Drought takes toll on Texas fruit, vegetables as price increases hit consumers

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Lake water levels are not the only victim of the ongoing drought; the repercussions of the drought have also found their way into grocery stores.

According to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service food marketing specialists, Texas grown vegetables will be a little on the slim side this season because of the drought.

According to Dr. Richard Edwards, consumers should see an abundance of fresh fruits and vegetables this month, but this may not be the case for the entire season.

Peach prices usually drop this time of year, but what consumers spend this month will depend on the produce coming from Georgia and South Carolina. Texas peaches are in short supply this year, but if supplies from other states are good, prices should be about 10 cents higher than previous sales at 69 cents to 79 cents a pound.

Edwards said, "We really will not know what to expect until the effect of the drought has been fully assessed. Watermelons and blueberries are also arriving in supermarkets and because of the drought, sales will be a little spotty."

During June and July, melons usually cost around 19 cents per pound. Watermelons will probably be at least 10 cents higher when on special. Prices may range from $3.99 for a small melon to $5.99 for a large one.

Strawberry prices will be quoted per pound rather than per pint and will be around $1.29 to $1.49 per pound when on sale. A half pint of red raspberries will be about the same price as a pound of strawberries when on special.

In the fresh produce section, consumers will still see bell peppers, zucchini squash, yellow squash, cucumbers, green beans, sweet corn and tomatoes, but prices probably won't be as low as this time last year.

"The best buy in June will be on beef. Consumers will see a continuation of the lower prices which began in April," he said.

Edwards added consumers should look for specials on sirloin and round steaks. Round and sirloin steaks will cost between $1.49 and $1.59 per pound on sale; rib steaks will be priced around $2.99 per pound; and t-bone steak around $3.50 per pound.

Fresh brisket will be available at 99 cents per pound and briskets with a closer trim will sell for around 50 cents per pound higher.

Beef prices, according to Edwards, have kept the cost of pork in check. Pork prices have been pretty good and will remain that way.

Supreme Court agrees to hear appeals from sheriffs on Brady law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether Congress, through the Brady gun law, can require local law enforcement officials to check the backgrounds of prospective gun buyers.

The court said it will hear the appeals of sheriffs in Montana and Arizona who say the federal law unconstitutionally requires state officials to provide enforcement.

A federal appeals court upheld the law in the Montana and Arizona cases. But in March, another appeals court ruled that the law violates state sovereignty.

In other action, the court:
•Agreed to decide whether states may confine "sexually violent predators" who have served their prison sentences but who suffer from a "mental abnormality or personality disorder" that make them dangerous.

•Ordered a federal appeals court to restudy a Cincinnati charter amendment that denies discrimination protection to homosexuals. The ruling was in light of the high court's decision last month striking down a similar Colorado measure, giving gay-rights advocates a major victory.

•Said women raped and tortured in the former Yugoslavia could sue Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic in the United States for crimes against humanity.

•Opened the way for possible reinstatement of a provision of Utah law that makes it harder to get abortions if the fetus could survive outside the womb. The justices set aside a lower court ruling that had invalidated the entire law as an undue burden on women's privacy.

The Brady law, which took effect in March 1994, requires a five-day waiting period before the sale of a handgun.

During that time, local authorities must make a "reasonable effort" to find out if the buyer has a felony record, a history of mental illness or illegal drug use, or some other problem that would make the sale illegal.

The federal government is required to create by late 1998 a national system for instantly checking criminal background.

The Brady law was passed after bitter congressional battles and was strongly opposed by the National Rifle Association. It was named after former presidential Press Secretary James Brady, seriously wounded in the 1981 attempted assassination of President Reagan.

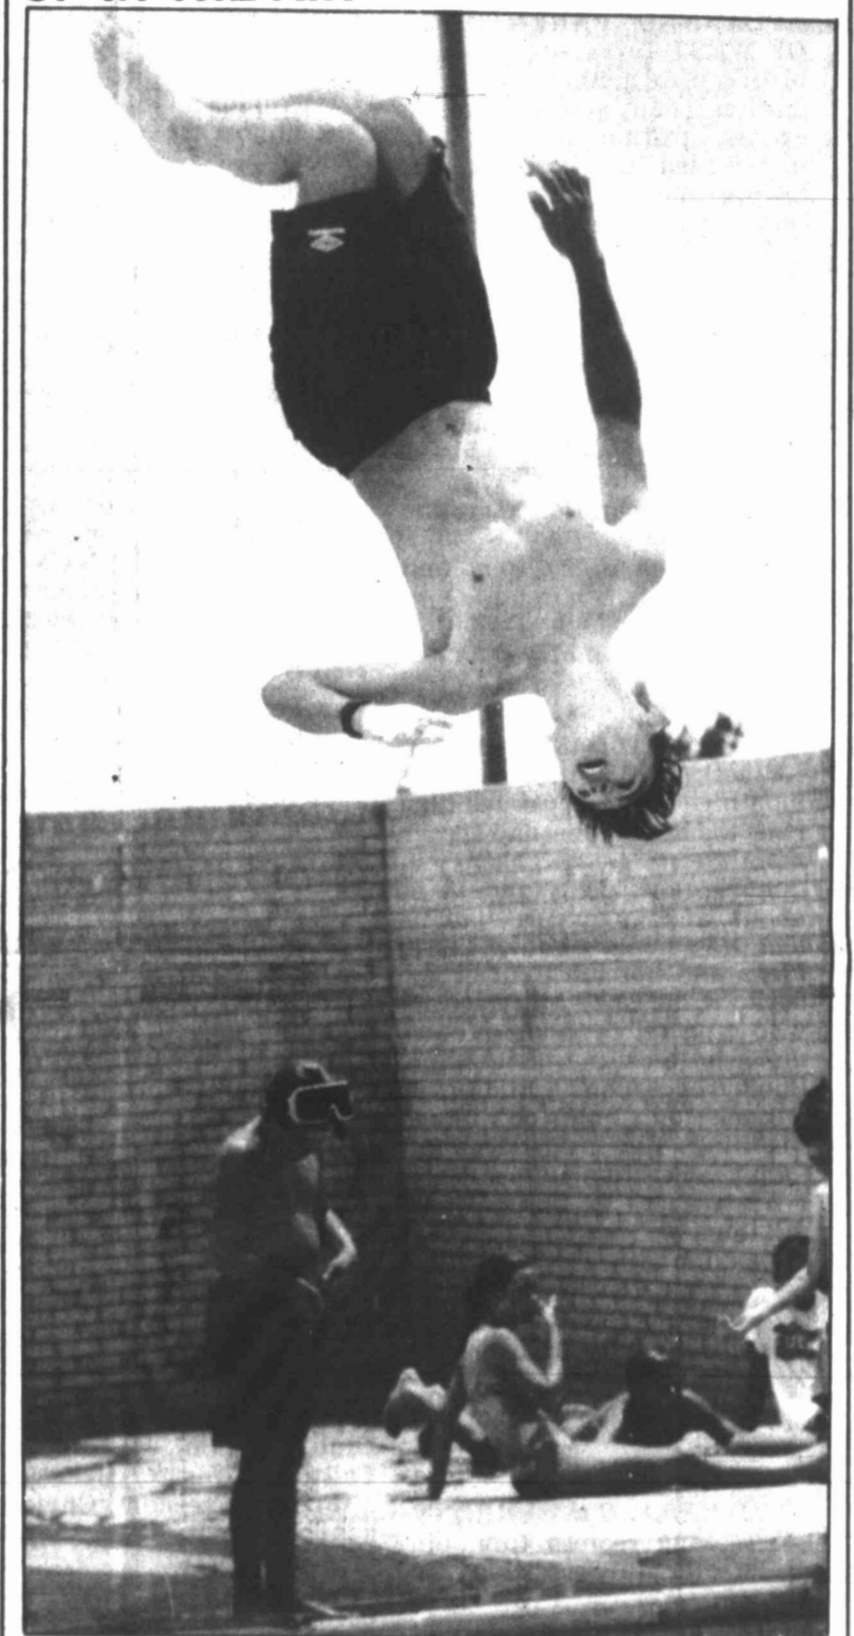

Sheriff Jay Printz of Ravalli County, Mont., and Sheriff Richard Mack of Graham County, Ariz., challenged the law in federal court.

Printz said his department is understaffed and that conducting the background checks will force him to take deputies off patrol and investigation duties. Mack said the gun law shifts its primary enforcement burden onto local officials.

Federal judges in Montana and Arizona ruled that the federal government could not require local officials to conduct the background checks.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed those rulings last September, saying the requirement was a minor burden similar to "the federally imposed duties of state officers to report missing children or traffic fatalities."

City, Cornell feel city is now out of prison business

By SARA SOLIS
Staff Writer

As far as the city of Big Spring and Cornell Corrections, Inc. are concerned, the city's interests in the Big Spring Correctional Centers are now relinquished.

City Manager Gary Fuqua said a second reading of the contract between the city, Mid-Tex Detentions, Inc., Ed Davenport and Cornell was unanimously approved by the city council Friday during a special meeting. The first reading of the contract was approved last Tuesday.

The council basically agreed to a restructuring of the prison management agreement for a term of approximately 35 years. The contract is contingent upon its acceptance by the Federal Aviation Administration and the Federal Bureau of Prisons (BOP), whose inmates the facilities house.

"We're flying to Austin tomorrow (Tuesday) to meet with TxDOT Aviation and the FAA," Fuqua said. A copy of the restructuring agreement has been sent to BOP officials in Washington, D.C. and they will be reviewing the information and returning a decision shortly.

Fuqua, along with Eddie Cole, Max Green, Jim Purcell and Chuck Williams, worked over the last seven weeks to come to an acceptable agreement. The five-member committee was appointed by the city council.

The contract includes a 70-cent per man-day payment to the city's general fund subject to the Inter-Governmental Agreement; a $6,000 secondary sub-lease payment per unit a month and a lease of the Interstate unit for a yearly income to the city of $216,000; and city airport rental revenues totaling $44,620 annually.

Fuqua said he was relieved with the council's acceptance of the contract.

"I believe it worked out to be a good deal for all the parties involved," he said.

According to Fuqua, pending FAA and BOP acceptance, Cornell is considering expanding in the Big Spring area by adding an additional prison facility with a 500-bed capacity.

Cornell Corrections Chief Financial Officer Steve Logan said expanding in the Big Spring area is definitely one of the corporation's future goals. "That's (expansion) always been our desire," he added.

Under the restructuring contract, Mid-Tex Detentions personnel as well as the city's employees will come under the employment of Cornell.

Mid-Tex, as a legal entity, will remain, but it will no longer operate. "We're buying all the assets and the operating contracts," Logan said.

He said he's very optimistic about the contract's acceptance by the FAA and the BOP.

Cornell Corrections, doing business since 1977, is the oldest, private, for-profit prison operator in the United States and currently operates 22 facilities nationwide, Logan said.

Employees of Mid-Tex Detentions will transfer over to Cornell Corp. at the same rate of pay. "There shouldn't be any significant affect to them (the employees)," Bruce Gilmore, chief financial officer of Mid-Tex Detentions, said.

A $600,000 fund will be set aside from the sales specifically for the employees.

At this time, none of the BSCC employees are vested with the city's retirement plan. "We're looking at trying to come up with something to more or less compensate them (the employees) for that loss," Gilmore said.

Mid-Tex employees can expect some kind of signing bonus, the details of which have not been released, for transferring their employment to Cornell. "I'll be surprised if anybody's unhappy with it," he said.

Probe sought into potential predatory beef pricing in Texas

HERALD Staff Report

The Independent Cattlemen's Association of Texas has joined State Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale to call on Attorney General Dan Morales to conduct an investigation into potential predatory pricing in the Texas beef industry.

Kubiak, who is a cattle producer, said that while cattle prices have dropped dramatically since 1993, retail beef prices have seen much smaller decreases.

In 1993, cattle prices averaged $80.60 per hundred pounds weight (cwt) but have dropped to $63/cwt in 1996, a decrease of more than 21 percent. Calf prices went down from $103.36/cwt in 1993, to $64.20/cwt in 1996, a decrease of almost 38 percent. For the same period retail beef prices went from an average of $2.72 in 1993, to $2.56 in 1996, a decrease of just under 5 percent.

Kubiak said, "While there

"If anyone should benefit from the current market situation, it should be the beef consumer. But the consumer isn't seeing lower prices at the grocery store and ranchers are being wiped out..."

have been a number of explanations for these lower cattle prices, such as increased meat supplies and higher feed costs at feed lots, there is no explanation as to why these savings are not being passed on to consumers more directly." ICA President Jim Selman said, "If anyone should benefit from the current market situation, it should be the beef consumer. But the consumer isn't seeing lower prices at the grocery store and ranchers are being wiped out. The ICA perceives that someone in the industry is manipulating the retail beef market - we believe the meat packers are that someone."

Selman said three major meat packing companies, I.B.P., Excell and Montford, buy 81 percent of the beef in the U.S.

"If the meat packers reflected their costs, prices would drop for consumers, which in turn would result in more beef sales and higher prices paid to ranchers for their product."

Greenville rallies through ashes of fire; Tells KKK and Panthers to hit the road

GREENVILLE (AP) — A week after two black churches were destroyed by arson, thousands of residents cheered Gov. George Bush and a platform of preachers who condemned the attacks and promised the East Texas town would rebuild — not become a racial battleground.

Bush told the interracial, interdenominational crowd Sunday the perpetrators were cowards and the crime-fighting Texas Rangers were helping to catch them.

"It was not enough for the arsonists, whoever they may be, to have set fires in a community — in a region — that's desperately dry," Bush said. "They chose to work their anonymous evil in one place we've always counted on to help us rise above evil: the house of God."

"We may not know at this time who struck the matches, but I know this," he said. "We will find the people and they will be brought to justice."

But less than two hours after the rally, which Mayor Sue Ann Harting had described as a "time of healing," two vacant houses burned — the second identified as arson-caused and the first termed suspicious.

Another vacant house burned during the early morning hours, fire officials said.

The houses, located about a mile north of the two churches, were among a total of 11 buildings that have burned since a week ago Sunday.

Fire Chief Robert Wood called the second blaze Sunday, at a 1-story house, "obvious arson." No suspects in the Greenville fires were in custody today, authorities said, but they planned a morning news conference.

After the 1-hour rally Sunday night, the governor told reporters that the Rangers had joined the investigation of the church fires but had no evidence yet to link them with more than 30 Southern blazes in the past 18 months.

"These fires didn't bring Greenville together, God alone brought Greenville together," said the Rev. Harold Jones of the New Jerusalem Missionary Baptist Church. "All the fires have done is bring us closer together."

On a flower-lined stage that faced packed stadium bleachers, speakers told Greenville residents not to tolerate bigotry or be scared away from rebuilding.

"We have a church to build. Somebody said, 'Come down and let us deal with psychological issues,' but I can't come down off of the wall. Why? Because we got a wall to build," the Rev. Houston McClendon of Bethlehem Baptist Church said.

"I want the world to know, I want the Ku Klux Klan to know, I want the Black Panthers to know that I'm not comin' off of the wall!" McClendon shouted.

"We might be a small town outside of Dallas, but we're not coming off the wall," he said.

In advance of a rally by the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan in Greenville Friday, the KKK's regional director, Michael Lowe, planned to be at the Hunt County Courthouse this morning.

About 30 members of the militant New Black Panther party and other groups had driven to Greenville Tuesday to denounce the arson and the racism that they said fueled the flames.

The Rev. Anthony Evans, whose Oak Cliff Bible Fellowship in Dallas contributed $3,000 to the rebuilding effort, said that the burnings were symptoms of a deeper, foundational problem.

"The tragedy today, after more than 200 years of this country's history, is that we have not solved racism," he said.

Following the rally, Evans met with representatives of dozens of area churches to organize a united front to racism.

"No hatred group will come into Greenville and make it a racial battleground!" McClendon said.

The New Light House of Prayer, the first to burn last week, sustained $60,000 in damage in a fire that has been ruled arson by the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Three men are still considered suspects, said Police Chief Barry Paris.

The Church of the Living God, about a mile away, burned a few hours later in a fire also ruled arson by the ATF.

The burned out New Light House of Prayer earlier Sunday accepted an invitation to worship with another local black church. Its pastor took the pulpit to praise how the community has rallied to help.

"I had a preacher tell me, 'I would have had my gun!' And I said, 'Well, you would have been doing the wrong thing.' In Greenville, let's stand together. God will fight our battles," said the Rev. Chester Thomas, 77.

Another prisoner walks away from Tom Green County Jail

SAN ANGELO (AP) — For the second time in less than a month, a person in custody at the Tom Green County Jail walked away unnoticed.

The escape of Raymond Allen Teague is the latest in a series of woes to befall the San Angelo lockup, including a state order to reduce overcrowding and beef up supervision.

Teague, 29, apparently walked away from a group of a dozen inmates being escorted from the jail barracks to the kitchen in the main jail building.

Sheriff's department investigator Alvie Hester said the prisoners were being escorted from the barracks around 4 a.m. Sunday to begin kitchen duty. He did not know when Teague was reported missing, and he would not say whether Teague and the other inmates were handcuffed during the short walk from the barracks to the jail.

However, a jail employee who wanted to remain anonymous told the San Angelo Standard-Times that Teague walked away from the other inmates at 4 a.m. but wasn't discovered missing until a shift change at 8 a.m. None were handcuffed.

"It's common practice for them to be transported from the barracks to the jail without handcuffs," the employee said. Teague was still on the loose Sunday night.

Court documents showed that Teague was charged with burglary and was being held in lieu of $15,000 bond. Hester said Teague has relatives in San Angelo, but family members were unable to provide information about his whereabouts.

Capt. Odell Denton, the jail commander, did not immediately return telephone calls, and Sheriff Pete Skains declined to discuss the escape Sunday night.

Sunday's escape follows a May 25 incident, when a new prisoner slipped out of the jail's central booking facility unnoticed.

City police took the blame for that escape, saying that technically prisoner Robert Subia was still in police custody, even though he was within the jail's booking facility, which is sealed by a large steel door.

On Sept. 11, an inmate housed in the jail barracks escaped briefly after scaling a chain-link fence around the barracks. Roy Allen Ostergren was cornered and caught the same day with the help of an alert citizen.

The latest escape follows a letter earlier this month to Skains from Texas Commission on Jail Standards Executive Director Jack Crump that states the county is in violation of state regulations and has until July 31 to relieve overcrowding and hire more guards to supervise the inmates.

The jail has failed numerous state inspections during the past several years because of overcrowding and lack of supervision of inmates.

Friday, jail records indicated 290 inmates were housed in the jail and barracks. The facility has a capacity of 265 inmates.

Jury selection starts today in murder trial of 'Uncle Hilty,' accused of killing 12-year-old HUNTSVILLE — The high-profile capital murder trial of a former police officer accused of kidnapping and killing a longtime friend's 12-year-old son was scheduled to begin today with jury selection.

Hilton Crawford, 57, is charged in the slaying last September of McKay Everett. About 500 jury summonses were issued for the case, and potential jurors were told to begin showing up today at the Walker County Courthouse.

The process of picking a jury is expected to take about two weeks before testimony begins at the Criminal Justice Center at Sam Houston State University.

McKay's badly decomposed body was found in a swampy site in southern Louisiana Sept. 12, four days after the energetic seventh-grader was snatched from his family's estate-style home just north of Conroe.

Crawford was a longtime friend of the boy's parents, prominent builder Carl Everett and his wife, Paulette. McKay trusted Crawford and knew him as "Uncle Hilty."

Man arrested 10 years after deputy killed in execution-type shooting in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH — Nearly 10 years after Tarrant County Sheriff's Deputy Frank Howell was gunned down, a suspect stands to face justice.

Mexican authorities arrested Enrique "Ricky" Moreno Casas in Nuevo Laredo on June 7.

He will be tried in Mexico on the U.S. charges and could receive up to 50 years in prison, said Robert Foran, a Tarrant County prosecutor.

Casas was 19 when he left town shortly after Howell's execution-style slaying on Fort Worth's south side.

Because his billfold and identification were found near Howell's body, the reputed petty thief and small-time dope dealer has been the prime suspect in the Nov. 3, 1986, slaying.

Amarillo teen asks to drop sexual assault charges against flamboyant Stanley Marsh 3

AMARILLO — The teen-ager who accused Stanley Marsh 3 of sexually molesting him has asked that charges be dropped against the flamboyant Amarillo millionaire and creator of the Cadillac Ranch.

The teen, who had filed a civil lawsuit against Marsh last year, also agreed to drop that lawsuit after Marsh paid him a settlement, one of Marsh's attorneys told the Amarillo Globe-News.

Houston lawyer Dick DeGuerin, Marsh's lead attorney, would not discuss the terms of the settlement except to say it was "cheaper than paying the lawyers" to defend the lawsuit.

He said there is "no admission, by Stanley Marsh of any wrongdoing" in the settlement of the suit.

Marsh, 58, is a self-proclaimed "United States Professional Fun Champion." He is known to patch his suit with duct tape and is the mind behind the Cadillac Ranch, the Pop Art plot where 10 cars are partially buried, hoods down, like an automotive Stonehenge.

University of Texas mounting massive fund-raising drive — most ambitious in history

AUSTIN — The University of Texas at Austin is facing the most daunting financial challenge in its history, despite a $5.2 billion endowment, according to the Austin American-Statesman.

While the 10-digit balance seems lush, the endowment actually provides $74 million, just 9 percent of the UT budget. So, the university is launching the most ambitious fund-raising campaign in its history.

The campaign is tentatively scheduled to begin in the fall of 1997 with two years of quiet appeals to major donors, followed by a five-year public phase.

Larry Lollar, hired to mount the fund-raising effort, said the goal will be $500 million to $1 billion, with a more precise figure announced later.

"UT's not going to go away if I never raise another dime," Lollar said. "It is a solid institution. It's supported by the state and its endowment. But what we're facing is slippage."

UT officials log frequent flier miles in state aircraft, much like those at Texas A&M

BRYAN — University of Texas System regents and officials appear to have used UT aircraft for trips similar to those that landed Texas A&M officials in trouble, The Bryan-College Station Eagle reported.

In a copyright story in its Sunday editions, the newspaper reported that a review of flight logs for state aircraft used by UT shows that regents and UT officials:

- Used the planes for short flights to cities as near as Waco and San Antonio and to cities when commercial air service was available.
- Used the UT system planes to fly to UT football games, which UT officials said involved state business.
- Had their spouses accompany them on state aircraft to testify before a legislative committee.

Life in colonias improving, but much work remains to be done according to Morales

DALLAS — The task of cleaning up conditions in the hundreds of colonias remains unfinished — and will for many years — despite tough new legislation governing the often-squalid settlements.

A state law enacted last year has enabled officials to check the once-unbridled proliferation of the remote, substandard subdivisions that line Texas' border with Mexico.

"It is far from enough to stop the spread of misery," state Attorney General Dan Morales told The Dallas Morning News. "We must relieve and end that which currently exists."

Since launching a massive, unprecedented colonia relief program in 1989, the state has brought water and sewers to thousands of poor, primarily Hispanic residents.

Corporate sponsors for national parks?

Experience the wonders of the Grand Canyon, brought to you by Tidy Bowl Cleaner. Marvel at Mount Rushmore, the face of history sponsored by Clearasil.

Environmentalists worry that similar scenes of crass commercialization could proliferate if Congress passes a bill to permit individual corporations, for a contribution of $10 million each, to become "official sponsors" of the national park system.

Some of their concerns are valid — and can easily be addressed in the legislation without dismissing the idea of corporate sponsorship.

Everyone knows the park system is in desperate condition and that Congress can't appropriate all the money the parks need, especially to clear up the maintenance backlog.

Despite Congress' budget-cutting mood, the National Park Service did get an increase in its budget this year, to $1.8 billion, but the additional money is insufficient to make much of a dent in the $4 billion required for repairs, restorations and restarting canceled programs or services.

Eventually Congress will have to resolve the parks' crisis. A more systematic solution would entail raising entrance and concession fees and introducing competitive bidding.

As an interim measure, though, corporate sponsorship might bring an infusion of cash to help deal with the most pressing problems; it should not, though, be seen as a substitute for a long-term solution.

The bill already enumerates certain restrictions. Scenic views would not be blocked by billboards, for instance. In general, corporations would receive the right to use a National Parks Service logo on their products and in their advertising. Because the national parks are public lands and an important national treasure, the bill should take pains to keep advertising out of the parks.

Equally important is the money itself. How long does a $10 million sponsorship last? Can a corporation select a specific park to sponsor? How the money will be spent?

Will there be a priority list of improvements? Will the public have oversight or input into spending decisions? Who will ensure that the less prominent parks will also benefit? These questions will have to be asked and answered before corporate sponsorships of national parks can be enthusiastically endorsed.

Reader blames people and presidents for problems

TO THE EDITOR:

As Ms. (Robyn) Blumner says (Herald opinion page, June 12, 1996), the presidents of the United States of America have treated our greatest document and rights as if they were a carpet to walk upon. They alone are not to blame. Federal and state legislatures are to blame. County and local politicians are to blame. We the people are to blame, because we let it happen!

Conclusive proof of the fact is shown in recent times with the passage of the 1968 Gun Control Act, the Brady Bill, the Anti-Terrorism Bill, the document submitted to the United Nations by President Kennedy in September of 1961 to "disarm America," the Trading and the Enemy Act of 1917 and the Emergency and War Powers Act of 1917, the Back Act, and the many states who applied for statehood and were made states by an illegal and unlawful Enabling Act, rather than by the lawful Act of Admission.

Our founding fathers fought the "tyranny" of King George and the Tories (those in the colonies who supported King George). Most of them put up their entire fortunes and lives for freedom, becoming poor or dead, so that we could and would enjoy what we all take for granted today. Six percent of America's population in the 1770's fought in the Revolutionary War.

People today don't really care if their legislators or representatives trash the documents (the Constitution of the United States of America, ratified in 1791 and the Bill of Rights, otherwise known as the first 10 Amendments). When their rights and immunities are taken away, leaving them with only privileges which deny them their God-given rights and immunities, and they find themselves in a solid state of tyranny, only then will the people stand up and fight back for what they have lost. Too many people today are too happy to go home and sit in front of the boob tube, sip on a brew, eat junk food, watch trashy television shows and don't really give a crap about what goes on in the world surrounding them. The day is coming when they wish that they would have been more alert and in tune with what society and their representatives are doing.

In short, "we the people" have been asleep at the wheel too long. It is time to wake up and reclaim what has been greedily taken from us. "We the people" must support and defend our Constitution(s) with our lives if necessary so that we can leave a good legacy for our children, and our children's children.

The Constitution is the law that gives the government its limited powers. The Bill of Rights are limitations on what the government can do with "we the people."

One last point. The 14th Amendment gave the "freed" slaves privileges and immunities, because they had none. It made them seem equal to those who were free. As far as I am concerned, there are no longer any "slaves" in America. We are all equally free and the 14th Amendment should be nullified or rewritten to only apply to those seeking U.S. citizenship in the course of migrating or immigrating to America, but to not apply to those born here, who by right of birth, are already citizens of the states in which the live, and of the United States of America.

All minorities in America are Americans ... not citizens of dual citizenship, unless they lawfully have both citizenships from their respective countries.

'Just doing my job' is no defense for crime

By LEILA SADAT WEXLER
Scripps Howard News Service

Sometime next month the Indicting Chamber of the Court of Appeals of Bordeaux will render an historic decision. The three judges of the French court will decide whether Maurice Papon will stand trial for his participation in the arrest and deportation of 1,690 Jews from the camp of Merignac, in the Bordeaux area, to Drancy between 1942 and 1944. The charge: complicity in the commission of crimes against humanity.

Papon, a high-ranking civil servant in the Vichy government, has claimed, among other things, that he was just doing his job. Without more, that is no defense.

The judges will make their decision based on the 26 volumes of evidence upon which the indictment was based. They contain many Vichy government documents with Papon's signature on them.

The dossier demonstrates that 12 convoys (only 10 of which are the subject of legal action) left Merignac during this period for Drancy. Papon was secretary general of the Gironde Prefect at the time. Most of those deported to Drancy were ultimately sent to Auschwitz, where they faced certain death in Nazi gas chambers.

Papon's participation in the arrest and transfer of the Jews of Bordeaux was revealed in 1981 when Michael Sliutsky, a would-be deportee who escaped by flinging a flatiron at the police when they came to arrest him, brought a set of recently discovered documents to the French satirical newspaper, Le canard enchaîné. The newspaper printed a story pointing the finger at Papon's participation in the deportations.

Originally scornful of the claims, Papon passed off the story as political maneuvering. Subsequently, however, Papon took the accusations more seriously, particularly when, in 1983, charges of crimes against humanity were filed against him by victims of the deportations. Thirteen years later, a French court will finally determine whether there is sufficient evidence against Papon to warrant his trial.

Thus far, Papon's case resembles that of Paul Touvier, the Vichy militia man convicted last year of crimes against humanity for his part in the murder of seven Jews in a small suburb of Lyon. And there are similarities: both cases proceeded inordinately slowly through the courts; both men claim to have saved a certain number of Jews by their interventions (although Papon's claims in this regard are clearly more credible than Touvier's), and both suggest that the pressures on them, whether direct or indirect, from the German occupiers resulted in their taking actions that they might have regretted.

But here the parallel ends. For one thing, after the war (unlike Touvier) Papon's public image was completely rehabilitated.

Indeed, while Touvier went into hiding, Papon's career flourished. Called by de Gaulle to public service based on his resistance credentials (the bonafides of which are hotly contested), Papon rose through the civil service ranks. He became prefect of police for the city of Paris in 1958, a member of parliament in 1968 and budget minister in the government of Raymond Barre in 1978.

For another, Papon does not, unlike Touvier, appear to have been explicitly anti-semitic. Rather, the anti-semitism of Papon, if any, lies in his apparent indifference to the fate of those whose deportation orders he signed.

Jean-Marc Varaut, Papon's lawyer, has ably argued that Papon's signature on orders providing which Jews should be arrested or deported only served to make an official record of acts accomplished by others. But even a casual perusal of the administrative documents underlying the charges contradicts this hypothesis. Moreover, this is belied by the fact that, at other times, Papon's principal defense has been that he was only doing his job — part of which was to supervise the bureau of Jewish affairs, part of which was to attend to the everyday matters of administering the Gironde region under the occupation.

What the defense fails to understand, however, is that at least since the Nuremberg judgment and probably before, the claim that "I was just doing my job" cannot preclude an indictment for crimes against humanity based on one's acts. To hold otherwise would exculpate in advance every participant in inhumane activity so long as they could point to someone higher than themselves in the chain of command.

If Papon signed arrest and deportation orders, he is criminally liable. His attempts to ameliorate the conditions of the prisoners in the convoys leaving for Drancy, or to save certain "interesting" Jews (former war heroes, etc.), as well as his obedience to his superiors may mitigate his punishment, but cannot erase his crime.

There are lots of good legal arguments that Papon's case does not fit neatly into the definition of crimes against humanity articulated by the French Supreme Court in the Touvier and Barbie cases. But all those legal gymnastics in the world cannot obliterate the fact that Papon's signature on those arrest orders made him just as guilty as the policemen who carried them out.

In this world where nasty, brutal wars with ethnic cleansing and the like seem to pop up like mushrooms, the French court should send a clear message that it is no defense to indefensible acts to say that they were just "part of my job description" and order the Papon case to trial.

Yeltsin, opponent each seek support of third-place finisher

MOSCOW (AP) — Facing a crucial runoff election, Boris Yeltsin and his Communist opponent vied today for the support of a tough former general whose backing could decide who will be the next president of Russia.

Yeltsin met in the Kremlin with Alexander Lebed, who became the most sought-after man in Russian politics by finishing a strong third in Sunday's first round of voting. The two men discussed prospects for cooperation, said Sergei Medvedev, the president's spokesman.

Communist leader Gennady Zyuganov offered Lebed the job of prime minister in a future government, hinting the former paratrooper and Afghan war hero would suffer if he did not accept.

Yeltsin was slightly ahead in counting of ballots from Sunday's voting. But he and Zyuganov each got only about a third of the vote from angry and worried Russians who have serious doubts about Yeltsin's reforms and Zyuganov's embrace of the Soviet past.

With 89 percent of the vote counted, 35 percent of voters were backing Yeltsin, whose democratic reforms have also spawned crime and corruption. Zyuganov, who promises a Russia with global might and the controlled economy of the Soviet era, got 32 percent, the Central Election Commission reported.

A runoff was tentatively set for June 30.

A visibly satisfied Lebed told Russian Television his strong performance was a personal victory and that he would disclose soon whether Yeltsin could count on his support. Some Yeltsin aides suggested Lebed could be the president's eventual successor.

The political novice voiced a desire for a government job that would "enable me to organize the struggle with crime, to prevent extreme forces from plunging the country into the depths of bloody chaos."

To win the runoff, both Yeltsin and Zyuganov need the backing of Lebed's supporters, who gave him a solid 14 percent of the vote, easily outdistancing reformist economist Grigory Yavlinsky and ultranationalist Vladimir Zhirinovskiy in the 10-man race.

Yeltsin could offer Lebed the defense ministry or a job as deputy prime minister with control of all security forces. Yeltsin aide Alexander Shokhin suggested that Lebed could get a job "specially created for him."

Zyuganov, who has long had his eye on Lebed, moved quickly to try to secure his support. Communist ally Mikhail Lapsin, head of the Agrarian Party, said Zyuganov would offer the gruff ex-general the prime minister's job in the event of a Communist victory in the runoff.

Zyuganov said no formal offer had been made and warned that Lebed's political career would be seriously damaged if he joined the Yeltsin government.

Yeltsin's presidency may be riding on whether he can coax an endorsement out of Lebed that could help deliver his projected 10 million-plus votes.

"Victory in the second round will happen only if a coalition (with Lebed) actually happens and if turnout stays the same or goes up," Vyacheslav Nikonov, Yeltsin's chief campaign analyst, told Russian Public Television.

By law, a runoff must be held within 15 days of the release of final results. Alexander Ivanchenko, deputy head of the Central Election Commission, said the runoff was tentatively set for June 30.

Yavlinsky, who stood fourth with 7 percent, also will be courted by Yeltsin although many of his supporters are all but certain to vote for the reform-minded president.

Zhirinovskiy, who finished third behind Yeltsin in the 1991 presidential election, stood fifth with 6 percent. Many of his backers are likely to shift to Zyuganov.

None of the other five candidates got even 1 percent. Former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev got only 0.52 percent, a testament to the tremendous unpopularity of the man many Russians hold responsible for the breakup of the Soviet Union and the chaos that followed.

Undaunted, Gorbachev said today he planned to form a new political movement. It was unclear what that was supposed to achieve.

In the Moscow mayoral race, Yeltsin ally Yuri Luzhkov, who has presided over a construction boom that has transformed Russia's capital, was re-elected with nearly 90 percent of the vote.

About 70 percent of Russia's 106 million voters cast ballots.

In a television address to the nation this morning, Yeltsin said the choice in the next round was "crystal clear" and urged voters to unite behind him.

"Either backwards to revolutions and shocks, or forward to stability and well-being. Today as never before, we must be united," said Yeltsin, speaking in a strong clear voice.

Sunday's voting followed a bitter campaign, offering what many voters found to be only unpleasant choices. But election day passed without riots, coups, widespread voter fraud or violence.

The dramatic changes that have taken place in Russia since the Soviet collapse in 1991 have created a new wealthy class, but have driven many into poverty. Crime and corruption have flourished and Yeltsin has been unable to end an 18-month-old bloody war in breakaway Chechnya.

Zyuganov appealed to those dispossessed by the reforms and those yearning for order.

"I am a pensioner, and it is a hard life," Nina Yesimova, 62, said after casting her vote for Zyuganov. "My pension is 400,000 rubles ($80) a month. I can't live on it."

"If the Communists win it will be all the horror of before," said Alexandra Milyana, 70, describing her father's arrest and disappearance in Stalin's purges of the 1930s. "I'm old, but I can't go back."

International monitors said no serious voting fraud was reported.

"The first round of the election took place in a just and honest atmosphere on the whole," he said, according to the Interfax news agency.

U.S. Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said the observer team from the International Republican Institute "didn't see any pattern that would indicate widespread problems."

Campaign financing and spending, and the favoritism of the media toward Yeltsin during the campaign were troubling, he said.

"Both the election and the runoff will be the litmus test as to the true function of democracy in Russia," McCain told reporters.

U.S., China reach copyright piracy agreement

BEIJING (AP) — U.S. and Chinese trade negotiators reached agreement today on copyright piracy just before a deadline for punitive American tariffs and counter-sanctions by Beijing.

The accord, which one Washington official said includes the closure of 15 plants illegally producing U.S. copyright products, averts a costly trade war between the Americans and Chinese.

Washington had demanded Beijing clamp down on illicit production of U.S. films, music and computer software, saying high tariffs on $2 billion of Chinese exports would be enacted without an agreement. China promised to retaliate with its own sanctions and to restrict access for U.S. companies.

China's official Xinhua News Agency reported that the United States agreed to drop plans to impose the trade sanctions. The brief report gave no details but acting U.S. Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky scheduled a news conference in Beijing later today.

In Washington, an administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity confirmed an agreement had been reached with China that made progress in certain desired areas.

The official cited four improvements: Close 15 factories; intensify efforts to crack down on illegal piracy; take effective action to halt exports of pirated products; and permit greater market access for U.S. computer software, music and movies into China.

Washington had been demanding Beijing agree to new steps to comply with a March 1995 agreement to eliminate piracy or face sanctions. U.S. industry groups claim Chinese piracy costs them $2.3 billion a year in lost revenues.

As the talks continued to the last hour, both sides seemed to be repeating the brinkmanship played out in February 1995. Negotiations then passed a deadline for threatened U.S. sanctions before China agreed to crack down on copyright violators.

China maintains it has complied with its 1995 commitments, but acknowledges that piracy has continued.

This time, Washington wants China to take specific steps to make sure the 15-month-old agreement is enforced.

Specifically, China should close plants and improve enforcement in Guangdong province near Hong Kong and other areas where piracy is rampant, strengthen efforts to stop copycat exports and let U.S. entertainment and computer companies into the domestic market.

According to U.S. officials, Washington demanded that China clean up 30 identified pirate CD plants, shutting down some and forcing the rest to sign licensing agreements or joint ventures with U.S. companies.

Most of all, Washington wants to make sure police and customs officers enforce the agreement.

Americans embrace work, not welfare

NEW YORK (AP) — About half of Americans say they would pay more taxes to help put welfare recipients to work, an Associated Press poll finds.

About seven in 10 favor a lifetime limit on welfare payments of five years to those able to work. Even single mothers should not remain on welfare for more than two years if they can work, say 65 percent, up from 47 percent in an AP poll taken less than three years ago.

This increasingly tough view of welfare is tempered with some generosity: 48 percent favor an increase in their own taxes to pay for job programs for welfare recipients, compared with 49 percent who are opposed.

Such a tax increase is not on the agenda in this election year, but welfare overhaul has become a presidential campaign issue. President Clinton, elected on a promise "to end welfare as we know it," has vetoed two Republican plans he criticized as stripping away a safety net from the poor.

While agreement on a national plan eludes them, Clinton rival Bob Dole and congressional Republicans all have praised Wisconsin's effort to turn welfare into a work program. There would be a two-year limit, or five-year lifetime limit, for receiving benefits. But the state would help pay for job training and placement, child care, health care and transportation.

An overwhelming majority in the AP poll thinks government must provide programs to help low-income parents on welfare find or keep jobs. Support is highest for job training, 76 percent; tax breaks to businesses that create jobs in poor neighborhoods, 71 percent; and child care, 67 percent.

Government-created jobs in community service are less popular but still have majority backing at 53 percent.

The poll was taken June 5-9 among a random national sample of 1,008 adults interviewed by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants. Results have a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

In the current welfare system, a mother's benefits increase as she has additional children, an approach favored by only a third of Americans. Fifty percent think benefits should stay the same and 10 percent would actually decrease benefits, punishing a woman on welfare for having another baby.

Younger adults, those most involved in child-rearing, are the biggest supporters of increasing benefits to match family size. But they also are more likely than their elders to favor curbing welfare with time limits.

Most Americans, 69 percent, favor a lifetime limit of five years. Broad support for a cutoff comes from Republicans, at 83 percent, but also from a majority of just about every other group identified in the poll, including Democrats, blacks and people with family incomes below $15,000.

Bulls bring it to an end, claiming another NBA title

CHICAGO (AP) — Best team ever? Maybe, maybe not.

Most incredible season in NBA history? Probably.

From the October day Dennis Rodman arrived wearing red hair augmented by a black Chicago Bulls logo until Sunday night, when Michael Jordan was so overcome with emotion that he couldn't even celebrate his team's fourth NBA championship in six years, there has never been a season quite like this.

Eighty-seven wins, a record. Seventy-two in the regular season, another record. Thirteen losses in 7 months. Amazing.

"Who would have ever written this season?" said Jordan, who cried while thinking about his murdered father even as the Bulls wrapped up Sunday night's 87-75 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics in Game 6 of the NBA Finals.

"It happened on Father's Day, which makes it even more special," Jordan said. "There's no way you can really describe it."

Rodman, now sporting a hieroglyphics hairdo and a T-shirt reading "The Greatest Team Ever," tried to describe it.

"I think this was a fairy tale, like Goldilocks, like Snow White, you name it," he said. "I'll be doing my crying tomorrow when I realize what really happened tonight."

Later, in a locker room thick with the smell of cigar smoke and champagne, Ron Harper wedged himself into one of the 3-foot-wide dressing areas. He sat quietly, away from the maddening mass of players, team officials, minicams and hangers-on, a smoldering stogie between his smiling lips.

"Joy was in getting here," he said. "Winning it, the feeling is very peaceful. Nobody can take this away. Ever. Ever. Ever."

Ever, ever, ever ... will these

Bulls be recognized as the best ever? They had a chance to claim that mythical title last week, but they weren't able to complete a sweep of Seattle that would have given them an unprecedented 15-1 playoff mark to go with their 72-10 regular season.

But even though Seattle won Games 4 and 5, sending the series back to Chicago, Scottie Pippen can't imagine a better team. Pippen and Jordan are the only holdovers from Chicago's 1991, 1992 and 1993 championship clubs.

"To bring this team together in one season, to bring back Michael, to bring Dennis here, this is very special," Pippen said. "We wanted to show the world that we were the greatest team. We have been dedicated all season to go out and win every game. Our team deserves a bow, a hats-off, because it is a heck of a job to win the number of games that we've won."

Jordan finished his first full season since coming out of retirement as a champion, just as he ended his last season before quitting for 21 months. He didn't want to compare this title to those the Bulls won before, but he acknowledged, "We have accomplished history."

It took Jordan awhile to fully appreciate the historic aspect of the Bulls' accomplishment. When the final horn sounded, he grabbed the basketball and hugged it as he dropped down to the United Center court. First Randy Brown, then Rodman joined him on the floor, but Jordan didn't move. Finally, after about five minutes, he rose slowly and staggered off the court. He walked with shaky legs through the hall and stepped into the locker room. Again he fell to floor,

A very special Father's Day for Jordan

Game's best player sets emotions free after win

CHICAGO (AP) — His body shook as he sobbed uncontrollably. He hugged the basketball as tight as he wished he could hold his father.

In his hour of triumph, as the Chicago Bulls won the NBA championship on Father's Day, Michael Jordan grieved with a display of raw, touching emotion that brought closure to the personal hell endured so publicly by the greatest basketball player in the world.

"I can't even put it into words," said Jordan, whose crying spasm on the floor of the lockerroom was broadcast to an audience that had tuned in to see the crowning moment in his team's season of unprecedented accomplishments. Viewers saw that, then watched the unexpected.

"I knew he was watching. This was for dad. I'm very happy for him, Jordan said. "I never doubted that I could get back this moment, and the fact that it happened on Father's Day makes it even more special."

The last time Jordan won a title was in June 1993, and his father was a public presence back then, speaking publicly on his son's behalf because Jordan was irked at the media for chronicling his gambling exploits in the newspapers and on television.

Two months later, his father James was dead, killed by Larry Martin Demery and Daniel Andre Green while napping alongside the road late one night in the sleek, red Lexus his son had bought for him.

"He made a statement like, 'What is this?' or 'What's going on?' As soon as these words were out of his mouth, Daniel cut him off. By that I mean he shot him. Daniel just shot him," Demery testified. "We both stood there and watched the man die."

The two realized who they had killed when they rifled through his possessions. After stealing an NBA championship ring off James Jordan's finger, stealing his shoes and his clothes, Demery and Green dumped the body in a swamp in South Carolina, then went joyriding in the car, all the while making phone calls from the dead man's cellular phone.

The telephone calls helped investigators track the two men down, and both were found guilty of murder and sentenced to life in prison.

Michael Jordan was exposed to all the horrible public details of his father's death, and even as the years moved on, Jordan remained uncomfortable discussing the subject.

That's what made Sunday night's display of emotion all the more gripping, a man who lost his father grieving publicly on Father's Day during a moment of joy he strived so hard to recapture.

Michael Jordan hits a reverse layup in this file photo.

"This is probably the hardest time for me to play the game of basketball," Jordan said. "I had a lot of things on my heart, on my mind. I had a lot to think about, and maybe my mind wasn't geared to where it was. "But I think deep down inside it was geared to what was important to me, which was my family and my father not being here to see this. It was a tough time for me."

'Right stuff' gives Jones win in Open

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. (AP) — He didn't shoot a 63 on the final day, chip in for birdie from the rough or hit a clutch 4-wood on the final hole. All Steve Jones had to offer was patience, perseverance and guts.

That's all the U.S. Open has ever demanded of its champions.

"I don't care how much preparation and how many goals you set or anything like that," Jones said. "That would never guarantee a U.S. Open championship. I think there is a lot of people who can attest to that. I just happened to be at the right place at the right time."

And he brought the perfect game to an Oakland Hills Country Club that proved to be a grueling test of golf.

Hitting all but one fairway and stumbling just once over the final five holes that doomed so many of his challengers, Jones won the 96th U.S. Open on Sunday with a 1-under-par 69.

His 278 was one of only three scores under par, and it gave him a one-stroke victory over Tom Lehman and Davis Love III, two players who had much more experience in pursuit of their first major championship.

Love, the runner-up at The Masters in 1995, bogeyed the 17th with a bad swing and the 18th with a three-putt. Lehman, playing in the final U.S. Open pairing for the second year in a row, bogeyed the last hole after hitting his drive into a fairway bunker.

"I am a little bit closer than I was last year and a lot more disappointed," said Love, considered the best American player never to have won a major.

Lehman is also a candidate for that label. This is the fourth time in three years he has been in the thick of a major on Sunday.

"I thought I played well enough to win," said Lehman, who shot a 71. "The bounces didn't go my way."

It wasn't just Love and Lehman that pursued Jones. Former U.S. Open champion Ernie Els was within three shots of the lead at one point Sunday. So were Tom Watson, Collin Montgomerie and Frank Nobilo. Even Greg Norman made a typical charge.

All of them faltered over the final five holes that are among the toughest closers anywhere, even more frightening with a U.S. Open at stake.

Jones seemed to be the most unlikely candidate to win the Open. He became the first winner since Jerry Pate in 1976 to have gone through qualifying, clinching a spot after a playoff in the sectional.

And he missed nearly three years on the PGA Tour while trying to recover from a severe injury to his left ring finger that he suffered in a dirt bike accident in the desert in November 1991.

Jones wondered whether he would even play again during that lapse in which he was limited to spending time with his family, trying to stay in shape and going to Phoenix Suns games.

One of those who kept in touch was Lehman, calling to make sure he was doing OK and telling Jones to keep his head up.

"Even the last couple of years when I came back out here, he just kept telling me to be patient," Jones said.

That worked to his advantage on a course that requires nothing less. Playing in the final group with Lehman, whom he trailed by one stroke to start the day, Jones waded through eight straight pars on a front nine that was the only realistic chance to make up ground.

When Lehman birdied Nos. 7 and 8, he was 4-under and led Jones by two strokes.

"Several times out there, he gave me some words of inspiration from the Bible to be courageous and be strong, and I tried," Jones said.

He birdied No. 9, a difficult par-3, by hitting a 4-iron to within 10 feet. He got another stroke closer when a 40-foot putt he was trying to get close on No. 10 found the heart of the hole. Lehman bogeyed for a two-shot swing.

Jones took the lead for good on the par-5 12th. Lehman, trying to reach the green in two, wound up in a back bunker, blasted out below the ridge and

Lawrence Johnson: steals show at Olympic trials

ATLANTA (AP) — Maybe it didn't have the drama or social significance of Jackie Robinson breaking the color barrier in baseball. Nevertheless, Lawrence Johnson shot down another stereotype when he soared over a tiny bar 19 feet above the ground.

Johnson easily won the pole vault at the U.S. track and field trials Sunday night and immediately turned him attention toward beating the great Sergey Bubka at the Olympic Games in few weeks.

First, though, Johnson paused to reflect on becoming the first black to make the U.S. Olympic team in an event that hasn't been won by an American since 1968.

"It was another barrier to be broken," said Johnson, resplendent in his orange uniform from the University of Tennessee. "I'm sure it's going to set off more black vaulters in the sport. I've already seen some of that in the high schools and colleges."

But the man who set an American record (19 feet, 7 1/2 inches) and won his second straight NCAA title this year doesn't want to limit himself to racial accomplishments.

"My dreams and aspirations are to be the best pole vaulter in the world," Johnson said, "not the best black pole vaulter."

To become that, the former decathlete and current rhythm and blues singer will have to beat Bubka, who holds the world record of 20-11 and is one of the favorites at the Atlanta

Games along with South African Okkert Brits. Both have jumped higher than Johnson this year.

Johnson, though, has bragged of clearing 21 feet some day and says he is only waiting for the right moment to break Bubka's world record. Apparently, that moment wasn't at the Olympic Trials, where Johnson cleared 19-00 but missed badly on three attempts at 19-20.

"How high I think I can jump will remain between me and my coach," he said, adding, "Twenty feet always brings a smile to my face."

As for Bubka, the 1988 Olympic champion who failed to earn a medal at Barcelona four years ago, Johnson scoffed at the notion that anyone is unbeatable.

"I know everyone says that about him, but I've never believed that," said Johnson, who was joined on the American team by Jeff Hartwig and Scott Huffman. "Bubka's a great competitor, but he's human."

Johnson's victory in the pole vault highlighted a rather lackluster night at the Olympic Stadium in which three other finals were held. Kim Batten won the women's 400-meter hurdles, Bryan Bronson the men's 400 hurdles and Todd Riech the men's javelin.

Michael Johnson and Butch Reynolds summed up the anticlimactic tone of the evening in the second round of the men's 400 meters. Like two poker

Red Sox stun Rangers in 10-9 slugfest, take first place in AL East

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox have been looking for a way to turn their season around all year.

They might have come up with an answer this past week, going 5-1 against Chicago and Texas to take sole possession of third place in the AL East.

"Sure a five-game spurt is nice, but we need to go 20-5 over a five-to-six week span to get in the hunt," pitching coach Sammy Ellis said.

On Sunday, Reggie Jefferson hit a three-run homer with no outs in the ninth inning, rallying the Red Sox past the Rangers 10-9.

"It's the greatest feeling in the world," Jefferson said. "I was just looking to hit the ball hard, but I knew it was gone the minute it left the bat."

The Red Sox trailed 9-3 in the seventh before beginning their comeback.

Mo Vaughn and Jose Canseco, who each had four hits, started the ninth with singles off Mike Henneman (0-5). They advanced on a wild pitch, and Jefferson followed with his sixth home run of the season.

"We tried to go low and away to Jefferson," Rangers catcher Dave Valle said. "Instead, we went high and away and that was the mistake that beat us."

The Red Sox have hit 72 home runs in the last 36 games, and have hit a home run in six straight games. It was Boston's 18th come-from-behind victory of the season, and the seventh from the seventh inning on.

"We knew we had the heart of our order coming up in the ninth inning, so I felt good about our chances of winning," manager Kevin Kennedy said.

It was Henneman's fifth blown save in 23 chances. Joe Hudson (2-2) retired six of eight batters, and pitched a perfect ninth.

"You have to do more than just score runs to win in this game. We didn't run the bases well and we didn't make the plays we needed to in the field," Rangers manager Johnny Oates said.

Canseco hit his 21st homer, doubled and drove in four runs. Vaughn, who has reached base in eight straight plate appearances, went 4-for-4 and doubled twice.

Valle hit his first homer of the season and tied a career high with four RBIs. His home run gave Texas a 9-3 lead in the seventh.

Damon Buford's two-run homer highlighted a five-run fifth inning that put Texas ahead 7-3. Mickey Tetleton had an RBI double and Juan Gonzalez and Dean Palmer each had run-scoring singles in the inning.

The Red Sox chased Ken Hill with a four-run seventh. Canseco had a two-run double and Troy O'Leary drove in two with a bases-loaded single.

Canseco homered in the first for a 2-0 lead. It was his 18th home run in his last 129 at-bats.

Trials

players trying to conceal their hands, Johnson and Reynolds coasted into Monday's semifinals. "Anyone with any experience knows it's just a preliminary," said Johnson, who slowed 60 meters from the end and wound up second in his heat at 45.11 seconds. "I wanted to relax most of the way."

It appears the real showdown between Johnson, the world champion who hasn't lost a 400 final since 1989, and Reynolds, the world record holder, will come in the Olympics, not the trials. "All I have to say is my goal is to make the team," said Reynolds, second in his heat at 45.19.

Also qualifying for the semi-nals were 1992 Olympic champion Quincy Watts and identical twins Calvin and Alvin Harrison, who aren't pondering the possibility of one twin squeezing out the other for a spot on the team.

"We're thinking both of us are going to make it," Calvin said. "We know what we're capable of doing, and there's more than enough room for both of us."

The final is Wednesday night. Batten won the women's 400 hurdles in 53.81, the fastest time in the world this year. Tonja Buford-Bailey and 1992 Olympic silver medalist Sandra Farmer-Patrick were second and third, also good enough to make the U.S. team. "I was very nervous," admitted Batten, who missed qualifying for the 1992 Barcelona Games by nine-hundredths of a second. "My first Olympic team. Yes! Yes!"

Bronson had the fastest time in the world this year (47.98) to win the 400 hurdles, upsetting world champion Derrick Adkins in the process. After barely missing the Olympic team four years ago, just like Batten, Adkins had no complaints about a second-place finish.

"I'm a step ahead of the last trials," he said. "If I can get on that podium at the Olympics, I'll be happy with that."

Calvin Davis rounded out the American team in the 400 hurdles.

still cradling the ball, sobbing. He wasn't celebrating his team's fourth title. He wasn't celebrating his fourth NBA Finals MVP award. It was Father's Day, and he was thinking of James Jordan. "I had to get out of the gym and be by myself," said Jordan, whose father was killed in 1993. "I just had a lot to think about ... what was most important to me, which was my family, and my father not being here to see this. This was for dad."

Though Jordan was chosen finals MVP — making him the first to win four such awards in a career and only the second (along with New York's Willis Reed in 1970) to be selected MVP of the finals, regular season and All-Star Game in the same season — Sunday's game was one of his worst of the playoffs.

He missed 14 of 19 shots and committed five turnovers. And he scored only 22 points, 12 fewer than his NBA-record career playoff average.

While Jordan was the obvious choice as series MVP, more valuable on the clinching night were Rodman, Harper and Pippen.

Rodman had 19 rebounds, 11 on the offensive end, and provided boundless energy. Harper, after barely playing the previous three games because of a sore knee that will require arthroscopic surgery, scored 10 points in 38 gutsy minutes and contained Sonics star Gary Payton. Pippen, terrible most of the series, had 17 points, eight rebounds, five assists and four steals.

The Bulls shot only 40 percent, but won by playing as intensely as they have in any game this season. They got big contributions from Toni Kukoc and Steve Kerr, players who had struggled off the bench. Their defense was smothering, forcing 20 turnovers. They out-rebounded Seattle 51-35.

Rodman, acquired just before the season to provide rebounding even though he didn't fit the Bulls' conservative image, was a major factor all series.

"As you evaluate the series," Sonics coach George Karl said, "I think Dennis Rodman is the reason they were successful."

Karl was pleased with his team's effort despite the defeat. Seattle had been roundly criticized after dropping first-round playoff series each of the two previous years and again after falling behind Chicago 3-0 in the finals.

"I think we showed the nation that we had a big heart and played with a lot of pride," said Karl, whose team won 64 regular-season games — 10th most in history.

No one showed more pride than Shawn Kemp. He has ascended from high school kid to NBA All-Star, and this series was his personal coming-of-age event. He had another excellent game Sunday, with 18 points and 14 rebounds. "I think I became a much smarter player and my decisions became much better," he said. "That was the next level to take."

Kemp kept the Sonics close until the Bulls broke open the game with a 16-4 run early in the third quarter. Rodman was the catalyst; in one 48-second span, he tipped in Harper's missed shot, converted a three-point play on a pass from Pippen, drew an offensive foul on Kemp and tossed a pretty lob pass that Jordan turned into a reverse layup for a 64-47 lead.

Seattle never got closer than nine points after that. Soon, the celebration began, with a sobbing Jordan clutching the basketball, other players hugging gleefully and a sellout crowd of 24,544 bathing the United Center in frenzied cheers.

three-putted from 40 feet. Seeing Lehman's predicament behind the green, Jones put a 3-wood in the front bunker, where he got up and down for a birdie and a two-stroke swing. "He is the only one I paid attention to all day," Jones said. "I never looked at the board. I just kept telling myself, 'hit the fairway, hit the green.'"

Jones never trailed after the 12th hole. Love caught him with a birdie at No. 15 before he faltered on the final two holes.

Jones' 278 total is the lowest score of six previous Opens held at Oakland Hills, the course that Ben Hogan referred to as a "monster" when he won in 1951.

Jones said he found inspiration early in the week from a book about Hogan.

"This guy, no matter what the situation, he was always trying to make birdie, always trying to focus on the next shot, and that's what I tried to do this week," Jones said. "I honestly don't think I could have won this tournament without reading that book."

"It takes a lot of guts to win, and I wasn't ever sure if I had the guts to win another tournament, let alone a major. You've got to be patient."

Love and Lehman will have to wait for their first major.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR TUESDAY, JUNE 18:

You go through many changes dealing with life this year. Accordingly, you will grow and develop to meet them head on. Your strong suits are the clarity you bring to confusing situations and your ability to create the wild and unusual from them. Your view of others is subject to a shift, especially as you deal with new work techniques. If you are single, romance is present, though you might feel like the victim of some power plays. If attached, romance builds if you work together toward a common goal. LEO helps you shine.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Though confusion marks your early day, you come to crystal-clear conclusions later. Review a domestic issue, and make a decision. Creativity dominates once you define the problem, making finding the right solutions even easier. Tonight: Clear out some old files or closets. ***

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Clarify a baffling message or invitation. You can see a situation in a new light because of what happens around this bit of news. Stay anchored, and honor priorities. You understand much more. Check out an investment. Tonight: Be the ruler of your domain. ***

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A more possessive side of you emerges regarding funds. A partner's idea differs from yours. Question information you receive. Don't lapse into mental override. Take action, and find out the right answer. You do a great job of ferreting out facts. Tonight: Stop at a favorite spot. ***

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You might be getting mixed messages. Think through what is going on with the sender. Discernment helps, but you might also need to state your boundaries. You have the docile personality and savoir-faire to help another understand. Tonight: Buy a new summer item. ***

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Maintain a low profile this morning. Avoid becoming enmeshed in a difficult situation. Creativity comes out later in the day. Use your extra energy and magnetism to forge a personal project. A loved one has a bizarre way of expressing his affection. Tonight: Just ask. ***

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Head for the hills while you still can. No matter how good your intentions, another mis-understands. Don't take this personally. Rather, distance yourself from the problem for now. Rearrange your routine for maximum efficiency. Tonight: Put on the headphones! ***

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) The path of moderation is the right way to go with a family member. Follow through on your goals, though giving in to immediate gratification may be tempting. Your creativity takes center stage later in the day. Be careful about flirtation. Tonight: Go for a little play. ***

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) News from a distance complicates matters. First, straighten out what is twisted or unclear. Then discuss your long-term goals. Others are responsive, though at first it may not seem so. Handle all responsibilities that come your way. Tonight: All eyes are on you. ***

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Ascertain what is behind another's financial ideas. State your limits. Clear out partnership matters early in the day. Make calls, and network later. Perspective and wisdom combine to make you a winner. Tonight: Stop by the bookstore on the way home. ***

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You cause more commotion than you are aware. Hold up a mirror to take a long look. Get feedback, if necessary. You will view a situation differently once you acknowledge the other side. Your awareness and willingness enhance a partnership. Tonight: Talk open. ***

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Work is demanding. Distance yourself some to determine what is necessary to get the job done. You might be misreading a business-related matter. Concentrate on your goals and needs. Postpone socializing until later in the day. Tonight: Head out to your favorite hangout. ***

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Your vision is essential. A friend considers your advice key to making a decision. You might not want to play into it. Help this person through creative questioning. Make work a high priority. Work late to complete what is important. Tonight: Count on a long night. ***
