Foundation funds radiology equipment for MMH

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Foundation has presented $100,000 to Midland Memorial Hospital for the purchase of new radiology equipment, according to John J. Redfern Jr., chairman of the board of governors of the MMF and chairman of the board and president of Flag-Redfern Oil Company.

The donation will go toward a $1.8 million three-year plan to renovate the department and add state-of-the-art equipment, according to Dr. James W. McGee, MMH trustee and chairman of the department of radiology. He noted "state-of-the-art equipment" is up-to-date and future technology.

"Hospital equipment doesn't wear out," Redfern said. "It becomes obsolete; therefore, for the upgrading and new technology, we hope to have continuing contributions for this."

Redfern explained before MMH became a public facility, the foundation and private contributions supported the hospital.

"A few years ago, the foundation supported the idea of a tax based hospital, he said. "Now, we have nothing to do with the operations. Basically, through contributions we receive, we are forced to help fund the hospital to buy equipment that will accelerate the facility."

The equipment that has been ordered and is on its way includes a real time ultrasound, a computerized recorded retrieval system, a dictation system and a word processor.

McGee said the $32,900 real time ultrasound is a sophisticated piece of X-ray equipment that takes "pictures with soundwaves." It allows the clinician to view body parts in their normal motion pattern and is used in obstetrics, internal medicine, surgery and vascular work.

"And the ($40,000) computerized record retrieval system will cut the time in half for the identification process which will speed up patient flow," McGee said, adding that the system is an improved filing system for the endless paperwork that every patient must complete.

He noted that the ($35,000) dictating and word processor equipment will help get reports out more quickly and accurately.

McGee said when the overall renovation is complete the department will equal any other radiology department in the state, including Houston or Dallas.

"Originally this was a four-year plan to modernize and upgrade the radiology department," he said. Now, through the foundation, they will underwrite this program and speed up the time factor."

He added the donation will free the hospital's capital equipment budget generated from the operational funds this year. This will enable the hospital to use the budgeted radiology department money in other needed areas.

The $1.8 million extended plan also will include renovating four major rooms that are eight to ten years old, replacing old and failing equipment and acquiring new equipment that was not previously available, McGee said.

"My goal as a physician and a trustee is to provide every necessary service possible. If they (patients) want to go elsewhere (Houston, Dallas) this is fine, but nobody should have to go to Dallas when we have the equipment here. We want to be on the forefront," McGee said.

Senate stands against MX missile placement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, splitting along party lines in favor of President Reagan's B-1 bomber program, is almost unanimously against his plan to put new MX missiles at least temporarily in hardened silos.

A series of Democrat-sponsored amendments shifting funds from the B-1 to other military needs was defeated Wednesday with majority Republicans solidly in opposition in almost all cases.

But the Senate adopted, 90-4, an amendment to bar the administration from using any of the $334 million in MX research and development funds to put the missiles into reinforced Titan and Minuteman missile silos while a permament basing plan is being researched.

The amendments were offered during consideration of a $208.5 billion military spending bill.

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., said he would offer an amendment today to delete the entire $354 million earmarked for planning and design of an interim basing mode for the MX.

Reagan wants to build 100 MX missiles and put up to 40 of them in existing missile silos until a permanent basing mode is decided upon by Jan. 1, 1984.

The Senate-approved amendment says research and development money could be spent only to put the missiles temporarily into silos that had not been reinforced. It also moves up the deadline for a permanent basing plan to July 1, 1983.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, chairman of the defense appropriations subcommittee, said there is at least $20 million in the bill that the Pentagon could spend anyway on plans for interim basing in strengthened silos.

But the vote clearly signaled a mood in Congress that it wants the administration to concentrate on a long-term basing plan, instead of spending money to reinforce silos, which critics say would still be vulnerable to Soviet attack.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, told the Senate that the administration was proposing to "stuff a bigger missile, one that would make a more attractive target, in a hole that the Russians already have targeted."

The amendment provides that the long-range study could include protecting silos with anti-ballistic missiles, moving missiles around to conceal their location or reinforcing the silos.

Stevens said he talked to Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and his research chief, Richard DeLauer, and "I can't say they are overjoyed with the amendment, but I think they understand the reasons behind it."

'Substantial' cuts in store

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's next round of budget-slashing recommendations will include "substantial" cuts in the government's benefit programs, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. says.

"I think every one except Social Security is being examined" for potential cuts, Baker said of the 27 benefit programs.

The largest programs being considered for cuts include Medicare and Medicaid, health care programs for the elderly and poor; a variety of government pension programs; welfare and food stamps.

The benefit payments of these programs are tied to inflation, and some Republicans have suggested across-the-board changes to slow their growth.

Baker, R-Tenn., declined to cite specific figures. But other sources who asked to remain anonymous indicated Wednesday that budget director David A. Stockman is looking toward a two-year package of $30 billion to $40 billion in cuts in entitlements — those programs which pay benefits directly to individuals as mandated by law.

As the administration prepares its fiscal 1983 budget, to be submitted to Congress in January, congressional Republicans and Reagan aides appear to be nearing agreement on the outlines of spending cuts for a new government stopgap money bill to replace the one that expires Dec. 15.

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., said Wednesday that Republican congressional staffers and administration officials have agreed on a "technical draft" that outlines about $4 billion in savings for the 1982 fiscal year, which began Oct. 1.

The work completed by staffers Wednesday was to be presented to Republican congressional leaders today.

GOP leaders and administration officials have been meeting on Capitol Hill this week in hopes of avoiding another confrontation and disruption of government operations.

A major aim of this week's meetings has been to agree on a common set of budget numbers.

Reagan has insisted on at least half the $8.4 billion in 1982 domestic spending cuts that he requested in September. Last week, he vetoed a compromise stopgap measure — shutting down non-essential government services for half a day — after administration officials said it would have achieved less than $2 billion in cuts. Congressional figures showed the agreement within Reagan's budget.

After Wednesday's meeting, reporters asked Hatfield whether Stockman, who attended the session, had accepted the numbers in the tentative plan.

Polish police free Solidarity protesters

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Police today freed 34 Solidarity members detained during a raid to supress a strike at the Warsaw firefighters' school, including Seweryn Jaworski, a top official of the independent union's Warsaw branch.

But Solidarity still maintained a national alert, and the government labor newspaper Glos Pracy said, "the situation is as explosive and dangerous as never before. More caution and prudence are needed not to take a false step or simply not to succumb to plain provocation."

Solidarity's 38 regional chiefs gathered in the central city of Radom to discuss economic issues. One Solidarity official said the Wednesday raid was sure to be on the agenda, and that union leaders would discuss ways of retaliating to the government's suppression of the eight-day strike by 320 student firemen.

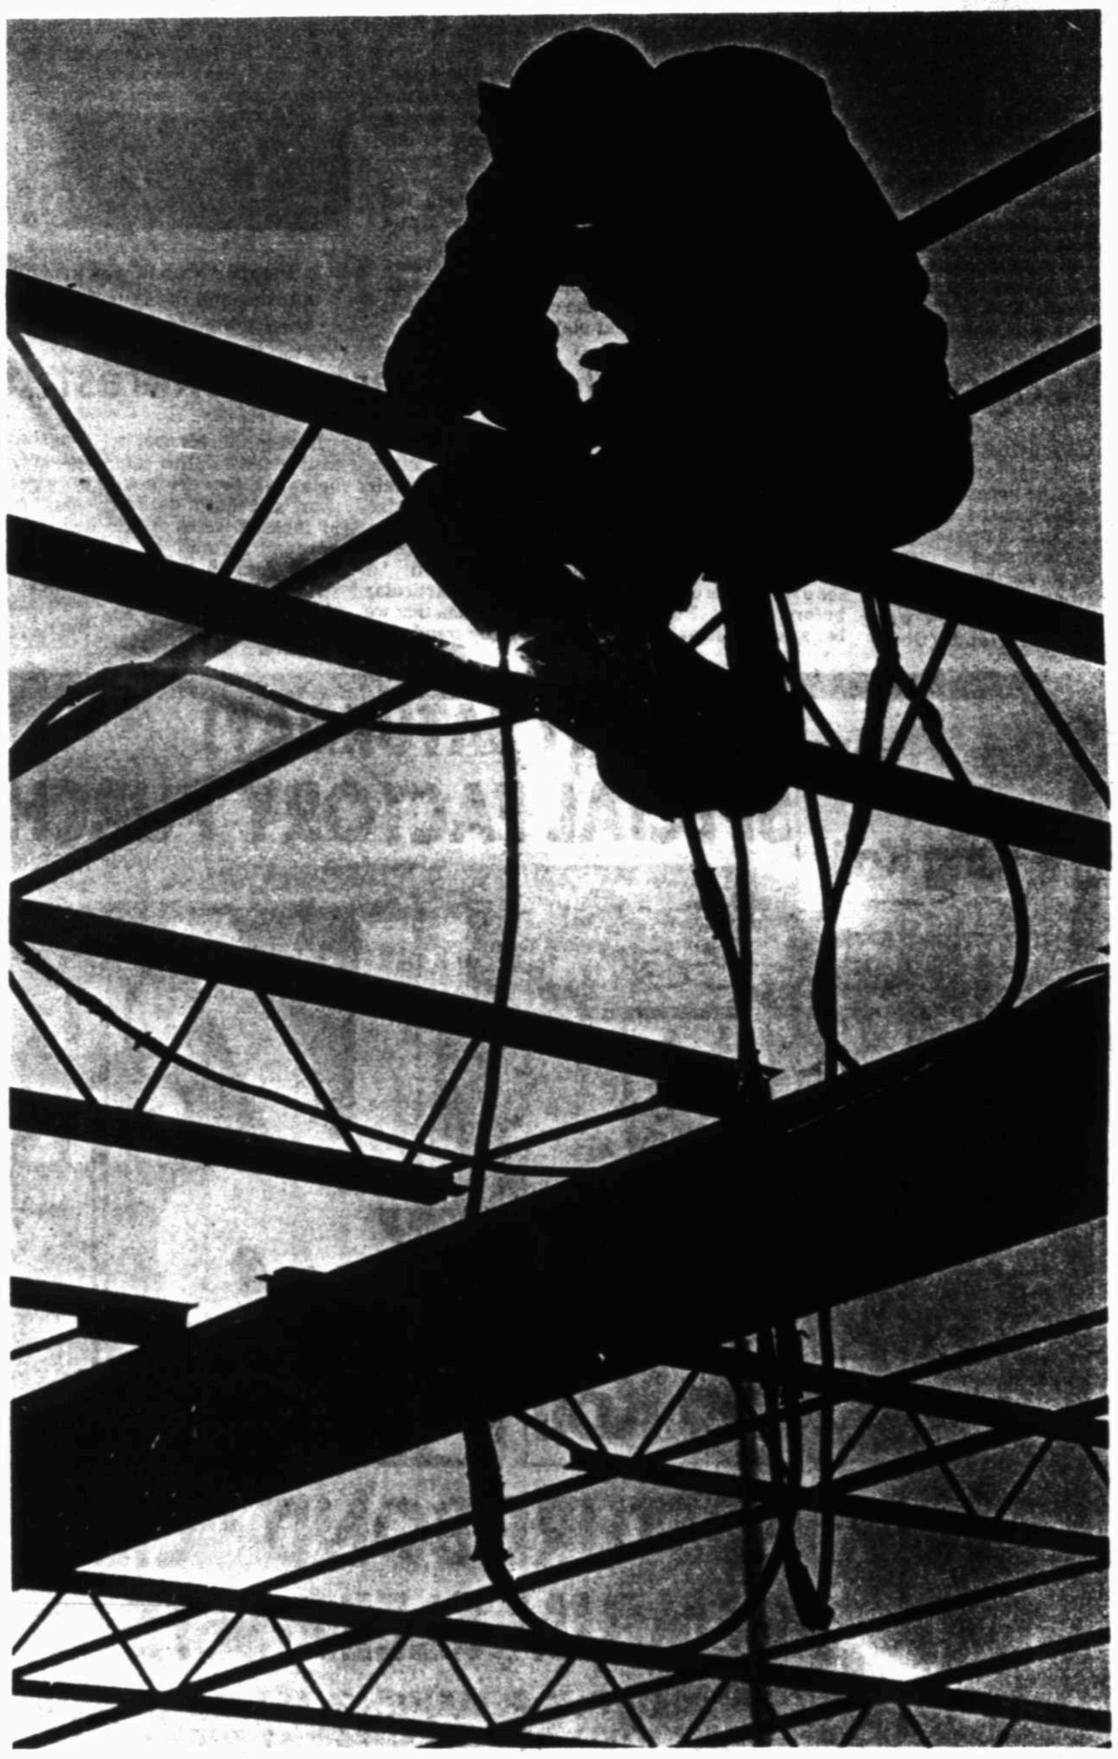

"Today the fight has begun," the independent union's chief, Lech Walesa, told a cheering crowd outside a Warsaw hotel. "We are approaching a peak of tension where something must happen. I order instant readiness of all chapters."

The union leaders declared the alert Wednesday after 500 commandos, supported by 4,000 to 5,000 police and troops, stormed a firefighters' school in Warsaw and routed the cadets who were on a sit-in strike.

"It was non-violent and we offered no resistance to give them an excuse," said one of the cadets.

No casualties were reported.

It was the biggest show of force by the government since the Soviet bloc's only legal independent union was formed 15 months ago.

Midland man given 20-year sentence

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Willie Charles Jackson was sentenced to a 20-year term in the state penitentiary early Wednesday night after a jury in 142nd State District Court found him guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death of Eddie "Water Gator" Tealer Jr. last Aug. 15 in Blaylock & Son Garage at 1104 E. Illinois Ave.

The four-man, eight-woman jury deliberated about two hours before returning a guilty verdict, but took only about 15 minutes to assess punishment.

The prosecution had sought a murder conviction, which could have meant a sentence of up to life in prison. The jury-assessed 20-year punishment is the maximum the law allows for voluntary manslaughter.

In his testimony, Jackson, 26, claimed that he was intimidated by Tealer, 33, who allegedly had fathered a child by Jackson's wife, and suggested that he might have shot Tealer in self-defense.

"I knew I was afraid of him," said Jackson, who admitted to stealing a .357-caliber magnum Colt revolver at B&B Trading Post minutes before he shot Tealer in the chest. "I needed some protection."

Jackson said his wife was sitting at a pool table in the garage when he returned to the garage after squabbling there with his wife, his mother-in-law and Tealer. He said he "saw movement in the back" of the shop and then saw Tealer.

"All I could see was the knife, the glitter of it," Jackson testified. "More or less, I panicked. He (Tealer) got close to me, and I reached for my gun. I panicked."

Jackson said he recalled firing only one round, though a witness to the shooting claimed that Jackson fired a round into the garage's ceiling before he shot Tealer.

Minutes after the shooting, Jackson said he went to the home of his brother-in-law, Prentiss Jackson. Later, his wife and mother-in-law entered the house.

" 'Why did you do it (shoot 'Gator')?' " he said his wife, Linda, asked him.

"'I don't know,'" Jackson said he replied. "I didn't have no choice."

Jackson said his mother-in-law, who, he said, "more or less had a personal revenge against me," also asked him why he killed their friend.

"I told her, 'I'm sorry.' "

After Midland police showed up at the house, Jackson gave himself up. Since then, he has been held in jail in lieu of posting a $25,000 bailbond.

Prosector David Joers asked Jackson why he selected hollow-point bullets at the trading post just before he ran away with the pistol. The post is about five blocks from the garage.

"Was it because hollow-point bullets have more killing power, so to speak?" asked Joers. "They fragment."

"I don't know," said Jackson. "I didn't ask for no specific type of shell."

The testimony did not reveal a clear-cut motive for the shooting, though defense attorney David Lashford tried to work in heat-of-passion and self-defense motives. After the shooting, police found a folding knife near Tealer's body on the garage floor.

Testimony indicated that Jackson's wife and Tealer and that Jackson and a woman named Thelma were having affairs.

"She (his wife) knowed I had seen this woman," Jackson, who moved to Midland from the East Texas town of Hearne earlier this year, said. "No, this (the affair) is not what brought it

Nursing home director arrested for child's death

MARTINEZ, Calif. (AP) — Parents who took their children to Eleanor Nathan thought of her home as a model day care center. But that was before an investigation led to charges that Mrs. Nathan murdered an infant and abused 20 other children.

"She seemed so sweet and compassionate ... You just wouldn't dream such a lovely person could be responsible for what was going on," said Betty Schaat, whose 2-year-old son was hospitalized in August for symptoms of strangulation after a stay at Mrs. Nathan's stylish home.

"They'd always be greeted at the door by a sweet word, a smile, a hug and a kiss. But one girl told her mother, 'She (Mrs. Nathan) seems nice, but when she closes the door she becomes a witch,'" said Mrs. Schaat.

Mrs. Nathan, 35, of Clayton, was jailed on $250,000 bail after an arraignment Tuesday. She did not enter a plea to one count of murder and 18 felony and two misdemeanor counts of willful cruelty toward children.

Court records list the names of 39 children ranging in age from 11 months to 7 years who allegedly were abused or witnessed abuse while in Mrs. Nathan's care from 1979 to last September, when the center was closed by the state Department of Social Services.

Children told police investigators in taped interviews that they were shaken upside down, punched, kicked, choked, denied food and water and shut in dark rooms for long periods.

Affidavits filed in the case said the growth of some children was slowed because of lack of nourishment, and that most children in Mrs. Nathan's care for a long time became seriously withdrawn or had speech impediments and learning problems.

Mrs. Schaat said her son, Darren, "is afraid of people now. He never was before. Young as he is, I thought he would get over it, but he hasn't ... He trusted and loved everyone. That has changed."

Jan Scheib's 4½-year-old son was at Mrs. Nathan's house 11 hours a day for about two years.

"These kids went through a very traumatic experience, and we're particularly concerned about our child because of the length of time he was there," she said.

Matthew Cromwell, 11-month-old son of a Concord policeman, died March 18 of injuries apparently caused by a blow to the stomach during a stay at the center. Six other children were hospitalized.

Authorities who investigated found similarities among cases involving injured children from Mrs. Nathan's center. Parents began reporting their children showed signs of being injured after they were picked up from the home.

Contra Costa Deputy District Attorney Joe Campbell said he believed the abuse didn't come to light earlier because children were afraid to tell their parents about it.

"She certainly traumatized the children," he said. "They were afraid to say anything."

When Mrs. Nathan was confronted with tales of abuse, said Campbell, she explained the children fell or hurt themselves at play.

Reagan says his goal is 10 percent interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he hopes to see interest rates drop to "around 10 percent," but acknowledges he doesn't know whether that will happen next year.

In an interview with the Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer, however, the president did predict an upturn in the economy during 1982.

"I would think that we're going to begin to see a turn in the economy before" next November's congressional elections, he said.

But asked to set a date by which it would be fair for Americans to judge whether his economic programs were succeeding, Reagan said: "I couldn't pin a particular time on it. I think that we have to go by trends."

Reagan said his goal is to have the inflation rate below 10 percent next year, and that a decline in interest rates to 10 percent "would be a great gain to the construction industry in particular and to the automobile industry."

But asked whether interest rates that low were possible in 1982, he said, "No, I can't really tell you on this."

A transcript of the interview, held on Monday, was released Wednesday.

Commodity price supports reviewed

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is reviewing a new plan designed to meet its objections to a proposed congressional compromise on a new multibillion dollar, four-year package of commodity price supports.

But the senior members of the House-Senate conference committee, who drafted the latest plan, are still not sure it will satisfy either President Reagan or their colleagues.

"We want some assurance that the administration is going to support it before we present it to the (full) conference," says Rep. William Wampler, R-Va. "The White House may reject it."

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, the chief House negotiator, added, "We may have to continue our (bargaining) discussions."

He was not enthusiastic about the new proposal and said earlier that the House has already conceded as much as it can.

closed-door meeting of senior committee members and Agriculture Secretary John R. Block. But members said Block was unable to provide any guarantee of administration support. Specifics of the new plan were being withheld pending receipt of that assurance.

Block has objected to a proposed compromise, reached in November, because of the direct costs of the dairy and grain support programs and the potential for even higher costs in grain supports if economic assumption for the future prove wrong. He said that unless those areas are addressed, he would recommend a veto of the November compromise.

The plan drafted Wednesday would bring the cost of that compromise down from nearly $11.3 billion to almost $10.9 billion by trimming support levels for dairy, grains, wool and sugar. It handles, to some extent, the possibility of even higher costs by scaling back grain target prices, which trigger direct federal payments to farmers when market prices are low.

Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., a member of the House panel, has already said he will oppose any bill calling for support levels below those in the November compromise.

"I'm not going to support further erosion of that bill," Jones said. "This conference has already bled the farmer of all the blood he has to give."

The government, through loans, purchases and direct payments, supports commodity prices to provide farmers with some income to keep them in business during hard times so consumers remain assured of continued adequate supply of food.

But farm bill negotiators have been trapped between the mandate for reduced federal spending and farmer demands for higher supports at a time when farm income is at one of its lowest levels.

The joint conference committee has been effectively deadlocked for a month as the Republican majority on the Senate team repeatedly backed Block's demands for a bill costing no more than the $10.6 billion approved by the full Senate. Block says that's already as much as $3 billion more than Reagan wants to spend.

House negotiators, after trimming more than $5 billion from the $16.6 billion House-passed farm bill, have been refusing to go any lower. They claim they have been doing all the compromising and it's time for the administration to make concessions.

Before the negotiators resumed work Wednesday after a 12-day recess, Reagan met with a number of farm leaders, urging them to help convince Congress to make further cuts in the support program.

But the farm leaders remained divided. Some, led by the American Farm Bureau Federation, firmly backed Reagan's demands for further cuts, saying it is the only way his economic recovery program can work.

But others, while saying they support the president's economic program, claimed the November compromise provides the minimum supports farmers need to cope with mounting financial problems.

Checks out in time for Christmas

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a million people will be getting government wheat and barley "deficiency" checks totaling about $470 million, many of them arriving in time for Christmas shopping, the Agriculture Department says.

The checks represent "deficiency" payments due under law to make up the difference between actual market prices and target prices set for the grain.

Officials said Wednesday that about $420 million will go to wheat producers and $50 million to barley producers.

Everett Rank, administrator of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said wheat market prices during June through November — the period used to compute payments — averaged $3.66 per bushel.

The target for 1981 wheat is $3.81 per bushel. Thus, he said, the deficiency payment will be 15 cents a bushel.

Barley prices averaged $2.49 per bushel, compared with the target of $2.60. The payment, therefore, will be 11 cents per bushel.

Rank said local offices of the agency will issue the checks "as soon as possible after Dec. 10."

Payments will be made to wheat and barley producers who reported their 1981 crop acreage and filed an application for payment with their local ASCS office, he said.

A total of 797,114 farms are covered by the payments. Not only the farm operator but all who share in the crop are eligible for part of the government money, officials said. Landlords and heirs are examples.

Thus, an estimated 1.3 million people will be getting checks.

The 1981 wheat crop was totaled about 2.75 billion bushels and the barley harvest about 476 million.

No deficiency payments on wheat or barley were made last year. Barley producers got checks in 1979 totaling $17 million, but wheat farmers have not been eligible since 1978.

Three years ago, wheat farmers collected $617.4 million in deficiency payments, but that was down sharply from $996.4 million paid in 1977, according to department records.

No wheat payments were made in 1974 through 1976. That was because cash market prices were higher than the targets, a situation triggered by unprecedented export shipments of grain, including huge amounts to the Soviet Union and other major buyers.

Ag Department machines have keen sense of smell

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says its scientists are creating machines with a sense of smell "so keen they'll be able to tell a real lime from the lime-scented aftershave lotion inside your closed suitcase."

The purpose is to sniff out food and plants being brought into the United States that may carry foreign diseases and pests.

Officials said Wednesday that the machines have not been perfected but that the results so far are encouraging. Meanwhile, the traditional inspections at ports of entry will continue.

The research on detection instruments is being done at the department's Eastern Regional Research Center, Philadelphia, Pa.

James Cavanaugh, a chemist with the Agricultural Research Service, is head of the project. He says odor-sensing machines would cut the time travelers spend while going through customs.

"We already can detect the basic difference in odors electronically, but further research is needed to be sure a false alarm is not sounded when a scent such as perfume is detected," he said.

Farm Bureau favors abolition of agency

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The federal agency that buys agriculture surpluses should be abolished because the government is tempted to dump surpluses on the market and drive prices down, say delegates to the Texas Farm Bureau's annual convention.

The Commodity Credit Corporation has run its course and should be done away with, according to more than 1,000 farmers and ranchers attending the two-day convention that ended Wednesday.

Delegates also voted to seek the abolishment of the government dairy price support program, citing the rising cost to government, increasing production and declining demand.

They said the government emergency feed program and all other disaster programs for wheat, cotton, grain sorghum and other commodities also should be discontinued.

Recommendations by the TFB will be sent to the American Farm Bureau Federation annual meeting Jan. 10 in San Diego, TFB officials said.

Carroll Chaloupka, a grain and cattle producer from Dalhart, was re-elected Wednesday as president of the organization. Chaloupka will serve his eighth term.

On the Saturday night of the shooting, Jackson said he voluntarily gave a confession to Police Detective Lt. Ron Aaron. But at the time, Jackson said he was emotional and was hungry, for he hadn't eaten all day.

"I was upset — more or less disturbed," he said. "I was really upset over what had happened."

Collins to hold press conference

U.S. Rep. Jim Collins, R-Dallas, will hold a press conference at 9:30 a.m. Friday in the home of his regional coordinator, Jess Ann Thomason, 3308 Haynes Ave.

Collins, an eight-term congressman, is seeking the senate seat now held by Democrat Lloyd Bentsen.

Also bidding for the seat on the Republican ticket is State Sen. Walter Mengden.

Big Lake man held for burglary

BIG LAKE — Robert Hennessee, 23, of Big Lake is being held in lieu of $10,000 bond in county jail here after being charged before Peace Justice Clara Cromer with burglary of Eagles Lodge early Wednesday.

Police are searching for another person in connection with the burglary, in which a safe containing approximately $2,000 was taken.

Big Lake Police Department officers recovered both the safe and the money, according to a spokesman.

Copyright revision moving slowly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is evaluating its position on a proposed revision of federal copyright law that a Labor Department official says could eliminate more than 350,000 printing jobs in the United States.

The proposed change could devastate the U.S. printing industry, according to Howard D. Samuel, president of the AFL-CIO industrial union department.

Michael Aho, head of the Labor Department's office of foreign economic research, said in a telephone interview Wednesday that he had planned to present a report which estimated the proposed change could eliminate from 170,000 to 367,000 jobs.

Schoolteacher freed after 21 months

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A schoolteacher who served 21 months in a Delaware prison after being convicted of killing his wife was welcomed home by more than 100 supporters who helped get the verdict overturned.

"I'm ready to start living for now and the future, and forget this nightmare behind me," Robert Hughes said at the homecoming Wednesday night at Los Angeles International Airport.

Hughes, a Thousand Oaks teacher and father of two small sons, was convicted Feb. 11, 1980 of first-degree murder in the strangulation of his wife Serita Ann. The conviction was overturned by the Supreme Court of Delaware, where the Hugheses had lived.

"My prayer right now is that this will be the end," said Hughes, observing that Delaware authorities can put him on trial again. A decision has not been made.

The Delaware high court cited errors in statements prosecutors made to the jury, including that Hughes had lied to police and that blood had been found on his clothing.

He was freed from prison Thanksgiving Eve after $150,000 bail was posted by a nationwide support group started by the Ascension Lutheran Church in Thousand Oaks, 40 miles west of here.

Senate opposed to MX missile system

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is almost unanimously opposed to President Reagan's proposal to reinforce existing missile silos for an interim MX-basing system.

But another of the president's strategic weapons programs, the B-1 bomber, survived Democratic opposition Wednesday as the Senate considered a $208.5 billion military spending bill.

The Senate voted 90-4 for an amendment to block the administration from using any of the $334 million in MX research and development funds to put the missiles into reinforced Titan and Minuteman silos pending a decision on a permanent basing plan.

THE VOTE CLEARLY signaled that Congress wants the administration to concentrate on a long-term basing system. Critics of the proposal to harden existing silos as an interim measure say they still would be vulnerable to Soviet attack.

But the administration's B-1 program survived a series of Democrat-sponsored amendments to shift its funds to other military needs, with majority Republicans voting solidly against them in almost all cases.

Reagan wants to build 100 MX missiles and put up to 40 of them in existing missile silos until a permanent basing mode is decided upon by Jan. 1, 1984.

The Senate-approved amendment says research and development money could be spent only to put the missiles temporarily into unreinforced silos. It also advances the deadline for a permanent basing plan to July 1, 1983.

The amendment provides that the long-range study could include protecting silos with anti-ballistic missiles, a mobile basing system in which the missiles would be moved from place to place, or reinforcing the silos.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED Wednesday would have added $77 million for more soldiers and airmen; $148 million for Army ammunition; $60 million for getting tanks, trucks and other equipment to soldiers in the field; and $74.6 million to strengthen the U.S. naval presence in the Persian Gulf.

They were part of a Democratic package of amendments built around a move to eliminate the $2.43 billion appropriation for a start on a fleet of 100 B-1 bombers.

On the domestic front, the fate of the new farm bill remains unclear.

The administration is reviewing a plan designed to meet its objections to a proposed congressional compromise on the multibillion dollar, four-year package of commodity price supports.

But senior members of the House-Senate conference committee, who drafted the latest plan, still are not sure it will satisfy either President Reagan or their colleagues.

"We want some assurance that the administration is going to support it before we present it to the (full) conference," said Rep. William Wampler, R-Va. "The White House may reject it."

The latest plan, calling for further concessions, was worked out late Wednesday during a three-hour, closed-door meeting of senior committee members and Agriculture Secretary John R. Block.

THE PLAN DRAFTED Wednesday would lower the cost of the bill from nearly $11.3 billion to almost $10.9 billion by trimming support levels for dairy, grains, wool and sugar.

Meanwhile, in an attempt to avoid a lengthy Senate battle next year, Majority Leader Howard Baker is seeking a vote this month on a 10-year extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

"I have proposed that we just go ahead and pass a 10-year extension of the Voting Rights Act as it now exists," Baker, a Tennessee Republican, said Wednesday.

President Reagan said last month that he would sign legislation which continues the current method of keeping close tabs on states that have a history of voter discrimination. Key provisions of the act expire next August.

Step right up — and in — Bob Hope's shoe's

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press Writer

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (AP) — N. Lee Eaton touched the soles of a score of famous men and women while trying to raise money for the Pawtucket Free Library.

After receiving letters from Mrs. Eaton, a host of entertainers including Bob Hope, Brooke Shields and John Travolta kicked in one pair of shoes each for a fundraising auction to be held in January.

"I thought people would want to buy them and hang them on the wall of their den," said Mrs. Eaton, coordinator of community affairs for the library.

"I've had more people come in off the street and offer me $10 or $15 so they could wear them to a party and say, 'Hey, I've got Bob Hope's shoes on.'"

She has mailed 200 letters since July and has received 41 pairs of shoes — including Hope's wingtips, Sally Struthers' silver platforms and Charleton Heston's size-12 sneakers, which came bearing the actor's autograph.

Marty Ingels attached a picture of his wife, singer-actress Shirley Jones, to a pair of her gold sandals, Mrs. Eaton said.

"When I got to the point I wanted to ask stars for something, I was trying to think of something every star would have, but they wouldn't have to give us something of any great value," she said. "I thought, 'If they are like me they have lots of shoes they don't like or don't fit.'"

One exception was actor Mickey Rooney, whose secretary wrote to say his feet are so small he has to have expensive custom-made shoes which he wears until they fall apart.

She said she was surprised by the soft, brown loafers sent by Travolta. "They tell me that John Travolta is more conservative than I pictured him," she said.

One of her favorites are the pull-on ankle boots from "Lou Grant" star Ed Asner.

"Ed Asner's, I swear, have something fuzzy like mildew on the toe," she said.

"Everybody who comes through says they wouldn't think I could bear to part with them, but I tell them that I have to, because that's part of the contract when I asked for them," Mrs. Eaton said.

"I feel good about the people who took the time to write. If you wrote to 100 people in Pawtucket and asked for for an old hat, they never would even answer you."

Chances slim for finding seven missing fishermen

By PAUL JENKINS
Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A Coast Guard officer says chances are growing slimmer that authorities will be able to rescue seven people still missing after they and seven others abandoned a fishing vessel that was swamped by a mammoth wave.

At least five people were killed and two were rescued from the Gulf of Alaska, authorities said. Search vessels and aircraft were to resume the search today.

"Hope is fading," said Coast Guard Lt. Larry Hazel, "but it has not faded."

The 138-foot St. Patrick was abandoned early Monday in heavy seas.

Two unidentified bodies were recovered Wednesday. Another was sighted but vanished in heavy surf before divers from the Alaska state police could reach it, Hazel said. Two survivors and three bodies were picked up Tuesday.

One of the survivors, Wallace R. Thomas, a 23-year-old deckhand from St. Augustine, Fla., was released from the Kodiak hospital Wednesday. The second, 28-year-old Robert Kidd of Warwick, R.I., remained hospitalized in stable condition.

THOMAS, WHO DRIFTED and swam for 24 hours in the gulf's 44-degree waters after the St. Patrick was abandoned, said there weren't enough survival suits aboard when the crew plunged into the sea. Three men went into the frigid water without the protective gear, he said.

"The crew knew there were not enough," he said. "You kind of were expected to provide your own."

Ten crew members clutched a length of rope and prayed aloud in the darkness as they struggled to stay alive, Thomas said. Two others in survival suits apparently were swept off the deck after the 20-to-25-foot wave disabled the vessel.

The three dead men recovered Tuesday were identified as the vessel's captain, Cornelius Green, 37, and Wilson Pair, 28, both of Hampton, Va.; and James Jobe, 23, of Norfolk Va. Listed as missing were: Venesa Sandin of Kodiak; Charles Parlert, 24, of West Point, Va.; Gary Todd Stallings of Live Oak, Fla.; Thomas Kauppinen, 20, of Norfolk, Va.; Ron Newton, 23, Lexington, Neb.; Clifford Stiegell, 32, South Bend, Wash.; and Randal Ryker, 21, of Springfield, Ore.

THOMAS SAID THE WAVE flooded the engine with hundreds of gallons of water. Green ordered the crew overboard.

"We found the life raft was gone. It was confused. We all got together and tied outselves to a rope," he said. "We just stepped off the deck ... it was listing to starboard and the water was right at deck level.

"After a while, they became delirious. One of them struggled and pushed away. I had been holding onto him. I couldn't get to him. Sometime during the night, the skipper separated from us," he added.

Police have 'strong suspect' in elderly slayings

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The strangulation of an 82-year-old woman bears similarities to the murders of three other elderly women during the past 14 months, authorities say.

"We haven't had a chance to go completely through the evidence, but this one does appear similar" to the other three, said Lansing police spokesman Sgt. Irv Ruby. "Hopefully we are going to be able to make an arrest shortly."

"We do have a very strong suspect in the previous (three) homicides," Ruby said.

POLICE SAY THEY have a suspect in mind in the first three deaths, but so far the person is not a suspect in the fourth.

Police located relatives of the latest victim and identified her late Wednesday as Denise Swanson, 82, Ruby said. Autopsy results were due today.

Sgt. Don Dufour, head of the police homicide squad, said it appeared Mrs. Swanson was strangled, as were the other three victims.

Part of her clothing had been removed, according to officers who discovered Mrs. Swanson's body Tuesday night in an upstairs bedroom of her home.

Chief Richard Gleason said police are "98 percent sure" who commmitted the three earlier slayings. "But because of the courts," he said, "we just can t touch him.

Ingham County Prosecutor Peter Houk was less sure who committed the slayings. "But we have a good suspect" in the first three, he said. "We have not issued (a warrant) because at this point in time there is insufficient admissible evidence to obtain a conviction."

RUBY SAID POLICE were called to Mrs. Swanson's home by neighbors who were worried because she had not been seen since Monday.

On Nov. 2, police found the body of Ula Curdy, 81, in her home. In February, the body of Edith Crossette, 81, was found in tall bushes outside her home.

Woman injured in traffic accident

STANTON — A Stanton woman was injured in a two-vehicle traffic accident near here late Wednesday afternoon.

In fair condition at Malone-Hogan hospital in Big Spring with lacerations and a crushed right knee cap, according to the Department of Public Safety, is 29-year-old Toby Romine.

Her 1978 Buick and an 18-wheeler driven by William Rees of Ontario, Canada, collided at the intersection of Texas 137 and FM 3113 in Martin County about 5 p.m. Wednesday.

According to the DPS, the accident occurred when Rees attempted to make a left hand turn onto the FM road. He was northbound on 137 and Romine was southbound at the time. Rees was not injured.

This diet a matter of life, death

AP Laserphoto

Jim Fronk, 41, puts the materials needed for his chemical diet on the kithchen table in his Albany, N.Y., home. Fronk, who has no intestines, must spend about six hours a day having dextrose and other chemicals slowly fed into his vens by the machine at right.

By ED McCULLOUGH
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Jim Fronk is on a permanent chemical diet — a mixture of proteins, dextrose, vitamins and minerals injected into his jugular vein — that has virtually replaced solid food.

For 10 years, the 41-year-old Fronk, a production line foreman at General Electric, suffered from Crohn's Disease, an inflammation of the lower intestine. He had operations, blood transfusions, vitamin and mineral shots, and intravenous feeding. When the last of his intestines was removed four years ago, he weighed 82 pounds.

"At that point, I couldn't get out of bed. The chemicals in my body were all out of whack," said Fronk. "I thought I'd never get out of the hospital alive."

Hundreds of people nationwide, whose intestines are damaged by disease, find themselves in the same predicament. Until recently, there was no way to replace the intestines' function of digesting food and providing nourishment.

Now, about 90 hospitals across the country, including Albany Medical Center Hospital, have developed a way for people to live on chemicals.

The program is called Home Total Parenteral Nutrition (HTPN), "parenteral" meaning that the intestines are bypassed, said Dr. Lyn Howard, director of clinical nutrition at Albany Medical College, which is affiliated with the hospital.

"(HTPN) only goes back 20 years," said Ms. Howard, founder of the hospital's 7½-year-old program. The first attempt to keep someone alive entirely on a diet of chemicals was done at the University of Pennsylvania in 1968, she said.

Fronk is one of about 20 HTPN patients who travel from as far as Syracuse, about 140 miles away, and eastern Massachusetts to the medical center. At home, he mixes his own solution and, for up to 12 hours a day, hooks himself up to a machine that drips food into his veins.

Today, Fronk weighs close to his normal 150 pounds and is healthy enough to work with a volunteer fire company and take his son hunting.

Only about 500 people nationwide are on HTPN programs, according to Maureen Brady, administrative assistant for the New York Academy of Medicine's Committee on Public Health.

But for those who need it, HTPN can be the difference between life and death, and between life at home and life in a hospital.

"It's a question of the quality of life, and life itself," said former truck driver Don Young, 41. "I can't go 48 hours without it. I don't have enough intestinal surface" to digest and absorb solid food.

For 6½ years, Young, whose intestine was cut to 18 inches, has been treated at the hospital. Today, he's healthy enough to chop wood on his Saratoga County farm, serve as councilman on the local town board, and take care of two young children.

The cost of treatment is usually picked up by Medicaid — 80 percent — or Medicare — 100 percent. For Fronk and Young, Medicaid plus private insurance pick up the tab.

"I cook for my two kids. I'm not going to just watch them eat," said Young. He and Fronk eat small amounts of solid food, although neither gets much nourishment from it.

Food "passes through me rather fast, so fast that I can't absorb nourishment," he said. "Sometimes, it goes through virtually unchanged."

Now that HTPN has proven successful, other concerns are arising, according to Ms. Howard and Ms. Brady.

A big unknown is whether people can survive on HTPN over the long term, Ms. Howard said. "Metabolically, (patients) are in tremendous disarray," she said. "Their systems are breaking down."

Another concern is getting young, active people to learn to live with the drastic change in lifestyle HTPN demands. Patients spend hours a day hooked up to a machine. They generally can't work at jobs they once held. They are very vulnerable to sickness.

"When you first present the program, they usually feel defeated, angry," Ms. Howard said. "Gradually, they get strong...euphoric. Then they get down — 'yeah, I'm living, but is it worth it?' Then, hopefully, they stabilize."

Perhaps the biggest problem is money. Chemical solutions and related expenses cost up to $55,000 a year, Ms. Brady said. A Committee on Public Health report shows that more than 40 percent of the hospitals that offer HTPN turn away patients.

Treatment generally is not available for patients who don't have money or insurance, she said. "Most hospitals aren't going to write that ($55,000) off."

But for those in the Albany program it has been worth it.

Test can detect 'fragile X,' predict mental retardation

By MARC HUMBERT
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A new test on unborn babies can detect a genetic abnormality that most often affects males and may be the cause of up to 20 percent of all cases of mental retardation, researchers say.

The three New York state researchers said at a news conference Wednesday the test had been used a few weeks ago to show that a New York City woman was carrying a fetus with "fragile X syndrome," and the woman chose to have an abortion.

The test, which isn't yet widely available, also can be used before pregnancy to show whether women are carriers of the abnormality, the researchers said.

The abnormality is called fragile X because it appears under microscopes as a defect in the X chromosome, one of two sex-determining bundles of genetic material in human cells. Male cells contain one X and one Y chromosome. Female cells carry two X chromosomes only.

"We think that this may account for between 10 and 20 percent of all mental retardation," said Dr. W. Ted Brown, one of the three researchers from the state's Institute of Basic Research of the Office of Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities.

"After Down's syndrome (mongolism), this is probably the leading cause of mental retardation," added Dr. Henry Wisniewski, who directed the research project.

The team's findings will appear in the Dec. 5 edition of the British medical journal Lancet.

Wisniewski, Brown and Dr. Albert Jenkins said fragile X syndrome causes infants to be born with IQs of between 10 and 70 with an average of 30 to 40.

The mental retardation from the abnormality develops almost always in males while females become carriers who can pass on the abnormality to their children.

The three scientists said that a woman with the fragile X chromosome abnormality runs a 50 percent risk of her male children being retarded or her female children being carriers themselves.

The researchers said that, according to one recent study, the syndrome may appear in as many as one in every 1,100 males and one in every 600 females.

The scientists said research into the syndrome, detected 12 years ago, is still in its early stages. But they said they believe detection of the abnormality in a fetus is an almost certain sign of retardation for a male child and carrier status for a female.

The fragile X testing is a refinement of the more common genetic testing known as amniocentesis, in which fluid from the womb is extracted and tested. Amniocentesis can determine the presence of some chromosomal abnormalities and the sex of the fetus.

Until now, detection of fragile X cases has depended on culturing white blood cells. Prenatal screening wasn't practical because attempts to take blood samples from a fetus would endanger its life.

Vitamin E prevents blindness in babies

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Oxygen-rich incubators save the lives of babies born very prematurely, but sometimes they premanently damage the infants' eyes. Now doctors have found that vitamin E will prevent the worst cases of this major cause of childhood blindness.

A study published today shows that if premature Infants are given high doses of the vitamin within a day of birth, they will escape severe forms of the eye-damaging disease, called retrolental fibroplasia.

The disease has become more common in the last decade as doctors use incubators and new medical skills to keep premature babies alive.

The disease causes some visual impairment in about 1,300 children annually in the United States, and the sight of at least 250 of the victims is severely damaged.

Retrolental fibroplasia is prevalent among the smallest and most premature infants who need extra oxygen to stay alive. The oxygen causes the blood vessels in their retinas to constrict, then dilate and leak.

The study, directed by Dr. Helen Mintz Hittner, was conducted at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston by doctors from Baylor College of Medicine and the University of Houston. It was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors conducted their study on 101 newborn babies who weighed less than 3.3 pounds and needed oxygen because of breathing problems. Half took high doses of vitamin E, while the rest got only small amounts of the vitamin.

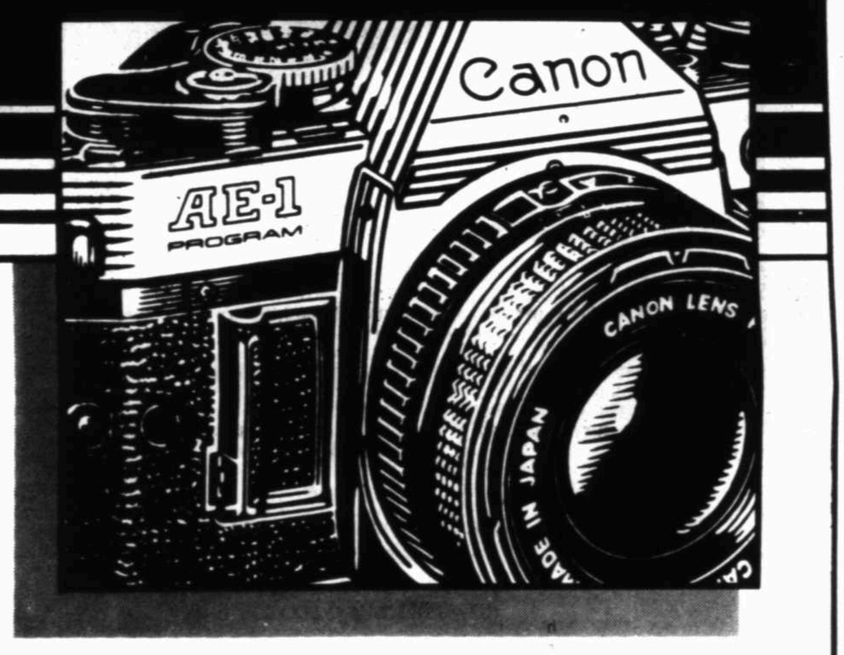

The doctors found that even though the vitamin did not prevent mild forms of the illness, it greatly reduced the severity.

In both groups, about 65 percent of the infants suffered some degree of the illness. In the high-vitamin group, the disease was mild in all but 8 percent, who suffered a moderate form. However, among the babies who got low doses of the vitamin, 12 percent had moderate disease and 10 percent had severe disease. Severe forms can result in blindness.

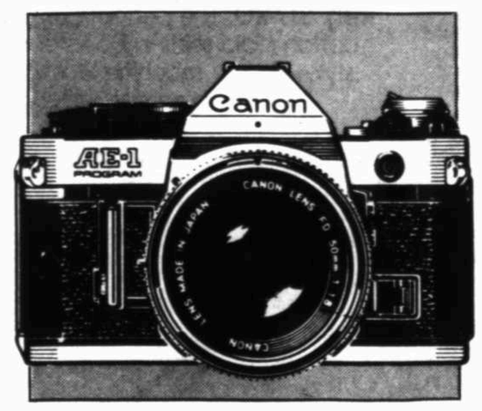

The doctors said they won't know how vision in the two groups of babies differs until the youngsters get older

Opinions varied on arms talks

By DAVID MASON
Chief European Correspondent

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Western Europe has welcomed the start of the U.S.-Soviet nuclear missile limitation talks, but commentators and officials warn not to expect quick results.

PAUL NITZE OF THE United States and Yuli A. Kvitsinsky of the Soviet Union held a preliminary session Monday and agreed they would tell the press nothing about their future negotiations. The two delegations met for two hours and 40 minutes Tuesday and agreed to hold two negotiating sessions a week, on Tuesday and Friday, with smaller meetings in between as specific technical issues arise.

"We welcome the talks and naturally hope they will succeed," said a spokesman for the British Foreign Office. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher warned earlier that if the talks fail to produce an agreement to reduce medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, her Conservative government will have to consider increasing defense expenditures.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt told Parliament today his government did everything it could to create a positive atmosphere for the talks during Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's visit to Bonn last week.

"WE NOW WANT to help in order that these negotiations are led swiftly and that they achieve concrete results," he said.

British newspaper comment was cautious.

The independent Times of London looked ahead to "long and arduous" negotiations. The liberal Guardian said the experience of past arms talks "does not encourage euphoria....The existing scoreboard (the number of weapons held by each side) itself will occupy many months."

"Even if the talks eventually succeed, they won't end the danger of nuclear war," said the Daily Mirror, which supports the opposition Labor Party. "Both sides can kill everyone many times over ...But a start has to be made somewhere."

Jan Willem Bertens, chief spokesman for the Netherlands Foreign Ministry, said the Dutch government hopes the talks "will proceed with great energy and that there will be openness on both sides."

SWEDEN'S UNDERSECRETARY of state for disarmament, Inga Thorsson, told a news conference: "There is an immense lack of confidence between the superpowers...but there is a common interest to obtain results in the Geneva talks, which ought to lead to something even if it takes time."

Other comment:

Il Giornale Nuovo, conservative, Milan — The Soviets and Americans "must first decide on a catalog of their own arms, and veterans foresee that this problem cannot be solved before Christmas."

La Stampa, Turin — "The Americans and Russians are plunging into a great jungle of missiles....Some call (the talks) a diplomatic marathon."

NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns — "There is a fair chance that some agreement might be reached ...although that agreement might not be what we all hoped for. Any agreement is better than no agreement."

OSLO DAGBLADET, independent: "Concerning disarmament, we are not among the great optimists just now. Disarmament is a subject which has been dealt with for decades, but the world never had more weapons than it has today."

Le Figaro, conservative, Paris — "The Russians continue to speak in terms of a total nuclear arms limitation in Europe — meaning all nuclear arms — while the Americans speak only of medium-range missiles. This fundamental difference in approach is the most important obstacle to progress."

The Soviets have said that, in addition to the 572 medium-range U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is planning to begin deploying in Western Europe in 1983, calculations of the relative strength of the two sides must take into account all the so-called forward-based systems, including U.S. planes and submarines capable of striking the Soviet Union and the British and French independent nuclear forces.

THE UNITED STATES wants to limit the talks to the American Pershing and cruise missiles and the Soviet SS-20s, SS-4s and SS-5s deployed in Western Russia.

Israeli Cabinet approves statement draft

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet today approved a new draft of a joint statement with the United States aimed at bringing European troops into the peacekeeping force that will police the Sinai after Israel withdraws next April.

The Cabinet said it will insist the Europeans explicitly accept the conditions in the statement or it will veto their participation in the U.S.-sponsored peace force.

A Cabinet statement said Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir will convey the agreement to Britain, France, Italy and the Netherlands "and will ask them to confirm the principles detailed" in it.

The U.S.-Israeli accord was first drafted last weekend when Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. summoned Shamir to Washington after it became clear that Israel was on the verge of vetoing European participation.

Israel sent the draft back to Haig on Monday with a request for minor changes. The amended version was approved by Israel today.

The full statement was not immediately made public, but Israeli officials said they expected Washington to release it within a day or two.

Israel objected to a statement made by the would-be European participants calling for the inclusion of the Palestine Liberation Organization in any future Mideast peace negotiations. Israel has refused to negotiate with the PLO.

Israel is not demanding the Europeans change their policy, but it does not want that policy linked to their participation in the peace force, said an official, who declined to be identified.

Meanwhile, Israeli settlers barricaded themselves inside the Sinai desert settlement of Yamit to protest government offers of compensation for the holdings they must give up when Israel withdraws. Authorities made no immediate attempt to intervene.

On Wednesday, Israel's defense minister hinted at secret clauses in a new U.S.-Israeli military agreement as Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government defeated four no-confidence motions by opponents of the pact.

Union officials Lane Kirkland, AFL—CIO, Thomas Donahue, AFL-CIO, and Douglas Fraser, United Auto Workers, enter a White House gate to attend a meeting with President Reagan.

Court ruling gives labor boost

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Organized labor's efforts to unionize white-collar workers are being given an added boost by an important Supreme Court victory.

The nation's highest court agreed Wednesday with the National Labor Relations Board that relatively few workers with access to confidential company information cannot join unions.

The justices, by a 9-0 vote, reversed a lower court ruling that would have excluded from labor-law protection all workers with access to an employer's confidential information.

The justices said only employees with access to confidential information about labor relations itself do not have a legal right to join a union.

The court split 5-4, however, in deciding that most secretaries who work for management officials also can join unions.

THE VICTORY did not surprise George Kaufmann, a Washington lawyer who helped prepare an AFL-CIO friend-of-the-court brief in the case. "Board policy hasn't changed since the beginning of time. The (federal appeals court) ruling would have been ... unwarranted," he said.

Kaufmann added that a different outcome in the Supreme Court could have severely affected organizational efforts among white-collar workers.

"All of a sudden, you could have seen management sharing all sorts of 'confidential information' with employees and then telling them they couldn't join a union," he said.

Stephen Bokat, a Chamber of Commerce lawyer who also helped prepare a friend-of-the-court brief, said the labor board's definition of excluded confidential employee was "far too narrow."

The chamber had urged the justices to take a middle ground — somewhere between the board and 7th Circuit definitions.

Reconciliation clouded by air controller issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's quest for reconciliation with big labor is being clouded by conflicting signals on whether fired air controllers might be returned to flight towers.

Hours after President Reagan indicated to AFL-CIO leaders that he would review his stand against amnesty for some 11,500 dismissed controllers, White House aides cautioned against speculation of presidential conciliation.

In a written notice to the media late Wednesday, the White House said Reagan "is not considering rehiring these individuals as air traffic controllers." The White House press office said the issue remains whether to lift a three-year ban on hiring them for other federal government work.

That conflicted with accounts given by union officials of a nearly hour-long Cabinet Room session with Reagan earlier in the day.

One AFL-CIO executive council member, who declined to be identified, said that when asked to reinstate the controllers to their airport tower jobs, Reagan replied that he would review the "whole issue" when Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis returns from Japan.

ACCORDING TO the AFL-CIO contingent, including president Lane Kirkland, Reagan promised a full review of the controllers issue. The union officials said they took that to mean that not only might he lift the three-year ban on any other government employment for the fired strikers — a prospect he raised a day earlier — but that they might actually be returned to their old jobs.

At first, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said "there are no plans now to put them back in the towers." But he agreed that Reagan didn't rule that out, either.

Informed of the subsequent statement ruling out reinstatement of the controllers to their jobs with the Federal Aviation Administration, AFL-CIO spokesman Rex Hardesty said the White House had "closed the door" on the federation's desire that the controllers be given their old jobs.

"This puts us back to square one," he said.

Speakes quoted Reagan as telling the AFL-CIO leadership in an hour-long meeting that "I never anticipated I would be estranged from labor with all the years I put in as a union member."

"THIS WOULD BE a good point for us to consider starting over. We need consultations to get this country moving again," Reagan was quoted as saying.

A day earlier, Reagan told leaders of the Teamsters union he was considering whether to lift a three-year ban on any federal employment for the fired air controllers. On Wednesday, according to the AFL-CIO source, he went a step further and said he "will review the whole issue" with Lewis.

Kirkland said the union leaders "urged returning these workers to their jobs so as to restore normal air traffic service as soon as possible, spare the public further inconvenience and permit the thousands of other furloughed air industry employees to return to work."

Some Arkansas residents talking about secession

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — Some western Arkansas residents angered after last week's special legislative session are talking about leaving and taking part of the state with them.

Members of a newly formed group called Western Arkansans Riled began circulating petitions in the Fort Smith area Wednesday afternoon to protest the outcome of the session and called for secession to Oklahoma.

It's just a "tongue-in-cheek" campaign, group spokesman Frank Gilbert of Alma said in a telephone interview Wednesday night. The idea behind the petition drive is to express dissatisfaction with the way state government treats western Arkansas concerns, he said.

"IT'S NOT AS big a joke as the Arkansas Legislature," Gilbert said of the campaign.

The group's major complaint with the special session was the way legislators decided to distribute the $21.5 million the state will get from the federal government for oil and natural gas leases at Fort Chaffee.

The special session approved Gov. Frank White's bill to give about one-fourth of that money to Franklin, Sebastian, Logan and Crawford counties, which include Chaffee land.

Gilbert said group members also are upset about the utility legislation that came out of the special session, and about lawmakers' lack of action to raise truck weights and revive the Rock Island route that closed in 1979. After the session, White said the failure of the Rock Island and truck weight bills would particularly hurt western Arkansas.

State Rep. Jerry King, R-Greenwood, said Tuesday that school districts in the four counties that encompass Fort Chaffee will probably sue the state before the end of the year to obtain the rest of the money. He also criticized the legislature for applying a double standard to the Chaffee money because other counties get to keep all the money from mineral leases within their boundaries.

Gilbert, who runs a burglar and fire alarm company, said none of the people he asked to sign the petition Wednesday refused. He said he had about 30 signatures and did not know how others had done with their petitions.

The petitions will be sent to White and western Arkansas legislators to inform them of the petitioners' feelings, Gilbert said.

"Perhaps Gov. Nigh could prevent the Oklahoma Legislature from cruelly and vindictively abusing the area," Gilbert said.

The petitions will be circulated primarily in Sebastian, Crawford, Logan, Franklin, Washington, Benton and Yell counties, Gilbert said, but the campaign could also be expanded in other counties on the Oklahoma border. The other counties are Little River, Polk, Scott and Sevier.

Stringer named head of CBS news

NEW YORK (AP) — Howard Stringer, the force behind CBS News' five-part series on national defense last June, Wednesday was named executive producer of the "CBS Evening News," the first move since Van Gordon Sauter became deputy president of CBS News.

Stringer, senior executive producer of CBS' documentary unit, will replace Sanford Socolow, who will become CBS' London bureau chief. The change was announced jointly by William Leonard, president of CBS News, and Sauter, who will replace Leonard when he retires next spring.

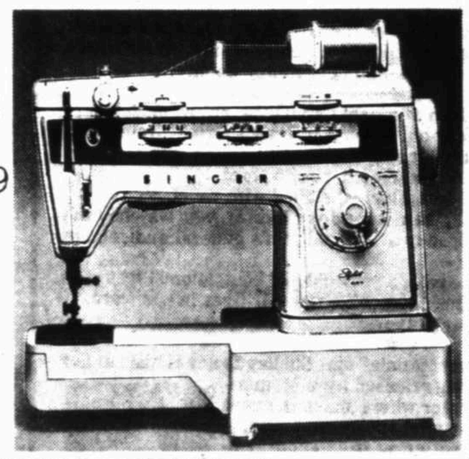

"CBS Evening News" has been faltering in the ratings since Dan Rather replaced Walter Cronkite on March 9. Stringer has had no recent experience with a daily news broadcast and is expected to bring a fresh approach to the evening news.

Other moves announced Wednesday included: Lane Venardos, a CBS Washington producer, and David Browning, CBS' Los Angeles bureau manager, were named as producers of the evening news, raising to five the number of producers on the broadcast.

Sauter became deputy president of CBS News on Nov. 23, after serving more than a year as president of CBS sports.

Hank's Place upsets some in Kentucky community

PARIS, Tenn. (AP) — Hank Williams Jr. says he picked rural Henry County as the spot for his new nightclub because the place has "soul," but some people in the area don't want their souls tainted by all that drinking and carrying on.

"I don't think another bar is a needed thing in our county," said the Rev. Keith Grace. "We don't want Paris to be known as the honky-tonk capital of the world."

Those very words — "Honky Tonk Capital of the World" — were emblazoned on a shirt worn by a bartender as he greeted patrons Tuesday on the opening night of Hank's Place, partly owned by the country music singer.

Williams, son of the late country music star, was among the 200 people at the informal opening. A grand opening is planned Dec. 11.

Williams said he shunned metropolitan areas when he decided to open a club and turned to Henry County, population 27,000.

"This place has got more soul than those other places," he said.

"We have enough Baptists in this county to vote beer and liquor out," said Grace, pastor of Fairview Baptist Church. "We're going to keep at it until we run them out."

But real estate agent Harold Bass said there are benefits to having the club in Henry County.

"When you get Hank Williams Jr. or the Grand Ole Opry stars here, you've really done something," he said. "I'm really almost afraid to say it, but it looks like a business that would help Henry County."

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Even at a papal audience, circus performers can make mistakes. An 11-year-old acrobat in Italy's Orfei Circus tried three times before successfully leaping from a trampoline onto the head of another acrobat standing on the shoulders of a third.

The crowd of 4,000 tourists and pilgrims sighed with relief.

"Thank God it all went well," said Pope John Paul II, who watched the circus' 20-minute show Wednesday at the end of his general audience in the Paul VI auditorium.

"We hope to make you happy," a 9-year-old girl contortionist from the troupe told the pontiff after the show. "We risk our lives in our work. If you can, remember us in your prayers."

NEW YORK (AP) — Former "Annie" star Shelley Bruce is back at her home in New Jersey after being released from Memorial Soan-Kettering Cancer Center where she underwent treatment for leukemia, a hospital spokesman says.

Bruce

The 16-year-old actress is suffering from acute lymphoblastic leukemia and had been hospitalized for treatment. She was released Monday, but will continue receiving outpatient treatment at the hospital once a month, the spokesman said Wednesday.

Her physicians say there is a 65 to 75 percent chance of a long-term cure.

CHAPMAN, Kan. (AP) — What was it like to be in the space shuttle, Col. Joe Engle's hometown audience wanted to know, flying high above the Earth?

Engle

The astronaut reached back to the teen-age vocabulary of tearing around the parking lot in souped-up cars. It was like "peeling rubber," he said.

More than 1,000 people packed into the gymnasium of Chapman High School on Wednesday to honor the town's most celebrated native. The commander of the space shuttle Columbia during its second voyage into space was presented a key to the tiny east-central Kansas community where he grew up, and given lifetime memberships to various civic organizations.

"The people of Chapman are warm, open and honest," said Engle, visiting his hometown for the first time since his mid-November trip to space. "I'm proud to be from here."

Mandel due early release

BALTIMORE (AP) — President Reagan will accept a Justice Department recommendation that former Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel be released five months early from federal prison where he is serving time for mail fraud and racketeering, the Baltimore Sun reported today.

The Reagan administration sources quoted by the Sun did not say when the president might inact executive clemency.

Larry Speakes, a deputy White House spokesman, confirmed the recommendation was under consideration, but declined to say when it might reach Reagan's desk.

The recommendation, forwarded to White House counsel Fred Fielding last week, calls for Mandel to be transferred next month from the federal prison at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. to a pre-release center here. Mandel has served nearly 19 months of his jail term and was scheduled for release in May.

The former governor, a Democrat, was one of six defendants convicted in a 1977 political corruption trial of mail fraud and racketeering and is the last of five behind bars.

Arnold M. Weiner, who represented Mandel in the case, said the Justice Department recommendation was the first response by the administration to the clemency plea he filed in August during the Carter administration.

Mandel in November petitioned a federal magistrate to let him go. The petition argued that the state Parole Commission used improper guidelines in determining the earliest date Mandel could be released.

The petition, under review, is similar to one presented by co-defendant Harry W. Rodgers III, who was ordered released last month by Pensacola, Fla. Magistrate Robert Crongeyer Jr.

Computer theft largest ever

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) — Some $2.7 million worth of computer chips stolen from a locked storage cage in a guarded building, may be headed for sale on the black market, police said Wednesday.

The 450,000 integrated circuit chips, enough to fill a small pickup truck, were stolen on Thanksgiving from Monolithic Memories Inc., which offered a $50,000 reward for information leading to conviction in the theft.

"I would say unequivocally that this is the largest theft ever reported by a manufacturer of semiconductor devices," said Santa Clara County Sheriff's Sgt. Chris D. Charvez.

Pat Moore, an investigator for the Sunnyvale Public Safety Department, speculated the case may involve "international traffic."

And the FBI was called in "because of the possibility that the chips might be transported across state lines or abroad," said Ray Gouldsberry, corporate communications officer.

The theft and transfer of electronics parts and technology to Communist bloc nations has been a persistent problem in this region, which has the largest concentration of computer technology in the nation and has been named "Silicon Valley," for the material used to make the tiny chips.

Last December, $120,000 worth of platinum discs used in the manufacture of semiconductors were stolen from MMI, a theft that was never solved.

Gouldsberry said the thief who took the latest batch of chips had to have been familiar with the product, which can be used for everything from military computers to video games.

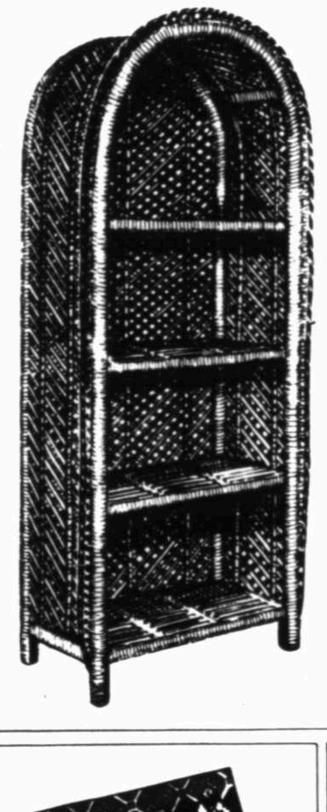

He added that there was no sign of forced entry.

Actor Robert Wagner holds the hand of his 7-year old daughter, Courtney, as he leaves Westwood Memorial Park Wednesday after funeral services for his wife, Natalie Wood. About 100 persons gathered for the afternoon services for the 43-year old actress, who apparently drowned Sunday in the waters off Santa Catalina Island.

Russian music played for Wood

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A Russian Orthodox priest offered a blessing and a balalaika sounded a melancholy refrain as Natalie Wood's flower-covered coffin was buried at a Hollywood cemetery.

THE DROWNED ACTRESS' husband, actor Robert Wagner, bent to kiss the coffin and then left the cemetery in a limousine before the burial.

Miss Wood, born Natasha Gurdin to Russian and French parents, fell into the water Sunday from the yacht that she and Wagner owned.

"She found not only a way to put life into her art, but art into her life," actor Roddy McDowall told about 100 mourners — including honorary pallbearers Sir Laurence Olivier, Fred Astaire, Gene Kelly, Gregory Peck and Frank Sinatra.

MCDOWALL SPOKE AFTER author Thomas Thompson and actress Hope Lange, who described the 43-year-old actress as "a pillar of strength for us all."

"Natalie, you put us to a very severe test today," she said. "It's difficult to feel joy and laughter when you're not there to share it."

Reporters were barred from the cemetery Wednesday but could see and hear some of the proceedings from nearby.

The wooden coffin, blanketed in white flowers, was carried to the gravesite at Westwood Memorial Park to the strains of "Midnight in Moscow" on a balalaika, a stringed instrument played in the Soviet Union.

WAGNER, 51, PICKED some of the flowers and gave them to friends and relatives, at one point bending over and kissing the casket.

Wagner then walked to a waiting limousine and got in with Miss Wood's two sobbing daughters — 7-year-old Courtney, her child with Wagner, and 11-year-old Natasha, from her previous marriage to producer Richard Gregson.

The coffin was buried shortly afterward at the cemetery, which also contains the crypt of actress Marilyn Monroe.

The Rev. Stephen Fitzgerald of the Russian Orthodox Church of North Hollywood said a blessing over the casket before it was lowered into the grave.

MISS WOOD'S BODY was found Sunday morning off Santa Catalina Island, a half-mile from the 60-foot yacht Splendour. The coroner's office said she had apparently slipped off the swim steps of the yacht while trying to board a rubber dinghy in the dark.

The night before, the Wagners and Christopher Walken — a guest aboard the yacht and Miss Wood's co-star in the unfinished film "Brainstorm" — had dined and drunk wine at a restaurant on the island.

The coroner's office said Miss Wood's blood alcohol content was .14 percent. A .10 percent level is sufficient for a drunken driving arrest in California.

A WOMAN WHO SAID she was aboard a boat anchored 300 feet from the yacht told the Los Angeles Times in a story published today that she heard cries for help at about midnight Saturday, but also heard the voices of other people who she thought could provide help. Marilyn Wayne of Los Angeles, described in the story as a commodities broker, said she decided not to do anything about the cries.

Miss Wood's will was expected to be filed for probate in Los Angeles Superior Court. A news release from the public relations firm Rogers & Cowan said Wagner is sole executor and trustee of the estate.

Wagner, who married Miss Wood in 1957, divorced her in 1965 and then remarried her in 1972, has been under a doctor's care since her death.

"I THINK IT WILL take a little time before it hits him," said Daily Variety columnist Army Archerd, a family friend. "It's like he thinks someone made a horrible mistake and (Miss Wood) will just come walking in the door anytime."

Miss Wood — who earned Academy Award nominations for the films "Rebel Without a Cause," "Splendor in the Grass" and "Love With a Proper Stranger," — planned to make her stage debut February in "Anastasia" at the Los Angeles Civic Theater and then join Wagner on their annual trip to Europe.

Woman hears cry for help

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman who was aboard a boat anchored 300 feet from the yacht of Robert Wagner and Natalie Wood said she heard a woman calling for help the night the actress drowned near Catalina Island, it was reported today.

However, Marilyn Wayne, a commodities broker from Los Angeles, told the Los Angeles Times that she decided it was best not to interfere with what she thought was a party aboard the other boat.

"My friend woke me up on our boat around 11:45 (Saturday night) and said, 'Do you hear a woman calling for help?'" she told The Times.

She listened through the porthole and heard someone saying, "Help me, somebody help me," the newspaper said.

She said she also heard several people call out, "We're coming to get you." The cries stopped around 12:10 a.m. Sunday, she added.

Miss Wood was discovered missing from the yacht, the Splendour, by her husband "sometime after midnight," according to a Sheriff's Department account. Her body was found shortly after dawn in a cove off the island.

The coroner's office said Miss Wood, who was sligtly intoxicated, apparently slipped away from her husband and actor Christopher Walken, who was also aboard, and tried to get into a boat. Wagner's lawyer said the actor had later noticed her missing and went to search for her.

A coroner's autopsy found she drowned accidentally after hitting her head, probably while attempting to get into the dinghy, which also was found near the island the next morning.

Holden leaves Powers $250,000

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor William Holden left the bulk of his multimillion-dollar estate to his family, but $250,000 went to actress Stefanie Powers, a longtime companion.

Miss Powers had had a longstanding romance with the veteran actor, but that had cooled after she joined the television series "Hart to Hart" with Robert Wagner.

"A TV series is legalized slavery for the stars," Holden once said. "I just don't get to see her much when she is working."

In his will, filed Wednesday in Superior Court, Holden also left $50,000 to ex-girlfriend Capucine Lefebre, the Swiss-born actress, and a like amount to another friend, Patricia Morgan Stauffer, former wife of Acapulco hotel owner Teddy Stauffer.

Holden left the bulk of his estate to his family — his mother, Mary Beedle; sister Audria; two sons, Scott Porter and Peter Westfield; niece Leslie Kim (Beedle) Hennessy; and his former wife, Ardis Holden, and her daughter by a previous marriage, Virginia Baylor.

He left his gun collection to his two sons and his art collections to the Desert Museum in Palm Springs, Calif. His share of proceeds from one of his movies, "Bridge on the River Kwai," will go to the Motion Picture and Television Relief Fund.

Holden willed his African wild game ranch and preserve to a wildlife preservation society.

Miss Powers, who was on location when Holden's body was discovered Nov. 16 where he had fallen in his oceanfront Santa Monica apartment, said the actor's death would leave an "unfillable void" in her life. Holden and Miss Powers had traveled widely together, including to Africa and New Guinea.

She suffered another tragic loss this week when Wagner's wife, actress Natalie Wood, drowned off Catalina Island southwest of Los Angeles.

This used car was a real bargain

WHITE BEAR LAKE, Minn. (AP) — A man with his two small children in tow was walking away in the cold from Randy Lee's dealership when Lee called them back and sold them a used car for $1.

Lee said he acted on impulse when he saw Craig Bartlett "walking down the street with his kids wrapped up in those blankets ..."

Bartlett and children Michele, 5, and Matthew, 2, were on their way to check out a $100 used car when their aging Chevy conked out in the freezing cold two miles from the dealership.

He wrapped the children in blankets and they trudged on, coming eventually to Lee's place. Bartlett asked them if they too might have a car for sale for $100. The salesman said no.

"I thought he was going out to get into his car," Lee, owner of White Bear Lincoln-Mercury, explained Wednesday. "But then we saw him walk out the front gate, carrying the kids. So I sent the salesman out there. I told him to find a car for them."

Salesman Roger Halford showed Bartlett a nearly rust-free, 1973 Ford Pinto and Bartlett offered $100. The salesman asked Lee if the price was OK, and Lee said he told the salesman, "No, give him the car."

Halford brought the paperwork to Bartlett, asking for a dollar to make it a legal sale and not a gift, and $5.50 for the title transfer.

Bartlett, 30, said he was astounded at the bargain given him Saturday. Little Michele couldn't believe it, either. "A dollar?" she asked.

Bartlett manages an apartment complex in Richfield and his wife is a clerk.

Lee said the small white car had not been on the lot long enough to have a price tag, but estimated he could have gotten $600 for it.

"The guy needed a car. He didn't have any money. I didn't think anything of it at the time," Lee said. But Bartlett was so happy he called the Minneapolis Star to tell the story.

Lee, 33, said it was the first car he has given away in the four years he has owned the dealership and added, with a grin, that he has no plans to give away any more.

Engineers leave construction site in time

HOUSTON (AP) — Only a caretaker crew remains at the unfinished South Texas Nuclear Project now that Brown & Root Inc., which withdrew as contractor after being fired as design engineer, has met a deadline for leaving the construction site.

THE FIRM ended six years of construction work Tuesday at the troubled plant, meeting a Dec. 1 deadline set by Houston Lighting & Power. The utility is the controlling member of a four-utility partnership building the project.

Brown & Root spokesman Clark Councill said the work force at the Bay City plant has been reduced from 2,200 to 740 employees. A caretaker crew of about 650 will remain at the site to perform maintenance and security duties until a new contractor takes over, he said.

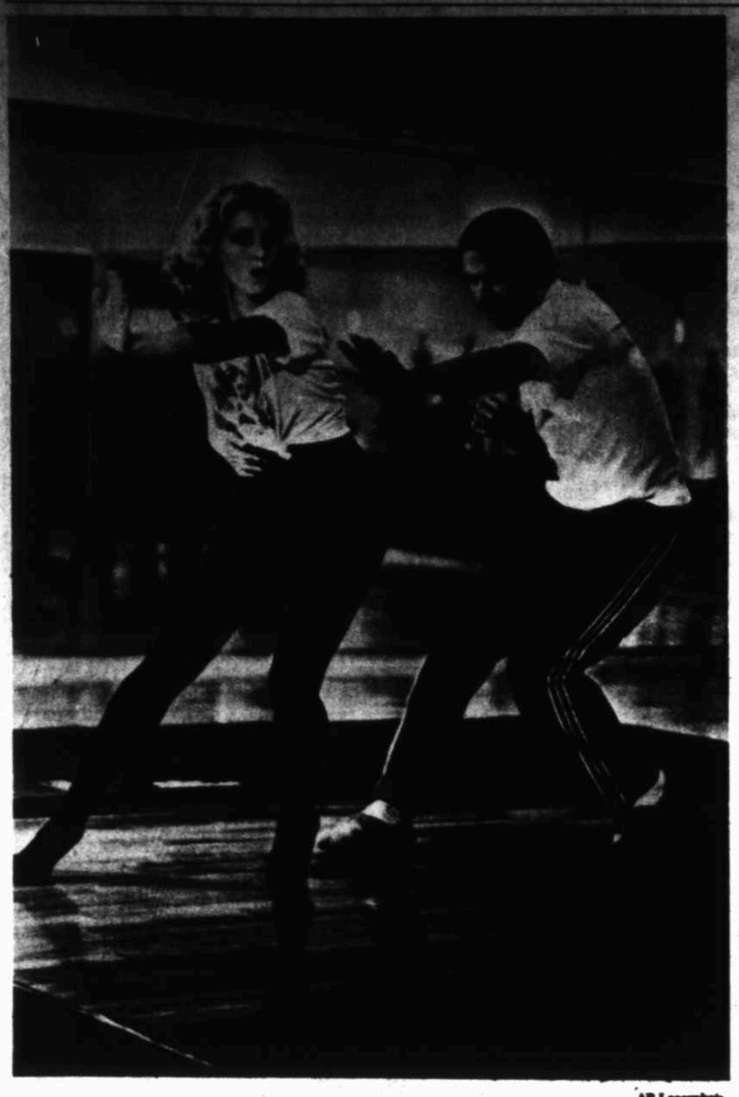

HL&P OFFICIALS have told the Nuclear Regulatory Commission they hope to select a new contractor by Jan. 1, but say it will be about six months before construction resumes.

Brown & Root began construction work at the plant in 1975, with the first reactor targeted to go on line in 1980. However, repeated delays have pushed the date back to 1986, while the anticipated price tag of between $4.4 billion and $4.8 billion is nearly five times original predictions.

Tobacco company filters out

By JACK SEARLES
Hearst Feature Service

In much of Central America, the top-selling cigarette is Delta. In Scandinavia, it's Prince.

Go to Brazil, and you'll find people puffing Hollywoods, Ministers, Continentals and Arizonas. Other leading brands you'll encounter in your travels are Sportsman (in Kenya), Scissors (India), Commodore (Indonesia), Star (Bangaladesh), Player's (Canada) and State Express 555 (Great Britain).

Almost everywhere, you'll find Kool, the world's leading menthol brand. Lucky Strike and Pall Mall have fans in both hemispheres, too.

These and more than 280 other cigarette brands have one thing in common — they're all produced by the same company — BAT (for British-American Tobacco) Industries Ltd. of London.

BAT's finance director, Brian P. Garraway, says his company is the largest cigarette maker in the Free World, and the third largest industrial concern in the United Kingdom.

In the U. S., BAT's Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. subsidiary ranks third in its field. B&W makes Kool, Viceroy, Raleigh, Belair and Barclay, and has overseas rights to distribute Lucky Strike and Pall Mall.

Using the tremendous cash flow from its worldwide tobacco business, BAT has been diversifying. "But that doesn't mean we have any intention of getting out of tobacco," Garraway declares, lighting up a smoke himself.

What do you do when you have revenues of more than $114 billion a year and the bulk of your assets are in the relatively slow-growth tobacco industry?

In BAT's case, the decision was to move boldly into other fields. The first foray was into cosmetics (Yardley is probably the company's best-known acquisition in this field), which now accounts for $300 million in sales.

In the early 1970s, BAT started plunging into retailing, paper, packaging and printing. Of these, the emphasis is on retailing — mainly in the U. S.

Chances are you've never heard of BATUS Inc., BAT's Louisville-based American subsidiary. But, with annual sales of $4.161 billion, it would, if it were on its own, be the 91st or 92nd largest U. S. industrial conern.

"The big step for BATUS came in 1972, when we bought Gimbel-Saks Retailing Corp. for $200 million," Garraway recalls.

Of the two, Saks Fifth Avenue, a nationwide chain of what Garraway calls fashion specialty stores, has shown the more dramatic growth. The chain now has 32 stores.

Gimbels, which opened its first department store in Milwaukee in 1887 (it's still Milwaukee's leading department store chain), has 39 stores concentrated in New York, Milwaukee, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Savings and loan holdup bombed out by wine bottle

HOUSTON (AP) — A 75-year-old man walked into a downtown savings and loan office Wednesday threatening to "blow us all to hell" with a bomb that turned out to be a wine bottle.

Police said they took the incident seriously and planned to file charges because they believe the man has a history of at least 30 criminal charges.

The man, wearing tattered overalls, approached the manager of the savings and loan and demanded $10,000 in cash about 3 p.m., police said.

"I have a bomb in the bag," he said. "I'm not bluffing. I'll blow us all to hell. I'm a desperate man."

Office manager Gary Peurifoy said he was surprised.

"I figured he might just be another drunk," Peurifoy said. "But I had to take him halfway seriously because you never know."

Peurifoy said he pressed a silent alarm. Moments later, police arrived and yanked the bag away from the man. Officers said the sack contained only a wine bottle.

Man who fired into church judged competent for trial

RUSK, Texas (AP) — A man accused of killing five people with a volley of gunfire fired into a sanctuary crowded with Sunday worshippers last year has been found mentally competent to stand trial by an evaluation team at a state mental hospital, authorities said Wednesday.

Alvin Lee King III will be transfered under heavy security in the next few days from the Rusk State Hospital to the county jail in Daingerfield, Morris County Sheriff Joe Skipper said Wednesday.

King has been undergoing psychiatric testing at the state hospital since he recovered from a self-inflicted gunshot wound suffered during the June 22, 1980, attack at the First Baptist Church of Daingerfield.

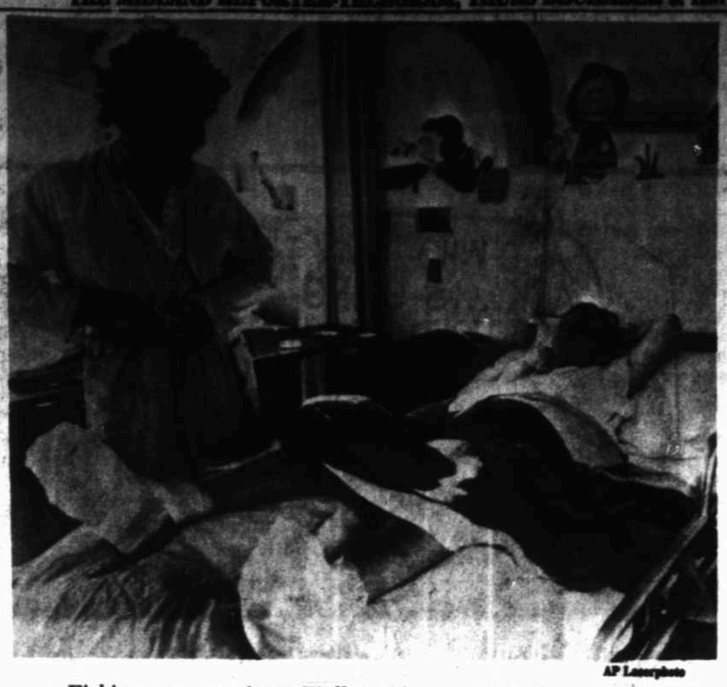

King's defense attorney, Percy Foreman of Houston, has 14 days to object to the evaluation, said State District Judge B.D. Moye. If Foreman objects, a competency hearing would be held. If there is no objection, Moye can set a trial date.

The determination by the evaluation team does not rule out a defense based on a plea of insanity at the time of the crime.

Skipper declined to comment about the evaluation except to say he received a copy of a letter Monday that the team sent Moye stating that King was found mentally competent to stand trial.

Five persons died and 10 others were wounded in the Sunday morning attack by a man armed with several rifles and wearing a flak jacket.

Authorities have identified King as the man who burst into the church, shouted, "This is war," and opened fire on the stunned congregation.

Fishing crew survivors Wallace Thomas of St. Augustine, Fla., left, and Robert Kidd of Rhode Island share a smile after being rescued from the frigid Gulf of Alaska. They were among 12 crew members who abandoned the vessel Saint Patrick when a huge wave disabled the boat in heavy seas. Thomas and Kidd spent an estimated 24 hours in 44-degree water before washing ashore on Afognak Island, north of Kodiak. Kidd's feet were injured by the cold and from walking on the baech without shoes.

Free hot chocolate will be provided by the Midland Jaycees. And to keep the audience warm, the city is preparing two large fire pits. Free pony rides will be available for the children.

Woman gives birth to twins aboard Coast Guard ferry

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A woman gave birth to twins Wednesday night aboard a ferry with the aid of two merchant seamen who were talked through the ordeal by doctors over Coast Guard radio.

The two sailors were waiting for the ferry, which crosses the entrance to the Houston Ship Channel between Galveston Island and the Bolivar Peninsula, when they heard the woman in the car behind them scream for help. They got her aboard the state-operated ferry and crewmen contacted the Galveston Coast Guard Station, said Petty Officer John Deck.

Deck said he called the local John Sealy Hospital and relayed instructions from doctors to the two sailors.

Addressing the need

Midland has a crying need for housing — all kinds of housing. But one of the most critical areas here is the lack of affordable, basic, no-frills housing. The kind working men and women need.

As Midland's demand for workers changes, that particular aspect of the housing market will become more critical. Without the required housing, Midland's growth will be impaired.

A few months back we editorially cited the need for a committee to study and address the lack of emergency temporary housing for the hundreds of workers Midland's growth is bringing and will bring to the Tall City. Since that time, the committee has formed and is actively pursuing the emergency housing segment of the market.

Of course we realize such an effort understandably could only fill the needs of a small portion of the population. More projects would be needed, probably from the private sector, to address the overall problem.

Earlier this week a Midland firm, the John Salisbury Company, unveiled an imaginative plan for a complex that will help provide temporary housing for working men and women relocating to Midland. Complexes to be built in both Midland and Odessa will bring an additional 300 rooms to workers in the two cities at a relatively low cost.

The "Texas Bunkhouse" will be a dormitory-style project designed to provide basic shelter for arriving workers until they can locate and obtain more permanent accommodations. The project was borne out of Salisbury's own need to provide affordable accommodations for his own workers, yet it will undoubtedly meet the needs of other businesses in the Midland and Odessa housing markets.

This project will not address all of the housing needed in the two rapidly growing cities. But it will address a part of that need. And that is something residents of the two cities can be pleased about.

With more of this kind of attention to the need for temporary housing here, perhaps growth of the two cities will not be impaired.

Just a little news

The story with the biggest headline isn't necessarily the one that makes the most lasting impact on our lives. A case in point is a modest news item about James D. Worstell's doctoral thesis at the University of Missouri.

A doctoral thesis normally winds up among the Dead Sea scrolls of academe, once it has qualified some scholar to append Ph.D. to his name. Worstell's may fare better.

By cross-breeding two strains of wheat, he has produced one that is double-rich in protein — 26.5 percent compared to 13 percent for varieties commonly grown in the Midwest.

The ramifications could be enormous. When we speak of the world's undernourished people, we are usually talking about protein deficiency, which not only weakens its victims physically but also reduces their mental capacity, so that they can't even think hard about their problems.

A protein-rich wheat would go a long way toward changing that.

As you might expect, there are still bugs. Worstell's wheat is too tender to harvest by standard methods. But perhaps some other Ph.D. candidate will get to work on that, hardening the wheat or gentling the harvest, thereby changing the world for the better without making big headlines.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Dec. 3, the 337th day of 1981. There are 28 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 3, 1967, surgeons at South Africa's Cape Town Hospital reported a successful human heart transplant, said to be first of its kind.

On this date:

In 1944, U.S. forces crossed the Saar River in Germany during World War II.

In 1961, the United States deployed a platoon of troops along the border between East and West Berlin as East Germany began strengthening the Berlin Wall.

In 1962, London was blanketed by one of its worst fogs in years, and scores of people died of sulfur dioxide poisoning before the fog lifted four days later.

And in 1975, communists took control of Laos and declared an end to its 600-year-old monarchy.

Ten years ago: India declared a state of emergency during the war with Pakistan over Kashmir.

Five years ago: President-elect Jimmy Carter selected Cyrus Vance for Secretary of State and Bert Lance for Budget Director. Neither Vance nor Lance remained in office for Carter's full term.

Thought for today: The cruelest lies are often told in silence. — Robert Louis Stevenson, Scottish-born writer (1850-1894).

Deaver questions transcend Allen's mistake

WASHINGTON — Worrisome implications raised by Richard V. Allen's difficulties are heightened by the fact that Michael K. Deaver, President Reagan's powerful confidant also has been receiving regular cash payments from publicist-lobbyist Peter Hannaford.

Deaver's financial disclosure statement, submitted when he became White House deputy chief of staff, shows a maximum of $50,000 "in payments to be received in future months" for sale to ex-partner Hannaford of his 40 percent interest in their "public relations" firm. Allen, the president's national security assistant, is being paid $69,000 over three years by Hannaford for the purchase of Allen's Potomac International Corp.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

What makes these arrangements disturbing, particularly to senior administration officials, is the appearance of wrongdoing even if none exists. For example, when a controversial synthetic fuels project enjoyed robust support in the White House after a strong lobbying effort by Hannaford, opponents inside the administration blamed the Deaver connection.

The sense of horrified disbelief among prominent Republicans about Allen's payment arrangement will intensify when they learn of similar payments to Deaver. The overriding belief in Washington is that a federal official must dispose of all interests in private business before taking office, with no deferred payment permitted.

Suspicions of impropriety within the Reagan administration, bordering on conflict-of-interest, preceded the present public soul-searching by months. They centered around frantic efforts by the Tosco Oil Corp. for a $1.1 billion loan guarantee for synthetic fuels development, one of several such projects furiously opposed by budget director David Stockman.

Tosco lined up some of Washington's most formidable lobbying talent to fight Stockman, but the feeling at the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) was that the company spent its wisest money in hiring Pete Hannaford. OMB officials grumbled that a Hannaford "fact sheet" defending the Tosco project was read back to them more or less verbatim by senior White House aides defending the project.

At that time, administration officials expressed surprise to us that Deaver, seldom overtly concerned with policy questions, was present at internal government meetings concerning synthetic fuels questions — including Tosco's loan guarantee. Tosco won and Stockman lost, but not to the surprise of the loan's critics. They had correctly perceived a mindset at the White House.

Such interferences may be unfair to Mike Deaver, a discreet and orderly man whose desire to protect the president has always been preeminent. Indeed, when one major corporation officer sought advice from Deaver on whether to hire Hannaford as a lobbyist, Deaver advised him to go elsewhere.

Nevertheless, Deaver's $50,000 payment is bound to raise suspicions, even though he made not the slightest effort at concealment. His disclosure statement filed Feb. 19 states: "Respondent has disposed of his 40 percent in Deaver and Hannaford, Inc. The transaction was effective in January 1981. Payments to be received in future months will not exceed $50,000. Such payments are essentially for buy out of respondent's interest and do not require the rendering of current service."

Although that disclosure statement says his old firm's work was "in the public relations area," the Hannaford Co., Inc., now is essentially a lobbying organization. It is registered lobbyist for Tosco, Northwest Alaska Pipeline Co., Century 21, Merrill Lynch and TWA, among others, and is registered foreign agent for Taiwan and Guatemala.

Deaver's carefully-typed disclosure statement, obviously written by a lawyer, contrasts with Allen's handprinted statement disclosing sale of his consulting firm, Potomac International Corp. (incorrectly dated January 1978, instead of 1981) to Hannaford. Allen's statement contains no suggestion of future payments from Hannaford; nor does it reveal the purchase price (since given by him as $160,000).

Purchase of such companies do not involve the sale of plant and equipment, manufacturing techniques or large organizations, but mainly client lists. That raises the inevitable question: Did Allen's four clients stay with Potomac International after the sale and did Hannaford's firm attract new business because of a tacit understanding that the clients would have access to Allen and Deaver in the White House, or perhaps that the two aides would be back with these firms following White House service of, say, two years?

That question is unavoidable on its face as it becomes known that the president's deputy chief of staff and his national security assistant have been receiving fixed amounts from a lobbying firm. Had Hannaford financed the two deals last January with a bank loan, the ties with Allen and Deaver would have been cleanly severed. That would have spared the president festering suspicions about his White House that, however unfounded, far transcend Allen's forgotten $1,000 from a Japanese magazine and the gift of two wristwatches to his family.

GEORGE F. WILL

Pause to ponder Pearl Harbor reveals history's surprises

WASHINGTON — Flying over Nebraska in the summer of 1943, an Englishman was struck by the "normality — hundreds of miles of it and not a sight or sound to remind one that this was a country at war." Then his lunch tray arrived, and inscribed on the pat of butter was an injunction: "REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR."

George F. Will

When Americans pause (if they do pause) to remember what happened 40 years ago, they should ponder the fact that less than two years after Pearl Harbor advertising arts were employed to remind Americans of the war happening elsewhere.

An American who wants to see a place where a foreign nation inflicted violence on American soil in this century of "total war" must travel 5,000 miles and five time-zones from his nation's capital, 2,000 miles from the western edge of the continent, to a state that was not a state when attacked. But what happened there initiated events as transforming to the nation as the events initiated 80 years earlier by an attack on another island military installation (Fort Sumter).

Forty years ago this nation was dragged into world history. It is arguable that the dragging happened earlier, on, say, Oct. 23, 1917, near Nancy, France, when an artillery piece of the First American Division fired the first American shot at Germans. But immediately after the armistice Americans spun a cocoon of complacency.

Unlike World War I, which had a clear beginning in the summer of 1914, the conflagration called World War II began in separate blazes. Arguably, it began in April 1932, when Mao Tse-tung, in the name of the Kiangsi Soviet, declared war on Japan. As early as 1932 the United States supported Chinese resistance to Japan. But as late as 1937 isolationism was so strong that Congress barely rejected an Indiana congressman's proposed constitutional amendment that would have made any declaration of war subject to a national referendum.

Five years after Pearl Harbor, Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, the Michigan Republican who helped wean his party from isolationism, said the attack "drove most of us to the irresistible conclusion that world peace is indivisible. We learned that the oceans are no longer moats around our ramparts. We learned that mass destruction is a progressive science which defies both time and space...." The era of (in Walter Lippmann's phrase) "effortless security" was over. That "progressive science" meant the end of security, as traditionally understood, forever. And we now must hope that in an age of constant regional conflicts, peace can be divisible.

Four days after Pearl Harbor, Hitler declared war on the United States and, immediately, photographs of FDR replaced those of Mussolini in many store windows on Mulberry Street in New York. The attack punctuated a dreary dozen years. An 18-year-old in 1941 had been six when the stock market collapsed. Suddenly 18-year-olds had jobs, some of them dangerous jobs.

By the Depression, Americans were (in Daniel Boorstin's words) "cheated of our uniqueness." Pearl Harbor completed the process of ending the belief in "American exceptionalism." Americans were not after all guaranteed by their physical setting either easy prosperity or easy security. Suddenly, they had to take soldiering seriously.

D.W. Brogan, the historian, wrote that until Pearl Harbor the regular soldier, the "30-year-men" of James Jones' novel "From Here to Eternity," were more isolated from the national life than were the British soldiers Kipling knew in Lahore. As Brogan also wrote about America, "No nation more cheerfully turns its swords into plowshares...(and) no nation plowshares into swords with such speed or has so many plows to turn. The Army that was using wooden model weapons in maneuvers in 1940 and 1941 was a great military power by the end of 1942...."

Japan's hope that Pearl Harbor would shatter American morale was one of history's huge miscalculations. But events also refuted the allies' assumption that saturation bombing of civilians would shatter enemy morale. Indeed, compared with the indiscriminate forms of violence eventually used by both sides in both theaters of war, that first Japanese attack seems almost gallant and archaic: military power used against military targets.

Japan made its attack the way it subsequently turned to making consumer goods: brilliantly. Then they ran off a string of victories more brilliant than Hitler's generals gave him.

Forty years on, the great warrior nation is a Jewish state that did not exist in 1941, and the great commercial nation is Japan. History, although frequently horrible, is endlessly surprising.

BIBLE VERSE

We must obey God rather than men.
Acts 5:29

ART BUCHWALD

'Essential' bureaucrats really are!

November 23rd will go down in Washington bureaucratic history as Black Monday. It was the day that President Reagan ordered the government establishment to close down because there was no money to pay them. The President decreed that only those people essential to running the government be kept in place.

Art Buchwald

"Essential" was the key word that hit this town like a thunderbolt. With the presidential edict every government employee's essentiality was put in doubt.

The order of the day was for all non-essential employees to clean out their desks and go home. I stopped in to see Norman McKinney, a first-class bureaucrat, who obviously was very angry that he wasn't important enough to be kept on. "Teapot has always had it in for me," he said, as he kept opening and closing drawers in his desk. "He got in at six o'clock this morning and volunteered to serve on the 'Ad Hoc Non-Essential Employees Commission,' the only committee in the department that was declared 'essential.'"

He pulled out a pair of storm boots and a cable from one of his drawers. "I was wondering where this was?"

"What is it?"

"It's a coded cable from Nikita Khrushchev saying he wanted to defect when he came to the United Nations. He said when he took his shoe off and started banging the podium, it was his signal for us to surround him and spirit him away."

"That cable's been in your drawer all this time?"

"I knew I put it somewhere. No one in the department would take my word I got it so they let Khrushchev go back home."

McKinney opened another drawer and took out a large bottle of Alka Seltzer and a yellow piece of paper. He studied it for a moment and then said, "I'll be darned."

"What is it?" I asked.

"It's a $500 million check to save the New York Central Railroad. I guess I forgot to mail it. Now I remember! The Treasury sent it over at five o'clock and I stuck it in my drawer, and then the next day I had the flu, and when I got back to work it slipped my mind."

"That could happen to anybody."

McKinney kept digging in the drawer. He pulled out an old copy of "Look" magazine, a paperback copy of "Gone With the Wind," and a sheaf of papers which he studied carefully.

"Hmmmnn," he said, "I wonder how this got in here."

"What is it?"

"It's an application for building the Diablo Canyon Nuclear Plant on an earthquake fault. I was supposed to pass it on to the Atomic Energy Commission, recommending they turn it down."

"Maybe it's not too late," I suggested.

"It's dated July 17, 1970. If I send in my recommendation now, it will only give Teapot ammunition that I'm not essential."

"Have you gone through the top drawer yet?"

"I'm getting to it now." He took out three golf balls, a pair of ear muffs, an electric razor, a bow tie, a bus transfer and a set of blueprints."

"What do you know? I've been looking for this for years," he said.

"What is it?"

"I can't remember any more. It's either an urban renewal plan for the South Bronx, or a diagram of the Berlin Wall which we stole from an East German engineer."

"It's lucky President Reagan caused this crisis or you would have never cleaned out your drawers. Reach back, there might be something stuck in the cracks."

McKinney did and came out with a letter. He whistled.

"Listen. This is a letter from President Nixon ordering me to immediately destroy all the tapes in the White House basement closet."

"And you stuffed it in your drawer?"

He said angrily. "If I had done it right at that moment I would have missed my car pool."

Court: Clements must appear

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A federal appeals court has ruled that Gov. Bill Clements must show up to answer questions from plaintiffs in a federal suit challenging the congressional redistricting map drawn by the 1981 Legislature.

HOWEVER, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, in a Wednesday ruling, made no decision as to whether Clements can refuse to answer specific questions.

Plaintiffs in the suit contend that Clements played a major role in redistricting and they are entitled to ask him about his part in the process. Testimony in the case ended Wednesday.

The three-judge panel hearing the case has ordered Clements to give the deposition by Friday. The governor has resisted, and made the unsuccessful appeal to the New Orleans court.

THE CIRCUIT court turned down Clements' request to block the lower court order. However, the New Orleans judges said, "We express no opinion as to the extent or applicability of any privilege the governor may assert" against answering particular questions.

Assistant Attorney General Rick Gray, representing the state in the redistricting suit, said the appeals court would rule on Clements' claims of privilege after the deposition is taken.

GRAY ALSO said Clements could be held in contempt of court if he refuses to give the deposition.

Clements' lawyers huddled late Wednesday to discuss the ruling. Earlier in the day, before the order was issued, Clements told reporters he is ready to take the matter to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Although his motions in the case have asserted he has executive privilege protection against answering questions about his role in legislative matters, Clements said Wednesday it's mostly a matter of time. "AS CHIEF executive officer of Texas, the governor is named in these suits literally by the hundreds, if not the thousands," said Clements.

Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau receives a round of applause from fellow caucus members in the Commons Wednesday after the House voted in favor of his constitutional package.

Trudeau's constitution passed

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

OTTAWA (AP) — The House of Commons has approved the framework for a new Canadian constitution, setting the stage for the end of the last colonial tie between Britain and Canada by spring.

THE 246-24 vote in Parliament's lower house Wednesday was a personal triumph for Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau. But it raised new prospects of a showdown with the Quebec separatists who denounce the new constitution as a threat to the local powers of their French-speaking province in the English-dominated nation.

Quebec's secessionist premier, Rene Levesque, ordered provincial flags flown at half-staff in protest. His Parti Quebecois meets this weekend in Montreal to plan strategy, possibly for a renewed independence campaign. His government, meanwhile, will appeal to the courts to squelch the constitution, but it is given little chance of success.

Quebec's position "is an important sad note to an otherwise joyful occasion for us as Canadians," Edward Broadbent, leader of the socialist New Democrats, the No. 3 party, told reporters.

THE RESOLUTION adopted by the Commons was the product of a compromise between Trudeau and the premiers of the nine English-speaking provinces. It asks the British Parliament to end an historical anachronism and hand over full legal responsibility for the Canadian constitution, the British North America Act of 1867, after making some changes in it.

The resolution is expected to win approval easily within a week in the largely powerless Canadian Senate and to be approved by the British Parliament by February.

Before the climactic vote, members of Trudeau's Liberal Party gave the 62-year-old prime minister a minute-long standing ovation. Most of them wore red carnations in their lapels, emulating the red boutonniere he always sports.

AFTER THE VOTE, Liberal, Conservative and New Democratic members and the packed galleries stood and thundered out "O Canada," the national anthem.

Under the revised constitution, the vast country of 24 million people will continue to be a decentralized federation.

The constitution for the first time will include a Charter of Rights and Freedoms which Trudeau hailed as the best bill of rights in the world. It includes affirmations of freedom of conscience, opinion, press and association; guarantees against discrimination, including an ERA-like sexual-equality provision, and a stipulation that the police must inform a suspect of his right to counsel.

But in a bow to the provinces' historic autonomy, provincial legislatures are allowed to pass laws overriding most of these guarantees.

IN FINAL NEGOTIATIONS with the provincial premiers last month, Trudeau made a similar concession on the issue of future amendments.

Constitutional amendments will require approval by the federal Parliament and the legislatures of seven provinces with 50 percent of the population. But dissenting provinces will be able to "opt out" — not have amendments apply in them.

These concessions did not satisfy Levesque. He objects particularly to one of the bill-of-rights provisions that can't be overridden. It guarantees that the English-speaking minority in Quebec and French minorities elsewhere in Canada can educate their children in their mother tongues. This would nullify a four-year-old Quebec law that discourages English-language education in the province.

LEVESQUE ALSO OBJECTS to another provision forbidding most provincial laws that discriminate against workers who come into a province from elsewhere in Canada.

The 114-year-old Canadian constitution is an act of the British Parliament that federated the colonial provinces. It has remained under that parliament's control, with the British enacting amendments at Canada's request, because the federal and provincial governments have never before been able to agree on a procedure for amending it.

The upsurge in separatist feeling in Quebec in the late 1970s led Trudeau to launch a new effort to end the historic oddity and cut Canada's last colonial link to Britain. His pledge for "renewed federalism" was given much of the credit for the defeat of the separatists in a referendum in Quebec in May 1980.

Aging conference opposes benefit cuts

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A resolution opposing any benefit cuts for Social Security recipients is among the recommendations in a White House Conference on Aging draft report that repudiates some Reagan administration policies on the elderly and embraces other.

Nearly 2,300 delegates were voting today on the conference report, the sum of recommendations by 14 committees.

But lingering dissatisfication with the convention rules, which will allow only a vote on the report as a whole, prompted some discussion of a possible protest during the conference's final hours.

In a special appeal to the White House, the Leadership Conference Council of Aging Organizations asked that conference rules be changed to permit separate votes on individual committee recommendations. But there appeared little likelihood that the request would be honored.

"I am not at all sure there is any legal way of changing the rules even if that were advisable," said the conference chairman, Constance Armitage of Inman, S.C.

"I imagine there'll be some divergence of opinion on the floor," she said. "But I do not believe the delegates who worked so hard to make recommendations...to be of help to a graying America will reject the work of their colleagues."

The Committee on Economic Well-Being approved a compromise resolution Wednesday that strongly recommends no reduction in benefits for future Social Security recipients.

While President Reagan assured the delegates Tuesday that he would not cut Social Security for those "dependent on that program," he has never promised to keep all benefits intact for workers now paying into the program.

He proposed last May to remedy Social Security deficits by cutting early retirement, disability and other benefits for future beneficiaries by almost 23 percent. He withdrew that plan in September and called for a bipartisan task force to study the problems.

Passage of the resolution was a strategic victory for Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., the 81-year-old chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging, honorary conference chairman and leader of the dissidents on Social Security.

"We have a resolution we can live with and I can take back to Congress and we can use when it gets to the meeting of the task force on what we're going to do about Social Security," Pepper declared after three hours of closed-door negotiations.

Some angry sentiment was revived later in the day when the same committee voted 60-55 "to commend Congress and the administration for its support of Social Security and its efforts to control inflation, which is the heaviest tax on senior citizens."

With many pulling strings, Fransie meets Pinocchio

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — An 8-year-old South African boy made into an old man by a rare aging disease fulfilled the wish of his compressed lifetime and said hello to a storybook character who struggled to become a real boy.

After traveling three continents, wizened Fransie Geringer of Orkney, South Africa, met his idol Pinocchio at Disneyland on Wednesday.

Afterwards, the character, dressed in bright red shorts and sky-blue bow tie, carried Fransie in the amusement park, rode with him in a train and gave him a watch from his wrist. The shy child looked at the watch all day.

"Fransie said Pinocchio loves him very much. He's so proud. He loves Pinocchio very much," said the lad's 31-year-old mother, Magda.

"It was awfully nice of Pinocchio to give Fransie his watch. It looked like a new one," said Mickey Hays, 9, of Hallsville, Texas, who also suffers from the incurable disease, progeria. The disease ages its victims 10 times faster than normal, and most progeria victims die in their teens or earlier.

Mickey, talkative and effusive, met his favorite fantasy personality Mickey Mouse at the same time Wednesday.

The two boys met in Anaheim Sunday night. It was the first time either had met another progeria victim, and they became fast friends.

"Fransie is so happy all the people are not staring at him. He can go anywhere he wants to go without seeing them with their mouths hanging open," his father, Herman, 37, said of the sightseeing expedition at Disneyland.

"Everybody today had a tear in his eye — I don't care who it was. It was because of the happiness shown in those boys' faces," said William Sample, 45, a police officer who five years ago founded the Sunshine Foundation to grant wishes to terminally ill children.

The foundation, which works out of an office above a hardware store in Philadelphia, coordinated Fransie's trip to the United States via Europe and organized a week of activities for the two youngsters.

Fransie's visit was organized after an Associated Press article about his disease and his love of Pinocchio prompted donations from hundreds of Americans. Mickey read about Fransie and wanted to meet him so Texans rallied to send him to California at the same time.

About $26,000 was collected in Florida for Fransie's visit to Disneyland and Disney World, which is near Orlando, Fla.

The Geringers said it wouldn't cost that much to go to Disney World, so half the money will be put in a fund for other sick children.

Another progeria victim, 11-year-old Alicia Gowans of San Jose, arrived at Disneyland Wednesday hoping to meet Mickey and Fransie. But she became ill before the meeting could be arranged. Her scheduled meeting with Snow White had to be canceled.

Progeria victim, 26, wants to meet boys

By STEPHEN C. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

MILFORD, Conn. (AP) — Ignore the frail, dwarf body and age-distorted face. Twenty-six-year-old Meg Casey has no time for pity.

"I'm not a hypochondriac, the only person I see regularly is my dentist," says the artist, believed to be one of the oldest living victims of progeria, a rare aging disease.

The disease "has never held me back and I've never allowed it to hold me back. And I've never allowed anyone to think more or less of me strictly because they were impressed by my looks."

"I don't like pity, and I won't take it at all," Miss Casey said Wednesday. "I don't take abuse. I'm sure one thing you've noticed is I'm an opinionated spirit and I suppose that's going to get me through...I think so."

Progeria has been in the public spotlight since an Associated Press story reported the struggles of 8-year-old Fransie Geringer of South Africa. People across the country raised money to help Fransie and a 9-year-old Texas victim travel to Disneyland this week to meet their fairy-tale heroes.

Miss Casey hopes to meet the two little boys turned into old men by the same malady. She has never met anyone with the same illness.

"We are of a family — we all have the same characteristics. I can't promise them anything, but I think by going myself and seeing them in the flesh I can give them hope," Miss Casey said in a high-pitched voice characteristic of progeria. "No one has a guarantee of longevity. I don't have a specific message for them other than: 'I'm Meg and I'm 26. You may make it and you may not.'"

The illness causes baldness, stunts growth and often results in death by the teen-age years, but Miss Casey said she never has had trouble finding a place in society.

"I'm never surrounded by anything but normal people...all my friends are normal. I'm not sure what that phrase means, but they're physically normal people," she said. "And physically, a normal existence has been my way of life.... I never made it a point to dwell on my condition and I don't."

Dr. Margaret Seashore, director of the Genetics Clinic at Yale-New Haven Hospital, said if Miss Casey isn't the oldest living progeria victim, "she's certainly close to it.

"It's unusual for her to have lived as long as she has. She's a very plucky person, a young woman with enormous energy and drive.... She's been very lucky not to have developed a heart disease these people often have."

Miss Casey says she was born "looking pretty normal — a very healthy little bouncing girl." But when she was 18 months old, her parents noticed some changes. She was taken to Boston Children's Hospital where doctors diagnosed progeria.

"I was never told what I had or any or the fears or problems of dealing with this," Miss Casey said. "Until two years ago, I never asked what I had, whether there was one name for it. It never has intruded in my life.

DEAR ABBY

Woman balks at turning other cheek

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a very religious man. Pete (not his real name) is also possessed of a violent temper and has beaten me up several times. The first two times I took no legal action, although I did wind up in the hospital the second time. Pete cut my fingertips with a pair of scissors and hit me over the head with the telephone, causing me to have 22 stitches in my head as well as a concussion. I was in the hospital for two weeks, and when I came out he denied laying a hand on me. He said I threw myself down the stairs and he would like to see me prove I didn't!

After I filed for divorce, Pete begged me to see a marriage counselor with him, so I did. (A man.) When the counselor pointed out Pete's faults, Pete said, "Of course he'd stick up for you; he's a man and you're a woman!"

Wanting to be fair, I changed to a woman counselor, and when she said Pete was in the wrong, he said, "You women always stick together." (I can't win.)

He wants to try to make a go of our marriage, but I'm afraid he'll beat me up again if he gets a mind to. He says the Bible says I am supposed to forgive him 70 times 7, which is 490. I forgave him three times already. Does that mean I have 487 more times to go? I don't think I could live through it. Help me. - HAD IT IN ALTOONA, PA.

DEAR HAD IT: Pete is sick. "Forgive" him, but have nothing to do with him until he recovers. He's not only mentally deranged, he's dangerous. You need help, too. Call your family service association and inquire about assistance and counseling for the battered woman.

DEAR ABBY: When someone makes a donation to a charity in the name of a friend as a Christmas gift, who gets the tax deduction?

Don't pass this off so hastily. If A sends B a card saying that he has given $100 to The Little Sisters of the Poor in B's name, A has either made a gift to B, which is NOT tax-deductible (B being an individual, not a charity) or he has made no gift to B.

If A has made a gift to The Little Sisters of the Poor for B, then B should get the tax deduction. If A has made no gift to B, but rather a gift to some charity, why should he brag to B about it? I object to such "gifts." - J.C.K.

DEAR J.C.K.: The person who lays out the money for a tax-deductible gift gets the deduction, not the person in whose name the donation was made.

Read on for a letter from another reader who objects to the "gift-in-your-name" gift for yet another reason:

DEAR ABBY: I give to those causes in which I believe, and I do not want anyone to make a donation in MY name to any charity without my permission.

Example: If someone made a contribution to the Equal Rights Amendment in the name of Phyllis Schlafly, I'm sure she wouldn't appreciate it.

THE ART OF LIVING

An experiment in love

By JO COUDERT
(Special From Reader's Digest)

On a warm summer day, my dog discovered four newborn kittens abandoned in tall grass beside the road. When I returned carrying the tiny creatures in my hand, Mike said firmly, "No more animals." Poor Mike had already been saddled with my dog and three cats.

"I'll only keep them until they're old enough to be on their own," I promised. Mike looked dubious. "Word of honor," I assured him.

I made a warm nest by lining a basket with an old blanket. Then I went to buy toy nursing bottles.

"You can't raise kittens that young," the storekeeper told me. Maybe so, but I went home to try.

After several false starts the infants avidly drank their warmed milk from the bottles. Four times during the night, I crawled out of bed to feed them. The following morning, I congratulated myself that they were looking a little stronger.

But by afternoon, I realized that something was wrong.

The kittens' intake was fine but there was no outgo. Their little bellies were stretched tight as drums. I picked up one and began to rub its tummy in commiseration. Suddenly my hand was drenched. I tried it with another. The same result. From then on, the kittens thrived.

Several days later, Mike came home with word that his secretary had offered to adopt Peaches, my favorite. Perhaps to steel myself for her leaving, I began to pick her up less often.

Idly I wondered if the lack of special treatment would affect her personality. Suppose, on the other hand, I were to give one of the other kittens extra mothering. Would he grow up to be different from his siblings? I decided to experiment.

I chose the runt of the litter, the one Mike called Bat Cat because of his dull black fur and homely face. He was always on the bottom of the heap, the last to be picked up and the one to get the least attention. I gave him a new name - Boston. I would feed him as much as he wanted, then tuck him into my sweater so that he slept against my beating heart while I worked at my desk.

The effect on the kitten was immediate. His newly opened eyes studied my face with interest. He quickly learned his name and, when I called, he clambered over the blanket folds as fast as his unsteady little legs would carry him.

Now when he was in the sleeping heap of kittens, he no longer passively accepted the bottom spot but wriggled to the top. Was it that, sensing himself valued, Boston began to value himself?

He was the first of the kittens to discover he could purr, the first to wash himself, the first to climb out of the basket.

Even Boston's looks changed. His fur grew sleek and shiny. Though never beautiful, he became very alert and merry. There was only one drawback. In giving Boston so much attention, I had come to love him. And secretly I hoped that Mike would share my feelings.

While I worked around the house, Boston and I kept up a running commentary, and often I forgot that this grand companion of mine was a kitten. After coming into the kitchen and hearing us one evening, Mike remarked, "You're going to miss him when he goes."

I stared at him in dismay, but he looked steadily back. I saw from his expression that this was a test between us. Would I keep my promise or did I value a kitten more? "Yes," I answered. "I am going to miss him."

Soon after Peaches, Ginger and Striper went to new homes, Mike announced that the church fair was looking for kittens to sell. It seemed that these were to be my last days with Boston.

Mike called one day to remind me that the church needed a description of the kitten. "I've already typed it," I said and read aloud: "Boston has been raised with an unusual amount of loving attention. He is perfectly behaved, likes to ride in the car, loves all games and has a large vocabulary."

Mike was silent a moment. "You've made him sound like an exceptional cat," he said.

"He is," I answered and hung up.

When Mike came home, Boston went to the door to greet him, but I couldn't. Then Mike walked into the kitchen carrying him, now with a big red ribbon tied around his neck. Silently, Mike held out an envelope.

Inside was a Christmas card with a handwritten message:

"It's only November, but let's give ourselves a Christmas present." He handed Boston to me. "If you can be big enough to let him go," he said, "I can be big enough to let him stay."

One evening, when Boston was almost a year old, I went out to the back garden and found him crouched over a dead rabbit. He was round as a barrel and glassy-eyed from overeating. A few days later, he began to grow listless and his nose was hot. Frightened, I gathered him up and set out for the vet's. In the car I remembered the rabbit. Boston was too small to catch a healthy rabbit; perhaps it had already been dead.

He had a raging fever of 105 degrees and was severely dehydrated. The vet instructed me to get as much food and liquids into him as possible. When I got home and lifted my kitten out of the car he cried out. His spine arched and it was over - little Boston was dead.

Months later, when the ache of missing Boston had eased, I visited the other kittens, now grown. Peaches was sweet and bland. Ginger was sharp and unfriendly. Striper spent most of his time hiding under the bed. Only Boston had been unique. He taught us that when you give love freely, you get something quite extraordinary in return.

Old-time recipe for coffee cake

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

From Elizabeth David's book, "English Bread and Yeast Cookery" (Viking), one of our friends recently adapted a 17th-century recipe and urged us to try it. We did and are happy to pass her American version along to you. She calls it Raisin Spice Coffee Cake.

Mrs. David is England's best known food writer and an extraordinary researcher. Her book is a long treatise that is bound to interest culinary historians. For everyday cooks there are all kinds of recipes — from crumpets and muffins to dumplings and doughnuts.

The recipe that inspired our friend is from a chapter on "Regional and Festival Yeast Cakes and Fruit Breads." Mrs. David notes some of these cakes and breads were iced. Because of this, our friend composed an Orange Spice Butter to serve with toasted slices of her Raisin Spice Coffee Cake. In our opinion, the Orange Spice Butter is a great addition.

RAISIN SPICE COFFEE CAKE

2 cups milk
½ cup heavy cream
1 package dry yeast
8 to 8½ cups all-purpose flour
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
3 large eggs
1½ teaspoons ground cinnamon
1½ teaspoons ground cloves
1½ teaspoons ground nutmeg
1-3rd cup medium sherry
2 cups raisins
1¼ cups finely ground (but not paste-like) blanched almonds mixed with 1½ tablespoons orange juice
1 cup butter, at room temperature
Orange Spice Butter, recipe follows

In a small saucepan heat the milk and cream until warm (105 to 115 degrees); off heat, sprinkle with the yeast; stir vigorously until dissolved.

In a large mixing bowl stir together 6¾ cups of the flour, the sugar and salt. With a spoon stir in the yeast mixture and the eggs until blended — dough will be soft and sticky. Cover and let rise in a warm place (about 80 degrees) until doubled — about 1½ hours.

In a small bowl stir together the cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and sherry; stir in the raisins. Stir into the dough with the almond mixture and the butter. On a well-floured surface, adding as much of the remaining flour as necessary to keep dough from sticking, knead until smooth — 6 to 8 minutes.

Turn into two well-greased 9-cup fluted tube pans (each 9 by 3½ inches). Cover and let rise as previously until doubled — about 1½ hours.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until browned and a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 40 to 50 minutes. Turn out on a wire rack; if bottom is paler than you like, turn coffee cake back into pan, bottom side up, and continue to bake until golden brown — 5 to 10 minutes longer. Turn out on wire rack to cool completely. Serve sliced and toasted with Orange Spice Butter.

Makes two 9-inch coffee cakes.

Orange Spice Butter: In a small bowl thoroughly beat together 1 cup butter (at room temperature) with ¼ cup firmly packed light brown sugar, 2 tablespoons grated orange rind and 1 teaspoon nutmeg; gradually beat in 2 tablespoons dark rum.

Cultivation of mushrooms is complex job

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

On a recent motor trip through Pennsylvania I stopped off at a mushroom "farm" and learned how they cultivate the delectable fungi. It's an involved process calling for carefully sterilized organic compost beds, since mushrooms can fall prey to a number of diseases.

I was ushered through a row of small, windowless buildings showing the development of the mushroom step-by-step. It's hard to believe such a bland delicacy could emerge from these dark chambers where the pungent smell of the compost beds is almost overpowering.

At one time mushrooms were virtually impossible to buy in the summer, since they need cool surroundings to grow. But now, with air conditioning, the fungi can be cultivated the year around.

As they became available in any season, the sale of mushrooms soared. In 1980, American growers produced 339 million pounds of them, more than double the amount sold a decade earlier.

Of the 38,000 known varieties of mushrooms, only one, the agaricus bisporus, is grown commercially in the United States.

Mushroom buffs would do well to avoid foraging through the woods and fields for wild ones, since some are poisonous and a few can be fatal.

Other varieties, found most often in Mexico and South America, are hallucinogenic and can induce visions when eaten, and these too can be dangerous.

Mushrooms have an uncertain origin but are known to date back to ancient times. The Egyptian pharaohs reserved the fungi for their inner circle of associates, and in Rome it was believed that the fungi gave warriors strength in battle.

In America, commercial production began in 1896 in Kennett Square, Pa., where William Wayne was said to be the first grower to build a house exclusively for raising mushrooms.

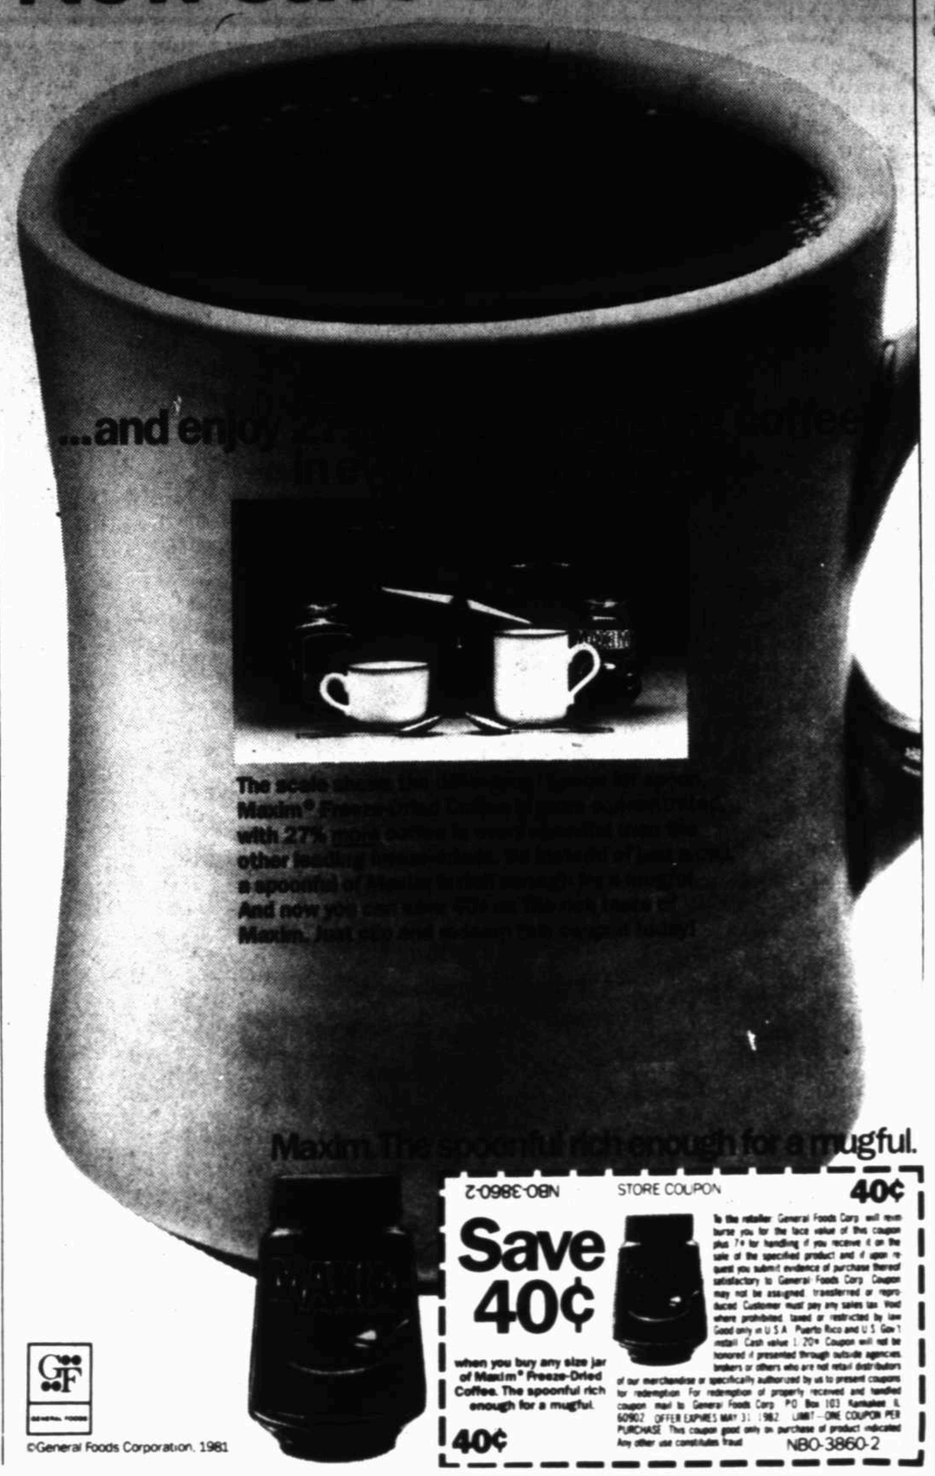

Mushrooms are good raw in salads, broiled, and simmered in soups and stews, as in this recipe for a German mushroom pork stew.

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
2 pounds lean shoulder of pork, diced
1 cup onions, chopped
1 cup dry white wine
1 cup beef bouillon
½ pound knockwurst, sliced thick
1 bay leaf
Salt and pepper to taste
2 whole cloves
1 pound fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons flour

Heat oil in heavy pot, add pork and brown well. Remove pork and add onions to pan drippings, saute 2 minutes. Return pork to pot with wine and bouillon. Stir in knockwurst and seasonings. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer 2 hours till pork is tender. Halve mushrooms and add, blend in flour mixed in half cup of water and simmer 15 minutes. Serve over noodles.

Mexico a big customer

In the past two years U.S. trade with Mexico has grown so rapidly — more than 50 percent a year — that in 1980 Mexico became our third largest trading partner, eclipsed only by Canada and Japan. Mexico's trade deficit with the United States in 1980 was nearly $3 billion.

⅔ cup sugar
1 tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. ginger

1 tblsp. lemon juice
Grated peel of 1 lemon
¼ cup chopped pecans

Mix first seven ingredients together. Pour mixture into pie shell. Bake at 425 degrees 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees, continue baking about 45 minutes or until inserted knife comes out clean. Cool 20 minutes. Blend together sour cream, brown sugar, lemon juice and lemon peel. Spread sour cream mixture evenly over the pie. Bake 10 minutes more. Sprinkle top with chopped pecans. Serve warm or cold.

You can dress up a bakery or frozen pie by topping it with the sour cream mixture and baking it as directed.

Information Act costlier than estimate

The Freedom of Information Act was passed in 1967 without much attention being given to its cost. In deliberations over amendments in 1974, the highest congressional estimate was $100,000 a year. It's now clear that the annual cost is at least 450 times that high.

Don't pay extra for vitamins

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: I have been buying natural vitamins because I thought they were better than synthetic ones. They are more expensive and I always think you get what you pay for.

My brother just became a pharmacist and he says I am nuts to pay a lot of money for expensive vitamins because they are all the same. We had a big argument over this and I told him I was sure no dietitian would agree with him.

I am writing to you because we always read your column, and I hope you will say that natural vitamins are better. When my brother reads that I'm sure he will be convinced that I am right. — J.T., Seattle

Dear J.T.: Sorry, but your brother is right.

Vitamins are chemicals whose molecular structure is always exactly the same or they would not chemically be those vitamins.

The human body does not metabolize vitamin C, for example, found in an orange, any differently than the vitamin C found in the drugstores because they are identical.

I know that "natural vitamins" sounds better and implies "synthetic vitamins" are different and inferior, but informed people, like your brother, denounce the vitamin scams perpetrated on a naive public for billions of dollars every year.

There is no need to pay a lot of money for vitamins.

Dear Shirley: My girlfriend and I just started living together last month and we seem to have a problem — we can't agree on food.

We both work and have to conserve our money, and can't spend a lot eating out, but right now, it's our only solution. She says she is too tired to cook dinner and that I should eat raw food. I am sick and tired of just vegetables and fruit.

I would like some bacon and eggs for breakfast and good home-cooked dinners of meat and potatoes like my mother fixed. My girlfriend says that's a bad diet and hers is better.

Do you have any suggestions that would help us solve this problem? — T.K.B.

Dear T.K.B.: The best diet is a middle of the road one that would include some of her foods and some of yours.

Why not plan a weekly menu together? Remember that a little give and take is necessary for a good relationship to continue. Take turns in both preparation and clean-up chores. Shop once a week, preferably on food sale days to save money.

Eating habits are deeply ingrained in most people, so tolerance is a virtue. Eat a wide variety of both cooked and raw foods. They should include meat, fish, fowl, milk and dairy products, fruits and vegetables, bread and whole grain cereals.

Cooking can be fun, especially doing it together.

Dear Shirley: My husband's doctor told him that he must cut out salt and lose 35 pounds because he has, and get this, "essential hypertension."

I kind of resent the doctor's attitude. What is so essential about having hypertension? My husband says he feels fine and doesn't like food without salt.

We are thinking of changing doctors, but they are all so expensive, and we have already paid this one. Have you ever heard of anything like that? — Mrs. B.H.

Dear Mrs. B.H.: Yes, but you are misunderstanding the term "essential". In medical terminology, essential hypertension means high blood pressure that is not caused by any specific disease, such as kidney problems. Essential does not mean "necessary," as you have mistakenly interpreted.

You and your husband should heed the good advice you have been given. Hypertension can be a dangerous killer. Avoiding salt and losing weight are very important in controlling the disease.

Sardine pocket bread

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Whenever I go to a nearby restaurant that specializes in sandwiches made with pita (pocket bread), I note that the fillings are topped with alfalfa sprouts. Pretty and nutritious.

So nowadays when I try a new sandwich filling for pita, I usually buy a package of alfalfa sprouts to use. In my neighborhood markets, the sprouts come in 4-ounce plastic bags that have convenient zipper tops. There are always too many sprouts for the sandwiches, but we use the rest of them in salads.

Recently my recipe tester and I decided to concoct a new filling for pita. We settled on flavoring mashed brisling sardines (drained) with mayonnaise, mustard and lemon juice and adding celery; this we used to spread on the inside of the pita. Then we made a happy choice: we added red apple and onion rings. And of course we topped the filling with alfalfa sprouts. Tested in time for lunch one working day, four of us enjoyed the combination and thought you might like to try it.

SARDINE PITA

Two 3¾-ounce cans brisling sardines in olive oil, drained
Mayonnaise to taste
Prepared mustard to taste
Lemon juice to taste
½ cup finely diced celery
4 six-inch pita
Thin unpeeled red apple rings
Thinly sliced red onion rings
Alfalfa sprouts

Mash the sardines with the mayonnaise, mustard and lemon juice and add the celery. Heat the pita according to package directions or in a moderate or hot oven just long enough to soften them and have them hot through — a few minutes. Cut each in half so each half has a pocket. Spread the inside of the halves with the sardine mixture. Add the apple and onion rings and then top with the sprouts. Serve at once. Makes 4 to 8 servings.

Grain exports soar

Total U.S. grain exports in 1980 amounted to $44.5 billion, up 20 percent from 1979, the Department of Agriculture reports.

Tall fescue slows ewe's conception

Ewes grazing tall-fescue pastures take two to three times longer to conceive than those grazing orchardgrass pastures, according to a new study at the Ruminant Nutrition Laboratory, Beltsville, Md.

Tall fescue, grown on 33 million acres in the United States, is ideal for grazing, but delayed conception extends the lambing season, increasing the need for farm labor. Also, delayed lambing decreases the chance of producing three lamb crops in two years.

She has learned to love her enemy

By LEIGH FENLY
Copley News Service

NEW YORK CITY — Kathryn Koob rides the elevator up to her office every morning with sweaty men in gym shorts, fresh from their racquetball workouts.

The New York Health Club shares a building on 50th Street with Koob's boss, the U.S. International Communication Agency, which locates its Foreign Press Office in the building.

As a workplace, the Foreign Press Office is less than glamorous. Koob has a desk squeezed behind a partition, a couple of chairs and loads of paper. Her job, a position she took in June, requires that she deal with press people from around the world, setting up special tours for them, press conferences, that kind of thing. She took the job, she says, for two reasons: professional advancement and quality of life. She loves New York City.

She says she feels free in the city. But Kathryn Koob might feel free anywhere, as long as her feet were not bound and her eyes not blindfolded. As long as it wasn't an Iranian prison.

It has two been years since the American Embassy in Tehran was taken over by Iranian militants. Two years since the day that Kathryn Koob, as director of Tehran's Iran-American Society, kept a telephone line open from Tehran to Washington, relaying what scanty information she could about the takeover.

She was one of only two women to be held hostage after the secretaries and minorities were released by the militants. In 444 days she was moved 13 times, the last time to an Iranian prison in northern Tehran, where Koob said that, ironically, conditions were better than in the embassy. The Iranian militants, as guards, were miserable. Food was awful, little or no mail was delivered and the students were so inept with guns that the hostages feared a rifle would accidentally go off and kill one of them.

Fear lived with them every day. Koob speaks these last words without emotion, without self-pity, as if saying them is repeating the obvious. The message is that there are things worse than fear, and that maybe all Americans, with their continued questions and attitudes of concern, have made too much of what is done. Iran is over, she says. The 52 hostages have survived.

Moreover, those 444 days taught her one of life's biggest lessons.

"I truly learned to love my enemy," Koob said recently. She was in her cubicle office with her back to its most prominent decoration, a poster from the state fair in her home state of Iowa.

"It is a curious process you go through. You blame yourself, then you start blaming someone else. You sort of work it out, and you finally realize that it doesn't matter and you quit trying to place blame. It took awhile, but I finally could really say that I have learned to love my enemy. Hating only hurts the person who hates."

Koob remarked that most people say she looks prettier in person than in pictures. It is true. In the snapshots that her family showed me last autumn in Iowa, her strong, straight features are most dominant. But in person, at 44, she is softer somehow, with eyes wide and intense behind big glasses, soft brown hair cut to frame her face.

But the most remarkable thing about her countenance is her nervousness, her anxiety.

Thomas named as ambassador

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Gerald E. Thomas of San Diego, a recently retired rear admiral, was nominated Tuesday by President Reagan to be ambassador to the Cooperative Republic of Guyana.

Thomas, 52, retired earlier this year after 30 years in the Navy. Since 1978, he had been commander of the Pacific Fleet Training Command in San Diego.

From 1976 to 1978, Thomas was director of the Near East and South Asia Region in the office of the assistant secretary of defense, according to the White House.

Beginning his navy career in 1951, Thomas held a wide variety of assignments.

Key West is delightful

By ROBIN AND PATRICIA HARRIS
Hearst Feature Service

KEY WEST, Fla. — According to the mapmakers, this miniscule strand of coral and limestone at the edge of the Caribbean where the Florida Keys terminate is part of the United States. Geographically they are correct.

Ideologically, its allegiance is open to question, for Key West is a self-contained citadel of the Live and Let Live, Anything Goes philosophy. It belongs to no one but itself.

Harry Truman, who made it his winter base for years, put it best when he observed that "law and order stops at Seven Mile Bridge," meaning the long span separating the lower Keys from those closer to the mainland.

His remark must not be taken as an indication that this placid little city is a center of lawlessness. On the contrary, violent crime is rare and, compared to Miami and Ft. Lauderdale, Key West, except for the occasional mugging or burglary, is a paragon of good manners.

When the most celebrated current resident, playwright Tennessee Williams, was attacked on Duval Street last year, he lightly dismissed the incident by identifying his assailants as "New York drama critics."

Considering Key West's lurid and sinful past, its forgiving attitude toward misbehavior is understandable.

"After all that Key West has done over the years we would have no right to tell people what they can do now," we were told by a third generation "conch," as members of old families are called.

It began as a pirate hideout, ruled by the bloodthirsty Gasparilla. With 100 documented killings on his record he made the more notorious Blackbeard, with only one, look like a Boy Scout.

In 1823 the U.S. acquired it for a naval base, but instead of becoming respectable, the island began a species of legalized plunder that soon made it the richest town per capita in the country.

It was the industry of "wrecking," for which federal permits were issued. As the gateway to the Gulf Stream for Latin American commerce, the Florida straits were filled with treasure-laden ships which often foundered on nearby reefs. The first wrecker to reach the scene could claim the loot.

But these dubiously legitimate revenues did not satisfy the enterprising Key Westers, who devised an ingenious method of constantly moving the reef warning lights so that vessels were guided directly onto the rocks.

The lucrative racket ended around the turn of the century, when bright and immovable signal beacons made the passage safe. Again Key West did not reform, continuing to thrive on gambling, smuggling and other illicit endeavors.

It is apparent, therefore, that Key West's present permissiveness may well be motivated partly by a guilty conscience. Whatever the reason, it is a thoroughly delightful place, and offers solid proof that vastly different elements of society can get along with each other if they are just left alone by outsiders.

The population of 30,000 is a mixture of whites, blacks, Cubans, "straights" and "gays," all of whom manage to co-exist in relative harmony.

The openly "gay" segment of about 15 percent of the population has a totally honorable status, holding high political offices and providing generous support for all worthy social causes.

Nitze is wise, wary old hand at Soviet negotiating trick

By L. EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Paul H. Nitze, head of the U.S. delegation for the European nuclear arms reduction talks in Geneva, is a wise and wary old hand who knows Soviet negotiating tricks and techniques from long experience.

Called a "hardliner" by "softliners," the 74-year-old former secretary of of the Navy and deputy defense secretary, spent five years on SALT I and SALT II negotiating teams, having first been appointed by President Nixon in 1969.

His experience then and since has not altered his conviction that the USSR is still seeking world hegemony, though not necessarily by war.

One of the most trenchant and influential critics of the proposed SALT II treaty, Nitze said last year the U.S. should skip that phase and "go for negotiation of SALT III," with an expiration date of 1995 or 2000. Then he added this warning:

"The prospect of the Soviet Union agreeing to such a treaty in a form which would meet our needs is almost zero, unless we have earlier demonstrated that we are prepared and able to handle our strategic security without a SALT treaty.

"We should always be prepared to negotiate, but we should also never forget that when we are negotiating with the Soviet Union we are negotiating with an adversary."

Nitze quit the SALT II negotiations when Nixon, wounded by Watergate, made what he considered to be an unnecessary concession on treaty length so that "progress" could be reported by the White House.

The chief U.S. delegate has been a keen student of nuclear arms ever since his service on the U.S. Strategic Bombing Survey during and after World War II.

In recent years, he was the leading voice in the Committee on the Present Danger, a non-partisan organization made up largely of liberal Democrats (now called neo-conservatives) who were concerned with the relative decline of American military strength vis-a-vis the Soviet Union.

Defendent Eugene Tafoya, left, looks on as defense attorneys prepare for their closing arguments in district court at Fort Collins, Colo., on Wednesday. Tafoya's trial for attempted murder went to jury Wednesday.

Jury still out in Tafoya trial

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — After three weeks of testimony that offered glimpses into the world of spies and mercenary soldiers, a jury is deciding whether former Green Beret Eugene Tafoya was paid by Libyan agents to kill a dissident expatriate.

Faisal Zagallai was shot twice in the head with Tafoya's 22-caliber revolver, but survived after losing an eye.

The district court jury deliberated into the night for about four hours Wednesday and recessed without a verdict. Deliberations resume today.

TAFOYA, A VETERAN OF 23 YEARS military service who joined the Marines at age 14, was charged with attempted first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit first-degree murder in the Oct. 14, 1980, shooting of Zagallai, who was then a student at Colorado State University.

District Judge J. Robert Miller told the jurors Wednesday they could convict Tafoya of the lesser charges of attempted second-degree murder, third-degree assault or conspiracy to commit third-degree assault.

If convicted of the most serious charge, Tafoya could face up to 24 years in prison. Third-degree assault carries a sentence of up to two years in prison.

Tafoya admitted to shooting Zagallai but said he did so in self-defense after Zagallai pulled a 9mm semi-automatic pistol from beneath a sofa cushion.

Prosecutors alleged in pre-trial hearings and affidavits that Tafoya was hired to kill Zagallai by Edwin Wilson, a former CIA agent who is accused of working for Libya and who has been indicted for shipping explosives to the government of Col. Moammar Khadafy.

The chief prosecutor, District Attorney Stu Van Meveren, claimed in his closing argument that Tafoya was paid about $8,600 to kill Zagallai because Zagallai was critical of Khadafy's regime.

But it was the defense, not the prosecution, that focused on the international aspects of the case. Van Meveren mentioned Wilson to refute Tafoya's claim that he was hired by [illegible] — known only as "John" — to visit Zagallai and warn him to stop his dissident activities.

"What interest does the CIA have in a student in Fort Collins, Colo., who was critical of another country?" Van Meveren asked. Over defense objections, the prosecution introduced Wilson's business card and a scrap of paper bearing his name and code name "Angus," both of which were found in Tafoya's Truth or Consequences, N.M., apartment when he was arrested April 22, 1980.

DEFENSE LAWYER WALTER Gerash pictured Tafoya as a "forgotten patriot" who was "left out in the cold" by the CIA's denial of involvement with him.

"Eugene Tafoya was there (Zagallai's apartment) in the best interest of the United States," Gerash said.

His voice cracking and his eyes brimmed with tears, Gerash, known for his flamboyant courtroom manner, read to the jury Tafoya's Bronze Star citation, awarded in Vietnam in 1969. "He was so courageous and so powerful and so [illegible] couldn't he (Zagallai) [illegible]," Gerash asked.

[illegible] outburst and CIA connec[illegible] and rejected the notion that Tafoya was [illegible] killing. "He may be an expert [illegible] that doesn't make him an expert hit [illegible] attempt to maim, he went for [illegible] instead of taking Faisal Zagallai's [illegible] way with it."

Libyan to appeal murder sentence

By VERN ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — The lawyer for a Libyan convicted of killing a countryman is demanding a new trial, saying the judge should have sequestered the jury and told them they could have convicted the man on a lesser charge.

Mohammed Shabata, 35, convicted Nov. 24 of second-degree murder in the shooting death last summer of Nabil Mansour, 32, was sentenced Wednesday to five years to life in the Utah State Prison.

Based on the arguments of Shabata's lawyer, Robert Echard, 2nd Utah District Judge Calvin Gould delayed the sentence until a Dec. 16 hearing on whether there should be a new trial.

The prosecution maintained that Shabata shot Mansour at Sabata's apartment in Ogden on July 9 and stuffed the body in Mansour's car, which was parked outside Shabata's apartment.

Investigators found bullet holes in Shabata's apartment, human blood in the trunk of the car and Mansour's car keys in Shabata's knapsack.

Mansour's friends testified they last saw him July 9 when they dropped him off outside Shabata's apartment.

NEVERTHELESS, Echard said the prosecution did not present enough evidence to convict his client and Gould failed to tell the jury it could consider charging Shabata with manslaughter, a lesser crime.

Echard said the jury should have been locked up because evidence that was not permitted in court, about a possible relationship between Mansour and Shabata's wife, was discussed in a pre-trial hearing and the jury could have found out about it from news reports.

Prosecution witnesses testified Shabata and Mansour disagreed on politics and lifestyles, but the state did not provide a motive in its case. Witnesses said Shabata supported the Libyan government, while Mansour did not like it.

Gould turned down Echard's request to place Shabata on probation so he could be deported to Libya. Echard argued that imprisoning Shabata would be a needless expense for the state, since Shabata could never return once deported. But Gould said deportation was "a matter for the executive branch of government."

Shabata and Mansour came to Ogden on scholarships from a Libyan oil company. Shabata received an associate degree in diesel mechanics at Weber State College. Mansour dropped out of school and friends said he was resisting government entreaties he return to Libya when he was killed.

Shabata's wife and three children returned to Libya more than a year ago.

Shabata was arrested July 17 in Chicago while en route to Libya. A few hours earlier, Mansour's decomposing body was found. Shabata testified he saw Mansour with a woman July 9 at a restaurant parking lot.

Senate report raises questions about Casey finances

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate Intelligence Committee report raises unanswered questions about William J. Casey and his finances and has prompted two members of the panel to call for his removal as CIA director.

After a four-month investigation of Casey's past business dealings, the committee's six-page report, released Wednesday, handed him the backhanded endorsement that "no basis has been found for concluding that Mr. Casey is unfit" to stay in office.

But the committee said it was up to the Justice Department to determine if Casey violated the law in failing to register as a foreign agent in 1976, and it disclosed that the Internal Revenue Service has two tax audits under way involving Casey. The committee also released Casey's [illegible] state[illegible] he [illegible] for each [illegible] cars [illegible] $129,000.

THE REPORT SAID Casey's [illegible] amounts of information [illegible] forms to both the committee and to the Office of Government Ethics.

"This pattern suggests an insufficient appreciation of the obligation to provide complete and accurate information to the oversight committees of Congress," the report said.

Casey expressed pleasure that the senators had "reported nothing which reflects on the integrity, the business [illegible] practices and the ethical standards [illegible] always [illegible] He said he was [illegible] forward to work[illegible] the committee [illegible] in the future.

In [illegible] financial disclosure [illegible] committee in [illegible] committee [illegible] investments, [illegible] more than [illegible] stocks as liabilities of nearly $500,000, [illegible] lawsuits that he had been involved with since 1976 and more than 30 clients he had represented in private law practice in the past five years, the report said.

Among the clients not disclosed initially were [illegible] foreign governments, South Korea and Indonesia, and an oil [illegible] company controlled by the Indonesian government.

Committee members drew sharply different conclusions from the report.

Democrats Joseph Biden of Delaware, who voted against the report, and Walter Huddleston of Kentucky, who voted for it, said Casey should not continue in office. Democrat Patrick Leahy of Vermont endorsed the investigative findings but refused to comment on Casey's fitness, saying that was for President Reagan to decide.

BIDEN SAID, "Casey has displayed a consistent pattern of omissions, misstatements and contradictions in his dealings with this and other committees of Congress. As a consequence, Mr. Casey has lost my confidence in his ability" to handle the job.

Calling on Reagan to replace Casey, Huddleston said, "The committee report indicates that Mr. Casey will not be able to inspire the kind of confidence in Congress, within the agencies themselves and on the part of the people to do an effective job with our intelligence agencies."

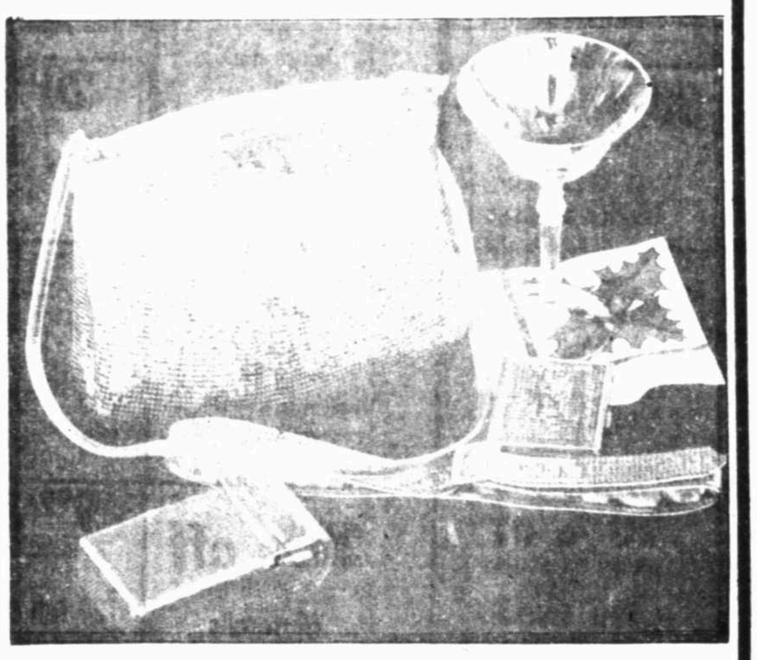

But Republican Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico said, "Nothing in four months indicates any attempt to circumvent the law or professional or ethical standards."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Mastectomies may lead to marital stress

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine whom I had known before she was married 20 years ago is planning to get a divorce. What makes this situation so sad is that she underwent a mastectomy about three years ago, and she and her husband really went through some tough times together.

It puzzles me that they got through those three years in pretty good shape, only to have their marriage break up when she is getting better. Wouldn't you regard this situation as unusual? — Mildred, Clearwater, Fla.

Dear Mildred: I do not know of any statistics on divorce in the kind of situation you describe, but the possibility of marital friction when the wife has had a mastectomy undoubtedly exists. This has been illustrated in a study of 30 couples by Dr. David D. Wellisch, of the University of California, Los Angeles, School of Medicine.

One of the study's findings was that 22 months after the mastectomy, 23 percent of the women had not been seen unclothed by their husbands. This is important since the woman's altered body image may play an important role in the marital relationship; and, if there is going to be a problem, it is good to confront it at an early stage.

Most of the women in the study indicated that they experienced a decided lessening of sexual interest, and, as a result, tended to withdraw from their husbands. Many of the husbands, in turn, were unable to cope with the situation.

Deat Dr. Solomon: I was planning on asking my doctor of a prescription for the pill, but a friend warned me that women on the pill are subject to attacks of emotional depression. Is this true? What would you recommend for a patient? — Dolores, Miami Beach, Fla.

Dear Dolores: There is some evidence of a possible association between emotional depression and the use of oral contraceptives. Note that I said "some" evidence and "possible" association, since the evidence is not overwhelming. Whether this means that oral contraceptives are not advisable depends on the circumstances in each case.

I suggest you discuss with your gynecologist your apparent desire for some form of contraception. After considering your particular circumstances, he or she will be best able to advise on a course of action.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you explain why some women in labor are given enemas? — Martha, Oakland, Calif.

Dear Martha: The routine enema for women is labor is supposed to stimulate uterine activity and reduce the possibility of contamination at the time of delivery.

A study conducted in England now suggests that this practice should not be carried out routinely, but should be done only in selected cases. However, since the number of patients included in the study was rather small, its conclusions are open to question.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Balitimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his col-

Texas Supreme Court found no error in decision

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday found no reversible error in lower court decisions denying damages for a death and injuries resulting from an El Paso County automobile collision.

Howard Williams and others sued W.E. Chaney after Jeffrey H. Williams was killed and Melanie Lynn McCann was injured in a March 19, 1978, collision with a pickup truck driven by Fred May Fitzgerald.

Williams and other plaintiffs sued Chaney claiming he owned the vehicle driven by Fitzgerald and was negligent for entrusting him to drive it since he didn't have a driver's livense.

A Midland County trial court entered a summary judgment in favor of Chaney and Williams appealed contending the trial court erred in granting that judgment because of genuine issues of fact concerning the proof upon which relief could be granted to the plaintiffs.

Sea researchers capture new fish accidentally

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Three researchers working near the sea floor in a tiny submarine report capturing accidentally what they believe is a previously unknown species of fish that lives in total darkness.

"It was pure luck," biologist Willaim Smithey said at a news conference Tuesday. "You could say the fish were accidentally kidnapped."

The fish apparently became trapped while swimming near the submarine hatch. The team nicknamed the 8- to 10-inch creatures "vent fish" because they apparently swam to the vessel while the crew was carrying out research on deep-sea vents, also known as sea chimneys.

The fish, found 130 miles off the tip of the Baja and in 8,500 feet of water, were frozen and stored at the expedition base at Scripps Institution of Oceanography here.

"There's a whole host of deep-sea animals around these vents but little is known about them," Smithey said. "They've been observed before, but never captured."

Other scientists said further study is need before the fish can be identified or established as a new species.

"The fish are obviously predators," said Harmon Craig, the chief scientist aboard the sub. "They have sharp teeth and have probably eaten tiny organisms." He said their black-dot like eyes did not react to sunlight when brought to the surface.

The purpose of the geological and geochemical expedition was to collect fluids from a field of vents. Craig said titanium bottles were used to capture ethane, propane and butane, substances previously not observed in vent fluids. Before the expedition, only methane was known to exist in the fluids.

All the gases are abiogenic, or originating from lifeless matter.

Craig said scientists hoped that by studying the earth's crust, the chemistry of seawater and by tracing hydrothermal circulation, they would learn more about salt content in ocean water, among other things.

Jewish group, union oppose anti-Klan kit

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A National Education Association-sponsored instructional kit aimed at countering the Ku Klux Klan has been under attack by a Jewish group and a rival teachers union because it describes American society as racist.

John Leeke, NEA staff coordinator for the project, said the 29-page booklet was developed early this year after Connecticut teachers asked how they could counter Klan attempts to recruit children there. He said NEA plans no changes in the book.

The criticism by Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, a Jewish group, focuses on the booklet's assertion that several economic and social indicators demonstrate the gap between blacks and whites is getting larger, not smaller.

When the Klan seeks to protect white rights, "it is seeking to maintain the special privileges and benefits available to whites in a society structured around white supremacy," the booklet said.

ADL, which has monitored the Klan for years, issued a statement from San Francisco in October criticizing the booklet as "innately racist." Kenneth Bialkin, chairman of ADL's national executive committee, said his group opposes the premise that the nation is "institutionally racist."

Frances Sonnenschein, ADL's national education director, said that the difference of opinion between her group and the NEA booklet "isn't just semantics. We do admit there is racism within the society. We don't say it's a racist society. We also think there's anti-semitism in society, but we're not going to say there's an anti-semitic society."

Aid for Lynn fire may not be forthcoming

BY PEGGY SIMPSON
Hearts Feature Service

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration says city and state officials must prove decisively that the $69 million fire damage in Lynn, Mass., last weekend was of such "severity" that federal disaster aid is essential.

So far, they aren't convinced, despite a quick personal visit from Gov. Edward King to White House aide Jim Jenkins and to the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, Louis Giuffrida. A decision is expected as early as Thursday.

King declined to specify to reporters what the state was committed to provide in the Lynn emergency, saying only "We'll do what we're asked to do."

A much more specific agenda for action will be required from the state to persuade the federal government that the utmost in state and city efforts will still leave Lynn too devastated to rebuild, a FEMA aide said.

At a news conference, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Lynn was obviously a disaster of such magnitude that it deserved federal aid. Among the reasons he listed why the state and city combined could not adequately cope with the fire damage was the loss of income from Proposition 2 and 1-2, the tax-cutting measure that took effect last year.

THAT ARGUMENT WON'T WASH, a FEMA official said, "because federal disaster relief is not a budgetary relief program."

FEMA lawyers have concluded tentatively, however, that if arson is shown to be the cause of the Lynn fires that this would not rule out any federal aid or a disaster declaration.

As more fires broke out in Lynn yesterday, Kennedy and Rep. Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., both called for federal help in detecting and stopping arsonists — but they disagreed which federal agency should send in the arson investigators.

Kennedy said they should come from the federal firearms, tobacco and firearms agency — which President Reagan has targeted for extinction. Heckler said FEMA, the disaster relief agency, already is an expert in arsonists who have hit hotels and would be able to apply that expertise to arson at mill towns.

Heckler and the governor comprised a political odd fellows team both at the White House and at FEMA, arguing for help for the mill city on a bipartisan basis.

New project to increase women's influence

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — More than half of the women who ran for state legislative seats in 1980 were elected, but that increased women's hold on statehouse seats to only 12 percent.

The National Women's Education Fund, seeing women can raise money and get elected if they will run, is launching a two-year, $1 million project to increase the numbers and influence of women in public office.

Tanya Melich, president of the non-profit, non-partisan Fund, announced the project here recently with figures showing women are ready to participate.

There was a 22 percent increase in the number of women running for public office in 1980, and 56 percent of women candidates for the state legislatures won election, she said.

The training sessions, expected to reach 500 women in each region where they are conducted, will teach not only the skills to get elected, but those necessary to do an effective job once in office.

As women have entered the political arena in increasing numbers during the last decade, they have broken through barriers of discrimination never before penetrated in American political history. Since 1972, the number of women in elected office has tripled. Two women, for example, have won election in their own right to the U.S. Senate, and there are 20 congresswomen in the U.S. House of Representatives.

The women in public office today are highly visible because there are relatively few of them and many have sought the advice of the Fund in learning to govern effectively, from the national to the local levels.

"With federal budget cuts, more and more of governments' decision-making will be at local levels," Melich said. "That will be a primary point of the Fund's focus."

A core group of trainers for the project, initially funded by the Carnegie Corporation of New York and the Charles H. Revson Foundation, will travel to the 10 targeted regions of the country to work with the local Fund organization in two- to four-week sessions to address the needs of particular groups and communities.

Melich says she expects 500 women to participate in each of the 10 seminars, five of which will be held during each of the next two years. She said she will seek involvement by those women "whose access to the public leadership process has been most limited — lower income women, black women, Hispanics, Asian and American Indian women."

Each local organization of the National Women's Education Fund will be expected to follow-up for the next several years on the work initiated during the seminars to continue to urge participation in the elective processes and offer whatever help they can on a non-partisan basis.

The Houston Oilers have been having problems this season, and if they hope to stay out of the cellar in the American Football Conference Central Division, they'll have to cut out mistakes like this John Reaves fumble against Kansas City. The Oilers and Cleveland Browns will be fighting for cellar dweller honors tonight in Houston. Both teams have 5-8 records.

Oilers, Browns in cellar fight tonight

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers and Cleveland Browns are running neck and neck for the second straight year, but this time they're trying to escape the cellar, not break into the penthouse.

The Oilers and Browns, both 5-8 this season after tying for the American Football Conference Central Division title with 11-5 records last season, meet tonight before a national television audience and a capacity Astrodome crowd.

Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano says there will be no experimenting with his starting lineup. He's interested in winning the final three games of the season, finishing 8-8.

Oiler Coach Ed Biles also would like to finish at .500, but he plans to take a look at several young players and hopefully get more playing time for backup quarterback Gifford Nielsen.

"We can't do anything about what's happened. We've got to play the hand that was dealt us," Rutigliano said of the Browns' tailspin of this season. "We're coming off two games we needed to win and didn't, so now we need to redeem ourselves."

The Browns have lost to Pittsburgh and Cincinnati in their last two games. The Oilers' decline has been even more dramatic. They've lost three in a row and six of their last seven games in Biles' initial season as head coach.

"We will be doing some serious evaluating in our last three ball games," Biles said. "We want to find out who will be able to help us next season. We're going to try to win the games, but we're also going to try to use them for experimenting where possible."

The game will match beleaguered quarterbacks Brian Sipe of Cleveland and the Oilers' Ken Stabler.

Both were booed as they left the field in their last games. Sipe has been plagued by 21 interceptions this season. Stabler has been unable to get any consistency out of the Oiler offense, which is ranked last in the NFL.

Nielsen relieved Stabler to the cheers of the crowd in Sunday's 31-27 loss to Atlanta, and directed the Oilers to two late touchdowns.

Another new face in the Oiler lineup will be rookie wide receiver Mike Holston, who replaced the injured Mike Renfro Sunday and caught eight passes for 101 yards in his first pro start. Wide receiver Billy Brooks, signed as a free agent recently, also is due Biles' scrutiny in the final three games.

Kickoff is at 8 p.m. CST.

Miller, Weishuhn top All-LSC list

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — Southwest Texas quarterback Mike Miller and Angelo State middle linebacker Clayton Weishuhn topped the 1981 Lone Star Conference football team announced Wednesday.

Southwest Texas dominated, placing seven defensive and four offensive players on the team selected by the league's coaches.

Miller, a 6-2 and 192-pound senior from LaGrange, was named the LSC's most valuable back and will receive the J.W. Dough Rollins Award while Weishuhn, a 6-2 and 215-pound senior from Wall, repeated as the most valuable lineman and will receive the J.V. Sikes Award.

Abilene Christian quarterback Loyal Proffitt was named freshman of the year, and Ted Sitton of ACU will receive the Gil Steinke Award as the coach of the year. Sitton took the Wildcats from 2-8 in 1980 to 8-2 in 1981.

Miller, one of 11 Bobcats named the All-LSC first team, led SWTSU to a 10-1 regular season record, to the LSC championship and to one victory so far in NCAA Division II playoffs. He accounted for 2,403 total yards in 11 games.

Others in the All-LSC backfield are East Texas State running back Cary Noiel, who led the LSC in rushing with 1,307 yards, and SWTSU's Donnie Williams, the LSC's leading scorer with 96 points.

The All-LSC wide receivers are Abilene Christian's Quinton Smith and ETSU's Randy Smith, and SWTSU's Don Najvar is the All-LSC tight end.

Offensive linemen winning honors are ACU tackle Kris Hansen, SWTSU tackle Pete Racicot, ACU guard Scott McCall, ASU guard Kevin Steen and ACU center Grant Feasel.

Five linemen were named to the All-LSC defensive team because of a tie at the tackle positions. The group includes SWTSU ends Mike Bailiff and Anthony Boyd, SWTSU tackles Mike Langford and and Rick Sowell and ACU tackle Richard Flores.

Joining Wieshuhn at linebacker are SWTSU's Cyril Friday and Sam Houston's Cal Peveto.

The All-LSC defensive backfield includes Texas A&I's Durwood Roquemore and Darrell Green and SWTSU's Bobby Watkins and Ken Coffey.

Also named to the team were SHSU's Phil Harmening as the place kicker and Howard Payne's Kirk Chastain as the punter.

Roquemore, Watkins, Hansen, Friday and Chastain were unanimous choices.

Chap Classic gets underway today

A strong field has been lined up for the fourth annual Chaparral Classic that opens a three-day run today in the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center. Seven teams are entered for the event which features three games each night.

"We personally know about two of the teams that will be playing," Midland College cage coach Jerry Stone noted somewhat ruefully. "We lost to Barton County up in Great Bend, Kansas, during their classic and then lost last week in the finals of the Amarillo Classic to Amarillo. But there are some other good teams entered with Ranger, Odessa, and Howard College. Laredo and St. Phillip's have had a hard time winning here in the past, but they always manage to scare one or two teams on the way," Stone added.

There are seven teams entered this year because Howard College has a conflict on the first night. They are being replaced on Thursday night by Ranger, with Howard College coming in for action Friday and Saturday.

Tickets for the Chap Classic are priced at $5 for adults and $2.50 for students for all three games. Single night tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students.

The pairings are already determined in the Chaparral Classic, so the winner will be determined on games won and the point spread.

Games slated for Thursday evening are: Barton County versus Ranger Junior College, 5 p.m.; Laredo Junior College against Odessa College, 7 p.m.; and Midland College versus St. Phillip's College, San Antonio, 9 p.m.

Friday's games include: Howard College versus St. Phillip's College, 5:30 p.m.; Midland College versus Laredo Junior College, 7:30 p.m.; and Barton County against Odessa College, 9:30 p.m.

Saturday's line-up includes: Howard College versus Laredo Junior College, 4:30 p.m.; Odessa College against St. Phillip's, 6:30 p.m.; and Midland College versus Barton County, 8:30 p.m.

The Chaps, with two sophomores and eleven freshmen, have been getting good performances from sophomore lettermen Puntus Wilson and Lance McCain. Wilson has one 35-point contest and is averging over 20 per contest. Freshman point guard Anthony "Spud" Wilson also has been consistent, hitting nearly 20 per game. At 5-6, Webb amazes spectators with his great leaping ability for dunds and his shot-blocking defensive efforts. Chester Smither, 6-6½ post player, also is beginning to score better. Smith teams with 6-5 Jerome Crowe inside to grab off a lot of rebounds.

"I felt it would take through December to mold this team into a strong contender," Stone said, "And we're just about on schedule with the players now starting to play a strong team defense and make the quick transition on offense."

TV contracts on NCAA agenda

By CRAIG HORST
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A dispute involving football television contracts was the issue that caused the schools in the National Collegiate Athletic Association to gather in special convention, but the heart of the matter was the complaint by some gridiron powers that they give too much and get too little.

About 400 schools were expected to be represented today for the opening of the conclave which will consider proposals for reorganization of the organization.

The convention was called after the College Football Association, made up of the major gridiron powers, negotiated a television contract with NBC.

THE NCAA had already committed its members, including the 61 CFA schools, to a television contract with ABC and CBS.

Although the television contract sparked the call for a special convention, members of the CFA, which contributes the bulk of NCAA revenue, have long complained that smaller schools dominate NCAA policymaking by sheer weight of heir numbers.

The NCAA Council was to hold a closed meeting while the various conferences were to caucus before general debate began later in the day.

Reorganization has failed in 1976, 1977, 1978 and 1979, although Division I, where the big schools play, was split in two in 1978.

The intent of the split into Division I-A and Division I-AA was to "provide institutions with similar commitments and essentially like programs a common deliberative forum."

The NCAA acknowledges "that objective has not been achieved in Division I-A football or in Division I as a whole."

DIVISION I—A has lost only two of its 139 members since 1978 while membership in Division I as a whole has increased from 237 schools to 276 schools.

The CFA wants its schools in a division of their own and has proposed creating a new Division IV. Qualifications for the new division include an average attendance of 20,000 at home games played in a stadium with a minimum seating capacity of 30,000.

That proposal would create havoc and "divisional clutter" in the NCAA, according to association President Jim Frank.

In a counter-proposal, the NCAA is seeking to toughen the criteria for membership in Division I.

The maintfeature of the NCAA proposal is elimination of an option which allowed a school which sponsored 12 or more varsity sports to join Division I. The NCAA proposal would allow a school, which does not meet attendance requirements, to join Division I if it plays in at least a six-member conference where half the teams meet the Division I standards.

IN ADDITION, the Big Eight conference is sponsoring a proposal which would allow schools to join Division I if they played before an average of 17,000 fans in 30,000-seat stadium.

Frank said the NCAA proposal would cut Division I-A to 90 or 95 schools while the CFA proposal would reduce Division I-A to 75 or 80 schools. The Big Eight proposal would leave 80 or 85 schools in Division I-A, he said.

In companion resolutions, delegates will vote on resolutions regarding policy in television contract negotiations.

The resolutions generally allow each division to set negotiating policy for its own television contract while seeking "greater flexibility" in guaranteed appearances and revenue from the networks.

The proposals from the NCAA, the CFA and the Big Eight are essentially the same and one will probably be approved, Frank said.

DELEGATES WILL not consider a "property rights" statement unless Frank is overruled by a two-thirds vote. The resolution states the NCAA does not have "the right to dispose of or restrict the disposition ... of any form of property right of a member institution."

Frank said he will not allow consideration of the statement because it does not specifically deal with reorganization.

The CFA contract led to threats of sanctions against CFA members from the NCAA and counter-threats of withdrawal from the NCAA. A lawsuit filed by Oklahoma and the University of Georgia is pending in federal court in Oklahoma City.

Even so, Frank sought to minimize the conflict at a media briefing before delegates arrived.

"When the first shots were fired, there was a lot of emotionalism and extremism," he said. "I believe (the NCAA proposal) is a modest proposal, it addresses the concerns expressed by CFA members, and it addresses the concerns of other schools.

"I'm optimistic about our proposal, but I think there is still a lot of heat out there."

The Midland High Bulldogs put their five-game winning streak and 6-1 record on the line today as they open play in the three-day Odessa Invitational basketball tournament against Amarillo Tascosa in a 4:40 p.m. game at the Odessa High gym.

The Bulldogs will be looking for their second tournament title this year after winning the Tall City Invitational last weekend with a victory over the Midland Lee Rebels in the finals.

Preston Robertson is leading the Bulldog scoring attack this year with a 21.4 point per game average while Don Sharnowski is hitting at a 14.7 per game clip and Raymond Parker at 12.7.

The Midland Lee Rebels will take the week off from tournament action, but will host Lubbock Coronado at 8 p.m. Friday at the Lee gym in a single game. The Rebels are on a two-game losing streak after losses to MHS and Snyder, but the Rebs are playing good basketball and appear to be a much improved club over a year ago.

Alvin Dunson is averaging 15.8 points per outing for the Rebels while Andre Van Buren has a 13.8 average and Randy Pepper, an all-tournament choice who was overlooked last weekend, has a 12.3 average after a 22-point performance against Snyder.

The Midland High and Lee girls are both 3-2 on the season and open the Amarillo Invitational tournament today in Amarillo. First round opponents were not known. The Lee fems lost to Hobbs Tuesday in their last outing while MHS lost to Andrews Monday in their last outing.

Missy Larremore leads the MHS girls with a 8.2 points per game while Shelia Christian is at 8.0 per game. Yshun King paces Lee with 17.8 per game and Shun Harris has a 12.3 average.

College Basketball Roundup

Sampson watches Virginia win 82-50, Breuer paces Minnesota to victory

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

While one of the nation's biggest and best college basketball centers was unable to play for his Top 10 team, another was putting on a show for his.

All-American pivotman Ralph Sampson sat on the bench with a broken finger and watched his fifth-ranked teammates rout Randolph-Macon 82-50. Minnesota's Randy Breuer was very much in action Wednesday night, though, scoring a career-high 31 points as the 10th-ranked Gophers trimmed Dayton 90-74.

The only other ranked team in action was No. 20 Georgetown, which pounded Morgan State 81-53.

"When you got a 7-foot-3 guy, you just get the ball to the big fella and let him do his thing," Minnesota guard Trent Tucker said of Breuer. "When he gets inside, you can't stop him."

Dayton Coach Don Donoher concurred.

"The guy was too much for us," Donoher said of Breuer. "There are not many centers better than he was tonight."

"This was my best offensive game ever," said Breuer. "I've got to work on being more of a power player."

Breuer said he "a bit keyed up" because he was facing Dayton's highly regarded 6-10 center Mike Kanieski.

"I figured I had to come out after him," said Breuer. "And it worked out."

Top Ten

With Sampson out of the lineup, Virginia Coach Terry Holland got a chance to look at some of his other players. He liked most of what he saw as the Cavaliers used 12 men in romping over Randolph-Macon.

"It was not a pretty game for us but we did get a chance to look at a lot of combinations and move some people around," said Holland. At one point in the first half, we did go with five new guys because we did not think the guys we had out there were doing the job they should have been doing."

Sampson, the 7-4 junior center, missed a game for the first time in his college career. But Kenton Edelin, a sophomore walk-on, finished with 16 points to lead the Cavaliers, 4-0, who held Randolph-Macon to just 43.9 percent field goal percentage.

Second Ten

Prize freshman Pat Ewing scored 21 points in 17 minutes for Georgetown, with fellow rookies Anthony Jones and Bill Martin combining with Ewing for 43 of the Hoyas' 50 points in the second half. Ewing had a five-inch advantage on the tallest Morgan State player and used that edge to score his team's first six points and block two shots as Georgetown moved to a 12-1 lead.

In addition to Virginia, five other Atlantic Coast Conference teams played and won. Clemson romped over Austin Peay 102-53 as Clarke Bynum had 18 points and eight assists. Duke topped LaSalle 61-55 as Allen Williams scored 20 points — 16 more than he got in Duke's opening loss to Vanderbilt. Wake Forest rolled over Rollins 73-47 as four Demon Deacons scored in double figures. North Carolina State hit 61 percent of its shots and Chuck Nevitt blocked seven shots as the Wolfpack beat St. Francis, Pa., 89-56. Maryland scored the last eight points of the game to whip Long Island University 87-79.

In the East, Boston College knocked off Stonehill 83-67 as John Bagley hit for 21 points; St. Joseph's, Pa., rode Rony Costner's 18 points and 10 rebounds to a 76-53 rout of Rider; freshman Chip Watkins' layup with 1:15 to go gave Pitt a 58-56 victory over upset-minded Davis & Elkins; Marc Upshaw and Horace Owens each scored 27 points to pace Rhode Island over Brown 95-89; Harvard opened the Ivy League season with an 80-64 triumph over Dartmouth, Connecticut beat New Hampshire 87-68 and Mike Edelman's 18 points led Penn State over Indiana State 60-50.

Down south, Mississippi took Tennessee Tech 58-34 as forward Eric Laird and guard Carlos Clark each scored 16 points, almost equaling the total output for the losers.

Marquette topped Ohio 49-45, recording its lowest score since 1973. Ohio State didn't miss star forward Clark Kellogg, who played only eight minutes due to a facial injury, in beating Kent State 74-54 as Tony Campbell scored 18 points. Michigan State outlasted Detroit 65-62 in overtime.

In the Southwest, Oklahoma State beat cross-state rival Oral Roberts 77-75 behind late free throws by Leroy Combs and Eddie Hannon.

Out West, Terry Long scored nine of his 24 points in the second overtime to boost Lamar over Utah 66-58. Ken Owens had 29 points, including 15 of 15 free throws, as Idaho stomped Washington 86-61 in Seattle.

Estes scores 1,000th as Iowa State beats SMU

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Forward Robert Estes poured in 20 points to become Iowa State's ninth player to break 1,000 career points as he paced the Cyclones to an 80-70 home opening victery over Southern Methodist University Wednesday.

Estes, a senior from Liberty, Mo., entered the game with 989 points, and his free throw with two minutes 30 seconds to play in the opening period moved him ahead of Al Koch into the No. 9 spot in the Cyclone record book.

The Mustangs had led early in the game at 4-0 and 8-6, but a bucket by freshman Barry Stevens at the 14:23 mark put Iowa State ahead for good at 11-10.

The Cyclones behind Estes and Freshman Paul Beene, who wound up with 19 points, helped Iowa State to 44-32 halftime lead.

But the stubborn Mustangs came back to within four points, 50-46, less than five minutes into the second half.

Barbary, aoudad legal in January

Looking for a place to hunt the elusive barbary or aoudad sheep? Once again, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department will hold a public hunt for aoudad sheep and feral goats at Caprock Canyon State Park in Briscoe County Jan. 2-16.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission, meeting in Austin Nov. 5, authorized the 14-day hunt which will be conducted similarly to the hunt held last year.

The hunts will be conducted to provde recreation and help control the numbers of the introduced sheep and feral goats which compete with native mule deer herds at the park. Staff members told the commission the hunt will have minimum impact on park activities as visitation during January is very limited.

Hunters will be selected by public drawing at 10 a.m. Dec. 7. Applications for the hunts must be received by 5 p.m. Dec. 3. Application forms may be obtained by writing the Parks Operations Brance, Parks and Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas 78744.

A fee of $350 will be charged each hunter for the two-day hunts, which begin at noon on the firsr dayand end at noon on the third day.

DUCKS PASS TESTS: Laboratory examination of 100 wild ducks collected in the Texas Panhandle revealed no residues of the pesticide Endrin, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials.

Discovery of Endrin residues in waterfowl and other wildlife in Eastern Montana had cuased alarm about potential health hazards from eating affected birds.

Bill Brownlee, the deparment's director of migratory bird programs, siad the collected birds had no detectable amounts of Endrin in their bodies. "We also have collected 100 birds from the eastern part of the state for analysis, but the results are not yet available," Brownlee said. "However, we will continue to collect birds throughout the season."

The West Texas birds, which included pintails, wigeons and teal, were exaimed at the Texas Tech University School of Medicine Pesticide Laboratory in San enito.

Brownlee said, however, that hunters concerned about pesticide residues in waterfowl should skin the birds instead of picking them since Endrin concentrates primarily in body fat and fatty tissues. Also, drppings and internal organs of the birds should not be utilized when cooking.

DEER DO SEE COLORS: Deer hunters, most of them, that is, believe that deer are completely color blind. But we have just learned from John Weiss, quite the authority as it relates to deet, that this is not true.

How deer see and how they interpret what they see long has been the bais for heated arguments in hunting camps. Are tree stands effective because deer don't expect danger from above? Are deer inactive on moonless nights because they can't see in pitch darkness.

Some of these questions concern the colors of the garments that hunters wear or should wear, especially the proven safety color known as hunter's orange. In addition to making hunters more visible to each other, does this safety color make them more noticeable to the deer?

Weiss says the evidence that deer have color perception is abundant and that he, for one, believes that deer do see color as it comes in its numerous shades.

MORE ABOUT DEER: The term "Old" deer is not really meaningful term for those older than 7½ years. Deer have been know to live more than 20 years in a semi-wild state or where fed in pens or kept as pets. Those longevity records indicate that deer are capable of living that long; in the widl, however, it is certain that few reach such ages.

It might be expected that sexual vigor ad reproductivity capacity decline with ge as they do, for example, in humans. In deer, however, production is at a high level during the years considered to be old age. Some studies have shown deer more than 7½ years of age to have just as many fawns as the prime adult age classes.

Spurs hand Philadelphia second loss

By Associated Press

Beating the Philadelphia 76ers is easy as 1-2-3-4-5.

San Antonio Spurs Coach Stan Albeck formulated a five-point game plan Wednesday night to hand the 76ers only their second loss in 16 National Basketball Association games this season. His team carried the plan out successfully as the Spurs won 106-101.

"Our game plan was not to get into a running match with the 76ers, which is one of the best running teams in the league," said Albeck.

"Two, we felt we could control the tempo and rhythm of the game. Three, we exercised great patience on shot selection. Four, we didn't want to make the quick shot. Five, we wanted to outrebound the 76ers," which they did, 56-46.

ALBECK COULD have added a sixth item to his wish list...that high-scoring guards George Gervin and Ron Brewer have a hot game. They came through with 31 and 27 points, respectively, to offset the 38 scored by Julius Erving.

The Philadelphia-San Antonio game, at the Spectrum, the score was tied 98-98 going into the final minute. With 51 seconds remaining, Bobby Jones fouled Dave Corzine, who hit two free throws for a two-point San Antonio lead.

Celtics 115, Pistons 114

Larry Bird's off-balance 20-footer with two seconds left lifted Boston over Detroit after Phil Hubbard had given the Pistons a 114-113 lead with 11 seconds to go.

Bird, who led the Celtics with 25 points, batted away a desperation pass to Terry Tyler as time ran out.

John Long led Detroit with 30 points, including a club record of 16 in the first period.

Sonics 104, Lakers 96

Seattle beat Los Angeles for the first time in 11 games dating back to April 22, 1980 as Jack Sikma scored 27 points and pulled down 14 rebounds.

Sikma hit two baseline jumpers midway through the fourth quarter after the Lakers had pulled to within three points of the Sonics at 90-87. Los Angeles, which was paced by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 30 points, never got closer than five the rest of the way.

Trail Blazers 112, Kings 107

Jim Paxson scored 26 points and Calvin Natt 23 to lead Portland over Kansas City and push the Blazers into first place in the Pacific Division.

Portland, 12-4, wiped out a three-point halftime deficit by hitting 14 of its first 18 shots in the third period to take a 15-point lead. But the Kings fought back to tie the game 98-98 before a free throw by Mychal Thompson with 3:11 left put the Trail Blazers ahead to stay.

Nets 125, Cavaliers 106

Ray Williams scored 27 points, including 13 in the third quarter when New Jersey took control of the game with a 35-23 run, and Cleveland lost its seventh game in a row.

Cavs guard Bobby Wilkerson was knocked unconscious in the third quarter when he fell on his head after being fouled. He regained consciousness at a hospital, but was kept there overnight for observation.

Jazz 114, Mavericks 103

Adrian Dantley scored 36 points, including 14 in the fourth quarter, to help Utah snap a three-game losing streak by beating Dallas.

The Jazz overcame a 63-52 deficit with 9:43 left in the third quarter by outscoring the Mavericks 28-13 the rest of the period.

Warriors 120, Bulls 119

Lloyd Free scored Golden State's last four points, including a 15-foot basket at the buzzer that beat Chicago.

Free, who scored 27 points, hit two free throws with 16 seconds to go to give the Warriors a 118-117 lead, but Ronnie Lester's bucket put the Bulls back ahead with six seconds left. Then Free grabbed a rebound and put in the winning basket while still in the air.

Hapless Whalers, Rockies end slumps with victories over Toronto, Chicago

By Associated Press

The road hasn't been kind to the Hartford Whalers this season. For the Colorado Rockies, it hasn't mattered where they've played — things haven't turned out right at home or away.

On Wednesday, those struggling National Hockey League franchises changed all that — at least for one night. The Whalers, winless away from Hartford so far in 1981-82, belted the Maple Leafs 5-3 in Toronto. And Colorado, which hadn't won since Nov. 7 — going 0-9-2 — edged Chicago at home 3-2.

Whalers 5, Maple Leafs 3

The Whalers, who were 0-8-3 on the road this season, used a goal and two assists by 18-year-old rookie center Ron Francis to top Toronto.

"In a lot of games on the road, we're not mentally prepared at the star and as a result, we find ourselves down two or three goals," said Francis, the Whalers' No. 1 draft pick last spring. "It's pretty hard to win a game if you're down that quickly.

Rockies 3, Black Hawks 2

On Monday, the Rockies changed coaches. Wednesday, they changed direction.

Brent Ashton tipped in a pass from Rob Ramage — who also assisted on Steve Tambellini's goal in the second period — with 3:33 left to give the Rockies their first win under Marshall Johnston, the team's former assistant general manager who switched jobs with Coach Bert Marshall on Monday. Merlin Malinowski had the other Colorado goal while the Rockies were shorthanded, and Denis Savard and Grant Mulvey connected for the Hawks.

Rangers 4, Kings 3

Third-period goals by Dean Talafous and Dave Maloney broke a 2-2 deadlock and allowed New York to break a five-game winless string. The Rangers had blown a 2-0 lead.

Talafous knocked in a rebound one minute into the final period, then Maloney gave the Rangers a 4-2 lead when he deflected a drive by Ed Hospodar past Kings' goalie Mario Lessard at 7:26.

Canucks 5, North Stars 0

Glen Hanlon stopped all 18 shots by the listless North Stars for Vancouver's first shutout of the season. It was also the first time this season that Minnesota hasn't scored.

Centers Ivan Boldirev and Thomas Gradin each scored twice and Stan Smyl had three assists for Vancouver.

Nordiques 9, Oilers 8

What else would you expect from the two most potent teams in the NHL?

Dale Hunter had three goals for Quebec, which is 5-1-4 over its last 10 games, while Anton Stastny had a goal and four assists, brother Peter scored twice and set up two goals and brother Marian also scored. Pierre Aubry notched a pair of goals — including the winner into an empty net with 1:03 left — for the Nordiques as well, while Edmonton was paced by Mark Messier's three goals and Dave Lumley's tally on a penalty shot.

Capitals 9, Flames 3

The Caps gave rookie goalie Al Jensen plenty of support and Jensen registered his first NHL victory. Mike Gartner had three goals and two assists, Bobby Carpenter chipped in a goal and three assists, and rookie Torrie Robertson got his first two NHL goals.

The Flames, who scored on their first two shots on Jensen, were led by Dennis Cyr's two tallies.

Penguins 4, Jets 2

Pittsburgh won its fourth straight — the red-hot Penguins are 9-1-2 in the last dozen games — with goalie Michel Dion stopping 31 shots.

"Michel Dion has been our mainstay," said Penguins defenseman Randy Carlyle. "He makes the big save when we need it. He's been covering all our mistakes."

"We got the win, and that's what counts," said Dion. "We have a couple good practice days ahead of us and then on the weekend we have to play the way we can. We haven't done that."

UCLA hit with probation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA will be placed on probation for two years by the NCAA, but the only practical effect will be to keep the Bruins out of the national collegiate basketball championships next spring, the Los Angeles Times reported in Thursday's editions.

After a lengthy investigation of UCLA athletics, the NCAA gave the school its findings earlier this week. But, according to NCAA policy, neither the school nor the NCAA will reveal what the probe concerned or what possible penalties were involved. UCLA was allowed 15 days to decide whether to accept or appeal the findings.

Quoting "influential alumni and Bruin boosters," the Times said none of UCLA's teams has been banned from appearing on television or in bowl games, and the basketball team would be allowed to accept a bid from the National Invitation Tournament next spring, and that UCLA would be eligible to play in the NCAA basketball tournament during the second year of the probation.

TWO SPECIFIC violations the NCAA reportedly found were former basketball Coach Larry Brown buying dinners for players and a Bruin alumnus subsidizing an apartment for forward Tony Anderson.

Anderson, a senior, was suspended last week, with UCLA calling it a private matter.

The report last season that four UCLA basketball players had received a discount on new cars from a team booster may have also been a factor in the NCAA's findings, according to the report.

The Bruin basketball team is currently ranked No. 8, with a 1-1 record, under new Coach Larry Farmer.

The NCAA apparently found no violations in the UCLA football program. The 19th-ranked Bruins, scheduled to play Michigan in the Bluebonnet Bowl on Dec. 31, had been placed on one-year's probation by the Pacific-10 the previous year. That sanction was imposed because it was found that some players on the 1977 squad had illegal transcripts.

Plot to overthrow Qaddafi failed

By BERNARD KAPLAN
Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — Saudi Arabian money financed a French plan to overthrow Libyan leader Muammer Qaddafi in 1980, but the plot collapsed when an army uprising in Benghazi sputtered out.

French agents apparently were led astray by Libyan contacts about the extent of the army's disaffection. The Libyan "dissidents" actually may have been double agents, actually working for Qaddafi.

If so, they — or he — walked away from the affair, having pocketed a large sum of Saudi cash believed to be at least $75 million.

Reliable intelligence sources claim that is the broad truth behind a spate of recent, frequently extravagant rumors of Western plots to get rid of the maverick Libyan strong man, either by revolution or assassination.

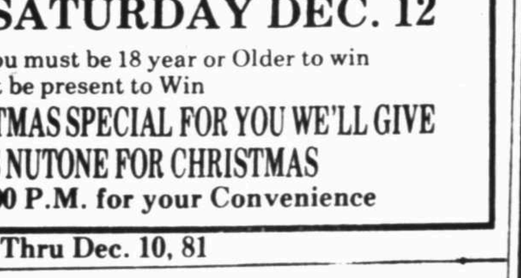

The sources said that the anti-Qaddafi scheme launched by former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's government was much less elaborate than reports suggested. Neither the CIA, Egypt nor Israel was involved, though it seems likely U.S. officials "at a working level" had an inkling of it.

France was spurred into action after a handful of pro-Qaddafi Tunisians attempted to provoke a coup against President Habib Bourguiba by seizing the Tunisian border town of Gafsa in January 1980. They were routed, but the incident convinced Giscard that Qaddafi, already a threat to France's friends elsewhere in Africa, had to be stopped.

The French president reportedly was won over to the idea of backing a military rebellion by the chief of his intelligence services, Alexander de Marenches, whose agents long had relations with Libyan exiles in Paris and Rome.

Value-added tax could rescue Reagan plan

By ROBERT RENO
Newsday

NEW YORK — The value-added tax, first proposed in the United States in 1921 and briefly toyed with by the Nixon administration in the mid-1970s, is being talked about increasingly as a means of rescuing the Reagan administration from the deficits that are threatening to overwhelm it.

The tax enjoys wide support in the economic community as a revenue-raising, deficit-fighting concept. But many economists express grave doubts about whether it can ever be sold to Congress or the American taxpayers as a sane alternative to excessive dependence on the individual income tax.

A VAT could solve the administratio's deficit problem quickly. It is estimated that a 10 percent value-added tax, which is comparable to rates paid in many other nations, would raise at least $140 billion a year. This would be enough money to eliminate the federal deficit and at the same time provide additional cuts in personal income taxes on top of those already approved.

The VAT is simply a percentage tax levied at each stage of production on the increased value of goods and services. Its proponents find it attractive because it taxes consumption, rather than income, thereby providing incentive for thrift and investment.

"It's a pretty good idea," says Washington econometric forecaster Michael Evans.

The VAT has been widely and successfully used in Europe. France, for example, raises about two-fifths of its general revenues through the tax.

Mexico imposed it in 1980.

BUT THE value-added tax is alien to the U.S. tax system. Whenever it has been proposed seriously, it generally has been greeted with the usual public scorn and suspicion reserved for all taxes and for new and exotic taxes in particular.

The cause of the value-added tax lost one of its leading advocates in the 1980 elections when Rep. Al Ullman, (D-Ore.), chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, went down to defeat. Many of Ullman's admirers have blamed his unexpected loss on his public support for the tax and claim that as a result it has become an issue that no one will touch.

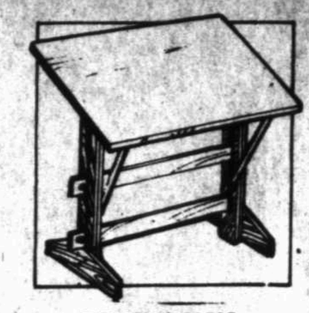

"It was responsible for Ullman's defeat," Evans said. "People just don't want another sales tax. I don't think it will ever be considered. (Reagan budget direction) Dave Stockman, who is 34 and acted like he was 16, had found out that it is a lot easier to cut taxes than to cut spending. Well, raising taxes is even harder."

Edward Yardeni, chief economist at E.F. Hutton, a brokerage, concedes the merits of VAT but argues that a simpler national sales tax would be better.

"To go from our type of tax structure to a VAT would be a lot more complicated than a national sales tax," he said. "If you put on a VAT, you're essentially taxing work effort that goes into producing goods.

Curacao is great place to visit

By ESTHER GWYNNE
Copley News Service

Choosing a favorite island in the Caribbean is almost as difficult as choosing a mate. It's all a matter of taste.

If you want palm trees and lush tropical greenery, don't choose Curacao, or its smaller sister islands of Aruba and Bonaire.

Where other islands have palm trees, they have cactus — giant ones rising 20 feet or more. Their landscapes tend to be as barren and brown as Arizona — until you glimpse the turquoise sea round the next bend in the road.

Just a few miles off the coast of Venezuela, these are true desert isles. An industrious polyglot population has transformed them into inviting places to live, do business and vacation.

The climate is temperate, rainfall is scarce, hurricanes are almost unknown. Trade winds blow steadily, keeping the air unpolluted and almost completely insect- and pollen-free.

The residents, principally a blend of Dutch, Spanish, African, French and English, see tourism as an important part of their economy, and tourists are made to feel exceedingly welcome.

They say they are content with their status as autonomous members of the Kingdom of the Netherlands. The movement for independence that has brought unrest to other Caribbean islands has not touched here.

THE CURRENT CONTROVERSIAL topics are interisland rivalry over spending of government funds and the question of teaching Papiamento (a native dialect) in the public schools instead of Dutch.

Cruise ship passengers, visitors from the U.S. East Coast and some South Americans make up the bulk of tourists now.

It is hoped new air service by Eastern Airlines connecting, via Miami, both Curacao and Aruba with Midwest and West Coast cities (and including them in low-fare packages) will change this.

Curacao, with its deep-water harbor, huge oil refinery and freeport shopping area, is the best known of the three islands.

It has been under Dutch rule since 1643 and has known pirate raids, slave trading and Indian wars.

The heart of Curacao is Willemstad, capital of the Netherlands Antilles. Its neat, pastel row of business houses could have been lifted right out of Amsterdam.

But along the waterfront are the floating markets where displays of mangoes, papayas, bananas, oranges and melons remind you this is the tropical Caribbean.

Here, shaded by the sails of their boats, Venezuelan families sell their produce to Curacaoans in a tradition established in the early 1800s.

They live aboard their boats, staying 10 to 15 days before returning home for fresh supplies. It is a tradition that has passed through generations of Venezuelan families.

Curacao's harbor, with its spectacular Queen Juliana bridge (at 195 feet it is the highest in the Caribbean), can accommodate the largest of ships. But small or large, all must observe the red and green traffic lights hanging high over the water.

An old pontoon bridge for pedestrians opens for passing vessels, sending everyone scurrying.

Although inflation has hit the Netherlands Antilles as it has everywhere, prices are still below those of the rest of the Caribbean. Bargains are still to be found in the Curacao stores, where not only is English spoken, but U.S. money is accepted.

Food in Curacao is as cosmopolitan as its population. Everyone tries at least a sip of its native liqueur, curacao, which is made from green oranges. The locally brewed Amstel beer is also popular. It is made from the island's only source of water — distilled sea water.

Fish, fresh from local waters, served with cornbread is the traditional Curacao meal. But restaurant cuisine is as varied as the culture it represents.

Congress squabble threatens sewer projects

By VIC OSTROWIDZDI
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — A House-Senate squabble over the proper federal role in the government's multi-billion dollar sewer program threatens to disrupt thousands of sewer projects that are being planned or are under construction across the United States.

At issue is disagreement over how much money should be spent through the 1980s and the kind of projects that should be financed.

The desperate situation is further exacerbated by the Reagan administration's refusal to include any funds in the budget for the grants until both houses agree on a joint venture that is acceptable to the White House.

Both bills meet the administration's $2.4 billion spending cap for fiscal 1982, but the House plan envisions spending about $25 billion more during the next 10 years than the target set by the White House and the Senate.

Unless the impasse is broken many communities are likely to be left with abandoned, half-finished treatment plants when the current funding runs out -- or even if financing is delayed or reduced.

BECAUSE OF the congressional dispute, more than 40 states have run out of money to continue financing sewer projects in 1982.

Texas, for example, says it needs $212 million to finish eight major projects under construction.

Adding to the problem is the fact that nationwide, some 30 communities are under court orders to clean up sewer plant discharge, including the financially strapped New York City and Detroit.

A Senate staff member says many on Capitol Hill believe that unless Congress acts quickly, the administration will seize the opportunity to ease its worsening budget problems by simply eliminating the program.

"If the White House has any excuse to chop it off, the president may decide to take advantage of it," the staffer said in an interview.

Utah Gov. Scott Matheson, chairman of the National Governors' Association committee on water policy, said recently he has seen "some evidence of footdragging" by the administration.

The problems inherent in the dispute are likely to be considered at a meeting of the Presidential Advisory Committee on Federalism when it discusses the nation's land and water policies here today.

Builder labels Penthouse article 'fiction'

By RIVIAN TAYLOR
Copley News Service

COMPTON, Calif. — The president of Rancho La Costa Inc. yesterday (Tuesday) labeled as "false," "ridiculous on its face," and "pure fiction" a 1975 magazine article that linked the luxurious resort community to organized crime.

Merv Adelson, testifying as the first witness in La Costa's $490 million libel lawsuit against Penthouse Magazine, denied statements in the article that La Costa has a criminal clientele or serves as a secret rendezvous for either gangsters or "greedy manipulators" who have planned "illicit financial operations."

"There is no cover to be taken off at La Costa; La Costa is completely open," Adelson said. "There are no sordid goings-on that I'm aware of."

ADELSON, WHO was on the witness stand for most of the day, actually did relatively little testifying as a good portion of court time was taken up with attorneys for both sides arguing legal points before Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge Kenneth Gale.

In one exchange, outside the presence of the jury, Gale reversed a ruling he made on Monday that dismissed four corporate subsidiaries of La Costa as plaintiffs in the suit.

Gale had ruled the four subsidiaries — La Costa Land Co., La Costa Management Co., La Costa Community Antenna Systems Inc. and Paradise Homes — be dropped from the suit after La Costa attorney Louis Nizer failed in his opening statement to show the article libeled the subsidiaries. Gale also instructed the attorneys not to mention his dismissal order to the press.

However, yesterday (Tuesday) morning, La Costa attorneys asked Gale to allow them to supplement their opening statement and correct "what is at most a technical oversight."

Gale agreed to reopen the opening statements and La Costa attorneys told the jury that the article was "aimed at and referred to the entire complex" called La Costa, including the four subsidiaries who suffered damage as a result of the article.

PENTHOUSE attorney Norman Roy Grutman replied that the article did not mention any of the subsidiaries, which he said were not defamed or damaged by the article.

Gale then said the four subsidiaries would remain as plaintiffs in the suit, along with Rancho La Costa Inc., Adelson and Irwin Molasky.

Adelson, who along with Molasky, Allard Roen and Morris "Moe" Dalitz, founded La Costa in the mid-1960s, said he felt "terrible," "mortified," "enraged," and "decimated" by the Penthouse article, which was titled "La Costa: The Hundred-Million-Dollar Resort with Criminal Clientele."

"It felt like a blow to me that La Costa would be connected to any kind of manipulations or illicit operations by anyone," Adelson said. The La Costa founder, who is also a co-founder of Lorimar Productions, which produces such television shows as "The Waltons" and "Dallas," denied that La Costa resisted investigations by official agencies or journalists. He said La Costa officials never resisted "any probing because we were never aware of any investigation or probing."

ADELSON ALSO said the authors of the Penthouse article never contacted him or anyone at La Costa to substantiate their article.

In tracing his career, Adelson, 52, said he first dealt with Roen and Dalitz in the mid-1950s when he and his construction business partner Molasky purchased lots surrounding the golf course at the Desert Inn in Las Vegas.

At the time, Dalitz, who was described by the U.S. Senate crime committee headed by the late Sen. Estes Kefauver in the 1950s as a longtime racketeer and associate of the late Lucky Luciano, owned the Desert Inn. Roen, who was Dalitz's partner in Nevada gambling investments and considered his protege, was convicted in a New York stock fraud scandal in the early 1960s.

Adelson said his and Molasky's first business venture with Dalitz and Roen resulted from Adelson's and Molasky's plans to expand the Sunrise Hospital in Las Vegas. Adelson said Dalitz and Roen joined a group of investors formed to expand the private hospital and the group received a $1 million loan from the Teamsters' pension fund to finance the expansion.

In 1961 the four men also jointly built the Stardust Country Club and golf course, Adelson testified.

ADELSON SAID the men first became aware of Rancho La Costa because his family, along with Molasky's and Roen's, spent their summers in northern San Diego County, where the resort is located, to escape the heat of Las Vegas. A realtor told Roen the 1,000-acre Meadowlark Ranch was available, and Adelson and Molasky checked out the property on horseback, Adelson testified.

"We thought it was gorgeous property; it looked at the ocean," Adelson said. "It was a good buy, but we were not sure we would develop it. As we looked at it, the idea of La Costa came to us."

Adelson said he, Molasky, Roen and Dalitz each put up $750,000 to purchase the ranch and other tracts.

They also obtained a loan from the Teamsters' pension fund at 8 or 8½ percent interest, which Adelson said was comparable to what other lenders were charging at the time.

As conditions for the loan, Adelson testified the Teamsters demanded an option to purchase 15 percent of the equity in La Costa for $15,000 and representation on the La Costa board of directors.

The CD for All Savers...From First National

Now, First National offers a program for "all savers" to enjoy savings with high interest yield plus a tax benefit. It's called the All Savers Certificate of Deposit.

Here's how it works: From now until December 31, 1982, you may invest as little as $500 in a First National All Savers CD for a maturity of one year. During that year, interest earned by the CD may be excluded from your taxable income up to a maximum $2,000 for couples filing joint tax returns, $1,000 for those filing separately. The current annual rate is 10.77%.

The interest rate on the CD will change every 4 weeks, but the rate in effect at the time you invest is fixed for the full one year term. Although the interest rate is not compounded, you may receive interest payments monthly, quarterly or upon maturity. If the CD principal is withdrawn prior to maturity, the tax exclusion is forfeited and there is substantial penalty. Deposits are insured by the FDIC.

Compare First National's All Savers Certificate to other investment alternatives, consider your tax plan, then visit one of our CD representatives in our main lobby.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, December 4, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Controversial financier Robert Vesco celebrates a birthday today. Also born on this date: the Chicago Cubs' rising young fastball reliever Lee Smith. You are happiest in a job where you have the opportunity to meet people. In fact, public contact is more important to you than money although you will earn plenty of that, too! Let your intuition guide you in the right direction. Use your flair for the dramatic to impress those who can help you achieve your goals. Romance is both lively and rewarding. Mate will draw closer to you as you become more attentive. Be a good listener.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your social life perks up as the weekend approaches. Go over bank statements before finalizing holiday travel plans. Your good humor enables you to get a lot of work done now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The financial outlook is brighter now and should improve even more. Older people work behind the scenes in your behalf. Do not burn the candle at both ends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): It would be foolish to give in to a strong desire to splurge. Emphasize quality when selecting Christmas gifts. Recognize the blessings you enjoy and show more affection towards loved ones.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Loved ones should be feeling more contented now. Financial pressures lessen. You find it easier to expand your business interests when some extra cash becomes available for your use.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Ambitions run high right now. Be sure you are on the right track before proceeding. You are inclined to make impulsive decisions. Think things through! Consult mate before taking action.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A good period for doing business with those you meet socially. An informal gathering leads to valuable contacts this evening. Accept new challenges. Your chances for success are excellent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Higher-ups will take special notice of your performance during the approaching holiday season. Pay close attention to detail. Go out of your way to help someone less fortunate than yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Unusual circumstances leave you unable to deliver on a promise. Explain the facts and you will be let off the hook. If looking for work, you should get the job you want.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Shake off the blues by spending time with someone who lifts your spirits and builds your self-confidence. Co-workers will be congenial. Financial affairs will improve.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A great day for Christmas shopping. Make a list. You find bargains where you least expect them. Accept party invitations. More money should be rolling in. Continue to control spending.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An excellent business day. You should feel quite pleased with yourself by the day's end. Do not take risks. Bypass a friend's "can't miss" investment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The financial picture continues to brighten. Mate is now more likely to compromise regarding Christmas plans. Singles will feel romantically inclined this evening.

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

Probably the greatest drama at the recent World Team Championship occurred in the last qualifying round. Great Britain and Argentina were vying for the one remaining berth in the semifinals, and when they reached the final board, Great Britain needed only to break even on that board to qualify.

No one could have asked for a more exciting board. In the closed room, the Argentinian East-West pair had sacrificed in five diamonds after the British reached five clubs. They were doubled and had gone down two tricks — 300 points to Britain.

In the open room, the Argentinians also reached five clubs with the North-South cards, and John Collings chose to double with the East cards. West led the ten of spades, and it was soon over. Declarer covered with the jack and East won the queen. He returned the king of clubs, taken in dummy with the ace.

Declarer came to his hand with the ace of hearts, cashed the ace of spades and ruffed a spade. A diamond ruff provided the entry for another spade ruff to set up the suit. Then came a diamond ruff, and dummy's established spade was led. Whether or not East ruffed, the high trump and the spade already in the bag were the only tricks the defenders could take.

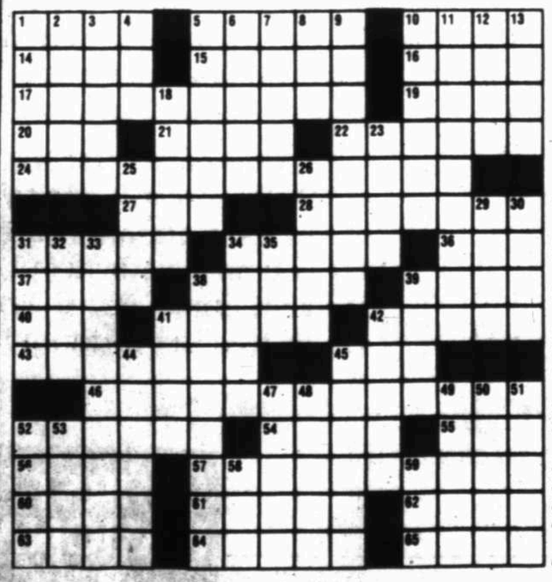

A trump lead would defeat the contract if the defenders are careful. Declarer can win, cross to the ace of hearts, ruff a diamond and lead a heart from dummy. East must play low. If he splits his honors, declarer can ruff, enter dummy with a diamond ruff and lead the jack of hearts. That pins West's ten and sets up the nine as a trick, with the ace of spades as the entry. That line was found by Dick Cummings of Australia.

So an errant opening lead allowed Argentina to earn a place in the semifinal instead of Britain, who had led for most of the tournament until falling off the pace in the last two days.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

'Funny Girl' tryouts set for next week

Tryouts for "Funny Girl" will be held Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Theatre II at Theatre Midland. The auditions are open to nonmembers as well as members of Theatre Midland.

"Funny Girl" will open MCT's 1982 season on Feb. 5 with performances slated through March 6. Rehearsals will begin Jan. 3.

The play is based on the life of one of vaudeville's greatest stars, Fanny Brice. It traces her meteoric rise to stardom and explores the effects of fame on her personal life. The musical, with music by Jule Styne and lyrics by Bob Merrill, propelled Barbra Streisand to stardom. It contains some of Styne's most popular songs, including "People," "Don't Rain on My Parade" and "If a Girl Isn't Pretty."

Nine principal roles are available including Miss Brice; Miss Brice's mother and her three card-shark co-horts; Nicky Arnstein, the gambler with whom Miss Brice falls in love; Flo Ziegfeld, the producer of the famed Ziegfeld Follies; Eddie Ryan, Miss Brice's song-and-dance-man friend; and Mr. Kennedy, the man who gives Miss Brice her first break. In addition, the show features a singing chorus of eight men and eight women as well as a dancing chorus of the same size.

All those auditioning for the production should be prepared to sing a song of their choice. An accompanist will be provided.

Perusal copies of the script may be signed out at the theater's box office, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Ted Strickland, MCT's assistant director, will be directing the production with choreography by Cherry Jones and musical direction by Darryl Knapp, director of music at First Christian Church, and Stan Engebretson, the choral director of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale.

For more information call the MCT business office at 682-2544.

"Bedroom Farce" is scheduled to run through Dec. 12.

Albee play at UTPB

ODESSA — Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Wolf" will be presented at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin's Coffeehouse at 8 p.m. Saturday and Dec. 11.

The production is being staged by the UTPB Drama Club. The play contains language which might be offensive to some. Due to the subject matter, it is not recommended for those under 16 years of age.

She hopes Welk to Broadway possible

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Don't look now, Lawrence Welk, but little Julie Miller (remember, Miss Champagne from Wenatchee?) is being championed as the-girl-most-likely should Playboy take Annie Fanny to Broadway.

THE SEXY BLONDE from central Washington dreamed of a career of "ah-one-and-ah-two-ing" when she won the Champagne title in 1974. Those dreams were dashed when Welk decreed she swung to a decidedly different beat.

Indeed she did, and today she sizzles as the singing-dancing star of the "Fabulous Follies," displaying a sexy style that is as unlike Welk as the Rolling Stones headlining a gospel singalong.

Critics see her as a rock Dolly Parton with the abandon of Bette Midler and the raw energy of Blondie's Deborah Harry. Her sexy kind of innocence and her striking beauty have people likening her to Playboy's raucous cartoon character. Miss Miller's manager, Greg Thompson, says Playboy has talked of taking Annie Fanny to Broadway and he believes his client is perfect for the lead.

Lawrence Welk to Annie Fanny? Is nothing sacred?

TAKING A BREATHER during a recent performance in Las Vegas — the latest stop on the Follies' agenda — Miss Miller retraced the checkered route she hopes is leading her to stardom.

She entered the Miss Champagne contest as a pert, prim 18-year-old fresh from Wenatchee (pop. 16,912). As the winner, she was told she would appear with Welk at the World's Fair in Spokane. She learned "appearing" meant handing Welk the key to the city, not performing.

"I was so upset," she recalls. "I remember his surprise when he learned I was supposed to sing on his show. He agreed to let me sing while we rode from the airport to the hotel. He must have liked it because he let me sing at the World's Fair show, then later on his show in Seattle."

ENTERTAINMENT

Six anxious months passed before she heard from Welk again. This time it was a plane ticket to Los Angeles for television tapings in October of 1974.

A REJUVENATED JULIE, 35 pounds lighter and with a more professional air, took Welk by surprise, she says. He balked when she tried to put a little swing into her number. He didn't want her to look "slick," but rather like a new discovery "just off the farm," she adds.

What one man makes of the new season

By DON FREEMAN
Copley News Service

On they come, the new shows in this scattered-start season, on their way to — to what? A treadmill to oblivion is what Fred Allen, the old comic, said television was. And he may have been thinking of some of the new entries.

AND AS FOR the place where most of series television emanates, meaning Hollywood, Fred Allen divested himself of a few opinions on that subject, too. Fred was asked once about the difference in time zones when you leave his beloved New York and he muttered: "When it's 7 o'clock in New York, it's 1937 in California!"

It's a season in which new dramatic programs outnumber the comedies, two to one. Law and order is back. The miniseries is dormant. Quality may be down but advertising revenue is way up. A 30-second network spot in prime time ranges between $45,000 and $150,000, an increase of 135 percent over 1972. The most expensive spot you can buy this season likely will be the Super Bowl at $135,000 for a 30-second message.

I DON'T know if this is the worst new season in the history of vertebrates. But sitting down to this assignment is, to borrow John Leonard's phrase in another context, like sitting down to a plate of congealed moose brains.

You watch "Lewis and Clark," the new NBC series with Gabe Kaplan as a New York guy who buys a rundown country-western joint in a rube town in Texas. You want desperately to laugh because Gabe Kaplan can be funny but the "jokes" make your gums ache.

I found myself mustering one mild giggle when Gabe gets on a horse for the first time, this man of the big-city streets, and he buckles up a seat belt on his saddle. A very mild chuckle. More of a dumb smirk, actually.

PERHAPS the most inexcusable waste of great talent in this Year of the Brat comes in NBC's "Gimme a Break" which gives us Nell Carter, a fine Broadway singing star from the Fats Waller show, "Ain't Misbehavin'." She's a housekeeper in this one, which is all wise-guy kids and insult jokes. And there is the kind of sexual innuendo in the jokes of the kids that makes you want to fumigate the place. If they are going to have kids in shows, why can't they let them be kids instead of half-pint Joan Riverses and George Carlins?

IN "MAGGIE," on ABC, there is a teen-age girl who, I swear, is the talking image of Eddie Haskell, the menace on the long ago "Leave It to Beaver." Erma Bombeck was the inspiration and executive producer for "Maggie," which means that the venture obviously held promise.

Kuwait Petroleum Corp. will acquire Santa Fe International

ALHAMBRA, Calif. (AP) — Sante Fe International Corp. shareholders have approved overwhelmingly the $2.5 billion acquisition of their company by Kuwait Petroleum Corp.

James Ukropina, a Santa Fe senior vice president, told a meeting of more than 300 stockholders at headquarters Tuesday that of the 35.7 million shares voted, 98 percent were cast in favor of the acquisition. About 73 percent of Santa Fe's 49 million outstanding shares were represented in the vote.

Santa Fe is a major worldwide supplier of drilling equipment and it has oil reserves in the United States and the North Sea. It is not connected with the Sante Fe railroad.

The acquisition by the government-owned Kuwait oil firm has come under fire from a number of quarters, including congressional critics who fear the takeover poses a threat to national security. Others claim foreign investors reaped unfair stock profits through advance knowledge of the offer. However, no one has been accused of insider trading.

The controversial acquisition was defended by Santa Fe Chairman E.L. Shannon, who said it would benefit the American economy by bringing in capital for reinvestment.

Shannon also disclosed for the first time that Kuwait Petroleum plans to spend $1 billion on oil and gas exploration within the United States

One shareholder, mentioning the recent wave of oil company mergers, asked Shannon if the $51-a-share offer was the best price the company could have received. Santa Fe stock was selling for about $24 a share when the Kuwait offer was made and the question provoked widespread laughter. After waiting for the laughter to subside, Shannon responded "yes."

Oil company ordered to refund $25 million

ASHLAND, Ky. (AP) — Ashland Oil Inc. says it will comply to a federal order to refund $25 million to distributors of gasoline, home heating oil and aviation fuel who allegedly were overcharged in 1973 and 1980.

The decree was agreed to Nov. 12 and ended years of litigation between Ashland and the Energy Department, Ashland said Monday. But the oil company did not acknowledge any illegal actions.

Just how the money will be paid was kept secret as part of the deal to protect Ashland from its competitors.

Gasoline distributors in 25 states will get $18.9 million in cash and are to lower their prices so consumers will get the benefits, according to the decree. Heating-oil customers are to receive credits toward future purchases.

Ashland spokesman Jim Butler checks to gasoline distributors had been mailed and heating-oil customers would receive notification of the credit due them in the next week or so.

PIONEER.

The Board of Directors of the Company has announced a three cent increase in Pioneer's quarterly dividend, bringing the dividend to 25¢ per share. This results in an indicated annual rate of $1.00 per share. Dividends will be paid December 2, 1981, to stockholders of record on November 19, 1981.

HL&P plans to construct $2 billion generating plant

MALAKOFF, Texas (AP) — Houston Lighting & Power Co. will reduce its dependency on natural gas by using lignite to power a $2 billion generating plant in East Texas, company officials say.

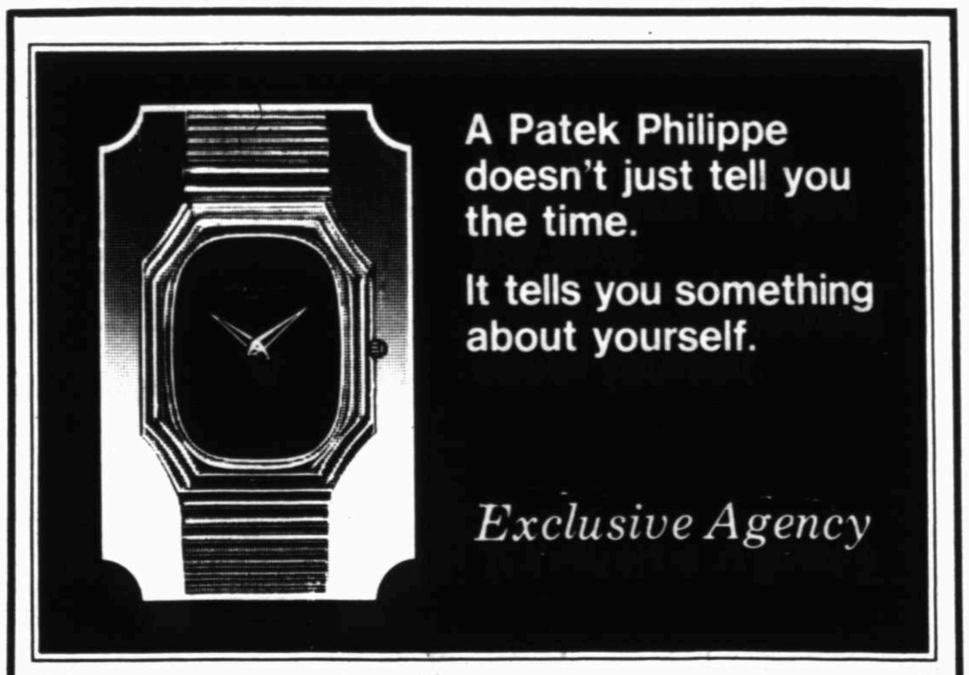

The plant, to be built three miles southwest of Malakoff at a site 200 miles north of Houston, will be run solely on the fossil fuel, said HL&P President Don Johnson.

Lignite for the plant will come from nearby lignite reserves jointly owned by the North American Coal Corp. and Getty Oil Co., he said.

Construction on the first of two 690,000-kilowatt generating units in Henderson County is set for late 1983, with completion by 1989. The second unit is scheduled to be finished the following year.

The plant will provide a yearly energy equivalent of 13 million barrels of oil or 82 billion cubic feet of natural gas, the company said in its announcement Tuesday at a meeting of 150 civic leaders here.

C.R. Miercort, president of the Southwest Division of North American, said his company will start building its production facilities in 1985. When both generating units are in operation, North American will supply the plant with about six million tons of lignite a year, he said.

Japanese prisons: Why do they work better?

TOKYO (AP) — One of the first sights a visitor sees upon entering Fuchu Prison, Japan's largest penal institution, is 150 convicts hammering away at parts for wind-up bunny rabbits. Only two guards are present, unarmed. Except for the noise of tools, the shop is silent. No one looks up from his work.

Among the 2,400 inmates in Fuchu, located in a western Tokyo suburb, are some of Japan's most hardened criminals. Three-fourths are repeat offenders, and more than half have ties to the nation's organized underworld.

Japan's national population has risen in the past decade from 111 million to 117 million, but the prison population has remained at about 50,000 — 82 percent of capacity. There is a guard for every five inmates, and government auditors have even complained that prisons are overstaffed.

JAPANESE prisons, like those elsewhere, are uncomfortable and bleak, but — owing mainly to a tough, work-oriented schedule and the Japanese respect for authority which extends even to criminal society — the system works far better than those of most countries.

"U.S. prisons are very strong on outside surveillance, with high walls and gunposts, but there is not enough control over the prisoners. In Japan, the situation is the opposite," read an unofficial report to the Justice Ministry, which oversees the penal system.

A Fuchu prisoner's day begins at 6:50 a.m., with a bow and greeting to the guards, bed-making and sweeping, and breakfast of rice, "miso" beanpaste soup and pickles. Then, each man heads for his job — eight hours on weekdays, four on Saturdays — making toys or furniture, working in the laundry or print shop.

Hanging from the ceilings of the workshops are large signs reading, "Don't get beat by the heat; do your best."

LUNCH AND dinner are plain but nutritious and everyone marches several times a week for 30 minutes of exercise. By 5:30 p.m. the prisoners are back in their tatami-floored cells, where they stay until lights out at 9 p.m., unless they're allowed out for regulated club activities.

About 1,900 of Fuchu's convicts live in groups of nine, in 32-square-yard rooms equipped with small black and white television sets. They watch programs approved by prison officials.

At any one time, the other 500 are assigned to one-man, 7.6-square-yard cells, each with a commode and bookcase.

Reasons for isolation vary widely. The 10 percent of prisoners who are considered too incorrigible or antisocial to work are kept alone and never allowed out. For others, who have shown good behavior, the privacy — and some limited freedom to come and go — is considered a privilege. For those nearing release, it's a way of weaning them away from the group environment, a sort of halfway house behind bars.

> "U.S. prisons are very strong on outside surveillance, with high walls and gunposts, but there is not enough control over the prisoners. In Japan, the situation is the opposite."

Living conditions are spartan and regulations strict. Except for some prisons in northern Japan, most have no heat in winter and summer cooling is confined to one small hand fan for each inmate.

Although stringent controls play a part, there are other reasons for the "excellent" security situation at Fuchu, warden Kiyoshi Taru says.

Prison officials say security at Fuchu is tighter than at any of Japan's 73 other prisons. Yet there are no barbed wire fences, no searchlights, no guns. There also are no escapes, no major violence, no drug use, and it has been a decade since a guard was seriously attacked.

There also is a "relationship of trust" between the guards and the prisoners, Taru says. "This is vital, and cannot be imparted through guns."

Prison guards, all civil servants, are given six months of training — three on the job — in the psychological and physical handling of prisoners. All are expert in judo and karate.

Inmates address guards as "sensei," or teacher. Taru says the guards "are at the same time teachers, counselors, big brothers and work foremen. They are in direct contact with the prisoners from morning until night."

Many convicts facing death have delayed execution for years through repeated appeals. When executions do occur, it's usually without public notice. Families learn that sentence has been carried out only when called to collect the remains.

Lengths of sentences here are on a par with those of other industrialized nations, but tend to be more uniform and less erratic than those in U.S. courts. Plea bargaining is not widespread, and parole is harder to come by.

The timing of parole depends on a prisoner's behavior and attitude, but almost all serve two-thirds or three-fourths of their sentences. "Prisoners can settle down and set definite goals because they have a good idea how long they will be here," says Taru.

WHILE SOME juvenile detention centers have educational programs, adultprisons do not. Fuchu, where inmates are 26 years or older, offers training in auto repair and similar skills. None but the most dangerous or disturbed prisoners escape work.

The inmates are paid about $22 a month, with which they can buy snacks and magazines.

Japan has population problem

SAN DIEGO — Shunichi Suzuki is governor of Tokyo, where families enter lotteries for a chance to live in public housing and drinking water may be rationed in dry weather.

So perhaps he should be grateful that people are fleeing his massive metropolis for smaller outlying cities in Japan. But he's not.

Instead, Suzuki says he's looking at the possible creation of new vertical communities in the heart of one of the largest urban communities on Earth.

"The communities that used to exist in the center core of the city have virtually disappeared," Suzuki said. "What we'd like to do as the government of Tokyo is to find ways and means of attracting these people to come back."

He made his comments while attending the recent biennial Japan-American Conference of Mayors and Chamber of Commerce Presidents, held in Coronado, Calif.

People are leaving Tokyo at a disturbing rate, Suzuki said.

The population of Tokyo's center core has dropped by about 300,000 in the last five years. Another 65,000 have left the outer metropolitan zone within the last few years.

"The part of the population who used to live in the central core of the city has flowed out of that area," Suzuki said through an interpreter. "The nighttime population, or what is known as the settled city core population, has dwindled."

SCHOOLS IN THE central city have suffered greatly from the exodus, with class sizes dropping from an average of 40 pupils per class to only five to 10 pupils.

Tokyo is a city of 223 square miles and 10 million people. There are about 40,207 residents for every square mile. Only Mexico City and New York cram more people into less space.

Housing in Tokyo is so tight that the government holds lotteries to decide which families will live in newly built public housing projects. Up to 100 families may be in the running for a single apartment.

Tokyo draws its water supply from two rivers and a number of dams and reservoirs. But when rainfall is scarce, the city sometimes is forced into a strict rationing of water.

Despite all this, Suzuki is not happy about seeing the heart of Tokyo abandoned to office buildings and factories.

One way to lure people back, he says, may be construction of a new type of high-rise building — part office space, part living space.

Father nose best

By FRANK CAPRA
Special from Reader's Digest

Bartolomeo Durante, Jimmy's understanding father, was struggling to raise a family of four children in the three-room apartment behind his barbershop. When Jimmy was 16, his father celebrated the occasion by giving his son his first shave. And when he learned that Jimmy had musical ambitions, he bought his boy a "pianna" and engaged a music "perfesser."

Both Bartolomeo and Jimmy's mother, Rosa, loved classical music. But soon Jimmy had a confession to make. "Papa," he said regretfully, "I can't play classical like you want me to play. I just can't. I don't feel it. I'd rather go to Coney Island and play ragtime."

"Coney Island? No, no my son. Carnegie Hall."

"Papa, imagine what dey'd do if I came out in Carnegie Hall and dey see dis nose. Dey'd laugh at me, Papa, no matter how good I played."

After a pause, Bartolomeo reminded his son, "God works in inscrutable ways. He'll take care of you, go to Coney Island."

Court to review census

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is considering two of more than 60 court challenges to the 1980 census, but the dispute is far from being over.

The high court on Wednesday heard oral arguments in attempts by Essex County, N.J., and Denver to obtain address lists compiled by the Census Bureau.

CAT scans show breast cancer

By JOSEPH CAREY
Hearst Feature Service

BOSTON — Since the early 1970s, mammogram examination has proved useful as a screening device because it detects early breast cancers that can be effectively treated.

The procedure — which is simply an X-ray — is capable of finding small, early cancers that go undetected even with examination by experienced physicians.

But physical exams and mammograms don't always reveal every breast cancer. Women with dense breasts are hard to screen effectively with mammograms. In certain cases, the X-ray results are inconclusive.

Now, results of experimental computerized axial tomography (CAT) scan tests conducted in Kansas City, Kansas, show remarkable success detecting these difficult breast cancers.

"In certain cases, our results using a body CAT scanner are better than physical examinations and mammograms," Dr. C. H. Joseph Chang told physicians here at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Chang, a professor of diagnostic radiology at the University of Kansas College of Health Sciences, is the only researcher in the United States presently doing CAT mammography using a body scanner.

Since they were introduced in 1973, CAT scanners have been widely employed in medicine to diagnose disorders from lung cancers to head injuries and stroke.

CAT scanners take X-ray images of thin cross sections of the body. The densities of organ tissues are determined according to the amount of radiation absorbed. The images are then reconstructed by computer into three-dimensional slices.

From February 1980 to March 1981, Chang's team studied 67 patients, all over 35 years old, who had inconclusive physical examinations and mammograms. It found 17 proven cancers in 15 patients.

Sixteen cancers (94 percent) were diagnosed by the CAT study; 12 cancers (71 percent) by X-ray mammography; and eight cancers (47 percent) by physical examination.

Chang noted that in his experience, 10 to 15 percent of patients derived significant benefits from the CAT scan study and that about 25 percent of all women have breasts which are dense and may not test well under X-ray mammography.

"It's an exciting, potential additional use of CAT scanning," said Dr. Daniel Kopans, head of the breast scanning section at MGH.

Kopans noted, however, that he would like to see Chang's results confirmed by other studies before they become an accepted procedure.

MENTAL HEALTH UPDATE

Holidays can be depressing

By KENNETH H. WOLF, MSSW, SP

The holiday season is again here, and it seems almost incongruous to think of people being sad or depressed during this time of year. Yet for many people the holidays do bring sadness or depression rather than joy. It seems that those who are most vulnerable to this are those who are separated from family and loved ones. This separation could be for reasons of actual distance, estrangement, divorce, or even death.

The occurrence of a significant change in one's life can also lead to sadness and depression during the holidays. Such a change may be a favorable one, as well as an unfavorable one. It seems that any change, even favorable ones such as job promotions and the like, is potentially upsetting to one's pysychic equilibrium. Most commonly, one tends to think of unfavorable changes as being upsetting. Such changes encompass a wide range of possibilities, including job loss, loss of health, or loss of loved ones.

The holidays are times when we look back with nostaligia at previous holiday experiences and our past lives. The greater the difference one sees between previous holidays and the current one, the more likely a person is to feel a measure of sadness or depression. Of course, our lives do change and there will always be a difference between the holidays we are remembering and the one we are currently experiencing. One may tend to idealize past holidays such that the current one could never possibly measure up to our memories of the past. If a person broods excessively over these differences in holidays, he is certainly setting himself up for feeling depressed.

When depression or feelings of sadness do appear during the holidays, or other times for that matter, the best things for a person to do are to seek out the company of friends to share the time with and to remain as busy as possible, in order to avoid the tendency to brood excessively. Many people hold themselves back from seeking the company of friends during the holidays when they would not be so reluctant during other times of the year. This holding back may be due tofears of intruding on family activities or other related feelings. Nevertheless, it is possible to have the company of a friend without intruding. In fact, most people who are one's friends would welcome sharing some tine during the holiday season.

Most such feelings of sadness or depression do pass after the season. If depression persists or becomes so severe as to cause the person's functioning to suffer, professional assistanceshould be sought, not put off. Asking for help in such instances is the first step in getting help.

Love for leisure threatens economy

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — The American working man's love for leisure threatens the nation's economy, contends economist Howard R. Bloch, and it is unlikely that rising living standards can be maintained unless people work more.

"The tendency to forego paid employment in favor of subsidized leisure has had a debilitating effect on economic growth in the United States," Bloch writes in the Journal of the Institute for Socioeconomic Studies.

"As a society we have chosen to take increased leisure in the form of early retirement, shorter work weeks, longer vacations, etc., and have therefore implicity chosen to produce less."

But the added leisure raises labor costs, could accelerate automation and cause higher unemployment, is likely to lead to a reduction in output and a slowing in the growth of the gross national product, the George Mason University professor adds.

"Under current economic conditions, this exacerbates social tensions and inflation and increases our disadvantage relative to hard-working foreign competitors such as the Germans and Japanese — not to mention the Russians — who are vigorously pressing to increase production," he contends.

Bloch argues that national policies have strongly encouraged the growth of leisure — with welfare, unemployment compensation, Social Security and Workmen's compensation all make work less attractive to workers. Similarly, the tax system — which takes increasing amounts of worker income — acts as a work disincentive.

Bloch contends that such national policies should be reversed to discourage the leisure trend.

"It is not likely we will be able to maintain rising living standards in the face of declining productivity, a slowdown in the rate of growth of female labor force participation, and an inexorable aging of the population unless we can motivate our citizenry to work more," Bloch states.

Echoing President Reagan's philosophies, Bloch suggests cutting taxes to increase the attractiveness of work and investment, applying standard income tax to social welfare payments and realizing that increasing leisure as a means of reducing unemployment "is a sham and a delusion."

"Increased prosperity comes as a result of more, not less, work effort," declares Bloch.

He points out that in a remarkably productive America, growth in productivity once averaged 2.5 percent to 3 percent a year — and workers have taken a large percentage of that gain in increased leisure. The work week in 1840 now is estimated at 78 hours, he points out. Last year it was 35.3 hours.

And while life expectancy increased almost 20 years in this century, work expectancy for men increased only eight years, Bloch noted — and nonwork increased 11 years.

Reduced work weeks, paid holidays and vacations gave American workers 790 per year of increased free time — about one month out of 12 — he added, commenting:

"The additional hours of non-working time in youth and old age represent a further gain of about 18,000 hours during a man's lifetime. Altogether, the lifetime gain for all workers in the past years comes to about 50,000 hours free of work."

Bloch took particular issue with a recent speech by United Auto Workers president Douglas Fraser claiming the autoworkers' past productivity gains would have slashed job levels except that sales rose even faster and jobs were saved by "improvements in paid time off" won by the union.

Actually, commented Bloch, rising productivity "has been the lever elevating both the social and economic well-being of workers throughout the industrial revolution."

Kennedy shakes up staffs

Hearst Feature Service

Washington — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is shaking up his Boston and Washington staffs as he enters the final stretch of what promises to be a grueling 1982 campaign for reelection.

Longtime Kennedy political advisor Eddie Martin will return to the Kennedy staff in Massachusetts, ultimately taking over the reelection campaign from Jack Leslie, who came from Kennedy's 1980 presidential campaign to the state campaign earlier this year.

The two top employees at the political action commmittee formed by Kennedy last spring, the Fund for a Democratic Majority, will be leaving soon: Wally Chalmers and Elaine Shocus.

Leslie will take charge of the PAC. Lenny Conway, who has been on Kennedy's Senate staff and was slated to become top administrative aide, instead is being shifted to supervise all fund-raising for Kennedy, including for the PAC, the 1982 reelection campaign and to keep whittling away at the remaining 1980 presidential campaign debts.

That will leave Larry Horowitz retaining overall charge of Kennedy's Senate staff, a job he has held on an acting basis while being staff director of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee. He will continue to hold both posts.

Soviets have taken sophisticated course

By V.H. KRULAK
Copley News Service

The disposition to do political mischief to President Reagan could not be better exemplified than by some of the reaction to his dramatic proposal that the Russians join the United States in seeking the "zero option" in missile deployments affecting Western Europe.

His plan, while not a new one, having earlier been offered by German Chancellor Schmidt, carried powerful meaning because it was offered officially by our chief of state, and not through a trial balloon press leak or by a low-level and non-attributable "source."

In one stroke, he put the cat on the Russians' back. In one stroke, he gave the lie to the demonstrators on European campuses who have trumpeted that it is the Americans who are the aggressive warmongers. In one stroke he gave the lie to the demonstrators on our own campuses whose theme has been that Mr. Reagan is spoiling for a nuclear confrontation with the Soviets in Europe.

The reaction of demonstrating groups, both at home and abroad, was identical — a declaration, unsubstantiated, that the president's proposal was insincere, that it was nothing more than a propaganda stunt.

The news media played an interesting counterpoint to this negative attitude, publicizing the dramatic announcement briefly on the two days following the event, with the liberal press following the lead of the New York Times in evaluating the proposal as just a political tactic and then turning to other, more tantalizing, projects.

David Stockman's true confessions and Richard Allen's "smoking envelope" absorbed far more press resources than a sober proposal by Mr. Reagan to start the world on the road toward freedom from the nuclear threat.

West Germany now Russia's chief link

By BERNARD KAPLAN
Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — West Germany, once denounced regularly by Moscow as a militarist, neo-Nazi state thirsting to launch a war of revenge, now has become Russia's chief interlocutor in dealing with the West.

That is the larger significance behind Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's visit last week to Bonn. It was obscured by the current heated debate over nuclear arms negotiations.

Brezhnev's choice of the West German capital as the site of his opening gambit in a crucial new round of East-West nuclear diplomacy confirmed a switch in the Soviet view of who counts in the free world.

A few years ago, the Russians almost certainly would have chosen Paris as the venue for that kind of carefully calculated foray beyond their borders. Switching to Bonn indicates that they now look on West Germany as the allied nation most susceptible to their blandishments. It has also become the one that they think exerts the greatest influence on Western Europe as a whole and thus, indirectly, on the U.S.

Normally, Moscow likes to have a buffer between Washington and itself at moments when complex and long-term bargaining, like the forthcoming negotiations over missile strength in Europe, is starting. The Russians usually have worked on the theory that the Americans need to be sounded out and softened up by others before they make their own pitch.

AFTER WORLD WAR II, that role went to Britain. In breaking out of the Cold War mould, the then Soviet leader, Nikita Khrushchev, made his first Western visit -- the very first by any Soviet chief -- to London.

But, in the 1960s, with Britain in decline, the Russians transferred their attentions to France which, under Charles de Gaulle, was making a comeback. The Franco-Russian flirtation continued and grew under his successors, especially former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing. In the spring of last year, the latter traveled to Warsaw to see Brezhnev, breaking a de facto allied boycott on talks with the Russians imposed following their invasion of Afghanistan.

Last May's election of Francois Mitterrand as French president put a frost on the relationship. Although Mitterrand is a Socialist with Communist ministers in his cabinet, he adopted a hardline stance in East-West affairs that made it impossible for Moscow to maintain the old cosiness.

Hollywood putting clout behind ERA

By PATRICIA WOLF
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Hollywood is putting its status, stars and financial clout on the front line of a major new push to encourage ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Plans are underway for celebrities such as Valerie Harper, Jean Stapleton and Howard Hessman to lobby legislators for "yes" votes on the ERA in exchange for a promise of future re-election support.

And an independent producer has become the first television industry executive to exercise the financial power of Hollywood and refuse to film in Florida -- one of 15 states that has not ratified the ERA.

Members of the industry-wide Committee to Ratify the ERA said well-known actors and actresses would lobby in "targeted districts," with a promise from the stars to return at election time to campaign for legislators who vote to ratify the ERA, according to committee director Sandy Mullins.

"One single appearance with a celebrity can raise enough money for an entire election budget," said Mullins.

Other actors and actresses who have indicated they will travel to Florida and/or Georgia during legislative sessions in December and January include Cindy Williams, Linda Lavin, Joan Hackett and Robert Walden, said Mullins.

Independent producer Barney Rosenzweig's decision not to film in Florida came after the Caucus for Producers, Writers and Directors and the Directors Guild of America indorsed a voluntary boycott of the 15 mostly southern states.

In a letter mailed to the Florida motion picture bureau and Gov. Robert Graham, Rosenzweig said he had seriously considered Miami as the site for a new ABC pilot, "Modesty Blaise." But he rejected the location because "Florida has not ratified the ERA, and Modesty Blaise, a working woman, isn't going anywhere that doesn't recognize her equal rights under the law."

At a DGA news conference in October, motion picture director Michael Ritchie became the first director to publicly announce he would scrap plans to shoot his new movie in Florida. Three states are needed to ratify the ERA amendment by the June 30, 1982, deadline.

The industry-wide voluntary boycott has focused attention on five states -- Florida, Georgia, Oklahoma, Illinois and Missouri -- that have the most to lose. Film production in those states generated $250 million in 1980.

Cuba improving airfields, moving planes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuba is improving nine military airfields in apparent preparation for spreading its warplanes across the island and making them less vulnerable to attack, U.S. intelligence sources say.

THE REPORTED UPGRADING of these airfields comes amid increasing tensions over U.S. allegations that Cuba is providing strong backing, including arms, to leftist-ruled Nicaragua and Marxist guerrillas elsewhere in Central America.

A drumfire of Reagan administration verbal attacks on Cuba, together with a major U.S. naval exercise held in the Caribbean this fall, may have given Cuban President Fidel Castro the jitters, analysts said. He ordered a major mobilization for a time last month.

One analyst said, "Castro seems to be developing a siege mentality."

U.S. intelligence sources, who asked not to be identified, said they do not know whether the upgrading of nine secondary military airfields in Cuba was spurred by worsening U.S.-Cuban relations. Some work on these fields has been spotted in the past, they noted.

HOWEVER, THE SOURCES said, Cuban workers now are building shelters to protect MiG jet fighters while they are on the ground. The Cubans also are said to be lengthening runaways and installing fuel storage bunkers in six fields in western Cuba, two in the center of the island and one at the eastern end.

This project, analysts said, will significantly improve the Cuban air force's ability to disperse its MiG force of more than 150 planes from a few major bases.

Intelligence specialists were intrigued because six of the fields being improved are in the area of Cuba nearest to Central America.

The Cubans recently received 17 advanced models of the MiG-21 jet from the Soviets, according to intelligence reports, and U.S. analysts said these planes may replace older MiGs to be sent to Nicaragua.

A SENIOR U.S. official said Wednesday that runways at three Nicaraguan airfields had been lengthened and that the U.S. government now estimates that about two dozen MiG fighters will reach Nicaragua next spring, giving that country air superiority in volatile Central America.

Intelligence sources said two of these Nicaraguan fields are on the east coast and one on the western side of Nicaragua, close to the Gulf of Fonseca. El Salvador, which U.S. officials say is a target of communist aims, lies across that gulf from Nicaragua.

Meanwhile, U,S, intelligence officials said they have confirmed in recent weeks the presence of at least 25 T-54 and T-55 Soviet-built tanks in Nicaragua. These tanks came from Cuba, the analysts said.

Also confirmed in Nicaragua are a significant number of anti-aircraft and anti-tank weapons, a few Soviet-made, troop-carrying helicopters and a variety of small arms from Eastern European countries, intelligence sources said.

THE SENIOR U.S. official who spoke Wednesday of runway lengthening in Nicaragua suggested that the country is virtually infested with representatives of various Soviet-bloc countries.

According to U.S. intelligence specialists, a number of radical Third World countries have pledged to support the Sandinistas and to help make Nicaragua a leftist stronghold in the area.

So far, intelligence specialists said, Libya and Algeria both have given Nicaragua money and Vietnam has promised aircraft from supplies taken over from the defeated South Vietnamese in 1975. At least one American C-47 transport plane reportedly has been seen in Nicaragua with Vietnamese printing on a panel in its cabin.

Haig, Nicaraguan foreign minister meet

CASTRIES, St. Lucia (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Nicaragua's foreign minister swapped charges of intervention after a 90-minute meeting, but "at least we are speaking," the Nicaraguan said.

"IT WOULD BE VALUABLE to continue our discussion," Haig agreed after conferring Wednesday with Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto Brockman following the opening of the Organization of American States assembly on this Caribbean island.

Haig told reporters he got no assurance that Nicaragua would stop what he called its "interventionism in El Salvador," where leftist guerrillas are battling a U.S.-backed civilian-military junta.

The United States cut off aid to Nicaragua's leftist government earlier this year, accusing it of funneling arms from Cuba to the rebels in neighboring El Salvador.

Nicaragua's intervention "is extensive today in both training, command and control, and the provision of illicit arms," Haig claimed.

The United States is "the only American country to have made military intervention a custom," d'Escoto retorted at a news conference, calling America 'a symbol of intervention."

D'Escoto, who will pay an official visit to Moscow this month, said Haig told him if Nicaragua intervenes in other countries, it must "expect reciprocity from the United States."

HAIG ALSO TOLD reporters there are 1,500 Cuban military advisers and 1,500 Cuban technicians, specialists and teachers in Nicaragua.

"The level of Cuban presence in Nicaragua and the influx of sophisticated armaments is an ominous development which poses a threat to peace and stability in the neighboring countries and indeed peace and stability in the hemisphere," he said.

Haig, in a speech to the 17-nation OAU assembly later today, is expected to attack the leftist Cuban-Nicaraguan axis as a threat to Latin America.

En route to the nine-day conference, Haig told reporters in his plane the United States had two "clear manifestations" that Nicaragua was expecting to receive Soviet-built MiG fighter jets.

Officials backtracking Alabama PCB spill

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Federal officials on Wednesday began backtracking the route of a tractor-trailer truck which spilled a small amount of a cancer-causing chemical onto Interstate 65.

At least one of 44 barrels inside the truck leaked up to 40 gallons of polychlorinated biphenyls, which is known to cause cancer in animals in laboratory tests, although most of the liquid PCB appeared to be contained within the truck, officials said.

The driver, Larry Douglas, said he was taking the 50-gallon drums from Detroit to a hazardous waste site in western Alabama. He was being followed by a driver in a second truck.

Douglas said he and the other driver stopped for lunch in north Birmingham. After they resumed the trip, the second driver noticed chemicals leaking from the back of Douglas' truck. The driver flagged down Douglas and they notified authorities.

Wayne Randall, an official with the Jefferson County civil defense, said Environmental Protection Agency officials were checking the Interstate farther north for evidence of additional spills.
