the area contains the world's largest salmon fishing grounds. The group also contended that the technology does not yet exist to contain oil spills in icy seas and thus the other Alaska sales should be delayed until after 1985.

The schedule Andrus unveiled includes 11 sales in the Gulf of Mexico, six in the Atlantic, four off California, 10 off Alaska and five sales that will reoffer areas on which no bids were received in earlier sales. Seven of the sales would be in frontier areas off Alaska where leasing has not previously taken place.

The final lease schedule includes:

1980: Three sales, two in the Gulf of Mexico and one in the Gulf of Alaska.

1981: Seven sales, two in the Gulf of Mexico, one off California, one in the South Atlantic, one in Alaska's Cook Inlet, one in the Mid-Atlantic and one reoffering.

1982: Seven sales, two in the Gulf of Mexico, one in Alaska's Norton Basin, one in Alaska's St. George Basin, one off Southern California, one in the North Atlantic and one reoffering.

1983: Eight sales, two in the Gulf of Mexico, three in Alaska in the Beaufort Sea, in the North Aleutian Shelf and off Kodiak Island, one off California, one in the Mid-Atlantic and one reoffering.

1984: Seven sales, two in the Gulf of Mexico, one each off California, in Alaska's Navarin Basin, in the South Atlantic and the North Atlantic and one reoffering.

1985: Four sales, two off Alaska in the Chuckchi Sea and the Hope Basin and one in the Gulf of Mexico plus one reoffering.

Big Wolfcamp well finals

Bass Enterprises No. 1 Palmillo, a project in the multipay Turkey Track, North field of Eddy County, 12 miles southwest of Loco Hills, has been completed as a dual Wolfcamp oil and Morrow gas well.

The Wolfcamp completion was for a daily flow of 1,680 barrels of oil, no water, through perforations from 8,693 to 8,795 feet. The gravity and gas-oil ratio were not reported.

The pay was acidized with 5,000 gallons.

From the Morrow, the well finaled for a calculated absolute open flow of 1,169,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 8,693 to 9,795 feet after a 2,500-gallon acid treatment.

Total depth is 11,250 feet, 5.5-inch pipe is set on bottom and the plugged back depth is 11,192 feet.

Wellsite is 1,980 feet from south and east lines of secton 1-19s-28e.

LEA TEST FLOWS

Conoco Inc., operating from Midland, announced a gas and condensate flow from the upper Devonian in No. 5-B-1 Wells, a wildcat three miles southwest of Jal in Lea County.

The prospector flowed at the rate of 6,793,000 cubic feet of gas and 13 barrels of condensate, along with 20 barrels of water, through perforations from 9,724 to 9,784 feet. The flow was gauged through a 24/64-inch choke.

Earlier, it flowed at the rate of 5,646,000 cubic feet of gas, along with 21 barrels of condensate and 10 barrels of water, through a 20/64-inch choke.

The plrject also had flowed gas at the rate of 4,248,000 cubic feet per day, plus 14 barrels of condensate and no water, through a 1/4-inch choke. Testing continues.

The prospector reported Ellenburger discovery production earlier, through perforations from 12,456 to 12,826 feet. From that zone it flowed at the rate of 2,458,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

Location is 1,650 feet fromnorth and 660 feet from east lines of section 1-25s-36e.

Hot weather signals time for the trimming-down for those who need it, for hot-weather comfort and prettiness in the brief, cool styles in vogue. The ones who can be the most help to the weight-conscious are pictured above: Letty Craft, left, counselor at Diet Center West, 1200 Whitney, phone 694-3421; and Afton Wilson, counselor of Diet Center 1, 1207 Louisiana, phone 684-5081. Either woman can give the guidance and encouragement to get you through the experience and to achievement of your goal: a healthier and better-looking you!

Cool off this summer with a cooler from Jerry's

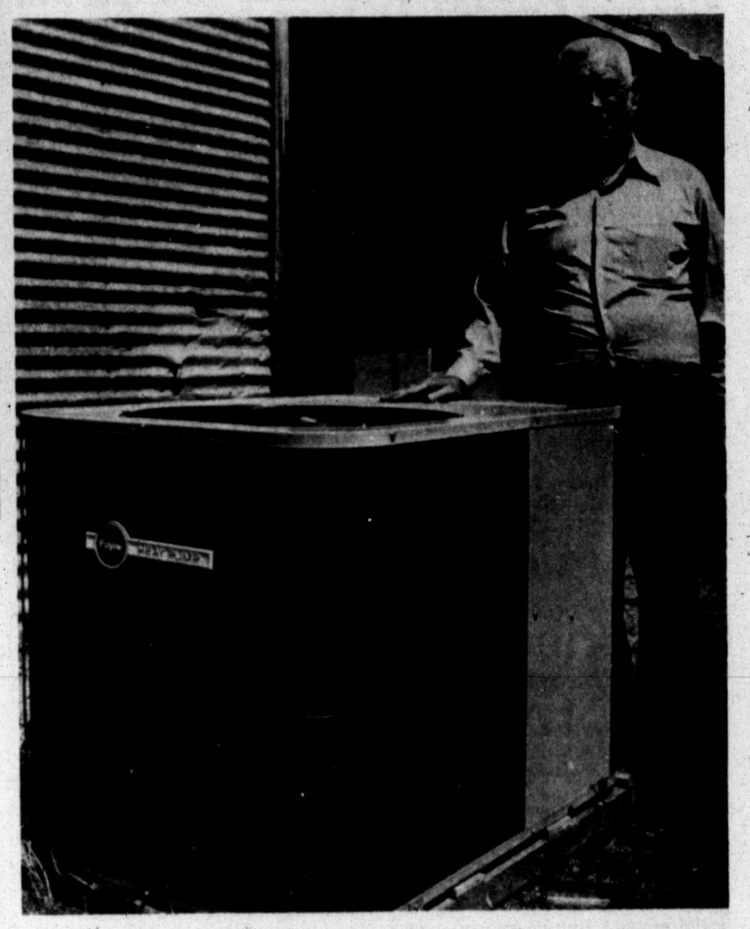

Jerry's Sheet Metal, 700 North Ft. Worth, has helped Midlanders stay cool throughout the hot West Texas summers for many a season. Jerry's sells the fine Payne and Freidrich refrigerated units, for experience has shown them to be of the very best available.

Some local homeowners elect to use the evaporation-type air coolers instead of the refrigeration principal air conditioners. Jerry's caters to these folks, too.

Jerry stocks Essick and Arctic Circle "evaps", and takes trade-ins on refrigeration installations, so has both new and used units for your selection.

Jerry's services both the refrigerated units and the "evaps". For service, call 684-4495.

Come by 700 North Ft. Worth very soon if you need to buy an air conditioner. If you wait, you may be in for some discomfort. Let Jerry get you fixed up for the hot weather which is sure to come.

Air conditioning by Payne is the ultimate for production of summer comfort. More time is spent in the home than anywhere else. Doesn't it make sense to provide the refreshing difference Payne makes for the family's well-being? It keeps the home cool, comfortable, pollution-free. It uses less electricity than most because of its efficient design, and is so quiet you hardly know it's there. The styling blends in with any decor and landscaping. For the Payne, calls Jerry's Sheet Metal, 700 North Ft. Worth, phone 684-4495.

Federal court upholds ruling

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court has upheld a National Labor Relations Board finding that J.P. Stevens Co., one of the nation's largest textile firms, was guilty of unfair labor practices.

"We find no error in the board's assessment," the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Thursday.

The NLRB had found the company guilty of unfair labor practices at its seven plants in Roanoke Rapids, N.C. Similar findings have been reached for J.P. Steven's conduct at other plants in the South.

In upholding that finding, the appeals court noted the company's "hostility to the union."

The Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers union had filed its complaint with the NLRB after two unsuccessful years of trying to reach a contract agreement.

J.P. Stevens acted on its own to make changes in pay schedules and delayed furnishing information to the union about profit sharing, wage rates and group insurance, the NLRB said.

The board also accused the company of "dilatory tactics" and adhering to "demonstrably unreasonable positions."

Get a portable building from Dura'Bilt today

There is a special sale in progress right now, and for the rest of the week, at Dura'Bilt Portable Buildings, 2.1 miles west of Terminal. Ten percent off makes already low-priced buildings an even more attractive buy

Features include pre-finished masonite exterior that requires no painting or maintenance: it is of best quality and is available in various colors.

Strong steel roofing guards against hail.

Exterior grade plywood flooring is utilized, with floor joists on 16-inch center to assure further quality.

Top grade lumber is used throughout. Baked-on enamel aluminum trim is another feature.

Rubber enclosures at the eaves guard against dust. Options available:

On finished building, Dura'Bilt offers 3½ inch fiberglass insulation and lovely wood paneling. Many "extras" can be added to meet your needs and preferences.

Bank financing is available on all our buildings.

Come and inspect Dura'Bilt buildings and see for yourself what they have to offer. Inspect — and compare construction and costs with any others and you will be convinced. Choose Dura'Bilt with pride and satisfaction.

Trailways head former athlete

DALLAS (AP) — David Laughlin, once an all-city quarterback and all-city third baseman in Dallas, is back in Texas again.

But not as an astronaut in the space program, as he had hoped when he left in the mid-1960s to accept a football scholarship with the Air Force Academy.

He's the new president of Trailways Food Services, Inc., whose officials hope he will make the same kind of innovative changes that made him the talk of the industry in four years with Trailways' chief competitor, Greyhound Bus Lines.

"The secret of running a good organization is putting together qualified, well-trained employees with the right background with a winning attitude," Laughlin said.

"If you get people like that, properly enthusiastic and get them so they are all marching to the same drummer, they have to be successful," he said.

A shattered collarbone in a scrimmage ended his football career — and his flight fitness — in his sophomore year at the Air Force Academy, but the 31-year-old Laughlin has been covering a lot of ground ever since.

He returned to Dallas, joined the SMU baseball squad and took a part-time job in the mail room at Bonanza Steak House.

He started moving up through the ranks in a hurry and soon found himself, still in his 20s, trying to teach men twice his age how to run their operations better, how to hire better workers and how to train the workers to assure a successful business.

"One of the things that helped me, I'd have to say, is I never minded working hard. I spent a lot of hours working, and I was a young manager at that time," he said.

"I felt there were drawbacks to working with managers older than me. I felt, therefore, I had to do something to compensate for that, although my personnel management skills were not too polished then at all."

Discipline had been hammered home when he was at the Air Force Academy, and to that he added a positive attitude and a determination to let those working for him know that he appreciated them.

Chrysler can't pay suppliers

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has confirmed that it told all its material suppliers they will not be paid for May until Chrysler's federally guaranteed loans come through.

The automaker would not say how much money was involved. "I'm sure we're still paying the light bill," a Chrysler spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday.

A company spokesman said none of the 19,000 suppliers had cut off shipments or threatened to do so.

French debating nuclear weapons

PARIS (AP) — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing is faced with a crucial decision this summer on the direction of France's defense policy — including the possibility of developing the neutron weapon shelved by the United States.

There is little question that France will continue to spend heavily on the nuclear "Force de Frappe," or strike force, instituted under President Charles de Gaulle. But a major debate has exploded around what new weapons should be developed.

Predictably, the issue has stirred the opposition Communist and Socialist parties, but it has also provoked a split in the president's majority in the National Assembly.

Decisions on policy emphasis and new weapons are expected next month when major budget priorities must be established. There is a possibility, however, that the politically volatile question of the neutron warhead could be put off until after next year's presidential elections.

The basic decision is whether France should concentrate on strengthening and modernizing its submarine, land-based and airborne strategic nuclear strike force along the lines of de Gaulle's strategy of "massive retaliation" to attack — or begin putting more emphasis on tactical nuclear weapons such as the neutron warhead.

The warhead, officially known as an enhanced radiation weapon, produces twice the deadly radiation of older, tactical nuclear warheads but less than one-tenth as much explosive power, heat and fallout. This means it can kill people while causing little damage to buildings and other structures. It is not a bomb, which is actually dropped from a plane. Instead the warhead is mounted on a missile or fired from artillery.

President Carter approved the manufacture and stockpiling of key elements of neutron warheads in 1978 but since then has withheld permission to assemble and deploy the weapons.

Under the Gaullist philosophy, French national territory is a sanctuary which if violated will trigger massive retaliation with strategic nuclear weapons at the main cities and industries of an aggressor nation. Stronger emphasis on tactical weapons, opponents say, will indicate to potential enemies that France might respond with something less than all-out retaliation.

Giscard d'Estaing's rethinking of defense policy also implies a change of direction toward a more European defense in line with that of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and its strategy of "flexible response." Though France has withdrawn from the unified NATO command, it still is a member and obliged to come to the aid of any of its partners.

U.S. may have to accept broader Mideast initiative

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Jordan's Crown Prince Hassan, youngest brother of King Hussein, expects the United States will have to accept a new, broader Middle East peace initiative if the Camp David process fails to produce a generally acceptable solution to the Palestinian problem by next January.

Hassan, serving as regent of the kingdom while his brother is abroad, criticized the Camp David process as having "monopolized" peace efforts to the detriment of stability in this volatile region.

He made his points during a one-hour exclusive interview with The Associated Press at the royal palace in Amman while Hussein was in England prior to flying to the United States. Hassan held out little hope that his brother's visit to Washington would budge Jordan's opposition to peace talks as they now are constituted.

Relations between Washington and Amman are at a low ebb because Jordanians feel that the United States is bowing to Israel's policy of promoting settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in East Jerusalem. The territory was ruled by Jordan from 1948 but the Israelis occupied it in the 1967 war.

Hassan said Jordan and the United States differ on the approach to peace while agreeing "on the need for territorial exchange between the Arabs and Israelis and on the need for achieving recognition of the legitimate rights of the Palestinians.

"I find it difficult to see how the Palestinian question can be discussed without inclusion of the Palestinians."

Copter crash kills three

HELSINBORG, Sweden (AP) — Three people were killed when a police helicopter crashed in a field outside this southern Swedish city early today, police said.

The helicopter, which was on a traffic supervising mission, reportedly exploded but it was not clear whether the explosion occured on impact or in the air.

An investigation was under way.
