Congress pushing Japanese 'trade war'

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Sounding the battle cry for a "trade war" with Japan, Congress is stepping up pressure on the Reagan administration to retaliate unless Tokyo opens new markets for American products.

"Unless you get tough, they're not going to respect anything else," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Thursday as the Senate approved 92-0 a non-binding measure urging President Reagan to strike back with tariffs and quotas if Japan doesn't lower trade barriers to U.S. products.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan continues to oppose protectionist legislation but that the administration is using "the strongest terms" to impress upon the Japanese its desire for opening of Japan's markets to U.S. competition.

Bentsen said the nation was waging a trade war, "and we're losing." With the wave of get-tough sentiment spreading to the House, the measure's prospects there appeared good, said Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill.

"We've got to move ahead," Michel said, adding that tough measures would prompt the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo to "start communicating that the natives are restless."

The Senate acted as the Tokyo government announced a 25 percent stepup in auto exports to the U.S. market starting Monday. Industry and labor officials said it could cost 100,000 American jobs and widen Japan's trade surplus over the United States — $37 billion in 1984 — by perhaps $4 billion.

Japan's announcement followed the Reagan Administration's decision not to seek an extension of the voluntary restraints on Japanese auto imports here. The five-year program expires March 31.

The Commerce Department reported Thursday a $11.4 billion overall U.S. trade deficit last month, with Japan accounting for $4.2 billion of the imbalance.

The Senate resolution, sponsored by Sens. John Danforth, R-Mo., and David Boren, D-Okla., followed mounting pressure for a signal that the government is worried over the ballooning trade gap.

The next step comes Monday when the Japanese could open the way for the sale of perhaps $2 billion in U.S. telecommunications gear to Nippon Telephone and Telegraph, a government monopoly being transformed into a private corporation.

Telecommunications talks are in progress between the two governments, aimed at clearing the way for U.S. manufacturers to compete for the business.

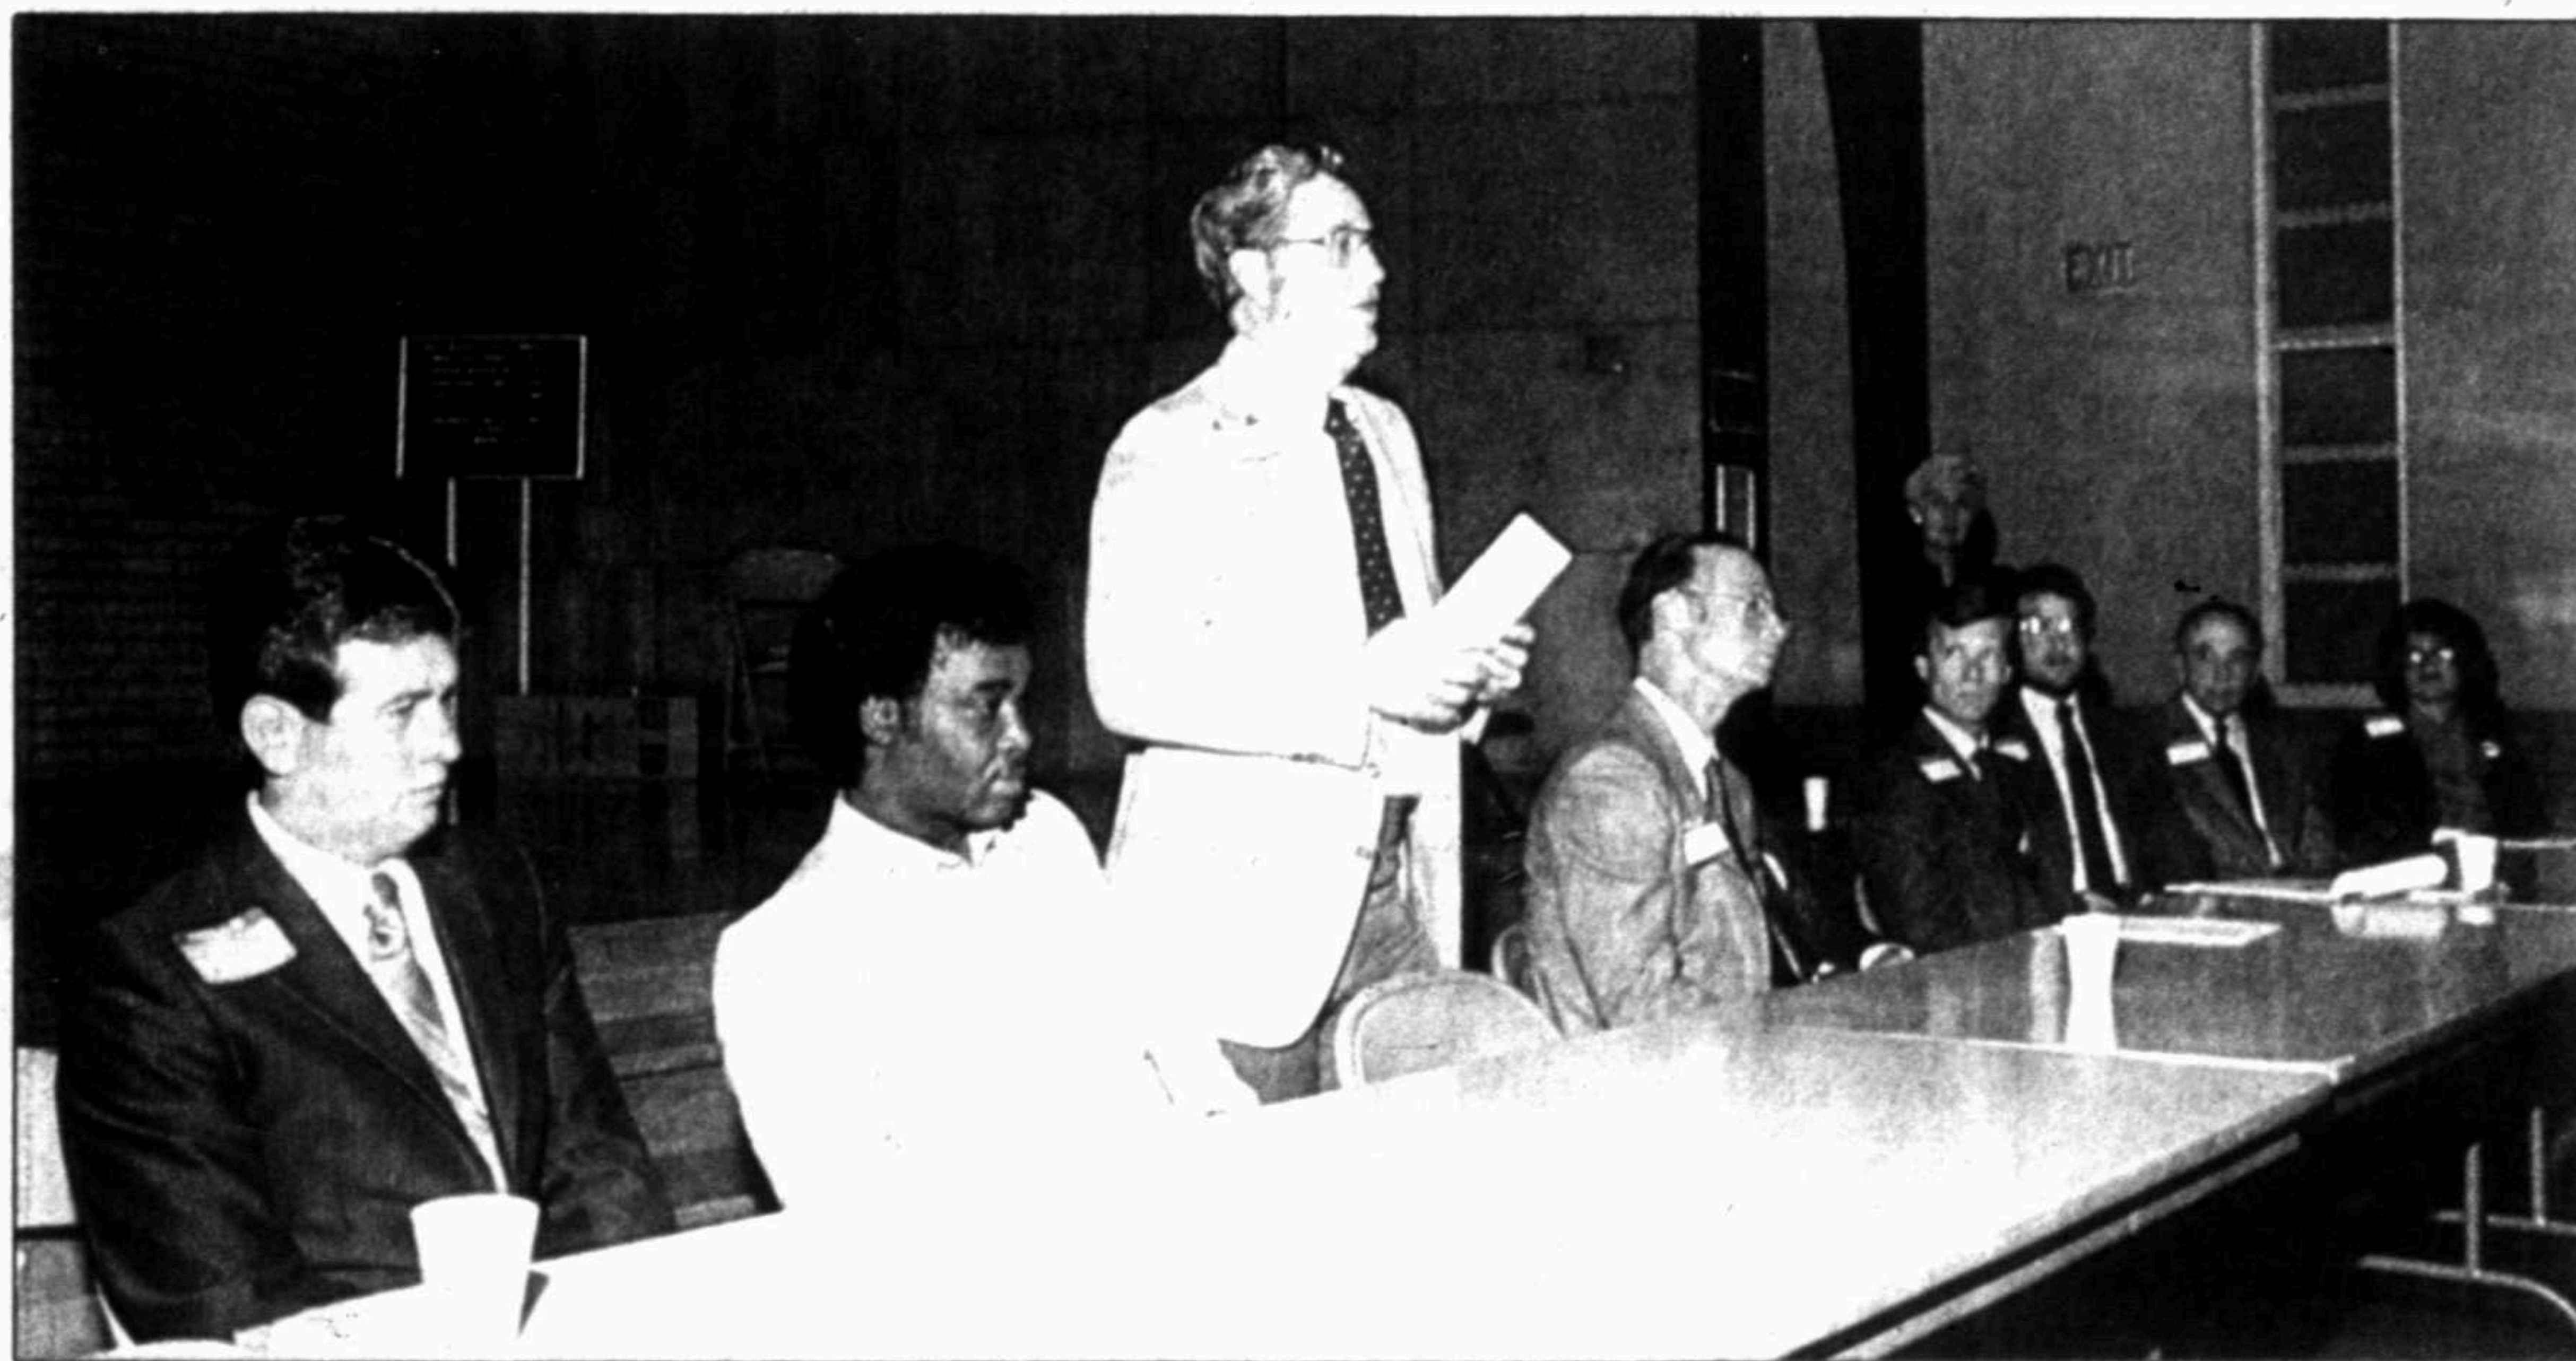

But chief American negotiator Lionel Ulmer told a House panel Thursday that he would be "less than candid if I suggested to you that success is assured by April 1."

Ulmer told reporters he remained unconvinced that retaliatory measures were needed but did say the Danforth resolution and similar measures were "useful" to impress the Japanese with America's resolve.

"I believe that's now widely understood in Japan...in large degree because of the efforts of people like Sen. Danforth," Ulmer said. He said the resolution would "bring them closer" to allowing in more U.S. goods but said he was uncertain "whether it will bring them close enough."

On the Senate floor, lawmakers pointed to the April 1 telecommunications decision and, without tying the two matters, spoke of harsher legislation to come.

Ballot wording compromise saves election schedule

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Midland election officials scrambled to re-word ballots for the April 6 city election this morning after a dispute which had threatened to delay the election until August or later was settled Thursday — at least for now — when city officials and two minority groups agreed to compromise.

"We're ready," said Elections Administrator Janeice Buita this morning. "Everything is done."

The change from "vote for two" to "vote for one or two" for the two at-large City Council seats was suggested Thursday by U.S. Fifth Circuit Judge Sam Johnson of New Orleans, who presided over a hearing on the two minority groups' request for an injunction delaying the election until the ballot could be approved by the Justice Department.

A three-judge panel consisting of Johnson, U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Buntion of Midland and U.S. District Judge Walter Smith of Waco heard three hours of testimony from both sides before suggesting the compromise, which changed the wording from the "vote for two" preferred by city officials to "vote for one or two," as requested by the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council.

BUT EVEN THOUGH absentee balloting began March 18, and 466 "vote for two" ballots have already been cast, the election will be held on schedule, as city officials had requested.

"It's really a victory for the people of the city," said Johnson, who cautioned the two sides and the news media not to declare a victor in the dispute. None of the principals involved were claiming victory or conceding defeat afterwards, but the minority-group representatives were clearly pleased with the outcome, while city officials appeared glum and resigned as they left the federal courthouse.

"I think it's a victory for all that are concerned with the city," said LULAC President Edia Hernandez, who was obviously delighted with the results.

"I'm just so happy that we got it solved," said an equally delighted Joanne DeWitt, who was a key member of the LULAC-BAC negotiating team.

"We never wanted to hold up the election," said BAC President Charlie Jackson.

City Attorney David Reagan said he was "disappointed" with the results because he feels the new wording is confusing and the fuss over the issue "will polarize voting" along racial lines. But Mayor G. Thane Akins was more conciliatory.

"There are no winners and losers in something like this. We'll just wait and see."

AKINS SAID HE was "relieved" the election will not be delayed, a move which he had testified might have caused a racial backlash among Anglo voters.

"That was our real concern," he said. "It'll certainly help with the election going forward."

Akins agreed with Reagan that the new language is confusing, but LULAC-BAC attorney Rolando Rios of San Antonio disagreed.

"I think the language that's going to be used will make it clear to minority and to new voters" that they're not required to vote for two at-large candidates, Rios said. "Both parties were able to agree on a mutually agreeable resolution."

Education seems main concern

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

State-mandated education reforms and what they mean to the local school district was the largest concern voiced by citizens during Thursday night's candidate forum at St. Paul's United Methodist Church.

The event, sponsored by the League of Women Voters and Uptown Business & Professional Women, featured candidates for Midland City Council, Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees and Midland County Hospital District board of directors.

Although a controversy over ballot language for the at-large seats on the Midland City Council was settled only hours before the forum, not one council candidate was questioned about the issue.

Instead, it was competency tests for teachers; the no-pass, no-play rule; and drugs and alcohol in the schools that consumed part of the time allotted during the question and answer session.

APPEARING AT THE forum were: City Council, District 2, Patrick Aleman, Oralia Corrales, Clarence Meekins and Jimenez Salazar; City Council at-large, Manuel Carrasco, Katie Heck, Terry Lowry, Gordon Marcum II and A.A. Thomas Jr.; MISD board Place 7, Geoff Barnett, Mike Butler and Betsy Robinson; place 5, Michael Conaway, and Midland Hospital district, Gene Abbott, Jacqueline Allen, Frank Cahoon and Dr. Walter Parks.

Absent were David Godfrey, District 1 City Council; Frank Carrillo, District 2 City Council; and Joe Golding, Place 6 MISD.

School board candidates differed in their responses to a question over the requirement to make all teachers pass competency tests and to keep a student from participating in extracurricular activities if he or she fails a course in a six-weeks period. But they all agreed there is a drug and alcohol use problem in Midland schools.

Barnett, whose wife taught school in MISD for several years, said he favored the teacher competency test but he also is wants to see the degree programs in colleges changed.

The no-pass, no-play rule is "a little too strict," he said.

Butler contended testing teachers won't fix the problem. The tests, he said, should be given in college before a student has graduated to the teaching ranks. The no-pass, no-play rule "is a good idea. We shouldn't send someone to represent the school who can barely read or write."

Budget negotiators reporting steady progress

By CLIFF HAAS
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — Negotiators meeting privately to reach a budget compromise between the White House and Republican senators are reporting steady progress.

In public, President Reagan and his budget director, David A. Stockman, are pressuring Congress to follow administration proposals for shrinking deficits by slashing or eliminating a host of domestic spending programs. They say the reward for taking such politically unpleasant medicine will be a robust economy.

But in private, compromises apparently are being reached.

"I can't say that we have an agreement, but we're making pretty steady and pretty encouraging progress," Stockman said Thursday of the negotiations. Later he met with Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., and other senior GOP senators.

"We're working quietly without debating it in the media," Dole said.

Neither Dole nor Stockman gave details and both declined to say how quickly they hope to complete work. But Dole said the evidence of progress was "the fact that we have had a number of meetings and a willingness on both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue to focus on the deficit."

More talks were planned today. The negotiators began work earlier this week on an alternative to Reagan's fiscal 1986 budget that has attracted virtually no support on Capitol Hill and a package approved by the GOP-controlled Senate Budget Committee, which has been received coolly by the administration and many Republicans.

"We're in close communication," Stockman said. "But I would not suggest that agreement is imminent or at hand."

"Nevertheless, I have been encouraged over the last several days that a sense that the time to act has come, that the preliminaries are over and we are very heavily and intensely involved in some discussions that I think can lead to a package that we can take to the Congress fairly soon and put this basic, and almost ethical choice, to the American people," Stockman said.

The committee plan would spend less on defense than the president wants, and more on domestic programs. In addition, it calls for canceling next year's Social Security cost-of-living increase, a move the president has said he will consider if it is passed by an overwhelming, bipartisan majority in Congress.

The committee's plan also estimates deficit cuts of $56.8 billion in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, and nearly $300 billion over three years. Without action, deficits are projected to be well over $200 billion annually for years to come.

Reagan sought to maintain pressure on Congress to enact spending cuts as he made a campaign-style trip Thursday to tell traders on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange that if Congress adopts the tax overhaul and spending restraints he wants, "our economy will be free to expand to its full potential, driving the bears (a falling stock market) back into permanent hibernation."

Leading indicators continue healthy gain in February

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge gained a healthy 0.7 percent in February, leading the Reagan administration and some private forecasters to predict an upturn in economic activity in the months ahead.

The Commerce Department said the February gain in the index of Leading Indicators followed an even stronger January increase of 1.5 percent, the biggest rise in almost two years.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the new report offered encouragement that current slower growth "will be followed by better performances in the period ahead."

Baldrige said he was "particularly encouraged" by a 48 percent rebound in orders for new plant and equipment during February. He said this was a "sign that capital spending this year will again be a driving force in the economic expansion."

Baldrige said increases in the leading index of 0.5 percent a month would be consistent with the administration's forecast of 4 percent economical growth this year. The index has increased only 0.3 percent on average in each of the last six months.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes noted that "some current economic statistics indicate a moderation of business activity," but added that "the leading indicators show a path of continuing growth in the months ahead. With the coming of spring, the indicators signal renewed optimism."

Michael Evans, head of Evans Economics, a private forecasting firm, said the two healthy gains in the index could be indicating that the slowdown in activity that started last July may have ended in February.

Inmate indicted in prostitution scandal

Associated Press

CONROE — Grand jurors indicted a former New Jersey mobster on charges of organizing and running a Montgomery County house of prostitution from his cell in a Texas prison, authorities said.

Raymond Carl Freda, already sentenced to life in prison for an attempted arson conviction, was served with two indictments Thursday accusing him of engaging in organized criminal activities, sheriff Joe Corley said. Bond was set at

Six other people, including Freda's wife, his brother-in-law and a former prison guard, also were named Wednesday in 11 sealed indictments, Corley said.

Freda, also known as Raymond G. Conti, was moved to Houston in the early 1970s under the federal Witness Protection Program after testifying about his ties to the late crime boss Carlo Gambino.

His exploits as an "enforcer" in the Gambino crime family were detailed in the book, "Marked to Die." In the book, he said killing was "the easiest thing in the world to get away with" and likened it to "going to work in the morning or slapping your wife in the mouth when she needs it."

Freda, 51, was linked to an arson ring that Houston authorities believed was responsible for about a dozen fires.

He indicted as a habitual criminal, convicted of attempted arson at a Houston restaurant and received a life sentence in 1980.

But his criminal activities apparently never stopped, authorities said.

An informant tipped investigators in January that the prostitution house had opened in the area, Corley said.

Freda allegedly operated Foxy Lady Mini Movies through contacts he made with employees at the Texas Department of Corrections' Eastham Unit, about 60 miles north of Conroe, Corley said.

The operation, located about 10 miles north of the Southeast Texas community, was recently raided

Hot Tub No. 1.

District Attorney James Keeshan said investigators allege that Freda helped select the site for the brothel and provided advice on its activities. However, Keeshan said, authorities were uncertain whether Freda benefited financially from the operation.

At noon Thursday, the Montgomery County Crime Control Unit along with officers from the Harris County vice squad, the Trinity County sheriff's department and the Texas Department of Public Safety raided the facility and two area homes.

Among the suspects arrested was Francisco Olivas, a 23-year-old former prison guard from Trinity County alleged to be responsible for the day-to-day operation of Foxy Lady. Olivas was fired in December after prison officials found drugs in his dormitory room.

Freda's wife, Delores Conti, 41; and her brother, Tony Rubino, 35, both of Spring, also were arrested.

Cherry blossoms frame the Jefferson Memorial in Washington, D.C., just in time for the annual Cherry Blossom Festival beginning April 7.

Cherry-blossom time arrives in U.S. capital

By BOB DART
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The early-warning cherry tree — an aged one by the Tidal Basin that always flowers first — has burst into glorious pink, the National Park Service said.

The blooming of Washington's 3,500 or so other cherry trees will quickly follow, predicted Earle Kittleman, a Park Service spokesman. "It all comes pretty fast. Within the next five to ten days, they'll all be in bloom."

And Spring, once again, will have come to the nation's capital.

The signs were everywhere on Wednesday. On Capitol Hill, the somber suits of winter had been shed as lobbyists and members of Congress strode through the sunshine in crisp khaki and seersuckers. Yellow school buses parked near the grassy plain between the Capitol and the Washington Monument as the class trips, 1985 vintage, crowded the Smithsonian.

The days are longer now and dusk brings practice for Mall Ball — the beer-fueled softball games played on the Mall by office teams ranging from CIA agents to congressional staffs to foreign embassies to newspaper Washington bureaus. Sidewalk joggers in Nikes and shorts circle the White House at noon. Bureaucrats lunch on sandwiches on rooftop pavilions.

But nothing heralds Spring in Washington like the cherry blossoms.

The first of the trees came to the city in 1900.

Over the next decade, over 3,000 were imported from Japan. There are several varieties: Yoshino with white blossoms. Akhnos with pink flowers. Kwanzans with double white blossoms.

As the original trees died off during the years, they were replaced with new ones. Now, in a good year, the seem to be blooming everywhere. The cherry trees ring the Tidal Basin, the circular pool near the Jefferson Memorial. They brighten the gray granite walls of the squat government buildings. They stand beside sidewalks, turning concrete almost cheery.

"When you have a gentle, gradual warming up and cool nights like we've had," explained Kittleman, "they do real well."

The blossoms also signal the coming of the Cherry Blossom Festival, traditionally Washington's biggest outdoor activity. Unfortunately, the festival and the flowering often do not occur simultaneously. The weather determines when the cherry trees bloom, explained Kittleman. The predictions of pageant planners has little impact on the trees.

The peak of blooming, when the most trees are in full flower, has ranged from March 20 to April 15. This year's festival will be from April 7-13 so blossoms should be abounding.

Each state society — organizations of expatriates from Georgia or Ohio or wherever they have settled in Washington — picks a princess who takes part in the national Cherry Blossom Festival. A national Cherry Blossom Queen is picked by spinning a roulette wheel.

The annual Cherry Blossom Parade will be held in Washington on April 13.

BALLOT

But three hours of often acrimonious testimony had made it clear there were strong differences between the two sides, and the "mutually agreeable resolution" was strongly "suggested" by Johnson as an alternative to a court-ordered solution.

"It seems to us that you stand in a unique position here at 5:00 on Thursday of being able to further the spirit of cooperation, as you did in December," when the two sides settled out of court the LULAC-BAC suit to force the city to switch to single-member districts," Johnson said.

The city agreed then to switch from electing five councilmen and the mayor at large to electing four councilmen from single-member districts and two councilmen and the mayor at large. When the Justice Department approved the plan last month, the issue appeared to have been settled.

But LULAC and BAC thought they had a verbal agreement to be consulted about the ballot language; city officials deny any such agreement was made, claiming the ballot language is mandated by the Secretary of State and doesn't have to be pre-cleared by the Justice Department.

THE BALLOT wording for the two at-large seats is important because the minority groups wanted to increase the chances that a black or Hispanic candidate could be elected to one of these seats with the help of "single-shot" voting, whereby a candidate's supporters only vote for one candidate instead of two. Since the top two vote getters win the seats, voting for two candidates in effect dilutes a candidate's support.

"That was the only reason we agreed to the two at-large positions," said Rios in his opening statement.

When first-time voters read "vote for two," they might not realize they can vote for only one if they prefer, according to Rios, who claimed the Spanish translation was even more misleading. City officials said "vote for two" is the less confusing, and is commonly used on ballots across the state.

Manuel Carrasco is the only minority candidate among the five running for the two at-large positions, and he testified that single-shot voting "wouldn't be to my advantage or to anyone's advantage. I'm running on my own merits — I don't think the wording would have any effect" on his chances.

Carrasco said he opposed the request for an injunction delaying the election, and claimed many members of the minority community agreed with his opposition to a single-shot voting strategy favoring a minority candidacy.

"I'm relieved that the election is going to go forward," Carrasco said today, after the compromise was reached. "I think the whole community came out ahead."

Ms. DeWitt, Ms. Hernandez and LULAC Vice President Amado Calderon testified that city officials had been uncooperative and unresponsive to their requests to consult on the ballot language. Akins, Reagan and City Secretary Bill Clanton testified they had indeed tried to cooperate, and had not tried to deliberately insert anti-single-shot language in the ballot.

"ISN'T THIS AN attempt to continue the control of the Anglo majority in this town?" asked LULAC-BAC co-counsel Bill Garrett of Akins.

"No, sir," replied the mayor, who did concede he opposed single-shot voting because it could divide the community along racial lines.

"If everything boils down to a racial question, it would make things ineffective (on the City Council)," he said.

The most important legal issue was whether the ballot language, which hadn't been used in Midland City Council elections before, was a change which had to be pre-cleared by the Justice Department. That federal agency is considering the city's submission on the question, but has until mid-May to decide. The minority groups wanted the election delayed rather than proceed with the "vote for two" language.

Since the two sides came to an agreement, the panel of judges won't rule on the legal question, and the city will make a new submission asking the Justice Department to approve the "vote for one or two" language, which will start the 60-day approval process all over again.

If the new language is not approved, or if the 466 absentee ballots with the old language are challenged, the election results could still be invalidated, according to Assistant City Attorney Kirk Swinney.

"Anything could happen," he said.

FORUM

Ms. Robinson, a former teacher, agreed with Butler the competency test should be given in colleges. Teachers already are undergoing evaluations three times a year by their principals and outside persons, she said.

THE RESPONSIBILITY for learning goes back to the parents, said Ms. Robinson, but the no-pass rule is putting it on the teachers.

Drug and alcohol abuse is a serious problem, she said, citing a report that 80 percent of the high school students in Midland "are into some type of drinking."

Conoway said he supported raising the legal drinking age to 21. "We're not doing anything to counsel the children with the problem. All we're doing is kicking them out of school."

The four also agreed that when positions at the administrative level become open, the school board should look at its own personnel for a replacement rather than bringing in someone from another city.

Marcum was singled out of the council candidates for a question about why caliche is still used for building roads in Midland when a 1987 Texas A&M study showed it wasn't a suitable material.

"They couldn't give us a good alternative," Marcum said. "We're doing the downtown intersections with concrete, but it costs four to five times as much as asphalt."

School board candidates questioned about the new Cowden Scharbauer Elementary School being constructed in a flood plain responded they weren't aware of the situation.

A PROPOSAL to build a joint city-county jail should be studied, according to several city council candidates, while others admitted they didn't know enough about the issue to make a decision yet.

Carrasco said he would support a study to determine the feasibility of such a project. "There are areas where different government bodies can participate," he said, looking at the County Tax Appraisal District.

Mrs. Heck said the chamber task force which studied the county jail issue and made some recommendations reported the Lubbock city-county jail was working well. "It should be looked into to see if we can save money," she added.

Thomas, who serves on the board of the Permian Basin Law Enforcement Academy, said 17 county law enforcement agencies are operating that facility jointly. "Taxpayers can't afford to sustain the cost of individual facilities," he said.

Asked how Parkview Hospital can implement a plan to allow insurance holders not to pay the additional 20 percent owed on a bill, the four candidates agreed it is because Parkview is a private company while MMH is a public facility.

"The health care delivery system is more competitive and we're trying to keep our prices down and our quality up," responded Parks.

All candidates, who would be representing taxing bodies, were questioned about possible inequities in the property assessment — that some expensive pieces of property were being taxed for a much lower rate.

Lowry said he felt the council tried to get as high a value as possible placed on the property to help on tax revenues.

BUT MRS. HECK, who formerly worked in real estate, took exception to the statement. "No one complained when their home sold for $75,000 and they bought it for only $25,000," she said.

Carrasco said raising taxes should be a last resort of the council. And incongruities in different appraisals should be reviewed.

Abbott suggested property owners not satisfied with their appraisal should consult with the Board of Equalization. As owner of several pieces of property, Abbott said he appears before them frequently "and I have found them fair and easy to deal with."

It was on this question that the only applause came during the evening and that was for Parks' brief reply, "I have no meaningful comment to add."

During their introduction statements, most of the candidates listed their qualifications and reasons for seeking public office.

Influx of Japanese autos could stall industry's recovery

By KATHERINE RIZZO
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT — An influx of 450,000 more Japanese cars under new voluntary export restraints will put the brakes on the American auto industry's spectacular recovery, say workers at one Detroit assembly plant.

Japan announced Thursday it will limit its auto exports to 2.3 million in the year beginning April 1. Since 1981, under voluntary restraints requested by the United States, the Japanese limited exports to 1.85 million vehicles.

Domestic automakers and the United Auto Workers union said the 24.3 percent increase in imports may reduce some sticker prices, but at a heavy cost: tens of thousands of American jobs.

"I don't think it's right," John Kohlrus said Thursday as workers on the afternoon shift drifted into Chrysler Corp.'s Jefferson Avenue facility. "If they send more cars over here, they should be fair and let us send (American goods) to Japan. It isn't a two-way trade."

The Japanese could have allowed an unlimited number of cars to flood the U.S. market, but the Detroit workers who assemble Chrysler's Aries, Lesaron and New Yorker models found that to be little consolation.

"That's like saying, 'We'll beat you up but we won't kill you,'" said production control supervisor George A. Webb. "It's an impact to the U.S. that's very difficult to get over."

Trim repairman Kohlrus, an autoworker for 36 years, said, "If we had the quotas for just a little while longer, then we could be stronger and fully competitive."

"It's like going up a big mountain," he said. "We're just about on top of the hill, but we are not quite there yet."

A co-worker said he was taking the announcement in stride.

"Half our parts — the ones we use in there — are built by Japan anyway," said a veteran autoworker with "George" stitched on his green union jacket but who refused to give his name.

"Competition's good. It doesn't matter who makes the car, people want one that will give them a high trade-in," added the worker, who said he drives a Mazda sports car.

State officials agreed that the additional Japanese imports will have a dramatic impact on Michigan's economy, with predictions ranging from bad (the Republican estimate) to brutal (from Democrats).

Japan's export cap is "not much of a limit," said state Treasurer Robert Bowman, who estimated a potential annual loss of $50 million to $75 million in state revenues.

Theodore Ferris, director of the Senate Fiscal Agency, predicted the domestic car companies would lose about 300,000 vehicles in market share and that the state would get $30 million to $40 million less in taxes in the next fiscal year.

Chrysler said the increase in Japanese car shipments is "the equivalent of two assembly plants and six or seven supplier plants and all the jobs that go along with them," and UAW President Owen Bieber said it "translates into 90,000 fewer jobs for American workers."

In Washington, Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., said the influx would increase the trade deficit by nearly $5 billion, while Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., vowed to continue seeking Congressional action to protect U.S. jobs from Japanese competition.

"I think the Japanese must be laughing at us all the way to the bank," Levin said. "But I'm not mad at them. They're only doing what President Reagan said they could do."

Briton surrenders after trying to hijack jetliner to Hawaii

LONDON (AP) — A Briton pretending to have a gun commanded a Lufthansa jetliner, demanded to fly to London and then Hawaii, and then surrendered to police after a one-hour siege at Heathrow airport, Scotland Yard reported.

Passenger J.A. Ater, 57, a Houston, Texas, businessman, said the man had said on the plane's intercom: "I'm calling for a jumbo jet, and we're all going to Honolulu," Hawaii.

The plane, on a flight from Hamburg, West Germany, to London, had been surrounded by police when it arrived here. None of the 108 passengers on board the Boeing 737 was harmed. Lufthansa said none of the plane's six crew were harmed.

Police and the Civil Aviation Authority officials said the man appeared to be deranged, and pointed out that Lufthansa flight 040 had been bound for Heathrow, where he ordered it to land.

After the Boeing 737 landed at Heathrow, Ater said, "There was some discussion between the man and the crew, and then he went back and sat down in his seat, and I thought it was all over."

Scotland Yard spokeswoman Frances Walker told The Associated Press that the hijacker "appeared to be mentally ill and did not seem to have any terrorist motive."

Ms. Walker said the man was British but did not release his name.

The incident caused Heathrow to be switched to single-runway operation for an hour, and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's flight to Brussels for a Common Market summit was delayed half an hour.

The man was not armed, Ms. Walker said. She reported that the hijacker was "a deportee, but we have no further information on that at this time or where he may have been deported from."

A Civil Aviation Authority spokesman, who did not permit use of his name, said the plane was only 15 minutes from touchdown at Heathrow when one of the passengers sent word to the pilot that he had a gun.

"He told the pilot that he wanted to proceed to Heathrow and to no other airport," the CAA spokesman said.

Mrs. Hilard Lechel, 44, a British citizen who lives near Hamburg, said the passengers had not panicked.

"It was all a bit of a non-starter," she said.

Mrs. Lechel said she began to feel impatient with all the waiting but felt worse after the incident ended.

"I'm beginning to shake a bit now," she said. "It wasn't until I saw the police with their guns and their dogs that I realized it was being taken seriously. I suppose I feel rather sorry for the man. He was obviously sick."

Her 11-year-old son Falko disagreed with his mother and thought the experience was "tremendous."

"It was my first flight and I thought it was really good fun," he said. "After this the flight home will seem ordinary."

Airport officials, who declined to be identified, said the hijacker had got into the jetliner's cockpit during the flight.

After landing at 9:03 a.m. (4:03 a.m. EST) the plane taxied to a remote corner of the sprawling airport and was ringed by armed police, fire engines and an ambulance.

Shortly before 10 a.m., the pilot was ordered to taxi across the runway to the main apron area at Terminal 2 where police boarded the plane.

Portuguese city bears slight resemblance to England

OPORTO, Portugal (AP) — On the immaculate grass pitch of the Oporto Cricket and Lawn Tennis Club, teams of both men and women whose ancestors came to Portugal generations ago from England face off for their annual field hockey tournament.

Except for the brilliant sunshine and the smattering of Portuguese mixed in with the English cheers of the spectators, the whole thing could be taking place somewhere in Britain.

But the club, together with 20 other similar associations in this city of 333,000 on Portugal's north coast, is a bastion of Britishness in a country whose ties to England date back to 1373.

Oporto, the most "English" of Portuguese cities and famous for port wine, is the last scheduled stop on Queen Elizabeth II's official visit to Portugal March 25-29.

Peter Symington, 40, a member of the Cricket and Lawn Tennis Club Committee and an ardent field hockey player, is also production manager of Warre and Co., the second-largest and still family run port wine firm established in Oporto in 1670.

Thirty-three years later England and Portugal signed the Treaty of Methuen, opening up the Portuguese market to British goods and giving British merchants control over the export to England of wines from the Alto-Douro region that became known by the generic name of port.

Symington is a port taster, whose art in blending different ports to a consistent quality has been passed down in his family for generations.

However, he fears his son may not follow in his footsteps.

"Everything is far more technical now, and he may not have the necessary qualifications," Symington said during a break in a field hockey tournament in which women join men on the teams. He added that the number of families in Oporto with British connections is diminishing while multinational firms are rapidly buying up the port cellars across the Douro River in Vila Nova de Gaia.

The British Nationality Act of 1943 divided British subjects into several categories, including children born of British parents who themselves carry British passports but are not entitled to live or work in England without visas and special permits because they belong to the third generation born abroad.

A similar situation exists for people of British descent in Argentina.

"We are a dying breed," said Roderick Reynolds, a fifth generation Anglo-Portuguese whose family's cork forests were inherited from his great-great-grandfather.

Further restrictions to British nationality were established in 1982 when the Parliament in London voted that registration of birth at a British consulate no longer granted automatic nationality, and that first generation children of British subjects born abroad cannot pass on their British nationality to their children.

"The families with the long historic ties will either merge into Portuguese society or go back to England," said Reynolds, 51, whose sons are in England.

"They would love to come and work in Portugal," he added, "but the salaries are very low by British standards. I earn the equivalent of a waiter in London."

The Reynolds family has just had returned to them part of their lands expropriated during the 1974 revolution that overthrew 48 years of authoritarian government.

"We now have to re-establish the ecological balance by laying down pasture and putting in cattle to fertilize the land," Reynolds explained.

Former Texas Congressman Barbara Jordan is greeted by Secretary of State George Shultz after she introduced the cabinet member to speak at the Austin Council on Foreign Affairs Thursday. Ms. Jordan is now a professor at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas.

Shultz: Way to keep peace by being strong

AUSTIN (AP) — The way to keep peace is by being peaceful, "but also by being strong," Secretary of State George P. Shultz said in discussing President Reagan's anti-missile defense plans.

Shultz spoke Thursday to the Austin Council on Foreign Affairs, and his speech was followed by a question-and-answer period.

Shultz said a workable defense system would aid the United States' objective of deep reductions in offensive missiles.

"A strategic balance at sharply lower levels is more vulnerable to the risk of cheating," he said. "The lower the agreed level of arms, the greater the danger that concealed deployments could be of a magnitude to threaten the other side's forces.

"But with feasible defenses in place, so many illegal missiles would be required to upset the balance that significant cheating could not be concealed."

Shultz said an anti-missile weapon, such as Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, also known as the "Star Wars," is nothing new to the Soviet Union.

"They have been invaded and invaded. They are very conscious of defense," Shultz said. "This is nothing new to them."

He also said some U.S. leaders who were skeptical at first are beginning to say: "Maybe the president has got something there."

Student at El Paso college shot five times

EL PASO (AP) — Police say they have no leads as to why a student was shot five times as he walked to his car in a college campus parking lot in this West Texas city.

Ruben G. Gregston, 18, of El Paso, was attacked by at least two assailants Thursday afternoon at the El Paso Community College's Transmountain Campus, where he was a full-time student studying aviation technology, police said.

After undergoing more than six hours of surgery, Gregston was listed in "very critical" condition late Thursday at William Beaumont Army Medical Center, said hospital spokesman Lt. Col. Dave Stewart.

Gregston was shot in the shoulder and abdomen, according to police Lt. John Lanahan.

Lt. Dennis Shelley said witnesses to the 12:40 p.m. incident saw two men run into a desert area southeast of the campus, which is remotely located near a state highway in northeastern El Paso.

A two-mile area was cordoned off for two hours Thursday while a U.S.

CLEBURNE (AP) — Two men are on their way to life terms in prison for abducting a 13-year-old Alvarado girl, but three other people still face aggravated kidnapping charges in the case.

A jury deliberated 2½ hours Thursday before sentencing Michael Lynn Mills and James Wesley Foote to life in prison for their role in the 2½-day ordeal that ended in a dramatic chase across several East Texas counties. Foote was also fined $10,000.

Those same jurors took only 20 minutes to convict the pair Wednesday, and three more people are to stand trial in the abduction of Amy McNeil. Miss McNeil was kidnapped Jan. 11, and the culprits demanded a $100,000 ransom from her father.

After tense days of waiting, her kidnappers fled across East Texas with Miss McNeil in tow, exchanging gunfire with pursuing police.

During the trial, Miss McNeil described how Foote pushed her up against the back window of a car during the running gun battle. "I tried to get down on the floorboard, but James Foote said that if they saw me, they might stop shooting," Miss McNeil said. "He tried to put me up into the back window."

After a chase of speeds reaching 100 mph, the shootout ended in East Texas with a Texas Ranger and a deputy sheriff racing through a hail of gunfire to rescue the girl.

Miss McNeil told jurors how her kidnappers took drugs, stole cars and talked about fleeing to Hawaii with the ransom money. They discussed taking more hostages during their final flight from authorities, she added.

Johnson County District Attorney Dan Boulware said both Foote, 34, of Arlington and Mills, 28, of Dallas have prior felony convictions.

Still awaiting trial in the case are Daniel Walter Necker Jr., 21, of Mesquite; George Thomas Barnes, 21, of Dallas; and Lisa Anne Bouvier, 19, of Balch Springs.

Jury sentences gunman in barroom shooting

DALLAS (AP) — A man described by prosecutors as "a mean, mean person" has been sentenced to two consecutive life prison sentences for a barroom shooting spree that killed two people and wounded four others.

A jury Thursday ordered four life sentences and two 75-year terms for Charles Walter "Doc" Morrison, 61, who was convicted on two murder charges and four attempted murder charges stemming from a Nov. 19 attack at Webb Lounge in northwest Dallas.

State District Judge John Ovard ordered Morrison, who also was fined $50,000, to serve two of the life sentences back-to-back.

Morrison testified that he opened fire in the bar with a semi-automatic rifle following a dispute over a $4,500 gambling debt.

Jurors convicted Morrison, a former tree surgeon and used car salesman, after rejecting a plea by defense attorney John Simmons for leniency because Morrison was suffering from a sickness during the shooting.

"This man was very sick on Nov. 19," said Simmons. "However, this sickness was affecting his brain. It was weighing heavily on his brain and heavily on his mind and was certainly a contributing factor in what he did."

Prosecutors asked jurors to assess Morrison a maximum sentence of life imprisonment on each of the felony convictions. But Simmons argued against a life sentence, saying it would be "a death sentence" because of Morrison's age and poor health.

Prosecutors countered that Morrison was "a walking time bomb" who intended to kill everyone inside the bar as a means of drawing attention to himself.

"This was not over a cancer operation or a gambling debt," said Assistant District Attorney Randy Isenberg.

Texas lawmakers will ask Mexico to return flag

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Majority Leader Jim Wright is offering the president of Mexico an opportunity to create some good will in the United States by returning a uniquely American artifact — a flag that flew over the Alamo.

Wright, D-Fort Worth, and the rest of the Texas congressional delegation will ask Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid to temporarily return the flag in time for the Texas Sesquicentennial, the 150th anniversary of Texas independence.

The flag, the only Alamo banner known to exist, is in a museum in Mexico City.

In a letter, dated April 1 but made public Thursday, Wright writes, "There is tremendous interest in the temporary return of the flag within Congress. We feel that the lending of this flag will be seen as a positive gesture of good will and as a powerful symbol of United States-Mexican friendship and cooperation."

Charmayne Marsh, Wright's press secretary, said the letter will be signed by the entire Texas delegation.

U.S.-Mexico relations have been strained recently by accusations of lack of Mexican support for U.S. attempts to control drug traffic.

The Alamo fell on March 6, 1836, after a ragged band of Texas independence fighters held the small San Antonio mission for 13 days against the Mexican army. All the 180-some-odd Alamo defenders, representing 19 states, died.

The flag in question belonged to the New Orleans Greys, a contingent of soldiers from Louisiana.

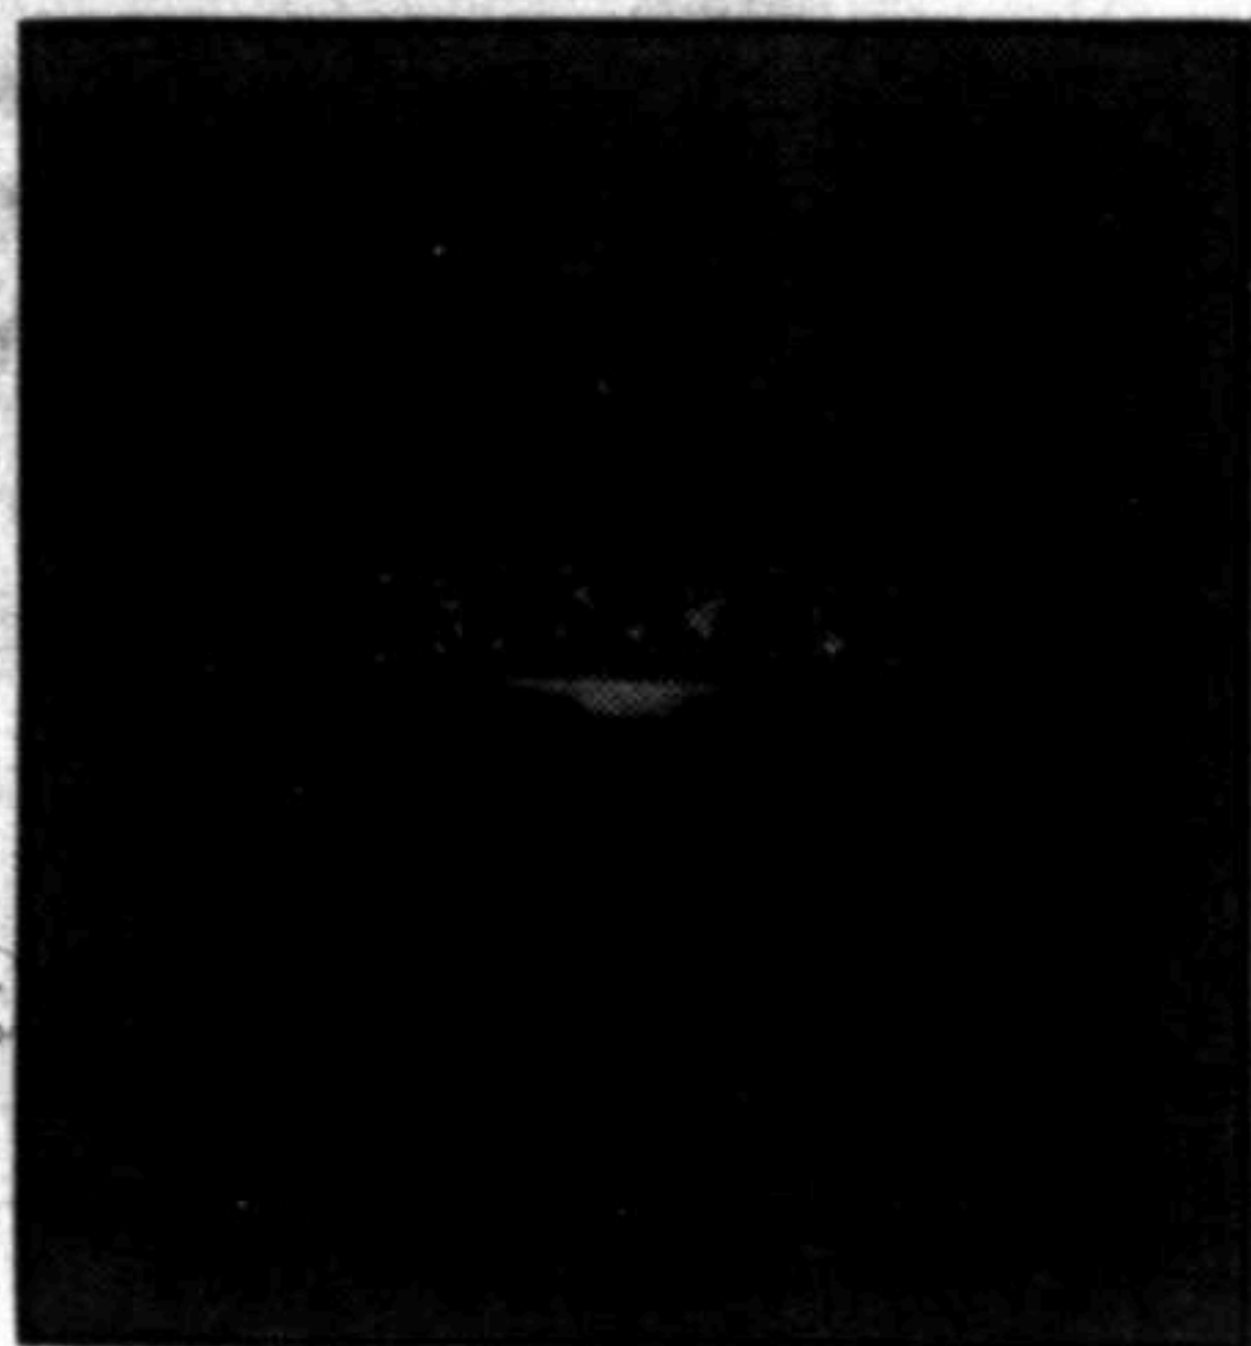

The flag was torn down and taken back to Mexico as proof that the United States was aiding the Texans.

There have been several attempts to get the surviving flag back, but it has been 20 years since there has been a congressional request.

Mexican Ambassador to the United States Jorge de los Reyes has forwarded an inquiry to the Chapultepec Museum, where the flag is stored.

Famine, warfare turn Backwater town into major port

ASSAB, Ethiopia (AP) — More than 200 trucks rumble every day through the narrow, dusty streets of Assab, scattering chickens, goats and sheep. Around the clock, they ferry food coming in for famine victims and carry Ethiopian coffee, cotton and other exports going out to world markets.

Assab has come a long way from what it was 10 years ago — a backwater port on the Red Sea.

Drought and guerrilla wars have made it the main gateway for famine relief and Ethiopia's exports. It also has become what some foreigners call the "port of pubs." It now has 200 bars, one for every 400 people in a population of 80,000.

"The drivers and the dock laborers work very hard and earn a lot of money here," said Tsefaye Michael, who runs one of the pubs that are usually crowded from about 4 p.m. daily until a midnight curfew begins.

A laborer in the bar, who identified himself only as Giorgis, said stevedores working night and day earn up to 40 birr (nearly $20) a day in a nation where the average annual wage is about $110.

Assab, 538 miles northeast of the capital, Addis Ababa, began funneling famine relief last year.

Long before that it became the chief outlet for exports. In the 1970s, secessionist guerrillas had cut the 70-mile railway that ran from the northern port of Massawa to Asmara, the regional capital of Eritrea.

But while the port has doubled its handling capacity to 5,000 tons a day since November, it apparently isn't enough. Stockpiles of wheat, machinery and spare parts can be seen piled up at dockside awaiting transport.

"If Assab is the heart of the transport side of the economy, and in particular the aid effort, then it is pumping away strongly," said Roman Roos, a transport consultant on loan from the Swiss government to the United Nations World Food Program.

"The arteries, or roads leading from the port, are healthy. But the pulse, the actual movement of trucks, is not. We need more lorries (trucks) — twice as many as we have now available — to clear this port."

Trucks are a major issue in Assab as well as in Addis Ababa.

Ethiopia has about 6,000 non-military trucks for some 2,500 miles of fully paved roads. Half of its 42 million people are two days' walk from the nearest road.

Relief agencies worry that the movement of food, drugs, clothing, tents and blankets is only about half of what it could be from Assab.

Aircraft are used to reach the remotest parts of Ethiopia's 14 administrative regions, 11 of them containing an estimated 9 million people affected by three years of drought.

Deadly force

A Supreme Court ruling barring use of deadly force by police officers to stop fleeing suspects who pose no immediate threat isn't exactly in the interest of law and order, but in this instance it is undeniably wise.

The ruling, which stuck down laws in Texas and 22 other states, says officers cannot use deadly force to stop suspected fleeing felons who pose no immediate threat. At face value the ruling means peace officers will have to be ready to do some long distance running in the pursuit of suspects who fail to stop when so ordered or to do a little more in-depth investigation to determine the identity of the suspects.

In that regard, the ruling probably will mean more suspects will get away. They'll simply outrun the police. That's not good, but neither is giving to law enforcement officers an open-ended shoot first and ask questions later policy.

Of course, the reality is that very few law enforcement officers will fire at a fleeing suspect without knowing that the person in question intends to harm someone or without being fired on first. Most law enforcement officers are responsible individuals who have a high regard for human life and their responsibility to preserve that life.

There are those officers who act irresponsibly and it is to them the ruling is directed. In the darkness of a moonlit night that fleeing individual might be nothing more than a child whose prank had been disturbed by the police or a frightened individual who, for whatever reason, wanted to avoid contact with the officers and who chose to run. It also could be a burglar getting ready to commit a crime.

If officers can't stop the individual without deadly force, they simply should look the other way — for the time.

Justice Byron White put the matter in perspective when he wrote in the majority opinion: "Where the suspect poses no immediate threat to others, the harm resulting from failing to apprehend him does not justify the use of deadly force to do so. It is no doubt unfortunate when a suspect who is in sight escapes, but the fact that the police arrive a little late or are a little slower on foot does not always justify killing the suspect."

The ruling undoubtedly will make the job of the police more difficult, but in this instance the ruling appears justified.

Kirkpatrick's service

Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick's final week as the United States Ambassador to the United Nations is an appropriate time to express appreciation to her for a job well done.

Her name has been in the news a good deal recently, but her distinguished performance for the past four years has been somewhat obscured by a number of newsworthy events. They have included Dr. Kirkpatrick's decision to shift from the Democratic to the Republican Party, speculation over the possibility of her running for public office, and the discussion as to whether her successor, Gen. Vernon A. Walters, would have a regular seat on the National Security Council.

All of which is important, to be sure. But as the ambassador clears her desk in the office on the East River, Americans should pause to salute her for an extraordinary productive period of public service. Mrs. Kirkpatrick's official conduct has been above and beyond the routine call of duty.

She has represented her country with intelligence and persistence. This nation's friends at the United Nations have listened to her with respect, while less friendly nations have learned a thing or two from her candor and forthright criticism.

By being such an able spokeswoman for her government, she has been an articulate champion of human rights and world peace.

The retiring ambassador says she has no plans to run for public office.

Whatever fate holds for her, Jeanne Kirkpatrick deserves the thanks of her country for valuable services rendered at the U.N.

Another View:

Call it murder

The Soviet murder of U.S. Army Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson Jr. in East Germany is in the same mold as the unprovoked murder of 269 civilians, including Rep. Lawrence P. McDonald, D-Ga., and a number of other Americans, on the Korean airliner 007 on Sept. 1, 1983.

As was the case in the shooting down of the KAL 007, Nicholson had no chance. A Soviet guard simply opened fire on him and Sgt. Jess Schatz as they were on routine patrol near the town of Ludwigslust in northern East Germany.

The Soviets claimed Nicholson was "spying" but the fact is that under the Heuber-Malinin Agreement, the Soviets and Americans can have 14-member teams based in each other's halves of Germany with the freedom to travel wherever they want, except for military "restricted" areas. Nicholson and Schatz were on a routine, authorized patrol and were not in a restricted area. They were parked 300 to 500 yards from a Soviet restricted area.

Nicholson might have survived but the Soviets held Schatz, preventing him from giving medical help to Nicholson.

Then they let the wounded Nicholson lie on the ground for an hour before sending a doctor. Nicholson was dead by this time.

After refusing to allow medical help for Maj. Nicholson, the Soviets claimed his death was a "mistake." They maintained the guard fired a "warning shot," just as they claimed the fighter pilot fired "warning shots" at the KAL 007. This whole affair should be another "warning shot" to the West.

Once again, the true face of the Soviets is seen. It is a hideous, brutal, murderous face, filled with hatred and death for those who oppose its cruel ideology. This incident should help Americans understand how the Soviets can plant "butterfly" bombs in Afghanistan specially designed to maim and kill children and how they can practice genocide in that country because its people refuse to accept Soviet communism.

JACK ANDERSON

Mubarak came, hat-in-hand

WASHINGTON — Poor-mouthing is a venerable technique used by the world's big-league beggars when they come to Washington. Needy potentates trying to extract a few billion from Congress tend to paint as dreary a picture as possible of their situations.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, an expert at the game, was in town earlier this month seeking more aid for his impoverished country. He resorted to poor-mouthing, just like any national leader looking for a handout from Uncle Sugar.

Mubarak is torn between gratitude for the billions he has already received and the resentment that dependence engenders. But he regards the U.S. Treasury as a fat cow to be milked. And he left town with about $500 million in U.S. aid, which isn't bad in the international begging league.

The U.S. Embassy in Cairo tried to prepare the State Department for Mubarak's pitch by sending information on Egyptian oil revenues. The Egyptians claimed that the income from the Sinai oil fields, which Israel gave back to Egypt in 1976, has dropped significantly in the last couple of years.

In a confidential cable, the Cairo embassy confirmed that Egyptian revenues from the Sinai oil fields had indeed fallen since 1981-82: from almost $2.7 billion to an estimated $2 billion in the current fiscal year.

The embassy cable, obtained by my associate Lucette Lagnado, also reported a bit of plain and fancy poor-mouthing by the Egyptians: "Although the Egyptian government has claimed that oil revenues declined significantly in 1983-84 over 1982-83 in its request to the United States for increased assistance, this claim is not supported by the revenue figures provided to the embassy by the (Egyptian) Ministry of Petroleum."

The Egyptians evidently made no attempt to cover up their little white lie. They gave the embassy revenue figures for the last three fiscal years, which showed that while exports from the Sinai oil fields had, in fact, increased some $112 million in 1983-84, they were still significantly below the figure for 1981-82.

The embassy also reported that the Sinai oil fields are expected to run dry in another 10 years. The Egyptian government is already considering rationing as a means of stretching the rapidly shrinking oil supply in the face of growing demand.

Egypt's oil resources obviously would provide little more than limousine maintenance for a country like Saudi Arabia, which makes administration sources feel that perhaps Mubarak should do a little more belt-tightening.

But Egypt continues to subsidize the energy consumption of its people to the tune of around $5 billion a year.

"A special cabinet-level committee ... is now examining energy price reform," the embassy cabled. "Electricity price increases for some users may be implemented this spring."

This falls into the category of interesting-if-true. In a country where a penny increase in the price of subsidized bread provoked bloody riots a few years ago, removing the subsidy on energy seems unlikely.

Meanwhile, despite Mubarak's apparent success at the White House, there is some feeling on Capitol Hill that aid to Egypt should be looked at more carefully. For example, Rep. Larry Smith, D-Fla., is investigating the Egyptian aid situation.

UNDER THE DOME: Congress wastes more time on petty and irrelevant procedural matters than most members would like to admit. Rep. Harry Reid, D-Nev., objects specifically to the daily, time-consuming ritual of approving the journal of the previous day's proceedings.

During 1984, for example, the journal approval took more than 2,500 congressional member-hours. Reid suspects its a device used by members who didn't come out too well in the previous day's debate and who simply want to inconvenience the rest of the members.

CHARLEY REESE

Americans can't avoid involvement

You may be wondering why the U.S. Government should provide funds to those Nicaraguans who are fighting to overthrow the Sandinista government in Managua.

Does it make any difference? Is it the right thing to do? The answer to both questions is yes. To the extent that you desire to avoid seeing your children and your home ravaged by war you have a personal interest in replacing the communist government in Nicaragua with a non-communist one.

The Sandinista government is not simply home-grown and home-centered. The coalition of Nicaraguans who overthrew, with overt U.S. help, the government of Anastasio Somoza has been destroyed. Power has been seized by long-time Marxist-Leninists.

These men, as Fidel Castro did in Cuba, have sold their revolution and their country to the Soviet Union. The price? Perpetual power for themselves.

The same communist propaganda apparatus, the same auxiliary of socialists and naive liberals, who told you that Castro was a democrat, that the North Vietnamese wanted only peace, and that there would be no bloodbath in Cambodia are now carrying water for the Sandinistas. The party line is this:

Sandinista hostility is the fault of the United States. All of their opponents are murderers and thugs. The only reason they are building an army five times bigger than any in the history of Central America is because Ronald Reagan frightened them. The people of Nicaragua love their Sandinistas. No one opposing them can win. They only turned to the Soviet Union because the U.S. wouldn't help them.

If you believe these old lies for the umpteenth time, then I have to say you deserve the fate your gullibility will inevitably bring to your front door, although your children don't. The propaganda line is easily refuted by facts available in any public library.

The United States was not hostile to the Sandinista Revolution; it assisted it. The U.S. did not turn its back; it sent immediate economic aid. The military buildup is not a response to any U.S. action; it began long before the first Nicaraguan patriot took up arms against the Sandinistas.

The Congress must soon vote on the issue of providing funds for more than 15,000 Nicaraguans who are in the field fighting for the freedom they had sought in the revolution against advanced Soviet weapons.

In the mid-1970s, the left-liberal majority in Congress voted to cut off all U.S. military aid to Southeast Asia. The result was the fall of South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia; 1.6 million refugees; over half a million people consigned to labor camps; and over 2 million people butchered.

If the left-liberal majority repeats its performance and forbids U.S. aid to the contras, similar evil consequences will follow. The Soviet Union will, as it did in Cuba, establish a permanent military bastion — this time on the North American continent and two or three days by truck or tank from the U.S. border.

The governments of Honduras, Costa Rica, Guatemala and El Salvador will be demoralized. The message of such a vote will be clear: those who oppose communism cannot count on help from the United States but communists can count on the Soviet Union. The implications of that message do not carry happy consequences for Americans.

The communist forces will be revitalized and emboldened. Central American refugees, already a stream, will become a flood and the flood will run north. Investors, both Central American and foreign, will read the U.S. surrender as a signal to get out or stay out. The economies will implode, thus hastening the triumph of communist guerrilla forces. Mexico will be the next target.

Eventually, Americans who didn't want to get involved, will be fighting Central American and Mexican soldiers armed by the Soviet Union — not down there, but in the U.S.

How many times will Americans allow themselves to be duped? In the 1970s, Asians paid the price for American gullibility. If we allow it to happen again but this time in Central America, we will pay the price. Ask a Vietnamese or a Cambodian survivor about the nature of that price.

Goetz pleads innocent to charges

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz's lawyers have 45 days to try to overturn the work of a grand jury that returned attempted murder charges in the shooting of four teenagers, but one attorney says Goetz is "going to face trial."

Goetz, 37, pleaded innocent Thursday to attempted murder, assault, reckless endangerment and criminal possession of a firearm in the Dec. 22 shootings aboard a subway train.

Barry Slotnick, a member of Goetz's defense team, said his client wants the case resolved as quickly as possible "and not (have) this plague him the rest of his life."

But Slotnick exercised Goetz's right to take 45 days to try to throw out the indictment by the grand jury, which lawyers for the electronics expert say should never have heard the case.

However, Slotnick said Goetz is "an average Joe who's going to face trial and who's going to look at a jury and hopefully that jury will acquit him."

A first grand jury had refused to charge Goetz in the shootings, indicting him only for weapons possession. The district attorney, saying he had new evidence, resubmitted the case to another panel over Slotnick's objections.

Goetz shot the four to forestall what he said was an attempted robbery. Several of his victims said one of them merely had asked for $5.

Goetz stood silently with his hands clasped and his head slightly bowed Thursday as the clerk read the indictment.

Grand jury clears subway samaritan

NEW YORK (AP) — Andrew Frederick, cleared of criminal charges after he stabbed a robber to death at a subway station candy stand, says he'll stand behind one of his biggest supporters, Bernhard Goetz.

A Manhattan grand jury refused to indict Frederick in the death of a man who assaulted him after he tried to stop the robbery, District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said Thursday night.

Although Frederick, 25, said he sympathized with Goetz, who shot four youths after one asked him for money on a subway train, Morgenthau said the two cases were entirely different.

Goetz used an illegal gun and intended to kill the young men, Morgenthau said. Frederick was carrying a legal pocket knife — used to strip wire on his job with an electrical contractor — and did not intend to kill Felix McCord, who died after being stabbed in the heart, he said.

"Also, he was directly assaulted," Morgenthau said. "He was hit over the head with a bottle. He was being punched out and he was fighting for his life."

"The fact is that the evidence established that he was a good Samaritan and the grand jury apparently so found. It seems to me he performed a real public service here."

At a news conference at his lawyer's office, Frederick said he felt more sorrow over the incident than relief at having been exonerated.

"It's not a nice thing to have a scene like that in your memory," he said. "It's unfortunate and when I leave here, I'm going to ... church, say a prayer for myself that I got through this, say a prayer for McCord, hope his soul finds peace and hope that his family understands."

According to police reports and his own testimony, Frederick was in a subway station Feb. 21 when he saw McCord and another man steal candy from a newsstand and threaten to rob and assault the vendor.

Reagan talks to students at St. Johns

Copley News Service

NEW YORK CITY — President Reagan Thursday called for America to follow him along a "radical" path into "the age of the individual."

"I am no longer young," the 74-year-old president told students at St. John's University, adding, "It is your future that matters."

Earlier in the day, the president rang the bell to open trading on the floor of the U.S. Stock Exchange, exulting in the fact that, "...this is where I can say the word capitalism right out loud."

Both the traders in their staid business suits and the St. John's students in their blue jeans and red shirts greeted Mr. Reagan with chants of "Ronnie, Ronnie, Ronnie."

Buoyed by the exuberant reaction of the traders, Mr. Reagan used the occasion to blame the record U.S. trade deficit on America's trading partners.

But the president's prime message was saved for the Queens campus of St. John's, the nation's largest Catholic university.

There, speaking to an audience ready to erupt into a frenzy at any mention of its basketball team which is competing this weekend for the collegiate championship, Mr. Reagan sketched what he called "our vision of the future, and the kind of America we now have a dazzling opportunity to create."

Looking beyond the current economic recovery, the president said, "Now is the time, now is the key moment, to make dramatic change."

"I am speaking of a change so fundamental that I could really call it radical — radical as in 'reaching down to the roots,'" he said.

Mr. Reagan said that change will strike at existing policies of taxing, spending and economic growth.

But he told the students the change on the horizon is more epochal.

"We have lived through the age of big industry and the age of the giant corporation," he said. "But I believe that this is the age of the entrepreneur, the age of the individual."

After waiting for the loud applause to subside, he said, "That is where American prosperity is coming from now, and that's where it's going to come from in the future...The technological revolution has seen to that."

Americans, he said, "have to recognize" the change, "and encourage the brave men and women who are taking risks and investing in the future."

"They ought to be honored, for to invest your time and money and concern is a leap of faith — a profoundly hopeful act that says, yes, I have faith in the future; I am the future, the future is what I make it."

But, noting his age, Mr. Reagan emphasized that he is not the future, saying, "The house we hope to build is one that is not for my generation, but for yours. It is your future that matters."

"And I hope that when you're my age, you'll be able to say, as I've been able to say, 'We lived in freedom, we lived lives that were a statement, not an apology.'"

To reach his age of the individual, Mr. Reagan said government must step out of the way in the areas of taxation and revenue.

"I believe we have to tear down our present tax structure and build a new one," he said, noting that he will propose a tax simplification plan "that will limit deductions and that will lower tax rates further."

"A side benefit of this," he said, "is that it will move us away from the whole strange world of unproductive tax shelters."

Such a plan, he said, "is economic justice, economic sense, and the key to America's economic future."

To dramatize his point, Mr. Reagan singled out St. John's students hoping to land jobs in business next year at annual salaries of $20,000.

Such a student would find himself paying $6,000 a year in all taxes, contended Mr. Reagan, calling that "involuntarily finding yourself in a condition of something approaching servitude."

On spending, Mr. Reagan said, "There is all sorts of waste to be cut, there are many entitlements to be re-examined."

But with a few in the audience holding signs challenging his proposed cuts in student financial assistance, President Reagan promised to maintain "an aid system that helps all those who need it," and he proudly noted that spending on such aid is "double what it was ten years ago."

Earlier, Mr. Reagan became the first sitting president to visit the 193-year-old New York Stock Exchange, giving an almost seven-minute-long speech that ended with the ringing of the bell that opened trading.

Thunderstorms anticipated in Basin area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Thunderstorms are expected to add to the trace of precipitation recorded this morning and temperatures will become colder through Saturday as a cold front from the northwest blows toward the Midland area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight will be cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the lower 40s. Winds will be from the north at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Cloudy skies will continue Saturday with the mercury warming only to the upper 50s. Northerly winds will increase to 15 to 25 mph and gusty.

Thursday's high of 85 was seven degrees below the record set in 1963. This morning's low was 45 degrees above the 1944 record of 18.

STATE

Light rain fell over North Texas early today, while fog and drizzle shrouded central sections of the state and the Golden Triangle area of the Gulf Coast, and much cooler temperatures were expected, with rain turning to snow in the Panhandle.

A polar air mass entered North Texas, shifting winds to the northeast at 10 to 15 mph and lowering temperatures to 49 degrees at Amarillo.

Fog lowered visibility to between 3 and 5 miles from the Balcones Escarpment into the Golden Triangle. Rain fell from Wichita Falls to the Dallas-Fort Worth area, and light showers occurred west of Abilene and San Angelo and north of Pecos.

Low temperatures remained in the low to mid 70s in the eastern two-thirds of the state, with warm, moist and unstable tropical air moving from the Gulf of Mexico.

NATION

Severe thunderstorms spawned tornadoes and dropped heavy rain and hailstones onto the Ohio Valley, damaging buildings in Ohio and Indiana and prompting flood warnings today as far east as Pennsylvania.

Tornadoes touched down in four Ohio communities Thursday, one damaging buildings in Hayesville. Authorities in Ft. Wayne, Ind., said several people were injured and mobile homes damaged by gusty winds.

Chant starts Hoya name

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — So what kind of nickname is Hoyas for the defending national basketball champions?

It's part of a Latin and Greek phrase that evolved into Georgetown's trademark cheer.

The chant was first popularized back in the days when Georgetown's baseball team was nicknamed the Stonewalls and the students were required to take the two ancient languages.

"Hoya Saxa," says sports information director Bill Shapland, means "What rocks."

"It used to echo back and forth across the field," one side yelling, "Hoya," and the other answering, "Saxa," Shapland said.

So how did a Bulldog become the mascot?

'Forgotten Two' look to Monday

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Memphis State and Villanova are rapidly becoming the Forgotten Two of the Final Four.

"Hey, there's two other teams here," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino blurted out Thursday as most interest by the growing herd of media centered on Saturday's St. John's-Georgetown game.

That one is being talked about as the championship game before the real championship, as though the winner will — as if by divine right — also win the national championship on Monday night.

The experts have said things like that before — for the past two years, in fact. They haven't always been right.

TWO YEARS ago in Albuquerque, N.M., the Houston-Louisville semifinal game was all but conceded to be for the title as well. North Carolina State-Georgia? Well, the winner in that one would be sacrificed to the Cougars or the Cardinals two nights hence.

It didn't work out that way. N.C. State, on Lorenzo Charles' oft-repeated last-second dunk, stunned Houston 54-52.

One year ago in Seattle, Houston beat Villanova in the Saturday night semis and was projected as little more than fodder for Georgetown, which demolished Kentucky in the other semifinal.

It did work out that way. The Hoyas took apart the Cougars 84-75.

Now it's Villanova-Memphis State, given second-class status to the game between Coach Lou Carnesecca's Redmen and John Thompson's defending champion Hoyas.

Massimino's Wildcats, the only unranked team to survive the regionals, weren't even supposed to be here. And, with a 23-10 record, they've got two more losses than the three other Final Four entries combined.

Now the experts figure they won't get past the Tigers. But Massimino gave himself the momentary luxury Thursday of looking ahead to the championship game.

"We played Georgetown great twice," he said of the 52-50 and 57-50 losses. "We played St. John's great twice," losing 76-71 and 70-68. "We could beat both of them. ... Thompson and Looie, they're my buddies. I'm happy for them. Looie's my idol and John eventually will become one."

Massimino isn't the only coach who believes the Wildcats are being overlooked.

Syracuse finished third in the Big East Conference, tied with Villanova behind St. John's and Georgetown. And Coach Jim Boeheim of the Orangemen sees the Wildcats as sleepers — if they can win their semifinal.

"It'll be tough for Villanova to get by Memphis State," Boeheim said. "But I'd say Villanova has a better chance than St. John's to beat Georgetown because of their style. Villanova can play a slow tempo."

The Wildcats can dictate a slow-down game because there's no shot clock in the tournament. It's almost certain there'll be one a year from now in Dallas.

Meanwhile, Thompson is hardly one to tinker with success, especially his own. And so long as holding up his

Final Four

Hoyas far away from the action leads to Georgetown victories and championships, Thompson's team won't be easy to find.

Thompson isn't trying to complicate any reporters' jobs or create any mysteries, his team spokesman says.

"The other three teams have their own ways of doing things. Why would we want to copy someone else?" asked Bill Shapland, Georgetown's sports information director. "If it was a case of losing to teams because of X, Y and Z, then maybe we'd do it like X, Y and Z."

"But the situation is the opposite. We're succeeding."

Indeed, the Hoyas, 34-2, are favored to defend their national championship.

The NCAA will meet next week to consider rules changes and the addition of a 45-second shot clock is expected to receive the necessary two-thirds vote.

Edward Steitz, athletic director at Springfield College and longtime editor of the rules committee, told a news conference Thursday that "the likelihood of it failing is almost nil."

A YEAR ago in Seattle, it just missed. But that was before 19 Division I conferences, plus three in Division II and three in Division III, experimented with the clock during the 1984-85 season, and before 62 percent of the NCAA coaches responding to a questionnaire urged adoption of the shot clock for all games in 1985-86.

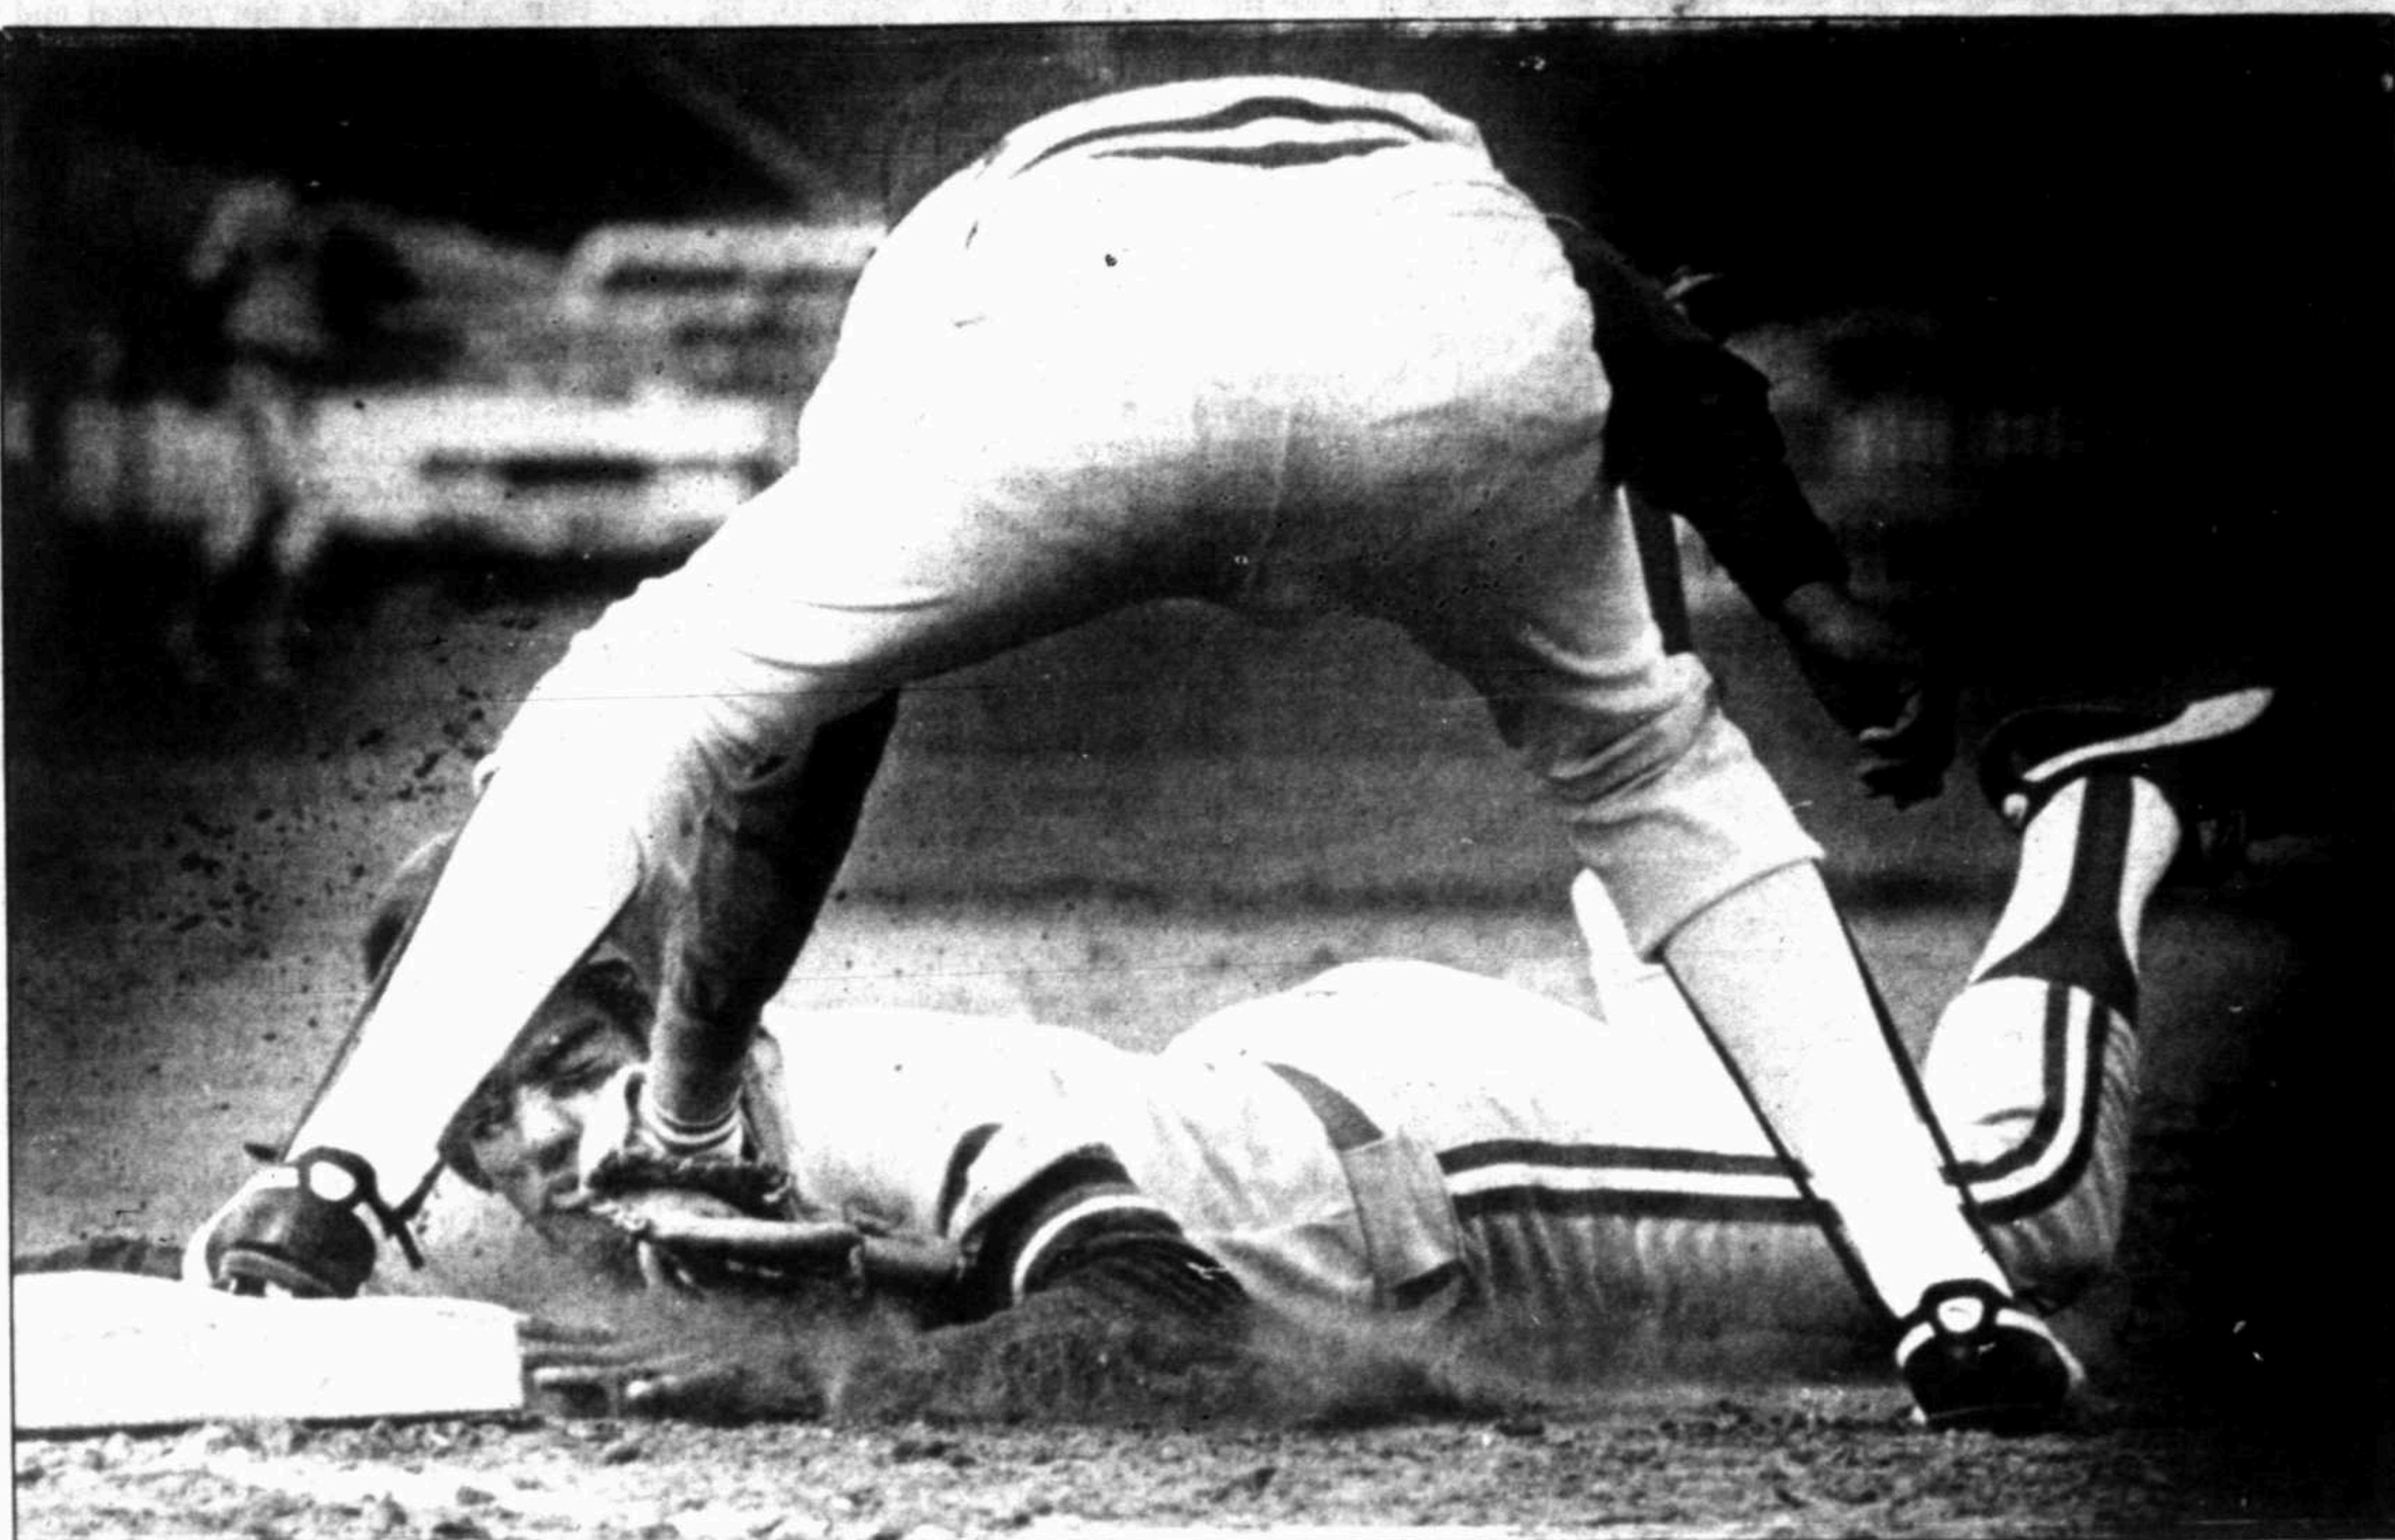

"Considering the results of the questionnaire, considering the data we've received from the conferences that have researched and experimented with the clock ... it appears there is a very strong mandate to adopt it," Steitz said. "That strong research and background wasn't present when we met in Seattle."

C.M. Newton, the coach at Vanderbilt and chairman of the rules committee, said with a laugh that the presence of a shot clock this year had no effect on the Commodores' attempt at a slowdown game. "My team couldn't keep it 45 seconds," he said. "We tried it a bunch of times."

Steitz also said the NCAA will consider adopting a three-point field goal and will be trying to find ways to "clean up, you might say, the fouling at the end of the game and, at the same time, not take quite as long to play the last four or five minutes."

Steitz recalled that "the Temple-St. Joseph's game took 26 minutes to play the last four minutes. There were some other travesties and farces we had, when coaches were telling their kids, 'Hey, you foul that guy, but make sure you don't hurt him. Go up and tell the guy you're going to foul him.' Meantime, the guy who was going to get fouled, a 30 percent free-throw shooter, he'd take off and run all over the court or up into the stands."

Among the possible solutions — one or two foul shots and possession to the fouled team, or the option to waive the free throws and maintain possession with an immediate inbound pass.

Midland High's Jamie Salazar is out trying to stretch a double into a triple as Odessa High third baseman Junior Valenzuela makes the tag. The Bulldogs, however, romped to an 18-1 victory in the District 4-5A makeup contest Thursday at Zachery Field.

Bulldogs hammer Bronchos, 18-1

MHS changes shoe to right foot

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

As Midland High baseball coach Tim Whalen put it, "the shoe changes feet pretty fast in this game."

The Bulldogs found the fit much more comfortable in Thursday's 18-1 romp over Odessa High than in last Saturday's 16-2 flogging by Abilene Cooper.

MHS banged out 18 hits including seven doubles and a home run in this make-up of a March 19 rainout. Kenny De La Garza (1-1) was the beneficiary of the MHS hitting spree and he responded with a five-hit, eight-strikeout performance. It was his first win of the season, and it keeps the Bulldogs out of the district basement. OHS fell to 2-2, 3-8 overall.

De La Garza rapped in three runs on a pair of doubles to help his cause, while Mike Stanton parked his second homer of the year over the left-centerfield fence for a pair of RBIs. Mark Torres, Ricky Castaneda and Anthony Deande each contributed two RBIs to the barrage.

"This kind of makes up for the game at Cooper — we really got our lungs kicked in down there," Whalen said. "I fully expected a close game today. But they got down and they couldn't catch up."

"We finally hit the ball a little bit, but we got some dink hits, too. But when you're on a roll, these things happen. I wish we could've saved some of those runs for Saturday because Permian always plays us tough."

THE BULLDOGS, 2-3 in district, 8-7 overall, certainly were on a roll against the Bronchos.

Once OHS took the early lead, 1-0, in their half of the first inning, it was all Midland High. Leadoff hitter Darren Thorpe walked on four pitches to get the ball rolling against OHS starter and loser Jeff Wright (1-2). An error, a strikeout and a bounce out later, and MHS pushed across its first run.

That's when the base hit attack began.

Torres doubled down the third base line for the second run, and Castaneda lined one to right, scoring

Torres. Jamie Salazar doubled in the gap to score Castaneda but was cut down trying to make it a triple. It was 4-1 MHS after one.

The 'Dogs got two more in the third before putting the game out of reach in the fourth by scoring four more times — two on a De La Garza double and two on Stanton's HR — to salt the game away.

WHILE FLOODED the field with reserves, but MHS's second string refused to play like it. Seven runs crossed the plate in the Bulldogs' last at-bat making the final an embarrassing 18-1.

Meanwhile, after allowing three hits and a run in the first two innings, De La Garza settled into a groove on the mound. The junior righthander set 13 Bronchos down in a row before a single by Junior Valenzuela broke that string in the sixth. But De La Garza got out of trouble and set down the side in order again to close the game.

"I usually think too much about the hitter and aim the ball," De La Garza said. "Today, I just relaxed, took my time and threw the ball."

and I had my curve working. "Yesterday we had a good practice and Coach (Whalen) told us our biggest problem was the fear. He said we were afraid to play at our full potential and get beat. He told us to just go out there and not worry about that. That's what we did today and we played pretty well."

Tulane 'fixing' probe gains steam

Three Green Wave players arrested

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The testimony of two Tulane basketball players before an Orleans Parish grand jury "amplified" his investigation of possible game fixing, says District Attorney Harry Connick.

But after the first day of the grand jury session Thursday, Connick said his investigators have not yet determined the scope of the gambling allegations.

"We don't have that yet," Connick said. "But it's naive not to conclude that somebody's betting on those games, and when you have gambling involved you have out-of-town folks involved. So that could become the case."

CLYDE EADS, 22, a starting senior from Tampa, Fla., and Jon Johnson, 22, a starting senior from Columbus, Ga., testified Thursday for about one hour each.

The Times-Picayune, The States-Item quoted sources as saying the two had been given immunity in exchange for their testimony.

Since Tuesday night, Connick's investigators have arrested three Tulane basketball players and two students who are not team members.

Coach Ned Fowler and eight other players were at the courthouse, but they did not testify. The eight teammates, under subpoena, were told to return next Thursday. Fowler's lawyer said the coach was told he will be recharged for a later appearance.

The only members of the team not at the courthouse Thursday were the three players booked on gambling law violations earlier this week.

Mark Olenksky, 21, a senior from Fair Lawn, N.J., who is not a member of the team, surrendered Thursday and was booked on two counts of bribery of sports participants, Connick's office said.

Olenksky also was booked on charges of conspiracy to bribe and conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

GREEN WAVE star John Williams, 23, a 6-foot-10 all-conference center, was arrested Tuesday night at his Sorrento home. He has denied any wrongdoing.

On Wednesday, sophomore swingman David Dominique of New Iberia, La., and senior guard Bobby Thompson of New Orleans surrendered to officers.

Williams, Thompson and Dominique are accused of shaving points — either winning by a lower margin or losing by a larger margin than the established "line" on the game.

Also arrested Tuesday was Gary Kranz, 21, of New Rochelle, N.Y., a Tulane student booked on cocaine dealing as well as gambling law violations. He was released on a $10,000 surety bond.

All five charged in the investigation are free pending disposition of the charges.

The maximum penalty for violation of Louisiana's sports bribery law is five years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

Connick said the investigation still centers on two Metro Conference games — Feb. 20 with Memphis State and Feb. 2 with Southern Mississippi in the Tulane arena.

Asked if the scandal could expand beyond Tulane, Connick said the National Collegiate Athletic Association had been alerted and was conducting its own investigation.

"As a byproduct of this investigation we have reason to believe there may be some violations of NCAA regulations," said Connick, who has contacted Tulane President Eamon Kelly about the matter.

U.S. Attorney John Volz said his office also is looking into allegations of game-fixing, and the case may be presented to a federal grand jury.

Neither Fowler nor his lawyer would comment on the reports.

"I'm going to stand by my players," Fowler told reporters in a brief news conference as he left the courthouse. "They're my guys."

TULANE FINISHED the season 15-13 overall and 6-8 in conference play.

Tulane was a 10½-point favorite over Southern Mississippi and won 84-63. Memphis State opened as a five-point favorite and went to 6½ points in a game it won by 11, 60-49.

Indiana, UCLA shoot for NIT championship tonight

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Knight never thought his Indiana basketball team could climb mountains this year, but tonight he'll ask it to jump a pretty high hurdle in the UCLA Bruins.

"Obviously, UCLA is playing well — they've gotten things together," said Knight as he prepared his Hoosiers for the championship game of the 48th National Invitation Tournament against one of the hottest teams in the country.

The Bruins have won 11 of their last 12 games, and that one loss was a four-overtime squeaker to Pacific-10 colleague Southern Cal. Following Wednesday night's 75-66 victory over Louisville in the semifinals, the Bruins carry a 20-12 record into tonight's title game at Madison Square Garden. Tennessee faces Louisville in the consolation.

"We're playing a lot differently than Dec. 22," said UCLA Coach Walt Hazzard, a reference to the Bruins' embarrassing loss to St. John's at the Garden during the season. "We've hustled and worked hard. I'm proud of the progress this team has made."

Actually, that could be said for both teams. At the start of the year, Knight thought his squad was overrated, and it showed it with an inconsistent season that included five straight losses at home.

"That was a discouraging and frustrating time of season," Knight said. "We've also never had a finish where we've struggled to the wire."

If one key thing has been missing from the Indiana basketball team this year, Knight says it's floor leadership.

"I was spoiled because I once had Quinn Buckner (who guided the 1976 national champions)," Knight said Thursday at a news conference. "Buckner was the best I've seen in that regard. We haven't had the kind of direction on the court we've needed."

The NIT, however, has given the Hoosiers, particularly guard Steve Alford, new life.

"The opportunity to play in the NIT has helped Steve visualize what he is," Knight said of the Olympic team guard. "He's not physical and he's not a great natural athlete and he has to work at his shots. He's learned a lot about himself in the NIT."

As has the rest of the Indiana team.

"We've played more good minutes in games in the NIT than we played prior to that," Knight said. "We've had minutes where we've let things slip away. We're not real quick and we're not real strong on the boards, and we get caught sometimes."

Considering the Hoosiers' up-and-down season that ended with a 15-13 record, Knight is still happy to be coaching basketball at this time of year.

"Obviously, if you can come down to the end of the season and still be playing for a championship, that's very enjoyable," said Knight, who has added four victories to his record in the NIT, including a 74-67 decision over Tennessee in the semifinals.

"Besides, the thing that nobody writes about is that the NIT becomes a springboard for better basketball. Michigan won the NIT last year and had a great season this year (winning the Big Ten championship and winding up No. 2 in the national rankings)."

Similar to Knight, Hazzard wasn't too impressed with his UCLA team when he first saw them this season, but for a different reason.

"When they came to practice the first day, I went into the coaches' room and cried," Hazzard said. "I said, 'We have a lot of work to do.' They were not in shape."

By the end of the Pac-10 season, though, Hazzard said he saw his "boys become men."

"The John Wooden System works," Hazzard said, referring to the coach who won 10 NCAA championships at UCLA, and whose system he vehemently espouses.

"I take lessons from the master, and I will continue to," Hazzard added. "We don't do many things — but we do a few very well."

Cubs in war of words

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — The battle for shortstop between returning veteran Larry Bowa and rookie sensation Shawn Dunston, who played for the Midland Cubs last summer, was supposed to enliven spring training camp. But Thursday, it turned into a full-fledged war of words when Manager Jim Frey informed Bowa he was the club's No. 2 shortstop.

The target of Bowa's ire, however, was not Frey, but third base coach Don Zimmer.

On Wednesday, Zimmer called Bowa "the most selfish player I have ever known ... the most negative man I've ever been around."

BOWA RESPONDED Thursday, "I could have buried him (Zimmer), but why bother. He's not worth it."

Zimmer, a lifelong friend of Frey's, said his criticisms of Bowa were motivated by Bowa's constant whining to reporters about his relationship with the manager rather than confronting Frey directly.

Frey had said earlier this week that he planned to use the 22-year-old Dunston more often than the 39-year-old Bowa in the closing weeks of spring training camp to get a reading on the talented prospect.

Dunston has taken advantage of the move, producing five hits in the last two games to raise his average to a respectable .266, and coming up with some brilliant plays in the field.

Bowa is batting .238 this spring, after hitting .223 last season with just 17 RBI and only two after Aug. 1, when the Cubs were involved in the stretch drive.

On Sunday, Bowa, a major league veteran of 15 seasons, said of Frey: "I have no dialogue with the man. None ... I want him to be honest with me, not try to pull the wool over my eyes ..."

"The bottom line is that Dunston really didn't play that well in Triple-A," he continued. "If he tore up Triple-A, I would say there is no doubt he should be up here ... I've been told by (General Manager) Dallas Green that Jim Frey would like to see someone else besides Larry Bowa playing shortstop."

AFTER BEING informed of Zimmer's remarks, Frey said Wednesday, "This is a situation about which I choose to speak privately with Larry Bowa in the morning."

Bowa learned of his backup role in the Thursday morning meeting.

Among his criticisms on Wednesday, Zimmer said Bowa "has now taken off on the manager, for about the fourth time, in the press ... I think the people that read his comments should hear the other side as well. Who is Larry Bowa to say that Dunston isn't ready to play in the big leagues?" Zimmer continued.

Giants blasted by sand, Padres in five inning game

Associated Press

Once again, the San Francisco Giants got blown away.

It happened Thursday night in exhibition baseball, when the San Diego Padres beat the Giants 8-7 in a game called after five innings because of a sand storm.

That's right. A sand storm.

The Giants play their home games during the regular season at Candlestick Park, renowned for its tricky winds. But this time those swirling, 30 mph winds kicked up in Mesa, Ariz., and made it so difficult for the players to see that game had to be halted.

The wind was blowing sand across the field from the start, although the Giants' biggest problem early in the game was San Diego's Graig Nettles, who led off the second inning with a home run — his first of the spring — and then belted a three-run shot in the third inning.

Exhibition Baseball Roundup

San Diego scored the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the fifth when Al Bumbry singled, stole second and continued to third on catcher Phil Oellette's throwing error and then scored on a wild pitch by Jeff Robinson.

Dan Gladden hit a bases-loaded triple and David Green smacked a two-run homer for the Giants, who blew a 4-0 lead.

In other games Thursday, Dale Murphy cracked a pair of solo home runs and Brad Komminsk also homered in the Atlanta Braves' 4-1 triumph over the Minnesota Twins. The Montreal Expos played a pair of split-squad games and lost both of them in the late innings.

During the day, Tito Landrum hit a two-run single to key a three-run rally in the eighth inning that carried the St. Louis Cardinals past the Expos 7-4. Landrum's hit came off reliever Jeff Reardon, who had been brought in to protect a one-run lead.

At night, Juan Bonilla, trying to earn a spot on the New York roster after not playing in the major leagues in 1984, singled home the tying run in the bottom of the ninth inning and then singled home the winning run in the 11th to lift the Yankees over the Expos 4-3.

Ron Darling turned in his best performance of the spring, allowing four hits over five innings as the New York Mets blanked the Cincinnati Reds 2-0. Darling had allowed 19 hits and 15 runs in 11 innings this spring.

Bill Russell singled three times and the Los Angeles Dodgers stole seven bases in beating the Boston Red Sox 8-4. Greg Brock, who talked about hitting with Boston Hall of Famer Ted Williams before the game, hit his first home run of the spring for the Dodgers.

Tim Lollar pitched six scoreless innings and Tom O'Malley singled home the game's only run in the eighth inning as the Chicago White Sox nipped the Pittsburgh Pirates 1-

0. Nelson Simmons banged a three-run homer and John Grubb drilled a two-run triple as the Detroit Tigers broke a six-game losing streak by defeating the Houston Astros 9-6.

Steve Balboni belted a two-run homer and a two-run double to help the Kansas City Royals outslug the Philadelphia Phillies 12-11. Willie Wilson had four of Kansas City's 16 hits as the Royals pounded on Shane Rawley for 11 runs in three innings.

Dan Ford blasted a three-run homer during a seven-run sixth inning and Mike Young and rookie Fritz Connally had three hits apiece as the Baltimore Orioles unleashed a 21-hit attack in beating the Texas Rangers 14-9.

Reid Nichols had three hits, including a two-run homer, as the Boston Red Sox trimmed the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2. Damaso Garcia had a two-run homer for Toronto.

Rod Carew and Dick Schofield contributed two-run singles during a five-run second inning that carried the California Angels over the Cleveland Indians 8-2.

Gorman Thomas drove in three runs, Ivan Calderon hit a two-run homer and Alvin Davis had a two-run double to power the Seattle Mariners past the Milwaukee Brewers 9-1.

Chicago catcher Tony Castillo threw the ball past first base while trying to complete a double play in the eighth inning, allowing two runs to score and giving the Oakland A's a 6-5 triumph over the Cubs.

Pugilistic pox develops in house that David built

By JOHN STURBIN
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — In what rates as a pox upon the pugilistic house of David, Gorman's Super Pros Gym has been visited by the aggravated wrist bone, the torn tendon fiber, and the popped carpal metacarpal joint.

"Yeah, it seems like we're over-blessed with 'em," Manager David Gorman said of his fragile stable. "There are a lot of hand injuries in boxing and it's easy to get frustrated about it, because you've got three great fighters with a problem."

In order of the most recent injury occurrence, they are:

—ROBIN BLAKE, world-rated light-weight, the aggravation of the bone area on the top of his left hand, symptomatic of tendinitis, has forced Blake to pull out of a scheduled April 6 title shot against International Boxing Federation champion Harry Arroyo.

—Gene Hatcher, World Boxing Association junior welterweight champion, torn tendon fibers on the top of his right hand suffered against Ubaldo Sacco last year continue to delay his second title defense, tentatively set for mid-May.

—Donald Curry, WBA and IBF welterweight champion, healthy and preparing to test the junior middle-weight ranks Saturday against James "Hard Rock" Green. Curry's early days as a champ and his professional career were threatened by a torn right wrist ligament and popped joint at the base of the index finger suffered during his title-clinching victory against Jun Sok Hwang.

Like the mailman with sore feet, the boxer with hurting hands usually is left to either accept his fate as an occupational hazard or find other means of employment.

Yet the people at Gorman's point out the risk of such injury has almost been eliminated during gym workouts, where extra gauze and tape and padded 16-ounce gloves are used. Where such injuries still come into play, they painfully contend, is during the actual bout. And that is a situation the local camp believes can be remedied by a simple rules change.

Since both of Gorman's champions hold WBA belts it has become routine for the manager to interrupt the mandatory pre-fight championship rules meeting in order to waive the following provision:

In all weight classes up to and including middle-weight, hand bandages shall be restricted to 10 yards of soft gauze bandage not more than two inches in width, held in place by not more than six feet of surgeon's tape one inch in width.

While that applies for each hand, Gorman is convinced it is not enough protection.

"I always request a roll and a half of gauze per hand — or 15 yards — and a roll of tape for both hands — five yards per hand," said Gorman, who would like to see these figures written into somebody's next rule-book.

"I'm gonna go to the next WBA convention and talk to some people about changing it. The only way to get it done is to have the WBA or WBC (World Boxing Council) do it, and everybody else will follow suit."

Curry hurt his wrist in the 12th round against Hwang on Feb. 13, 1983. The injury forced Curry to fight the final nine minutes virtually one-handed.

Hatcher's injury — a tearing of the fibers that hold the tendon across the middle knuckle of the right hand — came about during the eighth round of his split-decision 15-round win against Sacco last Dec. 15.

Blake's left hand was damaged during the third or fourth round of his 10-round majority decision against Adolfo "Chile" Medel on Feb. 9. In a bout televised nationally by CBS from Midland's Chaparral Center, Blake aggravated the injury in sparring last week.

"But most injuries happen in the fight because they don't let you put on enough tape and gauze on your hands," Curry said.

A computer analysis of two recent title fights telecast on Home Box Office has shed some light on the heretofore overlooked subject of just how many punches are thrown in a given championship match.

For instance, in his 15-round unanimous decision win against Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini last month, WBA lightweight champion Livingstone Bramble connected on 674 or 1,220 punches to a 55 percent contact average. Mancini landed 381 of 1,349 punches, or 28 percent.

IBF heavyweight champion Larry Holmes was shown to have landed 260 or 427 punches, 61 percent, en route to his 10th-round technical knockout against David Bey recently. Bey hooked up on 69 of 260 punches for 27 percent and only 14 of 70 jabs. Holmes found Bey with 184 of 301 jabs.

AND THIS was after weeks of live sparring, not to mention work on the heavy bag, the speed bag, and against the hand mitts. Sometimes even three or four months away from the gym is not enough time to let those hands heal.

"So you hurt your hand and then you start back into training again and then you re-injure it," Curry said. "But at least in the gym, you can protect your hand."

The wrapping of his hands has become a ritual for Curry, as performed by Paul Reyes, his trainer.

Reyes first applies a covering of inch-and-a-half-wide adhesive tape from the top of the knuckles back to the base of the wrist. He repeats that procedure with gauze, two inches in width. Over that is placed a ¾-inch form-fitting foam pad. The brain-child of Dr. James E. Marr of Everman, the pad covers the top of the knuckles and extends fully to the wrist. A layer of gauze is added atop that, followed by a final wrapping of adhesive tape.

The finished product — extending from the top of the knuckles to several inches up the wrist — bears a striking resemblance to a cast.

"I wouldn't say it's like a cast," Reyes said. "A cast is hard. This just absorbs the punches better."

"It's wrapped pretty good," said Curry, who described the fit as quite comfortable. "But it won't make you hit any harder. It's not gonna help as far as a knockout punch."

That is hardly the object during training anyway, said Gorman, who was quick to note the comparative safety margin afforded by the amply padded 16-ounce sparring glove over its eight-ounce fight counterpart. But while the 16-ouncer is a hand-saver in the gym, Gorman admitted its use would be impractical during a fight.

DeWit on Hagler-Hearns card

From Staff Reports

BURNET, Tex. — Canadian boxing heavyweight Willie deWit, who is being partially backed by Midland's Ben Tamney, will be taking on Alex Williamson as part of the undercard of the Marvin Hagler-Thomas Hearns fight on April 15 at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas after recently running his professional record to 3-0.

DeWit, an Olympic silver medalist and former two-time World Amateur Heavyweight champion, earned his latest victory with a devastating first round knockout over Toni Pulu (19-14-1) in Dallas.

Pulu had hoped to intimidate deWit by throwing bombs right from the opening bell, but a solid uppercut by deWit, followed by a strong left hook at 2:48 of the first round proved to be too much for Pulu, who was dazed several minutes after the contest was over.

NOW DEWIT faces Williamson, who owns a 5-1-1 pro record, in an all-Canadian matchup. Williamson is from Reece's Corners in Ontario and is a 6-foot-3, 215-pounder, who has been training under Angelo Dundee in Miami for the last two years.

The Hagler-Hearns undercard is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. CST and the deWit-Williamson fight will be part of the live closed circuit telecast which is expected to draw one of the largest viewing audiences ever to watch a boxing card. All 15,000 seats have already been sold.

The deWit-Williamson fight can be seen locally as well as the Hearns-Hagler bout at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center via live closed circuit TV. Tickets are $25 and are available at the Chaparral Center box office and Endless Horizons.

WILLIAMSON is replacing Odessa's Charles Hostetter on the fight card since Hostetter was forced to withdraw from the match because of a torn muscle in his arm.

"This is a big fight for Alex," said Dundee. "He wants to be known in Canada and this is a big opportunity for him. If we can win this fight, everyone in Canada will know him. In a lot of ways, he's like deWit. He's big, strong and powerful. He's young and we're just scratching the surface with him."

With three impressive KO's in his first three pro bouts, deWit is already showing signs of what his potential could be in the near future.

"I am looking forward to meeting Alex in Las Vegas. With the crowd that will be there and with the world wide coverage, I plan to be super ready," said deWit, who is just 23-years-old.

DeWit, who is training here in Burnet since turning pro, has already developed a strong Canadian and Texas following.

Deadly force

A Supreme Court ruling barring use of deadly force by police officers to stop fleeing suspects who pose no immediate threat isn't exactly in the interest of law and order, but in this instance it is undeniably wise.

The ruling, which stuck down laws in Texas and 22 other states, says officers cannot use deadly force to stop suspected fleeing felons who pose no immediate threat. At face value the ruling means peace officers will have to be ready to do some long distance running in the pursuit of suspects who fail to stop when so ordered or to do a little more in-depth investigation to determine the identity of the suspects.

In that regard, the ruling probably will mean more suspects will get away. They'll simply outrun the police. That's not good, but neither is giving to law enforcement officers an open-ended shoot first and ask questions later policy.

Of course, the reality is that very few law enforcement officers will fire at a fleeing suspect without knowing that the person in question intends to harm someone or without being fired on first. Most law enforcement officers are responsible individuals who have a high regard for human life and their responsibility to preserve that life.

There are those officers who act irresponsibly and it is to them the ruling is directed. In the darkness of a moonlit night that fleeing individual might be nothing more than a child whose prank had been disturbed by the police or a frightened individual who, for whatever reason, wanted to avoid contact with the officers and who chose to run. It also could be a burglar getting ready to commit a crime.

If officers can't stop the individual without deadly force, they simply should look the other way — for the time.

Justice Byron White put the matter in perspective when he wrote in the majority opinion: "Where the suspect poses no immediate threat to others, the harm resulting from failing to apprehend him does not justify the use of deadly force to do so. It is no doubt unfortunate when a suspect who is in sight escapes, but the fact that the police arrive a little late or a little slower afoot does not always justify killing the suspect."

The ruling undoubtedly will make the job of the police more difficult, but in this instance the ruling appears justified.

Kirkpatrick's service

Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick's final week as the United States Ambassador to the United Nations is an appropriate time to express appreciation to her for a job well done.

Her name has been in the news a good deal recently, but her distinguished performance for the past four years has been somewhat obscured by a number of newsworthy events. They have included Dr. Kirkpatrick's decision to shift from the Democratic to the Republican Party, speculation over the possibility of her running for public office, and the discussion as to whether her successor, Gen. Vernon A. Walters, would have a regular seat on the National Security Council.

All of which is important, to be sure. But as the ambassador clears her desk in the office on the East River, Americans should pause to salute her for an extraordinary productive period of public service. Mrs. Kirkpatrick's official conduct has been above and beyond the routine call of duty.

She has represented her country with intelligence and persistence. This nation's friends at the United Nations have listened to her with respect, while less friendly nations have learned a thing or two from her candor and forthright criticism.

By being such an able spokeswoman for her government, she has been an articulate champion of human rights and world peace.

The retiring ambassador says she has no plans to run for public office.

Another View:

Call it murder

The Soviet murder of U.S. Army Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson Jr. in East Germany is in the same mold as the unprovoked murder of 269 civilians, including Rep. Lawrence P. McDonald, D-Ga., and a number of other Americans, on the Korean airliner 007 on Sept. 1, 1983.

As was the case in the shooting down of the KAL 007, Nicholson had no chance. A Soviet guard simply opened fire on him and Sgt. Jess Schatz as they were on routine patrol near the town of Ludwigslust in northern East Germany.

The Soviets claimed Nicholson was "spying" but the fact is that under the Heuber-Malinin Agreement, the Soviets and Americans can have 14-member teams based in each other's halves of Germany with the freedom to travel wherever they want, except for military "restricted" areas. Nicholson and Schatz were on a routine, authorized patrol and were not in a restricted area. They were parked 300 to 500 yards from a Soviet restricted area.

Nicholson might have survived but the Soviets held Schatz, preventing him from giving medical help to Nicholson. Then they let the wounded Nicholson lie on the ground for an hour before sending a doctor. Nicholson was dead by this time.

After refusing to allow medical help for Maj. Nicholson, the Soviets claimed his death was a "mistake." They maintained the guard fired a "warning shot," just as they claimed the fighter pilot fired "warning shots" at the KAL 007. This whole affair should be another "warning shot" to the West.

Once again, the true face of the Soviets is seen. It is a hideous, brutal, murderous face, filled with hatred and death for those who oppose its cruel ideology. This incident should help Americans understand how the Soviets can plant "butterfly" bombs in Afghanistan specially designed to maim and kill children and how they can practice genocide in that country because its people refuse to accept Soviet communism.

WASHINGTON — Poor-mouthing is a venerable technique used by the world's big-league beggars when they come to Washington. Needy potentates trying to extract a few billion from Congress tend to paint as dreary a picture as possible of their situations.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, an expert at the game, was in town earlier this month seeking more aid for his impoverished country. He resorted to poor-mouthing, just like any national leader looking for a handout from Uncle Sugar.

Mubarak is torn between gratitude for the billions he has already received and the resentment that dependence engenders. But he regards the U.S. Treasury as a fat cow to be milked. And he left town with about $500 million in U.S. aid, which isn't bad in the international begging league.

The U.S. Embassy in Cairo tried to prepare the State Department for Mubarak's pitch by sending information on Egyptian oil revenues. The Egyptians claimed that the income from the Sinai oil fields, which Israel gave back to Egypt in 1978, has dropped significantly in the last couple of years.

In a confidential cable, the Cairo embassy confirmed that Egyptian revenues from the Sinai oil fields had indeed fallen since 1981-82: from almost $2.7 billion to an estimated $2 billion in the current fiscal year.

The embassy cable, obtained by my associate Lucette Lagnado, also reported a bit of plain and fancy poor-mouthing by the Egyptians: "Although the Egyptian government has claimed that oil revenues declined significantly in 1983-84 over 1982-83 in its request to the United States for increased assistance, this claim is not supported by the revenue figures provided to the embassy by the (Egyptian) Ministry of Petroleum."

The Egyptians evidently made no attempt to cover up their little white lie. They gave the embassy revenue figures for the last three fiscal years, which showed that while exports from the Sinai oil fields had, in fact, increased some $112 million in 1983-84, they were still significantly below the figure for 1981-82.

The embassy also reported that the Sinai oil fields are expected to run dry in another 10 years. The Egyptian government is already considering rationing as a means of stretching the rapidly shrinking oil supply in the face of growing demand.

Egypt's oil resources obviously would provide little more than limousine maintenance for a country like Saudi Arabia, which makes administration sources feel that perhaps Mubarak should do a little more belt-tightening.

But Egypt continues to subsidize the energy consumption of its people to the tune of around $5 billion a year.

"A special cabinet-level committee ... is now examining energy price reform," the embassy cabled. "Electricity price increases for some users may be implemented this spring."

This falls into the category of interesting-if-true. In a country where a penny increase in the price of subsidized bread provoked bloody riots a few years ago, removing the subsidy on energy seems unlikely.

Meanwhile, despite Mubarak's apparent success at the White House, there is some feeling on Capitol Hill that aid to Egypt should be looked at more carefully. For example, Rep. Larry Smith, D-Fla., is investigating the Egyptian aid situation.

UNDER THE DOME: Congress wastes more time on petty and irrelevant procedural matters than members would like to admit. Rep. Harry Reid, D-Nev., objects specifically to the daily, time-consuming ritual of approving the journal of the previous day's proceedings.

During 1984, for example, the journal approval took more than 2,500 congressional member-hours. Reid suspects its a device used by members who didn't come out too well in the previous day's debate and who simply want to inconvenience the rest of the members.

Americans can't avoid involvement

You may be wondering why the U.S. Government should provide funds to those Nicaraguans who are fighting to overthrow the Sandinista government in Managua.

Does it make any difference? Is it the right thing to do? The answer to both questions is yes. To the extent that you desire to avoid seeing your children and your home ravaged by war you have a personal interest in replacing the communist government in Nicaragua with a non-communist one.

The Sandinista government is not simply home-grown and home-centered. The coalition of Nicaraguans who overthrew, with overt U.S. help, the government of Anastasio Somoza has been destroyed. Power has been seized by long-time Marxist-Leninists.

These men, as Fidel Castro did in Cuba, have sold their revolution and their country to the Soviet Union. The price? Perpetual power for themselves.

The same communist propaganda apparatus, the same auxiliary of socialists and naive liberals, who told you that Castro was a democrat, that the North Vietnamese wanted only peace, and that there would be no bloodbath in Cambodia are now carrying water for the Sandinistas. The party line is this:

Sandinista hostility is the fault of the United States. All of their opponents are murderers and thugs. The only reason they are building an army five times bigger than any in the history of Central America is because Ronald Reagan frightened them. The people of Nicaragua love their Sandinistas. No one opposing them can win. They only turned to the Soviet Union because the U.S. wouldn't help them.

If you believe these old lies for the umpteenth time, then I have to say you deserve the fate your gullibility will inevitably bring to your front door, although your children don't. The propaganda line is easily refuted by facts available in any public library.

The United States was not hostile to the Sandinista Revolution; it assisted it. The U.S. did not turn its back; it sent immediate economic aid. The military buildup is not a response to any U.S. action; it began long before the first Nicaraguan patriot took up arms against the Sandinistas.

The Congress must soon vote on the issue of providing funds for more than 15,000 Nicaraguans who are in the field fighting for the freedom they had sought in the revolution against advanced Soviet weapons.

In the mid-1970s, the left-liberal majority in Congress voted to cut off all U.S. military aid to Southeast Asia. The result was the fall of South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia; 1.6 million refugees, over half a million people consigned to labor camps; and over 2 million people butchered.

If the left-liberal majority repeats its performance and forbids U.S. aid to the contras, similar evil consequences will follow. The Soviet Union will, as it did in Cuba, establish a permanent military bastion — this time on the North American continent and two or three days by truck or tank from the U.S. border.

The governments of Honduras, Costa Rica, Guatemala and El Salvador will be demoralized. The message of such a vote will be clear: those who oppose communism cannot count on help from the United States but communists can count on the Soviet Union. The implications of that message do not carry happy consequences for Americans.

The communist forces will be revitalized and emboldened. Central American refugees, already a stream, will become a flood and the flood will run north. Investors, both Central American and foreign, will read the U.S. surrender as a signal to get out or stay out. The economies will implode, thus hastening the triumph of communist guerrilla forces. Mexico will be the next target.

Eventually, Americans who didn't want to get involved, will be fighting Central American and Mexican soldiers armed by the Soviet Union — not down there, but in the U.S.

How many times will Americans allow themselves to be duped? In the 1970s, Asians paid the price for American gullibility. If we allow it to happen again but this time in Central America, we will pay the price. Ask a Vietnamese or a Cambodian survivor about the nature of that price.

Goetz pleads innocent to charges

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz's lawyers have 45 days to try to overturn the work of a grand jury that returned attempted murder charges in the shooting of four teenagers, but one attorney says Goetz is "going to face trial."

Goetz, 37, pleaded innocent Thursday to attempted murder, assault, reckless endangerment and criminal possession of a firearm in the Dec. 22 shootings aboard a subway train.

Barry Slotnick, a member of Goetz's defense team, said his client wants the case resolved as quickly as possible "and not (have) this plague him the rest of his life."

But Slotnick exercised Goetz's right to take 45 days to try to throw out the indictment by the grand jury, which lawyers for the electronics expert say should never have heard the case.

However, Slotnick said Goetz is "an average Joe who's going to face trial and who's going to look at a jury and hopefully that jury will acquit him."

A first grand jury had refused to charge Goetz in the shootings, indicting him only for weapons possession. The district attorney, saying he had new evidence, resubmitted

the case to another panel over Slotnick's objections.

Goetz shot the four to forestall what he said was an attempted robbery. Several of his victims said one of them merely had asked for $5.

Goetz stood silently with his hands clasped and his head slightly bowed Thursday as the clerk read the indictment.

Grand jury clears subway samaritan

NEW YORK (AP) — Andrew Frederick, cleared of criminal charges after he stabbed a robber to death at a subway station candy stand, says he'll stand behind one of his biggest supporters, Bernhard Goetz.

A Manhattan grand jury refused to indict Frederick in the death of a man who assaulted him after he tried to stop the robbery, District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said Thursday night.

Although Frederick, 25, said he sympathized with Goetz, who shot four youths after one asked him for money on a subway train, Morgenthau said the two cases were entirely different.

Goetz used an illegal gun and intended to kill the young men, Morgenthau said. Frederick was carrying a legal pocket knife — used to strip wire on his job with an electrical contractor — and did not intend to kill Felix McCord, who died after being stabbed in the heart, he said.

"Also, he was directly assaulted," Morgenthau said. "He was hit over the head with a bottle. He was being punched out and he was fighting for his life."

"The fact is that the evidence established that he was a good Samaritan and the grand jury apparently so found. It seems to me he performed a real public service here."

At a news conference at his lawyer's office, Frederick said he felt more sorrow over the incident than relief at having been exonerated.

"It's not a nice thing to have a scene like that in your memory," he said. "It's unfortunate and when I leave here, I'm going to church, say a prayer for myself that I got through this, say a prayer for McCord, hope his soul finds peace and hope that his family understands."

According to police reports and his own testimony, Frederick was in a subway station Feb. 21 when he saw McCord and another man steal candy from a newsstand and threaten to rob and assault the vendor.

Reagan talks to students at St. Johns

Copley News Service

NEW YORK CITY — President Reagan Thursday called for America to follow him along a "radical" path into "the age of the individual."

"I am no longer young," the 74-year-old president told students at St. John's University, adding, "It is your future that matters."

Earlier in the day, the president rang the bell to open trading on the floor of the U.S. Stock Exchange, exulting in the fact that, "this is where I can say the word capitalism right out loud."

Both the traders in their staid business suits and the St. John's students in their blue jeans and red shirts greeted Mr. Reagan with chants of "Ronnie, Ronnie, Ronnie."

Buoyed by the exuberant reaction of the traders, Mr. Reagan used the occasion to blame the record U.S. trade deficit on America's trading partners.

But the president's prime message was saved for the Queens' campus of St. John's, the nation's largest Catholic university.

There, speaking to an audience ready to erupt into a frenzy at any mention of its basketball team which is competing this weekend for the collegiate championship, Mr. Reagan sketched what he called "our vision of the future, and the kind of America we now have a dazzling opportunity to create."

Looking beyond the current economic recovery, the president said, "Now is the time, now is the key moment, to make dramatic change."

"I am speaking of a change so fundamental that I could really call it radical — radical as in reaching down to the roots," he said.

Mr. Reagan said that change will strike at existing policies of taxing, spending and economic growth.

But he told the students the change on the horizon is more epochal.

"We have lived through the age of big industry and the age of the giant corporation," he said. "But I believe that this is the age of the entrepreneur, the age of the individual."

After waiting for the loud applause to subside, he said, "That is where American prosperity is coming from now, and that's where it's going to come from in the future...The technological revolution has seen to that."

Americans, he said, "have to recognize" the change, "and encourage the brave men and women who are taking risks and investing in the future."

"They ought to be honored, for to invest your time and money and concern is a leap of faith — a profoundly hopeful act that says, yes, I have faith in the future; I am the future, the future is what I make it."

But, noting his age, Mr. Reagan emphasized that he is not the future, saying, "The house we hope to build is one that is not for my generation, but for yours. It is your future that matters."

"And I hope that when you're my age, you'll be able to say, as I've been able to say, 'We lived in freedom, we lived lives that were a statement, not an apology.'"

To reach his age of the individual, Mr. Reagan said government must step out of the way in the areas of taxation and revenue.

"I believe we have to tear down our present tax structure and build a new one," he said, noting that he will propose a tax simplification plan "that will limit deductions and that will lower tax rates further."

"A side benefit of this," he said, "is that it will move us away from the whole strange world of unproductive tax shelters."

Such a plan, he said, "is economic justice, economic sense, and the key to America's economic future."

To dramatize his point, Mr. Reagan singled out St. John's students hoping to land jobs in business next year at annual salaries of $20,000.

Such a student would find himself paying $8,000 a year in all taxes, contended Mr. Reagan, calling that "involuntarily finding yourself in a condition of something approaching servitude."

On spending, Mr. Reagan said, "There is all sorts of waste to be cut, there are many entitlements to be re-examined."

But with a few in the audience holding signs challenging his proposed cuts in student financial assistance, President Reagan promised to maintain "an aid system that helps all those who need it," and he proudly noted that spending on such aid is "double what it was ten years ago."

Earlier, Mr. Reagan became the first sitting president to visit the 193-year-old New York Stock Exchange, giving an almost seven-minute-long speech that ended with the ringing of the bell that opened trading.

Extended forecast

Sunday Through Tuesday
West Texas: Fair with unseasonably cool temperatures Sunday. Warming trend Monday and Tuesday. Highs mid 50s Panhandle and South Plains, low 60s elsewhere except 70s to low 80s Big Bend Sunday, warming to 70s Tuesday except mid 80s to low 90s Big Bend.

Thunderstorms anticipated in Basin area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Thunderstorms are expected to add to the trace of precipitation recorded this morning and temperatures will become colder through Saturday as a cold front from the northwest blows toward the Midland area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight will be cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the lower 40s. Winds will be from the north at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Cloudy skies will continue Saturday with the mercury warming only to the upper 50s. Northerly winds will increase to 15 to 25 mph and gusty.

Thursday's high of 85 was seven degrees below the record set in 1963. This morning's low was 45 degrees above the 1944 record of 18.

STATE

Light rain fell over North Texas early today, while fog and drizzle shrouded central sections of the state and the Golden Triangle area of the Gulf Coast, and much cooler temperatures were expected, with rain turning to snow in the Panhandle.

A polar air mass entered Northwest Texas, shifting winds to the northeast at 10 to 15 mph and lowering temperatures to 49 degrees at Amarillo.

Fog lowered visibility to between 3 and 5 miles from the Balcones Escarpment into the Golden Triangle. Rain fell from Wichita Falls to the Dallas-Fort Worth area, and light showers occurred west of Abilene and San Angelo and north of Pecos.

Low temperatures remained in the low to mid 70s in the eastern two-thirds of the state, with warm, moist and unstable tropical air moving from the Gulf of Mexico.

NATION

Severe thunderstorms spawned tornadoes and dropped heavy rain and hailstones onto the Ohio Valley, damaging buildings in Ohio and Indiana and prompting flood warnings today as far east as Pennsylvania.

Tornadoes touched down in four Ohio communities Thursday, one damaging buildings in Hayesville. Authorities in Ft. Wayne, Ind., said several people were injured and mobile homes damaged by gusty winds.

Chant starts Hoya name

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — So what kind of nickname is Hoyas for the defending national basketball champions?

It's part of a Latin and Greek phrase that evolved into Georgetown's trademark cheer.

The chant was first popularized back in the days when Georgetown's baseball team was nicknamed the Stonewalls and the students were required to take the two ancient languages.

"Hoya Saxa," says sports information director Bill Shapland, means "What rocks."

"It used to echo back and forth across the field," one side yelling, "Hoya," and the other answering, "Saxa," Shapland said.

So how did a Bulldog become the mascot?

'Forgotten Two' look to Monday

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Memphis State and Villanova are rapidly becoming the Forgotten Two of the Final Four.

"Hey, there's two other teams here," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino blurted out Thursday as most interest by the growing herd of media centered on Saturday's St. John-Georgetown game.

That one is being talked about as the championship game before the real championship, as though the winner will — as if by divine right — also win the national championship on Monday night.

The experts have said things like that before — for the past two years, in fact. They haven't always been right.

TWO YEARS ago in Albuquerque, N.M., the Houston-Louisville semifinal game was all but conceded to be for the title as well. North Carolina State-Georgia? Well, the winner in that one would be sacrificed to the Cougars or the Cardinals two nights hence.

It didn't work out that way. N.C. State, on Lorenzo Charles' oft-repeated last-second dunk, stunned Houston 54-52.

One year ago in Seattle, Houston beat Virginia in the Saturday night semis and was projected as little more than fodder for Georgetown, which demolished Kentucky in the other semifinal.

It did work out that way. The Hoyas took apart the Cougars 84-75.

Now it's Villanova-Memphis State, given second-class status to the game between Coach Lou Carnesecca's Redmen and John Thompson's defending champion Hoyas.

Massimino's Wildcats, the only unranked team to survive the regionals, weren't even supposed to be here. And, with a 23-10 record, they've got two more losses than the three other Final Four entries combined.

Now the experts figure they won't get past the Tigers. But Massimino gave himself the momentary luxury Thursday of looking ahead to the championship game.

"We played Georgetown great twice," he said of the 52-50 and 57-50 losses. "We played St. John's great twice," losing 76-71 and 70-68. "We could beat both of them. ... Thompson and Looie, they're my buddies. I'm happy for them. Looie's my idol and John eventually will become one."

Massimino isn't the only coach who believes the Wildcats are being overlooked.

Syracuse finished third in the Big East Conference, tied with Villanova behind St. John's and Georgetown. And Coach Jim Boeheim of the Orangemen sees the Wildcats as sleepers — if they can win their semifinal.

"It'll be tough for Villanova to get by Memphis State," Boeheim said. "But I'd say Villanova has a better chance than St. John's to beat Georgetown because of their style. Villanova can play a slow tempo."

The Wildcats can dictate a slow-down game because there's no shot clock in the tournament. It's almost certain there'll be one a year from now in Dallas.

Meanwhile, Thompson is hardly one to tinker with success, especially his own. And so long as holing up his

Final Four

Hoyas far away from the action leads to Georgetown victories and championships, Thompson's team won't be easy to find.

Thompson isn't trying to complicate any reporters' jobs or create any mysteries, his team spokesman says.

"The other three teams have their own ways of doing things. Why would we want to copy someone else?" asked Bill Shapland, Georgetown's sports information director. "If it was a case of losing to teams because of X, Y and Z, then maybe we'd do it like X, Y and Z."

"But the situation is the opposite. We're succeeding."

Indeed. The Hoyas, 34-2, are favored to defend their national championship.

The NCAA will meet next week to consider rules changes and the addition of a 45-second shot clock is expected to receive the necessary two-thirds vote.

Edward Steitz, athletic director at Springfield College and longtime editor of the rules committee, told a news conference Thursday that "the likelihood of it failing is almost nil."

A YEAR ago in Seattle, it just missed. But that was before 19 Division I conferences, plus three in Division II and three in Division III, experimented with the clock during the 1984-85 season, and before 62 percent of the NCAA coaches responding to a questionnaire urged adoption of the shot clock for all games in 1985-86.

"Considering the results of the questionnaire, considering the data we've received from the conferences that have researched and experimented with the clock ... it appears there is a very strong mandate to adopt it," Steitz said. "That strong research and background wasn't present when we met in Seattle."

C.M. Newton, the coach at Vanderbilt and chairman of the rules committee, said with a laugh that the presence of a shot clock this year had no effect on the Commodores' attempt at a slowdown game. "My team couldn't keep it 45 seconds," he said. "We tried it a bunch of times."

Steitz also said the NCAA will consider adopting a three-point field goal and will be trying to find ways to "clean up, you might say, the fouling at the end of the game and, at the same time, not take quite as long to play, the last four or five minutes."

Steitz recalled that "the Temple-St. Joseph's game took 26 minutes to play the last four minutes. There were some other travesties and farces we had, when coaches were telling their kids, 'Hey, you foul that guy, but make sure you don't hurt him. Go up and tell the guy you're going to foul him.' Meantime, the guy who was going to get fouled, a 30 percent free-throw shooter, he'd take off and run all over the court or up into the stands."

Among the possible solutions — one or two foul shots and possession to the fouled team, or the option to waive the free throws and maintain possession with an immediate inbound pass.

Midland High's Jamie Salazar is out trying to stretch a double into a triple as Odessa High third baseman Junior Valenzuela makes the tag. The Bulldogs, however, romped to an 18-1 victory in the District 4-5A makeup contest Thursday at Zachary Field.

Bulldogs hammer Bronchos, 18-1

MHS changes shoe to right foot

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

As Midland High baseball coach Tim Whalen put it, "the shoe changes feet pretty fast in this game."

The Bulldogs found the fit much more comfortable in Thursday's 18-1 romp over Odessa High than in last Saturday's 16-2 flogging by Abilene Cooper.

MHS banged out 18 hits including seven doubles and a home run in this make-up of a March 19 rainout. Kenny De La Garza (1-1) was the beneficiary of the MHS hitting spree and he responded with a five-hit, eight-strikeout performance. It was his first win of the season, and it keeps the Bulldogs out of the district basement. OHS fell to 2-2, 3-8 overall.

De La Garza rapped in three runs on a pair of doubles to help his cause, while Mike Stanton parked his second homer of the year over the left-centerfield fence for a pair of RBIs. Mark Torres, Ricky Castaneda and Anthony Deande each contributed two RBIs to the barrage.

"This kind of makes up for the game at Cooper — we really got our lungs kicked in down there," Whalen said. "I fully expected a close game today. But they got down and they couldn't catch up."

"We finally hit the ball a little bit, but we got some dink hits, too. But when you're on a roll, these things happen. I wish we could've saved some of those runs for Saturday because Permian always plays us tough."

THE BULLDOGS, 2-3 in district, 8-7 overall, certainly were on a roll against the Bronchos.

Once OHS took the early lead, 1-0, in their half of the first inning, it was all Midland High. Leadoff hitter Darren Thorpe walked on four pitches to get the ball rolling against OHS starter and loser Jeff Wright (1-2). An error, a strikeout and a bounce out later, and MHS pushed across its first run.

That's when the base hit attack began.

Torres doubled down the third base line for the second run, and Castaneda lined one to right, scoring

Torres. Jamie Salazar doubled in the gap to score Castaneda but was cut down trying to make it a triple. It was 4-1 MHS after one.

The Dogs got two more in the third before putting the game out of reach in the fourth by scoring four more times — two on a De La Garza double and two on Stanton's HR — to salt the game away.

WHALEN FLOODED the field with reserves, but MHS's second string refused to play like it. Seven runs crossed the plate in the Bulldogs' last at-bat making the final an embarrassing, 18-1.

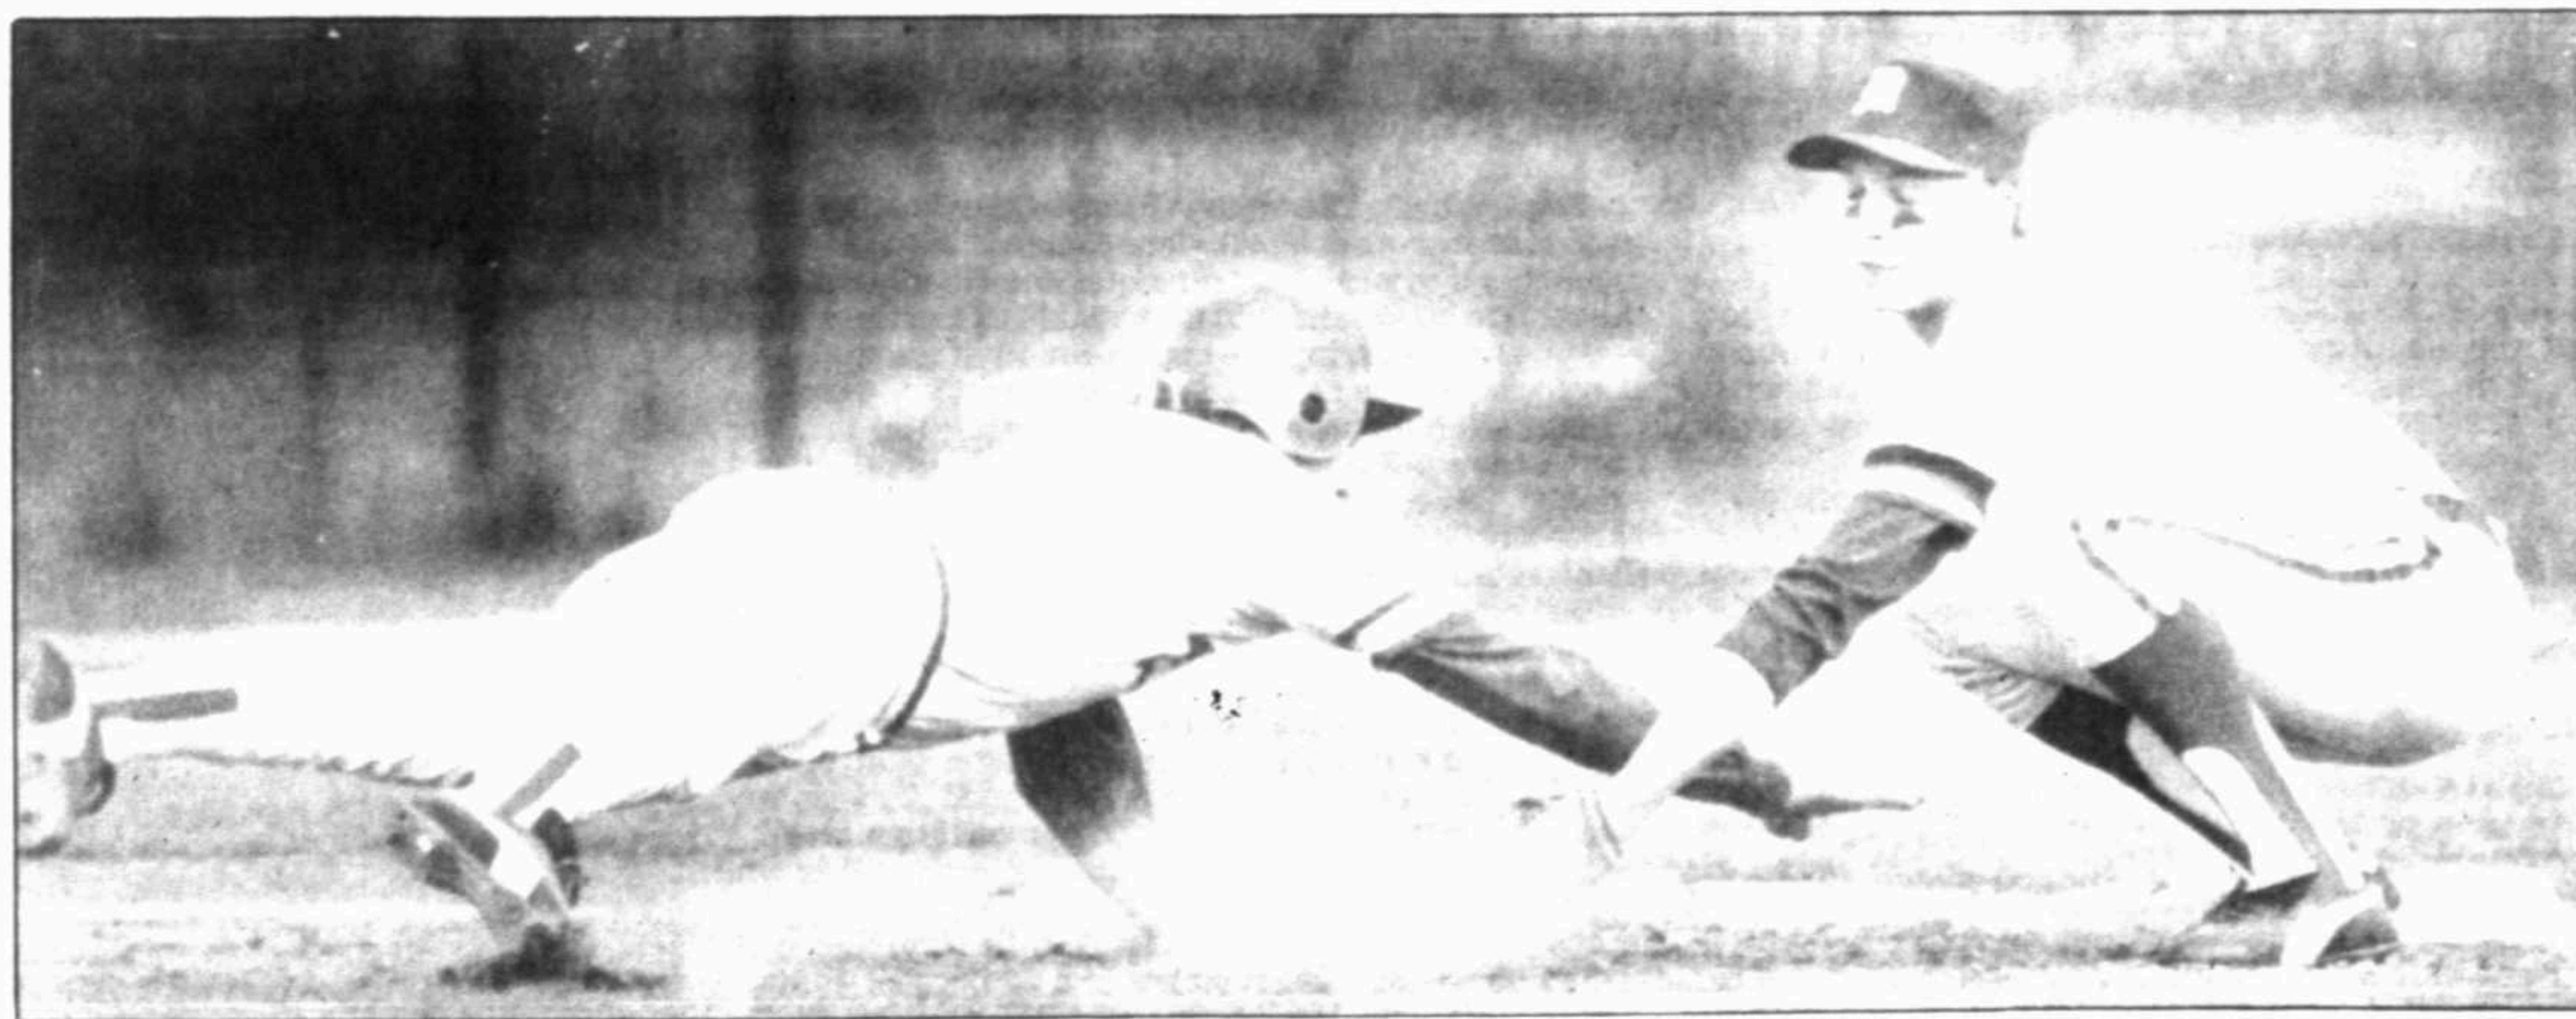

Meanwhile, after allowing three hits and a run in the first two innings, De La Garza settled into a groove on the mound. The junior right-hander set 13 Bronchos down in a row before a single by Junior Valenzuela broke that string in the sixth. But De La Garza got out of trouble and set down the side in order again to close the game.

"I usually think too much about the hitter and aim the ball," De La Garza said. "Today, I just relaxed, took my time and threw the ball."

and I had my curve working. "Yesterday we had a good practice and Coach (Whalen) told us our biggest problem was the fear. He said we were afraid to play at our full potential and get beat. He told us to just go out there and not worry about that. That's what we did today and we played pretty well."

Tulane 'fixing' probe gains steam

Three Green Wave players arrested

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The testimony of two Tulane basketball players before an Orleans Parish grand jury "amplified" his investigation of possible game fixing, says District Attorney Harry Connick.

But after the first day of the grand jury session Thursday, Connick said his investigators have not yet determined the scope of the gambling allegations.

"We don't have that yet," Connick said. "But it's naive not to conclude that somebody's betting on those games, and when you have gambling involved you have out-of-town folks involved. So that could become the case."

CLYDE EADS, 22, a starting senior from Tampa, Fla., and Jon Johnson, 22, a starting senior from Columbus, Ga., testified Thursday for about one hour each.

The Times-Picayune, The States-Item quoted sources as saying the two had been given immunity in exchange for their testimony.

Since Tuesday night, Connick's investigators have arrested three Tulane basketball players and two students who are not team members.

Coach Ned Fowler and eight other players were at the courthouse, but they did not testify. The eight teammates, under subpoena, were told to return next Thursday. Fowler's lawyer said the coach was told he will be rescheduled for a later appearance.

The only members of the team not at the courthouse Thursday were the three players booked on gambling law violations earlier this week. Mark Olesky, 21, a senior from Fair Lawn, N.J., who is not a member of the team, surrendered Thursday and was booked on two counts of bribery of sports participants, Connick's office said.

Olesky also was booked on charges of conspiracy to bribe and conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

GREEN WAVE star John Williams, 23, a 6-foot-10 all-conference center, was arrested Tuesday night at his Sorrento home. He has denied any wrongdoing.

On Wednesday, sophomore swingman David Dominique of New Iberia, La., and senior guard Bobby Thompson of New Orleans surrendered to officers.

Williams, Thompson and Dominique are accused of shaving points — either winning by a lower margin or losing by a larger margin than the established "line" on the game.

Also arrested Tuesday was Gary Kranz, 21, of New Rochelle, N.Y., a Tulane student booked on cocaine dealing as well as gambling law violations. He was released on a $10,000 surety bond.

All five charged in the investigation are free pending disposition of the charges.

The maximum penalty for violation of Louisiana's sports bribery law is five years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

Connick said the investigation still centers on two Metro Conference games — Feb. 20 with Memphis State and Feb. 2 with Southern Mississippi in the Tulane arena.

Asked if the scandal could expand beyond Tulane, Connick said the National Collegiate Athletic Association had been alerted and was conducting its own investigation.

"As a byproduct of this investigation we have reason to believe there may be some violations of NCAA regulations," said Connick, who has contacted Tulane President Eamon Kelly about the matter.

U.S. Attorney John Volz said his office also is looking into allegations of game-fixing, and the case may be presented to a federal grand jury.

Neither Fowler nor his lawyer would comment on the reports.

"I'm going to stand by my players," Fowler told reporters in a brief news conference as he left the courthouse. "They're my guys."

TULANE FINISHED the season 15-13 overall and 6-8 in conference play.

Tulane was a 10½-point favorite over Southern Mississippi and won 64-63. Memphis State opened as a five-point favorite and went to 6½ points in a game it won by 11, 60-49.

Indiana, UCLA shoot for NIT championship tonight

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Knight never thought his Indiana basketball team could climb mountains this year, but tonight he'll ask it to jump a pretty high hurdle in the UCLA Bruins.

"Obviously, UCLA is playing well — they've gotten things together," said Knight as he prepared his Hoosiers for the championship game of the 48th National Invitation Tournament against one of the hottest teams in the country.

The Bruins have won 11 of their last 12 games, and that one loss was a four-overtime squeaker to Pacific-10 colleague Southern Cal. Following Wednesday night's 75-66 victory over Louisville in the semifinals, the Bruins carry a 20-12 record into tonight's title game at Madison Square Garden. Tennessee faces Louisville in the consolation.

"We're playing a lot differently than Dec. 22," said UCLA Coach Walt Hazzard, a reference to the Bruins' embarrassing loss to St. John's at the Garden during the season. "We've hustled and worked hard. I'm proud of the progress this team has made."

Actually, that could be said for both teams. At the start of the year, Knight thought his squad was overrated, and it showed it with an inconsistent season that included five straight losses at home.

"That was a discouraging and frustrating time of season," Knight said. "We've also never had a finish where we've struggled to the wire."

If one key thing has been missing from the Indiana basketball team this year, Knight says it's floor leadership.

"I was spoiled because I once had Quinn Buckner (who guided the 1976 national champions)," Knight said Thursday at a news conference. "Buckner was the best I've seen in that regard. We haven't had the kind of direction on the court we've needed."

The NIT, however, has given the Hoosiers, particularly guard Steve Alford, new life.

"The opportunity to play in the NIT has helped Steve visualize what he is," Knight said of the Olympic team guard. "He's not physical and he's not a great natural athlete and he has to work at his shots. He's learned a lot about himself in the NIT."

As has the rest of the Indiana team.

"We've played more good minutes in games in the NIT than we played prior to that," Knight said. "We've had minutes where we've let things slip away. We're not real quick and we're not real strong on the boards, and we get caught sometimes."

Considering the Hoosiers' up-and-down season that ended with a 15-13 record, Knight is still happy to be coaching basketball at this time of year.

"Obviously, if you can come down to the end of the season and still be playing for a championship, that's very enjoyable," said Knight, who has added four victories to his record in the NIT, including a 74-67 decision over Tennessee in the semifinals.

"Besides, the thing that nobody writes about is that the NIT becomes a springboard for better basketball. Michigan won the NIT last year and had a great season this year (winning the Big Ten championship and winding up No. 2 in the national rankings)."

Similar to Knight, Hazzard wasn't too impressed with his UCLA team when he first saw them this season, but for a different reason.

"When they came to practice the first day, I went into the coaches' room and cried," Hazzard said. "I said, 'We have a lot of work to do.' They were not in shape."

By the end of the Pac-10 season, though, Hazzard said he saw his "boys become men."

"The John Wooden System works," Hazzard said, referring to the coach who won 10 NCAA championships at UCLA, and whose system he vehemently espouses.

"I take lessons from the master, and I will continue to," Hazzard added. "We don't do many things — but we do a few very well."

Cubs in war of words

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — The battle for shortstop between returning veteran Larry Bowa and rookie sensation Shawn Dunston, who played for the Midland Cubs last summer, was supposed to enliven spring training camp. But Thursday, it turned into a full-fledged war of words when Manager Jim Frey informed Bowa he was the club's No. 2 shortstop.

The target of Bowa's ire, however, was not Frey, but third base coach Don Zimmer.

On Wednesday, Zimmer called Bowa "the most selfish player I have ever known ... the most negative man I've ever been around."

BOWA RESPONDED Thursday, "I could have buried him (Zimmer), but why bother. He's not worth it."

Zimmer, a lifelong friend of Frey's, said his criticisms of Bowa were motivated by Bowa's constant whining to reporters about his relationship with the manager rather than confronting Frey directly.

Frey had said earlier this week that he planned to use the 22-year-old Dunston more often than the 39-year-old Bowa in the closing weeks of spring training camp to get a reading on the talented prospect.

Dunston has taken advantage of the move, producing five hits in the last two games to raise his average to a respectable .266, and coming up with some brilliant plays in the field.

Bowa is batting .238 this spring, after hitting .223 last season with just 17 RBI and only two after Aug. 1, when the Cubs were involved in the stretch drive.

On Sunday, Bowa, a major league veteran of 15 seasons, said of Frey: "I have no dialogue with the man. None. ... I want him to be honest with me, not try to pull the wool over my eyes ..."

"The bottom line is that Dunston really didn't play that well in Triple-A," he continued. "If he tore up Triple-A, I would say there is no doubt he should be up here. ... I've been told by (General Manager) Dallas Green that Jim Frey would like to see someone else besides Larry Bowa playing shortstop."

AFTER BEING informed of Zimmer's remarks, Frey said Wednesday, "This is a situation about which I choose to speak privately with Larry Bowa in the morning."

Bowa learned of his backup role in the Thursday morning meeting.

Among his criticisms on Wednesday, Zimmer said Bowa "has now taken off on the manager, for about the fourth time, in the press. ... I think the people that read his comments should hear the other side as well. Who is Larry Bowa to say that Dunston isn't ready to play in the big leagues?" Zimmer continued.

Giants blasted by sand, Padres in five inning game

Associated Press

Once again, the San Francisco Giants got blown away.

It happened Thursday night in exhibition baseball, when the San Diego Padres beat the Giants 8-7 in a game called after five innings because of a sand storm.

That's right. A sand storm.

The Giants play their home games during the regular season at Candlestick Park, renowned for its tricky winds. But this time those swirling, 30 mph winds kicked up in Mesa, Ariz., and made it so difficult for the players to see that game had to be halted.

The wind was blowing sand across the field from the start, although the Giants' biggest problem early in the game was San Diego's Graig Nettles, who led off the second inning with a home run — his first of the spring — and then belted a three-run shot in the third inning.

Exhibition Baseball Roundup

San Diego scored the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the fifth when Al Bumbry singled, stole second and continued to third on catcher Phil Oellette's throwing error and then scored on a wild pitch by Jeff Robinson.

Dan Gladden hit a bases-loaded triple and David Green smacked a two-run homer for the Giants, who blew a 4-0 lead.

In other games Thursday, Dale Murphy cracked a pair of solo home runs and Brad Komminsk also homered in the Atlanta Braves' 4-1 triumph over the Minnesota Twins.

The Montreal Expos played a pair of split-squad games and lost both of them in the late innings.

During the day, Tito Landrum hit a two-run single to key a three-run rally in the eighth inning that carried the St. Louis Cardinals past the Expos 7-4. Landrum's hit came off reliever Jeff Robinson, who had been brought in to protect a one-run lead.

At night, Juan Bonilla, trying to earn a spot on the New York roster after not playing in the major leagues in 1984, singled home the tying run in the bottom of the ninth inning and then singled home the winning run in the 11th to lift the Yankees over the Expos 4-3.

Ron Darling turned in his best performance of the spring, allowing four hits over five innings as the New York Mets blanked the Cincinnati Reds 2-0. Darling had allowed 19 hits and 15 runs in 11 innings this spring.

Bill Russell singled three times and the Los Angeles Dodgers stole seven bases in beating the Boston Red Sox 8-4. Greg Brock, who talked about hitting with Boston Hall of Famer Ted Williams before the game, hit his first home run of the spring for the Dodgers.

Tim Lollar pitched six scoreless innings and Tom O'Malley singled home the game's only run in the eighth inning as the Chicago White Sox nipped the Pittsburgh Pirates 1-

0. Nelson Simmons batted a three-run homer and John Grubb drilled a two-run triple as the Detroit Tigers broke a six-game losing streak by defeating the Houston Astros 9-6.

Steve Balboni belted a two-run homer and a two-run double to help the Kansas City Royals outslug the Philadelphia Phillies 12-11. Willie Wilson had four of Kansas City's 16 hits as the Royals pounded on Shane Rawley for 11 runs in three innings.

Dan Ford blasted a three-run homer during a seven-run sixth inning and Mike Young and rookie Fritz Connally had three hits apiece as the Baltimore Orioles unleashed a 21-hit attack in beating the Texas Rangers 14-9.

Reid Nichols had three hits, including a two-run homer, as the Boston Red Sox trimmed the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2. Damaso Garcia had a two-run homer for Toronto.

Rod Carew and Dick Schofield contributed two-run singles during a five-run second inning that carried the California Angels over the Cleveland Indians 8-2.

Gorman Thomas drove in three runs, Ivan Calderon hit a two-run homer and Alvin Davis had a two-run double to power the Seattle Mariners past the Milwaukee Brewers 9-1.

Chicago catcher Tony Castillo threw the ball past first base while trying to complete a double play in the eighth inning, allowing two runs to score and giving the Oakland A's a 6-5 triumph over the Cubs.

Pugilistic pox develops in house that David built

Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — In what rates as a pox upon the pugilistic house of David, Gorman's Super Pros Gym has been visited by the aggravated wrist bone, the torn tendon fiber, and the popped carpal metacarpal joint.

"Yeah, it seems like we're over-blessed with 'em," Manager David Gorman said of his fragile stable. "There are a lot of hand injuries in boxing and it's easy to get frustrated about it, because you've got three great fighters with a problem."

In order of the most recent injury occurrence, they are:

—ROBIN BLAKE, world-rated light-weight, the aggravation of the bone area on the top of his left hand, symptomatic of tendinitis, has forced Blake to pull out of a scheduled April 6 title shot against International Boxing Federation champion Harry Arroyo.

—Gene Hatcher, World Boxing Association junior welterweight champion, torn tendon fibers on the top of his right hand suffered against Ubaldo Sacco last year continue to delay his second title defense, tentatively set for mid-May.

—Donald Curry, WBA and IBF welterweight champion, healthy and preparing to test the junior middleweight ranks Saturday against James "Hard Rock" Green. Curry's early days as a champ and his professional career were threatened by a torn right wrist ligament and popped joint at the base of the index finger suffered during his title-clinching victory against Jun Sok Hwang.

Like the mailman with sore feet, the boxer with hurting hands usually is left to either accept his fate as an occupational hazard or find other means of employ.

Yet the people at Gorman's point out the risk of such injury has almost been eliminated during gym workouts, where extra gauze and tape and padded 16-ounce gloves are used. Where such injuries still come into play, they painfully contend, is during the actual bout. And that is a situation the local camp believes can be remedied by a simple rules change.

Since both of Gorman's champions hold WBA belts it has become routine for the manager to interrupt the mandatory pre-fight championship rules meeting in order to waive the following provision:

In all weight classes up to and including middleweight, hand bandages shall be restricted to 10 yards of soft gauze bandage not more than two inches in width, held in place by not more than six feet of surgeon's tape one inch in width.

While that applies for each hand, Gorman is convinced it is not enough protection.

"I always request a roll and a half of gauze per hand — or 15 yards — and a roll of tape for both hands — five yards per hand," said Gorman, who would like to see those figures written into somebody's next rulebook.

"I'm gonna go to the next WBA convention and talk to some people about changing it. The only way to get it done is to have the WBA or WBC (World Boxing Council) do it, and everybody else will follow suit."

Curry hurt his wrist in the 12th round against Hwang

on Feb. 13, 1983. The injury forced Curry to fight the final nine minutes virtually one-handed.

Hatcher's injury — a tearing of the fibers that hold the tendon across the middle knuckle of the right hand — came about during the eighth round of his split-decision 15-round win against Sacco last Dec. 15.

Blake's left hand was damaged during the third or fourth round of his 10-round majority decision against Adolfo "Chile" Medel on Feb. 9, in a bout televised nationally by CBS from Midland's Chaparral Center. Blake aggravated the injury in sparring last week.

"But most injuries happen in the fight because they don't let you put on enough tape and gauze on your hands," Curry said.

A computer analysis of two recent title fights telecast on Home Box Office has shed some light on the heretofore overlooked subject of just how many punches are thrown in a given championship match.

For instance, in his 15-round unanimous decision win against Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini last month, WBA lightweight champion Livingstone Bramble connected on 674 or 1,220 punches to a 55 percent contact average. Mancini landed 381 of 1,349 punches, or 28 percent.

IBF heavyweight champion Larry Holmes was shown to have landed 260 or 427 punches, 61 percent, en route to his 10th-round technical knockout against David Bey recently. Bey hooked up on 69 of 260 punches for 27 percent and only 14 of 70 jabs. Holmes found Bey with 184 of 301 jabs.

AND THIS was after weeks of live sparring, not to mention work on the heavy bag, the speed bag, and against the hand mitts. Sometimes even three or four months away from the gym is not enough time to let those hands heal.

"So you hurt your hand and then you start back into training again and then you reinjure it," Curry said.

"But at least in the gym, you can protect your hand."

The wrapping of his hands has become a ritual for Curry, as performed by Paul Reyes, his trainer.

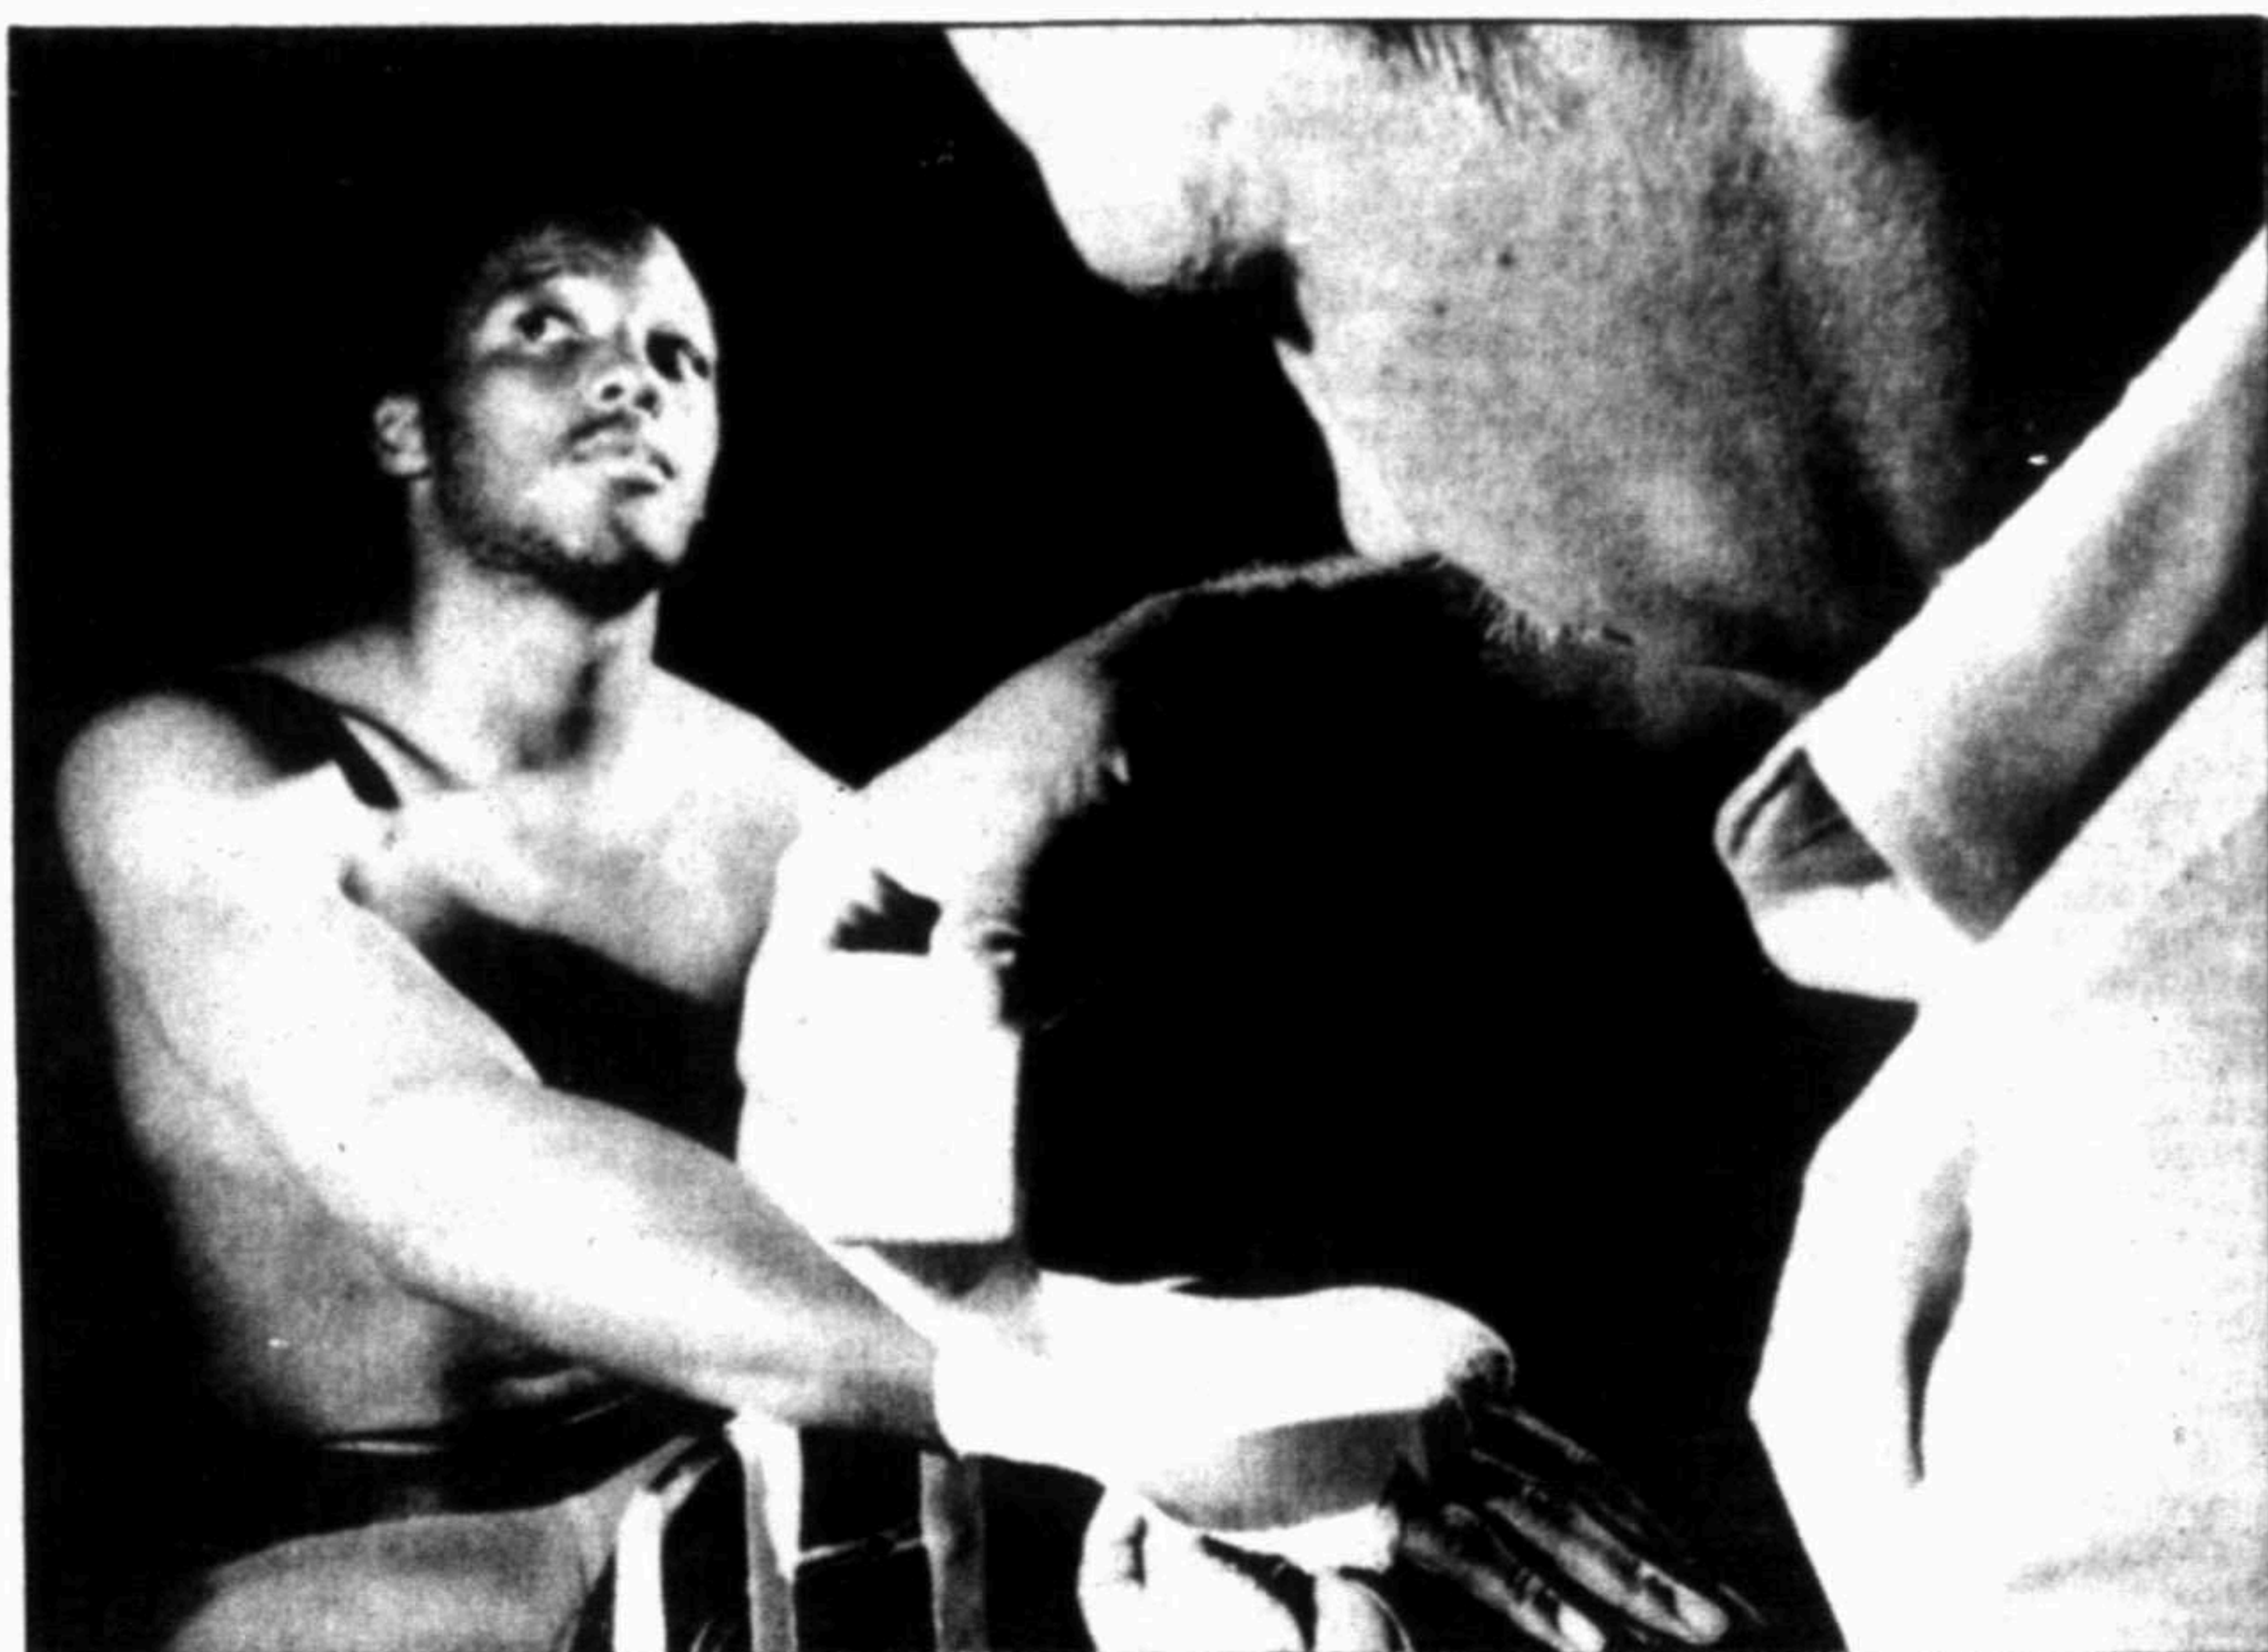

Reyes first applies a covering of inch-and-a-half-wide adhesive tape from the top of the knuckles back to the base of the wrist. He repeats that procedure with gauze, two inches in width. Over that is placed a ¾-inch form-fitting foam pad. The brain-child of Dr. James E. Marr of Everman, the pad covers the top of the knuckles and extends fully to the wrist. A layer of gauze is added atop that, followed by a final wrapping of adhesive tape.

The finished product — extending from the top of the knuckles to several inches up the wrist — bears a striking resemblance to a cast.

"I wouldn't say it's like a cast," Reyes said. "A cast is hard. This just absorbs the punches better."

"It's wrapped pretty good," said Curry, who described the fit as quite comfortable. "But it won't make you hit any harder. It's not gonna help as far as a knockout punch."

That is hardly the object during training anyway, said Gorman, who was quick to note the comparative safety margin afforded by the amply padded 16-ounce sparring glove over its eight-ounce fight counterpart. But while the 16-ouncer is a hand-saver in the gym, Gorman admitted its use would be impractical during a fight.

WBA welterweight champion Donald Curry gets hands taped before practice session by trainer Paul Reyes. Curry will fight James Green in a non-title bout Saturday in Dallas.

DeWit on Hagler-Hearns card

From Staff Reports

BURNET, Tex. — Canadian boxing heavyweight Willie deWit, who is being partially backed by Midland's Ben Tamney, will be taking on Alex Williamson as part of the undercard of the Marvin Hagler-Thomas Hearns fight on April 15 at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas after recently running his professional record to 3-0.

DeWit, an Olympic silver medalist and former two-time World Amateur Heavyweight champion, earned his latest victory with a devastating first round knockout over Toni Pulu (19-14-1) in Dallas.

Pulu had hoped to intimidate deWit by throwing bombs right from the opening bell, but a solid uppercut by deWit, followed by a strong left hook at 2:48 of the first round proved to be too much for Pulu, who was dazed several minutes after the contest was over.

NOW DEWIT faces Williamson, who owns a 5-1-1 pro record, in an all-Canadian matchup. Williamson is from Reece's Corners in Ontario and is a 6-foot-3, 215-pounder, who has been training under Angelo Dundee in Miami for the last two years.

The Hagler-Hearns undercard is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. CST and the deWit-Williamson fight will be part of the live closed circuit telecast which is expected to draw one of the largest viewing audiences ever to watch a boxing card. All 15,000 seats have already been sold.

The deWit-Williamson fight can be seen locally as well as the Hearns-Hagler bout at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center via live closed circuit TV. Tickets are $25 and are available at the Chaparral Center box office and Endless Horizons.

WILLIAMSON is replacing Odessa's Charles Hostetter on the fight card since Hostetter was forced to withdraw from the match because of a torn muscle in his arm.

"This is a big fight for Alex," said Dundee. "He wants to be known in Canada and this is a big opportunity for him. If we can win this fight, everyone in Canada will know him. In a lot of ways, he's like deWit. He's big, strong and powerful. He's young and we're just scratching the surface with him."

With three impressive KO's in his first three pro bouts, deWit is already showing signs of what his potential could be in the near future.

"I am looking forward to meeting Alex in Las Vegas. With the crowd that will be there and with the world wide coverage, I plan to be super ready," said deWit, who is just 23-years-old.

DeWit, who is training here in Burnet since turning pro, has already developed a strong Canadian and Texas following.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, March 30, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: It is time for a change. Stop letting others make your decisions for you. A new environment stimulates your creativity. You receive money from an unexpected source in autumn. The success of a business venture brings both surprise and delight. Determination helps you defeat your competitors. Spend more time with mate and other family members. Romantic partner may be feeling neglected. Plan a special vacation for two. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Dutch painter Vincent Van Gogh, Irish dramatist Sean O'Casey, Spanish artist Francisco Jose de Goya, actors Warren Beatty and John Astin, singer Frankie Laine, rock star Eric Clapton, actor-TV host Peter Marshall.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You discover how pleasant it can be to spend some time alone. Treasure your privacy. Rest and relaxation will help restore your energy. Return phone calls and answer letters promptly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Share your concerns with a trusted friend. A fresh viewpoint could help you think more clearly. Financial pressures subside thanks to the generosity of a partner. Repay favors as soon as possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Joint ventures bring both pleasure and success this weekend. Do not ignore a warning. Procrastination will only make things more uncertain. Decisive action is required. Announce your plans with confidence.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do what your heart tells you is right. New beginnings are favored. Put the painful memory of romance behind you and look to the future. Happier days lie just ahead.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make your move soon or you could miss out on a wonderful financial opportunity. Use the weekend to get better organized. Let a loved one know what is in your heart.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You could develop doubts about someone's intentions. Let your intuition be your guide. Be supportive of mate's special project. Dieters need all the encouragement they can get. Be extra thoughtful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Getting together with good friends and positive people stirs your creative juices. Share your ideas with members of a different generation and everyone will profit! A sports event captures your attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Outdoor activities are a source of pleasure. You learn while you play. Set work aside for the day. An art object is not a bargain if you cannot really afford it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be positive when climbing the ladder of success. Learn from other people's mistakes. A negative attitude only makes enemies. A financial burden will soon be lifted. Build savings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Trust your instincts and you will make the right choices. You will be rewarded many times over for helping a loyal aide. A family member's good news sends your spirits soaring.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Member of opposite sex could place you in a frustrating social situation. Mind your manners and avoid discussing sensitive issues. Be wise when faced with "bargains" you do not really need.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Add something special to your plans for the day and mate will be happy. Have a private chat with a child or friend. A family reunion is a smashing success.

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

Returning partner's lead is not one of the Ten Commandments. More often than not it is right, even if only for reasons of partnership trust. But once in a while the evidence will tell you that it is futile, and you should look for greener pastures.

North's one diamond response tends to show a better than minimum responding hand. With a minimum, North would probably raise clubs immediately. Since South was only a point short of a one no trump opening bid, he felt he was worth one effort, and North went on to game on the strength of his strong six-card diamond suit.

West did not like the idea of leading from either of his black suits into the opening bidder, so he hit on a low heart. Declarer played low from dummy and captured East's queen with the ace. A diamond to the king was ducked and East won the next diamond with the jack.

It was obvious to East that declarer had to have the ten of hearts—if he lacked that card, his correct play to the first trick would have been the table's jack as the only way to win two tricks in the suit. Therefore, a heart return would enable declarer to get the diamonds going before the defenders had set up their fifth trick. So East shifted to a spade.

Declarer tried the finesse of the queen. West won and reverted to hearts. East took the king and cleared the suit. Now when East won the ace of diamonds, the defenders could take a heart for the setting trick.

Free Sunday newspaper planned

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Globe-Democrat will begin publishing a free Sunday edition in May in an effort to grab advertising dollars from the rival Post-Dispatch, the Globe's publisher says.

Jeffrey M. Gluck, who purchased Missouri's oldest continuous newspaper in February 1984 from the Newhouse family, said Thursday his goal was to take the market from the Post-Dispatch and its Sunday circulation of 600,000.

"We will out-perform them," said Gluck in announcing that the newspaper plans to print 425,000 copies containing as many as 48 pages. "We are going after the major market, that's all."

Since 1969, when the Globe-Democrat sold its presses and its building to the Post-Dispatch, there have been no Sunday editions of the newspaper except for a brief period a year ago.

Gluck said the free Sunday editions will be delivered to a portion of the city lying roughly south of Interstate 44 and to areas of St. Louis County that will exclude communities adjacent to or near north St. Louis.

Gluck said all of his free papers would be distributed in the St. Louis area, while only about 290,000 of the Post-Dispatch's Sunday papers were delivered in what he called the "major market" area.

"Advertisers don't want their ads to go 150 miles," he said. "We will be beating them by one-third, and that's assuming their circulation doesn't go down as a result of this move."

Gluck said his staff had studied the move carefully and believed more than 90 percent of the people who received a free Globe-Democrat would read it.

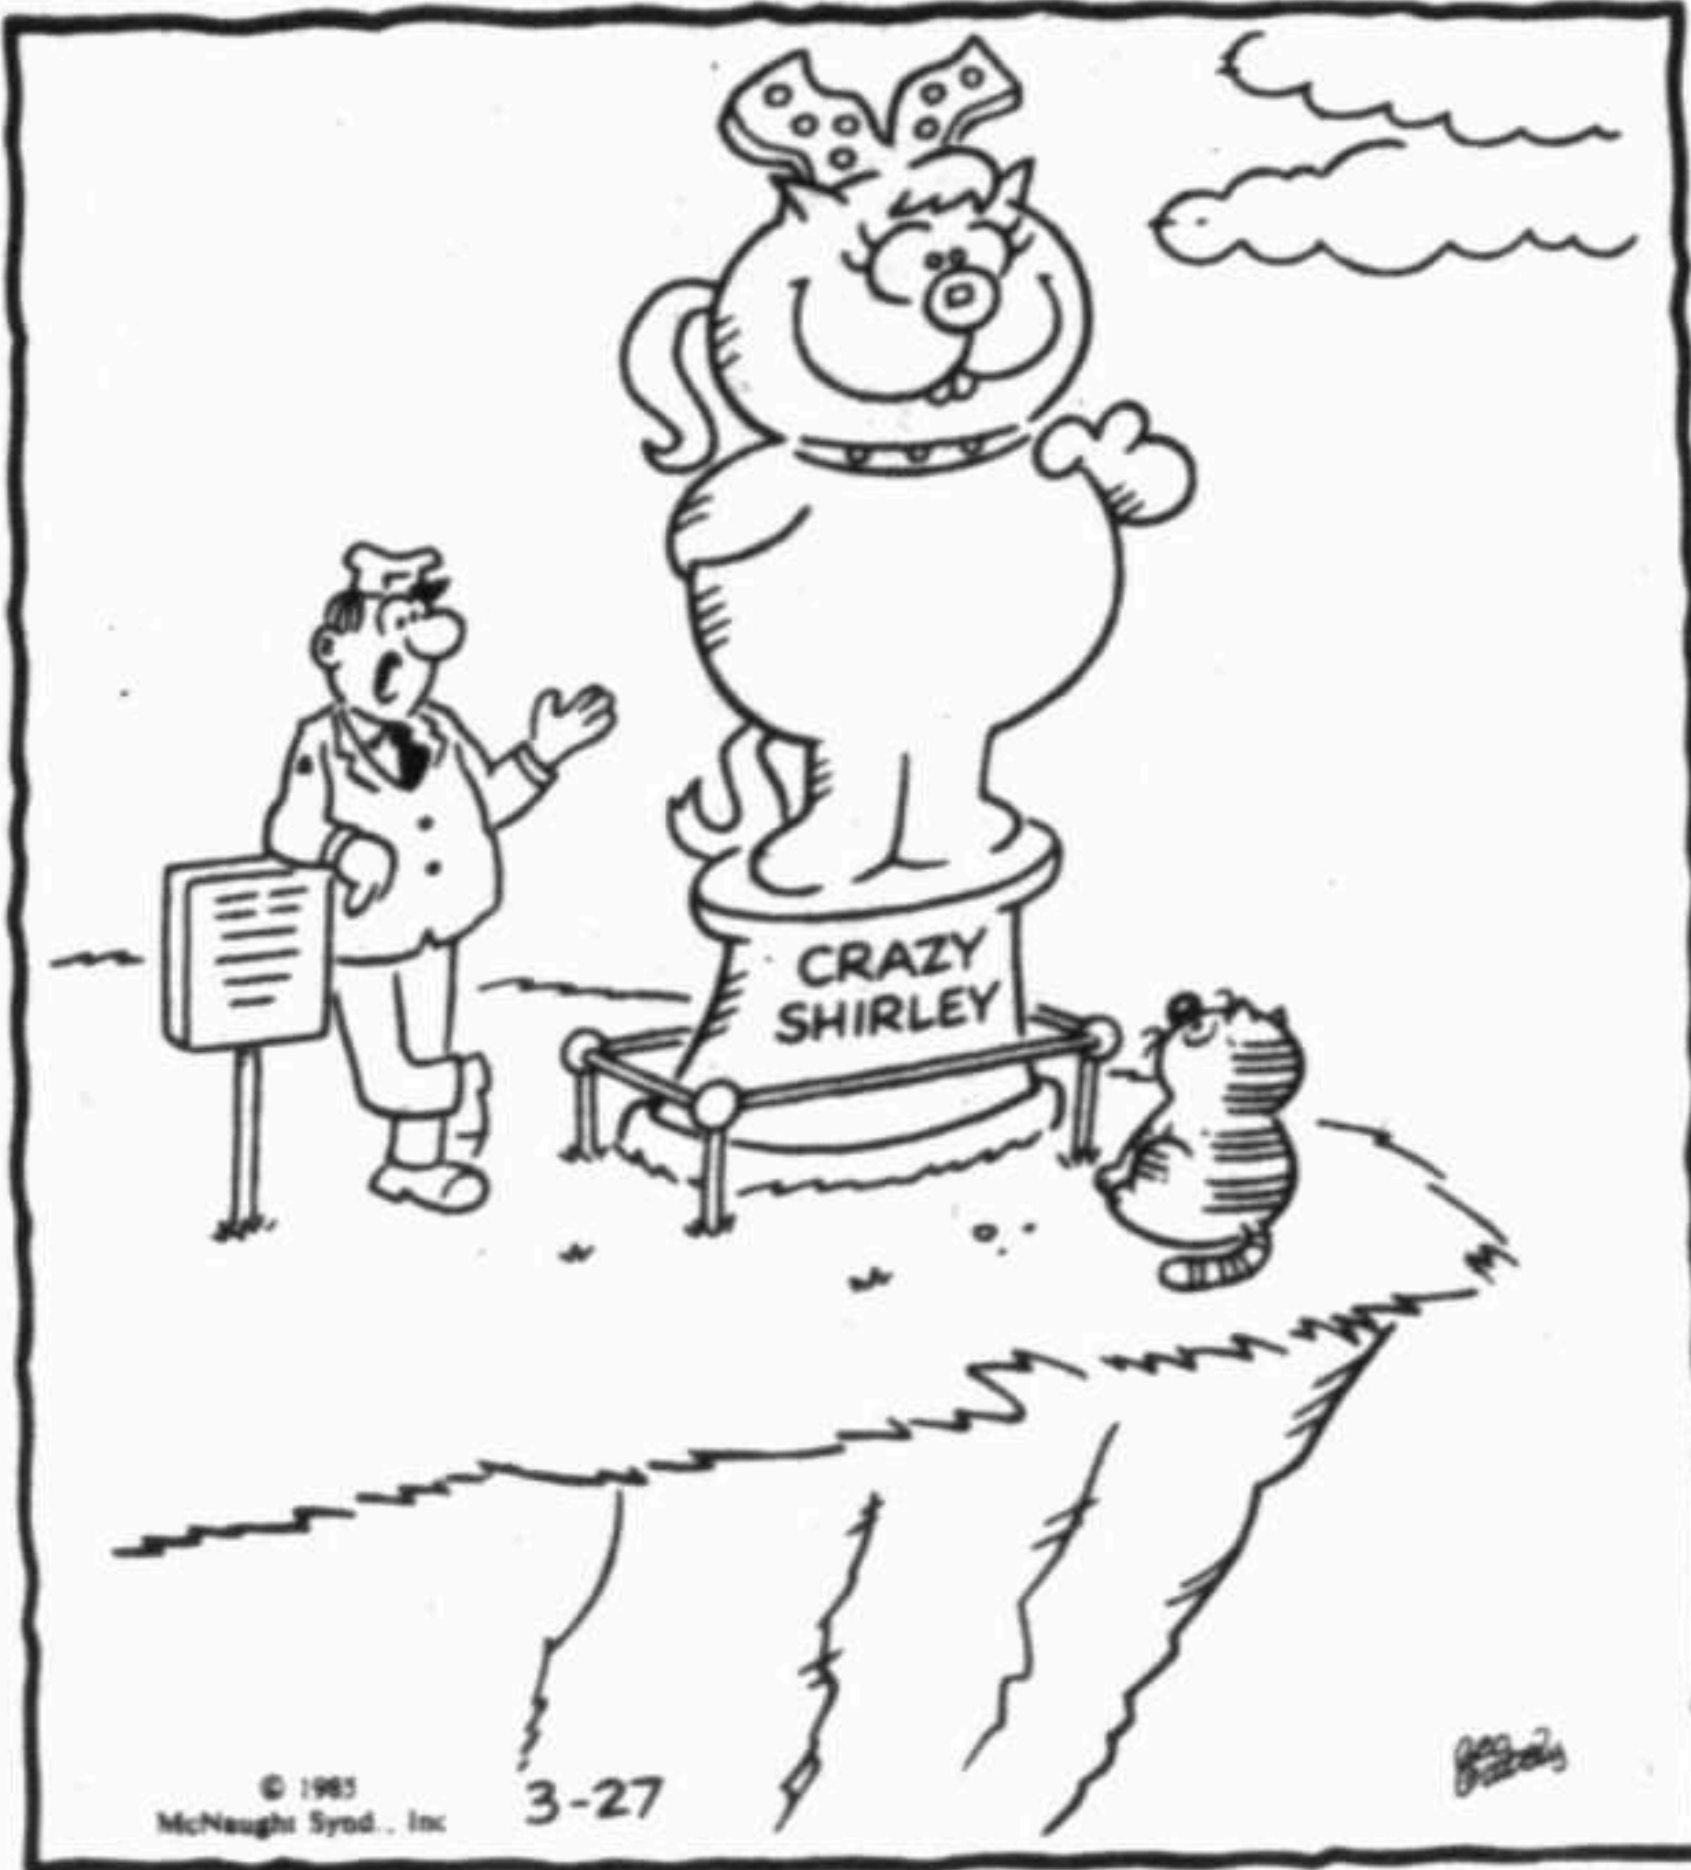

"We think it will make (advertising) money."

Jackson finds wax likeness 'fantastic'

LONDON (AP) — The gleam in his right eye is a light bulb and his trademark white glove holds a strobe. Michael Jackson, looking on the wax effigy of himself at Madame Tussaud's, declared it "fantastic."

And the hordes of screaming teen-agers waiting outside the waxworks Thursday had the same opinion of the real-life rock superstar as they mobbed his limousine, threw themselves on the car and chased it a half-mile.

"I saw his glove and his collar! And she saw half his face!" said Kay Scott, 11, who waited with friends for three hours outside the wax museum in central London.

Several fans fainted and one was knocked down by a passing car.

After 90 dull minutes for the 2,000 breathless admirers, their idol emerged from Madame Tussaud's, jumped onto the roof of the limousine, pirouetted and blew kisses. The fans shrieked "We want Michael!" They blew whistles. They held up photographs of him, and covers of his albums.

Jackson's sculpture, in the museum's Super Star section beside effigies of British singers Boy George and David Bowie, goes on public view today.

They met when Theismann, 36, was playing football at the University of Notre Dame and his future wife was an athletic department secretary.

Theismann was Most Valuable Player in the National Football League in 1983.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Extra police officers were brought in and 40 to 50 people were arrested during an anti-apartheid demonstration outside a concert by Frank Sinatra, who has performed in South Africa, authorities said.

"I would imagine most of it would be disorderly conduct. It was very passive on the part of the protesters," Rosellen Wheeler, a supervisor with the Kansas City Police Department, said Thursday night.

No injuries were reported and Sinatra's concert wasn't interrupted.

RIVERSIDE, Iowa (AP) — Gene Roddenberry, creator of the "Star Trek" TV series, says it's all right with him if Capt. James T. Kirk, galactic good guy, hails from Riverside.

"I think that's a very enterprising suggestion," said Roddenberry, who in the book "The Making of Star Trek" wrote that the captain of the starship Enterprise was born in a small Iowa town.

City Councilman Steve Miller spearheaded a drive to make that Riverside — on a plot of land he owns. The council approved it 4-0 on Monday.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Conductor Maxim Shostakovich says his 1981 request for political asylum in the United States was an effort to escape the "unfreedom" that hampered his father's musical career in the Soviet Union.

"Just I want to find freedom," Shostakovich, 46, said. "It's not free in Russia. It's unfreedom. In one word — unfreedom. Unfree. Unfree."

The son of the late composer Dmitri Shostakovich was in Omaha for a Thursday concert that included his father's Symphony No. 15. Dmitri Shostakovich, who died in 1975, fell in and out of favor with the Soviet government several times during his life, his son said. "His life was very, very difficult."

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford has been unanimously elected to the 10-member board of directors of Gulfstream Aerospace Corp., the manufacturer of corporate jets and surveillance planes announced.

The appointment was announced Thursday.

ALBANY, Ore. (AP) — Mayor Tom Holman is "convinced good things are going to happen," even though President Reagan's telegram congratulating Albany for being named an "All-American City" was addressed to the former mayor.

The telegram from Reagan — who was grand marshal of the 1967 Veterans Day parade in Albany when he was governor of California — was addressed to Mayor Don Brudvig, whom Holman replaced.

The symbolic award, announced Wednesday, was one of eight given by Citizens Forum on Self-Government, a branch of the National Municipal League.

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — John Moynahan, who won the Bronze Star for his role in developing the atomic bomb, died Tuesday at age 73.

During World War II, Moynahan assisted Army Gen. Leslie Groves, director of the secret Manhattan Project to build an atomic bomb before Nazi Germany. He was aboard one of the planes that accompanied the aircraft that dropped the atomic bomb on Nagasaki on Aug. 9, 1945. Moynahan retired as a lieutenant colonel in 1946 and was awarded a Bronze Star for his Manhattan Project work.

Alcohol problems affect family

Copley News Service

A recovering alcoholic mother of a recovering alcoholic daughter — who has a recovering alcoholic father — has this advice for parents:

Find out what it means to be drunk and then look for symptoms in your children and act immediately.

"First, parents must be informed," Roberta Meyer said. "The majority of adults I have interviewed do not know the difference between being drunk and being intoxicated. Being intoxicated means having a very high alcohol level in the blood and you may not act drunk."

Meyer had her first drink when she was 17, the same year the young ballerina joined the prestigious New York City Ballet under the direction of George Balanchine.

Two years later, Meyer had an alcohol-induced "nervous breakdown" and her ballet career was over.

Now she conducts the Youth Alcohol Awareness Project in the San Francisco area and expects to reach 10,000 first-through sixth-graders there this year. And she has written a book, "The Parent Connection: How to Communicate with Your Child about Alcohol and Other Drugs."

"If you notice anything about your child indicating use of alcohol, confront the child immediately the next morning. Not by saying, 'You were drunk last night.'"

"But tell them that when he or she came in they staggered and bumped into the coffee table three times and slurred their words and you could smell alcohol on their breath, and it leads me to believe you were drinking and you did have the car, and we have to talk about this because this isn't acceptable."

Meyer said in an interview that this conversation needs to be conducted every time alcohol use is suspected, "and then, as a parent, take responsibility for laying down ground rules. Parents must set the rules; society has the laws."

Nationally, alcoholism among juveniles is receiving increased attention.

These national figures estimate that 54 percent of all eighth-graders drink and that 12 percent of them are at risk of missing school and having problems with the police because of alcohol.

By the time these students get to the 12th grade, 81 percent of them are drinking and 40 percent are at risk, according to Jeff Wynne, an authority with an alcohol program. "Any person can become an alcoholic," Wynne said.

Said Meyer: "The truth of the matter is, and a lot of people don't like to hear me say this, but the truth is, 60 percent of the kids who are experimenting (with drinking) really are not having any problem."

"They drink a little bit and maybe they drink to get high, but they get high on one beer and they don't drink and drive. But for another 20 percent, it can be very serious," she said. "Ten percent of those will be alcoholics, and another 10 percent will be problem users, that is, drinking and driving and getting into trouble at school."

"These are the ones who could die or they could kill someone else."

Meyer believes genetics is the most important factor in alcoholism. She has alcoholics on both sides of her family. She was married twice, both times to alcoholics. Other authorities believe that social factors play a major role in it.

Meyer said, "My daughters, therefore, have an 80 percent to 90 percent chance of having this predisposition. One daughter, the recovering alcoholic, was able to identify the worsening symptoms in herself and quit on her own, she said.

Unfounded fears prevent more utilization of the Pill

Hearst News Service

Almost as quickly as the birth control pill took fear of unwanted pregnancy out of sex for many women, fear of the pill itself replaced it. Widespread reports in the 1960s and '70s of associated health risks — particularly the risk of heart attacks and strokes — scared many women away from oral contraceptives.

In 1973, 25.7 percent of married women using some form of contraception chose the Pill, according to the National Center for Health Statistics, a division of the U.S. Public Health Service. That percentage dropped to 13.5 percent in 1982, the most recent year for which data are available.

Today, with safer low-dose pills on the market, physicians say much of the fear surrounding the Pill is unfounded. According to the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, the Pill is the most effective and safest contraceptive for many women. But an understanding of the actual benefits and risks associated with the Pill and other birth control methods has been slow to displace fears formed in past decades. A poll released this month by the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists found that Americans greatly overestimate the risks and underestimate the effectiveness of birth control methods, particularly the birth control pill.

That misinformation leaves women vulnerable to unwanted pregnancies, said Dr. Myron Gordon, chairman of Albany (N.Y.) Medical College's Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology. Much of the problem is traceable to sensationalized treatment of the subject in the 1960s and '70s, he said.

"The way the matter was presented, particularly in women's publications, overdwelt the problems of contraception and presented a picture that scared off many women," Gordon said. The upshot was "significant shifts away from oral contraceptives and IUDs in the 1970s."

That shift is documented by information compiled by the Center of Health Statistics. In addition to the dramatic decline in the use of the Pill, the data show a comparable decrease in the use of IUDs (from 6.7 percent of married women using contraceptives in 1973 to 4.8 percent in 1982). At the same time, diaphragm use went up from 2.4 percent to 4.5 percent.

But the most dramatic result of the contraceptive scares of the 1960s and '70s was the rise in the number of women choosing sterilization to ward off pregnancy. Sterilization is the most common form of contraception among married women today, according to the health statistics.

Oral contraceptives are now the choice of 15.5 percent of all women, but are still the most popular form of contraception for young women, for whom their use is safest. A 1982 report on "Oral Contraceptives in the 1980s" by the Johns Hopkins University Population Information Program states that "the risks of oral contraceptive use are largely confined to women over 35 who smoke. The risk for younger women is very small."

Developed in the 1950s, oral contraceptives were introduced in the early 1960s. Over the years, as the doses of estrogen in the pills was lowered, the health risks associated with their use have been reduced, Gordon said.

In addition to reduced health risks, physicians now maintain the Pill has beneficial effects for some women, Gordon said. Among them:

— Protection against pelvic inflammatory disease, a condition that can block tubes and lead to later infertility or ectopic pregnancies (pregnancies occurring outside the uterus).

— Protection against endometrial cancer and cancer of the ovaries.

— Protection against benign lumps or cysts on the breast.

Hearing-impaired students are aided by interpreters

MARSHALL, Minn. (AP) — She doesn't have homework and she doesn't have to take tests but Sandy Maronde doesn't have the option of cutting classes. Moreover, she says she's learning in two languages at Southwest State University.

Ms. Maronde is supervisor of interpretation at SSU. She and helper Laura Reith accompany hearing-impaired students to classes and other academic activities to translate the words and meanings of the event.

Wearing a dark top to make the signing less visually fatiguing for the student, Ms. Maronde sits in front of the class and signs for the hearing-impaired student.

Five hearing-impaired people are among the 2,100 SSU students. They choose their classes and give their schedule to Ms. Maronde. She then tries to arrange schedules for herself and Ms. Reith so that all schedules will be covered.

An intriguing aspect of her job is the combination of varied experiences, says Ms. Maronde. Classes from computers to marketing, different instructors and students make every day something new.

"The variety is a pleasing part, and it's a continued challenge to work in two languages," she says.

Ms. Maronde learned signing at the St. Paul Vocational-Technical Institute, then a six-week experimental program. Most of her training came on the job. Ms. Reith also attended the St. Paul program but, by that time, it had expanded to six months.

No matter how long the formal training is, Ms. Maronde says it still takes about two years before an interpreter has a handle on the language. "There's always a new word to learn," she says.

Jill Fairchild, 20, Gary, S.D., one of the five hearing-impaired students at SSU, says attending the university is the beginning of her quest to cope with challenges of the "outside world."

"Sure, it's difficult," she says. "But I study constantly because I am determined to make it. Within the next few years I want to finish college and start my own small business, a photography studio."

It would have been easier, she said, if she had attended Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C., where all the students are hearing-impaired.

"But since I plan to go into business serving people, deaf as well as non-deaf, I knew that I had to make the break and move into the world of the non-hearing-impaired," she explains. "Now it is time for me to learn how to get along in this world by myself, as much as I can, and I must learn how to get along with all types of people."

Justice department eyeing assistance for rape victims

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adding insult to injury, victims of rape and attempted rape have to foot the bill for medical evidence needed to prosecute assailants, Assistant Attorney General Lois Haight Herrington says.

Commenting on a report showing there were at least 1.5 million rapes or attempted rapes between 1973-82, Mrs. Herrington said that "in many states, rape victims must literally pay for their crime."

The new study was based on information obtained through the National Crime Survey. It showed, among other things, that medical expenses averaged $104 for some 580,000 rape victims who suffered injuries.

The victims of rapes "are given the bill for the medical exam (that is) required to gather physical evidence," Mrs. Herrington said.

"Burglary victims are not charged for collecting fingerprints," she said. "Why should sexual victims be charged for collecting evidence?"

A change may be in sight, however. "That unfair assessment would be eliminated under model legislation the Justice Department is developing for states," Mrs. Herrington said.

Mrs. Herrington, who heads the Office of Justice Programs, also noted that in many instances, rape victims "hesitate to come forward, knowing that their addresses and phone numbers can be made public."

"They fear intimidation, threats and even reprisal from the defendant and his friends," she said, adding that the proposed legislation would require that victims' addresses, phone numbers and counseling records be kept confidential.

The study showed that about half of the estimated 1.5 million rapes went unreported.

Women who resisted their attackers managed to avoid rape in 73 percent of the cases, but those who submitted were raped 56 percent of the time, it said.

The study said attackers were strangers to the victims about two-thirds of the time, that most rapes and rape attempts happened at night, and nearly 40 percent took place in streets, parks and parking lots.

Furnishing new home requires plans

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — When furnishing a first home, take time to plan for beauty and comfort, advises Ann Dellenbarger, Extension housing and interior design specialist at Oklahoma State University.

List activities and furniture needed for each room, and then plan the arrangement of the room on paper, she suggests. Make a list of what you have and what you need; then plan a budget to meet your future needs.

Don't compromise on things important to you, she warns.

"If you want to live with fresh flowers but cannot afford long-stemmed roses and crystal, compromise with one rose in a glass bottle," Ms. Dellenbarger said. "Or better yet, invest in a rose bush and grow your own."

Liver transplant patient slowly learning to live again

By LEW SCARR
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Carmen SanNicolas has life instead of her expected death and, in a way, this time has been harder than all the years of dying.

In August 1983, SanNicolas, then 24 and terminally ill with a diseased liver, was flown to the University of Tennessee Medical Center to receive a transplanted liver from an anonymous Indiana donor. It would be a long, difficult, on-again, off-again, painful procedure, physically and emotionally.

But medical skill and prayers and indomitable human will prevailed, and today she is stronger physically than she has been in 13 years when her cirrhotic liver first was diagnosed and Carmen SanNicolas began to die.

Now she sat in the living room of her mother's apartment and talked plainly, self-critically, about her remarkable ordeal. She had lived more than half her life feeling her health gradually leaking away.

SHE IS A bird of a woman, not even 5 feet tall, and she talks in a thin, little voice.

"No one ever had to tell me I would die young. Ever since I was 12, I knew I was going to die. I felt it inside. I just knew. I knew that something inside was not put together right, that I was not normal."

"Every day I could see my body changing and my face getting more and more swollen, and not just from the medicine, and I saw the yellow color of my skin, and it seemed that no matter what they did, it didn't do any good."

"It is easy to forget now how it was, but I want to make myself remember those bad times, so there can be meaning to life now."

It is as if all that suffering can give any happiness real definition.

"But now I have the liver, and every day I am getting closer to normal, but in a way it is harder than it was before."

SanNicolas still has the puffy face caused by medication she must take for the rest of her life.

"I avoid mirrors. I feel like a freak. I try to tell myself that I am just as normal as the person next to me, and no one is going to know that I feel freaky, or know that I am not exactly the same as everyone else."

"I know in my heart that they can be standing right beside me and not really know. Every day I have to tell myself to act like a normal person, but it is hard."

SHE IS AFRAID. "I am afraid to go out, to use my body. I am afraid it will fail. I am 25 now and I should start to live, now that I can."

"They have given me life and I don't know what to do with it."

"It is crazy. I can lift things and move things and do housework and go places like everybody else, but I am afraid to."

Her newfound energy is frustrating.

"I feel guilty because I think I should be out there working my head off or helping someone who isn't as strong, and I am not doing that."

"So I feel guilty, and I sometimes wonder if it was fair to cheat death the way I did. It is a terrible emotional problem, and I suppose everyone has it who gets a second chance to live."

SanNicolas concedes her new life has affected her marriage to Bernard SanNicolas.

"I have not talked about that to anyone before, but, yes, our marriage has been affected. It is not that we are not strong now. It is just that we have to get to know each other all over again."

"We tried to live the rest of our lives in the year I was supposed to die. We tried to put everything into the little time we had. We both knew that after that year there was going to be nothing."

"I was going to die and that was it. So we put all of our love for each other into that year, not really thinking about a future because we didn't have a future."

AND SUDDENLY there is one.

"You must realize that I had psyched myself out and I was ready to die, and then I didn't. I wasn't going to see 25, and I accepted that."

Carmen SanNicolas, liver transplant patient, is slowly learning to live again after years of learning how to die.

Once she has lost the fear of death — absolutely lost it — then all of her other fears should be meaningless. Nothing can touch her ever again.

And Carmen SanNicolas, worried about living, does not fear death.

"Gosh," she said, "if they were to tell me that tomorrow or the next day would be my last to live, I would just thank God that I had as much time as I did have. I have enjoyed each moment that I have begun feeling like a whole person, and waking up each morning and hearing all of the noises outside and planning what I am going to do that day, still ... it is hard."

PART OF IT has to do with having another person's organ in her body helping to keep her alive.

"There are times when I feel like a freak because of that. I feel I had no right to take someone's organ. But I never stop feeling grateful to the person and the family who gave me that organ."

"But it doesn't stop me feeling the way I do about myself."

SanNicolas said she has been told by some doctors that she can expect to live another 40 years. Actually, her physician, Dr. Robert Bennett, said that since experience in liver transplantation is so limited, life expectancy cannot be estimated. He said though that about 70 percent of liver transplant recipients survive the first year.

SanNicolas said she almost backed out of having the surgery several times.

"I don't think I could have done it on my own. But knowing the people of San Diego (who donated about $75,000) were behind me is what made me go on. They made me feel I was worthwhile."

"If I had been on my own, I think I would have been willing to just go to sleep. It got to the point sometimes with all of the needles and all of the tubes and all of the pain when I wanted to tell them to just leave me alone and let me close my eyes."

"I hope I don't come off as somebody who feels sorry for herself. It is just that it does me good to remember some of the bad moments."

ONE OF THOSE bad moments was the call announcing that a liver finally was ready for her.

"Everything was so confused at home when that call came, I told them (her family), 'You guys just go without me. I am not going anywhere.'"

"You see, I didn't want to face it. I was having a tantrum as a way to get out of going. I knew that call was going to come, but when it did I didn't want to have anything to do with it."

"I wanted it but I didn't want it." She said she was confused, too, on her flight to Memphis, Tenn.

"I kept thinking I didn't want to die in surgery, unconscious, not knowing about it. I had prepared myself to die, but with my family around, and I thought that might not happen."

"When we arrived in Dallas, I said I was getting off there. You see, I was postponing having the transplant, trying to run away. And by the time I got to Memphis I was functioning like a robot."

"I think if I had been thinking clearly I probably wouldn't have gone through with it. I remember the doctors asking me to sign a lot of papers, and the last one was when they were bringing the liver to me."

"IT WAS THE LAST paper for my consent to have the liver transplant. That was the time to back out. But I thought if I didn't sign that paper I would have to go home a failure. I would have chickened out."

"So I signed the paper."

Carmen SanNicolas had been talking almost non-stop for more than an hour. She sat back in her mother's comfortable chair.

"And you know what?" she said finally. "I don't think I could do it again."

DEAR ABBY

Mom tells son motel's bath towels don't belong at home

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My 17-year-old son and several of his buddies went on a skiing trip, after which I found two bath towels with the name of a motel on them.

I told him I couldn't believe that he would steal. He said he didn't consider that stealing — the owners of the motel were thieves because of the prices they charged.

I told him that nobody forced him to stay there, and in my eyes he was guilty of stealing.

Please print your opinion, Abby. He reads you faithfully. — OLD-FASHIONED MOM

DEAR MOM: Your son's rationalization for stealing bath towels from a motel doesn't wash.

Don't throw in the towels. Insist that your son send them back with an apology. (That's what my twin and I had to do when our father found some hotel "souvenirs," acquired after a football excursion to Sioux Falls, S.D., circa 1935.)

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 14 years. This is the second marriage for both of us.

My husband lies awake nights yearning for another woman. He actually tells me this! Although he told me that he went to bed with her only once, he won't tell me who she is. He says I know her. My hunch is that it's a woman at our club who boasts that she and her husband have an open marriage. I did not agree to an open marriage when I married this man.

When I found out my first husband was the town stud, I divorced him.

My present husband insists that he wants to keep our marriage intact. He can't have it both ways. What do you think? — NOT WILLING TO SHARE

DEAR NOT WILLING: Your husband really knows how to hurt a woman. Why are you holding still for his abuse? You say he can't have it both ways. I say, apparently he can. And has.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have retired to a wonderful community in a warm climate. We love people and have always been able to get along with our neighbors, but there is one couple who are making our lives miserable. He is very crude, swears, hogs the conversation and is an insufferable braggart! His wife is a non-stop talker and a terrible gossip. We have lived to them in order to get out of going to their house, but we cannot keep them from coming to ours.

When we have company, they see the cars in our driveway and come over to join us and our guests. When they are around, no one can get a word in — he takes over the conversation in a loud voice, bragging about what he has, what he does and what he spends. Everything he has is better than anyone else's, and he gets into noisy arguments with our guests.

We have never met anyone like this couple. What can we do? We hate to insult them, but how else can we get these people out of our lives? They know who they are, but don't mention our name or town. — OUT OF PATIENCE

DEAR OUT: The next time they appear at the door while you're entertaining, say, "I'm sorry I can't invite you in now, we have company." And if they never speak to you again, what have you lost? Two overbearing, intrusive, obnoxious, insensitive neighbors.

AT WIT'S END

Colds: No respect

By ERMA BOMBECK

You have a cold. Your eyes feel like round razor blades. Your lips are feverish and dry. Your chest sounds like the wind rushing through a cracked car window. Every time you swallow, it's as if you're trying to force down a velvet tennis ball.

No one seems to know or to care that these are your last hours on earth.

They say, "You want coffee?" "Can you get that phone?" "Where do you want to have lunch?"

I don't understand it. Colds used to command a certain amount of respect in this country. It used to be if my head felt warm and I didn't eat all of my breakfast, my mother would put me to bed for three days. She called the doctor, brought trays and read stories to me. People would ask where I got it and what I was taking for it. It was important.

Then I got married and my colds changed. They felt the same, but no one got too excited about them. My husband said they were my own fault. Anyone who was crazy enough to wear a bathing suit in April just to be the first one on the block to get a tan deserved to be sick.

After the children came, everyone called my cold a "no surprise" cold. After all, what did you expect when sick children coughed in your face and handed you their dirty nose tissue to dispose of? The cure for it was to walk it to death and be careful you didn't pass it on to the rest of the family.

I didn't get a generic cold until I was in my 30s. A generic cold is one of those no personality-ordinary-garden variety-one-size-fits-all colds that "is going around" and everyone in town has one just like it. Same symptoms, same medication, same prognosis. You know you're not going to get any sympathy with it when you see your doctor and he has one just like it.

Even if you stay at home for a day with a generic cold, when you go to work the next morning someone will snipe, "Enjoy your day off?"

This leads us to the cold of the '80s. No one fights it anymore. They just "go public" with it. They sneeze on your hymnal, they cough on your food, they kiss you hello with germ-ridden lips. They hand you a phone that they've infected. They blow their noses on a crowded elevator. Their white faces and feverish bodies remind you hourly that life does not go on forever.

It's as if everyone has given up. Take your honey and vinegar and shove it! Go suck a lozenge for all the good it will do! I had a good night's sleep. It's still here! Tough it out like the rest of us!

I had a cold of the '80s last week and casually mentioned to my husband, "I think I'll knock off work early and die."

He said, "Good, you can get gas before the rush hour."

Census Bureau gives budget breakdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — Direct payments to individuals were the biggest share of federal spending last year, averaging $1,356 for every man, woman and child in the nation, the Census Bureau reports.

Overall, Uncle Sam spent an average $3,022.21 for each American in fiscal 1984, the bureau said. It calculated the figure by dividing expenditures of $724.7 billion by a population of nearly 240 million people.

But in addition to calculating how much was spent per resident, Census officials also looked at where it was spent and for what — detailed in a three-volume publication released Thursday.

Direct payments to individuals was the biggest of the four major categories of spending, followed by $736 per resident for purchases, $463 to pay federal workers and $405 in grants to state and local governments.

Among states, California was scene of the largest total federal spending at $91.7 billion, or 12.7 percent of the federal total.

Per resident, Alaska was tops, with federal spending of $4,642.17 as large federal salary and military expenditures were spread over a small population.

At the other end of the scale, Vermont accounted for the lowest federal expenditure of any state at $1.4 billion, while per resident expenditures were smallest in Iowa at $2,176.18.

Overall, federal government spending climbed to $724.7 billion in 1984, up 4.3 percent from the year before, according to the study, "Federal Expenditures by State for Fiscal Year 1984."

In breaking down the major categories, Social Security retirement payments was the largest single area of spending, averaging $500 per American per year.

Of course, only retired workers received those benefits, but the per capita figures do give an indication of how much each federal program costs each American to operate.

The $3,022 spent for each American broke down into $674.16 for the Defense Department and $2,148.06 for the rest of the government, the study showed.

Social Security retirement payments, that single largest category, are part of the "direct payments to individuals" section of the study.

Also included in the $1,356.93 in direct payments were $173.78 in Medicare hospital benefits; $149.09 in Social Security survivors benefits; $91.86 in federal civilian employee retirement benefits; $80.37 in Medicare supplemental payments; $73.99 for Social Security disability; $68.36 for military retirement programs; $44.58 in food stamps.

Also, $33.37 in veterans disability compensation; $31 for Supplemental Security Income; $26.41 in insurance programs for railroad workers; $12.92 for Pell education grants; $12.16 to subsidize guaranteed student loans and $10.36 for veterans with non-service connected disabilities.

The $735.98 the government spent on purchases included $671.06 spent by Defense Department and $164.82 spent by all other agencies including the Postal Service.

Federal salaries and wages averaged $453.08 per American, including $137.42 for military personnel, $97.10 for Defense Department civilian workers and $218.56 for all other federal employees.

Other than the broad miscellaneous category, the biggest factor in the $405.36 spent on aid to state and local governments was $83.68 in medical assistance.

Other government aid categories included $40.16 from the Highway Trust Fund; $34.49 for Aid to Families with Dependent Children; $24.05 for housing assistance; $19.04 in general revenue sharing; $15.93 in community development assistance.

Also $15.25 for urban mass transit programs; $14.75 for child nutrition programs; $12.59 for compensatory education programs for the disadvantaged; $11.63 in social services block grants; $10.95 in wastewater treatment construction funds and $10.67 for job training programs.

Experiment to be tested on space shuttle

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A Medical College of Wisconsin professor hopes to find out why people lose muscle tissue in space by having rats dissected on a seven-day flight of the space shuttle next year.

If associate professor Danny A. Riley's experiment proves successful, it may contribute to a solution to one of the chief factors preventing long space flights.

"Astronauts are weakened even when they vigorously exercise in space. If we are able to learn what happens, we will be able to take countermeasures," he said.

Learning why zero gravity weakens space travelers could also help people on earth who suffer from muscle and nerve disorders, he said.

Capt. Millie Hughes-Fulford, 39, of the U.S. Army Reserve in Houston, Texas, the shuttle payload specialist on the Spacelab 4 mission, will perform Riley's experiment. It calls for the dissection of eight rats while the shuttle is in space.

In previous flights, rats have been killed and dissected several days after returning to earth, allowing the animals time to readjust to gravity, Riley said.

Riley will study muscle and nerve fibers from the rat tissues to determine which enzymes are involved in the breakdown of muscles.

Social Security trustees give Medicare reprieve

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even though trustees predict Medicare won't run out of money before 1996, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler says the hospital insurance fund is not out of the woods yet.

A year ago Social Security trustees had said the Medicare fund would be wiped out by 1991, and two years ago they thought it would go bust by 1987.

The five trustees said Thursday that the administration's proposed freeze on hospital payment rates in 1986, coupled with earlier legislative reforms and a slowdown in medical inflation, has bought more time for the Medicare fund.

Mrs. Heckler, one of three Cabinet officers who serve as trustees, said in a statement, "We still have a long way to go, but we are finally taking the right steps, and we are headed in the right direction."

A long-term solution to Medicare's problems will require "good faith and strong medicine in the months and years ahead," she said.

One dose of medicine the Reagan administration wants to give Medicare is a one-year freeze in 1986 on the rates hospitals and physicians are paid to treat various ailments.

Under the so-called prospective payment system adopted in 1983,

Medicare pays hospitals set fees to treat various illnesses, regardless of the length of a patient's stay.

Former Social Security Commissioner Robert M. Ball said the new forecast shows that "the handwringers are once again confounded. ... It's very encouraging. It means we have plenty of time to make changes in Medicare without the pressure of some emergency."

The $70 billion Medicare program helps pay hospital bills and other health care costs for 27 million elderly people and nearly 3 million disabled.

Congress last year cut the rate at which those fees can grow each year. The administration contends it has the regulatory power to freeze them entirely in 1986. Some lawmakers disagree.

The other trustees who compiled the report were Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, the managing trustee; Under Secretary of Labor Ford B. Ford; Mary Falvey Fuller and Suzanne D. Jaffe. In his capacity as acting labor secretary, Ford served as an acting trustee.

The trustees said Social Security should be able to pay all "benefits on time well into the next century" under expected economic conditions.

However, the disability fund could have trouble paying benefits on time by the end of 1987 under adverse economic conditions. The Reagan administration imposed a moratorium on disability cutoffs last April, after some courts had ordered the reviews halted and many governors had refused to carry them out.

Consequently, more people were added to the disability rolls in 1984 than left them for the first time since 1978, and the program paid out $1.2 billion more than it took in.

But the trustees said that even if the economy does falter, the disability fund's problems could be solved by shifting some taxes from the old age and survivors fund.

Full House, joint panel may still consider UTPB

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin may not be out of the woods yet.

But officials there remain optimistic despite news that a decision by the House Appropriations Committee to eliminate UTPB funding won't be reconsidered after work is complete on the 1986-87 budget bill as expected.

Instead, the matter could be considered by the full House during debate on the bill, or in a House-Senate conference committee, Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said Thursday.

Committee members had agreed earlier this week to reconsider the vote to eliminate funding for UTPB and Texas A&M University at Galveston, after voting Monday night to close the schools and sell the campus facilities.

The committee on Tuesday decided to delay reconsideration until completion of work on the entire appropriations package after adopting a parliamentary technique to assure reconsideration would be possible.

But Rudd said Thursday evening he wouldn't permit reconsideration on the schools because he doesn't feel it would be possible to limit reconsideration to only those items.

"It opens too big a can of worms," he said.

Rudd stressed that he favors funding UTPB, and said the matter can be resolved through an amendment during House floor debate.

"I'm very much for it," Rudd said. "I've told several people I will carry the amendment on it if they want."

He also noted the matter could be considered in a joint conference committee. Such committees have been required in past sessions to work out differences in House and Senate versions of spending bills.

UTPB President Duane Leach said today, "We're going to go forward. This is a political situation that must be worked out in the Legislature. We're not even thinking that we're closing."

Leach said he has no way of knowing how much of an effect the news over the possible closing would have on UTPB enrollment.

"There's no way to gauge something like that. It certainly could (be damaging). But that's something you measure over weeks and months," he said.

According to Rep. Kelly Godwin, R-Odessa, several House members have indicated their support in restoring funding to UTPB.

The next order of business will be "to develop an amendment and try to get it on the floor. Of course, that can't be done until work on the entire bill is finished," he said.

"I think we have a good chance in getting the amendment passed if it comes down to debate on the House floor," Godwin added.

The Appropriations Committee is attempting to complete work on the spending bill this week. Rudd said he hopes work can be completed today.

No time has been set for consideration of the bill, but printing and scheduling requirements make consideration unlikely until after Easter.

Man accused of exposure testifies in own defense

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Dressed in sneakers, jeans and a blue T-shirt, a 32-year-old Midland man accused of exposing himself to two high school sophomores took the stand in his own defense Thursday and calmly denied knowing the girls were present Dec. 5 while he said he was in his backyard sunbathing in the nude.

Kenneth Leon Craft, who sat at the defense table eating a Butterfinger candy bar during parts of the trial, told the seven-woman, five-man jury that, "this may sound weird, but sometimes I sunbathe in the nude."

"Would you normally sunbathe on a partly-cloudy day in December?" asked First Assistant District Attorney David Rosado during cross-examination of the defendant in 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin's courtroom.

"Yes, sir, I would," Craft said, "but I'm not going to go out there when it's cold-cold. I have a high metabolism rate and if it's 60 degrees out there and others are cold, I'm not cold."

HE THEN WENT into an explanation about the difference in sunbathing nude in a corner of his yard, which is surrounded by a partially-torn down fence, rather than the middle. "It's a lot warmer out there in a boxed area than out in the open."

The two girls, ages 15 and 16 at the time of the alleged incident, said they walk by Craft's home at 3601 Boyd, on the southwest corner of the Godfrey intersection, on a daily basis on their way home from Lee High School.

According to testimony, they saw Craft dressed in a red robe run across his yard to a corner of the fence when they passed Dec. 5. According to their testimony, Craft knelt down in front of a part of the fence which was missing some slats, opened his robe, stuck his genitals out of the fence and began rubbing them.

"He moaned and said something like, 'You like this, don't you?'" said the 17-year-old, who was 16 at the time of the alleged offense.

The girls, who testified they were wearing heavy coats, said they then called the defendant a name and ran to the nearby Midland Elms Apartment complex on Andrews Highway, where police were called.

According to testimony given by Detective Lt. Earl Luckey and Detective Sgt. Jeff Haile, police set up surveillance the next afternoon at the address where the offense is alleged to have occurred.

The home and its occupant were known to them, Luckey testified, stating police had received "a number of complaints about him exposing himself to young girls" when he lived in another neighborhood.

"But we never could catch him," Luckey said.

ON DEC. 6, however, the day after the two girls made their reports, the officers said they did.

According to their testimony, surveillance was set up by Luckey, Haile and Officer Teresa Gallagher, who was positioned past Craft's house so that she could get statements from students after they walked by.

MMH board votes down psychiatric unit project

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

The Midland County Hospital District Board of Trustees at Thursday's monthly meeting voted down a remodeling project which would have provided a separate unit for psychiatric patients at Midland Memorial Hospital.

"The project would be risky at this point with the given data that we have," said Ray Branson, president of MMH. "With the 15 beds at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, MMH's five beds and the 40 planned beds at the West Plains project, there is a total of 60 beds available in the area.

"It would be more than enough at the present time and through at least 1990," he said.

Branson noted that two of the community's five psychiatrists had moved recently and asked that the project be canceled. The board quickly voted down the proposed renovation, which would have provided a nine-bed unit with two "lock-up" rooms and a socializing area for psychiatric patients at MMH.

Two directors, Dr. Walter Parks and Pat Estes, asked the Board of Trustees to continue to evaluate the placement of psychiatric patients at the Board of Directors meeting held after the trustees' meeting.

Continuing problems with Medicare reimbursement due to a delay in turning in patients' charts, have resulted in a $1 million backlog, according to a report from Dr. Gregory Bartha, president of MMH medical staff.

"Fourteen days is still 'the rule' for how long we have to complete the charts following a patient's discharge," he said.

New forms and procedures for the handling of Medicare patients' charts have slowed the processing of reimbursement from Medicare during strict changes of the system over the last year.

"We have a problem because physicians are not familiar with the new forms," said Tom Bruner in the Jan. 24 board meeting. Bruner is chairman of the board of trustees.

"All of a sudden, we have a tremendous backlog of incomplete charges," he said. "You can't file for reimbursement until you have a complete charge with the new form."

Bartha recommended the board of trustees write letters to some physicians who are delayed in completing their charts.

"We have a problem with a few doctors who are not completing them as fast as they should," he said. "We want to get the most efficient completion of charts possible."

In other areas, the directors approved a payment of $67,650 to Fort Worth Children's Hospital for treatment of indigent neo-natal patients who had been transferred from MMH.

Although currently studying the possibility of providing neo-natal care (birth to 28 days) for high-risk infants, MMH is still sending cases to other hospitals in the state for treatment. A payment also was approved to Lubbock General Hospital for $6,374.

"As far as we know, there are no babies at Fort Worth's Childrens Hospital at this time," said Ron Peterson, vice president of finance for MMH.

The board approved a repayment of $196,963 for indigent care in February and another payment to S.K. Moseley Inc. of $4,500, a firm that has been hired by the hospital district to conduct a neo-natal study.

The board approved $10,000 for the study in January's monthly meeting.

Art Institute for the Permian Basin announces its director

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Art Institute for the Permian Basin, which will hold its gala opening Sept. 2, announced Thursday that Ronald Hickman of Seattle, Wash., has been hired as director of the new museum.

At a news conference at UT-Permian Basin Thursday, Hickman termed the Art Institute exciting and a new beginning for the community.

It's unusual, he said, to walk into a facility of this nature and find no mortgage to worry about.

Hickman, who has been a partner in an art consulting and public relations firm the past four years, received bachelor's and master's degrees in fine arts from the University of Kansas and became an assistant professor of art and head of the Mammel Art Center at Ottawa University, Ottawa, Kan.

He later was director-curator of Galleries for the Wichita Art Association in Wichita, Kan., and in 1967 became executive curator and assistant director of the San Diego Museum of Fine Art, San Diego. Most recently he was director of the Phoenix Art Museum, a post he held eight years before moving to Seattle.

Hickman has staged exhibitions for many of the country's leading artists and has organized many exhibits that have toured both in the United States and abroad. While at the San Diego museum Hickman was instrumental in the construction of the Gildred-Parker Wing and created that institution's sculpture garden.

Hickman said he plans to establish a sculpture garden in a section of the Art Institute. As a fine art center, he said, emphasis will be placed on developing a contemporary 20th century theme, complemented by Mexican art.

Hickman will assume his new position about mid-April and begin preparing for the September opening of the Art Institute.

The Art Institute of the Permian Basin, which is being built on 2 1/2 acres of land on the southeast side of UTPB leased from UT Regents, has been nearly 13 years in the making.

Money to build the Art Institute, approximately $1 million, has been largely raised through a capital fund drive, the annual Fiesta Del Arte, and a grant from the Houston Endowment.

The 12,000-plus square-foot facility will feature an auditorium with an 84-seat capacity, two gallery areas and the sculpture garden.

When the Art Institute of the Permian Basin formally opens in September it may well be said to be the culmination of an effort begun 27 years ago by seven people, who formed the Art Association of Odessa.

This effort grew to become the Fiesta Del Arte Guild, because, as Doris Breaux said, "Some ladies wanted to put on a little art show. The guild now has a 20-member board of trustees and numbers some 150 volunteers who have been largely responsible for raising the funds to make the Art Institute a reality."

Defendant appeals companies' $2 million judgment

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A $2 million federal judgment awarded Century Pipe & Supply Co. of Midland and Leasing Associates Inc. of Houston is being appealed by the defendant, Wm. K. Stamets Co. of Columbiana, Ohio.

A six-person jury in federal court in Midland had awarded $2 million to Century Pipe and Leasing Associates in a breach-of-contract case. U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton upheld the verdict and entered a $2 million judgment against Stamets.

In another case, parties in a suit involving a mobile-home business entered an agreed judgment of $40,000.

In the Century Pipe-Leasing Associates case against Stamets, the jury had determined that Stamets had breached a contract with Century Pipe and Leasing Associates by failing to make the timely delivery of two pipe-threading machines to Century Pipe in 1982.

Further, while the jury determined that Stamets used "false, misleading or deceptive acts in dealing with Century Pipe," the jurors said that Stamets did not "knowingly" commit those acts.

In its defense, Stamets tried to fault Cleveland Twist Drill Co., which Stamets had contracted to furnish component supplies and raw materials to be incorporated into Century's pipe-threading line. Stamets said Cleveland was "late" in providing the component parts, which were returned to Cleveland, for re-working "over extended time periods."

The original contract had called for delivery of the machinery to Century Pipe by March 31, 1982. Century President Charles W. Gibson had cancelled the contract for delivery of the pipe-threading machines in October 1982. In the meantime, Century had resorted to hiring third parties to thread pipe at a profit loss to Century.

Stamets had encountered problems in satisfying American Petroleum Institute (API) specifications on the pipe.

In its trial brief, Stamets said "substantial progress was made in solving various problems by Stamets in achieving consistent API specification threads on pipe threaded by Century machines."

"...Delivery was never tendered due to nagging problems..." Stamets said.

Stamets said Century had been "constantly advised" of the status of the machines. Further, Century, which "continued to demand performance by Stamets as soon as possible," provided "absolutely no advance notification of the establishment of any deadline for the completion of the machinery or expressed any intent to cancel the contract if the machines were not made available by a date certain."

Gibson cancelled the Stamets contract in October 1982 shortly after he and another Century official, Morgan Howell, had visited the Stamets plant.

"Mr. Gibson...represented that he was satisfied with their (Stamets') progress and would recommend to Century management additional time for performance by Stamets," Stamets had argued.

Additionally, Stamets said that "there is no question" the delay from March 1982 to October 1982 was "due directly and entirely to the failure of Stamets' suppliers to provide suitable component supplies and raw materials to be used on the Century machinery."

Despite Stamets' claims, the jury determined that Cleveland did not breach any expressed or implied warranty owed to Stamets and that Cleveland performed its obligations to Stamets.

Century, which threads and sells pipe and other tubular goods, in 1980 had negotiated with Stamets to purchase two pipe-threading machines and a walking-beam table. But Century concluded that it would be "more advantageous" to lease the threaders than to own them and arranged to lease them from Leasing Associates, which agreed to purchase two Stamets machines, according to court records. Century bought the walking-beam table.

The case involving the financing of a mobile-home business, Longhorn Mobile Homes, was resolved Thursday before the case went to trial.

The agreed judgment was in favor of ITT Commercial Finance Corp. of Memphis, Tenn., formerly ITT Diversified Corp., which had sued Longhorn partners Richard Thacker of Odessa and Dee Phillips of Midland for defaulting on their security agreement by failing to pay ITT for inventory which had been sold.

ITT had financed inventory for Longhorn which, according to court records, is out of business.

DEATHS

New-trial hearing for Lopez to be today

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A hearing on a motion seeking a new trial for 18-year-old Christopher Phillip Lopez, convicted and sentenced to 50 years in prison for the Aug. 4, 1984, killing of a 15-year-old youth, was to be in 70th District Court at 1:30 p.m. today.

Lopez's attorney, John W. Smith of Odessa, Tuesday filed a three-point motion alleging jury misconduct during deliberations and further alleging the court erred in refusing to admit evidence that might have determined the "state of mind" of Lopez at the time of the shooting of Irineo Bersosa Duran Jr.

The motion submitted by Smith included a notarized affidavit from one of three women on the 12-member jury, in which she stated her decision to vote for a verdict of guilty in the trial was based solely on statements by the jury foreman and other jurors concerning information not entered into evidence during the trial.

The juror also stated that during the punishment phase of the trial the jury foreman, contending "he

Miss Martin was a piano and organ teacher and had been a resident of Big Spring since 1969.

She was born Sept. 4, 1904, in Barstow, moved to Midland in 1937 and to Anaheim in 1969. Her husband, Santiago, died in 1960; and a son, Jesse, died in January.

Survivors include a son, Bill Vasquez of Buena Park, Calif.; four daughters, Mrs. Manuel Gonzales, Mrs. M.E. Valdez and Mrs. Joe Abila, all of Midland; and Mrs. Clifford Hughes of Anaheim, Calif.; a sister, Ramona Hernandez of Midland; two brothers, Pat Ramirez of Midland and Lorenzo Ramirez of El Paso; 35 grandchildren and 55 great-grandchildren.

Tom McClure

Services for Tom McClure, 71, of Midland will be at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Dan Hope, pastor of Faith Temple of Lamesa officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

McClure was born Dec. 30, 1913, in Coleman where he was reared. He moved to Midland in 1946 and was employed with Texas Electric Service Co. He retired in 1979 after 32 years with the company.

Survivors include his wife, Alene McClure of Midland; two sons, Donald Edward McClure of Ackerly and Walter Daniel McClure of Midland; two daughters, Ruth Locklar of Little Rock, Ark.; four brothers, Glyn McClure and Hic McClure, both of Coleman, Orin McClure of Plainview and Eugene McClure of Abilene; and three grandchildren.

Pete Rodriguez

Services for Pete Rodriguez of Midland are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

Rodriguez died Thursday at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Midlander killed when hit by pickup

From Staff Reports

A 78-year-old Midland man was killed at 9:11 p.m. Thursday after he was struck in the 1400 block of north Lamesa Road by a pickup which then left the scene.

Pedro Aguirre Rodriguez, 1200 E. Golf Course, was found lying dead on his back next to an eastside curb on north Lamesa Road.

He was pronounced dead at the scene. According to witnesses, Rodriguez was struck by a white-over-yellow half-ton pickup, which proceeded north on Lamesa. The vehicle is further described as having a short fleet-bed, chrome wheels, wide tires and being driven by a Hispanic male.

Midland police are looking for a band of gypsies in connection with the theft Thursday night of an unknown amount of money from the M-System grocery store on South Rankin Highway.

At 9 a.m. today, police had identified some money bags, found at a roadside park on Interstate 20, as those taken during the incident.

According to reports, the method of operation matched that of a similar theft Wednesday in Monahans and others reported in Colorado.

About 15 gypsies went into the store last night and distracted employees. Eleven Texas American Bank bags of money were taken, reports said.

At 10 p.m., police were combing westside bar and motel parking lots for six men and two women believed to be involved who were reportedly driving a brown and a blue Chevrolet and a blue Oldsmobile, all bearing Illinois license plates and equipped with citizen band radios.

Some of the women were described as wearing long dresses, reports said.

In other complaints filed with city police, Paul Simmons of 2209 Holway reported the theft of a $700 air compressor that was stolen from a shed in the alley. According to reports, the burglary took place sometime Saturday.

Edward Niblett, 409 E. Pine, told police his residence was burglarized between 11 p.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. Thursday. Entry was gained by breaking a northside kitchen window.

A microwave oven, color television set and a 35-mm camera valued at a total of $989 were taken, reports said.

Bill Kirk of 4027 Angelina told police his 1978 Oldsmobile Cutlass was burglarized while it was parked in the driveway of his residence between 9 p.m. Wednesday and 7:45 a.m. Thursday. Taken were a handball racket and gear valued at $200, and damage to the dash, where an apparent attempt was made to remove a stereo, was placed at $100.

Midland police are looking for two Hispanic males ages 25-30 in connection with the theft Thursday night of a 1979 Oldsmobile Toronado. According to reports, Steve Lozano, Route 9 Box 9621, said he had parked his car in front of the Stop-Go at 900 S. Big Spring at 11 p.m. He left the keys in the ignition and the motor running, according to reports.

When he returned, the car was gone. A witness said she saw the two men, one dressed in a blue sweater and the other dressed in a white T-shirt with a red bandana, standing outside the store prior to the theft.

A police officer later said he saw the car traveling north on Terrell from Florida, but lost sight of it at the intersection of Pennsylvania and Adam, where it went south on Adam.

A 1982 Harley Davidson motorcycle, reported missing at 6 a.m. today by John Phillip, 2300 N. A St., Apt. 2014, was later recovered at Walnut and Terrell.

According to reports, the motorcycle, valued at $5,000, was stolen while it was parked in the lot of the Courtyard Apartments.

About 3 a.m., an officer saw a Hispanic boy, aged 15-16, dressed in black with a gray and black baseball cap, driving the motorcycle on Terrell at the intersection of Mississippi. According to reports, he followed the cyclist one block to Walnut and Terrell, where the suspect "dumped" the motorcycle and fled on foot.

According to reports, the officer gave chase but lost the suspect when he ran into a low clothesline in an alley in the 900 block of South Minnesota. A baseball cap matching the description of the one worn by the suspect was found on the ground, where it apparently had been knocked off when the suspect ran into a low clothesline.

The suspect is further described as 5 feet 6 or 5 feet 7.

TRIAL

Luckey said he positioned himself in a church parking lot about 200 yards away and watched the residence through binoculars. "Shortly after, he came out into the backyard and two girls came into my view," Luckey said. "As soon as the girls came into view, I advised Sgt. Halle (by radio) to move down. I observed the subject in a red robe run toward the back of the house and saw Sgt. Halle come around the corner and place him on the ground."

"I saw the defendant over by the fence," Halle testified. "He had on a red robe and his back was to me. He was apparently holding the red robe open and he was saying, 'Hey, hey.' I could see his hands holding it open. He would walk from the south to the north where the section of the fence was completely down. He was walking back and forth and at that point I could see he had nothing on."

The defendant then saw Halle, and started running toward the house, the officer said. "He had kind of a blank look on his face and he said, 'Oh, no.' When I said, 'You're under arrest,' he said, 'Please, no.'"

"I told him to get on the ground and handcuffed him," Halle testified. "While I was doing it, he said if I wouldn't arrest him, he'd never do it again."

Halle was reading the defendant his rights when Luckey said he walked up.

"The cost of the study has been estimated at $8,500," said Branson. "A report from Moseley will hopefully be given in a couple of weeks." Bids of $154,000 were also approved by the directors for routine hospital equipment.

Approved were funds for a new laboratory chemical analyzer at a cost of $124,950, new equipment for the radiology/oncology area, videocassette recorders for nursing services and a coagulation instrument for the blood bank at a cost of $18,999.

Three men arrested in theft of oil field equipment

From Staff Reports

Three men were arrested late Thursday night in connection with a burglary in which $24,664 worth of oil field equipment was reportedly stolen.

The arrests came after one suspect fled when a patrol officer with the Midland County Sheriff's Office spotted him leaving the building that was burglarized.

According to reports, the officer was driving southeast on State Highway 158 at 10:48 p.m. about a mile east of Interstate 20, when he saw a 1977 Dodge van back up to the southeast corner of Tubing Anchor & Packer Service. Richard Stratton said he turned his patrol car around and saw a man dressed in dark clothes walk around the east side of the building before he got out of sight.

Stratton said he drove into the parking lot of the building and was getting out of his car when the engine of the van started and the van pulled out of the lot "at a high rate of speed." One of the rear doors of the van came open and Stratton said he saw equipment inside.

The van turned northwest on SH 158 and was pursued by Stratton until it stopped about one-quarter of a mile southeast of Interstate 20. Stratton arrested the 24-year-old man, and after further investigation, obtained the names of two other suspects.

The men, ages 24 and 22, were called to the courthouse where they were arrested for burglary of a building.

Eight casing packers valued at $3,063 each were recovered, according to reports.

Information sought on aggravated robbery

Crime Stoppers this week is seeking information about an aggravated robbery at an Odessa residence Feb. 28.

According to reports, Roy Leverich stepped outside his residence at 4402 San Jacinto, at 5:15 a.m. to unlock the cars he and his wife were going to drive to work.

As he was about to unlock one, he was attacked from behind by two white males. One of the men grabbed him and struck him on the head, while the other man tore his left pants pocket and took about $2,000 in cash.

Leverich yelled to his wife for help and when she came outside, she saw the men hitting her husband, according to reports.

Mrs. Leverich fired four shots at one of the men as he ran toward a pickup parked north of the residence. Reports indicate she thinks she may have hit the pickup once.

The man was described as 5 feet 10, weighing about 160 pounds with light brown, short hair.

Crime Stoppers will pay $1,000 in cash this week to anyone with information that results in the arrest and indictment of the persons responsible for this aggravated robbery.

Cash rewards are paid for information about other felony

Ector County grand jury hands down 42 indictments

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An Ector County grand jury Thursday considered nearly 50 cases presented by the district attorney's office and returned 42 indictments.

Bonds totaling $35,000 were set for two brothers indicted for the fatal shooting Jan. 20 of Nahum Florez.

Florez was shot several times as he fled out the door of a southside Odessa club after being chased around a pool table during an argument.

Bond for 25-year-old Gilberto Rico Marquez, 1511 S. Broughton, was set at $25,000 by 244th District Judge Joe Connally.

A bond of $10,000 was set by Judge Connally for Esteban Rico Marquez, 27, 1300 Bluebonnet.

The brothers remained in the Ector County jail in lieu of bond late Thursday.

Grand jurors indicted 19-year-old Michael David Empson, 1503 N. Lee, on four separate counts, three of burglary of a habitation and one count of aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon. Bonds totaling $45,000 were set for Empson by Connally and Empson remains jailed in lieu of bonds late Thursday.

Bonds totaling $25,000 were set by Connally for 19-year-old Kevin Dean Berry of Alpine on one count of aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon and another count of burglary of a habitation.

Nine of those indicted by the grand jury Thursday had not been arrested at last report.

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell sharply against key currencies in early volatile trading today. There was hectic corporate buying and selling, and gold prices firmed.

Dollar rates seersawed wildly in the first hour of trading. The U.S. currency stabilized as the market settled, but it was still well below Thursday's late levels.

Most dealers blamed today's hectic trading to commercial, particularly corporate, buying and selling. One dealer claimed that East Bloc countries were heavily involved as buyers and sellers.

In Tokyo, where the business day ends as Europe's begins, the dollar closed at 250.70 yen, down from Thursday's 253.30-yen close. Later in London it was quoted at 250.50 yen.

Sterling, regaining strength after plummeting to record lows of near parity with the dollar earlier this month, opened almost two cents higher before easing back to $1.2435. It cost $1.2290 to buy one British pound late Thursday.

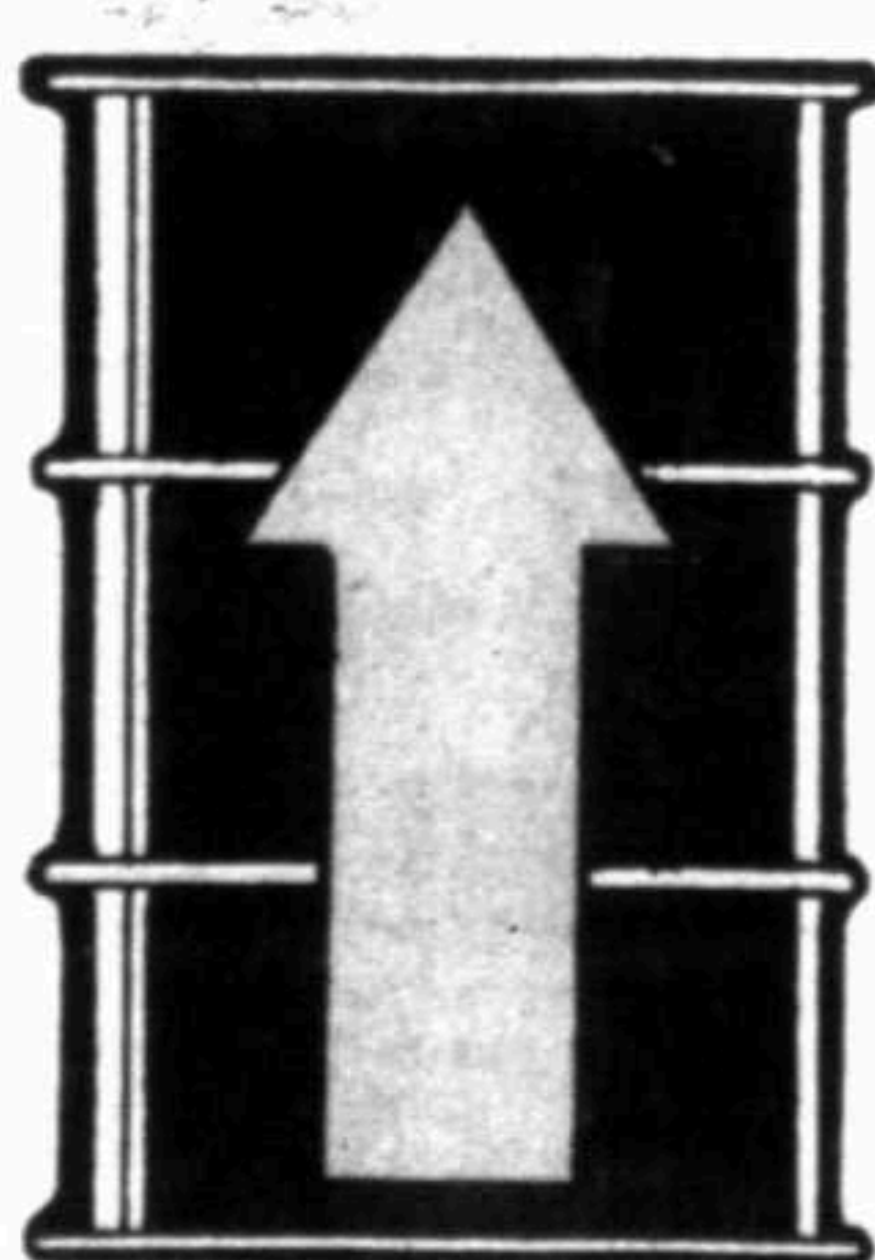

Other morning rates compared to Thursday's late levels:

- 9.37 French francs, down from 9.5545.
- 3.07 German marks, down from 3.1250.
- 2.59625 Swiss francs, down from 2.6525.
- 1,966.00 Italian lire, down from 2,008.00.
- 3.4850 Dutch guilders, down from 3.5340.
- 1.3875 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3715.

Gold opened in London in quiet trading at a bid price of $329.50 an ounce, up from Thursday's close of $326.75. The center's five major bullion houses later "fixed" the recommended morning trading price at $329.80.

In Zurich, the precious metal opened at $330.50 bid, up from Thursday's close of $327.00. But it slipped back in line with the London price and by late morning was trading at $329.50 bid.

Money supply falls $500 million

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's basic money supply fell $500 million in mid-March, the Federal Reserve said Thursday in a report that fueled a bond-market rally.

Bond prices surged and money-market rates tumbled amid a growing sense on Wall Street that interest rates are not likely to rise sharply, and might even fall, over the next few weeks, credit analysts said.

They said one of the factors contributing to that view is that the money supply, which expanded rapidly earlier this year, has leveled off lately.

Traders also were relieved that the Treasury completed its end-of-the-quarter $16.25 billion borrowing operation Thursday with the sale of $4.26 billion in 20-year, one-month bonds, analysts said.

Prices of long-term Treasury bonds shot up 1 1/4 points, or $12.50 for each $1,000 in face value. At the same time, the interest rate on three-month Treasury bills plunged to 8.08 percent from 8.37 percent late Wednesday.

The consensus forecast of Wall Street analysts was for a slight increase in the money supply of $400 million to $500 million in the latest week.

Instead, the basic money supply, known as M1, fell to a seasonally adjusted $570.1 billion in the week ended March 18 from $570.6 billion the previous week, the Federal Reserve said.

M1 represents funds readily available for spending, and includes cash in circulation, checking deposits and non-bank travelers checks.

Credit watchers said several developments, in addition to the pause in money growth, have persuaded investors that the Federal Reserve is not soon likely to tighten credit, thereby lifting interest rates.

There have been mixed signals recently as to the economy's performance, and until the central bank receives further data on the economy's strength, the Fed's "basic strategy is to take a wait-and-see attitude," said Frank Mastrapasqua, chief economist of Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

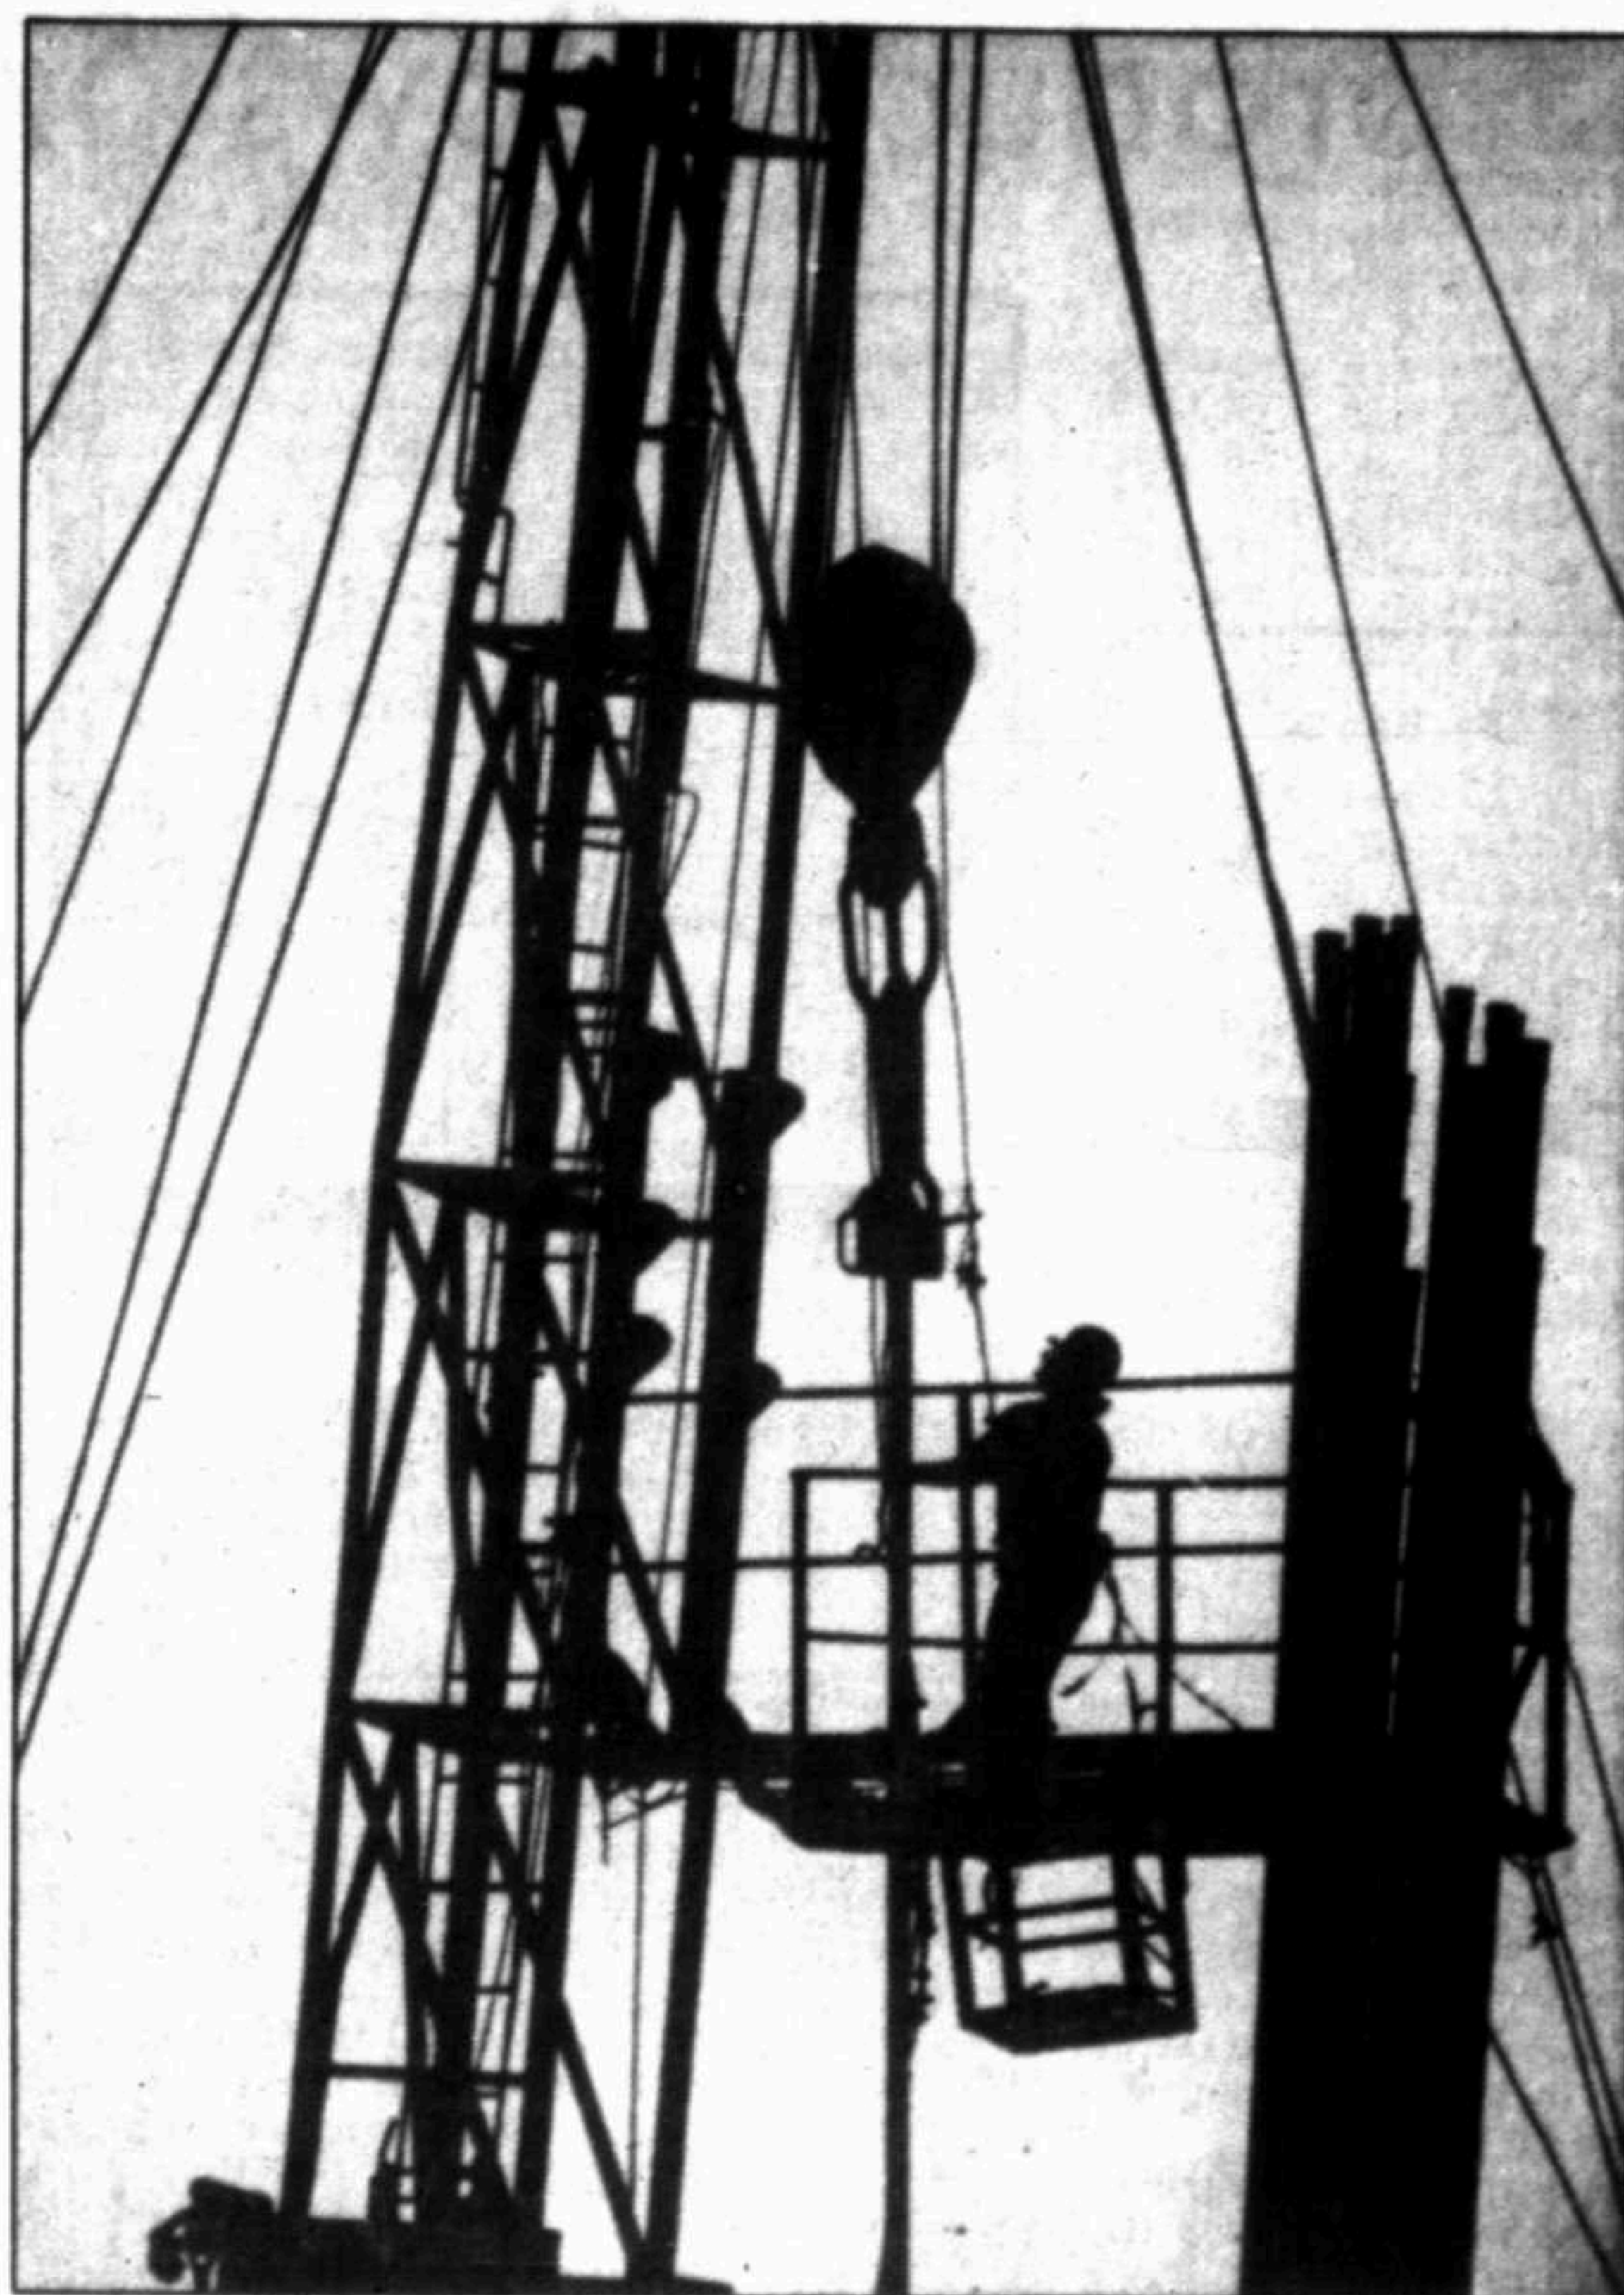

Analysts also said that testimony from Federal Reserve Board member Martha Seger earlier this week appeared to suggest that the Fed is concerned that the economy is becoming too weak and that the Fed's policymaking arm — which met privately Tuesday — did not vote to restrict the availability of credit.

Ms. Seger said nothing specific about the meeting, but said the job of policymakers now was "to prevent a (economic) slowdown from becoming a downturn."

The Fed tries to accommodate moderate yet sustained economic growth, but avoids supplying so much money to the economy that it overheats and raises inflation.

For the latest 13 weeks, the Fed said M1 averaged $566.2 billion, a 10.5 percent seasonally adjusted annual rate of gain from the previous 13 weeks.

The Fed has said it would like to see M1 grow between 4 percent and 7 percent from the fourth quarter of 1984 through the fourth quarter of 1985, a slightly narrower growth range than the 4 percent to 8 percent of the previous year.

Judge approves order for sale of sugar factories

DALLAS (AP) — A federal bankruptcy judge gave the Hunt brothers' Great Western Corp. permission Thursday night to sell half of its sugar refineries and sugar inventories to Tate & Lyle Inc. for $59.8 million in cash.

After hours of hearings, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Robert C. McGuire said the subsidiary of Dallas-based Hunt International can sell six refineries in Nebraska, Wyoming and Montana to help retire its $118.5 million debt.

Great Western, the largest asset of Hunt International Resources Corp., filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. bankruptcy code March 7. Trusts of Dallas billionaires Nelson Bunker Hunt and W. Herbert Hunt own Hunt International.

Four creditors at the hearing objected to the sale, including Golden West Commodities that asked for another week to gather $35 million to buy all of Great Western's 12 refineries.

Proceeds from the sale to New York-based Tate & Lyle, a subsidiary of Tate & Lyle PLC in London, will go to major bank creditors: Bankers Trust Co., First National Bank of Chicago and Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co.

Great Western attorney Charles Gibb told the court that the swift sale of the refineries was necessary to save the values of the assets and prevent damage to the economies of the rural sugar farming areas.

The sugar company paid more than $100,000 a week to maintain the refineries and its inventories.

Tate & Lyle paid $21.5 million for the six refineries, $31.5 million for sugar inventories, $6.5 million for sugar byproducts at the refineries and $750,000 for packaging.

Pickens' group says it may bid for control of Unocal

NEW YORK (AP) — T. Boone Pickens Jr. disclosed Thursday that he is no longer just an investor in Unocal Corp., saying the partnership he heads may attempt to gain control of the international oil company.

Pickens, the chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co. of Amarillo, Texas, also said his group might try to restructure Unocal or force the sale of its assets. He also left open the possibility that the partnership, which owns about 14 percent of Unocal's stock, might take no further action.

Following the broad announcement, Unocal stock rose $1.87 1/4 a share and closed Thursday at $49.50. It was the most active issue on the New York Stock Exchange for the second straight day, with more than 3.4 million shares changing hands.

Barry Lane, a spokesman at Unocal's headquarters in Los Angeles, declined comment.

Earlier this week, however, Unocal Chairman Fred Hartley questioned Pickens' goals and attacked corporate raiders in general.

"We must eliminate the legal fictions, tax code twists, the easy money, and the speculative mania that's making it so simple to destroy productive companies," Hartley told a refiners group Tuesday. "Clearly, the immediate need is for a congressional moratorium on hostile takeovers — a sort of 'cooling off' period while the nation has a chance to realize that this speculative chain letter can't go on forever, and Congress has a chance to make needed changes in the tax code and elsewhere."

If Pickens launched a bid for Unocal, he would once more be setting his sights on a target much larger than Mesa.

In past years, Pickens has made hundreds of millions of dollars through unsuccessful attempts to acquire such industry giants as Cities Service Co., Gulf Corp. and Phillips Petroleum Co. The profit has come from selling Mesa's holdings back to the company at a premium price or being bought out by another suitor.

Unocal, with sales of $11.54 billion and profit of $700.4 million last year, is more than 25 times larger than Mesa. Mesa had sales of $413.5 million and profit of $270.2 million in 1984, with most of that gain reflecting the earnings from an unsuccessful bid for control of Gulf.

Analysts said Pickens' announcement was not a surprise since his Mesa Partners II group already has spent $1.05 billion to buy 23.7 million of Unocal's 173.7 million outstanding shares of stock, or a 13.6 percent stake in the company. Mesa has a 90 percent interest in the investment group.

Mesa Partners II said it would hold talks with potential lenders and investors about raising money to purchase more shares.

In the past, Pickens' had said only that his partnership was buying stock in Unocal for investment purposes.

But on Thursday it said it was reconsidering its strategy. It said it intends to launch a proxy fight against Unocal management in an attempt to postpone the annual shareholders' meeting, which is set for April 29. The group wants the meeting put off two months so that directors and shareholders might evaluate any plan the partnership might submit.

Although the partnership said it had not yet decided on a plan, it said its options included an offer to buy a controlling interest of Unocal and "a proposed restructuring of the company which could include a repurchase of shares of the company, a recapitalization of the company and/or a sale or distribution of assets of the company."

The group also said that if shareholders agreed to adjourn the meeting until June 28, it might put forward its own candidates for the Unocal board.

"The gauntlet has been thrown down now," said Bruce Lader, an oil industry analyst for the securities firm Prescott, Ball & Turben. "It's an open challenge to management."

But Lader said that unlike earlier targets of Pickens, Unocal is a tough opponent with a good record of generating long-term growth and replenishing reserves of oil and natural gas.

Banks admit large cash deposits went unreported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the nation's largest banks, taking a second look at their books for possible money laundering, are telling the federal government they failed to report millions of dollars in large cash deposits.

The flurry of updated reports to the Treasury Department in the past few days is part of the continuing fallout from the First National Bank of Boston's legal problems earlier this year.

Two other Boston banks said earlier this month they had failed to report large cash transactions and three big New York banks joined them this week.

By coming forward with updated reports after in-house examinations, the banks apparently hope to head off the public relations and potential legal problems that would flow from having federal examiners uncover errors.

The Bank of Boston paid a $500,000 fine after pleading guilty to a felony charge of failing to report $1.22 billion in foreign cash transactions. The bank also said it handled cash for reputed organized crime figures without filing the necessary reports.

The Bank Secrecy Act was amended in 1980 to require banks to report cash transfers of more than $10,000 between domestic and foreign banks. Since 1972, it has required reports on cash transactions of more than $10,000 with individuals or companies.

The New York firms that admitted violations of the Bank Secrecy Act this week — Chemical Bank, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and Irving Trust Co. — all specifically denied the errors were linked to money laundering activity.

Chemical, a part of the nation's sixth largest banking company, said it failed to report a total of $25.9 million in 857 cash transactions over the past five years, all but about $2 million involving purchase or sale of foreign currency to supply its New York branches.

Manufacturers Hanover, the nation's fourth largest bank, said it failed to report $140 million in 1,400 transactions — all of it involving foreign banks. It noted that it had filed 120,000 reports during the nearly five-year period its review covered.

Irving Trust said it failed to report 1,659 transactions with 38 foreign banks, totaling $292 million.

Court reinstates 'lemon car law'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The judge who struck down the Texas "lemon law" covering disputes over poorly made new cars that develop expensive flaws has been reversed by a federal appeals court.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals' ruling Thursday gave new life to a law similar to one also adopted by 29 other states to ease the settlement of warranty claims.

Chrysler Corp. in this case challenged the lemon law as unfair because new car dealers would form a majority on commissions set up to resolve disputes, and the interests of dealers conflict with those of a manufacturer.

The three-judge panel said in the ruling:

"We conclude that Chrysler's challenges to the Texas lemon law ought to be directed to the legislature rather than the courts. The statute violates no constitutional rights of automobile manufacturers and is not preempted by federal law."

The Texas Motor Vehicle Commission filed the appeal after U.S. District Judge James R. Nowlin of Austin decided that the lemon law violated the Constitution by denying manufacturers due process.

The name of the law stems from the slang term for a car that rapidly develops serious mechanical problems — a lemon. Passed in 1983, it created a commission, empowered to enforce warranties, for settling complaints by angry owners.

| MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 256 money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORTOR (Holliston, Mass. 01748) increased $385.8 million or 0.1982 percent during the week ended March 28, 1985. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield increased to 8.05 percent from 7.90 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 7.95 percent from 7.86 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity remained the same at 62 days.                                                           |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |
| William E. Donoghue says, "The taxable funds' 7-day average yield exceeded eight percent for the first time since mid-January and has increased 22 basis points (0.22 percent) in the last four weeks. Taxable assets increased $386 million, all of which can be attributed to fund activity. Tax-free assets decreased slightly for the first time in 12 weeks. Tax-free yields have leveled recently. This reflects the normal 2-3 week lag between taxable yields due to the longer maturity of tax-free funds." |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Blalock East producer flows 573 barrels

A field extender and third producer in the Blalock Lake East (Wolfcamp) has been completed to flow 573.4 bopd of 40.2 gravity crude, with 371 Mcfd gas and no water on a flowing tubing pressure of 580 psi. GOR in the field confirmer was 647:1.

DIAMOND SHAMROCK EXPLORATION CO., Midland, drilled its No. 6 Calverley to a TD of 8,014 ft. set 5 1/2 in. casing and completed in perforations from 7,800 to 7,810 ft. with 5,000 gal. acid. Top of the pay was logged at 7,800 ft.

The well is located 2,300 ft. from north and 850 ft. from east lines of Section 24, Block 35, T-3-S, T&P survey, northwest of Garden City.

Atoka, Devonian hit in dual completion

A dual completion in Upton County has yielded Devonian and Atoka discoveries for MAGNATEX PETROLEUM CO., Midland.

The firm completed its No. 1 Batata, 8.5 miles northeast of McCamey to flow 50 bopd of 48.5 gravity and 47 bwpd gas with a GOR of 7,797:1 from the Devonian, and 5.05 Mmcf/d gas CAOF, with a gas-liquid ratio of 5,928:1. Perforations in the Devonian were at 8,786 ft. to 9,112 ft., with Atoka perforations at 8,086 to 8,148 ft.

Location is 860 ft. from north and 1,730 ft. from east lines of Section 23, Block 1, MK&T survey, Abstract 317.

Midland strike flows 108 barrels daily

FELMONT OIL CORP., Midland, has finished a Midland County discovery flowing 108 bopd of 44 API crude, 194 Mcfd gas, and no water on an 8/64 in. choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 700 psi.

The No. 1 Tank Farm was drilled to 12,728, plugged back to 11,390 and completed in perforations from 11,024 to 11,037 ft. with 9,041 gal. acid treatment and a fracture with 73,190 gal. fluid and 61,105 lb. sand.

On a ground elevation of 2,771 ft., formation tops were spotted at 7,680 ft. on the Spraberry; 10,500 ft. on the Strawn; 11,445 ft. to the Mississippi; 11,634 on top of the Devonian; 12,150 ft. to the Fusselman; and 12,667 at the Ellenburger.

Location of the strike is 3,500 ft. from south and 2,400 ft. from west lines of Section 40, Block 38, T-1-S, T&P survey, 3 miles east of Midland.

Reclassification yields gas strike

Another gas strike was reported in Otto North (multipay) field in Schleicher County as HARVARD

PETROLEUM CORP., Midland, reclassified its No. 1 McAshan, a former Strawn oil discovery, to flow 893 Mcfd from perforations at 5,167 to 5,169 ft. with a gas-liquid ratio of 23,725:1 with a gravity of 62.5 API for the condensate.

The well was originally completed in January 85 to flow 37.5 bopd of 66.6 gravity crude and 101 bwpd with a GOR of 22,453:1 through a 14/64 in. choke from the same perforations.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and 467 ft. from west lines of Section 55, Block H, GH&SA survey, 15 miles east of Huddale.

Crockett gas strike flows 4.3 Mmcf/d

An unidentified gas strike in Crockett County was finished to flow 4.3 Mmcf/d CAOF of dry gas from perforations at 2,844-2,863 ft. QUESTA OIL & GAS CO., Tulsa, finished the prolific gas strike with a completion using a 2,000 gal. acid treatment and a fracture using 30,000 gal. and 45,000 lb. sand, after its No. 3 Heibing was drilled to 6,600 ft. and 4.5 in. casing was set to 3,090 ft. with a plug at 2,968.

On a ground elevation of 2,347, tops were picked at the following: Clearfork 1,912 ft.; Spraberry, 3,300 ft.; Wolfcamp, 4,300 ft.; Friend lime, 5,368 ft. and Canyon, 5,652 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and east lines of Section 9, Block MN, GC&SF survey, abstract 2624, 10 miles southwest of Ozona.

Lubbock wildcat pumps 18 barrels

A Lubbock County wildcat which was completed October 17, 1984 has been tested to pump 18 bopd of 26 degree crude, with 1 bwpd. Operator SAM EDWARD CONE, JR., Lubbock, drilled the No. 1 Cone-Williams to a total depth of 9,400 last year and set 5.5 in. casing to that depth in search of deeper targets, but finally tested the well this month, after plugging back to 6,600 ft. and perforating intervals from 6,422-6,428 ft. It is located 660 ft. from south and 600 ft. from east lines of Section 22, Block X, John H. Gibson survey, 4 miles northeast of Idalou.

Prospectors plugged

Three wildcats have come up dry and have been plugged by operators. CARL RUSSELL EXPLORATION INC. has plugged its No. 1 Solomon Finch in Mitchell County, while DYAD ASSOCIATES has plugged its No. 2 Superior in Pecos County. In Glasscock County, KANEB PRODUCTION CO. has plugged its No. 1 Houston Gist.

Aruba hopes sun tan oil replaces crude after refinery's close

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

ORANJESTAD, Aruba — Exxon has shut down its oil refinery on this Caribbean island, and it looks as though Romulo Geerman is finally going to need his goats.

Geerman is president of the Industrial Oil Workers Union of Aruba. A cautious man of 31, he has always kept a herd of goats as an investment against the day when he might wake up without a job.

That day is imminent, not only for Geerman but for his entire union. On the last weekend of January, Exxon turned off for good the spigots at its Lago refinery here. The Lago payroll, about $50 million a year, will dry up as of Sunday, March 31.

For Exxon, the largest U.S. petroleum company, the closing of Lago is the end of an operation that has been gushing red ink. For the 60,000 people of Aruba, one of the six islands that make up the semi-independent Netherlands Antilles, it is the beginning of a calamity.

All at once, the island is losing its largest employer, 40 percent of its tax base and its only major source of income other than tourism and aid. In short, Aruba is faced with the dismal prospect of leaving behind decades of prosperity to suffer a more common Caribbean reality: economic underdevelopment.

ORANJESTAD STILL HAS a prosperous look — fresh paint, late-model cars, well-stocked stores. But it seems ominously impermanent.

"Things are going to get tough here," Geerman said recently in his union office near the refinery. "The only thing that is going to remain for Aruba is tourism."

Geerman and other leaders on the island estimate that the unemployment rate will rise to as high as 40 percent. Geerman, who used to work at the refinery, now receives his salary from the union. When the Lago paychecks stop coming at the end of March, so will his check from the union.

He said he is counting on his goats, a herd of nearly 300, to "make it a little easier for my family" when the hard times come.

Keeping goats, he said, is an old Aruban custom that faded during the island's years of prosperity. His herd is one of the few that still graze the low, scrub-covered hills outside San Nicolas, the company town near the Lago refinery.

"People gave those things up, but I never did," Geerman said. "Sometimes people take everything for granted. They think everything will be good for a lifetime."

It has been nearly a lifetime since the Lago refinery began operating in the late 1920s. When employment was at its peak, in the mid-1950s, about 9,000 people worked at Lago, many of them foreigners.

Gradually, the plant was automated, and most of the foreign workers left. Lago has about 900 Aruban employees today, and, until the refinery shut down, about 1,000 others worked for companies under contract to Exxon.

THE ARUBA CHAMBER OF Commerce estimates that the refinery closing and the "snowball effect" on other businesses will put 8,000 Arubans out of work altogether.

Arubans are mostly Dutch, with a touch of African, Spanish and Portuguese. Besides Dutch, they speak a kind of creole Spanish, called Papiamentu, which contains elements of Dutch, Portuguese and other tongues.

The island is a jagged oblong of about 70 square miles, 15 miles off the coast of Venezuela. It is covered with cactus and brush and gets only about 20 inches of rain a year. Its water supply comes from a desalination plant.

For Exxon, Aruba's main attraction was its proximity to Venezuela's oil. But that is no longer enough. Venezuela's heavy crude, which once could be refined by only a relatively few plants, can now be refined by many.

Venezuela used to sell its heavy crude to Exxon at preferential rates based on the market value of refined products rather than on the world price of crude. But, in 1983, Venezuela cut back the amount that it sent to Lago to 180,000 barrels a day, about half of the refinery's capacity. Then, last October, Venezuela said it could no longer afford to sell any oil to Exxon at preferential prices. As a result, Exxon announced at the end of October that the refinery would be closed.

BILL YOUNG, AN EXXON spokesman in Miami, said the company calculated that its losses in 1985 would be as much as $100 million if operations had continued at the Lago refinery.

"We lost something on the order of $50 million there last year," he said. "We just couldn't find a way to make it economical."

The closing of Lago is part of a larger pattern of trouble for Caribbean island oil refineries. The surviving ones are operating at about 50 percent of capacity, Young said.

Petroleum companies and oil-producing countries are refining increasing amounts of crude at modern plants located close to markets or production fields.

Shell, the British-Dutch petroleum company, says it has lost an average of about $75 million a year for the past three years at its refinery on Curacao, 42 miles east of Aruba, is the largest island in the Netherlands Antilles.

Shell has hinted strongly that it will close the refinery unless the Curacao government buys a three-quarters interest in it and Venezuela increases the plant's supply of crude. Curacao, which is more developed than Aruba, is less dependent on the Shell refinery than Aruba has been on Lago.

Milton Henriquez, Aruba's finance commissioner, said the closing of Lago will cost the island's local government about 40 percent of its tax revenue. Even with heavy reductions in payroll and public services, he said, the government will have a deficit of at least $20 million in 1985.

"We shall, of course, knock on the door of Mother Holland to help us with special aid in view of the crisis," he said. The Netherlands is already giving about $70 million a year in aid to the Netherlands Antilles, mostly for public works such as roads and ports.

UNDER THE DUTCH constitution, the Netherlands Antilles are self-governing within the kingdom of the Netherlands, which has responsibility for the islands' foreign policy and defense.

Workers evacuate burning rig

HOUSTON (AP) — An oil rig off the coast of Indonesia caught fire after a blowout and explosion, but all the workers aboard were evacuated safely, the owners of the drilling platform said.

The Zapata Enterprise caught fire about 15 miles offshore, or about 250 miles south-southeast of Jakarta in the Java Sea, said Barney White, spokesman for the Houston-based Zapata Corp., which owns the rig.

The rig, which has been in service since 1980, usually has between 55 and 60 workers aboard, White said.

"We have accounted for all hands," he said. "There were no injuries and no deaths at this point."

In Jakarta, Martin Nyoo, local commander of the Ministry of Communication's Sea and Coast Guard Command, confirmed that there were no casualties. The crew had been evacuated to the east Java capital of Surabaya, he said.

The rig was working an old well for a Korean firm when the accident occurred about 2 a.m. (2 p.m. CST Tuesday), he said.

"Our details are a little sketchy because of communications difficulties in that part of the world," White said. "There was a blowout and explosion on the Enterprise and we subsequently abandoned the rig."

The fire was still burning 24 hours later while Zapata officials tried to get firefighting crews to "a pretty remote part of Indonesia," White said.

The blaze was "burning out of the (well) hole but it's not too dramatic," he said.

It is standard procedure that if the fire cannot be brought under control quickly, the rig is abandoned, White said.

Most of the crew left the rig in two lifeboats while the last five slid down a rope and were picked up by a service boat nearby, he said.

Entex reports year-end revenues

HOUSTON (SWN) — Entex Petroleum, Inc., general partner of Entex Energy Development, Ltd. today announced that EED's net income for the period from its inception on August 21, 1984 through year-end was $851,000 or $1.11 per unit. Revenues during this 133-day period were $9,974,000.

EED also announced the federal

BANKS

In the wake of the Bank of Boston disclosure, which set off a round of congressional hearings, the American Bankers Association recommended that all its members — virtually every major bank in the nation — review their procedures for complying with the federal law that every cash transaction exceeding $10,000 be reported to the government.

Treasury Department officials have declined to say how many amended reports they have received, and Dan Buser, a spokesman for the ABA, said the banking association is not accumulating data on which banks are filing updated reports.

Buser said the trade group took a "major policy position" not to be involved in any individual member's dealing with federal enforcement agencies after a flap over news reports that the association had inquired about immunity for several banks interested in coming forward voluntarily with amended reports.

ABA officials denied the association sought immunity on behalf of any bank, but did seek guidance from a Treasury official on the procedure for reporting past omissions.

Buser said the ABA decided it "should act as a messenger" to make sure its members understand reporting requirements and, to that end, has "urged all members to look at their systems."

He would not speculate on how many banks might eventually report past violations, but said those that have come forward recently have done so "in the spirit of saying, 'We want to comply with the law, we think we are, we thought we were.'"

Treasury officials have said no decisions have been made on how to deal with the banks that have filed updated reports.

John M. Walker, the assistant Treasury secretary in charge of enforcement and operations, made clear in earlier testimony to Congress that there would be no blanket immunity just because a bank came forward voluntarily to report previous violations. He said each would be handled on a case-by-case basis.

Bank admits it did not report $110 million

BOSTON (AP) — Instead of closing the books on its highly publicized problems, the Bank of Boston surprised stockholders at its annual meeting by saying it had failed to report another $110 million in currency transactions.

The disclosure Thursday to 350 of the bank's 15,000 shareholders is in addition to $1.2 billion in unreported cash transactions the bank admitted in February, when it was fined $500,000.

February's disclosure led the bank to admit it had exempted reputed organized crime figures from government reporting requirements involving cash transactions of $10,000 or more. The regulation is aimed at tracing money from drugs or other illicit activities.

On Wednesday, bank chairman William L. Brown said he was certain the $110 million in unreported cash had nothing to do with drug-money laundering, adding that the reason for the failure was still under investigation.

The bank, the country's 16th-largest with $22 billion in assets, told the government about the unreported money on Wednesday, said Brown.

Patrick Walsh, the federal attorney who has handled the Bank of Boston case, said the government will levy another fine if it learns the bank intentionally did not report the transactions.

"It really depends on where the investigation goes," Walsh said. "If it was just a systems error, there will be no other criminal charges."

At a news conference after the shareholders meeting, Brown said, "We made a mistake. We should have reported."

Brown said he knew little about the $110 million, except that bank auditors discovered it while they were checking into federal law compliance at all bank branches and subsidiaries.

Bank officials said the unreported money represents 1,200 transactions conducted between 1980 and 1984, and said 800 of the transactions, about $20 million worth, were between Canadian banks and the Casco Northern Bank in Maine, a subsidiary purchased in 1984.

Most of the shareholders appeared unruffled by the announcement.

"The Bank of Boston's reputation for excellence ... is second to none," said Leo Nocera, who owns 4,180 shares. "I am proud to say I am a shareholder of the Bank of Boston."

Expert says graduates entering improved job market

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) —

This year's college graduates will find an improved job market, but the members of the Class of '85 are looking for more than a big pay check, says the director of the nation's largest university placement service.

Jack Shingleton, director of placement services at Michigan State University, said the job market is the best in several years. He said 1983 was the worst year since World War II, 1984 was improved and 1985 will be much brighter.

"The recession of 1983 left its mark on this class and the students became extremely job conscious," Shingleton said Wednesday.

But, he said, "Quality of life is very important to this class."

The class is "dedicated to the work ethic and willing to pay the price of success," he said. "They are not going for the highest paying job. They are seeking a quality of life factor."

He said students are seeking advancement opportunities in an employer, followed by "the culture of the company" — factors that contribute to the employees' lifestyle.

"They also indicate that the requirement to travel is of little or no consequence to their accepting a job," he said. "Mobility is becoming more and more acceptable."

More than 3,600 employers are sending recruiters to Michigan State this year, the highest number ever and a 15 percent jump over last year. The greatest demand still is in technical fields, and those students are commanding the highest starting salaries, Shingleton said.

Leading the field are computer science graduates, followed by electrical engineers, mechanical engineers and business graduates.

The job market for teachers also has improved considerably and should continue to get better, Shingleton said.

"While we still have a few more teachers than jobs nationally, the situation is changing and there are some jobs now, particularly for teachers of special education, mathematics, science, business and industrial arts," he said.

Shingleton said the most attractive job-seeking areas still are in the South and West.

Pan Am cutting fares

NEW YORK (AP) — Pan American World Airways, having resolved a strike by its ground workers, slashed its transcontinental and New York-to-Miami fares on Thursday.

Several rival carriers on those routes said they would match, or nearly match, Pan Am's new unrestricted fares, which are effective immediately.

Separately, Pan Am said that by Monday it will have restored full service to all of its destinations in Europe, the Pacific, Central and South America and the Caribbean.

Pan Am said its new fares would apply to travel completed by June 1.

The new unrestricted one-way fare between New York and Miami is $99 Monday through Thursday, and $109 Friday through Sunday, Pan Am said. The fare had been $129 midweek and $139 on weekends.

However, Pan Am also said there would be "blackout" periods for travel southbound between New York and Miami on April 3-6, and northbound from Miami to New York on April 13-15.

The airline's one-way fare between New York and Los Angeles, or Miami to Los Angeles, is $129 Monday through Thursday, and $159 Friday through Sunday. The fares also will apply to New York-to-San Francisco travel when that service resumes Monday, Pan Am said.

Previously, Pan Am offered $258 roundtrip transcontinental fares, but they required a 30-day advance purchase.

Pan Am's pricing action had been anticipated; the airline was expected to cut fares once the strike was over in order to rebuild domestic passenger traffic. After the ground workers struck Pan Am on Feb. 28, the airline shut down its domestic operations and concentrated on overseas flights.

Pan Am also signaled that it wants to strengthen its ties to travel agents, saying its new fares applied only to customers that makes their reservations and buy their tickets from travel agents.

In Miami, Eastern Airlines spokesman Mark Wegel said Eastern would match Pan Am's new transcontinental and New York-to-Miami fares.

United Airlines and American Airlines said they would come close to matching Pan Am's transcontinental fares. They said they would offer $129 one-way fares Monday through Thursday and $169 fares Friday through Monday, beginning April 7. But the airlines said the tickets would be subject to three-day advance purchase.

People Express Airlines, which competes with Pan Am on both the transcontinental and New York-to-Miami routes, already offers competitive fares and said it plans no changes.

Members of the ground workers' union, the Transport Workers Union, ratified a new three-year contract with Pan Am on Wednesday.

Testimony concludes in Winans case

NEW YORK (AP) — Courtroom activity in the trial of former Wall Street Journal reporter R. Foster Winans has come to a halt while lawyers for both sides polish their final arguments and submit them on paper to the judge.

Testimony ended Thursday when lawyers for Winans' co-defendants, his roommate David Carpenter and former stockbroker Kenneth P. Fells, decided not to put their clients on the witness stand.

The government then called Patricia Malloy, a personnel officer for the Journal's parent company, as its only rebuttal witness. She testified Winans should have received a copy of the company's conflict-of-interest policy when he joined the Journal in 1981.

U.S. District Judge Charles E. Stewart Jr., who heard the case without a jury, gave lawyers for the two sides until April 22 to file their final arguments in writing. If further oral argument is required, he said, it will take place during the week of May 6. He would then render a verdict.

The case has attracted widespread attention among financial professionals and journalists because of the questions it raises about the ethical and legal obligations of both.

Winans was one of two writers assigned to the Journal's "Heard on the Street" column, a widely followed daily feature which offers stock tips to investors. Wall Street analysts often credit the column with producing sharp, though usually temporary, movements in the price of securities it covers.

The premise of the government's 59-count indictment is that the newspaper itself was the victim of fraud. By misusing Winans' access to confidential knowledge of what was about to be published, the prosecution maintains, the defendants breached a Journal policy aimed at protecting the newspaper's reputation. The policy states reporters cannot trade or hold an interest in the stocks they write about.

The prosecution and a related civil suit by the Securities and Exchange Commission are based on federal "insider trading" laws, which seek to prevent investors who have access to confidential information about a company's stock from taking advantage of investors without access to that information.

But in this case, the information about the stocks in question — the information included in Winans' articles — was all publicly available. The "inside" information in this case was the knowledge the Journal was about to publish a particular story, an area not usually covered in such cases.

The defense contends while Winans may have acted unethically and deserved to lose his job, he did nothing illegal. Further, lawyers for Carpenter and Fells maintain their clients had only a peripheral role in a scheme essentially between Winans and the government's chief witness, former stockbroker Peter N. Brant, who has already pleaded guilty.

According to the government, starting in early 1983 Winans began buying stocks which were shortly to be the subject of favorable reports. Allegedly hampered by a shortage of capital, he then made a deal in October 1983 with Brant, then a prominent broker at Kidder, Peabody & Co.

The defense conceded Winans agreed to tip Brant about the contents of forthcoming columns in return for a share of the profits Brant would make by trading on the information. Brant then allegedly shared the information with Fells, his close associate.

They allegedly paid Winans $30,000 in checks which were made out to Carpenter and deposited in the joint account the roommates shared, plus another $1,000 worth of British currency.

The first software that's truly compatible with the ultimate personal computer.

Every software ad you read seems to be talking about 'integrated software'. But it was 1-2-3™ from Lotus® that actually gave the phrase real meaning, because we combined spreadsheet, information management and graphic functions in one simple, powerful program.

A program that is faster and easier to use than any other software available today.

In short, the tasks it can perform are really impressive, but why it can perform them is even more important.

Because we feel the real criterion for any management tool is its ability to let the human mind flourish and accomplish more than it ever has before.

That's why with 1-2-3 the thought process is not interrupted, so your mind no longer has to wait for your hands. To the novice, it makes everything plausible. To the expert, it makes anything possible.

The result: Business decisions come faster and easier.

1-2-3 from Lotus is truly compatible with the most important personal computer of all—the human mind.

'Biloxi Blues' has warmth true to Neil Simon's style

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK — It's been two years since Broadway theatergoers first met a gawky 14-year-old named Eugene Morris Jerome whose primary interests were writing, baseball and girls — not necessarily in that order.

Eugene was the narrator and focal point of Neil Simon's autobiographical "Brighton Beach Memoirs," a warm-hearted tribute to a lower middle-class Jewish family enduring the Depression in Brooklyn in 1937.

In his new play, "Biloxi Blues," Simon has moved Eugene forward to 1943 and into an Army basic training camp in Biloxi, Miss. Eugene still has a passion for writing and females, but baseball has been replaced by his desire "not to get killed."

Geographically, "Biloxi Blues," which opened Thursday at Broadway's Neil Simon Theater, is a world away from "Brighton Beach Memoirs," but the humor, warmth and astute perceptions of human nature permeating that first play are present here too. It's a winner.

Simon, who was a writer on the old "Sgt. Bilko" television series, has a genuine affection for Army life. He surrounds his hero with a lively collection of raw recruits. There's Wykowski, the bigoted bully; Carney who fancies himself a big band crooner; Selridge, a hot-tempered lunkhead; Henesey, hiding a secret that will be his downfall, and most importantly, Epstein, an unathletic Jewish intellectual.

AP Laserphoto

Clowning around at an opening-night party for "Biloxi Blues" are Sally Struthers and Rita Moreno, stars of Broadway's female "Odd Couple."

The raunchy Army humor is uproarious, especially in the play's opening scene as the new soldiers travel by train to Mississippi. After arriving, the recruits are confronted by a bulldog of a sergeant who puts each of them in their place. The only one he can't completely control is Epstein.

Simon crams an enormous amount of material into this coming of age play.

Artist Marc Chagall dies at his French home

By MARILYN AUGUST
Associated Press Writer

ST. PAUL DE VENCE, France (AP) — Artist Marc Chagall, "the last of the 20th century giants" whose rainbow colors brought life to his dreams, childhood memories and mysticism, died at his home on the French Riviera. He was 97.

"He died naturally as a man worn out. He certainly had been tired for some months, but he was not suffering from any illness," said Jean-

Chagall

Louis Prat, a friend.

Chagall's wife, Valentine Brodsky, said he collapsed late Thursday and died almost immediately.

Prat, director of the Maeght Foundation art center in St. Paul de Vence, said he visited Chagall three days before his death and found him "working in his studio, following his regular habit. He had stopped painting several months ago, but he continued to work on drawings and also watercolors."

Chagall was the son of a Russian shopkeeper, born in the village of Vitebsk in 1887. He worked in oils, watercolors, etching and stained glass, as well as costume design, stage sets, book illustrations and church windows.

His images of entranced people, animals, and Jewish and Christian symbols floating through space in defiance of both gravity and perspective never fit into any formal art movement.

They were painted in bright reds, greens and blues that made his contemporary, Pablo Picasso, describe him as "the last painter left who understands what color really is."

Chagall once said: "I want to introduce into my pictures a psychic shock...a fourth dimension. Therefore, let people cease talking about fairy tales, of the fantastic, of Chagall the flying painter, when they speak of me."

About the reason for his success, he said: "You have to be simply honest and filled with love. When you have love, all the other qualities come by themselves."

Among his most praised works were "The Rabbi of Vitebsk," the sets of the Stravinsky ballet "The Firebird," two huge murals for the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, 12 stained-glass windows in Hadassah Medical Center's synagogue in Jerusalem, and illustrations of the Fables of La Fontaine.

The Philadelphia Museum of Art will open an exhibit in May of what it calls the first major U.S. retrospective of Chagall's works.

The curator of New York's Museum of Modern Art, William Rubin, called Chagall "really the last of the 20th century giants" that included Picasso and Matisse.

However, he said Chagall's most important work was decades behind him, and that "he hasn't really been an issue in the art world since the first World War."

Mexican Cultural Center museum with different focus

By CAM ROSSIE

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — A 12-year-old boy pumps a stationary bicycle and watches the electricity he produces light multi-colored lamps.

Teen-agers clap their hands and shout at a tree decorated with Christmas lights, laughing as their sound waves illuminate the tiny bulbs. A 5 year old swings a "Star Wars" type laser-wand and giggles as it glows an iridescent green.

In another room, an elderly woman guesses at familiar scents that waft from atomizers while a young couple, using note charts, creates a melody by pressing a selection of black buttons.

This is the Alfa Cultural Center, "a museum with a different focus," says director Guillermo Schmidhuber de la Mora.

Unlike somber, silent traditional museums, the Alfa center urges visitors to touch, listen, smell as well as see. To exercise their fifth sense, taste, guests can visit the museum cafeteria.

A Latin American pioneer in the

ENTERTAINMENT

"participative museum" concept, the center aims to bring culture to the masses by uniting art and science in a manner less educated people can understand, Schmidhuber said.

"Most museums are intended for very cultured people. Uneducated people are afraid to go," he said in an interview. "This museum shows that culture is a part of us and that everyone can enjoy and understand it."

Some salons resemble huge playrooms with brightly carpeted walls, tunnels and large seating blocks. In one narrow passageway, opaque floor tiles light to red, yellow and blue as visitors pass through.

Under the cosmic glow of ultraviolet lights in the astronomy salon, visitors learn about planets, constellations and the galaxies.

Located in one of the most picturesque neighborhoods in this northern industrial city with the Sierra Madre mountains as backdrop, the five-story center is a magnificent gleaming cylinder planted in the earth at a precarious angle.

Designed by Monterrey architect Fernando Garza Trevino, it is considered one of the most beautiful buildings of modern Mexico.

About 400,000 people visited the center last year — the majority from Monterrey's poor and middle classes — making it the fourth most visited museum in the country and the most popular museum outside Mexico City, Schmidhuber said.

The 65,000-square-foot center also offers a so-called "Omnimax" theater and planetarium. In the 300-seat auditorium, guests viewing specially made movies on a giant convex screen get a sensation of flying over the scenery. For special functions such as concerts or theatrical presentations, the screen becomes a night sky with 11,000 glittering stars.

Buddhist monastery offers touch of Tibet on Staten Island

By RICK HAMPSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Klauber, who had never been to Asia, decided to build a replica of a Tibetan Buddhist monastery to house her Tibetan art collection. She knew the kind of site she wanted: hilly, isolated, tranquil.

She found it 13 miles from Wall Street — on Staten Island.

"She wanted to create a totally self-contained Tibetan environment here on Lighthouse Hill," said Rod Preiss, assistant director of the museum Mrs. Klauber founded. "If she had her way, she probably would have had yaks meeting people at the bottom of the hill."

Yaks or no yaks, the Jacques Marchais Center for Tibetan Art remains the only museum in the Western Hemisphere devoted to Tibetan art.

Mrs. Klauber, who used the professional name Jacques Marchais, "was planning to go to Tibet herself, but she wanted to establish this museum first," Preiss said. "Then, no door would have been barred to her" in a nation closed to most Westerners.

However, she died suddenly in 1948 at age 56 — six months after her museum was finished.

Today, the museum is the Buddhist equivalent of The Cloisters in Fort Tryon Park, a museum that allows the visitor to appreciate art by stepping into a setting which evokes the work's own time and place.

The center's buildings, terrace and garden sit on the side of a steep hill, isolated from the rest of its residential neighborhood by stone walls, the incline and thick foliage. The complex offers a view, framed by pines, of lower New York Harbor.

Mrs. Klauber endowed her monastery with everything Tibetan — from orange trees to dogs, including a huge Mastiff and a tiny Lhasa Apso. The grounds contain statues of Buddha, as well as figures of elephants, carp and baboons. There is a lotus pond and several monastic meditation cells.

"She used to have parties for Asian visitors up here for days," Preiss said. "It was all very exotic for its time, especially for Staten Island. Most people thought she was eccentric."

Mrs. Klauber's choice of Staten Island was not eccentric. In the 1940s the island was largely undeveloped, and Lighthouse Hill is one of the highest points on the Eastern seaboard.

The museum's centerpiece is its replica of a Buddhist temple, or gompa, a square stone building supported by four interior columns that symbolize the four directions.

Inside, light streams down from a cupola in the 20-foot ceiling. One wall steps back to form a four-tiered altar for displaying numerous sacred objects.

Irene Worth returns to London stage plays

By MATT WOLF

LONDON (AP) — For Irene Worth, it's been a triumphant homecoming.

The 68-year-old performer, long regarded as one of the best classical actresses on the American stage, has returned to London where she lived for 31 years in order to play the formidable Roman matriarch Volumnia in a new National Theater production of Shakespeare's "Coriolanus."

"It's the role of a lifetime for an actress who's done so much Shakespeare," she said in an interview at her elegant rented apartment located behind Harrod's, the department store. "It's something I felt I couldn't not have in my repertoire."

The critics have hailed her performance.

Michael Coveney in The Financial Times said Miss Worth "returns to the London stage in fine fettle, fine voice, fine presence."

Michael Ratcliffe in The Observer wrote: "It is great to have Irene Worth back on the London stage — she has been away far too long."

Miss Worth, who was born in Nebraska, initially came to London in 1944 to become a classical actress. She went to the United States in 1975 for a production of Tennessee Williams' "Sweet Bird of Youth," which earned her a Tony Award.

The Shakespearean repertoire of the actress is extensive. For the Old Vic Theater in the 1950s, she appeared as Lady Macbeth, Desdemona in "Othello," Helena in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and Portia in "The Merchant of Venice."

At the 1953 inaugural season of Canada's Shakespeare Memorial Theater in Stratford, Ontario, she appeared in "All's Well That Ends Well" and "Richard III," returning to England to play Goneril in "King Lear" and Gertrude in "Hamlet."

"When you're young and you have the chance to play three great leading roles in one season, it's tiring and it's thrilling," she said. "One's very greedy then, and thinks, 'Oh, how marvelous. I can play this, and I can play that.'"

Miss Worth laments the absence of a government subsidized theater in the United States, however, she thinks the training of actors should take priority. "You've got to build your actors," she said. "Everything else will take care of itself."

Miss Worth said that most American performers are better off developing their natural skills rather than trying to affect a style of speaking Shakespearean verse that may be alien to them.

"Don't think that just because you're in America seeing Shakespeare that American actors aren't going to create a repertoire of their own with the plays that are their own," she said.

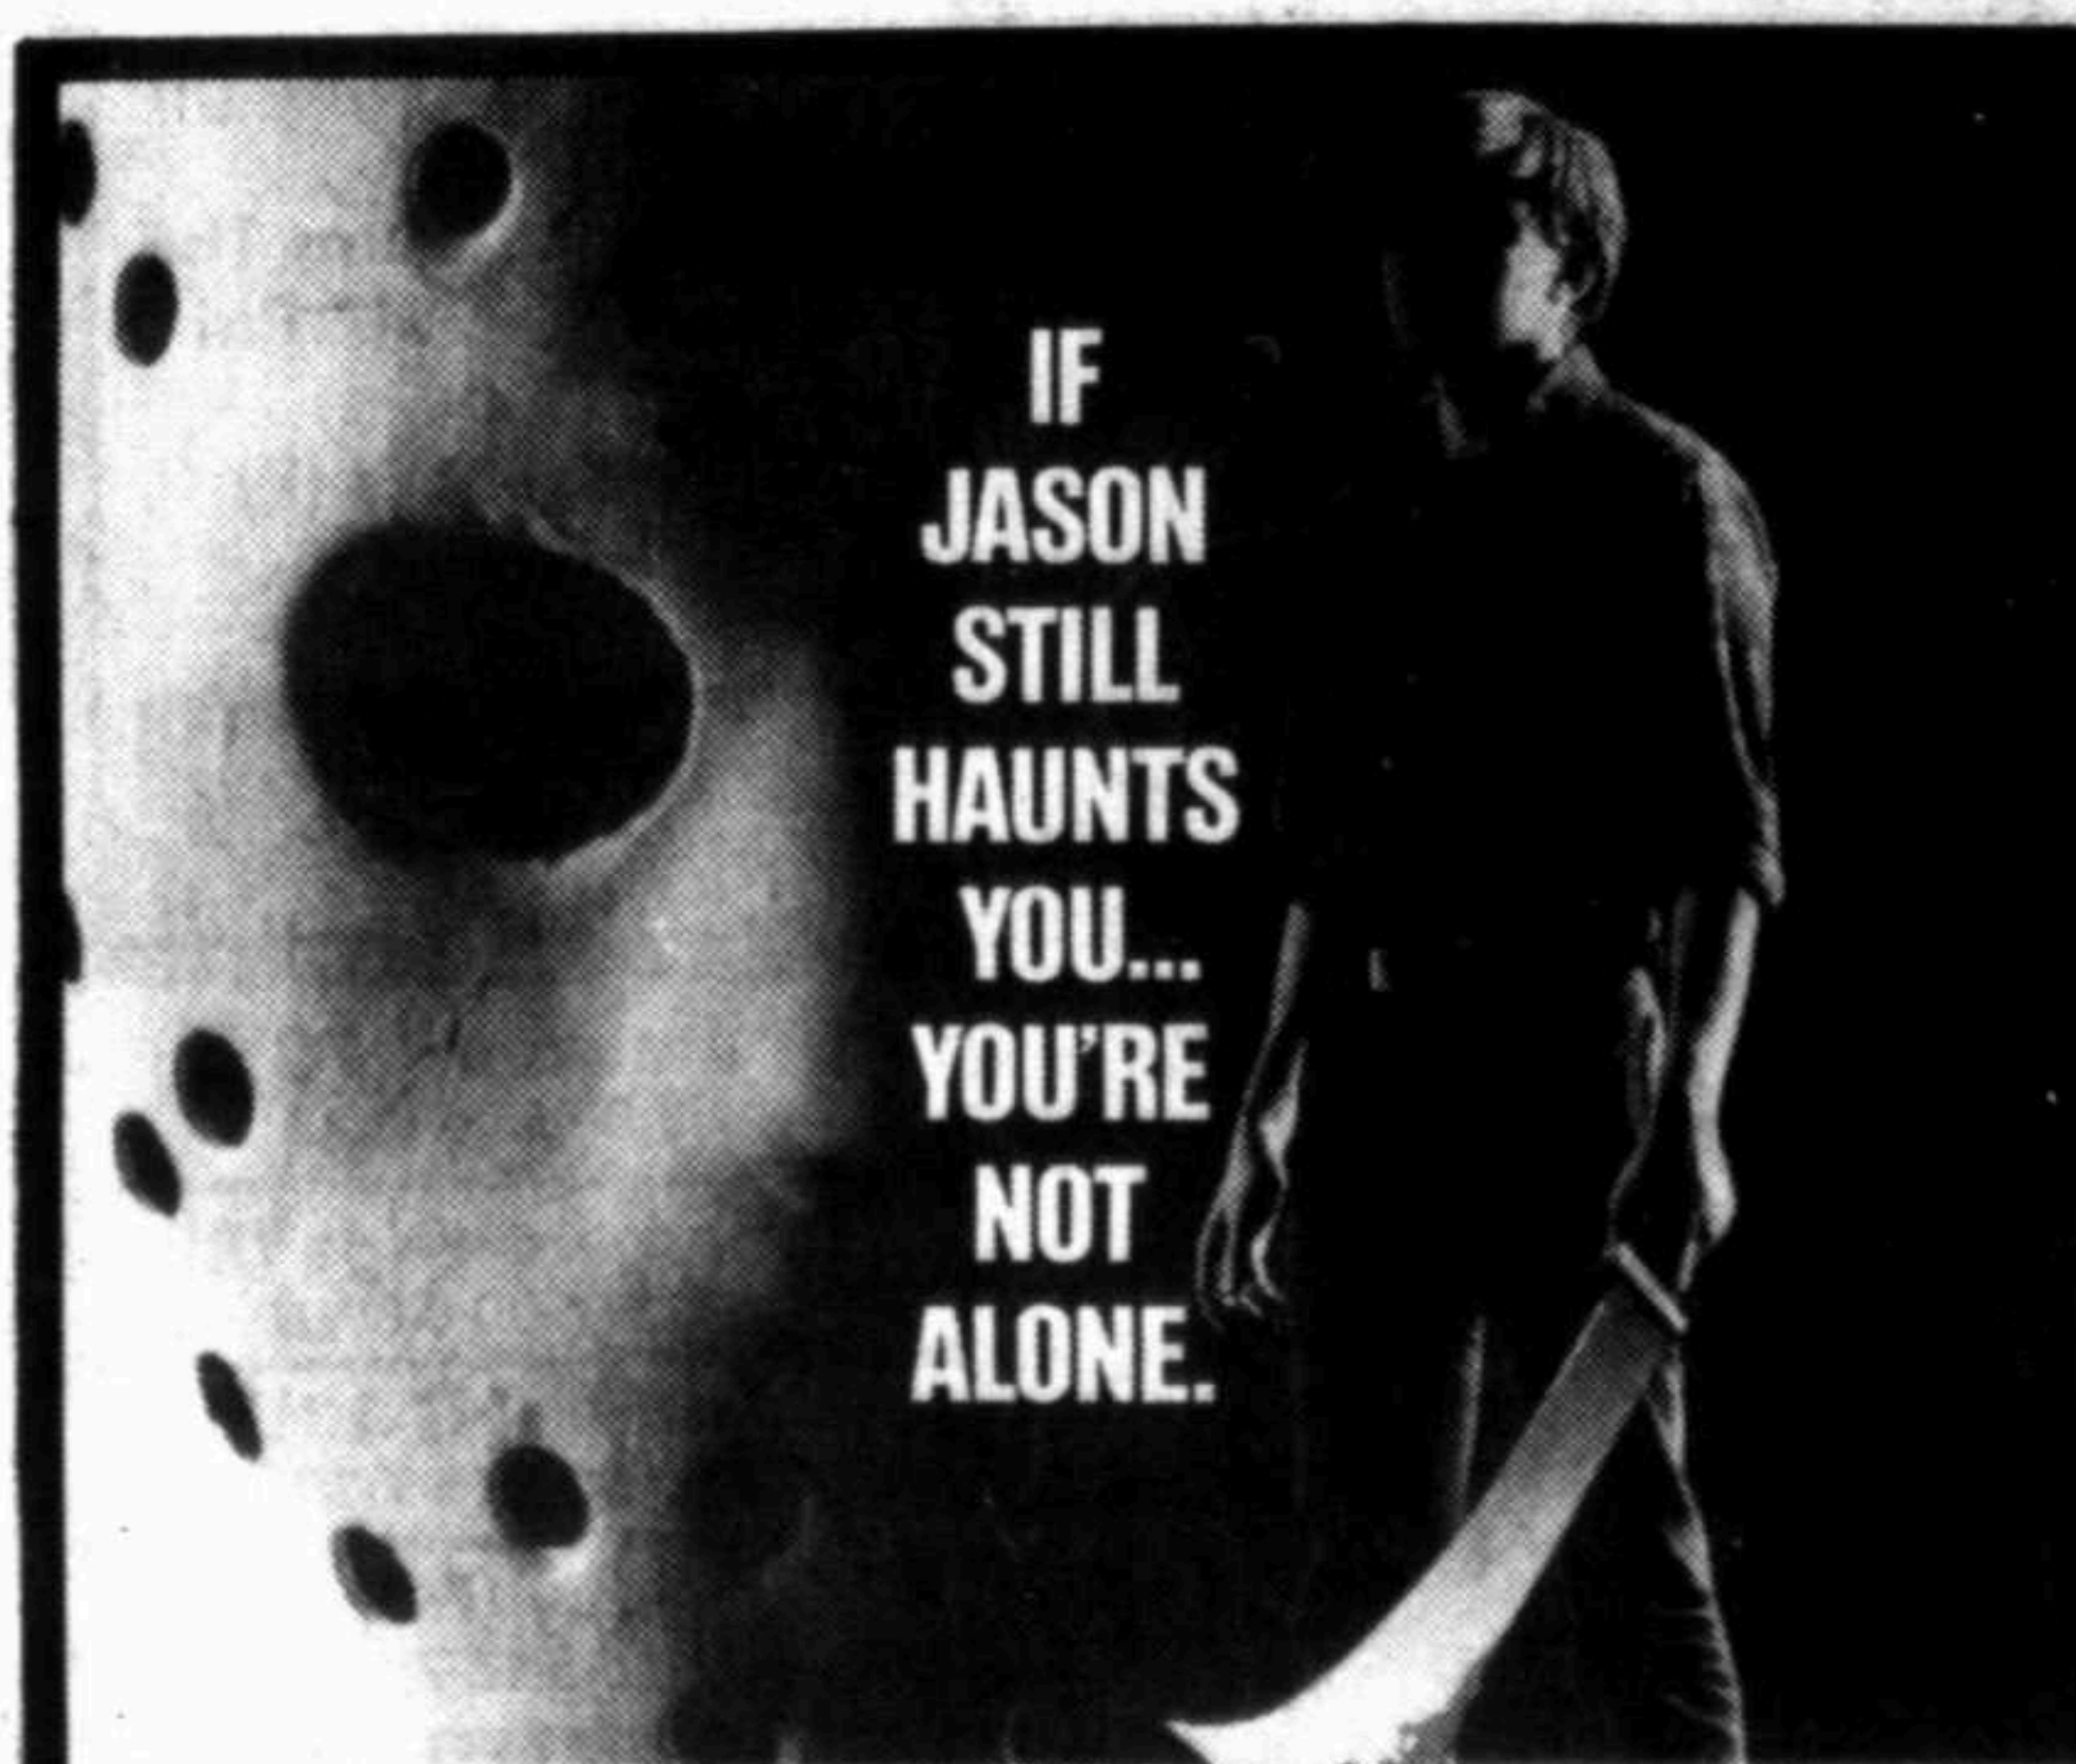

She cited Christopher Walken, her co-star in "Sweet Bird of Youth," as an American actor who "would be top of the pops in repertoire at the moment if he had been born in England."

But Miss Worth stressed that American performers "must find a way to make their own Shakespeare — one which isn't a kind of rebuttal to English acting."

"I feel so much Shakespeare is a kind of 'look here — we can do it, too,' and I think that lessens the real energy of an American actor," she said. "So many times the boys who play Hamlet hear and read the violence in the lines but don't understand that the violence has to be contained within the behavior of the period."

"There's no point in playing Hamlet as if you had just come off the streets in 1985."

Miss Worth will return to New York when her stint is concluded this summer.

Beverly Sills on familiar ground for PBS' fund-raising finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Beverly Sills remembers sitting in the balcony of the Brooklyn Academy of Music, stifling even in winter, eating corned beef sandwiches and sipping iced tea.

"I knew someday I would sing down there, on that stage," Miss Sills says in her introduction to "Gala of Stars 1985," which will be broadcast on public television Sunday night. "And I did, just once, a performance of 'Fledermaus'."

Miss Sills, the retired New York City Opera soprano who is now general director of the company, is back as hostess of "Gala," the biggest single production in the annual spring drive to raise money for Public Broadcasting Service stations.

The two-week Festival '85, which ends with the "Gala of Stars" broadcast, had raised $11 million in viewer subscriptions through the first five days of the campaign, an increase of nearly 30 percent over the same period a year ago.

Though the format for the "Gala of Stars" has remained much the same over the years, the talent — with the exception of Miss Sills and James Levine, conductor of the Metropolitan Opera orchestra — has changed with each program, though some performers have appeared more than once.

The lineup of performers includes opera singers Grace Bumbry, Placido Domingo, Kiri Te Kanawa and Robert Merrill, dancers Merrill Ashley and Sean Lavery from the New York City Ballet, pianists Lukas Foss and Leonard Pennario, and jazz vocalist Cleo Laine and her husband, composer-performer John Dank-worth.

Japan rediscovers George Wallington

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

Jazz pianist George Wallington, now 60, has been rediscovered and put back in business — by the Japanese.

He was part of the first-ever bebop band, composed, ducked interviews, was praised by critics, quit to join a family business when rock 'n' roll came in, and retired from New York to Southwest Florida in 1979.

"I've been composing all the time," he disclosed while in New York to cut a record. "I've written about 30 compositions in the past three years. I may get up from watching TV, and a melody is there. I sit at the piano and it comes out. Something was coming over me; I could feel it. I already had half of them written before all this happened."

"What happened was that Japanese record companies were becoming successful in the jazz business. 'I didn't know I had quite a following in Japan. They'd been looking for me and didn't know where I was. They called me a mystery man.'"

Then Yasui Nakayama, editor of Swing Journal, located Wallington and arrived from Tokyo with a photographer for interviews and pictures.

"He said I was very popular," Wallington recalls. "All my albums were rereleased there. He said Nippon Columbia would like a solo album by me. We sent them a tape. It was released there September 1984."

Throughout his career, Wallington played with combos. He only had recorded two tunes solo, his composition "Lady Fair" on "Metronome Allstars 1955" and "Tenderly" on another record.

Negotiations have begun on the possibility of his appearing at the Kool Jazz Festival in New York and the Antibes Jazz Festival next summer.

As for whether he's still playing bebop, Wallington says, "I still have that concept in me when I play. I do more with it now, express different things."

The first pressing of "George Wallington: Virtuoso" sold out in Japan. So far, it hasn't been released anywhere else. "Virtuoso" is the title of one of his 10 compositions on the album.

Swing Journal found 32 of the 35 records he played on and had four Japanese critics review the new album.

"We got it translated," Wallington says. "They said great things. The ad tag for the album is 'George Wallington Is Back.' One critic said, 'George Wallington's not back; jazz is back.'"

While he was in New York, Wallington also taped "Marian McPartland's Piano Jazz" show for National Public Radio, to be heard April 24 or thereafter. It was the first time he'd ever played two-piano jazz; they did three numbers without rehearsing. He also played two tunes from "Virtuoso" and one each from the two unreleased albums he has cut since.

"I had a lot of fun doing it," Wallington says. "I love the way she's playing now." In the 1960s, Wallington played jazz piano at the Composer Club in New York while Miss McPartland played jazz piano at the Hickory House.

Two of his compositions became hits, "Godchild" and "Lemon Drop." He says, "Woody Herman liked 'Lemon Drop' and recorded it. 'Godchild' was recorded by Miles Davis as arranged by Gerry Mulligan and in 1982 got in the NARAS Hall of Fame as the hit from the 'Birth of the Cool' album."

Wallington was born Giacinto Figlia in Palermo, Italy, and came with his family to the United States a year later.

"My father liked to sing opera," he says. "I studied classical music. Then I started becoming interested in jazz. I started very early to play in small clubs in Greenwich Village. I traveled around the country a little while to clubs."

"I met people thinking the way I did about music — Dizzy Gillespie, Charlie Parker, Oscar Pettiford and others. We weren't very popular at that time. Dizzy was starting a group with Oscar. He asked me to join. We opened at the Onyx Club in 1944. It was the first bebop band ever."

"I recorded a lot with trios, with Max Roach and Charlie Mingus. As musical director at the Cafe Bohemia, I brought up a lot of new-comers. I had a quintet there, with trumpeter Donald Byrd and bassist Paul Chambers. He was fantastic. He died at 22. We stayed together six months."

"Professionally, I left music in 1965. The Composer Club closed. It was the last bastion of that kind of music. I didn't want to do it any more. Rock 'n' roll was coming in. Big bands lasted about 10 years, then bebop, then cool." He helped found his family's air-conditioning business, stayed with it until 1979.

Billie Wallington, who married the pianist in 1952, says, "Before Gerry Mulligan formed his pianoless quartet in 1960 or '61 he wrote and asked George to come to California and play with him at the Lighthouse in Hermosa Beach. George didn't want to go."

She says, "Polygram has a big reissue program on the Verve catalog. I hope some of George's will come out. Muse bought the Savoy catalog. Fantasy released a double album, 'Our Delight,' with a lot of his Prestige recordings, in its jazz collectors series."

Tacoma deputy meets runaway car head-on

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — The case of the runaway station wagon came to an abrupt conclusion on a Tacoma-area street as a sheriff's deputy buckled up and met the problem head-on.

Pierce County deputies were summoned last week to the Tacoma suburb of Lakewood by a shaken motorist who reported her unattended car was circling the street, in reverse, in front of a neighbor's house.

When he arrived, Deputy Greg Hocking found several residents standing around watching a 1971 Oldsmobile Cutlass station wagon make 30-foot circles in the street and on two lawns, like a dog chasing its tail.

Hocking said the speed of the car held the steering wheel in place.

An intentional collision seemed the only answer, Sgt. Bob Crow reasoned. Deputies choose the oldest sheriff's vehicle at the scene, a 1980 prowl car being driven by Deputy Ron Cox, who volunteered to be the stopper.

Buckling up his seat belt, Cox drove into the runaway station wagon and halted it in its tracks.

Approval for MX doesn't mean full deployment

NATION IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) — The four decisive votes that rescued the MX missile system for the White House may mark the high-water level for the long-range nuclear weapon and lead to deployment of a far smaller MX force than President Reagan seeks, lawmakers said.

Less than an hour after the House voted 217-210 on Thursday to cement congressional approval of $1.5 billion to buy a second installment of 21 MX missiles, a band of influential Democratic senators proposed to limit deployment, ready-to-fire MXs to no more than 40.

President Reagan proposes a force of 100 MXs, each armed with 10 warheads and backed by 123 spare and test missiles.

A 40-missile fleet would aim 400 nuclear warheads at Soviet targets, a destructive punch large enough to keep the attention of Soviet negotiators at arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland, but small enough to avoid setting the nuclear balance on a hair trigger, the senators said.

The size of the force could be adjusted according to progress at the Geneva talks or because of Soviet strategic developments, said Sen. Sam Nunn, leader of a group of Senate Democrats that voted for MX spending when it was approved in two identical 55-45 roll calls last week.

The House voted 219-213 on Tuesday to authorize funds for the 21 MXs. Thursday's vote was to release the money.

The next stage in the controversial 12-year history that has marked MX development will come sometime this summer when Congress decides how to deal with Reagan's request in his military budget for fiscal 1986 for $4 billion to build another 48 MXs.

But many House and Senate leaders said they believe there is no way the total 48 will be approved, especially in a time of high budget deficits.

House Republican Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi said he believes the House "probably will not be prepared at this time to go forward with the full 48."

"I feel very strongly you're not going to get a heck of a lot of money for these MX missiles; they shot their wad today," said Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., the ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Committee.

"I'm predicting the MX missile is dead after these 42 missiles, that's it," said Rep. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., a leading MX opponent on the Armed Services Committee.

"The proposal we are offering keeps the MX production line open in order to add counterforce punch to our strategic arsenal and to be a useful tool for us in Geneva," said Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

He and Nunn said they agree that AX is not nearly as important a weapon as others under development, including the Trident II missile, the advanced cruise missile and the Stealth high-technology bomber.

"To fund the entire 100 MX missiles in vulnerable silos in a low-growth defense budget will inevitably squeeze out these other strategic programs which give us more military strength and more arms control leverage," Nunn said.

"In my view, a total deployment of about 40 MXs in silos, together with an austere number of spares, to be manufactured at about the rate of 12 a year, is optimal," he said.

Lott said he was not sure if Republicans were ready for an "absolute cap" at this point on the number of deployed MX missiles. But he made clear his belief Congress is likely to approve a lesser number than the president has requested.

"I think Republicans and Democrats are looking for some way to save some money," Lott said.

"The drift is definitely toward less (military budget money) than the president asked for, and I think there are signs of compromise at the present time," he said.

Three people face trial after shooting spree

COLBY, Kan. (AP) — Three people face a June 4 trial on charges of murder, kidnapping and robbery in connection with a shooting spree that left four dead, including an alleged accomplice, and four wounded last month.

Daniel E. Remeta, 27, and Lisa J. Dunn, 18, both of Traverse City, Mich., and James C. Hunter, 33, of Amore, Mo., were arraigned Thursday on two counts each of first-degree murder and aggravated kidnapping and on aggravated battery of a law enforcement officer, aggravated battery and aggravated robbery.

Charges in the third man's death will depend on the outcome of the trial.

Town opposes new tower

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — The town meeting wants President Reagan and Congress to review a planned 300-foot Air Force communications tower that is based on the "notion that we can fight and prevail in a nuclear war."

Shouts during the voice vote Wednesday indicated the 175 elected town meeting members were at least 2-to-1 against the planned Ground Wave Emergency Network System, which an Air Force spokesman said has not been opposed in any other communities.

The communications network of 57 towers would stretch from New England to the Midwest, said Air Force spokesman John O'Brien.

Lawsuit claims negligence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Universal Studios and the producers of the TV series "Airwolf" were negligent in its instructions to a stuntwoman who needed surgery to reconstruct her face after a fiery accident last month, her $10 million lawsuit claims.

"There have to be safety laws to protect stunt people," Desiree Kerns, 28, who suffered second- and third-degree burns on her face, arms and chest in the Feb. 25 accident, said Thursday.

Universal had no comment because it hadn't received a copy of the Superior Court suit, said Ben Halpern, vice president of Universal Television. Airwolf Production Co. executive producer Don Ballisario was out of his office.

Firefighter imprisoned

BOSTON (AP) — Authorities closed the books on what a prosecutor once called a "massive conspiracy to burn down the city of Boston" by sentencing a city firefighter to six years in prison for arson, conspiracy and perjury.

Ray J. Norton Jr., 44, was convicted Feb. 12 of conspiring with seven other men to set 219 blazes during 14 months. The ring was blamed for some 260 fires that injured more than 300 people and did $22 million damage.

Norton's attorney said in U.S. District Court on Thursday that his client was a "simple man" lured into the arson scheme by "evil men" who seemed to befriend him.

Nun to undergo treatment

DARTMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — A Roman Catholic nun is incompetent to stand trial on charges she set fires at her convent and triggered an explosion that injured nine firefighters, a judge said in ordering psychiatric treatment.

District Court Judge John A. Markey on Thursday continued the case of Sister Maria Gartner, 39, for a year, at which time he will decide whether she should continue treatment or be released.

The nun, of the cloistered, ascetic Discalced Carmelite Order of Nuns, was charged with setting five fires March 10. One fire damaged a pipe that filled with natural gas and exploded when a crew turned on a light.

Air travel deteriorating

WASHINGTON (AP) — The quality of air travel has deteriorated under federal deregulation, according to nearly half the frequent flyers surveyed by the International Airline Passenger Association.

The survey, which polled about 10,000 people who fly at least 40 times a year, found that 49.2 percent said travel has gotten worse, the association said Thursday. In a 1981 survey, only 30 percent held that view.

Sixteen percent felt air travel has not been affected, while 35 percent said travel has improved because the government no longer controls where airlines may fly or how much they may charge.

Jewish committee dicusses minority problems

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — The American Jewish Committee Thursday opened a two-day meeting here by discussing whether Jews, blacks and Hispanics can rebuild a national political coalition for their mutual benefit.

The conference is designed to exchange information between committee members living in Western cities and staff from its New York City headquarters.

Speakers at a luncheon panel Thursday included Clarence Pendleton, chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, and Irma Castro, executive director of the local Chicano Federation. Howard Friedman, president of the American Jewish Committee, was moderator.

Friedman said the important question to consider is the remarkable social and economic success of some minority groups, such as Jews, Japanese, Vietnamese, Cubans and blacks from the West Indies. "These groups have made extraordinary progress," he said. "To what extent does the remaining lack of progress relate to ethnic and cultural conditions, rather than political?"

Pendleton said he is not certain there needs to be a specifically "black" politics.

"Is this country so mean," he said, "that there still needs to be preferential programs to make political and economic progress? I think we are stuck in the '80s."

"I think we are still waiting for the 40 acres and a mule promised in 1865," he said, referring to promises made to all the freed slaves at the end of the Civil War.

"The Asian community now has a higher income per capita than the average white," he said. "They didn't make that progress through the political process."

Pendleton has favored eliminating group preferences in education and hiring. "The American public has grown more conservative," he said. "They don't want to continue with these awful programs that divide us. They do not unite us."

He added that government programs to "divide up the pie" are non-productive. "We want an America that is freer and stronger. We need more opportunity, not guarantees," he said.

"I don't want anybody judged inferior, or superior, because of any innate qualities a group supposedly has," Pendleton said. He was applauded vigorously by the committee, which has generally viewed quotas with suspicion since they have often been used to exclude Jews.

Irma Castro said the nation's white power elite retains misconceptions of minorities.

"They think we don't vote, they think we are politically illiterate and they think we can't vote because we just arrived yesterday," Castro said.

She said the perception of Hispanics as apathetic voters is caused by the large percentage of young people in their population, and that young Hispanics are not the only ones not voting. "Apathy is rampant in this country," Castro said.

She also said the standards for civic literacy set for minorities by the power elite could not be met by most white voters.

Castro, unlike Pendleton, favors affirmative action programs that require minority quotas in work and education.

"We are talking about a reality of 200 to 300 years of racism that caused the civil rights movement in the first place," she said. "Now they are telling us the need is passed."

Children see killers in drug-related slayings

CHICAGO (AP) — Two children who heard their mother scream "Please don't hurt my baby" hid in a closet while she and her boyfriend were bound, stabbed repeatedly and shot in the head in drug-related slayings, police said.

A 9-month-old boy who was in the mother's room was unharmed. The terrified 12-year-old girl and her 8-year-old brother saw the killers when they peeked into their mother's room but also were not hurt, police said.

The girl and her brother were sleeping in an adjacent bedroom when they were awakened by their mother's shouts early Thursday, Lt. Richard Shinnors said.

The girl opened the door, looked in and saw the two men, Shinnors said.

The brother was peeking and "trying to look around his sister," and the girl "was either by gesture (or words) told to return to her room," he said.

The children then hid in the closet, Shinnors said. "They heard two shots. They heard footsteps of the two men walking down the stairs. They waited until it became quiet" and the girl called police, he said.

"What they saw is going to be of limited help," Shinnors said after the bodies of Joseph White, 24, and Dee Eggers Vaughn, 30, were found in the South Side apartment.

Both victims were stabbed repeatedly and each had been shot in the head, police said. Their hands and feet were bound.

Shinnors said the woman's children, Sheree and James, peeked in their mother's room after the girl heard the woman scream, "Please don't hurt my baby."

Iranian Says 'Major Offensive' Planned in Iran-Iraq War

Associated Press

A top Iranian official was quoted today as rejecting a cease-fire on the battlefield with its enemy Iraq because he said Iran is preparing a "major offensive."

Just a day earlier, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi of India was quoted as saying Iranian officials have dropped one of their long-standing demands to end the war — the oust of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

But Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted Hashemi Rafsanjani, the speaker of the Iranian Parliament, as saying Iran would not accept a cease-fire on the battlefield. The report was monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus.

IRNA quoted Rafsanjani as saying Iran was ready for an end to air raids on each other's cities and attacks on shipping in the Persian Gulf. "But we will not agree to a cease-fire on the warfronts and will not calm down in this way," he said.

"The necessary groundwork for the launching of Iran's major offensive has been prepared," he was quoted as saying in an address to tens of thousands of people attending the weekly prayer meeting on the campus of Tehran University.

Iran has been threatening to launch a final offensive against Iraq for more than a year.

Its leaders have denied that a large-scale offensive into Iraq's Huweizah marshes earlier this month was that offensive. Most reports indicate there were heavy casualties on both sides, but that Iraq beat back the attackers.

Rafsanjani repeated Iran's warnings that it would retaliate with more missile attacks on Baghdad if Iraq continued to attack Iranian cities. Iran claims to have hit the Iraqi capital with six long-range missiles in the past three weeks.

Iran's deputy foreign minister, Ali Mohamed Besharti, visited New Delhi last week. On Thursday, the Bombay Daily quoted Gandhi as saying: "Our talks with Iranian Minister Besharti were positive and helpful. We understand that Iran no longer insists on President Saddam Hussein's resignation."

"This is one big step forward. The Iraqis also seem anxious to talk," he was quoted as saying.

Gandhi, chairman of the 101-nation non-aligned movement, is sending two envoys to Iran in an effort to mediate an end to the war, the Indian government said.

The minister of state for external affairs, Khursheed Alam Khan, and Foreign Secretary Romesh Bhandari were scheduled to leave tonight for Tehran. They visited Iraq last week.

Military tries to prevent sabotage

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The army guarded highways and U.S.-trained battalions reportedly began operations in rebel-controlled areas, in what the military said was an effort to prevent sabotage of Sunday's national elections.

A military spokesman said a total of 10,000 troops had been mobilized, including U.S.-trained counterinsurgency units in eight of the country's 14 provinces, in eastern and northern regions where the rebels are concentrated.

The U.S.-trained battalions are backed by artillery and air force power, he said.

The spokesman did not elaborate, and he talked Thursday only on condition he remain anonymous.

Salvadorans will cast ballots for the 60-member National Assembly and 262 mayors. The last assembly elections were in 1982, when El Salvador began the process of restoring democracy.

President Jose Napoleon Duarte's centrist Christian Democrats hold 24 assembly seats, but a coalition of rightist parties led by the militant Republican Nationalist Alliance has 34 seats with the remaining two held by a small swing party.

The Christian Democrats need to pick up seven seats to gain control, while the rightists would have to gain six seats to get the two-thirds needed to override a Duarte veto. There are nine parties with candidates in the races.

Before the campaigning ended on Wednesday, the government said

AP Laserphoto

Salvadoran soldiers check civilians' identification cards near San Vicente. The government has mobilized 10,000 soldiers to provide security for Sunday's elections.

leftist rebels attacked the National Police headquarters in San Salvador, wounding four policemen and five civilians.

The rebels have attacked more than a two dozen local government buildings and communications facilities around the country in the past few weeks, in a campaign of sabotage.

Greek Parliament elects president

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Parliament today elected Christos Sartzetakis, a Supreme Court judge backed by the ruling Socialist Party, as president for a five-year term.

The 56-year-old Sartzetakis received 180 votes in the 300-member Parliament, the minimum number he needed on the third and final ballot. If Parliament had failed to elect a president, it would have been dissolved and a general election would have been held.

Sartzetakis, the only nominee for president, replaces 78-year-old Constantine Caramanlis, a conservative statesman the Socialists unexpectedly dropped as a consensus candidate.

Government opponents claimed that decision, and the Socialists' plans to push constitutional reforms, threatened democracy.

The Socialists had expected Sartzetakis to receive about 182 votes, including 185 from their own members, 12 from the pro-Soviet Communist Party and five from independents. However, two legislators were absent.

All 112 members of the conservative New Democracy party abstained, and six other members of Parliament cast invalid ballots.

Socialists broke into cheers and noisy applause when Speaker Michael Stephanides announced the result of the ballot.

Sartzetakis won 178 on the first ballot and 181 on the second ballot, but the Greek constitution requires a candidate to receive a two-thirds majority, or 200 votes, on either of the first two ballots.

The Socialists' surprise decision to drop Caramanlis, the incumbent, and its planned amendments to the constitution led to accusations that they intend to make Greece a one-party state.

Caramanlis, a pro-Western statesman who steered Greece back to democracy after a 1967-1974 dictatorship, resigned to protest the proposed constitutional revisions which abolish the president's executive powers and give greater authority to the prime minister and ruling party.

A stormy second ballot last week in which the Socialists insisted on using different colored ballot slips and Cabinet ministers policed Socialist legislators to ensure they voted for Sartzetakis provoked outcry from both conservatives and moderates.

"The government brutally violated the secrecy of the vote," as part of "an orgy of constitutional and ethical violations," said the conservative New Democracy party, which controls 112 seats in Parliament.

"If we don't react to this conspiracy around us, we are threatened by the same fate as the Italians in 1924 and the Germans in 1934," former conservative Prime Minister George Rallis said, referring to the years that Benito Mussolini seized power in Italy and Adolf Hitler took power in Germany.

Mexican soccer mascot offers to resign after being criticized

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Comedian Mario Moreno, better known as "Cantinflas," has offered to resign as mascot of the Mexican national soccer team after his selection sparked criticism, but sports officials here declined to accept his resignation.

"I resign because I don't want my character to be the topic for debate, when what is needed in this moment prior to a great event is that we all should be united," he told reporters.

On March 15, a caricature of Cantinflas was unveiled to great fanfare here as the soccer team's mascot. Since then, criticism has surfaced that the choice presents abroad an outdated image of Mexico and was improper for an athletic team.

At the unveiling ceremony, leaders of the Mexican Soccer Federation presented the new mascot by saying it was "a character identified with all Mexicans, who rep the stage of insult."

However, he also said, "Resigning as the official mascot of the team does not deprive me of my right, as a Mexican, as a friend and as a fan to support and stimulate the members of the team."

In an effort to quiet the criticism, soccer federation President Rafael del Castillo said, "The federation does not accept the resignation because Cantinflas does not belong to Mario Moreno but rather to Mexico, and we want him to represent soccer here."

For years, Moreno has been a top box office draw throughout Mexico and Latin America in his comic character as Cantinflas, which has been compared to Charlie Chaplin's "Little Tramp" character.

He is best known outside of Latin America for his role as David Niven's Phineas Fogg in "Around the World in 80 Days."

The spat about the mascot developed amid growing attention to the World Cup and preparations for it. The only other team sure of a spot in the 1986 tournament is defending champion Italy from the 1982 World Cup held in Spain.

"Pique," announced last year as the official mascot for the World Cup, received similar criticism when it was unveiled but now appears to be completely accepted by Mexican fans. The cartoon character is made of a chili pepper with a moustache.

WORLD in brief

House of Commons approves bill to abolish London council

LONDON (AP) — A government bill to abolish the Greater London Council and six other big city authorities, all controlled by Britain's opposition Labor Party, has completed its passage through the House of Commons.

The Commons voted 325-170 Thursday night to adopt the bill, which now goes for consideration to the House of Lords. The Lords can propose amendments to measures approved by the Commons and can delay enactment in most cases but cannot reject them outright.

The Conservative government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher hopes the bill will complete its passage through the House of Lords by July and become law by next fall.

Several Conservative legislators including former Prime Minister Edward Heath joined with Laborites and other groups in opposing the bill at various stages during its stormy passage through the Commons, which began last year. They said the planned abolition of the authorities was undemocratic.

Government ministers denied this, arguing that the authorities are an expensive and unnecessary bureaucracy. The bill would transfer the authorities' functions to smaller borough authorities.

Elephant population rising

PEKING (AP) — Elephants in the tropical forests of southwest China's Yunnan province are increasing in numbers at a rate of 3 to 5 percent a year, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

At least 230 wild elephants can be found in Xishuangbanna and Hainan nature reserves, the report said Thursday. Their diet includes bananas and bamboo leaves.

Yunnan, which borders Burma and Indochina, is the only part of China with elephants.

Argentine specialists in London

LONDON (AP) — Five Argentine foreign affairs specialists are in London for unofficial talks on improving relations with Britain. The two countries severed diplomatic ties at the start of the 1982 Falklands war, and they have not been renewed.

The Royal Institute for International Affairs, an independent body, said it initiated the talks, which began in West Germany, and the group would be in Britain for at least two days.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the group would not meet anyone in the government. A similar group visited London earlier, he said.

The 72-day war ended with the expulsion of occupation troops from the South Atlantic islands by a British task force.

Singapore president resigns

SINGAPORE (AP) — The president of Singapore, C.V. Devan Nair, has resigned to seek treatment for alcoholism, the prime minister announced.

Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew told Parliament on Thursday that the doctors who had examined Nair, 61, had concluded that due to his alcohol dependency, "The president's mental state at present fluctuates between lucidity and mild confusion and disorientation."

In Singapore, the president's power is nominal. Nair, a former leader of the National Trades Union Congress, was appointed president on Oct. 23, 1981, and his term was to run until Oct. 23 this year.

He was admitted into Singapore's General Hospital on March 16, and was reported suffering from liver problems.

Nazi hunter wins top honor

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — West Germany has awarded its Grand Cross of Merit, one of the nation's highest orders, to Simon Wiesenthal, the 76-year-old Nazi hunter who runs the Jewish Documentation Center in Vienna.

It was the first West German medal given Wiesenthal, who is internationally known for his work in tracking down Nazi war criminals and helping Jewish families find friends and relatives lost in Adolf Hitler's Holocaust.

The West German ambassador, Hans Heinrich Noebel, presented the medal to Wiesenthal in a brief ceremony at the embassy Thursday.

A telegram from Chancellor Helmut Kohl cited Wiesenthal's work to reconcile Jews and Germans. Wiesenthal was imprisoned by the Nazis in several concentration camps, and was freed from the Mauthausen camp at the end of World War II.

He told The Associated Press after the ceremony that he never had felt his principal role was to reconcile Jews and Germans, but instead that "my main job was for justice."

Six killed in fireworks explosion

CATANHEDE, Portugal (AP) — Six family members were killed when an explosion destroyed their small fireworks factory in this northern town, police said.

Witnesses said the blast Thursday night threw workers more than 50 yards. The explosion was heard more than 13 miles away.

A spokesman at the provincial hospital serving the town of Catanhede, 127 miles north of Lisbon, said the only survivor of the explosion, 23-year-old employee Lidia Ferreira, was slightly injured.

Vietnam to withdraw

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

BANGKOK, Thailand (DPA) — Vietnam plans to withdraw about 15,000 troops from Cambodia in the next few days, diplomatic sources said here Thursday.

It will be their fourth annual troop pullout for Cambodia, where Hanoi keeps an estimated 160,000 to 180,000 troops.

Past announced withdrawals have been described by Thai military authorities and Western observers as nothing more than a rotation of new recruits to the area.

Vietnam has claimed it would gradually cut down on its military presence in Cambodia, which it invaded in late 1978, toppling the Khmer Rouge regime.

A Radio Phnom Penh broadcast, monitored here, did not give the number of troops to be withdrawn but Western diplomats here estimate that at most 15,000 would return to Vietnam.

The broadcast said the withdrawal, which could continue through May, was in part "based on the development and strengthening of the Cambodian revolution during the past six years, in particular the great victories of the 1984-85 dry season."
