Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Republican Railroad Commission candidate Jim Lacy of Midland today told a capitol press conference here that the professional qualifications of incumbent Commissioner John Poerner represent the main issue in the race.

Lacy, with 30 years experience in the oil and gas industry, is currently an independent oil operator with royalty holdings he says have been placed in a blind trust.

Poerner has made much the same claim.

Appointed to the oil and gas regulatory commission by Gov. Dolph Briscoe to succeed the retired Jim Langdon, Poerner defeated challenger Jerry Sadler in the Democratic Party runoff election earlier this month, for the right to meet Lacy.

But unlike Lacy, Poerner does not have three decades of experience in the oil and gas industry, although he does have royalty holdings.

At his first capitol press conference since announcing for the Railroad Commission back in February, Lacy said, "This job is too important, too complex, to be regulated by someone who does not have a background in the business."

Despite his stock holdings in Adobe Oil and Gas Corp., Lacy said he could not envision any conflicts arising from his serving on the Railroad Commission. "If they do (arise), I'll disqualify myself," he said.

Lacy indicated he would concentrate his campaign, estimated to cost $150,000, in the state's major metropolitan areas.

Jury says will not Hughes'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The handwritten words that would have made a gas station attendant a millionaire have been rendered worthless because a jury concluded that Howard Hughes didn't write them.

The unanimous decision showed the jurors did not believe the strange story told by Melvin Dummar, the once obscure Utah man who said he met Hughes as a hitchhiker, helped him out and won a bequest of some $10 million.

The five men and three women of the jury, who heard seven months of testimony in the complex trial, spent 11 hours in deliberations before reaching their decision Thursday night.

In a hushed, packed courtroom, the verdict was unsealed and read:

"We the jury ... find that certain three-page document written on lined, legal paper dated March 19, 1968 ... was not entirely written, dated and signed by the hand of the decedent, Howard Robard Hughes Jr. himself."

There were gaps. Los Angeles attorney Harold Rhoden, who invested two years and thousands of dollars in seeking to prove the will authentic, appeared shocked.

"Well, feilas, that's it," Rhoden said, turning to his team of lawyers. Outside court, he said he would not appeal the verdict.

"The jury has spoken, and that's it," he said. "There's nothing more to be said."

Rhoden said he still believes the crudely scrawled will is authentic, "but I sure didn't convince the jury that it was."

Rhoden represented Noah Dietrich, a former Hughes aide who was named executor in the strange document delivered mysteriously to Mormon Church headquarters shortly after Hughes died.

It came to be known as the "Mormon Will."

Dummar, now a beer truck driver, was playing with a band at a country-western dance in Ogden, Utah, when the jury returned its decision.

"I would have hoped it would have gone in my favor," he said. "I was not in control of it so there's not much I can do about it. So I'm just planning to go on working like I have been."

Informant may lose shield

MIAMI (AP) — Joey Teitelbaum helped get indictments in what the FBI calls the biggest labor investigation in government history. Now the shipping company owner may be in danger of losing his federal protection.

Those new "friends" Teitelbaum had been casually introducing to Miami's waterfront society were really government undercover agents.

The charade went on for 28 months, with not even Teitelbaum's family aware of what he was doing, reported WCKT-TV. To protect him against revenge, up to 17 U.S. marshals were assigned to provide security.

The investigation came to a head Thursday when federal officers arrested 21 people in seven cities on charges of conspiring to "control the waterfront" through payoffs, extortion and threats of violence. Among them were two vice presidents of the International Longshoremen's Association, four local presidents and top officials of shipping companies. Arrests were made in Miami, New York, Atlanta, Charleston, S.C., Savannah, Ga., Mobile, Ala., and Jacksonville, Fla.

Joey Teitelbaum

Teitelbaum has continued to live openly, carrying on his business. He allowed news photographs to be taken Thursday, even as the roundup was under way.

But Thursday night, Teitelbaum said he was told his protective shield of marshals would be withdrawn unless he enters the federal secret witness program.

That would likely mean he would have to begin a new life in another town under an assumed name. A source close to the family who asked not to be identified said Teitelbaum might not testify if his protection was pulled.

In Washington, the Justice Department said Thursday night that the matter was being evaluated. "There has been no decision whether to withdraw his protection ...," said spokesman Robert Havel. "What is going to be done, I can't say yet."

Israeli commandos hit guerrilla base

AAQBIYE, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli commandos striking before dawn from the air and sea attacked a Palestinian base at this southern Lebanon fishing village today, killing five guerrillas and wounding seven others, Palestinians here reported.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said two Israeli lieutenants were killed and eight of its soldiers were wounded in the surprise assault by seaborne commandos and paratroopers.

It said the strike destroyed a guerrilla naval base and there was evidence the seacoast compound was being used to prepare for terrorist attacks on Israel "in the near future."

An Israeli military spokesman said the raiders counted eight Palestinian bodies, and he claimed none of the estimated 30 to 40 defenders escaped before the Israeli raiders dynamited the base.

Guerrillas said they killed 8 to 10 Israelis in the two-hour clash.

Western correspondents who drove down from Beirut to this village 26 miles north of the Israeli border saw signs of a major firefight.

Abu Jihad, the Al Fatah guerrilla group's top military commander in Lebanon, toured the bloodstained site at mid-morning. He denied the base rubber boats and helicopters. He admitted the base was caught off guard.

Abu Jihad is No. 3 in the hierarchy of Al Fatah, largest guerrilla group in Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

"This is not a major base at all," Abu Jihad told reporters. "We have people here just as we have them scattered all around the area."

Inexplicably, Israel reported the attack was on Dahar el Bouj, about one mile inland and northeast of Aaqbiye. The area is six miles south of Sidon and 20 miles north of the Israeli-occupied zone of southern Lebanon.

The attack was the deepest Israeli penetration north of the Litani River since Israel invaded and occupied 500 square miles of southern Lebanon in March. That invasion, aimed at driving guerrillas out of southern Lebanon, followed a Palestinian terrorist raid into Israel that killed 35 Israelis.

A pooled report prepared for the foreign press in Israel quoted military sources as saying all Israel's casualties today were caused by the explosion of a Palestinian arms depot.

Is a parrot smart because it parrots? An eagle might behold such mimicking birds as enslaved and devoid of a free spirit.

Busbee has a pet parrot, by the way, named Gladys. Busbee is still into bird smartness, upon which that Ph.D. he's after hinges.

(His major professor at Cornell is Dr. Tom Cade, a foremost researcher on the peregrine falcon.)

Meanwhile, he's finishing up on his master's degree in art at Sul Ross State. It'll be his third sheepskin; he's got a bachelor's degree in English literature and a master's in zoology.

It — the extra degree — will be something to put in his hip pocket. In a sense, it's got a kinship with all those unpublished poems he has written; they may turn into a windfall some day. Busbee is "a closet poet."

He has developed an interesting slant toward pots since he started studying the art of earthenware making under Miriam Lowrance, chairman of the Sul Ross art department.

Some say there's "functional" pottery and then there's "decorative" pottery.

Carrier winners' trip set

Six enterprising Reporter-Telegram carriers will leave shortly before noon Sunday for an expense-paid trip to Dallas and Arlington, where they will see a Texas Rangers baseball game and visit Six Flags Over Texas.

They are winners of a new subscribers sales contest sponsored by the newspaper's circulation department.

The winners are Jay and Wayne Ramsey, sons of Mrs. V.L. Ramsey of 3335 Fannin Ave.; Todd Brown, son of Mrs. Dale A. Brown of 3625 Hyde Park Ave.; Cary Wallace, son of Mr. and Mrs. D.A. Wallace of 810 Sinclair Ave.; Stuart McCrary, son of Mrs. Ann McCrary of 601 W. Estes Ave.; and Dale Lower of 504 Devonian St.

After flying to Dallas on a commercial airline, they will see the Rangers tangle Sunday night with the Chicago White Sox. They will spend Monday at Six Flags and fly back to Midland late that night.

Board of Equalization hearing farmer protests

Midland-area farmers who have not had their land evaluated for several years finally are feeling the pinch of inflation and are protesting to the Board of Equalization as it continues hearings on recent land assessments.

About 465 persons have appeared before the board, according to Virgil Jones, city tax assessor-collector. Another 60 are expected to appear before the board finishes hearing all the cases, he said. Last year the board heard 800 to 900 cases and received letters of protest on about 200 more. "This has been a light year," Jones said.

Attorney David Brooks has been representing more than 80 clients this week, and most of them are farmers, he said.

"We are making sure the acreage is correct on each tract of land and (trying) to show the general scheme of valuation is too high," Brooks said. He said he believes the board valued all farm acreage at $750 an acre for irrigated land and $550 an acre for dry land. There are special problems with land closer to the city. It is valued at a higher price, he said.

"The clients feel this is too high,"

Brooks added.

But, Patsy Bohannon, chairman of the board, said she sees the large number of protesters as an "overall protesting of taxation. We (the board) are trying to arrive at a market value for the land and the people are wanting it (taxes) based on its productivity."

Policy and technical questions need to be answered by the board, Brooks said. The issue is not just that farmers feel the taxes are too high. "If taxes are too high on agriculture land, it means people can't afford to farm their land. It may come to the point that only certain people can afford to buy the land, and they in turn will lease it to the smaller farmer."

"I feel that is an undesirable situation to create in this county," he added.

A large number of persons have shown up for the board hearings, Brooks said, and he attributes that to the size of the reevaluation. "Most people said it more than doubled for them," he said.

The board was to adjourn after another round of hearings today, with plans to resume on June 12.

Senator threatens lawsuit

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — With Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker threatening a lawsuit, the Democratic-controlled Tennessee Election Commission decided to reconsider its decision today to bar Baker from the ballot. He is running for his third term.

The name of the nation's highest ranking Republican official was omitted from the ballot Thursday after Democratic officials disputed the senator's signature on his qualifying petitions. Baker said the signature was genuine.

A 1980 presidential prospect, Baker said "We're going to take whatever steps we have to do" to get back on — and that will include going to court. He said, however, that he first would allow the commission an opportunity to reverse itself. Chairman Richard Holcomb, Chattanooga, scheduled a meeting of the five-member commission for this afternoon.

Unless overturned, the commission action will keep Baker's name off the Republican primary ballot Aug. 3 and the Nov. 8 general election ballot. The qualifying deadline for both ballots passed on June 1.

Baker was expected to win the GOP nomination easily and have little trouble in November against one of eight Democrats running for the right to oppose him. If all else fails, Baker could try for a write-in campaign to give him the nomination in August.

Baker, who flew from Washington to his hometown of Huntsville, Tenn., after the commission action, said his staff and attorneys would be at the state capital today to try to get the commission to reverse itself.

Baker's press secretary, Ron McMahan, predicted the commission would recant. "They will realize how bad they have screwed up," said McMahan. "It looks like they know they can't beat us in an election, so they're going to try to steal it."

Fred Thompson, a Nashville lawyer and Republican leader, said unless the commission "reverses itself and reverses itself rather quickly, we'll go to court."

Skylab returned to orbit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Skylab was falling, but the space agency caught it.

Spokesmen at the Johnson Space Center in Houston said commands transmitted from tracking stations on Bermuda and near Madrid succeeded in placing the space station back in orbit.

"We hadn't anticipated so much success so quickly," said spokesman Bob Gordon. "But we still have adjustment maneuvers to execute Saturday morning."

Is the second signature genuine? Democratic election officials in Tennessee thought not and thereby kept Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, a Republican, off the Tennessee ballot in a bid for his third term. The first signature is on a letter while the third is on petition filed with the the beachfront guerrilla compound. Guerrillas said there were six Lebanese civilians buried beneath one of the wrecked houses. They reportedly were local laborers who tended the orchards around the compound. There was no way to verify the report before the rubble was cleared.

At least five boats, each 20 feet long, were burned. Their charred remains still smoldered at mid-morning, seven hours after the attack began. The guerrillas claimed the boats were not used for cross-border raids, but were fishing boats belonging to local residents.

The Israeli pooled report said the raiders found and destroyed motorboats, rubber dinghies, ammunition and weapons, including U.S.-made M-16 rifles equipped with grenade launchers.

High 90s coming this weekend

Midland residents can get their swim suits out in preparation for a day by the pool. The weatherman is predicting fair weather with temperatures in the high 90s on Saturday.

Thursday's high temperature was 83 degrees and the overnight low dropped to 58 degrees, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The record high for June 8 is 104 degrees set in 1964. The lowest temperature on record for June 9 is 55 degrees recorded in 1955.

The weather service said it should be partly cloudy tonight with light southeasterly winds. Area towns reported sunny, clear and warm weather.

Visitors win warmup

Eva Ann Barber of San Angelo and Bob Preston of Abilene won first place in Thursday night's warmup game which preceded today's opening of the Tall City Sectional Duplicate Bridge Tournament.

Barber and Preston scored 139.5 points to edge Mr. and Mrs. Jack LaVigne of Midland, who came in with 139 points. In third place were Sue Bush and Allen Copeland of Odessa, with 133.5 points.

The Unmixed Pairs event got the three-day tournament under way at 1:30 p.m. today. The Masters Pairs will be played at 7:30 p.m. today, along with a non-masters game.

Saturday's schedule will include an individual event at 9:30 a.m. and the two-session Open Pairs, beginning at 1:30 p.m. Finals are slated at 7:30 p.m. The Open Pairs consolation game also will get under way at 7:30 p.m.

The tournament will end Sunday with the main event, the two-session Swiss Team of Four competition. The first round will begin at 11 a.m. and the second round starting time will be announced.

Midland man hurt in fall

A Midland man was listed in satisfactory condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital after falling four floors Thursday at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa.

Morgan Burdick, 23, of the 1100 block of West Wall Avenue reportedly was working on the fifth floor of the hospital, putting in new caulking on a window duct, a Midland Memorial spokesman said.

Burdick fell, landing feet first on an air conditioning duct on the first-floor roof of Medical Center. He was treated at Medical Center and later transferred to Midland Memorial because he lives in Midland, the Midland Memorial spokesman said.

eat beans out of." That's how some people view pottery, but not Brisbane. A decorative but otherwise "useless" piece of clay art may have only an aesthetic function. It has purpose.

"So, everything has a function. Everything should attempt to be a piece of art."

Though he's no vagabond or "snowbird," Bisbee calls no particular place home — except, maybe, Alpine. He has traveled the country over, from coast to coast; his father was in the U.S. Coast Guard.

He is fond of what he has found here.

Since he sojourned to this mountainous Big Bend country (he left once but returned), Bisbee, 35, has run into new experiences; one is his girlfriend, Cecilia Valenzuela.

She set up Bisbee's pottery show in the Sul Ross Art Gallery.

"She's a real tough critic of my pots," he said. "She's a tougher critic than I am. She has no qualms about saying 'That's an awful pot; break it.'"

Without patriotizing her, Brisbane also has some complimentary things to say about his major professor at Sul Ross.

"Mrs. Lowrance is just a beautiful professor," he said. "She never tries to push her ways of thinking on you... (and) never pushes her values on to you... She lets you develop."

Bisbee sought development in other areas. Such times came when he wasn't molding things from clay or studying birds on backpacking trips.

He studied an "art" — some call it technique — apart from the potter's wheel and the painter's canvas at Sul Ross. He learned the basics of horse-shoeing and horse-breaking from Dr. Doug Butler, who's on the Range Animal Science faculty.

"At least it hasn't been boring," Bisbee said of his time in Big Bend country.

Ingredients for winning tennis told

The ingredients necessary in developing championship tennis teams were cited Thursday noon by Larry Burgin, tennis coach at Midland High School, in addressing the Downtown Rotary Club at its meeting in the Midland Hilton.

The coach spoke from experience, since his teams have established impressive records in winning district and state championships the last two years. He was introduced by David Grimes, program chairman.

Burgin said he considers the developing of team spirit among players as one of his major accomplishments at MHS.

Hard work, physical fitness, three-hour workouts, regular match play, and a "great bunch of kids" were listed as the principal elements in developing tennis teams of championship quality.

He praised the players with whom he has worked since assuming the tennis coaching reins at Midland High. He also related highlights and interesting incidents occurring during his coaching career.

Petroplex Alert enters phase two

"Why?" ask the billboards scattered throughout the Midland-Odessa area.

Today, Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr., Odessa Mayor Dick McManigle and Henry Pearson, district engineer for the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, answered the question, as Petroplex Alert entered phase two.

The billboards were part of phase one in Petroplex Alert, a campaign to "heighten public awareness of driver responsibilities," McManigle said.

Sue Alford, head of the Petroplex Alert and traffic safety coordinator at Midland College, said, "The campaign is a coordinated effort among radio, television, print and outdoor advertising media, complemented by service and church organization presentations, to inform the public of its role in traffic safety and to solicit concerned residents' input."

Angelo said, "One misconception of city government is that it gives tickets to make money. The city would be more than happy if it never had to issue another ticket. In making the public more aware of their driving, maybe we won't have so many accident-causing violations to cite."

Statistics compiled by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation show that fatal accidents have approximately doubled from 1976 to 1977.

Midland County experienced a 77 percent increase in rural traffic fatalities during this period. The city of Midland experienced a 50 percent decrease, after having a 60 percent increase from 1975 to 1976, the statistics showed. Howard Gordon had a 250 percent increase.

Why the increase? Again, statistics showed that the greatest contributing factor to area accidents was failure to yield right of way. Other influencing factors include long, open distances in the Permian Basin area and the economic boom, bringing in increasing numbers of new residents, said Ms. Alford.

"With the isolated pockets of urban activity surrounded by this open space and with the nature of our economy, it is likely that accidents are caused by 'wide open spaces' driving attitudes being brought on to crowded urban streets."

"Thus a program directed at human nature, and not enforcement, is needed," Ms. Alford said.

Phase one of the campaign began

May 15, with a "teaser period" with billboards and ads. Phase two, which began today, clarified the teaser ads, and area radio and television spots were furnished to complement the print media in the introduction stage.

On July 1, Petroplex Alert will enter phase three, the target period on affecting driver attitudes, Ms. Alford said. Typical area residents will talk about driving via television and radio spots. A slide-tape presentation on Petroplex traffic problems and possible solutions will be circulated in service and church groups.

Phase four will be an ongoing campaign.

"Target audience is Midland-Odessa in particular, but the Permian Basin, including Andrews, Crane, Dawson, Howard, Martin, Upton, Ward and Winkler counties, will be invited to participate," Ms. Alford said.

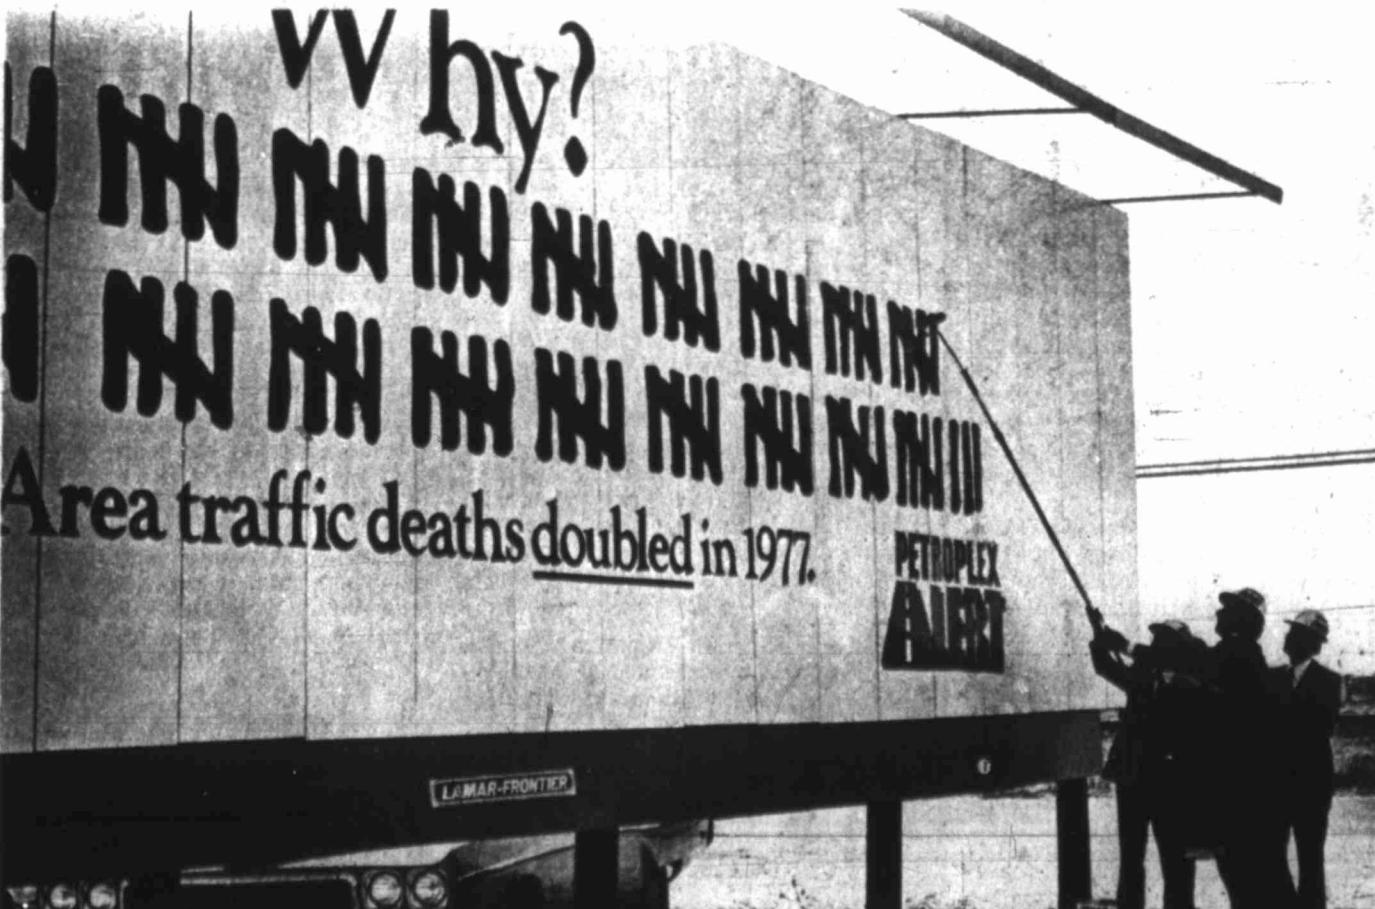

Program offered for traffic police

The first of two workshops for traffic law enforcement officers currently is being conducted at Midland College by instructors from Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill.

The instructors are under contract from the Office of Traffic Safety in the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Now under way is a two-week workshop in traffic law enforcement for officers working on the streets, instructed by Ed Jarratt and Al Medina. Taking part in the workshop are 23 officers from police departments in Midland, Odessa, Stanton, Andrews, El Paso, Abilene, Rockwall, Precos, Big Spring and the Bowie County Sheriff's Department.

"This course is designed to aid officers who actually work traffic situations every day in their local areas. In turn, they will pass along what they have learned when they return to their home areas," Sue Alford, coordinator of Midland College's Office of Traffic Safety, said.

Soviets want U.S. to pay for Embassy spying damage

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has demanded that the United States pay for damage its investigators did when they broke up Soviet bugging of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the Americans destroyed a Soviet "protective system" designed to foil U.S. spy gear.

Exiled author lambasts West

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Alexander Solzhenitsyn, exiled from Russia for criticizing Soviet life, has turned his dissatisfaction toward his adopted home in the West, calling it weak, shallow and cowardly.

In a stinging, abrasive speech to Harvard graduates Thursday, the dissident author chastized the West for materialism, devotion to human rights, unwillingness to defend itself — even its music.

"After the suffering of decades of violence and oppression, the human soul longs for things higher, warmer and purer than those offered by today's mass living habits, introduced by the revolting invasion of publicity, by TV stupor and by intolerable music," Solzhenitsyn said through an interpreter.

The winner of the 1970 Nobel Prize for literature was Harvard's commencement speaker. In his rare public appearance, he addressed about 18,000 people — 4,474 of them graduates — who sat outside in intermittent showers in Harvard Yard.

Some of Solzhenitsyn's remarks, especially his criticism of American anti-war activists, were met with hisses. The biggest applause greeted his rejection of communism.

He said the West seems unwilling to defend itself against the Communists, who threw him out of the Soviet Union in 1974.

"To defend oneself, one must also be ready to die," Solzhenitsyn said. "There is little such readiness in a society raised in the cult of material well-being. Nothing is left, then, but concessions, attempts to gain time and betrayal."

He said the Western nations are naive to think they can deal with the Soviet bloc with anything but their own military strength.

"If only you knew how the youngest of Moscow Old Square (Kremlin) officials laughs at your political wizards," Solzhenitsyn said. "As to Fidel Castro, he frankly scorns the United States, sending his troops to distant adventures from his country right next to yours."

Solzhenitsyn was sharply critical of Western politicians, whom he finds cowardly.

"A decline in courage may be the most striking feature which an outside observer notices in the West these days," he said. "Political and intellectual bureaucrats show depression, passivity and perplexity in their actions and in their statements."

Little returned to her home state for jail term

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Little, who had said she would rather die than return to her home state, was extradited to North Carolina today to complete a prison term for breaking and entering.

Her appeals exhausted, the 24-year-old black woman was taken from the city's Correctional Institution for Women on Riker's Island to a chartered airplane at LaGuardia Airport.

A number of North Carolina officials accompanied her on the flight, which departed about 11 a.m.

Young hoping for talks on Africa

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young says he hopes the United States will hold talks with the Soviet Union "to spell out the meaning of detente in Africa," but he puts a low priority on trying to prevent Soviet domination of Africa.

"I think we have an interest in preventing anyone else from dominating Africa," he said in an interview with The Associated Press. "but I put that No. 3 ... after our concern for human rights and our economic interests."

"I am convinced that in any peaceful competition with the Soviets and the Cubans we win hands down and lose nothing," said Young.

"In military confrontations, we can win but it's at great cost both financially and in human lives. It may not be American lives, but it's still a high cost to pay and it's unnecessary."

Young said the Cubans had changed from "the stabilizing influence" in Africa he credited them with last year to a "militarist, interventionist role" in Angola and Ethiopia.

He said they were "shedding too much African blood" in conflicts that should be solved politically rather than militarily.

However, Young said along with "cross-the-border incursions from Angola into Zaire, for two years there have been cross-the-border incursions from Zaire to Angola, and in a sense we can't stop one without stopping the other."

"If we are holding the Cubans, the Angolans and the Russians responsible for their allies, then we should also assume some responsibility for our allies," he declared.

He opposed U.S. involvement in any fighting in Africa, declaring:

"I say again and again that anybody that thinks a single drop of American blood ought to be shed for a thousand miles of sand is crazy."

He was referring to suggestions that the United States should have helped the Somalis in their losing battle to detach the Ogaden desert from the Soviet Union's Ethiopian allies.

He said the Russians fish in Africa "for points of influence" and they "very cynically give weapons to almost anybody that wants to upset anybody else."

Young said both the Cubans and the Russians had "to assume some responsibility" for the massacre of Europeans in Kolwezi, Zaire, last month by dissident natives of the area returning from Angola.

Here are some questions and answers from the interview:

Q. How would you in fact define U.S. national interests in relation to Africa generally?

A. It's a combination of our economic interest and our human rights interest. I think that our country has always been on the side of majority rule. ... We've always tried to encourage the development of democratic institutions.

Q. The (Congressional) Black Caucus, as you know, yesterday decided that the U.S. policy toward Africa is war-oriented. Do you concur?

A. No, I don't. I think the Black Caucus is responding to the news reports of the last month, and there's been a lot of tough talk in the newspapers in the last month. But our policy toward Africa essentially is an aggressive diplomatic approach utilizing the organizations of the United Nations and working with the Organization of African Unity.

Welcome, swimmers!

One of the nation's really outstanding swim meets unfolds in the Tall City of Midland this weekend, with the action taking place at the Alamo Pool.

It is the annual Allison West Texas Invitational Swim Meet, which got under way this morning. It will continue through Sunday.

The meet this year takes on an international flavor for the first time, with the entry of the Mexico National Senior Team from Mexico City, which includes 15 senior men and a like number of senior women swimmers.

The Mexico swimmers will be among more than 400 of the top age group and senior swimmers from across the United States.

The U.S. National Women's Championship Team, the Nashville, Tenn., Aquatic Swim Team, also is participating in the meet.

The El Monte Swim Team from El Monte, Calif., also is back to defend the title it annexed here last year.

Strong teams from Oklahoma, Kansas and the Southeast are joining with top teams from across Texas in presenting competition at the very top level.

It also is noteworthy that this year for the first time teams from the Texas Senior Swimming Circuit are participating. The tournament previously was limited to age group swimmers, who yet have a stellar role in the meet. The age group competition is just as strong or stronger this year than ever before.

The senior boys competition perhaps will be the strongest division in the 1978 tourney, with the Dr. Pepper Swim Club of Dallas listed among the favorites. The team is composed mainly of Southern Methodist University swimmers. The powerful Dad's Club of Houston also is ranked among the stronger units.

Many of the swimmers entered in the Midland meet will be competing for Olympic berths in 1980. Future Olympic hopefuls also may be seen in action here this weekend.

It is no wonder that the Midland meet is rated as one of the nation's best. It is sponsored by the City of Midland Swim Team, Midland Jaycees and the Parks and Recreation Department of the City of Midland.

The swim meet, four years ago, broke over into the ranks of top national competition. Each year the tourney has assumed additional national significance, due primarily to the $10,000 per year financial support from Fred M. Allison, Midland oil man, and his family, for whom the event is named.

Midlanders are proud, indeed, of this spectacular swim meet, which focuses the eyes of the swimming world on the Tall City.

It is great to have the hundreds of top swimmers from the U.S.A. and Mexico, along with their families and supporters, in Midland for this big event, and Midland and Midlanders direct to them a warm, cordial, friendly, typical West Texas WELCOME to the Tall City.

It is hoped that all of the visitors will have a most enjoyable time during their stay here.

Bridge players, too

Top-caliber bridge players from across Texas and several other states also are in Midland this weekend, competing in the annual Tall City Sectional Duplicate Bridge Tournament, which opened this afternoon in the Midland Hilton Ballroom. The meet will continue through Sunday.

Most of the more than 250 players entered in the tourney are from Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma, although Arizona and a few other states possibly may be represented.

The Tall City meet has developed into one of the best and most popular bridge tournaments in the Southwest, and Midland and Midlanders are delighted to be hosts to the participants and their families.

The tournament is sponsored by the Permian Basin Duplicate Bridge Club and the American Contract Bridge League, Unit 209.

Bridge-playing is a way of life in Midland and the visiting players should, and hopefully, will feel perfectly at home here.

The welcome mat is out for each and every visitor, and it is hoped that all will have good hands and a good time while in the Tall City. It is hoped that they will come back to see us at every opportunity.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

It's chilly in the Soviet Union

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Three months ago, President Carter advised his Cabinet that he expected to resolve the remaining disarmament differences personally with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev. Now it looks as if storm clouds will prevent the two leaders from meeting at the summit soon.

It is the judgment of White House strategists that Soviet-American relations will get still stormier. As they see it, the ailing Brezhnev is losing his iron grip, and the lesser lights don't want to take any risks. It is safer for them to fall back on more orthodox, hard-line Soviet positions.

The experts, therefore, expect the Kremlin to continue probing and pushing in Africa, to hand down more harsh sentences against Soviet dissidents, to exploit its foot-in-the-door in Afghanistan and to behave more boorishly from the Chinese border to the edges of Western Europe. But if the analysts have given up hope of a breakthrough, they also don't expect any breakup in Soviet-American relations. The outlook merely is for chillier weather in Moscow.

It had been Carter's intent to end the John Foster Dulles era and to base American foreign policy on something more constructive than anti-communism. His national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, explained this to the Cabinet last Nov. 21.

The confidential minutes report that he had detected "an ambivalence about the underlying theme of U.S. foreign policies." He felt "the reason may be that the fear of communism is no longer the glue that holds our foreign policy together." He suggested that anti-communism might be replaced by the "human rights theme, which evokes an emotional bond in people all over the world."

The National Security Council advised the president that he didn't have to spare Soviet feelings on this issue. "There is no evidence," the council informed him, "that the U.S. human rights policy has affected Soviet bargaining positions in important negotiations, even if the atmosphere surrounding negotiations is tense."

Carter also trampled on Soviet sensibilities by taking an excursion into Eastern Europe. Explained Brzezinski to the Cabinet on Jan. 9: "The President's visit to Poland was the first time a U.S. President has gone to Eastern Europe without visiting the U.S.S.R. first—a gesture which underlines our interest in pluralism in Eastern Europe."

The East-West climate predictably became chillier. On Feb. 27 Brzezinski described to the Cabinet "a pattern of deterioration in U.S.-Soviet relations." He said "the pattern is reflected in the Soviets' recent actions at the (Belgrade) Conference; their sustained campaign against the neutron bomb; their efforts to expand naval bases in the Mediterranean; and their current intrusion into the Horn of Africa."

Carter glumly agreed that "the U.S.-U.S.S.R. relationship is not as good as it should be." The confidential minutes added: "The President and

CHARLEY REESE

Politicians always say, 'It's not our fault'

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — Well, the inflation is getting worse. It has been getting worse since World War II and every year the politicians say the same thing: "It's not our fault."

They're lying. It is their fault. Let's look at some positive steps that could be taken to reduce inflation and see how they compare with what the politicians say.

One way is to cut taxes. All taxes are part of the cost of living, not in the statistical sense, but in a real sense, for all so-called business taxes are passed along to the consumer and are built into the prices of products and services.

One of the outfits which study this sort of thing claim that 37 cents out of every dollar now go to state, local and federal taxes, so obviously cutting taxes would be one way to fight inflation.

A second way is for the Congress to spend less than it takes in and apply the difference to reducing the national debt. Each year now some $40 billion in tax revenue is required to pay the interest on the national debt which is a real debt owed to real people, mostly bankers.

But if Congress spent less than it took in, that would help fight inflation in a second way. When Congress spends more than it takes in, as it has for the last 11 years, the difference must be raised by either increasing the money supply—which is directly inflationary—or by borrowing from private savers.

When the federal government dips its big paw into the pool of private savings, it creates a shortage of funds. The law of supply and demand then forces up interest rates. Interest is just the "price" we pay to "buy" money.

Congress could also repeal the minimum wage laws. Wages are an important part of the price of any product or service. Everytime Congress forces wages up with minimum wage laws, prices go up. Not only do minimum wages go up, but all wages are pushed up because employees who have been with a firm a number of years expect that there will be a sizeable difference between their pay and the pay of a brand new employee. A moderate size business in my home town will increase its payroll $500,000 starting Jan. 1 as a result of the new Minimum Wage Law. Its customers will pay for it.

Still another way inflation can be fought is by reducing the number of government regulations in such areas as health, safety and environment. New federal rules on noise abatement just added $3,500 to the cost of every garbage truck in my town. I'd rather put up with the noise.

Everything in the world has a cost attached to it and costs are always passed along to the consumer, both by business and by government. Well, you might say, why doesn't the government just compel businesses to absorb these costs? It won't work. Unlike government which has the power to tax, business must always take in more than it spends or it will cease to exist. When a business stops, so do the jobs and the products and the services.

You may be thinking that none of these solutions is very pleasing to contemplate. If you are, you are thinking exactly the way the politicians think which is exactly why they never adopt any of them which is exactly why inflation continues.

Don't let these politicians kid you. We have inflation because they have adopted inflation as a policy. Changing your spending habits won't help nor will it help to forbid, as President Carter wants to do, hospitals to buy new equipment. This is pure trickery on the part of Carter.

Historically, inflation always ends in a depression and so will ours. It's hard to say when it will reach that point; maybe we will drift along for years, maybe not, but eventually there will be one heck of a crash.

The only thing you and I can do to prevent it is to defeat cowardly politicians at every level of government and elect men and women who are willing to face reality.

Otherwise, prepare for poverty.

Mark Russell says

President Carter is beginning to assume command. Every morning at dawn he stands on the Truman Balcony with a spyglass facing Africa.

The situation with the Russians is a test of our strength. For example, a defense contractor must be strong in order to read the headlines without smiling.

The Cubans accuse our government of having "divergent influences." In this country such influences are called political opposition. In Cuba they are called political prisoners.

Controversial statements are nothing new to Andrew Young ever since he was a schoolboy in Georgia. He once got into trouble in history class by saying that Gen. Sherman had a stabilizing influence on the South.

Some think that the African situation is another Vietnam. They also think those Cubans there are on a camera safari for National Geographic.

INSIDE REPORT:

Messages confirm Cuban complicity in invasion

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Intercepted coded messages to Fidel Castro's Africa Corps in Angola "covering a period of several days" before the invasion of Zaire's Shaba province comprise part of the evidence to support President Carter's charge of Cuban complicity in the invasion.

In addition, the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) has possession of "human intelligence" reports — possibly from Cuba, possibly from Angolan sources — that corroborate the intercepts.

That background explains Jimmy Carter's cold anger in totally disregarding Fidel Castro's personal protestation of innocence in a Carter-Castro confrontation that may have wide-ranging international impact.

Challenged by Sen. George McGovern to prove his accusation against Castro, President Carter ordered Edm. Stansfield Turner, CIA director, to begin testimony on Capitol Hill a June 1 before the House Intelligence Committee. Turner is due for similar testimony before the Senate Intelligence Committee next week.

Turner labors under a heavy burden of responsibility to protect American intelligence agents and sources. A leak from a member of Congress could destroy sources and cost lives.

The necessity for protecting sources, then, could leave the president open to renewed challenges from McGovern and other congressmen: supply proof positive that Castro was lying when he denied any Cuban role, that does not disturb Mr. Carter. He is certain that Congress will take his word over Castro's or Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who infuriated the president with his May 27 statement on the White House lawn that Mr. Carter's information was faulty.

Indeed, evidence now being collected to prove the complicity of Moscow, Havana and other Soviet satellites in the murderous rampage of the Angolan-based Shaba invasion force leaves no possibility of doubt. A central element has been Soviet use of Communist East Germany.

In his hard-hitting "Meet the Press" appearance on May 28, Zbigniew Brzezinski fingered the East Germans, but only obliquely. In fact, the record of East Germany as a chief Soviet agent in Africa is just now becoming clear.

Moscow assigned East Germany the principal Communist coordinating role for intelligence and "security matters" in Ethiopia, Mozambique, Angola and several other states targeted by the Soviet Union. A special secretariat to handle this task, and oversee supplies of arms, was created in the early 1970s under East Germany's deputy foreign trade minister. In these Soviet-targeted countries, East Germany is credited with having more on-the-scene agents than any single country except the Soviet Union itself.

Special targets are the "liberation" armies now poised outside Rhodesia's frontiers under Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo and the "national peoples' armies" of Angola, Ethiopia and Mozambique.

Early last month, in a speech in Addis Ababa, Lt. Col. Haile-Mariam Mengistu, the Ethiopian strongman, boasted that "progressive comrades" from East Germany "live with us, fight with us and die with us." When the speech was broadcast later in English, that phrase was deleted. One year earlier, a Western European intelligence service reported the capture of three East German soldiers in the Zairian town of Mutshatsha during the first (1977) Angola-based incursion into Zaire.

With such a wealth of evidence at his disposal, President Carter's charge of non-African Communist complicity in the 1978 invasion of Zaire is beyond dispute. But adding to the White House use of harsh rhetoric is the president's anger at the Cuban denials that led McGovern to demand that the president, in effect, "prove it."

Mr. Carter was made to look ridiculous when he volunteered on Feb. 16, 1977, that he had received "information from indirect sources" that Castro had "promised" to remove his Africa Corps from Angola (then numbering about 15,000). Instead of withdrawal, the force has been increased.

That was a repeat of history. Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger informed the world on May 26, 1976, that Castro had told then Swedish Prime Minister Olaf Palme in a letter that he would withdraw 200 Cubans a week from Angola. The letter indicated that Castro would send no Cuban troops elsewhere in Africa, adding: "I do not wish to become the crusader of the 20th century."

In May 1977, Castro told interviewer Barbara Walters he would send neither advisers nor troops to Ethiopia, where today some 17,000 Cuban troops are in residence.

Against that record, President Carter and Dr. Brzezinski were not impressed on May 18 when Castro summoned U.S. diplomat Lyle F. Lane in Havana to deny any Cuban role in the invasion of Zaire. Castro's word is not highly regarded in the White House.

How the CIA handles the evidence in supposedly confidential briefings on Capitol Hill is not yet known. Nor can it yet be known where the bold rhetoric from the White House about Communist marauders on the Dark Continent will finally lead. What is clear is one fact: Jimmy Carter knows he has been lied to.

Bill's backing boosts Big Apple's bond bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York City cleared a major hurdle in its race against bankruptcy when the New York City Financial Assistance Act cleared the House, fueled by an emotional speech by Majority Leader Jim Wright.

Wright, noting that the New York delegation had consistently come to the aid of "any part of our big American family that has been smitten by disaster," urged his counterparts on Thursday to pass the bill calling for $2 billion in long-term bond guarantees for the financially beleaguered Big Apple.

Without congressional backing, New York City officials estimated their city would slip into bankruptcy by July.

Following his fierce, five-minute speech, the Fort Worth Democrat received enthusiastic applause. Afterwards, the House voted 247-155 in favor of the bill. The controversial measure now goes before the Senate where it faces an uncertain future.

Despite Wright's efforts and backing of the measure by the Carter Administration, the 24-member Texas delegation as a whole shunned the bill.

Texas voted against New York City aid, 16-5, with three members not voting. Wright was joined by fellow Democrats Barbara Jordan, Charles Wilson, Henry B. Gonzalez and Bob Eckhardt in casting "yea" votes. Reps. John Young, "Tiger" Teague and Ray Roberts did not vote.

Dallas Republican James Collins was one of the most vocal opponents of the bill, recalling the 1975 plea by New York that was meant to be a "one-time-only bond guarantee, yet New York City is back again begging for more."

In 1975, only two Texans — Wright and Jordan — voted for New York City assistance.

Collins had compared New York City spending with that of three Texas cities — Dallas, San Antonio and Houston — and had drawn the conclusion that New York City has three times more employees (per 1,000 residents) than Dallas.

He said New York employees receive inflated salaries plus extravagant fringe benefits. The city's leadership, continued Collins, refuses to implement money-saving measures and "has opted instead for what is in the short run more politically profitable, but in the long run is financial suicide."

Wright countered by calling the House's attention to a recently-released poll that showed 85 percent of the country favored legislation aimed at saving New York City from fiscal disaster.

"If air was leaking out of a tire, would it be the act of a friend to pump a little more air in the tire so you could go three more miles?" asked Wright in reference to a soon-to-be defeated floor amendment calling for short-term bond guarantees.

Wright said New York City had laid off 61,000 employees, closed hospitals, upped subway and bus fares plus increased its sales and income taxes in instituting "very impressive self-help measures...New York is not looking for a hand-out but a hand up."

Should Congress not respond to New York City's plea, added Wright, "shock waves would be sent throughout the entire economy...the municipal bond market would be shot to Hades."

Suspect free on bond jailed, charged with killing officer

HOUSTON (AP) — A 42-year-old suspect out on $20,000 bond in an earlier narcotics case is behind bars again, charged with capital murder and attempted capital murder in the shooting death of a Houston narcotics officer Thursday. Another officer was critically wounded in the incident.

Police said 28-year-old Timothy Hearn died from bullet wounds inflicted by the suspect, Rudy Ramos Esquivel, after Hearn and officer Murray Jordan, 32, had arrested Esquivel and two women in the parking lot of an East Side cafe.

Police said Esquivel pulled a gun and began firing at the plainclothes officers as they attempted to search him. Esquivel was also slightly wounded.

Detectives said 10 grams of heroin were found in the parking lot beside the restaurant where officers first saw Esquivel. The officers had been working on the undercover investigation for several weeks and went to the location because an informant had told them Esquivel might be there.

Jordan, who remained hospitalized in critical condition, had arrested Esquivel in February during a narcotics investigation. He had been scheduled to stand trial June 26.

China sale decision reversed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is permitting the sale of $2.8 million in military-related equipment to communist China, reversing a decision made only one month ago.

Administration officials disclosed the reversal Thursday but contended that the action did not reflect a change in U.S. trade policy toward Peking.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said approval was granted only after the administration was convinced that the equipment's technology would be used for civilian, not military, purposes.

The equipment involves sophisticated airborne infrared scanning devices and high-speed recording devices that can detect potential earthquakes and help locate oil deposits.

The initial export application from Daedulus Enterprises of Ann Arbor, Mich., was rejected early last month on national security grounds.

The administration reportedly was concerned that the Chinese could adapt the equipment to intercept U.S. military signals.

The company criticized the rejection as "absurd," and filed an appeal. A company official argued that the technology was more than 20 years old and that the Chinese could obtain simpler methods for intercepting U.S. military signals.

Commenting on the reversal, one administration official said, "We satisfied ourselves that the equipment would not be diverted for military purposes."

Drought costly to Texas cattlemen

UVALDE, Texas (AP) — The scrub-brush cattle country of Southwest Texas is green again. That's the most obvious indication the year-long, cattle-killing drought is easing.

But to a cattleman, the empty pens and the absence of out-of-state buyers in the Southwest Livestock Exchange auction barn here Thursday were more subtle, but just as telling, indications of the recent rains.

"This is the lightest day we've had since last fall," Joe Hargrove, owner of the sale barn, said Thursday. "And we had some people here buying from Carrizo Springs who were selling out here only three weeks ago. We don't have enough volume now to attract out-of-state buyers. The rain did all that."

With cattle dying by the hundreds and stock tanks shriveling into dust, many ranchers were forced to sell their entire herds. Others sent their cattle to expensive feedlots or burned the spines off cactus to provide forage.

Dr. LeRoy Hoermann, a Texas Agriculture Extension Service area livestock specialist here, estimates the ranchers have either lost or been forced to sell 250,000 head of cattle because of the drought.

At the height of the drought three weeks ago, Hargrove's auctioneer sold 3,391 head of cattle in one numbing 16-hour session. Many of the bony cattle went to California and Montana ranchers who are re-stocking after the end of their own droughts.

But only about 1,000 head of cattle were sold Thursday. They were sleeker, showing the signs of two weeks of better grazing, and none of them went to out-of-state buyers.

Most of the area has been doused with six to eight inches of rainfall in the past month, but some isolated areas remained dry. Delighted ranchers warn that those rains will only help them for about six weeks.

"I think this old country is gonna come back, but if there is no more rain, this won't last that long," said Eagle Pass farmer-rancher Zan Mathies.

"This rain ought to get us out of trouble for about 45 days. Depending on if we get any more, we may be out of trouble entirely or we may be right back in it," agreed rancher Jim Hiller of Pearsall.

"If it doesn't keep raining, it'll just get right back where it was," said Uvalde County Extension Agent Darrell Smith.

The rains were enough to flood empty stock tanks in some areas, but just enough in others "to cover up the dead cattle in the bottom," said Leon Miller, who runs a huge feedlot near Eagle Pass.

"We still need a lot more rain to fill up the tanks. We got a good start, but some ranchers don't have very much water in their tanks," said Mathies. Zapata County Extension Agent

Edmundo Martinez said, "Most of the rain is just helping the grass. There are some tanks that are full, but we still need a good tank rain of about four or five inches."

Crystal City ranchers R.C. and Larry Tate sold their last six head of cattle Thursday at Hargrove's sale barn and said they're waiting to see if it keeps raining before getting back in the cattle business.

"We're just gonna start over, but we want to see if it rains some more," said Larry Tate. "We have to let the pastures build back up."

The rising beef prices and heavy rain in California and Montana might have saved Southwest Texas ranchers from total economic ruin, said Hargrove.

"We are fortunate the market is real good," said Hargrove. "The out-of-state people had rain and the good market made them want to buy. That's about the only good thing about this — the market is real good."

Police abuse allegations reported

JACINTO CITY, Texas (AP) — Twelve of this small city's police officers are prepared to tell state and federal investigators their former chief and some fellow officers routinely abused prisoners and performed other misdeeds over a period of 17 months, according to a copyright story in today's Houston Post.

The most significant allegation is that convicted capital murderer John Charles Zimmerman, 31, was tortured into signing a confession that he raped and then killed his 10-year-old niece last year.

The officers' other allegations are that evidence was planted, illegal search warrants were executed and citizens' property was destroyed, the Post said.

Zimmerman, who pleaded insanity and went through the county's most costly trial in 1977, is awaiting execution at the state penitentiary at Huntsville. Testimony from officers may have significant bearing on the pending appeal of his conviction.

Only one of the 12 officers has agreed to have his name made public in testimony that will cover the period Allan R. Jamail was chief.

The number represents one third of the police force in Jacinto City, a town of 10,000 east of Houston and north of the Houston Ship Channel.

The city council fired Jamail in February of this year, citing allegations of brutality. The former chief won election to the council five weeks later.

The U.S. Attorney's office in Houston told the newspaper Thursday federal investigators were looking into numerous civil rights complaints against Jamail.

One man suffering from cancer said Jamail broke three of his ribs and jailed him for drunkenness when he tried to report a crime, according to the Post.

The officers, who could face prosecution themselves, said they were forced to take their complaints to prosecutors after Jamail won his council seat and Mayor J.D. Liles appointed him informal police and fire commissioner.

"I would have been willing to drop the whole thing if Jamail would have stayed out of city government after he was fired," one of the officers told the Post. "But now he's back and he doesn't give us any choice but to try to get him indicted."

Jamail said he had been involved in 3,000 arrests during one year. All but two of 78 narcotics raids he staged, he said, resulted in the confiscation of drugs.

The former chief said the highlight of his career was the quick breaking of the Zimmerman case last year. He denied allegations that Zimmerman had been tortured with an electric cattle prod or "shock stick" to elicit a confession.

He did acknowledge, however, that prior to becoming chief he did sell as many as 10 prods to officers and at one time had one himself. He said he doesn't remember what happened to his shock stick but perhaps he sold it or gave it to another officer.

Jamail said he never saw any abuse of prisoners in his presence but acknowledged there had been some complaints of brutality.

"Any complaints I received I checked out as well I could. That's not to say there wasn't anything to it."

The council specifically questioned Jamail about the incident when dismissing him.

Other officers said Jamail used electric cattle prods on prisoners and routinely had marijuana cigarettes or other controlled substances planted on narcotics suspects, according to the Post.

Jamail, who operated a gun repair business in his home and was a member of the city council when he was appointed chief, said allegations against him were part of a "political conspiracy."

He said former councilman Joe Harwell and councilman James Martin were behind the conspiracy because they were jealous of the publicity he received while chief.

Jamail said he had been involved in 3,000 arrests during one year. All but two of 78 narcotics raids he

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today asked Congress to approve 26 new water projects, the first time in four years that the White House has recommended new water project construction.

The projects would cost a total of $718 million, with expenditures during the first fiscal year of about $70 million, according to the White House's Office of Management and Budget.

The proposed projects are designed for flood control, hydroelectric power, irrigation, recreation, navigation or wildlife habitat.

The largest single project among Carter's requests calls for the establishment of the Big South Fork national river and recreation area in Kentucky and Tennessee. The administration estimated on completion it would cost $140 million, but practically all the money would be spent to acquire land.

At the same time, Elliot Cutler, a spokesman for the OMB, reiterated Carter's intention to veto a House public works appropriation bill, calling for new water project construction totaling $1.4 billion.

The House bill also contains funds for seven of nine water projects that comprised the administration's so-called "hit list."

One unique feature of the president's request is to ask Congress for the full $718 million appropriation even though all the money would not be spent the first year.

Cutler said, "We are clearly flying in the face of congressional custom" because the administration wants the full cost figures included so that Congress and the American public knows precisely what is at stake. Traditionally, Congress appropriates only the amount of funds that will be spent during the year.

In addition to the 26 Corps of Engineers and Bureau of Reclamation projects, Carter also proposed spending $75 million for 25 small Soil Conservation Service projects.

The 26 projects include $114 million for the Blue River Channel flood control project in Missouri and $78 million to acquire land for fish and wildlife on the lower Snake River basin in Washington, Idaho and Oregon.

The largest Bureau of Reclamation project is the $55 million to complete the Oroville Tonasket unit in Washington, part of the massive Chief Joseph dam irrigation project.

Cutler also said, "The projects meet the strict criteria which were announced this week as part of the president's new water policy."

The Carter administration last year angered Congress by attempting to kill some water projects.

On Tuesday, the White House announced a series of new water policies designed in part to remove some of the antagonism that was directed toward the Carter administration for its partially successful effort in 1977 to kill 18 water projects.

The initiatives apply uniform criteria for determining whether a project is economically and environmentally sound. The criteria apply to all projects constructed by the Corps of Engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation and the Soil Conservation Service.

Administration officials also said that Corps and Bureau of Reclamation projects must give an economic return at least equal to their cost.

States also would pay between 5 percent and 20 percent of the cost of projects and would be given a role in decision-making.

Growth firms are targeted

By HELEN L. CALL

Copley News Service

Wall Street is a gossip factory, as everybody has heard on the grapevine. And this is the reason security analysts tend to run in packs, they say.

One of the newest packs to form is that lined up behind Lawrence Rader, who was picked off the Street by Merrill Lynch and put in charge of a brand-new department whose purpose is to identify "emerging growth companies."

This is where the action was in 1977 and where the "performance" people expect it to be in 1978.

Rader sets high standards for the upcoming growth companies he recommends and cautiously names only a few at a time. His most recent listings: American Savings and Loan of Florida, Keystone International, Kimball International. Last month's selections: Dual-Lite, Iron Industries, Weight Watchers.

Merrill Lynch's research director, R. J. Farrell, looks for both institutional and second-tier stocks to get into gear one day and take off together in a bull market move. But when? His latest timetable calls for final shakeout in June, and then the upward move.

Meanwhile, Farrell points out, the institutional stocks are yielding more than they did at the 1974 bottom, price earnings multiples are near their 30-year lows and the spread between bond and stock yields has narrowed to the lowest level in over 10 years. Farrell sees these stocks near the bottom. Just to prove how unpopular they are (a necessary preamble to a turn), Farrell observes, "The ads for stocks are disappearing in favor of solicitations for gold advice, money market funds, speculative bond funds, tax shelters, real estate, diamonds, art, municipal bond funds and commodities."

A check with veteran diamond broker George Carter Jessop brought the remark that it is very hard to make money in diamonds, even if their prices are moving up. Investors must buy at wholesale and sell at retail, provided they can find a buyer. The spread is such that it could take years for any increase in value to make the cost of cashing in.

John Burman, market strategist for Becker Securities, sees only bearish indications ahead for the market. But this doesn't stop him from looking favorably on aerospace and airline stocks. His current recommendations: Boeing, McDonnell Douglas, Raytheon, United Technologies, Braniff, Northwest.

Bache's "Option Watch" observes that many are attracted to the idea of buying calls instead of the common stock. While premiums are depressed, the options won't go anywhere without the stock.

Bache sees potential in Carrier Corp. and says the June 15s look attractive.

Investors concerned about crumbling prices on blue chips they don't want to sell can protect themselves to a certain extent by writing calls against their existing positions, says Bache. "The sale of a call option, however, limits upside potential to the strike price plus the premium received."

What is going on in bonds? Merrill Lynch now likes corporate bonds better than municipals, at least for anyone in the 39 percent or lower tax bracket. The ratio of returns from tax-exempt to returns on taxable yields is such that only the higher levels of income benefit from municipals.

Witnesses tell of finding three slain Girl Scouts in camp

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — A slashed tent flap discovered at the opening of a northeastern Oklahoma summer camp had been the only sign intruders might be in the area before three Girl Scouts were molested and slain during the predawn hours of June 13, 1977, a camp ranger testified Thursday.

Witnesses testified in the preliminary hearing for Gene Leroy Hart that no one saw any prowlers at Camp Scott prior to the deaths of Lori Lee Farmer, 8; Michel Guse, 9, and Doris Denise Milner, 10, all from the Tulsa area.

Testimony in two full days of hearings has revealed that the 27 young Girl Scouts in the Camp Kiowa section of the campground were restless as they settled in for what was to have been a two-week encampment.

Counselors testified the girls were not quiet until 1:30 a.m. Less than five hours later, the victims' bodies were discovered with their sleeping bags several yards from their tent.

The first Oklahoma Highway Patrol trooper at the camp testified Thursday that the girls' bloody tent had a slit in a rear panel which could have allowed the killer to enter the tent undetected.

Barbara Day, camp director at the time of the slayings, testified Thursday she learned several weeks after the killings that a note threatening the death of four girls at the camp had been discovered during an earlier camping session.

Mrs. Day said the mother of a Scout who had been at the camp in April told her that such a note had been found.

There were published reports of the note during the investigation last year. But officials have kept a tight lid on physical evidence in the case and have not said whether or not there is a link between the reported note and the Girl Scout killings.

The hearing, expected to last some two weeks, was scheduled to resume today with testimony from Dr. Neal Hoffman, state medical examiner from Tulsa, who was expected to present testimony concerning autopsies of the girls.

Hart, 34, was charged with the slayings June 23, 1977, although he remained a fugitive from a September 1973 escape from the Mayes County jail. He was recaptured at an eastern Oklahoma shack April 6 by authorities acting on a tip.

No evidence linking Hart with the slayings has been presented in the hearings, which have attracted crowds of up to 300. Some 100 can be seated in the courtroom, while others watch via an experimental closed circuit television setup in a city auditorium across the street.

Camp ranger Ben Woodward, who lives with his family at the camp, said someone ripped a four or five-foot square section from a tent sometime during the hours before the Scouts arrived Sunday. The canvas was not found, he said.

Committee votes yes, no on reactors

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Energy committee voted Thursday to allow President Carter to scrap the controversial Clinch River breeder reactor project — but only if he follows up with plans for an alternative.

Although it fell short of being a complete victory for opponents of the breeder reactor, the vote marked the first time any congressional committee has gone along with Carter's wish to end the Clinch River project.

Committee leaders called the action a compromise between Carter's efforts to scuttle the controversial $2 billion project at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and past congressional votes to keep it going.

However, administration allies said the proposal does not go far enough, adding that it might invite another presidential veto if it makes it through Congress.

Carter vetoed legislation in 1977 to build the plutonium-producing breeder. However, Congress managed to keep it alive anyway by putting the funds in another bill.

Thursday's vote broke a deadlock on the Senate committee on the breeder issue.

The committee voted 13-6 to allow Carter to terminate the Clinch River project and then voted 10-8 to demand that he follow up such a decision by furnishing Congress with plans for an alternate breeder.

"I would interpret it as a standoff. There's no victory for either side," said Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, a breeder opponent who voted for the first motion but opposed the second.

And Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., another breeder foe, said the second part of the committee's action — requiring an alternate breeder — "is just asking for another presidential veto."

The measure, if enacted, would require the United States to build some form of breeder reactor although it would for the first time give Carter the option choosing some other site or design than Clinch River.

The president would have to submit the new plans by March 31, 1981.

Carter wants to halt the Clinch River project on grounds that the plutonium the reactor would produce is capable of being diverted for making crude atomic weapons and might fall into hands of terrorists or contribute to the world-wide proliferation of nuclear materials.

Breeder reactors produce more fuel than they consume.

The alternate proposal called for by the Senate panel would have to be "proliferation resistant," possibly through use of some other nuclear material besides plutonium — such as thorium — under terms of the measure.

London tower
most popular

WASHINGTON (AP) — Britain's famed Tower of London is 900 years old this year.

The National Geographic Society says the tower is England's most popular tourist attraction — three million persons visited it in 1977.

Among the things a visitor can see at the tower are: the crown jewels; a chopping block and axes; dungeons and instruments of torture, and suits of armor.

Work on the tower was begun by William the Conqueror in 1078, 12 years after his invasion of England.

Undertow sweeps teens to sea

KALALOECH, Wash. (AP) — A sunny ocean-side picnic turned to terror and tragedy when a slack tide churned into a killer surf, pulling seventh and eighth graders from the beach. Two were swept away.

The body of Teresa Case, 14, of Amanda Park, washed ashore late Thursday, the Jefferson County sheriff's office said. Listed as missing was Donald Hale, 13, of Lake Quinalt.

"We started hearing kids screaming for help, saw kids pulling other kids out of the water," said Volkert Volkert, 27, a music teacher at Lake Quinalt School. "I jumped in and pulled out two." Another teacher also rescued two pupils.

"I was all out of strength myself — it just turned into a hopeless case," said Volkert.

A U.S. Coast Guard cutter and helicopter searched for the missing children until dark.

Three students who suffered hypothermia, abnormally low body temperature, from the chilly surf and a fourth who broke a toe were taken to Forks General Hospital, said Jefferson County sheriff's Deputy Neil Adams. A hospital spokeswoman said all were released except for one girl with hypothermia.

"The children were playing in the surf at slack tide. The tide changed and started coming in. The surf built up, of course, and started pulling them out and south," said Adams.

The beach is part of Olympic National Park on Washington's north-west coast. Adams said the beach slopes steeply into deep water and when surf begins to build, the waves are high.

Labels telling cholesterol amount can help consumer with decisions

Labels showing cholesterol content can help consumers on low-cholesterol diets make intelligent choices.

Cholesterol has many important functions in the body, but because it is linked to heart disease, doctors have advised many people to limit the amount of cholesterol consumed, Judy Germany, Midland County extension agent, home economics, explains.

Since it is a medical decision, the labeling law requires that when cholesterol content of food is shown a statement must be added: "Information on the cholesterol content is provided for individuals who, on the advice of a physician, are modifying their total dietary intake of cholesterol."

However, this is an optional decision of the food manufacturer or processor.

If cholesterol content is listed, it must be shown in two ways: As "milligrams" of cholesterol per serving and as "milligrams of cholesterol per 100 grams of the foods." Content must be shown to the nearest five milligrams.

Both of these listings show the amount of cholesterol in food. The latter form is for the use of the scientist and the former is in household terms for the consumer, the agent says.

Labels with cholesterol content can help those who need to make dietary changes. For example, a label on ice cream might show about 45 milligrams of cholesterol per scoop, but ice milk would show only 4 milligrams.

When a doctor tries to lower a patient's serum cholesterol level, he generally aims at about 300 milligrams daily. The average American probably consumes 600 to 800 milligrams of cholesterol per day. Certain foods can use up these allowances quickly, Mrs. Germany warns.

For example, a medium-sized egg has about 235 milligrams and three ounces of kidney about 300 milligrams. One-fourth pound of beef, pork or lamb has about 100 milligrams. A three-ounce serving of brains has more than 2,500 milligrams.

Cholesterol occurs only in food of animal origin. Foods from vegetable sources such as vegetable oil margarine have no cholesterol.

Cereals, fruits and vegetables contain no cholesterol.

Always leave instructions with house sitter

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Families leaving their homes, children and pets to the care of a house sitter when they go on vacation may be so concerned in leaving menu lists and instructions about house care and telephone calls, they may forget to tell them how the house runs.

For example, one sitter had a three-page typewritten instruction sheet about how to care for Fido and the children menu-wise, but when she had an overflow in a clogged dishwasher she did not know how to turn off the main water control.

Another family forgot to leave the name of their pediatrician who served the children, age 8 to 5. In summer it seems everything goes smoothly, but the parents forgot about poison ivy and bare feet on broken glass.

Sitters should have a complete rundown on how the house works and how to cope when something goes wrong.

They should know how to work any new appliance that might not be understood — microwave oven, self-cleaning range and any of the new food processors. In addition to having these appliances used properly, the family will not have big repair bills on its return.

Booby traps in the home that can cause injury, such as problem windows that slam shut, soot-laden fireplaces, loose cellar stair treads or wobbly bannisters, should have attention called to them.

How about flooding? If the basement fills with water, who will pump it out? Also, strangers should be warned not to walk into the water because of the danger of electrocution.

Where is the smoke alarm located? Is it working, and has it been checked to see if it needs a battery replacement?

A list of food stores that will provide quality food at good prices might be a good addition to the list.

List phone numbers of the police and fire departments — paste these emergency numbers on the phones in the house.

An added list of names and telephone numbers of neighbors, friends and family members who might respond in a crisis should be given.

A list of food stores that will provide quality food at good prices might be a good addition to the list.

If the sitter can use your car, where can it be serviced or repaired in the event of an accident? Also make sure the insurance policy is in a handy place.

How can you be contacted? Your itinerary should be left at hand, particularly if you are on a cruise or traveling by car. Possible hotel stops should be listed. If you cannot be more specific you should telephone frequently until you are surer of your destination.

At one apartment where she had been highly recommended by a well-regarded employment agency, one nurse was amazed by "trusting parents."

"When I arrived they handed me their 10-week-old baby, mentioned when she was to be fed and then flew out the door with their baggage, saying they were late for their plane.

"Inside I found a key to the front door, baby bottles, feeding instructions and a loaded refrigerator-freezer that would keep me in food for two weeks."

Mason's line gets bricks straight

By AL CARRELL

When you were a kid, you probably made walls out of blocks, and it was easy. However, making a brick wall appears to be an impossible task to most. If you start out by thinking of it as building with blocks, maybe it won't be so traumatic. There's no way I could cover all the steps to getting a proper brick wall built in the space I have here. I'd suggest you get a good how-to book that carries you step-by-step through the process. However, I'll pass along some clever tips you probably won't find in even the best brick books.

One key to straight courses of brick is to use a mason's line. This is a string stretched taut from one end to the other. It's a long wall, you may have a problem keeping the string from sagging in the middle. The trick one reader sent in solves this problem.

Put a small coil spring into the length of cord. When you pull the string tight, make sure the spring is extended. Then as the string stretches out as it just hangs there, the spring will take up the slack. Since most of us take longer than the pros do in laying brick, there's plenty of time for the cord to start to sag.

Dear Al:

I found that the line I stretched to help me keep the rows of bricks straight always had a slight sag in the middle. I solved this by stacking a pair of loose bricks in the center of the wall. Then I slipped a cotter key over the line so the string ran through the eye of the cotter key. The loose bricks then held the cotter key between them, and this extra support prevented the sag.—D.E.

Dear Super:

I came up with a neat way that helped an amateur like me to put up a brick wall with uniform spacing between each of the rows of bricks. I bought a bag of cheap marbles at the toy store. I found a size with a diameter that was the same as the mortar joint widths I wanted. Then as I put the bed of mortar down before placing the next brick on top, I pushed a marble into the wet mortar at each end of where the next brick would go. The brick then rested on the marbles and squeezed out any excess mortar. This enabled me to get each course the exact distance away from the one below.—S.S.

A SUPER HINT—The best mortar joints for a brick wall measure from about one-fourth inch up to one-half inch. However, I've seen some that were a bit wider and still looked good. For the novice, a wider mortar joint will tend to minimize irregularities in your bricklaying efforts. Of course, you still want a brick wall, not a mortar wall, so don't get too carried away. However, shoot for joints closer to the half-inch mark than the smaller sizes if you're not too sure of your expertise.

Dear Al:

As you know, bricks should be damp but surface-dry for the best laying. Otherwise, the brick absorbs water from the mortar making it cure too fast. But how does the amateur tell if they are damp enough? An old brick mason showed me a test. Use a medicine dropper to place 20 drops of water on the brick in a circle about the size of a quarter. Then clock the time needed for the water to be absorbed. If it's less than a minute and a half, you need to turn the hose on the stack of bricks.—C.T.

SHOP TALK—The pros use line blocks to hold and tighten the mason's line from across the span of wall. These inexpensive plastic blocks are available at building supply houses. Additionally, there are line levels. The line level hooks over the cord and can slide along to the center to let you know if the cord is level. It should also have a flat bottom to let you use it for surface leveling.

Al Carrell welcomes all mail, especially tips from fellow Handymen which he can pass on to readers as space permits. While he cannot answer all individual letters, he will try to nail down your problem in his column whenever possible.

MINI RECIPES

To have perfect hard-boiled eggs, place in a pan and cover with cold water. Bring to a boiling point, then remove from heat. Let stand with the pan covered for 30 minutes. They then will peel easily and taste extra good.

MINI RECIPES

To make spiced cider, combine 2 quarts apple cider, 12 whole cloves, four sticks cinnamon, thinly peeled rind of four lemons, two lemons thinly sliced and one-fourth teaspoon ground nutmeg. Cover and heat to boiling. Remove heat and simmer for about 15 minutes. Allow to cool, then strain. Discard spices. Chill overnight in refrigerator to allow flavors to blend. Heat when ready to serve. Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

Cream cheese and plenty of minced pimento-stuffed green olives make a delightful sandwich filling.

Swimming is favorite outdoor recreation event

WASHINGTON, D.C.—This summer more than 100 million Americans will take to the water in four to five million swimming pools, according to the National Swimming Pool Institute. In fact, swimming is the nation's favorite outdoor recreation activity.

To make sure swimming is a pleasure for everyone in and around the pool, the National Swimming Pool Institute offers these safety tips:

1. Never swim or let anyone else swim alone.
2. Never let children play in or around the pool without constant supervision.
3. Have basic lifesaving equipment available at all times, as well as a list of emergency telephone numbers.
4. Do not permit roughhousing or horseplay in or around the pool.
5. Don't swim when you're just eaten or you're overly tired.
6. Stay out of the water during rain storms.
7. All outdoor pools should be protected by a fence which cannot be opened or climbed by children.
8. Keep pool decks and diving boards clean and clear of debris.
9. Exercise caution in using diving boards or slides.
10. Have a local NSPI builder or service company make periodic safety and maintenance checks of all pool appliances and equipment.
11. Post in plain view a list of pool rules for guests.

Dramatic effective

By CAROLE EICHEN
Copley News Service

Who said wallpaper is only for walls and that fabric is only for draperies and upholstery?

One of the best ways to make a routinely constructed apartment stand out from the rest is to do the unusual and the unexpected. This calls for some imagination.

Utilizing a decorative material in another context can create a dramatic effect. Take wallpaper, for example. There are no rules that state it must be used only on walls.

Actually, wallpaper can make a highly effective floor covering. Lay it on the floor of the kitchen, study, bathroom or children's room and then top it with a strong clear polyurethane which will give many years of wear.

Another idea might be to cover the walls and the floor in the same design to create a dramatic, total effect. You also can mix and match using one wallpaper on the walls and a contrasting pattern on the floor.

Not only does the usage of wallpaper on the floor create an interesting look, it is practical as well. The plastic flooring which protects the wallpaper can be cared for by sweeping and occasional damp mopping.

The clarity of the plastic covering allows the wallpaper color and design to show through. The rich texture of the wallpaper topped with the plastic gives the room a carpeted look. It is something you can do yourself at little cost. One hint: don't select a "non-directional" pattern.

Just as wallpaper can appear on the floor of your apartment or condominium, so can fabric move from the more traditional role as drapery, upholstery and bedspread material to that of wall covering.

Once you select a fabric to be used on the wall, look for a company which can apply laminated paper or acrylic backing to make it stick to the wall. These firms also can waterproof and Scotchguard the fabric so that it will be easier to maintain.

Fabric on the wall also can help insulate it from the noise of apartment neighbors and is an excellent selection for use on common walls.

By using materials in a different way, you add character to your apartment and your own stamp of individuality.

DEAR ABBY

Social Security isn't welfare pay

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You aren't going to believe this, but my husband has been eligible for Social Security for two years, and he has yet to collect a dime of it!

Why? He says that as long as he's able to work, he doesn't feel justified in taking money from the government. I think he's crazy. What do you think?—MOREY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Social Security isn't exactly "welfare" from the government. Since the mid-'30s, working people have kicked in part of every paycheck in order to build up some retirement income. Your husband is entitled to do as he wishes, but he's also entitled to the money.

P. S. A person who earns more than $4,000 a year at his job must return $1 of Social Security for every $2 he earns above $4,000.

DEAR ABBY: I know

you will find this hard to believe, but every word of it is true:

There is an elderly gentleman (about 85) living in a small single room in a local hotel. This man has married children and grand-children in town who hardly look at him.

He can't dress himself or bathe very well, and his eyesight is failing, so the maids help him. (The maids take better care of him than his own family.) Several months ago, a maid found him on the bathroom floor. He had fallen the night before and couldn't get up, so he just lay there, cold and shivering, all night.

He eats only once a day on a tray sent to his room, and that's usually oatmeal and coffee. On Sundays the kitchen is closed, so he doesn't eat from Saturday until Monday morning.

How can people be so heartless? Today is Sunday, and believe me,

Abby, my appetite is gone just thinking about that poor, old, neglected man.—FEELING SAD

DEAR SAD: If you really want to help, why don't YOU look in on the old gentleman? (You don't have to be a relative to extend a kindness.)

Writing to me without a clue as to who YOU are, who HE is, or even the city in which he lives, is futile. And your loss of appetite won't help him much, either.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl who has just started to date. I am going to ask you a question. I have asked many others; I have never been able to get a straight answer from anyone.

When a girl really likes a fellow, and they are alone together, naturally they are going to make out some. But how far should a girl go?—JUST "ME" IN PLAINS, GA.

ARE YOU LOSING YOUR COOL?

If the damper in your fireplace is open and you have refrigerated air, then you are indeed losing your cool. Perhaps you can't close the damper because it is dirty or broken. This situation can easily be fixed and you can keep your cool all summer.

Houston schools' poor headway

HOUSTON (AP) — A tri-ethnic advisory committee says the Houston Independent School District is not making satisfactory desegregation progress.

Dr. James C. Jones, chairman of the 11-member, court-appointed committee, said Thursday the group made such a report to U.S. District Judge Finis Cowan during a Wednesday meeting.

Jones said nine of the committee members agreed the district should be required to submit a timetable for completing integration.

The committee was established in 1970 to monitor the district's court-ordered desegregation plan.

Jones said the district still has more than 90 schools that have enrollments that are more than 90 percent black, brown or white.

Man completes trans-Pacific flight in memory of father

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Charles Kingsford-Smith Jr. landed at Brisbane's Eagle Farm Airport today, completing a solo flight across the Pacific on the 50th anniversary of history's first trans-Pacific flight by his Australian father.

The 45-year-old electronics engineer from Colorado had planned to land at 10:10 a.m., the time at which Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and C.T.P. Ulm landed the Southern Cross at the Brisbane airport on June 9, 1928. But strong head winds off the coast delayed him 35 minutes.

Charles Jr. taxied his plane to the hangar where the Southern Cross, a tri-motor Fokker monoplane, is preserved. About 800 persons were on hand to welcome him. Among them were his wife, Mary, and his mother, Mary Tully of Toronto, Canada.

Like his father, Kingsford-Smith took off from Oakland, Calif., and stopped along the 7,389-mile route at Honolulu and Fiji.

A&M structure declared landmark in engineering

COLLEGE STATION — The American Society of Agricultural Engineers placed a bronze plaque here recently in Texas A&M University's Scoates Hall, officially designating that structure as "A Historic Landmark of Agricultural Engineering."

The building entered ASAE's landmark hall of fame because of its unique design and ornamentation and because of its association with the career of an agricultural engineering leader, Daniels Scoates, who was the father of a Midland resident, Mrs. C.E. (Mary) Long.

Designed by Scoates and completed in 1932, the hall long has been considered one of the finest agricultural engineering buildings in the nation, according to Dr. Robert E. Stewart, distinguished professor in the A&M Agricultural Engineering Department.

The structure's designation as a historic landmark is only the 11th in a series that dates back to 1928.

The Scoates Hall dedication was marked by talks by A&M officials and unveiling of the plaque by Fred R. Jones, agricultural engineering department head from 1940 to 1958, and Harris P. Smith, research professor from 1919 to 1960.

Daniels Scoates' descendants attending the ceremonies included his son, W.D. "Bill" Scoates of Bryan, and daughter, Mrs. Long of Midland.

Others included Mrs. Ed (Alice) Garner of Bryan and her family; a grandson, Dan Garner, and a great-grandson, Eddie Jacob.

One of the dedication speakers was Price Hobgood, department head from 1958 to 1974, who related his association with Scoates during the 1930s. He described his colleague as a "dreamer and doer."

Stewart, another speaker, said Scoates was born in Indiana in 1882 and received a civil engineering degree in 1910 and a professional degree of agricultural engineer in 1915, both from Iowa State College. He headed the Mississippi State College Agricultural Engineering Department from 1910 to 1919.

Scoates next headed the A&M Agricultural Engineering Department from 1919 until his death in 1939.

"He was therefore a leader in developing two pioneering departments of agricultural engineering in the South," Stewart said.

As head of the Texas Division of the Rural Resettlement Administration, Scoates brought together education and social planning as a part of agricultural engineering, Stewart said, and he served as ASAE national president in 1918.

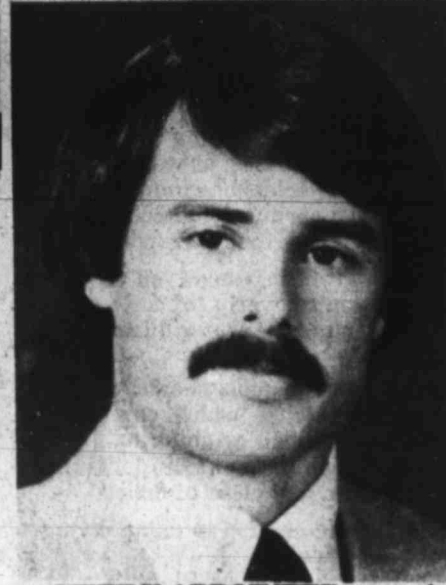

A&M's agricultural engineering building was named for Professor Scoates in 1945.

Carter announces nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter announced Thursday he is nominating career diplomat Viron P. Vaky, currently ambassador to Venezuela, to be assistant secretary of state for Inter-American Affairs.

Vaky, 51, would succeed Terence A. Todman, named ambassador to Spain.

Experienced in Latin American affairs, Vaky held the assistant secretaryship on an acting basis in 1969. He later served as ambassador to Costa Rica and Colombia.

NEWLY APPOINTED as assistant district attorney in Midland is Richard Davis, a graduate of Oklahoma City University School of Law. Davis received his undergraduate degree from Texas Tech University, where he majored in government. He has lived in Midland with his wife, Bennie, and son, Heath, since Nov. 1.

Class of '48 has fond memories for lone graduate

By Hugh A. Mulligan

MARLBORO, Vt. (AP) — What is so rare as a day in June when the newspapers fail to report yet another college reunion taking place in the cement groves of Academe?

Mulligan's Stew

For this is the happy time of year when the old grads begin trooping back to alma mater to report importantly on the growth of their waistlines, families and annual income before taxes, to try to place the gray heads and rubicund faces emerging from the cars in the parking lot, to fit them into the frame of the old class picture, the two-fold frame of youth and memory that shields them forever from the ravages of time.

Among all these intellectual sheep returning to the fold — or at least vintage mutton — what can be rarer in that rarified air than the 30th annual reunion of the Marlboro College Class of '48?

After all those years, the entire class showed up. Can any other campus clan gathering make that boast? The class president, the class poet, the class lover, the class athlete, the class treasurer, the chairman of the beer blast, the organizer of the protest march on the school cafeteria, the class intellectual and the most likely to succeed — all of them turned up.

The class secretary proudly could report perfect attendance. The class statistician could finger his pocket calculator and report that both on the average and the median, the Class of '48 has produced one marriage, no divorces, no children. The class had held two jobs in all the past 30 years, had written four books, traveled in 104 countries, gained 13 pounds and 3 1/2 inches around the equator since graduation, could count one upper plate, one mustache and no major operations in those intervening years. In the American odyssey from Harry S. Truman to Jimmy Carter, the class had divided its votes evenly in the eight show-downs between Republicans and Democrats and had never been called either to public office or public shame.

The Class of '48 had turned out no clergymen, no statesmen, no captains of industry, no Bowery derelicts, no educators, no housewives, no engineers, no scientists, one journalist.

The class president, who organized the 30th reunion, had me to thank for all of this. No one else.

You see, I am the class president. I'm the Class of '48. In toto. In 1948, I graduated first in my class from Marlboro College. First in my school too. I was the one and only graduate, the lone matriculating senior in a brand-new college that Dr. Walter Hendricks, who for years headed the Humanities Department at the Illinois Institute of Technology and helped found the G.I. University at Biarritz, France, brought to life on a lovely Vermont hillside. A cowbarn was the first dormitory, a blacksmith shop the first library.

My splendor that June day was so solitary, Life magazine sent a writer-photographer team to report the event. Robert Frost came to deliver the nation's only recorded one-on-one commencement speech. He kept it short.

Being the first and only graduate of a college has its problems as well as its unshared honor. Have you ever tried to rent one cap and gown? It can't be done. At least it couldn't in those days, when no one had ever heard of now famous Marlboro College and its prestigious music festival. The rental firms in Boston, Springfield, Albany and New York City were all geared to hire out a gross of caps and gowns, a hundred, maybe a dozen, but they just weren't up to the strain of processing a single, solitary order.

In desperation, I tried to make one out of some shirt cardboard and war surplus blackout cloth, but it came out looking like a burnt slab of pizza with a tassel. The makeshift gown resembled a hangman's hand-me-down.

Finally, I drove over the mountain to Bennington College, then an all-girls school, and borrowed a cap and gown from a young lady who was graduating two days later. She was as reluctant and suspicious as the rental firms. As collateral, I had to lend her my Grove Press edition of Henry Miller's "Quiet Days in Clichy" and promise to get her Robert Frost's autograph.

The presidents of most of the neighboring New England colleges had come to welcome the new school if not to pay homage to its first graduate. There came the president of Middlebury in floppy velvet hat like a portrait of Christopher Columbus, followed by the presidents of Williams,

Amherst, Smith, Vassar, Dartmouth and the Universities of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont, then the learned faculty, the entire procession in cowls and capes, a few from Oxford and Cambridge in robes fringed in ermine, looking bored and superior, like El Greco cardinals.

And then me, the lone graduate, in borrowed cap and gown, the sole reason why we were all gathered there, the classic case of the academic tail wagging the woebegone dog. The curious cows looking up on Mather Hill that drowsy June morning long ago hadn't seen such a sight since the locals gave up bundling in double runner sleds.

Annapolis speech offers little more than outline

BY WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — One problem with major speeches is that they seldom are. And President Carter's latest assessment of U.S.-Soviet relations tends to prove the rule.

It is hardly likely to be marked down as the Annapolis doctrine, for Carter charted no innovations or new directions. Instead, he summarized a situation and a dilemma that has confronted administrations ever since the Cold War thawed into detente.

An analysis

And if the message was for Moscow, it also was for the American electorate and the congressional critics who contend that the Carter administration has been uncertain and divided on the course of East-West relations.

"It was an effort to show that there is no disharmony, that the administration speaks with one voice, and that this is the definitive view," a Carter aide said.

The White House insists that there never has been any discord or confusion within the administration, and that suggestions to the contrary come from outsiders who are themselves confused.

Perhaps, but it was Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser, who said strategic arms talks had reached a take it or leave it stage, with reasonable American proposals on the table to stay there until the Russians accept them. At about the same time, Paul C. Warnke, the administration's arms negotiator, was saying that his instructions were to do just that — negotiate.

In any event, the one voice at Annapolis was Carter's. And much of what he said could as easily have been uttered by Gerald R. Ford or Richard M. Nixon, at earlier stages of detente and the SALT talks.

Washington wants peace, and Carter said he is convinced the Russians too, do. But the White House and the Kremlin define it differently. As they have for years, intervening there, constantly seeking to expand their influence abroad.

"To the Soviet Union, detente seems to mean a continuing aggressive struggle for political advantage and increased influence in a variety of ways," Carter said. "The Soviet Union apparently sees military power and military assistance as the best means of expanding their influence abroad."

Military assistance is not a Moscow monopoly, although Carter said as a candidate that he wanted to sharply curtail the commerce in arms.

He said the Soviet Union and other nations should join the United States "in emphasizing works of peace rather than weapons of war in their assistance to Africa," the arena of communist intervention that has led to much of the current controversy over SALT and detente.

"We should make it clear that detente requires that the Soviets, as well as the United States, refrain from irresponsible intervention in other countries," said Carter. "The Russians have no more business in Angola than we have."

He didn't say that in Annapolis on Wednesday. He said it in New York City, just two years ago. The administration has changed, but not the problem.

For the Annapolis address, Carter was in large measure his own speechwriter. He got advice and material from Brzezinski, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and CIA Director Stansfield Turner.

Perhaps as a result, there are both hard lines and soft lines in the final product.

For all the rebukes to Moscow, Carter carefully exempted the SALT talks from his list. "We and the Soviet Union are negotiating in good faith because we both know that failure would precipitate a resumption of a massive nuclear arms race," he said. "I am glad to report that the prospects for a SALT II agreement are good."

He didn't elaborate. Major speech or not, Carter may have offered an appropriate capsule review as he began, recalling that at his own Annapolis commencement 32 years ago, the midshipmen were addressed by Adm. Chester Nimitz.

"As will be the case with you," Carter told the graduates, "I don't remember a word he said."

Maverick brothers add cousin to cast for television movie

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you've wondered what Bret Maverick and his brother Bart have been up to for the past 16 years, be assured they have not reformed.

Bret and Bart are still roaming the West, a deck of cards in hand, a con job in the making and a fast getaway horse stashed nearby.

They're up to the same old tricks in "The New Maverick," an ABC movie designed to launch the newest member of the clan, Ben Maverick, into a series of his own.

James Garner is back as Bret and Jack Kelly is Bart once more. Charles Franks stars as Ben, the son of English cousin Beau Maverick, played by Roger Moore in the original series seen 1956-62.

"I play a kid brought up on the East Coast who was kicked out of Harvard for running a card game," said Franks. "He feels so much a part of the clan he heads west to join Bret and Bart."

In the two-hour movie, which ABC has not scheduled, Ben proves as adept a con artist as his cousins. In fact, more so.

"Jim Garner said I'd probably seen the old 'Maverick' and I said I hadn't," Franks said. "I was too busy playing too many sports and running around."

"So I tuned in to the reruns one afternoon. I found it dated, four-walled and without any vistas. It was all done on the backlot. I found it not very exciting except for the characters. Jim agreed that it is outdated, but at the time it was very exciting."

"The New Maverick" was filmed entirely on location in Arizona near Tucson and Nogales, and it adds tremendously to the appeal. Some scenes were filmed on the Sharp Ranch, only 300 yards from the Mexican border. Wood for the ranch house was shipped down the Colorado River, then brought overland by mule train.

It's at the ranch that Franks meets his love interest and future companion in deception — if the show becomes a series. She is Nell, played by Susan Blanchard, who is also Franks' wife.

"I'm thrilled she's in it," he said. "She's the best actress I've ever worked with. The last time we worked together was four years ago in a soap in New York."

Allan Shayne, president of Warner Bros. Television, hired her. I wasn't going to say anything. I hate this business of 'I'm not going to do this film unless so-and-so's in it.'"

Franks laughed and added, "And let me tell you, being on location with your wife is a lot more fun than being at home with your wife."

This is Franks' third pilot. He was previously in "Panache," a swashbuckler, and "Riding High," from the movie "Hearts of the West."

"I think the first two were as good as 'Maverick,'" he said. "When you come out here you start counting your eggs before they hatch. You say this is 13 weeks steady employment and you start making plans. People talk about how good it is, then finally say it's good for television."

His only previous Westerns were "Riding High," actually about making movie Westerns, and "Go West, Young Girl," in which he played a cavalry officer. "I think the only way to approach a Western now is with a bit of humor," he said. "A serious saga is hard to sustain."

Franks was born 31 years ago in Olympia, Wash., and was never east of Yakima until he went to Vermont to enroll at Middlebury College.

He acted in stock companies until he headed for New York and landed a role in the soap opera "All My Children."

"Susan and I auditioned the same day," he said. "We got married on the show and got married for real last June."

"I think the soaps are the best training ground around. That, combined with stock. The soaps teach you your craft. You have to learn a 30-page script every night. If you can do that and maintain your integrity you will emerge as an actor."

He was in the theatrical movies "The One and Only" and "The Other Side of the Mountain, Part II," the TV movies "Ski Lift to Death" and "Tarrantulas," and had guest star roles on "The Love Boat," "Police Woman," "Barnaby Jones" and "What Really Happened to the Class of '65."

A few years ago, when Lee Majors was threatening to quit "The Six Million Man," Franks was suggested as a replacement. He said, "How do you recast that show? I said I couldn't replace Lee Majors. They hired me anyway, but Lee Majors came back."

He was also reluctant to take the role in "The New Maverick."

"I originally turned it down," he said. "I didn't want to be cast as a young Jim Garner. Then I read the script by Juanita Bartlett. It's the best I've ever read and I called up and accepted."

"I don't feel I'm doing another Jim Garner. We're very different, but alike in some ways. I think that's why they cast me."

'20-20' view of news echoes Chayefsky note

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It is just today I am recovering from Tuesday's premiere of the new ABC newsmagazine show, "20-20." Mercy, it looked like a No-Cal "60 Minutes" on speed.

It had greyhounds tearing apart rabbits, Flip Wilson crying, California Gov. Jerry Brown boring, a Greek tanker exploding, a former teen-aged nuclear extortionist reminiscing and some closing thoughts about the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

It also had word of this week's top record, top TV show and "top jock," plus light between-story banter by co-hosts Harold Hayes of North Carolina and Robert Hughes, an Australian.

Foaled after the success of CBS' "60 Minutes," claimed by ABC News but overseen by ABC entertainment executive Bob Shanks, "20-20" needs one more participant to succeed.

It needs a Mad Prophet of the sort who lent deranged decency to the news-as-entertainment telecast in Paddy Chayefsky's corrosive film satire of TV and news, "Network."

The greyhound piece involved "coursing," the use of live rabbits to train race dogs. It was by Gerald Rivera, who may not be of journalism's traditional low-key, impartial school.

At the start of his emotion-charged expose, he says: "... the greyhound industry says that their dogs (is industry singular?) need live bait. This report will establish that simply is not so."

He shows "coursing" in Kansas, rabbits killed by dogs and tossed in the trash, and furtive rabbit selling in Texas. He probes humane and legal aspects, triumphantly reports bills to end coursing are at hand, calls coursing "one of those petty barbarisms" that should end.

Co-host Hughes, a jaunty type, then says: "Thank you, Gerald. Next — how Flip Wilson turned Geraldine out of the house to take in his own kids."

We see the comic with three of his kids. He talks of trying to be a good father. His eyes fill with tears. Finally, it ends.

Hughes, not missing a beat, says: "Coming up next — a '20-20' look at the chance of nuclear terrorism in this country..."

Sander Vanocur does the looking. It's chilling stuff, all done in the rat-tat-tat style of Walter Winchell. Like the greyhound piece, it zips about so fast you barely have time to think or reflect.

That may be the aim of "20-20," to juxtapose serious, silly and sad so quickly you're only supposed to react, not think.

It seems the work of a twisted TV theorist who says just keep it exciting, brisk, and, oh, yes, go buy the TV rights to the Ecumenical Liberation Army's next bank holdup, that oughta grab 'em.

"Network" author Chayefsky once noted TV's big problem thusly: "We've lost our sense of shock, our sense of humanity."

"20-20" tries to rectify his first complaint. It justifies his second. ABC News should hang this show in shame.

Final note: Program whiz Freddie Silverman, the guy "Doonesbury" made famous, officially joins NBC today as president. He ran ABC's programming works when "20-20" was conceived. It is something to think about.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Nutrition vital during pregnancy

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: My daughter is pregnant, and I don't think she is eating the way she ought to be. She skips on breakfast, just has some cottage cheese for lunch, and really only gets one good meal a day—her dinner. I keep telling her this can be very bad for the baby, but she insists it is much better to have a small baby and that she has no intention of gaining a lot of weight. I would really appreciate your advice. Alice McD.

DEAR ALICE: It is terribly important that the pregnant mother have good nutrition—for the physical and also the mental health of her baby. An infant that has been poorly nourished during this critical period and is very underweight at birth has a greater risk of birth defects and mental retardation. That does not mean the mother must put on an enormous amount of weight. But she does need much more of various nutrients such as calcium and iron, and her need for protein is increased. If I were you, I would see that your daughter checks with her doctor and makes sure that she is getting what is essential for her baby's and her own needs.

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: How do you feel about pregnant women taking saunas?—Ellie T.

DEAR ELLIE: There are some studies by Dr. David W. Smith and others at the University of Washington in Seattle which suggest that raising the body's temperature above normal may sometimes cause birth defects. Prolonged saunas do actually raise body temperature. Dr. Smith notes that the average length of a sauna bath in Finland is only five to seven minutes. And in his opinion a pregnant woman should keep any sauna bath down to this short range—not more than 10 minutes at the most.

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: When I was visiting my daughter the other day, I noticed that she was letting her nine-month-old baby play with a can of powder. I mentioned to her that I didn't think this was a very good idea—that I had read somewhere that inhaling talcum powder could be dangerous.—Edna S.

DEAR EDNA: You are absolutely right. Inhaling talcum powder can cause a very dangerous kind of pneumonia, and babies and young children should not be allowed to play with it. It should always be kept out of reach—the way aspirin and cleaning fluid and other potentially harmful substances are.

'Galapagos' colorful work

One of the most colorful of Mena's works is "Galapagos," painted in a flurry of designs to mirror the artist's view of the islands made famous by biologist Charles Darwin.

And there's the "Guayas" with blue-green wavy patterns on the plane's underbelly and a sunburst above separated by a thin wildly spirited strip of greens. The design represents one of Ecuador's largest rivers.

The "Napó," named after the river and region in western Ecuador, is one of Mena's more subdued designs.

Communists promise 'liberation' in six months

By DAVID LAWTON
Special to The Washington Post

LAHANSAL, Thailand — This remote corner of rural Thailand is scheduled to become the next "liberated area" of Southeast Asia.

The Communist Party of Thailand says it will liberate Lahansal within six months.

Last month guerrillas of the Communist Thai People's Liberation Army entered two villages in this district in daylight. They rounded up 109 civilians and marched them across the Cambodian border, 15 miles away.

In the past four months there have been many such raids and hostile incidents along the Thai-Cambodian border, according to Thai First Army headquarters. More than 1,000 persons have disappeared from their villages since the beginning of the year.

Here in Lahansal, at the forward operations base of the Thai army in this strategic sector, battalion Task Force 233 is hunkered down behind sandbags.

Until recently troops were deployed to provide security for civil engineers pushing a road along the border. The road was planned to enable quick reinforcement to isolated villages, but communist mining, sniping and harassing raids brought construction to a halt 12 miles short of the intended length. The security troops were withdrawn.

The battalion commander's briefing map showed a formidable line of five Thai insurgent bases facing his position from just across the border in their Cambodian sanctuary.

"We expect the next attack here," the commander said, tapping his finger against a grid square.

But his map showed no counter-operations by his own forces: no interdiction sweeps, no ambush patrols, no listening posts.

"It's difficult to get permission from higher headquarters for operations," the commander said. He asked that his name not be used.

Recently Thai security forces had a rare break. They arrested two guerrillas, and six more defected.

Daeng Kaosri, 36, one of these guerrillas, claimed the communists implicated him in their operations gradually, so that he was hardly aware of being drawn in.

"The first time two men came to my farm house," he said. "They were unarmed. They asked me to buy a few things, some fish sauce and cigarettes, for them. They gave me 100 baht (about $5) and said I could keep the change. The things I bought them came to 36 baht 50 satang."

Pornchai Paengphet, 16, another of the guerrillas, said he was in his father's paddy field when 15 guerrillas appeared and rounded up everybody in the hamlet, 24 persons.

"We all marched for three days through the forest in Lahansal before we crossed into Cambodia," he said.

"We met two other communist squads. They fed us sardines and rice and they took over guarding us. In the three days we never saw any Thai Army or police."

Phomma Wongninyong, 32, another guerrilla, said he was taken by guerrillas from a hillside where he was farming. He said he did not cross the border until four days later, when he was put into a group of 152 other abductees and recruits.

"I was sent to camp 54 in Cambodia," he said. "On the first day there was an opening ceremony with red flags and big pictures of Marx, Lenin, Engels, Stalin and Mao. We had a meal with chicken, but that was the only day we got it."

"We had three instructors for political and military training. They introduced themselves as former university students who had come to the liberated area after the October riots two years ago. (In 1976 a battle between campus demonstrators and security forces in Bangkok led to the imposition of military government.)

"Our instructors were very gentle and very modest. They took us on training maneuvers in the forest. At night and on Sundays we had study and self-criticism meetings. We were issued weapons, but not ammunition. We practiced dry firing, because we were told the rule was one round, one enemy life. And we threw dummy grenades."

"Our instructors said our struggle was being supported by the international communist movement, especially by Cambodia, China and Laos."

They never mentioned Vietnam or Russia."

After one month Phomma was selected for assignment to a guerrilla unit back in Lahansal. He was issued a pair of olive-drab Chinese Army fatigue trousers, a black shirt and 120 rounds for his Soviet-bloc CKC carbine.

Before recrossing the border with seven other new guerrilla recruits and four veterans, Phomma was told that his mission was to liberate Lahansal. When he found himself back in the woods of his home district, however, he lost heart and crept away to give himself up.

Michigan parents attempting to cut children's TV viewing

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Concerned that their children may be becoming addicted to television, a group of parents in this Detroit suburb is starting a two-year effort to cut tube time in half.

"We might be criticized for using such a strong word as addiction but it is the truth," said Catherine Burns, president of the sponsoring Birmingham Parent-Teacher-Student Association.

TV itself, not just the sexy or violent programs, is the target.

"We have no intention of telling a family it can watch this program but not that one. We do not have that right," Mrs. Burns said.

"We are not trying to dictate to parents how they should raise their children..."

The association has won the backing of the teachers' union and the school board in the 25,000-student Birmingham School District for its attempt to turn families from TV to such activities as jogging, bicycling, hiking or hobby-working.

A report from an association study committee said television was injuring many children in the affluent Detroit suburb, in part because "many families can afford to supply television sets for their children's rooms at home."

Television, the report said, "is displacing many kinds of activities essential to learning, development and success in adulthood."

The theory that TV-watching itself rather than specific programs is harmful to children is not a new one. Marie Winn, a New York writer and mother of two young sons, discussed the argument in detail in her recent book, "The Plug-In Drug."

Leaders in the Birmingham effort said a pamphlet on the ill effects of too much TV would be given to every child in the public schools. Schools will hold meetings, and speakers will be dispatched to adult groups, they said.

During the next two years, the parents plan to back such activities as hobby fairs and writing contests.

At the end of the period, the association said it hopes to see viewing time and classroom discipline problems both cut in half and a 20 percent improvement in school marks.

The move to cut down on TV watching reached into the Burns home where Mrs. Burns' sons, Wayne, 10, a fifth grader, and Norman, 7, a second grader, passed up regular television this winter to play ice hockey.

'Catastrophe theory' probed

By RICK HAMPSON

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) — Wake up class, it's time to learn some new math. They call it catastrophe theory and, depending on whom you believe, it is:

—A conceptual breakthrough that offers man a tool for predicting a prison riot, a bridge collapse or the division of a cell.

—An interesting but not particularly earthshaking way of geometrically describing radical changes.

—The latest academic fad.

About 30 natural and social scientists in search of the correct answer met recently at Williams College's Mount Hope Farm, probably wondering if they really were onto the biggest thing since Isaac Newton's calculus.

Catastrophe theory is a way of thinking about and looking at changes in a pattern of events, in an object's shape, in a system's behavior.

It says there are seven basic kinds of abrupt change, or "catastrophes," in nature, and that they can be explained and even predicted with advanced math and computers.

Skeptics abound, though most of those who huddled at the Williams conference already were converts.

The theory's father is Rene Thom, a French mathematician and philosopher who first argued in the mid-1960s that Newton's calculus was designed to describe the smooth, continuous motion of a planet's orbit. All around, Thom said, he saw the opposite: bubbles bursting, electrons jumping, governments falling.

Thom's genius was to show that all "catastrophes" can be expressed with seven multidimensional geometric forms. Changes can be charted on them, and catastrophes occur when action shifts from one surface to another.

If you plot the forces, say, that cause a steel girder to snap, you can predict the point at which a bridge or a building will collapse.

To truly understand the theory, you have to see the forms. For Thom, a picture really is worth a thousand words.

He believes numbers are a limited expression of reality, and wrote in 1975:

"The human mind would not be fully satisfied with a universe in which all phenomena were governed by a mathematical process that was coherent but totally abstract. Are we not then in wonderland?"

Said mathematician Lynn Arthur Steen: "When the mind must work only with numbers, it works linearly, or on one track. But if a problem can be transformed into a picture, then the mind grasps it as a whole and can think creatively about it."

Thom identified the seven multidimensional forms with various kinds of catastrophe events. The simple fold catastrophe, for instance, is exemplified by a tossed ball that reaches the apex of its flight and begins to fall.

Here's how to apply it to a real situation — the stock market:

Decide what variables influence the market, such as speculation and demand, and gather all available data on them.

Using advanced math and a computer, an economist can devise a cusp catastrophe model that should be able to show how and when the market will crash.

The plunge comes when certain combinations of the two factors push the market over the edge and onto a surface below; graphically, the "bottom drops out of the market."

The theory's applications are limited by the apparent impossibility of gathering all the necessary details, although an ace broker presumably does just that in his head.

Last year a major attack on the theory was launched in a Science magazine article, "Catastrophe Theory: The Emperor Has No Clothes." It showed many mathematicians thought the theory was far less than the greatest scientific development since Einstein's theory of relativity.

Critics claim that at best the theory merely describes what already is known; at worst, they say, it makes empty boasts about predicting the essentially unpredictable.

The former vice president spoke at the second annual award dinner of the National Energy Foundation Thursday night, where Texaco board Chairman Maurice F. Granville was presented with the Energy Achievement Award for "raising public awareness of energy, its sources, its efficient utilization and its conservation."

GAO wants Interior to explore

WASHINGTON (AP)—The General Accounting Office recommended Thursday that the Interior Department conduct its own drilling in offshore areas to assess more accurately their potential petroleum reserves before leasing the areas to private companies.

The department, in comments attached to the GAO report, objected to the specific recommendations for offshore exploration by the government, but invited a recommendation to develop such a program.

The GAO, a watchdog agency of Congress, has been critical of the Interior Department's leasing of offshore areas for oil and gas exploration and development and has made similar recommendations for the past several years.

Its new recommendations for a government drilling program were made in a report on the leasing of underwater tracts in the Lower Cook Inlet, off Alaska, which took place last October.

Oil strike announced

DALLAS—Lear Petroleum Corp. announced the completion of an oil discovery in Lipscomb County. The Lear No. 1 Pitts was completed as an upper Morrow oil discovery between 8,606 feet and 8,626 feet. Lear owns approximately a 65 percent net revenue interest in the well.

The well was placed on production on May 29 and currently is being produced at 320 barrels of oil per day on a 4/64 inch choke.

Lear owns varying working interests in approximately 6,000 acres surrounding the discovery. Additional drilling is scheduled to begin in early June with a second rig scheduled to begin drilling in mid July.

crude oil customers $183 million over a three-year period, is suing Exxon Corp. for the money and interest.

The suit was filed Thursday in U.S. District Court here and is a followup to a probable violation notice issued against the Houston-based corporation by the Energy Department six months ago.

Paul L. Bloom, a department attorney, said the government decided to go into the courts now instead of proceeding along administrative lines to achieve "the earliest possible resolution" of the case.

Presumably, he said, the company would have appealed an administrative decision to the courts at any rate. The suit is the result of an audit of Exxon records for the period running from late 1973 through 1976.

Exxon officials were not available for comment on the suit.

When the government's notice was issued last January, Exxon denied the overcharges. The company claimed the government was trying to apply price ceilings retroactively using "standards not in effect when our decision and commitments were made."

The Exxon suit involves the sale of crude oil after the government established a two-tier pricing system to protect against windfall profits and promote domestic oil development after the 1973 Arab oil embargo.

Under the tier system current crude oil production was divided into "old" oil and "new" oil. New oil is the quantity drilled which exceeds production capabilities before the tier system was established. The barrel price of new oil was $11.28 when the alleged violation occurred. That price was about $6 higher than what could have been charged for "old" oil.

The Energy Department alleged that Exxon at its Hawkins Field in Wood County, Texas shut down a number of wells and then shifted the production of those wells to a smaller number of new wells, using gas injections into the oil field.

Pair of wells final in West Texas areas

New wells have been reported in King and Terry counties.

Taubert, Steed, Gunn & Medders of Wichita Falls announced potential test for No. 22-D S. B. Burnett Estate in the Capitan Burk (Strawn) field of King County.

The well finished on the pump for 220 barrels of oil, no water, through perforations from 5,232 to 5,270 feet. The pay section was acidized with 2,000 gallons.

Gravity of the oil is 36 degrees, and the gas-oil ratio is 350-1.

Total depth is 5,380 feet and 5.5-inch casing is cemented at total depth.

Well site is 2,800 feet from south and 2,600 feet from east lines of section 54, block 3, BS&F survey, abstract 672, seven miles southeast of Guthrie.

The well extends the field 3/4 mile northwest.

Gravity of the oil is 29 degrees, and the gas-oil ratio is 306-1.

Location is 1,200 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 25, block D-11, SK&K survey.

Total depth is 7,419 feet and 4.5-inch casing is cemented at 7,400 feet.

To Our Customers, The Used Car They Buy Is A New Car.

In many cases, a family budget just won't stretch to include a brand new car. And this is where a quality used car makes good sense.

As far as we are concerned, that used car is really a new car to the family that buys it.

And we take extra care to make sure our used car customers enjoy every bit as much satisfaction and pride as our new car customers.

El Dorado MINI-WAGON

THE HEIGHT OF QUALITY AND DESIGN!

Quality has been no accident...it's been El Dorado's number one rule for nearly 20 years.

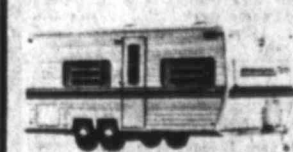

The new Mini-Wagon is lower, narrower and lighter than conventional-type mini-motor homes, but careful planning and space utilization plus the use of durable sandwich construction eliminates the need to sacrifice interior room. The unique front cabover design plus overall lighter weight provides impressive fuel economy and excellent road handling.

Tech exes gain view of Dockery

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

Midland's Texas Tech exes got their first formal introduction to Tech's new head football coach Rex Dockery Thursday night at the annual Tech Exes barbecue at the VFW Hall, and the "Little General" didn't disappoint on his first visit to the Tall City.

Right off the bat, Dockery let it be known that there are several Midland athletes that Tech is interested in when next fall's high school campaign is complete. That always stands well with the locals.

"Midland has four or five outstanding prospects," Dockery said. "We are going to make an effort to sign them next year. If we want to win in the Southwest Conference, we are going to have to have the West Texas players first, and Midland is going to have its share."

Dockery is optimistic about Tech's chances this fall, but is holding onto a wait and see attitude.

"We are going to have a very young team. We need defensive backs, receivers and running backs, but we have to sell our kids that they can win regardless of who they play. Somewhere down the road, we want to go to the Cotton Bowl. That is the objective here in the Southwest Conference. We went after speed in recruiting this year, and I think we have helped our weaknesses. Still, we will have to wait and see how they turn out when they report."

Tech's head basketball coach Gerald Myers was also at the gathering, and while not overjoyed, he was pleased with his cage recruits this spring.

"We had a good recruiting year, but

Georgia takes NCAA golf lead

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Griff Moody and Chip Beck both shot three-under-par 69s Thursday to pace second-ranked Georgia to a two-stroke lead at 566 over top-ranked Oklahoma State in the second day of the NCAA golf championships.

Oklahoma State had led by one stroke after Wednesday's first round at the Eugene Country Club.

Moody's 137 total gave him a one-stroke lead in individual competition over Oregon's Brent Murray, who shot a 67.

Arizona State's Dan Croonquist shot a 71 and was one stroke behind Murray. His team was in third place one stroke behind Oklahoma State.

not a great one. We didn't get the big 6-10 dominate figure that everyone is looking for, but we got some good ones," Myers said. "We lost Mike Russell and Mark Edwards, and that will hurt us. I look for Russell to go high in the NBA draft. He was one of the best in the SWC, and anytime you lose a player of Mike's caliber, you're going to feel it."

"SWC basketball has arrived as a power on the national level, and it is going to stay there. To be a contender, we are going to have to improve recruiting and improve our facilities, and we are going to do it. We have to."

Myers thinks his best recruit is Jeff Taylor, a 6-4 athlete from Hobbs, N. M., who Myers says is a great jumper. He also got Adam Beale from Western Texas College in Snyder, who Myers says is a great shooter and an All-American from the wrist down. Myers' other recruits are David Little of Abilene and Steve Smith of Hobbs.

Dockery is high on Ron Reeves and Randy Page, both quarterbacks signed by Tech this spring. Dockery says both are leaders, but still plans on going with Tres Adams and Mark Johnson this fall. Neither won the job outright this spring and both will see action.

Over 100 Tech exes attended the barbecue, and got to meet eight other Tech coaches besides Myers and Dockery. Others in attendance were football coaches Jerry Bomar, Bob Patterson, Bud Casey, Taylor McNeil, Al Tanara, Jim Bates and Sam Robertson. Rob Evans, assistant basketball coach, was also in attendance.

Other guests were Leete Jackson, president of the Red Raider Booster Club; Keith Samples, sports information director; Brian Hall, former Tech field goal specialist; Johnny Owens, in charge of ticket distribution; and Peggy Pearce of the Texas Tech Ex-Students Association. Jan Matney of Midland provided music entertainment.

The Tech people and Midland exes also held a golf tournament at the Midland Country Club Thursday morning, but the results came out much the same as last year.

Myers' team won again. Gerald teamed with Royce Woolard, Glenn Cope and Bobby Gleason for a 63, but they still had to win on a card playoff over two other teams. Evans' team of Bob Dean, Johnny Warren and Richard Williams took second on the card playoff while third went to Patterson's squad of Ralph Way, Nugent Brasher and Jim Nelson.

Yankees' Ken Holtzman says he isn't disabled

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Holtzman, the New York Yankees' seldom-used $100,000 left-hander, charged the team placed him on the disabled list when he wasn't disabled, it was reported Friday.

The Yankees placed Holtzman on the 21-disabled list last Saturday, saying that he was suffering from a back ailment. At the time, New York activated pitcher Don Gullett, who was returning from a shoulder ailment that kept him from pitching since the start of the season.

"I was okay Saturday, I told them that," Holtzman told the New York Times from his home in Lincolnshire, Ill. "To juggle the roster is one thing, but when it leads to a damaged reputation and an out and out falsehood about a player's condition, that's another."

Holtzman said he would like the Yankees to trade him by Thursday, the major league's trading deadline. He has also brought up the matter to the players' association, and the association's executive director, Marvin Miller, has discussed the incident with AL President Lee MacPhail.

NBA eyes talent in college crop

NEW YORK (AP) — Who will be this year's James Edwards?

A year ago Edwards was a 7-foot center who had just completed his collegiate career at the University of Washington. Since 7-foot centers with talent are rare commodities, Edwards figured to go high in the National Basketball Association draft, this year's edition of which was held today at league headquarters.

But the first round passed, and then the second round, and still Edwards had not been named. Finally he was selected in the third round, the 46th player to be chosen, by Los Angeles — a club which already had a pretty fair center by the name of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Things have a way of working out, however, and they certainly did for Edwards.

Abdul-Jabbar broke his hand punching out Milwaukee's Kent Benson in the opening game of the regular season and missed the next 20 contests. Suddenly, instead of being used 8-10 minutes a game to give Abdul-Jabbar an breather, Edwards was thrust into a starting role.

Edwards made the most of his opportunity. He averaged 15 points and 8 rebounds a game, impressive statistics for a raw rookie, especially a center. He proved he belonged in the NBA and impressed a lot of people, including Indiana Coach and General Manager Bobby Leonard.

When Abdul-Jabbar returned to the lineup, Leonard knew the Lakers would not have much use for Edwards. So he swung a deal with Los Angeles, giving up 1977 Rookie of the Year Adrian Dantley and veteran center Dave Robisch to get Edwards and Karl Tatum.

Tatum moved into the Pacers' starting backcourt after John Williamson was traded away, and Edwards became a fixture at center. He had his ups and downs, but by the end of the season Edwards had appeared in 58 games for the Pacers, averaging 15.4 points and 7.5 rebounds an outing.

"With a youngster like James Edwards, we feel set at center for 10 years to come," said Leonard.

The NBA draft lasted eight rounds last year. Of the players chosen below the first two rounds, Edwards was by far the most successful, but there were others who lasted to make the pro ranks.

From the third round, guards Eddie Johnson of Atlanta, John Kuester of Kansas City and Mike Bratz of Phoenix all made the grade. In round four, Phoenix' Greg Griffin was on the Suns' roster for much of the year and Los Angeles' pick, Tony Robertson, caught on with Atlanta after being dropped by the Lakers.

Phoenix' seventh-round pick, Alvin Scott, played in 81 games and was the club's seventh leading scorer. And Golden State's eighth-round choice, guard Ricky Marsh, was actually a starter for a couple of months despite being the 165th player selected out of a total of 170.

So while the focus of attention in today's draft was naturally on the opening round, more than a few general managers were fantasizing about uncovering a diamond in the rough like Edwards among the unfamiliar names of the lower rounds.

West Texas swim meet under way

Over 400 swimmers from across the United States and Mexico took the water of the Alamo Pool here this morning as the three-day Allison West Texas Invitational Swim Meet got underway.

Today's finals, however, will not get underway until 6 p.m. Preliminaries are being held up until that time. Preliminaries on Saturday and Sunday will begin at 9 a.m. with finals on both days at 6 p.m. The meet is open to the public.

Some of the top age group and senior swimmers in the nation are on hand for the meet. This is the first year for senior competition to be held in the expanded format. The senior field is also a large one, forcing consolation finals to be held in this division in addition to the finals.

Worry free electronic timing equipment has been installed to insure accurate times, and each lane is equipped with its own starting horn.

Thurman Brown of Pampa is serving as the meet referee. Brown is the designated referee by the AAU in this area.

One reason the senior field is so strong this year is that the Texas Senior Swimming Circuit is attending for the first time. This division of Texas swimming contains the top senior men and women swimmers in the state. Many of these contestants will be competing in the 1980 Olympic Trials for a spot on the United States Olympic Team.

Strong teams from Mexico, California, Tennessee, Kansas, Oklahoma and the Southeast are entered in the meet as are the top teams in Texas. The El Monte team of California is back to defend its title won last year.

This year's meet is sponsored by the City of Midland Swim Team, the Midland Jaycees and the Park and Recreation Department.

Judy shares Medicare Open lead

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Maybe they should rename the Ladies Professional Golf Association Championship the Medicare Open.

Judy Rankin has a touchy back. Jo Ann Washam, Rankin's first round co-leader Thursday at 5-under-par 67, is recovering from shoulder tendinitis.

Amy Alcott, alone in third place at 68, is so allergic to the rainy, humid Ohio climate she has slept little since arriving this week.

Mickey Wright, the champion of this major tournament an unprecedented four times, has such sore feet she soaked them in ice after her opening 69.

The weather — lightning and rain interrupted play for 43 minutes — did not help their ailments over the soggy 6,312-yard Nicklaus Center layout.

"My back stiffened. I didn't hit the ball as far after the delay," said Midland's Rankin.

Rankin missed four weeks and Washam five tournaments because of their physical woes this year.

The co-leaders overcame the soggy-ness of the course with deft touches on the greens. Washam had 27 putts and Rankin 28.

"I had a good feeling on every putt I stood over," said Washam. She sank four putts of 20 feet or longer for birdies. Both had seven birdies.

Alcott was the most consistent, stringing together four birdies. She could have had a super round but missed six birdie putts from 10 feet or less.

"I must look like a drug addict out there. My eyes are red. They burn. And I sneeze constantly," said the 1975 Rookie of the Year.

But the most remarkable round of all was fired by Wright, aiming to extend her own tour record of 62 tournament triumphs. It was only the third competitive round she has worn golf shoes in this year.

Two operations in 1974 and 1975 have not cured her problem, a growth on the nerve sheets of her feet.

"It's the kind of thing you just can't wear shoes with," said the 42-year-old Texan. "My feet feel super right now. I have no blisters or anything. Knock on wood."

Defending champion Chako Higuichi may have shot herself out of contention with an opening 75.

But some of the game's big names were solid contenders. Hollis Stacy, the 1977 U.S. Open champion, was at 69. Sandy Palmer was at 70.

JoAnne Carner, last week's victor at Toronto, took 71. So did Nancy Lopez, bidding for a record-tying fourth straight tournament triumph. The 21-year-old rookie can become the earliest woman golfer to hit $100,000 in a single year by earning less than $4,000 this week.

The international field of 113 is gunning for the first prize of $22,500.

The tournament, to be televised Saturday and Sunday by NBC-TV, is sponsored by Taft Broadcasting Co.

Rogers' no-hitter bombed

By The Associated Press

Steve Rogers would be very happy if he did not have to pitch to Reggie Smith again ... especially in Montreal's Olympic Stadium.

Last year, Rogers had a string of 147½ innings without allowing a home run before Smith ended it with a blast into the right field seats at the Expos' home park.

Thursday night, Smith tagged Rogers for another homer — at Olympic Stadium, of course — depriving the Montreal right-hander of a no-hitter.

After Smith's first-inning smash, Rogers did not allow Los Angeles another hit, pitching Montreal to a 4-1 victory over the Dodgers.

"I made a mistake early, but any time you can keep them to one hit, especially a team like the Dodgers, you've got to feel good," said Rogers, 7-5. "I just wish the hit hadn't been a home run."

Rogers didn't walk a batter and struck out six in hurling his sixth complete game in 14 starts. It was his third career one-hitter, and included seven fly balls and 14 infield outs.

"I'm a ground-ball pitcher," said Rogers. "When you see me high, I'm not pitching my game."

Elsewhere in the NL, the Chicago Cubs romped to a 10-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds, the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the Atlanta Braves 2-0 and the Houston at Pittsburgh game was rained out.

In the American League, the Texas

Rangers swept a doubleheader from the Kansas City Royals 5-4 and 3-2 in 13 innings, the Chicago White Sox edged the Minnesota Twins 2-1 and the California Angels beat the Oakland A's 10-7.

After Smith's homer, Rogers retired 19 batters in a row until Steve Garvey led off the eighth by reaching second on a throwing error by third baseman Larry Parrish. Garvey and Smith were the Dodgers' only baserunners.

Meanwhile, Montreal had tied the score against Don Sutton in the fifth on a single by Parrish, a sacrifice and an RBI single by Dave Cash. And the Expos went ahead 4-1 in the sixth on singles by Tony Perez and Ellis Valentine and a homer by Andre Dawson.

Cubs 10, Reds 1

The victory increased the Cubs hold on first place in the NL East to one game over idle Philadelphia, while the loss dropped Cincinnati into second place in the NL West, .008 behind the idle San Francisco Giants.

Rick Reuschel, backed by a 14-hit attack including Bobby Murcer's three-run homer, spaced seven hits and struck out 10 in beating the Reds for the fourth consecutive time over the past two seasons.

"He was throwing the ball on the outside corner and the inside corner," Cubs catcher Dave Rader said about Reuschel, 7-4. "But the sinking fast-ball was his best pitch."

Cardinals 2, Braves 0
Former American Leaguers Pete

Vuckovich and Mark Littell combined for a seven-hitter and Ken Reitz stroked a pair of run-scoring singles as St. Louis handed Atlanta's Preston Hanna his first loss in five decisions this season.

Vuckovich, making only his second start after 22 relief appearances, pitched 7 2-3 innings before Littell came in and gained his first save of the year by striking out three of the four batters he faced.

"It was like I was snakebitten," said Littell in reference to his dismal 1-6 record but creditable 2.89 earned run average. "I've had a lot of crazy things happen to me this year. I couldn't understand it, but I didn't get down on myself."

Rangers 5-3, Royals 4-2

Texas lashed 11 hits in the opener, including key triples by Ralph Garre and Al Oliver, and Doyle Alexander pitched one-hit ball for 62-3 innings before Reggie Cleveland stopped a late Kansas City rally.

In the nightcap, the Rangers were held hitless by rookie Rich Gale for 61-3 innings, then rallied to win in the 13th on Bobby Bonds' sacrifice fly.

The two victories lifted Texas into second place in the AL West, one-half game ahead of Kansas City and 2½ games behind Oakland.

White Sox 2, Twins 1

Run-scoring doubles by Ralph Garr and Bill Nahorodny supported the seven-hit pitching of Wilbur Wood and Jim Willoughby as the surging White Sox won for the 11th time in the past 12 games.

Wood and Willoughby held Minnesota's Rod Carew, the six-time American League batting champion, hitless in three at-bats, striking him out twice.

"Hitting is no fun for Rod Carew right now," said Twins Manager Gene Mauch. "And hitting is usually more fun than anything in the world for him. I'm toying with the idea of sitting him down for a week. Continuing to play him is not the answer."

Carew has been playing with a badly blistered hand and tendinitis in his right elbow. Nevertheless, he is leading the AL with a .363 average, but has struck out five times in the past two games.

Angels 10, A's 7

California won a home run slugfest from Oakland when Don Baylor broke a 7-7 tie with a three-run shot in the ninth inning. All of the Angels' runs came on homers. Earlier, Ron Jackson and Brian Downing blasted three-run homers and Carney Lansford had a solo shot.

Dave Revering hit a three-run homer and Mario Guerrero homered with one on for the A's.

Anaheim's woo of Rams may work

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Mayor John Seymour said "very significant progress" was made Thursday toward bringing the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League to Anaheim.

Officials of the city and Anaheim Stadium met for eight hours with a Rams' representative, attorney Larry Stringer. The mayor said the closed-door session dealt for the most part with property development, but no specifics were revealed.

Meanwhile, Los Angeles Coliseum officials said they expect to meet next week with Rams owner Carroll Rosenbloom in an attempt to keep the Rams from moving their home games to Anaheim Stadium in the early 1980s.

Los Angeles County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, vice chairman of the Coliseum Commission, said Thursday that Rosenbloom has told him: "Anaheim made me an offer I can't refuse. I want to see if you guys can match it."

It has been reported the Rams would like to have the Anaheim baseball stadium, home of the California Angels, increased by about 30,000 seats to a capacity of 73,500. In addition, the discussions reportedly involve business projects of Rosenbloom, to be located on city-owned land across the street from the stadium.

Ground would have to be broken by Sept. 1 if the Rams are to play in Anaheim by 1980.

"I hope that in the very near future the city can receive a specific written proposal from the Rams," Seymour said, "so the city can make a decision."

With him in the fourth round was Ted Ferguson, a 39-year-old oil executive of Midland, Texas, but Ferguson was beaten on the 18th by David Suddards of South Africa.

Two of the eight seeds were beaten Thursday. In the morning, Thierry Planchin of France defeated Gordon Murray of Scotland on the 18th hole after a hotly disputed rules decision.

Then Peter Deebie of England was beaten 7 and 6 in the fifth round by Suddards.

The defending titleholder, Anglo-Scott Peter McEvoy, came through with a 3 and 2 win over David Carrick of Scotland, Ian Hutcheon of Scotland defeated Chris Mitchell of England 4 and 2, Paul McKellar of Scotland defeated Robert Blackman of Scotland 6 and 5, John Davies of England defeated Hamish McNichen of Scotland 7 and 6 and Allan Brodie of Scotland beat Ian Hamilton of Scotland 7 and 6.

Although Affirmed has beaten Alydar in six of eight meetings — including the Derby, by 1½ lengths, and the Preakness, by a neck — Alydar's trainer, John Veltech, said the Calumet Farm colt will be no broken-hearted challenger in the Belmont.

"Horses aren't like human athletes," said Veltech. "They don't psyche themselves out. He doesn't even think Alydar will recognize Affirmed as the horse who beat him in the Derby and Preakness."

However, Veltech and Alydar's backers might be hoping Alydar recognizes the Belmont Park track as the site of his only two victories over Affirmed — in the Great American and the Champagne last year.

Only three other colts were entered Thursday for the Belmont, and they were expected to battle for third and fourth money of $22,216 and $11,058. If five start the 110th Belmont will be worth $164,300, with $110,580 to the winner and $40,546 to the runnerup.

The other three entrants were Darby Creek Road, Noon Time Spender and Judge Advocate. Post time is 4:40 p.m. CDT with CBS to televise from 4-5 p.m.

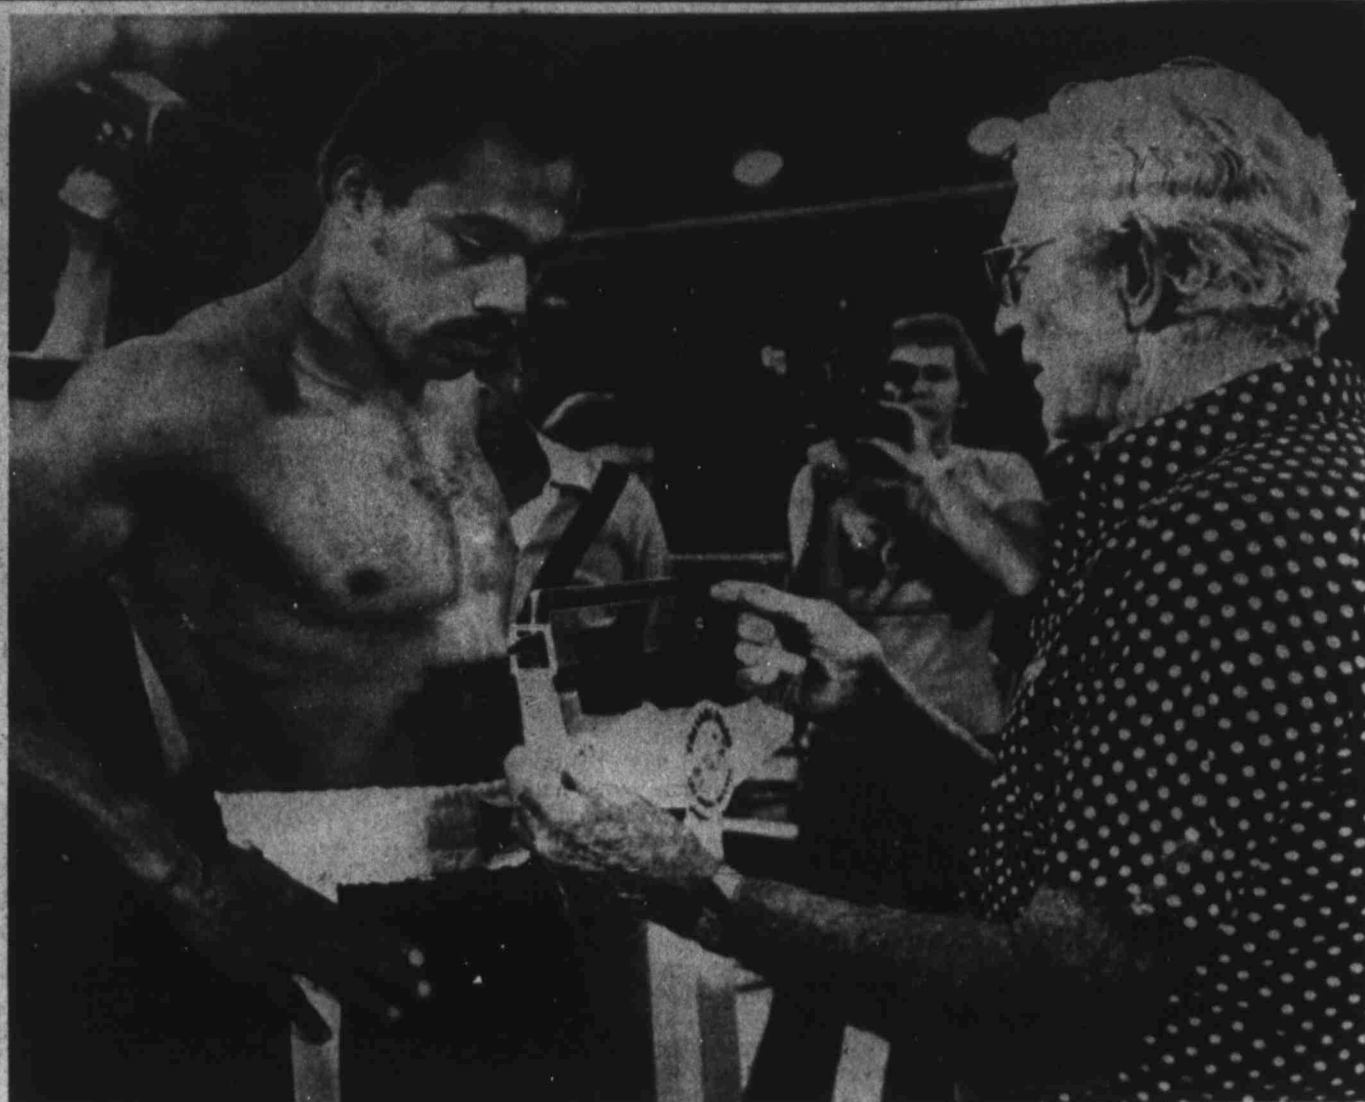

Saturday's weather forecast calls for sun with a high of around 80.

A crowd of 70,000 — the record is 82,694 in 1971 when Canonero II failed to win the Triple Crown — is expected to watch the anticipated duel between Affirmed and Alydar, who is ridden by Jorge Velasquez.

"Affirmed has a lot of speed but he won't be able to use much of it early and have anything left," said Veltech, who added that Alydar will shadow Affirmed Saturday.

Laz Barrera said Affirmed will lay second.

Veltech doesn't expect Alydar, known as a stretch runner, to take the lead "unless they run slower than they should the first part." The train-

World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Ken Norton, left, checks on his weight Thursday during the weigh in for his title defense against

Larry Holmes tonight. Norton weighed in at 220 pounds. (AP Laserphoto)

Ken Norton meets Holmes

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Ken Norton battles tonight to prove he's a legitimate heavyweight boxing champion.

The 32-year-old ex-Marine was given the title by the World Boxing Council when Leon Spinks signed to give Muhammad Ali a return match in New Orleans next Sept. 15.

Never before has the heavyweight crown been awarded outside the ring, but Norton says he deserves it even though he would rather have fought Spinks in the fight the WBC had wanted.

Norton goes against undefeated Larry Holmes, who was the challenger named by the WBC to fight Norton in his first title defense.

"I'll fight anybody, and I'd like to fight Spinks," said Norton. And Holmes echoed the view, saying he would also like to fight the winner of the Spinks-Ali rematch.

Norton and Holmes dislike each other heartily, but nevertheless Holmes stood up for Norton, saying the WBC made the right decision in stripping the title from Spinks when he would not fight Norton in his first title defense.

To avoid any conflict similar to a training camp incident on Tuesday, the two heavyweights were weighed in 30 minutes apart. Norton scaled 220 pounds and Holmes 209 for their 15-round battle at Caesars Palace. The bout will be televised by ABC at 7 p.m. CDT.

In the undercard, Carlos Zarate of Mexico City defends his WBC bantamweight title against Emilio Hernandez, the No. 7 challenger from Venezuela. The undefeated Zarate has KO'd 50 of his 51 foes.

Norton, in this city where betting is legal, was an 8-5 favorite against the 28-year-old Holmes, who is unbeaten in 27 fights.

Legal difficulties were apparently avoided when U.S. District Judge Roger Foley said he would not rule until later on a suit by Spinks who seeks to regain WBC recognition.

The World Boxing Association still recognizes Spinks and Norton said, "It might be a year before we again have only one heavyweight champion."

A crowd of about 5,600 was expected in the Sports Pavilion with another 40 million expected to watch the bout on TV.

Norton collects $2.3 million while Holmes will get $300,000.

Norton has a record of 40-4-0 and twice has lost heavyweight championship bouts — first to George Foreman via a second round knockout and again to Ali in a disputed 15-round decision.

Norton said his 220 pounds were just what he wanted, adding, "After drying out, I'll weigh about 218 when I go into the ring. I was 214 against Jimmy Young and that was too light. I had a brainstorm and went on a fish and fowl diet which left me light but with no endurance. This time I've been eating beef."

Norton readily agreed with newsmen asking about the animosity between he and Holmes, but said, "I don't like it. We'll settle it in the ring."

Norton has claimed Holmes talks too much, trying to emulate Ali, while the challenger says the champion slighted him and others in past years.

Holmes said he would like to fight Ali but doubted the former champion would get into the ring with him. That echoed Norton's claim that Ali did not want to fight a top man.

If the title fight at Caesars Palace goes the 15-round limit, three judges will determine the verdict on the 10-point must system where the winner of each round gets 10 points and the loser nine or less.

In Nevada, the referee does not score.

The rule that calls an end to a fight when a boxer is knocked down three times in a single round was waived but the mandatory eight-count remains in effect.

Holmes said his 209-pound weight was just one less than he weighed in his decisive decision over Earnie Shavers.

"My weight is good," said Holmes. "I was trained and ready for this fight two weeks ago. The only way Norton can get in his body attack is if I go into a corner, and I won't do it. I am too fast for him. He'll be like a mummy when I finish with him."

Holmes also denied he was trying to be an Ali copycat. "I can't predict the round because I'm not a slugger, but I know Ken Norton will fail," Holmes said. "Ken Norton told me he was going to take my head off and I told him not to leave his at home."

"I'm not like Ali because I don't dance. I move side to side. My jab is better than Ali's and I take the punishment he did not like to take."

In two heavyweight companion features, Jimmy Young of Philadelphia goes against undefeated Osvaldo Ocasio of Puerto Rico, and Alfredo Evangelista of Spain meets Jody Ballard of Houston.

Geiberger holds twinkle

MEMPHIS (AP) — Al Geiberger had a twinkle in his eye as he assessed his position.

"Well," he said, "I've matched last year's first-round score. Now all I have to do is match last year's second-round score."

"The first part," he admitted, "is the easiest."

It was something of an understatement. His par 72 was the same score he fired last year in the opening day of the Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic. In that tournament, however, he followed with a four record 59 in the second round.

This time he was a distant six shots back of Mike Morley's 66 that set the pace Thursday in the $250,000 event that was interrupted by a thunderstorm and accompanying tornado warning. Play was held up for almost two hours and the final men in the field finished in darkness on the rain-soaked, 7,249-yard Colonial Country Club course.

The storm was one of a series that has moved through the area and left the course a muddy mess. Players were allowed to lift, clean and place the ball in the fairways.

"We ought to do it every week, regardless of the conditions," said Lee Trevino. "That way you're rewarded for hitting a good drive. What difference does it make if you hit the perfect drive right in the middle of the fairway and end up in somebody's divot?"

"We ought to be able to put our hands on it in the fairway every week."

Trevino, who had to endure the two-hour delay, had a chance to tie for second but missed a 4-foot birdie putt on the final hole.

That left him one shot back of Barry Jaeckel, Morley's playing partner in the hot, humid morning round. Jaeckel, who said he was "just trying to keep pace with Mike, trying not to embarrass myself," finished off a 67 with 32 on the back nine.

Tied with Trevino at 68 were Allen

Miller, who had a hole in one with a 4-iron on the 200-yard 15th hole, Spain's Seve Ballesteros, Miller Barber, Bob Gilder, Jim Colbert, Jim Simons, Alan Tapie and rookie Mike Sullivan.

Gary Player, winner of the Masters and two other events earlier this season, had to rally for a 73 and Johnny Miller shot 75.

Morley, a low-key, soft-spoken journeyman, had an extremely solid effort. He didn't make a bogey and missed only one green.

"I've been in a two-month slump," he said. "I played too much early this year and got too tired. I let my swing get too long. I've been trying to shorten it. I had a good ball-striking round today, real solid. I'm very pleased."

He got off to a quick start with birdie putts of 25 and 15 feet on the first two holes and then went 3 under par with an approach that stopped 6 feet from the flag on No. 4.

Ron Reeves mows down Moody, 6-1

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Ron Reeves scattered five hits and Lubbock Monterey took advantage of five errors by Corpus Christi Moody Thursday night to take a 6-1 decision in a Class 4A semi-finals baseball game.

Reeves, a senior who came into the contest with a 15-1 record, started slowly, but pitched impressively for five innings before getting a scare in the final frame.

Moody opened scoring in the first on a two-out single by Buddy Logan, followed by a double to right center by Rene Castro.

The Plainsmen came back in the second with three when pitcher Ron Reeves doubled home Dana Rieger.

Monterey, making its seventh trip to the state playoffs with a pair of titles, will meet Bellaire of Houston Friday night in the Class 4A finals.

Monterey is now 33-5 and Moody finished with a 29-6 record.

In the other Class 4A semifinal game, John Moses tossed a four-hitter and struck out a dozen batters as Bellaire eased by Duncanville 5-1 to advance to tonight's finals.

The senior southpaw, who entered the contest with a 16-2 record and an impressive 0.32 ERA, breezed through six innings and was only in danger in the fourth when Duncanville loaded the bases with one out.

Moses whiffed pinch hitter Mike Pierce and got Craig Fouts out on a ground out to second.

Bellaire closed out the scoring in the seventh when Tom McMurtrey singled in Rick Roberts.

Bellaire, now 37-8, will try for its fourth state title tonight.

Duncanville ended the season at 32-4.

In Class 3A semifinal action, relief pitcher Billy Welch walked in the winning run as Burkburnett came from behind to edge Jasper 3-2 Thursday afternoon.

Welch, who came in for starter Kenneth Brooks in the bottom of the seventh, with runners on first and second and one out, issued a single to Scott Hogue to knot the score at 2-2. He then got pitcher Kevin Burke to pop out, but walked Donnie King on a full count before allowing the game-winning pass to Jeff Baber.

Burke, who went the distance for the winners, picked up his 16th victory of the season against three defeats while Brooks dropped to 13-4.

Burkburnett closed out its season 21-10, while Jasper earned a 27-7 record.

Ferguson falls on 18th in British Amateur try

TROON, Scotland (AP) — American courses are difficult, but playing them too often can get boring. British courses are difficult too but playing them can get frustrating. And there is a place in the world of golf for both types.

Such is the considered opinion of Frank W. Campbell Sr., a hearty grandfather from Huntsville, Ala., who came to Britain for the first time this year at age 52 and went further in the British Amateur than any other American.

He was eventually knocked out of the last 16 on Troon's testing and windswept links 3 and 2 by Gavin Levenson of South Africa who is 28 years his junior.

Campbell came here a fortnight ago and spent a week travelling the country and playing every course within sight. "Inland courses are much the same in both countries, but we've nothing like your seaside courses in the States," he said.

"It's a real challenge playing courses like Troon — we don't get anything like the wind you get here."

Campbell reckons the high spot of his record was reaching the final of the public course sector of the U.S. Amateur 18 years ago.

He was the last of 79 Americans to go out here. Before Levenson beat him, Campbell had already played a gruelling fourth-round match against Scotland's Peter Buchanan in the morning.

With him in the fourth round was Ted Ferguson, a 39-year-old oil executive of Midland, Texas, but Ferguson was beaten on the 18th by David Suddards of South Africa.

Two of the eight seeds were beaten Thursday. In the morning, Thierry Planchin of France defeated Gordon Murray of Scotland on the 18th hole after a hotly disputed rules decision.

NEW YORK (AP) — Affirmed will try to add another winning beat to the Triple Crown parade of the 1970s Saturday when he carries Boy Wonder Steve Cauthen over the 1½ miles of the Belmont Stakes against four other 3-year-olds, including Alydar.

Of the first eight winners of the Triple Crown — the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont — three were in the 1930s and four were in the 1940s. Then after Citation won in 1948 there was not another Triple Crown champion until Secretariat in 1973.

Four years after Secretariat, Seattle Slew accomplished the feat and, if Affirmed is successful, thoroughbred racing will have its first consecutive Triple Crown winners in history.

Affirmed is the early 3-5 favorite to succeed, but the Harbor View Farm colt is not expected to have nearly as easy a time as Secretariat and Seattle Slew, who were dominating winners of the Belmont.

Although Affirmed has beaten Alydar in six of eight meetings — including the Derby, by 1½ lengths, and the Preakness, by a neck — Alydar's trainer, John Veltech, said the Calumet Farm colt will be no broken-hearted challenger in the Belmont.

"Horses aren't like human athletes," said Veltech. "They don't psyche themselves out. He doesn't even think Alydar will recognize Affirmed as the horse who beat him in the Derby and Preakness."

However, Veltech and Alydar's backers might be hoping Alydar recognizes the Belmont Park track as the site of his only two victories over Affirmed — in the Great American and the Champagne last year.

Only three other colts were entered Thursday for the Belmont, and they were expected to battle for third and fourth money of $22,216 and $11,058. If five start the 110th Belmont will be worth $164,300, with $110,580 to the winner and $40,546 to the runnerup.

The other three entrants were Darby Creek Road, Noon Time Spender and Judge Advocate. Post time is 4:40 p.m. CDT with CBS to televise from 4-5 p.m.

Saturday's weather forecast calls for sun with a high of around 80.

A crowd of 70,000 — the record is 82,694 in 1971 when Canonero II failed to win the Triple Crown — is expected to watch the anticipated duel between Affirmed and Alydar, who is ridden by Jorge Velasquez.

"Affirmed has a lot of speed but he won't be able to use much of it early and have anything left," said Veltech, who added that Alydar will shadow Affirmed Saturday.

Laz Barrera said Affirmed will lay second.

Veltech doesn't expect Alydar, known as a stretch runner, to take the lead "unless they run slower than they should the first part." The trainer is taking the blinkers off Alydar in an effort to help him relax.

Barrera feels the Belmont is a gallop for the first part, but expects to see real speed in the closing stages and a typical Affirmed-Alydar fight to the wire.

"You're going to see the same race you saw in the Preakness," said Barrera. "They'll be battling at the end."

Affirmed, the 1977 2-year-old champion, goes into the Belmont with a record of 13 wins and two seconds in 15 career starts, and earnings of $1,023,227. He has won 11 stakes.

Alydar counts seven stakes among his nine victories. He also has six seconds, five of them to Affirmed, in 16 starts and earnings of $634,126.

The other three Belmont candidates total eight wins in 3

Bordley lives out dream in series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Many baseball players admit to boyhood dreams of pitching in a World Series game, but Bill Bordley is probably one of the few who thought about winning the College World Series.

"I've always wanted to be the winning pitcher in this," Bordley said after Southern California's 10-3 victory over Arizona State that gave the Trojans the NCAA baseball title Thursday night. "It's been since I was 14 or 15."

Bordley, 22, silenced one of the strongest hitting teams in college baseball to make his boyhood wish come true.

The Sun Devils, with three NCAA All-Americans on their roster who hold four NCAA batting records among them, were unable to get to Bordley until he fired in the eighth inning.

They pounced on him for three runs on four straight hits, and Jeff Schattinger came on in relief, but Trojan hitters already had put the Sun Devils away by putting 10 runs on the board.

"We were confident coming into the game," said Chris Bando, the only Sun Devil who felt like talking after the loss that took away Arizona State's NCAA title. Bando doubled home two of Arizona State's runs to bring to 102 the RBI he has this year — a national record.

"All our pitching was excellent," said USC Coach Ron Dedeaux, who lead his club in a rendition of "McNamara's Band," his favorite song, after the game.

"The key is that good pitching will stop good hitting. But we're aggressive and we are better hitters than most people think."

It was the 11th College World Series title for the Trojans, who returned to the championships after a three-year absence, and their 10th with Dedeaux at the helm.

USC went through the double-elimination tournament without a loss, although North Carolina, according to Dedeaux, "made us fight for our lives."

After Southern Cal beat Miami 9-3 and Michigan 11-3, Rod Boxberger tamed Arizona State 5-2 Tuesday night in a key contest when both clubs were undefeated.

The next evening, a scrappy Tar Heel club led by Greg Norris, who joined Bordley as an All-America pitcher, took a 2-0 lead over the Trojans and held it until the eighth inning before losing 3-2.

The Trojans battered three Arizona State pitchers for 16 hits in their romp to the series title Thursday night. Sun Devil starter Mitch Dean lasted 21-3 innings and their first of three relievers, Jerry Vasquez, managed 22-3.

USC scored three runs in the second inning, two in fifth, two more in the sixth and put the game away with three more in the eighth.

"Dean's arm did not feel good tonight, he was not strong," said Arizona State Coach Jim Brock. "Vasquez's arm was sore, like it has been all year."

"You can't take anything away from USC. They just kicked us," Brock said.

USC's Larry Fobbs drove in three runs with a double and a single, Dave Van Gorder brought two in with a single and a sacrifice fly and Dave Hostetler drove in two with a solo home run and a single.

Joining Hostetler with three hits for the Trojans was Tim Tolman, and Doug Stokke, Brown, Fobbs and Van Gorder each had two.

Did Dedeaux, the dean of college baseball coaches, expect his club to blow Arizona State away in the title game?

"No, certainly not. Not against a team of that caliber. You have to be fortunate to dominate a team as thoroughly as this," he said. "We just knew what it would take to win. We were not to be denied."

Borg's fiancée declares machine is very warm

PARIS (AP) — Swedish tennis king Bjorn Borg may be a merciless machine on court, but his fiancée Mariana Simionescu says that behind his icy exterior "he's very warm, kind and not tough."

"I think it's not true Borg is an iceberg," says Simionescu, a warm, traditional Romanian who plays on the women's tennis circuit. "You can't judge somebody by the way he plays. He is completely different in private life."

In an exclusive interview with The Associated Press, Borg and Simionescu talked of their life off court, their desire to marry in two years, their desire for children and their difficulties with the Romanian people over their decision to live together before marriage.

Whether speaking of tennis' glamorous groupies or Bjorn's new interest in reading history, the young couple laughed happily together Thursday following Borg's quarter-final victory over Mexico's Raul Ramirez, 6-3, 6-3, 6-0.

Borg, the favorite to win his third French Open crown, plays a semifinal match Saturday against Italy's Corrado Barazzutti, who beat No. 4-seeded Eddie Dibbs 6-2, 7-6, 6-1 in another match Thursday.

Dick Stockton and defending champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina square off in Saturday's other semifinal match.

It was here on the clay courts of Roland Garros Stadium that Borg first began courting Simionescu two years ago. "I never called him, he called me," Mariana confided with a laugh.

Borg said he finds the simplicity of his 21-year-old fiancée a refreshing change from the "beautiful people" on the circuit.

"I know which ones are my friends, which ones like me," the 22-year-old Swede said. "I've been around a long time. They go out with you because you're a superstar."

Mason nears qualifying

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — As the third round action of the PGA qualifying tournament got under way today, former University of Texas golf star Jim Mason remained in the top spot.

The 23-year-old from Kirkwood, Mo., fired a 70 Thursday to maintain a one stroke lead after two rounds.

Mason had tied the University of New Mexico South course record in Wednesday's opening round with a 7-under-par 65.

His two-round total of 136 was one stroke ahead of Wren Lum of Theodore, Ala., who had two rounds of 68 for a 136 total.

Dick Mast of St. Petersburg, Fla., who was in second after his first round 66, ballooned to a 78 in the second round. He was disqualified later for signing an incorrect scorecard.

Three strokes behind Lum at 139 were two golfers, Rocky Thompson of Brookston, Texas, and Mike McCumber of Jacksonville, Fla., had identical scores of 70 and 69 in the two rounds.

The day's best round belonged to Mike Bodney of Reno, Nev., who fired a 66 after an opening round 77.

"I'm having trouble with my driver," said Lum. "If I don't straighten it out pretty soon, I'm going to come in with some big numbers."

"With Sword Dance, my thinking was just to win a good race," Belmont said. "If he hadn't won the Met handily, I couldn't have run him against Belmont. With Arts and Letters, I really had and had to switch (Jean) Cruguet. But when I saw Arts and Letters was assigned 10 pounds, I thought he was a kick, it looked like a easy way to pick up a 100,000 purse. In both cases I believe winning the Met gave the horses a great deal of confidence for the Belmont."
