Deposits, loans up in fourth quarter of '84

By SUSAN LINDSEY
Business-Oil Writer

Although fourth-quarter growth is normal, Midland bankers say the quarter's increase in deposits and loans brought additional growth and stability to the local economy.

Deposits totaled $1.7 billion by fourth quarter's end on Dec. 31. This is an increase of about $245,000 from the previous quarter's $1.5 billion. Total loans edged to $810 million from $801 million in the third quarter.

Fourth quarter 1984 loans were also up $135 million from the fourth quarter 1983 figure of $1.6 billion. Total loans in the final quarter of 1984 increased $226 million from the 1983 fourth quarter total of $584 million.

It should be noted, however, that Community National Bank and Texas Commerce Bank were opened during 1984 and are not part of the 1983 figures. The banks are included in the 1984 final quarter figures.

The quarterly and yearly increases, which follow 1983's stormy bank failures and acquisitions by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., represent confidence in the economy and the stability of local banks, according to reports. However, bankers seem to have different reasons for the growth.

Steve Holt, senior vice president cashier of Midland American Bank, said he is pleased with his bank's growth. "We increased about 8.1 percent in deposits," he said.

Bob Craig, comptroller for Western State Bank, said his bank's growth is due to customer confidence. "We get new accounts every day and half of those are from referrals," he said. "It's been a super year for us."

Ed Jones, president of Texas Commerce Bank, said his bank tripled in deposits during the fourth quarter because of a surge in new customers. "Our customer base has been drawing from businesses on all sides of the community," he said.

Texas Commerce opened July 23, 1984, more than three weeks into the third quarter.

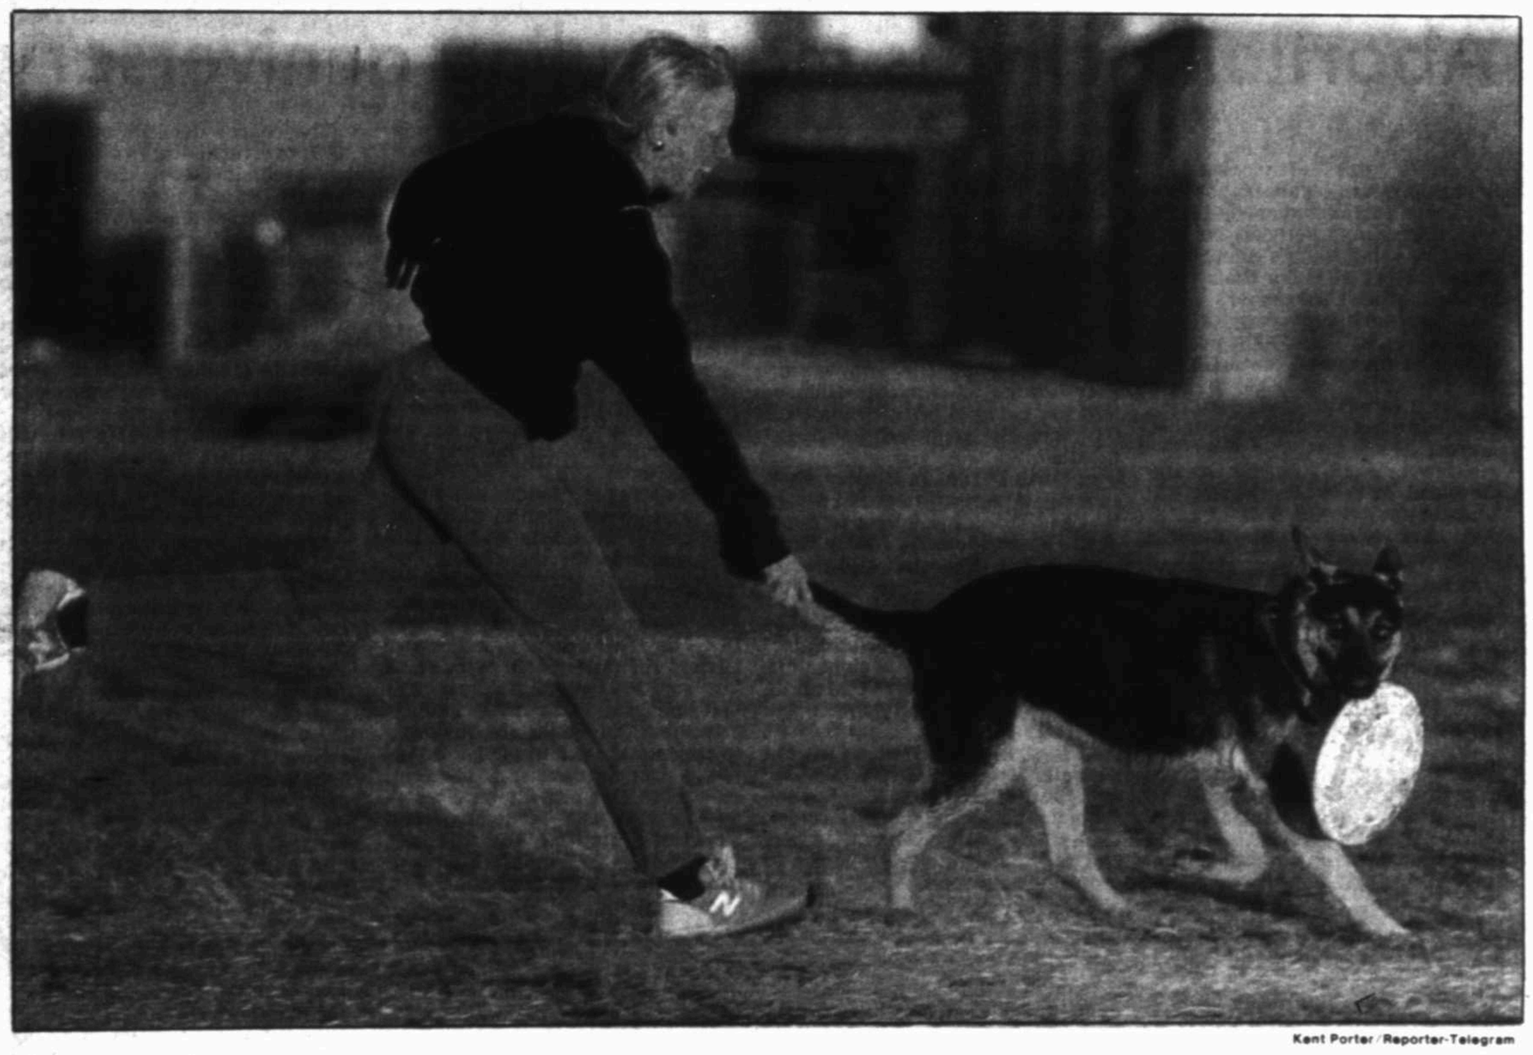

"We like to think our growth was because of our service," said Liz Harrell, vice president cashier for Community National Bank. She said the bank has grown every quarter since its opening Jan. 3, 1984.

"We offer a service that has never been available on this (south) side of town before. People respond to the bank's convenience," she said.

United Bank President Don Jones said interest in the recapitalization of the bank's predecessor, Metro Bank, prompted his bank's growth.

"Composition of the bank board, new shareholders and a very aggressive marketing campaign contributed the bulk of the growth," he said.

Economists: GNP has biggest jump in three decades

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy, as a proud President Reagan proclaimed prematurely, grew at the fastest rate in more than three decades last year, the Commerce Department confirmed today.

The department said the gross national product — the broadest measure of economic health — grew 6.8 percent for all of 1984. That was the best showing since an 8.3 percent rise in 1951.

Despite the rapid growth, inflation remained low. A price index tied to the GNP showed an inflation rate of 3.7 percent last year, the best performance since a 3 percent rise in 1967.

The president, who got an advance look at the statistics, tantalized Republican supporters at several inaugural balls Monday night by hinting that the 1984 growth was the best in three decades while inflation had remained under control.

"I'm not at liberty to tell you what they'll say," Reagan said of the statistics, "but one will be the best since 1951 and the other will be the best since 1967."

The double-barreled good news further fueled economists' optimistic predictions that 1985 will turn in a better performance than many had expected just a short time ago.

That optimism was fueled by evidence that the economy has rebounded from a sharp slowdown in the late summer and early fall.

Today's report put GNP growth in the final three months of 1984 at an annual rate of 3.9 percent. This was a strong upward revision from last month's preliminary estimate of a 2.8 percent growth rate.

The 3.9 percent growth more than doubled the weak 1.6 percent rate turned in from July through September.

But both quarters turned in lower rates than the breakneck pace the economy maintained through the first half of 1984. In the first quarter, the GNP grew at a rate of 10.1 percent; second quarter growth was 7.1 percent.

When growth slowed so dramatically in the third quarter, some economists worried that the two-year-old recovery was in danger of toppling into a recession.

But today's GNP report, coupled with earlier economic statistics showing a pronounced rebound in November and December, quieted those fears.

Democrats praise bipartisan tone of inaugural address

WASHINGTON (AP) — Launching his final four years as president with an appeal for "new boldness," Ronald Reagan has won promises from some members of Congress to help stop the arms race and reduce the huge federal deficits.

But congressional Democrats are warning that the president's initiatives on both the budget and defense could face a reception on Capitol Hill as chilly as the winds that forced Monday's inaugural ceremonies indoors.

Democratic leaders praised Reagan for striking a conciliatory, bipartisan note in his second inaugural address. But they criticized the president's mention of his proposed anti-missile defense and his call for a balanced federal budget in the face of $200 billion federal deficits.

"It was nice rhetoric, but if he had to comply with his own call for a balanced budget, the government would have to shut down today," said Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

A chill of another kind — frigid air and strong winds — forced cancellation of the traditional inaugural parade down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House and moved the swearing-in ceremonies indoors. It was the first time since 1833 that brutally cold weather had forced cancellation of the festivities.

"Let history say of us, these were golden years — when the American Revolution was reborn, when freedom gained new life and America reached for her best," Reagan told a crowd of about 1,000 VIPs crammed into the Capitol Rotunda.

Speaking later in the day in a suburban sports arena to thousands of disappointed band members, Reagan said: "You would have been the greatest show on Earth."

A round of nine inaugural balls and scores of private parties culminated four days of inaugural festivities in the nation's capital.

Matching the jubilant mood of Washington, the New York stock market closed 34 points higher on Monday.

Reagan delivered his inaugural address without benefit of a Teleprompter — unusual for a major presidential address — and bad acoustics in the 95-foot-diameter circular room under the Capitol dome prevented many of those in attendance from hearing his remarks.

However, the address was broadcast nationally, as was Reagan's official oath-taking at a White House ceremony attended by only a small group of government officials and invited guests the day before.

Reagan's speech was solemn and, at times, poetic.

Six Midlanders to lose jobs when comptroller's office closes

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — The state comptroller's office in Midland is one of seven to be closed across Texas resulting in the unemployment of 104 persons — six in Midland, Comptroller Bob Bullock said Monday.

The closings are part of an effort to "help the state meet its budget crisis," according to Bullock's office.

Bullock said the closings and layoffs will center on agency functions not directly tied to tax collecting.

"We're eliminating services such as bookkeeping assistance to local governments; research for other state agencies, cities and chambers of commerce, and taxpayer publications," Bullock said.

Estimates indicate that state government revenues over the next two budget years will fall about $1 billion short of current spending. Gov. Mark White has asked all state agency directors to cut costs wherever possible to help head off a tax increase.

In addition to the Midland office, Bullock said offices in Brownwood, Greenville, Texarkana, Alpine, Kerrville and Del Rio would be closed. The audit office in Atlanta, Ga., will be closed and its staff merged with other out-of-state audit offices, he said.

Bullock also said clerical positions throughout his agency would be automated whenever possible.

"We are combining as many jobs as possible so that the employees who remain will be able to work more efficiently," he said.

Gary Hughes, executive director of the Texas Public Employees Association, said it is unfair that state employees are losing their jobs because of reductions in state governments and state expenditures.

"I had no idea that these kind of reductions would be necessary this early in the game. A similar situation in all agencies and universities in the next few months may become a reality unless hiring halts are observed," Hughes said.

Bullock, who announced an unspecified number of layoffs in his 2,700-member department last week, Monday said he would assist those who are leaving to find other jobs.

"We're giving these people the most we can in the way of termination benefits," he said.

"We will notify employers of the talent we're letting go. We'll help these people with courses in job hunting, with preparing their resumes, letters of recommendation and advertising to let the major employers of our state know there are some top-notch people available," he said.

Texas American to open facility in old TESCO building

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Texas American Bank will be opening an "additional facility" downtown in the building refurbished into an 1890s bank at a cost of $1 million by the former First National Bank of Midland and then left vacant.

The announcement came today during a news conference at the site of the former Texas Electric Service Co. building, southwest corner of Colorado and Texas streets.

That structure is owned by Jack Wilkinson, who has offered to let the city purchase it for $1.1 million. Midland City Council decided earlier this month to consider purchasing it with certificates of obligation but had stipulated there would be no sale if they could not find a tenant for a longterm lease. Mayor G. Thane Akins has said it could be used for additional city offices when space runs out at City Hall.

Whether or not the building becomes city property, Texas American Bank will be the main tenant, signing a 10-year lease with a five-year option to the first floor and basement, according to a bank spokesman.

The 1890-style bank featuring roll-top desks, brass teller cages and a shoeshine parlor will open in early March, according to a news release from Texas American Bank. Texas American will continue to operate from the main bank located at the intersection of Wall and Andrews Highway. The new facility, which will offer full banking services, complies with the 10,500 foot limit on second banking facilities, said the bank spokesman.

"The additional location will enable us to offer more convenience to our current customers while making us more effective in reaching the corporate middle market that offices downtown," said Charles Grimes, chairman and chief executive officer of TAB/Midland.

The 13,000-square-foot office was restored to look like a turn-of-the-century bank but was never occupied after FNB failed in October 1983.

MIDLAND CENTENNIAL 1885-1985

WEATHER SUMMARY
Midland's temperatures expected to get warmer

Midlanders will feel warmer temperatures Wednesday as afternoon temperatures are expected to reach the mid-50s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight will be partly cloudy and cold with lows in the mid-20s, becoming mostly cloudy Wednesday. Light and variable winds tonight will blow from the south to southwest at 10 to 15 mph Wednesday.

Monday's high of 38 was 46 degrees below the record set in 1974. This morning's low of 19 was 17 degrees above the record of 2 set in 1966.

STATE

A persistent high-pressure dome of cold, dry air kept skies clear over most of Texas today, sending temperatures plummeting again in the wake of an Arctic cold front's passage, but forecasters predicted a slight warming trend.

Only some low cloudiness in the lower Rio Grande Valley marred the otherwise fair skies, with patchy drizzle reported in extreme South Texas. Some low-level Gulf moisture was present along coastal sections.

Low temperatures ranged from the low to mid 20s to mid to upper 30s over southern portions of the Lone Star State. Extremes were Lubbock with 18 degrees and Brownsville with 40 degrees.

The National Weather Service reported other readings at 5 a.m. as 24 degrees at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport; 26 at Abilene; and 23 at El Paso and San Antonio.

Other temperatures were 25 degrees at Waco; 21 at Wichita Falls, Stephenville and Midland; 20 at Amarillo; 27 at Austin; 37 at Corpus Christi and 22 at San Angelo.

NATION

Snow spread over sections of the East and West today as record-breaking low temperatures warmed slightly in parts of the eastern third of the nation.

Warnings for heavy snow and strong, gusty winds were posted in north central and western New York. Warnings of gale-force winds were issued for the Great Lakes and along the coasts of New England and South Carolina.

Snow-prompted travelers' warnings were posted for southeastern New York, northern New Jersey, western Pennsylvania, northern Ohio, northern Colorado, south central Wyoming and much of Utah.

Midlander hospitalized after wreck

From Staff Reports

A 56-year-old Midland woman was in critical care at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital this morning after a two-vehicle accident at 9:20 p.m. Monday.

Betty Jo Emfinger of Route A, Box 56-EM-51, was in guarded condition this morning, according to the Department of Public Safety.

She was injured when she collided with a vehicle driven by Kimberly Ann Crawford, 29, of Kermit. Ms. Crawford was treated and released for a broken finger at Medical Center Hospital, a DPS spokeswoman said.

According to reports, Ms. Emfinger was driving a 1972 Chevrolet pickup north on FM 1936. Ms. Crawford, who had the right-of-way, was headed west on State Highway 302 in a 1984 Jeep Suburban when she struck the pickup on the front right side, DPS reports said.

The accident was investigated by DPS Trooper Luis Carrillo.

GROWTH

Charles Grimes, chairman and chief executive officer of Texas American Bank, said another reason for growth is seasonally higher deposits during the fourth quarter.

"We normally have growth in the fourth quarter and we build up deposits," he said, adding that the first quarter is also seasonally the lowest period of the year.

David Jones, president of ClayDesta National Bank, said the recovering oil market also has played a major role in the growing economy this quarter.

He said his bank did well in 1984 because money is being invested in the Midland market again. "We had a good 1984. We had 29 percent growth in deposits and we exceeded net income of 1983."

While bankers were pleased with deposits, some were dissatisfied with loan activity in the fourth quarter.

"Loan demand has not been what it was last year. It's been rather flat," said Jim McCain, president and chief executive officer of Security National Bank.

Jim Foster, comptroller at RepublicBank First National Bank, said loans at his institution were "reasonable because of the change in the bank last October."

The bank succeeded failed First National Bank after its collapse Oct. 14, 1983.

Foster said the bank had not consumated the bulk of loans from the FDIC by the end of the 1983 fourth quarter.

However, Bill Franklin president of First City was pleased with loans. He said he expects the bank's loans to stay stable in the first quarter of 1985 but he expects a drop in deposits.

"We'll see the normal runoff in the first quarter. The level of activity is higher during the fourth quarter," he said.

"Loans will stay stable throughout the first quarter. They will reflect the same totals recorded at year-end," agreed Grimes.

McCain said he expects an increase in both loans and deposits at Security National during the first quarter because of the recent cuts in the prime lending rate.

Security National showed a decrease in deposits from the third quarter. The other banks showed increases.

Showing increases in loan activity were ClayDesta, Western, Republic Midland, United, Community National, Midland American and Texas Commerce. Showing decreases were RepublicBank First National, First City, Texas American and Security National.

RepublicBank First National led the other banks with total deposits of $707 million and total loans of $247 million. This was a quarterly decrease of $5.2 million in loans and an increase of $80 million in deposits.

First City National followed with $445 million in deposits and $261 million in loans for the quarter. The bank saw a decrease in loans of $2.5 million and an increase of $51 million in deposits.

Also growing was Texas American Bank with $151 million in deposits and $80 million in loans. Last quarter, the bank reported deposits of $137 million and loans of $86 million.

ClayDesta showed an increase of $7 million in deposits this quarter with its fourth quarter figure of $119 million over last period's $112 million. Loans increased from $61 million to $64 million.

Reporting a stable quarter was Western Bank. It had deposits totaling $88 million and loans of $71 million during the fourth quarter. The previous quarter, the bank reported deposits of $86 million and loans of $71 million.

RepublicBank Midland reached total deposits of $72 million and loans of $12 million, compared to $72 million in deposits during the third quarter and $13 million in loans.

Seeing a drastic change during the quarter in deposits was United Bank, which grew from $37 million in deposits to $88 million. The bank's loans were $25 million during the third quarter and $38 million during the fourth. During the fourth quarter of 1983, the bank reported $23 million in deposits and $7 million in loans.

Security National reported a $606,000 decrease in deposits this quarter, making its total $13 million compared to the previous quarter's $14 million. The bank also dropped in loans from $10 million to $8.6 million.

Community National continued to show increases in loans and deposits. The bank reached $21 million in deposits compared to $15 million the previous period and $7 million in loans. The bank also reported $7 million in loans during the third quarter.

Midland American also saw an increase in deposits and loans this quarter. The bank reported deposits of $8.8 million and loans of $7.4 million. During the third quarter the bank had deposits of $8.1 million and loans of $7.1 million.

Also showing a large amount of growth was Texas Commerce Bank which reported deposits of $27 million compared to last quarter's $ million. The bank opened three weeks into the third quarter. Last quarter, the bank had $2 million of loans. This quarter, it revealed $ million.

Abortion activists mark ruling anniversary

Twelve years after the U.S. Supreme Court legalized abortion the issue remains surrounded by controversy, and activists on both sides are using today's anniversary of the ruling to make their point throught protest and prayer.

In Cleveland, supporters of legalized abortion planned a potluck supper at Cleveland State University, where they will listen to music and write letters to elected officials thanking them for their continued support.

A few blocks away, the Greater Cleveland Right-to-Life chapter will hold its annual "Respect of Life" memorial service at the Masonic Temple auditorium.

While the Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights in Kansas holds a prayer breakfast, members of Kansans for Life plan to picket outside. The anti-abortion group also will be at the statehouse tonight handing out red roses to legislators and talking to them about right-to-life positions.

In Washington, demonstrators were to gather before noon today on the Ellipse a quarter of a mile from the White House before beginning their annual March for Life to the steps of the Supreme Court on Capitol Hill. Before the march, President Reagan was to address them on a loudspeaker hookup from the Oval Office.

Activists on both sides said that in commemorating the anniversary they wanted to avoid the violence that has haunted the abortion issue with increasing regularity in recent months.

In North Dakota on Monday, abortion rights supporters ended a vigil that had lasted more than 60 hours at the Fargo Women's Health Organization, but clinic staff said a security guard would remain on duty to ward off any vandalism.

Three men were arrested Saturday in connection with eight anti-abortion bombings in Washington, D.C., Virginia and Maryland in the past year.

At least 24 such bombing attacks have occurred since last January, and the National Organization for Women sponsored round-the-clock vigils at 25 family planning centers and abortion clinics in 18 states to protest the violence.

One was held at the Ladies Center and the temporary office of Dr. Bo Bagenholm in Pensacola, Fla. The center and Bagenholm's former clinic were both bombed Dec. 25.

Women holding a vigil outside the Hollywood Feminist Women's Health Center in Los Angeles said they planned to keep watch at least through today.

Protesters met Monday at a building under contruction in Oklahoma City. Anti-abortionists said the site will contain an abortion clinic.

Security was increased at the Pilgrim Medical Group in Montclair, N.J. "We're going to have guards three days a week now, and we've advised the staff that they can't be lax," said Joe DeBlasi, a security and personnel consultant at the clinic.

"I think the bombs are obviously to create fear for a whole lot of people — women who seek services, personnel who provide services — and that is deeply saddening," said Sarah Weddington, the attorney who argued the landmark case of Jane Roe before the Supreme Court.

The court's decision on Jan. 22, 1973, overturned a Texas law that had prohibited abortions except to save the life of a mother.

Ms. Weddington, who was President Jimmy Carter's special assistant for women's issues, now represents Texas Gov. Mark White in Washington.

Protests were planned today at various statehouses around the nation. In Trenton, N.J., 50 members of the state chapter of Feminists for Life will stage a demonstration.

Anti-Abortion Pro-Life Inc. will have members meet at the statehouse in Oklahoma City to distribute red roses in memory of unborn children.

A march by anti-abortion forces is planned at the Georgia Capitol in Atlanta. Gov. Joe Frank Harris was to meet with demonstrators when they arrived to present them with a proclamation declaring today "Respect for Life Day" in Georgia.

Arizona NOW members will demonstrate at the state capitol and lobby legislators against further laws restricting abortion.

NOW members in Philadelphia plan a candlelight vigil at the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul to protest the Roman Catholic church's involvement in the anti-abortion movement.

REAGAN

"We live in a world lit by lightning. So much is changing and will change, but so much endures and transcends time," Reagan said.

"We must think anew and move with new boldness, so every American who seeks work can find work; so the least among us have an equal chance to achieve the greatest things — to be heroes who heal our sick, feed the hungry, protect peace among nations and leave this world a better place," Reagan said.

"Our goal must be to bring those wonderful words to life by reducing the threat of nuclear war and by ensuring justice and opportunity for all our people," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., Reagan's chief congressional critic in his first term.

"He touched all the bases," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan. "He wasn't going after anyone. He was talking about healing and union."

U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas, said, "President Reagan, in an eloquent and inspiring speech, reaffirmed the vision he so clearly presented to the American people four years ago. Proud of the achievements of his first term, confident that his goals are not only right but fair, he has pledged a continuation of the new beginning and I pledge my support for his efforts.

"The key to the president's thrust is that there must be further government austerity so that every American can enjoy individual prosperity. We absolutely must reduce the deficit. In addition, we must not just reduce but eventually eliminate nuclear weapons. This is the president's dream and it's something he can achieve."

But while the tone of Reagan's speech was applauded, congressional Democrats expressed skepticism over its contents.

In particular, Reagan's advocacy for a defense against space-borne weapons — his so-called "Star Wars" plan — drew criticism from Democrats.

"I have approved a research program to see if a security shield can be developed that will destroy nuclear missiles before they reach their target. Such a shield would not kill people but destroy weapons; it would not militarize space, but help demilitarize the arsenals of earth," Reagan said.

"Obviously this issue will raise controversies. There is not unanimous support for Reagan's view," said assistant House Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash. However, Foley pledged "to work with the president to find whatever common ground we can."

Reagan said he would "shortly submit a budget to the Congress aimed at freezing government program spending for the next year." In addition, he reiterated his support for a constitutional amendment to balance the federal budget, saying "Let us make it unconstitutional for the federal government to spend more than it take in."

Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., said: "President Reagan gave a lukewarm inaugural address — warmer than the 10-degree Washington weather, but chilling — since his remarks were out of touch with the reality of an endangered economy."

GNP

"There is a strong process of renewed growth going on in the economy," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman-American Express. "What is emerging is a pattern of stronger-than-expected real economic growth and less-than-expected inflation, reminiscent of the performance during much of last year."

The report, which showed growth climbing in the final three months of the year, indicated no signs of a re-emergence of inflation. Prices rose at an annual rate of 2.4 percent in the final three months of the year, down from a rate of 3.9 percent in the third quarter. This inflation index measures not only changes in prices but in the composition of goods being purchased.

The rebound in growth during the fourth quarter was attributed to a large increase in final sales that more than offset a sharp decline in the growth of business inventories.

The decline in inventory investment of $16.4 billion at an annual rate was the largest drop since the final three months of 1982.

Personal consumer spending was also up sharply, rising at an annual rate of 3.9 percent in the final three months of the year, compared to a small 0.7 percent increase turned in during the third quarter. A slump in consumer spending has been blamed in large part for the slowdown last year.

With a report last week that Americans' personal income rose sharply in December, economists expect consumer spending will provide further momentum for the economy.

All the GNP figures are adjusted to remove the effects of inflation from the calculations.

Total GNP, before that adjustment, rose $57.9 billion to a record rate of $3.752 trillion in the fourth quarter of 1984. After adjustment for inflation, the fourth quarter increase would be $15.9 billion, to a rate of $1.661 trillion.

"We are especially pleased to bring life to this historic facility during Midland's Centennial year," Grimes said. "Our new lobby really projects the turn-of-the-century atmosphere, and we believe the entire community will enjoy it." The bank's decor features 10 brass teller cages, authentic spittoons, a shoeshine parlor and other antique pieces in the style of 1890 Midland.

Wilkinson said, "We're very glad to have them in the downtown area and we're glad to have them as a tenant."

Texas American Bank is Midland's third oldest and largest bank and is a member of Texas American Bancshares Inc. (NYSE symbol: TXA) with total assets of $6 billion and 32 member banks across the state. As of Dec. 31, 1984, Texas American Bank/Midland recorded total assets of $161 million and total deposits of $151 million.

Cold causes at least 101 deaths, freezes Florida oranges

Associated Press

A massive block of arctic cold already blamed for at least 101 deaths boxed in the eastern third of the nation today after freezing Florida oranges as hard as baseballs, pushing the mercury to records lows and playing a role in the collision of two commuter trains in Indiana.

Snow emergencies were declared in several Ohio counties and in the Buffalo, N.Y., area. Gusting winds made many roads impassable. In Buffalo, 27 inches of snow was on the ground or blowing around today.

"It's all upside down," said Harry Gordon at the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., noting the temperature at International Falls, Minn., often the nation's coldest spot, was 3 degrees warmer than the 9 recorded early today in Nashville, Tenn.

Farmers in Florida, Georgia, Texas and Louisiana feared for their crops. Officials in Florida said they expected "significant" losses from the bitter cold that has chilled the East since the weekend.

In Philadelphia, Mayor Wilson Goode ordered police to take any homeless people on the streets past 4 p.m. to shelters. Paterson, N.J. Mayor Frank Graves ordered people found on the streets to be housed and fed in the city's new detention center, nearly empty because "in this bitter cold weather, crime is at its lowest."

Many utilities strained under an increased load and tens of thousands of people lost power temporarily on Monday in at least 10 states from Michigan to Alabama.

Schools in parts of at least five states from North Carolina to Pennsylvania were closed today for a second day in a row.

More than 80 records were set Monday in the Southeast and East for the coldest temperature for the date. Twenty of those were also the coldest temperatures ever recorded, including 4 below zero in Athens, Ga., and 16 below zero in Asheville, N.C. Another two cities equalled their coldest reading ever.

The temperature plunged to 22 degrees below zero early Monday in Beckley, W.Va. New Orleans, where it chilled to 14, was just one degree warmer than Fairbanks, Alaska.

The 30 degrees below zero recorded at Mountain Lake was "the all-time low temperature recorded in Virginia any time, any place," said climatologist Patrick Michaels of the University of Virginia.

Weather-related deaths — including those from traffic accidents on icy roads, exposure and fires blamed on makeshift heaters — were reported in 20 states since Friday, when the storms began.

Brazil on road to successful satellite launching

SAO JOSE DOS CAMPOS, Brazil (AP) — It was a brief 15-minute, 380-mile suborbital flight, but for Brazilian scientists the successful launch of a two-stage, homemade Sonda IV rocket was a turning point in the country's 19-year-old space program.

In theory, it also meant that Brazil might be on the road toward a nuclear-missile capability, although officials maintain this is not their intent.

Their aim, they say, is to produce an orbital vehicle for technological satellites.

The 36-foot, seven-ton, solid-fuel Sonda IV went up Nov. 21 from the Barreira do Inferno (Hell's Gate) space center in the northeastern state of Rio Grande do Norte, near the equator, where gravitational pull is at a minimum.

"The Sonda IV proved we are going in the right direction toward developing our own satellite launching vehicle," Jayme Boscov, project manager of the government's space activities institute, said in an interview at his office in this southeastern city.

The institute, one of several research and development centers of the Brazilian air force's Aerospace Technical Center, coordinates this country's space program.

Boscov, 52, said the $1.3 million Sonda IV, which took 10 years to develop, "allowed us to test the systems, components and the technology needed to build a satellite launcher."

He said the most important items tested during the Sonda IV flight were the telecommunications systems, electronic components, flight control mechanisms, propellants and high resistance steel.

Boscov said Brazil's first satellite launcher is expected to be ready by 1990, "the same year in which we hope to launch our own meteorological and earth observation satellites."

"The earth observation satellite will be useful to detect mineral deposits and predict agricultural harvests," he added.

Brazil currently purchases these services supplied by the American Landsat satellite.

Asked if a country with the capacity to build a satellite launcher would be able to build a rocket capable of carrying a nuclear warhead, Boscov said, "I cannot deny that the basic technology we have dominated can eventually be applied to a variety of other purposes, but the objective of our work is strictly civilian."

"New and totally different techniques would have to be developed to adapt the rockets we have produced to carry nuclear weapons and these techniques are not being developed at the institute," he added.

The Aerospace Technical Center, also one of the country's most important nuclear research sites, is working on ways to enrich uranium which would give Brazil the capacity to build an atomic bomb.

Gen. Hugo de Oliveira Piva of the air force, director of the center, has sai

And Brazil hopes to master uranium enrichment technology by 1990, when the satellite launcher is expected to be ready, but has denied any plans of building a bomb.

For Boscov, who heads a team of 1,000 at the Space Activities Institute, Brazil is justified in having what he described as a modest space program.

Data about Jewish life on computer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — When rabbis want to verify an obscure point of Jewish religious law, they now can turn to a computer instead of another rabbi.

The computer rabbi is the brainchild of Bar Ilan University, Israel's only university dedicated to advancing Jewish religious study and modern science.

The program is called the "Responsa Project" — after the 3,000 large volumes of responsa, or questions and answers on religious matters. The computer version consists of a data base containing 250 volumes — 50 million words — of rabbinical statements and judgments on legal questions.

The 50,000 legal questions and answers stored so far are also a treasure of information on Jewish life in Europe and North Africa from the Middle Ages to the 20th century.

The project organizers plan to store at least 500 of the 3,000 volumes of responsa on discs.

A scholar can learn almost anything about the development of Jewish community life through the centuries. The system has been used by family and commercial lawyers, historians, economists, musicologists, linguists and sociologists even more than by rabbis.

To test the computer, a reporter asked when smoking first became a legal issue in Jewish history.

The computer responded with a case from the 18th century in which Rabbi Nissim Mizrahi of Jerusalem responded to a question by a nicotine addict. The addict asked whether he could relieve his suffering on the Sabbath, when smoking is forbidden, by inhaling smoke from the cigarette of a gentile friend. Mizrahi said he could, but he could not ask the friend to smoke.

"You can find information in 10 minutes that would take months of research with books or a concordance," said Professor Jacob Klein of the department of Hebrew and Semitic languages at the university near Tel Aviv. "I have students who are writing doctoral theses which could not be written without it."

Klein has just begun learning how to use the computer after being recently convinced that it was not a faddish toy.

Ultra-Orthodox rabbis were somewhat skeptical about allowing a computer to have the last word in religious disputations. But the country's respected former chief rabbi, Ovadiah Yosef, gave it his blessing when seven volumes of his responsa were fed into the computer file.

To complete the project's storehouse of information the organizers have also computerized the Hebrew Bible, the Babylonian Talmud commentaries on the Bible, and modern Hebrew novels based on religious themes.

"I think this is unique. Pretty much the whole of our culture is on computer," said project director Yaacov Choueka.

Lawyers are the main users of the computer facilties. Under a four-year-old law, Israeli secular courts give priority to Jewish legal precedents where they conflict with British common law, once the basis of the Israeli legal system.

Since then, lawyers have frequently asked the computer to dig up rabbinical opinions to support the cases of their clients, a search that would have taken too long to bother about without the computer.

In a child support case now being heard in Tel Aviv, the judge told the lawyers for both plaintiff and defendant to ask the computer what it had to say about upkeep for children living with their mothers abroad.

Scholars have discovered interesting personalities they would have ignored in ordinary research. Thus the computer has helped to restore several faded reputations, said Rabbi Yitzhak Pechenik, who operates the computer for inexperienced inquirers.

Since many rediscovered rabbis are of Middle Eastern origin, the computer has helped to break down barriers between the two main ethnic divisions in Judaism: the European (Ashkenazi) and Mideastern (Sephardic) traditions.

"Because of a historical accident, the Sephardic heritage was quite forgotten. Now by putting it into the computer scholars have become more aware of its richness," said Choueka.

To guard against a memory malfunction, there are five back-up systems. A copy of the data base is in a New York bank safe. Another has been installed in Chicago's Institute for Computers in Jewish Life and access terminals are to be installed in several Jewish institutions in the United States and Europe.

Elder ready to take case to 'American people'

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The wife of sanctuary movement worker Jack Elder says her husband is ready to take his case before the American people and let them decide his fate after a judge decided Elder must go on trial.

Elder is charged with transporting three Salvadoran illegal aliens from Casa Oscar Romero in San Benito to a bus station in Harlingen last March.

U.S. District Judge Hayden Head Jr. on Monday denied four defense motions to have the case dismissed.

"We're very much looking forward to bringing our case to the American people," Elder's wife, Diane, said Monday. "We have faith in the jury system. We're confident and optimistic. We're counting on acquital."

Elder, defense attorneys and prosecutors had declined to comment on Head's ruling.

Defense attorney Steve Cooper had sought to suppress testimony of three Salvadorans and argued that Elder had acted on religious grounds when he transported the Salvadorans.

He also argued that it is common practice in the Rio Grande Valley for residents to transport illegal aliens without fear of arrest or prosecution. Cooper also said federal officials selectively prosecuted Elder, the director of Casa Oscar Romero, a Catholic Church-sponsored home for Central Americans.

Head, after hearing five days of defense and prosecution testimony, however, ruled against all the motions and ordered jury selection to begin today.

Last week, defense attorneys cleared a major hurdle when the judge ruled that attorneys had met their burden that Elder was acting religiously. The burden then shifted to federal officials to prove that there was an overriding need to prosecute.

"The court did not have very much difficulty with finding that the government had met its burden," Head ruled Monday.

The judge, in ruling on the motions, rejected a defense argument to look narrowly at who is entering the United States.

Twenty people are treated after exposure to rabid dogs in Laredo

LAREDO (AP) — Twenty people are getting treatment for exposure to rabid dogs in the first rabies flareup here in nearly eight years, health officials said.

The Laredo-Webb County Health Department has beefed up its stray dog patrols and is offering rabies vaccination clinics in a countywide bid to crack down on the deadly disease.

"We are giving this very wide publicity," said Jose Gonzalez, director of the health agency.

Gonzalez said 1,400 dogs were innoculated against rabies in special clinics last week.

The clinics will be open for the next two weeks, offering vaccinations at reduced rates.

Similar clinics will be set up in the county later, he said.

Since November, local officials have confirmed five rabid dog cases.

Only four of the 20 people getting treatment actually were bitten by a rabid dog. The others had only some kind of contact with the animals.

"We're not taking any chances" Gonzalez said.

Gonzalez said officials have been unable to determine the source of the rabies.

Councilman ready to ride gay issue into mayoralty

HOUSTON (AP) — With a successful campaign against two proposed gay rights ordinances under his belt, Houston Councilman John Goodner says he may seek another victory — the mayor's post.

Goodner spearheaded efforts to defeat two laws that would have blocked the city from discriminating against homosexuals in its hiring practices, and more than 80 percent of the ballots cast in Saturday's referendum opposed the proposals.

Goodner said Monday it is "very possible" that in November he will run against Mayor Kathy Whitmire, who supported the gay rights proposals.

The councilman said several people called him Sunday saying they believe the referendum vote is a mandate for him to run for mayor. However, Goodner said he didn't think the mayor's defeat would eliminate her chances at re-election.

"Because of that issue, she's hurt, but not mortally wounded," he said. "But I really think Kathy can be beaten if someone were to focus on other issues too, like personnel problems and her lack of leadership."

Mrs. Whitmire said the referendum represented only one issue. She said she is "very optimistic" leaders will unite to work on other problems "because there are so many things on which we can work together."

Houston city officials had the day off Monday in observance of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday. Mayoral aide Clarence West, reached at his home, said he would ask Mrs. Whitmire to comment on Goodner's views, but he did not return a call.

A poll released by radio station KTRH Monday morning stated the vote "probably will have absolutely no real impact on the November elections at all," managing editor Mike McKean said.

The scientific poll of 711 registered voters in the city showed 52.4 percent look favorably on Mrs. Whitmire's performance and 36.9 percent disapprove. Ten percent either had no response or did not recognize the mayor's name.

Goodner drew 26.9 percent favorable reactions and 7.5 percent unfavorable. But 65 percent of those asked either did not know who he was or had no opinion on his performance.

Arbitration may reduce workload of federal judges

HOUSTON (AP) — A new arbitration system could reduce the workload of Houston's federal judges, whose cases number more than twice the national average.

Starting this April, the Southern District of Texas is one of 10 federal districts where mandatory civil arbitration will be tried out over the next four years.

A similar system used in San Francisco and Pittsburgh resulted in settlement without trial in all but about 2 percent of cases, U.S. District Clerk Jesse Clark says.

The new system calls for plaintiffs who file any of 25 types of lawsuits in the city's federal courts to enter the arbitration process. Under the plan, one of about 300 lawyers will act as a court arbitrator. The attorneys will preside over negotiating sessions among all parties in each case.

U.S. District Judge Norman Black said the program could clear as many as one-third of the 4,500 cases filed in the city each year.

"If we can accomplish the same result of doing justice in some cases without getting into the judicial process, it will give us more time to work on other cases," said Black, the liaison judge handling the program here.

Black and the other seven federal judges in Houston are currently burdened with more than 900 cases apiece — twice the national average for federal judges.

Black said the time between the filing of a suit and the time it is heard is now about 13 months, but should drop to 90 days in most cases once the system gets under way.

He is working with the Houston Bar Association in an effort to find arbitrators. Each will be asked to volunteer to preside over one or two cases a year, he said.

The effort will give each lawyer "the experience of acting as a judge. It will be an opportunity to do something for society."

More important, he said, "It will discourage lawyers from filing lawsuits which have no merit when they realize they are going to be facing one of their peers as an arbitrator very quickly."

Engine failure may have caused crash

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Pieces of propeller blades and other debris found a half mile from the crash site of a chartered turboprop led a federal official to say engine failure was a possible cause of the accident that killed 64 people returning from a gambling weekend.

"It's no secret we're finding all kinds of pieces scattered around," said Carl Borchers, a Federal Aviation Administration accident prevention specialist. "It's always possible there was engine failure."

But Brochers said it will take experts to determine if the pieces dropped off the plane or were blown away from it by the explosions that followed Monday's crash of Galaxy Airlines Flight 203, which was carrying people to Minneapolis after a weekend junket. Three passengers survived, but two of them were hospitalized in critical condition early today.

Officials of the National Transportation Safety Board, investigating the crash, met here Monday night behind closed doors but made no statement afterward.

Flight 203, a four-engine Lockheed Electra 188, crashed in clear weather early Monday shortly after takeoff, and officials said the pilot had apparently steered the failing plane away from motels and apartment buildings south of downtown Reno.

The plane, chartered by Caesars Tahoe Resort-Hotel of Stateline, a subsidiary of Caesars World Inc., skidded into a recreational vehicle sales lot, destroying about 10 vehicles.

Bob Sederquist, a caretaker and salesman who lives on the lot, said there "were explosions everywhere," with fuel tanks from the vehicles and the plane exploding.

"Every time a plane has taken off since the crash, my wife has started crying," said Sederquist, whose home was not damaged.

The plane had been used by the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, during their unsuccessful campaigns for the Democratic presidential nomination. Jackson said the last time he used the plane it had been ordered grounded at Dallas after flying through a storm.

The Galaxy crash was the nation's worst air disaster since a Pan American World Airways jet crashed in Kenner, La., on July 9, 1982, killing 153 people, including eight on the ground.

Two other Electras used as cargo planes have crashed in the past year, killing seven people. There did not appear to be similarities to Monday's crash near Reno Cannon International Airport, officials said.

Bruce Laxalt, an attorney representing the airline, said there were 67 people aboard, including five crew members. Sixty-four people died, and three passengers survived, he said.

Laxalt identified the crew only as Allen Heasly, Kevin Fieldsa and Mark Freels, all of Florida, and flight attendants Heather Coston and Donna Cutillo, no hometowns given.

Earlier, officials had said up to 74 people may have been aboard.

Survivor George Lamson Jr., 17 — whose father also survived — said the crash "happened so fast he couldn't remember anything," according to his mother, Adrianne, in St. Paul, Minn.

"It's a miracle. This boy essentially walked away from a crash where everyone else died," said Jerry Calvanese, medical triage officer at the scene.

The teen-ager was "emotionally shaken but doing reasonably well," said Dr. Stephen Grace, who operated on the father and helped treat the son.

Grace said the boy told him he found himself on the ground in his seat, then "pulled the (seatbelt) buckle and unstrapped himself."

The pilot had reported vibrations on the plane and was trying to return to the airport when the crash occurred, said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Ed Pinto in Washington, D.C.

The pilot, who apparently veered to avoid apartments and motels along a highway, "did an admirable job," Sheriff Vince Swinney said.

No flight recorder or "black box" was found Monday, and Swinney said he wasn't certain the 1950s-vintage plane had one.

A temporary morgue was set up at the county fairground, and Swinney said it might take another day to remove all the bodies.

"There's airplane cable wrapped around a lot of bodies and they're stacked three deep in most places. We're having a difficult time locating them," Swinney said.

At Galaxy headquarters in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., spokesman Jerry McCormick said the company was founded in 1983 and that this was its first crash. Galaxy operates only chartered flights.

George Lamson, 42, a carpenter, was in critical but stable condition today with multiple injuries at St. Mary's Hospital in Reno, said spokeswoman Stephanie Kruse. His son was in stable condition today at St. Mary's with a minor head injury and hand burns.

The third survivor, Bob Miggins of Plymouth, Minn., had burns over 90 percent of his body and was in critical condition today at Southern Nevada Memorial Hospital in Las Vegas, said nursing shift coordinator Janell Schmoyer.

Families wait for news of survivors

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — While investigators tagged yellow body bags in a Nevada field, friends and relatives waited in Minnesota to learn the fate of those who took the doomed Galaxy Airlines chartered gambling junket.

"I know that door's going to open and Louis's going to come in with all his suitcases and everything. I know he's going to," said Annette Fragale, whose husband, Louis, was best man when his brother Sam married Kay Meyer in Reno on Saturday.

Fragale and the newlyweds were among those feared dead, although some relatives held out hope because not all the junketeers had boarded the return flight.

Only three of the 67 people who did board survived when the four-engine Lockheed Electra turboprop crashed Monday, shortly after takeoff from the Reno, Nev., airport en route to Minneapolis-St. Paul.

The survivors were George Lamson, 42, a carpenter from St. Paul, his son George Jr., 17, a student, and Robert Miggins, 45, a high school teacher in suburban Minneapolis. Lamson and Miggins were reported in critical condition at Nevada hospitals today; the younger Lamson received only minor injuries.

"I'm not a religous person, but this is the one time I believe in it," said Lamson's wife, Adrianne. "It seems God must have been listening to me."

Meanwhile, FBI investigators headed for the crash site with dental charts and other materials to assist the identification process. Red Cross and Washoe County sheriff's office spokesmen said no crash victims would be identified without complete confirmation.

Efforts to recover the rest of the bodies from the tangled wreckage were to resume at dawn today.

Bob Lurtsema, former Minnesota Vikings football player, said he had been invited along by Hy Thayer, the St. Paul travel agent who booked the casino-chartered flight, to speak at the Caesar's Tahoe Super Bowl dinner Saturday night.

But other football celebrities were available and although Thayer still wanted him along, Lurtsema said he decided last Wednesday to forgo the trip he has made several times before.

"I feel terrible for the people who were on that plane," Lurtsema said. "That's as important to me as that I wasn't on it. My prayers are with those who were on the flight. I feel awkward, between a rock and a hard place."

Andy Connoy, left, and Dave Meyer, of Minneapolis wait Monday for news of three friends who were aboard Galaxy flight 203 which crashed on takeoff from Reno, Nev.

Thayer himself decided at the last minute not to return to Minnesota with the party because he was tired.

"I am in shock," he said from his room at Caesar's, adding that many of those killed were his friends.

A "bad feeling" prompted Douglas and Bev Abalan of Bloomington, Minn., to postpone the flight home, their son Russ said.

"They won some money while they were there and my mom was pretty tired, so they decided to take another flight," Abalan said.

On his return home Monday night, the elder Abalan said his feelings were "a mixture of sheer terror, of being grateful for having not been on that airplane."

Bob Odell was at the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport charter terminal trying to learn the fate of his 32-year-old brother, Roger.

"We realize most people died on the plane," said Bob Odell. "Let's face up to it. Let's get the list so we can get on with living."

Teen booked in death, three other shootings

GODDARD, Kan. (AP) — Schools were closed today in what one resident called "the safest place in America" after a junior high school principal was fatally shot, three people wounded, and a 14-year-old boy booked as the gunman.

James Alan Kearbey was arrested about 90 minutes after the shootings at Goddard Junior High School. Officers confiscated an M-1 rifle, a .357-caliber Magnum pistol and dozens of rounds of ammunition.

Kearbey was a student at the school. Investigators refused to discuss a motive for the attack.

Classes were canceled today at all Goddard schools, officials said.

Classmates described Kearbey as an unpopular student who was sometimes hard to be around. They said he had a fascination with military weapons and talked frequently about war. Classmates said he was a C-plus student who was capable of straight A's if he tried.

"He seemed kind of lonesome," said Mike German, a teen-age neighbor of Kearbey's. "He was a 'by-himself' kind of guy."

Kearbey was expected to appear in juvenile court this afternoon. Because of his age, he can't be charged or tried as an adult. If convicted in juvenile court, he can't be jailed beyond his 21st birthday.

James McGee, 35, principal of Goddard Junior High School, died about three hours after he was shot in the chest.

Teachers Dawn Swearingen, 32, and Donald Harris, 39, and student Daniel Williams, 14, all were in good condition in Wichita hospitals Monday night, officials said.

Mrs. Swearingen suffered head and neck wounds from bullet fragments. Harris had a gunshot wound to the left hip and Williams was shot in the left thigh.

Wichita, Kan., police officers search James Alan Kearbey, 14, who is a suspect in shootings at Goddard Junior High School Monday.

"All I saw was the rifle," said Matthew Wert, a 12-year-old student who said he saw Kearbey shortly after he entered the school. "I asked if he was doing a report on it. He started to say 'No,' but then he said 'Yes,' and walked on. Five minutes later I heard gunshots."

Goddard Police Chief Jim Nelson said after the first shots were fired, Kearbey walked about 100 feet and was confronted by Harris, a history and driver education teacher.

Harris and Williams were then shot, the chief said, and Kearbey ran from the building.

About 90 minutes later, Wichita police officer Terry Morrow found the boy in a field just south of town.

Lucas charged in death of West Virginia policeman

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Convicted serial killer Henry Lee Lucas is back in Huntington to answer a first-degree murder charge filed in the 1976 shooting death of a city police officer.

Lucas, 48, and a traveling companion, Ottis Toole, 37, were charged with first-degree murder in the Aug. 3, 1976, shooting death of Huntington police officer Clemmie Curtis.

Henry Lee Lucas

A Cabell County grand jury returned an indictment against the two men last Wednesday, and Lucas was scheduled to appear in circuit court today to enter a plea.

Lucas was last in Huntington in December, when he led investigators to the area off Interstate 64 where Curtis' body was found.

Two previous investigations — in 1976 and 1982 — concluded that Curtis died from a self-inflicted gunshot wound, although the state medical examiner said in 1976 that could not be determined "within bounds of reasonable or absolute certainty."

Local authorities first questioned Lucas in connection with the case after he told officials in Georgetown, Texas, where he was jailed, that he killed a police officer off I-64 near Huntington.

After questioning Lucas in Georgetown in early November, local investigators went to Tallahassee, Fla., to question Toole.

Toole and Lucas traveled around the country together for several years beginning in about 1975. Lucas claims to have killed 150 to 360 people during a 20-state trek from 1975 until his arrest in June 1983. He has been convicted of eight killings and is on death row in Texas.

Another look

It has been 12 years today since the Supreme Court issued its controversial decision in Roe v. Wade which legalized abortion. The controversy rages on, however, and shows signs this year of heating to the point of forcing the high court justices to reconsider — again — the ruling.

In the 1973 decision, the court held that the constitutional right to privacy prevents the state from placing any restriction on a woman's decision to procure an abortion during the first three months of pregnancy. That decision has been heralded by freedom of choice advocates, but has been staunchly opposed by pro-life advocates and others, including ourselves, who view it as undermining the sanctity of human life.

Since that time the court has stood by its decision in Roe v. Wade, most recently in five cases in June 1983.

The abortion issue is an emotional one which touches virtually every person from one respect or another and involves questions of individual rights, morality and religious doctrine.

While during the 1970s freedom of choice was a major consideration in the abortion debate, right-to-life organizations and, notably, the Moral Majority now are countering with moral considerations. Although Moral Majority leader Rev. Jerry Falwell and others publicly have deplored the violence, bombings of abortion clinics have escalated in recent months, adding fuel to the fire for a reconsideration of the abortion question by the Supreme Court.

A major development in the abortion debate has been advances in the care of newborn infants in recent years. Premature babies that almost certainly would have died a decade ago now can be saved, a fact which appears to lend credence to the argument that the unborn child's rights should be protected also.

That in itself is the over-riding reason for the Supreme Court to look once again at its abortion decision because the question of when life actually begins — from a legal standpoint — seems to have been re-opened by medical technology.

Even in Roe v. Wade, the main consideration was not a mere matter of birth control but resolving the question of when life begins and where responsibility for life falls. It's obvious ample grounds exist for another look at the 1973 decision.

More than a job

Most people employed in public safety and service jobs — such as law enforcement officers, firemen and other emergency personnel — brush aside praise for risking their own lives while saving others. They say it's merely a part of their jobs, something they may be called on to do day after day in situation after situation.

That was the response after Midland Fire Chief James Roberts labeled sheriff's deputy Richard Stratton a hero for pulling two small boys from a certain fiery death in their rural Midland home last Friday.

Stratton was on patrol when he saw the house ablaze, called in the fire, then noticed Dorothy Phelps outside the structure screaming that her children were still inside.The deputy went into the house, found the children and brought them to safety. It's obvious that for Stratton, being a deputy is more than merely a job.

Fire Chief Roberts said there's no way his firefighters could have gotten to the house in time to save the children and that they and their parents owe their lives to Stratton's fast action.

While fully understanding and appreciating the modesty of public servants who may be called on any day to risk life and limb to protect or save others, heroic gestures such as the one performed by Stratton should not go unnoticed.

He undoubtedly has the unending gratitude of the parents of the two boys, ages 2 years and 3 months, respectively. His courage and dedication in the service of others is in the finest traditions of selflessness.

We join in congratulating Stratton on a job well done. He richly deserves whatever commendations or accolades are bestowed on him by grateful authorities.

Another View:

Bombings a threat

The bombing of abortion clinics is an example of what can happen when passion and violence replace reason and civility.

Some anti-abortion leaders have denounced the violence. As the Rev. Jerry Falwell put it, "I do believe this is terrorism and I do believe these people are not only terrorists, they're criminals." State Sen. Bernice Labedz, a Nebraska anti-abortion activist, has also criticized violent attacks on abortion facilities.

Society cannot permit people to appoint themselves as avengers for what they perceive is a righteous cause. No motive justifies such violence and danger to property.

Pro-life and pro-choice activists sometimes use rhetoric that tends to dehumanize their opponents. Sometimes differences of opinion are interpreted as evidence of moral shortcomings.

Such attitudes can contribute to an atmosphere that encourages violence.

But violence is not an acceptable tactic. Bombings of abortion clinics are simply an attempt by individuals to put themselves above the law. In doing so, they hurt the cause they purport to represent.

Reagan guts civil defense funds

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has quietly slashed civil-defense funds by one-third or more in the 1986 budget.

Jack Anderson

This is an abrupt turnaround for the administration. In 1982, President Reagan targeted $4.2 billion toward a seven-year program that was supposed to double the number of people who might live through a nuclear attack.

The public never quite bought the administration's glib assurances. In a 1982 survey, almost half of those polled thought any civil-defense spending was a waste of money.

The White House now seems to have gotten the message. In still-secret budget documents obtained by my associate Donald Goldberg, the White House has ordered the Federal Emergency Management Agency to "terminate the buildup in civil defense."

FEMA asked for $284 million for civil defense in the 1986 budget, a whopping increase over its $181 million for the current fiscal year. Instead, the White House informed the agency early this month that its civil-defense budget will be cut to about $120 million. That would roll FEMA's civil-defense budget back to pre-Reagan days.

Significantly, the White House decision to abandon the civil-defense buildup came shortly before Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko held their preliminary arms-control talks.

According to an internal FEMA "planning guidance" document, the budget reduction knocks the agency's ambitious spending program into the proverbial cocked hat.

The report details FEMA's plans through 1990.

One thing the taxpayers will be spared is a public-relations campaign to sell civil defense. The P.R. program would have included "updating and consolidating ... printed and audio-visual materials" and would have provided a "coherent and candid flow of positive information on the program to the media at both the national and local levels, attempting to develop in the various audiences a feeling of confidence and support for the program."

The opportunity for expensive boondoggles would be almost limitless if FEMA's fiscal wings aren't clipped. For example, the agency planned to emphasize "protection for all communications and warning equipment against the effects of electromagnetic pulse." This is the theory that the detonation of a nuclear device in the atmosphere would knock out everything electrical — from power plants to kitchen clocks — over a wide area.

Like other untested theories, this one may or may not be correct, but it would obviously be costly to try to shield vital electrical equipment from the threat.

Sources inside FEMA say the budget cut may reflect not just White House disillusionment with the civil-defense program, but displeasure with FEMA's entire operation. The General Accounting Office is currently examining all of FEMA's contracts for evidence of improprieties.

A REAL HERO: Court-sealed documents I've obtained on a CIA scandal have provided a bonus: the secret Army resume and efficiency reports on Col. James "Bo" Gritz, the colorful Special Forces officer who tried in vain to find some of the 568 American prisoners-of-war still unaccounted for in Laos.

The documents make clear that Gritz is an authentic hero, not the blowhard+scon artist that some media reports have suggested.

Gritz got support for his quixotic ventures into Laos from the CIA and the Defense Intelligence Agency, as well as from actors Clint Eastwood and William Shatner.

Gritz's medals include three Silver Stars, two Legions of Merit, eight Bronze Stars and 26 Air Medals. He's a certified pilot, a sixth-degree black belt in karate, an underwater demolition expert, a master parachutist and a certified hypnotherapist. He is fluent in Mandarin Chinese and Swahili.

The Army efficiency raters' comments, uniformly laudatory, included these:

"Capt. Gritz is the rare type of leader who is ideal for combat command."

"He commands the respect and admiration of his unusually competent subordinates to an exceptional degree. He is ruggedly independent in thought, but also exercises sound judgment."

"A fighter. If we had to go to war tomorrow ... Col. Gritz would head my list for commander of a Special Forces battalion."

"A real soldier and patriot; his motto is 'AMER-I-CAN.'"

"This brilliant young officer combines the qualities of incredible audacity, bravery and imagination with extraordinary efficiency and professionalism. His expertise in tactics approaches genius."

Shatner has bought the film rights to Gritz's exploits in Vietnam. It should make quite a movie.

Money matters hinge on Baker

WASHINGTON — James A. Baker III, though even more cautious than usual as he awaits Senate confirmation, dropped two little hints last week that as secretary of the Treasury he might assume an uncharacteristic posture: confrontation with Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

One hint came at a session with House Republican leaders when the outgoing White House chief of staff seemed sympathetic to complaints about Volcker's latest deficit-reduction pressure on Congress. The other came at a briefing session by Treasury officials who were surprised not only by the scope of Baker's knowledge about monetary policy but by his growth-oriented views.

That undermines conventional wisdom that Baker will be less apt than his predecessor, Donald T. Regan, to quarrel with Volcker. It also encourages exotic speculation that Baker, who has often exasperated supply-siders, could prove their salvation at the Treasury. Whatever course he takes, it will be the dominant factor shaping the economic climate of President Reagan's second term.

By nature, Jim Baker is no Fed-basher. On an issue that splits Republicans into populist and elitist halves, he is more comfortable socially and personally with party establishmentarians who credit Paul Volcker with saving the economy. It was Baker who recommended that the president reappoint Volcker and who tried, unsuccessfully, to delete criticism of him from last year's party platform.

But Baker sought to avoid 1984 friction with Volcker not because he endorsed his policies but out of fear of election-year consequences. In fact, Baker and his closest policy adviser, Richard Darman (who will be his deputy secretary), consider monetary reform indispensible for the second term. That includes not only structural changes increasing the administration's influence over the Fed but policy changes aimed at ending start-stop jolts on the economy caused by the Fed.

Since the Baker-Regan swap was unveiled, Baker's lip has been buttoned. That elevates those two backstage hints to surpassing importance.

The meeting between senior officials and House leaders took place the day after Volcker told Senate Republican leaders that $50 billion was the bare miminum in deficit reduction — with new taxes if necessary. The implication: no Fed help to reduce interest rates unless Congress moves.

House Minority Whip Trent Lott expressed anger that the central banker, so sensitive to congressional intervention in Fed policy, was dictacting to Congress. "I don't want to put words in Jim Baker's mouth," one participiant told us, "but I got the distinct impression that he fully agreed."

Another distinct impression was conveyed earlier, when Baker and Darman were briefed at the Treasury. Baker was surprisingly attuned to satisfying credit needs of a growing economy and halting commodity price deflation. He did not mention M-1, the measurement used by the Fed in its efforts, through Volcker's regime, to control the money supply.

That could be the biggest difference at Treasury between Baker and Regan. While frustrated by administration impotence and Fed arrogance, Regan softened his criticism whenever Volcker seemed to be hitting money supply targets. That partly reflects the presence of Beryl Sprinkel, long a faithful soldier in the monetarist ranks, as under secretary for monetary policy these past four years.

If Sprinkel becomes chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, as now seems probable, the president will sacrifice a chance to get fresh economic ideas. But at least Sprinkel will be out of the Treasury's monetary slot, and that presents Baker with a personnel decision of the utmost importance.

Lewis Lehrman, 1982 Republican nominee for governor of New York and a man with undisguised presidential ambitions, would be willing to replace Sprinkel. Acceptance of what organizationally is a third-level appointment shows the importance to the nation's future that Lehrman correctly attaches to the monetary job.

Although Lehrman and Baker are congenial and occasionally confer on economic strategy, Baker is unlikely to name so high-powered, independent and controversial a figure as Lehrman to a subordinate post. But Baker still must decide whether to recruit as under secretary an activist for a truly growth-oriented monetary policy. If he does, last week's hints could turn into tomorrow's deeds.

Laws must be equal

I am writing with regards to Mary Ellen Burns' letter about the RV code that is being contemplated.

Lest I be misunderstood, let me say that I do have empathy for this situation, but also have the following question that should be seriously considered in this protest.

How would you feel if you had invested about three times that amount for a vehicle — not for enjoyment and recreation, but to earn your living, only to find that you not only cannot park this vehicle in front of your home, but in back either ... or anywhere in a residential district? The truck is no larger than most RVs, yet has been successfully singled out despite protests from Midland truckers. I am talking about a tractor-truck. There is an investment all the way from $10,000 to $90,000 for this piece of equipment and inside is another investment in personal equipment.

Vandalism is a constant threat for these items too. I am not talking about permanent parking either (it is obvious that the longer a truck sits, the more money it's costing), but periodic short-term parking.

Not only are these same personal and property taxes paid that you speak of, but thousands of additional dollars per year in road and fuel taxes. For every state this truck enters, an additional fee is charged for permits. None of this applies to RVs. RVs have the convenience of rest areas and highway improvements but never contribute to their upkeep. Never have to check through the Port of Entry to see if their equipment is legal (in top operating condition). There is no limit to weight or length (some of these RVs include several vehicles trailing behind one another); in other words, no restrictions at all. You can drive as long and as far as you want without accounting for it with logs.

Now, my point is this: Apparently there exists a desire by the majority of people not to want to see huge hulks of vehicles parked in front of homes in Midland. Okay, I'll buy that — considering it is a unanimous decision and applies to everyone. It inconveniences me and threatens my financial situation considerably, but I'll learn to live with it if that is for the benefit of all. My objection comes because it does not apply to everyone. I also object to seeing homes with several single and double axle vehicles parked all over — on the yard, in the driveways and the street. If the purpose of this proposal is for aesthetic reasons, it has been totally defeated.

Let's see some uniformity in our city codes. Let's decide what we want and then go after it. If the people of Midland want the personal choice of parking whatever and how many vehicles they wish on their property, then let us voice our preference. If, however, the majority of Midland residents prefer their neighborhoods to be spiffed up and uncluttered, then let it be.

But whatever the preference, let it be equal!

Band's trip about 'goals'

Tammy Hollis expressed some strong feeling about the Lee High Rebel Band's trip to Washington, D.C.

Children need powerful motivators to endure the hardships involved in putting together and maintaining a first-class, top-drawer, excellent marching band. What better motivator than an astronomically expensive trip to Washington, D.C.? And what do we do next year? Send them to Tokyo?

What it's about is goal-setting and achievement. Setting realistic, attainable goals and achieving them is valuable training for our children. Setting extravagant, unattainable goals is immature and self-defeating. Yet our children, in their youthful enthusiasm, will do just that if we, the parents, don't step in and temper these programs with some realism. Even though we're one of the richest communities in the country, we have our limits. Perhaps the difficulties being experienced in funding this trip are the community's way of saying, "Enough is enough."

I think we need to ask ourselves what lessons we're teaching our children. Are we in effect telling them that excellence isn't worth anything for its own sake? What would happen to the band program if the only trips were to the ballgames?

What does it say about our priorities as a community when our poor go wanting, but our high school bands take six-figure-cost trips?

India investigates sale of secrets to West, U.S.S.R.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — An investigation into the suspected sale of secrets to France and the United States has broadened to include the possible purchase of classified documents by the Soviet Union, a high-ranking government official says.

Press reports said at least 15 people have been arrested and 60 people are being questioned or are under surveillance in the scandal, the first to confront Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's administration since he succeeded his slain mother Indira as India's leader two months ago.

None of those reported arrested have been identified publicly, and no one yet has been formally charged.

A government statement said "highly sensitive documents" were recovered in raids on homes of the arrested suspects, who include employees of the prime minister's secretariat, the president's office and Defense and Finance ministries.

The high-ranking government official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said a senior Defense Ministry official was arrested Monday on suspicion of passing secrets to a French diplomat who has been expelled. Also arrested was a Commerce Industry official, the source added.

The Hindustan Times said three other Defense Ministry officials were arrested Monday.

The French Foreign Ministry denied any knowledge of the scandal. Efforts to obtain comment from the Soviet and U.S. embassies have not been successful.

The senior government source said 11 government officials and about half a dozen other people had been arrested. The United News of India reported 15 arrests.

The government source said investigators were probing the sale of photocopies of some confidential documents to a suspected Soviet agent. The leak had "severely compromised the country's security and well-being," the source said.

The official said Western intelligence agencies bought military secrets, including details of India's recent multibillion-dollar arms deals and negotiations with Moscow, while "the Soviets appear to have been more interested in knowing the inner policies of the new government."

The source said the Soviet KGB may have used a New Delhi-based European diplomat, whom he declined to identify, to procure highly classified documents.

Home Minister S.B. Chavan said Monday it had not yet been established whether the CIA, the KGB or some other spy agency was involved in the leak of vital national information.

According to press reports, among the classified information allegedly leaked were a proposal to develop laser technology, India's defense plans in case of an attack by Pakistan, India's capability to respond to a nuclear strike with atomic weapons, and details of Indian aid to Tamil separatists battling for an independent homeland in Sri Lanka.

Lt. Col. Alain Bolley, the French deputy military attache described in news reports as a key figure in the espionage ring, arrived in Paris Monday after being recalled by the French government.

A French Foreign Ministry spokesman said Bolley was recalled "for consultations," and said the ministry "has no comment to make about an affair of which it is ignorant."

The high-ranking Indian government source and press reports alleged that Bolley worked for the Central Intelligence Agency during the five years he was stationed in New Delhi.

Israeli soldiers battle war of nerves

EDITOR'S NOTE — It is not a constant shooting war where they know where the enemy is. It is a war that bursts from the trees and lasts only minutes, but death is just as final. For Israeli soldiers occupying South Lebanon, it is a war of nerves. This dispatch was cleared by the Israeli military censor.

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

MAZRAAT AL DAWOUDIYE, Lebanon (AP) — Two dates on the calendar outside the commander's office have been blotted out in black ink. They are the days on which Israeli soldiers were killed in South Lebanon.

One soldier died Sept. 12 while defusing a roadside bomb. The other was shot Nov. 13 while riding in a jeep.

Sgt. Shai, a 21-year-old soldier stationed for the past year in this base near the Zahrani River on the Mediterranean coast, said the soldier killed by the bomb was a close friend.

"I was talking to him in the barracks one night and the next thing I hear he is dead," said Shai, who like other Israeli soldiers interviewed could not give his last name because of army regulations. "You just have to get used to it."

Inside the base, protected by watchtowers, the atmosphere is almost like home.

Several soldiers compared the camp, set up in an abandoned chicken factory, to a kibbutz, one of the communal farms seen all around Israel. The blare of televisions, rock music and the chick-chock sounds of backgammon players block out any noise from the surrounding countryside. Earthen barriers make it hard even to see the hilly terrain beyond the barbed wire.

But the daily guerrilla attacks and the casualties infuse the camp with a subtle tension, rarely discussed but intensely felt by the soldiers serving in South Lebanon.

"It's not the type of tension that is concentrated in a passing moment," said Cpl. Irit, one of the several dozen young women in the base. "It's there all the time in the atmosphere because there are many incidents around here." A short time before, a half dozen soldiers talking with a reporter suddenly jumped up and ran for the radio room when they heard the crackling sounds of officers in the field reporting the latest attack — shots fired at a convoy on the coastal road south of the port city of Sidon.

No Israeli soldiers were hurt in that attack, but the unit's commander said ambushes and explosions occurred once or twice daily in south Lebanon.

"The area is good for the guerrilla," said Col. Yaacov. "The main road is lined with trees and it is a great problem for us to get them because they can throw their weapons away and then they are like everybody else. How do you know who is a saboteur?"

Guerrilla attacks account for nearly half the Israeli casualties — 604 soldiers killed and 3,500 wounded — since the Israel's invasion of Lebanon on June 6, 1982, to root out Palestinian guerrillas.

The attacks now are mostly the work of Shiite Moslems, some under the influence of Iranian-trained clergymen who advocate Islamic revolution. Shiites make up most of the 900,000 Lebanese who live under Israeli occupation.

Israeli soldiers have little to do with the Lebanese civilian population, except for brief encounters at roadblocks or on foot patrols through villages and towns in the countryside.

"We don't have much contact with the locals," Sgt. Shai said. "We don't stop and talk to them."

The atmosphere contrasts with the early days of Israel's occupation, when Israeli soldiers traveled alone, ate in restaurants and visited in the homes of local dignitaries.

Initially, the soldiers say, many Shiites saw in Israel a force that could help rearrange a political system dominated by wealthy Maronite Christians and Sunni Moslems and ensure a more equitable distribution of power.

Israelis, Lebanese reopen talks on security measures

NAQOURA, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli and Lebanese negotiators today reopened talks on security measures to prevent sectarian violence once Israel's troops leave south Lebanon.

As the session began in this town near the Israeli-Lebanese border, a general strike spread through Moslem areas across Lebanon to protest a car bomb attack Monday night at the home of a prominent Sunni Moslem leader in Sidon, south Lebanon's largest city.

Two people were killed in the bombing and at least 30 injured, including the Moslem leader, Mustafa Saad, who heads the powerful Nasserite militia in Sidon and is known for his anti-Israeli views.

Schools and businesses shut down and many streets were barricaded with burning tires in mostly Moslem west Beirut in a show of anger over the attack.

Saad's bodyguard and a visitor were killed in the explosion, which collapsed the three-story building housing Saad's residence and office, police said. Officers said the car had been rigged with 220 pounds of TNT.

Sidon is to be abandoned by the Israeli army by Feb. 18 in the first phase of the three-stage withdrawal plan approved last week by Israel's Cabinet.

Saad, who has resisted Israeli appeals for cooperation, suffered serious head injuries in the bombing. Beirut radio stations said he will be blinded permanently if he survives.

A United Nations helicopter flew Saad and his Soviet-born wife from a hospital in Sidon to Beirut this morning. Both were then flown on a charter jet to Paris for special treatment. Their daughter, Natasha, 12, was being treated at a Sidon hospital.

Israeli government, unions recommend price hikes

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The government and trade unions are recommending a 10 percent price increase for coffee, tea, beer and cigarettes in what would be another step away from wage-price restraints imposed 2½ months ago.

The proposed increases were designed to ease shortages and help manufacturers who said the price freeze was causing them severe losses.

The hikes were approved Monday by a committee made up of representatives from the government, trade unions and manufacturers. Their decision must be approved by the Cabinet's economic committee before the new prices take effect.

Dubek, a cigarette manufacturer with a virtual monopoly on the Israeli market, shut down its plant Sunday to back its demands for higher prices. After the price hikes were announced, the company said it would reopen the plant.

It was the second time in less than a week that the government has authorized increases after more than two months in which relatively stable prices held the inflation rate for December to 3.7 percent, the lowest level in 18 months.

The first thaw in the freeze came last week when the government approved a 10 percent hike in the price of gasoline to the equivalent of $1.84 a gallon.

Locally made cigarettes would be 52 cents a package and Israeli-made instant coffee would cost $2.67 for a 7-ounce jar if the prices are approved.

WORLD IN BRIEF

French raid strongholds of pro-independence forces

NOUMEA, New Caledonia (AP) — French forces raided strongholds of pro-independence natives of this South Pacific territory today after saboteurs did $3 million damage to one of the world's important nickel mining centers.

The French High Commission said security forces arrested four unidentified men near the west coast town of Kone on suspicion of burning the homes of European immigrants. Six homes and three businesses there have been burned recently.

A security sweep also was mounted around the mining town of Thio, but no arrests were made, police said.

The independence-seeking Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front issued a statement saying it would not allow the mines at Thio to be reopened until more than 90 imprisoned militants were released and French forces were withdrawn from the mine area.

Some of the native Melanesians, or Kanaks, who are 43 percent of the population of 150,000, are seeking independence from France under the leadership of the Kanak front.

Koreans shoot dolphin

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Soldiers shot and killed a dolphin they mistook for a North Korean infiltrator trying to swim ashore, Seoul newspapers reported today.

They said two South Korean soldiers on guard duty spotted a figure moving about 50 yards offshore Friday near Samconpo, a coastal town about 240 miles south of Seoul.

The soldiers opened fire when the figure raised its head above water and approached to within about 15 feet of the shore, then discovered they had killed a 100-pound dolphin, the reports said,

Generals retired from duty

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — The military high command says Gen. Jose Olvis Arias, the army commander, and four generals who backed him in a dispute with President Hernan Siles Zuazo have been retired from active duty.

Olvis Arias, appointed army commander in July, had refused to accept a Dec. 30 order that he step down, saying that under military procedures he should serve for two years.

He claimed he had the support of regiments in the interior and threatened to take "drastic measures" if he was placed on inactive status as part of a plan of restructuring the armed forces.

The feared revolt did not materialize because no regimental commanders backed him, and the military command announced the five retirements Monday. Siles Zuazo named Gen. Raul Lopez Leyton, who is believed to have strong support among his fellow officers, as army commander.

Rains kill at least 47

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Torrential rains have caused at least 47 deaths and driven more than 5,000 from their homes in eastern Brazil over the past week, civil defense officials report.

The heavy downpours have triggered landslides and house cave-ins and washed out bridges and roads in the Atlantic coast state of Espirito Santo and in neighboring Minas Gerais state to the west.

In Espirito Santo, the civil defense authority reported Monday that at least 40 people had been buried by landslides or crushed when their houses were hit by sliding mud last week.

In Sao Mateus, a city in the northern part of the state, poisonous snakes were reported crawling into homes to avoid floodwaters, and the state health bureau rushed in a shipment of snake bite serum, police said.

Labor may be caused by having sex

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am in the last few weeks of my pregnancy with my second child. My first child was born slightly prematurely, and my obstetrician has told me not to have sexual relations because of that. My husband has said that I should ask you about it, and that is the reason for this letter. — Mrs. E.D., Oklahoma City, Okla.

Solomon

Dear Mrs. D.: First let me say that I strongly urge every woman who is under the care of an obstetrician to follow his or her advice. It should be obvious that it is not possible for anyone to manage a specific situation from a distance.

Having said that, I would add that sexual relations have been reported to be associated with premature labor. Dr. Robert C. Goodlin, of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine, has reported that sexual activity and orgasm may precipitate labor. It is also possible that bacteria may be introduced during sexual relations and this too may lead to premature labor.

If your obstetrician advised you to refrain from sexual relations, I must assume that he or she had a reason for doing so, and I would suggest you follow the advice.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor stopped taking routine chest X-rays several years ago, but he still takes an electrocardiogram when I see him for my annual physical examination. Do you see any reason for this? I am in good health except for what he calls a high-normal blood pressure for which I am not on medication. — Lance, Utica, N.Y.

Dear Lance: I don't know enough about your situation to comment specifically, but I can tell you that some patients are subject to myocardial infarctions that are detected only through electrocardiograms. In one study, one-fourth of all myocardial infarctions in men, and more than one-third in women, were only detected in this fashion.

The risk of having a myocardial infarction was twice as high in the hypertensive patients as it was in those with normal blood pressure values.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am somewhat confused about the risks involved in the use of the pill. Would you please provide some information about deaths among women who use the pill? — Ms. S.S., Charleston, S.C.

Dear Ms. S.: Dr. Luella Klein, president of the Amerian College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, reports that about 10 million women use oral contraceptives, and there are about 500 deaths each year related to their use. That translates into five deaths for every 100,000 women who are on the pill. Most of these deaths occur in women 40 years of age or older, or in women 35 years of age and older who smoke.

In comparison, Dr. Klein notes, deaths from obstetric cause average about 10 per 100,000 women.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have an inflammation of the prostate gland and my doctor told me to avoid sexual relations for a while. When I did have sexual relations, I had a lot of discomfort. Can you explain the reason for this? — Don, NYC

Dear Don: There are different types of prostatitis (inflammation of the prostate gland), and too frequent sexual activity results in discomfort because the prostate is already inflamed and the inflammation is further irritated.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Will you please tell me the upper age limit for the removal of a cataract? I am 73 years of age. — Mr. F.L., St. Petersburg, Fla.

Dear Mr. L.: Since patients over 100 years of age have had cataracts succesfully removed, I believe it is accurate to say that the age is not a factor in cataract surgery. Dr. Ira H. Abrahamson, of Cincinnati, Ohio, points out that most cataract surgery is performed with a local anesthetic, and blood loss is held to a minimum. Therefore, age, or even less-than-average general health, does not preclude surgery.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am troubled with hives on and off, and I would appreciate some information about what causes them and what can be done about it. Otherwise I consider myself to be in good health. — Eva, Miami, Fla.

Dear Eva: There are a number of causes of hives (urticaria) including foods, drugs, infections, and insect bites. Psychological factors may also be implicated, and even heat or cold may trigger an attack.

The treatment of urticaria, as you might suspect, includes avoiding the triggering agents. That means staying away from the food, drugs, or insects that might cause an attack. In addition, according to Dr. W. Kenneth Blaylock, of the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond, patients with chronic urticaria should avoid alcohol, heat, exertion, and aspirin.

A number of medications have been used in the treatment of urticaria, including antihistamines, antidepressants, and antibiotics. Some patients benefit from hospitalization for rest and control of their diets.

Coaches say shootout just another game

'Dogs glad to be home

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

So far this season, Route 4-5A has been a rough one for Midland High. The road has been full of pitfalls and hard knocks.

With six District 4-5A games gone by, the Bulldogs find themselves in contention for the league title but rapidly running out of room for errors. Their 3-3 loop record (15-8 overall) leaves them alone in fifth place behind league leader and tonight's opponent Midland Lee, 5-1, 18-5. Abilene High, Odessa Permian and San Angelo are tied for second.

It's been the rough road games that have cost the Bulldogs their three losses so today's 8 p.m. game against Midland Lee should be a little better since MHS is slated as the home team at Chaparral Center.

Still, MHS coach Jack Stephenson isn't considering the MHS-Lee game to be bigger than any other game on the Bulldogs' 4-5A schedule.

"Every game is big this time of year," said Stephenson. "This one won't be any bigger than the Big Spring game on Friday (8 p.m. at Big Spring). We're just have to play Lee as hard as we played Permian last Friday."

That was one of the toughest losses of the year for the Bulldogs. Leading in the final minutes, the Bulldogs saw the cushion disappear and ended up suffering a 79-78 defeat, their third straight on the 4-5A road.

As is usually the case between two schools in the same town, there are few secrets between coaches. Stephenson knows what to expect from Lee. He saw them once this year in the Tall City Tournament.

"We've played them one time and they beat us by seven (56-49)," said Stephenson. "Lee's in first place so we're going to have to do the best we can against them."

That means controlling the balanced attack of Brian Marczynsik and Derek Westbrook from the outside and Raymond Morney and Anthony Dickens inside.

"Any time you have that balanced of an attack, it makes it tougher. We'll just have to do the best we can. We'll have to keep our turnovers down. When we do that we play well. When we don't, we don't play well. Turnovers have been one of our problems all year."

With a 15-8 overall record, Stephenson doesn't see any need to change his team's style of play. "We've been fairly successful with what we've been doing so we'll keep doing things the same way."

"The same" way for the Bulldogs this year has been either full-court pressure or man-to-man defenses and a fast break down court on offense when its there. When it isn't, Midland High likes to work the ball to Darrell Daivs, the league's leading scorer, and let him shoot from whereever he's standing, usually surrounded by several defenders.

Rebels enjoy life at top

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland Lee-Midland High basketball series has been the Tall City highlight of the high school cage season for the past 24 years. It's a game that the two teams look forward to playing.

The first of two district meetings between the two teams comes at 8 p.m. today at Chaparral Center, but in this wacky year of District 4-5A basketball, the Lee Rebels haven't been doing much talking about the Midland High Bulldogs.

Every step out in this zany world of 4-5A is hazardous at best. Upsets come so fast that the leader board spins a new name just about every night out.

Still, Lee has posted a 5-1 start in the district race, losing only by one point to Odessa Permian. Lee has been the most stable crop in the 4-5A vineyard and owns a one-game lead over the field going into tonight's campaign against the Bulldogs.

But it hasn't been an easy trail to the top of the standings, according to Lee coach Paul Stueckler.

"We can't point to any one game in this district. Every game is a big one. Every time out is important and we can't point to just Midland High," said Stueckler. "I would rate this one as a toss-up. We both lost to Permian by one point, so it has to be rated a toss-up. We've played a lot of games over the years and a lot of them have been toss-ups going in. I can't point to any game in the series as being bigger than another."

Lee's return to highly competitive form has been fueled by leading scorer Brian Marczynski, who is averaging 18.4 points per game; Raymond Morney, who stands at 12.1; and Derek Westbrook, 11.3. They have helped Lee climb to an 18-5 season record.

And since football ended late, the Rebels finally got added strength from Anthony Dickens at post and guard Tyrone Thurman, who deals out amazing assists. It is a well-rounded attack.

Only two years ago, Lee suffered through a 3-27 season and Westbrook was part of that learning experience and is enjoying the turnaround.

"I remember what we went through two years ago and I can say that this is a lot more fun. We paid the price to be where we are now," said Westbrook.

Lee has beaten MHS by a 56-49 margin once this year in the finals of the Tall City tournament. Both teams have improved since then and Lee has a lot of new faces since that battle was played before the end of the football playoffs.

Still, Stueckler rates the game as a toss-up and for some very good reasons.

"The Bulldogs are almost impossible to stop. On offense, you first have to beat their press and they do a good job with it," said Stueckler. "And you are really in a quandry on defense, because you have to stop Darrell Davis inside, but Matt Sears and Anthony Deande can hit from outside and Elvin Mackey is a snake around the boards and Roger Henderson can penetrate on you. They can come at you from all angles.

"I think Davis is the best high school player in West Texas. It's almost an impossible task to stop them."

Since the district has been such a crazy affair in 1985, the debate is on as to whether the league has a bunch of good teams or a bunch of teams laced with mediocrity.

"We were talking about that the other day," said Stueckler. "And I really don't know how to answer that. I would like to think that there are a lot of good teams. Jack (Stephenson) and I took our teams to the San Antonio tournament and both won two games before losing, so I think the league could be pretty good."

The playoffs will answer that question rather quickly, but for now it's Midland Lee vs. Midland High and both would like a chance to answer the question.

Lady Bulldogs leap back into hunt

Lee girls suffer first district loss

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland High girls were in a desperate situation going into Monday's District 4-5A game with Midland Lee. After a 44-43 victory over the Rebels, things are looking brighter for the Bulldogs.

The Rebels were threatening to turn the 4-5A playoff race into a route, running their way to an 8-0 record — 15-6 overall — before the Bulldogs stuck them with their first loss of the district season.

Now, at 8-1, Lee's lead is starting to shrink as Odessa Permian pulled within one game at 7-2 after destroying Odessa High 74-34 while MHS is tied with San Angelo, 37-23 winners over Big Spring, for third place at 6-3.

"We really knew we had to win this one to stay in it," said Bulldog Diedra Knapp, who helped the MHS cause with seven points, third high on the team.

"I'm just glad we won," added MHS coach Jane Young. "We've lost a lot of ball games like this and it was nice to win one of them."

"Like this," is what Young calls a one-point, come-from-behind and hold-on-at-the-end victory. Hold on the Bulldogs did.

The second half started out with Lee holding a two-point edge, 21-19. The Rebels quickly ran it up to 25-19 and 29-21 before the Bulldogs came strorming back to take the lead before the third quarter's end.

Tina Knight started the comeback with 5:15 to go in the frame when she grabbed an offensive rebound, put it up for two and drew a foul. Her free throw attempt failed.

Thirty seconds later, Knapp hit a 12-footer to cut the margin to 29-25. Knight and Knapp each followed with solo free throws in one-on-one situtations and then Denise Lanz found a hot hand for the line.

Having missed her only other attempt of the game, Lanz connected on four straight to tie the game at 31. Ten seconds before Lanz hit her final two free throws, Lee's Denise Hatch pumped in a 20-foot jumper for a 31-29 Lee lead.

Knapp gave the Bulldogs a brief lead when she hit her second field goal of the quarter but Candace Morney followed with a close-in bucket to tie the game and close out the quarter at 33-33.

In the fourth quarter it was the Bulldogs' turn to jump out on top as Nadine Hill hit a free throw and five-foot jumper for a 36-33 score.

Lee came storming back on Becky Hatch's second long-range bomb, a 12-footer by Morney, Teena Sizemore's short jumper and Becky White's free throw for a 40-36 score.

Lanz then followed with eight straight Bulldog points to counter Rebel Amy Hubbard's free throw for a 44-41 lead with 1:53 left to play.

With 1:29 left to play, Knapp went to the free throw line to try and pad the lead but missed her shot and gave Lee a chance to pull within one. The Rebels turned it into a 44-43 game with 1:19 left to play when Morney grabbed her own missed shot and went back up for two.

Thirty-one seconds later, Terez Robinson was sent to the foul line and she too failed to convered the charity toss. But, Midland High came up with the rebound and was able to run off 38 seconds before Amy Hubbard missed an eight-foot shot to ice the game.

That left 10 seconds on the clock, enough time in most cases, but the Bulldog defense swarmed the Rebels in the back court and never let Lee get off a final shot.

"It seemed like a quick 10 seconds," said Lanz after the game. "It was the seconds before (when MHS was trying to run out the clock) seemed to last forever. I thought when Amy took her shot there was only three or four seconds left, not 10."

Lanz, who led all scorers in the game with 18 points was "happy to get the victory but I don't think I played that well. My 18 points felt more like two. I didn't shoot well tonight but I attribute that to Lee's defense. Every time I went up to shoot there was somebody in my face. I had to work for what I got. I think Denise (Hatch), Megan (Pace) and Becky (White) were the three I always had to get through."

Though her team suffered its first loss of the district season, Lee coach Shirley Stephenson wasn't disappointed with the Rebels' overall performance.

"I thought our kids did a real good job but Midland did just an excellent job," said Stephenson. "We knew coming in what they were going to do and they did it. We gave them a lot of turnovers in the first half and probably for the game."

Lee did lose the turnover war, 26-18 but outrebounded MHS 38-30.

Chaparrals own first place

From Staff Reports

BORGER — The Midland College Chaparrals took over sole possession of first place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference basketball race here Monday night with a 92-69 bombing of Frank Phillips College.

The Chaps are now the only unbeaten team in the WJCAC race after Howard College stunned Odessa College by a slim 90-89 margin Monday. OC went into that game as the No. 4 ranked junior college team in the nation.

MC is now 16-2 on the year and 7-0 in conference action while the Wranglers of Odessa slipped to 6-1 and 17-2.

AS FORTUNE would have it, the Chaps and Wranglers meet in Odessa Thursday night in what could be the key outing of the season, for the two teams. OC could have been looking past Howard's Hawks in view of the upcoming shootout with the Chaps Thursday, but Howard is coming on strong. MC survived Howard by three points last Thursday.

The Wranglers' only other loss this season came at the hands of Midland College, 66-61, in the finals of the Chap Classic. Both of MC's losses came back in November in tournament action when they lost to Amarillo College, a team the Chaps beat in conference action last Monday, and to McLennan Community College by 11 points.

A victory over OC Thursday should be enough to boost the Chaps into contention for a Top 20 berth in the national rankings, but that is a minor matter in the overall basketball picture where real rankings are earned in the playoffs.

AGAINST FRANK Phillips Monday, the Chaps had little trouble of disposing of the Plainsmen. They took the lead early and led by as many as 33 points in the second half.

Coach Jerry Stone used his bench freely and five players responded with double figure nights. Vernon Coleman led the way with 14 points while Teviin Biins, the Chaps' leading scorer, posted up 13 points. Chuckie Graves and Eddie Frazier both had a 12-point night and Deon Hunter had 10 points.

About the only mistake the Chaps made all night was in a bungled roster. Coach Stone tried to insert Raymond Vavasseur into the game and he wasn't listed in the official book. The Chaps were charged with a technical foul for the foulup.

But this was a game MC could afford the luxuary of such mistakes and it had no bearing on the contest.

The Plainsmen were paced by the 12-point outing of Arthur Downey and Lonnie Sivalls was the only other Frank Phillips player to hit in double figures with 10 points. Three Plainsmen fouled out and another had four fouls as the Borger crew tried to keep pace with the high rolling Chaps.

And now both MC and OC can think about each other for two days.

Tar Heels win war of attrition against Jacksonville

Associated Press

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith likes to use a lot of players, shuffling lineups and keeping up the pressure. It doesn't work too well, though, when he doesn't have a lot of players.

So, Monday night, Smith found himself fighting a war of attrition, and it nearly cost him as his eighth-ranked Tar Heels held on to beat Jacksonville 74-68 in a non-conference basketball game.

The Tar Heels, 14-3, led 26-10 before Jacksonville cut the margin to 38-37 and trailed only 42-39 at halftime.

"We were smart to open the game the way we did because of our numbers situation," Smith said, alluding to injuries which had cut his ranks. "We decided not to chase, and they milked the clock. They are very quick."

The Dolphins trailed only 64-62 with 3:26 left, but Brad Daugherty hit a basket and North Carolina made four-of-four from the foul line in the final 13 seconds to nail down the victory.

Daugherty, a junior center, finished with a career-high 28 points, 18 in the first half, while Warren Martin scored 13 for the Tar Heels. Cleveland Williams led Jacksonville with 15 points.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 7 DePaul defeated Eastern Washington 72-50, 14th-ranked Villanova beat Drexel 63-55, No. 16 Georgia Tech defeated Virginia 49-46 and 20th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas beat Fullerton State 83-69.

Top Ten

Tyrone Corbin scored 17 points, and Kevin Holmes had 14 for DePaul, which outscored Eastern Washington 11-2 to take a 50-32 lead midway in the second half. The Blue Demons, 13-3, scored 10 straight points to take a 10-2 lead at the game's outset, but Eastern closed to 12-10 and kept the game within reach until DePaul's second-half burst.

Tony Chrisman led all scorers with 18 points for Eastern Washington. The victory was DePaul's 36th straight at home.

Second Ten

Ed Pinckney scored 20 points, and Villanova overcame an early Drexel lead to win the non-conference game. Harold Pressley added 18 points for the Wildcats, 12-3, of the Big East Conference. Drexel outscored Villanova 21-8 to take a 21-12 lead with 8:27 left in the first half. The Wildcats still trailed, 31-28, at halftime, but Villanova ran off six straight points to lead 45-43 with 11:20 left.

John Salley and Yvon Joseph hit two free throws apiece in the final 11 seconds to help Georgia Tech over Virginia in an Atlantic Coast Conference game. Bruce Dalrymple led Tech with 14 points. Salley's two free throws gave the Yellowjackets a 47-44 lead. Olden Polynice pulled Virginia within 47-46 with a basket, and Joseph then hit his two foul shots. Georgia Tech is 13-3 and 2-2 in the ACC.

Virginia played without Coach Terry Holland, who flew home earlier in the day after being hospitalized in Atlanta with an intestinal problem.

Nevada-Las Vegas, which moved into the No. 20 spot in the poll this week, got 20 points and 12 rebounds from Richie Adams to beat Fullerton State in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. The victory was the 12th straight for the Runnin' Rebels, 13-2 and 6-0 on the PCAA. The Rebels scored the game's first seven points and led all the way. Fullerton State could get no closer than 12 points in the second half.

Unranked

Boston College, which dropped from the poll after being ranked 15th last week, lost its third straight Big East Conference game, bowing 61-55 to Pitt. Charles Smith scored 26 points for the Panthers. Pitt trailed 42-28, then scored 20 of the next 26 points to tie the score 48-48 with 5:34 left.

Cavs take another bullet

NBA Roundup

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The Washington Bullets, faced with what forward Greg Ballard called "an enormous challenge," proved they are capable of winning without two of their best players.

Despite the absence of starters Jeff Ruland and Cliff Robinson, the Bullets dominated Cleveland Monday night and recorded an easy 128-115 National Basketball Association victory.

Ruland missed his third straight game with a strained right shoulder and Robinson sat out his fifth consecutive contest with a strained right leg and sprained right knee. Yet, working without two of their top three scorers and rebounders, the Bullets never trailed after allowing Cleveland the opening basket of the game.

"Since Ruland and Robinson went out (three games ago), we've slowed the pace down," said Washington guard Gus Williams, who scored 19 points and handed out a season-high 18 assists. "We're not in a position to play our usual wide-open game without those guys."

Ballard, who scored a season-high 31 points, said the absence of his front-line mates has forced the Bullets to get nearly everyone in on the rebounding chores.

"It's an enormous challenge on the backboards," Ballard said. "Everyone's been crashing the boards, trying to get a piece of the ball."

After the victory, Williams wondered aloud what might happen once the Bullets are at full strength.

"Everyone's foaming at the mouth thinking of what we can do when we get our big men back," Williams said.

After taking a 64-55 halftime lead, Washington never allowed the advantage to shrink below five points the rest of the way in snapping a two-game losing streak. The Cavaliers opened the final period with a 9-4 scoring streak to pull to within 98-92, but consecutive baskets by Ballard ignited a 6-0 Bullet spree that gave Washington a safe 12-point lead with eight minutes remaining.

Cleveland lost its third straight game and fell deeper into the league's Central Division cellar. The Cavaliers were led by World B. Free, who scored 31 points before being ejected from the game after getting slapped with consecutive technical fouls with 6:34 left in the contest.

Pacers 129, Warriors 127

Herb Williams scored four of his season-high 33 points in the second overtime as Indiana nipped Golden State.

Williams also grabbed a key rebound and passed off to Jim Thomas for the go-ahead basket as the Pacers handed Golden State its 11th straight loss. Thomas was fouled on the play and sank the free throw to give Indiana a 126-124 lead with 1:01 remaining in the game.

Golden State twice scored to send the game into extra sessions. Purvis Short, who led all scorers with 38 points, tied it up with one second to go in regulation, while Mickey Johnson knotted the score with four seconds remaining in the first overtime.

Flutie meets with New Jersey Generals

NEW YORK (AP) — Watching San Francisco 49ers quarterback Joe Montana frustrate the Miami Dolphins in the Super Bowl by scrambling and throwing bull's-eye passes has reassured Doug Flutie that he is worth every penny the New Jersey Generals are offering.

Flutie, his attorney Bob Woolf, and Boston College teammate Gerard Phelan had a get-acquainted lunch in New York on Monday with Donald Trump, the owner of the Generals of the United States Football League.

And Woolf said that Flutie, a Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback, might sign a contract by the end of the week.

The meeting came just one day after the 49ers captured the National Football League's most coveted prize by thrashing the Dolphins 38-16 as Montana passed for three touchdowns, ran for another and carried the ball five times for 59 yards en route to winning his second Super Bowl MVP award.

Flutie said he has never doubted he could play professional football, despite some criticism that he is too small at 5-foot-9. And he said watching nimble Montana has added to his confidence.

"It was reassurance to me, and I hope to other people that that is the style of quarterback that can make it," said Flutie. "Dan Marino has been an outstanding quarterback, the No. 1 quarterback all season long. No doubt about it.

"But both styles can be successful," he added. "Joe Montana proved that the other day and Joe Theismann has been proving it for a few years."

Flutie also will be out to prove it, but apparently not in the NFL.

"My aim is to bring the negotiations to a head as quickly as possible," said Woolf, who represents both Flutie and Phelan. "If negotiations go well, it's conceivable we might have something by the end of the week."

Woolf pointed out he was not negotiating a package deal with the Generals for the two players.

"They want Gerard very much," Woolf said. "They have always wanted Gerard and invited him down here."

The Generals reportedly have offered Flutie a non-deferred deal that would pay him $5 million over four years. Such a contract would make him one of the highest paid rookies ever.

The Buffalo Bills of the NFL have the top selection in the league's April 30 draft, but Woolf said they have not talked contract with Flutie.

Mustangs move up in AP poll

Associated Press

For the fourth time in six weeks, Georgetown is the unamimous No. 1 choice in The Associated Press' Top Twenty college basketball poll released today.

The Hoyas, who have won 17 games this season and a national-best 28 straight overall, received 60 first-place votes and 1,200 points from the nationwide panel of sportwriters and broadcasters in easily outdistancing Southern Methodist, which received 1,108 points in improving its third-place ranking of last week.

St. John's, Georgetown's opponent this Saturday, is third with 1,080, while Memphis State is fourth with 1,012 and Duke, ranked second for the past five weeks and the only team other than Georgetown to receive first-place votes in the past six weeks, dropped to fifth with 958 points.

The Blue Devils, 13-2, suffered two two-point, overtime losses last week before rallying with a 93-77 road victory Saturday over then-No. 6 North Carolina.

Illinois, 15-4 and 11th last week, jumped to sixth with 729 points, while DePaul moved three places to seventh with 682 points, two more than North Carolina. Oklahoma and Oregon State, 13th and 14th last week, respectively, jumped to ninth and 10th this week with 651 and 605 points. Oklahoma, 13-4, beat then-No. 9 Kansas Saturday despite All-American Wayman Tisdale being held to a career-low six points, while Oregon State improved to 14-1 and 4-0 in the Pac-10 with a 73-57 victory over Washington State.

Syracuse, which was upset by Connecticut at home last weekend, fell from seventh to 11th to lead the Second Ten. The Orangemen are followed by Louisiana Tech, Indiana, Villanova, Kansas, Georgia Tech, Tulsa, Michigan, Virginia Commonwealth and Nevada-Las Vegas.

Last week's Second Ten was Illinois, Louisiana Tech, Oklahoma, Oregon State, Boston College, Virginia Commonwealth, Georgia Tech, Villanova, Michigan State and Tulsa.

Boston College, 11-5, which lost to three Big East Conference foes, two of whom were ranked, Villanova and St. John's, fell from the Top Twenty as did Michigan State, 12-4, which lost two Big Ten Conference games to unranked teams, Iowa and Minnesota.

Michigan, 12-2, and Nevada-Las Vegas, 13-2, rejoined the Top Twenty.

The Wolverines fell from the Top Twenty three weeks ago, while the Runnin' Rebels, who beat Maryland in a nationally televised game Saturday, are returning to the ranked list for the first time in seven weeks.

Drug issue splits players, owners

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The head of the Major League Players Association says the Los Angeles Dodgers' inclusion of a mandatory drug-testing clause in contracts for new players "is very, very destructive."

Donald Fehr, executive director of the players' group, said Monday that he knew of the Dodgers' decision only through the media, but added, "If it's true, I'm astounded and a little angry. I treat it as a matter of utmost seriousness."

Fehr, traveling in Missouri, said in a telephone interview from Kansas City, "We negotiated a joint trust agreement, a very pains-staking, exhausting task, to deal with it (drug use). We ended up with a program and we've tried to make it work.

"In the face of that agreement, what the Dodgers are doing is very, very destructive, given that it's an agreement that the Dodgers are party to. It's difficult to conclude that it's anything but deliberately provocative."

Injuries spell end for Brooks

NEW YORK (AP) — Herb Brooks lost his job because of something over which he had no control — injuries.

Brooks was relieved as coach of the New York Rangers on Monday, replaced by Craig Patrick, the vice president and general manager of the team, and the man who hired Brooks in 1981 with the challenge to lead the franchise to its first National Hockey League title since 1940.

Brooks fell short of that goal even though his teams seemed to make significant progress. Until this year, that is, when injuries ripped apart the roster, and the players who remained could not carry the load.

"The big part of this was injuries, there's no way around it," said Rangers goalie Glen Hanlon. "Then, you get into a losing atmosphere, no matter who is here to coach."

"I'm sure Herb must take some of the blame," added right wing Anders Hedberg. "But everybody has to look at the results. It's just a matter of the results."

This seasons results, a 15-22-8 record, good for only fifth place in the Patrick Division, have been severely disappointing. But, as defenseman Ron Greshner noted, "we haven't had a full team all season. I've never seen such a load of injuries in one year."

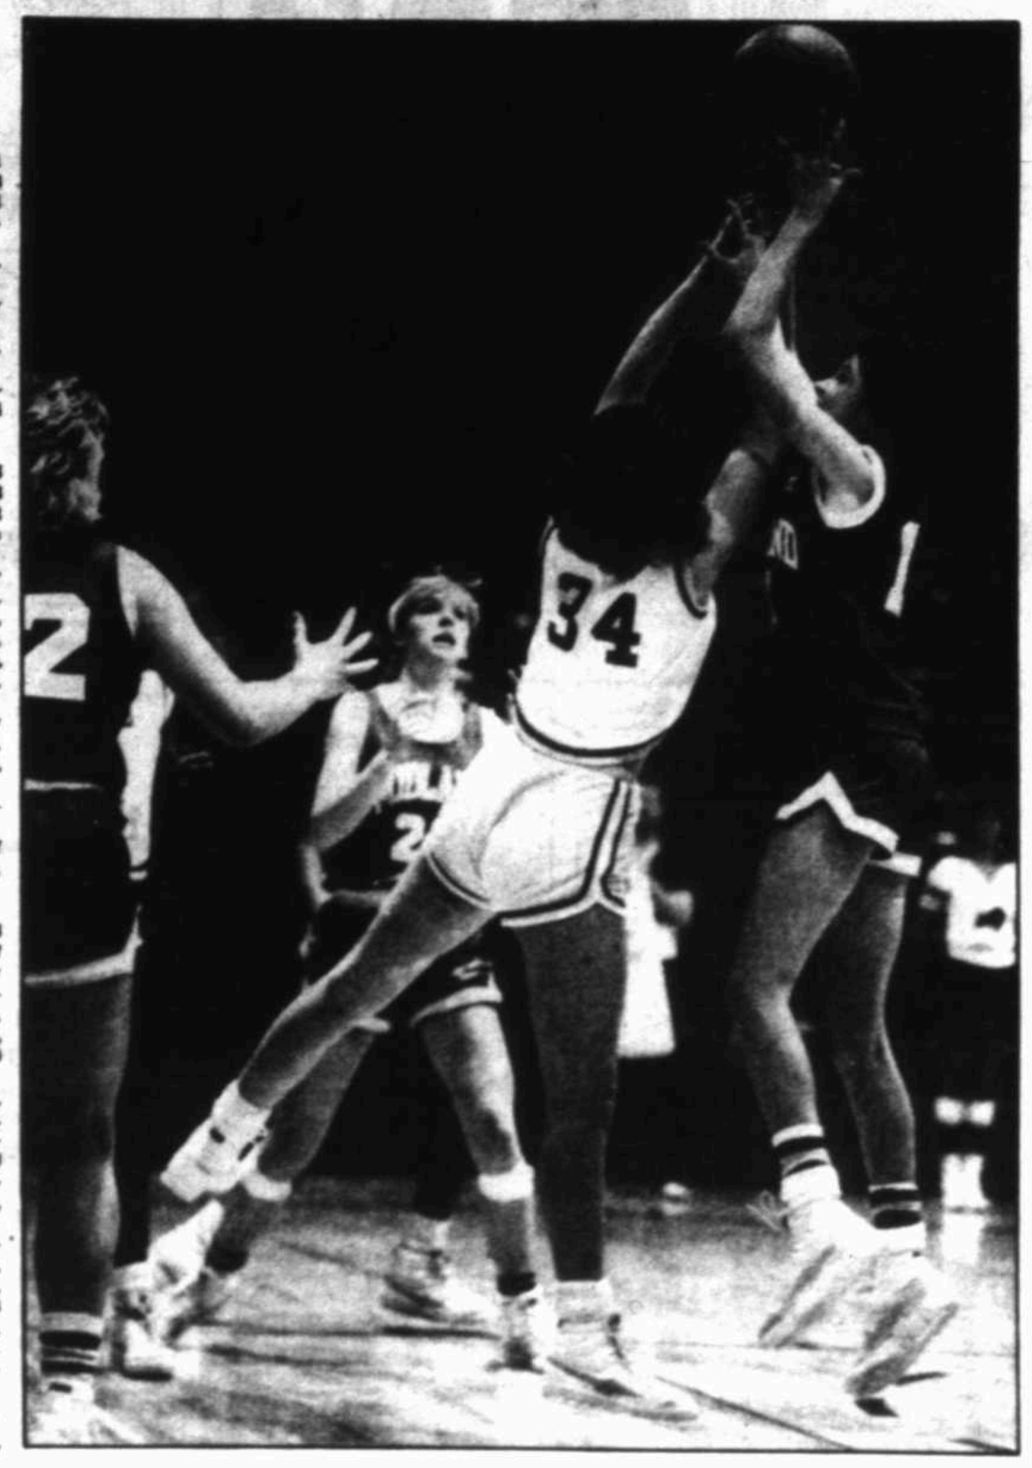

Indeed, the Rangers have had to do without their best forwards (Mark Pavelich, Don Maloney, Hedberg, Mark Osborne) and defensive leaders Greshner, Barry Beck and Tom Laidlaw for sustained periods. Under Brooks' European-influenced system of constant motion, weaving and whirling, not every part is replaceable.

"The players couldn't put it together when we had to," said Beck.

Brooks compiled a 131-113-41 record with the Rangers, whom he joined after a year of coaching in Switzerland. In 1980 Brooks masterminded the U.S. Olympic team's stunning skate to a gold medal at the Winter Olympics.

In each of his three seasons at the Rangers' helm, Brooks saw his team lose in the playoffs to their local rivals, the New York Islanders. Last year's defeat in a fifth-game overtime was the most bitter but also the most encouraging. Brooks began speaking of having the team in the position he had worked for, a position of contending for the Stanley Cup.

But the injuries, beginning with Pavelich's broken leg in the second game of the campaign, ruined that. And reports that Brooks would leave the Rangers following the season, when his contract expires, to return to Minnesota — where he led the University of Minnesota to three NCAA crowns.

On the year, Davis is averaging 26.6 points per game. However, he's been even stronger in league action, scoring at a 30.5 click.

Even with that kind of individual effort, the Bulldogs aren't a one dimensional offensive team. Behind 'D Train,' as he's called by his teammates, Elvin Mackey has also been providing double figure scores, 12.1 for the year and 10.7 in 4-5A play.

Matt Sears and Gil Brassard are two more offensive weapons with Sears scoring 9.9 and 9.7 while Brassard is beating his 7.0 overall average with a 9.2 effort in league play.

Scoring the points hasn't been Midland High's problem this year. The problem has been stopping opponents' attacks.

"We're just not very big," said Stephenson. "We've scored a lot of points but other teams have scored more than we have. Maybe our defense is not as good. I don't know."

Stephenson does know for sure that his team will need some defense tonight against the Lee attack or look for a high-scoring, wild affair at Chap Center.

Permian girls keep second

From Staff Reports

The Odessa Permian girls had no trouble disposing of cross-town rival Odessa High Monday night, 74-34, and as a result the Panthers, 7-2, have moved to within one game of District 4-5A leader Midland Lee, 8-1, thanks to a 44-43 loss the Rebels suffered to Midland High.

In other action around the league, San Angelo, 6-3, remained in a tie for third place with Midland High by posting a 37-23 victory over Big Spring. Abilene High was also a winner, beating Abilene Cooper, 51-40.

The Panthers jumped out to a 14-6 lead in the first quarter and had the Bronchos buried by halftime, 30-14.

Four Panthers broke into double figures in the game led by Sharee Itz and Jana Ivy with 12 each. For OHS, Bunny Smith and Sophie Valles pumped in 11 each.

Abilene Cooper had an early lead against Abilene High, 11-9 at the end of the first quarter, but fell way back in the next to quarters, 26-17 and 37-25, and couldn't overcome the deficit in the final frame.

The Eagles were paced by Treena Jackson with 26 points, the best performance on the night in 4-5A play. Leisa King scored 16 for the Cougars.

In a slow-down style of play in Big Spring, the Bobcats and Steers were in a tough fight through three quarters with San Angelo leading 22-17 going into the final frame. In that fourth quarter, the Bobcats outscored Big Spring 15-6 to ice away the game.

San Angelo's Shawn Sweeten, with 10 points, was the game's only player in double figures.

On Friday, the third-place Bobcats have a chance to tighten the league race even more when they host leader Midland Lee at 8 p.m.

49ers' Montana would like one 1984 pass back

By CHRIS JENKINS
Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — It was almost perfect.

Almost enough to make Joe Montana believe the San Francisco 49ers can do better.

Less than 24 hours after winning his Super Bowl XIX duel with Dan Marino — and with it the most valuable player award — Joe Montana let his thoughts and words drift back to just one of his passes. He reflected not on one of the beauties he threw Super Sunday, however, but on a pass he wishes he hadn't thrown against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The 49ers were trying to avert an upset in that Oct. 14 game at Candlestick Park, staging a fourth-quarter drive, when Montana hoisted a pass that was caught by linebacker Bryan Hinkle. Thus the Niners were stung with what would prove to be their only defeat of the 1984 season.

"I'd like to have that one interception back so we'd have our perfect season," Montana said Monday at the Hyatt Regency Hotel. "But I'll take the 18-1 record and one of these."

MONTANA HELD up his right hand, tilting it just so, the lights flashing brilliantly off the massive diamond ring he's worn for three years. It came with San Francisco's first NFL championship.

But the first one never was like this. Super Bowl XVI was decided by a goal-line stand. Super Bowl XIX was decided by, oh, maybe the middle of the second quarter.

San Francisco dismantled the Miami Dolphins' warhead with both the finesse of a police bomb squad veteran and the sheer force of a blacksmith. The Niners had it either way, any way.

Perfect, the papers said. Not quite, Montana said.

According to Montana, the Niners' ultimate goal is to become better, so convincingly great that they'll someday be known as "the team of the '80s."

They won their first title with rookies and second- and third-year players. "We were just kids," cornerback Ronnie Lott said. The only sign of gray hair is on their brilliant leader, Bill Walsh, who is committed to coaching at least two more years and isn't likely to get stupid in that time.

Certainly, he's smart enough to beg off when anybody mentions the word "dynasty," which was thrown all over the Bay area Monday.

"It has to be done before it is said," Walsh said. "You only have a dynasty once it's a dynasty. Anything else I'd say right now would be rhetoric on my part."

Montana agreed, but he didn't want anybody to forget that the 49ers already are something special, something beyond just the latest NFL champion. That the title was claimed at the expense of the Dolphins, whose legacy includes a team that once went 17-0, made Montana wonder about the Niners' place in history.

"The record itself makes the necessary comparison," Montana said. "Eighteen and one has never been accomplished. It has to at least bring up the question of ranking with the great teams. I know I'd take this team against anybody."

HOW ABOUT itself? Somebody suggested that the only thing capable of beating San Francisco's defense is San Francisco's offense, and vice versa.

"It'd be an interesting matchup," Montana said. "We'd know what they were doing and they'd know what we were doing. The offense would win a few, the defense would win a few."

Win a few. That's exactly what the 49ers did the season after winning their first Super Bowl. When they won the 1981 title, their overall record was 16-3 — their 13-3 regular-season mark was the league's best — but they finished 1982 with a 3-6 mark. Seemed like everybody made the playoffs the strike year except the Niners.

Montana said he couldn't see the same thing happening again next season. All the letdowns the Niners had in 1982, he said, were corrected in 1983 and haven't resurfaced.

To the contrary, as long as Montana is around, San Francisco should be around near the finish. His game is more multidimensional than Marino's, although the latter probably will remain the more revered of the two, since great quarterbacks are judged on their passing exploits, right or wrong.

As many points as Montana scored Sunday with his own arm and legs, though, he earned more points Monday for class. With MVP written all over him, Montana could have put down those who underplayed him and overplayed Marino. Or he could have put down Marino.

Montana did neither.

Question: "Joe, is it amusing to you to have heard everybody talking about Marino, then you go out and beat him?"

Montana: "Looking back at his record, it was not at all amusing that we had to play him. The things he did during the season were devastating. I respect him."

As Montana spoke in the downtown hotel, thousands of Niner nuts were swelling the street outside for the obligatory parade.

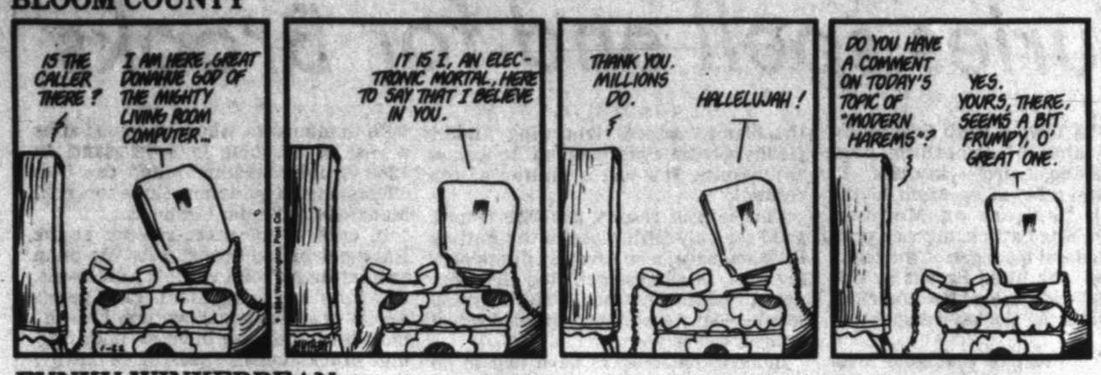

"I missed the last parade," Montana said. "I heard it was hectic, guys getting pulled off cars and things like that. I'm sorry I'll miss it again."

Sure, Joe. Instead of participating in the celebration, Montana said he and his future bride had to catch a plane for Honolulu and Sunday's Pro Bowl. He was accompanied by his fiancee, Jennifer Wallace, the young blonde who lathers him up in those shaving commercials.

Adoring fans screamed at Montana and his ravishing future bride as they left the hotel and headed for the airport, one can only assume, in Montana's red Ferrari. He hasn't yet received the sports car they give to the Super Bowl MVP.

Yes, almost perfect.

In the Open Room Piotr Gawrys …f Poland reached four spades on the auction shown. The French West elected to double and got his side off to a good start when he led the jack of clubs. It seemed that they would defeat four spades easily for a 12 International Match Point gain. Even if East wins the ace of clubs, as long as he returns a club West can still maneuver a ruff. When he is in with the ace of trumps he can reach his partner by underleading the ace of hearts to collect a club ruff.

East did indeed choose to go up with the ace of clubs, but declarer came up with a brilliant falsecard — he dropped the queen. From East's point of view it was quite likely that his partner had led a club from a sequence headed by the J-10-9. After considerable thought, East elected to shift to the king of hearts. Now his entry to give his partner a club ruff had vanished, and the spade game could no longer be defeated. A 12 IMP loss had been turned into a 7 IMP gain.

Poland gained steadily throughout the first half of the final. A brief third-quarter rally by the French was too little, too late, and the Poles had won their second world title — the previous one was in New Orleans in 1978.

Breast cancer treatment may attack tumors directly

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An experimental breast cancer treatment, designed to reduce hormone levels of pre-menopausal women, may also be able to help older women by attacking tumors directly, a new study suggests.

Scottish scientists found that a man-made cousin of the natural "luteinizing hormone-releasing hormone" reduces populations of breast cancer cells in the laboratory, suggesting an alternative explanation for its effect against some tumors in earlier animal experiments, according to a report in the current issue of the British journal Nature.

That hints at a potential against advanced breast cancer in post-menopausal women, but any application is years away and will require further proof, other cancer experts said Monday.

The Scottish work was done by researchers at the Centre for Reproductive Biology, the University of Edinburgh and the university department of clinical surgery in the Royal Infirmary, all in Edinburgh.

Natural LHRH stimulates the pituitary gland to create another hormone, which in turn stimulates production of hormones by the ovaries. These ovarian hormones are implicated in sustaining perhaps a third of breast cancer tumors.

Past experiments have shown that doses of the LHRH-like substance shrink mammary tumors in animals, apparently because it eventually makes the pituitary stop responding to LHRH, William Miller, one of the researchers, said Monday in a telephone interview.

When used on breast cancer cells themselves, the substance may kill them or simply stop replacement of those that die naturally, he said. In any case, similar experiments must be tried in animals to see if the lab results apply to natural systems, Miller said. Given the doses required to work in the laboratory, the chemical may have to be administered from an implanted pump or tube to be effective, he said.

Breast cancer will strike 119,000 American women this year, the American Cancer Society estimates. The society projects that 38,700 women will die from it this year. The risk of malignant breast cancer increases with age in the United States, and in 1980, the largest numbers of cases were reported in age groups from 55 to 69, one study found.

Dr. Mark Lippman, head of the medical breast cancer section of the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., agreed that if the LHRH-like substance acts directly against breast cancer cells, it would indicate potential for treating advanced breast cancer — in which the cancer has spread — in post-menopausal women. Past attempts to show that direct effect have been unconvincing, he said Monday, but he said he had not seen the Scottish work.

He said research into use of LHRH-like substances in treating breast cancer is "a couple years behind the story in prostate (cancer)," where their usefulness has been "clearly proven" when used in combination with other drugs. Some question whether that therapy works better than estrogen therapy or castration for prostate cancer, he said.

Kate Smith still 'darling' despite ill health

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Kate Smith, known the world over for her stirring rendition of "God Bless America," cannot sing anymore and talks only sporadically.

But the woman whom Franklin D. Roosevelt said captured the essence of America still is a "darling" person who is making progress in learning to walk again, her sister says.

"She has a long way to go, but we are deeply encouraged," said Helena Smith Steene.

Ms. Smith, a longtime diabetic who suffered from high blood pressure, lapsed into a coma for four months in 1976 and has been ailing since.

"She takes in everything that goes on" at her Raleigh home, "but there's something there that just doesn't function right now," Mrs. Steene said. "But she does answer questions, and she is very much aware."

Ms. Smith, 77, who was awarded in 1982 the Medal of Freedom, the highest citation American can bestow on a civilian, was "like a kid at Coney Island, just starry-eyed with excitement" when she sang, and she hasn't lost that vitality, her sister said in a recent interview.

"She always had a great deal of the child in her — she was delightful, and wonderfully mischievous. And you can still see that, if you look carefully," Mrs. Steene said.

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — President Jimmy Carter's former press secretary Jody Powell lectured Boston College students for two hours on "Politics and the Media."

Powell

Powell began his tenure Monday as the third Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. Professor of American Politics under a $1.3 million endowment created six years ago for the longtime U.S. House Speaker, a 1936 Boston College graduate.

Since Carter's 1980 defeat by President Reagan, Powell has written a syndicated newspaper column and worked as a correspondent for the American Broadcasting Co.

A resident of Washington, Powell plans to commute for his once-a-week teaching chores.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The first American woman to walk in space has taken her first solo powerless flight by glider.

Kathryn Sullivan, 33, who circled Earth in the open cargo bay of the space shuttle 140 miles into space for more than three hours on Oct. 11, made the sailplane solo on Jan. 18 at the Estrella Sailport 30 miles south of Phoenix.

"She was able to solo on her eighth flight, after only four hours of instruction," said Les Horvath, who operates the sailport. "When you're good, you're good."

Ms. Sullivan said she prefers sailplaning to piloting a powered aircraft because it involves "an extra level of refinement, skill and challenge."

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Jihan Sadat, the widow of former Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, said it could take two to three generations before the changes in women's roles in the Arab world are fully accepted.

"A woman in our society has been obliged to change herself in less than 20 years," said Jihan Sadat, 50, in her first lecture Monday as visiting professor of Egyptian culture at the University of South Carolina.

"Women still submit to the sovereignty of the family...the domination of the male," Mrs. Sadat said. Arabic women, she said, are still strongly influenced by a sense of duties to the old values and by roles defined by their traditional Islamic beliefs, she said.

TORONTO (AP) — Cathy Evelyn Smith, a former rock singer accused of murdering comedian John Belushi with injections of cocaine and heroin, has ended her fight against extradition to California and turned herself in to police.

Brian Greenspan, attorney for the 37-year-old Toronto woman, said his client gave up her formal challenge of the extradition request after a 22-month fight because "discussions and negotiations" with the Los Angeles County District Attorney's office "provided an acceptable basis for Miss Smith's voluntary departure."

Greenspan said Miss Smith would fly to Los Angeles for a court appearance there today. He refused to say if prosecutors had agreed to reduced charges.

"It just wouldn't be proper, it would be inappropriate to comment further," he told reporters.

Belushi, star of "Saturday Night Live" on television and such films as "Animal House," was found dead of "acute cocaine and heroin intoxication" on March 5, 1982, in a Los Angeles hotel bungalow, according to authorities. He was 33.

Miss Smith once was back-up singer for Hoyt Axton, Gordon Lightfoot and other musicians.

Police questioned Miss Smith in California on the day Belushi's body was found and released her. She later moved back to Toronto from Los Angeles.

The case was reopened after the National Enquirer published an interview with Miss Smith quoting her as saying she injected Belushi several times with "speedballs" — mixtures of heroin and cocaine. She was indicted in March 1983 on one count of murder and 13 counts of administering dangerous drugs.

Midlander follows first lady's style at ball

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — By 9 p.m. Monday night, the cloak room at the Washington Convention Center looked like Fred the Furrier's much-vaunted vaults: Minks and raccoons and chinchillas and foxes were crushed together in a space 12 racks wide and 50 feet deep. And an endless line of furs was still waiting for space.

Forget the "respectable Republican cloth coat." This was an inaugural ball with 8,000 invited guests, and there was little room for anything that wasn't made of fur. Not to mention sequins, spangles, lace, chiffon or ruffles.

In short, if it didn't shout, "I'm here," no one wore it.

While few of the women said that they were taking their cue from Nancy Reagan's much-heralded inaugural wardrobe, Judith Devenport of Midland, Texas, clearly had the first lady in mind.

Tall, blond and bejeweled in pear-shaped rubies and Texas-sized diamonds, Devenport waltzed in wearing Oscar de la Renta's slim red silk jacquard gown with hip stitched pleats. "Well," she said of her choice. "I wanted a Reagan red dress. And Oscar just happened to make one."

"I come from a very conservative town, and this is a once-in-a-lifetime chance for me to go all out," said Yolanda Montoya of Portales, N.M., who showed up in an anything-but-small-town strapless black satin gown with a bow at the waist and a flounce at the ankle — a dress that, she enthusiastically pointed out, she found after a search that began in August.

"I feel just like a country girl at the fair," she said.

Country girl was, in fact, just one of the styles at this ball, which could best be described as eclectic. Just about every woman had her own sense of how to combine comfort with glamour.

Lucille Bocra of Middlesex County, N.J., for example, offered a variation on the Dolly Parton theme in a revealing pale purple ankle length-dress covered with white sequin-trimmed flowers.

Meanwhile, Connie Lewenthal of Staten Island showed up with her 10-year-old son, J.R., her video camera and a gold brocade dress with mink collar and cuffs that she proudly pointed out was bought at Bergdorf-Goodman in 1969.

"Comfort? I don't know comfort. I'll gladly sacrifice comfort for a different look," said Pat Ray of California, who wore a white leather dress with blouson top and body-hugging skirt. Ray, like some other women, called the fashions at the ball a disappointment. "I don't like all the little cloned formals," she said. "I think these women weren't conscious enough of what they should wear."

"The clothes are basically disappointing," said Washington fashion designer Robin Spear, who sparkled in a gown made of black and irridescent sequins. "There are a lot of old styles and old dresses from the closet."

Not everyone, however, came in for criticism. Renee Brandeis of Great Neck, N.Y., found the elusive combination of ease and elegance in a white taffeta peplum top teamed with a black taffeta skirt and white lace stockings — all of which, she happily pointed out, were already in her closet.

Ball gowns sleek

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — For Nancy Reagan, it was a night to "shine like a piece of jewelry," as designer James Galanos called it in describing the all-over gleaming white gown he created for her to wear to the balls.

But for others, it was the moment for toned-down, soignee fashion. If the first inaugural was a "glitz blitz," this was the reflecting glow, lots of shine and golden shimmer, slim silhouettes and beautiful black dresses.

Some of the best-looking dresses at the Hilton were almost devoid of decoration and were either pure black or pure white.

DEAR ABBY

Full figures: Pro and con

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Flat-Chested in Ill." who felt inadequate because she didn't have more.

I have had "too much" (38D) since eighth grade, and I was miserable. All through high school I was teased, humiliated and sexually harassed.

I even had to quit cross-country running because it was too painful and embarrassing.

"Flat-Chested" doesn't need a fuller figure; she needs a higher self-esteem.

If I had an extra $2,000 lying around, I would treat myself to breast-reduction surgery. — TOO MUCH IN TEXAS

DEAR TOO MUCH: My mail this week would bring joy to the "Have Nots" who assume that all gentlemen prefer big-breasted women. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: You told "Flat-Chested," who felt inadequate, to wear a padded bra.

Well, here is one man who would consider it unfortunate were she to take your advice. Why?

Because the flatter the chest, the more passionate the woman.

I'm in my 50s now, and it's not just my opinion. I've talked to a lot of men, and they all said flat-chested women make better lovers.

Please tell flat-chested women not to envy their big-bosomed sisters. Nature has a way of compensating. — LIKES 'EM SMALL IN IOWA

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Flat-Chested in Moline, Ill.": In the days before they had padded bras, I was flat-chested, so I wore "falsies." Then one day my bra came undone and one of my "breasts" fell off!

I hated being flat-chested and longed for larger breasts, then lo and behold, I discovered I had added several inches to my chest. The only trouble was, I had doubled my inches everywhere else! I was no longer flat — I was fat! At last I had the bust I had always wanted, but I wasn't nearly as attractive as I was before I doubled my 110 pounds.

I thought about how I used to hate my flat chest, then I noticed how fashionable and smart-looking the fashion models were. They were all flat-chested — every one of them!

So, dearie, don't waste any more time longing for what you don't have. You may get it some day, and wish you didn't.

If you have two, healthy, cancer-free breasts, thank God, no matter what size. — FORMER FLATTIE IN AUGUSTA, GA.

DEAR ABBY: I totally disagree with your advice to "Flat-Chested." Wearing a padded bra might make her look better, but what happens when she takes it off in the company of a man who was expecting more?

I was as flat-chested as they come, so all through high school my mother had me wearing padded bras. I didn't fool anybody. The girls in my gym class soon found out that the 36B's I was showing off weren't really me, and it wasn't long before all the boys knew, too. (Girls talks and so do boys.)

I finally decided it wasn't worth the teasing, so I threw away my padded bras. I figured honesty is the best policy, so why put on a false front? — I'VE GOTTA BE ME

DEAR ABBY: I'm surprised you didn't recommend silicone implants to "Flat-Chested."

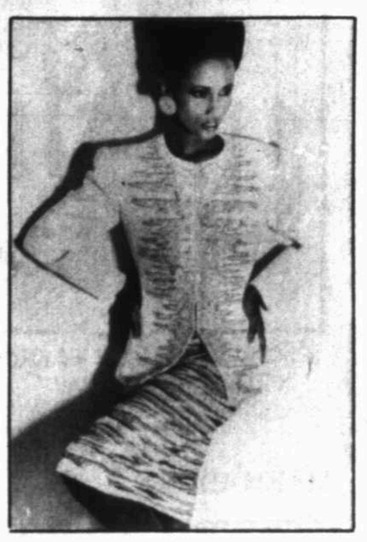

I spent 39 years hating my body, then I decided to have breast-augmentation surgery. I'm only sorry I waited so long. — LOOKING GREAT

Automobile becomes way of life

By ERMA BOMBECK

In the beginning was the car.

It had a motor and four wheels and when the motor turned over and the wheels went around, it was good.

And Detroit said, "Let there be light."

And the windows were covered with glass and headlights succeeded wicks. It couldn't possibly get any better than that.

Then Detroit said, "Let there be sound," and a radio was installed to bring music to the ears of the driver. Sometimes the motor wouldn't turn over and the wheels wouldn't go around because the radio ran the battery down, but it was good.

Eventually style came to the car and the seats were soft to the touch, interiors lined with velvet and the carpet under the brake pedal was lush and plush. The carpet outlasted the transmission, but it was good.

And Detroit said, "Let there be climate control," and a heater was installed and air conditioning became an option. It was a car for all seasons, except when it rained and the windshield wipers never made contact with the glass window.

Then it came to pass that one day someone figured out families spend a lot of time in the car. And Detroit had another flash. Let there be comfort. Ashtrays were placed near every seat. A little cup holder was incorporated in the console. The seats reclined and a tape deck provided music on cassette. Children fought over the two windows and dripped secret sauce and onion rings between the cushions, but it was good.

There was no doubt anymore that the car was becoming one of the most important forces in American lives. But it had to hold their attention. No longer would they be content to just drive around. They had to be entertained. Electric windows were installed, lights were primed to flash when the brake was on, and a CB radio where they could drive and talk to truck drivers they didn't know was added.

When they tired of this, Detroit added voices. You could carry on a conversation with talking headlights, chatty brakes and hostile seatbelts. You could pick up the phone and talk about the traffic. If that wasn't enough, you could decipher personalized license plates or figure out what a person was all about by reading his bumper stickers.

Some days the motor turned over and the wheels went around, but if the power went out in your house, the electric garage doors wouldn't go up and you couldn't get the car out the garage.

But it was good.

'Coca-Cola' fashions designed for comfort

By JOHN DUKA
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — When famous non-fashion names get involved in designing a collection of clothes for the mass market, the results are often not worth looking at. The good ideas are usually deemed too advanced and dropped, as if the benighted members of that market have bad, or nonexistent, taste. Murjani's licensing agreement with Coca-Cola to produce Coca-Cola Clothes, as they are being called, may be an exception. The clothes are surprisingly good, which is why Tommy Hilfiger, who is 33 years old and who designed the collection, has such a big smile these days.

Naturally, the collections for men and women each include the requisite five-button jeans (with a prominently displayed logo on back). But the collection is satisfyingly diverse. The clothes vary from crisp windbreakers and cotton chinos to brightly colored sweat clothes to jackets in traditional school stripes.

At a time when designer labels have become passe, that logo is strangely appealing, not, of course, that you'd want to wear it to dinner.

Planned Parenthood reaffirms support for abortion rights

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

On the eve of today's 12th anniversary of the Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion, local Planned Parenthood officials called a press conference Monday to reaffirm their support for the right to have an abortion, and to condemn "terrorist" violence against abortion clinics.

"The recent bombings of family-planning clinics are an abhorrent terrorist activity which must be stopped," said Charles Seltzer, board president of Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin Inc., at the agency's Midland clinic.

"Planned Parenthood will continue to support the freedom of choice for women's reproductive rights, and we will not simply sit idly by and let groups who represent a minority of opinion jeopardize this freedom."

Family planning and abortion clinics across the country were bracing for the possibility of more violence today, the 12th anniversary of the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision. But Planned Parenthood Executive Director Dana Frazee said no special precautions were being taken locally, because no abortions are performed in local clinics.

"We're a family-planning clinic, not a provider of abortions," she said.

If a woman being counseled by Planned Parenthood chooses to have an abortion, she is referred to clinics in cities such as Lubbock, or to one of "a few" local doctors who perform abortions, Ms. Frazee said.

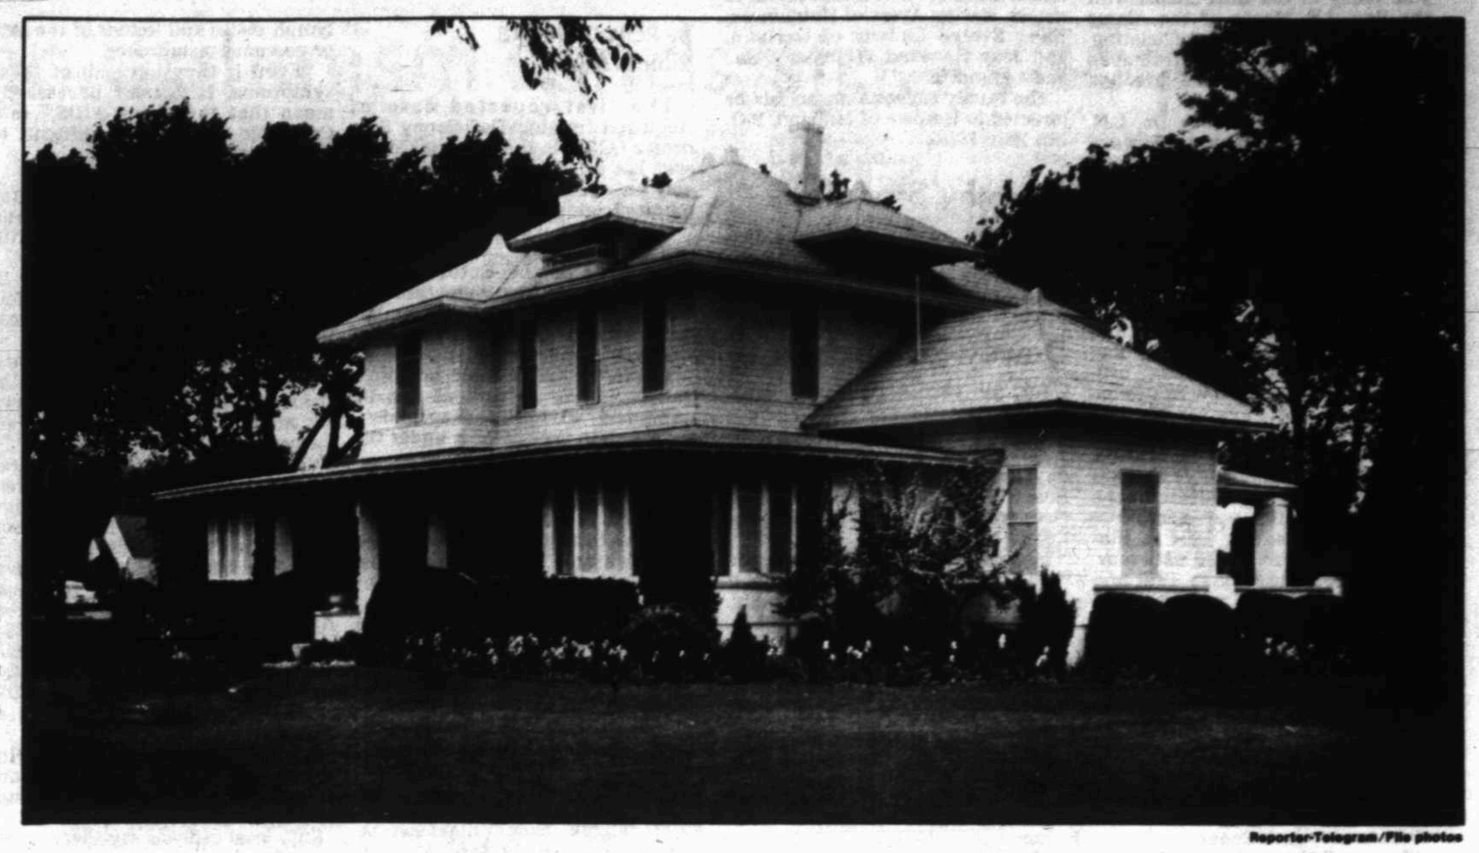

Seltzer blamed the recent violence on "frustrated" extremists from the fringe of the anti-abortion movement, but said the rhetoric used by the movement's leaders had made the violence inevitable.

"It's simply a manifestation of the rhetoric they use," he said. "Sooner or later it was bound to generate some activity."

But Orson Guenthner, president of West Texans for Life, said his group "is very much opposed (to the bombings). We do not support it or encourage it. We're very fortunate in this country to be able to change things legally, and that's what we're about."

Though he opposes violence against Planned Parenthood, Guenthner said he disapproves of the organization. The local chapter may not perform abortions but the national organization owns 51 abortion clinics, he said, "And there's no doubt that they promote it."

The Hill House was moved to save it from the wrecking ball. It has been adapted for reuse as a residence and accommodates private parties.

Despite public outcry, the Lancaster House was demolished in 1984, when no adaptive reuse could be found for the old structure.

Odessa's oldest remaining school building was razed in 1984, as the Ector County Independent School District decided it was not fit for future use.

Girl takes stand in indecency trial

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A teary 12-year-old girl testified Monday that a Midland construction worker made lewd remarks to her before exposing his genitals as she retrieved an overthrown ball in the front yard of his southside mobile home last summer.

Larry Gann, 42, of rural Midland since September, is on trial in 238th State District Judge Van Culp's court on charges of indecency with a child by exposure. His case, which was to resume at 9 a.m. today, is the first of three similar trials scheduled this week at Midland County Courthouse.

Barry Wion, charged with three counts of aggravated sexual assault, is to go before 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin at 9 a.m. today. Also expected to be tried in Baskin's court this week is Joseph Gallagher, charged with one count of indecency with a child by sexual contact.

Gann, a four-year resident of Midland and former neighbor of the 12-year-old, is expected to take the stand today, according to his attorney, Ed Shelby.

The Travis Elementary School sixth-grader told the four-man, eight-woman jury that Gann "constantly" made remarks to her and her friends about the progress of their physical maturity.

The girl and a 13-year-old friend, who also testified, told the court the two were playing catch around Aug. 4 in the middle of the street between Gann's mobile home and hers.

Old buildings survive through adaptive reuse

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Lancaster House in Midland and Odessa's first high school were demolished in 1984 despite public sentiments for saving the historical structures.

But there are success stories of Permian Basin history buffs rescuing from the wrecking ball buildings they felt should be preserved for time.

Residents who spontaneously take up the battle join professional historians like Dr. Jay Tillapaugh of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in working to convince city fathers to save the structures that mark periods in the development of Midland/Odessa.

Tillapaugh, through his work with the Permian Historical Society and Ector County Historical Commission and currently with a new UTPB class, has noted the buildings saved and lost as forces of the present pressure those of the past.

Former teller indicted for embezzlement

From Staff Reports

Carla Gene Schumpert, a former teller for First Savings & Loan Association in Odessa, on Monday was indicted by a federal grand jury in Midland for allegedly embezzling approximately $11,000 from the association in 1982.

In the two-count indictment, Ms. Schumpert, 24, was charged with planning to purloin the funds in the first half of May 1982. The indictment said she and Steve Schumpert, an unindicted co-conspirator, had "agreed to embezzle the money." In the second count, the indictment accused her of transferring the $11,000 into Schumpert's account.

Court records did not indicate her relation to Schumpert, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which probed into the case, declined to comment.

If convicted, Ms. Schumpert could be sentenced up to five years in prison and fined $10,000 for planning the theft and could be sentenced to another five years and fined $5,000 for embezzling the funds.

Ms. Schumpert's bail was set at $10,000 by U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith.

In another case, the grand jurors indicted Jorge Posada-Ramos, 38, a Mexican national from Ojinaga, for illegal re-entry into the United States. Posada-Ramos, who was deported in 1979, was re-arrested on Jan. 2. If convicted, he could be sentenced up to two years in prison and fined $1,000.

Judge's order protects surgeons' rights

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton has issued an eight-point order forbidding infringements on the professional rights of an Odessa father-son surgical team which is suing Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, three other orthopedic surgeons and insurance companies for $20 million to $755 million.

The plaintiffs, Dr. Stephen E. Driscoll, 40, and his father, Dr. Edward T. Driscoll, are accusing the hospital administration and surgical staff, fellow surgeons Dr. Thomas Meek, Dr. Phillip Zeech and Dr. Ronald Manicom, insurance companies and claims adjusters of trying to undermine their surgical practice by denying them surgical privileges at the hospital.

The Driscolls contend that insurance carriers and claims adjusters have libeled them by calling them "knife happy" and the defendant surgeons slandered them by terming their surgical procedures as "incompetent," "horrible" and "unnecessary."

Bunton's order prohibits the hospital staff, surgeons Meek, Zeech and Manicom and any others from interfering with the Driscolls' medical practice.

The order enjoins the defendants from:

— "Publishing any written statements which might tend to interfere with the plaintiffs' professional practice.

— "Conditioning workers' compensation benefits, payment of medical bills or payment for medication or...treatment upon an agreement by claimants to stop receiving treatment or refraining from receiving treatment from plaintiffs.

— "Reviewing the medical records of plaintiffs' patients and interviewing the plaintiffs' patients without plaintiffs' permission.

— "Charging plaintiffs' patients additional fees or deposits not required of other physicians' patients.

— "Instructing employees not to seek the plaintiffs' care.

— "Injuring plaintiffs' business or professional practice by use of extortion or commercial bribery.

— "Interfering with plaintiffs' ability to practice orthopedic surgery at Medical Center Hospital; obstructing justice and harassing, intimidating or retaliating in any manner against any witness, potential witness or party to these proceedings.

— "Monitoring the elective surgery in any manner performed by plaintiffs at Medical Center Hospital or other medical clinic."

The hospital's surgical committee has charged the Driscolls with such practices as using "unprofessional language and behavior" in the operating room; "inconsistent, inadequate and inappropriate" pre-operative evaluations; "superficial evaluations" which resulted in "early or unncessary operative intervention"; "episodes of excessive use of medication"; conflicts with nurses, and "unorthodox use of traditional treatment."

The jury trial to settle the civil dispute is to begin April 29 in Bunton's court in Midland. This will come after the hospital's two ad hoc committees confront the Driscolls with the charges by mid-March and decide whether or not to dismiss them from practicing surgery at the hospital.

This catering to fluffy balls of fur is for the dogs

I'm all for starting a new support group for people without pets.

Pets Anonymous, Parents Without Pets, The Society for the Prevention of Idolatry to Animals — call it what you will.

This business of catering to some ball of fur that should be out chasing other balls of fur is for the dogs.

I haven't always hated pets.

Back when I was a kid, I had a dog. And several cats. And a snake named George. I went through my "gotta-have-a-gerbil" stage, tried hamsters, had three canaries (all with the same name plus a Roman numeral) and had a turtle that lived under the kitchen sink. I went through gold fish daily.

So I am well-qualified to speak out on the issue.

But we had a rule (strictly enforced by a Spic n Span mother) that animals were animals and people were people. Somehow, I have never gotten over that. They all lived outside (especially George), ate plain old animal food (the cheapest — no numbered diet cans for our brood) and no one bragged about them socially.

What has happened over the last 20 years to relegate pets to the enviable position that once was reserved for kings, Mom, statues, Ming vases and forbidden lovers — those things that are truly of pedestal virtue?

It's only a guess, but like so much of the social metamorphosis that has changed the way we think and act, pet ownership has been influenced ridiculously by "the times."

I attribute all pet mania to "the era of the single person." One day we're families with children inside the house and pets on the outside.

Boom. All of a sudden, everyone opts to stay single and instead, plan their life around a promising career and an uncompromising animal.

Don't you just hate it when someone (usually with a neat job like "personnel director" or "executive administrative director of administration") tells you how they just love being single and they don't need anyone?

Monkeystuff.

Don't you know that they sweat all the way home just thinking about that furry ball of comfort awaiting their arrival with a wet tongue and a bathroom full of shredded toilet paper?

They shakily unlock the front door and, slamming behind them all the day's nerved-up confidence, they collapse into euphoric reunion with a calf-high cockapoo.

Let's face it. The reason why people have turned to their pets for the comfort and dependability they need is because they do not have a relationship with a human being where they can get the same.

I advocate putting the dog outside with a bowl of water and some bargain canned food or better yet, plate scrapings, get the kitty litter box out of the bathroom (yech), put on some dancing shoes and go out on a date.

Back to humans, you might say.

No more staying at home thinking of ways to make your pet happier. (Do you seriously think a cat cares?) No more talking about them at cocktail parties like so many PTA mothers. No more vacations put off because you couldn't find a sitter (Kennels are fine). AND no more (please) updates on how your pet is "feeling".

A support group for people without pets is, of course, a very good idea (thank you very much) for those of us who are daily submitted to the latest flu bug to hit "Debbie." (You notice that dogs and cats used to have names like Fluff, Ruff, Blackie and Brownie. Today they all have people names. After all, you can't spill out what a bad day at the office you've had to someone named Killer).

I am not advocating packing up all the domestic tabbies and shipping them back to the Congo, but I do think that pets need to be put in their place.

Perhaps a support group for pet owners who are trying to achieve this would not be a bad idea. (They could run over to each other's houses in the middle of the night when they all-of-a-suddenly remember that they have put the dog in the garage for the night instead of placing it on the pillow next to them like they normally do.)

Animal withdrawal is a tough thing to face alone.

And while the other single pet-owner (also on the wagon) is over there, maybe they could sit down and talk. Or whatever.

TRIAL

"Is (her friend) a bad thrower?" asked Midland County Assistant District Attorney Jack Connors.

"I guess," the girl said, giggling through her tears. "We were just foolin' around.

"We both raced over there and, as usual, his door was open and he was standing there," she continued. "He called our names...he was making comments about us like, 'I see your breasts are getting bigger...'"

Gann, who was wearing shorts and flip-flop sandals according to the girl's testimony, then exposed and fondled himself, she said.

"We started saying, 'Don't you have any manners? You're disgusting,'" she said. "Then we picked up the ball and left."

The child also testified that Gann had exposed his buttocks to her and her cousins previously.

"But my cousins didn't see," she said. "He came out and said the stuff he usually said and then he bent over and showed me his rear."

According to the 13-year-old's testimony, Gann "had it hanging out and was playing with himself...I said, 'Gross,' and turned around and we left."

Both children said they didn't tell their parents because they were afraid they would not be believed.

The 12-year-old's mother testified neighborhood children told her husband about the incident.

"This is kind of an unusual subject to come up," said Connors. "How did it come up?"

"The kids were saying they were so relieved to be going back to California because of (Gann)," the mother said.

Her husband, she testified, woke her up immediately and the two confronted the child, who confirmed the incidents.

"I was shocked," she said. "It was hard to believe that someone that lived next to us would do something like that. He was our neighbor and we put our trust in him."

The couple called the police that night and several of the children were taken to the station to make statements, according to testimony from Dusty Land and Ronnie Wilson, Midland Police Department detective sergeants.

The girls, who said Gann never touched them nor invited them to play in his yard or house, testified they were more "disgusted" with Gann than afraid of him.

The two also testified they knew the difference in telling a lie and in telling the whole truth.

"It's like when you fib when you're not telling the truth," the 12-year-old said. "It's like when you steal a cookie from the cookie jar and say you didn't."

RIGHTS

"We are opposed to violence in all forms," he said. "They are taking my tax dollars and using them to recommend abortions to women."

Guenthner's group is planning to hold memorial services at 7 p.m. today at the Midland and Ector county courthouses for the 15 million fetuses they say have been legally aborted since 1973.

Bills restricting abortion rights recently have been introduced in Austin, "But it's impossible to legislate and change a court decision," Seltzer said.

"If they are enacted, Planned Parenthood will be in the forefront of those attacking (the bills) on constitutional grounds," he said. "They're going to be looking at ending up in court."

The only ways to alter the Roe vs. Wade ruling are to amend the Constitution or restructure the court through new appointments, according to Seltzer. Although President Reagan has indicated he plans to appoint anti-abortion justices, Seltzer doesn't think the court will completely reverse Roe vs. Wade.

"It would be very difficult for any court to throw Roe vs. Wade out," he said, predicting that a "restructuring" of the decision limiting but not eliminating abortion rights was more likely.

Ms. Frazee said Planned Parenthood had called the press conference because "there comes a point when you want people to know you're proud of what you're doing."

The agency provides a valuable service, Seltzer said, and will resist attempts by anti-abortion groups to impose restrictions on those services.

"We're not going to go away simply because those people are more vocal than we are."

Midland-Odessa area reports first AIDS case

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

The first reported case of Acquired Immuno-Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) in the Midland-Odessa area has local health officials relatively unconcerned and the gay community frightened.

"We don't have much of a problem in West Texas," said Toby Cross, supervisor of the Ector County Health Dept. "We have one case that was diagnosed in early December but it was probably contracted elsewhere."

The individual, a male homosexual, is "doing as well as can be expected with the diagnosis", according to Cross. "He is under the care of a physician," he said.

Although there have been no reported cases in Midland, AIDS-like symptoms have been reported.

"We've had some people who need to be watched," said Jim Davis, laboratory director for the City of Midland Health Dept. "That means that they're exhibiting some of the symptoms but still haven't been diagnosed as yet."

The disease, according to Cross, has some high-risk groups. These include promiscuous bisexual or homosexual males, Haitian refugees, intravenous drug abusers and hemophiliacs.

Symptoms of the disease include severe fatigue, fever or night sweats, unexplained weight loss, chronic relapses of diarrhea, shortness of breath, generalized swelling of the lymph nodes and lesions of the skin or mucuous membranes.

"Even if they have all of these symptoms, it doesn't necessarily mean that they have AIDS," said Cross. "It is very, very difficult to diagnose the disease."

One local physician agrees.

"It's very hazy," said Dr. Walter Hewell, an internist. "I've got one guy right now who might have it, but I just can't diagnose it."

Hewell, who attended a review in New Orleans on AIDS, gave a conference last year to the local medical staff.

While officials at Ector County Health Dept. are relatively calm about the case, reaction to the news has brought anxiety to members of the gay community.

"When you take into consideration the small population of this area and the way that people date — it's scary," said one man who asked not to be named.

To date, 6,993 cases of AIDS have been reported nationally, resulting in 3342 deaths. Texas has recorded 316 cases of the disease with 154 deaths. These figures have been calculated "since the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta gave AIDS national attention in 1979," said Cross.

"There have been 169 cases in Houston, 71 in Dallas and 20 in San Antonio," said Cross. "But this is the first reported case in West Texas."

Still, local officials say there is no cause for alarm.

"We're not having a problem," said Davis.

Police investigate rash of doctors' offices burglaries

From Staff Reports

Midland police are investigating a rash of burglaries of doctors' offices within a six-block radius of Midland Memorial Hospital since Friday night.

Five reports of break-ins have been received by police during the weekend.

Although there are no suspects, "we expect a break in this case at any time," said Lt. Jim Colburn.

All the offices have been entered by breaking windows and all have sustained major vandalism, reports indicate.

According to police, Dr. Luciano Ladaga discovered Monday morning his office at 1906 W. Illinois Ave. was entered by breaking out two bathroom windows on the northwest side of the building. Ladaga, who had last been in his office at 5 p.m. Friday, said a sample bottle of Empirin with codeine and a sample bottle of Valium were taken. Also taken were a box of 100 syringes valued at $50 and Saturday's mail.

Damage to the windows was placed at $20.

Nancy Stewart, who cleans the offices of Dr. Kirby B. Tarry, 1405 W. Illinois Ave., and Dr. Richard G. Reese, 1407 W. Illinois Ave., reported their offices were burglarized during the weekend.

Kirby told police he had been in his office at 6 p.m. Saturday. Reported stolen was $60 from a bank bag. Damage to the shattered windows was placed at $60.

Previously reported was the burglary of Dr. Dean Thurston's office at 509 N. Garfield St. About $250 in cash was taken from a forced-open cash box.

Also reported Sunday were the burglaries of the offices of Dr. Herman Cirkovic, 2114 W. Michigan, and Dr. Nick Shroff, 2115 W. Michigan.

According to reports, $144 in cash, 20 10-milligram vials of Valium injectibles and 50-150 syringes were stolen from Cirkovic's office.

Shroff's office sustained about $500 worth of damage in broken windows, desks and cabinets.

Craddick: Marina venture unrelated to water bill

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, says his inquiries to the Lower Colorado River Authority regarding the possibility of locating marina facilities on LCRA property are "just a business venture" unrelated to pending water legislation.

An article in the Houston Post Sunday noted Craddick chairs the House Natural Resources Committee, and the LCRA "could be greatly impacted by the water proposals" sponsored by Craddick and under study by the committee.

Craddick Monday called the idea of any pressure on LCRA because of his sponsorship of the water legislation "stupid."

Craddick said he has a house at Lake Lyndon B. Johnson, "and I have had for quite a while, and have some other properties" in the area.

The legislator and marina owner Robert Weed have a "handshake agreement" on the development of marinas on the Highland Lakes, but "we haven't done anything yet," Craddick reported.

Woman reports theft of 1982 Datsun 200 SX

From Staff Reports

The theft of a 1982 Datsun 200 SX, valued at $5,500, was reported to police Monday by Linda Taylor, 5101 N. A St., No. 296.

The white two-door car was taken from the parking lot of Saddle Club Apartments between 10 p.m. Sunday and 7 a.m. Monday, according to reports. Ms. Taylor told police no keys were left in the unlocked vehicle.

Dennis Brewester, 5100 N. A St., No. 359 reported his locked 1969 green and white Ford van was burglarized Sunday night. Taken were two spray guns valued at a total of $4,000, reports said.

No signs of forced entry were found on the van, which was locked.

Mary Elizabeth Kirk, 4027 W. Angelina, told police she had sold a stainless steel man's Rolex watch, valued at $1,200, to some people for $800 Sunday but discovered Monday the checking account at the Houston bank had been closed.

Two 8-month-old male Doberman pinchers were reported stolen from the yard of Manuel Sigala Reynosa, 1906 N. Benton, between 6 p.m. Sunday and 6 a.m. Monday.

According to reports, the dogs were taken by someone who unchained them. Valued at $125 each, one dog was described as black in color while the other was brown.

About $2,000 in jewelry and stereo equipment was reported stolen from the Alvin Anderson residence at 1901 N. Benton. According to reports, entry was gained by kicking open a locked rear door between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday.

About $375 worth of audio equipment was reported stolen from the De Zavala Annex, 1101 E. South. According to reports, entry was gained by breaking out two windows, valued at $40. The burglary took place between 2 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. Monday, reports said.

Four hundred dollars of food was taken from the kitchen of Crockett Elementary School, 401 E. Parker, between 5 p.m. Friday and 6:30 a.m. Monday.

Entry was gained by removing the pane of a door and reaching in to unlock the door, reports said.

Among items taken were two boxes of chicken fried steaks, two boxes of hamburger patties, two boxes of weiners, four 35-pound hams, three cases of tator tots and french fries and two boxes of fish patties.

Also taken was a set of kitchen butcher knives, valued at $100.

HISTORY

Rather than criticize decisions to demolish structures like the Lancaster House and the original Odessa High School, Tillapaugh suggested Monday that lessons were learned in both cases.

"I don't see a long-term negative over the public debate," said Tillapaugh, "I see that as a plus."

"In both those cases, your leadership involved needed to make plans," he said, "If they don't plan, they're going to be torn down."

While these two structures fell, the Brown-Dorsey House in Midland and the White-Pool House in Odessa have survived modernization. Other examples of historical landmarks standing are the Hill and Scharbauer Houses in Midland and the Henderson Drug Building, which was spared in recent demolition of downtown Odessa's old business district.

Through public education efforts such as the course — "Texas Restored" — he is teaching this semester, Tillapaugh suggested future decisions will be based on a more complete understanding of the issues.

While it was necessary to clear some of the old construction for new development, it wasn't necessary "to turn all of the old downtown Odessa business district into a parking lot," he said.

Historians and civic leaders cooperated to reach an agreement, said Tillapaugh.

The number of historical structures often determines the direction taken, he said, noting that a single structure or a large group of memorable buildings are more often saved. "Somewhere in between there you get your controversy."

Through organization of people interested in historical preservation and public education, Tillapaugh said all involved can gain a better understanding of the options available when deciding between restoration and demolition.

Before the opening of UTPB in 1973, efforts had been confined to the private groups. Tillapaugh said the university's focus on Permian Basin history has broadened this base.

While few buildings in Midland/Odessa are historic in terms of age, a number capture different periods in the area's development, he said.

"It's not the oldest thing in town, but it has something to do with the development of the town," he said.

There are alternatives to traditional restoration, such as adaptive reuse.

"Maybe we don't need another institution, but these are solid buildings," he said.

The old Odessa school, though predating the period, was the last remaining example of the public architecture associated with "the New Deal" and the Works Progress Administration.

Using the adaptive reuse concept, Tillapaugh said "It could have been used for something other than a school."

The Henderson Drug Building is to be restored to its 1906 exterior look, with the interior to feature a turn-of-the-century soda fountain. the upstairs area is to be adapted for private offices.

Houses in Midland and Odessa featuring the rock construction of the 1920s and 1930s should be considered for historical preservation, he said. Also, examples of the work of the late J. Ellsworth Powell, who designed many distinctive homes and buildings in the post World War II era, should be saved, said Tillapaugh.

"People like ties with their past," said Tillapaugh of the importance of preserving historical reminders of days gone by.

From a practical standpoint, "Anytime you've got historical property that interprets the past, you've got a tourist draw," he said.

And by adaptive reuse, "Very often you save dollars and cents if you can use a structure that is already standing."

"A lot of preservation of buildings depends on it being cost efficient," Tillapaugh said.

Odessa police seek suspect in Sunday murder

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police were searching this morning for the second of two brothers sought in connection with the Sunday night southside slaying of a 24-year-old Odessa man.

A warrant filed Monday charges Gilberto Rico Marquez, 24, with murdering Nahum Flores, 24, in the La India Club Sunday night.

Esteban Rico Marquez, the missing man's 27-year-old brother, was arrested at 8 a.m. Monday on a murder warrant, with bond set at $25,000. He was freed after posting bond Monday night.

Gilberto Marquez was last seen fleeing the La India Club with his brother about 10 p.m. Sunday. The Marquezes are alleged to have murdered Flores as he attempted to run from the club, located at 1103 S. Dixie in Odessa.

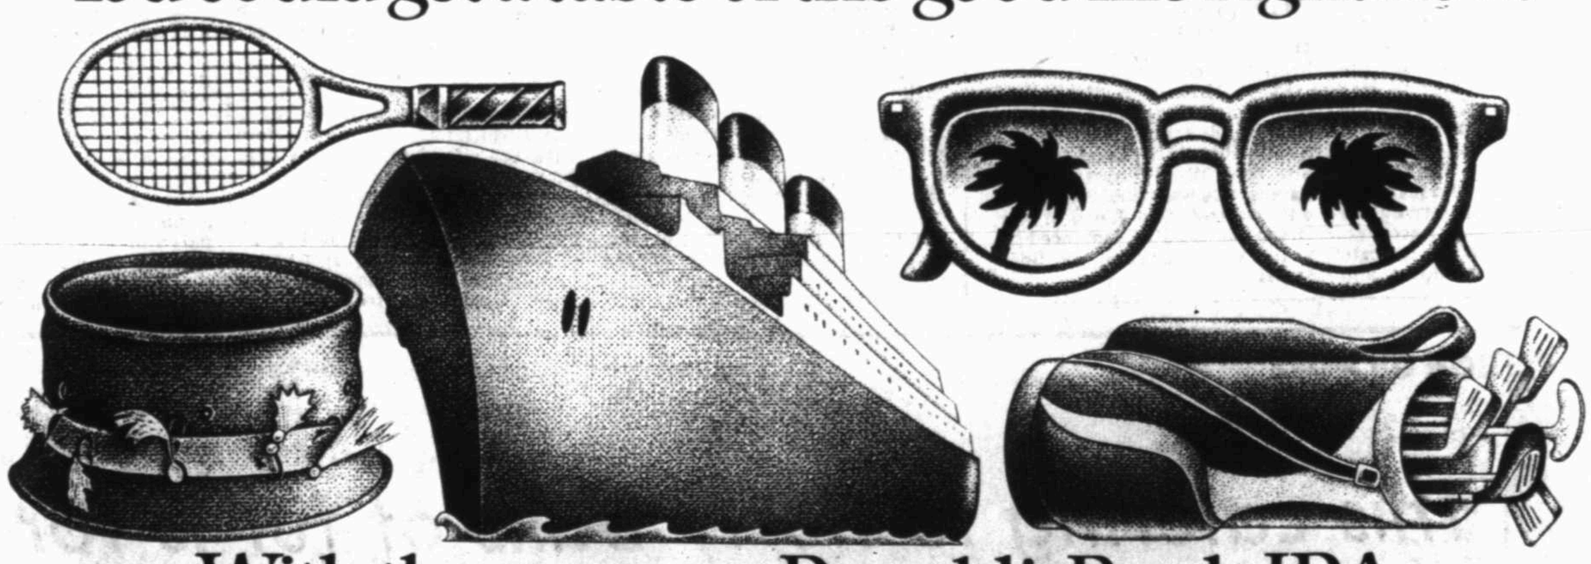

Flores died from gunshot wounds to the face and chest, according to reports. No motive has been established, according to Lt. Rusty Baker of the Odessa Police Department.

Gilberto Marquez is described as a Hispanic man, standing five-foot, nine inches tall, weighing 150 pounds, with brown eyes and black hair.

DIGEST

Dollar up, gold lower

LONDON (AP) — The dollar advanced in early European trading today amid expectations that soon-to-be released figures would show the U.S. economy growing strongly. Gold prices edged lower.

Dealers reported widespread market predictions that the revised U.S. Gross National Product figures for the fourth quarter of last year — to be released later today — would show growth of between 2.5 and 3 percent.

As a result, the dollar gained, and was trading just below all-time highs against the British pound, French franc and Italian lira.

As the dollar strengthens, so do fears that European central banks — particularly the West German Bundesbank — might again intervene, dealers said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 254.25 yen from Tuesday's 253.90. Later, in London, it was quoted at 254.10 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

–2.6743 Swiss francs, up from 2.6663.

–3.5938 Dutch guilders, up from 3.5805.

–1,955.75 Italian lire, up from 1,948.75.

–1.3233 Canadian dollars, up from 1.32125.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.1250, compared with $1.1255 Monday.

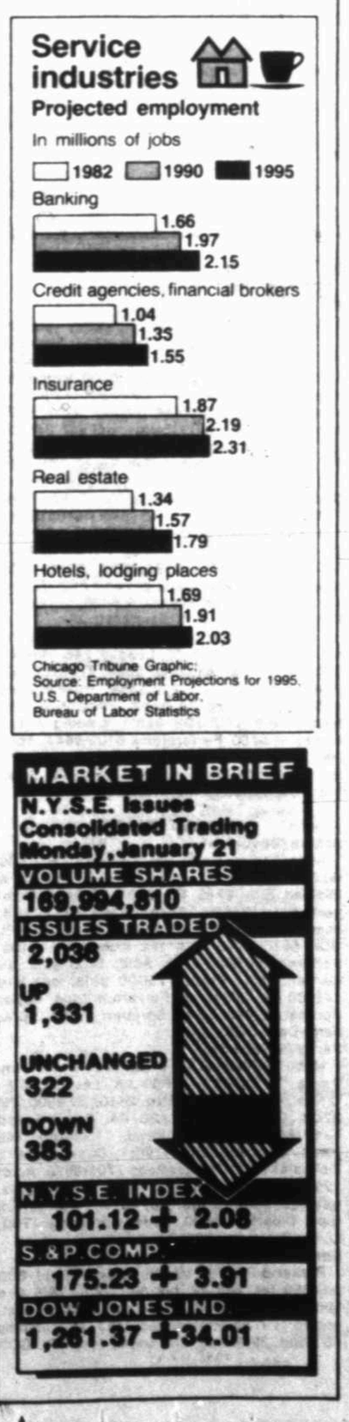

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $306.70 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $307.20. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $306.85.

In Zurich, the noon bid price was $307, down from $307.75 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 91 cents to close at a bid $307.52.

In New York Monday, gold rose $1.30 to close at $307.90.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.24 a troy ounce, down from Monday's $6.25.

Economic optimism sends stocks soaring

By The Associated Press

Optimism about the 1985 economic outlook sent stock prices soaring, lifting some market averages to record highs.

But growers in the northern section of Florida's $1 billion citrus belt were not optimistic that their trees could escape serious damage from the cold snap gripping the eastern United States.

"It looks like the damage will be extensive in both citrus and vegetables," said Florida Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner.

As a result, prices of orange juice for future delivery shot up on the New York Cotton Exchange. Prices in all contract months jumped 5 cents a pound Monday, the maximum allowed by the exchange, with the contract for delivery in March climbing to $1.6955 a pound.

In stock trading, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials surged 34.01 to 1,261.37 for its eighth best showing ever, putting the average at its highest level in more than a year.

Two other prominent indicators eclipsed record highs set in October 1983.

The NYSE's 65-stock composite index climbed 2.08 to 101.12, closing above 100 for the first time. And Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index gained 3.91 to a record 175.23.

Big Board volume totaled 146.83 million shares, against 104.72 million in the previous session.

Brokers said there was no single news event that set off the buying outburst. But they said the mood of investors had improved steadily of late, especially since Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker recently made an uncharacteristically upbeat appraisal of prospects for keeping inflation at bay.

The market even had the outcome of the Super Bowl going its way. Under a whimsical theory that has enjoyed much publicity in recent years, a victory in the pro football championship by a National Football Conference team such as the San Francisco 49ers, who defeated the Miami Dolphins on Sunday, is supposed to be a favorable portent for stock prices.

In northern Florida, one grower reported a low of 11 degrees on Monday in a citrus grove near Mascotte. Temperatures ranged from that into the 20s and 30s in southern sections and growers expected crop-killing temperatures in the teens again early today.

"One more night like this could pretty well wipe us all out up here," said grower Duke Crittenden, who owns 4,000 acres of citrus, much of it in the northern tier heavily hit by a 1983 Christmas freeze.

That two-day cold spell caused more than $1 billion in tree and fruit losses, according to industry economists. Preliminary damage estimates on the latest disaster may begin to come in at the end of the week.

The state's large winter vegetable industry escaped with little damage Sunday night and Monday, but also could be in trouble with more nights of frost, industry officials said.

IBM profits increase over previous year

By JAMES F. PELTZ
AP Business Writer

International Business Machines Corp. reported last week that its fourth-quarter profit climbed 16.6 percent from a year earlier, while full-year 1984 earnings jumped 20 percent, overcoming the adverse effects of a strong dollar overseas last year.

Other computer makers posted mixed results. Tandy Corp. said fiscal second-quarter profit slumped 24 percent, and Honeywell Inc. said fourth-quarter profit tumbled 65 percent because of a charge related to plans to sell its Synertek Inc. semiconductor unit.

Apple Computer Inc., meanwhile, said its fiscal first-quarter profit soared nearly eightfold from one of its worst quarters ever a year earlier. But its president warned of an "extremely challenging" quarter ahead because of rising dealer inventories of personal computers.

IBM said its fourth-quarter profit rose to $2.17 billion, or $3.55 a share, from $1.86 billion, or $3.06 a share, a year earlier. Revenue rose 12.4 percent to $14.5 billion from $12.9 billion.

The results were in line or slightly ahead of many analysts' forecasts, some of whom praised the company's showing given the strong dollar's adverse effects on IBM's revenue overseas.

The dollar climbed 15 percent last year. If it had held steady, 1984 profit would have been up 32.4 percent, IBM Chairman John R. Opel said in a statement.

Apple, riding the success of its Macintosh personal computer, said net income for the quarter ended Dec. 31 surged to $46.1 million, or 75 cents a share, from $5.82 million, or 10 cents a share, in a depressed year-earlier period when Apple was just bringing Macintosh to market.

Sales more than doubled to $698.3 million from $316.2 million.

"Apple emerged as the big winner during the holiday selling season," selling about 500,000 computers during the last quarter of 1984, John Sculley, Apple president, said.

But Sculley warned that sales trailed retailers' expectations in December, thus boosting dealer inventories.

Tandy said profit for the quarter ended Dec. 31 fell to $76.5 million, or 86 cents a share, from $101.2 million, or 98 cents a share, a year earlier. Sales slipped to $893.3 million from $898.3 million.

Honeywell said fourth-quarter earnings from continuing operations rose to $110.4 million from $102.9 million.

But a loss from discontinued operations, namely Synertek, of $78.6 million lowered net income to $31.8 million, or 68 cents a share, compared with a new profit of $91.9 million, or $1.96 a share, a year earlier.

TIPRO to discuss oil concerns

Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners (TIPRO) executive and policy committees will meet Wednesday in Austin against a background of falling crude and natural gas prices and serious revenue problems on both the state and federal levels.

Among state-oriented issues commanding attention are: state revenue needs, including proposals to increase or create new fees for Texas Railroad Commission services; state highway leasing proposals; intrastate gas market supply sourcecompetition; casinghead gas proration; and potential legislation applying to surveying requirements for well placement and treatment of dormant mineral interests.

TIPRO's meeting sessions at the Stephen F. Austin Hotel begin with the Membership Committee at 11 a.m. followed by a noon luncheon featuring Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby as speaker. At 2 p.m., all committeemen meet to discuss state and national issues, followed by TIPRO policy determinations by the Executive Committee. BUSINESS MIRROR

GM's life depends on Saturn project

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The very survival of General Motors, said Roger Smith, chairman, depends on success of the Saturn project, an effort to create a small car subsidiary that can compete with Japanese imports.

It takes no stretch of imagination to draw an even larger inference:

If GM, the country's largest manufacturer, fails to succeed, the survival of entire domestic industries might be at stake. If GM cannot do it, who can?

The consequences are made even more breathtaking when you consider that GM never has had much success in producing a profitable small vehicle, hard as it has tried and even though protected by import quotas.

In order to turn out the car, perhaps by 1989, GM must knock down the costs of labor, materials, time, paperwork, delivery and almost every other element that go into the final selling price of a car.

To do so, it will be compelled to build not just the factory of the future — computerized and robotized — but the corporate culture of the future as well.

GM must, that is, produce an operation with new goals, new techniques for achieving them, new labor attitudes, new management principles. In short, it must wrench itself away from physical and mental strictures and structures of the past.

The job doesn't stop at the GM door. It must involve union and government cooperation. It may involve diplomatic relations with the Japanese and other nations. So far-reaching is Saturn that it might even involve such things as the value of the U.S. dollar in relation to the Japanese yen, a situation that for years has given the Japanese an advantage in American markets.

Conceivably, the Saturn project could even drag in one of the most politically and economically controversial issues of the century: Should the United States have an industrial policy, or economic master plan?

Never, perhaps, has such an imposing challenge been taken on by the private sector. To decline the challenge, however, would be unacceptable; right now the United States cannot make a car as inexpensively as can the Japanese.

Estimates of the Japanese advantage range from $1,300 to $2,500 a car, the result, according to a study by the Brookings Institution, of disparities in wage rates, labor productivity, management and inventory costs.

GM already has attacked all these areas. It has held wage costs, raised quality, removed labor inefficiencies, introduced computers and robots, lopped off a layer of middle management and reduced inventories.

Big as that accomplishment has been, it can hardly be called successful. American carmakers still produce their wares under the protection of import quotas that limit Japanese sales in the United States.

While the quotas have permitted workers to regain their jobs, made the industry profitable again and restored some auto-dependent communities to prosperity, the long-run impact has been different — perhaps even a failure.

The Brookings study, for example, questions whether the industry can prosper without the quotas. In the meantime, Americans are paying higher prices for both imported and domestic automobiles.

In effect, buyers have been subsidizing the American automobile industry.

Faced with the facts, GM has decided to do what most individuals and institutions wish, but seldom have a chance, to do:

It is wiping the slate clean. It is beginning all over again with the conviction that there has to be a better way, and it isn't listening to critics who remind them that the wheel and the car already have been invented.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

'Sure things' often become losers

By BILL DOYLE

Q. On Aug. 30, 1982, my husband and I visited a financial adviser. We told him we wanted to reduce our income tax burden and stressed that we did not want to invest in anything in which we might lose money. On his recommendation, we invested $29,000 in an oil and gas exploration and drilling partnership program. He stated there was no chance of losing our money.

The latest letter we received from that partnership program shows that our investment has become worthless. We feel the investment adviser mismanaged our funds. Do we have any recourse?

4 A. Not unless you can prove fraud on the part of that investment adviser. But you'll have to document more than his promise that you wouldn't lose money. As adults, you should have realized there is no such thing as a "free lunch." All too many advisers, brokers and such claim to peddle "sure things" that turn out otherwise.

You were looking for a "tax shelter." Oil and gas partnership programs usually provide that. But they also can be very risky. Some lose value or even become worthless, as the one into which you sank your money did.

• • •

Q. After numerous urgings, I turned my stocks over to a broker who said he would make money for me buying and selling. In the two years since he took over, he sold the six stocks I owned and bought three other stocks for me — at a total commission cost of $611.69. The combined value of the stocks he sold has gone up, while the combined value of the stock he bought has gone down.

The same thing has happened to my son, who has paid that broker $410.97 commission. And my son did not give that broker permission to buy and sell stocks. This broker has taken us to the cleaners. Can either of us can do something to reciprocate for our losses?

A. Other than cancel that brokerage account, get possession of the stocks you now own and take your business elsewhere, there's nothing you can do. It's clear you have a "discretionary account" — giving that broker authority to buy and sell without consulting you.

According to your letter, your son does not have a discretionary account. That being the case, he should file a complaint with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Robert's Copper Pot is more than a fine deli - it's a memorable experience

Robert Conklin, often known as the "Last of the Tall Texans," and his interior designer/super chef wife Bettye are the master minds behind the charming New York style deli Robert's Copper Pot.

According to Robert, Robert's Copper Pot, which is located in the ClayDesta National Bank Building, is the only delicatessen in the state west of Dallas.

According to his customers, it's the only deli Midland needs.

Robert's Copper Pot is a potpouri of wonderful food, nostalgic decor, warm atmosphere, and over 100 imported beers.

Everyone needs to experience a West Texas rodeo, a cruise in the Carribean, and an African safari at least once in a lifetime. Robert's Copper Pot, on the other hand, is an experience that one should enjoy many, many times.

Just take one step in the door and you'll behold a decor that has all the nostalgia of a high school year book, a political museum, a sportman's hall of fame, and an old late night movie wrapped up into one room. Hours could be spent studying the flags which drape the ceiling. There's a VW flag, an Israeli national flag, an official flag of the Chicasaw nation (provided by Max Howard of KMND) and many more. Under the cover of these colorful flags is a wall of Robert's momentos, including a huge propeller. Then there's the famous wall dedicated to the Beer Drinkers Hall of Fame. Of course, Robert, the Lone Star State's "Chili Pepper Eating Champion" has a corner devoted to pictures and momentos from chili contests.

Moreover, pictures of the Conklins with other renown individuals dot the walls of the deli from the entrance to the very back. You'll see our president, all the original astronauts, Mickey Mouse, Johnny Rutherford, Wild Willie, John Wayne, and more at Robert's Copper Pot.

Only architect Robert and his wife Bettye would have thought to top it all off with a real phone booth!

If you can turn your eyes away from the intriguing decor for just a moment, you will find an equally wonderful menu. The Conklins start their menu with tasty cold sandwiches, add a wide variety of steamy hot sandwiches, then spice the list up with delightful soups and salads. There's more than a pinch of tasty things like fried mushrooms, zucchini sticks, and potatoes. Baklava and New York cheese cake embellish the selection and over 100 imported beers top it off.

You'll enjoy it all and the choice is yours at Robert's which has the largest selection of imported beers in West Texas, perhaps in the state.

From 9:30 to 11:00 each day you can enjoy coffee and sweets. Tuesday afternoon is the perfect time to try some British tea with a sandwich or sweet at Robert's.

Before you leave be sure to pick up a copy of Bettye Conklin's latest cookbook Recipes from Robert's Copper Pot. You'll enjoy the 300 recipes, many of which are served at the deli.

You'll also enjoy carry out orders of all the menu items and take out beer and wine. Just call 688-DELI or go in and enjoy the atmosphere between 9:30 a.m. and 9 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

Reagan's second inaugural speech sounds themes of first one

AP Laserphoto

President and Mrs. Reagan react after they realize she forgot to introduce the president after she spoke at an event held at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md. The event was for those bands which would have particpated in the inaugural parade.

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

An Analysis

WASHINGTON — Perhaps the second time around always is better, as President Reagan said. But the optimism of renewal is shaded by the limits and the lessons of four years in the White House.

The promises of an administration's first Inauguration Day often are greater for the fact that a new team is in power, new people with different ways of tackling old and intractable problems.

At the start of a second term, the challenge is to complete, to renew, to rededicate, to continue. It is the second act, usually played with much the same cast.

That applies to the second Reagan administration, even though the president's White House chief of staff is swapping jobs with his secretary of the treasury, and two of his top first-term aides are quitting the government. Former aides never are far away when the president needs advice.

Reagan's second inaugural address predictably sounded the themes of his first. "Four years ago, I spoke to you of a new beginning and we have accomplished that," he told the leaders of government in the Capitol Rotunda, where they took haven against the cold.

"We believed then and now: there are no limits to growth and human progress when men and women are free to follow their dreams. And we were right to believe. Tax rates have been reduced, inflation cut dramatically, and more people are employed today than ever in our history."

He urged that the American economy be "freed from government's grip." It was a passage that recalled a theme of his first inauguration: "Government is not the solution; it is the problem."

That case becomes more difficult to argue after four years at the helm of American government. After all, the people at the top of government are Reagan's own people.

But Reagan isn't budging in his determination to curb "the spiraling demands of a bloated federal establishment," no matter who runs it.

He said Reaganomics has been vindicated by more than two years of economic growth and there'll be no changing course now. "We have begun to increase rewards for work, savings and investment, reduce the increase in the cost and size of government and its interference in people's lives," the president said.

Reagan built in his one new economic proposal, an overhaul of the federal tax code to simplify the system, by saying he wants to "make it more fair and bring tax rates down for all who work and earn."

It's not a brand new idea. Jimmy Carter made total tax reform a major theme of the campaign that carried him to the White House in 1976. He never got anywhere on it during his one term as president.

Nor were brand-new ideas offered on the federal deficit that has swollen to record levels under Reagan.

His answer to deficits is to cut spending, with no new taxes. That points to trouble in Congress, where even Reagan's fellow Republicans want bigger dents in the deficit than the administration has proposed.

Reagan restated his call for a program "aimed at reaching a balanced budget," beginning with a 1985 spending freeze. He said the budget he sends Congress next month will seek a freeze on "government program spending," wording that leaves room for a Pentagon exemption.

That recalled the first inauguration, too. That day, Reagan clamped a freeze on civilian hiring by the federal government. It worked. The federal payroll is smaller now than it was then.

In Monday's inaugural address, Reagan also renewed his call for a constitutional amendment seeking balanced budgets. He pushed that during his first term, but never past Congress. "Let us make it unconstitutional for the federal government to spend more than it takes in," he said. The amendment Reagan endorsed does not go that far. It would make it more difficult for Congress to approve deficit spending.

Homeless too cold to think about Reagan's inauguration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seated atop a steam grate a few blocks from the White House, Anthony Milton Perkins spent winter's coldest day thinking about staying alive, not about the second inauguration of Ronald Reagan.

"Any man who believes every man like him can become a sportscaster, a movie star and a president ...he's just living in a fairy land, a make-believe world," Perkins said Monday.

Perkins, 32, came here 14 months ago from Hampton, Va., "to start a new life for myself."

Now, after injuring his foot and losing a job, Perkins is one of Washington's street people, the hardiest of whom disdain the crowded, fractious shelters for the liberty of a space on the grates.

Steam billowed up around Perkins and two other men, including one distracted young man with blackened hands who wore no socks and had not bothered to button his shirt or coat.

The stocky, voluble Perkins was upset that no fan was blowing beneath the grate. "If there was a fan on, there'd be a lot more heat." He avoids the shelters except to bathe or wash his clothes, saying they are "pretty unsafe." Right now, he said, "I'm stuck like this in an everyday life of just trying to exist.

"The average person out here is not a fighter. The grates are usually about all they're going to want. Some people out here have had bad luck. Some people are mentally ill. Some people out here are just lazy," said Perkins.

Robert Smith, who migrated from Charlotte, N.C., in search of work, sat amid the steam awaiting nightfall and his return to a shelter in the fashionable Georgetown section.

Asked if he expected his life to improve in the next four years, Smith said: "Well, I'm going to sure try to make mine better. This is the first winter I been out like this and I really have experienced something I'll never forget in my life. I always wondered how the street people did."

A few blocks away, outside the State Department, a fan was blowing beneath the warm grate where Jacob Thomas Braye Jr. and four other men sat on milk crates and a folding chair.

To Braye, Reagan's speech inside the distant Capitol about building "an American opportunity society" was meaningless.

"I don't believe in politics, or I wouldn't be out here," said the 34-year-old transient with a Jesus pin, who has lived on the streets of Washington for three years.

"If you know how to survive, you don't worry about the cold," said Braye, sipping a beer "to keep my blood translating."

"Once you get comfortable, nothing don't bother you. If you just go to sleep, you don't even feel the cold," he said.

It was a record 4 below zero early Monday in the nation's capital. Police reported finding one man, Leander Gilmore, 61, dead in an abandoned building. They were awaiting an autopsy report to determine whether he froze to death.

By noon, it had warmed to 7 degrees under the frigid blue skies.

Some government officials recently devised a plan to cover the grates to keep the homeless off them, but they abandoned it after a public outcry.

"It was very, very cold last night. It's been pretty rough, but they bring some food around morning and night...We had plenty of blankets," said 79-year-old Thomas Sawyer, a former farm worker from Alabama who has been homeless for seven years and has spent the past three on these grates.

Sawyer said he thinks Reagan is "a good president — the best we've had since Mr. Roosevelt."

Willie Jenkins, 58, said he was "indifferent" to the inaugural events, but no fan of Reagan or the Republican Party.

"I don't hate anyone. I think Reagan is God's child, same as I am. But I do not believe in Republicans. I'm a Democrat all the way, I always have been," he said. "As a person (Reagan) is likeable, but I don't care for Republicanism."

Jenkins had resisted overtures to go to a big shelter run by the Community for Creative Non-Violence near the Capitol.

Some 810 men and women spent Sunday night at that shelter, a dilapidated former college building that the government recently agreed to refurbish after a fast by Mitch Snyder, a leader of the community group.

Snyder said the 25 or 30 steam grates around Washington "are not divisible by 810." There are 5,000 to 10,000 homeless in the Washington area, he estimated, and shelter spaces for only 1,500.

Reagan's secretary of health and human services, Margaret M. Heckler, had 300 Army blankets sent to the shelter at 4 a.m.

Cold weather has caused problems for past inaugurations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inauguration day weather has caused problems for the nation's presidents for more than 160 years.

James Monroe, in 1817, was the first president to take the oath of office outdoors. It was frigid at his second inauguration four years later.

The weather was cold and rainy on inauguration day in 1841 and William Henry Harrison caught cold after riding down Pennsylvania Avenue without an overcoat and greeting well-wishers for several hours outside the White House. His chill developed into a fatal pneumonia and he died 41 days into his term.

In 1853, Franklin Pierce's inaugural address was barely audible over a howling snowstorm.

At noontime Monday, as President Reagan was sworn in for the second time in two days, it was 7 degrees — well below the previous inaugural record of 16 degrees at noon on March 4, 1873, as Ulysses S. Grant took his oath of office.

The frigid temperatures drove Reagan's scheduled outdoor inauguration indoors. The same fate befell William Howard Taft when a blizzard struck on the day he took the oath of office, March 4, 1909.

In 1937, nearly 1.8 inches of rain fell on inauguration day as Franklin D. Roosevelt ignored the elements and rode bareheaded in an open car along the parade route in the downpour.

Longtime Washington residents still recall the Army being called out to shovel Pennsylvania Avenue out from under the snowstorm that struck on the eve of John F. Kennedy's inauguration in 1960. At noon on that Jan. 20, it was 22 degrees.

The first inauguration took place on April 30, 1789, when George Washington took the oath of office on the balcony of Federal Hall in New York City. The date was later fixed at noon on March 4, and it stayed that way through 1933. It was moved up to Jan. 20 for subsequent inaugurations.

Reagan's was the 50th formal presidential inauguration. Counting those conducted without major ceremonies, such as Lyndon B. Johnson's swearing-in aboard Air Force One after the assassination of Kennedy in November 1963, it was the 59th.

NATION IN BRIEF

Small company's $18 million suit upheld against Johnson & Johnson

CHICAGO (AP) — After 23 years of litigation, two juries, 10 federal judges and seven decisions, a small company's $18 million judgment against corporate giant Johnson & Johnson has been upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Handgards Inc., which makes plastic gloves, won treble damages in its countersuit of an alleged Johnson & Johnson patent infringement in 1961.

The high court on Monday rejected the appeal from Johnson & Johnson, which had 1983 sales of about $6 billion. Handgards has annual sales of about $9 million, officials said.

Children survive car-train wreck

WASHINGTON, Iowa (AP) — An 11-month-old boy and his 3-week-old sister were hospitalized today after surviving the car-train collision that killed their mother, aunt and grandmother.

Rescuers had to extricate Jeremiah Ray from wreckage dragged more than a mile by the Milwaukee Road fast freight Monday. His sister, Amanda, was thrown clear and found by rescuers.

The boy was in serious condition, the girl in good condition, hospital officials said.

The accident killed the car's driver, Nancy Jo Boock, 41, the children's grandmother; Pamela Sue Ray, 21, their mother; and Kathy Ann Boock, 19, their aunt.

Lawyer sentenced in land fraud

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Dutch businessman got credit for time served, and a California attorney got six months in a community treatment center for pleading guilty to what prosecutors call the largest land fraud in U.S. history.

Rienk Hendricus Kamer, 41, was bound over Monday to authorities in his native Netherlands for further prosecution, according toU.S. District Judge Richard Gadbois' order.

The judge added five years' probation to the six months treatment he imposed on Kamer's ailing co-defendant, 66-year-old attorney Bernard Whitney.

Kamer and Whitney pleaded guilty to three counts of a 57-count, July 1983 indictment alleging a fraud involving up to 6,000 investors and $2 billion in undeveloped land in Utah, Texas, New York and California.

Negligent homicide not proven

OSSIPEE, N.H. (AP) — Prosecutors failed to prove negligent homicide against three people who allegedly provoked an argument with their landlord that ended with his fatal heart attack, said the judge who freed them.

After hearing from 20 prosecution witnesses, Superior Court Chief Justice Richard Dunfey threw out the charges Monday against Lynda Ryder, 28, her husband, Perley, 32, and Daniel Moody, 19.

The landlord, Donald Dodier, 56, died after he used a backhoe to block the defendants from taking away a shed until they paid back rent.

Ex-Black Panther gets trial hearing

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Lawyers for Elmer (Geronimo) Pratt, a former Black Panther leader convicted 13 years ago in the 1968 murder of Carolyn Olsen in Santa Monica, Calif., opened a hearing for a new trial in U.S. District Court Monday by claiming that the FBI deliberately lost tapes of wiretaps that might show Pratt was out of the area on the night of the killing.

Pratt, 37, an inmate at San Quentin state prison since his murder conviction, filed his motion for a new hearing in federal court after state courts refused to reopen the case.

The first witness in the hearing before U.S. Magistrate John R. Kronenberg was former FBI Agent M,. Wesley Swearingen, who testified that he had reviewed FBI wiretap records pertaining to the Black Panthers in 1976, and noticed then that the records for December, 1968, were missing. Lawyers for Pratt say that the tapes may show that Pratt was in Oakland, Calif., at the time of Olsen's murder.
