Ruckelshaus nominated to head EPA

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today nominated William D. Ruckelshaus for a second tour as chief of the Environmental Protection Agency and the corporate official said he has a "free hand" to run the beleaguered agency.

Reagan personally announced the nomination and said of Ruckelshaus: "No one could bring more impressive credentials.... He is the right man for the right job at the right time ..."

Anne McGill Burford resigned as EPA administrator on March 9 after half-a-dozen congressional panels had launched investigations into EPA affairs.

Ruckelshaus

Ruckelshaus, now a vice president for Weyerhaeuser, the giant timber firm, was the first director of EPA, under President Nixon. He stood beside Reagan as the president sang his praises "as tough, fair and highly competent."

"I guess my immediate task is to stabilize the EPA and reinstill in the people there the dedication to their tasks, to their jobs that they have had from the outset of that agency and to get on with this enormously complicated job of cleaning up our air and water and of protecting our citizens from toxic substances," the 50-year-old lawyer said.

Reagan said the attacks on his EPA have been "unwarranted" and said "all I ever proposed is that we be fair," not that there be a tilt to favor the business community.

The White House hopes the Ruckelshaus nomination will bring credibility to the much-investigated EPA, and Ruckelshaus, asked how much independence he was given, told reporters: "I have a free hand."

He added: "It is our job, my job, the job of that agency, to serve the public.... We're going to do our best to interpret our mandate that Congress has given us."

Ruckelshaus said that he would look into allegations of EPA wrongdoing.

"My concern is the future, not the past ..." he said. "We will do the best we can to investigate the substance of those charges and if they prove to be correct, appropriate action will be taken. But I don't want to prejudge that."

But even as Reagan was speaking, the EPA controversy continued.

A House subcommittee voted to cite former EPA official Rita Lavelle for contempt for failing to appear to testify this morning. Reagan fired Ms. Lavelle in February.

Ruckelshaus is senior vice president of law and corporate affairs at Weyerhaeuser Co., a timber and paper products firm in Federal Way, Wash., near Seattle. He headed the EPA from its inception in 1970 until 1973.

The nomination could bring protests from some environmentalists, who have complained that Weyerhaeuser is regulated by the EPA.

Initial reaction to the appointment was favorable.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said that the choice of Ruckelshaus is "reassuring."

"This would represent a return to the original purposes of the agency," he said in a statement.

The chairman of the Senate Environment Committee, which must confirm Ruckelshaus' nomination, said he was pleased with the president's choice and predicted quick confirmation by the Senate.

"I find Mr. Ruckelshaus acceptable to me to be the next administrator," said Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt. "I don't see any serious problems."

"The president couldn't have found a better person to carry out environmental policy and to restore the EPA's credibility with American people," said Jerry Jasinowski, senior vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

"Even if we get a 'Mr. Clean,' Ruckelshaus, coming in to head up the agency, it probably won't solve the problem," said Dr. Samuel Epstein, a University of Illinois professor of environmental and occupational medicine.

"Until there can be a major change in policies at the White House...my basis for pessimism is of a high order," Epstein said Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Early this morning, Ruckelshaus met with senior White House aides to discuss Reagan's job offer. Shortly after his breakfast session with Chief of Staff James A. Baker III and Presidential Counselor Edwin Meese, Reagan himself appeared before reporters with Ruckelshaus to make the announcement.

Medical mission

Eric Scott Hogan is ministered to by registered nurse Janet Moore, left, and his mother, Korla Anderegg, just prior to takeoff this morning from Midland Air Park. The boy, injured in a gunshot accident, will be treated at a Houston hospital.

Community, state aid make therapy possible

An airplane carrying a young boy, his mother and hope left Midland Air Park this morning bound for a Houston hospital on what could be a freedom flight for the Odessa youth, paralyzed from the neck down by an accidental gunshot last month.

Eric Scott Hogan, 7, was admitted to Odessa's Medical Center Hospital Feb. 26 after a pistol accidentally discharged, critically wounding him in the neck. Since that time, he's remained in intensive care at Medical Center while family and friends scrambled to raise enough money to afford special rehabilitation therapy.

At about 10:20 a.m. today, an air ambulance donated by Upjohn Healthcare Services left Midland for Houston's Texas Institute of Rehabilitation Research. Eric's mother, Korla Anderegg, joined him on the flight along with Janet Moore, a registered nurse with Upjohn.

The boy's stepfather, Dennis Anderegg, and 9-year-old brother, Alan, were on hand to say goodbye and will be driving to Houston today.

Ms. Moore, a nurse specially trained in critical care, said the air ambulance donation is only one part of a large community effort aimed at providing Eric with necessary medical help.

"The community has really jumped in to do a lot," said Ms. Moore, a nurse specially trained in critical care. She said about $18,000 has already been donated to a trust fund established at Permian Bank and Trust in Odessa.

She said Medical Center Hospital engineers designed a special board to keep Eric immobile during the flight and Alert Ambulance Service donated its equipment for the trip from Odessa to Midland.

Ms. Moore explained that medical expenses average about $20,000 monthly at TIRR, one of only five hospitals in the nation that offer the necessary special therapy.

Dennis Anderegg said that despite the heroic fund-raising efforts locally, it wasn't until the Crippled Children's Fund of the Texas Department of Health agreed to pay for two months' treatment that arrangements could be made to transport Eric to TIRR.

Ms. Moore said Eric should have no trouble coping with the hour-and-a-half flight. "Right now, since he's had some healing time and is pretty stable, that's to our advantage," she said.

She said Eric grew excited when a pilot explained the flight to him last week.

"He's still a 7-year-old boy trapped inside that body," she said.

European finance ministers realigning currencies

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — European finance ministers agreed today on a broad realignment of their currencies, including a 5.5 percent upward revaluation of the West German mark and a 2.5 percent devaluation of the French franc.

"This will enhance the credibility of the European Monetary System," said West German Finance Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg, who announced the agreement.

The system was thrown into the worst crisis of its four-year history over the weekend when the ministers failed to agree on realigning their currencies, a move needed to end waves of speculation on the currency markets, which in turn aggravated the world recession.

France at one point threatened to pull out of the system, which could have made matters even worse for its trading partners, including the United States, because it would have led to additional French trade barriers to U.S. and other exports.

After the Europeans failed to reach agreement over the weekend, their eight currencies were allowed to float free of mandatory central bank controls when the money markets opened today. There was some confusion on the markets but very little trading.

Otto Poehl, president of West Germany's central bank, said that markets could return to normal following the realignment agreement.

One U.S. dollar bought 7.17 francs today in Paris; at close of trading Friday, the quote was 6.925 francs to the dollar.

The strong West German mark soared today to a record 2.9925 French francs from Friday's fixing at 2.8985. In today's trading the mark was at 2.3975 to the U.S. dollar.

France had been refusing the other countries' proposal that it devalue the franc for the third time since the French Socialists came to power 22 months ago. The West Germans were reluctant to raise the value of the mark because it means the country's exports will be more expensive.

French Finance Minister Jacques Delors had threatened to yank France out of the European Monetary System if no agreement is reached. The system was created to stabilize currencies of Common Market members.

All Common Market currencies except the British pound and the Greek drachma are in the system. Besides the French franc and the West German mark they are the Dutch guilder, Belgian and Luxembourg francs, Irish pound, Danish kroner and Italian lira.

A realignment in the system normally affects the U.S. dollar, the British pound, the Japanese yen, and other major currencies.

There have been six previous currency realignments in the four-year history of the system. But each has come in the calm of a weekend, when exchange markets are closed.

When the ministers adjourned Sunday without producing a new exchange-rate formula, they suspended mandatory intervention by central banks that holds rates within fixed limits.

Throughout the weekend negotiations, France's Delors tried to force a sharp upward valuation of the West German mark, sources close to the meeting said.

For the French, a stronger mark would tend to reduce imports from West Germany, France's main trading partner. This would help France combat its growing foreign trade deficit, now estimated at $13.6 billion.

The present monetary crisis stemmed largely from the sagging of the French franc.

First major shake-up rumored in French Cabinet

Michel Jobert

PARIS (AP) — Speculation grew today that President Francois Mitterrand would announce his first major Cabinet reshuffle, possibly including a new premier, following the unexpected resignation of the foreign trade minister over the nation's deteriorating economy.

The Sunday resignation of Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert came as Mitterrand and aides held urgent meetings on economic policy and negotiations sagged in Brussels over the Common Market's monetary system.

Jobert said he resigned because he lacked enough authority to stifle France's growing trade deficit. He was the first key minister to quit Mitterrand's Cabinet since the Socialists came to power 22 months ago.

Political and economic observers say other Cabinet ministers might quit or be fired this week, partly because Mitterrand wants to show France's Common Market partners he is making major efforts to cure the nation's economic problems. Other rumored measures include higher taxes and cuts in government spending that could scrap some of Mitterrand's social programs.

The economies of the 10 members of the Common Market are closely intertwined. France's growing trade deficit and declining value in the franc are bound to affect its economic partners.

In Brussels, France and seven other Common Market members at a monetary meeting failed to agree to changes in the European Monetary System. The system of monetary exchange rates is designed to stablize each member's currency.

GNP growth estimated 4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the broadest sign yet of economic recovery, the government estimated today that the economy grew at a 4 percent annual rate during the first three month of the year, the strongest performance in two years.

The Commerce Department's so-called "flash" estimate of inflation-adjusted gross national product showed the largest increase since the first quarter of 1981 and underscored the near-unanimous view of economists that the severe 1981-82 recession ended last December.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes called the figure "excellent news and the most conclusive indication the economic recovery has begun and is proceeding at a healthy rate. We think this indicates we are moving rapidly to an excellent recovery from recession."

In another positive development, the flash estimate showed inflation, as measured by the GNP price-deflator, rising at a mere 2.8 percent rate during the first quarter, compared with a 3.7 percent rate during last year's final quarter.

The flash estimate is a very rough calculation of economic activity that often is revised significantly as more information is gathered.

The Commerce Department also reported that economic activity during the last three months of 1982 declined by less than had been estimated previously. The department said inflation-adjusted GNP fell at a 1.1 percent annual rate, rather than dropping 1.9 percent as had been reported earlier.

The department added that pretax corporate profits during the fourth quarter of 1982 declined at an annual rate of 0.8 percent from the third quarter, reversing two straight quarters of gains. After tax-profits showed no change in the fourth quarter, the department said.

The estimated first-quarter GNP growth is the greatest since a 7.9 percent rate was recorded in the first three months of 1981. But that rapid expansion gave way by the summer to the worst downturn since World War II.

Jack Lavery of Merrill Lynch & Co., who had anticipated the first-quarter gain, said in advance of the report, "I think we'll have a bumpy and saw-toothed recovery."

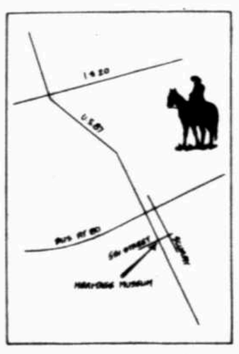

The strong first-quarter increase should be followed by "a more muted" gain in the second quarter, a very strong third quarter and then slower progress again.

Recent government reports have shown enough improvement to indicate real GNP would be up in the first quarter. But the reason consistent big gains won't show up all through the year, analysts agreed, was that some parts of the economy were still weak.

While industrial production was picking up and housing was rushing ahead, for example, business spending for modernization and expansion still was declining. And unemployment was still high — 10.2 percent in February.

Retail sales have also been sluggish for several months, and gains in Americans' personal income have been small.

Correction

A story on Individual Retirement Accounts in the Business/Energy section of Sunday's Reporter-Telegram stated "An IRA opened before last year's income tax filing date is not eligible for deduction from 1982 taxes...."

The sentence should have read, "An IRA opened before last year's income tax filing date — and claimed on 1981 income taxes — is ineligible for deduction from 1982 taxes...."

Spring comes in much like winter

By The Associated Press

Newborn spring pitched a fit today, spreading up to a foot of blowing and drifting snow across the upper Midwest and causing flooding that forced hundreds of people to evacuate their homes.

Many schools closed, rush hour traffic was snarled, and air travel was disrupted by snow. Flood warnings were posted in many areas of the Northeast.

A 44-year-old Michigan man was killed early today in a two-car collision on a slippery highway in Watertown Township, Mich.

Divers in Rhode Island were searching for the body of a Connecticut man feared drowned Sunday while canoeing on the rain-swollen Pawtucket River.

A school bus was hit by a skidding car and toppled over in Grand Rapids, Mich., today, and five special education students were injured.

In South Florida, four people were injured today when apparent tornadoes swept through Okeechobee County, overturning several trailers and campers and damaging houses, authorities said.

In Michigan, 500 to 700 people were forced to flee their homes today when winds of up to 40 mph off Lake Huron caused waist-deep flooding along Saginaw Bay just north of Bay City, an area of lakeside resort homes about 110 miles northwest of Detroit.

"The high wind is pushing the water in," said Nancy Schroeder, the county's deputy emergency services director. "It's just flooding us out so fast that we can't move."

She said that waist-deep water spread up to three-fourths of a mile inland from the bay.

"On a lot of homes the foundations have been washed out," she said.

Snow depths from the storm that swept into the Midwest on Sunday ranged from about half a foot in such cities as Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit, and Fort Wayne, Ind., to a more than a foot in Saginaw, Mich., where it fell as fast as 2 inches an hour and was still coming down.

The National Weather Service in Miami said two apparent tornadoes were reported in the Okeechobee city vicinity, but Leona Hawk, chief dispatcher for the county sheriff's department, said, "We think there were approximately four tornadoes that hit."

The dispatcher said there was "quite a bit of damage in the Treasure Island area, Taylor Creek Isles and Town and Country Trailer Park."

Freeze warnings for tonight were posted as far south as Memphis, Tenn., where forecasters said snow also could fall on the budding daffodils.

Although spring officially arrived at 11:39 p.m. local time on Sunday, freezing rain apread from northern Ohio into northwest Pennsylvania and western New York state.

Two-foot snowdrifts blocked roads in southern Michigan, where winds were gusting as high was 40 mph and the wind-chill factor dipped as low as 10 degrees below zero. In Marquette, on Michigan's upper peninsula, 23 inches of snow fell over the weekend.

Hundreds of traffic accidents were reported today in southeastern Wisconsin and practically all schools were closed in the Milwaukee area. Mitchell Field was temporarily closed because plow crews were unable to keep runways clear of blowing, drifting snow.

"It's bad out there," said Robert Butler, 39, a truck driver at a truck stop at Oak Creek, Wis. "There are quite a few cars in ditches. There is a lot of snow on the road, and it looks like they haven't tried to do anything with it yet."

"It'll be a very good day not to go to work if you don't have to," said Joe Caporaso, a National Weather Service forecaster in Chicago.

Mount St. Helens builds toward another eruption

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens was trembling with small earthquakes as it began its third springtime of activity and continues to build toward another mild eruption, scientists say.

The volcano first stirred to life in this century almost three years ago. Its May 18, 1980, blast left 59 people dead or missing and sent aloft an ash cloud that circled the globe.

The mountain continues to be unpredictable but, for now, scientists say it has settled into a pattern of steam bursts, earthquakes, rockfalls, snow melts and mild eruptions limited mostly to the inside of the crater.

On March 6, scientists predicted another mild eruption by next weekend. Officials with the U.S. Geological Survey and University of Washington geophysics laboratory said Sunday that the eruption alert remains in effect. It would add new growth to the 700-foot lava dome inside the crater, scientists said.

The last episode when molten rock was pushed to the surface began Feb. 7.

Charges made against Israelis

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli soldiers fire weapons randomly as they travel Beirut's roads, threatening the safety of civilians and members of the multinational peacekeeping force, the U.S. Marine commander in Lebanon says.

The Israelis denied the charge leveled Sunday by Col. James M. Mead in the latest evidence of strained relations between the American peacekeepers and members of Israel's occupation force.

The "indiscriminate" firing to flush out potential Palestinian ambushers endangers civilians, said Mead, commander of the 1,200 Marines who are part of a four-nation force that has been patrolling Beirut for about six months.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Mead blamed what he called "gross lack" of discipline in the Israeli ranks for the random gunplay.

A Lebanese official said at least five civilians have been killed by what he called careless Israeli gunfire along highways.

The Israeli military command responded to Mead's charge by saying: "Lately the Marines are publishing data that have no basis...."

Israeli soldiers do shoot along the Sidon highway, but only into unpopulated areas, said Israeli officers who asked not to be named.

Referring to recent reports that said Israeli soldiers stopped and taunted Marines on patrol, Mead said "It's my thought that because of the frequency of the incidents, it must be greater that happenstance."

Mead accused Israeli units on the edge of the south Beirut sector of "reconnaissance by fire." The tactic of trying to flush out or kill would-be ambushers by random fire may be a reason why the Israelis were trying to keep Marines from patrolling the sector, he said.

Israeli military sources who asked to be unidentified said Israeli authorities have denied a Lebanese allegation that civilians were killed by the firing practice.

Mead said that for the last two months, the Israelis come down the Sidon highway and without having been fired upon, they just fire great numbers of rounds to the east of Sidon highway.

"Initially (they said) Marines could not go across the Sidon road because they were concerned for our safety," Mead said. "Apparently the Israelis are concerned about their gross lack of fire discipline."

Mead said that when Israeli soldiers fired into areas along the west side of the road, "we were catching ricochets in our positions. We told them to cease and desist the indiscriminate fire. So now the indiscriminate fire only happens to the east.

"It's the old Vietnam tactic of recon by fire. It's a very poor tactic. All it does is endanger via ricochets other forces or civilians. It never stopped a terrorist."

The commandant of the Marine Corps, Gen. Robert Barrow, recently wrote to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to complain of alleged Israeli provocation of the Marines "complete with verbal degredation of the officers, their uniform and country."

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens last week urged Israeli and U.S. soldiers to get along better.

The Israelis insist they have good ties with the British, French and Italian peacekeeping troops and have suggested that the Israelis and Marines have liaison officers.

Congressmen urge Lebanon to punish massacre participants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-nine members of Congress are urging Lebanese authorities to find and punish those responsible for last September's massacre of hundreds of Palestinian refugees.

"We fear that the strong and free Lebanon we all seek may not survive so long as the perpetrators of the massacres remain at large," the House members said in a letter to Lebanese President Amin Gemayel.

"We are profoundly disturbed by what appears to Americans to be a lack of diligence in determining responsibility for the attacks on the refugee camps and bringing the actual perpetrators to justice," the letter said.

The letter was released Sunday by Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., who together with Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, had drafted and circulated the appeal.

Lebanese Christian militiamen have been linked to the killings of hundreds of Palestinian men, women and children during the massacre Sept. 16-18 at the Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps. Israeli forces then in control of Beirut were guarding the camps at the time.

An Israeli special commission, in a report issued Feb. 8, said then-Defense Minister Ariel Sharon bore personal responsibility.

More troops possible, envoy says

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Reagan is ready to send additional Marines to Lebanon for peacekeeping duty if necessary, special Lebanese envoy Saeb Salam said today after returning from a week's talks in Washington.

Salam, a former prime minister and special representative of President Amin Gemayel, said Reagan showed his "readiness to assist Lebanon in many fields, even by sending additional Marines."

"This will depend on the necessity for such a move," Salam said.

There are already 1,200 U.S. Marines with the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon, and their commander, Col. James M. Mead, has reported several confrontations with Israeli troops.

On Sunday, Mead said that Israel's "indiscriminate" use of "reconnaissance by fire" tactics to flush out guerrillas endangers civilians and members of the multinational peacekeeping force.

Gunmen fired bazookas and small arms at an Israeli position east of Beirut Sunday night and rocket-propelled grenades at an Israeli patrol southeast of Beirut today, but there were no casualties, the Tel Aviv command said.

Meanwhile, Syrian Culture Minister Najah Attar wrote in an editorial in the Damascus government newspaper Tishrin that Syria was ready to do battle with Israel and warned that any new war between the two nations would bring the Soviets and Americans to a "world confrontation."

"We do not fear war. We have enough strength to hit back harder to any blow we receive," Mrs. Attar wrote.

"America is not alone in our area, and we shall not stop achieving a strategic balance with Israel if this balance has not already been achieved," she said. "Not only Israeli fingers are on the trigger, but ours too."

She was referring to upgraded Soviet arms supplies to Syria, including long-range SAM-5 anti-aircraft missiles, that Moscow sent to Syria in the wake of Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

"In case new fighting erupts, it will not be confined to the Middle East, nor will it be limited between Syria and Israel," she said.

The Israelis invaded Lebanon June 6 to smash the Palestine Liberation Organization and refuse to withdraw until they have adequate security guarantees along Lebanon's southern border with Israel.

Israel demands a simultaneous withdrawal of Syrian troops from Lebanon when Israeli forces pull out. The Syrians have been in Lebanon since snuffing out the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war, and provide cover for PLO guerrillas operating in northern and eastern parts of the country.

Israeli and Lebanese negotiators met today in Netanya, Israel, to discuss withdrawal, and U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib was due to travel to Beirut to consult with the Lebanese government.

Israeli spokesman Avi Pazner said the delegations met for three hours but did not discuss new U.S. proposals for advancing the talks on an Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon. Habib was to brief Lebanese leaders on the ideas, after hearing the Israeli response Sunday night from Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defense Minister Moshe Arens.

Arabs in East Jerusalem protest attempt to take Temple Mount

JERUSALEM (AP) — East Jerusalem Arabs Monday threw stones, burned tires and began a commercial strike today to protest an attempt two weeks ago by Jewish extremists to take over the sacred Temple Mount, police said.

Arab demonstrations also were reported in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Israel radio reported that a Jerusalem district court freed on $125 bail each the 29 Israelis who had been held in the Temple Mount takeover bid. They were ordered confined to their homes except to attend synagogue on the Sabbath and Jewish holy days.

Jerusalem police spokesman Ziv Rotem said no one was hurt as Arabs stoned passersby in the pilgrim-packed Old City.

Social Security, jobs bills due before recess

WASHINGTON (AP) — In its last week of work before a 10-day Easter recess, Congress is rushing to send President Reagan two major pieces of legislation — Social Security reform and a multibillion-dollar emergency jobs program.

The Senate was resuming work this afternoon on the $165 billion Social Security rescue plan with Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., saying he hoped for a final vote late today.

Meanwhile, congressional negotiators were set to meet this afternoon to hammer out the differences between the $4.9 billion jobs bill passed by the House and a $5.2 billion version passed by the Senate. The major difference is a provision in the Senate bill to speed up revenue sharing payments to states by three months.

The legislation also provides for food and shelter for the needy and other types of recession relief. It also includes an additional $5 billion in federal subsidies to help 27 states and the District of Columbia pay unemployment benefits to millions of jobless workers whose checks are due this week.

After the Senate finishes work on the Social Security package, congressional conferees also will meet to iron out the differences between the versions of that measure adopted by each chamber.

For the most part, the Senate has been following the lead of the House and sticking close to the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform for higher payroll taxes, a six-month freeze on benefit increases, a levy on the benefits going to more affluent retirees and mandatory Social Security coverage for new federal workers.

The tightest remaining Senate battle involves the provision that would extend Social Security coverage to all new federal employees after Jan. 1.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., is leading the fight for an amendment to delay mandatory coverage until Congress approves a supplementary pension plan for civil servants.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the Finance Committee chairman guiding the bill through the Senate, argues that some legislators supporting Long's move only want to keep federal workers from having to pay into the system. He fears that if Long is successful, the delicate rescue package may unravel.

Students turn in friends for rewards

LEWISVILLE (AP) — For $100 rewards, high school students here are turning in fellow students — and in some cases best friends — in a program designed to crack down on the in-school sale and use of drugs.

Administrators in this north Dallas suburb say Lewisville High School students are responding to yellow posters featuring a cross on top of a grave and offering a $100 reward from the Parent Teacher Student Association.

Assistant Principal Malcolm Dennis said since the program began in September at the 2,200-student school, 20 names have been turned over to school officials and 17 of those were reported to police.

"You'd be astonished at how well the students are cooperating," said Dennis. "Some have even turned in their best friends."

He said the 17 were expelled after turning in drugs, mostly marijuana, during searches of their belongings by the principal or an assistant principal.

The names of the students are given police only if drugs are found on the student, said Dennis. He said no action was taken against three of the 20 students because no drugs were found.

Principal Douglas Killough, who operated a similar program in Alabama, came up with the idea and the association persuaded local businessmen to put up the cash for the rewards.

"We are working with a totally legal conscience," said Killough. "Our school board has determined and the courts have upheld in the past that while students are on campus and away from their parents, we become their guardians and have a right to search them, their lockers or their cars.

"I and many parents, I'm sure, would hate to think we wouldn't have those rights to watch over their children."

A student can receive $50 for a tip, and if the name results in a conviction, the student can receive another $50, said Killough.

Dallas papers report analysis of lead contamination diluted

DALLAS (AP) — Two Dallas newspapers say they have learned that a government analysis of blood and soil samples taken from a poor West Dallas neighborhood was diluted to show that lead contamination was less severe than in actuality was.

Environmental Protection Agency officials announced Feb. 1 that the National Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta found the blood samples taken from pre-school children living within a half mile of a smelter showed lead contamination was slightly lower than the national average.

But Dr. Norman L. Dyer, head of the EPA's toxic substances office in Dallas, told the Dallas Morning News that the government analysis diluted the impact of the lead in the most seriously contaminated areas.

And the Dallas Times-Herald reported Sunday it obtained documents that showed Dyer complained about that dilution Jan. 12 in a telephone conversation with Washington-based EPA officials.

Dyer complained in the telephone call that the EPA and CDC compiled average contamination levels in the area without considering prevailing wind conditions that probably would increase contamination in certain corridors.

"If you look at the individuals who live inside the (most seriously) contaminated areas as well as individuals who live outside (those areas) you see them all as one," he said.

"You wind up diluting the impact that you otherwise would see if you broke the group down to those that live in the contaminated areas versus those that live outside the areas," Dyer said.

He said additional computer costs that would have been required to do that study "would have been worth it."

Crews clean up train wreck

RIO VISTA (AP) — Crews continued cleaning up the wreckage of a Santa Fe freight train that derailed over the weekend, heavily damaging several locomotives and 20 cars loaded with grain.

The accident took place about 4 p.m. Saturday about two miles south of this Johnson County town, located south of Fort Worth. The train was bound for points along the Texas Gulf Coast, officials said.

The cause of the accident was under investigation. Officials estimated damage would approach $1 million.

SARA LEE ANSWERS CONSUMER DEMAND WITH QUALITY, FROZEN CROISSANT

Available nationally in three flavors (All Butter, Wheat 'n Honey, and Cheese) at a suggested retail price of $1.79. Sara Lee's Authentic French-Style Croissants will be sold in the bread and roll section of retail freezer cases.

Today, kitchens of Sara Lee becomes the first national food manufacturer to provide the American consumer with what she's been craving, but couldn't find until now---Authentic, French-Style Croissants, conveniently located in the frozen bread and roll section of the grocer's freezer case.

The introduction of Sara Lee Authentic, French-Style Croissants will afford consumers the opportunity to enjoy a quality croissant without making a special trip to a local bakery. They will now be able to savor one of America's most recent food "discoveries" by merely adding one more item to their grocery list.

Large, buttery and flaky, with no preservaties, Sara Lee Croissants can be appreciated by every member of the family at any meal. Served with butter, preserves, with your favorite deli meats and cheeses, or with last night's leftovers, Croissants can highlight every menu occasion.

Available nationally in three flavors (All Butter, Wheat 'n Honey, and Cheese) and packaged four to a box, Sara Lee Authentic French-Style Croissants will have a suggested retail price of $1.79 per box.

Sara Lee, the national bakery whose name has long been synonymous with quality, has called upon the same technology used in producing its 108 layers of Danish dough to develop the delicate layering of butter and dough that is the secret to making a flaky, buttery crossiant.

Because of this delicate layering, the "shelf life" of a true croissant is very short--a matter of several hours. For this reason, many bakers will recommend that you freeze croissants that are not to be immediately consumed. However, by the time the consumer gets his "fresh" croissant home, the best moments of the croissant's life have passed from the time it was first baked and displayed in a bakery case.

Sara Lee Authentic French-Style Croissants are "fresh frozen" immediately after baking so that they will retain their just-baked qualities. Sara Lee Croissants allow the consumer to take the Croissant straight from the freezer (no thawing) and pop it in a 325°F. conventional oven for 9-11 minutes. This not only produces a tantalizing aroma in the kitchen, but provides the American homemaker a way to participate in the "baking" of the Croissant, without sacrificing themany hours (almost 2 days) to make a Croissant from scratch.

Sara Lee Authentic French-Style Croissants are expected to be in full distribution by early April.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q1073 ♡Q85 ◇K92 ♣863
The bidding has proceeded:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ◇ | Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass |
| 2 ♡ | Pass | ? | |

What action do you take?

A.—This is not the time to do anything unusual. Partner has shown a strong hand with his reverse bid but, since you have a minimum, you can do no more than take a simple preference to three diamonds. By the way, don't rate your hand as a dead minimum, even though you have a flat distribution. Your honors in partner's suits should be upgraded.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K1087 ♡K62 ◇K95 ♣643
The bidding has proceeded:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | 2 ♣ | 2 ♠ | Pass |
| 3 ♠ | Pass | ? | |

What action do you take?

A.—Even though you raised freely, you have nothing to be ashamed of. You have excellent trump support and your kings are undervalued in the point count. We would raise to four spades unhesitatingly.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ63 ♡KQ85 ◇95 ♣AJ7
The bidding has proceeded:

| East | South | West | North |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ◇ | Dble | Pass | 1 ♠ |
| 3 ◇ | ? | | |

What action do you take?

A.—You have a fine hand, but it is not quite good enough to merit another bid, particularly at this level. Bear in mind that you have forced partner to bid and that he might hold little or nothing. If he does have useful values, he is not barred from taking further action.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠6 ♡5 ◇KQ1087 ♣AJ7652
The bidding has proceeded:

| West | North | East | South |
|---|---|---|---|

What action do you take?

A.—The opponents are headed at least for game, and nothing in your hand suggests that they won't make it. However, your distribution suggests that you might have a cheap sacrifice, especially since the vulnerability is favorable. Bid three no trump. That can't be natural—it must be the Unusual No Trump, asking partner to choose between the unbid suits.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 ♡87642 ◇K754 ♣A106
The bidding has proceeded:

| North | East | South |
|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Dble | ? |

What action do you take?

A.—Don't worry about the fact that partner might have to play one spade doubled. The odds are that the opponents will remove to another contract. But should they leave the double in, you have some useful cards for partner. A pass is clearly indicated. For those of you who felt compelled to "rescue" partner by running to one no trump, your most likely accomplishment was to bail your opponents out of a hole.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠875 ♡AJ ◇K10954 ♣KJ8
The bidding has proceeded:

| North | East | South |
|---|---|---|

What action do you take?

A.—It is quite possible that you can make three no trump or four hearts, but it is also possible that you have no game. In a situation like this be an arch conservative—double and take any penalty you can get. After all, bridge is not an exact science. You will still be a 3-1 favorite to win the rubber.

Issue is survival

The great debate about the Reagan administration's defense spending becomes much less abstract and much more understandable with the issuance of the Pentagon's second edition of a study, "Soviet Military Power." The latest assessment of Soviet armaments is the joint product of the Defense Intelligence Agency and the Central Intelligence Agency and it carries the imprimatur of the entire U.S. intelligence community. Its revelations are altogether sobering.

Since the book was first published 18 months ago, the new edition indicates the Soviet Union has:

— Flight-tested long-range cruise missiles and two new land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles, one on the magnitude of the proposed American MX missile.

— Flight-tested the new Blackjack strategic bomber.

— Deployed two new aircraft designed for ground combat, the Su-24 and 25.

— Produced 1,900 new T-80 tanks, some of which are already being deployed in Eastern Europe.

The Typhoon-class submarine is described by Capt. John Moore, editor of the authoritative "Jane's Fighting Ships," as a "terrifying monster." The 30,000-ton sub, believed to be the largest ever built, has carried out successful multiple launchings of four missiles simultaneously (U.S. submarines can launch only one missile at a time).

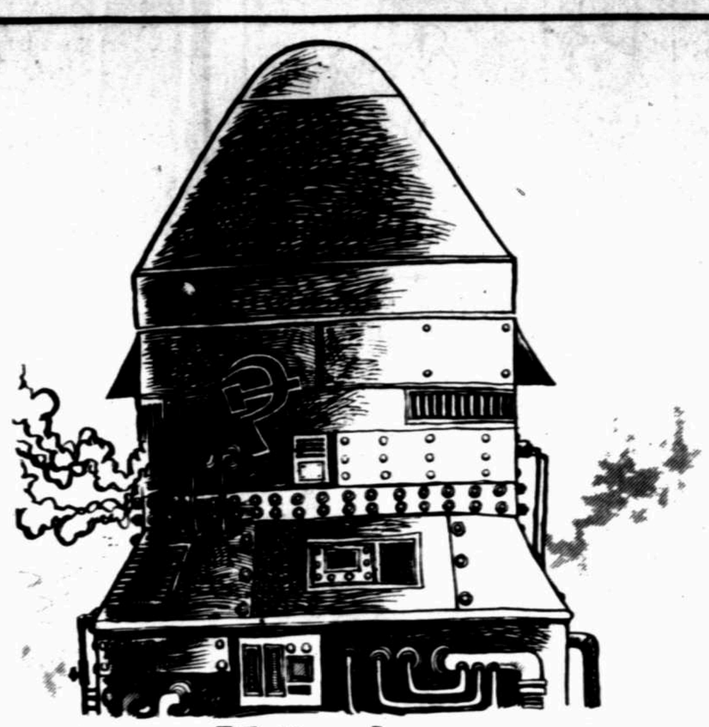

As though the Soviets' terrestrial war-making machine weren't unsettling enough, we are told here also of celestial military preparations. In space, the booklet said, "The development of a large manned space station by about 1990 is one of the Soviet goals of the new heavy-lift launcher systems...." The largest can lift 130,000 tons compared with the 30,000 tons of the comparable U.S. vehicle.

Frightening discrepancies are disclosed: 17,350 Soviet tanks against 6,400 U.S. tanks; 13,350 artillery and rocket launchers against 950 U.S.; 2,035 intercontinental ballistic missiles against 346 U.S.; 33 ballistic missile submarines against two U.S.; 6,100 tactical combat aircraft against 3,050 U.S.

Despite such differences in strength, the Soviet Union continues to forge ahead to even greater advantage by spending in terms of real U.S. dollars at least 50 percent more for military investment than does the United States.

No wonder Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger observed recently that the relentless growth of the Soviet Union's military power is designed to dominate the world. Nevertheless, he voiced guarded optimism. Even as he predicted "it will take us a good five years to regain the strategic and conventional strength ... to assure ... a credible and effective deterrent," he said "I think we have begun to catch up."

Unless we are willing to stay the course, as the president says, we never will catch up. The consequences of being too weak to resist communist aggression around the world hardly need elaboration. Suffice it to say, the real issue here is nothing less than national survival.

Another View: Prevent future shock

The OPEC oil producers won't be having a going-out-of-business sale, at least for now. With its 15 percent price cut, OPEC hopes that it has bought time to wait for the return of better days. Whether that will happen depends on three things: the intensity of competition from other oil producers, the fidelity of OPEC's 13 members to new price and production agreements, and how fast world oil demand is allowed to increase.

In ordinary times, most non-OPEC oil exporters would be only too happy to go along with the cartel's new $29 price. But these are not ordinary times. There are too few buyers and too much oil in the world today, and cash-hungry sellers are pursuing those buyers zealously. A week ago, the Soviet Union was cheerleading from the sidelines in behalf of a continued $34-a-barrel price from OPEC. Small wonder. The Soviets have been quietly stepping up their own oil exports to the West to get needed hard currency, and have cut their prices to $27 to $28 a barrel to make sure that they do.

Conservation and recession have been largely responsible for OPEC's severely reduced share of the oil market. Competition accounts for most of the rest. Such non-OPEC countries as the Soviet Union, Britain and Mexico that have come to depend on larger market shares will almost certainly do what has to be done to hold on to them.

Price-cutting probably will continue in OPEC's ranks as well. The bitterest fights in OPEC's London meeting came over production quotas. The final agreement calls for an apportioned total output of 17.5 million barrels a day — about 3.5 million barrels more than OPEC is now actually selling. Iran, until this week the noisiest OPEC advocate for maintaining the official $34-a-barrel price, has for more than a year been cheating on its partners by selling oil in the mid-$20 range. Will it, and other price-cutters, stop now? Possibly, for a time, in a last effort to salvage the power of the cartel. But few OPEC members are likely ready to sell less than their full permitted quotas of oil. If those sales can't be made at the official price, they will be met by bamboozling on that price.

By any reasonable measure, OPEC's too-little price cut should not halt pressures to bring oil prices down still more. The problem is that reason does not always rule when it comes to the oil market. The assumed but in fact non-existent dangers of world oil shortages in 1973-74 and again in 1979 led to a panicky rush by industrial countries to stock up on oil at virtually any price. That surge in demand paved the way for OPEC's two great oil-price shocks. The mistake should not now be repeated in any false belief that oil prices have bottomed out, and that restocking should proceed apace before they rise again. All the numbers suggest that oil prices ought to continue to sink lower. Let them.

But not too low, at least at the consumer level. Painful experience has shown that too-cheap oil is not good for long-term national economic health, because it creates an addiction that has to be exorbitantly paid for later on. Making sure through tax policy that oil stays priced no lower than the mid-$20 range would work no great hardship on consumers, but would protect against future domestic energy shortages and oil-price shocks. Presidential authority for such a policy already exists. It is time to get ready to use it.

CHARLEY REESE
Doll factory shows PLO wickedness

When the Israelis drove the Palestine Liberation Organization out of southern Lebanon, they found tons and tons of arms, ammunition and explosives. They also found something even more sinister — a doll factory.

Charley Reese

The dolls, according to Maj. Eran Gazit, a young Israeli intelligence officer, were children's dolls ordinary in every respect but one. When you twisted the heads on the dolls, they exploded.

I do not mean a "toy" explosion. I mean a flesh-shattering, blood-splattering real explosion. Documents confiscated by the Israelis revealed the PLO was planning to smuggle these dolls into Israel via Jordan and get them into stores where parents could buy them for their children.

Please pause a moment and consider the mentality of people who would boobytrap a child's toy. I am not talking about some crazed individual lurking in an attic. The decision to make these dolls was an organizational decision by the PLO and entailed elaborate plans, preparations and efforts on the part of many people.

It is frustrating to those of us who keep up with events in the Middle East to see others mix the PLO with their natural sympathy for the problems of the Palestinian Arabs. You have to chalk up a point for PLO propaganda. They are beginning to succeed in selling the idea that they are the legitimate spokesmen for all Palestinians.

In reality, they are not. The PLO is an umbrella organization of terrorist gangs, most of them sponsored by some Arab government. It was formed in Egypt in 1965 at the direction and under the guidance and control of Egyptian intelligence. It has never submitted itself to a plebescite. The PLO was designated "the sole legitimate spokesman for the Palestinian people" by the heads of other Arab governments.

The PLO operates as a terrorist gang, silencing Palestinians who disagree with it by murder and intimidation. Since 1978 alone, the PLO has murdered over 250 prominent Palestinian Arabs who had the courage to speak out against the organization and for some kind of peace with Israel.

The PLO played a primary role in helping the Ayatollah overthrow the Shah of Iran; it provided the bodyguards for the butcher of Uganda, Idi Amin; it has trained and participated in attacks with other terrorists from Ireland, Germany, France, Italy and Latin America; it is a servant of the Soviet Union, publicly supporting the Soviet Union in every forum, including arguing in favor of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan; and it has men fighting today in Central America.

It's no wonder, however, that Americans are confused about the PLO. Aside from sloppy reporting by some in the media, the Arab governments spend about $150 million a year on propaganda in the United States of which about $120 million is spent in support of the PLO. This does not include what is spent by oil companies and other big corporations which frequently support the Arabs. It compares, by the way, to a budget of $1 million spent by Israel and of about another $1 million by American Jewish organizations.

Part of that propaganda campaign is an attempt to paint Yasser Arafat as a moderate. That is a lie. Arafat is as moderate as Adolph Hitler and the Ayatollah Khomeini. Though Arafat frequently lies to Western newsmen and politicians, his record is clear in planning, ordering and applauding numerous heinous acts of terrorism.

The plight of Palestinian refugees kept in camps for over three decades by calloused Arab governments is a legitimate problem. The PLO, however, is not a legitimate organization. It is murder incorporated of the Middle East.

The next time you see Arafat's smiling face on television just remember the doll factory. Remember, too, you and every other member of a Western democracy are just as much an enemy of the PLO as those Israeli children Arafat intended to murder and maim. With such people there can be no compromise ever.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
Hoover smear tactics left stain

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department today will put into effect "clarifications" that will relax its guidelines for the investigation of suspected subversive groups. Among other things, the restrictions on undercover informants will be loosened.

Jack Anderson

Ironically, today also marks the opening of a trial that involves this very point: the FBI's handling of an informant involved in the slaying of a civil-rights activist, Viola Liuzzo, 18 years ago this week. Internal FBI documents on the case show that, if anything, the government's investigations of political groups should be under even tighter control — and the control should start right at the top.

Liuzzo, a 39-year-old white mother of five from Detroit, was killed on March 25, 1965, as she and a 19-year-old black man were driving between Selma and Montgomery, Ala., after the famous civil-rights march organized by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Four members of the Ku Klux Klan pulled up alongside the Liuzzo car on a lonely stretch of road and loosed a volley of shots. Mrs. Liuzzo was killed. Her companion was not hit; he survived by playing dead after the car ran off the road into a fence.

One of the four men in the Klan car was Gary Thomas Rowe, an FBI informant. His testimony later helped convict the three other men of federal civil-rights violations, but it was never established exactly who shot Mrs. Liuzzo.

The Liuzzo children are suing the government, claiming the FBI was negligent in its handling of its informant, Thomas Rowe.

My associates Tony Capaccio and Indy Badhwar have examined hundreds of internal FBI documents, which make clear that the FBI's behavior goes shockingly far beyond negligence.

Evidently aware of the embarrassment the FBI would suffer from the presence of its undercover informant in the murderers' car, Director J. Edgar Hoover marshaled the bureau's resources to blacken the dead woman's reputation. This came at a time when the bureau was also trying to smear King and find links between King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference and the Communist Party.

Within 24 hours of Mrs. Liuzzo's murder, a summary document prepared for top FBI officials reported: "Mrs. Liuzzo had puncture marks in her arm indicating recent use of a hypodermic needle."

Mrs. Liuzzo's husband, Anthony, a Teamsters Union business agent in Detroit, also caught a little of the FBI's mud. The day after the shooting, Hoover reported in a memo to his top subordinates that President Johnson had checked with him before making a condolence call to Liuzzo, "because our report indicated the man is a Teamster."

Hoover's memo continued: "I told the President I don't say the man has a bad character, but he is well known as a Teamster strongman, and on the woman's body was (sic) found numerous needle marks, indicating she had been taking dope, although we can't say that definitely because she is dead."

Hoover's memo concluded: "I said I would be inclined to have (White House aide Lee) White or someone like that talk to the husband rather than the President. The President said all right."

In fact, however, Johnson did call Liuzzo himself.

Hoover escalated his smear campaign against the dead woman when he talked with Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach that same day. As Hoover related in another memo to his subordinates:

"I stated the man himself (Liuzzo) doesn't have too good a background, and the woman had indications of needle marks in her arms where she had been taking dope; that she was sitting very, very close to the Negro in the car; that it had the appearance of a necking party."

Hoover's diligent efforts to depict Mrs. Liuzzo as a junkie were shot down by the autopsy report a week later, however. A telegram from the Mobile, Ala., FBI office to Hoover, dated April 1, 1965, stated:

"The autopsy report was turned over and shows no findings which would in any way explain the puncture marks apparently made by needle (sic) which appear in Liuzzo's arm. The medical examiner is being recontacted and this matter will be discussed with him specifically."

No evidence to substantiate the FBI director's charges ever materialized, however.

INSIDE REPORT:
Reagan aide wins a loss for MX

Rowland Evans

The proposed picture-taking session was called to advertise the bipartisan nature of the commission, appointed by Reagan to recommend a basing system for the new MX missile. The purpose was to publicize the fact that prominent Democrats, including former defense secretary Harold Brown, were helping Reagan resolve the politically-sensitive MX problem.

Robert Novak

But when Reagan and Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, the commission chairman, were ready to call in White House photographers, Deaver argued that front-page pictures connecting Reagan with the MX would hurt him with nuclear-freeze and peace lobbies. Angry commission members, astonished at what they viewed as a damaging surrender to politics, could scarcely believe it when Reagan let Deaver have his way. Without photographs, the effort to show the bipartisanship of the commission was undercut.

JANE'S WRITE-IN

Until Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne's unexpected announcement of a write-in campaign to keep her job, secret political polls showed Republican Bernard Epton running a surprisingly strong race against the Democratic nominee, Rep. Harold Washington, with the outside possibility of one of the greatest political upsets in history.

The surveys showed significant defections by white Democrats to Epton against the black congressman in the overwhelmingly Democratic city. Epton's total was nearing 40 percent, and the analysis showed how a well-financed campaign could reach 45 percent by April 12, Election Day. "We weren't sure how we could get any higher than that," one Epton adviser told us, "but when you're that close, anything can happen." Byrne's write-in effort, however, guarantees Washington's election, in the private opinion of the Epton camp.

A footnote: The warning from Washington's white advisers to keep the fiery Rev. Jesse Jackson out of sight for the general election campaign, lest he alienate white voters, was only partially heeded. Jackson has been considerably less visible than he was in the primary campaign but is still around more than Washington's advisers would prefer.

WARNING FROM JESSE

Sen. Jesse Helms, the conservative Republican leader, has written a strong letter to Secretary of State George Shultz warning that he will withdraw support from the administration's military aid package for El Salvador unless there is full disclosure of secret U.S.-Soviet agreements that are supposed to block "offensive" Soviet weapons for Cuba.

Helms' letter charges that the Soviets have recently sent Cuba two long-range Bear bombers equipped with bomb bays. The bombers, he told Shultz, appear to be a clear violation of the agreement between President John F. Kennedy and Moscow, following the 1962 Cuban missile crisis, that barred offensive Soviet weapons.

The senator's effort to tie the 1962 agreement to the new Salvadoran aid program is a new headache for Shultz. With Democrats lining up against aid, the administration can ill afford defections on the right.

A JERSEY PLOY?

With popular Democratic senator Bill Bradley a cinch for re-election in New Jersey next year, conservative Republican activists are promoting an unusual ploy: conservative economist Walter Williams, who is black, as the Republican nominee.

Nobody suggests that Williams would have the slightest chance against Bradley. But his conservative supporters believe his presence on the ticket could slow down the avalanche of black votes against the Republicans, perhaps saving the state for Ronald Reagan.

Williams lacks any real connections, political or otherwise, with New Jersey. Currently a professor of economics at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va., outside Washington, he is a native Philadelphian who has spent most of his life in Pennsylvania and California. Still, his supporters do not believe that is a major obstacle either to getting Williams' agreement or to his vote appeal among New Jersey blacks.

ADELMAN DEATH BLOW

Steadily declining chances for Senate confirmation of Kenneth Adelman to head the Arms Control and Disarmanent Agency (ACDA) may soon receive the death blow from Sen. Sam Nunn, the Senate's most influential Democrat on defense and arms control.

Nunn has confided to intimates that he probably will oppose Adelman, a step that would unquestionably doom the beleaguered nomination. His help would be a windfall for liberal opponents of President Reagan's arms control policies who have already targeted Adelman (currently deputy ambassador to the United Nations) for defeat.

That would pave the way for up to a dozen defense-oriented Democratic senators to join the liberals against Adelman. It might even compel President Reagan to withdraw the nomination to avert a humiliating defeat.

Go-Go's' star enjoys old-time Hollywood love story

VERO BEACH, Fla. – She has had it all at the tender young age of 24, the glamour and fame of the fast-paced rock and roll industy.

But on this hot spring day, she sits relatively unknown. A shocking pink headband frames her short blonde hair. The Florida sun burns her nose red and turns her legs bronze.

She sits there studying her man, Mike Marshall, as he learns the lessons of big-league baseball.

This is Holman Stadium, not the Hollywood Bowl. And rather than being adored by the multitudes, she studies the every move of her man, who is learning what the big leagues are all about.

It is the current version of Marilyn Monroe-Joe DiMaggio. A good, old-fashioned Hollywood love story.

Carlisle is lead singer of the Go-Gos, a flashy and fun all-female rock band with two platinum albums, a total of about four million units sold. Marshall, 23, is starting a bit more slowly. He is just happy to have been handed the starting right-field position by the Los Angeles Dodgers in their current youth movement.

The couple met by telephone, Marshall calling to ask her for tickets to her concert. They fell in love. So far, they live happily ever after.

Having toured for most of 1982, this is sabbatical time for Carlisle and the group. As she sings in her hit "Vacation," it was time to get away.

Off she went to reunite with Marshall, currently investing eight hours a day and more under the relentless supervision of manager Tom Lasorda and staff. But Carlisle can relate. It's sort of like a studio session in spikes.

"I want my career, and I know he wants his," she said. "I know he has to work hard here, and I won't get in the way. I'm really enjoying it. I used to watch the Cowboys."

Growing up in Thousand Oaks, Calif., she and her father would stop by the Dallas Cowboys training camp at Cal Lutheran College. "This is sort of what I expected."

In her profession, she also knows to expect life in the spotlight. But she is just another pretty face in the crowd at the Dodgertown spring games.

When the public address system blares one of the group's hits and her lively voice rings throughout the stadium, Belinda sheepishly bows her head. On vacation, anonymity is where it's at.

"I like it this way," she said. "I'm more comfortable when people don't know me. I may look outgoing on stage, but you find that a lot in entertainment. I think I'm quiet, withdrawn off-stage. You put up a guard against intrusions into your privacy."

Like from reporters. And fans. But she takes brief interruptions in stride. With that blowing smile, she signs an autograph for a couple of punk fans, one wearing a "Police" T-shirt, another wearing a black sport coat and fushia tie in 85-degree weather.

As for the relationship, it has lasted all of seven months, and neither admits even considering marriage.

"With me traveling and her touring all over the world last year, we really run up the long-distance phone bills," Marshall says. "We finally got MCI (reduced-rate phone service) to cut the costs."

Says Belinda: "We're both married to our careers."

Both of these talented entertainers are venturing into new fields – right field for Marshall, and acting for Carlisle.

Belinda will play the lead in the Long Beach, Calif. Civic Light Opera's upcoming version of Grease, then will start arrangements and pre-recording chores for the group's third album. The Go-Gos will tour again by the fall.

Marshall begins his tour in April. It is life out of suitcases, and their days together are precious and few.

"In some ways that's nice," says Belinda. "We don't take each other for granted."

Test finds glaucoma early

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — A new way of testing detects glaucoma before symptoms develop and may provide clues to the cause of the eye disease, doctors at an ophthalmologists' convention report.

Dr. Maurice E. Langham of Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine said Wednesday the "simple, straightforward test" takes about five minutes and has proven 100 percent accurate in ruling out glaucoma.

His team's research, along with new methods of looking at the circulation of blood within the eye, may give new information about what causes glaucoma, Langham told the American Society of Contemporary Ophthalmology.

When pressure builds up within the eyeball, a patient loses vision at the outer edges. Current tests measure pressure, but Langham's new method checks peripheral vision.

After measuring peripheral vision, he said, pressure should be applied briefly to the eye's outer surface.

DEAR ABBY

Man wants 'new' old wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We have been married for over 40 years, and I am not happy at the moment. I am a fairly attractive, sports-minded, golf- and tennis-playing male of 69. My wife (I'll call her "Bernice") is 60, plays nine holes of golf twice a week while riding in a golf cart and says that's enough exercise for her.

Bernice has premature wrinkling all over her lovely face. I find this repugnant. At my insistence we saw a plastic surgeon who told her she was an ideal candidate for successful cosmetic surgery, but she wants no part of such an operation because she is "afraid" of surgery. Her mother was a psychotic who refused to stay above the first floor of any hotel, and I'm afraid Bernice has inherited some of her mother's irrational fears.

Bernice is a good wife and mother. It's probably too late in our lives to make any changes, and I don't really want to, but I would like her to go to exercise classes and build up her stamina so we could play 18 holes together and enter the club mixers. I also want her to have cosmetic surgery. I almost forgot another unattractive feature. She has a lower stomach protuberance that I find physically repugnant. She blames it on having had children, but I've seen women with figures like teen-agers who've had more children than she's had.

I've offered to take aerobic dancing or join an exercise club with her to help build up her stamina and improve her figure, but she spurns the idea.

Am I asking too much of her? — NOT CONTENT IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR NOT: Yes. No one should be asked to submit to cosmetic surgery to please another. And although an exercise program would improve your wife's stamina and figure, your reasons for pushing it seem more selfish than loving.

Since you admittedly are "not content," I suggest you seek therapy to learn why you find your mate of over 40 years "physically repugnant" because of a protruding tummy and a "lovely" time-etched face.

DEAR ABBY: We're a family of "talkers." Most of us are also sympathetic listeners — with the exception of this one aunt. She calls me and talks for an hour without letting me finish one sentence!

If I call her to tell her something about myself, she'll listen for maybe half a minute, then she interrupts with, "Not to change the subject, but ..." and she gets back to her favorite subject — herself.

Everyone in the family says she does the same thing to them. She uses us only as an audience for her monologues.

She's really a good person, and I do love her, but she only wants to talk — not listen. How can this problem be solved to keep peace in the family? — TIRED OF LISTENING

DEAR TIRED: Tell her the truth — that you really do love her, but that you also need to be listened to, and you feel hurt and frustrated when she doesn't allow you to talk. If you can't say this to her, put it in a letter, but do get the message to her. Don't be critical or judgmental — just state the facts. She will respect you for it. And she may talk less and listen more.

Mating ends, waiting begins at National Zoo

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mating is over and the waiting has begun at the National Zoo.

After four days of varying degrees of togetherness, giant pandas Ling-Ling and Hsing-Hsing are settling back into normal routine while zoo officials are watching the calendar.

If all the right things happen, Ling-Ling will give birth between late July and early September to the first panda cub born in the United States.

Hsing-Hsing, however, would have good reason to ask Ling-Ling whether the cub is his.

After seven seasons of relative disinterest, the two pandas finally mated last Friday. But to increase the chance of success, zoo officials artificially inseminated Ling-Ling twice during the weekend with sperm from Chia-Chia, her onetime suitor.

Zoo officials "don't care" who the father might be, Dr. Devra Kleiman, head of zoological research, said Sunday after Ling-Ling's annual heat, or time of conception, ended for 1983.

Officials said it may be possible to establish the father's identity through genetic tests when the hoped-for panda cub is several years old.

Except for Friday's mating, Ling-Ling and Hsing-Hsing displayed their usual moods — disinterest and hostility — for much of the time they were together. In fact, Ms. Kleiman said, Saturday's meeting ended in "a fight in midmorning."

Zoo officials say they are optimistic about getting a baby panda.

"We are encouraged because we had a natural mating and two artificial inseminations," Ms. Kleiman said.

Army helicopter crashes into sea off Virginia coast

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — An Army helicopter crashed into the Atlantic Ocean about 23 miles off the Virginia coast, and rescuers searched today for five missing crew members, an Army spokesman said.

No survivors from the Sunday crash had been found, said Maj. Bill Mulvey, an Army public affairs officer.

The wreckage of the CH-47 Chinook, one of three on a training mission, remained afloat this morning, Mulvey said.

The Navy and Coast Guard search crews were having a hard time, he added.

"I understand there's severe weather there (at the scene), severe thunderstorms," he said. "With the darkness last night and now the thunderstorms, that's hampering operations."

The Coast Guard cutter Point Huron and the USS Edenton, based in Virginia Beach, were on the scene today, Mulvey said.

Plans for prison pit friend against friend in tiny town

CLALLAM BAY, Wash. (AP) — Plans for a medium-security prison near this tiny logging town have pitted friend against friend as some push for new jobs while others try to preserve the area for "beachcombers, kayakers and clam-diggers."

Both supporters and opponents claim to have the backing of most of the town's 600 residents. Some feel that no matter who wins, Clallam Bay will never be the same.

"It's to the point where people won't even speak to each other," says prison supporter Bill Burrow, 49. "It really is hard on the community."

"It's pitted friend against friend," says Mark Thomas, leader of a group that has filed suit to stop construction of the $42 million prison. He says he has received anonymous threatening letters.

Opponents say the town's business community misled state officials into believing that most residents want the prison. Supporters claim that the opposition is being mounted by a mere handful of retirees or those opposed to growth.

The lines are so sharply drawn that supporters and opponents drink at different bars, shop at different stores and bank at different banks.

The prison is "one of those issues that people don't want to talk about any more," says Rodna Hess, a nine-year resident. "My next-door neighbor and I don't discuss it because we want to remain friends."

Newsom Baker, whose son, Don, lobbied hard for the prison, closed his grocery store after anti-prison partisans organized a boycott. The elder Baker says the boycott had less effect on the store's closure than did the shut-down 18 months ago of the local Crown Zellerbach Co. lumber mill.

But Robert Bowlby, co-chairman of the Concerned Citizens of Clallam County, which raised $10,000 to press the anti-prison suit in Thurston County Superior Court in Olympia, said the store's closing shows that most townspeople oppose the prison.

Bowlby said an environmental impact statement for the project contains major flaws and cost estimates are unrealistically low because of high construction costs in remote areas.

Bowlby said he opposes the prison because he feels Clallam Bay, located near the northwestern tip of the picturesque Olympic Peninsula, should be reserved for "beachcombers, kayakers and clam diggers."

nation in brief

Steel industry slow to recover

WASHINGTON (AP) — The troubled U.S. steel industry may take a long time to recover and many unemployed steelworkers may never get their jobs back, an economist says.

"One can only see sort of a slow retrenchment," economist Robert Crandall of the Brookings Institution said of the industry. "The long-run prospects for being a steelworker are simply not great in some locations."

"It's safe to predict that steel production in Pennsylvania is going to decline and steel employment (there) is going to decline," he said.

The nation's first steel mills rose a century ago in Bethlehem, Baltimore and Pittsburgh, but their age and location now make them particularly vulnerable to foreign competition.

Radio stations lobby Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several hundred operators of daytime radio stations are planning a lobbying blitz here this week in search of longer operating hours.

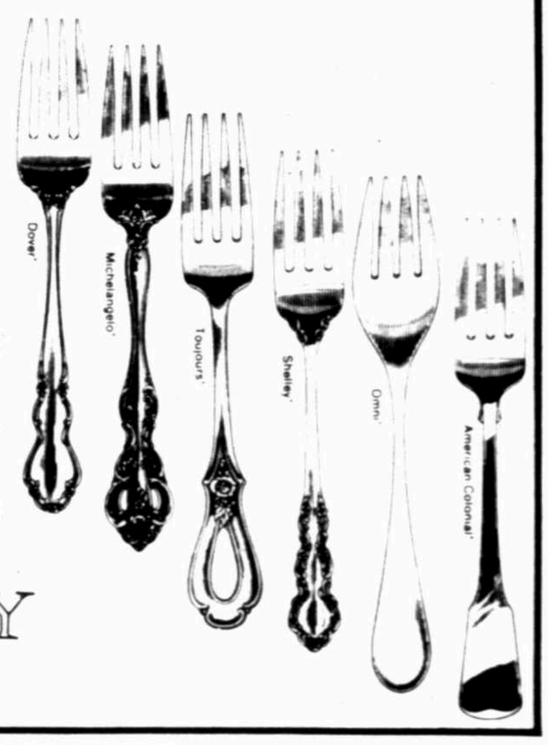

The campaign is designed to convince Congress and the Federal Communications Commission that millions of Americans are being denied local radio service because of outdated technical rules and policies, says Gregg P. Skall, the Washington attorney for the Daytime Broadcasters Association.

UNLV, Missouri join sidelined Top 10s

By Associated Press

North Carolina State and Iowa knocked Nevada-Las Vegas and Missouri out of the NCAA basketball tournament Sunday, further thinning the ranks of Top Ten teams still alive in the battle for the national championship.

Sixteen teams advanced to regional semifinals with victories on Saturday and Sunday, but No. 6 Nevada-Las Vegas, No. 7 UCLA and 10th-ranked Missouri will be among the 36 teams who are going home disappointed.

Thurl Bailey's rebound basket with four seconds left gave North Carolina State, a 10-time loser ranked 16th in the nation after winning the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, a 71-70 upset of Nevada-Las Vegas in a West Regional game at Corvallis, Ore.

North Carolina State will face Utah, which upset UCLA on Saturday, in Ogden, Utah, Thursday. The Utes have an 18-13 record, which is more losses than any of the final 16 teams.

Greg Stokes scored 22 points as Iowa easily handled Missouri 77-63 in the Midwest Regional at Louisville to advance to the next round against No. 13 Villanova.

In other games Sunday, St. John's beat Rutgers 66-55 and Ohio State defeated Syracuse 79-74 in the East Regional, Memphis State ousted Georgetown 66-57 in the Midwest, Louisville toppled Tennessee 70-57 and Indiana whipped Oklahoma 63-49 in the Mideast and Boston College stopped Princeton 51-42 in the West.

Third-ranked St. John's, the top seed in the East, got 24 points from Chris Mullin to defeat Rutgers despite a shaky first half at Hartford, Conn. The Redmen fell behind 26-19 in the first half while shooting only 39.4 percent in the first 15 minutes, but then went ahead 29-28 at halftime although Rutgers had hit nearly 74 percent from the floor.

In the first game of the East doubleheader, Tony Campbell scored eight points on rebound baskets in a span of 7:11 in the second half to lead Ohio State over Syracuse.

Before Iowa beat Missouri, Keith Lee hit eight of 11 shots from the field and finished with 28 points and 15 rebounds to lead 17th-ranked Memphis State past No. 20 Georgetown in the other game at Louisville. Georgetown's sophomore star, Patrick Ewing, had 24 points and nine rebounds, but he was in foul trouble for much of the game and also missed four dunk shots.

In the Mideast doubleheader at Evansville, Ind., Charles Jones and Lancaster Gordon scored 18 points apiece to lead No. 2 Louisville past Tennessee, the 30th victory in 34 games for the Cardinals, including the last 14 in a row. An 11-2 spurt midway through the second half put Louisville in control after Tennessee cut a seven-point halftime deficit to 45-43.

Fifth-ranked Indiana got 22 points on 10-of-17 shooting from Randy Wittman and effectively used delay tactics in the second half to beat Oklahoma.

After the North Carolina State upset of Nevada-Las Vegas, Boston College held Princeton without a field goal in the first 14½ minutes of the second half to turn a close game to its advantage. Jay Murphy scored 17 points for the 11th-ranked Eagles, who led 41-30 after the Tigers missed their first 12 shots from the floor after halftime.

Bailey, a 6-foot-11 senior, tipped in the rebound of a missed 20-footer by Dereck Whittenburg to give North Carolina State its fifth successive close victory.

"When it came off the rim I tried to tip it in the first time," Bailey said. "It rolled off and there were a couple of hands on it, so I grabbed it and, as I was falling back, I just threw it off the board and it dropped."

North Carolina State had three close victories in winning the ACC Tournament, then got by Pepperdine 69-67 in double overtime Friday night in a first-round game.

"We've really hung in there the last five games," said Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano. "Now we're on a roll and who's to say what's going to happen."

Iowa Coach Lute Olsen said he was more impressed with his team's 64-59 victory over Utah State on Friday that with the Hawkeyes' upset of Missouri.

"We played just as well Friday, but we just didn't shoot well (Sunday)," Olsen said. "If you don't shoot well, you're not going to look good. But the win is all that matters."

Hey, where's your heartbeat?

(First of two parts)

I hadn't been a hospital patient since I was 18, which must be all of 15 or 20 years ago. I thought they'd never let me out that time, so when the subject came up again this time, I had to be convinced.

I wasn't so sure I wasn't being conned into another long seige this time. After all, all I had to go on was Mrs. claim that I passed out at the breakfast table a few Sundays back.

I remember it quite clearly. I was looking out the window into the backyard. Things were getting a little bit strange. But that had happened periodically before. My concentration was so complete that the next thing I knew the Mrs. was holding my head.

"I SAW IT happening and got over just in time to keep you from hitting the floor," she alleged.

When I asked why she had spilled my coffee, she said, "I didn't. You did."

It was my word against hers. I have no recollection of passing out, but she set up a doctor's appointment and the upshot was that I wound up wearing what amounts to a portable EKG for 24 hours. It's an electronic box that straps to the hip with wire leads attached to several areas of the upper torso.

It's a little bit like skiing with a camera case on your hip. Daily activities are carried on as usual, only every time you do something different, a lethal looking red plunger on the box is pressed and the activity noted in a diary.

WHILE LIFE continued as normal, it did present complications. I decided not to jog that day. That night, the Midland Symphony had Fodor scheduled at Lee and problems were envisioned about bringing what looked like a tape recorder into the auditorium. How would this contraption be explained?

What would happen. I would be challenged at the door. I would explain that it wasn't really a tape recorder and point to the wire leading under my shirt. The usherette would make a scene by summoning help. He would say, noting the wire, "that's worse than a recording, you're trying to memorize the show."

I would solve the situtation by ripping open my shirt to display the suspicious looking electronic leads and declare menacingly, "Okay, if I press the red plunger, we all know what happens."

Presto, instant and uncontested admittance.

MY SCENARIO for the emergency was never needed. No one even glanced at my "devious device", but it gives you an idea of the problems involved.

I felt great the day of the EKG test and was convinced it was all a waste of time. Sure, I had had a murmur after contracting scarlet fever in the Navy, but that was WW II and I figured I had just about outgrown it.

In college after practice, all the med student" on the team used to listen and compliment me on my fine murmur and then spoil it by telling me I was crazy to be playing ball. But as the years went on, examining physicians seemed to have difficulty detecting the irregularity with their stethoscopes.

The report came back that the heart was stopping for several seconds at a time. I shudder to think of what it might have read on a bad day. The recommendation, a pacemaker.

HOSPITALS have changed a lot since I was 18. For one thing, back then, all the doctors and nurses were older. Now they are all younger. Nobody called me "kid" anymore, and after sick call I didn't have to get out of bed and swab the decks.

At Midland Memorial, it was as though there had been some mistake and put me in officer's sick bay.

Realization of just how much times had changed came before ever reaching the hospital, in Dr. Shelton Viney's office, when arrangements were being made for the operation. Dr. Viney took one look at my wife and said, "I know you. I used to come over to your house and play when I was a kid."

Gulp.

He then explained that one small incision would be made and two wires floated to the heart, one to the ventricle and the other to atrial. Then, another slightly larger incision would be made and the pacemaker inserted just under the skin and tissue. It would take anywhere from 45 minutes to two hours and 45 minutes, depending how much difficulty was encountered hooking the wires to the heart. It wouldn't even require putting me under. "We'll probably keep you in the hospital a couple of days to check to be sure that everything is functioning properly."

Rebels share district lead

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee Rebels are co-leaders in the District 4-5A baseball race at 2-0 and, just as good, face three straight home field contests, two of which are league games.

The Midland High Bulldogs, 1-1, aren't quite so fortunate, looking at three travel days.

Lee hosts 0-1 Abilene High Tuesday while the Bulldogs are in Abilene to take on 1-1 Cooper. Elsewhere, co-leader Big Spring is at Odessa High and Permian is at San Angelo. All games are 4 p.m.

THE REBELS improved an opening day 12-7 victory over Odessa High and Saturday's 10-6 win over San Angelo. For one, they nearly double their hitting, 11 compared to six against OHS. A major improvement has been shortstop Barry Blackwell with a .500 batting average in 4-5A play, including a home run and a pair of doubles.

With Rob Walker, Steve Woodlee, Brian Willis and Darren Webb also making sound connections with the ball, a pre-season worry of Coach Ernie Johnson's about hitting seems to be working itself out, with .22 in two games for a .250 team average.

Pitching also seems to be improving, especially in the strikeout category. Against OHS, Craig Ray and Kerry Robertson combined for 10 and then teamed up for 15 against San Angelo. The K's nearly double the 13 walks.

MIDLAND HIGH seems to have taken a small step backward. Against Permian on opening day, the Bulldogs were able to bring runners home when they reached scoring position, collecting eight hits in an 8-3 victory.

However, Big Spring isn't Odessa Permian. The Steers were picked by both coaches, Johnson and MHS' Tim Whalen, as favorites to win the 4-5A because of a strong returning neucleus of starters and a three-man pitching staff from last year.

"When we get runners in scoring position against Big Spring, we got to plate 'em," said Whalen before the game.

Sound philosophy. In actuality...?

Of eight Bulldog hitters to reach base, four by hits, four by walks, none scored as Adam Rodriquez pitched a 6-0 shutout.

One area hurting the Bulldogs at the moment is a lack of pitching depth. Going into district, Midland High had two strong hurlers in Jose Carrasco and Tim Davis.

In the third inning against Permian, Davis slid into second base in an attempt to break up a double play and it cost him a seperated right shoulder. Losing Davis not only hurts the Dawgs on the mound, but at the plate as well. When healthy he has .400 potential including long-ball power.

13 of seeds still in NCAA

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

Utah, North Carolina State and Iowa notwithstanding, the NCAA basketball tournament resumes Thursday with 13 of the remaining 16 teams just where the selection committee figured they'd be.

Most of the big surprises this year were in the first round, before the seeded teams played. Once they did, only three failed to justify their seeding — UCLA and Nevada-Las Vegas, picked 2-3 in the West and Missouri, the No.2 seed in the Midwest. They'll be replaced by Utah, North Carolina State and Iowa.

It's the second straight year the selection committee has been 13 for 16, which makes the people who rank the teams and take the abuse quite happy.

"The committee has never gone step-by-step with the computer," says Gene Corrigan, the Notre Dame athletic director and a member of the five-member selection committee. "They are just one advisory source."

The NCAA's computer registers won-lost records; opponents' won-lost records and the won-lost records of opponents' opponents.

It doesn't register injuries. So it didn't think much of Indiana, because the Hoosiers lost three in a row after Ted Kitchel was injured. Regrouping, the Hoosiers finished strong and the committee, recognizing that, placed them second in the Mideast.

North Carolina State suffered most of its 10 losses while Dereck Whittenburg was out with a broken foot. Whittenburg came back, the Wolfpack won the Atlantic Coast Confernce tournament, and ended up beating Pepperdine and upsetting UNLV.

The computer doesn't register inconsistency, but the committee does, selecting Iowa, a Top Ten team early in the year, on the basis of a tough Big Ten schedule. Utah, the third outsider, made it by coming on strong to tie for the Western Athletic Conference title although it had only a 16-13 record entering the tournament.

Last year, the computer had Georgetown ranked only twelfth. But the committee seeded the Hoyas first in the West, fourth nationally and they went on to finish runner-up to North Carolina.

This year, the selections were perfect, with teams seeded 1 through 4 becoming semifinalists in both the East and Mideast regions.

The East is left with No.1 St. John's vs. No.4 Georgia and No.2 North Carolina vs. No.3 Ohio State.

The the Mideast has No.1 Louisville vs. No.4 Arkansas and No.2 Indiana vs. No.3 Kentucky.

Iowa, the seventh seed in the Midwest, is the only outsider there, going up against Villanova, rated third. Top-seeded Houston plays No.4 Memphis State.

The West has Utah, seeded tenth and North Carolina State, sixth, facing each other while No.1 Virginia meets No.4 Boston College.

Stanford rules NCAA waves

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Stanford is the new ruler of women's college swimming, while senior Tammy Thomas of the University of Kansas has emerged as America's best sprinter.

Thomas added to her credentials Saturday night when she set an American record in the 100-yard freestyle with her time of 48.40 seconds. She bettered Texas' Jill Sterkel's record of 48.61 set last year.

"It means she's the fastest swimmer in America and I think she's the fastest in the world," said Kansas Coach Gary Kempf.

Thomas was the individual star of the three-day NCAA championship meet which concluded Saturday at the Bob Devaney Sports Center in Lincoln. She went home with two American records. The first came Thursday in the preliminaries of the 50 freestyle with a time 22.28, which she lowered to 22.17 in the finals. Thomas had again topped Sterkel, the only active American swimmer who has won an Olympic gold medal.

Seven NCAA records were set during the meet. Two fell Saturday night, with Thomas taking the 100 and Cal-Berkeley freshman Mary T. Meagher taking the 200 butterfly in 1:56.71. She broke the previous mark of 1:57.23 set in 1982 by Tracy Caulkins of Florida, who finished third. Southern California's Michelle Ford took second in the event.

Stanford claimed the team title by downing defending national champion, Florida, 418½-389½. The Cardinals led the Gators throughout the meet, although Florida pushed hard for a comeback during the finals. Defending AIAW champion Texas placed third with 314 points, followed by Southern California at fourth with 223 points. Miss Thomas helped Kansas to seventh place.

Bandits hijack Walker

By The Associated Press

The Tampa Bay Bandits rolled to their third straight win Sunday, embarrassing the New Jersey Generals 32-9 before the league's largest crowd ever and holding Herschel Walker to 39 yards in his home debut.

John Reaves threw for 255 yards and three touchdowns as the Bandits remained one of the league's two unbeaten teams. The Generals' only touchdown came with 50 seconds left as 53,370 at Giants' Stadium booed from the outset.

Saturday night, it was the Oakland Invaders 33-27 over the Michigan Panthers and the Arizona Wranglers 21-14 over the Los Angeles Express.

On Monday night, the unbeaten Philadelphia Stars go for their third straight at Birmingham against the Stallions.

Walker was completely stymied by a defense that overpowered New Jersey's young offensive line. Tampa Bay also sacked starter Bobby Scott four times and intercepted him once.

In Chicago, Denver overcame near-blizzard conditions to win its first game. Johnson's touchdown capped the Gold's only sustained drive of the game canceled out John Roveto's 38-yard field goal that gave the Blitz a 13-10 lead.

The game left both teams at 1-2 and deprived Chicago Coach George Allen of his first win at Soldier Field, where he never won in NFL head coaching stints.

In Boston, the Breakers capitalized on two bad snaps by Washington in the final five minutes to beat the Federals. The first, over the head of punter Steve Hoffman, came with Washington leading 16-9 and gave the Breakers the ball on the 1-yard line. Dwayne Crump, who gained 130 yards in 15 carries, plunged over to tie the game.

The next went over the head of Obed Ariri, lined up for a 42-yard field goal attempt for Washington and the Breakers took over on the Federals' 35.

Johnnie Walton then passed 13 yards to Dwayne Strozier and nine yards to Richard Crump to set up Mazzetti's game-winning kick.

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas pitcher Mike Capel threw a one-hit shutout in the nightcap of a double header as the Longhorns swept Texas Wesleyan 4-3 and 7-0 Sunday in non-conference college baseball.

In the opener, Texas Wesleyan scored three runs in the top of the seventh off starter Calvin Schiraldi to send the game into extra innings. Texas scored the winning run in the bottom of the ninth on a bases-loaded sacrifice fly by catcher Jeff Hearron.

Texas raised its record to 27-5 while the Rams fell to 17-11.

Washingon is for real

NHL Roundup

By Associated Press

Are the Washington Capitals for real? After the past week, there probably aren't many doubters left.

The Capitals are in their ninth year of life and, in two weeks, will head into the playoffs for the first time. They definitely are not intimidated by that prospect. In fact, after knocking off the NHL's top two teams in the overall standings, the Capitals are on fire.

Thursday night, they stopped the Bruins 2-1 in Boston. On Sunday, they went into Philadelphia and stymied the Flyers 3-2 to remain tied with the New York Islanders for second place in the Patrick Division.

Bengt Gustafsson had a goal and two assists for Washington, which beat Philadelphia the last three times the teams met this season.

"Consistency, that's what we've been working for, and now it's starting to show," said goalie Pat Riggin, who made 29 saves. "Like tonight, we had a 3-2 lead, but we didn't sit on the one-goal lead. We've done that in the past and it's backfired a couple of times."

Bruins 4, Rangers 0

Pete Peeters upped his league lead in shutouts with his eighth, facing 16 shots, few of them dangerous. Luc Dufour scored two goals for Boston, which clinched the Adams Division title.

Canadiens 7, Sabres 4

Larry Robinson and Mark Napier both scored two goals as Montreal avoided a weekend sweep at the hands of Buffalo. The defeat pushed the Sabres back to five points behind Montreal in the race for second place in the Adams.

Jets 3, Nordiques 2

Winnipeg moved three points ahead of Los Angeles in the battle for the last playoff spot in the Smythe Division when defenseman Tim Watters scored with 1:52 remaining. Watters picked up a loose puck in the slot and fired a hard slapshot that got past Clint Malarchuk, who made 50 saves in the Nordiques' goal. Quebec has lost four in a row.

Black Hawks 7, Maple Leafs 3

Al Secord became only the second player in Black Hawks history to score 50 goals in a season — Bobby Hull was the other — when he connected twice for Chicago. Secord also had two assists, while Denis Savard had four assists and defenseman Doug Wilson had a goal and two setups.

Flames 2, Whalers 2

Calgary completed a disappointing trip through New England by tying the woeful Whalers after knotting Boston 2-2 on Saturday. Kevin Lavallee scored with 12:34 remaining in the game on a 50-foot slapshot to tie it.

Canucks 6, Red Wings 3

Thomas Gradin had two goals and Stan Smyl set up three more as Vancouver won its seventh in a row at home and moved within three points of second-place Calgary in the Smythe and a point in front of Winnipeg.

Rogers wins New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Bill Rogers was concerned when "it kind of got close out there," but he wound with a $72,000 winner's check and rediscovered victory on the pro golf tour.

Rogers broke a long dry spell Sunday with a 3-stroke victory in the $400,000 New Orleans Open — his first tournament triumph since 1981 when he was the Professional Golfers' Association Golfer of the Year.

But he had to survive a severe challenge by David Edwards to win.

"I had just made bogey on 12, and David Edwards made a great putt on 13," Rogers recalled.

That putt gave Edwards a birdie and cut Rogers' lead to a single stroke.

But Edwards missed a putt for par on 14, taking a bogey. Rogers rolled his in for a birdie, then birdied the next hole before taking bogeys on 16 and 17.

"If there was anything I was unhappy with, it was the way I finished," Rogers said. "But it came out all right."

Rogers shot 69 to finish with a 72-hole total of 274, 14 under par.

Edwards shot 70 over the par-72, 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course. to wind up tied for second with Jay Haas and Vance Heafner.

Greg Norman, the hottest golfer in the world over the past month, was another stroke back at 278. Norman came off victories in the Australian Masters and Hong Kong Open to finish second at Bay Hill last week.

Like old times for Kathy

KAANAPALI, Hawaii (AP) — It must have seemed like old times for LPGA veteran Kathy Whitworth as she sank a putt worth $1,000 per foot to birdie the 18th hole and win the Women's Kemper Open.

"When I was winning a lot several years ago, I never thought about anything but the shot I was taking at the time," the 43-year-old Whitworth said following her victory Sunday.

The Hall of Famer now has won 84 events in 24 years on her way to earning more than $1.2 million in prize money. She has been honored as Player of the Year seven times.

Whitworth came into the final round tied for third place, three stokes off the pace. She ended the 72-hole, $200,000 tournament at 4-under-par 288, one stroke ahead of Dale Eggeling. Both fired 4-under-par 69s Sunday.

Donna Caponi and Stephanie Farwig tied for third place at 1-under-par 291, while JoAnne Carner, Yuko Moriguchi, and Jan Stephenson had to settle for fourth place at 292.

Healthy Toney sparks 76ers

NBA Roundup

By Associated Press

With the Doctor in sick bay, Andrew Toney is keeping healthy the 76ers' chances of being the winningest team in NBA tion history.

Toney scored 39 points Sunday night, including 20 in the final period, to bring Philadelphia back from a 12-point deficit to a 121-119 decision over the Detroit Pistons. It was Philadelphia's seventh victory in a row and the 76ers are 57-9 on the season. They need to win 13 of their final 16 games to set an NBA record of 70 victories this season.

"I figured I was the man who had to get the job done for us tonight" said Toney. "I've been the hot guy for us with Julius out."

Indeed, since Julius "Dr J" Erving was sidelined with a sprained right wrist — he's expected back Tuesday night in New York — Toney has thrown in 42, 33, 24 and 39 points.

Blazers 118, Nuggets 106

Portland snapped Denver's nine-game home-court winning streak thanks to staunch defense by Mychal Thompson, who held Alex English, the NBA's leading scorer, to 2-for-12 shooting and blanked English in the final period. Thompson also scored 21 points.

Kings 128, Warriors 114

Mike Woodson's 30 points and 28 by Eddie Johnson led the Kings, who snapped a five-game skid. Joe Barry Carroll had 31 for Golden State, which continued its slide — five straight losses and 12 of the last 14.

Lakers 117, Mavericks 110

The Lakers clinched a playoff spot as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 23 points. The Lakers grabbed a 17-point halftime lead only to see Dallas rally and take a 101-100 lead with 7:10 to go. But Los Angeles reeled off an 11-2 string to take command.

Bucks 107, Nets 92

Brian Winters scored a season-high 30 points but the Bucks had to rally after blowing a 22-point, third-quarter lead. After trailing 73-51, the Nets scored 15 straight points. Milwaukee led 80-71 entering the final period, but the Nets scored nine in a row to tie it. Then Charlie Criss came off the bench to ignite the Bucks.

Sonics 128, Bulls 116

David Thompson had 29 points, including 16 in the third period to pace the Sonics, who have won six in a row and are one game ahead of fourth-place Portland in the Pacific Division.

Celtics 90, Cavaliers 79

Larry Bird scored seven points in the last two minutes and the Celtics survived despite playing poorly.

"This is a difficult time and we're not playing good basketball," said Bird. "We're not worried about Philadelphia or the teams behind us. We just have to play every game as if we're in the playoffs now."

Reds' Redus ends slump with grand slam homer

By The Associated Press

Gary Redus broke out of his slump in style and Dave Concepcion kept right on, hitting with style in baseball's preseason.

Redus, who will be the Reds' leadoff hitter on opening day, slugged a grand slam homer Sunday in Cincinnati's 9-3 exhibition victory over the Philadelphia Phillies. Concepcion had three hits, including a solo homer, and his two runs batted in gave him eight in nine games.

RIGHT-HANDER Mario Soto, who will pitch the National League opener against the Atlanta Braves April 4, hurled six innings to get the victory. He walked one and struck out five while allowing one run and four hits.

"I was kind of worried about myself," said Soto, who had a bad outing against St. Louis last week. "Nobody likes to pitch that way."

There were two other grand slams hit in exhibition games Sunday. Rookie outfielder Mike Young hit one for Baltimore in its 9-4 victory over Minnesota. Young hit his first homer off the spring in the sixth off struggling left-hander Jack Hobbs, who also gave up a solo shot to Ken Singleton and issued four walks.

A more familiar name than Bellas or Young is George Brett, who hit a grand slam, a two-run homer and drove in another run to lead Kansas City to a 16-10 victory over Pittsburgh. Brett was 4-5.

CLAUDELL Washington belted a pair of homer and a single and knocked in three runs as Atlanta used a 16-hit attack to blast Los Angeles 12-1. The Braves broke open the game with seven runs in the seventh inning against relievers Dave Stewart and Tom Niedenfuer, sending 12 batters to the plate. Chris Chambliss also had three hits for the Braves.

Dwayne Murphy had three doubles and drove in two runs, and Davey Lopes belted a double and a two-run homer as Oakland routed Seattle 9-3.

Montreal beat Texas 9-1 thanks to Tim Wallach's two-run homer which capped a five-run fifth inning. Starting pitcher Steve Rogers limited the Rangers to one hit over the first six innings.

Steve Kemp's two-run double got the Yankees started on their way to a 9-1 victory over the Mets. Kemp's two hits raised his preseason batting average to .438.

TONY BERNAZARD'S two-out single in the eighth drove in Jerry Hairston, who had pinch-hit a double, for the game's only run as the White Sox edged St. Louis 1-0. LaMarr Hoyt and Kevin Hickey combined on the shutout.

Rookie Mike Brown's leadoff homer in the third inning snapped a 1-1 tie and California beat Cleveland 3-1. Marshall Edwards rapped three hits and Ben Oglivie had a two-run single to pace Milwaukee over San Diego 7-2.

Max Venable drove a shot over the head of Cubs outfielder Leon Durham for an inside-the-park homer as San Francisco defeated Chicago 9-5. Cubs' starter Rich Bordi suffered a leg injury when Mike Vail followed Venable's shot with a drive which struck Bordi on the leg and forced the pitcher out of the game.

Tom Brookens belted a two-run homer in the seventh to lift Detroit over Houston 5-4. Jim Gott, Roy Lee Jackson, Mercedes Esquer and Joey McLaughlin held Boston to five hits in Toronto's 5-0 decision.

Greg Brock no Garvey...yet

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

VERDO BEACH — "Everybody in the big leagues had to replace somebody. Everybody in the world replaced somebody."

The veteran center fielder of the Los Angeles Dodgers, Rick Monday, was expressing some mild irritation with the career pressures on the club's rookie first baseman, who was corraling hot smashes nearby from the bat of a fungo hitter.

The subject in question, Gregory Allen Brock of the Stayton (Ore.) Brocks, could have been replacing some journeyman first sacker, a platooned banjo hitter or a good-hit no-field comedian they made jokes about in the clubhouse.

INSTEAD, HE was stepping into the shoes of an individual who was a combination of Lou Gehrig and Joan of Arc, with a smattering of the 12 apostles. Steve Garvey was a guy who had to make up his mind between first base or the Vatican, to say nothing of the state house or the White House. While marking time, he gets 200 hits and 100 runs batted in every year.

Everybody has to replace somebody. But, Andrew Johnson might have asked himself, did he have to replace Abraham Lincoln? Why did it have to be Abe? Why not Millard Fillmore? Chester A. Arthur?

George Selkirk was a pretty good ballplayer. He hit .312, drove in 94 runs the year he replaced someone in the big leagues. But don't look for him in the Hall of Fame. The one he replaced was Babe Ruth. He's going to go down in history that way and no other; the man who replaced Babe Ruth in right field. The man who wasn't Babe Ruth. Forever.

You'd have to say Bobby Murcer was a pretty good ballplayer. Bobby hit 251 home runs, drove in 1,042 runs and led the league in total bases on occasions. But he was just the guy who wasn't Micky Mantle. In New York, a terrible thing to be. Or not to be.

TUNNEY WASN'T Dempsey, either. A pretty good fighter, if you want to know the truth. But, hey! He's not the Manassa Mauler, now, is he?

You replace a legend at your own peril. Even if it can be done, it takes a long time. Great as Mickey Mantle was, it took him eons to crawl out from under the shadow of the great DiMaggio. Even today, people say, as good as Mantle was (536 home runs, first in World Series homers, etc.) he "could" have been better, maybe even "should" have been.

Vaudevillians know better than to follow a magic act. Hollywood used to star newcomers as "the new Clark Gable" or "the new Spencer Tracy," or Garbo, Cagney or Bogart. The smart ones decline the honor, preferring to be artists, not impressionists. It'll be a brave actor who dares to be the new Rhett Butler in a remake of "Gone With The Wine" or George M. Cohan in "Yankee Doodle Dandy II."

GREB BROCK didnt have a whole lot of choice. If ever a guy wasn't groomed for legend, it was Brock. He was drafted in the 13th round, which is the "Don't call us, we'll be in touch" round. He was just a kind of nice, non-contact slugger, a college kid, youngster "with a chance," no more. So the scouts said. They gave him $4,000 and a $600-a-month salary and packed him off and forgot about him.

He's no Garvey. He's 6 inches taller and 30 pounds heavier. He's kind of a nice kid, good to his mother, eats with a fork and his hat off. He's polite, but he doesn't go through life as if he is selling brushes. Garvey is a born politician. Garvey looks as if he was born in a three-piece suit carrying a briefcase.

Garvey never mussed his hair or turned anyone away with a snotty answer. Garvey had to sell himself and he was always on the bubble when it came to cutdown time.

Except, he had this short, compact, murderous swing with the bat. He didn't hit the ball, he tomahawked it. Balls left his bat like laser shots. He had the strike zone of a piece of coal. They had to find a place for his bat if they had to invent a position. In a way they did. Only, Garvey became the most adept first baseman in the league at digging out low throws. He didn't have far to reach. On the Dodgers, his was a good thing. That infield threw more bouncing curves than the pitching staff. They didn't dare throw high anyway.

BROCK HAS this little wispy, blond mustache that marks him as a more reckless character than Garvey. He has this shock of corn-colored hair and eyes the color of a Kansas sky in summer.

He has no intention of running for office and will probably never be the Republican nominee for anything, much less president. He's responsive to questions but never makes speeches or talks in wall mottoes. You get the feeling he might be better off replacing the first baseman of the Toronto Blue Jays, assuming they have one. He's got the kind of swing pitchers can't wait to get at. It starts at Key West, so to speak, and ends up in the Gulf of Mexico. You could cool cities with it. He's got a strike zone you could drive a truck across, or sail boats on.

He hasn't the faintest idea what pitchers try to get him out on, but he'll find out. Baseball has a history of falling in love with these big, free-swinging, rangy first basemen. Even the Dodgers had Jim Gentile years ago, and he had a modest success as did others of the genre – Don Mincher, Mike Epstein and Jim Spencer. But all fell short of Cooperstown.

The Garvey legacy is such that Greg Brock will probably be in more trouble the first autograph he refuses than the first ground ball — or curveball — he misses. Garvey was probably the first authentic L.A. baseball hero in the big leagues. The Dodgers were in L.A. in name only the first several years of their incumbency in California. It was a team of emigres who sometimes seemed as if they were looking down their noses at this bunch of smoked-glasses characters under the palm trees, at the phonies and beach bums on this Busby Berkeley set. Garvey was as L.A. as Wilshire Boulevard at Christmas and the laid-back town took to him.

WILL GREG Brock continue in this image? Will he hit enough — and smile enough — to get a public building named after him? To get on the ballot?

Will someone one day come along to be the "new Greg Brock"? Well, you have to ask yourself if anyone ever came along to be the "new George Selkirk" or the "new Gene Tunney," or the "new Bobby Murcer"? Was there a "new Andrew Johnson" (or even a "new Lyndon Johnson")?

Will Brock become the "new Steve Garvey"? Or just the "new Jim Gentile"? Maybe, like Mantle and the few others, he'll just become the "one and only Greg Brock."

Sounded simple enough. I still got squeamish at the thought of a couple of wires floating down and attaching to the heart.

I was scared going in. But that was foolish ignorance. If I had to go through it again, I'd know better. I'd be terrified.

Midland's bankers work to overturn bill

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Midland bankers have joined a national groundswell of sentiment against a law requiring financial institutions of all kinds to withhold 10 percent of the interest they pay their customers.

The law, which requires financial institutions to turn over to the IRS 10 percent of the interest or dividends they pay, takes effect July 1 for banks, savings and loans, credit unions and brokerage houses.

"Banks and other financial institutions have opposed interest and dividend withholding since the idea first surfaced 40 years ago," said Russ Richardson, president of Midland American Bank. "We still do."

He and other Midland banking official are urging their customers to write their Congressmen to oppose the law. Most banks and S & Ls here have printed thousands of statement stuffers about the law to be mailed to their customers.

"We're getting reports from our branch managers of all kinds of requests from our customers, asking if there is some method of protest, a petition or something," said Alex Murray, senior vice president with Home Savings Association of Midland and Odessa. Home Savings has had thousands of postcards printed where the customer has only to sign, stamp and mail them to Washington, he said.

THE LAW would exempt persons over age 65 and those whose income taxes are less than $600 ($1,000 if a joint return is filed).

To be exempt, these persons will have to file a form with each institution in which they have an account, and swear that their tax liability is below the ceiling.

"Besides the obvious invasion of privacy involved here, banks will be buried under mountains of new and unnecessary paperwork," said Richardson.

"What Congress wants is a piece of your savings; what they need is a piece of your mind."

Ballot boxes have been set up in recent weeks in the lobbies of First City National Bank and Texas American Bank, among others. Customers are being urged to sign petitions which will be sent to their Texas Senators and Representatives, said Mike Hughes, Texas American Bank vice president and cashier. The bank plans to mail the petitions April 1.

The ballots were supplied by an independent supplier and are sanctioned by the American Bankers Association, Hughes said. Texas American ordered about 10,000 of the ballots, and also had 20,000 statement stuffers made to be mailed to account customers.

THE GREATEST challenge facing the bankers, other than getting the law repealed, is to educate the public, he said. "A lot of people are very knowledgeable about this, and the other half is not aware of it at all."

Home Savings Association, along with most Odessa financial institutions, sponsored a full page advertisement in the Odessa American recently to spotlight the new law and ask the public to make its opinion known in Washington.

The withholding law was passed in the last session of Congress in an attempt to get savers and investors to report their interest or dividend income.

Banks and S&Ls are already required to report to the IRS information on all accounts which pay more than $10 per year in interest, whether they are savings accounts, SuperNOWs, money market accounts or CDs.

This income has been taxable for years; there is nothing new in that.

IN FACT, THE IRS itself says about 97 percent of the public already reports interest and dividend income as required by law, according to the United States League of Savings Institutions.

Withholding on interest and dividend income will cost America's 80 million savers and investors about $1.5 billion in foregone earnings, according to Richardson.

The Texas Credit Union League estimates the law will cost the state's 1,278 credit unions and their members nearly $5 million to implement.

These costs are based on the size of the credit unions and include cost of member contact, training employees to withhold the 10 percent, computer system preparation and overhead.

The red tape associated with the new law will be a nightmare, bankers say.

"Every few days when we receive the computer print-outs of what CDs have come due, we will have to figure the interest, withhold 10 percent of it, and set it aside to be mailed to the IRS" said Jerry Armstrong, vice president at Texas American Bank.

THE COSTS OF compliance will be enormous, and in turn, they will be reflected in reduced rates banks and S & Ls can afford to pay savers, according to Ed Hale, president of the Dallas Teachers Credit Union and chairman of the Texas Credit Union League.

Hale offered this example. If a saver is due an interest payment of $200 after July, he normally would plan to keep it in his credit union account to grow through interest compounding. Under the new law, the saver would only have access to $180. The other $20 would have to be sent to the IRS.

"Even if the government does return your $20 months later, as part of your tax refund, you will have lost the additional interest you could have been making on it, if it had been left in the credit union," Hale said.

"What we are really doing is making an interest-free loan to the government."

Congressmen report they have been deluged with mail from their constituents. More than 340 senators and representatives are sponsoring or co-sponsoring legislation to get the law repealed, according to the United States League of Savings Institutions.

"PREMATURE withholding of interest and dividend income will stifle cash flow and be a disincentive to savings, investment and reindustrialization," said Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, in a letter this week to banks and S&Ls.

Whether the withholding law will actually take effect July 1 is in some doubt. Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., is trying to repeal it by tacking an amendment to that effect onto the jobs bill moving though Congress this week.

President Reagan said this week he was appalled at the intense lobbying effort being made by national banking groups.

He has vowed to veto the jobs bill if it contains any amendment cancelling the withholding tax on interest and dividends.

If an amendment against the withholding law cannot be included in the jobs bill, Sen. Kasten has said he might offer it again by trying to place it on the Social Security bail-out bill due to come before the Senate later this week or next.

IRS giving back less this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal income tax refunds this year are a bit smaller than at this time in 1982, apparently because many taxpayers are having less withheld from their paychecks.

The Internal Revenue Service says that of the 39.6 million individual returns received through March 5, 20.7 million had been processed and 13.9 million got refunds. The refunds averaged $687, compared with $698 for the same period a year ago.

Some tax specialists had been forecasting an increase in average refunds this year because of new provisions that liberalize tax treatment of Individual Retirement Accounts and allow two-earner couples a deduction to offset part of the "marriage penalty."

IRS spokesman Ernie Acosta said the size of refunds is down for the same reason. Many people who qualify for those new tax breaks changed their withholding allowances last year so that less would be withheld from their paychecks. Thus, they were able to collect immediately their tax cuts from the two-earner deduction and the IRA exclusion and didn't have to wait until they filed their returns.

The 39.6 million individual returns filed through the first nine weeks was 1.7 percent below the same period of 1982. The total included 17.3 million couples and individuals who filed the long Form 1040, 12.6 million who filed Form 1040A, and nearly 9.7 million single people who used the new Form 1040EZ.

For all of 1982, IRS received 96 million individual returns and paid refunds totaling $55.1 billion to 71.6 million filers. That averaged $769 per refund, down from $679 a year earlier.

IRS expects 99 million individual returns this year.

States are considering tax increases that apparently are unprecedented in size, the Tax Foundation reports. The organization says lawmakers in 43 states are weighing tax increases totaling more than $12 billion a year, although it is too early to say how many such proposals will become law.

Most states are coming up short because they were too optimistic in projecting economic growth and, thus, revenues, the foundation said.

At least 23 states are considering higher sales tax for the single largest share of the increase. Personal income taxes may go up in 13 states. Other targets: gasoline taxes in 17 states, severance taxes on minerals in four, corporate income taxes in 10, cigarette taxes in 14 and liquor taxes in 11.

In more than two decades, the Tax Foundation said Monday, it has "found no precedent for tax increases of this scope and magnitude."

The IRS, concerned that the campaign by banks to repeal tax withholding on interest and dividends may have produced some misinformation, is giving its own version to everybody who receives a tax refund or a Social Security check.

Each check is being accompanied by a card explaining the new withholding, which in most cases is due to begin July 1. Social Security recipients are told in big letters: "You may be exempt."

Shaid's second trial begins

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Orin Shaid Jr., who was convicted 11 years ago of bank fraud, was scheduled to go on trial today on similar charges before the same federal judge who sentenced him in 1972.

Charges against Shaid, whom the government claims was recently an owner of a failed West Texas bank, stem from a 16-count federal indictment accusing him of bilking funds from two East Texas banks.

The case was set to be heard by U.S. District Court Judge Williams Wayne Justice, who sentenced Shaid to eight years in prison in 1972.

The indictment claimed Shaid schemed to defraud at least two banks by presenting loan collateral in the form of bogus $100,000 CDs from the Ranchlander National Bank in Melvin.

Shaid, court documents claim, was one of the owners of the now defuct bank. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. took control of the Ranchlander National Bank four months ago after significant loan losses were discovered.

According to the indictment, Shaid is accused of presenting two bogus certificates of deposit to the Chandler State Bank near Tyler to obtain a $200,000 loan, and in presenting faulty loan documents to the First National Bank of Kilgore.

Shaid is charged in with nine counts of mail fraud, six counts of making a false statment in applying for a bank loan, and one count of bank robbery. Each of the counts carries maximum penalties of a $5,000 fine and 20-year prison term.

Meanwhile, the FDIC says it has paid 432 claims against the Ranchlander National Bank totaling more than $3 million since the agency took control of the institution.

"Losses are still being investigated, and it will take quite a while to complete them," FDIC liquidator Tom Poulas said.

The FDIC is now in the process of liquidating the bank's property.

Poulas said "everything is for sale — the building, desks, chairs, business machines. We also are attempting to market some of the loans."

"Losses are still being investigated, and it will take quite a while to complete them," Poulas said. It could take "three to four years" before the Ranchlander Bank's books are finally closed, he said.

"It will depend somewhat on the amount of litigation that develops," Poulas said.

No charges have been filed in connection with the Melvin bank's collapse.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram
MONDAY, MARCH 21, 1982

The 42-star American flag unfurled against the wall is an indication of the historic importance of many items in Midland County Museum, overseen by curator Rosemary Rankin. The 52-year-old museum, which is seeking a new home, is currently located in the basement of the Midland County Library. It has been housed in the library's basement since 1958.

The very nature of museums is steeped in preservation, in gleaning from the past relics which might help lead man into the future.

But to those instrumental in Midland County Museum, the preserver itself needs to be preserved.

The 52-year-old museum is showing its age. Already, some view it as being near its grave, buried as it is in the bowels of Midland County Library. Historical Society members are crying for its upkeep, a remodeling program, acquisition of a new home for the relics. But county commissioners, in whose hands its fate lies, just don't know what to do with it, faced as they are with a library troubled from top to bottom.

"We've talked about it and talked about it, but we don't know what direction we're going to go on it," said Commissioner Win Brown. "There's been offers of them going into the Museum of the Southwest, but I don't know what the status of that is. It is a collection that needs to be preserved."

Historical Commission chairman Nancy McKinley's feelings are stronger. "Every county in Texas has a better museum than Midland," she said. "They have provided very adequate housing. You know, we don't even have good lights down there at the museum. It is a county museum, and that's how the things are given, in trust, and the county should take care of it. But everytime we start talking about this it gets put on the back burner. There's always something else that's going that's got to be done before they can provide adequate housing for the only collection we have."

In order to help decide just what to do with that collection, commissioners solicited public input at a Friday meeting. But though Mrs. McKinley cried for "adequate housing and a provision" for its upkeep, and Alisanne Toomey and Ken Dawson for "the building of a permanent museum," the most enthusiasm generated among commissioners was C. Wallace Craig's "We have the more immediate problems that must be taken care of" and Davis' "we are very much concerned."

Afterward, Commissioner Durward Wright reflected on the museum's future. "I've been an advocate of reasonable quarters for the museum for years. It's just a question of what are we going to do with the library. Although important, it's somewhat secondary to the library project. We feel that when one block falls into place, the others will."

The first building blocks of Midland County Museum dropped into place in 1931 with its organization under the leadership of then-librarian Marguerite Hester. Initially housed in the basement of the courthouse, the institution was moved to its present location in 1958.

Regardless of what commissioners ultimately decide, curator Rosemary Rankin wants to be assured the items are not divided. "We want to keep the collection together," she said. "It's very important that we do, because it's the history of the town and this part of the country...I would like to see it in a place it deserves and in a place accessible where the handicapped could come in. I want everybody to take advantage of it and enjoy it."

She cited lack of storage space as a pressing problem, while the question of security recently has come to the forefront as well. Just three weeks ago burglars entered the library, used a crowbar or similar object to pry open the bars of the museum doorway, and made off with historic knives, guns and coins.

"We just want," said Miss Rankin, "to preserve our history and our heritage and everything else the people who formed the town worked for."

The museum is open from 11 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday.

Stroll paths trod by warriors

BIG SPRING — Take a stroll through Heritage Museum and trod the same paths once dared by Ice Age elephants, warriors of the Comanche War Trail, the buffalo hunters.

Situated at the corner of 5th Street and Scurry Street in the onetime home of Dora Roberts, the museum is an impressive tribute to the unnamed people who, building upon each other's work, helped bring the Big Spring of today into existence.

That long pathway into the 20th Century is represented by a succession of displays, replete with gargantuan photographs covering entire walls, models and artifacts. It's the culmination of years of planning and considerable funding by the City of Big Spring, Howard County and members of the Museum Association.

The museum's real genesis goes all the way back to 1883 when Dora Nunn Griffin Roberts and her husband settled south of belegended Signal Mountain in Howard County. Surviving the deaths of two husbands and enduring drought and depression, Mrs. Roberts found affluence when oil was discovered in 1927 on her spread, which became known as the famous Roberts Oilfield.

AT THE AGE of 90 she died, but left a legacy which included her final home — the building now occupied by Heritage Museum.

Staff Artist: Jan Drake

Originally constructed in 1909 of native limestone from the 1883 Howard County Courthouse, the house was purchased by Mrs. Roberts in 1914. In 1958 the Dora Roberts Foundation presented the building to Howard County along with $40,000 for establishment of a library within.

For the next 12 years, books roamed its hallways. In 1970, however, the library was relocated to the old post office building, and the museum and its artifacts — once turned over to Midland County Historical Society for safekeeping — had a permanent home.

Its doorways opened in 1971, but it was not until four years ago that the paths of early-day explorers and settlers became so succinctly delineated through extensive remodeling.

THE TIME travel begins in Ice Age West Texas with a display containing the partial remains of the earliest Howard County denizens — buffalo and mammoths as well as mastodons, whose great tusk curves five feet along the wall. Accompanying arrow and spear points dating back to 12,500 B.C. paint imagery of the confrontation which no doubt ensued between beast and ever-hungry man.

Then comes evidence of Indians: a skull and post-Christ points, all well-explained by murals. A map of West Texas provides the transition from the era of the red man to that of the white explorer, detailing as it does the routes of the Comanche War Trail, Cabeza de Vaca, Captain Randolph B. Marcy.

The greatest attraction, historically, has always been the "big spring" itself, that limestone-bordered basin into which pours an immense volume of water daily. First used by prehistoric men and animals, the spring was so important to the buffalo of the 19th Century that hunters rode its banks, shooting down the fur-bearing beasts at will. The earliest settlers recorded that, at one time, a man could walk a mile in any direction from the spring without stepping on anything but buffalo bones.

THE SPRING and open grasslands brought cattlemen to the county by the mid-1800s, and with them came a lore-rich culture which found life again in the 20th Century on the silver screen. Displays reflect that cowboy heritage, through branding irons, spurs, lariats, saddles, while the early-day homeowner is represented as well: here, a visitor may peruse an actual bedroom from another century.

In 1881 an event occurred which was to seal the finality of a permanent community near the big spring — completion of the Texas and Pacific Railroad. It brought a multitude of persons westward through the miracle of the iron horse, and with the push of a button, a visitor can again hear the chug and puff of the steam-powered locomotive, see its drivers through murals and photographs, almost taste the smoke through the imagery provided by railroad artifacts.

(See MUSEUM, Page 2C)

Reaching across the eons from Ice Age Texas to the 20th Century, the fossilized remains of mastadons and mammoths as well as the more recent buffalo greet visitors to Heritage Museum. Acting director Jonnie Gunnels is available for informal tours during the institution's open hours.

Texas' highway system nears end of its road

DALLAS (AP) — Texas' highway system is nearing the end of the road, deteriorating under a never-anticipated traffic load at a time when the state can afford neither the money nor the manpower to cope with its demise.

Much of the asphalt network already is nearing the end of its projected lifespan, and the system's decay causes more than just ugly roads.

Department of Public Safety officials say bad roads were a contributing factor in 158 fatal and nearly 16,000 non-fatal traffic accidents in 1981.

By the year 2000, the state says 46 percent of the roads and 38 percent of the bridges must be rebuilt or rehabilitated.

The federal government says Texas has more than 17,000 substandard bridges, a statistic in which Texas leads the nation. About 20 percent — or 6,030 — of the 29,591 bridges on the U.S., interstate, state highway and farm-to-market system in Texas need repair or replacement.

And the Dallas Morning News reported about 74 percent of the 15,942 bridges maintained by counties and cities are deficient or obsolete.

"We're now seeing the steamroll effect of a lack of funds, the age of the highways and an increase in traffic," Phillip Wilson, the Texas Department of Highways chief planner, told the newspaper.

"We're not crying wolf; we're out telling people that this is what's going to happen to our system if we can't get started on getting some relief now," he said.

Highway officials say Texas' nickle-a-gallon fuel tax, unchanged since 1955, has become the weak link in the chain of state, federal and local funds to finance highway work. It is that tax that is the backbone of highway financing in Texas.

But highway planners say even if they got more money immediately, it would be years before motorists could tell the difference. It takes anywhere from eight to 12 years to build a highway.

The state, says Wilson, must spend more each year for highway upkeep. Last year the state spent $349 million on 73,000 miles of state roads.

Engineers of 30 years ago could not envision today's traffic, and the state's population is expected to increase by 50 percent by the year 2000.

The News predicted the price tag for expanding the urban freeway network so that cities will not choke on their own traffic will be $60 billion over the next 20 years. That is almost double the present annual expenditure.

Gov. Mark White said a modern transportation system is one of the "foundations of greatness" in the state. House Speaker Gib Lewis has pledged to make roads a top priority of the Legislature.

But, highways must compete for state funds with teachers, prison, water projects, law enforcement, welfare benefits and other programs.

"We're sympathetic to the need to have roads," said John Cole, who directs the Texas Federation of Teachers, "but our position is going to be that Texas in the past has had far better roads than schools and the time has come for that to stop."

And a House study group has said the highway department's wish list has been compiled with no regard to cost or effect.

The choice between tax hikes and budget cuts is one the highway depaartment says it has faced before.

Traffic accident survivors remain in critical condition

Two survivors of a weekend traffic accident south of Midland that killed a San Angelo man remained in critical condition in Midland Memorial Hospital this morning.

In the hospital's intensive care unit with head and internal injuries is 26-year-old Susan S. Doherty of San Angelo. Also in ICU with leg and internal injuries was Denise D. Anderson, 36, of San Angelo.

They were passengers in a car that was struck by a flatbed truck on the Garden City Highway a mile east of Midland about 3 p.m. Saturday.

Driver of the car, 28-year-old Benton Ralph Doherty of San Angelo, was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry. The truck driver, Robert Sclabassi, 28, of Midland, escaped serious injury.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Sclabassi lost control of his westbound truck on wet pavement and slid into the path of Doherty's eastbound car, shearing the roof off the vehicle.

One man hospitalized for burns

Billy Anders, no age available, of 1213 E. Cuthbert Ave. suffered first, second and third degree burns to his back and left arm in a fire at his home shortly before midnight Saturday.

Firemen rescued Anders from the burning wood frame house and used 450 gallons of water extinguishing the blaze, which heavily damaged the interior of the residence.

Cause of the fire was not immediately determined. Anders was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning.

An electrical short was blamed for a fire in a vacant house at 2609 Brunson Ave. about 4 a.m. Sunday. Firemen spent more than two hours on the scene and reported heavy damage to the interior of the wood frame house.

Shortly before 10 p.m. Saturday, a fire of undetermined origin gutted a vacant house trailer on County Road 60-E, a half-mile west of CR 1130-North. Two thousand gallons of water were used in extinguishing the blaze and firemen spent two hours at the scene. The mobile home's owner was listed as Robert Hobson of Fort Stockton.

Museum goers trod paths of warriors

The 20th Century, as well, is represented, through such items as the switchboard from the historic Settles Hotel, and a chair constructed entirely of cattle horns which so enamored judges at a World's Fair that they awarded it a first place in its category.

HERITAGE Museum also has assumed a position as an art gallery of considerable magnitude. Here is displayed the largest extant collection of the paintings of H.W. Caylor, the Big Spring cowboy who spent much of his life reflecting the range, the taste of campfire coffee, the feel of a horse treading across the prairie. To view his artwork today is to ride in imagination through this John Wayne world of cowhide and horse flesh.

Open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m.-12 noon and 1 p.m.-5 p.m., and Saturday from 1 p.m.-5 p.m.. Heritage Museum is a monument both to the people of history as well as to those who worked so hard to make the institution a reality and sustain it.

Suspect released after questioning about fatal weekend shooting

Police said Willie Mae Butler of 205 Wabash was found lying on the porch of that residence about 2:20 a.m. Sunday. She had been shot once in the side with a .22 caliber rifle that was recovered at the scene.

She was pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital shortly before 3 a.m. by Ector County Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee. A man taken into custody was released without charges being filed and police said the case would be turned over to the grand jury for further investigation.

Texas town disappears from map

LYTLE, Texas (AP) — Von Ormy, population 264, is there. And Big Foot, with its 75 people, is also represented.

But Lytle, 101 years old and 2,000-residents strong, is not. In the eyes of map makers in Chicago, Lytle has disappeared.

Chamber of commerce head Les Snyder recently discovered to his horror as he looked at a new Rand McNally road atlas that his hometown southwest of San Antonio no longer existed.

Midland's rabid skunk problem grows more serious after latest lab results

Midland's rabid skunk problem continues to escalate after Animal Control officials received word Friday a rabies test proved positive on a skunk discovered March 13 on the city's eastern edge.

Friday's report, along with a previously unreported rabid skunk discovered Feb. 28, brings to 15 the number of rabid animals found within Midland County during the past 12 months, according to Rice Freeman Zachery, Midland Animal Control spokeswoman.

She said the city's most recent rabid skunk was found under a pile of junk metal at Parker Acres, about a mile east of Fairgrounds Road, was shot by a resident and brought to Animal Control. The skunk's head was sent to Austin early last week and the results were relayed to Midland Friday.

Ms. Freeman Zachary said the skunk is the 10th rabid one found in Midland County this year and the second within city limits. She said Midland's rabid animal problem has skyrocketed recently as compared with past years.

"So far in 1983, we've had 10 cases. In 1982, there were eight cases all year long," she said, adding there were only two confirmed cases in 1981, none in 1980 and three in 1979.

Introducing...

Mission Square Plaza

Retail and Office Condominiums

Owning is better than renting.

If you're presently renting retail or office space, you already know some of the disadvantages-frequent cost-of-living rent increases, leases that give the landlord all the advantages, costly sales overrides on your retail sales. In short, you're not in control.

From a pure economic standpoint, ownership beats renting. Consider these advantages:

* You mortgage payments are fixed and not subject to escalation or overrides to a landlord.
* You receive tax deductions for interest and tax payments.
* You get a tax deduction for depreciation over the next 15 years.
* You have control over your space, and no one can cancel your lease.
* You can buy enough space to meet your future growth plans and lease the expansion area until it's needed.
* All maintenance and upkeep is furnished through the Owner's Association.
* Your real estate investment gains value.

In addition to all this, Mission Square is strategically located in one of the city's fastest growing areas; North Big Spring and Loop 250, just northeast of ClayDesta Plaza.

Mission Square is an ideal location for professionals, service businesses, and a variety of retails stores. Contact our office now, for a full color brochure and further details.

Ruckelshaus, Reagan to discuss EPA post

WASHINGTON (AP) — William D. Ruckelshaus met with senior White House aides today to discuss President Reagan's request that he take over the beleaguered Environmental Protection Agency for the second time, a White House spokesman said.

Ruckelshaus planned to meet with Reagan this morning following the breakfast session with Chief of Staff James A. Baker III and Presidential Counselor Edwin Meese, said chief deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes.

But the press spokesman was mum on when there would be a formal announcement on a new EPA chief.

"At the moment there's nothing to announce," Speakes said. "If there is a decision made on Ruckelshaus to be administrator of EPA, certainly we will announce it."

Asked what was holding up the announcement, Speakes replied: "Final decisions have to be made by the two gentlemen," referring to the president and Ruckelshaus.

Ruckelshaus said Sunday that Reagan had asked him to consider taking the post.

"He has asked me to consider this and I'm doing it," Ruckelshaus said in Seattle before flying to Washington.

"I don't think it's a matter of whether you want it or not, it's a question of whether you think you can be helpful in responding to the president's request," Ruckelshaus told CBS News.

White House officials said over the weekend that Ruckelshaus, 50, has agreed "in principle" to succeed Anne M. Burford at EPA. But President Reagan and his aides were tight-lipped Sunday when pressed for details.

Asked about the matter as he returned from Camp David, Md., the president said only, "I'll see you in the press room in a few days."

Chief deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan was referring to plans to hold a brief press conference later in the week and not to an EPA announcement.

Ruckelshaus, senior vice president of law and corporate affairs at Weyerhaeuser Co., a timber and paper products firm in Federal Way, Wash., near Seattle, headed the EPA from its inception in 1970 until 1973.

One administration official, insisting on anonymity, said Ruckelshaus likely would meet with White House aides to iron out final details before an announcement was made. There was speculation it could come as early as today.

"I just don't think anything's holding this thing up," this official said. "I just think it's the normal process" of background checks and paperwork required before an announcement could occur.

"The guy has not even been in to see anybody yet," the official added. "I would think this is the kind of thing they would not do over the phone."

The official disagreed with suggestions that one item left to be negotiated was how much independence Ruckelshaus would be given in appointments and other matters.

Despite Mrs. Burford's resignation on March 9, the EPA controversy has not abated, adding urgency to the search for a successor — someone "strong and credible," according to the official.

With Mrs. Burford's departure the EPA has been run by John W. Hernandez Jr., the former EPA deputy administrator who was appointed by Reagan on an interim basis. Hernandez himself became the focus of congressional criticism last week for once having given Dow Chemical Co. advance look at an EPA report on dioxin, a deadly byproduct of a Dow pesticide.

Though congressional reaction to Ruckelshaus was generally favorable, an EPA critic said Ruckelshaus' nomination would not end the EPA controversy.

Rita Lavelle to again defy subpoena, attorney says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fired Environmental Protection Agency official Rita Lavelle intends to defy a congressional subpoena for a second time because her rights are being violated, her lawyer says.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of a subcommittee investigating the EPA, already has warned the former EPA assistant administrator she could be held in contempt of Congress if she fails to comply.

Ms. Lavelle, whose firing by President Reagan on Feb. 7 touched off a flurry of congressional investigations into EPA that led ultimately to the resignation of EPA chief Anne McGill Burford, was under subpoena to appear today before the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee.

The former assistant administrator defied an earlier subpoena on Feb. 17, leading Dingell to warn that "the patience of the committee is wearing somewhat thin.... We will not tolerate acts which frustrate the will of the Congress."

James Bierbower, Ms. Lavelle's lawyer, said Dingell's subcommittee is rushing her appearance because it is not allowing her first to review documents about handling of the $1.6 billion "superfund" program to clean up abandoned chemical waste dumps. He said that violated her rights.

"Surely, if due process means anything, it requires her to have access to those documents," Bierbower said.

Bierbower said he told Dingell earlier that Ms. Lavelle would be willing to testify after reviewing the documents.

"She's not trying to avoid testifying. I'm sure she will be testifying several more times on the hill," Bierbower said Sunday.

Richard A. Frandsen, a subcommittee lawyer, said Sunday the panel had no warning that Ms. Lavelle would refuse to appear until Friday aternoon, when a letter from Bierbower arrived outlining his objections.

Frandsen said after the letter was delivered, subcommittee chief counsel Michael F. Barrett called Bierbower and told him Ms. Lavelle "was under lawful subpoena and that we expected her to appear on Monday. Bierbower said he understood."

Patrick McLain, another subcommittee lawyer, said the subcommittee was prepared for whatever Ms. Lavelle might do. If she failed to appear, he said, he expected the subcommittee to move to a contempt vote.

"We're preparing for the hearing, for her appearance and her non-appearance," he said. If she does not appear, he said, "the chairman will probably find that she is in contempt and see if there is a motion to so move."

Bierbower said Ms. Lavelle was improperly served with the subpoena Feb. 23, while she was waiting in a Senate office building to testify before the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee.

Weather watch

This may be the first full day of spring, but the thermometer in Midland didn't reflect that fact. The low this morning was 29. Chilly temperatures — and a little snowfall — kept Midland cold over the weekend, too. Jeanene Davis kept warm at a weekend baseball game by pulling a sleeping bag around her as she watched her son, Tommy, catcher for the Midland High School baseball team. # European finance ministers realigning currencies

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — European finance ministers agreed today on a broad realignment of their currencies, including a 5.5 percent upward revaluation of the West German mark and a 2.5 percent devaluation of the French franc.

"This will enhance the credibility of the European Monetary System," said West German Finance Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg, who announced the agreement.

The system was thrown into the worst crisis of its four-year history over the weekend when the ministers failed to agree on realigning their currencies, a move needed to end waves of speculation on the currency markets, which in turn aggravated the world recession.

France at one point threatened to pull out of the system, which could have made matters even worse for its trading partners, including the United States, because it would have led to additional French trade barriers to U.S. and other exports.

After the Europeans failed to reach agreement over the weekend, their eight currencies were allowed to float free of mandatory central bank controls when the money markets opened today. There was some confusion on the markets but very little trading.

Otto Poehl, president of West Germany's central bank, said that markets could return to normal following the realignment agreement.

One U.S. dollar bought 7.17 francs today in Paris; at close of trading Friday, the quote was 6.925 francs to the dollar.

The strong West German mark soared today to a record 2.9925 French francs from Friday's fixing at 2.8985. In today's trading the mark was at 2.3975 to the U.S. dollar.

France had been refusing the other countries' proposal that it devalue the franc for the third time since the French Socialists came to power 22 months ago. The West Germans were reluctant to raise the value of the mark because it means the country's exports will be more expensive.

French Finance Minister Jacques Delors had threatened to yank France out of the European Monetary System if no agreement is reached. The system was created to stabilize currencies of Common Market members.

All Common Market currencies except the British pound and the Greek drachma are in the system. Besides the French franc and the West German mark they are the Dutch guilder, Belgian and Luxembourg francs, Irish pound, Danish kroner and Italian lira.

A realignment in the system normally affects the U.S. dollar, the British pound, the Japanese yen, and other major currencies.

There have been six previous currency realignments in the four-year history of the system. But each has come in the calm of a weekend, when exchange markets are closed.

When the ministers adjourned Sunday without producing a new exchange-rate formula, they suspended mandatory intervention by central banks that holds rates within fixed limits.

Throughout the weekend negotiations, France's Delors tried to force a sharp upward valuation of the West German mark, sources close to the meeting said.

For the French, a stronger mark would tend to reduce imports from West Germany, France's main trading partner. This would help France combat its growing foreign trade deficit, now estimated at $13.6 billion.

The present monetary crisis stemmed largely from the sagging of the French franc.

Michel Jobert

First major shake-up rumored in French Cabinet

PARIS (AP) — Speculation grew today that President Francois Mitterrand would announce his first major Cabinet reshuffle, possibly including a new premier, following the unexpected resignation of the foreign trade minister over the nation's deteriorating economy.

The Sunday resignation of Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert came as Mitterrand and aides held urgent meetings on economic policy and negotiations sagged in Brussels over the Common Market's monetary system.

Jobert said he resigned because he lacked enough authority to stifle France's growing trade deficit. He was the first key minister to quit Mitterrand's Cabinet since the Socialists came to power 22 months ago.

Political and economic observers say other Cabinet ministers might quit or be fired this week, partly because Mitterrand wants to show France's Common Market partners he is making major efforts to cure the nation's economic problems. Other rumored measures include higher taxes and cuts in government spending that could scrap some of Mitterrand's social programs.

The economies of the 10 members of the Common Market are closely intertwined. France's growing trade deficit and declining value in the franc are bound to affect its economic partners.

In Brussels, France and seven other Common Market members at a monetary meeting failed to agree to changes in the European Monetary System. The system of monetary exchange rates is designed to stablize each member's currency.

GNP growth estimated 4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the broadest sign yet of economic recovery, the government estimated today that the economy grew at a 4 percent annual rate during the first three month of the year, the strongest performance in two years.

The Commerce Department's so-called "flash" estimate of inflation-adjusted gross national product showed the largest increase since the first quarter of 1981 and underscored the near-unanimous view of economists that the severe 1981-82 recession ended last December.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes called the figure "excellent news and the most conclusive indication the economic recovery has begun and is proceeding at a healthy rate. We think this indicates we are moving rapidly to an excellent recovery from recession."

In another positive development, the flash estimate showed inflation, as measured by the GNP price deflator, rising at a mere 2.8 percent rate during the first quarter, compared with a 3.7 percent rate during last year's final quarter.

The flash estimate is a very rough calculation of economic activity that often is revised significantly as more information is gathered.

The Commerce Department also reported that economic activity during the last three months of 1982 declined by less than had been estimated previously. The department said inflation-adjusted GNP fell at a 1.1 percent annual rate, rather than dropping 1.9 percent as had been reported earlier.

The department added that pretax corporate profits during the fourth quarter of 1982 declined at an annual rate of 0.8 percent from the third quarter, reversing two straight quarters of gains. After tax-profits showed no change in the fourth quarter, the department said.

The estimated first-quarter GNP growth is the greatest since a 7.9 percent rate was recorded in the first three months of 1981. But that rapid expansion gave way by the summer to the worst downturn since World War II.

Jack Lavery of Merrill Lynch & Co., who had anticipated the first-quarter gain, said in advance of the report, "I think we'll have a bumpy and saw-toothed recovery."

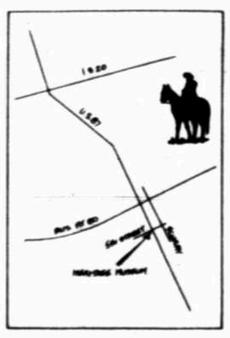

The strong first-quarter increase should be followed by "a more muted" gain in the second quarter, a very strong third quarter and then slower progress again.

Recent government reports have shown enough improvement to indicate real GNP would be up in the first quarter. But the reason consistent big gains won't show up all through the year, analysts agreed, was that some parts of the economy were still weak.

While industrial production was picking up and housing was rushing ahead, for example, business spending for modernization and expansion still was declining. And unemployment was still high — 10.2 percent in February.

Retail sales have also been sluggish for several months, and gains in Americans' personal income have been small.

Winter leaves 'calling card'

By The Associated Press

Winter's last gasp left a generally frosty trail of snow and rain stretching from northern California to Maine, while gusts in the Midwest sent the wind-chill factor skidding into the teens on the first official day of Spring.

"It'll be a very good day not to go to work if you don't have to," said Joe Caporaso, a National Weather Service forecaster at Chicago.

Spring arrived officially at 11:39 p.m. Sunday, but it roared through Illinois, Michigan and Indiana with winter-like weather resulting in up to 7 inches of snow. Forecasters said winds were to pick up today, gusting to 35 mph.

Winter storm warnings were posted for southern Michigan, including the Detroit area, with at least six or more inches of snow expected by late today, said Fred Keyes of the National Weather Service in Ann Arbor.

Police in southern Michigan counties said blowing snow which began late Sunday had left roads slippery and snow-covered. No major injuries or accidents were reported, police said.

"It doesn't look too good. If you don't have to be out, be home," said Sgt. Logan Tisdale of the state police post at Erie, near the Ohio-Michigan border in Monroe County.

"(Today's) the first day of spring and we're getting our winter now," said Alger County Deputy Sheriff Henry Brey in Munising, in the state's Upper Peninsula, where the weather service said 21 inches of snow piled up between Friday and Sunday.

On the West Coast, rain Sunday over northern California lashed the already soggy Golden State with one-tenth of an inch of new water — a normally negligible amount that has become significant because of water-logged soil.

It rained — for the third year in a row — on San Francisco's belated St. Patrick's Day parade, but 12,000 people turned out to march and cheer anyway, city officials said Sunday.

San Francisco has received a total of 31.91 inches of rain since July 1, about 1½ times the precipitation expected for the entire year, forecasters said.

Out on the Pacific, small craft advisories were posted along the northern California coast Sunday amid 12-foot seas and winds up to 25 knots.

On the East Coast, heavy weekend rains hampered the search for a woman who authorities believe was swept into the swollen Sebasticook River in Benton, Maine.

Terry Harris, 26, left her Benton home about 9:30 p.m. Saturday by car on a shopping errand, but never returned home and never reached the store, according to her husband Ronald Harris.

State Police Sgt. Lyndon Abbott said authorities searched for the woman Sunday and found a car seat that may have belonged to the family car.

Abbot said the river was flowing so fast that divers could not conduct a search because of fears they would be swept away in the current.

Southern Maine received up to 4 inches of rain this weekend, flooding basements and washing out some roads, and the National Weather Service in Portland said another storm may move in tonight.

Five families at the mouth of the Northwest River in East Sebago Maine, left their homes early Sunday when high water threatened to collapse a concrete-and-earthen dam.

And about 40 volunteer firemen and residents in Yarmouth packed sandbags alongside the Royal River to protect a house at the water's edge from flood damage.

Mount St. Helens builds toward another eruption

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens was trembling with small earthquakes as it began its third springtime of activity and continues to build toward another mild eruption, scientists say.

The volcano first stirred to life in this century almost three years ago. Its May 18, 1980, blast left 59 people dead or missing and sent aloft an ash cloud that circled the globe.

The mountain continues to be unpredictable but, for now, scientists say it has settled into a pattern of steam bursts, earthquakes, rockfalls, snow melts and mild eruptions limited mostly to the inside of the crater.

On March 6, scientists predicted another mild eruption by next weekend. Officials with the U.S. Geological Survey and University of Washington geophysics laboratory said Sunday that the eruption alert remains in effect. It would add new growth to the 700-foot lava dome inside the crater, scientists said.

The last episode when molten rock was pushed to the surface began Feb. 7.

Charges made against Israelis

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli soldiers fire weapons randomly as they travel Beirut's roads, threatening the safety of civilians and members of the multinational peacekeeping force, the U.S. Marine commander in Lebanon says.

The Israelis denied the charge leveled Sunday by Col. James M. Mead in the latest evidence of strained relations between the American peacekeepers and members of Israel's occupation force.

The "indiscriminate" firing to flush out potential Palestinian ambushers endangers civilians, said Mead, commander of the 1,200 Marines who are part of a fournation force that has been patrolling Beirut for about six months.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Mead blamed what he called "gross lack" of discipline in the Israeli ranks for the random gunplay.

A Lebanese official said at least five civilians have been killed by what he called careless Israeli gunfire along highways.

The Israeli military command responded to Mead's charge by saying: "Lately the Marines are publishing data that have no basis...."

Israeli soldiers do shoot along the Sidon highway, but only into unpopulated areas, said Israeli officers who asked not to be named.

Referring to recent reports that said Israeli soldiers stopped and taunted Marines on patrol, Mead said "It's my thought that because of the frequency of the incidents, it must be greater that happenstance."

Mead accused Israeli units on the edge of the south Beirut sector of "reconnaissance by fire." The tactic of trying to flush out or kill would-be ambushers by random fire may be a reason why the Israelis were trying to keep Marines from patrolling the sector, he said.

Israeli military sources who asked to be unidentified said Israeli authorities have denied a Lebanese allegation that civilians were killed by the firing practice.

Mead said that for the last two months, the Israelis "come down the Sidon highway and without having been fired upon, they just fire great numbers of rounds to the east of Sidon highway.

"Initially, (they said) Marines could not go across the Sidon road because they were concerned for our safety," Mead said. "Apparently the Israelis are concerned about their gross lack of fire discipline."

Mead said that when Israeli soldiers fired into areas along the west side of the road, "we were catching ricochets in our positions. We told them to cease and desist the indiscriminate fire. So now the indiscriminate fire only happens to the east.

"It's the old Vietnam tactic of recon by fire. It's a very poor tactic. All it does is endanger, via ricochets, other forces or civilians. It never stopped a terrorist."

The commandant of the Marine Corps, Gen. Robert Barrow, recently wrote to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to complain of alleged Israeli provocation of the Marines, "complete with verbal degredation of the officers, their uniform and country."

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens last week urged Israeli and U.S. soldiers to get along better.

The Israelis insist they have good ties with the British, French and Italian peacekeeping troops and have suggested that the Israelis and Marines have liaison officers.

Congressmen urge Lebanon to punish massacre participants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-nine members of Congress are urging Lebanese authorities to find and punish those responsible for last September's massacre of hundreds of Palestinian refugees.

"We fear that the strong and free Lebanon we all seek may not survive so long as the perpetrators of the massacres remain at large," the House members said in a letter to Lebanese President Amin Gemayel.

"We are profoundly disturbed by what appears to Americans to be a lack of diligence in determining responsibility for the attacks on the refugee camps and bringing the actual perpetrators to justice," the letter said.

The letter was released Sunday by Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., who together with Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, had drafted and circulated the appeal.

Lebanese Christian militiamen have been linked to the killings of hundreds of Palestinian men, women and children during the massacre Sept. 16-18 at the Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps. Israeli forces then in control of Beirut were guarding the camps at the time.

An Israeli special commission, in a report issued Feb. 8, said then-Defense Minister Ariel Sharon bore personal responsibility.

More troops possible, envoy says

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Reagan is ready to send additional Marines to Lebanon for peacekeeping duty if necessary, special Lebanese envoy Saeb Salam said today after returning from a week's talks in Washington.

Salam, a former prime minister and special representative of President Amin Gemayel, said Reagan showed his "readiness to assist Lebanon in many fields, even by sending additional Marines."

"This will depend on the necessity for such a move," Salam said.

There are already 1,200 U.S. Marines with the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon, and their commander, Col. James M. Mead, has reported several confrontations with Israeli troops.

On Sunday, Mead said that Israel's "indiscriminate" use of "reconnaissance by fire" tactics to flush out guerrillas endangers civilians and members of the multinational peacekeeping force.

Gunmen fired bazookas and small arms at an Israeli position east of Beirut Sunday night and rocket-propelled grenades at an Israeli patrol southeast of Beirut today, but there were no casualties, the Tel Aviv command said.

Meanwhile, Syrian Culture Minister Najah Attar wrote in an editorial in the Damascus government newspaper Tishrin that Syria was ready to do battle with Israel and warned that any new war between the two nations would bring the Soviets and Americans to a "world confrontation."

"We do not fear war. We have enough strength to hit back harder to any blow we receive," Mrs. Attar wrote.

"America is not alone in our area, and we shall not stop achieving a strategic balance with Israel if this balance has not already been achieved," she said. "Not only Israeli fingers are on the trigger, but ours too."

She was referring to upgraded Soviet arms supplies to Syria, including long-range SAM-5 anti-aircraft missiles, that Moscow sent to Syria in the wake of Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

"In case new fighting erupts, it will not be confined to the Middle East, nor will it be limited between Syria and Israel," she said.

The Israelis invaded Lebanon June 6 to smash the Palestine Liberation Organization and refuse to withdraw until they have adequate security guarantees along Lebanon's southern border with Israel.

Israel demands a simultaneous withdrawal of Syrian troops from Lebanon when Israeli forces pull out. The Syrians have been in Lebanon since snuffing out the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war, and provide cover for PLO guerrillas operating in northern and eastern parts of the country.

Israeli and Lebanese negotiators met today in Netanya, Israel, to discuss withdrawal, and U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib was due to travel to Beirut to consult with the Lebanese government.

Israeli spokesman Avi Pazner said the delegations met for three hours but did not discuss new U.S. proposals for advancing the talks on an Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon. Habib was to brief Lebanese leaders on the ideas, after hearing the Israeli response Sunday night from Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defense Minister Moshe Arens.

Arabs in East Jerusalem protest attempt to take Temple Mount

JERUSALEM (AP) — East Jerusalem Arabs Monday threw stones, burned tires and began a commercial strike today to protest an attempt two weeks ago by Jewish extremists to take over the sacred Temple Mount, police said.

Arab demonstrations also were reported in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Israel radio reported that a Jerusalem district court freed on $125 bail each the 29 Israelis who had been held in the Temple Mount takeover bid. They were ordered confined to their homes except to attend synagogue on the Sabbath and Jewish holy days.

Jerusalem police spokesman Ziv Rotem said no one was hurt as Arabs stoned passersby in the pilgrim-packed Old City.

Reagan expected to receive Social Security, jobs bills soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — In its last week of work before a 10-day Easter recess, Congress is rushing to send President Reagan two major pieces of legislation — Social Security reform and a multibillion-dollar emergency jobs program.

The Senate was resuming work this afternoon on the $165 billion Social Security rescue plan with Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., saying he hoped for a final vote late today.

Meanwhile, congressional negotiators were set to meet this afternoon to hammer out the differences between the $4.9 billion jobs bill passed by the House and a $5.2 billion version passed by the Senate. The major difference is a provision in the Senate bill to speed up revenue sharing payments to states by three months.

The legislation also provides for food and shelter for the needy and other types of recession relief. It also includes an additional $5 billion in federal subsidies to help 27 states and the District of Columbia pay unemployment benefits to millions of jobless workers whose checks are due this week.

After the Senate finishes work on the Social Security package, congressional conferees also will meet to iron out the differences between the versions of that measure adopted by each chamber.

For the most part, the Senate has been following the lead of the House and sticking close to the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform for higher payroll taxes, a six-month freeze on benefit increases, a levy on the benefits going to more affluent retirees and mandatory Social Security coverage for new federal workers.

The tightest remaining Senate battle involves the provision that would extend Social Security coverage to all new federal employees after Jan. 1.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., is leading the fight for an amendment to delay mandatory coverage until Congress approves a supplementary pension plan for civil servants.

"I will vote to bring them under Social Security, but not until a supplemental plan is adopted," Long said.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the Finance Committee chairman guiding the bill through the Senate, argues that some legislators supporting Long's move only want to keep federal workers from having to pay into the system. He fears that if Long is successful, the delicate rescue package may unravel.

Congressional leaders are hopeful that the conferees meeting on Social Security and the jobs bill will finish their work by midweek.

The House, meanwhile, will be the site of the first major budget battle of the year when Democratic leaders bring their alternative budget to the floor for a vote, scheduled for Wednesday. The spending outline defies the president's program of increased defense spending and reduced taxes and domestic outlays.

Midland's bankers work to overturn bill

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Midland bankers have joined a national groundswell of sentiment against a law requiring financial institutions of all kinds to withhold 10 percent of the interest they pay their customers.

The law, which requires financial institutions to turn over to the IRS 10 percent of the interest or dividends they pay, takes effect July 1 for banks, savings and loans, credit unions and brokerage houses.

"Banks and other financial institutions have opposed interest and dividend withholding since the idea first surfaced 40 years ago," said Russ Richardson, president of Midland American Bank. "We still do."

He and other Midland banking official are urging their customers to write their Congressmen to oppose the law. Most banks and S & Ls here have printed thousands of statement stuffers about the law to be mailed to their customers.

"We're getting reports from our branch managers of all kinds of requests from our customers, asking if there is some method of protest, a petition or something," said Alex Murray, senior vice president with Home Savings Association of Midland and Odessa. Home Savings has had thousands of postcards printed where the customer has only to sign, stamp and mail them to Washington, he said.

THE LAW would exempt persons over age 65 and those whose income taxes are less than $600 ($1,000 if a joint return is filed).

To be exempt, these persons will have to file a form with each institution in which they have an account, and swear that their tax liability is below the ceiling.

"Besides the obvious invasion of privacy involved here, banks will be buried under mountains of new and unnecessary paperwork," said Richardson.

"What Congress wants is a piece of your savings; what they need is a piece of your mind."

Ballot boxes have been set up in recent weeks in the lobbies of First City National Bank and Texas American Bank, among others. Customers are being urged to sign petitions which will be sent to their Texas Senators and Representatives, said Mike Hughes, Texas American Bank vice president and cashier. The bank plans to mail the petitions April 1.

The ballots were supplied by an independent supplier and are sanctioned by the American Bankers Association, Hughes said. Texas American ordered about 10,000 of the ballots, and also had 20,000 statement stuffers made to be mailed to account customers.

THE GREATEST challenge facing the bankers, other than getting the law repealed, is to educate the public, he said. "A lot of people are very knowledgeable about this, and the other half is not aware of it at all."

Home Savings Association, along with most Odessa financial institutions, sponsored a full page advertisement in the Odessa American recently to spotlight the new law and ask the public to make its opinion known in Washington.

The withholding law was passed in the last session of Congress in an attempt to get savers and investors to report their interest or dividend income.

Banks and S&Ls are already required to report to the IRS information on all accounts which pay more than $10 per year in interest, whether they are savings accounts, SuperNOWs, money market accounts or CDs.

This income has been taxable for years; there is nothing new in that.

IN FACT, THE IRS itself says about 97 percent of the public already reports interest and dividend income as required by law, according to the United States League of Savings Institutions.

Withholding on interest and dividend income will cost America's 80 million savers and investors about $1.5 billion in foregone earnings, according to Richardson.

The Texas Credit Union League estimates the law will cost the state's 1,278 credit unions and their members nearly $5 million to implement.

These costs are based on the size of the credit unions and include cost of member contact, training employees to withhold the 10 percent, computer system preparation and overhead.

The red tape associated with the new law will be a nightmare, bankers say.

"Every few days when we receive the computer print-outs of what CDs have come due, we will have to figure the interest, withhold 10 percent of it, and set it aside to be mailed to the IRS" said Jerry Armstrong, vice president at Texas American Bank.

THE COSTS OF compliance will be enormous, and in turn, they will be reflected in reduced rates banks and S & Ls can afford to pay savers, according to Ed Hale, president of the Dallas Teachers Credit Union and chairman of the Texas Credit Union League.

Hale offered this example: If a saver is due an interest payment of $200 after July, he normally would plan to keep it in his credit union account to grow through interest compounding. Under the new law, the saver would only have access to $180. The other $20 would have to be sent to the IRS.

"Even if the government does return your $20 months later, as part of your tax refund, you will have lost the additional interest you could have been making on it, if it had been left in the credit union," Hale said.

"What we are really doing is making an interest-free loan to the government."

Congressmen report they have been deluged with mail from their constituents. More than 340 senators and representatives are sponsoring or co-sponsoring legislation to get the law repealed, according to the United States League of Savings Institutions.

"PREMATURE withholding of interest and dividend income will stifle cash flow and be a dis-incentive to savings, investment and re-industrialization," said Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, in a letter this week to banks and S&Ls.

Whether the withhholding law will actually take effect July 1 is in some doubt. Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., is trying to repeal it by tacking an amendment to that effect onto the jobs bill moving though Congress this week.

President Reagan said this week he was appalled at the intense lobbying effort being made by national banking groups.

He has vowed to veto the jobs bill if it contains any amendment cancelling the withholding tax on interest and dividends.

If an amendment against the withholding law cannot be included in the jobs bill, Sen. Kasten has said he might offer it again by trying to place it on the Social Security bail-out bill due to come before the Senate later this week or next.

IRS giving back less this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal income tax refunds this year are a bit smaller than at this time in 1982, apparently because many taxpayers are having less withheld from their paychecks.

The Internal Revenue Service says that of the 39.6 million individual returns received through March 5, 20.7 million had been processed and 13.9 million got refunds. The refunds averaged $687, compared with $698 for the same period a year ago.

Some tax specialists had been forecasting an increase in average refunds this year because of new provisions that liberalize tax treatment of Individual Retirement Accounts and allow two-earner couples a deduction to offset part of the "marriage penalty."

IRS spokesman Ernie Acosta said the size of refunds is down for the same reason. Many people who qualify for those new tax breaks changed their withholding allowances last year so that less would be withheld from their paychecks. Thus, they were able to collect immediately their tax cuts from the two-earner deduction and the IRA exclusion and didn't have to wait until they filed their returns.

The 39.6 million individual returns filed through the first nine weeks was 1.7 percent below the same period of 1982. The total included 17.3 million couples and individuals who filed the long Form 1040, 12.6 million who filed Form 1040A, and nearly 9.7 million single people who used the new Form 1040EZ.

For all of 1982, IRS received 96 million individual returns and paid refunds totaling $55.1 billion to 71.6 million filers. That averaged $769 per refund, down from $679 a year earlier.

States are considering tax increases that apparently are unprecedented in size, the Tax Foundation reports. The organization says lawmakers in 43 states are weighing tax increases totaling more than $12 billion a year, although it is too early to say how many such proposals will become law.

Most states are coming up short because they were too optimistic in projecting economic growth and, thus, revenues, the foundation said.

At least 23 states are considering higher sales tax for the single largest share of the increase. Personal income taxes may go up in 13 states. Other targets: gasoline taxes in 17 states, severance taxes on minerals in four, corporate income taxes in 10, cigarette taxes in 14 and liquor taxes in 11.

In more than two decades, the Tax Foundatin said Monday, it has "found no precedent for tax increases of this scope and magnitude."

The IRS, concerned that the campaign by banks to repeal tax withholding on interest and dividends may have prduced some misinformation, is giving its own version to everybody who receives a tax refund or a Social Security check.

Each check is being accompanied by a card explaining the new withholding, which in most cases is due to begin July 1. Social Security recipients are told in big letters: "You may be exempt."

Shaid's second trial begins

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Orin Shaid Jr., who was convicted 11 years ago of bank fraud, was scheduled to go on trial today on similar charges before the same federal judge who sentenced him in 1972.

Charges against Shaid, whom the government claims was recently an owner of a failed West Texas bank, stem from a 16-count federal indictment accusing him of bilking funds from two East Texas banks.

The case was set to be heard by U.S. District Court Judge Williams Wayne Justice, who sentenced Shaid to eight years in prison in 1972.

The indictment claimed Shaid schemed to defraud at least two banks by presenting loan collateral in the form of bogus $100,000 CDs from the Ranchlander National Bank in Melvin.

Shaid, court documents claim, was one of the owners of the now defuct bank. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. took control of the Ranchlander National Bank four months ago after significant loan losses were discovered.

According to the indictment, Shaid is accused of presenting two bogus certificates of deposit to the Chandler State Bank near Tyler to obtain a $200,000 loan, and in presenting faulty loan documents to the First National Bank of Kilgore.

Shaid is charged in with nine counts of mail fraud, six counts of making a false statment in applying for a bank loan, and one count of bank robbery. Each of the counts carries maximum penalties of a $5,000 fine and 20-year prison term.

Meanwhile, the FDIC says it has paid 432 claims against the Ranchlander National Bank totaling more than $3 million since the agency took control of the institution.

"Losses are still being investigated, and it will take quite a while to complete them," FDIC liquidator Tom Poulas said.

The FDIC is now in the process of liquidating the bank's property.

Poulas said "everything is for sale — the building, desks, chairs, business machines. We also are attempting to market some of the loans."

"Losses are still being investigated, and it will take quite a while to complete them," Poulas said. It could take "three to four years" before the Ranchlander Bank's books are finally closed, he said.

"It will depend somewhat on the amount of litigation that develops," Poulas said.

No charges have been filed in connection with the Melvin bank's collapse.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram
MONDAY, MARCH 21, 1983

The 42-star American flag unfurled against the wall is an indication of the historic importance of many items in Midland County Museum, overseen by curator Rosemary Rankin. The 52-year-old museum, which is seeking a new home, is currently located in the basement of the Midland County Library. It has been housed in the library's basement since 1958.

The very nature of museums is steeped in preservation, in gleaning from the past relics which might help lead man into the future.

But to those instrumental in Midland County Museum, the preserver itself needs to be preserved.

The 52-year-old museum is showing its age. Already, some view it as being near its grave, buried as it is in the bowels of Midland County Library. Historical Society members are crying for its upkeep, a remodeling program, acquisition of a new home for the relics. But county commissioners, in whose hands its fate lies, just don't know what to do with it, faced as they are with a library troubled from top to bottom.

"We've talked about it and talked about it, but we don't know what direction we're going to go on it," said Commissioner Win Brown. "There's been offers of them going into the Museum of the Southwest, but I don't know what the status of that is. It is a collection that needs to be preserved."

Historical Commission chairman Nancy McKinley's feelings are stronger. "Every county in Texas has a better museum than Midland," she said. "They have provided very adequate housing. You know, we don't even have good lights down there at the museum...It is a county museum, and that's how the things are given, in trust, and the county should take care of it. But everytime we start talking about this it gets put on the back burner. There's always something else that's going that's got to be done before they can provide adequate housing for the only collection we have."

In order to help decide just what to do with that collection, commissioners solicited public input at a Friday meeting. But though Mrs. McKinley cried for "adequate housing and a provision" for its upkeep, and Alisanne Toomey and Ken Dawson for "the building of a permanent museum," the most enthusiasm generated among commissioners was C. Wallace Craig's "We have the more immediate problems that must be taken care of" and Davis' "we are very much concerned."

Afterward, Commissioner Durward Wright reflected on the museum's future. "I've been an advocate of reasonable quarters for the museum for years. It's just a question of what are we going to do with the library. Although important, it's somewhat secondary to the library project. We feel that when one block falls into place, the others will."

The first building blocks of Midland County Museum dropped into place in 1931 with its organization under the leadership of then-librarian Marguerite Hester. Initially housed in the basement of the courthouse, the institution was moved to its present location in 1958.

Regardless of what commissioners ultimately decide, curator Rosemary Rankin wants to be assured the items are not divided. "We want to keep the collection together," she said. "It's very important that we do, because it's the history of the town and this part of the country...I would like to see it in a place it deserves and in a place accessible where the handicapped could come in. I want everybody to take advantage of it and enjoy it."

She cited lack of storage space as a pressing problem, while the question of security recently has come to the forefront as well. Just three weeks ago burglars entered the library, used a crowbar or similar object to pry open the bars of the museum doorway, and made off with historic knives, guns and coins.

"We just want," said Miss Rankin, "to preserve our history and our heritage and everything else the people who formed the town worked for."

The museum is open from 11 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday.

Stroll paths trod by warriors

BIG SPRING — Take a stroll through Heritage Museum and trod the same paths once dared by Ice Age elephants, warriors of the Comanche War Trail, the buffalo hunters.

Situated at the corner of 5th Street and Scurry Street in the onetime home of Dora Roberts, the museum is an impressive tribute to the unnamed people who, building upon each other's work, helped bring the Big Spring of today into existence.

That long pathway into the 20th Century is represented by a succession of displays, replete with gargantuan photographs covering entire walls, models and artifacts. It's the culmination of years of planning and considerable funding by the City of Big Spring, Howard County and members of the Museum Association.

The museum's real genesis goes all the way back to 1883 when Dora Nunn Griffin Roberts and her husband settled south of belegended Signal Mountain in Howard County. Surviving the deaths of two husbands and enduring drought and depression, Mrs. Roberts found affluence when oil was discovered in 1927 on her spread, which became known as the famous Roberts Oilfield.

Staff Artist: Jan Drake

Originally constructed in 1909 of native limestone from the 1883 Howard County Courthouse, the house was purchased by Mrs. Roberts in 1914. In 1958 the Dora Roberts Foundation presented the building to Howard County along with $40,000 for establishment of a library within.

For the next 12 years, books roamed its hallways. In 1970, however, the library was relocated to the old post office building, and the museum and its artifacts — once turned over to Midland County Historical Society for safekeeping — had a permanent home.

Its doorways opened in 1971, but it was not until four years ago that the paths of early-day explorers and settlers became so succinctly delineated through extensive remodeling.

THE TIME travel begins in Ice Age West Texas with a display containing the partial remains of the earliest Howard County denizens — buffalo and mammoths as well as mastodons, whose great tusk curves five feet along the wall. Accompanying arrow and spear points dating back to 12,500 B.C. paint imagery of the confrontation which no doubt ensued between beast and ever-hungry man.

Then comes evidence of Indians: a skull and post-Christ points, all well-explained by murals. A map of West Texas provides the transition from the era of the red man to that of the white explorer, detailing as it does the routes of the Comanche War Trail, Cabeza de Vaca, Captain Randolph B. Marcy.

The greatest attraction, historically, has always been the "big spring" itself, that limestone-bordered basin into which pours an immense volume of water daily. First used by prehistoric men and animals, the spring was so important to the buffalo of the 19th Century that hunters rode its banks, shooting down the fur-bearing beasts at will. The earliest settlers recorded that, at one time, a man could walk a mile in any direction from the spring without stepping on anything but buffalo bones.

THE SPRING and open grasslands brought cattlemen to the county by the mid-1800s, and with them came a lore-rich culture which found life again in the 20th Century on the silver screen. Displays reflect that cowboy heritage, through branding irons, spurs, lariats, saddles, while the early-day homeowner is represented as well: here, a visitor may peruse an actual bedroom from another century.

In 1881 an event occurred which was to seal the finality of a permanent community near the big spring — completion of the Texas and Pacific Railroad. It brought a multitude of persons westward through the miracle of the iron horse, and with the push of a button, a visitor can again hear the chug and puff of the steam-powered locomotive, see its drivers through murals and photographs, almost taste the smoke through the imagery provided by railroad artifacts.

Reaching across the eons from Ice Age Texas to the 20th Century, the fossilized remains of mastadons and mammoths as well as the more recent buffalo greet visitors to Heritage Museum. Acting director Jonnie Gunnels is available for informal tours during the institution's open hours.

Texas' highway system nears end of its road

DALLAS (AP) — Texas' highway system is nearing the end of the road, deteriorating under a never-anticipated traffic load at a time when the state can afford neither the money nor the manpower to cope with its demise.

Much of the asphalt network already is nearing the end of its projected lifespan, and the system's decay causes more than just ugly roads.

Department of Public Safety officials say bad roads were a contributing factor in 158 fatal and nearly 16,000 non-fatal traffic accidents in 1981.

By the year 2000, the state says 46 percent of the roads and 38 percent of the bridges must be rebuilt or rehabilitated.

The federal government says Texas has more than 17,000 substandard bridges, a statistic in which Texas leads the nation. About 20 percent — or 6,030 — of the 29,591 bridges on the U.S., interstate, state highway and farm-to-market system in Texas need repair or replacement.

And the Dallas Morning News reported about 74 percent of the 15,942 bridges maintained by counties and cities are deficient or obsolete.

"We're now seeing the steamroll effect of a lack of funds, the age of the highways and an increase in traffic," Phillip Wilson, the Texas Department of Highways chief planner, told the newspaper.

"We're not crying wolf; we're out telling people that this is what's going to happen to our system if we can't get started on getting some relief now," he said.

Highway officials say Texas' nickle-a-gallon fuel tax, unchanged since 1955, has become the weak link in the chain of state, federal and local funds to finance highway work. It is that tax that is the backbone of highway financing in Texas.

But highway planners say even if they got more money immediately, it would be years before motorists could tell the difference. It takes anywhere from eight to 12 years to build a highway.

The state, says Wilson, must spend more each year for highway upkeep. Last year the state spent $349 million on 73,000 miles of state roads.

Engineers of 30 years ago could not envision today's traffic, and the state's population is expected to increase by 50 percent by the year 2000.

The News predicted the price tag for expanding the urban freeway network so that cities will not choke on their own traffic will be $60 billion over the next 20 years. That is almost double the present annual expenditure.

Gov. Mark White said a modern transportation system is one of the "foundations of greatness" in the state. House Speaker Gib Lewis has pledged to make roads a top priority of the Legislature.

But, highways must compete for state funds with teachers, prison, water projects, law enforcement, welfare benefits and other programs.

"We're sympathetic to the need to have roads," said John Cole, who directs the Texas Federation of Teachers, "but our position is going to be that Texas in the past has had far better roads than schools and the time has come for that to stop."

And a House study group has said the highway department's wish list has been compiled with no regard to cost or effect.

The choice between tax hikes and budget cuts is one the highway depaartment says it has faced before.

One man hospitalized for burns

Billy Anders, no age available, of 1213 E. Cuthbert Ave. suffered first, second and third degree burns to his back and left arm in a fire at his home shortly before midnight Saturday.

Firemen rescued Anders from the burning wood frame house and used 450 gallons of water extinguishing the blaze, which heavily damaged the interior of the residence.

Cause of the fire was not immediately determined. Anders was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning.

An electrical short was blamed for a fire in a vacant house at 2609 Brunson Ave. about 4 a.m. Sunday. Firemen spent more than two hours on the scene and reported heavy damage to the interior of the wood frame house.

Shortly before 10 p.m. Saturday, a fire of undetermined origin gutted a vacant house trailer on County Road 60-E, a half-mile west of CR 1130-North. Two thousand gallons of water were used in extinguishing the blaze and firemen spent two hours at the scene. The mobile home's owner was listed as Robert Hobson of Fort Stockton.

The 20th Century, as well, is represented, through such items as the switchboard from the historic Settles Hotel, and a chair constructed entirely of cattle horns which so enamored judges at a World's Fair that they awarded it a first place in its category.

HERITAGE Museum also has assumed a position as an art gallery of considerable magnitude. Here is displayed the largest extant collection of the paintings of H.W. Caylor, the Big Spring cowboy who spent much of his life reflecting the range, the taste of campfire coffee, the feel of a horse treading across the prairie. To view his artwork today is to ride in imagination through this John Wayne world of cowhide and horse flesh.

Open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m.-12 noon and 1 p.m.-5 p.m., and Saturday from 1 p.m.-5 p.m., Heritage Museum is a monument both to the people of history as well as to those who worked so hard to make the institution a reality and sustain it.

Town disappears from map

LYTLE, Texas (AP) — Von Ormy, population 264, is there. And Big Foot, with its 75 people, is also represented.

But Lytle, 101 years old and 2,000-residents strong, is not. In the eyes of map makers in Chicago, Lytle has disappeared.

And Lytly civic leaders don't like it.

Chamber of commerce head Les Snyder recently discovered to his horror as he looked at a new Rand McNally road atlas that his hometown southwest of San Antonio no longer existed.

"When you are trying to promote the town and bring industry here and then not even be on the map, it looks pretty silly," said Snyder.

Suspect released after questioning about fatal weekend shooting

Police said Willie Mae Butler of 205 Wabash was found lying on the porch of that residence about 2:20 a.m. Sunday. She had been shot once in the side with a .22 caliber rifle that was recovered at the scene.

She was pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital shortly before 3 a.m. by Ector County Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee. A man taken into custody was released without charges being filed and police said the case would be turned over to the grand jury for further investigation.

Political scientists assist attorneys

HOUSTON (AP) — When an attorney wants to know how someone who lives in Pasadena, drives a pickup truck and works in a refinery might react as a juror, University of Houston political scientists Richard Murray and Kent Tedin probably can tell him.

Murray and Tedin have assisted attorneys in about 30 cases over the past 10 years in selecting jurors they deduce would be favorable to the attorney's client.

"We can give lawyers a good idea who to play to on a jury," Tedin said.

University of Houston judicial law professor Robert Carp says it has become a matter of how much justice a person can afford, with cases administered in much the same way as in market research.

Tedin said fees for his services start at $5,000 and "the sky is the limit." San Antonio attorney Pat Maloney said he has paid up to $25,000.

Attorneys hire the researchers to conduct opnion surveys to determine a community's attitudes toward a defendant's case and to compile voting records and census information that can tell a lawyer how each person on a panel likely voted in the last election, his salary, and whether he or she is sympathetic toward the lawyer's clients.

Maloney said if he spends $100,000 preparing a case, he won't skimp on jury selection.
