Insults fly in final sprint

Race turns personal as tug-of-war escalates

■ Clinton, Bush clash over economy; Perot insists he can win.

Associated Press

Bill Clinton and George Bush clashed over the economy on Thursday and swapped uncommonly personal insults in their run for the White House. The president said "two bozos" are on the Democratic ticket while Clinton accused his rival of saying "incredible, incredible dishonest things."

Invective aside, Bush pressed his underdog's campaign by stressing over and over that the economy is on the road to recovery. "Not as sick as the opposition would have you believe," he said in Michigan.

Clinton scoffed at that as he made his rounds five days before the election. "We are 18 months after the bottom of the recession and we are still doing worse than at any comparable period since before World War II."

In Jersey City, N.J., Clinton declared that when Bush "looks at an anxious and frightened America and tells us this is as good as it gets, that says something worse about his presidency than anything I could ever say."

Citing the loss of 1.4 million manufacturing jobs since 1988, Clinton added that "it's time to move beyond the passivity and complacency of his presidency."

Perot sided more with Clinton than with Bush on that score in a television interview taped with David Frost. "Any growth helps," he said in the session to be broadcast today. "But there's nothing yet to indicate that we're out of the slump."

There was a suggestion that Perot was slumping in the polls in a race that Clinton has led since the Democratic National Convention in July.

ABC's two-night tracking poll made it Clinton, 44 percent, Bush 35 percent and Perot 16 percent, down from 20 percent in a survey released 24 hours earlier. The network surveyed 903 likely voters, with a margin of error of 4 percentage points.

CNN-USA Today released their nightly poll: Clinton ahead of Bush, 41 percent to 38 percent. Perot had 16 percent, in the survey of 1,657 likely voters over two

The New Guinea pitohui

1st poisonous bird

WASHINGTON — Scientists have discovered that an orange-and-black jungle songbird named the New Guinea pitohui contains one of nature's most powerful toxins and is the world's only known poisonous fowl. John Dumbacher, a doctoral candidate at the University of Chicago, said he accidentally discovered that the pitohui (pronounced PIT-a-hooey) was poisonous when several of the songbirds became snared in nets rigged in the jungle to catch another type of bird. "We were trying to catch the bird of paradise, but we caught a lot of these birds as well," Dumbacher said in an interview./1E

Early voting's end

Today is the final day for citizens who want to vote early. The Elections Administration Office, 709 W. Washington Ave., will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. today. No voting will be allowed after 7 p.m. until election day on Tuesday. Voters should bring their blue voter registration certificate to avoid delays, although the card isn't necessary as long as the voter is registered.

Allen-Farrow case

NEW YORK — A judge on Thursday ordered Woody Allen to stay away from his adopted daughter Dylan pending a court hearing in his custody battle with ex-lover Mia Farrow. Allen has denied allegations by Farrow that he sexually abused the 7-year-old girl. State Supreme Court Justice Elliott Wilk also ordered Allen to stay away from Dylan's school, its administrators and its teachers pending Wednesday's hearing.

Parents' tide turns against grade splits

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Staff writer

"Forget about the seventh- and eighth-grade school concept, our children are bused enough," was the overwhelming message from hundreds of parents attending the Thursday night MISD community meeting.

Parents from various sections of Midland attended the third and final meeting scheduled by Midland Independent School District to discuss school boundaries.

School administrators are redrawing boundaries to include two new schools that will be opening in September 1993.

Parents unhappy with an MISD boundary proposal had lined up behind school-board trustee Michael Dobey's plan of creating seventh- and eighth-grade campuses at last week's meeting at Goddard Junior High School.

But Thursday night the tide turned.

Before the meeting, several parents from Alamo areas who had attended the previous community meeting said they were appalled to hear parents in the Parker area express concern about their property values going down if their children were not included in the new school attendance area.

"There was a whole undertone that implied Alamo is too middle-

'Pollamania' grips nation — some of it

3 more surveys check in

NEW YORK (AP) — Polls released by three television networks Thursday showed Democrat Bill Clinton leading President Bush by 3, 5 and 9 percentage points.

Clinton's biggest lead, 44 percent to 35 percent for Bush, was in an ABC News tracking poll of 903 likely voters surveyed on Tuesday and Wednesday. Perot dropped 4 points to 16 percent, but the poll had a 4-point margin of error.

A one-night poll taken Wednesday for NBC News and the Wall Street Journal had Clinton at 43 percent, Bush at 38 percent and Perot at 11 percent. That was a 2-point gain for Bush and a 4-point drop for Perot from a comparable poll the previous night. But the changes were within the 5-point margin of error for the poll of 500 likely voters.

It's Clinton ahead by three lengths but here comes Bush closing fast on the outside with Perot bringing up the rear. Into the stretch it's ...

It's an old complaint: Pre-election polls are turning the republic's greatest deliberative exercise into something as unseemly as the fourth race at Aqueduct.

This season the charge has new urgency, as poll results dominate the closing days of the presidential campaign and, some warn, threaten to shape the very outcome of the, ah, race.

General: Hiss, no spy, was Cold War's victim

By Rayner Pike

Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Alger Hiss, one of the first targets of anti-Communist fervor at the start of the Cold War, said Thursday he was grateful he was still alive to proclaim vindication after 44 years.

In the sensational drama of 1948 that spotlighted a young Congressman Richard M. Nixon, Hiss was accused of being a Red spy by an admitted former Communist, Whittaker Chambers.

Now, at a news conference, the fragile, patrician, 87-year-old Hiss watched a videotape in which a Russian general declared that Hiss never spied for the Soviet Union.

FDA approves injectable, 3-month birth-control drug

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government on Thursday gave women the option of using an injectable drug, Depo Provera, that provides birth control for three months but also may cause weight gain and menstrual irregularities.

"This drug presents another long-term effective option for women to prevent pregnancy," Food and Drug Commissioner David Kessler said in a written statement.

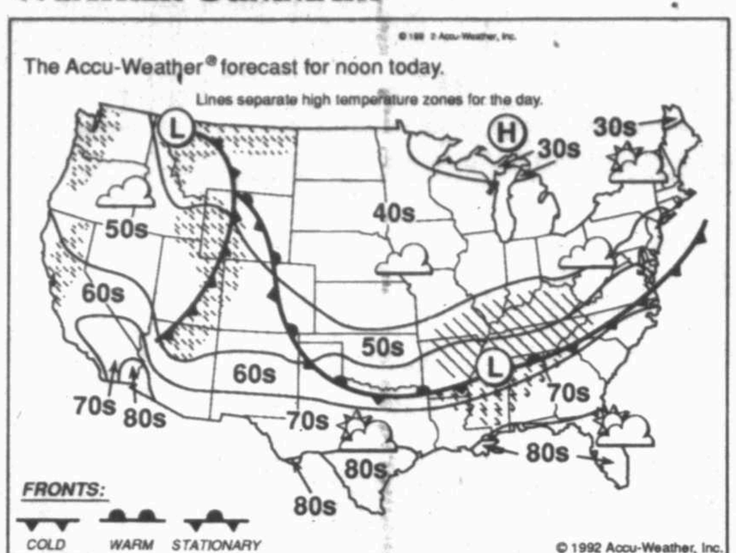

"As an injectable, given once every three months, Depo Provera eliminates problems related to missing a daily dose," Kessler said.

About a quarter of the women of childbearing age in the United States use the birth control pill, which must be taken every day.

The Food and Drug Administration's decision followed the advice of an outside panel of scientists who recommended unanimously last June that the drug be allowed for use as a contraceptive.

WEATHER SUMMARY

City's in store for near-80

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies, a high near 80 and southwest winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low in the lower 50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be partly cloudy with a high near 80.

After an overnight low of 53, Thursday's high reached 76, compared to the record high for that date of 90 set in 1933. The record low was 29 set in 1991.

STATE

Thunderstorms roamed across Texas on Thursday, unleashing heavy rains and hail.

A weak and shallow cold front was slowly moving into North Central Texas and the western part of Northeast Texas.

Low-level moisture continued to increase ahead of the front, fueling the thunderstorms.

The National Weather Service said its radar showed tornadoes near Quitman, 65 miles east of Dallas, about 4:15 p.m. About an hour later, about 25 miles farther east, another tornado showed up on radar southwest of Gilmer.

NATION

A powerful Pacific storm drenched the Northwest on Thursday, and snow blanketed high peaks of the Sierra Nevada and the central Rockies.

Thunderstorms rumbled over parts of Texas and rain dotted portions of the East. Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation, but skies were mostly overcast. The sun peeked through over the Florida peninsula.

Denver got snow early, the result of a front parked over the central Rockies.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SPLITS: Forget concept, parents at meeting say class for their children to come here," said one woman who asked not to be identified. "It's like Alamo isn't good enough for them, sort of an economic discrimination."

After spending an hour explaining staff boundary proposals with the aid of an overhead projector and maps, the meeting was turned over to trustee Gary Willis, who announced 38 people had signed up to speak.

"Giving everyone three to four minutes could amount to about two to 2½ hours," Willis said.

Sylvia Drew, sporting a red badge that declared "I support Alamo Junior High," was the first to speak. She said, "Some of us may be familiar to you. We serve in the United Way, the Junior League and the Symphony Guild. Our children compete with yours in recreational sports and are together in the GEM (Gifted Education Midland) program. ...

"We all are so much alike. Our schools are alike and our children our alike. We have to be able to accept socio-economic as well as ethnic diversity."

Holly Spencer, who resides near Alamo, said, "I support MISD's proposed school boundaries. I am against Michael Dobey's separate seventh- and eighth-grade plan. Our children need stability and continuity. ... After spending the last two years attending different schools our children need to stay in one school."

Before Ms. Spencer could finish her remark about "staying in one school," the majority of people in the audience were on their feet cheering and applauding.

Tina Stafford said she was concerned about Henderson children being sent to Goddard when it is the most distant of all the junior highs, Alamo being the closest. She noted that West Midland is experiencing growth with new construction and "affordable housing."

Alamo Parent Teacher Association President Karen Telck said, "I have a son at this school in the seventh grade. I hope he will be here in the eighth grade." She said her other offspring who attended Alamo are excelling in freshman school and high school and earning honors.

"I don't know how Alamo has come to the reputation we have had," she said. "As for property values, my property has been devaluing for eight years now. I blame that on the economy, not Alamo," she said.

Ms. Telck said she opposed the seventh- and eighth grade-schools. "My children have gone to six different buildings right now. No employer in his right mind would locate a business to Midland, Texas," if they add two more different buildings for junior high.

The Alamo PTA president said implementing seventh- and eighth-grade schools "will not be enough to stop feuding between communities. It seems wrong to impact hundreds and hundreds of students to make parents at Parker and Rusk happy. There has got to be a better solution here than to bus students another year."

Dale Strauss said with the MISD proposal "there will still be a continued problem with the growth factor. It's a very tenuous and fragile balance."

Several parents took exception to the fact that the district plan leaves Abell with a smaller enrollment because of perceived continued growth in north and west Midland.

Many said they feared Alamo would start out overcrowded and Abell would be underutilized.

MISD administrator Larry Lusby said the proposal would result in Alamo having 100 fewer students next year.

Bush PTA President Charlsye Dodson said, "My child — if the seventh and eighth grade is split — will have attended nine schools by high school."

Ms. Dodson, who said she volunteers five-eight hours in the public schools each day — said she had spoken to many parents and had conducted a survey, which she presented to board trustees.

"I have 175 parents against the seventh and eighth grades being split," she said to loud audience support. "I found one parent for it, three undecided and one who just didn't care. I also have a stack of comments and letters."

Ms. Dodson, speaking to Trustee James Fuller, said, "Mr. Fuller, not only are minority parents concerned about the controlled choice concept, others have doubts, especially about spending $1,000 per person (to visit schools out of state with the concept in place). There are a lot of things more important we need to handle first."

Saddle Club resident Mary Hahn said, "The seventh- and eighth-grade plan is frightening to me. Busing students all those years will cause more of what we don't want, teen pregnancy, dropouts, drug and alcohol abuse, cliques and poor test scores. ... I beg of you. Leave the seventh and eighth grades alone."

Randy Turner, who served on the MISD Cluster Advisory Committee, said one thing the committee — which represented a cross section of Midland — came to consenus on, was, "there is too much busing and kids go to too many schools."

In reference to the seventh- and eighth-grade campus concept, Turner said, "I am appalled tonight we would consider a plan which proposes what the community has spoken against."

An Alamo teacher said she was concerned about academic excellence. "Teachers should know what is going on in the grade above and below them," she said.

David Wood, who said he was representing a large group of people unable to attend the meeting, said, "We all oppose Dobey's plan."

A woman representing Northgate parents said she had a petition to send Northgate children to Greathouse, rather than MISD's proposal to send them to Scharbauer.

"When we voted in the bond election to build the new school, we voted for our children to attend Greathouse," she said. "I've been told Greentree is favored in many ways. If you have to bus someone, why not bus Greentree students to Scharbuaer?"

John McBurney of the Parker area said, "This reminds me of the sign outside of Stanton, here are 4,000 good souls and a few old soreheads."

McBurney blamed the media for giving "Parker a bad rep."

He said Parker parents "are not really concerned about property values as we are about overcrowding. ... I have not heard discussion that one school is better than another."

One woman invited Parker parents to work alongside Alamo parents. "When Parker parents don't want to come to Alamo, it's like there is an undertone that the buildng makes the school and the money makes the man. I do not like that message."

Another woman said, "Don't forget we are all part of the same school system. If something is not good enough for you. It's not good enough for me. You demand excellence for your child. You must also demand it for mine."

CAMPAIGN: Clinton, Bush trade personal insults nights, with a margin of error of three percentage points.

But Perot, appearing on "Larry King Live" Thursday night, insisted he can win, while Bush is the man with no chance. "He's history," said Perot. "The good people who are voting for him are throwing their votes away."

Perot said he accepted the Bush campaign's denials of his latest dirty- tricks charges, but said the GOP's record of scandal remains inarguable. "This is the same party that gave us Watergate, this is the same party that gave us Iran-Contra, this is the same party that is up to its ears in Iraq-gate now," he said.

From the campaign bunker in Little Rock, the Clinton's insisted his margin was holding at about 7 points. But from Bush on down, Republicans proclaimed loudly that the momentum had swung to them.

"We've got a November surprise for Bill Clinton and that is George Bush is going to be re-elected," said Vice President Dan Quayle.

Two could play that game, and Democratic vice presidential candidate Al Gore joined in. Texas — a reliably Republican state essential to Bush's chances — is a dead heat, he said.

Perot's spokeswoman, Sharon Holman, complained that the news media was inaccurately depicting the race as a two-way competition between the president and his Democratic challenger. "The American people do not consider this only a Bush-Clinton race," she said.

Clinton dwelled on the economy in Michigan and spoke about that topic as well as the AIDS crisis in New Jersey. "Most of us have preferred to believe AIDS is not our problem," he said, and just affecting gay men and drug users. But, Clinton said, "viruses do not discriminate."

He didn't plow any new ground and avoided some of the more controversial topics — such as distribution of condoms — but aides said he was showing he wouldn't duck unpleasant topics just before the election.

Along the way, he lashed out at Bush as a "desperate person who just wants to hold power. ... And if you're totally shameless and somebody tells you you're not telling the truth and you keep on doing it anyway, which is what Bush does, it's hard for the American people to know what to make of it."

Clinton said Bush says "incredible, incredible dishonest things," and aides said he was referring to radio commercials the Republican president is airing in several states.

Clinton has complained about a commercial in Louisiana accusing him of favoring a complete ban on offshore oil drilling. He favors a ban on selected areas. He also has cited a commercial running in some farm states suggesting he favors giving government planners the right to decide what fields can be planted, another claim he attacked as a falsehood.

POLLS: Results dominate campaign's closing days

(From 1A)

all over the airwaves and across Page 1 in New York's tabloids. "CLOSER" reported Newsday, while the New York Post had Bush "BREATHING DOWN BILL'S NECK." The president, headlined the Daily News, had pulled off "A LATE POLL VAULT."

It's all part of what University of Virginia political scientist Larry Sabato has called "the worst orgy of polling in American history."

Two television networks update their election polls daily, giving a fresh answer to the one question that matters most in a political campaign: Who's ahead?

The number of national presidential election campaign polls increased from three in 1972 to 259 four years ago. This year, a half-dozen polling organizations are dialing tens of thousands of people across the nation in the two weeks before the election, and hundreds of state and local news organizations and candidates are conducting their own polls.

The Seattle Times is not among them. "Who's ahead" polls are "the junk food of our democratic process," executive editor Michael R. Fancher wrote in a column this month. But, he admits, "readers love to talk about them."

That doesn't mean everyone wants to talk to the pollsters. For those who don't, Daniel S. Greenberg, a syndicated columnist specializing in scientific issues, has a homemade remedy: When the pollster calls and asks for your opinion, preference or plans, simply respond: "None of your business, thank you."

Even the candidates can grow impatient at the barrage of polling — especially when it runs against them. Earlier this month, when many polls had Bush with a double-digit deficit, he told a crowd in Cornelia, Ga: "Don't believe these crazy polls! Don't believe these nutty pollsters!"

On Thursday Bush seemed to take a more tolerant view, saying in Michigan, "I'm encouraged by the way these polls that we live and die by are shaping up."

Whatever their accuracy, poll results can obscure the candidates themselves, as well as their messages. Talking about who's ahead without talking about the issues, complains Fancher, is "a little like arguing whether a movie deserved two stars or three without talking about its plot."

Some pollsters even concede the point. "We're seeing an excessive amount of horse race analysis," said Lee Miringoff, director of the Marist Institute for Public Opinion and normally an exuberant advocate of polls and polling.

But he adds that the campaigns themselves are constantly doing private polls, and asks: "Why shouldn't the voters get a look at the kind of information the campaigns have access to? "

SURVEYS: 3 more check in and USA Today had Clinton at 41 percent, Bush at 38 percent and Perot at 16 percent. Those figures, which have a 3-point margin of error, are based on an average of results from polls taken Tuesday and Wednesday of more than 1,657 likely voters.

The Gallup tracking poll swung heavily in Bush's favor Tuesday, leading to reports that the race could be a dead heat. While the 3-point lead reported Thursday also could be a statistical dead heat, several competing polls show a larger Clinton lead.

DRUG: FDA OKs Depo Provera

(From 1A)

However, the FDA pointed out that the drug has possible side effects, including weight gain and menstrual irregularities. It also can leave women tired, weak, dizzy and nervous and can cause headaches and abdominal pain.

The FDA's Fertility and Maternal Health Drugs Advisory Committee heard a day of testimony on the drug's side effects before voting that its potential benefits outweighed the risks. The panel considered whether the drug is scientifically linked to breast, liver or cervical cancer.

In 1973, FDA had announced its intention to approve the drug as a contraceptive, but protests from consumer and women's groups during congressional hearings prompted the agency to withhold the approval. FDA again denied approval for this use in 1978, largely because animal studies suggested a link to cancers of the cervix, liver and breast. More recent studies, though, have indicated that the link may not be so strong as previously believed.

The drug, manufactured by Upjohn Co., already is used as a contraceptive in 90 countries, including Britain, Germany, New Zealand, Norway, Belgium, Sweden and France.

Upjohn has not set the cost of the drug, but it will be comparable to the cost of birth control pills, said company spokeswoman Florence Steinberg.

Dr. Michael Policar, vice president of medical affairs of Planned Parenthood Federation of America, estimated that the drug would cost about $25 per injection. "We've been wanting to use Depo Provera in Planned Parenthood affiliates for years."

Until Thursday, the drug was approved for use in the United States only to treat endometrial and renal cancers. As a birth control agent, it inhibits the production of the hormone gonadotropin, preventing ovulation.

Upjohn said that although the drug already is available for cancer treatment, the birth-control version is a different formulation. The company plans a formal launch of that version in this country in January.

Depo Provera is given in a 150 mg dose injected into an arm muscle or buttock every three months.

HISS: Weight should be lifted, Russian general says

(From 1A)

telligence archives, also said he found nothing in the records that showed Chambers was a Soviet espionage conduit.

The general asked John Lowenthal, a lawyer and filmmaker who took his statement in Moscow on Oct. 15, to "tell Mr. Alger Hiss that the heavy weight should be lifted from his heart."

"The Alger Hiss case was a result of the Cold War, which I hope has definitely become a thing of the past," Volkogonov said.

Hiss, who came under attack while he was a 44-year-old former State Department lawyer, entered the news conference walking with a cane. He remained seated and his head shook as he answered questions in a quavery voice.

He said there probably would remain doubters — "people who have invested so much in a contrary point of view to mine that I can hardly expect them to change now."

Chambers' accusations came in testimony in 1948 before the House Un-American Activities Committee. He said that 10 years earlier Hiss, while in the State Department, gave him secret documents for transmission to the Soviet Union.

It was too late for an espionage prosecution, but Hiss was charged with perjury for denying the allegations. After one hung jury, he was convicted in 1950 and jailed for 3½ years. He has since worked to clear his name.

Nixon staunchly backed Chambers and his political career took off.

The case turned on bizarre revelations, the most famous of which had Chambers opening a pumpkin in which he had hidden microfilm of what he said Hiss had given him. It was known ever after as the "pumpkin papers."

Chambers, an editor at Time magazine when he made the allegations, died in 1961.

The case continued touching nerves in U.S. politics for four decades, spawning books and documentary films.

Some scholars expressed reservations about whether Volkogonov really could find and examine every source in the Soviet intelligence network.

Hiss called the general an "authoritative, important, authentic source."

He expressed regret that what he called his exoneration had come from the Russian government rather than his own, but said he might continue to seek a reversal from U.S. courts.

His last appeal was turned away by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1983.

He said he was not bitter toward Chambers, whom he described during the news conference as being mentally unbalanced, "not able to distinguish between truth and falsehood."

Later, Hiss added: "I am not charitable about J. Edgar Hoover."

U.N. Security Council urges members to contribute troops on short notice

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — The Security Council recommended on Thursday that members of the United Nations express their willingness to contribute troops on short notice to its peacekeeping missions. The council also asked member nations to loan military and civilian specialists to the United Nations to help it create a long-term peacekeeping plan.

The number of U.N. peacekeepers has expanded from 11,000 to more than 50,000 in the last year, chiefly because of expanded responsibilities in Cambodia and the former Yugoslavia. Even so, the United Nations has been criticized for responding too slowly to political and military crises.

The new initiative, prompted by Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali's "Agenda for Peace," issued in June, continues to rely on the good offices of member states. Contributions of troops will still be voluntary.

France has offered to provide trained military units within 48 hours of being asked to supply troops, but President Bush, speaking to the General Assembly here last month, said only that the United States would be willing to train combat and support units destined for the U.N. force.

The secretary general's agenda was his response to a summit-level Security Council meeting in January at which Bush, Prime Minister John Major of Britain, and other leaders called for new approaches to collective security. It calls, too, for new programs to train political officers, human-rights monitors, election organizers, relief workers, and civilian police officers.

Historically, the United States has been reluctant to commit military units to foreign command. The possibility was remote during most of the life of the United Nations because the five permanent members of the Security Council rarely agreed to act in concert in international emergencies.

"The United Nations was rendered powerless to deal with many of these crises," Boutros-Ghali said in his report, "because of the vetoes — 279 of them — cast in the Security Council."

Theoretically, at least, the collapse of the Soviet Union opened the way to quicker crisis responses by the United Nations. In fact, the number of U.N. peacekeeping missions in place around the world has increased dramatically since the end of the Cold War. Of the 26 peacekeeping missions created since the United Nations was founded, 12 have been since 1988.

Even so, the U.N.'s response in its new role has often been characterized as late and relatively ineffective because of the need to request troops from member nations and to obtain financing.

Spassky defeats Fischer in game 26

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Staving off match defeat for at least one more game, Boris Spassky beat his old nemesis Bobby Fischer on Thursday, slowly trapping Fischer until he was forced to resign after Spassky's 58th move.

A win Thursday could have clinched the $5 million chess rematch for Fischer. By winning the 26th game, Spassky narrowed the American's lead to 9-5.

The first player to win 10 games takes the match and the $3.35 million top prize. The runner-up gets the remainder. Ties do not count under rematch rules. The next game will be played Saturday.

Bosnian women's infantry squad fights on front

By Terry Leonard
Associated Press writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — In a muddy trench, just a rifle shot from the front, a dozen young women prepared for patrol on a steep Sarajevo hillside.

Shouldering her Kalashnikov and extinquishing a pungent Balkan cigarette, Velida Biharcic sighed: "I never in my life dreamed I would carry or shoot a gun. It's not right. I should be walking around with my boyfriend instead of sleeping with this gun."

Ms. Biharcic is a member of a 60-woman infantry unit from Pofalici, a northern Sarajevo neighborhood where some of the heaviest house-to-house fighting has occured during Sarajevo's six-month war.

To secure Sarajevo's northern flank from besieging Serbs, Pofalici's men stormed the nearby Zuc hill in May, leading to hundreds of deaths and hundreds more wounded.

Since then, Pofalici's women have banded together to help keep the hill.

"Some of us made the decision out of revenge. Most of us saw the need to help. The men were wounded, we had to replace them. There was no choice," said Mara Perisic, an infantrywoman. Automatic weapons fire rattled from Zuc's crest as she spoke.

In Bosnia's outgunned, outnumbered army, the women are fighting alongside better-trained men on the front, rotating in and out every five days. Other women fight in the Bosnian army, but the Pofalici unit is the only one that is all women, except for the officers.

Whether women soldiers should be sent into to battle has been a divisive issue in the United States following the Persian Gulf War, in which women troops fought and died in combat for the first time. Even in Israel, known for its mandatory draft for women, female soldiers do not see combat.

In Pofalici, men soldiers were at first dubious about fighting alongside women, lost their doubts in the heat of battle, said Omar Gabela, the unit's male commander.

The women, wearing distinctive blue headbands emblazoned with Bosnia's fleur-de-lys emblem, fought and held their ground.

"They don't have as much training, but they show more courage than the men," said Gabela. "Perhaps it's because they're all volunteers."

The women are Muslims, Serbs and Croats, but say they consider themselves merely neighbors. The war in Bosnia began when Serbs rebelled against the majority Muslims and Croats, who voted for secession from Yugoslavia on Feb. 29. More than 14,000 people have died.

After five months of combat the women insist they are the equals of any soldier, man or woman. They are proud of their accomplishments and ashamed of some Sarajevo men who are unwilling to fight.

"They are just mice," said Ms. Biharcic, undisguised contempt in her voice.

Like soldiers everywhere, the women talk about their work with an age-old mixture of bravado and black humor.

"It's a nice feeling to kill a man, especially if you know he is going to kill you," said 21-year-old Mirsada Hromo. "You get a special feeling when you see him walking toward you, wanting to kill you and you just shoot him."

Ms. Biharcic said the Serbs must be surprised when they discover they are fighting women.

"They obviously don't know who they are dealing with," she said. " But as soon as they find out, they're dead."

Remza Cavrk, 22, said she is used to the fear of death. But what the women dread is being captured, with the grim certainty they will not be treated like male POWs.

"We always save one bullet for ourselves," she said.

Yeltsin slams foes, courts Russian centrists

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin on Thursday hinted at harsh measures against his hard-line foes in the Russian parliament, blaming them for slowing his economic reforms and endangering the country.

"The situation is not simply difficult, it's more like critical," Yeltsin was quoted by the ITAR-Tass news agency as saying.

State Secretary Gennady Burbulis, a top Yeltsin aide, said Russian leaders were discussing imposition of emergency rule. Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev warned hard-line lawmakers they could be be replaced, Russian media reported.

The comments were among the most alarmist yet from Yeltsin's team, which has come under intense attack in recent weeks from nationalist and pro-Communist lawmakers who dominate the Congress of People's Deputies, the nation's highest lawmaking body.

Yeltsin lashed back Wednesday, banning the right wing National Salvation Front. It was the first such act by the Russian president since he dissolved the Soviet Communist Party in the wake of the failed 1991 coup.

"All this boils down to an open war against the people, and takes society back to the times of dictatorship," said Front member Alexander Prokhanov.

Front leaders said Thursday they would ignore Yeltsin's order to the Security Ministry to prevent further activities by the party.

Police armed with billy clubs blocked a crowd of at least 100 people carrying red flags and hand-painted posters from entering the building where the Front was meeting.

"Down with the lying government!" one woman screamed to the crowd as she tried to push her way past police.

Yeltsin mounted the offensive ahead of a Dec. 1 session of the Congress, where pro-Communist lawmakers, elected before the collapse of the Soviet Union, have vowed to slow Yeltsin's market-oriented reforms and force his government to resign with a no-confidence vote.

Yeltsin's campaign to postpone the session has apparently failed, but in an interview with the newspaper Arguments and Facts he said he would continue in efforts to delay the meeting and an expected clash with the hard-liners.

But his options are limited. If he disbanded the parliament and imposed direct presidential rule, he would run the risk of being called a dictator.

"There is a feeling that the reforms are losing momentum, due to a growing opposition to them," Yeltsin was quoted as saying. "There will be only shouting at the Congress, which is being convened to make the government resign."

Kozyrev, speaking separately, warned hard-line lawmakers that they could also be replaced. "The government is not a permanent feature, nor should the parliament consider itself such," he said.

The president apparently was trying to keep the hard-liners off balance while he makes overtures to a centrist opposition bloc, Civic Union, in a bid to broaden his political base beyond the pro-reform Democratic Russia coalition.

Civic Union could take a wider government role "as soon as it works out a constructive economic program," Yeltsin said.

Canadian voters say 'No' to constitution

The Canadian establishment's proposals for a new constitution have been turned down flat by Canada's voters.

The major political parties, the premiers of all 10 provinces, tribal leaders and leaders of business, labor and the media supported the final compromise resolution. But the people, unimpressed, said "No!"

America can take no comfort from the prospect of continued divisive wrangling in the house of its closest ally. But everyone can profit from observing what an aroused public can do when it doesn't like where its leaders are leading.

The proposed compromise recognized Quebec as a "distinct society" within the Canadian confederation, enhanced the power of the less populous provinces in the Senate and granted Canada's Indians and Eskimos the right of self-government.

It was a good compromise. It would have certified Canadian unity, periodically threatened by Quebec separatists. It would have strengthened democratic institutions. And it would have assured America of a stronger, more stable ally.

But while the majority in Quebec seemed to feel their province had been shortchanged, majorities in the other provinces thought Quebec had gained too much at their expense.

Opinion polls had indicated the negative vote would prevail in Quebec and one or two Western provinces. In the actual vote, six provinces said no, from Nova Scotia on the Atlantic to British Columbia on the Pacific. Ontario had a virtual tie.

Whether the "no" vote will lead eventually to Canada's breaking apart is anyone's guess. Quebec's ruling Liberal Party opposes separation; if separatists were to gain control, a formal break would still need popular approval by referendum.

The next certain step is a national election. Prime Minister Brian Mulroney must call one before his current term expires in 13 months. His ratings were already low before the referendum; for many Canadians the referendum was about Mulroney, and he lost big.

American manufacturing needs boost

WASHINGTON — Two of the most venerable American companies are on the verge of vanishing from the American landscape — one driven into bankruptcy and the other driven south of the border. Ironically, these giants succumbed a few days apart to a combination of competitive pressures, predatory trading practices and self-inflicted wounds.

Anderson

The Chicago-based Schwinn Bicycle Co. and Cortland, N.Y.-based Smith-Corona were both fixtures in their respective industries. Schwinn was the General Motors of the bicycle business, a household name that was founded in 1895. It filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection on Oct. 8.

Smith-Corona is the nation's last remaining manufacturer of portable electric typewriters and word processors. For more than a century, Smith-Corona has been a world leader and an emblem of quality. Just two days after Schwinn's announcement, Smith-Corona announced that it could no longer withstand predatory Japanese trading practices, and is packing its plant and moving to Mexico — eliminating 875 jobs in its wake.

Over the last decade, a type of black plague has visited American manufacturing — sapping its strength, bankrupting countless others and forcing some of the survivors to relocate outside the country.

When a Smith-Corona or a Schwinn disappears, it's more than the loss of one company in one industry. It's a sign of a deadly syndrome, not just another statistic. Former Democratic presidential candidate Paul Tsongas, whose economic ideas redefined the political debate, called the decline of America's manufacturing base "our collective Kryptonite."

Now only 16 percent of all jobs involve manufacturing, down from 33 percent some 50 years ago. Almost none of the jobs created in the 1980s (an estimated 18 million) were in manufacturing.

What lay behind the decline and defeat of Smith-Corona and Schwinn needs separate examination, even though both failures contain urgent messages for the next president and Congress, which will have to wrestle with how to rescue the economy.

Start with Schwinn. Its bankruptcy was largely self-inflicted, a case of a company that built up $82 million of debt and failed to respond swiftly and effectively to changes in the marketplace — such as the advent of lightweight touring and racing bicycles and the need to cut costs and streamline operations.

If Schwinn was a suicide, then Smith-Corona was more of a homicide.

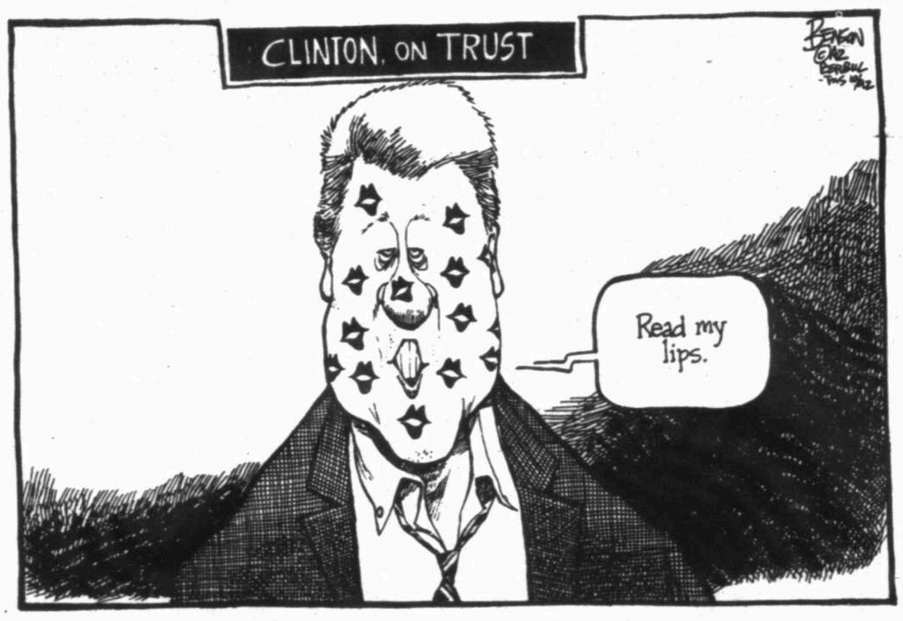

Smith-Corona can blame inadequate U.S. government action to prevent dumping by Japanese word-processor makers. It followed 18 years of litigation over Smith-Corona Corp.'s complaint that Japan-based Brother Industries unfairly sells its portable typewriters and personal word processors at abnormally low prices in the United States. In the last decade, Smith-Corona has won eight separate anti-dumping cases against its competitors, who were found guilty of selling products below cost in an effort to drive the last remaining American typewriter company out of business.

Japanese companies have cleverly found ways around U.S. trade laws that forbid dumping, a condition allowing foreign competitors to sell a product in the United States at less than fair value. Smith-Corona charges that Brother's machines are priced 30 percent below the fair market price.

D'Amato and others complain that the Japanese circumvent anti-dumping laws through the creation of assembly operations in the United States — even though the parts and most of the labor are from abroad.

Trying to prevent future Schwinns and Smith-Coronas will require a combination of smarter management at home and tougher talk in trade negotiations abroad. In the meantime, October was black arm band time for the economy.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Many favor prayer in public schools

In some supernatural venue or other — one of equable climate, I've no doubt — the organ-peal voice of Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen must be joyously rattling the windows.

Murchison

The late Republican minority leader from Illinois fought the good fight in behalf of a constitutional amendment allowing voluntary school prayer and overturning Supreme Court decisions to the contrary. He never succeeded, but he never doubted the justice of his cause.

Nor do most Americans doubt it even now. A new Reader's Digest poll by the Wirthlin Group says, never mind the politicos, three-fourths of ordinary folk favor prayer in public schools.

That's not all. Asked if they approve or disapprove of a recent high court decision disallowing prayer at high school commencements, 80 percent gave the decision the raspberry.

Is it all right, the pollsters asked, for a school to put up a manger scene or a menorah during the holiday season? Sure, replied 76 percent.

Suppose the school wanted to post the Ten Commandments in the classroom. That would be fine with 53 percent.

Fifty-nine percent would be likelier than not to vote for a candidate for president or Congress who favored prayer in public schools.

The Digest quotes one Jeanne Pepper of Bloomfield, Mo., as demanding: "Who are they to tell us when we can pray? Let the children decide, and let those who don't want to participate sit quietly and respectfully. That's their right." Lady, I couldn't have said it better myself.

This is an altogether different view of rights than the court has been talking about on school prayer. The court generally, over the past 30 years, has viewed its task as vetoing religious exercises on public property, never mind how many people want such exercises.

Just one family was indignant over the commencement prayer the court struck down earlier this year. As the court saw it, one was enough. The family bellyached, the court accorded constitutional priority to their stomach complaints.

No Americans I know of want to turn over public schools to clergy of any stripe or persuasion. All anyone wants is a reasonable interpretation of the First Amendment. This is the last thing one should look for when the U.S. Supreme Court takes up a school prayer case. A minority of the public today wields veto power over anything it chooses to characterize as religious exercise. If this isn't tyranny, what is it? Stupidity? I'll buy that, too.

"With the federal judiciary as their guide," writes Eugene Methvin in Reader's Digest, " school authorities have told youngsters they cannot sit together at their lunch hour and read the Bible, say grace over their meals or discuss religion. A handicapped girl in Texas was ordered not use her rosary on a school bus. A Denver teacher was ordered to cease reading his Bible silently during his class reading period and to remove the book from his desk."

I defy anyone to point out the sense in any of this. Such prohibitions do not undergird religious liberty, they circumscribe and impair it. The First Amendment, in addition to disallowing state religion, guarantees the "free exercise" of religion.

It is odd. We wring our hands over moral rot — and take down the Ten Commandments from the classroom wall. We agonize over selfishness and materialism — and ban petitions of gratitude to a higher power. What's the old saying? "Those whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

Today's society blurs difference in boys, girls

When I recently read that the UIL had passed a measure allowing girls to compete with boys in high school football, it brought to mind an event that occurred with my oldest son four years ago. He was experiencing one heck of an adrenaline rush because he was on his way to his first T-ball practice with a real team, real uniforms, and playing on a real field versus the backyard! As we arrived he looked out the window to get a look at his new teammates — three of whom were girls. For a moment he stared without saying a word, then my 4-year-old son turned to me and asked, "Are they the cheerleaders?"

I answered with a very casual, "no," and he followed with a flat sounding, "oh." The expression on his face was not one of disappointment, but of confusion. That confused look was really asking, "Who am I?" All children struggle with an identity crisis, but why is society making it more difficult to answer the question?

The UIL arrived at their decision because they feared "legal problems arising from gender discrimination." I sincerely hope that the State Board of Education will show more courage and common sense in dealing with this issue than the 16 members of the UIL council who passed this measure. Gender discrimination in this matter would be not allowing girls to participate in an all-girl football program if there was truly enough interest to substantiate it. The UIL is using the same kind of reasoning that would replace the "BOYS — GIRLS" sign on public school restrooms with "STUDENTS."

I want all four of my children to participate and compete in athletics because I feel it promotes mental as well as physical development. If my daughters want to play football, I will encourage them to do so. But, it will be on a "girls only" team playing against girls. Call it old-fashioned if you want — but I do not want my daughters playing center or any other position on a boy's football team! What I do want is for my daughters to grow up to be women, and my sons to become men. It is unfortunate that today's "progressive society" has blurred the lines to such a degree that it is often difficult to tell the difference.

Midlander complains of noise, traffic at museum

As a neighbor of the Museum of the Southwest, I am privileged to participate in the Summer Concert Series on Sunday evenings and we all survived yet another Septemberfest, with the music of all those public events ending at the pre-arranged times.

However, more recently the museum has become a "private country club," with wedding receptions and other parties lasting as late as 1 a.m. During one of these events (attended/worked by well over 1,000 people), we called the museum on two occasions about the Valet parking and the high speed "chases" by those in their own vehicles and, secondly, about the noise level. We were assured the situation would be quickly remedied but nothing was done — even the police stationed on our corner were reluctant to "become involved" in this monied event. Liquor was "freely flowing" at several of the recent parties, but because it was not being sold, no permits were required.

The museum is a delightful spot for a wedding reception or other event. What disturbs me is the precedent that they are setting for use of the facility. In our part of the Historic District, the streets are simply not designed to handle the traffic flow in these events. There are many young families who have moved into the older homes; in our block alone there are now seven children ranging in age from newborn to 16. Those of us who have chosen to reside here are quite concerned about the traffic, alcohol and noise.

This neighborhood is a close-knit group of people who enjoy both the other families here and being outdoors in the evenings. We function as an extended family and respectfully acknowledge the deaths, births, illnesses, etc., that bind us together.

Having the museum complex next to us has, until recently, enriched rather than detracted from that community distinction. Upon contacting museum personnel about the loud noise, late hours and increased traffic, several residents (myself included) have been told that "we have only received two complaints," or "you're the only person to voice any concern about our activities!" If the museum plans to continue these "special functions," we find that inappropriate and incongruous at this location.

Our area has been through numerous political and governmental "battles" with the city, zoning board, etc. Because we have become familiar with the noise ordinance and other city regulations, we are hopeful that the museum directors will respect our right to live with peace and quiet within our own streets.

Reader points out error of Hitler's place of birth

Regarding the letter by Reed Gilmore Jr., which appeared on the Opinion page of the Reporter-Telegram Oct. 23, Adolf Hitler was not born in Australia but in fact was born in Braunau, Austria.

Surely this was a typographical error on the part of the newspaper and not a lapse in Gilmore's knowledge of history.

Louise Tyler

EDITOR'S NOTE: You are correct. It was a typographical error on our part, not Gilmore's.

READERS' VIEWS on: County Treasurer

Treasurer's position confuses Midlander

I'm confused. I do not understand how Carol Baker could be "active" county treasurer since May of 1989 when I voted for Dee Thompson for county treasurer in November of 1990.

Why did we need an "active" county treasurer? If Ms. Baker was "active" county treasurer, does that mean Ms. Thompson was the elected but "inactive" county treasurer? Why was Ms. Thompson on the 1990 ballot instead of Ms. Baker?

It sounds like to me we had two treasurers, one "active" and one "inactive" who was elected. If Ms. Baker becomes the "elected" treasurer in November does this mean she will also become the "inactive" treasurer? Who will be the "active" treasurer?

Mary D. Vega
Midland

We need changes in city government

I am not sure what is going on but I think the whole mess stinks. Dee Thompson was county treasurer in an uncontested election in November 1990. Yet Mrs. Baker alleges she has been the "active treasurer" since May 1989 (what was our real treasurer doing?).

I think those who are saying we need some changes at the county are right. What gives these people the right to "hand pick" their replacements? This is an elected position!

Ralph Dishman
Midland

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ms. Thompson was serving as active county treasurer through the filing deadline for candidates in the primary election, thus Ms. Baker had not filed to run for the position. Due to illness, Ms. Thompson was not in the treasurer's office every day, and during her absence, Ms. Baker served as acting treasurer. When Ms. Thompson resigned from her position, the Midland County Commissioners appointed Ms. Baker as county treasurer. She was serving as chief deputy at that point and, by law, the commissioners had to appoint a replacement to the office, and she was their choice.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Critics: Philip Morris uses donations to charities to buy influence

NEW YORK (AP) — Philip Morris has given millions to charities in lawmakers' states and districts, according to documents obtained by an advocacy group that says the tobacco conglomerate is trying to buy influence in Congress.

Federal campaign finance laws limit corporate contributions, but corporations are free to give as much as they want to charities.

Philip Morris denies any wrongdoing.

The tactic of contributing to charities to sway legislators has increased in recent years, said Donna Edwards, an attorney with Public Citizen's Congress Watch in Washington.

She also noted that charity contributions are tax-deductible, meaning that taxpayers are partly "footing the bill, in lost revenue."

"All of this stuff is done in the context of buying access to influence," Edwards said. "It has effectively stalled legislation that be would be good for the health of most Americans."

Eric Solberg, executive director of Houston-based Doctors Ought to Care, said the documents arrived in the mail as computer files on floppy disks. He said he was told the files were from computers in Philip Morris' Washington office.

"What gets people elected is support from their constituents," said Solberg. "Philip Morris has learned to get Congresspeople support by donating to charities in their districts."

James W. Dyer, a White House deputy for legislative affairs, was a Philip Morris lobbyist during the period covered by the documents, roughly 1989 to 1991. He confirmed incidents reported on what appear to be his expense accounts, suggesting the documents are legitimate.

He also confirmed that Philip Morris pursued a strategy of making charitable contributions to organizations in the districts of key legislators.

"They did to a lot of charitable contributions," he said. "That's not a campaign contribution."

Craig Fuller, vice president for corporate affairs at Philip Morris Inc. in New York, neither confirmed nor denied the accuracy of the documents. But he emphatically denied that the company's donation program is driven by political goals.

"It's directed toward helping communities in which we have people living or working or consuming our products," he said Thursday. After the contributions are made, he said, "it's certainly understandable that our Washington office would be interested in our activities."

"It's possible that elected officials would bring to our attention community needs," he said. "But that happens on both sides of the aisle."

A file on Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., shows that during the past decade Philip Morris made some 5,000 separate contributions to high schools, colleges, public television, arts organizations, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, the Kidney Foundation and other groups in Wisconsin.

The contributions totaled more than $6 million. Two Philip Morris divisions, Oscar Mayer Food Corp. and Miller Brewing Co. are headquartered in Wisconsin.

Mary Crawford, Kasten's press secretary, said, "I talked to Sen. Kasten, and he confirmed that he has never talked to anybody at Philip Morris about any charitable contributions, period."

The 89-page file on Kasten begins with a biography of Kasten and a summary of his positions on issues important to Philip Morris. It then goes on for 80 pages, listing Philip Morris contributions to Wisconsin organizations. The file does not say that Kasten was aware of the contributions.

Earlier this week, Public Citizen's Health Research Group identified Kasten as the senate's leading recipient of tobacco industry campaign contributions, with $59,402 in contributions for his 1992 re-election campaign.

Campaign finance laws bar corporations from contributing to election campaigns, but allow companies to create political action committees that can contribute.

Woman releases letter Clinton wrote in 1969

LONDON (AP) — A woman who dated Bill Clinton during his stay at Oxford made public parts of a 1969 letter in which he wrote of "having a hard time adjusting" to the thought of not serving in Vietnam.

Tamara Kennerley said Thursday she decided to publicize the letter after being "infuriated" that President Bush was criticizing the Democratic nominee's anti-war activities of two decades ago.

"I think it's important to show that he thought he was going to Vietnam and that when he found that he wasn't, he found it hard to come to terms with," the 45-year-old businesswoman said in an interview.

Mrs. Kennerley said she met Clinton while visiting her sister in Oxford in April 1969, the beginning of a whirlwind romance for the 22-year-old American Rhodes scholar and the 21-year-old English girl.

Until Clinton returned to Arkansas that summer, she said, they spent every weekend together in Oxford or London.

"When he left, it was a very troubled farewell. We both thought he was going to Vietnam. I thought he was going to be killed," she said.

In a letter dated Aug. 15, 1969, Clinton told her that he had joined a program that allowed him to go to law school for three years before joining the army.

"Hopefully there will be no Vietnam then," she quoted the letter as saying.

The letter continued: "Time at home has been boring but beautifully hot, and I do have a pretty good tan. Have been playing my saxophone with a local band, building a house and meeting with some of the town's younger kids for diversion and pleasure. The idea of not being in the army now and going to Arkansas Law School is almost more than I can handle — just having a hard time adjusting. You know how I brood and worry too much."

Mrs. Kennerley first revealed excerpts of the letter in Thursday's London Daily Mail. She did not display the letter, but read portions to the press.

She said she was astonished when Clinton showed up on her doorstep in September 1969, saying he had returned to finish his degree.

"By going back to Oxford, he was effectively putting himself back in the draft," she said.

Clinton hoped to revive their romance, she said, but she was then involved with a man she later married.

■ More national news/ 1E

Clinton aide Betsey Wright confirmed that the Democratic nominee dated Kennerley while at Oxford and said the letter "confirms everything we ever said" about his actions related to the draft.

City paves way for seal-coating project

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Midland City Council members approved the future sale of $4.9 million in certificates of obligation this week, paving the way for a major southeast seal-coating program.

The certificates are similar to bonds except that their issuance, while incurring debt, does not require citizen vote.

The city will authorize the issuance of the certificates and seek bids from brokerage houses and banks in late November, said City Manager Fred Poe.

Poe believes the city will receive unusually low interest rates on the certificates.

"I would anticipate some real good numbers on these, we're hoping to come under 5 percent," he said. "The election could play some role in that rate depending on what happens in them, but I don't think it would change too much by late November."

Unlike past years, the certificates will be issued for three years, making the exact allocation of the money difficult to determine, said Mayor J.D. Faircloth.

"There is nothing specific as of yet. We will make that determination at a later date," he said "But we will definitely issue (the certificates) before the end of the year."

The city plans to allocate $1 million strictly for seal-coating with the bulk of the work encompassing streets in southeast Midland — east of Big Spring Street and south of Golf Course Road, said Harvey Hansen, director of engineering.

"Those are some of the oldest streets in Midland and many are deteriorating quickly. They need immediate work," Hansen said.

Part of the $1 million for seal-coating will go toward previously delayed projects, including three square miles west of Garfield Street between Andrews Highway and Illinois Avenue.

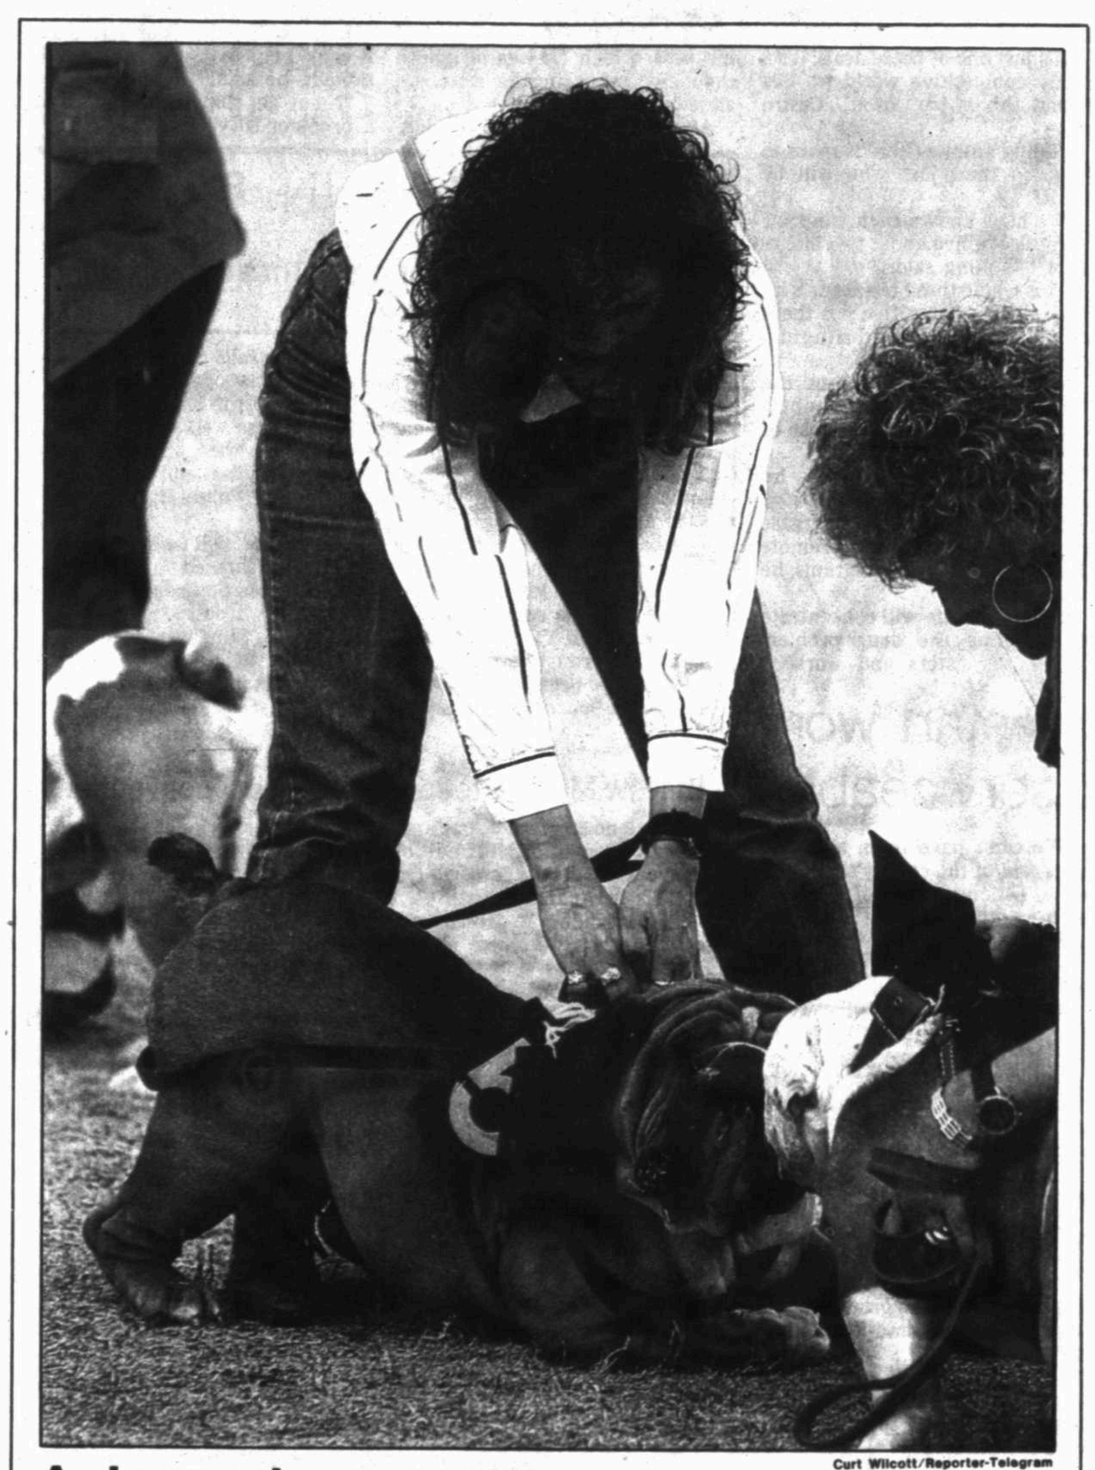

The street department had requested $1.6 million specifically for seal-coating.

An additional $1,427,000 can be used for other street improvements.

Among planned drainage projects, some of which have not been designated, is a large-scale study to determine what channels need widened or deepened.

Hansen said work needs to be started on the channel running west of Midland Park Mall to Midland Drive and another running from Big Spring Street at Mission Square to Highway 80.

Other projects include unspecified park improvements, $500,000; the purchase of traffic control equipment, $300,000; additional communication equipment that will include the final installation of mobile data terminals into city police cars, $325,000; and the acquisition of land and buildings, $950,000.

Workers to upgrade roadways

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Midland County road crews began rebuilding and widening nearly two miles of South Fairgrounds Road in an on-going program this week to upgrade the county's network of 750 miles of roadways.

The county has budgeted approximately $70,000 in materials to ensure that the highly traveled Fairgrounds Road "remains safe and serviceable," said Midland County Commissioner Guy McCrary, whose Precinct 2 includes Fairgrounds Road between U.S. Highway 80 and State Highway 158.

"It was getting narrow and dangerous," said Johnny Williams, superintendent of the county's Road and Bridge Department. "Heavy traffic beats it off the edges."

The road is being rebuilt and widened to 40 feet wide from 20 feet. "We have had a lot of erosion on the edges," McCrary said.

Fairgrounds, which is one of the county's highest traffic roads, provides part of a popular route to the Greenwood community east of Midland. Farm-to-Market Road 307 — Cloverdale Road — leads to the rural community.

South Fairgrounds Road, which constitutes the eastern city limit, leads to the Midland Farmers Cooperative cotton gin, to rural homes and farms, and leads to Farm-to-Market Road 715 on the south.

North Fairgrounds Road, which is maintained by the city of Midland, runs into Loop 250. The approximately 1½ miles on North Fairgrounds Road from U.S. Highway 80 past Scharbauer Draw to Maple Avenue is being widened to five lanes. The $800,000 state-city project includes curbs, gutters and a drainage system to Mulberry Channel.

McCrary noted that the county's South Fairgrounds Road project will be completed under two phases. Phase I is about a six-week project covering the mile from the railroad tracks near U.S. Highway 80 to FM 307. Phase II is about a three-quarter-mile improvement project from Cloverdale Road to Garden City Highway.

"That (Phase II) will be done as soon as the cotton crop is in and the ginning is done," Williams said. The cotton gin is along that Phase II stretch.

Of the 1¾-mile South Fairgrounds Road project, the city of Midland owns about one-half mile of the west side of the road between FM 307 and Indiana Avenue.

Since the 53-year-old Williams, who grew up in the road-building and dirt-contracting business, took over the county's road-building and road-maintenance job last April, he has built or rebuilt 15.8 miles of roads. That does not include routine grading and grading to knock down ridges on "rubboard" roads and routine maintenance, such as filling in potholes and repairing shoulders.

The county's major roadwork includes a three-mile segment on County Road 60 West near the Midland public schools' Bus Barn between Holiday Hill Road and Texas Highway 158; 1.5 miles on County Road 160 West between County Road 1270 and FM 1788; four miles on County Road 120 East between Texas Highway 158 and County Road 1110; 4.8 miles on County Road 1210 South (Midkiff Road) between County Road 140 and beyond County Road 180 near Skywest Airport and including about a half-mile mile of CR 1210 paving which parallels the airport runway; one mile on County Road 150 West between Texas Highway 349 and Cotton Flat Road; one-half mile on County Road 1225 South between Interstate Highway 20 service road and County Road 116; one-half mile on County Road 116 West between County Roads 1225 and 1221; and one-half mile on County Road 1223 South near I-20.

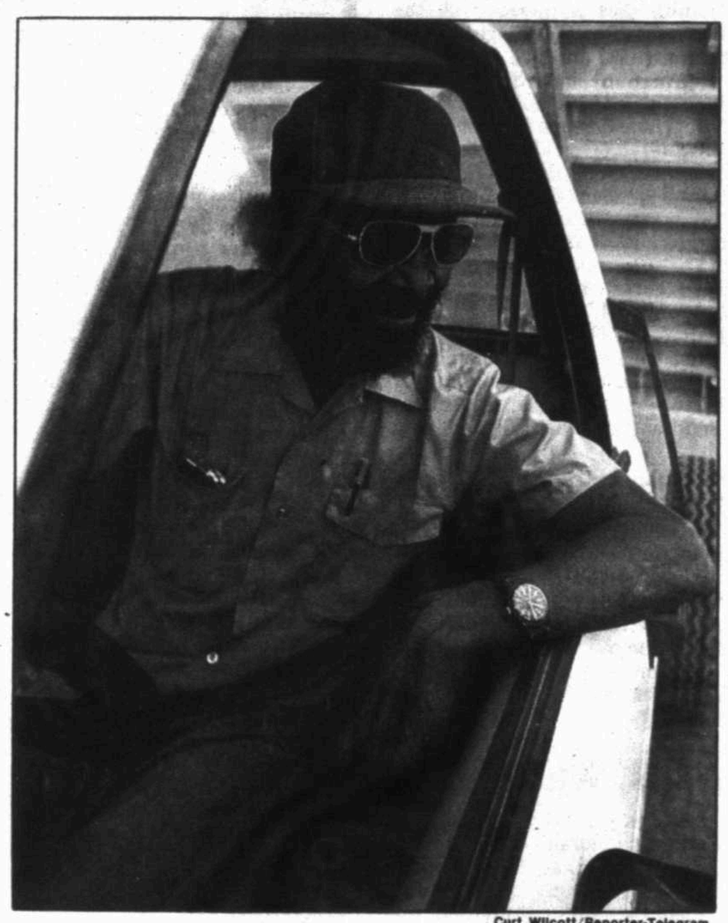

The four-plus-mile segment of Midkiff Road was widened to 26 feet from 20 feet.

Williams has or is adding center stripes and shoulder-marking lines on the improved roads, including County Road 60 West, which has taken on a "state-maintained" quality.

The county's road-building costs, not including labor and equipment, are about $25,000 per mile for a 26-foot wide road to $32,000 for a 40-foot wide road.

His department fields a crew of 30 workers and is supported by a $1.88 million budget. The Road and Bridge Department's 1993 budget is funded by users' fees, including the $7.50 road-and-bridge fee per vehicle on the vehicle-registration fees and the motor-vehicle sales tax, according to Frances Shuffield, Midland County tax assessor-collector. Almost 100,000 automobiles, trucks, trailers, tractor-trailers, and motorcycles, are registered in Midland County.

Martin County sheriff to retire

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

STANTON — After serving as a sheriff longer than any other in Texas, Dan Saunders will not seek re-election while his only two deputies vie for the Martin County office.

And one of the deputies is the first-ever local candidate to run as a Republican.

"There's a real high interest in the sheriff's race. We are losing our sheriff of 40 years," said Ronnie Christian, tax assessor/voter registrar for Martin County.

As a result, voter registration in this county of almost 5,000 may be at an all-time high, Christian said. Of the approximately 2,700 registered, about 70 percent are expected to vote, he added.

Despite the predicted turnout, one of the counties most popular elected officials won't be on the ballot. At 66 years old, Sheriff Saunders has opted against seeking re-election.

"Last year, I came up with a malignancy and I thought I was going to die and I didn't," Saunders said.

After 37 radiation treatments at the Allison Cancer Center in Midland, Saunders said he is "doing fine."

"I already told people I wasn't going to run and I don't go back on my word," he said.

The two men seeking the sheriff's seat are John Castro, 45, and Mike Welling, 38.

"Both are fine officers. Both are qualified," Saunders said.

Episcopalians to attend convention

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

About 300 delegates, church wardens, clergy and visitors from throughout the Episcopal Diocese of Northwest Texas are attending the 34th annual Diocesan Convention being held at the Midland Hilton, Wall Avenue at Loraine street, this weekend.

Fenhagen

"This is an annual convention of the diocese," said the Rev. Allen Whitman, director of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, host church for the convention. "The theme of the convention has to do with the stewardship of creation and the environment."

The last time the convention was held in Midland was 11 years ago, said Whitman, who will preach at the eucharistic service at 8 a.m. Sunday at Trinity Presbyterian Church, Louisiana Avenue at Andrews Highway.

"We are borrowing Trinity Presbyterian Church," Whitman said, because Holy Trinity Episcopal Church was not big enough to accommodate the crowds expected for the sermons being delivered to the convention.

The convention begins at 6 p.m. today at Trinity Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. Dr. James C. Fenhagen, program coordinator of the Cornerstone Project for Excellence in Ministry, from New York, as guest speaker. Fenhagen, recently retired president and dean of General Theological Seminary, New York, will again address the delegates Saturday evening.

The business meetings, which will be conducted by the Rt. Rev. Sam B. Hulsey, Bishop of Northwest Texas, will be held at the Hilton.

Other speakers, workshop leaders and guests include Barbara Braver, the presiding bishop's press officer and liaison between the Diocese of Northwest Texas and the Episcopal Church Center, also from New York; the Rev. C. Scott May, long-time rector of St. James Episcopal Church, Marietta, Ga.; Midlander Kathy Wurster of Holy Trinity; and Dawson Orr of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, Pampa.

Honorary pallbearer will be Tom Rice.

Mary Turner

Services for Mary Louise Braselton Turner of Midland are set for 3 p.m. today at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Baptist Church officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Turner died Tuesday at a local hospital.

Honorary pallbearers are Bill Coombes, Will Coombes, Dan Robinson and George Coombes.

Janie Hammons

HILLSBORO — Services for Janie Hammons, 83, of Midland will be at 2 p.m. Saturday at Marshall & Marshall Funeral Directors Chapel in Hillsboro with the Revs. W.L. Williams and Jim Coslett officiating. Burial will follow in Ridge Park Cemetery in Hillsboro under the direction of Marshall & Marshall Funeral Directors.

Mrs. Hammons died Tuesday at her residence.

She was born on March 6, 1909, near Frost. She lived in Hill County most of her life. She lived in Files Valley since 1948 and in Hillsboro since 1952.

She married Sam Franks in 1928. Franks preceded her in death in 1948. She later married John McKinney Hammons on Feb. 1, 1952. She was a member of the First United Methodist Church in Hillsboro since 1952.

She was preceded in death by her husband, John Hammons, on May 12, 1963; two sisters, Sally Franks in 1985 and Emmie Powell in 1987; three brothers, Johnny Cannon in that late 1970s, Bill Channon in 1992 and Ed Channon in 1987; and two great-grandchildren.

Survivors include two sons, Leo Franks of Irving and Sammy Franks of Waxahachie; one daughter, Johnnie Wolf of Midland; two brothers, Pete Channon of Oklahoma and Buddy Channon of Grandview; two sisters, Rena Huggins of Fort Worth and Margaret Huggins of Kerens; seven grandchildren; and 10 great-grandchildren.

Mary Cornish

Graveside services for Mary Cornish of Fort Worth are set for 10 a.m. Saturday at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. J.B. Stewart officiating. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Thursday at a Fort Worth hospital.

Builder scares up living with haunted houses

By Mitchell Schnurman
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH — Leonard Pickel knows how to scare you.

From behind, from the side, from above, even from down near your feet. But never, ever, in front of you, face-to-face.

That wouldn't just startle; that might stop you in your tracks.

And to Pickel, who claims to be the only full-time haunted house architect in America, that would be a real reason to scream.

"It's like designing in a bottleneck," he said. "People would take forever to get through."

That's not the way to crank 1,000 people an hour through a haunted house, or to pull in a few hundred thousand dollars during a single month. So that's not the way Pickel does it.

At his haunts — mesmerizing mazes with names like Mayhem Manor and Beyond the Edge of Hell — the spooks, the bats, the ghosts and the strobe lights all push customers one way; onward, through the darkness and howls.

Call Pickel's work the science of spookdom.

Pickel, 35, is one player — trained in modern design and the fundamentals of architecture — who's trying to carve out a place in what has become a booming, cut-throat business.

He's dabbled in the "dark amusements" for years, designing his first haunted house in college.

His Dallas company, Elm Street Hauntrepreneurs, specializes in "haunted walk-throughs." But it also designs "dark rides," where patrons ride carts through monster alleys and haunted hotels.

RETIRE: Sheriff leaves office after 40 years

(From 1B)

Castro, the Democratic candidate, won the party's primary against Stanton police chief Michael Adams, and David Saunders, a Midland County Sheriff's Office investigator and son of the retiring Martin County sheriff.

Welling, the first candidate to run as a Republican in Martin County elections, naturally was unopposed during the primary.

Between the two, Welling has served the longest as a deputy sheriff — 11 years, eight months.

"Nobody hates to see Dan leave no worse than I do ... He's taught me (much of) everything I know," he said.

Castro has been with the department for eight years, serving as jail administrator and chief criminal investigator.

Before coming to Stanton, Castro served as a sheriff's deputy in Cochran County, 1982-83, and in Lubbock County, 1978-83.

Running as a Democrat in a stronghold of that party doesn't promise an outright win, Castro said.

The sentiment of the community is that it's "not the ticket a man's running on but the man himself," he said.

Welling is confident that running as a Republican won't be too damaging.

"It has to a certain extent but I think to the most part people are coming around to vote for the man not the party," he said.

The tension created as a result of working together outweighs any opposition of partisanship.

"It has been very hard on me. It has caused a conflict in the office," the sheriff said.

The two candidates apparently have been civil about the race.

"It's just one of those deals. It's a highly competitive world we live in and this is part of it," Castro said.

Welling admits there is more to the race than just who will be sheriff.

"We have known each other for years ... We live about two blocks apart," Welling said.

"This whole thing has made a lot of tension in our office but there hasn't been any mud-slinging, which is good," he said.

Welling said if he looses the election, he "seriously doubts" staying on as a deputy because of possible future politicking.

Castro said, if defeated, he would hope to keep his job.

If elected, Castro will increase training of officers and promote neighborhood watch programs, he said.

Welling said he will concentrate on attacking the drug problem among youngsters and work to keep the jail in compliance.

Both men said they decided to enter the race because of a commitment to the community.

Whoever takes the race will assume the position on Jan. 1 and Saunders will begin retirement.

"I haven't made any plans. I'm not a cafe sitter or a domino player. But I'll be up at 6 (a.m.) January 1st helping people," Saunders said.

But he'll stay out of the sheriff business, which he was in longer than any other in the state, he added.

After four decades on the job, Saunders will be missed by many residents.

"The longer you stay in this office, the more people rely on you, depend on you," he said.

For example, some residents will call the Sheriff's Office for help and ask Saunders to attend to the problem personally.

But that doesn't mean another officer can't help, Saunders said. It may help to know the people though, he said.

"I may get some calls that go to a problem 30 years ago."

COUNTY: Crews start work to make roads serviceable

(From 1B)

Property taxes are not used for county road building and maintenance.

Much of the revenue, $829,164, goes to employee salaries and benefits. Other expenditures include $300,000 to road maintenance and materials, $120,000 for new construction, $40,000 for right-of-way, $340,000 for equipment outlay, $85,000 for equipment maintenance, and $115,000 for vehicle fuel, according to the county's 1993 budget.

"We can't pave them all," Williams said of the county's road system. "I don't know if Midland County could come up with enough money to pave them all in a lifetime. There's not ever enough money for all of it.

"We 'make do' with what we've got," Williams said. "That's the way Midland County has always operated."

His work on Fairgrounds Road will be "a high-profile job," Williams said. "This thing will take a lot of scrutiny. People will see that we are doing our job."

Deputies seize $20,000 worth of marijuana from Midland men

Staff report

Two Midland men were out on bond Thursday after $20,000 worth of marijuana was seized from their residence Wednesday afternoon.

Lineal Sizemore, 47, and Richard Knight, 48, were both charged with possession of more than five pounds of marijuana by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe. Bond for each man was set at $100,000.

A crime stoppers tip led to the discovery of about 100 bags of marijuana at 4008 N. County Road 1247 by Midland County Sheriff's deputies at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Deputies seized approximately 100 bags of marijuana, about 200 ounces; a small amount of cocaine; drug paraphernalia; grow lights; a 12 gauge shotgun; and a .357 magnum pistol.

The men were growing the drug in greenhouses at the residence, reports indicated.

Police officers jail Odessa woman for possession of cocaine

ODESSA — An Odessa woman was in jail Thursday after Odessa police officers discovered cocaine at her residence.

Olivia Munoz Navarette, 48, was charged with possession of cocaine by Justice of the Peace J.E. Weatherly and bond was set at $7,500.

According to a police report, a search warrant was issued at 4:15 p.m. Wednesday for the residence at 2720 Eisenhower. Officers seized 3¼ ounces of cocaine, $1,150 in cash and narcotics packaging materials.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

■ Eddie DeGarmo to perform at youth rally

Staff report

Eddie DeGarmo performs at a 7 p.m. youth rally Saturday at the Petro Jet aviation hangar at Midland International Airport.

DeGarmo is the keyboardist and member of the band DeGarmo & Key. He has two solo albums to his credit as well as the single and video, "Feels Good to Be Forgiven," which was nominated for a Grammy and a Dove Award. Degarmo's rhythm and blues and rock style is featured on his new album, "Phase II: Afterlife Guaranteed."

A banner contest on the theme "Good vs Evil" will be held at the concert. The winning youth group will be featured in a special Street Level video show to be produced after Saturday's event.

The event is sponsored by Street Level, whose video show is seen on KPEJ-TV at 12:30 p.m. Sundays. This Sunday's video will be on Saturday's event.

DeGarmo begins playing around 7:30 p.m. Admission is $4 at the door. For more information call KPEJ-TV, 563-2424.

■ New MC trustees attend annual convention

Charlene Romero-Wurtz and William Howard, two of the three newest trustees of Midland College, recently attended the annual convention of the Association of Community College Trustees (ACCT) in Anaheim, Calif.

Also attending to present a talk about the American Association of Community Colleges was David E. Daniel, Ed.D., president of Midland College and immediate past president of AACC.

The ACCT convention is a major trustee development activity, designed to strengthen the trustees and help them learn of vital topics relative to community college students, employees, and their communities.

Keynote speaker Ray Bradbury, novelist, poet, and playwright, spoke on "The Great Years Ahead." David Mertes, chancellor of the California Community Colleges, discussed "Funding and Legislative Strategies."

Other speakers included Guadalupe C. Quintanilla, assistant vice president for academic affairs, University of Houston, and Robert Terry, a consultant on leadership, quality, and diversity.

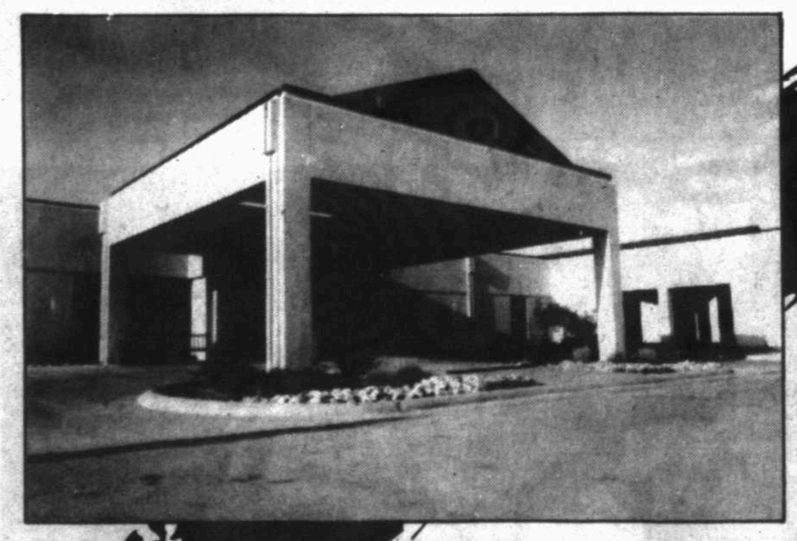

The convention also includes seven half-day academies, 27 concurrent sessions, and 35 round-table discussions.

■ Presbyterian Women to have luncheon, program

The First Presbyterian Church Presbyterian Women will have a "Thank Offering Luncheon" at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday in Lynn Hall, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Karen Davis Kilgore, vice president for College Placement for Schreiner College, Kerrville, will present the program. She will review the book "Opal, A Journal of an Understanding Heart" compiled by Jane Boulton.

Reservations must be made by Saturday. To make reservations call the church office, 684-7821, or Allegra Boone, 697-7550. Guests and other Presbyterian women's groups are welcome.

FAMILY MATTERS

Alzheimer's devastating for patients, caregivers

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: Our family has been devastated by the insidious disease of Alzheimer's. Helplessly, we watch the decline of our loved one, but are also involved in the many details of caregiving as well as trying to hold our own emotions together. Grieving and depression are becoming routine and frequently complicated by anger, uncertainty and fear.

May

Can you make any suggestions to help us cope with this experience? DEVASTATED

DEAR DEVASTATED: Alzheimer's disease is destructive to both the person suffering from the disease and his or her family. The heartbreak associated with watching someone you love literally mentally, emotionally and physically de-construct is extremely powerful.

I encourage you to gather as much information about the disease as you can. Knowing the disease's characteristics and what to expect as it progresses is very important, and will help you and your family be aware of what might, can and/or will probably happen. Having some sense of what to expect usually lowers stress, and keeps you in touch with the current research findings. The Alzheimer's Association of the Permian Basin (550-9960) can help.

Another way to help deal with the stress of Alzheimer's is to join a support group. Being able to share with others experiencing similar problems is extremely valuable. The Alzheimer's Association sponsors group meetings in Midland and Odessa. Call them for times and locations. I believe in the value of support groups to help raise our spirits. Having a "best friend" with whom you can share your frustrations, depression and anger without feeling judged, also helps.

Consider some of these additional suggestions to help your self directly. Relaxation techniques are very good in helping reduce stress. You can purchase "structured relaxation techniques" audio tapes from most bookstores. These tapes teach you how to relax and let go of tension. After you have mastered the relaxation-/breathing techniques, consider "guided imagery" tapes that are positive and inspiring. Yoga is another form of meditation that leads to relaxation, but I do not know of anyone teaching yoga in the area at this time. You may also consider contacting the Central YMCA (682-2551) for information on their stress management courses.

I encourage you to consider (or continue) exercising on a regular basis. As the tension from stress builds the body suffers. All too often caregivers get so caught up in "taking care" that they forget to take care of themselves. Regular exercise is a natural proven way to help relieve tension and gain a new perspective on life.

As the disease progresses you may also want to consider some form of respite care. People often feel very guilty about leaving a loved one in the hospital while they get away. However, caretakers need breaks. I believe that in dealing with long-term diseases like Alzheimer's, the caregiver must schedule regular and frequent breaks or the caregiver will break!

Finally, I encourage you to talk frequently with your minister or priest. A devastating disease like Alzheimer's often raises significant spiritual questions. Your spirit needs comforting too. Allow yourself and your family to grieve over what has been lost. In his book, "The Disabled and Their Parents," Dr. Leo Buscaglia wrote: "To grieve temporarily for something of value which is lost is a normal human response. To live together in peace, joy and love, each person in the family will need to have a mutual feeling of respect and regard. The rewards lay in a feeling of security, group support and a more vast repertoire of behavioral alternatives." I would add to that a "more vast repertoire of spiritual alternatives."

DEAR READERS: November is National Alzheimer's Month. The Permian Basin Chapter of the National Alzheimer's Association will have its annual Memory Walk fund raiser from 9 a.m.-noon Nov. 7 at Winwood Mall in Odessa. Call the chapter for additional information.

DEAR ABBY

Widow wants to know where 'good men' are found

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, just turned 50. I am in good health and love to travel. I was married for 29 years to the most ideal man in the world. I honestly feel that there is no man on Earth as perfect as my late husband. We have two grown children.

Van Buren

Donald and I were very compatible, loving and affectionate until the end. I miss his companionship. We were each other's best friend. He was always telling me how happy I made him. We had a perfect marriage.

Abby, I would like to meet someone who will appreciate me and love me. I know that good men are hard to find, and I could make some man very happy.

Where do I start looking? And, is it true that people who have had good marriages are the ones who get married sooner? — LAURA (NOT MY REAL NAME)

DEAR LAURA: Yes, it's true.

You "start looking" by looking your best and letting your friends know that you would be interested in meeting a gentleman who is good company, and that you would like to get back into circulation. Traditionally, people meet nice people through the generosity of their friends. (And, I'm sure there is a special place in heaven for the matchmaking angel who is constantly "fixing up" dates for singles.)

Get out of the house and get involved in the community. Get a job, go back to school, enroll in some adult education classes, learn to paint or sew, or volunteer your services. Work with your church, the Red Cross, your political party, the underprivileged, the disabled, the mental health society — the list is endless. They need volunteers — that's where worthwhile people meet other worthwhile people.

And now, may I offer you a little unsolicited advice? Should you meet a gentleman whom you find attractive, the less said about your husband, the better.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, you had a letter about a couple who were soon to celebrate their 50th wedding anniverary. Their children requested that, in lieu of gifts, their friends write a brief letter recalling a memory they had shared with their parents.

My parents will soon be married 50 years, and I would like to do something similar for their anniversary. Unfortunately, I misplaced the article. Would you please run it again? I'm sure other readers would appreciate it, too. — M.M. IN EVANSVILLE, IND.

DEAR M.M.: Here it is:

"The children of Iver and Helen Dahl invite you to celebrate with them the 50th wedding anniverary of their parents. A reception will be held May 7, at 2 p.m., at the Elmhurst Country Club.

"We request your help in compiling a book that recalls memories from our parents' first 50 years of marriage. On the enclosed sheet, we ask that you write one memory or experience that you have shared with them and return it to us by April 26. We believe that the loving memories they have shared with you, their friends, would be the most treasured gift they could receive; therefore, we request that no other gift be sent."

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, in the spirit of Halloween, my neighborhood bank invited all employees to come to work in costume. When I stopped to cash a check, I was shocked to see my always dignified bank manager wearing a leopard loincloth impersonating Tarzan, and a secretary in a grass skirt and lei.

I thought, "How easy it would be for a couple of bank robbers to walk in with an Uzi and an AK-47 and pull a real-life Bonnie and Clyde!" — CALIFORNIA READER

DEAR CALIFORNIA READER: Bottom line — save the costumes for a costume party.

DEAR ABBY: Recently my son's clothing was stolen right off our clothesline in the back yard. Sad to say, this wasn't the first time this has happened. Thieves used to steal when we had forgotten to take in the clothes before dark, so we made sure there were no clothes hanging outside before we went to bed. Now, they steal in broad daylight!

The last time this happened was a week ago. They stole a pair of elastic tights that my son and his sister shared — also a school sweatshirt. Both of these items had my son's name tag stitched in from when he went to summer camp. I am a single parent and cannot afford to keep buying new clothes to replace the ones that are stolen.

I know I will never see those clothes again. I hate to use my dryer — I save money when I hang stuff outside to dry — but now I'm beginning to wonder. Any suggestions? — WIPED OUT WHEN I HANG IT OUT

DEAR WIPED OUT: Never hang anything you value outside to dry. You must be a slow learner. One theft should have been enough. Temptation is just too much for some people to resist.

Author says five minutes a day can help promote equality

By Elizabeth Coady
N.Y. Times News Service

Don't kid yourself, baby. In America, you've still got a long way to go.

Author Donna Jackson's slim paperback, "How to Make the World a Better Place for Women in Five Minutes a Day" (Hyperion, $7.95), reminds readers how far women are from attaining equality in America. But it also gives women quick tips on improving their lot. Some 93 million strong, women can:

Boycott companies that use scantily clad female models to promote products.

Purchase products or services from women who own their own businesses.

Donate to female politicians.

"What I tried to do is make it a compilation of common-sense information for people who really didn't want the more complicated answers," the 33-year-old freelance writer and editor said in a telephone interview from her Annapolis, Md., home.

The book collects news, statistics and resources with a feminist bent cited in other pop-culture and medical literature.

Since the 147-page volume was published in September, Ms. Jackson has traveled to eight cities and done about 50 radio and newspaper interviews.

Ms. Jackson, a Duke University creative writing graduate, says readers have reacted angrily to her message for different reasons. Some are outraged at the statistics in the book, such as that only 2 percent to 3 percent of men who rape go to prison.

Others smart over her agenda, which she unabashedly admits is anti-Republican. She blames the reactionary politics of the '80s for turning feminist into a dirty word.

"I'm trying to bring out very strongly that from family leave to harassment, to the issue of choice, to the issue of sexism in the media, we are experiencing what I call retro sexism," Ms. Jackson says.

She says she observed society's double standard for men and women while her widowed mother worked as an accountant to support four children. "It seemed that the world was pretty closed to a woman in her position," she says. She and her three brothers were raised in an egalitarian household, and she says she was shocked when she entered the business world as a journalist.

The book opens by revisiting the appointment of Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court and the court's erosion of Roe v. Wade. There's also a scorecard of senators' votes on abortion rights, child care and family leave, and comparisons of U.S. policies on family leave and child care with those of other industrialized nations.

She says the book's goal is not to demoralize but "empower" women. She claims it can help hasten the status quo's demise. "Pick something that you really care about. ... Go to that section in the book and just choose something that you can do. If you were the average person on the street starting from scratch, it would not take you five minutes."

Ms. Jackson's book is available in some book stores. It can be ordered by calling 800-759-0190.

Tips help things improve

N.Y. Times News Service

Applaud fathers who spend time with their children, and make your sons help out around the house as much as you do your daughters.

Hang a poster at your job listing statistics on sexual harassment in the work force. Write to the Women's Legal Defense Fund, 1875 Connecticut Ave. N.W., Suite 710, Washington, D.C. 20009. Or call 202-986- 2600 and ask for the "Sexual Harassment in Our Workplace: Your Legal Rights" poster. $2.50 for up to 10 copies.

Request a job review in writing before telling your boss you're pregnant. Even though pregnancy discrimination is illegal, some companies fire expectant women, claiming to have found "better workers." If your work record is in writing, your contribution is harder to dispute.

Use the Women's Yellow Pages, which lists companies and services available from women professionals. $8 at some area bookstores. 404-772-0050.

Learning has no age limits

By Chip Brown

LUBBOCK (AP) — At 74, Robert Dennis figures it's time to ditch his suit for tennis shoes, jeans and a T-shirt.

Genevieve Smead has gotten hooked on computers at 82.

And Marjorie Cartwright, 66, has become a die-hard fan of the Texas Tech Lady Red Raiders basketball team.

All are a part of Texas Tech's Seniors' Academy, a 2-year-old program encouraging people over 55 to return to or start college.

Dennis says he has "never felt younger," studying with classmates a quarter his age.

Mrs. Smead is majoring in ceramics, writes poetry on computers and laments, "Geography is difficult — so much to learn in a short period of time."

Kay Caddel, an adviser for Seniors' Academy students, says they get more out of their studies, in part, "because they don't party as much as our younger students."

Most of the 25 people enrolled in the senior education program are making up for lost time, Ms. Caddel says.

"It's not that they will go on to a second job," she said. "They are here because it's important to them at this stage of their life."

Many of the older students come back because they couldn't afford college when they graduated from high school in the 1930s and 1940s. Some are resuming an education interrupted by work, World War II or the start of a family.

THE SENIORS' Academy at Tech, one of several such programs around the country, attempts to make hitting the books a breeze for senior scholars.

No previous experience or results from college entrance exams are required. Seniors' Academy members are given counseling and tutoring at no cost.

The older students are also allowed to register before everyone else, and courses are set up to ensure no running is required between classes to get there on time.

But Mrs. Cartwright is quick to point out that's where the benefits end.

"There is no special treatment in the classroom," she said. "Just because we are old and gray-headed doesn't mean they give us an A."

The senior seniors also get the same degree as younger seniors.

For Mrs. Smead, the oldest student at Texas Tech, that degree has been a lifelong ambition. A nurse for 45 years, she retired and spent seven years taking care of her husband who suffered from Alzheimer's disease and cancer.

'It's not that they will go on to a second job. They are here because it's important to them at this stage of their life.'

— Kay Caddel
adviser for Seniors' Academy students

A year and a half after he died in 1984, Mrs. Smead enrolled at Tech. She graduated in August.

"Heading back to school makes a person's life longer," says Mrs. Smead, who recently had an exhibit of clay pitchers she has sculpted. "It keeps you thinking, alert and physically fit."

"Genevieve does not hesitate to participate fully in the learning process," says Melody Weiler, chairwoman of Texas Tech's art department. "The students have respected her and she has provided an inspiration to others."

MRS. CARTWRIGHT was never much of a women's basketball fan. But after enrolling at Tech last fall as a general studies major, she discovered the Southwest Conference champion Lady Red Raiders and jumped on the bandwagon.

"We wouldn't miss a game now," she says.

Dennis, also a general studies major, says it was a little hard to blend in with students at first. So he mothballed a suit he wore to class and slipped into a T-shirt and jeans.

"I have got clothes just like the rest of them, right down to my Nike socks," says Dennis, a retired printer who graduated from high school in 1935 and immediately went to work. "I even wore my shorts this semester."

Dennis says he felt self-conscious when first going to class, but after a while, students began asking Dennis for copies of his notes if they missed class. "That made me feel good," says Dennis, who hopes to graduate in May 1994.

Mrs. Smead calls the past six years of chasing her bachelor of fine arts degree one of the greatest challenges in her life.

"I started when I was 76, and I have done it semester by semester," she said. "I am not saying these past six years have been a bed of roses. But I am determined to see it through."

Study finds little sexism in hospital care

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Elderly men and women receive roughly equal treatment when it comes to the quality and quantity of hospital care, but there is slight bias against women, the Rand Corp. said.

"The good news is our finding that, by and large, men and women receive comparable care in hospitals," said Marjorie L. Pearson, lead author of the study published this month in the Journal of the American Medical Association. "However, there were some small disparities that generally favored men." For example, women failed to get needed diagnostic tests slightly more often than men, according to the study.

There was no significant difference in the provision of most of 88 hospital services to elderly men and women. But where there were differences, "men received more care than women," the researchers found. Men were especially likely to be favored "in the use of expensive, highly technological services," Rand said.

Some recent studies have suggested that men are more likely to receive treatments and undergo medical procedures than women, especially when it comes to heart disease. The Rand Corp. study examined data on 11,242 elderly Medicare patients treated for congestive heart failure, heart attack, pneumonia or stroke at 297 hospitals during 1981-82 and 1985-86.

The researchers measured both the quality and quantity of care by using a grading process. They adjusted the results to compensate for differences in the patients' ages, severity of illness when hospitalized and other factors.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Seniors' behavior sometimes changes

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: How do you deal with or adjust to some of the behavioral changes of the elderly?

Edwards

ANSWER: In answer to your question, let's look at several examples of behavioral change, reasons and solutions.

■ Doesn't want to bathe: Reasons may include loss of sense of smell; change in body temperature may create a problem; fear of falling in shower or cannot get into tub; may not care.

Solution would be to provide an occasion to clean up; install handgrips or bathtub seat; be tactful but honest about the problem and discuss it.

■ Wears the same clothes over and over: Reasons may include loss of sense of smell; too much routine without occasions or need to dress differently; clothes may be comfortable or associated with eventful memories; no new clothes that fit.

Solutions would be to provide occasions; compliment on appearance and apparel; give new clothes as presents after asking what the person would like. Show real interest in the person.

■ Closes all the drapes and blinds: Reason may be that sight diminishes, but glare is a real problem.

Solutions may include: suggest a visit to the eye doctor; sunglasses or visor cap may help; understand the problem.

■ Won't clean the house: Reasons may include that as vision decreases, fewer things are noticed. The house may look clean to the person; the person may be depressed and may not care.

Solutions begin with understanding. Is the house that dirty; is it your problem? Is it a threat to the safety and health of the person? Ask if the person would like help in doing the heavy chores; involve the person in new interests; encourage discussions about concerns/problems.

■ Can't sleep at night; wanders; keeps the lights on: Reasons may be that the older person may not be able to have a deep sleep. He or she may not feel exhausted at the end of a boring day; the person may fear falling in the dark, being alone or dying.

Solutions include planning more daytime activities with the person; providing a night light to guide the way to the bathroom. In particular, try relaxing with the person before retiring.

■ Drinks constantly: Reasons may be loneliness; grief; depressed reaction to changes; stressful situation or the person may be an alcoholic.

Solutions including talking honestly about your concern when the person has not been drinking. Suggest and help provide more social activities. Also encourage counseling, help from Alcoholics Anonymous, a minister or making a change in scenery or situation.

■ Repeats same statements and stories: Reasons may include, may not hear well enough to participate in a conversation; does not remember or realize the repetition; finds more comfort in the past.

Solutions include investigate hearing loss and make special efforts to include the person in conversations. Listen for the point of the story/statement. It may reflect anxiety or the importance of former activities. Take note. Be reassuring. Building self esteem and important activities in the present will help. Be understanding, yet give yourself the space you need toot remain helpful.

'Weather watcher' honored

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Earl Stewart has seen the highs and lows in Oregon for 75 years. Every day. The 90-year-old Cottage Grove man has been a National Weather Service observer since 1917, making him the nation's oldest and longest-serving volunteer weather watcher.

Through rain and snow and wind, Stewart trudged out to a small white instrument shed in his back yard to make observations at 6 p.m. daily. Temperatures and rainfall have been carefully recorded, year after year, and sent each month to the National Climatic Data Center in Asheville, N.C., for regional weather studies.

For his service, he was named the first recipient of the "Earl Stewart Award for Serving 75 or More Years as a Cooperative Weather Observer."

The weather service has about 10,500 such observers. Most are volunteers, but a few get a small stipend for checking stations in remote areas.

To Whom It May Concern,

I, Walter Johnson, would like to make a public apology to Mrs. Louisa Valencia, County Commissioner of Precinct 3, for the letter I had printed in the Midland Reporter-Telegram on Sunday, October 25.

In my letter to the editior, I had said that Mrs. Valencia used County equipment and employees to bury some dead animals on her property. When I wrote the letter, I was not aware the county offered this service to the residents of Midland County for a fee. Mrs. Valencia presented a check to me showing she had paid for this service.

I am very sorry for not confronting Mrs. Valencia before writing the letter and giving her the opportunity to explain this to me. I now know that she IS trying to save the tax payers money and has done nothing wrong.

Sincerely,

Walter Johnson

Medical school announces $150 million research fund

By Jay Jorden
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — A $150 million fund to benefit molecular work by two Nobel laureates and other researchers will also provide construction money in a campaign that organizers said Thursday would make a medical school a research leader.

A Nobel laureate at The University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas compared the Fund for Molecular Research to financial backing for the superconducting super collider.

Dr. Johann Deisenhofer, recipient of a 1988 Nobel Prize, said that while the giant atom smasher under construction south of Dallas will examine fundamentals of physics, "what we are trying to do here is to understand biology problems.

"In principal, these endeavors are comparable," he said.

Two other Nobel laureates will receive support from the new campaign, which Dr. Kern Wildenthal, UT Southwestern president, called the largest research fund-raising effort undertaken by a U.S. medical school.

"Private support will make the critical difference for the future of this institution," he told a news conference, "allowing us to attract and retain the best scientific minds and giving them the freedom to pursue the most complex and mysterious problems besetting humanity."

Molecular research is a key to treating and preventing cancer, heart disease and neurological disorders such as Alzheimer's and multiple sclerosis, Wildenthal said.

The fund's co-chair, Exxon Corp. President Lee Raymond, announced the Irving-based company has donated $1 million, its largest grant ever for medical research.

The UT Southwestern campaign includes $30 million for construction and equipment, with the private donations supplementing $100 million already committed by The University of Texas System for two new buildings and UT Southwestern's north campus, Raymond said.

Wildenthal said that, while other medical schools also have fund-raising drives, UT Southwestern's was the largest for pure research. It includes $39 million for cancer research.

Other priorities in the campaign include molecular genetics research led by Dr. Michael S. Brown and Dr. Joseph Goldstein, who had received 1985 Nobel Prizes in medicine for studying how cells remove cholesterol from blood.

"We pledge that the funds raised will be applied to the medical acquisition of revolutionary knowledge that will lead to the betterment of all humanity," Brown said.

Funds will benefit research to understand how AIDS and other viruses could be battled, he said.

Brown is director of the Erik Jonsson Center for Research in Molecular Genetics and Human Disease, while Goldstein chairs the school's Department of Molecular Genetics.

"Over the past 20 to 30 years, we have gradually built here a faculty that we believe is at the forefront of all the medical schools in terms of the ability not only to conduct research but to unite basic research with clinical medicine," said Brown.

"That's what we pride ourselves on, that's what we're going to use this money for."

Alvin renames highway in honor of Nolan Ryan

ALVIN (AP) — The Alvin Express got an expressway named after him Thursday.

Hometown boy Nolan Ryan, Texas' most famous baseball player, climbed into a cherry picker that took him to the top of a big green highway sign, peeled off the black plastic wrapping and formally made Texas Highway 288 in Brazoria County south of Houston the "Nolan Ryan Expressway."

"It is indeed an honor," said Ryan, who holds major league records with seven no-hitters and 5,668 strikeouts in a career that began in 1966. "It is going to be exciting to drive down 288 and see this sign."

The four-lane freeway to carry Ryan's name stretches for about 30 miles from the Harris-Brazoria county line to Freeport.

The city council in Alvin, where Ryan and his family live, and the Brazoria County commissioners asked that the Texas Legislature designate the freeway in honor of their most famous native son. The Legislature approved the highway name in 1991 and it took until Thursday to get the first of the signs up.

"This is really special," said Ryan, whose on-the-field accomplishments likely will put him in baseball's Hall of Fame.

Asked if the designation now would allow him to travel the road as fast as his 100 mph fastball, he laughed.

"I don't think so," he said.

But he admitted that during his nine-year stint with the Houston Astros beginning in 1980, he had been pulled over several times by police patrolling for speeders. The highway, the main route between the Astrodome and Ryan's home, is renowned in the Houston area as a speed trap.

"I think the last time I got off with just a warning," Ryan chuckled.

The unpretentious Ryan, who will start his 26th major league season next spring when he returns to the Texas Rangers for a fifth year, pulled up to the highway interchange in his pickup truck accompanied by his wife, Ruth.

"I am real proud," she said. "I'm just thrilled. Of course, we travel this road every day."

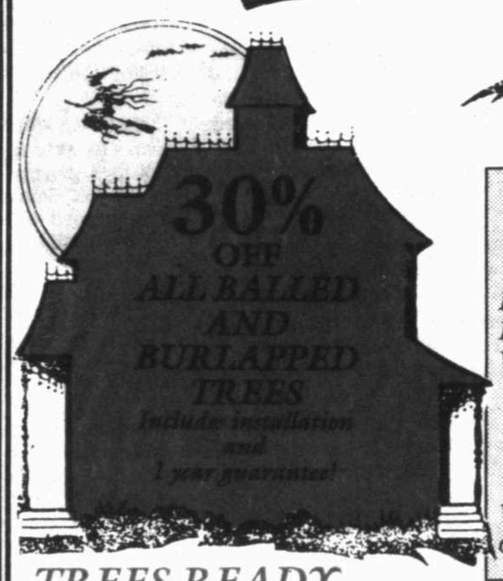

Local officials raised the nearly $5,000 to pay for the two signs. The second marker will be at the other end of the freeway at Freeport.

"This is a wonderful tribute to Nolan Ryan, not only for his baseball ability but also as a role model for young people," Jim Nitsch, deputy district engineer for the Texas Department of Highways and Transportation, said.

Some school officials fear state audit report

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials in some school districts say they fear an upcoming state audit report will be negatively slanted to justify lower education spending than they believe is necessary.

"I feel like this audit was set up with a preconceived agenda, with a preconceived purpose to try to make school districts look bad so the state could continue not paying their fair share of the cost of education," said superintendent David Sharp of the Gladewater Independent School District.

Gladewater ISD, west of Longview in Gregg County, was one of 50 districts audited in a state sampling this year.

"It seems to me that the state's setting us up ... I think everybody feels like the Legislature is trying to use this to avoid facing the funding issues," said Gene Burkett, executive director of finance for El Paso ISD.

Spokesmen for state leaders said there were no preconceptions.

"There would be no reason for us to do that, frankly," said Bill Cryer, Gov. Ann Richards' press secretary.

"Like any audit, it's to collect information and to see if there's any weaknesses in the system. There are no preconceived notions about what the audit's going to show," Cryer said.

John Bender, spokesmen for House Speaker Gib Lewis, said officials wanted "an independent and objective audit."

Rafe Greenlee, spokesman for Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, said auditors were told to look not only for things that needed fixing but good ideas that could be used by other school districts.

The auditor examined the sample of 50 of the state's 1,000-plus school districts, and a final report is expected to be released next month. The audit cost about $1.5 million, State Auditor Larry Alwin said Thursday.

Richards plans to bring lawmakers into special session after the Nov. 3 election to deal with school finance reform.

Early voting in Texas breaks records

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans are apparently in a hurry to tell politicians what they think of them.

Early voting records are falling across the state, and some officials Thursday predicted that one third of the Texas vote will be cast before Election Day.

"Early voting is picking up steam," said Dallas County Election Administrator Bruce Sherbet. "Eventually, I think we'll have 15 individual election days instead of one day."

The state's early voting period started Oct. 14 and ends today.

Through Wednesday, 778,383 people had cast ballots in person in the 15 most populated counties. That's 17 percent of the registered voters in those counties.

In Dallas, 141,341 in-person votes were cast. Neighboring Tarrant County had logged 100,524 votes as compared with 53,500 early votes in the 1988 presidential election, and 33,526 in the 1990 gubernatorial election.

"I think part of the reason for the increase is that people are becoming more aware of early voting, and of course, the interest in the election," said Gayle Hamilton, assistant elections administrator for Tarrant County.

More votes — 141,856 — have been cast in Bexar County than any other, according to the secretary of state's office. That figure, two days before the end of early voting, already surpassed the 140,768 votes cast in Bexar County in 1988.

In other political developments:

— Campaign finance reports show that in the first half of 1992, more than $500,000 was given to 60 legislative candidates who were unopposed in the primaries and face no challengers.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Concentrate on your strengths and you will be able to make great gains in every area of your life. A sense of humor proves to be a tremendous asset during the winter holidays. Take your relatives' demands in stride. Changing your schedule early in 1993 will help you make more efficient use of your time. A close relationship will be stronger than ever by spring. Love and laughter make next summer one that you will always remember.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Harry Hamlin and Henry Winkler, movie director Louis Malle, rock singer Grace Slick.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Distant business or financial affairs require careful handling. Invite someone special to lunch. Sharing secrets with this person could have a profound effect on your future.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The prospect of financial gain keeps you on your toes today. Be persistent. Coping with stress is easier than in the recent past. Try to exercise or take a walk every evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Once you have established a regular rhythm, you will be able to work a lot faster. Although you hold strong political views, trying to force them on others could prove counterproductive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Electrifying but pleasant news may put a bounce in your step this morning. A secret plan has every chance of succeeding. Take family members and VIPs into your confidence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your vitality returns. A daily workout would be good exercise. Someone needs your help or wants to bridge a gap. Be wary of getting involved with an overly aggressive person.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A friendship or romance is fragile now; hold it together with tenderness. Play second fiddle to your mate for a change. You need to think carefully before creating a long-term debt.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look forward to a day of discovery. Place no limits on where you will go or what you will do. A legal matter or creative endeavor turns out just great. Celebrate tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Curb a tendency to act moody or aloof this morning. You will need all the cooperation you can get to reach a business goal. An unexpected gift or invitation carries a special message.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Others may be temperamental today. Be careful to go through channels if you want a favor. You will need to make a special effort to create harmony at work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Something important is going on this morning. Hold meetings behind closed doors; any financial maneuvers must be kept confidential. Lessons learned in the past can be put to good use.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your diplomatic skills are tested by someone's demands. Complete a major work project, then take the time to reassure a loved one. Relax at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Why sign your name or put money on the line when there are no guarantees? What you see or hear is not necessarily what you will get. Keep in touch with your parents.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are intuitive, sincere and more loyal than anyone has the right to expect. They will choose their friends with care and do not need many to be happy. Respect these Scorpios' periodic need for solitude. Although they enjoy energetic recreational activities and love adventure, they also must have time alone to recharge their batteries. Many of these children will grow up to be writers or journalists.

Opening lead: Two of ◇

Sometimes there is little to choose between two lines of play. But there might be a psychological reason for preferring one over the other.

With a minimum responding hand to partner's one-heart opening bid, a popular trend, which we do not endorse, is to suppress a four-card spade suit, since there's no game in spades unless partner can reverse in that suit. That was the case here, and North jump raised to show a maximum no-trump response with four spades. Note that, with North declaring, game is child's play.

West got the defense off to an excellent start with the lead of a low diamond, covered by the queen and king and taken with the ace. The two lines of play were easy to spot. One was to cash the ace of spades, then finesse the jack. That would work whenever West held the queen guarded no more than twice, and offered chances even if trumps were 4-1. As the cards lie, that would have resulted in defeat—the defenders would collect three tricks in the minors and the queen of trumps.

The other approach would be to cash the ace and king of spades and go after hearts. That leaves little hope to recover if trumps are 4-1, but gets home on a 3-2 break if the queen of trumps drops, or if the player with three trumps also has three hearts. In the latter case, declarer will be able to discard two clubs from dummy before a defender ruffs, and the defense gets only one trick in each suit except hearts.

Obviously, the second line lands the contract on this distribution, but that is not why we would adopt it. We hate going down early in the play, and the alternative line at least delays our fate!

Done with pop, or maybe not, Sinead O'Connor eyes opera

LONDON — Sinead O'Connor, the Irish recording artist, social critic and photo-shredder, has been quoted by a British magazine as saying she is through with the pop music business.

O'Connor

She also was quoted by her publicist Wednesday as saying she was not.

Both agreed, however, that O'Connor has a new interest in studying opera.

"I want to expand my education, be able to express myself in a way I can't in this medium," she was quoted as saying in an interview with Melody Maker, a British music magazine.

But her publicist in New York, Elaine Schock, insisted that O'Connor "still wants to be part of music — writing songs, singing, making her own records."

"She does not want to be a part of the pop music industry, and the conventional means of promoting a record. But she never did that anyway," Schock said.

O'Connor transformed herself from a controversial pop singer to an object of derision in the United States by tearing up a picture of Pope John Paul II on the "Saturday Night Live" television show Oct. 3. She was booed when she appeared at a tribute to Bob Dylan in New York on Oct. 16.

O'Connor defended her actions by saying she wanted to draw attention to child abuse, which she blamed in part on teachings of the Roman Catholic Church. She has said repeatedly that she was abused as a child.

WHITING, Ind. — Although he's written the Country Music Association's song of the year, Don VonTress isn't ready to give up his day job hanging wallpaper.

Call it superstition.

"It's like a ball player who wears a favorite shirt on game day," said VonTress, who wrote "Achy Breaky Heart."

"I'm afraid if I quit, all this will end," he said Wednesday.

Billy Ray Cyrus rode the VonTress tune to fame and fortune, but VonTress won't begin getting royalties until February. He said he then may hang up his hanging job for a chain of nursing homes.

"All I ever wanted was to hear one of my songs played on the radio," VonTress said as he worked on the wallpaper of a Whiting nursing home.

"Having a song like this feels great."

It took VonTress about 90 minutes to compose the song, which sold 3 million singles and helped Cyrus sell 5 million albums. The song has been recorded in seven languages. Even the Chipmunks have recorded it.

"Once I started writing it went so quickly the song just fell out of the air. I just love the abstract factor. There's just no logic to music," said VonTress, an Indiana native who now lives in Nashville, Tenn.

DETROIT — Champion Chill Caramel Vanilla and Rim Rattlin' Blue Moon Twist are among eight new flavors of ice cream that will bear the name of basketball star Isiah Thomas.

"I love ice cream ... and I wanted to do something for the kids," he said.

The Detroit Pistons captain already has a candy bar named after him.

The new Stroh's ice cream, announced Tuesday, will be marketed as "Isiah's favorite flavors." They will arrive in stores by mid-November. All eight will have basketball theme names.

Thomas said he's considering giving some of his ice cream proceeds to Detroit public schools.

"I would really like to do something for education, because that's where our future lies," he said.

LONDON — Socialite Claus von Bulow on Thursday settled his libel lawsuit against the publishers of a book that included his attempted-murder case.

Von Bulow was convicted in Rhode Island in 1982 of trying to kill his heiress wife, Martha "Sunny" Von Bulow, but the verdict was overturned on appeal. He was retried in 1985 and found innocent of two counts of attempted murder.

Mrs. von Bulow has been in an irreversible coma since 1980.

The amount of the settlement wasn't disclosed at Thursday's High Court hearing. Von Bulow didn't attend.

Ruth Edwards, solicitor for Xanadu Publications Ltd., said at the hearing the company acknowleged the von Bulow case shouldn't have been included in "The Book of Murder."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Doug Stone gave $1,000 for a new concert stage in a Kentucky town where a 15-year-old was killed in a car accident returning from a concert.

Stone donated the money last week in memory of Billy Cassady of Fallsburg, Ky. The boy died Oct. 4 returning from a concert by Stone, McBride & the Ride, Great Plains and others.

McBride & the Ride and Great Plains sent personal messages and autographed merchandise to the Cassady family.

The stage was completed last weekend at a community center and cost $1,600.

Ryan Expressway

ALVIN — The Alvin Express got an expressway named after him Thursday.

Hometown boy Nolan Ryan, Texas' most famous baseball player, climbed into a cherry picker that took him to the top of a big green highway sign, peeled off the black plastic wrapping and formally made Texas Highway 288 in Brazoria County south of Houston the "Nolan Ryan Expressway."

Ryan

"It is indeed an honor," said Ryan, who holds major-league records with seven no-hitters and 5,668 strikeouts in a career that began in 1966. "It is going to be exciting to drive down 288 and see this sign."

The four-lane freeway to carry Ryan's name stretches for about 30 miles from the Harris-Brazoria county line to Freeport.

Reds Manager

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds interviewed former player Ken Griffey for their managerial opening Thursday, leaving them with a field of seven candidates to replace Lou Piniella.

Griffey, 42, met with general manager Jim Bowden and other club officials for nearly two hours.

Three former Reds players are in the running: Griffey, minor-league instructor Ron Oester and major-league batting coach Tony Perez.

The Reds also have interviewed minor-league manager Dave Miley (who played in their farm system), former Pittsburgh minor-league manager Marc Bombard, former Texas manager Bobby Valentine and former New York Mets manager Davey Johnson.

MHS hosts No. 1 offense

Bulldogs take on San Angelo

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

San Angelo's Bobcats, giddy over nailing down a third consecutive Class 5A state football playoff berth, bring the state's No. 1 ranked offensive show to Memorial Stadium at 8 p.m. today against Midland High's winless Bulldogs.

The Bobcats are 5-3 on the season, but 3-1 in District 4-5A play, and still feel like they have something to prove. Wins in their last two games would mean at least a share of the district championship.

But regardless of tonight's outcome, San Angelo's playoff future is set in stone. The Bobcats will go back to the 5A Big School division in the playoffs, meeting either Lubbock Coronado (a team San Angelo has already beaten this year) or Amarillo Tascosa. Those two teams meet this weekend. Tascosa is in with a victory over Coronado. Coronado must win its last two games to insure a playoff trip.

"We are real pleased with where our team is right now," Dan Gandy, head coach at San Angelo, said. "It's our third straight trip to the playoffs and we're proud of that. But we have a few more matters to concern ourselves with these next two weeks."

Meanwhile, MHS is fighting to end a 17-game losing streak, stretching back through an 0-9 campaign last year. This is a tough rut in the road to bypass if that losing streak is to end tonight. First year Bulldog coach Ronnie Reeger realizes it is a challenge.

"San Angelo is a pretty good football team," Reeger said. "They have a quarterback, who is healthy as he has been all year, and he throws well and makes good decisions. They have a good running back, a ton of receivers, a big offensive line and they have the No. 1 offense in the state.

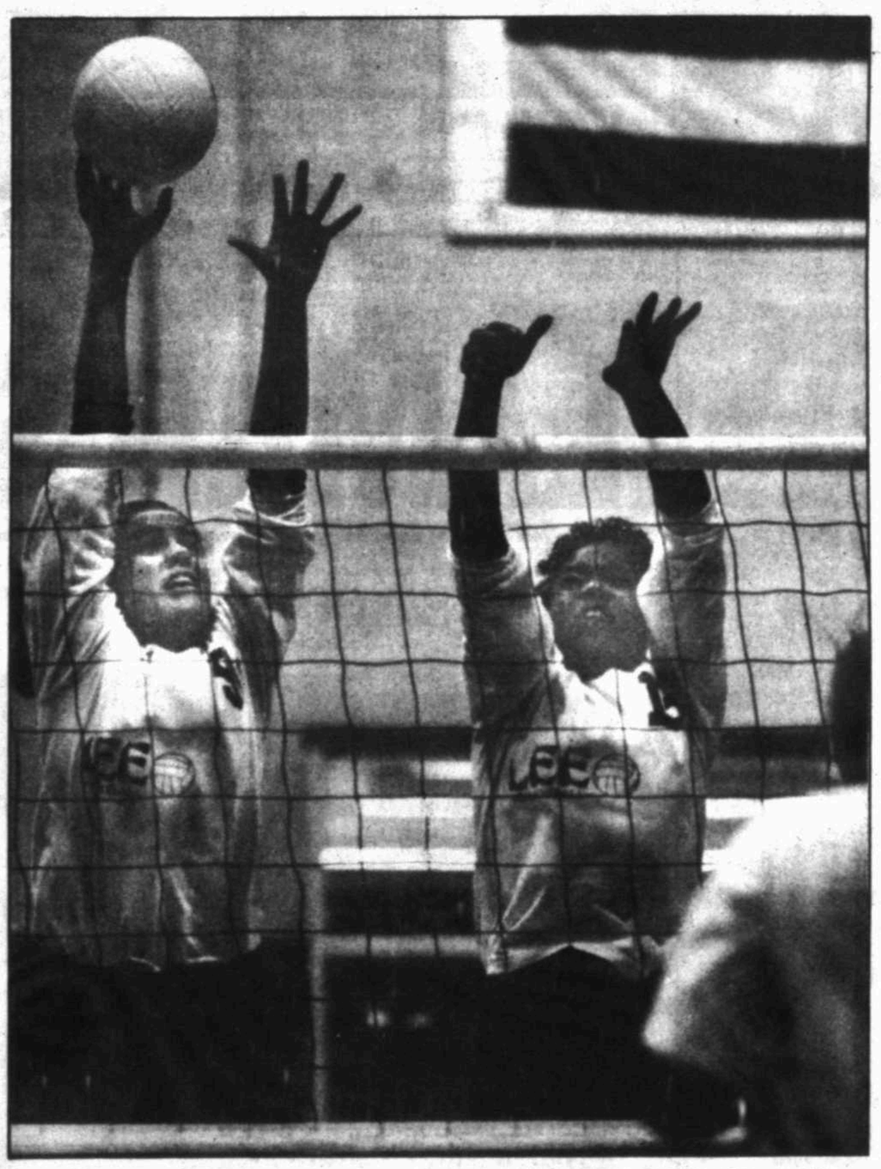

"In addition, they are playing better defense now than they have all year. If you can find a major weakness, I would like to see it. Maybe, we can pray for rain."

The Bobcats are averaging 462 yards per game and 35.5 points per game. Quarterback Ben Montgomery leads District 4-5A in total offense by accounting for 2,499 yards this year, an average of 312.4 yards per game alone. He has rushed for 682 yards and six touchdowns and passed for 1,817 yards and 21 more scores. Midland High has scored just nine touchdowns all year.

Montgomery's production is 1,238 yards more than Midland High's offensive output this year. But in addition to Victory sends Lee spikers to playoffs

Thirteen. It's the number that Midland Lee's volleyball team hoped would be lucky.

"When we started two-a-days I said we were going to work hard and try to be playing in the 13th week," said Lee coach Anita Corder.

You see, Week 13 is the first round of the playoffs, and after Lee defeated Abilene Cooper 16-14, 15-11 Thursday night at the Lee gymnasium, the Lady Rebels had clinched their first playoff spot in more than two decades.

Lee avoided ending the regular season in a tie with Midland High, and the District 4-5A playoff that would have accompanied it, when MHS was defeated at Abilene High Thursday, 4-15, 15-5, 15-7. In other 4-5A action Thursday, San Angelo downed Odessa Permian 12-15, 15-5, 15-12, and Odessa High was idle.

For Lee, which hasn't seen the volleyball postseason since the early 1970s, the clincher Thursday over second-place Cooper ended a tumultuous regular-season campaign that saw the Lady Rebels open 4-5A play with a 1-3 record.

The Lady Rebs, however, lost only two more matches and now close the regular season with a record of 20-8 and 7-5 in district.

"We knew all along that we had to stay together for each other and we would still have a shot at taking one of the top three spots. This as good as it gets," said Lee senior Tanisha Mills.

"We played with a lot of intensity, like we did against Abilene High (AHS' only 4-5A loss). We came out here again with a 'never say die' attitude," said setter Courtney McHugh.

With the Lady Cougars (24-6, 9-3) already in the playoffs and Lee battling for its postseason life, the Lady Rebels came out and stunned Cooper by jumping ahead to a 7-2 lead in the first game. After Cooper scored five straight points to tie the score at 7-7 it appeared that Lee had lost its opening momentum.

Lee must wait for playoff opponent

Staff report

Midland Leè must wait until Saturday to find out who it will play in its Class 5A bi-district volleyball match.

The Lady Rebels, who finished in third place in the District 4-5A standings, will play the second-place team from District 3-5A. Amarillo High (26-3 overall, 9-1 in 3-5A) and Amarillo Tascosa (24-6 and 9-1) are in a first-place tie and will face off in a district playoff at 11 a.m. Saturday in the Amarillo Caprock Activities Center.

Lee faces the loser of that match. Abilene Cooper, the 4-5A runner-up with a record of 24-6 and 9-3, takes on 3-5A third-place finisher Lubbock Coronado (21-7, 6-4) at a site and time yet to be determined. Abilene High, the 4-5A champion, and the Amarillo-Tascosa winner will have first-round byes.

Little on line for Permian-Cooper fight

With three teams from each Class 5A district entering the state football playoffs, district championships don't count for much anymore.

Williamson

However, Odessa Permian and Abilene Cooper meet at Odessa's Ratliff Stadium tonight with the winner owning at least a share of the district title. What takes away from the game is the fact that the loser suffers very little since both teams have already clinched a state playoff berth.

Still, those who watch District 4-5A closely want to see what kind of effort Cooper can give in a "highlight" contest. Cooper hasn't been in the state playoffs since 1979 when they lost in bi-district in the days of Terry Orr.

Permian will face San Angelo next week. The Bobcats have been on the rise of late and have playoff experience and "pressure" games under the belt much more so than Cooper.

But the fact remains that Permian is hard to beat, any time or any place. According to Tim McGraw, our unofficial 4-5A historian, Permian owns a 163-32-3 (.831) record in district games alone. Overall, playoffs included, Permian is 344-62-10 (.839). No team has won as many as 10 games against Permian although Midland Lee and San Angelo each have nine victories over the Black Cat.

Oh yes, our coaching visitor, Duane Teska, from Colby, Wisconsin, who flew down to view the Lee-Permian rivalry first hand last week, said, "It was everything I expected.

"All the pageantry and excitement that we expected was there. The bands and school organizations put on a great show for high school," Teska said, "but the quality of play by those two teams were even beyond our expectations. Both teams came to play."

We turn to this week's games after a sad, but perfect, picking week. Standing 32-8 (.800), here is how it will turn out this week.

San Angelo 42, Midland High 14: The Bobkitties fly into town owning the district's longest current playoff streak (three). San Angelo owns a 19-11-1 record against MHS since 1961.

Odessa Permian 28, Abilene Cooper 15: Permian owns Cooper, leading the series by a whopping 26-5 margin. The Cougars have had the luck of catching both San Angelo and Permian after emotional games against Lee. Permian, however, usually doesn't linger on last week very long as you can tell by the record.

Odessa High 34, Abilene High 7: The Broncs have been hard to figure out this year, but this is the season ender for OHS. They already have the "Wait Until Next Year" signs out. Abilene High, leading this series since 1961 by a meager 16-15 margin, is waiting until next week when they face Midland High in the biggest game of the year for both teams.

Midland Lee 45, Dallas Jesuit 14 (Saturday): It's time for the Rebels to have some fun. Lee is out of the playoffs for the first time in a decade, so they need to make the last two count for a solid 7-3 record.

Winfield lands on AP's all-star baseball team at 41

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dave Winfield, the hero of Toronto's World Series victory against Atlanta, joined teammate Roberto Alomar on the 1992 Associated Press all-star team announced Thursday.

Winfield, 41, led all designated hitters with 134 votes in the nationwide balloting of sports writers and broadcasters.

In the decisive sixth game of the Series, Winfield hit a two-run double in the top of the 11th inning as the Blue Jays beat the Braves 4-3. During the season, Winfield hit .290 with 26 homers and 108 RBIs.

Winfield was the oldest player in major league history to drive in 100 or more runs, and the oldest to hit a home run during the postseason.

"I've had some great years in my career but nothing will ever top this," Winfield said. "This is the best team I've ever been associated with."

Oakland's Mark McGwire, who hit 42 home runs, one less than major league leader Juan Gonzalez of Texas, was elected at first base and joined in the infield by Alomar at second base, Cincinnati's Barry Larkin at shortstop and San Diego's Gary Sheffield at third base. Sheffield surprised everyone by hitting .330 with 33 homers and 100 RBIs after being acquired by the Padres during spring training from Milwaukee.

The AP starting outfield has Pittsburgh's Barry Bonds and Andy Van Slyke, and Minnesota's Kirby Puckett. Bonds, the leading candidate for the National League MVP award, hit .311 with 34 homers and 103 RBIs.

Both Bonds and Puckett have filed for free agency and are expected to negotiate contracts for $6 million a year or more.

Philadelphia's Darren Daulton, who hit 27 homers with 109 RBIs, was a landslide winner at catcher. Daulton received 176 votes compared to 12 for Minnesota's Brian Harper.

With 207 votes, Atlanta's Tom Glavine was selected the left-handed starting pitcher and Greg Maddux (115 votes) was elected the right-handed starter. Glavine finished 20-8 with a 2.76 ERA, while Maddux came on strong in the second half for the Chicago Cubs and finished the season 20-11 with a 2.18 ERA.

BULLDOGS: Bobcats average 462 yards on offense

(From 1D)

Montgomery, Bobcat running back Bennie Jones is the third leading rusher in the league with 711 yards. Receiver Ryan King leads the league in receptions and receiving yardage with 40 catches for 753 yards and nine touchdowns. Teammate Benny Dupre has 22 catches for 434 yards and four touchdowns, ranking second in the league.

"We felt Ben (Montgomery) could be this kind of quarterback, but he hadn't done it on the playing field. We were concerned about his experience level," Gandy said. "But the main reason we have more yards this year is because our inside game has been much better with Bennie Jones. That's made a big difference in our team.

"In the playoffs last year, we were down to about our fifth running back and (Shea) Morenz had to do it all. Even then, he did a pretty good job of it. We got to the semifinals."

Reeger says, "San Angelo has enough things going to spread you all over the field and it's extremely hard to get a rush on them. We will have to play hard to just stay in the game. We have to play great defense and we have to establish a rushing game and keep the ball away from them as much as possible."

Gandy is aware of Midland High's losing streak, but he remains concerned about the meeting with Bulldogs.

"I never know how kids are going to react. We found out last Friday night that we were in the playoffs, but we've got to make sure we show up this week," Gandy said. "You never know what might happen. Midland could jump out early and get a couple of scores if you're standing around looking at what's happening.

"Midland got my attention last week. They scored 21 points. In the first game of the season, they played great against El Paso Irvin and they are ranked in the Top 10 in the state."

Midland High quarterback Johnny Parades is becoming more consistent and has thrown the ball well as of late. He doesn't match the numbers of Montgomery, but he has thrown for over 600 yards this year and threw his first touchdown pass last week against Odessa High.

The MHS running game has not been productive, but injuries and defections have hurt as the Bulldogs have reached deep into the talent pool while using 11 running backs this season.

Roy Coats now leads the attack with 151 yards on 57 carries. Michael Gilbert has 139 yards and those are the only two backs over 100 yards this year.

Receivers Roy Ratliff, Kris Lundberg, Gilbert and Greg O'Neal all have over 100 yards in receptions, giving MHS its most varied attack.

SAN ANGELO — Gerald Washington scored three touchdowns and ran for more than 100 yards here Thursday, as Midland High downed San Angelo 38-0 in junior varsity football play.

Washington scored on runs of 80 and one yards, then hauled in a 10-yard pass from Craig Coleman. Coleman also connected on a 50-yarder to Michael Ramirez. Other MHS TDs were scored by Chris Clayton on a 25-yard return of a blocked punt and a six-yard run by Dale Smith. Rusty Miller added two extra-point kicks.

MHS (4-3) finishes its season next Thursday when it plays at San Angelo.

LEE: Lady Rebels enter playoffs with 20-8 mark

(From 1D)

Though junior Heather Huff served up an ace — one of three she had in the match — to stem the tide and temporarily regain the lead for the Lady Rebs, Cooper scored three straight to go in front 10-8.

The Lady Cougars held that lead until the score reached game point at 14-10, Cooper. Then Tera Mander spiked the ball home for a Lee sideout and, with McHugh at the service stripe, the Lady Rebels somehow managed to tie the score.

Cooper returned McHugh's first serve long, then the Rebel senior scored an ace. A net violation called on Tamika Wigfall gave Lee another point, then the game was tied again at 14-14 when Whitney Reaugh's return went long.

The Lady Rebs then took the lead as Huff killed a McHugh set. After the team's traded sideouts Missy Cole sent the Cooper return beyond the baseline for the Lee win.

Game 2 saw the Rebs build another big lead at 9-2, only to see it melt into an 11-11 tie. But Lee only needed one more sideout, as the Lady Rebels finished the game and the match with four unanswered points.

"Being that they were in second place we knew we had to be out there going strong," senior Carrie Zamora said of Lee's early leads. "We didn't want to have any big heads like we did against Permian (in Lee's last loss). But we were confident."

"It's been a long time. We're due," Corder said of making the playoffs in her second season at Lee. "I told the girls in pre-game tonight I thought we were blessed. We suffered through every kind of trial and tribulation. But for this team to come back this way ... they've all been dedicated and committed."

Robinson leads Spurs over Pacers

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — David Robinson scored 24 points and Lloyd Daniels added 21 as the San Antonio Spurs cruised to a 136-111 victory over the Indiana Pacers on Thursday night.

Vinny Del Negro had 18 for the Spurs, who won their third-consecutive exhibition game to improve to 4-2.

Detlef Schrempf had 24 points to lead Indiana, while Reggie Miller scored 18.

San Antonio opened up a 20-point lead in the first quarter and were ahead 70-52 at the half.

David Robinson increased the lead to 78-54 with three baskets early in the third quarter.

San Antonio's lead grew to 33 late in the game as seven Spurs scored in double figures. As a team, the Spurs shot 58 percent from the field.

The teams attempted 109 free throws combined in the foul-plagued game. Robinson attempted 13 free throws, including two after Miller committed a flagrant foul in the third quarter.

Pinehurst baffles golf's best players at Tour Championship

Associated Press

PINEHURST, N.C. — While Davis Love III escaped, Pinehurst picked the pockets of golf's other millionaires Thursday in the first round of the season-ending Tour Championship.

Not only did the famed old No. 2 course in the Carolina sandhills send Nick Price and John Cook plummeting to the bottom of the elite field, it so confused Fred Couples that he resorted to cross-handed desperation putting.

It didn't help.

And that does not mean that the four $1 million winners were alone in their misadventures through dunes, pines and autumn-flaming trees.

There was Tom Kite, the U.S. Open champion needing a victory in this $2 million event to have a shot at Player of the Year honors, slashing and thrashing his way to a 73 and topping only four men in the field of the 30 leading money-winners.

Or take Paul Azinger, needing a win in this one to extend a string of at least one victory in five consecutive seasons.

He managed a 70, 1 under par but remarkable in that he birdied two of the last three holes — while putting with his wedge. He bent his putter with a sharp rap to the ground after missing a short putt on the 11th.

Love, one of the four millionaires vying for most of the game's season-long honors, hung on for a share of the lead at 68, 3 under par, despite a three-putt bogey on the final hole.

Colt hospitalized

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indianapolis Colts defensive end Steve Emtman was hospitalized Thursday for an infected right elbow but should be healthy for Sunday's game at San Diego, Colts spokesman Rod St. Clair said.

Emtman, who returned an interception 90 yards for a touchdown on the final play of last Sunday's game against the Miami Dolphins, should practice Friday, St. Clair said.

"He had a turf injury on his elbow that occurred on a sack two or three weeks ago that never had a chance to heal," St. Clair said. "We expect him to be back tomorrow."

St. Clair said the infection was not serious.

"It's been with him a few weeks, but it just flared up today," he said.

Also Thursday, the Colts activated defensive back Ashley Ambrose, about two months after the rookie injured his ankle.

Prices plunge

NEW YORK — Heating oil prices led the energy market lower Thursday amid growing doubts that winter supplies of crude and refined products would tighten.

West Texas Intermediate for December delivery settled at $20.71 per barrel, down 41 cents.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian lowered their posted price 50 cents to $19.25.

"The crude market has gone from perceptions of tightness in supplies to a surplus," said Andrew Lebow, senior broker and energy analyst at E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc.

For months, many had expected shorter supplies of crude in the final three months of the year, but supply has held up through October, Lebow said.

"The market's reacting to the facts," he said.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery in December settling at $2.308 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 5.3 cents.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in December settled at $18.51 per barrel, down 41 cents.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar ended mixed in foreign exchange Thursday after trading in a narrow range due to a lack of market-affecting news.

In New York, the dollar fetched 1.5375 marks, down from 1.5455 marks.

In New York, the dollar was quoted at 123.28 yen, up from 123.18 yen.

In New York, one pound cost $1.5730, cheaper than $1.5735 the day before.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday's rates, included: 1.3735 Swiss francs, down from 1.3745; 5.2140 French francs, down from 5.2470; 1,313.75 Italian lire, down from 1,331.00; and 1.23875 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2378.

Stocks slip

NEW YORK — Stock prices zigzagged through a mixed session Thursday as traders looked ahead cautiously to next week's election.

Several individual stocks declined sharply on earnings news that disappointed investors.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 5.13 points to 3,246.27.

Advancing issues outnumbered those declining by about 5 to 4 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said traders were keeping a close watch on developments in the election campaign.

Jobless claims hold below 400,000

■ Report comes as welcome news for Bush administration, with its handling of the economy on the line.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Despite the first rise in a month, the number of new claims for jobless benefits in mid-October held below 400,000 for the fourth straight week, the government said Thursday.

Some analysts believe the unemployment rate may fall if claims stay below 400,000. The rate was 7.5 percent in September.

At the same time, the closely watched four-week moving average of claims posted its best showing in more than two years.

"I think it's a ray of hope that the labor market may be showing signs of improvement in October," said economist Stephen S. Roach of Morgan Stanley & Co. in New York.

The report also was welcome news for the Bush administration, with its handling of the economy on the line in an Election Day just five days away.

"Today's initial unemployment claims report continues a trend pointing to an improved labor market," said Labor Secretary Lynn Martin. "Claims declined by more than 1,000 in 15 states and increased by more than 1,000 in only one state. All of this indicates a stronger labor market."

The Labor Department said first-time applications for unemployment insurance rose 8,000 to 375,000 for the week ended Oct. 17.

Marilyn Schaja, an economist with Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. in New York, noted that although claims rose slightly, there were fewer layoffs across a broad range of industries.

The four-week moving average, which tends to smooth out the often volatile weekly fluctuations and is considered a more reliable indicator of the labor situation, was 381,000 in the period ended Oct. 17.

That was down from 393,250 a week earlier and the lowest since the average also stood at 381,000 in the four weeks ended Sept. 8, 1990.

Roach said the trend of the last four weeks suggests the October unemployment report, to be released Nov. 6, "may not be as ugly" as recent ones.

Although the jobless rate has fallen from 7.8 percent in July, the number of jobs declined by 140,000 in August and September. Analysts had said the falling rate represented discouraged workers dropping out of the labor market, not an improved labor environment.

Still, analysts suggested caution in interpreting the report.

Roach said the number of claims could have been held down in the latest week by the Columbus Day holiday, which reduced the number of days for filing applications to four.

Schaja also noted that the numbers are being held down by claimants using a special, emergency unemployment program not included in the overall total.

Fifty-two states and territories and the District of Columbia reported 21,418 new claims under the emergency program in the week ended Oct. 17, down slightly from 21,451 the previous week. The emergency program numbers, unlike the national figures, are not seasonally adjusted.

Seven states and territories reported increases in regular weekly claims, while 45 registered declines. The number was unchanged in the Virgin Islands.

The largest increases were in Delaware, 1,714; Oregon, 967; Washington, 638; Wisconsin, 474, and Missouri, 199. The Delaware increase was attributed to layoffs in the automobile industry. There was no explanation for the other states.

The largest decreases were in California, 6,163; Pennsylvania, 4,636; New York, 4,349; Michigan, 3,234, and New Jersey, 2,681.

California and New York said their decreases were due mainly to the holiday.

Pennsylvania attributed its decline to fewer layoffs in the primary metals, apparel, trade and service industries and in manufacturing. Michigan had fewer layoffs in the automobile industry, while Florida said it had fewer in the construction, trade and service industries and in manufacturing.

The national figures are adjusted for seasonal variations, but the individual state figures are not.

Oil companies eye election's market effect

By David Ivanovich and Anne Pearson
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Houston energy firms are having a tough time raising cash through stock and bond offerings, as investors steer clear of initial public offerings and wring their hands over the possibility of rising inflation rates if Bill Clinton is elected president.

Phillips Petroleum Co., for example, dumped plans Wednesday to spin off Phillips Gas Co., a Houston-based natural gas and gas liquids business with annual operating revenues of more than $1 billion.

Phillips officials had hoped to raise more than $400 million by issuing 18 million shares of stock, representing 51 percent of the gas company, in an initial public offering.

The company hoped to use that money to help pay down $4.2 billion worth of debt.

But the market wouldn't go for it. So instead, Phillips officials have decided to issue 8 million shares of new preferred stock from the parent company, a move they expect will raise about $200 million.

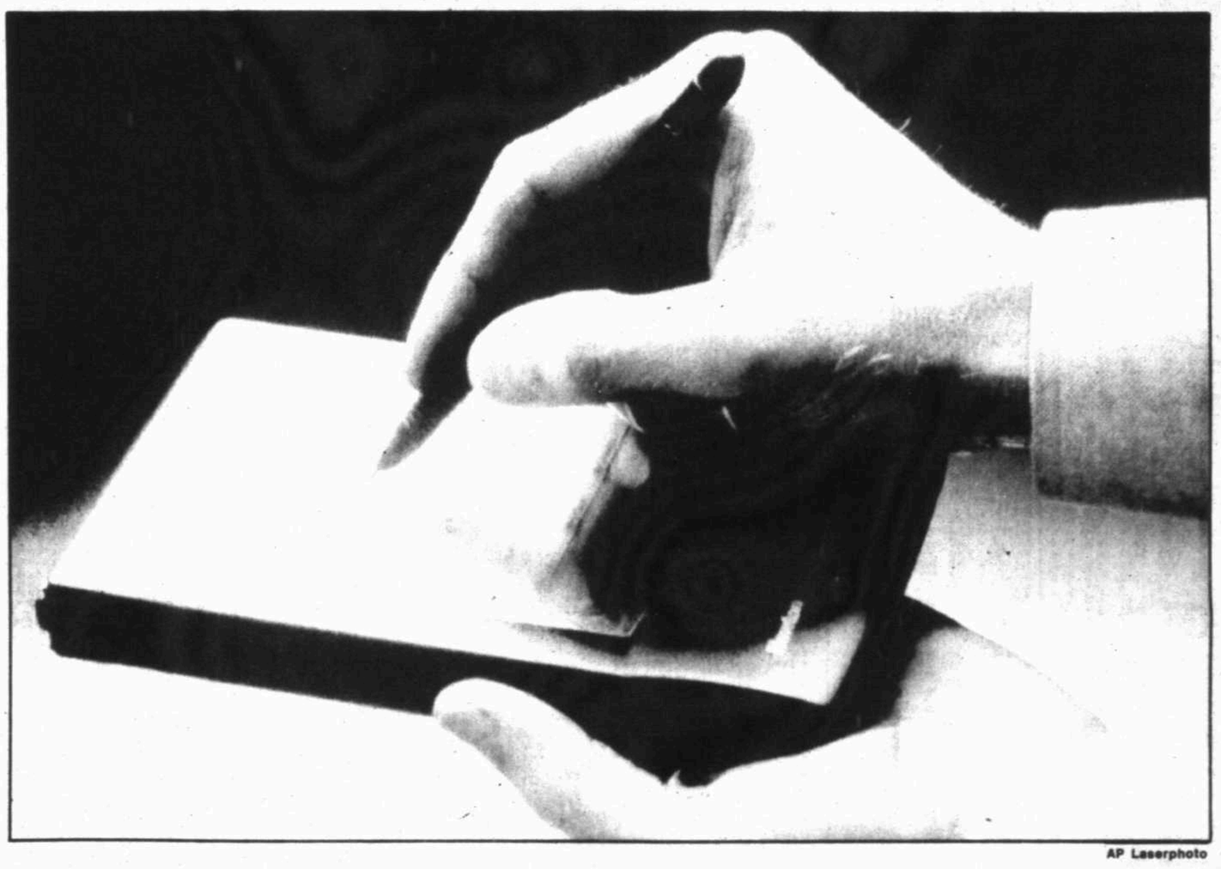

And Phillips Gas — instead of becoming a separately traded entity — will remain part of Phillips Petroleum.

"The way the (initial public offering) market is, we don't see the opportunity to get the value of the company from making an offering of the stock," said Phillips spokesman George Minter. "This, for us, is a better way to go."

Phillips isn't the first company to fail with an initial public offering.

Throughout the third quarter, investors — worried about the economy and uncertain about the future — shied away from such offerings. According to a study by Houston's Sommers & Associates, offerings by non-financial companies dropped by 58 percent during the third quarter, the lowest level since early 1991.

Interestingly, existing natural-gas stocks currently are doing well, thanks to higher natural-gas prices.

GM's third-quarter loss totals $752.9 million

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. reported a third-quarter loss of $752.9 million today, nearly $100 million less than it had warned shareholders it might lose.

The leading automaker, whose chief resigned earlier this week amid criticism over the company's continuing red ink, lost $1.06 billion in the third quarter last year. Earlier this month, it had estimated its losses for third quarter 1992 would total $845 million.

The loss, blamed almost exclusively on the slugglish recovery in North American auto sales, was 28.7 percent less than last year. On a per-share basis, it worked out to $1.37 vs. $1.88.

North American factory unit sales were down 9.4 percent from 1,027,000 to 930,000.

GM dealers in the United States sold 1,106,000 cars in the third period, 3.2 percent below last year. Production in the quarter was hampered by a nine-day local United Auto Workers strike that cost 45,000 units of production, including several thousand of GM's hot-selling Saturn small cars.

"Sales at the more profitable retail level, however, continued to increase in relation to fleet sales in the third quarter," outgoing Chairman Robert Stempel and President John F. Smith Jr. said in a statement.

Total GM revenues, including its financing, computer services and electronics subsidiaries, were $29.4 billion, up from $28.9 billion in last year's third quarter.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Prisoner seeks information on investments

By Bill Doyle

Q: Can you give me information about penny stocks or any kind of plan that allows a person with limited funds to invest in a stock program or something similar, instead of a savings account?

Doyle

Let me explain my situation. I am serving time in a federal prison and will not be released until the year 2001. I figure that by putting $100 a month in some type of stock, I will see a better return than in a savings account.

There are several of us here interested in some type of investing program. Maybe you can steer us toward a reliable broker.

A: This column never directs people toward particular brokers. A big portion of reader mail contains gripes — real and imagined — about the brokerage fraternity. Over the years, readers have complained about just about every brokerage house.

Forget about penny stocks, which are defined as those trading below $5 per share. (That's inflation for you. The cut-off used to be $1 per share.) There has been a tremendous amount of fraud in penny stocks. Even when everything is on the up and up, penny stocks generally are far more risky than higher-priced issues.

Instead, consider mutual funds in which you can buy shares.

A mutual fund uses the money received from investors to purchase many different securities, thereby providing diversification and professional management.

If you have been reading this column, you know it prefers true no-load funds — those with no commission load when you buy, no redemption fee or contingent deferred sales charge when you cash in and no constant 12(b)1 distribution charge.

Send $3 to the 100 Percent No-Load Mutual Fund Council, 1501 Broadway, Suite 1809, New York, NY 10036. You'll receive a 60-page booklet containing a list of the organization's true no-load fund members and information about mutual fund investing. Allow eight weeks for delivery.

After reading the booklet, send for a prospectus of each in which you might want to invest. Then, study each prospectus carefully before you pick a particular fund.

With nine years to go before prison gates close behind you, it probably would be wise to choose a mutual fund investing in common stock. While common stock funds have reasonably high risk, they have produced good investment results over the long term.

Q: Back in 1986, a "financial adviser" who was supposed to be a friend talked me into putting my annual individual retirement account contributions into a mutual fund. I had no idea I had to pay 5 percent to let her and her mutual fund company handle it.

Two years later, she talked me into investing $15,634 from maturing certificates of deposit in the same fund. I still didn't realize 5 percent was coming off the top. When I found out about that charge and asked the adviser about it, her reaction was that I was supposed to know about the up-front fee.

I invested $21,809. My most recent statements show the value of my accounts total $23,590. That includes reinvested dividends but does not take into account $2,933 in dividends I took by check and the withdrawals I have made from the IRA after turning 71.

Should I transfer the IRA to a true no-load mutual fund I have been watching? It seems to do much better than my present fund.

A: That would be my recommendation. Along with many no-load funds, the one you named in your letter has turned in better investment performance than the one you have sweated out for six years.

That adviser, who seems to be simply a saleswoman with a fancy title, is correct on one point. You would have known about the 5 percent commission load on mutual funds she peddles, if you had simply read the fund's prospectus.

She was required to give you a copy of the prospectus at or before the time she made her first sales effort. Also, because you are reinvesting dividends, the fund sends you an updated prospectus annually.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.
2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide; or by calling your local stock broker.
3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.
4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.
5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

PUT YOUR MONEY ON A SURE THING...

THIS WINNING NUMBER.

Putting your money on the United Way of Midland places you in the winner's circle. You'll come up with a winning number every time.

Your number will include the children who can join a scout troop or Camp Fire or who can get a Big Brother or Sister. Add to that the youngsters and women who are given shelter and counceling in their escape from an abusive situation. Don't forget the numbers of elderly people who will receive hot meals and friendship because you picked the United Way of Midland on your ticket.

For every dollar you give to United Way of Midland, 99 cents stays in Midland to help these winning numbers. With out your help, everyone loses.

Scientists find first poisonous bird

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists have discovered that an orange-and-black jungle songbird named the New Guinea pitohui contains one of nature's most powerful toxins and is the world's only known poisonous fowl.

John Dumbacher, a doctoral candidate at the University of Chicago, said he accidentally discovered that the pitohui (pronounced PIT-a-hooey) was poisonous when several of the songbirds became snared in nets rigged in the jungle to catch another type of bird.

"We were trying to catch the bird of paradise, but we caught a lot of these birds as well," Dumbacher said in an interview. "We were trying to release them as quickly as possible, but they were able to cut our hands with their sharp beaks and claws."

The researcher said he licked his wounds and noticed that his mouth immediately began to tingle and then go numb.

Later, he and other researchers caught more pitohui and put feathers from the birds on their tongues. There was an immediate reaction. As they report in a study to be published on Friday in the journal Science: "The toxin caused numbness, burning and sneezing on contact. ..."

New Guinea natives have long avoided the blue jay-sized pitohui, although they will eat other birds captured in the jungle, Dumbacher said.

"The local people say, 'You can't eat that bird. It's a rubbish bird ... It's good for nothing,'" Dumbacher said.

But researchers had not realized before that they avoided the bird because of its poison.

Dumbacher and researchers at the Smithsonian Institution and the National Institutes of Health collected samples of several species of pitohui and analyzed them for toxins.

They report that the feathers, skin and flesh of the birds contain a poison called homobatrachotoxin. Only one other creature is known to produce this toxin naturally, said Dumbacher, and that is the so-called poison-dart frog of South America. The frog acquired its name because natives use slime from its skin to poison arrows.

"This is one of the most toxic natural substances known," said Dumbacher.

To test the toxicity of the poison, samples were extracted from the captured pitohui specimens and then injected into laboratory mice.

Extracts from the skin, feathers and muscle of the hooded pitohui caused the mice to convulse and die within minutes. Two other types of pitohui, the variable and the rusty, also were poisonous, but less so, Dumbacher said.

"There is enough in the hooded pitohui skin alone to kill quite a few mice," he said. "If you delivered it to a human, I suspect there is enough toxin in one bird to do some serious damage."

Bush signs bill banning most sports betting

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush has signed legislation that bans sports wagering in most states while giving New Jersey voters until Jan. 1, 1994, to decide whether to permit the practice in Atlantic City casinos.

The bill Bush signed Wednesday would exempt Nevada, Delaware and Oregon from the ban on college and professional sports wagering. Nevada already has sports betting, Oregon has a sports lottery and Delaware voters approved sports betting in a 1976 referendum.

Sports wagering is favored by Atlantic City's gaming hall operators, who want a chance to compete with Las Vegas casinos.

The legislation with a window for New Jersey was championed by two of the state's Democratic congressmen, William Hughes and Robert G. Torricelli, who said it would generate needed revenues. Hughes' district includes Atlantic City.

The bill was opposed by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., a former New York Knicks basketball player, who said it would encourage point-shaving and other abuses. Bradley said he could accept the limited exemptions, although he wanted a ban in all states.

To legalize sports betting in New Jersey, the state must amend its constitution. That can only happen if the Legislature passes a resolution that is in turn approved by the voters. The Legislature would then craft enabling legislation, which would require the governor's signature.

The 1994 deadline will allow New Jersey time to put the issue to voters in November 1993.

Pacemaker bill may top $50 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government could be stuck paying more than $50 million for operations to replace heart pacemakers that may have faulty wiring, a congressional report says.

Some 103,400 patients received Medtronic Inc. pacemakers that had been recalled or had safety alerts placed on them, said a report by the General Accounting Office. More than 7,000 of them can expect that wires, or leads, on the devices will fail.

"We estimate that the minimum potential cost to the federal government through the Medicare program for additional medical services required by the possibly defective leads ... is between $50 million and $56 million," said the report by the GAO, an investigative arm of Congress.

"Our analysis shows that the health risks associated with defective pacemaker leads are real; indeed their failure could prove fatal," the GAO report said.

At Medtronic headquarters in Fridley, Minn., company spokesman Dick Reid called the $50 million "grossly overstated. It seems to overlook the fact that most pacemaker patients are continually monitored by their physicians.

"Any complications are detectable during that monitoring session, usually far enough in advance that if there is a problem with a pacemaker lead, it can be replaced at the same time as the pacemaker when its battery expires," Reid said.

Last summer the FDA ordered companies making or importing pacemakers with implanted leads to begin studies of the devices' long-term performance.

That order covered 15 companies, including Medtronic, of Minneapolis.

The leads are insulated wires that connect the pacemaker to the heart, and the GAO report said in some of them the insulation breaks, allowing body fluids to seep in and short circuit the device.

The Medtronic leads in question are no longer on the market, Marc Schneison, associate FDA commissioner for legislative affairs, said Thursday.

Americans have pervasive doubts about future

By Jill Lawrence
Associated Press writer

Allie Turner lives in a small town with big-city problems. Two women murdered in the past two weeks; 20 jobless men within three blocks of her home; countless youths gripped by illegal drugs.

"It is depressing," says the retired Meridian, Miss., schoolteacher and principal. "I don't have children, and I'm beginning to think that I'm fortunate to have lived when I did."

Are our best days as a nation behind us? The question is haunting Americans as Election Day 1992 looms. They yearn to believe the future holds promise, but many aren't ready to make that leap of faith.

Indeed, many Americans believe the country is on the wrong track, and they don't see major social ills disappearing anytime soon. Asked to look 10 years down the road, participants in an Associated Press poll were glum about the prospects for a less dangerous, more compassionate society.

"Things just seem so up in the air. Everything seems kind of frightening right now," says Debbie Coleman, 33, a Merrimack, N.H., homemaker with two young children.

The national spirit usually soars in anticipation of a new president or a new start, says political psychologist Harold Zullow of Columbia University. But not this time. "This is a malaise election, similar to 1932 or 1980," he says.

In the AP poll, eight in 10 said big-city streets would not be much safer, illegal drugs would still be a big problem and the homeless would still be with us a decade from now. Nearly six in 10 said blacks and whites would not be treated equally and health care still would not be equally available to everyone who needed it.

People were somewhat more optimistic on other fronts in answering the poll questions posed by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., an arm of AUS Consultant Cos.

More than half those questioned said that America would still be one of the world's most prosperous countries in 10 years, that they would have a better standard of living than their parents did at the same age and that men and women would have equal job opportunities.

It's their own kids people worry about.

"Are our children going to have to compete with Mexicans who think $2-$3 an hour is a good wage?" frets Brad Martell of Ypsilanti, Mich. He's an autoworker and his plant is about to close.

"Can my kids afford a house?" wonders George Johnson, 49, of Los Angeles. After 20 years on the police force, he retired and went into real estate — and bought himself "a great big old home" worth $500,000. "I don't know if my kids will be able to do that," he says.

Much of the pessimism has economic roots. People see the headlines, they hear the statistics. They may even be a headline or statistic. It's no longer unthinkable.

"We're seeing a lot more white middle-class people coming through our mission center," says Don Helms, associate pastor of the First Baptist Church of Newnan, Ga. "They're looking for food, clothing, or somebody to listen and say 'things are going to get better for you,' so they can just have a chance to experience hope."

Democrat Bill Clinton — the candidate who was born in Hope, Ark. — has tried to frame the election as a choice between "hope and fear." He has called repeatedly for racial unity and closed his nomination acceptance speech with the line, "I still believe in a place called Hope."

That may be a good stance to take. Candidates who either didn't discuss problems or made them seem surmountable won 18 of presidential 22 elections from 1900 to 1984, according to a study by Zullow and psychologist Martin Seligman of the University of Pennsylvania. Among the victors: Eisenhower, Johnson and Reagan.

President Bush is having trouble convincing some voters he has a way to fix their problems. Independent Ross Perot's call for shared sacrifice is not what most people want to hear. Almost by process of elimination, Clinton has become a repository for profound, intangible hopes.

In Ypsilanti, the doomed plant workers call Clinton their only hope. In College Station, Neal Van Alfen says Clinton will revive the caring of the past.

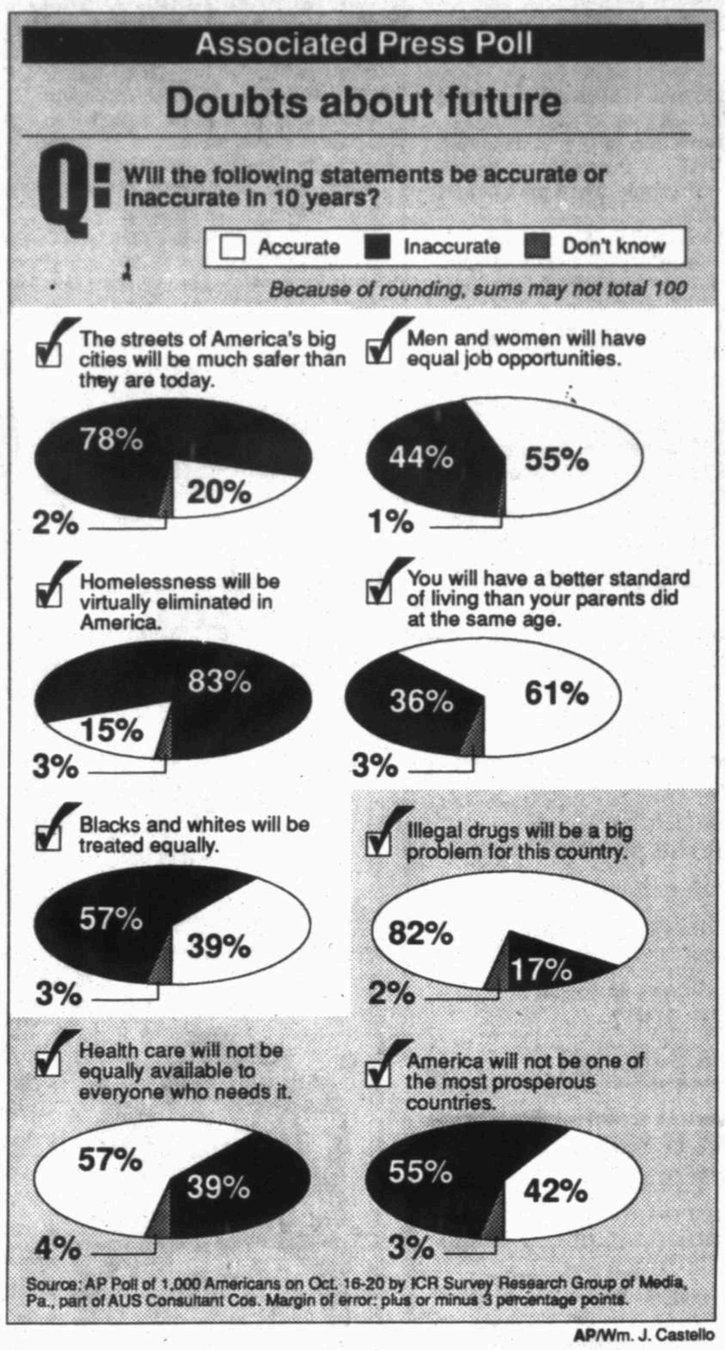

"Twenty years ago we had a real sense that we had a responsibility to the environment and to each other. I don't see that as much anymore. I'm disappointed in how the country has changed," says Van Alfen, a plant pathology professor at Texas A&M.

Blacks in the AP poll were more pessimistic than whites about the state of race relations a decade from now. But many have great hopes that Clinton will defuse tensions.

"If we don't sit down and talk to one another and reach some common ground, we're in trouble," says Johnson. "Clinton believes in racial equality and doesn't believe in divisiveness. The message has to be sent from the top. That sets the climate and the tone."

Turner, the granddaughter of a former slave, sees "too many black men out of jobs, too many white men selling black boys crack." She, too, is counting on "responsible leadership" at the White House to help ease the trials of the black community.

In 10 years, she says, "there will be jobs, people will understand each other and respect each other race-wise, and blacks will sense and feel the value of life much more than they do now." After a pause she adds, "It's wishful thinking, but it's within the area of possibility."

Ghost haunts firehouse in Poe's old neighborhood

By Kiley Armstrong
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Once upon a midnight dreary, firemen pondered, strong but leery ... in Poe's quaint and curious neighborhood of yore ...

While they nodded, nearly napping, suddenly there came a tapping —

As of someone gently rapping, rapping at their chamber door.

... 'Tis Firehouse Ghost and nothing more!

The mystery unfolds on West Third Street in homey, artsy Greenwich Village, at a four-story, 86-year-old firehouse that fire patrolman Joe Crawley says is "kind of a scary, old place."

Across the street, so it happens, stands a peeling brownstone where Edgar Allan Poe lived in 1845, a year after he published "The Raven."

In his spirit, therefore, is offered The Tale of the Haunted Firehouse.

The ghost wears an old-fashioned, double-breasted, red fireman's shirt, blue or black pants, shoes with buckles or high laces, and a helmet. He's around 40, with salt-and-pepper hair and a moustache.

He favors a long, narrow storage room with 20-foot ceilings but also has appeared on the staircase and in the basement coal bin.

Firehouse pranksters?

"I'm Irish — come back on St. Patrick's Day, and I'll show you some leprechauns," Chief of Fire Patrol Francis J. Dempsey said, chuckling.

But listen to William Tobin, a 25-year veteran of Fire Patrol 2, whose members work alongside city firefighters to minimize property damage.

"I don't look for him. But I know he's here," Tobin said matter-of-factly. "I can feel when he's up there. At nighttime, you can hear him walking around."

As a kid, Tobin heard about the ghost from his father, also a fire patrolman.

"He was trying to scare me, telling me ghost stories," his son figured. "I believe him now."

Tobin said he met the ghost around 1971.

"I heard somebody coming down the stairs. ... An old pair of black shoes and dark pants — that's all I could see." When he turned to answer the phone, the figure vanished.

" 'Tis the wind and nothing more!"

Another patrolman pointed to a 150-pound, wooden dolly. "See that cart over there? That moves," he said, giving his name as "Jimmy, just Jimmy. I don't want to be known as a wacko."

But that isn't the half of it.

About 1½ years ago, Jimmy was in his firehouse bed around 2:30 a.m. The ghost "was leaning over me, staring down at me. I woke up screaming," he said.

His buddies said he leaped out of bed and shadow boxed.

"I said, 'Leave me alone!' " Jimmy recounted. "That was 1½ years ago. I haven't seen or heard him since."

"Deep into that darkness peering, long I stood there wondering, fearing, doubting, dreaming ..."

"It could have been a nightmare," Jimmy offered with a sheepish smile.

But rookie Jon Ielpi wasn't smiling.

A week ago, he was headed down the narrow, spiral staircase with his hand on the center post.

Suddenly, "It felt like somebody was lightly putting their hand on my hand. I was kind of bugged out," said Ielpi, who beat a hasty retreat.

About 12 years ago, another fire patrolman encountered a ghost-like figure coming out of the coal bin in the spooky basement, said Sgt. John Sheehan.

He said the patrolman has more stories but "is scared to talk about it."

Sheehan, a non-believer, jokes about Elvis sightings.

Still ... he doesn't venture to the top floor at night.

"Here I opened wide the door: Darkness there
And nothing more."

Bishops: Wives need not submit to abusive husbands

Associated Press

The Bible does not tell women to submit to abusive husbands, Roman Catholic bishops say in the U.S. church's first official statement on spouse abuse.

In a statement that condemns sexism, the bishops declare women shouldn't consider themselves religiously bound to remain in abusive relationships, and encourage parish priests to be ready with "a safe place" for abused women seeking help.

"Violence in any form — physical, sexual, psychological or verbal — is sinful," the bishops say in "When I Call for Help: A Pastoral Response to Domestic Violence Against Women."

The joint statement on spouse abuse by the bishops' Committees on Marriage and Family and Women in Society and in the Church was proposed in March, and approved last month by the Administrative Committee of the U.S. Catholic Conference.

It emerged relatively quickly and quietly, in contrast to a controversial pastoral letter on women that the bishops have worked on for nine years and may be headed for defeat this fall.

It was never discussed in an open meeting of the full complement of bishops, unlike the unapproved letter, which backs sexual equality but stops short of calling for women priests.

"We wanted to get something out quickly," said Sheila Garcia of the Secretariat for Family, Laity, Women and Youth. "It's been a hidden problem for a long time."

Abuse is a topic no one likes to think about, the bishops said. They presented the statement "as an initial step in what we hope will become a continuing effort in the church in the United States to combat domestic violence against women."

As church leaders, the bishops said, an area that particularly concerns them is the way biblical passages encouraging wives to be submissive to their husbands have been taken out of context to justify spouse abuse.

"Abused women say, 'I can't leave this relationship. The Bible says it would be wrong.' Abusive men say, 'The Bible says my wife should be submissive to me.' They take the biblical text and distort it to support their right to batter," the bishops said.

U.S. reveals big step toward artificial vision

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tiny electrodes implanted in a blind woman's brain allowed her to "see" distinct dots of light — a method that may produce an artificial vision device in several years, doctors said Thursday.

The experiment "gives us firm evidence that artificial vision for the blinded person is an achievable goal, hopefully before the end of the decade," said Dr. Murray Goldstein, director of the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke.

The device would include a miniature television camera attached to eyeglass frames: The TV picture of a blind person's surroundings is sent to electrodes permanently implanted in the brain and the user experiences the sensation of seeing a picture made up of 250 to 1,000 spots of light.

"Our initial goal is to develop a stadium scoreboard type of display so they could read printed material and recognize street signs," navigate through doorways and avoid obstacles, said Dr. Terry Hambrecht, an institute physician and biomedical engineer.

Such artificial vision would "aid reading and mobility, not restore normal vision to the point you could go into an art gallery and appreciate a Rembrandt," Hambrecht said.

Technical obstacles must be overcome to determine if the technique really can provide the blind with rudimentary vision, Goldstein said by telephone from Bethesda, Md.

The government experiment, part of a 20-year, $10 million research effort, was revealed during the annual meeting of the Society for Neuroscience in Anaheim. It was kept secret because "we didn't want to spread false hope if the experiment failed," Goldstein said.

"It's really promising," said Richard Normann, chairman of bioengineering at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City. "I'm really excited about their findings, but ... we'd be doing the blind community a disservice if we tell them artificial vision is just around the corner."

The experiment on the 42-year-old blind woman started when she underwent surgery in November 1991 at the National Institutes of Health Clinical Center in Bethesda. The woman, a volunteer whose identity was not disclosed, lost her eyesight because of glaucoma 20 years ago, Hambrecht said.

During her operation, Drs. Conrad Kufta and Daniel O'Rourke removed a 1-by-2-inch section of her skull and implanted 38 "microelectrodes" into her visual cortex, the part of the brain that receives signals from the eyes.

Each electrode was one-third as thick as a single human hair and tapered to the width of a nerve cell, like "miniature map pins," Hambrecht said. Tiny gold wires attached to each electrode protruded from her skull.

When electric currents were applied to the wires, 34 of the 38 electrodes worked, allowing her to "see" 34 dots of blue, purple, red and yellow light that ranged from the size of a pinhead to the size of a nickel held at arm's length and that could be adjusted in brightness, he said.

Hambrecht and other researchers mapped where each electrode produced a dot in the woman's perceived field of vision. That let them apply current to four electrodes so the woman could "see" the letter "i," he said.

New winter gasolines will reduce air pollution, EPA officials hope

WASHINGTON (AP) — This winter automobiles in most American urban areas will be polluting less, thanks to a cleaner burning, peppier gasoline required by the government. But the new gas will probably cost a little more.

As a result of the regulation that takes effect Sunday, carbon monoxide emissions from automobiles and small trucks will be sharply reduced in 39 urban areas from Boston to San Diego, say air quality experts.

"This is the first big program under the Clean Air Act to go into effect," said Dick Wilson of the Environmental Protection Agency. "It's the first thing the public will actually notice."

Under the two-year-old law, service stations in the 39 areas, which don't meet carbon monoxide health standards, will be allowed to sell only gasoline containing an additive that provides more oxygen, thereby allowing it to burn cleaner.

The new blend must be used over a four-to-seven-month period, mostly during cold weather, depending on the severity of air pollution. The EPA estimates that the new gasoline will result in a drop of about 20 percent in carbon monoxide emissions from cars and trucks.

Carbon monoxide is emitted when a vehicle's engine is warming up and, therefore, is a greater problem in winter and in high-traffic areas. Even in relatively mild concentrations, it can cause dizziness, headaches and problems for elderly people with heart conditions.

The new "oxygenated" gasoline blends cut down on carbon monoxide emissions because the gas burns cleaner during warm-up, say EPA officials.

Last year there was concern about whether enough of the additives — either ethanol or a petroleum-based product called MTBE — would be available. But industry officials say no shortages are now expected.

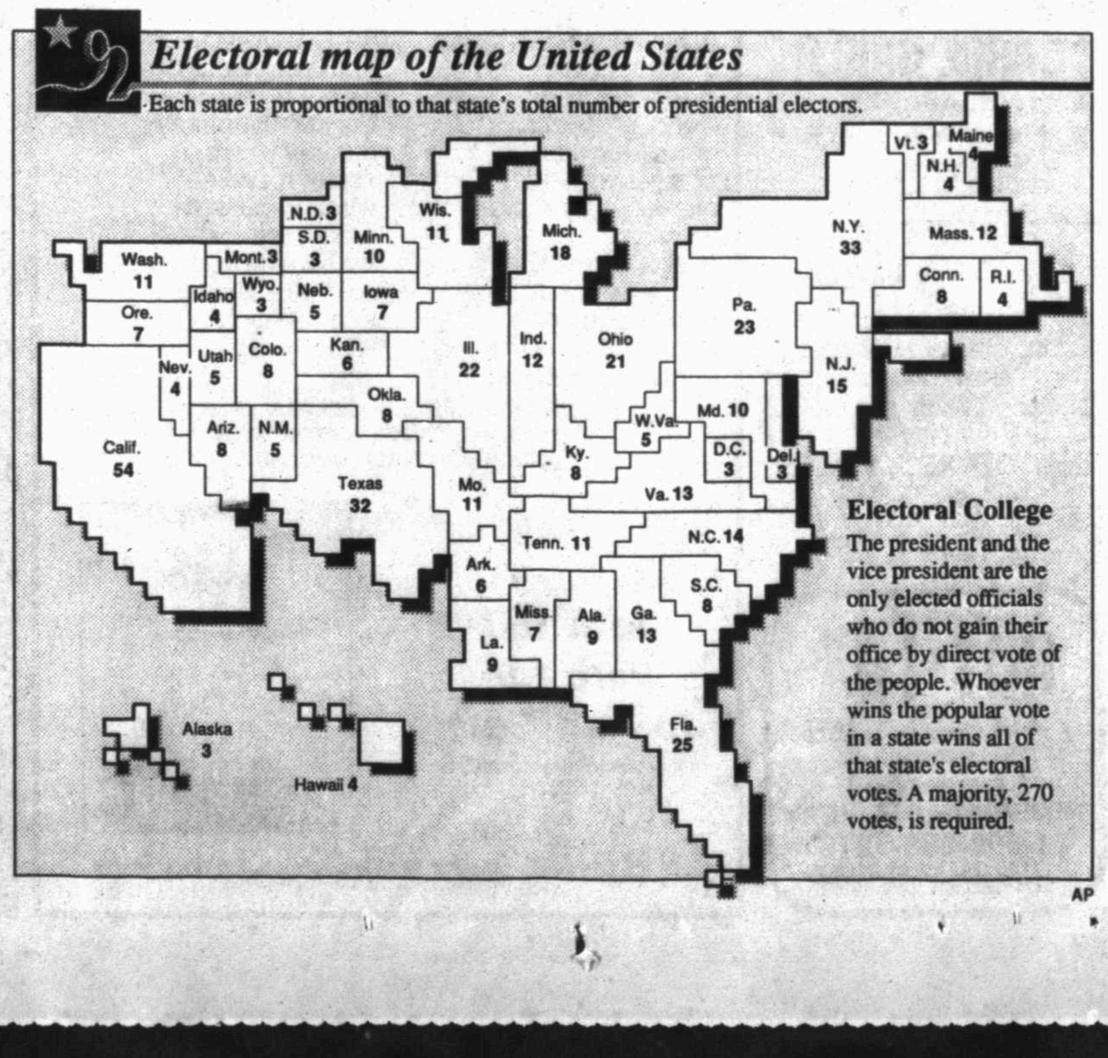

The price, however, is likely to be higher, although it's unclear how much.

Oil companies say it costs 3 to 4 cents more a gallon to produce the oxygenated fuel. Motorists also may have to buy more gasoline because the new blend is less fuel efficient than the old gasoline.

"We've already had a 4-cent (wholesale price) increase" related to the new fuels, said Mel Sherbert, president of the Service Station Dealers of America and owner of two Amoco stations outside Washington. "It's what's been predicted. I don't know if we're going to be hit by another hike."

Retail price spikes have occurred in some parts of the country where the new gasoline has been delivered to service stations. But it's not clear whether the price increases will hold.

"We really don't expect much of a price increase at all," said Geoff Sundstrom, a spokesman for the American Automobile Association, which tracks gasoline price trends. The nationwide average price for regular gasoline was $1.158 this week, said the AAA.

Before signing a contract or sending money to an "Advance Fee Loan Broker" we recommend that you check with the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin. Be wary of any broker claiming the easy availability of thousands of dollars for loans at reasonable rates or the availability of "foreign" money.

WHAT! NEWSPAPER ROUTES?

That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your 'day job.' Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: Our Distributors make from $400-$800 monthly AFTER expenses, some even more!

The catch? You've gotta be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING, or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

Call Tonya 687-8807 and start making that extra car payment today!
