Cruise ship afire in Gulf of Alaska

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A luxury liner on a 30-day cruise to the Orient caught fire Saturday in the Gulf of Alaska, and nearly 510 people — many of them elderly Americans — were bounding in chilly seas for more than nine hours, waiting to be picked up by helicopters, the Coast Guard said.

The Holland America Cruises liner was burning rapidly, Coast Guard officials said, and the weather worsened as the rescue effort wore along. Clouds and fog lowered visibility, waves surged up to 12 to 15 feet and winds whipped up to 25 to 30 knots with higher gusts, said Coast Guard Lt. Phil Johnson.

Nine hours after the passengers left the ship, all but 60 persons had been picked up and taken to the 1,000-foot oil tanker Williamsburg, the first rescue ship to arrive at the scene. The tanker has a helicopter landing pad.

After the passengers and most of the crew abandoned the Dutch vessell Prinsendam, 40 of its 190 crew members and one Coast Guardsman stayed aboard to fight the blaze. Nine hours later, they gave up, and were taken safely aboard the Coast Guard cutter Boutwell, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

At first, one injury was reported, but later in the day, Johnson said: "Everyone has been accounted for and there are no reported injuries."

He said "getting the passengers from the ship into life boats was described to us as a very orderly drill that went very smoothly."

"We're going to get everybody onto the tanker and then worry about what to do with them from there," said Ray Massey, another Coast Guard spokesman.

The rescue process slowed after some lifeboats ran out of fuel, the Coast Guard said, forcing four helicopters to transport passengers from the lifeboats to the tanker.

Thirteen passengers, suffering from mild hypothermia, were flown by helicopter to Yakutat, Alaska, about 120 miles north of the burning ship, Massey said.

"It has a list to it. There are flames visible," said Coast Guard Lt. j.g. Dave Hiltibrand said of the disabled vessel. "That's all we know about it."

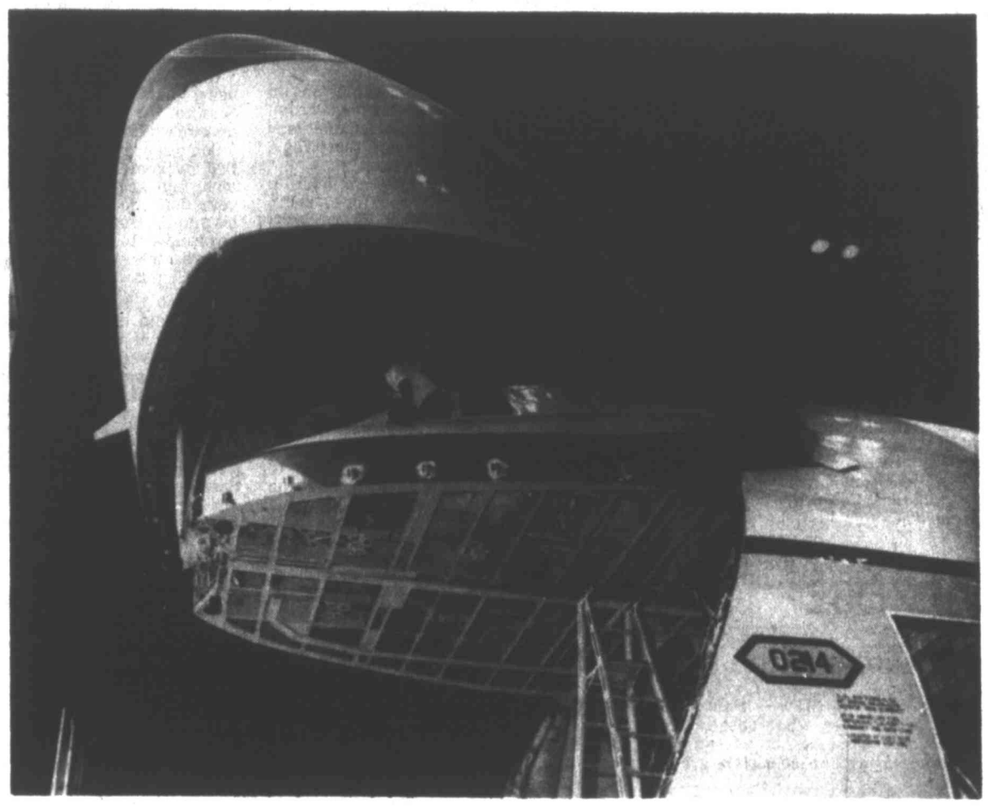

The cause of the fire was not known.

In Yakutat was a Coast Guard C-130 aircraft with medical personnel from Elmendorf Air Force Base in Anchorage. Massey said people needing hospital treatment probably would be flown to Sitka or Juneau.

The first SOS, referring to fire in the ship's engine room, was received about 2:30 a.m. PDT, Massey said.

At 6:15 a.m. the call was sounded to abandon ship, and more than 400 people were lowered into lifeboats about 120 miles west of Glacier Bay National Monument, Massey said.

Massey said loss of water pressure because of the fire left the luxury liner without firefighting capacity. Coast Guard rescue craft brought firefighting equipment, he said.

In operations of Texas Legislature

Brilab jurors given free public education

HOUSTON (AP)— Three weeks ago, during opening arguments of the Texas Brilab trial, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Woods told members of the jury they would learn many things about state politics.

Since then, the seven women and five women have had a free public education in how the Texas Legislature operates, mainly because one of the defendants is the Speaker of the Texas House.

On trial are Speaker Billy Clayton and two Austin attorneys, Donald Ray and Randall Wood, accused of accepting bribes in an insurance kickback scheme.

The government claims Clayton took $5,000 and the two attorneys a lesser amount to try to reopen bidding for the multimillion-dollar state employee health insurance contract. That contract could net a salesman as much as $1.2 million in commissions.

Two special agents, Michael Wacks and Larry Montogue, posed as representatives of Prudential Insurance Co. in the FBI undercover operation Brilab operation along with federal informant, Joseph Hauser, now serving a 30-month prison term for a bribery conviction.

As testimony developed in the opening three weeks, the jury got a seminar on politics, Texas sytle.

They have learned new words and phrases, and been made aware that getting a piece of legislation put up for a vote is not just a simple matter of saying yea or nay.

For example, they now know that a "snorting post" is the microphone in front of the speaker's podium where House members may make their appeals for or against various bills.

The jurors have learned that politicans must report all contributions of $50 or more and list the names amd addresses of the donors.

There also is a common practice when House members run for speaker, one of the most powerful positions in the state, to accept campaign contributions on behalf of other members who might be expected to support the speakership bid.

These donations generally are made directly to the candidates but the donor usually makes it clear that the money is coming from one who wants to lead the House during the next legislative session.

All these fine points of legislative operations have been brought out in testimony.

And then there is the matter of legislative courtesy.

As pointed out during the trial, no lawmaker ever says, "Your bill stinks. I'm going againt it."

Instead, there is such comment as "I just can't support this measure, maybe your next bill."

That is because an honest answer may anger a fellow legislator and who will not be there when his colleague, who rebuffed his bill, needs support for his own piece of legislation.

Clayton's executive assistant, Russell "Rusty" Kelley, testified he always agrees with people, rather than take a chance of making them angry.

Kelley said it was normal to agree even if the person speaking "is talking against your best friend. You just nod and go along."

Above all, the name of the game in politics, as this jury has learned, is compromise.

Dallas employee associations agree to mutual pay hike talks

DALLAS (AP) — Amid threats of mass firings for striking transit workers, leaders of the four Dallas municipal employee associations have agreed to an unprecedented mass meeting Tuesday to talk about pay.

Strikes by public employees are illegal in Texas, but the bus workers voted in mid-week to stage "individual job actions" to protest their recent pay raise. The result was a crippled bus service, the city's only mass transporation system.

TAKING AIM — Timothy Bundren of Vienna, Illinois takes aim through his slingshot in a mock Hatfield and McCoy feud held at the annual New Burnside Hillbilly Reunion in Illinois. The celebration continues through Sunday.

Officers of the four employee groups — representing firemen, policemen, the bus system employees and some city hall workers — met at the headquarters of the Dallas Police Association to agree on the Tuesday gathering.

"The main reason we are meeting is to discuss our common problems," said DPA President Dick Hickman. "We are all city employees and we are united in this effort."

About 600 transit system workers walked off the job Wednesday, according to their union officials, after deciding the city's 7-percent pay raise was not enough. The walkout snarled downtown traffic Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, leaving the city's bus riders stranded and forcing them to drive their cars to work.

Normally the city runs 404 buses a day. The best the bus system has managed since the walkout was 62 buses on Thursday.

Friday's three-hour, closed door meeting involved Hickman, Dallas Professional Fire Fighters Association Vice President Robert Vaughn, Amalgamated Transit Union Local 1338 President B.J. Simmons and Gray McBride, business agent for the Dallas Public Employees Association.

Simmons said he welcomed the offers of support from the other employee groups and hoped the joint meeting would convince city council members to become more involved in the Dallas Transit System dispute.

"The city council members have an obligation to get up off their tails and see what the problem is," he said. "They need to find out why 600 or 700 transit workers are willing to give up their jobs in order to fight for a decent salary."

DTS managers resolved Friday to start firing employees who had not returned to work Sunday. DTS board chairman Ken Milligan said the bus system's work agreement permits dismissal of any employee taking part in a work stoppage who misses more than five consecutive days on the job.

"They haven't done anything and can't do anything that we haven't anticipated," said Simmons. "They've been saying they're going to fire us every day."

Meanwhile, the DTS board voted to place full-page advertisements in both Dallas newspapers Friday, denouncing the bus system workers for what the ads called an "illegal work stoppage" that is "neither a fair nor a rational approach" to the pay problem.

The ads cost $11,466, much to Milligan's surprise.

"Our intent is to try to get as much information to the public as possible and I'm glad we did it," he said, "but I doubt anyone had an idea how much it would be. We might have taken out a half-page ad had we known ..."

"It looks pretty bad, doesn't it?" countered Simmons. "Here the transit system says it doesn't have enough money to give pay raises, but then they've got $11,500 to run ads in the paper.

"Why couldn't they take thgis money and give it to the employees?"

One member of the transit system staff said the one-time expenditure wiped out nearly half the annual DTS advertising budget.

Travelers spent $15.5 million

Americans traveling Howard County last year spent $15.5 million, a new study done for the Texas Tourist Development Agency has revealed.

The figure is 16.5 percent above 1978.

The Washington-based U.S. Travel Data Center found 518 travel-related jobs in Howard County, with a payroll of $3.1 million.

Travelers paid $207,000 in local taxes, and $567,000 in State taxes.

The study includes travel for all purposes. It measures the impact of all overnight trips, and day trips of at least 100 miles.

Foreign spending, not a part of the study, would have added significantly to estimated receipts, the Center said.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Water improvement

Q. Since we get all our water from our lakes, and they have only rain water — why is it so hard and salty? And can't it be softened in our treatment process?

A. It is true that only rain water runs into the lakes but the soil over which it passes contains chlorides that cannot be removed. The cost of the softening process in our treatment plants would be prohibitive and could be financed only with tax money that the average taxpayer perhaps would not want to spend. Look for a big improvement in the taste of the water, however, now that unusually heavy rains have fallen on the watersheds.

Published book gives slain president's accounts

Abilene oilman follows dream, makes it come true

(Editor's Note: When Abilenian Jack Cox went to Managua, Nicaragua, in July 1979 to do a film documentary on the Anastasio Somoza government, Abilene Reporter-News Senior Staff Writer Jim Conley went along. They were trapped when the government fell, sought refuge in the U.S. Embassy and finally got out on the personal jet of Mexican President Lopez Portillo. Here Conley reviews a new book by Cox on Somoza.)

By JIM CONLEY
Abilene Reporter-News
A Harte-Hanks Newspaper

ABILENE — Jack Cox has followed his dream and made it come true.

The former Legislator and past Republican candidate for Texas governor has written the only account so far of the fall of Nicaragua, as seen through the eyes of its former president, Anastasio Somoza.

A personal friend of Somoza, Cox spent from February until June of this year 8,000 miles away in Asuncion, Paraguay, where Somoza lived until assassinated Sept. 17.

The result was hundreds of hours of taped interviews with Somoza, boiled down to 431 analytical, often shocking, pages describing what Somoza calls the United States' betrayal of his country to the Communists.

"Nicaragua Betrayed," published for international distribution by Western Islands, Belmont, Mass., will sell for $15.

Recently, the Abilene oilman said the book has been bought for world wide syndication by United Features.

His publisher told him the book will be serialized in 45 American newspapers and others across the globe.

Cox is a private consultant on Latin America who has written extensively about U.S.-Latin American relations and is fluent in Spanish.

A three-time winner of the George Washington Medal of Honor from the Valley Forge Freedom Foundation, Cox is the author of "This I Believe."

Since 1960, Cox has maintained close relationships with Nicaraguans from every level of society, including Somoza.

No one else had been given so much as an interview by Somoza since his country fell July 17, 1979, when Cox, his documentary film crew and a reporter were there for a filming session that never came.

Taping Somoza in Paraguay six hours a day, then transcribing his tapes for 10 hours, Cox said he worked 18 or more hours daily, seven days a week, losing 30 pounds in the process.

Somoza, educated in the United States since age 10, including graduation from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, pulls no punches in his indictment of the Carter Administration and its role in the fall of Nicaragua to the leftist forces.

Somoza says in a chapter titled "The News Media and Jack Anderson," that "Documentation of the Communist brutality in Nicaragua is not difficult to obtain. The American people should be curious as to why the Carter Administration and the international press ignore the horrible violation of human rights in Nicaragua."

Students of the news media will find other interesting reading in the chapter, including Somoza's account of the shooting of ABC-TV newsman Bill Stewart by a young guardsman.

Explaining that Stewart was twice ordered to halt by the frightened soldier, Somoza nevertheless expresses deep regret — and more. He said the filming of the incident was reported to him, and he could have used his authority to seize the film.

That was suggested to him, but he did not.

But if Cox scored a journalistic coup by being allowed to tape such comments from Somoza, the ex-president had few tapes of his own which make for engrossing reading.

Somoza explained he had been advised that for some time the U.S. State Department had been taping certain of his conversations. So in the last crucial months of his administration, Somoza says in the book, he decided to do something he had never done before — tape his conversations with U.S. officials.

One of the most controversy-sparking tapes could be one from Dec. 21, 1978, a recording of U.S. Army four-star General Dennis McAuliffe, commander of the U.S. Southern Command in Panama, U.S. Ambassador William Bowdler and Somoza.

McAuliffe says he realized the strong and effective friendship of the U.S. and the military officers of Nicaragua, then says, "The situation (in Nicaragua) has changed. Speaking very frankly, Mr. President, it is our view that peace will not come to Nicaragua until you have removed yourself from the presidency and the scene."

A footnote states that on June 6-7, 1979, Gen. McAuliffe gave sworn testimony to a U.S. congressional subcommittee during the Panama Canal hearings that he had never asked Somoza to resign the presidency or leave the country. The question was put to McAuliffe at two points during the hearings, and he lied to the subcommittee each time, according to the tape versus the Congressional Record as Cox researched it.

Somoza explained in the book that he wanted only two things from the United States, which he had supported during his entire administration and with great risk in helping the U.S. with the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba.

Somoza said he wanted only assurance that the U.S. would not allow a Communist takeover and assurance that his loyal National Guard would not suffer at the hands of the Sandinista rebels after he left the presidency. Taped documentation indicates the U.S. agreed with both requests, but Somoza said the promises were empty.

If one final blow was needed to crumble his already shaking position, he said, it came in the form of the U.S. worldwide arms embargo against his government.

Somoza says he remains an ardent admirer of the U.S. and its principles despite his experience at the hands of the Carter Administration. But finally he warned that Nicaragua is not the only country in danger of enslavement.

WRITER WITH SOMOZA — Jack Cox, right, an Abilene oilman who has written the only account former Nicaraguan president Anastasio Somoza gave of the fall of his country, goes over the proof of his book with Somoza in Asuncion, Paraguay, in May, one of the last pictures taken of the president, who was slain Sept. 17 in Asuncion by a terrorist group. The book, "Nicaragua Betrayed" was published two weeks before the assassination.

Four armed men sought

CLEVELAND (AP) — Police were looking for four armed men who robbed a congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses of an estimated $1,700 and drove away with an elder of the group in the trunk of a car.

The men burst into a Kingdom Hall during a prayer meeting Friday evening and took cash and jewelry from 40 people. One man reportedly was beaten but refused treatment, and a 13-year-old girl became hysterical and was taken to a nearby hospital.

The elder, Fred Sands, 32, was released unharmed in a wooded area. He said the men, armed with handguns and wearing ski masks, took his watch and $95 in cash.

FBI arrests Iranian

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The FBI has arrested a member of the Iranian Free Army, an anti-Khomeini group, who allegedly planned to bomb a Moslem student meeting as part of a struggle to "reclaim Iran."

Naser Rahimi Almaneih, 28, was being held on $1 million bail. FBI agents said Almaneih planned to detonate two pipe bombs Friday night at a meeting of the Moslem Students Association at San Jose State University.

Almaneih, a native of Iran, was arrested Thursday after the FBI staged an automobile accident near a framing and glass shop he owns to draw him outside. A raid on the shop netted two pipe bombs.

Bank official charged

DALLAS (AP) — A bank official who vanished when he was sought for questioning has been charged with stealing $250,000 from the First National Bank of Dallas by making loans to a nonexistent company.

In an indictment returned Friday, Johnny Earl Johns, 39, of Hurst, Texas, was accused with stealing the money from Gary Hutson, a vice president in charge of the department where Johns worked.

Bank spokesman Jerry Bennett said that $1 million was involved in the embezzlement, but declined to elaborate.

Johns worked at the bank eight years and has not been seen since Sept. 25, when bank officers called him in for questioning, said Assistant District Attorney Richard Zadina. Johns' wife has refused to comment.

Power plant shut down

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — The new Sequoyah nuclear power plant — the second nuclear plant licensed since the accident at Three Mile Island — had to be shut down within 90 minutes of its official start-up.

Potentially worsening

Iran-Iraq war seen as only static now

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — After almost two weeks of air strikes on key oil installations, Iraq and Iran are settling into a static but potentially worsening war that Western diplomats believe will last as long as Iran's bullets hold out.

With Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini exhorting his people to fight on, Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr rejected Iraq's call for a cease-fire, presented at the United Nations last week, that was contingent on Iran halting its "aggressive" activity.

The cease-fire proposal was seen by the Western diplomats here as an effort by Iraq to consolidate its positions on the ground inside Iran. Although it failed, the diplomats said, it nonetheless helped Iraq appear to be trying to halt the hostilities.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi has said Iraq has seized all the roughly 155 square miles of disputed border lands it sought. Iraq wants the border redefined according to a 1913 agreement between the two countries.

The captured area is defined by Iraqi penetrations at three points on the Iranian border, and Iraq also wants the border to include the east bank of the Shatt al-Arab waterway as Iraqi territory. Under a 1975 accord, annulled by President Saddam Hussein of Iraq last month, the border was down the center of the Shatt al-Arab.

Iraqi forces also are fighting for control of the Iranian cities of Khorramshahr and Abadan, on the bank of the Shatt al-Arab, and Dezful and Ahwaz to the north.

Dezful is the site of a key Iranian military base and Ahwaz is the center of Iran's oil-producing Khuzistan Province, which has an Arabic-speaking minority and is known here as Arabistan. Iran is mostly Persian although it, like most Arab nations, is Moslem.

Iranian forces last week began their counterattacks on Iraqi positions near the four cities. Western reporters who went to the front saw the Iraqis, who are shelling these cities, come under artillery and air attacks by the Iranians. Iraq, however, appears to be holding firm, according to these reporters.

The stalemate, however, puts great pressure on Khomeini's regime in Tehran, the Western diplomats say.

Iran is facing serious economic problems that have been compounded by the loss of oil revenues during the war and by the economic boycotts resulting from its holding of the U.S. hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran since last Nov. 4.

The diplomats say they have been surprised Iran's ability to fight, particularly the tenacity of its air force, in light of the U.S. embargo on spare parts for its aircraft and other equipment.

"It's anybody's guess how long this can go on," said one Western diplomat. "The deciding factor will likely be the amount of ammunition and servicable war material the Iranians have."

At United Way Kick-Off Luncheon

Large turn-out is anticipated

The Big Spring-Howard County United Way Campaign drive will host its first major event with a Kick-Off Luncheon to be held Monday in the Cactus Room of the Howard College Student Union Building, according to Ron Medley, UW campaign chairman.

The luncheon will begin at noon Monday with a buffet featuring standing ribs. There will be music by the Howard College stage band, and information about the 12 agencies being aided by the United Way. Cost for the luncheon is $4 a plate. Every citizen of Howard County is invited to attend.

Dr. Charles Hays, president of the Big Spring United Way, noted, "It is very important that there's a big turnout for the luncheon to start this campaign on a positive and enthusiastic point of departure."

Daryle Hohertz, former president of the United Way, noted that virtually every person in Big Spring and the surrounding area is touched by one or more of these 12 agencies. Therefore, it would be appropriate to attend this kick-off function to show appreciation for the services of these agencies, and to show support for the united efforts to fund them.

Medley added, "A lot of workers are committed to making the effort to serve as team leaders to assure a successful, effective campaign, but it will take the support of the whole community if we are to reach our objective."

This year's goal is $250,000.

For expulsion from Congress

Treason was only cause once

States News Service

WASHINGTON — They have published obscene literature, called each other names, fallen into fisticuffs and even practiced polygamy. But until now only treason has stirred the U.S. House of Representatives to expel some its members.

There were three, to be exact, at a time when emotions were running high during the Civil Car. At no time before or since has the House exercised — some would say overstepped — its authority to discharge members from the chamber.

The Constitutional qualifications for a House seat are few. A member must be at least 25 years old, a resident of the U.S. for no less than seven years, and a citizen of the state he or she represents.

"Each House may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a Member."

The historical reluctance to expel members stems from a fear of undercutting the rights of the constituent to choose their representatives. That is why literally dozens of members guilty of greater or lesser breaches of conduct over the last two centuries have been able to hold onto their titles, or at least escape expulsion.

Many observers believe Thursday's expulsion of Rep. Michael Myers, D-Phila., will make such ousters more common.

Usually the House has satisfied itself by condemning a member's act, through reprimand or censure, though it has opted once in a while to "exclude" newly-elected members from their seats.

Not since Kentucky Rep. Henry C. Burnett, and Missouri Reps. John B. Clark and John W. Reid were expelled from the House because of their allegiances to the Confederacy, has a member received the severest penalty available to that body.

In 1870, for example, Rep. B.F. Whittemore, under investigation for allegedly selling appointments in the U.S. Military Academy, was censured by his peers. He later resigned to escape expulsion, and was re-elected, only to be excluded for "conduct unworthy of a representative of the people."

Utah Rep. George O. Caghan, a devout Mormon who said his constituents were well aware that he had several wives, was also denied the right to take the oath of office in 1887. But not before he argued long and hard that the action violated his First Amendment religious rights, and that "the people he represents have elected him and are satisfied with him, and this House should be content."

The House has tended to steer clear of removing members simply for what was deemed "immoral" behavior, as in the case of Rep. John C. Conner. Democrat of Texas. In 1870, two peers presented affidavits declaring that while he was an officer in the U.S. Army, Conner had "cruelly whipped and otherwise punished certain Negro soldiers of his command, and that later, ... in a public speech, he had boasted of the deed and had also stated he had escaped conviction by a military court by bribing the soldiers with circus tickets so that they would not testify against him."

Rep. James A. Garfield of Ohio wondered aloud if anything in the Constitution forbade election of a "moral monster" to Congress, and Eban C. Ingersoll of Illinois replied that "the people may elect a moral monster to Congress if they see fit, but I believe that Congress has a right to exclude that moral monster from a seat if they see fit."

Conner subsequently was seated anyway, as was Louisiana Democrat J.H. Acklen, who stood accused of seducing a woman in 1877. Speaker Samuel J. Randall of Pennsylvania offered that "the charges did not directly affect the representative character of a Member."

In 1921, Texas Democrat Thomas Blanton got off with censure after he published obscenity-laden remakrs in the Congressional Record. The House lacked the two-thirds majority need for expulsion.

There was the time in 1793 when Democrat Matthew Lyon spat on Federalist Roger Grisweld, after the latter taunted him about his Army record. The House first voted to expel him.

We're slowly converting to metric system

There are people who will resist the implementation of the metric system to the end, but it's going to become standard everywhere. The suggested route is to learn it by degrees.

The Natural Bureau of Standards, an adjunct of the U.S. Department of Commerce, sends along a handy brochure it calls the Metric Style Guide, which every family in America should have and study.

PRESIDENT GERALD Ford actually signed the Metric Conversion Act almost five years ago, thereby established for the first time a national policy to coordinate the use of the metric system in the United States.

It would seem not much progress has been made toward conversion to the metric system since that time, but that assumption would be wrong. The policy will become evident over the next few years as more and more businesses, industrial firms, schools and government agencies — especially schools — adopt the metric system. Every American is already being affected by the changeover.

The government is counting on the news media to play a singularly important role in assisting the American public through this period of transition.

Most Americans will need to know only a few metric units for every day activities. Even now, the average American should have learned that the meter is 3½ inches longer than a yard, a kilometer is 6-10ths of a mile, a centimeter is about the width of a paper clip and a millimeter equates to about the thickness of a paper clip.

AMERICANS WILL also come to know the meaning of a hectare (2½ acres), will learn that a gram is no heavier than a paper clip, a kilogram is 2.2 pounds and a metric ton is, in fact, a long ton, or 2,240 pounds.

A liter evens out to a quart and two ounces, a milliliter to 1-5th teaspoon.

The Celsius temperature scale will also come into use. Its familiar points include: The freezing point of water is zero degrees, the boiling point is 100 degrees. Normal body temperature is 37 degrees while a comfortable room temperature would range from 20 to 25 degrees (or 68 to 77 Fahrenheit).

The metric system is used virtually everywhere but in the United States. It's time we got in step.

Customer always right

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — "Hello, Mr. Carter? This is Mme. Gandhi. I'd like to call in my order. Have your deliveries gone out today?"

"No, ma'am. Our driver hasn't left yet."

"Well, I'd like a quart of milk, a dozen eggs, a box of steel wool, and 38 tons of enriched uranium."

"Yes, ma'am. It sounds like you're planning a big party."

"Never mind what I'm planning. Just send over the order."

"I'm not sure we have 38 tons of enriched uranium in stock. You wouldn't care to take 38 tons wheat instead?"

"I would not. Every time I call, you say you're out of enriched uranium. If you can't stock what your customers want, I will have no choice but to go across the street."

"PLEASE DON'T GET upset, Mme. Gandhi. As you know, the motto of our store is, 'Give Everyone a Bang for Their Buck.' Do you want the instant enriched uranium or the type you cook from scratch?"

"I don't know the difference."

"Why don't you look on your atomic reactor and see what it calls for?"

"How did you know I cook on an atomic reactor?"

"I just assumed it. Most people who order enriched uranium have atomic stoves."

"Send over the instant uranium. I'm in a hurry."

"All right. Just follow the instructions on the box. There are all sorts of delicious recipes on the back."

"I know what I want to make with the enriched uranium, and I'm certain the instructions are not on the box."

"Mme. Gandhi, I'm obligated to tell you that under the Food and Drug Administration Act of 1962, enriched uranium, if not correctly used, could be dangerous to your health."

"Mr. Carter, I don't need someone telling me how to make uranium curry."

"There's no reason to get upset. I'm just following the law. If I sold the uranium and people got sick to their stomachs, I would be responsible."

"That does it. Please cancel my order. I'll get my uranium elsewhere."

"Don't hang up, Mme. Gandhi. I'm sure you won't do anything stupid, and I won't pursue this subject any further. Did you want any heavy water to go with the uranium?"

"Why? Do I need some?"

"Oh, yes. You have to mix the uranium with heavy water or the uranium will stick to the bottom of the pan."

"How much heavy water will I need to cook 38 tons?"

"OFFHAND, I would say 25 gallons to a ton. You don't want it to get too thin or it will boil over and contaminate the entire Vale of Kashmir."

"All right, include the heavy water."

"Right, Mme. Gandhi. I've written it down. Anything else I can help you with?"

"Do you have any plastic garbage bags I can put the waste in?"

"Certainly. Would a dozen be sufficient?"

"Not for what I've got in mind. You better send me a gross."

"I agree with you. There's nothing like stockpiling up for a rainy day. Heh, Heh, Heh."

"Don't get chummy with me, Mr. Carter. You're just lucky I'm giving you my business."

"And don't think we aren't grateful, Mme. Gandhi. Your account means a lot to us." "I should hope so, and you better remember it if you want me to keep buying your uranium."

"Don't worry about that. Your order will be on the truck this afternoon, and, on behalf of everyone in the store, we sincerely hope that you have a bang-up time."

Tackle produces football burner

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Making a tackle the other day at practice I got a terrific burning pain in my left arm. I didn't really hit the arm all that hard, or fall on it, or anything like that, just made a routine tackle. The funny part of it was that the pain went all the way down my left arm. It only lasted a very short time and my arm was 100 percent OK afterward. What happened? Some teammates have had the same thing. I'll put your answer up in the locker room. — H.H.

I'll know I've really made it, H.H., when my Body Action column ends up on a locker room wall.

From what you tell me, I suspect you and your teammates could use a bit of instruction on adjusting shoulder pads. Let me try to explain.

What you describe sounds very much like a football burner. After jolting the neck or shoulder, a player may have a sharp, burning pain in the arm and hand on that side. The burning sensation lasts only a few seconds, but the arm and hand may be weak and feel numb for a few minutes after. The jolt does not have to be to the arm itself.

The actual injury occurs to the large nerve trunk in the neck that serves the arms. This nerve can be stretched when the shoulder is pushed down, as in blocking or tackling. It will also happen sometimes when the head is pushed backward or toward one side. The injury is not permanent and there are seldom any lasting effects. It does demonstrate the importance of well-fitted shoulder pads and those exercises to strengthen neck muscles.

Maybe this should go up in the coach's room.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I ride an exercycle 30 minutes a day and do mild exercises recommended for older people. Since taking Inderal my pulse seldom goes higher than 60 beats a minute, regardless of the exercise. Should I be concerned about such a slow beat? — E.G.R.

That's a great question, E.R., but we had better share some background information with other readers so they will know what we are talking about. Propranolol (Inderal) is sometimes used to lower blood pressure. It accomplishes this by slowing the pulse rate. Keep that in mind.

The object of a heart-conditioning exercise is to RAISE a pulse rate and thus place stress on the heart. The heart does not benefit from exercise unless it is under stress. This brings us right to your question.

People who use propranolol cannot raise their heart beat rate to the same stress levels suggested for others because the medicine itself is slowing the rate.

The slowness of your heart rate during exercise will not be harmful so long as you do not get any symptoms from it. If you don't, that means your heart is beating fast enough to provide sufficient circulation during exercise. Symptoms would include chest and arm pain or dizziness, etc.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My coach says I weigh too much. My dad says I don't need to lose weight, even though coach's chart says I'm 10 pounds overweight. Is there any way to find out for sure if I am really too heavy for my build? — N.N.

You forgot to list your statistics, but I can still make some general observations. It's important to learn how much of your body weight is fat and how much is lean bone and muscle mass. Most authorities agree that having from 10 to 15 ercent of total body weight as fat is OK. Much more than 20 percent fat indicates a need to reduce.

The most practical way to find out how much of your weight is fat and how much is lean mass is by measuring skinfolds. The easiest fold is the spare tire around the middle, but other measuring points are on the back of the arm and below the shoulder blades. You need to use more than one skinfold measurement site. Your coach ought to have some material for you regarding what various skinfold measurements indicate.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Most doctors recommend jogging for exercise. Why don't they recommend square dancing? People square dance all over the world, and you will see them of all ages, including a lot of senior citizens. You have fun and it's good exercise. — Mrs. L.K.

Nothing wrong with square dancing, but I don't think one would want to do it every day of the week, and most recommendations dealing with exercise and health do include the regularity factor.

You can lose weight if you really want to! The booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing," tells you how — naturally and without gimmicks — to the level best suited to your individual needs. For a copy write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Center benefits from cattle sale

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A horse sale in this West Texas city Saturday that benefited a center for physically-handicapped people raised $14,922.15, a spokesman said.

The 21st Cattlemen's Roundup for Crippled Children sold 41 horses, with proceeds going to the West Texas Rehabilitation Center, a private non-profit organization, media director James Hallmark said.

A gelding donated by former Dallas Cowboy Walt Garrison brought in the highest single total, with its $770 price tag. Texas ranchers across the state donated livestock, he said.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am a Christian, but I have difficulty with evil thoughts. For example, I have imagined evil things that I can do to hurt people I do not like. How can I conquer these thoughts? — P.T.

DEAR P.T.: You actually seem to have several problems which you need to yield to the Lord, and allow him to take away. One is the problem you mention of evil thoughts. But the other, I suspect, is hostility toward others and a lack of love. Both of these — the evil thoughts and the hostility — are wrong in God's eyes, and need to be dealt with because they will hurt you spiritually.

Let me first say something about the hostility you seem to feel toward some people. I am not a psychologist, although I know that often hostility, for example, toward people who are in authority over us, may have roots in resentments we may have had since childhood (perhaps toward a parent or someone else who tried to dominate us or dealt harsly with us).

If you have a great deal of anger and hostility toward others, you need to confess this to God because it is sin. You may even find it helpful to talk with a pastor or trained Christian counselor if it is a serious problem. Remember that Christ loves you and accepts you just as you are. And he asks you to love others and accept them also, no matter who they may be. Pray that God will give you love, and that he will teach you how to love others. A very practical suggestion is to pray for the one you would like to harm. It is impossible not to come to like those for whom we pray.

God also does not want you to have evil thoughts, no matter what they may be. How can you conquer them? An important part of the answer is to fill your mind with good thoughts — with the things of Christ. The Bible says, "Since, then, you have been raised with Christ, set your hearts on things above, where Christ is seated at the right hand of God. Set your minds on things above, not on earthly things" (Colossians 3:1-2). Are you reading and meditating on God's Word daily, and even memorizing it so your mind is being filled with Christ?

Are you learning to pray in every situation, many times each day? Let Christ fill you, and these evil thoughts you mention will begin to fade.

Mickey Mouse side

Adviser accused

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Exactly 25 years ago, millions of American children watched the premiere of Walt Disney's newest creatimn — the Mickey Mouse Club. The youngsters didn't know it, but someone was watching over their shoulder. The FBI was monitoring the program, too.

While it would, of course, be ridiculous to imagine J. Edgar Hoover sitting in front of his television set sporting a big-eared Mouseketeer hat, internal FBI files reveal that the late director was a close — and critical — viewer of the Mickey Mouse Club.

Hoover did not always approve of what he saw. Why? Well, in Mouseketeer parlance, "M-I-C-K-E-Y. Y? Because we don't like you. M-O-U-S-E!"

THE DISNEY-HOOVER connection began the year before the Mickey Mouse Club was formed. A 1954 memo from the Los Angeles FBI office informed Hoover: "Mr. Disney has volunteered representatives of this office complete access to the facilities of Disneyland for uses in connection with official matters and for recreational purposes."

Two months later, Disney was approved as a regular FBI contact. So far, so good.

But in 1957, a committee within the FBI approached Disney on the possibility that he might film a segment on the FBI laboratory for use on the Mickey Mouse Club show.

Hoover was outraged. The committee "should not have done this without prior approval," Hoover penciled on the memo, adding: "This is a most embarrassing and unfortunate situation. No one should initiate such a move without clearance here."

In a subsequent memo, a Hoover aide explained the director's objection. "It is not felt that the Mickey Mouse Club is the proper place to publicize this . . . It comes on at 5:30 p.m. each weekday and is aimed at the 'small fry.' If we are going to do this, we should do it right, and try and get Disney to do a one-hour Disneyland show, which at present is at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday night. This show has an adult and juvenile appeal."

The obliging Disney agreed, and earned the following commendation in his FBI dossier: "Appears to be a very reliable individual and has been quite friendly with the FBI."

Alas, Disney's reliability soon suffered a setback in Hoover's eyes, when he failed to let the FBI check four Mickey Mouse newsreel segments on the bureau before they were shown to the nation's moppets.

"OBVIOUSLY," SAID an internal memo reviewed by Hoover, "the mishandling on the part of the Disney Studios and failure to live up to their agreement will be taken into consideration when future appraoches are made to the Bureau by this outfit."

Hoover penciled a grim notation on the memo. "No further cooperation is to be extended to the Disney Studios."

From that point on, the once happy relationship between Disney and Hoover fell apart like a Donald Duck picnic. In 1962, the Bureau's studio-watchers were alarmed by a Disney movie called "Moon Pilot." "Discreet inquiries" showed that the film made the FBI look like — well, like a Mickey Mouse operation.

"Most references to the FBI are handled inaccurately and some are ludicrous," stated a memo to Hoover aide Cartha (Deke) DeLoach. "The Air Force officer, for example, is continually outwitting surveilling agents — and the agents are generally pictured as bumbling, heavy-footed incompetents."

Hoover ordered the Los Angeles FBI office to protest, and the FBI's name was changed to "Federal Security" in the finished movie.

PRACTICING PREACHER: Last year, the Internal Revenue Service reported that Uncle Sam loses up to $17 billion in taxes each year because of unreported income. Self-employed workers are major offenders in this area.

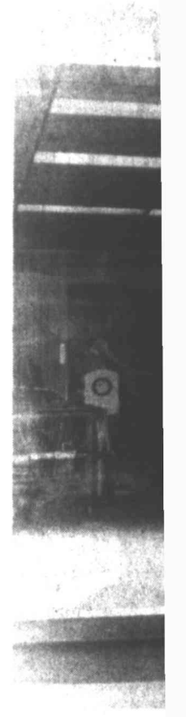

Now investigators for Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., have found that some federal agencies do a rotten job of reporting the income they pay to consultants and other self-employed outsiders. With the help of the General Accounting Office, they checked the employer-submitted Form 1099s of five agencies — the General Service Administration, the Energy, Interior and Navy Departments and the IRS itself.

The investigators found that four of the agencies submitted only miniscule numbers of 1099s, despite the millions of dollars they pay for outside services each year. The only agency that was filing 1099s conscientiously was, fittingly, the IRS.

HERO ON THE SPOT: Lech Walesa, leader of the triumphant Polish strikers, is a hero to his countrymen, but a marked man in the Communist Party's book.

Anxious to please their Kremlin masters and forestall a still-feared Soviet invasion, the obedient leaders of the new Polish regime are quietly preparing a propaganda campaign to discredit Walesa. Diplomatic and intelligence sources say the regime is ready to spread lies about Walesa's personal character and his family if the political situation deteriorates.

WATCH ON WASTE: Art Buchwald once wrote that the single most prized status symbol in Washington is free, reserved parking space. Congress has been eagerly — and expensively — pursuing this perk ever since.

Big Spring 'sitting on a gold mine'

Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center stages open house today

By RICHARD HORN

Citizens interested in learning more about physical rehabilitation are invited to the open house at the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center at W. 3rd and Lancaster. The Center will be open to the public 1:30-5:30 p.m. today.

Present at the Open House will be the Rehab Center's founder and first director Jim Thompson, currently director of the Brazos Valley Rehabilitation Center in Bryan.

The purpose of the Open House will be to acquaint people with some of the services that are offered, and to give people an idea of how the center operates.

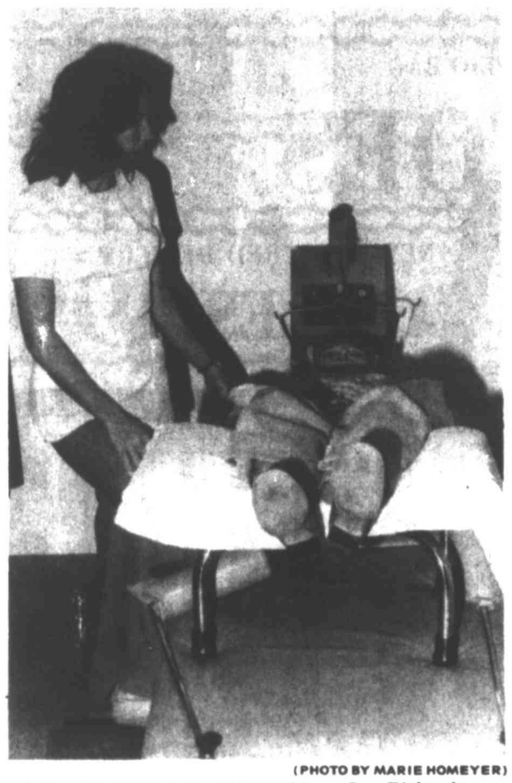

"We want people to be aware of what the organization is doing, and how we function," said Larry Bristo, the Center's current director. "We want people to know that they are really sitting on a gold mine. This is the largest and most well-equipped organization of its kind in all of Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Louisiana, and Arkansas."

The Rehabilitation Center has been offering its various services to Big Spring residents since 1961. The staff offers approximately 18,500 treatments annually. Ten full-time staff are employed by the Center, including two doctors contracted on a regular basis: an audiologist from Midland and an occupational therapist from Odessa. The entire staff is licensed, registered, or certified by national agencies.

The Center is a non-profit organization, which receives its funding from severel sources. A system of sliding fees based on a patient's income, among other factors, covers about 16 percent of the Center's costs. The rest of the costs are covered by various grants and trust funds. The board of directors expects to operate at approximately a $112,516 deficit this year.

Services offered at the Rehabilitation Center include audiology, and speech pathology, as well as occupational and physical therapy. The Center also houses the Public Health Department and the Howard County Family Service Center.

One of the largest programs offered is called Big Help for Little Folk. This is a federally-funded program that works with infants up to age two, and involves socialization and play activities designed to help handicapped infants adjust to their specific problems.

ONE OF REHAB'S SERVICES — Ina Richardson (patient) and Anita Morales (therapist) work with "intermittent cervical traction." This process pulls on the patient's spine and provides traction for the cervical vertebrae. This will help relieve pressure on the nerves and slip the vertebrae in a proper position to relieve pressure.

A&M has a mansion now, in Austin

By SHUNDA NOVAK
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas A&M's newly restored Hirshfeld mansion cast a maroon glow last week in Austin — a city traditionally luminated by the University of Texas' orange spotlight where Longhorn fever burns high.

With renovation of the 94-year-old mansion completed, A&M officials hope to establish it as center to inform the public about the university's research projects, academic pursuits and public services.

"We wanted a place to show taxpayers what A&M does for the benefit of the people, and no city has more visibility than Austin," said J. Hiram Moore, who bought the house for $300,000 in 1977 from the Austin Heritage Society.

Moore later donated the property and funds for its renovation to the Texas A&M Development Foundation.

"We could have built a modern building cheaper than what it cost to restore this one, but (the house) preserves history and that tells something to the young people who come along," said Moore, a geologist from Midland and a 1933 A&M graduate.

Restoring the property, which includes a carriage house and 104-year-old honeymoon cottage, was a costly venture, with carpentry work alone estimated at $1 million.

Working 2½ years on the project, architects found that even in 1886 the house reflected the tastes of its present owner.

They discovered, after scraping through layers of paint, that the building's original colors were the same maroon and white now coating the exterior, said architect Chartier Newton, who worked on the project along with the firm of Bell, Klein & Hoffman.

Other time-consuming tasks, Newton said, involved reproducing original carpet samples in England, casting wrought iron fence posts in Mexico, and treating yellow pine wood with preservatives in North Carolina.

The remodeled structure may be a replica of the $21,252 home built by Henry Hirshfeld, founder of Austin National Bank, but to its last owner, the Victorian mansion has changed drastically since last occupied in 1973.

"It's not easy to visit something that's changed," says Marie Hanna, one of Hirshfeld's granddaughters.

Mrs. Hanna, an Austin National Bank director, says she had planned to sell the 12-room mansion for use as commercial property. But when she found out a move was under way to change the zoning from commercial to historic, Hanna sold the property to the Austin Heritage Society to avoid fighting the historical zoning in court.

As new property owners, A&M will change the function of the mansion as dramatically as the historic restoration altered its appearance.

Although final plans are pending on how the building will be used, the Texas Transportation Institute — which conducts highway research for the university and state transportation agencies — plans to move its offices to the historic landmark in downtown Austin, said Robert Walker, vice president of A&M's development foundation.

Walker also said the property will be ideal for hosting events sponsored by the Austin A&M Club, its alumni association and mothers' club and the university's publishing company.

"We feel our first obligation is to A&M," Walker said, explaining that organizations linked with the college will receive top priority when space is leased.

Moore, however, says his contribution was made as much for the state of Texas as the university.

"I believe anyone who gets an education at a state university owes something back to the state," he said.

TEXAS A&M'S HISTORICAL MANSION — Texas A&M University in College Station has restored a 94-year-old building in Austin to inform the public about the benefits offered at its college. The Hirshfeld Mansion was first used as a honeymoon cottage and took two and one-half years to renovate at a cost of $1 million. The building was donated to Texas A&M by a former student and Midland oilman.

Hatha Yoga class to be offered at YMCA

A Hatha Yoga Class is being organized at the local YMCA. Hatha Yoga is a scientific method of body movement, stretching, and postures that benefits the whole body. Through the proper practice of this physical yoga, one is able to stretch out and relax tight, contracted muscles, massage and strengthen inner organs and loosen stiff rigid bone joints.

Unlike most competitive sports, Hatha Yoga emphasizes awareness of both inner and outer body movements, instead of just outside body activity. This enables one to acquire a keen sense of body awareness and coordination.

Through its related series of exercises, Hatha Yoga techniques are intended to rejuvenate and bring into proper balance all aspects of the body. In addition to this, by combining breathing and relaxation techniques with Hatha Yoga, you can learn to control and release stress causing tension. Breathing and relaxation techniques will both be included in this class.

The class is open to both men and women. And, because Hatha Yoga is flexible enough to allow you to work with your own degree of ability, you would be able to benefit from the class regardless of your age or physical condition. There will be a free demonstration and information session on Tuesday, October 7 from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. For more information about the class, you can either call the YMCA or Jerry Simonek, the instructor.

Award leaves Bergland dumbfounded

States News Service

WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department is not a consumer agency says Secretary Bob Bergland and an award to one of his top USDA appointees for turning it into one has left the secretary "dumbfounded."

Webster says dumbfounded is "to be made speechless by shocking," but Bergland had enough of his faculties left in a letter to the House Agriculture Committee chairman to blame himself for the alleged change in USDA policy.

It all started in early September when Howard Hjort, USDA director of economics, policy analysis and budget, received a $20,000 cash bonus as part of an incentive program for top-level federal bureaucrats.

Dozens of other top agency staffers were cash winners also, but none attracted the attention and the ire that Hjort's did.

A description of Hjort's accomplishments, distributed in a booklet at a White House ceremony, said he "has successfully made the shift in USDA policy from producer-oriented to consumer-oriented in policy and budgetary matters."

After a protest letter to President Carter from the president of the National Association of Wheat Growers and a few angry congressional phone calls, a "dumbfounded" Bergland called the whole thing a mistake in a letter to Ag committee chairman Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash.

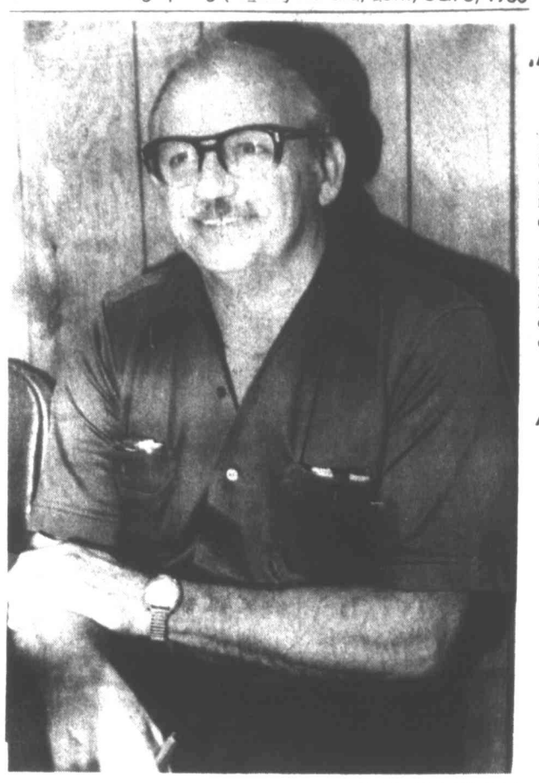

"The statement, to put it simply, is flat wrong. In no way does that statement represent the president's feelings, the department's policy, or my own." Bergland said.

But worse yet, the secretary, who praised Hjort's work, acknowledged he himself approved the "consumer-oriented" language inadvertently.

"It simply was an error which slipped through the cracks — one of several papers I signed in haste one evening and it had not received any previous policy-level review." wrote Bergland.

"This is and will remain the Department of Agriculture. Our primary concern has been, is today, and will continue to be the economic and social strength of the people on our country's farms and ranches."

So who wrote the sentence that caused all the trouble?

CLOVIS PHINNEY JR. BROUGHT CHANGE
. . . to IUOE, Local 826 as manager

Phinney brings change to union

By RICHARD HORN

Clovis Phinney Jr. took over Sept. 15 as the Business Manager of the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 826.

Phinney, 49, served as President of the Local Union since 1968, and has been an active union member since 1949. He defeated former Business Manager Kenneth Howell in an election among local Union members held August 29.

Born and raised in Coahoma, Phinney graduated from Coahoma High School in 1948 and attended Howard County Junior College. He went to work at Cosden Refinery in 1949, at a time when membership in the local union was required for employment. He has been active in local committees of the Union since 1957, and has served as treasurer on the Executive Board.

The office of Business Manager is a salaried position, whereas the local presidency and other executive offices are non-salaried. Holders of those jobs work at the refinery.

The local unions membership fluctuates at approximately 1300, according to Phinney. It was charted in 1943 and since that time has merged with locals in other cities, including Colorado City, Odessa, and Hobbs, N.M.

The position of Business Manager is a full time job. Its duties, according to Phinney, include, arbitration, representation, contract negotiations. "I'm responsible for running the union, in short. But everything I do must have approval of the Executive Board and memberships," he says.

Aside from Union activities, Phinney is involved with the United Way. He is currently serving as vice-president of the Coahoma School Board, and is the area director for the Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy campaign. He lives in Coahoma with his wife Janie. They have three grown children.

"I feel like my greatest responsibility is to keep the union operating in the best interest of all the members," says Phinney.

At Cotton Growers meeting

Lamesa rudely greets Bergland

LAMESA — U.S. Agricultural Secretary Bob Bergland got a rude reception at the semi-annual meeting of the Lamesa Cotton Growers here Friday.

When he arose to speak, 200 American Agriculture Movement members got up and walked out of the meeting.

National AAM chairman Marvin Meek, a Hale County farmer, had previously announced his organization would support Ronald Reagan for president. Bergland is a Jimmy Carter appointee.

Lloyd Cline, a member of the Cotton Growers advisory board who introduced Bergland, said the group had been 'forewarned' about the walkout, adding:

"We observed no members (of the Cotton Growers) leaving."

Shortly after the walkout, news agencies across the state started receiving telephone calls from Reagan-for-President forces advising them of the protests against the administration's farm policies.

Cline said none of the protesters carried signs inside the Lamesa High School auditorium but some reportedly passed out "Dump Carter" stickers outside the building. One poster said "Trade Bergland for the hostages."

Bergland was invited here to dedicate Lamesa's new cotton classing office. According to Cline, there were no incidents at the ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Bergland acknowledged the snub by saying the farmers had a right to dissent. The original crowd was estimated at 750 persons.

Meek said his group was tired of trying to 'reason and bargain' with USDA representatives over farm policies and the walkout was planned because "farmers realize the only way to make a point with this administration is to embarrass them."

FARM FORUM

By RONNIE WOOD

You have to really be looking for something to worry about to join in with some of those who've decided that we have a major problem with cities taking over farmland. According to experts who have studied air photo maps of the country's most rapidly growing urban counties, less than two percent of cropland in those counties was displaced by urban development. This boiled down to one acre of cropland being displaced for every twelve new people moving into a city. And for those who can still manage to worry about this less-than-fearsome takeover of cropland, there's another set of statistics hot off the press. According to government estimates, there is over 110 million acres of now idle land in the United States that could be producing crops within the next two years. So, on your list of priority worries . . . mark running out of farmland way down at the bottom.

Of scandal in recent history

Congress has more than a share

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 96th Congress, more than any in recent history, is becoming as notable for its performances off the House and Senate floors as on, amid recurring reports of questionable conduct.

During the last nine months the toll has included one member expelled after a bribery conviction, five others still under indictment, another beginning a prison sentence, several admitting serious drinking problems, and one agreeing to a special treatment program after being accused of soliciting sex from a teen-age boy.

Although congressional misbehavior is nothing new — scholars say there probably was more of it early in the century — this Congress has taken on greater taint as one scandal after another has emerged.

Last week on what some congressional aides have called "Black Thursday," Rep. Michael "Ozzie" Myers, D-Pa., was expelled from the House of Representatives because of his bribery conviction in the Abscam scandal — the first congressman to be thrown out since 1861.

The next day, Rep. Robert O. Bauman, R-Md., a leading conservative, agreed to a court-imposed alcoholic treatment program, after facing government charges that he solicited sex from a 16-year-old boy in a Washington bar frequented by homosexuals.

Rep. John Jenrette, who is on trial here in the Justice Department's Abscam bribery investigation, told jurors his judgment was impaired during meetings with undercover FBI agents because of heavy drinking.

Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., while being "denounced" by the Senate over charges that he cheated on expenses and diverted campaign money to personal use, also admitted to problems with liquor. Reps. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., and Joe Wyatt Jr., D-Tex., have made similar public confessions, saying they are now cured of their alcoholism.

In July, Rep. Charles Diggs Jr., entered a federal prison in Alabama on a three-year sentence for taking payroll kickbacks. Earlier he had resigned from Congress, having been censured by his colleagues.

Another congressman resigned under pressure last January.

Toxic Shock Syndrome

Local doctors, women speak on subject of tampon usage

By ANDREA COHEN

Despite warnings, it is probably not necessary for women to stop using tampons, but they should cut down on the use of them, according to Dr. Brian Caplan, family practitioner at Malone-Hogan Hospital.

Questions about tampon use arose when Proctor and Gamble recalled Rely Tampons after reports that they might be a factor in causing toxic-shock syndrome in women.

"It's not a cut and dry cause and effect thing yet," says Caplan. "A cause and effect has not been shown. If the risk is true due to tampons, the risk is small."

A Wisconsin study has shown that of 100,000 menstruating women, three contract TSS in one year. Of those, 70 percent use tampons. TSS is found predominately in women. The chances of a menstruating woman contracting it are greater for a woman under 30.

A high fever, vomiting, profuse watery diarrhea and seriously low blood pressure and shock are some of the signs of TSS. There is also a widespread flat red rash that looks like German Measles or similar to a sunburn. The urine output is decreased, the patient may become disoriented and may get red eyes with no puss. Antibiotics will prevent reoccurrences and 42 percent of TSS patients will get a reoccurrence if it is not treated properly.

The mortality rate is between three and 10 percent.

"That is bound to improve as more doctors become aware of the condition, to recognize it for what it is," says Caplan. "Before it might have recognized as something else, such as German Measles. More vigorous treatments will make the prognosis likely to improve in the future.

"What worries me is in 20 years, I've seen thousands of women who use tampons and I've never seen a case of it. It's possible there is an increase in recognizing it. But I'm not convinced it's due to the tampon."

From September, 1978 until the middle of this year, 125 cases of TSS were reported to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. On September 25 of this year, there was a total of 344 cases reported, and of that, 330 cases were reported this year. Since 1975, 29 deaths have been associated with TSS.

"Up until a couple of months ago, a CDC study, and Wisconsin and Utah studies showed no differences were found in different brands of tampons," Caplan says. "They also found no differences on how heavy the flow was or in the use of deodorized tampons. In the last month and a half, they suddenly say Rely posed the highest risk. Because of that suspicion alone, Proctor and Gamble has taken it off the market.

"The FDA says to stop using Rely and to use other brands intermittently. There was a high proportion of toxic-shock syndrome when the tampon was used day and night. The Center for Disease Control advised that to decrease the small risk even further, tampons should be used intermittently."

Toxic-shock syndrome may start with a bacteria known as Staphylococcus aureus, a germ that causes boils. In one study, vaginal cultures were taken of 17 women who had TSS. Of those, 16 had the Staphylococcus aureus. In another series, 45 cultures were taken and of those, the germ was found in the cervix, vagina, rectum or throat of 33.

REMOVED — A newly-recognized illness known as toxic-shock syndrome, found mostly in women, has caused Proctor and Gamble to take Rely Tampons off the market until further studies are done. It is recommended that women use other brands of tampons intermittently.

"It's not necessary for it to be in the vagina," says Caplan. "Quite a few people have the staph without finding the toxic-shock syndrome. And people have the syndrome without having the staph. It may or may not have anything to do with it. But there is a high proportion in toxic-shock patients. Either way, it's suspicious.

"It's possible the tampon may favor the growth of some germ by stagnation of blood. Other people think that the tampon causes friction which causes micro ulcerations in the vagina. It favors the absorbtion of bacteria. That's only a few of many possible explanations. It has not been convincingly shown.

"We do know that 96 percent of all cases occur in women with their periods, and a small number of women without their periods. Two men have also reported having it."

The CDC says that tampons may not carry or introduce the bacteria. It is not likely they carry the agent, but acts as a cofactor.

Several women in the community have expressed concern over the controversy.

"I'm curious about it," says one woman who asked not to be named. "Why were they (Rely) pulled? What about the other brands if they're all made from the same thing?" I thought Rely was the thing. They were comfortable and better than the other brands. They did a better job than the others but now I won't use them. It makes you afraid to use any of them."

Lynne McWilliams, an employee of TG&Y, College Park says quite a few women she knows are worried.

"I know one who immediately called her doctor for her yearly checkup. I've used Rely since they came out. Now they're going to say there is something wrong with all of them. I've been using them and they've been okay all this time so I might as well use them."

According to Caplan, whether tampons should be used is a matter of perspective.

"We definitely know smoking caused lung cancer, heart problems, strokes and bronchitis. But do people stop smoking? We know seat belts save lives but do people use them?

"You've got to put these things in perspective," he continues. "People who smoke mustn't worry about tampons."

College board examine scores are down again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The College Board said Saturday that high school seniors scored lower on the Scholastic Aptitude Test again in 1979-80, continuing a skid that began 17 years ago.

The board cautioned against interpreting the scores "as a measure of the overall character of this year's high school graduates, or the quality of the schools from which they came."

But the relentless drop in SAT scores has been a source of worry to parents, students and educators, and a convenient missile for critics of the nation's schools.

The nearly 1 million college-bound seniors who took the exam during the 1979-80 school year averaged 424 in verbal and 466 in mathematics, down three points and one point respectively from a year earlier. The scores have not fallen as precipitously in recent years as they did in the early 1970s.

The 2½-hour, multiple-choice test was created in 1941 to fit a scale of 200-to-800, with the average score expected to be 500.

Gov. Clements to be in area on Thursday

Gov. Bill Clements will visit in the Midland-Odessa area twice the coming week.

He arrives in Odessa Thursday morning where he will attend the 10 a.m., opening ceremonies of the Ector County Republican Club headquarters. He will spend the remainder of the day campaigning for the Reagan-Bush presidential ticket.

Clements will go to Midland to help honor Stanley C. Moore, for improving oil drilling techniques.

Clements and his wife, Rita, will also attend a reception for Associated Republicans of Texas in Midland later in the day.

A third of world can't read, write

By BARBARA S. MOFFET
National Geographic News Service

NEW YORK — Almost one-third of the people in the world — 814 million — don't know how to read or write, according to UNESCO estimates.

That includes two-thirds of the people in Africa and a third of those in Asia, excluding the Soviet Union.

In at least 10 African countries and four Arab states, the estimated illiteracy rate surpasses 80 percent. In numbers of illiterates, the top 10 nations are India, Indonesia, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Nigeria, Brazil, Ethiopia, Egypt, Iran, and Afghanistan. Each has at least 10 million.

Population booms in some countries are wiping out gains in the classroom. Literacy campaigns in India, for example, have not kept up with the numbers of people needing instruction. By the year 2000, India is expected to have half of the world's illiterates.

In most parts of the world, women illiterates outnumber the men. Female illiteracy in Africa and the Arab states, where women have less access to schools, is about 85 percent. In Yemen, on the Arabian Peninsula, 99.5 percent of the women can't read or write.

According to projections by UNESCO, there will be 884 million illiterates worldwide by 1990, a rise of 70 million in a decade. But the prediction is not as grim as it sounds: The percentage of illiterates is falling.

Increasing school enrollment have gradually educated larger proportions of the population so that the estimated number of literates is rising faster than the number of illiterates. The projected 884 million will represent only about 26 percent of the world population, down from a current rate of about 29 percent.

And thre are other bright notes. The governments of Cuba and Tanzania, for example, claim their literacy drives have turned predominantly illiterate societies into more literate ones.

Although some who are burdened with the task of eradicating illiteracy might pat themselves on the backs over the successes, others caution that literacy figures, especially predictions, are suspect.

"You have to take those projections with an enormous pinch of salt," warned Dr. Kenneth King of the International Development Research Centre in Canada, which funds research on world problems including illiteracy.

"For one thing, the figures assume that attending school ensures literacy. We know a lot about how many kids start grade one, but less about who attends grade four, and even less of what the kids know later."

Governments taking literacy surveys often rely on the individual's word about his reading abilities. So literacy figures can represent mere guesses, sometimes inflated to boost a nation's image. Actual illiteracy, some authorities say, is more widespread than statistics show.

"Some countries have confessed illiteracy rates that are extraordinarily high, so the actual figures must be really extreme," King said.

The biggest problem in gauging world literacy is that no one is sure exactly what it is. As an UNESCO publication mused; "No one is completely literate, although some persons are more literate than others."

In the early 1950s, as world attention first turned to illiteracy, UNESCO, the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization, drew up this definition: "A person is literate who can with understanding both read and write a short, simple statement on his everyday life." But, as has been pointed out since then, does such a test mean anything in an advanced society such as the United States?

"You go into the South Bronx or Brooklyn and find people who can perform better than literates in the Third World, but it's worthless because they can get a job without a high school education," said Carman St. John Hunter, co-author of "Adult Illiteracy in the United States."

The United States' official literacy rate is 99 percent. Yet the actual number of illiterates is not known, according to Paul Delker, director of Adult Education in the U.S. Department of Education. Besides uncounted illegal aliens, there is an unknown number of high school graduates who have diplomas but not the ability to read a job application.

A University of Texas study has found 20 percent of American adults to be "functionally incompetent" — lacking the skills to perform such a basic task as writing a note to their child's teacher.

Illiteracy in the United States is proportionately highest in the South and, predictably, among minorities, the poor, and the elderly. Private organizations and the government spend millions of dollars every year on the problem, but probably attract only a small fraction of the illiterates, some of whom are financially successful and keep their illiteracy closeted.

For Harry Harper, a 34-year-old sheet metal worker who grew up in New York City, the inability to read became an intolerable frustration. Now he takes an elevator twice a week to the top of a Manhattan skyscraper for free reading lessons offered by the Literacy Volunteers of America.

He hopes to pick up what he missed before dropping out of school in the seventh grade, blaming "the system" for failing to teach him the basics.

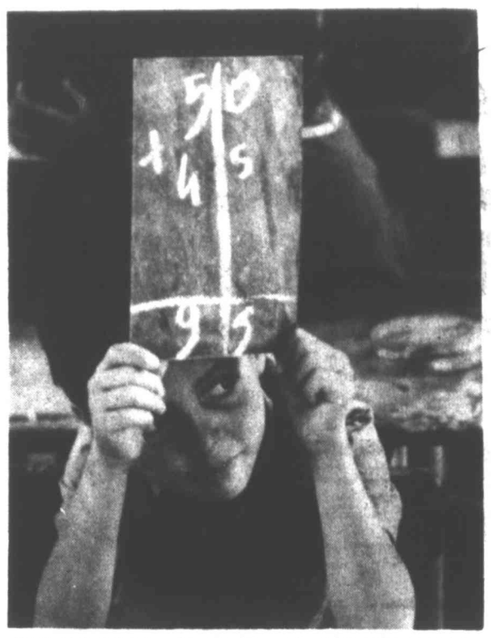

"I felt left out of a lot of things," Harper said. "I want to read some good books, like American history and mystery stories."

Teaching the rest of the world to read is a more complicated prospect. UNESCO tried it from 1967 to 1973 in a campaign that encompassed 11 nations. Its aims — to demonstrate the economic and social values of literacy and to pave the way for a larger world literacy effort — were only partly met.

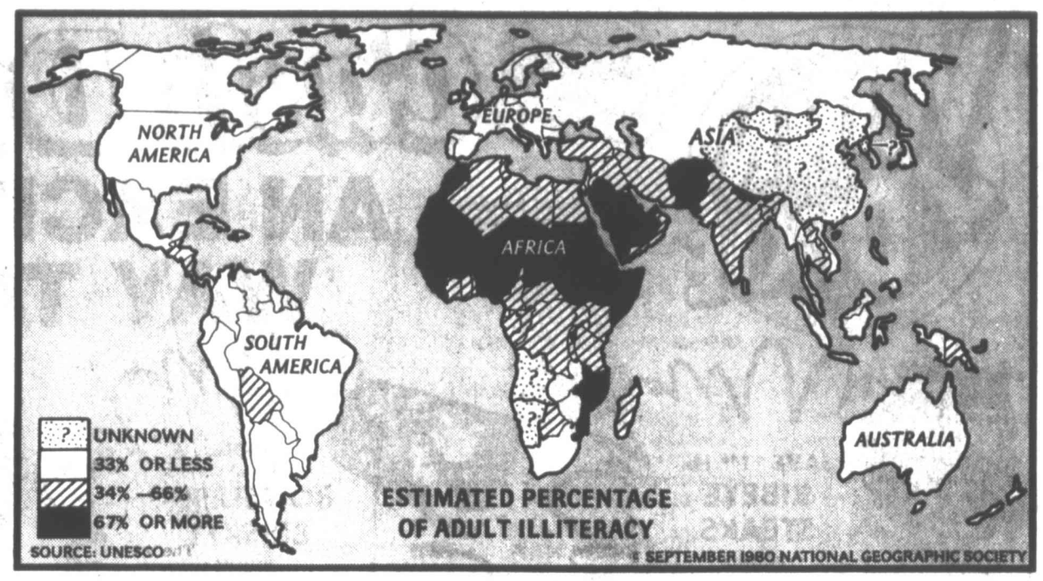

"Neither literacy nor development can be willed into existence by international agencies," a UNESCO report later concluded. "At best they can perhaps prick the conscience of national governments."

The program did spawn literacy campaigns by the governments of Algeria, India, Mali, and Tanzania. But it was plagued by problems such as high dropout rates, and in at least one Asian country the majority of pupils finishing four years of primary education were illiterate again within three years.

UNESCO learned that literacy is not merely an educational issue but also a psychological, cultural, sociological, and economic one.

BAD OUTLOOK — It all adds up for this schoolboy in Tunisia, but more than half of the country's adults can't read or write. Although school enrollments are on the rise, illiteracy remains common in Africa and the Arab states. The outlook is not good: The education system in Africa, for example, would almost have to triple by the end of the century to meet projected enrollments. By David Alan Harvey 1980 National Geographic Society

NOT GOOD — Illiteracy is concentrated on two continents — Africa and Asia — according to UNESCO. The only African countries believed to have 33 percent or less illiteracy are Zambia, Zimbabwe, and South Africa. Figures are not available for Angola and Namibia (indicated by question marks). In Asia, illiteracy is highest in Pakistan, Afghanistan, Nepal, and on the Arabian Peninsula. Figures for North Korea, Mongolia, and China are not known, although China claims to have reduced illiteracy to 15 percent. In South America, only Bolivia has a rate higher than 33 percent.

Complaining: Does it get any results

When a woman in a Zapotec Indian village in southern Mexico has a complaint, she knows she is going to be heard. Her case involving an unfair business practice, for example, is heard by the "presidente" of the village — and her problem is usually resolved that same day.

In technologically advanced societies such as ours, however, the channels available to most people raising complaints are not as simple. Consider the case of a woman in Pennsylvania who spent countless hours, not to mention energy and money, trying to convince someone that a stove she had purchased turned itself on and off unexpectedly.

Before she could convince the seller, the manufacturer or a number of federal agencies about the danger of this appliance, the stove caused a fire and her house burned down. Although she felt vindicated, what remained of her labor were the shell of a house, a three-inch-thick file of correspondence and emotional strain and frustration.

Although a dramatic case, this incident, in Dr. Laura Nader's view, is representative of the frequent failure of America's complaint mechanisms.

Dr. Nader, an anthropologist at the University of California at Berkeley, studies the evolution of law in various cultures. She is currently writing a book about Zapotec Indian law, and a new book, No Access to Law — Alternatives to the American Judicial System, will be published by Academic Press this month.

In a recent lecture sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution's Office of Symposia and Seminars, Dr. Nader spoke about her research on problem-solving mechanisms in both economically underdeveloped and technologically advanced societies.

Dr. Nader began her career by studying problem-solving among the Zapotec Indians of Mexico and the Shia Moslems of Lebanon. In such small village societies, she found, all the residents have a stake in the welfare of the community.

When someone has been wronged, the incident affects many more people than the two parties directly invovled in the incident. The laws in these villages, therefore, reflect the commitment of the legal process to the welfare of the entire community. The village can more easily maintain its day-to-day operation when complaints are heard and resolved on a daily basis.

In America and other technologically advanced societies, Dr. Nader says, there is often little or no direct relationship between the person raising the complaint and the party or parties who are the targets of the complaints. More importantly, there is often an unequal balance of power in the handling of services and products — the consumer faces a giant opponent. As a result, the problem-solving route is much more complex; more often than not, the problem remains unheard and unresolved.

During the course of her research on problem-solving, Dr. Nader became interested in the effects of unresolved complaints on American society and individuals. "The toll is enormous," Dr. Nader believes. "Unresolved complaints have a pernicious effect on the machinery of government, the mental health of Americans and the crime rate."

"In particular, unresolved problems concerning consumer items cost citizens disease, injuries and fatalities, as well as money that has, in effect, been stolen from them," she contends. "The psychological costs are substantial."

Dr. Nader and her Berkeley students studied problem-solving techniques in America, using data from the Center for Responsive Law in Washington, D.C., which is headed by her consumer advocate brother, Ralph Nader. According to a study done at the center, "one out of every six purchases leads to a recognized ground for complaint."

Despite this high rate of dissatisfaction among consumers, however, only a small percentage actually raises complaints. According to a 1975 survey of 2,419 households in 34 cities, more than half of the consuming public — 60.3 percent — does not complain about a problem that involves more than price. The survey was carried out by Arthur Best, a lawyer with the New York Department of Consumer Affairs, and Alan R. Andreasen, a professor of Business Administration at the University of Illinois at Urbana.

And what does the not-so-very silent minority complain about? Analysis of letters sent to the Center for Responsive Law revealed that the most common subjects of complaints were the medical profession, good, cars and appliances.

When a consumer does decide to complain ir. the name of justice, the legal route often is time-consuming and expensive.

LA sends race to final day

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Garvey had three hits, including his 26th home run, and Jerry Reuss scattered seven hits as Los Angeles edged Houston 2-1, preventing the Astros from clinching the National League West Division for the second game in a row.

Should the Dodgers defeat Houston a third straight game Sunday, they would conclude the regular season in a tie and force a playoff game here for the championship on Monday.

Garvey's homer to lead off the fourth inning broke a 1-1 tie. In the second, Garvey led off with a bloop single and scored the Dodgers' first run on a two-out single by Derrel Thomas.

The Astros tied the score in the fourth when Jose Cruz singled, stole second and came home on Art Howe's two-out single to center.

Reuss, 18-6, matched his career-high in victories with his eighth win in 10 decisions. The Los Angeles left-hander walked one and struck out a season-high seven.

Nolan Ryan, 11-10, took the loss, his eighth in nine career decisions against Los Angeles. Ryan has not defeated the Dodgers since 1968 when he was with the New York Mets. Ryan did not walk a batter and struck out nine, giving him 200 for the season.

Garvey's three hits gave him 199 for the season, the most in the National League.

Mr. October at it again

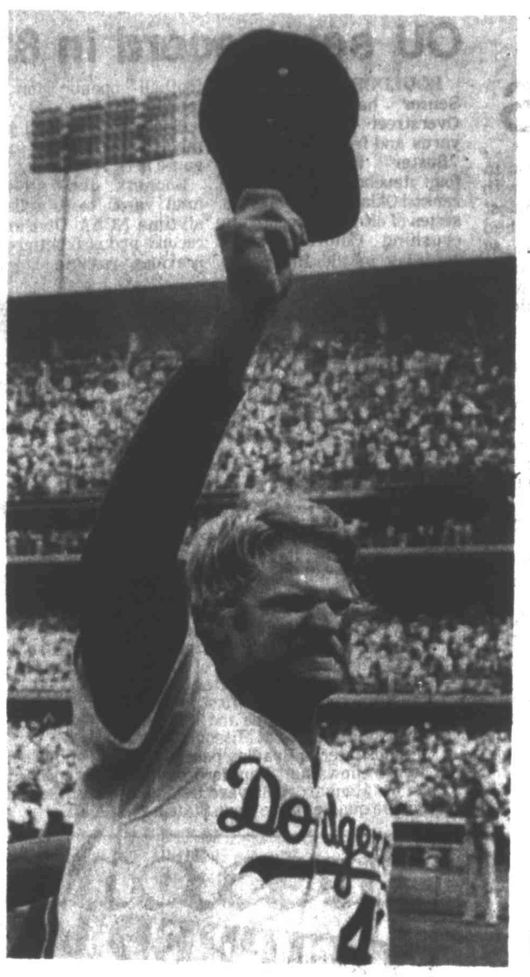

NEW YORK (AP) — Reggie Jackson crashed his third home run in as many games this month, a tiebreaking three-run shot in the fifth, to power the New York Yankees to the American League East Division title with a 5-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers in the opener of Saturday's doubleheader.

Jackson's 41st homer of the season and 410th of his career capped a four-run rally that wiped out a 2-1 Detroit lead and eliminated the second-place Baltimore Orioles.

It was the fourth division title in five years for the Yankees, who saw a 9½-game lead in mid-July dwindle to one-half game by late August. They pulled away again by winning 21 of 28 in September and their first three in October.

The Yankees will begin the best-of-five American League playoffs on Wednesday in Kansas City against the Royals, the team they defeated for the AL pennant in 1976, 1977 and 1978.

Jackson's homer made a winner of Rudy May, 15-5, who scattered six hits in seven innings. Loser Roger Weaver is 3-4.

DODGERS WINNER — Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Jerry Reuss reacts with excitement as he leaves the mound after defeating the Houston Astros 2-1 Saturday in Los Angeles. Reuss threw a seven hitter and uped his record to 18-6 for the season with the win leaving the Dodgers only one game behind the Astros with one game to play.

Little led UT holds off Rice by 41-28

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas halfback Rodney Tate scored two first-half touchdowns and quarterback Donnie Little broke the game open with touchdown bombs of 57 yards to A.J. Jones and 73 yards to Lawrence Sampleton as the fifth-ranked Longhorns blasted Rice 41-28 Saturday night.

The Longhorns had to fight for survival in the fourth quarter when the Owls went to their passing game and former starting quarterback Randy Hertel, who came off the bench and completed two touchdown passes and ran in another score.

Little, who raked Rice's secondary throughout the game, hit Jones on a 57-yard scoring pass play early in the third quarter when Texas had a first down and 45 yards to go.

Late in the quarter Little threw a flat pass to Sampleton, who blasted his way through a wave of Rice tacklers and outran the defense to the end zone.

Hertel threw a 24-yard touchdown pass to Hosea Fortune and scored on a 3-yard bootleg play. Both touchdowns were set on fumbles by Jones and Brad Beck. With 1:39 left to play, Hertel completed a 3-yard touchdown pass to Robert Hubble.

UCLA upsets Ohio State

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Tom Ramsey engineerd 11th-ranked UCLA on two third-quarter scoring drives Saturday, leading the Bruins to a 17-0 upset of second-rated Ohio Suate in a non-conference college football game.

The Bruins handed Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce his first loss in 15 regular-season games as Woody Hayes' replacement. A regional television audience and 88,084 fans, Ohio Stadium's 74th straight sellout crowd, looked on.

Art Schlichter, Ohio State's heralded junior quarterback, suffered a concussion midway through the fourth quarter and was replaced by Bob Atha. The Bruins made life miserable for Schlichter, permitting him only five completions in 12 attempts for 59 yards and holding him to no yards in 13 rushes.

Bear gets 300th as Tide breezes

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Freshman Linnie Patrick set up touchdowns with runs of 60 and 38 yards as top-ranked Alabama smashed Kentucky 45-0 Saturday, enabling Paul "Bear" Bryant to become only the third coach in college football history to win 300 games.

Hogs whip TCU again

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Fullback Darryl Bowles scored four touchdowns and the much-maligned Arkansas offense got well as the 14th-ranked Razorbacks whipped Texas Christian University for the 22nd straight time Saturday 44-7.

Arkansas, which made a total of 46 first downs in its first three games, set a school record with 37 first downs against TCU, including a record 29 on the ground.

Arkansas, which averaged 297 yards per game in its first three outings, netted 282 yards and 16 first downs in the first half alone while building a 24-0 lead.

The Razorbacks scored on six of their first eight possessions and on wound up a yard short of a first down at the TCU 5 on one of the other two.

WINNERS AND LOSERS — A battered Muhammad Ali, surrounded by stunned aides, sits in his corner as referee Richard Green raises arm of WBC heavyweight champion Larry Holmes after Holmes defeated Ali during their title bout Thursday in Las Vegas. Ali failed to answer the bell starting the 11th round, giving Holmes the victory.

Good high gives A&M win over Tech

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP)-Quarterback David Beal, a senior starting his first game, weaved for four touchdowns and Leandrew Brown intercepted three passes and recovered a fumble as Texas A&M thrashed Texas Tech 41-21 Saturday.

A&M scored three touchdowns within 2:52 of the second quarter — each set up by a key defensive play by Brown — for a 31-0 lead.

Tech scored just before halftime on Ron Reeves' 11-yard pass to 150-pound wide receiver Jamie Harris and twice in the third quarter on a 10-yard toss to running back Greg Tyler and a 37-yard heave to Renie Baker.

The A&M victory before 65,490 partisan fans erased concern that a recent drug investigation, resulting in the dismissal of three Aggie players, would hurt the team's future performances.

Coach Tom Wilson inserted eight new starters in his line-up — four each on offense and defense — as the Aggies captured their Southwest Conference opener and raised their season record to 2-2. Tech fell to 2-3 and has lost both of its SWC games.

Beal, a sub to Mike Mosley for most of his career, raced 20 yards for the first score and also had touchdown runs of 9 and 25 yards in the first half and a 32-yard scoring sprint with 3:38 remaining in the game.

The loss may have been extra costly to Tech as Reeves suffered a hand injury and back-up quarterback Mark James sustained cracked ribs.

Unbeaten NFL teams meet in San Diego

The stingiest club in the American Conference, the Buffalo Bills, on Sunday take on the AFC's most prolific scorers, the San Diego Chargers, with each team trying to keep its record unblemished after five National Football League weekends.

Most observers expected the Chargers to be up there among the conference's powers. Some even rated them higher than the Pittsburgh Steelers.

But the Bills are riding a dream. Like the Chargers, they're 4-0 — not bad considering they won only seven games all of last year. The Chargers lead the AFC West by two games (Oakland and Seattle are 2-2) while the Bills have a one-game lead over Miami and New England, each 3-1 in the AFC East.

The only other unbeaten team in the league resides in the National Conference. The Detroit Lions, a dismal 2-14 in 1979, are also 4-0 and in command of the Central Division. They visit Atlanta.

Sunday's other games are Baltimore at Miami, Cincinnati at Green Bay, Denver at Cleveland, New England at the New York Jets, Pittsburgh at Minnesota, St. Louis at New Orleans, Seattle at Houston, Washington at Philadelphia, Kansas City at Oakland, the New York Giants at Dallas and San Francisco at Los Angeles. Monday night's game is Tampa Bay at Chicago.

Baylor takes 24-12 win over Cougars

WACO, Texas (AP) — Tailback Walter Abercrombie and his backup, freshman Alfred Anderson, bolted for second half touchdowns Saturday night, igniting the Baylor Bears to a 24-12 Southwest Conference victory over defending champion Houston.

The victory for the unbeaten Bears was their first over the Cougars since Houston entered the SWC in 1976 and gave Baylor, now 4-0 overall and 1-0 in the league, its best start since 1960.

Houston is now 0-1 in SWC play and a disappointing 1-3 for the season.

The 20th-ranked Bears owned a shaky 7-6 halftime lead on the strength of quarterback Jay Jeffrey's 19-yard touchdown pass to Robert Holt after Houston's David Humphreys had kicked two 32-yard field goals.

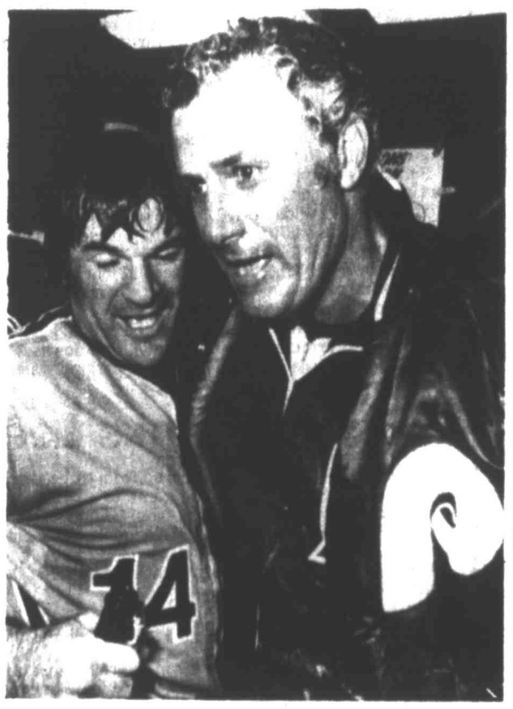

Tackle Joe Campbell recovered a John Newhouse fumble at the Houston 16-yard line only seconds after Robert Bledsoe had kicked a 34-yard field goal to give the Bears a 10-6 lead.

Abercrombie, who gained over 100 yards for the 10th time in his career, raced 16 yards for the touchdown to make it 17-6.

Houston battled back on David Barrett's six-yard touchdown run but the Bears put the game away with a 72-yard drive featuring Abercrombie's runs and spectacular pass from Anderson to Gerald McNeil. Anderson fumbled and appeared trapped but picked the ball up and completed a 10 yard pass to McNeil.

After an interference call, Anderson dashed 10 yards around left end for the clinching touchdown.

Abercrombie rushed 22 times for 110 yards.

Seminoles raid Cornhuskers with four field goals

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Bill Capece booted four field goals and 16th-ranked Florida State scored on four straight possessions to upset No.3 Nebraska, 18-14, in a non-conference college football game Saturday.

Seminole tackle Garry Futch recovered a fumble by Nebraska quarterback Jeff Quinn at the Florida State 10-yard-line with 10 seconds remaining in the game to seal the Cornhuskers' fate.

The Seminoles scored on their first three possessions of the second half. Each tally followed a turnover by the error-plagued Cornhusker squad.

Capece's field goals were from 32, 27, 40 and 41 yards. Florida State's touchdown came on a 6-yard run by Sam Platt after Keith Jones intercepted a Quinn pass.

Ford passed for two touchdowns and ran for one.

His final touchdown pass came with Tulane ahead 21-17 in the fourth quarter. He led SMU on a crisp 80-yard drive for the score, capping it with an 18-yard pass to Gary Smith.

Tulane quarterback Nickie Hall passed for three touchdowns and 346 yards.

Stanton passes by Seagraves

By DWIGHT HEINS

STANTON — Friday night in Stanton marked the showdown between previously unbeaten Class AA powers, with the Stanton Buffaloes and the Seagraves Eagles placing their records on the line and the Stanton crew coming out on top by a score of 27-21.

Lightning struck on Stanton's first play from scrimmage when quarterback Curtis Williams found an open David McReynolds for a 53-yard touchdown pass completion.

A successful Craig Eiland extra point kick gave the Stanton team a quick 7-0 lead with 8:36 left in the first quarter.

But Seagraves wasted no time in lighting up their part of the scoreboard either when at 5:35 left in the first stanza, Richard Polyak completed a pass to a well covered Scotty Middleton in the end zone from six yards out. The eight play scoring drive was keyed by a 31-yard run by the Eagles' Daniel Suniga. A successful Wayne Mahler PAT kick evened the game at 7-7.

A fumble by the Eagles' Lynn Addison rewarded the Buffs with fine field position on the Seagraves 23 late in the first stanza, and with 11:48 to go in the second quarter Williams found Rusty Allred in the left corner of the end zone from 15 yards out. Eiland's successful PAT handed Stanton a 14-7 lead.

After holding the Eagles later in the second period, Stanton gained possession of the football at the Seagraves 33. Five plays later, Williams kept up the middle from the three to score, and with 4:58 to play in the half, Eiland toed the extra point for a 21-7 Stanton lead.

Stanton had one more scoring opportunity in the first half when they recovered a Seagraves fumble on the 10. But Suniga intercepted a Williams pass to end the half and avoid any further trouble for the Eagles.

Seagraves was blessed in its first possession of the second half when a poorly booted punt gave the Eagles ball control at Stanton's 36-yard line. With 8:35 to go in the third quarter, Suniga narrowed the margin to 21-14 when he scampered 16 yards around left end to paydirt. Mahler booted the PAT to narrow the Stanton lead to 21-14.

The fireworks then exploded on a wild play that looked like a Seagraves interception, but resulted in a 72-yard touchdown pass for the Buffs from Williams to Arthur Ruiz. An unsuccessful extra point attempt handed Stanton a 27-14 lead with 6:03 left in the third stanza.

Seagraves came back to narrow that margin with 9:26 to play in the contest when Suniga marched around right end from 40 yards on an end around reverse to climax a six-play, 56-yard drive. Mahler's successful PAT cut the Stanton lead to 27-21.

Stanton kept Seagraves pinned deeply in their own territory for the remainder of the game, with the final blow against Seagraves coming with 1:04 left in the contest when the Eagles' Polyak was intercepted by Stanton safety Kevin Newman.

The Buffs then ran out the clock behind Williams' quarterback keepers.

The triumph was the fifth consecutive win for the Stanton club, and it came in their opening game in District 5-AA play. Seagraves, the usual district champion, fell to 4-1 on the year. It was also their District 5-AA opener.

Fighting Irish kick Spartans

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Junior Harry Oliver booted four field goals and tailback Phil Carter ran for the go-ahead score Saturday as seventh-ranked Notre Dame rallied to beat Michigan State 26-21 in college football.

Carter sparked an Irish ground attack that wore down the Spartans in the second half. The sophomore piled up 254 yards rushing, his third straight game over 100 yards, and one yard shy of the Notre Dame record held by Vagas Ferguson.

Notre Dame now is 3-0, with all its victories against Big Ten Conference teams. Michigan State dropped to 1-3.

CCity fish, JV sweep Coahoma

COLORADO CITY — Colorado City escaped with a pair of two-point wins here Thursday night when the freshmen and JV squads squared off with Coahoma.

The ninth grade affair proved to be the most exciting, with the bulk of the fireworks occuring in the final moments.

Colorado City scored in the first quarter to take a 6-0 lead, and that stood until just under four minutes remaining in the game when Coahoma's James Sanders blocked a punt and recovered it in the C-City end zone to tie the game. The PAT failed.

Coahoma then took what appeared to be the final lead of the night with 34 seconds to play when Scott Mayhall scampered in from the 12. The PAT failed.

But the Colorado City return man took the ensuing kickoff and raced 80 yards to paydirt, tying the game at 12-12. C-City completed the two-point conversion to nail down the win at that point.

The Coahoma defense was sparkling in the loss, allowing only 63 yards total offense. Leading that charge was the play of Jeff Dever, Clem Moron, Kevin Jones and Sanders.

Offensive stars for Coahoma included Richard Seals, with 97 yards rushing, Mayhall, Shane Merrill and Shawn Stevens.

The Colorado City JVs then finished off the night successfully with an 8-6 win over Coahoma.

The Wolves scored all the points that they would need in the opening frame on a 30-yard run and a successful conversion carry.

The game remained that way until Coahoma's Denny Islas returned a punt 55 yards to paydirt to bring the Bulldogs within two. But the PAT failed.

Offensive plaudits for Coahoma were handed to Benny Islas, Denny Islas and Ron Clanton, while defensive stalwarts were Dee Cagel, James Gilbert, Jim Rinard and Clanton.

Steer girl netters win

The Big Spring girls scored a 7-6 win over the Snyder netters, while the Steer boys weren't as fortunate, losing by a count of 10-3. Action took place here Thursday afternoon.

Winning their singles matches for the Big Spring girls were Kim Madry, Dana Cannon, Terri Miller, Jennifer Moore and Raida Guess, while the duos of Madry-Diana Johnson and Kay Pollard-Loanne Biddson were triumphant in the doubles competition.

Big Spring boys that managed to win were Aubrey Weaver in the singles competition, and the teams of Kevin McLaughlin-Kevin McMahon and Scott Nelson-Rusty Williams in the doubles action.

McLaughlin had a disappointing singles round, as he suffered his first loss of the year. It was to Snyder's Neil Paige.

5-AAAAA Roundup

Mojo just awesome

ODESSA — Perennial toughie Odessa Permian started slowly enough but had things all its own way at the end in strapping Midland High, 31-0, here Friday night.

The Panthers, bidding to improve their standing among the state's Top Ten Class AAAAA football powers, simply shut down Midland's running game, holding the Bulldogs to a minus 15 yards on the ground.

Tailback Kent Sager scored twice for Permian, including the first touchdown of the game. That occurred when he ran 18 yards early in the second quarter. Roy Dunn booted the PAT.

Later in the round, Dunn kicked a 29-yard field goal to give Permian a 10-0 bulge at half time.

Permian scored again in the third on a seven-yard run by Sager. Dunn again converted.

The Panthers added two TDs in the fourth. Jerry Hix passed 10 yards to Jimmy Morris for one score. Dunn converted.

Coy Brown accounted for the second fourth quarter score with a seven-yard pass to Bobby Carrasco. Dunn made good on his conversion effort again.

Permian made 168 yards rushing the ball and added 123 passing. Permian had a big edge in first downs, 17-4, and the 79 yards Midland picked up passing wasn't much of a factor in the game.

OHS rally sinks Lee

MIDLAND — Johnny Subia scored from three yards out with ten seconds left in the game to give Odessa High's Bronchos a 28-21 come-from-behind victory over Midland Lee in the 5-AAAAA opener for both teams.

Lee, which did all its scoring in the first half, led, 21-7, at the half.

Barry Corley bruised over from four yards out for Lee's first score in the opening period. Van Gravitt added the PAT.

Subia counted for Odessa later in the round on a 24-yard jaunt and Junior Cobos kicked the PAT to even the score at 7-7.

Before the period ended, however, Corley shook loose for an 80-yard run and Gravitt made it 14-7 with his conversion try.

Rodney Hemphill powered his way across the goal from a yard out for Lee's final touchdown in the second quarter to make it 21-7.

Odessa High really cranked up in the second half, getting two touchdowns in the third before Subia clinched it for Odessa in the waning seconds.

Cobos ran three yards for one of Odessa's third quarter scores, then booted the PAT. Hector Sanchez took a pass from Cobos for the third Odessa tally. The play covered 74 yards. Cobos made good on his kicking try to deadlock the count at 21-21.

Lee gained an amazing 334 yards on the ground to 148 for Odessa, but the Bronchos had a big edge in the air, 162 yards to 31.

Cooper explodes, 26-0

ABILENE — San Angelo Central was held to 44 yards rushing and 60 passing in suffering a 5-AAAAA loss to Abilene Cooper here Friday night. Final score was 26-0.

The Cougars, held scoreless in the first half, exploded for 20 points in the third period. Oscar Riggins accounted for the first touchdown on a one-yard run. Mike Stills converted.

Michael Royal tallied for Cooper shortly thereafter on a one-yard power thrust but Cooper failed to convert.

Mike Flores added the third touchdown of the quarter for Cooper on a six-yard pass from Lanny Dycus. Stills converted.

Cooper added an insruance tally in the fourth on a 27-yard pass from Dycus to Brad Morrison. The try for point failed.

San Angelo is winless in four starts while Cooper has won all four of its assignments.

With Coahoma

Last minute score gives Wolves tie

COAHOMA—The Colorado City Wolves used a seven-minute scoring drive late in the fourth quarter, capped by Mark Carter's one-yard run with only 35 seconds to play to rally for a 13-13 tie with the Coahoma Bulldogs in a non-district contest here Friday night.

The contest between the long-time rivals was as heated as usual, with neither team backing away from the other.

Colorado City struck in the opening quarter for a 7-0 lead with just over six minutes gone when Carter connected with split end Victor Jackson on a 12-yard scoring strike. Kirk Evans toed the PAT.

But Coahoma came right back, driving 65 yards to paydirt. Tailback Manuel Martinez took the honors on a four-yard jaunt with just 39 seconds left in the opening stanza, and Robert Walker's successful PAT tied the game at 7-7.

Coahoma mounted a scoring threat midway in the second period, only to fumble the ball away at the Colorado City five. But the Bulldog defense held, and the Wolves were forced to punt, with the Coahoma offense setting up shop in Colorado City territory at the 40.

This time the Big Red Machine didn't waste the opportunity, driving for the score. Philip Ritchey gained the honors on a one-yard run with but 1:12 to play in the half. But the PAT failed, leaving Coahoma with a 13-7 lead.

The third quarter was a defensive standoff, with both teams playing for the most part in the middle of the field.

But Colorado City was not to be denied in the final stanza, as they took possession with 7:25 to go and drove 70 yards to tie the game. A pass interference on an incompletion on a third and 15 attempt against Coahoma was a big aide in the Wolve drive.

Following the score, the Colorado City PAT failed, leaving the game tied.

Coahoma took the ensuing kickoff at their 25 and drove to the Colorado City 40, but time ran out, leaving both teams frustrated.

The tie puts Coahoma's record at 1-3-1, while Colorado City is now 2-2-1. Coahoma travels to Post next Friday night, while the Wolves play host to Coleman.

The Coahoma coaching staff praised the play of their squad in the first half, but did explain that they were still looking for four good quarters of football from the Big Red Machine.

The Bulldogs, who were realigned in a four-team district with Seminole, Denver City and Crane, don't start district until Halloween night.

"We're thankful that district play doesn't start yet," said Coahoma assistant coach Doug Harriman. "We're making progress, but we're still making some adjustments at the skill positions that will help our team. If we continue to improve, we'll be alright by the time district gets here."

SNYDER — The Runnels Yearlings used three Jay Pirkle touchdown runs to race to a 20-6 win over Snyder JHS in eighth grade football action here Thursday evening.

The Yearlings, who are now 2-0, got off to a slow start in the game, as the Snyder team scored with seven seconds left in the opening stanza to take a 6-0 lead.

But Runnels controlled the game from that point on, with Pirkle's one yard run tying the score with over two minutes remaining in the first half. Fullback Chris Lamb then ran for the successful two-point conversion and an 8-6 Runnels lead.

In the third quarter, Runnels blocked a Snyder punt and set up shop just 20 yards from paydirt. Pirkle raced in on the first play from that point, increasing the Yearlings lead to 14-6.

The Yearlings then iced the game in the final frame on a 63-yard, nine-play drive, with Pirkle again taking scoring honors on a 15-yard jaunt. Lamb ground out most of the yardage on the drive.

The Yearlings front wall of Randy Rawls, Doug Walker, J.D. Williams, Ruben Gonzales and Dennis Heffington were instrumental in the win, limiting Snyder to only four yards rushing in 23 attempts.

Offensive stars for Runnels were Pirkle, Lamb and tailback Tommy Gartman.

OU sets record in 82-42 win

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Senior halfback David Overstreet rushed for 258 yards and freshman George "Buster" Rhymes scored four touchdowns as 12th-ranked Oklahoma smashed a series of offensive records in crushing Colorado 82-42 Saturday in the Big Eight football opener for both teams.

The 124 combined points made it the highest scoring game in NCAA history.

Sooners generated 876 total yards to establish an all-time NCAA Division I-A record, and also bettered the previous rushing standard with 759 yards on the ground.

Overstreet, who had been held to a disappointing 90 yards rushing after two games, exploded against the Buffaloes, setting up two touchdown with runs of 84 and 53 yards and scoring himself on a 37-yard pass from J.C Watts.

USC holds off Sun Devils bid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback Gordon Adams threw for 226 yards and a touchdown and Eric Hipp kicked three field goals Saturday as fourth-ranked Southern Cal held off upset-minded Arizona State 23-21 in a Pacific-10 Conference football game.

Adams completed 20 of 29 passes and Marcus Allen gained 133 yards on 36 carries and scored a touchdown for the victorious Trojans, who avenged a 1978 loss to the Sun Devils that was the last defeat for Southern Cal.

The Trojans currently are on a 24-game unbeaten streak.

Arizona State dropped to 2-2, and is 1-1 in the Pac-10. The contest was Southern Cal's conference opener. Neither team is eligible for the league championship, however, since both were among five conference teams ruled ineligible for the league title this year because of academic irregularities.

Penn State upsets Mizzou

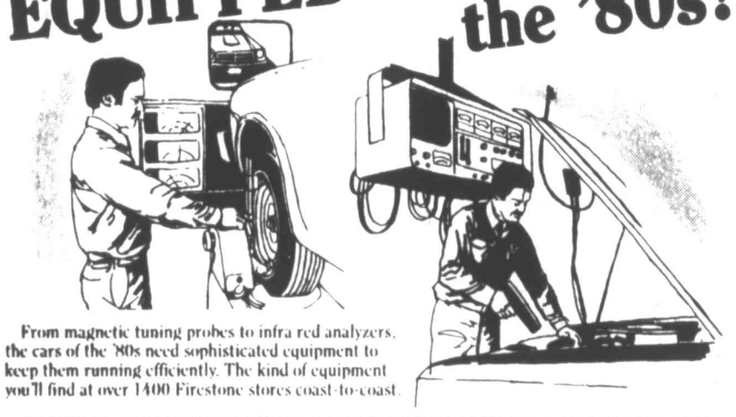

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Paul Lankford intercepted two passes to set up two Herb Menhardt field goals in the third period and quarterback Todd Blackledge romped 43 yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown to give 17th-ranked Penn State a come-from-behind 29-21 victory Saturday over 9th-ranked Missouri.

The previously unbeaten Tigers, with Phil Bradley throwing touchdown passes of 31 and 53 yards, led at halftime 21-16 but fell flat after intermission.

Lankford returned his first interception 33 yards to the Missouri 33-yard line and Menhardt followed with a 27-yard field goal to cut Missouri's lead to 21-19.

Seconds later, a Bradley pass popped out of the arms of Ron Fellows and Lankford took possession on the Tiger 47. Menhardt's 35-yard field goal with 15 seconds left in the quarter gave Penn State a 22-21 lead.

Abilene senior quarterback Loyal Proffitt, a starter since his sophomore year, gave the youth laden Big Spring Steer defense a lesson on the value of experience and poise, directing his Eagles to two fourth quarter touchdowns and an exciting 28-21 triumph in the District 5-AAAAA opener for both schools here Friday night in Memorial Stadium.

Proffitt, a 6'3", 195-pounder, was at his very best in the final 12 minutes, completing some very timely passes and mixing in a couple of deadly runs to nix the Steers' hopes for their first district win since 1974.

Abilene entered the game as a 26-point favorite in the Harris Rating System, and early in the second quarter began making believers of the estimated 4000 fans.

After a scoreless first quarter in which the host Steers failed to make a first down, Abilene broke the ice by driving 72 yards in 10 plays, with Proffitt going over for a touchdown with 10:19 remaining in the half. The drive was entirely on the ground.

Abilene's try for an extra point kick was short, greatly due to a torrid rush put on by the aggressive Steers.

Disaster struck again for Big Spring on a fumble, and Abilene, the team that led defending state champion Temple going into the final quarter just two weeks ago, recovered on the Big Spring 32.

It took just three plays for the Eagles to produce their second touchdown, this time when tailback Leo Parrish bolted around left end and raced 17 yards past the befuddled Steers. Ken Hall's PAT was good, and Abilene enjoyed a 13-0 lead with 8:07 remaining in the half.

But the Steers, behind the running of Bobby Earl Williams, quickly came right back.

On the second play from scrimmage following the ensuing kickoff, Williams accepted a handoff on a dive from quarterback Tracy Spence, found daylight and simply exploded past the Abilene line, outracing the Eagle safeties on a 62-yard jaunt to paydirt. Edward Vela toed the PAT to narrow the Abilene lead to 13-7 with 7:24 still remaining in the first half.

The Big Spring defense seemed uplifted with the scoring play, stopping Abilene on their next two possessions. This set up Williams again.

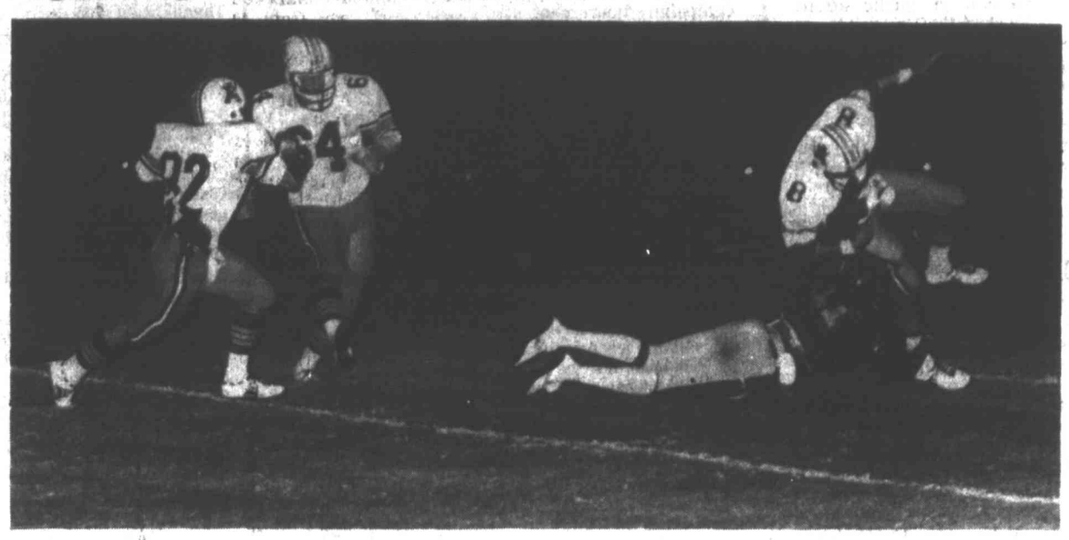

On a first down from their own 38 following a Proffitt punt, Williams again took a handoff from Spence on the same play and from the same spot that he had earlier scored on.

He broke freely into the Eagle secondary, then cut back to his left in front of the Abilene bench and simply outraced the defenders to paydirt. 1:40 remained in the half when Vela booted the PAT to give the Steers a 14-13 advantage.

But Abilene countered immediately behind the arm of Proffitt and a 24-yard run by Parrish, driving to the Steers' 10 with 35 seconds to play in the first half. The Eagles moved to the one in two plays, but the Big Spring middle stopped Parrish on a third and goal at that point, forcing a final Abilene time out.

On fourth down, Abilene pitched wide to Parrish, but Big Spring cornerback Reggie Anding alertly tackled the Eagle for a seven yard loss with only eight seconds left in the half.

Big Spring continued their momentum in the second half, taking the kickoff and moving into Abilene territory at the 48. At this point, Spence lofted a pass down the left sideline, with Anding making the catch along the sideline. One official seemed to rule the Steer senior in bounds for a first down at the Eagle 25, but another zebra overruled the play, and the Steers were forced to punt.

STEPHENS UPENDS EAGLE — Big Spring sophomore linebacker Danny Stephens (31) went flying past two Abilene Eagles to collide with punt return man Karl Kearney during third quarter action in Memorial Stadium Friday night. Stephens made the tackle on the play, but moments later Kearney victimized the Steers on a 44-yard punt return that set up Abilene with the tying touchdown early in the fourth stanza. The Eagles went on to pull the game out with less than two minutes to go in a hard fought 5-AAAAA game, 28-21.

Steer punter Greg Scarbro punted 37 yards to the Abilene 11, and two plays later Eagle fullback Todd James fumbled, with Big Spring linebacker Marty Rice recovering on the 23.

With the Abilene defense keying on Williams, quarterback Spence darted 11 yards for a first down to the 12, with a late hit moving the pigskin to the six. Three plays later Spence snuck in from the one, and Vela's successful PAT gave the surprising Bovines a 21-13 lead with just over four minutes gone in the third stanza.

Abilene marched right back, with the aid of two Proffitt completions to Derrick Fields, moving to the Steer 22. But at that point Big Spring defensive lineman Gregg Jones recovered a loose pigskin to stop the threat.

Big Spring's punting game had looked excellent through the first three stanzas, but that was soon to be forgotten.

On the second play of the fourth stanza, Abilene punt returner Karl Kearney received a Scarbro boot on his own 23, raced to his left behind a wall and dashed 44 yards to the Big Spring 33, where he tripped while trying to elude the Steer punter.

But the fall became academic, as Abilene drove the rest of the way in eight plays, actually having to score twice to count one.

The drive started when Proffitt found tight end David Coffey, who was Big Spring's starting quarterback last year, for an eight-yard gain.

On a first down from the 13, Proffitt completed yet another pass to Fields at the three. Fields made it to the end zone, but not before his teammate James had helped carry him over the goalline with two Steers hanging on.

Still, Abilene had a first down and three on the six, and gradually punched the ball in. This time it was Proffitt on a quarterback sneak from the one.

Still trailing 21-19, Abilene faked a run, with Proffitt hooking up with Fields in the left corner of the end zone for the two-point conversion and a 21-21 tie with just under nine minutes left in the game.

Unable to move on their next possession, Scarbro boomed a 46-yard punt to the Abilene 17 with 6:50 remaining in the game.

At this point, Proffitt, who was the leading passer last season in District 5-AAAAA, gave an exhibition that would have made Roger Staubach proud.

After one incompletion, he hooked up with Roman Bell for 11 yards, and two plays later on a third and five passed to Fields for 19 yards and a first down at the Steer 47.

Proffitt scrambled for 15 yards two plays later when his receivers were covered to the Big Spring 30.

But Big Spring looked to have held, only to see Proffitt escape around right end on a rollout on fourth and six for a 19-yard gain to the Steer seven.

Two plays later, little used tailback Mike Davis rambled in from the two with only 1:50 remaining to provide the Eagles with the winning points. Hall booted the PAT successfully.

Big Spring came back, with Williams stiff arming two Abilene defenders and picking up 11 yards and a first down to the 40. But the drive stalled, and on fourth down Big Spring fumbled away a double reverse try, with the Abilene defense converging on Anding and ending the Steers' upset bid.

The win gives the War Birds a 1-0 district record and a 3-1 mark on the year. They go home next week to take on mighty Odessa Permian, a team that has yet to be scored on.

Big Spring, meanwhile, falls to 0-1 and 2-2. The ever improving Steers will try for their initial 5-AAAAA win next Friday night here on Homecoming, at which time they face Midland.

Drop 19-0 decision to O'Donnell

Stats not enough for Forsan Buffs

FORSAN — The Forsan Buffaloes won the statistical battle but lost the big war on the scoreboard here Friday night in a District 5-AA football opener taking a 19-0 Homecoming loss to the O'Donnell Eagles.

The youthful Buffs, who have only four seniors on the squad, had the advantage in first downs, rushing and passing yardage, but could not avoid the costly mistakes that helped O'Donnell overcome them.

Two of the three O'Donnell touchdowns came after Forsan fumbles. The Buffs fumbled six times during the contest.

O'Donnell scored in the first quarter with 7:45 to go when halfback Ralph Santos raced in from the 30. The PAT failed.

Neither team could score again until late in the third stanza, when the Eagles produced two touchdowns within a span of four minutes to ice the contest.

The first of the two second half scores came when O'Donnell quarterback Eddie Hancock ran 26 yards to paydirt on an option with 1:53 to go in the third period. The PAT failed, leaving the visitors with a 12-0 advantage.

Then, with 10:04 to play in the game, Hancock completed a third and goal pass to Rudy Ramirez from the four for the final touchdown. Hancock then booted the PAT for the final point of the night.

The win gives O'Donnell a district record of 1-0 and a season mark of 4-1. Forsan, meanwhile, is 0-1 and 1-4.

Forsan Coach Ron Taylor was disappointed with the loss, although he could see some bright spots. "We moved the ball well during the game, but just couldn't get it in the end zone," he said. "Our mistakes in fumbling the ball and getting penalties at very bad times is what beat us."

"We played pretty good defense, too," he continued, "except for three plays."

The Buffs don't get a break next week, as mighty Stanton comes to town.

Flick, Washington pass by Okies

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Quarterback Tom Flick tossed two second-half touchdown passes after hitting on three field goals as Washington subdued Oklahoma State 24-18 in intersectional football Saturday.

The win upped Washington's record to 3-1 while the Cowboys are winless in three games.

Highland uses Jones to rout Grady, 54-8

LENORAH — The powerful Highland football team totally dominated play here Friday night in the opening game of District 2-A (Six-man) action, taking a 54-8 win over the Grady Wildcats.

The contest was called at halftime due to the 40-point rule which occurs in six-man football.

John Paul Jones led the Highland attack, scoring on runs of 68, 27, 56, 4 and 44 yards.

Highland jumped out to a quick 16-0 lead in the contest, but Grady did manage to strike back and narrow the margin to 16-8 when Larry Key scored from the one, and then booted the two-point conversion successfully.

But it was all downhill for Grady after that.

Grady Coach Richard Gibson was very impressed with the strength and speed of the undefeated Highland team. "They were just a very impressive six-man football team," he said. "We didn't play bad, we just got annihilated."

Grady, which is now 2-2 on the year, was led defensively by Alfonso Cortez and Leandro Gonzales. Offensively, Larry Key had 40 yards rushing on seven carries for the bulk of the Grady attack.

The Wildcats try to get back on the winning road next week, but it won't be easy, as they travel to take on always tough Trent.

Garden City ends drouth

WATER VALLEY — The Garden City Bearkats stopped a drouth that dated back to the 1978 season here Friday night, breaking open a halftime tie en route to a 25-6 win over the Water Valley Wildcats in a non-district football encounter.

The Bearkats, who went 0-10 in 1979, are now 1-2-1. They tied a tough Loraine team two weeks ago, and have shown steady improvement this year under the direction of first year head coach Stu Cooper.

Garden City scored first in the second quarter when quarterback Alan Jansa tossed a 50-yard scoring pass to Rosendo Ybarra for a 6-0 Bearkat lead.

But the aroused Water Valley crew, playing before a Homecoming crowd, rallied to tie the game at 6-6 before the halftime when Jorge Romo rambled in from seven yards out. The PAT failed.

But Garden City came back in the second half to take control of the contest. Tailback Scottie Hillger started the Bearkat charge with a four-yard scoring romp. The PAT failed, but Garden City had the lead for good.

Hillger wasn't finished, however, as later in the third stanza he scored from the one. Hillger booted the PAT for a 19-6 Garden City lead.

Jansa, who accumulated over 200 yards passing and rushing, then hurled his second touchdown pass of the night in the final quarter, this time from seven yards out to Robbie Creswell. The PAT try failed.

The win sends the Garden City team with a boost into the District 3-A West Zone race, which begins next Friday when the Bearkats host Sands.

Cooper was very happy with the performance of his team in the win. "We finally put it together," he said. "Water Valley is a much improved team, but we really played well."

A big key for the Garden City team was the play of the offensive line consisting of ends Victor Medrano and Vic DeHoyas, tackles Wes Williams and Chris Halfmann, guards Duane Hirt and Roy Flournoy, and center Tommy Montgomery.

Cooper also praised the play of Scottie Hillger, who enjoyed his best overall game of the year, and of course, Jansa.

"We needed it (the win) very badly," Cooper added. "But I'm glad that we found out for ourselves that we can play before district."

Sweetwater powers by Lamesa

SWEETWATER — Sweetwater quarterback Scott Richardson, only a freshman, threw for two first half touchdowns to spark the Mustangs to a 24-0 win over Lamesa here Friday night in a District 2-AAAA game.

Richardson passed for 130 yards in the contest and directed a Sweetwater attack that rolled up 21 first downs and a total of 396 yards offensively. Lamesa, meanwhile, was shut down, accumulating only three first downs and 48 yards total offense.

The Sweetwater freshman hit Rodney Griggs on both of his scoring passes in the first half, and the Mustangs added touchdowns in each of the final stanzas on runs by halfback Junior Garcia.

The win boosts Sweetwater's season record to 4-1, and gives them a 2-AAAA record of 3-0. Lamesa, meanwhile, is 1-2 in district and 2-3 on the year.

Oil spill victims are put on hold

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Any hope victims of the Campeche Bay oil spill will get federal aid was put on hold this week as Congress failed to act before its election campaign adjournment.

The one remaining chance this year for compensation arising from the June 1979 Ixtoc blowout will come during November, when Congress is scheduled to meet in "lame-duck session" to finish its 1980 business.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, has said he may try during the session to revive the idea of Campeche Bay payments. But in political terms, such a bill is labelled as "special interest," helping a relatively small number of people, and this is not a high priority.

A bill passed by the House last June called for $80 million to be used for Texas Gulf Coast victims of what became the world's largest oil spill.

From there, the measure went to the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, where it has sat little noticed since then. Bentsen is a member of that panel and an early supporter of the bill, but the aides blame low priority and committee attendance for the look of committee action.

"Bentsen has no interest in stalling the bill, but one of the problems all year is that environment and public works is one of those committees the senators skip in order to go to other committees that they think are more important," said a Bentsen aide.

While the House bill sat in the Senate, Rep. Joe Wyatt, D-Bloomington, tried last month to graft a Campeche Bay amendment onto another bill — in affect, asking the House to throw yet another pitch for Campeche Bay money over to the Senate.

Wyatt was involved in the Ixtoc issue early this year along with Rep. Ray Roberts, D-McKinney, a powerful veteran member of the Public Works Committee who, like freshman Wyatt, is retiring this year.

It was Roberts' bill that was eventually passed by the House and sent to Senate slumber and though Wyatt's bill language has been much the same, both men have been critical of the other's approach.

Wyatt said he felt the Roberts bill placed too much burden on oil spill victims to prove their losses, but Wyatt voted for the bill last June. A Roberts aide said the congressman was critical of Wyatt's bill because it would have pulled money out of — and perhaps "bankrupted" — a large general fund for dealing with oil spills.

Wyatt's $75 million bill was defeated last month by a 264-43 vote. Roberts voted against the bill.

(Later, when the House voted 366-1 to designate "Ray Roberts Lake" in Roberts' district, Wyatt was the lone dissenter.

From week of rain

Lakes grow mightily

Runoff from late September rains have revolutionized the water outlook for this area of West Texas.

Reservoirs supplying cities from Sweetwater to Odessa and Snyder to San Angelo picked up 214,000 acre feet of water during the week.

Cities supplied by the Coloraro River Municipal Water District were the greatest beneficiaries in terms of volume, but Sweetwater had the greatest blessing in terms of relieving pressure.

Lake J.B. Thomas and Lake E.V. Spence together picked 122,400 acre feet for the week. Of this, 39,200 flowed into Lake Thomas, putting it to elevation 2233.40 and 32.35 percent of capacity with a content of 66,000 acre feet. Vertical gain for the week was 13.4 feet, and from the low point of the year 23 feet. September gain was 42,500 acre feet; for the year 64,200 acre feet.

Lake Spence gained 83,170 acre feet (and may pick up a little more) during the week to reach elevation 1874.56. This is six feet higher than it has ever been and with a content of 232,200 acre feet, it is 47.54 percent of capacity. September gain for Spence was 132,000 acre feet, and for the year 157,700 acre feet. Vertical foot gain for the week was 11.5, for the year 22 feet. Almost important as the volume is the improvement of quality in Spence water, which will come up about 150 percent from September inflow.

Moss Creek Lake and Powell Creek Lake, small reservoirs which fit into the CRMWD supply, picked up 2,000 acre feet for the week. Moss Creek gained half of it by rising seven feet to elevation 2332.00, making a content of 2,650 acre feet. (This lake also served as an on-line intermediate storage for water from Lake Spence to Big Spring.) Quality of the water more than doubled. Powell Creek rose 10 feet and gained 1,000 acre feet to reach 1,450 in storage. It will be pumped into Moss Creek Lake, and the catch by the two lakes will result in a substantial electric power savings over water which otherwise would have had to be pumped from Lake Spence.

Lake Colorado City, which has been snake-bit for years, jumped 15 feet to elevation 2073.80 and went 3½ feet over the service spillway. This was the first time since 1969.

FHA officers installed

By MARY KAYE HALFMANN

The 1980-81 FHA officers were officially installed Wednesday at a luncheon during the noon hour. Officers are Wanda McDaniel-president; Mary Kaye Halfmann-vice president; 2nd vice president, is Andrea Frerich. Be-Bee Doe is secretary; Anita Jansa is treasurer; Terri Stringer-historian; Paula Strube-reporter; Charlotte Halfmann is parliamentarian and Marianne Hoelshcer is recreational leader.

Plans were made for initiation of new members. They will only have to go through two days of dressing up and Friday, Oct. 10 there will be a picnic after school before the Sands game which will start at 7:30.

There is going to be band practice every Tuesday after school from 4:00-5:30 until after football season. The volleyball team played rival team Water Valley last Monday, and were defeated by only a small margin. Monday night they will be playing another big rival, Mertzon. The game is here and will start at 6:30. The junior high football team will be playing Greenwood here Thursday at 6:00.

Hoemcoming activities were a bit soggy last Friday night. The float was not used nor was the bonfire on Thursday night. The band was unable to perform during halftime. They didn't even get to bring their horns out. After halftime there weren't many fans in the stands. The Senior Supper was a success, bringing in around $400.00. The Homecoming Dance was also successful. Both country and western and rock music were played. Be-Bee Doe was crowned Homecoming Queen and Allen Jansa Mr. Bearkat before the game in the gym. The sophomore class won the spirit stick, while the junior class won the spirit car competition. We want to recognize the sophomore class on their fine work they put into making their spirit float.

During the week of Oct. 6-10, 4-H'ers are reminded that it is National 4-H Week. Tuesday night is Achievement Night. A reminder for all you 4-H'ers you will be decorating right after school. Anyone interested in joining contact Mary Kaye Halfmann.

Kindergarten instructors at the school are Betty Birdwell, Shirley Burgess, Evelyn Hyman and Laura Lowery. They are assisted by teachers aides Mary Jennings and Sarah Murray. The parade is always eagerly anticipated by older students at the school as well as the Kindergarten students and their parents.

Goliad

Language arts class to produce annuals

By JANCE ALLEN

Students at Goliad can look forward to having an annual this year. The annual, which will be in the form of a memory book, will be sponsored by Mrs. Salisbury. Staff members will be her third period language arts class. All students will have their pictures taken in the next two weeks.

Last Thursday the Goliad Black team met the Snyder Tigers here in Big Spring. The score was 36-0, the Mavericks being the victors. The Goliad White team also played the Snyder Tigers. The score of that game was 18-6; the Mavericks played a good game, but lost.

Congratulations to the volleyball girls, who beat Colorado City last Tuesday. The scores were 17-15 and 15-4 for the Black team. The White team's scores were 15-0 and 15-2. All students at Goliad wish the girls good luck for their next game.

The sixth grade winner of the Golden Maverick button was Ronald Schmidt. Norma Vera won the button for the seventh grade. Two more lucky students will find buttons in their lockers Monday at school.

Buy candy and support the band! Get your candy after school in the band hall, but remember you should not eat it on school grounds.

Our "Teacher of the Week" is Ms. Jackie Hancock, a seventh grade science teacher. She attended Rotan Jr. High, Jim Ned High School, and Sweetwater High School. She then attended Hardin Simmons University in Abilene, Texas. When asked why she chose a field in science, she replied: "I wanted to teach because I love to work with students. I chose science as a field because I grew up on a farm, which gave me a high interest in biology." In her spare time, Ms. Hancock enjoys sewing, all sorts of sports, fishing and camping. She also enjoys singing.

By KRISTI GRIMES

Student Council met Tuesday during first advisory in room 305 with the sponsors, Mrs. Suzanne Chappel and Mrs. Sharon Kelly. Members discussed the sale of ribbons and M&M candies. The candy will be sold late in October or early November for 50 cents a box. Mr. Bill Bradlwy will be in charge of candy sales.

The Homecoming Parade on Oct. 10 will see the results of the first project for the Runnels Student Council. The general theme of the parade is "Presidents," and the Runnels float will be specifically designed to encourage people to vote.

The Calendar Clue Game will begin next Monday morning. A calendar posted on the third floor near the library will give a new clue each day to help students guess the answer. The first three winners will be announced on each Monday morning and published in the Megaphone on Sunday. At the end of the school year there will be a special game just for those who have been among the top three finalists in at least one game. There will be cash prizes for the first, second and third place winners.

Ms. Shirley McNallen announced that the computer room will have a contest each month for the top students. Winners for September were David Yanez in math and Sherry Walker in English. They each won a T shirt.

A pep rally was held Thursday to build spirit for the football games in Snyder. The cheerleaders surprised many of the students with the "Annual Banana Eating Contest" with the coaches. Blinded and bibbed, the coaches were placed behind a huge pile of bananas. Coach Benner was the big winner and was presented with the "Brass Banana."

In the football games held last Thursday in Snyder, the White team won 20-6 and The Red team lost 12-0.

Astronomy shows at OC available Oct. 8

ODESSA — Several astronomy shows have been produced and will be available for showing to school groups, civic clubs, and other community organizations beginning Oct. 8, according to Robert Blake, director of the Poole Planetarium at Odessa College.

Available for scheduling are programs on "Greek and Roman Mythology," which will feature constellations and the stories told by the ancients concerning the figures of the constellations; "A Tour of the Planets"; and "A Survey of the Sky," which will discuss why different stars and planets are visible at sunset during the four seasons.

Blake says that an "Indian Sky Lore" program also is planned and should be available in a few weeks.

"All of the programs are intentionally overlapped so that in all programs the audience will learn at least a little about what the sky has to offer at that time of year and other items that may be of interest," the planetarium director notes.

Public programs will be available at 7 p.m. Wednesday nights starting Oct. 8 in the Poole Planetarium on the OC campus. Programs may be scheduled at other times by arrangement, according to Blake.

A Christmas program will be available in early December, Blake adds.

The planetarium programs may be scheduled at no charge for school groups and OC students and employees with college identification cards. Otherwise, admission fees are 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for school-age children.

Interested persons may contact Blake at OC for details.

Tech hears Holden at anniversary symposium

LUBBOCK — The Old West is indebted to the Old World for preserving an important segment of America's frontier heritage, Dr. William Curry Holden Thursday told ahistorical symposium commemorating the 25th anniversary of the Texas Tech University Southwest Collection.

Were it not for the corporate ranches of English and Scottish syndicates, said Holden, a former Texas Tech professor, written records of the ranching industry would have been almost nonexistent.

"Coping with the business aspects of the ranch made it necessary to have educated managers with a knowledge of business operation," said Holden. "Due to this requirement, managers of foreign corporate ranches wece a different breed from the self-made American rancher, who in most instances had only two items, a tally book and a checkbook, both of which he carried in his vest pocket.

"So far as ranching heritage is concerned, this was a pity. The vast amount of the experiences of each passed away with him when he was buried. Most of the early, pioneering cattlemen died before the arrival of a historian witha tape recorder. So, we are indebted to the foreign corporate ranches for keeping and preserving definitive records of early ranch operation."

Holden was one of seven prominent historians participating in the symposium, which attracted about 400 persons.

Other Southwest historians participating in the day-long, silver anniversary celebration were: Dr. Rupert N. Richardson, J. Evetts Haley, Dr. William M. Pearce, Dr. Ernest Wallace, Dr. Billy M. Jones and Roy Sylvan Dunn.

The Southwest Collection is one of the largest regional repositories for Southwest-related documents, containing information of oil, development of mechanized agriculture, land promotion ventures in Texas, ranching, mining and politics.

Although the archive officially opened Sept. 1, 1955, its origins extend to 1930 when the university acquired records from the Spur and Matador ranches of West Texas. Dr. Holden was a driving force in securing those initial documents.

From the beginning the Southwest Collection's holdings have grown to more than 15 million pages of manuscripts material.

Curio cabinet given OES Chapter

Eastern Star Chapter presents curio cabinet

The Order of the Eastern Star Chapter 67 was recently presented with a curio cabinet by Pyrle Bradshaw who, with her sister, Toy Sullivan, used to operate Bradshaw Studios here.

The OES's many valuable and antique gifts are being stored in the cabinet. Among other things, the cabinet contains the past matrons' jewels, mounted on black velvet easels. All have new name cards.

Among the jewels displayed were those awarded Agnes V. Young, Worthy Matron, 1893-94, who was Worthy Grand Matron of Texas in 1900-01; Jessie Hines, Flora Penix, Beulah Carnrike, Lena Koberg, Ann Ebberley and Minnie Michael.

The honored member roll of the chapter contains two more names, Mrs. Laura B. Hart and Mrs. Fannie V. Hart, whose jewels were not made available to the chapter but who left endowments for the chapter.

Judge S.A. Penix of the local chapter served as a Worthy Grand Patron in 1922-23.

A Bible given by William Fisher in memory of his wife, Nettie, are among many other momentos on display in the case.

Ms. Bradshaw compiled a history on the chapter from the year 1888 to 1980. It is on display.

Two Dresden bisque slippers are in the cabinet. One was given by originator presented to Agnes Young in 1900, the other was received by Florence Read when she was Grand Worthy Matron in 1936. Ms. Young died in 1962.

In 1980 campaigns

Phone bank volunteers are playing major role

AUSTIN — In 39 cities across Texas, they work three-hour shifts from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. to find their political counterparts.

They are usually well-dressed, usually female, usually white. They receive no pay.

They dial and talk, dial and talk, in a carefully planned pattern. Chatting is not allowed; politeness is required.

They are the phone bank volunteers who are playing a major role in the Ronald Reagan for president campaign in Texas.

If participation is not professional, the operation is. It is a tested, expensive package deal purchased from a company run by Minnesota State Sen. Nancy Bratass.

It's the same system credited by most political observers with winning the Governor's Mansion in 1978 for Bill Clements, the first GOP governor in Texas in 104 years.

Clements is chairman of Reagan's Texas campaign. His 1978 victory made him a believer in the Bratass method. He says it will win for the Reagan-George Bush team, too.

The phone banks and other statewide Republican efforts are directed from modestly furnished offices in an old Austin building that has spent most of its life as a funeral home.

The people who now work there predict they won't be in mourning after the Nov. 4 election.

"This is the best organization ever put together for a statewide campaign," says Ernie Angelo, former Midland mayor and longtime Reagan backer who now is deputy chairman for Reagan-Bush in Texas. "We're not falling all over ourselves."

He denies rumors of tension between himself and Clements, who was late in jumping aboard the Reagan bandwagon. According to campaign strategy, Clements provides general direction to the campaign and Angelo handles the day-to-day operations.

But Clements is a frequent visitor to the headquarters, which is conveniently located near the State Capitol. Asked by reporters whether the political job ever gets in the way of the official one, Clements says that's not a problem. He is only doing what previous Democratic governors have done, he adds.

Rick Shelby, director of the Reagan-Bush Committee in Texas, says Clements' role is invaluable to Reagan.

"Gov. Clements probably is devoting more time to this campaign than any other official," he says.

But no matter who is doing what, organization is a key word of the campaign. Angelo says, "We are organizing every area of the state, to appeal to all Texans."

That may be the general goal, but the specific objective is to find present or probable Reagan-Bush supporters and to make sure they go to the polls on election day.

GOP telephone banks are designed to accomplish that. Volunteers use voter or registration lists for names and the phone book for numbers. They quickly ascertain whether a voter is sympathetic to the campaign. If the answer is yes or probably, the voter's name goes on a master list for an election day call reminding him or her to vote.

The technique is credited with producing high turnout in Republican and other conservative areas two years ago. That, combined with low turnouts on traditionally Democratic areas, allowed Clements to narrowly defeat John Hill for the governorship.

Irene Whitlock of McPherson, Kan., chief operative for the Nancy Bratass system in Texas, is aiming for the same effect in 1980. She predicts that 36,000 volunteers will be involved in the phone banks.

She says the Bratass method is unique. "We're a systems operation. We have everything planned out for them." The company, which serves only Republicans, has similar operations this year in Louisiana and Illinois, but Texas' is the biggest ever.

The 50 phone banks in 39 cities in 30 counties in Texas have the potential for contacting 1.5 million homes, Ms. Whitlock said. Only toll-free calls are made, so persons in other areas, including Big Spring won't hear the phone-bank pitch.

But deputy chairman Angelo says the party also has many volunteers mankind telephones at home. Ms. Whitlock obviously doesn't care much for the extra help. Theoretically, each home is called only once before election day.

SHANNON KAYE GILLEY

Gilley is appointed SWCID interpreter

Shannon Kaye Gilley, 24, has been appointed as an interpreter of the Communications Division at the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf at Howard College, according to Executive Director, Doug Burke.

Miss Gilley is also the Director of the Community Awareness Program, which is operating on a grant through the Continuing Education Department at Howard College.

"Working at SWCID is an unbelievable experience," said Gilley. "I don't think I would have ever moved this far away from home if I didn't think this college had the potential to be the world's finest college for the deaf, and I want to be a part of that.

"The staff at SWCID is one of the finest and dedicated set of professionals I have ever worked with," she added.

As director of the Community Awareness Program, Miss Gilley is busy scheduling workshops, seminars and basic courses on deafness and communications skills for the general public and community agencies.

"I set up these workshops or seminars to speak at civic groups, church groups, or any group that wants to learn more about deafness," she said. "When I speak with civic groups, I try to give them insight on deafness. I talk to them about setting up courses and about what is important for them to know about deafness, and how to deal with a deaf person in their line of work.

"I also try to make the community feel comfortable with the deaf; to be aware of the situation they are in, so they can better serve the deaf."

Gilley received her Bachelor of Science degree in Education of the Hearing Impaired from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and her Master of Arts in Education in the area of Adult Education from East Carolina University.

In addition to her degrees, she holds a North Carolina Teachers' Certificate, which makes her eligible for the Certified Educators of the Deaf Certificate. She also holds a certificate from North Carolina Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf, Interpreter Level III.

Patrons can get wide variety

Local library provides films

By MILTON PERKINS
AV Librarian

The purpose of the film program at your local library is to aid in responding to the informational, educational, cultural and recreational needs of our Community. The films comprise a wide range of subjects and enjoyment for both adults and young people. We have had a great response from church groups, schools and various local clubs. Films are loaned free of charge to residents, 18 or older, of our county. The borrower must have a valid library card, driver's license and have a film registration form on file, which states that the indivjdual will assume full financial responsibility for any loss or damage to films while in his-her possession.

We are currently under two film circuits, WTLS (West Texas Library System) and WTLFC (West Texas Library Film Circuit). The films consist of 42 packets of 38 each, which circulate among 34 member libraries and the system offices monthly and bi-monthly. This puts films in the libraries for checkout on short notice. We currently have film catalogs from both WTLS and WTLFC. Of course, films of popular, special or seasonal interest are available from the spot-booking or central collection housed in the system headquarters at Lubbock City-County Library and Abilene Public Library. These films can be requested and reserved by your local library and they will be delivered by mail and must be returned by the patron.

Films are usually loaned for a day's use. They may be picked up the day prior to the showing and returned after the screening. Films for weekend showings may be picked up on Friday or Saturday, but must be returned the next working day after the showing date. It is essential that films be returned promptly on the date due to avoid inconvenience and embarrassment to the next patron. All films are inspected after each showing, so it is the borrower's responsibility to return films in good condition or to pay the cost of repair or replacement in case of damage. There is a $1.00 per day fine for films returned after the due date.

Patrons should bring back to the library any damaged sections of film and never try to repair film yourself. If a film breaks during projection, rethread it beyond the break onto the take-up reel, run it, and return it to the library for repair. Do not splice or tape films! Films should be protected from contact with contaminants such as food, drink or finger prints. Handle film by the edges with clean hands and keep snacks at a safe distance. Be sure to use the right size take-up reel.

A 16mm sound projector and experienced operator must be provided by the borrower or we have a policy of lending our 16mm projector for a three dollar charge. Films may not be shown at events where admission is charged or which are designated for fund-raising or commercial purposes. The audiovisual department will also provide assistance to patrons on film programming ideas and locating other sources for films. In our future articles we will try to give you a description of each film currently in our packets. Here is a list of films currently available: Alberta, Land of Chinook; The Ancient Games; Blazing the Trail; Blake; Huronia; If I Didn't See It, I Wouldn't Believe It; Johnny Lingo; Million Acre Playground; Mole and the Chewing Gum; Passport to Pleasure; Peter and the Wolf; Organic Gardening; Rip Van Winkle; Walking for Physical Fitness; White Mane; The Wild Swans; You and Office Safety; Why We Need Reading: The Piemaker of Ignoramia; Something Queer at the Library.

LIKE TEXAS — Winifred Bose, left, woman's page editor of the Burnley News and Express in Burnley Lancashire, England, visited Big Spring for the first time this past week. She and her long-time friend, Olga Campbell (right) a psychologist at the Big Spring State Hospital, met in India 15 years ago. Both are originally from the northwest of England.

Once interviewed Muhammad Ali

English editor visits city

Family News Editor

A little bit of England visited the Big Spring Herald this past week in the form of Winifred Bose.

Far away from her homeland of Burnley Lancashire, England, Mrs. Bose, woman's page editor of the Burnley Express News, was in Big Spring visiting long-time friend, Olga Campbell.

Although Mrs. Campbell, now a psychologist at the Big Spring State Hospital, and Mrs. Bose both came from northwest England, their paths didn't across until 15 years ago in India.

Mrs. Bose remained in India for 15 years, while Mrs. Campbell moved to New York after only 4.

"We kept in contact over the years," commented the petite woman's page eidtor with her crisp English accent.

The frendship resulted in Mrs. Bose's first trip to the United States.

The love for the journalistic field flows deep in the veins of this Burnley Express and News woman's editor.

"I've been in journalism all of my life," she revealed. "I wouldn't have done anything else."

As a journalist, Mrs. Bose has had the opportunity to interview numbers of famous people — people she would have never met had it not been for her career.

Heading the list of these famous interviewees is none other than the black superman himself, Muhammad Ali.

"Ali was doing an exhibition fight against Jimmy Ellis earlier this year in India," recalled Mrs. Bose.

Because it was only an exhibition bout, the atmosphere surrounding the outside stadium was relaxed. Mrs. Bose, a professed Ali fan herself, had a ringside seat.

"Ali was talking to everyone," she said. "I probably stood out because I was white, so it was easy for me to talk to him."

At this time, the English journalist in a foreign country embarked upon the golden opportunity that is undoubtedly every interveiwers dream.

"You don't have to ask Ali any questions because he never shuts his mouth," she laughed.

"He's the greastest boxer the world has ever known," she added, putting in a plug for her favorite fighter.

Other noteables interviewed by Mrs. Bose include Cliff Michelmore, the equivalent to America's Walter Cronkite, and a duke and duchess.

After completing her tour of the Herald plant, making comparisons to her newspaper office in England, Mrs. Bose commented on the large percentage of female employees.

"Things are changing here, discrimination-wise, faster than they are in England," she assessed.

Continuing in that vein of conversation, the editor pointed out that America is considered somewhat of a matriarchal society in England.

"The general belief there is that men, on a whole, are pushed around here. American men are not considered masculine because they are dominated, in subtle ways, by women," she said.

The prestige of America as a country is hardly at its peak in England either.

"America is not loved as a country anywhere in Europe," she pointed out. "Maybe it's because we were a great power once."

Revealing the general belief in England is that most American women reflect the appearances of well-groomed models or actresses, Mrs. Bose was amazed at the number of over-weight women she sighted.

"I've never seen so many fat women in my entire life. Over here you push low fat everything, so I expected to see women far more conscious of their figures," she reasoned.

Regardless of Europe's opinion of Americans or America, Mrs. Bose says she likes Texas very much and hopes someday to return.

Her two-week stay here took her to such places as Fort Davis, the McDonald Observatory, Big Bend National Park, San Antonio to the Alamo, and to Austin.

She left American soil Thursday to return to her English town of 75,000 where she will resume her duties as woman's page editor of the Burnley Express and News.

Miss Hawkins becomes bride of Robert Reid

Wedding vows were solemnized between Cladawnua Lyn Hawkins and Robert D. Reid in a candlelight ceremony performed Sept. 20 in the First Church of the Nazarene, San Angelo.

Officiating the 7:30 p.m. rite was Dr. Fred Fike, pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene in Big Spring.

The couple stood before an archway entwined with greenery. Two multi-branched candelabrums and an arrangement of blue and white carnations completed the sanctuary setting.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Hawkins, Big Spring. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Reid, Coahoma.

Wedding selections were performed by Verna Gilley, pianist; Mrs. Copper organist; and Teresa Long and Bob Sugdn, vocalists.

The bride was given in marriage wearing a traditional white gown designed in empress style. Lace and seed pearls embellished her gown which fell to floor-length.

She wore a matching veil of silk bridal illusion edged in lace. As a complement to her ensemble, she carried a cascading bouquet of blue carnations, blue daisies and white roses.

Jawonnah Hawkins attended her sister as maid of honor. Matron of honor was Mrs. Vickie Reisu, also sister of the bride.

Steve Reid attended his brother as best man. Groomsman was Curtis Hawkins, brother of the bride. Guests were seated by Sheldan Gilley and Bob Sudgn, San Angelo.

Angie Long, San Angelo, was flower girl. Ring bearer was Brandon Gilley, San Angelo.

Immediately following the exchange of vows, the newlyweds were feted with a reception in the church fellowship hall.

The bride is a 1980 graduate of Big Spring High School and employed by the San Angelo National Bank.

The groom graduated from Coahoma High School in 1978. He is also a graduate of TSTI, Rolling Plains Campus of Sweetwater. He is employed by Angelo State University.

The couple make their home in San Angelo.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT REID

Future bride honored at pre-nuptial shower

The meeting room at Rip Griffin's Truck Terminal was the setting for a bridal shower held in honor of Ginger La Rue, bride-elect of Gary Dondon, on Sept. 27.

The honoree was presented a corsage of rainbow-colored roses.

Hostessing the affair were Hassie Anderson, Cleta Britton, Rose Marie Burk, Joyce Chennault, Retta Jolly, Diane Welch and Sandy Williamson.

They presented the bride-to-be with a ceramic canister set made by Dianne Cash, and a blue bathroom set.

Guests played several games, with winners presenting their prizes of kitchen utensils to the bride-elect.

The reception table was covered with yellow cloth overlaid with lace. A silver candelabrum flanked by yellow silk roses enhanced the setting as centerpiece.

A yellow carousel decorated with yellow streamers holding wooden utensils was set atop the gift table.

Attending from out of town were Mrs. Jean Gordon, mother of the prospective bridegroom, Della Brooks, grandmother of the bride-elect; Alison Watts and Virginia Bryant.

PTA begins last week of membership drive

"PTA almost has hit its 100 percent membership goal here," related local PTA council president Leslie Earnst about Big Spring's "Join the Stars in PTA" campaign which winds up this week.

"Friday is the last day of our campaign, and we urge parents who haven't joined the Parent-Teacher Association at their children's schools to do so now," emphasized Mrs. Earnst.

Current figures put 1,834 members on the roles of local PTAs. This is 832 ahead of membership last fall and puts city-wide PTA at 94 percent of its goal.

College Heights and Moss PTAs have more than doubled their memberships over last year already, and all other schools have shown increases ranging from 20 percent to 50 percent.

The two city schools which have surpassed 100 percent membership are Kentwood and Moss. Membership breaks down to — Kentwood, 425 members; Marcy, 402 members; Washington, 372 members; Moss, 370 members; College Heights, 265 members.

One class at Moss has recorded 600 percent membership. With five students, Sarah Tipton's special education class has enrolled 30 PTA members.

Mention PTA, and carnival is the next word most persons think of. By whatever name — carnival, fall festival, fiesta — PTA fun nights in Big Spring have been a boon to local schools for years. Last year alone, the five PTAs raised nearly $10,000 from their carnivals.

"PTA is much more than raising money for our schools though," reminded the local PTA council president.

A major undertaking of Kentwood PTA for the last several years has been its Parent Involvement Program.

The new adult crossing guard program begun last spring at two schools was a major effort toward which College Heights PTA worked last year, winning the Texas PTA's Project ParTicipAte as best project in the state for 1979-80.

Big Spring PTAs also claimed three district winners in the national PTA cultural arts competition for 1979-80, "Beyond the Gates of Tomorrow."

Irrigation discussed

The Big Spring Garden Club met Wednesday at the Dora Roberts Community Center. Mrs. E.W. Greer and Mrs. O.C. Mason were hostesses.

Carl Johansen presented a program on drip irrigation. This method conserves both time and energy. It is easy to operate and not expensive to install.

The plants receive water when needed and where they need it. It does not spoil the foliage, Johansen revealed.

A Certificate of Merit from the National Council of State Garden Clubs was presented for 50 years of membership in the National Council of State Garden Clubs.

'Sugar-free' may cause diarrhea

"Sugar-free" foods may cause diarrhea, if they contain sorbitol or manitol.

Sorbitol and manitol are the key ingredients in many "sugar-free" foods designed for use in weight-control diets — and as aids in preventing tooth decay.

Sorbitol and manitol are known as "hexitols" or sugar alcohols. They are slowly absorbed from the intestinal tract into the body, and they're slowly acted upon by bacteria in the mouth.

Unfortunately these sugar alcohols do cause problems in some individuals.

Medical authorities are reporting cases of "chewing-gum diarrhea" in patients who consume large amounts of sugar-free gum.

Chewing gum isn't the only problems, though, any foods containing sorbitol or manitol can cause diarrhea in some persons.

Children are affected, as well as adults, particularly if they eat large amounts of dietetic candies.

Check the label on foods if persistent diarrhea occurs. Foods that contain sorbitol or manitol will say so on the label. If foods you're eating do contain these items, then reduce your intake of the foods.

Daughter is born to Mr., Mrs. Larry Simer

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Simer, Gail Rt., announce the birth of a daughter, Randi Chablea, Aug. 14 at the Medical Arts Hospital, Lamesa. Randi made her debut weighing 7 pounds 15 ounces, measuring 20 inches in length.

The new arrival's maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Rich, Stanton. Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Simer, Gail Rt.

Randi's great-grandparents are Lester Brown, Huntsville, and Ethel Dean, Hobbs, N.M.

Dear Abby

No Sailing into Sunset With 'Someday' Man

DEAR ABBY: Six months ago I met a lovely gentleman while traveling with a tour group through Europe. He is 65 and I am 63. I've been a widow for a number of years, and he lost his wife a year ago.

All our waking hours were spent together, so consequently we came to know each other very well during those months. We discovered that we had just about everything in common and loved being together.

Neither of us believes in a "spend-the-night" relationship, yet the chemistry between us is unmistakably electric. So what do I do with a man who says he loves me, but prefaces every remark about marriage with a "maybe, someday, when and if"?

Abby, I care deeply for this man and he says he loves me, yet here we are, two lonely people with so much to give each other, while I'm in my house, and he's in his.

His concern with the calendar and making sure a proper length of time elapses before he remarries astonishes me. How many years does he need? And how much time do we have left?

Sometimes I think I'm wasting my time on this "some-day" man, and I should try to make a new life for myself while I'm still attractive enough to find someone who could fill this lonely void in my life. What do you suggest?

LIVING ON PROMISES

DEAR LIVING: Come Thanksgiving, talk turkey and let him know that all you want for Christmas is a little gold ring. And if this man who says he "loves" you isn't ready to make a commitment, tell him it was nice knowing him — then book another tour.

Four clubs, including Fairview, Centerpoint, Coahoma and City, reported on their September meetings.

The home of Mrs. Frank Micallef was the meeting site for Fairview extension homemakers when they gathered Sept. 2 at 2 p.m.

Mrs. C. A. Smauley, president, presided.

The devotional was given by the hostess from Ephesians 6:1-14. The thought for the day was "Many Christians need a faithlife."

Nine members answered roll call revealing what they first notice about a person's appearance.

It was announced that members would work at the Howard County Fair.

The program was presented by Mrs. Vern Vigar. She demonstrated how to crochet potholders. Other members worked on poodles made from yarn.

Mrs. Ina Richardson won the door prize.

The group will meet again Oct. 7 in the home of Mrs. Smauley.

CENTERPOINT

The devotional was presented by Mrs. Zay Burriell. Fifteen members answered roll call, revealing what they first notice about a person's appearance.

A letter was read, asking club members to donate articles for the sales to benefit patients at Big Spring State Hospital.

Chosen to serve on the Nominating Committee to select officers for the year were Mrs. Burriel, Reba Griffith and Gen Davidson.

A gift was presented to Mrs. Davidson who is a delegate to the State Convention in San Antonio to be held Oct. 14-17.

It was reported that 60 inmates from the state hospital were treated to a picnic by club members recently.

The door prize was won by Othela Fortune. A donation of $15 was made to the Kentwood Activity Center.

The club adjourned to meet again Sept. 23 at the center with Mrs. Ruby Rutledge and Mrs. Ruby Gross serving as hostesses.

COAHOMA

Mrs. B. L. Mason, president, called the meeting to order when members of the Coahoma Extension Homemakers Club met Sept. 10 at 11 a.m. in the home of Mrs. W. J. Tinner for a salad luncheon.

Several club members helped at the Howard County Fair Sept. 18.

Mrs. Mason presented the council report as well as a short story concerning family life. She also won the door prize.

The next meeting will be held Oct. 8 at 2 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Mason.

Colonial Daughters have annual meeting in Odessa

Tejas Chapter of the National Society of Colonial Daughters of the Seventeenth Century met at the home of Mrs. Ernest Thomas in Odessa for the annual September meeting.

Assisting Mrs. Thomas was her sister, Mrs. Randy Hurt, Fort Stockton.

Following the luncheon, Delila Baird called the meeting to order. Joe Clark gave the regular report on national defense.

Correspondence read included letters from the president general, Mrs. Louis W. Patterson, and Mrs. W. W. Lowrey, corresponding secretary general, expressing appreciation for the hospitality extended them during their visit to the chapter in July.

A card from the historian general was read in which she expressed appreciation for copies of news articles and pictures sent for th national scrapbook.

Josie Baird, chapter registrar, reported two applications pending with the registrar general. She also presented the names of seven prospective members. These were given a unanimous vote of approval and will be invited to membership in Tejas Chapter. Vera Morrow, treasurer, gave a financial report, and contributions were voted for national projects.

Following the business meeting, Bernie McCrea, program chairman, presented Sue Whisenant who presented a program from the book, "Over Their Dead Bodies" by Mann & Greene.

The speaker stressed the relationship between epitaphs and history and noted the changes during the major phases of the history of the country from the early colonial era to the present time.

She stated that from recorded time man has shown his wish to be remembered — TO BE A PART OF RECORDED AS WELL AS OF ONGOING HISTORY.

The early New England gravestone bore an informative epitaph. Carved in stone may be found much about a colonial housewife who was captured by the Indians, dates of her spouses and descendants, what the people lived by and how they died.

The trend away from the informative epitaph first appears in the 19th century when they began to be written for the purpose of soothing the bereaved.

Mrs. Whisenant presented a collection of epitaphs typical of the early colonial period, the era of the American Revolution, the years of ferment preceding and following the civil war, and the time from 1871 to the present.

Prospective members present from Big Spring were Mmes. Margaret Barnett, Helen Dawson Cobean and Jo Lipscombe.

Special guest was Richard L. Denham of Midland.

Denita's Beauty Basics

Q: How do I know when I should use a facial mask?

A: If you are regularly following a skin care program, your skin will tell you.

For a beauty regimen consisting of the use of creams, which cleanse and treat, I recommend a weekly facial mask. The mask should be designed for your skins particular needs, of course.

A mask will not only accomplish deeper cleansing, but also will aid in speeding up the skin's ex-foliation process (which will help slough any surfaced, dead, flaky skin cells.)

Care should be given when selecting a facial mask, as there are various types available. Know what you're buying and follow instructions carefully.
