It was due to the importunities of friends that Umer and Roettger acted. Two aldermen, Percy J. Mims and T. R. Wilson, are announcing for reelection.

Seed Loan Office In Midland Opened

The Reporter-Telegram has just received word that an emergency crop loan office has been set up at the county agent's office in the court house. Farmers desiring loans should apply between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m.

According to the regulations under which the crop loans are to be made this year, any farmer who secures a loan must obtain a statement from the county production council, when one exists, that he does not intend to increase his acreage or production in violation of the Agricultural Adjustment administration program.

In counties where a county production council has not been set up, before any application for a loan will be considered the farmer who is applying will have to give satisfactory evidence that he is co-operating with the production control program of the Agricultural Adjustment administration.

The maximum amount of an emergency crop loan that may be obtained by any one individual is $250, the minimum is $25.

Applications for loans in any amount from $25 to $150 may be accepted by the emergency crop loan office provided the farmer does not have sufficient security to obtain a loan elsewhere.

A farmer applying for $150 or more must first make applications to the Production Credit association for a loan from it. Rejection of this application by the Production Credit association will be considered sufficient evidence that other credit is not available and the applicant may then make application to the emergency crop loan office.

Ed F. Jay of Sweetwater is field supervisor.

Jackson, who has never been enabled to preside in that capacity, will be announced soon, it was announced, and boards of review will be set monthly—"so that the boys will be ready to take their tests," as the scout executive put it. They will never force the issue unless the dates are arbitrarily set in advance."

C. C. Day announced the Knights of Zoch plans for an April 5 Father and Son banquet, and said the

What Would You Do?

What would you do if your wife cut an artery with the butcher knife and you could not get a doctor immediately.

What would you do if your kid brother fell in a pond or tank and almost drowned?

What would you do if a rattlesnake bit you, out on the range?

What would you do if your sister or sweetheart and you were driving and crashed into another car—and she was cut by broken glass?

What would you do if one of your young children drank poison or swallowed a poison tablet by mistake?

The chances are most people in Midland would not know what to do. R. L. Miller, chairman of the Midland Red Cross safety school, said. But everybody can learn what to do by hearing Dr. W. G. Whitehouse lecture and give practical demonstrations on first aid at the county court room starting at 7:30 next Tuesday night. These lectures will be given for one hour each Tuesday and Thursday nights until the 15-hour course is completed. Certificates will be awarded to all who complete the course.

This safety first school is free to all over 17 years old. Those interested are urged to enroll on the opening night. "There isn't a person in Midland who doesn't need to know safety first information," Miller said.

Scoring Ace Meets All Expectations

FORT WORTH (U.P.)—When Adolph (Too Tall) Dietzel led the scorers in the Amateur Athletic union national basketball tournament at Kansas City this year, the former southwest conference scoring ace fulfilled expectations.

Diezel as center on the Texas Christian university basketball team in 1931 set a Southwest conference scoring record with 163 points in 12 games.

The kinky San Antonio youth, rated as perhaps the most outstanding basketball player ever turned out of Texas Christian university, accomplished his high scoring feat in the national tourney despite the fact his team, the Hutchinson (Kan) Renos, did not reach the finals.

Diezel was all-southwest conference center the two years he competed in college basketball. He left college without completing his eligibility.

Music Is Necessary For Summer Crowds

GALVESTON (U.P.)—Music is necessary for Galveston's summer crowds, city officials believe. Each year they spend $5,000 for band concerts during the months of June, July and August.

Three nights each week during those months residents and visitors to the Gulf Coast resort listen to music from an orchestra hired by the city.

Felix Stella has directed the six summers of concerts. The first five years he paid his musicians $6 per concert. Last year the scale was reduced slightly to $5.50 per evening.

A special tax of one cent per $100 property valuation brings revenue for the concerts.

The stage was set with Gist producing including a baby calf, a side of dressed beef and the grand champion club calf, a Gist animal. The baby calf and champion were presented alive. The other calf of the dressed beef was served at the banquet.

Uncle John was seated before a large cooked ham. When the waiter served beef the Midland-Odessa clubman asked when they were going to eat the ham. They gave evasive replies and finally said the ham would be auctioned off. Uncle John promptly led the offer with $10 for himself and then bid a dollar for the Odessa chamber of commerce of which he is president.

All bidders bid their money down, and the ham brought $97, which is to be used for agricultural promotion work. After the auction, the ham was presented to Gist. A SOURCE OF REVENUE

There probably will be a good deal of public support for Secretary Morgenthau's suggestion that federal, state and municipal securities be subjected to taxation.

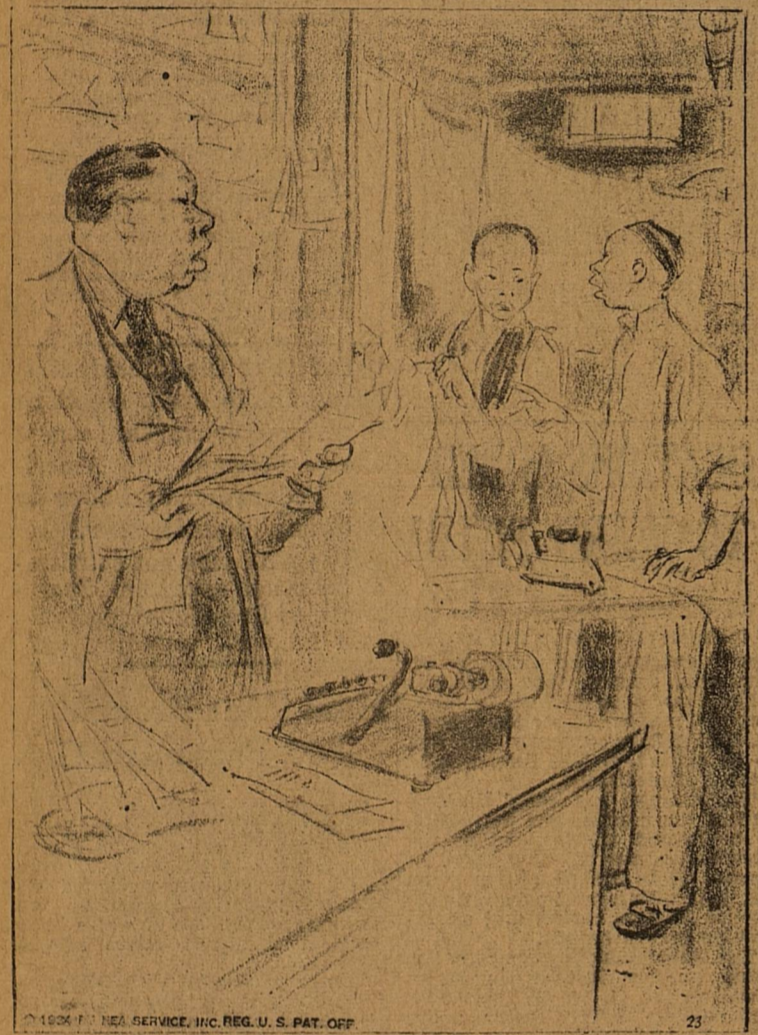

It won't be an easy program to work out, to be sure. It is probable that a constitutional amendment will be necessary.

The question whether such taxation would make it more difficult for states, cities, and the federal government to float their bonds will need the most careful kind of study.

But in principle, at least, the measure looks sound. At a time when all branches of government need revenue as badly as they do right now, it does not seem far to permit tax-exempt securities to provide for wealthy men a source from which they can draw an income beyond the reach of the tax collector.

Those congressmen voted for the bonus to war veterans as if the money were to be distributed among themselves.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

When the motor is knocking, And when the knees? It seems that the donkey had not shown his true colors when the young boy and his father were esteemed as a most sagacious beast. A famous sheik, exceedingly proud of his large herd, addressed the donkeys: "Let us test our wisdom," said he. "Answer me this question: 'What should a donkey require for three days' journey?'"

And they counselled among themselves and then made reply. "For a three days' journey, O Prophet, any donkey should require six bundles of hay and three bags of dates." Which answer was considered eminently wise by the assembled company. The Prophet answered, "Wait, and he again addressed the donkeys. I have to make a three days' journey, but I will not give six bundles of hay and three bags of dates for making it. Let him who will go for less stand forth." And behold, they all stood forth and began to talk at once. Each underbid the other until finally one especially long eared donkey agreed to go for one bundle of hay.

The sheik spoke the Prophet, "You can not even buy three days on one bundle of hay, much less profit from the journey." "True," quoth the long eared one. "Dearest," she replied, "I love you so much that I'd wait for you until the farmers are satisfied."

In the new autos, Will you tell us, please, "Darling," he said, "It will have to be a long engagement."

"No," said Mimmi, nodding her head. "Satin noticed her nod. "What do you mean by that?" she asked. "Well," said Mimmi, "we forget to mention her letters, and his somehow get lost after they reach the next box downstairs. She never looks in... she hasn't time, working all day."

What Has Happened Nana, a demi-moede in Paris just before the Franco-Prussian war had been made a famous theatrical star by Greiner, who insisted—and got—her to be his puppet. But at the same time she carried on an affair with George Murgat, a young officer whom she really loved. Greiner, hearing of this through George's Puritan brother, Andre, also an officer, immediately threw Nana out of his theatre, and effectually barred her from other theatres. George, her lover, has been transferred from France to Algeria, at the insistence of Andre, who wishes to break up the affair between the two young people. Nana, poor as ever, but true to George, is living with Mimmi, an old friend of hers.

CHAPTER VIII. As Nana walked down the dark streets of Paris one night, reflecting on her past life, one thought stood out in her mind like a burning brand. That was: Why had George never answered the frantic and incessant letters which she had written to him in his lonely post in Algeria? Not for the life of her could she understand why he had never written her. "Why, why, why?" she kept repeating. For almost a year she had written—and there had been no answer. "Why?" And through all that time Nana, the ex-troop, turned from easy camaraderie to a decent life through the influence of Georges had slaved in a bakeshop, barely keeping herself alive. It cost so much to live, and she made so little. But never once—though she lived with Mimmi, who every night followed her only known profession—did she swerve from the path which love, with blind cruelty, had made her follow. It would have been so easy, too. Just once in a while, God, she thought! If there was any way she could get out of doing that back-breaking work for her miserable pay. "One good friend with lots of money, and I could have as much as I earn there in a week," she thought to herself. And it was not only hard to work—and wait, but it was hard for Nana—whose name once was on the world's lips—to be content with the little—the nothing, in fact—which she had. No wine, ever, only dirty, smelly water. And little of that, even for washing herself. No furs, no carriage, nothing. Nothing but hours and hours of work every day, and the torture of waiting for something which might never come. Nana, hers was a hard life, doubly hard because she had never been accustomed to luxuries, she would never have missed them. Had she been brought up in a rigorous and decent fashion and not in the squalor and muck and slime and stum of her dirty Paris, and forced into her evil life, she would have had a chance to make something of herself. To do what all girls long for, though at times perhaps they forget, be married and to raise a family. No, none of those joys were for Nana. Nana was a bad woman, and bad women to most people can never be anything else.

Mimmi shrugged her shoulders. "Still in love with that George person." "Yes, but hasn't he come back? He promised to return from that Algeria place in a month. Hasn't she heard from him... in all these months?" "No," said Mimmi, nodding her head. "Satin noticed her nod. "What do you mean by that?" she asked. "Well," said Mimmi, "we forget to mention her letters, and his somehow get lost after they reach the next box downstairs. She never looks in... she hasn't time, working all day."

And immediately Nana's face relaxed. Once again she was the weary, working girl coming home exhausted after her day's tasks. Years seemed to gray her cheeks. "Well," she sighed, "I cannot understand it. I loved him. And he loved me. You know we both loved each other. If I had only quarreled—or if I had done something... I've been so good. I've tried to be so good." "Well, quit trying," offered Mimmi. "You'll kill yourself going on like this. Come on out with me tonight and have a good time, take it easy a spell—and forget your troubles."

"No," said Nana. "I'm going to write a letter. This is the last letter I'm going to write to him. If he doesn't answer this, I'll have time then to 'take it easy.' I can't go on like this, working sixteen hours a day, not knowing what the sun looks like." "Now you're talking sense," said Mimmi. "He won't answer it. He's no good." Nana flared. "He is good. Something happened, that's all." So Nana sat down and wrote her lonely heart out to George in far-away Algeria for the last time. She wept bitter tears as she wrote, and if George were ever to have seen the letter, no power could have kept him from her any longer. As it was, he was kept out there over the appointed time, because of his brother, who pulled strings and had his post made permanent. Mimmi was dressing for her "evening." And just about the time she finished, Nana had done with

Jackie Cooper Stars in Film At Ritz Theatre

Jackie Cooper is starred in Paramount's "Lone Cowboy," the film suggested by Will James' famous book of the same name, showing today and tomorrow at the Ritz theatre. In the cast are Lila Lee, Addison Richards, John Wray and Gavin Gordon.

Jackie plays the role of Scooter O'Neal, brought up in Chicago and sent west to a ranch by his father when the latter faces arrest. Scooter is hardly on his way when the father commits suicide. The boy reaches the ranch and is met by "Dobe Jones, the 'lone cowboy.'" The man doesn't want the boy, but when he hears of the suicide he cannot bring himself to send the youngster back to an orphan asylum.

Scooter learns that "Dobe's" wife has run away with Jim Weston and that "Dobe's" aim in life now is to find them and kill Jim. Scooter tries to argue with "Dobe" about this and, in his anger, the man tells the boy of his father's suicide.

The boy's grief endears him to "Dobe," who promises not to seek his revenge. He finds Jim and Eleanor to tell them that he will not molest them, but Jim, fearing a trap, reaches for his rifle. "Dobe" returns the fire, wounding Scooter, then fires again killing Jim. It is "Dobe's" love for the boy that finally brings him peace and happiness and saves him from the justice that threatens to send him to the gallows.

The horn will prove more effective if it is occasionally treated to a few drops of very light oil.

Mimi walked quickly over to her. "I'll mail it as I go out," she suggested. "No," said Nana, "I think I'll mail this one myself."

"Don't be silly. You're too tired," objected Mimmi, her heart in her mouth. "You lie down." And almost pushing the tired Nana onto the bed, she wrested the letter from her hand, put on her jaunty hat—as jaunty as her character—and went out. On the landing, just outside the door, Mimmi noticed something to herself.

"The last one," she said. "Well, here goes," Mimmi tore the letter up. And inside, Nana was beginning another sleepless night, wondering about George, wondering, wondering, wondering.

Yaqui Secrets to Be Pried into by Student Explorers

LUBBOCK (AP)—The secrets of the aboriginal villages of the mysterious Yaqui Indians of Sonora, Mexico, will be sought by a scientific expedition from Texas Technological college which is now in the Yaqui region.

Scientists have been able to learn but little concerning the Yaquis although their civilization is one of the oldest on the American continent. Descendants of the historic Aztecs, the Yaquis are a primitive people who live today very much as they did when the Spanish explorers reached Mexico in the sixteenth century, according to Dr. W. C. Holden, head of the expedition.

Hidden in the mountainous areas of the Rio Yaqui country, not far from the Gulf of California, the Yaquis have managed to keep out strangers and at the same time retain the primitive civilization which dates back several hundred years.

A scientific expedition from California was repulsed two years ago. Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of the Smithsonian Institution, and famed anthropologist, succeeded in 1902 in making skull measurements of some of the natives but the background of their strange civilization still is unknown.

Dr. Holden, who will act as interpreter, is another entry.

TEXAS DERBY

Bud Burmester of Arlington Downs, writes in that some of the largest stables in America have significant intention of shipping to Arlington Downs where more than $150,000 in purses will be distributed during the 21-day meeting, March 29 to April 21.

The assurance of such horses as a dream true for W. T. Waggoner, owner of Arlington Downs. Waggoner has spent a large amount on his racing plant and the day entries take post for the $10,000 added Texas Derby he will see Tattam, which won six races in a row this winter at New Orleans, including the Christmas Handicap, the New Year's Handicap and the Jefferson Handicap, among them.

He also will see Hickory Lad, recent winner of the Louisiana Derby—a horse that eats up space in the home stretch—and his own son, Money-Getter, at the post. This Waggoner colt won the Texas Futurity at Arlington Downs last autumn from Open Range and Morning Cry, his stablemates, and was retired after the victory. Money-Getter put on weight during the winter and is training splendidly for his Derby debut.

Bissago, winner of the Agua Caliente Derby trial Handicap, will be there to help Waggoner realize his dream. Risky, which raced second to Gallant Sir in the Agua Caliente Derby, is another entry.
