Public Schools

Q. When were public schools set up in Texas?

A. According to the Texas Almanac, the school system was set up when Gov. Elisha Pease signed legislation Jan. 31, 1854. Appropriations were based on an annual census. Republic President Mirabeau Lamar proposed a public school system in 1838, but nothing was done while Texas was still a republic.

Martin County voters to decide on water district

Staff and bureau reports
STANTON — Concerns about arsenic in some county well water could become the special project of a new water district in Martin County.

Under legislation signed Monday by Gov. Mark White, Martin County voters soon will go to the polls to decide on a special district to govern underground water quality and conservation.

"The district will work towards conservation and protection of the underground water in Martin County," Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport said Tuesday morning. Deavenport pushed for the measure on behalf of the county commissioners, who had endorsed the idea.

An investigation of arsenic "is certainly one thing the district could explore," Deavenport said.

"The district will take its thrust from what those directors want it to (handle). I feel sure it (the arsenic contamination) will be one of the problems it addresses," he said.

A temporary five-man board will call an election within 30 days to decide whether to create a water district, Deavenport said. The election would be conducted within 60

Loan policy unveiled for city renovation

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

Big Spring financial institutions are chipping in to help rectify and beautify downtown Big Spring.

City Hall administrative assistant Pat Hardy Monday unveiled a low-interest loan policy sponsored by the Heart of the City project.

The program will help building owners attain loans from financial institutions to preserve commercial buildings in the central business district.

"Banks are making a significant contribution to help bring back downtown. They have come forward to say 'we will help.' This is a public/private operation," Hardy said.

Lending institutions participating in the loan policy are State National Bank, Security State Savings and Loan, Citizens Federal Credit Union, First National Bank, Big Spring Savings and Loan and First Federal Savings and Loan.

They will extend amounts up to $10,000 a loan for exterior work only on storefronts in a City Project Target Area. According to a press release, this area is bounded by Gregg Street to the west, Johnson Street to the east, 1st Street to the north and 6th Street to the south.

Loans will be granted for no longer than five years to qualified borrowers. The interest will be charged according to the prime rate (to be adjusted periodically) and will be calculated on a simple interest basis using the declining balance.

Each lending institution is yielding a maximum $20,000 amount, Hardy said.

"This is a program that will afford someone to restore a building to its original architecture," Hardy said.

Building owners interested in the loan program should submit to the Heart of the City Project Executive Committee a facade improvement plan and financial statement. The committee, acting in an advisory capacity, will review the plan for design quality and appropriateness.

A call for peace

Southern Baptist leaders seek pact

DALLAS (AP) — A plan to set up a "peace committee" of Southern Baptist leaders should heal the deepening rift between fundamentalist and moderate members of the nation's largest Protestant denomination, officials say.

The proposal by a special committee of Baptist state presidents is scheduled for a vote on Wednesday, too late to cool the hotly contested battle for control of the 14.3 million-member church's leadership, which was to be decided today by the biggest gathering in its 140-year history.

"We've come to the point where something had to be done to help resolve our problem," said attorney Charles Pickering, president of the Mississippi Baptist Convention and chairman of the ad hoc committee. The plan for the panel was suggested by the Rev. Franklin Paschal of Nashville.

The proposal calls for a committee of 18 representatives from both sides and a 19th member, the Southern Baptist Convention's president chosen today, to work over the next year to settle conflicts that have split the church.

The motion scheduled for a vote on Wednesday at the convention says the "divisions among us, which if allowed to continue, inevitably will impede our progress, impair our fellowship and imperil our future."

By mid-morning today, more than 40,000 voting "messengers" had registered, far exceeding any past turnout, with the key vote on the presidency scheduled for midafternoon. The previous high was 22,872 in 1978 in Atlanta.

In the election, marked by political-style campaigning by both camps, fundamentalists backed the incumbent, the Rev. Charles F. Stanley of Atlanta and moderates supported the Rev. W. Winfred Moore of Amarillo, Texas.

The office exerts immense sway over the choice of trustees who determine the caliber and directions of the denomination's 20 national agencies.

Moore, a moderate candidate, is opposing Stanley, a fundamentalist, for the presidency of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Texas Democrats lead charge up GOP hill

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Reagan welcomed an elite group of guests to the White House — 91 former Democrats who switched to the Republican Party in recent weeks — Texas had the largest contingent of any state.

In joining other party leaders Monday in applauding the new converts, Reagan called their move "an act of courage and an act of conscience" that makes them part of "a national movement."

The officials received promises of future support from state and party leaders who hope they will help sell their Democratic peers back home on switching parties before the 1986 elections.

Twenty Texans flew to Washington for a day of briefings. They represent about half the current and former elected officials who have switched parties in Texas since 1980, party leaders said.

State Rep. Gary Thompson of Abilene, Texas was one of the newest Republicans at the gathering. He had known for months that he was going to leave the Democratic Party, he said, but made his announcement on Friday, in time to take part in the White House party three days later.

"It's certainly difficult to pass up an opportunity to visit with the President, Cabinet members, Jeane Kirkpatrick and other people I admire," Thompson said.

Reagan, who joined the Republican Party in 1962, told the state and local officials Monday that they had joined the party of the working man and woman.

"Let the other party have the entrenched interests and the power brokers and special interest politics. We don't have any of that," Reagan contended.

few converts seemed ill at ease with their newly declared political homage.

"The idea of being a Republican is a little hard for me to get used to, but this helps to ease it somewhat," Thompson said.

Texas Republican chairman

George Strake said of the day's festivities, "It's a big recruiting tool. It helps for the future, knowing we're treating the ones who have switched right."

Strake said a number of Democratic officials are considering becoming Republicans. He refused to identify them by name, but said that included four county or state district judges, two state representatives and a state senator.

"Trying to get these people to switch is like trying to get a mustang into a corral," Strake said. Every time you get him near, if you make one little false move, he spooks away. It's a tough thing. It's a traumatic thing for some of them to do," Strake said.

Thompson said he doubted many of his former Democratic colleagues in the Texas Legislature would switch this year or next because they will not have the draw of a national ticket in

Rustler's rhapsody

Inspector plays a tune cattle thieves don't want to hear

HEWITT (AP) — Cattle rustling was big in the years when cattle drives pushed north on the Chisholm Trail to stockyards in Kansas.

But cattle rustling is even bigger today, says Eddie Foreman, field inspector for the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

Foreman is one of 32 TSCRA cattle inspectors in Texas and Oklahoma who look for stolen farm equipment and animals. Based in Hewitt, a couple of miles south of Waco city limits, Foreman covers McLennan, Bosque, Coryell, Falls, Bell, Lampasas and Hamilton counties.

Foreman does not like the term "cattle rustling," saying it conjures up romantic television images. To him, the crime is cattle theft, pure and simple.

"What they're doing is stealing people's livelihood," Foreman said. "I don't dress up a thief any more than what they are."

Cattle thieves steal today for the same reason they stole in the past — money, Foreman said. Only stealing is easier and more lucrative now than during the olden days.

Cattle in a trailer are not as easy to track as 40 head tromping across the range. And selling a cow at current prices of more than $300 is greater temptation than the 1880s' price of $12 to $15 a head.

"Cattle rustling — it's a multimillion-dollar business," Foreman said.

Even during the past 20 years, the nature of cattle rustling has changed considerably. The big central stockyards have given way to more and smaller local livestock sales that are easier for thieves to reach and harder for law enforcement officials to monitor.

Eddie Foreman, a field inspector for the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, stands near his cattle on property he leases near Hewitt, Texas. Foreman is one of 32 TSCRA cattle inspectors in Texas and Oklahoma who look for stolen farm equipment and animals.

Computers have countered some of that advantage by keeping detailed records of the cattle sold and by having a centralized list of stolen animal descriptions.

"If cattle went through a sale, then hopefully they'll be record of it, and a computer will find them," Foreman said.

Imagination is a ready trait among cattle thieves, Foreman said. They can hide calves in the floorboard of a truck or the trunk of a car. A clever thief may put up a rancher's herd of cattle as collateral and trick a loan officer to believe the animals are his.

Besides imagination, the thieves have little else in common. Some "barely know the difference between a milk cow and a racehorse," while others are professional rodeo riders, Foreman said.

The TSCRA has never compiled a national figure on the number of cattle stolen because many ranchers do not report stolen cattle, believing their animals died or wandered into a neighbor's field. Other ranchers who report missing cattle fail to notify authorities when animals are relocated.

Foreman would not estimate how many cattle are stolen annually in the Central Texas area, but said the theft rate is directly proportional to current market prices.

High prices foretell heavy stealing. When a rancher calls Foreman to say his cattle have disappeared, the inspector checks to see if any other law enforcement officers are working on the case, reads their report and drives to the scene to scout for tracks. By studying the area, he may determine if the animals were penned by dogs, horses, people on foot or coaxed with hay. Tire tracks will indicate the type of trailer used. Some thieves have an easily identifiable method of operation, he said.

The second major step to solving the crime is obtaining a detailed description of the animals or property. Even ear tags and vaccination marks may help investigators locate an animal.

"The next thing I want is a telephone," Foreman said.

He calls sale barn operators through Texas to see if any cattle matching the description are being sold, and he puts case information into a computer. Many times the field inspectors will catch thieves when they pick up checks after trying to sell the animals at a cattle sale.

If no cattle are found at the sale barns, Foreman starts tracking. Returning to the crime scene, he questions neighbors about the direction of strange vehicles and tries to follow them down the highway. The inspector stops in towns, asking fellow law enforcement officials about possible sightings of the suspected vehicle.

County begins work on budget

Howard County Commissioners began buckling down to the task of preparing next year's county fiscal budget in a regular meeting Monday morning.

County Auditor Jackie Olson said she presented commissioners with figures of last year's expenditures from some of the county offices.

"We've just scratched the surface and are about one-third of the way through the budget," Olson said.

She said that commissioners would review each department's expenditures and requests for the upcoming budget which will take effect on Oct. 1.

Those departments that submitted initial expenditure figures included: the district clerk's office, the tax assessors office, the county clerk's office, the justices of the peace offices, the district judge's office, the county judge's office and the commissioner's court. Olson said expenditures will be updated as commissioners continue reviewing figures until the end of August.

Jail receives certification

The Howard County Jail received a certificate of compliance from the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, Monday afternoon.

This is the fifth consecutive year that the jail standards board has approved the operation and maintenance of the county's jail which is located on the fourth floor of the county courthouse.

"We're kind of pleased about being approved again," said Sheriff A.N. Standard.

He said Monday morning's inspection by Joe Slater of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards covered such criteria as: lighting, floor space, sanitation facilities, food, health and safety programs for fires and disasters.

Firemen douse mattress fire

Firemen doused a burning mattress late Monday night at 2011 Johnson, according to reports.

According to the fire department reports, two firemen arrived at 11:40 p.m. to find a mattress burning in the attic of rock and wood-frame house owned by Robert Smith.

After observing the fire, Lt. Alex Calvio and Charles Vernon dragged the mattress from the attic into the yard, where they extinguished the fire with 20 gallons of water, the report stated.

Firemen then set the smoke ejector and waited for an electrician to fix the faulty wiring that had started the fire, the report stated. Damage was set at $150, according to the report.

The two firefighters returned to the station at 12:44 a.m., the report stated.

Women injured in collision

A 21-year-old Forsan woman and a 21-year-old Big Spring woman were injured Monday morning in a two-car accident at the intersection of Scurry and W. 14th streets.

Tamra Joene Turner, 21, of Forsan was treated and released from Malone-Hogan Hospital, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Julie Sharree Sheppard, 21, of 1208 Ridgeway was treated by Dr. Bruce Cox after she was examined at the hospital, the spokeswoman said.

According to the police report, Turner was traveling north in her 1980 red Chevrolet Z-28 in the 1400 block of Scurry. Sheppard was driving east in her 1985 blue Oldsmobile Calais in the 200 block of W. 14th.

Turner entered the intersection but failed to yield the right-of-way from the stop sign, the report stated. The front end of Turner's car collided with the passenger side of Sheppard's car, the report stated.

For the record

The Herald failed to list a defendant in an 118th District Court civil suit filing in last Saturday's public records.

Ricky Heckler was named as defendant in a suit on account filed by Gary Belew and Arvin Henry d/b/a Midway Plumbing & Supply.

to 90 days.

The board members will meet soon with the county attorney on election procedures, Deavenport said. The temporary board, appointed by the Martin County commissioners, has not met yet, he said.

Members of the temporary board are Earl Dickenson, Rufus Tom, Kathy Knox, James Sawyer and John Campbell, who will serve as chairman, according to Deavenport.

If created, the district would be governed by an elected five-member board, including a member from each county commissioner's precinct and one at-large member, Deavenport said.

Deavenport said he is uncertain whether the temporary members would run for election to the board if the district is created.

1 hospitalized in truck rollover

A Big Spring man remains under observation at Malone-Hogan Hospital following a one-vehicle rollover on Cable Road, 3 1/2 miles southwest of Big Spring early Monday afternoon.

Don Michael Adams, 22, of 2003 Runnels was thrown through the front windshield of a pickup driven by Felix Garcia, 25, of 3219 Auburn. Garcia was treated and released from Malone-Hogan for minor injuries. Another passenger in the pickup, Don Michael Adams, 22, of 2003 Runnels was uninjured.

Garcia told Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Glen Redmon that he was coming out of a small curve when his front wheels seemed to go into a rut. The steering wheel began spinning out-of-control before one of the passengers grabbed it, Garcia said.

Redmon said the out-of-control vehicle traveled 300 yards before turning over one time. It came to rest on its wheels.

Redmon said no citations were issued to persons involved in the accident.

Train fire continues

PINE BLUFF, Ark. — Hundreds of people who fled their homes near a 42-car train derailment remained with friends and relatives today, as officials waited for a fire consuming spilled oil and plastic pellets to burn down.

Federal transportation officials arrived late Monday to coordinate efforts to contain the blaze that had burned since the cars carrying chemicals careened off a straight stretch of Cotton Belt Railroad track just south of Pine Bluff.

Pan Am, union agree

NEW YORK — Pan American World Airways has reached a tentative contract agreement with the Flight Engineers International Association, but terms of the deal have not been revealed pending ratification by the 720 engineers.

The flight engineers' contract expired Dec. 31, along with those of Pan Am's other four major unions, said James Arey, a Pan Am spokesman. With Monday's agreement, the airline has established contract settlements with four of the groups, but at the expense of a monthlong strike by the Transport Workers Union, representing 5,163 mechanics, flight controllers and ground workers.

Florida wildfires rage

Firefighters worked around-the-clock to control a 26,800-acre wildfire in northwestern Florida, as brushfires also raged today in a Georgia swamp and the canyons of central California.

Fire lines were drawn Monday around most of the blaze outside Madison, Fla., as up to 300 people, including National Guard troops and a crew from Alabama, tried to control the inferno.

Stock strike averted

NEW YORK — Clerks and pages at the New York Stock Exchange reached a tentative agreement on a new contract today after an all-night negotiating session which ended just 10 minutes before a scheduled strike.

Richard Torrenzano, New York Stock Exchange vice president for public relations, said the agreement was reached at about 7:50 a.m.

Zaccaro license lifted

ALBANY, N.Y. — A 90-day suspension of John Zaccaro's real estate license was an unfair penalty for actions that wouldn't have been noticed if he hadn't been the husband of vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, his attorney complained today.

Zaccaro had pleaded guilty in January to "scheming to defraud" by altering an appraisal report and overstating his net worth.

Torture chamber

Missing campers traced to multiple graves

WEST POINT, Calif. (AP) — Detectives are investigating reports that a family of five vanished from a campground less than a mile from a cabin where torture tapes and charred human bones have been found, authorities say.

"We have information that some people were camped there, just like they went away for a walk in the woods and never came back," Sheriff Claud Ballard of Calaveras County said Monday.

"We haven't confirmed that yet, but we're trying to run down every lead we can," he said.

Camping gear, including a coffee pot and personal belongings, were found recently at the campsite, the sheriff said.

Investigators have discovered the remains of at least three people buried at the three-acre site used by survivalist Leonard Lake, who committed suicide in police custody last week.

Photographs and videotapes of scenes of sexual torture have also been found at Lake's cabin, Ballard said. "We have a lot of missing people. I am hoping we don't find them on the property, but I think there's more people buried on that property."

Police believe as many as 25 missing people may be linked to Lake, 39, and Charles Chat Ng, who is the subject of a nationwide manhunt.

Lake was arrested for driving a car belonging to a missing man and for outstanding federal warrants. He killed himself four days later.

The FBI will join the search for Police search a homemade torture chamber near West Point, Calif.

Ng, Ballard said, adding that agents visited the area on Monday. Lake's cabin is near Wilseyville, about 150 miles east of San Francisco.

Ng, 24, has been named in a warrant on three counts of kidnapping, with bail set at $500,000, Calaveras Sheriff's Sgt. Ron McFall said. Police say Ng, believed to be heavily armed, has vowed not to be taken alive.

Ballard said investigators found two of Lake's diaries, one of which has 50 pages espousing his philosophy "that God meant women for cooking, cleaning house and sex and when they were not in use, they should be locked up."

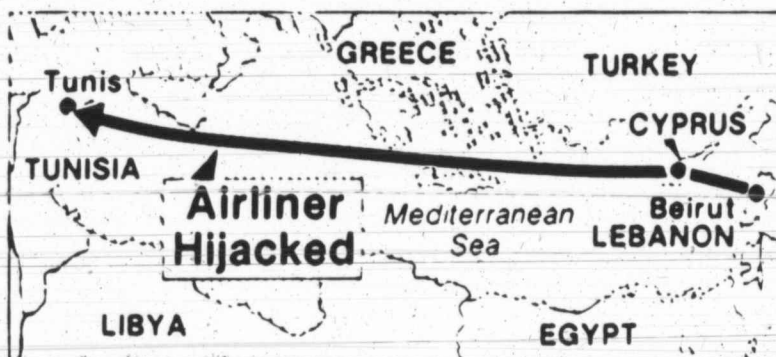

Gunmen hijack Jordanian jetliner

By The Associated Press

A Jordanian airliner hijacked in Beirut today with at least 57 passengers aboard, including two Americans, landed in Sicily after being refused permission to land in Tunis, an airline spokesman said.

Mounib Toukan, vice president of the Royal Jordanian Alia Airline, said in Amman that the Boeing 727 landed at Palermo airport. The Italian news agency ANSA said the plane had landed to refuel.

There were initially believed to be four armed hijackers aboard. But an Israeli radio monitor, Mickey Gurdus, said he heard the captain report there were six hijackers. According to Gurdus, the captain of the flight said the hijackers demanded the plane be refueled.

Toukan said the Tunisian government had closed all airports in the country to prevent the plane from landing in Tunis.

The hijackers seized the jet as it was preparing to take off from Beirut, Lebanon on a scheduled flight to Amman.

12 die in Beirut gunfire

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Gunners from rival militias fired a barrage of mortars that closed the only remaining crossing between Beirut's Moslem and Christian sectors today. Police said 12 people were killed and 63 wounded in Beirut and the northern port Tripoli.

U.N. officials said they had made no progress toward gaining the release of 21 Finnish U.N. peacekeeping soldiers held by the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army. On Monday, U.N. officials asked the militia for permission to send a medical team to treat an ill hostage.

USSR linked to plot

ROME — Mehmet Ali Agca, convicted for attempting to kill Pope John Paul II, testified today that Soviet diplomats ordered and paid for the assassination attempt four years ago in St. Peter's Square.

Testifying in the trial of three Bulgarians and four Turks charged with complicity in the May 13, 1981, shooting, Agca, already serving a jail sentence for trying to kill the Polish-born pontiff, said "The order to kill the pope came from the Soviet Embassy in Sofia (the Bulgarian capital)," Agca declared.

Crash kills 22 Israelis

MOSHAV HABONIM, Israel — A train and bus collided at a railway crossing near the Mediterranean coast today, killing 22 people, most of them teen-age bus passengers heading for a school outing at the beach, a police official said.

Arie Guren, deputy police commander for the Haifa district, said another 17 were injured but said he could not give further details. Israel Railways Director Zvi Tsafirri said all the dead were from the bus and included the bus driver, a woman.

Gandhi headed for U.S.

ALGIERS, Algeria — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi of India departed for the United States today following a 24-hour visit to Algeria.

Gandhi met with President Chadli Bendjedid and other Algerian officials, discussing bilateral cooperation, the Iran-Iraq war, and conflicts in the Middle East crisis and the Western Sahara.

Dollar drops in trading

LONDON — The dollar edged lower in early European trading today and dealers blamed the drop on uncertainty over the health of the American economy. Gold was a shade higher.

The dollar, which gained strongly in European dealing Monday amid hints of a better employment and interest rate outlook in America, slipped back today.

Mengele's son agrees Nazi is dead

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Josef Mengele's son says his Nazi war criminal father is dead, and was probably the man buried six years ago near Sao Paulo, Brazil, a family spokesman said today.

"Rolf Mengele assumes that the remains dug up in Sao Paulo are those of his father," spokesman Herbert Bauermeister told reporters.

The long hunt for the former Auschwitz death camp doctor, accused in the murders of 400,000 Jews and others during World War II, had taken a dramatic turn last week when Brazilian investigators said they had information that a man who drowned and was buried there in 1979 was Mengele. But the Mengele family had remained silent on the issue until today.

Bauermeister said Rolf Mengele would now take his evidence to West German prosecutors in Frankfurt and would explain to them why he had not spoken to investigators previously.

"Everything indicates that the remains are those of Josef Mengele," Bauermeister added. "Rolf Mengele believes that he can give conclusive proof for the death of his father."

But Bauermeister said it was only speculation that Josef Mengele had died in a swimming accident, as has been reported.

Rolf Mengele is a lawyer in the southern German city of Freiburg. The Mengele family has long owned a farm machinery manufacturing company in Guenzburg, a town near Munich.

In Sao Paulo today, the chief Brazilian investigator in the case, Romeu Tuma, said he had information of "other individuals" in Brazil who sheltered the man said to be Mengele and he would take statements from them. He did not name the individuals.

A Hungarian immigrant woman and an Austrian immigrant couple in the Sao Paulo area already have said they sheltered Mengele.

The information about involvement of other individuals "increases suspicion that there was an organized group to protect Mengele."

College programs lacking in funding

A policy statement recently released by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching says federal support for academic science and engineering research is declining as a percentage of the total university research budget. While the cost of university research programs is more than $5 billion a year — much of which is federally funded — it isn't enough.

Federal money for research has increased slightly each year but has fallen 40 percent since 1968 when inflation is taken into account. The United States faces technological challenges from abroad and employment pressures at home. Over the next 10 years the number of 18- to 24-year olds is expected to drop by 21 percent. The pool of young talent will be smaller. And many potential graduate students needed in academic research are being tempted into the work force by high salary offers. Without support, the life of a graduate student can be grim.

Private research can and must be carried out by industry. But the campuses are the great centers of basic research, which leads to the greatest discoveries.

Academic research depends on public funds. It produces basic knowledge and skilled professionals. It must not be shorted. Out industrial future depends on it.

When smoke gets in your eyes

When someone gives up smoking he or she wants the whole world to hear about it. I know you weren't ready for this, dear reader, but I have given up cigars. I am a born-again nonsmoker — a confessed sinner who can now walk into any crowded room without stinking up the joint.

Don't go away. I want to tell you the story of my conversion. It doesn't do any good to stop smoking if no one will listen to how you did it.

First, I have to give credit where credit is due. I couldn't have done it alone. I got some help from that Big Nonsmoker in the sky.

It all began six months ago when, after lighting up one of the six or seven cigars I smoked every day, I suddenly heard loud coughing in the heavens. Then a thundering voice boomed, "PUT OUT THAT DAMNED CIGAR."

I didn't pay any attention because I was sure He wasn't talking to me. After all, I had been smoking for over 40 years and He never raised any objections before. So I continued for another week. Then my chest started to feel lousy and I became hoarse.

I looked up and said, "What's going on?"

The voice came down and said, "I THOUGHT I MADE MYSELF CLEAR. WHAT KIND OF MESSAGE DO I HAVE TO SEND YOU?"

"Okay," I said. "I'm willing to deal. Let's just say I cut down to two or three a day?"

He would have none of it. "THE NUMBER IS NON-NEGOTIABLE."

"How about one petit corona after dinner?"

"DON'T YOU UNDERSTAND ENGLISH?" the voice said. To make His point He shoved a hot coal down my throat and I started to gasp for air.

Yes, He was responsible for my quitting, but He didn't give me that much help once I gave it up.

After I went cold turkey I had to face the prospect of earning a living. I could smoke a cigar without writing, but I couldn't write without smoking a cigar. In the beginning I just stared at the paper. To get going I tried typing exercises such as "Now is the time for all good men ... for all good men ... for all good men ... for all good men to light up a Monte Cristo Havana No. 3."

My mind would work in curious ways. I would want to write about the MX missile system, and the only thing that came out was "Puff the Magic Dragon." The song "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes" drowned in my head, and the Marlboro Man kept riding across my computer screen.

Finally, in desperation, I looked up to the heavens and said, "How long do you expect me to keep this up?"

The voice came down, "TRY CHEWING GUM."

I was skeptical, but the first time I shoved a stick of gum in my mouth it worked. I found out if you have to keep moving your jaws all the time, you don't miss having a wet stogie between your lips.

Well, it's been all uphill since then. After my decompression period I discovered the beautiful world of nonsmoking. My lungs are now getting all the oxygen they so richly deserve and my brain cells seem to be relieved they don't have to absorb soot from morning until night.

What is even better is I am now a member of that band of brothers and sisters who can walk into a restaurant or get on an airplane and say loudly to the hostess, "No smoking section, please!"

I have to admit that like all born-again nonsmokers I look down on those who are still hooked. I don't get angry with them but I do something worse. I bore them. I tell them my story from beginning to end — how I was once a seven-a-day Dunhill man, but through the intervention of a higher spirit became a six-pack Doublemint gum fan. Then I warn them that we nonsmokers not only consider ourselves holier than they, but believe we have a mission to either convert all smokers, or persecute them until we drive the tobacco demons from their souls.

Nicaragua heads OAS list for budgetary extravaganza

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA
WASHINGTON — The battle between Nicaraguan contras and the Sandinista regime isn't being fought only in the jungles by soldiers in camouflage uniforms. It is being waged with equal bitterness by striped-pants diplomats in the Organization of American States.

We've reported on the petty politics and budgetary boodle at the OAS in the past, pointing out that it's the American taxpayers who ultimately get ripped off for the organization's extravagance, since our government pays two-thirds of the OAS budget.

After roundly denouncing us for these disclosures, some OAS officials have now decided that maybe expense-account excesses are outrageous after all.

"The situation is really difficult here," said Guillermo Piernes, the OAS public information chief. His statement was in response to our inquiry about an internal audit that charged the OAS director in Nicaragua, Jorge Arellano, with "unauthorized activities" and recommended disciplinary action.

According to Piernes, Arellano is one of those officials who are "acceptable to the Sandinistas." He replaced a Somocista after the 1979 revolution. Does this mean that Arellano's peccadillos have been blown out of proportion in the audit? Here's what the OAS audit reported:

• Between July 1983 and January 1984, Arellano authorized a total of $2,160.55 to be paid to himself, without getting permission from Washington. He also purchased office furniture with a check for $418.18 that was both signed and made out to himself.

• Arellano bought a set of five new tires for an OAS pickup truck in Managua that was less than a year old, then tried to order a third set soon after that.

"In our opinion," wrote the auditors, "the tire purchase in January 1984, and the attempt to acquire an additional complete set in August 1984, eight months later, appears to be unwise."

• Arellano bought three air conditioners for the OAS from a relative for $1,900 — and paid for them with Yankee dollars instead of Nicaraguan cordobas, as OAS regulations require. Not only that, but "further examination of the draft disclosed that the payment was deposited by the director in his own personal account in the United States," the auditors reported.

• During 1983-84, Arellano received several thousand dollars' worth of cash credits for tax-free fuels purchased for OAS business, though headquarters had ordered the Managua office in 1981 to stop giving the staff the credit allotments.

Arellano's behavior "in our opinion reflects poor judgment and is inconsistent with the requirements set forth by OAS regulations," the auditors wrote, adding: "We believe that because of the extensive nature and scope of these activities in failing to comply with OAS regulations the disciplinary action should be considered."

Piernes said no disciplinary action had been taken, because Arellano has until the end of this week to respond to the auditors' charges. Piernes did characterize the findings as "routine," and noted that currency abuse was the organization's "most common problem."

Naval secrets safe, Pentagon believes

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's most sensitive naval secrets — how the United States finds Soviet submarines and what it does to avoid having its own subs tracked — appear to be secure despite the Walker family spy case, officials say.

Pentagon officials are concerned about serious damage to the nation's military secrets resulting from the range of information passed to the Soviets.

But the men arrested so far lacked the range of special security clearances needed to gain access to the super-secret "black" programs at the heart of the undersea game of cat-and-mouse played 365 days a year by the two superpowers, said the officials, who would speak only on condition they not be named.

Those programs involve some of the country's most closely held secrets about the specific techniques the Navy uses to find Soviet subs, and the abilities of U.S. subs to avoid being found.

Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch said last week that Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's fears have "gone up" because of what Weinberger "continues to learn" about the Walker case.

Still, Burch told reporters the Pentagon "not aware of any change" in the Soviet Union's ability to track U.S. missile submarines based on information furnished by the alleged spy ring.

Navy officials have boasted privately for years that American missile-firing boats are virtually invulnerable because of superior U.S. techniques in keeping the ships quiet.

And they also have told Congress that the Navy is confident of its ability to hunt down Soviet subs.

"The Soviet ability to get our subs is still in doubt," said one official. "The Walker case may give them some more pieces of the puzzle, but our boats are still safe."

Because of the difficulty of accurately tracking objects in the vast reaches of the oceans, the subs, which can move and stay submerged for months, are the most invulnerable part of America's three-pronged nuclear deterrent that includes land-based missiles and bombers.

The U.S. fleet is composed of 31 Poseidon-class subs, each with 16 long-range missiles that have 10 warheads apiece, along with the first five of a planned two dozen Trident-class boats. The Tridents are each armed with 24 missiles that carry up to eight warheads apiece.

Those subs succeeded the original U.S. missile-firing boats known as Polaris. John Walker Jr., the only man arrested thus far in the spy case with sub experience, served in the 1960s aboard two boats with Polaris-class missiles, and Navy officials say he thus had little access to current technology.

In addition to the missile sub fleet, the Navy has 96 attack submarines to hunt down Soviet subs, compared to the Soviet fleet of about 280 attack subs and 62 missile-firing boats.

The United States has about half of its long-range nuclear weapons aboard the missile subs, known as "boomers," while the other half is divided between land-based missiles like Minuteman and B-52 bombers.

The Soviets, by contrast, have three-quarters of their warheads atop land-based missiles.

The key to tracking the subs is sound, which travels great distances under water, say Navy officials.

While the Soviet subs are generally larger and can dive deeper, the American subs are quieter.

But Navy officials say the Soviets have made large strides in that area in recent years, using techniques such as better precision tooling of engines and coating the hulls with materials that both absorb sonar rays and muffle the sounds made by the boats passing through the water.

The main U.S. anti-submarine warfare system is known as SOSUS, for Sound Surveillance System.

It is a 20-year-old string of hydrophones lying on the seabed off both U.S. coasts and in an undersea gap stretching from Greenland through Iceland to the United Kingdom. In a crisis, Soviet subs moving into the Atlantic

Most working mothers in U.S. feel guilty

Dr. Donohue

Breast lumpectomy is option for some

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Just what is lumpectomy? My 43-year-old daughter was thrilled when she learned this could be done for her. But she wasn't very clear on details. I think it means they can leave the breast intact. Is this being done more often today than breast removal? — Mrs. R.R.

It is becoming a safe option for many women with breast cancer.

The more technical term for lumpectomy is segmental mastectomy. It is the removal of a lump of cancerous breast tissue and a limited area of tissue around it. The entire breast is not removed.

Unfortunately, it is not an option for all women. The lump or tumor has to be about an inch and a half or less in size. Surgery is often followed by radiation therapy, and if any lymph nodes show cancer spread, chemotherapy has to be used as well.

It's encouraging for many women that recent studies tell us we can do considerably less radical forms of breast surgery like this, making it possible for some to keep much of the breast intact. I'm sure your daughter was elated at the news.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please help! I'm losing my hair by the bushel baskets. I am only 30 years old and just had my first baby. Since her birth I have had hair falling out in massive amounts. It is getting really noticeable. I've been to my own ob/gyn and he doesn't seem at all concerned. Nor is the dermatologist, who said it's temporary loss. Any help would be appreciated. — S.G.

You are not alone. Some women experienced this temporary hair loss following pregnancy. Hair grows in alternating cycles — anagen (growing) and telogen (resting). Pregnancy lengthens the growing phase. Afterward there is a compensating shedding phase, which can produce an actual hair deficit. This usually lasts from two to four months. You can expect regrowth by six months.

If it doesn't happen by then, report it to your doctor to investigate a possible hormone imbalance. The booklet "Good Health for Your Hair" discusses this along with other common hair problems. Readers can write me care of the Big Spring Herald for a copy. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents for printings and handling.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Can an irritation of the gall bladder, such as a blow to the abdomen, cause gallstones? — S.A.J.

The gall bladder is pretty well protected from blows. It is tucked underneath the liver. So trauma is not a very common cause of stone formation. The usual cause is stored bile that contains too much cholesterol. Certain irritations, as from infection, can cause cholesterol to settle out of the bile and a stone to form.

I thought your question was interesting, and wasn't about to dismiss it out of hand. But I could not find any authority on the subject who said trauma of the kind you mention was a cause of gallstones.

Dr. A. Haynes speaks on periodontal disease

Dr. Alice Haynes, director of Dental Hygiene at Howard College, spoke at the Elbow Extension Homemakers Club meeting June 6 in the home of Gloria Kappas.

She talked about periodontal (gum) disease, the cause and prevention. It is caused by plaque, a thin sticky colorless film of bacteria that forms on teeth daily. It can be prevented by brushing and flossing thoroughly at least once a day, eating a well-balanced diet and limiting snacks. People also should visit dentists regularly for professional cleaning and treatment, she said. She demonstrated the correct way to brush and floss.

The club will meet at Furr's Thursday for lunch, then discontinue meeting until September.

Morrow named Woman of the Year

Vicki Morrow was named Woman of the Year during the April meeting of Cactus Chapter American Business Women's Association at Golden Corral.

Morrow has been active in ABWA since 1979 and is affiliated with both local chapters. She has served as president, vice president, recording secretary, treasurer, membership chairman, ways and means chairman, Cinderella Pageant chairman and Boss Night chairman.

Morrow graduated from Big Spring High School in 1969 and worked at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Dallas for a counseling psychologist in 1970. In November 1970, she returned to Big Spring to work at Webb Air Force Base as a secretary in its hospital and later in one of its flying squadrons.

In July 1976, she began her career with the Social Security Administration as a clerk and later was promoted to data review representative and her present position as claims clerk. As claims clerk, she is responsible for the interpretation of the law, interviewing applicants for retirement, survivors disability or hospital insurance benefits, and determining eligibility and benefit amounts. She also has taken sign language and Spanish courses at Howard College.

Dan Wise spoke on "Growing through Loss" during the meeting. He is director of social services at Malone-Hogan Hospital. Wise presented the five stages of death, how to handle and deal with each stage, and care for the caretaker of the terminally ill. Brenda Claxton,

By REDBOOK

The majority of American mothers work outside the home and they have one thing in common — guilt.

Working mothers fear their absence from the home will hurt their children but, according to an article in Redbook, the experts advise them not to worry.

The consensus among social scientists, who have been researching the problem since the 1930s, holds that a mother's working has no predictable effect on children. What does matter is whether a mother feels good about whether she works or stays home.

Lois Hoffman, a psychologist at the University of Michigan and a researcher into maternal employment, said that when working mothers are happy about their decision to work, they are more likely to encourage their children's independence.

"These kids are proud of learning how to take care of themselves," said Sally Wendkos Olds, author of "The Working Parents Survival Guide." "The older kids of working mothers even speak a little condescendingly of their friends who have had less responsibility at home and are 'helpless.'"

"In cases where both parents define themselves as 'primary' and parenting responsibilities are equally assumed, the children develop a broader sense of self..."

The experts say working mothers must not only be comfortable with the decision to work, but also must be happy in their jobs. Some studies indicate children of mothers who are dissatisfied with their jobs show more signs of poor adjustment than children of non-working mothers or mothers who like their work.

A common worry among working mothers is that working outside the home will interfere with the mother-child relationship. Not so, concluded Sally Kilmer in a review of the literature on day care published in "Current Topics in Early Childhood Education."

"Whatever the unique features of mother-child relationships," she wrote, "they clearly were maintained even though children began group care as young as two to three months of age and were away from their mothers up to 40 or more hours a week during the first three years of life."

Children of working mothers also may benefit by receiving extra paternal care. Not every father pitches in. But those who do, said Diane Ehrensaft, a psychologist at the Wright Institute in Berkeley, Calif., are rewarded with "a very intimate child-parent relationship that might not have developed between them if the mother were at home full time."

She added that having two working parents can broaden a child's perception of sex roles.

"In cases where both parents define themselves as 'primary' and parenting responsibilities are equally assumed," she said, "the children develop a broader sense of self. The roles they choose in life won't be dictated by their sex."

A survey on working mothers, conducted by the University of Arizona and representing about one-third of the country's pediatricians, found the majority of respondents viewed favorably the idea of working mothers.

One group differed, according to Redbook, and voted that children of employed women were at higher risk than those of nonworking mothers. The doctors who disapproved were older male pediatricians whose wives do not work outside the home.

Dear Abby

Mother's tale becomes bedtime favorite

DEAR ABBY: Whenever you mention that poem, "I Had a Mother Who Read to Me," I have to laugh because my mother never read to me. I used to beg her to read to me, but she couldn't be bothered with that tedious business. Instead, she'd tell me bedtime stories that were more or less true.

The one I liked the best was the one about how she and her cousin Alice tried to make whiskey.

They filled a large crock with water, wheat, oats, grains, raisins and raw potato peelings, and any other garbage they could find. After a couple of weeks, the mixture in the crock smelled so bad, my grandmother insisted they get rid of it, so Mom and Alice carried the crock down by the river and dumped it on the bank. Naturally Grandma's geese followed them and gobbled it all up. Pretty soon, Grandma looked out the window and saw all her geese lying about in the yard. She thought they were dead, so she got the girls to pluck all the down from the geese and told them that as soon as their grandfather got home from the lumber mill, he'd have to buy those dead geese. (The geese were not dead; they were drunk!)

The next morning the geese were running around the yard stark naked, so Grandma crocheted little jackets for them to wear, and that was the last time my mother and her cousin Alice ever tried to make whiskey.

JOE EASTMAN, COLORADO SPRINGS

DEAR JOE: Thanks for a dandy day brightener.

DEAR ABBY: Very often you ask people to forgive and forget, so I thought the enclosed poem (found in a magazine) might appeal to you and your readers. It made me smile, and I hope it makes you smile, too.

RICK IN TACOMA

DEAR RICK: Smile? I laughed out loud. And here it is:

FORGIVENESS
The friend who ran off with your wife,
Forgive him for his lust;
The chum who sold you phony

stocks,
Forgive his breach of trust;
The pal who schemed behind your back,
Forgive his evil work;
And when you're done — forgive yourself
For being such a jerk.

DEAR ABBY: Please do a good deed for the elderly. Around holiday times, I am frequently asked, "Where are you going for the holidays?"

I am not going anywhere. I have rotten children who do not invite me although I have been extremely good to them. It is embarrassing to have to stutter and lie. They have no reason to be ashamed of me. My appearance and manners are above reproach.

Please write about this in your column. It might keep people from asking that embarrassing question. It is almost as bad as saying, "If you have no place else to go, why don't you come to my house?"

Statler Brothers sweep Music City News awards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Statler Brothers reign as favorites among country music fans, who voted them six Music City News awards as an emotional Barbara Mandrell returned to performing and to an award for 25 years of showmanship.

The Statlers, a quartet discovered by country star Johnny Cash 25 years ago, won six awards Monday night at the 19th annual fan-voted awards. The four, who have cultivated a legion of loyal fans, capped off the evening by winning the top award — entertainer of the year.

They also won vocal group of the year, top video for "Elizabeth," No. 1 album for "Atlanta Blue," best comedy act and top country music TV special for "Another Evening With the Statler Brothers: Heroes, Legends and Friends."

"It's a very special night," Don Reid of the Statlers said after the show, a syndicated television special from the Grand Ole Opry House. "We can't say thank you enough."

Miss Mandrell, who six years ago was the opening act at shows with the Statlers, as headliners, was seriously injured in a traffic accident Sept. 22. Her performance Monday was her first public singing appearance since she was hospitalized with a broken leg, severe concussion and other injuries.

"I love to feel the love that goes on," she said after the show, in which she sang "There's No Love in Tennessee," about an absent lover, then moments later tearfully accepted the Living Legend Award for her career achievements. Miss Mandrell, 36, who is expect-she was introduced and told the crowd later, "My heart is gigantic right now."

Lee Greenwood won two awards, male vocalist of the year and single record of the year for "God Bless the USA." He was picked for single record over "My Only Love" by the Statlers. It was the only award the Statlers were finalists for that they did not win.

In his acceptance speech for the patriotic "God Bless the USA," Greenwood thanked Vietnam veterans.

Reba McEntire, voted female vocalist of the year, said, "This one is for the country music fans." The award gave Miss McEntire a sweep of the three country music awards shows in the past year. She won the same honor from the Country Music Association and the Academy of Country Music.

The Judds, a Kentucky-born mother and daughter, won duo of the year and the Star of Tomorrow award.

"We believe in family and country music is one big family," mother Naomi Judd said in accepting their second award. "We share this with you all."

The "Hee Haw" gospel quartet — Roy Clark, Buck Owens, Kenny Price and Grandpa Jones — won best gospel act.

"Nashville Now," a live 90-minute music-talk show on The Nashville Network, was voted No. 1 television series, outpacing the long-running "Hee Haw" and others.

The Statlers, noted for their tight harmony, have won more than 300 awards during their career. They shared hosting honors on the show with Marie Osmond, John Schneider, Clark and Mel Tillis.

Winners were picked by subscribers to Music City News, a monthly country music publication. A delayed telecast will be shown in some areas.

Asian immigrants carve out new life in motel business

SPARKS, Ga. (AP) — As the sun sinks over a pine forest, Jayram Patel sits at the front desk of his brick motel, awaiting the weary travelers who pull off busy Interstate 75.

Armed with a master's degree and an entrepreneurial spirit, Patel left his native India in 1971. He worked as a chemist in New Jersey and Tennessee until he had saved enough money to buy the Sparks Inn in 1979.

"The first year was a little disappointing," said Patel, noting that he and his wife, Nila, sometimes had to work 24 hours a day while building a reliable staff of 15. "If the cook doesn't show up, you have to be a cook. You've got to be prepared for everything."

The Patels, seeking what he described as "better opportunity," and their fellow Indian immigrants have found a niche in the motel business.

Indians in large numbers began entering the United States from Canada, England and Africa in the early 1970s. Unlike some other immigrants, they had cash to invest. At the same time, the Arab oil embargo had cut down on holiday driving in the United States.

Many American motel owners sold their slumping businesses to the Indians, who were looking for businesses they could learn quickly.

According to one estimate, about 15,000, or 28 percent, of the nation's 53,629 motels and hotels are owned by Indians or people of Indian descent.

"They just got in at the right time and began helping relatives," said Thomas Abraham, president of the New York-based National Federation of Asian Indian Organizations in America. He's compiled a list of Indian businesses in the United States.

Although only 16,000 Indians entered the United States between 1871 and 1965, their numbers surged from 107,000 to 361,544 between 1973 and 1980, according to Abraham. By the end of this year, he said, 500,000 Indians are expected to immigrate to the United States.

Asian Indians currently have the highest per-capita income of all ethnic groups in the country, said Abraham.

Because of their traditional emphasis on education, many Indians work as college professors, engineers and scientists, but thousands have put their degrees aside to be innkeepers in rural towns like Sparks, a south Georgia farm community of 1,300 that Patel calls slow to accept newcomers.

"They're very conservative people," Patel said. "They don't like too much foreigners. They don't even like people from North Carolina."

Thousands of the Indian motel owners have the same surname, Patel, but are not necessarily related, according to Abraham.

Jayram Patel and his wife Nila and daughter Krupa greet a traveler at their motel along Interstate 75 near Sparks, Ga. The Patels are among a large number of Asian Indians who have bought motels since immigrating to the United States.

College sports are over emphasized, poll shows

NEW YORK (AP) — A majority of Americans believe the role of sports in college today is overemphasized and 70 percent say gambling on college sports encourages athletes to cheat, a Media General-Associated Press poll says.

"I think people are kind of both saddened and fed up with the kind of activity which has gone on," said Eamon Kelly, president of Tulane University, which abolished its basketball program after eight people, including three players, were charged in a scheme to shave points on three games last season.

The nationwide telephone survey of 1,402 adults was conducted shortly after the indictments. Sixty-four percent of the respondents had heard of the Tulane scandal; 28 percent said they agreed with the decision to drop basketball.

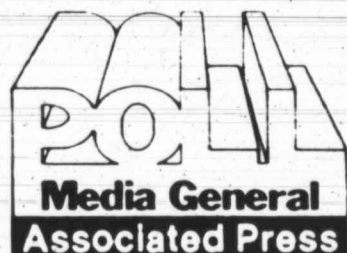

Respondents in the Media General-AP poll were asked, "Do you think the role of sports in college today is overemphasized, underemphasized, or is emphasized about right?" Sixty percent said overemphasized.

"I think what leads people to say that is the attention that sports is given in our society," said Jack Hartman, basketball coach at Kansas State University and past president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches. "And, unfortunately, another thing that influences people is the spotlight on all the problems in college athletics, and professional athletics too."

Thirty-three percent said sports gets about the right emphasis, 2 percent said underemphasized and 5 percent were unsure.

Respondents in the Media General-AP poll were also asked, "Do you think gambling on college sports encourages athletes to cheat, or not?" Seventy percent said it did and 20 percent said it did not. Ten percent were unsure.

The NCAA has scheduled a special convention June 20-21 in New Orleans, where it is expected to approve a series of measures aimed at dealing with cheating and other problems. The proposals could force schools that repeatedly violate the rules to give up football and basketball for two seasons. Coaches also could lose their jobs and athletes their eligibility to play.

To help players avoid being lured into gambling schemes, the National Association of Basketball Coaches is considering asking for monthly stipends of $50 to $100 for players. And the College Football Association's coaches committee proposed a plan last week that would give players $60 a month toward incidental costs.

In the Media General-AP poll, 76 percent of the respondents said athletes should not be paid for competing in major college sports.

"We're not proposing they be paid to play. We're proposing that they be treated like every other student," said Hartman. "There are many scholarships that pay a student more than an athletic scholarship. It makes it awkward in some cases when a kid has absolutely no money to buy the basic essentials such as toothpaste and deodorant." Because athletes must practice, they don't have time to work for spending money, Hartman said.

Respondents were also asked about proposals to give coaches job security, much like professors get tenure. Some people say that recruiting violations arise because coaches fear losing their jobs if their teams don't win enough games.

Forty-two percent said coaches should be given job security, regardless of their teams' records. Forty-six percent said colleges should have the option of firing coaches if the teams lose too many games, and 12 percent were unsure.

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,402 adults across the country May 1-7.

For a poll based on about 1,400 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample.

That is, if one could have questioned all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary by more than 3 percentage points from the results of polls such as this one.

'Doonesbury' cartoon attacks Sinatra, crime

NEW YORK (AP) — Legal concerns and fairness were among the reasons some newspapers decided not to run this week's "Doonesbury" cartoon, featuring a scathing look at Frank Sinatra and his alleged organized crime connections.

"I just had a lot of objections to it on fairness and accuracy," said Robert Landauer, editorial page editor of the Oregonian in Portland, Ore. "One particular point was libelous. I just decided that's not the way we want to make our living."

The Oregonian, which like a lot of papers runs "Doonesbury" on the editorial page, will not run the strips this week, Landauer said. The Los Angeles Times also decided against using the strip today through Saturday because "we were strongly advised by our legal counsel not to publish the rest of the series," said spokeswoman Carolyn Hom.

But most of the 835 newspapers that regularly carry Garry Trudeau's "Doonesbury" have decided to use it, and the syndicate that distributed the strips assured some newspapers that it was not libelous.

McBee leads pack through record Pro-Am first round

Club pro TERRY DEAR of Lubbock tees off from the first box during the opening round of the Signal Peak Shriners Pro-Am at the Big Spring Country Club. DEAR carded a 1 over-par 72 for the day.

By CHARLIE ALCORN
Sports Writer

Club pro Rives McBee fired a three under-par 68 to take sole possession of first place and two teams carded record 56's in the opening round of the Third Annual Signal Peak Shriners Pro-Am Monday at the Big Spring Country Club.

One stroke back were club pros Scott Neiman and Guy Bailey who came in from the par 71 course with a pairs of 69's. Greg Henning and Randy Kahn were two strokes off the pace with rounds of 70.

In the team lowball match play, two record setting 56's led the field after day one. The team of Henning, McClendon, Williamson, Rhodes and Williamson fired an incredible 15 under-par round to tie the team of Andy Anderson, Touchstone, McDonald, Hinojas and Barnaby. The course record set last year was a 14 under-par 57.

Right behind the leaders were a couple of team 57's led by C.G. Griffin, Forsythe, Rogers, Fraser and Sharpneck. The other team total 57 was shared by the team of local pro Doug DeSive, Johnson, the Small brothers and Jones.

The team of pro Dwight Nevil, Ronnie Broaderrick, Freeman, Chris Christopher and Clanton held down third place with a 13 under-par 58 for the day.

A pack of 277 golfers teed off in three groups into partly cloudy skies and breezy winds, braving searing afternoon heat, fast greens and occasional grasshopper swarms. The first group teed off at 8:52 in the morning.

Big Spring Country Club assistant pro Brock Phillips reported that the opening round ran smoothly for the large group. "All the morning groups got off on schedule but they started running a little behind in the afternoon." Big Spring Country Club pro Gary Hammer led his group off the tee last, coming in off their 18 holes at around 8:30 p.m. All 46 teams managed to shoot rounds under par. The highest rounds of the day were a pair of 4 under-par 67's. The final group came in about 1 hour behind schedule, but with plenty of daylight.

The first days activities were capped off with a dinner and auction at the Country Club with entertainment provided by the Nashville contingent of singers, pickers and songwriters. All proceeds from the auction went to the Shriners Hospitals.

The players will be looking at a different layout for today's round. Each hole will have a new pin and tee box placement and all the greens will be mowed. Play resumed today with the first team off the tee at 8:38 this morning. The final two team will tee off at 2:44 p.m.

Evert Lloyd No. 1

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd is one again the top woman tennis player in the world, the Women's Tennis Association says.

Lloyd, who defeated Martina Navratilova for the women's title in the French Open tennis championships last weekend, replaced Navratilova Monday atop the WTA rankings.

The 30-year-old Lloyd defeated Navratilova 6-3, 6-7, 7-5 at Roland Garros Stadium Saturday. Lloyd was last ranked No. 1 in June 1982.

"It has been a dream of mine to be back at No. 1," Lloyd said in London. "But with Martina playing so well for the last two years and being so dominant, I really did not think it was a reality."

Excepting two brief periods in 1980, when Tracy Austin was No. 1, either Lloyd or Navratilova has held the top spot in women's tennis since 1975, when the WTA first computerized its rankings.

Lloyd, 30, said that her new ranking did not come as a complete surprise. "I feel that most of the year I've been playing the best tennis of my career."

Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia was listed No. 3 in the latest rankings, followed by Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, Pam Shriver of the United States and West German Claudia Kohde-Kilsch. Another Czech player, Helena Sukova, was listed seventh, followed by three Americans — Zina Garrison, Bonnie Gadusek and Kathy Jordan.

Lloyd also beat Navratilova in a tournament in Florida in February.

She said the change in the rankings would not affect her thoughts about retiring. She has said she planned to quit within the next two years and start a family. "Whether it's No. 1 or 2, it doesn't make much difference. As long as I retire at the top," she said.

Lloyd and Navratilova have met 65 times and Navratilova holds a 33-32 edge.

Celtics regroup after Finals demise

BOSTON (A) — Old and weary, battered and beaten, the dethroned Celtics trudged back to the Boston Garden court barely 24 hours after ending their season there.

The baskets they had so much trouble hitting had been removed. Their title was gone, too.

"My feeling when I woke up this morning was one of the season's over. I can relax," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said Monday. "I still hate losing with a burning passion."

After sleeping off their 114-100 loss Sunday that gave the Los Angeles Lakers the National Basketball Association title, 4-2, the Celtics gathered Monday to force smiles for a club picture. Then, they were off to a team breakup dinner.

It was a busy beginning to a critical off-season that will help determine how much the Celtics will be broken up and how many faces in this year's team picture will be missing from next year's photo.

Jones showed his lack of faith in nearly half his team by using only seven players in each of the last two games, both won by the Lakers. And six players played all but 16 minutes in those contests.

The Celtics need youth as well as a more talented supporting cast.

By the time the 1985-86 season starts next fall, seven of their current 12 active players will be 30 or older. The average age will be 29.3. By contrast, the Lakers will have only three over-30 players and an average age of 28.1.

"We're an old team," Jones admitted.

Boston hopes to attack that problem in next Tuesday's NBA draft, a source of little help in recent years. The only key player the Celtics obtained as a result of the last three drafts was Scott Wedman and he's their second oldest. Wedman came in a trade for 1982 top draft pick Darren Tillis. The 1983 draft brought the Celtics Greg Kite and Carlos Clark, two seldom-used reserves with cloudy futures. They have no active players from last year's draft, in which they wasted their first pick on Houston's Michael Young, who was cut before the season got underway.

But Boston has to wait until the 20th pick to make its first choice.

"Who knows what's going to be left that can really help us?" Jones said.

Boston President "Red" Auerbach said Monday the Celtics are leaning toward taking the best athlete available regardless of position. Their greatest needs are a backup center to 31-year-old Robert Parish and a guard.

Boston had the NBA's best regular-season record. It improved in each of its first three playoff series. And it routed the Lakers 148-114 in the first game of the finals. Then the Celtics lost four of their next five games.

"You just have to dig down and come up with a little extra" when Jones basically went with six men against Los Angeles, said forward Larry Bird. "I'm a little bit more tired than I have been before."

Queens sign Allen

Howard College women's basketball coach Don Stevens announced the signing of Houston area star Eva Contrina Allen to a basketball letter of intent Monday afternoon.

Allen, who played in the backcourt at Royal High School in Brookshire, Texas, averaged 15 points, 4.5 steals, 5 assists and 4 rebounds per game her senior year while garnering a unanimous place on the first team 24-4A All-District squad. Allen was also a four year Regional qualifier in the hurdles for the Royal track team.

Allen won the Royal High School Sportsmanship award her senior year and was an officer in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

She also was a member of the volleyball squad for two years. Stevens plans to use the 5'6" Allen at either the point or shooting guard position next year for the Hawt Queens.

"Trina is that good outside shooter I have been looking for to shoot over the zone defenses," commented Stevens. "She has quick feet and is an excellent ballhandler and will no doubt make a definite contribution to the team next year."

... quick guard

Texas, Miami try again for CWS title

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Texas players and coaches say the rainout of the NCAA College World Series championship game with Miami won't benefit either team.

The Hurricanes disagree, claiming a refreshing edge from the extra day of rest.

"I don't think it will have an effect," Texas All-American Billy Bates said Monday night. "It's the biggest game of the season for both teams. I'm sure both teams will come out pumped."

"I don't think it can help either team," Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson said. "It's difficult to get up after so many days and so many delays."

The two teams will try again tonight to get the 1985 title game in at 6:10 p.m. CDT.

Miami pitcher Kevin Sheary, who already has won two games in the double-elimination tournament, is scheduled to start for the sixth-ranked Hurricanes. He said he can make use of the extra day of rest, as could ace reliever Rick Raether, who also has won two games for Miami in the CWS.

"Raether gets another day of rest and that's an advantage for Tuesday, 6 p.m.

Channel 3 ESPN

us," said Sheary.

"I'm happy about the rainout," said Raether, who pitched 3-1-3 innings to pick up wins Saturday and again Sunday. "I couldn't have pitched tonight (Monday) anyway. I can come back and throw four innings tomorrow."

Raether, 7-2 with 20 saves this season, said the rain delay won't detract from the Miami momentum gained from Sunday's 2-1 victory over Texas.

"We'll come back tomorrow ready to play. We can't lose momentum when you're playing for the national championship."

The two teams have split their two previous meetings at the national collegiate baseball tournament.

Mavs want Barry

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks have asked 7-foot, 250-pound free agent center Joe Barry Carroll to consider playing for them, but said Carroll and his agent said "right now, they are not interested."

Mavericks player personnel director Rick Sund said Monday night that he spoke to both Carroll and his agent, Howard Slusher, by telephone last week.

"Basically, they said they are looking at other clubs first. We are interested, but it's up to them now," Sund told The Dallas Morning News.

National Basketball Association teams were not permitted to talk to free agents until Monday, the day after the league's championship series ended.

However, Sund said during an appearance on a KRLD radio sports call-in show Monday evening that the Mavericks were able to initiate discussions with Carroll last Friday after asking for and receiving permission from Al Attles, general manager of the Golden State Warriors.

Chicago rallies over Montreal; Rice home run lifts Bosox

MONTREAL (AP) — Montreal's Jeff Reardon, the league leader with 17 saves, finally blew a save opportunity, and it cost his team the game.

In the eighth inning Monday night, with a man on first and one out, Reardon relieved Dan Schatzeder, who had allowed just two hits and had struck out 10 Chicago Cubs.

In 17 previous and similar situations, the game had been as good as over. This time, the Cubs were just getting started.

Richie Hebner pinch hit for pinch-hitter Brian Dayett, and singled. Dave Lopes popped foul for the second out, but with men on first and second, catcher Mike Fitzgerald's passed ball moved the runners up. They both scored on Ryne Sandberg's single.

NL Roundup

Sandberg took second on the throw home and scored as Keith Moreland singled off Reardon, 2-2, confirming Montreal Manager Buck Rodgers' opinion of his imperfect reliever as the Cubs rallied to beat the Expos 5-4.

"He's only human," Rodgers said. "He's done the job for us 99 percent of the time this year, but sometimes things like that happen."

"It was just one of those games that's really tough to lose," Schatzeder added. "Jeff just had an off-night, but the way he's pitched this year, he's entitled to one."

In other National League games, St. Louis bopped Pittsburgh 6-1, San Diego battered Houston 9-1, Los Angeles beat Cincinnati 7-4, Philadelphia trimmed New York 6-4, and Atlanta shut down San Francisco 7-0.

"It gives you a lot of confidence to know you can come back late in a game," said Sandberg, the NL's Most Valuable Player last year. "We've been in a lot of close games lately, but we know we have the kind of club that can come back in the seventh, eighth or ninth inning to win."

"Even when we're down, we know we're not out," Sandberg returned to the Chicago lineup Monday after missing eight games with sore ribs.

Ron Cey hit his 12th homer of the year in the top of the ninth to make it 5-3. It turned out to be a big run as Tim Wallach hit his fourth home run in the bottom of the inning off Lee Smith.

Cardinals 6, Pirates 1 ... Danny Cox pitched a four-hitter and singled home a pair of runs. Cox, a .069 hitter (2-for-29) entering the game, had two singles in the game. He bounced a single over third baseman Bill Madlock's head in the second inning, following a single by Ozzie Smith and Tom Nieto's double.

Cox, 7-2, has won four of his last five decisions and is 7-1 lifetime against the Pirates. He struck out five batters and walked two.

The Cardinals scored five runs in the first three innings against Rick Rhoden, 4-6, and won for the fourth time in the last five games while the Pirates lost their seventh straight.

Jack Clark hit his 12th homer of the season leading off the fifth inning.

Padres 9, Astros 1 ... LaMarr Hoyt, with his fifth complete game and third in as many starts, won for the fifth straight time, ending Houston's four-game winning streak. Hoyt, 7-4, scattered 11 hits and walked only one batter.

The Padres scored five runs in the third inning, with Terry Kennedy and Tony Gwynn each driving in two with singles. Kennedy and Gwynn each added another RBI later in the game.

Jerry Mumphrey's fourth homer of the season, in the sixth inning, gave the Astros their only run.

Dodgers 7, Reds 4 ... Pedro Guerrero, Mike Marshall and Greg Brock belted home runs for Los Angeles. Solo homers by Guerrero, his ninth, and Marshall, his 10th, cut a 3-0 Cincinnati lead to 3-2 in the fourth. Five runs, two on Brock's eighth homer, chased Reds starter John Stuper in the fifth inning.

Rick Honeycutt, 4-5, gave up four runs over 5 2-3 innings for the victory. Tom Niedenfuer pitched 2 1-3 hitless innings, and Ken Howell hurled the ninth for his sixth save.

Alan Knicely hit his fifth homer of the year for Cincinnati, and Dave Concepcion, with a double, extended his hitting streak to 13 games.

Phillies 6, Mets 4 ... Glenn Wilson batted in three runs, doubled, tripled, and scored twice. His two-run triple powered a three-run seventh inning for Philadelphia.

John Denny, 3-5, scattered seven hits over eight innings. Don Carman pitched the ninth inning, surrendering three runs.

In the ninth inning, Gary Carter added his seventh homer for one run and John Christensen hit his first major league homer for two more.

Braves 7, Giants 0 ... Rookie left-hander Zane Smith pitched the Braves' first complete game this year, limiting San Francisco to seven hits and striking out six Giants.

Larry Owen capped a five-run first inning with a two-run double. Bob Horner's double, Terry Harper's single and Ken Oberkell's sacrifice fly drove in the first three runs.

BOSTON (AP) — The moral of the story is simple. Don't have Jim Rice bunt.

"I had to make it happen," Rice said. "I just wanted to move the runners up a base."

What Rice actually did — after miserably fouling off two sacrifice tries — was clear the bases in the bottom of the ninth inning with a three-run homer Monday night that lifted the Boston Red Sox over the Milwaukee Brewers 4-2 for their eighth straight triumph.

Rice had not laid down a sacrifice bunt since 1980. But, trailing 2-1, Boston Manager John McNamara asked him to try after Wade Boggs led off the ninth with a single and Bill Buckner followed with a bunt that hit a pebble and stayed fair for another single.

Rice's first bunt attempt was

Then, Rice resorted to more familiar territory by lining a 1-2 pitch from Rollie Fingers over the left-field wall at Fenway Park for his 12th home run of the season.

"They (the Brewers) did great. We did better. Jim Rice had the final say," said winning pitcher Bob Ojeda.

In other American League games, Detroit saw-sawed past Baltimore 7-6 in 11 innings, New York stopped Toronto 4-2, Minnesota beat Cleveland 6-4, California bounced Texas 8-1, Chicago downed Seattle 9-4 and Oakland skipped past Kansas City 2-1 in 10 innings.

Milwaukee rookie starter Teddy Higuera had allowed just three hits, including a home run by Glenn Hoffman in the second inning, going into the ninth.

But after Boggs and Buckner got on base, Milwaukee coach Frank Howard, who is running the team while Manager George Bamberger is absent because of a death in his family, decided to bring in Fingers to face Rice.

"It was a classic confrontation — both guys are going to be in the Hall of Fame some day," Howard said.

Tigers 8, Orioles 7 ... Lance Parrish, who had homered earlier, lined an RBI single to cap a two-run rally in the bottom of the 11th inning to lift Detroit over visiting Baltimore.

Lee Lacy's second home run of the game had given the Orioles a 7-6 lead in the top of the 11th. But Barbaro Garbey led off Detroit's half of the inning with a home run against reliever Sammy Stewart to tie the game.

Lou Whitaker then singled and took second on Alan Trammell's sacrifice. After Kirk Gibson was intentionally walked, Parrish singled to left field for his third RBI of the game.

The Tigers tied a major league record for sacrifice flies in one game with four. They share the record with the Cleveland Indians, who did it on Sept. 12, 1981, against Detroit.

Yankees 4, Blue Jays 2 ... Bob Shirley, making his first start of the season, limited Toronto to one run on six hits over 6 1-3 innings to win his first game of the year.

Shirley, 1-1, was pressed into service because of a back injury to Joe Cowley. Reliever Brian Fisher got Shirley out of a seventh-inning jam, and Dave Righetti got the final four outs, wild-pitching a run home in the ninth, for his 11th save.

Doyle Alexander, 7-3, took the loss. It was only his ninth loss in his last 40 decisions over three seasons.

A's 2, Royals 1 ...

Kansas City second baseman Frank White could not handle Bruce Bochte's bad-hop grounder with two outs in the 10th inning, and that allowed Mike Heath to score the winning run from third base.

With two outs, Heath and Alfredo Griffin singled against reliever Dan Quisenberry, 3-4. Bochte hit a hard grounder that caromed off White's glove and into right field as Heath raced home. White was charged with an error on the play.

Heath sent the game into extra innings in Oakland with a pinch-single with two outs in the eighth that drove in Dusty Baker from second.

Twins 6, Indians 4 ... Tom Brunansky's three-run homer highlighted a five-run uprising in the second inning and Frank Viola pitched 7 1-3 innings to make the early lead stand up in Cleveland.

With the score tied 1-1, Tim Teufel led off the Minnesota second with a double and Greg Gagne followed with a triple. Mark Salas delivered an RBI single and Kirby Puckett also singled.

Jamie Easterly relieved starter Keith Creel, 0-5, but Brunansky connected for his 14th homer. Viola, 7-5, gave up four runs on seven hits.

Angels 8, Rangers 1 ... Kirk McCaskill, in his eighth start of the season, won his first major league game by scattering seven hits.

Mike Brown led the California offense, driving in three runs with three hits. Juan Beniquez had four hits for the visiting Angels, and also helped spark a bench-clearing incident in the ninth inning involving Texas reliever Dave Stewart.

McCaskill, 1-4, struck out seven and walked only one in his first complete game. Mike Mason, 4-6, took the loss for the Rangers.

New Jersey General running back HERSCHEL WALKER gains ground against the Jacksonville Bulls Monday night. WALKER set a new pro football rushing record with 2,129 yards in 16 games this season breaking ERIC DICKERSON's 1985 rushing record.

Walker new rushing king

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Nine-man defensive lines have not stopped him and neither have linebackers posing as defensive backs.

Herschel Walker shattered professional football's single-season rushing record, scored two touchdowns and carried New Jersey into the United States Football League playoffs Monday night as the Generals defeated Jacksonville 31-24.

Walker carried 28 times and gained 162 yards, giving him 2,129 yards in 16 games. That broke the pro record of 2,105 yards set by Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams in this past National Football League, also in 16 games.

Dickerson established his record in 16 games in the NFL, and Monday night was Walker's 16th game this season in the United States Football League.

The record-breaking run came with 6:38 left in the third quarter as Walker cut an off-tackle play back to the middle of the field, broke two tackles and went 55 yards for a touchdown, the last 45 yards untouched.

The touchdown was Walker's second of the game, and gave him 21 for the season, tying the league record he set last year along with Gary Anderson of Tampa Bay. The rushing touchdown was his 20th of the season, a USFL record, one better than Anderson had last season.

It also was the 10th straight game Walker has gained at least 100 yards, and the 13th time this season the Heisman Trophy winner from Georgia has accomplished the feat. That broke another Dickerson record. He had 12 100-yard games last season.

Walker gained 1,339 yards in 1984 playing with an injured shoulder. The numbers were good, but Walker did not seem to bowl people over as he did at the University of Georgia in winning the Heisman Trophy and it was nothing like his first year in the league when he gained more than 1,800 yards.

Following off-season surgery, 1985 has been different.

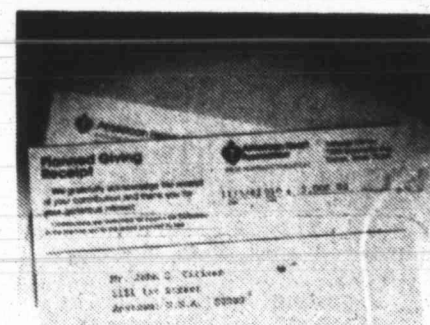

"You can see in the eyes of some of these defensive backs in the fourth quarter they don't want to tackle No. 34 anymore," said Generals center Kent Hull.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JUNE 12, 1985

GENERAL TENDENCIES: So many good ideas are coursing through your mind today that you would be wise to make notations so you will not forget them. Study them for ways to be more successful.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are highly enthused and can get fine ideas and make plans for a more prosperous future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Now you understand how to get some plan working in a most successful way, but avoid an irascible partner in the evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are inspired just how to gain the wishes that motivate you, but forget work in the evening that can bring problems.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Put that new system to work that will make your career duties much easier to handle. Be sure to get the OK of a bigwig.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) New conditions are now in the offing so accept them and stop adhering to the old and obsolete. Make as many new contacts as you can.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use a more modern angle in handling business affairs and you get better results. Forget outside visiting and spend time with mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make new agreements with associates, and you can come to a better understanding with them. Don't commit yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to find a more modern system for handling your work so that it becomes easier and faster.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Partners may have fine ideas that should be listened to and gone along with. Tonight steer clear of any plotting.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Change your attitude at home and establish more harmony in that vital realm of your existence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A good day to attend important meetings and keep appointments, but don't expect to get a favor from a bigwig in the p.m.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make a plan so that you can gain more prosperity in the future. Rest up and do nothing this evening but watch TV or read.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be very interested in whatever is new and part of the jet age and should have lots of encouragement as well as a good, modern education since there is much foresight here. Teach to finish whatever has been started, otherwise your progeny could become a jack of all trades and master of none.

BUSINESS & INDUSTRY REVIEW

Protect Your Vehicles Now With All Weld Carports

Independent Welding Services has been building carports and patio covers in Big Spring for three years and plans to stay in this community indefinitely. Gary Faulkner, owner, stands behind his work. A satisfied customer list is available for the customer. Independent Welding strives for reliability and sincerity in all business matters.

All materials are of fine quality. The building of a carport or patio cover meets all professional standards. The steel structure of your carport or patio cover, can be painted to match your home's color scheme.

West Texas elements are hard on cars. Wind, hail, dust, and sun can ruin your car's finish and lessen its value and attractiveness. For many West Texans, carports are the answer.

Independent Welding Service provides free estimates and can suggest size and design for every situation. To get your carport or patio cover underway before summer weather begins to take its toll, call Gary at 263-6346 or 267-5378.

High-Tech Cars Need Top-Notch Help

In recent years the automobile industry and service personnel has changed. Yesterday's mechanics are today's trained technicians. The term changed as automobiles became highly technical. In the near future there will no longer be a "shade tree mechanic." They will not have the knowledge or the equipment to service these vehicles.

The problems lie with the technological advancements in automobiles such as the computer command control. The new car owners can't afford to let just anyone make repairs on their vehicle. George Leatham of G&M Garage, 900 E. 3rd., would like to make today's car buyers aware of the current automotive technology. G&M Garage is introducing the In House

Diagnostic Computer. This new diagnostic computer will enable the technicians to repair the auto promptly and correctly. Guesswork will no longer play a part in determining what is wrong. The diagnostic computer will give a complete read-out on the auto's problems. It also may spot problems the customer is unaware of that could cause trouble or damage.

For auto repair and maintenance projects that are complicated and costly try G&M Garage. George and Mary Leatham (they're the G&M) run a garage where you can feel confident your car will receive the very best care. When in need of a dependable garage, see George and Mary G&M Garage, 900 E. 3rd.
