API leader urges 'floor price' for oil

By JOHN C. GIVEN
AP Business Writer

HOUSTON — A "minimum floor price" for domestic oil should be set by the government and the petroleum industry to ensure the industry's survival, an American Petroleum Institute official says.

George M. Keller, board chairman of API, made the remarks Tuesday at the closing session of the trade group's two-day annual convention.

Keller, board chairman of Chevron Corp., said that such a move could consist of tax incentives to encourage oil and gas drilling; insurance" against a prolonged period of low and unstable prices.

In another speech, the head of Mexico's national oil company denounced the idea of a U.S. tariff on imports saying it would deliver "a staggering blow to freer trade in Mexico."

"The impact would not be restricted to the oil industry," warned Mario Ramon Beteta, director general of Petroleos Mexicanos. "It would affect the overall competitiveness of U.S. industry and could trigger retaliatory actions by countries that import U.S goods."

Keller's remarks came as the trade group grappled for an effective strategy to deal with the staggering impact of the oil price collapse.

The price of a 42-gallon barrel of oil had fallen from about $32 to below $10 since last November before rising back to current levels between $14 and $16.

Consumers have enjoyed the cheapest gas and heating oil prices in years. But the price plunge has devastated industry balance sheets, discouraged domestic exploration and encouraged rising imports amid growing consumption.

Keller said these trends "have put our nation on a collision course with another energy crisis."

"In three or four years, the United States could be dependent on imports for more than 50 percent of its petroleum requirements."

"To put that in perspective, that level of imports would represent a higher level of U.S. dependency on foreign oil than exsisted during the oil shortages of the 1970s," he said.

His proposal represented his own views and Chevron policy and not that of the API, Keller noted.

He said he believed the industry should first determine "a minimum floor price for domestic crude oil that will keep our industry functioning until world oil prices stablize at higher levels."

But that price, he added, should be aimed at ensuring the survival of — not the economics comfort of — the petroleum industry.

The API board chairman also urged the industry to develop a consensus "on the most effective approach and what type of government involvement to achieve that level of price stability."

And he said it should "work with government as a unified industry to put our program in place."

"By identifying a minimun survival price level — you might call it disaster insurance — a lot of the political controversy could be eliminated," he said, "because there probably would be almost no immediate significant impact on consumers."

The Chevron chief said he recognized the bureaucratic problems that could develop with any government-administered program.

Council to halt stop sign removal

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A city stop sign removal program designed to slow traffic and save money, will cost up to $2,135 to reverse, said city Traffic Engineer Fred McGary today.

After facing a shoulder-to-shoulder crowd of more than 100 upset residents Tuesday night, the City Council voted unanimously to halt a stop sign removal program that began in July.

Stop and yield signs costing $35 apiece will be replaced in 61 intersections within two weeks, McGary said.

The signs that were taken out of the neighborhoods have been used to replace other signs or they were too old to reuse, McGary said.

New poles will cost $19 apiece and refinishing signs will cost about $16 apiece, McGary said.

The removal of stop signs from Midland neighborhoods generated 15 traffic accidents, 600 petition signatures and hundreds of phone calls to City Council members.

And it took the council only 25 minutes Tuesday night to reverse its decision to remove stop signs in areas throughout the city.

"I think we all got the message pretty quickly that we were wrong, and a mistake had been made," said Mayor Carroll Thomas, after the council unanimously decided to halt a stop sign removal program.

Spokesman for one neighborhood, John Sullivan, told council members, "The traffic department has sold you on a theory that will not work."

But the seven-member council had already made up its mind before Sullivan and another spokesperson addressed them.

"We did an obviously poor job of publicizing what we were doing and why we were doing it," Thomas said.

In a special meeting at 9 a.m. Monday the council will vote to pass an emergency ordinance replacing the stop and yield signs.

On Nov. 3 residents began circulating petitions to get their signs back and to stop the removal program.

Continental flights resume in December

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Southwest and American Airlines pilots who've enjoyed taking up two airplane parking spaces at Midland Regional Airport will now have to stay inside those yellow lines. Continental Airlines has returned to Midland.

Continental had pulled out of Midland/Odessa in 1983 following its bankruptcy. Service will resume at the Midland airport Dec. 1.

Initially, Continental will have one daily non-stop flight to Houston's Intercontinental Airport and two non-stop flights to Amarillo which will continue on to Denver.

Introductory fares of $59 to Denver and $35 to Houston and Amarillo are available for travel that includes a Saturday night stay. Seats at these fares are limited and a 10 percent cancellation penalty will apply.

The special fares will be available for travel to Denver through Dec. 15 and to Houston through Jan. 5.

Through Continental's Denver and Houston hubs, passengers from Midland and Odessa will now be able to connect to flights serving 82 U.S. and 28 international airports.

Continental also announced today it will inaugurate service in Harlingen and Palm Springs, Calif.

At a Tuesday press conference, the ~~soon-to-be general~~ manager of Continental's facilities in Midland/Odessa, John Patterson, said the airline is "delighted" to be here.

Service to Midland/Odessa is being added simultaneously with Continental's restoration of flights to 20 cities served by the now-defunct Frontier Airlines, Patterson said. Continental recently purchased Frontier from People Express Airlines, he added.

"Continental can now extend its low-fare, full-service flights to Midland/Odessa. Our new service will enhance (the area's) freedom of choice in selecting carriers," Patterson said.

Continental, Patterson said, has a simplified, low-fare pricing structure with fares ranging from 40 to 70 percent less than other airlines' unrestricted coach fares.

Springsteen album sales 'average' in Midland

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Rock'n'roll idol Bruce Springsteen's golden touch may be a little tarnished in Midland as record stores report only "average" sales of his 40-song live album since it hit the shelves Monday.

Record stores reported sales were less than expected, unlike the avalanche of calls and lines that snaked around corners from coast to coast.

Endless Horizons owner David Conway said sales are "not really that spectacular, not what we anticipated."

He said he sold only half of his stock of 50 albums, cassette tapes and compact discs. However, he added he expects to sell the remainder by the end of the week.

Conway attributed the average sales to the price of the 5-album set. Albums and cassettes were selling for $25.99, while the CDs were going for $44.99, he said.

At Musicland in Midland Park Mall, manager Barbara Dunham said patrons began requesting the set before it arrived Monday afternoon.

"We got it in Monday and I would guess we've sold half of it," she said.

Ms. Dunham said the 35 albums and 35 tapes sell for $33.95. The 20 CDs in stock are priced at $49.99.

The demand for the Springsteen in south Midland also was low as Milton Watson of Milton's Records, 1405 N. Lamesa Road, reported he sold only 15 of the 50 sets in stock.

About 180 passengers drown as ferry sinks in Haitian bay

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — A ferry boat apparently overloaded with passengers sank in the Bay of Port-au-Prince and at least 180 people drowned, authorities said. Twenty were reported rescued.

The U.S. Embassy said late Tuesday that the 50-foot boat Oklele sank off the bay island of Gonave, 30 miles west of the Haitian capital of Port-au-Prince. The boat was making its daily crossing when it sank, said Embassy spokesman Jeffrey Lite.

Radio Soleil, a Roman Catholic station in this seaside capital of 1 million, reported that their correspondent on the island of Gonave said the vessel apparently was carrying too many passengers for its size.

Overcrowding is common in impoverished Haiti, whether in buses packed with people hanging on for a free ride, in the colorful "tap-tap" taxis or in commuter boats that travel to four offshore islands.

Government officials said the ferry had left on its daily trip but radioed an SOS between noon and 1 p.m. The distress signal was picked up on Gonave, they said, and rescue vessels were dispatched and picked up the survivors.

The exact position of the sinking was not known, but it was believed to have been close to Gonave.

All of the passengers were residents of Gonave, according to Radio Soleil. Approximately 50,000 people live on the island.

The weather at the time of the sinking was reported to have been windy with some rainfall, common in the Haitian fall.

Designer drugs — analogs or variations of amphetamines — are easily made, easily distributed and easily affordable.

Designer drugs easy to make, distribute

By JOHN A. BARBOUR

The names sound like something out of perfume ads. Ecstasy. Eve. Rhapsody.

They promise new togetherness, openness, a new platform for sexual enjoyment. They are variations of amphetamines of which there are dozens. They are designed and produced in underground laboratories by the illicit drug industry without purity safeguards or quality control. They are easily made and easily distributed. They are cheap.

They have one more thing in common. They kill brain cells.

Researchers at the National Institute of Drug Abuse fear they may be the next drug epidemic when and if cocaine subsides in popularity.

They mimic cocaine's attractiveness for the person looking for "out." And the promise of sexual proclivity is a major appeal.

Action anticipated on Syrian sanctions

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is expected to act promptly on recommended sanctions against Syria that one official says stop short of a break in diplomatic relations with the Arab nation.

The recommendations sent to Reagan by Secretary of State George P. Shultz would bar the return of Ambassador William Eagleton to Damascus and reduce the size of the Syrian Embassy in Washington, the official said Tuesday.

Also, American oil firms would be asked to cut back their operations in Syria, said the Reagan administration official, who spoke only on condition he not be named.

He described the sanctions as "pretty mild" and stressed that a final decision was up to Reagan.

Britain broke relations with Syria last month after a Jordanian, Nezar Hindawi, was convicted of working with Syrian diplomats in trying to plant a bomb on an El Al airliner in London.

The Reagan administration withdrew Eagleton from Damascus in support of Britain and urged West European governments to impose punitive measures against Syria.

Shultz, who plays a key role in shaping U.S. policy on terrorism, did not recommend a U.S. break with President Hafez Assad's government or that the American diplomatic corps in Syria be reduced, the official said.

However, Eagleton will not return to his post, the official said.

If Reagan adopts the recommendations, Syria will become the seventh country against which Reagan has imposed some economic sanctions. The others were Libya, Poland, South Africa, the Soviet Union, Nicaragua and Iran.

On Monday, 10 members of the European Community backed Britain by banning sale of new arms to Syria, suspending high-level official visits to and from the country and agreeing to "review the activities" of Syrian diplomats.

Greece did not go along, and the others implicitly left themselves the option of fulfilling deliveries of military equipment already under contract to Syria.

Shultz told reporters Monday on a flight to Guatemala for a meeting of Western Hemisphere foreign ministers that he had made recommendations on sanctions to Reagan, but he provided no details.

"It is beyond doubt that Syria has been and is involved in terrorist activities," Shultz said.

Syria has been on the State Department's list of countries that sponsor terrorism since 1979, when the list was first compiled. Syria was accused of being involved in the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon, in April 1983, and the destruction of a U.S. Marine Corps barracks outside the Lebanese capital in October 1983, in which 241 Americans died.

But the Reagan administration also has praised Syria for help in securing the release of American passengers aboard the Trans World Airlines plane that was hijacked to Beirut in June 1985.

Reagan, in a speech that month to the American Bar Association, charged that "a new international version of Murder Incorporated" made up of Iran, Libya, North Korea, Cuba and Nicaragua was "engaged in acts of war" against the United States.

He pointedly ommitted Syria in what White House officials described as a gesture of gratitude to Assad.

Sanctions against Syria were considered earlier this year, however, after the Abu Nidal group, which operates out of the Syrian-controlled Bekka Valley of Lebanon, took responsibility for bombings at the ticket counters of El AL, the Israeli airline, in the Rome and Vienna airports in December. Five of those killed were U.S. citizens.

Then, last month Britain broke relations with Syria over the plot against the El Al airliner, which had 350 people aboard its New York-London-Tel Aviv flight, including about 200 Americans.

Eagleton was recalled in order to register strong U.S. displeasure with the Assad government.

Mike Ellis and Toni Goff

Couple married during graveside funeral service

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A young pilot and his fiancee, killed last week in a plane crash, were married at graveside by a pastor who testified to their love and religious devotion.

The Rev. Rayburn Blair said Mike Ellis, 27, and Toni Goff, 23, had pledged their lives to one another and had planned to marry in April.

"I'm perfectly at ease in performing this ceremony of holy matrimony," Blair said during the service Monday, when they were buried side by side.

"Because I heard them already say yes.... I testify for them that they accept each other as partners in this holy estate and are united not just in life, but for all eternity, as brothers and sisters in Christ."

On Oct. 22, the couple had met with Blair, who is pastor of Temple Baptist Church, for a premarital counseling session.

Victor White, aviation director at Midland Regional Airport, said he is relieved and excited Continental is returning to Midland.

Since Frontier's exit in late August, the airport had been losing about $7,000 a month in rental and landing fees, White said.

Midland Regional Airport successfully negotiated with Continental to receive back payment, however, of the monies lost from Frontier's absence, White said.

"It's not necessarily the norm (recouping back fees), but Continental was amenable because they realize there is a good market here," White said.

"Continental's presence will help the financial stability of the airport and will create a good competitive situation for the community," White said.

The new airline will employ about 14 or 15 people, four of whom are ex-Frontier employees and four of whom worked with Continental when it used to be in Midland, Patterson said.

Patterson said Continental had begun thinking about making the return to Midland/Odessa "probably when Frontier when bankrupt."

"We realized there was a void here and that the economy is picking up. This is a good market," Patterson said.

Boeing 737 jets will make up the Midland/Odessa fleet. Each jet will have 112 seats — 10 first-class seats and 102 coach seats, Patterson said.

Suzan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

* Introductory fares are available for travel through Dec. 15 (Jan. 5 to Houston) on round trip tickets requiring a Saturday stay and a 10 percent cancellation penalty. Seats are limited.

Reservations can be made now, Patterson said, by calling 1-800-525-0280.

White said airport officials have been negotiating with Delta Airlines for over four years to get that airline to land here. "The most recent trip we made to Atlanta (Delta's home base) was this past summer.

"They said they'd love to come to Midland, but don't want to just yet. But if the economy picks up, they could be here sometime next year," White said.

Continental has 821 average daily departures to 82 cities in the U.S. and 28 international spots including London, Mexico, Canada, Australia, Tahiti and Japan.

The airline recorded a 1986 third quarter net income of a record $65.1 million, up from $60.9 million in 1985 and $50.3 million in 1984, Patterson said. Texas Air Corp., which owns approximately 80 percent of Continental, has proposed acquiring the outstanding minority interest, he added.

ALBUM

"That type of music (sells) very slow here," Watson said. "This is basically disco and soul. In your malls, it'd sell more."

Watson priced the albums and cassette tapes at $24.95.

Kevin Williams, assistant manager of Reel Music, 4706 N. Midkiff Road, said he expects to sell all of the 15 sets in stock by the end of the day.

"We just got it in today and we've have pre-orders on it for five to 10 people. We have a few left for those who want to come in to the store."

Williams said he expects the compact discs will arrive within the next few days.

"We're supposed to get them in, but we've heard they (the manufacture) only made so many and won't make any more until after Christmas," he said.

DRUGS

They are not new on the drug scene. In their various forms, they have been around for years. Amphetamines were popular in the drug explosion of the 1960s, but what has happened is the remarkable number of analogs, or variations, now available on the market.

Says Dr. Roger Brown of NIDA's neuroscience branch, interested in the mechanisms drugs activate in the human biological system and how they affect function:

"There was not too much attention paid until all of a sudden the business on Ecstasy started up, a year-and-a-half, two years ago. We found out the tremendous amount of abuse that was going on with Ecstasy."

The federal government is now making its own Ecstasy, so researchers will have a ready and pure supply to work with. Ecstasy made the Drug Enforcement Agency's list of Controlled Substances in July of 1985. The scientific shorthand for all these drugs is MDMA and MDA.

They destroy neurons that produce brain-regulating serotonin. Those neurons play a role in regulating mood, sleep, aggression, sensitivity to pain and sexual activity.

In general, amphetamines also have a valid medical role. They are used to treat hyperactive children and people with the sleeping disease called narcolepsy.

Some use amphetamines to stay awake on the road or to keep going when cramming for examinations. Some use the ability of amphetamines to curb appetite as an aid in dieting.

NIDA lists the problems from amphetamine abuse:

"Psychological difficulties, including confusion, depression, sleep problems, drug craving, severe anxiety and paranoia — during and sometimes weeks after taking MDMA. Even psychotic episodes have been reported.

"Physical symptoms such as muscle tension, involuntary teeth clenching, nausea, blurred vision, rapid eye movements, faintness and chills or sweating.

"Increases in heart rate and blood pressure, a special risk for people with circulatory or heart disease."

In short, Ecstasy and its kin mimic the effects of cocaine.

Recent findings have pinpointed at least some of the receptors in the brain that are triggered by mind drugs. The studies were performed on rats and monkeys, since they react to drugs much as humans do.

"The kind of thing we're interested in is, so what's in it for the rat?" says Dr. Brown. "What does it mean in terms of function? ...What makes cocaine so reinforcing? Why do people go after it? We're finding now that there is a common site of action for heroin and cocaine. Heroin seems to light up a part of the brain that's known as the brain reward system."

While the amphetamines seem to have similar effects to cocaine, cocaine and heroin are the drugs that rats and monkeys like best. Animals quickly learn to press a lever that will give them a quick jolt of cocaine directly to the brain. They will, in fact, work themselves to the point of exhaustion for repeated doses.

"There are exceptions," says Dr. Brown, "but by and large animals will work for the same things that are abused on the street."

The amphetamines and cocaine intrude on a critical system in the brain. They block the action of a vital nerve called dopamine. Instead of allowing the central nervous system to recycle the dopamine, they leave that chemical messenger stuck in the "on" position, delivering its message over and over again. That gives the user his high.

But in the process, amphetamines, and probably cocaine too, produce a nerve toxin that destroys the cells which make dopamine.

There is the chance that people who abused amphetamines in the 1960s may be in trouble. They may encounter the paralysis of Parkinsonism due to a shortage of dopamine.

NEXT: So many ways to die

SIGNS

Accidents jumped from 10 a year, to 11 a month after stop signs were removed in July from 25 locations and yield signs were removed from 11 sites in a neighborhood south of Missouri Avenue and north of Front Street.

In a second area, accidents jumped from six a year to four a month, after stop signs were removed from 14 locations and yield signs were removed from 11 sites Sept. 11 from the neighborhood bounded by Golf Course Road on the north, Garfield Street on the east, Midkiff Road on the west and Cuthbert Avenue on the south.

But more accidents are expected when traffic controls are changed, McGary said.

"It's typical when you change traffic controls, you create accidents until people get used to the change," he said.

However, residents said cost of reeducating drivers was too high.

By law, drivers are supposed to approach an uncontrolled intersection with caution and give the right-of-way to the driver on their right, but most people do not drive that way, the council members agreed.

To warn drivers of the change, the city painted white spots in the center of uncontrolled intersections, but these signals were often ignored or unseen.

Along with traffic accidents, the uncontrolled intersections opened the city up to personal injury lawsuits and higher insurance rates, residents contended.

Sullivan said he was surprised and pleased by the quick council vote Tuesday night.

"We did not expect a vote right then and there. It's refreshing to know that we have a City Council that is big enough to admit a mistake and act promptly. Mayor Thomas did the right thing and we are grateful," Sullivan said.

Boy's condition 'critical' after combination bowel, liver transplant

CHICAGO (AP) — A 17-month-old boy born with his bowels outside his body was in critical but stable condition today after undergoing a bowel and liver transplant.

The rare procedure was performed Tuesday on Ryan Treet of Mountain Home, Ark., at Rush Presbyterian-St. Luke's Hospital, and took 17 hours, officials said.

Hospital spokeswoman Carmeline Esposito said the condition listing is normal for experimental surgery.

The toddler was rushed to the hospital Monday night after his parents, Bill and Doreen Threet, were told the organs were available.

Another hospital spokeswoman, Phyllis Ferguson, said she didn't know the identity of the donor or donors.

Dr. Wolfgang Schraut, an abdominal surgeon at the University of Chicago Medical Center, said the bowel-transplant surgery has been performed nine times in the United States and Europe, but no patient has survived beyond a few months.

Aquino uses Japanese visit to encourage unity

TOKYO (AP) — Philippine President Corazon Aquino, at a Mass today honoring her late husband, called post World War II Japanese-Philippine friendship proof that "wounds of the past can indeed be healed" and urged Filipinos to unite.

"Four decades ago, it was almost impossible to see Japanese and Filipinos together, as I see you today," she told about 800 people who filled St. Ignatius Church and some 300 others gathered outside for the Mass in memory of her late husband, Benigno Aquino.

The former senator and opposition leader was assassinated at Manila Airport in August 1983 on his return from three years in exile.

"You are clear and living testament that the wounds of the past can be healed completely. And if you, who are set apart by dint of bloodlines and traditions, can forgive, forget and unite, then so can Filipinos find it in their hearts to reconcile with fellow Filipinos," she said.

Japanese forces invaded and occupied the Philippines during World War II. Historians describe the Japanese administration of the islands as brutal.

Mrs. Aquino arrived Monday in Japan for a four-day visit, her third overseas trip since she came to power after a military-civilian revolution last February that forced ex-President Ferdinand E. Marcos to flee to Hawaii.

The trip is to build ties with Japan and encourage increased Japanese economic activity in the Philippines.

Later today she was to meet with Japanese business leaders and receive an honorary degree from Waseda University.

Mrs. Aquino left behind a widening rift in government and military ranks over how to handle a 17-year Communist insurgency in her country. There have been fears of a coup attempt in her absense.

Cory dolls, which sell for about $18, are among the more popular items in a Philippine Week promotion at a Tokyo department store.

The president has been trying to negotiate a cease-fire with the rebels, but critics, including Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, say the policy is too soft.

The armed forces press office in Manila issued a statement Tuesday alleging that those negotiating with the government do not really represent the Communist Party and its New People's Army.

Referring to February's nearly bloodless revolt, Mrs. Aquino said, "Then, as now, when the options of reasonable dialogue and settlement by peaceful means had been exhausted, we stand ready for the good, the honorable, the moral fight."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Planet named Samantha

MOSCOW (AP) — A minor planet orbiting between Mars and Jupiter has been named after the late American schoolgirl Samantha Smith, who made a great impression on Soviets during her visit in 1983, the official news agency Tass reported.

Tass reported from the Ukrainian capital of Kiev on Tuesday that astronomer Lyudmilla Chernykh, who discovered the heavenly body previously known as No. 3147, had proposed it be renamed after Samantha, who died in a plane crash near her home in Maine in August 1985.

The Soviet suggestion was endorsed by the International Planetary Center in Cincinnati, Tass said.

It said Samantha's planet orbits close to another minor planet named after Tanya Savicheva, a Soviet girl who died during the World War II siege of Leningrad and left behind a diary chronicling her family's suffering and death from starvation.

Three injured by blasts

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Three black policemen, including one who lost both legs, were in serious condition today after two bombs exploded in the mining town of Newcastle, injuring at least 23 people, the government said.

Hospital sources said 16 of 20 blacks admitted for treatment of injuries suffered in Tuesday's bombings had been released.

The government's Bureau for Information confirmed that a bomb, which police suspect to be a Soviet-made limpet mine, exploded at a newspaper store in a shopping arcade, and another bomb of unknown origin and type went off a half hour later in a trash can outside the magistrate's court.

The bureau said three whites — a woman, the magistrate and the prosecutor — were among those injured in the bombings in Newcastle, 130 miles southeast of Johannesburg in Natal province.

Arms talks will recess

GENEVA (AP) — The superpower arms talks recess today after a round which the chief U.S. negotiator said produced more results than any previous segment of the 20-month-old negotiations.

A meeting of the negotiating group on medium-range nuclear weapons was to complete the round. The Soviet delegation to today's session, held at the U.S. mission, was headed by Lem Masterkov. Maynard Glitman led the U.S. team.

U.S. chief negotiator Max Kampelman said Tuesday that progress during the two-month round, the sixth of the talks, was made in all three areas under discussion, including space and defense systems, long-range nuclear weapons and intermediate-range nuclear forces.

Reunification talks urged

PEKING (AP) — During unprecedented celebrations commemorating the 120th anniversary of the birth of revolutionary leader Sun-Yat-sen, China today urged Taiwan's ruling Nationalist Party to open reunification negotiations.

"It is high time for the Kuomintang (Nationalist) authorities to take a step forward," Peng Zhen, head of China's legislature, the National People's Congress, said at a rally at the Great Hall of the People.

About 10,000 people attended the gathering, the most important rally in this year's commemoration of Sun, who led the revolution that overthrew the last emperor in 1911 and is revered by both Taiwan and China.

The government has held major celebrations throughout the country for the anniversary, stressing reunification with Taiwan and portraying Sun as a reformer who wanted China to modernize and open to the outside world.

Russian trains collide

MOSCOW (AP) — Two passenger trains collided in a small Ukrainian station last week, the official news agency Tass reported today. It said there were injuries and deaths, but did not report how many.

The agency's dispatch gave few details on the accident, which it said occurred early Thursday in the Koristovka station outside the Ukrainian city of Kirovograd, about 150 miles southeast of Kiev.

The trains, one bound from Kiev to Donetsk and one from the city of Krivoi Rog to Kiev, "were running late and arrived at the Koristovka station simultaneously.

"The reasons for the catastrophe have still not been completely clarified," Tass said.

Report: Americans are healthy, wealthy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans today are healthier, wealthier and better educated than their forebears, the Census Bureau and the Conference Board say.

In a report filled with graphs and charts, the government's main statistical agency and the large business group say that "given where we are today, our dreams of tomorrow can be even more ambitious and their fulfillment even more likely."

The study, "How We Live: Then and Now," concludes that:

— "Modern medicine has given us a new generation," as better care, food and fitness allow people to increase their life spans and the number of elderly people grows.

— Affluence has become widespread despite pockets of economic distress. Some 40 percent of households own two or more automobiles and consumption of goods and services has doubled in the last 35 years.

— About half of all young people today spend at least some time in college, with each generation achieving more education than the one before.

— The combination of a shorter work week, more holidays and vacations and higher earnings, has allowed increased attention to leisure activities. This has boosted tourism and helped build sports and other recreations into large businesses.

— After reducing the poverty rate in the 1960s and 70s the nation's economic growth has slackened. Poverty remains a particular problem among women and children.

— Racial segregation has been reduced and blacks have managed considerable improvement in their economic conditions, although most remain less well off than whites.

— Women have moved into the mainstream of the nation's economic, political and intellectual activities. However, while many barriers have been broken down, pay parity remains elusive.

Company linked to Contra flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — A company hired by the State Department to fly U.S. "humanitarian" supplies to Nicaraguan Contra rebels received telephone calls from a Salvadoran safehouse used in secret arms shipments to the rebels, documents show.

The calls were made in September to the office and residence of retired Air Force Lt. Col. Richard B. Gadd of Vienna, Va., president of AIRMACH Inc. AIRMACH was paid to fly nonlethal supplies to the Contras although it has no planes registered to it and no publicly listed telephone number.

According to the Federal Aviation Administration, AIRMACH has no planes registered to it. The company operates out of an office in a small shopping and business complex in Vienna, a Washington suburb.

The contact between the safehouse in San Salvador and AIRMACH represents an apparent new link between the official U.S. government humanitarian aid and the secret weapons supply operation that came to light Oct. 5 when an American-manned C-123K cargo plane was shot down over southern Nicaragua.

Government sources and a secretary who answered calls to one number appearing on a telephone bill from the safehouse confirmed that the number belonged to AIRMACH, but Gadd did not respond to repeated requests for comment on his role with the Contras.

Calls also were made to a telephone number at a house in Vienna that Gadd listed as his residence. It is now answered by a tape-recording saying the number is not in service.

Robert Duemling, who ran the special State Department office that disbursed $27 million in non-lethal aid to the rebels, refused to identify any of the five companies hired to fly the supplies, but said the carriers were examined for reliability before contracts were granted.

He said that some of the air freight companies leased airplanes and hired crews for the Contra aid flights, which he said had ended by late spring.

The General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, has criticized management of the $27 million, saying more than half the money could not be tracked, with millions of dollars disappearing into offshore bank accounts and the Honduran military.

The CIA and the Reagan administration have denied involvement with the arms-laden C-123K flight that left two Americans dead and one, Eugene Hasenfus, captured in Nicaragua. Hasenfus has said the operation was directed by two Cuban-Americans who he claimed worked for the CIA.

Administration sources and Contra backers have said the air resupply operation was part of a secret White House-initiated program that used former intelligence operatives to assist the Contras during a two-year congressional ban on U.S. military assistance.

Salvadoran telephone records also show repeated calls from the safehouse to private office lines of Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, a senior staff aide on President Reagan's National Security Council. North, the chief White House contact with the Contras over the past two years, said through a spokesman that "to his knowledge" he never received calls from a safehouse.

Last month, Congress approved Reagan's request to lift the arms ban and grant $100 million in new aid to the Contras.

Classified records obtained by The Associated Press, covering the early phase of the humanitarian aid program, show AIRMACH received a contract in January worth $182,000 for "air charter services."

The Salvadoran phone records also show repeated calls from the safehouse to Southern Air. Southern Air spokesman William Kress has denied any connection between the company and the downed flight, but acknowledged the flight's co-pilot, Wallace Blaine Sawyer Jr., worked for Southern Air until April.

Hasenfus said William J. Cooper, the flight's pilot and another Air America veteran, had said he was working for Corporate Air Services Inc., the company Hasenfus said hired him. Cooper also carried a Southern Air identification card that was found in the crash.

Logs kept by Sawyer show him flying two flights — one in January from Miami and the other in February from New Orleans — to El Salvador's Ilopango military airfield, where the secret Contra supply operation was based.

Government sources said those two flights, aboard Southern Air planes, match up with flights contracted to AIRMACH. One source said the evidence suggests AIRMACH and Corporate Air Services operated effectively as fronts for Southern Air.

Paper: There's hope hostages will be freed

Associated Press

The Reagan administration will keep working through unpublicized Iranian contacts to win the release, possibly within a week or so, of two American hostages being held in Lebanon, according to a report published today.

President Reagan was told at a high-level meeting Monday there still is hope that Terry A. Anderson and Thomas M. Sutherland might be freed by the pro-Iranian group that holds them, The New York Times reported, quoting administration sources it did not identify.

The White House remains convinced there is a strong enough chance for the release of Anderson and Sutherland to warrant the effort, which officials hoped could bear fruit within another week or so, the Times said. They were doubtful, however, that the contacts could continue productively much more than a week.

In an interview published today in the Los Angeles Times, Robert C. McFarlane, Reagan's reputed envoy in negotiations with Iran, said he has urged an end to the secrecy surrounding the operation.

The former national security adviser declined to discuss specifics of his role, and said he hopes the White House will release information within a week.

"I accept their reasons for not doing it now," he said, adding that concern for the hostages' safety "is not trivial, it's a real risk."

McFarlane said Iran's strategic importance and the need to establish ties with moderates in Tehran was of "more enduring importance" than freeing Americans held hostage by pro-Iranian factions in Lebanon.

The Washington Post, meanwhile, reported today that the White House believed in September 1985 that it had arranged the release of at least two and possibly six American hostages, but was disappointed when the Rev. Benjamin Weir was the only captive freed on Sept. 14, 1985.

Reagan withheld the news of Weir's release for four days in hopes that more hostages would be freed, according to an unidentified source quoted by the Post.

Weir was questioned secretly for up to 12 hours by U.S. military officials considering contingency plans for a rescue mission of the other hostages, but the plans were aborted because of concerns the captives were being moved too frequently for a rescue attempt, the sources told the Post.

In Washington on Tuesday, Rep. Howard L. Berman, D-Calif., said that any shipment of American arms to Iran would violate two U.S. laws.

The Arms Export Control Act flatly bans any such exports and the Export Administration Act requires notifying Congress 30 days in advance of any sale, Berman said. The notice is required if a license is to be issued to ship more than $1 million worth of military goods to any country on the State Department's list of those that support terrorism.

Iran is on that list, along with Syria, Cuba, Libya and South Yemen.

NATION IN BRIEF

Overloaded outlet causes fire that kills five people

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — An overloaded outlet supplying power to two apartments sparked a fire Tuesday, killing three children and two adults who had moved in only three days before, authorities said.

Two other people living in a downstairs apartment, the brother and sister of the adults who died, were not injured, said Fire Investigator Jack Pascall.

The fire began either in the overloaded base plug or an extension cord running from it on the second floor, Pascall said.

The cord was fed out the side of the wood-frame house and downstairs to supply electricity to the first-floor apartment, which had no independent power source, he said.

The extension cord was connected to an iron, television, stereo and 1,500-watt heater on the first-floor, Pascall said.

The building's owner, Robert G. Lopez, said when the seven tenants moved in over the weekend he gave them a smoke detector.

The dead were identified as Linda Cochran, 28, Dwayne Walker, 26, and his children, Dwayne Jr., 9, Denise, 7, and Janeisa, 3.

Old hotel roof collapses

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — The roof may have caved in on efforts to save the old Turner Hotel when the structure's roof collapsed in a cloud of dust and pigeons on the eve of today's court hearing decide the building's fate,

"It sounded like somebody dropped a couple of trucks off a building; it was an ungodly sound," said Shreveport police Sgt. Chuck Rutledge.

"I thought at first that it was a wreck," said Cpl. F.J. Bryant. "It sounded like the whole thing was coming down." While the entire building did not fall, Shreveport Police and Fire Department officers cordoned off the structure just in case.

Officials of the Strand Theatre of Shreveport Corp., which is next door to the hotel, announced last month they had voted unanimously to demolish the old hotel, which had been obtained by the corporation about five years ago.

They said termite infestation and other problems had dashed hopes of possible renovation, estimating that it would cost $70,000 to $110,000 to redo the structure, compared with $25,000 to tear it down.

The demolition, scheduled to start Nov. 1, was halted by a temporary restraining order obtained by architect-preservationist Bill Wiener Jr., who has fought for the preservation of other historic landmarks.

Editorial prompts letters

ATLANTA (AP) — An editorial attack on Georgia's sodomy law in two national personal computer magazines has generated loads of mail to Gov. Joe Frank Harris.

"We've been deluged with letters from all over the country," Harris' press secretary Barbara Morgan told The Atlanta Constitution in an interview published today.

She said most of the letters, prompted by an editorial in November editions of PC World and MacWorld, have supported Georgia's law, which bans private oral or anal sex between consenting adults.

The editorial describes Georgia's law, recently upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court, as archaic and as stifling "the progressiveness Governor Harris hopes to promote in his quest for high-tech immigrants to his state."

The editorial was written by David Bunnell of San Francisco, editor-in-chief of the magazines, which have a combined circulation of 550,000.

Court suspends judges

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Two New York City judges indicted on criminal charges have been suspended by the state's highest court.

The Court of Appeals on Tuesday suspended Justice Francis X. Smith of Queens with pay. He is accused of lying to a grand jury about meetings concerning a cable television franchise with then-Queens Borough President Donald Manes and real estate developer John Zaccaro, husband of 1984 Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro.

Manes killed himself in March as his alleged role in a city corruption scandal began coming to light.

The court suspended Justice Jerome D. Cohen of Brooklyn without pay. He is accused of funneling $250,000 from 54 children's trust funds that he controlled into a credit union in exchange for interest-free loans.

Both have pleaded innocent.

Parades, ceremonies recognize U.S. veterans

Associated Press

More than 13 years after U.S. troops left Vietnam, honor for those who fought there was a dominant theme as America marked Veterans Day with parades and ceremonies in recognition of all those who fought for their country.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on Tuesday laid a wreath before the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia, and urged renewed support for President Reagan's military buildup. Weinberger told about 2,000 people at Arlington that the nation cannot reduce its strength in hopes of peace as it did after World War I.

Other speakers cited the desire of veterans to spare their descendants the need to take up arms. "No veteran wants future generations to suffer the tragedies of war," John Halachis, Massachusetts commissioner of veterans' services, said at ceremonies in Boston. "To know our youth will not have to repeat those sacrifices is what we fought for."

Stephen Stills, David Crosby, John Fogerty, Peter Fonda and other performers associated with the anti-Vietnam war movement teamed up for a concert in Kansas City, Kan., to benefit children of dead, missing or disabled Vietnam veterans.

Organizers hoped the event, which drew a crowd of 3,300, would raise $40,000 to $80,000 for a college scholarship fund.

A memorial to Vietnam veterans was dedicated in Cody, Wyo., and ground was broken for similar projects in Olympia, Wash., and in Baltimore. In Oklahoma City the bronze figure of a battle-weary Vietnam-era soldier was unveiled.

The Cody memorial and those planned for Olympia and Baltimore are similar to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C.

"We look forward to the day when we will no longer have to remember our young with a chisel and granite," said Hugh Walkup, a member of the veterans group that proposed the new Olympia memorial.

Organizers of the Maryland project said that memorial would be finished by next Veterans Day and would be the 22nd monument in the nation dedicated to Vietnam veterans.

As he dedicated a 24-foot-long wall bearing the names of 139 dead and missing, Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler said, "They hold a promise that these men and women have not died in vain."

At National Cemetery in Chattanooga, a Veterans of Foreign Wars official said those who fight are too often forgotten once a war is over.

"A veteran not only has to fight in time of war, but we also have to fight in time of peace to keep our hospital system, medical care for veterans and compensation for veterans," said Otha M. Kerr, chief of staff of the VFW in Tennessee.

Retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland, who commanded U.S. forces in Vietnam for part of the war, was grand marshal of a parade in Columbia, S.C., that police said drew 20,000 spectators.

"It's very refreshing to see a resurgence in patriotism," Westmoreland said. "I don't think America ever lost it."

Servicemen who remain unaccounted for in Southeast Asia also were remembered. A group of Vietnam veterans carried a bamboo "tiger cage" through downtown. It bore a sign saying, "Lest they be forgotten."

Massive plaited rawhide strips 'whipping' competition by far

By CAROL RUST

PORT ACRES, Texas (AP) — Times have changed since Preston Murphy used to skin the hide off his father's cows, salt it down and dry it out. But the leather product he makes from the rawhide hasn't.

His daddy taught him how to cut the leather, plait it and knot it on a hardwood handle to make the loudest whip a cow could hope to hear. And his granddaddy taught his daddy before him.

In the midst of assembly line products and factory labels, 76-year-old Murphy's product can whip anybody else's.

Some Western stores agree. Murphy makes whips for Sam's Western Store in Beaumont and Harmon's Western Store in Hankamer. Over the years, he's worked out a deal where Harmon's provides the leather, and he uses half of it to provide them whips, he says. The rest he uses to make his own whips, which he sells to customers who have heard of him by word of mouth.

But it's not the business that attracts him, it's the tedious and deliberate process that has become a dying art.

"You put a little notch here, you see that's the four-plait," he says as he leans his big frame over a work table in a shed out back of his house. As he slowly cuts a precisely straight, 9-foot line down the massive piece of leather, he explains that he is cutting strips that will be plaited four times and then eight times.

The more plaits, the thicker that part of the whip.

He pauses to run his knife over a whetstone that's never an arm's length away. "You got to have a sharp knife to make a good whip," he says, eyeing a row of 100-pound rice sacks filled with fertilizer intended for his garden nearby. "I usually sharpen mine once a whip if not more."

After he cuts the strips, which are still connected at one end, he runs his knife down the sides of each one to cut off the rough edges.

"You got to get them pretty and round on each edge," he says patiently. Then he fastens the end where all the leather strips connect to a door latch or a nail and begins plaiting.

"To get it tight," he says, yanking a leather strand, "you got to pull each string like you wanted to break it."

Murphy says he can plait a whip in 40 minutes, but sometimes he seems to take his time just to stretch the process out. "Just about anybody can plait a four-plait, but when they start the eight-plait, some of them are going to run into trouble."

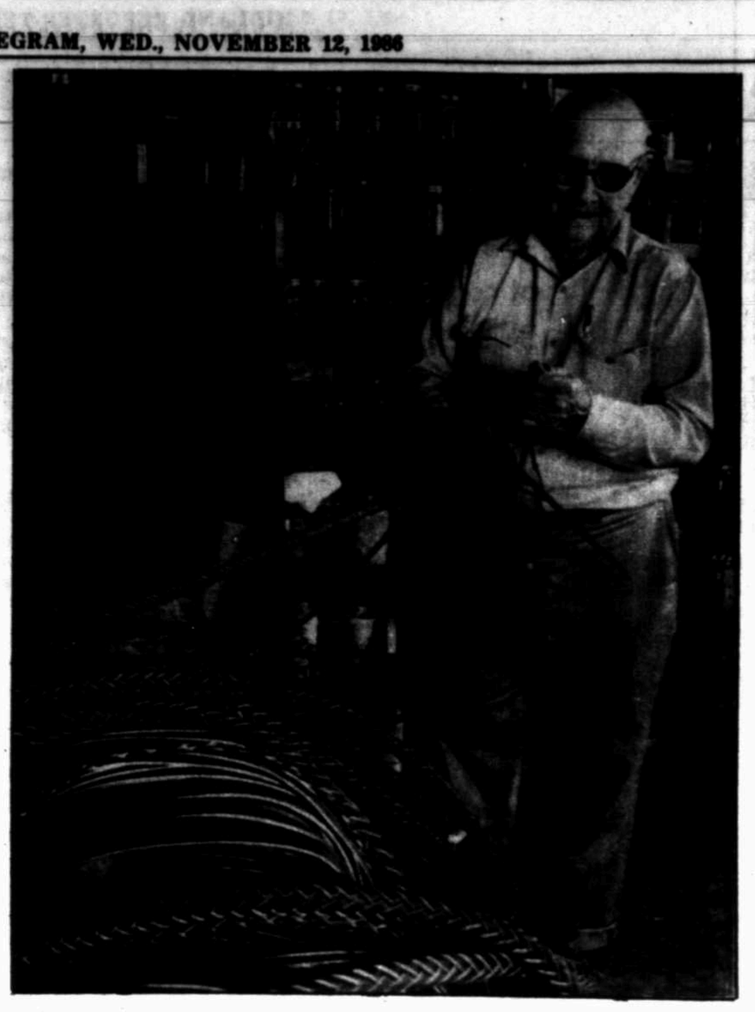
Then Murphy winds a complicated knot around his thumb in a series of loops and twists he makes look simple. He'll use the knot to connect the plaited leather to a handle, for which he uses only an extremely hard wood called bois d'arc.

He used to make the handles himself, but now he gets them from a man in Sulphur, La. "This wood is so hard people can't cut into it," he says. "And it sure beats me how worms can bore holes in it."

Murphy sells the whips for $25 each, but he doesn't make much profit from them, he's quick to tell you. "I drive 80 miles (to Hankamer) to get the leather and 100 miles to get the handles," he laughs. "When it's all said and done, I probably make about $3 a whip.

"I don't make nothing off it; I don't lose nothing off it. It just gives me something to do."

When a customer buys a whip, generally after Murphy has fixed him a cup of chicory coffee, he'll watch Murphy disappear through the screen door for a moment.



Preston Murphy, 76, still makes whips the old-fashioned way, the way his father and grandfather taught him. Murphy says it's not the business that attracts him, but the tedious and deliberate process that has become a dying art.

Vietnam veteran feels grateful for life's little moments

By DARRELL BERKHEIMER

BIG SPRING (AP) — Some people might have referred to him as a bum or a drunk, as some of his actions and statements indicated. But he deserved no less respect than any other person, so I listened.

He walked into my office, interrupting my work, as he sat down and started telling his story.

Ten or 12 years ago, I might have listened impatiently, advised him that I couldn't help him, and ushered him on his way as soon as possible so I could return to my writing.

With age, however, I've learned more patience, to listen more to others, and to search for a way to help or accommodate people who come to me.

His story was not a news item, as he apparently intended, but it is worth telling.

He was not asking for my time for himself, but to communicate his appreciation for the assistance he received from a Big Spring citizen.

He identified himself as William Caniford, 46, a Vietnam veteran on his way to the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

"Some call me Billy Goat," he said, noting he's a Virginia native who came to Texas 22 years ago and now considers Beaumont his home.

He added he was returning from Montana, where he had gone in the spring to hunt work. "I'm an electrician by trade, but I do almost any kind of work I can get," he said.

"I lost my eye in Vietnam," Billy reported, explaining he was going to the Big Spring VA Center because it was draining and bothering him. He said he planned to spend the night at the Salvation Army building.

"I just stopped by to give somebody a pat on the back," he said.

William Caniford, 46, a Vietnam veteran on his way to the Veterans Administration Medical center, received a free haircut from the barber in downtown Big Spring. Thankful for the act, Caniford shared his story with Big Spring Herald columnist Darrell Berkheimer.

He told me how he needed a haircut quite badly and indicated he didn't want to go to the VA center until he got one. He said he walked to the front of the Downtowner Barber Shop where he met one of the barbers and offered to sweep floors or wash windows in exchange for a haircut.

"The barber didn't have to do it, but he said, 'I'm not doing anything right now. Come on in, I'll cut your hair,'" Billy said.

"It's not too often you run into people like that who will help you out. Some will say, 'Ah, a damn old drunk' and they won't bother with you. But you might not be drunk, you might be hurting, instead, and many people won't help you," Billy continued.

"I just wanted you to know and to tell you that there are still some good people around, who don't have to get something for helping you. I'd like him (the barber) to get some credit for what he did."

Billy added that the barber directed him to the nearest drug store where he could get gauze and a patch for his eye.

"I think they gave me a cut rate. They gave it to me for a dollar-fifty," Billy said.

He added that the barber helped tape the gauze on his eye before he left.

A telephone call later revealed that Cecil Cooper, Route 3 Box 255, who lives out by the old Midway School near Sand Springs, was the barber who helped him.

As we chatted, I asked Billy how he traveled, "By thumb?"

"Yeah, and by freight," he said, referring to the railroads.

He said the railroad men "tell us not to, but they're OK. They know that some of us do it, anyway."

The free haircut and help that Billy received may not have meant too much to most of us. It obviously meant a lot to Billy.

"I just thought he should get some recognition for what he did," Billy said about Cooper. "Not too many people would bother."

Billy may not have realized it, but he earned my respect as much as Cooper earned his. Billy didn't have to come to the "Herald." He just didn't want to miss an opportunity to express his appreciation.

Thank you, Billy. You made my day.

Piles of metal are like Egyptian Pyramids

PORT EVERGLADES, Fla. (AP) — The Egyptian Pyramids along the Nile are bigger but, to Seymour Sherman, the pyramids of junk metal he stacks along the Intracoastal Waterway may be better.

And if you're wondering whatever happened to that beat-up old car you sold a while back, it probably wound up here in bits and pieces, waiting to be shipped to far-off lands.

For two decades, the giant piles of scrap steel have gone almost unnoticed by people sailing by the Broward port in pleasure boats, or those driving to or from a nearby pier where cruise ships make scheduled stops.

Like apparitions caused by a tropical sun, Sherman's pyramids come and go — sometimes they're visible; sometimes they're not. And they are never the same.

"Those piles," Sherman said, pointing to the rusty accumulation he estimated to be 20,000 tons, "come from junk cars, nothing else."

Sherman is manager for Sunshine Metal Processing Inc. of Opa-Locka, the only scrap-metal company in south Florida that has equipment capable of disposing of car bodies.

When a close inspection of the towering mountains of junk shows almost nothing discernible from any automobile, Sherman explains.

"We have a big shredder in Opa-Locka," he said. "We buy junk cars and put them in the shredder one at a time." Magnets and a conveyor belt separate non-ferrous metals and unwanted materials from the shredded cars, he added. When sufficient tonnage is produced, Sherman hires a trucking company to transfer the scrap metal to its leased Berth 26.

There, the trucks dump the junk onto a feeder, which pushes the metal onto a three-foot-wide rubber conveyor used to pour the scrap into a pile. As the pile grows, the 120-foot conveyor is tilted skyward.

End or beginning?

Much of the dust has already cleared after the 1986 off-year elections, but as all the implications come into focus historians are likely to note that Ronald Reagan conducted himself in presidential fashion throughout the campaign. He concentrated on issues he considered important to the nation and let the chips fall where they may.

Naturally he is disappointed that the chips fell where they did, giving the Democratic Party control of the Senate and wiping out the Republicans' 53-47 majority. Thousands of words have been spoken and written in recent days about how the President's popularity did not rub off on the electorate, bringing an end to the so-called "Reagan revolution."

The president deserves a word supporting his sense of the nation's destiny. While some candidates thought primarily of what they could do for their individual states, Reagan properly concentrated on what would be best for the country in the next two years.

He often mentioned the economy, which for the nation as a whole has been growing steadily in the past four years of his administration. He emphasized tax rates which have been lowered in the six years he has held office, and expressed the hope the trend will be continued for the next two years. His campaigning included the government's continuing fight against crime, as well as his administration's historic efforts to battle the growing plague of drugs.

Foreign policy speeches were marked by convincing clarifications of the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). Despite his failure to single-handedly preserve the Senate's Republican majority, polls show that the SDI has won considerable popular approval, and has contributed significantly to Reagan's popularity.

While many an election was being decided by local issues, the president kept his eye on national issues. Above all, he did not stoop to the negative campaigning that marked — and marred — so many races including Texas' own governor's contest. History is sure to show that Ronald Reagan campaigned positively and presidentially, and that the results in many states evolved around issues other than a repudiation of the essential principle of the Reagan administration.

Now the test goes to the Senate to see whether the Democrats in control can rise above narrow partisanship and perform in an equally statesmanlike manner. For the good of the country's future, we hope they outperform even Reagan in putting national interests first.

Khomeini's Iran of horrors detailed

WASHINGTON — At the same time the Reagan administration has reportedly been making overtures to Iran, the underground opposition to the Ayatollah Khomeini's fundamentalist Moslem regime has produced a list of the gruesome tortures that have been inflicted on political prisoners in Khomeini's dungeons.

Jack Anderson

The bill of particulars put together by the anti-Khomeini People's Mojahedin describes in stomach-turning detail 64 different forms of sadistic butchery practiced in the torture chambers of the ayatollah. The opposition group's indictment will be the subject of discussion at the United Nations next week.

Here are just a few of the atrocities committed by 3,771 torturers identified by the People's Mojahedin, inflicted on thousands of political prisoners, most of them members or suspected members of the Mojahedin:

— The most common means of torture is continuous flogging with thick electric cables on the soles of the feet, the lower legs, the back and the face. It is the single greatest cause of death in the torture chambers. One prisoner in Isfahan received almost 9,000 lashes before he died; in Mashad a political prisoner was given 3,000 lashes in one week.

— Burning is another favorite method of torture, using electric irons, stoves, cigarettes, acid, gunpowder and boiling oil.

— Bones in the hands and feet are crushed slowly in workshop clamps and vises. Men, women and children have had their bones broken on medieval-style racks.

— "Chicken barbecue," as it is called by the victims' bereaved families, consists of tying the naked prisoner to a horizontal bar, which is then turned like a spit over high heat while the prisoner is beaten.

— Rape of women and girls is common, and the guards often force husbands or parents to watch. Blocking the urinary tract is another method of torture, causing breakdown of internal organs.

— Nails are driven into prisoners' skulls, legs and feet. Tahereh Habibpour, who was four months pregnant, had nails driven into her breasts.

— Dr. Sheikh Al-Islamzadeh, former health minister under the shah, now works for Khomeini; he pioneered the injection of water under the skin, which causes unbearable pain.

— Prisoners have been crucified, suspended by meat hooks through their arms or legs, had their heads crushed between blocks and buried alive, according to the Mojahedin document.

— Deliberate dismemberment is also committed by Khomeini's torturers. A 24-year-old woman, Mojgan Homayounfar, had her lower leg amputated under torture, yet survived to tell the tale. Ali-Reza Kazemi, a student at the Mashad school of literature, was carved up piecemeal. First his torturers lopped off his ears, nose and lips; then they cut his entire body into pieces and dumped them into a well on the Mashad-Gonabad road.

— The depravity of Khomeini's torturers is illustrated by the fate of Hamid Ghafoori in Jahroom. According to the Mojahedin bill of particulars, parts of his body were cut off and put in his mouth; he was then made to chew them. He eventually died under torture.

What makes this chronicle of savagery particularly horrifying is that the torture is being committed in the name of religion, and deliberately. Even Hitler and Stalin had apologists who claimed that the dictators never knew of the excesses that occurred under their orders.

Khomeini can have no such alibi. He glories in the sadistic slaughter taking place daily in his torture chambers. On Feb. 3, 1984, the supposed man of God declared publicly:

"Killing is mercy, for it seeks to rectify the person. A person sometimes cannot be rectified unless he is cut up and heated up. You must kill, burn and lock up those who are in opposition."

Gorbachev journey

Mikhail Gorbachev under a sombrero is difficult to imagine. The man seems born to the fedora he customarily wears. But next spring when the orchids and azaleas bloom in Mexico City, the Soviet leader plans a first-ever visit to Mexico and other Latin American countries. It will be a precedent-setting journey — no top Soviet leader has ever set foot in Central or South America.

For the Soviet Union, Gorbachev's trip could be a public relations bonanza. For the United States, it seems more like a cold shower. At a time when Mexico's economic and social problems are getting more serious and its dependence on the United States more desperate than ever before, the Gorbachev invitation seems grotesquely out of place.

Worse, there are reports that Mexico has extended consular privileges to the Soviets in cities near the American border — ideal locations for Soviet espionage bases.

Why would the government of Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid behave this way? Is the dislike that some Mexicans have of being so dependent on the United States manifesting itself in a show of independence?

Illegal immigration into the United States has become a flood as the Mexican economy staggers.

Congress has just passed immigration legislation that generously allows millions of Mexicans illegally residing in the United States to remain here and seek citizenship. Fully 10 percent of the Mexican population may now be living in the United States.

American banks have lent Mexico $25 billion, which Mexico is having trouble repaying.

Given these facts, a diplomatic policy more sensitive to the interests of the United States would be appropriate. But that, unfortunately, might not be in the cards. De la Madrid, like past Mexican presidents, is touchy about American influence and pressure. To him, the Gorbachev invitation might seem to be an exercise in independence. Nevertheless, it was an error by Mexico that could set up a scoring opportunity for the Soviets.

Election put politics back to natural state

WASHINGTON — American politics has now returned to its natural state: a Republican president sparring with a Democratic Congress.

Comes 1988, the Republicans will have held the White House, from Eisenhower through Reagan, for 24 out of 36 years. In terms of presidential leadership for most Americans, it has been Republican 2 to 1.

William Safire

In the same 36 years, Democrats have held both houses of Congress for 28 years, and at least one house for six more; they were out in the cold completely for only two years, a generation ago.

Thus, the White House is the place we usually send Republicans; Congress is the place we almost always send Democrats. One end of Pennsylvania Avenue tilts a little rightward, the other end a little left, and the resulting creative tension has kept the peace, defended freedom and lifted our standard of living.

That is known as the Long View, in which I am immersing myself today because the short view is too shattering to contemplate with "my usual flair."

Hoo-boy, did we take a beating in the Senate. Take your choice of several handy smokescreens:

1. Voters threw a hate on statewide incumbents of both parties. Look at all those Democratic governors who were dumped for new Republican faces. In state after state, the people have installed a revolving door in the governor's mansion; no wonder, with so many Republican senatorial seats up for grabs this year, the righties suffered a little temporary setback.

2. This natural swing of the pendulum was by no means a repudiation of Ronald Reagan or the conservative principles on which he stands. After all, many of the losers of today won in squeakers six years ago. And the results in the House — practically a Republican victory — prove that the other-bodysnatching was an agglomeration of local campaigns based on local issues. Besides, many of the spotslinging Democratic winners are as conservative as the Republicans they replaced, making the results almost an ideological wash. (See how liberals call themselves "centrists.")

3. The president was right to make this a referendum on his leadership, because that is the gutsy thing for a party leader to do. The Reagan campaigning, while not enough to make the difference between victory and defeat, made some races much closer and helped save some seats. When it comes to a mandate, "use it or lose it," as George Shultz likes to say, although we now see that when you use it, you sometimes lose it anyway.

Other smokescreens and fig leaves come to mind (Republican pros say cruelly that the Senate was lost only because most of our losing senatorial candidates were born losers), but that will do for the solace department. The fact is that the power has shifted dramatically in the place it counted this year. Such a swing may be "normal" in the Long View, but it can also be dangerous.

The danger to conservatism is that right-wingers will feel all too comfortable in their "normal" minority position in the Congress, like travelers finding deceptive warmth in snowdrifts. The danger to tomorrow's liberalism is that many left-wingers, having me-tooed their way to power, will fail to offer good alternatives to the policies they should be opposing.

Conservatives should wake up to the realization that nobody can purchase the farm vote. Tens of billions in increased subsidies, on top of a craven withdrawal of the grain embargo, won the Republicans little loyalty in the farm belt; that vote will go illogically against whomever is in, as long as failing farmers are given taxpayer support unavailable to other small businesses.

Liberals have to wake up to the essential struggle in their party between protection and retaliation. Organized labor, farm groups and the other forces gravitating toward Mario Cuomo want protection ("save American jobs"); the intellectuals, yuppies and economic realists look to Gary Hart for more sophisticated retaliation when we are victimized by trading partners.

Looking to 1988, the right will want to get on the side of the retaliators, whose hard-line pitch fits nicely into our natural nationalism and abhorrence of trade barriers. Forget that talk about vetoing a tough trade bill; Reagan's trade negotiating authority runs out next year, and Congress holds the whip hand.

To make 1988 lemonade out of the 1986 lemon, Republican presidential candidates will want to take the offensive: instead of letting the Democrats run against the Reagan record, to run themselves against the "helpless Hundredth Congress." Let conspiracy theorists suggest we slyly took a dive this year.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 12, the 316th day of 1986. There are 49 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 12, 1920, baseball got its first "czar" as Judge Kennesaw Mountain Landis was elected commissioner of the American and National Leagues.

On this date:

In 1815, American suffragist Elizabeth Cady Stanton was born.

In 1921, representatives of nine nations gathered in the nation's capital for the start of the Washington Conference for Limitation of Armaments.

In 1927, Josef Stalin became the undisputed ruler of the Soviet Union as Leon Trotsky was expelled from the Communist Party.

In 1929, Grace Kelly, who would become a Hollywood star and Princess of Monaco, was born.

In 1944, during World War II, the German battleship Tirpitz was sunk off Norway.

In 1948, former Japanese Premier Hideki Tojo and several other World War II Japanese leaders were sentenced to death by a war crimes tribunal.

In 1954, Ellis Island, an immigration station in New York Harbor, was closed after processing more than 20 million immigrants since it opened in 1892.

In 1975, Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas retired because of failing health, ending a record 36½-year term.

In 1980, The U.S. space probe Voyager I came within 77,000 miles of Saturn, sailing beneath the planet's rings while transmitting data back to Earth.

In 1982, Yuri V. Andropov was elected to succeed the late Leonid I. Brezhnev as general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party's Central Committee.

In 1984, space shuttle astronauts Dale Gardner and Joe Allen snared a wandering satellite in history's first space salvage. The Palapa B-2 satellite was secured in Discovery's cargo bay for return to Earth.

Ten years ago: Israel expressed its unhappiness with the United States for voting in favor of a U.N. Security Council declaration critical of Israeli policy in occupied Arab territories.

Five years ago: The space shuttle Columbia, plagued by delays, finally blasted off. Budget Director David A. Stockman apologized to President Reagan over comments he made to The Atlantic Monthly expressing doubts about the administration's economic policies.

One year ago: Arthur James Walker, a retired Navy lieutenant commander, was sentenced in Norfolk, Va., to life in prison for his role in a spy ring masterminded by his younger brother, John Anthony Walker Jr.

Today's birthdays: Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun is 78. Actress Kim Hunter is 64. Musician-songwriter Neil Young is 41. Romanian gymnast Nadia Comaneci is 25.

Themeless campaign leaves GOP angry

WASHINGTON — The worst Republican defeat in a decade was greeted by some of the party's toughest political tacticians with an exhiliration revealing the depth of the GOP split on policy and tactics.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

To lachrymose administration officials and politicians who huddled together on a dank after-election Wednesday, the loss of the Senate was tragedy. But to conservative activists, some in the administration but most at the grass roots, defeat will ironically mean emancipation from the confining shackles of Senate control that led to Tuesday night's defeats.

Those shackles are linked to the neutered Republican campaign, without theme or ideology, that the Right blames for the defeat. But now President Reagan is no longer constrained to kiss the rings of the haughty and often hostile Republican College of Cardinals controlling the Senate. Now he can play the hardball that will set the 1988 campaign agenda. Since the Democrats even in victory showed equal confusion over establishing a clear course, GOP conservatives believe that their party unbound can give the Reagan Revolution the new thrust and momentum it needs.

But the president will be urged by key aides to accommodate and perhaps appease his first Democratic Congress. Chief of staff Donald T. Regan's secretariat is on its way to a non-confrontational, business-as-usual approach. Thus continues a dispute that during the late campaign was disguised as disagreement over tactics but in fact goes to the heart of the party's ideological disputes.

Even in their deep mourning, Reagan political tacticians could not comprehend their critics. They protested there was no way a national theme could be imposed on local candidates.

But conservatives are saying that White House failure to provide a theme doomed a flaccid array of 1980 first-term Republican senators, some of them plain dreadful as campaigners. Falling back on their own resources, they were uniformly unable to say why anybody should vote for them.

The consensus choice for the year's poorest candidate was appointive Sen. James T. Broyhill of North Carolina. With his managers desperate to win without help from Sen. Jesse Helms' right-wing Congressional Club of North Carolina, Broyhill's campaign spots were, in the words of White House aides themselves, "warm and fuzzy."

His worse sin, however, was permitting his opponent, ex-governor Terry Sanford, a 69-year-old liberal, to campaign in the guise of a vigorous and youthful conservative. In Georgia, Sen. Mack Mattingly, also "warm and fuzzy," was more concerned about the alleged absenteeism of Rep. Wyche Fowler than magnifying his undoubted liberal voting record. These Republicans had forgotten that the way to defeat a Southern Democrat is to place the liberal brand on him.

Instead, a free pass from ideological scrutiny was handed Democratic Senate candidates from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico. Rep. Tom Daschle in South Dakota is a true son of George McGovern. But he easily dodged that heritage and then focussed the campaign's closing days on whether or not Republican Sen. James Abdnor was or was not a foe of Social Security.

That Democrats were permitted to pursue in South Dakota, Alabama, Colorado and elsewhere the hoary game of Social Security-baiting excused them from the necessity of producing a central theme for their own campaigns. Nowhere were they successfully called to account for policies that the Democratic Senate will now pursue: disband the contras, starve the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), pass protectionist trade legislation, maybe raise taxes.

If no such campaign emerged from the White House, there is scarcely post-election determination there to dare the most liberal class of freshman Democratic senators since the 1958 landslide to show their true colors. Although those colors will be displayed soon enough, the same mentality that opted for a themeless campaign now shuns confrontation.

But at the grass roots, the same Republicans who nearly nominated Ronald Reagan in 1976 against the party's establishment and finally got him four years later are angry. They loathe the high-tech, non-issue, hideously expensive campaign of 1986 and want to purge the party leaders who crafted it. The difference between them and the leaders is that where the latter felt devastated Wednesday morning, the insurgents considered themselves emancipated and saw the party suddenly unbound.

Classroom program stresses alternative for teen pregnancies

HOUSTON (AP) — There were lots of oohs and aahs when "Donna" walked into the Family Life classroom with her 2-year-old daughter.

"Isn't she sweet...isn't she cute," the teens said as they crowded around her.

But after 30 minutes, those same high school students were beginning to get the picture about the responsibilities — as well as the joys — of raising a child. That toddler had located the chalk and the teacher's plant, emptied two purses and had slipped out the door and down the hall with four students and her mother in rapid pursuit.

The mother, one of a dozen adoptive parents representing the Homes of St. Mark, had made her point vividly. As part of an educational and informational program for the Houston-based maternity care and child placement agency, the parents are sharing their experience in adopting and parenting with Houston area teens.

"This classroom program is our grass roots effort to reverse the trend toward teens raising babies and to provide more information about what we call the loving alternative — adoption," said Jo Ann Caldwell, executive director of the Homes of St. Mark, established in 1955.

"During the first 10 years our agency was placing about 200 babies a year; now we are able to place only about 30 infants a year for the hundreds of deserving couples on our waiting lists."

Betty Steele, casework director, says Homes of St. Mark speakers present a realistic view of adoption, adding, "Remember the old movies where couples select the baby of their choice from a nursery filled with adorable, healthy infants? That's history!"

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, 1 million girls under age 20 will become pregnant in 1986. Nearly 96 percent of all pregnant teens who carry their children to term will try to raise the babies themselves. Steele notes that having a baby out of wedlock no longer has the stigma it once did.

Family Life teachers prepare their students for the speakers with activities like having girls carry around a 5-pound bag of sugar for a week. "That sugar goes with them everywhere, even to the bathroom," said one teacher. "They begin to get the idea of carrying around an infant — for nine months before it is born, and for years afterward."

Another Family Life class activity is dramatization. In Scene I a pregnant teen confides in her friends. They all say, "Keep the baby...keep the baby...we'll help you; you can count on us to baby-sit. It will be fun."

Scene II is after the baby is born. The young mother is sitting alone — isolated from her friends who are at school, at parties, at ballgames. They drop in to look at the baby, but all have somewhere to go. The baby is her responsibility now.

One adoptive mother tells a class that getting their first baby after a career and 10 years of marriage is wonderful but "like waking up in a new world." She and her husband began thinking about adopting a baby when she turned 30. They knew it would change their lifestyle, but they had no idea how much.

"I knew babies ate six to eight times a day," said Donna. "What I didn't know was that it took them an hour to do it. If I was not feeding her, I was doing laundry or making formula or trying to get some sleep. I was a wreck."

"These mothers are actually describing the best of circumstances to the students," said Steele. "These are couples with the money for a nice home, clothes, medicine, schooling. Many of the teens remain single; they must drop out of school. They get trapped in a cycle of poverty and can't break out."

Homes of St. Mark speakers stress that in most cases the birth parents who make an adoption plan are considering what is best for the child.

This is an actual and typical letter from a birth mother to her baby:

"Dear Son, Today I signed the papers for you to be adopted. The decision wasn't easy. I had several options...marriage was one of them. But we are too young to be married and to give you all you deserve. There were times I was so selfish that I wanted to keep you. But your father and I care enough to give you up. I know in my heart this is the right thing to do. Love always, Laura."

Turkey wants ancient altar brought home

BERLIN (AP) — The ancient Altar of Pergamum has been one of Berlin's most cherished art works since the end of the last century, but now some local officials in Turkey have started a long-shot campaign to bring it home.

At the center of the dispute are the altar's priceless wall sculptures, which with their highly dramatic representation of mythical scenes broke from centuries of idealized Greek tradition.

The altar's reconstructed portion, measuring a little more than 118 feet by 111 feet at its base, is Communist East Berlin's best known art treasure.

Hundreds of visitors file into the well-maintained Pergamum Museum each day, many of them gasping in near disbelief as they enter the main hall and see the massive altar looming in front of them. Many of the visitors come from other Soviet bloc countries.

The stone altar, about 32 feet high, is built in a U-shape with 27 steps in the center leading up to a temple-like hall running along the top. Dozens of columns support the hall's ornately carved roof.

German archaeologists began excavating the Pergamum site, now in the far western part of modern-day Turkey just across from the Greek island of Lesbos, in 1878.

Several of the wall sculptures, known in the art world as friezes, were put on display in 1885 in Berlin. The reconstructed altar, with major pieces of the original 390 feet of frieze work intact, was opened to the public in 1930.

During World War II, the original sculptures were taken out of the museum to safety, while the reconstructed parts were heavily damaged in the fighting.

Now, local officials in the city that stands on the site of ancient Pergamum say the East Germans should return the original pieces of the altar, which dates from the 2nd century B.C.

The city council of modern-day Bergama, Turkey, said in a June resolution that the altar's treasures "must be exhibited in their natural setting."

The move is reminiscent of the Greek request for the return of the Elgin Marbles to the Acropolis. So far, the British government has refused to return the Athenian sculptures that were removed in 1806.

Mustafa Kazak, the governor of the Bergama area, told The Associated Press the request for the return of the Pergamum Altar already has been filed with government officials in the capital of Ankara.

"We shall follow this until the issue is resolved one way or another," Kazak said in an interview with the AP from his office in Bergama.

"This is a move initiated by local people who have come to appreciate the value of their treasures, years after they were taken abroad," Kazak noted.

So far, the Ankara government has not made a formal decision on whether to make the request.

The German archaeologists removed the altar with the permission of the Ottoman Empire's ruling sultan, who controlled the area where Pergamum is now.

That makes it unlikely the East Germans will give back the treasure, even if the Turkish government makes a formal request to East Germany's Communist leadership, according to experts.

"With the Pergamum Altar, it's a question of a real agreement between states," said Ernst-Ludwig Schwandner of the West Berlin-based German Archaeological Institute.

"I would rule out any return by the East Germans," he said in an interview with The Associated Press.

The AP asked for an opportunity to discuss the altar with a Pergamum Museum official, but received no response from East Germany's Information Ministry.

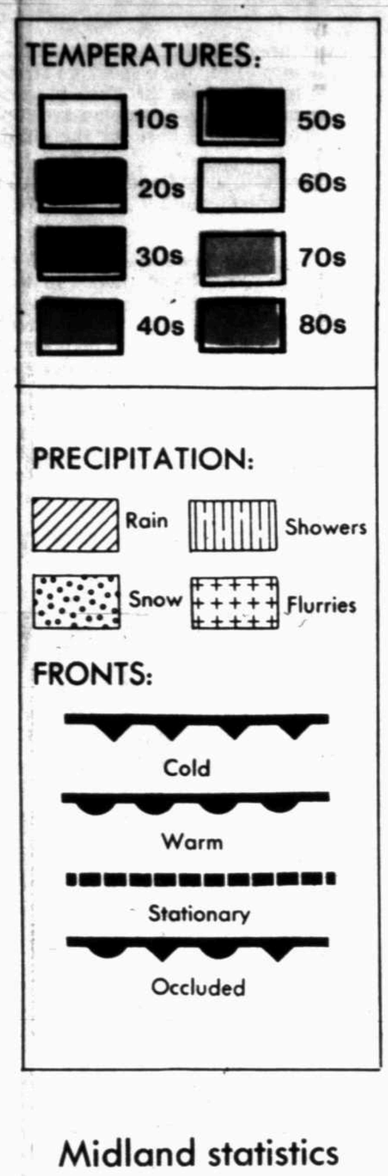
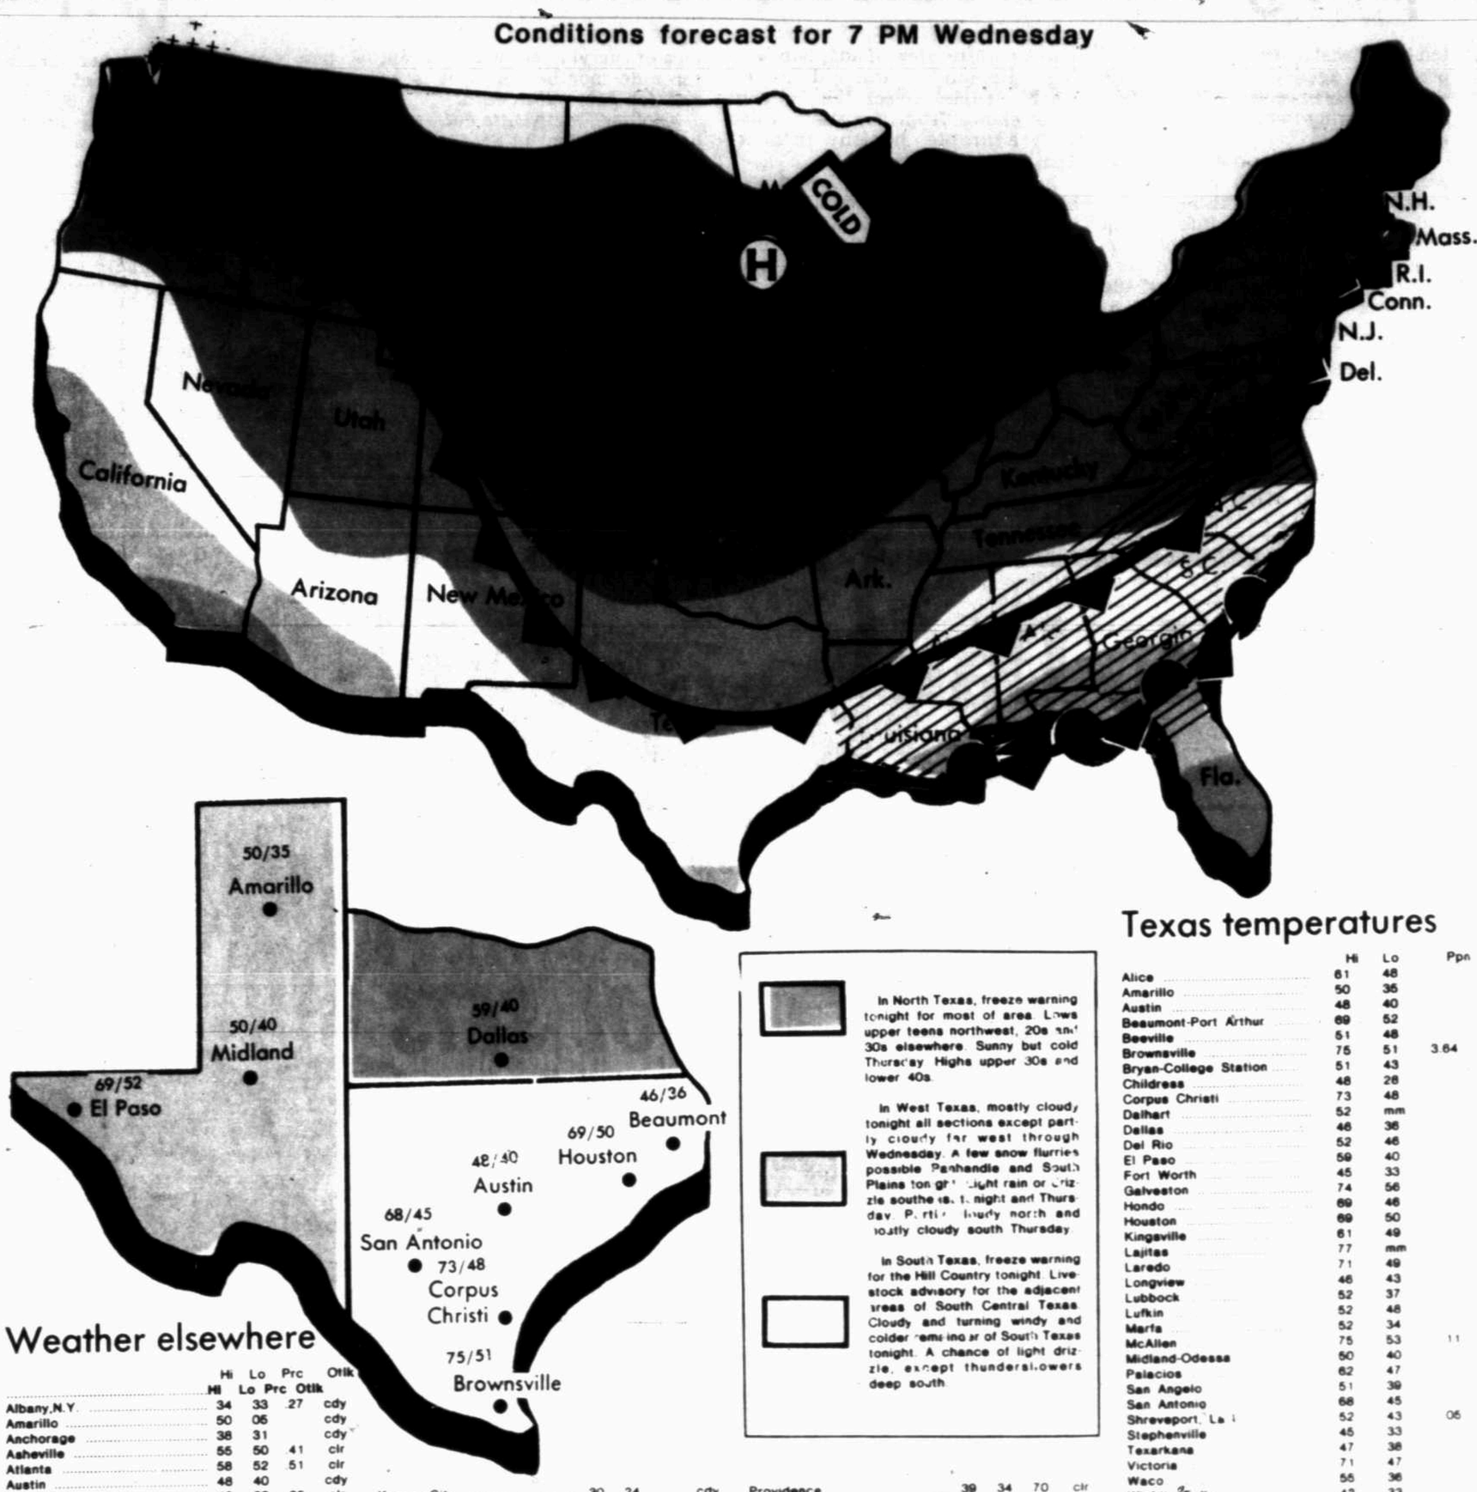
WEATHER SUMMARY





In North Texas, freeze warning tonight for most of area. Lows upper teens northwest, 20s and 30s elsewhere. Sunny but cold Thursday. Highs upper 30s and lower 40s.

In West Texas, mostly cloudy tonight all sections except partly cloudy far west through Wednesday. A few snow flurries possible Panhandle and South Plains tonight. Light rain or drizzle southeast tonight and Thursday. Partly cloudy north and mostly cloudy south Thursday.

In South Texas, freeze warning for the Hill Country tonight. Livestock advisory for the adjacent areas of South Central Texas. Cloudy and turning windy and colder remaining areas of South Texas tonight. A chance of light drizzle, except thundershowers deep south.

Temperatures remain cool

From Staff and Wire Reports

Chilly temperatures remain in the Permian Basin forecast through most of the week as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal calls for mostly cloudy skies tonight and a low near 30 degrees. Winds will be from the east at 10 to 15 mph.

Thursday will be mostly cloudy, with a 20 percent chance of light rain or drizzle. The high will be in the upper 30s and winds will be from the southeast at 10 to 15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 50 was 33 degrees cooler than the record of 83, set on the same day in 1964. The low of 40 was 21 degrees warmer than the record of 19 in 1932.

STATE

A very strong cold front racing southward across the high plains of Kansas early today was expected to bring a hard freeze to portions of North Texas and freezing temperatures to the Hill Country, the National Weather Service says.

The front was expected to arrive in North Texas by early afternoon and temperatures were expected to plunge into the 20s before dawn Thursday.

Forecasts called for a freeze warning over North Texas and the Hill Country of South Central Texas tonight. Skies were to be mostly cloudy over the entire state through tonight. A clearing trend is expected Thursday and warmer temperatures are forecast by Friday.

Forecasters say there is a chance of some light snow flurries over the High Plains of West Texas tonight. And there is a chance of scattered drizzle over South Texas tonight and some light rain over South Texas, the Trans-Pecos area and the Edward Plateau through tonight.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 30s, ranging from the 20s in North Texas to the mid 40s in extreme South Texas. Highs Thursday will be mostly in the 30s and 40s.

NATION

Frigid air blew across the Plains today, whirling snow and pushing wind-chills to minus 50 degrees, while temperatures barely dipped below 80 in sections of Florida.

Winds of up to 35 mph combined with temperatures in the single digits to teens to produce wind chills of 20 to 50 degrees below zero in Montana, Wyoming, the Dakotas and northern Nebraska.

Light snow was falling in the northern Mississippi Valley and the northern and central sections of the Plains and Rockies.

Witness testifies ex-bank official made investments

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Olen Mack Brock had invested in real estate and oil-and-gas interests when he was a vice president of the now-defunct First National Bank of Midland (FNB), according to testimony.

"He (Brock) asked when he might get in on a good deal," William E. Hendon, Midland independent oil producer and an FNB customer, testified Tuesday in Brock's federal trial in Midland.

Brock, 49, is charged by federal indictment with bank fraud and embezzlement in 1981 and 1982 when he was an FNB vice president and loan officer. The prosecution claims Brock, who now lives in Ruidoso, N.M., engaged in personal business dealings which conflicted with his role as a banker.

Hendon said Brock invested more than $5,200 in a drilling venture, which yielded a productive oil well and returned the initial investment several times. But Brock held onto his interest only for a "short time," Hendon said. Today, that well is "marginal" in production, Hendon said.

"Mr. Brock said that he didn't think he could afford this (investment) any longer and wanted us to buy him out."

Hendon said Brock was among the bank's loan officers in which he consulted to borrow drilling funds, which was commingled with investors' money.

The government's prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney James K. "Jim" Blankinship, alleged that Brock violated the bank's "Standards of Conduct." Those standards exhorted bank's personnel "to avoid any conflict between their self-interest" and their obligations to the bank, its customers and shareholders. The "Standards of Conduct" said:

"The achievement of the Bank's goals and objectives is dependent upon complete public trust of and confidence in the Directors of staff of the Bank. Therefore, all parties associated with the Bank will be expected to conform to high standards of ethical behavior in both the conduct of the Bank's affairs and their own personal affairs. Confidentiality of customer information must be protected at all times even after a director or staff member is no longer associated with the Bank. Use of such information for personal gain will not be permitted.

"All directors and staff members will be required to manage their personal and business affairs so as to avoid any conflict between their self-interest and their obligations to the Bank, its customers, and its shareholders.

"All disclosures required by law, regulations, or the policies or procedures of the Bank will be promptly and accurately reported to the appropriate party."

However, Brock's defense attorney, A.L. "Dusty" Rhodes, said he would prove that his client was guilty of no wrong-doing, did not violate any trust and did not get involved in any conflict of interest.

"I am representing an innocent man," he said.

Brock is to testify in his own defense after the government has presented its slate of witnesses in the trial, which started Monday in federal court in Midland.

Hendon said that his relationship with Brock was "business-like. I saw him in the bank, and that's it."

Rhodes asked Hendon if Brock had given him any preferential treatment or showed him favoritism. "Absolutely not," answered Hendon.

But in their business dealings, Hendon said he suspected that Brock didn't pay all of his billed expenses in the oil-well venture.

"I felt that we were being used," Hendon said. "To the best of my knowledge, he has not paid all of his expenses." However, Hendon said he was "not certain" that Brock didn't pay.

Testimony also indicated that Brock and another FNB customer, Sam Walker Orr, jointly owned Quadco Rentals and, with their wives, owned and operated Bost Land Corp. to develop and sell real estate for profit prior to October 1981. Brock had been Orr's loan officer at FNB.

Brock and Orr borrowed investment money from Western National Bank of Odessa. In October 1981, they owed the bank approximately $77,400, the government contends. That month, Brock sold his interests in Quadco Rentals and Bost Land Corp. to Orr. After the Brock-Orr partnership was dissolved, Orr said the Western National Bank notes were moved to FNB.

Orr testified that he had borrowed $87,000 from FNB in October 1981. Currently, he said, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) holds that note because FDIC took over FNB's assets after the bank failed in October 1983. Orr said that it "was always understood" that Brock could not borrow funds from FNB because of "conflict of interest."

The Midland-Odessa area was in a boom period in 1981, but in 1982 and in 1983, the economy started sinking, as oil prices plummeted.

"I had some financial problems," Orr said. "Everybody left Midland, and everything went bad. Just couldn't pay 'em (notes)."

Under questioning by Blankinship, Orr said that he had not given gifts to Brock — "not that I'm aware of."

"I got him a pair of boots one time when we stopped off at M.L. Leddy (& Sons)," Orr said, and said he once remodeled Brock's bathroom. "We were just friends."

Liens may be filed on unpaid sewage, garbage bills

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Midlanders not paying their garbage and sewage bills may face liens on their property due to an amendment passed by the City Council Tuesday.

Before the ordinance change, the city could only file liens to collect money for unpaid water bills.

The city also considered Tuesday annexing 10-square miles around a northeast site for the future airpark.

If more than $50 is owed on sewage and garbage service, the utility department can attempt to recover unpaid bills because of the ordinance change, said Billy Tatsch, customer service supervisor.

"We're just trying to cut our losses and we're using every available tool we can find," Tatsch said.

Each year the city is unable to collect .5 percent of its bills or about $165,000 a year, he said.

The city has the hardest time collecting payments from people who move out of town, Tatsch said.

About 1,800 people move from Midland every year and they leave an unpaid utility bill averaging around $104, he said.

"If we only recover 50 percent, that's how much money we don't have to raise to make up the loss," Tatsch said.

In other action, the city conducted the first public hearing on annexing 10-square miles around the northeast site of the future Midland Airpark.

The land, east of State Highway 349 and north of Loop 250, will be annexed so the city can control the development surrounding the future airpark, said Dave Thurbon, assistant planning director.

No families live in the area, but about six landowners would have to begin paying city taxes if the area is annexed, Thurbon said.

A second public hearing will be held Nov. 25 during the regular council meeting.

The city has postponed moving the airpark located south of Loop 250 and east of Garfield Avenue to the northeast site until the economy improves.

"We hope someday to have a really excellent airpark out there," said Mayor Carroll Thomas.

In other action, the council also approved giving $35,000 to partially fund the Permian Basin Bid Center.

This is the second year the city has given money to the center that helps people obtain government bids.

Other groups funding the center include the Odessa Industrial Development Committee, which will give $35,000, and the Private Industry Council, which gave the center $25,000 during its first year.

The industry council has not decided how much it will contribute to the center this year, said Hank Henry, bid center president.

Since the center opened in January, about 30 contracts worth $3 million have been awarded to area businesses, Henry said.

Of the center's 330 clients, about 57 percent are from Odessa and 35 percent are from Midland. The remainder are from Big Spring and Andrews.

Odessa has more clients because the city has more machine-type shops than Midland, Henry said.

The council also approved Tuesday of paying $81,202 over two years to have police uniforms cleaned. About $37,415 was also approved to pay for cleaning fire department uniforms over two years.

Master Cleaners of Midland won the city contract.

Deputy City Manager Fred Poe said because police and fire personnel are required to wear uniforms, the city pays for their upkeep.

"We've always furnished them the uniforms and the cleaning on them. You control the looks of the uniforms better if you pay for it," Poe said.

Enrollment down slightly, study shows

By PATRICK CRIMMINS

Enrollment in the Midland Independent School District is down only slightly, despite the area's depressed oil-based economy, according to a study presented to the school board Tuesday.

Larry Lusby, the district's director of computer and special services, told board members enrollment has decreased from 18,912 in October of last year to 18,858, which was the census figure Oct. 8 of this year.

Lusby said, as expected, enrollment in north and northwest Midland has increased. Enrollment on the east side is down, he said.

"We are continuing the trend of the last few weeks of losing students each week," he said. "Enrollment, it appears, has already peaked, and it has peaked early."

The study, which is done annually, is required by the Texas Education Agency.

The school district tracks enrollment by the use of more than 50 numbered grids; each grid covers a geographical section of the city. Lusby said the largest increase over last year was 70 students in one grid.

"One reason for the increase is some private school students are now going to public schools," Lusby said. "Of course, that is because of the economy."

Lusby also said the district has, surprisingly, gained rural students. He said in 1985, the district had 2,543 students. This year, that number is up to 2,696.

The study also tracked minority enrollment in the district, which has increased slightly. Three years ago, the district showed 62.87 percent Anglo students. This year, the district is 61.75 percent Anglo.

"The trend of a smaller number of Anglo students has continued the last four years," Lusby said, "not unlike any other school district in the Southwest.

"Without exception we have the largest number of minority students of those districts we are usually compared to."

Board member Joe Golding questioned the dropout rate of Hispanic students in the district in grades nine through 12. But Dr. Joseph Baresi told the board the "dropout" rate in MISD is 25 percent, well below the statewide dropout rate of 45 percent.

In other action, the board unanimously approved the appointment of Dr. David Snyder as the AIDS advisor. Snyder assisted the district in formulation of its AIDS policy, and Baresi said he would receive advice from Snyder in the event the disease was found in a MISD student.

TUEC asks PUC for authorization to make refunds

Residential customers' refund would be about $10

From Staff Reports

Texas Utilities Electric Company has filed an application with the Public Utility Commission asking authorization to refund about $58.4 million to its customers, according to a press release provided by the company.

The company also is asking authorization to decrease fuel revenue by about $42.8 million from the level previously approved in early 1986.

The company is asking the PUC to decrease its composite charge for fuel from 2.45 cents per kilowatt-hour to 2.19 cents. Because of the lower fuel charge, the average residential customer will save about $30 per year, a 3.7 percent reduction.

The proposed reduction in the fuel charge will be the second for TUEC customers this year. The charge was reduced in March, lowering residential customers' bills by about 5 percent annually.

TUEC had announced on Oct. 15 that it planned to ask approval of the refund and a lower fuel charge.

The $58.4 million refund represents a continuation of savings to customers brought about by lower costs for fuel used to make electricity.

Under the company's proposal, the refund would be made through a credit to bills in the first billing month after commission approval. Residential customers would receive refunds averaging about $10.

The company also has made two previous refunds this year — a $140 million in May and $64.8 million refund in October.

The year-long savings to customers have been made possible by the declining cost of natural gas, which has allowed TUEC to aggressively pursue lower-priced fuel supplies, the press release said. The company's average cost of gas has declined from $3.74 per million BTU in 1984 to $3.41 in 1985 and $2.88 for the 12 months that ended in September of this year. The company expects its average cost of gas to be $2.54 per million BTU in 1987.

Texas Utilities Electric Company provides electric service to about one-third of the population of Texas through its operating divisions — Dallas Power & Light, Texas Electric Service and Texas Power & Light.

Police still investigating case of missing Midlander

From Staff Reports

Midland police are meeting with a Michigan man who had a probation hearing in Midland the day before a part-time employee of the probation department disappeared.

According to police Lt. Hank Norton, a detective flew to Michigan Tuesday to talk to the 20-year-old man about the disappearance of 24-year-old June Carpenter Gilkerson. Ms. Gilkerson was reported missing by her husband Ronald about 9 p.m. Nov. 8, 12 hours after she told her husband she was going to her job at the Midland Restitution Center.

Her car was later found at the Best Western motel on Interstate 20. Her purse, car keys and a pair of sneakers were found still in the car.

Norton said Ms. Gilkerson handled the man's hearing on Friday, and he said police think she may have talked to him Saturday morning before she disappeared.

"Yesterday was probably the last intensive search of the area (around the motel)," Norton said. "We are now channeling our investigation on different sources of information the department has received."

Tuesday, about 30 officers from the police department and Midland County Sheriff's office, with the police K-9 units, searched "in a spiral shape" around the Best Western, Norton said. He said a search of a nearby auto salvage yard was also fruitless.

"It's still treated as a missing person (case) until we find something that says it isn't," Norton said.

Sanctuary movement will receive award

HOUSTON (AP) — Seven people and two organizations, including the controversial sanctuary movement, will receive the $10,000 Rothko Chapel Awards for promoting human rights.

Other recipients named Tuesday are South African anti-apartheid leaders Helen Joseph and Albertina Sisulu; jailed Soviet psychiatrist Anatoly Koryagin; Roman Catholic Bishop Leonidas Proano of Ecuador; civil rights activist Myles Horton; Jonathan Kuttab and Raja Shehadeh, of the occupied West Bank in Israel and Charter 77, an organization working for human rights in Czechoslovakia.

The awards will be presented Dec. 10 at the Houston chapel where Archbishop Desmond Tutu of South Africa will speak and former President Jimmy Carter will make another awards presentation.

The sanctuary movement is a nationwide network of churches and communities sheltering Central American refugees. The Rev. John Fife, a Tucson, Ariz., pastor convicted of conspiracy to smuggle Salvadoran and Guatemalan aliens into the United States, will receive the award for the movement.

Tutu, Archbishop of Cape Town and 1984 Nobel Peace Prize winner, will present Proano an award named for assassinated Archbishop Oscar Romero of El Salvador, Proano's friend, said chapel founder Dominique de Menil.

Man charged with arson in lumber company fire

From Staff Reports

Police have charged a 17-year-old Midland man with arson in Monday's early morning blaze at the McCarroll Lumber Co.

Daniel Scott Jackson, 2001 Davis Road, County Road 140, was charged Tuesday. Jackson is being held in lieu of $20,000 bond that was set by Judge James Brazell.

According to Assistant Fire Marshal Bobby Williams, the fire caused an estimated $500,000 to $750,000 in damages to the door shop area of the complex. The fire was so extensive 30 firefighters plus some off-duty personnel were called to the scene at 3105 Bankhead Highway.

No one was injured in the fire.

Police said two 15-year-old juveniles suspected of arson were also arrested near the scene. One has been released to the custody of his parents, and the other is still in custody at Culver Youth Home.

Police Roundup

Police are also investigating the burglary of several firearms from a local residence. According to reports, two .22 caliber rifles valued at $400, a .3030 caliber rifle valued at $325, a videocassette recorder valued at $400, a cable box valued at $250, and assorted jewelry valued at $200 were stolen from a residence in the 3200 block of Fannin Ave. The items were taken sometime Tuesday, police said.

In other reports, police have two suspects in the burglary of $120 cash from a local residence. According to reports, the cash was stolen from a home in the 1000 block of S. Midkiff Road, between 2:30 p.m. and 7:15 p.m. Tuesday.

House fire

A pipeline ruptured in a Baytown neighborhood Tuesday, igniting a fire in a vacant house. The house was destroyed in the blaze, but no one was injured. Officials, who have not yet determined what substance the pipeline was carrying, evacuated about 15-20 homes in the area.

Former comptroller of ESM commits suicide

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The former comptroller of the failed ESM Government Securities Inc. has committed suicide, becoming the second figure in the scandal to take his own life, police said Tuesday.

Henry Earl Riddel had pleaded guilty last month to mail fraud and conspiracy and was sentenced to three years in prison for his part in disguising the investment firm's losses.

An exterminator who arrived Tuesday at Riddel's apartment to spray for bugs found a suicide note taped to the front door, police said.

"He apparently died Monday night after he tied a white plastic bag around his neck with some cord and laid down on his bed to await the end," said Ott Cefkin, spokesman for the Fort Lauderdale polite department.

Riddel, 68, who suffered poor health, was to begin serving his federal prison term Dec 4.

He had testified against ESM's former auditor in a federal trial that ended last month with a verdict against Chicago-based Grant Thornton, formerly known as Alexander Grant & Co.

The jury found that Grant had produced audits showing ESM was healthy when in fact it had lost huge sums. Grant was ordered to pay $36 million to ESM's trustee, who represents investors of the failed Fort Lauderdale securities dealer.

An autopsy report on Riddel was expected Wednesday from the Broward County Medical Examiner's Office, Cefkin said.

There was no evidence of foul play in the neatly kept apartment, and detectives found plastic bags and cord similar to those Riddel wrapped around his head, the spokesman said.

Riddel's is the second suicide following ESM's collapse in March 1985, which cost several cities millions of dollars. Beaumont, Texas, lost $20 million.

The Securities and Exchange Commission closed the small securities dealer, which owed about $315 million to dozens of creditors.

Miami lawyer Steve Arky, who represented ESM in some matters, fatally shot himself in the head in July 1985. His suicide note said he was innocent of wrongdoing at ESM.

Suits alleging Arky played a role in the ESM fraud, brought by ESM's trustee and by investors who lost money through their deals with the firm, are pending against Arky's former law firm and his estate.

Future of homeless shelter threatened by deficit

DALLAS (AP) — The homeless were 300-strong, all wrapped in thick clothes and seeking a hot bowl of chili stew at the Stewpot cafeteria.

The scene Tuesday was common this time of year at shelters for the homeless. More and more people want to come in from the bone-chilling cold.

But while temperatures are expected to plunge into the 20s tonight, one of the city's largest shelters for the homeless is threatened by a $42,000 deficit.

The Dallas Life Foundation has had a slight deficit before, said the Rev. James Starkes, who founded the shelter. But he said never has the red ink flowed so deep. The debts were accumulated for food, utilities and supplies, Starkes said.

The shelter was already reeling from increased demand caused by rising unemployment and a drop in contributions.

"One woman who gave us $500 last year is now staying here," Starkes said.

Supervisor Wanda Bailey said all 382 beds were taken Monday night. Others slept on the floor.

Starkes said demand has increased 50 percent and donations have fallen 25 percent in the past three months.

"We think the City of Dallas will rise up to the occasion" and help the shelter retire its debt, Starkes said. "The need has doubled this year and the donations have gone down because more people are out of work."

Howard Matson, a spokesman for Lone Star Gas Co., said the utility has granted the shelter extensions even though the facility is two months behind in its payments.

"We're getting people now who are in this place for the first time," Ms. Bailey said. "A year ago work was not hard to come by, and this year there is not much work."

"I just can't see us closing the place," she said.

Residents upset by proposed Hindu temple

PARKER (AP) — A proposed Hindu temple to be built near Southfork ranch of television's "Dallas" fame has upset residents who claim the 4,000 square-foot temple would be an eyesore, a target for terrorism and decrease property values.

But Dallas area Hindus say they want a place to preserve their ancient culture, and constructing the temple in the rolling hills of this bucolic community north of the city would go a long way toward meeting that goal.

During a hearing Tuesday night, the Parker City Council and Planning and Zoning Board postponed taking action on whether to grant the Hindus a building permit for the site.

"It'll be a blight in the neighborhood, an eyesore," said C.W. Deloney, who lives across the street from the site. "So far, no one wants it out there. It just doesn't fit in."

"If we have to have it, at least make it blend in," said Deloney. "If they built a temple like the (Baptist) church next door, that'll be fine."

However, some Hindus say the design of the temple, decorated with tradional and ornate Hindu sculptures depicting various aspects of the religion, is crucial to practicing their religion.

Architect Rajiv Parikh, who designed the temple, said each part of the building's design has a religious meaning.

"It has to be of certian proportions and of a certain height," he said. "Each stone has some meaning back to the old, ancient times."

About 200 Hindu families will use the temple, said Pradeep Pandya, vice president of the Hindu temple Society. He said the families raised about $500,000 to build the temple.

"Now our population has grown, our children have grown and say, 'Hey dad, what is Hindu culture?'" said Pandya. "So our need for having this place now is more acute."

Pandya said fears of terrorist attacks against the temple are unfounded. He said the disputes in India between Sikh and Hindu factions are political, not religious.

Iran reportedly asks Bell Helicopter for spare parts

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Iranian government asked to buy spare parts for military helicopters but got only a flat refusal from the company that sold the nation equipment when the Shah was in power, a company spokesman said.

Bell Helicopter Textron officials received a cable from the Iranian government in October asking to buy spare parts for Bell 214A helicopters, said Bill Ritz, Bell's manager of media relations.

"We wrote them back and told them we were unable to comply," he said Monday. "We want to follow the policy set out by the (Reagan) administration not to sell spare parts to the Iranians."

Police car runs over baby

HARLINGEN (AP) — An infant died when he apparently crawled in front of a police car and was run over, officials said Tuesday.

The accident occurred Monday night while the officer was investigating a complaint in a housing project, said police Capt. John Doster.

Officer Reynaldo Delua was driving through the housing project when two young women accompanied by the infant waved him over, Doster said.

After talking to the women, they walked toward the rear of the car and the officer believed the infant was with them, Doster said. But the child, Andy Barron, had apparently crawled in front of the police car, Doster said.

War memorial dedicated

PLAINVIEW (AP) — More than 500 people turned out Tuesday in brisk autumn weather for the dedication of the Hale County Veterans Memorial on the courthouse square.

The polished red granite marker, 7½-feet tall, weighing six tons and topped by a 30-inch sculpted steel gold flame, bears three bronze plaques with the names of 151 county men who died in World War I, World War II, Korea and Vietnam. The marker is the focal point of a 38-foot plaza that includes three flag poles and is lighted at night.

"I would think the veterans who we have come to honor would not want us to dwell on their passing, or the personal loss of their famly, or on what might have been," said dedication speaker Chad Colley of Fort Smith, Ark., a triple amputee Vietnam veteran.

Colley, past national president of the Disabled American Veterans and recognized by President Reagan as National Handicapped Person of the Year, said Hale County is one of fewer than 170 counties in the nation to have erected a memorial to its war dead.

Financial official indicted

PAMPA (AP) — Gray County grand jurors have indicted an official of a finance company on charges he swindled a former Pampa woman out of $340,000.

The charge is one of many expected across the country against associates of Comstock Financial Services of Los Angeles and Preferred Financial Consultants in Irving, Texas, said assistant district attorney David Hamilton. The two companies and their associates were named in a Dec. 11 Security Exchange Commission suit claiming that 600 investors in 12 states, most of them fundamentalist Christians, were cheated out of $9 million.

Named Monday in two four-count indictments was Charles W. Huber of Carrollton, Texas, identified as district director of Comstock, Hamilton said.

The grand jury alleged Huber deceived Kerrie A. Rodriguez, now living in Borger, into signing over a $340,000 life insurance benefit after her husband was killed in a traffic accident.

The indictments claim Huber lied when he told the woman the money would be used to buy treasury bills and other federal securities free from risk and fully insured. Huber promised an 18 percent return on the woman's money as advertised in the Christian Journal, a monthly magazine for members of Texas churches of Christ, the indictment said.

Police say Army didn't help to trace hardware

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The U.S. Army failed to cooperate with local police in an attempt to trace 9½ tons of military hardware seized in Dallas just before the 1984 Republican convention, a Dallas police officer says.

Problems with the 5th Army and its subordinate unit, the 90th Army Reserve Command, were part of a larger lack of cooperation encountered when police tried to trace the origin of the cache, Deputy Chief G.F. Holliday said.

The materiel included submachine guns, thousands of artillery shells, protective clothing for nuclear, biological and chemical warfare, grenades, rockets and bulk explosives, he said.

Holliday said he would outline the problems in testimony today before a Senate Armed Services subcommittee, which is looking into the problem of military hardware being sold on the black market.

"The military refused to acknowledge it was theirs. Everyone kept saying, 'Unless it was stolen from us or the person who stole it was on active duty, we can't get involved,' which is completely absurd," Holliday said.

A 5th Army spokesman, Lt. Col. Scott Ericksen, said he could not comment on Holliday's statements until he researched the allegations.

Holliday and Richard Kirks, an undercover detective who helped make the the seizure, were scheduled to testify this morning in Washington.

"If there was this much found in Dallas, how much is out there?" Holliday asked.

Because the Army could not trace the weapons, the prosecution's case fell apart as they could not prove it was stolen government property, police officials said.

The man whom police said was behind the cache, Richard C. Lopez, received seven years probation and now is suing the city of Dallas to compensate him for the loss of $1 million worth of "personal property."

One of the first places Dallas police turned in the case was the 5th Army, which is headquarters over most of the Army reserve units in the Southwest. Lopez was an Army reservist in Dallas.

Headquarters for the 5th Army and 90th ARCOM are at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio.

"We felt the first place to turn was the reserves and they said they could not get involved," Holliday said.

Holliday said they asked the 5th Army to appoint officers to help Dallas police trace the weaponry and ammunition, but he said the Army never responded.

Station manager pulls anti-pornography crusader's show

AUSTIN (AP) — Anti-pornography crusader Mark Weaver felt he served the audience of a Christian radio station with his explicit account of what goes on at adult book stores in Austin.

But KIXL General Manager Gene Bender pulled the plug on Weaver, saying he went too far on the daily production by Citizens Against Pornography.

"I would like for the program to continue, but Mark and I need to come into agreement on some tasteful limits for this," Bender said.

"We felt that Mark's description of sexual practices was much too graphic for the radio station. I made a judgment call to pull the program," he said after Tuesday's CAP Report was cut off.

A station announcer said on the air, "Due to technical difficulties, we will not be able to continue with the CAP Report today."

Weaver acknowledged that the discussion was explicit, but he said it was necessary.

"Our program is designed to report the facts as they are, as tastefully as possible. It's a horrible subject. It's really hard to communicate these things," Weaver said, adding that he opened Tuesday's show by telling listeners, "We're sorry we are bringing this type of information to you today. But if you don't know, how will you respond?"

The CAP Report, a 15-minute show, has been carried by KIXL for two years. Weaver and Bender plan to meet to discuss the show's future.

"We feel like that's a violation of our rights," Weaver said of Bender's decision to cut off the Tuesday show. "We were putting out educational materials. We acknowledged before the program that this would be shocking material and we took it very, very slowly.

"We need to clarify the boundaries of where to operate. It's not our goal to offend and be graphic," Weaver said.

The show was taped Tuesday morning for 10 a.m. broadcast, but Bender said there was not sufficient time to review it before airing.

"We had a lot of phone calls," Bender said. "The vast majority agreed with our actions. A couple of them didn't.

"We agree in principle with what Mark is doing," he said. "But as for the specific descriptions of homosexual practices, the radio station is not the appropriate place to go into that kind of detail."

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARY

The following new books are now available at Midland County Library:

"The Male Stress Syndrome," by Georgia Witkin-Lanoil. The author, a psychiatrist, focuses on stresses unique to men, especially as they concern their bodies, careers, families and personal goals. The lives of men are traced and stress factors peculiar to each age group are explored. A chapter on early warning symptoms of stress is especially helpful, with practical advice on relaxation exercises and stress management.

"Bus Nine to Paradise," by Leo Buscaglia. The popular lecturer and author of many best-selling books has recently penned an inspiring and upbeat work on the idea that "life is paradise for those who love many things with a passion: people, food, flowers, music, dance, books, art, memories, family, learning — an endless list."

"The Children's God," by David Heller. A psychologist examines complex issues, such as the psychology of religion and religious education, through letters to God, drawings and interviews with children of all faiths. Despite the differences of religious affiliation, age, gender, personality type and family relationships, the children exhibit many common themes in their perception of the divine.

"Super Marriage: Overcoming the Predictable Crises of Married Life," by Harvey L. Ruben, M.D. According to Ruben, close to 50 percent of couples now marrying will later become divorced, which is a disturbing statistic. Furthermore, only 10 percent of the remaining couples can be characterized as "super marriages," based on equality, intimacy, trust, communication and romance, according to Ruben. "Super Marriage" examines the predictable crises within early, middle and late years of married life. The author illustrates the recurring challenges to good marriages in the areas of family and friends, career and finances, sexual fulfillment, parenting and illness.

"Money Dynamics for the New Economy," by Venita Van Caspel. A certified financial planner, Ms. Van Caspel is one of the most widely read financial experts. She gives concrete advice in all major areas of planning, such as stocks, real estate, homes, tax savings, life insurance, educational expenses and retirement. She looks at investment opportunities in light of past and present trends in inflation, technological change and global economics. One of Ms. Van Caspel's projections is that the Dow Jones Industrial Avergae may reach 3000 by the late 1980's.

"Super Carrier," by George C. Wilson. Defense correspondent for the Washington Post, Wilson began a seven-month adventure aboard the U.S.S. John F. Kennedy, the world's most powerful ship. He recounts the unique opportunity to see how sailors live, the hardship of their being on sea duty for months at a time and the aviators in their multi-million dollar machines in the age of of electronic warfare. Wilson's lengthy tour included the surprise mission to the waters off Lebanon and his descriptions of the Kennedy's planes' attack on Lebanese missile sites are riveting.

Compiled by John Deats, head librarian at Midland County Library.

Newphew writes 'truth' about Faulkner

Jimmy Faulkner

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Myth and fact merge in this county. A subdivision called Tara Estates sprouts aside Jimmy Faulkner's antebellum home. Academics dig here for the roots of author William Faulkner's life and work.

Hundreds of book-length studies have been written about the Nobel Prize-winner, but many overlook William Faulkner's dry wit, his love of children, his pleasure in hunting quail and dove in the red clay hills of north Mississippi, according to family members.

That's one reason his nephew, Jimmy Faulkner says he decided to write "Across The Creek: Faulkner Family Stories" ($12.95, University Press of Mississippi), a thin volume of reminiscences about the complex man he knew as Brother Will.

"I wouldn't talk about him too much before he died, or for a while afterward," said the 63-year-old Faulkner, whose full head of gray hair, baggy deep-set eyes and mustache resembles his uncle.

"Then I realized that if anybody was going to tell the truth about him, I'd have to do it, because I probably knew him better than any man still living," he said.

Joseph Blotner, a University of Michigan professor and author of two Faulkner biographies, says Jimmy Faulkner is probably right.

"He's a wonderful storyteller, and has inherited much of the Faulkner tradition," Blotner said. "Only Jill (William Faulkner's only daughter) might have known him better."

Jill Faulkner Summers was Faulkner's only child. She has rights to Faulkner's works and lives in Charlottesville, Va.

Jimmy Faulkner's route to writing was as twisted as the kudzu rising outside his home. He was born in the Faulkner family home but moved throughout the Mississippi Delta as his father John, a civil engineer, built roads and bridges during the Depression.

After graduation from Oxford High School, he enlisted in the Marines, flying prop planes in World War II and jets on combat missions in Korea.

Coming back home in 1954, he settled down with wife Nan and began 25 years of construction work.

Meanwhile, his uncle's legend was growing, with novels such as "As I Lay Dying," "Absalom, Absalom!," "Sanctuary" and "Requiem for a Nun."

Readers spotted Lafayette County in Faulkner's fictional Yoknapatawpha County, and the author came across to visitors as rude or enigmatic as he tried to preserve his privacy, his nephew said.

"He was a real quiet, private person, but he'd open up among his family and his friends. He was the funniest person I ever met. He was witty, and compassionate. Too compassionate. That's why he built that wall around himself."

In 1960, Jimmy Faulkner started writing stories of his boyhood and of Brother Will. Years later, several were published in the Southern Review, Delta Review, Mississippi Review and Delta Heritage.

"I will sit over at that dining room table and I will write and I write, and I will finally get something that's passable," he said.

"Roasting Black Buster" tells how a prized bull was mistakenly killed and cooked for a family picnic. "The Battle of Bailey's Woods" recounts a 1930s battle between Oxford kids that ends with a makeshift cannon's explosion and the destruction of a treehouse near the Faulkner home.

In the stories, William Faulkner appears as the wise — and wisecracking — man with the droll line that puts the proper twist on any adventure.

He shares time with characters named Hoot, Little Bango, Ammonia and Double Dip. Briar patches, juniper bushes, Tarzan movies and dirt-court tennis figure in Jimmy Faulkner's memories.

Now that his book is out, he is planning several promotional trips, but the hard-sell doesn't seem natural to him.

"Mostly, I try to stay out of other people's way," he said. "I make a few lectures around the country each year (on his uncle), but to tell you the truth, I can't wait to get back here."

Dollar dips

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar gained against the British pound but slipped against most other major currencies in busy trading today. Gold gained in Europe.

Dealers said the dollar was displaying a technical reaction to the gains it made last week. They said trading was thin but hectic in the aftermath of U.S. Veterans Day observances Tuesday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell 0.85 yen to a closing 161.80 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at 161.30 yen.

Dealers in Tokyo said market participants were reducing their dollar holdings in anticipation of Friday's report on U.S. retail sales for October, which are expected to show sales weakening.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

—2.0275 West German marks, down from 2.0365

—1.6810 Swiss francs, down from 1.6880

—6.6315 French francs, down from 6.6525

—2.3032 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3000

—1,404.00 Italian lire, down from 1,408.50

—1.3853 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3871

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4265, compared with $1.4385 Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $406.90 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $405.00. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $407.45.

In Zurich, the bid price was $406.50, up from $405.00 late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 14 cents to close at a bid $406.25.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.72 a troy ounce, up from Tuesday's $5.70.

Stocks mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market finished narrowly mixed Tuesday as retail stocks and some takeover candidates posted gains while airline issues led the losers in quiet Veterans Day trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which rose 5.76 points on Monday, gained another 3.66 to close at 1,895.95.

But declining issues slightly outnumbered gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues with 771 down, 762 up and 445 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came slowed to 118.52 million shares from 120.22 million in the previous session.

Many banks, the Federal Reserve and the government securities market were closed in observance of Veterans Day.

Speculation grows on Standard bid for Unocal

Los Angeles Times,
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Eighteen months after Unocal spurned Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens in a protracted takeover battle, the parent company of Union Oil of California was again the subject of merger speculation Tuesday. This time, the rumored suitor is Standard Oil.

Unocal's stock soared $1.75 a share to $26.875 Tuesday in unusually heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange amid rumors that Cleveland-based Standard Oil is preparing to make a friendly takeover offer. More than 1.47 million shares were traded, making Unocal the Big Board's seventh most active issue.

Citing company policy against commenting on rumors, neither oil company would comment directly on the speculation. Standard Oil spokesman John Andes did acknowledge, however, that "we're looking for acquisitions and a West Coast acquisition would be helpful."

Several oil industry executives and securities analysts contacted Tuesday characterized Los Angeles-based Unocal as a "good fit" for Standard Oil — a description that some former and current Standard Oil executives have themselves used in discussions with other industry officials in recent years. The company, formerly known as Sohio and 55 percent-owned by British Petroleum, has most of its oil and gas reserves in Alaska's Prudhoe Bay and has stated publicly that it wants reserves in the lower 48 states, which is where the bulk of Unocal's are located.

Unocal also has substantial natural gas reserves and some foreign-exploration operations, both of which Standard Oil lacks and is actively seeking, the company has told analysts recently.

Nonetheless, these analysts and industry executives consider a Unocal-Standard Oil merger a long shot.

"The bottom line is I don't believe that (Unocal Chief Executive) Fred Hartley is ready to sell his company despite the fact that he turns 70 in January," said Thomas C. Lewis, a long-time Standard Oil watcher and an analyst with Duff & Phelps in Chicago. "And I don't think Standard Oil wants to get involved in a hostile takeover."

Elaborating, Lewis said that for Hartley to sell the company now would "go against everything Fred did to save it from Pickens. He loaded it up with debt and said he wouldn't carve it up, and a sale or merger now would be saying 'Hey, maybe we screwed up.' "

To fight off Pickens, Unocal increased its debt load to more than $5 billion, a whopping 70 percent of its net worth.

Tuesday's rumors were fueled largely by a Standard Oil announcement that it had obtained $5.5 billion in new financing and that for the first time in its history it had agreed to uncommitted lines of credit in order to enjoy "greater financial flexibility and greater financial security."

Many analysts noted that companies do not often differentiate between committed and uncommitted financing. And they suggested that Standard Oil's disclosure that only $2 billion of the credit has been firmly committed is a tipoff that the company does not intend to take on either Unocal or USX, also mentioned Tuesday as a possible target of Standard Oil. ("Committed" funds are those for which a fee has been paid to the bank and an interest rate has been set.)

USX, formerly U.S. Steel, is trying to fend off yet another suitor: takeover artist Carl Icahn. Besides its steel operations, USX owns Marathon Oil and Texas Oil & Gas, both of which have good industry track records.

Standard Oil, which currently has a debt-to-equity ratio of about 32 percent, has told analysts that it could live with a 45 percent debt ratio. And analysts say an acquisition of either Unocal or USX would cost Standard Oil about $3 billion and raise its debt ratio roughly to 45 percent.

AFG partners out in hostile bid takeover

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Consumer products conglomerate Wickes Cos. Inc. reached agreement Tuesday with Lear Siegler Inc. to acquire the aviation manufacturer for $1.7 billion, the companies said in a joint announcement.

The deal, along with Wickes' announcement over the weekend that it will buy New York textile concern Collins & Aikman Corp., will create a combined company with more than $8 billion in annual sales and $6.5 billion in assets.

"We think the marriage is an excellent one," Wickes' chairman and chief executive, Sanford Sigoloff, said of the Lear Siegler deal. "We understand their core businesses and are anxious to do all we can to make them grow."

Sigoloff made a similar comment regarding Collins & Aikman, indicating that Wickes intends to use its extensive resources to help both companies expand.

After two days of intense meetings, Lear Siegler's directors accepted the Wickes offer of $93 per share for the 17.9 million common shares and $232.50 each for the 177,000 preferred shares.

Wickes said it will commence a tender offer Thursday for all of Lear Siegler's stock. That offer will expire Dec. 11 unless extended.

The company said it is making the tender offer, instead of waiting for a more time-consuming vote by Lear Siegler shareholders, so that investors will be able to sell their shares and benefit from existing capital gains tax law.

Under existing law, capital gains on assets held for a period of time are taxed at 20 percent. Under the tax reform, capital gains are taxed at an individual's regular tax rate, which will reach a maximum of 33 percent in 1987.

Wickes set the stage for its takeover of Lear Siegler on Monday when it said it had agreed to buy out the 9.8 percent stake of an unwanted suitor, AFG Partners, for $91 per share but only if Lear Siegler agreed to be acquired by Wickes.

Under terms of Tuesday's agreement, AFG Partners, also will receive the $93-per-share price agreed to by Wickes.

The partnership, a combination of Irvine, Calif.-based glassmaker AFG Industries Inc. and Midland, Texas, oil concern Wagner & Brown, began their hostile, $85-per-share takeover bid two weeks ago.

Because of the partnership's action and speculation that preceded it, the price of Lear Siegler's stock jumped from the mid-50s in early October to a high of $92 Monday. It dropped back to $91 by the close of trading Tuesday as more than 2.8 million shares traded hands.

Wickes officials declined to comment on speculation that Wickes would sell off some of Lear Siegler's assets, specifically its troubled Piper Aircraft unit.

AFG Partners had said in documents filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission that if it had been successful, it would have sold or closed Piper, Game inventor Le Earl Bryant displays new game based on ancestral searches.

Game capitalizes on geneology

Moving from the board room to the game board, Texan Le Earl Bryant is capitalizing on America's hunger to know its roots.

Bryant was in Midland Monday to debut her game "Generations," which lets players search for fictitious ancestral identities using lifestyles, careers and birthplaces. It's patterned after the popular detective game Clue™.

She was one of the first women engineer graduates from Texas Tech. "It was an exciting time to be in for a woman," she recalled. "As a matter of fact, I got in on the ground floor at Rockwell International doing circuit design on multi-million dollar product development projects. I designed software and hardware for the switching product line for the specialized common carrier telecommunications market, which grew from a $7.5 million market when I began to a market of over $61 million. We did a lot of government contracting related to defense electronics, space communications and much more. At that time, women in engineering was a new concept and I learned to prove myself in an assertive way."

Finding a challenge in the telecommunications field, Bryant moved from Rockwell to become a vendor contact for US Telecom's fiber optic-based long distance telephone network.

She got "permanently hooked on geneology" while researching an ancestor who had been murdered on his way home from a construction job on the C&O Canal, she recounts. Spending last Christmas with her family in Midland, she came up with the basic idea for a game based on genealogy. "We were playing the game Clue and talking about how people often are fanatics about it, and it hit me that that would be the medium for my own game," she said. She completed the finer details with her mother's help.

The idea for the game came at a time when the Lubbock native felt ready to strike out on her own. "The security of top management positions can leave you empty inside when you really want that control of your own destiny," she said. "Women have made much progress in this enormous field, but I grew tired of having to fight for and receive the recognition and the pay I should be getting. I was ready for risk taking."

Many natural gas issues unresolved

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Many of the natural gas issues meant to be resolved by edicts of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) in the past 18 months are still up in the air, according to a top Washington, D.C.-based energy lawyer.

Douglas John, a founding partner of the John, Hengerer, Esposito law firm and a former counsel to the Federal Power Commission (the predecessor of the FERC), says that pending commission application hearings and rehearings of currently inactive rules will clarify the direction in which FERC will take the industry.

Speaking to a luncheon meeting of the Natural Gas Society of the Permian Basin Tuesday, John said that the FERC agenda for a meeting today includes action on the transportation authorization application made under Order 436 by Northern Natural Gas Co.

"The action the commission takes on the Northern application will give an indication of the flexibility in compliance to the carriage program they will allow," said John, whose firm is counsel of record on 75 pending docket items at FERC.

Also on today's agenda are Notices of Inquiry into possibly unscrupulous activities by affiliated and independent gas marketing groups. One issue under investigation is brokerage of unused pipeline capacity allegedly being used to circumvent rules to allow "first come, first served" access to open carriage systems.

One of FERC's concerns is that marketing affiliates of pipeline companies may enjoy an unfair competitive advantage in accessing unused capacity, John said.

Still pending in front of the commission is the rehearing of its Order 451 which was to have gone into effect Nov. 1 and has been postponed until Dec. 18. John posed several significant questions left unresolved by FERC inaction in rehearing 451:

■ What guidelines will be established for "forced renegotiation" of vintage gas contracts nominated by producers under the rules?

■ What deadline, if any, will be set for producers to exercise their right of "good faith renegotiation" under the order?

■ What provisions will be made for downstream mandatory transportation of gas released under the expedited abandonment authority provided for under 451?

However, "It's a well-kept secret what FERC is planning on the 451 rehearing," John said.

In addition to the uncertainty surrounding the final form of the order producers need to be careful in making contract strategy decisions because of the potential legal vulnerability of Order 451, he added.

Gas society elects officers

From Staff Reports

The Natural Gas Society of the Permian Basin has elected its officers for 1987.

They are: Steve Dickerson, Enron Corp., president; Doris Colley, Northern Natural Gas, vice president; Terry Claiborne, Union Texas Petroleum, secretary-treasurer; and, Susan Scott, Lone Star Gas, assistant secretary.

Directors elected to two-year terms on the groups board are Irvin Kleespies of Valero Energy, Don Luttrell of John Wollaston Inc., and Vernon Williams of Colony Energy.

Dickerson succeeds Dave Pressley of Colony Energy as president of the group which represents gas producers, transporters, marketers and those in other aspects of the natural gas industry.

People Express announces Honolulu-Newark service

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — People Express Airlines announced Tuesday that it will begin once-daily service next month between Honolulu and Newark, with a stopover in Los Angeles.

The financially ailing carrier also said it was immediately offering a $99 one-way price between Newark and Brussels, Belgium, that will be available for a limited number of seats through Jan. 11.

The Honolulu service from the airline's Newark base, to begin Dec. 19, will cost $595 one-way unrestricted coach and, for a limited number of seats, $279 Tuesday and Wednesday and $329 Friday, Saturday and Sunday. First-class tickets will be $695 one-way.

One-way flights between Los Angeles and Honolulu, to begin Dec. 18, will cost $373 unrestricted coach and, for a limited number of seats, $169 Tuesday and Wednesday, $189 Monday and Thursday and $209 Friday through Sunday. First Class will be $400.

Other one-way People Express prices to Brussels are: $149 coach with a 14-day advance purchase, $229 unrestricted coach and $497 First Class.

Beginning Nov. 17, People Express customers will no longer have to pay for in-flight alcoholic beverages.

Savings takes upturn in downturn

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Now for a bit of good news. In the midst of downturn comes this positive report from Home Savings. Larry Hellums, marketing director of the Midland-based firm, says its Andrews Highway branch has reached deposits of $100 million, an exceptional milestone for S&L branches, which normally list deposits of $20 to $30 million.

"Certainly the location has something to do with it," says Hellums, "but I think it also says something for the way we do business. In a very difficult situation, we are determined to remain aggressive in our advertising and our products and it's paid off. We're not pulling in our horns and dying; we're growing." He also attributes part of the growth to deregulation in the lending industry and the movement of accounts within the industry.

He said the Andrews Highway branch has grown approximately $5 million in deposits since last year.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? El Paso Products, the Permian Basin's employee-owned petrochemical plan, recently had a company-wide contest in which employees were asked to submit names for the firm's new amorphous polyalphaolefin product. The name selected from over 400 entries was REXTAC, and the winners were Akshat Chinai and Jim Corley.

According to El Paso Products, the new product will be used in the roofing, laminant and adhesive industries. Other applications being explored for REXTAC are in the manufacture of telecommunications cable and as an adhesive backing for carpet and tile.

THE PERMIAN BASIN OIL INDUSTRY will get a big push in March when the Permian Basin Petroleum Association launches "Oil Appreciation Day." The event will include a concert by a major country and western star, vendor booths, oil industry exhibitions, a battle of the bands and a brisket cookoff. The fair-like event will allow the citizens and merchants of the Permian Basin to show their appreciation for the area's primary industry. Proceeds will go to help PBPA extend its oil lobbying efforts in Washington D.C. and Austin.

HAROLD'S ELECTRONICS, with its original location in Odessa, will open its third store, in Midland. The firm which sells televisions, home and car stereos, and VCRs and other video products, will open Friday in the store adjacent to Service Merchandise in Midland Plaza. The store will have six employees and Jerry Putnam will be store manager.

"We have always had a good share of business from Midland and saw this as an opportune time to expand, to accommodate our customers," said Rick Brooks, Odessa store manager.

LAWN SIGNS are becoming big business and Charlette Foster is cashing in on the trend. There have been rentable lawn signs for birthdays, births and anniversaries, but now Foster, who with her husband owns and operates Midland Cycle, at 3209 N. Big Spring, has gone into the lawn Christmas card sales business. Foster cuts, fabricates, paints and sells plywood cards in a variety of seasonal motifs. Scenes vary from two to five feet tall and cost from $25 to $189.

Included in the design inventory: NOEL, reindeer, angels, a sleigh, Santa Claus and snowmen. In addition, Foster will custom-build customers' card ideas

Study: Midland homes most affordable in seven years

From Staff Reports

COLLEGE STATION — Homes in Midland are more affordable now than at any time since 1979 according to the Texas A&M Real Estate Center's Texas Housing Affordability Index (THAI).

The THAI uses area data on home prices, financing terms and income levels. Area housing is considered affordable when 50 percent of the local households theoretically can afford the typical mortgage payments on the average-priced home sold with local financing. At that point, the THAI is equal to one, and the greater the number is above 1.0, the more affordable the housing.

"Midland's 1.29 in the second quarter of 1986 is well above the first quarter figure of 1.17 and the year-end 1985 figure of 0.99. The 1979 index was 1.45," says Dr. Arthur Wright, a researcher with the Center, and developer of the index.

Texas City led the state with 2.35 for second quarter 1986, down from 2.55 the first quarter but higher than the year-end 1985 figure of 1.77. A drop in the local interest rates was responsible for the change in affordability according to Wright.

The state-wide affordability figure for the second quarter 1986 was 1.04, essentially unchanged from 1.02 for first quarter 1986 and a slight improvement over 0.95 for year-end 1985. Nationwide, affordability was 0.99 in first quarter 1986, 1.03 in the second quarter and 1.03 for year-end 1985.

"The second quarter of this year is the first time since 1981 that housing in Texas has been more affordable than nationally," said the Center researcher.

"Moderating home prices and lower interest rates are making Texas homes more affordable."

Home ownership rates in Texas are also showing an increase. The percentage of Texans who own their own dwelling has risen to 61.4 percent in the second quarter of 1986. This figure compares with 59.5 percent for first quarter 1986 and 60.5 for year-end 1985.

U.S. home ownership rates were 63.8 for the second quarter, 63.6 for the first quarter and 63.9 for year-end 1985.

Rural land values expected to deflate

From Staff Reports

COLLEGE STATION — Irrigated and dry cropland, improved pasture, native rangeland, orchard and vineyard land and timberland in Texas are projected to decrease in price between June 1986 and June 1987 according to experts in the state.

"The price of cropland has fallen about 40 percent in the last 18 months," one Texas appraiser says. The panelists' estimated average value for irrigated cropland is $1,086 per acre with a projected 8.3 percent decrease by June 1987.

Dry cropland averages an estimated $1,365 according to the panelists and is expected to fall 7.1 percent. "In some areas where water is limited or pumping levels are deep and costly, dryland is selling better than irrigated," says a second Texas appraiser explaining the higher cost for dry cropland.

According to Dr. Charles Gilliland, a researcher with the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M University who conducted the study, "One-hundred-eighty-eight Texas rural land market participants were surveyed to find out current land prices and the trends for the next 12 months."

According to the panelists, the improved pasture market averages an estimated $1,056 per acre with the prospect of a 4.7 percent decline. At an estimated $1,145 per acre, native rangeland is predicted to drop 4.5 percent, the analysts say.

"Size has a big influence on native rangeland values," one appraiser says. A second explains, "For native rangeland there has been less decline because it is more versatile as its uses include hunting, livestock production and investment."

Orchard and vineyard land is expected to decrease 1.7 percent in the next year from an average price of $2,912 per acre. Texas' timberland value is $750 per acre on the average with a decline of 5.6 percent expected.

Except for timberland, the panelists estimate that the supply of land offered for sale in Texas is up, but the number of sales are down. Investment, reduced land prices and recreation are drawing purchasers into the land market the panelists say.

"The nearly 20 percent of the buyers listing recreation as the primary motive for land purchases points to a strong non-business demand for land. The three top reasons for buying land also show the diversity of use for Texas rural land," Gilliland says.

Other motives for buying land include agricultural production, expansion, speculation and tax advantages.

Poor economic conditions and financial stress are the primary motives for selling rural land.

"Many farms and ranches are in trouble. Most of the properties in trouble have loans in excess of their value and for this reason they are not selling," says a Texas appraiser.

GM firm on plant closings despite pleas

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp.'s plans to close 11 plants in four states, cutting more than 29,000 jobs, are unchanged despite efforts by Michigan officials to keep some of their state's plants open, according to a GM official.

"We appreciate the state's concern, but as far as we're concerned, that's a closed issue," GM spokesman Stanley D. Hall said.

State officials have been talking to GM executives for months trying to hit on a state assistance plan that would convince them not to close.

Audit bureau to hear Hearst chief executive

Frank A. Bennack, Jr., president and chief executive officer of The Hearst Corp., is scheduled to speak at the Audit Bureau of Circulations' 72nd Annual Conference to be held Nov. 12 to 14 in New York City.

Bennack will be introducing New York Governor, the Honorable Mario M. Cuomo at the annual luncheon of the conference which brings together leading publishers, advertisers and advertising agencies.

"It seems fitting," says Annual Conference Chairman William S. Campbell of Hearst Magazines, "That Bennack is participating in our conference this year, since he embodies our convention's theme of The Dynamics of Communications."

Bennack's career in communications includes more than 25 years with Hearst. Prior to becoming the corporation's chief executive in January 1979, Bennack served as executive vice president, chief operating officer and general manager of the Hearst Newspapers. He also served in a variety of other management posts, including a seven-year tenure as publisher and editor of The San Antonio Light.

Bennack is a director of the American Newspaper Publishers Assoc., a former director of the Advertising Council and a former treasurer of the Newspaper Advertising Bureau.

GAME

Within a week of leaving US Telecom, she had hired an artist and writer to polish the game, made a prototype and hired a lawyer to legally form Genealogy for Fun, Inc., showing the game at a trade show in early June. Production models of the game were made the first week of October, and she had sold 500 games within a week. This month she began mail order advertising in a national genealogy magazine, and she hopes orders for the $19.95 game will soon come flooding in.

Characters from Texas' past are the foundation of the game. The fourth generation Texan can boast pioneer sheep and cattle ranching families who settled near Uvalde over 100 years ago in her past. Her great-great grandfather Matthews was with Brigham Young on the founding of Salt Lake City and later helped settle San Bernardino, Calif., Bryant says. "You can see there's a lot of family pride at stake here," she says.

Currently, Bryant is making the rounds of gift and toy shows from New York to Dallas to sell her game. "I'm counting most heavily on mail order and direct marketing to dispose of the first 15,000 units, because my profit margin is so much better," she points out. Personally assembling 50,000 games with miniature career and lifestyle tokens and cards is a far cry from the corporate design and sales life, but she says "being the sole employee of my own company is just the way I want it."

Virtually depleting her retirment fund to manufacture the first copies of the game, she finds the good initial sales encouraging. "If it doesn't work, I will have to work hard from now on. This is about the biggest gamble a person can take."

Herald sues Morning News over audit in circulation war

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Times Herald has filed suit against the rival Dallas Morning News and the Audit Bureau of Circulations, challenging the accuracy of Morning News circulation figures.

The suit, filed in Chicago federal court, accuses the Morning News of fraudulently inflating circulation figures, antitrust and other violations.

The Times Herald accused the Illinois-based ABC, which audits the paid circulation of most major daily newspapers, of negligence in releasing the Morning News' circulation figures.

Burl Osborne, president and editor of the Morning News, called the allegations "without foundation."

"... We would welcome an ABC audit and we are confident it would validate the Morning News' paid circulation as previously stated, confirming our leadership in the Dallas-Fort Worth market," Osborne said.

Jumbo auction begins today

SAN ANTONIO — One of the nation's largest 1986 energy related equipment, construction machinery and trucking auctions will take place the next three days in Oklahoma City. Superior Auctioneers and Marketing, Inc., will conduct the three-day auction with no minimums and no reserves.

Color slide auctions will be conducted on today and Thursday at the Holiday Inn-West, I-40 at Meridan just north of the airport in Oklahoma City. Friday, the auction will begin with machine tools sold by color slides at the McVay Rig Service Building adjacent to Yard No. 1 at 15,400 South Meridian in Oklahoma City.

Day one will include well service rigs and equipment, drilling rigs, production equipment, trucks, trailers and miscellaneous equipment. In addition to the energy equipment, Superior will also take bids on commercial real estate subject to owner confirmation with a $250,000 minimum.

Day two will include oilfield drilling rigs, drill pipe and collars, related equipment and a small group of firearms.

The third and final day will feature machine shop equipment and construction equipment.

Mrs. J.W. Starr

Texas Commerce Bank adds Starr as director

Mrs. J.W. Starr, a life-long resident of Midland, has been elected director of Texas Commerce Bank-Midland, according to the bank's president Ed Jones.

Active in civic affairs for many years, Starr has been president of the Junior League of Midland and on the board of Trinity Towers and Salvation Army. She currently serves on the board at the Museum of the Southwest, the board of governors of Midland Memorial Hospital and the board of regents for Kenmore in Fredericksburg, Virginia.

TI expands choices of portable data terminals

From Staff Reports

TEMPLE — Texas Instruments is extending its family of Silent 700 portable data terminals by adding the Model 707/1200 — a new terminal featuring a built-in, high-speed thermal printer that is more than three times faster than previously available models, as well as an internal 300/1200 baud modem. The new features significantly improve data throughput and reduce users' communications costs, according to TI officials.

"The model 707/1200 is designed for people who want faster communication speed and improved productivity while cutting communication costs, says Jerry Rycaj, terminal products marketing manager for TI's Data Systems Group.

"The faster throughput, portability and all-in-one packaging in a small footprint enable users to address a wide range of applications. For example, traveling businessmen can receive messages from the home office or enter sales orders, and service personnel can perform remote diagnostics tests and receive repair information from a host computer."

Rycaj explains that a high-speed, 150 characters-per-second (cps) thermal printer on the new model enhances throughput capabilities of TI's earlier Model 707 portable data terminals which print 45 cps. To further expand communications, the model comes standard with the internal modem and features an EIA RS-232-C interface, adds Rycaj.

"In many applications, the primary cost in data communication is access time to the phone line. The 1200 baud modem will significantly reduce telephone time for people who are accessing a remote data base. And the high-speed printer is ideally suited for those applications requiring transmission of large volumes of printed information," Rycaj explains.

The model also features the User Interface Module (UIM), a programmable application cartridge that plugs into the unit. "The optional auto-access cartridge, for example, can store phone numbers, log-on sequences and passwords, thus simplifying access to various host computers via phone lines," notes Rycaj.

"With the auto access cartridge's menu-driven instructions, users gain access to the computer through a few simple keystrokes. The UIM can be programmed to provide customized data communications solutions.

The Silent 700 Model 707/1200 is a highly versatile portable data terminal that features a high-speed thermal printer. Typical applications for include accessing remote data bases, verifying credit, sales automation, electronic mail, and telecommunications.

UTEP professor to address SEPM

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists (SEPM) will host a luncheon meeting on Nov. 18 at Midland Center.

Dr. Dennis W. Powers, University of Texas at El Paso will present "Depositional Environments of the Permian Rustler Formation, Southeastern New Mexico," beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Powers received his doctorate in geology from Princeton University. He joined Sandia National Laboratories in 1975, becoming supervisor of the Earth Sciences division. Most of his work involved site characterization and study of long term geological processes for the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant site east of Carlsbad, N.M.

He joined the faculty of the Department of Geological Sciences at UTEP in 1983. He continues work on Ochoan age rocks of the Delaware Basin as well as work on primate-bearing Cenozoic sediments in Argentina.

Those wishing to attend should contact the SEPM office by Nov. 14 for reservations.

Unisys Chairman W. Michael Blumenthal, right, introduces the new company's name at their headquarters in Detroit. The name change occured following the merger of Burroughs and Sperry earlier this year. Left is is Christian Machen from the firm's Atlanta office who came up with the name in a company-wide contest.

Burroughs, Sperry now Unisys

Merger nets new corporate name

By CALVIN SIMS
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Burroughs Corp. and the Sperry Corp., which agreed to merge five months ago, Monday announced the name for their new company. The computer maker will now be known as the Unisys Corp., its chairman, W. Michael Blumenthal, said Monday.

The name (pronounced U-ni-sis) was selected over 31,000 names submitted by employees of both companies. Derived from the words united, information and systems, Unisys was submitted by Christian Lee Machen, a software systems manager in Atlanta who received $5,000 for the entry. The entries were evaluated by Anspach, Grossman, Portugal Inc., an identity consultant company.

In an announcement at the company's headquarters in Detroit, Blumenthal said the name signifies that the companies are solidly one. Blumenthal has argued that the $4.8 billion merger of the two companies would provide the economies necessary to compete with the International Business Machines Corp. in the mainframe market.

Many computer analysts have doubts that two companies like Sperry and Burroughs with decidedly incompatible computer lines can make a merger work, but most agree that to date the merger has proceeded at or ahead of schedule, especially in its cost-cutting efforts.

"Their first steps in this merger have been more aggressive than was generally perceived," said Stephen P. Cohen, a computer analyst at the Gartner Securities Corp., an investment research firm in Stamford, Conn. "So far, they have taken all the right steps and then some."

Cohen cited the company's plans to reduce its work force by about 10,000 employees, which he said was a much larger reduction than expected. As a result, the company expects a much higher savings than the $150 million originally projected.

The company also plans to complete the proposed sale of $1.5 billion in assets that are not essential to the core information processing and defense businesses before its target date of December 1987.

Last week, Burroughs agreed to sell part of its Memorex disk-drive divison for $550 million to company executives. In addition, Sperry has received several bids for its aerospace and marine group.

Safeway announces closing of four unprofitable stores

HOUSTON (AP) — Safeway Stores will close four unprofitable stores in the Houston area and two in Louisiana later this week, company officials say.

The Nov. 15 closings are part of the company's regular program of weeding out unprofitable operations, said Pam Morris, spokeswoman for Safeway's Houston division.

Some of the stores are in overly competitve locations and others are older facilities, she said.

Supreme Court firm on USX stock ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to free USX Corp. from having to pay over $83 million to some Marathon Oil Co. stockholders stemming from the two businesses' merger.

The court, over two dissenting votes, let stand a ruling that USX shortchanged some Marathon stockholders when its $3.75 billion tender offer was completed in 1982.

Only Justices Lewis F. Powell and Sandra Day O'Connor voted to hear arguments in the case. Four votes are needed to grant such review.

The tender offer was the first phase of a $6.2 billion merger, one of the largest corporate combinations in history.

USX, formerly U.S. Steel, offered to pay $125 per share in late 1981 for 30 million Marathon shares, 51 percent of the oil company's common stock.

The offer said that if more than 30 million shares were tendered, USX would buy only that total number of shares by prorating its purchase from each stockholder.

Major oil leaning to import fee

HOUSTON (UPI) — Ralph Bailey, chairman of Conoco Inc., Monday said the U.S. oil industry will consider a fee on imported oil as one of a broad range of possible measures to protect national security interests.

A consensus appeared to be building at the American Petroleum Institute'sannual meeting toward supporting the controversial tax on foreign oil.

Small independent refiners have advocated a fee on imported oil in view of the 50 percent collapse in oil prices this year, but most large international oil companies have opposed such a levy despite rising imports.

Bailey said the real issue for the United States in this era of cheap oil is vulnerability rather than dependence on foreign oil.

"We in the industry will look at all the options and try to induce Congress to look at them," he told a news briefing.

"An oil import fee is among those options," Bailey said. "Personally, I think there's a better way to do it."

Conoco, a subsidiary of Du Pont Co. of Wilmington, Del., is a major oil company with oil and gas properties in the United States and abroad.

"As low oil prices continue, we're seeing both a restructuring of the oil industry and the demise of certain segments," Bailey said.

"A lot of permanent damage has been done," he said, citing the high level of unemployment in the industry, massive cutbacks on domestic exploration spending, and a 25 percent surge in U.S. petroleum imports.

"If we should get a disruption in foreign oil supplies or some other event overseas, we could find ourselves caught in another (oil price) shock wave," he said. "National security interests are involved here.

Bailey said in keeping with industry trends, Conoco had reduced its capital spending on exploration by 60 percent in the United States this year and by 40 percent overseas.

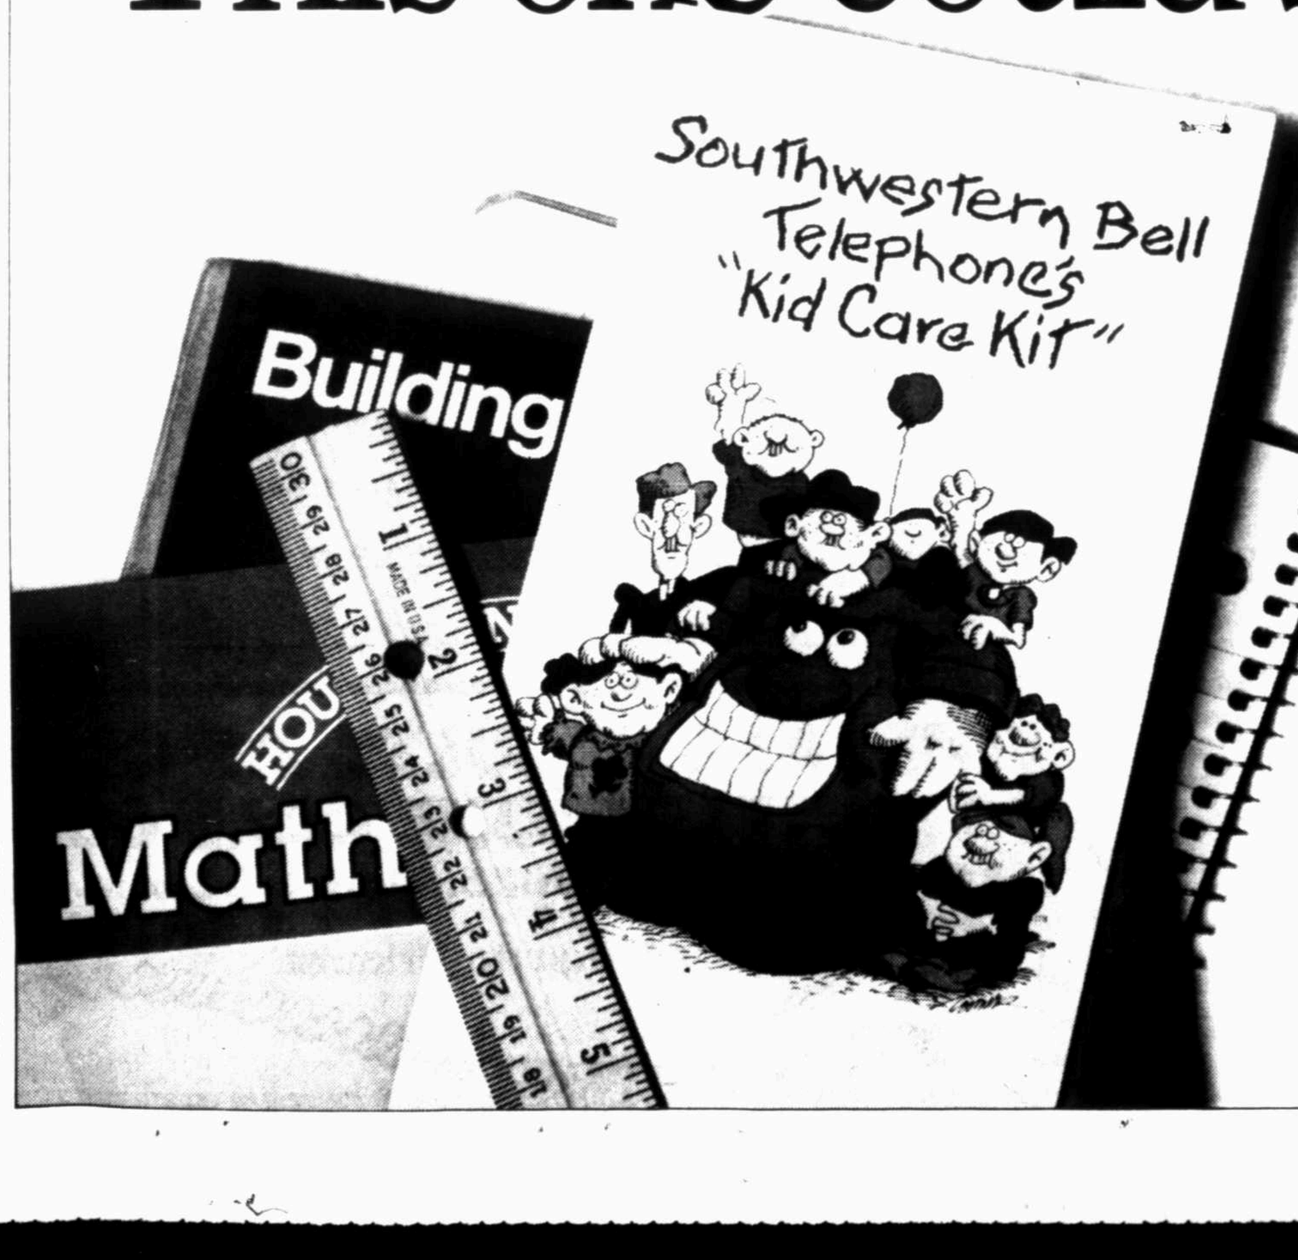
He declined to release figures on Conoco's 1986 spending budget.

Conoco said the spending pattern was reversed because the potential oil targets abroad are larger and the exploration costs in some countries cheaper than in the United States because of the marginal tax rate.

Earlier in the day, Larry Rawl, who will become chairman of Exxon Corp. next year, said: "I'm kinda hopeful that oil prices will stabilize for a little while."

Rawl said Exxon is basing its planning on a broad spectrum of oil price scenarios that range from a low of $10 a barrel to a high of $20.

Most school books enrich your child's life. This one could save it.



It's called "Kid Care." And it's part of a children's safety program sponsored by Southwestern Bell Telephone.

For the past two years, our employees have been taking this book to Texas elementary schools, where they help teach kids what to do if they're lost. Or approached by a stranger. Or caught in other dangerous situations.

At Southwestern Bell Telephone, we're proud to have created this special book as part of our effort to lend a hand in the community.

We're also proud to have distributed it to schools, PTAs, and other organizations throughout the state.

Because it's our way of protecting one of the most precious things in the world.

The life of a child.

We're here to help.

Young cowboys, girls rope calves for fun, profit and more

By CARLOS VIDAL GRETH

BOERNE, Texas (AP) — Stephanie Byrd, 5, sat unconcernedly astride B.J., her favorite horse. Her dad, Buddy Byrd, a rancher from Bandera, stood by her side, absentmindedly combing the mount's mane with his fingers.

You'd never guess Stephanie was about to ride hell for leather in the barrel race at the Boerne 4-H Pee Wee and Junior Rodeo. They were so cool, frozen yogurt wouldn't melt in their mouths.

Then tragedy struck.

"I've got the hiccups, Daddy," Stephanie whined.

"That's all right, darling," Byrd said with a grin. "You're about to lose 'em out there in the arena."

Sure enough, Stephanie lost her hiccups — and her cowboy hat — while she expertly threaded the horse through the zigzag course.

"She did OK," Byrd said, chest puffing out with pride. "After all Stephanie's been riding since she was 4. She placed second all-around in her division in the Bandera rodeo this year."

When many children still are learning to ride a bike, Pee Wee rodeoers — ages 10 and under — are riding animals that weigh 20 times more than they do. When most kids are skipping rope, these young cowboys and cowgirls are roping calves and goats faster than you can say "Whoa, hoss."

The young sons and daughters of ranchers, rodeo riders and equestrians of all stripes put on quite a show. In their tooled leather belts, belt buckles the sizes of dinner plates, cavalry shirts and itty-bitty Dan Post boots, they are eerily accurate, diminutive versions of adult saddle stars.

ASK THE youngsters why, and they'll tell you they go to rodeos for fun, and, sometimes, profit. But there's more to the sport than that.

Bob Bailey, Kendall County extension agent, oversees the 4-H horse club that sponsored the event outside Boerne, 44 hilly miles west of New Braunfels.

Rodeos, he maintains, are good places to learn about life.

"The kids learn to win," he said. "They learn to lose. It's different from football. The competition is friendly.

"Pee Wee Rodeo is a family deal. Both parents usually work with the child at home and support him at the events. It's quite a commitment."

Bailey watched his 5-year-old son, Will, storm the arena in the pole-bending competition. He weaved around the six poles set 21 feet apart without knocking one down.

"Will has been riding since he was 3," Bailey said. "He has learned to care for and be comfortable with animals."

He guffawed at some of the miniature fashion statements that were worn as if the rodeo were a Roy Rogers and Dale Evans look-alike contest.

"THEY ALL want to grow up to be world-champion calf ropers like Donnie Gay," Bailey said. "That's OK. About 99 percent of the rodeo pros are good role models. This is a clean sport."

AP Laserphoto

Eight-year-old Jeffrey McDonald of San Antonio heads out into the arena under the watchful eye of his father, Jeff, right at the Pee Wee Rodeo in Boerne, 44 miles west of New Braunfels.

Ranchers Tom and Edna Owens of Rankin drove hundreds of miles across West Texas so their children Cody, 8, and Shanna, 11, could kick up rodeo dust. They have hit the road every weekend the last few summers for the same purpose.

Shanna, a freckled blonde incongruously dressed like an Esprit clothing ad, placed first in the pole-bending race.

"My horse, 20-20, has a mind of his own," she said, scratching him behind the ears. "You have to work with a horse and make him know who is boss. Rodeo people understand and take care of their animals."

If you ride in rodeos long enough, you'll eventually get banged up a little. At a rodeo in Fort Stockton years ago, Shanna's horse tripped in a hole and fell on her. For days, her family and doctor worried that she might be permanently paralyzed.

The girl recovered, but was at first afraid to get back on a horse. Such fears don't last long on a West Texas ranch.

"I love horses," Shanna said. "One day I'll be a vet — not for ladies' poodles, but for horses. I'll keep rodeoing no matter what."

SHE NODDED at her brother Cody, standing by the calf pen. Shanna recommended him as a good interview, but warned that he was a notorious prevaricator.

"What I like best about bull riding is the danger," Cody said. "I'll admit I also like to clown."

In a reedy voice, he boasts of his partnership in a rodeo production company in Rankin, his stable of 12 horses ("The youngest one's named White Lightnin' "), and his rustic hat with two bites taken out of the brim.

"A bull got a hold of it," he said with a shrug. "I call it Old Faithful, because it's been with me five years."

Cody took a nasty spill off a calf about four seconds out of the chute. Without a tear, he dusted himself and strode out of the arena to the jangle of spurs no bigger than stars winking from the far side of the heavens.

"I don't usually fall on my face," he said, brushing dirt off downy cheeks. "I usually fall on my head."

Wearing an undaunted grin, Edna Owens sat in a lawn chair writing her son's scores and times on a rating card.

"WE WORRY about the danger," she said. "But the kids enjoy it so much. Rodeos get in their blood. They love winning the buckles, tack and trophies. We can't deny them."

Gail and Nixon Dillard took a day off from their ranch near Pleasanton to enter son B.K., 10, and daughter Reagan, 6, in the 4-H rodeo.

Reagan was wearing an Indian bead belt, red blouse with a schoolgirl collar and a black hat bigger than her head. Shy everywhere but in the arena, she grudgingly acknowledged that she is a three-year veteran of the Pee Wee circuit, and that the cloverleaf barrel competition is her favorite event.

"It's more the horse than the kid at this stage," Nixon said, smiling at his daughter.

Her mother gave the girl more credit. "There is no such thing as an automatic horse," she said. "We're real lucky. Our kids listen to us real well. They know how to follow instructions.

"This is a great benefit for B.K. because he'll take over the ranch one day," Mrs. Dillard said. "I don't know what it's doing for Reagan. I hope she won't grow up to be a professional barrel racer."

The parents behind the scenes were as well-behaved as the children. They warmly encouraged the kids waiting in the wings, calmly congratulated the winners and boosted the worse-for-wear spirits of the last-place winners.

"THIS IS nice," Nixon said. "Everybody's taking it easy. I hate to hear grown-ups shrieking at their young-'uns. Kids and horses should be well-trained before they get to the rodeo."

Lester and Sandy Meier of Fredericksburg produced the event in Boerne.

Romance, craftsmanship sell staircases

By RICK SMITH

GUNTHER (AP) — When Lynn Smith stares at his creations, he sees the cut and curve of fine wood, the tight fit of precise joints, the geometry of intricate design.

But customers who spend from $4,000 to $80,000 on his company's handcrafted stairways often see something altogether different.

"A lot of women have told me, 'I've always seen myself sweeping down a spiral staircase. I want that in my home," said Smith, 35, president of Woodsmiths Design and Engineering.

The spiral and curving staircases that Smith's company creates in a downtown shop here do evoke another era, a time when antebellum belles in billowing skirts gilded — not walked — down stairways.

And while Smith acknowledges that flights of romance attract customers to his staircases, he believes it's the nuts and bolts of craftsmanship that make the sale.

Smith and cousin Dee Smith, Woodsmiths' vice president, moved the small company to Texas from Salt Lake City, Utah, 2½ years ago to be closer to their biggest source of sales, the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

The company, they said, is the only one in the area devoted to making stairways.

They chose the tiny town of Gunter for their block-long, 12-employee factory "because we like the country atmosphere to work in," Lynn Smith said.

"And we were concerned with being craftsman, not in having an elaborate location in the metroplex."

Craftsman hip, Lynn Smith said, is what makes Woodsmiths an old-fashioned throwback to an assembly-line world.

While the shop vibrates with the hums and howls of power tools, it's clear that humans, not machines, do the building here.

"Most of all the craftsmen you see working here are quite young," said Lynn Smith, whose great-grandfather built spiral staircases in Salt Lake City.

Hand-crafted items fell out of favor in the 1960s, he said, when tastes turned to plastics, steel cabinets, "that sort of thing."

"During that time, a lot of craftsmen left the field, except in Europe. But this kind of work is back in vogue now. People want well-crafted items.

"There's something about wood. It's real. There's something about plastic that doesn't seem human; it's not warm to the touch or to the emotions like wood is."

Woodsmiths workers create staircases from scratch, turning red and white oak, Honduras mahogany and walnut into highly-polished puzzle parts. Pieces are assembled in a two-story sky-lit room where bare skeletons of wood are fleshed into life.

A craftsman usually works on a staircase from its beginning until it is assembled in a home, Lynn Smith said.

"This is important. It helps the craftsman feel the contribution he made."

The stairways take from two weeks to three months to complete and their prices reflect the cost of labor intensive work.

"It's expensive," Lynn Smith admitted. "But if a person wants a Cinderella stairway to go with the Cinderella house they've worked for, I think that they would want it built right.

"I'd hate to see someone build a several million dollars home and not have top quality features in that home.

"Our philosophy is that these stairways are going to be heirlooms. We feel like if a house is going to be pulled down, a stairway is one of the items they're going to save. At least, one of the stairways we've built.

"That is a satisfaction. My wife enjoys cooking and housework and so forth, but talks about what it's like to make something really luscious and then it's gone.

Together We Can Change Things... The United Way

Canning... Flavor, Sí! Salt, No!

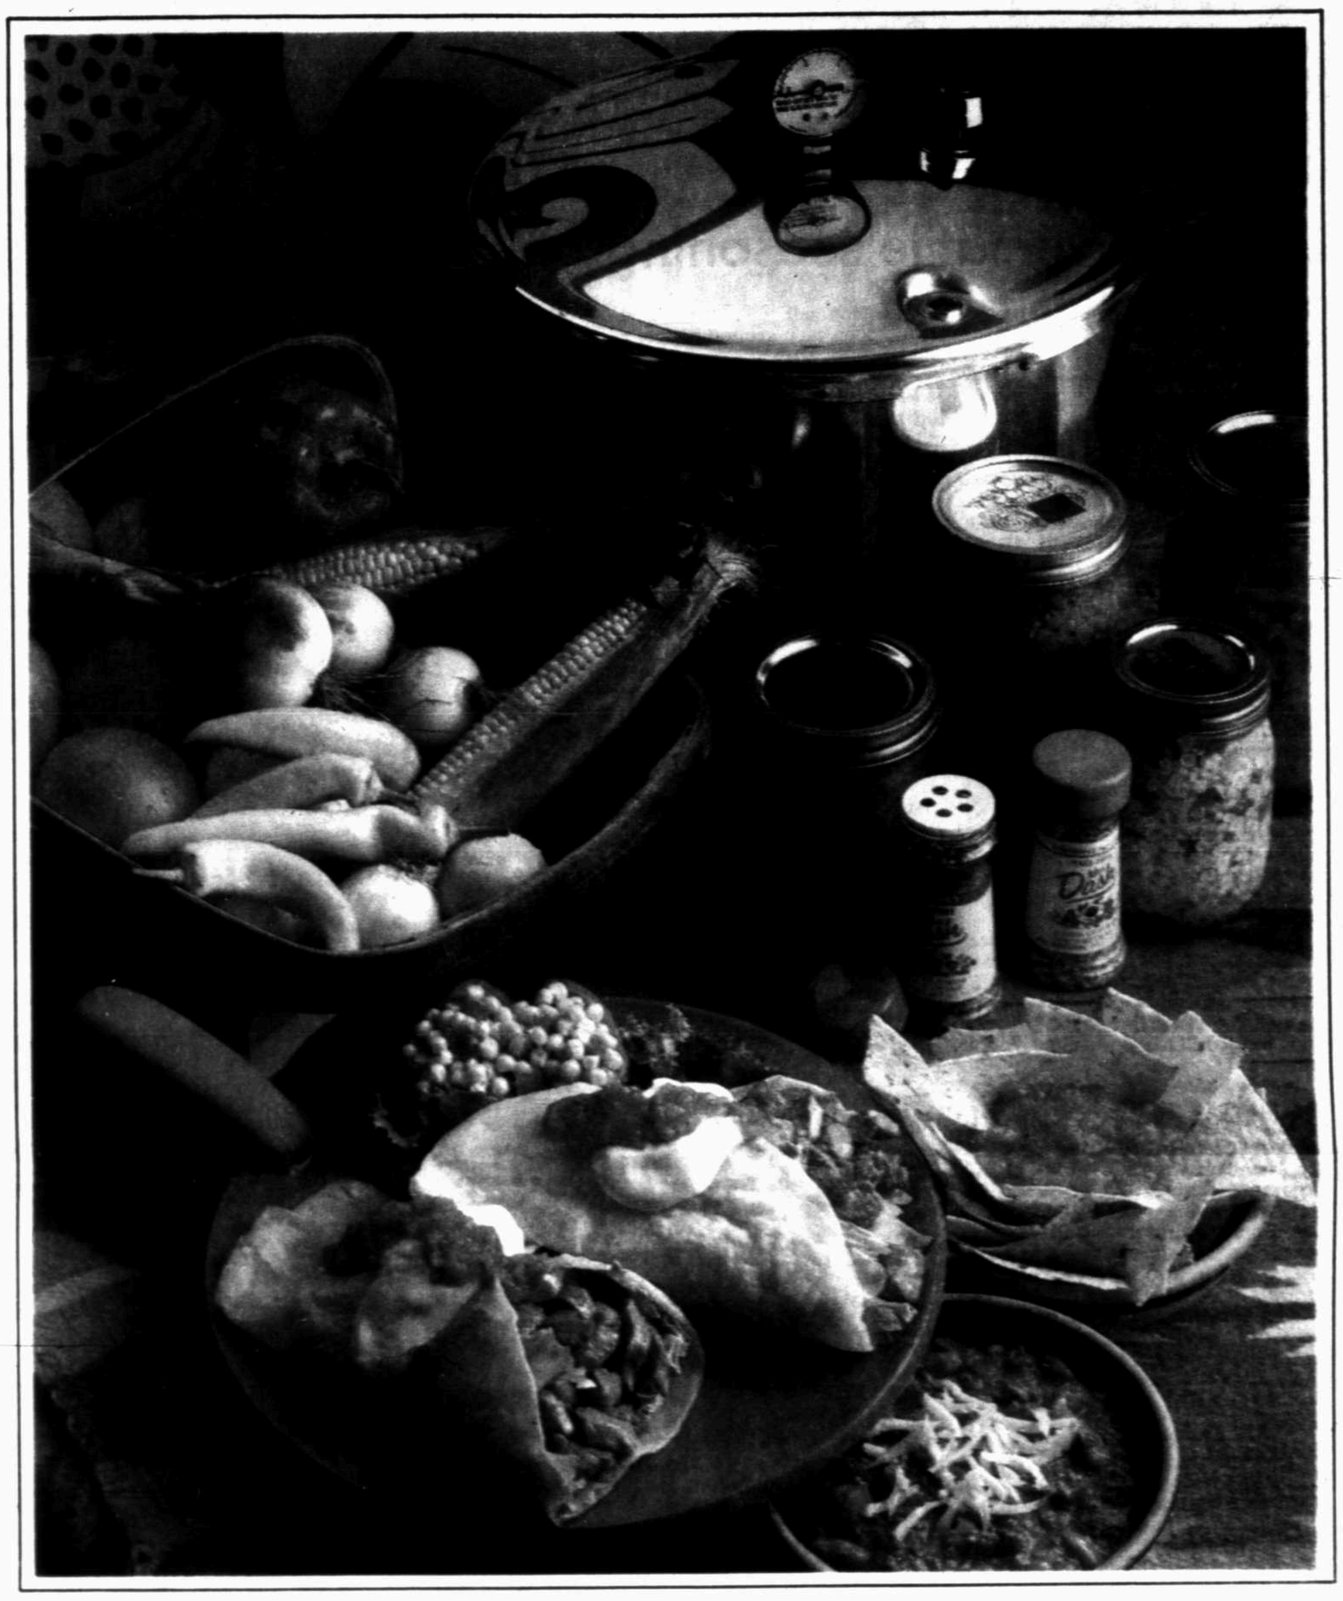
Keeping the sizzle in lunch and dinner menus is easy when the theme is Tex-Mex, since everyone enjoys the distinctive flavors that characterize this regional fare. With a little planning—and canning—you and your family can enjoy fiesta foods all year long.

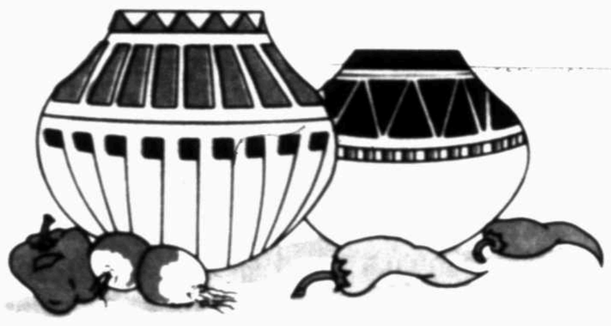
To truly recapture the flavors of the Southwest, start with fresh ingredients. The basics you'll need: corn, chilies, green and red peppers, tomatoes, onion and garlic can be picked from your own garden or a grocer's bin. All that's left is to add a blend of natural herbs and spices to create zippy sauces or bases for other dishes. Best of all, vegetable and meat blends processed in the pressure canner allows them to be stored on the shelf, ever ready.

For health-conscious cooks who want to keep sodium to a minimum, salt-free herb and spice blends are widely available.

Extra Spicy blend is perfect for Tex-Mex cooking, since it combines black, cayenne and sweet red peppers and fourteen other natural ingredients. Lemon & Herb with fourteen herbs and spices plus natural lemon flavor, onion and orange peel, is also well-suited to reproducing the tangy flavors of the Old-Southwest. Both can be used when cooking for persons on low-sodium, low potassium and diabetic diets. Yet even those not on restricted diets will approve of these low-sodium foods.

In the following recipes, three combinations—beef or pork/onion, corn/pepper and tomato/chili peppers are prepared in the pressure canner, ready for later use in such fiesta fare as Southwest Chili Soup, Chili Con Queso, Burritos, Tacos and Salsa. Even that all-American favorite, Chili, can be canned for future meals. With the right equipment, like a selection of quart and pint jars and a Presto pressure canner, canning is easier than ever. Always follow the manufacturer's directions for results that will prompt an enthusiastic "ole!"





Carne Sabrosa

(Beef or Pork and Onion)

3-1/2 pounds center cut beef chuck roast or pork shoulder roast
1-1/2 quarts water
3 onions, peeled and sliced
3 cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons Extra Spicy seasoning blend

Bone and cut off all fat and gristle from meat. Cut meat into 1-inch chunks. Refrigerate until ready to process. Place bones and water in a 6-quart Presto pressure cooker. Close pressure cooker cover securely. Place pressure regulator on vent pipe. Cook for 30 minutes at 15 pounds pressure. Let pressure drop of its own accord. Strain and chill broth. Remove fat from broth. Heat 1 tablespoon fat in a large pan. Saute onion and garlic in fat until tender but not browned; remove from pan. Add meat and cook, stirring over high heat until all pink is gone. Heat reserved broth to boiling. Toss together meat, onion and Extra Spicy seasoning blend. Ladle meat mixture into clean, hot jars, leaving 1-inch head space. Pour hot broth over meat, leaving 1-inch head space. Add boiling water if more liquid is needed. Remove air bubbles. Adjust caps.

Process in pressure canner at:
10 pounds pressure—Pints 75 minutes
Quarts 90 minutes
15 pounds pressure—Pints and Quarts 50 minutes

Yield: 6 pints or 3 quarts
Suggested uses: Burritos, Tacos, Soups, Casseroles

Maiz Con Pimienta Verde

(Corn and Peppers)

2 quarts cut fresh corn
2 sweet red peppers, cleaned and chopped
2 sweet green peppers, cleaned and chopped
1 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons Low Pepper-No Garlic seasoning blend

Combine all ingredients and cover with water; bring to a boil. Pack mixture into clean hot jars, leaving 1-inch head space. Pour cooking liquid over vegetables, leaving 1-inch head space. Add boiling water if more liquid is needed. Remove air bubbles. Adjust caps.

Process in pressure canner at:
10 pounds pressure—Pints 55 minutes
Quarts 85 minutes
15 pounds pressure—Pints and Quarts 50 minutes

Yield: 6 pints or 3 quarts
Serve as vegetable, in soups, casseroles.

Salsa De Tomatoes Y Chiles

(Tomatoes and Chili Peppers)

6 quarts peeled, chopped tomatoes
4 cups chopped onions
4 large green chilis, cleaned, seeded and chopped
4 teaspoons Lemon and Herb seasoning blend

In large pan, combine all ingredients and cook over low heat until thickened (about 1-1/2-hours). Stir mixture frequently to prevent sticking. Bring to a boil. Pour into clean, hot jars, leaving 1/2-inch head space. Add 1-1/2 teaspoons distilled vinegar or lemon juice to half pints; 1 tablespoon to pints. Remove air bubbles. Adjust caps.

Process in a pressure canner at:
10 pounds pressure—
Pints 35 minutes
Half pints 35 minutes
15 pounds pressure—
Pints 30 minutes
Half pints 30 minutes

Yield: 6 pints or 12 half pints.
Recipe not advisable for processing in quarts.

Chili Con Queso

1 cup (4-ounces) low-sodium Cheddar Cheese
1 pint Tomatoes and Chili Peppers

Add cheese to Tomatoes & Chili Peppers mixture; heat and stir until cheese melts. Serve with Tortilla chips.

Chili Con Carne

(Chili)

5 pounds ground beef
1 quart chopped onion
2 cups chopped green peppers
5 cloves garlic, minced
2 quarts peeled, chopped tomatoes
1 (20-ounce) can tomato sauce
1/2 cup (2.5 ounce) jar Extra Spicy seasoning blend
1 1/2 cups water

Saute beef, onions, green peppers and garlic until all pink is gone from beef; drain. Add remaining ingredients. Bring mixture to a boil and simmer 5 minutes. Pack into clean hot jars, leaving 1-inch head space. Remove air bubbles. Adjust caps.

Process in pressure canner at:
10 pounds pressure—Pints 75 minutes
Quarts 90 minutes
15 pounds pressure—Pints and Quarts 50 minutes.

Yield: 12 pints or 6 quarts
Serving suggestion: Add 2 (16-ounce) cans red kidney beans (drained) to 1-quart chili. Heat. Top each serving with sour cream topping, chopped onion or cheese. May also be used in casseroles or filling for tacos.

Sopa De Chiles

(Southwest Chili Soup)

1 pint Beef or Pork mixture
1 pint Corn and Peppers Mixture
1/2 pint Tomatoes and Chili Peppers mixture
1 cup broth

Heat all ingredients together.
Makes 6-1 cup servings

Sour Cream Topping

1/2 cup sour cream
1/2 teaspoon Extra Spicy seasoning blend

Blend together sour cream and seasoning blend. Serve over Burritos or Tacos.

'Grazing' encouraged by growing numbers of restaurants

Washington Post News Service

Call it noshing, snacking or prolonging the cocktail hour, the free-wheeling eating known as grazing has become more popular, with an increasing number of restaurants using it as a way to give customers a variety of tidbits.

Antony Worall-Thompson has brought his concept of grazing from his London restaurant, Menage a Trois, to Manhattan. Mr. B's in New Orleans, Rainbow in Boston, Primi in Los Angeles and Casual Quilted Giraffe in Manhattan are among many restaurants that encourage patrons to make a meal out of appetizers.

Grazing, or eating small portions of several dishes, has long been an international custom. Scandinavians have their smorgasbord, Chinese enjoy dim sum, Japanese eat a variety of sushi and the Spanish can make a whole meal of tapas.

This style is perfect for entertaining, when all the effort put into creating a variety of appropriate appetizers is rewarded with an exciting menu and gorgeous presentation. In honor of the approaching party season, here is an assortment of international grazing foods.

TORTELLINI WITH BASIL CREAM SAUCE

1 pound frozen spinach tortellini (cheese-filled)
6 sun-dried tomatoes, packed in oil
1 cup heavy cream
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup fresh basil leaves
2 whole cloves garlic
½ cup olive oil
6 tablespoons pignoli nuts
Fresh sprigs of basil for garnish

Cook tortellini according to manufacturer's directions. Cut sun-dried tomatoes into strips.

In a small saucepan bring heavy cream to a boil and cook for 2 to 3 minutes. Stir in the Parmesan cheese, parsley, sun-dried tomatoes, salt and pepper.

Puree basil and garlic in food processor; add olive oil and process until smooth. Transfer to a medium bowl and toss gently with tortellini.

To serve, divide tortellini among 6 dishes. Sprinkle each serving with a tablespoon of pignoli nuts and a sprig of fresh basil.

Makes 6 servings.

SPINACH ROULADE WITH SEAFOOD FILLING

2 (10-ounce) packages frozen chopped spinach
4 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
Pinch nutmeg
Salt and pepper to taste
6 eggs, separated
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
½ pound shrimp, shelled
½ pound scallops
8 ounces clam broth
6 tablespoons butter
1 cup chopped mushrooms
½ cup all-purpose flour
1½ cups half-and-half
1 tomato, peeled, seeded, chopped
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
2 tablespoons chopped scallions

Defrost spinach and squeeze dry. Combine with Parmesan cheese, nutmeg, salt, pepper and egg yolks; mix well. Whip egg whites and cream of tarter until stiff. Add one cup to spinach mixture to lighten it. Gently fold in remaining egg whites.

Butter a 10-by-15 inch jelly-roll pan, line with wax paper; butter wax paper. Spread spinach mixture in pan. Bake in 375-degree oven for 15 minutes. Cover roulade with aluminum foil and a slightly larger pan; invert. Remove lining paper.

Simmer shrimp and scallops in clam broth until they're opaque. Chop coarsely.

In a skillet, melt butter and saute mushrooms. Add flour and stir off heat 1 minute. Slowly add half-and-half and cook over medium heat until sauce is thickened. Add shrimp and scallops, tomato, parsley and scallions. Cool slightly. Spread mixture over roulade, leaving last 4 inches on short end uncovered. Beginning at other short end, roll up like a jelly roll using aluminum foil as an aide. Place on serving dish, seam side down. Cut into 1-inch slices. Makes 10 servings.

DUCK PATE WITH GREEN PEPPERCORNS

2 (4 to 5 pounds each) ducks
½ cup duck fat
¼ cup brandy
2 teaspoons thyme
1 teaspoon tarragon
½ pound fatty pork, cut in chunks
2 duck livers
¼ cup chopped shallots
½ teaspoon mace
2 teaspoons salt
2 eggs, slightly beaten
½ pound bacon
4 tablesoons green peppercorns packed in water, rinsed
2 bay leaves

Bone duck and remove excess fat, reserving ½ cup fat. Cut breasts into long thin strips. Combine in bowl with brandy, 1 teaspoon thyme and tarragon.

Place remaining duck meat, pork, duck fat and livers in food processor and process until mixture is ground. Combine with shallots, mace, thyme, salt and eggs. Drain duck strips and stir marinade into ground mixture.

Line a terrin or a 9-by-5-inch loaf pan with bacon strips, reserving several pieces for top. Pack one third of the ground mixture into the terrine, smoothing it with wet fingertips. Lightly press half the duck strips and half the peppercorns into the mixture. Repeat layers, ending with ground mixture. Lay remaining bacon slices on top and bay leaves in center.

Cover terrine (or cover loaf pan with aluminum foil and poke two small holes in top). Place on a baking sheet and bake in a 350-degree oven for 2 hours. Discard bay leaves. Drain excess liquid from pan. Place double sheet of aluminum foil over top layer of bacon and place a weight on top for about 8 hours. Makes 16 servings.

SHRIMP WITH SNOW PEAS

2 tablespoons peanut oil
2 tablespoons chopped fresh ginger
1 tablespoon chopped fresh garlic
1 pound shrimp, shelled and cleaned
½ pound snow peas, trimmed
1 red papper, cut in thin strips
16-ounce can baby corn, drained
16-ounce can straw mushrooms, drained
6 scallions, chopped
4 tablespoons sesame oil
4 tablespoons rice-wine vinegar

In a large skillet heat oil and stir-fry ginger and garlic 3 to 4 minutes, taking care not to burn them. Add shrimp and cook until opaque. Remove and set aside. Blanch snow peas 1 minute. Rinse in cold water.

In a serving bowl gently toss together the shrimp, snow peas, red pepper, baby corn, straw mushrooms and scallions.

Beat the sesame oil and wine vinegar together with a fork. Pour over ingredients and toss. Makes 6 servings.

Allspice versatile seasoning

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Here is a simple question to test your spice I.Q.:

Is allspice:

1. A blend of spices, or
2. A single spice?

If you chose the first answer, you were dead wrong. Allspice is often, and mistakenly, supposed to be a combination of different sweet spices. This is because its flavor is something akin to cloves mingled with a dash each of cinnamon and nutmeg.

But in fact, the allspice is a berry from an evergreen tree grown primarily in Jamaica. It enjoys the distinction of being the only spice grown exclusively in the Western Hemisphere.

Dried, the berries look rather like large peppercorns. That's exactly what the Spanish assumed them to be when they discovered them centuries ago during their explorations of the Caribbean. So they called the spice pimento (from the Spanish pimiento, meaning "pepper").

In parts of the West Indies, allspice is still known by the old Spanish name. And its botanical name is still pimenta Officinalis. But what's in a name? You can call it pepper all you like, but it still tastes deliciously like allspice.

Whole berries are used to season meat stocks, marinades, gravies, stews, roasts, pickling liquids and mulled beverages. And they are often found in fragrant sachets.

Ground allspice flavors curries, desserts, spice cakes and other baked goods, preserves and vegetable dishes. The flavor combines very nicely with apples (see recipes below).

This pungent and aromatic berry goes well with other spices, so experiment if you like — but use sparingly to avoid overpowering other flavors.

TRIPLE VEGGIE MEDLEY

¼ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 (10-ounce) package frozen peas
1 (4-ounce) can mushroom stems and pieces, drained
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon each ground pepper and allspice

Preparation Time: 5 minutes. Cooking Time: 9 to 12 minutes (plus 3 minutes sanding time). Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Combine onion and butter in 1-quart glass casserole. Cover and microwave 3 to 4 minutes, stirring after 2 minutes, until onion is partially cooked.

Stir in all remaining ingredients, cover, and microwave 6 to 8 minutes longer, stirring gently every 3 minutes, until peas are almost done. Let stand, covered, 3 minutes before serving.

Serves 4.

ALICE'S APPLESAUCE CAKE

1 cup applesauce
¾ cup brown sugar, packed
½ cup butter or margarine, melted
1¾ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground ginger
¼ teaspoon ground allspice
⅛ teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ cup raisins
½ cup chopped walnuts
Whipped cream (optional) for garnish

Preparation Time: 10 minutes. Cooking Time: 8 to 12 minutes. Oven Setting: HIH (100 percent power).

Combine first three ingredients in small bowl, stirring to blend well. Set aside.

Sift together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, and spices into large mixing bowl. Add applesauce mixture, blending well. Stir in raisins and nuts.

Turn batter into 12x8x2-inch glass baking dish. Microwave 8 to 12 minutes, rotating dish every 2 minutes, until done. Let cool before serving. Serve topped with dollop of with whipped cream, if desired.

Serves 8 to 12.

Cheeses low-salt

SYOSSET, N.Y. (UPI) — In the past, just about the last thing a person on a low-salt diet could look forward to was a dinner entree described as "luscious," "gooey" or "satisfying" — especially when it came to cheese.

Both taste and texture seemed to conspire against any more than a momentary illusion that this cheese was anything a person on a normal diet would eat. That is changing, however, even if little by little.

N. Dorman and Co., which has been turning out cheeses on Long Island since 1896, has just come out with nine new cheeses for their low-salt line. These will be especially good news to the cook, since they include several varieties used in popular dishes.

As a example, here is a recipe from Dorman for an elegant Vegetable Cheese Timbale.

VEGETABLE CHEESE TIMBALE

2 slices bacon, chopped
1 small zucchini, cut lengthwise into quarters, sliced thinly
2 tablespoons chopped red bell pepper
2 tablespoons thinly sliced onion
1 teaspoons chopped parsley
1 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoons flour
¼ cup heavy cream
2 large eggs
2 slices low-salt Gouda cheese
Dash of Worcestershire
Freshly ground black pepper

In a medium saucepan, saute bacon until fully cooked, then add zucchini, red pepper, onion and parsley. Cover and cook 1 to 2 minutes over medium heat. Remove from heat.

In smaller saucepan, melt butter and whisk in flour over low heat. Follow immediately with cream, eggs, cheese (which has been broken into bits), Worcestershire and pepper.

Whisk constantly until cheese melts and mixture thickens. Add to vegetable mixture and stir. Fill ovenproof cups with approximately ½ cup in each.

Place cups in buttered baking dish and bake at 400 degrees for 15 minutes. Remove timbales by sliding sharp knife around edge of cup and tipping gently onto plate.

All raised bread made from wheat

Hearst News Service

Whatever the label on a loaf of bread says, all raised bread is wheat-based bread. Food scientists tell us wheat is the only grain that contains gluten strong enough to effectively trap the gases given off by the yeast, allowing the dough to rise and the loaf to form. Even rye and other alternative grain breads usually contain some wheat flour.

Manufacturers have taken advantage of this fact to label brown breads made from refined wheat flour "wheat bread," giving many consumers the impression that the bread is substantially different from white bread. More often than not, the primary difference is the presence of caramelized sugar, molasses or other coloring agents.

Refined white flour is wheat flour from which the fiber — and nutrition-rich bran and germ — have been removed. This substantially increases the product's shelf life. The flour is then "enriched" with vitamins and minerals, but the fiber content remains low, which is why many bread-makers add fiber to their "wheat" loaves.

Whole wheat flour is just that — ground-up wheat kernels. If a bread is made exclusively from whole wheat flour, the label will say so. If it's made with whole wheat flour, that will be listed in the ingredients. Under any other circumstance, "wheat" means white, no matter what color the bread is.

Check the ingredient list. If the vegetable shortenings used include palm or coconut oils, the bread contains cholesterol. If the mode of preserving involves hydrogenation of the oils, they've become partly saturated fats — the kind you may be trying to avoid.

The best solution: Forget the front of the label. Read the ingredient list.

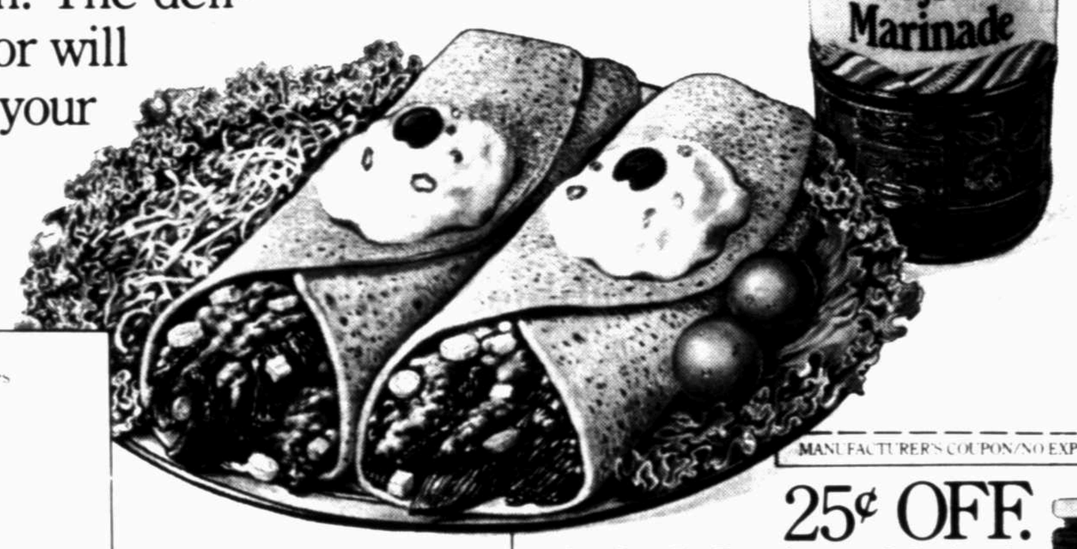
What's a "Fajita"?

(pronounced fa-heet-a)

A Fajita is a traditional Mexican dish using beef or chicken. The deliciously different flavor will surprise and delight your friends and family.



FAJITAS

1 pound beef skirt steak (½-inch flank or round steak may be substituted)
1 jar (8 ounces) OLD EL PASO® Fajita Marinade
8 OLD EL PASO® Flour Tortillas
OLD EL PASO® Thick 'n Chunky Salsa or Picante Salsa
OLD EL PASO® Chopped Green Chilies guacamole
sour cream
shredded cheese sliced green onions
sliced black olives

Trim excess fat from steak. Place in shallow dish and pour fajitas marinade over steak. Cover and place in refrigerator at least two hours or overnight. Turn meat occasionally. Remove meat from marinade and grill 4 to 6 inches over hot coals to desired doneness; or broil meat 6 inches from heat source. Slice meat thinly across the grain. To soften tortillas, remove tortillas from plastic bag and wrap in foil; bake at 350°F for 10 minutes or puncture plastic wrap and microwave at high 45 seconds. Arrange meat in warm tortillas; add salsa, green chilies and desired condiments. Roll up tortillas. Makes 8 servings.

WHAT'S COOKING

What's baking at the Baskins?

EDITORS NOTE: Families who previously have been named Family of the Year will be featured in "What's Cooking" prior to the announcement of this year's family, Nov. 18. This is the fourth of a six part series.

By MYRA SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

Judge Pat Baskin and his wife Joan have been Midlanders for 33 years and all four of their children were born and raised Midlanders. In addition to being active in the community, the couple has been active both on and off the stage and served on the board for Midland Community Theatre.

They have both served as elders at First Presbyterian Church and are active in many aspects of the school district (locally and in North Carolina, where one son resides).

These are just a few of the reasons why the Baskin family was selected the 1984 Family of the Year.

Even with their whirlwind of activies, they still find time to visit the kitchen and whip up everything from lasanga to yeast rolls.

"We recognized long ago that the opportunities and lifestyle here were wonderful for a town of this size," Mrs. Baskin said. "With our children grown and away from home, I find the chores have been greatly simplified."

Even with the children gone, the Baskins occasionally still find themselves with a full house. Mrs. Baskin, recently retired from her post as president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, hosted three Chinese delegates visiting from Midland's sister city, Dongying.

"One thing I learned about the Chinese is that they don't drink coffee. Even at breakfast time their ceremonial tea is very important," Mrs. Baskin said. And just as the Chinese have favorite mealtime customs, Mrs. Baskin knows her sons do too.

To indulge their kitchen cravings while away from home, Mrs. Baskin will often pack-up boxes of ingredients for some of the family's traditional homemade recipes and send them a "care package."

"For lasagna I put all the spices in little packets and send the dry noodles along. Then all the boys have to do is brown some meat, cook the noodles and put it together," she said.

Mrs. Baskin will usually bake ahead of time and freeze food for big family dinners. "I am a believer in not taking a lot of preparation to have good food. That way, when my family is here, I can spend time with them instead of spending all my time in the kitchen."

This Thanksgiving, the Baskin family plans to all meet at a son's home in Dallas. "You can be sure I won't go empty-handed," Mrs. Baskin said. "I plan to take food, some already prepared, to put dinner together there."

Joan Baskin

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

NOTE: The following recipes from the Baskin Kitchen can be prepared ahead of time and frozen.

Mrs. Baskin likes to make the yeast rolls ahead, refrigerate them and arrange them in baskets for gifts.

ICEBOX YEAST ROLLS

1 cup boiling water
1 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
2 eggs, beaten
2 packages yeast
1 cup warm water
6 cups unsifted flour

Pour boiling water over shortening. Add sugar and salt. Blend and let cool. Add eggs. Let yeast stand in water five minutes, then add to mixture. Blend in flour. Refrigerate several hours or overnight, (Dough will rise in refrigerator). Make into rolls and let rise two hours. Bake at 350 degrees for ten minutes.

BAKED LASANGA

3 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup chopped onions
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 pound ground beef
1 2½ pound can tomatoes
1 12-ounces can tomato paste
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon oregano
1 teaspoon thyme
1 teaspoon crushed red peppers
½ teaspoon anise seed
½ pound lasagna noodles
¾ pound cottage cheese
½ pound mozzarella cheese
½ pound grated parmesan

Saute garlic, onion and meat. Add tomatoes and tomato paste, salt and seasonings. Simmer. Layer sauce, cooked noodles, three cheeses (starting and ending with sauce). Bake at 350 degrees for 20-30 minutes. Serves 8-10 and freezes well.

SOUTHERN PECAN PIE

1 unbaked pie shell
1 cup light brown sugar
½ cup white sugar
1 tablespoon flour
2 eggs
2 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup butter, melted (do not substitute)
1 cup pecans, chopped

Mix all ingredients together and pour into pie shell. Bake at 375 degrees for 40 minutes.

KENTUCKY DERBY PIE

1 unbaked pie shell
1 cup sugar
2 unbeaten eggs
½ cup flour
1 stick butter
1 cup chocolate chips (6 ounces)
1 cup pecans
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix together all ingredients and pour into pie shell. Bake at 325 degrees for 45 minutes.

Restaurant owners go full steam ahead in cooking

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. — An intense former professional football player and a laid-back "natural freak" are among the pioneers of what may become a new restaurant fad for health-conscious Americans: steam cooking.

It's an old idea, but Cliff Lewis, a former Green Bay Packer and University of Southern Mississippi linebacker, and Richard "Buzzard" Anderson have taken it to an extreme. The only things not steamed in their Florida Panhandle restaurants are the cheesecake, rice and peanut butter and jelly sandwiches.

There are no fryers, ovens, grills or griddles at Cliff's Steamed Seafood in downtown Fort Walton Beach or at Anderson's Nautical Steam Shack on Bayou Chico in nearby Pensacola.

"You don't cook away any of the nutrients," said Lewis, a fitness buff who pumps iron at a gym across the street from Cliff's. "It's only cooked at 225 degrees. You are just cooking the food. You are not killing it."

Steam cooking is also healthy, Lewis said, because the process doesn't add grease, calories or cholesterol.

Anderson and Lewis steam vegetables and seafood, common steam-cooked items, and the unusual: hamburgers, chicken, stuffed peppers and a dessert made from an apple filled with nuts, raisins, cinnamon, coconut and banana slices.

Lewis opened Cliff's four months ago after taking lessons from Anderson at the Nautical Steam Shack.

"I think they have something new in the Pensacola area," said Edwin Brown of the American Culinary Federation, headquartered in St. Augustine. "I just never heard of a restaurant that did its major cooking by steam."

LEWIS, HOWEVER, says his market research has turned up five other Panhandle restaurants that specialize in steam cooking — two in Tallahassee and one each in Panama City, Freeport and Sandestin — but most of them also do other types of cooking.

Restaurants usually braise seafood and meat after they steam it, said Ron Simmons of Cleveland Range Co., but not Lewis and Anderson.

The Ohio company is the major producer of restaurant steamers. Simmons said the market for steaming equipment was growing phenomenally, and about a dozen new competitors have entered the market during the last five years.

Anderson, an upholsterer by trade, is originally from North Dakota. He lived off the land in the mountains for years and some people still know him as "Nat," short for "natural freak."

Anderson kept sailing until he hit Pensacola with $5 in his pocket. He docked next to a waterfront hatch-cover shop where the owner, Butch Hausfeld, said he might be able to find a job at Bobby Pederson's canvas shop. Anderson said he lasted there a half-day but the three of them later became partners in the restaurant, although Pederson no longer is involved.

The hatch-cover fad — in which boat hatch covers were covered with plastic and sold as furniture — was in decline, so Hausfeld decided three years ago to turn his shop into a restaurant. Pederson knew a junk dealer who had a steamer, and the partners bought it for $50.

They dropped the notion of adding fried foods after discovering the expense and complication of meeting fire and health codes. They didn't need such things as a hood over the cooking area or grease traps for a steamer, Anderson said.

The business has gone so smoothly, Anderson said, he's getting bored and thinking of doing something else.

But Lewis thinks steaming is the wave of the future and he's ready to ride it as far as it will go. They have received requests for franchises, but have declined until Cliff's gets firmly established.

The engagement broke off, and Lewis returned to his hometown of Fort Walton Beach.

Lewis got his first taste of steamed food last year in Tallahassee where he had gone to be with his then-fiancee when the Packers cut him after four years. He became a regular at the Grand Finale, a Tallahassee restaurant that specializes in steaming.

Women bakes checks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A major fear prior to the 18th century was losing money or having it stolen. Today people worry about losing their travelers checks. According to John Watanabe, director of BankAmerica Travelers Checques, less than one percent of the certificates are ever lost or stolen.

Among the most unusual explanations about lost checks he recalls is a woman who kept her travelers checks hidden in her oven. While baking a cake, she forgot to take them out, and they burned up.

Snack-smart mothers turn nibbles to nutrition

Associated Press

Mothers who are snack-smart can turn their children's natural urge to nibble into a nutritional advantage.

Scientific research indicates children who snack frequently are better nourished than non-snackers, according to an article by dietitians Jo-Anne Heslin and Annette B. Natow in an issue of Redbook.

The nutrition experts said snackers are also hungry less often and so are less irritable and more likely to perform well in new learning situations. Snackers are usually slim, probably because they tend to eat when they are hungry instead of when a clock signals mealtime.

That does not mean children should fill up on cookies. They need snacks with a substantial amount of protein, vitamins and other nutrients. Here are tips on how to achieve this.

- Set a good example. Watching you eat right can teach children a valuable lesson in nutrition.
- Limit the amount of junk food you keep in the house. Stock up on fruit juice, fresh fruit, nuts, yogurt and popcorn.
- Serve homemade snacks whenever possible. You can control what goes into the snacks you make yourself.
- Don't use food as a pacifier, reward or punishment. Food should not have an emotional value.
- Don't be afraid to set limits, but make them reasonable. Be willing to compromise. Forbidding a food makes it more enticing.
- Don't scold your child for slipping up. Teach the child to enjoy all foods in moderation. Don't label food "good" or "bad."

Each age group has different nutritional requirements. Toddlers need about 400 extra calories daily in addition to their meals. Fresh fruits and whole-grain, lightly sweetened dry cereals make good snacks, as do half slices of bread, a few crackers, a slice of cheese, a quarter of a sandwich.

Preschoolers between ages four and six need as many as four snacks a day. Nutritious snacks include yogurt and fruit, cheese and crackers, muffins and juice, milk and cookies or hot cocoa and graham crackers.

Healthy teenage snacks include popcorn, fresh fruit, raw vegetables or baked potato with low calorie topping. Teenagers should limit soda intake to once or twice a day — a recent study by the U.S. Department of Agriculture indicated teens who drank large amounts of soda had low intakes of calcium, riboflavin and vitamins A and C.

Carbohydrates battle against fat

By GORDY HOLT
Hearst News Service

Feel better!
Look better!
Be better!
Eat more complex carbohydrates!

There is, as yet, no carbohydrate lobby. No one beats the bushes on behalf of a carbohydrate growers' association, and the sides of tall buildings have yet to salute the humble carb.

Yet complex carbohdrates are being hailed as the single most important food choice in the battle against fat.

Complex carbohydrates always have been the perfect fuel — the natural gas of foodstuffs.

They also fill you up without filling you out. Protein, by contrast, is a second-rate fuel. While important as the building material of muscle cells, hormones and enzymes, it burns as a fuel like diesel in an 18-wheeler. And when the throttle's down, protein metabolism overworks one of the body's most-important pollution-control devices, the kidneys.

ALTHOUGH THE advocates of vegetarianism have long battered the doors of convention, it wasn't until 1983 that a physician from Hawaii, John McDougall, tore a page out of Nathan Pritikin's guidebook and attempted to do the late health promoter one better. In "The McDougall Plan" (New Century Publishers, 1983), McDougall produced what Pritikin himself called "the first scientifically documented rationale" for a vegetarian diet.

With "McDougall's Medicine" two years later (New Century, 1985), McDougal went on to rub the issue thoroughly into research affecting such dinner-table diseases as diabetes, cancer, arthritis, hypertension and diseases of the heart, arteries and kidneys.

Even where adulterated with dabs of lean meat, the basics of eating complex carbohydrates have been storming the literature of human performance.

Books such as "Eat To Win," written by mail-order Ph.D. Robert Haas (Rawson Associates, 1983) is one best-selling example. But less hysteric examples, including "Food for Champions" by Ned Bayrd and Chris Quiltner (Berkley Books, 1982), bring home the news of nutrition and physiology.

As a result, athletes are learning that pre-game meals of steak and eggs are counterproductive. High-altitude mountainers are discovering that carbohydrates are the fuel of performance.

A LIGHT ALSO is dawning among those chasing fat. Carbohydrates may be man's most perfect fuel but, calorically speaking, compared with fat they are less than half as dense. There are nine calories per gram of fat, but only four per gram of carbohydrate or protein.

For the mountaineer who has to carry the stuff, this may be a problem. But for the overweight person who doesn't, it is a blessing. With a diet high in fiber-packed complex carbohydrates, you can almost graze all day — as you dare not over a jar of butter-based, sugar-laced, chocolate-chip cookies and a gallon jug of whole milk.

To illustrate the difference between fluffy and dense, Evette Hackman, a registered dietitian from Seattle, drew this comparison:

"A tiny pat of butter," she said, "has the same amount of calories as an orange."

Indeed, the "starch" grandma tried to keep off the table because it was "fattening" is exactly the opposite. Starch isn't fattening; it's the fat you put on it that is.

Hackman points out that butter has 20 times the caloric punch of an orange.

Worse, you have to eat a lot of butter to feel full, and 100 percent of butter's calories come from fat.

VIRTUALLY 100 percent of an orange's calories come from carbohydrates, by contrast.

In the battle of the bulge, therefore, wellness promoters are laying the carbohydrates on thick.

As you settle back to watch the television this weekend, consider these options.

Will it be a bottle of imported beer and a plate of nachos, or will you choose a turkey sandwich with the works: 2 ounces of turkey breast on whole-wheat bread with mustard, mayonnaise, lettuce, onion and alfalfa sprouts, plus an 8-ounce glass of non-fat milk and an apple?

According to Hackman's calculations, the bottle of imported beer and 3 ounces of taco chips (36 triangles) sopped with just 3 ounces of melted cheddar cheese is a snack that tips the scale at 945 calories — "half a day's supply for the average active woman and maybe two-fifths the calories a man needs," she says.

The sandwich, milk and apple, by contrast, provide just 526 calories.

Hackman's calculations show that the nachos contain 58.8 grams total fat, while the sandwich lunch allows only 15 grams of fat.

Thus, even if you down two sandwiches, two glasses of non-fat milk and two apples, you still have ingested just half the fat encountered on the plate of nachos

There is more to this story:

Hackman's demonstration would not be complete without noting that one bottle of imported beer, plus the plate of nachos, may only stimulate the saliva glands for more.

Worse, it probably will fail to fill the tummy.

UNLESS HACKMAN misses her guess, therefore, the result will be another trip to the microwave for a second dose.

"So this time, let's shoot the works," she says, adding one-fourth cup of guacamole (95 calories) and as much sour cream (125 calories).

The mess provides 78.9 grams of fat, comprising 65 percent of the calories — more than double the 30 percent limit recommended by the American Heart Association.

Carbohydrates: Simple or complex

Hearst News Service

Carbohydrates are compounds of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen that are the sugars found in plants and animals.

Simple carbohydrates are the sugars fructose (from fruit), sucrose (table sugar from sugar beets or ane), maltose (from the malt of grains, usually barley) and lactose (from milk).

They are made of one or only a very few molecules and are known for their ability to move quickly from the gut into the bloodstream, where, as glucose (blood sugar), they are humankind's most efficient fuel.

Sweet foods such as fruit may be thick in simple sugars, but when inested with the whole food they also bring along fiber — skins and pulp — and nutrients such as minerals and vitamins.

Complex carbohydrates, on the other hand, are simple sugars strung chemically together in long chains. They, too, provide the stuff of man's most efficient fuel, blood glucose, but first must be broken aprt by gastric and intestinal juices to reveal the simple sugars. Only then can they move into the bloodstream.

Examples of so-called "starchy" foods that provide the complex carbohydrate supply include potatoes, grains (including oats, wheat and rice), beans and peas, and root, leaf and flower vegetables (from parsnips, beets and carrots through cauliflower and broccoli to lettuce and spinach).

Starches are made mostly of simple and complex carbohydrates, fiber and water.

Foods containing starch also contain fat and protein.

For exampie, the starch refined from corn — cornstarch — gets almost 100 percent of its caloric punch fom carbohydrates, but it does contain traces of fat and protein.

Of the caloric punch in unrefined corn-on-the-cob, by comparison, 12 percent comes from protein and 8 percent from fat.

In cheddar cheese, a dairy-fat product, three-fourths of its caloric power comes from fat, while no more than 2 percent comes from carbohydrates.

Fruit, vegetable salad marinated in juice

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

When you serve this salad, use a slotted spoon to remove the fruits and vegetables from the marinade. Reserve the remaining marinade and use it as a dressing for other salads of fruit with greens.

CITRUS-VEGETABLE SALAD
3 small grapefruit, peeled
3 oranges, peeled
1 medium cucumber, thinly sliced
1 small onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings
2 avocados, seeded, peeled and sliced
Orange juice
⅔ cup wine vinegar
⅓ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Lettuce

Section grapefruit and oranges over a small bowl to catch juices; reserve juices.

In a large bowl combine citrus sections, cucumber, onion and avocado slices. Measure reserved fruit juices; add orange juice to make 1 cup.

Combine juice mixture, vinegar, sugar, salt and pepper; pour over fruit. Cover and marinate in refrigerator for 2 to 3 hours.

At serving time, use a slotted spoon to remove fruit from marinade. Arrange on lettuce-lined plates. Drizzle some marinade over each salad. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Future foods may include guilt-free chocolate cake

NEW YORK (AP) — Gene-splicing may soon produce lettuce that fights disease, peaches that don't grow on trees, or perhaps most important — calorie-free chocolate cake.

"Can you imagine what the public demand for these products will be?" asked Sanford Miller, director of the Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Laboratories using gene-splicing have been able to create chocolate cake and ice cream that taste exactly like the real thing but contain few calories, Miller said recently at a conference on food safety and nutrition sponsored by the FDA and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Eventually, he said, the technology could produce foods with all the tastes, textures and odors of the originals, but zero calories — "the ultimate anorectic food. You eat it and you're satisfied, and you starve to death with a smile on your face."

Gene-splicing, the technology that allows scientists to put the traits of one organism into another, also may produce lettuce that combats viral illnesses, or corn that can be grown underground. Or it may produce peaches from something other than a peach tree.

"As an efficient way to grow peaches, (trees are) not very good. Not when we can take tissue and plant them as close together as corn plants and grow peaches on them," said John F. Fulkerson, principal scientist of the USDA's Cooperative State Research Service.

Both Miller and Fulkerson said gene-splicing would change basic assumptions about what food should be.

Although the technology to produce such things is developing rapidly, it may be a long time before the future foods are in the supermarket, Miller said. It also will be hard to tell if the high-tech food is safe.

"The traditional ways we deal with such issues don't work," Miller said. "The traditional way of looking at the components of a product doesn't tell you the whole is safe."

When the FDA tests the safety of food additives, it generally feeds enormous doses to animals. But gene-altered foods must be tested in their entirety, and it would be impossible for animals to eat the required amount.

So the FDA is turning to computer models and chemical analysis, Miller said.

Miller said new ways of testing food safety were needed soon, because such high-tech creations are not far away.

"There is a compound that is being worked on by Proctor & Gamble that can replace fat in the diet," he said. "The few experimental things I've seen are unbelievable. The stuff isn't absorbed."

Gene-splicing might be used to create new species of shellfish that can survive in waters far from the ocean — "so they can have fresh oysters in Minneapolis," Miller said.

Genetically modified plants can be made pest and drought resistant. And one company is nearly ready to field test a genetically engineered bacteria designed to protect corn from root pests.

Slaw made with cauliflower

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

There's no rule that says slaw must be made with cabbage. Cauliflower tastes equally good with a coleslaw-type dressing.

CAULIFLOWER SLAW
4 cups cauliflower flowerets (1 small head)
½ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped onion
⅔ cup dairy sour cream
3 tablespoons mayonnaise or salad dressing
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon snipped fresh dill or 1 teaspoon dried dillweed
Few drops bottled hot pepper sauce
2 medium tomatoes, seeded and chopped

In large bowl combine cauliflower, green pepper and onion. Stir together sour cream, mayonnaise, mustard, sugar, dill and hot pepper sauce. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Gently stir dressing into vegetable mixture. Cover and chill several hours. Just before serving, carefully stir in tomato. Makes 10 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 83 cal., 2 g pro., 5 g carbo., 7 g fat, 9 mg chol., 41 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 70 percent vit. C.

Gravy not just for meat-and-potatoes anymore

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

If you think gravy is a thing reserved only for the meat-and-potatoes set, think again. Sure, lots of people think of gravy only in terms of a meat-and-potatoes meal, but vegetarians know better.

Surprising as it may seem to our non-vegetarian friends, gravy need not contain any meat, and it can certainly accompany a good many foods besides meat.

Use a luscious gravy to add flavor appeal to a variety of meatless meals: serve over soy burgers, lentil or nut loaves, rice, noodles, baked potatoes, whole wheat toast points, steamed vegetables — whatever suits your fancy.

Instead of a meat base, vegetarian gravy may use ground nuts, as in Blender Cashew Gravy (recipe follows). Or it may start with a simple roux (the fancy French name for a mixture of butter and flour). Blend in liquid and you've got a creamy white sauce, which can be the basis for a number of different gravies.

To make a roux, start with equal amounts of butter and flour (about two to three tablespoons each, to serve four). Melt the butter in a heavy saucepan over a low flame, then blend in flour with a wooden spoon. Cook, stirring constantly, about three minutes, then remove from heat and blend in liquid (one to one and one-half cups of milk, vegetable stock, water, or a combination). Beat with a wire whisk until smooth and return to burner. Simmer, stirring frequently, until sauce is thickened. Season with salt and pepper.

In general, gravies are creamy, calorie-laden sauces which are definitely out-of-bounds for dieters. If you'd like to cut down on SOME of the calories in Creamy Mushroom Gravy, substitute half of the sour cream with plain, low-fat yogurt. But if you're not particularly watching your weight, go ahead and indulge. A heaping spoonful of rich gravy can add a finishing gourmet touch to an otherwise uninteresting meal.

HERBED GRAVY ROSALYN

1 cup chopped onion
¼ cup butter or margarine
½ cup flour
2½ cups milk
2 tablespoons minced fresh parsley
2 teaspoons soy sauce
¼ teaspoon each crumbled dried thyme and salt
Dash ground oregano
Pepper to taste

Saute onions in butter until soft. Stir in flour, blending with a little milk, to make a thick paste.

Blend in remaining milk, a little at a time, stirring constantly. Stir in remaining ingredients and simmer over low heat, stirring frequently, until gravy thickens.

BLENDER CASHEW GRAVY

1½ cups water
½ cup milk
½ cup raw cashews
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 tablespoon sesame oil
Dash ground black pepper

Combine all ingredients in container of blender. Cover and process until thoroughly blended and smooth.

Turn mixture into medium saucepan. Cook over medium-low heat, stirring constantly, until gravy thickens, about 5 minutes.

CREAMY MUSHROOM GRAVY

¼ pound fresh mushrooms
1½ tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 cup sour cream
¼ teaspoon each ground white pepper and dried dill weed
Dash each garlic salt and paprika

Wash mushrooms and pat dry; chop coarsely. Set aside.

Melt butter in medium saucepan. Saute minced onion just until translucent, then add mushrooms and cook over medium-low heat, stirring frequently, about 5 minutes.

Stir in remaining ingredients and simmer gently 3 to 5 minutes longer, to heat through. Do not boil.

SAVORY YEAST GRAVY

¼ cup butter or margarine
½ cup minced onion
1 small clove garlic, minced
3 tablespoons flaked nutritional yeast
1 teaspoon soy sauce
¼ teaspoon each dried savory and thyme
¼ teaspoon each salt and pepper
1 tablespoon tomato paste
1½ cups hot vegetable stock

Melt butter in medium-size heavy saucepan. Add onion and garlic and saute until golden, about 5 minutes.

Blend in flour and nutritional yeast, stirring with wooden spoon to make a thick paste. Add soy sauce, savory, thyme, salt and pepper, stirring well, then blend in tomato paste.

Slowly blend in hot vegetable stock, beating with a wire whisk until smooth. Continue cooking over medium heat, stirring frequently, until sauce thickens.

Tokens used in place of small change

Copley News Service

England experienced a shortage of small change in the middle of the 17th century.

This gave rise to the issuance of unofficial tokens by local tradesmen and others.

Use of such tokens was forbidden in 1672.

Platinum high-tech

Copley News Service

Only about 2 percent of the platinum used in the United States goes into the manufacture of jewelry.

Platinum is foremost a high-technology metal, much harder and denser than gold or silver and with a higher melting point.

DEAR ABBY

Man becomes lion in car

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a sweet, considerate, gentle, loving man — until he gets behind the wheel of a car. Then his personality changes completely, and he turns into an angry, hostile, raving lunatic. He finds fault with other drivers, cursing them out and calling them stupid (and worse) even when he himself is at fault. If I try to calm him down, he pulls over to the side and demands that I drive. I don't want to drive; I just want to go places with him without having it end up in a quarrel. We've been married for nearly 40 years and he's always been this way.

Abby, what makes a gentle, loving man turn so mean and hostile when he gets behind the wheel of an automobile? — TRULY CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: Psychiatrists have heard this complaint often. Their responses have been various versions of the following: "Your husband is frustrated either in his work or personal life, but is unable or unwilling to express it, so he releases all his pent-up rage and anger at other drivers.

"Some men with unconscious doubts about their own masculinity use this means of exhibiting their masculinity by driving overaggressively and cursing out those in their way."

Since this has been a lifelong problem, perhaps during one of his "gentle and loving" moods, you can persuade him to seek counseling. When he understands the reason for his belligerent and unsettling behavior, it may help him to change.

DEAR ABBY: Add me to your list of "I never thought it could happen to me": My husband and I have been happily married for 10 years. We've had our ups and downs, but consider our marriage to be one of the better ones. We decided long ago that we did not want children. Not because we thought we wouldn't be good parents, but because there is so much wrong with the world.

Last week I learned that I am pregnant — an accident, for sure. Now my kind, considerate, sensitive husband has gone completely berserk and informed me that if I don't have an abortion immediately, there will be a divorce. I am morally opposed to abortion and he knows it. He insists that he does not want this child, and I could not give it up. It's either him or the baby.

I am 32 and he is 34. Our home is paid for and we have money in the bank, so it's not that we can't afford it. I am heartbroken to think that this wonderful life growing inside me is unwanted and unloved by one of its creators.

— HURTING IN FORT WORTH

DEAR HURTING: If you must make a choice, choose the baby. Hold your ground. I'm betting that your husband will change his mind once the baby is born. And if he doesn't, in my judgment, you'll still have made the better choice.

DEAR ABBY: The woman who bought the story that her husband had an affair out of pity for the poor girl she caught him with should wake up! Against my better judgment, I gave in to the relentless pursuit of an "unhappily" married man. After the little woman found out, he told her he only did it because he felt sorry for me!

I found this amusing because I weigh 80 pounds less than his wife, have a better job, make more money, my stocks are doing well, I drive a Mercedes, I'm well-educated, good-looking and popular. I guess my pathetic circumstances must have really tugged at his heartstrings. I was so pitiful I mistook his eagerness to get me to bed for mad passion, when all he was concerned about was my getting my proper rest. What a saint!

Ladies, let's keep the pity where it belongs — with the liars who can't tell the truth to save their own marriages. These guys feel sorry for themselves, not the little cookies they chase after. Sign me ... MESA "CHARITY CASE"

DEAR "CHARITY CASE": Beautiful.

'You've Got it Made' with make-ahead and freeze meals

By VERNE PALMER
Copley News Service

"You've Got It Made;" by Marina Burros (Pocket Books, $7.95).

A number of years ago Marian Burros, former food editor at The Washington Post and current food writer for The New York Times, took a look at eating in America and drew a pair of conclusions.

One was that the growing consumer dependence on prepackaged foods and seasonings was unhealthful, excessively expensive, unnecessary and, in the end, wasn't saving anybody any time.

The second was that two-career households were making entertaining increasingly difficult — if not impossible — and something needed to be done about it.

The result of these conclusions was a succession of books — "Pure and Simple," "Keep It Simple," etc. — of which "You've Got It Made" is merely the most recent (and probably not the last).

The focus of this most recent effort is on make-ahead family meals and cooperative dinner parties — both featuring streamlined recipes made with "from-scratch" foods.

The family-meals half of the book offers a selection of make-ahead-and-freeze dishes, 30-minute meals, an introduction describing how to use both most effectively, guidelines for organizing the kitchen and menus — including calorie, fat, sodium and fiber contents.

The cooperative-dinners half provides an introduction to how this novel social experiment works, as well as cross-referenced menus and recipes.

A sample menu — a spring, 30-minute meal for two — follows:

BEEF WITH SCALLIONS

½ pound well-trimmed skirt or flank steak
2 teaspoons reduced sodium soy sauce
1 tablespoon dry sherry
3 tablespoons minced fresh ginger
2 bunches scallions
3 tablespoons corn oil
2 large cloves garlic

Slice flank steak on diagonal into slices less than ¼-inch thick. Mix with soy sauce and sherry. Mince ginger. Cut scallions into 1-inch pieces. Heat 2 tablespoons oil in wok or heavy skillet. Add beef mixture and ginger, put garlic through press directly into pan and stir-fry about three minutes until beef loses pink color. Remove and keep warm in serving dish. Add remaining tablespoon oil and heat. Stir-fry scallions for about 1 to 1½ minutes, until shiny. Mix with beef and serve.

Makes 2 servings.

ASPARAGUS

1 pound asparagus

Bring water to boil in steamer. Rinse asparagus and break off tough bottom stems. Steam asparagus about 10 minutes, just until crisp-tender in covered steamer.

Makes 2 servings.

Carpaccio in vogue

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Not long ago the term carpaccio automatically meant the Italian dish of thinly pounded raw beef drizzled with olive oil and garnished with Parmesan cheese and perhaps some fresh herbs. Today, however, all sorts of seafood carpaccios are in vogue, no doubt spurred by the influence of Japanese cuisine.

Raw salmon, tuna, bass and even swordfish have become popular carpaccios in New York restaurants.

STEP 1

Place a two-to-three-ounce piece of skinless, boneless salmon fillet on a flat surface over a sheet of plastic wrap. The fillet should be about two inches square. Lay another sheet of wrap over it.

STEP 2

Take any heavy flat-bottomed implement — a meat pounder, cleaver or, my preferred tool, a heavy saucepan — and pound the fillet gently but firmly. Exert pressure from the center outward as you go. Be sure not to break the flesh. Pound the fillet into a circle of roughly eight inches in diameter.

STEP 3

Remove the top layer of plastic wrap. Pick up the bottom layer of plastic wrap with the fillet in it and gently invert the fillet onto a chilled serving plate. Garnish with olive oil, herbs, salt and pepper — or to taste.

Eat yourself slim

By Shirley Bright Boody

Diets aren't just for dieters anymore. According to new surveys by a marketing and research company, fewer people "go on diets" today, because "dieting" is now considered a normal way of life and is looked upon as a significant part of maintaining a healthy lifestyle.

The analyzed eating habits of more than 5,000 people confirmed the fact that healthy non-dieters are consuming more "light" and "low-calorie" foods than the dieters the foods were meant to help. During 1984 and 1985, non-dieters consumed 58 percent of the low-calorie salad dressings, 61 percent of the diet soft drinks, 59 percent of the sugar substitutes, 64 percent of the "lite, low-calorie margarine" and 84 percent of the "lite" beer.

While low calorie is the most common American diet, with weight loss as the goal, there are growing numbers of people who are also watching their intake of fat, salt and cholesterol.

The word diet is often misused, sometimes with negative implications. Some people perceive it as a threat to their enjoyment of food, imposing all kinds of unpleasant restrictions and ordered by fiendish physicians, who seem to totally disregard it themselves.

Others become obsessed with it, fearing all manner of dire consequences of any deviations or disruptions. Diet fetishes with certain foods are not uncommon and those that are controlled by them will do almost anything to fulfill the fetish.

Diet means none of these foolish things.

Diet is described by one dictionary as "food and drink regularly provided," "habitual nourishment," "the kind and amount of food prescribed for special reason, or for special enjoyment." It's also used as the name of formal, deliberative assembly of princes or estates of various national or provincial legislatures, as in Japan.

The best way to understand the role of diet in your life, is to view it as a strong, vitally important factor in maintaining health and energy. Nothing else can do as much to either contribute to health or to destroy it. How and what you eat and drink can make you sick or well, fat or slender, energetic or lethargic, clear-skinned or blemished, clear-headed or befuddled. It's something we can all control and it's up to the individual. Fortunately, many Americans are paying much more attention to fitness and health these days.

Consumer buying habits are changing to fit a new consciousness of what ingredients are actually in the foods we eat. A recent survey found that 85 percent of all low-calorie product-users believed that such products were important to improving health.

At the same time, however, many people were also concerned with the safety of some artificial sweeteners. Some questioned the use of saccharin when aspartame has established itself as an important component in so many low-calorie foods, and why they are sometimes used together? Manufacturers countered with the fact that saccharin is still useful in many products, and when used with aspartame, better quality is assured. Currently, there is no one all-purpose, ideal sweetener that can be used for everything. Indeed, a variety of sweeteners increases the choices of low-calorie products, and each is used where it it best suited.

Papagayo Room considered 'in' place for San Francisicans in '50s

By MERLE ELLIS

It was a very special place, San Francisco in the 1950s, and one of the places that made it so was the Papagayo Room at the Fairmont Hotel. It was the "in" place to go and to be seen. Everybody went there: politicians, entertainers, prostitutes, businessmen — people from all over the world and all walks of life. It was a great place!

The people who made it great were Al and Katherine Williams, the husband and wife team who owned and operated it from 1945 to 1961. Al was born in Arizona to an American father and a Mexican mother, but spent most of his childhood with his family in Mexico City. That's where he learned to cook the fabulous Mexican food that was served at the Papagayo Room.

"Papagayo" means parrot in Spanish and the Williams had several flying free in the restaurant. There were five big ones, three small ones and a cockatoo named "Cookie." Cookie was something of a flirt with the men. She didn't like women. She was also a crook. She picked pockets. No one knows who taught her but there were speculations.

One of the parrots developed a fondness for Peggy Lee, a regular at the room. When Miss Lee would enter, the bird would leave its perch, fly across the room and sit on Peggy's shoulder.

There were all sorts of stories told about the celebrities who frequented the Papagayo Room: Jack Benny always arrived after his party was seated, strolling in with his wonderfully casual walk, so that all could enjoy his entrance. When leaving he made a point of giving the waitress a 39 cents tip, but in secret he slipped her a very generous one.

Al Williams died in 1981 at the age of 72 and in his memory his wife and partner Katherine have put together a marvelous cookbook. "Darling this is your book," she writes in dedication, "You taught me to love, to live and to cook." In addition to favorite recipes from the Papagayo Room and from the "Papagayo School of Mexican Cooking," which they taught in their Tiburon home after they retired, the book includes wonderful photos and stories of many celebrities who made San Francisco in the 50s, and the Papagayo Room in particular, very special places.

The recipes that follow are a small sampling from the "Papagayo - A Mexican Cookbook with a Taste of San Francisco" by Katherine Williams.

CARNE ASADA

2 pounds boneless top sirloin in one piece
Juice of 3 limes or lemons
Salt

Cut the meat into very thin slices against the grain. Pound slightly to spread out. Moisten with the juice and sprinkle liberally with salt. Roll up the slices so both sides are marinated. Let stand at least ½ hour.

Just before serving, unroll and broil quickly, about a minute on each side. Serve with Guacamole sauce, Enchilada Verde and Cebolla con Rajas.

ENCHILADA VERDE FOR CARNE ASADA

6 tortillas
2 cups onion, very finely diced
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 cups Salsa Verde (green sauce, recipe follows)
Oil for frying tortillas

Heat the Salsa Verde in one pan and the oil in another. Dip the tortillas in hot oil to soften, drain. Then bathe them in Salsa Verde. Fill with raw onion. Fold over or roll up. Arrange, folded side down, in a baking dish. Top with more green sauce and Parmesan cheese. Put in a 375 degree oven and bake until cheese is melted and filling heated through. Serve with Carne Asada.

CEBOLLA CON RAJAS

(Onion and Green Chili Strips)
2 large onions, cut in rings
½ cup peeled long green chilis cut in strips (rajas)
1 tablespoon lard or vegetable oil

Heat oil. Saute onions until soft. Add chilis and cook about 10 minutes more. Serve with Carne Asada.

Midland Lee's triple option wishbone attack in 1986 produced the District 4-5A traveling bell. Quarterbacks Geoff Rich, left, and Rodney Johnson display the trophy.

Reb Wishbone dream come true

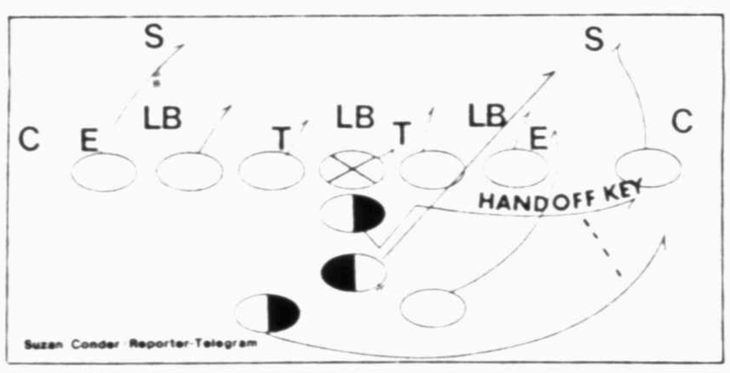
By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee is making its fourth consecutive state football playoff trip Friday and it isn't an incidental fact that the voyage began when the Rebels switched to the Wishbone offense, featuring the triple option attack.

Lee switched from a pro-style offense to the Wishbone in 1982 under Spike Dykes. Lee finished in a four-way tie for second place that year with a 7-3 record and lost out on a playoff berth in a coin flip with Midland High, Odessa High and San Angelo.

In 1983, after a year of honing the Wishbone under Dykes, the Rebels posted a 13-3 record and landed a berth in the state finals. In 1984, Lee was 12-2, advancing to the quarter-finals and last year posted a 10-3 record and a region berth, with both years under Jack Tayrien.

SINCE going to the Wishbone, Lee has recorded an awesome 50-12 (.806 percentage) record after an 8-1 start this year under new head coach Earl Miller. The Rebs will add to that record Friday when they meet Amarillo High at 8 p.m. in Lubbock's Jones Stadium.



Suzan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

It's easy to see that the moves have paid bigger dividends than mutual funds. And one constant in all this is Lee offensive coordinator Van Tom Whatley, who has held that position since Lee went to the Wishbone.

"A lot of people felt we went to the Wishbone in 1982 because Dykes came from UT (Unviersity of Texas)," notes Whatley. "That may have played a small role, but the real reason was Odessa Permian.

"We felt like if you were going to be successful in District 4-5A, you would have to beat Permian. The best way to beat them is line up in a three-back offense and whip them. You can't trick those guys. The teams that had success against Permian — like Lewisville and Trinity — ran a three-back offense.

"We also felt back then that we had a lot of running backs coming up through the system and that played a big role in the decision to go to the Wishbone."

OPPONENTS of the Wishbone say that the offense is not a good catch-up type of attack, and to a degree, Whatley agrees.

"That point can be made, but our philosophy is that Midland Lee is going to play great defense and we're not going to be playing a game where you have to come from that far behind. Lee has traditionally been a strong defensive team and you have to start with the belief that you're going to play good on defense," explained Whatley.

Because Lee has a new team almost every year, the Wishbone of 1982 isn't the same as fans are seeing in this fourth playoff year. The Lee Wishbone has seen a metamorphosis that has utilized the talent on hand.

Bill Yeoman bids farewell

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — Bill Yeoman, whose University of Houston football teams have provided fans with thrills in seasons past, is ready to give them apologies or whatever it takes to get them back in the stands.

On Tuesday, Yeoman formally announced his resignation as head coach, effective at the end of the season, when he will become special assistant to the chancellor in charge of fund raising.

"There have been some policies around here that have alienated some people and we have to go out and apologize and say how desperately we need them," Yeoman said.

"Writing letters and making telephone calls is okay, but you've got to get out there where they can chew on you and vent their feelings."

Yeoman's innovative veer option offense led the nation in total offense for three consecutive years, and Cougar fans cheered their team to four Southwest Conference titles during Yeoman's tenure.

But now the school's athletic budget is $3 million in debt, former players have accused Yeoman and his coaches of making cash payoffs, and 12 players have flunked out of school since the start of last season.

Yeoman announced Tuesday he could best serve the school in raising funds to build an athletic training facility.

"This is just one phase of the athletics picture that I have completed," Yeoman said. "If what I've read into it is true, I'll be doing the part of the athletic director's job that I like."

Houston Chancellor Richard Van Horn said Yeoman will try to raise $4.5 million to support a proposed weight training facility. Yeoman also will develop fund-raising strategies for the team's possible return to Roberston Stadium on the Houston campus.

Yeoman signed a four-year contract extending through the 1990 season.

"It's imperative that we put up some facilities that are competitive with the rest of the folks here in this state," Yeoman said. "The best thing I can do for these kids is to get out on the streets and get some financial support.

The school is conducting a nationwide search for an athletic director to replace Tom Ford, who resigned earlier this year. Ford was the school's third athletic director since Harry Fouke retired in 1979 after serving in the position for 34 years.

Attendance has declined to the point that only 10,125 fans witnessed Houston's game in the Astrodome Nov. 1 against Texas Christian.

It was the smallest Houston crowd in 22 years of playing in the Astrodome.

The Cougars averaged 39,253 for five home games in 1979. The figure dropped to 23,634 last year and has fallen to 16,727 for four home games this season.

Pittman picks Kentucky

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — John Pittman, a 7-foot-1, 260-pound basketball center from B.F. Terry High School in Rosenberg, Texas, has signed a national letter-of-intent to attend the University of Kentucky, according to his coach, Fletcher Walker.

Pittman averaged 18.1 points, 13.4 rebounds and seven blocked shots a game as a junior, according to Walker. His coach said Pittman signed Southeastern Conference and national letters this morning and mailed them to Coach Eddie Sutton.

LeRon Ellis, a 6-11 center-forward from Los Angeles Mater Dei High School announced earlier that he would be attending UK. The two would give Sutton his first set of twin towers and the tallest center-forward combination at Kentucky since 7-1 Sam Bowie and 6-11 Melvin Turpin.

Pittman is compared to Turpin, especially concerning his appetite. Walker said Pittman loves to eat "but doesn't have an ounce of fat on him."

"I feel that during the course of our season, he'll trim back down a little, but not much because there's nothing to trim off of him," Walker added. "He's just a big kid and he's been on a tremendous weight program."

His coach said Pittman likes to dunk the ball and is "an extremely agile, coordinated kid for his size."

Surprise! Clemens gets AL Cy Young

NEW YORK (AP) — Roger Clemens of the Boston Red Sox, the top winner in the major leagues this year with 24 victories, was unanimously elected the American League's Cy Young award winner, it was announced today.

Clemens received 140 points in balloting by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America, named first on all 28 ballots cast. Ted Higuera of Milwaukee was second with 42 points, and MikeWitt of California finished third with 35.

Only two other AL pitchers have won the award unanimously, Denny McLain of the Tigers in 1968 and Ron Guidry of the Yankees in 1978.

Clemens was 24-4 this season with a 2.48 earned run average, tops in the American League. He won his first 14 decisions of the year.

He allowed only 179 hits in 254 innings and was edged out for the strikeout lead in the final week by Seattle's Mark Langston, 245-238.

It was with a remarkable strikeout performance that Clemens put his name in the record book, striking out 20 batters in a game at Fenway Park last April 29 against the Seattle Mariners.

He was the first pitcher ever to do that in a nine-inning game, and it came in his 40th major league peformance.

Two ballots are cast by writers in each American League city. Each voter is asked to name three pitchers, with five points going for a first-place vote, three for second and one for third.

Following Witt in the balloting were New York Yankees reliever Dave Righetti, 20; Jack Morris of Detroit, 13, and reliever Mark Eichhorn of Toronto, 2.

After Clemens underwent shoulder surgery on Aug. 30, 1985, there were many questions as to whether the University of Texas star could achieve the stardom that was predicted for him.

Those questions were answered for Red Sox Manager John McNamara the night Clemens struck out 20 batters.

"I've seen no-hitters by Nolan Ryan, I've seen Mike Witt pitch a perfect game and I've seen some great games by Tom Seaver," John McNamara said. "But I've never seen a pitching performance as awesome as that, and I don't think you ever will again."

The 20 strikeouts broke the record by Tom Seaver of New York, Nolan Ryan of Chicago and Steve Carlton of St. Louis. Washington's Tom Cheney struck out 21 in 16 innings against Baltimore in 1962.

Max Oliveras to pilot Midland Angels in 1987

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Heading into its third season in Midland as the Angels, the Texas League franchise will have a new manager after the two-year reign of Joe Maddon.

Max Oliveras will take charge of the AA club for the 1987 season it was announced today by Midland General Manager Bill Davidson. Davidson also announced an oral agreement with California to bring the Angels back to Midland for at least one more year, with the possibility of a longer pact still in negotiations.

Oliveras, 37, gained his managerial experience mostly in the Mexican League and with San Juan in the Puerto Rican winter leagues beginning in 1978. Last season he skippered the Miami Marlins, an independent Class A club in the Florida State League as his first stint in the United States.

Former Midland manager Maddon, has been moved to the position of roving minor league defensive coach, making several stops in Midland in the coming season.

After success in the Rookie Northwest League and in Class A's Midwest League, Maddon's two-year record in the Texas League was an undistinguished 120-147 as the Angels struggled with inexperienced pitching for two seasons. In his best finish, Maddon brought Midland withing 1½ games of the first half title in the Western Division in 1986.

Oliveras, like Maddon before him, brings a winning record from everywhere he has been. In three years in the minors, his lifetime record is 211-169 for a winning percentage of .555.

With the Marlins in 1986, Oliveras' record was 74-66, gaining the attention of Angels' personnel director Bill Bavasi, among others.

Oliveras spent seven years in the minor leagues, after being signed by the Red Sox in 1969. In 1974, Oliveras played in Shreveport of the Texas League, making a stop in Midland.

"I hope to make the best of the opportunity in Midland," Oliveras said. "I was very excited when Bill Bavasi offered me the position. From what I remember as a player, Midland is a hitters' park and I like to run as a manager. Hit and run, steal, advance runners along — we should have plenty of offense."

Joining Oliveras as pitching coach will be Chuck Hernandez, the pitching instructor at the Angels' Palm Springs affiliate in 1986. Hernandez, 26, begins his second season with the California organization after an elbow injury cut short a promising career in 1983.

TED BATTLES

Raiders, nothing phases 'em

At the bewitching hour the subterranean cage doors are flung open and they emerge from the runway for pregame warmups to a chorus of boos, sweet music to their villainous ears.

As they insolently trot on to the field, they look like something spewn up from 50 fathoms.

The uniforms are apt, the tattletale silver pants and the jersies reaking of soot. Only the Los Angeles Raiders could make even black look dirty. And only the refugees from Oakland, California's rebuttal to Newark, Cleveland and Buffalo, could, by comparison, cast Darth Vader in the role of matinee idol.

REVERED only in the LaBrea Tarpits, the Raiders are known for their terror tactics. This is a team with a reputation for frightening opponents into defeat.

Boos are the first mistake opposing fans make. It makes the Raiders feel at home.

But Sunday, it was obvious that nothing could save them, neither the hoots and catcalls nor their evil reputation could spare them from a deserved whipping. The Good Guys wearing the stars were taking it to them. To hear the fans, you'd have thought you were at a wrestling match.

Even Paul Hackett, the Cowboys' offensive genius, felt, "The Raiders knew they were beaten in that first half. You could see it. They'd given up hope."

THE COWBOYS, riding an emotional wave, stormed goalward on their first possession to score quickly and seven times in the first half would pierce the Raiders' 20 yard line. Dallas would score four touchdowns, well the fourth was so close it was a gimme. No matter that only one counted. There were plenty more where that came from.

Only the most discerning would sense early trouble and it came on that first drive when instead of the touchdown after reaching the three, Dallas settled for a field goal. The culprit was tackle Mark Tuinei, holding.

For all of their vaunted defensive intimidation, the Raiders never came close to stopping Dallas. That was a task that belonged to the Cowboys, who limped off the field, their feet shot full of holes—penalties, interceptions, fumbles, missed field goals.

IT REALLY wouldn't have made any difference. Despite the Cowboys' inability to get the gun out of the holster, the Raiders were not going anywhere. Quarterback Marc Wilson's demeanor was that of some-

Oilers grease Islanders

Associated Press

Special things are expected from the Edmonton Oilers and New York Islanders when they tangle. Usually, the teams which combined to win six Stanley Cups in this decade do their best to satisfy the customers.

The Oilers and Islanders did just that Tuesday night, with Edmonton collecting a 3-2 victory on Glenn Anderson's overtime goal. The loss snapped a six-game home winning streak for the Islanders, who have lost only in regular-season play to the Oilers at Nassau Coliseum.

The game was reminiscent of the teams' playoff encounters — a six-game series in 1981 in the Stanley Cup quarterfinals, and meetings in the finals in 1983 and '84, which they split.

The Oilers had most of the flow in the third period and overtime, but the Islanders weren't exactly overwhelmed. Edmonton twice held one-goal leads on scores by Esa Tikkanen and Paul Coffey on a power play. But New York's Patrick Flatley and Pat LaFontaine brought their team back each time.

Kings 4, Jets 3

Marcel Dionne's second goal of the night, with 7:19 to go, was the winner and snapped a four-game Jets winning streak. Dionne led a 3-on-2 break, then put a 30-foot shot past rookie goalie Daniel Berthiaume, who entered the game with three straight wins and a 1.33 goals-against average.

North Stars 2, Capitals 2

Red-hot Dino Ciccarelli scored a pair of power-play goals, giving him a league-high 20 goals and 13 on power plays. But Washington's Alan Haworth also scored twice as the two teams played to a standoff.

Flames 5, Canucks 3

Carey Wilson had two goals, while rookies Brian Bradley and Gary Roberts also scored for the Flames' sixth straight victory. The win continued their home-ice domination over Vancouver. The Canucks have never won in the Olympic Saddledome and have not beaten Calgary here since Dec. 16, 1982.

Skipper Conner looks to wind, Stars & Stripes

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — Dennis Conner remains convinced that if the wind blows, Stars & Stripes will win back the America's Cup for the United States.

He made the prediction today after Stars & Stripes, sailing for San Diego Yacht Club, was upset by Canada II, skippered by Terry Nielsen, in the next-to-final day of the second round robin of the challenger trials. The margin of victory was 29 seconds.

Conner, who boat dropped from third to fourth position among the 12 challengers, said, "If it (the wind) blows, we win the Cup. If it is light, we don't.

"I believe we have a heckuva of a chance to win the Cup if the winds are between 15 to 30 knots. If the winds continue at nine knots, then we're dead.

"The boat was designed for the historical heavy winds that hit Fremantle. If the average winds prevail, we should be right up there."

Conner pointed out that when the winds has been heavy Stars & Stripes has defeated its opponents by big margins.

Gooden wants testing

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden, sensitive to rumors that he might be involved with drugs, says he will ask for a drug testing clause in his next contract.

Gooden, the National League's Cy Young Award winner in 1985, told the Tampa Tribune in an article published Tuesday that he has never taken drugs and does not have a problem with alcohol either.

"Beer is what I drink and not much of that," said Gooden, who posted a 17-6 regular season record in 1986. "Wine makes me sick. Drugs? No. I never use them and I never will."

Gooden made front-page news in two New York tabloids, the Post and the Daily News, on Tuesday with stories that his marriage next weekend had been called off and that he was the father of an 8-month old son.

The News quoted Gooden's father, Dan, as saying the child was named Dwight Jr. and baby's mother was not Charlene Pearson, the woman he reportedly was to marry next Saturday.

The Post said the baby was born at the Humana and Women's Hospital in Tampa on March 8.

Gooden's Mets' teammates said the pitcher and Pearson had an argument the night the team won the World Series.

The elder Gooden denied that a wedding had been planned.

"She made it all up," said Gooden's father.

Gooden told Tribune Sports Editor Tom McEwen that he has asked his agent, Jim Neader, to request a drug testing clause in his new contract with the Mets.

"It can be for a test every week, every two days, as often as they want and it can be forever," Gooden said in an interview conducted at the Tampa home he shares in the off-season with his parents and 8-month-old son, Dwight, Jr.

The latest wave of rumors began after Gooden started four games in postseason play without winning any of them. the Mets star also did not show up for a ticker-tape parade given the team after it won the World Series.

Gooden, who will turn 22 years old Sunday, said the rumors began during a mid-season slump that saw him lose four straight decisions.

"People think I am 35 years old, I guess. If something goes wrong, the talk starts," Gooden said. "That is the reason for the drug clause I want in a contract I hope will be for two or three years."

The right-hander lost the first game of the National League Championship Series 1-0 to the Houston Astros. He started a second game against the Astros but was not involved in the decision.

The Boston Red Sox hit Gooden hard in the World Series and beat him twice.

"As I look back, I realize I was throwing and not pitching," Gooden said. "If I had it to do over, I would relax more. I think that was it. Now, I think back about this pitch to (Jim) Rice or that pitch to (Marty) Barrett.

"Overall what was happening was I was missing location. And I never got into a steady rhythm," he added.

Raiders cancel 'game' at Chap

From Staff Reports

Tonight's scheduled Texas Tech Black and Red basketball scrimmage at the Chaparral Center tonight has been cancelled, which means the Red Raiders probably won't win the Southwest Conference title this year. At least, in the minds of the superstitious.

Myers said unexpected demands on time—apparently a hot recruit—has disrupted the preseason practice schedule and Tech has a game with Poland coming up next week.

Tech scrimmaged at the Chap Center the last two seasons and both years were surprise winners of the SWC.

Jazz harp on Mavericks

Associated Press

Comebacks were the order of the night in the NBA, and Philadelphia and Utah provided the long and the short of it.

The 76ers rallied to beat Seattle 121-114 after trailing 87-60 in the third quarter. The Jazz, meanwhile, squeezed past Dallas 104-103 after being down 101-94 with just 28 seconds remaining.

"This was the greatest comeback victory I've ever been associated with," Utah Coach Frank Layden said. "We may have come back from a bigger deficit to win, but not this kind of a comeback in such a short time."

Darrell Griffith hit two three-point goals in the final seven seconds, the second one at the buzzer after Rickey Green intercepted an inbounds pass.

At Seattle, backup forward Cliff Robinson led the Philadelphia comeback by scoring 27 of his 35 points in the second half.

"At the end there, we, of course, wanted it to go to Darrell, but we didn't think we'd have a chance to get it to him," Layden said of the last-gasp victory over Dallas. "But when Rickey pulled down the pass, that's the first thing he did. He fired it to Darrell and the game was over."

Rolando Blackman, who led Dallas with 23 points, gave the Mavericks their seven-point lead with 28 seconds remaining. Karl Malone, who had 23 points and 15 rebounds for Utah, got a dunk before Griffith's first three-pointer made it 111-109 with seven seconds to go.

NBA

76ers 121, Sonics 114

Robinson, who played only 24 minutes, scored 16 points in the third quarter, leading a 27-5 streak in the final 7:07 of the period.

Bulls 112, Hawks 110

Chicago handed Atlanta, the last undefeated team in the NBA, its first loss as Michael Jordan scored 34 points, including a crucial jumper with 19 seconds left.

Kevin Willis hit three straight baskets to cut a seven-point Bulls lead to 109-108 with 40 seconds remaining. But Jordan, with three defenders on him, got away for his important basket 21 seconds later.

Nets 114, Celtics 110

Albert King and Mike Gminski, switched from starting to backup roles last week, scored 22 and 20 points, respectively, as New Jersey fought off a Boston rally to snap a four-game losing streak.

The Nets led by as many as 16 points late in the third quarter, but the Celtics rallied behind Larry Bird and Kevin McHale, who both had 32 points and 14 rebounds.

Rockets 116, Spurs 95

Akeem Olajuwon had 13 of his 21 points and 11 of his 18 rebounds in the first half as Houston broke away to a 12-point halftime lead en route to victory over San Antonio.

The Spurs had just nine shots and 19 points in the second period as the Rockets extended a one-point lead to 53-41. Robert Reid then helped Houston open a 20-point advantage in the third quarter with 12 of his 16 points.

Bucks 102, Pacers 94

Ricky Pierce scored all 15 of Milwaukee's points in the last five minutes of a comeback victory over Indiana.

Clippers 115, Nuggets 112

Mike Woodson scored 23 points and Benoit Benjamin 22 for Los Angeles against Denver.

Alex English, who led all scorers with 32 points, hit two free throws to tie the score at 109-109 with 1:12 left. But a dunk by Benjamin and two free throws by Woodson put the Clippers back in front, and they survived a three-point goal by Bill Hanzlik.

Knicks 111, Suns 105

Gerald Wilkins scored 23 points, including a crucial three-point play late in the game, as New York tripped Phoenix.

The Suns, with Larry Nance getting seven of his 26 points, scored 11 straight points, to cut a 17-point deficit to 97-91 with five minutes left. But Wilkins, who was 10-for-12 from the field, and rookie Kenny Walker followed with three-point play as the Knicks reopened their advantage to 12.

Kings 119, Cavaliers 114

Brook Steppe scored 10 of his 14 points in the fourth quarter, including a 12-footer with 1:34 left that put Sacramento ahead to stay against Cleveland.

Trail Blazers 126, Warriors 108

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 29 points and Steve Johnson added 22 points and 11 rebounds as Portland routed Golden State.

Schramm complains about NFL officiating

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys President Tex Schramm, an outspoken advocate of instant replay to correct NFL officials' mistakes, said Tuesday he's beginning to wonder if his team is getting a fair shake from the men in striped shirts.

Penalties have figured prominently in the Cowboys' last two losses to the New York Giants and Los Angeles Raiders.

Two holding calls killed the Cowboys' final drive in a 17-14 loss to the Giants and officials called back two touchdowns in Dallas' 17-13 loss to the Los Angeles Raiders on Sunday.

Schramm said the officials seem to be "very conscious of the color of our jersies."

He said the calls in Sunday's game against Dallas appeared to be correct, but added that rules infractions "haven't been called the same way on both sides."

Schramm said their may be a "subconscious" dislike of the Cowboys by some officials.

"They're humans," Schramm said. "There is no in-between with the Cowboys because of our visibility and success. You either like them or you don't. There might be some resentment because of our image or success."

Schramm said he couldn't remember two games back-to-back where the Cowboys were hit with "disastrous calls."

"They say those things even up and we should have a hell of a second half of the season if they do," Schramm said.

Schramm defended the instant replay system, saying "complaints are down. We've taken the pressure off the officials."

Bobby Layne may leave hospital

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Former Detroit Lions quarterback Bobby Layne likely will be released from a hospital Wednesday, a spokeswoman said.

Layne, who led the Lions to NFL titles in 1952, 1953 and 1957, was hospitalized for a third day Tuesday at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, spokeswoman Madge Lawson said.

"Mr. Layne's condition is listed as stable," she said, adding Layne was scheduled to be discharged Wednesday morning.

Layne, 59, of Lubbock, Texas, was taken to the hospital late Saturday after attending an annual dinner of former Detroit players and club officials.

Nick Kerbawy, commissioner of the Michigan Sports Hall of Fame and the Lions' general manager from 1948-58, said Layne underwent tests Monday related to a recurrent liver ailment.

Layne had undergone surgery in recent years for cancer of the tongue, nose and cheek, Kerbawy said.

Layne was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1967, five years after ending a 15-year NFL career. He played for Detroit from 1950-57 and played for the Chicago Bears, New York Bulldogs and Pittsburgh Steelers.

Layne was elected to the Michigan Sports Hall of Fame in 1966.

Steers, Mustangs eye 4A playoffs

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

For McCamey, Reagan County, Crane, Kermit Iraan and Forsan, the second season is just beginning. Each has high hopes of making a run at state playoff glory as bi-district games begin around the area Friday.

But in Districts 2-4A and 6-A, there is a bit of unfinished business to take care of Friday night.

BIG SPRING wrapped up its first playoff berth since 1953 with a heart-stopping 28-27 win over Monahans two weeks ago, and defending state champion Sweetwater copped the second spot in 2-4A last weekend. But the schedule maker has one game left on the slate for everyone but idle Pecos.

Andrews, 3-4, 3-6, will wrap up its season with a road game at Big Spring with hopes of upsetting the new district champs and evening its district mark to 4-4. Meanwhile Lamesa, 1-6, 2-7, will travel to Snyder and try to lift itself out of the cellar against the 2-5 Tigers.

The Mustangs have been inconsistent from one week to the next this season, and after a lopsided 34-0 whipping at the hands of Sweetwater, just may be ready to rebound with a season ending upset.

LAMESA, ON the other hand, have had trouble nearly all season. Coach Clyde Noonkester has coaxed just one district win out of the Tors, a slim 7-0 decision over Lake View in the second week of play.

Snyder has put together a modest two-game winning streak before running into Sweetwater and Big Spring back-to-back. And though they kept the Steers within reason, it takes a lot of effort to come back and play in that third week — just ask Midland Lee.

Fort Stockton concludes its season in a home contest with Monahans. The Loboes, who began district play with high hopes, can come away from the season with nothing more than a fine 8-2 record.

Even should Lake View stun Sweetwater in the final 2-4A game and leave both clubs at 5-2 in district, the Mustangs would advance because of the tie-breaking system.

In District 6-A, Garden City, fresh off a 40-0 blanking of Miles for its first win of the season, will travel to Sterling City Friday night for the season finale.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Thursday, November 13, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You find that working with your hands gives you a feeling of deep satisfaction. Devote more time to creative projects. A revelation could be the eye-opener you need to plot a better personal plan for your life. Don't think you must answer every question you are asked; answer only those queries that involve you. Loved ones will be increasingly supportive and understanding. Open new lines of communication.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Actor Richard Mulligan, actor-commentator Alexander Scourby, founder of the famed Players Club Edwin Booth, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis, Scottish storyteller Robert Louis Stevenson, the Detroit Tigers' Dan Petry, actress Hermione Baddeley, Oklahoma politician Fred Harris, actors Jack Elam and Dack Rambo, actress Jean Seberg.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A special relationship could be under a lot of stress. A family misunderstanding may be the cause. Wait awhile before attempting to mend your fences. Others are still upset.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may be asked to act as referee in a business or family fight. If you accept, you will be drawn into no-win situation. Excessive enthusiasm could be risky in romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be faced with a tough financial or family decision. Try to take the middle position. Your social life begins to pick up.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can count on mate to allay your suspicions about a friend or business acquaintance. Singles should socialize if seeking new romance. Marital ties strengthened by something you tell loved one.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A great day to shop. Be prompt about writing letters and returning telephone calls. Plan a special evening for someone who has felt neglected.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You could find yourself the target of criticism. Protect your reputation. Seek a compromise. Do not look for shortcuts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Impulsive actions can have nerve-jarring consequences. Weigh your options very carefully before you speak or act. A small gift will have a lasting effect on romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep to a work schedule despite distractions. Neglecting your duties could prove expensive or embarrassing. Protect yourself in the clinches. Avoid making promises.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your private life could seem more complicated than ever. Spend some time re-evaluating your priorities. Similar efforts will benefit your creative and artistic interests. Be careful not to take someone for granted.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Developments related to a financial project have you on edge. A compromise will help you avert a verbal clash. Say the right things at the appropriate time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Speaking a foreign language will serve you well in business or finance. A joint shopping trip could be an idea whose time has come.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Morning is the ideal time to tackle an academic or legal project. Your ability to compromise helps you reap new profits for past efforts. Lend a helping hand to a friend.

The bidding:

Opening lead: King of ♣

In yesterday's column we saw that counting your winners can point the way to the correct line of play. Today, we'll look to see what you can learn from counting your losers.

Even in third seat, we're not thrilled with South's decision to open four spades. Since he holds the master suit and two or three defensive tricks, there is no reason why he should not make his normal opening bid of one spade. There is just too much chance of missing a slam if you open with a preemptive bid.

West led the king of clubs, and declarer saw that it was unlikely that he could avoid losing a heart trick. To make his contract, therefore, he had to hold his trump losers to one.

He ruffed the heart continuation and led a low trump from hand. West won the queen and declarer still had to concede a trick to the ace of trumps for down one.

It was hardly a case of bad luck. Declarer needed only to do some more counting to discover the futility of his line of play. His way also was doomed to failure even if he had found a singleton ace of trumps with one of the defenders.

Declarer was missing five trumps. If either defender had a singleton ace of spades, the other would have the queen well guarded and declarer would have to lose two trump tricks. That also would be the case if trumps were 3-2. The only chance to hold the trump losers to one was to find a defender with a singleton queen. Therefore, the king of trumps from hand was the right play, and it would have succeeded as the cards lie.

Third woman given artifical heart

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A 28-year-old woman underwent surgery Tuesday to receive an artificial heart, nearly a month after the death of the first woman to use a mini-Jarvik, a hospital spokesman said.

Doctors at Abbott Northwestern Hospital began implant surgery on the Minot, N.D., woman about 6 p.m., said hospital spokesman Mark Dixon. He gave no further details about the woman or the operation.

The first woman to receive a Jarvik-70 artificial heart, a scaled-down model of the Jarvik-7, also was operated on at Abbott Northwestern. Mary Lund, 40, of Kensington, died Oct. 14 as an apparent result of the viral infection that had caused her own heart to fail, doctors said.

She received the mini-Jarvik on Dec. 18, one day after she was hospitalized with her own heart severely damaged by a sudden viral infection. She previously had no history of heart trouble.

On Jan. 31, Mrs. Lund received the heart of a 14-year-old girl who died after suffering an epileptic seizure. The transplant was successful, but Mrs. Lund's vital organs were apparently seriously weakened by the original infection, doctors said.

On Oct. 11, the second woman to receive an artificial heart, Bernadette Chayrez, died in Phoenix.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Priscilla Presley of television's "Dallas" is expecting her second child, she and her fiance announced.

Appearing with Ms. Presley and Marco Garibaldi, a Brazilian writer-director, at the announcement Tuesday was Ms. Presley's daughter, Lisa Marie Presley, 18, who said, "I am very excited and happy for both my mother and Marco."

Ms. Presley, former wife of Elvis Presley, said the child is expected early next year.

Jenna Wade, the character Ms. Presley plays on CBS-TV's "Dallas," is also pregnant — with the child of Bobby Ewing, played by Patrick Duffy.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Judds, country music's mother-daughter duo, say they'll star in a half-hour situation comedy pilot.

Namoi, 40, and daughter Wynonna, 22, said Tuesday the show will revolve around their real-life experiences as a mother who has a 22-year-old singing daughter and an 18-year-old non-singing daughter. The family, minus a father, leaves Kentucky for a big city.

The Judds lived in Kentucky before moving to Southern California, then back to Kentucky and eventually to Nashville.

They are known for their country hits "Mama, He's Crazy," "Why Not Me" and "Rockin' With the Rhythm."

The pilot, their first acting experience, has not been sold to a network and probably will be taped in the spring, spokesman Chuck Thompson said.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Jack "Murph the Surf" Murphy, a former surfing champion who gained parole after 21 years in prison, is taking up preaching and going on the campus lecture circuit.

Murphy

Murphy, 49, gained international notoriety with the 1964 heist of the 563-carat Star of India sapphire from the Museum of Natural History in New York.

He was paroled Monday on two life sentences for murder, and said at a news conference Tuesday his past was "like an old movie that we saw years and years ago. It doesn't seem real, doesn't seem like anybody that I really knew."

He said he plans a lay prison ministry, will go on the campus lecture circuit at $2,500 an engagement, and plans to sell his paintings.

He has been living at a work-release halfway house for 23 months.

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Sydney Biddle Barrows, New York's "Mayflower Madam," told about 500 University of Georgia students that some of her relatives reacted to her arrest with praise for her business acumen.

Ms. Barrows, on tour to promote her book, "The Mayflower Madam: The Secret Life of Sydney Biddle Barrows," said her mother was saddened by her arrest but that more distant relatives described her "as the only Biddle in a generation that made money."

Ms. Barrows, 34, who traces some of her ancestors to the Mayflower, was arrested in 1984 and charged with running an escort service in New York staffed by $200-an-hour call girls. She told the students she never was involved in escorting clients, but worked strictly in management.

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (AP) — Former Interior secretary Cecil Andrus, who in January will return to his old job as governor, literally extended an olive branch in an offer to calm political bickering.

"The naysayers tell you that partisanship always gets in the way of progress. I don't accept that," Andrus, a Democrat, said in a speech to members of the Republican-dominated Legislature.

Andrus was elected governor in 1970 and 1974 before resigning in 1977 to become Interior secretary under President Jimmy Carter. He won another four-year term last week over Republican Lt. Gov. David Leroy.

Andrus promised during the campaign to present an olive branch from a tree in his backyard to the Legislature when it convenes in January, but said Monday night that he couldn't wait.

PITMAN, N.J. (AP) — Rock superstar Bruce Springsteen, who sings of troubled working-class America and recently tried to save a factory in his home town, may have delayed layoffs at a record plant just by releasing a new album.

The rush by fans to buy Springsteen's new five-record set of concert performances has prompted stepped-up production at the CBS Records Inc. factory here, where 300 layoffs have been scheduled for next month.

The plant, which made 350,000 copies of "Bruce Springsteen & the E Street Band Live 1975-85" during the last six weeks, got word Monday to crank out 200,000 more, said production manager Wally Martin.

"I've never seen anything like this," Martin said. "There is no doubt that the impact will take some major decision-making in New York."

CBS announced earlier this year that 300 of the plant's 700 employees would be laid off in December and the factory would be retooled to produce compact discs. The company said it expects to hire 300 workers when the renovations are completed in 1988.

NEW YORK (AP) — Phil Donahue, going without an audience for one of the few times in his daytime TV career, took a camera crew into an AIDS ward for his Thursday program.

"These patients are not physically capable of coming to the studio," Donahue said Tuesday. "We, in effect, go from room to room."

The program, which Donahue characterized as "very grim," was taped at the Spellman Center for Persons with AIDS, established by the Roman Catholic archdiocese at St. Clare's Hospital & Health Center in midtown Manhattan.

The center, named for the late Cardinal Francis Spellman, is a 40-bed unit that was opened a year ago. The staff volunteers for duty in the AIDS center, and receives no extra pay, said Virginia Stuart, community relations director for the hospital.

Wishbone

Whatley says, "In 1982, the Wishbone was an experimental deal for us, but we liked it because it gave us flexibility in dealing with the personnel we had.

"In 1983, our Wishbone was fullback oriented, a power-type offense. Isaac Garnett, who is now the fullback at Texas Tech, was ideally suited for that approach to the Wishbone.

"In 1984, our emphasis changed to more of an option attack with Walter (Jones) and Tyrone (Thurman). Dirk Bergoon was also a small quarterback who could run the option well. The quarterback situation and speed behind him gave us a different look as a team.

"Both this year and last year we have moved to the pure triple option because of quarterbacks Tuey Rankin and Rodney Johnson. Tuey and Rodney were able to read the option much better and we've had good runners behind them."

STILL, the 1985 version of the Wishbone is different from the one being used this year. Entering his first year at the Lee helm, Miller was concerned by the fact that teams were more and more throwing up eight and nine man fronts against the Rebels. He wanted an attack that would make the defense respect the option more.

"What we've done this year with an inexperienced line and a quarterback who can throw is to go with more one-back sets to make people back off the line of scrimmage and respect our ability to pass. That doesn't mean we have to throw a lot, but you have to establish it as a threat.," said Whatley.

Miller added, "Van Tom has done a great job with the Wishbone. He understands it more than anyone I know. We sent him to New Mexico to study how they run the triple option. I'm not sure that we don't run the Wishbone better than they do, but they were doing some of the things that we wanted to look at — like the triple option and passing series."

THE MECHANICS of the Wishbone are difficult, but it puts tremendous pressure on the opposing defense.

"The thing about the Wishbone in high school is it's awfully hard to do. But if you can run it with a limited amount of errors and make one person make a mistake on defense, you have a great chance for a big play," says Whatley.

The Lee Wishbone theory is guided by a set of rules. Those rules dictate who the coaches play in certain positions.

The first rule is that your linemen must be good enough to establish the fullback as a threat. "The fullback is your first option and if people don't respect your fullback, you have a problem," notes Whatley.

The second rule is that the right back must end up with the ball on any given play, whether it's the fullback, the quarterback or trailing back, hence the idea of triple option.

"To accomplish that idea, you have to teach your backs that they are blockers first and foremost. Then you have to teach them not to be selfish. The very nature of the Wishbone says that some nights one back will get a lot of work at carrying the ball and on another night he might not. It all depends on what option the defense allows you to take.

"Thirdly, and maybe most important, is that you can't fumble the football. The options have to be executed with extreme care or you're putting the ball on the ground. You can get hurt in a hurry that way, so fundamentals is very important and we spend a lot of time running through blocking dummies and drills like that," said Whatley.

Obviously, the Wishbone is a precision-type offense and it takes several key ingredients to be effective. Again Lee has rules to make the Wishbone work and looks for players on the team that can fill the role.

Lee coaches go under the theory that your best lineman must be the center. Chris Jones if filling that role this year.

"Your center is very important to the Wishbone in this district because we face so many four-man fronts in our league. Our center is called on to over-block on the tackle a lot and he must be a good athlete to do that," said Whatley.

Line coach Ronnie Stephens added, "Few people know how difficult it is to be a center in our offense, but he has to do a great job every game and we're asking a lot of him."

The Wishbone also requires a great quarterback and a better than average fullback. "If you are weak at both positions, again, you have problems," said Whatley.

This year senior quarterback Rodney Johnson is the milk that makes the Wishbone pour. He has missed three games due to injuries, however, and junior Geoff Rich has been more than an adequate replacement.

"Rodney is probably the best (quarterback) we have ever had because he can run and he makes very few bad reads. Either way, we come out the winner," said Whatley. "Geoff doesn't have the same kind of speed, but he is very intelligent, a good passer and he makes very few mistakes. That's a plus at any position."

JOHNSON and Rich both like the wishbone attack and don't even think of asking for changes. After all, it's working.

"I like all of it," says Johnson. "The triple option dictates to the other team what you want to do. It's really hard on defenders because they never know your next move.

"The Wishbone is a difficult offense to run for a quarterback, but I started working on it in the ninth grade. I had a lot of trouble at first, but Coach Whatley has brought me along. Once you get the mechanics down, you pretty much do things by instinct from repetition."

Rich says, "You can run four or five things off one play and that's exciting for a quarterback. You have to think a lot, but you have the advantage over the defense."

Some opponents say the Wishbone isn't a passing offense, but Johnson and Rich disagree.

"If you have fast receivers, you can throw," notes Rich. "The pass surprises the defense a lot."

Johnson adds, "I think we proved we can throw the ball when we have to. We threw well against Midland High, Odessa High and Abilene Cooper."

With junior running backs Waymon Goodley, Joe Woodard, Durian Jenkins and Dennis Sterling in back of the quarterbacks, Lee has both power and speed and little else can be asked in a triple option attack.

"All are juniors and have the best ahead of them, but they give us what we want," said Whatley. "Waymon has come a long way at fullback and we were concerned in that area going into the season — not because of his lack of talent, but because of his lack of experience. Woodard, Cal (Jenkins) and Dennis all played some as sophomores and we knew they had the speed we wanted. It's a good working combination for the triple option.

"I'm not sure that we wanted Rich to play as much as he has this year, but I am sure that the pressure exposure he has had is going to help him next year. Rodney is our quarterback this year, but Rich has really helped us when he was injured."

Penn State coach Joe Paterno once said, "Great teams have great schemes." The Lee Rebels have found a scheme that works. Four consecutive playoff appearances is proof positive.

Beware, USSR study baseball

By GEORGE VECSEY
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Everybody thought Ted Turner was wacko for underwriting the Goodwill Games in Moscow last July, losing $10 million-$15 million by bringing motoball to the Western world.

Since Atlanta's own Mr. T took his celebrated dip in the Reddest Sea, the International Olympic Committee has voted to make baseball an official Olympic sport by the 1992 Summer Games.

The Russians are now busy inventing baseball at secret bases in their vast country. One would be well advised not to fly over these diamonds in the rough, but a six-year plan is under way to bring the Soviet Union the gold medal in Barcelona.

In his own instinctive way, Turner sensed that the Russians were eager to make more bonds with world sporting circles, having nothing to do with more weighty gamesmanship involving Iceland summitry and the Daniloff caper.

YES, THE Russians can surely play hardball. Now they want to play hardball. They even had a correspondent from Tass, their press agency, watching a game at Shea Stadium. What did he think of managers arguing with the umpire — defying authority and not getting three-to-five in Siberia for it? He didn't say, but presumably he was learning as much from his visit as we stooges from the capitalist press learned from the fun and games in Moscow.

One thing we noticed was that each of the satellite nations supplied a specific food — kind of like a progressive supper in a small town. Cuba's contribution was small tins of sweet, thick mango juice, displayed prominently in the bars and restaurants open to Western visitors.

Desperate for any fresh food, we toasted Fidel Castro and hoped his return supply of missiles was worth the exportation of mango juice. Now it turns out that Cuba and Nicaragua are sending coaches and players to teach Soviet athletes how to hit like Tony Perez and pitch like Dennis Martinez.

THE COLLECTIVE path does not work well in the Soviet Union — witness the wretched harvests and the haphazard trickle of goods in the stores — but when the Russians focus on a specific skill, they can do whatever they want. Witness Sputnik and Soyuz.

This nation of 285 million diverse inhabitants can pluck out willowy female volleyball players and win gold medals. They invented basketball in short order, and found 7-footers who could dribble like Magic and shoot like Bird. Their hockey team will quite likely give what-for to the National Hockey League all-stars in Quebec in February.

Even as we speak, somewhere in Kazakhstan a tutor named Roger Craigski is surely teaching a youngster named Micha Scottski to throw a split-fingered fastball. ("We also have a freight-car load of sandpaper down at the railroad depot in Alma-Ata," Craigski tells Scottski. "You don't have to use it, but it will scare the New York Mets anyway.")

Guess who comes out a winner in all this. There has been no announcement, but one can visualize Micha Scottski throwing his Sputnikball at the Kingdome in Seattle during the 1990 Goodwill Games, if Turner can pull off another one.

Joe Montana...rejuvenation in San Francisco.

Joe Montana 'heals' ailing San Francisco

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — A feeling of rejuvenation is sweeping the San Francisco 49ers, a sense that after all the injuries that have battered the former Super Bowl champs, there is still hope of coming out on top again.

Quarterback Joe Montana sparked that feeling with his rapid recovery from back surgery and his scintillating performance Sunday in a 43-17 victory over St. Louis.

Coach Bill Walsh announced that three other injured starters also are expected back soon.

Offensive tackle Bubba Paris, who had arthroscopic knee surgery on Oct. 6, will suit up for Monday night's game in Washington. Pro Bowl cornerback Ronnie Lott, nursing a stress fracture in his shin, and nose tackle Michael Carter, who has a sprained ankle, may be back in a week or two.

The 49ers are 6-3-1, just a half-game behind the Los Angeles Rams in the NFC West.

Montana's return was the best news the team has had in a long time. There was more good news on Monday — Montana woke up with no pain and no doubts he'll be playing football for a long time to come.

He didn't boast about his showing against the Cardinals — the three long touchdown passes, the timing and command he displayed.

Montana's style is low key, and he was typically rough on himself.

"I made more mental mistakes than I would've liked. Just the little dumb things," he said before going through his daily workout routine of stretching, weight lifting, and 400 sit-ups.

Networks scramble for college TV

CFA, CBS, ABC spells chaos

By MICHAEL GOODWIN
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — "Unusual" is one way to describe it. Other, more accurate possibilities are "weird," "strange" and "bizarre." Then there is the all-purpose "confusing."

A tangled web of network television contracts with college football has existed for two years, since the Supreme Court broke up the National Collegiate Athletic Association's control of television contracts. But never has the situation been so chaotic as in recent weeks, with ABC and CBS switching partners and a possibility that ABC could get most of the attractive teams and CBS could get next to nothing.

Who said college sports is not a business?

The first step came in August, when ABC announced that it had signed a $50 million, four-year deal with the Big 10 and Pacific 10 conferences, beginning next year. ABC is in the second year of a two-year contract with the College Football Association and was unable to reach agreement on a new deal.

THEN CAME CBS, which now has a contract with the Big 10 and Pac-10. When ABC took them away, CBS stepped in and signed ABC's old partner, the CFA, to a $60 million, four-year deal. The CFA is a group of about 60 schools, including Penn State, Notre Dame, the Big Eight and Southwest Athletic Conference.

At that point, the switch was neat and clean. After all, the grass is greener on the other side of the fence in television land, too. And each of the football groups got a modest increase in its television income.

Then everything got messy.

FIRST, THE Southeastern Conference approached ABC, saying it wanted an identity of its own, and tried to fashion a deal for itself. Nothing wrong with that — except that the 10 schools in the Southeastern Conference are also members of the CFA. More important, some, like Alabama, are among the most prominent members of the CFA.

The talks reached a critical stage about 10 days ago, when Dennis Swanson, the president of ABC Sports, went to Birmingham, Ala., to meet with representatives of the conference. He came back to New York believing that a deal had been agreed to in principle, with only the details to be worked out. The deal, which would have cost ABC $25 million more over four years, would have given the network the Southeastern, Big 10 and Pac-10 conferences — and virtually assured it of the No.1 ranking among networks. Why, things were so good that ABC was contemplating doubleheaders, and was even talking about a separate deal with Penn State, a perennial power. Practically enough to get CBS into showing movie reruns on Saturday afternoon.

For at that point, CBS was twisting in the wind. Officials there were saying that without the Southeastern Conference, the CFA deal was void because the contract required the CFA to produce all of its members. While CBS said it was willing to have a contract with the CFA without Alabama and its conference partners, such a deal would not be worth $60 million. And CBS felt even worse when it learned that Penn State and ABC were talking about a deal. Without Penn State, the feeling was, the CFA would crumble, leaving CBS with no deal.

THAT SET the network to devising fallback scenarios, one of which reportedly had it buying the rights to individual games on a week-to-week basis, instead of buying packages. That would have been the ultimate in deregulation.

The situation was also an unhappy one for ESPN, which had negotiated a separate $70 million, four-year deal with the CFA. It, too, was counting on the Southeastern Conference to make the deal profitable.

That was where matters stood until last Thursday, when Harvey Schiller, the new commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, came to New York to meet with ABC officials. ABC thought the meeting was to work out the final details of the new contract.

Wrong, Schiller said. He reportedly told ABC officials that the conference was still thinking and did not regard the deal as done.

Steve Townsend, the publicity director of the conference, said Monday that "the only thing the conference voted on was to continue negotiatons with ABC." That, of course, contradicts ABC's version of the meeting Swanson attended in Birmingham.

THE CHANGE in the SEC's attitude, if there was one, came about as a result of pressure from other CFA schools, some people familiar with the situation believe.

But for now, everything — except the ABC contracts with the Big 10 and Pac-10 — is on hold. So much so that most of the people involved are now declining to talk on the record until the situation is sorted out.

Holmes, Daingerfield, Refugio rule prep grid roost

Associated Press

San Antonio Holmes in Class 5A, Corsicana in 4A, Daingerfield in 3A, Refugio in 2A and Valley View in A will carry No. 1 rankings in the final AP Schoolboy Football Poll into the 1986 state playoffs.

Midland Lee slipped from fifth to seventh as a result of a loss to Abilene High, 6-3, last week while San Angelo, 14-7 winner over Odessa Permian, moved to eighth in the final poll. Odessa Permian was ushered out of the Top 10 by the defeat.

Rallying for the second straight week, Holmes beat San Antonio Jay 35-28 and retained its top billing, but five other 5A ranked teams suffered losses, including No. 2 Dallas Carter and No. 3 Duncanville.

Dallas Kimball edged Carter 7-6 dropping Carter to No. 6 in the final balloting by The AP's panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Duncanville dropped to ninth after its 21-19 loss to Irving MacArthur.

No. 8 Beaumont Central lost to Beaumont West Brook 17-16 and No. 10 Odessa Permian was knocked out of the playoffs by San Angelo.

Beaumont Central and Permian were replaced in the poll by eighth-ranked San Angelo Central and No. 10 Wichita Falls.

Holmes, which rallied from a 28-14 fourth quarter deficit against Jay to remain unbeaten, received 16 of the 18 first-place votes. North Mesquite, which beat Mesquite 42-21, moved into the No. 2 spot.

Tenth-ranked Palestine was the only 4A casualty, battling to a 23-23 tie with Henderson. Big Spring replaced Palestine as the No. 10 team.

Daingerfield retained its unanimous vote for No. 1 in 3A. Fourth-ranked Kirbyville and No. 9 Medina Valley lost their games.

Kirbyville, beaten 21-20 by Buna, dropped to No. 8 and Medina Valley, 7-2-1, was replaced by Jefferson, 10-0,

LEGAL NOTICE
INVITATION TO BID
NOTICE TO GENERAL CONTRACTORS

You are invited to bid on a General Construction Contract for "Additions and Renovations to the Midland County Culver Youth Home, Midland, Texas". All bids must be on a lump sum basis, segregated bids will not be accepted.

The Midland County Commissioners' Court will receive sealed bid proposals until 1:00pm on December 10, 1986, at the Midland County Courthouse (second floor), Midland, Texas. At that time bids will be opened in public and read aloud. All Prime Bidders are invited to attend.

Prior to the bid date and time, sealed bids may be sent to the Midland County Commissioners' Court, c/o Floyd T. Jarnigan, CPA (County Auditor), P.O. Box 421, Midland, Texas, 79701. Bids received prior to the time of bid opening will be securely kept, unopened. Bids received after the time set for opening will not be considered.

In general, the scope of the project may be described as follows:

Base Bid - Interior renovations to the existing juvenile detention facility and the addition of juvenile secure housing.

Add Alternate #1 - The addition of a classroom to the "Base Bid".

Add Alternate #2 - The addition of a separate Juvenile Probation Office building to the "Base Bid".

The proposed Contract Documents may be examined at the following locations.

Bona Fide general contract bidders may secure copies of the proposed Contract Documents from the Architect on the following basis:

1. Complete sets (including the Project Manual and prints of the Drawings) will be supplied to bidders upon payment of a $50.00 deposit for each set. The deposit is completely refundable if the sets are returned to the Architect complete, in reusable condition and within 10 days after the bid opening. Costs for replacing damaged or missing blueline prints or pages in the project manual (specifications) will be deducted from the deposit amount prior to refund.

2. No partial sets will be issued.

3. Plans and Project Manuals are available on November 12, 1986 at the Architects' office after 2:00pm. Costs of postage or shipping (if required) will be borne by the bidder requesting the bid documents.

Bid Bond in the amount of 5% of the bid and made payable to Midland County must accompany each bid (on AIA Document A310 "Bid Bond") according to the Instructions to Bidders.

Midland County Commissioners' Court reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive any technicalities and informalities.

This invitation is issued at the request of Midland County Commissioner's Court.
