DARK HORSES RISE

Would Sell Kerrville Tuberculosis Hospital To Vets Bureau

By The Associated Press.

BROWNWOOD, Texas, Aug. 19.—Intra-Legion politics are maintaining the interest of delegates at the annual convention of Texas departments of the American Legion. Other things have been pushed aside. Election of a new commander and next year's convention city will be disposed of at the final session tomorrow and in preparation for contest, caucasses canvasses, and conferences were indulged in during last night and today to swing wavering delegates to some new camp.

How They Line Up.

Two men are waging active campaigns for commandership, R. M. Wagstaff, Abilene; and Mark McGee of Brownwood. Each opened headquarters today.

"Dark Horses" are Lawrence Westbrook, Waco, and Fuford Jester, Corsicana.

The battle for convention will find Amarillo opposed to Fort Worth.

A recommendation that Texas sell the Kerrville tuberculosis hospital to the veterans bureau was made by the rehabilitation committee this afternoon and was adopted by the convention. This committee recommendation to the national rehabilitation committee an assessment of fifteen cents on each Legionnaire to carry on its work for next two years.

Would Teach Election Methods.

The Americanization committee report as adopted contained the suggestion that election methods and other rules of citizenship should be included in studies at public schools. The report suggested that Legion members exert their influence to thwart attempts of aliens to obtain American citizenship, who during the world war had used their foreign citizenship to avoid military service.

Among the speakers of the afternoon were S. C. Kile, director veteran's bureau, Dallas, and S. M. N. Marrs, of Austin, state superintendent of public instruction. Mr. Marrs spoke on "Flag Etiquette."

JIM FERGUSON HURLS THE LIE

Denies Charge He Did Not Buy Liberty Bonds During War

By The Associated Press.

AMARILLO, Texas, Aug. 19.—Replying to a telegram received while on the platform charging him with failure to buy liberty bonds during the war, James E. Ferguson, in an address here tonight in behalf of his wife's candidacy for governor, branded the charges as a "deliberate lie" and said his wife would withdraw from the race if the records did not show he purchased $2,500 worth of bonds through a Temple bank.

Telegram From Temple.

The telegram was from Temple and signed by Dewitt Hobart. It was handed to Ferguson and he read it to the crowd. "Speakers charge you and your wife did not buy liberty bonds. Important that you answer this quick."

Speaking with emphasis, he said "that's a deliberate ku klux lie made up by ku klux for the deliberate purpose of telling what they know to be a lie. If any of them will wire Charlie Campbell of Temple and he does not reply that we bought $2,500 in liberty bonds during the war, my wife will withdraw from the race and vote for Robertson."

Attacks Robertson.

Mr. Ferguson spoke for an hour and twenty minutes to a large audience in the municipal auditorium. He predicted defeat for Robertson Saturday, saying the klan was steadily losing ground and that politicians were deserting the order.

NOW IT'S OUT! DAWES LEARNS OF NOMINATION

Republican Nominee For Vice-President In Keynote Speech

FIGHTS "RADICALISM"

Pleads for Retention Of Progressive Conservatism

By The Associated Press.

EVANSTON, Ills., Aug. 19. The national campaign of 1924 was declared by Charles G. Dawes, in accepting the republican vice presidential nomination tonight, to be a contest between "progressive conservatism" and "untried and dangerous radicalism."

The nominee, speaking to several thousand persons gathered on the lawn of his home here, asserted the former position to be that represented by President Coolidge, the latter to be exemplified by the La Follette candidacy and "interposed the democratic party, with one conservative and one radical candidate on its ticket, hoping to get votes by avoiding the issue."

Fears La Follette.

Contending that "a formidable attack has been launched on the fundamental principles of the constitution," Mr. Dawes characterized the La Follette movement as the "chief opponent" of the republican national ticket and said he considered adherence to the principal fudamentals of the constitution, the foremost issue in the November election.

This issue was stressed by the nominee in his address, but he also discussed two other questions at equal length—the league of nations and the world court.

Stands On League.

He announced his stand on the republican platform declaration against any entrance into the league and assailed the democratic position as an "invitation to again enter that fog of debate in a public referendum." He commended the proposal of the present administration for adherence to the permanent court of international justice, declaring "it is to our national interests and the interests of the world."

Mr. Dawes also broke his silence on acceptance by the allies and Germany of the reparations plan bearing his name, declaring the credit belonged to President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes.

"With the experts' plan inaugurated," he asserted, France, England, Germany, Italy, Belgium and all Europe turn toward a new and peaceful life, with hope and happiness, rather than despair, in their hearts and prosperity ahead. The United States will be saved from the depths of an inevitable and great depression in industry and agriculture, which the continued chaos and misery of Europe would entail. Indeed the whole world enters upon a period of peace and prosperity

DEMANDS DEATH FOR SLAYERS

Arguments Begin In Loeb-Leopold Trial At Chicago

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Unqualified demand for the death penalty for Nathan F. Leopold, Jr. and Richard Loeb, co-murderers of 14-year-old Robert Franks, was made of Judge John R. Caverly today when the state, through Thomas Marshall, assistant state's attorney, began final arguments in the long legal battle.

"If this case does not deserve punishment by death, then no case in the history of Illinois has deserved that punishment," said Mr. Marshall.

Krohn Back On Stand

The arguments were reached after Benjamin Bacharach, backed by his brother, Walter, and Clarence S. Darrow, his associates in the defense, had finished pounding at the testimony given yesterday by Dr. William O. Krohn, fifth alienist, and final rebuttal witness for the state.

All attempts by the defense to win from the expert a modification of his conclusion that Leopold and Loeb are mentally sound failed. Neither would be acknowledge that his opportunities for observing them might have been improved upon.

Order of Speakers

Mr. Marshall indicated he would consume the rest of the day and part of tomorrow presenting legal aspects. Joseph Savage, another assistant state's attorney, will follow and then will come Walter and Benjamin Bacharach and Darrow for the defense. Each expects to use about a full court day, but Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, who is to deliver the final argument for the hearing, said he would need only two or three hours for his effort.

SHERIFF EXPECTS DEVELOPMENTS ON WEDNESDAY

Many Private Detectives Also Aid in Running Down Slayer

REPORT IS SURPRISE

Officers Had Professed Belief in Suicide Theory Advanced

Special to The Record News.

CHILDRESS, Aug. 19.—Verdict of the coroner filed late today asserted that Mel J. Dwight, anti-klan candidate for sheriff, met his death "at the hand of a party or parties unknown," thus climaxing a day of investigation by the local sheriff and a corps of 15 or 20 officers from surrounding counties who are assisting in probing what is called the most baffling crime in the history of Childress county.

Grand Jury Meets.

The verdict also followed a special session of the Childress county grand jury which recessed today without making any report.

Tonight, the sheriff declared he had uncovered some new clues during the day and he predicted further and sensational developments would come some time Wednesday. He declined to give out any intimation as to what the new evidence consisted of, merely asserting he "might have something tomorrow."

Verdict Is Surprise.

Verdict of the coroner came somewhat as a surprise since numerous officers investigating the case had asserted during the day they were convinced the case was purely that of a suicide. However, evidence obtained by the sheriff was not given out, and basis for the coroner's verdict is not generally known.

Dwight, who had won a place in the run-off election for next Saturday by his attack on the ku klux klan, was found unconscious in his garage early Sunday morning, and died without making a statement.

Sheriff Crane tonight asserted he believed it unnecessary to request that Texas rangers be sent here, and that he probably would not ask for them.

CLARENDON TO ADVERTISE LAND

Donley County Going After Colonists In Earnest

CLARENDON, Texas, Aug. 19.—The Clarendon chamber of commerce will utilize its various resources and concentrate the efforts of the organization in a colonization project, according to plans inaugurated at the last meeting of the directorate.

It is conservatively estimated that there is at least a hundred thousand acres of good farming land susceptible of development that could at a very low cost be put into cultivation in Donley county. What this section needs more than anything else is more people, and now that the era of large ranches is passing, the prospects are excellent for attracting immigrants to this locality where agricultural possibilities have been proven, and where good farming land is available when the ranches are thrown on the market, it is asserted. The plans provide for an intensive advertising campaign to be conducted directly with the prospects rather than indiscriminately. A list of raw lands is also to be compiled in an effort to form a direct connection between the prospect and land-owner.

FOARD COUNTY JAIL CLEANED

Many Improvements Are Being Made Inside Building

Special to The Record News.

CROWELL, Texas, Aug. 19. — No longer will criminals, either petty or felonious, have to sit in the Foard county jail in darkness, and no longer will they be surrounded by unesthetic, cold walls that would grate on the sensitive nerves of the most hardened crook. The commissioners court, at the instance of County Judge Jesse Owens has ordered that the county jail be reconditioned and the work has already commenced. Electric lights will be installed, and the walls of the cells, both inside and out, are being painted white. Water facilities for the inmates are also being improved, and some of the cells will even have running water where the criminals may wash their faces without the strict supervision of the guard. Heretofore, running water might be had only in the runways within the jail.

Prisoners are being kept in the Wilbarger county jail while the Foard county jail is being re-conditioned.

Cowling Denies He Promised To Deliver Any Klan Votes

In reply to what was purported to be an affidavit signed by C. L. Martin, defeated candidate for state senator in the recent democratic primary, read by John C. Marshall last week in joint discussion with J. D. Parnell, L. E. Cowling yesterday gave out a statement that he had never promised to deliver any klan votes as charged in the affidavit.

Marshall and Parnell are candidates for state senator in the run-off primary Saturday.

Mr. Cowling's statement follows:

Statement By L. E. Cowling

I have been shown an affidavit purporting to have been made by C. L. Martin on August 2, and sworn to before L. L. Lackey, notary public in and for Wichita county, Texas. In this affidavit Mr. Martin relates what he says was a conversation between us, which occurred a few days after the 10th of July.

I have had only one conversation with Mr. Martin. I positively and emphatically deny that I ever demanded, requested, hinted, or suggested that he join the klan before or after the primary, or at any other time. I deny that I offered to deliver six thousand votes to him, if he would join the klan or for any purpose. I deny that I made any statement relative to his voting according to the direction of representatives of the klan should he be elected to the legislation, I deny that I said, "Well think it over." I also deny that I ever offered any candidate or any other person 6,000 votes or any other number of votes.

What did really pass between us was this: I asked Mr. Martin that were he elected would he be as fair to the knights of the ku klux klan as he would be to the Knights of Columbus, Knights of Pythias or the Masonic fraternity, or would he attempt to persecute the klan. I further stated, in this connection, that the klan wanted no special legislation, and wanted no fairer treatment than that accorded the Knights of Columbus. In reply he stated that he was a fair man, and as further evidence of his fairness, he stated that the majority of the klan members at Seymour would vote for him. At no time did I request him to keep the conversation secret for I did not so regard it, Silas G. Merritt was present during the whole conversation and heard it.

Had I made the suggestions, demands and promises which Martin states he so positively and indignantly declined, why did he not give his affidavit to the public at once, instead of waiting three weeks, and after the primary election had been held.

I have read the affidavit of C. L. Martin referred to above, and also the above statement of L. E. Cowling. I was present in the room during the conversation between Mr. Cowling and Mr. Martin and heard same, it was not a private or confidential conversation.

Mr. Martin's affidavit is untrue and false. Mr. Cowling did not make the suggestions, demands or promises stated in Mr. Martin's affidavit. Mr. Cowling's statement above sworn to is a true and correct statement of the conversation between himself and Mr. Martin.

IF SICK TODAY! TAKE NO CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

I discovered a vegetable compound that does the work of dangerous, sickening calomel and I want every reader of this paper to buy a bottle for a few cents and if it doesn't straighten you up better and quicker than salivating calomel, just go back to the store and get your money back.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your thirty feet of bowels of the sour bile and constipation poison which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable.

I guarantee that one spoonful of this harmless liquid liver medicine will relieve the headache, biliousness, coated tongue, ague, malaria, sour stomach or any other distress caused by a torpid liver as quickly as a dose of vile, nauseating calomel, besides it will not make you sick or keep you from a day's work.

Calomel is poison—it's mercury—it attacks the bones often causing rheumatism. Calomel is dangerous. It sickens—while my Dodson's Liver Tone is safe, pleasant and harmless. Eat anything afterwards, because it can not salivate. Give it to the children because it doesn't upset the stomach or shock the liver. Take a spoonful tonight and wake up feeling fine and ready for a full day's work.—Adv.

Fear of Water Shortage At Crowell Dispelled by Report

Special to The Record News.

CROWELL, Texas, Aug. 19.—Any fear that Crowell will run short of water for many years to come was definitely allayed by H. D. Nelson, head of the city waterworks force, here today when he stated that a final survey of the water situation had been completed with the finding that the present water supply would furnish the city with water for a number of years to come unless growth becomes more rapid than normal.

The city water is now furnished by two 10 foot tunnels, running 40 feet underground. These tunnels have a combined legnth of 300 feet, and will furnish a maximum of 200,000 gallons of water every 24 hours. This, at the present rate of use, will furnish the city with water until it has grown to three times its present size.

The water is of extraordinarily good quality and has been passed on as such by licensed state chemists. The wells are located three miles west of town, and combined with the modern pumping machinery, will force water in the city to a height of more than 100 feet.

Color Cut-Out

The hot afternoon sun no longer made swimming dangerous, so all the boys and girls on the Cut outs' picnic decided to go swimming. They scattered to the beach houses, and soon 10 boys and girls were splashing in the cool water.

A game of water tag was started, with every one getting ducked every few minutes and coming up to go after some one else.

Pretty soon they began to get tired—also hungry.

"Everybody out!" called Mary Anne, who was a "bossy" little girl, and loved running things. "Soon as we all get our bathing suits changed we'll have the picnic."

And there was a scramble for the beach houses.

Color Mary Anne's bathing suit green and make her cap yellow and white.

The Idea That Women Cannot Have the Same Sort of Friendship for Each Other That Men Have Is Absurd—Women Need Each Other More Than Men Do and Their Friendships Are More Unselfish.

"Is a great great friendship possible between two women? Are there any Davids and Jonathans?" asks a correspondent. To both questions I answer unhesitatingly "yes." A great friendship is not only possible between women, but it is so common that we do not even notice its existence.

Still less do we regard it as a phenomenon. Why, virtually every woman possesses one. There is always some woman friend to whom she turns in all crisis of life, to whom she can sob out her troubles, who will close the eyes of her dead and take her new-born babe into her arms, and who has proved her loyalty and devotion all the way from taking care of her children to lending her her best hat.

And there are millions of women whose hearts cleave unto some other woman's as David's did to Jonothan's, and who love each other with a love passing that of sisters. For there is a spiritual kinship that is stronger than any blood tie, and very often women friends are knit together by bonds of congeniality that are stronger than any ties that bind them to their own families.

It is generally held that men alone have the gift for friendship, but my observation has been that women are much more tenacious of friendships than men are. Women keep up with their old friends far better than men do. Women's friends mean more to them than men's do, and Sally Damon and Susan Pythias elect to live together far oftener than do Damon and Pythias.

No time-frazzled superstition has less of a leg to stand on than has the one that pictures women as a bunch of cats, eternally clawing and spitting at each other, and filled with a venomous hatred of every member of their sex.

So far from this being the case, women have almost too much sex solidarity. They are too apt to espouse the woman's side of a cause without regard to its worth, and the society of their own sex is absolutely essential. They cannot live without other women.

It is aften said that a man is a better friend to woman than another woman is. This is another moss-grown fallacy. A man's friendship for a woman is seldom disinterested. A woman's friendship for another woman is virtually always unselfish.

More than that, men are fair weather friends to women. A man may have a very honest platonic affection for a woman, and as long as she is well and gay and bright and entertaining and interested in him and his affairs, he will camp of an evening in her living room, and be glad to do her any little kindly service he can.

But let the woman meet with misfortune. Let her become sickly and poor and bedraggled, a fountain of tears and a hard-luck record, and the man will flee from her as he would from a pest, and threaten to fire any office boy who lets her get past his door. He is willing to send her a check in the name of friendship, but he will not give her friendship that means personal sacrifice.

It is the woman friend, not the man friend, who goes to a woman when she is down and out, who lets her weep out her misery on her breast and listens with the patience of Job while the self-centered afflicted one recites for the millionth time her litany of woes.

Wichita Pipeline Co. Completes Survey for New South Archer Carrier

BENSON POOL WILL GET LINE

Will Connect With Olney Refining Company-Ragle Pool Line

The Wichita Pipeline company has completed an initial survey for a pipeline for the Benson group of producers on the Young-Arhcer county line about six miles northeast of Olney and will begin construction of the line as soon as right-of-way can be obtained. The line will extend from the Benson pool to the Ragle pool of Knight and Hines and the Panhandle Refining company where it will connect with the two-inch line from there to the Olney Refining company plant about two miles to the west on the Wichita Falls and Southern right-of-way. The line itself will be a two-inch line and when finished will be something like five miles in length, excluding the line to the Ragle pool, completed some time ago.

It will afford an outlet to the Benson group of producers lying in T. E. & L. C. O. survey, block 1397, when completed, development of this field thus far having been materially held back by lack of pipeline facilities. The line will run straight down the county line from the Ragle pool connection to the Benson group.

Pipe has been obtained and should be on the ground immediately, one gang to be set to work laying it. It is expected to have the line completed and oil running within ten days.

Oil will be handled by the Olney Refining company as is the production in the Ragle pool.

Globe Drilling Co. Gets New Sand at 1,794; Bowen And Ross at 1,787 Ft.

Globe Drilling company encountered another sand yesterday afternoon in their test on the Stine land, Clay county, at a depth of 1,794 feet. To the south and east Bowen and Ross encountered a sand at a depth of 1,787 feet, and took one core showing some oil, and going back to take another core before setting casing.

Callendar and Cumley are pulling casing in their test, it being understood that an attempt will be made to plug back and cement.

The Callendar-Cumley No. 1, is a direct south offset to the 200-barrel discovery well of the district the Callendar-Cumley-Stump No. 1, in line. The Globe Drilling company well is a direct east offset to the Cumley and Callendar, while the Bowen and Ross well lies several hundred feet to the south and east.

Three New Swastika Completions Add Three Wells to List of Producers For District, Each a 100-bbl. Well

Shamrock Gets Two Wells, With Seven on Sand Awaiting Star Machine

Three more completions at Swastika during the past three days added three more good wells to the list of producers in that district, each being rated as at least a 100-barrel well or better from the usual Swastika sand. The completions were, The Shamrock Oil company's No. 5, Campbell Banking company, sand 1,330-41 feet, 100-barrel well; Shamrock Oil company's No. 4, Goldsmith, sand 1,326-30 feet, 100-barrel well; C. H. Clark, No. 5, Scruggs, 28 feet of sand, 1,312-40 feet, 100-barrel well.

Seven on Sand.

The two Shamrock Oil company wells were completed Monday, while the Clark well on the Scruggs was completed a little earlier. Completion of the two Shamrock wells reduced the number that company has on the sand waiting for the Star machine to drill in to seven, there having previously been nine. These will be drilled in as fast as the Star can be moved on.

Derricks are being moved onto two new locations, the Richardson B-4 and the Goldsmith No. 10, while the Richardson-Mayfield No. 10 is spudding.

Production 2,541 Barrels.

Prior to the completion of the two Shamrock wells given above the production of that company on one day of last week reached 2,541 barrels from wells in this district.

Winnipeg Oil Co. Rigging Up For Wilbarger Test

The Winnipeg Oil company has made a contract with the Cowden Drilling company for a test just south of the Wells-Guiberson producer, south of Vernon, Wilbarger county. The test will be a direct south offset, and will be located in the northeast corner of section 100, on the Bond, Hawkins and Williams land. Timbers are being moved onto the site and it is expected drilling will commence within a week.

This test will also be a diagonal southwest offset of the Heydrick-Bridwell producer on the Dill land, southwest corner of section 84, drilling yesterday at a reported depth of 900 feet.

Both of these two tests are rotary tests. The Wells-Giberson producer to the north and west was drilled with cable tools, this having heretofore been a proviso in drilling contracts made for this territory.

TWO COMAC POOL WELLS NEAR SAND

The Magnolia Petroleum company is drilling at about 1,300 feet in their No. 4, Llewellyn, John Llewellyn survey, abstract 356, Comac group, Archer county.

Cooper and McLaughlin are drilling at about 1,200 feet on their second L. H. Farmer well, the first abandoned at about 1,180 feet with an unsuccessful fishing job, and this directly to the west, between the Comac producers and the old Scott and Gose hole, W. G. Winters survey, abstract 663.

MAGNOLIA FISHING STILL, COFFIELD 1

The Magnolia Petroleum company is still with a fishing job of more than a week's duration on their No. 1, Coffield, A. J. Richardson survey, abstract 356, south of the Green Flowers group, depth being given as about 1,470 feet.

This well made only a very small producer from the 1,400-foot sand here and being deepened to try to find a deeper sand with cable tools when the fishing was started.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—The cotton market was quieter today than for several days and although prices fluctuated erratically the tone was firmer and at one time the level of values was more than $2 a bale above the previous close. At no time during the day did prices drop below yesterday's close. The market opened 23 points up with both October and December at 24.95. The main cause of the better opening was comparative steadiness of Liverpool. There was a rally in the morning which carried October up to 27.15 and December to 25.16, or 43 to 44 points above yesterday's finals, but prices eased off moderately in the late trading and the close showed net gains for the day of 27 to 31 points.

Numerous reports received during the day of damage being done in Texas by army worms and of increasing depredations by weevils in the eastern belt, encouraged some buying principally by Chicago interests.

Dearth of Demand For Export Weakens Grain Market

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Attention to comparative dearth of export demand for United States wheat had much to do with a set back in prices both for to 2 7-8 cents net lower, September 1.27 7-8 to 1.28 and December 1.33 to 1.33 1-8, with corn 1-4 to 1 3-8 cents down; oats 1-8 to 3-8 cent up and provisions unchanged to 10 cents higher.

Reports of warmer weather tended to ease the corn market, but heavy storms in Illinois and Iowa acted for a time as a stimulus to buyers.

Wet weather strengthened the oats market. December oats scored a new high price record for the season.

Provisions were largely governed by corn.

JOLT FOR THE REPUBLICANS.

Representative F. H. La Guardia of New York is the foremost leader of what is known as the American-Italian bloc in the United States. He has held many high offices and he won many medals for his valor as an ace of the flying corps in the world war.

Well, La Guardia, the soldier and leader and orator, has bolted the republican ticket, will run as an independent and will advocate the election of La Follette and Wheeled. In his letter of withdrawal from the republican party, the reasons he gave for leaving the organization that frequently put him in office were that he would not sacrifice his principles for renomination, that he did not like the republican national platform and that he approves the La Follette-Wheeler platform.

There is said to be a hundred and fifty thousand Italian-American voters in the city of New York alone. According to the New York politicians, one hundred thousand of the number are democrats and some fifty thousand are republicans. La Guardia has been the political idol of the republican contingent of Italian-American voters, and his desertion is certain to lead a large bloc of his followers into the La Follette camp.

Republican campaign managers who declared in July that La Follette would cut the democratic party to the heart in the east, are reminded that the bolt of La Guardia to La Follette is in the nature of a knife thrust that may prove disastrous to the republican cause in the states of New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Pennsylvania where the bulk of the Italians who vote the republican ticket have for years regarded this dashing ace of the world war their trusted leader as well as their political idol.

A LOST LADY

By Willa Cather

CHAPTER I

Sweet Water and Mrs. Forrester

Thirty or forty years ago, in one of those gray towns along the Burlington railroad, which are so much grayer today than they were then, there was a house well known from Omaha to Denver for its hospitality and for a certain charm of atmosphere. Well known, that is to say, to the railroad aristocracy of that time; men who had to do with the railroad itself, or with one of the "land companies" which were its by-products.

In those days it was enough to say of a man that he was "connected with the Burlington." There were the directors, the general managers, vice presidents, superintendents, whose names we all knew; and their younger brothers or nephews were auditors, freight agents, departmental assistants. Every one "connected" with the road, even the large cattle and grain shippers, had annual passes; they and their families rode about over the line a great deal. There were then two distinct social strata in the prairie states; the homesteaders and hard-workers who were there to make a living, and the bankers and gentlemen ranchers who came from the Atlantic seaboard to invest money and to "develop our great West," as they used to tell us.

When the Burlington men were traveling back and forth on business not very urgent, they found it agreeable to drop off the express and spend a night in a pleasant house where their importance was delicately recognized; and no house was pleasanter than that of Capt. Daniel Forrester, at Sweet Water. Capt. Forrester was himself a railroad man, a contractor, who had built hundreds of miles of road for the Burlington.

The house stood on a low, round hill, nearly a mile east of town. It was encircled by porches, too narrow for modern notions of comfort, supported by the fussy, fragile pillars of that time, when every honest stick of timber was tortured by the turning-lathe into something hideous. Stripped of its vines and denuded of its shrubbery, the house would probably have been ugly enough.

To approach Capt. Forrester's property, you had first to get over a wide, sandy creek which flowed along the eastern edge of the town. Crossing this by the footbridge or the ford, you entered the captain's private lane, bordered by Lombardy poplars, with wide meadows lying on either side. Just at the foot of the hill on which the house sat, one crossed a second creek by the stout wooden road-bridge.

Any one but Capt. Forrester would have drained the bottom land and made it into highly productive fields. But he had selected this place long ago because it looked beautiful to him, and he happened to like the way the creek wound through his pasture, with mint and joint-grass and twinkling willows along its banks. He was well off those times, and he had no children. He could afford to humor his fancies.

When the captain drove friends from Omaha or Denver over from the station in his democrat wagon, it gratified him to hear these gentlemen admire his fine stock grazing in the meadows on either side of his lane.

And when they reached the top of the hill, it gratified him to see men who were older than himself leap nimbly to the ground and run up the front steps as Mrs. Forrester came out on the porch to greet them.

If she happened to be in the kitchen, helping her Bohemian cook, she came out in her apron, waving a buttery iron spoon, or shook cherry-stained fingers at the new arrival. She never stopped to pin up a lock; she was attractive in dishabille, and she knew it. She had been known to rush to the door in her dressing-gown, brush in hand and her long black hair rippling over her shoulders, to welcome Cyrus Dalsell, president of the Colorado & Utah, and that great man had never felt more flattered. In his eyes, and in the eyes of the admiring middle-aged men who visited there, whatever Mrs. Forrester chose to do was "lady-like" because she did it.

They could not imagine her in any dress or situation in which she would not be charming. Capt. Forrester himself, a man of few words, told Judge Pommeroy that he had never seen her look more captivating than on the day when she was chased by the new bull in the pasture.

Mrs. Forrester was 25 years younger than her husband, and she was his second wife. He married her in California and brought her to Sweet Water a bride. They called the place home even then, when they lived there but a few months out of each year. But later, after the captain's terrible fall with his horse in the mountains, which broke him so that he could no longer build railroads, he and his wife retired to the house on the hill. He grew old there—and even she, alas! grew older.

But we will begin this story with a summer morning long ago, when Mrs. Forrester was still a young woman, and Sweet Water was a town of which great things were expected. That morning she was standing in the deep bay-window of her parlor, arranging old-fashioned blush roses in a glass bowl. Glancing up, she saw a group of little boys coming along the driveway, barefoot, with fishing poles and lunch baskets. She knew most of them; there was Neil Herbert, Judge Pommeroy's nephew, a handsome boy of 12, whom she liked; and polite George Adams, son of a gentleman rancher from Lowell, Mass. The others were just little boys from the town; the butcher's red-headed son, the leading grocer's fat, brown twins, Ed Elliott and the two sons of the German tailor.

As the boys came up the hill she saw them hesitate and consult together. "You ask her, Neil!"

"You'd better, George. She goes to your house all the time, and she barely knows me to speak to."

As they paused before the three steps which led up to the front porch, Mrs. Forrester came to the door and nodded graciously, one of the pink roses in her hand.

"Good morning, boys. Off for a picnic?"

George Adams stepped forward and solemnly took off his big straw hat. "Good morning, Mrs. Forrester. Please may we fish and wade down in the marsh and have our lunch in the grove?"

"Certainly. You have a lovely day."

The boys laughed.

"Run along, and be sure you don't leave the gate into the pasture open. Mr. Forrester hates to have the cattle get in on his blue grass."

CHAPTER II

Ivy Peters

The boys went quietly round the house to the gate into the grove, then ran shouting down the grassy slopes under the tall trees. Mrs. Forrester watched them from the kitchen window until they disappeared behind the roll of the hill. She turned to her Bohemian cook.

"Mary, when you are baking this morning, put in a pan of cookies for those boys. I'll take them down when they are having their lunch."

When lunch time came the boys had done none of the things they meant to do. They had behaved like wild creatures all morning; shouting from the breezy bluffs, dashing down into the silvery marsh through the dewy cobwebs that glistened on the tall weeds, swishing among the pale tan cattails, wading in the sandy creek bed, chasing a striped water snake from the old willow stump where he was sunning himself, cutting sling-shot crotches, throwing themselves on their stomachs to drink at the cool spring that flowed out from under a bank into a thatch of dark watercress.

Only the two German boys, Rheinhold and Adolph Blum, withdrew to a still pool where the creek was dammed by a reclining tree trunk, and, in spite of all the noise and splashing upon them, managed to catch a few suckers.

All at once the breeze died, the air grew very hot, the marsh steamed, and the birds disappeared. The boys found they were tired; their shirts stuck to their bodies and their hair to their foreheads.

They left the sweltering marsh-meadows for the grove, lay down on the clean grass under the grateful shade of the tall cottonwoods, and spread out their lunch. The Blum boys never brought anything but rye bread and hunks of dry cheese—their companions wouldn't have touched it on any account. But Thaddeus Grimes, the butcher's red-headed son, was the only one impolite enough to show his scorn. "You live on weinies to home, why don't you never bring none?" he bawled.

"Hush," said Neil Herbert. He pointed to a white figure coming rapidly down through the grove, under the flickering leaf shadows.

It was Mrs. Forrester, and as she approached, George Adams, who had a particular mother, rose, and Neil followed his example.

"Here are some hot cookies for your lunch, boys." She took the napkin off a basket on her arm. "Did you catch anything?"

"We didn't fish much. Just ran about," said George.

"I know! You were wading and things." She had a nice way of talking to boys, light and confidential. "I wade down there myself sometimes, when I go down to get flowers. I can't resist it."

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

The aspects during the forenoon are not very favorable, although they are not distinctly adverse. They are, however, of such a character as to counsel the postponement of any important action until later in the day. During the afternoon and evening, the aspects are good and favor the tackling of important matters, especially those which relate to property, art or social affairs.

A child born today will be normal, both physically and mentally. It will have its little ailments, as all children do, and its little cares and worries. Its character will be fundamentally sound, and its disposition sunny and bright. It will not be very ambitious, but in any walk of life will not only be happy, but will radiate contentment.

If today is your birthday, you are physically brave, but lack intellectual courage of thought. As physical courage gives you the ability to use your faculties with freedom in the most imminent danger as you should with no alarming circumstances to excite you, so intellectual courage will give you the power to think with independence, just as you should if you did not know the opinion of another human being upon the subject which engages your thoughts.

You, however, estimating too humbly your own abilities, take your opinions from others without making any effort to judge for yourself between right and wrong.

This is not the whole truth, however, about your subservience to others' opinion. Very often you refrain expressing an opinion in conversation until you have ascertained the views of the person you are addressing, and you do this merely to please others, while stultifying yourself.

Every human being is responsible for the opinion he or she may hold. Each one must be prepared to answer for his or her own opinions and is just as responsible for them as for his or her own actions.

Successful people born on this date are:

Robert F. Stockton, naval officer. (He had an important part in securing California to the U. S.)

James J. Jarves, art critic and author. (Made a large collection of art works in Europe.)

Benjamin Harrison, 23rd president of the U. S.

Paul Dana, journalist. (Proprietor of the N. Y. Sun.)

HOW IT STARTED

"A FORLORN HOPE."

This expression, which is self-explanatory, has a military origin and is based on a similarity in the sound of the word "hope" with a German word of quite different meaning. Grammerians call such words cognates. And "hope" is the English cognate of the German "haufe" which means "heap" or "band."

In German military parlance a body of troops that was sent ahead on a highly dangerous expedition or, as sometimes happens in war, a mission that was practically certain to result in death, was called "die verlorene Haufe"—the lost band.

Hence we have the unique situation of a translation of sound which is only partly a translation of sense. For while a lost band (verlorene Haufe) may be a forlorn hope, it does not follow that a forlorn hope is a lost band!

THROUGH A WOMAN'S EYES

By JEAN NEWTON

HAMMER AND FORGE.

"Oh, God, please make me a movie actor—a good movie actor—one of the best!"

That was Merton's prayer. And although it may seem somewhat sacrilegious to us, it was not so to Merton. To him there was nothing inappropriate in appealing to God for something he idealized, that to him was the greatest boon on earth, his one dream and hope of happiness. It was the simple prayer of a childlike heart.

Merton did become a movie actor—one of the best. And if this happened not quite as he would have planned it, it was nevertheless, his dream come true.

But Merton had not just prayed and dreamed it true. He had slaved and sacrificed and gone without and tried and tried and persisted. It would seem as if the childlike spirit of the boy were not unfamiliar with Emerson's words: "What would you have?" quoth God; "take it and p for it!"

The dream and the prayer and achievement of this character that endeared itself to a critical public minds one of other dreams and pr ers of people who know what th would like to be—the one thing nec sary for their happiness.

A woman gifted with everything b good nature was known to pray: "O God! rid me of my bad temper a give me a sweet disposition." B there ended the effort to realize dream. When it came to paying, giving up, action in that moment anger—she let it go.

The things that we would like be do not come of wishing or dream or praying alone. As has been wis said:

"You cannot dream yourself into character—you must hammer a forge yourself one."

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day;
  The radio drones the newest "Follies'" song;
The plowman homeward plods his weary way,
  To make a fourth at auction or mah jongg.

Now fades the glimmering landscape from the sight,
  While mother reads the works of Mr. Freud,
And father says "Let's shoot down town tonight—
  The bill is Monte Blue and Harold Lloyd."

The breezy call of incense breathing morn,
  Does not disturb the slumbering farmer now;
The power from the mill pond husks the corn,
  A set of tubes and cog wheels milks the cow.

Beneath those rugged elms, that yew tree's shade—
  In chic and trim and jaunty sport array—
A willowy and sun-burned rustic maid
  Plays thirty sets of tennis every day.

For her anon the blazing hearth shall burn,
  But it will never light, by any chance,
A picture of a farm girl and a churn,
  She's going to have the boys in for a dance.

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
  Reveal upon her hands their priceless worth,
For she is not a flower to blush unseen,
  That kind of flower has perished from the earth.

Let not deriders mock her dash and style,
  Her talk of books, her chatter about art;
Nor envy say with a disdainful smile,
  "The purse-proud hussy, don't she think she's smart?"

The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power
  May well behold this damsel with alarm,
For while the price of wheat holds out to tower—
  The paths of glory lead but to the farm!

Dr. Frank Crane's Daily Editorial

A Woman's Best Age

Balzac is supposed to have said that the dangerous age of a woman thirty-five. Just exactly what he means by dangerous we do not know, there is no doubt that a woman is at her best around thirty-five. Before time she is too cock-sure. She knows too much of life, also too little.

The loss of her ideals is still a surprise to her, and means too mu and her experience may have made her a little bitter.

Beyond the age of thirty-five a woman is apt to get matronly.

The ideal age of a woman, therefore, is about thirty-five. Very m women who have had little charm as young girls have suddenly become most delightful persons in early middle age. They have learned to und stand men by that time and expect less of life than younger women. Th usually dress very well and are easily pleased.

They are not so temperamental nor so easily disappointed. The stand that they can be happy once in a while without being happy time.

About thirty-five a woman is almost always an admirable hoste she has traveled, she has read and she has met people and, therefore, makes an excellent companion. She stimulates a man to his best, but is also a rest to him and has come to find out that busy men seek fr women the benediction of rest perhaps more than any other quality.

She is not so conscious of her youth and hence has a becoming humilit

Women of every age can be charming, the old as well as the young. b a woman is at her best when she has passed her first youth and not y entered upon old age, as far as men are concerned.

Of course everyone will judge of this according to his own likes an dislikes and in accordance with his experience with differing personaliti but, on the whole and on the average, a woman of thirty-five makes the be companion for every man's business or leisure.

Many women who in their youth were unattractive, as they near fort become charming, agreeable and attractive, so that ther companionship i appreciated by all their friends as it was not before.

The young girl who is still pretty and fresh, holding the delicate bloom of childhood, may be a delightful companion for occasions, but she is difficult to please and is uncertain as to her moods and she is not so dependabl as those of older years.

Billy Whiskers

By FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY.

The dirigible was being tossed by the storm and the chums were not enjoying it very much.

Poor Billy went slipping head foremost from one end of the saloon to the other, sometimes sitting on his tail, at others rolling over and over until he felt like a jellyfish. But still the storm continued, and he could not find a place of safety.

As for Button, he had the best of it for when the balloon rolled or dove, he simply dug his claws further into the curtain pole and hung on for dear life. Once the dirigible sailed for hundreds of feet upside down. Button simply dug in deeper and hung upside down too.

The jerking of the dirigible knocked Stubby off the window seat and for many minutes he had been rolling from one end of the saloon to the other on one side of the table while Billy took the same journeys on the other side of the table, only it was not hurting Stubby so much as it was Billy. He had curled himself into a tight ball which made him roll easily. He looked like a ball of scraggly worsted. As for Billy, try as he would he could not curl up in a tight ball as his legs were too long and his horns much too sharp.

"Oh, my, will this storm ever be over? Why did we ever let our curiosity get the better of us and entice us to try a ride in this dangerous thing? No more dirigibles for me if I live to get out of this one, which I am very much afraid I won't!"

In less than five minutes from the time Billy thus spoke the dirigible had weathered the storm and was flying in clear blue sky a thousand feet aove the still raging storm. They could still hear the thunder and see the vivid flashes of lightning.

"Gee! What a place to see the moon and stars," thought Billy. "Now the danger seems to be over, I wish we would stay up here until dark so I could see what the moon and the stars look like when we are so near them. If we got near enough the moon, I should like to jump off and make a visit there."

Poor stupid Billy! He knew nothing of the thousands and thousands of miles between him and the moon, though it might look so very near.

When the dirigible was sailing quietly along, a waiter came in and began setting the table. He did not see our friends, and went whistling about his task. What most aroused the chums' curiosity were the funny little fences he fastened on the table. Then when everything was ready, he sprinkled water on the tablecloth until it was quite wet.

"What in the world is he wetting that perfectly clean cloth for? I should like to know that," mused Billy. "I'll just watch and see."

(We will have until tomorrow to guess why the waiter did that).

Mothers

AND THEIR CHILDREN

Improving the Practice Hour.

One mother says:

Often I have a talk with my little girl's music teacher, or watch an occasional lesson that she gives the child. I know enough about music to begin with that I can sit by during daughter's practice hour and see that she follows directions. No bad habits of fingering or posture are acquired, as a result, and every minute of the hour is used in really constructive practice.

NO DISSOLUTION OF REICH IS EXPECTED

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—A dissolution of the reichstag because of the government's failure of command a sufficient majority to pass the proposed laws in connection with the Dawes plan and to ratify the pact of London is not viewed as imminent in official quarters here, notwithstanding the heavy bombardment of adverse editorial criticism aimed at Chancellor Marx and Foreign Minister Stressmann and the cabinet generally by the conservative press.

Although the strictures of the editorial writers are based on the failure of Marx and Stressmann o obtain an immediate release of the Ruhr from occupation, the nationalist organs admit that final judgment on the results achieved in London must be deferred until all the documents are available.

Spudders Swamp Crabs In Deciding Contest

HOMELINGS RUN MOON FROM BOX, THEN POUND MATTHEWS

Jonnard Poles Another Circuit Smash, Bagwell of Galveston Parks Pellet, Also.

Wichita Falls mounted Moon in the first inning, and then routed him in the second, scoring five runs for the two stanzas. The Spudders then got to Matthews, relief hurler, in the fourth for a quartet, and two in the seventh, capturing the final and deciding tilt of the Galveston series at Athletic park Tuesday, 11 to 4.

Jonnard of the homelings and Bagwell of the visitors each hit homers.

Dick Morgan of the locals was fairly effective in the pinches although touched for 13 safties. Speedy work by the Spudder infield especially in the enaction of double plays aided Morgan in setting the cellar habitutes down with but four earned runs.

The Galveston tallies were strung out through the game, one being scored in the second, one in the fourth, another in the sixth, and the last run in the ninth.

Three in First.

The homelings bruised Moon in the opening round for a trio of counters, scoring on four safeties and an error.

Fitzgerald singled off the pitcher's glove. Callaghan was safe when Whiteman dropped his short fly. Fitzgerald went to second. Locker, attempting to sacrifice, forced Fitzgerald, pitcher to third. Weis doubled against the left field fence, scoring Callaghan and sending Locker to third. Turgeon doubled to right, scoring Locker and Weis. Wano fouled out to third. White singled to short, sending Turgeon to third. On an attempted double steal, Turgeon was thrown out at the plate, catcher to second to catcher.

Moon Goes Out in Second.

Two hits, a walk and a passed ball gave the Spudders a pair of runs in the second and caused the demise of Moon.

Jonnard walked. Morgan popped to first. Jonnard took second on a passed ball. Fitzgerald grounded out, short to first, sending Jonnard to third. Callaghan's fly to left fell between Whiteman and Brown for three bases, scoring Jonnard. Locker singled past third, scoring Callaghan. Weis walked. Matthews then went to the box for Galveston. Turgeon fanned.

Matthews Gets His.

The Spudders jumped Matthews in the third, and tabulated four. Wano beat out an infield hit to deep short. White singled through the same sector, and Jonnard duplicated the blow, saturating the sacks. Morgan bobbled to the box, forcing Wano at the platter. Fitzgerald bounded one to second, forcing Morgan at the keystone cushion, but White checked in and Jonnard rested at third. Fitzgerald absconded with second. Callaghan biffed a one-baser through the short field, scoring Bubber and Fitz. Callaghan stole second, and raced on around to the pan when Schroyer tore up the turf with a low throw. Locked bounded out to third.

Spuds rocked along for three innings without spiking the plate, but in the seventh after White had singled, Jonnard hoisted the apple over the port barrier scoring White ahead of him.

How can crooked shots with a mashie be cured?

BAD MASHIE SHOTS
CURE THEM BY SHORTENING SWING - DON'T USE A MASHIE WHERE YOU NEED THE DISTANCE OF A MID-IRON.
STAND "OVER THE BALL" A LITTLE MORE THAN IN NORMAL MASHIE STANCE.

Answered by
BILL STRACHAN,
Wichita Falls Golf Club Professional.

The best way to cure hooks and slices with a mashie is to shorten the swing. A full swing with the mashie will almost always result in a poor shot unless it is played by a very good golfer. This full swing is usually attempted in order to get distance which should be obtained with a midiron. If a golfer will use a mashie for its intended purposes and distance the number of poor shots made with the club will decrease. Another way to straighten out mashie shots is to stand "over the ball" a little more than the normal stance with a mashie.

ELECTRA NINE WINS

FREDERICK, Okla., Aug. 19.—The Electra ball team defeated the Frederick team here Sunday by the score of 9 to 6.

At It Again, Is Bambinus Babe Ruth Who Spends Life Shattering Records

Bam Lasted to Seventh in First Major Tilt, But Broke One of Matty's Records, Also Led League.

Babe Ruth is thundering on toward another wonderful record to hang up with his past achievements in the home run hitting. He has been traveling along at a pace corresponding to that which he set in 1921 when he left the sport world dazed with his collection of 59 circuit clouts. Just how high he will climb—whether or not he will pass that great mark is problematical, of course. However, he has already given baseball more home run statistics than any batter who ever donned a uniform. In the six years he has enjoyed his home run fame he has mowed down records, vital and unique, in a ruthless manner (with no intention of punning).

Most fans recall that he first shook the baseball world by setting what seemed an unbeatable mark of 29 homers in 1919.

The following year he raised that number to 54 and the fandom stood aghast. Then, in 1921, baseball bugs went insane with joy watching him ring up a total of 59—five above that unheard of number of the year previous.

Then came a lean year in which Babe fought evils of popularity, the influence of unscrupulous friends and the lure a quickly won fame and fortune brings to the man who started life poor. That year, 1922 he made but 35 circuit clouts.

Last year he raised that number to 41—tieing with Ken Williams for the title.

Here are some of the interesting details in connection with his career and his records.

His first big league home run was registered in Boston on May 6, 1915. Jack Warhop was the victim.

While collecting his 29 home runs in 1919 he fanned 58 times and drew 101 passes.

He set a record when he hit three home runs in three consecutive times at bat June 13-14, 1920.

Dauss Early Victim.

His four home runs with the bases full in 1919 set another.

When the 1920 season ended he had hit two home runs in eight different games.

He had picked on George Dauss of the Detroit club, having nicked him for 10 homers up to the close of that year.

He holds the world's record for collecting seven homers in five games.

He has failed to equal the remarkable feat of Bobby Love of the Boston Nationals and Ed Delahanty of the Phillies, who hit four home runs in one game.

His 59 home runs in 1921 carried him past the lifetime record of 127 circuit clouts, hung up by "Big Sam" Thompson. Ruth's 128th home run, which broke that record was made off Herb Thormahlen of the Red Sox in Boston June 23, 1921.

All fans know he started his career as a pitcher.

In his first real game as a professional—with the Baltimore Orioles—he turned back the Athletics 6 to 2 in an exhibition game. The "big boys" meant nothing to Ruth.

In his first major league game he lasted just seven innings. He made his debut against Cleveland in Boston July 11, 1914. He weakened in the first half of the seventh and allowed Cleveland to tie the score—3 to 3. Boston scored a run their half and "Dutch" Leonard finished the game.

His two best years as a pitcher were 1916 and 1917, when he won 23 and 24 games respectively and lost but 13 each year. His highest winning percentage was registered in 1915, however, when he won 18 and lost but 7 games. He led the league that year.

Ruth pitched 16 consecutive scoreless innings in the world's series of 1918. He had finished the 1916 series with 13 scoreless innings. This total of 29 innings in a row without allowing a run surpassed by one round the world's series record of Christy Mathewson.

Pitched Longest Game.

He defeated Brooklyn in a 14 inning game in 1916, the longest contest ever staged in a world's series.

His first home run in a world's series was scored in 1921 when he lifted one of Phil Douglas' shoots out of the park in the fourth game. He went homerunless in the 1922 classic.

Then he socked three in the series of last year. Two were in the second game, McQuillan and Bentley being the victims. The third was in the sixth game and Art Nehf was the victim. No one was on base when the hits were made.

He swings a 54-ounce bat, which is nine ounces heavier than the average bludgeon.

Top O' the Mornin' Stuff

BLONDY CROSS

The Spudders will appear on the home lot just ten more days in the year 1924. Houston will break in for the first of a trio this afternoon. Then Beaumont comes for a pair, Dallas three, and Fort Worth two.

Tanner and his crew will check out for Cowtown the eve of August 29 for a quarter and two weeks on the road, finishing the jaunt and the season September 14 down in San Antonio.

Ten more days of baseball, Spud fans, and then the national pastime locally goes into hibernation. Just ten more days, one week and three days to be exact, will the Spudders be with us. Better make thre best of it now, fellows.

Then comes the shoat skin game Football throws out its clarion call to the cream of America's youth for a more exciting, a more exhilerating form of friendly combat than even the diamond pastime which we see for six months out of the year.

And while the various colleges and universities over the state are making preparations, business managers, and coaches bustling here and there getting set for the opening day of gruelling grid training, here in Wichita Falls high school and junior college youngsters are beginning to watch their step in regard to smoking, eating, and living in general in order to be in the best of condition before practice proper begins. For again the Wichita Falls Coyotes stack up as one of the most formidable high school grid arrays, and the junior college, still in its infancy, is expected to do better in an athletic way this fall.

Some fighters win fame by winning titles. Others win it by their individual popularity in and out of the ring. Others draw attention with their ability to asume an horizontal position gracefully and early (Fred Fulton for example). Still others live long in the memory of fight fans because of their ability to take it.

That is where Bartley Madden belongs these days. Old time ring fans are now likening him to old Joe Grim and others of history who could take it.

Madden accepted all Harry Wills could give him and laughed it off. Wills couldn't hit very hard, however. Jack Renault can hit, though his style be crude. Madden took all the Canadian could toss his way and didn't bat an eye.

And now Bartley's ready to receive everything but the water bucket in another mill. And fans will pack the house to see him on the receiving end.

Bart Molinero, French middleweight, came over to the United States a while back unheralded and unsung. When he unlimbered in a New York gymnasium he did not startle the ring critics who watched him work. But he proved to have such a pleasing disposition and style in the ring that he is being kept busy these days in the east despite his failure to win any great fame.

Phil Krug, just a fair fighter, has licked him twice.

These be happy days for Carl Mays. The submarine hurler recently suffered his first defeat after a run of victories which went to eight consecutive games. This showing after the poor work he displayed earlier in the season must be encouraging to the upsidedown gent with the Cinci Reds.

A New York scribe jumps Benny Leonard because the lightweight champion went through with his fight with Pal Moran in Cleveland, O., the other night. He calls Leonard a poor business man. He makes the point that when Leonard signed to fight Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, August 20, he should have called off the bout with Moran, arranged previous to the one with Walker.

The injury to his thumb suffered by Leonard in the contest in Cleveland forced postponement of the Walker tilt with the consequent loss in interest—and gate receipts, the eastern writer points out.

With Leonard it was not a matter of business. It was a matter of keeping his promise. He and his manager had given their word the champion would fight in Cleveland. The latter agreement with regarding the Walker bout did not affect that promise.

Leonard valued his work more than the money he stood to lose. If that is poor business give us more rotten business men in sport. Heaven knows, we need more of them and fewer sharps.

TEXHOMAS WIN ON FORFEIT

ELECTRA, Aug. 19.—The Twilight league game scheduled for yesterday evening between Texhoma and Lebus Tool was forfeited to the oil men on account of the non-appearance of the tool men. It is reported that the Lebus team had dropped from the league, but this could not be confirmed.

The second series of the league closes on August 29, after which several postponed and tie games will be played, before the final championship series are announced.

CROOKED GOLF TOURNEY TODAY

Municipal Club Players To Compete in Novel Meet

Whose the biggest crook rather than the best golfer probably will be discovered this afternoon at the Municipal golf club. For the day finally has arrived when that long awaited "crooked" tournament will be staged.

Casting aside practically all of the gentlemenly rules and ethics of the ancient pastime, Muny players—about 40 or 50 of them, according to R. R. Fisk—will fare forth in heated and crooked contest for the ten prizes offered. And it'll be crooked, all right. Even the course is crooked, and after three o'clock all matches not in the tournament must play around the course as it is lined off for this competition in order to avoid casualties from cross fire.

Entrance fee is 25 cents, and score cards for the meet will be given participants at the club house.

Women will be allowed to take part in the competition free and will be allowed a handicap of one stroke each hole with exception of during the putting contest.

All entries are asked to turn in their cards to the officials, I. R. Sheldon and R. B. Fisk, immediately after play. If it be possible to tabulate results soon enough winners of the ten prizes will be announced this evening at the dinner of the family night gathering.

STOREY SUBSTITUTED ON LEGION FIGHT CARD FOR JOHNNY PALMER

Oklahoma City Scrapper Unable to Battle, Due to Illness—Newcomer Holds Knockout Over Rich.

Harmon Rich, Wichita Falls welterweight, will meet a tough one in Floyd Storey of Ponca City, Okla., Thursday evening in a ten-rounder on the legion card. Rich was to have squared off with Johnny Palmer of Oklahoma City, but Promoter Wofford Tuesday was forced to make the substitution on receipt of wire that Palmer is sick in bed suddenly.

Storey is rated as one of the best fighters over the country, but where Rich will be balked is in the memory that Storey once long time ago slapped Rich for a gool, the local battler taking the count.

Rich will have this thought to worry him during the bout, which may lead him into more trouble. Storey admittedly has a wallop, especially is this shown when it is made known that he knocked out the elusive Rich who is probably the best defensive battler in the southwest.

Fink and Monte, who are billed in the final bout of the card, a 12-rounder, each put in hard workouts at the legion hall yesterday. Both seem in pretty fair condition.

Red Lewis and Moko Carpentier also ran through their paces. These light heavies will fight a six-round semi-final.

Promoter Wofford announced Tuesday that Rattlesnake and Kid Norfolk, local negro middleweights, have been matched for a bout. There will be a curtain raiser added to the program, said Wofford, who has not made arrangements yet for this scrap.

WOMAN BOOSTS MRS. FERGUSON

Mrs. Van Doyle Urges Continued Work Until Election Day

Pronounced enthusiasm prevailed in the meeting of the women supporters of Mrs. Miriam Ferguson for governor Tuesday afternoon in the seventy-eighth district court room. Mrs. E. E. Fisher serving as chairman, introduced the several speakers to a crowd that filled every available seat in the room.

There were representative women from all additions of the city and from other voting precincts of the county who during the evening made reports of progress of the campaign.

There were also a considerable number of men of the city and vicinity who were attentive to the addresses.

Judge P. A. Martin was the first speaker and engaged much of his time in outlining the duties of the governor of Texas and the powers of the state senate and house of representatives, showing clearly that legislative powers rested with these bodies and that they had power to override the veto of the governor. Judge Martin gave a clear explanation of the condition as it effects prohibition, saying that the governor had no power to make or unmake prohibition or any other laws and that prohibition laws could not be undone through the act of any governor, the only possible way to bring about repeal being through re-submission to the states of the union.

Judge Martin declared that it was dangerous to put any one in the governor's office who owes allegiance to the invisible empire and was opposed to putting any one in office who wears a hood, much preferring one who wears a bonnet.

Mrs. Dan Doyle, Fort Worth, spoke for an hour, holding the close attention of the audience.

Mrs. Doyle was direct in her statement of positions that should be assumed by mothers and fathers in raising children, their duty to future generations and the possibility of the future should the klan prevail in its efforts to take over control of the government.

The women of the city and county were urged to work diligently for the success of Mrs. Ferguson on next Saturday and to build an interest in the fight that is being waged by the women.

Following Mrs. Doyle's speech two telegrams received by the Ferguson Club during the day were read to the assembled crowd.

Mrs. Fisher received report from several community delegates, encouraging continued work to the last day.

On Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the same place there will be held a mass meeting of the women of Wichita Falls and the entire county, it was announced.

TELEGRAMS DENY WILLS' SPEECH

Dr. Cranfill Asserts He Was Not Forced To Quit Bible Class

Statements made by Judge H. G. Wills of Dallas, while speaking in this county last week in behalf of Felix Robertson's candidacy for governor, were the subject of some exchanges of telegrams Tuesday.

One exchange of telegrams dealt with some references by Judge Wills to Judge Robertson's religious activities. It follows:

"Dr. J. B. Cranfill, Dallas, Texas. H. G. Wills, introduced here as Dallas judge, speaking for Felix Robertson, said in substance: Doctor Cranfill, teacher of men's Bible class at Dr. Truett's church in Dallas, made mistake of indorsing Mrs. Ferguson. Robertson supporters there made it so hot for him he found it necessary to take three months' vacation. Thereupon the class promptly elected Judge Robertson to teach. Please give exact facts. (Signed) Wichita County Ferguson Club."

Cranfill's Telegram

The following reply was received Tuesday:

"Ferguson club, Wichita Falls. All of the statements ascribed to H. G. Wills were true with the following exceptions: I have not publicly indorsed Mrs. Ferguson. Judge Robertson's supporters have not made it hot for me. I haven't taken any three months' vacation, nor has Judge Felix D. Robertson at any time or under any circumstances ever taught my Sunday school class. I have interviewed H. G. Wills and he has confessed to me that these statements concerning me there were erroneous. (Signed) J. B. Cranfill."

Robertson's War Record

In his address at Burkburnett, Judge Wills was quoted as saying that Judge Robertson saw military service in France and in the front line trenches, during the war. The following statement with reference to this matter was made Tuesday by W. F. Jourdan, acting chairman of the Ferguson for Governor club:

"Our club had no desire whatever to belittle the war record of any man who sought to serve his country, and it gives Judge Robertson full credit for volunteering. However, the statement made by Judge Wills is widely at variance with the true facts that we undertook to set the matter straight by wiring the adjutant general's office at Austin, believing that no one should claim credit for war feats that he did not perform. Tuesday we received the following reply from the adjutant general:

"'Answering yours of this date. Felix Robertson was a major, 36th, division from August 5, 1917 to May 9, 1918, on which date he was discharged at Camp Bowie for the convenience of the government on the recommendation of an efficiency board. This was the only federal service he had, and he saw no service out of Texas. Gov. Hobby appointed Robertson a major in the Texas cavalry soon thereafter, but this organization did not receive federal recognition. (Signed) Thos. D. Barton.'"

POLICE SOLVE SAFE ROBBERIES

Four Young Men Put Under Arrest By City Officers

Four young white men, all charged with burglary growing out of the breaking of the safes of the Magnolia Petroleum company Sunday afternoon, where $35 in cash was taken, and the safe of the Producers Creamery company during Sunday night, which gave up $735.00, were arrested by plainclothesmen from the city police department. They were located and arrested in a private residence on Spring street and placed in the county jail after search that resulted in the recovery of most of the missing money and connection with the offenses charged.

Complaints chagging burglary were filed by the district attorney against:

Louis Tillman, 19.
Billie Keyes, 21.
Alvin Ireland, 20.
Aubrey Smith, aged 18 or 19 years.

They will be held without an examining [illegible] to await the action of the grand jury which will assemble next Monday.

Several of the young men held under arrest in connection with the breaking of the two safes have police records, said Police Chief Geo. F. Hodgins. Ireland is out under bond while appeal for new trial is pending after five year suspended sentence was imposed upon him in the thirtieth district court two weeks ago. He was tried for receiving and concealing stolen property.

Legal complaints will be prepared by the district attorney in the cases filed and submitted to the grand jury Monday morning.

On one of the men arrested was found $211, on another $18 and the third $6, the remainder of the missing cash being taken from the person of the fourth man, Chief Hodgins said.

The city officers found twelve of the thirteen new silver dollars that were secured out of the Producers Creamery company safe, four of which had been paid out for jitney service, it was said.

"I suffered with pimples for quite a while before I found anything that would relieve them. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a short time I got relief. I continued the treatment and in three or four months I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Floyd Banks, R. F. D. 6, Easley, S. C., March 24, 1924.

M. Andre Gives Rules of Health

By W. CARTER PHILLIPS

Unnatural living conditions prevent civilized man from enjoying the health and strength Nature intended he should have, according to M. Pierre Andre, discoverer of the celebrated medicine, Karnak.

If the body gets sufficient nourishment to keep up the strength and impurities are eliminated thoroughly there is no reason why we should not enjoy good health indefinitely, declares M. Andre.

Unfortunately modern man has surrounded himself with artificial living conditions that make the attainment of this balance practically impossible.

The major portion of our food is hastily cooked and hard to digest. Constant hard work, business cares and social activities keep our brains and our nerves at high tension and we do not get sufficient sleep, rest and recreation. The over-wrought system craves stimulants like coffee, tobacco, and strong drink, and finally the entire structure tumbles down and our vital organs "go on strike."

Karnak brings relief to such sufferers by strengthening the weak, worn-out stomach. The digestion is re-vitalized and the appetite for wholesome food is increased. Karnak also increases metabolism, or the changing of food into body-building nourishment. Impurities are thrown off thoroughly and naturally. Rich, red blood is built up and strong, healthy flesh and muscle replace the flabby, worn-out tissues.

In this way Karnak helps Nature restore the whole body to health, strength nad vitality.

Thousands of people everywhere are praising the medicine in the public press.

Karnak is sold in Wichita Falls by all Druggists.
