County puts issue of pari-mutuel betting to voters

■ Commissioners to let electorate decide on Nov. 8 whether to allow race track, gambling in city.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

For the second time since 1989, Midland voters on Nov. 8 will be casting ballots on a referendum to legalize pari-mutuel betting on horse-racing in Midland County.

A similar proposition failed five years ago when almost 54 percent of the Midland voters nixed legalized betting on horse racing in Midland County.

Betting on horse racing in Texas is legal in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, San Antonio, Houston, Austin, Lubbock, Bandera and near Fredericksburg in Gillespie County.

In Midland, any horse-racing track initially would be mainly for "emerging breeds," such as Arabians and Appaloosa and paints, Midland horse breeder-investor Lawrence Hahn told the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday.

Midland could become the national capital for "emerging breeds" on the race track, he said.

"Most of the betting is on thoroughbreds and quarter horses, anyway," Hahn said.

Thoroughbreds and quarter horses also would be raced here, as they are on Texas horse-racing tracks.

"We have a lot of ranchers and a lot of wealthy people (in Midland) who would like to have a track," Hahn said.

"I imagine there are more registered horses in West Texas than there are registered voters.

In Midland County alone, there are more than 52,000

Officials: New laws may clog county's court dockets, jails

Editor's note: This is the last in a three-part series on the justice system, which has been under increased public scrutiny.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

A batch of new laws went into effect Sept. 1 reducing many felony offenses to misdemeanors. Local law-enforcement and court officials agree that the reductions could cause jail overcrowding and overload court dockets.

Additionally, many of the crimes outlined in the laws call for mandatory probation and time in a state jail facility.

However, there are as yet no state jail facilities available in Texas, according to Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman.

The state jail facilities are under construction, according to 238th District Court Judge John G. Hyde. He said the jails were supposed to be built by the time the law went into effect, but the state is behind schedule.

Dettman said the state's stance is that by the time a criminal has been through the system under the new state laws, the state jail facilities should be built.

If they're not completed, the courts have a dilemma, Dettman said.

Hyde said the state jail felonies are, essentially, fourth-degree felonies — in between a misdemeanor and a third-degree felony. He said the state will now have three types of penal in-

Officers seize heroin, arrest three in sting

■ Surveillance effort leads to bust; police estimate drug's street value at $30,000.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Midland police officers seized about $30,000 in "black tar" heroin Monday after an surveillance effort led to the arrest of three people.

Midland patrol officers Arthur Villarreal, Sam Collins and Ladd Turner set up surveillance at a local hotel Monday morning after observing what they considered to be local narcotics dealers in the area, said Sgt. David Garcia.

The officers stopped a Ford pickup at about 9:43 a.m. on a traffic violation. The driver, 48-year-old Abel Maldonado of Odessa, was searched for weapons and a large amount of black tar heroin, so-called because of its color and consistency, was found in his right front pocket, Garcia said. He was then arrested.

More heroin was found in the cab of the pickup, which was registered in Odessa, bringing the total amount of heroin found to 2.1 ounces. Officers then arrested the vehicle's two other occupants, 47-year-old Marla Ann Dukes of Chicago, Ill., and 18-year-old Roy Michael Maldonado of Odessa.

Garcia said all three were charged with conspiracy for possession with intent to distribute heroin and possession with intent to distribute heroin. The charges were filed in federal court

White House plane crash stirs troubling security questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a bizarre and menacing breach of security, a despondent truck driver crashed a stolen plane on the White House lawn Monday where it cartwheeled against the mansion two floors below President Clinton's private quarters.

First lady Hillary Clinton looks over the wreckage from a White House balcony.

The pilot, killed in the twisted wreckage, was Frank Corder, 38. He was said to have a history of mental illness and alcohol abuse, and relatives described him as depressed over the breakup of his marriage and the death of his father.

Clinton and his family were not in the White House when the small, single-engine plane hit at 1:49 a.m. They were staying in a government guest house across the street because of renovation work at the White House. They returned to their White House residence Monday.

Rain chance, clouds cover day

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of rain, a high in the mid-80s and southeast winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be mostly cloudy with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 64, Monday's high reached 84, compared to the record high for that date of 101 set in 1930. The record low was 49 set in 1959.

STATE

Various forms of mildly wet weather splattered several parts of the state Monday, with the worst of it hitting in South Texas.

That region was very moist and unstable all day, with afternoon heating triggering scattered showers and thunderstorms. In the Corpus Christi area, a few thunderstorms produced short-lived funnel clouds and a few waterspouts.

Otherwise, all the tropical moisture has resulted in partly to mostly cloud skies around South Texas.

Afternoon temperatures were in the 80s to near 90, except for 70s in the rain-cooled spots.

The forecast calls for partly to mostly cloudy skies overnight with lows in the 70s. Scattered showers and thunderstorms expected mainly in the evening.

NATION

Thunderstorms dumped rain on much of the central United States and Gulf Coast region on Monday, while strong winds swept through the Southwest.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms developed behind a front that stretched from Minnesota to central Colorado. Some storms dropped heavy rain across portions of the Upper Mississippi Valley.

Parts of southern Minnesota got more than 2 inches of rain. In North Dakota, a thunderstorm dropped more than 1½ inches of rain in an hour.

The mercury dipped into the 60s and 70s across much of the rest of the nation.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

STIRS: Plane crash raises security worries

(From 1A)

No shots were fired as Corder flew near the Washington Monument and then banked the plane toward the South face of the White House. Security agents spotted it only at the last second, with just "enough time to run for cover," Secret Service spokesman Carl Meyer said. "I don't think there was all that much time, to be quite honest with you."

The Secret Service refused to speculate on Corder's motive but said the intrusion "does not appear to be directed toward the president." No bombs or weapons were found in the wreckage, the agency said. Meyer said it was possible Corder was trying to land the plane, not crash it.

The Secret Service was looking into whether there was any connection between the president's trip Sunday to Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland and his mention of the nearby Perry Point Veterans Hospital, where Corder once underwent alcohol detoxification treatment.

The Secret Service launched an immediate review of whether security procedures were followed and how the pilot made his way unchallenged through prohibited air space. Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, whose department oversees the Secret Service, said the review would look at the adequacy of procedures to protect the president and first family.

"We take this incident seriously," Clinton said, "because the White House is the people's house and it's the job of every president who lives here to keep it safe and secure."

Slamming into the South Lawn, Corder's plane tumbled across the White House driveway and sliced through a gnarled magnolia tree planted by President Andrew Jackson. It came to rest against the White House at the window of the White House physician's office, just below the State Dining Room, about 50 yards from the Oval Office.

White House security was immediately tightened. Pennsylvania Avenue, which Clinton has been crossing each day between Blair House and the White House, was closed for most of the day.

One witness said the plane was silent as it went over the White House fence, as if its engines had died or been turned off. It flew that way for several hundred yards before hitting the lawn.

It was the worst breach of White House security since 1976 when a man tried to ram a beat-up pickup truck through the White House gate. He was stopped by the steel bars. Two years earlier, an Army private stole a helicopter and landed it on the White House South Lawn. The soldier was hit by shotgun fire.

The wreckage of a small plane lies next to the White House Monday. The pilot was killed in the crash.

"This has been quite an unusual day here at the White House," Hillary Rodham Clinton told a group of guests. Before the wreckage was carted off, she was seen peering at it from a balcony.

The plane, a red and white, two-seat Cessna 150 trainer, was stolen Sunday evening from a small airfield in Harford County near Baltimore. Witnesses said it flew into Washington from the north, turned near the Washington Monument and circled back toward the White House.

A relative said Corder had never been in trouble with police and had no strong political beliefs. The Secret Service said he had a history of mental illness but also said that could include drug and alcohol problems. Relatives said he was a self-employed trucker.

However, Corder was sentenced to 18 months probation in March for a marijuana possession charge in Baltimore and was convicted last year in Howard County of drunken driving, Leonard Sipes, spokesman for the Maryland Department of Public Safety and Corrections, said.

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., a close friend of Clinton's, expressed surprise that a plane could get to the White House, given the millions of dollars spent on protection. "The security's been paid for and I just don't know why it did not function. Maybe it malfunctioned," he said.

Bentsen said, "We are always concerned when the issue of the president's safety is involved." He said, "The Secret Service is studying procedures right now, but we need to get more facts to fully understand what happened."

One White House official said 14 seconds elapsed between the time the plane entered the restricted zone and the crash but the Secret Service refused to confirm that.

'It just proves you can make all the plans in the world and there's nothing you can do to plan against a lunatic who doesn't think rationally.'

— Patrick Porter, an Oregon tourist outside White House

Sharpshooters are routinely stationed on the White House roof, and security forces have been reported to be armed with shoulder-fired Stinger anti-aircraft missiles.

Typically, a plane straying into the restricted air space would be detected by radar, and law enforcement officials would be notified. Meyer suggested a plane wouldn't be spotted if it were flying at treetop, as Corder's was, and the plane's transponder was turned off. The transponder identifies a plane in response to a radar signal.

Radar readings are recorded, and the National Transportation Safety Board said it was collecting the records to see what signals had been picked up.

Treasury Under Secretary Ron Noble, charged with leading the review of security procedures, said much of the information about the case could not be divulged.

Asked directly how such an intrusion could occur, Noble said, "That's precisely the sort of question I can't answer. ... Just as if you had a security measure or alarm system in your house, you wouldn't give me the code for it, I'm not here going to give you at this point any specific answers until I complete the review."

Clinton was awakened at 2:35 a.m. and notified of the crash by chief of staff Leon Panetta.

Meyer described a scene of frantic uncertainty as the plane approached, with officers trying to alert their command center by radio that a plane was coming in.

"The first thing we had to determine was, what was the situation? I mean, was this just a plane that ran out of gas, did somebody have a heart attack? We just didn't have a good sense of what was involved here. Or, was it a diversion, was something going to come?"

He said an emergency plan was put into action, notifying fire and rescue units and summoning bomb experts.

Relatives think it was suicide

PERRY POINT, Md. (AP) — His marriage had just fallen apart, his father had died of cancer and he had problems with drugs and alcohol — and he had talked of suicide.

It all caused Frank Corder's relatives to say it was not politics but a determination to end his life that motivated him to steal a small plane in the middle of the night, fly it to Washington and crash it on the White House lawn.

"He did this to destroy himself," said an aunt, Edith Dishman.

"Frank has been down on drugs and alcohol before. He told me that sometimes ... he just wished he had a gun," added a cousin, Dee George.

Corder, 38, who worked as a self-employed freight truck driver and had a student pilot license, died in the crash.

John Corder, of Aberdeen, Md., said his brother may have been trying to emulate Mathias Rust, a 19-year-old German pilot who landed a small plane in Red Square on May 28, 1987.

"One time he mentioned about the guy that landed in Red Square and how that guy made a big thing for himself and everything landing in Red Square, and the Kremlin," John Corder said.

On the other hand, The Washington Post quoted John Corder as saying his brother had spoken in a phone call a year ago of a desire to crash a plane into the White House. "He said, 'If I'm going to check out, that's the way I'm going to do it. I'm going to crash a plane into the White House.' We thought it was a joke."

BOOKS: Voters to decide horse-racing issue

registered voters, according to the Midland County Elections Administration Office.

"This would, at least, be better than the lottery," said Hahn, who is president of Inland Resources, an oil-and-gas company, in Midland. "It wouldn't hurt anybody in town; it would be in the country" somewhere near Interstate Highway 20.

Hahn said the track would be another revenue-generating "industry" for Midland. "It would be a good thing for Midland and this part of the country."

The Commissioners' Court voted 5-0 to place the proposition on the November general election ballot to let the electorate decide whether or not to allow betting on race horses in Midland.

"This court is not endorsing this proposal," said County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer, but merely is allowing the people to express their views on gambling on race horses.

Commissioner Henry Goulet said he agreed with Hahn. Horse racing "would be something real great for Midland County," Goulet said.

Commissioner Guy McCrary didn't express similar enthusiasm.

"The history of this (pari-mutuel betting) around the state hasn't been all together favorable," said McCrary, who noted that he was "quite aware" of the high-degree of interest in horses in Midland County.

However, McCrary said that "It doesn't seem that gambling and horse-racing fit our community."

Hahn said if "the public votes it (pari-mutuel betting) down, that will be the end of it."

The horse track would be a private venture and "no tax dollars (would be) invested in the race track," Hahn said.

However, tax dollars would be generated by the race track, as they are elsewhere in Texas, noted Winfred Kang, a revenue analyst with Texas State Comptroller's Office in Austin.

A variable-rate state tax would apply to all money placed on races, Kang said. A 1 percent tax would be charged up to $100 million in bets. After that, the rate goes up one percentage point per $100 million in bets.

Were the track within the Midland city limits, both the city and the county would get a 15-cent fee per admission ticket. Outside the city, the county would get a 15-cent fee per ticket sold.

Pari-mutuel betting on race horses in Texas was authorized in the mid-1980s, but each county must vote on legalizing it.

In Texas, there are four major horse-racing tracks: Trinity Meadows in Fort Worth; Lone Star Jockey Club in Grand Prairie; Sam Houston Race Park in Houston, and Retama Race Park in San Antonio. Trinity Meadows and Sam Houston are in operation. Lone Star and Retama are under construction.

Other tracks are Manor Downs in Austin, Bandera Downs in Bandera, and Lubbock Downs, which is close to opening.

A seasonal race track is in operation at the Gillespie County Fair near Fredericksburg.

The tracks are regulated by the Texas Horse Racing Association.

"It's entertainment," Hahn said of horse-racing following his appearance before the Commissioners' Court. "It's gives the economy a boost. To me, I think it beats the lottery. And I think it can be a lot of fun."

The one-mile track would be on about 100 acres, while the race-track park would take in up to 300 acres, Hahn said.

In 1988, Hahn had asked the Commissioners' Court to place the horse-racing issue on the ballot, but the court denied that request in a 1-2 vote. Then-Commissioner Scott Welch voted to put the issue on the ballot. Commissioners Win Brown and Guy McCrary voted against taking it to the voters.

In the next year, Midlander Ada Thorne, armed with a petition carrying 624 names, succeeded where Hahn had failed a year earlier. But Midland voters in the November 1989 general election rejected pari-mutuel betting on horse-racing in Midland County.

■ Bullet from shore hits tourist on boat

NEW YORK — A bullet fired from shore hit a German tourist Monday on a sightseeing boat circling the island of Manhattan.

The victim was taken to a hospital in the borough of the Bronx after a 180-degree turn and an emergency stop. Rolf Bolowski was listed in stable condition with a gunshot wound to the back.

Bolowski, 31, of Hamburg, Germany, never lost consciousness. He and his wife were on the boat's upper deck when he was hit. The boat carrying 305 people was on the Harlem River, north of Manhattan.

It was unclear if the shooting was a stray bullet or was fired at the boat intentionally, said Detective Joseph McConville.

■ House agrees to restrict foreign gas

WASHINGTON — The House agreed Monday to restrict imports of gasoline that may not meet U.S. environmental standards.

The House, in a 222-148 vote, went along with a Senate amendment that bars the Environmental Protection Agency from changing rules on pollutant levels so foreign refineries can sell gasoline in the United States.

The amendment, supported by both the oil industry and some environmentalist groups and mainly affecting imports from Venezuela, was attached to the Senate version of a $90 billion spending bill.

■ First civil trial in Tailhook scandal begins

LAS VEGAS — Four men and four women were chosen to decide the first lawsuit arising from the 1991 Tailhook convention, a raucous gathering that rocked the Navy establishment when its debauchery was revealed.

The jury was selected Monday morning as trial began in the case between a former naval officer and the Las Vegas Hilton, where the Tailhook Association staged its annual gathering.

Paula A. Coughlin, who won a settlement from the Navy and the aviators group last week, contends the hotel was negligent for allowing her to be fondled and groped during boisterous parties at the convention.

Coughlin, 32, was an admiral's aide when she attended the convention. The ex-lieutenant's revelations of lewd, drunken behavior by the military's elite pilots ignited a political firestorm in the Navy.

Coughlin seeks unspecified damages from the Las Vegas Hilton and Hilton Hotel Corp. Terms of her settlement with the Tailhook Association weren't disclosed.

■ Republican leaders call for congressional debate on resolution that authorizes commitment of U.S. forces.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Seventeen countries, including three NATO allies, Israel and far-off Bangladesh, have pledged a combined minimum of 1,500 troops to assist a U.S.-led invasion of Haiti, the State Department said Monday.

Meanwhile, Republican leaders said Congress should debate a resolution authorizing the commitment of U.S. forces to an invasion.

And Pentagon officials announced that, as part of an ongoing buildup, two aircraft carriers are being readied to carry troops and special forces into Haiti, should an invasion be ordered.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the commitments of the 17 countries are a "strong indication of the resolve of the international community to join us in seeking the restoration of democracy in Haiti."

The administration has been pushing hard to recruit troops to join American forces in liberating Haiti after three years of military dictatorship. Current planning calls for the deployment of about 20,000 U.S. troops.

The 17 countries, some of which had been announced previously, are: Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, The Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Bolivia, Dominica, Guyana, Israel, Jamaica, The Netherlands, Panama, St. Vincent, Trinidad and the United Kingdom.

The non-U.S. personnel would be sent to Haiti after the initial invasion force — virtually all U.S. personnel — establishes a "secure environment."

Other officials said the actual contributions of the 17 probably will exceed 1,500, mostly military forces and police.

Speaking to reporters at the State Department, Christopher said the administration, in seeking to reinstate deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, is pursuing the same goal sought by President Bush.

But Republicans, while favoring that goal, generally have opposed to the use of American force to achieve it.

Monday a group of Republican leaders sent a letter to House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, saying there is "ample time" to debate the Haiti invasion question since the United States and its citizens are not immediately threatened.

Signing the letter were Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., Minority Whip Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., and Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga.

The Republicans noted that the Bush administration received prior approval for launching Operation Desert Storm to liberate Kuwait from Iraqi invaders.

"President Bush took a risk in coming to Congress, but the U.S. policy was immeasurably strengthened after the congressional votes in support of authorizing force in the Persian Gulf," the Republicans wrote.

Survey: Public sours on main actors in debate on health care

N.Y. Times News Service

Most Americans still say they want a major change in their health-care system, but the long struggle on the issue has left them in a sour and skeptical mood, with a diminished view of many of the major players, according to the latest New York Times/CBS News Poll.

The new survey found the public casting blame all around for the difficulties in passing major health-care legislation. Fifty-eight percent said they blamed both Congress and President Clinton equally. Two-thirds said Republicans opposed Clinton's health plan for political gain, not because of honest disagreements.

Only 40 percent said they approved of Clinton's handling of the health-care issue, down 12 percentage points from his rating after he formally unveiled his plan last September. And the unfavorable ratings of Sen. Bob Dole, the Republican leader who has been one of the most persistent critics sof the Democrats' approach, rose 10 percentage points during the same time frame, to a level last recorded by this poll in his unsuccessful 1988 campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

Hillary Rodham Clinton, who headed the health-care task force, took her share of the heat in what has become a fiercely partisan debate: A year ago, when she was carrying the plan to Congress in the first heady days of the drive to overhaul the nation's health-care system, twice as many Americans viewed the first lady favorably as unfavorably. Now the balance is almost even: 33 percent see her positively, 28 percent negatively.

The new poll was conducted by telephone last Thursday through Sunday, just before Congress returned to Washington for a final month of legislative business before the midterm elections — including one last effort to pass a modest health-care bill. The poll, based on interviews with 1,161 adults nationwide, has a margin of sampling error of plus or minus three percentage points.

Congress resumed work on Monday with Democratic leaders still expressing hope that a modest bill could be passed before the elections. Sen. George J. Mitchell of Maine, the majority leader, said he would meet later this week with Sen. John H. Chafee, the Rhode Island Republican who leads the self-styled mainstream coalition, to see if they could still work out a bipartisan deal. The poll suggests a majority still hope that something can be passed this year.

It also suggests that attitudes on health care are just part of a dangerous electoral landscape for incumbents this fall.

CROWD: Officials feel new laws could overload jails, dockets

stitutions: prisons, county jails and state jails.

Under state jail felony law, judges are required to give probation. No prison sentence may be assessed and the length of probation is from a minimum of two years to a maximum of five years, Dettman said.

In the case of a first-time felony offender, the judge may require the defendant serve up to 60 days confinement in a state jail facility as a term of probation, the county attorney said.

Dettman said that for a repeat offender, the judge may require the defendant serve up to 180 days in a state jail facility. For offenses involving the sale or delivery of heroin, cocaine or LSD, the judge may require the defendant serve up to one year in a state jail facility.

Because these state jail felonies require mandatory probation, law-enforcement and court officials believe crime will increase and court dockets will overload.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said some crimes are, in essence, being "decriminalized" through the reduction in punishment and this will back up the jail again.

Painter said the reductions will "triple the number of prisoners in the jail here.

"With so many crimes reduced in penalties, rather than going to the pen, they will spend their time in the county jail," he said.

"There will be many more people on probation and they'll violate their terms and we'll have to go pick them up," Painter said.

He said the Legislature reduced the penalties for these offenses to reduce prison overcrowding, but gave little regard for jail overcrowding.

Dettman agreed the Legislature made the moves to solve the state prison overcrowding problem.

The county attorney theorizes that the state Legislature had two options — either build more prisons "to put people in jail who belong in there and satisfy people by keeping them in there for full sentence or pass the job on to counties and decriminalize."

"The Legislature is damaging our society by making certain crimes affordable to the criminal," Painter said.

He called the reduction in penalties a "pat on the hand."

Dettman said he doesn't think the reductions will cause crimes to decrease, but to increase.

"Now, there is less of a deterrent. . . . There is no longer any incentive not to commit crimes," Dettman said.

"If this is our hard stance on crime we're kind of missing the boat," said Midland police spokesman Sgt. David Garcia.

Garcia said he understands the prison overcrowding problem, but doesn't believe certain felony crimes should be reduced to misdemeanors.

"We're sending out the wrong message to criminals that it's OK to commit certain crimes," the police spokesman said.

On the court side of the issue, two of Midland's three district judges believe the mandatory probation terms will burden the court system with more trials on an already-overcrowded docket.

"With state jail felonies having mandatory probation, whether the defendant enters a guilty plea or goes to trial, I believe more people are going to want to have trials to determine if they can win an acquittal or not," 142nd District Court Judge George "Jody" Gilles said.

Gilles said these additional trials, which were handled as pleas before the law went into effect, will slow the system down even more.

"I will be delightfully surprised if it affects the system the other way," Gilles said.

238th District Court Judge John G. Hyde said he also believes it will increase the court load because of the state jail penalties.

Under the state jail penalties and mandatory probation, it will entice more defendants to have their cases go to trial, especially if the most the defendant can get is probation, Hyde said.

Hyde said he believes the new laws also will overload the county courts with vehicle burglary cases.

318th District Court Judge Dean Rucker said he thinks it is too early to tell what kind of effect it will have on the district courts.

Despite the large number of felonies reduced to misdemeanors and state jail felonies with mandated probation, there are a few crimes in which the penalties have been increased.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre said he believes the biggest effect of the new laws is that violent offenders will have to serve about one-half of their sentences before becoming eligible for parole.

COST: City allots more than $4 million for justice al costs for administering justice were $4,039,600, less than the allotted budget of $4,072,000.

This figure includes all levels of courts, from the justice of the peace to the district courts. It does not include the costs of court-appointed attorneys' fees.

When those figures are added the total is $4,661,644.

Seltzer said that for fiscal year 1993, $400,000 was budgeted for court-appointed attorney's fees. However, the actual cost was $622,044.

Most of this money goes to court-appointed criminal defense attorneys, Seltzer said. The rest goes to attorneys appointed in child-protective services cases, commitment cases and juvenile cases.

The county judge said the county pays the bill for judges' secretaries, bailiffs and court reporters.

The state pays all district court judges' salaries except for $4,200 a year for each judge, which the county supplements. The state also pays for two county court-at-law judges, who are paid $1,000 a year less than district court judges; the county makes up that difference as well.

Seltzer said the state pays the salaries of the district attorney, who gets $1,000 a year less than the district judges.

The assistant district attorneys and district attorney's investigators are paid by the county.

The state provides salary supplements, which the district attorney passes out at his discretion, Seltzer said.

A state grant funds a drug prosecutor and his secretary within the district attorney's office. The Victim Witness Program is funded partially by a state grant and the rest is paid by the county, Seltzer said.

The county attorney and his staff are all paid by the county; salary supplements are provided through the "hot check fund."

Seltzer said the public's perception that judges and prosecutors are overcompensated for their duties is a misconception.

"It's not uncommon for the lowest-paid attorney in the courtroom to be the prosecutor and sometimes the judge," Seltzer said, "In a civil case in district court or county court-at-law, the lowest-paid attorney will be the judge."

Costs for trials

Criminal trial costs — which are paid by the county — can range widely depending upon the complexity and length of the trials.

More than 90 percent of criminal cases are disposed of through plea bargains, so the overwhelming court costs are mostly generated by high-profile cases such as murder or capital murder (a murder committed during another crime).

Judge John G. Hyde of the 238th District Court selected several murder and capital-murder trials from the past couple of years and explained how much specific cases have cost.

Hyde said he took several factors into consideration in calculating the costs:

- salary for county staff of prosecutors and investigators and cost of scientific testing for the prosecution;
- court costs including bailiff and court reporter;
- jury fees and expenses for payment, snacks and meals;
- court-appointed attorney's fees, court-appointed investigator's fees, independent scientific testing and witness fees;
- cost of court reporter transcribing statement of facts of the trial for appeal;
- cost of the district clerk preparing the official papers for the transcript as well as the staff salaries for sitting in on the trial; and
- cost of appeal for the court-appointed attorney and the district attorney's time responding to appeals.

Hyde has presided over the capital murder trials of Terrence Lee, Curtis Purser, Ramsey Blake Harrell and Michael Scott Thomas.

The first capital-murder trial in 1993 began in January with the trial of Lee. He was convicted of the July 6, 1992, shooting death of a taxicab driver.

The state sought the death penalty in the case, but the jury gave Lee a life sentence instead. The cost of that trial, to date, is approximately $75,000 to $80,000. This doesn't include the appeals, which are still pending.

The second capital-murder trial of 1993 occurred in April when Purser was convicted in the Nov. 13, 1991, death of church secretary Brenda Branch. She was stabbed 36 times.

The state sought the death penalty in this case as well, but the jury again rendered a sentence of life in prison.

The Purser trial has cost $285,000 to $300,000 to date. That trial involved a lengthy questioning of potential jurors and sequestering of the jury overnight at one point in the trial. An appeal is still pending.

Two capital-murder cases were tried in 1994 with neither yielding a capital-murder conviction.

Harrell was found guilty of a lesser charge of murder for the April 14, 1993, shooting death of hairdresser Tommy Musick. Harrell shot Musick four times in the back of the head. He was sentenced to 12 years in prison. His trial is estimated to have cost between $40,000 and $50,000.

Thomas, Harrell's accomplice, was convicted of aggravated robbery in the crime. He was sentenced to nine years in prison. His trial is estimated to have cost $25,000 to $30,000, not including appeals.

In comparison to the costs of the capital-murder trials, the cost of trying a murder case is much less.

Two murder cases in particular illustrate this fact.

Gilbert Rivera was convicted in September 1992 for the Feb. 25, 1992, shooting death of his estranged, pregnant wife. He was sentenced to life in prison. His trial is estimated to have cost $11,000 to $14,000.

William Allan Ross was convicted in May 1992 for the Oct. 19, 1990, stabbing death of a man in the parking lot of a local nightclub. He was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter and sentenced to 20 years in prison. His trial cost an estimated $6,000 to $7,000.

"It is significantly more expensive to try a capital-murder case than a murder case," Seltz-

INJUSTICE FOR ALL

Legal process path is long, full of details

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

The time between when a crime is committed until a suspect is arrested, goes through the courts and serves a jail sentence or probation, can be lengthy. But, it is all in the name of justice.

The justice process consists of three major steps: action before court, court hearings and after court.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre has created a pamphlet called "Your District Attorney's Office," which details the duties of the district attorney's office and the multiple steps involved in the justice system. Most of the following information was taken from that pamphlet.

To summarize steps involved in the justice process is much like the court system itself — not very brief and loaded with details.

Once a crime has been reported or detected, an investigation is started by the law-enforcement agency having responsibility. If the investigation leads to a suspect, the officers may arrest the person, take him into custody.

The suspect is then booked. This process involves recording the suspect's name, race, gender, date of birth and other identification information, photographing and fingerprinting.

The suspect is taken before a magistrate — usually a justice of the peace — who informs him of the charges and of his rights under the Constitution. Bail is set.

Some minor offenses are disposed of before the magistrate, but in felony cases, the next step is either before the grand jury or at an examining trial.

If the grand jury "true bills" the case, it is formally put on the docket of the district courts. The defendant may then plead guilty or not guilty.

Following is a more detailed explanation of each of the three steps to the disposition of a criminal case.

Before court action

Several important steps in the criminal justice process occur before any formal court hearings in a felony case. These stages include arrest, examining trial and presentation to a grand jury.

When an investigation results in the law-enforcement agency having probable cause to believe that a certain person has committed a felony offense and there is evidence to prove that fact, the case is ready for filing.

If the case is legally sufficient, a complaint is filed and the investigating agency obtains an arrest warrant from a judge. In most cases, this arrest warrant — which can only be obtained upon a showing of probable cause — is the basis for the suspect's arrest.

The investigating police agency then attempts to locate and arrest the person named in the arrest warrant and, if located, place that person in custody. The suspect is then booked and processed.

The suspect thus becomes a defendant and may be released from custody by posting bond to secure payment of bail if he fails to appear for later court hearings. Bail bonds usually are obtained from a commercial bail bond company upon payment of a fee.

The defendant may hire an attorney to defend him, or if unable to pay for legal representation, may ask the district court to appoint counsel at county expense. In either case, the defendant may request an examining trial up to the date on which the grand jury acts on his case.

In some counties, examining trials are frequent, but in Midland County they are rare. If an examining trial is held, the state must present evidence that an offense was committed and that this defendant committed it. If the examining court finds this burden has been met, the case is bound over for grand jury consideration. If the court does not believe there is probable cause in the case, it is dismissed.

When a suspect is indicted by the grand jury, a legal document charging a felony offense is prepared and filed in the district clerk's office. This indictment is the formal statement of what the state must prove and of what the defendant will be required to defend against.

Court hearings

This portion of the criminal justice process is perhaps most familiar to the public because of its portrayal in movies and television programs. It is at the court hearing that the defendant's guilt or innocence is determined and, if found guilty, punishment assessed.

Within two weeks after indictment, the defendant is called to court for arraignment. This is a court hearing at which the district judge reads the indictment to the defendant, determine whether he has an attorney, and determine a preliminary plea. Many defendants who have attorneys by this stage file what is called a waiver of arraignment, which dispenses with any formal action in court.

Several weeks after arraignment, the case is scheduled for a pretrial hearing. At this stage, preliminary motions regarding evidence may be heard, and the defendant is expected to have an attorney and to announce whether he wants a trial or will plead guilty. This is often the first stage at which the assistant prosecutor handling the case learns whether the charges will be contested by a trial.

It is seldom necessary for a victim or witness to appear for the earlier stages in the process, but at some pretrial hearings, this is required. Advance notice of at least a week is usually given.

If the defendant announces a plea of guilty, a date is elected for the hearing on the plea, which is heard by a district judge. The date is usually several weeks beyond the pretrial date. A letter is sent by the district attorney's office to notify the victim of the case disposition. Except in unusual cases, subpoenas are not issued for witnesses if the defendant is pleading guilty to a judge.

Schorre said that 90 percent of all cases settle without going to trial.

If a contested trial is announced at pretrial, the case is scheduled on the trial docket for several weeks afterward. Texas law provides that either the state or the defense may insist upon a jury trial as to guilt, but the defendant may select either a judge or jury to determine his punishment if found guilty. The same law provides for two stages of the trial — one on guilt or innocence and one on punishment.

If a jury hears the case, the two stages are held consecutively. However, if the judge assesses punishment, the case often is recessed between the two stages for an investigation to assist the judge in setting punishment.

Sentencing — which is the judge's formal order regarding punishment — generally is entered immediately following trial. If the sentence is confinement in the Department of Corrections, the defendant may remain free in some cases if an appeal is filed. If probation is granted, the sentence is suspended and the defendant is released from custody subject to rules and conditions imposed by the judge.

If a defendant subsequently violates a rule or condition established by the court as a condition of probation, a motion may be filed alleging the violation and the judge holds a hearing to determine whether the defendant is guilty of a violation.

Although by no means automatic, the judge may then enter a finding of violation and send the defendant to the Department of Corrections. The fact of a violation must be established by a preponderance of the evidence, a lesser burden than at the original trial of a case.

After the court hearings

The major stages in the criminal justice process after the court hearings involve the correctional process. These include probation, confinement, parole and pardon.

Many people confuse the terms probation, parole and pardon.

Probation — which is known as community supervision in Midland County — is under the control of the court where the conviction occurred. It is subject to supervision by probation officers, who are under the direction of a chief probation officer in each county or judicial district in the state.

The trial court judge grants probation and can take it away upon proof of violation of the conditions under which it was granted.

As a general rule, the person granted probation does not serve time in prison even though convicted of a felony offense. The exception is in cases where the judge uses what is called shock probation — which involves sending the defendant to the Department of Corrections for 60 to 180 days, then returning him to the community on probation. This is normally available only to young, nonviolent first offenders.

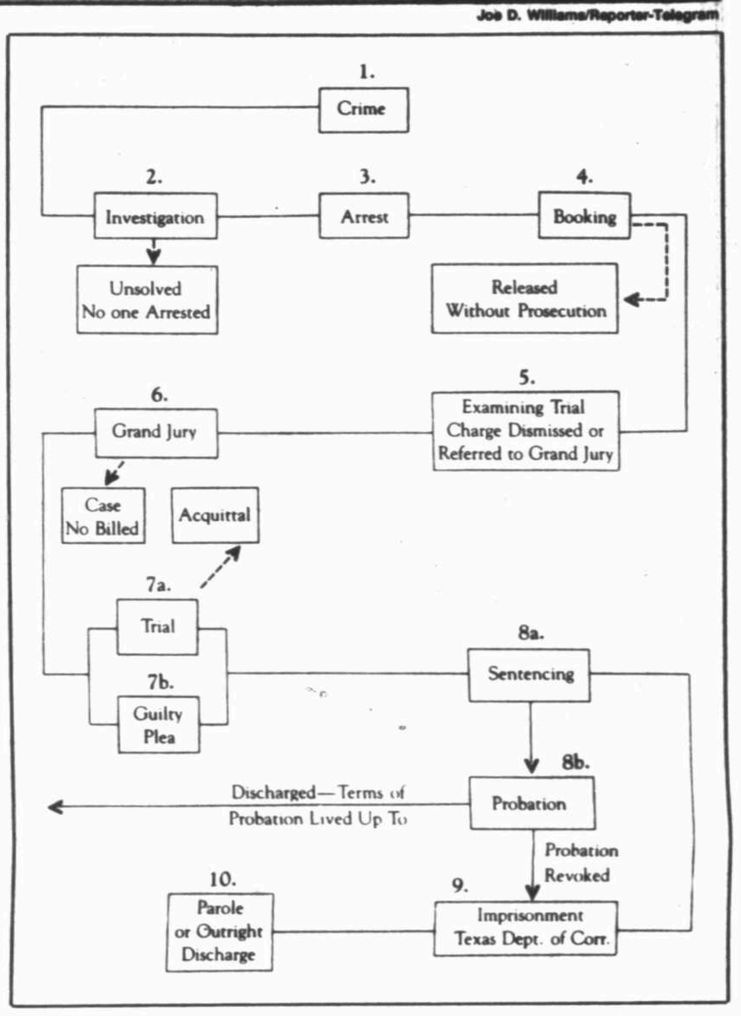
Above, detectives collect evidence at a double homicide crime scene in the 900 block of North Dallas Street on Aug. 25. The crime is the first step in the process of the justice system. At right, chart shows process of criminal justice of a felony case in Texas.



If the offender has lived up to the conditions of probation by the duration of the sentence, he is discharged of the probation. However, if probation is violated, it can result in an increase of time on probation or imprisonment until parole or discharge.

Parole is under the control of the executive branch of state government and is supervised by the Board of Pardons and Paroles, a panel with statewide authority. Its members are appointed and make regulations regarding eligibility for parole and determine when it should be granted to individuals confined in the Department of Corrections.

Parole is available to all persons confined in the Department of Corrections, except persons on death row awaiting execution.

After a convict has served a portion of the sentence set by a court, the Board of Pardons and Paroles will consider release of the person under supervision of the board's employees.

There is no exact schedule that can predict in advance how long a defendant may be confined before being considered for parole. However, in some aggravated offenses involving a crime against a person — such as murder, armed robbery and aggravated rape — the court may require that one-fourth of the maximum sentence set at trial be served.

Neither the district attorney nor the judge who hears a case has any direct influence over the parole process.

Most courthouse officials note that because of prison and jail overcrowding, many offenders are confined for only about one month for each year of their sentence. This may not be accurate for offenders convicted of crimes involving the use of a deadly weapon. In those situations, the criminal must serve a minimum of two years before becoming eligible for parole.

A person released on parole may be sent back to the Department of Corrections if, after a hearing, it is found that he or she has violated a condition upon which parole was granted.

A pardon is a grant of mercy directly from the governor following recommendation by the board. The granting of a pardon is entirely within the power and authority of the governor. It may be a full pardon, resulting in restoration of all rights lost upon conviction, or it may be a conditional pardon, with only partial restoration of rights.

Heavy caseload delays 'wheels of justice'

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

Although the "wheels of justice" keep turning, for many they don't spin fast enough.

The consensus among courthouse and law-enforcement officials is that the sheer volume of cases slows down administration of justice.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre said the delays in cases coming before the courts will continue until the county gets another court.

The 385th District Court was approved by the state Legislature and scheduled to open on Jan. 1. However, that court's creation is in limbo because the U.S. Department of Justice denied clearing the court because of the method of electing judges at large.

The Justice Department ruled that the system for electing judges is unconstitutional because it dilutes opportunities for minorities to be elected. However, several appeals-court rulings have been in favor of the at-large system of electing judges.

The state has filed a lawsuit seeking a declaratory judgment that asks a three-judge panel in U.S. District Court to approve the court to hear cases. That ruling is pending.

318th District Court Judge Dean Rucker said that in addition to the lawsuit filed by the state, a request for an expedited hearing has been filed.

He said he hopes the new court will begin to hear cases Jan. 1, but with every day that passes, his hope fades.

Schorre said that until that court is in session, the more than 1,000 criminal cases on the docket will continue to be backlogged, since 600 cases make a full year's caseload.

With more judges, more cases can be disposed of, Schorre said. When the 385th District Court opens, cases can be sped up by more than 25 percent, Schorre said.

Midland County District Attorney's Victim Witness Coordinator Rochell Buck — who has hands-on dealings with victims of the crimes the district attorney is prosecuting — agrees that the large volume of cases is to blame for the slowdown in the system.

"With only two district courts handling the criminal cases and each court having two criminal trial weeks a month, they're never going to get caught up," she said.

"It's like a farmer with five fields to plow and he's got a rainstorm coming — there is only so much he can get done," Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said. "The justice system is just flooded and we can't blame them for that."

Ms. Buck credited senior Judge Pat Baskin, who is retired, with helping alleviate some pressure on the courts by hearing pleas in what was constructed as the 385th District Courtroom.

Rucker said that although the wheels of justice turn slower than most people would like, Midland County's district courts dispose of cases more rapidly than other counties of comparable size.

238th District Court Judge John G. Hyde said he understands the complaint people have and agrees that "the wheels of justice do turn too slowly."

"It's understandable to be frustrated by the delay in trials. Ideally, we could put a person to trial within 30 days."

But, Hyde said preparation of cases by the prosecution and defense and getting evidence and witnesses together is all part of the lengthy process to ensure a fair trial.

"We all feel the frustration the police, the judiciary, the defendant and his family feel, and most especially the victim's family.

"We're accustomed to instant relief. We live in a world now of microwaves and fax machines. . . . Complaints of the system are that it is not geared to speed," Hyde said.

"The justice system from the district attorney's office to the courts is so flooded with criminals right now, it is difficult for (the courts) to be punctual in the handling of crimes," Painter said.

Hyde said the slowdown is also a reflection of the overcrowded prisons.

"The overcrowded docket and overcrowded prison system are mirror images of each other," he said.

Hyde said other factors that add to the slowdown in the justice process are the complexity of trials and availability of scientific testing.

Some scientific tests — such as DNA — take a long time to complete, he said.

Rucker said that in both the 318th and 238th courts, felony trials are scheduled within 12 to 14 weeks from the date of arraignment, and that is an expedited trial.

"Not all cases will be tried in that period because many will plead and complex cases require additional investigation," he said.

Rucker said that more than 2,000 civil cases are pending in the district courts.

Among those, more than 1,000 are family-law cases, which are heard almost exclusively by Rucker. This caseload prevents him from being of much assistance with criminal cases.

Midland police Sgt. David Garcia said the backlog also results from pre-trial hearings, such as motions to suppress evidence.

Defense attorneys try to suppress evidence or confessions to weaken the prosecution's case. These hearings often are time-consuming and many are conducted before the case goes to trial.

"Many cases are stalled by the defense attorneys," Garcia said. "Often they will draw

Grand jury guards citizens from state powers, crime

Grand jury. The name has an ominous sound to it. As well it should.

The grand jury is one of the most powerful entities in county government. Oftentimes it decides who will be charged with a crime and on rare occasions investigates officials and organizations suspected of criminal activity.

The use of the grand jury in Texas dates back to the time of the Republic of Texas. Provision for the grand jury was included in the Texas Constitution of 1876, which states:

"No person shall be held to answer for a criminal offense, unless on an indictment of the grand jury, except in cases in which the punishment is by fine or imprisonment, otherwise than in the penitentiary."

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre provided several sources of information on the grand jury, including "Your District Attorney's Office" and the "TDCAA Grand Jury Handbook."

Most of the information below, unless otherwise attributed, is from these two pamphlets.

In Texas, there are two broad categories of crime: felony and misdemeanor. A felony is, generally speaking, an offense punishable by death or confinement in the penitentiary.

Misdemeanors are offenses punishable by fines, confinement in jail or both.

All felony cases in Texas must be considered by a grand jury unless the defendant and his attorney waive that right, which seldom occurs.

Grand juries in Texas comprise 12 citizens who serve for the entire term, which is usually six months, and may consider many cases in one session.

The essential function of the grand jury is evaluation to determine whether or not a person should be formally accused of a crime.

After a felony case has been filed for prosecution, it is assigned to a specific assistant district attorney, who prepares the case for grand-jury presentation. If additional investigation is warranted, it will be done at this stage.

Once the case is adequately prepared, it is submitted for consideration by the grand jury.

The prosecuting attorney will indicate what kind of offense is to be considered and

Crash emphasizes need for safety

Investigators continue to probe the twisted and blackened wreckage of a USAir jetliner that crashed Thursday evening while approaching the Pittsburgh airport, killing all 132 people aboard.

"We're all very much at a loss to explain this accident," said U.S. Transportation Secretary Federico Pena on Friday, although investigators shortly thereafter began to direct their attention to pieces of an engine and talk about the possibility that the engine could have been thrown into reverse while in the air. Aviation experts and others noted that reversing engine thrust would be catastrophic.

That aptly describes the result of the USAir crash, although we think "tragic" and "horrifying" are good descriptions, too. The crash scene apparently was unbelievable with body parts and pieces of the jetliner strewn about.

Thrust reverses on several models of Boeing aircraft have been a concern since a May 1991 crash in Thailand involving a Boeing 767. A total of 223 people died in that crash, which was attributed to a thrust reverser system.

The Thursday evening crash in Pennsylvania, the nation's worst in seven years, scattered pieces of the USAir jetliner — and the 132 people aboard it — throughout the area, seven miles from Pittsburgh International Airport.

If the final determination is that the crash was caused by a faulty thrust reverser system, that will be even more reason for FAA officials to require that the Boeing aircraft models in question must undergo even more stringent testing and maintenance procedures.

While the safety records of most commercial aircraft in the United States is impressive, a crash like the one last week that needlessly took so many lives underscores the importance of remaining vigilant where aircraft mechanical safety is concerned.

'Giant sucking sound' is really cash registers

How has the North American Free Trade Agreement worked out for the United States? Quite well, thank you.

Latest Commerce Department statistics show U.S. exports mushroomed 16.4 percent in the first half of 1994. And Mexico passed Japan as the second largest consumer of U.S. products. Only Canada consumes more U.S. goods. . . .

Remember Ross Perot's "giant sucking sound" as he predicted NAFTA would destroy American jobs? Sounds more like jangling cash registers lighting up all over North America.

Meanwhile, the economy and stability of Mexico continue to improve.

During the NAFTA debate last year, this newspaper predicted that NAFTA might be the only way the domestic economy could grow itself out of the new taxes and regulatory mandates Bill Clinton had put in place. All Americans, including the president, can take comfort in the results of its passage.

Background checks could ease worry for parents

It used to be that if a woman had to go to work, her mother-in-law or a next-door neighbor would keep an eye on the children. Today, with a growing number of America's moms in the workforce, there aren't enough in-laws and friends to go around.

The corresponding boom in day care providers has raised childcare from a casual favor to a full-time business. Along with that, government has found it necessary to step in with guidelines on everything from kitchen sanitation to the number of caretakers per youngster.

The most recent one is an idea of mandating criminal investigations of applicants for day-care licenses. . . .

The idea is receiving mixed reviews from childcare providers and parents of young children. Some favor the idea, if only to make parents feel more secure. However, licensed childcare providers fear investigations might become a burden. . . .

Today's parents entrust their little ones to what in many cases amounts to perfect strangers. Mandating background checks in the licensing process can make sure those strangers are, indeed, perfect.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 13, the 256th day of 1994. There are 109 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 13, 1788, the Congress of the Confederation authorized the first national election, and declared New York City the temporary national capital.

On this date:

In 1759, during the final French and Indian War, the British defeated the French on the Plains of Abraham overlooking Quebec City.

In 1894, 100 years ago, British novelist J.B. Priestley was born in Bradford, England.

In 1851, American medical pioneer Walter Reed was born in Gloucester County, Va.

In 1922, the highest shade temperature on the Earth's surface was recorded in El Azizia, Libya, which reached 136.4 degrees Fahrenheit.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Schools in '50s taught discipline, respect

Because the public schools in Corpus Christi are tightening up on teacher attire, there are mumbles and rumbles. What, principals setting sartorial standards? Banning bluejeans? Sending teachers home to spruce up? The head of the local teachers union comments: "I think we're moving headlong back to 1950."

Murchison

Best news the resident cynic in these parts has heard in years. Back to 1950 education — ah, if only!

Yes, there is transparent danger in nostalgia. Tears of remembrance can cloud the vision until, in retrospect, everything about The Old Days seems to have been absolutely wonderful, and how come they ever changed? Niccolo Machiavelli — speaking of cynics — was on target when he commented that "men ever praise the olden time and find fault with the present."

But what about 1950, specifically? Let me, teacher, let me; I remember it all. In the fall of 1950, Miss Jo Ann Dailey's fourth grade class at Robert E. Lee Elementary School was home base for, among others, a skinny, asthmatic kid with a burr haircut, name of Murchison.

What was it like? First of all, we worked hard, that being what was expected of us. Tests and homework were part of the rhythm of life. Second, there was no nonsense in class. Redheaded and fresh out of Baylor University, Miss Dailey (whom we supposed to be about 1 million years old) kept her young saplings decently pruned. Her weapon was the pinch, vigorously applied to the malefactor's forearm. The recipient of several pinches, I can testify to their efficacy. They hurt!

Today, an ACLU lawyer at our sides, we would haul her into court for child abuse. In 1950, our parents regarded Jo Ann Dailey as the appointed disciplinarian, who merited support in all instances.

Was Robert E. Lee Elementary perforce a disciplinary hell hole? It was nothing of the sort. It was a place of kindness and order; the latter attribute made possible the former. The two attributes, fused as one, undergirded the school's mission — there, as everywhere, the imparting of knowledge, the grooming of the gray cells.

What were we back then at Robert E. Lee, some kind of educational paradigm? Almost certainly not. By 1950, as is clear in 1994, educational standards were slipping. Post-World War II America, obsessed with the good life, was coming to emphasize personal fulfillment over against duty and service. Ahead, though shrouded in fog, loomed the depredations of the '60s.

Back to 1950: What is the relevance here? The relevance is spirit — not externals like how we dressed (bluejeans and checked dresses) and how we learned (seated at rigid rows of desks) but internals such as respect and a sense of order and an affiliation with the purpose of the enterprise.

Whatever our other deficiencies, we cooperated voluntarily with the project at hand. A web of respect held us fast — respect for teachers and parents; respect for, or just meek acceptance of, the educational process and of the duties it imposed on us, such as homework and tests. It was not so much a different school system as a different age. Expectations were different. Standards were different.

Can we get all, or some, of that back? Not by crooking fingers or staging '50s "sock hops." The central ingredient is care. Parents, teachers and students must care, more or less in unison.

Care for what? For knowledge, for learning and for the rights of others who would learn; for the dignity of the whole educational enterprise.

CHARLEY REESE

American greed comes before human rights

Which is more important to the United States government — business profits or human rights?

Answer: business profits.

Can you believe anything President William Clinton says and maintain any pretense of being a sensible person rather than a con man's delight.

Answer: No.

Reese

This is what you can learn from Secretary of Commerce Ron Brown's recent trip to Communist China — Ron Brown, the ultimate public deal-maker, taking along American deal-makers from the private sector. Um, um, all that docile cheap labor. Smack those lips. Rub those manicured hands together.

I can well imagine the private conversation:

"Now, okay, Mr. Commissar, let me get this straight. I pay you. You put a gun to the heads of your coolies and keep them on the factory workbenches day and night making my product. Wish we could shoot American labor organizers like you do, but to heck with them. This is a global economy. We got the money. You got the labor. It's a deal. You make this stuff cheap, we mark it up, ship it to the U.S., and tell the suckers they're benefiting from free trade."

So say the American deal-makers. So is created China's $30 billion trade surplus with the U.S.

Now, are the Chinese communist bosses just basically good guys who, gosh darn it, have to be a little strict now and then with troublesome students?

No. They are as brutal, as vile, as murderous as any Nazi who ever stood on the face of the earth. Nobody in the West knows for sure how many millions perished when Mao Tse-tung, a third-rate poet and first-rate killer, made his communist omelet. I've seen estimates that run from 30 million to 60 million.

The U.S. Department of Justice, however, has no office of special prosecutors to seek out old communist murderers and torturers, but the Frenchman philosopher Jean-Francois Revel says in his book, "How Democracies Perish," that the genocidal campaign conducted by the Chinese against the Tibetans can be fairly compared to the Holocaust.

"Testimony by travelers returning from Tibet. . .indicates up to 80 percent of the population remaining after the invasion died. . .victims who were not murdered outright were felled by those other great pillars of communism: famine and forced labor. . .The massacres were particularly ferocious among Tibetan monks. . .the obliteration of Tibet's culture was carried on with almost insane violence. . ."

Well, you get the idea. And Campaign Charming Billy was morally outraged and promised that he, unlike George Bush, was going to use trade negotiations to do something about China's deplorable human rights. President Charming Billy, however, says, (expletive) human rights. Let's cut business deals.

So, I hope your son doesn't have to die in Haiti because Charming Billy, for some bizarre reason, is concerned, or claims to be, about human rights in Haiti, though not in China or, for that matter, in any other place where good business deals can be made.

The misfortune of the Haitians is that not only do they have no oil but they are so poor and miserable that even Clinton thinks it would be safe to use them as an example of U.S. resolve in standing up for human rights and democracy.

Not far away is Cuba, where Fidel Castro is a 100 times worse abuser of human rights than anyone in Haiti, but Clinton doesn't have the guts to treat that ill-tempered tyrant the way he treats General Cedras in Haiti.

RUSSELL BAKER

Past events manage to keep modesty intact

These letters piled here denounce me as an elitist. My humility makes them hard to answer. They are all written in such — well, such an elitist tone.

Russell Baker

Annoyed by some half-baked opinion voiced in this column, or irritated by some idle criticism of their favorite novelist or sitcom, their writers mount the high epistolary bench to condemn me as an elitist, hence unfit to address the common man.

I am much too humble to point out to these correspondents that passing brutal judgment on a fellow human, as they are doing, is one of the most elitist acts anyone can commit.

Moreover, I am far too modest — speaking in all humility, mind you — to let them know my origins are those of the poor country lad who has grown up with mud between the toes.

That's why to this day I never write the briefest letter without the feel of mud between the toes lest I lose touch with those plain, unpolished roots. This is why a tub of mud sits under my desk at all times.

My feet are in it at this very moment, and the feel of that mud between the toes restrains me from trying to be fancy, or elitist.

This is why I permit the absurd metaphor "unpolished roots" to stand in the paragraph above, instead of substituting a literate expression.

Only a hopeless elitist would make a fuss about whether roots come in two varieties — polished and unpolished. But of course, he would not make a fuss.

No elitist ever makes anything as plain as a fuss. He would raise the awkward question whether roots can be polished, or deplore the tendency toward cliche disclosed by calling the roots unpolished — anything to avoid making a simple fuss.

Reader, I know all this because once — let it be confessed — once I did indeed yearn to be an elitist. To be an elitist suggested being capable of excellence, of being — ah, the shame of it — one of the best.

This yearning began back in my earliest mud-between-the-toes days, when I dreamed of becoming an elitist pitcher of baseballs who might someday be as excellent as the great Carl Hubbell.

Quickly I learned that my aptitude for baseball would never qualify me to be the elitest utility infielder of Southwest Baltimore sandlot baseball, much less the peer of the magnificent Hubbell. And so I overcame this early ignoble desire to excel and subsided into fanhood.

For a long time afterward I pursued the dream in other fields. In high school I yearned to match the perfect academic record of Melvin Sachs, the elitest student in the school's history. It was the Carl Hubbell letdown all over again.

Yes, oh yes, I went on to college. Such was my hunger to be an elitist. After acquiescing in the school's request never to enroll in another science course, I was allowed to graduate with a gentleman's C, a grade the professors settled on after one pointed out that a failure would encourage me to come back.

So it went until, well on in life, I mentioned one day to a child these letters accusing me of being an elitist. "And are you?" he asked. "The letters convince me I am," I said, full of pride.

At this the child obviously wanted to roll on the floor in laughter, but fortunately didn't since he was driving the car. Nor did he state what was obviously on his mind: that I had not become the equal of Carl Hubbell, or Melvin Sachs, or Humphrey Bogart whom I had once yearned to match in whatever it would take to make me interesting to Ingrid Bergman.

Nor did he mention Einstein, Fermi, Szilard, Oppenheimer, Teller, all such elitists so far beyond my ken that I wasn't even qualified to boo them, the way a real non-elitist who was nevertheless a fan could boo Hubbell or Bogart and feel superior to them by doing it.

Louis Armstrong, Miles Davis, Art Tatum, Erroll Garner, Jackson Pollock, Tennessee Williams, Arthur Miller, Norman Mailer, Gore Vidal . . . Those were elitists.

I wasn't an elitist; I was a consumer of elitists, one of what touring presidents like to call, with well-disguised contempt, "the real people." That's my reply to this pile of letters. I'm feeling the mud between my toes as it's written.

PROTECT: Grand jury functions on citizens' behalf then presents evidence. Grand jurors will have the opportunity to ask questions.

The prosecutor represents the state at each session of the grand jury and assists the grand jurors in obtaining facts regarding alleged offenses, presenting witnesses, viewing evidence and interpreting the law applicable to facts developed.

Occasionally, the grand jury may hear from only the prosecutor before making a decision; however, it can always hear from witnesses.

After the presentation of the case, the prosecuting attorney, bailiffs and other non-members of the grand jury must leave the room during deliberations and votes on indictments.

All grand-jury testimony is, by law, secret and no one besides the jurors are allowed to hear deliberations.

The rule of secrecy exists to protect grand jurors from pressure by other persons, to protect witnesses and to make it more difficult for defendants or witnesses to avoid subpoena or arrest.

The secrecy also aids the grand jury in its investigative function and benefits the accused who is later cleared by the grand jury's actions.

Nine of the 12 grand jurors must vote for indictment, also known as "true bill," or else the case is "no-billed" and the matter is concluded without further action.

If an indictment is returned, the case is filed in district court and prosecution goes forward.

In addition to the grand jury's power to decide on formal charges on the basis of evidence gathered by law-enforcement agencies, the grand jury itself has authority to conduct investigations.

This authority is narrowly limited by Texas law, which confines grand jury investigations strictly to criminal matters that are subject to indictment.

If a violation of the penal laws of Texas is an issue, the grand jury may investigate elected or appointed government officials to the same extent that it may investigate private persons.

In Midland County, the grand jury assigns cases to each of the two district courts who hear criminal cases — the 142nd and the 238th.

The Midland County grand jury meets each Wednesday. In the first two weeks of the month, cases are allotted to the 142nd District Court; the second two weeks of the month cases are allotted to the 238th District Court.

In those months with five weeks, one court will get three consecutive weeks and then alternate with the other court in the next five-week month according to a schedule prepared at the beginning of the year.

County officials credit the grand jury with protecting citizens as well as empowering them.

"The grand jury is the most powerful entity in the county. They can investigate anything they want to, they have subpoena powers and they can demand and command an investigation of individuals and corporations," Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said.

"They are the protector of citizens from the government and from criminal acts," Painter said. "And they are a cushion between people and the government serving as the voices of the people."

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said the grand jury is a good investigative tool because it can subpoena people who don't want to talk to law enforcement. The grand jury can compel the witnesses to testify, he said.

Dettman said grand jury testimony is also a good way for attorneys to pin people down on their testimony before a trial starts. He said testimony given before the grand jury is generally considered secret, but it is available before trials to show what a witness testified.

Judge Dean Rucker, of the 318th District Court, called the grand jury "every citizen's stopgap of being accused of a crime and having to stand trial for it."

He said the grand jury protects the ordinary citizen from the awesome powers of the state.

And although most people involved in the justice system praise the grand jury, defense attorney Glen Aaron was critical of the system as it now exists.

"The grand jury was designed to protect the individual citizen from the big government . . . but that is not the way it works anymore. The grand jury room is in the big government office.

"Who buys the grand jury their donuts and coffee? The government does. Who takes care of the grand jury? The government does. Who presents the case to the grand jury? The government does," Aaron said.

"I don't know why they go through the process," Aaron said.

He said he would prefer that the district attorney file charges at his discretion.

The prosecutor decides who he wants to prosecute anyway, Aaron said.

Aaron said that when he served as a prosecutor, on occasion grand jurors asked him if he wanted an indictment in a particular case, allowing his opinion to influence their decision as much as any evidence available.

"There is the area when the grand jury decides to investigate on its own, now that's a horse of a different color," Aaron said.

the proceedings out as long as possible. It's like a game to see who's got the particular advantage at this time. And a good defense attorney will try to get the case to point in their advantage or thrown out altogether."

Although everyone agrees the system moves slowly, there are some who don't mind the speed of the process.

"I would rather the wheels of justice turn slowly and justice be administered than for them to turn quickly and have justice denied," said 142nd District Court Judge George "Jody" Gilles.

Lydia Frescaz, mother of murder victim Angela Frescaz, said the court system can only do so much and she would want them to take their time and do it right.

COST: There is price for justice

(From 4A)

zer said. "You have to be more careful from a legal standpoint as far as representation and presentation and jury selection."

Seltzer said the costs of these cases can still increase as the appeals continue.

A large portion of the court costs involve paying for the defense attorneys and their investigations and experts.

"People question spending money on the defense, but the law is such that we, as a people, are required to provide indigent defendants with the best possible representation," Seltzer explained.

"We as county commissioners and we, as taxpayers, don't have a choice in that matter . . . our society wouldn't want it any other way," Seltzer said.

"The indigent . . . are entitled to the best defense available under the laws of the United States since they are presumed innocent until proven guilty by legal and competent evidence."

"That is what separates the U.S. from other countries — once they are arrested they are presumed guilty and must prove their innocence," Seltzer said.

U.N. forum finishes draft plan for curbing population growth

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — After seven days of hard bargaining, delegates to the U.N. population conference agreed Monday on the last tricky points of their 20-year plan for curbing world population growth.

The plan, worked out by a committe that often engaged in laborious word-by-word discussion of the 100-plus-page document, goes before the full 180-country session today.

No country that votes for the plan is obliged to follow any of its recommendations. But plan drafters, seeking wide acceptance, tried to recognie the Vatcn's objections to abortion while laying out reproductive rights.

The Program of Action breaks new ground by urging that population be controlled not just by family planning but by economic development, empowerment of women and protection of the environment.

The document urges that unsafe abortion be treated as a "major public health concern," proclaimed as a victory by women's and abortion rights groups.

"The world is never going to be the same after Cairo," said Tim Wirth, a U.S. undersecretary of state and head of the American delegation.

In making concessions to the Vatican, the drafting committee said reproductive health should conform to the laws and religious, ethical and cultural values of a country.

The Vatican, which angered many with its relentless campaign against any endorsement of abortion, planned to state its position on the draft on Tuesday. But it wasn't likely to accept the reproductive rights and contraception sections. The Vatican was the lone dissenter in the previous two U.N. population conferences.

Flood of Cuban refugees comes to virtual halt

N.Y. Times News Service

COJIMAR, Cuba — The six-week flood of refugees that left about 30,000 Cubans in American internment camps and an untold number dead at sea came to a virtual halt on Monday.

Heavy winds across the northern coast of this island conspired with the Cuban coast guard and police to hurry the last dozens of people leaving in makeshift rafts and to dissuade others who had been preparing to go.

Although the Cuban authorities had given people who were already on the shore until noon on Tuesday to depart, security officers in several areas said that they had received new orders to move up the deadline by a day.

"That's all of it," said Pedro Perez Quintero, 39, looking out on the dirty but finally empty shore in front of his home in this town that had been a main point of departure for people fleeing the country. "Everyone who was left out there took off this morning."

Three days after the United States and Cuba signed an agreement to try to halt the exodus, the circus atmosphere of the beaches moved to the streets around the American diplomatic mission in Havana, where hundreds of Cubans came seeking one of the at least 20,000 immigrant visas that the United States has agreed to issue each year.

Early on Monday morning, a long line formed a few blocks from the mission after would-be emigrants took it upon themselves to make a list of those wanting visas. Later, Cuban police officials were nearly swallowed in the pushing and shoving that broke out when they tried to pass out fliers from the U.S. Information Service about the new accord.

"Please do not contact the Department of State, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, or the United States Interests Section in Havana about migrating under this agreement," the one-page sheets said. "An announcement on how to apply will be made as soon as possible."

Inside the Interests Section, American diplomats were scrambling on Monday to figure out just how the accord signed in New York on Friday would be implemented.

The mission's consular section, which has been staffed until now by only seven diplomats, has already been overwhelmed with the regular flow of Cubans asking to visit or join relatives in the United States.

N. Korea to hand over remains of 14 American soldiers

PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP) — North Korea, seeking improved ties with the United States, promised to hand over 14 coffins containing the remains of American soldiers killed in the 1950-53 Korean War — the first remains turned over this year.

The transfer today occurs at a time when the two longtime enemies are moving to improve ties in the midst of the longstanding dispute over the Communist North's nuclear program.

Last weekend, five U.S. diplomats visited the North's capital of Pyongyang for the first time and began talks on exchanging liaison offices, the first step toward normalizing relations.

Simultaneous talks are under way in Berlin to replace the North's old-fashioned nuclear sites with technology less adaptable to weapons development.

Testimony opens in case of strangled 7-year-old

Associated Press

Carpet cleaner Michael Blair kidnapped a 7-year-old girl from a Plano playground and left her strangled body in a ditch thick with brush, a prosecutor told jurors Monday.

Blair, a 24-year-old paroled child molester, is accused in the capital murder of Ashley Estell last Labor Day weekend in Collin County. He pleaded innocent at the start of his trial Monday.

Defense attorney Don McDermitt asked the jury to stay emotionally detached from the high-profile case, which drew intense media coverage and hundreds of searchers when Ashley disappeared Sept. 4, 1993.

Collin County assistant District Attorney Bryan Clayton laid out a chronology he said would tie Blair to the park and Blair's car to the remote road where Ashley's body was found the next day.

"Michael Blair shows up at every relevant location to this offense," Clayton said.

When police searched his car, Clayton said, they found candy and stuffed animals, a long-stemmed rose, binoculars, newspaper clippings about Ashley and three hairs microscopically identical to hers.

Prosecutors say Blair helped search for the third-grader and continually drove back to the spot where her scratched and battered body was found — about seven miles north of the park where she had been playing.

"Michael Blair came to light because he loved to go back to the scene where he dumped Ashley Estell's body," Clayton said.

But McDermitt urged jurors to scrutinize all evidence.

"Hair is not fingerprints," the defense attorney said. "You're going to hear that from their witnesses. Hair is not DNA."

Blair, wearing a dark suit and short hair cut, appeared to take notes during the proceeding. If convicted, he could receive the death penalty.

He had served just 18 months of a 10-year prison sentence for indecency with a child and burglary.

Tax rebates

AUSTIN — The state returned $128.3 million in sales tax payments to Texas cities and counties Monday, a 9.3 percent increase over a year ago. Comptroller John Sharp said the increase reflects a record number of Texans on the job and increasing consumer confidence. The monthly rebates for September covered taxes collected on July sales. Sharp said that more than 226,000 new jobs were created since July 1993, putting an all-time high of 7.7 million Texas at work. A total of 944 Texas cities received $115.5 million of the rebates, a 9.2 percent increase from the $105.7 million of September 1993, while 111 counties were sent $12.8 million, a 9.4 percent rise.

Midland electrician Corey Sly often leaves one of his limited edition pencil sketch prints with clients.

Special bonus: Midlander's clients receive more than electrical work

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

When Midlander Corey Sly does electrical work, he leaves a unique calling card, a limited edition print.

The owner of Corey Sly Electrical Service, Sly is also an artist who creates pencil sketches of wildlife and nature. After years of handing out prints to clients, friends and relatives as Christmas gifts, Sly's prints are showing up framed on walls in houses in Midland and other cities.

"Someone even told me they saw my sketch of a coyote in a house in Wyoming," Sly said. He also has prints hanging in the lobby of the Hightower Building downtown.

A native Midlander, Sly credits his art teachers at Alamo Junior High School, Austin Freshman (now Lee Freshman High School) and artist Warren Taylor at Midland College with teaching him sketching skills. He also took lessons from a private teacher for a while.

No more than 1,000 prints are made from any of Sly's original works. Because he is on call 24 hours

Residents get last chance to express opinions on curfew

■ City Council could amend city code to allow specific use permits for wildlife rehabilition centers.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The third and final town meeting for Midlanders to voice their thoughts on the proposed juvenile curfew will be held at 7 p.m. today in the Midland Center.

Among those who will attend to express their opinions is a local citizens group, led by Mark Kimble, that is expected to make a presentation for an alternative to the curfew.

Claudia Egan, District 4 City Council representative, said she expects a "fairly heavy" turnout tonight despite the low attendance for the first two town meetings.

"After (tonight's meeting) we will take it to the council and discuss the pros and cons at our second meeting in September, and then we'll put it on the agenda for action the first meeting in October," Ms. Egan said.

"It (the agenda item) will be either the curfew or the alternative from Mark Kimble's citizen group," she added.

The vote — on either proposal — will be part of a public hearing before the council.

The proposed curfew, fashioned after one in Dallas, calls for minors — those under 17 years old — to be home between the hours of 11 p.m. to 6 a.m., Sunday through Thursday, and from

The Midland City Council is expected to determine today whether wildlife rehabilitation centers should be allowed within the city limits, and if so, guidelines for such.

The continuation of the controversial operation of such a facility at 3306 W. Golf Course Road by Midge and Woody Erskine hinges — in part — on whether the council will amend the city code to provide for specific use permits for wildlife rehabilitation centers.

"I think at this point the City Council wants to listen to some public input" before making a decision, Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler said. A public hearing is set for 1 p.m. today at the regular City Council meeting.

Two weeks ago, the Planning and Zoning Commission voted 6-2 with one abstention to recommend to the council to approve a specific use permit.

If the council — after hearing public opinion — favors a code amendment, two majority votes by the council will be required to pass an ordinance.

If the council approves the measure, that will pave the way for the Erskines to apply for the specific use permit to legally operate their wildlife rehabilitation center. That request then must be approved by the City Council.

The Erskines have operated their rehabilitation facility and wildlife sanctu-

Youth group with Christian message kicks off year with annual Fight Night

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

It wasn't a typical school night in Ulmer Park Monday.

Instead of a few neighborhood children playing in the park, high school girls squealed and held on to each other as they ran through a group of students pelting them with flour. Water balloons exploded at the feet of boys pushing their friends into the line of fire.

And that wasn't the worst part.

About 120 high school students eventually would be covered in everything from flour to slimy chicken feed to shaving cream as part of Young Life's 8th annual Fight Night.

"This is the first night of Young Life for the school year," said Wes Perry, committee chairman for Young Life. "We use this as our kickoff."

Young Life, which meets every Monday night, incorporates Christian values and fun into its message, Perry said.

"It's an outreach to kids," he said. "We want to share Christ with these kids, especially with those who don't go to church. But we also want them to see that you can have fun in a good way."

The organization is run by volunteers and is open to any high school students who wish to participate. Perry said there is no set membership — that students can come to meetings as they wish.

Young Life meetings are conducted at the old Sears building, across from Mr. Gatti's on Illinois Avenue and consist of games, skits and a Christian message.

"The whole point is to get the message of Christ to these kids," Perry said.

Despite kiss, Jackson-Presley marriage still seems like hoax

More rambling thoughts . . .

— Though I don't normally fear flying, news of a tragic plane crash, like the one last week in Pennsylvania, always makes me pause ever so slightly as I ponder my own mortality.

— But the next time I need to be somewhere in a hurry, you can bet I will hop on a plane without giving it a second thought.

— Great name for a musical group: The Amazing Rhythm Aces.

— Whatever happened to them, anyway?

— They had one terrific album and then disappeared.

— It is always awkward trying to decide whether or not to inform a person that he (or she) has a small piece of food on the corner of his (or her) mouth.

— So you generally wipe at the corner of YOUR mouth, in hopes he (or she) will do the same, thus removing the food and saving you both a degree of embarrassment.

Ott

— Surprisingly, that approach often works.

— Somehow, I don't see Ross Perot being a factor in future presidential elections.

— The best time to shop is when the Dallas Cowboys are on TV. The checkout lines are empty.

— It shouldn't matter, of course, but sweat rings bug the heck out of me.

— Try though I might, I can't like tennis star Andre Agassi, and it is not just because he dates Brooke Shields.

— Despite their much ballyhooed kiss on national TV, I still think the Michael Jackson-Lisa Marie Presley marriage is a publicity hoax, and a tacky one at that.

— Most technological advances make me nervous, but the fax machine is one of the great inventions of our time.

— Do neighborhood kids still say, "let's put on a show" like Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney did in the old Andy Hardy movies?

— One of the nice things about old songs is that they allow your mind to go back in time to when you first heard them.

— Each time I hear a TV announcer call a football coach a genius I wonder if he, the coach, has discovered the cure for cancer yet.

— Roller coaster rides look more appealing than they really are.

— I'll never understand why certain people seem to resent it when a president takes a vacation.

— Here's a fact that is hard to believe: The crime rate, at the local, state and nation level, is actually down.

— Then why do we all, myself included, feel more threatened than ever before?

— Some have suggested it is because of the randomness of today's crime and the fact that so many more young people are involved . . . both as victims and perpetrators.

— And today's final quote comes from Muriel Spark, who once said, "One's prime is elusive. You little girls, when you grow up, must be on the alert to recognize your prime at whatever time of your life it may occur."

ary — known as the Eos Wildlife Refuge Center — for more than 20 years.

The appropriateness and legality of the operations were challenged two years ago when adjacent property owners Dennis and Vanessa Baker filed a lawsuit against the Erskines claiming zoning and health violations.

The legal battle overlaps complaints to the city about the alleged zoning and health violations. Most of the presentations to the city concerning the Eos Wildlife Refuge Center have been by attorneys representing the Bakers or the Erskines.

In March, the City Council held a public hearing to determine the fate of the Erskines' operations. The council decided — essentially — that the sanctuary was permissible but as far as the rehabilitation operations, relocation or proper zoning was required, officials said.

Ms. Erskine has claimed that the Eos Wildlife Refuge Center — state and federally licensed — had already been permitted by the city to operate.

Smith was struck by a vehicle driven by 76-year-old Margery McCormick, who was headed west in the 700 block of Business I-20. The report stated that witnesses said Smith tried to jog across the road to avoid traffic when he was struck.

BONUS: Sly gives out sketches

a day, six days per week, the artist only produces one new print each year.

"He tries real hard to take Sunday off, but it doesn't always work out," said his wife of eight years, Dawn.

So Sly cribs what moments he can to work on sketches. There is fine detail work in his sketches of owls, cacti, hares, eagles and a coyote. A more contemporary flair is shown in works of graceful irises.

His wife said Sly's painstaking attention to detail makes him "lousy at Pictionary," the game that requires quick drawing.

"People always want Corey on their team, then they lose," she said, laughing. "Then someone like me draws a stick man and wins."

His skills also come in handy when he tries to explain electrical wiring or rewiring to someone. Rather than explain, he just draws a picture.

Sly sends his employees off with portfolios of prints behind the seats of their trucks. "It's gotten so, when people call him about a job, they say: 'and don't forget to bring my print.'" Mrs. Sly said.

The electrician said he has walked into homes and been surprised to see one of his prints framed. "I say: That's a nice print there. Would you like another one?" he said.

Sly said his work has been given as gifts and sold everywhere from garage sales to estate sales.

His first print, produced at age 16, took him several hours to finish. He has spent as little as three hours sketching a scene to as long as three years working on the same print.

"My mother was an artist, and art supplies were always there to play with," Sly said. "Now, my artwork is a good ice breaker with clients. It's something people have come to expect."

Cole took time out from Monday's activities to explain why they voluntarily were allowing fellow high school students to pour flour on them.

"I knew this would be fun," said Miss Swallow, who is a member of Young Life. "All my friends are here."

"It's fun," said Miss Cole, when asked how she felt about being covered in water, flour and shaving cream. "It's a chance to be with your friends and have fun."

DEAR ABBY

Youthful moment of anger reverberates throughout man's years

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago, you printed a letter from a young man who had been expecting a new car for his high school graduation gift. To his great disappointment, he received a Bible instead. Out of anger, he stormed out of the house and never spoke to his father again. After his father's funeral, the young man located the Bible his father had given him, only to find a key to a new car taped in the back.

Van Buren

That column was so moving that my husband, who manages a very busy restaurant, overheard many customers talking about it. Our pastor would like a copy of that column for a future sermon.

I would be most grateful if you would please send me that column. — VALERIE BOSSELMAN, OMAHA

DEAR VALERIE: That column is a longtime favorite of mine. However, as is often the case, a few details are somewhat different from the story your husband recalled. Here's the original:

DEAR ABBY: A young man from a wealthy family was about to graduate from high school. It was the custom in that affluent neighborhood for the parents to give the graduate an automobile. "Bill" and his father had spent months looking at cars, and the week before graduation, they found the perfect car.

On the eve of his graduation, his father handed him a gift-wrapped Bible. Bill was so angry that he threw the Bible down and stormed out of the house. He and his father never saw each other again. It was the news of his father's death that brought Bill home again.

As he sat one night going through his father's possessions that he was to inherit, he came across the Bible his father had given him. He brushed away the dust and opened it to find a cashier's check, dated the day of his graduation — in the exact amount of the car they had chosen together. — BECKAH FINK, TEXAS

DEAR BECKAH: I hope Bill read the Bible cover to cover, for it contained much that he needed to learn: "A foolish son is a grief to his father, and bitterness to her who bore him." (Proverbs 17:25)

DEAR ABBY: For years I have read your column; now I am finally writing with a question.

Every week a group of us "old bowlers" gets together for lunch, gossip, etc. About three times a year, someone asks me how old I am. (I look a lot younger than I actually am — and I have worked hard at it.) Frankly, that information is none of their business, and the question irritates me no end.

So far, I've kept my cool. Should I just wear a number on my back to avoid future questions? How do you handle that situation? — GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: I smile and tell them the year of my birth, and let them figure it out.

YOUR CHUCKLE FOR TODAY: "Apple has announced that it is developing a computer small enough to be carried in a fanny pack. It will be called the Macintush." — TOM CLOUD, SANTA MONICA, CALIF.

CASE: Defendant pleads innocent at trial

(From 1B)

His arrest in Ashley's case outraged advocates for parole reform.

Opening statements were delayed about one hour Monday by uncertainty over the status of a juror whose mother died Sunday.

She testified that her mind wasn't on jury duty, and State District Judge Nathan White excused her despite the defense's objection.

White also ordered TV cameras off the courthouse's fourth floor. Excessive news coverage in the Dallas area caused the trial's transfer to Midland.

Diana Estell, mother of the victim, testified that she and her husband were keeping an eye on Ashley while their son played soccer nearby. They couldn't find her at half time, she said.

In a hushed and strained voice, she described how Ashley loved chocolate and stuffed bunnies.

"She was very outgoing. She made friends everywhere she went," Mrs. Estell said. "She got the most out of life every single day."

Clayton asked if Blair ever had permission to associate with her daughter.

"Absolutely not," she replied in a stare at the defendant.

Judge denies request for clemency hearing

■ Attorney for Gary Graham, who has been on death row for almost 13 years, says he will appeal.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A state judge Monday refused to order a clemency hearing for Gary Graham, who has been on death row for nearly 13 years.

Graham's attorney, Jim Harrington, said he would appeal State District Court Judge Pete Lowry's decision.

Last year, Lowry ordered that the Texas Board of Pardons and Parole conduct a hearing for Graham, 33.

Lowry's decision then prompted appeals that led to a Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruling that says death row inmates can ask the original trial court to consider evidence raised after a trial.

Prior to that ruling, inmates such as Graham had been barred from introducing new evidence more than 30 days after a conviction.

But on Monday, Lowry refused to order a clemency hearing for Graham, saying that the new procedure granted by the criminal appeals court has given Graham an opportunity to try to prove his innocence.

CURFEW: City holds final meeting

(From 1B)

midnight to 6 a.m. on Friday and Saturday.

Several exceptions — such as traveling to and from work, school and church, emergencies, being with a parent or guardian and being married — are included in the curfew ordinance.

In Midland, the curfew proposal resulted from a recommendation by a special Midland County grand jury in February 1993, following a nine-month investigation into juvenile crime.

As the possibility of a curfew became more of a reality when the Dallas curfew was found constitutional, the city gathered statistics from law enforcement agencies on juvenile crime and sought public opinion. The first town meeting only drew about 10 people and the second about 60 people.

Ms. Egan, when asked her perception of the general sentiment of Midlanders on a curfew, replied: "Right now we have kind of three groups: 25 percent for, 25 percent against and the rest don't care."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your desire to help others will often make you the center of attention. A growing interest in religion could be part of the picture. Stay alert and you will remain way ahead of the competition where business is concerned. Early in 1995, a prominent person takes notice of your special talents. A whirlwind romance is possible. Make certain a potential spouse shares your high ideals.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Mel Torme, actress Nell Carter, actress Jacqueline Bisset, mystery author Eileen Fulton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A partner shows greater willingness to reason today. If you must sign legal documents, seek expert advice about any terms you do not understand. Travel holds new allure.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not let a negative attitude undo all the good you have achieved lately. Deal diplomatically with those who have information you need. An interest in crafts or gardening should be pursued.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Current trends work in your favor. A member of the opposite sex proves to be a valuable ally. Do some research before presenting a special plan to the boss. Romance moves into high gear.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Procrastination could be your undoing. Move swiftly. Taking a commercial approach to a favorite hobby could prove surprisingly profitable. Expand your horizons but do not spread yourself too thin.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Bargains abound. Make sure you really need anything you purchase. Feelings of inadequacy may surface when you spend time with someone who is a real dynamo.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your concentration could be minimal this morning. Wait before making important decisions. Heeding a partner's advice will prevent you from doing something foolish.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A chance for career advancement is right around the corner. Authority figures may impose certain restrictions; be patient. Deep feelings of love are developing. Tackle intimacy issues directly. Do not beat around the bush.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put outmoded techniques on ice even if you must bend a few rules. Call on friends if faced with a crisis. This is no time to be a loner. Speak with authority, not hesitancy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Self-reliance is great if you do not overdo it. Dismissing an offer of help could hurt a loved one's feelings. Perform more home services to reduce expenses. Happy romance puts the icing on the cake!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may have to make a speech. Emphasize those character strengths that set you apart from the crowd. Narrow down your choices where romance is concerned. Wearing your heart on your sleeve yields positive results!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-February 18): Your partner may appear overly temperamental now. You could be reading the situation incorrectly. Ask probing questions. A candid conversation will resolve any problems. Plan recreational activities together. Avoid running up credit card debts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel demands special caution. Do not become upset with someone who hogs the show. Friends are better company than relatives right now. Self-improvement activities will help advance your career or business aims.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡

When a defender has a choice of cards to play, it makes good sense to play a card you are known to have. This hand will illustrate what we mean.

Assume you are South. You don your bidding boots and reach an optimistic six-spade contract. Your partner has not been shy — with a balanced hand and no high spade honor, five spades would have been enough after East doubled North's five-heart cue-bid.

You win the first trick on the table and take the losing spade finesse. West returns a heart, which you ruff. You have your guessing cap on when you elect to bang down the ace of spades and drop the jack rather than take a second finesse. Now all you have to do is solve the problem of the club suit. You start by leading a club to the jack, which holds. Next you cash the king of clubs.

If West routinely follows with the ten, you have only one choice. You cash the ace of clubs and, when everybody follows, you discard a diamond on the nine of clubs and the slam is home.

Now let's suppose that, instead of the ten of clubs, West drops the queen, which that defender is known to have because the finesse succeeded, under the king. Now you have to decide whether to play for a 3-3 club split or to finesse East for the ten of clubs. Since the odds favor a 4-2 split, you're going to finesse the nine and go down.

Would we have been taken in by East's falsecard? You can bet on it.

Skater Nancy Kerrigan says she broke ice with Tonya after attack

LOS ANGELES — Nancy Kerrigan revealed in an interview published over the weekend in the Boston Globe that after she was attacked, it was she who broke the ice in Norway, striking up a conversation with Tonya Harding when both showed up for Olympic practice.

"I spoke up first," said Kerrigan, "because I wanted to make sure I didn't have the underhand. I just said, 'Hi, it's been a tough month for us, huh?' And she said, 'Yes,' and I said, 'I have to get ready.'"

NEW YORK — The order of the day from retired Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf: Older men, see the urologist.

See the urologist, former Gulf War commander says.

The former Gulf War commander considers himself the poster guy for prostate cancer. His doctors caught it early, and he has fully recovered 3½ months after surgery.

Schwarzkopf urged men over 50 and those over 40 who are at high risk to get tested.

"Look the urologist right in the eye and say, 'Bring me to my knees if you have to, but do a thorough exam,' because that way they'll save your life," he said Monday on "CBS This Morning."

Prostate cancer is one of the most common forms of cancer affecting men.

MINNEAPOLIS — Oprah Winfrey got cheers for finishing a 15.5-mile run in hot, humid weather in a respectable 2½ hours.

Oprah Winfrey got cheers for finishing a 15.5-mile run.

The 40-year-old talk-show host limped slightly as she walked off the effects of Sunday's City of Lakes 25K.

"This took a toll. Even though I am getting into this running thing, the conditions today were difficult," she said. Humidity was high, and temperatures were in the 70s.

Winfrey said she plans to attempt her first marathon this fall.

NEW YORK — Meryl Streep hopes her new movie "The River Wild" will appeal to girls.

"I made a movie that my girls would be excited to see," the mother of four said in the October issue of Glamour magazine.

"They could put themselves in the hero's role and project without it being a burly man, without having to make the leap that girls are used to making."

Streep plays a whitewater enthusiast who is kidnapped while on a family river trip.

As for appealing to a new male audience, Streep said, "Oh, I don't give a damn about that. This is not my offering to the male action audience. If they like it, it's great. If they don't, well, we tried."

LOS ANGELES — A judge refused to block the broadcast of a miniseries on Elizabeth Taylor, ruling NBC had a First Amendment right to show it.

Miss Taylor had argued that the miniseries, based on an unreleased book by C. David Heymann, is inaccurate and an invasion of privacy.

Among other things, the book contends Miss Taylor was beaten by husbands Mike Todd, Nicky Hilton and Richard Burton.

Superior Court Judge Diane Wayne said that the series can be broadcast but that Miss Taylor can seek damages later. The judge gave Neil Papiano, Miss Taylor's attorney, the opportunity to argue again for an injunction Sept. 28.

The network plans to broadcast the miniseries in May.

"This is not free speech. This is taking somebody's name and using it for a commercial product," Papiano said.

Heymann's work was inaccurate and damaging, the lawyer said.

"For example, he says that a number of her husbands beat her. That is not true," Papiano said.

Bill and Hillary Clinton have failed to pay $50 in annual dues to the Bar Association of Arkansas, and so have given up their state licenses to practice law there.

The money was due by March 1, said Leslie Steen, clerk for the Arkansas Supreme Court. Notices sent to Hillary Clinton at the Rose Law Firm and to the president at the White House were ignored.

The president isn't fretting. "I really don't think in the grand scheme of things, it's something he's concerned about," said Clinton press secretary Dee Dee Myers.

No-hitter

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Bill Pulsipher threw the first no-hitter in an Eastern League playoff game in 57 years, leading the Binghamton Mets to a 2-0 victory over Harrisburg on Monday night in Game 2 of the championship series.

Pulsipher had eight strikeouts and walked four as the Mets evened the best-of-5 series 1-1. Al Reiss had a no-hitter for Wilkes-Barre in 1937.

"I struggled against them this year, along with a couple of other teams," said the 20-year-old, who allowed 12 runs in 12 innings against the Senators this season. "I wanted to prove to them that they can't knock me around."

Cowboys find reverse

■ The Dallas Cowboys are in reverse gear from their 0-2 start a year ago.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Troy Aikman is frustrated. But nothing like a year ago when the Dallas Cowboys started 0-2 without Emmitt Smith.

"There are only six other teams in the NFL who can say they are 2-0," Aikman said Monday. "We have to play better to do what we want to do. But we're fine. The objective is to win and I think we're headed in the right direction."

Houston's tough defense had Aikman yelling at his receivers and Smith throwing his helmet Sunday in a 20-17 victory to get the defending Super Bowl champion Cowboys off to a 2-0 start.

"Houston was blitzing and I was trying to get the receivers to run their routes," Aikman said. "It was a frustrating thing. Emmitt doesn't hold it in like I do."

Smith, who gained a hard 90 yards on 22 carries, said the helmet came flying out of his hand just like a golf club.

"I've thrown golf clubs out of frustration," Smith said. "It had been a long time since I had been that frustrated on the field. I'm calmed down. I'm smiling about it."

Said Aikman: "We have to understand we're a lot better off than we were last year. We started 0-2 and we were close to blowing the season. Historically we are a slow starting team and we finish strong."

DISTRICT 4-5A TEAM TENNIS

MHS to host Lee in tennis kickoff

It's time once again for fall team tennis: a District 4-5A sport in which the dominance has been held by the schools in the eastern half of the league for a number of years.

The dominance by teams like defending state champion Abilene Cooper and its cross-town rival Abilene High, holder of several past state titles, has not changed this year. But as Midland High and Midland Lee gear up for the beginning of the district schedule, starting with a 4 p.m. dual match today at the Midland High tennis courts, the eastern dominance of the district at least gives the local teams a clear-cut goal in where they want their programs to go.

"We're making progress," said MHS coach Tom Heiting. "But Cooper will still be strong. They lost only two people from last year and they weren't even playing in their starting lineup. They should be favored to win state again. Abilene High only lost a couple of people and all of the San Angelo boys are state-ranked."

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

The top-seeded players for Midland Lee this year are Conner Austin and Rae McNeill.

Heiting will be armed a little more heavily in his attempt to break Midland High into that elite pack. MHS lost only two girls and two boys from its top six players last year. Lee, on the other hand, was stripped by graduation of three of its top six players on both the boys and girls squads.

That has left Lee coach Steve Buck short on experience but not short on enthusiasm for how much his team has improved since the beginning of the season.

"We have so few seniors, but they've provided some excellent leadership," Buck said. "And the sophomores have learned a lot. They've still got a lot to learn but I think we'll be competitive."

Mojo reports 'oversight'

Staff Report

ODESSA — The Odessa Permian football team will have to face the District 4-5A Executive Committee for the third time in four years this week to determine a transfer player's eligibility.

Permian failed to turn in the proper paper work on a player, who was not named. Permian reported the "oversight" to the University Interscholastic League and will meet with 4-5A's ruling body sometime this week at a site to be determined.

"This has nothing to do with the transfer rule. It was just an oversight and the proper paperwork didn't get done," said Steve Chapman, Permian principal. "We turned ourselves in when we found out about it. We aren't worried, even though there is always a measure of concern when you deal with the UIL. We feel like we have done everything we could."

Permian had to forfeit six district games last season for playing an ineligible player. In 1991 Permian was not eligible for the state playoffs because of holding illegal summer workouts.

Everyone wants preseason predictions, no matter how meaningless.

And meaningless they are, because they still have to play the game.

So ... after two weeks of the NFL season:

— So much for the savants who made the Raiders a consensus choice to represent the AFC in the Super Bowl with the Broncos close behind them and picked the Patriots and Cardinals as teams on the way up.

After two weeks, they're all 0-2.

— So much for the savants who picked the Chiefs, Seahawks and Chargers to trail Los Angeles and Denver in the AFC West and decided the Giants and Jets were no better than mediocre.

After two weeks, they're all 2-0.

In this year of the salary cap, being a savant isn't easy.

Cunningham ignites Eagles over Bears

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It was vintage Randall at the Vet, and the Philadelphia Eagles needed all of it.

Randall Cunningham picked apart Chicago's defense Monday night, passing for 311 yards and three touchdowns as Philadelphia opened a 30-point lead and held on to beat the Chicago Bears 30-22.

Cunningham threw for 250 yards in the opening half, with two touchdown passes to Calvin Williams and one to Maurice Johnson.

And he never cooled off. Cunningham finished 24-of-36 in his 11th career 300-yard passing effort and the first time he has done it in successive games; he had 344 yards in a loss to the New York Giants last week.

Cunningham wasn't the only star on a night when the Eagles did little wrong until the fourth quarter before a raucous crowd of 64,890 at Veterans Stadium. Williams had all six of his receptions in the first half for 85 yards, and Fred Barnett added eight catches for 102 yards.

The defense, meanwhile, shackled the Bears early, holding them to 70 yards and three first downs in the first 30 minutes. By the time the Bears got their offense in gear, they had to fight back from a 30-0 deficit in the fourth quarter.

Chicago scored on a 22-yard pass from Erik Kramer to Curtis Conway with 12:15 remaining, an 85-yarder to Conway with 5:53 to go — Conway also caught a 2-point conversion — and a 16-yarder to Marv Cook with 3:35 to go.

But then Cunningham connected on two passes on Philadelphia's final possession, enabling the Eagles to run out the clock.

The victory snapped Philadelphia's seven-game losing streak against Chicago, which lost for the first time this summer. The Bears were 4-0 in preseason and beat Tampa Bay in their opener. They've lost only five of 31 meetings with the Eagles.

But they were never really in this one, especially after losing their best cornerback, Donnell Woolford, early in the game with a concussion.

Williams made a reaching catch of a 9-yard pass on a fade pattern for Philadelphia's first score, concluding an 83-yard drive on which Cunningham was 6-for-8. Williams then beat Mark Carrier to the back left corner of the end zone for a 14-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter.

The defense, vulnerable at New York, was impenetrable until the fourth quarter, when it nearly blew the game.

Stephenville back on top in Class 4A

■ Prep Top 10

DALLAS (AP) — The Stephenville Yellowjackets were so good in 1993 that they won 16-straight games and earned their first Class 4A title. Two weeks into this season, coach Art Briles thinks his team is even better.

With that much billing, it's only fitting that Stephenville moved into the No. 1 spot in The Associated Press high school football poll on Monday.

"I think right now we're further along than at this time last year," Briles said. "Mentally, we're just as strong and tough. Our players are a little more used to being in these situations and they're ready to win."

Class 5A's rankings underwent the most change as five teams fell out of the top 10. Moving into the poll were two teams ranked in the preseason and three others making their first appearance, including 5A newcomer A&M Consolidated.

Consolidated, which dominated 4A the last few years, had one of last weekend's biggest wins as it shut down then-No. 8 Odessa Permian 23-3. The victory vaulted the Tigers to seventh in 5A.

But the biggest win of all last weekend was Gainesville's shocking 43-21 victory over Southlake Carroll that ended the Dragons' state-record 72-game regular-season winning streak and a run of 48-overall games without a loss.

The upset helped the Leopards, who had lost three times to Carroll the last two seasons, jump to No. 5 from No. 8 in the Class 3A poll. Carroll moved up to 4A this season and was unranked.

The Yellowjackets, who entered this season ranked No. 2, opened this season with the look of a champion as they crushed Boswell 44-6 in the opener and slammed Abilene 59-14 last Friday.

Stephenville's victory over Abilene coupled with top-ranked Sulphur Springs' 20-17 loss to Plano East on Saturday cleared a path to the No. 1 spot for the Yellowjackets. Sulphur Springs fell to fourth.

The other four No. 1 teams held their spots in this week's polling of sports writers and broadcasters from across the state.

Although Stephenville didn't have to move up much to get its new spot, the step the Yellowjackets took says a lot for the program.

Briles' crew is making a statement as the new team-to-beat in 4A, a distinction Consolidated left behind when redistricting jumped the Tigers up.

They've already been playing the part of a marked team as Briles was accused last month by a former Stephenville girl's basketball coach of many University Interscholastic League rules violations.

An investigation by the district resulted in only two private reprimands and the reputations of Briles and his program remained intact.

Just as important, Briles was able to keep the allegations from becoming a distraction as the Yellowjackets prepared for the season.

"It had no affect because there was no justification for it. We knew where we stood," Briles said. "Our kids are very mature and very realistic about the situation so it was not a problem with them at all."

Another potential pitfall for the Yellowjackets is trying to live up to the acclaim of being a defending state champion, especially one with what's now an 18-game winning streak — the state's longest now that Carroll lost.

"I think any time you come off a 16-0 state championship year, there's going to be some carry over," Briles said. "We're playing awfully well right now. We just have to stay focused on improving each week.

"We're looking for total dominance. That's what we try to attain week in and week out."

Stephenville isn't dominating the 4A poll, though. The Yellowjackets received only 18 of the 29 possible first-place votes, with No. 2 Waxahachie and No. 3 La Marque each getting three.

Sulphur Springs and No. 5 Lamar Consolidated each had two first-place votes and No. 6 Gregory-Portland had one.

Rounding out the top 10 are No. 7 Austin Reagan, No. 8 Corpus Christi Callallen, No. 9 Sherman and No. 10 McKinney. Sherman fell from No. 3 following a 28-25 loss to 5A Garland .

Fridge playing without celebrity fanfare

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Once he was a celebrity everyone called "The Refrigerator." Now, William Perry is happy to be just a football player without fanfare.

"I don't miss it at all," Perry said, recalling the days when his exploits with the Chicago Bears helped create the cult figure of William "The Refrigerator" Perry.

Some of his teammates on the Philadelphia Eagles, who were to play the Bears Monday night, still call Perry "The Fridge." And Perry still is appliance-sized, weighing well over the 335 pounds he's listed at on the roster.

But Perry said he's glad to be out of the spotlight that turned him into a cartoon character, the real-life equivalent of Bill Cosby's childhood pal, Fat Albert.

In fact, Perry said he's having more fun playing now than when he broke in with the Bears in 1985, winning a Super Bowl his rookie season.

"It's even more fun because I don't have all you guys everywhere I go, hounding me about what I eat, what time I went to bed ... " he said. "It's a whole lot more fun now that the media is not on you day and night."

Perry went from media darling to media target in a relatively short time in Chicago.

Drafted in the first round out of Clemson, Perry came to the Bears with a nickname that was given to him by a college teammate who saw him standing in — and just about filling — an elevator door opening.

He also came with remarkable quickness and strength for someone so huge. Coach Mike Ditka waited until halfway through Perry's rookie season to start him at defensive tackle, then realized Perry could do other things.

On a Monday night game that season, Ditka lined Perry up in the backfield and he pancaked would-be tacklers on two Walter Payton touchdown runs on the goal-line. Ditka even gave him the ball during that game, and Perry rumbled into the end zone for a 1-yard touchdown.

He would catch a 4-yard touchdown pass from Jim McMahon two weeks later. By the time he scored on a 1-yard touchdown run in Chicago's 46-10 win over New England in the Super Bowl, Perry was a star.

Commercials and endorsements followed, earning Perry a reported $1 million. But Perry's fame was fleeting. He ran with the ball only once during the 1986 and 1987 seasons, fumbling both times.

His defensive play began to suffer as he started packing on the pounds. Perry lost his starting job at the end of the 1987 season, the start of a bitter running battle he had with Ditka over his weight.

By the end of the 1991 season, Perry weighed 380 pounds. Unable to get him to stay at the weight they wanted him at — 315 pounds — the Bears waived him last season. The Eagles, desperate for a run-stopper in the middle of their defensive line, picked him up.

Despite the obvious excess weight Perry still carries, he has remained on the good side of Eagles coach Rich Kotite.

"He's got a great work ethic," Kotite said. "He brings something to this team that we didn't have, from the standpoint of his ability to stop the run."

As much as possible for such a commanding presence, Perry has tried to maintain a low profile with the Eagles. He declined numerous interview requests last season and in training camp, finally agreeing to talk the week before the Bears game.

He still bristles when asked about his weight, maintaining he is "in great shape physically." Asked to define what that means, he said.

49ers jump back in bidding war for Sanders

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Nearly two weeks after dropping out of the bidding for free agent cornerback Deion Sanders, the San Francisco 49ers said Monday they were back in it — sort of.

The 49ers were among at least five NFL teams expressing an interest in Sanders, but backed off because salary cap constraints prevented them from competing with other offers to the two-sport star.

However, Sanders rejected the highest of those offers, a four-year, $17 million pact from New Orleans, and reportedly is again leaning to the 49ers.

San Francisco coach George Seifert said Monday the 49ers were still very much interested in Sanders, who may be awaiting word on the future of the baseball season before deciding where to play football. If there is no strike settlement, baseball owners may decide this week to cancel the rest of the season.

"We would do anything that we deem necessary to improve the talent of our football team," Seifert said. "If an opportunity presents itself and we think it's to the benefit of the club, then we'll react to it."

Club president Carmen Policy said the 49ers' only realistic chance of landing Sanders would be if the Pro Bowl defender would accept a one-year, incentive-laden deal with a low base salary.

"It's not that we don't covet him," Policy said. "We have limitations. They are very well known, and they are severe. It's almost an insult, as well as a distraction for us, to pursue someone with the limited buying power we have, if that person's not interested in the other non-buying factors."

Currently, San Francisco is $21,000 below the $34.6 million salary cap.

Late payoff due players from 1987 NFL strike

By John D. McClain
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — About 1,300 professional football players will share in a record $30 million settlement of charges arising from the 24-day NFL strike in 1987.

The National Labor Relations Board said Monday the agreement between the NFL Players Association and the NFL Management Council is the largest such award in NLRB history. The settlement includes backpay, incentive bonuses and interest.

A breakdown of how much players from each of the 28 teams would receive was not available Monday, but the agency said distribution of the award was expected within a couple of months. The NLRB said further details are to be announced at a news conference Tuesday.

There was no immediate reaction from the Players Association.

But the management council attempted to play down the settlement, saying the award was "part of the $195 million overall settlement that the NFL reached with its players' union in January 1993."

After receiving a complaint from the NFLPA, the NLRB had ruled the council and NFL teams had unlawfully refused to allow returning players to participate in games immediately after the end of the strike Oct. 15.

"The board found that the denial of the returning strikers the right to play or be paid, as well as other acts by league management such as withholding game checks for certain injured reserve players, constituted unfair labor practices in violation of the National Labor Relations Act," NLRB general counsel Fred Feinstein said.

After the NLRB upheld the initial ruling by an administrative law judge, the team owners appealed to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, which had the decision under review.

"This settlement would obviate the need for any additional proceedings before the circuit court," said David Parker, the NLRB director of information.

The strike began Sept. 22 after the NFLPA and the management council were unable to agree on several issues, including free agency in which players would be able to sell their services to the highest bidder after the end of their current contracts.

In its decision in September 1992, the NLRB found the owners had adopted a rule about two weeks into the strike requiring any player wanting to play in a Sunday or Monday game immediately following a settlement or end of the strike to report to work by 1 p.m. on the previous Wednesday.

However, replacement players could be signed to play in Sunday games as late as 4 p.m. on the Saturday before the games and in Monday night games as late as 4 p.m. on the same day, the NLRB said. It noted the players had unconditionally ended the strike on Oct. 15.

According to the ruling, that discrimination amounted to illegal coercion by the owners in violation of the National Labor Relations Act.

NFL: Montana still the master for the student

(From 1C)

The biggest loser so far is Buddy Ryan, not so much because his Cardinals are 0-2 but because of the expectations he raised in Arizona when he became coach and general manager.

What happened?

The Cardinals lost their opener to the Rams, then were beaten 20-17 by the Giants in their home opener Sunday night, before a national television audience and a crowd of 60,066 at Sun Devil Stadium.

"I'm very embarrassed for them," Ryan said of the fans he helped to convert. The Cardinals doubled their season ticket sales when Ryan arrived.

"They believe so much in these guys," Ryan said. "The fans deserve better. They had a whole stadium full of people, and we've got to win if we want to keep them."

Ryan was outcoached by Dan Reeves — "give Dan good talent and he'll go to the Super Bowl, give him average talent and he'll still win," said a man who worked with him in Denver. Ryan's aggressive defensive style was in part to blame for 150 yards in penalties, including three pass interference calls that set up two New York touchdowns.

As for the others:

— The Patriots spent $3 million to sign Ricky Reynolds and Myron Guyton to beef up their secondary, but have surrendered 801 passing yards to Miami's Dan Marino and Buffalo's Jim Kelly the first two weeks.

Guyton, one of Bill Parcells' ex-Giants, was responsible for three TD passes Sunday in the 38-35 loss to the Bills that followed a 39-35 loss at Miami. Parcells probably would have been happier if those losses were 10-6 and 9-6.

— How could anyone have picked the Chiefs (and the Seahawks and Chargers) behind the Raiders and Broncos in the AFC West? The Raiders have been outscored 82-23 in two games and lost their composure against Seattle Sunday. With Scott Davis out, Chester McGlockton and Aundray Bruce got themselves tossed out of the 38-9 loss early for fighting, leaving the front seven a shell.

Denver can't stop anybody — losing the toss in overtime to the Jets sealed the Broncos' defeat.

— The Chiefs?

As Steve Young said Sunday after losing his duel with Joe Montana: "The master still has some more to teach the student." Moreover, Derrick Thomas appears back in form at linebacker after a season limited to eight sacks as a down lineman.

— The Seahawks and Chargers?

Seattle is like Buffalo during the late 1980s — a team building around a couple of rising stars like Rick Mirer and Cortez Kennedy, and a couple of hidden stars like Eugene Robinson and Chris Warren.

San Diego is in the same position. Junior Seau might be the game's best defensive player, if Kennedy or Pittsburgh's Rod Woodson aren't, and Stan Humphries has stabilized the quarterback position.

— And New York-New York?

The Jets aren't exactly a young team, with Art Monk and Nick Lowery having been added to Boomer Esiason and Ronnie Lott. But rookie coach Pete Carroll has made them a happy team after too many losses that should have been wins under Bruce Coslet.

The Giants? Reeves' masterminding and an underrated no-name defense anchored by Michael Brooks, Erik Howard, Keith Hamilton (two sacks Sunday night), Phillippi Sparks (two interceptions) and Corey Miller have been the keys.

SURPRISE II?

If Reeves is sometimes unappreciated because of three Super Bowl losses at Denver, Don Shula of Miami remains on top of his game even after setting a record for most wins ever.

His latest move — out of necessity — was shifting the talented but undersized Bryan Cox into the middle linebacking spot. That helped the Dolphins beat the Packers 24-14 Sunday and run their record against Green Bay to 8-0, the only team the Packers never have beaten.

He also trotted out Irving Spikes, a free-agent rookie from Northeast Louisiana. Like Reeves and other top coaches, Shula could care less about the pedigrees of his players. Spikes, who made the Dolphins off 146 yards on three kickoff returns during an exhibition against the Packers, ran for 71 yards on seven carries during the first half Sunday, helping Miami run off to a 17-0 lead.

THE MORE THINGS CHANGE ...

Green Bay quarterback Brett Favre went into the season pledging to take care of the ball after 24 interceptions last year. So he had a fumble and an interception Sunday in the Packers' loss to the Dolphins.

And Cleveland coach Bill Belichick, who couldn't get along with Bernie Kosar, settled on Vinny Testaverde as his quarterback.

Sunday, Testaverde reverted to old habits. Testaverde, who holds the NFL's single-season interception record with 35 in 1988 with the Bucs, threw four Sunday as the Browns lost to the Steelers 17-10 at home, only the second time in the last 13 games that Pittsburgh won at Cleveland.

COMPLETION PERCENTAGE

John Elway, who says he has the best receiving corps in his 12-year career at Denver, has six TD passes for the season.

But two are to the other team, one of the reasons Denver is 0-2 for the first time since 1968. One was a 99-yard return by Stanley Richard of San Diego last week, the other a 67-yard return by Mo Lewis of the Jets on Sunday.

TWO-POINT CHART

Last week, there were nine two-point conversion attempts on 70 touchdowns and four were successful.

On Sunday, there were 66 touchdowns, seven two-point attempts and three successful. But only two of the two-pointers had an effect on the games. The others were by teams hopelessly out of games.

The game-changers:

— The Chiefs, down 14-9 after a safety, went for two after scoring a TD in the third quarter and made it, giving them a 17-14 lead instead of 16-14, a safer cushion.

— The Jets, taking a 20-19 lead over the Broncos with 4:15 left in regulation, made a two-pointer, meaning Jason Elam's field goal for Denver tied the score instead of winning the game. Then the Jets went on to win in overtime.

Stanford given free touchdown

CHICAGO (AP) — The Big Ten said Monday that officials mistakenly awarded a touchdown to Stanford in the Cardinal's 41-41 tie with Northwestern, but the error won't change the outcome of the game.

It was the third time in a year that the conference acknowledged that mistakes by Big Ten officials altered the result of a football game.

"We don't have an instant replay or access to go upstairs and look at a monitor and reconsider the call," David Parry, the league's supervisor of officials, said from his Michigan City, Ind., home. "There is not much to do but live with the judgment."

On Saturday, Stanford's Mike Mitchell fumbled as he was about to cross the goal line and Northwestern recovered the ball in the end zone for an apparent touchback. But officials conferred and decided Mitchell had crossed the goal line before losing the ball.

After reviewing ESPN replays, however, the conference said Monday that "game officials were not in position to see Mike Mitchell's fumble between the 2- and 1-yard lines." The league said that resulted in "an obvious error in judgment" and "the Wildcats should have been awarded possession."

The Big Ten said decisions of game officials are final, but "when obvious errors of judgment or rules application have a significant affect on the outcome of the game, the conference believes public acknowledgement of the error is appropriate."

Parry said the officials might eventually be disciplined, but the league wouldn't make such action public.

"The officials are rated and graded, and records are kept. I can assure you of that," he said.

On two occasions last year, Illinois lost because of bad calls.

In Arizona's 16-14 win on Sept. 18, two Illini fumbles that were picked up and run back for touchdowns should have been ruled dead at the points of recovery.

Illinois lost to Oregon 13-7 the following week, but the Big Ten said officials should have let stand linebacker Simeon Rice's TD after he stripped the ball from a Ducks' running back. Instead, they ruled the Oregon player's forward progress had been stopped.

Illinois got an apology in both cases, but the losses were not reversed.

Point-a-minute is Florida vs. Livingston

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — It boggles the imagination: Florida's point-a-minute offense against Livingston's point-a-minute defense. Now there's a game that might rival Georgia Tech's 222-0 victory over Cumberland.

"I just like to remember that the last time I played Florida, we beat them," said Livingston's first-year coach, Todd Stroud, who was an assistant at Auburn when the Tigers upset Florida a year ago.

Stroud now is coaching another team called the Tigers, but there's no parallel between Auburn and Livingston, a Division II university in west Alabama that likes to boast its small enough (enrollment 2,100) for students to get to know nearly everyone on campus.

Unfortunately, that also makes it hard to conceal that the school's football team has given up an average of 63 points in its first two games.

"We hear the whispers," said Chad Cochrane, one of three freshmen who start on the defensive line. "But you just have to ignore stuff like that and try to keep confidence in yourself and your teammates."

That's where Stroud comes in, even though he conceded in a rare slip of faith: "It's very frustrating. I haven't been around a team that lost more than three games the last six years."

Just as quickly, the coach's voice brightened, his outlook returning to its normal setting: confident. The 30-year-old coach, who looks younger than many of his players, makes clear he isn't going to let things like getting beaten by Nicholls State 77-7 and Albany State 49-6 get him down in his first head coaching job.

"When I see eight freshmen starting for us last week on defense, I see the future," he said. "I see this team getting better real fast."

Back in the present, Stroud has got to settle for bad — real bad.

Last week, Livingston suffered its worst loss in 53 years against a team it defeated last year. Nicholls State piled up a school-record 518 rushing yards and finished with 614 yards overall. The Colonels completed only two passes, but both went for touchdowns. They even returned a punt for a TD.

The NCAA doesn't keep complete team statistics for Division II, ranking only the top 30 nationally. But it's a safe to say that Livingston would be at the bottom of the list, just as it would be in Division I-A (where New Mexico State has the most charitable defense with a 57-point average) or I-AA (where Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo is at the bottom after giving up 61 points in its only game).

Stroud knew he was in for a rebuilding job at Livingston, which allowed more than 40 points per game last season, including 208 in the final four games of a 2-7-1 season. But things got worse when 42 of the 88 veteran players quit the team after the new coach arrived.

"We started monitoring class attendance, began a study hall a couple of hours a night for the guys who had poor academics, had a stringent off-season weight program," Stroud said. "Just the things that every major program does.

"But a lot of kids weren't tough enough or mature enough to handle the things we were doing."

That left Stroud with a roster than includes only four seniors and a group of freshman that's larger than the other three classes put together.

"After that first game, it was funny," Stroud said, looking for humor in a humorless situation. "We had a lot of freshmen who were tickled to death just to play in their first college football game. There wasn't a whole lot of expression change."

But the mood began to change last week when Nicholls State began scoring ... and scoring ... and scoring.

"There was some nagging," Cochrane said. "We were down on each other."

Stroud made sure his players were aware of Florida's 73-7 victory over Kentucky earlier in the day. "We as coaches try to be positive, try to keep the team pointed in the right direction," he said. "You can draw all kinds of parallels."

He didn't point out what might happen if Livingston played the top-ranked Gators.

BuddyBall QB tough

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Buddy Ryan doesn't care who get angry. It's his show and he'll put at quarterback whoever he wants.

"I came here to win football games, not to win friends and influence people," the Arizona Cardinals coach said Monday. "And I'm going to try to win ballgames."

On Sunday, Ryan said there was no quarterback controversy on his club, even though Jim McMahon replaced Steve Beuerlein during a 20-17 loss to the New York Giants.

Now Ryan has thrown Jay Schroeder into the mix, saying nobody has locked up a starting job. The coach plans to announce his decision Wednesday.

Ryan said Beuerlein was No. 1 for the time being. But McMahon, who was four of five for 50 yards late in the game, and Schroeder are in the wings.

Beuerlein said he wasn't surprised at being yanked but still considers himself the team's best quarterback.

"I know exactly what I have to do, and I've done it before, and there's no reason why I can't do it again," he said. "I'm 29 years old. It's not like I'm over the hill, it's not like all of a sudden I don't have an arm. I just have to figure out what I'm doing wrong and get it right."

McMahon and Schroeder, who make less than $400,000 apiece to Beuerlein's $1.9 million, said they expect Beuerlein to hang on. But Schroeder, a former starter for Washington, the Los Angeles Raiders and Cincinnati, said he wouldn't be surprised to get the call.

"I wouldn't be here if I thought I was done with my career," said Schroeder, a free agent signed a week ago. "I can still play the game."

Ryan took responsibility for the loss to the Giants. In the "Monday Night Cardinal Report" on KTVK-TV, Ryan put himself and offensive coordinator Dave Atkins in "Buddy's Doghouse," a graphic showing a sleeping mutt.

But Ryan also gave the team an earful.

"I don't know how much tougher I can get on them," he said. "I think I've been about as tough as you get. We need to win some games. It's their ballclub."

Longhorn legend Nobis came close to coaching at Texas

By Suzanne Halliburton
N.Y. Times News Service

Tommy Nobis thought back to the doings of a December day 18 years ago, and wondered how a different selection of a Longhorn head coach might have changed his life.

That December, Nobis, arguably the best Longhorn ever, had decided to retire after an 11-year career with the Atlanta Falcons. He had always wanted to coach, and he thought about calling Mike Campbell back in Austin about a job.

Campbell, Darrell Royal's loyal assistant who helped coordinate the Texas defense for years, was thought to be next in line to replace his old head coach, who had retired following the Longhorns' win over Arkansas on Dec. 4.

"I figured I was going to be the first to knock on his door and ask for a job," Nobis said. "I guess that was a stroke of bad luck for me."

Texas instead opted for Fred Akers, and Nobis, the Longhorns' most famous linebacker, stayed in Atlanta, where he is now vice president for player development for the Falcons. Rather than coming home to coach, Nobis, who turned No. 60 into a hallowed Texas tradition, watched as his family put down roots a thousand miles from where he and his wife grew up.

Nobis is surprisingly modest when people ask him why he had such a successful career with the Longhorns and Falcons. He calls himself an over- achiever and credits, simply, year-round hard work for becoming Texas' first two-time consensus All-American selection and the top draft pick in 1966 of both the American and National Football Leagues. He started as a sophomore in 1963, the year the Longhorns claimed their first national championship.

The October issue of College Sports lists its all-time dream team. Nobis was a first-teamer, while Longhorn Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell made the second team, with quarterback Bobby Layne and kicking specialist Russell Erxleben earning spots on the third team.

"I had a real desire to play," the 50-year-old Nobis said. "In football, that's what separates the good ones. I was lucky because I came through Texas when Coach Royal was at the top. Things were pretty well going. The tradition had already started. I was blessed coming in during that time."

Nobis was recruited out of San Antonio Jefferson High School, where his drill-sergeant-turned-coach forced his team to become so disciplined that "our hair had to be combed a certain way, and our shoes had to be neat."

His father, Tommy Sr., also was a great influence on his son's athletic career. "The way some fathers would spend their weekends playing golf, my Dad's thrill was watching his sons play sports."

Nobis' year-round hard work helped him learn the mechanics of linebackers so well that tackling became second nature. Royal, in fact, called Nobis the most accurate tackler he'd ever seen, which is probably why seeing him make 20 or more stops a game from 1963-65 was the rule rather than the exception.

In 1963, Royal asked the red-headed, freckle-faced sophomore to wear No. 60, the number worn by a tenacious linebacker named Johnny Treadwell, a consensus All-American for Texas in 1962. Three decades later, only the best Longhorn linebackers have been asked to wear the number. Brian Jones, a member of the 1990 team who now plays for the the Los Angeles Raiders, was the last No. 60. Winfred Tubbs was asked to switch in 1992, but he turned down the offer, fearing the pressure of the uniform might adversely affect his play.

As he grows older, Nobis says the tradition means more to him now than 31 years ago when Royal used the number as a motivational tool. In fact, Nobis says, the older he gets, the more sentimental he is toward his time at Texas.

"I certainly appreciate and cherish the memories more," he said. "They flash back when I look at those plaques and trophies. A lot of people, when they think of Texas football (back then), they think of all the games we won, the Cotton Bowl, the Orange Bowl. Playing Joe Namath. Bear Bryant. Darrell Royal.

"But when I think back on my college football days, I think of all those Saturday afternoons that I was able to experience at Memorial Stadium, seeing all those fans in the stands, cheering, singing (IT) The Eyes of Texas. I feel t hat now. I feel that every time I talk about it.

"When you say college football, that's what flashes in my mind, more so than any Cotton Bowl win."

Texas gains new sense of confidence

AUSTIN (AP) — The 17th-ranked Texas Longhorns have overcome more than just Pittsburgh and Louisville to open the season 2-0 for the first time since 1985.

Players and coaches said Monday the team's ability to get past off-the-field problems and a rash of injuries has given the Longhorns a new sense of confidence.

Texas has a week off before opening the Southwest Conference schedule at Texas Christian on Sept. 24.

During fall practices, wide receivers Justin McLemore, Wane McGarity and running back Darrell Wilson were lost to season-ending injuries. Then, star wide receivers Mike Adams and Lovell Pinkney were suspended for the Longhorns' season-opening victory against Pittsburgh for violating NCAA rules.

Adams is back on the team. Pinkney has been kept out of practices and games while the school investigates whether he took a trip to Los Angeles in May to meet with a sports agent. He has denied taking the trip.

"We overcame a lot over the first two weeks of the season," said Texas coach John Mackovic. "We have stayed focused on what we needed to do. More than anything else we are developing confidence."

Center Dan Neil said the adversity has "helped our team realize that the same things happen on the field and you have just got to be able to overcome those things. We could have cried about it, but we didn't."

Receiver Curtis Jackson said the team is unified.

"We are like a family," Jackson said. "Everyone is pulling for one another."

Defensive lineman Thomas Baskin said last year's team might not have responded so positively. Baskin said Texas' new spirit has been on display in a tight, 30-28 victory against Pittsburgh and in a come-from-behind, 30-16 defeat of Louisville on Saturday.

"This year, we have the attitude that no matter what the score is we can come back and win," said Baskin, who had a sack and helped ignite a defensive effort that carried the Longhorns to victory against Louisville.

"Last year, we might have had some apprehension in a tight game. Some people might have been looking for someone else to make the play," Baskin said.

Prices retreat

Crude oil weakened in thin trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

West Texas Intermediate for October delivery fell 14 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange to $17.39 a barrel.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $15.75 a barrel.

October natural gas rose 5 cents to $1.688 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Hughes cuts

LOS ANGELES — GM Hughes Electronics will lay off 4,400 workers as part of a cost-cutting program prompted by shrinking defense spending.

The layoffs, which will take place through 1995, represent nearly 10 percent of the aerospace company's worldwide work force.

Hughes builds ship-based radar, air traffic control gear and large-scale air-defense systems, including the system NATO uses in Europe.

"We must continue to maintain a competitive edge if we are to grow a business base that will help us ensure a viable company and thriving work force into the future," C. Michael Armstrong, chairman and chief executive, said Monday.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar fell to a two-month low against the British pound on Tuesday after England's central bank boosted a key interest rate for the first time in nearly five years.

The inflation-fighting move inspired dealers to sell dollars and other currencies in favor of the pound. The dollar strengthened against other European currencies and was slightly lower against the Japanese yen.

Seeking to head off inflation, the Bank of England raised its minimum lending rate, the lowest interest at which commercial institutions can borrow funds, by one-half percentage point to 5.75 percent.

Gold prices were mostly lower. On the Commodity Exchange in New York, gold for current delivery fell 80 cents a troy ounce to $390.90.

In New York, the pound fetched $1.5700, up $1.70 from Friday.

In New York, the dollar fell to 99.13 yen from 99.15 late Friday.

Stocks slump

NEW YORK — Stocks fell in sluggish trading Monday as investors worried that new government data on inflation would bring higher interest rates and lower corporate profits.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 14.47 points to 3,860.34.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 13 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 244.68 million shares, down from 293.34 million in the previous session.

German firm buys back Bayer Aspirin

■ If approved, deal would give drugmaker the businesses it lost during World War I.

N.Y. Times News Service

In a $1 billion deal with SmithKline Beecham, Bayer A.G., the giant German drug and chemical company, Monday regained the American rights to its best-known invention, Bayer aspirin, which were confiscated as enemy property in World War I.

Bayer agreed to buy the North American portion of the Sterling Winthrop nonprescription drug business from SmithKline, which just two weeks ago announced that it was buying Sterling's over-the-counter drug lines from Eastman Kodak Co. for $2.9 billion. SmithKline, based in London, is keeping the international portion of the business.

Dr. Manfred Schneider, chairman of Bayer, said the company would operate under its own name again in the United States. Its Miles Inc. unit, based in Pittsburgh, was one of the country's 100 largest industrial companies last year, with $6.5 billion in sales. "This is a memorable event in our corporate history," he said.

Bayer, based in Leverkusen, Germany, lost the American aspirin franchise during World War I, when the U.S. government confiscated the assets of a number of German companies.

The German-owned shares of Merck & Co. were also seized as was the American drug business of Schering, which became Schering-Plough Corp. after a second government takeover during World War II.

Sterling bought the Bayer assets in 1918 in a government auction for $5.3 million. In similar bidding, George Merck, a 23-year-old American, bought control of his family's company.

Bayer struggled for years, in lawsuits and negotiations with Sterling, to regain full rights to its name in the United States. It was a Bayer chemist, Felix Hoffmann, who developed aspirin in 1897.

Securities analysts said Monday's sale was a good move for both Bayer, which would double its North American over-the-counter drug business, and SmithKline, which plans to reduce its debt from two recent large acquisitions.

Before the Sterling Winthrop deals, SmithKline agreed on May 3 to buy Diversified Pharmaceuticals, a managed health care drug unit, from United HealthCare Corp. for $2.3 billion.

For the Miles unit of Bayer, the deal would add to its Alka-Selzer and One-A-Day and Flintstones vitamins, as well as prescription drugs and chemicals.

But Neil B. Sweig, an analyst at Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., said all types of aspirin were losing ground to products like Tylenol, Advil, Motrin and Aleve in the $2.5 billion-a-year American market for nonprescription analgesics.

Sweig said acetaminophen products, led by Johnson & Johnson's Tylenol, had about 43 percent of the market this year, followed by all aspirin products at 30 percent.

Ibuprofen products, like the American Home Products Corp.'s Advil and Upjohn's Motrin IB had about 25 percent, and Procter & Gamble's new Aleve, or naproxen, about 2 percent.

Santa hams it up with 1994's "His and Hers" gift from the Neiman Marcus Christmas Book in Dallas.

Neiman's, Windsor gang unwrap lavish gifts

By Susan Hightower
Associated Press

DALLAS — Decisions, decisions.

Will this year's top his-and-hers Christmas gift be a $7,500 underwater scuba scooter from Neiman Marcus?

Or will it be a $25,000 trip to London that includes dinner with a member of the House of Lords and a stay at Hampton Court, the royal palace that was home to King Henry VIII, from The House of Windsor Collection?

The House of Windsor, a new catalog for Anglophiles, tried to upstage Neiman's traditional splashy Christmas gift reception Monday, but in an oh-so-British fashion.

Neiman's showed off its top gifts to faithful shoppers at its lavish morning reception complete with three herald trumpeters, a mother-and-baby pair of grazing miniature donkeys and a Santa Claus wearing a beard, rolled-up red suit and flippers.

Meanwhile, the Windsor gang scheduled a 5 p.m. private reception in New York hosted by Queen Elizabeth's cousin, Prince Michael of Kent, chairman of the catalog's advisory board. British trade officials and diplomats were invited, but it was magazine journalists only.

"It's sort of much more tony," sniffed Brad Larschan, president and chief executive officer of the House of Windsor Collection.

"This is a very British affair, and Neiman's is a very Dallas affair, and we're just different. But we're good friends, and we look forward to giving them a little bit of competition," he said.

More tony than Neiman-Marcus?

The upscale department store chain has been showcasing extravagant Christmas gifts since 1959. This year, the His and Hers Bellaqua Breathing Observation Bubbles, done in yellow and pink, are a bargain by Neiman's standards, at $7,500 each. The battery-driven "BOB" is ridden like a scooter and can dive to 40 feet.

Other featured gifts include a couple dancing passionate tangos to advertise a $5,995 weeklong New Year's trip to Argentina; a $7,400 electric gondola sailing on a mini-lagoon; and $370 black-and-white cleated boots for cowboy golfers.

But the hit of Neiman's show was a 10-foot-tall, 300-gallon elephant-shaped acrylic aquarium for $120,000.

Compaq unveils new members of ProLiant

HOUSTON (AP) -- Compaq Computer Corp., seeking a bigger piece of the corporate computing pie, today introduces a new line powered by up to four 100-megahertz Pentium processors.

The new members of its ProLiant family of servers also include the first fruits of Compaq's alliance with Oracle, a database software company.

The machines are aimed at businesses that must juggle, maintain and sift through large amounts of information, said Mary McDowell, Compaq's director of systems product marketing.

"A typical customer for this kind of computer would be, say, a company that does a lot of direct marketing," Ms. McDowell said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Treasury notes are safe when held to maturity

By Bill Doyle

Q: I understand that U.S. Treasury securities are risk-free investments when held to maturity. I also understand that certificates no longer are printed for Treasury securities. Evidence of ownership is via "book entry" — recorded on computers.

Doyle

If I buy previously issued "Treasuries" in the secondary market through my bank, how safe is my investment, which is "held in safekeeping" by the bank?

A: Just as safe as if you had purchased the Treasury bills, notes or bonds through any other method. The only possible way you can lose money is by selling those Treasuries before they mature. In that case, you might get a lower price than you paid for those securities.

When you buy Treasuries through a bank, the Treasury Department's computer system records those securities as being in that bank's account. Your name does not appear on Treasury Department records. However, your bank does send you a statement as evidence that it is holding the securities for you. That applies whether the securities are newly issued or are purchased from a previous owner in the secondary market.

Things are just a bit different when you use the "Treasury Direct" system to purchase Treasury securities on your own. You do that by submitting a "tender" to buy newly issued T-bills, notes or bonds; the securities then are held in your personal book-entry Treasury Direct account.

No matter which method you use, you know that you will receive the stated interest rate on the bills, notes or bonds and that the securities will be paid off at face value upon maturity.

If you hold book-entry Treasuries through a bank and that bank fails, those securities are not part of the busted bank's assets and cannot be touched by the bank's creditors.

Summed up, Treasury securities are rock-solid safe when held to maturity, no matter how you hold them.

Q: I am a small-business owner hoping to retire soon, and I have about $100,000 to invest in something safe providing a decent return in the form of monthly checks. Most brokers want me to get into mutual funds, but I am not so sure about funds.

One broker urges me to invest in zero-coupon U.S. Treasury "Strips." He tells me they are 100 percent safe. What do you think of them?

A: Although perfectly safe if held to maturity, Strips are not suitable for you.

"Strips" is an acronym that stands for "separate trading of interest and principal of securities.

The Treasury Department creates Strips by separating the semiannual interest payments from the principal of debt securities and selling each as a zero-coupon bond through brokerage firms and banks.

Here's the big attraction of Strips and other "zeroes": You buy them at low prices and redeem them at much higher prices when they mature.

However, except for municipal bond zeroes, you do pay income tax each year on the "imputed" interest that is building up.

In order to get monthly income, you would need to own Strips maturing each and every month. There simply isn't that variety of Strips available.

Q: Is it possible to obtain monthly checks from an investment in just one mutual fund?

A: Yes.

Here are a couple of way to accomplish that objective:

■ Buy shares of one of the mutual funds paying dividends monthly. While most funds pay income dividends quarterly — every three months — and capital gains distributions annually, some do make monthly dividend payments.

■ Invest a reasonably large amount — at least $10,000 — in a fund and start a "periodic withdrawal plan" of no more than 6 percent annually. If you take out more than that, you risk having your financial well run dry.

Miss Cayce's Christmas Store: A decade of beauty

The Grand Opening this Friday of Miss Cayce's Christmas Store will mark an important milestone for the owners, Kathy Harrison and Becky McCraney because they are celebrating their tenth year in business.

Over the last decade, Miss Cayce's Christmas Store has become the place to go in Midland for decorations and gifts due to the high quality and fantastic selection of items on offer.

This tenth year should prove to be the best yet because this is the second year for Miss Cayce's at the new location in the Fairmont Park Shopping Center.

The new store is bursting with beautiful pieces of all descriptions with many new items and themes for this year. As usual, Kathy and Becky have created a wonderland in their store: every square inch is an inspiration, with different areas highlighting different themes.

This year's themes include "A Christmas Campout," the "Once upon a Time" Victorian selection and a favorite with the kids, "Mickey and Friends."

However, themed decorations are only a small part of Miss Cayce's Christmas Store because, if it has to do with making the holiday season beautiful, then they stock it.

One of the annual highlights is their grove of permanent trees. Perfect for those who suffer from allergies, or do not want to clear up after a real tree, the permanent trees are very realistic and come in a range of sizes: from 2-foot to 15-foot.

One of the new aspects this year is a concentration of decorations for doors and porches. First impressions are very important, and what better way to welcome guests to your home than with an elegant and beautiful festive display around the entryway.

Kathy and Becky have a tremendous number of custom-made decorations which range from wreaths and figurines to table-top displays and collectibles.

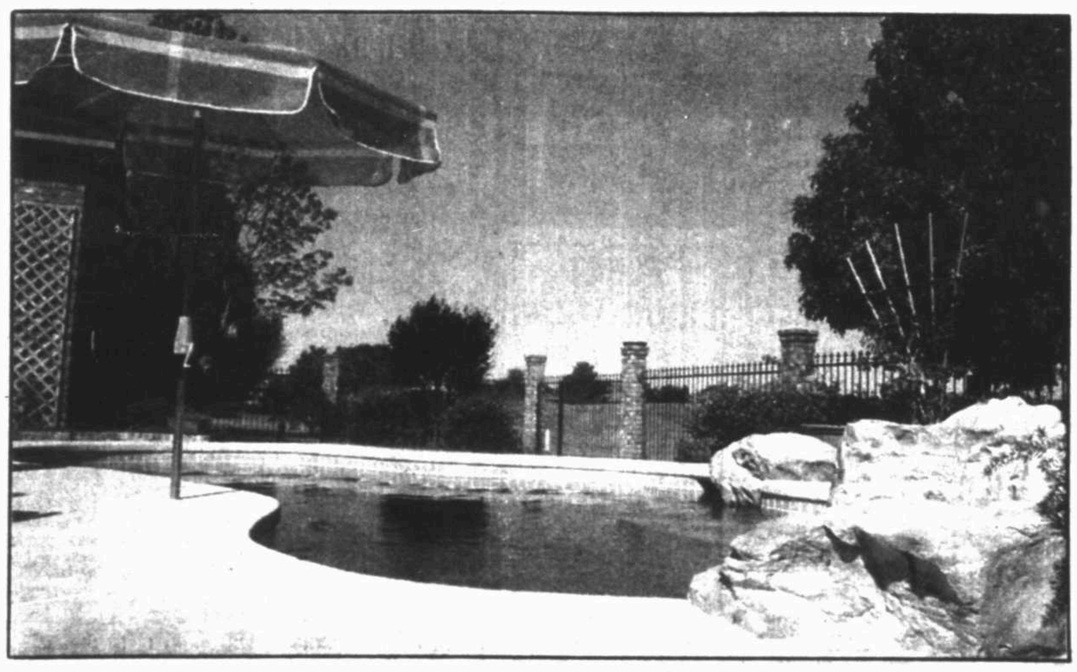
Among the collectibles for this year are the timeless Nutcracker and smokers from Germany and the ever popular 'Original Snow Village' and 'Dickens Village' from Department 56.

There is so much on offer at Miss Cayce's that there really is something to suit all tastes and price ranges.

Miss Cayce's Christmas Store is ready for the up-coming holiday season with a whole host of decorative ideas and pieces for the Thanksgiving celebrations. Based around a harvest theme and featuring the time-honored motifs of pilgrims, turkeys, scarecrows and pumpkins these decorations glow with autumnal colors and are sure to be a great success.

To help celebrate Friday's Grand Opening, Becky and Kathy are offering a 10 percent discount on all items through the week end. They will be open 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and from 1 p.m. -5 p.m. Sunday at 3323 N. Midland Drive. 689-7192.

Kathy Harrison and Becky McCraney, the owners of Miss Cayce's Christmas Store, with just some of their festive decorations. They are celebrating their tenth year in business this Friday with the Grand Opening of the store in Fairmont Park Shopping Center at Wadley and Midland Drive.



There is more to designing and building a pool than meets the eye as Mr and Mrs Brewster found out when Billy Aylor built their pool in Greentree. "Billy worked with us, and we got what we wanted at a great price," said Mrs Brewster. "They really were more professional than most," she added. Aylor Pools specialize in building and renovating pools and decks and can supply the latest in technology at a great price. For mort information about their products and services, call the showroom at 520-0644 or stop by 333 N. Midkiff.

For over ...5 and a half decades Billy Aylor, the owner of Aylor Pools, has strived to produce the best quality, best designed pools to be found anywhere.

The time and effort has certainly paid off with Aylor being accepted into the Master Pool Guild, in which there are less than 90 members world wide. This guild represents a group of builders who are on the cutting edge of pool design and technology.

Unusually, he has three branch offices, one in San Angelo, one in Bulgaria and one here in Midland.

Currently, Aylor is concentrating his efforts on pool renovation and new constructions here in the Permian Basin and he is trying to pass on the message that a good pool is a healthy pool.

Pool renovation is not just a question of aesthetics. Although looks do matter, there are other important considerations: these include, quite simply, money.

Old, poorly constructed, badly maintained or weather beaten swimming pools can have a costly effect due to the build up of bacteria and algae in the rough porous surface of the pool.

Controlling this build up requires extra chemicals which compounds the problem while adding the additional one of extra expense.

The difference in maintenance costs between an old pool in poor condition and a newly renovated pool can be as much as 25 percent, a significant amount in the long term.

New high-tech materials and techniques, which use micro fibre technology to coat existing linings, have other beneficial side effects which include warmer pools. Because the new material is highly reflective, more light is converted into heat. This can translate into a 10-12 degree temperature rise, which saves money on heating.

The new technology that Aylor is using is designed to last a lot longer than traditional materials; so much so that the warranty on a renovated pool's interior is 25-years, as opposed to 1-year for a 'normal' new pool.

Aylor is having a good reaction to these new methods because the difference in appearance and cost are quickly notice by customers. Pool linings and deck surfaces are smooth and cool to the touch because the materials used are non-porous.

Non-porosity is the key to longevity according to Aylor, "because there are no cracks to enhance the freeze/thaw effect."

Designing pools is not just a question of knowing about the latest advances in modern technology, and Aylor stays abreast of all of the advances, whether it be in design or chemical technology.

Aylor Pools has a great deal of experience in designing custom pools which incorporate features such as waterfalls, fountains and fibre-optic lighting.

For more information about pool and deck renovation and construction stop by their showroom at 333 N. Midkiff or call Aylor at 520-0644.

"It's 4 U" Game Rules:

Anyone 18 years or older can enter except employees (and family members of employees) of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Brite systems Inc., Associated Publishing Co., and their advertising and promotion agencies.

The "It's 4 U" Game is designed for people who live in the Midland and Odessa calling areas and no purchase is required to play or win prizes, although long distance toll charges may apply if you call from outside the Midland-Odessa calling area.

Look for the "It's 4 U" Game ad here and in the advertisers' service directory in the Midland Reporter-Telegram every day until November 5, 1994. Call 560-2400 and enter any four-digit advertiser's code listed in the directory. You will hear a brief advertiser's message and, if you are one of five instant winners chosen at random each week, you will win one of that week's prizes. If you are an instant winner, listen for details about claiming your prize. In order to claim your prize, you will be required to give your name, age, address and telephone number. The more often you call, the better your chance of winning a prize.

You can also enter a second chance drawing for unclaimed prizes by hand printing your complete name and address and daytime phone number on a 3"x5" piece of paper and mailing it in an envelope to "It's 4 U" Second Chance Game, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702, so that it is received before the deadline, October 30, 1994. Enter as often as you wish, but submit only one entry in each envelope. Entries become the property of the sponsors. None will be returned.

Each game begins at 12:01 a.m. Monday and ends at 11:59 p.m. Sunday. Each week for eight weeks ending November 5, 1994, five entries will be selected at random and will win one of that week's prize. The total value of all prizes to be awarded in the "It's 4 U" game will equal $4,000 or more. The names and cities of winners will be published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Ads page. No substitution of prizes is permitted. Only one prize will be awarded to each winner.

By entering, winners authorize the use of their names, cities or photos for publicity purposes. Winners may be required to sign an affidavit of eligibility and release. Taxes are the responsibility of winners. Void where prohibited.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its few "Special Allowance" routes. This larger route receives a $25 check each Friday in addition to the regular monthly route profits. The route is in the Loop 250 and Midkiff area.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.

Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for anyone willing to work early morning hours. These routes require a small deposit.
