FEC penalizes Stenholm campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charles Stenholm's campaign fund paid a $1,500 penalty to the Federal Election Commission for accepting a corporate loan repayment, officials said.

The company, Media Management Consultants, Inc., of Abilene agreed to a $100 penalty.

The campaign made three loans to the company in August and September 1987, FEC spokesman Scott Moxley said Tuesday.

He said the loans were repaid directly from the company in violation of federal law that prohibits corporate contributions to a campaign fund.

Juneteenth to be celebrated 15th, 19th

A parade and barbecue will be the highlight of this year's Juneteenth celebration in Big Spring said Hebrew Jones, head of the local chapter of the NAACP.

Juneteenth, celebrated June 19, is the name given the day Texas slaves learned of the Emmancipation Proclamation and their freedom.

Juneteenth festivities start tomorrow with a barbecue lunch for the community.

The barbecue will be held at the Dora Roberts Community Center and will begin at about 11 p.m. Barbecue will be $4 per plate and can be either carry out or dine in, Woodruff said.

The barbecue is being sponsored by D Rock Production.

The parade, June 19, will start at 3 p.m. at Lakeview Head Start Center and travel down Sgt. Paredez street, Jones said. The parade will end at Lakeview School, said Cyneather Woodruff, coordinator.

Festivities will continue at Mt. Bethel Baptist Church, where members will sponsor a lunch from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Woodruff said.

Activities will conclude at the Old Settlers Pavilion. There will be music, sponsored by D Rock Production, and games. Hot dogs, hamburgers, and watermelon will be sold. Festivities will last until 10 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Jones explained Juneteenth is important "because that reflects on (Black) culture and our heritage. It is a reminder to let us see how far and what we've gained through the years."

"It's also educational. We should be aware of what the 19th of June is all about," Jones said. "It's important that every year we do something. It's important for us to keep in mind where we've come from."

"This is the declaration for independence for the blacks, when we were actually freed in Texas," Woodruff said. "This is something to be celebrated."

Responding officer involved in accident

One police officer's call for help landed another officer in a traffic accident Wednesday afternoon.

According to police reports, Officer Steve Sasser and a second patrolman were responding to a call for help from another officer. The two were traveling south on Gregg Street with lights and sirens, the report said, and when they came to the intersection of 18th and Gregg, both lanes of traffic and the left turn lane were blocked by cars.

The first officer got through the block by passing to the left of the car in the left turn lane, the report said. When Sasser took the same route, however, the car in the left turn lane began turning, hitting Sasser's patrol car, the report said.

The driver of the car, Jan Morgan, 58, Big Spring, said she did not see the second patrol car, the report said.

No citations were issued, but the report said damage was estimated at at least $500.

Corporation impact subject of discussion

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

Two speakers outlined economic development corporations and stressed the importance of carefully choosing the corporation's board during an informational meeting this morning.

About 70 residents, city officials and chamber officials met at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum for the first in a series of Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce meetings to discuss the publicly-funded corporation. City voters created the corporation in May by electing to increase the city sales tax by ½ percent.

The meeting will be held again today from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the East Room of the coliseum as a repeat of this morning's session. A meeting to discuss the corporation's needs and priorities is scheduled for June 21, while the structure to meet the goals will be discussed June 28.

Joe Newman, an economic development specialist with the state comptroller's office, and Gary Kennedy, an industrial consultant with TU Electric, described to the group what a corporation can and cannot do and the impact it can have on the city's ability to attract industry and business. The two also answered a string of questions from the audience.

Newman said the corporation, which is allowed under Senate Bill 971, will collect sales tax monies from the city and then use the money to promote economic growth. The money can be used to help existing businesses expand, as well as attract and locate new industry.

The corporation's monies cannot be used to fund general improvements to the public water or wastewater systems, Newman said. However, the corporation may pick up the tab to provide sewage and water to a new industry, he said.

Big Spring is expected to collect about $700,000 annually from the tax, which will be imposed Oct. 1. The city should get its first check from the state for its share of the sales tax in mid-December, Newman said.

Newman pointed out that the corporation can be dissolved by a vote, initiated either by the City Council calling an election or if 10 percent of the registered voters in the city request an election. The only stipulation for dissolving the corporation, he said, is that the city continue the tax as long as the corporation owes money.

"The sales tax would continue until the debt service is taken care of," Newman said.

Although the corporation's five-member board will review all requests for funding, Newman said the City Council ultimately is responsible for the board's actions.

"Everything rests with the City Council," he said. "Hopefully, you've got one that's progressive and wants to see real growth."

He later responded to a question by saying that the board's ultimate authority will be established through by-laws.

JP rules deaths murder-suicide

By DEBBIE LINCECUM and RUTH COCHRAN

His own failing health and the poor health of his wife apparently drove a Big Spring man to shoot his wife and then turn the gun on himself earlier this week.

Justice of the Peace China Long has ruled the incident a murder-suicide in the deaths of Elizabeth Whatley, 70, and Everett Whatley, 73.

Police are investigating the apparent murder-suicide, which Lt. Terry Chamness said was discovered at about 2:30 p.m. Wednesday at the couple's home on Brent Street.

Chamness said a note, which police found in the couple's home, indicated Everett Whatley felt he couldn't cope with his own illness and his wife's poor health.

"She had medical problems and he had just been diagnosed with medical problems," Chamness said. "The husband knew the wife couldn't handle his new illness."

Chamness said Everett Whatley apparently shot his wife in the head with a .38-caliber handgun while she was in bed. He then turned the gun on himself, Chamness said. He said there were no signs of struggle in the home.

"It looked like it was very peaceful," he said.

Chamness said police checked the couple's home after a neighbor

'Cause of death' awaiting autopsy

By RUTH COCHRAN and MARC SCHWARZ
Staff writers

Authorities are awaiting a preliminary autopsy report before speculating on whether a local man's death might be the result of foul play.

Police and civilian searchers found the body of Richard Lauderdale, a 52-year-old retired man, Wednesday in Comanche Trail Park, near the southeastern shore of Comanche Trail Lake, Lt. Terry Chamness said.

Lauderdale had been reported missing Tuesday at about 11:35 p.m. by family members after he failed to return home from his sister's residence, Chamness said.

Lauderdale's car was found parked near the historic spring at about 7 a.m. Wednesday, prompting police to begin searching the nearby brush. The car's tires had been slashed, but Chamness said authorities "didn't know whether it was in connection with the death or not."

Searchers, who included members of Lauderdale's church, combed the paths and the brushy areas near the spring, Chamness said. At about 11:45 a.m. they discovered the body near a covered picnic table "150 to 200 yards from the spring," Chamness said.

Justice of the Peace China Long ordered an autopsy to determine the cause of what police are calling a "questionable death."

"It just didn't look right to us," Chamness said. "It was suspicious."

Chamness refused to speculate on the cause of death, saying, "I just don't know yet." He said police found blood on the body, although he described it as "a not excessive" amount.

The autopsy was scheduled to be performed this morning in Dallas, Long said, with preliminary results possible later this week. Chamness said he expects preliminary results to be available today or Friday.

"We are anxiously awaiting those results, which should tell us the cause of death," Long said. "This is not a clear-cut case."

Long also reported some signs of injury to Lauderdale's body, but cautioned against attributing the marks to foul play.

"There were some marks on the Big Spring again in running for a prison

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Big Spring is once again in the running for either a 2,250-bed or 1,000-bed state prison that would employ hundreds of people with a monthly payroll of $.5 to $1.4 million.

The same proposal submitted July 31 for a prison, barring unforeseen changes, needs to be resubmitted by June 22 to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, County Commissioner Bill Crooker said today. Finalists for four prison sites will be announced on or near July 5.

The prison sites are opening as a result of legislation passed this month in the last special session of the Legislature. Crooker got an official notice this morning from the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, which announced that 20 semifinalists for six prisons last year are the only ones allowed to submit proposals for the newest prisons.

"We would like to, very much, be considered," Crooker said. "We're in the process of seeing if we're in a go situation. I would say yes."

Representative Troy Fraser of Big Spring agreed. "I think Big Spring will make a proposal. They have an excellent proposal. This would be an excellent location for a prison."

Up for grabs is one 2,250-bed maximum security prison and a 1,000-bed minimum security prison, according to the notice telefaxed to Crooker. Last year there were three 2,250-bed maximum security prisons and three 1,000-bed minimum security prisons awarded. Big Spring's proposal was for both sizes on a location about two miles east of the Fina Oil refinery.

A 2,250-bed prison would employ 800 people with a monthly payroll of $1.4 million, Crooker said. It would take 24 months to build, at a

Tech incident prompts bill

By PETER ROPER
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON— Texas Tech University researcher John Orem says he has been "under siege" by a national animal rights group — including death threats and hate mail — since activists broke into his Lubbock laboratory last July, wrecking equipment and freeing five cats used in research into breathing disorders.

The vandalism prompted Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, to draft legislation making such raids on animal research labs and farms a federal offense. A House agriculture subcommittee will consider the bill today, only days after 24,000 activists marched here to protest mistreatment of animals.

Orem says he is the victim of a "propaganda" campaign by the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) that includes harassing his family and forced him to send all his mail to university police for screening.

Orem argues that his research program, which is aimed at breathing disorders such as Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, has been inspected twice by federal officials since the July incident. Both the National Institutes of Health as well as the university's animal welfare committee approved his treatment of the cats in the laboratory, he said.

JOHN OREM

"But things have gotten out of hand when these people mail you dirty, used condoms and attach notes saying they hope you'll get AIDS," he said.

Ann Chynoweth, a spokeswoman for PETA, said Orem's research is a classic example of abusing animals in laboratories by depriving cats of sleep, attaching metal probes to their brains, and subjecting them other harsh conditions such as noxious gases and extreme cold.

"We intend to keep up our campaign against Texas Tech and Dr. Orem's work. We're pressing for a congressional investigation and we'll get one eventually," she said, adding that PETA successfully shut down animal research programs at the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Oregon.

As for Orem's claim that NIH officials have reviewed his work, Chynoweth said the federal agency has given him $1 million in grant money over the last 13 years and is not interested in finding problems with his program.

"It's NIH's same old tactic. It goes against human nature to expect the people who gave him the research money to then turn around and say his work is unacceptable," she said.

Chynoweth acknowledged that no one from PETA has ever inspected Orem's laboratory or has asked to do so. She said the group

Army deactivates Hood division

WASHINGTON (AP) — Killeen-area leaders said they were unfazed by the Army's formal announcement that the 2nd Armored Division at nearby Fort Hood would be deactivated.

In a one-page statement from the Pentagon late Wednesday, the Army said the 12,000-troop division would be deactivated by the end of fiscal year 1991.

The reduction was first announced in late January when the administration made its 1991 budget proposal.

But a group called Keep Hood Alive and Kicking Inc., or KHAKI, has gone to court to prevent the action, which would cut 25 percent of of Fort Hood's troop complement.

The group wants a judge to order the Army to complete a full-scale environmental impact statement. The Army issued a environmental impact assessment last month.

"There's a difference between an assessment and statement," KHAKI chairman Gaylon Christie today. "The statement is a very detailed look at the environment."

Officials want higher tax

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas legislators, who just last week voted to raise taxes, will be asked to raise some more when they convene in January.

State highway officials say they are doing less road building and repair because of a cash crunch and want a 10-cent per gallon increase in the gasoline tax.

Robert Dedman, chairman of the State Highways and Public Transportation Commission, revealed the proposal to raise the tax to 25 cents at this week's convention of the Texas Good Roads and Transportation Association.

His two colleagues on the panel, Commissioners Ray Stoker Jr. and Wayne Duddlesten, have endorsed the tax hike, which would raise $1 billion in new money annually.

Under the Texas Constitution, $750 million of that annual total would be dedicated to the highway department, which has a $2.6 billion annual budget. The remainder would go to public education.

Man arrested in rare book theft

AUSTIN (AP) — A rare book by Charles Darwin, valued at $12,000, has been recovered from an Austin man police allege was attempting to sell the 131-year-old volume to a local book dealer.

The 27-year-old man, who authorities identified as vice president for an insurance company, was arrested by University of Texas campus police Wednesday.

Authorities said they expect to charge the man in the theft of Darwin's "On the Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection," from the fifth-floor reading room of UT's Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center.

Group targets rap album

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An anti-pornography activist says her group will help frustrated parents press obscenity complaints in Bexar County against those selling the 2 Live Crew rap album "As Nasty As They Wanna Be."

"Our concern is that this garbage is so readily available in stores to the young people throughout the country," said Teresa Weaver, executive director of Citizens Against Pornography. "There are parents who call who are very upset that their children have gotten a hold of this."

Ms. Weaver said Wednesday her San Antonio-based anti-pornography group will be used "as a vehicle" by parents pressing legal complaints.

Tanker fire, oil spill continue in gulf

GALVESTON (AP) — As many as 60 boats today skimmed the water and used booms in the Gulf of Mexico to try to contain a growing oil slick from the burning tanker Mega Borg. The slick was threatening the Texas coast.

The crippled supertanker had lost about 3 million gallons of oil since last Saturday's explosion and continued to spew oil from a hole in the vessel's center tank, which has a capacity of 5.5 million gallons, the U.S. Coast Guard said Wednesday.

Capt. Thomas Greene said none of the other ship's tanks was leaking. "I don't see any risk of losing cargo from the other tanks," he said Wednesday.

The Norwegian ship was carrying approximately 38 million gallons of a light crude oil when its pump room exploded while it was transferring oil to a smaller vessel.

Fireboats showered water on a "low-level fire" still burning in the engine room this morning as firefighters prepared to return to the vessel later today to try spraying flame-smothering foam on the blaze again, the Coast Guard said.

About 880 gallons of foam was used on the fire Wednesday, but the operation was halted when it caused the fire to flare.

Coast Guard officials said most of the spilled oil had either burned or evaporated, but as the ship's fire diminished, an oil slick from the 886-foot ship nearly doubled in length.

An armada of boats worked to trap and remove the brown oil from a slick that extended approximately 30 miles and was 10 miles wide in spots. The slick was located about 30 miles offshore from Galveston.

Jim O'Brien, of O'Brien's Oil Production Services, said his company, also known as OOPS, had recovered about 30,000 gallons.

Officials said they could not determine where the oil might wash ashore or how soon, but said they will enlist an experimental procedure of dropping bacteria in the water to "eat" the oil.

"We're going to try it," Greene said. "Anything we can do to clean up the spill, we'll try," he added, but said that process called bioremediation would be used as a demonstration and is not considered a major part of the cleanup effort.

Bioremediation has been used in various hazardous spills, including cleaning some rocks on shore after the Exxon Valdez accident in Alaska last year, Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said. But this will be the first time bioremediation has been used in the water to clean up an oil spill.

GALVESTON — Fire boats pour water on the burning supertanker Mega Borg with a four-corner attack Wednesday afternoon. The oil tanker, which has been burning since Saturday, continues to release oil into the Gulf of Mexico.

Officials OK 'oil eaters'

GALVESTON (AP) — State officials intend to file a plan today for the experimental use of oil-eating bacteria on the cleanup from the supertanker, Mega Borg.

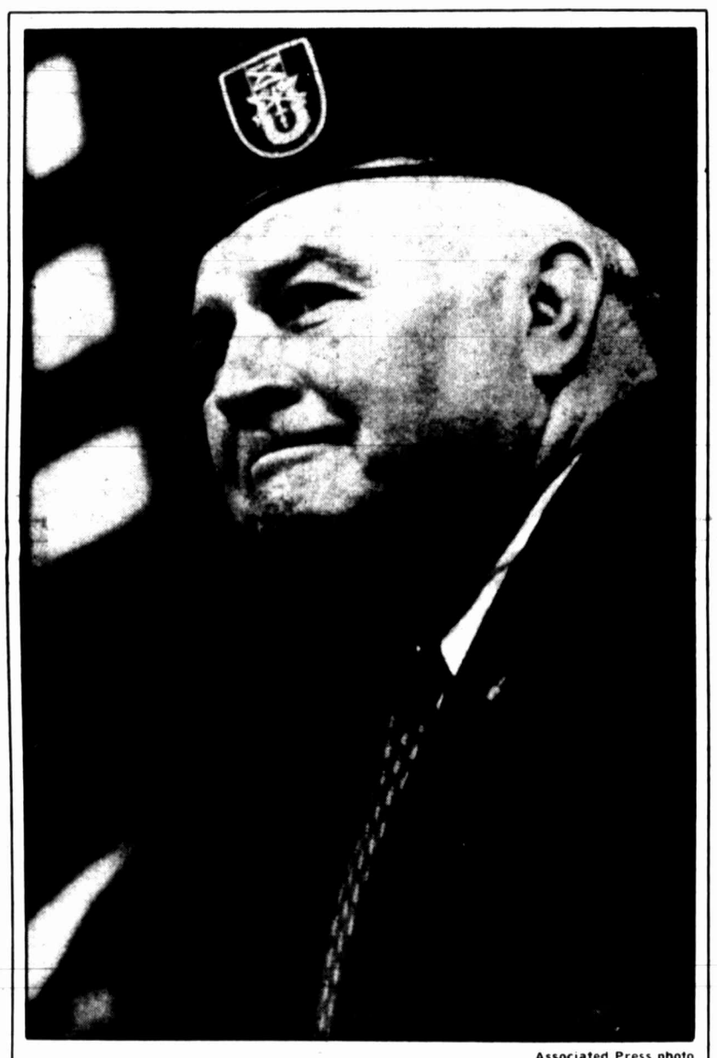

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and B.J. "Buck" Wynne III, chairman of the Texas Water Commission, met Wednesday with officials from the Environmental Protection Agency, Coast Guard and other state and federal agencies to discuss the process studied by the University of Texas Marine Science Institute.

"We're going to try it," said Coast Guard Capt. Thomas Greene. "It's worth a try. Anything we can do to clean up the spill, we'll try."

The process, called bioremediation, uses naturally occurring bacteria stimulated by gases reduce oil to an emulsion of fatty acids. This emulsion then sinks and is consumed by marine life.

Bioremediation has been used for years to clean up hazardous waste sites, treat sewage and wastewater, to extract oil from tight geologic formations and even to clean some rocks on shore after the Exxon Valdez accident in Alaska last year, Mauro said.

"It is urgent that the spill of oil in the Gulf not reach sensitive estuaries or rookeries along our coast. And, we must not let this oil reach our beaches or barrier islands," Mauro said.

Family copes with year of tragedy

HOUSTON (AP) — Larry Reibenstein will bury his second son, his aunt and his cousin this week.

The 33-year-old man hopes the funerals will be the last tragedies his young family will have to endure since his wife and infant son died a year ago.

"It's a lifetime of grief compressed into one year," the Reibensteins' pastor, the Rev. Godfrey Hubert at Foundry United Methodist Church, told the Houston Chronicle.

Reibenstein, a banker, worked to keep his family together after his wife, Peggy, and their infant son died last spring. But when he took his three remaining children on a long-awaited trip to Disney World Sunday, tragedy struck again.

His aunt, cousin and 7-year-old son, Ryan, were killed Sunday when an alleged drunken driver sparked a three-vehicle collision on a Mississippi highway. Reibenstein, his two other children and his sister were injured in the accident.

"He's a very gracious, strong individual," said Hubert, who flew to Alabama to be at the hospital with Reibenstein. "Needless to say, there were a number of times when he wept bitterly as any father would. But his faith is strong. He holds together. He knows that he has two other children depending on him."

The family's troubles began last spring when Peggy Reibenstein, then 8½ months pregnant, suffered complications from a strep infection. Doctors delivered the couple's fourth child prematurely, but he died soon after his birth. Peggy Reibenstein then slipped into a coma and died.

Reibenstein, described as a devoted parent, took on the duties of both mother and father to his remaining children: Ryan, Matthew, 6, and Ashley, 3. He dressed them for school each morning, made sure his little girl's hair was curled for church on Sunday and rushed home after work to take Ryan to Little League practice or all the children to church choir practice.

"(Larry Reibenstein's) a very gracious, strong individual. Needless to say, there were a number of times when he wept bitterly as any father would. But his faith is strong. He holds together. He knows that he has two other children depending on him." — the Rev. Godfrey Hubert.

"Larry seemed to want to do everything for the kids," said Norma Ault, principal at Emmott Elementary where Ryan and Matthew attended school. "He fixed their lunches, he laid their clothes out. He might get to bed at 2 o'clock in the morning, but everything was taken care of for his family."

"He did everything he possibly could to keep life normal for his kids," Hubert said.

And last weekend, he planned to take them to Disney World.

Averil Quackenbush, 35, of Alabama, is accused of driving drunk on Interstate 10 outside Pascagoula, Miss., about 2 a.m. Sunday. He lost control of his car, hit a ditch and soared across the highway median to crash on top of the Reibensteins' station wagon. Within seconds, an 18-wheeler crested a hill behind the Reibensteins and plowed into their car, ripping away the entire right side of the vehicle.

Reibenstein's aunt, Virginia Wohlwend, 66, of Houston, and his cousin, Carol Davis, 43, of Pflugerville, were killed instantly. Ryan lived on a life support system in Mobile until Tuesday.

Reibenstein, his two other children, and his sister, Carol Reibenstein, 36, a Houston teacher, were hospitalized in Singing River Hospital in Pascagoula. Carol Reibenstein remained in intensive care Wednesday with internal injuries, but the father and his two surviving children were released Tuesday.

Quackenbush was charged Tuesday with two counts of manslaughter in Jackson County, Miss. A third charge was expected be added for Ryan's death, police said.

"That family's really captured our hearts at Foundry," Hubert said.

Teams look for second drug tunnel

DOUGLAS, Ariz. (AP) — The U.S. Customs Service has called in a survey team to help search for a possible second drug-smuggling tunnel.

U.S. and Mexican authorities last month raided a warehouse in Douglas and a home in Agua Prieta, Mexico. They found a tunnel which officials have said was used to smuggle drugs from Mexico into the United States.

The Customs Service received information about a possible second tunnel from documents seized after the first tunnel was found, the agency's hot line, and other means.

In the search for a second tunnel, authorities raided a vacant home in Douglas and an occupied home in Agua Prieta last week, but found nothing.

The team arrived late Wednesday and will use seismic equipment to look for irregularities beneath the earth's surface at sites officials think might contain another tunnel, Customs spokeswoman Judy Turner said.

Catholics warned on abortion issue

NEW YORK (AP) — Roman Catholic politicians who support abortion rights risk excommunication, warned New York's Cardinal John O'Connor in this week's archdiocesan newspaper.

"Where Catholics are perceived not only as treating Church teaching on abortion with contempt, but helping to multiply abortions by advocating legislation supporting abortion, or by making public funds available for abortion, bishops may decide . . . such Catholics must be warned that they are at risk of excommunication," O'Connor wrote in a 12-page article on abortion.

"If such actions persist, bishops may consider excommunication the only option,' he added in the publication, Catholic New York.

O'Connor has discussed the excommunication of pro-choice Catholic politicians in the past, but the newspaper article appeared to be his strongest and clearest statement yet on the subject. O'Connor is also the chairman of the U.S. bishops' Committee for Pro-Life Activities.

Jury selection resumes in Barry trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — The snail's pace jury selection for Marion Barry's drug-and-perjury trial resumed today in the aftermath of the mayor's announcement that he would not seek another term.

In advance of Barry's announcement, prosecutors were asking potential jurors if they would be affected by the mayor's political plans. One woman said it wouldn't make any difference to her, but a man said he would regard a decision not to run for re-election as an admission of guilt.

Top aides to the mayor, speaking anonymously, said Barry's announcement was partly designed to elicit sympathy from jurors and prominent supporters were unsure today whether there would be any impact.

MARION BARRY

The mayor has pleaded innocent to 10 misdemeanor cocaine possession charges, one misdemeanor charge of cocaine conspiracy, and three felony charges of lying to a grand jury about his alleged drug use.

Court rules in favor of sobriety checkpoints

WASHINGTON (AP) — The privacy rights of motorists are not violated when police try to curb drunken driving by stopping them at sobriety checkpoints, the Supreme Court ruled today.

The 6-3 ruling upheld Michigan's sobriety checkpoint program and, by extension, similar programs in most states.

In another decision, the court ruled the government may impose severe fines against air polluters even when federal officials are slow to decide on proposals for cleaning up the atmosphere.

And it ruled that hospitals and nursing homes may sue in federal court to challenge how a state-run Medicaid program reimburses their costs.

Lower courts had split on the sobriety-checkpoint issue. Some had upheld the use of checkpoints, at which all motorists are pulled off the road and checked for signs of intoxication. Other courts, like those in Michigan, had barred police from using checkpoints.

"No one can seriously dispute the magnitude of the drunken driving problem or the states' interest in eradicating it," Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court.

"Conversely, the weight bearing on the other scale — the measure of the intrusion on motorists stopped briefly at sobriety checkpoints — is slight," he added.

Drunken drivers killed 23,000 people nationwide last year. President Bush called drunken driving a problem "as crippling as crack" cocaine, and last December asked state and local governments to step up the fight against drunken drivers.

"It's as crippling as crack, as random as gang violence, and it's killing more kids than both combined," the president said then as he noted that federal aid was being given to promote the use of sobriety checkpoints.

Today's ruling echoed the president's concern.

Soviets delay increase in bread price

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet legislature today delayed for at least two months the government's plan for a controversial increase in the price of bread, the main staple of the nation's diet.

The Supreme Soviet, in a rebuff to the government of Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov, said that plans to triple the price of bread in stages starting July 1 would have to wait until September or later. The vote was 319-33.

Government officials had said the price increase would have brought in $24 billion, but that all the money would be turned back to Soviet consumers by other means. However, they acknowledged that they had not fully worked out plans to turn the money back to them.

The bread price increase was one of the most visible and controversial parts of an economic program presented to the Supreme Soviet by Ryzhkov last month. The program touched off panic buying in Moscow and led the capital's government to require proof of residence to make purchases.

30 skeletons to be tested

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Skeletons that Vietnamese refugees said were those of 30 Americans killed in the Vietnam War were handed over to the U.S. Embassy today, officials said.

The bones were to be flown to Hawaii for tests, but embassy officials said they did not know when that would happen.

The bones, stuffed into seven barrels, were handed over to Malaysian police by nine Vietnamese boat people who landed Monday on the beach at Tanjung Sedili, 150 miles southeast of Kuala Lumpur.

Red Cross officials said they sent the bones by truck to the U.S. Embassy.

The embassy's charge d'affaires, Paul Blakeburn, said earlier he doubted the bones could be those of mising American servicemen, but that only forensic tests in Hawaii could determine whether they were.

Other embassy officials said boat people previously claimed to have bones of Americans, but the claims had been proved false.

Nations asked to maintain sanctions

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — The European Parliament today passed a resolution urging European Community governments to maintain all sanctions against South Africa until apartheid is abolished.

The Parliament approved the measure 177-to-47 with 5 abstentions, a day after black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela told them a lifting of sanctions would undermine his drive to end South Africa's policy of racial separation.

Mandela, deputy president of the African National Congress, is on a six-week tour of Europe and North America, calling on governments to maintain sanctions despite reforms adopted by South African President F.W. de Klerk.

The parliamentarians appealed to the 12 European Community governments to continue "all sanctions, including economic, cultural and sporting sanctions . . . until apartheid is completely and irrevocably abolished."

Unwarranted, unwise gamble

The legal and constitutional wrangle over whether burning the American flag can or should be banned took a predictable turn recently. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional a statute passed by Congress last year prohibiting flag burning.

The court's ruling was hardly a surprise. In effect, the decision confirmed the Supreme Court's 1989 ruling striking down a Texas law banning flag burning. In the Texas case and again this week, the court held that banning flag burning was an unconstitutional abridgment of the First Amendment protection of free speech.

That puts the debate back where it was a year ago. A majority on the court — notably including conservative Reagan appointees Antonin Scalia and Anthony M. Kennedy — believes the First Amendment protects even such repugnant forms of political expression as burning the flag. Accordingly, only a constitutional amendment could make flag burning illegal.

The question now is whether it is worth amending the Constitution to prevent the occasional extremist or crackpot from torching the flag. More to the point, is it worth diluting vital First Amendment guarantees after 200 years to preclude an offensive but strictly symbolic act?

Upon careful reconsideration, we don't think so.

The glory of the Constitution and its Bill of Rights is the protection they grant to individual freedoms. These include virtually all forms of political expression that do not jeopardize the rights of others or endanger the Republic. America and respect for its flag have survived and flourished for two centuries precisely because of this protection of individual freedoms. Through war, rebellion and violent political protest, no constitutional amendment was necessary to compel respect for the American flag.

Perhaps that was because desecration of the flag wasn't deemed anything more than a symbolic expression of political thought. Offensive, to be sure, but no more a threat to the nation than, say, burning a copy of the Constitution or the Declaration of Independence.

Thus, the burden of proving necessity rests with those who would dilute the First Amendment and amend the Bill of Rights for the first time in 200 years, all to prevent the odd crank from burning a flag. The problem doesn't merit the supposed solution. And the risks of opening the First Amendment to erosion seem to us unwarranted and unwise.

A fond farewell to my friend Jane

Art Buchwald

By ART BUCHWALD

I have to be honest with you. I miss Jane Pauley.

I didn't know how much I missed her until I turned on the "Today" show the other morning, and they gave me Joe Garagiola instead. What kind of quid pro quo is that?

I have nothing against Deborah Norville, but Jane and I had coffee with each other for 13 years. I'm just not used to having a strange woman watching me while I put on my shoes and socks.

Everyone at NBC now admits that they made a mistake taking Jane off the show. Jane was warm and loving and a credit to her sex. The reason she was so well liked was because she wasn't a threat to our marriages. Not once during all the years she was on the air did I ever hear my wife say, "If Jane looks at you one more time, I'll scratch her eyes out."

Yet Deborah seems more like someone who might make a husband cut himself while shaving. I have never lusted after Deborah in my heart for only two reasons — one is because I've been true to Jane Pauley and, secondly, I never let anything interfere with my eating a hearty breakfast.

There were misgivings in the news department at NBC when they let Jane go, so the network vice presidents (with the economy drive, there are only 11,546 of them left) decided to hire Faith Daniels to read the news.

They hoped that Faith would help us forget what they had done when they hired Deborah.

This is hard to do because, although Faith is very beautiful, she looks a lot like Deborah. I can't tell the difference between them. As a matter of fact, there are some mornings when I can't tell the difference between Deborah, Faith and Willard Scott.

I know they're putting Jane on the evening news — but that isn't when the American people need her. They need her in the morning when her cheery smile and calm countenance are the only things that can get the kids off to school.

The terrible thing about television is that when one network changes something, then all the networks have to change their shows.

Just at the moment when Jane Pauley bid us goodby, CBS dropped the bomb on Kathleen Sullivan. How much can an early riser take in one month? I must confess that I liked Kathleen Sullivan very much. Whenever Jane went to the World Fair in Seattle, I watched Kathleen. Miss Sullivan is sultry and sexy and is exactly the type of person to watch when you have a cold and the furnace is on the blink.

They took Kathleen away and replaced her with Paula Zahn. I have nothing against Paula. She can come into my home and interview Dustin Hoffman any time she wants to. But it's not the same CBS show. All Kathleen had to say was "Read my lips," and I broke my nose on the TV screen.

What I'm driving at is that NBC blew it with Jane Pauley, and I'm not sure Joe Garagiola will be able to step into her shoes. I'm willing to give him a chance.

But if he is going to win me over, the least he can do is wear one of Jane Pauley's dresses and high heels to show us that he wants the job.

Morning TV is a dirty business, and the reason for this is that the networks are dealing with a tough audience. "Today" served divorce papers on Jane because some stupid research company claimed that "Good Morning America" had younger women watching it. What the research people didn't tell NBC is that if there is nothing wrong with something, don't try to fix it with two blondes and a bald guy who used to catch for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Congressmen picking up bad S&L vibrations

Guest column

By RANDY WYNN
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Other than former aides or girlfriends who tell all to reporters, there is nothing congressmen fear more than being held responsible at the polls for government programs gone sour.

And on Capitol Hill now, lawmakers sense their constituents are not content to quietly pay $300 billion to $500 billion for the savings and loan industry collapse that occurred under federal supervision directed by Congress.

Individual congressmen are normally insulated from political fallout by the size of the federal government, the size of Congress, and constituent inattention. No lawmaker suffered when NASA's space shuttle Challenger blew up, and none are likely to fall as a result of rampant pollution at Department of Energy plants. But the failure to prevent savings and loan associations from losing and stealing taxpayer-insured deposits could still come home to roost.

Covering their flanks, more than 150 congressmen have signed resolutions asking appointment of an independent counsel to investigate government officials' roles in the savings and loan scandal. Others demand that the Justice Department throw more savings and loan bandits in jail.

"Americans are furious that a few members of the executive and legislative branches of government allowed this fiasco to happen," declares Rep. Peter Smith, R-Vt., whose independent counsel resolution attracted 100 cosponsors literally overnight.

"Three years ago I and others tried to get this House to act when it was a $10 billion problem, but too many members of Congress listened to the sweet song of the fast-buck operators who had infiltrated the thrift industry," Rep. Toby Roth, R-Wis., declared.

The current dive for the foxholes began after Congress' Memorial Day vacation and the release of new savings and loan bailout cost estimates. Including the cost of borrowing the necessary funds, the General Accounting Office's figure is at least $325 billion over 40 years.

Some of the most ironic rhetoric came from Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill. "The looting of our nation's savings and loan system will cost the taxpayers $500 billion, yet only 47 people have been prosecuted," he declared. "Why won't the Justice Department go after those responsible for this rape of the taxpayer?"

In 1982, Congress approved deregulation legislation permitting savings and loans to invest in commercial loans and ending their traditional restriction to low-yield, low-risk home mortgages. House Banking Committee chairman Fernand St Germain, D-R.I., who later left office under criticism for acceptance of gifts from the savings and loan industry, guided the bill through Congress along with Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah. The law also permitted savings and loans to provide up to 100 percent project financing and relaxed controls on high-interest "brokered deposits" placed by middlemen.

Edwin Gray, a former Federal Home Loan Bank Board chairman, proposed in 1984 tighter restrictions on brokered deposits that were thrown out in court. His next move was to limit non-mortgage investments.

In 1985, 222 House members cosponsored a resolution sponsored by Annunzio and vigorously supported by savings and loan owner Charles Keating calling on the bank board to shelve a rule limiting risky "direct investments" in real estate and other projects. The resolution died in the House Banking Committee, but not before a furious Annunzio, who later joined the list of those receiving Keating campaign contributions, stomped out of a hearing.

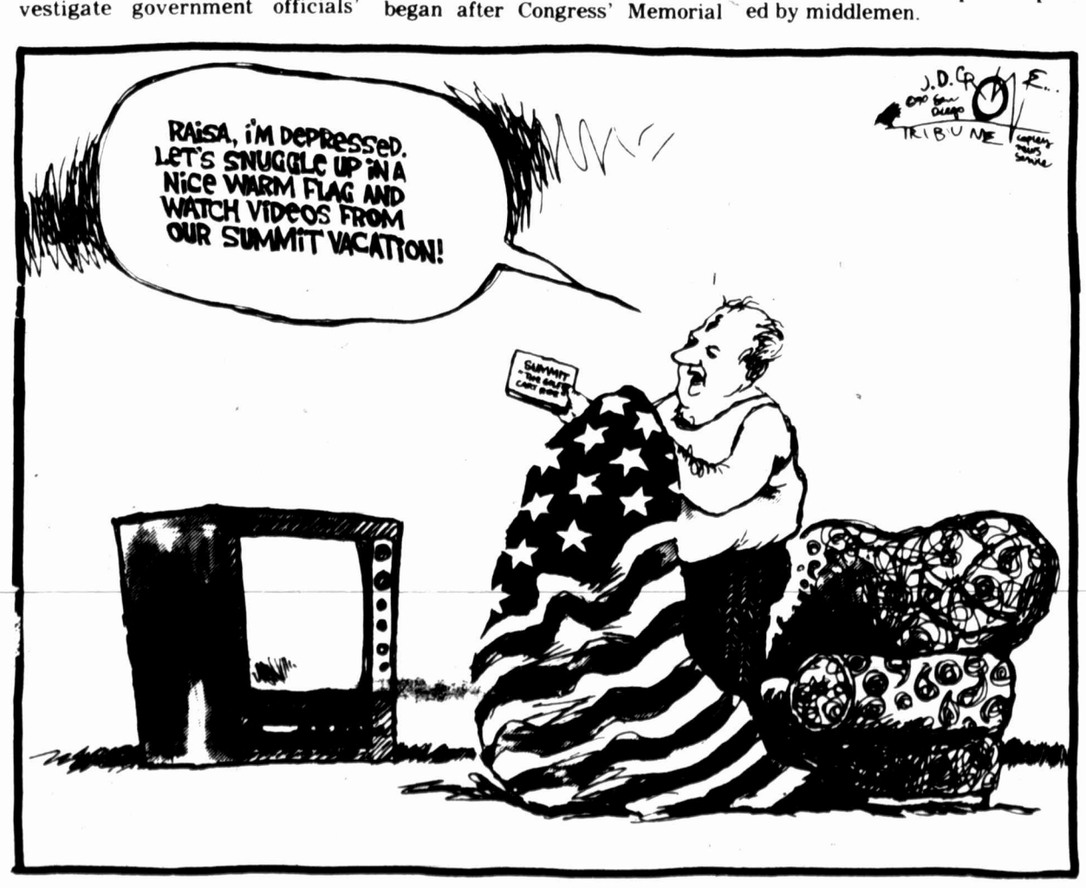

It is not as if savings and loan wrongdoing would have been hard to detect if Congress had even one half-opened eye on the industry during the 80s. Lavish parties, private jets, yachts and resorts were standard accouterments of the industry's high rollers in the Southwest. The bank board made videotapes of failed savings and loan investments that Gray used to bolster his case for a crackdown.

By 1986 the bank board needed additional capital to take over failing thrifts, but former House Speaker James Wright, D-Texas, held up the legislation at the urging of Texas savings and loans.

In 1987, the Keating Five senators — Cranston, DeConcini, Glenn, McCain, Riegle — held their infamous meetings with Gray and his aides demanding answers to Keating's claims of harassment.

Keating is the closest thing Congress has found to a whipping boy for the savings and loan scandal, but even if cleaning up Keating's Lincoln Savings and Loan costs $2.5 billion that figure will be less than one percent of the overall bailout price tag. Since so many of its members appear to the public to have been in Keating's pocket, Congress needs to find more or other villains. Thus the calls for stepped-up prosecutions.

Constituents may make their representatives nervous by complaining about savings and loan costs, but voters' options are limited. Congressional incumbents have advantages which ensure that most lawmakers have only token opponents this fall who are ill-equipped to capitalize on the scandal.

Tax OK sends mixed signals

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Looking for omens in California's vote to increase the state gasoline tax, politicians in both parties are reading the signals that suit them. They aren't checking the fine print, though.

The administration sees the referendum vote for higher gasoline taxes as proof that President Bush's national transportation policy took the right route in recommending that state and local governments pay a bigger share of the cost of rebuilding roads, bridges and other facilities.

Democrats, who had criticized that approach, said Californians showed that people are willing to accept higher taxes, so long as they know in advance that the money will be spent on real needs, and won't be wasted.

That argument could be tailored to fit demands that the president renounce his campaign vow to block any new taxes, and tell the voters that it has to be done to deal with the budget deficit.

An increase in the federal gasoline tax is among the options that budget negotiators are likely to consider. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, proposed boosting it sharply to help balance the budget and at the same time reduce U.S. dependence on imported oil.

But deficit reduction is a general goal, not a specific one like the highways and bridges that are to be rebuilt with the proceeds of the California gas tax boost.

Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner said that if the federal gas tax were to be increased from the current 9 cents a gallon — a step he carefully avoided endorsing — the money should be earmarked for the transportation infrastructure and nothing else.

Skinner said the June 5 vote in California shows that state and local governments are willing to take on a greater share of transportation costs, and that the voters will back them, so long as new tax revenues are used for that specific purpose.

He said people distrust the way governments spend money, but are less reluctant to accept tax increases when they know exactly how the revenues will be used.

"I think it validates one of the principles that has been somewhat contentious," Skinner said.

"It's time to act," Bush had said in presenting the transportation plan earlier this year, and promising the states more flexibility in the use of less federal aid. At the time, critics in both parties said it set national goals and assumed the states would pay the bill. "Read my lips; raise your taxes," said Gov. James R. Thompson Jr. of Illinois, a Republican.

Skinner said the states should be increasing their transportation taxes, that 18 have done so in the past year and 33 in the past two years.

Until the voters agreed to raise the California gas tax from 9 cents to 18 cents a gallon over the next five years, the rate there had been held at bargain level. The California tax had been increased only 2 cents a gallon since 1963.

Summer festivals feature crafts, cherries

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

With the arrival of summer comes a wealth of family activities, festivals and weekend getaway ideas. Among this year's offerings are music, fruit, animals and country culture. Some are an eclectic mix of many of the above.

The annual Cherry Festival in High Rolls Mountain Park, N.M. is set for this weekend. The Cherry Bowl Extension Club sponsors the event to celebrate the harvest of thousands of the fruits at this time every year.

There will be arts and crafts, drink, food, but mostly cherries — cherry cakes, cherry pies, ice cream, and the list goes on, according to a letter from club president Jack Jones.

The event gets underway Saturday at 10 a.m. lasting until 6 p.m. and continues Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The weather, Jones writes, is sure to be cool.

If Bluegrass music is your love, plan to attend this year's Jamboree in Cloudcraft, N.M. The music happens June 23 and 24.

Musicians from several Texas and New Mexico bands are lined up to perform. The open-air pavilion at Zenith Park will be the setting for the sounds of this original American folk music.

Visitors are invited to bring guitars, banjos and other instruments to play along. No drugs or alcohol will be allowed at the festival. For more information, call the Cloudcraft Chamber of Commerce at (505)682-2733.

Also in Cloudcraft is the "Country Caravan" music revue set for July 1. A performing group from South Plains College in Levelland, Texas will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the high school parking lot.

A cast of 14 musicians, singers and dancers will perform about 35 country songs in the 90-minute show. A barbecue dinner will be served before the performance.

Contact the Cloudcraft Chamber for more information, at the above number.

Closer to home is the Midland "Fab-duck-ulous Family Fun Affair," on Wednesday, July 4.

The Mabee Memorial Swim Center and Windlands Park will be the settings for toy duck races, foam fun, a sidewalk parade, face painting, food and beverage booths. Kids and their parents are welcome to participate.

You can become a duck sponsor for a $5 fee. Prizes to be given away include two round trip tickets anywhere in the continental United States from American Airlines, a cellular phone, a custom family portrait, bikes, toys, free meals and movie passes.

It all gets underway at 9 a.m. The event is sponsored by the Junior League of Midland. For more information, call 682-4786.

The Lubbock Country Peddler Show is set for June 29 through July 1.

Country wares, arts and crafts, jewelry, baskets and clothing items handmade by nationally known and local craftsmen will be offered for view and for sale. The Sweet Songs String Band from Arlington will perform music featuring a hammered dulcimer and other folk instruments.

The show is organized by a national group and set up in nine different locations across the country. The Lubbock show will be held in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Most organizations ask that interested persons call ahead about festival information.

Long-running program breaks barriers in India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — In the United States, "War and Remembrance" lasted 392 hours and was considered one of the longest miniseries ever. But how about one lasting more than 18 months?

There is such a maxiseries. It's called "The Mahabharata," and it's still running on Indian television. It won't end until July 8.

Based on a mythological Hindu epic that is the longest poem in world literature, "The Mahabharata" is the country's hottest show, even though it airs at an hour that would amaze U.S. networks.

Each one-hour episode of the Indian drama starts at 9 a.m. on Sundays.

Despite that early hour, Doordarshan, the government department that controls India's only nationwide TV channel, estimates the show attracts an average audience of 90 million people each week — or more than one-tenth of India's population of 880 million.

"The Mahabharata" also appears to have transcended religious barriers in India, where 82 percent of the people are Hindu but there are large communities of Moslems, Sikhs and Christians.

In one New Delhi house, two Moslem carpenters installing new windows threatened to take Sunday off unless they were given access to the television set.

"The Mahabharata" has a somewhat wider scope. It's a kaleidoscope of court intrigue and fierce battles between two sets of feuding brothers, tempered with religion, philosophy and the virtues and vices of princes and aspiring kings.

Brevity is soul of comfort

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I recently lost my husband of 51 years. After his death, I received many comforting letters telling me what a fine, kind and gentle man he was. This did much to help me bear my loss.

However, I am writing to tell you about one letter I received from a longtime friend saying that she had heard of my husband's "demise" — then she went on to describe in great detail her busy social calendar, her new apartment, whom she had visited, and who was visiting her, etc.

Abby, please tell people that when they write a letter of condolence, the recipient is usually not in the mood for social chitchat.

When my daughter was in the hospital, dying of leukemia, a friend called to "cheer her up," and kept her on the phone for half an hour describing the Caribbean cruise she had just returned from — and the wonderful plays she had just seen in New York!

How can people be so insensitive? — SOUNDING OFF

DEAR SOUNDING OFF: For the thoughtless and self-centered, it comes naturally. And to the well-intentioned who attempt to entertain or distract a grieving friend with a cheerful, newsy letter: Please consider instead a brief message expressing your sympathy.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's "baby sister" (age 34) is getting married for the fourth time (one annulment and two divorces). She chose our wedding date for her wedding. It will be a civil ceremony, but she's having a big blowout just like it was her first.

My husband wants to attend her wedding and the big party the night before, which will kill the whole weekend. I had been looking forward to a personal celebration for our wedding anniversary, but it won't be possible now that his sister screwed up all our plans. With 365 days in the year, wouldn't you think this selfish girl could have picked another day to get married?

I know I'll have a miserable time at her wedding, as it won't be easy to hide my resentment. I'm not sure I can handle this. — NOSE OUT OF JOINT

DEAR NOSE: You can if you really want to. Be a good sport and handle it with grace and generosity of spirit. "Baby sister" has already had three strikes against her; perhaps your lucky day will prove lucky for her, too.

If you anticipate a miserable time, you'll have one. Most people are about as happy as they make up their minds to be. Think positive and turn this lemon into lemonade.

Stranded satellite owners to pay NASA

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The owners of a stranded communications satellite today said they will pay NASA for a shuttle rescue mission with space-walking astronauts.

Intelsat's board of governors authorized the rescue effort, which will cost millions of dollars, during a weeklong meeting in Barbados that ended today.

The uninsured $157 million satellite is orbiting uselessly about 345 miles high. It ended up 22,000 miles lower than intended when it failed to separate properly from a Titan 3 rocket on March 14.

Martin Marietta Corp., which conducted the $272 million commercial launch, blamed an engineering design error in the rocket.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration last month said it would send up a shuttle to rescue the Intelsat VI satellite if Intelsat paid for it.

NASA payload manager William D. Green said the agency tentatively has targeted the mission for the first flight of the new Endeavour in February 1992.

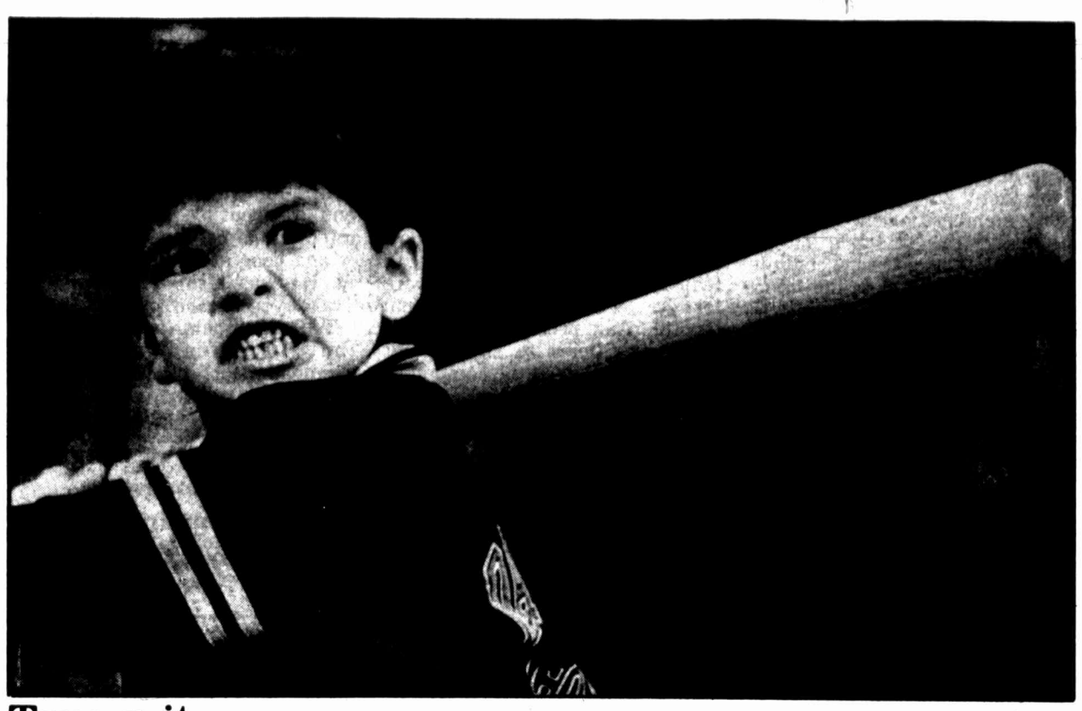

"It was the best place to insert this mission with minimum disruption to other flights, in fact no disruption to other flights," Green said today.

Last week, the federal Office of Management and Budget approved NASA's proposed $130 million pricetag — in 1988 dollars — for non-government shuttle missons. That amounts to $146.5 million for fiscal 1990.

Intelsat, a Washington-based consortium of 119 countries that operates a global communications satellite system, will pay "a sizable fraction" of that cost since other payloads will be on board, Green said.

"Generally speaking, the reason we're doing it is we're in the business of providing space services when people ask for it," Green said.

"For this to be practical, a satellite that's in trouble has to be within the reach of the shuttle, in the altitude region," he added.

PUC cuts proposed rate hike

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission has cut Houston Lighting & Power's proposed rate increase of $854 million by one-third because of what it said were errors and unnecessary delays in the construction of the South Texas Nuclear Project.

HL&P customers will pay $554 million in rate increases over a three-year period, the PUC announced in its final decision Tuesday.

An interim rate increase of $227 million already had been implemented for HL&P customers a year ago, so ratepayers will see no increases for the remainder of 1990, PUC Commissioner Marta Greytok said.

Rate increases are being phased in to recoup the cost of Unit 1 of the South Texas Nuclear Project, as well as other costs of generating electricity. If the costs of Unit 2 are treated in a similar manner, HL&P customers can expect increases of about 5.7 percent in 1991 and 4.4 percent in 1992, the PUC staff said.

Earlier, the PUC had decided that HL&P customers should not pay for costs associated with 23 months of construction delays for the STNP. The PUC staff estimated the costs of unnecessary delay at $375.5 million, or 13.59 percent of HL&P's $2.763 billion investment in the nuclear project. Final cost of the STNP is estimated at $8.5 billion.

"HL&P ratepayers will never have to pay for two years of South Texas Project delays that were found imprudent," Mrs. Greytok said.. "The STP disallowance approved by the commission is significantly larger than the national average for nuclear plants."

The three-member PUC also decided that HL&P should receive a return on equity of 12.92 percent and an overall rate of return of 10.62 percent. HL&P had requested a 14.3 percent return on equity and an 11.23 percent rate of return.

Bakers rolling in the dough

CHICAGO (AP) — As workers on the hard-roll line at the National Baking Co., James Street and his friends are used to lots of dough, but not the kind they won in the Illinois State Lottery.

The 12 bakery workers — one shy of a baker's dozen — stepped forward Tuesday to claim a grand prize of $25 million. Calling themselves the Blessed Dozen Partnership, they had pooled $60 for tickets in Saturday's drawing.

"I liked these numbers," said Street, 43, who organized the group about a year ago. "The numbers just came to me to play. I knew we'd win."

Lottery spokeswoman Julie Lively said the group will receive $1.25 million annually for 20 years.

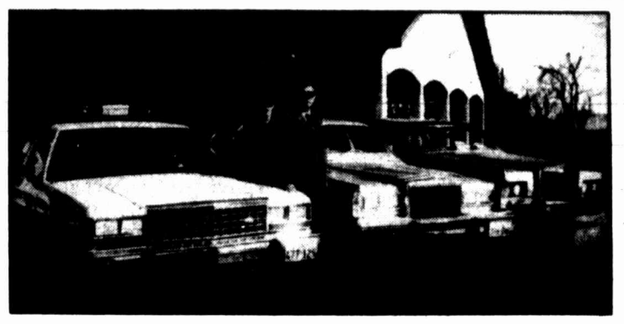

The big bread means some of the dozen will be saying goodbye to hard rolls.

Baker Katy Mae Warren, 67, said she would be retiring soon, as she already had planned.

Marshall Guthrie, 36, a dough mixer, remembers dancing around the baking line when he heard the news. "Our boss at the bakery said no one can play the lottery anymore," said Guthrie.

Street, head of the hard-roll production line, said the 12 began by contributing $2 apiece each week but increased their weekly ante to $5 in mid-May.

Incinerator planners don't expect early decision

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — Representatives of a company that wants to locate a hazardous waste incinerator in Mitchell County have begun what they call a long process to address the needs and concerns of the community, including those opposed to it.

Confronting officials of National Waste & Energy Development Inc., of Pittsburgh, Pa., on Tuesday, during a meeting with a local citizens advisory committee, were members of Texans Against Pollution, a group opposed to the incinerator and regional landfill proposal.

The opposition group attended the afternoon meeting at the courthouse to listen and present a letter to Waste & Energy Chairman Charles Zapala. However, the letter was not delivered because Zapala, who was in Mitchell County all day to tour the landfill site and meet with business people, left after a luncheon to inspect another proposed site in Albuquerque.

"Contrary to what our local officials have led you to believe there is widespread opposition to your company's proposal," the letter states. "We have already successfully fought the siting of a low-level radioactive landfill in our community and we intend to oppose your company's proposal with the same intensity and perseverance as we have displayed in the past."

TAP member Darlene Hines also questioned the selection of the members on the advisory committee, which will meet in the future with company representatives to ask questions that address community concerns.

"I have doubts about it," she said. "We have people on this board that are totally for this."

He added, "We need the economy in this area. We are in terrible shape due to the price of oil and the price of farming."

Straw votes taken at three county public hearings in March show that about 85 percent of the more than 300 people who attended were for the incinerator and regional landfill. That prompted the Commissioners Court to sign a host agreement to assist the company's efforts.

In return the county will collect a 50-cent fee per ton of waste which could raise about $500,000 annually, County Judge S.L. "Mac" Morris said. One estimate of the landfill's appraised taxable value would be $35 million.

Meanwhile, Waste & Energy Vice President of Project Development Jim Cronin, who addressed the advisory committee Tuesday, said there is no concrete idea of what they will propose yet because it is too early to tell. He did say the project may require about 12,000 acres of land.

A local representative for the company, Jim Moody, said in April that the landfill, located 2 miles south of Interstate-20, could employ about 100 people, handle a minimum of 2,000 tons of trash daily and generate $2 million annually. He was also in Albuquerque Tuesday afternoon.

TAP members are concerned that 10 percent of burned chemicals containing lead, mercury, cadmium, chromium, arsenic and zinc, will be sent out of a smokestack and the rest, the ash, buried in the landfill. There will always be a risk of leaks and accidents from traffic bringing in the waste, they say.

Cronin said when he meets with the complete 12-member committee in two or three weeks, he will present a schedule of future activities and will discuss site analysis and landfill designs.

He said Zapala will probably be at that meeting. "He's really busy of course," Cronin said, "but we'll have him out here."

Cronin said opposition to the incinerator may be healthy.

"Sometimes that forces us to stand a little straighter and pay a little more attention to what we do," he said.

He said they want to be cautious and that is one of the reasons for the meeting with the advisory committee. "We're going slowly," Cronin said. "We want to convey that same sense to people."

Also at Tuesday's meeting he reported the results of three 200-foot test holes at the proposed landfill site that were bored about two weeks ago. A water formation found in sandstone about 20-feet underground will have to be avoided, he said, but otherwise the water table is estimated to sit 450-500 feet underground.

More tests holes will have to be drilled in order to qualify for state and federal permits, a process which will involve several mandatory public hearings, he said.

"Before the first shovelful of dirt is turned, we're going to learn a lot of information out there," he said. "I think the wind is going to be the biggest problem. I don't think water is going to be a problem."

At the end of the meeting, Cronin told the advisory committee, "I wish you the best of luck and come out answering questions at the sound of the bell."

"Sometimes (opposition) forces us to stand a little straighter and pay a little more attention to what we do. . .We're going slowly. We want to convey that same sense to people." — Jim Cronin, National Waste & Energy Development Inc.

Meeting

"That entirely depends on how you write your by-laws. You can give that board as much or as little power as you want to give it," he said. "It's up to the City Council."

The council members will decide the corporation's by-laws, he said, so they will decide much of what the board can and cannot do.

Newman said the board members, who are appointed by the council and according to the bill "serve at the pleasure of the council," should have several qualifications. He cited:

- An ability to borrow and repay large sums of money.
- The ability to "entertain novel ideas while staying in touch with reality." Newman said the board should be innovative, but should not fund "pie-in-the-sky" projects.
- The ability to disagree agreeably.
- Ability. Appointments to the board shouldn't be made to satisfy political interests, favors or city districts, he said.

"The boards are crucial because they are the ones all this stuff bounces off of before it gets to the council," Newman said. "(But) the council has the ultimate authority."

Kennedy, who helps serve as a liaison between industry and cities, said the board is important but support groups for it are equally important. The board administers the funds, he said, but support groups do much of the footwork in soliciting industries and providing industry representatives with information about the city.

"The five board members may not necessarily be the ones that I would be in contact with, but they are the ones who will represent the community in whatever decision is made," Kennedy said. "They need to be people who are responsible . . . and who understand the needs of business and industry."

The board members, he said, may not be the ones in direct contact with an industrial prospect. They are not necessarily the marketing team or the "prospecting" team, he said.

"Whomever is representing the city . . . is going to find out the needs of that industrial prospect, then take that information to the five board members," Kennedy said.

Kennedy said the corporation and its funds give Big Spring an extra weapon in the battle for industry and business in West Texas. It is a battle complicated by state problems with tort reform, worker's compensation and transportation, he said. He suggested that the corporation could work to help prospects deal with the challenges.

"What it is going to do is give you a leg up and meet the competition head on," he said. "You're going to have enough money for a good program."

Kennedy cautioned the group not to expect overnight results. Growth, he said, takes time and the competition for business is fierce.

"You're working on a minimum of a 10-year program," he said.

Whayne Moore, chamber executive director, agreed with Kennedy, saying the corporation gives Big Spring an edge in economic development.

Prison

cost of $64 million.

A 1,000-bed prison would employ 260 people with a monthly payroll of $461,000. It would take 18 months to build, at a cost of $22 million.

No additional incentives or enhancements will be permitted in the resubmitted proposals, according to the notice that Crooker got. The only exception is for cities that made a proposal for one size prison and now want to make a proposal for both units. The TDCJ will use its discretion in accepting additions, such as data on utilities.

Area cities besides Howard County that made last year's Oct. 5 semifinal list of 26 proposals from 46 submitted include Lamesa, Dalhart, Breckenridge, Eastland and a combined proposal from Pecos and Fort Stockton. Abilene is the nearest city that got a prison, which was a 2,250-bed unit. Finalists were announced Nov. 13.

The four finalists for the newest units will give a 15-minute pesentation at a July 10 meeting of the TDCJ.

Crooker said he, Fraser, County Judge John Coffee, Mayor Max Green, City Manager Hal Boyd and Public Works Director Tom Decell, will meet as soon as possible to begin looking over last year's proposal.

"Hopefully we'll meet sometime tomorrow," he said. "We'll get together just as soon as we can."

He said working to locate a state prison here is an ongoing effort to bring industry to Big Spring. The city has also made a proposal for a 500-bed work release unit to be located near the former Webb Air Force Base for the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles. Finalists for that will be announced June 22.

Other units located in Big Spring include a 10-year-old federal prison camp with about 600 inmates on the former air force base and a three-year-old Bureau of Immigrations holding facility with about 300-beds at the former Ramada Inn.

reported that they hadn't been seen since Monday.

"The neighbor saw them about 9 o'clock Monday evening and that was the last time anybody saw them," he said.

Chamness said investigators believe the couple died sometime Tuesday night. Long, however, has ruled that the Whatleys died on Monday night at about 9 p.m.

The neighbor, Ray Lawlis, said he called police because he was concerned for the couple's welfare.

"I hadn't seen them for a while," Lawlis said. "I just didn't want to go in and find something had happened to them. She (Mrs. Whatley) had worked for me for 16 years and they had lived next door to us for 11 years. They were like a brother and sister."

Lawlis said he had seen the Whatleys Monday evening but had not seen them or heard from them all day Tuesday or Wednesday.

Another neighbor, Mrs. Millie Cunningham, said she had talked to Mrs. Whatley about 7:30 p.m. Monday.

"She told me he (Mr. Whatley) had found out that he had kidney failure. At the time, she said she was glad he could get the dialysis here at Scenic Mountain (Medical Center.)"

Cunningham said the people of the neighborhood know each other fairly well and are concerned about each other.

"This is a caring neighborhood, I would say that. It's caring but not nosey. We do try to watch out for each other."

Long said the Whatleys had one daughter, who lives in Tyler.

Animal rights

bases its accusations on videotape of experiments that were provided by the Animal Liberation Front, the group that took credit for vandalizing Orem's laboratory. PETA also relies on its own review of the "protocols" — or program outlines — that Orem must file with NIH as part of the grant process.

Chynoweth also pointed to an Agriculture Department report that cited Texas Tech — including Orem's laboratory — for more than 40 animal welfare violations.

"We've asked (university officials) to inspect Dr. Orem's laboratory, but they've never answered our letters," she said. "I don't think Dr. Orem would let us in even if we asked."

In an earlier conversation, Orem said he would be willing to demonstrate his work to PETA observers, but he had never received a request.

"But they're not interested in whether I conduct my research humanely. They don't believe animals should be used in research, period," he said.

Chynoweth agreed, saying PETA's philosophy is "animal experimentation is animal exploitation." She said the group intends to keep pressure on Orem and Texas Tech by grassroots organizing, letters, and advertising.

"We educate people about programs like Texas Tech's and when they get mad, they write letters. That's what PETA's for," she said.

Stenholm, however, balks at that philosophy and said animal experimentation is needed in medical research.

"My disagreement is not with animal rights advocates interested in established guidelines for proper animal care, but with extremists who insist that no circumstances exist under which we can morally differentiate between the value of the life of a human and that of an animal," he said.

His bill outlaws the theft of any animal from a research lab or farm. Violators would be liable to up to $10,000 in fines and up to three years in prison.

Critics say raids, like the Texas Tech raid, are already violations of state and local laws, making Stenholm's bill unnecessary.

Stenholm disagreed, saying organizations like the Animal Liberation Front are national groups that easily escape state jurisdiction. Orem, naturally, supports the bill.

"No one has been arrested for breaking into my lab, but I'm not surprised. There is a core group of radicals who are willing to do this and they travel around the country. That creates jurisdictional problems. But I think you'd see results if the FBI were involved from the beginning," he said.

Firefighters battle two blazes

Local firefighters battled two blazes Wednesday afternoon.

Big Spring Fire Department workers conquered a home fire in the early afternoon, and later joined Howard County Volunteer Fire Fighters on the scene of a tank battery fire which occurred in the early evening hours.

The Big Spring Fire Department responded to the scene of the house fire at 901 E. Sixteenth Street about 2:20 p.m., according to the report. Two trucks, the rescue van and a car responded.

Firefighters reportedly extinguished the blaze completely within two hours. There were no reported injuries, and damage to the home was estimated at $20,000.

Howard County Volunteer Fire Department firefighters responded to a tank battery fire about 5:30 p.m., Chief C. Roy Wright said. The fire occurred on the Union of California Chalk B oil lease on the Cole Ranch, east of Forsan.

Trucks from Sand Springs, Silver Heels, Tubbs, Forsan and the city of Big Spring reached the scene about 6 p.m.

body, but without being a trained pathologist it's hard to say whether they might be linked to something more than an accidental death," she said. "And until the autopsy results come in, I don't want to speculate."

Chamness said the body was taken to Dallas because a pathologist in Big Spring was not available. Dr. Robert Rember, who had served as the county's pathologist, is no longer performing autopsies, he said.

A 1987 city directory listed Lauderdale as an orderly at Golden Plains Care Center; the 1988 edition indicated he was retired.

Coahoma Lions are for real

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

COAHOMA — The "mystery team" of the city little league playoffs is beginning to make its presence felt with a vengeance.

The Coahoma Lions, although sporting a spotless 15-0 record, were regarded by some as an unknown quality entering this year's playoff.

Well, the Lions are not so much a mystery anymore — just ask the International League Indians.

The Lions battled back from two deficits, then combined fine pitching and an opportunistic hitting attack to down the Indians, 15-8, in winner's bracket action here Wednesday night.

The pitching came from Freddie Olivas, who displayed fine control by striking out 12 and walking none while scattering nine hits for the complete-game victory.

As for the hitting, it would be difficult to single out one outstanding performance, as the Lions definitely spread the wealth around.

Chris Arguello had a fine night hitting from the two-spot, going two-for-two with a triple, RBI, two walks and two runs. Brian Ruiz and Olivas also were productive at the plate: Ruiz was two-for-four with a double and two runs; while Olivas was two-for-three.

The Lions also took advantage of six Indian errors, nine walks and several passed balls during the evening.

"We just got good pitching out of Freddy . . . and got some key hits out of key players," Lions coach Bill Gressett said after the game. "We made some errors early that kept (the Indians) going, but we did some things that got them rattled, then it was all over with after that."

The game, however, began on quite a different tone, as the Indians struck for two quick runs in the top of the first.

Leadoff batter Scott Goodblanket opened with a double to left field, then came home on John Morelion's double to right. Morelion went to third on the throw and eventually scored on T.J. Rios' groundout to third.

The Lions, however, rallied for three runs in their half of the inning.

Rodney Gressett led off with a double, Arguello walked and both runners advanced on a wild pitch by Indian starter David Franco.

Franco appeared to be working his way out of trouble, getting Adam Tindol to pop out and striking out Olivas, but a fielding error by Morelion on Isaac Martinez's grounder allowed Gressett to score.

Jeremy Meeks then beat out an infield single that scored Arguello, and Martinez closed out the scoring when he crossed the plate on a throwing error.

The Lions padded their lead in the second when Gressett scored on a fielder's choice before the Indians battled back to take the lead in the third.

Goodblanket again keyed the rally by leading off with a double, and Morelion again brought his teammate home, this time with a single to left.

Morelion went to third on Franco's single and, one out later, scored when Meeks mishandled a grounder by Edward Aguilar. Jonathan Miller brought home the final two runs of the stanza with a sharp single to right that plated Franco and Aguilar.

That, however, was the final bright spot of the game for the Indians, as the Lions came roaring back with six runs in their half of the inning to take control of the contest.

Ruiz led off with a double and went to third on a passed ball. After Steven Prater walked and stole second, both runners scored on an error by Miller.

One out later, Franco was relieved by Aguilar, who walked Arguello, Olivas and Martinez during the inning. All three eventually scored on passed balls.

The Lions scored four runs in the fourth and one in the fifth to cement the victory, their 16th of the season in as many tries.

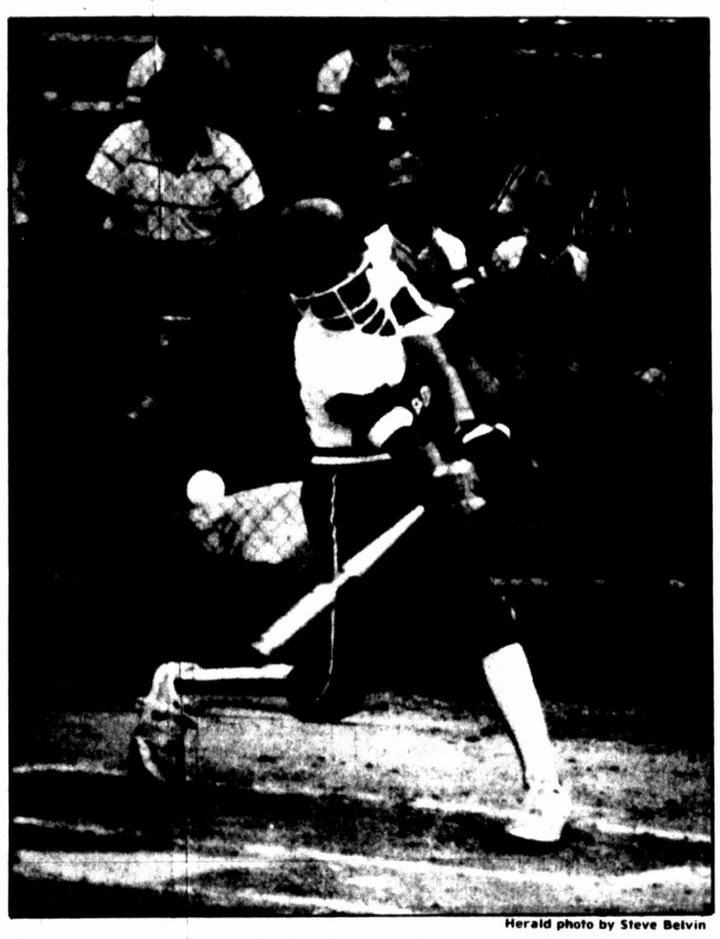

"(Olivas) made a few mistakes early by hanging his curve ball," Bill Gressett said, "but once he figured out that he had to throw the curve out of the strike zone, he started striking people out.

"This was a big ballgame," he added. "The winner of this one more than likely will be in the championship game."

The Lions will put their spotless record on the line again tonight when they host the International League Panthers at 8 p.m. at the Coahoma field. The Indians, now 14-4 for the season, drop to the loser's bracket and will face the IL Royals tonight at 5:30 at their home field.

MEDINAH, Ill. — Nick Faldo of Surrey, England, laughs on the practice green Wednesday at Medinah Country Club while prepping for the U.S. Open. Faldo finished second to Curtis Strange in the 1988 Open.

Heavy rains delay start of U.S. Open

MEDINAH, Ill. (AP) — Night-long rain and thundershowers delayed the start of today's opening round of the U.S. Open by a half hour, although the forecast called for clearing in the afternoon.

The first group of the day — Britt Tuttle, John Snyder and Jaime Gomez — teed off on the No. 3 course at Medinah Country Club at about 7:30 a.m. CDT rather than 7 a.m. as all tee times were pushed back by a half hour.

The National Weather Service forecast called for the rain, which began Wednesday evening, to stop by midmorning with temperatures in the high 80s. There was a chance of more showers this evening.

Curtis Strange, who won the last two Opens, was scheduled to tee off at about 9:32 a.m. CDT in a group with amateur Christopher Patton and Mark Calcavecchia, who won the 1989 British Open. Last year at Oak Hill Country Club in Rochester, N.Y., Strange became the first man since Ben Hogan in 1950-51 to win consecutive Opens.

Now, he begins four days of golf that could make him only the second man to win three in a row and the first in 85 years. Willie Anderson won the Open in 1903-05.

Softening caused by the rain was expected to help the golfers around the slick greens but also promised to make the course — at 7,195 yards already the longest in any Open — play even longer.

Nick Faldo of England, who has won the last two Masters, had a later tee time, about 2:01 p.m., in a group with Tom Watson and Payne Stewart, the defending PGA champion.

Jack Nicklaus was scheduled to tee off at 1:18 p.m., and Seve Ballesteros of Spain had a 1:43 tee time.

Blazers facing elimination

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers hope to spring a trap on the Detroit Pistons tonight.

The Trail Blazers, despite losing Game 4 112-109 on Tuesday night, rallied from a 16-point deficit in the third quarter to lead four times in the fourth period.

The rally was keyed by a trapping defense that temporarily rattled the experienced Pistons, who lead the best-of-7 NBA Finals 3-1 going into tonight's fifth game.

"We'll use the trap some more, although I don't know if it will work two games in a row," Portland coach Rick Adelman said. "It certainly disrupted them in the second half."

"The trap got them back into the game," said Vinnie Johnson, one of three hot-shooting guards who have the Pistons within one victory of repeating as champions. "It really had us confused, and I can't see them not using it again. It caught us off guard and it really slowed us down."

The Trail Blazers were trying not to sound shell-shocked Wednesday after losing two straight at home, where they were 44-6 going into the series.

"We're down but we're not out," said Clyde Drexler, Portland's most consistent player in the finals, with a 28-point scoring average. "We're a much better team than we're showing."

"We'll be ready to play because we all realize that this will be our last home game," center Kevin Duckworth said. "We have the feeling that there's no way we're going to lose three games in a row at home. I just don't see that happening."

"Detroit has the edge but we can't give up," Portland forward Buck Williams said.

U.S. decathletes look strong

NORWALK, Calif. (AP) — After a long lull in the decathlon, Americans appear ready to take their place back among the world's elite.

Led by Dave Johnson, they signaled their resurgence Wednesday night at the Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships at Cerritos College, where seven decathletes exceeded the 8,000-point barrier.

Cindy Greiner, the oldest competitor in the field at 33, took advantage of the absence of world record-holder Jackie Joyner-Kersee and won her second national heptathlon title.

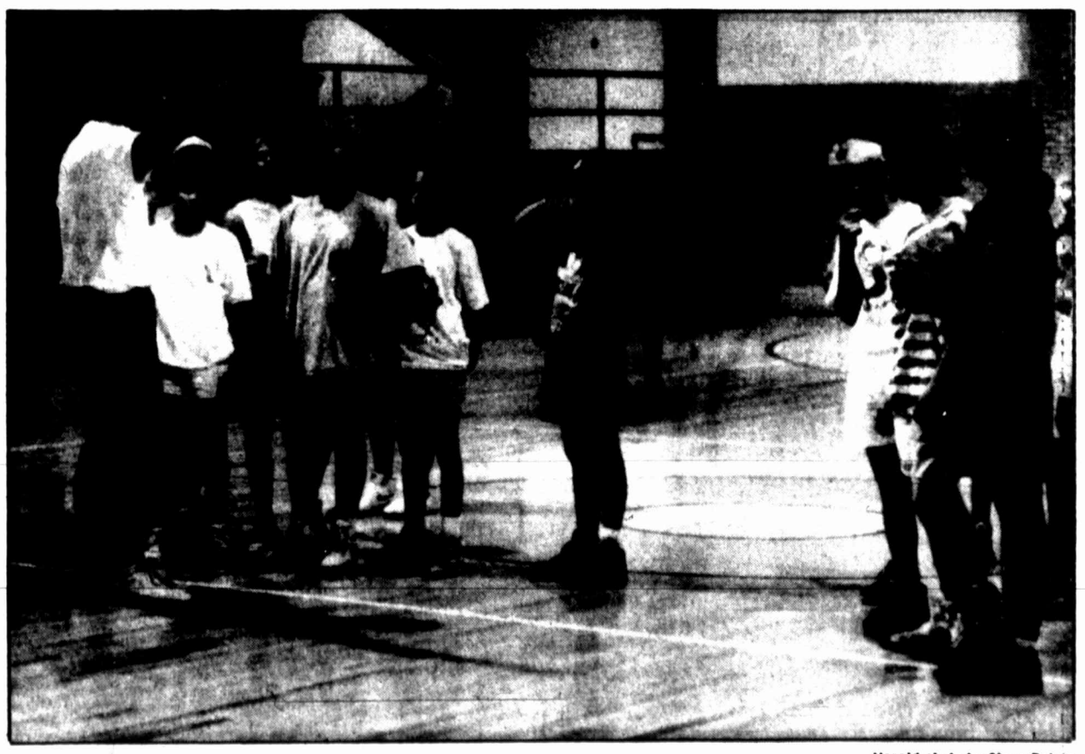

Greiner finished the two-day, seven-event competition with a wind-aided score of 6,262 points, leading a group of five over 6,000 — the first time that many Americans surpassed that total in the same meet.

Never before had more than five Americans decathletes scored more than 8,000 points in the same meet.

"The decathlon is back to the U.S.," Johnson said after winning his second straight national championship and third overall with 8,600 points, the second-highest score ever by an American.

"I think we made that impact today ... And we're going to have some big scores by '92."

The first four finishers automatically qualified for the U.S. team that will compete in next month's Goodwill Games.

HC women standing strong

BOZEMAN, Mont. — The situation hasn't changed much for the Howard College rodeo team as the College National Finals Rodeo concluded its third night.

Two Howard competitors performed Wednesday night. Robin Wardlaw scored a 9.7 in goat tying. "That (9.7) won't do anything. She missed on her breakway roping, so it really hasn't changed much for us as a team," said Howard coach Bobby Scott.

Jana Pierce was clocked in 4.0 in the breakaway first-go however. The fastest time in the first-go was a 2.5. "The best time was 2.5 and she's (Pierce) capable of doing that. The average is what we're looking at. If she puts together a faster time to go with that 4.0, she'll have a chance to make it to the short-go," said Scott.

In other action, defending national goat tying champion Patti O'Maley of Idaho State jumped into the lead of her specialty.

O'Maley, a junior from Shoshone, Idaho, had a time of 7.0 seconds to take the second go-round lead in goat tying. A slow time in the first go-round will prevent her from advancing to Saturday night's final round. The top 10 two go-round scores in each event advance to the Saturday championship round.

O'Maley was one of a handful of new leaders that emerged from the rodeo Wednesday at Montana State University's Brick Breeden Fieldhouse.

Buddy Reed of Western Texas College grabbed the second go-round lead in bull riding with an 86 score while Joey Gray of McNeese State took over the lead in the average of steer wrestling with a two-run time of 10.0 seconds. Gray had a 5.3-seconds run during Wednesday's performance.

The first go-round of bareback riding ended on Wednesday and Sean Stokes's score of 76 held up against the 75 ride of Richie Hamilton during the performance.

Giants pitcher just misses no-hitter

By The Associated Press

Doesn't it seem like every other day someone is pitching a no-hitter somewhere on the West Coast?

This time, it was Trevor Wilson's turn. He took one into the ninth inning Wednesday night, but lost it when Mike Pagliarulo led off with a clean single to right field.

NL

The 24-year-old Wilson balked Pagliarulo to second, then retired the final three batters for his first professional shutout as the San Francisco Giants beat the San Diego Padres 6-0.

"I didn't really expect to throw a no-hitter, so when it didn't happen it's not like a big panic," Wilson said. "I really wanted to get it but I guess I'll have to settle for the one-hitter."

Wilson (2-0) struck out nine, walked none and had allowed only one runner before Pagliarulo — Benito Santiago reached in the fifth when he struck out on a wild pitch.

Wilson was bidding for the fourth no-hitter in the major leagues this season, and second in three days.

Wilson said the crowd of 29,173 in San Diego let him know how he was doing.

"No one on the bench was saying anything about my pitching but the fans were," Wilson said. "They said, 'Hey, Trev, you've got a no-hitter going. Don't think about it.'"

Wilson was trying to become the first Giants' left-hander to pitch a no-hitter since Carl Hubbell on May 8, 1929. Wilson began the season at Triple-A Phoenix and was recalled on May 30 after Rick Reuschel was put on the disabled list.

Wilson's parents drove three hours from Ontario, Calif., to watch their son pitch. It was worth the trip.

"The kid over there is the story, not me," Pagliarulo said. "We lost."

Wilson admitted he got a little shaky when he started the ninth inning.

Matt Williams homered and drove in four runs. His RBI double off Ed Whitson (5-4) in the seventh inning broke a scoreless tie.

Astros 5, Dodgers 1

In Houston, the Astros extended their longest winning streak of the season to six as Glenn Davis hit his league-leading 19th homer. Davis' three-run shot tied him with Cesar Cedeno for second place on the team's all-time list with 163.

Los Angeles has lost three in a row and 12 of 16.

Mike Scott (4-6) gave up one run on three hits in seven innings. In his first start since striking out 15 against Cincinnati, he fanned seven and walked two.

Danny Darwin got his third save. Franklin Stubbs also homered against his former club, and Tim Belcher (4-4) took the loss.

Mets 15, Cubs 10
Mets 9, Cubs 6

In Chicago, New York took advantage of another windy day at Wrigley Field, getting 20 hits in the first game and 16 more in the second game. The doubleheader sweep came a day after the Mets routed Chicago 19-8.

Howard Johnson's grand slam capped a five-run ninth inning as the Mets rallied from an early five-run deficit to win the opener. They broke open the second game as pinch hitter Mark Carreon homered to cap another five-run ninth.

Daryl Boston went 6-for-10, scored five runs and drove in four during the day for the Mets. Johnson had five RBIs in the first game.

Ryne Sandberg hit two homers of Chicago's five home runs in the opener and added a three-run shot in the second game.

The Mets have won six of seven, scoring 72 runs and raising their team batting average 20 points to .257 in that span.

John Franco (3-0) won the opener and Ron Darling (2-4), starting for the first time since losing his spot in the rotation May 15, won the second game. Les Lancaster (5-3) and Mike Harkey (5-2) were the losers.

Reds 13, Braves 4

In Cincinnati, the Reds stopped their longest losing streak of season at five, pounding Steve Avery in his major-league debut.

Avery, one of the best minor-league pitching prospects in several years, gave up eight runs on eight hits and three walks in 2 1-3 innings.

Tom Browning (6-4) allowed eight hits in a complete game as the Reds won for only the second time in 10 games. He also contributed a two-run single during a seven-run third inning.

Cincinnati matched its season high with 13 runs and 18 hits. Glenn Braggs and Chris Sabo each got four hits.

Pirates 6, Cardinals 5

In St. Louis, three-time Gold Glove center fielder Willie McGee made three errors, helping Pittsburgh complete a three-game sweep.

White Sox have sight set on division leader

By The Associated Press

The surprising Chicago White Sox have proven to most of the American League that they are for real. Now they hope to convince the Oakland Athletics.

AL

After concluding a 5-1 road trip Wednesday with an 11-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners, the White Sox return home tonight to begin a four-game series with the two-time American league West champion A's, who lead them by a mere two games.

In other AL games, it was Oakland 3, Texas 2 in 11 innings; Kansas City 11, California 4; Toronto 10, Minnesota 1; Boston 4, New York 1; Milwaukee 7, Baltimore 2, and Detroit 5, Cleveland 4.

Dan Pasqua and Ron Kittle hit consecutive home runs in the third inning and Jack McDowell pitched a four-hitter for the White Sox, who had their biggest offensive game of the season with 16 hits.

Athletics 3, Rangers 2

Walt Weiss' single scored Doug Jennings with an unearned run with two out in the 11th inning. Jennings reached second when his two-out grounder went through the legs of first baseman Rafael Palmeiro. Weiss, batting .118 as a right-handed hitter, then dumped a soft fly into shallow right field off reliever Kenny Rogers (2-2). The Athletics are 5-0 in extra-inning games.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 1

Roger Clemens scattered six hits in eight innings to win his seventh straight decision and become baseball's first 11-game winner. Clemens (11-2) struck out eight and did not walk a batter before Jeff Reardon pitched a perfect ninth for his ninth save.

Tigers 5, Indians 4

Cecil Fielder, who hit his major-league-leading 23rd home run in the second inning, opened the eighth with a single off Rudy Seanez (1-1). Jesse Orosco relieved and pinch-runner Kenny Williams stole second, took third on pinch-hitter Tracy Jones' sacrifice and scored the tie-breaking run on Lloyd Moseby's single.

Brewers 7, Orioles 2

Dave Parker homered and drove in three runs as Milwaukee won for only the sixth time in 21 games. Parker drove in the Brewers' first run with a first-inning sacrifice fly, then hit his fifth homer of the season with Robin Yount on base via a single to give Milwaukee a 6-1 lead in the seventh. It came off Jose Bautista.

Blue Jays 10, Twins 1

Junior Felix, Glenallen Hill and Fred McGriff homered and left-hander John Cerutti held Minnesota's all-righty lineup to one run in seven innings-plus.

Public Notice

TO ALL FORMER AND CURRENT INTRASTATE WIDE AREA TELECOMMUNICATIONS SERVICE (WATS/800) SUBSCRIBERS:

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has instituted a Class Action Lawsuit seeking judicial approval of a settlement reached in Docket No. 7297, an inquiry of General Counsel of the Public Utility Commission of Texas into possible overcharges which occurred between September, 1976, and February, 1987, due to rounding practices, on bills of intrastate WATS/800 customers sent by Southwestern Bell and other telephone companies which concur in Southwestern Bell's tariff. The suit is styled "Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, Plaintiff, vs. MCI Telecommunications Corporation, A Member of the Class of Texas Intrastate WATS and 800 Service Customers Who Paid Overtime Charges From September 1976 Through February 1987, Defendant," and identified as Cause No. 471,460 in the 126th Judicial District Court of Travis County, Texas.

Pursuant to the settlement, while not admitting liability, Southwestern Bell, the other local exchange telephone companies in Texas, and AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. have agreed to pay refunds to those WATS/800 customers who paid overtime charges attributable to the rounding practices for intrastate WATS/800 services at any time between September, 1976, and February, 1987. The refunds will be based upon either the actual or estimated amount of overtime charges attributable to such rounding practices. An exact refund will be determined for customers able to produce copies of their WATS/800 service bills. For customers who do not have copies of their WATS/800 service bills to establish actual overtime charges paid, an average refund of $4.53 to $5.95 per WATS/800 service line per month will be applied. All claims will be subject to verification. The refunds will also include interest at the rate of 7.80% per annum.

Claim Forms And Additional Information

Those customers who think they may be entitled to a refund or who desire more information must call 1-800-782-3026, 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, or write to WATS Refund Pool Administrator, One Bell Plaza, Room 670, P. O. Box 650376, Dallas, Texas 75265-0376, to request a WATS Refund Information Package. The WATS Refund Information Package will contain further information regarding the lawsuit and eligibility for a refund, a description of documentation required to support a customer's claim for refund, and a refund claim form to be filled out and submitted requesting a refund. REQUESTING A WATS REFUND INFORMATION PACKAGE DOES NOT OBLIGATE YOU IN ANY WAY.

All claims for a refund must be received by the Refund Pool Administrator by Friday, October 5, 1990, and all rejections of the settlement (that is, requests for exclusion from the class action lawsuit) must be received by the Court by Wednesday, September 5, 1990. Only those who respond by filing a claim or by filing a rejection of the settlement, as explained in the WATS Refund Information Package, will receive notice of future developments in this proceeding.

Persons who wish to obtain further information may also contact the Public Utility Commission, Public Information Division, at (512) 458-0257 or (512) 458-1221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

Names in the news

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Dads in TV comedies should show a little more affection, says Bob Saget of ABC's "Full House."

Saget said he and other fathers in TV comedies are often insensitive incompetents because the basis for sitcoms is conflict, and the conflict often comes from the father needing help.

"For the show to work, you got to make him a goober sometimes," Saget said in the June 16 issue of TV Guide. "If the father's not a bit bumbling and the kids are not on top of it, where's the comedy?"

"It's my 40th birthday," Cummings joked during a Friday night bash in suburban Sherman Oaks for the star of "The Bob Cummings Show," "My Living Doll" and "My Hero."

Cummings' birthday was Saturday.

Among the celebrities on hand were Jane Withers, Pat Buttram, Jane Wyatt, Rose Marie, Buddy Rogers, Dick Van Patten and Margaret O'Brien.

Art Linkletter, a longtime buddy, said, "We have laughed our way around the world together a couple of times."

Museum acquires historical house

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
Staff Writer

The Martin County Historical Museum recently became proprietors of two-room house on Convent Street thanks to the generosity of the late Greata Mae Connell.

Ms. Connell died March 19.

The house was built by Carmelite priests as their residence around 1882. Twenty years later, homebuilder Dennis James (Charlie) Connell acquired the landmark after the priests found a larger building across the street.

That same year he married Mary Stoeger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stoeger. Stoeger was one of Stanton's leading benefactors in building the town and the Catholic church.

The Connell's moved to the little two-room cottage after their wedding and lived the rest of their lives there, adding to the residence as needed.

Eight children were born at this home. The four surviving youngsters — Maurice, Mamie, John and Greta Mae — grew up in Stanton and attended Our Lady of Mercy School.

Mamie married Herbert Tom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Tom. He was killed in a accident in 1930. Mamie worked at the First National Bank for many years and died in 1969.

Maurice, now a widower, is retired and still residing in Stanton. John married Winifred Deavenport, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brown Deavenport. They reside in Dallas.

Mrs. Mary Connell died in 1943 and Mr. Connell passed away six years later.

The historical landmark contains furnishings built by Connell and his sons. Memorabilia is also around to remind visitors of Martin County history.

The historical residence will be opened for the first time for public touring during the Old Settlers Reunion' celebration July 14, and will be opened on special occassions or by appointment.

The inner part of the house is probably the oldest structure in Stanton, local residents say.

S&L rescuers almost broke

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady told Congress today that the administration's savings and loan bailout could exhaust its borrowing authority as soon as the October-December quarter.

The Resolution Trust Corp., the 10-month-old agency responsible for cleaning up the S&L mess, "could, with an aggressive schedule of case resolutions, run out of funds by the end of this calendar year or early next year," Brady told the House Banking Committee.

His latest testimony followed by three weeks a dramatic increase in the administration's estimate of the cost of the S&L problem. Brady had roughly doubled the estimate to between $89 billion and $132 billion, after earlier insisting that $50 billion provided by Congress last year could cover most S&L losses.

Any estimate of how much more money is needed from taxpayers is "highly uncertain," Brady said, but a "representative range" for fiscal year 1991 beginning Oct. 1 would be "about $30 billion to slightly over $50 billion."

Veteran blasts Richards' flag stand

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Retired Army Col. Charlie Beckwith said in announcing the formation of a veterans group against flag burning he hoped a ban would provide a long time behind bars for flag burners.

Beckwith, the ground force commander in the ill-fated 1980 Iran hostage rescue attempt, also denounced Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards on Wednesday for not supporting a constitutional prohibition against burning the United States flag.

Beckwith said Ms. Richards had displayed an "insensitive and callous attitude" that "brings disgrace upon our great state, and is an insult to the men and women who have answered this nation's call and worn the uniform in its defense."

"We did not risk our lives to bring home the nation's flag so that Ann Richards and her Hollywood cohorts could use it as kindling for their liberal fire," Beckwith told a news conference that began with a pledge of allegiance to a U.S. flag held by another veteran.

After the Beckwith news conference, Ms. Richards issued a statement saying she does support a constitutional ban on flag desecration.

"I've always believed that the true spirit of the flag is protected by the First Amendment to the Constitution. I'm happy to support any amendment on flag burning that would strengthen the First Amendment," she said.

Although Beckwith had no specific recommendation for punishing someone who burns the flag, he said he hoped "they would

Texas Tech researcher 'under siege' in animal rights debate

By PETER ROPER
Washington Bureau

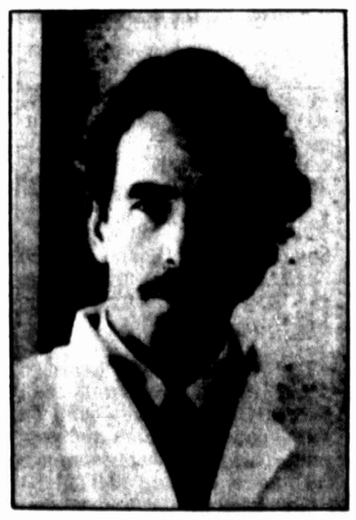

WASHINGTON — Texas Tech University researcher John Orem says he has been "under siege" by a national animal rights group — including death threats and hate mail — since activists broke into his Lubbock laboratory last July, wrecking equipment and freeing five cats used in research into breathing disorders.

The vandalism prompted Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, to draft legislation making such raids on animal research labs and farms a federal offense. A House agriculture subcommittee will consider the bill today, only days after 24,000 activists marched here to protest mistreatment of animals.

Orem says he is the victim of a "propaganda" campaign by the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) that includes harassing his family and forced him to send all his mail to university police for screening.

Orem argues that his research program, which is aimed at breathing disorders such as Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, has been inspected twice by federal officials since the July incident. Both the National Institutes of Health as well as the university's animal welfare committee approved his treatment of the cats in the laboratory, he said.

"But things have gotten out of hand when these people mail you dirty, used condoms and attach notes saying they hope you'll get AIDS," he said.

JOHN OREM

Ann Chynoweth, a spokeswoman for PETA, said Orem's research is a classic example of abusing animals in laboratories by depriving cats of sleep, attaching metal probes to their brains, and subjecting them other harsh conditions such as noxious gases and extreme cold.

"We intend to keep up our campaign against Texas Tech and Dr. Orem's work. We're pressing for a congressional investigation and we'll get one eventually," she said, adding that PETA successfully shut down animal research programs at the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Oregon.

As for Orem's claim that NIH officials have reviewed his work, Chynoweth said the federal agency has given him $1 million in grant money over the last 13 years and is not interested in finding problems with his program.

"It's NIH's same old tactic. It goes against human nature to expect the people who gave him the research money to then turn around and say his work is unacceptable," she said.

Chynoweth acknowledged that no one from PETA has ever inspected Orem's laboratory or has asked to do so. She said the group bases its accusations on videotape of experiments that were provided by the Animal Liberation Front, the group that took credit for vandalizing Orem's laboratory. PETA also relies on its own review of the "protocols" — or program outlines — that Orem must file with NIH as part of the grant process.

Chynoweth also pointed to an Agriculture Department report that cited Texas Tech — including Orem's laboratory — for more than 40 animal welfare violations.

"We've asked (university officials) to inspect Dr. Orem's laboratory, but they've never answered our letters," she said. "I don't think Dr. Orem would let us

Two local individuals recently received a scholarship from the Association Texas Professional Educators at the Stanton Middle School Cafeteria.

Ron Welch, a 1991 senior at Texas Tech University majoring in Exercise and Sports Science with a Health minor was one of the recipients, along with Connie Campbell, a 1990 senior at Angelo State University majoring in English with a minor in Spanish.

Campbell was selected Who's Who Among Students in American College Universities and a member of Engish as a Second Language endorsement. In order to qualify for the ESL, Campbell had to take 12 extra credit hours of English in order to teach the non-english speaking community.

She chose teaching as a career because of her involvement with kids. "I want to work with kids and my teachers really influenced me," Campbell said. "I want my student to enjoy what they are doing and make learning exciting. The atmosphere must really be good so one can learn."

Campbell plans include receiving her Masters in Education in Supervision or Counsel and Guidance. Campbell will receive her degreee from Angelo State in December. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Yardley of Stanton.

Welch chose teaching as his career because he would like to be coaching at the varisty level at a 4-A school. "I see myself as a head coach at a 4-A school and I will also be working towards a Masters degree in Education Administration with the hope of becoming a Superintendent or Principal," he said.

"I would really like to work with young people and I feel young people these days need good teachers because of the problems they face. I feel that I could be a good influence on them. I would also like to make the atmosphere fun, but a learning one."

put people away ... for a long period of time."

Beckwith, of Austin, said Veterans for a Constitutional Flag Amendment only had six or seven members, but added, "I suspect it's going to grow after today."

"We've tried the other courses of action to push something through and the Supreme Court has ruled that it won't wash so we're at the point now where we've got to amend the Constitution," Beckwith said.

"I cry when they bring this flag down at 5 o'clock in the afternoon," he said. "I feel very strongly about this flag. I almost gave my life for this flag. ... If they want to burn the flag, leave the country and go burn somebody else's — they're not going to burn mine."

Beckwith was asked if he supported Ms. Richards' Republican opponent, Clayton Williams.

"Clayton Williams doesn't have anything to do with this right here this morning. If he would ask me to, I'd probably do so (support him), but he doesn't have anything to do with this," Beckwith replied.

Ms. Richards' spokesman, Monte Williams, said Beckwith's criticism was off-base. "Ann Richards vehemently opposes flag burning. And I think Beckwith's political statements were clearly written for him by others," Monte Williams said.

Gordon Hensley, spokesman for Clayton Williams, said, "Ms. Richards has danced around on this issue so much, her position should be 'Read my hips.'"

Beckwith said, "We put people in jail ... for pouring poison on a tree but we won't put anybody in jail for burning our flag." Paul Cullen was recently sentenced to 9 years in prison for poisoning the centuries old Treaty Oak in Austin.

Former S&L owner indicted

DALLAS (AP) — Donald Dixon, the former owner of the collapsed Vernon Savings & Loan, surrendered to federal authorities this morning to face charges that he spent thousands of dollars in thrift money on pleasure trips, prostitutes and illegal contributions to politicians, including former House Speaker Jim Wright.

Dixon, 50, had an initial appearance before U.S. Magistrate John B. Tolle, who freed Dixon on a personal recognizance bond under an arrangement worked out by Dixon's attorney and federal prosecutors.

Dixon was indicted Wednesday on conspiracy, misapplication of funds, making false statements and other offenses.

He arrived at FBI offices in Dallas at about 9:30 a.m. CDT with his wife and attorney.

Dixon made no statement during the court appearance except to say that he understood the charges against him. He and his attorney returned to a U.S. Marshal's office immediately after the appearance.

A 38-count federal indictment Wednesday accused Dixon of conspiring with other Vernon officials to give money to Wright, then House speaker, and Kemp, then a Republican congressman from New York. Prosecutors have said that the candidates did not know the contributions were illegal.

Dixon is charged with conspiracy, misapplication of funds, making false statements and false entries, and interstate travel in aid of racketeering.

The indictment alleges the political contributions were made "for the purpose of currying favor and influence with them in anticipation of regulatory action by the Texas Savings and Loan Department and the Bank Board."

Dixon also is accused of encouraging employees to make political contributions and then reimbursed them with expense money or phony bonuses.

The indictment also alleges that Dixon misapplied funds for pleasure trips for Vernon officials.

Government attorneys say Vernon Savings is a prime example of abuse in the savings and loan industry.

The indictment was returned Wednesday after a 3½ year investigation. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh called it the most significant case developed by savings and loans investigators in the Dallas area.

Five other Vernon officials have pleaded guilty to various crimes in the $1.3 billion, 1987 collapse of the savings and loan. Former president Patrick G. King and former chairman Woody F. Lemons have been sentenced to prison for their part in the thrift's collapse.

"These complicated, white-collar crime cases take time to develop, but the Justice Department is committed to the investigation, prosecution and incarceration of those who ripped off our financial institutions and have left the taxpayers of the United States holding the bag," Thornburgh said in a prepared statement.

In January and March of 1985, Dixon used Vernon money to pay for hunting trips to Kansas and San Diego, Calif., with other senior Vernon officials and L. Linton Bowman III, then commissioner of the Texas Savings and Loan Department, the indictment said.

The trips, totaling $4,866, included costs for lodging, meals, female companionship and other expenses, the indictment said.

Three counts of the indictment allege Dixon submitted to Vernon Service Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary, a $10,500 bill for prostitutes at the June 1985 Vernon board of directors' party at Dixon's Solana Beach, Calif., beach house and on a yacht cruise in San Diego harbor.

Another count alleges Dixon used his airplane to promote an illegal activity — transporting prostitutes from Texas to California.

If convicted on all charges, Dixon faces 190 years in prison and $9.5 million fine.

Dixon's attorney, William Ravkind, did not immediately return a phone call to The Associated Press on Wednesday.

Dixon threw parties for other S&L operators aboard his yacht "High Spirits" when it was docked on the Potomac River in Washington to raise money for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, chaired by then-Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., the indictment said.

in even if we asked."

In an earlier conversation, Orem said he would be willing to demonstrate his work to PETA observers, but he had never received a request.

"But they're not interested in whether I conduct my research humanely. They don't believe animals should be used in research, period," he said.

Chynoweth agreed, saying PETA's philosophy is "animal experimentation is animal exploitation." She said the group intends to keep pressure on Orem and Texas Tech by grassroots organizing, letters, and advertising.

"We educate people about programs like Texas Tech's and when they get mad, they write letters. That's what PETA's for," she said.

Stenholm, however, balks at that philosophy and said animal experimentation is needed in medical research.

"My disagreement is not with animal rights advocates interested in established guidelines for proper animal care, but with extremists who insist that no circumstances exist under which we can morally differentiate between the value of the life of a human and that of an animal," he said.

His bill outlaws the theft of any animal from a research lab or farm. Violators would be liable to up to $10,000 in fines and up to three years in prison.

Critics say raids, like the Texas Tech raid, are already violations of state and local laws, making Stenholm's bill unnecessary.

Stenholm disagreed, saying organizations like the Animal Liberation Front are national groups that easily escape state jurisdiction. Orem, naturally, supports the bill.

"No one has been arrested for breaking into my lab, but I'm not surprised. There is a core group of radicals who are willing to do this and they travel around the country. That creates jurisdictional problems. But I think you'd see results if the FBI were involved from the beginning," he said.
