But Less Than Expected...

Preliminary Count Shows Population Increase Here

Although the figure is not as high as expected, Snyder apparently is one of the few Texas cities to show a substantial population gain in the preliminary report on the 1980 census.

Figures received this morning by County Judge Preston Wilson show Snyder with a population of 12,301, a gain of 10.1 percent over the final 1970 count of 11,171, and Scurry County with 17,570, a gain of 11.5 percent over the final total of 15,760 in 1970.

The Snyder figure includes only those inside the corporate limits of the city. Those living on streets and roads that extend beyond the corporate boundaries, but within the city's extra-territorial jurisdiction (within a mile of the city limits) hike the total to 14,972. The latter figure is labeled as the "Snyder Division" in the preliminary census report.

Two other divisions listed for the county are the Fluvanna-Sharon Ridge Division, with a total of 1,593, and the Hermleigh Division, with 910.

City, county and chamber of commerce officials said they had expected higher figures. However, it was noted that in most reports announced so far, the figures have been much lower than expected, especially in the larger cities. Many of these are expected to be revised upward when final figures are in.

City Manager John Gayle said the city would do some checking on dwellings listed as vacant by the census takers. The preliminary report shows 444 vacancies in Snyder and 806 in Scurry County. "There's no way this could be correct," Gayle said.

The city hopes to obtain addresses of those listed as vacant and then check them against utility connections. If they are being served by utilities, it will be a good indication that they are occupied and then a followup count can be made.

The county judge said there had been reports from a number of people who indicated that they had not received census forms. Some of them likely were never counted, despite prior efforts to follow up, he believes.

Bill Warner, chamber of commerce manager, said he had expected a figure closer to 15,000 for Snyder and more than 20,000 for the county.

I'm disappointed," said Warner. However, he also felt that final figures will be much closer to estimates.

The preliminary figures show Snyder with a total of 4,848 housing units, a gain of 9.3 percent over the 4,163 counted 10 years ago. The number of persons per housing unit has declined from 3.08 to 2.77, according to the new figures.

TESCO Hearing Postponed

AUSTIN (AP)—A Public Utility Commission hearing examiner today postponed a hearing on Texas Electric Service Co.'s rate hike request in order to allow attorneys to pursue a settlement.

TESCO, which serves 78 cities in North, Central and West Texas, is asking for a $123 million rate increase. That would raise a monthly household bill of $40 to $50. Commission staff lawyers are recommending a $69.4 million increase.

'Rare' Quake In Kentucky

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

More than 60,000 baseball fans felt it in Detroit and Cleveland. Pradeep Talwani measured it in Columbia, S.C. and Joel Mans said it "busted the whole back side" of his house in Frankfort, Ky.

It was a "very rare" earthquake registering 5.1 on the Richter scale that struck in northern Kentucky on Sunday and was felt for 300 miles or more in all directions - shaking people in 14 states and southern Canada.

No deaths or injuries were reported from the tremor, which was centered about 30 miles northeast of Lexington and occurred at 2:52 p.m., lasting 15 to 45 seconds. But hundreds of buildings - mostly in the Ohio River town of Maysville, Ky. - sustained damage ranging from shattered windows and toppled chimneys to cracked foundations.

Prison Repairs Begin

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—After a calm weekend, officials at the riot-torn Idaho State Penitentiary began working today to repair an estimated $2.7 million in damages.

Corrections Director C.W. "Bill" Crowl said Sunday it will be 10 to 14 days before cellblocks can be repaired after last week's rioting, and 12 to 18 months before the entire institution is repaired.

'Our Gang' Member Dies

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Allen C. Hoskins, who played Farina in 300 slapstick comedy films about the mischief-making "Our Gang," has died of cancer at age 59.

Hoskins died Saturday after being admitted in a coma to Kaiser Hospital.

No Changes In Status Of American Hostages

By The Associated Press

The death of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi "will have no effect" on the fate of the 52 American hostages, said a spokesman for Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr. Another spokesman said Parliament still must settle the hostage issue.

Tehran Radio said there was jubilation throughout Iran over the death in Egyptian exile Sunday of the man it called "the bloodsucker of the century," but there was no hint his dying might speed the release of the Americans, who began their 268th day in captivity today.

Iran "will not change its stand by even an inch with the death of Mohammad Reza," Tehran Radio declared.

The young Moslem militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran on Nov. 4 and demanded the return of Pahlavi for trial also said his death wouldn't affect their captives, a French radio correspondent reported.

The militants said they would keep the 49 Americans they are holding until the "stolen" Pahlavi fortune - estimated as high as $25 billion - is returned to Iran, the French reporter said. Three others are held in the Iranian Foreign Ministry.

U.S. officials in Washington said they believed the death of the shah had little or no bearing on the hostage crisis. They said such recent political developments as the seating of the new Iranian Parliament, or Majlis, and the nomination of a prime minister held greater promise for "the Americans' eventual release."

Scurry Included On Disaster List

Scurry County is included on a list of 49 counties that Gov. Bill Clements is asking the U.S. Small Business Administration to declare disaster areas because of damage from the summer drought.

The counties on the list responded to a statewide survey ordered by Clements to speed up federal assistance for agriculture losses.

Other counties will probably be added to the list. The SBA can make low-interest, long-term loans available in counties affected by the drought.

Clements' request to SBA includes damage that occurred since June 1. The counties on the list are Atascosa, Austin, Bastrop, Bexar, Cochran, Coleman, Comanche, Concho, Delta, Eastland, Edwards, Ellis, Fort Bend, Freestone, Frio, Guadalupe, Hall, Hartley, Henderson, Hidalgo, Hill, Jack, Kent, Knox, Lamb, LaSalle, Leon, Liberty, Live Oak, Llano, and Marion.

Also, Matagorda, McLennan, Medina, Menard, Mills, Mitchell, Nueces, Parker, Red River, San Saba, Scurry, Sterling, Stonewall, Tom Green, Travis, Uvalde, Van Zandt, and Wharton.

Shah's Funeral To Be Tuesday

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—The deposed Shah of Iran, dead after a long fight against cancer and 18 months in exile, will be buried in a traditional Moslem ceremony Tuesday, his coffin draped with the Iranian imperial flag, his body facing Mecca, a Cairo newspaper reported today.

Former President Richard M. Nixon and ex-king Constantine of Greece are scheduled to attend. But, although Egyptian President Anwar Sadat ordered a state funeral, no foreign chiefs of state or government are expected.

Pahlavi, 60, died Sunday at Maadi military hospital outside Cairo from complications resulting from his lymphatic cancer, first detected seven years ago.

News of his death touched off public jubilation in the nation he ruled for 38 years. "The bloodsucker of the century has died," said Tehran Radio.

Ask Us

Q—Why are some sentences, or a series, cut off in the middle in some SDN features?

A—Almost everyday some stories must be shortened to fit the allotted space. We try to do it in such a way that it will at least not omit basic information, but occasionally it happens. If a story ends in the middle of a sentence, you can be assured that it was not intended to do so, but happened due to error.

Productivity Falls For Sixth Quarter

WASHINGTON (AP)—The productivity of the U.S. economy fell at an annual rate of 3.1 percent this spring, marking the sixth consecutive quarter that the measure of economic efficiency has fallen, the government reported today.

The Labor Department attributed the sharp drop to a record decline in output during the second quarter brought on by the recession.

The department said output of goods and services during the April-June period fell at an annual rate of 12.5 percent, the largest quarterly dive since the department began issuing productivity reports 33 years ago.

Paid working hours declined at an annual rate of 9.7 percent during the quarter, the department said.

Productivity is a measure of goods and services produced by the economy in each hour of paid working time. A decline in the rate can fuel inflation because rising wage rates cannot be offset by increased production per hour.

The latest productivity decline compares with a 0.3 percent drop, on an annual basis, during the first three months of this year, and is the largest decline since the first quarter of 1979, when productivity fell by an identical 3.1 percent, on a yearly basis.

The string of quarterly drops is the longest since the 1974-75 recession, when productivity declined for seven consecutive quarters.

With the latest decline, the nation's productivity has shown virtually no growth since 1976.

SNYDER TEMPERATURES: High Saturday, 100 degrees; low, 70 degrees; reading at 7 a.m. Sunday, 74 degrees; precipitation, .06. High Sunday, 97 degrees; low, 68 degrees; reading at 7 a.m. today, 73 degrees; precipitation, none; total precipitation for 1980 to date, 10.77.

West Texas: Sunny today and Tuesday. Fair tonight except partly cloudy extreme southwest with widely scattered thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight. No important temperature changes. Highs today and Tuesday 95 to 105 except near 110 Big Bend valleys. Lows tonight 65 to 75 except near 60 mountains.

MOVING UP—Construction work on the $1¼-million K mart store project in Snyder literally sprang out of the ground over the weekend as framework for the 40,800-square-foot building went up. Meanwhile work was well underway on curbing and other work in development of the parking facilities on the property near the intersection of 37th St. and College. Problems For Carter...

Facing Twin Threats As Convention Nears

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter, at a time when he could well have been looking forward to a triumphant Democratic National Convention, this week faces twin threats over his brother Billy that could turn the convention into a disaster for the president.

A special Senate subcommittee opens an investigation Tuesday into Billy Carter's dealings with Libya and the president himself could be called to testify. At the very least, the probe will raise embarrassing questions about the president's brother - and the president's administration.

At the same time, several dozen members of Congress are continuing efforts toward holding an "open" Democratic convention, a move that could deny Carter the renomination he seemed to have so firmly in grasp only a week ago.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Sunday he continues to favor an open convention, but presidential spokesman Jody Powell cautioned Democratic members of Congress against judging the president's troubles with brother Billy until all the facts are in. President Carter has promised the nine-member Senate panel full cooperation. Billy Carter and his wife, Sybil, reportedly left Georgia for Washington on Sunday and plan to remain in the capital until its investigation is completed.

Billy Carter, with his "redneck" comments and penchant for swilling beer, has been troublesome to the president before. But he has developed into much more than a mere embarrassment since he was forced by the Justice Department to register as a foreign agent of Libya.

The president's brother has acknowledged receiving a $220,000 installment on what he described as a $500,000 loan from the Libyan government, and questions have arisen over the behavior of the White House and Justice Department in the handling of the matter.

In an interview on ABC's "Issues and Answers," Kennedy proposed a 24-hour postponement of a convention fight over his challenge to a rule that would require convention delegates to vote on the first nominating ballot for the candidate they were pledged to support.

The rule would guarantee Carter's renomination, because he already has 1,981 delegate votes, with 1,666 required for nomination.

Powell said on CBS "Face the Nation" that there was "no reason" for the president to release his convention delegates.

For Front Wheel Drive Cars...

General Motors To Expand At Arlington

ARLINGTON (AP)—The General Motors Corp. plant here will soon be expanded to build front-wheel drive cars, the company announced today.

The expansion is part of a $40 billion program of worldwide capital spending for the nation's No. 1 automaker, GM said.

J.T. Battenberg, manager of the Arlington plant, said about 175,000 square feet of space will be added to the 2-million-square-foot plant.

"When the program is completed, we will assemble new, fuel-efficient, front-wheel drive cars," Battenberg said. He said construction will begin in the near future and is scheduled for completion in the summer of 1982.

The Arlington plant employs about 4,600 persons and builds Chevrolet Malibu and Monte Carlo, Battenberg said. The plant has turned out more than 3.9 million cars since opening in 1954, he said.

Employment levels will remain approximately the same during the expansion, Battenberg said.

GM chairman Thomas A. Murphy announced scheduled renovations at Janesville, Wis., and Leeds district of Kansas in a speech before an industry convention Sunday. Last week, GM said it would modernize its Baltimore assembly plant, third in a series of plant renovations that are part of the corporation's $40 billion spending program through 1984 to update its plants to produce more fuel-efficient cars and trucks.

GM also plans to build new assembly plants near St. Louis and Pontiac, Mich., to replace existing plants in those cities.

GM never gives cost figures for individual investment projects, but industry sources say the modernization of an assembly plant costs at least $200 million.

President Carter should have dropped his gasoline "conservation tax" when it became evident that the resistance in Congress was so formidable. As it is, he now carries the burden of being the first president in 20 years to have a veto overridden by a Congress controlled by his own party.

Carter wound up with no more than 34 votes in the House and 10 in the Senate to sustain his veto of a bill denying him authority to impose the tax. This is one more reason for Democrats to believe Ted Kennedy when he insists that Carter lacks the leadership necessary to carry their party to victory in November.

Leadership in energy policy has been slowly passing to the Congress ever since Carter offered an energy program last year. The windfall profits tax, the Energy Mobilization Board, the Energy Security Fund and subsidies for synthetic fuels - all have been pounded into new shapes on Capitol Hill. And the gasoline tax he decided to add this year didn't fly at all.

Seldom has a presidential proposal had so little to recommend it. Carter, faced with defending four years of inflationary deficit spending by the federal government, is trying mightily to pin the major blame for inflation on oil price increases dictated by OPEC. Why, then, would he want to send another inflationary shock through the economy by adding 10 cents a gallon to the price of gasoline in the form of a federal tax?

The suspected answer was that Carter had seen an opportunity to use the worthy cause of fuel conservation to help balance the 1981 budget without the degree of spending restraint which that goal otherwise demands. The gasoline tax would have raised $10 billion or more in new federal revenue.

Even members of Congress bedazzled by an extra $10 billion to pour into their favorite programs could not overlook the fact that the power to levy taxes rests with Congress, not the president. While the president has been empowered to impose an import fee on crude oil or other commodities to regulate trade, passing on the fee to consumers in the form of a tax is more than anything Congress intended. That was the theme of challenge to Carter in the courts which probably would have doomed his tax even if Congress had not chosen to intervene.

So Carter must get along with his $10 billion budget-balancing "reserve," and the cause of energy conservation must get along with the stimulus that OPEC is providing, which is considerable. Oil imports have been running 17.2 percent below a year ago, reflecting the conservation induced by OPEC increases which have pushed gasoline prices into the $1.30 range and can be expected to push them higher.

Carter has been right about one thing: Higher prices lead to declining demand for any product. He embraced that principle in opting for a "conservation tax" on gasoline, but has rejected it as an argument for immediate removal of the remaining federal price controls on domestic crude oil and gasoline. But consistency is not Jimmy Carter's strong suit.

In the mid-'20s, physiologist Ivan P. Pavlov made a rather interesting discovery. Every time he brought food to a dog, he would ring a bell and the dog's mouth began to water. Later, just by ringing the bell, he could bring about a reflex action of saliva.

In the late '40s, Erma Bombeck, a simple housewife in Ohio, made an other interesting scientific discovery. By announcing to her family, "Dinner is ready," it was noted that the entire family swung into action like a precision drill team. For no apparent reason, her husband would exit to clean out the medicine chest, one child would pick up the telephone and begin dialing another would go to the bathroom and lock the door, and once one of them took a bus to Detroit.

After awhile, she wouldn't even have to say anything. When she appeared at the door, they all just took off and scattered.

Just when it seemed her frustration had reached a breaking point, she observed yet another phenomenon. Hours later as the family sat around the table and raised their forks for the first bite, the phone would ring. It came as predictable as rain the day you washed the car, and it was driving her crazy.

She tried everything. She scheduled meals at odd hours. She tiptoed to the table. She once went to the living room where they were all seated around the TV set and instead of announcing dinner said, "I'm not here to announce what you think I am." But the group could not be fooled.

Every night they sat down to warm lettuce and cold french fries, while members of the family filed in and out like they were visiting a 7-11 market. And every night as they prepared to eat the first bite, the phone rang.

Her husband said she was imagining things until one weekend Erma was flat on the sofa with a virus and he was in charge of dinner. Flushed with heat from the stove, and the pressure, he ran into the living room and announced, "Dinner is ready."

One son stood up and went to the mailbox, another went to the car to look for his tennis racket, the dog went to the door and scratched to get out and Erma started to exit.

"Where are YOU going?" he asked hysterically. "I'm going to be sick." "Couldn't you wait until after dinner?" he asked miserably. "I've worked like a dog to get the fish sticks, the chili, and the potatoe chips to come out even."

Twenty minutes later as we all gathered around the table, we waited to hear the inevitable ring of the phone. There was silence for five minutes... then 10... then 20 minutes. A smile crept across my husband's face. "I guess your theory has just sprung a leak," he said. "We're eating and the phone is not ringing."

I didn't have the heart to tell him he was only half right.

light flickering

NEW YORK (AP)—Political attempts to convince the American public that the worst of the recession is over is like trying to polish the floor without washing it first.

Maybe some people, for a day or so, did see the light of encouragement in statements from the White House and its advisers, but now Americans are again forced to look at the deep, dark and dirty realities.

The unemployment rate, which remained under 8 percent in July despite forecasts it would be much higher, is now being viewed as a statistical aberration resulting from a poorly designed seasonal adjustment factor.

The increase in June retail sales might have been a one-month affair that won't be repeated in coming months, various analysts are now saying. And, with money getting tighter again in some areas, some doubts are arising about the staying power of the housing recovery.

Consumer prices seem to be rising again. June prices rose a full 1 percent compared with 0.9 percent in April and May. And now food prices may be heading up, especially for beef and grains.

It appears also that wholesale price increases, after shrinking, will explode again, fueling even further increases in the consumer price index and assuring Americans of stiff inflation for months to come.

Business Week magazine quotes Donald J. Ratajczak of George State University as expecting the July figure will show an 18.2 percent annual rate, compared with just 6.4 percent for the second quarter.

That figure, coupled with higher jobless figures, can be expected to give such a dose of reality to Americans that political promises will be seen for what they are. Reality is the present, and it is grim.

Many economists think the immediate future - for the rest of the year, anyway - isn't much brighter. The car industry especially is in bad shape, and that automatically means certain other industries are too.

On the same day last week, General Motors, the world's largest manufacturer, reported a $412 million loss for the second quarter, its biggest quarterly loss ever. American Motors lost $85 million in the same quarter, and that too was its largest quarterly loss in history.

If the industry's woes were a consequence only of buyer resistance to prices, or buyer hesitation because of the recession, there wouldn't be much to worry about. Such problems correct themselves.

The automobile industry's problems are deeper than that, however. Its reputation for reliability has been undermined, and its styling decisions in recent years have been rejected.

Many potential buyers also are financially overextended, and thus are reluctant or unable to add further credit problems. And their reluctance to buy isn't diminished by higher gasoline prices and taxes.

The economic floor is very dirty, and most Americans know it. They know it because, unlike some politicians who seem to float above realities in this political year, they are standing in the dirt on that floor.

this year as a major political force. Led by television preachers like the Rev. Jerry Falwell and organizations like The Moral Majority, they are planning to spend piles of money this fall to mobilize millions of "Christian voters" in support of candidates who share their beliefs.

There is one candidate who almost all these groups have united against: Jimmy Carter, who these fundamentalists believe has abandoned his born-again theology for that devil liberalism. Carter's support for issues like the Equal Rights Amendment has doomed him in the eyes of these arch-conservatives.

Representatives of various Christian groups came to the Republican Convention here hoping to enlist the aid of the regular party and the Reagan campaign in a plan to trap Carter. Their mission may well turn out successfully.

Central to the fundamentalists' plan is a bill that seeks to back-handedly reinstate voluntary prayer in public schools, a practice the Supreme Court has repeatedly held unconstitutional.

Rather than trying to push a constitutional amendment through Congress, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., introduced a measure that would simply remove the subject of school prayer from the scope of judicial review. The bill has languished in the House Judiciary subcommittee on courts and civil liberties since its passage by the Senate last October.

Carter has announced he will veto the bill if it reaches his desk because he believes it is a clearly unconstitutional attempt to "let emotion overrule federal law."

Fundamentalist leaders think such a veto would be the last straw for millions of their followers who otherwise might still vote for Carter in November. These leaders believe they will guarantee Carter's defeat if they force him to veto the school-prayer bill before the election. To do this, however, they need Republican help.

Rep. Robert Kastenmeier, the Wisconsin Democrat who chairs the courts and civil liberties subcommittee, is clearly attempting to put off action on the legislation until after the election. He has scheduled initial hearings on the matter for the end of July. By the time the bill makes its way through subcommittee and full committee, Congress will have adjourned to campaign for re-election.

In response, Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., is circulating a discharge petition that if signed by 218 representatives will require an immediate floor vote on the school-prayer bill. Because of "congressional courtesy," discharge petitions seldom get the requisite number of signatures. So, supporters of the measure came to Detroit to enlist the aid of presidential candidate Ronald Reagan and his forces on behalf of the discharge petition.

Orchestrating the campaign to get the Helms bill to Carter's desk is Bill Chasey, a Washington-based political operative who is chief lobbyist for a group of religious leaders known as "The Religious Roundtable."

"If we can get the bill to the House floor, we have more than enough votes to pass it," says Chasey. "The problem is that many of the congressmen who would vote for the measure will not sign the discharge petition just out of courtesy. We have 180 signers so far and are about 40 short."

"If Reagan will put out the orders to his people to fall in behind the petition, we can pick up the additional signers we need."

Chasey has received a respectful hearing from party leaders here. Reportedly, Reagan's political staff thinks the plan could well result in a major embarrassment to Carter. The question now is whether they can convince their candidate to lean on the Republican leadership in the House to force through the discharge petition.

Says Chasey: "Within the next couple of weeks, I think that you will see some positive results of our work here the last few days. I'm sure we'll get the signatures we need."

Cassandra Louise Gray, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C.D. Gray Jr. of Snyder, has been selected a state finalist in the 1980 Miss United Teenager Pageant to be held Saturday, Aug. 2, at the Sheraton Dallas Hotel.

The pageant is the official state-wide finals for the Miss United Teenager Pageant.

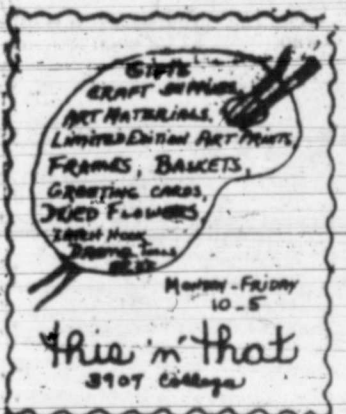

The winner of the state finals will receive an all-expense paid trip to compete in the national finals, a three-phase pageant in Hollywood, Calif., Waikiki Beach, Hawaii, and Washington, D.C., where she will compete for $15,000 in cash scholarships, a new automobile for her reigning year, a trip to Europe, a $5,000 appearance contract, a $2,000 wardrobe and other awards.

Contestants from all over the state will be competing in Dallas for the state title. Contestants between the ages of 14 and 18 must have at least a B average in school and they are requested to participate in the Volunteer Community Service Program of the Miss United Teenager Pageant. Through this program, many youngsters become involved in community activities by contributing at least eight hours of time to some worthwhile charity or civic work of their choice.

Contestants are judged on scholastic, civic achievement, beauty, poise and personality. No swimsuit competition is required. However, each contestant will write and recite on stage a 100-word essay on the subject, "My Country."

Miss Gray, a student at Snyder High School, is sponsored by the Snootie Fox, Dryden's Shoe Store, Glover's and Snyder Bookstore and Gift Shop.

Dear Abby

Cross-Dressing May Cross the Law

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Is it against the law for a husband and wife to appear in public — restaurants, shopping, etc. — the husband dressed as a woman, and the wife dressed as a man?

Paul and I are both normal in every sense of the word. It all started this way: I am 5 foot 11, and Paul is 5 foot 5. We are as compatible as two people can be, but we have always felt somewhat conspicuous in public. For that reason, I stopped wearing heels.

One day I bought some women's Wedgie shoes in Paul's size and gave them to him. He tried them on, found them to be very comfortable and was delighted with the extra height they provided. After wearing these Wedgies a few times, he wanted another pair. Now he refuses to wear anything else. Just for fun, I put some makeup on him and got him a woman's wig, and we went to dinner that way. We loved it! Then I started to dress like a man, and now we do it all the time. I assure you we are sexually normal. My husband dresses as a man for work. We switch roles for fun only when we go out.

Someone told me that this is against the law. Is it?

J.J.

DEAR J.J.: What is legal in one community may be illegal in another. In some places, cross-dressing is considered "masquerading" — or deliberately attempting to conceal one's identity, which could conceivably be against the law. Play it safe and consult a local lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letters concerning having gold removed from a person's mouth after death.

I specialize in reconstructive dentistry, and it is not uncommon to use between 2 and 3 ounces of gold in an individual's mouth. Many patients have taken to the grave enough gold to pay for the funeral. However, I've been torn over a decision to mention this to my patients for fear they might find it objectionable, or look upon it as a desecration of the body.

I know that not all dentists feel as I do, but I would be perfectly willing to accommodate a bereaved spouse or the kin of a loved one by performing this kind of dentistry.

FLORIDA D.D.S.

DEAR D.D.S.: You claim the distinction of being the only dentist among my readers to make such an offer. Congratulations. I was informed by others in your profession that getting a dentist to perform this type of surgery would be "like pulling teeth."

DEAR ABBY: I'm happy for that woman with multiple sclerosis who was carried up five flights of stairs in a Japanese temple and on and off airplanes by a husband who not once hinted that being married to a disabled woman was at times inconvenient.

I wasn't that lucky. After I got M.S. and became less able to function, my husband divorced me and left me with two teen-agers to raise alone.

Unusual? Not really. Statistics show that approximately 80 percent of the women with M.S. end up divorced, as compared to 15 percent when the husband develops it. That doesn't say much for the American male, does it?

It's good to know that the words "in sickness and in health" actually mean something to some people, but as for me, so do the words...

Walking Club Goals Set

The RSVP Walking Club met for coffee and set goals for the fall. Walking Club Volunteers work in teams of two, to walk disabled nursing home residents on a daily basis. Each team walks one day a week and provides welcome companionship.

The first RSVP Walking Club was organized three years ago at Snyder Oaks Care Center and one member of the original team, Mozelle Lee, is still working with this project. She was followed by Emma Conroe, Ollie Clements, Dee Fenton, Clovis Robinson, Glenna Belle Roggenstein, and Frances Martin. Two years later, Georgia Hailey and Oleta Layne began walking residents at Leisure Lodge. They were joined by Lula McDowell and Gaye Williamson and most recently by Rosa Kennedy and L. Dee Harlin.

These RSVP Volunteers have a special feeling for the elderly and their needs. The project requires both emotional and physical effort on the part of the volunteer, however, they are rewarded by the residents' smiles and eagerness to walk. Often the volunteer's visits and words of encouragement serve to lift the spirits of the disabled as much as the exercise.

This coming year the RSVP staff and volunteers will be striving to have volunteers to walk each day.

SNYDER, TEXAS 79586 RES. (915) 573-5545

Like a good neighbor, State Farm is there.

Losing 43 pounds makes her shine like a new Penny.

Penny Charles hadn't weighed herself in 4 or 5 years. Oh, she knew she'd put on a few pounds cooking all the fattening things her husband liked, but she still thought she couldn't weigh much more than 120. When she finally did step on the scale, she burst into tears. Her weight was up to 142 pounds.

"I'd started shopping in the maternity department for smocks," Penny recalls. "I told myself I needed them for my work as an artist, but the fact was I couldn't find anything else that fit."

Through her mother's influence, Penny found the Pat Walker's program and began an exciting new stage in her life.

Reduce in privacy

Penny discovered that going to Pat Walker's doesn't mean becoming just one more in a roomful of overweight women struggling through strenuous exercises. At Pat Walker's, privacy is very important. Penny liked that, because she was self-conscious about the after-effects of a bout with polio.

"I didn't want to parade around in a leotard for others to see," she says. "I think a lot of women feel that way, for whatever reason."

No-sweat exercise gets results

You don't even have to change from your street clothes at Pat Walker's. Or work up a sweat, or muss your hair. All you do is lie back and relax for a half hour or more about 3 times a week, while the Symmetrical exercise unit does the work for you. As it gently moves your body, you get the benefits you want: toning, tightening, smoothing.

It's a remarkably easy way to achieve the best body you can have, which can be a surprisingly nice one, as Penny will tell you.

"I always made excuses for my fat arms, telling people it was because I'd used crutches for a long time. Well, that was a crutch. Now I have slender arms!" She does indeed. Penny Charles has lost 43 pounds and a total of 80 inches (7 feet of fat) over the last 2 years. Not only has her weight loss changed her looks, it's changed her career. Now art work is her hobby, and Pat Walker's is her job—she's a salon owner and assistant director of Pat Walker's International.

Does her husband approve of the new Penny? No doubt about it. "He used to give me practical gifts, like an iron or a bathrobe. For Christmas last year, he gave me a beautiful diamond ring in the shape of a 'S'... for sexy."

Pat Walker's is for you, too

There is a difference in weight reduction programs. If you like the idea of being treated as a special and valued patron, in complete privacy... if you'd like to take it easy while you reduce, let Pat Walker's consultant explain our complete program to you.

Call today to reserve a time for your complimentary treatment and figure analysis. There's no obligation.

Dallas Banker Kills Wife, Friend, Self

DALLAS (AP)—A bank officer who mistakenly believed his estranged wife was having an affair with another man shot and killed both of them, told his mother what he had done and then committed suicide Sunday, police said.

Dallas homicide investigator Linda Fulghum said the first indication police had of the bizarre incidents was a report that Nancy Patrick, 33, had been shot at a busy Dallas intersection.

"We went to the scene and found her. Her son told us that his stepfather had come to the house and got into an argument with his (the son's) mother, chased her out into the street and shot her," Mrs. Fulghum said.

Witnesses told police Mrs. Patrick ran to the busy intersection of Greenville Avenue and Lovers Lane, a block from her house, and tried to stop a passing motorist for help while her husband, Don, 39, gave chase. Her 11-year-old son, Shane, was following the couple and watched as Patrick shot his wife several times, then ran back to his car and fled, officers said.

Within 20 minutes, police in suburban University Park reported Patrick, a trust officer at a Dallas bank, had killed himself in the back yard of his parents' fashionable home there.

Patrick apparently turned the gun on himself just as a University Park patrolman arrived.

"I was the first officer there," said policeman K. D. Burks. "I was just trying to make contact with a witness."

Burks said he was told

Patrick was around back, talking to his mother, Mrs. James Patrick.

"I just walked around the corner of the house and he was lying on the ground. She (Patrick's mother) told me that he had just shot himself. Evidently it was just a few seconds before I had stepped out of my car."

Police said they found the body of Ruben Francis Triplett, 29, a former Southern Methodist basketball star, in his North Dallas condominium. Investigators said they found a note from Patrick admitting he had shot Triplett.

Mrs. Fulghum said Patrick apparently believed his wife and Triplett were lovers, but investigators do not believe that was true.

Defining a hysterectomy

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I read in one of your columns again that a hysterectomy doesn't affect a woman's sex life. If you were a woman you might change your mind. In my younger years I enjoyed sex, but then I was divorced and had a hysterectomy. After a number of years I recently remarried. Now I'm unable to have sex. The urge is there, although it's not as strong as it was before the operation. The problem is that I have shrunk inside or grown together. Will I have to do without sex for the rest of my life or can this situation be corrected? I am 51 years old, 4 feet 10 inches tall and weigh 109 pounds. I used to be a sexy, well-proportioned woman but since the hysterectomy, I'm a fat, sexless person. Surely there are other women with these same problems and if you have any suggestions, I'd appreciate them.

DEAR READER—You're mixing apples and oranges. The problem begins with the definition of a hysterectomy. A hysterectomy involves only the removal of the uterus. If it's a total hysterectomy it includes the body of the uterus and the cervix. Many women who have a hysterectomy also have their ovaries removed. That's more than a hysterectomy. In other instances, about the time of life that a woman requires a hysterectomy is also the time the ovaries fail naturally. It's the removal of the ovaries or ovarian failure that cause the kind of symptoms you're describing.

Adequate amounts of hormones do affect a woman's sexual urges and her femininity. When sex hormones are decreased with the menopause or by surgical removal of the ovaries, there is a tendency to revert or involute back to the prepuberty status. That's part of why you're so small and have had the problems that you're complaining about.

Normal amounts of female hormones are necessary for the maintenance of normal secretions and normal anatomy. The other problem, of course, is that most of our body functions are just like the comments we make about muscles. If you don't use them, you lose them. Inactivity coupled with loss of female hormones is adequate reason for the changes you described.

Yes, this problem can be helped by the administration of female hormones. First, the doctor needs to determine whether a woman needs them. Your adrenal gland also produces female hormones and these may provide enough for some women. But if hormones are needed, they can be supplied provided there are no contraindications to their use.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 14-12, Hysterectomies, Cystocele And Rectocele, so you can sort out the differences between a hysterectomy and having your ovaries removed and the general problems that you're experiencing. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

I'm really trying to help the public recognize the difference between hysterectomies and having the ovaries removed. The confusion has caused many women to neglect having regular check-ups. As long as the ovaries are still intact, particularly in the middle and later years, a woman is susceptible to developing a cancer of the ovaries. Regular examinations help to ensure early detection and the best opportunity for treatment. It is extremely important for a woman who has a hysterectomy to know whether her ovaries have also been removed.

Burro Roundup Begins This Week In Canyon

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—A roundup of 350 wild burros from the Grand Canyon gets under way this week, and the elite cowboys hired to do the job don't expect an easy time of it.

"Some of them old stud burros get pretty mean," said Dave Ericsson, 39, a veteran trail boss in charge of the roundup. "I had one of my men's thumbs bit off one time."

"You get one of those ornery old jacks—a male is a 'jack' and a female is a 'jenny'—and they'll really bite you," he said. "I've had 'em take some pretty good bites out of me...but we understand 'em pretty well."

It was Ericsson's understanding of the burros and his reputation for gentleness with animals that won him the contract for the project, said Cia Hobbs of the Fund for Animals, which is organizing the roundup and airlift scheduled to begin Tuesday.

The roundup was arranged after it appeared the burros might have to be destroyed because a federal report said they were damaging the environment and posing a threat to other animals in the canyon.

The burros will be herded into corrals on the canyon floor, put in slings and then lifted by helicopters to pens on the rim of the canyon, said Cleveland Amory, chairman of the board of the Fund.

Ericsson and his six-man crew have rounded up about 1,700 burros in the past two years near Alamo Lake in western Arizona and have spent the past week studying the movements and habits of the canyon burros.

The animals are not native to the area but are descendants of burros introduced by Gold Rush-era prospectors who mined the canyon from the 1850s through the 1880s.

In recent years, as the burros became a nuisance, large numbers of them were shot, but a federal judge restrained any killings this year at least until after a Nov. 12 hearing.

The U.S. Park Service reports on the burros said they deprive bighorn sheep, deer and other wildlife of food and water by destroying vegetation and fouling water holes.

"For some reason, burros have a tendency to eliminate waste right into the same streams and pools from which they're drinking," said Roger Giddings, of the U.S. Park Service. "Bighorn sheep and deer don't do that."

He said the burros also have a tendency to roam into campsites "and leave them smelling like barnyards." In addition, the Park Service report said trails worn into the canyon by the burros contribute to serious erosion.

Ms. Hobbs said that "the absolute most primary concern" of the Fund is to handle the burros as gently as possible. But that's not to say burros ever have been regarded as the milktoasts of the animal kingdom.

"You could refer to them as stubborn animals," said Jerry Owens, the Fund's chief humane officer. "They're animals that do what they want to do," and when the cowboys go after them, "they're going to resist."

Such resistance could produce "absolute carnage," says the head of another environmental group.

"We feel very strongly that in this roundup many animals will be destroyed," said Joan Blue, president and board chairman of the American Horse Protection Association.

She said documents filed with the Park Service when the Fund sought its airlift permit reveal the tranquilizing drug, M-99, will be used to subdue the burros.

"It's the highest form of morphine you can use," Ms. Blue said. And it takes something like 15 minutes at the utmost to come back with the antidote, M-50.

"How many animals can you get back to in 15 minutes? We anticipate absolute carnage," she said.

Amory conceded tranquilizers could be used during the operation but said, "We sure hope not. We have not used one yet and we don't expect to."

Niekro Paces Astro Victory

MONTREAL (AP)—Even in defeat the Montreal Expos should consider themselves fortunate that Joe Niekro wasn't around to record a complete game Sunday.

The 35-year-old knuckleball specialist of the Houston Astros left after five innings because of a stiff right elbow but before departing he scattered three hits and collected three singles, including one that drove in a run, as the Astros beat the Expos 6-3.

The triumph gave Niekro a club-leading 11 wins for the season and enabled the Astros to take the 3-game series.

"I hurt the elbow when I was tagging out Rodney Scott in the first inning," said Niekro. "It started to stiffen on me to the point where I could no longer throw the curve ball."

Relying on his knuckleball and the occasional fastball, Niekro hung around long enough to snap a 2-2 tie by scoring on Luis Pujols' triple in the second inning.

Niekro then followed a two-run single by Craig Reynolds with an RBI single of his own as the Astros put the game out of reach with a three-run uprising against starter Bill Lee, 3-5, in the third. Lee contributed largely to his downfall by issuing consecutive walks to Cesar Cedeno and Art Howe. He was replaced at that point by Dale Murray, who retired the first batter and got Pujols to hit a potential double-play ball at third baseman Larry Parrish.

Texas Splits With Chicago

CHICAGO (AP)—Texas Manager Pat Corrales threw his hands up in the air and said, "You figure Mickey Rivers out. I can't. Did you see him limping home with that run?"

Rivers did anything but limp when he scored from third on a shallow sacrifice fly by Jim Norris in the 13th inning to give the Rangers a 4-3 victory Sunday and a double-header split. Chicago won the first game 3-2.

Rivers did not start the second game because "he told me his leg was hurting," said Corrales. "His right leg. When you run like he does, your legs are supposed to hurt."

Rivers went into the second game in the 11th inning and got to bat in

Area Teams Crowned Champs In Girl's Softball Play Here

Snyder's quest for a United Girls Softball Association tournament championship, which began a week ago, ended here Saturday evening in defeat.

The local's hopes rested on its youngest group, the mini-minors or Division I girls, after three batteries of older sluggers bowed out earlier.

Like the older group, Division IV, Snyder's youngsters reached the finals without struggling.

also belted a triple and Tammy Gray, Hayley Vineyard and Patricia Casias added a single each.

The locals allowed a dozen walks, including six in Big Spring's six-run, second inning. Michelle Baker slapped a double in between the walks to further aid Big Spring's cause. Lori Gonzales was the winning pitcher.

Tight Budgets Cause Talk Of Local Sales Tax

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP)—With city and county budgets strained by inflation, there is more and more talk among Texas cities and counties about increasing and expanding the local sales tax.

All of this will surface in the 1981 Legislature. The Texas Municipal League voted last November to work for a one or two-cent increase in local sales taxes in 1981. Gov. Bill Clements' Mayors' Advisory Committee approved the city tax increase proposal. The Texas Association of Counties wants the 254 counties to have the same authority to levy local sales taxes as cities now have. Scattered hospital districts and school districts have talked of local sales tax support. "If they all got their way, Texans could wind up paying the highest sales tax in the nation," said James W. McGrew, vice president and director of research for the Texas Research League. Currently New York City has the highest sales tax in the nation with a combined state and city eight percent tax. Houston and San Antonio have the highest rates in Texas of six percent-four cents for the state, one cent city and one cent for a metropolitan mass transit districts. "If the House city tax were to go to three cents and Harris County levied a one-cent tax, the total sales tax paid by Houston residents would be nine percent," said McGrew. "And that is without considering additional sales taxes for the school and hospital districts."

Marvin Townsend, Corpus Christi city manager, doesn't forecast any local sales taxes of nine cents, but he says "this city would favor more discretion in the use of the sales tax, there would be a tendency to shift more of our former programs to the sales tax." Townsend believes "the best system of taxation relies on diversity in order to balance out the inequities. If we rely too much on property taxes or rely more and more on one source of taxation there will be more inequities." Sam Coats, president of the Texas Research League, told a meeting of the Texas City Managers Association in Lubbock, that about 950 Texas cities use the city sales tax, after local option elections, to raise more than $450 million annually. It is used by about 5,600 cities throughout 26 states, producing $6.2 billion annually. So far, Louisiana is the only state where school districts may levy such a tax.

Iranians Dance In Street Over Shah's Death

By The Associated Press
Iranians danced in the street at the news that Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi had died. Former President Nixon and a few other foreign leaders mourned him publicly, but the State Department in a brief, guarded statement said nothing about his long alliance with the United States.

A spokesman for Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said the death Sunday of Iran's deposed monarch would have no effect on the American hostages' young Iranian militants seized nearly nine months ago to try to force his return for trial, the BBC reported. Most foreign observers agreed.

The militants said their captives would not be released until the "stolen" Pahlavi wealth was returned to Iran, a French newsmen in Tehran reported.

Tehran Radio withheld news of the shah's death for about two hours after reports flashed from Cairo, then interrupted its regular programming to announce:

"Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, the bloodsucker of the century, has died at last. Today is a day in the history of all mankind — because the earth has spat out one of the new pharaohs."

Later broadcasts said rejoicing Iranians poured into the streets of Tehran, flashed their car lights on and off and jammed newsstands to buy extras the newspapers rushed from the presses.

In the holy city of Qom, "people celebrated the occasion on the streets by dancing" and blowing trumpets and "the lights of houses and cars were turned on and people congratulated each other," the official Pars news agency said.

President and Mrs. Carter sent a message of condolence to the shah's family, but a brief statement issued by the State Department had apparently been worded to avoid provoking the revolutionary regime further. It expressed neither regret for his death nor tribute to his long partnership with the United States and said:

"History will record that he led the country at a time when profound changes were taking place. His death marks the end of an era in Iran, which all hope will be followed by peace and tranquility."

This was in marked contrast to tributes from the Republican side of the fence.

Kissinger called the deposed monarch "good friend of the United States who stood by seven presidents over 35 years of his rule. He died abandoned by all his friends — except President Sadat."

In 1942, Vidkun Quisling was installed as minister-president of Norway by the Germans during World War II. Quisling dissolved the constitution during his first week in power and ruled as a virtual dictator.

Nurse Slain

At Home Of

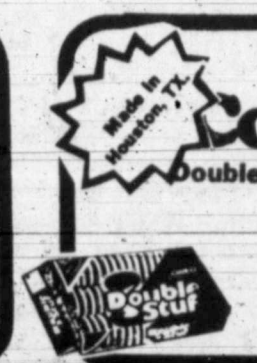

Former Patient

DALLAS (AP)—A former mental patient has been arrested for investigation of the murder, at his apartment, of a nurse who once helped treat him, police said.

Officers said James Ballew, 28, was arrested at least four times with a high-powered rifle. She was a registered nurse at the psychiatric ward of Baylor Hospital and met the arrested man while he was in the ward for treatment, said police detective G.R. Robinson.
