Beds being added...

TDC capacity nearing cutoff

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Texas officials added 27 new beds as a cushion against hitting the court-ordered ceiling on prison capacity, officials said.

The Texas Department of Corrections was 75 inmates short of hitting the ceiling of 95 percent capacity ordered by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, spokesman David Nunnelee said Tuesday.

"We've got a little bit of breathing room now," spokesman Charles Brown said.

Just a day earlier, the system was five inmates short of hitting the court-ordered level, he said.

But the adding the beds on Tuesday helped lower the percentage of prison capacity, Nunnelee said. More inmates leaving than arriving also helped, he said.

"We had a net loss of 45 inmates," he said.

More than 130 inmates received parole certificates on Tuesday, allowing them to leave immediately, the spokesman said. None of the inmates were released early to allow more space for incoming prisoners, he said.

Officials did not yet have the totals for entering inmates as of late Tuesday, TDC spokesman Charles Brown said.

Prison capacity was 94.81 percent on Tuesday, compared to 94.99 percent on Monday, he said. The system had 38,283 prisoners, 75 short of the 95 percent capacity ceiling of 38,358, he said.

The prison population will change daily.

Stacy to bid

BIG SPRING — The board of directors for the Colorado River Municipal Water District voted here Wednesday morning to advertise for construction bids on the Stacy Reservoir.

A bid opening date has been set for 10 a.m. March 5. District officials say it is possible that construction may start by the middle of April.

Construction costs are estimated between $37 and $40 million and will require about 2½ to 3 years for completion.

Third term

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas House members listened to how difficult the 1987 session will be and then gave the gavel back to Gib Lewis.

It took about one hour Tuesday for the House to complete the opening-day ceremonies, hear five speeches about Lewis and vote near-unanimous approval to giving the Fort Worth Democrat a third term as speaker.

One arrested

VAN HORN, Texas (AP) — A fugitive from a Michigan psychiatric center is being held in a West Texas jail after he was arrested driving a stolen pickup, and authorities linked him to two slayings and an armed robbery in that state.

William Day, 35, was arrested Monday by a state trooper near Interstate 10 just west of Van Horn, Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells said Tuesday.

New trial motion now filed

A motion for new trial will be heard here Jan. 22 for convicted murderer Dorsie Lee Johnson Jr. of Colorado City.

Johnson was convicted in 132nd District Court and given the death sentence on Nov. 14 for the March, 1986 killing of Allsup's convenience store clerk Jack Huddleston.

Court officials characterized the motion for new trial as a routine part of the mandatory appeals process in a case where a defendant is sentenced to death.

The hearing for new trial has been set by District Judge Gene Dulaney.

In addition, he has issued a bench warrant for Johnson, who will be returned to Snyder from the Texas Department of Corrections at Huntsville.

In the motion for new trial, defense attorney Frank Conard of Sweetwater alleges the trial court "harmed the interests of his client" by denying his second motion for continuance.

That continuance motion was filed Oct. 9 and sought to delay Johnson's trial.

That denial, according to the petition, "forced (the case) to trial without adequate time (for the defense attorney) to fully prepare for trial."

In a separate but related matter, Dulaney also set a hearing for 3 p.m. Feb. 3 for pre-trial motions in the case of Amanda Lynn Miles.

Miles is a co-defendant with Johnson in the Allsup's killing and is also under indictment for capital murder.

The pair were arrested by Snyder police in Colorado City April 8.

In addition, Johnson faces robbery charges in that city.

"TERRA NOVA" REPRISED — These five student actors from Western Texas College will be featured again Friday in the college's production of "Terra Nova." The 8 p.m. performance, which dramatizes the ill-fated 1911-12 English expedition to the South Pole, will be in the Fine Arts Theatre. Award winner set at college theatre

A special hometown performance is slated Friday for "Terra Nova," the production which has brought acclaim to the Western Texas College drama department.

The show Friday, slated at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Theatre, is a warmup for a five-state play competition scheduled in Fort Worth next week. That contest will run Jan. 20-27.

Tickets for the Friday performance will be $5 for adults and $3 for students.

"Terra Nova," which deals with a doomed 1912 English expedition to the South Pole, won the right to compete last November at the "Texas West" play festival in El Paso.

With eight plays chosen for the Fort Worth contest, WTC is the only junior college selected. Other schools to compete include Texas Tech University, North Texas State University, Texas Wesleyan College, the University of Arkansas, the University of Louisianna, Southeast Oklahoma State University and Tulane University.

The competition is sponsored by the American College Theatre Festival.

At the El Paso contest, three individual actors in the production were singled out for awards, Jim Rainbolt of Post, Jeff Milburn of Brownfield and Bobby Mendez of Lubbock.

In addition, "Theatre Excellence" awards went to Jim Rambo, as the play's director, and to his wife Teresa for her costuming. Other honors went to the play's makeup, special effects and the play program.

Others appearing in the cast are Jaime Cofer of Snyder, Shauna Gibson of Vernon, Brett Dillon of Seagraves and Jim Miller of Lubbock.

2 longtime businesses will undergo changes

Two longtime city businesses have seen ownership changes with the new year — Brewer's Exxon Station on 25th Street and Love's Barber Shop on College Avenue.

A barber for some 40 years, W.D. (Bill) Love opened his first shop here across from the old Palace Theater in 1947 after training in Dallas.

The following year, he relocated and changed the firm's name to Highland Park Barber Shop. In 1960, he moved his enterprise to its current location north of the square on College Avenue.

Herb Thomas, a local barber for some 14 years, has purchased the shop and will continue to operate it when Love retires Feb. 1. Love plans to work each Tuesday following retirement until an additional full-time staffer is hired.

"I had a good business and really enjoyed it. I've got a lot of good customers and friends. I've really appreciated all of them over the years. I'll miss them," he said.

Blood goal gained at first 1987 effort

With some 150 pints hoped for, local blood drive sponsors exceeded their goal Tuesday by some 15 pints during the first effort of 1987.

Some 165 pints were drawn after 174 registered to give. Among these were 24 first time donors.

"We were very pleased, but to be honest we were hoping for more," said Sallie Tate, this year's blood drive chairman. "Blood supplies are critical everywhere this year."

The first time donors were given "slug-a-mug" drink containers from United Blood Services of Lubbock. In addition, gallon pins were presented to 11 longtime donors. Those recognized included:

—One-gallon pins to Teresa Deere, Teresa Thames, Leonard Keller, Cheryl Winkles and Blondina Morales.

—Two-gallon pins to Tina Walker and Chris Bane.

—Three-gallon pins to Arvis Carey, Albert Garcia and Allene Terry.

—A four-gallon pin to Britt Fuqua.

Local drives are jointly sponsored by the UBS advisory council and the Cogdell Memorial Hospital Auxiliary.

Sponsors extended thanks also to members of Cub Scout Pack 61, who helped with cleanup activities after the drive. These in-

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "If you throw your weight around long enough, someone will offer to do it for you."

The ears have been the subject of many studies, and one guy has concluded in a study that ears determine what people think about you.

The study was done by Dr. Elior Kinarthy, an ear expert at Rio Hondo College. He concluded that if ears flare forward, you are considered very honest and pay your debts promptly.

Possibly, but under new banking regulations, don't count on your ears for a loan--you might get 'em pinned back.

The professor says if ears are positioned toward the back of the head, the person is considered aggressive, to have a healthy ego and is looking to the distant future.

That might mean when you take out a credit card you knew full-well what you were getting into.

If your ears are on the high side of the head, the person is considered highly intelligent and practical. The person is a likely candidate for fame and fortune.

If you have big ears, people think you care about others. They also consider you very generous.

If you have small ears, the professor concluded you might be a banker and very cautious. Bankers are cautious. They're the guys that put chains on pens that don't work.

Politics is picking up down in Austin.

Did you hear about the couple showing their grandson some of the sights in the capital. As they passed the Governor's Mansion, the youngster sized up the iron fence and lush landscape.

"Is that a cemetery?" he asked.

"No, that's the governor's mansion," the grandfather replied.

Pointing to a construction project, the child asked if something was being buried.

"Could be," replied gramps, "the legislature's in town."

Decision worries businesses

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A U.S. Supreme Court ruling that protects pregnant women's jobs could cost businesses billions, officials say, but the woman whose lawsuit led to it said she hopes she's the last to suffer for having a baby.

Feminists hailed Tuesday's decision, but business representatives said the extra payroll costs could be disastrous, especially for small enterprises.

The 6-3 ruling upheld a California law requiring employers to give female workers up to four months of unpaid maternity leave and reinstate them into the same job when they return.

The case involved a challenge to the state law by California Federal Savings and Loan, which was sued after it filled the job of a Los Angeles receptionist, Lillian Garland, while she was on maternity leave.

"It's taken so long. I'm ecstatic," said Ms. Garland, who eventually got her job back months after giving birth to a girl in 1982 but resigned last year to go into real estate.

"I asked God to touch the Supreme Court justices and let them realize what women are fighting for. ... I wanted to be the last woman to have to suffer for deciding to have a baby."

Feminists also hailed the ruling.

"This is an extremely important decision because it is a step to the second phase of equality," said Betty Friedan of the National Organization for Women. "There cannot be true equality without recognizing basic biological differences between workers."

Connecticut, Hawaii, Illinois, Massachusetts, Montana, New Hampshire, Ohio and Washington have similar laws, according to court documents.

Ms. Garland's attorney, Pat Shiu of the Employment Law Center in San Francisco, said the court's decision "has given a green light to other state legislatures interested in enacting similar laws."

She called the California law "the first hurdle" in gaining even broader rights for working parents.

Business groups, however, say small companies often do not have the resources the ruling would demand.

"It is a disaster," said Don Butler, president of the Los Angeles-based Merchants & Manufacturers Association, which represents about 2,500 Southern California businesses. Small businesses and the service sector, which relies heavily on female employees, will be especially hard hit, he said.

Although the California law calls for unpaid maternity leave, employers face substantial costs in filling temporary vacancies, he said. For instance, a company might pay $6 an hour to its regular word processor but would have to pay $18 an hour for one from a service that provides temporary workers.

The law also could drive up companies' unemployment compensation insurance, which is based on the number of workers terminated, Butler said.

"In California alone, the cost could be hundreds of millions of dollars," he said. "Nationwide, it could be in the billions."

William Callendar, general counsel of Los Angeles-based CalFed Inc., the company that challenged the law, said the costs also would be substantial for large businesses.

Feds to open dump site office in West Texas

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The Department of Energy will open an office for its controversial nuclear waste dump program next month in Deaf Smith County, officials say.

The department is expected to make a general announcement Thursday that it is moving 10 people from its office in Columbus, Ohio, to temporary office trailers at Vega in the Panhandle, unnamed congressional sources told the Amarillo Globe-News Tuesday.

The 10 are in the first group of more than 300 people who will eventually move from Columbus to work on site characterization, the $1 billion study that will determine whether a 9-square-mile area of Deaf Smith County is suitable for a nuclear waste dump.

The Texas site is in the running with ones in Nevada and Washington for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste repository.

DOE now operates an office trailer at Vega that serves only as an information center but is not involved in site characterization activities.

The new Vega office is expected to be open on a daily basis by March 2.

Stiff sentences don't put Mafia out of business

NEW YORK (AP) — The Mafia has been staggered but not toppled by 100-year prison terms handed to three bosses and four other top mobsters, according to law enforcement officials, who promise unrelenting pressure against the mob.

The heads of the Genovese, Colombo and Lucchese organized crime families were sentenced to 100 years each Tuesday for sitting on a commission of mob leaders that has ruled the Mafia in America since Prohibition.

U.S. District Judge Richard Owen also sentenced four other people to 100 years apiece for carrying out the commission's bidding. An eighth defendant was sentenced to 40 years.

"I can't say it's the end of the commission," U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani told a news conference. "But it makes it much more difficult to operate that kind of an operation."

Giuliani said all would be eligible for parole after 10 years and under federal law would have to be released after serving two-thirds of their sentence — 66 years in the case of those sentenced to 100 years.

"The worst mistake we can make is to declare a final victory," said Thomas L. Sheer, head of the FBI's New York office. "It's the ninth round and we're ahead on points but if we don't keep up the pressure now ... we're going to make the mistake of the century."

In a 58-page pre-sentencing memo to Owen, prosecutors said the racketeering convictions marked "the first time the very highest leaders of the nationwide ruling council of La Cosa Nostra have been brought to justice for the crimes that they directed ..."

Ronald Goldstock, head of the New York State Organized Crime Task Force, called it "a devastating day for the mob" but added, "business continues." "To the extent that there are heads to the five families, there is (still) a commission," said Goldstock. "The new heads automatically make up the commission."

Prosecutors said the commission, formed in 1931 in the wake of a bloody New York mob war, kept organized crime organized by settling disputes, dividing loot and territories and occasionally authorizing high-level gangland murders, including the 1979 killing of then-Bonanno boss Carmine Galante.

The bosses sentenced to 100 years were Genovese boss Anthony "Fat Tony" Salerno, 76; Carmine "Junior" Persico, 53, head of the Colombo family; and Anthony "Tony Ducks" Corallo, 73, boss of the Lucchese mob.

Also receiving the sentence were Colombo underboss Gennaro "Gerry Lang" Langella, 48; Lucchese underboss Salvatore "Tom Mix" Santoro, 72; Lucchese consigliere, or counselor, Christopher "Christy Tick" Furnari, 62; and Ralph Scopo, 58, a Colombo soldier and former labor leader.

Bonanno crime family soldier Anthony "Bruno" Indelicato, 38, was only charged with two racketeering counts and received the maximum 40 years.

Owen ordered fines ranging from $50,000 to $250,000 and recommended that none of the eight be granted parole.

Squirrel cuts Abilene power

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A squirrel single-handedly shorted out power to downtown and sent firefighters scurrying to several non-existent fires when it crawled into a mass of circuits and was electrocuted, officials say.

The critter "got into a transformer bank and caused quite a bit of damage to transformers," West Texas Utilities spokesman Sherwyn McNair said after the Tuesday morning incident.

Power was out for about 40 minutes for most of downtown and the east side, and firefighters answered four emergency calls when the surge from returning power set off four fire alarms, Fire Lt. Carl Collum said.

In Abilene and San Angelo, squirrels are the leading animal cause of power outages, although snakes and occasionally birds also cause blackouts, McNair said.

Matlock named to top post

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is naming Jack P. Matlock Jr., a Russian-speaking career diplomat who urged him to trim the Soviet diplomatic corps in the United States, as the new U.S. ambassador to Moscow, administration officials say.

Matlock, 57, was Reagan's special assistant for Soviet and European affairs at the National Security Council and served as deputy U.S. ambassador in Moscow from 1974 to 1978. He succeeds Arthur A. Hartman, who stepped down last month.

As a presidential adviser, Matlock was a key proponent of Reagan's decision last year to order reductions in the Soviet embassy staff in Washington, the U.N. mission in New York and the consulate in San Francisco as a precaution against espionage.

In all, 80 Soviets were sent home, and a handful of U.S. diplomats likewise were expelled from the Soviet Union, bringing the two sides down to equal diplomatic levels.

The diplomatic feud was touched off by the arrest in August in Moscow of U.S. journalist Nicholas Daniloff on espionage charges.

Tempers finally cooled in this tit-for-tat diplomacy, but a senior U.S. official speaking only on condition of anonymity said Monday the expulsions had created a "tough situation," forcing abrupt changes in routine for American diplomats in Moscow and causing "some resentment" among them.

Several Soviet specialists at the State Department had recommended a more cautious response than Matlock to the apprehension of Daniloff.

The official said Matlock apparently won out over Harry G. Barnes Jr. and Robert L. Barry, two other Russian-speaking diplomats, and other candidates to succeed Hartman in the prized assignment because his job at the National Security Council had placed him close to the White House.

Barnes is the U.S. ambassador to Chile and Barry is in charge of negotiations to reduce superpower tensions in Europe.

The Moscow post opened last month when the State Department announced Hartman would retire for "personal reasons." The department retracted the statement the next day and Hartman told reporters in Moscow he was leaving immediately so his successor could serve the full two years remaining in the Reagan administration.

Speculation immediately centered on Matlock to succeed him.

Approval by the Senate is required.

Learning to keep your guard up

By James Jacoby

Given the North-South cards to bid, even expert players would wind up in three no-trump more often than not. That contract makes easily with a diamond lead, but the lead of the spade king would give a declarer trouble. He would probably win the third spade and force out the heart ace. East would then take two more spade tricks to beat three no-trump.

In today's auction, why did North bid four hearts after three no-trump? No, it's not just to create a play problem with only seven trumps in the combined hands. Because South did not jump right to a no-trump game over two clubs, North feared that South might have weak spades, in which case the defenders might be able to take five quick spade tricks. Right or wrong, North did bid four hearts and South had to play it.

If declarer grabs the first spade, then ruffs a spade and plays the heart king, he can be in trouble. East can duck the king, take the second heart and then, provided West has unblocked his spade queen, cash two spades and lead still another to force declarer to ruff. That will set the four-heart contract.

Instead, South must allow West to win the king of spades, just as he would in no-trump. If a second spade is now led, declarer can ruff in dummy and lead the king of hearts. He will still have the spade ace in hand to control that suit and will easily make his contract when hearts reasonably divide 4-2.

Colonoscopy is more extensive

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I went to a specialist, who did a proctosigmoidoscopy. It was extremely painful and I passed out. On the bill, it said he had performed a colonoscopy. The nurse said they were the same thing. Is this true?

DEAR READER — The large bowel, or colon, is composed of several anatomically distinct portions that end in an S-shaped curve (the sigmoid), this, in turn, empties into the rectum. A proctosigmoidoscopy involves examination of the lower segments of the colon with a short flexible tube. When a longer instrument is used, the pain of the examination is substantial and patients must be sedated or put to sleep. Colonoscopy is the examination of the entire colon beyond the sigmoid; this is done — under anesthesia — using a very long, flexible fiberoptic tube (a lighted device through which a doctor can examine the lining of the bowel).

You probably "passed out" because the doctor administered a sedative while he was carrying out the more extensive examination, colonoscopy. This is not the same thing as sigmoidoscopy, which is simpler and does not require anesthesia.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My doctor says that I probably lack the enzyme necessary to break down medication in my system, and that's why I'm so sensitive to medicine. What are enzymes, and is there anything I can do to help this situation?

DEAR READER — Every medicine is broken down in the body. The liver and the kidneys are the organs that perform most of the degradation. The liver is particularly important because it is a rich source of chemical neutralizers, called enzymes. Some enzymes are present naturally; others are "induced," or specially manufactured by the liver to metabolize certain drugs.

When you begin taking a medicine, the liver starts developing methods to degrade it. Therefore, as you continue the drug, the liver shifts into high gear to produce enzymes that neutralize the medication. This is entirely normal, and there is no practical method by which to alter this process.

The biochemical basis of therapeutics is still in its infancy; scientists do not yet know exactly why some people are more sensitive to medications; or are allergic to them, or have serious side effects. You and your doctor will have to work together to discover which medicines will help you and, at the same time, not cause complications or side effects.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm 71, male, and have problems with cramps in my hands and feet at night. I drink lots of milk and eat six eggs a week. Can you help?

DEAR READER — Nocturnal cramps in older patients may indicate poor circulation. Ask your doctor to examine you for this condition. He or she may wish to prescribe calcium or quinine, both of which help night cramping. Although surgery is sometimes necessary to reroute blood around obstructed arteries, prescription drugs can often reduce symptoms and improve bloodflow.

Incidentally: Six eggs a week are probably excessive for keeping your cholesterol low; reduce this to no more than two.

DIVERTICULAR DISEASE is a common problem, and Dr. Gott's new Health Report tells how it can be treated and managed. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

Parolee gets death sentence

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin man has been sentenced to die after being convicted of beating a teen-ager to death with a motorcycle chain after she was gang-raped last summer.

A district court jury deliberated four hours Tuesday before sentencing 26-year-old John W. "Jackie" Elliott to die.

Elliot, who was convicted Monday in the death of Joyce Munguia, 18, was on parole at the time of the killing on a murder conviction from 1978.

Ms. Munguia died June 13, 1986, after she was raped and struck 24 times in the head and face, injuries that left her unrecognizable, officials said.

Decision may overturn convictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A civil rights lawyer says the Supreme Court's latest ruling restraining prosecutors from disqualifying potential jurors based on race could mean new trials or freedom for hundreds convicted of crimes.

Barry Sullivan of Chicago, with the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, estimated the decision could lead to hundreds of guilty verdicts being overturned.

Excluding blacks as jurors in trials of black defendants is "a substantial nationwide problem," he said.

The high court, by a 6-3 vote Tuesday, said fairness demands that its decision last April 30 barring prosecutors from disqualifying potential jurors based on their race applies retroactively to convicted defendants who had not exhausted appeals by that date.

The court ruled last April that prosecutors have the burden of proving their peremptory — or automatic — challenges to potential jurors are not based on race.

Previously, the justices held that defendants had the task of proving discrimination by showing a pattern of racial exclusion in a series of cases. The 1986 ruling said prosecutors must provide a neutral explanation when they remove potential jurors who are the same race as the defendant.

On Tuesday, the court said last year's ruling applies to convicted criminals who had not exhausted their initial round of appeals by April 30. The initial round is concluded when all appeals are rejected by state or federal courts and the Supreme Court.

Convicted criminals are entitled to a second round of appeals permitting them to go through appellate courts again, alleging a violation of their rights.

The justices said Tuesday for the first time that their criminal law decisions have retroactive impact even when such decisions clearly break with past high court precedent.

Writing for the court, Justice Harry A. Blackmun said any other approach would be unfair.

"Selective application of new rules violates the principle of treating similarly situated defendants the same," he said.

Justice Byron R. White, in a dissenting opinion, said, "Today the court acts as if it has no choice but to follow a mechanical notion of fairness without pausing to consider sound principles of decision-making.

Super-rich pay smaller taxes than poor in many states

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tax systems in most states are so unfair that the super-rich pay a significantly smaller share of their incomes than do the poorest families, according to a private study released today.

Nationwide, families earning $7,000 a year or less pay about 6.9 percent of their income in state and local taxes, says the study by Citizens for Tax Justice, a labor-financed research group.

Middle-income families, averaging about $27,000 a year, turn over 6.8 percent for taxes, while the super-rich — with incomes averaging over $500,000 — pay 5.1 percent of their money to state and local government.

Unless the states overhaul their taxes in the wake of the new federal system, the study concluded, the portion of earnings paid by the poor and middle-income will rise to 7.1 percent and the burden on the super-rich will go up to 6.5 percent.

In 15 states, the study found, the rate of taxation for the richest people is less than half the burden on the poorest.

Citizens for Tax Justice, which was in the forefront of the fight to overhaul the federal tax system, launched a campaign to make sweeping changes in the states. The liberal organization said the federal changes "provide states with a golden opportunity to close the loopholes that have made state tax avoidance possible."

The study found that if all the states tailored their taxes to match the new federal system, "the share of income paid in state and local taxes by the super-rich would rise from 73 percent to 91 percent of that paid by the poor, and from 75 percent to 92 percent of that paid by middle-income families."

Among other findings of the study, which was based on data from the Internal Revenue Service, Census Bureau and Congress:

—In Wyoming, the poorest one-fifth of the population pays 4.4 percent of earnings in state and local taxes; the super-rich pay 0.9 percent. Similarly, the poorest South Dakotans pay 10.8 percent of their income; the richest pay 2.2 percent.

—In 10 states, the tax burden on the super-rich is half or less of the burden on middle-income families (about $27,000 earnings). Again, the greatest disparities are in South Dakota and Wyoming, where the burden on the rich is only one-third that on the middle-income people.

—The highest tax burdens on the poor are in Pennsylvania, Michigan, South Dakota, Nevada, Indiana, Connecticut and Iowa, where poorest families pay more than 10 percent of earnings to state and local tax collectors. However, the study noted, most of those states have large public-assistance programs.

Blitz hosts in third period...

Ladies exhaust Tornadoes

LAMESA -- Trailing 32-30 at halftime, Snyder's Lady Tigers went to a man-to-man defense and raced to their second straight District 2-4A victory here Tuesday.

The Tigers outscored Lamesa's girls 19-6 in the third period and held on for a 62-55 victory.

"We had played pretty well in the first half but we came out in the second quarter and had a real good third quarter," said Snyder Coach Ken Housden, whose girls are now 12-8 on the season and 4-4 in district play. "We went to a man-to-man defense (from a zone) in the third quarter. I thought that made a difference. Plus, we shot the ball well from the field."

No field goal percentages were available, but Lamesa couldn't stop Teri Sue Henry and Stephanie McKnight, who packed in 22 and 21 points respectively. Christi Comer scored 13 points and Melody Pickering got the other 6.

"We only had four people scoring but we played eight and everyone contributed on defense and helped get the ball up the court," stressed Housden.

Henry pulled down 7 rebounds and Pickering 6, while McKnight and Angie Housden swiped 5 steals apiece.

Snyder led by as many as 14 points in the fourth quarter. A couple of three-point plays by Lamesa cut the final margin to seven. The Lady Tigers could have enjoyed an easier victory, but hit only 12 of 27 free throws.

Saundra Hawkins led Lamesa with 18 points. Jo Demerson popped for 13 and Cindy Hogg added 8.

Lamesa falls to 6-14 overall and 3-5 in district play.

Housden's Lady Tigers return to Snyder Gym this Friday to entertain Monahans in a 7:30 p.m. ballgame.

Snyder needs scoring help...

Lamesa outruns SHS Tigers

Snyder's Tigers, still looking for some outside scoring help, couldn't find any and fell to the ninth-ranked Lamesa Tornadoes here Tuesday in a District 2-4A hoop game, 66-55.

The Tigers got 30 points from Terry Garza and 18 more out of Chris Garrett, but six other players combined for just a scant 7 points. That, and some miscues at key times, led to the Tigers' third defeat in as many outings.

"I didn't think we played nearly as well tonight as we did against Andrews," said Coach Larry Scott, whose Tigers dropped a 56-55 decision at Andrews last Friday. "It's a different game when we get more people scoring. Against Andrews we got 20 points from our guards. Tonight we got four."

Snyder led early in the game but couldn't hold it. Lamesa tied things up on a field goal by Carl Pennington, 12-12, and took a two-point lead with 37 seconds left in the first quarter on a shot from Cedric Mason. The Tigers had several chances to lock the game up again in the waning seconds, but were unable to.

Lamesa never trailed again, and enjoyed a seven-point lead midway through the second quarter, before Gomez and Garza tallied for Snyder.

The Tigers were shackled by fouls early. Trey Tippens, the 6-5 junior post, got his second foul with 5:50 to play in the opening period, and was whistled for a fourth with 1:35 before the half.

Snyder eventually pulled within four points, 31-27, but again failed to take advantage of a couple of opportunities to close the gap further.

Neither team controlled the third quarter, though Lamesa did manage a nine-point advantage when Steve Scott tallied off the fast break with 2:26 to go. Garrett retaliated with a three-point play that brought Snyder back within six, however. The Tigers got the ball back quickly on a Lamesa turnover, but again were unable to tally. Lamesa led 46-38 at the end of the quarter.

Garza became Snyder's primary scoring threat in the fourth quarter, scoring 13 of the Tigers' 17 points in the period. Still, the Tors increased their lead to 11 points when Pennington scored back-to-back buckets midway through the quarter, 55-44.

Snyder was able to answer the challenge, but only briefly. Garza hit a field goal and Garrett put a rebound up and in. He was fouled on the play and added a free throw, edging Snyder within six, 55-49.

That was as close as the hosts could come, though. Lamesa turned the ball over on its next possession, but Snyder missed an outside shot. Lance Aldridge responded for the Tornadoes and after another Snyder miss, Jarrett scored a pair of free throws that left the visitors ahead 59-49 with just two minutes to play.

"Everytime we'd make a run at them we'd turn the ball over or take a bad shot," mused Coach Scott. "We just didn't get the job done. We did fine when we forced them to set up in their offense but they got too many points from steals or getting the rebound and getting it back up the floor quickly. They outrebounded us 10 to five on our offensive boards in the second half."

For the game, Lamesa pulled down 30 rebounds; Snyder 27. Garrett had 11 to lead the Tigers.

Pennington matched Garza's effort with 30 of his own for Lamesa while Scott and Mason canned 14 apiece. Pennington also had 10 rebounds for the Tors, who improve to 18-3 for the season and 6-0 in district play.

Snyder, 10-10 and 3-3, will play in Monahans at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Rockets' Wiggins, Lloyd banned from NBA after failing drug test

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston Rockets General Manager Ray Patterson now has seen three of his players sidelined by the NBA's stiff anti-drug policy in the past two seasons.

On Tuesday, guards Mitchell Wiggins and Lewis Lloyd were banned from the NBA for using cocaine. The move came less than 10 months after guard John Lucas was waived last March 15, after he tested positive for drug usage for the second time.

After repeating the same agonizing scene for the second year, Patterson is beginning to question the logic that regular cocaine users can be scared into complying with the league's drug policy.

"It may be based on the faulty premise that you can scare players into voluntary compliance," Patterson said. "We say you are banned for life and that hasn't helped.

"I'm not sure it's a deterrent for those already involved with cocaine. It might be for those not yet involved."

Patterson said one trait of the cocaine user is that he denies he has a problem.

"It's the only disease where the patient doesn't go for help," Patterson said. "They deny they have a disease.

"The drug is so insidious. The cases of Len Bias (former Maryland player who died of cocaine intoxication), John Lucas and more recent debacles haven't deterred or made an impact on these players."

Commissioner David Stern announced the NBA ban against Lloyd and Wiggins Tuesday.

Stern said Wiggins and Lloyd were tested Saturday after the league was presented with evidence of drug use "that would be adequate to cause a magistrate to issue a search warrant."

Lloyd and Wiggins are the third and fourth players to be banished under the league's drug testing policy.

Micheal Ray Richardson of the New Jersey Jets and John Drew, formerly of the Utah Jazz, were banned as "three-time losers" under provisions of the drug agreement that a player can be treated without penalty if he comes forward voluntarily.

Lloyd and Wiggins did not volunteer for treatment, so they do not get a second chance.

All-State six-man football...

Ira trio earn state honors

Ira High School placed a trio of seniors on the Six-Man All-State second team offense, announced this week.

Quarterback Reyez Juarez, center Brent Bearden and end Mike Martini were the three Bulldogs named to the elite all-state, six-man teams.

"I was real tickled with it," said Ira Coach Mitch Lee. "We knew they were all three quality ball players and this proves it. I'm very proud of these young men."

It was the first season for Juarez to play quarterback, yet he still added all-state honors to his list of credits. He was earlier named unanimous first-team all-district quarterback and was second team all-district linebacker.

Juarez was 65 of 96 in passing for 1,269 yards and 21 touchdowns. He had only six interceptions and rushed for 61 yards on 14 carries. Defensively, he had 69 unassisted tackles, recovered three fumbles and picked off four passes.

Martini had earlier been chosen first team all-district offensive and defensive end. He pulled down 28 receptions for 483 yards and 11 TDs and returned 11 kickoffs for 456 yards and two touchdowns. Defensively, he was credited with 64 unassisted tackles and three fumble recoveries.

Martini has also been selected to play in the Six-Man All-Star Football Game in Stephenville this July. Juarez is an alternate to the game.

For Bearden, it was the second straight season to earn second-team all-state center honors. He was first-team all-district defensive end and second-team center. He caught 11 passes for 263 yards and defensively had 73 unassisted tackles and recovered seven fumbles.

Ira was 4-4-1 for the 1986 season and lost a chance at post-season play on penatrations after tying Trent in the regular season. Sixteen players were named all-state from teams which Ira played.

WTC placement test offered over 2 days

Pre-entrance testing for students planning to earn a degree--either in occupational-technical or traditional academic fields--from Western Texas College will be offered on campus both Thursday and Monday.

The test is to assist WTC in placement of the student in math and English classes. No minimum passing grade is required.

Called an "asset" test, it will be given twice Thursday, at 9 a.m. and 6:30 p.m., at the counseling office area in the WTC student center.

It will be given again at 1:30 p.m. Monday in the reading center in the Learning Resource Center. The testing period normally runs about two hours.

A fee of $5 will be charged and students can pay prior to taking the test.

Those with questions should call Dr. Mary Hood, 573-8511, ext. 313.

Changes slated for businesses

Although he will officially retire from barbering, Love will continue as precinct 1 constable for the county. He plans to run for the position he has held the past 10 years again when his term expires in 1988.

He added that yardwork, gardening and fishing will fill most of his time. He and his wife Nan also plan to travel.

Regarding the other change, O. D. Brewer relinquished his Exxon service station on 25th Street to Lee Rawlins.

A DeLeon native, Brewer enjoyed a 20-year career with the U.S. Navy before choosing to settle in Snyder. "I had a sister here and I liked it," he said. "Then I became involved in youth baseball leagues and decided to stay."

Brewer will continue to manage Brewer's Northside Exxon on College Avenue as he has done the past six years.

Gasoline prices said going up

NEW YORK (AP) — American motorists could be paying four to five cents a gallon more for gasoline in the next few weeks, according to oil analysts.

Crude oil prices, which generally have been rising since OPEC's December meeting, have gotten another boost from the record cold spell in Europe and the Soviet Union. In the United States, a cold snap is predicted soon for the Northeast and the Midwest.

The cold weather has strained oil inventories which until recently had been in surplus, draining supplies

Surge above $19 a barrel won't spur Gulf drilling

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Shell Offshore Inc. President R. L. Howard says the recent surge in oil prices will not spur deepwater drilling in the Gulf of Mexico where major oil and gas deposits are to be found.

"We need an indication OPEC countries can hang together," Howard told the Society of Petroleum Engineers at a New Orleans meeting Tuesday.

Oil prices have pushed up above $19 a barrel, and a cold wave gripping Europe and the Soviet Union is reportedly helping that upward drive.

For example, South Louisiana crude closed Tuesday on the spot market at $19.61 a barrel, the fourth straight day the price of Louisiana crude hit above $19.

While prices are at the highest since January 1986, analysts say that's irrelevant when companies decide whether to drill in the 13 deepwater canyons of the Gulf.

The big question, they said, is the price of a barrel in the long term.

"We do things today for prices in 10 years," Howard said.

For shallow water wells, he said, the lead time is about five years.

Despite last year's oil crash, Howard said Shell has continued to explore and is now drilling one well in 5,400 feet of water.

Grass fire occurs

Units of the Snyder Fire Department extinguished a grass fire east of the city Tuesday afternoon.

Firefighters were dispatched to the location 12 miles east of town on U.S. Hwy. 180 at 3:51 p.m.

Probation term revoked locally

A former Snyder resident is now facing a six-year term in the Texas Department of Corrections after having his probation revoked in 132nd District Court.

Probation officers sought revocation on Randy Leonard in light of the alleged theft of 90 joints of four-inch aluminum pipe in Jones County.

He had been given a six-year probated term here in January of 1985 after pleading guilty to a felony theft charge.

Plea given in drug charges

Guilty pleas to two drug trafficing charges have netted a 31-year-old Snyder man two 10-year terms in the Texas Department of Corrections.

Doroteo Collazo Jr. of 2905 Ave. C has pleaded guilty to two counts of delivery of a controlled substance in 132nd District Court.

He is alleged to have delivered LSD to an undercover agent on two occassions in October and November of 1985. Collazo remains in the Scurry County Jail pending transfer to TDC.

Correction...

Local fire officials inadvertently listed, and the SDN reported, the residents of a home damaged by a bathroom heater fire Monday as Mr. and Mrs. Hoyle Holladay.

In fact, the residents of the home were Mr. and Mrs. David Haladay. Both couples live on West 37th St., where the fire occurred.

Warehouse burglary said cleared

Two cases were reported cleared Tuesday including a November burglary complaint which prompted the arrest of a 23-year-old suspect.

The suspect has been charged with entering the Rainbo Bread Warehouse at Ave. F on Nov. 9. Police say they will forward the case to the district attorney's office for possible prosecution.

Bread items valued at $11 were reportedly taken from the warehouse.

City investigators cleared also a recent criminal mischief complaint. According to reports, an 11-year-old male suspect was identified in connection with the BB gun shooting Jan. 7 of the back window of a 1977 Chevrolet pickup owned by Wayne Whiteside of 128 Milburn Ave.

The youth was later released to the custody of his parents with no charges filed.

Also Tuesday, a 13-year-old girl was picked up by police at the Tub Club Laundry in the 2600 Block of 26th St. around 8 p.m. This followed a misdemeanor theft report from the laundry owner.

She was also released to the custody of her parents with no charges filed.

Other incidents reported Tuesday and now under police investigation include a flashing incident reported at 5:44 p.m. in which a male suspect allegedly exposed himself to two girls in the 2600 Block of 42nd St.

Police are investigating also a misdemeanor assault complaint filed by a Snyder woman at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

DEAR ABBY: I am incensed over your reply to "Likes to Travel." She, her husband and her unmarried sister, "Clara," took trips together, and always booked one hotel room with two double beds. The married couple slept in one bed and Clara and her two dogs slept in the other. The couple thought the bill should be split in half — they paying half, and Clara paying the other half. And you agreed with the couple!

Abby, if this trio went to a restaurant and all three ordered the same meal, should the single woman pay one-half of the check — or one-third? There were three people in that hotel room, so why shouldn't the rent be split three ways?

Why do married people insist on being thought of as one "couple" instead of two individuals? It's appalling that singles are treated like second-class citizens. Single women don't have the same opportunities in the work force, and are overlooked socially, too! A person living alone pays the same rent on an apartment as a couple would for two. Utilities are the same, and so are car payments, etc., and I have to make it with one paycheck.

I suspect the married couple likes the arrangement as it stands. They're giving Clara the message that she can't possibly travel alone, so she can either go with them or stay home.

Tell Clara to dump her sister and brother-in-law, and travel alone. There are many wonderful tours that cater to singles — young and old. All Clara has to do is go to a travel agency and her eyes will be opened.

Please rethink your answer, Abby. Singles who travel with a couple should pay one-third, not one-half.

ON CLARA'S SIDE

DEAR ON: Now that you've explained it, I'm on Clara's side, too.

DEAR ABBY: What do you say to a person who calls you on the telephone while she is eating an apple, potato chips or hard candy? The sound of her chewing and chomping grates on my nerves! Also it's hard for me to understand her when she talks while she's eating.

W.VA. HILLBILLY

DEAR HILLBILLY: Say: "Goodbye. Call me back when you've finished eating."

DEAR ABBY: I don't care what your survey showed, men do prefer blondes. I am a natural brunette, now 30 years old, attractive, with a very nice figure. I attended a large high school and sat on the sidelines while the blondes got all the prize dates.

When I got out into the working world, I noticed that more heads turned when a blonde walked by, so guess what I did? I went blond!

It was a drastic change! I worked as a teller at a bank at that time and was very visible. I had been in that position for five years as a brunette, but I didn't get nearly the attention. As a blonde, I've been stopped on the street, in stores, at the movies, at church and in bars by men who wanted to make conversation with me. I was beating them off with sticks! Customers at work told me that they had never noticed me before. Some of my family didn't care for my blond hair, but almost everybody else did.

Well, my family and a few girlfriends talked me into going back to my natural color. I kept it that way for about three months, then I realized I was no longer very "special" looking, so last Saturday I went back to being a blonde.

If you can't beat 'em — join 'em!

NASA studies escape system

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — NASA engineers have concluded that the only practical way for astronauts to escape from the space shuttle in an emergency would be to use small rockets that would yank them out a side hatch and let them parachute to Earth.

The method would work only under certain circumstances, and would not have helped the crew of Challenger. But it would give astronauts in the future "a chance where there is none now," a NASA official said, and the astronauts corps has endorsed the concept.

It has been presented to shuttle chief Richard Truly, but NASA leaders have not given their approval. A decision is expected by March.

Bill Chandler, the Johnson Space Center engineer who directed the escape study, said it could be installed for the resumption of shuttle flights, now set for February 1988. The estimated cost: about $50 million.

NASA's plans for an astronaut escape have always called for them to ditch the shuttle in the ocean. Experts now believe ditching would provide little chance for the crew to survive, Chandler said.

Chandler said a parachute system is practical only when the shuttle is in controlled, gliding flight below 20,000 feet. The rest of the time, he said, the craft is traveling too fast or too high.

Challenger's seven crew members died when the spacecraft broke into pieces while two solid rockets engines and the shuttle's three main engines were firing. The chance of surviving such an accident, said Chandler, "is almost nil," and the astronauts know it.

But Chandler said a parachute system could provide a safe escape in the event the spacecraft fails to reach orbit, is forced to glide toward Earth, and is unable to reach a runway landing site. This scenario, which now calls for ditching, could happen if the main engines shut down prematurely during the launch sequence, one of the most likely failures that could face a shuttle crew.

He said that the system, while of "limited use," would provide astronauts a "comfort factor. We owe it to them to give them that."

With the system, each crew member must move quickly to give those who follow a chance to get out.

"You can't fly someone who is physically incapable of using this system because that would not only endanger himself, but other crew members as well," said astronauf Steven Nagel, who worked with the escape engineers.

As a result, he said, psychological and physical requirements for shuttle crew members could be toughened. That could affect the Citizen in Space program, where ordinary people are to be chosen to fly.

Here's how the escape system would work.

The shuttle is trapped between landing sites and is falling in a long, controlled glide toward Earth.

With the commander and pilot remaining at the controls, the rest of the crew line up at the side hatch, downstairs from the shuttle cockpit.

At 30,000 feet, the commander throws a switch to trigger explosives that blow off the hatch.

The waiting astronauts install a short ramp into the hatch. With one astronaut acting as a "jumpmaster," the others, one at a time, rush onto the ramp, lying on their backs with their heads pointing outward.

The jumpmaster attaches a lanyard to a harness worn by each crew member. The jumpmaster then triggers a small rocket that would yank the crew member down the ramp and away from the falling spacecraft.

An automatic sequence would cut the lanyard and open a parachute, allowing the astronaut to float to the ocean to inflate a personal life raft equipped with a homing beacon to guide rescue craft.
