Fire Safety Alert Issued

The lingering hot, dry weather this summer has thrust the eastern two-thirds of Texas into extremely dangerous wildland fire conditions. With no break in sight, the Texas Forest Service issued a fire safety alert urging all citizens to do their part in preventing potentially catastrophic fires in the state.

Fire Risk Assessment Coordinator Tom Spencer warned that the extreme conditions could be hazardous to firefighters and the general public

"Wildland fires burning under these conditions can be expected to grow larger, burn hotter, be harder to put out and threaten more lives and property than what we normally experience," Spencer said. "This is a very serious situation."

The Texas Forest Service is encouraging citizens to avoid all activities that could lead to the accidental start of a wildland fire, and to avoid getting close to any wildland fire.

Because of potentially explosive fire behavior, Spencer urged firefighters to consider other methods of firefighting than a direct attack to the head of the fire.

"Volunteer firefighters are encouraged not to use direct attack tactics when responding to a fire exhibiting extreme fire behavior," he said. "Instead, use natural

Bacteria In Your Water

(Part 4 of 5)

Although most micro-organisms in water are harmless, some can cause problems. Bacteria, viruses, and parasites in drinking water pose the most serious health threat. Bacteria from human or livestock waste can cause serious health problems such as dysentery, hepatitis, and typhoid fever. Bacteriological tests detect coliform bacteria, which do not cause disease but are present with other organisms that do.

Chlorination and filtration effectively control the level of bacteria in water supplies. The EPA closely regulates the chlorination of municipal water supplies. Chlorine reacts in surface water with certain organic compounds that result from decaying vegetation and produces compounds known as trihalomethanes (THMs).

THMs are the most common organic component found in chlorinated water supplies and several of them are known to cause cancer in laboratory animals. Cities regulate THM levels in municipal water supplies. Private well owners who chlorinate their well water should follow correct procedures.

If you choose to participate in the Borden County Rural Water Well Screening your water sample will be tested to see if bacteria is present and whether it is fecal or E.coli or other form of bacteria is present in your water.

If another form of bacteria other than fecal or E.coli is present then more extensive testing might be a consideration of the sample. This type of testing would most likely need to be performed by a private water-testing lab.

2000 Coyote Football News

Dawson Dragon Scrimmage

On Friday, August 25th, the Borden County Coyote football team traveled to Welch to scrimmage the Dawson Dragons. The Coyotes did very well scoring 3 touchdowns in just 30 snaps of the ball. The Dragons scored on the Coyotes twice in their 30 plays. It was a good scrimmage for the Coyotes. We were finally able to line up and hit someone else for the first time this season. The Coyotes took the ball first and on their first play T.J. Sharp carried the ball 50 yards to the Dragon 10-yard line. T.J. later scored a touchdown for the Coyotes from 4 yards out. Jacob Zant scored a TD by catching a T.J. Sharp pass, and Raul Rodriguez scored for the Coyotes by running a sweep 60 yards for a touchdown.

Jayton Jaybird Scrimmage

On Thursday, August 31st, the Coyotes hosted the Jayton Jaybirds for the second scrimmage of the season. It was Meet the Coyote Night and everyone enjoyed a nice pleasant evening of football, ice cream and cookies at the Coyote practice field. The Coyotes moved the ball all over the field on the Jaybirds but did not get the ball into the end zone with the varsity. Andy Lozano was the only Coyote that scored. When the junior varsity squads took the field, Andy Lozano found pay dirt from six inches out. Even though the Coyote varsity squad did not score, there were some bright spots in the evening. The Coyotes kept the Jaybirds from scoring for their first 18 plays. On their 19th snap of the ball the Jaybirds finally reached the end zone. The Varsity squad finished the scrimmage with Jayton scoring 3 times and the Coyotes not scoring. The Jaybirds should be a play-off team. They have a lot of seniors returning from last year with a lot of varsity experience. Coach Avery said, "We did a very good job holding our own against an experienced club".

The Coyotes will travel to Trent next Friday, Sept. 8th to play the Gorillas beginning at 7:30 p.m. Come out and help get a Great Coyote Winning Season started.

Imported Fire Ant Control Considerations at the Edge of the Infestation

Believe it or not, the imported fire ant does not occur throughout the entire state of Texas. They are predominately found in the eastern two-thirds of the state, with spot-infestations in several west and south Texas areas (El Paso, Lubbock, Midland and Ector Counties). The distribution map of fire ants in Texas can be viewed on the web site, <http://fireant.tamu.edu> under "maps". Along the leading edges of the infestation and in west Texas spot infestations, the most appropriate steps to battle this pest are different than those commonly used in heavily-infested areas.

Along the leading edges of the fire ant infestation or in isolated spot infestations, there are often just a few imported fire ant colonies and a high number of native competitor ant species. In these areas, or any areas where there are 20 or fewer fire ant mounds per acre (about 4 to 5 mounds or less per 1/4 acre yard), a better approach for controlling the fire ants is to treat them with some type of ant mound treatment. These treatments are applied to individual anthills using one of the liquid, dust, granular or bait formulated products that kill the ants more quickly. This method spares native competitor ant species because the treatments are applied only to undesirable imported fire ant mounds.

Where imported fire ants are numerous (20 or more ant mounds per acre), the Texas Agricultural Extension Service promotes the "Two-Step Method" of fire ant control. This product like Amdro, Extengish, Aard, Eliminator or Septracide ant baits. Using a hand-held seeder or similar device, the bait particles are evenly scattered across the whole yard where foraging worker ants find them and bring them back to the nest to feed to the whole colony. Using this method, 80 to 90 percent of the ant mounds are eliminated over time by the bait treatments. Only "nuisance" ant mounds are treated individually as needed between broadcast bait treatments as the second step in the "Two-Step Method." The main goal of the "Two-Step Method" is to reduce the use of high volumes of insecticides and labor required to treat each and every ant mound.

Unfortunately, some of the broadcast-applied bait products may also kill non-target ant species. Some of these native ants compete with imported fire ants for food and nesting sites, or prey on queen ants trying to start new colonies. As such, they are considered to be our best line of defense by providing biological resistance to heavy fire ant infestations, and are worth preserving whenever possible.

Saving Cans Saves Cats—And Dogs

(NAPS)—An increasing number of people are helping homeless animals—in a surprising way: by recycling aluminum cans.

When you recycle aluminum cans, you can help animal shelters as well as the environment.

Through a program called Paws to Recycle, animal shelters and other non-profit animal organizations get paid for every pound of used aluminum cans they take in. The shelters also get free Friskies cat and dog food and we all get a cleaner environment, with landfills that are not quite as full.

Shelters can register for the campaign by calling 1-800-646-PAWS. You can call the same number to find the nearest participating shelters.

"When moderate winds are present, be aware that a fire might switch directions on you, and what was the side of a fire could become the head fire. Use extreme caution when approaching all fires, as the potential is present for them to get big quick."

In an effort to prevent wildfires, 174 Texas counties had implemented outdoor burning bans as of Sept. 1. While lightning has caused some of the fires in Texas, many of the fires have been human-caused. Two suspected arsonists were arrested in Parker County after allegedly starting 12 fires in the area.
