County oil values see first increase since 1990

Mineral values have taken a hike in Scurry County for the first time since 1990, according to information released Monday afternoon by the Scurry County Appraisal District.

The oil roll — including mineral, property and related values — jumped almost $85 million dollars, comparing estimated 1997 values to certified values from 1996. It was the first increase in the oil roll since 1990, when oil prices shot up temporarily, causing the roll to climb from $535 million to $669 million.

Except for 1990, the oil roll had been declining steadily since 1982, when it hit almost $2.5 billion. The estimated oil roll for 1997 is just under $340 million. It had fallen to $255 in 1996.

The jump in 1997 estimated oil values is also predominately based on an increase in the price of oil, said L.R. Peveler, chief appraiser for the county appraisal district.

According to the estimated appraisal roll for Scurry County, mineral value made the biggest "hit," rising 29 percent, from $154,453,333 to $199,928,383.

"That's a significant increase," said Peveler.

Overall, estimated values are up 9 percent over last year for Scurry County, from $570,605,603 to $634,460,955.

The estimated taxable value for Western Texas College is $684,915,635, up 8.8 percent over last year's certified values. That's an increase of more than $65 million.

Oil values have been up in the Ira school district for the past several years, and that trend continued. Overall, values are up 19 percent, from $72,540,000 to $86,716,518. Mineral values account for most of the $14 million increase.

There was little change in values for Snyder and Hermleigh school districts. Values are up 1.86 percent for Snyder ISD, which received a $28.5 million increase in minerals but lost $29.5 million in real estate. Personal property is up $8.3 million.

The drop in real estate is primarly due to a drop in agricultural values. Value on cultivated land fell about 15 percent.

Total values in Hermleigh ISD are up 1.4 percent, from $32,295,947 to $32,729,715.

Peveler cautioned that the estimated values will change somewhat between now and late July, when values will be certified.

Comparing values

Scurry County Appraisal District has released estimated values for 1997. The following information compares 1997 estimated values with 1996 certified values for the six taxing entities in the county:

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A legislative session is like making love. You don't have to be good at it to enjoy it."

The 75th Legislature is over (drumroll) and it will go down in history as the year when a woman's wrath effectively ended the session a week early.

Rep. Arlene Wohlgemuth, Republican from Burleson, used the House's own rules known as a "point of order" to kill 52 pending bills.

The only thing that might have been better would to have someone involke a "point of order" on opening day.

Some good things did happen. The bill that was to reform property taxes for schools was declared dead. Although property tax relief is needed, the bill was merely going to be a transfer of the scource and frequency of tax dollars.

Good news included a bill calling for a long-term water plan for the state and a bill to revive the boll weevil eradication program. State Rep. David Counts and Sen. Tom Haywood each played an important role.

While serving as the legislative chairman for the state press association, we observed one thing that was more pronounced this session.

In addition to a record number of bills being filed, we also found a record number of bills authored by legislators who had no clue of the bill's content.

I think it was Will Rogers who said there are two things you should never watch being made — laws and sausage.

Speaker Pete Laney and Rep. Counts are good friends. Laney's wife, Nelda, had made jokes about Counts' 1986 Ford pickup. She once described the pickup as "ugly on a stick."

She found out through her daughter that Pete Laney had gone and bought that pickup truck. Adding to her indignation was when she looked out the Capitol window late one night and spotted the offending truck parked in her space.

Nelda Laney quickly called for security. Two state troopers arrived, and together the three filled out a citation and placed it on the windshield.

The citation read:

Violations: Parking in Mrs. Laney's spot and defacing the Capitol.

Make: Ford; The Type: Junker.

Tippens re-seated as mayor pro-tem

Administering the oath of office to newly-elected council members and the annual hotel-motel tax use report highlighted Monday night's Snyder city council meeting.

Mayor David Holt and council members Kerry Bredemeyer and Dayton Robertson were sworn in by the city's financial officer, Jeanne Johnson.

Bredemeyer is serving his first term while Robertson is entering his third term and Holt his second. Terry Martin, who along with Robertson was elected to an at-large post, was absent and will be administered the oath of office at a later date.

Vernest Tippens was re-elected to serve as mayor pro-tem. This will be her third year to serve in that capacity.

Donna Fowler, executive director of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce, presented the activity report on hotel-motel tax funds.

Fowler prefaced her remarks by stating that the rules governing the use of the funds are "very, very strict."

"Our guidelines are laid out very plainly by the state's attorney general as to what the money can be used for," said Fowler.

She added the money has been used "very wisely" for the organizations that have received funds, and also commended the motel owners and operators for their operations.

Holt made note that much of the money used to renovate the Ritz Theatre had been generated through hotel-motel tax funds.

The report indicated that the chamber is administering the funds under budget.

The council also approved bids for a fuel management system and new refuse containers.

The city had budgeted $10,000 for the fuel management system but Jeanne Johnson said the present one could be up-dated for $3,940. The council awarded that bid to White's Pump Service of Lubbock. An Odessa firm, Quality Pump, Inc., bid $4,667 to up-grade the present system.

A bid for 144 refuse containers boxes was accepted from Sanco of Lubbock in the amount of $49,934. The council had budgeted $50,000 for the purchase.

Another bid was received in the amount of $40,911, but did not meet warranty specifications.

Holt presided Monday. Council members in attendance were Robertson, Tippens, Bredemeyer and Jerry Webb. Councilmen Martin and I.E. Martin were absent.

8 sealed...

11 indicted by grand jury

A Scurry County grand jury handed down 11 indictments Monday, including ones for theft of more than $20,000 and failure to stop and render assistance.

Eight of the indictments were sealed.

Grand jurors indicted 24-year-old Shauna Danielle Jenkins of 3112 39th St. for theft, a third-degree felony. She is free on $10,000 bond after turning herself in at the Law Enforcement Center this morning.

The indictment alleges that while employed at J.C. Wells Drilling Co., Ms. Jenkins forged more than 20 checks, totaling more than $31,000. The checks were written from March 10 through May 22.

The grand jury also indicted 31-year-old Jimmy Fuentez of 1204 21st St. for failure to stop and render assistance, a third degree felony.

According to reports, Fuentez was the driver of a 1989 Chevrolet van which struck 17-year-old Miguel Chavez Jalamos and 18-year-old Luis Arreguin in the 1400 block of Avenue K on May 8. Both victims were taken to Cogdell Hospital emergency room and Jalamos was transported on to a Lubbock hospital. Arreguin was released that day, and Jalamos a day later.

The indictment alleges that Fuentez drove off after striking the two teen-agers and failed to help them even though they were in obvious need of medical treatment. Bond was set at $5,000.

Antonio Rodriguez Jr., 30, of Lubbock was indicted for felony driving while intoxicated. Bond was set at $5,000. The indictment also notes that Rodriguez was convicted of DWI in Lubbock County on Aug. 16, 1996 and in Mitchell County on April 16 of this year.

Blood drive here Wednesday

The first "Five Points of Life" coast-to-coast cycling event for America's blood centers will roll through Snyder on Wednesday with a special blood drive and recognition planned.

The drive will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Willow Park Inn.

Donors are reminded that if they gave blood at the last drive, they will not be eligible to donate again Wednesday. Donors must wait eight weeks before being eligible.

The top 10 donors in Scurry County will be recognized, and a drawing will be held to give away a bicycle.

The drive is sponsored by Texas Blood Institute and the Scurry County Advisory Council for TBI.

Everyone is invited to participate, donote and visit the cross-country cyclists.

The began their six-week trip from Carlsbad, Calif. on May 17 and expect to finish in Gainesville, Fla. on June 27.

The 42-day trip is being held to promote the need for and awareness of the "Five Points of Life:" bone marrow, cord blood, whole blood, platelet and organ donors. Many of the riders have directly benefited from blood service programs due to life-threatening diseases which afflicted them or loved ones.

Murdered clerk's killer has own date with death

Two cartons of cigarettes and $160 are what Dorsie Lee Johnson and an accomplice got on the March evening that convenience store clerk Jack Huddleston was killed back in 1986.

Some time after 6 p.m. Wednesday, Johnson is to pay for that death with his own life, while strapped to a gurney in the Walls Unit at Huntsville.

It's the fourth execution date set for the Colorado City man, who has been on death row since he was convicted of murder in 1986. He received three stays previously while appealing his case through the court system. In 1993, he was the subject of an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, which chose his case to test Texas law on youthfulness. Johnson was 19 at the time of the murder. In a 5-4 vote, the court denied his appeal.

The latest execution date set for Johnson had been Oct. 23, 1996. That sentence was stayed to consider constitutional challenges of a state law passed in 1995 meant to expedite appeals by death row inmates. Johnson's was one of a number of executions stayed at the time, all dealing with the new state law.

Earlier this month, the Court of Criminal Appeals vacated his stay, clearing the way for the district court to set a new execution date, which Senior Judge Gene Dulaney promptly did — June 4, 1997.

Huddleston was 54 and had been working at the Allsup's convenience store less than a month when Johnson and Amanda Lynn Miles came into the store on March 23. Some time later, a customer found Huddleston lying face down in the walk-in refrigerator. He had been shot once in the back of the neck with a .25-caliber handgun.

Tragically, it wasn't the end of

GOP majority did not give Bush easy session

AUSTIN (AP) — For the first time in more than a century, Republicans seized a majority in one of the legislative chambers. But that didn't mean the Republican governor got what he wanted this session.

The GOP-dominated Senate refused a school tax overhaul plan backed by Gov. George W. Bush, who was forced to settle instead for a smaller property-tax relief measure.

And as the midnight deadline for considering bills came Sunday, it was a Republican senator who led the bipartisan effort to kill a Bush-backed bill meant to crack down on gambling machines with casino-like payoffs.

"If we were all monolithic, we'd only need one of us," said Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, who fought the gambling-machine bill. He said it would hurt charitable organizations using the money-raising machines while allowing businesses to continue operating them.

Patterson also opposed a last-resort effort by Bush and legislative leaders to cut local school property taxes by about $4 billion over the next two years, replacing the money with new state taxes, budget savings and cuts.

On Monday, Patterson said he supported a tax plan initially presented by Bush, and he weighed the governor's position in opposing the two proposals.

Regarding the tax bill, he said, "I knew the governor was supportive of it, and it was difficult for me to oppose it. But it gets down to where sometimes ... we want any deal just so we can say we did. And I'm not sure that that's good all the time."

The Democrat-dominated House, on the other hand, approved both the gambling-machine measure and backed a much larger tax overhaul and school funding plan than the Senate. Some House lawmakers blamed senators for the inability to agree on a compromise tax plan.

"They couldn't agree when to have supper," Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, said of senators after a sweeping tax proposal fell apart in the House-Senate negotiating committee.

Stiles said partisan fighting played a part in this legislative session. "A very small number of people up here have decided that partisanship is more important to them than doing what's right for the people of Texas," he said.

GOP senators, however, touted the billion-dollar property tax relief proposal that lawmakers did approve. Several praised what they called a good working relationship between Republicans and Democrats.

"The best part was, I think everybody anticipated the worst, and ... we proved a lot of people wrong," said Sen. Florence Shapiro, R-Plano, head of the GOP caucus in the Senate.

While the Senate looked at issues from a conservative perspective, she said, "There was a very positive, good working relationship between Democrats and Republicans alike."

Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, and others noted that while Republicans dominate 17-14, Senate rules require a two-thirds vote to take up bills.

"I think the 21 (vote) rule in particular helped force us to work together," Ellis said.

Oklahoma man who killed cop executed

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer Patrick Rogers, seeking forgiveness from Allah and denouncing the death penalty as madness, has been executed for the slaying of a police officer during a 1985 crime spree.

Rogers, 33, on Monday night became the first of four condemned inmates set to die in Texas this week. The 10th-grade dropout who worked as a waiter in Oklahoma City received lethal injection for fatally shooting David Roberts, 23, a police officer in Paris, just south of the Oklahoma state line and about 100 miles northeast of Dallas, on Sept. 21, 1985.

Rogers at the time had been on parole for about a year and a half after serving six months of a five-year term in Oklahoma for stealing a car. Roberts had been on the force for about a year and was awaiting the birth of he and his wife's first child.

"There's no closure here," Danny Roberts, the slain officer's brother, said after watching Rogers die. "We leave here with heavy hearts. We leave here only with assurance that Rogers will never have the chance to hurt anyone again. We still live with the fact David is gone."

"I'll not have my son back, but I am relieved," added Patsy Roberts, the officer's mother, who also witnessed Rogers' death. "I don't have to wonder about him getting out, the call coming on the telephone that he has another appeal coming. I can forget about Patrick Rogers now."

"If this is what they want to see, this is what they get," Rogers said while strapped to the death chamber gurney.

"I will ask Allah for forgiveness because he created me and he will forgive me," he added, urging fellow death row inmates to remain strong. "Don't let these people break you."

He was mumbling a prayer as the drugs began to take effect. "Kinda bad, ain't it," he said, then faded, taking a couple of deep breaths and a wheeze. Six minutes later, he was pronounced dead.

Rogers was the 17th inmate executed in Texas this year. The record number of injections in the nation's most active capital punishment state is 19 in 1995. When electrocutions were the method of capital punishment, 20 condemned inmates were put to death in 1935.

Executions this year have accelerated as longtime inmates exhaust their appeals and new laws designed to speed the appeals process take effect.

Rogers and an accomplice were pulled over by Roberts after robbing two women at gunpoint in a Paris ice cream store. Rogers jumped out of his stolen car before Roberts even could get out of his patrol car and opened fire with a .38-caliber pistol stolen earlier in the day from a pawn shop, shooting through the windshield and striking the officer.

Prison system...

Consolidation of women's facilities being considered

AMARILLO (AP) — Prisoners at the only female penitentiary in West Texas would be headed to Gatesville soon under a proposed change by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

"It's under study, and we're looking at it very seriously," TDCJ spokesman Larry Todd said Monday.

The proposal would convert the Woodman State Jail at Gatesville to a full-fledged women's prison. It would hold the approximately 1,200 women currently incarcerated at Amarillo's Neal Unit.

Neal would become part of the men's system, which Todd said is running at about 98 percent capacity.

A study of the issue probably will be complete in August, when Todd said a decision could be made. The transfers could begin as early as September.

If the move is made, only three prisons outside of Gatesville would house women in the Texas system.

"We think it's more efficient for medical and transportation purposes to move the women (to Gatesville)," said Todd, who added that "all indications are" that the proposal will be approved.

Gatesville is about 30 miles west of Waco.

Bush, lawmakers had near-perfect strategy for property tax cut

By Juan B. Elizondo Jr.
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — In boxing terms, Gov. George W. Bush and lawmakers seemed to have a solid one-two combination to beat the rise of local school property taxes:

— Pound hard on the tax rates to which property is subject.

— Take a few shots at the rise of property values, seen by voters as the head of rising taxes bills.

AP analysis

It seemed like a perfect plan until Bush and lawmakers narrowly averted a knockout.

The problems packed a one-two punch, too.

— Voters made clear they were more interested in seeing rising property values take a beating. Jargon in the tax-rate fight — including hold harmless, Tyler Pipe, M&O and I&S — barely kept officials awake and quickly glazed the eyes and attention of voters, whose support was needed to keep lawmakers in the ring.

— Big business put its support behind the status quo after lawmakers shifted the biggest benefits of slashing property taxes to homeowners and renters.

In the end, the tax-cut push went down, and Bush barely salvaged a consolation prize.

Homestead property tax exemptions — the portion of a homes' value not subject to property taxes — were raised from a minimum of $5,000 a year to $15,000.

That's equal to a roughly $140 a-year tax cut, a benefit that's likely to be eaten by future growth in property tax rates.

Growth in property value appraisals was capped at 10 percent a year. Homeowners could delay, but not avoid, payments on tax hikes above 5 percent. The deferment, however, would cost homeowners 8 percent interest a year.

Both plans still face Bush's final approval and an OK from voters.

Bush and lawmakers have put the best face on what might best be called a technical knockout.

They say voters will appreciate the strong effort made and will enjoy the slight tax cut and the ability to defer sharp tax increases.

Others criticized the end results, saying the more than $1 billion being spent on the homestead exemption increase could be better used and calling the tax deferment a rouge.

Voters will judge the fight later this year.

Eds: Juan B. Elizondo Jr. of the AP's Austin bureau has covered the property tax-cut effort throughout the legislative session.

Bridge

By Phillip Alder

"Defense ... is of much more importance than opulence." Well, good defense at the bridge table leads to one form of opulence: many plus scores.

Take today's deal as an example. You hold the West cards, defending against four spades after South opened one no-trump. You start with two top clubs, South dropping the jack and queen. What next?

You should check the point-count. Let's assume declarer has shown 16-18. There are 12 in the dummy, and you have 11. That leaves partner with at most a jack. So, you're on your own. This means that the only chance for a fourth trick lies in the trump suit. Undermine declarer's spade holding by leading a third club.

Let's assume declarer ruffs in hand and starts on the trumps. You must duck the first two rounds. Now declarer is dead. If he switches to the red suits, you will get a ruff with your remaining low trump for one down. But if South continues in kamikaze fashion, leading a further round of trumps, you win and play a fourth club, forcing out dummy's final trump. You will score your last trump and a long club for two down.

Whenever you've taken all your side-suit tricks, giving a ruff-and-discard is typically the best defense.

The intrigue of victory

By Phillip Alder

Earlier this year I was asked by two students how they could do better in the weekly duplicate at their club. That was an easy one. I replied that if they defended all opposing contracts perfectly, they would win every week.

Dear Abby

Divorced dads need to stay in contact with their kids

DEAR ABBY: This letter is prompted by the letter in your column from the 9-year-old girl who signed her letter "Missing My Dad in Michigan." She hadn't heard from her father in more than four years.

I experienced the same thing when my parents divorced in 1978. In the beginning, I received a few letters, phone calls and visits from Daddy, but they dwindled to nothing after a couple of years.

Ten years after the divorce, I began an effort to find my father. I located his mother, which resulted in her contacting my father. Ten minutes after I spoke with my grandmother, my phone rang and my father was on the other end. It was, needless to say, a very emotional phone call. I realized that after many years with no communication, I had built up tremendous reserves of anger, resentment and bitterness. I had hated my father for not loving me.

It turned out that he had loved me very much. He had been afraid to contact me for fear that my mother would have him arrested (for non-payment of alimony/child support) if he appeared in Virginia or if she discovered where he lived. A year after our first conversation, I flew out to see him. It was a trying yet rewarding time, as we began to get to know each other all over again.

We are learning even more as the years pass. By 1994, we had repaired our relationship so well that he was able to give me away at my wedding. He's now eagerly awaiting the day we can tell him he's a grandfather.

To the parents of the young lady who wrote to you: You may be very angry at each other and hurting each other in an effort to get even, but please remember that the one you are hurting the most is your daughter. Dad, she needs you. There's no way to recapture the years lost when you weren't in your daughter's life. Mom, no amount of money you may or may not receive is worth the emotional pain and loss being inflicted on your daughter.

To the young lady who signed her letter "Missing My Dad in Michigan": I was your age when I went through the same experience. Divorce is extremely painful for all involved, but particularly for you because you are innocent. I hope and pray that you will learn to understand, forgive and love both your parents — because I am sure they both love you.

KNOWS HOW YOU FEEL

DEAR KNOWS: Your letter is further testimony to the importance of both parents staying involved and in frequent, continuing contact regardless of the status of the marriage. Parents should be partners in raising their children, even when they do not live in the same household, because it benefits the emotional well-being of the children.

The Children's Rights Council has published a book containing valuable information for parents and professionals on how to handle divorce so that it's less traumatic for children. It's titled "The Best Parent Is Both Parents." It can be ordered from: The Children's Rights Council, 220 Eye St. N.E., Suite 140, Washington, D.C. 20002-4362. The cost: $10 plus $2 shipping and handling. Please allow four to six weeks for delivery.

Top-seeded Alabama is slammed by Hurricanes

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Mandy Jacomino didn't score any points with his coach after making a diplomatic slip following his big day at the plate that lifted Miami to a 6-1 victory over Alabama on Monday in the second round of the College World Series.

It was the second year in a row the Hurricanes (51-16) beat the top-seeded Crimson Tide (53-13) in the winners' final of their CWS bracket. A year ago, Miami thumped Alabama 15-1.

"When I picked up a paper all I was reading was SEC this, SEC that," said Jacomino, who went 4-for-4 with a three-run homer. "I figured, what's the big deal?"

Hurricanes coach Jim Morris shook his head and offered some help.

"Let me answer this for Mandy because he's getting himself in trouble," Morris said. "You don't do all the things Alabama did this year without a great ball club."

The fifth-seeded Hurricanes next play Thursday night against the winner of Tuesday night's elimination game between Alabama and Mississippi State.

It was the first time this season the Crimson Tide didn't score at least two runs in a game and the first time they went consecutive games without a home run. Alabama, which had 153 homers during the season, didn't hit one in Saturday's 3-2 win over Mississippi State.

"We really haven't gotten it going on offense in a long time," Alabama coach Jim Wells said. "We got some key guys to come up with runners on and never got the hit, the timely hit."

Miami scored 10 runs in the third inning against the Tide in last year's second-round game and used the same inning to grab the lead again this time.

Rick Saggese and Jason Michaels singled before Aubrey Huff singled with two outs for the first run. Jacomino followed with his homer that just cleared the right field fence. It was his ninth of the season.

"He gave me a fastball and I turned on it," Jacomino said of the pitch from Pete Fisher (9-3). "I was just trying to drive the ball in the gap. I hit and lined drive and luckily it got out."

Singh wins soggy Memorial

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Vijay Singh had just hit his drive at the 11th hole of the Memorial Tournament on Sunday when play was suspended by heavy rains.

As it turned out, that break couldn't have come at a better time.

"I don't think I would have reached the green if I went for it yesterday," Singh said. "Going out there today was unbelievable. I felt really comfortable with the shot, a nice clean ball, and thought about the shot on the driving range a lot."

The result was a 231-yard 3-wood that splashed down 18 inches from the cup on the par-5 11th. Singh tapped in for an eagle, turning a tie with Scott Hoch for the lead into a 2-stroke advantage that he maintained for a 2-shot victory over Greg Norman and Jim Furyk.

Michael Irvin skips camp

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys opened offseason workouts without wide receiver Michael Irvin, then signed free agent Anthony Miller.

Miller, who made 56 receptions last season, was released by Denver for salary cap reasons.

Meanwhile, Irvin, the Cowboys' career leader in catches and receiving yardage, was not giving a reason for his absence, but asked them to trade him.

The Cowboys released 39-year-old center Ray Donaldson and re-signed running back Herschel Walker and safety Bill Bates.

Equity complaint filed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-five colleges and universities, including the University of North Texas and such schools as Duke and Vanderbilt, were accused Monday of discriminating against female athletes when providing scholarship opportunities.

The National Women's Law Center filed complaints with the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights accusing the schools of violating the 1972 law known as Title IX. The organization alleges that female athletes receive just over one-third of the scholarship dollars nationwide.

The complaint comes as officials mark the 25th anniversary of the Title IX law this month.

Oliver goes eight innings...

Rangers shutout Twins, 8-0

ARLINGTON (AP) — Darren Oliver avoided the walks that haunted him all season, and the rest was easy.

Oliver (3-6) walked one and pitched eight shutout innings as the Rangers beat the Minnesota Twins 8-0 Monday night.

In his previous outing, Oliver walked six and paid for that lack of control with a 5-0 loss to the Seattle Mariners. This time, Oliver had much better command and was rewarded.

"We needed Darren to get himself straight," Rangers first baseman Will Clark said. "When he throws strikes, he makes it easy on all of us. We get in, we get out and we're able to use our bats."

Last season, Oliver was a 14-game winner for the division-winning Rangers. But Oliver dropped five of his previous six decisions before Monday, when he gave up five hits and struck out a season-high six.

"Ollie threw the ball like he did last year," Rangers manager Johnny Oates said. "He had good stuff and good command of his pitches in the strike zone. There weren't many hard-hit balls. It was a quality performance."

Ivan Rodriguez went 3-for-5 with a home run, and the Rangers had six doubles and two homers, including Warren Newson's two-run shot in the sixth. Domingo Cedeno went 3-for-4 and Clark 3-for-5 as Texas had a season-high 18 hits.

But it was Oliver who set the tone, surviving a first inning that included three hard-hit balls, two of which were caught. Oliver settled down, retiring 14 of the last 16 batters he faced.

"All my pitches were working for me," said Oliver, who threw a season-high 118 pitches before he was lifted. "I've been struggling lately. It was good to get a win for the team. I was in a groove. I just felt comfortable."

Twins manager Tom Kelly said Oliver's best pitch was his change-up.

"It was a very effective pitch for him," Kelly said. "He threw it when he was behind in the count for strikes."

Twins starter Brad Radke (4-5) gave up a career-high 13 hits, one short of the club record. Radke struck out three and walked two before leaving after six innings while trailing 4-0.

Texas took a 1-0 lead in the third on consecutive doubles by Rodriguez and Rusty Greer. Rodriguez led off the fifth with his sixth homer to extend Texas' lead to 2-0.

In the sixth, Benji Gil led off with a single and Newson followed with his fourth homer to put the Rangers ahead 4-0.

Dean Palmer and Gil had RBI singles and Rodriguez drove in another run on a groundout in the four-run seventh, which gave Texas an 8-0 lead.

Kelly said his team had little chance against the Rangers on Monday.

"The Rangers hit 'em hard, they hit 'em soft, they hit 'em over the fence," Kelly said. "They had their hitting shoes on. I don't know if anybody would have beat 'em tonight. We couldn't get anything going, and they played a super game."

Astros' win stops three-game slide

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston pitcher Donne Wall doesn't claim to be overpowering. Being in control can be just as effective sometimes.

It certainly was Monday night as Wall's superb seven innings helped the Astros shut out the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-0.

The victory ended a three-game losing streak for the Astros and gave Wall (2-2) some much-needed confidence. He struck out nine, tying his career high last June 5 against Colorado.

But Wall said the strikeouts are deceiving.

"I'm not really a strikeout pitcher," Wall said. "But if I can hit my spots and mix up my pitches, I can be effective. I felt good and strong. I'm glad to finally have a good outing."

Wall was hammered his previous two outings, giving up 12 earned runs in a total of 7 1-3 innings. He was slowed by a strained groin much of the last three weeks, but he felt good Monday night, at least partially because he was facing Dodgers star Hideo Nomo (5-5).

"It's exciting to face him," Wall said. "You know he's always going to give you a good outing, so you have to pick up your own game.

"This is probably one of my better starts this year, and I needed it. I've been struggling with my confidence."

The Dodgers were baffled by Wall, managing only five hits and three walks in seven innings.

"He doesn't throw hard," catcher Tom Prince said. "The way he beats you is to pinpoint his pitches and only give you the fastball when you least expect it. His best pitch seems to be his changeup.

"He pitched a great game. You don't get as many strikeouts as he did tonight unless you're a pretty good pitcher. We had a couple of chances against him, but he wouldn't let us break through."

"He's a control pitcher," Dodgers manager Bill Russell said. "When he's on, he can be tough and he was tonight. That's why he had nine strikeouts. He's not overpowering, but he's got a good breaking ball and he can spot it.

"We had just as many hits as they did, the difference was they came up with the big one and we didn't."

That big hit was by Brad Ausmus, just one of many players who have helped Houston fashion a 5-1 lifetime record against Nomo. It's the right-hander's worst record against any NL team. His career ERA vs. Houston (4.93) is also his worst.

Blast was HOME RUN

NEW YORK (AP) — There are home runs and there are Home Runs. The thing Andres Galarraga hit Saturday at Pro Player Stadium in Miami fits the latter category, with a capital H and a capital R.

Batting with the bases loaded against Marlins ace Kevin Brown, Galarraga sent a shot into the unoccupied third deck of the stadium. There was no scramble for the baseball.

"Nobody sits up there," explained Ron Colangelo of the Marlins. "It's too far away."

The area is covered by a blue tarp and Galarraga's ball soared into the 20th row, took a huge bounce and settled 10 rows beyond that. The tarp softened the landing. Had it hit concrete, the ball might have bounded right out of the building.

In an instant came the announcement.

The homer by the Colorado Rockies slugger had traveled 573 feet. Upon further review, the distance was recalculated at 529 feet. The difference was the distance from where the ball initially landed and where it finally stopped.

The Marlins came up with an exact distance that quickly because every team maintains a stadium grid as part of baseball's home run promotion with MCI long distance. The blueprint charts the distance from home plate to every spot in the stands from foul pole to foul pole, providing an instant measurement.

Circumstantial evidence convicted bomber

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — No one saw Timothy McVeigh make a bomb. No one saw him blow up the Oklahoma City federal building. No one heard him confess to the crime.

With no witnesses and no admission of guilt, prosecutors placed in front of jurors a set of circumstances that when viewed in succession, appeared to be more than coincidence.

"He's either the bomber or he's the unluckiest man in the world," McVeigh prosecutor Larry Mackey said.

Jurors chose the former.

At 9:02 a.m. on April 19, 1995, an inexplicable explosion turned downtown Oklahoma City into a scene of horror, heroism, smoking concrete and mangled bodies.

About an hour later, 80 miles away, a 29-year-old man in a yellow Mercury Marquis was pulled over for not having a license plate.

It was McVeigh's last morning of freedom.

As he sat in his cell, the FBI figured out the explosion was a bomb and traced the serial number of a burnt truck axle to a Kansas garage. The owner described the man he rented the truck to, making John Doe No. 1 the most hunted man in America.

Two days after the bombing, as he was about to make bail, McVeigh was arrested because he resembled the suspect. Since he refused to talk, and could not be placed at the scene, investigators turned to footwork — looking for clues, making connections, and pressing acquaintances for incriminating evidence.

There wasn't one piece of evidence that was the key to the prosecution's case, but there were a lot of coincidences.

AP news analysis

— McVeigh used a number of aliases, including Bob Kling, the name used by the man who rented the Ryder truck that blew up the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.

— He rented sheds that could have been used to store the two tons of ammonium nitrate fertilizer used in the bomb.

— Eldon Elliott, the owner of the Kansas auto body shop, identified McVeigh as the man who rented the Ryder truck.

—The FBI lab found explosive residue on his clothing and his fingerprint was found on a receipt for the purchase of a type of fertilizer used in the bombing.

Although not required to prove motive, prosecutors had plenty.

— McVeigh had anti-government literature in his car, and a computer message on his sister's computer said federal agents would "swing in the wind one day" for their "treasonous actions against the Constitution." It ended with the words: "Die, you spineless, cowardice bastards."

— McVeigh's Army buddy Michael Fortier and his wife, Lori, testified McVeigh told them months in advance of his plot to blow up the federal building to avenge the FBI siege on the Branch Davidians near Waco, Texas.

— Fortier said he cased the Murrah building with McVeigh, who pointed out where he would hide a getaway car.

The prosecution also tiptoed around minefields — the shaky witnesses, the FBI errors. Rather than bring in evidence gathered by FBI scientists who were discredited in a recent Justice Department report, prosecutors cut them from the witness list and sacrificed their testimony.

Defense attorneys promised they would prove McVeigh innocent. But their case was hobbled when the judge ruled they could not present evidence from a federal informant who said she uncovered a white supremacist plot to blow up a federal building months before McVeigh carried out his bombing.

And the defense was not allowed to offer theories that lead attorney Stephen Jones had floated for months — that the bombing conspiracy may have involved terrorists from as far away as the Middle East or Northern Ireland.

EDITOR'S NOTE — Michael Fleeman, a Los Angeles-based reporter for The Associated Press, covered the Baby M custody battle, and the O.J. Simpson and Timothy McVeigh trials.

McVeigh verdict gives nation chance to heal

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — One by one, the families lined up at the slippery elm that had outlived the Oklahoma City bombing to nourish it with water representing tears they had shed for the dead.

Some poured all they had, symbolizing the grief they had resolved. Others sprinkled only a few drops; some tears will never be forgotten. Slowly, the ground beneath the tree became muddy.

"I really feel like I can go on with my life now," said Dan McKinney, whose wife, Linda, and niece, Shelly, were killed in the blast on April 19, 1995.

McKinney emptied about three-quarters of his bottle of water at the base of the tall, leafy "survivors' tree" that stands across the street from where the Alfred P. Murrah building was reduced to rubble. He thought he might drink the rest.

"That way it'll always be with me," he said.

Relatives of the 168 people who lost their lives gathered here Monday night, hours after the nation learned that Timothy McVeigh, a 29-year-old Gulf War veteran, had been convicted of murder and conspiracy.

Now the nation will wait again as jurors decide whether McVeigh will be sentenced to die for the deadliest act of terrorism in the United States.

The verdict brought cheers here and at the federal courthouse in Denver, where McVeigh had been on trial since April 24. After U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch left the bench, one man in the courtroom raised both fists over his head. People embraced and burst into tears.

Rudy Guzman, whose brother, Marine Capt. Randy Guzman, died in the bombing, stood sobbing outside the courthouse: "There's no relief at all."

In Washington, President Clinton said it was "a very important and long overdue day for the survivors and families of those who died in Oklahoma City." But he, too, acknowledged that no verdict can end the anguish.

"This brings some peace," said Deloris Watson, whose grandson was severely injured in the building's day care center. "But my P.J.'s lungs are no better than when the explosion occurred. This will remain with us for as long as we live."

Aren Almon, whose 1-year-old daughter, Baylee, died in the blast and was carried from the building by a firefighter in one of the most heartbreaking images of the catastrophe, offered her thanks to the jury.

"I don't think they're going to regret this. They made the right decision. He was guilty. I hope he'll get the death penalty," she said.

Baylee was one of 19 children who perished.

The attention now is on the penalty for McVeigh. Like Ms. Almon, many said he should be shown no mercy.

"I don't think the conventional methods should be used. I think they should amputate his legs without anesthesia and shove bamboo rods up his leg," said a tearful William Baay, a rescue worker who had sifted through the shattered concrete and glass and twisted metal.

"He killed my son and he's not human now," said Charles Tomlin, who lost his son, Ricky. "He's an animal. Only an animal can do what he did."

Inside his small, ranch-style house in Pendleton, N.Y., McVeigh's father, William, quietly watched the verdict on television. Nearby was his daughter, Jennifer, who described her brother's anti-government fervor to jurors.

In a statement, they asked for prayers on Timothy's behalf: "Even though the jury has found Tim guilty, we still love him very much and intend to stand by him no matter what happens."

James Nichols, the brother of co-defendant Terry Nichols, said the trial proved nothing. He accused the government of a conspiracy.

"They've made accusations, Terry and Tim done this, and Terry and Tim done that, but they've backed it up with no evidence," he told reporters outside his farm in Decker, Mich. "Those jurors had a lot of pressure on them: 'What do we do?' And public pressure changes peoples' minds."

Evidence of the bomb's destruction still stood around those who came to the flower-bedecked fence surrounding the bomb site.

The steel skeletons of nearby buildings ripped apart by the blast are rusting with exposure. In other buildings, gaping holes remain where shattered windows have not been replaced.

Where the federal building once stood, nothing is left but an empty expanse of grass.

The water continued to trickle onto the survivors' tree.

"It feels good," said Amy Stiers, whose stepmother and cousin lost their lives.

Mother grieves after infants are killed

MIAMI (AP) — Olga Hernandez had declined offers to have her autistic 17-year-old son placed in a mental health treatment center. Now she regrets it.

Antonio Ramos was charged with murder Monday after allegedly tossing his 4-month-old twin brother and sister six floors to their deaths from the balcony of their suburban Miami apartment.

"I didn't want to give him up ... I love him so much and I didn't have the heart to put him in an institution," Hernandez said through sobs in television interviews. "And now look what happened, I lost all three of them. I lost my three babies."

Neighbors said they saw Antonio throw the twins off the balcony Sunday afternoon at the family's suburban Miami apartment.

Joshua and Jasmin Vasquez died four minutes apart that night at a hospital.

Hernandez said Antonio doesn't understand what he's done; police said he has a mental age of 3 or 4.

Antonio suffers from autism, multiple sclerosis, a brain tumor and emotional problems, Hernandez said. "He's handicapped," she said.

He was charged with two counts of second-degree murder and placed in a mental hospital.

Hernandez said Antonio liked to handle the twins, but wasn't allowed to because they were so small. They were born prematurely and had been home for about three weeks.

George Morlas said he was on a nearby balcony relaxing with friends when he saw Antonio throw the infants to the ground.

"At first I thought they had to be dolls, the way he didn't think twice about it," he told The Miami Herald. "I wanted to kick the guy's butt who did it, but then I looked in the corner. He was sitting there, his mouth wide open and he was shaking real bad and I knew he wasn't in his right mind."

A judge must decide if Antonio is competent to stand trial, said state prosecutor Katherine Fernandez Rundle. If not, he would be placed in a mental institution.

"We've looked at all aspects, the history, balancing the need for safety and treatment for him, and the safety of others," Rundle said. "Obviously it is a very difficult, tragic situation because you have these two innocent babies and you have someone who is mentally challenged."

Herbal remedies vs. drugs

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: In several columns, you have described imported herbal remedies as being unsafe. I have read that, according to government statistics, about 60,000 people die every year from the side effects of pharmaceutical drugs and 140,000 people are hospitalized.

Why do you ignore this information? You promote the use of drugs with such zeal that I wonder if you are a "shill" for the drug companies. You don't have to be an M.D. to know that our bodies can react badly to any drug.

DEAR READER: Yes, they can — and often do. But, as I have repeatedly stated, you have to look at the risk/benefit ratio for any medication.

For example, in the past 50 years, thousands of people have died from taking penicillin. Are you suggesting that, based on this observation, doctors should withhold penicillin therapy in the presence of life-threatening infection? I think not.

The benefits of such therapy clearly outweigh the very real but ordinarily inconsequential risks. Doctors make such decisions every day, based on valid scientific studies proving drugs' effectiveness.

This is not true of most imported herbal remedies, which have not been thoroughly tested, have not been proved effective, and are often laced with dangerous components (such as cortisone) that do not appear on the labels. Thus, a person who takes an herbal remedy is, in a very real sense, performing his own experiment. If the risk is death and the benefit is questionable, why take a chance?

As I have said before, when an herbal remedy has passed the muster of scientific scrutiny, I'll endorse it — but not before.

Finally, I'm not a "shill" for the drug companies. If you were a regular reader of my column, you'd know that I often argue against using medication unnecessarily. I believe that people are frequently over-medicated and tend to rely inappropriately on drugs, both prescription and over-the-counter.

Each person who chooses to take a medication — even something as ordinarily innocuous as aspirin — must carefully analyze the risks and benefits of so doing.

To give you more information, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports "Consumer Tips on Medicines" and "Fads II: Herbs and Other Healing Fads." Other readers who would like copies should send $2 for each report, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title(s).

1 arrested

Failure to take care of city traffic citations resulted in the arrest of a 28-year-old male Monday morning.

Officers arrested the man in the 2600 block of Avenue V at 11:13 a.m. on warrants for no liability insurance, expired motor vehicle inspection sticker and failure to appear.

In other activity Monday, Scurry County park employee Larry Harding notified officers at 9:27 p.m. that a county-owned trailer had been stolen from the Towle Park barn. An offense report for Class A theft was submitted.

Two reports for criminal trespass were submitted at 1:02 p.m. in reference to people trespassing at a residence in the 2100 block of Avenue M.

An offense report for disorderly conduct and for Class C assault was submitted at 11:22 p.m. in reference to a disturbance in the 4600 block of College Avenue.

Water slide collapses, one student killed

CONCORD, Calif. (AP) — The amusement park loudspeaker announcement told students to get on the bus for home, but one group of high school seniors rushed onto the huge water slide for one last ride.

The 3-story-tall slide collapsed, killing one girl attending a year-end picnic, injuring 32 other teens and turning the pool red with blood.

Two teens remained in critical condition today.

"I heard a crash of the slide breaking. There was blood in the water, quite a bit of blood," said Mark Fisher, a student at Castro Valley High School who witnessed Monday's accident from another slide.

"People who were getting up were in shock," he said. "Parents everywhere were running over."

Ignoring warnings from lifeguards, seniors scheduled to graduate later this month from Napa High School rushed up the Banzai Pipeline at Waterworld USA to squeeze in one more ride, said Rick McCurley, vice president of Premier Parks, which owns Waterworld.

At 3:30 p.m., the park announced that the students were to return to their buses for the trip home, apparently causing the students to rush the lifeguard at the top of the slide, McCurley said.

The lifeguard normally allows just one person at a time down the slides but the guard couldn't control the large group of teenagers, said Steve Mayer, Waterworld's general manager.

As many as 30 students leaped onto the twisting, spiraling slide. The first few down braced themselves as others piled on, with many holding hands to form a long chain.

Johnson

Johnson's attempts at armed robbery. Just two weeks later, Johnson and his brother, George Edward Miles, were arrested for the robbery and shooting of a 61-year-old grocery store owner in Colorado City.

Don Burrus survived two gunshots to the head, though he never fully recovered and died a few years later. He was able to describe his assailants, which led to the arrest of Johnson and Ms. Miles.

The trial took place in November of the same year and it took a 132nd District Court jury just an hour to convict Johnson and 30 minutes to sentence him to death.

Ms. Miles pleaded guilty and is serving a life equivalent sentence of 60 years.

Johnson has admitting the killing, and says he has changed. "I've come into contact with religion," said Johnson, who has converted to the Moorish Science Temple and now goes by the surname Johnson Bey.
