Diplomas Awarded 92 Graduates Last Friday Night

Last Friday night at 8:15, ninety-five young people marched into the high school auditorium for the final exercises of the year. Ninety-two diplomas were awarded and three will be awarded at the end of the summer when three pupils will have completed their regulation sixteen courses.

Pupils of the 1937 class appeared in the following numbers of the program: Miss Cheley Bowles sang "Out of the Dusk to You"; Harold Williams gave the address of welcome; Kilmer Corbin gave a short address as president of the class; Richard Crawley, Homer Simpson, Hilburn Gilliam, Earl Jacobs, George Hornbeck, Victor Crawley, R. A. Stuart and Mabel Deane Sasser gave special musical arrangements on their respective band and orchestra instruments. All of them are members of the band and orchestra.

Kilmer Corbin was the recipient of the gold medal for best service in school activities. Herman Sandal was voted the best all-around athlete whose training, behavior and performance best represented the Lamesa High School.

All parts of the county now report that sufficient moisture is available for planting and those who have already planted report very little loss from the rainfall.

It is estimated that the county was approximately 60 per cent planted prior to the rain received this week and the additional moisture will prove very beneficial to growing crops. Dr. Crockett stressed the importance of club service in Rotary International and stated that good leadership, good programs and good meals were the life-giving vitamins so necessary in the healthy growth and development of any club.

Dr. Crockett cited examples in his own personal life and the lives of other men of the dividends to be obtained from Rotary in the form of personal service, community service and even from financial gains. He praised highly the Rotarian, the club magazine, and urged every member to read its contents closely and recommended a copy be placed in the high school library.

Dr. Crockett is a practicing physician of Harlingen, Texas, and has been a member of the Rotary Club of that place since 1926. SHUMAKE HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

I haven't used but one commercial pattern since I got my foundation pattern fitted" said Mrs. S. R. Stanfield to members of the Shumake home demonstration club when they met in a called meeting in her home on May 19 for the purpose of fitting foundation garment patterns for the new club members.

There were seven members present and one visitor, Mrs. Bernie Stuart of Spangenberg.

Four new patterns were cut and several checked. All present reported their patterns had been a great help to them as well as a time and money saver.

An appetizing lunch was spread at the noon hour which was greatly enjoyed by all present.

The next meeting will be in the home of Mrs. V. G. Callahan, May 28 at 2:30 p. m. Several demonstrations will be given on how to prevent accidents in the home.—Reporter.

O. K. HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The O. K. community needs new door steps, as that seems to be the greatest menace to life and limb, according to the ladies of the O. K. home demonstration club which met with Mrs. Billie Snellgrove on last Friday afternoon.

There were eighteen present, with four visitors and we enrolled six new members. Mrs. W. E. Walls was elected our delegate to short course. We decided to render a play at the school house in order to finance the trip. Several reports were turned in on kitchen improvements. Our next meeting is to be with Mrs. Henderson. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.—Reporter.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Ashley and children spent the week end fishing near Post.

WELCH HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The club met in the home of Mrs. Speck Preston, May 19, with twelve members and three visitors present. The roll call was answered with how to prevent accidents about the home.

Preventing accidents in the kitchen, the dangerous bedroom, special child hazards, and the first aid kit were discussed by all the members. Mrs. Keener gave us a report on last council meeting and Mrs. Meeks has made two foundation patterns.

The next meeting will be in the home of Mrs. King Preston, June 2, and Miss Phenix will meet with us. We would be awfully glad for more women to join the club.—Reporter.

SPAREMBERG HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The SpareMBERG home demonstration club members answered roll call with something in the kitchen that may cause an accident.

A very interesting program was sponsored by Mrs. Beckmeyer. She talked on the use of the first aid kit. Those taking part on the program were Mrs. Lee Hanson and Mrs. M. W. Pruitt.

The next meeting will be June 1 in the home of Mrs. Burns. A refreshing drink of punch was served to six members by the hostess, Mrs. Lee Hanson.—Reporter.

FAIRVIEW HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

There are six steps toward the goal of an efficient kitchen:

1. Water at sink with good waste disposal.
2. Correct height for working.
3. Properly grouped working centers
4. Adequate storage space.
5. Sanitary, attractive walls and floor finishes.
6. Labor saving equipment.

These six steps were explained by Miss Mattie Phenix to the Fairview home demonstration club at a meeting at three o'clock in the home of Mrs. R. W. Westbrook on Tuesday, May 18. A carefully planned kitchen should be oblong, the base cabinet should be a convenient height for the individual. This may easily be determined by placing the palm of hands flat on a box then measure distance to the floor. A toe space of two to three inches should be left at the base of the cabinet. The average width should be twenty-three to twenty-four inches. Drawers are easier cleaned than bins.

The club will meet next on June 1 at 2:30 p. m. with Mrs. F. T. Raney.

The program will be "Famous Trees of Texas" by Mrs. Bill Robinson; "Austin, the Capitol of Texas" by Mrs. V. E. Towns; "The Cities of Texas" by Mrs. R. W. Westbrook, Mrs. W. T. Stephens and Mrs. E. L. Robinson.—Reporter.

SHUMAKE HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

"The kitchen is the work shop of Dawson county home demonstration the home," said Miss Mattie Phenix, agent to members of the Shumake home demonstration club when they met in the home of Mrs. M. E. McAnear May 14.

The storage space in the kitchen should be arranged in the order that you do your work. First in order should be a storage space for food, a refrigerator for perishable food, ventilated cabinet drawers for food that will keep awhile. Next should be a place for cooking vessels and dishes. The sink should be about the center of the working space. The stove should be as close as possible to the working and storage centers so as to save as many steps as possible.

It will probably cost a little more to put your kitchen in best order now, but it will save lots of steps that would probably injure your health to say nothing of the present work and worry.

Mrs. J. B. Speck was elected short course delegate.

MIDWAY HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

Follow the triangle on the color wheel for combination of colors. Miss Phenix told the Midway home demonstration club when they met in the home of Mrs. C. W. Shafer May 20.

Tints and shades mixed dull; the colors. Printed materials are easily worn. Dark colors diminish the apparent size, while light colors intensify colors and increase the apparent size. Plain material or solid colors are hard to wear unless especially becoming and are more striking than mixtures.

Eleven members and five visitors were present. Mesdames J. G. Morris, C. Henry, J. B. Speck and R. T. Stanfield of the Shumake club were present and Mrs. G. E. Fleeman of Big Spring. We welcome visitors. The next meeting will be in the home of Mrs. L. C. Murff June 3.—Reporter.

Miss Loree Hill and Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Alden of Odessa visited in Slaton Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman Campbell visited her mother Mrs. Lola Tate in Lubbock Sunday.

CENTRAL HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

"Make the brains save the heels is not alone a matter of correct grouping of equipment. There is a mental side which can be simplified and improved just as much as physical activities can be reduced by system and order," said Miss Phenix in her demonstration on the arrangement of the storage space in the kitchen last Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. E. Hannah.

An efficient kitchen is one in which the greatest amount of work can be done in the shortest length of time and the least amount of friction by one person. This requires proper grouping of the equipment. There are three jobs performed in every kitchen, receiving and storing the food, cooking equipment should be arranged so they and serving food, cleaning up. The will be one continuous line of activity.

Our meeting time has been changed from 2:30 o'clock to 3:00 o'clock. There were fifteen members and two visitors present. Mrs. Elmer Walls was elected reporter.

The club will meet at 3:00 o'clock, Wednesday June 2, with Mrs. Lee Barron.

HOME DEMONSTRATION WORK HELPS RAISE STANDARDS OF LIVING SAYS STATE AGENT

Two sides of pictures of farm life were portrayed by Miss Mildred Horton and Mrs. John Palmore at the one day short course at Canyon, May 6.

Miss Horton who is a vice-director and State home demonstration agent pictured a farm or place that has advanced so far and then starts going backward or deteriorating for lack of leadership.

Mrs. Palmore, president of State Home Demonstration Association, pictured a farm or place that starts from practically nothing and builds up and keeps advancing. It is through leadership and organization that this is made possible.

Home demonstration work has given in many ways helped to raise and advance the standards of living on the farm.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Morris, Mesdames Thurman Thorpe, Claude Gowen, R. E. Echols, Clyde Edmonson, from Dawson county, attended the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Teague of Slaton spent Wednesday visiting in Lamesa.

Miss Mary Frances Bartlett visited relatives and friends in Lubbock during the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Nix visited in Andrews Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Marr and daughters left the first of this week for a two weeks vacation in Arkansas and Missouri. They will be joined on the trip by their son Johnny, who has been a student at Northwestern University, near Chicago, this past year.

Lets Talk about Clothes

Denton, May 25.—Fond fathers should nod approvingly at the style notes for their graduating daughters this June, because fashion demands less of the family pocketbook than ever before. Cottons predominate, and patterns strike a note of sophisticated simplicity.

White muslin daintily embroidered with eyelets forms one of the frocks which will appear in commencement exercises. Its full skirt flounces about energetically with an exaggerated ruffle, and the slim bodice is accented by puff sleeves on a square neck.

Another popular model in lace-trimmed organdy fits sheath-like to the knees and then flares widely around the floor. The flare is repeated in a pert little elbow-length cape which is tied snugly at the neck. Rows of buttons down the front add the necessary touch of newness to the tailored organdies, and bows and butterflies are much in evidence on the frilly creations.

Brief boleros might have been specially designed for commencements, since they fill the need so perfectly. No matter whether they are of contrasting materials or colors or the same as the dresses, these handy jackets will be recognized as the latest thing out. When the program is over, Miss June Graduate can remove her bolero and be ready for a formal dance.

Net, mousseline de soie, dotted swiss and others vie with organdy for first place as favored materials, all of them being crisp, inexpensive and suitable for the event. Girls at Texas State College for Women gladly hail this tendency to combine practicality and beauty.

Mrs. Johnny Heath and little daughter of Seminole spent last Friday visiting in Lamesa.

UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIAL

This is to certify that my little boy, 6 years old, had the flu, then measles, then contracted pneumonia for 10 days in both lungs. Then inflammation set up and the doctor advised me to take him to Lamesa and have the inflammation drawn off. I decided to take him to Dr. Shoultz and just before I got to Dr. Shoultz I thought he was dying as did Mr. and Mrs. Crapp. Dr. Shoultz examined him and told me he would see what he could do for him and if he did not see some change in a short time he would leave it up to me, but thank the Lord it wasn't but a few minutes until he began to get relief and in less than 24 hours the pneumonia was broken and his temperature went down, and he has gotten better every day from the start.

I have had him here nine days and am taking him home feeling fine. I think if Dr. Shoultz can handle cases like this in as short a time, you sufferers would not make a mistake in giving him a trial.

Virell M. Briggs, Seminole, Texas.

FARM NOTES

By Joe C. Williams County Agent

Bad Seed

Several farmers have reported that they failed to get a stand of feed and cotton due to bad seed. Most of the seed was thrashed or ginned in this county. However, some was not. The seed can be tested by the State Department of Agriculture, located at Austin, Texas.

Those who want seed tested may have it tested by sending in a quart container of the average seed, preferably a quart ice cream container full of seed to J. E. McDonald, Commissioner of Agriculture, Seed Testing Division, Austin, Texas.

Treating Seed For Smut

Several have asked about treating seed for smut. The treatment suggested is two and one-half ounces of copper carbonate dust to the bushel of seed. It is suggested that an old lard can be used and the can filled about one-half full of seed and the proper proportion of dust added. Then the can and contents be well stirred to see that every seed is coated with the dust. In treating tie a handkerchief or cloth over the nose as the dust irritates the nose. The dust is poisonous and stock should not eat any of the treated seed. Rat Eradicator That Is Non-Poisonous

Rats may be destroyed by using Red Squill powder at the rate of two ounces of the red squill powder to two pounds of cheap salmon. The powder and the salmon mixed together well, and then rolled into balls about the size of the end of the thumb, placed in quartered newspapers and twisted up. The baits should be made up late in the afternoon and placed near the places where the rats usually run, around barns and hay or feed stacks and other places that the rats use.

The good part of using Red Squill is that it will not harm any farm animals yet it will kill rats.

Federal Savings and Loan Associations Are Widespread

Less than four years old, the network of Federal savings and loan associations has spread out into the farthest corners of the United States and into its distant territories. Since June 1933, when Congress authorized their formation, their number has rapidly grown until today the total has reached 1,248. The names and locations of these thrift and home-financing institutions plainly indicate the variation of the geography, customs and life or the different sections of the country.

Federal associations are to home-financing what national banks are to commercial financing. They are "the national banks" of the building and loan business. All are local, mutual thrift institutions, privately officered and managed but subject to Federal supervision and examination. They are modeled on the basic features of building and loan associations and of mutual savings banks because experience has shown that these types of institutions are best fitted to finance home ownership.

Glancing over the long list of cities and towns where these associations are located, the eye finds colorful and pungent names such as these: Andalusia, El Dorado, Hope, Piggott, Escondido, Rock Ford, Tupelo, Deer Lodge, Cozad, Arcanum, Pawhuska, Wewoka, The Dalles, Windsor, Tavares, Toccoa, Nampa, Memence, Loogootee, Oelwein, Wakeeney, Cheraw, Tullahoma, Cuero, Quannah, Yoakum, Chelalis, Hazard, Natchitoches, Glen Burnie, Natick and Owosso.

These and many more are illustrative of the extent of this network. In these communities financing of the construction, purchase and reconditioning of homes is fostered and aided. The borrower as well as the investor or shareholder has a right to vote and participate in the meetings of these Federal institutions.

Borrowers are given mortgage loan contracts that are easily understood, by which they can compute their total obligations month by month, and which encourages them to make as rapid progress as their means permit toward the attainment of that goal which every home owner cherishes, a debt free home.

The borrower reduces the original principal of his loan with easy monthly payments. He pays interest only on the continually decreasing amount of principal, not on the original face value of the mortgage.

More than half of the Federal institutions were originally chartered as such. Others have been state-chartered associations which have converted their business into Federal associations. While this conversion is continuing, many associations, retaining their state charters, are gradually changing their thrift and lending programs to conform more and more to the patterns set by the Federals.

All Federal and many state chartered associations are members of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, administered by the Federal Home Loan Board in Washington. Accounts in all Federal associations are insured up to $5,000 each by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. Many state chartered associations also provide insurance for their accounts through the same corporation.

North, South, East, West

In Caribou, in the tip of Maine is the Federal Association furthest northeast. In Homestead, Fla., below Miami, is the one furthest southeast. Cutting across to Texas, in Brownsville, is the association furthest south in the central part of the nation.

On the west coast, San Diego has a group of Federals which are furthest southwest in the United States. On up the coast, one comes to Bellingham, Wash., the furthest northwest on the mainland in this network.

Way up in Juneau, there is a Federal association doing its part in the financing of home building in the far-away territory of Alaska. This institution is under the supervision of the Eleventh District Federal Home Loan Bank, located in Portland, Oregon.

Out in Uncle Sam's mid-Pacific paradise of Hawaii, one finds more of these Federal Thrift Associations. They are supervised by the Twelfth District Federal Home Loan Bank, in Los Angeles, California.

BRINGING TEXAS INTO THE SPOTLIGHT OF THE WORLD

Dallas, May 17, 1937
 Mr. W. L. Fouts
 Pan American Publicity Promoter.
 c-o Fair Store.
 Lamesa, Texas.
 Dear Mr. Fouts:

When President Franklin D. Roosevelt expressed his desire before the Inter-American Peace Conference in Buenos Aires last December for the creation of a "good neighbor" feeling he made the first gesture of a permanent foundation of goodwill between the twenty-one independent nations of the New World. The Pan American Exposition, which opens in Dallas on June 12, serves as a means for furthering this "good neighbor" policy and facilitating friendly relations since fourteen of these Latin American countries join hands with the United States in establishing exhibits at the 1937 International Fair, forming a bulwark of amity against the rising tide of unrest and malcontent elsewhere in the world.

It is then the duty of Texans—not as Texans alone, but, more important, as citizens of a peace-loving nation—to join with others in welcoming the fourteen Latin American republics to the Lone Star State. The motto of Texas is Friendship, and her people have long been known for their hospitality. It is, therefore, only right that the Pan American Exposition should come into being on Texas soil.

What each individual may do toward the making of the Pan American Exposition a permanent monument to Inter-American peace, however small it may seem, is but another step in the accomplishment of Texas and the Southwest and of the people of the United States at large.

You have our best wishes for the success of your campaign—its purpose is worthy only of the best.
 Very sincerely yours,
 GREATER TEXAS AND PAN AMERICAN EXPOSITION

MIDWAY GIRL WINS PRIZE IN EXPOSITION ESSAY CONTEST

We are reprinting below an essay written by Martha Lou McAdams, a student in the sixth grade of the Midway school, with which she won a prize of $2.00 offered by the Pan-American Exposition.

Why I Want To See The Greater Texas and Pan-American Exposition at Dallas
 My visit to the Texas Exposition last year only serves to strengthen my desire to see the Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition. In reading the little booklet handed me by my teacher, I found that a number of attractions have been added. However, I would gladly see again many of the displays and beauty spots that I saw last year.

I am glad that the glory of the Esplanade is preserved for this year. It is almost unbelievable that the wonderful lighting spectacle could be more breath-taking than it was last year. The Transportation building and the Electrical Communication and Varied Industries building, present grand and glorious sights; but to me, a Texas school girl, the "Hall of State" is the most wonderful of all. It discloses, as one enters, the images of the heroes of this, the Lone Star State.

I am going to see among the first the "Hall of Latin American Republics". In this building will be exhibits from Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, and other American republics.

I am eager to visit the Petroleum building. I have never seen an oil well actually being drilled, and I am sure this will be very instructive. Seeing the chemicals and chemical products will make my study of geography mean more to me.

To my sorrow I failed to see the Federal building last year but I will not fail again. I know it will be a very instructive and educational center. The workings of the government have always been a puzzle to me, and I hope to learn something of the many activities of this great machine.

One should not terminate his stay at this exposition without seeing Dallas, the typically Southwestern city, which dared build a show that no other city the size of Dallas ever attempted to build. I shall say that the Dallasites are very friendly to strangers and I appreciate their kindness to me. This fact is another reason that I want to see the Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition.

Farm authorities agree that early spring grazing is harmful to the best use of pasture, but the wind and water erosion threat in this practice sometimes is not emphasized.

Experience has proved that vegetation cover is essential to protection of soil against blowing and washing. This holds, also, for grassland. It is not hard to understand, then, that if livestock is turned on the grass before it has a chance to attain a reasonable height and strength, the grass will be eaten down too short and any dry weather which follows will be more likely to kill out the desirable vegetation and leave the soil beneath more susceptible to wind and water erosion.

METHODIST CHURCH HAS FELLOWSHIP BREAKFAST

A large number of members of the First Methodist Church, including the pastor and his wife, members of the Board of Stewards, officers and teachers of the Sunday School, officers of the Women's Missionary Society, and others of the official family, enjoyed a fellowship breakfast at the Methodist church last Tuesday morning at seven o'clock. An appetizing meal was prepared and served by the young people of the church under the supervision of their capable leader, Mrs. Blaine Wiggins.

Miss Willie Belle Cleveland, church secretary, acted as master of ceremonies and following the breakfast a good program was enjoyed. Lowrie Lowless, Mrs. A. G. Bearden, and Henry Norris gave timely and inspirational talks concerning the work of the church.

WATER TERRACE BREAKS IS WARNING TO FARMERS

Amarillo, May 25.—While farmers of the wind erosion region are welcoming the moisture-bringing May rains, they should remember that these same rains often bring breaks in terraces, according to F. A. Vestal, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service Area near Lamesa.

Repairing breaks which may have occurred, especially in newly constructed terraces, is an important part of the farmers work throughout the year, but there are certain seasons when breaks are more likely to develop. After the spring rains is a good time to inspect terrace systems closely to see if any breaks have occurred, says

Mr. Vestal.

Terraces aid in controlling erosion by breaking long slopes into a series of shorter slopes and concentrating the water from each terrace interval in the terrace channel. Mr. Vestal points out. Listing between the terraces greatly strengthens the system. The ridges serve to break the flow of water between terraces, while the furrows hold much of the water where it falls.

When a break does occur in one of the terraces, this concentrated volume of water rushes through the opening onto the next terrace level and, when a hard rain comes, is liable to result in a series of breaks in the terraces below and the formation of gullies down through the fields. Once a gully appears, the water can escape from the field where it is needed.

Should terrace breaks occur during or just after the planting season, small row crops in the terraced fields may be covered with soil or the seed washed out where the water flows across the rows in the terrace interval below the break.

Wright Grant Boyd is visiting relatives in Amarillo this week.

Miss Pauline Bulsterbaum made a business trip to Stanton Tuesday.

Calvin Truitt Partain had his tonsils removed at a local hospital Tuesday.

RESURRECTION RIVER
WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

COPYRIGHT-WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY..... W.N.U. SERVICE

Chapter I

In the fall of 1929 a rumor drifted out of the far north, out to Edmonton.

that a tremendously rich mining field had been discovered in Arctic McKenzie.

Dynamite Bay, the place was called. Newspapers throughout Canada and the States printed sensational stories about this discovery; but at that particular time "Black Thursday" had just spread its pall over both nations, and in the general panic nobody paid attention to rumors about a far-off El Dorado.

All during the four stricken years that followed, Dynamite Bay stories kept trickling out to civilization—rumors about staggering finds of silver, copper, platinum, and radium.

Except for a few experts with inside knowledge, no one knew whether Dynamite Bay was a genuinely rich field or merely another wild alarum such as the Canadian mining frontier so often sounds.

One party which did have authentic data about Dynamite Bay was the powerful Wellington, Parkes & Lovett, Incorporated Mines, with headquarters in Chicago and branch offices in New York, Winnipeg, and Toronto.

They were not an actual mining company, Wellington, Parkes & Lovett, in their thirty-odd years they had never mined a ton of ore. Purely an investment house, they bought and sold mineral properties, manipulated stock issues, rigged the market, and formed holding companies that brought streams of gold flowing in to them from the small corporations that did the real work.

It was Warren Lovett, junior partner in the firm, who first had seen the unique opportunity that Dynamite Bay offered. Old Jasper Wellington, founder and head of the house, was setting aside to grasp new situations, Russell Parkes, who had gone in for diplomacy and had been minister at an European capital for several years, was out of touch with things and living in New York; and so it was Lovett, young and alert and brainy, who had planned the whole venture and had set the stage for his company to make a thunderous coup in the Canadian Arctic.

One July morning Patricia Wellington, old Jasper's eldest daughter, unexpectedly appeared at the La Salle street headquarters of the firm. The previous midnight, while on the family yacht up near Mackinac, she had made a sudden bold decision; and in her impetuous way she had whipped back to Chicago by plane to carry out her idea.

Still in yacht togs—jacket, linen dress, white sandals—she swept imperiously down the corridor of the office and into the inner suite.

Whatever else you might think of Patricia Wellington, there was no denying that she was lovely. Medium tall, gloriously athletic of body, she had a dash and fire that had whirled her to national championships in swimming and tennis. Her eyes were dark and flashing; she had thick black hair, parted in the middle; and her face was as starkly beautiful as an Egyptian profile.

At the desk of the telephone secretary Patricia asked, "Where's Mr. Lovett?"

"In Mr. Wellington's office, please," the girl replied. "But they're having an important conference, and they gave instructions that no one—"

"Oh, yes?" said Patricia. And with that she started for the door of her father's room.

The phone girl and the other three secretaries sent a battery of hostile looks after her.

Plitting from pleasure to pleasure, with two continents for a playground, and nothing to do except find new diversions with a kick to them, she seemed to have had all the splendid things of life handed to her on a golden platter.

Now, as the climax to her good fortune, she was going to marry Mr. Lovett, who in a few years more would have complete control of the company in his capable hands.

Those were the envious thoughts that followed Patricia into her father's office, but the truth, within Patricia's own heart, was vastly otherwise. Providence, which seemed to have been so lavishly kind to the girl, had in reality starved her, tangled her life all into a snarl and plunged her into chaos. A vitally alive girl, she had nothing in her gilded world into which she could throw herself, heart and soul. An idealist, she had nothing to idealize. Bitterly dissatisfied, she had run a gamut of madcap adventures in a frantic search for something to quench this deep nameless thirst.

At a rosewood table in her father's office, Warren Lovett and Jasper Wellington, an iron-faced old financier of sixty, were studying a big white map. The bang of the door caused both men to look up.

"Where the devil did you come from?" old Wellington demanded. "And don't you see we're busy?"

Her father's tone warned Patricia that she was having a crabbed morning and that she had better broach her wish carefully. In a good many respects he was a tyrannical old Roman with her and her sister Frances and their mother; and he could say "No!" like a person driving a rivet.

Lovett got up courteously and came across the big room. Only thirty-three, nine years older than Patricia, he was a quiet poker-faced man, handsome in a way, well-groomed in a gray business suit. Outwardly he had nothing remarkable about him, nothing—except perhaps his poker face—to explain why it was that he, who had come to Wellington & Parkes twelve years ago as an obscure assistant attorney, was now a partner and a millionaire, climbing swiftly on to complete mastery of the powerful house.

In Patricia's affection for Warren there was little romance and no passion. A succession of hectic love affairs had made her cynical about the love relationship in general. But she did like Warren a great deal, and considered him the most able man she had ever met. Coming from nowhere, a poor boy from a Wisconsin iron-mining hamlet, he had risen to the top through sheer ability. Stead and even-tempered, he would wear far better in the long run, she told herself, than any other man in her wide acquaintance.

"What brought you back so suddenly, dear?" Warren queried. "Nothing went wrong up lake, I hope."

"No nothing," Patricia answered. She stood on tip-toe and kissed him in order to whisper hurriedly: "Warren, I want to do something that dad may object to; and if he does, you'll help me out, won't you?"

"If I possibly can," Warren replied in his cautious way.

They walked over to the table. As Patricia had guessed, the big map was a chart of that Arctic pining field which she had heard so much about. On it she saw a large area of marine blue marked "Great Desolation lake." From an eastern arm of Great Desolation a river called "Resurrection" wound northward into a huge blank region marked "Barrens."

Resurrection river—the name had fascinated Patricia ever since she had heard it. What sort of country was that Polar land, up there at the top of the world, basking under the midnight sun? And those unknown barrens—what mysteries and adventures were lurking on their silvery rivers and musk-ox prairies?

She looked up from the map. "I hear that you're going to lead an expedition to Dynamite Bay, Warren."

"Yes, dear. I'm starting early next week. Raoul DeCarie, head of our geology staff, has a plane party waiting for me at Winnipeg."

"When are you coming back?" she asked.

"I can't say definitely, but likely within two months." He touched the engagement ring on her finger, and smiled. "I must be back in Chicago by the eighth of October, dearest."

It was this very matter, this eighth of October, which Patricia herself was thinking about and which had made her decide to go along with Warren on his Arctic trip. Her engagement to Warren Lovett was almost the only stable and solid thing in her chaotic situation; and a truly fine married life was almost the only ideal left to her. With their wedding so near at hand she desperately wanted to overcome the feeling that Warren and she were strangers. She felt confident that two months of intimate association would draw him and her very close to each other and that all her secret doubts about their marriage would be stilled.

Old Wellington said roughly to her: "See here, if you're winding up to say you're going along with Warren for a little Arctic picnic, you might as well not say it! That country is no place for a woman. Warren has business to attend to on this trip and he can't be bothered. You run along and let us get back to our work."

His order made Patricia angry. "You run along"—he was always like that, always treating her like a child or an inconsequential person. As he treated her mother and Frances. It seemed to her that a great many men in her

"I say no!" world had that same attitude toward (Continued to back page)

their womenfolk. Sometimes she wondered whether Warren too was going to regard her as a social pet instead of a mate and a life partner.

"But, dad"—she swallowed her anger and wounded pride—"I won't be a bother to Warren. I'll keep out of the way, honest."

"I say No!"

"But, dad..."

While they argued it back and forth, Warren stood aside, listening to them and thinking swiftly. Until that moment he had not thought about Patricia's going along, but now that she had suggested it he wanted her to go. Because he loved her sincerely, because his love for her was almost the only honest thing in his poker-faced life, he grasped eagerly at this prospect of having her with him for those three months. But his chief motive in wanting to take her was entirely cold-blooded: If Patricia was in the far North for the next eight weeks—practically till the day of their wedding—she would have no chance to fly off on some unguessable whatnot that might delay their marriage or even squelch it altogether.

Keeping out of the argument, he waited until old Jasper had thundered his final "No!" and Patricia had burst into angry tears. As she turned away, he stepped up and took her arm; and at the door he bade quietly:

"Let me handle this, Patricia. You run over to the Tree-Top club and wait there till I phone you. Don't worry—in ten days from now you and I'll be camped on Resurrection."

Stirring out of a long sleep, Patricia reached up as her habit was, to touch the button that would bring her maid into the room.

Her hand encountered canvas, a canvas wall. Opening puzzled eyes, she looked up and found herself staring at the ridgepole of a tent.

A minute she lay quiet, with her sleepy thoughts drifting back across the long journey north, Chicago, Winnipeg, Edmonton. Then the lengthy flights, hundreds of miles at each hop, across the Athabasca, Slave and Mackenzie countries, to the Arctic. Then the swing eastward toward the North Magnetic pole, and at last their goal at Dynamite Bay.

The North so far had keenly disappointed her. No snowy mountains, no romantic rivers with white-water portages, no wild Indians, no half-breed boatmen singing while they worked. At the dismal frontier posts where the planes stopped for gas, the Indians were so sullen and slouchy and tame, the half-breeds sullen, the white men uncouth, the country itself unspeakably dreary. Water-logged by marshy lakes, low rivers and slimy green muskeg, the immense Three Rivers region seemed to her just one huge dismal swamp, a thousand miles of stagnant green ooze that was neither land or water.

At the other side of the tent her English maid was noiselessly unpacking baggage. Patricia sat up.

"Elyin, is there any breakfast around this place, or does a person have to go out and shoot a caribou?"

"Breakfast is ready for miss in the dining tent."

"I'll have it here, in my tent. Get one of those Chiwaughimi half-breeds to help you bring it."

When Elyin was gone, Patricia slid out of bed in her pajamas, found a pair of slippers, and stepped over to the flap-door, anxious to see what Dynamite Bay looked like. At the arrival of her party eight hours ago she had been so dog-tired that she had crawled into her blankets without a glance at anything.

Her tent faced the blue lapping waves of Great Desolation, where Arctic gulls were wheeling and mewing in the golden sunshine. Along the landward side to her left stood the glistening white tents of her party; and in the shallows the five big red airplanes rode at anchor. To her right a good-sized river, swift and turbulent, flowed into the bay. Half a dozen dirty-brown tents were scattered along its near bank, but the main prospector's camp lay across on the north shore.

With a start Patricia realized that this beautiful blue stream was Resurrection river, whose name had caught her fancy in far-off Chicago.

As Patricia's eyes followed Resurrection river far away into the northeast till it lost itself in that jumble of wild hills, a little shiver went through her; wordless desire to flee back to the familiar country of cities and common sense shiver of mingling and fright; a "No!" Fresh and clear, because it was a first impression, the tone of that Arctic land came starkly home to her. In spite of its balmy air and mellow sunshine, she knew that it was a harsh land, severe and pure as its icy blue waters—a forbidding land that tolerated only those who were courageous and strong of heart.

Somewhere a man was singing, in lush French Patricia listened, following the words of the old voyageur song, "Ch. p'tite Oselet, in the Strong-Woods."

Your foot is caught in the snare invisible.
In the cruel babiche,
You will flutter, you will struggle and die.

Oh, Little One
Looking around, Patricia spotted the singer, at one of the tents over near the river bank. Sitting on a box labeled DYNAMITE, he was plucking away at an old guitar and singing endlessly.

It suddenly occurred to Patricia that this was the man's singing which had awakened her a little while ago, before she was ready to wake up. If he sang like that every morning, when his tent was so close—

"Hallo, over there!" she called.
The noise broke off. The man arose, looked around, saw her.

"You called me, hein?"
"Nobody but you! Come over here!"

The man came, carrying his guitar tenderly beneath his arm as he drew near. Patricia saw by his features that though he was nometis half-breed, he did have a tinge of Indian blood in him. A salwart big fellow, thirty years old, he was strong and powerful as a bull moose, but he trod with the light step of a cree woods-runner.

"What'll you take for that thing?" she demanded, pointing at the cheap battered guitar.

"For its see-tar, you mean? My goodness, Mees, I not sell her, nevair! She fine-dandy gee-tar; and me, I've carry her 'round wit' me all over de North, from Labrador, Nascaupsee to Alaska Porcupine. But I tell you w'at, Mees—I'll len' her to you wenever you wan' to play her."

Patricia laughed and her anger fled. "You don't get the point, but no matter." She eyed the big fellow up and down with amused curiosity.

"I say, who are you, anyway?"
"Me? I'm Poleon."
"Poleon what?"

"Napoleon, Auguste Cesar de la Salle St. Jacques."

"Good gracious, it's a wonder you aren't stone-shouldered! What are you a prospector?"

"Oh, I not wan or two claim stake down, back in dere"—he gestured up Resurrection river—"but I don't care a whole pile 'bout prospecting. A feller wit' a string of claims, he's got to work 'em so much dat 'stead of heem having dem stake' down, dey got heem stake' down; and me, I don't lik dat."

"What do you do, then?"
"Oh, I hunt wolf, trap, roam."

Patricia offered him a cigarette, lit one herself—to his great astonishment; and sat down on a mossy rock for a chat with this Poleon fellow. He was so bouvant, so kind and sunny-hearted, that she liked him instantly. Naive as a child in some ways, he was sensitive and intelligent in many others; and she found him to be a mine of information about Dynamite Bay.

The main prospecting field, he told her, lay up Resurrection, beginning at those sawtooth hills and extending northeast into the barrens. "The Bay" was a sort of central point where men came to get supplies, recuperate, and have a bit of human association.

"I thought there'd be a lot of excitement here, and several thousand men, and all that," Patricia remarked disappointedly. "But I don't see any boom at all."

There never had been any rush, Poleon informed. The city country was far away; the Arctic winter was something that no tenderfoot could face; and expenses were skyhigh. All food supplies and equipment had to be brought in by plane, at $800 a ton for freightage alone. In the entire field there were only 300 prospectors. Thirty or forty of them were from the cities, but the great majority were "northern men"—trappers, free-traders, ex-

"Are there really any rich mineral lodes up that river," she asked Poleon point-blank, "or is this place just a big rumor?"

Poleon shook his head. "Mees, I don't know."

"I don't, Mees. And I don't tink any of dese utter men know for dead certain."

He went on to explain that the formations back in those rolling hills and barrens were all hard-rock, not placer stuff. Hard-rock took expensive trenching, diamond-drilling and big-scale assay work before a true valuation could be made. A few rich pockets had been found, true enough, but none of the pick-and-dynamite prospectors knew whether the deposits had any worthwhile size to them. Competent geologists could make fair estimates, but the men had nothing except "prospector's faith" to go by.

Patricia was amazed. Actually the men didn't know whether the field was rich or not! Nobody seemed to know. Except Warren, he knew, all right, but he was keeping the secret locked within himself. Why had he come here? What was his business here? "To find out the facts, dear, about this place."

On the surface his Arctic trip seemed to indicate that the field really did have something to it; otherwise he would not have come at all. But she could not be sure even on that point. With a certain shame she remembered occasions in the past when Wellington, Parkes & Lovett had interested the gullible public in a worthless field and then "got out from under"—at a huge profit to themselves.

After Poleon had left her she lit a second cigarette and gazed thoughtfully up Resurrection at those blue hills. Just then the mystery hanging over the field seemed of little importance to her. She was too stirred and ruffled by the elemental wildness of the country. A queer formidable land. Even the air, in spite of the bright sun, had a strange sharp bite to it which she had never experienced under any other sky.

Again that uneasiness and misgiving crept over her, and she felt afraid.

Chapter II

Late that afternoon, bored by half a day of idling round camp, Patricia ordered three of the Chiwaughimi half-breeds to pitch her a hammock and mosquito canopy at the woods edge; and she made herself comfortable there, with a book, to pass the dull hours.

She hated idleness like the plague, yet idleness seemed the thing that she had the most of, in her life. Wherever she went, at home, abroad, idleness followed her; and even now it had dogged her even to the remote North.
