War Declared on Armistice as Midland Plays Pecos High

Events

Eleven Years Ago
Honor to the Dead
Prayer vs. Medicine
Buried Alive in City

By R. C. Hankins
Today eleven years ago was the first real Thanksgiving of that decade. An emotion that had been swelling and surging during the period of the World War rose to the top of human breasts in one great wave; roars from millions attested to the universality of relief that fell like a zephyr out of the dissipated war clouds.

The Armistice had been signed. A deluge of ticker tape and paper swept out of the metropolis office buildings when that electric spark was touched off. The country literally was wild.

But some of those American Legion boys who marched this morning in the van of that great parade over Midland streets had done more than do without sugar and wheat flour. Some of them had slept for months in the cold mire of vermin-infested trenches and knew the nerve-racking terror of those minutes preceding the blast of a whistle that sent them scuttling "over the top" and to what they could not possibly know what.

In canteens and billets they had tried to keep spirits from reaching the ebb point. The old rickety piano and inevitable "Mam-selle from Armentiers-parley vous- da da da da da de dede dadade da"—Back in the trenches they didn't have time to remember even this. These boys were glad to feel the ache in their ears, the ache that succeeded stopping of the big guns. They were the ones who looked with wonderment at the horizon along the Marne as it began shifting back day by day, now that gas and smoke were not being belched into the air from those massed destruction machines.

"It is to those who died, not to us who lived over that war-torn period, that I want you to honor," the Reverend L. A. Boone, minister and former veteran, said at a memorial service held at a city church Sunday evening. "Those boys lost their lives, but not in vain. If they stood beside me today they would say the same. The good accomplished may sometimes appear intangible, but it is present nevertheless."

A man is in court charged with having been an agency in the death of his young daughter, whom he loved. This would seem to mean one of two things, that the man was insane or was charged wrongfully. It is almost paradoxical to consider the man who loved his child as being her murderer. Yet evidence bears out that when the child was sick the father refused to call a physician, preferring to resort to prayer. He prayed for hours, and got off his knees to find the child dead.

That story has many old counterparts, ranging back to the days of Simonides, Solon, to the rites of sun worshippers, to the days of brazen images. Religious motivation of thought and impulse antedated by long years the battle which arose between religion and the so-called "heretical use of physics."

A young actress of San Antonio is to be buried alive in Midland. There will be no legal action taken to oppose her interment. She will be brought forth from her grave and "trance" after 48 hours under the

OPENING KICK-OFF AT 2:30

Fight For The Second Place In Team Figures

The memorial pause for observance of peace gives way at 2:30 this afternoon for a short while as football war is staged by the rival contingents of Midland and the boys "beyond the Pecos."

The God of War will be appeased, for there is enough blood in a Pecos-Midland grid battle to look like another re-enactment of the days when the helmeted Hector fought the insignia of Priam's city for the sanctity of the Trojans.

Midland Ahead
And Midland is provoking a hard-gone fought game through repetition of the old battle song which carried as a refrain the tantalizing words "For we have won the last five of those bally games with the Pecosmen."

On paper, Pecos looks no stronger than Midland today. Comparison of scores and the season's record throws a different colored light on the scene, however. Pecos, marshalling potential points behind the threat of the timed zone pass of the Morehead-to-Brocot combination, is always dangerous, and Midland's practice behind closed gates this week has been motivated by the idea of getting a finger into that combination.

Ray Parker, Midland end, has an injured shoulder, and the game may depend upon how McCall fills that fast little man's shoes.

Straight Football
Midland will use straight football, using speed, power and interference where deception has failed to accomplish its purpose.

Coach Barry believes his backfield has improved 100 per cent within the past few days and that the "air-mindedness" of Pecos will be cut short by interception of every pass when Pecos elects to take to the air. Fryor, speedy nalf who has a mania for grabbing these for long gallops across the scoring line, will be on the right side to keep between Brocat and the goal line.

Midland's eyes will be glued upon the best man in the district last year, the heavy, fast Morehead, the racing, easy-fingered Brocat, the shifty Prewitt, and Midland's own Burris, little quarter who carries thrill into the game with him.

The MISTS of the ARMISTICE

BY WM. M. BRAUCHER

THE Armistice is old now, shrouded in the mists of years into which men vanish . . . but out of the rain and the darkness on the long road from Hoboken to Flanders comes the sound of hobnails clanking . . . and faces flash out from the night and fade again . . . men of the diamond, the gridiron and the track . . . Hank Gowdy, bravest of the Braves, the first big leaguer to go . . . Tommy Hitchcock, trading his seat in the saddle for a ride on the back of a war eagle . . . and leaping headlong from a train window to escape his captors. . . John Millus, he of the wild pitch, tossing fast ball grenades at the pill boxes at Varennes. . . Red-shirted Shawkey standing by at the surrender of the German Grand Fleet. . . Major Frank Cavanaugh, sitting down to fumble at the shrapnel in his shoulder. . . Tommy Armour, fighting the darkness with shell-torn eyes. . . Grover Alexander, keeping his shirt on and his rifle loaded. . . Jess Petty and Joe Harris, with the bases loaded and mud up to their hips. . . Eddie Rickenbacker, cruising the clouds like a bird of prey. . . Bob Martin, to fight up in the lines and in the ring, too. . . Johnny Poe, Johnny Overton, crashing that Hindenburg line. . . Big Six Mathewson mixing poison winds for the Heinies to inhale. . . Tony Wilding, Captain Cheape, Tommy O'Brien, Jean Bouin, Cyril Tolley, Gene Tunney—faces marching past into the mists . . . and Hobe Baker going for his last glorious end run, cut off forever by the flanking fire of the machine guns . . . a face flashes past that will not return—Eddie Grant, stopping his last terrific line drive with his heart . . . into the darkness and rain they march again . . . but the Armistice is old now and memories of men vanish in the mists of years.

ENFORCING GAS CONSERVATION LAW MORE DIFFICULT THAN ENACTMENT

Enforcement of California's new gas conservation law is more than merely a matter of inducing oil field operators to abide by its provisions. It is a problem of controlling nature, which frequently pays no heed to man's law.

He who has experienced the difficulties attending the opening of a bottle of highly charged liquid will sympathize with oil men who handle natural bottles thousands of times larger and infinitely more powerful. Gas pressure which forces the stopper from a bottle is magnified manifold when gas is encountered in an oil well. It is powerful enough to shoot strings of drilling tools and pipe weighing tons through the top of a 70-foot derrick, followed by the heavy iron rotary table and other odd bits of equipment, including the derrick itself.

Oil men still tell the story of what happened when one of the larger Texas "gushers" blew out. The roar was heard seven miles away and the column of gas seen five miles. Drill stem and casing were blown from the well. Within two days the gas had created a 100-foot crater into which derrick, tools, machinery and virtually all the drilling equipment except one lonely oiler sank from sight.

Gas pressure rises to 200,000 pounds and more per square foot. The volume is measured in millions of cubic feet. It is a valuable, useful product, but difficult to control. Moreover, it is readily ignited by the merest spark of electricity or the tiniest open flame. As it usually brings with it oil, sand and stones of various weights, efforts to "cap"

MANY PATRONS SHOW INTEREST; VISIT SCHOOL

A large number of friends and patrons heard the Armistice Day program at the various buildings of the city public schools yesterday at two o'clock, as is evidenced by the following lists of visitors to the various buildings:

"Like a Grain of Wheat, These Men Have Not Died in Vain"

"They have not died in vain, but have produced a hundred-fold," the Reverend L. A. Boone, Methodist minister and former veteran, said Sunday night at a union memorial service held in the First Baptist church.

The pastor was referring to those who fought and did not live to see the benefit of their work. "They are each the grain of wheat Paul spoke of," the ex-veteran with the wound stripe told the packed audience, "the grain that, if it dies, is fruitful of even an hundred-fold."

The minister praised the uniform of the United States, paid respects to veterans of other wars, to women who served in the imbrogio, showed the evolution of the world's progress through association with ex-vets, reviewed exploits of soldiers in war and hospital camps, and said that the dead soldier was the one to praise—the living one to respect.

The Lions club orchestra played special music, W. W. Lackey had his united choir on the platform for appropriate song service, Barney Grafa Jr., sang the Reverend J. E. Evans announced the lecture Wednesday night of Pussfoot Johnson, the Reverend Brown introduced the Methodist minister who made the address of the night, and Miss Betty Jaehne, Mrs. Van Camp, Miss Lena Solomon and Miss Lura Bess Birdwell sang. The Reverend Thomas D. Murphy pronounced an invocation, and ex-service men stood while the audience gave them mute thanks for that which they did while others "stayed at home."

VETS HEAD PARADE ON PAVEMENT

Hundreds Of School Children Are In Procession

The greatest parade ever to wind along this town's pavement gave honor this morning to the significance of today, a birthday of the Great Armistice.

Marching soldiers, band and orchestral music, the happy voices of school children, some of them too young to appreciate the months of terror brought summarily to an end by that first Armistice, gala stream-

Bedford Tells of New West Texas CC Manager

E. G. Bedford, on his return from the meeting Saturday of the directors of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, told a Reporter-Telegram representative that the new manager, D. A. Bandeden, was chosen for the position because of his proven ability to analyze and work out a large program.

The directors of the organization seek to operate the regional chamber on a larger scale, in keeping with the development and expansion of West Texas, and Bandeden was believed to be the man who had the qualifications for such work, Bedford said.

Bandeden, who has been manager of the El Paso chamber for 10 years, went to that city to work out some tax matters. His efficient work in that line led to his being tendered the position of manager of the chamber of commerce. He took the position with the chamber $100,000 in debt, and it is now free of debt, with $20,000 cash in the bank.

Technically Educated
Although he is the type of man who gets programs carried out, keeping himself in the background, investigation of Bandeden's past career brought out the fact that he is highly educated technically and trained in public work.

Thirty-seven years ago Bandeden was born at Bowling Green, Ohio. His public school and first college training were also in Ohio, the latter at Otterbein college. After taking his B. A. degree from Otterbein, Bandeden did post graduate work at Johns Hopkins and Columbia universities, majoring in political science, economics and allied subjects. He is also a graduate of the Harriman Training School for Public Service, connected with the New York bureau of municipal research.

After completing his schooling Bandeden went to El Paso in April, 1917, where he was employed by the taxpayers association to reorganize the plan of city and county government, especially with reference to taxes. In September of that year he joined the army, becoming a first lieutenant in the Fifty-fourth artillery, a heavy artillery corps. He served for six months on this side before being sent to France, where he served for eight months.

In 1919 he was honorably discharged from the army and returned to El Paso in March when he became executive vice president and manager of the El Paso chamber of commerce.

day, while the meeting of the directors of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce was in session, but did not attend the meeting.

When notified of his selection as manager of the organization, he made the following statement to the directors:

"I appreciate the honor conferred upon me by the directors of the West Texas chamber of commerce on being elected as manager of the organization. I hope that I may justify the confidence placed in me."

The directors of the West Texas chamber of commerce are business and professional men of the highest standing, representative of the communities throughout the territory. It will be my pleasure to serve these directors and to assist in organizing for West Texas a constructive business-like program of development and progress.

"Any credit for achieving our objects will be due to and will be credited to Mr. Hamilton and the directors of the organization."

Ira Lord Featured In Fort Worth Paper

Ira F. Lord, covering a number of counties in East Texas with his Midland farm advertising car, was featured in Sunday's Fort Worth Star-Telegram, with a picture of the Midland man standing beside the car. Signs advertising Midland County farms were in evidence.

A somewhat lengthy article telling of the purpose of Lord's trip accompanied the picture.

MORE ON AIRMAIL

Letters of agreement to a plan proposed by the Midland Chamber of Commerce with reference to work in behalf of the proposed Southern Transcontinental Air Mail route were received Sunday and Monday by the Midland organization. The plan proposed by Midland was mainly one of organizations in order that a united front might be presented in argument for the service as planned via Fort Worth, Dallas and El Paso.

GOT HERE ANYWAY

Recently a communication from an Eastern city was addressed to the "Secretary of the Texas Commercial Executives Association" West Texas. It was safely delivered at Midland, though this city with all its pride in itself, lays no claim to being West Texas, a citizen said Saturday. But the final arrival of the message to its correct destination is considered an indication of Midland's fame.

EVEN SHIPS AT SEA STOP TO PAY TRIBUTE TO DEAD

Two minutes of silence, worldwide feature of Armistice Day services, was observed at practically every hour of the day, today, according to local time. Eleven o'clock is six bells in shipping parlance, and six bells was sounded at all hours at the day in the seven seas of the world, as ships stopped their engines and crews stood bareheaded and silent.

ers, flags fluttering in the cordial breeze—Midland began observance of Armistice early this morning.

Only necessary stores were open. As an echo of eleven years ago, everyone was on the streets. There was lacking only that wave of hysteria to make the moment a duplication of the first observance of the day.

In the fore of the great parade was the remnant of that unit of soldiers which carried the spirit of Midland, West Texas and America into the blood-soaked field of France and Belgium. With these soldiers were others from various states of the great union.

ITALY CELEBRATES DAY

Today the eleventh anniversary of the armistice between Italy and Austria, which preceded by a week the general armistice that ended the War, was celebrated all over Italy with the pomp and solemnity of special occasions.

Field masses, with soldiers and "blackshirts" in review order, were said in every commune of Italy at 9 o'clock this morning. Represent-

ARMISTICE DAY—AFTER 11 YEARS

Armistice day is, quite properly, a day of memories. It draws our minds back 11 years and makes far-distant events come to life again for us.

Yet it might be a good thing if, in these Armistice Day reveries of ours, we could devote a little bit of the time to looking ahead as well as to looking back.

The men who were killed in the World War—the men to whom the first Armistice Day was a requiem and not a release—have a stake in this day that calls for something more than a tribute to their heroism.

During the war, as you may recall, we had a variety of slogans, by which we nerved ourselves for the struggle. One of them said that this was "a war to end war."

Now it has become the custom, in the last few years, to sneer at that slogan. In wartime it was a very real thing. Men lived by it, and died by it, sustained by the magnificent hope that it conjured up.

Yet the old slogan isn't entirely dead. It could still have all its magic power. We—the people of America—could revive it.

Armistice Day might not be a bad time to think about it.

Things have been happening in the last few months; things that can be made to rank with the tremendously important events of all history. There has been the Kellogg peace treaty. There has been the exchange of viewpoints between Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald.

These things, to be sure, may turn out to be nothing better than gestures. It is up to us—to us, more than to any people on earth.

If we don't care particularly about them, you may depend upon it that they will become gestures and nothing more. But if we insist—if we vow that these things shall become great, immovable bulwarks, to hold war back from a world that has found out how frightful war really is—then, in the fullness of time, they will become just that.

And, when and if they do, our wartime slogan will be justified.

Would there be a better way of keeping faith with the men from whom the war took life? Those men, remember, died believing that slogan. We can make it come true for them if we try hard enough.

Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot?

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Senator Robinson of Arkansas piles the blame for the stock market crash on President Hoover and Secretary Mellon, and Senator Robinson of Indiana traces it to John J. Raskob. You take your choice in case you don't know any better.

The panic of 1857 occurred in the James Buchanan administration when the Democrats had both the White House and Congress. Of course, it was quite a help to the Republicans in the Lincoln campaign of 1860.

Bad Times Under Grant But the depression of 1872-77, which occurred in the Republican Grant administration, was considerably worse because the national business fabric had grown a great deal since the Civil War.

The Democrats were in power with Cleveland when the big panic of 1893 came on, depressing the country for three years and giving the Republicans a grand talking point to aid in achieving their victory of 1896.

A smaller edition occurred in the famous panic of 1907 during the Roosevelt administration. The next period of hard times, accompanied by a serious unemployment problem, developed in the early days of the first Wilson administration.

Everyone remembers the 1921-22 deflation and hard times under Harding, the newly elected Republican. And now hundreds of thousands of persons have lost their shirts in the stock market following the Hoover inauguration.

ing and Currency Committee reported favorably on the resolution. However, the resolution could only come up under unanimous consent and the Senate never voted on it.

The ladies expressed their sincere appreciation to every woman who entered a cake, and to all who entered their babies. A great spirit of cooperation was shown throughout the entire show.

Midland Man Writes War-Time Poem

Following is a poem written by Alec M. Paterson, a Midland man, on the 10th of November, 1918, when it had erroneously been reported that the Armistice had been signed.

Another year its telling course has run, And internecine strife has direly done Its awful part, in wrecking hearth and home And saddened all the earth where joy once shone.

Such gaping wounds the world has never known, But pray to God this year will usher out Forever, all the lure of Mars renowned: The way of Christ then be the world's redoubt.

The retrospect of war has bloody been, And direct views of it there are but two: The one was Wrong, a Monomaniac's dream; The other Right, and there were those to do.

Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.

Use of the newspaper style called the "ruled insert" by the city editor has aroused the ire of one of The Reporter-Telegram's most careful and cautious readers. He says about the time he gets to the end of a line saying "were shot to death in a," the line is unfinished, a heavy black line appears, and another paragraph or story begins.

"When I come to one of these fool paragraphs, I throw the paper on the floor, stomp it with my feet, and tell my wife I'll never read it again," the reader said in a vehement protest to the editor.

Now, I don't believe Hankins uses that style of writing with the idea of making his customers sore. It's just one of his eccentricities, and it's

Young Business Woman in Charge Coffee Shop Naylor Hotel, San Angelo—Praises Orgatone

"I have gained wonderfully in health on three bottles of Orgatone and feel like my self again," said Miss Billie Preston, in charge of the coffee shop, Naylor hotel.

"I was in a very much rundown condition," she explained, "from stomach disturbances, and most everything I would eat gave me trouble. My food would sour on my stomach and form gas that made me miserable for hours. My nerves were all on edge so I got little rest at night and when morning came I was most as tired as I was when I went to bed. I had headaches most all the time and felt so wretched and no-account I hardly had any life or energy left to do anything."

"I heard so many people telling about the good that Orgatone had done them that I decided to try it. The way it took hold of my troubles was one grand surprise and I hardly know how to begin telling of all the benefit I have derived from using it. I can say, though, that it has made a new person out of me. The gas has stopped forming in my stomach, my complexion is clearing up, I can eat anything I want without feeling it at all, I sleep well at night and feel well all the time."

Genuine Orgatone may be bought in Midland at the Midland Drug Store.—Adv.

Oil Once Annoyed Salt Drillers; Now Brine Is A Bother To Oil Field Men

Salt drillers once had trouble disposing of crude petroleum and natural gas which they found in drilling for salt. Now oil drillers are having trouble getting rid of salt and brine which they find in drilling for oil and gas.

Steps Out Of His Coffin To Wives

MEXICO CITY, Mex. Nov. 10.—(AP)—Wife No. 1 and wife No. 2 were arguing in front of Alejandro de la Garza Pena's coffin, over the inheritance, when De la Garza stepped out of the coffin, kicked aside the wreaths piled before it and told the women to shut up.

Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Garrard of Lubbock stopped in Midland last night and went on today to Marlin for Mrs. Garrard's health. They visited friends here for a short time.

Reg. Robbins Due To Make Stop Here

Reg. L. Robbins, in a tri-motored plane, was scheduled to have stopped at Wink, Sloan Field last night, but stopped at Wink instead, according to Field Pilot H. M. Becherer. Robbins is carrying passengers up at Wink, and may come on to Midland some time today.

TEXAS U. BUILDING

AUSTIN—Completion of the large steam tunnel between the power house and the new gymnasium is in sight at the University of Texas, according to Comptroller J. W. Calhoun. Excavation for the tunnel, contract for which was let by the University Board of Regents, at a cost of $60,000, was begun about two weeks ago.

Errorgram

(1) The armistice was signed eleven years ago. (2) A chief petty officer is of the navy and not of the tank corps. (3) The upper pockets of the officer's uniform are missing. (4) An officer's belt should cross over from the right shoulder instead of the left. (5) The scrambled word is CIRCUS.

earth. She will live to be buried again and again.

Most of us prefer to sleep but once in that way, and then we want to defer the matter as long as possible. As for willingness to be hypnotized and put under ground while still breathing—it's inconceivable to more than one of us.

All over the earth battles are being fought. The foe is disease or the handicaps imposed by the loss of limbs or faculties. The United Press, through its bureaus on the two continents most affected, has made a survey of this fearful phase of the great war's aftermath.

PEACE IN ENGLAND

A sudden hush, a silencing of the rear of traffic, broken only by the resonant tone of the "Big Ben" clock in the Houses of Parliament, signalled the commencement of London's observance of Armistice Day. Men, women and children paused in whatever they were doing, and for two minutes, remembered, prayed or merely wondered.

Peace was the keynote of today's ceremonies in all parts of the country. With its mind on what it has achieved for peace at The Hague, Geneva and in Premier Ramsay MacDonald's visit to Washington, the government has ordered that the ceremony at the Cenotaph in Whitehall shall be of a more civilian character.

No more will the scarlet tunics of the guards, the contrasting blues of the navy and air force, and the glittering accoutrements of other regiments lend color to the imposing scene. Today that street where beats the heart of the empire was a drab mass of every-day suits, which the white surplices of the clergy and khaki uniforms of the representative detachments served to make even more somber.

In the United States there are 27,738 veterans in government hospitals. In addition, 43,000 veterans who had claims to government compensation have died. This figure, of course, fails to take in the vast number of service men who did not file such claims but who have succumbed to their wounds.

Eleven years after the war, France lists more than a quarter of a million men who have never been heard from—men whose obscure fate has been complete extermination in action, the unknown grave, the prisoners' camp or desertion. Of these, 2,500 are officers and 250,400 are non-coms and privates.

Hospitalization, once the biggest problem faced by the government in connection with the wounded and disabled veterans, is no longer a pressing necessity in England. At the end of June only eight hospitals and two sanatoriums were still being operated by the government, while eight other similar institutions remained under contract to accept former soldiers upon order from the Ministry of Labor.

A Kansas City caddy sued a golfer for $50,000 for an eye injury. Golfers who have lost their balls on the course may find it hard to understand how a caddy's eyes could be worth $50,000.

It is reported Colonel Lindbergh plans to buy Anne a sport model monoplane. That would be a big saving on fenders, anyway.
