Producers Can Now Sell All Oil Held for Market

HUMBLE BOOSTS 39 GRAVITY TO $1.50 A BARREL

Texas Co. Announces a Price of $1.40 for 40 and Above

MARKETS AGAIN OPEN

Optimism Returning as Operators Are Again Able to Sell

The oil business is coming back.

Led by the Humble Oil & Refining Co., and the Texas Co., developments in the last few days now make it possible for producers in this district to sell all their production. The market has been opened up for crude that was being held in storage, and producers can now sell it at the present posted prices.

The Humble Oil & Refining Co., is offering $1.50 per barrel for crude where the grade is 39 gravity or better, which is an increase of 50 cents per barrel over the last reported price although the market had become so chaotic that most posted prices had been let go by the board by producers who were forced to move their product at any figure they could get.

The Texas Co. is offering $1.10 for crude from 33 to 39.9 gravity, and $1.40 for 40 and above.

Other crude purchasing companies are expected to meet the new prices without delay.

All the crude that has been held in this section is expected to start moving within a few days, and scores of wells that have been drilled to the top of the sand and shut down are expected to be opened up.

Once more the song of the walking beam and the taught cable will be heard in this section. News of the increase has come at a time when all operators were beginning to feel a little more optimistic, anyhow. Getting together of old timers at Tulsa and the Dallas meeting had a beneficial effect on the business in general, and the new development is expected to send hopes sky-rocketing again.

Humble gravity prices today are as follows:

30 gravity 90 cents.
30 to 32 9-10, $1.10.
33 to 35 9-10, $1.20.
36 to 38 9-10, $1.35.
39 and above, $1.50.

Effective Tuesday, October 9, 1923, The Texas company posted prices for North Texas and North Central Texas crude as follows:

Below 33, gravity, 90c.
40 gravity and above, $1.10.

The following notice was posted at the local office of the Texas company Tuesday in explanation of the lower prices:

"Houston, Texas, October 9, 1923.

"Effective this date and until further notice The Texas company will purchase in accordance with paragraph 'A' of Modification of Division Orders dated August 17, 1923, one hundred per cent of the potential production of wells covered by its division orders at its prices currently posted.

"Oil owners have the option of selling this company at its prices currently posted from and after this date all or any part of their oil now stored with this company under said modification dated August 17, 1923, and this company will absorb storage charges in all cases where sale is consummated within ten days from this date. In cases where oil owners elect to continue the storage arrangements on oil heretofore stored the charges and other conditions will apply as set forth in said modification dated August 17, 1923.

"The Texas company, T. J. Donoghue, vice-president."

"Paragraph 'A' of Modification of Division order, dated August 17, 1923, reads as follows:

"(a) The Texas company will purchase 35 per cent of the potential production of the well or wells covered by said division order for the time being, but has the right from time to time, to purchase more or less of all of said oil by posting notice in now posted by The Texas company of changes in price."

Move Will Save City $150,000 In Taxes

Bond Concerns Propose Refunding Improvement Bonds Into Lower Rate of Interest.

Refunding of $1,625,000 Wichita Falls municipal improvement six per cent 30 year bonds now outstanding into a five and a half per cent rate of interest which will save the city in taxes approximately $150,000, will probably become a reality following a special meeting of Mayor Frank Collier and four members of the city council with representatives of two bond concerns last night.

The firms seeking to convert the six per cent bonds into a lower rate of interest handled the original issue of the bonds voted in 1920. The outstanding bonds are not due until 1925 If the proposition is accepted by the council, the city will save $116,000 by 1925, due to the half cent difference in the interest rate, it was pointed out.

The bonding company representatives said the reason they could afford to offer the city the lower rate, was because the original bonds are already in the hands of their customers.

The representatives said they thought they could locate 75 per cent or more of the original bonds. If the proposition is accepted the bonding companies will pay for the printing of the new bonds. As soon as the original bonds are secured from those holding them, they will be sent to the attorney general at Austin and he will authorize the changing of six per cent to five and a half per cent bonds.

The representatives told the city council that Tuesday they had interviewed Frank Kell, P. P. Langford, C. W. Snider, W. M. McGregor and other local business men regarding the proposition. The representatives said the above were of the opinion that the city should take advantage of the opportunity and take the lower rate of interes.

Mayor Collier, Finance Commissioner R. E. Shepherd, Public Utilities Commissioner Burton Stayton and Health Commissioner Patton indicated they favored the proposal of the bonding companies. Police Commissioner John Young asked for more time to thoroughly investigate the proposition. Street Commissioner Clifford was not present and his absence was one of the reasons no definite action was taken.

That a call meeting of the city council to further consider the proposition would be held possibly this week, was stated by Mayor Collier.

STOKES FACE TO FACE AGAIN

Sensational Evidence Again Looms

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—W. E. D. Stoes, 73 years old, multimillionaire club man, and his beautiful young wife, Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, 31, met today for the first time in three years. They faced each other across the court room in New York supreme court at the start of a divorce trial that probably will be one of the most sensational in court annals.

Mrs. Stokes, attired in a severely tailored blue suit, with wisps of her titian hair peeping out from a close fitting small hat, was the first to arrive. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. A. S. Miller of Denver, and Mrs. C. H. Mescevey, a friend, also of Denver. Her attorneys, Samuel Untermyer and Isadore Shapiro, sat with her.

Stokes remained outside the court room in the corridor until the case was called. Then he strode in, preceded by five young men, lugging two great leather bags in which reposed the "evidence" written and photographed on which the aged millionaire hopes to win his separation from his titian haired young wife.

There were 25,000 pages of this "evidence" and pictures galore, according to the attorneys. By it Stokes hopes to prove that his wife was unfaithful to him with numerous corespondents and that she misrepresented her station in life when he married her. He hopes, too, to prove that she is unfit to have custody of their two children.

Stokes spent $300,000 in securing the evidence it is said, over a period of several years. He is under indictment in Chicago for "conspiring" to defame his wife's reputation.

Stokes took a seat in the court room directly facing his wife. He looked squarely at her. There was no emotion in either face.

Justice Mahoney ordered the jury drawn and a list of witnesses was read.

Spectators were excluded from the small court room in order to allow the prospective jurymen seats.

Stokes has seventy witnesses. He has named 57 corespondents.

WALTON OFFERS TO RESIGN FOR ANTI-KLAN LAW

Will Quit Governorship If Special Session Will Pass Bill

BILL OUTLAWS MASK

If Not Accepted Will Decide Further Klan Action, He Says

By The Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 9. Governor J. C. Walton tonight offered to resign to prove his good faith in his fight against the ku klux klan in Oklahoma, if the legislature, at its forthcoming special session will enact an anti-klan law which he will submit to the law makers.

Challenging opponents of his administration, whose battle cry has been: "We want neither klan nor king," the executive issued a statement addressed to the people of Oklahoma, declaring:

"When this bill becomes law, it will rid the state of the klan and I will resign the office of governor immediately thereupon. In this way, the people will be protected from the klan and peace and harmony can be restored to the state."

Briefly the governor's bill prohibits to the use of the mask by secret organizations in Oklahoma and provided that all such orders shall file complete membership lists with the regularly appointed civil authorities.

If his proposition is not accepted, Governor Walton declared, he will decide further "how we must proceed to protect ourselves from this organization of masked marauders who have practical control of the judiciary and police powers in the principal cities of the state."

Walton's Statement.

Governor Walton's statement follows:

"On October 6, 1923, I issued a proclamation convening the members of the ninth Oklahoma legislature in extraordinary session at 9 o'clock a. m., Thursday, October 11, 1923.

"The reasons for that call are well known to every citizen of this state. In short they grew out of the conflict in Oklahoma between the visible and invisible governments. This conflict must now be brought to a close with a complete victory for the visible government or Oklahoma will face indefinite turmoil and strife, the final results of which might be disastrous.

"This is a mere statement of fact. It ought to be apparent now to all citizens that the people of this state will not cravenly submit to the intolerance, persecution and violence of a hooded organization whose membership is secret. Racial and religious bigotry and mob violence are hard enough when preached and practiced in the open—they become traitorously so when hidden behind the un-American mask. Let us all agee that it is time to kill the serpent in our midst and restore that good nature and harmony and tolerance without which Oklahoma can neither progress nor prosper nor guarantee happiness to her citizens.

"It is necessary to review the chain of events that led up to this extraordinary session. On August 14, I declared martial law in Tulsa county For months a steady stream of letters had poured into the executive office from Tulsa and other counties in the state complaining of mob violence. Hundreds of Oklahoma's citizens had been beaten and tortured while other hundreds and probably thousands had been threatened and intimidated. Tens of thousands of our citizens felt and protested that the law enforcing branches of the government ,and in many cases, the courts, were under the spell and influence of an invisible

WORLDS SERIES BETS NOW EVEN

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The general inclination to regard the outcome of the world's series as a "toss up" was reflected tonight in the shortening of betting odds to even money. Several large wagers on the latter basis were reported placed by Wall street firms. Previously a majority of bets had been placed at 6 to 5 and 11 to 10 on the Yankees.

One wager was made at odds of 11 to 10 that Babe Ruth would make a home run at some time during the series.

International Chase Is Ended With Capture

U. S. Agent Told Not to Come Back Without His Man—"Wolf" Now in El Paso Jail.

By The Associated Press.

EL PASO, Oct. 9.—David Lamar, widely known as "The Wolf of Wall Street," sleeps in the El Paso county jail tonight after a chase that lasted eight months and covered a large portion of Canada, the United States and Mexico. Lamar was convicted and sentenced in the federal court in New York on the charge of conspiring to interfere with foreign commerce in war time. Twice the case was carried to the supreme court of the United States and as often upheld. Then the case was finally affirmed, but before the mandate of the court reached New York Lamar fled, forfeiting a $25,000 bail bond.

Chief Investigator William J. Burns of the department of justice detailed a man to take the trail of the fugitive with instructions not to return without him, and 10 days ago the long chase ended in Mexico City when Lamar was apprehended by department of justice agent Harry J. Jentzer, the man who had arrested him more than four years ago when the original charge was filed.

In Mexico Lamar represented himself as an agent of the Rockefeller interests charged with the negotiation of a large loan to the Mexican government. High government officials were his intimates and he was received in the most exclusive homes in the capital where he spent five weeks before his arrest.

Following Lamars' arrest, President Obregon issued a decree ordering the fugitive's deportation as an undesirable foreigner and he was placed aboard a train bound for El Paso. Thirty hours later, at Torreon, 500 miles from the border, the United States officers were served with a writ of amparo and their prisoner removed from the train. Court proceedings resulted in the confirmation of the deportation order and the journey to the border was resumed.

Lamar was arraigned before the United States commissioner here tonight and an order for his removal to New York was issued.

In Mexico Lamar's attorney was Luis Cabrera, former foreign minister of Mexico

FLOOD MENACE NOW IN FLORIDA

Frantic Efforts to Rebuild Dykes to Save City—Many Refugees

By The Associated Press.

MOOREHAVEN, Fla., Oct. 9.—A Frantic effort was being made tonight to rebuild the dykes surrounding this city and save the town from further disaster. The gale which swept across a lake on which the city faces was dying down at dusk, but the water was still rising in the city.

Waves from Lake Okeechobee were still washing high and farmers were attempting to reach the city with their stock. A small canal bank was crowded with refugees, the bank affording the only dry spot for miles around.

A careful check late today showed there was no loss of life.

Clewistown road is under water, all crops are damaged seriously and bridges are washed out, according to the dispatch which adds that the water in the streets of Moorehaven is three feet deep, and is in almost every business house.

The flood resulted from the overflowing of Lake Okeechobee.

ORLANDO, Fla., Oct. 9.—A special dispatch to the Reporter Star from Moorehaven at 4:50 p. m. said that the levee had broken in at least five places and that water is from one to six feet deep in the country. Almost all two-story buildings are filled with persons coming in from the farming country in boats and many are leaving town, the dispatch stated.

38 OWNERS ARE NOW IN GROUP OF COLONIZERS

Is Considered First Step In Completion of Valley Irrigation

M'FALL IS PRESIDENT

Board of Directors Scheduled to Meet Again Tuesday, Oct. 16

Thirty-eight land owners in the Wichita valley irrigation project met in the lobby of the Park Inn at Iowa Park yesterday afternoon and there completed the first steps in the organization of what will temporarily be known as the Land Owners' association for Wichita Irrigated valley.

The introductory discussion showed that it was the foregone conclusion of all present that an organization of the land owners was the only basis upon which to start work of colonization and development of the land soon to be under irrigation from the four and a half million dollar dam and canal project now being completed in the Wichita valley.

A nominations committee of five was appointed by the chair, which submitted 11 names for the first directors, these being unanimously elected. The directors chosen to assume charge of the work of the association are as follows: J. M. McFall, Wichita Falls, temporary chairman; S. R. Ludolphus, Herbert Griffin, W. L. Hodges, L. N. Locheridge, T. J. Pace, George Dorris, W. H. Chilson, J. S. Bridwell, Mrs. M. Dale Brown, John Hirshi. The directors immediately following adjournment, met and elected the following officers: President, J. M. McFall, Wichita Falls; first vice president, Herbert Griffin, Dundee; second vice president, W. H. Chilson, Henrietta; secretary, T. J. Pace, Iowa Park; treasurer, W. L. Hodges, Iowa Park.

Scurry Talks

Judge Edgar Scurry of Wichita Falls, introduced material for thought for the newly elected directors and all members when he said that there was no need of going afar to get experienced irrigation farmers, his own experience proving to his satisfaction that a good farmer is a good farmer, dry land or irrigated. Judge Scurry said that he had rented irrigated land to a dry land farmer, and that he had produced in his initial attempts not less than a bale of cotton to the acre and 200 bushels of sweet potatoes per acre.

This idea brought on more discussion, some owners maintaining that experienced men were needed, and all admitting that it was a matter of hard work and organization. Reese Allen threw another idea into those maintaining that they did not wish to sell any land just now when he offered tracts to experienced and willing irrigation farmers free. Col. W. H. Chilson of Henrietta brought the house to attention when he went straight to the real point in hand of the necessary appointment of a nomination committee and an organization of all land owners.

The meeting was called under the joint direction of the Wichita Falls and Iowa Park chambers of commerce, starting off with the election of T. J. Pace of Iowa Park for temporary chairman. Judge A. H. Brittain of this city chairman of the colonization committee of the Wichita Falls chamber of commerce, opened discussion with a general survey of the work completed and suggestions and plans of that body for beginning real work of irrigation. He pointed out the advantages of securing experienced farmers to take up holdings here, which project is already an example to others farming. Ranging into the future, the speaker pointed out the vast possibilities of this section, predicting the day in the near future when Wichita Falls and Iowa Park would be practically one city. All this is possible, he concluded, by unity and organization of the land owners for demonstration and first development.

Urges Organization

Statistics on the situation were given by Hubert Griffin, of Dundee, who urged organization in pointing out that every owner is responsible and must get behind, put over development. According to Griffin, there were present men owning 45,000 acres of irrigable land with a bond against it of $1,730,000, not including maintenance costs. This, he said, means co-operation and organization. Griffin made the motion to organize.

J. M. McFall of this city amended the motion suggesting a nomination committee, with Judge Scurry pointing out that a man from each community be on it. The question of money for initial work was next brought up, but was eliminated by the offer and acceptance from Hubert Harrigon, secretary of the chamber of commerce here, that that body with the Iowa Park organization would do all clerical and statistical work free of charges. This, Mr. Harrison said, was the beginning of an organization with a clean slate, and it need follow only its own dictations.

In the meeting it was also brought out that the land owners were getting a bargain, since the four and a half millions expended by Wichita Falls for the water was nearly five times as much as would have been used if city water supply had been the sole aim. Since dry farming does not pay, irrigation is imperative.

Election.

Immediately following the meeting, chairman McFall called together the directors, when the first officers for

State News of Interest to Northwest Texas

COTTON SHOULD BE SOLD SLOW

Terrell Sees No Reason for Selling in Declining Market

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 9.—George B. Terrell, commissioner of agriculture, gave out the following statement today concerning the cotton crop:

"Reports received from correspondents, representing nearly 200 cotton growing counties, show slight improvement in condition of the cotton crop in northwest Texas, but no improvement in in the main cotton belt. The average condition is 54 per cent against 53 per cent September 1st. The estimated yield for the state is 3,725,000 bales against 3,500,000 September 1st. It will require 3.75 acres to make a bale, or 134 pounds of lint cotton per acre.

"The United States government report published on October 2nd, estimates the Texas crop at 4,168,000 bales, and the total crop of the south as 13,015,000 bales.

"In my judgment, the U. S. Government estimate is too high for Texas, as the crop will not reach four million bales, and the total crop of the south will not reach eleven million bales. This is one million bales below the world's consumption of American cotton. There is nothing in the government report to cause a break in the cotton market of nearly ten dollars per bale. The market will react in due course of time, and the price will advance, and no one should be alarmed or sell cotton on a declining market.

"The government ginning report shows 2,185,219 bales ginned in Texas up to September 25th. Our report shows that 63 per cent of the cotton is picked; so the state cannot make four million bales.

"I stated in the summer of 1922 that cotton would reach 30 cents, and it went to 31 cents. I stated in August this year that cotton would reach 30 cents, and it has already reach that price in New York.

"This crop should bring 30 cents to give the farmer a reasonable profit as it has cost 24 cents to produce the crop. It will bring that price yet if the crop is sold gradually."

This unusual photo, just received, shows one of the accidents which marred the recent international races in Belgium. Five aeronauts were killed in mishaps caused by the hurricane in which the race began. One of the American entries, piloted by Lieutenants Olmstead and Choptaw, was thrown against the Belgian entry as the former was released. The basket of the U. S. balloon sideswiped the bag of the Belgian balloon and damaged it to such an extent that officials decided to withdraw it. The two Americans met their death in a later accident.

Burkburnett Society Paragraphs

"You are invited to join
Our Travel Party
Pleasure Special
Leaving Gill Station
506 East Main Street
At 8:30 p. m. Friday,
October 5, 1923."

Thus read the invitations; and at the scheduled time the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. M. F. Gill was the center of a gathering of merry travelers, who paused at the station entrance to survey the signs: "White Waiting Room" and "Colored Waiting Room."

Entering the former, they found the usual surroundings of a railway station; baggage room, ticket window, free literature, the "keep out" placards, etc.

"Waiting for the train" was passed in social chatter while sitting on the trunks and baggage; in reading the "take one" literature collected from the joke journal stand; drinking from the old cooler with its tin cup attached; or intruding on the "Private Keep Out" apartment dedicated to the family skelton, "Old Chuck." Much of this time was given also to the registration of passengers with the travelers aid, Miss Ethel Ellers, who required a brief, personal description in case of separation on the journey, and, as an introduction one to the other.

The ticket window was opened and a grand rush for tickets followed. Each found courteous service by the two agents in charge, Miss LaNette Haynes and Miss Helen Henry, both of whom proved to be invaluable officials throughout the excursion, serving also as brakemen, porters, and butcher boys.

At the sound of the train whistle, the gate keeper instructed all to follow the porters to track No. 6, the Y. M. C. A. pullman. There, amid a white decoration, the traveling ladies found their reservations; and a merry game of progressive "Travel" featured the amusement of the journey from Burkburnett, station by station, to Wichita Falls, to St. Louis, to Chicago, to New York; and back by Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas and home again.

Mrs. Glenn Kincaid made the greatest number of returns to Burkburnett, and was awarded a tiny locomotive—"always in the lead!" The "caboose" of the train went as the consolation. Salted peanuts and candies were offered throughout the game by the pleasant "Butchers."

"Twenty minutes for lunch!" was called and the passengers were presented dainty lunch boxes with hot chocolate and hokey-pokey ice cream, the usual menu courses of the trains.

The party culminated in the presentation of simeple little grocery sacks. And in each sack was a tiny cat, and on each cat was a tiny heart, and on each heart was the secret of the hour:

"Pauline Gill
R. D. Cunningham
October 24, 1923."

And thus the "cat was out of the bag!"

Then it was that congratulations and happy wishes were showered on the bride elect, and the merry travelers departed for their respective home with every impression of appreciation of the delightful journey on the pleasure special.

High School Sunday Breakfast.

Those who happen to live near the Central Ward may not need to be told that the juniors of the Burkburnett high school entertained the seniors with a sunrise breakfast Monday morning. Perhaps the seniors and a few of the juniors had rather call it a moonlight breakfast from the yawns that were in evidence about 4 o'clock.

For a few minutes after that time about 40 pupils of each class were on their way to the Magnolia Pump Station in the cars of the members; and when one of these cars got lost awhile on the way the excitement (?) of the searching party added to the fun of the occasion.

On arrival at the pretty park splendid camp fires welcomed the gay party and had been prepared by four of the junior boys who had spent the previous night in camp for the purpose.

Hot coffee fumes added a zest to the crisp morning air, and while the chickens broiled, many merry games were played not withstanding the heavy dew and dampness.

As the sun came up the boys and girls and their sponsor and teachers made merry around the morning feast of luscious chicken, buns, fresh tomatoes, fruit and coffee. So happy was the hour that another sunrise breakfast was planned by the pupils to be given in the near future.

Those joining this happy outing were Maxine Sturdavant, Eleanor Burney, Mildred Black, Patricia Middleton, Addele Parson, Ruth Mounts, Beatrice Smith, Ethel Tucker, Hazel Waddell, Irene Grimes, Opal Vernon, Harriett Roe, Edith Hall, Ouie Blackwell, Jennie Waddell, Cora Walker, Cora Lyles, Dorothy Ragsdale, Sybel Garner, Bernice Stephens, Eloise Williamson, Mayme Huffman, Jewell Heartsfield, and Ada Mae Duke. Also Charley Quast, Orrin Kyte, Reed Pace, Manning Boulder, Clyde Williams, Leslie Karnes, James Welman, Floyd Patterson, George Lake, Crump Anthony, Ray Blessing, Leonard Beard, Paul Gregory, Mark High, Sam Blue, Almie Montgomery, Leon Welmann, Johnnie Quasts, Albert Cliffe, and David Sides. The accompanying teachers were Miss Hays, sponsor for seniors and Miss Jessie Mae George and Sydney Gray, junior sponsors.

Franklin-Bellamy Mariage.

The marriage of Oliver F. Bellamy and Miss Veneda Mae Franklin was solemized Sunday afternoon at six o'clock at the Methodist personage by the pastor, Rev. C. D. Montgomery.

The groom is an employee of the Burk Steam Laundry and associated with his brother, R. A. Bellamy, who with his wife was in attendance at the marriage. The bride has lived in this city some time also, residing on Avenue C, and both parties are well esteemed young people, having many friends, who are wishing them every happiness of their new life. They will make their home in Burkburnett.

J. B. McKinley, who had charge of the Burkburnett dog exhibit at the Texas-Oklahoma fair, had the misfortune to lose a fine grip from his running board Saturday in which were his clippers, dog leads and other valuables.

Get Together Club Meets.

Mrs. R. L. Sparkman and Mrs. N. C. Sheffer were hostesses to the Humble Get Together club at their last meeting, where a most enjoyable session was reported. Among the business actions of the hour was the election of Mrs. R. T. Kaiser and Mrs. O. B. Roark into the membership of the club.

A Hallowe'en party for the members and their families was planned to be given some time in the latter part of the month, and Mrs. Sparkman was appointed chairman of the entertainment committee, Mrs. Jess Cook of the decorations and Mrs. J. A. Reed of the refreshment committee.

Dr. Frank Crane's reading "The Whole Soul" was given by Mrs. Cook.

In the two contests, "The Stiye Show" and "The Flower Romance," Mrs. Osborne won the first, and Mrs. Reed the latter; each were given burlesque rewards affording merriment for the friends assembled.

The pleasant hours were concluded with a seasonable menu of sandwiches, baked apples, with whipped cream, and coffee.

The guests were Mrs. J. A. Reed, Harry ten Brink, Hugh Jones, C. B. Bell, J. M. Bristly, Jess Cook, W. E. Johnson, W. H. Jernegan, T. C. Osborne, John Sabatoni and C. White.

Judge Jeff Kemp, of Cameron, Texas representing Milam county at the commissioners convention in Wichita Falls last week, visited Dr. and Mrs. J. M. F. Gill, former friends from Cameron, while in Burkburnett Saturday attending the luncheon given the delegates by the local chamber of commerce.

Mrs. Sanders Walker of Wichita Falls visited Mrs. Harry ten Brink at her home on the Humble lease friday.

Miss Mary Louise Davis was called home from the Texas Woman's college at Fort Worth by the death of her uncle, the late Ben Davis, Friday night. She returned to Fort Worth early in the week.

Mrs. Della Goodlow moved her millinery store from the American State building Monday to the store formerly occupied by the Still jewelry on East Main street adjoining the City Barber shop.

Rev. and Mrs. John D. White visited their daughter and family in Electra Saturday.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Moore will be pleased to learn that he has bought his former furniture business back in Burkburnett; and will return from Wichita Falls where he has been operating a similar store for the past few months.

The chamber of commerce will move from its present office in the American Bank building, to the second room south in the same building recently vacated by Mrs. Goodlow's millinery store.

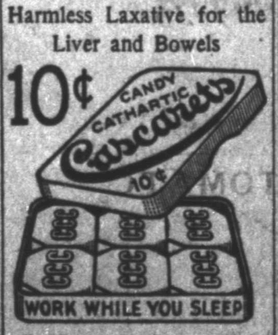

Among the many prizes won by Burkburnett citizens in the recent fairs, none were more prominent than that of Matt Ward of the Burkburnett Pharmacy whose record reads as follows in the automobile races for cash prizes; Childress, first prize; Memphis fair, four successive days, first prize each day using Hudson Speedster; also, first and second prize in specials. In Wellington fair, Mr. Ward won one first, and two second prizes in the races.

Terrell Advises Plowing Under To Kill Weevil

AUSTIN, Oct. 9.—Geo. B. Terrell, commissioner of agriculture, recommends plowing under green stalks as the most effective method of combatting the cotton boll weevil. His statement follows:

"There are many machines and various kinds of poison schemes recommended to catch or kill the boll weevil by scientists, experts, and near experts, or those who were vaccinated for experts, and it failed to take. Some of them are beneficial in lessening the depredations of the weevil, but none of them have solved the problem of effective control or eradication.

"The best and most effective method to lessen the number of boll weevils is to plow under green cotton stalks as soon as cotton is picked. This is simply common sense. There are millions of weevils on the green cotton in the fall and other millions of young larvae in the bolls, which hatch out if the green cotton stalks are left in the field, and these weevils all go into hibernation when cold weather comes, and all that live through the winter are ready for the young cotton the next spring.

"If the stalks are plowed under before frost, those millions of weevils will die of starvation before going into hibernation, and there will not be so many weevils the next spring, and a better cotton crop can be made. The stalks can easily be plowed under with a disc break plow or a two horse Oliver Chilled plow, or steel plow. The green stalks will put humus in the soil and make the land better and easier to cultivate next year. Wherever the cotton is picked early, the stalks should be plowed under. It is the best method of fighting the weevil, and will benefit the land if it does not kill the weevils. I do not like to advise, but this advice does not cost anything as the land must be plowed before the crop is made."

DEMOS SURE OF G. O. P. PICKING PRES. COOLIDGE

But Many Republicans Do Not Grant He Will Be The Nominee

BY B. N. TIMMONS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—That there is more of certainty in the minds of Democratic leaders than in the thought of republicans that President Coolidge will be the nominee of the republican party for president in 1924 has become apparent in political developments here with those in charge of democratic preparation turning their line of attack directly on the incumbent of the White House.

During the early days of the Coolidge administration, when "give him a chance" was the slogan everywhere, democratic campaign makers refrained from anything which might be interpreted as criticism of the president, and contented themselves with attacks on the record of the last republican congress, the absence of a definite foreign policy within the administration, and discussion of the allegedly bad results which had came to the industrial and agricultural interests of the country from high tariff and isolation. While that plan of the democrats is still being followed their official spokesmen are becoming more aggressive and critical of the attitude and acts of the president. The democratic victory in the special congressional election in Washington afforded official spokesmen of the party here an opportunity to charge that it was a test of the present administration, and to assert that the result showed dissatisfaction with the new president, they declare, who, "already has shown himself to be more reactionary than his predecessor, and more amenable to dictation on the part of reactionary old guard leaders." Much, too, has been made of the president's selection of a secretary known as a professional politician, and as such charged with patronage trafficking in the south. And now there is indication that every act and attitude of President Coolidge is to be subjected to the limelight. In power whose silent appeal touched every aspect or human endeavor. A transcript of all the testimony taken by the military tribunals will be submitted to the legislature and that body will be asked to pass it in its entirety Yet, this will constitute only a part of the story for testimony has been taken in only three of the 77 counties of the state, in most of which complaints have been received.

"In my message to the legislature, I will ask that body to enact the following law (appended.)

"For almost two years the people of this state have been living in terror caused by masked bands of marauders. In my struggle as governor of Oklahoma to rid the state of the menace my sincerity has been challenged by the Daily Oklahoman, the Oklahoma City News, the Tulsa Tribune, the Muskogee Phoenix, and other papers dominated to a large exten by plural K influences.

These papers tend to say that I have not been acting in good faith in endeavoring to destroy the ku klux klan.

"Their argument has been that they have wished to rid the state of 'klan and king'—I being the king. I now challenge these papers and all other newspapers and all klan members of the legislature or cause to be enacted the above bill and when this bill becomes the law of the state it will rid the state of the ku klux klan and I will resign the office of governor immediately thereupon.

"In this way, the people will be protected from the klan, and peace and harmony can be restored to the state. If this proposition is not accepted and the klan members of the legislature who are in a majority in both houses, as I am informed, undertake to impeach me first and then promise to pass an 'anti-klan law,' now being prepared at the headquarters of the invisible empire at Atlanta, Ga., I will have something more to say to the people of this state as to how we must proceed to protect ourselves from this masked band of marauders, who have practical control of the judiciary and police powers in the principal cities of the state.

(Signed) "J. C. Walton, Governor."

No Quorum.

"A quorum of the legislature is not present consequently the matter can be considered by us only as individual members," declared a brief statement issued from legislative headquarters tonight immediately after the governor's offer to resign.

Individually, however, the handful of members characterized the resignation statement "as a spectacular statement for outside consumption" and were unanimously opposed to accepting the executive's terms. Not more than 14 members were present and W. B. McBee, their leader, was absent.

"The last time a quorum was present it was dispersed by order of the governor at the point of the bayonet," the legislative statement given to the press continued. "Only a few of the members are present and have been meeting from day to day, and a quorum will not be present until Thursday morning, October 11."

The directors expressed themselves as being whole heartedly in the work before the association, and as ready to be called upon at any time for anything within their powers. It was the unanimous opinion that real service would be rendered within a short time in the way of developement. The first object before the asociation was expressed to be the enlistment of every landowner in the district irrigable.

The next meeting of the board of directors was set for Tuesday, October 16, at 424 Bob Waggoner building at 2 p. m.

ZONAGALE

In Collaboration With Russell Gore Writes On

EXIT—PSYCHOLOGY

"My wife," said the newly married man, "had a headache this morning."

His companion wondered what place the lady's indisposition had in the conversation, but asked no question.

"It has ruined my day," said the benedict, helping himself to the salad with anything but an invalid air.

"I do not understand women, and never will," the husband continued, settling himself to the salad. "I asked her first thing if she felt all right. If she said 'no' I'd have made my own breakfast. Toast and coffee would have been enough for me. But she said she was fine, dragged herself around and got an elaborate breakfast, which I didn't need and which she didn't touch at all." Now what was the sense of that?"

"A bride doing her duty?"

"Duty? Do you suppose she thinks of duty—in connection with breakfasts?"

"I suppose she does. Women have an eye for details."

"I have been married only six weeks, but I object to any woman thinking she must get breakfast for me when she has a headache. I am 38 years old and quite able to take care of myself, breakfasts included. She puts me in a false position. It has worried me all day."

And he helped himself to more salad.

"Marriage is a woman's game," he said after a while.

"Men do not and can not visualize it in advance. They don't see headaches and breakfasts—all that routine of life. I believe women do. By the way, how does it happen that you're happily married?"

"I was 23 when it happened. I grew up with my wife. She was 19. I don't remember our differences, though I suppose we had them. I only remember the fun we had together. It was fun because we were young and had no money."

"How did that make for fun?"

"Everything was an adventure! We were too young to analyze each other. didn't know enough to know if my wife had a duty—complex or not. I only remember that we had little spats and laughed at them after."

"And she never spoiled your day by getting breakfast when she had a headache?"

"I tell you I wasn't old enough to analyze everything so closely as you can. I was just a kid, and my wife was a kid. We had too many money troubles to fuss over psychology. But even the money troubles didn't keep us from laughing."

"Then you don't think I'm justified in letting my day be ruined by the fact that my wife persists in making a martyr of herself for me?"

"Well, no, to tell the truth I don't. She isn't doing it to annoy you. She's doing it because she likes you. Something in her requires that she get your breakfast for you whether she's sick or well. Instead of getting peeved you ought to be glad she feels that way about it."

"But I'm not a selfish brute. Don't you see that all I'm thinking about is not to be selfish?"

"You think too much. Too much along that line anyway. Why not, if you must think, think how nice it was of her to want to get your breakfast?"

They lighted cigarettes. And by-and-bye the older husband said:

"You'd have saved yourself a lot of trouble if you'd married when you were 23."

LADY OPERATOR AT TULSA MEET

Mrs. Murray, Who Started At Bristow, Creates Interest

By The Associated Press.

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 8.—America's first woman oil operator, the owner of 15 producing wells, and president of her own marketing company, registered at the International Petroleum exposition and congre... here today.

Among thousands of oil men from all parts of the world gathered here for the congress, Mrs. Charles Murray of Tulsa, is the first member of her sex to be listed at convention headquarters in the column of "producers and distributors."

The story of her oil operations cover only the period of the past 18 months, but it is the story of 15 producing wells in four fields in all of which Mrs. Murray, the mother of a ten-year-old girl, acted as scout, geologist financier and drilling superintendent. Her wells are in the Dutcher Bristow and Bartlesville fields of Oklahoma, and the Mexia pool in Texas.

Something over a year and a half ago a group of New York bankers shook their heads over an oil proposition advanced by Mrs. Murray. Undaunted she moved to Oklahoma, donned khaki, and began her scouting in the Bristow field. After several months study of the land formations, she obtained a lease, supervised the construction of a derrick, began drilling within 100 yards of dry holes and in less than 60 days brought in her first strike,—a 2,000 barrel well in the Bristow pool.

Since that time, she has extended her operations, and now is planning she said today, to "do some casual scouting in South America."

Some of this oil woman's operations have made history. Her record for drilling a Dutcher sand well in 26 days is unmatched in the field.

Mrs. Murray was seen at the exposition in a trim tailored suit, standing before a tool maker's exhibit explaining the advantages of various types of field equipment sold in two ton pieces.

"I find my business very fascinating," she said.

"You men who have never sunk a well in a dry hole reservation, don't know what a real thrill is."

The business session of the congress today, under the championship of vice-president E. R. Perry of Cosden and company, heard addressed by representatives of two foreign nations, following the keynote address of President L. B. Jackson urging permanent organization of a world petroleum institute embracing all branches of the industry, in all countries.

Dr. S. F. Bedoya, secretary of the Peruvian embassy at Washington, spoke on the oil future of his nation, urging American capital to develop the resources of the territory. Foreign capital "is accorded the fullest guarantees," he said.

Senor Sanchez Latour, minister to the United States from Guatemala, explained the laws of his nation affecting foreign capital in the petroleum industry.

"The law gives reciprocal rights to citizens of the United States to secure leases," was his summary."

POTTER SHERIFF IN FLOG CHARGE

Lash Victim Accuses Him of Turning Him Over to Masked Men

By The Associated Press.

AMARILLO, Oct. 9.—Sheriff Less Whittaker of Potter county took E. T. McDonald to a lonely spot in the country and turned him over to a band of masked and robed men who ordered him to leave the city, E. T. McDonald, recent victim of a lashing testified late today in the trial of T. W. Stanford on a charge of white capping.

Stanford, alleged klansman, was recognized by McDonald as one of his attackers on a later night when he was bodily picked up from a downtown street, taken into the country and lashed, he testified.

Stanford is one of six men under indictment growing out of the flogging and was the first to be placed on trial. Sheriff Whitaker and County Attorney Henry Ford are under indictments.

McDonald was the first witness to take the stand. Practically the entire day was spent in choosing a jury, the state and defense closely questioning all prospective jurors as to their opinions on the klan, and if they held any prejudice against Stanford. The defendant is under indictments of assault with a prohibited weapon and aggravated assault. The whitecapping charge is based on an alleged order by masked men that McDonald leave town while the other charges are based on the flogging which followed the threat.

On the stand McDonald related incidents of the first meeting and of the lashing later. Sheriff Whitaker took him to a lonely spot about five miles north of Amarillo and turned him over to two men who wore white robes and masks, he said.

The pair led him over a hill where five others, similarly robed awaited. There, he said, he was told to leave the country. The robed men returned to the officer who waited on the highway in a car and Whitaker brought him back to the city. He was not harmed at that time, he said. At the time of the order to leave he was under bond on a misdemeanor charge and awaiting trial. The robed men told him to call at the office of County Attorney Henry Ford and his bondsmen would be released, he testified.

The flogging took place about a week later. He said he recognized Stanford and Andy Knox, one of the five men under indictment. McDonald was on the stand about an hour and will be placed on again Wednesday morning.

Stanford is a merchant and has a family.

PHILLIPS GETS 3 YEARS IN PEN

By The Associated Press.

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 9.—J. Robert Phillips, formerly cashier of the Citizens National Bank of Waxahachie, was sentenced to serve three three years in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kas., and to pay a fine of $2,500 by United States District Judge William H. Atwell in federal court today.

A jury this afternoon found Phillips guilty of violating the national banking act in connection with alleged embezzlement of $37,000 of the bank's funds. Defense counsel filed notice of motion for a new trial.

Protests Permits.

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 9.—Protest against the state board of water engineers with holding permits to investigate reservoir and dam sites on Texas rivers was voiced today by Representatives of San Antonio interests which have filed application for permits on the Colorado river. The board was advised by the attorney general that it has authority to refuse or deny such applications as deemed advisable. The applications would result in duplication of work on sites already being worked on by the state board, it is claimed.

Coming To Valley.

COL. HARVEY COMING HOME.

Col. George Harvey is coming home. As American ambassador to the court of St. James he has been an international figure on the stage of action. Warren G. Harding made the appointment. Col. George Harvey had been his stalwart friend and confidential advisor and a reward was coming to the remarkable individual in the newspaper and political world who as editor of Harper's Weekly was the first American to propose the name of Woodrow Wilson, a college president, for the democratic nomination for governor of New Jersey as well as among the first after Wilson had made a record as governor to point him out as a presidential possibility and a Moses for the democrats of America.

Col. Harvey was a democrat in those days. Woodrow Wilson has a forgetful memory or else the friends of Col. Harvey have been in error ever since 1912. They say that W. W. snubbed the colonel, that he insinuated the colonel was too close to the House of Morgan to be the picker or the confidential advisor of a democratic president and that this led to the House of Harvey deserting the household of democracy and transfering its potential pen as well as its influence to the house of the elephant, where all good and true republicans are said to make their habitat.

Col. Harvey is a remarkable man, gifted as an orator and thinker and writer and a bit venemous when he cordially dislikes men and measures. The death of Harding and the elevation of Coolidge did not cause the Harvey resignation or his home coming. He is not a wealthy man, he has no fixed income beyond the salary of the ambassador and it is a costly honor to be the representative of this republic at the court of St. James. A man should be a millionaire, a multi-millionaire, with a large fixed income, to make the social spread that the position and conditions demand.

Col. Harvey has had the honor; he has had his fling on the other side; he has acquitted himself with credit to the most powerful of nations and he hasn't lowered himself in the estimation of those who are responsible for his diplomatic career or his admirers in America and abroad. He is a native son of Vermont, the president is a native son of Vermont; Col. Harvey is not only an intellectual among intellectuals but his admirers claim for him that he is the past grand master in the field of scientific politics.

He isn't coming home to vegetate. He isn't coming home to take a place in lame-duck alley. He isn't coming home to bury himself in the thicket of obscurity. Wherever Col. Harvey happens to be there is something doing and it is safe to predict that there will be something doing next year in the arena of American politics and that the man who was snubbed by Woodrow Wilson and honored by Warren G. Harding will be in the thickest of the fray. He is built that way.

FORD AS AN OIL TITAN

John D. Rockefeller was the first American billionaire. He made it in oil. Henry Ford was the second American billionaire. He made it by making a flivver and other investments. All these flivvers and tractors burn gasoline.

Henry Ford owns railways, coal mines, vast timber reserves, plate glass factories, iron ore reserves, water power plants and for recreation purposes, a deer park on his Michigan estate. Now the titans of the petroleum industry have been staggered by the announcement that the Michigan billionaire has invaded the petroleum fields with the intention of inventing millions in the vast industry which concerns so vitally all manufacturers of motor vehicles as well as all owners.

Those who are close to the flivver billionaire or who are permitted to speak for him say that he has become convinced there is a great waste in the petroleum industry from the mouth of the well until such time as it has been placed in the tank of the car and that he is going into the game to revolutionize the business as a producer and refiner and seller in order that conservation of resources may be had and stability of price for crude as well as the refined product be fixed and that remarkable fluctuations may be avoided in future.

Indeed it is said that he is the owner of proved oil lands in Kentucky and West Virginia and that his geologists and drillers have been given orders to go ahead and make tests. As a motor vehicle manufacturer Henry Ford threw down the gauntlet to Wall Street once upon a time and got away with it. Every business venture he has ever made since his face first appeared in the public prints as a successful motor builder has been attended with financial success.

If it is true that he has decided to enter the petroleum game it is also true that he will be up against the real thing and find himself face to face with a titan worthy of his steel, his financial resources, his business acumen and his American courage. He will find Standard oil no mean antagonist. Of course the New Jersey lion and Michigan lamb may lie down together but this will not be running true to form.

Henry Ford never had a partner that remained in harness for any length of time and John D. Rockefeller never needed one.

WHIRLING OF THE WHEAT

Sensations are short lived in America. Oklahoma had the center of the stage for ten days and then along came Kentucky with convict revolt in the penitentiary and the newseditor reduced the step-daughter of Texas to a shriveled localism on an inside page next to patent medicine advertisements. And this is the way of the world. A man is a pouter pigeon one day and a humming bird without the hum the very revolution made by the wheel of time.

Thirty cent cotton has throttled the southern politicians who are busy a year ago denouncing the federal reserve banks and all their imps. Cotton came back, the porker came back, the fat steers came back, the sheep came back, the goat came back, the lamb came back and the southern farmer who planted to corn as well as to cotton isn't on the politicial rampage.

A Romance of the Redwoods

"I saw him put it there," she explained.

"Such a sudden about face on my part may not appeal to him."

"I've thought of that," she said. A show color was mounting to her cheeks. "First of all it must become known who you are. He thinks you are a garage man, remember."

"I forgot that," laughed Davenport. "All right; I drop the disguise and appear in me full royal regalia as the celebrated author. Do you imagine that will impress him?"

"Then"—she hesitated—"then we give him the plausible reason for your changing your mind."

"Which is?"

"The announcement of our engagement," she said in a voice so that he barely heard it.

At this most unpropitious moment there came around the bend Simmins, lugging two infinitesimal trout.

"Damn!" muttered Davenport fervently.

But at Burton's suggestion Simmins was let into their secrets. "The paper belongs to me, and it is vitally necessary I get it back," Larry concluded. "Will you help?"

"It will affect all our future happiness," put in Burton.

"It is only fair to say that if you are caught, it is probable I could help very little. If you succeed my wife and I"—Davenport glanced triumphantly toward Burton—"will take care of you."

"It's a sporting chance, sir," said Simmins stoutly. "You have treated me like a gentleman and ere moonrise the papers shall be in our power!"

"Now, Simmins, listen," Larry impressed the point. "There are two papers. One is on a single sheet of paper; the other is on several. I want the one on the single sheet. The other doesn't matter. But if you should be in any doubt whatever, bring them both. All set?"

And then Simmins was dismissed from the scene, and matters were taken up at the point of interruption. They would not interest us.

CHAPTER XIX.
Simmins, a True Knight

The campaign of dissembling went off with a bang. Grimstead's hostility melted easily. The impact of Davenport's identity as a famous author, instead of the mechanic he had believed him, was tremendous. The engagement finished him.

Davenport was an excellent match—he was a manly chap and—if Grimstead could arrange it—he was going to be immensely wealthy. Of course he had a lot of damn-fool idealistic notions, but an author was supposed to be eccentric.

Supper passed jovially enough. Then Grimstead caused the hearts of three of the party to skip a beat.

"Simmins," he commanded, "here's my coat to clean up a little; it's got an awful fish smell about it."

As he spoke he took off the garment and hung it on a stub, replacing it with a sweater. He removed nothing from the pockets, and all three of the conspirators could distinctly make out a corner of the bill-fold showing from the inside pocket.

Simmins picked up the coat, and with it started toward the creek.

"Hey!" called Grimstead after him. "Where are you going? I don't want that thing washed!"

"No sir; of course not, sir. Merely a trifle of sponging, fresh running water, you know, sir," stammered Simmins at a loss.

"Well, go ahead. But there's some things in the pockets; look out you don't lose them. There's a tobacco pouch and a notebook in the side pocket, and my pocketbook in the inside pocket."

"Never fear, sir; I'll take the best of care," chattered Simmins, beating a hasty retreat.

"You're not afraid to trust him with a pocketbook?" Larry ventured to suggest.

Grimstead laughed.

"I wouldn't trust him with my roll," he agreed. "But that pocketbook contains nothing but papers and they can all be replaced. There's nothing there to interest Simmins."

Burton and Larry exchanged another glance. It was almost too good to be true.

After 10 minutes Simmins glided unobtrusively into the firelight and hung the coat again on the stub.

"Here," Grimstead commanded at once, "bring me that pocketbook out of the inside pocket."

For a moment Simmin's limbs refused to work; but he succeeded in extracting the pocketbook and bringing it to his master. Contrary to expectation, Grimstead did not open it. He examined Simmins curiously.

"You're trembling like a leaf," he said. "What's the matter with you?"

Simmins muttered something about its being chilly by the stream.

"Well, bring me my small leather kit bag.

He opened the kit bag, burrowed down to the bottom and tucked the bill book beneath the flap.

"There. She'll stick safe enough there until we go. Take it back, Simmins."

"Yes, sir," said Simmins, "and if there is nothing more, sir, I ask permission to return to my camp to turn in."

"Well, take a drink before you go," offered Grimstead. "Here's the key. Your teeth are chattering."

Simmins gratefully swallowed the whiskey, returned the key and disappeared.

Larry and Burton wandered off toward the car and found Simmins waiting for them.

"Here, sir; here it is," he burst out, thrusting a paper into Larry's hands. "What is to happen when he discovers his loss, sir, I cannot for the life of me imagine."

"Nothing! Don't worry, Simmins. If he finds out, I will take the blame. You have acted very nobly in this matter. Neither Miss Burton nor myself will ever forget it."

"Indeed we shall not, Simmons," added Burton; "you are a true knight!"

Simmins retired, his heart glowing.

The two young people made their way to the bank of the little stream, where they would be screened from the camp, there Larry lighted a match and cast a hasty glance of inspection at the document.

"It's all right," he assured Burton relievedly. "This is it! Blessed be Simmins!"

He tore it into small pieces and cast them into the current.

"I feel as though the weight of worlds had been lifted!" he cried.

"It does seem as though some one or something was helping us," said Burton soberly. "I think that we should be very thankful that things came about so easily."

CHAPTER XX.
Discovered.

The moment the young people were out of hearing Grimstead turned on Gardiner with an almost savage intensity of manner.

"Listen here, Ross," he said rapidly. "The time has come for action, and we must get busy. Things are at touch and go with us and the stakes are the biggest ever played."

Gardiner looked at him blankly.

"Never mind figuring it out. Listen to me and take your orders. This man Davenport is a fool, but he has brains. It was perfectly evident that the thought would soon suggest itself that if he could once get hold of this agreement he had signed, he could tell us to go whistle."

"But since he and Miss Burton——"

"Poppycock! Do you think it reasonable he'd change his attitude inside of an hour? Do you think that type of fanaticism ever becomes reasonable?"

"Then why——"

"A blind. It wouldn't fool a mudlark, let alone a wise old bird; I can put two and two together. The first thing to try was obviously to get hold of it peaceably, by stealing it. If that didn't work he was going to get it somehow, if he had to hold us up or sandbag us. I know the type. He's a fanatic, and the most dangerous kind. He'd commit murder before he'd give in."

Gardiner was excited.

"Get him before he gets us!" he suggested.

"I began to take my measures at once," Grimstead went on. "Obviously he'd try first of all to steal the bill fold. So I made it easy for him."

"Did you suspect Simmins?"

"Not at that time. But I figured Davenport would begin to manoeuvre to get hold of the cont or near it."

"A test," murmured Gardiner.

"Precisely. Well, when he did not, I began to think I might be wrong. Then Simmins came back scared as a rabbit, and I realized he was in it. I'll settle with him later!"

"But the agreement——"

"Was not there, of course! I substituted the carbon copy."

"They'll detect the difference; it isn't signed."

"I signed it for him," grinned the older man. "It isn't a very good forgery, but all he'll do tonight will be examine it with a match to see if it's what he wants."

"Clever work, chief" cried Gardiner. "But I don't see that it gets us far."

"It gets us until morning. And it corroborates my suspicions.

"Now listen carefully, Ross," continued Grimstead, "for this is what you must do. You've got to get out of here, and you've got to take this agreement with you to the nearest recorder's and get it entered. That means you start tonight; just as soon as everybody has turned in."

Gardiner nodded

So Goes It

By H. H.

The fight in Oklahoma seems to have resolved itself into a Walton or anti-Walton controversy. The guv kicked up so much dust the real issues were forgotten.

The governor is pulling a new stunt now. He is hiding from reporters and declining to be interviewed. He had better be careful or they will quit trying to interview him. When that happens he will become what is known in the parlance of Oklahoma as a "blowed up sucker."

With the fair over and the world series over in a week, it won't be long until the tired business man will find time enough to open his mail.

Buck Campbell, writing for the Oklahoman, says the greatest thing for a country is for all of its citizens to have homes of their own. We agree with him, but likewise agree with the Missus who says that when you are trying to live in Wichita Falls and can't find a place to rent, there is little solace in that own-your-own-home-after-you-get-it-paid-for line of conversation.

One of these days we'll get one of our own and when we do we'll sympathize with the poor unfortunate who are trying to find a place to hang their hats. Sympathy comes easy and makes the sympathizer feel like he'd done something for somebody.

If any deluded shrimp thinks Wichita Falls is slipping just let him get out and try to rent a home in this town. In another week we will be able to name the streets backwards and will be fully acquainted with all the residence property in town.

Wichita Falls is a town of home-owners—they're buying them every day, too. When the citizens of a town become tax-payers their stock as citizens goes up about 100 per cent and the town becomes just that much better a place to live.

What has become of the old-fashioned hair ribbon?

MOTHERS
AND THEIR CHILDREN

Arithmetic Made Interesting.

One mother says:

I secured for my children a lot of samples of breakfast foods, soaps, and so forth for them to play store with. I also got them some sales books, and when they play store I insist that they do it right. The storekeeper is careful to make out the sales tickets correctly and the customer watches to check him up. This is splendid training in arithmetic for them.

WHAT TODAY MEANS

LIBRA.

Four aspects operate, all of which are of adverse or undesirable nature. They tend to interruptions, disturbance, inharmony, delays and loss; hence this is a day on which all important matters had best be delayed or postponed. Attend only to routine work, rest, recreate and protect your health.

A child born today will be venturesome, self-reliant and easy-going in disposition.

If today is your birthday you are the type that is self-made, because you are self educated. You are both shrewd and intuitive; you have to experience a thing only once to know it, and you never make the same mistake twice.

Your mind is pre-eminently that of the successful inventor. You have the happy faculty of fearlessly using all that you have ever heard of on the problem in hand, and your criterion of usefulness is simply; if it works, it is good.

You are somewhat of a nomad in disposition. This is due more to curiosity than to love of adventure. You are a student of aspects rather than profundities, and you soon exhaust the possibilities of any one place or thing.

You should have a successful career in any business you undertake, whether you stick to it any great length of time or not, and most probably not, for you made your estimates of a situation with swift rureness and follow it unerringly. You are a born salesperson as you have accurate insight and logic. Your personality will get you through a portal that the average person cannot penetrate.

You are fond of music, literature and art; indeed you have a distinct talent for drawing, but one that is more of the reason, than the emotional expressiveness so necessary to genius. You have none of the qualities of genius, but you might make a superb craftsman, designer of hats and gowns or an interior decorator.

During the months of November and December some great thing will come into your life and change the life and change the whole aspect of it. If you are single, you will probably have a brilliant offer of marriage which you should accept.

Successful people born on this date are:

Nathan Miller, ex-governor of New York.

John J. Stevenson, geologist.

Edna Dean Proctor, poet.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

THE MODERN METHOD

In the Spain of the bull and the toreador;
In the Spain of the glorious past,
If a rebel arose and emitted a roar
Into jail he was speedily cast,
And there he reposed—as a general thing—
On a diet of water and bread,
Till the jailer got word from the hand of the king
To lop off the miscreant's head.

Rebellion was hardly a popular sport
In the era to which we refer,
The life of a kicker was dreadfully short
And so was his shrift, as it were.
And peasants and statesmen, and generals, too,
No matter how inwardly bold,
Arranged pretty largely to outwardly do
Exactly as they had been told.

But now when a general says to the king:
"You are hashing the government, kid;
Get rid of that bungling political ring
Or I'll presently march on Madrid."
The king says serenely: "Oh, put down your gun;
I'll set those old birds on the shelf,
If you don't like the way the country is run
Come up here and run it yourself!"

Thus bloodshed's averted, rebellion's put down,
The kicker takes over control,
With never a swear word, and never a frown,
And not a cross word from a soul.
It isn't the way of the days of the past
When thousands of men were mowed flat
Till all their defiance was smothered at last,
But it's quite an improvement, at that!

TEMPORARY ASCENDANCY

America and Canada have 83% of the world's automobiles, but they won't have for long if they continue to concentrate them all at grade crossings.

A DISTRACTION

We understand now why the Chinese have never built a powerful nation. All their brain power has been concentrated on learning how to play Mah Jongg.

QUANDARY

It is difficult to know how to proceed when the farmers tell us to eat bread and the philosophers insist that we cast it on the waters.

TIMELY VIEWS on WORLD TOPICS

"France's Militant Policy Toward Germany Is Suicidal," Says Bush.

France's militant policy toward Germany was denounced recently as suicidal and brutal by Irving T. Bush, president of the Chamber of Commerce of New York state and head of the Bush Terminals.

Bush asserted that the industry of all Europe is being crippled by France's "mistaken military policy."

He declared Germany could not pay reparations unless she was able to sell to other countries more than she bought, and that she could not do that until France's grip on her productive machinery was removed.

Only business men, not politicians, could find the way out, Bush said. He continued:

"They must get together and treat the German situation as they would a bankrupt business. They must find out how much Germany can pay and when she has paid it, put her in a position to liquidate her indemnities and reorganize her industries.

"I yield to no one in my admiration of the French people, who are among the finest on the continent of Europe, but I am absolutely opposed to France's present brutal policy.

"France maintains a standing army of from seven to eight hundred thousand men. As you get into Poland and the countries of the Little Entente, you find them bristling with bayonets partly by reasons of loans made possible by France."

THE COLONIZATION QUESTIONAIRE.

What the Land-Owners Think About Listing their Land With Local Real Estate Men.

The great bulk of real estate transactions in any settled country are normally handled by the local real estate men.

These men are the real community builders and a live bunch of realty men can accomplish wonders in building a city and in keeping a town or city abreast of the times.

If a man has a city lot or a farm to dispose of the way to sell it quickest at the best price is to let a live local real estate firm handle it.

Whenever it becomes necessary to colonize a large tract of land but few realty men have either the capital or experience necessary to handle such a proposition which is in fact a business quite separate and distinct of ordinary real estate.

Nevertheless realty men as a body are deserving of the confidence and consideration of the land owners, so the question was asked "Do you believe that the real estate men of Wichita Falls and Iowa Park will be able to sell your land for you?"

Seventy-three per cent answered the question in some form.

Twenty-three per cent said "No."

Twenty per cent said "Yes."

Ten per cent said "Probably."

Thirteen per cent did not know, while seven per cent said they were going to handle the sale of their lands themselves without calling in any real estate men.

There is no unity of opinion on the subject shown in the answers, but it is evident that only a small percentage of the owners feel that the local realty men would be of material assistance in disposing of their lands for them.

TODAY'S POEM

AT THE FIRESIDE.

At even the world grows black,
And the volleys of frozen rain
Hurtle and smite with ruthless spite
Till the pale white day is slain.

But the leaping wood-flame sings,
Proms its core of rich, red light
The tempest's fray sounds far away
For Love is our guest tonight.

STAGE AND SCREEN

AMUSEMENT CALENDAR.

Strand—"Rupert of Hentzau" with Elaine Hammerstein, Bert Lytell, Claire Windsor and Lew Cody.

Olympic—Pola Negri and Jack Holt in "The Cheat," last time.

Empress—"Daytime Wives."

Gem—Richard Barthlemess in "The Seventh Day."

The D. F. and R. enterprises are inaugurating some "big town stuff" in the way of theatre improvements. The new Mission theatre, formerly the Majestic, will be completed soon and promises to be one of the finest show houses in the city. A big organ is being installed, and the building has been completely remodeled.

The new lighting effect on the front of the Olympic makes us think we are walking down Curtis street in Denver where the entire theatre fronts are a blaze of light. A bank of lights on top of the theatre flash on and off while lights rain down the panels between the windows. The lighted front makes the theatre stand out all down the block and improves greatly the appearance of Indiana street at night.

Interior decorating and art work on the inside of the theatre has been going forward under the direction of Robert Sparks. The lighting has been changed to a soft rose glow, and in the latticed windows on either side of the stage stand tall gold baskets of flowers between beautiful hung drapes. Between the soft fringed lights on the walls, a flower basket hangs on each panel suspended from the ceiling by a gold cord and tassels.

The atmosphere of the theatre is refreshingly different, and the art work in color and design shows talent of high degree. Wichita Falls is fortunate in having a "big town" theatre of this type in the city.

"The story of the actor who made up so well that when he appeared at the studio gate in the morning dressed for his part, the gateman failed to recognize him and refused him admission, is pretty old," said Walter Long, the Mexican villain in "The Broken Wing," a Tom Forman production which will be seen Thursday at the Olympic theatre.

"I was playing a blood-thirsty Chinese bandit. I had to go on location early and got to the studio gate at 8 o'clock," continued Long. "The gateman knew the character I was to play and when a Chinaman strode up smiled, bowed and said, 'Good morning, Mr. Long.' It drew a laugh from me."

"Don't see anything in that to draw a laugh," remarked a hearer.

"But that particular bandit was Hip Long, the Chinese laundryman," explained Long.

Jackie Coogan, Metro star, is back in Hollywood from a vacation in the high Sierras. Accompanied by his father and mother and an expert guide, Jackie, after finishing his first Metro picture, "Long Live the King," a picturization of Mary Roberts Rinehart's novel, left for his father's ranch in the Sierra mountains just this side of the Nevada state line. On horseback, the party skirted the edge of the Mojave desert for several days until they reached their ranch of 80 acres, mostly virgin forest, situated on Manor creek, a locality unknown to even the forest rangers until the advent of the Coogans.

Jackie bagged several foxes and caught trout.

Mae Murray, beautiful star of the new Metro picture, "The French Doll," appearing next week at the Strand, was riding in her new car in Hollywood recently when a motorcycle policeman came alongside and made the chauffeur bring the car to a halt. Miss Murray was greatly surprised, for the car had been proceeding at a very leisurely pace.

The policeman soon made things clear, however. He had just arrested a woman for speeding, and she had given as her excuse that she wanted to catch up with Mae Murray so that she could see how her hat was trimmed. The kindly cop decided she ought to have a look, anyway, even if she did get the summons, so he brought Miss Murray's car to a stop—and brought the speeder up.

James W. Horne, who directed "The Hottentot," one of Douglas MacLean's most successful starring vehicles, has signed a contract to direct Mr. MacLean in "The Yankee Counsul," which will soon be filmed as the star's second independent production for Associated Exhibitors. "The Yankee Consul" is an adaptation of Raymond Hitchcock's famous musical comedy success.

Malcolm McGregor, who enacts a leading male role opposite Viola Dana in her new Metro vehicle, "The Social Code," has been gathering stories about the thriftness of the Scot. His latest deals with the accident which resulted in the invention of cuffs for trousers.

It seems a Scotchman had to cross a muddy road and turned up his trousers at the bottom. When he returned a six-pence was missing from the funds in his pockets.

After hunting high and low, the coin was located in the fold of the trousers. The next day he had all his trousers cuffed, and thus the fashion commenced. "The Social Code," in which Mr. McGregor appears, was written by Rita Weiman and directed by Oscar Apfel.

ROMANCE

Scene from Sir Anthony Hope's "Rupert of Hentzau," a magnificent picture with a notable cast. Elaine Hammerstein, Bert Lytell, Lew Cody and Claire Windsor head a long and well known list of stars. The story is the sequel to "The Prisoner of Zenda," that extracts favorable comment yet from people who saw the picture. "Rupert," if anything, is a more wonderful picture because of the advantage of experience in handling this type of story. See this picture before it closes this week at the Strand, it's one of the really big ones.

dom a café designer on futurist lines—of the type that is now making its appearance on the Parisian boulevards—was built as one of the huge sets for Viola Dana's latest Metro picture "In Search of a Thrill." The orchestra was placed upon a plant covered platform at one end of a spacious hall. Behind the orchestra and slightly above the level of the platform was a plain white canvas wall on which lights played from behind. At intervals clowns, dancing girls, models and others appeared in various poses behind the canvas, forming sometimes grotesque but also striking silhouettes. The walls of the cafe were composed of large panels with satyrs and other figures depicted in futuristic modern style.

"In Search of a Thrill" was adapted to the screen from a story by Kate Jordan. Oscar Apfel directed the production.

Yup.

Can't be did? Very simple. Here's how:

There's a feud in old Kentucky, way back "thar" in the hills. A solitary horseman wends his way over the pass.

Bang! He topples from his coal black steed—dead.

Back home little Buster is seen in his cradle—now the only living representative of his clan.

Years pass. Little Buster, now 16, returns to Kentucky from New York. This time it is Buster himself.

And there you are.

Going Out Tonight?

You can usually tell when a girl or boy is looking forward to an evening of real fun, or whether they feel that they have simply been invited to "fill in," as they get ready to go to a party or dance.

The ones who have nothing to worry them about the way they look are so much more noticeable by the shrinking and backwardness of the ones who are afraid to mingle in the fun because they know how unattractive they must look on account of their pimply, blotchy or rough, eczema skin.

Their one friend is the wonderful Black and White Ointment, if they will just use it faithfully, because it will get rid of all those ugly bumps and make their skin soft, smooth and lovely. It is economically priced, in liberal packages. The 50c size contains three times as much as the 25c size. All dealers have it.—Adv.

Passing By the Ordinary and Seeking The Ideal.

A girl should learn early in life that the ideal man exists only in the fairy story book. Modern fiction paints a man as he really is.

Nobody wants to read about a chap that was perfect in every respect. The fun we get out of reading comes from being able to say, "the hero of the book reminds me of John." That is because the writer has written about a real human being, and every one knows some one just like him.

And after all it is the ordinary human man that we love. There are a few that have the veneer of a prince charming, but underneath they are just like all the rest of the boys we know.

Stop looking for perfection and remember, "the best have something bad and sometimes something little; the worst have something good and sometimes something great."

Don't pass by any regular fellow because you think somewhere there exists a creature like the ideal you have formed in your mind. Better take the material at hand and mold him into what you want him to be.

World's Series Battle Expected to Be Close

GOTHAM ARRAYED FOR FIGHT WITHIN ITSELF; ATTENDANCE EXPECTED TO SMASH RECORD

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—A house divided against itself!!!

Gotham's opposing diamond forces were arrayed tonight in battle order on the eve of that annual American institution—the world's baseball championship series—for which the New York Giants and Yankees, rulers of all they have surveyed for the past three seasons, will start their 1923 struggle tomorrow.

May Break Records

Records for receipts and attendance at a single game are expected to be shattered when the series opens tomorrow afternoon in the Yankee stadium, home of the American league champions, the biggest and costliest park in the country. It was predicted that the capacity of the stadium, 70,000, would be taxed and that the receipts would be close to $200,000. With games alternating between the stadium and polo grounds, which ranks next in point of size, there are indications that all world's series turnstile records may be broken.

The Giants, who have gained baseball's premier honors for the last two years at the expense of their metropolitan rivals, enter the title battle under the indominable leadership of John Joseph McGraw, determined to establish a record of three straight triumphs. The Yankees, aided and abetted by Babe Ruth—this season's star of stars—and after winning their third straight pennant by a record margin—go into the fray equally determined to turn the table and wipe out the sting of reverses in 1921 and 1922.

Dopesters Careful

The experts and the "dope"—that nebulous quantity which has acquired a pretty steady habit of going wrong—played safe tonight by viewing the forthcoming struggle as a "toss up."

There were, of course, those adherents of the Yankees who declared the supposedly superior twirling strength of the American league champions, plus their improved morale, and the all-around greatness of Ruth, would be the deciding factors. And backers of the Giants, recalling the fighting spirit that carried them to victory in eight games in the 1921 series and the remarkable upset last fall when they routed the Yankees with four triumphs and one tie game, were just as confident that the McGraw men had the requisite punch, courage and skill to make it three straight.

Looks Close

But, generally keen analysists of the respective merits of the two clubs predicted a close, hard fought series, with the "breaks" likely to decide the issue. On paper, the Yankees, with five star twirlers, possessed a marked advantage over their rivals in pitching, that all-important factor in a short struggle, but there was evidence that the Giant mound staff had rounded into excellent form and might again duplicate its victorious runaway of last year.

Those who looked for an evenly waged battle were strengthened in their views tonight by reports from rival camps that both teams probably would take the field tomorrow with their regular line-ups intact. Some apprehension on both sides had been caused by injuries to several stars, notably Wally Pipp, first sacker of the Yankees, who had been out of the game for a fortnight with a bad ankle, Pipp, however, took his regular place in the final workout of the Yankees today and while Manager Miller Huggins declined to commit himself definitely, he indicated that the lanky guardian of the initial bag would be on the job. In the event of Pipp's inability to play, Huggins had planned to switch Ruth to first and start either Harvey Hendrick, a recruit, or Elmer Smith, a veteran, in the vacated outfield post.

Other regulars who have been on the hospital list also appeared to have rounded into shape. Casey Stengel, veteran Giant outfielder, had recovered from an injured heel, it was said, while Bob Meusel, Yankee outfielder, cavorted in practice without visible trace of the recent injury to his ankle. The only players definitely out of the contest are two reservists, Mike McNally, utility infielder of the Yankees, who has a lame ankle, and Ralph Shinner, Giant outfielder, who is in a hospital with pneumonia.

Series Fans Will See "Babe Ruth" Of Minor Leagues

Moses Solomon.

Moses Solomon, Jewish boy obtained from the Hutchinson, Kan., team of the Southwestern league by John McGraw for the fair sum of $50,000 isn't eligible to play in the world's series but will be in uniform during the big melee and will be given the once over by the crowd. Solomon's great hitting brought him the title of "Babe Ruth of the Minors." He is one of the few Jewish lads in organized baseball and is popular wherever he goes.

Matty's Still Biggest Series Hero

Every world's series produces its heroes—and its goats. The 1923 affairs probably will contribute a name or two to both lists.

But as series after series is written into the diamond history Christy Matheson, "Big Six" still remains the outstanding hero of these fall classics.

Oddly enough Mathewson set a record for the heroes and would-be heroes to shoot at in the first real series staged—that of 1905. The Giants tackled the Athletics that year. McGraw's men won four out of five games and Mathewson won three of them. He held the Athletics scoreless through all three contests.

Next to Mathewson, Home Run Baker stands out in the memory of most fans. It was Baker who made hom run hitting popular.

In the fall of 1911 the Athletics again tackled the Giants. The Mackmen won that series, four games out of six. In the second game, against Rube Marquard, Baker slammed out a home run that put the Mackmen in the lead. In the very next game Baker came to bat against Mathewson, then still in his prime, and slammed out another homer.

Baker played in four series with the White Elephants and then got another slice with the Yanks in 1921.

Bill Wambsganss of the Indians stands out as one of the most recent heroes. He is the only man who ever pulled a triple play unassisted in a world's series. For those who want to know, Wamby's victims were Pete Kilduff, Miller and Clarence Mitchell of the Dodgers. In the fifth game of the 1920 series Kilduff was on second. Miller was on first. Mitchell drove a liner right at Wamby, who touched second and then turned to tag Miller before the latter could retrace his steps to first. Bagby was the Cleveland pitcher.

Of course, Fred Snodgrass takes rank as one of the greatest goats of a series. His famous $30,000 muff is recalled whenever a world's classic or a bonehead play is recalled. But there is this about it: Time has mellowed the crime until Snodgrass now derives a bit of honor instead of disgrace as the perpetrator of that mishap which cost the Giants a world pennant.

BOTH M'GRAW AND HUGGINS ARE CONFIDENT OF WINNING

McGraw Admits All the Dope Is Again Against the Giants But Confidence Will Win—Huggins Says Team Is Changed in Spirit.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, discussing his team's chances in the world's series tonight, said:

"In 1921 and in 1922 the dope was all against us. It had our pitchers weaker than those of the Yankees and my heavier batters hardly as good as those of the Yankees. Yet my pitchers proved strongest and batters the hardest hitters. The dope, as usual, is against the Giants. Yet there is but one thing to predict—a Giant victory. The Giants are great ballplayers and they are strengthened by the confidence gained in the winning of two world championships in a row."

Said Miller Huggins:

"The Yankees are a different team than in 1921 and 1922. The personnel is almost the same, but the spirit is changed. Now, along with the exceptional ability, the Yankees are aggressive and are working better together. Babe Ruth is changed. He expects to do heavy work with his bat. The pitching staff was never stronger or more brilliant. I think I may safely predict that the world's championship gonfalon will fly over over Yankee stadium after this series."

BULLDOGS HAVE TROUBLE AHEAD

Sharp Battle Is Looked for in New Mexico Game

Special to The Record News.

CLARENDON, Texas, Oct. 9.—The first high hurdle in the Bulldog football path will loom in Friday's contest when Clarendon college will meet the New Mexico Military institute here.

To date Clarendon has played two college contests, one in Texas and the other in Oklahoma. In both the Bulldogs emerged with shutout victories. Since the mid-season of 1921 the Bulldogs have been winning victory after victory until today they have hung up the proud record of 17 consecutive victories. In Friday's game however they are going to face the first real fight of the season and there is much speculation as to the result. The institute is claiming the most promising aggregation in years and their claim is well verified both in record and in the report of men who have scouted their contests. They have won their first two matches and those who have seen them play state that they show a flashy brand of both offensive and defensive football.

Captain George Close who has for three years been playing a stellar role in Clarendon football circles is rounding out his fourth season a perfect dazzle of speed and his dancing sidestep that brought disaster to 10 college teams last season gives rise to a hope and promise for Friday's contest.

Chicago Science Starts Tests Of Einstein Theory

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Experiments have been begun by Prof. Albert Michelson and Dr. Henry Gordon Gale, world noted scientists at the University of Chicago, which may have a bearing on the Einstein gravitational hypothesis, it was learned today. Basically, it was said, the scientists seek to measure the influence of the velocity of light on the rotation of the earth, with the consequent movements of ether.

A tile tube, two feet in diameter and a block long, has been laid on a vacant lot near the campus, with apparatus to record ether vibrations.

"There is some possibility that the Einstein theory will not be borne out by the facts we discover," said Dean Gale.

It probably will be several weeks before any results of the tests will be made known and if unsuccessful, further tests with a longer tube will be made.

MISSING WOMAN AND BABE FOUND

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 9.—A search of over six hours was ended tonight when Mrs. J. T. Matthews and her three-weeks-old baby were found tonight in a dense thicket in East Austin. Mrs. Matthews was in a dazed condition clutching the infant in her arms. Cries of the baby drew searchers to the spot. Over 1,000 persons, including the American Legion emergency squad, national guardsmen of the local company, police and volunteer searchers, had combed the city since noon, for some etrace of the woman, who was missed from her home today, shortly after returning from the hospital where the child was born.

By The Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Oct. 9.—Harry W. Hamilton, group head prohibition enforcement officer, was arrested by Texas rangers here today on charges of conspiring with three other men to sell apparatus to be used for the manufacture of liquor.

Hamilton was arraigned before the United States commissioner and held under bond of $1,000. It is charged that Hamilton conspired with others to sell two stills and a coil of copper tubing. The rangers declared that Hamilton was caught in the act of delivering the still to a member of their force who posed as deliveryman for an alleged bootlegger. The still is alleged to have been paid for by the ranger with marked money.

Ross Young Should Prove Star of Big Series

Ross Young swinging a mean bat.

BY NORMAN E. BROWN.

If Ross Young fails to shine in the world's series today it will be a great surprize to the multitude which has followed the campaign of the Giants through the past season.

For this sturdy right fielder from the Lone Star state is as responsible as any other single member of the crew for bringing the third National league flag in a row to Giantville. In fact, he deserves a bit more credit than most of them for he was one of the few men who didn't hang back in the traces when the Giants were far in the lead. Had he let down like some of his teammates the Giants might have dropped just enough games to cost them the flag.

Ross' fielding, hitting and base running have been more than brilliant all season. He also has the one attribute that many of the newer players seem to lack—the fighting spirit. Young is in there every day, battling to the last ditch, win or lose.

And this brilliant work on Ross' part cannot be considered a spurt. He has just ended his sixth season in the big show and he has hit .300 or better every one of those years besides playing brilliant ball afield.

The Yankees—including Miller Huggins—know and fear Young. You may recall that the Giants cinched the final game of the world's series last season—and the world's championship—with an eighth inning rally. Further thought may recall that when Mr. Ross Young came to bat in that inning Miller Huggins ordered Joe Bush—Bullet Joe—to pass Young.

That sort of places Young.

Vets Of Spanish War In Banquet Meet At Club

With 35 men suddenly finding old comrades of the Philippine palm land, Cuba, and Florida palmetta swamps, and raking up surprising recognitions of old soldiering pals who had been business acquaintances for years but lost to view for all that the old times mattered, veterans of the Spanish-American war last evening took final steps toward organizing a local post at a banquet given by Captain William S. Langford in the Wichita club rooms.

Many a yarn went round the board as these men, all in the prime of life, discussed old experiences as real veterans can. Now and then someone would catch the sound of a familiar name or company, and there there would follow many expressions of surprise and old recollection. During an excellent dinner, the guests were entertained by vocal and instrumental selections by the talented Mrs. Lambraith Hancock and Mrs. Joe Crouch.

The theme of the chief speakers last evening was for equal rights for Spanish war veterans with veterans of other wars. Statistics were given by Captain Langford to sow that $30 monthly was the maximum pension given to Spanish war veterans disabled as compared with $158 given others. Land settlements have also gone against these men, he said, preference being given all others, except in a few states where state statutes provided.

It is the purpose of the Spanish veterans to obtain federal aid, as shown at the last national convention, at Chattanooga. Colonel Hatchett, also a member of the American legion made the statement that Spanish veterans were all volunteers, fought in the only unselfish war ever entered by the United States, and asked nothing but justice. He further expressed the opinion that the action of other veterans organizations in beseiging the gates of the treasury for funds for able bodied and uninjured men was in the light of pay for their patriotism and the biggest blot on the American people today.

Captain Langford had been elected post commander at a first meeting last September 10. W. R. Duke was elected adjutant and left soon after for the national convention of war veterans at Chattanooga, where he arranged for organizing here. Other officers elected at the first meeting were: Senior vice commander, George E. Sopher; junior vice commander, E. G. Pease,; assistant adjutant commander, A. S. Love; quartermaster, J. C. Bradshaw.

With enthusiasm running high, the election of officers wa completed and arrangements planned for a national election of officers was completed and nooga for the initiation ceremony. All veterans in north Texas were declared eligible, and further securing of addresses under the direction of adjutant Duke recommended. Mr. Duke has been the working power behind the movement to organize here, and has given much time to looking up veterans. Remaining officers elected were: officer of the day, G. J. Montgomery; officer of the guard, Comrade Ragland. The appointive officers were rapidly filled by the commandant as follows: chaplain, Charlie Wisdom; historian, Clark; sergeant major, Thomas; quartermaster sergeant, Martin; color sergeants, Cotton and Stroud; musician, Goss.

Meetings are to be held once a month.

COTTON RALLIES BEFORE CLOSING

Early Advance Followed by Decline Then Rally

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Cotton futures closed very steady.

Oct.	27.94	27.45	27.85-87	27.70
Dec.	27.64	27.12	27.50-52	27.34

Mar.	27.06	26.55	26.93-97	26.72

Opening: Oct. 27.63; Dec. 27.30. Jan. 26.60; March 26.70; May 26.78.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—An early advance in the cotton market was followed by a decline into new low ground for the movement, but after selling down from 27.64 to 27.12, December rallied, closing at 27.50. The general market closed very steady at net advances of 15 to 21 points on the more active months. September was 40 points net lower.

The market opened barely steady at a decline of 7 points to an advance of three points.

Prices soon turned upward on the relatively steady cables, private reports that the Louisiana coast was still threatened by a storm and covering. October advanced to 27.94 and January to 27.03, making net advances of about 20 to 30 points on the general list, but the market weakened again during the early afternoon owing to reports of an easier basis on low grades in the south and prospects that low grade cotton might be delivered on contract at New Orleans.

October sold off to 27.45 and January to 26.52, making net losses of about 17 to 25 points on the more active positions. The market firmed up in the late trading, when it was reported that the weather bureau had confirmed the presence of a storm off the Louisiana coast. October rallied to 27.85 and January 26.91 or about 33 to 40 points from the lowest.

Exports today were 4,729 bales, making 1,061,089 so far this season. Port receipts 61,450. U. S. port stocks 559,523.

New Orleans Cotton.

By The Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 9.—Fluctuations in cotton today carried the price moderately above and below the close of yesterday, but in the late trading private reports of much rain in some sections of Texas and the storm warning for the Louisiana coast proved the strongest influence of the day and prices hardened until they reached the highest of the session, December rising to 27.10 where the list showed net gains of 24 to 31 points. The close was at net gains on the day of 11 to 18 points with closing sales of the December position ranging from 26.97 to 26.99.

On the opening the weather map was regarded favorably as there was little rain in the belt but enough uneasiness was felt over the low barometer in the gulf of Mexico to bring about advances of 2 to 11 points. Selling on unfavorable reports from the cloth market almost immediately put prices 4 to 8 points under the close of yesterday.

Around noon the softest spot of the day was reached and considerable selling appeared to be caused by easiness in the stock market. It carried December off to 26.56 and the list to net declines of 18 to 26 points. Some private telegrams from Texas predicted further serious damage to open cotton by wet weather.

Fort Worth Livestock.

By The Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 9.—Around 5,000 head of cattle and 3,000 calves were on hand today. One string of cutter cows sold early at $2.35, a price that was called fully steady, but on the rank and file of the run, canners included, the market sagged to the extent of 15 to 25c. Steers were steady and bull values remained unchanged. The calf market was slow the good light calves being steady with last week's close, and other kinds showing a loss of 25 cents for the two days. Canner cows are lower and fat cows show a decline of 25 to 40 cents. Steers are mostly 10 to 15 cents down. The best fed classes are steady. Some steers of fair quality, south, went at 5.00@5.50. Some fat cows were picked up at a spread of at 2.00@2.75 and canners were taken at 1.50@1.75. Bulls met with the usual brisk demand, the best end going at 3.75@4.00 with bulk sales at 3.00@3.65. Medium to moderately decent heifers went at a range of 4.50@6.00. The best light calves here sold at 6.50. Good heavies went at a spread of 5.50@5.75. Some steers sold at 6.25. Stocker cows were taken at a general range of 2.00@2.25.

Hogs sold with freedom at prices that were fully steady, receipts amounting to about 1,500 head, packers and shippers made purchases at 7.90 and most of the run cleared at a spread of 7.35@7.90. Quality did not make very high average, although the 7.90 hogs were good. Good fat pigs sold with freedom at 6.50@6.75.

Generally steady prices were paid for fat sheep and lambs and on feeders the market was slow. Some wethers brought 7.00 and a few fair lambs went at 10.00. Receipts amounted to 1,000 for local sales.

Cottonseed Oil.

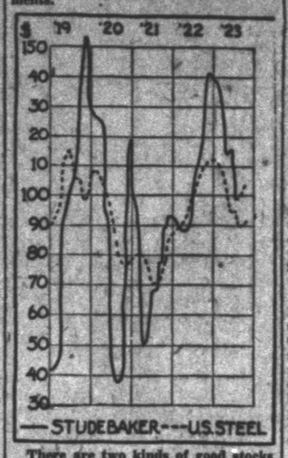

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Cottonseed oil declined five to 11 points early in the session under selling by the south and refiners, and in sympathy with the weakness in lard. Covering checked the decline and at the close the market was unchanged to seven points net lower. Sales 12,400 barrels. Prime crude 8.75, sales; prime summer yellow spot 11.00 bid. October closed 11.00; December 10.03; March 10.20; May 10.45, all bid.

MONEY At Work

Brief but important lessons in finance, market stocks, bonds and investments.

There are two kinds of good stocks, investment and speculative. Be sure you pick the kind you really want.

Good stocks can be classified as investment and speculative to distinguish them from a market standpoint.

A speculative good stock represents a company whose business is of a variable nature. It pays large extra dividends in prosperous times and regular dividends in poor times. Naturally the stock would fluctuate widely.

A strictly investment stock pays about the same dividend at all times, either because the business is stable, or because in good times a reserve is built up to pay dividends in poor times. As a result, its fluctuations are relatively narrow.

Studebaker and U. S. steel are both good stocks. Yet Studebaker jumps all over the board, while U. S. steel is subject to moderate fluctuations. See their comparative movements as indicated in the chart above.

DEMOS SURE

other words he is to be treated as a candidate in the midst of campaign, so that from now on much may be heard of the shortcomings of Calvin Coolidge.

Republican leaders accept President Coolidge as a candidate, but there are many who do not grant that he will be the candidate. In the first burst of enthusiasm it appeared that republican leaders were falling over themselves in effort to declare themselves for Coolidge for president, following the call of Senator Moses in New England, and it looked like a stampede might start which would drive all other possible candidates off the reservation. Then President Coolidge was profiting by the emotional condition of the country, and was given the best of all the breaks. Calvin Coolidge, as vice-president was but little better known to republican leaders than to the country at large, but the first impression he gave as president was good and the reaction form the country was pleasing. In the early days of his administration there was a buzz of activity which has been followed by a lull in which it appears that republican leaders are viewing Mr. Coolidge as on probation and that they are far from willing to concede he should be their next presidential candidate. And in this lull evidences of activity leading away from Coolidge candidacy are seen.

These republican guioes who sought openly to advance the political interests of President Coolidge have apparently taken him at his word that he wanted them to aid him in making a success of his administration rather than seek to tie up delegations at this time. At any rate there have been no recent committals, and since the declaration of the Pennsylvania senators that they were "on the fence" no worth while spokesman has been heard pledging his state to the president as a candidate. Again President Coolidge has been quoted as saying to his intimates that political activity at this time was ill-judged, and that the candidate most likely at this time might not even be mentioned at this time next year. Naturally the activities of the president have been seen to carry ambitious tinge. That construction was placed on his selection of C. Bascom Slemp, member of the republican national committee, to be his secretary, and it is now placed on the fact that he defers in all things political to Mr. Slemp's judgment. The same view is taken of the president's apparent desire to compose differences in republican ranks, and yet it appears that he will lose rather than gain by refraining from taking aggressive stand on matters which come before him, especially when they are fraught with particular political meaning.

President Coolidge has yet to make the first expression, since assuming office, giving his views on questions likely to be at issue in the next convention, and has announced tacitly that whatever he had to say regarding legislation would be said only in official message to congress. But the time is short until that will have to be done, and not only his decision but the congressional action thereon will have share in determining his fate next year.

Meanwhile several prospective candidates are laying their ground work. That Senator Hiram Johnson will be a candidate seems a foregone conclusion, and ex-Governor Lowden is considered already in the lists. Progressives are urging the candidacy of Gov. Pinchot with every likelihood that he will consent, or that if he does not Judge Kenyon of Iowa may be influenced to try. Everything points toward the selection of a delegation from New York which will present the name of Senator James Wadsworth, and which will not be averse to the candidacy of Senator James Watson of Indiana in event Wadsworth should fail. The Indiana senator has not yet decided to be a candidate but has been checking up possible support. He is sure he can win his own state delegation, despite the opposition of Postmaster General New there.

Even with this array President Coolidge would seem to have the inside chance, and the opinion of democratic leaders is therefore well based. For if President Coolidge is an avowed candidate the republicans would be rejecting his administration's record should they reject him, and since he is avowedly carrying out the Harding policies they would be casting criticism over the joint administration as well. Yet, whoever becomes the republican nominee will rise on the credit gained by the present administration, or fall with its discredit.

In the light of existing conditions the presidential campaign would now be under way if the democratic spokesmen were as sure of their own candidate as they seem certain of the opposition. As it is the representatives of the democratic national committee forming the legions for the coming battle have to proceed most carefully. They may attack administration acts and republican policies without stint, but in so doing have to keep free from direct committals which might create later embarrassment.

Already two opposing democrats, each the exact antithesis of the other, are in the field, and there are a score of possibilities besides. It would be hard to find two democrats so far apart on principle as Senator Oscar Underwood, and former Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo, but so far their campaigns seem not to have made anything like complete alignments in the party, indicating that other candidates may appear later and have the major consideration. Organizations have been perfected and are at work for both these men, but the more intensive work of delegate gathering has been prosecuted by the McAdoo supporters. So far as learned there has been no pledge of delegates to Senator Underwood outside Lis own state, but his agents say that in due time he will present a formidable array.

Work of organizing for McAdoo began immediately after the election of 1920, and has been prosecuted vigorously ever since.

Aside from Senator Underwood it is definitely known that Gov. Al Smith will be a candidate with a considerable backing which will never be transferred to McAdoo, but which might first go to Senator Copeland, and then if Copeland could not win, be given to the strongest anti-McAdoo contender. The same thing might happen to other "favorite son" candidates, and even in Texas, so staunch behind McAdoo in 1920, there is a possibility of a delegation which would incline to some other candidate rather than to McAdoo. It is told here that unless New Jersey casts in with the Smith candidacy that state will present either Senator Edwards or Gov. Silzer, if New Jersey is for Smith practically all New England will be also. The New York man will have strength in Illinois, Pennsylvania and Michigan, also, none of which states are counted for McAdoo at any time. Ohio is expected to send a delegation supporting ex-Gov. Cox, although Mr. Cox is not an avowed candidate, and will make no "drive" for delegates. The Ohioan would have support of Indiana, second choice, after Senator Ralston, who is much discussed, of Kentucky, and of many southern states which might be first for Al Smith, and as the champion of a foreign policy of world co-operation, would have friends in all the states, with a sprinkling of support in all delegations.

Discounting the McAdoo claims it may be said only that the democratic field is wide open. And the record of Mr. Coolidge may have as much to do toward determining democratic candidature as fixing his own fate. Issues on domestic questions might be determined now, and candidacies with them, but major questions which may rend both parties and create upsets are in developments overseas and their effect in America.

MARKET HEAVY ON ALL SIDES

Spectulators of Decline Continue Control—Reports Do Not Aid

Market Features.

Total stock sales 714,300 shares.

Twenty industrials averaged 88.06; net loss .50.

High this year 105.38; low 86.92.

Twenty railroads averaged 83.08; net loss .39.

High this year 90.51; low 79.53.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Speculators for the decline continued in control of today's stock market, the general list displaying a reactionary tone, notwithstanding further evident support for a number of the rail and industrial shares.

News developments again were largely ignored as market factors, although the cut in crude prices by the California Petroleum company was regarded as a contributory cause to the renewed heaviness of some of the oil shares. Wall street appeared to be indifferent to the increasing expressions of confidence of fall and winter business by bankers and industrial leaders.

Reports that Germany had expressed to the Belgian government her desire to resume discussions of reparations and that the Stinnes group had asked for authority to continue negotiations with the occupation officials were regarded as hopeful factors, but they failed to stem the downward tide of Germany's rapidly depreciating currency which touched a new low record of six cents a hundred million.

Heaviness of the railroad shares was generally ascribed to the failure of operators on the long side to attract a public following by the recent advance of that group.

Reports that buyers of copper metals were unwilling to pay more than 13 cents a pound brought some fresh selling into the copper shares. The Western Electric company is reported to have placed an order for from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 pounds at 13 cents during the day.

Call money opened at 5 1-4 per cent, but softened to 4 1-4 before the close. The time money market continues quiet with short term loans arranged at 5 1-4 and the longer dates at 5 1-2. Commercial paper is active at 5 1-4 per cent for prime names.

Strength of French and Belgian francs, which jumped 15 and 9 1-4 points, respectively, to 6.09 1-8 and 5.17 1-2 cents, featured the foreign exchange market. Demand sterling eased slight to 4.55 5-16.

HEAVY SELLING BREAKS WHEAT

Selling Appeared Result of Conference on Relief Measures

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Heavy selling on the part of recent buyers broke down values in the wheat market today. The selling appeared to be largely a result of disappointment that the wheat conference here gave no promise of farm relief of an immediate character. Closing prices were unsettled, 1 3-8 to 2 1-2 net lower, with December $1.07 3-4 and May $1.12 1-4 to $1.12 3-8. Corn finished at a range varying from 1 1-8 cent decline to 1-8 cent gain, oats 1-4 to 3-8 to 3-4@7-8 cent down and provisions showing 2 to 22 cent fall.

Although contract grades of corn for immediate delivery commanded $1.06 a bushel, the highest price yet this season, future deliveries went down with wheat. Oats followed.

Provisions reflected the weakness of hog values and of grain.

FREDERICK NOW HAS FLOG CASE

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Oct. 9.—Not to be out done by Tulsa and Oklahoma counties, Tillman county has developed a flogging case.

Unlike the Tulsa incidents this flogging will be investigated by the justice court in Frederick Monday, Oct. 22, when inquiry will be made into the whipping of Dolph Smith, 13-year-old Tipton school boy by H. E. Andress principal of the school.

Smith's parents allege he was beaten with a rubber hose while Andress was in "a rage of passion."

FIERY EMPERS RULE 1ST YEAR

Admirable Cast Has Been Selected in Play of Married Life

John Golden is sure to obtain the sort of sincere scrap the theatregoer is just as entitled to, as the pugilistic devotee wants, from the leading members of the cast of the great comedy, "1st Year," when it comes to the Palace Oct. 15 and 16. And as referee of the troubles between the two young married people who are going through their first matrimonial spats, he will have the best kind of a compromiser.

About the principals of the matrimonial melee, they are both of Irish descent, not the characters, who are middle-west American, but the players, and in addition both are redheads. The hair has the reputation of indicating a fiery temper, and the race holds a record of putting the punch behind that temper. This comic-tragedy of married life, pronounced a masterpiece by all the New York critics, is a constant argument after Tommy Tucker marries his small-town sweetheart and moves to Joplin, Mo., on her pre-marriage demand. They scrap until she leaves him, and after he follows her, and she breaks a vase on his head by mistake, the kindly old uncle intervenes and all is well.

Scott Welsh is Tommy Tucker, Patricia O'Hearn is Mrs. Tommy and no less a warm personality than the famous John W. Ransone, the never forgotten "Prince of Pilsen," who missed when he shot himself, is the good old uncle-fixit. These leading players are the sort John Golden puts in his comedies in living up to his rule of securing "the best actors available."

Golden is a genius at casting a play. Perhaps no manager in the country would take his principal players out of the ranks of musical comedy and use them in thoroughly dramatic work. But when one considers that the musical comedy players are trained for laughter purposes exclusively, the value of Golden's wisdom is evident.

Scott Welsh is a graduate of the George M. Cohan type of musical fneer in which the comedy is more important than the music. He was the original Kid Burns of "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," and sang "Good-Bye Mary" to popularity. He has been responsible for a score of musical successes, notably "The Pink Lady." Patricia O'Hearn is now in her first dramatic role, and Ransone, of course, is famous.

"No Man's Land" Gets Swatting By the U. Club

"Wichita Falls' 'No Man's Land' is known as far as Kansas, and the result is that we have a bunch of squatters, vagabonds and undesirables who come here and are charity cases during the winter months," declared Judge R. B. Martin in an address to the University club at the Kemp yesterday at noon. He discussed the entrances to the city and told of conditions that exist in the Wichita river bottoms, along one of the highways that leads into Wichita Falls.

In the summer months the huts and shacks along the river banks are filled with people who travel around. In the fall these people move out to the cotton fields and to other places of work, then come back to spend the winter in the hovels and depend on charity organizations of the city to help them through the winter. Many of the houses in that district are made of goods boxes, some are canvas, and they are without floors and windows. The living conditions are very bad.

Discussions from the members concerning this problem took up a great part of the hour, and a resolution was passed that the business council of the chamber of commerce look into the matter.

F. G. Swanson spoke on the settling of the river banks saying that careful condition of taxes on that property would keep out those who do not own houses or pay rent. Property is held there and it is given for taxation for about $75 per acre, and the land is sold at $300 per lot or about one-fifth of an acre.

During the discussions it was found that some of the people who live in that section of Wichita Falls charge rent on the huts and the dugouts while they do not own the property.

Julius Boho presided at the meeting. Al Ellis and F. G. Swanson will have charge of the program for the meeting of Tuesday, October 16.

PARENT TEACHERS VOTE $50 PLEDGE

At the first meeting of the Federated Parent-Teachers association held Tuesday afternoon at the Pat Carrigan school, the members voted a pledge of $50 to the Texas Congress of Mothers. Mrs. J. D. White, presided.

Mrs. J. D. White, new president of the Federated Parent-Teachers association, presided at the first meeting of the season held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Pat Carrigan school.

Mrs. Homer McGregor opened the session with devotional. A program of songs, readings, solo dancing, and piano solos given by the pupils of the Carrigan, San Jacinto and Barwise schools was given. Introduction of the presidents of the Mother's club was made by Mrs. White. The association voted to pledge $50 to the Texas Congress of Mothers.

The Fannin Mother's club was presented a picture for having the largest number in attendance at the meeting.

MONDAY BIG DAY AT TAX OFFICES

City taxes collected at the office of city tax collector W. R. Hyer on the first day of the week totaled $1,144.03, he announced Tuesday.

The Monday collections was one of the biggest days' business done at the tax collector's office in some time. The fact that 1923 taxes are now coming in and that delinquents have been notified that suits had been filed for collection of back taxes, accounts for the heavy payments now, Hyer said.

Seats will go on sale Wednesday morning at the Palace theatre for "The Glorious Girl." Don't miss this show; Thursday and Friday, Oct. 11-12.—Adv.

Every woman in town is going around to the tire shops asking for a piece of inner tube "just about so big" to make one of the attractive bags that are proving so popular since they were put on display at the fair by various exhibitors.

We thought the one we bought our wife was pretty good looking until she saw another one made differently and tore hers up and put it back together till we didn't recognize it.

This morning she informed us she had used an inner tube to trim a sport hat with. We're praying she won't serve us some of the fringe as noodles.

Twenty-eight more days till Hallowe'en.

C. L. Wilson is in the city from Waco on business.

When a member of the "Glorious Girl" cast was trying to get "Vic" Stampfli to buy tickets for the performance, he asked, "Who is in this 'Glorious Girl,'"

"The prettiest girls in town," said the G. G. representative.

"Run along," said Vic, "my own little girl is the prettiest girl in town."

F. W. & D. TO HAVE 3 TRAINS NORTH AND SOUTH SOON

Effective October 15, the passenger service on the Fort Worth and Denver railroad will consist of three trains daily each way, it was stated last night by J. W. Chatham on his return from Austin, where he went as representative of the Wichita Falls chamber of commerce in this matter. The south bound trains will leave here at 8 a. m., 2:25 p. m., and 3 a. m., those north bound arriving here at 2:50 a. m., 1:25 p. m., and 10:45 p. m., unless further changes are made.

This action on the part of the chamber of commerce follows the discontinuance of trains Nos. 1 and 2, fast Colorado carriers, by the Denver road, explained Mr. Chatham. These trains were taken off due to the falling off in travel to Colorado, and will probably be replaced next spring. Until that time, however, the local chamber of commerce made this move to insure as convenient service for this city as possible under the new running.

RIVER MAY HOLD YOUNG MOTHER

Firemen Drag Kaw for Bodies of Unhappy Woman and Babe

By International News Service.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 9.—In the belief that the Kaw river holds a mother and her twenty-two months old baby son, members of the local fire department early today began dragging the river for the bodies.

A note found in an abandoned car at the east end of the bridge spanning the river addressed to "Daddy" leads police to believe that Mrs. G. G. Schefelbine of this city leaped into the river with her baby in her arms.

Police today were puzzled over the failure of the husband to return home and were endeavoring to locate him. A brother of Mrs. Schefelbine who was found at the home declared he knew of no trouble between the couple. The note found in the car said: "We waited for you until 7 and you didn't come, so we ended it all."

Footprints, the keys to the abandoned automobile and a woman's hat found on the bank of the river lends police to believe she carried out the suicide threa..

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 9.—Poison pen letters received from anonymous writers during the past two weeks, probably drove Mrs. G. G. Schefelbine to desperation and caused her to leave the note saying she had decided to end her life in the Kaw river and take an infant son with her to a watery grave, her husband has told local police.

The husband, a worker in the Santa Fe railroad shops who had been missing all night, appeared at the police station today and gave his theory of the disappearance of his 23-year-old wife and 22-months-old baby boy.

The letters, Schefelbine told police, related to the wife that Schefelbine was neglectful to his son by another marriage. This Schefelbine denied to police, saying he had been to see his son recently and that he was being cared for. He said he was unable to identify the author of the letters.

J. J. Hrenchir of Emmett, Kansas, father of Mrs. Schefelbine, strengthened the belief that the young mother carried out the suicide threat when he told police she had not been at his home. It was at first believed that the missing woman had gone to her father's home and had not intended suicide.

Meanwhile, dragging of the river for the bodies continues.

ARTIST CHORUS FEATURES SHOW

Dozen Girl Dancers Take Part in "Glorious Girl" Number

Nothing in the whole chorus outfit of "The Glorious Girl," which the Business Women are presenting Thursday and Friday nights at the Palace Theater, is more beautifully done than the "Artists' Chorus," in which a dozen young girls among the best dancers in the city, take par..

Most of the girls have danced under McKenney's direction both preceding years when the Business Women have presented plays here, so that this year they picked up the steps of by far the most difficult dance they had ever had without much preliminary aning. The dance is a hit from the beginning, sharing honors at rehearsals with the "Rick-y-tick-y-tacky-toe" skit of the Bowery "gang," done by seven couples of splendid dancers.

The artists' costumes are among the feature outfits of the "Glorious Girl," according to McKenney, and are exceptionally colorful and attractive. There was much comment last year over the handsome costumes in "The Cameo Girl," and it is said that the play this year is even more handsomely outfitted. For one thing, the show opens the season here, and the costumes are all "splinter" new, which is quite a snap for the local young folks having up the cast and chorus.

Other choruses in the play, all specially costumed except those where evening dresses are worn, include "The Glorious Girls," the "Radio Girls," the "Guests," the "Stopping Chorus," the "Mop and Dust Pan Girls," the "Ricky-ticky-tacky-toe" chorus and several others.

KRUPP DIRECTOR IS SUSPICIOUS

Says France Wants Coal and Rest of Ruhr Can "Go to Hell"

By B. PERSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

ESSEN, Germany, Oct. 9.—"A volcanic explosion of pent-up passions by the Ruhr workers seems inevitable," an important Krupp director told International News Service today. He is one of the few directing heads still in Essen and requested that his name not be revealed.

"I do not believe Premier Poincare has the right and the intention of putting the wheels of Ruhr industry back in motion," said the director.

"If the French really wanted restoration, they had a chance of speeding industry up to normalcy immediately after the German government announced the cessation of passive resistance.

"France merely wants coal from the Ruhr—the rest of the Ruhr can go to hell so far as Poincare cares. Indeed, I believe Premiers Poincare and Baldwin at their recent meeting in Paris reached an agreement upon the basis that France should get her coal from the Ruhr and that the German industries in the Ruhr (aside from mining) would be allowed to drift into ruin and annihilation."

The director bitterly condemned the Stresemann cabinet's policy.

Editorial in Fort Worth Record, September 12

The married will forget their troubles and the single will avoid some of them by attending a performance of "The First Year," now playing at a local theatre. For sheer, clean, unadulterated fun, shot through and through with philosophy that the married will recognize and the single even may comprehend, the play has few rivals.

Laughter, the doctor tells us, is good for man, and woman, too, from the standpoint of health. The folks who see "The First Year" ought to come away cured of all their ills. And when common sense can be driven home with laughter you have an ideal dramatic combination.

Finally, Fort Worth will not become the amusement center of the state, will not attract to it people desiring clean entertainment, unless it can have, along with its excellent motion picture attractions, and vaudeville, "road shows" of the best sort. Fort Worth is getting them right now and if it wants to keep them, and benefit from them, it must patronize them well, and now.
