Shuttle pilots readying for Sunday landing

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Asociated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Columbia zipped past a piece of Soviet space garbage in the blink of an eye Friday, and astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield began to clean up their ship for a Sunday landing on a California desert. They complained mildly of being too busy.

The touchdown, at 9:10 a.m. Pacific time, may be Columbia's first on a concrete runway.

Late Friday, a second heater failed in the shuttle's power generation system, but officials said it was not a major concern because there are surplus methods of making the system work.

The heaters control the pressure of extremely cold liquid hydrogen which flows to the spacecraft fuel cells, or power generators. There are four hydrogentanks and each one has two heaters.

Three days ago, when a heater failed in tank four, Mission Control switched to the backup heater in that tank. On Friday, a heater went out in tank two, and, again, a backup heater was switched on. Officials said the power system would continue to work normally even if the backup heaters went out in both tanks.

Commander Mattingly asked Mission Control to hold down on additions to the flight plan and "minimize anything that doesn't have to be done so we can try to get our spacecraft tidied up and start heavily thinking about what we are going to do on entry day."

He said the astronauts have been so busy that "we haven't gotten our ideas all down on the tape because we haven't even had time to talk into the tape recorder."

After Mission Control bid the astronauts good night, flight director Chuck Lewis said Mattingly "told us this afternoon that a week's not enough time to evaluate this machine. He'd like to stay up, I know."

The astronauts were told they would have three hours Saturday to stow everything away and to bone up on procedures for their blazing return to Earth. Everything loose aboard the spacecraft has to be put away or tied down for the wild re-entry ride that starts with the firing of retro-rockets over the Indian Ocean.

"Did you see the mess we had this morning?" Mattingly asked Mission Control with a laugh. "I don't think the mean (average) free path between objects could have been more than a foot and a half."

Mattingly and Hartsfield were orbiting 206 miles above Earth, the highest ever for the shuttle, and everything was going well.

Most of the major tests had been completed in the first five days of the flight, and Columbia's crew got around to aiming a specially fitted camera-tape recorder at lightning storms. Mission Control even pointed out a typhoon, Tess, in the South China sea south of Hong Kong, as a likely target.

The astronauts were told to look for the carcass of a Soviet rocket booster, doomed 6½ years ago to meaningless orbit after hauling up the Intercosmos 14 scientific satellite. Eventually, the gentle tug of Earth will end its existence in a fiery atmospheric breakup.

If the astronauts saw the space junk, they gave no indication.

"They didn't seem terribly interested," said flight director Harold Draughon. Columbia and the booster closed on each other at 6,100 mph.

"The point of closest approach was something like eight miles," he said. "You'd have to be looking at exactly the right place at exactly the right time — and not blink — to see that thing go by."

Had there been a threat of collision, Columbia would have taken evasive action. The North American Aerospace Defense Command, which keeps track of 1,200 satellites and 3,500 pieces of debris in the celestial junkyard, told NASA there was no danger to Columbia.

"There's a lot of junk up there, but there's a lot of room too," Draughon said. "There is a finite chance you are going to come close to them some day." One study put the odds at four in a million during a week-long flight.

NORAD had one less blip to track Friday after the USSR landed a Soyuz capsule carrying a Frenchman and two Soviets. Mattingly and Hartsfield still shared space with two cosmonauts who remained aboard the Salyut 7 space station. Salyut and Columbia follow different orbital tracks, far apart.

Columbia is to land at Edwards Air Force Base to an Independence Day welcome from President Reagan. Reagan will deliver a space policy speech, and officials of the Air Force and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration hoped he would propose that the nation build a permanent space station and a fifth space shuttle. Some officials feared that budget constraints might limit Reagan's commitment.

Unlike previous landings, Sunday's might be on a concrete runway — not hard-packed desert sand.

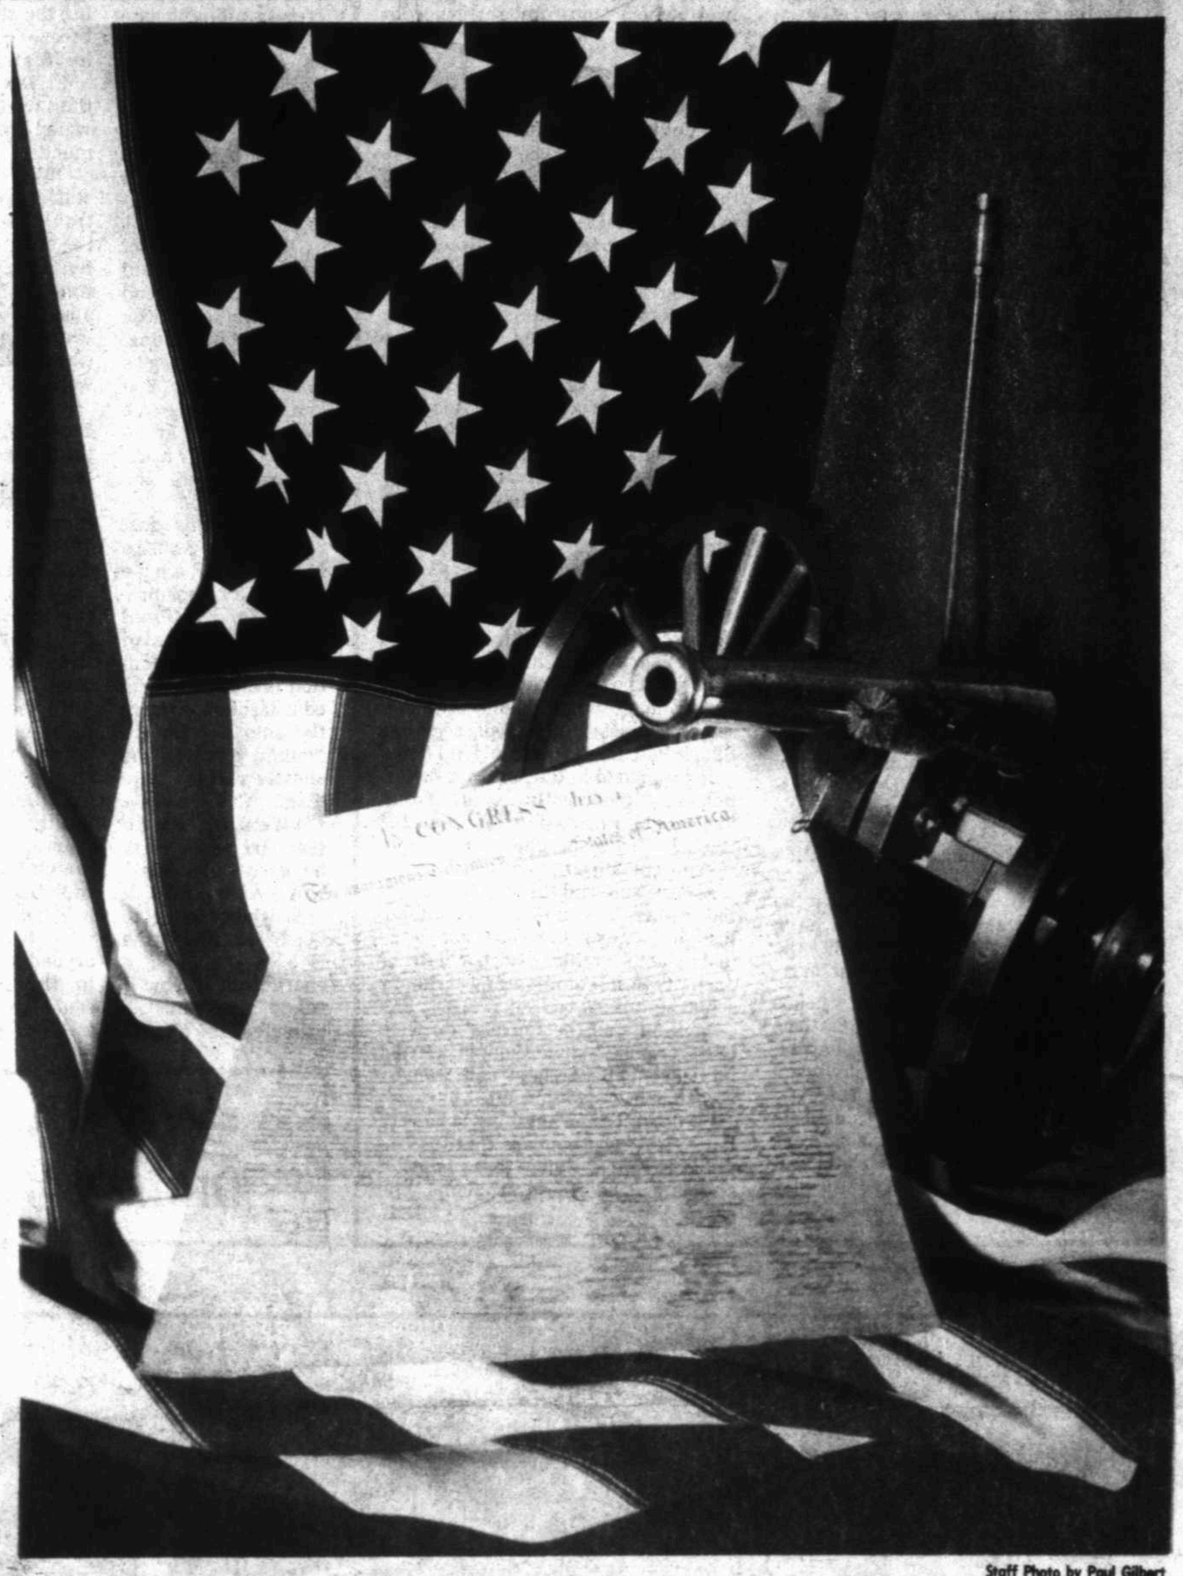

On its three test flights the shuttle rolled to a stop on desert floor, outlined with oil stripes to resemble the 15,000 foot concrete strip ships will use in the future. There was plenty of room to miss the centerline or to touch down early or late, although it was never needed.

NASA's first choice for Mattingly and Hartsfield is a crosswinds landing onto the wide-open desert runway, an effort to test Columbia's handling. But winds are expected to be calm.

"If we have the crosswind, we're going for runway 17 (on sand) as we'd planned," flight director Chuck Lewis said. "If we don't, we'll go to the concrete on runway 22."

Draughon, who is in charge of Columbia's descent, said Friday that "psychologically it's different when (the runway) is 300 feet and 15,000 feet long," opposed to touching down on the wide-open desert floor.

One of the major contamination tests for the flight, a sampling of the quantity and type of gas released from the spacecraft during its journey, had failed earlier in the week. The astronauts tried again on Friday and succeeded.

Decision on Midland, Ector counties stockade delayed

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Though not exactly lovey-dovey on politics and economics, Midland County and neighboring Ector County may march right into a barbed-wire confinement in a seeming gesture of cooperation.

If so, it would be in the name of saving taxpayers some money, finding a home for non-violent criminal offenders and alleviating overcrowded jails until new steel-and-concrete cells can be built or expanded.

Midland County Commissioners and their counterparts in Odessa on Friday agreed to study the economics of operating a stockade near Odessa's new sewage treatment plant near the Midland-Ector County line, but in Midland County.

Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith, who initiated the stockade idea solely for Midland County, would operate any joint facility, which would have several 22-man barracks to house 200 or more prisoners and 12-foot, chain-linked double fences topped off with stainless razor-sharp ribbon wire to discourage escape.

"I think it would work wll," said Ector County Sheriff Bob Brookshire. "I would be very pleased for you (Smith) to operate it, and you take all the headaches. I'll hand them to you."

That may or may not happen.

A committee of the two county sheriffs, county judges, county attorneys, and Odessa city officials are to get together at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission at Midland Regional Airport to determine if a mutually agreeable contract can be worked out.

The proposed site near Odessa is owned by the city of Odessa.

The Texas Commission on Jail Standards has given Smith, a member of that commission. Its sanction on the "Pilot project" in Midland County. That project, however, did not include a joint venture with another governing body.

Last Monday Midland County Commissioner Charlie Welch, who had been searching for an alternate sites for the stockade, insisted on a joint Midland-Ector County meeting to explore putting the stockade in a remote area.

The original choice for the stockade was a 7½-acre county-owned tract in southeast Midland. The county already has ordered $37,000 in fencing materials, and Smith is ready to put his volunteer-prisoners to work in doing the labor on the construction.

Welch, who is commissioner of Precinct 2 which takes in the original stockade site, seems to want to build the stockade far out of Midland and out of his precinct. Some businessmen and landowners in southeast Midland have opposed the stockade site in Midland; they contend it would inhibit growth and depress their land values.

Ken Peeler, spokesman for the opposition to the original site, said he felt Friday's meeting was "productive."

"I like the idea that they are trying to resolve the situation by the 13th (of July)." Peeler said.

Smith, who sidestepped voicing a personal preference on the sites, wants to start building the stockade "today" and expressed apprehension over delays caused by committee meetings.

MMH still unsure whether to proceed with dependency unit

By Gail Burke
Staff Writer

Even after receiving an official approval Friday from the state health agency, Midland Memorial Hospital is still indecisive on whether or not to continue with its plans to build a $3.4 million chemical dependency facility.

"We're very pleased that the THFC (Texas Health Facilities Commission) unanimously approved our application," said John Holt, MMH vice president of quality assurance and planning coordinator of the 50-bed project.

The three-member commission in Austin unanimously approved MMH's application and voted 2-to-1 in favor of West Plains, but denied Parkview Hospital 2-to-1 for its $500,000 conversion to a psychiatric hospital.

Ray Branson, MMH president, who would normally issue a statement concerning the chemical dependency unit, is out of town, but Arlene Strickland, MMH public relations director, said Branson left the following statement:

"The governing boards and administrative staff are assessing the economic impact of two applications being approved and will decide the next course of action within several weeks."

On June 22, Branson, in response to rumors that MMH would not build the unit if two facilities were approved, said that the hospital was not considering pulling out from the project, but MMH officials were concerned about the position the hospital would take if two of the three applicants were approved.

MMH began preliminary studies for a chemical dependency facility as early as Febuary 1981 when a study resulted in a recommendation from a corporation that specializes in these facilities that there is a need for 67 chemical dependency beds. MMH and West Plains has additional 40 beds set aside for psychiatric patients.

Because MMH could not spare any beds at its existing location, it was decided that the chemical dependency unit would be built in northwest Midland at Wadley and Whittle Avenues.

The need has been documented from the local to the state levels for the chemical abuse patient beds but, because these facilities are profitable, MMH officials want to be careful that there are not too many beds.

Many of the hospitals that provide treatment to chemical abusers are private entities which make a profit from the service.

Prices vary, but for six weeks which is an average stay, a private hospital in Dallas charges its patients approximately $10,000 while similar facilities have been quoted at $17,000.

If MMH should build its facility, the cost would be about $225 a day, making a four to six week stay cost about $9,500.

In February, Branson said this type of facility could make money for the hospital district because "all revenue exceeding expenses goes back into the operations, as opposed to the share holders in a private facility."

However, apparently not all of MMH's officials feel that hte profit aspect of this facility is important.

"That's another question whether or not these are money makers," said Dr. Henri Mast, president of the MMH directors. "Although an investigation disclosed the need for these types of beds, we may be oversupplied. We are not in the hospital business to make money...indirectly to break even...but I woldn't want to take tax money and drill on oil well to make money.

"The only reason I'd be in favor for it (chemical dependency unit) is to supply the medical need in the community. Some of the departments in the hospitals are money losers, like the emergency room,

PATCO files for bankruptcy in Washington, D.C. court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The air traffic controllers union, which challenged President Reagan with an illegal strike last summer and saw most of its members fired, Friday asked to be declared bankrupt and said it will liquidate its assets.

"It's over for PATCO. That's behind us," Gary Eads, who took over as the union's president six months ago, told a news conference after the request was filed in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the District of Columbia.

The union had requested court protection from creditors during a reorganization last November. Friday's request ends that proceeding.

Under the law a trustee will be named to distribute the union's assets, but there remains a dispute over how much money will be given to creditors.

Eads contends the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization's assets total only "several hundred thousand dollars" and do not include about $4 million in a separate trust fund.

"The subsistence fund will be distributed to the members," Eads said, including the 11,500 that were dismissed and those who continued working.

Union officials said the fund was created through members' contributions before the strike and was to be used to help controllers dismissed from their jobs for any reason, including medical disability.

But the nation's airlines, which have claims of $33.4 million against PATCO because of distruptions caused by the strike last August, have argued that it was designed to be a "strike fund" all along and should go to creditors as part of the union's assets.

Oswald's daughters suing Enquirer

ROCKWALL, Texas (AP) — The daughters of accused presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald filed a libel suit Friday against the National Enquirer claiming the newspaper exposed them to "public hatred, contempt and ridicule."

An attorney for June Porter, 20, and Rachel Porter, 18, filed the suit about 4:30 p.m. at a Rockwall County District Court, said Deputy Clerk Margie Hooker.

The suit does not seek a specific monetary award, but asks for "a sum in excess of the minimum jurisdictional limits of the court."

Dallas attorney Frank Jackson said he had not yet finished estimating the damages, but would ask the court to award the Porters at least "several million dollars."

The suit focuses on an article in the June 22 edition of the Enquirer about local community acceptance of the daughters of Oswald, the accused assassin of President John F. Kennedy.

"The whole article is a classic example of slimy journalism," Jackson said.

"We determined that it is time to protect these girls and put people on notice they are not going to be subjected to bullyism," Jackson said. "This is the point in these young girls' lives that a stand should be taken."

Iain Calder, president and editor of the Enquirer, said late Friday afternoon that he had not heard about the suit.

"There is nothing I can say until I see it," he said.

Jackson, in the suit, argued that the Enquirer knew, or should have known, that the story about the daughters was false and defamatory.

"It is libelous on its face . . . it tends to injure their respective reputations and exposes them to public hatred, contempt and ridicule in that it accuses them of being social outcasts, shunned by the communities of their residence, vilified by their neighbors and the subjects of verbal and physical abuse and assault," the suit said.

"The plaintiffs have never been beaten up by schoolmates, have never had their dogs poisoned, have never been terrorized by obscene phone calls or hate mail and have never been driven from any residence by harassment, vandalism or gossip," the suit said.

Jackson said in the suit that the women had lived in Dallas, Rockwall and Collin Counties and generally enjoyed good reputations.

The daughters took the name of their step father, Kenneth Porter, who married Oswald's wife, Marina, in 1965 and now lives in Rockwall, about 35 miles northeast of Dallas.

Porter said neither he nor his wife would comment on the suit.

Jackson said June is a journalism student at the University of Texas at Austin, but is studying at Harvard this summer. Rachel graduated from Rockwall High School this spring, and will attend college in the fall.

He said the article traced the girls' lives from 1965 when they lived in the Dallas suburb of Richardson, to this spring.

"The article essentially says that they were somewhat social outcasts and that they had been forced to leave Richardson because of the ostracism of the people in the community," Jackson said. "It states that one of girls, June, didn't even go to her senior prom because of persecution. But she did go, she certainly did."

Jackson said in the suit that the article also incorrectly reported that "the bad reputation of plaintiff Rachel Porter precludes her from seeking certain employment."

And the suit said the article accused the women of being socially maladjusted because they do not wear fashionable clothing, do not date or participate in common and ordinary social activities.

Jackson said the Porters' decision to sue the national newspaper was not influenced by the libel suit won by comedienne Carol Burnett.

"It doesn't have anything to do with that. . . . It just happens that the National Enquirer writes these types of stories and has these problems," he said.

Shuttle return should be smooth sailing

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Ground crews waiting to handle the shuttle Sunday expect smooth sailing compared to their harried last-minute effort in March at the makeshift spaceport in windy New Mexico.

"It's a heck of a lot easier out here," said Charles Baker, head technician for shuttle ground operations. "Everything's already set up. You know where everything's at — and it's not underneath all the white stuff."

The blowing dust of White Sands Missile Range created a major problem for National Aeronautics and Space Administration crews who turned a desolate gypsum flat into a complete landing site for the shuttle's third landing.

Weather conditions are expected to be good on Sunday. NASA wants a crosswinds landing to test Columbia's handling characteristics, but if winds are calm, as expected, the shuttle will be directed to runway 22 for its first landing on concrete. Touchdown is scheduled for 9:10 a.m. Pacific time.

Either way, servicing the ship will be a breeze compared to last March.

In New Mexico, the fine white sand invaded NASA's equipment.

"We lost a lot of stuff (primarily electronic components) to the gypsum," Baker recalled this week. "It took us about 30 days to get everything back to where we could get working again."

Common casualties were electrical relays and bearings of all kinds.

But Baker has fond memories of the White Sands challenge.

When rainstorms turned the Rogers Dry Lake landing strip into a muddy pond, 23 railroad cars were used to cart the heavy equipment needed to support a shuttle landing. The train left California just three days before Columbia lifted off March 22 and reached White Sands shortly before launch.

"We worked around the clock and in three days we could have supported a landing," Baker said. "The whole program should be proud of themselves for doing that. I enjoyed White Sands. It was a super effort.

"We were working a lot of hours, but the paperwork was pushed aside. If something needed doing, you just did it.

"Here," he said, "we're back in a paperwork world."

Sex charges 'uncorroborated'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allegations that some members of Congress may have sexually preyed upon the teen-age pages they employ center on perhaps three members of the House, an FBI spokesman said Friday.

Spokesman Roger Young also said that so far, the FBI has not been able to corroborate the allegations.

"The specific allegations involve a number substantially less than six," said Young. "Maybe half that."

Earlier, sources had said the allegations were against six congressmen — reportedly including an influential Democrat. But Young said flatly "It's less than six."

Those sources, who declined to be identified, said both Democrats and Republicans are subjects of the allegations. And they indicate — but will not flatly confirm — that some reports mention a member who, though not part of the House leadership, has some authority in Congress.

Young would not discuss specifics, but did say the allegations are "uncorroborated."

"You've got to take specific allegations seriously," he said, "but we're not at a point of seeking indictments or making arrests."

The FBI official also said evidence now indicates "it's not a widespread, organized problem. There's obviously some kind of problem with all the smoke out there. But it's far more smoke than problems."

None of the sources knowledgeable about the case was willing to mention names or to flatly confirm that any specific member was being mentioned.

And none was willing to say flatly that all of the allegations deal with homosexual activity involving male pages. The Justice Department reportedly has now broadened its probe to include allegations of congressmen soliciting sex from female pages as well.

Likewise, none is willing to say flatly that the allegations have substance, but one source noted, "No one has said there is nothing in this."

It is not yet known how many pages have been summoned to the Justice Department — or how many of them have made allegations. At least one page is known to have made allegations to Justice investigators. Others have told news organizations they encountered or helped set up homosexual advances. And sources said the department currently is interviewing other pages, after first spelling out the penalties for perjury.

The allegations already have sparked three separate inquiries — by the Justice Department, the House ethics committee and the Senate sergeant-at-arms.

So far only the Justice investigation is under way. The House committee probe, announced Thursday, is in the preliminary stage of questioning pages, who are brought to Washington for months at a time to act as messengers, and no date has been set yet for the panel's first meeting.

But Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, the committee chairman, promised a thorough investigation and a prompt report on the findings. Rep. Leo Zeferetti, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Narcotics Committee, offered Stokes whatever aid his panel could provide.

The Senate probe is not a formal investigation. Senate leaders say they understand from Justice officials that no senators or Senate pages are involved. They say they asked the sergeant-at-arms to check into the allegations simply as a precautionary measure.

The allegations first surfaced publicly when a 16-year-old male page, Jeff Opp of Denver, who said he did not participate in the activities, told a staffer in the office of Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., of parties involving cocaine and sodomy. Schroeder's office called Opp's father and set up an appointment for the youth with the Justice Department.

The father flew to Washington and accompanied his son to the Justice meeting, which lasted 90 minutes.

'Starch blocker' maker may file suit against FDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major manufacturer of "starch blocker" weight control pills said Friday that it is suing the Food and Drug Administration to prevent the agency from defining its product as a drug.

Robert Lemon, president of Bio-Tech Laboratories in Batesville, Ark., said its bean-derived product is a "food for special dietary use" and not a drug. Therefore, the FDA shouldn't attempt to remove the product from the market, he said.

Lemon said a company attorney would file suit in U.S. District Court in Chicago questioning the FDA's legal and scientific reasons for classifying the products as drugs.

The agency said Thursday that the products are now classified as drugs under provisions of the Food, Drug and Cosmetics Act because they alter a function of the body.

The diet pills are said to counter the calories of carbohydrates. But until they are proven to be effective and safe, they should be removed from the market, the agency said.

The FDA said it was sending letters to the more than 100 manufacturers and distributors of the growing diet fad, asking them to stop marketing the pills until the proof is in.

Senate panel favors large tax increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Over the objections of all nine Democrats, the Senate Finance Committee on Friday approved the largest tax increase ever — a catch-all package raising $98.6 billion over the next three years.

If accepted by the House and Senate, the bill would double the tax on cigarettes, triple the tax on telephone service, slash deductions for medical expenses and uninsured losses, and take back a big chunk of the business tax cut enacted last year. A 10-percent withholding tax would be imposed on most interest and dividends.

The measure, drafted behind closed doors by the panel's Republican majority and endorsed by the Reagan administration, was approved on an 11-9 vote at 2 a.m. at the end of a 17-hour session.

The bill would raise an estimated $21.1 billion during fiscal 1983, which begins Oct. 1. It was written in an effort to slash the federal deficit in hopes such government restraint would lead to a decline in interest rates and spur economic recovery.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said that "at first glance," the tax increases voted by the finance committee have the approval of President Reagan, who previously opposed some of the tax proposals adopted by the panel.

"We think these new taxes are by and large loophole-closing and base-broadening," Speakes said. He added that Reagan "would have preferred not to raise anyone's taxes."

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said the committee's action "furthers our efforts to reduce deficits while maintaining the integrity of our economic recovery program."

Regan noted that the tax bill preserves the 1983 installment of the president's three-year reduction in personal income tax rates — the cornerstone of the administration's economic program.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the committee, told reporters the panel's quick action proves Congress is serious about cutting the deficit. "We have done our best to take major steps toward cleaning up the tax code and ensuring that the wealthy pay a fair share of tax before resorting to new tax hikes on working men and women," he said.

Dole said the measure has an excellent chance of becoming law.

Millions of taxpayers who have large medical expenses would find their deductions sharply reduced. Presently, those who itemize may deduct certain medical expenses that exceed 3 percent of adjusted gross income. For example, a $30,000 family with $2,000 of uninsured medical expenses may deduct $1,100.

The bill would raise the threshold to 10 percent — meaning that same family could able to deduct no medical expense at all. But the provision in current law allowing a deduction for half the medical insurance premiums, up to $150 a year, would be retained.

More than 19.4 million taxpayers claimed medical deductions averaging $766 in 1980, but a significant portion of them claimed only the $150 insurance cost.

Similarly, 2.6 million couples and individuals who deducted $2.75 billion worth of uninsured casualty losses in 1979 would find deductions cut. Present law requires the taxpayer to absorb the first $100 of such a loss before taking a deduction; the bill would allow a deduction only for losses that exceed 10 percent of income.

Position on Israel acid test for Shultz

By GRACE-MARIE ARNETT
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — When Secretary of State-designate George P. Shultz is grilled by senators during his confirmation hearings, an acid test of his position on Israel likely will involve his business dealings with Arab countries.

The multi-national heavy contruction firm Shultz heads, Bechtel Corp., has been ensnarled in years of legal battles over its right to comply with the Arab nations' boycott of Israel.

Bechtel has contracts worth billions of dollars with Arab countries, especially Saudi Arabia, and has fought to protect the business deals by agreeing to go along with the Arab boycott.

The Justice Department filed a suit against Bechtel in 1976, however, when Israeli supporters charged Bechtel also was forcing its own subconractors to comply with the boycott

When Israel was founded in 1948, its Arab neighbors began a boycott against all economic and personal contracts with Israel.

Since the boycott extended to all companies doing business with Israel, many U.S. firms were forced to choose between doing business with Arab countries or with Israel.

The Arabs then drew up a blacklist of firms it would not do business with because those firms traded with Israel. Bechtel got into trouble when it allegedly agreed to comply with a secondary boycott, refusing to subcontract work to any firms on the blacklist.

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith saions a 1976 statement: "Bechtel distributed invoicing instructions to its suppliers which required them to include an anti-Israel boycott certification in the invoice."

The suit was settled out of court in January of 1977 with Bechtel signing a "consent decree" agreeing not to force its subcontractors to do business, with Israel while saying it had done nothing wrong.

Investigators looking into the business dealings of Shultz in preparation for his confirmation hearings later this month said they have found no evidence that Bechtel has violated that consent decree. The Commerce Department, which oversees the agreeement, said it relies on the public to make complaints of any wrong-doing, and none has been registered, investigators said.

Bechtel's compliance with the Arab boycott contributed in 1977 to Congress passing new legislation designed to protect Israeli companies and American companies doing business with Israel from coercion.

In June of 1977, Congress passed an anti-boycott bill which said the United States respects the right of soverign nations to boycott the products and services of others countries.

Midland, Ector counties delay stockade decision

volved is to be made within two weeks.

Smith outlined his plans for the stockade on the 40-acre tract near Odessa; an advantage, he said, was the remoteness of the site; a disadvantage, he said, would be the distance from Midland-about 17 miles. And he noted that Marcus Bates is building several houses and a runway north of the proposed site. On that development, Welch said that no plat has been filed in Midland County. "As far as we know, it's all blank land."

The sheriff wasn't too concerned about the stench from the sewage treatment plant.

"I don't know what the smell will be," he said. "I don't know that much about sewers...

"I don't care what the prisoners think," he said.

But the sheriff said he was concerned about how any foul smell might affect his guards out there.

"It's going to take understanding men" to put up with the smell, he said. "If they were making 50 grand a year, I think yhey would be more understanding."

Midland County Judge Bill Ahders, who chaired the Friday session, asked Chester Nolen, Odessa's acting city manager. If the city might give the 40 acres "free" to Midland County for the building of the stockade.

"They (Odessa City Councilmen) would be willing to make concessions," said Nolen. He did not elaborate.

Until opposition against the stockade in Midland gained momentum and Welch apparently took up the cause, Midland County commissioners had entertained building the stockade on the 7½-acre tract in southeast Midland; agreed with Smith on pitching tents, which the commission on jail standards approved, until barracks were constructed; and, after the temporary stockade had served its purpose in three or so years, considered turning the buildings over to the county's Road and Bridge Department for use.

Under the latest proposal, the barracks would be built at Midland County's expense on Odessa soil. Unless Odessa sells or just gives the land to Midland County, the stockade would, after serving its purpose and is abandoned, likely be given, sold or exchanged to Odessa.

Midland County commissioner Win Brown asked Smith if he envisioned "complications" over the joint venture on the part of the Commission of Jail Standards.

"We can't do anything without their permission. It's a new idea, a radical departure", the sheriff said of the joint stockade concept.

Except for Welch, the Midland County commissioners were uncommittal on the joint venture and seemed to be awaiting more particulars on finances, advantages vs. disadvantages, and the sheriff's ultimate preferences.

Odessa and Ector County representives appeared to favor the joint porposal.

"We had sort of discussed the matter," said Ector County would be willing to pay a pro-rata share for its prisoners upkeep but would not make any capital investments.

"I feel like it's a great idea," said Brookshire, "and if Midland and Ector counties grow together, there's a need for it."

but we continue the service for the community," he said.

West Plains Hospital, part of an Arlington Corporation, intends to construct its $4.1 million, 60-bed psychiatric hospital neart the Midland Regional Airport to serve both cities and the surrounding area.

Although West Plains officials could no be reached for comment, James Bingham, president of the Arlington Corp., has told the Midland Reporter-Telegram repeatedly that "we support the Midland project. We plan to use some of their services. MMh will probably be able to offer more kinds of programs than we would because our project is limited-20 adult psychiatric, 20 adolescent psychiatric and 20 drug/alcohol beds-we just want to be part of the com-

When Bingham was first interviewed in December 1981 he referred to the study done at MMH for the bed need.

"I assume if there was a need for 67 beds in Midland alone, Odessa would probably have that need." Bingham said. "If this is the case, our 20 beds (for chemical abuse patients) are insignificant to Ray's (Branson) 50 beds. We want to serve the Midland/Odessa area. That's why we chose the site at the Midland Regional Terminal."

Israel tightens noose around trapped PLO fighters

By The Associated Press

Israel escalated psychological warfare against trapped PLO fighters Friday and Lebanon's top Christian militia leader warned that west Beirut faced "total obliteration" unless the guerrillas get out.

But the Palestine Liberation Organization dug in for battle as the invasion went into its fifth week, and declared a new underground would spring up to "strike mercilessly" at Israel and its backers.

The Tel Aviv command said gunfire wounded three Israeli soldiers patrolling near the Syrian-Israel cease-fire line near Bhamdoun, 12 miles east of Beirut.

It was the first cease-fire violation reported by Israel in six days, but it was not known whether the shots were fired by Syrian forces or their Palestinian guerrilla allies.

At the United Nations, Egypt and France moved to get the Security Council to meet and take action on the Lebanese crisis.

Screaming Israeli jets dropped flares and smoke canisters on west Beirut for the second day and Israeli troops with bullhorns urged civilians to flee. But many poured back, saying they found no refuge in Christian east Beirut.

Israel radio said the army was "tightening its encirclement" of the PLO, and Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan said his troops were blocking supplies of "weapons, food and other aid" to the guerrillas.

Israel's defense minister, Ariel Sharon told a news conference in east Beirut that Israel "will not accept a situation in which any of the terrorists will stay in Lebanon. . . . Our only reason for being here is to destroy the terrorist PLO."

He refused to answer questions about whether Israeli forces surrounding west Beirut would storm the enclave, and declined to say how much more time Israel would allow for negotiations involving U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib and Lebanese officials to reach a peaceful settlement.

The PLO had previously conveyed to Habib through Lebanese President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan that it was prepared to leave Beirut. But the PLO set conditions such as allowing guerrillas to leave with their families, provision for a "dignified departure," permission to retain personal weapons and to set up a PLO diplomatic mission in Beirut.

Bashir Gemayel, Lebanon's top Christian militia leader, said after meeting with Habib, Sarkis and Wazzan at the Israeli-encircled presidential palace in suburban Baabda that the guerrillas were lying. "They lied to Habib, to Sarkis, to Wazzan. They lied all around."

Gemayel, whose militiamen side with Israel against their common Palestinian guerrilla enemy, said in a nationally televised statement the PLO was buying time for international pressure to extricate it from the west Beirut siege.

"But this is dangerous. For once they should stop lying because they risk total obliteration of (west) Beirut," Gemayel said. "They say they want a face-saving outlet from Lebanon. But they have left no face to save. They have destroyed Lebanon."

The PLO's top security chief, Salah Khalaf, told the Palestinian news agency WAFA, "There is no need for us to leave Lebanon, whether by land, sea or air because if we accept this we are not sure we shall survive the massacres that take place across the lines controlled by Israel and its allies."

He said the "rock bottom position" of the PLO was for a six-mile Israeli withdrawal from west Beirut, to be followed by a disengagement of forces guaranteed by U.N. troops.

"The PLO will not negotiate further with the Lebanese state on the status of the Palestinians or the form of their military presence in Lebanon," Khalaf said, referring to earlier PLO demands for a diplomatic mission in Beirut and for guerrillas to have several small units within the Lebanese army.

He said the PLO's encirclement would breed a new generation of guerrillas who would "mercilessly strike" at pro-Western Arab regimes, American interests and Israel as well as its "agents in Lebanon.

"Our visible military presence might be finished, but an underground era of Palestinian action will follow. Those of us who survive the Beirut battle will carry the new mission on and I am certain manmy of us will survive."

PLO spokesman Mahmoud Labadi said Arafat has 20,000 "tough fighters in Beirut who will fight if they have to. The Israelis want to depict us as if we are in a hopeless situation. They want us to throw down our arms and declare our surrender. This is of course ruled out."

Informed sources estimate there are 8,000 guerrillas and about 500,000 civilians in west Beirut, and that Israel has more than 90,000 troops in Lebanon, many of them in the Beirut area along with hundreds of tanks, armored personnel carriers and heavy artillery.

The Israelis invaded June 6 to crush the guerrillas and rout the 30,000 Syrian "peacekeeping" troops who had increasingly attacked Israel's Lebanese Christian allies rather than police the armistice that ended the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war.

But in the last 10 days the Israelis have offered to let the PLO leave for Syria on buses with their rifles. The PLO came up with counterproposals involving boats and planes, and Habib's talks quickly bogged down on where to send the guerrillas and how.

Britain's Social Democratic Party elects leader

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Roy Jenkins, the patrician former head of the Common Market, was chosen Friday as the first elected leader of Britain's new Social Democratic Party.

In a two-man contest decided by mail ballot, he defeated ex-Foreign Secretary David Owen by 26,256 votes to 20,864.

A total of 75.6 percent of the party's 63,000 subscribers mailed in votes. It was the first time a British political party had selected its leader by a full vote of the membership.

Jenkins, 61, immediately turned his attention to the task he and other Labor Party dissidents set themselves when they founded the middle-of-the-road Social Democrats in March 1981 — smashing the 60-year hold on British politics enjoyed by the two main parties, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's ruling Conservatives and the opposition Laborites.

"We've got to relaunch with full momentum our challenge to offer the public a new deal in British politics," said the one-time deputy leader of the Labor Party, who served as president of the European Common Market Commission in 1977-80.

"There is a tremendous opportunity now for a real second wave of momentum and enthusiasm" in the Social Democrat-Liberal Party alliance, a linking of the two centrist parties agreed on last fall.

He was indirectly acknowledging the surge in support for Mrs. Thatcher during the Falkland Islands crisis, and the challenge in wresting power from her in the next general election, due by May 1984.

Before the April 2 Argentine invasion of the Falklands, the Conservatives were neck-and-neck in opinion polls with Labor and the Social Democrat-Liberal alliance — each with about one-third of the vote.

The latest poll, taken by Market and Opinion Research International for The Economist newsweekly June 21-23, showed the Tories with 51 percent, Labor 24 percent and the Social Democrat-Liberal alliance 23 percent.

Last December, it was the Social Democrat-Liberals, buoyed by special parliamentary election victories by Jenkins and Social Democrat co-founder Shirley Williams, that attracted 50.5 percent of voter support.

Jenkins, now favored to become official leader of the alliance and its prospective prime minister, had an explanation: "The Falklands has dominated politics for the past three months but it won't continue to do so. . . . It is very difficult to predict what will happen in six months' time."

Owen, who marked his 44th birthday Friday, represents the reformist left wing of the Social Democrats and campaigned against too close an alliance with the middle-of-the-road Liberals. One poll a week ago had said he would win, giving him 47 percent of the vote to 29 percent for Jenkins, the rest being "don't knows" and "neithers."

In defeat, Owen pledged full support for Jenkins and predicted the Social Democrat-Liberal alliance would form Britain's next government.

The outcome delighted Liberal Party leader David Steel, more aligned with Jenkins' mild vision of a mixed-economy Britain than with Owen's sweeping plans to break down class barriers and alleviate poverty at home and in the Third World.

Steel has said he is prepared to stand aside to let Jenkins lead the alliance into the next election. He would not have done so for Owen. The Social Democrats hold 30 seats in the 635-member House of Commons and the Liberals 12.

Texan wants owners to have flag

By JOE VARGAS
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Harry V. Anderson is a little vague on the details of how he came across that sourvenir flag in the winter of 1945, but he's determined to see it returned to its rightful owners.

It has taken the 80-year-old Anderson almost two years and several letters to officials in the United States and West Germany, but the flag soon will be returning to the people of Krautheim, a town about 100 miles southeast of Frankfurt.

Anderson acquired the red and white flag, which bears the colors and symbols of the town of Krautheim, in March 1945, while enroute from Bastogne, Belgium, to Berchtesgaden, the site of Adolph Hitler's estate in the Alps. His unit, the Army's 101st Airborne Division, was overseeing the surrender of German soldiers in southern Germany

"I bought it from soldiers who took it from Krautheim," said Anderson. "I think I traded a gun for it, but I'm not sure."

Collecting souvenirs was popular among soldiers during the war, but Anderson never felt quite right about keeping the 98-year-old flag. As the years passed, he became increasingly concerned about seeing it returned to Krautheim in time for its centennial.

"It was exciting right after the war to pick up the flag," Anderson said. "It's a beautiful prize. But even though I didn't steal it, I've always felt a little guilty and remorseful about keeping it, since it rightfully belongs to the people of Krautheim."

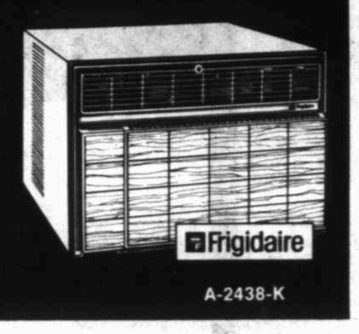

Two years ago, Anderson contacted the West German ambassador to the United States and the American ambassador to West Germany and inquired about returning the flag. The Germans wrote back that there were two Krautheims, across a small river from each other.

"That made things a little more difficult, since I had no idea there were two Krautheims," Anderson said.

Undaunted, Anderson wrote letters to officials in both towns and to the West German consulate in Houston. He and his wife, Maude, even offered to fly to West Germany to return the flag.

"A great many people will be happy with the wonderful news" of the return of their flag, Vice-Consul Bernard Rottle told Anderson last month.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get an early start if taking a trip to visit relatives or friends. Observe all traffic regulations, safety rules. A stranger shares an intimate secret.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Share picnic preparations. Softball games, swimming and tennis provide amusement as well as exercise. A platonic relationship intensifies.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Include members of several generations in your social plans. Entertaining at home is preferable to going out. Enjoy the fireworks with friends, family members.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If single, you may be thinking about making a permanent commitment. Do not let loved one's whispered "sweet nothings" force you into making an impulsive promise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An off-beat party sounds appealing. Your lively personality is responsible for your social success. Travel is indicated later in the day. Observe all safety rules.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance will provide most of the fireworks on this Fourth of July. A family picnic proves to be more fun than you expected. Be sure to share the cooking chores.

Guerrillas try to stop transport in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A shutdown of intercity bus service spread northward Friday as leftist guerrillas trying to block military transportation lines continued to attack buses and other vehicles.

President Alvaro Magana reiterated calls for an end to the guerrilla violence. "We will not tolerate the forces of destruction," he said in a speech Thursday night.

A government soldier and provincial police director were reported killed in the latest round of highway attacks. The Association of Salvadoran Bus Owners estimated about 100 buses have been burned or bombed in the past month.

Bus service was cut to Chalatenango, with operators fearing continued guerrilla attacks. On Thursday, spokesmen announced bus service between San Salvador and eastern cities was paralyzed as a result of the guerrilla threat.

Dozens of trucks and cars also have been destroyed.

The clandestine guerrilla Radio Venceremos has said the rebels seek to halt all highway traffic in order to block military transportation lines.

The Honduran army announced Friday that 1,800 reinforcements had been sent to the border to block Salvadoran insurgents seeking refuge from government troops in their own country. That brings to 3,000 the number of Honduran troops patrolling the border with El Salvador.

"We took the decision because of the continuing gun battles between the Salvadoran National Guard and terrorists of the Farabundo Marti (National Liberation) Front in the proximity of our southeastern border," the Honduran army said. It had no comment on guerrilla claims that Honduran troops had crossed the border to help Salvadoran government forces.

Salvadoran officials reported one government soldier was killed and several were wounded Thursday night in a half-hour clash with guerrillas on the highway near Ilobaso, 35 miles northeast of the capital.

Guerrillas ambushed and wounded the director of provincial national police headquarters in Chalatenango as he drove to the scene of another highway attack on the road to San Salvador, authorities said. The attack against the director, Jose Luis Ortiz, occurred Thursday about 30 miles north of San Salvador.

Defense Minister Gen. Jose Guillermo Garcia said Thursday night that the army is taking "all the steps we can" to combat the intensified guerrilla activity.

The army still has more than 4,000 troops on a search-and-destroy mission in northern Morazan province, a longtime rebel stronghold near the Honduran border.

Up to 6,000 troops, including all the nation's U.S.-trained rapid deployment forces, have been engaged in the operation — the largest of the 32-month-old civil war.

Garcia said it "is going well. We have consolidated. Because of that, the operation has developed satisfactorily."

The Morazan mission started in early June when the army moved troops toward the northern town of Perquin, which guerrillas had seized June 5 as they opened their first offensive since March 28 elections for a new Constituent Assembly.

Guerrillas ambushed a government column, and claimed 76 soldiers were killed, more than 100 wounded and 42 captured. The government has never confirmed these figures, though Garcia at one point conceded that "the blood is flowing in Morazan."

Church and human rights groups estimate at least 34,000 people have been killed in political violence since October 1979, when a civilian-military junta came to power in a coup.

Unrest reported in African mines

By ANDREW TORCHIA
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Rioting black miners burned down an administration building Friday night, and at least 4,000 remained on strike in the worst unrest at South Africa's gold mines in nearly a year, mine officials said.

Security forces fired hundreds of tear gas cannisters, and used dogs and a helicopter to disperse the rioters at West Driefontein mine, part of the biggest and richest gold mine complex in the world, according to Rand Daily Mail reporters at the scene.

About 4,000 workers at the mine southwest of Johannesburg refused to go underground for the night shift, and burned down an administration building in their residential area, a mine spokesman said.

The violence at the West Driefontein, Buffelsfontein and Stilfontein mines began Thursday night and several people were injured as of stone-throwing miners came under tear-gas fire, industry sources said.

Nearly all the 13,500 black workers at West Driefontein joined in the protests Thursday night, and about 7,000 still refused to go to work Friday morning, the mine spokesman said.

Nearly 3,000 later obeyed a management order to return to the mines, according to the spokesman, who declined to be named under company policy.

Police said the Buffelsfontein and Stilfontein mines, also part of a gold belt that stretches from 40 to 110 miles southwest of Johannesburg, were quiet Friday, but the situation remained tense.

About 75 men described as strike leaders have been arrested at one mine, and more than 200 fired from their jobs at another, according to police and mine officials.

The last major mine violence occurred in August 1981, when five mines were involved.

Police Brig. J. Du Preez said the striking miners appeared dissatisfied with a wage increase that went into effect this week, and recent fatal accidents in the mines also were believed to be a factor in the unrest.

According to a spokesman for the South African Chamber of Mines, blacks who work underground are generally classified as unskilled workers and paid an average of $216 per month. White mine workers, who hold skilled jobs, average $1,080 per month.

In recent years, mine owners have been raising black wages at slightly higher rates than white wages in an effort to reduce that gap. The white miners' union was offered a 9 percent raise at the same time the blacks received 11 percent. South Africa's inflation rate is 15 percent.

The white union rejected the offer and its leaders met in Johannesburg Friday to discuss a strike. Black miners do not have full union rights, but some black miners met mine management officials on Friday to discuss their grievances.

At the mines, most workers are black migrant men who are drawn from other parts of South Africa or neighboring countries by comparatively high mine wages. They live, without families, in dormitory buildings.

FCC may be forced to make decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two congressmen reviewing administration plans for a radio broadcast to Cuba have reached a tentative compromise that could force the Federal Communications Commission to decide the matter.

Rep. Tim Writh, D-Colo., chairman of the House communications subcommittee, and Rep. Dante B. Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the international operations subcommittee, reportedly agreed on the FCC compromise last week as a way of resolving a dispute over what frequency will be assigned to the station, which the administration wants to build in the Florida Keys.

Assistant Secretary of State Thomas O. Enders says the station will "give Cubans the means they now lack to know what kind of a society has been imposed on them."

The proposed compromise, first disclosed by sources who demanded anonymity, was confirmed Friday by Bruce Yannette, a policy analyst for Wirth's subcommittee. If Congress decides to approve construction, Yannette said, the compromise would direct the FCC "to determine by rule an appropriate frequency for radio broadcasting to Cuba under this act . . ."

There is opposition to the station, which has been dubbed "Radio Marti," in honor of a former Cuban freedom hero. On Thursday, Sen. Chris Dodd, D-Conn., called the idea "juvenile."

Choice of a frequency has been a major sticking point. The administration wants to use an AM frequency, 1040 kilohertz, instead of a short-wave frequency, to assure wide-spread reception. But American broadcasters fear Cuban retaliation such as jamming or construction of a high-powered Cuban station on the same frequency.

A station could cut the range of other American stations using the 1040 frequency, chiefly WHO-AM in Des Moines, Iowa, where President Reagan once worked as a sports announcer.

Yannette conceded Friday the compromise could fall apart since the State Department is expected to oppose it.

According to Yannette, the compromise is to be introduced July 13 in the House Energy and Commerce Committee. Fascell's panel has authorized $10 million for construction of the station and refused to foreclose use of the AM band.

But Wirth's subcommittee has voted to recommend that the station be barred from operating on the AM band.

The State Department is said to oppose the idea of letting the FCC select a frequency because of the substantial delays that may arise from the FCC following its regular procedures. In addition, a FCC decision could be appealed to the courts.

Parties oppose siege declared in Guatemala

By ALFONSO ANZUETO
Associated Press Writer

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Two political parties criticized the nationwide state of siege Friday as an unnecessarily tough weapon in the Guatemalan army's offensive against leftist guerrillas. A third party supported it.

Politicians said President Efrain Rios Montt did not seek prior approval for the emergency measure from any of the four parties invited to join his military regime's Council of State.

The state of siege, imposed Thursday and renewable every 30 days, empowers the armed forces to search and arrest without court warrant and to execute rebels by firing squad after military trials.

"The consequence of this measure will be the government's absolute responsibility," Christian Democrat leader Vinicio Cerezo said. Army abuse of its widened powers, he said, "will create a climate of fear and instability throughout the country."

Cerezo said his left-of-center party, sidelined by a ban on all political activity, favors "a democratic opening as the way to diminish subversion or make it go away."

The right-wing National Liberation Movement also opposed the measure. It had proposed limited martial law, effective only in rural areas where the estimated 6,000 guerrillas are strong.

"We do not agree with a state of siege in the entire territory because it will affect the normal development of the country," said Otto Fernandez, a movement leader.

An official of the centrist National Renovation Party, Edmund Mullet Lessiur, supported the state of siege, saying he had assurances it would not be used against political parties.

Although Rios Montt has outlawed political activity and put off elections for at least 30 months, parties do hold informal gatherings and four of them have nominated representatives on the advisory Council of State, to be convened this month.

The fourth party, the right-wing Authentic Nationalist Center, has not taken a position on the state of siege.

All four parties accused the previous military regime of Gen. Fernando Romeo Lucas Garcia of rigging the March 8 presidential election in favor of his defense minister, Gen. Anibal Guevara. All supported the March 23 coup that brought Rios Montt, a retired army general, to power at the head of a three-man junta pledged to end corruption and abuse of human rights.

Rios Montt, who has since dismissed the two other junta members and assumed presidential powers, gave leftist guerrillas 30 days to surrender under an amnesty program before declaring the state of siege. He then ordered the 17,000-man army to launch "a no-holds-barred war against subversion."

About 300 people a month are killed in Guatemala as a result of political violence.

Polish government raises many prices

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The martial law government announced price hikes on vodka, wine, coffee, tea, bandages and train tickets Friday — but pledged to give Polish pockets a reprieve for the rest of the year.

The deputy minister of prices, Wojciech Prus, told the official PAP news agency that increases taking effect Monday would close the cycle that has sent the prices of most food and consumer items soaring 300 to 400 percent.

Vodka, wine, coffee and tea will be more expensive starting next week, but PAP did not say when or how much the price of bandages and train tickets would go up.

Many of the affected items are hard to find come by and the increases are designed to curb consumer demand. Coffee is only available on ration cards, and tea vanished from shelves some time ago.

Since imposing martial law Dec. 13, the government has raised prices in an attempt to bring consumer costs in line with production costs. Consumer costs had been frozen for a decade.

Price hikes led to bloody riots in 1970 and 1976 and strikes two summers ago that spawned Solidarity, the only independent labor federation in the Soviet bloc.

The trade union, which fought last year for all price increases to be approved by the public, has been suspended under martial law and many of its leaders have been interned.

Some observers believe this year's price hikes would have been impossible to enforce without martial law.

PAP said the price of vodka bought beyond the official ration would increase by an average of 40 percent in an apparent first step toward ending the rationing of Poland's most popular alcohol.

Poles currently are alotted a little more than a pint of vodka per month on ration coupons.

The increase raises the price of clear vodka from the equivalent of $4.12 to $6.25 for a bottle slightly larger than a pint.

Prices for domestic wines will increase by 20 percent and foreign wines will go up by 10 percent, PAP said.

Coffee will increase from the equivalent of 11 cents to 16 cents for about 1.8 ounces, PAP said.

Clinics told aid continues if regulations observed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Family planning clinics are being told they will continue to receive federal aid only if they agree to follow regulations, including a proposal requiring that parents be notified of birth control prescriptions for minors.

Russell Mack, a spokesman for the Department of Health and Human Services, said Friday the memo was sent by regional health administrators to family planning clinics receiving federal grants.

Mack termed the memo a clarification, saying it merely reminds recipients of federal aid that they are bound by the federal regulations written for the program.

He noted that the parental notification rule is not in effect, and the memo thus does not affect current operations of the clinics.

"It doesn't change anything," Mack said. He said the memo was sent "to clarify that HHS regulations will apply to them if they accept the grants."

Bill Gilmartin, legislative representative for the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, said his initial reading of the memo also would indicate it has no immediate impact on clinics.

However, Gilmartin said Planned Parenthood would have no official comment on the memo until it had been studied more closely.

Gilmartin said the memo apparently went to 67 clinics, mostly state-run facilities in the southeast, whose grants are up for renewal this month.

He said he anticipates similar memos will be sent to the remainder of the 230 clinics that receive federal aid as their grants expire.

Mack said he could not confirm the number or location of clinics receiving the memos.

NAACP celebrates court decision

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The NAACP ended its convention on a jubilant note Friday after a U.S. Supreme Court decision freed the organization from a $1.25 million judgment stemming from a 1960s boycott against white-owned businesses.

Delegates to the civil rights group's 73rd annual meeting burst into cheers when word came of the decision in favor of the NAACP and against merchants in Port Gibson, Miss., who had brought the suit. The Mississippi delegation led a parade around the convention hall, singing "We Shall Not Be oved."

"This is a momentous moment," said general counsel Thomas Atkins.

Earlier, the Rev. Emmett Burns, Mississippi field director for the NAACP from 1972 to 1979, said the decision "frees us up. We know we can protest peacefully and our First Amendment rights are going to be protected. We can take action aginst banks, stores and other institutions that discriminate as long as we do it peacefully."

Margaret Bush Wilson, board chairwoman for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the judgment also would help the civil rights group's financial standing. Some $1.65 million was raised in the event that the case went against the NAACP.

"What's now in the banks around the country in certificates of deposit is free and clear," she added.

During the final session, Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., delivered a stern political lecture to the delegates.

Weicker, a consistent ally of the civil rights movement who led a filibuster to try to block anti-busing legislation last summer, advised the NAACP to look beyond party labels.

He said "the general hunkering down on civil rights is not, strictly speaking, a Reagan administration phenomenon or even a Republican phenomenon" but a bipartisan one.

"As a Democratic senator and party leader, Ted Kennedy has every right to articulate his disdain for this administration's record on minorities," Weicker said. "I have had plenty to say on that subject myself. But the White House is only part of the story."

He said Democrats were nearly equally split over whether to oppose or support his unsuccessful filibuster.

"If you think you can count on the Democrats in Congress to save your backsides on these issues any more than they did on busing, you're selling yourselves short," he said.

"Now that the Voting Rights Act extension is on the books, where it belongs, we can expect no more civil rights victories in the Congress. I have no chance of winning on your behalf in this session. The best I can do is hold the line," he added.

Meanwhile, the NAACP joined the Edison Electric Institute and the American Gas Association in drawing an agreement designed to lead to new employment opportunities for blacks in the energy and utility fields.

The agreement says the industry will establish a purchasing program to buy more goods and services from minority companies, find blacks to serve on boards of directors, try to move blacks into middle and senior management jobs and adjust philanthropic contributions to assure the support of worthy black causes.

Local NAACP chapters would have to negotiate with their electric and gas companies to implement the pact.

The Supreme Court case grew out of protests and a series of boycotts against Port Gibson, Miss., merchants in 1966. At the time, blacks represented 76 percent of the population in the town and in surrounding Claiborne County, but the NAACP contended they were not hired as clerks or secretaries in the stores or treated with respect.

The NAACP and individual defendants named in the suit, which claimed that the merchants were being deprived of trade, lost at the local and state court level. The state court set a $1.25 million damage judgment against the NAACP and required that 125 percent of the judgment, $1.6 million, be posted as a condition for allowing the group to appeal.

A federal judge set aside the bonding requirements and the case moved on to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Supreme Court tightens rules on death penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Friday struck down the death penalty for "non-triggerman" criminals who did not intend to take part in a killing but whose crimes resulted in death.

The sharply divided court ruled that the imposition of death under such circumstances violates the Constitution's ban on "cruel and unusual punishment."

The 5-4 decision is a major victory for death penalty opponents, even though it will directly affect only a fraction of the some 1,000 inmates now on the nation's death rows.

Just five years ago, the high court struck down the death penalty for rapists. It since has been tightening the circumstances in which death can be imposed on killers.

In overturning the death penalty imposed on Florida death row inmate Earl Enmund for participation in a robbery during which an elderly couple was slain, Justice Byron R. White wrote Friday:

"Putting Enmund to death to avenge two killings that he did not commit and had no intention of committing or causing does not measurably contribute to the retributive end of ensuring that the criminal gets his just deserts."

Instead, White said states have to show at least that defendants like Enmund "intended or contemplated that life would be taken."

Enmund said he helped plan the robbery of Thomas and Eunice Kersey's home near Wauchula, Fla., in April 1975 but did not know that his accomplices would gun down the couple.

Mrs. Kersey, 74, was shot six times. Her husband, 86, was shot three times.

Trial testimony indicated that Enmund was not in the Kersey home when the killings occurred, but was waiting in a get-away car.

Most of White's opinion, because of the way state death penalty statutes are fashioned, was devoted to so-called "non-triggerman" criminals who took part in a robbery.

However, the opinion strongly indicates that it would be applicable to all non-triggerman defendants in "felony murder" cases — for example those who take part in a rape or kidnapping during which someone else kills the victim.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor strongly disagreed with the decision.

"I dissent from this holding not only because I believe that it is not supported by the analysis in our previous cases, but also because today's holding interferes with state criteria for assessing legal guilt by recasting intent as a matter of federal law," she wrote.

For Mrs. O'Connor, who joined the court last September, it was her first written opinion directly facing the question of the constitutionality of the death penalty.

Mrs. O'Connor said, however, she thinks Enmund deserved a resentencing anyway to conform to procedural requirements the court has set down in other cases.

The Flordia Supreme Court rejected Enmund's appeal, ruling that the Constitution does not prevent imposition of the death penalty just because the evidence does not show that the criminal defendant intended to kill anyone.

The nation's highest court overturned that ruling and ordered a resentencing for Enmund.

"For the purposes of imposing the death penalty, Enmund's criminal culpability must be limited to his participation in the robbery, and his punishment must be tailored to his personal responsibility and moral guilt," White said.

Major rulings released on last day of court's term

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here, at a glance, are highlights of Supreme Court actions Friday, the last day of the court's 1981-82 term:

KIDDIE PORN

The court, carving out a new exception to the First Amendment guarantees of free speech and free expression, ruled 9-0 that states may ban virtually all "kiddie pornography."

The court overturned a New York Supreme Court ruling that had struck down as unconstitutional a law making it a crime to "promote" sexual performances by children.

The Constitution's First Amendment guarantees that government will not interfere with freedom of speech, but that protection is not absolute.

In 1973 the court ruled that materials are legally obscene when the average person, applying community standards, would find them to "appeal to the prurient interest in sex, which portray sexual conduct in a patently offensive way, and which, when taken as a whole, do not have serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value."

But today's decision, written by Justice Byron R. White, allows states to ban even non-obscene materials when they portray sexual conduct by children.

"The Miller standard, like all general definitions of what may be banned as obscene, does not reflect the state's particular and more compelling interest in prosecuting those who promote the sexual exploitation of children," White said.

The case is New York vs. Ferber, 81-55.

NAACP

The justices overturned, 8-0, a lower court ruling that said the NAACP had to reimburse merchants for losses sustained during the boycott of white-owned businesses in Port Gibson, Miss., during the civil rights struggles of the 1960s. The court left open the possibility, however, that individual boycotters could be held liable for monetary damages stemming from acts of violence.

Justice John Paul Stevens wrote for the court, "While the state legitimately may impose damages for the consequences of violent conduct, it may not award compensation for the consequences of non-violent protected activity."

The case is NAACP vs. Claiborne Hardware Co., 81-202.

MURDER CONVICTIONS

The court said that states may not sentence to death people who were involved in robberies resulting in deaths but who never intended that anyone be killed. Such punishment, the court ruled 5-4, violates the constitutional ban on cruel and unusual punishment.

The court, overturning the Florida death penalty imposed on Earl Enmund, said his "culpability must be limited to his participation in the robbery and his punishment must be tailored to his personal responsibility and moral guilt," White wrote for the court.

The case is Enmund vs. Florida, 81-5321.

WATER RIGHTS

The court said, 7-2, that states do not have unlimited powers to ban the shipment or diversion of water to other states. In a decision with potentially enormous impact for western and midwestern states trying to manage scarce water resources, the justices struck down a key portion of a Nebraska law imposing such a ban.

"Although (federal law and other actions by Congress) demonstrate Congress' deference to state water law, they do not indicate that Congress wished to remove federal constitutional constraints on such state laws," Stevens wrote.

"Neither the fact that Congress has chosen not to create a federal water law to govern water rights involved in federal projects, nor the fact that Congress has been willing to let the states settle their differences over water rights through mutual agreement constitutes persuasive evidence that Congress consented to the unilateral imposition of unreasonable burdens on commerce," he said.

The case is Sporhase vs. Nebraska, 81-613.

Riding the river

By EARL GUSTKEY
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

KERNVILLE, Calif. — In the spring of 1981, a busload of white-water river riders was being driven to its staging area near the Forks of the Kern River.

It was one of the first commercial trips on that part of the Kern.

One of the passengers turned to one of the guides and asked: "Is it true there are 80 rapids on the section of the Kern we'll go over?"

"No," the guide replied, "there's just one."

One morning last month outfitter Chuck Richards met 10 passengers who had paid $395 each for a trip downriver from the Forks of the Kern. He held up some sheets of paper and deadpanned:

"OK, folks, these forms you have to sign indicate you all understand that death will be the probable result of this trip, or, at the very least, dismemberment."

And when the riders learned a Los Angeles Times reporter and photographer were coming along, one came up with more tongue-in-cheek humor, saying: "We haven't even started and it looks like 50-50 whether we'll make the sports page or the obituary page."

The Forks of the Kern. For white-water river enthusiasts, it's one of the newest rides in the West. This is the second year the Forest Service has issued permits for outfitters to book trips down an 18-mile section of the upper Kern from the Forks (where the Little Kern River joins the Kern) to the Johnsondale Bridge.

TO OUTFITTERS, it's known simply as The Forks trip. It's a run that's wild, cold, loud, fast, rough and deliciously scary. Compared to other Western raft rides, enthusiasts say, this one's distinctive feature is its almost continuous rapids.

From the Forks to the Johnsondale Bridge, the river descends almost excatly 1,000 feet. Translation: almost constant white water.

The Kern, which the Indians called Po-sun-la, more than a century after Capt. John C. Fremont renamed the river for his cartographer, Lt. Edward M. Kern, the river remains unique in Southern California.

Chuck Richards, the man at the oars of the 15-foot rubber boat, had just taken three white-knuckled passengers over a three-foot drop in the river and into a five-foot-deep trough of roaring, swirling water.

Then, after the hole, a "haystack" (an upward flowing, almost fountain-like boil of water, often caused by boulders beneath falls) tossed the boat's bow sharply upward, nearly knocking the passengers off their seats.

The icy spray on faces and hands shocked the riders, clad in surfing wet suits and life jackets. Richards, shouting with the glee of having just ridden the first rapid of the trip, rowed the boatinto a relatively quiet pool, beneath a granite cliff on the Kern's west shore.

He watched his guides bring three more boats downstream. An hour into the trip, the riders were in a wilderness unknown to even the most intrepid backpackers. Long stretches of the upper Kern have no nearby trails.

FROM THIS point on, Richards' party of 14 (including guides), covered nearly 10 miles of river without spotting so much as a speck of litter.

From the calm of the eddy, Richards watched the final boat bounce, dip, crash, wobble and splash through the rapids, its passengers yelling obligatory rodeo-type shuts while madly bailing with plastic buckets.

Richards, shouting at the passengers, pointed downstream and shouted: "OK, it's like this the rest of the way...are you ready?"

"YEAH!"

Man overboard. About three miles south of the Forks, the guides rowed the boats into an eddy to show the riders Freeman Creek Falls.

Norm Harkin nimbly leaped out of his boat to tie a line to a tree. Alas, the water proved to be about eight feet deep. As the boat drifted slowly back into the churning current, Harkin executed what would be termed in camp that night the first-ever two-handed, reverse grab onto a boat in Upper Kern history.

As oarsman Steve Jones hauled his shivering passenger back aboard, there were cheers all around.

Upper Kern rafters see about half-a-dozen memorable waterfalls.

FREEMAN CREEK Falls are heard before they're seen. Its water thunders down a high, narrow gorge from several thousand feet above, sending icy mist billowing over a 30-foot-wide pool at its base.

First night's campsite. Across the river, on the west side, Needlerock Creek Falls cascaded nosily into the Kern in two 50-foot falls. It was difficult to tell which made the most noise, the Kern or the falls.

After changing from wet suits to dry clothes, the rafters gathered around a campfire and watched the guides cook steak dinners.

"Is it true," one rafter asked, "that your whole life passes by before your eyes when you go in (the river)? If it does, you must've gotten up to your early teens."

"Try 38," Harkin cracked.

A cold first morning. The awakening aroma: sizzling bacon and eggs.

Over breakfast, Mike Matlaff compared his Kern trip to a ride last summer down Northern California's American River:

"I CAN'T believe the solitude here, it really is a wilderness experience. On the American, we got into jams of boats that looked like a boat show. We might've seen a thousand rafts in the 15 miles we rode. We're almost halfway done now and haven't seen another human being."

Twenty minutes into the second day's run, Richards led the four boats into The Bend, where the river makes a 90-degree right turn. At the turn a 200-foot granite wall rises out of the Kern and the current carried the boats toward it.

Richards turned on the horror humor, screaming at his passengers: "The Wall! We're going into the wall! We're not going to make it!"

His timing was impeccable. The current turned the boats away with a yard to spare. Richards nearly collapsed with laughter at his white-faced passengers.

The first sign of civilization was Durwood where the river travelers tied up, looked around at the mining camp's six cabins, and continued southward.

The next adventure: Rolling Thunder Rapids. More haystacks, deep holes, "Yeeee...HAWS!" and the never-ending bailing.

Second night's camp. It was beneath an egg-shaped hunk of granite, hundreds of feet high. In the late afternoon, near the river, Richards, almost totally exhausted, feel asleep on a flat, sun-warmed rock.

IT WAS A quiet camp. Exhaustion had set in. Some of the riders bantered with the guides over which is more exhausting — manning oars all day or bailing several hundred gallons of water.

Harkin and Matlaff fell asleep on their air mattresses before the guides even built a fire. Lucy Brown said her stomach muscles hurt from hard breathing.

Groaned the photographer: "I need a body transplant."

Into this setting of quiet and fatigue came two backpackers, a couple, walking alongside the riverside trail. They were surprised to see the boats.

"Are you taking the boats out here and carrying them out?" the girl asks.

"No," said Jay Loughrim, "we're going all the way to below the Johnsondale Bridge."

Said the girl: "Well, how are you going to get over those falls?"

Loughrin: "Falls? What falls? Hey, Chuck! What's this about falls? You didn't say anything about falls!"

Harkin: "Falls?"

Matlaff: "Falls?"

SAID MIKE Lane, one of our guides: "Oh, yeah — we forgot to tell you about Carson Falls. They're really wild. We could flip a boat or two there. In fact, we're considering having you all walk around and just the guides will take the boats over."

Third day. The Kern was still there. There's something intensely relaxing about sitting on a rock in early morning and watching a truly wild river roar by. But a mile or so downstream you know Carson Falls awaits and so the river scares you, just a bit...

First comes Confusion Rapids. And then you begin hearing the roar of Carson Falls. Then you see its mist rising ahead.

The guides agreed that skirting a big boulder on the Kern's east side appeared to be the best angle.

Half the riders elected to ride and the others selected good spectating seats just downstream. Cameras came out.

The first three guides handled the falls without incident, although Lance Coury had anxious few seconds when he lost his grip on his oars.

Richards brought Cindy Carter and Carol West in the last boat. As he glided into the falls, trouble. His boat slowed swerved into a scary sideways position...and that's how it wentover the falls.

Crash. Both passengers were knocked off their seats, to the bottom of the boat. Richards was knocked out of the boat. In a second or two, however, he pulled himself back in.

Cheers, all around.

Teamsters accept pact with UPS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The international Brotherhood of Teamsters ratified a new 37-month contract with the United Parcel Service that will apparently grant major wage concessions to the nation's largest bulk handler, it was announced Friday.

Officials at the international headquarters of the Teamsters here said the new pact, retroactive to May 1 and lasting through June 1, 1985, was approved by a membership mail ballot vote of 33,072 to 29,788 with 910 votes voided.

The settlement averts a threatened strike by the Teamsters against the UPS over a proposed contract that would strictly limit wage gains by the company's some 85,000 truck drivers and package handlers.

"It was a real squeaker," said Ken Paff, national organizer for Teamsters for a Democratic Union, a dissident group headquartered in Detroit.

"If we had had a majority (vote), we could have tried to force renegotiation, even though we didn't have a strike authorization," Paff said.

Under the Teamsters' constitution, a labor agreement can be approved by only 34 percent of the voting rank-and-file. The vote on the UPS contract showed 52.6 percent favoring the accord and 47.4 percent opposed.

The TDU sought unsuccessfully last summer to change the constitutional provision permitting a contract ratification with only a 34 percent affirmative vote by the rank-and-file.

Paff said his group is making headway in recruiting Teamster members and noted that in 1979, a UPS contract was approved by a 3 to 1 margin.

"The referendum on the United Parcel Service agreement was supervised by a neutral party and final tabulation was completed Friday morning," the union said in a statement.

Dan Buckley, a spokesman for UPS in Greenwich, Conn., said: "We're gratified that a majority of the membership has ratified the agreement."

Neither the union nor the company released details of the new labor agreement.

Union sources did say, however, that the economic terms of the new contract included a 72-cent-an-hour cost-of-living increase which had been due under the prior agreement, and was paid May 1.

The prior Teamsters contract with UPS expired April 30. But the union and management, working under the supervision of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, agreed to extend the bargaining deadline to avert a walkout.

In early May, several officials of Teamsters locals, including the two largest in New York and New Jersey, voiced outrage with the proposed contract settlement which asked union members to accept the deferred cost-of-living payment from the old contract as an "economic gain" in the new one.

Teamsters President Roy Lee Williams and secretary-treasurer Ray Schoessling were given an icy reception by some representatives of union locals who took part in a briefing session in Chicago on May 5.

Several union leaders, including Ron Carey, president of Local 804 in New York, the largest UPS Teamster affiliate with 5,000 members, complained that the new contract had been forced upon union members.

Attorney: Justice not served when client freed

DALLAS (AP) — The lawyer who for five years defended a brain-damaged teen-ager accused of violent sex crimes said Friday justice was not served when his client was freed because his problems have not been solved.

Chris Nalley, 20, was released from Kaufman County Jail after state District Judge Richard Davis ruled that Nalley's 3½-year-old confession was invalid.

Davis ruled Thursday that Nalley was not mentally competent to consent to the interview in which he confessed to Terrell police, and that the confession was not given voluntarily.

Nalley had been accused of murder in the Nov. 4, 1978 strangulation death of Gary Wayne Adams, 13, of Grand Prairie, while both were in an unsupervised ward at the Terrell State Hospital.

Nalley had been committed to the state hospital after being accused of sexually assaulting a 6-year-old Dallas girl in a church elevator. He also had been implicated in the strangulation of a 7-year-old Oak Cliff girl, according to court records.

Adams, who had been sexually molested, was strangled with a bicycle chain. His body was found under Nalley's bed. In his confession, Nalley told authorities he strangled Adams after the younger boy made homosexual advances.

Two grand juries indicted Nalley in the Adams slaying, but he never stood trial because on both occasions he was ruled mentally incompetent.

His attorney, Tom McCorkle, said Nalley's case made him "sad" when he first learned of it five years ago, and "then I got mad, and finally just plain outraged."

"I'm tired," McCorkle said. "I've been representing this boy since early 1977. . . . I have never seen justice done. I can't say it's been done in this case because nothing has been solved.

"His mental condition hasn't changed since he was committed to Terrell. He has no funds, and no family except his sister. We hope he'll be able to work, but he can't read or write, he has no education, no training of any kind, and it's been five years since he's been in society."

McCorkle said Nalley was "horribly abused" as a small boy, beaten repeatedly and sexually violated.

Texans lead ballet awards

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Texas dancers dominated the top awards at the International Ballet Competition on Friday as Janie Parker, a soloist with the Houston Ballet, won the gold medal in the women's senior division.

No gold medals were awarded in the junior or senior men's divisions.

Two men from the Houston Ballet, William Pizzuto and Li Cunxin, won silver medals in the senior men's division. Mark Lanham, of Ballet El Paso, in El Paso, Texas, was awarded the bronze in the senior men's division.

Miss Parker became the third American to win the gold since the international competitions began in 1964.

"I feel like it's dream," said Miss Parker, who grew up in Atlanta. "I wish someone would pinch me to wake me up."

Gina Gail Hyatt of Munich, West Germany, was the only gold medal winner in the junior division.

Kathy Thibodeaux, the only competitor from Jackson, won a silver medal in the women's senior division. Senior American women winning bronze medals were Carla Stallings of the American Ballet Theater in New York and Rachel Beard of the Houston Ballet.

In the junior women's division, the youngest dancer, 13½-year-old Katherine Healy, won a silver medal. Brigitte Martin of Toronto won the bronze.

The gold medal carries a $7,500 cash prize in the senior division and a $2,000 dividend in the junior class.

Wang Qifeng of Shanghai, China, who was unable to compete after her partner, Lin Jianwei, left the competition to apply for a U.S. residency permit, was cited for her outstanding performance.

The awards presentation was scheduled for Friday night.

Li, who danced in China before coming to Houston, said he was "very happy . . . I especially feel I should thank my techers in Peking who have been helping me and looking after me since I was a little boy, and Mr. Ben Stevenson of the Houston Ballet."

Miss Hyatt wept and kissed her coach, Konstanze Vernon.

Past American gold medal winners were Amanda McKerrow of the American Ballet Theatre, who won in Moscow in 1981, and Fernando Bujones of the American Ballet Theatre, who won when the competition was held in Varna, Bulgaria, in 1974.

The competition rotates among Moscow, Varna, Jackson and Tokyo.

Chinese dancer to make debut next month

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A dance teacher who helped a Chinese ballet dancer defect says the man will make his American professional debut here next month.

William Martin-Viscount,40, has offered his former student Lin Jianwei, 24, a job in his Southwest Ballet Company here. Lin is awaiting approval of his application to stay in the United States permanently. He has asked for a "green card" so he can legally work in this country.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization officials say action on the application could come within 60 days. Lin will be allowed to stay in the U.S. while his application is processed.

Lin did not ask for political asylum, authorities said.

Lin slipped away from the International Ballet Competition at Milsaps College in Jackson, Miss., leaving his partner stranded after the Monday morning session.

Martin-Viscount, the first American invited to produce a Western ballet in Peking after the Cultural Revolution, said that he met Lin in October 1981, when he coached the 170-member Shanghai Ballet.

"At that time, he had talked about his desire to dance in the United States — a great many dancers in foreign countries do," Martin-Viscount said. "But I should have known a year ago that he planned to do what he could to make this dream come true."

Lin told Immigration and Naturalization Service officials that he could reach his full potential as a dancer "only in the United States," according to INS district director William J. Chambers of Dallas.

Martin-Viscount said that he has cast Lin in an Aug. 13 performance of "Le Corsaire" at the Scott Theater in Fort Worth, with Susan Clark of the American Ballet Theater and Atlanta Ballet as his partner.

The next night, Lin will dance the role of Albrecht in "Giselle" with Shawn Stevens of the New York City Ballet, Martin-Viscount said.

Eyewitnesses tell Falklands story

LONDON (AP) — In the first uncensored eyewitness accounts by British journalists of the recapture of the Falklands, two correspondents wrote Friday that British troops on the islands sometimes shot each other and Argentine jets killed 50 men who were watching films while waiting to leave a landing ship.

The reports by Bob McGowan of the Daily Express and Gareth Parry of The Guardian, who were with the British South Atlantic task force, also said publicity in London about unexploded bombs led the Argentines to correct their faulty fuses.

They said that in some cases the Argentines were better armed, clothed and fed than the British.

McGowan said paratroopers aboard the ships that Britain sent to the South Atlantic following Argentina's April 2 invasion of the Falkland Islands were "psyched up to kill."

He said one lecturer aboard the aircraft carrier Invincible told the soldiers: "Any silly sod who thinks it is better to take prisoners rather than shoot the Argies is a dummy. Shoot them."

McGowan reported that before the British invasion began, "The acceptable figure of British dead was set at around 1,000."

The Defense Ministry has said 256 British soldiers were killed in the 74-day undeclared war, while the total of Argentine dead in the conflict is estimated here at between 700 and 1,000. Argentina has acknowledged 654 dead or missing.

McGowan said that after the British landing May 21 at Port San Carlos, British paratroops in the hills saw unidentified forces moving in on British positions. It was believed to be the start of an Argentine counter attack.

"British mortars rained down on the interlopers and C company poured fire at them. I was told that four men were hit, two with brain injuries, before the frightening error was realized. The interlopers were other men of C company," McGowan wrote.

In another incident, he said, units of the Special Air Service and the Parachute Regiment's Special Boat Service, who were operating independently in the hills at night, thought they had run into the enemy and exchanged fire, killing one SBS man.

McGowan said that in the battle for Goose Green on May 28-29, British paratroopers ran out of 7.62-mm ammunition and took the same caliber rifle magazines from dead Argentines.

He added that while British troops had Arctic rations that needed more water to offset dehydration than they usually had, the Argentines had fresh fruit, corned beef, bread and soup. He also reported that some Argentine clothing was better than British equipment.

The troop landing ship Sir Galahad arrived June 8 at Bluff Cove to land Welsh Guardsmen without sufficient protection because no Rapier anti-aircraft missiles had been put ashore, McGowan said.

Khomeini representative killed in Bahrain bombing

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An assassin carrying explosives killed the clergyman representative of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in the central Iranian province of Yezd on Friday, Iran's official news agency reported.

The Islamic Republic News Agency said the clergyman, identified only as Ayatollah Sadduqi, was "martyred" at 1:15 p.m. as he delivered a Friday sabbath sermon. An ayatollah is the highest rank among Iran's Shiite Moslem clergy.

It blamed the slaying on the leftist Mujahedeen Khalq, which has been waging an underground war against Khomeini's revolutionary, clergy-dominated government. But it gave no further details of the assassination, apparently carried out when the assailant set off his explosives.

The assassination may have marked the opening of a fresh round of attacks by the Mujahedeen Khalq, who are blamed for the slayings of more than 1,000 officials of the revolutionary government in the past year.

Iranian authorities said in February they had "dealt a mortal blow" to the group, when its leader inside Iran, Musa Khiyabani, and a number of his top aides were killed by government troops. The overall Mujahedeen Khalq leader, Massoud Rajavi, is in exile in Paris.

Friday's killing came three days after the first anniversary of a Tehran bombing, blamed on the Mujahedeen, in which 73 leading officials of the Khomeini government were killed.

Last week the Iranian news media said that an undisclosed number of military men had been arrested for plotting to overthrow Khomeini and proclaim a military government.

Ocean Ranger victims file federal suits

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Four suits seeking $26 million in damages were filed Friday in federal court here by the families of four Canadian crewmen killed when the Ocean Ranger drilling platform sank in the North Atlantic.

A total of 31 suits seeking $226 million have been filed thus far in Beaumont against the operators of the drilling platform that sank off the coast of Newfoundland in February.

Attorneys filed the suits Friday on behalf of the families of Gregory Cornelius Caines, 29, Arthur W. Dagg, 37, Carl William Fry, 26, and Michael Maurice, 32. All four were from Newfoundland.

The suits were filed against the New Orleans-based Ocean Drilling and Exploration Co., two of its subsidiaries, Mobil Oil Co. and its Canadian subsidiary.

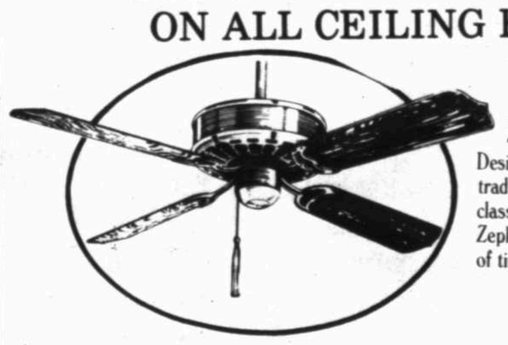

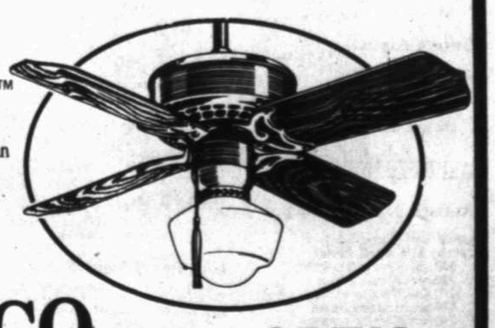

Eighty-four crewman died when the platform sank during a winter storm. Other suits in connection with the accident have been filed in federal courts in New Orleans and South Carolina, attorneys said.

Look closely at a so-called perfect rose! Scan the petals; you will find they are far from perfect. But uneven shapes, blemishes or misshapen stems will not spoil the delicate color, rich fragrance and sheer beauty of the total flower.

How clearly a rose illustrates that nothing in life is truly perfect! But, rather than discourage us, this should give us fresh confidence and strength.

God did not make the rose perfect—nor did He make us perfect. Yet He thinks none the less of us for our faults and blemishes. In His eyes we always have another chance. But it is up to us to take it.

Start by going to the church of your choice this week!

Fed's quarterly targets unchanged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve's policy-making group decided May 18 to keep the short-term target for growth in the nation's money supply unchanged through June, according to minutes of the meeting released Friday.

The group, known as the Federal Open Market Committee, voted to try to maintain a 3 percent annual growth rate during the second quarter for the basic money supply known as M1 — cash and deposits in checking accounts. That growth rate for the April to June period had been established at the committee's March 30 meeting.

The quarterly money-growth targets are part of the central bank's strategy for lowering inflation by limiting the growth of M1 for all of 1982 to a range of 2.5 percent to 5.5 percent.

For the 13 weeks ended June 23 — a period that almost coincides with the second quarter — M1 grew at an annual rate of 4.0 percent, according to the weekly money supply figures released Friday by the Federal Reserve Bank in New York. M1 fell for the second week in a row, and private economists said that meant M1 growth since the first of the year had fallen below 5.5 percent for the first time in 1982.

The latest report showed M1 fell $2.2 billion to a seasonally adjusted $449.9 billion, down from a revised $452.1 billion in the previous week.

M1 had been growing faster than 5.5 percent throughout most of the year, but Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker said the trend was just temporary, resulting mainly from increased deposits in interest-bearing checking accounts by people who want to keep money readily available because of uncertainty about the economy.

Critics contend the Fed has been unable to control the money supply and point to the fact that from October to January, M1 grew at an annual rate of about 15 percent.

At its May meeting, the committee also voted to keep the second-quarter growth target for M2, which includes M1 plus savings accounts and money-market mutual funds, unchanged at an annual rate of 8 percent. That is within the committee's overall 1982 target range of 6 percent to 9 percent growth for M2.

The committee said its action, approved by a vote of 11-1, "seeks to foster monetary and financial conditions that will help to reduce inflation (and) promote a resumption of growth in output on a sustainable basis."

The lone dissenter was Federal Reserve Board Governor Nancy Teeters, who favored somewhat faster growth in the money supply in the hope of easing the financial pressures on businesses, bringing about lower interest rates and enhancing prospects for a significant economic recovery with declining unemployment.

The committee met earlier this week to consider whether to revise its overall money growth targets for 1982, but results of that meeting will not be disclosed until Volcker briefs Congress later this month on monetary policy for the rest of this year and preliminary goals for 1983.

Many members of Congress, business executives and private economists want faster growth in the money supply. They contend that the tight-money policy the bank is pursuing has lowered inflation at the expense of very high interest rates, a severe recession and mounting unemployment.

However, the bank, with President Reagan's backing, contends that an easier money policy will only send interest rates higher ultimately because lenders believe faster money growth increases the prospect of higher inflation in the future and will demand higher rates to compensate for the expected fall in purchasing power of the money they lend.

The Fed has several tools to control the money supply, but the most powerful is the one under the committee's control, the purchase or sale of government bonds in the open market. A sale of bonds by the Fed draws money from bank accounts, reducing the funds available for lending by banks, and a purchase operates in reverse.

Orioles pitcher, wife expecting test-tube baby soon

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Orioles pitcher Mike Flanagan and his wife, Kathy, expect to become the parents of the nation's fourth test-tube baby, and it's due next week, a team spokesman said Friday.

Bob Brown, spokesman for the American League ballclub, said the baby of the 30-year-old 1979 Cy Young Award winner and his wife is due Tuesday.

It would be the Flanagans' first child, he said.

"She had ovary problems and two preganacies before and both times things didn't go well," Brown said. "They had a lot of trouble and then she got quite sick."

"We're expecting soon and we're both very happy about it, but I really don't want to comment beyond that," Flanagan said after he arrived at Tiger Stadium in Detroit where the Orioles were playing Friday night. "I'm sure we'll have more to say after the birth."

Brown said the "in vitro" conception was performed at the Eastern Virginia Medical College in Norfolk, Va. In the "in vitro" process, the egg is taken outside the mother's body and fertilized in a dish. The egg then is transferred to the woman's womb. Pregnancy occurs if the fertilized egg implants itself.

The process was pioneered by Drs. Patrick Steptoe and Robert Edwards of England, where the first test-tube baby was born in 1978.

"If you had seen the look on his (Flanagan's) face when he found out she was pregnant," Brown said. "It's not common for a man that young to be that anxious to have a child."

Brown said he last saw Mrs. Flanagan six weeks ago and "she just glowed. She just really glowed."

He said he had "heard nothing to indicate she's not doing well now."

"In a case like this, I guess no news is good news," Brown said.

Brown noted that Flanagan was not expected to pitch in Friday's Detroit game.

A native of Manchester, N.H., Flanagan has played with the Orioles since 1976. He is 6-6 this season.

Last month, the third test-tube baby conceived in the United States was born in Los Angeles. The first was delivered Dec. 28, 1981, to a Massachusetts couple, and the birth of the second was announced this past April.

The first two conceptions also were achieved at the Norfolk clinic, which began operating in February 1980.

The clinic is run by Drs. Howard and Georgeanna Jones of the Eastern Virginia Medical School.

The Flanagan child will be born at the Greater Baltimore Medical Center in suburban Towson, said Gary Michael, a spokesman for the hospital.

Student speaks out against military draft

CLEVELAND (AP) — Steven Gillis, a 21-year-old college student, said Friday he had not registered for the military draft and had no intention to do so.

Gillis, a student at Earlham College in Richmond, Ind., said he was taking a risk by reading a statement critical of the United States and flaunting his disobedience of Selective Service registration laws.

"Draft registration is a part of the government's present educational program of force-feeding militarism to the people and, like a temperamental and patriarchal teacher, it has resorted to beating those students who don't measure up," his statement said.

"I am not nearly as intimidated or freightened by the threats of punishment for not complying with the Selective Service law as I am with the possible consequences with complying with it," Gillis added.

If charged and convicted of failing to register, he could be sentenced to five years in prison and fined up to $10,000. The Selective Service System said 527,000 men have not complied with draft registration.

On Wednesday, Benjamin H. Sasway, 21, of Vista, Calif., was indicted by a federal grand jury in San Diego for failing to register for the draft. Sasway is a political science and philosophy student at Humboldt State University.

Gillis' father, Phillip, a Methodist minister, stood nearby as his son made his statement, and said he has been aware of his son's feelings about draft registration for several years.

Edwards joins Hollowell Chapel

Rev. Hadley R. Edwards

The Rev. Hadley R. Edwards was appointed to Hollowell Chapel United Methodist Church, 400 S. Marshall St., at UMC's Northwest Texas Annual Conference held recently in Amarillo.

Sunday will be his first official service in Midland. A covered-dish luncheon will be served in the church's fellowship hall following the 11 a.m. service. Members are asked to bring a covered dish. Visitors are welcome.

Edwards, who grew up in Fulton, Mo., graduated from Central Methodist College at Fayette, Mo., in 1981 with a bachelor's degree in religion. While at Central Methodist College, Edwards served as student pastor for the dual congregations of St. Paul UMC at Fayette and Lewis Chapel UMC at Glascow, 12 miles north of Fayette.

Following his graduation and prior to his Midland appointment, he worked as an admissions counselor at Central Methodist College.

Edwards will continue his studies at Perkins School of Theology in Dallas this fall while serving as Hollowell's minister.

St. Luke's hosting fair

St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave., is holding a Freedom Fair Sunday.

The public is invited to attend the 10:50 service casually attired. The Freedon Fair, which includes a chicken dinner, turtle races and other games, will begin following the service.

The event will conclude with a fly over by members of the Confederate Air Force. The CAF, led by George Steding, with pilots Jim Tilson, Kermit Wilson and Foye Bonner, will fly over the church at approximately 2.

The Newspaper BIBLE

GOD GIVE US FEARLESS PREACHERS!

King Herod soon heard about Jesus, for his miracles were talked about everywhere. The king thought Jesus was John the Baptist come back to life again.

For Herod had sent soldiers to arrest and imprison John because he kept saying it was wrong for the king to marry Herodias, his brother Philip's wife. Herodias wanted John killed in revenge, but without Herod's approval she was powerless. And Herod respected John, knowing that he was a good and holy man, and so he kept him under his protection. Herod was disturbed whenever he talked with John, but even so he liked to listen to him.

Herodias' chance finally came. It was Herod's birthday and he gave a stag party for his palace aides, army officers, and the leading citizens of Galilee. Then Herodias' daughter came in and danced before them and greatly pleased them all.

"Ask me for anything you like," the king vowed, "even half of my kingdom and I will give it to you!"

She went out and consulted her mother, who told her, "Ask for John the Baptist's head."

So she hurried back to the king and told him, "I want the head of John the Baptist--right now--on a tray!"

Then the king was sorry, but he was embarrassed to break his oath in front of his guests. So he sent one of his bodyguards to the prison to cut off John's head and bring it to him. The soldier killed John in the prison, and brought back his head on a tray, and gave it to the girl and she took it to her mother. (Mark 6:14, 17-28)

Peter and Nikolai Pankratz

Reagan to watch shuttle land

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan will interrupt his 11-day vacation on Sunday to join a crowd of thousands greeting the space shuttle Columbia astronauts as they land at Edwards Air Force Base at the end of the shuttle's fourth and final test flight.

The president and his wife, Nancy, will fly by helicopter from their mountaintop ranch 20 miles from here to be on hand for the touchdown ceremonies in the Mojave Desert.

Reagan, who arrived at Rancho Del Cielo — ranch in the sky — on Thursday, spent most of Friday horseback riding and clearing brush from trails. Deputy White House Press Secretary Larry Speakes said the president also was working on the speech he will deliver Sunday.

Though the National Aeronautics and Space Administration was hoping for a presidential announcement of future space policy, Speakes said Reagan might instead deliver general remarks, though even those would include references to "our commitment to continued space exploration."

Joined by perhaps 30,000 VIP well-wishers at the 4th of July touchdown, Reagan will speak to commander Thomas K. Mattingly and pilot Henry W. Hartsfield by radio before they leave the craft.

After the toxic fumes emanating from the engine and other parts of the orbiter have been dispelled, Reagan will go out to the shuttle to greet the astronauts as they descend from the steps after a week in space.

While Mattingly and Hartsfield undergo medical testing, the president will present medals to astronauts from the Columbia's third test flight last March 22 — Marine Col. Jack R. Lousma and Air Force Col. C. Gordon Fullerton.

Then, Reagan will deliver his speech and formally authorize the second shuttle craft, the Challenger, to take off atop a modified Boeing 747 for the trip to Cape Canaveral, Fla., where it is to be prepared for its first flight next year.

Steve Studdert, head of press advance for the White House, denied Friday that the Columbia landing was delayed to give Reagan an extra hour or so of sleep. A rumor to that effect had circulated after NASA announced it would delay the landing to test the craft in the crosswinds that blow later in the morning.

"His sleep was not a factor," Studdert said. A landing is expected at 9:10 a.m. PDT.

Mattingly and Hartsfield were expected to give the president a cap they had carried into space.

Weather at the Reagan ranch on the president's first full day of vacataion in the Santa Ynez mountains was described by Speakes as "absolutely beautiful — sunny and clear.

"The big question of the visit is which horse the president will ride," Speakes joked to reporters. "Since we've been here last, the president's longtime friend and companion, Little Man, has gone to the Great Beyond."

As it turned out, Reagan chose one of four horses stabled at his ranch, Gwalianko, while his wife rode her longtime favorite, No Strings.

British officials firm

LONDON (AP) — British railway officials remained firm on their refusal to bargain with union leaders unless they call off a nationwide walkout by 25,000 engineers set to begin at midnight Saturday.

The strike would shut down the state-owned British Rail for the second time this week.

British Rail Chairman Sir Peter Parker said Friday the strike threat was "a curse put on the industry," and other railroad officials said they would try to run as much of the 11,500-mile system as possible with any employees who report for duty Sunday.

The Arbitration and Conciliation Advisory Service said it "stands ready to help now and over the weekend if there should be any development," but had no plans for further talks.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has ruled out government intervention in the dispute over flexible work schedules the railroad plans to put into effect Monday.

After nine hours of separate negotiations with the two sides Thursday, the service failed to get an agreement between British Rail and the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, the main engineers' union.

Ray Buckton, the union's general secretary, said Thursday night that if British Rail agreed to withhold the new work schedules, his side would call off the strike and seek rank-and-file approval for experiments with flexible schedules and productivity improvements of the union's own design.

British Rail rejected the offer, saying it did not guarantee union acceptance of flexible schedules. The rail company said the strike must be called off before any new proposals could be discussed.

Mondale gets good reception

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Former Vice President Walter Mondale drew a rousing reception from a Hispanic group Friday by assailing President Ronald Reagan's civil rights record and accusing the administration of creating "a government of the rich, by the rich and for the rich."

Mondale, who said later he was considering running for president in 1984, was interrupted by applause numerous times, attacking Reaganomics as "survival of the fittest" and saying the rich were prospering at the expense of low- and moderate-income people.

"What this administration is doing is comforting the comfortable and afflicting the afflicted. Lincoln once said of America ours should be a government of the people, by the people and for the people, but what we've got now is a government of the wealthy, by the wealth and for the wealthy," Mondale told about 700 delegates to the national convention of League of United Latin American Citizens.

Mondale chided Reagan and Vice President George Bush for declining invitations to attend the convention of LULAC, which claims to be the nation's oldest and largest Hispanic organization. The 53-year-old organization has 100,000 members in 43 states.

"I'm sorry that the administration didn't come here to speak to you. I don't know how you can lead a nation and ignore the feelings and the hopes of 20 million people," Mondale said.

"Whether they know it or not, and they'll find out, I believe, pretty quick, Hispanic America is the most rapidly growing portion of American life. We used to call it the sleeping giant. It isn't sleeping any more, it's just a giant and it's time that those who seek to lead this nation not only listen to, but become accountable to, this large portion of Americans who are not going to be ignored."

The Democrat charged that the Republican administration was setting back the progress made in social reform and civil rights the past 20 years by "effectively muzzling" the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, replacing members on the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights and abolishing the White House Office of Hispanic Affairs which President Jimmy Carter began.

"You'd need an FBI investigator to find a top Hispanic in a position of power," Mondale said.

At a news conference later, Mondale said President Reagan was attempting to blame current economic conditions on past administrations, which Mondale termed "an archeological alibi."

Reaganomics, he said, "has failed and now they're trying to put the monkey on somebody else's back."

Mondale also strongly supported the Equal Rights Amendment and blamed the Republican Party and Reagan for its failure to be ratified.

"In Reagan's America, there is no place for women. That ERA is going to pass. Women in America are not going to be put back in that box," he said.

Mondale was enthusiastically received at the convention in a joint appearance with San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, "Hill Street Blues" actor Rene Enriquez, Oakland Raiders coach Tom Flores, and Texas Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and other Texas Democrats.

Asked at the news conference whether he believed that he could wrest the Hispanic vote from Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who received a heavy Mexican-American vote in the 1980 Democratic presidential preference primary, Mondale replied:

"Let's wait until after '82 to answer those questions. We have a lot of important work to do in '82, and I'm obviously thinking about running for president. I'm sure the senator (Kennedy) is, too. I know this Democratic Party and proably half the people in this room are thinking about it and that's the way it should be."

Tennessee to rule on banning gambling on pinball machines

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The state Supreme Court could decide Monday whether to review a state law banning gambling on Tennessee's 14,000 pinball machines.

The pinball industry contends the law, passed in 1979, is too vague and is therefore unconstitutional.

The measure did not go into effect until Thursday because lawmakers wanted to allow time for pinball owners to phase out operations. The industry, meanwhile, tried to get the legislature to overturn its decision. When that failed, it went to court.

At issue are gambling machines, licensed by the federal government.

In Chancery Court on Wednesday, Chancellor C. Allen High refused to block enforcement of the law, but he said his ruling does not mean pinball machines have to be confiscated as illegal gambling devices. Nevertheless, many owners have decided to put their machines in storage until the case is settled.

The Court of Appeals voted Friday to send the matter to the state Supreme Court.

Los Angeles police in Canada to interview Belushi companion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police from Los Angeles were in Canada on Friday to question a woman quoted by a tabloid as saying she administered drugs to comedian John Belushi the night he died, authorities said.

"I can tell you we have two detectives in Toronto today," said police Cmdr. William Booth. "Obviously the purpose is to interview Cathy Evelyn Smith."

A renewed investigation into Belushi's death from an overdose of drugs on March 5 was ordered Tuesday after the National Enquirer published an interview with Ms. Smith.

The tabloid quoted Ms. Smith as saying she was hired by Belushi to obtain drugs, test them and assist in injecting them. She is quoted as saying she administered Belushi's last injection of heroin and cocaine in a mixture called "speedballing."

Prosecutors also asked police to talk to Enquirer reporters Tony Brenna and Larry Haley, who wrote the story, and with celebrities Robin Williams and Robert De Niro, who Ms. Smith was quoted as saying were with Belushi shortly before his death.

De Niro's spokesmen at the Ufland Agency in Beverly Hills declined to comment, and a spokesman for Williams denied the star of "Mork and Mindy" was in Belushi's bungalow at the Chateau Marmont Hotel on the night he died.

Ms. Smith's Los Angeles attorney, Robert Sheahen, said he had not been consulted about the police interview.

He said Toronto attorney Brian Greenspan is apparently representing Ms. Smith in Canada.

Greenspan's office said he was in conference and not available for comment.

Los Angeles Deputy District Attorney Mike Genelin said earlier in the week that the Enquirer article sparked the investigation.

"Certainly the article has indicated she has furnished (Belushi) with heroin," Genelin said. "When she confesses to administering the 'coup de grace' she is opening herself up to second-degree murder charges."

At the Enquirer officers in Lantana, Fla., Brenna referred all comment to editor-president Iain Calder. Calder would say only, "We've nothing to say beyond what appeared in the Enquirer."

Calder also refused to say whether the Smith interview had been taped.

The Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported last week that Ms. Smith had been paid $15,000 for the Enquirer interview. Calder has declined comment on that, too.

U.S. job market somewhat weaker

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate leveled off at 9.5 percent in June after four consecutive months of steady increases, but the government's top statistician said Friday the job market appears to "be somewhat weaker."

The overall jobless rate was the same as in May, continuing the current trend of record post-World War II levels of joblessness, with 10.4 million Americans out of work.

Without adjusting June's raw unemployment figures for the closing of schools, however, the jobless rate would have been 9.8 percent. Unemployment normally rises in June, so last month's jobless rate remained steady despite the fact that the raw figures showed 900,000 more people out of work.

The level of joblessness among adult males and teen-age blacks reached new post-war highs. And unemployment among factory workers matched the previous post-war high recorded in May 1975. Joblessness among white-collar workers was the highest since the 1975 recession.

The number of "discouraged workers" — those who give up the search for work out of frustration over a tight job market — reached 1.5 million in the second quarter, the highest in that special category since the Bureau of Labor Statistics began compiling those figures 15 years ago.

The employment report gave little cause for optimism that there will be any immediate relief from high joblessness. It confirmed, in fact, President Reagan's observation Wednesday night that unemployment "may remain stubbornly high for some time."

In earlier months, when unemployment was soaring, Reagan complained that the news media was focusing too heavily on the seasonally adjusted figures — those which are generally viewed by economists as the best indicators of job trends because they filter out seasonal fluctuations such as school closings.

Without such an adjustment in June, however, the government's report would have shown 10.8 million Americans out of work.

Reagan had urged news organizations to report both raw and adjusted figures, saying "I'm not sure we live in a seasonally adjusted world."

Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, noted in testimony to the congressional Joint Economic Committee that interpretations of job trends are sometimes difficult this time of year because of school closings and the resulting adjustment process.

"June is a month in which seasonal movements are especially large, making the over-the-month data . . . more difficult to analyze," she said.

"Although the overall unemployment rate held steady from May to June, factory employment decreased and the jobless rate for adult men rose. Thus, the labor market seems to be somewhat weaker in June than it was in May," Ms. Norwood testified.

Although the jobless rate was unchanged from May, the number of people out of work actually fell — from 10.5 million to 10.4 million, after the figures were adjusted. But a 140,000 decline in the number of people on factory payrolls offset that.

The number of "discouraged workers" rose by 160,000 from the first quarter to the second.

The bureau describes discouraged workers as people "who report that they want work but are not looking for jobs because they believe they cannot find any." Women and blacks accounted for "disproportionately large shares" of the 1.5 million discouraged workers for the April-June period, it said.

The labor force actually shrank by 475,000 last month after seasonal adjustment. The number of people holding jobs declined by 353,000 — to about 98 million after passing the 100 million mark in May — and the number of people without jobs fell by 122,000.

Taken together, those factors more than offset any further tightening of the job market that otherwise would have driven the unemployment rate up further.

The jobless rate for adult males rose three-tenths of a percentage point to 8.7 percent. Unemployment among black teen-agers spurted to 52.6 percent, and the jobless rate among factory workers reached 12.3 percent, matching the high in 1975 and white-collar unemployment reached 5 percent, the highest since a 5.3 percent figure recorded in May 1975.

The report also showed that long-term unemployment, involving people out of work for at least 15 weeks, increased substantially last month.

There was at least one hopeful sign, however.

The number of people who had to involuntarily accept part-time work for lack of anything better declined by 320,000 in June, to 5.4 million. The size of this group has been increasing sharply since the recession set in last summer.

Several private economists have said they expect joblessness to remain at or well above 9 percent through the third quarter. These same economists said they doubted that any new surge in consumer spending resulting from the tax cuts and Social Security cost-of-living increases would cause a new wave of hiring by America's businesses.

Nebraska can't block farmer's planned pumping

By The Associated Press

Delmer Moss and his father-in-law, Joy Sporhase, hope to start pumping water soon from their land in Nebraska to their grain and bean fields in Colorado after the Supreme Court ruled Friday that the state of Nebraska cannot ban such interstate pumping.

But officials in Nebraska and Colorado said the ruling was a disappointment.

The court said in a 7-2 ruling that states do not have unlimited powers to block shipment or diversion of water from one state to another.

"I'm kind of excited about it," said Moss, 50, who has been farming with his father-in-law since 1967. "We might celebrate a little . . .

"I imagine that we'll pump water again pretty soon," Moss said by telephone from his farm on Friday. "We'll have to get all the legal aspects worked out first."

Moss and Sporhase plan to use water from a 300-foot-deep well in Chase County, Neb., to irrigate their winter wheat, corn and pinto and kidney bean fields on their land in Phillips County, Colo. A portion of their 1,600 acres straddles the border.

Moss said he bought the section of land across the border in 1972. The previous owner, he said, had punmped water from the Nebraska side of the land to the Colorado side, and that he and his father-in-law continued to do so until the state of Nebraska took them to court in 1977.

In Nebraska on Friday, Gov. Charles Thone had one word when he heard of the ruling: "Ouch."

Thone said he would meet as soon as possible with his aides and state Attorney General Paul Douglas to discuss the decision.

"My immediate concern is to determine what kind of program can be enacted through law so Nebraska can legally protect its underground water resources," Thone said.

Nebraska has more underground water than any other state in the union.

Quarantines on pests may be lifted

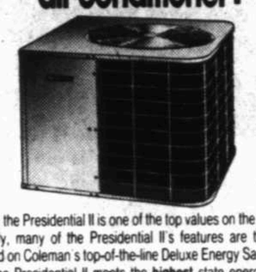

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department officials say they're considering cancellation of interstate quarantines against four pests including the gypsy moth, which caused defoliation over about 13 million acres in the Northeast last year.

Harvey Ford of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said the possible quarantine cancellations, which also involve the golden nematode, the pink bollworm and witchweed, were being announced to give state and industry officials and the public a chance to prepare for such action.

Ford said public comments will be sought before any final decision is made.

John McEnroe takes a fall during his men's singles semi-final match against Johan Kriek at Wimbledon Friday.

Lloyd defeats King; McEnroe crown wobbles

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd and John McEnroe, the defending Wimbledon champions, survived tough and difficult matches Friday, but the comeback trail ended for 38-year-old Billie Jean King.

Lloyd overcame King 7-6, 2-6, 6-3 in a classic battle of tennis tactics to reach her eighth Wimbledon final.

McEnroe's crown wobbled more than once, but he came through 4-6, 6-2, 7-5, 6-3 against hard-serving Johan Kriek of South Africa to gain the semifinals. The champion trailed in both the third and fourth sets.

But the hero of the day was unseeded Tim Mayotte, a 21-year-old professional from Springfield, Ill., who outlasted fellow American Brian Teacher 6-7, 7-6, 7-5, 3-6, 6-1 in a 3-hour, 47-minute duel.

Martina Navratilova, the No. 1 women's seed, had the day's easiest road, roaring past Bettina Bunge 6-2, 6-2.

Lloyd and Navratilova will meet in Saturday's women's final, which will be televised live on NBC-TV at 9 a.m., EDT.

The men's semifinals will pit McEnroe against Mayotte and second-seeded Jimmy Connors against Australian Mark Edmondson. The men's final is scheduled for Sunday and also will be televised live (9 a.m., EDT, NBC-TV).

LLoyd and King enthralled the Center Court crowd with 1½ hours of skillful tennis, culled from a total of more than 30 years of Wimbledon experience between them.

King, six times Wimbledon singles champion between 1966 and 1975, continued her astonishing comeback by holding her rival to one set all.

At times Billie Jean's volleying reminded the fans of her commanding net play in the '60s, when she was the undisputed best women's player in the world.

In the end, LLoyd's younger legs and coolness under pressure saw her through. But it was a tough struggle.

"I am proud of the effort I put in," King said afterwards, "but I don't like the end result."

Under gray skies, the two great stars exchanged patches of brilliance. At 2-5 in the final set, with King serving, Lloyd rifled a forehand return down the line to take a 30-40 lead and match point.

On the next point, she hit a backhand return that missed the line by perhaps two inches. That made it deuce — and suddenly it began raining heavily.

"I would not have gone for such a shot if I had known what was gong to happen," Lloyd said later. "I would simply have tried to get it back into the court."

They waited in the locker room for a half-hour before the court was fit for play again. Then Billie Jean saved two more match points and won the game to pull up to 3-5 and stay alive a little longer.

But that was the end of the magic act displayed by King at Wimbledon this year. At deuce in the next game, LLoyd passed her with a backhand, and then the champion hoisted a magnificent lob that hit on the baseline as Billie Jean, caught at the net, could only watch.

McEnroe struggled to find his touch against Kriek and drew a warning from the umpire for the third time in the current tournament.

It happened after the fifth game of the first set, when McEnroe double-faulted three times and dropped his service. He walked to the side of the court and banged the chair with his racket.

He was warned under the code of conduct rules for "abuse of racket."

At times Kriek, 24, the No. 5 seed, threatened to score an upset with his booming serves and cleverly angled volleys. He won the first set, lost the second and broke McEnroe's service early in both the third and fourth sets.

However, McEnroe pulled his game together on the big points. The South African, who frequently slipped and fell on the damp grass, virtually ended his challenge when he double-faulted to lose his serve for 3-5, McEnroe, in the fourth set. McEnroe served out at love for the match.

Kriek complained he had been made to play too many matches on Wimbledon's outer courts while McEnroe had played mostly on the Center Court.

"Of course it gives him an advantage," Kriek said. "I am the fifth seed and I jump around on the back courts."

Mayotte continued his unexpected progress. Teacher, seeded 11th, was the third seeded player he had defeated on his way to the semifinals.

Gilder survives Weiskopf charge

60's streak ends, but 71 retains Western lead

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Bob Gilder withstood a late charge by controversial veteran Tom Weiskopf Friday, shooting a 1-under-par 71 for a one-shot lead midway through the Western Open Golf Tournament.

Gilder's streak of five consecutive rounds in the 60s ended, but he still posted a 36-hole total of 135. That broke the midpoint record since the Western Open moved to Butler National in 1974.

Defending champion Ed Fiori, Bob Dickson and Greg Powers shared the previous Butler 36-hole record with 136s.

Weiskopf, who walked off the course in the midst of his second round of the 1975 Western Open, used three straight birdies, starting at 15, for a 67. The 39-year-old, a winner of $2 million in his career, took over sole possession of second place with a total of 136, 8 under over this 7,097-yard layout in suburban Chicago.

Larry Nelson, the current PGA champion playing in the same threesome with Gilder for the second straight day, matched par of 72 and was alone in third with a 138 total.

Non-winner Jim Booros and Kermit Zarley, trying a comeback at 41, were tied for fourth with 139 totals. Zarley, who quit the American circuit for more than a year, had 71 and Booros 73.

Gilder, now 28 under par for his last six rounds, said his putter was the difference in the second round.

He putted very well in shooting a course record 64 during the first round. It was much different during his second 18 holes. "Today, I didn't make a thing. But I can't complain. I'm still one shot ahead," he said.

Gilder, the winner at Westchester last week, once owned a four-shot lead midway through the second round before Weiskopf mounted his charge on the rainy day.

Gilder birdied the second, 12th, 15th and 17th holes, running his two-day total to 14 birdies on this respected course, ranked as one of the world's most difficult tests.

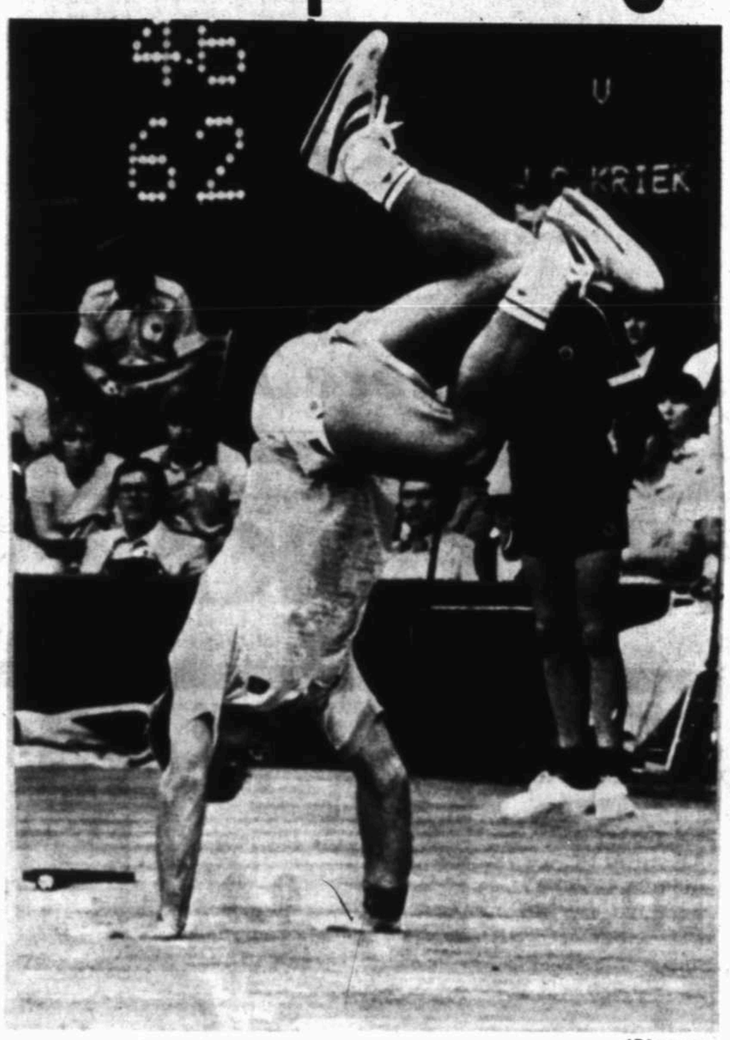

However, he bogeyed 14 and 18 for his slim lead going into Saturday's third round in the chase for the first prize of $63,000.

Even though he has 14 career victories, Weiskopf has won just once in the last 4½ years, the 1981 LaJet Classic.

This has been particiularly a stormy year for him. He withdrew from the Memorial after shooting an opening 80 and left his pro-am partners in the midst of a prelude round to the Kemper.

It took a score of 149 to survive the 36-hole cut. And it caught such names as Jim Colbert (150), Roger Maltbie (151) and Hale Irwin (152).

This year's top six money-winners, including Craig Stadler, Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus, are skipping this 79-year-old tournament, the oldest regular stop on the tour.

Muncie to seek treatment for drugs

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Running back Chuck Muncie, traded by the New Orleans Saints to the San Diego Chargers in 1980, says he plans to check into a drug detoxification center within a week, a New Orleans newspaper reported Friday.

In a copyright story, The Times-Picayune, The States-Item quoted Muncie as saying he has cut down his use of cocaine and is playing better since he moved to San Diego — but still has a problem with alcohol and marijuana.

"I think the problem is not what it was, but it is still a small problem," he told the newspaper.

Muncie also told the newspaper that he bought cocaine from Mike Strachan, a former New Orleans running back, at least twice — paying him with personal checks now in the hands of federal investigators.

Strachan was indicted by a federal grand jury in New Orleans on May 21 and reindicted June 6 on one count of conspiracy to distribute cocaine and 11 counts of distribution between February 1980 and January 1982. His trial is set for Aug. 30.

Strachan was cut by the Saints midway through the 1981 season.

The Times-Picayune, The States-Item obtained Muncie's comments in an extensive telephone interview. In an interview with The Los Angeles Times last month, Muncie did not deny using cocaine while he was with the Saints but said he had not used it since moving to San Diego.

The New Orleans report continued: Muncie admitted that he spent about $200 a week on cocaine, some of which he shared with teammates.

Muncie said he first used cocaine in his student days at the University of California at Berkeley, just before he was drafted by the Saints as their No. 1 pick in 1976.

But, Muncie said, his cocaine use grew during his pro career and affected his performance in the 1979 season.

"I was getting to the point in my career when I knew I had to do something to get it going," Muncie said. "I had to stop doing a lot of things.

"I couldn't bring myself to just go and stop. It was a thing where I had to slow down and take it step by step and slow it down."

Muncie said his cocaine use had no influence on the Saints' decision to trade him after the fourth game of the 1980 season. He said he asked to be traded.

He said he believes then-Coach Dick Nolan and other members of Saints management knew that players used cocaine.

Pryce pitches Cubs to 3-2 win

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

It's not easy for a manager to pull a starter when he's only one out away from going the distance for a victory, but Midland's Brian Murphy made that decision and the choice turned out to be a good one.

Cubs starter Ken Pryce held a 3-2 lead over Amarillo going into the top of the ninth inning and the first batter he faced, Jeff Ronk, tagged him for a single. He got designeted hitter Joe Scherger to ground out to second baseman Javier Fierro and then Luis Quinones to pop up to shortstop Dave Owen. It was looking like it would be a good finish.

Randy Kaczmarski was the fourth Gold Sox batter of the frame and he ended Pryce's tour of duty when he took the count to full before walking, putting the go-ahead run on first. That brought up a former teammate, James Steels, who was 3-for-4 against Pryce on the night and too much of a threat for Murphy to overlook. He pulled Pryce for Rob Blyth who got his first save of the year when Steels grounded out to Fierro to end the game.

"Pryce pitched a good game and with the way we've been going, we've had trouble finding a stopper in the bull pen, I would have liked to see him finish. He was still throwing strikes so I went with him. In the ninth he had to get Kaczmarski and when he walked hime I didn't want him to pitch to Steels who was 3-for4. He seemed to be the only one on for them. I decided to put someone in he hadn't seen before and then hope for the best."

Was Pryce disappointed in not going all the way? "Just a little bit," he said. "But the last time I did that, stay in the game, I lost it in the 10th. When I went full count on Karczmarski and lost him, I wanted to come out then because Steels was up next and he'd gone 3-for-4 against me. We went with the odds and the odds payed off. I was glad to see Rob come in to get Steels out."

Steels, former teammate you ask? Well, during the winter, the two were roommates in Columbia, South America and both were well aware of what the other could do.

He was one of my roommates in Columbia during winter ball." said Pryce. "he knows how i pitch and I know how he hits. When we face each other we play head games."

Murphy played the final "head game" and it turned out to be correct.

Pryce was mixing his pitches well throughout the game, going from screw-

Pryce was mixing his pitches well throughout the game, going form screwball to curve ball to slider, and just for good measure, he threw one change up. That change up caused some problems in the sixth inning, but it was his fastball that was giving him more trouble.

"I felt on when I got to the seventh and eighth innings," he said, "I threw a lot of breaking pitches, but when I tried to go back to my fastball, I couldn't find it. I'd try to get the fastball over the plate over the plate and lose it."

As to the change up? "I throw one change up in my life and I hit the guy with it (Kaczmarski in the sixth)," said Pryce. I have trouble with it. I play around with it a little bit but I can't control it. If I go to the Instructional League I'll work on it."

After hitting Kaczmarski in the sixth, Pryce gave up a two-out single to Steels and was in trouble for the first time of the night. With Jerry Davis at the plate, one of several hitters in the Gold Sox lineup that can turn a game around with one swing of the bat (going into the game, he had

Brazil ousts Argentina from World Cup finals, 3-1

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Brazil trounced Argentina 3-1 Friday to oust the defending champions from the World Cup soccer finals, and host Spain also was eliminated following a 2-1 setback at the hands of West Germany.

Zico, in magnificent form, scored one goal and assisted on the other two as three-time champions Brazil outclassed its South American archrivals.

Diego Maradona, Argentina's millionaire forward, was sent off just before the end of the match in Barcelona's Sarria Stadium. The expulsion completed an unhappy day for the champions, who lost three of the five matches they played in the finals.

Brazil now needs only to draw with Italy Monday to clinch a semifinal spot. Italy must defeat slick, stylish Brazil — which has won all four of its matches to date — to advance from Group C of the second round.

West Germany, having vanquished Spain with a nerveless performance before a sellout crowd of 90,000 in Madrid's Santiago Bernabeu Stadium, now must rely on the Spaniards not to fold against England Monday.

If England defeats the Spaniards by two goals, it will advance to the semifinals from Group B.

Tournament favorite Brazil, which has scored 13 goals in its four games, again was impressive.

Zico maintained his goal-a-game average by putting the Brazilians ahead in the 12th minute, and the crowd of 44,000 then was treated to some excellent soccer in the second half.

Zico helped set up goals for Serginho (67th minute) and Junior (74th minute) before limping off the pitch after being fouled by Argentine captain Daniel Passarella.

Maradona, frustrated in scoring, was expelled in the 87th minute for kicking substitute Batista.

Two minutes later, Ramon Diaz scored a consolation goal for the Argentines.

Brazil Coach Tele Santana, who described the tackles on Batista and Zico as "malicious," said, "We have a very good chance of being world champions."

Zico, who suffered a blow just underneath his right knee, said he expected to be fit to face the Italians.

"It hurt a lot, but the team doctor has told me I should be okay," he said.

Cesar Luis Menotti, the Argentine coach, said, "Brazil is a very good team that can, beyond any doubt, be world champion if it continues to play as it is at the moment."

The Germans, the European champions and unbeaten against European opposition for four years, played with craft and confidence.

Pierre Littbarski opened the scoring in the 50th minute following a misplay by Spanish goalkeeper Luis Arconada and then set up a goal in the 75th minute by Klaus Fischer.

Jesus Zamora got an 81st-minute header to spark off a late flurry from Spain.

West Germany now must wait for the result of Monday's game. If Spain wins, or the match is tied, the Germans will advance. If England wins by a one-goal margin, which team qualifies will be decided by goals scored.

Sandra Post beats wind to set pace

TORONTO (AP) — Sandra Post conquered the fickle winds that gusted across St. George's Golf and Country Club to grab a three-stroke lead after two rounds of the $200,000 Peter Jackson Classic Friday.

The veteran Canadian, shooting a 3-under-par 69, put together her two best rounds of the year and was at 139, 5-under-par after 36 holes. First-round leader Beth Daniel, veteran Sandra Haynie, Hollis Stacy and Dale Eggeling were all tied for second at 142.

Daniel, who had a 67 Thursday, had trouble handling the treacherous winds that gusted up to 20 knots and ballooned to a second-round 75.

Haynie, whose triumph at Rochester, N.Y. last week tied her with Patty Berg for fifth place in career victories on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour at 41, had a 71, while Stacy posted a 73 and Eggeling shot a 72.

Defending champion Jan Stephenson was at 143 — one under par with Beverly Klass, while the only other players to match par in the swirling winds after two rounds on the 6,071-yard layout were Marlene Floyd-DeArman, Jane Blalock, Dot Germain and Sally Little.

Stephenson had a 73, Klass a 71, Floyd-DeArman a 75, Blalock a 69, Germain a 72 and Little a 73. The 69s by Post and Blalock were the low scores of the day.

The halfway cut of 154 reduced the field to the low 70 and ties for play today and Sunday in the hunt for the $30,000 winner's purse.

Only five players managed to break par Friday as the winds played havoc with the field.

One of the surprises of the tournament has been the play of Canadian Nancy White, 23, She fired a 1-under 71 for a 36-hole score of 146. She was the only one of six amateurs in the field to make the cut.

Winfield homers lead Yanks over Tribe

CLEVELAND (AP) — Dave Winfield hit solo home runs in the first and ninth inning and Roger Erickson gained his first victory in a New York uniform as the Yankees defeated the Cleveland Indians 3-1 Friday night.

Erickson yielded one run and six hits in 52-3 innings and Dave LaRoche, George Frazier and Rich Gossage protected the lead. Erickson, acquired from Minnesota on May 12, is 1-4 with the Yankees and 5-7 overall.

Gossage retired the final six Cleveland batters to snap the Indians' four-game winning streak and pick up his 14th save.

The Yankees took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Winfield slugged his 10th home run over the left-center field fence off Rick Waits, 0-6. Winfield also homered over the center field fence off Ed Whitson in the ninth.

Willie Randolph led off the New York sixth with a walk, was sacrificed to second and took third when Winfield flied out. Lou Piniella singled off shortstop Mike Fischlin's glove to drive in Randolph for a 2-0 lead.

Colleges sometimes tend to confuse athletes, scholars

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

When University of Minnesota guard Mark Hall was declared academically ineligible, a judge ordered him reinstated. Hall, the judge ruled, was recruited "to be a basketball player, not a scholar."

The landmark decision openly challenged the foundation of collegiate sports, already troubled by bulging budgets, competition bordering on desperation for recruits and the growing difficulty of treading a fine line between athletics and academics.

Intercollegiate athletics in America is big business. A football coach gets a million-dollar contract, a school gets a million or so for playing in a major bowl game and a star college athlete becomes an instant millionaire in the pros.

"If I didn't have to go to college as a preparation for pro ball, I wouldn't have," said Howard McNeil, who was declared academically ineligible for the Seton Hall basketball team during his senior season, the year he was hoping to catch the eyes of professional scouts.

"I think most students in college see a degree as just something to help you get a job afterward," McNeil added. "And the job I wanted was in basketball."

HALL, A three-year starter for Minnesota, filed suit against the university last fall, claiming his loss of eligibility would substantially damage his chances of a professional career.

In his ruling, U.S. District Judge Miles Lord found a paradox.

"It well may be true that a good academic program for the athlete is made virtually impossible by the demands of their sport at the college level," he wrote. "If this situation causes harm to the university, it is because they have fostered it and the institution rather than the individual should suffer the consequences."

Walter Byers, executive director of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, said that without sports many student-athletes would never have the chance to go to college.

And he noted that the letter of intent signed by all athletic recruits specifies that they must meet certain academic standards.

Nevertheless, McNeil's wife, Liz, also a Seton Hall student, said her husband "was hired to play basketball."

"I know they say the tradeoff is that I was getting a college education for free," McNeil said. "I was giving them something extra, so maybe I should have been given something extra, too."

SCHOOLS which have given something extra have found themselves penalized by the NCAA for violations ranging from phony grades to cash payments for players.

The NCAA enforces all manner of regulations that govern member institutions, spreading a net of investigators to catch and punish the schools which break the rules in search of athletic excellence.

NCAA rules permit a member institution to offer a student-athlete tuition, fees, room, board and books. Anything beyond that can cause problems. The regulations are contained in the NCAA Manual, the bible for college athletic directors and coaches. The book contains 187 pages of rules and regulations and another 110 pages of cases and interpretations, designed to clear up any confusion.

"I defy anyone to know all that's in this book," said Wade Walker, athletic director at Oklahoma. "And I defy anyone to interpret all the rules and regulations. It's highly technical and it's not always easy to interpret and apply."

Oklahoma went on NCAA probation in 1973 because of the altered transcript of a football player. "There are three or four rules and a multitude of regulations," Walker said. "We broke the rules and we were punished. We served our sentence. Everyone knows the rules. Those are the ones you don't touch, the ones you don't take any chances with. But in all candor, there are so many regulations that there is always the possibility of breaking them. We don't break any rules and we try not to break any regulations."

MANY OTHER programs have been penalized for bending academic standards, most recently Arizona State last year, when eight players were found to have received fraudulent credits.

In 1974-76, Southern Methodist was found to have been paying bonuses to football players based on the number of tackles they made. In 1976, an alumnus of Kentucky was found to have offered a racehorse to a recruit.

Under-the-table cash has led to various periods of probation for Michigan State, Oklahoma State, Memphis State, Auburn, Colorado and Miami.

Sixteen schools, from UCLA to the University of New Haven, now are on some form of NCAA probation.

David Berst, the NCAA's enforcement chief, said another 30 to 35 investigations are in progress.

Earlier this year, former Florida State University basketball player James Bozeman charged that he was given drugs so he could play while injured and accused the Seminole program of academic irregularities, under-the-table payments and racial discrimination. The coaches denied the allegations and the university held public hearings. The matter is pending.

The problems are hardly new.

Mychal Thompson, a forward for the Portland Trail Blazers of the National Basketball Association, says he was promised extravagant gifts by college recruiters.

"Cars, apartments, and first-class airfare home every time," Thompson told the Portland Oregonian last month.

Thompson played college ball at Minnesota and was the first player chosen in the 1978 NBA draft.

"They (the recruiters) would be real sly, talking out of the corners of their mouth, thinking that (the offers) would make a difference," he said. "Ninety percent of the major schools do it. Every college has to do it to get the blue-chipper."

THOMPSON said that at Minnesota "I just got extra money. ... If I needed extra cash to pay the bills, I always found a way to get it."

Not all investigations involve major violations.

Last fall, for instance, a Miami football player was declared ineligible for a week for taking a $10 loan from a coach.

The NCAA Manual says a coach cannot lend a player money, no matter how little.

"If I could rewrite this book," said Ted Bredehoft, athletic director at Wichita State, holding up the Manual, "it would be about one-eighth of an inch thick."

"And if you did that, within five years, it would be right back to its current size," said Marty Perline, an economics professor who serves as the university's faculty representive for athletics.

Wichita State has just started serving a basketball program probation.

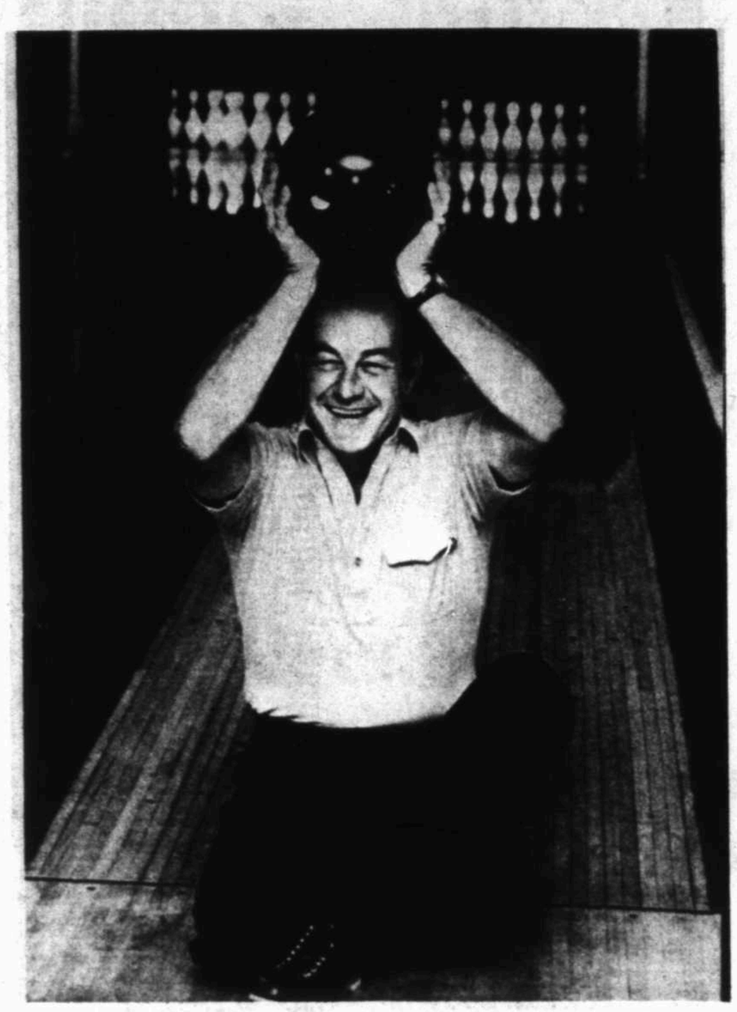

The passion to win begats rule-bending. Winning produces revenue, and that is vital for healthy athletic departments.

YET, SOME schools spend more freely on sports than others.

"Because of their resources, state schools will always be more successful," said Darrell Royal, former football coach and athletic director at the University of Texas. "There are built-in advantages, unlimited funds, influential alumni, top-notch facilities."

All in the name of winning.

"I'm proud of the record I had," Royal continued. "But I recognize full well that I could have coached at another school, worked just as hard and just as well without achieving this record. Coaches always look at the other guy who's a good coach doing a good job but at a place with not nearly the same chance to win."

Glen Allison, a former professional bowler, left his competitors in the gutter when he bowled a perfect 300 game during league competition at the La Habra 300 Bowl in La Habra, California. But the 54-year-old Allison, who has been bowling for 41 years, didn't stop at one 300 game, he strung together three perfect games for a 900 series. Afterwards Allison, who had thrown perfect games before, said "I was nervous."

Don't eat that fish, it may be a record catch

By BILL SCHULZ

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Don't eat that fish yet! It may be a world-record catch.

There are hundreds of record possibilities open to the average angler, according to the International Game Fish Association of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and the National Fresh Water Fishing Hall of Fame in Hayward, Wis.

IGFA keeps records on 71 species, having entered the field only a few years ago. Many of its categories are vacant and in others, the existing record is not representative of a large fish for the species.

I hit one of those spots with a 21½-pound blue catfish taken from Georgia's Lake Sinclair on a 17-pound line. The existing IGFA record for the line class was only 5 pounds, 7 ounces. The record should be broken soon — blue cats grow to more than 100 pounds — but for now, it's mine.

The Hall of Fame, which keeps records on more than 100 North American freshwater fish species, expanded an ice fishing division this year, creating many more record possiblities.

If you're out for a record, the best bet is in the fly fishing division. The Hall of Fame's fly division is "wide open, because it was never something that was pushed," said founder Bob Kutz.

The IGFA has more than 125 empty spaces in its fly line record book.

Kutz and Jerry Carr, assistant executive director of IGFA, advise record-seeking anglers to:

—Weigh the freshly caught fish on a certified scale, meaning one that is legal for trade, such as a grocery scale. IGFA requires one impartial witness to the weighing; the Hall of Fame requires two.

—Don't cut open any fish you think may be a record. If possible, freeze it.

—Get a fish biologist to study the fish and make a positive identification. Many species look alike.

—Get good photographs of the fish. The Hall of Fame likes pictures in full color to aid in identificatioh. IGFA likes color for the same reason, but would be glad to get a black-and-white, too, to publish in its rulebook or magazine.

The picture should show the angler holding the fish in a horizontal position and show all of its fins. Fin structure and size are very important in identifying species.

Applicants must be prepared to send a length of their fishing line or fly tippit with the application for a line class record so the line can be tested.

IGFA keeps two basic sets of fishing records — rod-and-reel and fly. The Hall of Fame has both of those, and keeps records on pole and line fishing, and ice fishing.

Call the organizations if you have questions. The IGFA can be reached at (305) 467-0161. The Hall of Fame number is (715) 634-4440.

Flanagans to become parents of test-tube baby

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore pitcher Mike Flanagan and his wife Kathy have had difficulty having children but they expect to become parents of the nation's fourth test-tube baby soon, an Orioles' spokesman said Friday.

Bob Brown, the spokesman for the American League ballclub, said the baby of the 30-year-old 1979 Cy Young Award winner and his wife is due this coming Tuesday.

"She had ovary problems and two pregnancies before and both times things didn't go well," Brown said. "They had a lot of trouble (previously) and then she got quite sick."

Brown said this would be the Flanagans' first child.

Flanagan was en route to Detroit, where the Orioles were to play the Tigers Friday night and was unable to be reached immediately for comment.

The Flanagans' suburban Cockeysville home telephone number could not be obtained immediately by reporters because it was unpublished.

Brown said Flanagan was enthralled when he learned the news that the "in vitro" conception performed at the Eastern Virginia Medical College in Norfolk, Va., proved successful.

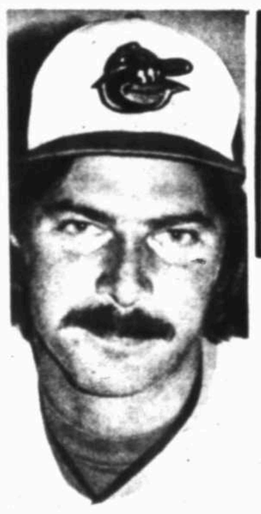

In the "in vitro" process, the egg is taken outside the mother's body where it is fertilized in a petrie dish. The egg then is transferred into the woman's womb. Pregnancy occurs if the fertilized egg implants itself.

The process was pioneered by Drs. Patrick Steptoe and Robert Edwards of England, where the first test-tube baby was born in 1978.

"If you had seen the look on his (Flanagan's) face when he found out she was pregnant," Brown said. "It's not common for a man that young to be that anxious to have a child."

Brown said he last saw Mrs. Flanagan six weeks ago and "she just glowed. She just really glowed."

He said he has "heard nothing to indicate she's not doing well now.

Diaz helps Pryce escape

12 home runs), Pryce got much-appreciated help from catcher Mike Diaz.

"Mike Diaz did a hell of a job," he said. "He worked me out of a jam in the sixth. He kept having me pitch him (Davis) out and out and out and we finally got him to hit to the shortstop (Owen)."

The Cubs gave Pryce a 3-0 lead from the onset when five of the first six batters collected hits. Henry Cotto led off with a single and reached second on a successful steal. Mike Kelley brought Cotto home wiht a double to right and scored on Joe Carter's single to center.

With Carmelo Martinez at the plate, Carter broke for second and Amarillo catcher Mike Martin's Pickoff throw was low and away. The error put Carter on third. He came home when Martinez singled to left.

Despite collecting 14 hits off Gold Sox

Despite collecting 14 hits off Gold Sox starter Bill Long, the Cubs were unable to pad the lead but didn't need to until things started getting shakey in the later innings.

Murphy attributed his team's low scoring to poor base running saying, "We played very poorly. We ran bases atrociously. It hurt us quite a bit. We had a man picked off second (Diaz in the first), one at first (Fierro in the second), and had one thrown out at third that should have been save (Carlos Lezcano in the eighth). It was a terrible slide."

Amarillo posted only four hits in the first six innings before the bats came to life with six more in the final three frames. George Hinshaw ended Pryce's shutout in the seventh with a solo home run over the left-center fence, his 12th of the year, and steels made it 3-2 in the eights when he singled and scored on Davis' double to center.

The victory gave Midland a 3-3 split with Amarillo in the series and a 7-7 record in the second half of the Texas League Race. Amarillo fell to 3-8. Today, the Cubs head to San Antonio where they will face the Dodgers in a six-game series. Doug Welenc, 9-6, will open the series for Midland.

NYSE Report

Stock market declines second straight time

By CHET CURRIER

AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined for the second straight session Friday amid concern over recession-induced weakness in corporate earnings.

Trading was relatively quiet on the eve of the long Independence Day weekend.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 6.28 to 796.99, closing out the week with a net loss of 6.09 points.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 43.76 million shares, down from 47.90 million Thursday.

Holly Sugar was the session's biggest loser, tumbling 15¼ to 33¼. The company said General Electric Credit Co. withdrew its financing offer for the company's plans to buy out its public stockholders for $65 a share.

Several of the day's other big declines stemmed from earnings news. American Standard, a major producer of plumbing fixtures and a wide variety of other products, fell 3⅝ to 19¾.

The company, whose stock reached a record high of 43¾ last year, indicated Thursday that its second quarter earnings were down about 78 percent. It blamed "a recession the likes of which we've never seen."

Manhattan Industries, a large apparel manufacturer, fell 1⅜ to 14. The company said it would have a smaller earnings gain in the fiscal year that began April 30 than it did in the previous year.

And Tonka, a producer of toys and hobby and craft products, dropped 1⅝ to 17½ on word that the company expects to report a second-quarter loss.

Puritan Fashions was down 1⅜ at 10⅜. The company said it would accept 24 percent of the 2.63 million shares tendered to it under an offer for 650,000 of its shares.

Analysts said traders seemed to be bracing for a spell of bad news over the next few weeks as many more corporations come in with their midyear results.

They also noted continuing uncertainty over interest-rate prospects. Open-market rates rose early Friday, but then turned downward late in the day after the Federal Reserve reported a $2.2 billion decline in th money supply.

Sony was the day's most active issue, down ⅝ at 12¼. Trading in the stock included a 1.06 million-share block at 12⅛.

The daily tally on the Big Board showed about eight losers for every five stocks that gained ground, and the exchange's composite index lost .52 to 61.99.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 50.52 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials dropped 1.24 to 120.14, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 1.06 at 107.65.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.02 to 248.38. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 170.05, off .55.

Free rent offered to fill space

HOUSTON (AP) — Some tenants in the downtown business district are being offered free rent to sign leases to fill the more than eight million square feet of office space scheduled to open in the next several years.

Dan Bellow, senior vice president of Henry S. Miller Co., said free rent usually ranges from one to six months. In once instance, however, a developer offered a 15-year lease with the tenant paying only expenses, hoping the tenant would attract other, larger leases.

"Like any transactions today, there are concessions being made in the downtown leasing market," Bellows said.

Bruce Endendyk, resident manager of Coldwell Banker's downtown office, said there is less demand, particularly in the energy market.

"There is an increasingly soft office market downtown," he said. "Added to this is the fact that the oil companies are experiencing slow times, and tenants who developers thought would expand are not."

Endendyk said suburban developers are offering up to one year free rent and downtown office buildings may have to provide similar concessions.

"The fact is that the rental concessions made by developers in the suburbs are coming downtown," he said. "There is also a lack of tenant demand for office space in the central business district."

One broker, who declined to be identified, said suburban locations are being offered at $18 per square foot compared to $22 and $24 per square foot downtown.

"They're (tenants) telling the downtown developers they can get a better deal in the suburbs," the broker said. "The developers themselves are concerned about the coming oversupply of space."

Nine office buildings currently are under construction downtown.

Interest changes made

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee agreed Friday to let the Treasury Department raise and lower the interest rate on U.S. Savings Bonds in line with other rates.

If Congress agrees, the department plans to tie the Savings Bond rate to interest earned on five-year Treasury securities. If that were in effect now, the current 9-percent rate on Series EE bonds would be about 11.7 percent.

The provision authorizing the change was included in a tax-increase bill approved by the committee.

Under the plan outlined by the Treasury Department, the Savings Bond rate could not fall below a minimum level. A saver would receive 85 percent of the average rate paid on five-year Treasury securities or the guaranteed minimum, whichever is higher.

You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

This beautiful Ramcon home is only one of the unique floor plans available in Midland's new prestige address, Northgate. 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, fireplace, refrigerated air and fine ash cabinetry adorn each and every model. The rich features and quality workmanship combined with our tremendous new financing package makes a RAMCON home the place to call your own. Call us or come by today. Chances are you can qualify.

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first years payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualifications will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 10 7/8% for 95% loan-to-loan value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the orginal loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the /payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATLEY 16.575%.
