Kenneth should have known better.... And since they couldn't catch how could they be expected to bring any back? .... Well, that is as good as any other excuse .... but weren't disappointed anyway ... Of course we like fish if the other fellow catches them but it just seemed too good to be true ....

BOYS ARRIVE FOR FF CAMP HERE TODAY

Cooks busy chopping cabbage and other cold vegetables for salads, and the savory smells that the old factory nerves of boys like so well greeted the boys this morning as bus after bus came glidnig in to the annual Future Farmers of America camp at Lake Cisco where the boys from many towns and communities will gather to swim and engage in other recreational sports for three days. If smells count they will have beans and chili gravy today.

A long line of boys were gathered at the window of the pavilion at the lake where they were being registered. And as fast as they had been recognized, they broke for the dressing room and swimming pool, where they were making the old top spin and testing the slippery qualities of the slide. It is safe to say that no other sport or activity will receive recognition until the boys have indulged themselves to their satisfaction in the good old Cisco swimming pool that has delighted the eyes of so many tourists here of late who have without hesitation pronounced the finest artificial swimming pool in America.

"They are still coming," said Caudle, local agriculturist in charge and your guess is as good as mine until I can get a count on them, which I will try to do this afternoon. There are several hundred and from many communities, and plenty to eat."

"Blanton will prove that Garrett is a notorious tax-dodger, and is backed by the Townsend candidate, with unsuspecting Judge Jaye double-crossed; that Garrett is the specially hand-picked candidate of Hopson's Electric Bond & Share Subsidiaries, which are trying to ruin Blanton and to stop his active work for the people in Congress, because Blanton supported President Roosevelt's measure to control such monopolies. SCIENCE ENDS OIL DISCOVERY BY GUESSWORK

By HENRY WOOD
United Press Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5 (U.P.)—New, highly perfected sesimographic instruments, ordinarily used for recording earthquakes, are being tried throughout California, Texas and other western states for the detection of new oil fields, the California School of Technology reveals.

The perfection of the old-time sesimograph, the invention of Sesimometers and the development of new instruments that permit of a practical used in delving into geological formations far beneath the earth's surface, constitute the latest contribution to this branch of science by California research workers. The men most responsible for the discoveries and inventions are Dr. Joshua L. Soske and Dr. Raymond A. Peterson, research workers at the Institute of Technology as well as Dr. Russel Raitt, formerly in the physics department of the institution.

Equipped with a complete set of their newest instruments, they are exploring the undersoil over various parts of California in search of oil. Results are said to be satisfying.

Equal success has been achieved in Texas and other states.

Two Sciences Combined

The newer instruments for the search of oil are modification of Dr. Hugo Benioff's earthquake recording sesimograph, perfected and adapted to record higher frequency disturbances below the earth's surface, usually artifically generated by dynamite.

Other principles notably those used in Oceanography, also were utilized in developing and perfecting the new instruments. The basis on which the oceanographers work is to send sound to the bed of the ocean, and record its echo when it returns to the surface. By knowing the velocity of the sound waves and the time consumed in the trip, it is possible for the scientists to determine the exact depth.

Proceeding with the same principle, Dr. Soske and his associates decided to appy it to vibrations in the earth. Vibrations in the earth were set up by explosions of dynamite at various depths and in various geological formations until it was possible to create positive data not only to ascertain the depth from which the vibrations were reflected upward but also the nature of the geological formations through which the vibrations passed.

It was utilizing this data that it eventually became possible to sound out with the sesimometers underlying stratas and to ascertain whether there was the presence of oil, oil bearing shale or similar deposits.

Photographic Record Produced

The new instruments have been perfected so that only two stages of electrical amplification are necessary to produce a complete photographic record of the vibrations coming up from the earth, while at the same time they have ben sensitized in such a manner that they are not influenced by high power electrical lines that may be in the neighborhood and do not respond to disturbances of the latter.

The outfit being used by the inventors comprises five complete trucks. The first is a drill truck for making deep holes for dynamite from the explosion of which will come the vibrations that later are to be recorded and "read". The second truck is equipped entirely with machinery for placing the dynamite charges at whatever depth may be desired.

Instruments on One Truck

Then comes a water truck, forthly a pick-up truck and finally the truck containing the oscillograph, amplifier, and all the delicate instruments necessary for photographic records of results to be obtained from the explosions and resultant vibrations.

The data first is collected by 12 sesimometers placed at different distances from the point where the explosion is to take place. Their "data" is conducted by electrical energy along cables to the recording truck where the waves are transcribed on paper, and from which the modern scientists can detect the presence of oil, the depth at which it lies and other valuable geological information.

The finding of new oil fields throughout the entire world is expected to be made scientifically certain by use of the new apparatus and at an immense saving over the old system of drilling haphazardly.

Telephone Company Reduces Toll Rate

The seventh voluntary reduction in toll service during the past ten years has been announced by the Southwestern Bell Telephone company, said Phillip Pettit, manager of the telephone system at Cisco. He hands us the following letter which is self explanatory:

"The seventh voluntary reduction in long distance telephone rates in the last ten years was announced today at the office of W. L. Prehn, General Manager of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company. The new reduction provides for lower rates on all long distance calls between points more than 234 miles apart and reduced overtime charges on "person-to-person" calls lasting more than six minutes.

"Based on present long distance usage, the telephone company estimates that the yearly saving to Texas customers on both interstate and intra-state long disance calls will be $435,000. The reduced rates, as they apply to interstate calls, are covered by a schedule of reductions filed today with the Federal Communications Commission in Washington, D. C. The new rates will go into effect September 1 if the proposed schedule of interstate rates is accepted by the Federal Communicatons Commission.

"Under the new rates the reduction on calls more than 234 miles long will apply to both "station-to-station" and "person-to-person" calls. Reductions will range from five cents on calls of 235 miles to as much as $1.50 on transcontinental calls. As an example, the reduction on a three-minute daytime call between points 355 miles apart will be 20 cents on either a "person-to-person" or a "station-to-station" call.

"Overtime charges on all "person-to-person" calls will revert to the cheaper "station-to-station" overtime rate after the first three minutes of overtime. On a 10 minute "person-to-person" call for instance the initial three-minute period and the first three minutes will be charged at he "person-to-person" rate, the remaining four minutes being charged at the corresponding lower "station-to-station" overtime rate.

"On the basis of present long distance usage, it is estimated that the savings to long distance users in the five states served by the Southwestern Bell Telephone company will total $1,100,000 yearly about equally divided between the reductions on long-haul calls and the lower overtime rates on "person-to-person" calls.

"Following are sample present and proposed rates for three minute station-to-station week-day calls from Texas cities between Dallas, Fort Worth or Houston and New York City: Present rate $5.00, proposed $4.50. Between San Antonio and Los Angeles: present rate $4.50, proposed rate $4.00. Present rate from Amarillo to Houston is $2.25, proposed rate $2.00: Dallas-McAllen present rate $1.95, proposed rate $1.70.

PATRONIZE OUR ADVERTISERS

CHAPTER I

THE limousine was as long as a bad night. Glittering with polished trimmings and manned by a driver and footman, it swept along the quay at Le Havre and came to a silken stop in front of the gangplank of the S.S. Avignon.

"Your Highness!" exclaimed an official of the steamship company as he sprang forward to open the door of the car.

First to be revealed from within those luxurious depths was a regal blonde creature swathed in enough summer furs to have melted three men. Behind her came a distinguished, haughty grande dame of forty-odd years.

Porters rushed forward to take an extensive assortment of baggage from the car as the official headed the impressive little parade to and up the gangway. In the rear, following the porters, was a crowd of reporters and photographers.

At the top of the gang plank Captain Nicholls, florid and fussy, stood pulling at his blouse and fidgeting as he went through a last-minute rehearsal of his welcoming speech.

Permit me, Your Highness," he began, as the golden-haired vision swept into view. "I am Captain Nicholls. It is with the deepest of pleasure . . ."

"Ve, too, feel great pleasure, Captain," replied the Princess, smiling serenely as she placed her hand to her chest.

"What—uh, thank you." The good captain was not to be thrown off the track. "My ship is honored, Your Highness, by the presence of Princess Olga of Sweden. It is with the deepest . . ." He broke off the reporters and cameramen gathered round and shouted: "Here, here! No pictures! No pictures!"

"Vhy no pictures?" inquired the Princess mildly surprised. "I like my picture in the papers. People see. They say, 'Who is that?' They answer, 'Princess Olga of Sveden. So, if they like me, they like Sveden." Slipping her hand through the Captain's arm and turning to the photographers she added with a charming smile: "Ve are ready."

"What about this?" one reporter whispered to another as he pointed to the Princess' dowager companion, whose back wa toward them. "I am the Lady Gertrude Allwyn, lady-in-waiting and companion to Her Highness," answered the latter austerely as she turned toward them.

"Thank you," muttered the reporter. Then to Her Highness he called: "By the way, Princess, where are you going?"

"Ve go to Hollywood," Olga answered him with the pleasant disdain of a thoroughbred filly in a race track paddock.

"To see the stars?" kidded the reporter.

"No—to be the star," was the surprising answer. "Ve go to make a picture."

"You're going to act in a picture?" the newshound scribbled wildly.

"Ve have a contract," the Princess answered with simple dignity.

"Listen," King beamed, "I hope Your Highness has a pleasant trip and if I can be of any service just give me a buzz at my new suite."

"The contract says ve act." She shrugged. "Ve say nothing."

While this interview continued, an entirely different scene was being enacted in the Royal Suite of the S.S. Avignon. Actors in this drama were King Mandini, a dark, handsome young man cast in the role of villain; Benton, his aide, henchman and stooge, a well-fed individual who couldn't decide whether to be annoyed or not; an anxiously protesting Assistant Purser and a hovering cabin boy.

"You are making it very difficult, Mr. Mandini," pleaded the Purser. "The Princess will be here any moment."

"Then throw the Princess out," replied the King. "Tell her I reserved the royal suite first."

"But can't you understand, sir?" The Purser was frantic. "I will transfer you to a cabin every bit as good. There has been a mistake. There is royalty aboard—and this suite is for royalty!"

"Listen, cluck," snarled Mandini as he stopped unpacking his trunk. "In my own quiet way I'm royalty myself. There isn't a concertina player in the world can top me—King Mandini's concertina band is known all over Europe. I'm not bragging—I'm telling you. And I'm also telling you that for five years I've planned on spreading the flash with the royal suite—and now I'm in it." He turned back to his unpacking. "Tell that to your buck-toothed princess."

"Sir, if you insist upon staying here, I shall be forced to . . ."

"Forced to do what?" King demanded harshly.

The Assistant Purser did not answer. Instead he drew himself up as stiffly as a ramrod and stared straight ahead. King and Benton also stared and beheld the Princess Olga, Lady Gertrude, the Chief Purser, and in the background, the menage of porters.

"Ve are rather crowded—no?" inquired Her Highness as Mandini and Benton stared at her in thunderstruck admiration.

"I'll attend to that, Princess," King answered quickly. Whirling on the defenseless Benton he hissed: "Get this straight, Benton. There's been a mistake—this suite belongs to the Princess. The more you object the tougher it'll be on you. Now—get out before I throw you out."

"Whaaat?" quavered his friend.

"Out!" thundered Mandini, forcing the other through the door. Then to the Princess he explained: "I reserved this suite before I knew that Your Highness was to be aboard, and unfortunately my companion objected to leaving. I trust Your Highness isn't upset by the way things got screwed up."

"Ve are quite satisfied," responded the Princess coldly. "Now, if you vill favor us with your departure . . ."

"Oh, sure." King was caught completely off-guard. He backed into the entry salon as the others moved into the bedroom. As the last of the army of porters followed them, he took the card from an envelope on a particularly elaborate flower piece addressed to the Princess and inserted one of his own. Then he stepped quickly back into the bedroom.

"Listen," he beamed. "I hope Your Highness has a pleasant trip, and if any time I can be of service, just give me a buzz at my new suite. I'll—"

"Good day," the Princess interrupted quietly.

"Huh?" King forced a smile. Well . . . good day." He departed, crestfallen, but almost immediately was back, smiling as gaily as ever. "I forgot my razor," he explained, hurrying into the bathroom. A moment later the Princess and Lady Gertrude, alone in the cabin now, heard the gurgling of water in the tub.

"Good heavens," cried the anguished dowager. "The fellow's going to take a bath!" She bustled to the bathroom and swung the door open to reveal her enemy, foot on edge of tub, elbow on knee, chin cupped in hand, watching water gush into the tub. His air was grave—academic.

"What are you doing?" demanded Lady Gertrude.

"When I was in here a while back, the tub was sort of actin' up," he answered solemnly. "Now if . . ."

"If you are a ploomber, fix it. If not, please go avay!" Olga waved a regal hand toward the door.

"Okay, your Majesty." Properly squelched at last, King backed away.

When he had gone, the Princess leaned against the door which she had closed in his face. She was very beautiful, very regal, very calm.

"I'd like to smack that guy right in the kisser," she said at last.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN, Aug. 6.(U.P.) — Life will be happier for many blind people of Texas through the benefaction of Mrs. Edith Sweeney Giles of Houston. She has donated the transportation that will bring 233 talking blook machines to the state to be added to 50 now served from the State Library. Miss Hazel M. Beckham, Tyler secretary of the state commission for the Blind, and Miss Adele Mitchell, who keeps the books circulating, are both enthusiastic about them.

SHEARER

The machines look like a combination of a radio and the old fashioned talking machine that preceded radio. The "books" are plate like records like those that ground out "Dardanella" or "Wind That Blew My Gal Away." They differ from the old phonograph records, being timed to a reading cadence. They are labeled with letters on one side and in Braille on the other, so they can be picked out by blind people.

Lloyd C. Douglas' novel, "Magnificent Obsession" is the book most in demand at this time among blind readers. Miss Mitchell does not attribute the demand to its story of regained eyesight as there is similar demand in other type libraries. Fiction in more in demand than travel, biography, science, poetry or classics. The bible records circulate rapidly but the demand for them does not equal the call for fiction. Blind Milton's "L'Allegro" and "Il Penseroso" are available but not his sonnet on his blindness.

Tragically, Humphrey Cobb's "Paths of Glory" was sent to a client who had been blinded in the war. "Please send me no more books about the war," he requested of Miss Mitchell. "I am trying to forget it."

One blind reader is especially fond of Shakespeare. He has read all the plays of which records are available and asks for others.

Because the records have been vocalized by readers who understand the passages thoroughly, the blind reader frequently gets more out of his reading that the sight reader.

This is true particularly of the clients who "read" Shakespeare or Browning. The records are speeded at ordinary reading tempo. The hearer, however, can hasten or retard the records, just as was possible with phonograph records.

Ten to twelve records are required to complete an ordinary length modern novel. "Magnificent Obsession" requred 14 records. "Jane Eyre", a typical old-length novel, required 34. Wilkie Collins' "Woman in White" is on 26 records. All the records necessary to complete the hearing of a novel are sent out together. The blind reader does not have to wait for a story to "be continued in our Next."

A group of 20 records gives them the Old Testament, and 26 1-2 carry the New Testament.

George Sealy, Galveston, has been drawn by the Centennial spirit to a consideration of Galveston's part in the early development of Texas. He has jotted down forty firsts for which Galveston can claim credit beginning with Cabeza de Vaca's first white foot placed on Texas soil in 1528.

The first post-office, first mule car, first electric car, first gas lights, first telegraph, first private bank first national bank, first Chamber of Commerce, first Y. M. C. A., and first telephone are in the list. Galveston claims also the oldest drug store, oldest still-existing flour mills oldest printing house, oldest jewelry store, first orphanage, first brewery, first golf course, first commission form of city government and first cotton concentration company.

Fourteen year old J. W. Manklin, Ballinger, may not have a vote but he certainly is interested in politics. He hitch-hiked from Ballinger to Austin, waited in a capitol corridor until Railroad Commissioner E. O. Thompson left his office and asked Thompson for a supply of campaign literature to distribute. He said he became interested in the race from reading about the World War Colonel and seeing his picture. "I think he's swell," Manklin commented as he started back home.

Gov. James V. Allred has discovered that one of the 532,000 votes he received in the Democratic primary election was voted under a false impression. Allred, in his campaign speeches, illustrated the old age assistance situation by saying that he had taken the plan in as a political foundling, nursed it to health and raised it to a beautiful young lady whom, he said, his opponents all were now trying to woo.

After one such speech an old gentlemen who had been anti-Allred told an Allred organizer: "I've changed my mind. I'm going to vote for Allred. He must be a pretty good hearted young fellow. Tonight was the first I knew he had adopted an orphan and raised her."

S. Raymond Brooks, remarked a propo the censorship of the University of Texas student newspaper. "Frequent attempts have been made by non-newspaper men to censor newspaper workers; this is probably the first time trained newspaper men have been designated to censor non-newspaper men.

Sen. Tom Connally, recent capitol visitor, will campaign for President Roosevelt and Vice President John Garner, but does not believe much campaigning will be necessary by the Democrats.

"What do you think of Landon?" was asked.

"He's like the new pastor a colored congregation was trying-out. One deacon asked another what he thought about the preacher.

"'He talks loud, and I like that, answered the second deacon, 'but he don't pint out.'"

Trench Silos Save Feed, Eudaly Shows

"Save everything. Don't let any feed go to waste on the farm," advised E. R. Eudaly in a talk to 125 farmers and ranchers at a trench silo demonstration in Eastland, Friday, July 21. Eudaly stated that the most important part of farming was to save the soil by terracing and planting soil improving crops but next in importance comes the saving of feed, more than half of which goes to waste or is harvested in such a way as to be of doubtful value for feed. Eudaly showed how to dig a trench, put the feed in, apply necessary water, and cover with soil. He stated that feed "canned" in such a way has been kept for 11 years perfectly. There are several thousand such trench silos in Texas where all kinds of weather prevail.

Granting that cured feed keeps perfectly, the same feed made into silage has twice the feeding value, but it often happens that cured feed either rots in the field or molds in the stack because of rainy weather, weevils, rats, and fires also take a big toll from cured feeds. Water will not damage silage but does it good and there has never been any damage to silage, from weevils, rats, nor fire. It takes less labor to ensilage feed than to cure it as the job of shocking in the field is eliminated.

Any feed raised on the farm can be put into the trench silo, even heads of grain sorghums, ears of corn, johnson grass, sudan, careless weeds, and other weeds, sweet potato vines, peanuts, cowpeas, and soybean vines. The quality of the silage is determined by the quality of the feed put into the trench. The best grade of silage is made from bundled red top, hegari, milo, corn, or other feed crops.

Silage should be fed to animals when the green pasture begins to dry up, allowing them to get their fill. It is readily eaten by work stock, cattle, sheep, goats, and hogs. The heads or ears on silage can be cut and fed to chickens, turkeys, and hogs.

Dairy cows drop in milk production in dry, hot, and cold weather, too because of the weather but because they do not consume enough water. Silage supplies this water and holds the production up. 100 trench silos in one dairying county in Texas is ample evidence that silage is a life-saver for dairymen.

Three trench silos have been filled in Eastland county this season and several are being planned. It is suggested that anyone interested in a trench silo have one of the county agents or vocational agriculture teachers figure suitable dimentions and help stake off the ranch to correspond with the number of animals it is anticipated to feed. A Texas bulletin on trench silos is available at the county agent's office.

The 2-ton trench silo which was filled at the demonstration in Eastland on July 31 was financed by the Eastland Chamber of Commerce and will be opened during the County Fair, September 16-19.

Deep Creek Meeting To Begin August 13

Announcement has been made by D. S. McGee, Baird, of the Deep Creek Camp meeting, which begins Thursday, August 13 at 8 o'clock and continues through Sunday, Aug. 23. The meeting will be held under the Deep Creek tabernacle on the Lone Star Tourist Camp grounds. The camp is located on the Bankhead highway four miles West of Putnam and nine miles East of Baird.

Rev. W. E. Hawkins, Jr., of the Radio revival KRLD, Dallas was in the community this week making necessary preparations for the opening.

The grounds have been cleaned up, preparatory for the campers and for the all-day meetings. There is plenty of shade, camping ground and other necessities which tend to make an ideal camping place. If any person prefers a cabin to a tent one may be obtained at little expense at the Lone Star Tourist Camp nearby. Five or six services will be conducted each day beginning Monday, August 17. A daily vacation bible school will be conducted along with the other services. A number of workers have been asked to come and help in the school and meeting. Among those planning to attend are: Miss Virginia Howell of the South America Missionary Union, Rev. Homer Payne of the Evangelical college, Dallas; Rev. Matthew Mueller, Baptist minister of Farmersville, Texas; Rev. W. W. Riley, Methodist Minister of Trent; Rev. W. E. Hawkins of Dallas and others. Plans are being completed for a broadcast lookup.

An invitation is extended to the public to attend this good old-time meeting. Especially invited are pastors and singers.

Collie Re-election Breaks Precedents

In his successful campaign for re-election to the State Senate, Wilbourne B. Collie, of Eastland, broke a precedent in this district. Never before has a Senator been re-elected since the district was organized.

Collie won a clear majority in the balloting over two veterans in Texas politics, Harry Tom King of Abilene, and Y. L. Thomason of Haskell. The certified vote by County Chairman shows he received a majority over his opponents of 3785 votes.

"The results of the campaign are indeed very gratifying to me," he said. "I am deeply grateful for this splendid majority in the first primary, and I esteem friends beyond measure for making it possible for me to continue a service which I hope will result beneficially to our district and the people of Texas."

A large crowd of sorrowing friends and relatives gathered at the cemetery at Lingleville Wednesday afternoonnoon to pay their last tributes of love and respect to the memory of Franklin Davis Hogg who had passed away on July 28th, 1936 at his home just north of Desdemona. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Jim Bays, pastor of the Baptist church, of which the deceased had been a member since 1881. Beautiful and numerous floral offerings covered the grave. The following is a brief sketch of this pioneer: Franklin Davis Hogg was born July 11, 1861 near Summerville, Ga., married Miss Cardila Waters July 27th, 1879. They came to Texas in 1883, settling near Lingleville, and in 1908 moved to Eastland county a few miles north of Desdemona to a large farm that he bought. In the fall of 1919 he moved to Dawson county, living near Lamesa and stayed for nine years, coming back to his home in 1928. One of his sons, Ulmer Hogg had stayed at the home place and he and his wife cared for ihs father who was feeble for a long time before his death. The widow who gets about in a wheel chair will continue to live there with Ulmer and his wife. There were 11 children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hogg, one son dying in infancy and one daughter, Mrs. Ola Deatheridge, dying at the age of 52 years. By STEP A. LONG

Frank Walker back from Fort Worth and Dallas shows after a week of vacation in Fort Worth.... reports a fine time well rested and ready at work ....Ikey Parmer vacationing at Ennis this week leaving all the work for J. B. King, but of course Nick Miller stayed away too long that he is slow to get back on the job .... And then, too much of his time is taken up with his soft ball operations ....

Ralph Wynne, Ed Duncan and Kenneth Jones went fishing last week.... made elaborate preparations.... even had quite a lot of fish promised out to their friends because of course they didn't want the fish to spoil and they didn't know how their families could use them they were going to catch .... but they bring back the usual alibi instead of fish ....Said Jones Wynne is young and tender tried to play the he-man sportsman stuff and took a chew of tobacco and almost fixed him so he couldn't row the boat while the other two fished .... Kenneth should have known better.... And since they couldn't fish how could they be expected to land any back? .... Well, that sounds as good as any other excuse .... Anyway weren't disappointed anyway .... Of course we like fish if the other fellow catches them but it just sounded too good to be true ....

Albert Elliott and Wyatt Jacobs spent several days scrubbing and cleaning up the place they were going to and Henry Drumwright was coming back from market ....Now Henry comes in with piles and piles of goods to be marked and displayed ....They almost wish he had not come ....John C. Penn says he's all played out .... naturally he's late anyway .... must have a location and expects to start about Monday ....Claude Wilson is beginning to look sad and careworn as he explains that his constitution is just gradually breaking down and he have a rest .... fact is, we feel his own energy waning.... believe he's working too hard and should take a few weeks rest....

Frank Bond and H. T. Huffman talk about their trip .... the only thing they say is that they wish it could have lasted longer .... Lannie Mancill with a fresh permanent set .... Mrs. J. J. Collins visiting.... J. T. Elliott taking little rest visiting about town.... Mayor Ferguson sweeping the floor .... B. Cate wants a picnic of some kind ....Wm. Reagan dashing around like he might be fixing for a wife ....J. B. Pratt trying to put too much gasoline in his truck and leaving it open .... Carl Baird waiting for the Scranton trip to-night....

Unable to overcome a lead of 8 to 2 obtained in the first two innings, the A. G. Motor company softball team went down to defeat by a score of 10 to 14 before the Norvell-Miller long hitting squad at the saftball lighted field last night.

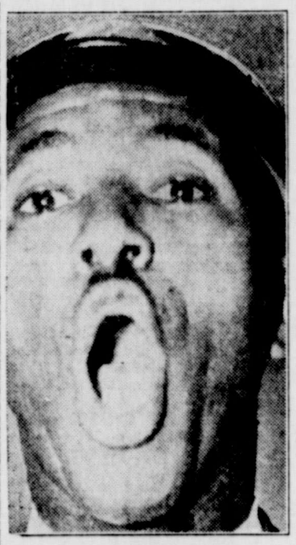

The game was rather fast after the boys got started, some long hitting and good fielding adding thrills to the game. During a few of the innings it was a pitcher's battle with neither side scoring a hit The attendance was small.

It is announced that the Nance Motor company and Leach Stores softball teams will play at the lighted field tonight.

Wimberly and Mrs. Mangum argued over the use of his automobile by her step-sister. Wimberly demanded that the car be returned. The shooting occurred a moment later.

Jo Ann Jordan, niece of the slain woman, was the only witness. She was calm as she told of the double killing.

Nobody entered the house until officers arrived. Constable G. F. McGee found the two bodies on the floor. Mrs. Mangum had been shot four times. A bullet pierced Wimberly's heart. Both were dead.

The bodies were taken to Goose Creek where Justice Williams continued an investigation.

BOYS ARRIVE FOR FF CAMP HERE TODAY

Cooks busy chopping cabbage and other cold vegetables for salads, and the savory smells that the old factory nerves of boys like so well greeted the boys this morning as bus after bus came glidnig in to the annual Future Farmers of America camp at Lake Cisco where the boys from many towns and communities will gather to swim and engage in other recreational sports for three days. If smells count they will have beans and chili gravy today.

A long line of boys were gathered at the window of the pavilion at the lake where they were being registered. And as fast as they had been recognized, they broke for the dressing room and swimming pool, where they were making the old top spin and testing the slippery qualities of the slide. It is safe to say that no other sport or activity will receive recognition until the boys have indulged themselves to their satisfaction in the good old Cisco swimming pool that has delighted the eyes of so many tourists here of late who have without hesitation pronounced the finest artificial swimming pool in America.

"They are still coming," said Caudle, local agriculturist in charge and your guess is as good as mine until I can get a count on them, which I will try to do this afternoon. There are several hundred and from many communities, and plenty to eat."

Special arrangements will be made for Friday night, Mr. Caudle said.

All sports are being supervised by committeemen in charge, Caudle said.

ALL ORGANIZED FOR SCRANTON TRIP TONIGHT

The Junior Chamber of Commerce committee for the good will trips, are working hard today to get the merchants motorcade to Scranton tonight properly organized so that the greatest number possible of Cisco's merchants may be represented at the gathering.

The first trip to Romney two weeks ago was well attended and both merchants and citizens of the community visited, expressed themselves well pleased with the venture. Last Thursday night the trip to Putnam was called off at the last minute on account of a rain at that place late in the afternoon, making it muddy and inconvenient for an open air meeting. On account of previous arrangements, the trip to Putnam could not be repeated this week but the Scranton trip was scheduled.

"It is hoped," said A. D. Starling, president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, "that Cisco business and professional people will go and take their families so that we may be well represented at this good will tour."

Robert L. Maddox and his Lobo band will play a concert.

A. S. Couch, aeronautical inspector for the department of commerce told United Press that a "ground fog" probably caused the crash.

Coming in from New Orleans on schedule the plane took off for Chicago. Early today word of the crash was received by telephone from farmers in the district.

Flying conditions were excellent, company officals reported, in striving to find an explanation for the crash.

'Cisco To Keep Warm This Winter!'

Manager A. G. Tuttle, of the J. C. Penney company, says the recent blanket event held at his store was the most successful one in the history of the store.

Of course hundreds of blankets were paid for and carried home by the customers, but on their lay-away plan, many are left in the store until the deferred payments are completed. Mr. Tuttle conceived the idea that it would be a good advertising stunt to place the enormous number of bundles of such purchases in his window to show the many who prevailed themselves of this summer event.

The window is now being made and will be completed by late afternoon, Tuttle said. "It looks like Cisco will sleep warm this winter."

FORT WORTH MEN CHARGED WITH ALTERING VOTE

FORT WORTH, Aug. 6. BLANTON SAYS HE WILL TELL WHY GARRETT WON'T JOIN IN DEBATE

The Cisco Daily News has the following letter from the Thomas L. Blanton headquarters concerning his appointments for the week beginning August 10, in which he proposes to show why Judge Clyde Garrett will not meet him in joint session:

"At each appointment Blanton will show conclusively why Clyde L. Garrett is in hiding, and is sneaking in behind him, and won't dare to meet him in joint debate before the people, on Garrett's miserable record, and his many misrepresentations, and where Blanton can ask him questions and demand specific answers.

"Blanton will prove that Garrett is a notorious tax-dodger, and is backed by the Townsend candidate, with unsuspecting Judge Jaye double-crossed; that Garrett is the specially hand-picked candidate of Hopson's Electric Bond & Share Subsidiaries, which are trying to ruin Blanton and to stop his active work for the people in Congress, because Blanton supported President Roosevelt's measure to control such monopolies. The people will be astounded at facts Blanton will reveal. Everyone should hear him. No one should miss it" Blanton will speak as follows:

THE CHILD CRIMINAL PROBLEM

Seeing a boy fingerprinted in the Cisco police court the other day makes one wonder what will be the after life of this boy. He was a nice looking boy, too. Didn't look vicious or mean, but unless something stops him on his mad plunge into crime, his life will be ruined and his family be brought down to their graves in sorrow and shame.

This boy has the habit of taking things that doesn't belong to him. He will tell the police all about it when he is caught and does it openly. Apparently, he does not have a sense of morality developed in regard to taking things that belong to others. He does not seem to have a sense of ownership. But sooner or later he will take something that will mark him a criminal to be punished with long imprisonment and then a career as a criminal that has but one end.

Can something be done to stop him? If you think you have a remedy ask the police who he is and do something—Do it now!

In some research work concerning the lives of noted criminals it was discovered that one man—bandit, burglar, gunman—had been 'even as young as 10 years a confirmed and hardened thief." He had had a couple of reform school sentences before that time and had apparently become incorrigible. Such things may be set down in a survey quite seriously. But just what do they mean? What makes a 10-year-old boy an incorrigible criminal? The other day in New York City a judge refused to sentence an 18-year-old third offender who pleaded to a petty theft. Said the judge:

"We know what the trouble is here. When you were nine years old you were found guilty of burglary and some judge sent you away on a charge of juvenile delinquency. I cannot understand how it is possible to charge a crime against a nine-year-old child and take it away from the custody of its parents. If a child of nine commits a crime it should be spanked. A child of nine is hardly more than a baby. To say that a child of that age can commit a burglary, and to call it juvenile delinquency, is ridiculous. The law that permits such a thing as that is morally wrong. I am going to give you another chance."

One could wish that such a judge might have charge of all the juvenile cases of nine-year-old offenders, could see that they got spanked, could give the parents some straight and stern talk about children's upbringing, and could see to it that the youngsters really got "another chance" early enough to do them some good. The judge's talk seems both kind and wise. Alone it does not solve the problem. It simply points a better way than the reform school or penal institutions for nine-year-olds.

OUT OUR WAY

Telephone Company Reduces Toll Rate

The seventh voluntary reduction in toll service during the past ten years has been announced by the Southwestern Bell Telephone company, said Phillip Pettit, manager of the telephone system at Cisco. He hands us the following letter which is self explanatory:

"The seventh voluntary reduction in long distance telephone rates in the last ten years was announced today at the office of W. L. Prehn, General Manager of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company. The new reduction provides for lower rates on all long distance calls between points more than 234 miles apart and reduced overtime charges on "person-to-person" calls lasting more than six minutes.

"Based on present long distance usage, the telephone company estimates that the yearly saving to Texas customers on both interstate and intra-state long disance calls will be $435,000. The reduced rates as they apply to interstate calls, are covered by a schedule of reduction filed today with the Federal Communications Commission in Washington, D. C. The new rates will go into effect September 1 if the proposed schedule of interstate rates is accepted by the Federal Communicatons Commission.

"Under the new rates the reduction on calls more than 234 miles long will apply to both "station-to-station" and "person-to-person" calls. Reductions will range from five cents on calls of 235 miles to as much as $1.50 on transcontinential calls. As an example, the reduction on a three-minute daytime calls between points 355 miles apart will be 20 cents on either a "person-to-person" or a "station-to-station" call.

"Overtime charges on all "person-to-person" calls will revert to the cheaper "station-to-station" overtime rate after the first three minutes of overtime. On a 10 minute "person-to-person" call for instance the initial three-minute period and the first three minutes will be charged at he "person-to-person" rate, the remaining four minutes being charged at the corresponding lower "station-to-station" overtime rate.

"On the basis of present long distance usage, it is estimated that the savings to long distance users in the five states served by the Southwestern Bell Telephone company will total $1,100,000 yearly about equally divided between the reductions on long-haul calls and the lowered overtime rates on "person-to-person" calls.

"Following are sample present and proposed rates for three minutes station-to-station week-day calls from Texas cities between Dallas, Fort Worth or Houston and New York City: Present rate $5.00, proposed $4.50. Between San Antonio and Los Angeles: present rate $4.25 proposed rate $4.00. Present rate from Amarillo to Houston is $2.35, proposed rate $2.00: Dallas-McAllen present rate $1.95, proposed rate $1.70.

"P. PETITT,
"Manager."

RESORT HOTEL

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ANN HAMILTON, pretty young secretary in a large business office, goes to a travel agency to make plans for her two-week vacation.

BILL WARE, travel bureau employe, persuades her to go to Lake Racine. Bill is obviously attracted by Ann, but she gives him little thought.

Ann goes to the mountain resort and at first is lonely. Then she meets RALPH SPRING, head boatman, who tells her he is not interested in girls. Ralph introduces her to JAIME LAIRD, wealthy playboy. Jaime is handsome and attentive. At a dance she meets LEFTY PONDS, married but flirtatious.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VII

WHEN Ann came down to breakfast she felt that some of the guests at the resort hotel eyed her askance. She was sure she knew what they were thinking; she was the girl who was running around with that wild galoot, Jaime Laird, who lived across the lake at the Majestic. Flying high! They all knew who Ann was, what she did in the city, and how old she was.

She was wearing climbing togs. The porch sitters took up their positions and waited for something to happen. One or two genial old ladies dropped a stitch or two in their knitting when Jaime's long roadster came roaring around the lake, to stop in a whirl of dust before the Glenwood Inn.

Ann went down to meet him and they drove away on the Cascade road, toward the Marcy trail. Jaime seemed changed. Ann thought—or perhaps she imagined it—that his face had a little more color this morning. Perhaps it was the result of the crisp mountain air.

"Is this a very steep mountain?" Jaime asked.

"It's the highest in the Adirondacks," she said firmly.

Jaime pretended to faint, and she had to catch the wheel to keep them from swerving off the road. "You juvenile!" she said, laughing. "You perpetual clown."

He faced her. "Do you like me?"

"I'm afraid I do."

THE climb they were attempting wasn't arduous. They were going only part of the way up the mountain. At first the trail was no more than a leisurely uphill walk. At intervals Jaime stopped and pointed out flora beside the path. Once they stopped to watch tiny lizards in the grass.

This experience was something entirely new to him, and he thrilled to it like a small boy. His face was flushed when they came to the roaring cataract which emptied one of the high mountain lakes called by the Indians Lake Tear-in-the-Clouds.

He leapt out to the big boulder in the very center of the raging flood, and waited for her to follow. Ann jumped, and he caught her in his arms. They were both laughing hilariously when they sat down on the rock-island to catch their wind.

It hadn't been a bad climb, and now they were enjoying one of the most beautiful sights in the mountains. The sun, playing about the peaks, painted them with a fantastic mauve and purple. The roar of the water was pleasant in their ears. A faint cooling spray came up at intervals to revive them from blissful lethargy.

Jaime smoked and was silent, contemplating the grandeur all about. Ann leaned back on the rock, and watched the cirrus clouds chasing one another in the sky.

"You see how marvelous it is up here?" she said. "This is a real vacation spot."

"At least it's better than that dark little hole—the betting room. But it was too much work getting here!" Jaime smiled lazily down at her.

She sat up suddenly. "Jaime, why don't you do something? People love you. They are snared by your charm, but they want to slap your hands and say, 'Get some ambition!' "

Jaime laughed at her. "I think you like me—just as I am," he said, and moved to kiss her.

"Conceited!" she answered, evading him.

He looked genuinely hurt, and sat very still, hugging his knees up to his chin. "All right. Jaime will be a good boy."

He looked up at the trail which led toward the top of the giant peak and said, "Shall we climb on?"

"Do you want to?" Her eyes were eager again.

"If you want to," he said with extreme courtesy. "I think I could go it until lunch time. After we've had our lunch we can start down again."

"Let's go!"

THEY came back to the little inn at a quarter to 4. Jaime went to his own hotel, pleasantly tired. He had to go to the racing room and see how much money he had lost on the day's races. He was losing steadily.

After a hot shower Ann felt refreshed and joined the crowd for tea in the lobby. It was hard to realize that she had arrived at the resort only the afternoon before.

The hostess, Aimee, was busy introducing new guests, and Ann felt like one of the oldest now. Aimee talked to her like an old friend. "We're going to have a steak roast on the lake shore tonight," she said. "Wouldn't you like to come, and bring your young man?"

"I'd love it," Ann told her. "But I'm afraid Mr. Laird is engaged—"

A cheerful, masculine voice boomed behind them. "But I'm not, and I love steak roasts!"

Ann turned to see the stalwart figure of Lefty Ponds. "Oh, it's you!" she said. "Aimee, this is Mr. Lefty Ponds. He's a guest here."

Aimee gave Lefty a hand in her robust, friendly manner. "We'd be delighted to have you, Mr. Ponds."

But when Ann got him aside on the veranda, she said, "You are persistent, aren't you? I thought we settled this last night."

"Oh, but you can't avoid me," he said easily, in his deep-throated, masculine tone. "An ex-football star—"

THEY danced once to the music from the radio, and then sat down on the veranda where they could watch the sun setting over the lake. The fiery red ball descended slowly into the greenish waters.

"Why do you married men think you have to kick up your heels like young colts when the wife's away?" Ann asked cheerfully.

"I simply like you," Lefty Ponds told her disarmingly. "I like to be with pretty girls. Is there anything wrong with that? But don't tell my wife," he added darkly, and then laughed. "What's a summer husband to do?"

"Why don't you go fishing in the Maine woods?"

"I don't like fishing. I'd rather talk with you."

"You are persistent!" she said, and then she stood up and walked to the rail. "What's a girl to do?"

A canoe made its way slowly before the hotel, and from it came the haunting melody of a guitar. It was Ralph Spring, the head boatman, enjoying his busman's holiday. He stopped to wave up at Ann and then he was gone, probably thinking about building bridges down in Rio.

Suddenly she wanted to go for a swim in the lake. She turned to Lefty and said, "How about a quick dip before the steak roast?"

He nodded and, hand in hand, they ran down the path toward the docks. The station bus drew up before the hotel, and they stopped to look at the new guests.

Ann's hand flew to her throat, and she went toward the blond young man who stood, with a suitcase in hand, beaming down on her.

"Bill Ware!" she exclaimed.

"I turned the universe upside down," he told her, "to have my vacation changed, and here I am at Lake Racine. After six years of planning other people's vacations, the travel agent is going to have one of his own."

Lefty Ponds frowned.

Following the luncheon, men in the party will don ten-gallon hats in honor of Texas' anniversary, and the entire group will entrain for Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, to be the guests of Mr. F. L. Maytag, founder and chairman of the board, of the Maytag company, in his summer home, Ceylon Court.

Returning to Texas, the party will stop off for a visit in the Maytag factory at Newton, Iowa and see first hand how Maytag Washers and ironers are made.

"In addition to this for our dealers, we have planned a week end visit to the Centennial Central Exposition in Dallas for the leading salesmen from the fifteen Maytag districts in Texas," said Walter Rogers, president of Maytag Southwestern Company located in Dallas, and distributors for Maytag appliances throughout the Texas district. "These salesmen have been working day and night in an 'election campaign" to introduce the Maytag platform in every Texas home. Winning candidates from each of the fifteen districts will join the dealer group at the Friday luncheon in Dallas, cast their "electorial votes" for president and Vice-President of the "Maytag Texas Empire then adjourn to the Exposition grounds where they will spend the week end taking in exhibits."

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN, Aug. 6 (U.P.) — Life will be happier for many blind people of Texas through the benefaction of Mrs. Edith Sweeney Giles of Houston. She has donated the transportation that will bring 233 talking block machines to the state to be added to 50 now served from the State Library Miss Hazel M Beckham, Tyler secretary of the state commission for the Blind, and Miss Adele Mitchell, who keeps the books circulating, are both enthusiastic about them.

SHEARER

The machines look like a combination of a radio and the old fashioned talking machine that preceded radio. The "books" are plate like records like those that ground out "Dardanella" or "Wind That Blew My Gal Away." They differ from the old phonograph records, being timed to a reading cadence. They are labeled with letters on one side and in Braille on the other, so they can be picked out by blind people.

Lloyd C. Douglas' novel, "Magnificent Obsession" is the book most in demand at this time among blind readers. Miss Mitchell does not attribute the demand to its story of regained eyesight as there is similar demand in other type libraries. Fiction in more in demand than travel, biography, science, poetry or classics. The bible records circulate rapidly but the demand for them does not equal the call for fiction. Blind Milton's "L'Allegro" and "Il Penseroso" are available but not his sonnet on his blindness.

Tragically, Humphrey Cobb's "Paths of Glory" was sent to a client who had been blinded in the war. "Please send me no more books about the war," he requested of Miss Mitchell. "I am trying to forget it."

One blind reader is especially fond of Shakespeare. He has read all the plays of which records are available and asks for others.

Because the records have been vocalized by readers who understand the passages thoroughly, the blind reader frequently gets more out of his reading that the sight reader.

This is true particularly of the clients who "read" Shakespeare or Browning. The records are speeded at ordinary reading tempo. The hearer, however, can hasten or retard the records, just as was possible with phonograph records.

Ten to twelve records are required to complete an ordinary length modern novel. "Magnificent Obsession" required 14 records. "Jane Eyre", a typical old-length novel, required 34. Wilkie Collins' "Woman in White" is on 26 records. All the records necessary to complete the hearing of a novel are sent out together. The blind reader does not have to wait for a story to "be continued in our Next."

A group of 20 records gives them the Old Testament, and 26 1-2 carry the New Testament.

George Sealy, Galveston, has been drawn by the Centennial spirit to a consideration of Galveston's part in the early development of Texas. He has jotted down forty firsts for which Galveston can claim credit beginning with Cabeza de Vaca's first white foot placed on Texas soil in 1528.

The first post-office, first mule car, first electric car, first gas lights, first telegraph, first private bank first national bank, first Chamber of Commerce, first Y. M. C. A., and first telephone are in the list. Galveston claims also the oldest drug store, oldest still-existing flour mills oldest printing house, oldest jewelry store, first orphanage, first brewery, first golf course, first commission form of city government and first cotton concentration company.

Fourteen year old J. W. Manklin, Ballinger, may not have a vote but he certainly is interested in politics. He hitch-hiked from Ballinger to Austin, waited in a capitol corridor until Railroad Commissioner E. O. Thompson left his office and asked Thompson for a supply of campaign literature to distribute. He said he became interested in the race from reading about the World War Colonel and seeing his picture. "I think he's swell," Manklin commented as he started back home.

Gov. James V. Allred has discovered that one of the 532,000 votes he received in the Democratic primary election was voted under a false impression. Allred, in his campaign speeches, illustrated the old age assistance situation by saying that he had taken the plan in as a political foundling, nursed it to health and raised it to a beautiful young lady whom, he said, his opponents all were now trying to woo.

After one such speech an old gentlemen who had been anti-Allred told an Allred organizer: "I've changed my mind. I'm going to vote for Allred. He must be a pretty good hearted young fellow. Tonight was the first I knew he had adopted an orphan and raised her."

S. Raymond Brooks, remarked a propo the censorship of the University of Texas student newspaper, "Frequent attempts have been made by non-newspaper men to censor newspaper workers; this is probably the first time trained newspaper men have been designated to censor non-newspaper men.

Sen. Tom Connally, recent capitol visitor, will campaign for President Roosevelt and Vice President John Garner, but does not believe much campaigning will be necessary by the Democrats.

"What do you think of Landon?" was asked.

"He's like the new pastor a colored congregation was trying-out. One deacon asked another what he thought about the preacher.

"'He talks loud, and I like that, answered the second deacon, 'but he don't pint out.'"

Trench Silos Save Feed, Eudaly Shows

"Save everything. Don't let any feed go to waste on the farm," advised E. R. Eudaly in a talk to 125 farmers and ranchers at a trench silo demonstration in Eastland, Friday, July 21. Eudaly stated that the most important part of farming was to save the soil by terracing and planting soil improving crops but next in importance comes the saving of feed, more than half of which goes to waste or is harvested in such a way as to be of doubtful value for feed. Eudaly showed how to dig a trench, put the feed in, apply necessary water, and cover with soil. He stated that feed "canned" in such a way has been kept for 11 years perfectly. There are several thousand such trench silos in Texas where all kinds of weather prevail.

Granting that cured feed keeps perfectly, the same feed made into silage has twice the feeding value, but it often happens that cured feed either rots in the field or molds in the stack because of rainy weather, weevils, rats, and fires also take a big toll from cured feeds. Water will not damage silage but does it good and there has never been any damage to silage, from weevils, rats, nor fire. It takes less labor to ensilage feed than to cure it as the job of shocking in the field is eliminated.

Any feed raised on the farm can be put into the trench silo, even heads of grain sorghums, ears of corn, johnson grass, sudan, careless weeds, and other weeds, sweet potato vines, peanuts, cowpeas, and soybean vines. The quality of the silage is determined by the quality of the feed put into the trench. The best grade of silage is made from bundled red top, hegari, milo, corn, or other feed crops.

Silage should be fed to animals when the green pasture begins to dry up, allowing them to get their fill. It is readily eaten by work stock, cattle, sheep, goats, and hogs. The heads or ears on silage can be cut and fed to chickens, turkeys, and hogs.

Dairy cows drop in milk production in dry, hot, and cold weather, too because of the weather but because they do not consume enough water. Silage supplies this water and holds the production up. 100 trench silos in one dairying county in Texas is ample evidence that silage is a life-saver for dairymen.

Three trench silos have been filled in Eastland county this season and several are being planned. It is suggested that anyone interested in a trench silo have one of the county agents or vocational agriculture teachers figure suitable dimensions and help stake off the ranch to correspond with the number of animals it is anticipated to feed. A Texas bulletin on trench silos is available at the county agent's office.

The 2-ton trench silo which was filled at the demonstration in Eastland on July 31 was financed by the Eastland Chamber of Commerce and will be opened during the County Fair, September 16-19.

Deep Creek Meeting To Begin August 13

Annoucement has been made by D. S. McGee, Baird, of the Deep Creek Camp meeting, which begins Thursday, August 13 at 8 o'clock and continues through Sunday, Aug. 23. The meeting will be held under the Deep Creek tabernacle on the Lone Star Tourist Camp grounds. The camp is located on the Bankhead highway four miles West of Putnam and nine miles East of Baird.

Rev. W. E. Hawkins, Jr., of the Radio revival KRLD, Dallas was in the community this week making necessary preparations for the opening.

The grounds have been cleaned up, preparatory for the campers and for the all-day meetings. There is plenty of shade, camping ground and other necessities which tend to make an ideal camping place. If any person prefers a cabin to a tent one may be obtained at little expense at the Lone Star Tourist Camp nearby. Five or six services will be conducted each day beginning Monday, August 17. A daily vacation bible school will be conducted along with the other services. A number of workers have been asked to come and help in the school and meeting. Among those planning to attend are: Miss Virginia Howell of the South America Missionary Union, Rev Homer Fayne of the Evangelical college, Dallas; Rev. Matthew Mueller, Baptist minister of Farmersville, Texas; Rev. W. W. Riley, Methodist Minister of Trent; Rev. W. E. Hawkins of Dallas and others. Plans are being completed for a broadcast Lookup.

An invitation is extended to the public to attend this good old-time meeting. Especially invited are pastors and singers.
