Richard Lyng is new ag dept. head

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today named Richard E. Lyng, once the No. 2 official in the Agriculture Department, to succeed John Block as head of the agency.

Reagan, introducing Lyng at a brief Oval Office ceremony, said the nation's farmers "are going to have a sound and solid friend in Dick Lyng" as they work to overcome the economic problems that continue to plague the farm belt.

Acknowledging that "we have a farm problem," the president said Lyng, in implementing the new farm bill adopted last month, "will help get farming more into the market economy and rectify some of the things that have been wrong" with federal farm programs.

Lyng, 67, served as California secretary of agriculture from 1967 to 1969, during Reagan's tenure as governor and in 1980 headed the Reagan-Bush campaign effort among farmers and ranchers. He had served four years as an assistant secretary of agriculture under President Nixon, and Reagan brought him back to Washington as deputy secretary.

Accident inquiry underway...

Challenger's debris recovered

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Ships retrieved some of shattered Challenger's wreckage from the sea today as investigators sought clues to a "national tragedy" that killed five men and two women and dealt a severe setback to America's space program.

An investigation team held its first meeting today to start the long inquiry into why the $1.2 billion space shuttle, seemingly on a perfect course, suddenly blew apart 74 seconds after liftoff Tuesday, raining fiery debris into the Atlantic Ocean.

Some experts who studied television tapes of the disaster said they thought the problem centered in the external fuel tank, containing more than a half-million gallons of liquid hydrogen and oxygen to power the orbiter aloft.

The deaths were the first in flight after 55 successful U.S. man-in-space flights, including 24 previous shuttle missions. The first "common citizen" chosen for a space trip, New Hampshire schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe, was one of the victims.

Eight ships, including four Coast Guard cutters, searched throughout the night over the 50-by-100-mile rectangle where Challenger's wreckage fell. Seven planes and helicopters resumed their hunt at daylight.

Lt. Joe Kyle of the Coast Guard, which is coordinating the search, said several small pieces of wreckage drifted ashore in the Cape Canaveral area overnight. He asked residents who find anything that might be a part of the shuttle to turn it in to the Coast Guard.

He said the large amount of small debris indicated Challenger suffered severe explosive damage.

Another Coast Guard officer, Lt. Cmdr. James Simpson, reported "there is debris all over the place." He said the largest piece recovered was about 10 feet long and 2 feet wide but he did not know what part of the shuttle it came from.

Simpson said NASA cautioned that because of the shuttle's fuel some of the pieces could be chemically hazardous and requested that searchers seek advice from agency officials before picking up any object.

The search area is between 50 and 130 miles southeast of Cape Canaveral, the water between 70 and 200 feet deep.

The debris will be examined in a hangar at nearby Patrick Air Force Base.

A. — These may be sent to NASA, space agency officials say. The address is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Administrator's Office, Washington D.C., 20546.

In Brief

Low oil prices

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — Oilman T. Boone Pickens predicts falling oil prices will stay down through 1990, forcing the oil industry to continue its belt-tightening stance.

Addressing about 450 people at a Pampa Chamber of Commerce luncheon Tuesday, Pickens, a general partner with Mesa Limited Partnership, challenged businessmen to find new ways to be competitive.

West Texas intermediate crude, which sold for $29 per barrel 60 days ago, is now selling for about $24 per barrel.

Two killed

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — At least one Palestinian guerrilla infiltrated from Jordan and shot dead two Israeli soldiers today near a border settlement in the occupied West Bank, military sources said.

The guerrilla was killed and two other soldiers were wounded in the attack near the settlement of Mehola, two miles west of the Jordan River in the territory Israel captured from Jordan in 1967, according to the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Rifle stolen

Police are investigating a vehicle burglary report filed Tuesday night.

Malcolm Rainwater of 120 Browning St. reported at 9:44 p.m. a .30 cal. rifle had been stolen from his 1985 Ford pickup.

The rifle is thought to have been stolen sometime between 10:30 p.m. Monday and 9 a.m. Tuesday while the vehicle was parked outside the residence.

Taxes to rise as oil prices go downward

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

The $1-plus slide in oil prices experienced last week likely added a tax increase next year of from $6 to $7 for every $10,000 value placed on property in Snyder.

Regarding the tax rates of three taxing entities serving the city, an increase ranging from ¾ of a cent to 4½ cents per $100 valuation is projected.

And as for the loss in taxable value, Scurry County — using values as of the summer of 1985 — experienced a loss of some $64 million attributed to oil selling for $1 per barrel less.

The effects of the drop in per-barrel price won't be felt by local taxpayers until next tax season, notes Ray Peveler, chief appraiser for the Scurry County Appraisal District.

But unless the price of oil rises dramatically before the end of 1986, an expected corresponding rise in taxes seems inevitable.

Three taxing entities based in Snyder depend heavily on oil values for their total tax base, the largest being Snyder ISD. Others largely dependent on oil include the twin jurisdictions of Scurry County and the college district for Western Texas College.

Based upon the value of county oil established last spring by the Dallas-based firm of Thomas Y. Pickett and Associates, every time the price of oil drops $1 per barrel, these three entities lose a combined tax rate of approximately 6.3 cents per $100 value.

This results in the combined dollar increase of from $6 to $7 for every $10,000 value of property located in each of the three districts — which includes all Scurry County property barring that located in the Hermleigh and Ira ISDs.

Hermleigh, since it does not enjoy a large oil tax base, is not affected greatly. Neither is the City of Snyder, since its tax base is tied mainly to real estate.

The heaviest hit is the Snyder ISD. Peveler estimates every time the price of oil dips $1 per barrel, the school district must automatically add 4½ cents to its tax rate based upon current figures of value.

For Scurry County, the price-per-barrel tax rate increase equals approximately one penny, and for the WTC district, less than one penny or approximately ¾ of a cent.

When the taxable value of Scurry County property is figured this April, the price-per-barrel cost plugged into the formula is to be based upon the price of oil as of Jan. 1, 1986.

At that point, West Texas light was selling for some $27.50 per barrel. That price has now slid to $26.25.

Messiah tape to be played

A recording of the "Messiah" portion of the appearance by the Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra here Dec. 16 will be played Thursday at 7 p.m. for any interested individuals.

The tape recording will be played in the instrumental room located in the Fine Arts Building on the campus of Western Texas College.

In addition to the orchestra, the recording features a 136-voice choir composed of local singers.

Locals invited to air telephone problems

Any residential or business customer in Scurry County who is experiencing Southwestern Bell Telephone-related problems is invited to discuss these problems with company representatives Thursday.

Two company spokesmen will be at the Snyder Chamber of Commerce office, 2302 Ave. R, from 10 a.m until 3 p.m. Thursday.

Meeting with the public for what may be the first of regularly scheduled sessions will be Ralph Williamson, customer service supervisor for Bell here, and Jim West, Southwestern Bell's community relations manager based in Plainview.

"It's a general open house for people to come by and talk to us about any type of telephone problems they have," Williamson said.

"A lot of times people have some problem but they hate to call repair service and talk to someone in San Antonio. This will be a chance for them to air their problem in person."

He noted a second session is planned within the next few months, one which will be conducted at night to allow visits from those unable to attend during the day.

"If it's pretty well accepted, we might make it a regular thing three or four times a year," Williamson said.

He added that if the problem is not under the jurisdiction of Southwestern Bell — which owns and operates telephone lines — "We can probably steer them in the right direction to get it fixed."

RRC again postpones freight line's request

A decision was postponed again Monday by the Texas Railroad Commission regarding a Waco-based freight line company's attempt to purchase operating rights in and through Scurry County.

It marked the second time the decision had been bumped from the RRC's agenda. The three-member state panel meets each Monday.

Central Freight Line of Waco has made application to purchase the operating rights of Santa Fe Trail Transportation Co., an affiliate of Santa Fe Railroad.

If ultimately granted, Central will be allowed to haul freight along U.S. Hwy. 84 from Lubbock through Sweetwater and a portion of I-20 to Abilene as well as a stretch of U.S. Hwy. 180 from Snyder to Lamesa.

The decision was first listed as an agenda item by the RRC at its Jan. 13 meeting. It was postponed at that time and rescheduled for last Monday.

The current indication is it is again slated for consideration this coming Monday.

Last Nov. 14, a hearing examiner for the RRC recommended that the request be approved as applied for. Railroad Commission hearings related to the request date back to last spring.

Pennzoil hired a Harvard law professor to help protest the federal ruling.

The Wall Street Journal reported that the lawyer's colleagues are amused at his uncharacteristic attack on judicial activism.

The lawyer is quoted as saying, "It isn't the amount of money involved, but the principle."

One way to test the sincerity of that statement is to ask the law professor to donate his legal fees to World Hunger or some other charity.

Flights had become routine

By Harry Rosenthal
Associated Press Writer

Everybody said it had to happen some time, but when it did, it was too terrible to believe.

Fifty-five times, American astronauts had carried spacecraft away from Earth's hug, into the boundless, airless space beyond.

It got to be routine.

We were used to the images, even bored by them. The guided tours of the spacecraft: How many times would they show us an astronaut flipping food overhead and catching it with his mouth?

Even the spectacular views from space, the blue cloud-mottled Earth hanging strangely above the spacecraft, became routine. Another astronaut, bundled in white ... a human satellite zipping along at 17,400 miles an hour ... a human being seeing whole continents with his naked eye.

Routine.

Fifty-five times men and women went aloft in ships designed for space. One at a time in Mercury. Two at a time in Gemini. Three at a time in Apollo and Skylab. And then two, four, five, six, seven and even eight at a time in the space shuttle. One hundred and twenty-nine individuals. Three rookies were added to that number on Mission 51-L.

It was the one thing that always worked, at a time when so little was working. During the Vietnam protests of the '60s, we were sending ships to circle Earth. At the height of the war, in 1969, we sent the first men to walk on the moon. During Watergate, we had men doing research in Skylab.

It went so well, it seemed so routine. It was easy to forget that this was a very dangerous business. In the case of the shuttle, there were a half-million gallons of awesome fuel in the tanks.

The worst fears always were for liftoff and landing. A blowup on the pad. A crash by coming back too hot, too fast. This time, though, the ship was on its way; everything seemed — as NASA likes to say — "nominal."

The giant fireball Tuesday a few miles from Cape Canaveral, Fla., destroyed all that.

Even after seeing it and knowing what it was, there was the hope that somehow the Challenger would be seen in the distance, climbing higher.

Recently there had been launch delays. The weather. A faulty part. More weather. Various readings that commanded computers: Shut Down Now!

You had to be close to the launch site, or the engineering offices, or the NASA executive suites to know what that entailed. Pressures that build up to lift a 100-ton spacecraft and its fuel so fast, so high had to be relieved.

It takes the space shuttle only 10 minutes to dart into space, to go from the east Florida coast to over the Indian Ocean. Space starts at 400,000 feet — 75 miles up.

The United States regarded the space shuttle as its principal ship in this decade and much of the next. It built four and planned to keep them all busy for a rate of 24 flights a year. There were to have been 15 this year.

The Air Force agreed to two flights a year. Planners for President Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense system scheduled experiments. Companies like McDonnell Douglas and 3M were pioneering commercial products to be made on shuttle flights.

Things had become so routine, looked so safe, that NASA wanted to expand space flight beyond astronauts and scientists.

Mission 51-L was to be the first for an ordinary citizen. With much hoopla, NASA selected teacher Christa McAuliffe to represent her craft, to intrigue millions of school children who would be watching.

Mrs. McAuliffe was on board, ready to give lesson plans on "the ultimate field trip."

Gregory Jarvis, a Hughes Aircraft payload specialist also was on board. He had been waiting years for a mission.

Michael Smith, an astronaut since 1980, was on board. It was his first mission.

Francis R. Scobee, who had logged more than 6,500 hours in 45 types of aircraft, was on board.

Ellison Onizuka, who had been the first Japanese-American in space, was aboard.

Ronald McNair, one of the first black astronauts, was on board.

Judith Resnik, the first Jewish astronaut as well as one of the first women, was on board.

EDITOR'S NOTE — Harry F. Rosenthal, a Washington-based AP reporter, has covered 34 manned space flights.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company Representative Ralph Williamson, Customer Service Supervisor and Jim West Community Relations Manager will be at the Snyder Chamber of Commerce office Thursday Jan. 30, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

All Snyder area citizens are invited to come by during these hours to visit and discuss their local telephone service.

Dear Abby

Too Many Visitors Make Christmas Cheer a Chore

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Your answer depends on whether I should apologize or not. My husband and I have three children. Both sets of grandparents live out of state, so we invited them to spend Christmas at our house. All four arrived on Dec. 23. On the 24th, my two brothers, their wives and a total of seven children arrived unannounced. (They live 275 miles from here.) They said they heard the folks would be here, and they wanted to see them, so they invited themselves to my house for Christmas.

My own mother and two sisters-in-law sat around talking to each other while my mother-in-law and I prepared the entire dinner for 20 people (11 of whom had not been invited). The two of us served the dinner and cleaned up while everyone else entertained themselves.

When I was hanging up my dish towel, I said to my mother-in-law, "Mom, I could use a good stiff drink and a little peace and quiet." She said, "Grab your coat. I'm buying." We filled in the hubbies, then Mom and I went to the neighborhood bar for a couple of drinks. When we got home, my mother said I owed my guests an apology. She said, "A gracious hostess doesn't walk out on her own party to get plastered somewhere else!"

Abby, I was not plastered, and don't think I owed anybody an apology. What do you think?

HAD IT WITH CHRISTMAS

DEAR HAD IT: Skip the apologies. You were understandably overworked and under a lot of pressure with a houseful of unexpected company, but instead of allowing them to sit around while you did all the work, you should have asked them to pitch in.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a guy who is so cheap that instead of buying Christmas cards, he uses the cards that he's received from other people? He just crosses out their name, writes in his own and gives it to someone else.

I'm not making this up. Abby John (his real name) has a nice little auto parts business in town and makes a pretty fair living. Oh, he doesn't mail out these recycled cards, he waits until he runs into someone on the street, or they come into his store, and he just hands it to them. Everybody in town likes John, but he's got to be the cheapest guy in Indiana—or the craziest.

If you put this in your column, leave my name off. This is a very small town and everybody knows me, too.

"ME" IN ROME CITY, IND.

DEAR "ME": I think John's Christmas cards are hilarious. But don't write him off as penurious. He's crazy like a fox.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Well, Christmas has passed, and we are demoralized by the unabashed neglect of our many nieces and nephews. High in expectations, we sent them all greeting cards now that most of them are grown up and married. Only three responded! My wife is downhearted, and I am bristling!

When they were youngsters, we showered them with lovely gifts and were the exalted "Aunt Wonderful and Uncle Great." Now that we are in our senior years, living on a small fixed income, we think it's our turn to be remembered with a small gift or card. But now that it's their turn, to shell out, they say that Christmas is too commercial. Ha!

It's a time of reckoning. Too many young people are tenderly preserved as do-nothing ornaments, breeding self-serving lifestyles. They fill their bellies full of pizzas, hot dogs, colas and french fries, then loosen their belt another notch to give vent to rousing choruses of "We Are the World."

As my Mrs. Wonderful keeps a stiff upper lip, I agonize whether to cool it, hang loose, keep quiet or sound off!

IRATE UNCLE

DEAR UNCLE: I'm for sounding off. You did. You're entitled, and I hope you feel better.

Cosmetology interviews scheduled on Feb. 4

Interviews for students interested in enrolling in the new cosmetology class at Western Texas College will be held Feb. 4, Judy Border, instructor, has announced.

The class is scheduled to start March 3 and there are openings for eight students. Prospective students are to pick up registration packets in the Student Services Office in the Administration Building before scheduling the pre-entrance interview. Students are asked to call the cosmetology lab at 573-8511, ext. 267, to make appointments for the interview to avoid time spent waiting.

Cosmetology students receive 1,580 hours of instruction in a 12-month period. They can then take the State Board of cosmetology examination for licensing.

Late registration held thru Feb. 4

Late registration for spring semester classes at Western Texas College will continue through Feb. 4, E. H. (Dan) Dever, Jr., registrar, said.

Students beginning registration are to go to the registrar's office in the administration building. The office is open from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1-5 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8-12 and 1-4 on Fridays. Evening hours are 6-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Exercise myths

Most people don't exercise more than an hour three times a week. With such a schedule, it's impossible for women to develop an overly muscular look.

It's also a myth that exercising strenuously increases the results in conditioning.

"No pain, no gain" is a false slogan. Exercise for good health should never cause distress or even excessive sweating.

Easy exercising, gradually increased in at least three spaced sessions a week.

Today's deal illustrates the vicissitudes of bridge. Because the North-South pair was using weak no-trump openings, South opened one no-trump on 13 high-card points. East now had an opportunity to make a lead-directing double of two clubs. The five of clubs opening lead, followed by slight misjudgment in the play, resulted in declarer's going down three. The bidding by North and South cannot really be faulted.

In the replay South opened one club. North responded one diamond and South made his normal rebid of one spade. North bid three no-trump, which ended the auction. East was now on opening lead and selected the 10 of clubs, again a choice that no one would really criticize. But look at the difference. The North declarer ducked the club around to his jack and next played to the queen of diamonds. West might have posed a problem for declarer by returning the diamond jack, but instead played back the 10 of spades. It was now too late to keep North from taking nine tricks, and in fact West, whose hand got tightened up in the red suits, wound up letting declarer make an overtrick.

On this particular deal of our team's seven-board Swiss-team match at the North American Championships in Winnipeg, we gained 11 international matchpoints (IMPs). Since the results for the other six boards were the same at both tables, this deal won the match for us. Yes, duplicate bridge team competition is a game of skill, but this deal shows that there is still plenty of old-fashioned luck involved. Sorry, opponents.

Hunger task force plans Bryan visit

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — The Harvard task force which listed Brazos County as the hungriest county in Texas will visit Brazos County and four other "hunger" counties next week.

Task force doctors plan to be in Texas Feb. 5, 6 and 7, said April Evans, who works on field investigations for the Physician Task Force on Hunger in America at the Harvard University School of Public Health.

A team of doctors will visit Brazos County on Wednesday after a meeting with Gov. Mark White and a briefing from state-level social service officials.

A recent inspection of census data indicates that Brazos County's poverty figures are skewed by the large, non-working student population.

Ms. Evans has said that student populations were not factored into the task force's figures in establishing a list of the 150 poorest counties — so judged because of a low percentage of food stamp recipients in relation to the number of residents making less than the national poverty standard.

There will be two teams of doctors. The doctors plan to visit Walker, San Saba, Hays and Caldwell counties, in addition to Brazos, the Bryan-College Station Eagle reported.

Dr. Larry Brown of Harvard, who chairs the task force, is expected to be among the group that visits Brazos County.

The teams will visit with food stamp directors, food stamp caseworkers, legal service representatives, private providers for the poor, and actual food stamp recipients — including some of those who appear eligible but who have been denied food stamps.

After Texas, the task force will visit Arkansas, Missouri, South Dakota, Georgia and Florida.

Ms. Evans said the task force hopes to identify problems in different regions that present barriers to the food stamp program. Eventually, the task force hopes to make policy recommendations to improve the program's effectiveness, she said.

Fault is not solon's

BAIRD, Texas (AP) — A state technician says a nude scene attached to the end of a videotaped program on drug abuse was not the fault of the lawmaker who provided the tape to a surprised high school audience.

The scene depicting a nude couple in bed was inadvertently attached to a taped drug program sent by state Rep. Rick Perry, D-Haskell, to the 26 schools in his district.

The discovery Monday prompted Perry to recall all the tapes.

Shuttle's final words

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Words from space shuttle Challenger were all routine through the 74 seconds of flight. There was silence after the spacecraft erupted into a fireball.

Here is a transcript of those seconds as recorded by NASA and released Tuesday to The Associated Press. NASA officials did not immediately have a written transcript of the conversations and the times they occurred.

—Launch Control Public Information Commentator Hugh Harris: 10-9-8-7-6, we have main engine start, 4-3-2-1, and liftoff. Liftoff of the 25th space shuttle mission. And it has cleared the tower.

—Pilot Mike Smith: Roll program.

—Mission Control Spacecraft Communicator: Roger, roll, Challenger.

—Mission Control Public Information Commentator Steve Nesbitt: Roll program confirmed. Challenger now heading down range. The engines are throttling down now at 94 percent. Normal throttle for most of the flight is 104 percent. We'll throttle down to 65 percent shortly. Engines at 65 percent. Three engines running normally. Three good fuel cells. Three good APUs (auxillary power units). Velocity 2,257 feet per second (1,400 miles per hour), altitude 4.3 nautical miles (4.9 statute miles), downrange distance 3 nautical miles (3.4 statute miles). Engines throttling up, three engines now 104 percent.

—Mission Control Spacecraft Communicator: Challenger, go at throttle up.

—Smith: Roger, go at throttle up.

(Fireball occurs)

—Nesbitt: We're at a minute 15 seconds, velocity 2,900 feet per second (1,977 mph) altitude 9 nautical miles (10.35 statute miles), range distance 7 nautical miles (8.05 statute miles).

Long silence.

—Nesbitt: Flight controllers are looking very carefully at the situation. Obviously a major malfunction. We have no downlink (communications).

Reagan vows...

Space flights will continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, declaring that the future belongs to the brave, says America's space flight program will continue and there will be more "teachers in space" despite the death of Christa McAuliffe in the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger.

"Nothing ends here," Reagan said in a five-minute televised speech five hours after the fiery blast that ended Tuesday's space shuttle launch from Cape Canaveral, Fla. McAuliffe, a high school teacher, and all six other crew members were killed.

"We'll continue our quest in space," Reagan said. "There will be more shuttle flights and more shuttle crews and, yes, more volunteers, more civilians, more teachers in space."

"Today is a day for mourning and remembering," he said. "Nancy and I are pained to the core by the tragedy of the shuttle Challenger. We know we share this pain with all the people of our country. This is truly a national loss."

It was not the speech Reagan had planned to make.

As the seven-member crew waited for blast-off, the president was getting ready to go into a luncheon with television news anchors to discuss his State of the Union address to Congress.

That speech, scheduled for Tuesday night, was postponed until next Tuesday because of the shuttle tragedy.

As aides briefed Reagan in the Oval Office for the session with television newsmen, Vice President George Bush and John Poindexter, the White House national security adviser, walked unannounced into the room.

"And all they could say at the time was that they had received a flash that the space shuttle had exploded," Reagan said. "And we immediately went into the adjoining room where I have a TV set ... and there we saw the replaying and saw the thing actually happen."

First lady Nancy Reagan watched the live broadcast on a set in the family quarters of the White House. She told her press secretary, Elaine Crispen, that her first reaction was to exclaim, "Oh, my God, no."

Disaster was not anticipated

GRASS VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Gen. Charles "Chuck" Yeager, for whom "The Right Stuff" was named, says there's no way to prepare for a disaster like the one that destroyed space shuttle Challenger and killed seven astronauts.

Yeager said he saw a videotape of Tuesday's explosion and compared the tragedy with the 1967 Apollo launch pad explosion that killed Virgil I. "Gus" Grissom and crew.

He said the space program recovered from that and will do so again.

"They'll have to analyze the problem and make some decisions," said Yeager, who in 1947 became the first man to break the sound barrier. "I don't think this is the end of the space program, no."

But he said he didn't believe any shuttle would fly again "until they know exactly what happened.

"I think they've got enough telemetry data and coverage to give them a pretty good feel about what happened."

He declined to speculate on what might have gone wrong.

Asked if test pilots are mentally prepared for such disasters, he said: "There is no such thing as preparation for something like that. You have your training and rely on your equipment."

Yeager, 65, was a central character in Tom Wolfe's book about the space program, "The Right Stuff."

The 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution went into effect Jan. 16, 1920, and the prohibition of alcohol became law.

Robertson earns top sales award

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Sam Robertson, district manger in Snyder for the Franklin Life Insurance Company in Springlfield, Ill., has earned one of the company's top sales honors, according to Franklin President Howard C. Humphrey, CLU.

Humphrey said that Robertson has qualified for Franklin's Centurion Club, a national honor organization of the company's most successful sales associates. Robertson's qualification was based upon outstanding personal sales totals for the month of December.

TV intimate messenger of life, death

NEW YORK (AP) — In two days, the nation went from the exhilaration of the Super Bowl to the depths of despair over seven fallen astronauts. It all happened on television, America's most intimate messenger of life and death.

Tuesday, on TV screens all across America, these were some of the nation's shared images: a shuttle disintegrating into an explosive ball of fire, schoolchildren crying for their beloved teacher, a Cape Canaveral flag at half staff.

Once again, television united the country in a shared experience. Once again, the emotion was grief.

"Everybody has a share in it, in part because so many of us saw it," said ABC anchor Peter Jennings. "There's something quintessentially American about sharing grief in public. It's a cathartic experience. No other nation places such a public premium on the loss of life."

Other disasters have had many more deaths. The plane crash in Gander, New Foundland. The Beirut barracks massacre. But, for various reasons to this nation of collective TV watchers, the shuttle Challenger going down with seven aboard meant more and hit us harder.

"It's not a numbers game, it's what it stands for," said Rick Kaplan, executive producer of ABC's "Nightline." "This was a terrible blow to the American psyche."

The deaths in Beirut came in a war zone, where violence is not unexpected. This was totally unexpected, a catastrophic shock, Kaplan said. "We own space. We've had great confidence in it, and it blew up right in front of our eyes."

ABC, CBS, NBC and Cable News Network, perhaps sensing America's need to learn, feel and grieve, provided non-stop coverage. ABC's "World News Tonight" and the "NBC Nightly News" devoted their entire broadcasts to the single subject; the "CBS Evening News" spent nearly all its time on it. Single-subject coverage, although not unprecedented, was most unusual.

Dan Rather, Peter Jennings and Tom Brokaw all closed their nightly newscasts with short personal essays on what the tragedy meant.

Rather called it a "death in the family," and spoke about "seven searchers," including teacher Christa McAuliffe, "pushing the edge of the envelope, full-out, full-throttle, reaching for the sky."

ABC, CBS and NBC all had one-hour news specials on the tragedy Tuesday night. ABC's "Nightline" also added 30 minutes.

Why did this story evoke such an outpouring of emotion?

Bill Wheatley, executive producer of the "NBC Nightly News," said it was because of "the horror of seeing this on live TV." Jennings said we all were "immediate participants." President Reagan had seen it as everyone else did — on television.

Over and over again, in slow motion, frame by frame, we saw a soaring Challenger plucked from the sky in a ball of flame.

Wheatley said another factor in why this story gripped us so was that Americans could relate to McAuliffe, the schoolteacher-mother-neighbor, as one of their own.

"It's because vicariously nearly every person in this country feels themselves on the launch pad going up," said Rather. "There's no doubt in my mind people feel a oneness."

Emotionally, Rather and Kaplan compared the day to only one other event — the assassination of President Kennedy.

Jennings also felt choked up during his nearly six-hour solo anchor stint in the afternoon. "Oh God, not here," he said.

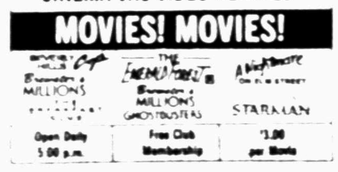

School children may suffer special pain from tragedy

NEW YORK (AP) — School children may have especially strong emotional reactions to the tragic explosion of Challenger because it carried someone they could identify with — schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe, child psychiatrists say.

"One would expect it would have more effect on children, because it was a schoolteacher," said Dr. Lenore Terry, a pioneer in the study of post-traumatic stress in children.

"We don't know scientifically what to expect because no one has studied a large group of children who witnessed something, but we have enough information to know that a number of children will probably be quite upset by what they saw," said Terry, a child psychiatrist at the University of California-San Francisco who studied 26 children kidnapped in a Chowchilla, Calif., school bus in 1976.

"Some of the ways they will show it is they will have nightmares or they will have new fears they never had before — going to bed at night or getting on an airplane," she said Tuesday in a telephone interview.

Mustang girls cop berth in playoffs

SWEETWATER -- Sweetwater girls powered past Lamesa 60-35 here Tuesday night to clinch a District 2-4A playoff spot.

The Lady Mustangs, 11-0 in district play, hold a four-game lead over third-place contenders Snyder and Lamesa with just three games left on the regular schedule. Snyder and Lamesa are 7-4.

Andrews also improved its bid for the playoffs by defeating Pecos 80-38. Andrews is 8-2 in district play.

Lamesa fought the Mustangs close through two quarters, but the state's fourth-ranked team in Class 4A ran off a 20-5 spurt in the third quarter to secure the victory.

In boy's action, fourth-ranked Lamesa defeated Sweetwater 77-58 to stay atop the standings with a 9-0 record while Andrews burned Pecos 82-59.

Andrews, ranked eighth in the state, is 8-1 in district play and will host the Golden Tornadoes in a key contest Friday night.

Tiger boys go inside to pop San Angelo Lake View, 61-39

SAN ANGELO -- Snyder's Tigers scored on every possession of the third quarter here Friday night and blew past San Angelo Lake View 61-39 in a District 2-4A basketball game.

The victory ups the Tigers to 15-6 for the season and 6-3 in district play. Snyder now returns home after a two-game road stint to play Monahans at 8 p.m. Friday in Scurry County Coliseum.

The Tigers worked their way to a 28-17 advantage by halftime, but didn't turn on the burners until the third quarter, when Coach Larry Scott re-emphasized the need to go inside against the Chiefs.

"We knew we could get the ball inside and we had the definite advantage there," said Coach Scott. "The first half we shot 2 of 9 outside the key and 8 of 16 inside the key. We had talked about it before the game but at halftime we showed the kids those figures and they were able to understand exactly what we wanted."

Snyder came back in the third quarter and took only two shots from outside the key. The inside game worked to perfection as Snyder scored every time on offense with Chris Garrett putting up 12 points in the quarter and Trey Tippens adding 8.

As a result, Snyder outscored the hosts 25-7 over the eight-minute period, putting the game out of reach early.

The Tigers were 25 of 54 from the field for the game but only 11 of 20 from the line. Ironically, free throws kept Snyder in pace with the Chiefs during the first half.

"We were 9 of 13 in the first half and really, that kept us right there with them," said Scott. "The difference in the first half was those free throws."

The inside game and a good defensive effort - Snyder outrebounded the Chiefs 50 to 26 - were the keys in the second half.

"Our defense was pretty good. We ran a man most of the time and did a good job with it," said Scott.

Lake View, which dropped to 10-14 for the season, managed to hit only 18 of 60 field goals.

Garrett, a 6-3 junior, led the Tigers with 18 points and 17 rebounds. Tippens ripped the cords for 12 points while Jackie Anderson had 9.

Senior guard Mike McWilliams helped direct the attack with four assists and eight rebounds.

Wade Harris was the only Chief player in double figures. He scored 10 points.

Snyder junior varsity also played here Tuesday, and claimed its eighth win in nine district outings.

The Cats got 17 points from Terry Garza and 14 from Daniel Chasteen to defeat Lake View 56-48.

Snyder JV will entertain Monahans at 6:30 Friday in the coliseum.

Claim 18th season win...

Lady Tigers maul Maidens

Snyder's Lady Tigers crashed the boards with a vengence here Tuesday night, bulling their way to a 68-51 victory over the Maidens of San Angelo Lake View.

The victory gives the Tigers their 18th win of the season against only four losses - a win that was a long time in coming.

"Yeah, it feels good to get it," said Coach Ken Housden, whose Tigers had tried last week but lost successive games to Lamesa and Andrews.

Snyder outrebounded the taller Maidens 50 to 28. Donna Anderson and Karlene Thompson led the way with 16 boards apiece.

"We had a good game rebounding. They have three large kids and they are pretty physical. We had to have good position to get on the boards and we did it," said Coach Housden. "It was probably the best recounding game Donna has had. She's had games where she had as many or more rebounds, but not against teams that were as physical inside."

Snyder opened up a 17-11 lead and extended it to 36-23 by halftime. Lake View had a minor rally in the third period and closed the gap by a couple of points, but the Tigers outscored them 20-14 over the final eight minutes to secure the victory.

"I was real pleased," said the coach. "The girls started out playing well and continued it throughout the game."

In addition to her 16 rebounds, all-loop senior Karlene Thompson bagged 36 points. She also had a good night from the free throw line, hitting 12 of 14 shots.

Anderson also took a double-dip as she added 14 points to her 16 boards. Point-guard Stephanie McKnight slipped in 11 points. Melody Pickering added a half-dozen.

Lake View was led by 6-0 senior Patty Campos, who had 16 points. Kelly Allard notched 10 while Sheryl Matthews added 7.

The Maidens are now 11-14 for the season and 4-7 in District 2-4A play.

The Lady Tigers will take a 7-4 district record to Monahans this Friday, where they will play the Loboettes at 8 p.m.

In junior varsity action here Tuesday, Lake View stumped Snyder 41-30.

Holly Fuller led the Cats, now 7-13, with 9 points. Yolanda Rivers added 7.

The local JV also buses to Monahans this weekend, playing at 6:30 p.m.

Westerners entertain NMMI Thursday eve

Western Texas College's Westerners, currently in fifth place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference standings, will try to work their way up a notch when they entertain New Mexico Military Institute here Thursday at 8 p.m.

Western is 4-4 in the WJCAC while NMMI comes in with a 1-6 mark. The Broncos won their first conference game of the season on Monday, defeating Frank Phillips College 63-55.

In an earlier meeting this season in Roswell, Western clipped the Broncos 80-76.

NMMI, 10-9 for the season, is led by Eric Adams, who averages 12.7 points, and by Steve Conley, who puts up 9.4 and paces the board game with a 6.2 figure.

Another key figure is Ty Howard, who became eligible during the holidays. Howard is a 60 percent field goal shooter, who is averaging 20 points a game.

Western is 13-8 on the season and is hoping to break a three-game home losing skid.

In other WJCAC men's games Thursday, Midland (22-0, 8-0) plays South Plains (18-5, 7-1) at Levelland in a game between the conference's first and second place teams while Clarendon (8-11, 3-5) is at Hobbs to play New Mexico Junior College (16-6, 4-3) and Howard (8-12, 2-5) is at Borger to play Frank Phillips (5-15, 0-7).

WTC's Dusters are idle Thursday. In other games however, Clarendon (8-8, 1-5) is at Hobbs to play NMJC (14-10, 0-5) and Howard (8-14, 2-4) plays Frank Phillips (9-9, 2-3) in Borger.

Philadelphia Eagles hire Bear defensive specialist

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Buddy Ryan, the coach of the vaunted defense of the Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears, is the new head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Ryan was signed late Tuesday, according to team owner Norman Braman and General Manager Harry Gamble.

Braman, reached by phone at his Miami home, told The Associated Press early today that "I can confirm that we've signed Ryan."

Gamble said he negotiated most of the day Tuesday with Ryan before the 51-year-old coach signed a five-year contract, ending a search that began Dec. 16 when Marion Campbell was fired.

In the following weeks, there were reports that Braman strongly favored David Shula, the 26-year-old son of Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula, followed by reports that Jim Mora, coach of the United States Football League Baltimore Stars, had agreed to coach the Eagles of the National Football League.

Mora became the coach of the New Orleans Saints on Tuesday.

Ryan has been an assistant coach in the NFL for 18 years, the last eight with the Bears. In his tenure with Chicago, the Bears were among the top 10 defensive teams six times.

The Bears this season led the NFL in total defense, capping their success by smothering the New England Patriots in a record setting 46-10 Super Bowl triumph.

Ryan has been given much of the credit for the Bears' 18-1 record and NFL title. After the Super Bowl rout of New England, the Bears carried Ryan off on their shoulders.

Before his eight years with the Bears, Ryan coached eight years the New York Jets and two with the Minnesota Vikings.

His popular "46" defense is a 5-1-5 set named after its original middleman, former safety Doug Plank, who wore uniform No. 46. The "46" forces offensive linemen into one-on-one blocking and opens up avenues for blitzing.

Ryan, a native of Frederick, Okla., was a four-year letterman at Oklahoma State from 1952-55 as an offensive guard before beginning his coaching career as a defensive coordinator at the University of Buffalo from 1961-65. He served in a similar role the next two years with Vanderbilt and University of Pacific before joining the Jets.

Landry says Chicago 'D' is best he's seen

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Tom Landry has been a head coach in the National Football League 26 years for the Dallas Cowboys and he believes the world champion Chicago Bears may have the best defense he's seen.

"It's probably the best performing defense," said Landry on Tuesday, rating the Bears over the Pittsburgh Steelers' "Steel Curtain" and the Cowboys' "Doomsday" of the 1970s.

"I'd say it is more dominant than the 'Steel Curtain' was," said Landry, "although the quality of the National Football League has been diluted a little bit."

The Cowboys were thrashed 44-0 during the regular season by the Bears, who crushed New England 46-10 in Super Bowl XX.

"What the Bears have going now is a good defensive concept that is new," said Landry.

"It will take a little time for teams to catch up with them," said Landry. "But I've never seen a defense that lasted too long without somebody coming up with an answer."

Landry said offenses in the NFL will have to learn to adjust to the "46" defense of the Bears and their coordinator Buddy Ryan.

"It will take a little while to adjust assuming that they stay intact," said Landry.

Ryan has been mentioned in speculation for the Philadelphia Eagles' head coaching job.

"If they lose him it could hurt," said Landry. "It takes the right combination of coaching and people to have a great defense.

"Remember Atlanta was playing the same 46 defense this year with only moderate success."

Landry added "It takes time to get into a defensive groove. They will be a force if they keep everybody there and keep everybody happy."

Landry said it will be difficult for the Bears to become a dynasty.

Mora leaves USFL position for New Orleans Saints' job

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Jim Mora said that one of the most attractive things about becoming the seventh head coach of the New Orleans Saints was that the National Football League team has never had a winning season in 19 years of trying.

"I like the challenge," he said.

Mora signed a four-year contract with the Saints on Tuesday and held the first press conference in his new position later in the day.

Terms of his contract were not revealed. "It's good," said Mora. "It's good enough for me. I'm very happy with it."

New Orleans is the only NFL team that has not been to the playoffs at least once since 1967.

Today, he said, he will assemble his staff of assistant coaches and begin evaluating Saints players, reviewing film with the team's scouts and meeting the athletes informally.

He'll hold a brief training camp within the next 45 days, he said.

Mora, 49, coached the Stars of the U.S. Football League to 52 victories and two championships in three seasons, winning his second USFL title last year after the team moved its home base from Philadelphia to Baltimore, practicing in Philadelphia and playing their games in College Park, Md.

The job he did in holding the team together and winning under those circumstances was a deciding factor in Mora's being hired, said Jim Finks, hired as general manager two weeks ago.

The hiring of Finks by owner Tom Benson was a deciding factor in his wanting the job, said Mora.

"Of the four jobs that were open in the NFL this year, the team that appealed to me the most was the New Orleans Saints," Mora said.

Mora said he had job interviews for the vacancies at St. Louis and Philadelphia, as well as for the New Orleans job. He said it was erroneously reported that he had reached a tentative agreement with Philadelphia. Things never got that far.

He takes over a team with a 19-year record of 83-187-5.

Bum Phillips, Mora's most recent predecessor, was 28-41.

Patriots' respect for Berry leads to drug test agreement

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) - When the New England Patriots voted to become the first professional team in sports history to undergo voluntary drug testing, they knew the decision would spark controversy and perhaps even a lawsuit from the National Football League players union.

But a team representative said Tuesday that the players agreed to the program and agreed overwhelmingly - for one reason - respect for Coach Raymond Berry.

Meanwhile, The Boston Globe today reported that Patriots General Manager Patrick Sullivan had confirmed the names of six players who allegedly admitted to Berry they had used illegal drugs. The newspaper identified the six as Irving Fryar, Tony Collins, Stephen Starring, Roland James, Raymond Clayborn and Kenneth Sims.

Fryar immediately denied the allegation.

"The guys are taking steps toward getting the team cleaned up," he told the Globe when contacted in Honolulu, where he was preparing to play in the Pro Bowl. "I was one of the guys who voted for it. I'm drug-free baby. Test me today if you want.

"My name shouldn't be involved in this mess. I'll take a urinalysis for anyone. My name should not be involved in this."

The newspaper said it also contacted Clayborn in Honolulu but did not report any remarks by him in its story. The four others could not be contacted through the Patriots' office.

The Globe said it had obtained a list of players allegedly involved, but none of the others had been tested nor had they admitted to Berry the existence of any drug problem.

The Globe also said Berry warned his players he would resign if the Patriots did not rectify an alleged drug problem.

Berry's threat to resign was made in a final statement to the players before asking them to support the drug-testing program.

At a news conference Tuesday, guard Ron Wooten said the team decided to defy the players union, which opposes drug testing without a collective bargaining agreement, and endorse a program because "we knew Coach Berry felt strongly about it."

Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association said the union will oppose the Patriots' action.

Schramm wants drug tests throughout NFL

DALLAS (AP) - In the wake of news that the New England Patriots had voted to accept voluntary drug testing, Dallas Cowboys president Tex Schramm repeated his oft-stated call for league-wide, mandatory and unannounced testing of players.

The league should begin testing despite opposition from the National Football League Players Association, Schramm said Tuesday.

"I don't think drug testing is a collective bargaining issue," Schramm said.

"I would hope that public reaction to what the Patriots have done would be such that the union would have to agree that the health and well being of the players is more important than the fallacious argument that such tests would be an invasion of pricacy," he added.

The Patriots agreed to the tests after a meeting Monday in which coach Raymond Berry said the team had a growing drug problem involving about a dozen players.

Schramm said he will press for the NFL to establish league-wide drug tests by the start of next season. A decision could come in the NFL's March meeting in Palm Springs, Calif., he said.

New Hampshire mourns McAuliffe

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Concord died with Christa McAuliffe.

"Everything just kind of came to a standstill," said Karen Nelson. "People are not moving around like they normally do."

High school classes were canceled. Legislative hearings and court trials were called off. Flags flew at half staff.

The town cried.

A celebration by McAuliffe's students at Concord High School turned into a wake.

McAuliffe's legion of admirers in this state capital of 30,000 did not want to believe she died.

"I wished the whole day were a dream, that it hadn't really happened," said Cindy Prescott. "I think everybody in Concord feels they know her."

Like most people in Concord, Mrs. Prescott and her three children, huddled on a couch, hollered and screamed in joy when the shuttle Challenger lifted off Tuesday. Moments later their cheers turned to tears.

"Don't cry," Mrs. Prescott's 3-year-old daughter, Mary, pleaded with her mother. "Jesus died and he came back to life. Christa will come back to life."

"I told her that wasn't the same thing," said Mrs. Prescott. "She was probably with Jesus."

Mrs. Prescott had been saving newspaper clippings about McAuliffe for her children. She hoped that when they were older they would write a paper on her.

McAuliffe's death touched everyone, from the neighborhood grocer to the service station attendant, from her students to her colleagues, from the police to her neighbors, from the attorney to the judge, from the state senator to the governor, from the parish priest to the bishop.

Edward Shumaker, an attorney friend of McAuliffe's, left a trial in tears, so broken up he couldn't talk.

"To me it was a catastrophe," said Tony Rabbia of nearby Contoocook.

"I was shocked. I didn't believe it," said 16-year-old Brian Birks, a former student of McAuliffe's. "She was a nice lady."

"It's hard to believe," said Bud Roberts, a teacher at the New Hampshire Technical Institute. "It's hard to fathom such a thing after all the successes they've had in the past. It's a feeling of helplessness. You can't do anything about it."

"I have not felt this way since John Kennedy was shot," said Susan McLane, a state senator from Concord. "You can't believe it and you can't bear to believe it."

Gov. John Sununu said McAuliffe affected everyone with her enthusiasm.

"She involved everyone in this state in this mission," he said.

At McAuliffe's modest, two-story home, less than a mile from Main Street, Patrolman Steve Holdsworth, a friend, sat outside in a cruiser. Only the housekeeper was inside.

On the lawn stacked neatly to be disposed of were two empty boxes. One had contained new luggage, perhaps for the family's trip to Cape Canaveral; the second had contained a Cabbage Patch Kids show pony, maybe for one of her two children, Scott, 9, or Caroline, 6.

A delivery man brought a handful of Western Union telegrams to the house, leaving them with Holdsworth.

Only a few hours earlier, the patrolman had been at home watching the liftoff on television.

"I think everybody else was," he said. "The whole community was up for this one. I don't think I or the whole community felt the full impact of her loss. She was deeply loved, I think, for her enthusiasm, for life, for her job, for what she felt was her purpose in teaching."

Questions start when shock wears off

AP analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — After the shock of the terrifying explosion seen by millions on their television screens and the mourning for the seven victims, the space program is certain to enter a new period of questioning.

President Reagan addressed the inevitable doubts Tuesday when he compared the Challenger crew to history's great explorers, people who braved danger and the unknown because they "had a hunger to explore the universe and discover its truths."

The president vowed to "continue our quest in space. There will be more shuttle flights and more shuttle crews and, yes, more volunteers, more civilians, more teachers in space."

But even with Reagan's determination to press ahead, a resolve likely to be shared by a majority in Congress, many questions, both technical and of a policy nature, will demand answers.

Most immediate will be the question of what caused the shuttle to explode Tuesday, 74 seconds after its launch from the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral, Fla. Its crew of seven — six astronauts and a Concord, N.H., schoolteacher — died.

Americans have grown accustomed to delays in shuttle launches, countdowns held up by technical glitches, sometimes by the weather. But in the end the shuttles took off, and 24 times they completed their missions safely. They became almost routine in the public mind.

Then the 25th ended in tragedy.

The nation was stunned by an unpredictable event, a shocking moment brought home by vivid images on television screens, replayed again and again.

"I guess we always knew there would be a day like this," said John Glenn, the first astronaut to orbit earth and now a U.S. senator.

The search for technical answers will be accompanied by a debate over whether the shuttle program is ready for civilian passengers.

One of the victims on Tuesday was schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe, chosen from thousands of applicants to be the first civilian in space. It was on Aug. 27, 1984, during his re-election campaign, that the president announced that the first civilian in space would be a teacher.

"When that shuttle lifts off, all America will be reminded of the crucial role teachers and education play in the life of our nation. I can't think of a better lesson for the children of our country," he said.

Tragedy forced the president to address schoolchildren Tuesday with far different words than he would have liked:

"I know it's hard to understand, but sometimes painful things like this happen. It's all part of the process of exploration and discovery. It's all part of taking a chance and expanding man's horizons. The future doesn't belong to the faint-hearted, it belongs to the brave."

Allergies and skin problems

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR GOTT — For several months now, my nose and cheeks have been turning red at early night or dark. Sometimes they break out slightly. By morning, it's gone. What could be causing this and how can I stop it?

DEAR READER — Your symptoms suggest that something in you environment may be irritating your skin. Allergies can do this. So can alcoholic beverages. Try to analyze what it is you are doing after sunset that you're not doing during daylight. If you can't ferret out a cause, see a dermatologist — preferably one who is willing to see you during evening hours, at the height of the problem.

DEAR DR GOTT — I agree with your column that doctors don't have the faintest idea what purpose is served by body hairs. I had my quota of hair until about seven years ago when, in a period of about five or six weeks, I lost it all — not just on my head, but all of it, even my eyelashes, eyebrows, in my nose, in my ears, off my legs, all of it. And none has ever come back. Now and then some fuzzy stuff I call "frog hair" will appear, but no real hair. I lost my nails at the same time. They came back, but the quality is not the same.

I don't know why this happened. Several doctors have insisted that loss of hair is no handicap, but I can assure you it is. The hair in your ears helps keep out foreign material and serves as a filter to keep dust out of your lungs. I'm a farmer and found this out right away. Your eyelashes keep out foreign objects and your eyebrows keep the sweat from running into your eyes. The hair on your head prevents excessive heat loss in winter and provides excellent protection from the sun. I have not mentioned the function of some of the other body hairs, but I could tell you why most of it is on the body.

Of course, I'm being naive in thinking you will ever see this letter, let alone answer it in your column. However, I feel somewhat better in having written it.

DEAR READER — I feel somewhat better having received your letter. As with many ailments, it's difficult to appreciate the problems of hair loss until one has experienced it. Thank you for sharing. I appreciate your taking the time to write.

DEAR DR GOTT — I am a 26 year old female, never pregnant, and have chronic pelvic and abdominal pain. My sonogram and pelvic exams are normal. After a laparoscopy, one gynecologist diagnosed Stein-Leventhal disease. I have regular periods. What tests are available that do not involve radiation?

DEAR READER — If you have Stein-Leventhal disease (polycystic ovaries), you do not need to have any more tests performed. The diagnosis is established. You are really looking at treatment options. Discuss this with your gynecologist.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

RR Commission sets UPS rates

AUSTIN (AP) — United Parcel Service now has state-approved rates for deliveries within Texas, leaving the company one small hurdle away from the end of its 19-year fight to make intrastate shipments.

The Texas Railroad Commission approved the rates Tuesday. UPS' opponents now can ask the commission to reconsider its 2-1 decision.

UPS spokesman Ken Sternad said his company is ready to make intrastate deliveries when and if the commission refuses to reconsider the rate decision.

"Everything else is over and done," he said in a telephone interview from his Connecticut office, adding that the commission's final action in the case could come late next month.

"That would be the final hurdle and we could begin service immediately, which we are anxious and prepared to do," he said.

The Connecticut-based company in 1966 began its battle for approval to deliver packages from point-to-point within the state. UPS' familiar brown trucks have long done interstate business in Texas, but a 1931 state law had blocked intrastate service, with the exception of a few routes.

Commissioners had interpreted that law as barring UPS' service because it is on demand and does not follow regular routes or schedules.

NASA delays future missions

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The year 1986 was supposed to be one of NASA's most spectacular and ambitious with 15 shuttle missions planned.

The plans, however, now lie in shambles like the debris that fell into the Atlantic Ocean on Tuesday from the incinerated shuttle Challenger.

The loss of the Challenger and its seven-person crew prompted the space agency to halt temporarily its future missions until a reason is found for Tuesday's tragedy.

"We're obviously not going to pick any flight activity until we fully understand what the circumstances were relative to launch," said Jess Moore, associate administrator for spaceflight and newly appointed director of the Johnson Space Center.

The schedule included the launch in May of two science probes that would be sent toward Jupiter. The Ulysses satellite, set for launch on May 15, was to fly aboard Challenger, and then speed on to Jupiter for a major scientific study of the largest planet in the solar system.

Another satellite, called Galileo, was to be launched from space shuttle Atlantis on May 21 and cruise toward Jupiter. It was to use the gravity of the planet to be slung toward the sun and become the first man-made object to orbit the solar poles.

Also wrecked are NASA's plans to study Halley's Comet. A special camera and satellite aboard Challenger was to gather irreplaceable data on the comet as its nears the sun.

In March, another comet study was planned aboard space shuttle Columbia.

Without these two missions, the major U.S. studies of the comet are lost.

Another major loss will be the delay in launch of the Hubble Telescope, the most powerful astronomy instrument ever built for use in orbit. NASA expected it to view celestial objects that are 10 times farther away and dimmer than any seen from Earth. The telescope was to have been launched on Atlantis on Oct. 27.

Also planned for 1986, on March 20, was the first launch of a shuttle from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California. The mission, on space shuttle Discovery, would have flown over both of Earth's poles.

Launch delays also will affect a number of routine shuttle flights:

—March 20, a Department of Defense flight on Discovery with a secret payload.

—June 24, a Columbia flight that was to include material sciences research.

—July 15, a Challenger flight that was to include recovery of a satellite that has been in orbit for more than a year, testing the effects of the space environment on a variety of metals, glasses and plant seeds.

—Aug. 18, a Columbia mission that included instruments to study the Earth and its environment.

—Sept. 4, a secret Department of Defense mission set for launch from the Kennedy Space Center.

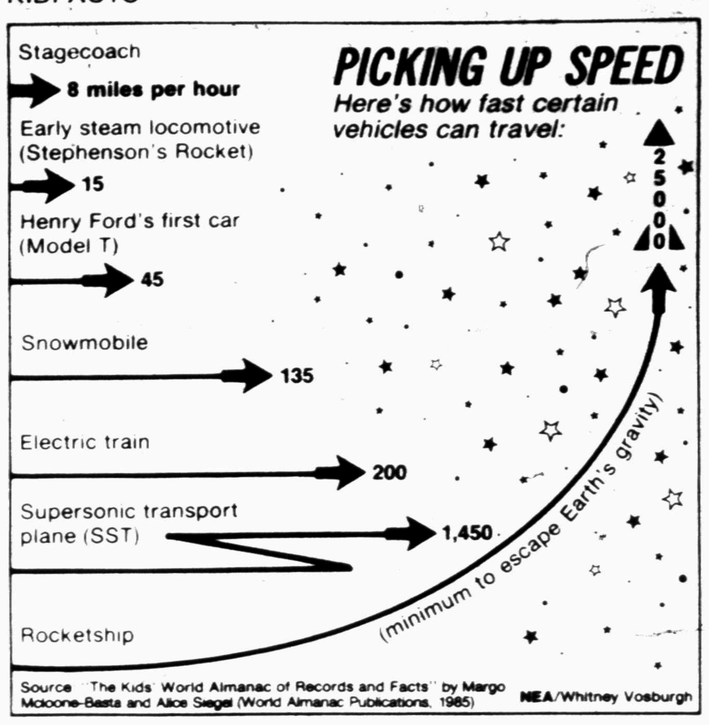

—Sept. 24, a Challenger flight that was to include launch of a major communications satellite, a twin to the one that was lost in Tuesday's accident.

—Nov. 6, an Atlantis flight that was to include the launch of three satellites.

—Dec. 6, a Department of Defense mission on Challenger.

Moore declined to speculate Tuesday how long an investigation might take, saying only that flight safety is the agency's first priority.

Reagan seeks increase in foreign aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite mandated spending cuts, President Reagan plans to seek a nearly 9 percent increase in foreign aid in his upcoming budget, including a 33 percent jump in military assistance programs and a 25 percent hike for Central American allies, according to an internal document.

The 16-page State Department paper, dated last Friday and obtained by The Associated Press, proposes $16.2 billion in worldwide foreign aid in fiscal year 1987, compared with $14.9 billion for the budget year that ends Sept. 30. That is an 8.8 percent increase.

The proposal's figures, distributed in Congress this week, fly in the face of the new Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law that the House Foreign Affairs Committee estimates could force a 25 percent cut in foreign aid or outright elimination of some programs.

One administration official, involved in preparing the foreign aid budget, said the proposed figures had been "pretty much put to bed" and would be submitted formally to Congress next week with few changes.

But he acknowledged they stood little chance of approval.

"We know this is going to be laughed out of existence when it goes up there," said the official, insisting on anonymity. "But it reflects the president's priorities."

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee planned an initial review of the foreign aid budget today, with members already indicating that the proposal faces stiff opposition.

Some of the most dramatic increases would occur in Central America, where four allied countries would receive a total of $1.1 billion in combined economic and military aid in fiscal 1987, compared to $875 million in 1986, a 25 percent increase.

The largest Central American recipient is El Salvador, which has been fighting a leftist insurgency for six years. Under the proposal, it would get $136.3 million in military aid and $377.7 million in economic aid, a combined 18.6 percent jump over 1986.

Honduras, which has served as a base for U.S.-backed rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government, would receive $88.8 million in military aid and $158.8 million in economic aid, a rise of 37.6 percent over 1986. Costa Rica, to Nicaragua's south, would get $187.4 million in combined economic and military aid, a 19.3 percent jump.

Guatemala, which has long been denied significant military aid because of its human rights record, would get $10.5 million in military assistance — more than double the current year's amount — and $133.7 million in economic aid — a jump of more than one-third.

Reagan also is expected to request $100 million in military and logistical aid for Nicaraguan rebels, although that is not included in the foreign aid package.

Worldwide, military assistance programs, which give weapons to allied countries, would grow from $748.4 million to $996.5 million, a 33 percent increase. However, another category of military aid, foreign military sales, would register a much smaller growth from $5.8 billion to $6.1 billion, a 4 percent rise.

Total economic aid would go from $8.2 billion to $9 billion, a 10 percent increase.

Farmpower phone line is now open

AUSTIN—Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro recently unveiled a toll free number, 1-800-292-FARM, that will provide information to those Texans interested in participating in the new Texas Farm and Ranch Finance Program that has been established to keep alive the Texas tradition of the family farm and the family ranch.

The Texas Farm and Ranch Finance Program, which was approved by Texas voters Nov. 5, will provide up to $100,000 in low cost loans to qualified Texas farmers and ranchers for the purchase of 50 acres or more of land.

Set up like the Veterans Land Program, eligibility requires the applicant to be a Texas resident for at least five years. Also, at least 35 percent of the gross household income in the previous three years must have come from a farm or ranch and the applicant's net worth must be less than $250,000. Additional information about the program, which will begin making loans after September 1986, can be obtained by calling the toll free number, 1-800-292-FARM.

Stock prices surge; price of oil slips

By The Associated Press

Stock prices are showing strength again, bolstered by prospects of lower energy costs and expectations of an interest-rate cut.

Stocks rose broadly Tuesday as oil prices continued to hover around the $20 level, after losing some of the gains they made Monday.

Trading on Wall Street stalled at midday because of the space shuttle Challenger's disastrous explosion, but the market recovered and the rally resumed quickly.

Analysts said a strong showing in the bond market, which is growing more hopeful of an interest-rate cut, and prospects of lower energy prices helped push the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials up 18.81 points to 1,556.42.

It was the average's biggest one-day surge since Dec. 13, when the indicator advanced 23.97 points, and marked the second highest closing in history for the stock market's best-known indicator. The Dow Jones industrials reached the record close of 1,565.71 on Jan. 7.

Analysts said the recent decline in oil prices is viewed as a benefit because it likely will mean lower inflation and lower interest rates, which would be a boost to economic growth. There also is increasing optimism that the Federal Reserve Board will ease credit conditions.

In oil trading, Brent North Sea crude for delivery in February rose to as much as $20.25 a barrel before slipping back to $20 — 55 cents higher than Monday's late price and $1.35 more than Friday's close.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, March contracts for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed at $20.17 a barrel, down from Monday's closing price of $20.83, but still higher than Friday's close of $19.50. At one point Tuesday, the price reached $21.37.

An Important Notice Regarding Natural Gas Pipelines And Your Safety.

Watch For The Signs!

We have installed colorful signs like these at every major highway, road, railroad and river crossing. The signs are there to clearly mark the path of our pipelines. When you see one of these signs, please be careful not to use drilling instruments, backhoes or other equipment which might accidentally puncture or damage the pipeline. If you need to work near one of our pipelines, please call our 24-hour phone number (713) 651-1464. We will be happy to send a representative out to locate the pipeline. If you see someone else working near our pipelines, please call us so we can offer the same assistance to them.

In the event of an emergency...

Pipelines do make good neighbors. They have the best safety record in the transportation industry. We need your help, as our neighbors along the system, to keep it that way.

It is most unlikely that we would ever have a leak in the system near you. But if a leak should occur, one or more of the following symptoms could be detected: ● A strange or unusual odor near the pipeline. ● A hissing or roaring sound caused by escaping gas. ● A dense white cloud or fog. ● A slight mist or frozen area above ground along the pipeline route. ● Flames originating from an opening in the ground.

Should any of these symptoms be detected, please take the following precautions: ● Leave the area immediately. ● Avoid driving into a vapor cloud. ● Avoid contact with any escaping gas. ● Do not create any sparks or heat sources which could ignite escaping gas or liquids. (For example, do not start a car, turn on a light or light a match.) ● As soon as you reach a safe area, notify the pipeline operator. (For our pipeline, call collect to (713) 651-1464. Give your name, the location and a description of the leak. ● Call your sheriff, fire department, local or state police. Advise them of the emergency and its location.

By working together, we can keep pipelines operating safely and quietly for our neighbors along the right-of-way. Thank you.

NASA never skimped on safety for shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Always the pressure was on NASA to fly more, to carry more, to earn back more of the enormous cost of the space shuttle program.

"Fast turnaround" became a way of life. On each work day, as they passed through the Kennedy Space Center gates, engineers and janitors alike were reminded by signboards of how many days it was until launch.

The National Aeronautics and Space Agency went to great lengths to shave a day here and there off the turnaround time. On the last mission, the shuttle was kept aloft two extra days in the vain hope that weather would permit a Florida landing and trim six days off the preparation for the next flight.

And yet, NASA never hesitated to delay a flight for safety reasons, even at the risk of offending the customers for whom it was delivering satellites to orbit. The weather had to be right, the ship had to be right. On a few occasions, computers ordered launch pad shutdowns because one instrument reading did not agree with another.

"We always strive in every flight that we perform to be as reliable and as safe as we possibly can and to do everything that we can to ensure that the vehicle and the systems are all ready to fly," shuttle director Jesse Moore said Tuesday. "Flight safety is our No. 1 priority in the space shuttle program."

The pressures on NASA came from all around. From the Air Force, from NASA's European competition, from Congress, from friends and from critics.

The agency's goal was 24 launches a year, beginning in 1988, with the four spacecraft — Columbia, Challenger, Discovery and Atlantis — flying six times each. This year, 1986, was to be the most ambitious to date, with 15 flights pencilled in.

But the year started badly. The first mission was an embarrassment. Five times the crew entered the shuttle Columbia, only to climb out again hours later because of a scrub. Two more launch dates were set, then postponed until the shuttle finally made it aloft, 25 days late.

NASA promised the fastest turnaround ever, seven days from Columbia's landing to Challenger's launch. It would be tight, but the schedule would be maintained. For the first time in the shuttle program, a second launch pad was available and Challenger lifted off a respectable three days late.

"There was absolutely no pressure to get this particular launch off," said Moore.

There is no doubt, however, that NASA has been feeling the heat.

The Air Force argued vehemently that it was unwise to depend on the shuttle alone to deliver critical satellites into space. NASA contended that was "a heavy-handed scheme by the Air Force to give the shuttle a black eye" and said it counted on Air Force business for one-third of its revenue.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger finally ended the competition, by deciding the Air Force would buy an improved version of the Titan rocket. The service will buy 10, launching saellites on them at the rate of two a year.

The European consortium Arianespace has been giving NASA intense competition for the satellite dollar, winning several contracts that would otherwise have gone to the space shuttle. Arianespace officials have said they hope to win one-third of the satellite communications business by 1995, but they, too, had a rocket blow up recently, destroying two satellites.

China announced last year it was open for commercial launch business and Japan is developing its own capability. India has joined space-launching nations and Brazil is building a rocket base. The Soviet Union, too, is beginning to compete for launch business.

Rep. Bill Nelson, whose district includes Cape Canaveral and who flew on Columbia earlier this month, is a shuttle booster who has been pushing hard for a fifth orbiter. But there are others in Congress who are not as friendly to the shuttle — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., would prefer money be spent on unmanned flights.

Now the pressure on NASA is to find out what happened. It's certain to be a while before the signboards at the gates again promise a launch in a few days.

Harry F. Rosenthal has been covering manned space flight for 20 years.

School administrators getting pep talks

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas can have a good public education system if Texans get their priorities straight and put up the money, says State Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby.

Kirby also told 1,500 school administrators Tuesday not to be depressed over recent public school reforms, including the teacher competency test scheduled for March 10.

He said he knew the test "causes a lot of morale problems," but he added, "What kind of example do we set for our children when we complain about taking a test that's mandated by law."

Kirby said computer estimates indicate that public education will cost an additional $430 million in 1988-89, even without a teacher pay increase, but money is available to pay the costs if Texans will turn loose of it, presumably in higher taxes.

He said at a Texas Education Agency conference $430 million would be needed "just to move the current formulas forward without doing anything about 22 to 1 (student-teacher ratios), without doing anything about career ladder increases or all of the other kinds of things we're talking about — not any kind of salary increases. Just to move current law forward will take $430 million."

"And every politician I hear talking about running for election is talking about no taxes. I've not heard anyone so far — have you? — talking about a tax bill," he said.

"I think that it would be very easy to get pessimistic, but let me tell you, there's all the money out there that we need to get the job done. This state taxes itself less than most of the states in the country, and there's enough money to do what needs to be done if we put our priorities in the right place," he said.

"The people of Texas have within themselves the abilities to have a good educational system if they want a good educational system. At least in terms of the money," Kirby said. "I'm not worried about the money. The money will be there if the people want it to be there and if the people really believe in education.

"And I believe that the key to whether or not people believe in education during the next legislative session is right here in this audience today. I believe that you, the educational leaders of this state, are, in fact, the key to whether or not education is in its most optimistic time or in its most pessimistic time."

Chairman Jon Brumley of the State Board of Education assured administrators that in implementing public school reforms enacted by the Legislature the board had "set the course — let's stay with the course."

"There's been a tremendous change. But I want you to know that we're not going back. We're not going back one bit," Brumley said. "We're going to succeed, and we're going to give children options. If we're going to give them options when they get out of high school, we've got to go ahead. It's our job.

"So if you're thinking about retiring early, if you're thinking about stopping, rethink it. I know you're tired. I can understand why you're tired. But we've got to get the job done — be a part of that change, because it's going to happen."

"We'll be proud of it in three, four or five years when we turn the corner. Stay with it," he said.

Peres in W. Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres wound up his nine-day European tour today in the divided German city of Berlin, where Adolf Hitler plotted the annihilation of millions of European Jews.

Peres' itinerary included a visit to West Berlin's Jewish community, the largest in Germany with 6,300 members. Before Hitler came to power in 1933, Berlin had 170,000 Jewish citizens, many of whom perished in the Holocaust.

The Israeli leader was met at Berlin's Tegel Airport by Mayor Eberhard Diepgen and West Berlin Jewish Community leader Heinz Galinksi. Peres then was taken on a brief driving tour of the city, where 4,000 policemen have been assigned to guard him.

Late Tuesday, about 550 demonstrators marched from Wittenbergplatz to Adenauerplatz in West Berlin to protest Israeli Middle East policy toward Palestinians. Police said most of the demonstrators were leftists from the city's Alternative List Party and Palestinians in West Berlin.

Police reported no incidents, but protesters carried such signs as, "Attention For The Victims Of German Fascism Cannot Be An Alibi For Not Calling Genocide Genocide."

Peres' one-day trip includes a talk with West Berlin students at the Reichstag, the former Parliament building beside the Berlin Wall.

Making progress toward peace in the Middle East has been a major theme of Peres' tour, which also included stops in the Netherlands and Britain.

Jordan's King Hussein has proposed an international peace conference on the Middle East to be followed by talks between a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation and Israel. However, Israel opposes participation in the talks by the Palestine Liberation Organization, which refuses to recognize Israel's right to exist.

Peres will address 21 West Berlin students who attend the Freiherr vom Stein School, which made newspaper headlines in 1981 after students yelled anti-Semitic epithets at one of their classmates.

"That was an alarm signal for us," school principal Wolfgang Bethge said in an interview with the Bonn daily newspaper Die Welt.

Parents, teachers and students were shocked about the incident, and school leaders set up a special program to educate the entire school about Jewish history.

An estimated 6 million Jews died at the hands of the Nazis during Hitler's 1933-45 reign.

Suspect held without bond

CARROLLTON, Texas (AP) — A suspect in the shooting death of a teen-ager during a convenience store robbery that was taped by a video security camera was being held without bond today on a capital murder charge.

Lt. Pete Cole said Carrollton police had more than 300 suspects soon after the robbery-shooting was broadcast by television stations nationwide.

No single tip led to the arrest, and there are no plans to pay off a reward offered following the November robbery, Cole said.

Marvin Maurice Wells, 21, of Flint, Mich., was charged with capital murder and was being held without bond today in Lew Sterrett Justice Center, said sheriff's spokesman Jim Ewell.

Matthew McKay, 17, was shot at point-blank range during the convenience store robbery Nov. 21. He later died at a Dallas hospital.

A store camera taped the robbery and the tape was later broadcast by stations nationwide as officials sought help in the search for suspects.

Police took out a murder warrant Tuesday against the Michigan man, who was held Tuesday night at the Lew Sterrett Justice Center on $500,000 bond for the aggravated robbery charge in Mesquite.

Cole said Wells had been a suspect in McKay's death since December.

"We are not obligated to pay a reward to anyone," Cole said. "But if anyone wants to come forward with more information to enhance the evidence ... we still have some reward money left."

Cole said the reward fund set up by officials and increased through local donations now totals about $15,000.

The victim's mother, Betsy McKay, said she felt "a sense of relief that he is in custody, and that he can't hurt anyone else."

McKay, who lived in Oklahoma City, was returning from a trip to Houston and stopped at the convenience store for gas. He was playing a video game in a corner of the store when one of three gunmen yelled for everyone to hit the floor, and shot the youth after he failed to respond.

Fire report is controlled burn

Snyder firemen were dispatched to a grass fire Tuesday which they later discovered was a controlled burn.

The fire was reported 1 mile northeast of Union at 4:21 p.m..

Upon arrival, it was noted Kenneth Rinehart was conducting a controled burn on range land.

1 arrest noted

Police jailed one suspect on misdemeanor warrants for unpaid traffic tickets Tuesday afternoon.

Oil price drop affects tax rate

the price of oil have placed it as low as $20 per barrel — although market analysts said the price seemed to have stabilized as trading closed last week.

Regarding what price might be estimated this spring — figures used for budget preparations for 1986-87 — Peveler noted it is "a give and take thing."

"They try and take a figure of what oil was on Jan. 1 and what they think it will be next Jan. 1 and find a happy medium."

Obituaries

Glenda Petronella

Services for Glenda Annette Petronella, 21, of Midland will be at 2 p.m. Friday at Bell-Cupert-Seale Funeral Home with the Rev. Buck Hatfield, pastor of Faith Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will follow in Hillside Memorial Gardens under direction of Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home.

She was killed at 2 a.m. Wednesday in a car accident near Odessa. She was born Nov. 23, 1964 in Snyder. She was a waitress.

She is survived by a daughter, Felicia, and a son, C. J., both of the home; her paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd James Rodgers of Electra; her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Ted Palmer of Snyder; her mother, Mrs. Willma Rodgers of Midland; her father, James Ogden Rodgers of Big Spring; three sisters, Dana Henderson of Midland, Linda Stearns of Snyder, Carol Jean Lindsey of Keller; three brothers, Richard Pitts and Dennis Pitts, both of Midland and Ricky Rodgers of Keller.

Guard rail struck here

A bridge guard rail on FM 2763 south of Western Texas College was struck Tuesday, one of three minor traffic accidents reported here during the day.

The accident on FM 2763 occurred around 12:30 p.m.

Involved in it was a 1980 Chevrolet pickup and trailer driven by Jackie Phillips Jenkins of Dunn.

According to reports, Jenkins apparently lost control of the rig which ultimately collided with the guard rail of a bridge.

Involved in the day's first accident — at 8:25 a.m. in the 1900 Block of 30th St. — were a 1976 Ford and trailer driven by Manuel Rios of 604 15th St. and a 1982 Ford driven by Jason Douglas Rogers of 2811 Ave. X.

The 2600 Block of Ave. X was the scene of a final mishap at 2:39 p.m.

Involved in it was a 1974 Ford owned by Gail Brooks of 2600 Ave. X which rolled away from its parking place and struck a parked 1984 Ford owned by Lewis Diane Drum of Hedley.

No injuries were reported in any of the three mishaps.

Portugal's South American colony of Brazil became a kingdom in 1815.

Robert Service, the poet of the Yukon, was born in Preston, England, in 1874.

GOT A COMIC OPINION?

The Snyder Daily News is hoping to change its comics page to better reflect what its readers want.

To do this, we must first rate the comics we now offer. This we ask you to do by completing this comic survey.

We'd also like your opinion regarding the other features purchased by the SDN to entertain and inform its subscribers.

Finally, we'd like your suggestions regarding comics we currently don't offer. The syndicates we subscribe to have other comics available and one of these might be the one you'd like to see.

Readers completing this survey should return it to the Snyder Daily News; P.O. Box 949; Snyder, Tx., 79549. They can also be dropped off at the mail slot at the SDN office, 3600 College Ave.

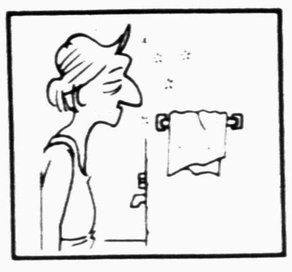

We include a box for your name and address. You don't have to complete it for your ballot to count, but if you have comments and don't mind being identified, we'd like to quote you in a news story we'll write regarding the results.

Please complete the following questions, and remember, only one response per comic.
