Seliger named higher ed committee chairman

State senator 'appreciates opportunity to work with colleges, universities'

By Meredith Moriak
mmoriak@mrt.com

Sen. Kel Seliger, R-Amarillo, was appointed chairman of the Senate higher education committee Thursday by Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst.

"I appreciate the opportunity to work with our colleges, universities, and community colleges, and the members of the committee to address one of the greatest challenges of the Legislature," Seliger in a statement.

UTPB President David Watts is pleased with Seliger's appointment.

"I have the highest confidence in Sen. Seliger, his understanding of higher education and the needs of Texas," Watts said.

Seliger's appointment to an education-related post wasn't surprising, said Midland College President Steve Thomas.

"We'd been hearing some rumblings on changes of chairmanships in the Senate, but I actually thought he might end up as the education chairman," Thomas said of the position given to Sen. Dan Patrick, R-Houston. "Having Seliger as chair is good for Midland College, as he's a good friend of the college."

Dewhurst appointed Patrick as chairman of the education committee, which is in charge of public schools.

Seliger replaces Sen. Judith Zaffirini's, D-Laredo, who will chair the Senate committee on government organization. She is the state's second-longest serving senator and someone Thomas describes as a true advocate for community colleges.

In her new position, Zaffirini will work to review state agencies and consider sunset legislation. With the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board up for review, Watts said it will be beneficial with her chairing the committee.

"Zaffirini has been a strong

Former mayor: Poe 'gave so much to the community'

By Ed Todd

Sterling of character, conscientious and, like his predecessor, a gentleman's gentleman, Fred Poe, Midland city manager in the late 1980s and early 1990s, was attuned to details, adept in problem-solving and bestowed with a kind heart.

"I feel strongly about what a great guy he was and the super job he did as city manager and as Jim Brown's assistant (city manager)," said Ernest Angelo, who was mayor from 1972 to 1980.

Poe, who died Monday at the age of 85, was Brown's assistant city manager for more than 20 years. Brown, who was city manager from 1964 until his retirement in 1987 — when Poe succeeded him — died in October 2009 at age 87.

"There were no two finer people than Fred Poe and Jim Brown to work with during my tenure as mayor," Angelo said. "They gave so much to the community."

Poe and Brown were World War II veterans, and Poe also served during the ## College forum helps high school students

By Tyler White
twhite@mrt.com

High school students from Midland and Odessa explored their options Thursday night at a college forum at Chaparral Center.

The annual event — sponsored by Midland College, Midland ISD and the Reporter-Telegram — featured schools from across Texas and the surrounding states. Student recruiters offered brochures to teens and their parents and answered questions about campus life. The high school students had the opportunity to network with recruiters and peers with similar interests.

College fairs give families an opportunity to learn about colleges that they might not be able to visit, said Ron Moss, Midland ISD director of Guidance & Counseling. Moss said students might discover schools that they had never heard of before, and some of those schools might offer programs and specialized classes.

The event provides students with helpful insight into nearby colleges, said Pooja Singh, a junior at Trinity School. Singh said she wants to study biology or business, and having a number of colleges together in a single event allows her to weigh the pros and cons of each school. By doing so, she said she can decide which college is a better fit for her.

Pooja said this is important because she has not decided what major she will pursue.

"It's hard to narrow down what school you're interested in and what to look for in a college," she said.

The event helps out parents just as much as the kids, said Brent Shuler, whose daughter, Emily, plans on visiting the University of North Texas. The forum provides a method of matching schools with a student's interests, which Shuler said will help him offer educated advice on the different schools.

Emily Shuler said she's been able to weed out schools that don't offer programs in graphic design, which she is interested in pursuing in college.

The students and their parents aren't the only beneficiaries, said Amanda Ritchie, a student recruiter for Tarleton State University.

The recruiters become really close, said Ritchie, who enjoys bouncing ideas off other recruiters in order to help out prospective students. Ritchie said the chance to help high school students decide on their future is a fulfilling experience.

The Texas Tech table draws a large crowd during the College Forum Thursday at Chaparral Center. The free event gave students and families the opportunity to meet representatives from various area colleges.

Lakes benefit from recent steady rains

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Significant rain finally fell in parts of West Texas that have been in a drought for about two years, and the lakes that provide water to the region are the welcome beneficiaries.

The remnants of the Pacific Ocean's Hurricane Miriam and its ensuing tropical depression dumped inches upon the region last week.

Some locations got more than a foot of rain.

O.H. Ivie Lake, which supplies water for San Angelo, doubled in size and is up 15 feet. Another nearly empty lake, E.V. Spence, rose 25 feet.

Thirty miles north of San Angelo, officials in the small town of Robert Lee said this week its lake rose as much as 8

2 men held in Border Patrol agent shooting

Associated Press

PHOENIX — Federal police have arrested two men who may be connected with the fatal shooting of a U.S. Border Patrol agent just north of the Mexico-Arizona border, a Mexican law enforcement official said Thursday.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to release the information, said it was unclear if there was strong evidence linking the men to the shooting of Agent Nicholas Ivie.

Ivie and two other agents were fired upon Tuesday in a rugged hilly area about five miles north of the border near Bisbee, Ariz., as they responded to an alarm that was triggered on one of the sensors that the government has installed along the border.

One of the agents was shot in the ankle and buttocks and was released from the hospital after undergoing surgery. The third agent wasn't injured.

Brenda Nath, an FBI spokeswoman in Arizona, and Border Patrol officials in Arizona declined to comment on the detention of the two men in Mexico. The Cochise County sheriff's office, which is also investigating the shooting, didn't immediately respond to requests for comment.

Lydia Antonio, a spokeswoman for the Mexican Embassy in Washington, confirmed the two detentions, but declined to say what prompted them and what made authorities suspect the two might be involved in the shooting.

At a news conference Thursday in Washington, Attorney General Eric Holder said he is getting updates on the investigation's progress and has spoken with Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano about the probe.

Napolitano is traveling to Arizona today to express her condolences to Ivie's family and to meet with law enforcement authorities in southern Arizona about the investigation.

Authorities have declined to provide key details about the shooting, including what they believe prompted the shooting, whether the agents were ambushed and whether any guns from the shooting were recovered. Still, they suspect that more than one person fired on the agents.

The head of the Border Patrol agents union has said he believes those who carried out the shooting probably had time to escape in the early morning darkness before authorities could seal off the area and that he doubted that whoever shot the agents would still be hiding in the area.

In nearby Sierra Vista, Ariz., family members described Ivie as a devoted Mormon who developed a love for the country's people and culture while serving on a mission in Mexico City.

Ivie's brother, Chris Ivie, remembered that once wile his brother was on patrol, he came across a pregnant woman who had lost her shoes and whose feet were cut up. "He carried that woman a mile and a half to where she could receive the proper help that she needed," Ivie said.

Nicholas Ivie's death marked the first fatal shooting of an agent since a deadly 2010 firefight with Mexican bandits that killed U.S. Border Patrol Agent Brian Terry in December 2010 and spawned congressional probes of a botched government gun-smuggling investigation.

Terry's shooting was later linked to that "Fast and Furious" operation, which allowed people suspected of illegally buying guns for others to walk away from gun shops with weapons, rather than be arrested.

Authorities intended to track the guns into Mexico. Two rifles found at the scene of Terry's shooting were bought by a member of the gun-smuggling ring being investigated. Critics of the operation say any shooting along the border now will raise the specter that those illegal weapons are still being used.

Twenty-six Border Patrol agents have died in the line of duty since 2002.

Daryl Hannah arrested during pipeline protest

Actress Daryl Hannah has been arrested along with a 78-year-old northeast Texas landowner while protesting construction of a pipeline designed to bring crude oil from Canada to Gulf Coast refineries.

Hannah's manager, Paul Bassis, said Hannah was arrested Thursday evening.

Bassis said Hannah and landowner Eleanor Fairchild were standing in front of heavy equipment brought onto the woman's property in Winnsboro, about 100 miles east of Dallas.

Bassis said both women were taken to the Wood County Jail.

Hannah, who starred in "Splash" and "Kill Bill," also was arrested in August 2011 while protesting the Keystone XL pipeline in Washington.

Several acres of Fairchild's farm have been condemned by TransCanada. She said she opposes TransCanada's plan to transport heavy tar-sands crude from Canada to the Gulf Coast.

Man linked to Anonymous hackers indicted

A Dallas man linked to the worldwide hacking group Anonymous is accused of threatening to ruin an FBI agent's life in online postings.

Barrett Brown was arrested last month. Federal authorities had not said why he was detained until Thursday's announcement of an indictment.

The 31-year-old Brown is charged with Internet threats, conspiracy to make publically available restricted personal information of a government employee and retaliation against a federal law enforcement officer.

Brown's attorney, Jay Leiderman, said he believes some of the charges stem from a YouTube video in which Brown rails against law enforcement.

Brown has previously been linked to the Anonymous movement of cyberrebels. He's been quoted in media reports about the shadowy movement.

Feds to seek death penalty in human smuggling case

Federal prosecutors will seek the death penalty for a Salvadoran man accused in a human smuggling operation in which two immigrants were fatally beaten trying to escape.

A federal grand jury in Houston returned a superseding indictment Thursday against Wilmar Rene Duran-Gomez. It accuses the 40-year-old man of conspiracy, money laundering and harboring aliens resulting in the deaths of two Honduran men. Five others also were charged with conspiracy.

A Justice Department statement said illegal immigrants were delivered to a southwest Houston warehouse in November 2006. Some started a fire as cover for an escape attempt that failed.

Prosecutors said Duran and two others beat the immigrants as punishment, two fatally, and Duran had their bodies dumped in a remote vacant lot.

Texas agencies duel over Alamo commander's letter

Associated Press

DALLAS — It's a new Battle of the Alamo, with one Texas agency mounting pressure on another to loan out one of the state's most sacred texts for display at "the shrine of Texas independence."

The General Land Office is pressing the State Library and Archives Commission to loan the "Victory or Death" letter penned by Col. William Barret Travis, the commander of the Alamo garrison, from its "dark storage" for a 14-day exhibit at the Alamo in February.

"Our thinking is this is a Texas treasure and deserves to be seen by the people of Texas. We think this letter can be an inspiration to the people of Texas," Land Office spokesman Mark Loeffler said.

However, the commission voted down a motion to approve the request Tuesday after commission staff recommended against the document loan. The commission will meet again in Austin in three weeks to reconsider the matter, library spokesman Cesar Garza said. In the meantime, the staffs of the two agencies will try to negotiate a deal, Loeffler said.

Since 2011, the General Land Office has been the custodian of the Alamo, and it is planning an exhibit Feb. 23-March 7 there to mark the 177th anniversary of the siege and battle.

Although acknowledging that no one can promise complete security, "we want to provide the best security possible," Loeffler said. That would include a state trooper escort from the library in Austin to San Antonio and back.

It rarely has been loaned for display, never in San Antonio, and is kept by the state library in "dark storage" out of public view, Loeffler said. Although many copies and facsimiles of the letter have been displayed, "people are more inspired to see the document that Travis, himself, touched," he said.

Travis was a South Carolina-born Alabama lawyer and militiaman who fled an unhappy marriage and possibly the killing of another man and moved to Mexican-held Texas as an illegal U.S. immigrant.

He resumed his law practice in the Texas port of Anahuac and became an ardent advocate of revolution against Mexico. He gathered reinforcements for a militia detachment occupying the Alamo, a former mission church in Bexar, the future San Antonio.

Fearing his force too sparse to resist the Mexican force vastly outnumbering his, Travis wrote a letter (http://bit.ly/OE1ei8 ) Feb. 24, 1836, addressed "To the People of Texas & all Americans in the world." He states that his men had been under Mexican bombardment for 24 hours. He said the Mexican commander, Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna, had given an ultimatum that the Texas garrison surrender or "be put to the sword." "I have answered the demand with a cannon shot, & and our flag still waves proudly from the walls — I shall never retreat or surrender."

He concludes: "If this call is neglected, I am determined to sustain myself as long as possible & die like a soldier who never forgets what is due to his own honor & that of his country — Victory or Death."

The letter was taken out by courier and published in leaflets and newspapers.

The volunteers came but not in time. Santa Anna's forces stormed the Alamo on March 6 and overwhelmed and killed its defenders. The volunteers joined the troops under Sam Houston's command and defeated Santa Anna at the April 22 Battle of San Jacinto near present-day Houston, securing Texas independence until its annexation by the United States in 1845.

According to the state library website, the letter was returned to the Travis family shortly thereafter. In 1893, his great-grandson sold it for $85 to the Texas state government. It was placed in the state library upon its creation in 1909.

Lawsuit seeks to block mules from Lubbock farm exhibit

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — A San Antonio man is suing the president of a Lubbock museum that bought two old mules and euthanized them for a farm display.

Patrick Green's lawsuit against the president of the board of directors of the American Museum of Agriculture seeks to block the stuffed mules from an historical reaping machine exhibit.

The lawsuit filed Tuesday in state court claims the wild mules were property of the state and asks their bodies be given to an animal sanctuary for cremation and disposal.

Museum attorneys told the Lubbock Avalanche Journal they haven't seen the lawsuit. They've said earlier the animals were at least 28 years old, not strong enough for work and would have been sent to Mexico for slaughter if they hadn't been euthanized for the exhibit.

Eddy, Lea counties want nuke waste

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Four government agencies in southeastern New Mexico are getting together to try to convince the federal government to put a high-level nuclear waste site in their region.

Eddy and Lea counties and the cities of Carlsbad and Hobbs said this week they're working on a partnership with French nuclear conglomerate Areva to promote a storage site for waste from nuclear power plants.

The site they have in mind is midway between the two cities. It would be used as an interim storage site for nearly 70,000 metric tons of nuclear waste now mainly stored at nuclear power plants. The waste must be stored in special shielded containers, sometimes under water, because it is highly radioactive.

The Albuquerque Journal reported that federal action remains unclear. Two pieces of legislation aimed at the nuclear waste issue died in this year's gridlocked Congress.

Southeastern New Mexico is already home to two significant nuclear facilities — the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad and the National Enrichment Facility near Hobbs. The waste isolation plant disposes of radioactive nuclear weapons waste in a deep underground mine, and the Hobbs facility processes uranium for use in nuclear power plants. In addition, the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission issued a license this week for a third nuclear facility nearby, which would handle waste from the uranium fuel-making process.

Community leaders hope to leverage their communities' expertise, along with public acceptance of nuclear technology, to bring what they estimate to be a 150-job facility to the region.

Any effort to bring additional nuclear waste to New Mexico is likely to run into significant political opposition, said Don Hancock of the Southwest Research and Information Center, an Albuquerque research and advocacy group opposed to the proposal.

Hancock said that when Congress approved the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant in the early 1990s, the legislation explicitly prohibited bringing high-level nuclear power plant waste to the site.

"The public said 'no,' and Congress recognized that," Hancock said. He argued that transporting the waste across the country posed inherent dangers that could be avoided by simply leaving the waste where it is, in storage at existing nuclear power plant sites.

The proposed Lea-Eddy site appears to avoid the congressional prohibition, because it is not located at the WIPP site, and its backers disagree with Hancock regarding safety.

Water worries

Based on limits set by the Colorado River Municipal Water District and the amount the city can take from the Paul Davis water fields, city officials expect water delivery to be limited to 18.5 million gallons. Using more than that figure consistently could result in the city halting outdoor watering.

Midland police investigate a three vehicle accident Thursday afternoon on Garfield Street, just north of Interstate 20. Two pickups were traveling south on Garfield, lost control, hit a car traveling north and both pickupts rolled into the ditch on the side of the road. Three people were transported to Midland Memorial Hospital.

Wreck leaves 2 pickups in ditch

From staff reports

Three people were transported to Midland Memorial Hospital Thursday afternoon with minor injuries after a wreck left two pickups upside down in a ditch.

Midland Fire Department Battalion Chief Ken Whiting said the injuries included a fractured ankle, contusions and cuts, and one person may have a broken nose.

The wreck occurred about 3:51 p.m. when a 17-year-old male, driving a white Chevrolet pickup, made a U-turn while traveling south on Garfield Street.

The driver hit a white Buick sedan, lost control of the truck and rolled it once into the ditch, according to Ryan Stout, interim public information officer for the city.

The driver of a black Ford pickup braked hard to avoid the Chevy but rolled after losing control, Stout said.

Two passengers in the sedan and the driver of the Ford pickup were transported to MMH with minor injuries. The pickup passengers, who suffered minor injuries, declined to be transported to the hospital.

The wreck still is under investigation. Charges are pending against the driver of the white pickup, Stout said.

Midland gas prices high despite drops across Texas

From staff reports

Regular unleaded gasoline prices have fallen by an average of 4 cents across the state, to $3.54 per gallon, but Midland remains above the average in the weekly AAA Texas Weekend Gas Watch survey.

The cheapest gas in the county is $3.61 at the Stripes on the 4400 block of Briarwood Avenue. Midland also boasts the second highest gas price in Texas, $3.99 at the Patriot Oil on the 3000 block of West Interstate 20, according to gas tracking agency www.TexasGasPrices.com

In a statement Thursday, the auto club credited recent global crude oil price declines, the end of the summer driving season, sluggish economic news and a seasonal switch away from more expensive summer gasoline blends.

The statewide average is well below the national average of $3.78, just a penny decrease from last week.

The state's cheapest gasoline is found in Fort Worth, where the average price fell a nickel to $3.47 per gallon.

Korean War. They possessed the "unique ability to work through the role that the city manager" has in encouraging the city council and the mayor's office to carry out their community responsibilities with honor, he said.

"Fred and Jim both did a super job of that while, at the same time, bringing great leadership to the city and in the day-to-day management of city affairs," Angelo said.

While fitting the "definition of gentleman" and men of integrity, Poe and Brown were low-key in many respects and provided tremendous leadership, Angelo said.

"Fred clearly knew the ins and outs of city government, what the problems were and could figure out the solutions," he said.

Edwin Magruder, who preceded Angelo as mayor in 1968-1972, said Poe "was a good man, a fine Christian man, was thoughtful about spending and could manage the taxpayers' money very well."

Carroll Thomas, who was a city councilman and served as mayor in 1986-1992, characterized Brown as "an overseer and a good leader" as city manager, while Poe "did a lot of the nuts-and-bolts and day-to-day, nitty-gritty part of running a city.

"Jim Brown relied on Fred a lot to oversee the budget and all the detail work," Thomas said. "I think that was Fred's real, strength, absolutely, a detail person, a numbers guy. He stayed on top of things."

As city manager, Brown was "looking at the overall policies and direction of the city and, of course, he handled all relations with the mayor and city council," he said.

Brown and Poe "were an excellent team because Jim liked working with the council and visiting with the different departments and seeing what they needed or how they were doing," Thomas said. "Fred was in there, too ... punching the numbers and visiting with them, too."

Poe was aware of the problems, "where they needed to increase their budgets or maybe they could cut back a little," Thomas said.

Brown and Poe were "just a good team. They complemented each other," he said.

And when Brown was preparing to retire as city manager, "Fred inherited the job. He was the obvious one to take over. He knew so much about city government," Thomas said.

"Fred took on not only overseeing the nitty-gritty part, but also the council relations and all that," he said.

Unlike many other municipal governments that suffer from political skirmishes and indiscretions that result in turnovers in management, Midland fared well under the Brown and Poe leaderships, Thomas said.

The long tenures that Brown and Poe experienced in city government speak "highly of those guys and of the whole city operations," Thomas said. City government was "run very business-like and efficiently."

Man accused of being Russia agent didn't mingle

Associated Press

HOUSTON — In his suburban Houston neighborhood, at least, Alexander Fishenko kept a low profile, living well but never mingling with others on his block. All the while, U.S. authorities said, the immigrant from Kazakhstan was leading a plot to funnel cutting-edge military technology to Russia.

For the last four years, Fishenko lived with his family in a two-story, four-bedroom home, a stranger to his neighbors, unknown to leaders in Houston's Russian community of more than 100,000 residents.

"I wouldn't have thought he was the ring leader. He was so nondescript, an everyday kind of guy," Charlie Houssiere, who lives across the street from Fishenko, said Thursday. "The whole time I thought he worked at an oil company."

Instead, U.S. authorities said he was running a Houston-based company that obtained highly regulated technology and clandestinely exported it to Russia for use by that country's military and intelligence agencies. The microelectronics could have a wide range of military uses, including radar and surveillance systems, weapons guidance systems and detonation triggers, U.S. authorities said.

Fishenko is accused of scheming to purposely evade strict export controls for cutting-edge microelectronics, of operating inside the U.S. as an unregistered agent of the Russian government, and of money laundering.

Fishenko and six others arrested by authorities this week made their initial appearances Thursday in federal court in Houston. An eighth defendant appeared in court Wednesday.

advocate for higher ed and will continue being able to impact higher education with her new appointment," Watts said. "With her appointment and Seliger's, in some ways, it's a double positive."

On Monday, Gov. Rick Perry outlined his higher education initiatives for the upcoming legislative session regarding accessibility, accountability and affordability.

In addition to calling for a four-year tuition freeze, outcomes-based funding for institutions and increased fiscal transparency for students and families, Perry renewed his challenge for institutions to create more affordable $10,000 bachelor's degree options, according to a news release.

Ten universities, including UTPB, Sul Ross State University and Angelo State University, have created a bachelor's degree program for $10,000 or less in response to Perry's February 2011 challenge.

"The future and success of our state depends upon a well-trained and well-educated workforce," Seliger said. "We begin work today to try to ensure that every Texan who wants a higher education has an affordable opportunity."

LAKES

feet. In May, the town of about 1,100 residents was down to a 12-hour supply of water.

"We're ecstatic right now," said Beverly Hawkins, Robert Lee's lone florist who got 8.5 inches at her house. "We got a wonderful supply of rain."

Though levels rose in most lakes, none is more than about a quarter of capacity.

Much of the region has been in various stages of drought since at least September 2010, and Texas as a state saw its driest year on record in 2011.

When rain does fall on West Texas, where the terrain is predominantly flat, it typically doesn't fall for several days in a row. This time, the ground had soaked up as much as 4 inches of rain that previously had fallen, so this round of precipitation triggered runoff, pushing lake levels up across the region.

The days of rain and the resulting improvement in lake levels were the talk of the region.

In Robert Lee, residents chatted about it at the local cafe Sunday, said E.R. Roberts, the city's water superintendent.

"They were comparing notes as to how much rain everybody got," he said. "I can't explain how happy everybody is."

Rainfall totals varied across the region. The area around San Angelo, a city of more than 90,000, got about 13 inches, city spokesman Anthony Wilson said. But the city's official total was 5.8 inches, he said.

National Weather Service officials said Midland broke a daily record for Sept. 28 with 4.7 inches — the third-highest one-day total. Over a three-day span, Midland got 5.24 inches and Odessa, about 20 miles west of Midland, saw 4.8 inches.

The weather was not without problems. Emergency crews plucked more than 120 motorists from vehicles stranded in high water in Midland and Odessa on Sept. 28.

Even with millions of gallons of rainwater going into O.H. Ivie, which also serves Midland and Abilene, it's still just 26 percent full, officials said. E.V. Spence is just 5 percent full.

And O.C. Fisher, which was completely dry before the rains, rose 6 feet and is now 2 percent of capacity. Twin Buttes Lake's level rose 8 feet and is 7 percent full.

The San Angelo area has had decent rains this year before last weekend, but nothing fell in the lakes' watersheds.

"It just wasn't raining in the right place in the right intensity at the right times," Wilson said.

Hundreds seen at risk in meningitis outbreak

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The potential scope of the meningitis outbreak that has killed at least five people widened dramatically Thursday as health officials warned that hundreds, perhaps thousands, of patients who got steroid back injections in 23 states could be at risk.

Clinics and medical centers rushed to contact patients who may have received the apparently fungus-contaminated shots. And the Food and Drug Administration urged doctors not to use any products at all from the Massachusetts pharmacy that supplied the suspect steroid solution.

It is not clear how many patients received tainted injections, or even whether everyone who got one will get sick.

So far, 35 people in six states — Tennessee, Virginia, Maryland, Florida, North Carolina and Indiana — have contracted fungal meningitis, and five of them have died, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. All had received steroid shots for back pain, a highly common treatment.

In an alarming indication the outbreak could get a lot bigger, Massachusetts health officials said the pharmacy involved, the New England Compounding Center of Framingham, Mass., has recalled three lots consisting of a total of 17,676 single-dose vials of the steroid, preservative-free methylprednisolone acetate.

Defective generic pill revives quality concerns

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More Americans than ever are taking generic drugs, as blockbuster medicines like Plavix and Lipitor become available in low-cost versions. But the government's revelation this week that it mistakenly approved a defective generic antidepressant could stoke longtime concerns about the quality of knockoff drugs.

The Food and Drug Administration on Wednesday asked Teva Pharmaceuticals to withdraw its drug Budeprion XL 300 after testing showed the drug did not properly release its key ingredient. The drug is supposed to be equivalent to GlaxoSmithKline's popular antidepressant Wellbutrin XL, which is prescribed to treat depression, anxiety and symptoms of nicotine withdrawal.

The announcement marked an about-face for regulators, who said in 2008 that the two drugs were essentially the same, despite hundreds of complaints from patients who said they experienced side effects such as headaches, anxiety and insomnia after switching to the generic drug. The FDA has withdrawn generic drugs before, but this appears to be the first case driven by consumer complaints, which continued to pile up after the FDA said the drug was working correctly.

"The lesson is that everyone — from pharmacists to physicians to the FDA — needs to take these reports seriously," said Dr. Tod Cooperman of ConsumerLab, a privately held company that independently tests drugs and nutrition products. Cooperman added that the vast majority generic drugs work appropriately but that, "consumers will be the first to know when there is a problem."

ConsumerLab first drew attention to the issue with Budeprion XL in 2007. The company published an analysis of the two drugs, indicating Budeprion XL released its active ingredient at a much faster rate than Wellbutrin. The FDA completed its own study in August that confirmed those findings.

"There are approximately 10,000 FDA-approved interchangable generics in the U.S. The recall by a single manufacturer of one strength of a generic drug should in no way cast doubt on the impeccable reputation of the generic industry or the FDA."

Ralph Neas, CEO and president of The Generic Pharmaceuticals Association

But FDA officials said Thursday it would have been irresponsible to make scientific decisions based on patient reports, which can be influenced by a host of individual factors, including their disease.

"When these reports come in we don't know exactly what is going on with the patient," said David Read, regulatory counsel for the FDA's office of generic drugs. "Is it a failure of the drug or is it a coincidence they are experiencing some sort of problem? It's something to discuss between them and their physician."

Read pointed out that in the last five years the FDA has only had to correct itself on the equivalence of three drugs. Two cases involved drugs from Dr. Reddy's Laboratories: an antidepressant and an antifungal medication. The third case involved an anti-seizure drug from Upshur-Smith Laboratories.

The FDA approved the first generic versions of Wellbutrin XL in 2006, including Budeprion. The generic drug is made by U.S.-based Impax Laboratories Inc. and sold by Israel-based Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd.

Teva said Wednesday that it halted shipments of the drug Sept. 27 after being contacted by the FDA. The company pointed out that there is no safety issue with the pill.

The Generic Pharmaceutical Association, a trade group for generic drugmakers, moved quickly to defend the track record of both the FDA and its companies.

"There are approximately 10,000 FDA-approved interchangeable generics in the U.S.," said Ralph Neas, the group's CEO and president. "The recall by a single manufacturer of one strength of a generic drug should in no way cast doubt on the impeccable reputation of the generic industry or the FDA."

The generic pharmaceutical industry has never been more successful. With prices 50 to 70 percent below the original product, generic drugs are favored by government and private insurers, pharmacies and patients. Last year, generic drugs made up 80 percent of the 4 billion prescriptions written in the U.S., an all-time high driven by a wave of patent expirations. In the last year some of the best-selling drugs ever made have gone generic, including the high cholesterol pill Lipitor and the blood thinner Plavix.

And complaints about generic drugs are rare, although they have cropped up before. The FDA's stance has been that generic drugs are chemically and medically equivalent to the original products. The agency has hammered home that message in pamphlets and posters with slogans like "Generic Drugs Make the Grade," and "Generic Drugs Measure Up."

But the same streamlined process that makes generic drugs so cheap can open the door to problems like those seen with Teva's antidepressant. Developing and testing an original prescription drug can take more than a decade and cost upwards of $1 billion dollars, according to the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers Association. The high price tag on most new drugs reflects the cost of years of trials that often involve hundreds of patients.

By comparison, generics are much less expensive because manufacturers are not required to repeat those costly studies. Instead the FDA asks companies to show that the drug is the same dose, strength and functions similarly in the body. In most cases, that means conducting a small study of 25 to 35 people showing that the generic drug is absorbed into the bloodstream at the same rate as the original drug. Usually regulators require a test of one dose of the drug, and then apply those results to other dosages.

FDA officials said Wednesday that this practice led to the mistaken approval of Teva's antidepressant.

The FDA approved the drug based on a study of the 150 milligram dose of the drug, assuming the 300 milligram version of the drug would function similarly. An agency follow-up study showed that only 75 percent of the 300 milligram dose was actually being absorbed into the bloodstream.

GOP candidate pulls off tactical coup

■ In first presidential debate, Romney demonstrates authoritative command of various domestic issues.

CHARLES KRAUTHAMMER
Washington Post Writers Group

It was the biggest rout since Agincourt. If you insist, since the Carter-Reagan debate. With a remarkable display of confidence, knowledge and nerve, Mitt Romney won the first debate going away.

Romney didn't just demonstrate authoritative command of a myriad of domestic issues. He was nervy about it, taking the president on frontally, not just relentlessly attacking, but answering every charge leveled against him — with a three-point rebuttal.

And he pulled off a tactical coup by coming right out of the box to undo millions of dollars' worth of negative ads that painted him, personally, as Gordon Gekko — rapacious vulture capitalist who doesn't just lay off steelworkers but kills their wives — and, politically, as intent on raising taxes on the middle class while lowering them for the rich.

The Romney campaign had let these ads go largely unanswered. But a "kill Romney" strategy can only work until people get to see Romney themselves. On Wednesday night, they did. Confident, smiling and nonthreatening, he didn't look like a man who enjoys killing the wives of laid-off steelworkers.

Not a very high bar, I admit. But remember: It's President Obama who set the bar. And succeeded. Romney suffers from unprecedentedly high negatives (50 percent), the highest unfavorability rating at this late date for any challenger in the last three decades.

As to the policy, Romney finally got to explain to the 60 million Americans watching that he intends to lower taxes across the board, particularly for the middle class. As for the rich, he got to explain the difference between lowering tax rates and reducing tax payments. He repeated at least twice that the rich would continue to pay the same percentage of the tax burden, while lower rates would spur economic growth. His success in doing this against a flummoxed Obama does more than rally the conservative base. It may affect waverers — disappointed 2008 Obama supporters waiting for a reason to jump. They watch Romney in this debate and ask: Is this the clueless, selfish, out-of-touch guy we've been hearing about from the ads and from the mainstream media?

And then they see Obama — detached, meandering, unsure. Can this be the hip, cool, in-control guy his acolytes and the media have been telling us about?

Obama was undone on Wednesday in part by his dismissive arrogance. You could see him thinking annoyedly: "Why do I have to be onstage with this clod, when I've gone toe-to-toe with Putin?" (And lost every round, I'd say. But that's not how Obama sees it.)

Obama never even pulled out his best weapon, the 47 percent. Not once. That's called sitting on a lead, lazily and smugly. I wager he mentions it in the next debate, more than once — and likely in his kickoff.

On the other hand, Obama just isn't that good — not without a teleprompter. He's not even that good at news conferences — a venue in which he's still in charge.

By the end of the debate, Obama looked small, uncertain. It was Romney who had the presidential look.

Re-election campaigns after a failed presidential term hinge almost entirely on whether the challenger can meet the threshold of acceptability. Romney crossed the threshold Wednesday night.

Reagan won his election (Carter was actually ahead at the time) when he defused his caricature as some wild, extreme, warmongering cowboy. In his debate with Carter, he was affable, avuncular and reasonable. That's why with a single aw-shucks line, "There you go again," the election was over.

Romney had to show something a little different: That he is not the clumsy, out-of-touch plutocrat that the paid Obama ads and the unpaid media have portrayed him to be. He did, decisively.

That's why MSNBC is on suicide watch. Why the polls show that, by a margin of at least 2 to 1, voters overwhelmingly gave the debate to Romney.

And he won big in an unusual way. This could be the only presidential debate ever won so definitively in the absence of some obvious and ruinous gaffe, like Gerald Ford's "there is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe."

Romney by two touchdowns.

OUR VIEW

Romeny's showing is worthy of presidency

The signs of a victory for Mitt Romney over President Barrack Obama in the first presidential debate Wednesday night came like a flood out of the blue. Every poll from Fox News, CNN, CBS, MSNBC, etc. declared that Romney had bested the president in a head-to-head face off.

It didn't seem-to matter what groups were polled — Romney won. Registered voters, women, undecided voters, unemployed voters all gave thumbs up to the Romney effort. It couldn't have come at a better time for the Romney campaign. Let's be frank: Before Wednesday's debate, it appeared the president's campaign had been dominating this campaign.

If President Obama thought he could walk in to the debate and dominate a weaker foe, he was sadly mistaken. What he found was a Romney who had been skillfully prepared for these debates with more than 50 hours under the gun during the Republican primaries.

Romney appeared in control — and dare we say it — more presidential. Certainly, he was effective in questioning the president's record on domestic issues and brought everything back to the economy where the president has underperformed.

This was the side of Romney that we had hoped would resonate with the undecided voters across the nation. Romney finally gave a performance that was deserving of the presidency. While on Wednesday we believed Romney couldn't win the election, we thought a poor performance in Denver likely would sink his chances in November. This is no longer a sinking ship.

One thing we appreciate about the apparent Romney victory is the campaign is ultimately closer than it was before the debate. That means the rest of the debates should matter more. The more voters, especially those who haven't made their decision, pay attention to the process the better decision America will make Nov. 6. And our guess is more people will pay attention to the rest of the debate schedule, beginning with Thursday's vice presidential debate. The other two presidential debates are on Oct. 16 and Oct. 22.

Lastly, Romney's showing on Wednesday made it clear to us that he should be the next president of the United States. It is now an endorsement of new hope and renewed respect on our part. While we have had reservations about his candidacy for very good reasons, we must now state for the record a Romney win in November would be best for all Midlanders and West Texans.

As for the rest debate season, it's game on.

Romney delivers strong performance

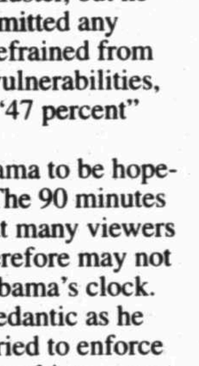
■ If Obama wants to keep his house and his airplane, he'll have to do better next time than he did in Denver.



DANA MILBANK
Washington Post Writer's Group

DENVER — Fifteen minutes into Wednesday night's debate here, Mitt Romney politely called the president of the United States a liar.

After President Obama accused his GOP rival of seeking to cut taxes on the wealthy — a stock line for the incumbent, and basically accurate — Romney deftly returned fire.

"Look, I got five boys," he said. "I'm used to people saying something that's not always true, but just keep on repeating it and ultimately hoping I'll believe it. But that is not the case, all right?"

His chances slipping away in Ohio and other key points on the electoral map, Romney needed something — anything — to change the trajectory of a race that has turned against him. It was his best chance to alter the narrative of the contest and, with tens of millions of Americans watching, Romney gave one of the strongest performances of his campaign.

He said Obama picks "losers" with his energy policy, and he accused the president of being naive to the ways of corporate America: "Look, I've been in business for 25 years. I have no idea what you're talking about." He went on to accuse Obama of decimating Medicare, of not meeting his promises to cut the deficit and of neglecting the unemployed.

Romney went into the exchange benefiting from low expectations. Polls found that by nearly 2 to 1, Americans expected Obama to best Romney in the debate. That meant Romney would do well just by holding his own.

By that standard, Romney certainly succeeded. While Obama's answers were often lengthy and ponderous, Romney went a long way to defeat the impression that he is wooden and awkward. His attacks on the president were respectful but deft. He joined Obama deep in the weeds of policy and demonstrated a command of substance, even if he didn't divulge much new about his policies. At times he sounded downright human — and even (can it be?) funny.

"I'm sorry, Jim," Romney said to the moderator, PBS' Jim Lehrer. "I'm going to stop the subsidy to PBS. ... I like PBS. I love Big Bird. I actually like you, too. But I'm not going to keep on spending money on things to borrow money from China to pay for it."

Obama's performance was lackluster, but he left the stage without having committed any major mishaps. He inexplicably refrained from pressing Romney on his biggest vulnerabilities, such as his income taxes and his "47 percent" remark.

Perhaps the best reason for Obama to be hopeful about reaction to the debate: The 90 minutes were so substantive and solid, that many viewers may have found it dull — and therefore may not have noticed Romney cleaning Obama's clock.

Romney at times he sounded pedantic as he pleaded with the moderator and tried to enforce the rules: "Jim, the president began this segment, so I think I get the last word, so I'm going to take it, all right?"

But he sounded at ease as he joked about the debate occurring on Obama's 20th wedding anniversary ("I'm sure this was the most romantic place you could imagine, here with me"). And the "zingers" his aides had promised were delivered smoothly. "The president has a view very similar to the view he had when he ran four years ago, that a bigger government, spending more, taxing more, regulating more — if you will, trickle-down government — would work," he said.

The challenger increasingly got under Obama's skin, and later in the debate it was the president quarreling with the moderator: "I had five seconds before you interrupted me."

The debate proceeded, from the economy to the debt, to health care and to education, but Romney ended where he began. "You're entitled to your own airplane and your house but not your own facts," he told Obama as the debate wound down.

If Obama wishes to keep that airplane and house, he'll have to do better than he did in Denver.

Debate thrusts Big Bird into presidential campaign

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Big Bird has never been so hot.

"Saturday Night Live," Jimmy Fallon, Piers Morgan, the "Today" show and "Good Morning America" all asked for appearances from the "Sesame Street" character on Thursday after he was unexpectedly thrust into the presidential campaign by Mitt Romney.

Sesame Workshop said the giant yellow Muppet is declining all appearances, but there was this tweet from Big Bird on the Sesame Street account: "My bed time is usually 7:45, but I was really tired yesterday and fell asleep at 7! Did I miss anything last night?"

Yes, Bird. During Wednesday's debate with President Barack Obama, Romney called for cutting federal funding to PBS, despite saying, "I love Big Bird." It renewed a long-running debate over subsidies to public broadcasting.

"I'm going to stop the subsidy to PBS," the former Massachusetts governor, a Republican, said during a deficit-cutting discussion. "I'm going to stop other things. I like PBS. I love Big Bird. I actually like you, too, Jim (Lehrer, PBS newsman and debate moderator). But I'm not going to ... keep on spending money on things to borrow money from China to pay for it."

Obama brought up his opponent's plans for Big Bird during a campaign stop Thursday in Madison, Wis.

"I just want to make sure I've got this straight: He'll get rid of regulations on Wall Street, but he's going to crack down on 'Sesame Street,'" Obama said of Romney. "Thank goodness somebody's finally cracking down on Big Bird! Who knew that he was responsible for all these deficits! Elmo's got to watch out!"

PBS chief Paula Kerger said she "just about fell off the sofa" when the issue suddenly came up during the debate. She said that if the subsidy goes, so will some PBS stations.

Federal funding for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting totals $450 million this year, accounting for about 15 percent of the CPB's budget, she said. Federal money supplements the budgets of PBS' 179 stations nationally. For some of the smaller stations in rural areas, this subsidy accounts for more than half of their yearly budget, so many can't operate without it.

Considering Romney stressed the importance of education, she said she hopes he realizes the extent of educational programming that PBS offers. Four out of five children under age 5 watch public television, where "Sesame Street" is a long-running hit, she said.

"To me, public television is like mom and apple pie," she said. "Maybe it's because I'm just too close to it. Maybe it's because I talk to so many people for whom public television is a lifeline."

But public broadcasting funding has been a frequent target of congressional Republicans, who believe PBS and National Public Radio favor liberal points of view.

"It is demoralizing to have our work put in the middle of this debate," Kerger said. "We don't belong here."

The issue quickly became a hot topic on social media, where Twitter reported a peak of 17,000 tweets per second about Big Bird. The hashtag #SaveBigBird quickly sprouted up.

New York Times columnist Nicholas Kristof tweeted: "Hey, I figured out how Romney will balance the budget: sale of TV rights to broadcast the decapitation of Big Bird."

For several years, "Sesame Street" has produced videos and other materials for the Pentagon to help children deal with parents' absences during tours of duty as well as other stresses suffered by the children of troops.

Asked at a Pentagon briefing whether the Defense Department wants to see its relationship with the program continue, press secretary George Little sidestepped the question.

"I will say that we've had a long-lasting and effective partnership with 'Sesame Street' and they have supported military children," Little said. "But I'm not going to get into politics here — I wouldn't want to ruffle any feathers, so to speak."

Sesame Workshop, the producers who make "Sesame Street," noted that while it is not part of PBS, it depends on the stations to distribute its work.

"Sesame Workshop is a nonpartisan, nonprofit educational organization," said Sherrie Westin, Sesame Workshop spokeswoman. "We do not comment on campaigns, but we're happy we can all agree that everyone likes Big Bird."

Scottish man dies, taking town's dialect with him

Associated Press

LONDON — In a remote fishing town on the tip of Scotland's Black Isle, the last native speaker of the Cromarty dialect has passed away, taking with him a little fragment of the English linguistic mosaic.

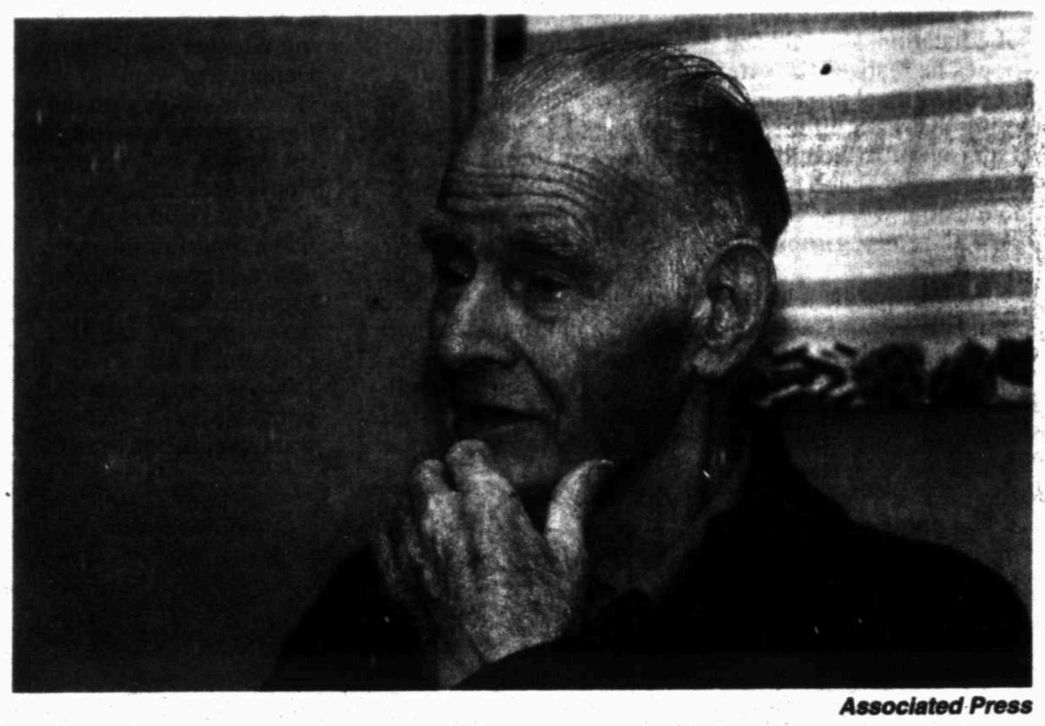
Academics said Wednesday that Bobby Hogg, who was 92 when he died last week, was the last person fluent in the dialect once common to the seaside town of Cromarty, 175 miles north of Edinburgh.

"I think that's a terrible thing," said Robert Millar, a linguist at the University of Aberdeen in northern Scotland. "The more diversity in terms of nature we have, the healthier we are. It's the same with language."

The demise of an obscure dialect spoken by a few hundred people may not register for most English speakers — "We'll all live," Millar said — but it's part of a relentless trend toward standardization that has driven many regional dialects and local languages into oblivion. Linguists often debate how to define and differentiate the world's many dialects, but most agree that urbanization, compulsory education and mass media have conspired to iron out many of the kinks that make rural speech unique.

Cromarty, which counts just over 700 people, is at the very end of a sparsely populated peninsula of forest and farmland.

It's separated from Inverness, the closest city, by the Beauly Firth, a wide body of cold water where salmon run and dolphins frolic.



Associated Press

Bobby Hogg is seen in this undated image released Thursday by Am Baile - High Life Highland. Hogg recently passed away at age 92. He was the last person fluent in the dialect once common to the Scottish seaside town of Cromarty, about 175 miles north of Edinburgh.

The Cromarty dialect included a helping of archaic "thees" and "thous" as well as a wealth of seafaring vocabulary, including three sets of words for "second fishing line."

The aspirate "h" was often added or subtracted, so that "house" would be pronounced "oos" and "apple" would be pronounced "haypel." The "wh" sound was often dropped entirely.

A lexicon of Cromarty words, relying in large part on Hogg's speech, gave "Oo thee keepan?" as Cromarty's version of "How are you?" and "Hiv thoo a roosky sazpence i thi pooch?" for "Can you lend me some money?"

Urban dialects may be strong — Millar referred to "Toonserspik," the "town speech" of cities like Aberdeen — but he said they don't replace what's being lost.

He said urban dialects tend to be more similar to one another than their rural counterparts, with an emphasis on differences in pronunciation over differences in vocabulary. And even rival cities like Glasgow and Edinburgh "sound more like each other than they used to."

Author Mark Abley, who has written about the dynamism of the English language, agrees.

"I don't believe there's a straightforward balancing act in which urban dialects grow as rural ones shrink," he said in an email. "Cities are always melting pots, and isolation for any group is very hard to maintain."

As the worlds' melting pots grow ever bigger — half the Earth's population now lives in cities — lesser-known dialects are evaporating. Worldwide, languages are disappearing regularly, with half of the globe's 6,000-plus languages expected to be extinct by the end of the century, according to UNESCO.

The British Isles saw two languages go extinct within living memory, UNESCO says. The last native speaker of Alderney French, a Norman dialect spoken in the Channel Islands, died around 1960, and the last speaker of traditional Manx, the language once spoken on the Isle of Man, died in 1974.

Donna Heddle, the director of the Center for Nordic Studies at Scotland's University of the Highlands and Islands, said the loss of each language or regional dialect leaves the world poorer than it was before.

"It's one less little sparkle in the firmament," she said. "One little star might go out and you might never notice it, but it's not there anymore."

A small glossary of Cromarty dialect phrases

The last native speaker of the Cromarty dialect has died, taking with him a way of speaking unique to a small seaside town at the tip of Scotland's Black Isle. The dialect includes archaic "thee" and "thou," a wealth of seafaring vocabulary, and an aspirate "h" either added or subtracted to everyday words.

Here are half a dozen Cromarty phrases, compiled by Am Baile, the Scottish Highland Council's history and culture website.

- Holl tol: Very drunk.
- Foamin for want: Desperate for tea.
- Al's thew trouble?: What's your trouble?
- Thegr nae tee big fi a schalfert yet! You're not too big for a slap!
- Ah wudna ken arthi start. I wouldn't know where to start.

- A'm fair sconfished wi haytreen; gie's fur breikwast lashins o arn and hegga: I'm so fed up with herring, give me plenty of ham and eggs for breakfast.

FIELDS OF FAITH

LHS grad to encourage youth at Fields of Faith

By Audrie Palmer
apalmer@mrt.com

Thousands of students and athletes will gather Wednesday as more than 311 Fields of Faith events are held in 38 states across the country.

Midlanders will get the opportunity to join in as the Permian Basin Fields of Faith will be one of 65 events held in Texas.

The event will kick off at 7:30 p.m. at Grande Communications Stadium.

Sponsored in part by Fellowship of Christian Athletes, 32-year-old Josh Norman, a former FCA member, will take to the stage to address the community that raised him.

Norman is a 1998 Lee High School graduate and Midland native who was a running back for LHS and went on to play as a running back, tight end and receiver at the University of Oklahoma.

After graduation, he played professionally for three years with the San Diego Chargers, a short tenure with the New York Jets and one year with Oakland Raiders.

Finishing his professional football career in 2005, he returned to Oklahoma City where he started his own music production company. Recently, after producing other albums for musicians and singers, he released his first album, "The Assay," full of Christian-based soul, R&B and hip-hop style music under his artist name, J. Lee the Producer.

As an athlete, Norman said one of the things that led to his successful football career was his faith in God and he's grateful for the opportunities he was

CLC to change name to Sovereign Grace Church

■ Staff say new name better reflects core values.

By Audrie Palmer
apalmer@mrt.com

After 33 years of being known as the Christian Life Center, the church will hold a dedication ceremony Sunday during which they will officially announce the new name of Sovereign Grace Church. They hope the new name will better reflect its members' core values.

Senior Pastor Billy Raies, who's served at the church for the past 19 years, said he and his staff are not wanting to confuse Midlanders who may think the church is a new one coming into the building. After a $300,000 renovation project earlier this year, staff said it was time to re-name and re-brand the church.

"We are very aware that we stand upon their shoulders in the ministry that we are now seeking to do. We believed it was an appropriate time in the history of our church to update our name in a manner that reflected the core values that make us who we are today," he said.

The new logo will feature a cross as its center that Raies said he hopes will reflect the church's desire to be Christ-centered in all it does.

He's grateful the Gospel is not only the means by which people come to follow Christ as their savior but is also the foundation for living the Christian life, he said. Blue ripples from the cross show the Gospel has a ripple effect and that will inform and define all that they do, he added.

He hopes the ripples also will show how the church can impact one's life, whether that be through marriage, family or parenting, and how the good news can reach further into the city and ultimately the world.

Norma Jean Reece

Norma Jean Reece, 78, of Midland, Texas, passed away peacefully on Tuesday, October 2, 2012. The family will receive friends from 5:00 to 7:00 p.m., at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home, on Friday October 5, 2012. Funeral services will be held at 1:00 p.m., on Saturday, October 6, 2012, at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Chapel. A private graveside service will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Norma was born on September 5, 1934, to Vernie and Velma Horner in San Angelo, TX. She married the love of her life on June 4, 1949, in Coleman, TX. Norma was a loving and devoted wife of 63 years, the best Mom in the world, as well as a loving Grandmother and great Grandmother. She enjoyed teaching piano and voice for many years and was a member of The Music Teachers Association. She was an excellent cook and won many awards for "The Best Pecan Pie in Texas", during her many years as a member of The West Texas Pecan Association. Norma's biggest hobby was gardening. She had a green thumb and enjoyed watching God's nature at work. She would sit for hours watching the hummingbirds and marvel at the wonder of it all. She was an amazing woman that strived to look at only the positive in each and every circumstance. On any given day, if you asked her how she is doing, her response was one simple word - "PERFECT". Such a gentle and loving person that loved not only her family but also her life long friends. She had a servant's heart and loved being able to help for many years with The Cerebral Palsy Center, hosting an annual fishing-BBQ event with her loving husband at "Reece's Pond". Norma invited Jesus Christ into her heart at the age of 12 years old and walked with him daily, until her passing. She did not only talk the talk, but walked out her faith everyday. When she became ill, she was unable to attend church, so her family began having home church each and every Sunday. Of course she took great joy in leading the singing.

Survivors include her husband, Boyd Reece; daughters, Pam Reece, Linda Williams and husband, Don; grandchildren Julie Byrne, Alex Byrne and wife, Sherrill, Robin Poole and husband, David; great-grandchildren, Alyssa Byrne, Kayla Byrne, Mason Wallace, Caiden Reece, Kambel Reece, and Carter Poole; son-in-law, Tommy Byrne; daughter-in-law, Tonya Reece; and her special adopted daughter, Rue Landon.

She is preceded in death by her son, Barry Reece; daughter, Brenda Byrne; her parents; and two brothers, Ross and Vernie Horner.

Honorary pallbearers will be Alex Byrne, Don Williams, Tommy Byrne, Earl Sealmon, Bill Chrane, James Harrington, David Poole, Caiden Reece, Paul Carpenter, and Rex Pollard.

Many thanks to Hospice of Midland, Mary Wallace and family, Brother Wallace and Home Instead for their loving care of our love one.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Alzheimer's Association, 4400 N. Big Spring Ste 32, Midland, TX 79705; and Hospice Midland, PO Box 2621, Midland, TX 79702.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home & Crematory of Midland. Online condolences can be made at: www.npwelch.com.

Acclaimed session guitarist Big Jim Sullivan dies

Associated Press

LONDON — Acclaimed session guitarist Big Jim Sullivan, who played on dozens of hits in the 1960s and 1970s, has died, his wife said Thursday. He was 71.

Norma Sullivan said that Sullivan had died at their home in West Sussex, England, on Tuesday.

Sullivan learned guitar as a teenager and turned professional when he was just 16. He played with many of the biggest names in British pop at the height of the "Swinging London" era.

Along with Jimmy Page, who would later star in Led Zeppelin, Sullivan was one of the most in-demand session guitarists of his era. His website lists sessions with Tom Jones, Marianne Faithfull, David Bowie, Gerry and the Pacemakers and many others. He claimed to have played on more than 1,000 singles that entered the British charts.

Sullivan's website said he joined his first band, the Wildcats, at age 17, in 1958, which he described as "the early days of rock and roll in this country."

He said he and his friends were too busy learning music to do normal teenage things.

He was known for his mastery of a wide variety of styles, from hard rock to country to blues.

Vietnamese dissident poet Nguyen Chi Thien dies

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Nguyen Chi Thien, a Vietnamese dissident poet who spent nearly 30 years in communist prisons in his native country, died in a Southern California hospital Tuesday after a long bout of lung illness, according to a close friend. He was 73.

Thien had contracted tuberculosis while in Vietnamese prisons and doctors were investigating a large mass in his lung in the days before he died, his close friend Hanh Thang-Thai said. The actual cause of his death was unclear.

Thien's former translator, Nguyen Ngoc Bich, says Thien is by far the most famous Vietnamese poet of his generation.

"It's like the passing away of a great symbol for the so-called free Vietnam, people who still believe in freedom and democracy for Vietnam," Bich said.

Thien first went to prison in 1960, after telling Vietnamese high school students that, contrary to their textbooks, the end of World War II was not the result of a Soviet attack, but rather U.S. nuclear attacks in Japan.

He was later imprisoned again because of poems he wrote that decried communist oppression. But due to a lack of evidence, he never went to trial.

In 1977, Thien was released from prison long enough to write down poems he had memorized in captivity, a manuscript that became known as "Flowers of Hell."

The poems were published in Vietnamese after he hand-delivered them to British diplomats at their embassy in Hanoi, Vietnam.

When he exited the embassy, security agents were awaiting him and he was promptly sent back to prison.

While he was still imprisoned, Thien won the International Poetry Award in Rotterdam in 1985.

He was released from prison in 1991 and traveled to the United States in 1995, and later France, before settling in Orange County's Little Saigon.

Thien's friend Thang-Thai said she and a group of women cared for him, cooked for him and bought him clothes when he needed it, and that he led a humble life.

"His body was breaking, but he was very, very strong mentally," Thang-Thai said. "Before his death, he said to me, 'Be happy, Hanh.' He was a very special person."

Translator of many Europen works, including 'Peeling the Onion,' dies

NY Times News Service

Michael Henry Heim, a distinguished translator who helped bring to an English-speaking readership the work of Central and Eastern European authors like Gunter Grass, Milan Kundera and Anton Chekhov, died Saturday at his home in Los Angeles. He was 69.

The cause was complications of melanoma, according to the University of California, Los Angeles, where Heim had taught for 40 years. At his death, he was distinguished professor of Slavic languages and literatures there.

What set Heim apart from many prominent translators was the wide array of languages with which he worked. Conversant with a dozen tongues, he translated from eight of them, spanning Slavic (Russian, Czech, Serbo-Croatian); Germanic (German, Dutch); Romance (French, Romanian); and Hungarian, a non-Indo European language.

He was known in particular for his translations of Kundera's novels, including the original English-language editions of "The Book of Laughter and Forgetting" (1980) and "The Unbearable Lightness of Being" (1984), which became a best seller in the United States.

Heim was also known for translating into English two volumes by Grass, the 1999 Nobel laureate in literature: the novel "My Century" (1999) and a volume of memoir, "Peeling the Onion" (2007), in which the author, who had been called the conscience of Germany, admitted that he had hidden his past as a teenage member of the Nazi Waffen SS. The revelation, made before the book was published, stunned the literary world.

In addition, Heim made new English translations of time-honored European works, including Thomas Mann's "Death in Venice," for which he won the 2005 Helen and Kurt Wolff Translator's Prize, an annual award for translation from the German.

His other German translations include work by Bertolt Brecht; from the Russian, Heim translated several Chekhov plays, including "The Seagull," "The Cherry Orchard" and "Uncle Vanya."

In 2003, with a gift of more than $700,000, Heim endowed the PEN Translation Fund, administered by the PEN American Center. The fund awards grants to translators — more than 100 have been made so far — to foster the publication of literature in translation. Heim made the gift anonymously, but with the consent of his widow, Priscilla, PEN identified him as the donor upon his death.

Heim's gift, a result of considered investment and a spartan lifestyle, was born of the veteran's benefit his family received on the death of his father, a Hungarian composer who had served in the U.S. Army during World War II.

Michael Henry Heim was born in Manhattan on Jan. 21, 1943, and reared first on an Army base in Texas and later in Los Angeles. After his father's death from cancer when Michael was 4, he returned with his mother to New York, graduating from Curtis High School on Staten Island.

The young Heim earned a bachelor's degree from Columbia University, where he studied Chinese, Russian and Spanish. At Columbia, he worked with the eminent translator Gregory Rabassa, whose English-language rendering of "One Hundred Years of Solitude," by Gabriel Garcia Marquez, appeared in 1970.

Heim earned a master's degree in Slavic linguistics from Harvard, followed by a Ph.D. in Slavic languages there. He came to wide attention as a translator with "The Letters of Anton Chekhov" (1973; edited by Simon Karlinsky), published by Harper & Row.

His other translations include, from Russian, the novel "The Island of Crimea," by Vassily Aksyonov; from Serbo-Croatian, a volume of stories, "The Encyclopedia of the Dead," by Danilo Kis; from Czech, the novella "Too Loud a Solitude," by Bohumil Hrabal; and, from Hungarian, the novella "Helping Verbs of the Heart," by Peter Esterhazy. Heim was the author of "Contemporary Czech," a guide to the language published in 1976.

Life-size tabernacle comes to downtown Midland

By Audrie Palmer
apalmer@mrt.com

Anytime a word, phrase or idea is mentioned over and over again in the Bible, First United Methodist Church lead associate pastor, Robert Pelfrey, tells the congregation the writers are trying to really capture a reader's attention.

One concept repeated numerous times in the Old Testament is the layout and instructions to construct the tabernacle, a place of worship that was prominent in the life of Moses and the Israelites.

In keeping with their study of the Bible, the Spiritual Formations Center at FUMC will sponsor a life-size tabernacle for West Texans to walk through.

The Tabernacle Experience will be on display Saturday through Oct. 14, and the 75-foot by 150-foot replica will be located in the church's northwest parking lot at the corner of Ohio Avenue and Main Street and directly across the street from the Midland County Courthouse.

The adjacent lot will be used for parking for people wanting to attend the event.

The idea to bring the tabernacle replica to Midland for the first time was birthed from a teaching series the church's pastoral staff has been going through with its members.

A 90-day series, "Year with the Bible," covered both the Old and New Testaments, said coordinator Kaci Rybolt.

For many, it was hard to imagine the tabernacle's magnitude and vastness. That's why church staff wanted to bring the event to downtown so members and others would have the opportunity to see for themselves a portion of the Bible that's been brought to life.

"It's really hard to fathom how big it really is," said Rybolt.

"It had great meaning to Moses and the Israelites and it was a place that God came to dwell. We felt that by bringing it, we could better understand what it meant."

The Tabernacle Experience is a traveling tour group that brings the full scale replica to various towns and cities for local churches. The event was in San Angelo before arriving in Midland on Wednesday evening.

The cost to attend is a $5. The event will be open Monday through Thursday from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.; on Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. and on Sundays from noon to 8 p.m.

Church staff ask that visitors plan to arrive at least an hour before closing each night in order to complete the tour before it gets dark.

The tour duration is expected to last approximately 50 minutes to one hour. Those entering the site will be given an MP3 player that will serve as an audio tour guide. There are nine stations inside that will explain the meaning and purpose of that specific area of the tabernacle.

Rybolt said the church sent a flyer to every church in a 70-mile radius inviting members and staff to attend. Local pastors will have the chance to go through the tour tonight with their families.

The program will be closed weekday mornings until 11 a.m. for tour groups and field trips. Last year, the tabernacle was in Odessa and had 600 attendees in the first two days of being open, Rybolt said.

In keeping with the Old Testament study, the church also plans to host Rabbi Derek Leman as a guest speaker on Wednesday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

For more information, call the church office at 682-3701 or visit online at www.tabernacleexperience.com.

FAITH

given and platforms where he could witness to others and share his testimony.

Norman said it is important for Christians to let God guide their lives.

He had 13 teams from which he could have chosen to play professional football, but Norman said the biggest reason he chose to go with the Chargers is because that is where he felt God was leading him to go.

"It played the most important part. It (football) is a tough and grueling sport and when you get to the professional level, the pressure is even higher," he said. "To have something that gives you peace — your faith as a Christian — that God is going to lead, direct and guide you, it gives you peace in the midst of a storm.

"It's the core part of who I am."

Norman said he hopes to be able to share the truth of the Gospel to local youth in a way that won't be cliché. Many times, he said, the Gospel is shared and shaped into a mystical thing. With iPhones, the Internet and many things easily accessible to students now, he knows many want results immediately and may be asking the question: How is what you're talking about going to help me today?

Norman said a relationship with God is a real thing, a tangible thing, and he plans to encourage students to stand bold and upright and be secure in their faith, even when they're facing persecution. They don't have to be afraid to live a righteous life and be secure enough to say no to drugs and alcohol, he said.

He added the FCA played a huge role in his life when he was a member and remembers meeting at the Lee field house with the adult leaders that were involved who helped shape him as a student and athlete.

In college, he traveled to visit and speak with youth groups and share his faith as he started his football career, he said.

He feels extremely honored to be asked to return to Midland, a place that raised him and showed him the ropes. He's excited for the opportunity to give back to the community.

Norman's father, two brothers and aunts, uncles and cousins still reside here.

He said he plans to stress there is nothing more important in one's life than a relationship with God.

"I'm just excited. God is doing some really good things in my life right now. I'm truly honored to come back and speak to the youth of the town that gave so much to me," he said.

NAME

From 1B

"The new name reflects two of God's attributes that we deeply cherish: His loving sovereignty and his undeserved grace. We are constantly comforted and encouraged that God is completely in control and that there is not one rogue molecule outside his wise and kind providence," Raies said.

Officials decided to use the word "church" instead of the familiar "center" because they believe it better identifies their purpose to glorify God as those who have been called together as a Christian family seeking to serve God, one another and the community.

The church was first founded in 1960 as Gardens Assembly of God. In 1979, it was changed to Christian Life Center.

The church became affiliated with Sovereign Grace Ministries in 2006, and a few years ago began talking about changing its name.

"It more accurately reflects where we're at," associate pastor Allen Dicharry said. "The new name really does reflect who we are as a congregation."

The board approved the name change in March 2011 and underwent the new renovation project on the auditorium, foyer, youth, Mom's room and fellowship hall.

In January, Raies and Dicharry began a four- to five-week study and series with church members centered around the theme of "What's in a name?" as a way to prepare the congregation.

The name change also was agreed on by church members.

"We're reflecting not just our construction changes but changes from our own hearts," Raies said.

Who: Christian hip-hop artist Shai Linne
Where: Sovereign Grace Church, 2901 W. Kansas Ave.
When: Sunday at 7 p.m.

The renovation project earlier this year removed the orange carpet and dark wood paneling from the auditorium and the walls were painted fresh and vibrant. Glass doors leading into the auditorium have been removed to create a new foyer and lobby and new walls have been constructed, new floors placed and new furniture purchased.

"The treasure of this church is the people. We wanted to make this a comfortable place where people can visit and care for each other and pray for one another," Raies said.

A new website was launched this week and church staff say they will begin re-branding with the new logo to unveil to the church Sunday. A dedication ceremony is planned for 7 p.m. with Christian hip-hop artist Shai Linne. The service and concert are free and open to the public.

Sunday's dedication is the first outreach event planned under the church's new name. Raies said the staff also plans to follow up with a four-week teaching series to the congregation.

For more information about the concert or dedication service, call the church office at 683-4506 or visit online at www.sgcmidland.org.

Annual Garden City church festival celebrates German heritage with sausage

By Joseph Basco
MRT Correspondent

In Garden City, one Catholic church festival's main attraction is not the activities or entertainment, but rather the homemade German sausage.

St. Lawrence Church's Fall Festival, held annually on the first Sunday of October, is primarily a fundraiser for the church. The "alcohol-free Oktoberfest" features activities such as bingo and silent auctions, but what people anticipate the most is the German sausage created by the German men of the community, said Martha Schwartz, St. Lawrence Fall Festival publicity chairman.

The church's pork and beef product is so popular, people call ahead to preorder the sold-by-the-pound sausage, she said. The high demand continues though to the day of the festival, when 2,000 to 2,400 hungry attendees deplete the supply, both cooked and uncooked.

Festival info

ST. LAWRENCE FALL FESTIVAL
Where: 2400 FM 2401 Garden City
When: The festival begins with Mass at 9 a.m. Sunday
What: Activities include a petting zoo, grab bag, dunking booth, ring toss, jumpers, duck pond, bean bag toss and a religious shop.
Note: There will be reserved parking for the handicapped and reserved seating for the handicapped and senior citizens.

"The sausage sells out before noon," Schwartz said.

The sausage is German in nature because of the community's German heritage. St. Lawrence Catholic Church was built in the middle of a German-harvested cotton field around 1947-1948.

Glasscock County Treasurer Alan Dierschke has been going to the festival for more than 50 years. He contributes to the festival by helping create the sausage the night before.

"About 150 people help make 12,000 pounds of sausage," Dierschke said.

Vicky Stewart, a Big Spring resident, is also a longtime festival attendee. She preorders the sausage and freezes the meat to eat throughout the year.

"It's well worth it (buying the sausage) to get off the beaten path," Stewart said.

Stewart said she attended the festival for the first time when her parents brought her at the age of 10. Now, she brings her children and grandchildren to the event. She said it is a family tradition to go every year.

And, perhaps more so than the sausage, coming together is what makes the festival successful. Schwartz said people from Garden City to Big Spring, New Mexico to Louisiana, attend the event. She said cellphones don't work in the area, which causes people to have a "fun-filled, relaxing event."

Or maybe, the church knows it has a hidden gem in the sausage, which people crave days before its sale.

"I think we're in for a very delicious meal and fun times," Dierschke said.

Neeson's 'Taken 2' is mistaken sequel

By David Germain
Associated Press

Planning to pay out good money to see "Taken 2"? To paraphrase Liam Neeson, you're about to be taken.

Whatever novelty there was watching Neeson go commando in 2008's "Taken" is gone in the sequel, a mix of third-rate action, dreary family melodrama, laughable bad guys and even more laughable plot devices.

"Taken 2" is so bad it feels as though producer and co-writer Luc Besson swept up odds and ends cut from the first movie and slapped them together between a few new scenes shot with Neeson's retired CIA guy Bryan Mills, his daughter (Maggie Grace) and ex-wife (Famke Janssen).

The original was relentlessly paced and just flew by. The sequel is about the same length yet takes its good old time putting the villains and viewers out of their misery.

Besson and director Olivier Megaton ("Transporter 3") pad "Taken 2" with really awful reconciliation moments between Mills and his family, and once the action finally kicks in, it's nothing but repetitive kill shots to the head, snapping of necks and poorly edited hand-to-hand fights.

The giggles start in the opening moments as a group of Albanians mourn their dead — all the thugs Neeson's Mills killed in the first movie for kidnapping his daughter in a prostitution ring.

"The dead cry out to us for justice!" proclaims family patriarch Murad (Rade Sherbedgia). "We will have our revenge!"

Murad assembles a seemingly countless gang of rogues to go after Mills in Istanbul, where he's just finished a security job and is taking some down time with daughter Kim (Grace) and his ex, Lenore (Janssen), who's newly separated from her second hubby.

They're such amateurs, Murad and his boys, that it's like watching Mills shoot puppies in a pet store window as he takes them out individually and in bunches. There's little sense of peril to Mills and his women, even Lenore, who spends much of the movie bound and whimpering, with knives at her throat (what fun for Janssen this job must have been).

The filmmakers decide to promote Grace's Kim from whimper-woman in "Taken" to her dad's apprentice here, with pretty silly results. Under Mills' guidance, Kim tosses live grenades indiscriminately around Istanbul so her dad can use the explosions to triangulate the position of Murad's lair.

Seriously. That's how dumb the movie is.

There was something primal about "Taken," a father putting all his brains and brawn into saving his little girl, and doing it with startling ferocity and ingenious trade-craft.

Neeson just looks like he's yawning his way through a light workout here, using one big Irish paw to snuff goons and holding the other one out to the studio for his paycheck.

This is old-style sequel mentality. Do a quick, crappy replay of the original, dump it in theaters and grab whatever cash you can before fans realize they've been had.

Studios still make crappy sequels, yet they usually take some effort to raise the stakes and bring something new these days. No one's taken any such effort on "Taken 2."

"Taken 2," a 20th Century Fox release, is rated PG-13 for intense sequences of violence and action, and some sensuality. Running time: 92 minutes. One and a half stars out of four.

Also opening today

"FRANKENWEENIE" — Tim Burton reminds us of why we love Tim Burton with this feature-length version of the 1984 short that revealed early glimmers of the veteran director's darkly humorous style. Beautifully detailed and painstakingly rendered in 3-D, black-and-white, stop-motion animation, "Frankenweenie" is a visual and thematic return to the best Burton has offered in his earliest films, such as "Edward Scissorhands" and "Beetlejuice." And it is a welcome return, given the reheated, unfocused nature of some of his more recent films like "Dark Shadows." Burton has said he'd always intended for "Frankenweenie" to be a full-length, stop-motion-animation feature, but he didn't have the means; instead, he made a 30-minute, live-action short. Both films are about the powerful bond between a boy and his dog, one that goes on even after death — a heartrending subject, to be sure, but one that Burton infuses with his trademark mix of lively energy and macabre laughs. Even then, you could see Burton's sympathetic, protective portrayal of an outsider, an affectionate skewering of the sanctity of suburbia and a deep love of monster movies. Charlie Tahan provides the voice of Victor, a 10-year-old loner who's understandably devastated when his only friend — his bull terrier, Sparky — gets hit by a car. But a lesson from his science teacher (a wonderfully melodramatic Martin Landau) inspires Victor (whose last name happens to be Frankenstein) to try and bring Sparky back to life. Catherine O'Hara, Martin Short and Winona Ryder are among the Burton veterans in the strong voice cast. PG for thematic elements, scary images and action. 88 minutes. 3 stars.

Rebels defensive line turns into a tight knit group

By Jordan Mason
jmason@mrt.com

Each member of the Lee defensive line has a story as to how he got there.

Senior Micheal Morales played alongside senior Josh Burditt as a linebacker before Morales was moved to the defensive line his sophomore year with Burditt following in his footsteps a year later.

Last year, it was Nathan Bailey, a tight end and defensive end all his life, who became the lone sophomore on the line when he was called up to varsity late in the season.

It was also last year when Nathan Horrell crossed over from the offensive line to replace Morales after he was lost for the season with a torn ACL.

And Gage McSwain was the latest to join the unit after his transformation from a 206-pound linebacker his junior year to a 225-pound pass rusher this year.

Now, all of them feel right at home on one of the most confident and forthright units on the team.

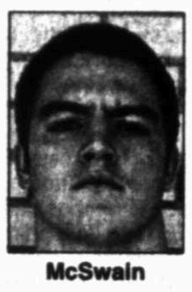
"Best position on the field — all the athletes," Morales said

Added McSwain: "It's just fun over there"

"It's the only position where you're free to play football," Morales said.

And as Lee (3-1, 2-0 in District 2-5A) prepares to visit Ratliff Stadium for a showdown with Odessa High (0-5, 0-2) at 7:30 p.m. today, the line has backed up its talk as leaders of the defense and the team.

Morales



McSwain

Morales, who looks like he never left after missing all but two plays of the 2011 season, is tied for the team lead in tackles with 32 and is tied with Burditt — who's eighth in tackles — for the team lead in tackles for loss with nine.

In the Rebels' last game against Lubbock Coronado, Morales, Burditt, Bailey, Horrell and McSwain combined to notch 17 tackles, five for loss, two forced fumbles and a fumble recovery.

And while the unit said it feels like it is playing at a higher level than this

Midland High tackles help solidify defense

By Jonathan Hull
jhull@mrt.com

Over the past six quarters the Midland High defense has allowed around 123 rushing yards, despite facing two of the most prolific running offenses in District 2-5A. Much of that recent success starts with the Bulldogs' starting defensive tackles.

Seniors Eric Villegas and Colin Teale have helped bring stability to the Midland High defense over the last 1 1/2 games against Amarillo Tascosa and Odessa Permian, and are a major reason the Bulldogs (3-1, 2-0 in District 2-5A) remain undefeated in district play.

The Bulldogs hope Villegas and Teale continue to have a significant impact at 7:30 p.m. tonight, when they host San Angelo Central (3-2, 2-1) at Grande Communications Stadium.

Villegas and Teale have played next to each other for three of the last four years with last season being the only exception, since Villegas was a backup on varsity while Teale played on the junior varsity. Their familiarity with one another has allowed them to grow into their new varsity starting roles this season.

"We've been together since freshmen," Teale said. "Last year was the first time we didn't play together, so it's nice to be back with him. We know how each other play and play better next to each other."

Against Amarillo Tascosa two weeks ago, the Bulldogs defense stymied the Rebels triple-option running attack in the second half, allowing the Bulldogs to rally for a 13-7 victory.

It didn't take the Bulldogs' defense a full half to start dominating the Permian ground attack. Midland High rarely allowed Permian to gain more than 3 yards on a single run, and held Panthers running back Jorrion Wilson, who entered the game as the district's leading rusher, to a mere 42 yards on 17 carries.

Villegas

Teale

The tackle statistics from the game show how much Villegas and Teale had to do with shutting down Wilson and the Permian offense.

Defensive tackles don't always post big tackle numbers, but that hasn't been the case for Villegas and Teale so far this season. Villegas ranks second on the team with 35 tackles this season, including a sack and two tackles for loss. Teale is fifth on the team with 18 tackles.

Both had their biggest nights of the season statistically during Friday's rain-soaked 17-6 victory against Odessa Permian. Villegas led the Bulldogs with 13 tackles, including a tackle for loss, while Teale had an impressive 10 stops.

Grady takes 3-game win streak into today's game

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

It has been a steady progression for the Grady offense under first-year head coach Chris Kuykendall.

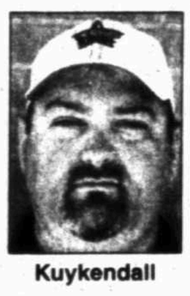
During their past two games, the Wildcats have scored at least 60 points, including a mercy-rule 60-15 victory over New Home that signaled to senior quarterback Brett Glaze that things were headed in the right direction.

"I think all of us were waiting for a game like that," Glaze said. "From the start of the game to end, we executed well and we had no turnovers. That's what we need every week."

The Wildcats (3-2) look to continue their improvement tonight when they host Sterling City (3-2) in the second-to-last tune-up before beginning play in District 4 Six-Man Division I.

"I think we're rolling and starting to find our identity on offense," Kuykendall said. "We're still working on improving our offense but our defense has really stepped up. Offensively, we're still trying to polish things and get more repetition on plays where we become more fluid in what we're doing."

Glaze



Kuykendall

The Wildcats are not only learning to run an unbalanced-I offense from the multiple offense they ran last year but they're getting used to Kuykendall as a head coach. Even though he was an assistant under Brad Cox, Kuykendall didn't find out he was going to be the head coach until May when Cox moved into a full-time school administrative role. That meant Kuykendall didn't have a chance to start implementing his style of offense until the beginning of two-a-days in August.

He said one of the biggest things his team has had to learn was how to make adjustments during a game.

Rangers in unexpected spot vs O's in AL wild card

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

ARLINGTON — After a grinding stretch when the Texas Rangers lost nine of their last 13 games, and the AL West crown in the process, manager Ron Washington gave his players the day off Thursday.

They get a chance to start fresh today.

One chance — or the season will be over for the two-time defending American League champions long before another World Series.

"I don't feel any different," Washington said. "Other than the fact we have an opportunity to get back in the playoffs if we win a ball game."

Still, the team that twice came within a strike of winning last year's World Series, never expected to be in this kind of postseason situation.

Instead of winning another division title, after being in first place for a majors-high 178 days this season, Texas hosts a winner-take-all AL wild-card game tonight against Baltimore and former manager Buck Showalter.

WOMEN'S SOCCER PICKS UP 1ST WIN

ODESSA — Alyssa Riddle and Skylar Bluebird each scored their first goals of the season Thursday, and the UTPB women's soccer team was able to hold off Oklahoma Christian for its first victory, 2-1, of the season at UTPB Soccer Field.

Riddle put the Falcons on the board first in the 27th minute on an assist from Bria Smith-Porter, beating the OC goalkeeper on a shot that was deflected but trickled into the net to give UTPB a 1-0 lead.

Bluebird doubled the advantage nine minutes later, cleaning up a bouncing ball in front of the net with a solid strike to the left side of the goal to put the Falcons up 2-0.

UTPB returns to action this weekend, hosting Newman at noon Saturday at the UTPB Soccer Field.

MEN'S SOCCER CAN'T HANG ON TO LEAD

ODESSA — Dylan Slaughter and Tyler Gibson combined to give the UTPB an early lead Thursday, but four straight unanswered goals from Oklahoma Christian sent the Falcons home with a 4-2 loss.

Slaughter's first strike of the season came in the 17th minute from in front of the net, picking up a loose ball Oklahoma Christian failed to clear after nearly 10 seconds of bouncing around in the six-yard box. Slaughter kicked the ball off the hop and placed it into the left side of the net for the game's first goal.

Gibson added his team-leading third goal of the year in the 28th minute on an assist from Jose Anchondo, dribbling to the top of the 16-yard box where he released a shot off of the Eagles' goalkeeper's hands that still found the back of the net for a 2-0 advantage.

UTPB stays at home this weekend, hosting Newman at 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

VOLLEYBALL BESTS MCMURRY IN 5 SETS

Red Sox fire Valentine after 1 tumultuous season

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox thought Bobby Valentine would restore order to a coddled clubhouse that disintegrated during the 2011 pennant race.

Instead, he only caused more problems.

The brash and supremely confident manager was fired on Thursday, the day after the finale of a season beset with internal sniping and far too many losses. Valentine went 69-93 in his only year in Boston, the ballclub's worst season in almost 50 years.

"I understand this decision," Valentine said. "This year in Boston has been an incredible experience for me, but I am as disappointed in the results as are ownership and the great fans of Red Sox Nation. ... I'm sure next year will be a turnaround year."

A baseball savant who won the NL pennant with the New York Mets and won it all in Japan, Valentine was brought in after two-time World Series champion Terry Francona lost control of the clubhouse during an unprecedented September collapse. But the players who took advantage of Francona's hands-off approach bristled under Valentine's abrasive style.

More importantly, they didn't win for him, either.

Under Valentine, the Red Sox started 4-10 and didn't break .500 until after Memorial Day. By August, when the contenders were setting their playoff roster, the Red Sox knew they would not be among them and they traded some of their best players — and biggest salaries — to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Without Adrian Gonzalez, Carl Crawford and Josh Beckett, the Red Sox will save $250 million in future salaries and have a chance to rebuild over the winter.

But that will be too late for Valentine.

"Our 2012 season was disappointing for many reasons," general manager Ben Cherington said in a statement announcing the firing. "No single issue is the reason, and no single individual is to blame. ... With an historic number of injuries, Bobby was dealt a difficult hand. He did the best he could under seriously adverse circumstances, and I am thankful to him."

Cherington, who replaced Theo Epstein last offseason, will lead the search for a new manager. The team's top target is current Toronto manager John Farrell, who has a year left on his deal with the Blue Jays.

"Our commitment to winning is unwavering. It is a commitment to this team, to this city, and to these fans who have supported us through thick and thin," owner John Henry said. "We have confidence in Ben Cherington and the kind of baseball organization he is determined to build."

RANGERS

From 1C

won at Rangers Ballpark.

The winner goes on to play the New York Yankees, another of Showalter's former employers, in the AL division series and will host the first two games.

Baltimore is in the playoffs for the first time in 15 years. Showalter, hired by the Orioles midway through the 2010 season, dismissed any notion that it means more to him getting to face Texas, where he managed for four years and then was replaced by Washington after the 2006 season.

"For our players and organization to get an opportunity, it's rewarding. We're trying to do everything possible to get back to Baltimore," Showalter said. "Personally, I thanked the players for letting me come along for the ride."

Just a week ago, Texas had a four-game division lead with six to play after splitting a four-game series at home against Oakland. The Rangers lost five of those last six games, including a three-game sweep this week against the A's, who clinched the division title on the last day of the regular season with a 12-5 victory.

The Rangers had a 5-1 lead in the season finale before Oakland's big comeback, including center fielder Josh Hamilton missing a popup for a two-base error with two outs that allowed two runs to score and broke a 5-all tie.

The 4-9 span is their worst such slide of the season. The only other time they were swept in a three-game series was the first week of July at the Chicago White Sox.

"Just like any of our fans or anyone involved with our organization, there was a level of disappointment at first. A chance to win the division, and we couldn't put it away," general manager Jon Daniels said. "Then you take a step back and realize there are 20 teams that would kill to be where we are right now and would trade places with us in a heartbeat. ... We've got one of our best pitchers on the mound at home."

While Darvish (16-9) is a rookie in the majors, the 26-year-old starter had plenty of postseason experience before the Rangers committed more than $107 million last winter to acquire Japan's top pitcher. He was 8-2 with a 1.38 ERA and five complete games in 11 postseason starts for the Hokkaido Nippon-Ham Fighters from 2006-11.

"He's an expensive one," Showalter said. "He's impressive. They gotten a return on everything they've invested. He's pretty special."

The Orioles acquired Saunders (9-13 overall, including 3-3 in seven starts for Baltimore) on Aug. 26 from Arizona. The lefty has previous playoff experience for the Los Angeles Angels.

But Saunders is 3-7 with a 6.48 ERA in 11 career starts against Texas, including 0-6 with a 9.38 ERA in six previous starts at Rangers Ballpark.

"You can make numbers any way you want to," Showalter said. "If you're looking for pitchers with good numbers against the Texas Rangers, they're hard to find."

It has been more than two years since Saunders pitched in Texas, and he allowed only one run in seven innings then. Now the Virginia native who grew up an Orioles fan is starting their biggest game of the season.

"It's a huge opportunity. It's been a blessing since I got traded over here, it's been an amazing experience," he said. "It'd be really nice to get a win for the club and get a playoff game back home. That's what this organization is asking me to do."

Texas won five of the seven games in the regular season and scored at least 10 runs three times. That includes the May 8 game in Baltimore when Hamilton, the free-agent-to-be slugger, became the 16th player in major league history with four homers in a game.

AP source: Walker to be Tech's interim coach

By Betsy Blaney
Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Associate coach Chris Walker will be the interim head coach at Texas Tech, replacing Billy Gillispie, a person familiar with the decision told The Associated Press on Thursday.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity because a formal announcement had not been made.

Gillispie resigned Sept. 20, citing health concerns and with the university investigating allegations that he mistreated some of his players. He led the Red Raiders to an 8-23 record in his only season in Lubbock.

Walker took over day-to-day operations of the program Sept. 7 after athletic director Kirby Hocutt told Gillispie he needed to focus on his health.

Walker came to the program last year after two seasons at his alma mater Villanova, where he was an assistant under Jay Wright. He has 17 years of collegiate coaching experience, including four teams that went to the NCAA tournament — Villanova twice, Vanderbilt and Pepperdine.

Before coaching at Villanova, Walker was an assistant for Steve Alford for two years at New Mexico.

Gillispie's team got just one Big 12 win last year in Texas Tech's worst season since 1990-91.

In January, the school reprimanded Gillispie and assistant coach Brooks Jennings after a review found the team had exceeded practice-time limits in 2011. The school reported the secondary violation to the NCAA and penalized itself by reducing the team's practice time by about 12 hours.

Gillispie was hospitalized Aug. 31 for six days after calling 911 just hours before he was to meet with Hocutt to discuss allegations of player mistreatment. Several players had gone to talk to Hocutt two days earlier.

Gillispie was released from Lubbock's University Medical Center Sept. 6 after treatment for high blood pressure. The next day Hocutt told him he was no longer in charge of day-to-day operations of the program and was not to engage with it in any way until the two could meet to talk. Hocutt said he wanted Gillispie to focus on his health.

On Sept. 10 a second 911 call came from Gillispie's home, though he did not go to a hospital. The next day he flew to the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota for tests for high blood pressure.

When he returned four days later after being treated for kidney problems and abnormal headaches, he said doctors told him to avoid stress for 30 days while working to lower his blood pressure.

When Gillispie was hired by Texas Tech in March 2011, he had been out of coaching for two years after being fired at Kentucky after just two seasons. The school and fans had hoped the 52-year-old could orchestrate the turnaround for the Red Raiders that he had pulled off at UTEP and Texas A&M.

Texas Tech has failed to reach any notable heights since Bob Knight took the Red Raider to the NCAA regional semi-finals in 2005. Knight, who came to Texas Tech in March 2001 after leading Indiana to three national championships, resigned midseason in February 2008 and was succeeded by his son, Pat.

The younger Knight, who Texas Tech tapped as head coach designate a couple of years before his father resigned, was let go after 3 1/2 years. He now coaches at Lamar in Beaumont.

BULLDOGS-BOBCATS NOTEBOOK

SAN ANGELO CENTRAL AT MIDLAND HIGH

When/where: 7:30 p.m. today, Grande Communications Stadium

On the air: 92.3 FM (KNFM)

Records: Central 3-2, 2-1 in 2-5A; Midland High 3-1, 2-0

Last game: Abilene High 35, San Angelo Central 6; Midland High 17, Odessa Permian 6

Last meeting/series: Midland High 35, Central 28 (2011); Central leads series 35-30-2.

Weather forecast: Clear skies with a game-time temperature of 82 degrees with a wind of 8 mph out of the south-southeast and no chance of precipitation.

Notes

■ Midland High began alternating quarterbacks against Permian with senior Connor Beck and junior Sam Grimes taking snaps from behind center basically every other series. Grimes had 43 rushing yards on two carries in his first significant varsity action of the season.

Yenzer said both players will likely see playing time against Central as well, but didn't say how the playing time would be split.

■ Senior Brent Stewart was seen taking some snaps with the offense this week in goal-line and short-yardage situations. Stewart is the starting rover in Midland High's 4-2-5 defense, but got experience playing quarterback and running back last season with the Bulldogs.

n Central coach Brent Davis and Yenzer showed mutual admiration for the respective job each has done turning around what were struggling programs.

Yenzer has the most wins ever of any coach at Midland High with 78 victories in 10-plus seasons since taking over in 2002.

"They do a great job over there and always have since Yenzer has been there," Davis said. "He's really got that program established."

Davis inherited an 0-10 team in 2008 and has helped the Bobcats improve each season. Last season, the Bobcats won nine games and an outright district title, making their second consecutive playoff appearance.

"I can't say enough about what coach Davis has done with that program," Yenzer said. "He went into a tough situation and has had them improve every year. It's clear the kids believe in what they're doing there."

■ Central and Midland High are playing for the 68th time this season. Central holds a narrow 35-30-2 advantage against the Bulldogs. Midland High has won eight of the last nine meetings between the two, though, including the last four. Central's only win during that span came in 2007, 13-10. The Bulldogs won both games when the two were part of the 10-team District 2-5A in 2008 and 2009.

■ Both teams are fairly healthy considering the time of year. Midland High has no new injuries to report this week, while Davis said Central has a few "nicks and bruises" but won't be missing anyone significant.

REBELS-BRONCHOS NOTEBOOK

LEE AT ODESSA HIGH

When/where: 7:30 p.m. today, Ratliff Stadium

On the air: KCRS 550 AM

Records: Lee 3-1, 2-0 in District 2-5A; Odessa High 0-5, 0-2

Last game: Lee 44, Lubbock Coronado 10; Abilene Cooper 40, Odessa High 2

Last meeting/series: Lee 31, Odessa High 14 on Nov. 4, 2011; Lee leads all-time series 31-20

Weather forecast: Clear skies with game-time temperature of 79 degrees falling to lower-70s as the night continues. Winds blowing southeast picking up from 10-12 mph as the night wears on.

Notes

■ Sophomore Dayton Dennard will start at quarterback for Odessa High, the third player to start behind center in five games this season. The Bronchos have been bitten by the injury bug all season and recently lost an undisclosed player for the year due to injury. Broncho coach Ron King said he's lost count of the number of injuries his team has suffered. "I've never experienced anything like this in my 27 years," King said. "I've got some bad karma somewhere."

■ Odessa High, like Lubbock Coronado last week, expects to be at a size disadvantage when playing the Rebels, and King said his team will have to find a way to make up for that. "When you're at a size disadvantage and when you're facing someone of (Jason McAfee's) nature, you have to hold your gaps and make them run east and west. If they get downhill on you, you're in trouble," King said. "I don't know how we're going to be able to slow them down. Hopefully, we can contain them to a certain point. They're going to get yards, but maybe we can get them off schedule, put them in long yardage situations and force them to punt."

■ Odessa High is the first district opponent that Lee expects to see in a lot of one-back formations as opposed to the two-back systems employed by Abilene Cooper and Coronado. Defensive line coach Josh McKiddy said he hopes the Rebels' speed and athleticism up front will be on display as they expect to see this type of scheme regularly in the coming weeks.

■ Lee is dealing with its first significant injury as tight end Chris Fuentes injured his left ankle against Coronado. Fuentes has been in a boot most of the week and is week to week, coach James Morton said.

Next: Abilene High at Lee, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 12, Grande Communications Stadium; Odessa High at Lubbock Coronado, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 12, Lowrey Field, Lubbock

BULLDOGS

From 1C

"Since the weather conditions forced them to run a lot more it helped us to stand out on the defensive line and make more plays," Teale explained.

Neither player looks very imposing on the field. Teale is listed at 6 feet tall and 221 pounds, while Villegas is 222 pounds and stands 5-7. Villegas makes up for his lack of height with strength, and has learned to use his small stature to his advantage.

"I'm pretty strong, so I just try to use my legs to push them off," Villegas said. "I just stay lower than them, get under their pads and beat them to the point."

Midland High coach Craig Yenzer isn't bothered by the lack of elite size from either player.

"They're not big guys, but boy they're strong," Yenzer said. "They spent a lot of time in the powerlifting program and in the weight room. They're not real heavy guys, but they're active and we like the way they handle double teams. They understand how to make up for a lack of size."

With Villegas and Teale, as well as backup defensive tackles Corbin McCullough and Isaiah Nevarez, emerging as a strong force in the middle of the Bulldogs' defense, Yenzer said he feels the rest of the unit has been growing around them.

"The middle of the defense is where you have to start building," Yenzer said. "You look at the development of that part of the defense we've had this year and that's why we're having a lot of success. I think we've solidified the middle, which has helped us have more confidence as an entire defensive unit, but it starts with the defensive tackles, there's no doubt."

But after playing as well as they have the last two weeks, expectations are growing for the duo.

"I told them they've screwed up because now I'm going to have very high expectations for them," Yenzer said laughing. "It's their fault. If they don't like it, it's their fault."

REBELS

From 1C

time last year, it said the biggest difference, outside of adding McSwain and Morales, is the togetherness of the line.

"Between this time last year and now, we've grown so close together," McSwain said. "That helps us a lot on the field."

Even Bailey, the lone junior of the bunch, has folded seamlessly into the band of brothers. After all, who else do you call to come get your truck out of the mud like Horrell did Bailey on Sunday night?

"We're real close friends now," Bailey said

"We love you Bailey," McSwain responded to laughs from the rest of the unit.

Of course, any band of brothers has a father figure, and the players said defensive line coach Josh McKiddy, who also has many of them in his classes, has become that in his second season as the position coach.

The trust McKiddy puts in his veteran line allows Lee to experiment with technique along the line while still getting its desired results. And the line, who boasts it can do anything asked, wouldn't have it any other way.

"If we ask them to cover No. 2 I think they would go out and cover the No. 2 receiver," McKiddy said. "Whatever it is, they're going to do what we ask them to do and they're going to do it with a lot of confidence right now."

The already prideful unit only seems to turn it up when put in dire situations, specifically when the opponent reaches the red zone.

"It's personal when they get down there," Burditt said, "because you don't want to let them in the end zone."

Added Horrell: "We hold ourselves to such a high standard that when they just think they're about to be able to score it offends us."

That didn't happen against Coronado, as the Mustang starters never reached the red zone on the way to being shut out for the game.

And the unit only wants to get better.

"Technique-wise, it's the fourth game of the year, so we're definitely improving and wanting to get better on that," Lee coach James Morton said, "but overall we're pleased with where we are right now. Now, are we going to be complacent with where we are? No."

And, of course, the tight-knit veterans up front plan to take the rest of the defense, and the team, with them as they try to continue raising their level of play.

"Knowing that we're the ones who are ready every week in the meetings, it carries over, it's a mentality that we have," McSwain said.

MCS coach Greg McClendon on the game: "I can feel safe in saying they are going to stack the box and make us try to throw the football. But they may do something different with us this year because last year we were throwing the ball pretty well and they still stacked the box."

Notes: The Mustangs began district play in the rain last week but the adverse weather did little to stop Midland Christian's offense. The Mustangs racked up 381 total yards, with 133 yards coming from Whigham on the ground, and 221 through the air for Mason McClendon on 10 completions. ... Last week was the third straight game the Mustangs held an opponent to under 150 yards rushing as the Eagles rushed for 94 yards on 45 carries. In the last two weeks, teams are averaging just over 2 yards a carry against the Mustangs on the ground. ... Midland Christian will put a 19-game district winning streak on the line tonight. The Mustangs have not lost a game in district play since November of 2007. ... The Lions have struggled to score points this season with only 44 in five games this season. The most points Grace Prep has scored this year was in a 15-13 win against Fort Worth Country Day. Last week's loss, though, was the first shutout the team has suffered this season. ... Midland Christian beat Arlington Grace Prep 61-22 in 2011.

ROBERT LEE AT GARDEN CITY

When/where: 7:30 p.m. Bearkat Stadium, Garden City

Records: Garden City 1-4, Robert Lee 4-1

Last game: Ropes 42, Garden City 6; Robert Lee 50, Veribest 0

Garden City coach Matt Odom on the game: "They haven't had a tremendous amount of success the past three yeras, but this group of seniors started as freshmen and this is a hungry group. They are hungry for success and are on kind of a roll right now."

Notes: The Bearkats are looking to return to the win column after a rough game against Ropes last week on the road. The Bearkats struggled on both sides of the ball as the Eagles rolled to the convincing victory. Odom said his squad lacked consistency and it is still trying to fill some holes after injuries have hit Garden City hard early this season. Odom said at least four players will be out of tonight's game. Austin Odom, Juan Bustos, Angel Zuniga and Chapman Royall will not play tonight. ... This is the first meeting between the two former district rivals since 2010, and Garden City has won every meeting between the teams as six-man schools. Robert Lee's last victory against the Bearkats was in 2002 when both were 11-man teams. ... Robert Lee has won two straight games and outscored its opponents 116-20 in those two contests. The Steers lone loss was to No. 1 Water Valley. ... Robert Lee competes in Six-Man Division II, District 8.

Trinity coach Chris Jauz on the game: "They team they've had all year is not going to be the team out there Friday night because their spread back and center return. It's a totally different team than what they've been to this point."

Notes: These two teams hit the field again after a contest in 2011 that featured a combined 232 points with Fort Davis winning 124-108 at Coombes Field. ... Both squads have had up-and-down non-district campaigns this year. Trinity has two victories against Loraine and Lubbock Kingdom Prep but have taken losses to Grady and Rankin. Chargers coach Chris Jauz said he's still looking for some consistency on defense, and said it was at this game a season ago that the squad's defensive woes began to surface. "The good thing about it is that we've still got another week or two to get it right," Jauz said. "Right or wrong, our whole season is about two games, and two district games and we'll see what happens after that. The whole way we scheduled was to try to make us better for those two games." ... Trinity's game last week against top-ranked Water Valley was cancelled because of unplayable conditions at Coombes Field. ... Fort Davis began the season with two straight victories but have since lost three straight games to Grandfalls-Royalty, Sanderson and Balmorhea. ... Jauz said that Enriquez has been out for much of the early part of this season but should return tonight.

Records: Rankin 4-1, Ropes 3-2

Last game: Rankin 58, Sanderson 0; Ropes 42, Garden City 6

Players to watch: Rankin, RB/S Dalton Michum (5-11, 180, Sr.), OL/DE Ryan Thomas (5-8, 200, Sr.), C/NG Caleb Wrinkle (6-3, 290, Sr.); Ropes, E/LB Levi Perry (6-4, 210, Sr.), C Ricky Salas (5-10, 230, Sr.)

Rankin coach Shannon Williams on the game: "Ropes is tough and they are getting better every week. It's what you want from your team and they played very good against Garden City."

Notes: The Red Devils had a shortened game last week against Sanderson and also played a team that didn't rely as much on physical play. Rankin jumped on the Eagles early and Michum had another big game with 168 yards rushing on carries and four touchdowns. ... The victory was Rankin's third by the 45-point mercy rule this season. ... Williams said his defense has been playing well, but he said they have been giving up too many big plays. He said preventing the big play will be important in tonight's game because of Ropes' ability to run the spread offense. "All year people have been able to big play us to death, and we've got to have good pressure and be good open field tacklers," Williams said. ... Ropes plays its second straight game against a team from Six-Man Division I District 5 as it beat Garden City last week. ... Ropes rushed for 248 yards and threw for 130 yards in the victory against the Bearkats.

GRADY VS. STERLING CITY

When/where: 7:30 p.m., Tunnel Field, Lenorah

Records: Grady 3-2; Sterling City 3-2

Last game: Grady 60, New Home 15; Sterling City 32, Paducah 27

Last meeting/series: Sterling City defeated Grady 79-34 last year and the teams have split the last two meetings over the last two seasons.

Weather forecast: Highs in the low 80s at the kickoff, getting down to the lower 70s at the end of the game

Notes

■ The Wildcats are coming off a rout against New Home as they ended the game with eight minutes remaining in the third quarter because of the 45-point mercy rule.

It was the Wildcats' third consecutive victory.

Grady coach Chris Kuykendall said the key to that victory was playing good defense.

"New Home has a running back who's only about 5-(foot)-8 and 180 pounds and he looked fairly fast on film," Kuykendall said. "He just tore people apart and Petersburg struggled to stop him. But our defense did a real good job of containing him and we played 2 1/2 solid quarters of defense."

■ Senior quarterback Brett Glaze had one of his better games this season by completing 4 of 6 passes for 117 yards and three touchdowns. While sophomore spread back E.J. Rodriguez added 212 yards rushing and four TDs on 11 carries to go with 62 yards and one TD on 1-of-2 passing.

■ Sterling City is coming off a win over Paducah to snap a two-game losing streak.

This will be the Eagles' last non-district game before beginning District 6, Six-Man Division I play.

■ The Eagles were an 11-3 team and a Six-man Division II semifinalist in 2011. They return four starters on each side of the ball.

Kuykendall said from what he's seen, the Eagles are big and fast and have an offense that's similar to Grady's.

The Eagles are led by RB Cooper Hinderliter, a 5-9, 165-pound senior, who rushed for more than 2,100 yards, scored 50 TDs and amassed 183 tackles last season. He is also a two-time first-team all-state RB.

"Rumor has it that they're missing a couple of their best players because of injury," Kuykendall said. "But we can't prepare according to rumors. We have to make sure we contain their running back. If we can start off like we did in the game against Trinity (a 68-48 victory), we'll be all right.

STREAK

the kids see in a game the little things that need to be fixed," Kuykendall said "We still need to know where to go and what our assignments are no matter what the other team's defense throws at us."

Added Glaze, "I think we're grasping the offense each day more and more. Each week we're learning more about this new offense and I think it's coming along."

Glaze is one of those players who Kuykendall is counting on to help lead the offense in its transition. With Glaze at quarterback and playmaking sophomore E.J. Rodriguez at spread back, the two seem to be complementing each other really well and forming a pretty good duo in the backfield.

Glaze is coming off a good game against New Home as he was 4-of-6 passing for 117 yards with three touchdowns. Up until that game, Glaze admitted that he wasn't always in rhythm.

"He finally had a breakout game," said Kuykendall about his QB. "He's a solid leader and he's coming along a little bit more. I hope that gain of confidence in the offense will help him direct the rest of the team on the field."

Glaze said having a playmaker like Rodriguez helps take the pressure of him.

"E.J.'s a great running back and the defense has to always respect what he's doing on the field," Glaze said. "(Against Sterling City) I felt like I did well. I only threw the ball six times but I was able to throw a lot of screens and the receivers were able to do something with it. It was a compliment to my receivers."

With Glaze and Rodriguez, the Wildcats seem to like their chances of improving more on offense and having a good season once district begins.

"We're 3-2 and we'd like to be 5-0, but we're getting along, learning the offense and I feel we're playing some good football right now," Glaze said.

TCU's Pachall suspended after DWI arrest

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

Roger Mallsion/Fort Worth Star-Telegram

TCU quarterback Casey Pachall gestures to a receiver during a Sept. 29 game against SMU in Dallas. Pachall has been suspended indefinitely after he was arrested on suspicion of driving while intoxicated.

DALLAS — TCU quarterback Casey Pachall was suspended indefinitely Thursday, hours after he was arrested on suspicion of driving while intoxicated — his second brush with trouble this year and one that clouds the 15th-ranked Horned Frogs' push for a Big 12 title.

Coach Gary Patterson announced the suspension, saying his quarterback "obviously needs help."

The 21-year-old Pachall was arrested just after midnight when he was pulled over after running a stop sign near TCU's Fort Worth campus, police Sgt. Pedro Criado said. Pachall's blood-alcohol level was above the legal limit of 0.08 percent, Criado said, declining to provide specifics.

A two-year starter for the Horned Frogs (4-0, 1-0 Big 12), Pachall was released on $1,000 bond from a jail in nearby Mansfield, said jail Officer Nathan Van Ryan. There was no information on an attorney for Pachall.

Pachall's arrest came eight months after he admitted to police that he smoked marijuana and failed a drug test just two weeks before his roommate was arrested in a drug sting operation.

News of the arrest came as TCU coaches were finishing up the game plan for the Big 12 home opener Saturday against Iowa State (3-1, 0-1).

"I've got a young football team and a person who obviously needs help," Patterson told The Associated Press. "Until I can come up with some answers, it's not about one season, it's about a lot of seasons."

Pachall has 948 passing yards and 10 touchdowns with one interception, and he's fourth in the Big 12 and fifth nationally in passing efficiency.

After replacing Andy Dalton, the winningest quarterback in TCU history, Pachall set TCU single-season records last season with 2,921 yards passing and 228 completions. He threw 25 touchdowns with seven interceptions.

Redshirt freshman Trevone Boykin is the likely starter at quarterback Saturday. Boykin has played in three games this season, completing nine of 10 passes for 74 yards and a touchdown. He has 12 rushes for 122 yards.

Before Pachall's arrest, there was anticipation that Boykin could see action at tailback against Iowa State since Matthew Tucker is dealing with an ankle injury. The Frogs had already lost leading rusher Waymon James to a season-ending left knee injury sustained at Kansas three weeks ago.

"This is not about this season," Patterson said. "This about a young man's life, about a whole bunch of kids."

Pachall wasn't suspended after his failed drug test was revealed publicly. Patterson said at the time the quarterback had completed drug and alcohol counseling mandated by the university.

His former roommate, linebacker Tanner Brock, was among four TCU players arrested in February after a six-month drug sting. All four players pleaded guilty to guilty to marijuana delivery charges and were sentenced to probation.

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 42-year-old woman who has wanted to write to you for years. I'll soon celebrate my 20th wedding anniversary. I am very unhappily married.

I married "Bill" for all the wrong reasons. I never truly loved him the way a woman should love a man. I have remained in the marriage because I am "supposed to." I was brought up to obey the Commandments and do what is right.

Bill is a wonderful husband and father. He has a steady job that pays well; I work part-time. Bill and I get along just fine. He is easy to talk to, and we're very good friends. I don't want to lose that. But there is absolutely no passion in our relationship and never was.

I married Bill because it "was time." He feels more like a brother than a husband. I don't want to hurt my children, but I can't pretend any longer. I am attracted to other men. I'm afraid I'm going to start hating him because I feel so trapped.

I don't know what to do. I just want to stop pretending. We have both spoken to professionals and I have talked to my priest. I told Bill a little about how I feel — that I don't love him the way a woman should love a man. He just keeps on trying — buying me flowers, doing all the right things. It doesn't matter. It just makes me angry. Could you please offer me some suggestions? I have read your column since I was a teen, and I value your opinion. Thanks. — HAD IT IN HARTFORD, CONN.

DEAR HAD IT: Let me get this straight — you married your husband under false pretenses and have lied to him for 20 years. Both of you have my sympathy.

The best advice I can offer is to think long and hard about what you have now and what you "might" have in the future. Believe me, there are NO GUARANTEES and expectations have changed a lot since you were in the dating and mating market. If you really cannot love your husband the way he should to be loved — and counseling won't help — then let him go. He deserves better.

DEAR ABBY: My mother died recently after suffering a stroke. Immediately following her death, one of my father's more painful tasks was notifying various agencies: Social Security, retirement benefits and so on. Dad shook his head in amazement as all but one of the people he notified simply fired off a series of questions, thanked him curtly and hung up. Only one civil servant proved to be truly civil, prefacing the conversation with, "I'm sorry for your loss."

Abby, I know people who work in government and private pension departments receive many calls about deaths every day. That doesn't make each death less sad, or each call less difficult for the person picking up the phone and dialing. We can connect on a human level even through layers of officialdom and technology. A few simple, sympathetic words can make a world of difference in the dark days following the loss of a loved one. — NANCY IN OAKLAND, CALIF.

DEAR NANCY: Perhaps it's a self-protective mechanism when people who work with case numbers, files and statistics lose sight of the fact that behind that information are broken hearts and grieving families. Thank you for the reminder. I'm sure no one meant to be cruel. What you have described is an example of people who have become desensitized.

|---|---|---|---|

| 2◇ | Pass | 2♡ | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

Opening lead: Two of ♣

Here's another deal from Eddie Kantar's award-winning series "Thinking Bridge," designed for players desirous of improving their play.

North's bidding describes a hand with a doubleton heart and 6-9 high-card points. Give North three hearts with similar strength and he does best to raise to two hearts directly and not mention the spades. With this in mind, South is not strong enough to bid on. With a weak heart suit (hard to set up facing a doubleton), South needs 17-18 HCP to bid on. Give South A Q 9 of clubs instead the A 9 3 and South can try two no-trump. Whatever, South should not persist in hearts — a death wish if ever there was one.

With no standout lead available, the unbid suit is a reasonable shot. Assuming dummy plays low, East plays the 10, not the king. East plays similarly if dummy has Q x x (x). When third-hand has a higher and a lower honor than dummy, the lower honor is inserted if dummy plays low. Very important.

After winning the ace of clubs, South plays on crossruff lines trying to make as many low trumps as possible. A good start is the ace of spades, spade ruff, ace of diamonds, king of diamonds, diamond ruff, spade ruff and a fourth diamond. West does best to ruff with the king of hearts. If he does, eight tricks for declarer; if he doesn't, nine tricks for declarer.

To remember forever and ever: After 1 ♡ 1 ♠, 2 ◇ 2 ♡ or 1 ♡ 1 NT, 2 ♣ 2 ♡ responder figures to have a doubleton heart. Amen.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Oct. 5, 2012:

This year you could develop a more reserved attitude about your finances. You might feel as if you have restricted yourself in many ways in the past year. Now, you will choose to walk through a new door and establish a fresh outlook. You also will think a lot about what you offer. If you are single, a dashing, unique person rushes into your life. Proceed with caution, as this person might be withholding important information. If you are attached, the two of you benefit from you lightening up and deciding to enjoy yourself more than ever. Know that you are carrying a lucky rabbit's foot this year. GEMINI does talk a lot, but at least he or she is interesting.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Listen to others, especially an associate, partner or loved one who might be having strong feelings about a financial matter. Understand where this person might be coming from. You will see a key relationship lighten up in the next few months. Tonight: Speak your mind.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Deal with a transforming money situation quickly and efficiently. In the next few months, you could discover that a partner is closing down or coming off as cold. Be sensitive yet aware that there is a gap that needs to be bridged. Tonight: Pay your bills.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ If something is going wrong and you are not as confident as usual, do not worry. You are entering a period of reflection, and this will allow you to understand someone better. Remain even and steady in dealing with people in general. Tonight: Beam in what you want.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ Listen to news carefully, and know that you could be overreacting at this point. Try not to wonder what is going on so much. Know when to pull back, as there could be many other perspectives. Give a child or loved one some space for now. Tonight: Play it low-key.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ You might zero in on what you want only to discover today or shortly thereafter that you don't really want it. You have unusual vigor, yet you are able to let go of a situation quickly. A family member could become more touchy than usual. Unfortunately, this attitude could be the beginning of a trend. Tonight: Speak your mind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ Take a chance, and know your limitations. Conversations could become more difficult in the next few months. A boss might have made — or will make — a promise that could take a while to fulfill. Do not be impatient ... just hang in there. Tonight: In the limelight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Intellectualize, but if you experience a strong reaction, detach rather than talk yourself down. You will gain a whole new perspective that could surprise you. You never thought you would come to this position. Use care with funds, now and in the near future. Tonight: Go for a movie or a different escape.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Deal with a partner or associate directly. This person is generally very open, but he or she might be slow to decide in your favor. Learn patience and understanding. A child or potential loved one definitely has rose-colored shades on when it comes to you. Tonight: Follow your feelings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Defer to others, especially if you are unsure of which way to go. A cocky partner or associate could change his or her mind. Be understanding rather than combative. Sometimes you throw these types of situations back in this person's face. What is the purpose, other than to be right? Tonight: Respond to someone's efforts,

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ You communicate with accuracy and clarity. Your serious tone gives others a lot to digest. In-depth responses might take a while to emerge, as people have a lot to think about. Now wait for the results. Tonight: Off to the gym.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Your need to understand what is happening is instrumental to finding a creative solution. In a diplomatic manner, ask as many questions as need be. You could be surprised by what comes up. A child or new friend adds welcome levity. Tonight: Your turn to show some cheerfulness.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Remain sure of yourself, and air out others' ideas with care. You might be filtering out some important facts and ideas. Open up to new possibilities, as in the long run, you will have no choice. You might be more comfortable with the tried and true. Is it still effective? Tonight: Chat with a roommate or family member.

Facebook now home to 1 billion monthly users

Associated Press

NEW YORK — More than 1 billion people now log into Facebook each month to check up on old friends, tag photos of new ones and post about politics, religion, cats or what their kids are doing.

That's double the 500 million it hit in July 2010 — what now seems like a lifetime but was a little more than two years ago. August 2008 marked another big juncture: 100 million users.

The latest milestone also amounts to nearly half of the world's roughly 2.5 billion Internet users, as measured by the International Telecommunications Union.

So who are these people?

Most of them — 81 percent — live outside of the U.S. and Canada. Many of them log in on mobile devices rather than personal computers, and the company now has 600 million mobile users.

The people joining now are young, with a median age of 22. It was 23 in 2010 and 26 in 2008 and 2007. Most of them are from Brazil, India, Indonesia, Mexico and the United States. They are unlikely to be from China, the world's most populous country and home to its largest Internet population. And millions of them are not actual people. Facebook acknowledged in August that 8.7 percent of its then-955 million users may be duplicate or false accounts. At that rate, as many as 87 million accounts are fake.

As expected, the longer users are on Facebook, the more "friends" they have on the site. A user who signed up two years ago has an average of 305 friends. Someone who signed up in December 2005, when Facebook had nearly 6 million users, now has nearly 600 friends, on average.

CEO Mark Zuckerberg marked the milestone on his Facebook page.

"If you're reading this: Thank you for giving me and my little team the honor of serving you," he wrote. "Helping a billion people connect is amazing, humbling and by far the thing I am most proud of in my life."

But he acknowledged in a "Today" show interview that the company is going through a difficult patch.

"We're in a tough cycle now and that doesn't help morale, but people are focused on what they're building," he told Matt Lauer during the interview.

The Menlo Park, Calif.-based company's stock never recovered from a botched initial public offering in May, at one point seeing its value slashed in half by shareholders who don't think it's increasing revenue fast enough, especially from its fast-growing mobile user base.

Last month, Zuckerberg gave his first interview since Facebook's shaky IPO and since that time he's been working hard to boost confidence among investors, employees and the public.

The 28-year-old executive also continued to reassure that he is the right person to lead Facebook, as some on Wall Street have questioned whether he has the ability to lead a large public company.

"I take this responsibility very seriously," he said.

To further mark the occasion, Facebook also released a video Thursday that, somewhat abstractly, seeks to illustrate its ubiquity and utility in connecting people to one another. Directed by Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu ("Babel," "21 Grams" and "Amores Perros"), the video starts off with an empty red chair suspended in midair in a forest. Then it moves to chairs with people, first just one then two, and groups around a dinner table, dancing, playing. Then more chairs.

"Chairs. Chairs are made so that anyone can sit down and take a break. Anyone can sit on a chair," a woman's voice assures the viewer. "And if the chair is large enough, they can sit down together. And tell jokes. Or make up stories. Or just listen. Chairs are for people. And that is why chairs are like Facebook."

Retailers report slower sales growth in September

Associated Press

Americans may have slowed their spending in September after splurging during the start of the busy back-to-school shopping season in the month before. But most importantly, they were still spending.

September sales rose 3.9 percent — a slowdown from the 6-percent rise in August — as 22 retailers like Macy's and Costco reported mixed results, according to the International Council of Shopping Centers.

Still, given the economic and political uncertainty that weighs on many Americans right now, analysts said the results are an encouraging sign for stores as they head into what's traditionally the busiest shopping period of the year in November and December.

Retailers' monthly sales figures are based on revenue at stores opened at least a year. That measure, which is considered to be an indicator of a retailer's health because it excludes results from stores recently opened or closed, offers insights into how Americans are spending during the slow economic recovery.

But only a handful of merchants representing about 13 percent of the $2.4 trillion U.S. retail industry report monthly revenue. And that list is dwindling: Target Corp. on Thursday said that it will no longer report monthly figures starting next year.

Oil posts big gain

Tensions between Syria and Turkey gave oil prices their biggest jump in two months Thursday, while refinery outages boosted wholesale gasoline prices.

Oil settled at $91.71 per barrel, up by $3.57, or 4 percent, on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The rise follows a decline of 4 percent on Wednesday.

Oil prices rose after Turkey's military fired on targets in Syria for the second day. The Middle East and North Africa account for about a third of global oil production. Any tension in the region makes traders nervous about a disruption to supplies.

The energy market is also sensitive to any unplanned outages at a major U.S. refinery with gasoline supplies down about 8 percent from year-ago levels. Exxon Mobil Corp. reported a fire late Wednesday at its Baytown, Texas complex. On Thursday the company said there will be some impact on production, although it expects to "meet its contractual agreements."

Wholesale gasoline futures jumped on that news. Gasoline in New York Harbor rose 14.34 cents, or 5.1 percent, to $2.943 per gallon.

The national average for a gallon of regular was $3.784, up two-tenths of a cent from Wednesday, and up 38 cents compared to a year ago, according to AAA.

Euro rises

The euro rose to $1.3018 in late trading from $1.2899 late Wednesday. The British pound rose to $1.6185 from $1.6072.

The dollar fell to 78.50 Japanese yen from 78.52 yen, to 0.9308 Swiss franc from 0.9390 Swiss franc and to 98.07 Canadian cents from 98.82 Canadian cents.

Gold for December delivery rose $16.70 Thursday to finish at $1,796.50 per ounce.
