Magazine Story Links Patty Hearst, Jack Scott

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst rode cross-country with sports activist Jack Scott four months after she was kidnaped and at one point declined Scott's offer to drive her anywhere she wanted, including home, Rolling Stone magazine says in its new issue.

"I want to go where my friends are going," Miss Hearst was quoted as telling Scott as they drove toward the East Coast to meet SLA members.

Associate Editor Howard Kohn and reporter David Weir said their account was based on information from unidentified sources who "talked to Patty Hearst; they were there; they helped her."

Scott, who once told reporters "I never met anyone who told me she was Patty Hearst" could not be reached immediately for comment.

Miss Hearst announced after her kidnaping she had taken the name "Tania."

Kohn, the Rolling Stone writer, made headlines himself two years ago when he was involved in a story that was later determined false.

While working on a wide-ranging inquiry into the narcotics trade in the Detroit area for the Detroit Free Press, Kohn reported he had been kidnaped by drug dealers and held overnight. He said he escaped a murder attempt.

The account was questioned by authorities and the Free Press, after an investigation of its own, confronted Kohn with inconsistencies it had uncovered. Kohn acknowledged the kidnaping had not happened.

He was dismissed by the newspaper June 9, 1973, and later charged by authorities with making a false report of a crime. He pleaded no contest and was sentenced to six months probation.

Neither Kohn nor Rolling Stone editors could be reached for comment.

Kohn and Weir were interviewed on NBC's "Today Show."

The Rolling Stone reporters said that:

—Miss Hearst was confined, apparently in a closet, for four weeks immediately after she was kidnaped from her Berkeley apartment on Feb. 4, 1974, by the SLA. In an affidavit filed last week in federal court here, Miss Hearst said she was held in a closet for nine weeks.

—Miss Hearst asked to be permitted to join the SLA but most members of the group were opposed. It was SLA leader Donald DeFreeze, who called himself "Cinque," who convinced others to accept her.

—When she was released from confinement, Miss Hearst was allowed to move freely among SLA members and sat in on the group's "daily political study sessions."

—When six members of the SLA died in a shootout with Los Angeles Police, Miss Hearst and SLA members Bill and Emily Harris were a few blocks away listening to radio accounts of the confrontation. The Harrises quickly bought a used car and left Los Angeles, with Miss Hearst hiding in the back seat under a blanket, for San Francisco.

—Sports activist Jack Scott was introduced to the Harrises after word was spread that he wanted to write a book on the organization. The Harrises invited Scott to a Berkeley apartment, where he met Patty Hearst for the first time and agreed to drive her to the East Coast.

—The Harrises "found other means" of leaving Berkeley for the Scotts' New York City apartment. Scott and Miss Hearst, "posing as man and wife," drove eastward. Miss Hearst was "very uptight" and "felt extremely vulnerable to being recognized along the way," Weir said, but there was no problem. The group met fugitive Wendy Yoshimura in New York and then went to a Pennsylvania farmhouse rented by Scott's wife, Micki.

—At one point during the trip, Kohn and Weir said Scott stopped the car and told Miss Hearst he would drive her anywhere she wanted to go, including home to her parents, but she declined his offer, saying, "I want to go where my friends are going."

—During the summer at the Pennsylvania farmhouse, Miss Hearst had a long discussion with Scott about her conversion to the SLA, which Kohn and Weir said "was as much emotional as political. She had felt isolated emotionally and she was disappointed in her parents and in Steven Weed, her fiance, and their response to the SLA demands."

—Miss Hearst identified her kidnapers as DeFreeze, Nancy Ling Perry and Willie Wolfe, all of whom died in the Los Angeles shootout.

—At the end of the summer when the farmhouse lease ex-

Police Officials Reject Gunmen's Plane Demand

LONDON (AP) — Three gunmen holding seven hostages in a sweltering 10-by-12-foot basement storeroom of a restaurant since early Sunday demanded a plane today to fly them out of Britain. Police officials turned them down.

Italy's consul-general, who talked to the gunmen through a hole in the storeroom wall, told newsmen not only do they want a plane but they "seem fully prepared to exploit the hostages to get their freedom." The hostages are Italians.

Police Commander Ernest Bond said "they will not be getting planes or cars."

A psychiatrist said one of the gunmen appears unstable and there is a risk he might use his gun if police attack. The psychiatrist listened for some time at an air duct which carries conversation from the storeroom.

Police, some armed and wearing bullet-proof vests, ringed the restaurant but made no move to attack. The gunmen have a shotgun and two pistols.

The gunmen invaded the restaurant, named the Spaghetti House, in the fashionable Knightsbridge section at 1:45 a.m. Sunday as nine employes were closing up. The gunmen's target was 11,000 pounds — $23,100 — the night's proceeds for the restaurant and others affiliated with it.

One of the employes shoved a bank satchel containing the money under a table, escaped and called the police. When officers surrounded the area and the gunmen realized they could not escape, they herded the other eight employes into the storeroom. Late Sunday they released one of the hostages as a sign of good faith.

All three gunmen originally were believed to be West Indians, but police said today they thought two of them were West Indians and the other was a Nigerian, presumably because of their accents. All the hostages are Italians.

Italian Ambassador Roberto Ducci and Consul-General Mario Manca went to the restaurant today when the hostages asked to speak to someone in their own language. Ducci said as he left, "The hostages are in fairly good condition."

The windowless storeroom holds canned food but has only one box to sit on. Police have sent in water, coffee, cigarettes and a portable lavatory. But one police officer said, "it must be a stinking hole in there by now."

On Sunday, the gunmen made "vague demands for certain people to be released" from jail, but the two prisoners they named had already completed their sentences, Police Commissioner Sir Robert Mark said

"They have been told there can be no bargain of any kind," he added.

The seven hostages are managers or deputy managers of restaurants in the Spaghetti House chain who had gone to the Knightsbridge building with their takings.

The seven were named as Mario Roscelli, Enrico Mainini, brothers Gino and Bruno Berni, Renato Nasta, Pasqual Garicola and Giovanni Sorano. The released hostage was identified as Alfredo Olivelli.

LATE BULLETINS

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pipe bombs set with time-delay fuses were discovered during the weekend in underground storage tanks at three Pittsburgh gasoline stations in what the FBI described today as a multimillion-dollar extortion plot against major oil companies.

BRYAN, Tex. (AP) — Bryan High School, the No. 1 Texas schoolboy football team, may have to forfeit its first three victories of the season because of an ineligible player, school officials said today.

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Portugal's premier today ordered troops to take over Lisbon's leftist-controlled radio and television stations, but reliable sources said that at one station soldiers refused to obey orders.

Reaction To Executions Spreads

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Three men and two women armed with submachine guns and pistols robbed the pay office of the Spanish social security administration in Barcelona of $600,000 today and seriously wounded two armed guards, police said. One guard was reported dying.

Unofficial sources blamed the holdup on the urban guerrilla group Revolutionary Anti-Fascist Patriotic Front — FRAP —which lost three members to government execution squads Saturday for the killing of policemen.

Robbers Disguised

The Barcelona robbers were disguised as doctors and nurses, workers at the pay office said. On their way to waiting cars the robbers opened fire at policemen on duty at the entrance, police said.

In the Basque country of northern Spain, more than 50,000 workers began a 48-hour strike to protest Saturday's executions, which also included two Basque nationalists. The five executions set off angry demonstrations throughout Western Europe and moves to isolate Spain diplomatically.

Cabinet In Session

Prime Minister Carlos Arias Navarro called the cabinet into emergency session to discuss the government's response to the protests at home and abroad against the executions at dawn Saturday.

There were violent demonstrations in Western Europe. Twelve nations called their ambassadors home from Madrid to show their displeasure with the regime of Generalissimo Francisco Franco. The Mexican government ordered all connection between Mexico and Spain broken.

The Spanish government in turn began recalling its envoys from European capitals.

It was Spain's worst crisis since the civil war in 1936-39. The Spanish public was seriously divided, and the country was increasingly isolated.

Heavy police reinforcements patrolled the streets in the Basque country. Informed sources reported at least 40,000 persons on strike in Guipuzcoa province and San Sebastian, the Basque capital; 11,000 idle in Vizcaya province and close to 5,000 in Navarre.

An estimated 30,000 persons in the Basque country stopped work Saturday when they learned of the executions. On Sunday, civil guardsmen opened fire in Algorta, a guerrilla stronghold on the northern coast, as a crowd of 2,000 poured through the streets shouting "Murderers, we will avenge our dead!" Six persons were reported wounded and scores were arrested.

Riot police in Madrid dispersed 1,500 young demonstrators who attempted Sunday to turn a mass into a requiem service for the five. Several persons were detained, but there was no violence.

From Scandinavia to Greece, thousands demonstrated against the Franco regime and the 82-year-old dictator's refusal to commute the death sentences of the five as he had those of six other convicted police killers Friday night.

City Calls Truck Ban Moratorium

By GEORGE MASSEY

A moratorium has been called on ticketing trucks parked in residential areas while the city council finishes a study on possible parking limitations, James Brown, city manager, said today.

Brown said he talked with Police Chief Harold Wallace last week and told him that the moratorium had been requested by the council.

Wallace said today police will comply with the moratorium, and not place tickets on trucks parked in residential areas until further notice by the council.

Late last week, some truck operators noticed police in their neighborhoods, but Brown said the police are taking information for the council's study.

He said the police are listing the type of trucks parked at homes, including such information as type, length, height, weight and number of axles.

"Some of this information gathering is being done at night and in the early morning hours," Brown said, "because the police have some slack time then."

The moratorium was called after a large group of Midland truckers made an appearance at the last council session in protest of a 9-month-old parking regulation that makes it illegal to park any vehicle larger than ¾-ton on any public street or private property in any residence district for a period of more than 30 minutes.

Several of the truckers at the council session suggested that parking limits be placed by the number of axles a truck has — makng it illegal to park in a residential any truck with more than two axles.

The truckers said the parking problem would take care of itself with the more than two-axle rule by eliminating the big diesel rigs and tractor-trailers with five axles. The truckers said that length and height requirements would be taken care of with the two-axle rule because two axles require that operating height and length be restricted for safety reasons.

Ford Compromise Offer Fails To Satify House Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a compromise proposal from President Ford, the House intelligence committee appeared clearly headed today for a decision to take its demand for secret information to the House.

All six Democrats at a committee meeting declared their support for putting to the House a resolution saying defiance of subpoenas for the information is "a grave matter requiring appropriate enforcement."

All three Republicans at the meeting urged the committee instead to continue negotiations with the White House on a compromise for obtaining the information and thus avoid a constitutional confrontation.

As Ford's advisers began supplying the committee with non-secret documents, Chairman Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., demanded secret information including the names of intelligence agents.

Pike said demands for full access to secrets should be taken to the House. He declared that Ford's limits could be used "to withhold from this committee almost anything they (White House aides) want to."

Excluded from material that Ford's counsel proposed to provide the committee were the names of intelligence agents. Pike said the names were necessary for the committee to determine why reports from agents are sometimes ignored.

Contending Ford has compromised only to the committee's right to publicly disclose secrets, Pike said: "They are willing to be very reasonable on the subject of what we release to the public, if they don't give us very much to release."

But the committee's ranking Republican, Rep. Robert McClory of Illinois, said volumes of material the White House has promised to turn over would give the committee staff more than it could handle for now.

"The President is personally willing to put his credibility on the line as far as providing this material is concerned," McClory said.

Pike repeated to the committee his statement Sunday that he would endorse an agreement under which the committee would not publicly disclose anything Ford wanted to be kept secret without getting a court order.

But Pike contended the real issue was adequate release of documents to the committee itself for it to do its work. He said White House conditions for such release were too limited.

Drawing a quick CIA denial, Pike said Sunday he doubts U.S. intelligence is good enough to predict a military attack on America.

"No way are we getting our money's worth," he declared on CBS' "Face the Nation."

As Pike's committee headed for a possible showdown with President Ford on access to secret information, the chairman also accused Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger of trying to block the committee's investigation of intelligence failures.

Pike said he and Ford were close to agreement on public disclosure of information but that he still planned to ask committee action today on taking the fight for access to information to the full House.

Pike's claim that U.S. intelligence is not good enough to warn of an impending attack drew a fast rebuttal from the Central Intelligence Agency.

Pike said, "If an attack were to be launched on America in the very near future, it is my belief that America would not know that the attack were about to be launched."

A CIA spokesman responded later that CIA Director William E. Colby "obviously disagrees with Chairman Pike's assertion that our country is open to surprise attack," adding that Colby still says U.S. intelligence is the best in the world.

Calling Kissinger a possible candidate for a contempt of Congress citation if the committee's fight for information goes that far, Pike said: "I really think it has been Secretary Kissinger who has been the one who has been trying the hardest to block the committee's investigation."

Pike said he believes the problem is not intelligence gathering but above that at the analysis and decision-making level where "it just bogs down every single time."

In other congressional business scheduled this week, the Senate opens debate on a bill aimed at avoiding natural gas shortages predicted this winter in 14 Midwest and Mid-Atlantic states.

As in other areas of energy policy, the natural gas debate involves differences between Congress and the Ford administration. The President wants to end price controls on natural gas to allow prices to rise and thus encourage further exploration for natural gas.

Many legislators maintain consumers cannot afford to pay the higher costs that would result.

Under the measure being considered, pipelines that will not have enough natural gas to serve their customers this winter would be allowed to buy gas from producing states, mainly Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma, at prices up to $1.25 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Permian Basin OIL & GAS LOG

Sterling, Howard, Ward Areas Gain Wildcat Activity

Exploratory sites have been staked in Sterling and Ward counties and a wildcat reentry is planned for Howard.

General American Oil Co. of Texas, operating from Odessa, plans to drill No. 1 Reed, a 7,800-foot try in Sterling, one location southwest of the Wolfcamp oil discovery in the Credo, Southeast field.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and 1,600 feet from east lines of section 18, block 23, H&TC survey, 14 miles northwest of Sterling City. It also is ⅝ mile southeast of the Wolfcamp gas pay opener in the field, which was completed in 1973.

The gas pay opener, Monsanto Co. No. 1 Nieta, was completed Sept. 24, 1973, for 46,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 7,199-7,206 feet.

Ward Venture

John W. Sweatt, Midland, will drill No. 1 Eudaley as a 3,000-foot wildcat in extreme Southeast Ward, two miles east of production in the Payton field.

Location is 1,207 feet from northwest and 10,890 feet from northeast lines of section 32, block 1, H&TC survey, six miles west of Imperial.

Howard Workover

Great Southwest Oil & Gas Co., Houston, will reenter No. 1 Thelma J. Cole, a Northeast Howard County 7,920-foot failure, and plug back to wildcat depth of 3,500 feet.

The project was plugged and abandoned in April, 1973.

Location is 5,090 feet from south and 1,360 feet from west lines of section 35, block 26, H&TC survey, ⅝ mile north of the Strawn discovery in the Vincent, South field.

Exxon Completes Ward Extension

Exxon Corp. has completed No. 1 Henry Gas Unit as a ½-mile east extension to Devonian production in the Block 16 gas field of Ward County.

It gauged a calculated, absolute open flow of 2.25 million cubic feet of gas per day, with gas-liquid ratio of 72,419-1. Gravity of the distillate is 56.1 degrees.

Conger Extender Takes Potential

Dorchester Exploration, Inc., Midland, has finaled a ⅝-mile west extension to Canyon gas production in the Conger field of Sterling County, 13 miles southwest of Sterling City.

No. 2-12 Carperfinaled for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 4.35 million cubic feet of gas per day, with gas-distillate ratio of 57,241-1. Gravity of the hydrocarbon liquid is 72.8 degrees.

The new producer finaled through perforations at 7,381-7,397 feet, which had been acidized with 2,500 gallons and

Sex Hormone Treatment May Yet Prove To Be Effective

By WARREN E. LEARY

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Researchers here say they've found out what went wrong 25 years ago with unsuccessful experiments to treat psychiatric disorders with sex hormones. And they say they have successfully used what they have learned to treat scores of persons suffering chronic depression.

Positive results achieved by Drs. Donald M. Broverman and William Vogel of Worcester State Hospital have stimulated a new interest in the treatment and may help overcome professional bias against it that stems from research that failed decades ago, they said.

The research psychologists previously reported decreased depression with few adverse side effects in women treated with large doses of the female hormone estrogen. Subsequent treatment of women at the hospital and on an outpatient basis reaffirmed those results, they said last week at a conference at the Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology.

Continuing their collaboration with two scientists from the Worcester Foundation, Drs. Edward L. Klaiber and Yutaka Kobayashi, the psychologists have begun hormone treatment with depressed men using the male hormone testosterone.

"So far the results with males looks quite good, but so far we've treated just seven or eight patients," Vogel said.

"We are reluctant to say the results are as definite as reported with women because we've treated so few men, but we have been encouraged enough to believe it's wise to continue with men."

Broverman said he and his colleagues are succeeding while others failed because they are using far greater doses of sex hormones. The large doses are used to overcome what the researchers discovered to be hormonal resistance in the body.

"Simply giving a hormone doesn't mean everyone's body will use it," Broverman said. The researchers found out that some bodies stockpile hormones without breaking them down, and some persons need more hormones than previously believed to get the desired reaction.

Broverman said the hormone treatments work by inhibiting the production of an enzyme called monoamine oxidase (MAO). The enzyme is found in higher than normal levels in depressed persons and is known to restrict another enzyme that stimulates nerve action, he said.

In females, when natural estrogen is highest in the body during the menstrual cycle, MAO concentration goes down. And when MAO is up and estrogen is lower before menstruation, normal women sometime complain of nervousness, fatigue and mild depression, Broverman said.

The researchers said they used natural hormones extracted from animals in the treatments and that these have not been linked with any serious side effects.

Artificially produced estrogens, as used in birth control pills, have been linked with blood clotting and strokes and are not used in the depression treatment, Broverman said.

Future Of Capital Punishment Faces Court

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The future of capital punishment is a major question that the Supreme Court may decide during its 1975-76 term beginning today.

Another question is the role that Justice William O. Douglas, crippled last Dec. 31 by a stroke, will play in the deliberations of the nation's highest court.

Douglas, 76, the senior member of the court, was hospitalized for much of last term after his stroke. In the ensuing months, he wrote the court's main opinion in two cases, filed brief dissenting opinions in 20 cases and heard arguments on four days.

At a news conference at the court March 20, and again at a meeting with reporters in Yakima, Wash., Sept. 11, Douglas said he has given no thought to retiring.

The court will formally convene next Monday, the traditional first Monday in October, but in an unprecedented move the justices are meeting for a week in advance of that date to screen cases.

The change in procedure was prompted by the increasing number of cases being appealed.

Approximately 750 appeals and petitions for review have been filed with the court since it adjourned for the summer on June 30. The court will winnow these and other cases at this week's conference and at weekly one-day conferences throughout the term. The court accepts for argument and decision less than 5 per cent of cases presented to it.

In the past, the weeklong conference has been held after formalities on the legally prescribed opening day. This year, the justices will start hearing arguments immediately when they mount the bench.

Other cases to be considered by the court include a challenge to federal campaign spending limits, continued controversy over school busing and President Ford's appeal for the power to impose license fees on oil imports.

The constitutionality of the death penalty is questioned in a North Carolina case which the court heard arguments on last April but which it failed to decide. The case will be reargued this term, but no date has been set.

The court has been asked to review at least 31 other death sentences from North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana and Texas.

The justices last ruled on the death penalty in 1972 when they held by a 5-4 vote that existing laws were unconstitutional because they gave too free a hand to judges and juries. Thirty-four states have passed new laws since then and more than 330 men and women are on death row. The last execution in the country was in 1967.

Hearst Asked To Join SLA

pired, arrangements for returning Miss Hearst and the Harrises to hiding in California were made by a "new team" that included Kathleen Soliah, now herself a fugitive, and her brother Steve. Scott again drove Miss Hearst, this time westward.

Miss Hearst, the Harrises, Wendy Yoshimura and Steve Soliah were all arrested in San Francisco last week.

All are being held — Miss Hearst without bail and the others in lieu of bail — and a hearing is scheduled in San Francisco on Tuesday for a report by court-appointed psychiatrists examining Miss Hearst.

Her mental state came under increasing scrutiny today as results were studied of tests that her lawyer says are subjecting her to mental anguish.

Attorney Terence Hallinan said he will try again Tuesday to convince U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Carter to move Miss Hearst from her jail cell to a hospital for the rest of the psychological testing.

Hallinan said he would respond at a news conference today to "many questions which have come up and introduce the newest member of the defense team" — noted criminal lawyer F. Lee Bailey.

Meanwhile, the Chicago Tribune said in today's editions that more than 30 prominent Californians have been warned by police to take security precautions because their names appeared on a list found in the Harrises apartment in San Francisco.

The Tribune said most of the persons named in what it called the "assassination list" were executives of Pacific Gas & Electric Co. and International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning would neither confirm nor deny the existence of such a list.

The Tribune said a detailed report on Charles de Brettville, chairman of the Bank of California and a director of PG&E, was also found in the Harrises' apartment. The newspaper said the report included maps of de Brettville's Woodside, Calif., home, and notes on his daily routine.

In Hartford, Conn., on Sunday, Bailey called a news conference to fire a round in what may become a duel between Browning and the defense team.

Bailey said he suspected that Browning, a former politician with roots in San Mateo County where Miss Hearst is being held, may have used his influence to get jail authorities to tape a conversation between Miss Hearst and a friend, Patricia Tobin.

Excerpts of the conversation were made public by Judge Carter. Miss Hearst was quoted as saying she did not want bail if she was going to be a prisoner in her parents' home and she described herself as a "revolutionary feminist."

Bailey said Miss Hearst "wasn't warned that any taping was going on. The fact that the U.S. attorney in the case is from the same district where the jail is located is rather suspect."

Browning said Sunday night, "I understand Mr. Bailey was quoted as saying there has been too much shooting from the hip in this case. It sounds to me as if he is continuing to shoot from the hip in that statement."

Bailey also said he believes that at Tuesday's hearing Judge Carter will issue a gag order against public statements about the case by those involved.

Three court-appointed psychiatrists and a psychologist are to deliver preliminary reports at the hearing on Miss Hearst's mental state. Based on those reports, Carter may decide whether Miss Hearst is, as her lawyers claim, too frail to be cross-examined on the contents of her controversial affidavit.

Mexico, Spain Break Relations

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican government is breaking all connections between Mexico and Spain in protest against the execution of five terrorists by the Franco regime, the Interior Ministry has announced.

All flights between Mexico and Spain by Iberia, the Spanish airline, and Aeromexico, the Mexican airline, were cancelled. Spain's official government representative was asked to close his office and leave the country within 48 hours. The correspondent of the Spanish news agency EFE and the representative of the Spanish tourism office also were ordered out of the country.

Mexico has never established diplomatic relations with the Franco regime. Mexican affairs in Spain are administered by the ambassador to Portugal, and the Foreign Ministry instructed him to close the offices of all Mexican enterprises operating in Spain. These include the National Tourism Council, the Foreign Trade Institute, the National Foreign Trade Bank, film companies and any other businesses.

President Luis Echeverria also called for the expulsion of Spain from the United Nations.

The Interior Ministry made the announcement Sunday night.

Police Arrest Bar Owner On Gambling Charge

The owner of the Hitching Post Bar, 2307 E. Front St., was arrested late Saturday for allowing gambling on the premises, police said.

Mrs. Lucta Erada Postert, 31, of 1715 E. Maple St., was charged with promotion of gambling. Judge Robert Pine set her bond at $1,500.

Officers John L. Roundtree and Ron Rice reportedly entered the bar and observed three men and a woman rolling dice on a pool table, police said.

Money was reportedly lying on the table while Mrs. Postert allegedly watched the patrons gamble, police said.

Police said they collected $22 from the table and marked it as evidence.

Midlander Dies While Working

Cecil "Jack" Watley, 33, of Midland, died Saturday afternoon of an apparent heart attack on his job.

Services were to have been at 10:30 a.m. today in the Thomas Funeral Home Chapel with burial in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Watley was born Feb. 4, 1942, at Avery. He moved to Midland nine years ago from Odessa and owned the Jack D. Watley Trucking Co. He was a Baptist.

Survivors include the widow, Madora Watley of Midland; three sons, Jack D. Watley, Wesley J. Watley and John Ray Watley, all of Midland; two daughters, Mrs. Rozanne Matheson of Clovis, N.M., and Joan Karon Watley of Midland; three brothers, Sibern Watley of Brownsboro, Amos Watley of Midland and Marvin Watley of Longview, and a sister, Mrs. Faye Groves of Bonham.

Powell Russell Dies At Corsicana

CORSICANA — Powell "Dock" Russell, 80, of Navarro County, father of Henry Russell of Lamesa, died Friday in a Corsicana hospital.

Services were to have been at 2 p.m. today in the Corley Funeral Home Chapel with burial in Oakwood Cemetery.

Russell was a longtime resident of Navarro County and a member of the Emhous Baptist Church.

Survivors include two other sons, a daughter, a brother, 22 grandchildren, 35 great-grandchildren and two greatgreat grandchildren.

Mrs. Albin Dies At Comanche

SEMINOLE — Mrs. Effie Sally Albin, 90, of Comanche, sister of Mrs. John H. Patterson of Big Lake, died Friday in a Comanche hospital.

Services were to have been at 1 p.m. today in the Singleton Funeral Home Chapel of the Chimes with burial in Seminole Cemetery.

Mrs. Albin was a former Seminole resident and had lived in Comanche the past 30 years.

Survivors include a brother and two other sisters.

Russians Claim More Centenarians

Agence France-Presse

MOSCOW — The Soviet Karabakh region in the Caucasus Mountains has an average of 144 centenarians for every 100,000 inhabitants, according to Soviet gerontologist Khoren Bozian.

Citing his recent book, the Communist Party daily Sovietsakaya Moldavia, said there is an average of eight per 100,000 in the Federal Republic of Russia, 33 in Armenia, and 51 in Georgia. Referring to the "capitalist world," the journal said there were only 1.5 in the United States, 0.7 in France, and 0.1 in Japan.

Several interviews carried out by the paper indicated hard work, no alcohol and having children all lead to a longer life. It gave the example of 168-year-old Chirani Mislimov from the Republic of Azerbaijan.

Latest Search For Hoffa's Body Results In Dead End

By PETE YOST

DETROIT (AP) — A man who said he helped bury the body of James R. Hoffa provided information that led to an unsuccessful weekend search of a nearby field for the missing ex-Teamsters boss, a Senate subcommittee investigator said.

Investigator William B. Gallinaro, who tipped local authorities that Hoffa's body might be found in the field, said his information came from an unidentified informant who was not involved in the labor leader's disappearance but who has underworld contacts.

Gallinaro said his informant believes the man who said he helped bury Hoffa is being held by "the mob" until he provides exact directions to the location of the body.

"Our informant is dealing with the mob. The mob is talking to someone who is involved in the disappearance of Jimmy Hoffa," said Keith Adkinson, another subcommittee investigator.

There is no evidence that Hoffa has been slain, but some associates have said they believe he was murdered because he was on the verge of being freed from parole restrictions which prohibited him from taking part in Teamsters activities.

Some investigators believe "the mob" may be providing information to take pressure off underworld figures being questioned in connection with Hoffa's disappearance.

A federal grand jury in Detroit has subpoenaed and taken testimony from several reputed mob figures but has produced no new information in the case, sources say.

Acting on information from Gallinaro, Michigan Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley organized a search of a 29-acre field in Waterford Township about 20 miles northwest of Detroit but found no trace of Hoffa.

Gallinaro said he is in touch with his informant and is not giving up. He said he believes Hoffa may be buried in the area that was searched Sunday morning.

"I put credence in the information because it fits what we know about the overall circumstances of the disappearance," said Vincent Piersante, head of the organized crime division of the attorney general's office.

The informnt said Hoffa was killed on the afternoon he disappeared and was placed in a grave dug in the field on the day before, according to Kelley, but the informant did not say who killed Hoffa.

Hoffa was last heard from when he telephoned his wife on July 30 and told her he was waiting at the Red Fox Restaurant to meet Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalone, described in testimony before a Senate committee as a syndicate figure in the Detroit area.

District Elects New Director

BIG SPRING — A district director for Zone 2 of the Mustang Soil and Water Conservation District will be elected at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at the First National Bank in Stanton.

Currently serving as director for Zone 2 is Bob Cox. The zone consists of all land in Martin County south of Texas 176 and east of FM 829. The director will serve a five-year term.

Newell W. Tate, chairman of the board of directors of the MSWCD, said voters must be 21 years of age and reside in a county of which all or part is in the district. Voters in the election must also own agricultural land within the subdivision where the election is being held.

Under community property laws, the wife of a landowner also owns land and is entitled to vote and hold office.

Martin County extension agent Preston Faris will conduct the election.

Cooler Weather May Be Coming

By The Associated Press

Another cool snap was southbound toward Texas today, but forecasters didn't look for it to arrive until about Wednesday.

Meanwhile skies remained clear over most of the state and there was a gentle nip to the early morning air in places.

Looking ahead, official observers held out prospects for thickening clouds and a good chance for rain in all sections by midweek. Temperatures down to the low 30s were expected in the Panhandle-Plains sector, The Associated Press reported.

With only a few scattered clouds here and there, the readings near dawn today slipped down to the lower 40s in the Big Bend country of far West Texas, while the range elsewhere was from 48 degrees at Dalhart in the Panhandle up to 69 at Tyler in East Texas.

Sunday afternoon's top marks went as high as 91 at Del Rio on the Mexican border.

The Midland area had fair weather Sunday, and should have continuing fair conditions today and tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Skies should be clear to partly cloudy Tuesday.

High temperature Sunday was 85 with an overnight low of 55.

High this afternoon should be in the upper 80s with tonight's low in the upper 50s. High Tuesday should be in the middle 80s.

Andrews Police Chief Resigns

ANDREWS — Andrews Police Chief R. W. "Tip" Tipton announced his resignation Friday to be effective Oct. 12.

He said his resignation was due to "other interests" and added he plans to move to East Texas.

Tipton has served as chief since 1971. He was a former patrolman for the Andrews Police Department.

City Manager Len Wilson said he regretted the chief's decision and said Tipton had done "an outstanding job" while serving as police cheif.

Wilson said a replacement will be named as soon as possible.

Sara Moore Awaits Tests In Isolation

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Prisoner Sara Jane Moore can enjoy a television set and a lot of privacy while awaiting psychiatric tests to see if she is mentally fit to stand trial for allegedly trying to kill President Ford.

She has been charged with attempting to assassinate the President Sept. 22 with a .38 caliber pistol. There is no word on when the psychiatric tests will begin, but a report is to be made by Nov. 18 to a federal magistrate.

Warden J. D. Williams said the court ordered that she be kept isolated.

"She will not eat or take part in any recreation with the rest of the residents until the court makes a different ruling," the warden said.

"She was quiet, generally alert and seemed physically fit," the warden said.

The 45-year-old woman's cell also includes toilet facilities and a sink, desk and chair, and overlooks the seaside city.

Pope Canonizes Native Spaniard, Raps Executions

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI has elevated Juan Macias, a Spanish-born friar, to sainthood in the Roman Catholic Church and used the occasion to criticize the Spanish government's execution of five young terrorists.

The papal mass and canonization ceremonies in St. Peter's Square were boycotted by the Spanish government, which called its Vatican ambassador home for consultation.

The pontiff, who had made three separate pleas for clemency, said "Joy would have been fuller had the events everybody knows not taken place."

Flags Stolen At Tennis Center

Bicentennial flags were stolen Thursday night and Friday night, Bill Harris, Midland tennis club tournament chairman, said today.

Seven bicentennial flags and five American flags were stolen from Midland High School's tennis courts, Harris said.

"We just want the flags returned. No charges will be filed or questions asked. Some evening, soon, if whoever took them will put them underneath the stands at the tennis courts, it will be appreciated," Harris said.

city of Oporto, police and soldiers fired into the air Sunday night in an attempt to disperse 1,000 leftists who marched on the Spanish Consulate and burned its furniture in the street. They shouted "Franco murderer" and "Death to Fascism."

The Spanish Embassy in Lisbon was sacked and burned Saturday.

Sixty policemen were injured during a riot at the Spanish Consulate in Geneva. The Spanish Embassy in The Hague was heavily damaged by fire. A bomb broke windows at the Spanish ambassador's residence in Ankara, Turkey.

Mexican President Luis Echeverria called for Spain's expulsion from the United Nations, and his government ordered all connections between Mexico and Spain broken.

The U.S. State Department refused to comment, but Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was scheduled to continue negotiations Tuesday with Spanish Foreign Minister Pedro Cortina Mauri for a new agreement extending the lease of the U.S. military bases in Spain.

Odessan Hit By Bulldozer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A construction worker on a Mountain Fuel Supply Co. pipeline was listed in "very critical" condition after a collision of two bulldozers.

The victim, Carlyle Haskill, 53, of Odessa, Tex., underwent surgery twice for injuries he suffered Saturday when a bulldozer broke loose from a towing cable, smashed into the machine he was driving and knocked him into a control panel, Davis County sheriff's deputies said.

University of Utah Medical Center personnel said Haskill was in fair condition early Sunday but worsened and underwent a operation of more than five hours later.

He worked for W. C. James, Inc., a Vernal, Utah, construction firm laying the natural gas pipeline.

The accident occurred three miles east of Bountiful. Deputies said Haskill was in the cab of one of three bulldozers connected by a cable and being pulled in tandem up a steep slope.

The cable between the first two machines broke, sending the second one crashing into Haskill's, deputies said. They said his bulldozer was mounting the slope in reverse, pulling up sections of pipe.

'Dirty Thirty' Member Speaks Here Wednesday

State Rep. Lane Denton of Waco will be in Midland Wednesday at the Midland National Bank to discuss the new voter registration law passed by the 64th Legislature.

Denton was a member of the "Dirty Thirty" legislators, who worked to expose the Sharpstown Bank scandals.

Denton will speak in the Midland room of the bank at 7:30 p.m.

Accident Kills Andrews Boy

ANDREWS — A four-year-old boy died here Sunday after suffering injuries on his grandfather's farm southeast of Andrews.

Kenneth Shannon Kinney died about 9:30 a.m. in an Andrews hospital from injuries suffered in the accident about an hour earlier.

A tractor reportedly was being used to disc weeds on the Leroy Kinney farm when the child was injured.

Services are tentatively set for 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Singleton Funeral Home Chapel of the Chimes with the Rev. Benson Kennedy, pastor of Grace Baptist Church, and the Rev. Bill Bosse, pastor of McKinney Acres Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Andrews Cemetery.

The child was born in Oak Grove, La.

Survivors include the father, Oscar L. Kinney of Andrews; the mother, Mrs. Tanya Kinney of Oak Grove, La.; the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Kinney of Andrews, and a halfsister, Paula, of Long Beach, Miss.

Magazine Says Patty Hearst Asked To Join SLA

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst asked permission to join the Symbionese Liberation Army seven weeks after she was kidnaped and took part in a bank robbery "to prove herself to the SLA," an article in the new issue of Rolling Stone magazine says.

Associate Editor Howard Kohn and reporter David Weir said today their account was based on information from unidentified sources who "talked to Patty Hearst; they were there; they helped her."

The Rolling Stone reporters said that:

—Miss Hearst was confined, apparently in a closet, for four weeks immediately after she was kidnaped from her Berkeley apartment on Feb. 4, 1974, by the SLA. In an affidavit filed last week in federal court here, Miss Hearst said she was held in a closet for nine weeks.

—Miss Hearst asked to be permitted to join the SLA but most members of the group were opposed. It was SLA leader Donald DeFreeze, who called himself "Cinque," who convinced others to accept her.

—When she was released from confinement, Miss Hearst was allowed to move freely among SLA members and sat in on the group's "daily political study sessions."

—When six members of the SLA died in a shootout with Los Angeles Police, Miss Hearst and SLA members Bill and Emily Harris were a few blocks away listening to radio accounts of the confrontation. The Harrises quickly bought a used car and left Los Angeles, with Miss Hearst hiding in the back seat under a blanket, for San Francisco.

—Sports activist Jack Scott was introduced to the Harrises after word was spread that he wanted to write a book on the organization. The Harrises invited Scott to a Berkeley apartment, where he met Patty Hearst for the first time and agreed to drive her to the East Coast.

—The Harrises "found other means" of leaving Berkeley for the Scotts' New York City apartment. Scott and Miss Hearst, "posing as man and wife," drove eastward. Miss Hearst was "very uptight" and "felt extremely vulnerable to being recognized along the way," Weir said, but there was no problem. The group met fugitive Wendy Yoshimura in New York and then went to a Pennsylvania farmhouse rented by Scott's wife, Micki.

—At one point during the trip, Kohn and Weir said Scott stopped the car and told Miss Hearst he would drive her anywhere she wanted to go, including home to her parents, but she declined his offer, saying, "I want to go where my friends are going."

—During the summer at the Pennsylvania farmhouse, Miss Hearst had a long discussion with Scott about her conversion to the SLA, which Kohn and Weir said "was as much emotional as political. She had felt isolated emotionally and she was disappointed in her parents and in Steven Weed, her fiance, and their response to the SLA demands."

—Miss Hearst identified her kidnapers as DeFreeze, Nancy Ling Perry and Willie Wolfe, all of whom died in the Los Angeles shootout.

—At the end of the summer when the farmhouse lease expired, arrangements for returning Miss Hearst and the Harrises to hiding in California were made by a "new team" that included Kathleen Soliah, now herself a fugitive, and her brother Steve. Scott again drove Miss Hearst, this time westward.

Miss Hearst, the Harrises, Wendy Yoshimura and Steve Soliah were all arrested in San Francisco last week.

All are being held — Miss Hearst without bail and the others in lieu of bail — and a hearing is scheduled in San Francisco on Tuesday for a report by court-appointed psychiatrists examining Miss Hearst.

Her mental state came under increasing scrutiny today as results were studied of tests that her lawyer says are subjecting her to mental anguish.

Attorney Terence Hallinan said he will try again Tuesday to convince U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Carter to move Miss Hearst from her jail cell to a hospital for the rest of the psychological testing.

Hallinan said he would respond at a news conference today to "many questions which have come up and introduce the newest member of the defense team" — noted criminal lawyer F. Lee Bailey.

Meanwhile, the Chicago Tribune said in today's editions that more than 30 prominent Californians have been warned by

Violent Reaction Spreads After Spanish Executions

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Three men and two women armed with submachine guns and pistols robbed the pay office of the Spanish social security administration in Barcelona of $600,000 today and seriously wounded two armed guards, police said. One guard was reported dying.

Unofficial sources blamed the holdup on the urban guerrilla group Revolutionary Anti-Fascist Patriotic Front — FRAP —which lost three members to government execution squads Saturday for the killing of policemen.

Robbers Disguised

The Barcelona robbers were disguised as doctors and nurses, workers at the pay office said. On their way to waiting cars the robbers opened fire at policemen on duty at the entrance, police said.

In the Basque country of northern Spain, more than 50,000 workers began a 48-hour strike to protest Saturday's executions, which also included two Basque nationalists. The five executions set off angry demonstrations throughout Western Europe and moves to isolate Spain diplomatically.

Cabinet In Session

Prime Minister Carlos Arias Navarro called the cabinet into emergency session to discuss the government's response to the protests at home and abroad against the executions at dawn Saturday.

There were violent demonstrations in Western Europe. Twelve nations called their ambassadors home from Madrid to show their displeasure with the regime of Generalissimo Francisco Franco. The Mexican government ordered all connection between Mexico and Spain broken.

The Spanish government in turn began recalling its envoys from European capitals.

It was Spain's worst crisis since the civil war in 1936-39. The Spanish public was seriously divided, and the country was increasingly isolated.

Heavy police reinforcements patrolled the streets in the Basque country. Informed sources reported at least 40,000 persons on strike in Guipuzcoa province and San Sebastian, the Basque capital; 11,000 idle in Vizcaya province and close to 5,000 in Navarre.

An estimated 30,000 persons in the Basque country stopped work Saturday when they learned of the executions. On Sunday, civil guardsmen opened fire in Algorta, a guerrilla stronghold on the northern coast, as a crowd of 2,000 poured through the streets shouting "Murderers, we will avenge our dead!" Six persons were reported wounded and scores were arrested.

Riot police in Madrid dispersed 1,500 young demonstrators who attempted Sunday to turn a mass into a requiem service for the five. Several persons were detained, but there was no violence.

From Scandinavia to Greece, thousands demonstrated against the Franco regime and the 82-year-old dictator's refusal to commute the death sentences of the five as he had those of six other convicted police killers Friday night.

In the northern Portuguese city of Oporto, police and soldiers fired into the air Sunday night in an attempt to disperse 1,000 leftists who marched on the Spanish Consulate and burned its furniture in the street. They shouted "Franco murderer" and "Death to Fascism."

The Spanish Embassy in Lisbon was sacked and burned Saturday.

Gunmen Hold Out In London Cellar

LONDON (AP) — One of three gunmen holding seven hostages in a sweltering 10-by 12-foot basement storeroom of a restaurant appears unstable and there is a risk he might use his gun if police attack, a psychiatrist listening in on their conversations said today.

The psychiatrist, who was called in by police as the siege entered its 36th hour, listened for some time at an air duct which carries conversation from the storeroom. Police, some armed and wearing bullet-proof vests, ringed the restaurant but made no move to attack. The gunmen have a shotgun and two pistols.

The gunmen invaded the restaurant, named the Spaghetti House, in the fashionable Knightsbridge section at 1:45 a.m. Sunday as nine employes were closing up. The gunmen's target was 11,000 pounds — $23,100 — the night's proceeds for the restaurant and others affiliated with it.

One of the employes shoved a bank satchel containing the money under a table, escaped and called the police. When officers surrounded the area and the gunmen realized they could not escape, they herded the other eight employes into the storeroom. Late Sunday they released one of the hostages as a sign of good faith.

All three gunmen originally were believed to be West Indians, but police said today they thought two of them were West Indians and the other was a Nigerian, presumably because of their accents. All the hostages are Italians.

Italian Ambassador Roberto Ducci and Consul-General Mario Manca went to the restaurant today when the hostages asked to speak to someone in their own language. Ducci said as he left, "The hostages are in fairly good condition."

The windowless storeroom holds canned food but has only one box to sit on. Police have sent in water, coffee, cigarettes and a portable lavatory. But one police officer said, "it must be a stinking hole in there by now."

On Sunday, the gunmen made "vague demands for certain people to be released" from jail, but the two prisoners they named had already completed their sentences, Police Commissioner Sir Robert Mark said

"They have been told there can be no bargain of any kind," he added.

The seven hostages are managers or deputy managers of restaurants in the Spaghetti House chain who had gone to the Knightsbridge building with their takings.

The seven were named as Mario Roscelli, Enrico Mainini, brothers Gino and Bruno Berni, Renato Nasta, Pasqual Garicola and Giovanni Sorano. The released hostage was identified as Alfredo Olivelli.

Permian Basin OIL & GAS LOG

Sterling, Howard, Ward Areas Gain Wildcat Activity

Exploratory sites have been staked in Sterling and Ward counties and a wildcat reentry is planned for Howard.

General American Oil Co. of Texas, operating from Odessa, plans to drill No. 1 Reed, a 7,800-foot try in Sterling, one location southwest of the Wolfcamp oil discovery in the Credo, Southeast field.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and 1,600 feet from east lines of section 18, block 23, H&TC survey, 14 miles northwest of Sterling City. It also is ⅝ mile southeast of the Wolfcamp gas pay opener in the field, which was completed in 1973.

The gas pay opener, Monsanto Co. No. 1 Nieta, was completed Sept. 24, 1973, for 46,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 7,199-7,206 feet.

Ward Venture

John W. Sweatt, Midland, will drill No. 1 Eudaley as a 3,000-foot wildcat in extreme Southeast Ward, two miles east of production in the Payton field.

Location is 1,207 feet from northwest and 10,890 feet from northeast lines of section 32, block I, H&TC survey, six miles west of Imperial.

Howard Workover

Great Southwest Oil & Gas Co., Houston, will reenter No. 1 Thelma J. Cole, a Northeast Howard County 7,920-foot failure, and plug back to wildcat depth of 3,500 feet.

The project was plugged and abandoned in April, 1973.

Location is 5,090 feet from south and 1,360 feet from west lines of section 35, block 26, H&TC survey, ⅝ mile north of the Strawn discovery in the Vincent, South field.

Exxon Completes Ward Extension

Exxon Corp. has completed No. 1 Henry Gas Unit as a ½-mile east extension to Devonian production in the Block 16 gas field of Ward County.

It gauged a calculated, absolute open flow of 2.25 million cubic feet of gas per day, with gas-liquid ratio of 72,419-1. Gravity of the distillate is 56.1 degrees.

Conger Extender Takes Potential

Dorchester Exploration, Inc., Midland, has finaled a ⅝-mile west extension to Canyon gas production in the Conger field of Sterling County, 13 miles southwest of Sterling City.

No. 2-12 Carperfinaled for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 4.35 million cubic feet of gas per day, with gas-distillate ratio of 57,241-1. Gravity of the hydrocarbon liquid is 72.8 degrees.

The new producer finaled through perforations at 7,381-7,397 feet, which had been acidized with 2,500 gallons and

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drawing a quick CIA denial, the chairman of the House intelligence committee says he doubts U.S. intelligence is good enough to predict a military attack on America.

Rep. Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., said, "No way are we getting our money's worth." He spoke Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation."

As Pike's committee headed for a possible showdown with President Ford on access to secret information, the chairman also accused Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger of trying to block the committee's investigation of intelligence failures.

Pike said he and Ford were close to agreement on public disclosure of information but that he still planned to ask committee action today on taking the fight for access to information to the full House.

Pike's claim that U.S. intelligence is not good enough to warn of an impending attack drew a fast rebuttal from the Central Intelligence Agency.

Pike said, "If an attack were to be launched on America in the very near future, it is my belief that America would not know that the attack were about to be launched."

A CIA spokesman responded later that CIA Director William E. Colby "obviously disagrees with Chairman Pike's assertion that our country is open to surprise attack," adding that Colby still says U.S. intelligence is the best in the world.

Calling Kissinger a possible candidate for a contempt of Congress citation if the committee's fight for information goes that far, Pike said: "I really think it has been Secretary Kissinger who has been trying the hardest to block the committee's investigation."

Pike said he believes the problem is not intelligence gathering but above that at the analysis and decision-making level where "it just bogs down every single time."

In other congressional business scheduled this week, the Senate opens debate on a bill aimed at avoiding natural gas shortages predicted this winter in 14 Midwest and Mid-Atlantic states.

As in other areas of energy policy, the natural gas debate involves differences between Congress and the Ford administration. The President wants to end price controls on natural gas to allow prices to rise and thus encourage further exploration for natural gas.

Many legislators maintain consumers cannot afford to pay the higher costs that would result.

Under the measure being considered, pipelines that will not have enough natural gas to serve their customers this winter would be allowed to buy gas from producing states, mainly

LATE BULLETINS

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pipe bombs set with time-delay fuses were discovered during the weekend in underground storage tanks at three Pittsburgh gasoline stations in what the FBI described today as a multimillion-dollar extortion plot against major oil companies.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's advisers began giving non-secret documents to the House Intelligence Committee today as members debated whether to accept Ford's terms for getting secret information.

BERLIN (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and East German Communist leaders conferred here today, but details of the discussions were not reported.

Sex Hormone Treatment May Yet Prove To Be Effective

By WARREN E. LEARY

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Researchers here say they've found out what went wrong 25 years ago with unsuccessful experiments to treat psychiatric disorders with sex hormones. And they say they have successfully used what they have learned to treat scores of persons suffering chronic depression.

Positive results achieved by Drs. Donald M. Broverman and William Vogel of Worcester State Hospital have stimulated a new interest in the treatment and may help overcome professional bias against it that stems from research that failed decades ago, they said.

The research psychologists previously reported decreased depression with few adverse side effects in women treated with large doses of the female hormone estrogen. Subsequent treatment of women at the hospital and on an outpatient basis reaffirmed those results, they said last week at a conference at the Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology.

Continuing their collaboration with two scientists from the Worcester Foundation, Drs. Edward L. Klaiber and Yutaka Kobayashi, the psychologists have begun hormone treatment with depressed men using the male hormone testosterone.

"So far the results with males looks quite good, but so far we've treated just seven or eight patients," Vogel said.

"We are reluctant to say the results are as definite as reported with women because we've treated so few men, but we have been encouraged enough to believe it's wise to continue with men."

Broverman said he and his colleagues are succeeding while others failed because they are using far greater doses of sex hormones. The large doses are used to overcome what the researchers discovered to be hormonal resistance in the body.

"Simply giving a hormone doesn't mean everyone's body will use it," Broverman said. The researchers found out that some bodies stockpile hormones without breaking them down, and some persons need more hormones than previously believed to get the desired reaction.

Broverman said the hormone treatments work by inhibiting the production of an enzyme called monoamine oxidase (MAO). The enzyme is found in higher than normal levels in depressed persons and is known to restrict another enzyme that stimulates nerve action, he said.

In females, when natural estrogen is highest in the body during the menstrual cycle, MAO coneentration goes down. And when MAO is up and estrogen is lower before menstruation, normal women sometime complain of nervousness, fatigue and mild depression, Broverman said.

The researchers said they used natural hormones extracted from animals in the treatments and that these have not been linked with any serious side effects.

Artificially produced estrogens, as used in birth control pills, have been linked with blood clotting and strokes and are not used in the depression treatment, Broverman said.

Future Of Capital Punishment Faces Court

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The future of capital punishment is a major question that the Supreme Court may decide during its 1975-76 term beginning today.

Another question is the role that Justice William O. Douglas, crippled last Dec. 31 by a stroke, will play in the deliberations of the nation's highest court.

Douglas, 76, the senior member of the court, was hospitalized for much of last term after his stroke. In the ensuing months, he wrote the court's main opinion in two cases, filed brief dissenting opinions in 20 cases and heard arguments on four days.

At a news conference at the court March 20, and again at a meeting with reporters in Yakima, Wash., Sept. 11, Douglas said he has given no thought to retiring.

The court will formally convene next Monday, the traditional first Monday in October, but in an unprecedented move the justices are meeting for a week in advance of that date to screen cases.

The change in procedure was prompted by the increasing number of cases being appealed.

Approximately 750 appeals and petitions for review have been filed with the court since it adjourned for the summer on June 30. The court will winnow these and other cases at this week's conference and at weekly one-day conferences throughout the term. The court accepts for argument and decision less than 5 per cent of cases presented to it.

In the past, the weeklong conference has been held after formalities on the legally prescribed opening day. This year, the justices will start hearing arguments immediately when they mount the bench.

Other cases to be considered by the court include a challenge to federal campaign spending limits, continued controversy over school busing and President Ford's appeal for the power to impose license fees on oil imports.

The constitutionality of the death penalty is questioned in a North Carolina case which the court heard arguments on last April but which it failed to decide. The case will be reargued this term, but no date has been set.

The court has been asked to review at least 31 other death sentences from North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana and Texas.

The justices last ruled on the death penalty in 1972 when they held by a 5-4 vote that existing laws were unconstitutional because they gave too free a hand to judges and juries. Thirty-four states have passed new laws since then and more than 330 men and women are on death row. The last execution in the country was in 1967.

Hearst Asked To Join SLA

police to take security precautions because their names appeared on a list found in the Harrises apartment in San Francisco.

The Tribune said most of the persons named in what it called the "assassination list" were executives of Pacific Gas & Electric Co. and International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning would neither confirm nor deny the existence of such a list.

The Tribune said a detailed report on Charles de Brettville, chairman of the Bank of California and a director of PG&E, was also found in the Harrises' apartment. The newspaper said the report included maps of de Brettville's Woodside, Calif., home, and notes on his daily routine.

In Hartford, Conn., on Sunday, Bailey called a news conference to fire a round in what may become a duel between Browning and the defense team.

Bailey said he suspected that Browning, a former politician with roots in San Mateo County where Miss Hearst is being held, may have used his influence to get jail authorities to tape a conversation between Miss Hearst and a friend, Patricia Tobin.

Excerpts of the conversation were made public by Judge Carter. Miss Hearst was quoted as saying she did not want bail if she was going to be a prisoner in her parents' home and she described herself as a "revolutionary feminist."

Bailey said Miss Hearst "wasn't warned that any taping was going on. The fact that the U.S. attorney in the case is from the same district where the jail is located is rather suspect."

Browning said Sunday night, "I understand Mr. Bailey was quoted as saying there has been too much shooting from the hip in this case. It sounds to me as if he is continuing to shoot from the hip in that statement."

Bailey also said he believes that at Tuesday's hearing Judge Carter will issue a gag order against public statements about the case by those involved.

Three court-appointed psychiatrists and a psychologist are to deliver preliminary reports at the hearing on Miss Hearst's mental state. Based on those reports, Carter may decide whether Miss Hearst is, as her lawyers claim, too frail to be cross-examined on the contents of her controversial affidavit.

everria called for Spain's expulsion from the United Nations, and his government ordered all connections between Mexico and Spain broken.

The U.S. State Department refused to comment, but Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was scheduled to continue negotiations Tuesday with Spanish Foreign Minister Pedro Cortina Mauri for a new agreement extending the lease of the U.S. military bases in Spain.

Spanish opposition leaders said the nation faces two alternatives as long as Franco remains in power: continued violence or a military coup. One leading Socialist said the "only hope" he sees for defusing the situation is for Franco to step down in favor of his designated heir, Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon.

Dozens more accused terrorists are awaiting trial for murder, and at least two leaders of the Basque guerrilla movement ETA — Basque Land and Liberty — are expected to be convicted and put to death.

Mexico, Spain Break Relations

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican government is breaking all connections between Mexico and Spain in protest against the execution of five terrorists by the Franco regime, the Interior Ministry has announced.

All flights between Mexico and Spain by Iberia, the Spanish airline, and Aeromexico, the Mexican airline, were cancelled. Spain's official government representative was asked to close his office and leave the country within 48 hours. The correspondent of the Spanish news agency EFE and the representative of the Spanish tourism office also were ordered out of the country.

Mexico has never established diplomatic relations with the Franco regime. Mexican affairs in Spain are administered by the ambassador to Portugal, and the Foreign Ministry instructed him to close the offices of all Mexican enterprises operating in Spain. These include the National Tourism Council, the Foreign Trade Institute, the National Foreign Trade Bank, film companies and any other businesses.

President Luis Echeverria also called for the expulsion of Spain from the United Nations.

The Interior Ministry made the announcement Sunday night.

Sara Moore Awaits Tests In Isolation

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Prisoner Sara Jane Moore can enjoy a television set and a lot of privacy while awaiting psychiatric tests to see if she is mentally fit to stand trial for allegedly trying to kill President Ford.

Today marked her third day at the isolated cell with wall-to-wall carpeting at the Metropolitan Correctional Center here, where she was brought from San Francisco.

She has been charged with attempting to assassinate the President Sept. 22 with a .38 caliber pistol. There is no word on when the psychiatric tests will begin, but a report is to be made by Nov. 18 to a federal magistrate.

Warden J. D. Williams said the court ordered that she be kept isolated.

"She will not eat or take part in any recreation with the rest of the residents until the court makes a different ruling," the warden said.

"She was quiet, generally alert and seemed physically fit," the warden said.

The 45-year-old woman's cell also includes toilet facilities and a sink, desk and chair, and overlooks the seaside city.

Odessan Hit By Bulldozer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A construction worker on a Mountain Fuel Supply Co. pipeline was listed in "very critical" condition after a collision of two bulldozers.

The victim, Carlyle Haskill, 33, of Odessa, Tex., underwent surgery twice for injuries he suffered Saturday when a bulldozer broke loose from a towing cable, smashed into the machine he was driving and knocked him into a control panel, Davis County sheriff's deputies said.

University of Utah Medical Center personnel said Haskill was in fair condition early Sunday but worsened and underwent a operation of more than five hours later.

He worked for W. C. James, Inc., a Vernal, Utah, construction firm laying the natural gas pipeline.

The accident occurred three miles east of Bountiful. Deputies said Haskill was in the cab of one of three bulldozers connected by a cable and being pulled in tandem up a steep slope.

The cable between the first two machines broke, sending the second one crashing into Haskill's, deputies said. They said his bulldozer was mounting the slope in reverse, pulling up sections of pipe.

A helicopter at the scene rushed Haskill to the hospital.

Meanwhile, the House will devote much of this week to a $111.9 billion defense spending bill. The House Appropriations Committee chopped $9 billion from the Pentagon's defense request.

Also before the House is the long-standing dispute over the U.S. arms embargo against Turkey. Saying U.S. bases in Turkey could be lost for good this time, Ford is trying once again to get the House to approve a bill to permit limited U.S. arms sales to Turkey.

Police Arrest Bar Owner On Gambling Charge

The owner of the Hitching Post Bar, 2307 E. Front St., was arrested late Saturday for allowing gambling on the premises, police said.

Mrs. Lucta Erada Postert, 31, of 1715 E. Maple St., was charged with promotion of gambling. Judge Robert Pine set her bond at $1,500.

Officers John L. Roundtree and Ron Rice reportedly entered the bar and observed three men and a woman rolling dice on a pool table, police said.

Money was reportedly lying on the table while Mrs. Postert allegedly watched the patrons gamble, police said.

Police said they collected $22 from the table and marked it as evidence.

Mrs. Albin Dies At Comanche

SEMINOLE — Mrs. Effie Sally Albin, 90, of Comanche, sister of Mrs. John H. Patterson of Big Lake, died Friday in a Comanche hospital.

Services were to have been at 1 p.m. today in the Singleton Funeral Home Chapel of the Chimes with burial in Seminole Cemetery.

Mrs. Albin was a former Seminole resident and had lived in Comanche the past 30 years.

Survivors include a brother and two other sisters.

Midlander Dies While Working

Cecil "Jack" Watley, 33, of Midland, died Saturday afternoon of an apparent heart attack on his job.

Services were to have been at 10:30 a.m. today in the Thomas Funeral Home Chapel with burial in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Watley was born Feb. 4, 1942, at Avery. He moved to Midland nine years ago from Odessa and owned the Jack D. Watley Trucking Co. He was a Baptist.

Survivors include the widow, Madora Watley of Midland; three sons, Jack D. Watley, Wesley J. Watley and John Ray Watley, all of Midland; two daughters, Mrs. Rozanne Matheson of Clovis, N.M., and Joan Karon Watley of Midland; three brothers, Sibern Watley of Brownsboro, Amos Watley of Midland and Marvin Watley of Longview, and a sister, Mrs. Faye Groves of Bonham.

Pallbearers were Joe Bailey, Larry Green, David Snodgrass, Bob Busby, Lib Heredia and Bob White.

Powell Russell Dies At Corsicana

CORSICANA — Powell "Dock" Russell, 80, of Navarro County, father of Henry Russell of Lamesa, died Friday in a Corsicana hospital.

Services were to have been at 2 p.m. today in the Corley Funeral Home Chapel with burial in Oakwood Cemetery.

Russell was a longtime resident of Navarro County and a member of the Emhous Baptist Church.

Survivors include two other sons, a daughter, a brother, 22 grandchildren, 35 great-grandchildren and two greatgreat grandchildren.

Russians Claim More Centenarians

Agence France-Rresse

MOSCOW — The Soviet Karabakh region in the Caucasus Mountains has an average of 144 centenarians for every 100,000 inhabitants, according to Soviet gerontologist Khoren Bozian.

Citing his recent book, the Communist Party daily Sovietsakaya Moldavia, said there is an average of eight per 100,000 in the Federal Republic of Russia, 33 in Armenia, and 51 in Georgia. Referring to the "capitalist world," the journal said there were only 1.5 in the United States, 0.7 in France, and 0.1 in Japan.

Several interviews carried out by the paper indicated hard work, no alcohol and having children all lead to a longer life. It gave the example of 168-year-old Chirani Mislimov from the Republic of Azerbaijan.

Latest Search For Hoffa's Body Results In Dead End

By PETE YOST

DETROIT (AP) — A man who said he helped bury the body of James R. Hoffa provided information that led to an unsuccessful weekend search of a nearby field for the missing ex-Teamsters boss, a Senate subcommittee investigator said.

Investigator William B. Gallinaro, who tipped local authorities that Hoffa's body might be found in the field, said his information came from an unidentified informant who was not involved in the labor leader's disappearance but who has underworld contacts.

Gallinaro said his informant believes the man who said he helped bury Hoffa is being held by "the mob" until he provides exact directions to the location of the body.

"Our informant is dealing with the mob. The mob is talking to someone who is involved in the disappearance of Jimmy Hoffa," said Keith Adkinson, another subcommittee investigator.

There is no evidence that Hoffa has been slain, but some associates have said they believe he was murdered because he was on the verge of being freed from parole restrictions which prohibited him from taking part in Teamsters activities.

Some investigators believe "the mob" may be providing information to take pressure off underworld figures being questioned in connection with Hoffa's disappearance.

A federal grand jury in Detroit has subpoenaed and taken testimony from several reputed mob figures but has produced no new information in the case, sources say.

Acting on information from Gallinaro, Michigan Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley organized a search of a 29-acre field in Waterford Township about 20 miles northwest of Detroit but found no trace of Hoffa.

Gallinaro said he is in touch with his informant and is not giving up. He said he believes Hoffa may be buried in the area that was searched Sunday morning.

"I put credence in the information because it fits what we know about the overall circumstances of the disappearance," said Vincent Piersante, head of the organized crime division of the attorney general's office.

The informnt said Hoffa was killed on the afternoon he disappeared and was placed in a grave dug in the field on the day before, according to Kelley, but the informant did not say who killed Hoffa.

Hoffa was last heard from when he telephoned his wife on July 30 and told her he was waiting at the Red Fox Restaurant to meet Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalone, described in testimony before a Senate committee as a syndicate figure in the Detroit area.

District Elects New Director

BIG SPRING — A district director for Zone 2 of the Mustang Soil and Water Conservation District will be elected at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at the First National Bank in Stanton.

Currently serving as director for Zone 2 is Bob Cox. The zone consists of all land in Martin County south of Texas 176 and east of FM 829. The director will serve a five-year term.

Newell W. Tate, chairman of the board of directors of the MSWCD, said voters must be 21 years of age and reside in a county of which all or part is in the district. Voters in the election must also own agricultural land within the subdivision where the election is being held.

Under community property laws, the wife of a landowner also owns land and is entitled to vote and hold office.

Martin County extension agent Preston Faris will conduct the election.

Cooler Weather May Be Coming

By The Associated Press

Another cool snap was southbound toward Texas today, but forecasters didn't look for it to arrive until about Wednesday.

Meanwhile skies remained clear over most of the state and there was a gentle nip to the early morning air in places.

Looking ahead, official observers held out prospects for thickening clouds and a good chance for rain in all sections by midweek. Temperatures down to the low 30s were expected in the Panhandle-Plains sector, The Associated Press reported.

With only a few scattered clouds here and there, the readings near dawn today slipped down to the lower 40s in the Big Bend country of far West Texas, while the range elsewhere was from 48 degrees at Dalhart in the Panhandle up to 69 at Tyler in East Texas.

Sunday afternoon's top marks went as high as 91 at Del Rio on the Mexican border.

The Midland area had fair weather Sunday, and should have continuing fair conditions today and tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Skies should be clear to partly cloudy Tuesday.

High temperature Sunday was 85 with an overnight low of 55.

High this afternoon should be in the upper 80s with tonight's low in the upper 50s. High Tuesday should be in the middle 80s.

Andrews Police Chief Resigns

ANDREWS — Andrews Police Chief R. W. "Tip" Tipton announced his resignation Friday to be effective Oct. 12.

He said his resignation was due to "other interests" and added he plans to move to East Texas.

Tipton has served as chief since 1971. He was a former patrolman for the Andrews Police Department.

City Manager Len Wilson said he regretted the chief's decision and said Tipton had done "an outstanding job" while serving as police cheif.

Wilson said a replacement will be named as soon as possible.

Pope Canonizes Native Spaniard, Raps Executions

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI has elevated Juan Macias, a Spanish-born friar, to sainthood in the Roman Catholic Church and used the occasion to criticize the Spanish government's execution of five young terrorists.

The papal mass and canonization ceremonies in St. Peter's Square were boycotted by the Spanish government, which called its Vatican ambassador home for consultation.

The pontiff, who had made three separate pleas for clemency, said "Joy would have been fuller had the events everybody knows not taken place."

Macias, son of an impoverished Spanish shepherd, served as doorman of a Dominican monastery. He died 330 years ago in Peru, but attained sainthood through a miracle which took place in 1949 and was accepted by the church last year.

Actor Found Dead In Norfolk Prison

NORFOLK, Mass. (AP) — Mark Frechette, who costarred in the 1970 film "Zabriskie Point," was found dead Saturday in Norfolk State Prison. He apparently died when the bar of a 160-pound weight he was lifting fell on his throat. Frechette, 27, was serving a prison term for armed robbery.

Accident Kills Andrews Boy

ANDREWS — A four-year-old boy died here Sunday after suffering injuries on his grandfather's farm southeast of Andrews.

Kenneth Shannon Kinney died about 9:30 a.m. in an Andrews hospital from injuries suffered in the accident about an hour earlier.

A tractor reportedly was being used to disc weeds on the Leroy Kinney farm when the child was injured.

Services are tentatively set for 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Singleton Funeral Home Chapel of the Chimes with the Rev. Benson Kennedy, pastor of Grace Baptist Church, and the Rev. Bill Bosse, pastor of McKinney Acres Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Andrews Cemetery.

The child was born in Oak Grove, La.

Survivors include the father, Oscar L. Kinney of Andrews; the mother, Mrs. Tanya Kinney of Oak Grove, La.; the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Kinney of Andrews, and a halfsister, Paula, of Long Beach, Miss.

Two-Day Arts Symposium Opens At LBJ Library

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Soprano Beverly Sills was to give the keynote address today for a two-day Lyndon B. Johnson Library symposium on "The Arts: Years of Development, Time of Decision."

Lady Bird Johnson, widow of former President Lyndon B. Johnson, will speak briefly and introduce Humphrey, who was her husband's vice president.

Among those taking part in panel discussions will be Schuyler Chapin, former manager of the Metropolitan Opera; San Antonio architect O'Neill Ford; opera singer Robert Merrill; Maurice Abravanel, conductor of the Utah Symphony; painter James Wyeth; actor Kirk Douglas; U.S. Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., and Donald Quayle, senior vice-president of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

The symposium's date was selected to commemorate Johnson's signing 10 years ago of legislation establishing the National Endowment on the Arts and the National Endowment on the Humanities.

Northeastern Flood Losses In Millions; At Least 10 Killed

By The Associated Press

Floodwaters continued to recede throughout the Northeast today as thousands of families returned home to clean up in the wake of rains dumped by Tropical Storm Eloise. At least 10 persons were dead.

Pennsylvania, hardest-hit of a dozen states from Virginia to New England, reported six persons dead, 6,000 still homeless, and damages totaling more than $100 million. The state capital, Harrisburg, was for a time patrolled by National Guardsmen although it had been spared major damage. The Guardsmen were being deactivated today.

The flooding also left pollution problems that were only beginning to be felt today. Officials said water supplies may have been contaminated in some Pennsylvania communities, and Delaware officials feared damage to shellfishing in Chesapeake Bay could last for years.

An 11-mile section of the New York State Thruway was reopened Sunday after having been closed by floodwaters. In Connecticut, a 14-year-old boy was missing after being swept from a raft in the Steele Brooke in Watertown.

When the Susquehanna River began overflowing its banks in Pennsylvania's agricultural and industrial heartland late last week, President Ford declared all or parts of 21 counties eligible for federal disaster relief.

The river crested Saturday night, earlier than expected, and one local Civil Defense official, P. Franklin Hartzel of Milton, declared: "This one turned out to be not as bad as expected."

Nevertheless, the flood was rated the third worst in the state's history. State officials estimated damage to roads and agriculture alone at more than $100 million.

Meanwhile, the National Hurricane Center in Miami reported Hurricanes Faye and Gladys moving through widely separated portions of the Atlantic today, neither posing an immediate threat to land.

Viet Money Changes Wipe Out Rich

By MATT FRANJOLA

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Foreigners arriving from Saigon report that the recent currency conversion has wiped out the wealth of many in South Vietnam's middle and upper classes, causing despair and talk of moving to the countryside to farm.

"Nothing changed for the poor," one of the travelers said, "but among the wealthy a sense of hopelessness and resignation has finally set in."

Vietnamese distrustful of banks had millions of piasters hidden in their homes. Single persons were allowed to exchange the equivalent of $20 worth of the old government's currency at a rate of 500 old piasters for one new one. Families could exchange $132 worth.

Old piasters now are worthless.

The government forbade anyone to exchange money for someone else, but the travelers said some persons got relatives and friends to make exchanges for them.

The currency reform was accompanied by other economic measures: lower fixed prices of basic commodities, nationalization of some small shops and some "voluntary" communization of land, the foreigners said. Rice, cloth, sugar, tobacco, cement and steel bars were reduced 30 to 70 per cent.

There also are increased denunciations of former wealthy, privileged persons and merchants.

"People don't talk freely any more," said one traveler. "They are afraid of being denounced. The 'bo doi' (military cadres) are encouraging the population to inform on friends, relatives or neighbors for real or imagined wrongs.

"Nobody wanted to leave Saigon after the liberation. Now, however, some realize that farming will be the way of life in the future and they are beginning to talk of going to the 'new economic areas,' (sparsely populated rural areas set aside for development).

"Those talking of leaving want land near water. Some want to go now before the good land is taken."

Textile mills, electronic assembly plants and other factories are reported short of raw materials, causing production to lag and contributing to unemployment.

The Communist revolution is said to have hit the urban masses hardest. Those arriving here said Vietnamese coming from the provinces reported life for the rural 65 per cent of the population has changed little or for the better.

In once-insecure rural areas, living is reported better.

"Before, people settled in gray areas were intimidated by both sides. Now they pay taxes to one side. They can sleep easier at night," one foreigner said.

The travelers report the rampant crime after the Communist victory has decreased. There is less looting at night in the city. Reports of former soldiers of the South Vietnamese army holding up buses and of small-scale resistance to the Communists still filter into the capital, but they are difficult to verify, the sources said.

Pigeons Faster Than Mail Service

Agence France-Presse

SOFIA — Inter-city mail can be carried quicker in Bulgaria by pigeon than by the usual post office van, judging by a test carried out Sunday between here and Tirnova, 180 miles away.

Two pigeons belonging to international champion breeder Krassimir Stoyanov flew mail in 5 hours and 10 minutes. The mail van drove in 15 minutes later.

Many 'Over-Warned' In Hurricane Areas

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Posting of hurricane warnings over a wide area leaves some persons "over-warned," but Dr. Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center, says the precaution is necessary.

"Any time we put up a hurricane warning it is my estimate that about 75 per cent of the people placed under it have been over-warned," Frank said.

But, while the warnings may lead to actions which seem unneeded through hindsight, "the residents of the Gulf Coast are aware that over-warning and positive actions are necessary," he said.

Frank visited the 53rd Weather Reconnaisance Squadron at Keesler Air Force Base and took an aerial tour of the area damaged by Hurricane Eloise last week.

Frank said he felt the Miami-based center did "about as well as we can do" in forecasting and tracking the hurricane, which slammed ashore near Panama City Beach, Fla.

"Our average error in forecasting a storm's position in 24 hours is about 100 miles, and our landfall for Eloise was only about 50 miles east of where our initial estimates were," he said.

Frank said he felt the Mississippi Gulf Coast, devastated by Hurricane Camille in 1969, is "the most hurricane-aware and most hurricane-prepared community in the nation."

Golden Gate Park Filled For Rock Music Festival

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — They came to Golden Gate Park by the tens of thousands, decked out in everything from swaddling clothes to aluminum foil.

It was a musical reincarnation of the flower-children spirit of the 1960s.

It was fun in the fog on a Sunday afternoon — and a counterpoint to a week full of news of Patty Hearst and the attempt on President Ford's life.

The Grateful Dead and Jefferson Starship filled the park with rock music, together in a free Golden Gate Park concert for the first time since the late 1960s.

Organizers of the concert, a coalition of religious, political and community groups staging a "Unity Fair," estimated the crowd at 40,000 to 50,000 persons.

They squeezed into Lundley Meadow and spilled onto roads and hillsides and climbed trees and sat picnic-style on the damp grass.

Soap bubbles, balloons and marijuana smoke floated above a sea of bobbing heads, and Frisbees sailed through the fog-wet air.

"If every day were like this, we wouldn't have anything to worry about," said Steve Severdia, 26, of nearby San Anselmo.

Behind the stage a pregnant woman was going into labor.

"If there's a doctor in the house, would he please come backstage?" someone announced from the stage. "There's a woman having a baby back there."

The crowd cheered.

The woman in labor was taken to a hospital.

Clothing ranged from jeans to black evening dresses and high-heeled shoes. Babies dozed or watched wide-eyed.

The Jefferson Starship played first. And while the stage was prepared for the Grateful Dead, a speaker espoused the value of meditation. Then another said that the "Unity Fair" was in honor of the San Quentin Six, on trial for murder.

The response from the crowd was a fraction of the cascade of shouts and applause that greeted the Grateful Dead.

Defense Punishes Declarer's Error

One advantage of playing in a mixed pair tournament is that you don't have to be married to a girl to execute a squeeze play with her active cooperation. Since this is a family newspaper, however, I'll report on a squeeze produced at the recent national tournament in Miami Beach by Carol and John R. Crawford, an intensely married couple.

Mrs. Crawford shrewdly led the jack of hearts, suspecting that a diamond lead would set up a trick for declarer. South played low from dummy and won with the ace of hearts.

South properly cashed the ace of spades and continued with the jack of spades. When West threw a club, declarer should have overtaken with dummy's queen, but he made the mistake of playing low from dummy.

Roof Falls In

South led the jack of clubs, and the roof fell in. Crawford won with the queen of clubs and led the three of diamonds. South put up the king, losing to the ace.

Mrs. Crawford switched back to hearts, and the defenders took three heart tricks, ending in the East hand. Crawford then cashed the ace of clubs, and dummy was squeezed.

Dummy held two spades and three diamonds and had to find a discard. If dummy parted with a spade, East would take two spade tricks. If dummy threw a diamond, West would get a trick with the nine of diamonds. Either way, the defenders were sure to take the rest.

DAILY QUESTION

In third position, after two passes, you hold: S-K 9 5 3, H-K 9 5 3, D-Q 6 3, C-A Q. What do you say?

ANSWER: Since you have 14 points in high cards, you are virtually obliged to open the bidding. Many experts would bid one heart, planning to abandon the spades unless partner can respond in the suit. Some experts, reluctant to open a four-card major (especially a weak suit), would open with one diamond, even though it is only a three-card suit.

Dixie Girl Named 'Miss Wheelchair'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Dixie Lee Etheridge, 21, of Greenville, Miss., was crowned Miss Wheelchair America 1976 Sunday night.

The contestants represented 32 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico in the fourth annual pageant.

First runnerup was Shirley R. Holmes of Carbondale, Ill.

Wanda Rolfe of Murray, Ky. was second runnerup, Janice M. Kelly of Kansas City, Mo. was third runnerup, and Linda Casn of Dyer, Ind., was fourth runnerup.

Dentist Charges Schools Add Fourth 'R' To Curriculum

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — The nation's schools are contributing to a fourth "R" besides "reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic," says the president of the American Dental Association. It might be called "rotten" teeth.

In remarks prepared for the Georgia Dental Association, Dr. Lynden M. Kennedy of Dallas, Tex., called today for schools to stop the sale of candy and sweetened soft drinks as a major step in preventing dental disease in children.

Kennedy said many childhood dental problems can be traced to poor nutrition.

"Because of this, the dental profession feels strongly that schools should not contribute to the problem by allowing children easy access to sugar-rich foods and beverages through vending machines," he said.

Kennedy noted that most school curriculums include health and nutrition studies. Effective preventive programs against disease can be developed only through education in matters pertaining to personal and public health, he added.

The dental association's annual session continues through Wednesday.

Mohair Wearing Many Faces

Since mohair came off Aunt Susie's sofa and received beauty treatments for lightweight charm, it has soared into the fashion firmament, according to a recent release by the Mohair Council of America.

Not content with its role of softness, color and function, mohair now is the queen of fall '75 texture. No weave is too intricate, no knit too novel for this fiber. It lends a natural hand to leading designers' creations from daytime casuals to sheer evening sizzlers. Quilted, brushed, ribbed, fuzzy, hairy, lacy or classically smooth, it takes to new trends like leading lady to a good script. Whether it's a story with a Chinese, tenty or tubular motif, mohair makes it a four-star hit.

Although mohair has a romantic history predating Cleopatra, it is right in step with down-to-earth times. Its value is in its stamina, lightweight warmth, color-fastness.

Colors take on mohair magic and in this season of the muted tone, its talent for translation is significant. Comfort is another quality valued by on-the-go Americans. A natural ability to breathe plus natural insulation provide warmth on chilly days, cool ease in higher temperatures. Whatever the state of the Union, an American can enjoy the fashion delights of mohair.

Woman Becomes Lift Operator

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—Chris Movrich, 22, has been hired as the first woman fork lift operator at a paper products manufacturer here.

She rides around the plant on a tow motor truck among mountains of shredded paper bales. A good part of her job involves lifting bales from freight box cars into the plant.

Miss Movrich has worked for a restaurant and an insurance company, but she said the fork lift job is the one she's most enjoyed and that she intends to keep it.

Dear Abby

—By Abigail van Buren

Choices Optional On Plot Selection

DEAR ABBY: My sister, Jane, was widowed after 45 years of marriage to Joe Smith. When Joe died, she bought a double plot with a big single grave stone with "SMITH" across it. She put his name on one side of it, plus the date of his birth and date of his death. The other side was for her when her time came.

Well, she ups and marries Chester Lind, who was never married before. Chester has expressed a wish to be buried side by side with my sister, Jane, and he has two plots to accommodate them in his family gravesite.

My sister is no longer a Smith, so how can she be buried with Joe Smith in the Smith family plot even if she wanted to?

How is a problem like this handled?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: It's up to your sister to make her wishes known soon. If she wants to be laid to rest beside her first husband, she should so advise her present husband. Mer marker would then read, "JANE SMITH LIND." If she doesn't make her wishes known, my guess is that if she outlives Chester, she'll join the Smiths. If not, Chester will bury her with the Linds.

DEAR ABBY: I feel sorry for the Sunday school teacher who has a discipline problem with the pastor's 6-year-old son and doesn't know what to do. Being a pastor myself, I know it's a fact that every Tom, Dick and Harry threaten to quit the church if they don't get their way.

I've heard everything from, "If my daughter doesn't get to play the organ," to, "If my grandfather doesn't get to preach his own funeral service, I am going to quit this church!"

When anyone tries to blackmail me in this manner, I simply get out my pen and notepad and ask them to put it in writing. And I hold them to it afterwards, too!

No church needs members like those I have lost. If it weren't for the bad language, I'd tell them all to go to hell!

MISSOURI PASTOR

DEAR PASTOR: And if it weren't for your restraint, you'd be looking for a new pulpit.

DEAR ABBY: I am 22, but I look much younger. My husband is 30, but he looks older. (He's losing his hair fast.) The problem is that everybody thinks I am his daughter, and this irritates us. In fact, we almost hate to go any place where people don't know us because everybody makes that mistake.

Have you any suggestions on how I can look older without dressing like an old lady?

LOOKS LIKE A KID

DEAR LOOKS: The solution to your problem could be to get your husband to look YOUNGER. Has he thought of a hairpiece? That would help. In the meantime, enjoy looking "like a kid." Too soon will come the day when time, the subtle thief of youth, will change all that.

Parliamentarians Began First Full Year Saturday

Permian Basin Unit of the National Association of Parliamentarians, organized last February, began its first full year when Mrs. J. Howard Hodge, president, presided during the September meeting held Saturday afternoon at Midland College.

Mrs. Hodge served as president of the Texas State Association of Parliamentarians during 1968-1969.

Mrs. Robert O. Love of Houston, professional registered parliamentarian and president of TSAP for the year 1975-76, Mrs. K. D. North of Andrews and Mrs. W. F. Shepherd of Midland were introduced as new members of the unit by Mrs. Taylor E. Bowers, membership chairman. Guests of Mrs. Bowers were Mrs. Richard D. Jons, Mrs. W. Martin Neill and Hester Williams.

The Permian Basin Unit of NAP is the only parliamentary group in Texas west of Fort Worth, north of Austin and south of Amarillo which is affiliated with the state and national associations of parliamentarians.

Yearbooks were distributed by Mrs. Ben W. Golladay, yearbook chairman.

Mrs. Bowers and Mrs. Harold D. Lovett, delegates to the 21st annual convention of the Texas State Association of Parliamentarians in Dallas, reported on convention. Mrs. Lovett was declared a member of the TSAP nominating committee to meet in March 1976 at Houston.

"Conduct of Business in Committees" was topic of the one-hour program given by Mrs. Lovett, professional registered parliamentarian, who serves as secretary of the unit. Mrs. Lovett is the only local registered parliamentarian of the five registered parliamentarians holding membership in the unit.

Regular monthly meetings will be held at MC. Robert's Rules of Order newly Revised (General Henry M. Robert) is the parliamentary authority.

COM-MOMS—Mrs. Paul Harvard, left, is the new first vice president, and Mrs. Allen Beatty is new president of the City of Midland Swim Team COM-MOMS Club.

HINTS FROM Heloise

It's The Tops When It Comes To Pepper!

Dear Folks;

I happen to have a son who adores pepper (that's the stuff that ordinarily goes with salt), and I ate at their dinner table one night, and for goshin' sakes if I didn't pick up the pepper shaker and truly get some pepper for a change without shaking 99 times...

I asked him, "Where did you and your wife get this pepper shaker? I must have one just like it!"

Answer?

"Mother, all I did was put the top from the salt shaker on it and vice-versa!"

His mother flipped ... (that was ME!)

I immediately came home and changed all mine, too, and it's a fliperoo around this house. 'Twouldn't be bad in anyone's domain who likes hot, heavy, pepper, right?

You can see how much of that heavenly stuff you're puttin' on.

It's black, remember? And wouldn't this be a whiten, kicking, kidding idea for those of you who are on low salt diets, or who don't like very much salt?

Works beautifully.

Heloise

P.S.: I think it's about time all of us homemakers, (that includes all bachelors, widows, widowers, and just live-aloners), formed our own headshrinkers club and shared ideas. Don't you? Sure would be lots cheaper than going to a real one. So why not? Just write your letters to me — even if for fun — in care of this paper.

We get so many each day in our mail. Here's one example:

Dear Hell:

Why don't you give up? Tell me where you find (deleted), to keep going? And 16 pages followed!

Mostly about the laundry, budgets, quick time-savers, kiddoes, his wife, and mother-in-law...telling HIM how to keep house, etc.

So...the world goes on. It has been going on for years and years, with and without tears and tears.

And now it's time to say thank you to those of you who have written to me when I was ill. Many times it brings tears to my eyes when you write me a thank-you note for something I have done especially for you. I wish I could do something for each of you, but guess it's impossible.

Think I'll be the first to write to the "Heloise Hard-Headed Headshrinkers Club":

WHAT IS THE TRUTH?

"Thy Word Is Truth" (John 17:17)

by Bryan Bost

Baptism is important in Christianity. It is important because it is the act in which a person becomes a Christian, having his past sins forgiven and being added to the church of Jesus Christ. Baptism marks the beginning of the Christian life. Since, according to the Bible, baptism is essential for a person's eternal salvation, its importance cannot be overstressed.

When the word "baptism" is mentioned, different ideas come to the minds of religious people. However, when the New Testament uses the words "baptism" and "baptize", the consistent meaning is to immerse a person in water. The original Greek word baptizo means to dip, plunge, sink, overwhelm, or immerse. By the very definition of the word, baptism means to submerge a person in water. This physical act is extremely meaningful, having a great spiritual meaning to it.

In baptism God acts to forgive the person being baptized of his sins. God forgives sins when men obey him by being bapized. The Bible makes this point very clear. In Acts 2:38 Peter tells men who want to be saved, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."

'It's Only Money!'

"You put up the money, Uncle Sam, and we will take it. Don't worry about a budget deficit. It might just up and go away sometime."

This is more or less what AFL-CIO President George Meany told Congress last week, in typical Meany style.

He said Congress can reduce unemployment to between 4 and 5 per cent next year by enacting organized labor's $21 billion job-creating program.

He explained that labor's program would increase the federal budget deficit for fiscal 1976 to between $90 billion and $95 billion, arguing that the size of the deficits should not be the major concern in the budget. If this isn't typical Meany talk, what in the world is?

He asked the Senate Budget Committee to measure the deficit in terms of people instead of money.

Meany neglected, as always, to say anything about measuring the skyrocketing deficit in terms of people taxpayers. Neither did he volunteer any sacrifices on the part of organized labor in instituting labor's program, which includes public works projects, expanded public service employment, tax cuts, federal aid to both private industries and cities, and closing of tax loopholes. The labor leader also failed to acknowledge the chance of his program setting off serious new inflation.

Certainly, everyone is interested in reducing the nation's rate of unemployment. But at the same time, many persons are dubious about increasing deficit spending by another $21 billion. There surely must be a better and more practical way. Industry, itself, could and would do the job, with increased cooperation from the federal government and organized labor.

The Senate Budget Committee is taking testimony prior to recommending a final 1976 budget to Congress.

Congress already has enacted a preliminary budget which limits the deficit to $68 billion, compared with the Ford administration's deficit of $60 billion.

Both figures already are too high . . . yet Meany would add another $21 billion.

George Meany just might have to tighten his own belt a little, along with the rest of us, in solving the problem.

War God Smiles!

Had you considered where much of the new oil money which is being drained from the Western economy is going?

Well, the Institute of Strategic Studies, an international group of experts with its headquarters in London, finds that a great deal of the money is going into weapons.

Mars should be pleased. Humanity is increasing its sacrifices at the altars of the war god.

The Institute discovered that Iran and Saudi Arabia tripled their military budgets in the last year. Iran, at $10.4 billion, spent more than Great Britain.

Meanwhile, the superpowers continued their arms spending at a high level—the United States at $430 per person, and the Soviet Union, $409.

It is true, of course, that money spent for war is lost to peaceful purposes. The dollar which buys a gun cannot feed a starving child.

As vast amounts of weapons build up in trouble spots of the world, an intolerable urge mounts to put them to some destructive use.

This doesn't present a very pleasing outlook for the future of the human race, clouded by the arms race, does it?

INSIDE REPORT—

Ronald Reagan's Grassroots Support

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

SAN DIEGO — Failure of the Ford campaign to scare Ronald Reagan out of running for President by preempting his California base was confirmed at the recent convention here of the state's inflexibly conservative Republican regulars.

Nobody watching Reagan perform at the 1,100-member Republican state central committee's meeting could doubt he will challenge President Ford. Moreover, although Ford operatives have spooned off the cream of the state's Republican establishment, grassroots workers meeting here still love Ronnie. If an underdog Reagan can win early primaries he would pose a lethal threat to Mr. Ford in California's winner-take-all Republican primary in June.

In short, the Ford campaign's concentration on California may be largely wasted. If Reagan is still viable in June, he would be favored in California. Consequently, the new Ford effort must switch to the early primary terrain of snowy New Hampshire and sunny Florida, and out of the boardrooms of San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The battle of those boardrooms has been waged successfully for the President by Leon Parma, an old Ford crony from Washington, now a rich San Diego businessman, and Stu Spencer of Spencer-Roberts Associates in Los Angeles, one of the nation's leading political professionals. Over six months ago, they signed up hundreds of prominent Californians — including Reaganites who found White House incumbency irresistible.

But the purpose of discouraging Reagan's candidacy by preempting California was not achieved. Instead, Reagan's temper was activated by Ford defections — particularly by Republican state chairman Paul Haerle, Reagan's erstwhile aide and hand-tailored protege. Nor was Reagan influenced by coolness toward his candidacy from longtime financial supporters, who had been lobbied furiously by Mr. Ford.

Reagan was particularly incensed when he was not invited to last weekend's convention by Haerle (who privately advised Republicans he wanted "new faces"). In his Los Angeles office last week, Reagan told us that decision reflected Haerle's record as chairman. In what way? "It was very stupid," Reagan replied. But the women's caucus intervened, asking Reagan to address its meeting Friday night.

That meeting, overflowing with both sexes, witnessed a vintage Reagan performance. Casting aside his standard speech, he ad-libbed about Republicans choosing whether to practice "politics as usual" in 1976 and declared a contest for the presidential nomination need not be divisive. As usual, he said nothing, good or bad, about Gerald R. Ford. Reagan's reception was tumultuous.

Just before the Saturday luncheon, someone carrying a Ford-for-President placard elicited scattered applause — quickly drowned out when a Reagan placard was hoisted. Widely popular State Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger received a cool reception when he finished his luncheon address by praising the President.

The state central committee is to the right of most Californians and even many California Republicans but pretty accurately reflects Republican precinct workers who win California primary elections. Overwhelming pro-Reagan sentiment inside the committee (with Mr. Ford possibly outvoted 2 to 1) and even heavier Reagan superiority among volunteer groups (Young Republicans, Women's Federation, California Republican Assembly) suggests trouble for the President here.

Reagan's strength is in the party's conservative foot soldiers, not its more moderate leadership — precisely the case ten years ago when Reagan began running for governor. Once again last week Reagan was the outsider, thanking the women's caucus for inviting him with the wistful postscript: "I didn't think I was coming to San Diego." When aggrieved right-wing leaders privately complained that Reagan is "coming home" to the true believers he spurned after they elected him governor, Reagan replied with a mea culpa: sometimes it is the very ones closest to us that we take for granted.

The weekend also showed the Ford campaign has failed to neutralize the closest of Reagan's money men: Holmes Tuttle, the millionaire Los Angeles auto dealer who declined to attend Mr. Ford's speech Saturday at Pepperdine University in Los Angeles. What nettled Tuttle was the presence of Pepperdine president William Banowsky, who owes his seat on the Republican National Committee to Reagan but has endorsed Mr. Ford.

Though in California again recently for "non-political" events, Mr. Ford did not come to San Diego to confront the Reaganites. Instead, Ford campaign manager Howard (Bo) Callaway privately asked questions about how to run against Reagan next June.

But if there is a primary showdown here, President Ford will be in trouble. The best way to combat Reagan's grassrooters in California is to stop Reagan in early primaries. Accordingly, there is a certain irrelevancy about Callaway's four long days in San Diego and Mr. Ford's scheduled October visit to California, the President's third in two months. California, recipient of lavish Ford campaign attention, now takes on far less urgent priority than New Hampshire, the state it has largely ignored.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The closer Congress scrutinizes Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's Middle East peace pact, the louder the grumbling grows, particularly over the price tag and those 200 American "technicians."

As it turns out, from secret State Department briefings of senior lawmakers, the American taxpayers will be asked to provide well over $15 billion in aid to Egypt and Israel during the next five years.

And the 200 U.S. peacekeepers, according to intelligence sources, will likely include "retired" CIA agents, an invitation to controversy no matter how good a job they do in the Sinai buffer zone.

Before the agreement can be put into effect, of course, the lawmakers must approve the stationing of technicians between the hostile camps. And a half dozen committees or more will get a crack at one phase or another of the five-year $15 billion aid package.

But this has not made Congress any more comfortable with the interim agreement. Some of the legislators we queried in the past few days were worried that there is still more "fine print" or "oral understandings" to come

Portions of the secret accords have been privately disclosed to a few chairmen and ranking members of committees in both the House and Senate, but younger members have been kept in the dark both by the administration and their own chairmen.

Some lawmakers have even stopped us in the halls of Congress and fumed, "How come you find out about these things before we do?"

In this wavering economy, every million in foreign aid counts, and Kissinger and his public relations men have been citing the figure of $2.3 billion in economic and military aid for Israel and $600 million as the outer limit for Egypt.

Jack Anderson

But at an executive session of the House International Relations Committee, members were told that these figures are bound to rise in coming years. By putting together these projections, congressmen quickly came up with a five-year figure of well over $15 billion.

The price of one part of the Israeli aid package is bound to soar. About $400 million of the money promised to Israel is in compensation for the oil they will lose next year by surrendering the Abu Rudeis oil fields back to Egypt.

Such payments will continue for all five years. Since the price of crude is going nowhere but up, the American contribution for Israel's lost oil is certain to follow suit.

In addition, Ford and Kissinger have given the Israelis an ironclad, written guarantee that they will be supplied with oil until at least September, 1980.

According to the secret accords, Israel is expected to "make its own independent arrangements for oil . . ." However, if they are unsuccessful for any reason, the documents state, "the United States Government will promptly make oil available . . ."

In the event of an oil embargo, the secret agreements imply, Israel would be supplied with oil from American stockpiles. Kissinger further vowed, if necessary "to help Israel secure the necessary means of transport."

Another aspect of the Sinai pact that has created some furrowed brows on Capitol Hill is the proposal to provide American technicians.

Those "technicians," top-level intelligence sources confided to my associate Joe Spear, will have very close ties to the Central Intelligence Agency. Indeed, say our sources, many of them will probably be regular CIA employes who will be "retired" shortly before they report for their desert duty.

The idea of placing American technicians in "early warning" stations first was suggested by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat at a meeting with President Ford in Salzburg, Austria.

Concerned that Congress would see the technicians as an echo of Vietnam in the early 1960s, Ford and Kissinger originally balked at the proposal. Sadat eventually was persuaded to settle for United Nations personnel.

Israel, however, adamantly insisted on an American presence. No Americans, no peace agreement, they declared. Kissinger, faced with the awful prospect of once again limping back to Washington in defeat, went along.

Some key congressmen, however, are convinced that Kissinger is secretly delighted with the proposal to put Americans in the Sinai. It forces Congress to put the stamp of approval on his peace pact and thus absolves him of full responsibility if it flops.

In fact, say some of the experts we have consulted, the American technicians are not needed. Ostensibly, they will be there to give impartial warning of menacing maneuvers by either side.

Both the Egyptians and the Israelis, however, will be provided with sophisticated American electronic equipment to establish warning stations of their own.

From their perch atop a 2,500-foot prominence known as Umm Hashiba, the Israeli radars will be able to "see" aircraft taking off in Cairo. The Egyptians will have a comparable facility, enabling them to monitor Israel's huge Sinai air force base at Bir Gifgafa.

A CHANGING WORLD—

Is There Excessive Political Campaigning?

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Editor, Copley News Service

An office holder's first duty, the politicians say, is to get himself reelected. An ambitious politician, it is also said, has the primary duty of getting elected the first time.

This preoccupation with gaining or keeping office is most apparent these days and the intensity involved in fulfilling such aspirations is taking many office holders away from the business of running the country. At the same time, the nationwide carping of those seeking to dislodge people like President Ford is doing some damage to the efforts involved in solving some very serious national problems.

What this all lends itself to is, to some of us, the reawakening of the occasional talk about changing the U.S. election and office serving system. Primarily this has to do with frequent support for the principal proposed change—one six-year term for a president, with reelection barred by law. Added to that, in the face of what is becoming nearly an every year year-around election campaign by office holders and seekers at all levels, is a move toward limiting drastically the time set aside or made available for campaigning.

All of this mood for change to a more orderly and limited electoral process is upset somewhat at this time by the two attempts to assassinate President Ford.

These efforts by the radicals who always are on the fringe of American life in the 20th Century may be relevant to the general proposition of the need for campaign de-emphasis. The campaign problem, however, was present before Mr. Ford was endangered and it will be around for a long time—unless there is a switch to a single term of six years or even a limit on a man's occupancy of the White House to the time involved in fulfilling an unexpired term as is the case with the current President.

The evidence is clear that if Mr. Ford did not have November, 1976, on his mind he would not have been twice the target of an assassin. However, the fundamental problem remains.

Many of the top people in Washington or those who aspire to high office in Washington should in these very critical times be spending more time solving the nation's ills than running for office.

Why was President Ford in California twice in a short period of a few weeks (and with another California trip planned for the autumn)? He was in Sacramento and San Francisco clearly to knock down Ronald Reagan's drive for the presidency. That he called the trips non-political is pure hogwash. If that is so, why not a trip to Wyoming, Utah?

Considering present law, Mr. Ford's strategy is understandable. But, shouldn't he be concentrating more on the nation's business than on November, 1976—or primaries that are spread out nearly eight months in 1976?

The one six-year term or fulfillment of one unexpired term would keep him on the job completely; even as most Americans admit that this President has stayed on the job lots more than many of his predecessors.

But, it is not only Mr. Ford. Why is Ronald Reagan running around the country speaking, conducting radio programs, writing a newspaper column ? He is doing this plainly because he wants to build up a national constituency in support of his ambition to be president.

At the same time, he neglected his duties as a member of the Rockefeller Commission investigating the Central Intelligence Agency.

Might he not have served a loftier purpose by assisting Mr. Ford than by attacking the President's policies?

He was an outstanding California governor; he has demonstrated administrative and philosophical talents. These are direly needed in Washington and in his case a law limiting such disguised campaigning until perhaps next June might have served the nation well—with Reagan serving Mr. Ford in the interests of America in the meantime.

And, there are others. Sen. Henry Jackson, Washington Democrat, also has bounced around the country, changing his view of the issues as the wind changes. He is a right-winger, a moderate and a liberal turn, depending on the mood of those he encounters He also is a talented man and shouldn't he stay on the job and apply his talents in a more constructive way?

Other members of Congress have behaved in the same way, neglecting important national business while they campaign fully 14 months ahead of time for either themselves or a friend with ambitions.

Limited campaigning and a six-year presidential term (along with a one-time fulfillment of an unexpired term) might be the answers—or a start toward answers. The perennial political barnstorming by everyone from the President on down, however, indicates the need for something that will keep high office holders on the job — and perhaps even save their lives.

Inventors Wrongly Portrayed As Harmless Dingalings

By JACK SMITH
The Los Angeles Times

It is ironic that America, which has given the world more inventions than any other country in history, should regard inventors themselves as quaint if harmless dingalings who seem to have invented themselves and left out a couple of screws.

In cartoons they are represented as unkempt and drippy misfits, an embarrassment to their families, waiting for attention in patent offices with their ingenious machines in their laps.

Such disesteem seems a cruel reward for the great humanitarians who made our lives more carefree by inventing the corkscrew, the mousetrap and the water closet.

These lonely tinkerers are not without friends, though, I gather from a brochure that has come to my door from Lawrence Pedka Associates, of New York, a company that offers to help inventors develop and sell their ideas.

I don't know why they sought me out, though I must say I am rather good at thinking up makeshift solutions to immediate problems. For example, once not long after World War II I owned an old prewar Packard sedan which was so loose its back doors would sometimes swing open when the car was in motion. I imply tied a rope from the inside handle of one door to the inside handle of the other tightened it and secured it with a Boy Scout knot, and the doors no longer flew out. A year or so later, when I sold the car, the fellow who bought it took a screwdriver and tightened the latches, which produced the same result as my rope, but which did not, I think, reveal as much inventive imagination. Even so, I am no Edison.

The Peska company's brochure suggests that no idea is too small to engage their interest. In a display of clippings from the press they remind us of numerous recent inventions which at first glance might seem almost farcical, but which are either licensed for production or already on the market. Among them are a gasoline-powered pogo-stick, and electronic box that finds transistorized golf balls, luminous wall paper to save lights, and a radio that gets only one station.

of Smith and men

As we might expect in this era of liberation, there are more women among today's inventors than in the past. A woman in New York, for example, invented a new kind of bathroom mop called the Johnny Mop, and a woman in Chicago, Emily Koskiewicz, invented a better yo-yo.

I am intrigued by a machine called the Think Tank, which was invented by a man named Savo Bojicic. It is a plastic globe filled with 30,000 "stimulating words," each printed on a small plastic chip. The globe appears to be about the size of a basketball and has a window through which one can read the words on the chips that tumble against the glass when the globe is spun.

From the random set of words, it is said, the owner of the Think Tank, through a process called lateral thinking, can break out of his mental stagnation and take creative flight. If one set of words doesn't inspire him, he can spin the globe again and produce a new set.

"You never know which words will appear," we are told. "You do not seek out suitable words. You take what you get and you use what you get; otherwise you would destroy the effect of randomness and look for an obvious solution. And this is not the way new ideas are generated. The object is to produce numerous and diverse ideas until a EUREKA idea comes. . ."

I didn't have a Think Tank, but I thought I might get a similar effect if I turned through a dictionary, stopping at random and running a finger down the page with my eyes shut to pick a word. I removed my Oxford English Dictionary from its box and opened it aimlessly to the M's. I was about to pick a word and begin lateral thinking when it occurred to me that as long as I was in the M's it might be interesting to look up MOUSETRAP. Maybe it would give the name of the inventor.

The word mousetrap, I found, goes back at least to 1495, when it was rendered as MOWSE TRAPE. Scratch one American inventor, unless the mousetrap was invented by an Indian.

I turned to CORKSCREW. In 1720 an English poet named Amherst wrote of some contemporary bon vivant: "This hand a corkscrew did contain—and that a bottle of champaigne."

Volunteers Needed To Staff Casa De Amigos Fall Program

Casa de Amigos will begin its fall tutoring program, which benefits children in northeast and east Midland, in early October— maybe.

It all depends on whether volunteers can be recruited to help with the program, Casa officials say.

The "House of Friends" at 921 N. Dallas St., has had similar tutelage programs in the past and they have been of great help to children and young people with language or learning difficulties, or both.

This fall, volunteers to staff the program, and to work with the children on a one-to-one basis, have fallen far short of the number needed. Casa this week sounded another tutors.

Needed for the effort are a dozen or more adults and older teenage students, as well as a coordinator for the program. The volunteers will be given an orientation session and then will be provided with teaching aids structured to the needs of the individual children, said Casa director Marcia Ingram.

The weekly tutoring sessions will be held in the "Casa de Ninos" of Casa de Amigos, 906 N. Dallas St. Additional information on the program and its needs is obtainable from Mrs. Ingram at 682-9701.

Lobby Law Proponents Face Definition Hurdle

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Congress grapples with proposals to impose more restrictions on lobbyists, the lawmakers are confronting the fundamental problem of defining what lobbying is.

Lobbying in Washington can involve ad hoc activist groups visiting the capital on a shoestring budget to talk with congressmen about issues such as busing, abortion or strip mining. Or it can mean the well-financed corps of professional persuaders, such as those deployed by the AFL-CIO and the National Association of Manufacturers.

The current lobbying law, dating back to 1946, fails to define either "lobbying" or "lobbyist." In addition, the law applies only to lobbying of the legislative branch and to persons employed for the "principal purpose" of lobbying.

The current law requires lobbyists to register with Congress and to file periodic reports about their total expenses. It does not ask for any information about who they lobbied or why.

Rep. Walter Flowers, D-Ala., chairman of a House judiciary subcommittee considering lobbying legislation, says he hopes his panel can come up with a new measure that "will hopefully be very easy to understand, very tough in enforceability and as comprehensive as we practically can make it."

At the same time, Flowers said he was concerned over possibly infringing on constitutional rights.

An American Civil Liberties Union spokesman testified that the pending bills could violate the First Amendment guarantee that "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging . . . the right of the people . . . to petition the government for redress of grievances."

One measure introduced by Reps. Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., and Thomas F. Railsback, R-Ill., with 153 cosponsors in the House, defines lobbying as "a communication or the solicitation or employment of another to make a communication with a federal officer or employe in order to influence the policymaking process. . . ."

The Kastenmeier-Railsback bill would require lobbyists to submit regular reports detailing their finances, persons contacted and the specific legislation or policy they sought to influence.

House Launches Hearings On Flexi-Time Plan Tests

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — House hearings were set to begin today on the government's proposal for a three-year test of a program that would permit many civil servants to set their own hours and put parts of some agencies on an experimental four-day week.

The Ford administration has cleared a long-studied proposal to introduce the European concept of flexi-time in government on a test basis.

Under flexi-time, employes, if it fits with the agency business, can set their hours, working an 8-hour shift anytime within a 12-hour core-period workday.

The House Manpower subcommittee will hold the hearing.

Flexi-time is already operational at some Social Security Administration offices in Baltimore and has resulted in improved productivity, less absentism and virtually eliminated tardiness, since workers can come in anytime during the "core" day period, so long as they put in a full 8 hours of work.

Congress must get into the act, however, if the flexi-time concept is to be tested widely. That is because Congress would have to grant a three-year waiver (the time proposed for the test) of federal laws which require payments of overtime after 8 hours in one day.

The waiver would be needed if agencies were to test the four-day week, since that would require employes to work four 10-hour days to earn a three-day weekend

Baseball Pitcher Takes TV Position

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Seaver, right-handed pitching star of the New York Mets, is following a familiar path for athletes by going into television.

Seaver, who won his 22nd game as the season closed Sunday, will spend the off-season as a sports broadcaster for WCBS-TV, flagship station of the CBS television network. He begins work Oct. 11.

Postmaster General Charges Congress, Postal Unions Blocking Better Service

By JEFFREY MILLS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress and the postal unions are standing in the way of a more efficient Postal Service, Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar argues.

"For one reason or another, the Congress won't approve of this possibility for saving and the unions won't approve of that one," Bailar said in an interview. "But if we eliminate all the possibilities for saving that would have some distaste for someone, then we're not going to save money anywhere," he said.

Among plans that have aroused opposition on Capitol Hill or among the unions are proposals to eliminate 12,000 rural post offices and to increase the efficiency of delivery routes.

Bailar said these two proposals and others would cut postal costs without hurting service.

"I think our responsibility as public officials would require us to move ahead on reducing costs where it can be done without reducing service. And I plan to do just that," the postmaster general said.

A number of House members at hearings last week expressed opposition to a General Accounting Office recommendation that 12,000 rural post offices be closed. The GAO and the Postal Service say the closing would save $100 million per year without hurting service.

"We ought to do what we can to hold postal rates down, and insisting that the post offices be kept open isn't doing much to hold those costs down," Bailar said.

So far the Postal Service has been moving slowing on closing rural post offices "because we are well aware of the congressional concern," he said.

The proposed changes in delivery routes, known as the Kokomo plan, involve computer studies of individual mail routes and the subsequent redesign of the routes according to the measurements of the number of letters delivered and the miles walked.

The plan has drawn a strike threat from the letter carriers.

When Bailar announced earlier this month that the Postal Service had decided to implement the plan, the National Association of Letter Carriers immediately asked for arbitration of the issue.

The Postal Service is forbidden to proceed with the route changes while the arbitration continues. Meanwhile, the union has voted to strike if the Kokomo plan is put into effect.

Another efficiency move planned by the Postal Service is to increase reassignments of employes from one office to another and from one craft to another. Bailar expressed the hope that "this is the type of program the unions will understand."

Traffic Again Top Killer In Texas

By The Associated Press

While traffic accidents again were the biggest single killer, home fires also added substantially to the violent death toll in Texas during the weekend.

The Associated Press tabulated reports of at least 19 fatalities between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Sunday, including 10 on streets and hghways. Half a dozen other persons died in fires.

These were among the victims:

Two adults and two children died from inhaling smoke early Saturday when fire raced through an apartment in a West Dallas housing project. They were Darlene Mims, 27; Paul Martin Thomas, 27; Annette Mims, 5, and Sammy Mims, 2.

Summoned by neighbors reporting a loud disturbance, police found Eddie Bynum beaten to death outside his Dallas apartment early Sunday. Officers held a man, 24, without immediate charge.

Antonio Della Rosa, 19, of Coupland and Harris Jackson, 56, of Taylor were killed in a head-on crash near Taylor early Sunday. Anton Smith, 79, of Taylor died later in a Temple hospital.

Albert H. Ford, 27, was shot and killed in his Dallas bedroom early Sunday. Police arrested a woman, 19, and released her to await grand jury action on the case.

Two Seagoville men died in a two-car collision on a bridge near Kleberg. Police said one of the victims was Frank Livingston, 34. The identity of the other victim, a 66-year-old man, was withheld pending notification of kin.

Dallas police said Charles Daniel Tatum, 23, died Saturday from gunshot wounds suffered after a fight Friday night.

Police in Victoria said Bohumil Kalisek, 53, was killed Saturday night when he was struck by a car near his home on U.S. 87 eight miles north of Victoria.

A fire in one unit of an apartment complex in Nacogdoches killed a woman and her child Sunday. They were Linda Bayless, 22, and son Roger, 3. The husband and father, Roger R. Bayless, 21, and a second child, 2, were injured.

Joe Edward Meharg 39, of Dallas and Victoria Clark Manes, 25, of Austin died Saturday night when two cars collided three miles south of Wichita Falls on U.S. 281.

A worker at an oil well drilling site near Jonesville in Northeast Texas died when a 1,000-pound drillstem fell on him Saturday.

More Than 200 Bid At Liquor Auction

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — More than 200 persons jammed into a San Antonio motel over the weekend to bid on 10,000 cases of liquor seized by the Texas comptroller's office for alleged non-payment of taxes.

The spirits were seized by agents of the state comptroller's office last May from three outlets of the Cut Rate Economy Discount Beverage and Liquor Corp. here. The state claimed the firm owed more than $405,000 in delinquent state and municipal taxes.

Bids at the auction ranged from $50 per case for lesser known brands up to $110 per case for well-known premium brands.

The highest bidder was Don & Ben's Liquor Store, which purchased more than $27,000 worth of the liquor.

We're building power plants that use lignite coal.

This power plant is being built in East Texas at Martin Lake near Henderson. It will make electricity by burning lignite coal.

We have to build lignite plants because we're running out of low-cost natural gas, our main fuel today. New supplies are hard to get and very costly.

Lignite plants cost more than twice as much to build as comparable gas-fired plants, and that means electricity will cost more. But expensive as they are, lignite plants will still make electricity more cheaply than plants using high-priced gas.

That's because our large lignite supplies, acquired many years ago, are much cheaper than new supplies of gas. And using cheap fuel is one way we try to keep your electric bill as low as possible.

The average bill for Texas Electric customers is already 27 per cent below the national average, and we're working to keep it that way.

Man Coaches Young Schoolgirl Gridders

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Buzz Estrada was surrounded by young football players clamoring for his attention, anxious to get on the field and play.

"Hey coach!" one of them yelled out. "Can our team be the one that throws the ball this time?"

"Coach!" cried another as Estrada attempted to hand out the colored cloths that would distinguish the two teams. "Give me one, I'm the hiker."

Estrada is the coach of the fourth, fifth and sixth grade girls physical education classes at T. G. Barr Elementary School.

"They like football," he said. "When I started with this, one girl told me her mother didn't want her to play football because it isn't feminine. Now she's one of our quarterbacks and enjoys it."

Estrada got the coaching post when a female teacher left the job. His own sixth-grade teaching position was eliminated through a reduction in teaching staff because of declining enrollments in the school district.

"You've heard of Title IX requirements that girls have equal money for sports," he said, referring to new U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare guidelines on sex discrimination. "Well, why shouldn't a man be able to coach girls' P. E.?"

Estrada said he believes girls have as much ability as boys for playing football. "It's just that a boy does it regularly and a girl doesn't. It's just going to take some working with them."

Some objections to the girls' football aspirations are being voiced not by parents but by male classmates.

"The boys are kind of getting upset because the girls are taking away some of the field. They think we're infringing on their benefits," Estrada said.

But 11-year-old Arlene Parker, a sixth grader, retorts: "Girls can play, too. One of these days I hope we can play the boys so we can beat them."

Mayor Irate As Municipal Strike Ended

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Nearly 800 police officers and firefighters have ended a six-day strike, reporting back to work with a pay raise. But Mayor Lewis Murphy called the settlement "Tucson's darkest hour" and said it was achieved by the use of scare tactics.

After a four-hour debate behind closed doors Sunday night, the city council approved on a 4-3 vote the contract ratified by the Police-Firemen's Association.

"We feel good about the settlement," said Larry Brooks, head of the Fraternal Order of Police. And firefighter Peter Jorgensen said, "I'm just real glad it's over and I'll be getting back to work."

Although no major fires or serious police problems were reported in this city of 400,000 during the strike, Murphy said before voting against the settlement: "Police and firemen, through fear, brought the people of Tucson to their knees. This is Tucson's darkest hour."

Councilor Barbara Weymann, who also voted against the settlement, said, "This is a situation where no one wins."

Under the new contract, an immediate raise of 7.5 per cent was granted police officers ranked sergeant or higher, firefighters ranked captain or higher and civilian municipal workers in administrative posts.

Other employes received a 5 per cent increase. A cost-of-living increase of up to 8 per cent will be awarded next July, and police and firefighters will begin receiving uniform and equipment allowances and hazardous duty pay.

Rookie police officers had been earning $876 a month and rookie firefighters $834. Starting pay was $1,118 for police sergeants and $1,174 for fire captains.

Texan Says Ford Challenges Killers

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas psychiatrist says President Ford can expect more assassination attempts unless he stops "throwing down the gauntlet" and challenging potential killers by continuing to offer himself as a target.

Dr. John T. Holbrook said Ford has "stimulated the psychopaths" by his vows to continue his public appearrances despite two attempts on his life.

"This excites people to go on an ego trip, to try and kill the man who can't be killed. It's like trophy hunting; there's a little cannabilism in it," Holbrook said in a weekend news interview.

After each attempt on his life—the first in Sacramento earlier this month and the second in San Francisco last week—Ford promised he would not "cower or capitulate" to would-be assassins.

That was a mistake, Holbrook said.

"The President must quit getting on television after the attempts and opposing these people. He hasn't gotten in his bullet-proof car and stayed there," he said.

Holbrook said the potential assassins are frustrated people whose lives are without directions.

"They are frustrated with life and their great moment is in bringing down a person of great importance," he said.

Carrillo Jurors Must Decide On Whose Testimony Is True

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex (AP) — Jurors in the federal income tax evasion trial of State District Court Judge O. P. Carrillo and his brother, Duval County Commissioner Ramiro Carrillo, face the task this week of deciding who's telling the truth.

The trial entered its fourth week in U.S. Distict Court here today with both prosecutors and defense attorneys expected to try to enhance the credibility of their witnesses.

In testimony late last week, Judge Carrillo and his brother both said two key prosecution witnesses had lied to the jury.

According to the two Duval County political figures, Cleofas Gonzalez lied when he said the Carrillos ran a store that prosecutors claim was a front to hide illegal sales to county agencies.

The firm, Zertuche General Store, was created, prosecutors say, to hide illegal, conflict-of-interest sales from the Carrillos' Farm and Ranch Store.

Gonzalez, a former employe of the Farm and Ranch Store, said he kept the books for the Farm and Ranch Store and handled sales for the Zertuche General Store out of a pad of invoices kept in a drawer.

Asst. U.S. Atty. George Kelt has pointed out that several invoices had been made out in larger amounts than the original bills. But Judge Carrillo said Gonzalez may have been the person who changed the bills.

"Gonzales could have done just about anything he wanted to," Judge Carrillo testified.

Judge Carrillo also denied receiving any money from Rodolfo Couling, former business manager for the Benavides School District and now indicted on a charge of official misconduct.

Couling testified that Judge Carrillo told him to document fake sales to the school district. Couling said he would then forge endorsements on checks received as payment and give the money to Judge Carrillo.

After the trial here, Judge Carrillo faces an impeachment trial in the Texas Senate. The House impeached him on a number of articles dealing mostly with official misconduct.

Prison System Director Walks Out Of CURE's First State Convention

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — The head of the Texas prison system, W. J. Estelle Jr., walked out of a prison reform group convention here Sunday after someone in the audience charged there was foul play in the 1974 Huntsville prison takeover that ended with four deaths.

Estelle, director of the Texas Department of Corrections, was repeatedly interrupted during his speech to the first state convention of Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants (CURE).

Two inmates, including South Texas drug kingpin Fred Gomez Carrasco, and two state employes who were being held as hostages, were killed in a shootout that ended the prison siege in August 1974.

After the accusation of foul play by an unidentfied convention participant, Estelle replied, "There certainly was a lot of it (foul play)," referring to the two state employes killed in the escape attempt. Estelle then stalked out of the meeting.

After Estelle left, Charles Sullivan of Austin, CURE executive director, said, "I was shocked at what happened during Estelle's short appearance." He said that when Estelle was invited to speak it was not made clear that he would have to field questions from the audience.

An undelivered portion of Estelle's text included this remark: "I have neither the inclinaton nor the energy to run from pillar to post to placate and satisfy every vested interest group ranging from the far left to the extreme right.

"Constructive planning cannot be achieved by a public agency trying to respond to conflicting proposals of confused, if well intentioned, citizens who represent divergent points of view. That is why the legislature as a whole and the Board of Corrections will continue to provide the framework and guidelines for TDC policy."

Young Oklahoma Escapees, Friend Taken Into Custody

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)— Three teen-aged boys who had the help of another in breaking out of the Oklahoma County juvenile detention center late last week are back in custody.

Two brothers had surrendered to police Saturday in the company of their parents and the third youth plus the youth who allegedly broke the three out were caught early Sunday.

The last youths to be apprehended are Donald Nitzel, 16, who allegedly helped the three escape from Berry House Friday night. The third youth, Donald Craig, 16, was arrested with Nitzel by Decatur, Ill., police.

Craig and Nitzel were arrested near Decatur's bus station about 3 a.m. Sunday. Berry House Director Tom Stanfill said they admitted they had escaped in Oklahoma City.

Decatur police said both were armed with pistols when they were taken into custody.

The escape occurred Friday night when a counselor had a gun drawn on her. She and two other counselors were locked in a closet.

The youth who drew the gun, who allegedly has been identified as Nitzel, then burst into the center's recreation area and offered to release all 22 of the teens there.

Nitzel got into the center because he told a counselor he had returned for some things he left behind earlier in the day.

Convicted Obstetrician Questions Medical Practice

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Seven months after his manslaughter conviction for the death of an aborted fetus, Dr. Kenneth C. Edelin's medical practice is busier than ever.

But with his appeal still pending after a trial he has characterized as a witch-hunt, the 36-year-old obstetrician is questioning whether he should continue in medicine and considering a move away from Boston, where it all happened.

Dr. Edelin is angry.

"I wonder what my reaction would be if I saw any of the jurors — Shea, McLaughlin, Pelletier," he mused at a recent interview. Sometimes he looks for them.

Following the jury's unanimous verdict, Dr. Edelin was placed on one year's probation, and the sentence was delayed pending appeal. He returned immediately to his medical practice as chief of ambulatory services in the obstetrical ward at Boston City Hospital.

Dr. Edelin soon was promoted to associate director of the ward. He is in such demand for private practice, including some abortions, that he limits his office hours.

His conviction last Feb. 15 has intensified the national debate on abortion, and has caused a number of hospitals to cut back on the operations. Dr. Edelin said that Boston City Hospital, where he performed the abortion that led to his indictment, now accepts almost no abortion cases. They are referred to special clinics.

The trial has caused the young doctor to reassess his goals.

In an interview just after his conviction, he had said of his work: "It's usually a very happy specialty, seeing a woman throughout her pregancy and delivering for her a nice healthy baby and seeing a family develop."

Now he says: "I've been trying to make a decision — what am I going to do with my life? Am I going to stay in medicine or should I continue to be a public figure and travel around the country and promote the things I believe in?"

The handsome and articulate doctor has been in demand as a speaker, and although he says it interferes with his practice, he has accepted a number of engagements to help pay his legal expenses.

These include a debt of $65,000 for last winter's trial, Dr. Edelin says, and the amount could reach $120,000 for the appeal in state courts because an additional lawyer must be hired and there's a heavy load of legal research.

The appeal, originally to have been argued this fall, is now expected to be heard early next year.

Reflecting on his manslaughter conviction for performing a medical precedure in use elsewhere in the country, Dr. Edelin says, "I believe it could only have happened in Boston."

This city that is both a major medical center and the seat of the nation's anti-abortion movement also will be the scene this fall of the prosecution of four physicians accused under a 19th century statute of grave-robbing for performing experiments on aborted fetuses.

The Edelin case began two years ago, on Oct. 3, 1973, when he performed a routine legal abortion on a 17-year-old girl.

Because of difficulties in aborting by salt injection, Dr. Edelin completed the abortion by hysterotomy, a procedure similar to a Caesarean birth, in which the fetus is removed through an incision in the mother's abdomen.

The 20-to-24-week-old fetus was discovered later in a jar of formaldehyde by investigators seeking evidence in the grave-robbing case.

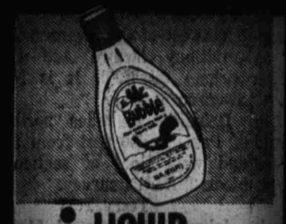

At the trial, Assistant Dist. Atty. Newman A. Flanagan charged that at the moment Dr. Edelin cut the fetus from the wall of its mother's womb, a baby was born. He charged that Dr. Edelin then held the fetus within the womb for several minutes and killed it.

Gulf Energy Employes Mark Long-Service Anniversaries

Six Gulf Energy and Minerals Co.-U.S. employes in the Midland Exploration and Production districts have marked service anniversaries.

John A. Rowbotham, L. O. McFarland, C. R. Tindall and A. J. Brunelle, each has completed 30 years.

W. J. Gibson has marked his 25th anniversary, and C. L. Robertson has completed 20 years.

Rowbotham, a Midland resident, is an analyst in the Midland Production District office. He has worked at Lamesa, Brownfield, Littlefield, Monahans and Fort Worth. He currently is serving in the district budget, AFE, conde control, statistics section.

McFarland, a resident of Crane, is area services supervisor in the Crane Area of the Midland Production District.

He joined gulf as a roustabout at Goldsmith in 1945. He had worked at Odessa, Goldsmith and Midland before being moved to Crane in 1965.

Tindall, a resident of Odessa, is a roustabout supervisor in the Odessa Area of the Midland Production District.

He was employed by Gulf as a roustabout at Electra in 1945. He also worked in the Wichita Falls Area before being transferred to Odessa.

Brunelle, another Midlander, is senior clerk in the Midland Production District. He joined the company at Longview as a general clerk and served there until 1950 when he went into the Army. After his discharge in 1951, he returned to Longview and was there until being moved to Kilgore.

He was transferred to Jackson, Miss., in 1957 and worked there until moving to Midland in 1961.

Gibson, a senior materials expediter in the Goldsmith Area of the Midland Production District, is a resident of Odessa.

He joined Gulf in 1950 in the Midland and Odessa vicinity. He has served as rodman, chainman, laborer and roustabout as well as in his present position of senior materials expediter.

Robertson, area engineer in the Crane Area of the Midland Production District, completed 20 years with the company Sept. 1.

He has advanced through various engineering positions at Odessa, Sand Hills and Midland. He was transferred to the Crane Area in January and promoted to his present assignment in July.

He is a resident of Odessa.

Agence France-Presse

PEKING — The 10 per cent increase in the price of oil decided by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) for Oct. 1 was "completely justifiable," the New China News Agency commented today.

In an editorial entitled "Oil Struggle Wins New Victory Through Unity," the agency said the OPEC decision was a setback to the "attempt by the industrialized countries to shift the economic crisis onto the oil producing countries."

It added that the producer countries had "Bravely stood up to superpower intimidation, threats and sabatoge by upholding unity and kept a firm hold on their right to fix oil prices."

The decision to increase the prices was "striking at hegemonism."

The agency said, "The superpower denunciation of the price readjustment is completely groundless" because the two price reductions which came before the "freezing" of prices meant that the 10 per cent rise brought the prices "approximately" to the level they stood at 21 months ago.

In addition, the purchasing power of the oil producing countries had dropped by between 30 and 40 per cent because of inflation in the Western countries and the increased cost of importing goods from these countries.

Rhodesian Heads African Council

Agence France-Presse

SALISBURY — Rhodesian nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo Sunday was elected the new president of the African National Council (ANC).

An estimated 5,500 delegates, packed under huge marquees set up in the soccer stadium in Salisbury's Highfields Township, elected Nkomo and six of his top aides to senior posts in the ANC.

Nkomo is the former leader of the Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU).

fractured with 30,000 gallons and 30,000 pounds of sand.

South Plains Projects Set

Two ventures have been scheduled in South Plains counties.

Sun Oil Co. will drill an 8,100-foot Ellenburger try in Northeast Garza, 1⅞ miles northwest of the Swenson-Garza (multipay Strawn and Ellenburger) oil field. It is No. 1 Swenson & Sons.

Terry Test

John Q. McCabe of Midland accounted for the 3,500-foot prospector in Southwest Terry. It is No. 1 Jack Mason.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 7, block DD, John H. Gibson survey, three miles west of Wellman. Ground elevation is 3,357 feet.

It is 2¾ miles northeast of Yates gas production in the Wellman, Southwest field, but separated by a 3,500-foot failure.

Monsanto Test Flows Deep Gas

Monsanto Co. No. 1 Felmont, Winkler County Ellenburger prospect, one mile north of assured Fusselman production and and two miles north of Ellenberger production in the Apollo field, flowed gas at the maximum, daily rate of 8 million cubic feet per day, plus 25 barrels of load water in one hour.

Flow was through an open 2-inch choke and perforations at 19,085-19,287 feet, which had been acidized with 5,000 gallons and reacidized with an additional 30,000 gallons. Testing continued.

Offset In Upton Shows Oil, Gas

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 10-M McElroy Ranch Co., ⅝-mile southeast stepout to the two-well Cisco part of the King Mountain, North field in Upton County, was drilling below 8,856 feet on a 9,600-foot contract, after taking a drillstem test in an unidentified formation.

Tool was open one hour on the test taken from 8,608-8,758 feet. Recovery was 6,200 feet of oil and gas in the drillpipe. The tool plugged, and pressures were not taken.

Gas Platform Fire Burns Man Gravely

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A man was burned seriously Sunday when a fire broke out on a Pennzoil gas platform in the Gulf of Mexico, the Coast Guard said.

The blaze was brought under control within an hour and the crew was evacuated by standby boats, a spokesman said. The platform is 130 miles southeast of Galveston, Tex.

The man, not identified at once, was flown to a Galveston hospital.

"It was some sort of mechanical problem — that's all I can say," said Dale Lagrone, a company official. He refused to elaborate.

Gaines Explorer Hits Strawn Oil

Tool was open 70 minutes on the test from 11,185-11,238 feet, using a ¼-inch bottomhole choke.

Recovery was 360 feet of 48-gravity oil, 360 feet of oil- and gas-cut fresh water blanket; 540 feet of gas-cut fresh water blanket and 480 feet of fresh water-cut drilling fluid, plus 920 cubic centimeters of oil and 1.79 cubic feet of gas from the sample chamber.

Location is 660 feet from north and east lines of labor 20, league 296, Reagan CSL survey, 2½ miles west of the depleted Gray CSL (Devonian) oil field.

Ford Due To Visit China In November

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Chinese Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua have cleared the way for President Ford to visit Peking in November.

The two men met over dinner for four hours Sunday night and had a "complete and friendly talk about every aspect of our relations," Kissinger reported.

When asked if he and Chiao had set a date for Ford's visit, he replied that an announcement will be made soon. But he added that "everything is on schedule."

Later, a U.S. official in Kissinger's party said the secretary would go to Peking just after mid-October to prepare for Ford to follow in late November.

This official said Chiao agreed to the tentative schedule, and a firm date will be set in the next few days.

Kissinger came to New York Sunday for his second round of meetings with foreign ministers attending the General Assembly. In addition to Chiao, he met on Sunday with Angel Federico Robledo of Argentina, and today he was meeting with representatives of Chile, Norway, Romania, Liberia, Tunisia and Cyprus.

No One Wants To Risk $3 To Make $2 Profit

By PETER MILIUS
The Washington Post

LAFAYETTE, La. — Frank Harrison points to a small, blobby shape near the center of what looks like a contour map he has drawn.

The map is a piece of educated guesswork — geologist Harrison's rendering of the rock formations about a mile underground in an abandoned natural gas field near here.

The blobby shape Harrison thinks he can detect from old well records is a kind of inverted saucer — and if he is right, there may be about 1 billion cubic feet of gas beneath it.

The problem now is to find someone who will gamble on the correctness of the map and put up the money to drill a well. Harrison says it will take $200,000 "just to get down and look at the sands" and another $100,000 to "complete" the well if gas is there — $300,000 in all.

The federal government regulates the prices of gas to be sold in interstate commerce — that is, for use outside Louisiana — at 52 cents per thousand cubic feet. The most the hoped-for billion cubic feet could yield at that price is about $500,000 — and given the risks of drilling a dry hole, Harrison says, people won't put up $2 to make just $5.

But the intrastate price of gas is not regulated by the federal government, and it is now more than two and sometimes nearly four times the regulated price in Louisiana. Harrison says an intrastate user has told him it will pay $1.15 per thousand feet if he finds gas in the abandoned field.

At $1.15 the math is different. A $300,000 investment, of which only $200,000 is really at risk, can bring in $1.15 million. "There are going to be a lot of people interested," Harrison says. If the gas is there, he thinks it will be produced.

Harrison's example is at the heart of a developing controversy in Congress and the country over the natural gas shortage, and the so-called deregulation of natural gas.

The government has been regulating the interstate price of natural gas for almost 40 years, and for at least the last 25 years of those, the industry has been fighting in Congress for deregulation. President Truman vetoed one deregulation bill in 1950, President Eisenhower another in 1956. The industry is now trying again, and the Ford administration is in its corner.

The industry and the President are saying about gas what they also say about oil — that only higher, unregulated "free market" prices will draw forth the gas the nation needs.

On the other side are key Democrats in Congress and various organizations representing consumers. They say the regulated price is ample; and 52 cents now allowed by the Federal Power Commission is supposedly enough to let an average producer recover all his costs, including the cost of dry holes, and have a 15 per cent return on investment besides.

The unregulated prices in intrastate markets, they say, are not really free-market prices at all, but monopoly or cartel prices. The free or world price of gas, they maintain, is determined in large part by the world price for oil, since oil and gas are to some extent interchangeable — and the world price for oil is set by the Organization of Petroleum ExportCountries. It is thus not a question of having a government price or a market price, but which government price, ours or OPEC's, that Congress must decide, these defenders of regulation say.

No sane producers will sell gas for the FPC's price of 52 cents when he can just as easily sell it for more, which is at least the most immediate reason why there is a "shortage" of gas interstate now, and a near-glut in the intrastate pipelines.

But the problem, according to such people as Leo C. White, former FPC chairman and now chairman of the Consumer Federation of America's energy policy task force, is not that the 52-cent price is too low, but that the alternatives are too high. He would regulate intrastate and interstate gas together, and so would a bill approved earlier this year by the Senate Commerce Committee, and heading for the floor perhaps this week.

Natural is the gas that more than 40 million American families burn in their kitchen stoves or to heat their water and their homes. It is even more heavily used by industry. Some industries can use no other product. They would have to shut down without it.

Though less has been written about gas than oil in the last few years, gas is nearly as important. It supplied 30 per cent of the nation's energy last year, as against 46 per cent from oil and 18 per cent from coal, with the rest from scattered other sources.

Billions of dollars are at stake if the price of gas is deregulated — in higher utility bills, higher prices for a variety of other products (most of the commercial fertilizer used to grow food in this country, for example, is made from natural gas), and higher profits for producers.

Producers like Harrison say almost no one who has a choice will sell gas in interstate commerce these days.

Not all gas is going intrastate, nowever. For one thing, gas is generally sold under 20-year or other long-term contracts, and gas sold to interstate pipelines in the past can't be shifted around. Also, gas from the federal domain offshore has been ruled subject to FPC price ceilings, no matter to whom it is sold.

Offshore, however, the fact that Congress is discussing deregulation works to discourage drilling. Why go to the considerable expense of drilling today offshore for 52 cents when you may be able to drill tomorrow for two or four times that?

Amoco Develops Micellar Method Of Oil Recovery

CHICAGO—An estimated 35 to 40 billion barrels of oil, unrecoverable from U.S. reservoirs by convential means, may be potentially recoverable by a new, laboratory-tested process which uses a fraction of the energy to tap alternative fuel sources.

The process, called "micellar flooding," is being extensively tested by Amoco Chemicals Corp. and Amoco Production Co., wholly-owned subsidiaries of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

In formations where micellar flooding is applicable, from 13 to 19 times as much energy would be released by the new recovery method as is put in.

And, about 60 per cent of the oil left in the formation would be recovered by micellar flooding.

Alternative new energy sources such as shale oil, coal conversion or nuclear fission return from two to 10 times their energy input.

These are the conclusions of Dan H. Carpenter and John B. Davies, both of Amoco Chemicals, in a paper which they prepared and will present to the Society of Petroleum Engineers of the American Institute of Mining Engineers in Dallas Tuesday.

Carpenter and Davies based their estimate of the efficiency of micellar flooding on energy required for manufacture, transportation and injection of the micellar flooding solutions.

They said early tests are expected to have a lower energy yield until the techniques are perfected.

Carbon dioxide flooding is the only other method with a ratio of energy input to energy output similar to micellar flooding, they said. But the two noted that micellar flooding is expected to be more generally applicable.

On Dec. 6, 1917, a ship exploded in Halifax, Canada, killing 1,600.

Convicted Obstetrician Questions Medical Practice

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Seven months after his manslaughter conviction for the death of an aborted fetus, Dr. Kenneth C. Edelin's medical practice is busier than ever.

But with his appeal still pending after a trial he has characterized as a witch-hunt, the 36-year-old obstetrician is questioning whether he should continue in medicine and considering a move away from Boston, where it all happened.

Dr. Edelin is angry.

"I wonder what my reaction would be if I saw any of the jurors — Shea, McLaughlin, Pelletier," he mused at a recent interview. Sometimes he looks for them.

Following the jury's unanimous verdict, Dr. Edelin was placed on one year's probation, and the sentence was delayed pending appeal. He returned immediately to his medical practice as chief of ambulatory services in the obstetrical ward at Boston City Hospital.

Dr. Edelin soon was promoted to associate director of the ward. He is in such demand for private practice, including some abortions, that he limits his office hours.

His conviction last Feb. 15 has intensified the national debate on abortion, and has caused a number of hospitals to cut back on the operations. Dr. Edelin said that Boston City Hospital, where he performed the abortion that led to his indictment, now accepts almost no abortion cases. They are referred to special clinics.

The trial has caused the young doctor to reassess his goals.

In an interview just after his conviction, he had said of his work: "It's usually a very happy specialty, seeing a woman throughout her pregancy and delivering for her a nice healthy baby and seeing a family develop."

Now he says: "I've been trying to make a decision — what am I going to do with my life? Am I going to stay in medicine or should I continue to be a public figure and travel around the country and promote the things I believe in?"

The handsome and articulate doctor has been in demand as a speaker, and although he says it interferes with his practice, he has accepted a number of engagements to help pay his legal expenses.

These include a debt of $65,000 for last winter's trial, Dr. Edelin says, and the amount could reach $120,000 for the appeal in state courts because an additional lawyer must be hired and there's a heavy load of legal research.

The appeal, originally to have been argued this fall, is now expected to be heard early next year.

Reflecting on his manslaughter conviction for performing a medical precedure in use elsewhere in the country, Dr. Edelin says, "I believe it could only have happened in Boston."

This city that is both a major medical center and the seat of the nation's anti-abortion movement also will be the scene this fall of the prosecution of four physicians accused under a 19th century statute of grave-robbing for performing experiments on aborted fetuses.

The Edelin case began two years ago, on Oct. 3, 1973, when he performed a routine legal abortion on a 17-year-old girl.

Because of difficulties in aborting by salt injection, Dr. Edelin completed the abortion by hysterotomy, a procedure similar to a Caesarean birth, in which the fetus is removed through an incision in the mother's abdomen.

The 20-to-24-week-old fetus was discovered later in a jar of formaldehyde by investigators seeking evidence in the grave-robbing case.

At the trial, Assistant Dist. Atty. Newman A. Flanagan charged that at the moment Dr. Edelin cut the fetus from the wall of its mother's womb, a baby was born. He charged that Dr. Edelin then held the fetus within the womb for several minutes and killed it.

Gulf Energy Employes Mark Long-Service Anniversaries

Six Gulf Energy and Minerals Co.-U.S. employes in the Midland Exploration and Production districts have marked service anniversaries.

John A. Rowbotham, L. O. McFarland, C. R. Tindall and A. J. Brunelle, each has completed 30 years.

W. J. Gibson has marked his 25th anniversary, and C. L. Robertson has completed 20 years.

Rowbotham, a Midland resident, is an analyst in the Midland Production District office. He has worked at Lamesa, Brownfield, Littlefield, Monahans and Fort Worth. He currently is serving in the district budget, AFE, conde control, statistics section.

McFarland, a resident of Crane, is area services supervisor in the Crane Area of the Midland Production District.

He joined gulf as a roustabout at Goldsmith in 1945. He had worked at Odessa, Goldsmith and Midland before being moved to Crane in 1965.

Tindall, a resident of Odessa, is a roustabout supervisor in the Odessa Area of the Midland Production District.

He was employed by Gulf as a roustabout at Electra in 1945. He also worked in the Wichita Falls Area before being transferred to Odessa.

Brunelle, another Midlander, is senior clerk in the Midland Production District. He joined the company at Longview as a general clerk and served there until 1950 when he went into the Army. After his discharge in 1951, he returned to Longview and was there until being moved to Kilgore.

He was transferred to Jackson, Miss., in 1957 and worked there until moving to Midland in 1961.

Gibson, a senior materials expediter in the Goldsmith Area of the Midland Production District, is a resident of Odessa.

He joined Gulf in 1950 in the Midland and Odessa vicinity. He has served as rodman, chainman, laborer and roustabout as well as in his present position of senior materials expediter.

Robertson, area engineer in the Crane Area of the Midland Production District, completed 20 years with the company Sept. 1.

He has advanced through various engineering positions at Odessa, Sand Hills and Midland. He was transferred to the Crane Area in January and promoted to his present assignment in July.

He is a resident of Odessa.

Agence France-Presse

PEKING — The 10 per cent increase in the price of oil decided by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) for Oct. 1 was "completely justifiable," the New China News Agency commented today.

In an editorial entitled "Oil Struggle Wins New Victory Through Unity," the agency said the OPEC decision was a setback to the "attempt by the industrialized countries to shift the economic crisis onto the oil producing countries."

It added that the producer countries had "Bravely stood up to superpower intimidation, threats and sabatoge by upholding unity and kept a firm hold on their right to fix oil prices."

The decision to increase the prices was "striking at hegemonism."

The agency said, "The superpower denunciation of the price readjustment is completely groundless" because the two price reductions which came before the "freezing" of prices meant that the 10 per cent rise brought the prices "approximately" to the level they stood at 21 months ago.

In addition, the purchasing power of the oil producing countries had dropped by between 30 and 40 per cent because of inflation in the Western countries and the increased cost of importing goods from these countries.

Rhodesian Heads African Council

An estimated 5,500 delegates, packed under huge marquees set up in the soccer stadium in Salisbury's Highfields Township, elected Nkomo and six of his top aides to senior posts in the ANC.

Nkomo is the former leader of the Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU).

Gas Platform Fire Burns Man Gravely

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A man was burned seriously Sunday when a fire broke out on a Pennzoil gas platform in the Gulf of Mexico, the Coast Guard said.

The blaze was brought under control within an hour and the crew was evacuated by standby boats, a spokesman said. The platform is 130 miles southeast of Galveston, Tex.

The man, not identified at once, was flown to a Galveston hospital.

"It was some sort of mechanical problem — that's all I can say," said Dale Lagrone, a company official. He refused to elaborate.

U.S. Aids Cairo In Clearing Mines

By JACK FOISIE
The Los Angeles Times

ABOARD U.S.S. INCHON, Off Egypt — The American Navy has returned to the approaches to the Suez Canal to make shipping lanes and fishing waters safe from mines planted during the 1967 and 1973 Mideast wars.

It is another American goodwill operation to cement ties with Eygpt. The U.S. aid mission in Cairo has earmarked up to $3.5 million to pay for the mine clearing. The Inchon usually carries a Marine battalion for emergency standby duty, and currently is alerted to evacuate Americans from strife-torn Lebanon if necessary.

The Inchon is mother ship of the Navy's most powerful helicopters and most sophisticated minesweeping gear. Last year she was in the canal itself, sweeping for live mines. In early 1973, the same ship and most of the same personnel were off Haiphong, North Vietnam,sweeping up as part of the U.S. commitment in the ill-fated Vietnam cease-fire agreement.

The technique of using helicopters to tow sleds through minefields to explode still-active mines is still in its infancy. This accounts for the Navy's eagerness to put the Inchon into any area in the world to cope with live mines.

Within the U.S. Navy there are still doubters. They contend the only sure way is the old way — to plow through the monefields with wooden ships and iron men employing mine-destructive apparatus out in front and to the sides.

Always looking to keep tabs on the new gadgetry of the capitalistic Navy, Soviet minesweepers of the Natya class have been staying within sight of the Inchon to observe its operations.

The Soviet ship, remaining just outside Egyptian territorial waters, can observe the liftoff of the Inchon's Seadragon helicopters, which are the most expensive birds in the U.S. inventory, costing $3.3 million each.

Pulling the heaviest variety of sled (itself filled with electronic devices) through the water slows the Seadragon's normal 150 m.p.h. speed down to 25, requiring great pilot skill to keep the tow-chopper an even level at 100 feet above the water.

For more than a month the Inchon, with dawn-to-dusk tow choppers aloft and sleds chruning the waters, has been sweeping five Egyptian-laid minefields east and west of Port Said at the Mediterranean entrance to the Suez Canal. For all the effort, no mines have been exploded.

Capt. Charles Stratmann, task commander, says that this does not mean the systen is a failure, but rather that all 115 Soviet-type mines laid by the Egyptians in the last two wars are no longer operable.

Many, he said, are buried in the silt carried down by the Nile River, whose Damietta outlet is nearby. Other mines are now dead, having expended their power sources, Stratmann said.

If knowledge of these Russian-type mines is complete, the mines turn on to either the sound of a passing ship, magnetic attraction of the ship's iron hull, or change in water pressure as it passes.

But the mine does not explode until there is a strong-enough single or combination attraction.

Despite the sucess of the helicopter-towed sleds in years of simulated tests, Stratmann ans all the men on the Inchon yearn to see the system proven beyond doubt.

"I'd like to see and hear mines going off like firecrackers," said Lt. Leon Schierer of Erie, Pa. His chopper has the one mine explosion which the squadron, known in Navy jargon as HW-12, has to its credit. Like fighter pilots who shot down MIGs, and warship crews which sank enemy ships, Schierer has his "scalp" painted on the Seadragon's fuselage — a mine with a bolt of lighting demolishing it.

That kill came during the Haiphong sweep. The presumption that all other American mines, sown around Haiphong when it was an enemy port, had self-destructed or gone dead has since been affirmed. The North Vietnamese have never reported a ship damaged by explosion since the port was cleared.

In the Ichon's six-weeks of helicopter sweeps in the Suez Canal last year, only on one flight was there a string of explosions. And that has proven to have been a series of small anti-personnel mines set off by a ground-mine-clearing crew as the Navy helicopter passed overhead. The Navy considers it a bad Army-inspired stunt.

While contending that the new technique of minesweeping is safer and less expensive than using fleets of wooden-hulled ships with sizable crews to do the job, Stratmann is not a man to see only one side of the argument.

He revealed that while the minefields he was worked over off the Egyptian beaches may now be dead, minefield No. 2 was alive only a few months ago. The American oil-exploration ship Neches inadvertently penetrated the field at night in early July, exploded a mine, and sank. All 23 crewmen were rescued.

Bluegrass Singer, Guitarist Dies

REIDSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Charlie Monroe, a guitarist and singer who helped pioneer the bluegrass style and performed for nearly a half century, died Saturday at the age of 72. He had been suffering from cancer. With his brother Bill, he began recording in 1927 as a member of the Bluegrass Boys. He split with his brother in 1938. His final concert was last weekend in Kentucky.

Ford Due To Visit China In November

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Chinese Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua have cleared the way for President Ford to visit Peking in November.

The two men met over dinner for four hours Sunday night and had a "complete and friendly talk about every aspect of our relations," Kissinger reported.

When asked if he and Chiao had set a date for Ford's visit, he replied that an announcement will be made soon. But he added that "everything is on schedule."

Later, a U.S. official in Kissinger's party said the secretary would go to Peking just after mid-October to prepare for Ford to follow in late November.

This official said Chiao agreed to the tentative schedule, and a firm date will be set in the next few days.

Kissinger came to New York Sunday for his second round of meetings with foreign ministers attending the General Assembly. In addition to Chiao, he met on Sunday with Angel Federico Robledo of Argentina, and today he was meeting with representatives of Chile, Norway, Romania, Liberia, Tunisia and Cyprus.

Kissinger's office announced that he would meet Tuesday morning with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam. This will be the first high-level American-Syrian talk since Kissinger returned from negotiating the Israeli-Egyptian agreement a month ago.

Chamber Elects New Directors

MARFA — Ann McCallum, manager of the Marfa Chamber of Commerce and secretary-treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce Executives Association of West Texas, has announced the election of officers and directors of the organization for 1975-76.

No One Wants To Risk $3 To Make $2 Profit

By PETER MILIUS
The Washington Post

The blobby shape Harrison thinks he can detect from old well records is a kind of inverted saucer — and if he is right, there may be about 1 billion cubic feet of gas beneath it.

The problem now is to find someone who will gamble on the correctness of the map and put up the money to drill a well. Harrison says it will take $200,000 "just to get down and look at the sands" and another $100,000 to "complete" the well if gas is there — $300,000 in all.

The federal government regulates the prices of gas to be sold in interstate commerce — that is, for use outside Louisiana — at 52 cents per thousand cubic feet. The most the hoped-for billion cubic feet could yield at that price is about $500,000 — and given the risks of drilling a dry hole, Harrison says, people won't put up $2 to make just $5.

But the intrastate price of gas is not regulated by the federal government, and it is now more than two and sometimes nearly four times the regulated price in Louisiana. Harrison says an intrastate user has told him it will pay $1.15 per thousand feet if he finds gas in the abandoned field.

At $1.15 the math is different. A $300,000 investment, of which only $200,000 is really at risk, can bring in $1.15 million. "There are going to be a lot of people interested," Harrison says. If the gas is there, he thinks it will be produced.

Harrison's example is at the heart of a developing controversy in Congress and the country over the natural gas shortage, and the so-called deregulation of natural gas.

The government has been regulating the interstate price of natural gas for almost 40 years, and for at least the last 25 years of those, the industry has been fighting in Congress for deregulation. President Truman vetoed one deregulation bill in 1950, President Eisenhower another in 1956. The industry is now trying again, and the Ford administration is in its corner.

The industry and the President are saying about gas what they also say about oil — that only higher, unregulated "free market" prices will draw forth the gas the nation needs.

On the other side are key Democrats in Congress and various organizations representing consumers. They say the regulated price is ample; and 52 cents now allowed by the Federal Power Commission is supposedly enough to let an average producer recover all his costs, including the cost of dry holes, and have a 15 per cent return on investment besides.

The unregulated prices in intrastate markets, they say, are not really free-market prices at all, but monopoly or cartel prices. The free or world price of gas, they maintain, is determined in large part by the world price for oil, since oil and gas are to some extent interchangeable — and the world price for oil is set by the Organization of Petroleum ExportCountries. It is thus not a question of having a government price or a market price, but which government price, ours or OPEC's, that Congress must decide, these defenders of regulation say.

No sane producers will sell gas for the FPC's price of 52 cents when he can just as easily sell it for more, which is at least the most immediate reason why there is a "shortage" of gas interstate now, and a near-glut in the intrastate pipelines.

But the problem, according to such people as Leo C. White, former FPC chairman and now chairman of the Consumer Federation of America's energy policy task force, is not that the 52-cent price is too low, but that the alternatives are too high. He would regulate intrastate and interstate gas together, and so would a bill approved earlier this year by the Senate Commerce Committee, and heading for the floor perhaps this week.

Natural is the gas that more than 40 million American families burn in their kitchen stoves or to heat their water and their homes. It is even more heavily used by industry. Some industries can use no other product. They would have to shut down without it.

Though less has been written about gas than oil in the last few years, gas is nearly as important. It supplied 30 per cent of the nation's energy last year, as against 46 per cent from oil and 18 per cent from coal, with the rest from scattered other sources.

Billions of dollars are at stake if the price of gas is deregulated — in higher utility bills, higher prices for a variety of other products (most of the commercial fertilizer used to grow food in this country, for example, is made from natural gas), and higher profits for producers.

Not all gas is going intrastate, nowever. For one thing, gas is generally sold under 20-year or other long-term contracts, and gas sold to interstate pipelines in the past can't be shifted around. Also, gas from the federal domain offshore has been ruled subject to FPC price ceilings, no matter to whom it is sold.

Offshore, however, the fact that Congress is discussing deregulation works to discourage drilling. Why go to the considerable expense of drilling today offshore for 52 cents when you may be able to drill tomorrow for two or four times that?

Amoco Develops Micellar Method Of Oil Recovery

CHICAGO—An estimated 35 to 40 billion barrels of oil, unrecoverable from U.S. reservoirs by convential means, may be potentially recoverable by a new, laboratory-tested process which uses a fraction of the energy to tap alternative fuel sources.

The process, called "micellar flooding," is being extensively tested by Amoco Chemicals Corp. and Amoco Production Co., wholly-owned subsidiaries of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

In formations where micellar flooding is applicable, from 13 to 19 times as much energy would be released by the new recovery method as is put in.

Alternative new energy sources such as shale oil, coal conversion or nuclear fission return from two to 10 times their energy input.

These are the conclusions of Dan H. Carpenter and John B. Davies, both of Amoco Chemicals, in a paper which they prepared and will present to the Society of Petroleum Engineers of the American Institute of Mining Engineers in Dallas Tuesday.

Carpenter and Davies based their estimate of the efficiency of micellar flooding on energy required for manufacture, transportation and injection of the micellar flooding solutions.

They said early tests are expected to have a lower energy yield until the techniques are perfected.

Carbon dioxide flooding is the only other method with a ratio of energy input to energy output similar to micellar flooding, they said. But the two noted that micellar flooding is expected to be more generally applicable.

Dallas Cops Thrilling 37-31 Overtime Victory

Staubach Hits DuPree In Sudden-Death Play

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboy Coach Tom Landry has suffered through 16 National Football League campaigns but Sunday's 37-31 sudden death victory over St. Louis triggered the widest range of emotions he has felt.

"I thought we'd lost it, won it and lost it again," said Landry of the wild offensive show. "It was a long afternoon. It's enough to turn a man gray."

The scenario of the up-and-down game which ended with quarterback Roger Staubach's three-yard touchdown pass to tight end Billy Joe DuPree at 7:07 in overtime would have taxed a fiction writer's imagination.

Pokes Trail

Dallas trailed, surged ahead 31-17, and watched dumbstruck as St. Louis quarterback Jim Hart completed a 37-yard touchdown pass to Mel Gray to tie the game at 31-all with 46 seconds remaining.

With St. Louis in easy range of a chip shot field goal at the Dallas 29 in the overtime, Hart incredibly flipped a pass directly at Cowboy middle linebacker Lee Roy Jordan, who rumbled 38 yards to the Cardinal 37. Staubach then turned out the lights.

Dumb Call

"It was a dumb call," said St. Louis Coach Don Coryell of the intercepted pass. "I called it. Jordan is a fine football player and he just happened to be at the right spot. Maybe we shouldn't have tried it but it's over and done with."

Hart said "Talk to the coach about the play ... it's one of those cases where you can't go to the well too many times."

Hart, who had four touchdown passes for the day, added "Jordan was looking right into my eyes ... that's how he read it."

The game started on a routine, almost boring note. Jim Bakken kicked a 28-yard field goal but Dallas jumped ahead 7-3 just before halftime on Staubach's one-yard toss to Jean Fugett.

Then came the fireworks. Staubach whipped a 12-yard touchdown pass to Drew Pearson. Hart called and raised with a 23-yard scoring shot to Gray.

Enough of this, said Cowboy assistant Coach Mike Ditka, who put in a kickoff reverse. Rookie Thomas Henderson zipped 97 yards untouched. Toni Fritsch's 40-yard field goal made it 31-17 and Cowboy fans were saying wasn't it nice to be 2-0 in the National Conference East.

Hart Connects

Hart went zap-zap—35 yards to Jackie Smith and 37 to Gray—and not only was the game tied but Fritsch missed a 39-yard field goal at the gun. The Cardinals won the coin toss and got to receive in overtime.

Enter Jordan and his heroics.

"Lee Roy saved the game for us because it was gone for all practical purposes ... Bakken is an outstanding kicker under pressure," said Staubach, who had his career best passing day with 207 yards on 23 of 34 passes.

Hart didn't have a bad day himself except for two interceptions, completing 15 of 32 passes for 314 yards as the Cardinals dropped to 1-1 in defense of their NFC East crown.

"St. Louis has a trademark of scoring in the last minute," said Landry. "I thought Terry Metcalf was open on that pass Lee Roy intercepted. Jordan read the play and came up perfect."

Asked why he called for a pass instead of kicking the field goal which was St. Louis' mistake, Landry said "I didn't want to play conservative. On the touchdown play, they had a blitz on and they had to cover Billy Joe with a linebacker. On that type of play, it's usually complete or not, so I wasn't worried.

Saw Blitz

"Roger recognized the blitz and did a fine job of getting the ball off. I wouldn't have hesitated one second about kicking for the field goal but I thought we could score the TD to win it."

St. Louis was involved in 11 games last season that were decided in the final seconds and defeated Atlanta last week on a Bakken field goal with no time left on the clock.

"It was a tough way to win but we won it," said toy fullback Robert Newhouse.

"It was the most exciting game I've ever played in," said Staubach. "I thought we had it put away and the Cardinals just kept coming back."

Perhaps Cowboy guard Blaine Nye summed it up: "It was a pain but we won ... didn't we?"

SAHARA GOLF

Hill Captures Tourney Crown

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Dave Hill, the gritty beneficiary of a lot of other people's mistakes, was attempting to explain his victory in the Sahara Invitational Golf Tournament.

"I've said it before and I'll say it again. More golf tournaments are lost than won. And this one definitely was lost," he said.

"After this, I'm going back to believing in miracles."

The sometimes-stormy Hill, whose 17-year career has been marked by countless fines, suspensions, controversies, legal actions and now 12 victories, claimed the title and the $27,000 first prize Sunday when Rik Massengale's bold gamble for the green ended in the water on the first sudden death playoff hole and skinny ol' Davy won it with a safe, cautious, routine par.

"I was just fortunate to get in the playoff," said Hill, who had made double-bogey six after leaving it in a fairway bunker on the ninth hole at the 6,800-yard Sahara-Nevada Country Club course.

"I figured the game was over," Hill said. "The way I played the first nine holes my handicap should be about eight. From then on I was just trying to find a golf swing."

But his game suddenly came right. He played the back nine in 32 while the other contenders—six different players either led or shared the lead at one time on the hot, sunny day—fired and fell back.

Bruce Crampton hit it out of bounds on the 15th hole. George Cadle lost his share of the lead when he found the water on the same hole. Bob Wynn drifted back. Bobby Mitchell never really got it going.

Hall Car Takes Formula 5,000

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Brian Redman, driving a Jim Hall Borexo T-332 car, won the 5,000 Formula Grand Prix race here Sunday before more than 80,000 racing fans.

The race, a 50-lap feature, was run through the streets with some of the world's best drivers competing.

Redman is nearing the national scoring championship on the circuit with two races remaining at Riverside, Calif., and Monterrey, Calf.

Aggies Facing K-State Next

By The Associated Press

The Texas Aggies get a chance for revenge on the sunflower state this week where their dreams of national prominence were shattered a year ago.

Kansas stunned A&M last year and Saturday the eighth-ranked Aggies, who own the No. 1 defense in the country, take another unbeaten record into the state—only this time against Kansas State, which also has a 3-0 record.

"We are more physically mature and have more confidence and poise than a year ago," said A&M Coach Emory Bellard after A&M had crushed Illinois 43-13 Saturday on regional television. "We are starting to play football like it should be played ... with a lot of intensity."

An awed Illinois Coach Bob Blackman said A&M "has the best defensive team I've seen in four years." That covers a lot of territory including teams at Ohio State and Michigan.

Bellard said "We know we can do things this year because we've built up our confidence ... It just isn't something you plug in, you know ... you've had to work to get there."

It will be another full week of intersectional scalp hunting for the SWC except for the Texas Christian-Arkansas game Saturday night in Little Rock.

Texas jumped to the head of the class in the SWC with a 42-18 slaughter of Texas Tech—the 36th consecutive victory for the Longhorns in Memorial Stadium. It was sweet revenge for Texas which lost 26-3 to Texas Tech last year and a bitter pill for Red Raider Coach Steve Sloan in his first SWC game.

Sloan said "They just physically whipped us but we stopped ourselves with four fumbles and two interceptions rather than Texas stopping us."

It was Texas Coach Darrell Royal's 100th SWC victory.

"I don't know how much of it was revenge but they were ready to play," Royal said of his unbeaten team.

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff had the unusual situation of watching his team play a tie for the second week in a row. The Bears tied Auburn—also 10-10—two weeks ago.

Corolla 2-Door Sedan

Just good gas mileage and a low price aren't enough anymore.

Sure Corollas are low priced and get good gas mileage. They average 33 mpg on the highway and 21 in the city in EPA simulated tests.*

But what good is all that if the rest of the car quickly goes to pot?

That's why every single Corolla goes through water tests, brake tests, even glove box tests. That's why every single engine is tested for 30 minutes before it ever spends a minute in your Toyota.

So you can imagine what our racy SR-5's include. Sample: AM/FM radio for sweet music. Wide radial tires for sweet handling. And a 5-speed overdrive transmission for sweet savings on gas and engine wear.

You want the right car at the right price.

Which is why we make so many different Toyotas for you to choose from. The low, low priced Corollas, plus sporty Celicas, solid Coronas, roomy Mark II's, tough pickup trucks and Land Cruisers.

Good gas mileage and a low price? Sure. But in a Toyota, we want you to enjoy those savings for a long time to come. Get your hands on a Toyota.

TOYOTA

MTC TOURNAMENT

Lancaster, Matyastik Capture Net Crowns

By JAN WILLIAMS

It came as no surprise Sunday when Trinity's Bill Matyastik and Midland College's Vicki Lancaster emerged as victors in the Midland Tennis Club's Invitational Tennis Tournament.

Both Matyastik and Lancaster were number one seeds in singles competition. Matyastik defeated Trinity teammate Mike Grant, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3. Lancaster defeated independent Anne Smith, 0-6, 7-6, 7-5.

Lancaster advanced to the finals by defeating Jo Ann Kurz of The University of Texas, 6-1, 6-1. But the going wasn't so easy when Lancaster met Smith, who advanced to the finals by defeating Emilie Foster, another independent, 6-2, 6-3.

Getting a slow start, Lancaster lost the first set to Smith, 0-6. Lancaster took the second set by winning a tiebreaker at 5-3. The third set also went to Lancaster, 7-5, giving her the set at 2-1.

The Trinity squad, which ranks in the top 10 in the nation, swept the men's divisions in both singles and doubles.

In the singles competition, Matyastik, a former national interscholastic champion, defeated Randy Crawford of Texas Christian University, 7-5, 7-6, to advance to the finals.

In the finals, Matyastik was up against one of Trinity's top freshmen, Mike Grant. Matyastik had no trouble with Grant in the first set, defeating him 6-2. Grant came back in the second set, however, to defeat Matyastik, 6-4. Matyastik regained his composure and defeated his teammate in the third set, 6-3, to take the match.

In men's doubles competition, Matyastik and Jim Timmons advanced to the finals by defeating Steve Johnson and Brett Hall of West Texas State, 6-3, 7-5.

Matyastik and Timmons met Bill Scanlon and David King of Texas Tech in the finals. Scanlon and King defeated Graham Whaling and Gary Plock of The University of Texas in the quarterfinals.

In the men's doubles finals competition, Matyastik and Timmons defeated Scanlon and King, 6-2, 6-4.

In women's doubles competition, Val Franta and Donna Stockton of Trinity, defeated independents Betty Hagerman and Pam Diepraam, to advance to the finals.

In the finals, Hagerman and Diepraam took on Virginia Brown, independent (Odessa College coach) and Emilie Foster, independent (Texas Tech coach). Brown and Foster won the match, 2-6, 6-1, 6-2.

A sizeable crowd cheered the teams on Sunday at the Midland courts, once again proving the success of the invitational tournament which has listed such winners as Cliff Richey, Dick Stockton and George Hardie.

McCamey Coaches Suffer Injuries

COAHOMA—Six youths, five of them juveniles, were taken into custody Friday night following a rock throwing incident which injured two McCamey coaches and another incident which resulted in damage to the McCamey band bus.

The incident came after a football game here where McCamey upset Coahoma. Assistant McCamey coaches Jack Gray and Mike Billingsly suffered minor cuts when a rock was thrown through the McCamey team bus. They were treated at Hogan-Malone Hospital in Big Spring. Four Coahoma youths were arrested after that incident.

Two Big Spring youths were arrested after the McCamey band bus was damaged on interstate 20. All of those arrested were charged with criminal mischief.

Tech Undefeated

By The Associated Press

The grumbling is starting over that powerhouse college team from Oklahoma. No, not the Oklahoma Sooners; would you believe the Oklahoma State Cowboys?

The Cowpokes, nee Oklahoma Aggies, have played second-fiddle to the University of Oklahoma on the football field for so long—they trail the intrastate series 53-10-6—that it's headline-making news when they steal the spotlight from the mighty Sooners . . . as they did over the weekend.

While No. 1-ranked Oklahoma was having its hands full in a hard-earned 20-17 triumph over Miami of Florida, 17th-ranked Oklahoma State also ran its record to 3-0 by ripping North Texas State 61-7.

Hayden Fry, like most coaches, wasn't used to being crushed by the Cowboys.

"I'd rather not talk about it," he said . . . before talking about it.

"They're a great football team," a bitter Fry continued. "I've been coaching for 25 years and have never seen anything like that. I really don't want to comment on it. They rubbed it in. I guess that's okay if that's what you want to do.

"Hell, how could anyone have mistaken it out there? Like I say, I would rather not talk about it."

What especially galled Fry was OSU's running off several plays in the closing seconds without taking time to huddle after throwing two sideline passes to stop the clock. Freshman Steve Stephens eventually scored on a one-yard plunge.

Fry was so upset he said he "considered not going out to shake hands" with OSU's Jim Stanley, who explained that his second team "wanted to work on the two-minute offense at the end."

"I told him Oklahoma State had a great football team," Fry related. "I don't know what he said to me. It doesn't really matter. It's their prerogative to . . . like I said, I really don't want to talk about it."

Meanwhile, second-ranked Ohio State posed a serious threat to Oklahoma's lead in this week's Associated Press ratings with a 32-7 victory over North Carolina as Archie Griffin rushed for 157 yards—his 24th consecutive regular-season 100-yard game—and broke Rex Kern's school total offense record while fullback Pete Johnson scored all five touchdowns on short runs.

Punt returns of 47 and 68 yards by Danny Reece set up two touchdowns and helped third-ranked Southern California defeat Purdue 19-6. Fourth-ranked Nebraska swamped Texas Christian 56-14 as Terry Luck flipped three short touchdown passes.

Missouri, ranked fifth, rallied to beat Wisconsin 27-21 on a 66-yard pass play from Steve Pisarkiewicz to Henry Marshall, who earlier caught an 11-yard scoring toss from tailback Tony Galbreath. Earl Campbell rushed for 198 yards and two touchdowns and Marty Akins added 114 yards to lead No. 6 Texas over Texas Tech 42-18 in the Southwest Conference opener.

Dan Devine, Notre Dame's new coach, made his debut in South Bend and gave the home folks a hint that he might be almost as brilliant as Rockne, Leahy and Parseghian. With the seventh-ranked Fighting Irish trailing Northwestern 7-0, Devine brought Joe Montana off the bench and the sophomore quarterback scored one touchdown and passed for another in rallying the Irish to a 31-7 triumph.

Bubba Bean gained 158 yards on just 12 carries and scored twice as eighth-ranked Texas A&M walloped Illinois 43-13.

UCLA, No. 10, blew a 13-3 halftime lead and settled for a 20-20 deadlock with winless Air Force.

Stock Market Sags Lower In Quiet Trading Session

NEW YORK (AP) — Fears of a further rise in interest rates pushed the stock market lower in quiet trading today.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 7.66 at 810.94, and losers took a 3-2 lead over gainers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Treasury bill and bond market rates rose today amid concern over the potential impact on the credit markets of the government's heavy borrowing needs for October.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dipped .26 to 84.52.

Brokers noted no emphatic response either way in the market to the 10 per cent price increase agreed upon by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries over the weekend.

The size of the boost was in line with what Wall Street had been expecting.

Glamor issues posted some of the most conspicuous losses. Fairchild Camera was down 1¾ at 49⅝; Xerox 1⅛ to 53¼; IBM 1½ to 194½, and Digital Equipment 1 to 119¾.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .31 to 45.39.

Westates Petroleum fell 1⅞ to 7¼ after a delayed opening on the Amex. The company said it suspended talks on the disposition of its oil and gas properties because uncertainty over future government energy policies made it impossible at present to determine the properties' value.

Sadat Says Egypt Has U.S. Vows

By The Associated Press

President Anwar Sadat says the U.S. government assured him that Israel will not attack Syria, that there will be another Israeli withdrawal on the Golan Heights and that the Palestinians will take part in efforts to reach a final Middle East peace settlement.

"If there are any secret provisions (of his new Sinai agreement with Israel) they are these," the Egyptian president said Sunday in a televised speech marking the fifth anniversary of President Gamal Abdel Nasser's death.

The speech to a joint session of the central committee of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only political party, and the 360-member People's Assembly, was Sadat's third defense of the Sinai pact since it was signed Sept. 1.

He again attacked Arab critics of his policies and the Soviet Union for refusing to supply Egypt with advanced weapons.

Elsewhere in the Middle East:

Israel devalued its currency by 10 per cent Sunday, the fifth devaluation in less than a year. The cabinet also announced a 22 per cent increase in the price of gasoline to $1.83 a gallon and a 10 per cent sales tax hike. Economists estimated the measures would increase the price index between 5 and 9 per cent.

The Israeli command said 55 Arabs living in the occupied West Bank had been detained on suspicion of guerrilla activities. They were found with caches of rifles, grenades and explosives, the command said.

Beirut, Lebanon's capital, slowly began returning to normal after two weeks of Christian-Moslem warfare. Armored cars and personnel carriers guarded main intersections and a government spokesman reported only two suburban roads still closed by snipers.

Most government departments, banks and major business houses remained closed. Business leaders told Premier Rashid Karami they would test his government's security measures today before reopening.

Karami made a radio and television appeal to the people to "bury hatreds, stop fighting and start rebuilding Lebanon in an atmosphere of restored sectarian fraternity."

'Frisco' Losing Ground As Jewel Of The West

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Editor, Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The nationwide attention given the recent police and firemen's strike that paralyzed this city has aroused questions around the nation.

Is San Francisco still "the jewel of the West," "the city that knows how" and the enchanting, friendly, clean wonder city of a few years back?

In oversimplification, the answer is no. It is not. And, judging by the nature of the situation, things will get worse long before they get better.

San Francisco, or 'Frisco as its critics like to tease it, is not too many years away—unless there is a dramatic reversal—from the status of Newark, Hartford, Cleveland and Baltimore. These cities have all the problems of the major metropolitan areas—and no solutions.

As the leader of the San Francisco police strike said when he proudly announced that his men were not working to protect the public, "I would say that the people are no longer safe in their homes or in the streets."

With or without a police strike, there is a lessening sense of safety in this once free, easy and safe haven for those who loved a good time. A sign of the times is the placard appearing in a jewelry store operated by Tom Cole. The sign reads: "Warning! This area patrolled by tarantula."

So, he hired a tarantula for his window display—at $10 a month vs. the $300 that a guard dog costs. The tarantula does cost just a bit more than $10 a month. It is entitled to one live mouse every six months.

So far Rosie, the tarantula, has done her job well —no new burglaries. This is quite a record when one considers that the robbery-burglary rate for July in San Francisco was up 24 per cent—even before the police strike.

So far, San Francisco has avoided the financial crisis that has beset New York. New York's troubles are a direct result of powerful labor unions that exact tremendous benefits from a city that is up to its ears in taxes already.

However, the problem is creeping up on this Baghdad by the Bay, too, and the $19,500-a-year street cleaners and highly paid cops are leading the way.

Here is what Dianne Feinstein, president of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, had to say about her city's future:

"San Francisco, like other cities, has come to the fiscal crossroads. Unlike New York, we are going to say 'No' to more city spending. Unless we do, residents of this city will not be able to pay their taxes and the city will not be able to pay its bills."

Supervisor Feinstein may be whistling in the dark. Besides being the world's drinkingest city, San Francisco also is one of the most unionized. The cops, along with Mayor Joseph Alioto, showed that they have little regard for the financial future of the city in the most recent mess.

Meanwhile, while fun—obscene shows and plenty of pornography—is still here in some degree, the city has gone downhill.

There were less than 900 at the Giants' opening baseball game (over 50,000 in Los Angeles). The muggings of well-dressed San Francisco matrons have caused these ladies to forego once delightful downtown shopping trips.

It's sad to see a once great city go downhill. But, that is what's happening here. Next stop Passaic, Bridgeport, Newark or some other depressed area.

Recycled Monkeys?

HOUSTON (AP) — Medical researchers here say inflation has hit the monkey business, forcing the scientists to use the monkeys for more than one laboratory study.

"We're trying to recycle monkeys so we can reuse them in experiments," says Dr. John Jardine, head of the experimental animal department at M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute.

The researchers are careful that the effects of one experiment do not prejudice the results of other experiments the animals are used in, Jardine said.

The institute researchers have imported rhesus monkeys from India for experiments in radiation treatment of cancer and growth of cancerous tumors. Jardine estimates M.D. Anderson uses about 100 research monkeys a year.

He said the rhesus is more representative of man than any other monkey.

Two years ago, Jardine said, a pregnant rhesus monkey cost $125. Now the same monkey costs $450.

"We're trying to decide whether to keep on using monkeys in research," he said.

Researchers say the reasons for the monkey shortage are that India and some South American countries have stopped exporting monkeys for fear of depleting their own natural supplies.

But researchers may have found the solution. M.D. Anderson and the UT Health Science Center are operating a primate breeding farm near Austin, and some of the domestic monkeys are beginning to arrive in Houston Laboratories.

At The University of Texas Dental School here, researchers use monkeys to study plaque, cavities and gum diseases. They have started their own breeding colony of marmosets, a small South American monkey.

The marmosets, which weigh as little as a half pound, cost $4.50 each 10 years ago, said Dr. Alfred Broome, director of the vivarium of the dental school. Now they cost $180 apiece, he said.

In the sensory science center at the UT Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences, some 25 rhesus monkeys are used each year in the study of eye development.

Dr. Jack Crawford of the school said a newborn rhesus cost $150 last year. This year they cost between $400 and $700 apiece.

"It's a good idea for India and South America to take stock of their own supplies but it's handicapping us," Jardine said.

The standard elementary school textbooks for nearly a century were written by Prof. William Holmes McGuffey, his first and second readers coming out in 1836.

Man Reportedly Stabs Student

Montgomery I. Cotter, 25, of 2205 Seaboard St., reportedly was stabbed twice today in the left shoulder by an assailant he allegedly gave a ride to the Jones Hotel, 105 N. Lee St. and then supposedly to a friend of the assailant's house.

Cotter reportedly made several turns ending up on Texas Street, where the assailant told him to stop and get out of the car that he was going to take the automobile, police said.

After he refused, the assailant stabbed the UTPB student and fled the scene, leaving Cottier and his car in the parking lot north of the police station where he was found by officer Eddy Houchins at 5:22 today, police said.

Cotter was treated and released at a Midland hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

Midland Man Gets Beating

A Midland man was beaten in the parking lot of Superior Iron Works, 2210 Garden City Hwy., police said today.

Steve Hilliard told police a man allegedly assaulted him by putting a flaming cigarette lighter in his eye, throwing him to the ground and hitting his head with a rock, police said.

Hilliard was treated for cuts and bruises at a Midland hospital and released, a spokesman said.

Bluegrass Singer, Guitarist Dies

REIDSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Charlie Monroe, a guitarist and singer who helped pioneer the bluegrass style and performed for nearly a half century, died Saturday at the age of 72. He had been suffering from cancer. With his brother Bill, he began recording in 1927 as a member of the Bluegrass Boys. He split with his brother in 1938. His final concert was last weekend in Kentucky.

Oklahoma State Shows Surprising Power In 61-7 Win

By The Associated Press

The grumbling is starting over that powerhouse college team from Oklahoma. No, not the Oklahoma Sooners; would you believe the Oklahoma State Cowboys?

The Cowpokes, nee Oklahoma Aggies, have played second-fiddle to the University of Oklahoma on the football field for so long—they trail the intrastate series 53-10-6—that it's headline-making news when they steal the spotlight from the mighty Sooners . . . as they did over the weekend.

While No. 1-ranked Oklahoma was having its hands full in a hard-earned 20-17 triumph over Miami of Florida, 17th-ranked Oklahoma State also ran its record to 3-0 by ripping North Texas State 61-7.

Hayden Fry, like most coaches, wasn't used to being crushed by the Cowboys.

"I'd rather not talk about it," he said . . . before talking about it.

"They're a great football team," a bitter Fry continued. "I've been coaching for 25 years and have never seen anything like that. I really don't want to comment on it. They rubbed it in. I guess that's okay if that's what you want to do.

"Hell, how could anyone have mistaken it out there? Like I say, I would rather not talk about it."

What especially galled Fry was OSU's running off several plays in the closing seconds without taking time to huddle after throwing two sideline passes to stop the clock. Freshman Steve Stephens eventually scored on a one-yard plunge.

Fry was so upset he said he "considered not going out to shake hands" with OSU's Jim Stanley, who explained that his second team "wanted to work on the two-minute offense at the end."

"I told him Oklahoma State had a great football team," Fry related. "I don't know what he said to me. It doesn't really matter. It's their prerogative to . . . like I said, I really don't want to talk about it."

Meanwhile, second-ranked Ohio State posed a serious threat to Oklahoma's lead in this week's Associated Press ratings with a 32-7 victory over North Carolina as Archie Griffin rushed for 157 yards—his 24th consecutive regular-season 100-yard game—and broke Rex Kern's school total offense record while fullback Pete Johnson scored all five touchdowns on short runs.

Punt returns of 47 and 68 yards by Danny Reece set up two touchdowns and helped third-ranked Southern California defeat Purdue 19-6. Fourth-ranked Nebraska swamped Texas Christian 56-14 as Terry Luck flipped three short touchdown passes.

Missouri, ranked fifth, rallied to beat Wisconsin 27-21 on a 66-yard pass play from Steve Pisarkiewicz to Henry Marshall, who earlier caught an 11-yard scoring toss from tailback Tony Galbreath. Earl Campbell rushed for 198 yards and two touchdowns and Marty Akins added 114 yards to lead No. 6 Texas over Texas Tech 42-18 in the Southwest Conference opener.

Dan Devine, Notre Dame's new coach, made his debut in South Bend and gave the home folks a hint that he might be almost as brilliant as Rockne, Leahy and Parseghian. With the seventh-ranked Fighting Irish trailing Northwestern 7-0, Devine brought Joe Montana off the bench and the sophomore quarterback scored one touchdown and passed for another in rallying the Irish to a 31-7 triumph.

Bubba Bean gained 158 yards on just 12 carries and scored twice as eighth-ranked Texas A&M walloped Illinois 43-13.

UCLA, No. 10, blew a 13-3 halftime lead and settled for a 20-20 deadlock with winless Air Force.

Endangered Animals Suffer From Profit-Making Scheme

By GEORGE ALEXANDER
The Los Angeles Times

It is the prospect of making large profits, say the experts, that is the motor of this sorry business — where else can one realize a return of $8 on an initial investment of 25 cents, or $3,000 to $5,000 for little more than a tankful or two of gasoline?

This sorry business is the illegal trafficking in rare and endangered animal species, a black market that is built largely around certain types of snakes and birds, but that includes amphibians and mammals as well.

Some frog species, for example, that cost the black marketeer a quarter each eventually command a retail price of about $8. Some Mexican parrots sell for as little as $20 in Guadalajara but, if smuggled into the U.S. can be resold for $200 or more.

And a few falcon species, native to the Southwestern deserts, can be captured sometimes for not much more than the gasoline a poacher burns up driving to and from Arizona, a favorite poaching area of many Californians. Once trained, the falcons command a black market price of from $3,000 to $5,000 each; rumor has it that one particularly fine bird pulled down $8,000.

This illegal traffic, carried out with both live and dead animals, exists and even thrives because of several factors.

—Thers is a distinct population of collectors who value more highly their own possession of a certain kind of snake or falcon than they do the survival of that species in the wild. These are, for the most part, private individuals. But included in this group are small zoos and museums and, occasionally, a large public zoo that is willing to wink at state and federal laws for the opportunity to obtain an especially prized animal.

—There are gaps, inconsistencies and even unwitting self-defeating aspects in legislation and wildlife regulations meant to protect these creatures.

—State and federal agencies responsible for the protection on wildlife are too understaffed and too overworked to meet every challenge posed by this illegal traffic. But even when an agent is successful in apprehending a poacher or smuggler and brings the violator to court, the outcome quite often is merely dismissal or a wrist-slapping fine of $50 or $250 and a suspended jail term.

Ironically, attempts to protect a rare or endangered species by placing it in that category often produces precisely the opposite effect. Enrollment on an "endangered" or "threatened" list, far from automatically bestowing upon some harassed species badly needed breathing room, quite frequently results in even greater harassment for that animal

The reason? The more prohibited an animal is, the more desirable it becomes to a collector. The more desirable, the higher its price. And the higher the price, the more enticing it becomes for someone to go out and catch one for sale, prohibitions notwithstanding.

Consider the case of Crotalus pricei (pronounced price-eye), a small, secretive and timid rattlesnake found in northern Mexico and in the Chiricahua Mountains of southern Arizona.

Several years ago, the Arizona Game and Fish Department placed the pricei on a special permit list. This meant that persons who wanted the snake first had to obtain a permit from the Game and Fish authority before they could go out into the Chiricahuas and find one. Legitimate researchers had no difficulty obtaining a permit, but hobbyist and private collectors were turned down.

As a consequence, the price suddenly jumped from $15 or $25 on price lists circulated among snake collectors to $100 to $150 each. And at that higher price, the snake suddenly became a hot item.

"I've seen an enormous increase in the collection of this snake in the Chiricahuas," said Dr. Findlay E. Russell, a University of Southern California professor of neurology, physiology and biology and a specialist in toxins.

Russell, whose work involves both venomous snakes and insects, has a ranch and research facility in Arizona, as well as a laboratory at the County-University of Southern California Medical Center in Los Angeles.

He said that an increasing number of amateur collectors have tried to sell him pricei both in Arizona and here.

"They will tell me that they know they can get $100 or $150 for each snake if they ship them off to Colorado of Florida," Russell said, "but that they don't want to go to all that trouble. So they'll offer tham to me at the bargain price of $60 or $75 apiece."

The pricei is, unfortunately, just one of several snakes caught in the coils of the pet black market today, for just as there are stamp collectors who specialize in certain kinds of stamps (countries, topics, for example), so too are there reptile enthusiasts who are interested only in certain kinds of animals.

And so there are enthusiasts whose collections are based entirely on western (or eastern) rattlesnakes, or on African (or South American) vipers, or boas and pythons, or tricolored snakes (like the coral and the mountain king), or lizards, or horned toads.

A precious few of these snake fanciers honor the rare and-or endangered label attached to certain reptile species, the experts say, but most are in violation of either federal of state laws and regulations concerning import, export or possession.

"An awful lot of these private collectors want to have one of these snakes," said Dr. John Wright, curator of reptiles at the Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History, "just so they can say to a visitor: 'Hey, come on down to the basement and see what I've got down there. You're really not supposed to keep these snakes, but I managed to get one.' It's an ego trip for them."

If this sort of attitude angers herpetologists, as zoologists specializing in reptiles and amphibians are known, it does no less to ornithologists, or bird specialists.

Falcons and parrots appear to be the major animals in the illicit bird business wuth buntings — a brilliantly colored migratory bird—also a heavily traded species.

"I would say there are two kinds of falconers," said Lt. Gregory Laret, a patrol officer with the California Department of Fish and Game. "One kind actually hunts with the birds, the second merely keeps the birds caged; as a status symbol."

Dr. Kenneth E. Stager, curator of ornithology at the Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History, would ban falconry outright.

"It's a dillettante sport," he said. "At least it is today. It was okay a long time ago, when there were a lot of falcons and not a lot of men. But now the situation is just completely reversed."

Many hawk species are subjected to heavy pressures by private collectors. The story of the Harris Hawk, for example, typifies the sort of gaps that exist between the wildlife regulations of adjacent states, gaps into which the black marketeers move with stealth and cunning.

The Harris Hawk is a Central and South American raptor (bird of prey) whose northern range carries it into the southwestern United States. It was found in California before the heavy agricultural development of the Imperial Valley destroyed the wooded habitat along the Colorado River preferred by the bird. Now, it is found only very rarely in California.

In Arizona, for all intents and purposes, a person may neither capture nor keep a Harris Hawk. (Technically, it is possible but, such as in the case of the pricei rattler, the individual must first obtain a Game and Fish special permit and the agency is handing the permits out with anything but a free hand.)

In California, wildlife regulations deal with the possession of a Harris Hawk, but not its capture. There, a person may keep a hawk only if he holds a falconer's license and, in applying for the license, the applicant must state how he came by the bird.

Invariably, the California applicant declares that he caught the bird somewhere in the vicinity of the Imperial Valley, well within the boundaries of the state. (California can confiscate legally any endangered animal or animal product acquired out of state for which the collector does not have a legal permit.)

The declaration of in-state capture is at least plausible for the Harris Hawk and so is legally acceptable, according to experts, but it is invariably a lie.

There are no quick or easy solutions to the problems posed by the black market in rare and endangered species. Better enforcement of wildlife laws, and more of it, is one obvious answer, but in today's tight-budget times, not a very probable one.

"The most reasonable and realistic solution," Wright of the county museum said, "is perhaps not to protect the endangered animal, but rather to protect the habitat where these species live. Set up their primary habitat as game refuges and post them as such. If you protect the habitat, you may protect the animals."

Still, as Wright conceded, habitat protection will also become a matter of enforcement. In the end, perhaps, the most effective protection for these rare and endangered species will have to be the realization on the part of private collectors and zoos, both small and large, that survival in the wild is far more important than any one collection.

Underqualified Executives Costly To U.S. Industry

By EDWARD NEILAN
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — "The underqualified executive" and the "obstinate manager" probably cost U.S. industry more today than does obsolete equipment.

Yet, at a time when American business is striving to cut costs and increase productivity in the face of lingering recession, many firms ignore the cost drag of highly paid executives who belong elsewhere.

A recent book, "The Peter Principle," spelled out this phenomenon of advancement of unqualified executives by explaining the "pyramid principle." This theory advances managers primarily on the basis of seniority, nepotistic considerations and on luck.

Managers promoted in this way often think they were given a promotion because they are so brilliant. That is the beginning of the obstinate manager syndrome.

This breed is highly opinionated and believes he can do no wrong. He quickly rejects out of hand most goals, plans, policies that are not his own.

Management consultant Jason Lembeck wrote recently that "staffers most likely to encounter obstinate managers" are company planners. But the planner often gets nowhere against the stone wall of status quo thrown up by Mr. Obstinate.

The unqualified executive is found more often in the large corporation. He may also be an obstinate manager but chances are he is even more costly to the corporation.

Cushing and Cushing, a Los Angeles consulting firm which works with banks and institutional lenders to appraise the effectiveness of corporate managements, estimates that more than 15 per cent of executives currently at work in industry are unqualified for their jobs.

Compared to this percentage of executive deadwood, the latest McGraw-Hill survey of capital equipment obsolescence shows that management regards only about 11 per cent of its plant and equipment to be unproductive.

When the Cushing estimate is projected to the Census Bureau's salary totals for the nearly nine million executives in the United States, the annual cost of this obsolete managerial talent comes to a whopping $16 billion. Bonuses, pensions and other fringe benefits normally paid to executives push this total even higher.

Why is it that so many executives are recruited for jobs they cannot perform?

It's classic "Peter Principle," says Lembeck, whereby an executive rises to his level of incompetence, usually promoting him out of the post in which he was most competent.

Bryant Cushing, head of the West Coast consulting firm, says one reason is that top management has a tendency to assume that executives who have held top jobs in prestigious companies are highly competent—just because they work for a highly regarded firm.

U.S. companies seem to be guilty of this thinking more than foreign counterparts. French companies are quite "street wise" about such things and generally look with cynicism at people in high places.

One example familiar to the corporate executive search game is the case of the California firm which lured a man from a much larger eastern firm to go to the West Coast as vice president of marketing. They thought they were buying expert marketing capability at $60,000 a copy. The West Coast firm found out that the eastern company's superior marketing record was posted in spite of, rather than because of, the executive they hired away.

'Frisco' Losing Ground As Jewel Of The West

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Editor, Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The nationwide attention given the recent police and firemen's strike that paralyzed this city has aroused questions around the nation.

Is San Francisco still "the jewel of the West," "the city that knows how" and the enchanting, friendly, clean wonder city of a few years back?

In oversimplification, the answer is no. It is not. And, judging by the nature of the situation, things will get worse long before they get better.

San Francisco, or 'Frisco as its critics like to tease it, is not too many years away—unless there is a dramatic reversal—from the status of Newark, Hartford, Cleveland and Baltimore. These cities have all the problems of the major metropolitan areas—and no solutions.

As the leader of the San Francisco police strike said when he proudly announced that his men were not working to protect the public, "I would say that the people are no longer safe in their homes or in the streets."

With or without a police strike, there is a lessening sense of safety in this once free, easy and safe haven for those who loved a good time. A sign of the times is the placard appearing in a jewelry store operated by Tom Cole. The sign reads: "Warning! This area patrolled by tarantula."

So, he hired a tarantula for his window display—at $10 a month vs. the $300 that a guard dog costs. The tarantula does cost just a bit more than $10 a month. It is entitled to one live mouse every six months.

So far Rosie, the tarantula, has done her job well —no new burglaries. This is quite a record when one considers that the robbery-burglary rate for July in San Francisco was up 24 per cent—even before the police strike.

So far, San Francisco has avoided the financial crisis that has beset New York. New York's troubles are a direct result of powerful labor unions that exact tremendous benefits from a city that is up to its ears in taxes already.

However, the problem is creeping up on this Baghdad by the Bay, too, and the $19,500-a-year street cleaners and highly paid cops are leading the way.

Here is what Dianne Feinstein, president of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, had to say about her city's future:

"San Francisco, like other cities, has come to the fiscal crossroads. Unlike New York, we are going to say 'No' to more city spending. Unless we do, residents of this city will not be able to pay their taxes and the city will not be able to pay its bills."

Supervisor Feinstein may be whistling in the dark. Besides being the world's drinkingest city, San Francisco also is one of the most unionized. The cops, along with Mayor Joseph Alioto, showed that they have little regard for the financial future of the city in the most recent mess.

Meanwhile, while fun—obscene shows and plenty of pornography—is still here in some degree, the city has gone downhill.

There were less than 900 at the Giants' opening baseball game (over 50,000 in Los Angeles). The muggings of well-dressed San Francisco matrons have caused these ladies to forego once delightful downtown shopping trips.

It's sad to see a once great city go downhill. But, that is what's happening here. Next stop Passaic, Bridgeport, Newark or some other depressed area.

'Dream Home' Out Of Picture

By JAMES M. WOODARD
Copley News Service

That handsome new home you "just about" purchased in 1970 for $24,000 is now selling for $36,700. It was very likely within reach of your financial capability five years ago, but no more.

That's the sad song heard in an increasing number of American households in 1975. Most families simply cannot afford anything that remotely resembles their "dream home." The big question is what can be done to bring homeownership to a reachable point for the average family.

Things are happening to attain that goal. For exampls, developments of small "basic" homes with smaller price tags are now on many drawing boards across the country.

The American consumer is now ready for a comfortable but small home without "frills" and unnecessary luxuries, it has been determined by research analysts.

New building materials are now being researched and tested. If successful and widely used, some newly developed products can substantially reduce construction costs.

A new lumber product called Com-Ply is a case in point. This product is 80 per cent particle-board core between double layers of solid wood veneer. It was recently developed in a cooperative project of the U.S. Forest Service, the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Housing and Urban Development and lumber manufacturers. The primary intent of the project is to provide more efficient use of forest resources.

The new product is priced competitively with stud lumber prices.

Researchers feel that when new nonpetroleum resins are developed as effective "bindrs" in the product, prices will be considerably lower. Other low-cost building products are being researched.

.Q Is the construction industry entering a "boom" era?

A. No indication of a boom yet. Construction activity generally has been bobbing up and down during 1975—with a current spurt upward.

Construction activity is also very localized. Some communities are experiencing no activity at all. Others are doing record business. In North Platte, Neb., for example, new construction during the first six months of 1975 exceeded all of 1974, the third-best construction year on record in North Platte.

.Q Are Japanese becoming increasingly active in investing in U.S. real estate?

A. Not at this time. In a letter received by this writer from the publisher of the widely read Weekly Journal of Real Estate in Tokyo, he said this: "Owing to the depression in Japan, most Japanese real estate firms are struggling to survive and are not interested in investment opportunities in the states."

Although personal replies are impossible, questions from readers are invited. Write: J.M. Woodard, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

New York City's Problems Small Compared To Some

By EDWARD NEILAN
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The problems of New York City today give other American cities a preview of what some of their problems and challenges might be tomorrow.

But for all the frustrations over finances, services and quality of life in the "Big Apple," New Yorkers have little to complain about in comparison with residents of cities like Calcutta, India, or Jakarta, Indonesia.

These and other cities are beset with enormous problems that surpass New York's right now; and their chances for marked improvement are very slim.

New York, it has to be supposed, at least has a fighting chance to restore and even surpass the essence and image of its past glamor and greatness.

After concentrating on problems of rural areas for so many years, world economists have lately shifted their focus to the future of cities, where they see some startling statistical projections: by the end of this century, two billion people will be living in the cities of the developing world, compared with 700 million now.

Three out of every four Latin Americans will live in a city by the year 2000 and one out of every three Africans and Asians will live in cities. Population growth over-all in the developing world is already running at about 2.5 per cent annually; but in the cities the rate is more nearly 5 per cent.

No less than 400 million people have been absorbed into the world's cities—through birth and migration—in a single generation. As World Bank President Robert McNamara notes, this swelling of metropolitan population is "something wholly without parallel."

The penalties of the failure to provide improvements in city living around the world are obvious. Malnutrition and lack of education become more prevalent. Violence, civil upheaval and rejection of social disciplines are more common in cities.

"If cities do not begin to deal more constructively with poverty," McNamara said, "poverty may well begin to deal more destructively with cities."

The worldwide recession has been felt in the developed world but its impact has been devastating in the developing nations.

The gap between rich and poor is widening. For a billion people, per capita incomes in constant prices will grow only from $105 in 1970 to $108 in 1980. Meanwhile, in the developed world, per capita incomes will increase from $3,000 to $4,000. Over 10 years that is an increase of $3 versus a $900 increase—which spells international social and political dynamite.

"Productivity in the urban sector"—bureaucratic language for making cities work and produce more efficiently—will be a major objective of the World Bank's five-year program of fiscal years 1976 through 1980.

Perhaps learning from some of New York's "big spender" policies of the past, large capital-intensive enterprises will be given less priority in the plan than realistic housing policies and better access to public utilities, transport, education and health services.

Recycled Monkeys?

HOUSTON (AP) — Medical researchers here say inflation has hit the monkey business, forcing the scientists to use the monkeys for more than one laboratory study.

"We're trying to recycle monkeys so we can reuse them in experiments,"says Dr. John Jardine, head of the experimental animal department at M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute.

The researchers are careful that the effects of one experiment do not prejudice the results of other experiments the animals are used in, Jardine said.

The institute researchers have imported rhesus monkeys from India for experiments in radiation treatment of cancer and growth of cancerous tumors. Jardine estimates M.D. Anderson uses about 100 research monkeys a year.

He said the rhesus is more representative of man than any other monkey.

Two years ago, Jardine said, a pregnant rhesus monkey cost $125. Now the same monkey costs $450.

"We're trying to decide whether to keep on using monkeys in research," he said.

Researchers say the reasons for the monkey shortage are that India and some South American countries have stopped exporting monkeys for fear of depleting their own natural supplies.

This handicaps medical researchers who say they have always imported monkeys because it was cheaper than producing their own.

But researchers may have found the solution. M.D. Anderson and the UT Health Science Center are operating a primate breeding farm near Austin, and some of the domestic monkeys are beginning to arrive in Houston Laboratories.

At The University of Texas Dental School here, researchers use monkeys to study plaque, cavities and gum diseases. They have started their own breeding colony of marmosets, a small South American monkey.

The marmosets, which weigh as little as a half pound, cost $4.50 each 10 years ago, said Dr. Alfred Broome, director of the vivarium of the dental school. Now they cost $180 apiece, he said.

In the sensory science center at the UT Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences, some 25 rhesus monkeys are used each year in the study of eye development.

Dr. Jack Crawford of the school said a newborn rhesus cost $150 last year. This year they cost between $400 and $700 apiece.

"It's a good idea for India and South America to take stock of their own supplies but it's handicapping us," Jardine said.
