OPEC trims little output

Uncertainties surround uprising in Venezuela

Caracas derails second coup attempt

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Rebels tried Friday to overthrow President Carlos Andres Perez for the second time this year, claiming to act on behalf of the growing legions of poor in this oil-rich nation wracked by corruption.

At least 50 people were killed in Caracas and Maracay, site of the country's main air base, before the revolt was crushed and some top military officers were in custody, said a government source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Meanwhile, prisoners apparently trying to take advantage of the chaos staged an uprising that killed 15 inmates and one guard, officials said. At least 40 prisoners managed to flee the compound on the west side of the capital.

Venezuela, the third-largest producer in the OPEC oil cartel, has been beset by unrest because critics accuse the government of not distributing oil riches to the public and fostering corruption. On Feb. 4, a group of mid-level military officers tried to depose the unpopular Perez, who heads South America's longest-en-

VIENNA, Austria — OPEC agreed Friday to cut oil production modestly, but that wasn't enough to strengthen prices much. Earlier in the day, crude markets were jolted by reports of the second coup attempt against Venezuela's president since February.

Even if the new OPEC accord works, the prospect of global production excess and falling prices remains strong.

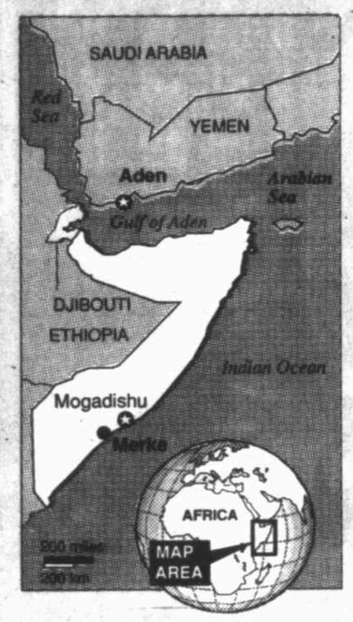

"OPEC just did not cut enough," said Victor Yu, an oil trader at Refco Inc., a leading commodities brokerage in New York.

Oil contracts in London, the only key petroleum market operating during the Thanksgiving holiday, fell 41 cents for the week of the cartel's winter meeting in Vienna. The price of Brent crude for January delivery, a barometer of pressures on the market, managed a 20-cent rally Friday to close at $18.95.

Part of the rally was rooted in uncertainties surrounding a coup

Warlord's welcome

MOGADISHU, Somalia — A powerful warlord, apparently seeking to strengthen his own hand in Somalia's civil war, on Friday welcomed a U.S. offer to send 30,000 troops to help deliver aid to Somalia's hungry. The troop-deployment proposal was being weighed Friday at the United Nations, where Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali was meeting with senior officials. Packwood, liquor?

WASHINGTON — In the wake of reports that he made unwanted sexual advances toward several women, Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon issued a statement Friday saying he had come to the understanding that he needs professional advice to see if the incidents were related to his use of alcohol. Packwood, one of the Senate's most senior Republicans, won re-election only days before The Washington Post reported that at least 10 women were willing to give specific accounts of sexual misconduct by the senator. /7C

Medicare goes up

WASHINGTON — Medicare recipients will pay higher premiums for medical insurance and larger deductibles for hospital stays next year, the government said Friday. Premiums for Part B insurance, which covers doctors' bills and outpatient services, will rise to $36.60 next year from the current monthly premium of $31.80 — a 15 percent increase. For Part A insurance, which covers hospitalization, patients will have to pay a deductible of $676 for each hospital stay, the Department of Health and Human Services said.

Germany bans neo-Nazi group to 'end terror'

■ Action comes as thousands mourn three Turks killed in firebomb attack.

Associated Press

BONN, Germany — The government on Friday cracked down on Germany's growing neo-Nazi threat by banning a right-wing extremist group called the Nationalistic Front.

Interior Minister Rudolf Seiters said the ban on the group was effective immediately. Afterward, police searched more than 40 houses of leading members of the Nationalistic Front in eight states, including North Rhine-Westphalia, where the group is based.

In banning the Nationalist Front, Seiters asserted that he would use all legal means to end "street terror and brutal violence." The government did not tie the group to any specific acts of violence, but in raids on members' homes, police have found weapons, ammunition and leaflets explaining how to make explosives.

The action came as thousands of mourners held a memorial service in Hamburg for three Turks killed Monday in a firebomb attack on their home. The attack has been linked to Germany's resurgent right-wing.

Sixteen people have been killed in nearly 1,800 right-wing attacks in Germany this year.

Midlanders turn from turkey to shopping

Income gains bode well

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income increased solidly in October, the government said Friday in a report economists saw as a good sign for Christmas sales.

Incomes shot up 1 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $5.13 trillion in October, the Commerce Department said on the opening day of the holiday shopping season. The rise was the biggest in 10 months.

Hurricanes Andrew and Iniki and other forces have buffeted income up and down recently, but the underlying pattern shows solid, if unspectacular, increases, economists said.

'The economic news has taken on a better tone. There's no question about that.'

— economist Robert G. Dederick

"The economic news has taken on a better tone. There's no question about that. There was a little bit of backsliding during the summer but that has given way to a better climate," said economist Robert G. Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

Incomes had risen 0.5 percent in September.

Excluding the hurricanes and other one-time events, incomes rose 0.4 percent in October after a gain of 0.3 percent

Shoppers capitalized on the extended holiday weekend Friday, turning out in droves at local stores on the traditional busiest shopping day of the year.

Merchants throughout the city saw signs of a recovery from the recession, mirroring a more positive outlook that has crept into the national consciences over the past month.

"We've been getting a lot of folks in all day. There's a spirit of optimism," said Carroll Staton, owner of The Weigh Station at 408 Andrews Highway. "And this year, for some reason, the big-ticket items are going faster. Money seems to be more plentiful."

Staton and five other dealers oversee two adjacent large rooms at the location, labeled on the outside as The Cat's Meow. The merchants specialize in jewelry, antiques, vintage clothing, dolls, glassware collectibles and china.

Steven Porterfield, owner of the The Cat's Meow, said customers had been streaming in throughout the day Friday.

Petition drive for beer sales fizzles

LUBBOCK (AP) — Thousands of residents have signed petitions calling for a vote on beer and wine sales in the city. But the effort is fizzling, to the pleasure of liquor store owners on the locally famous "Strip" south of town.

Petition organizers must turn in most of their signatures Monday. They expect to meet their required number in only justice of the peace Precinct 5 — an area totally outside the city limits anyway.

"It would indicate there's not a whole lot of interest, apparently, in bringing beer and wine to town," said Jim Broome, owner of Crossed Keys Package Store on the Tahoka Highway.

Petition leader Mike Chappell doesn't see it that way.

Chappell on Friday blamed a shortage in volunteers for the effort's probable failure in three precincts.

'I don't want to see beer and wine in the city yet I hate to see the perpetuation of the monopoly and the loss of revenue to (Lubbock).'

— David Murrah, director
Texas Tech's Southwest Collection

"If we just had the work force, we could take this out in one day."

County commissioners will put the issue on ballots in the precincts with sufficient signatures. Voters want packaged beer and wine sales in Lubbock, he said.

"Lubbock takes a lot of criticism from a lot of the other cities in the state for our behind-times

Fiery free-trade debate inspires artist's taco-sauce political cartoons

EL PASO (AP) — Debate over free trade has been fiery, which an El Paso architect believes he's captured in his political cartoons painted with taco sauce.

Gregory J. Cook, whose series of seven political cartoons are on display at City Hall, chose the hot, not mild, flavors when he decided to take a few jabs at the pending North American Free Trade Agreement between the United States, Mexico and Canada.

"My favorite lunch is two burritos from Taco Bell," he said. "One day I was looking at the taco sauce and wondered if anyone had ever painted with it. So I thought I'd try it. After all, I owed a lot to their hot sauce."

Not only does the hot sauce help deliver his spicy message, but the texture for his paintings is better, he said.

"I did these (paintings) because I'm worried about what really is going to happen here with free trade. It's a real mystery; no one seems to know for sure."

'I did these because I'm worried about what really is going to happen here with free trade. It's a real mystery; no one seems to know for sure.'

— arctitect Gregory Cook

"All we can find out is that there will be a lot of labor-type jobs and trucks. I don't think this will help all the low-income people here who need help; it will push them further back. No one seems to know what will happen, but there's a fear. . . ."

El Paso, which sits square in the middle of the nearly 2,000-mile long U.S.-Mexican border, expects to benefit from free trade. But many city leaders also are insisting the agreement provide money to deal with heavier traffic and environmental problems.

The hot sauce gives Cook's cartoons somber red-brown tones. Trucks are a dominant theme.

One of the cartoons, Cook titled "Winter tire fires: Juarez thousand points of light."

Tires often are used in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, across the border from El Paso, by families unable to afford other types of fuel. They often are used to fire up ovens used for brick making.

One problem with painting with taco sauce was Cook had to worry about how it aged.

"I used spray fixer and varnish on it because it smelled so strong."

Dig-out begins in Panhandle

AMARILLO (AP) — Determined, holiday shoppers crunched through lingering snow drifts and icy roads Friday as temperatures edged above freezing.

The sunshine and softening slush was welcomed in areas hit this week by a blizard-like dump of more than a foot of snow on parts of the Panhandle.

"It is so exciting out here, and I mean that seriously," said Christopher Ralston, general manager of Westgate Mall. "The parking lot is clear, Interstate 40 looks clear and traffic is up."

Much of I-40 and other Panhandle highways were snow clogged from early Tuesday to Thanksgiving Day. Roads in Amarillo neighborhoods began clearing Friday.

"Most of them still have quite a bit of ice, but they're passable," said police Cpl. Lisa Cherry. "You have to use caution."

Ms. Cherry said tow trucks still haven't reached some of the 200 vehicles that slammed into one another or slid off I-40 in a 1.5-mile pileup Tuesday.

Amarillo police won't know until next week the number of fender-benders, she said.

"I'll be glad when it's over. I'm getting just about tired of it, it's so stressful."

At the mall, Ralston said workers had plowed snow banks 12 feet high along the parking lot edges.

Friday's shoppers were from Amarillo, he said, adding that he expected customers from other cities by next week.

The Texas Department of Public Safety had opened all highways by Friday.

But some travelers still were stranded in Pampa, where the Texas National Guard pulled 123 motorists Tuesday and Wednesday from the roads. Pampa measured 13 inches of snow — the most in the region.

A group of about 20 people who remained at Coronado Inn kept a good attitude, said motel owner Mike Parker.

"They're drinking in the lounge, playing pool, watching HBO," Parker said. "They consider it somewhat of an adventure."

in September.

Consumer spending, meanwhile, was up 0.7 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.16 trillion in October after a 0.9 percent gain the month before.

Analysts said consumers appear more willing to spend now that the uncertainty of the presidential election is over and the job market appears to have stabilized. That should carry over into spending for several months, they said.

"There's every reason to expect we will have a decent Christmas," said economist Allen Sinai of the Boston Co. "It won't be like old times, old times being the 1980s, but it will be better than the last few years."

Although consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of overall economy activity, can fluctuate with changes in consumers' moods, such spending depends in the long run on income gains. That's why economists regard income growth as a crucial determinant of economic health.

Analysts have attributed the sluggishness of the recovery to employers' reluctance to expand their payrolls. Even though the economy has been growing for six straight quarters, the job market has shown signs of improvement only recently.

The nation's unemployment rate edged down to 7.4 percent in October after reaching an eight-year high of 7.8 percent in June.

"The growth of income ultimately limits the growth of spending, which is why we need to see some more employment gains out there," said economist Cynthia Latta of DRI-McGraw Hill, a Lexington, Mass., forecasting firm.

Wages and salaries — the most-watched component of income — rose 0.6 percent in October after falling 0.1 percent in September and increasing 0.6 percent in August.

Economists were expecting the October wage gain because employees are working longer hours. The analysts hope this will be a prelude to new hiring as business executives gain confidence that the still-fledgling recovery will sustain itself.

In addition to wages and salaries and farm subsidies, other income components showing increases in October were: transfer payments, such as unemployment benefits; rental income, and business owners' income. Interest income declined.

Disposable income — income after taxes — rose 0.6 percent on an inflation-adjusted basis in October after edging down 0.1 percent in September.

Among special factors boosting incomes last month were large subsidy payments to farmers, bonuses to auto workers, restitution payments to Japanese-Americans interned during World War II, a rebound in income in Hawaii following a drop caused by Hurricane Iniki and special retirement payments to postal workers.

Purchases of durable goods — costly items expected to last three or more years — led the spending increase in October with a 2 percent rise. Spending on services was up 0.7 percent; spending on nondurable goods increased 0.3 percent.

The fact that incomes rose faster than spending last month produced an increase in the nation's savings rate — savings as a percentage of income — from 4.4 percent in September to 4.7 percent in October.

On an autumn evening, Young is sitting at a back corner table in the Carnegie Deli, on Seventh Avenue at 55th Street. He's in town on business — a new album, "Harvest Moon," has just been released by Reprise — but in the manner of a genial tourist, he's just ordered an egg cream.

"I live out in the country, so coming to the city is like a vacation to me," he said. "Like getting away from it all." For 20 years, Young has had a ranch in Northern California; for more than 20 years, he's been eating at the Carnegie Deli on his New York visits. "I used to come here back in the '60s with the Buffalo Springfield," he said offhandedly. "We'd come here at night, after gigs, in the morning, whenever."

At 47, after 25 years in the music business, Young is still, in the words of one song from "Harvest Moon," "doin' what I do": writing songs, playing guitar, singing in that strange, high-pitched voice of his. He's one of the longest-running shows in rock-and-roll.

Some members of his generation, like Eric Clapton, manage to keep their image as smart and contemporary as a Barneys ad; others, like Bob Dylan, have lately seemed to wither. Young's persona, on the other hand, is defined, at least in part, by his consistency, and his resistance to whims of fashion. His career doesn't move forward linearly, but rather in cycles, sometimes in sync with pop trends and sometimes completely out of sync.

Young's status as a rock icon can't be pinned on a single period of his history. And that history is long and complex. From 1966 to 1968 he was a member of Buffalo Springfield, a band that broke ground for the late-'60s popularity of country-rock; in 1969, he began releasing solo albums, and from 1969 until the mid-'70s he was, part time, also a member of Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young, the unofficial first rock supergroup.

Some of Young's most memorable work comes from this period: albums like "After the Goldrush" and CSNY's "Deja Vu," songs like "Sugar Mountain," "Cinnamon Girl" and "Down by the River."

Yet today, Crosby, Stills and Nash is an oldies act; Young is more vital than ever. In 1979 the live album "Rust Never Sleeps," recorded with the band Crazy Horse, acknowledged the rise and fall of punk rock in the song "My My, Hey Hey (Out of the Blue)," with references to Johnny Rotten of the Sex Pistols. After a difficult period in the 80s, when he made a series of records using different musical styles, he came back in 1989 with the album "Freedom." Its single, "Rockin' in the Free World," was adopted, only half-ironically, by the cynical alternative-rock generation; that same year, cutting-edge bands like Sonic Youth, Dinosaur Jr. and the Pixies contributed to the compilation album "The Bridge: A Tribute to Neil Young."

Young's raging 1990 album, "Ragged Glory," and the ensuing live "Weld" — both recorded with Crazy Horse — practically predicted the explosion of grunge rock with their distorted, guitar-driven sound. His performance at the Bob Dylan tribute concert at Madison Square Garden on Oct. 16 was lauded by critics as one of the high points of the event.

More than any other rocker of his generation, Young has an audience that crosses the boundaries of age and cultural experience. "It sounds like a cliche, but he's the only one I can think of who really hasn't sold out," said Kim Gordon of Sonic Youth, which opened for Young on the "Ragged Glory" tour. "His voice sounds the same. He hasn't really changed his sound. He hasn't tried to update it."

With "Harvest Moon," his 27th solo album, Young has completed another cycle. Gentle, folky and acoustic, "Harvest Moon" is a kind of sequel to Young's 1972 album "Harvest," which contains his only No. 1 single to date ("Heart of Gold") and remains one of his best-selling records ever.

In making "Harvest Moon," Young used the same group of musicians, the Stray Gators, that played on "Harvest"; James Taylor and Linda Ronstadt, who sang backup on "Heart of Gold," added harmony vocals to a new song, "From Hank to Hendrix."

Throughout the new album there is a sense of time passed, of reassessment and rejuvenation. "If there's a message to the whole thing, it's continuance," Young said. "It's about keeping things new and staying fresh. Not just getting into a mold and doing the same things over and over again, but really trying to discover and feel them for the first time. There's a lot of referring to the past, and trying to keep the spark happening, or even more of a spark. Doing things so much that you get better, because of the experience."

Young's current stature is a testament to his experience. Born in Toronto in 1945 and raised in Toronto and Winnipeg, he never finished high school.

"I was a dropout," he said without pride. In the mid-'60s, after working the Toronto folk clubs, he drove to Los Angeles in his Pontiac hearse, searching for a life in music. "When I was young, I think I was kind of unsettled," he said. "Moving around a lot. Kind of hopped up. Not on drugs, but kind of amped out. A little out of control. And too open. Wide open."

By 1967, his first Los Angeles band, Buffalo Springfield, was already a success. "I was just driven to do what I do," he said. "Just complete raw energy focused at this one goal of playing music and making music, making records. I was already doing that when I was 22, so that goal didn't mean much. I'd already attained that. Then I tried to refine what I was about, and make decisions about how to best go along doing it."

Young's albums, beginning with his solo debut, "Neil Young," in 1969, illustrate this process of refining. Throughout the '60s and '70s, his records veered back and forth between the blistered electricity of Crazy Horse and a quieter, rootsy approach, from the near-metal thrust of "Cinnamon Girl" to the aching acoustics of "Harvest."

In the '80s, though, he seemed to throw his career up in the air and embark on a bizarre series of tangents. "Trans," released in 1983, was a weirdly technological effort on which he fed his voice through a computer; "Everybody's Rockin'," also released in '83, was straight-ahead rockabilly, complete with a pompadoured Young on the cover. He tried out sentimental country on "Old Ways" in '85, and blustery rhythm-and-blues on "This Note's for You" in '87.

A few years before the detour began, Young's wife, Pegi, whom he'd married in 1978, had given birth to a son, Ben, who had cerebral palsy. Young's first son, Zeke, born in 1972 to a different mother, also has cerebral palsy.

In a 1989 Village Voice article, Young connected the inaccessibility of his '80s records with his frustration at not being able to communicate with Ben, whom he and Pegi were raising.

DERAILS: Coup attempt staggers Venezuela

(From 1A)

during democracy.

In Caracas, rebels flying warplanes believed commandeered from the Maracay base attacked the presidential palace and a military facility that contains the air force command. Battles were also waged at a government television station.

Twelve hours after the insurrection began, Interior Minister Luis Pinerua announced the surrender of the rebels. Later, sources said authorities arrested three alleged coup leaders from the top ranks of the military: Adm. German Gruber Odreman and Vice Adm. Louis Enrique Contreras in Caracas, and Brig. Gen. Francisco Visconti in Maracay, about 50 miles southwest of the capital. The sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

Gruber was in charge of training in the armed forces and Visconti was in charge of military supplies. About 100 rebel soldiers also were arrested, according to the government news agency Venpres.

But another group of about 100 soldiers flew aboard a C-130 transport plane to the Peruvian city of Iquitos and asked for political asylum, media reports in Lima said.

Iquitos airport spokesman Francisco Meza confirmed the soldiers were at the airport, but declined to give more information.

In Caracas, sporadic gunfire rang out on the capital's streets after nightfall as National Guard troops enforced a 6 p.m.-to-6 a.m. curfew.

Friday's coup attempt was announced around midnight after rebels seized a television station and key airfield.

Rebel bombs blasted a 60-foot-wide hole in the front of the white, colonial-style palace and left craters in surrounding streets. Smoke billowed from areas near the palace and the airbase in the nearby La Carlota neighborhood, where rebel aircraft strafed government fighter planes on the ground.

Perez later told the RCN radio station that loyalist troops had surrounded the airport, which was closed. RCN cited a Venezuelan official as saying one rebel aircraft was shot down.

The 3½-hour battle to drive about 25 rebels from the TV station left at least six people dead, according to media reports.

An editor at the Daily Journal, Venezuela's English-language newspaper, said three bullets pierced the window of his home across the street.

"I could hear bullets, but I didn't think they were for me — until the window exploded," said editor John Fegan.

Two soldiers drove through Caracas in a car equipped with a loudspeaker.

"We believe in a better Venezuela without corruption," said 2nd Lt. Oneiver Herrera, 34.

"For all, for the poor," blared the message from the loudspeaker.

At the Catia Prison, inmates revolted during the early hours of the coup, said Justice Ministry spokesman Pablo Escalante. There were some reports that police opened fire on inmates, but Escalante would not give further details.

SHOPPING: Midlanders hit stores

(From 1A)

"Definitely a steady flow. We're pleased, quite pleased," he said. "And for some reason, people are buying for themselves as much as for others."

Wal-Mart's morning manager was greeted by lines of anxious shoppers when he opened the store at 7 a.m. Friday — two hours before the store normally opens.

Wal-Mart officials acknowledged that sales were brisk throughout the day.

At Dillards department store, officials said sales were better than anticipated.

"People are doing a lot of purchasing, not just looking," said Janet Martin, assistant manager. "We are very pleased with the numbers and we were ready for them — we certainly have the merchandise. We plan to burn the oils tonight," restocking and preparing for the next wave of holiday bargain hunters expected during the rest of the four-day Thanksgiving weekend.

At Mervyns in Midland Plaza, officials also opened at 7 a.m., three hours earlier than usual.

Operations Manager Dawn Martin, who noted an upward trend in sales from last year, attributed the growth to a new promotional strategy, including offering an airfare voucher to fly free to Mexico for anyone purchasing over $300 worth of merchandise.

Several store managers said they noticed a more positive attitude among customers with fewer patrons angry about waiting in long lines.

And outside, traffic officials noted a few 'fender benders' but no serious accidents or injuries.

Police directed traffic on Midkiff Road for several hours midday to help alleviate congestion.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Midland man is shot

Staff report

A 39-year-old Midland man escaped serious injury Friday morning after he was shot in the chest outside the Zodiac Club at 200 N. Lee St., police reports said.

Manuel Garcia refused to identify the man who shot him shortly after 2 a.m. and there have been no arrests made in the case, police said.

Garcia was treated at Memorial Hospital & Medical Center and released.

BEER: Petition drive fizzles

(From 1A)

attitude," said Chappell, a commodity broker and lifelong Lubbock resident. "And really, I mean, why shouldn't we have the convenience everyone else has?"

But owners of the six liquor stores on the Strip say they don't hear complaints about the 1.4-mile drive from the city limits.

Besides, Broome says, authorities can regulate a compact stretch of liquor stores better than they could scattered convenience stores.

Each side accuses the other of deception and exaggeration.

Chappell said the sales could net the city $1.5 million annually in sales taxes and inventory property taxes. Broome says that figure is high.

"We're going up against big-money players who would rather the citizens not have the right to vote. They're whining and screaming and lying just to keep us from having an election," Chappell said.

"We still cherish the democratic process. If they want to vote, we're all for that," Broome said.

David Murrah, director of the Texas Tech University's Southwest Collection, said the liquor lobby historically has banded with churches against sales in the city.

Lubbock's Bible-belt foundation kept the county dry until 1960, when voters in Precinct 2 allowed for the Strip's creation, he said.

"I don't want to see beer and wine in the city and yet I hate to see the perpetuation of the monopoly and the loss of revenue to the city as a whole because of the existing situation," Murrah said.

GERMANY: Government outlaws neo-Nazi group in wake of violence any kind of Nazis. We want democracy," Labor Minister Norbert Bluem said in an emotional address outside Hamburg's mosque.

Foreign Minister Klaus Kinkel also attended the memorial and a rally later in front of Hamburg's city hall, where he was booed by some in the crowd that had swelled to 20,000. Several eggs were tossed at him, but missed.

An official at the federal criminal police, Germany's equivalent of the FBI, said the Nationalistic Front was banned "strictly because of its political philosophy."

Federal prosecutors said there was no link between the Nationalistic Front and Monday's attack that killed the three ethnic Turks.

However, the federal prosecutor's office in March said it was investigating Nationalistic Front leader Meinolf Schoenborn and 13 other members for founding a "right-wing terroristic organization."

According to the 1991 report from the Office for the Protection of the Constitution, Germany's anti-terrorism unit, the Nationalistic Front had about 130 members.

Seiters notified Schoenborn that the Nationalistic Front was immediately dissolved and that its properties would be confiscated.

He said the group's "goal was to eliminate the basic democratic order" in Germany and that it followed the political aims of the Nazis.

In addition, the Interior Minister claimed Schoenborn had begun to build a "nationalistic task force" for actions against foreigners.

Seiters promised that "further measures would follow today's step," saying other organizations were being scrutinized.

The Nazi Party has been banned since 1949, and the Interior Ministry may outlaw any organization it determines is spreading Nazi propaganda. Violations of the ban carry penalties of up to five years in prison. The Nationalistic Front was founded in 1985.

The German government has come under intense criticism for not attacking its right-wing extremists with the same vigor used to quell left-wing terrorists in the 1970s and '80s. But it was not clear how much of an effect Friday's ban would have on roving neo-Nazis.

"These people are not normally the ones who carry out attacks, they leave it up to little rightist followers," the federal police source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said of the Nationalistic Front.

Since World War II, about 250 groups have been banned by the government on grounds they posed violent challenges to Germany's constitutional order. In addition, two political parties — a far-left Communist party and a far-right party — have been outlawed by the courts.

Earlier Friday, the federal prosecutor's office said eight teenagers had been arrested, in addition to a 25-year-old man whose arrest was announced Thursday, for membership in a right-wing extremist group that allegedly set fire to refugee shelters in northern Germany.

CARTEL: OPEC trims output

(From 1A)

attempt in Venezuela, OPEC's No. 3 producer.

Rebels staged an insurrection Friday to try to oust President Carlos Andres Perez, bombing the presidential palace and taking over an airfield and TV station.

But loyal soldiers fought the rebels and 12 hours later the government said the rebels had surrendered. At least 10 people died in the uprising, the second this year against the unpopular president. Critics accuse the government of corruption and failing to share the oil wealth with a growing number of poor.

Venezuela's oil minister, Alirio A. Parra, who was chosen this week as OPEC president, announced around midday that the Perez was in control.

Crude oil pumping by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will fall from 25.3 million barrels a day to 24.9 million in early 1993, assuming OPEC members don't cheat on their quotas, as they often have in the past.

The cartel had been discussing reductions that would have lowered the ceiling a bit further, but members failed to agree to big enough cutbacks.

For example, mega-producer Saudi Arabia said it will drop production from 8.4 million barrels a day to 8.395 million, erasing a mere trickle from the kingdom's vast petroleum supply stream.

Iran, which had gone into the meeting with a militant stance on raising the price, appears to be taking the brunt of the cuts, dropping its output from 3.9 million barrels a day to 3.49 million.

Iran's oil minister, Gholamreza Aghazadeh, who had rejected OPEC's last production levels, said he would go along with the current quotas and try to bring his production in line next week.

Iranian oil production had been just 3.2 million barrels when OPEC in September had agreed to a now-ignored daily production ceiling of 24.2 million barrels. Some analysts believe the Islamic state's bigger output contributed to a recent fall in prices.

For weeks, OPEC has been fetching less than $19 a barrel for its oil, despite a cartel target price of $21.

When asked about that, OPEC Secretary-General Subroto of Indonesia smiled and held his hands high in the air as if he were grasping for something beyond reach.

"The reference price is always a reference price," Subroto said.

The 13-member oil cartel has become a 12-member cartel, with tiny Ecuador dropping out during Friday's meeting as it had previously indicated.

But the South American nation has since early 1990 been in arrears in membership dues of about $2 million per year — the same paid by the huge Persian Gulf producers — and it wants to pump more oil than OPEC's ceilings allow.

OPEC members are: Algeria, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Venezuela.

Texas shoppers go for broke on year's heaviest shopping day

DALLAS (AP) — Texas shoppers were in fine form Friday, showing up bright and early at malls around the state to participate in what is traditionally the heaviest shopping day of the year.

John R. DiCioccio, manager of Austin's Barton Creek Mall, said he was hopeful that this holiday shopping season would be a good one.

"We all feel that this year is going to be better than last year," said DiCioccio, "I think that's the confidence the consumers are beginning to regain."

In Dallas, many consumers got off to a fast start.

"Shoppers were lined up outside the windows at eight, we don't open until nine," said Paula Griffith, a trainee at Champs Sports in Dallas' Galleria mall.

Hats, sweatshirts and tee shirts emblazoned with "Dallas Cowboys" were this year's big seller at the sporting goods store.

At Houston's Galleria, business at Macy's department store was brisk.

"It's going great. I think consumers are definitely confident about the economy at this point," said Cindy Adler, vice president and general manager for Macy's.

Shoppers also flocked to the newly renovated Sharpstown Mall in southwest Houston.

"It is very busy, very busy," said Michael Tempest, assistant mall manager. "There certainly are an awful lot of people out here."

Tempest said the mall actually was understaffed for Friday's crowd, and he had to leave the management office to work an information booth.

Some shoppers planned to spend a little more this year, but the economy did not seem to be a deciding factor in their spending habits.

"I've spent a little bit more this year than I have in the past," said Houstonian Diana Shed. "(But) as far as the economy's concerned, I believe it's really slow."

Mark Hogeboom, 45, of Kerrville, was in Dallas to do some shopping and to check on some of his stores. Hogeboom owns a chain of stores that makes custom jewelry.

"Personally I'm doing better, I think the economy is as well," said Hogeboom. "There's a business cycle that's coming back, especially in Texas."

"I'm afraid I'm spending more this year," said Marjorie Baggett, 64, in town from Lake Charles, La. for the Dallas Cowboys-New York Giants game.

"I've already spent more," Ms. Baggett said. "I don't think the economy's doing any better. Not where I am, anyway. We've had several layoffs, where I work."

Phil Smith, a partner with Arthur Anderson accounting firm, said their survey of the Dallas-Fort Worth area showed that consumers were spending cautiously but that the overall retail picture looked bright.

"Price is going to be very important," said Smith. "Service was way down the list. It basically tells me we have a different shopper than we had in the past. The shopper of the early '80s does not exist any more."

Smith said the consumers they surveyed were shopping for specific items and were not likely to buy impulsively. And they were less likely to use credit cards.

"The principle thing is that they want to stay out of debt," Smith said. "That they have no credit cards is a source of pride now."

In El Paso, Antonio Salazar was on his second wave of Christmas shopping and looking a bit haggard as his grandchildren tugged at his arms.

"We're spending more this year because prices are higher and the wages are lower," said Salazar, who said he works with the city sanitation department.

Martin Salazar, who was directing holiday traffic at the Cielo Vista mall, said he'll be spending more, but not because of any change in the presidency or his income.

"I've got a girlfriend," he said.

Donations overwhelm tornado victims

HOUSTON (AP) — Residents in tornado-stricken neighborhoods said they have been overwhelmed by the outpouring of donations from businesses, churches and individuals.

There were so many donations for the Thanksgiving holiday that relief groups had trouble giving away all their turkey dinners away in suburban Channelview, the area that suffered the most damage from the twisters.

"We've got too much, isn't that great? The generosity has been so overwhelming it almost makes it difficult to work," said Shelby Howell, vice president of the Sterling Green Community Improvement Association in Channelview.

Ship attacks persuade U.S. that use of force is needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Repeated attacks on U.N. supply ships coupled with estimates that 1.5 million Somalis might soon starve persuaded the Bush administration that military intervention was needed, officials said Friday.

While the administration insisted that U.S. troops would participate only as part of a United Nations coalition, the Pentagon said an 1,800-Marine expeditionary unit in the Indian Ocean could be called on for duty in Somalia.

The unit has been on a routine readiness mission in that area since the Persian Gulf War ended almost two years ago.

Acting Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger told CNN on Friday that relief agencies are "lucky" if 20 percent of donated food reaches their intended destination. He blamed "gangs of juvenile delinquents" and tribal organizations.

■ More national news/7C

The administration's proposal to offer up to a division of U.S. ground troops as part of a multinational coalition received backing Friday from Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., chairman of the Senate Armed Services subcommittee on Conventional Forces and Alliance Defense.

Levin called the administration's concept a "good one" and said hundreds of thousands of lives could be saved.

Administration officials were consulting Friday with U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali and with other Security Council members on how best to contribute to the U.N. effort to deal with the worsening situation in Somalia.

Eagleburger said no decisions had been made. Administration sources said Eagleburger on Wednesday offered Boutros-Ghali up to 30,000 U.S. troops as part of a multinational force to protect relief operations in Somalia.

Roger P. Winter, director of the U.S. Committee for Refugees, said the Bush administration made a "correct decision" and added: "The only remaining option for the world community is to take action to enforce peace — or at least instill some order — so that starving Somali people can be fed and cared for."

State Department press officer Joe Snyder said administration thinking was influenced by a grim report Tuesday by Boutros-Ghali.

On Wednesday, the World Food Program, a U.N. agency, was forced to suspend food shipments after one of its ships was attacked.

Warlord factions have repeatedly prevented ships from using the port at Mogadishu, the capital, and convoys carrying food to areas outside the city have been attacked repeatedly by bandits.

"We're deeply concerned about the deaths so far of an estimated 300,000 people and the fact that 1.5 million more are still at risk," Snyder said.

The United States has been flying relief supplies to Somalia, but only a small fraction of the country's food needs can be met via aerial deliveries.

"It is clear in last three weeks that the security situation has significantly deteriorated," said Andrew Natsios, Bush's special coordinator for Somalia relief.

Natsios said in a telephone interview that an effort to send 34 relief trucks to a needy area in Somalia recently ended in failure: Armed resistance forced 26 of the trucks to return and the rest are unaccounted for.

Meanwhile, some 1,800 Marines that make up the Special Purpose Marine Air-Ground Task Force are on three amphibious ships off India within several days sailing time of the Persian Gulf, and Somalia. The three ships and an accompanying supply vessel, the 1st Lt. Jack Lummus, are carrying tanks, 155mm howitzers and four AH-1 Cobra attack helicopters.

Perot still manages to cast shadow over political landscape

By Thomas L. Friedman
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Just as Ross Perot managed to reshape the 1992 presidential campaign merely by hovering around its edges, his shadow is now influencing the emerging strategy of the Clinton administration.

Perot is back in Texas, quiet for the moment, and the potential power of his backers, who are reorganizing themselves, is still uncertain. But aides to President-elect Bill Clinton are acutely aware that one in five voters chose Perot, whose backers have already warned that they intend to lobby the Clinton White House for their programs.

With that in mind, Clinton's team is tailoring parts of its public relations and governing strategy to win those voters.

"I can't believe I am talking about 1996 before Governor Clinton has even been inaugurated," said his communications director, George Stephanopoulos, "but assuming that 1996 will be a two-person race, then the Perot voters will be central to that election. They have to be part of our thinking. They will be the difference between winning and losing."

Considering that Clinton got 43 percent of the vote, Bush 39 percent and Perot 19 percent, said David Wilhelm, director of political affairs for Clinton's transition team, "it is an important political objective of ours to reach out to those folks in the coming months."

Reaching them, though, may not be so easy, because Clinton and Perot advisers have very different views about how to attract the Perot constituency: the hard-core followers who are trying to create a political organization as well as the millions of sympathizers whose political affiliation and future involvement are uncertain.

Clinton aides say that to transform those voters into Clinton supporters in four years, the president-elect will use a variety of Perot-style techniques, from town hall meetings to toll-free phone numbers, to appeal to their appreciation for unmediated, direct contact with decision makers.

At the same time, the aides say, Clinton will heavily stress issues that appeal to the hunger of Perot voters to "clean up the mess" in Washington — matters like overhauling campaign finance laws and limiting special-interest lobbying.

Clinton wants to adopt some of these techniques and tackle some of these issues for his own reasons, partly to get around the news media and partly because the issues are ones he cares about. But they are being given added attention because of the Perot factor, aides say.

While Clinton intends to focus on reducing the deficit and national debt, Perot's primary issues, he is still open to the possibility of increasing the deficit in the short term to stimulate the economy and seems uncertain about how quickly and deeply he intends to cut the national debt.

But the Clinton team believes that for Perot voters these issues are symbols of the mess in Washington. They say they can avoid taking them on immediately, provided they convey a sense that they are energetically and effectively addressing national problems like health care, job growth or welfare.

Perot was not available over the long holiday weekend to discuss the Clinton plan. But his supporters strongly disagree with the president-elect's advisers.

The Perot supporters argue that the $4 trillion national debt and the soaring deficit are not just symbols of government in gridlock; they view those problems almost theologically — like elements of a looming apocalypse that could undermine the foundations of the republic if not immediately addressed.

"You can't pay them off just by going after lobbyists or the Japanese," said James Squires, Perot's former spokesman.

"You have to go after the deficit and debt. If you look at the Perot coalition you find that it contained people from the far left and far right. They were a political zoo representing every trend. We found that the one thing, the only thing, that they could all agree on was dealing now with the debt and the deficit. Trying to attract them with anything else will be folly."

Squires said Perot's followers were organizing themselves into a formal political movement, "United We Stand," which will have a full-time staff and dues-paying members. Its first order of business, he said, will be to help Clinton get the Congress to make tough choices.

If there is not "a legitimate effort at fair-shared sacrifice to deal with the debt and the deficit," Squires said, Perot and United We Stand will try to influence the 1994 congressional elections by backing candidates who share those priorities.

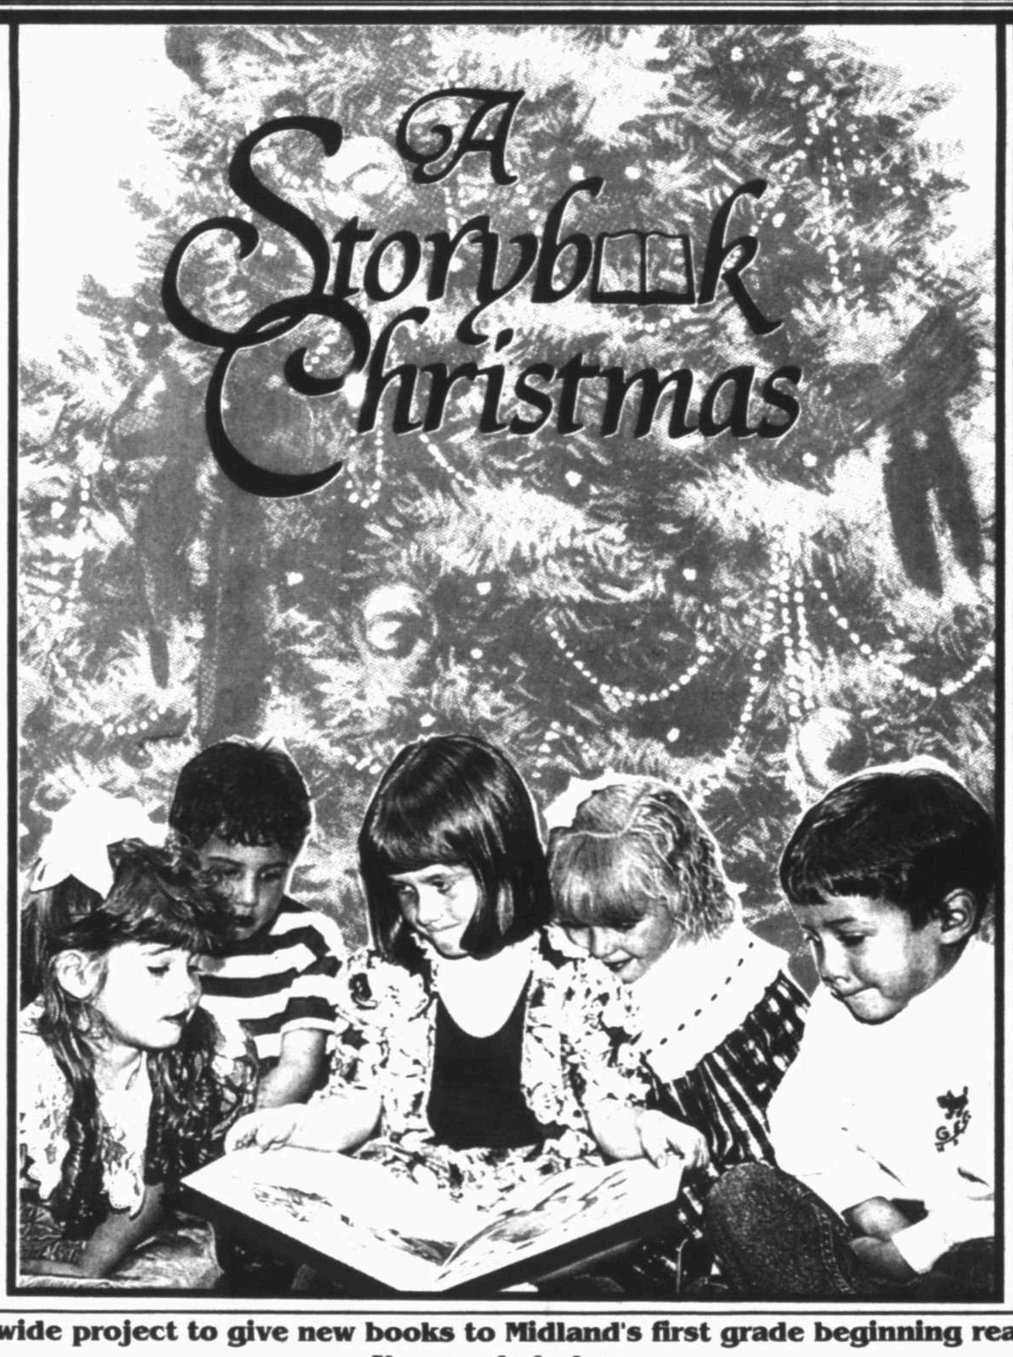

Which is why Clinton aides say that they are interested not only in appealing to the Perot voters as future Democrats but also, in the short run, in harnessing their energy for Clinton's own agenda.

"These people are alienated and angry," Stephanopoulos said. "But they are not apathetic. The question is, How do you take the negative energy that motivated their vote for Perot and turn it into positive energy to help you govern?"

Clinton has not made up his mind about how soon and how aggressively to tackle deficit reduction; the question is whether the other policies he intends to offer will really attract the Perot following.

"I am of the view that Perot's specific policies were not that important," argued Stan Greenberg, Clinton's chief pollster. "Deficit reduction was symbolic for cleaning up the mess in Washington. That is why I don't think you have to take a Perot platform and simply graft it to President-elect Clinton's. He has a lot of room to maneuver — as long as he is maneuvering forward and giving a sense that he is addressing and solving problems with a coherent plan and focus."

Police look for another suspect in Richardson murder

By Evan Ramstad
Associated Press writer

RICHARDSON — Police searched Friday for another man charged in the slaying of two teenagers at a suburban Dallas sporting goods store. Meanwhile, the father of a suspect killed by police angrily raised questions about their treatment of his son.

Police early in the day obtained an arrest warrant for Joseph Roland Lave, 28, on capital murder charges in the robbery and knife attack Wednesday night that left the two teen-age employees dead and an assistant manager seriously injured.

A dispatcher did not have details about circumstances that led to the warrant for Lave. Detectives on the case did not immediately return phone calls.

On Thursday, a Richardson police officer shot and killed suspect James Curtis Langston III, 26, as he tried to arrest him outside his apartment in Dallas. Langston, who also worked at the sporting goods store, had been identified by the assistant manager as a participant in the crime.

Langston tried to run over the Richardson officer before being shot several times, according to Dallas police investigating that aspect of the episode.

"They went there to kill him," Langston's father, James, said of Richardson police. "All the evidence will show they went there to kill him."

At Dallas police headquarters Friday, the father told TV reporters that he was sorry for the victims' families and said his son could not have killed his coworkers.

"I'll stake my life today right now that he would not slash anybody's throat," Langston said.

The store, Herman's World of Sporting Goods, was empty Friday, the busiest shopping day of the year. A yellow police cordon was tied to brick posts in front and a hand-lettered sign on the door said the store would be closed indefinitely.

Managers for other Dallas-area Herman's stores declined comment. The company's New Jersey headquarters was closed for the holiday weekend.

Meanwhile, relatives of the victims, Justin S. Marquart, 18, and Frederick J. Banzhaf, 18, scheduled memorial services for next week.

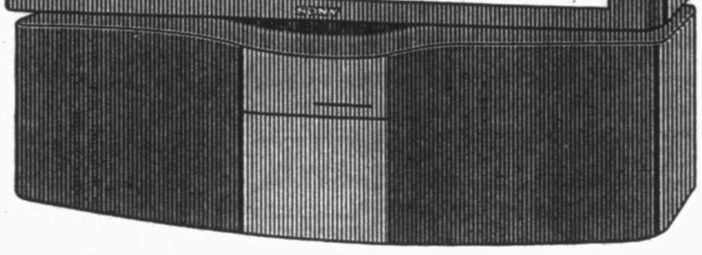

The two were close friends and active in Boy Scouts. Marquart graduated from Berkner High School this spring and had put off college for a year to earn money, while Banzhaf was an honor senior at the school.

"It just takes away a lot of meaning to life for everyone involved in this," said Sue Martin, Marquart's mother.

The assistant manager who survived the holdup, Angie King, 22, remained in serious condition in the intensive care unit of Parkland Hospital Friday. Police said Ms. King had pretended to be dead until the robbers left the store, then called for help before passing out.

Warlord backs proposed U.S. deployment to bolster position

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — A powerful warlord, apparently seeking to strengthen his own hand in Somalia's civil war, on Friday welcomed a U.S. offer to send 30,000 troops to help deliver aid to Somalia's hungry.

The troop-deployment proposal was being weighed Friday at the United Nations, where Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali was meeting with senior officials. But it was not known when he would make his decision on the U.S. offer and make a recommendation to the Security Council.

The White House said Friday that joint U.N.-U.S. military activity would be necessary to protect relief supplies in Somalia, and the Pentagon said three Marine amphibious ships were headed to the Persian Gulf region. But a Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there had been no order yet to divert the ships to Somalia.

International experts who have been advising the United Nations say more troops are needed to deliver food to the hungry. But some fear a sudden massive influx of soldiers will alienate the Somalis and destroy efforts to rebuild a government in the shattered nation.

"I think the troops are needed there, but not this drastic step," said Sture Normark, director of the Horn of Africa Program at the Life and Peace Institute in Uppsala, Sweden. The group was appointed by the United Nations to arrange consultations with international experts on Somalia.

U.S. officials have said the deployment would be aimed at ensuring safe delivery of relief supplies — not helping any faction in Somalia's chaotic civil war.

Even so, Somali warlord Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid — who once threatened to send home U.N. troops "in body bags" — apparently backed the proposal out of a belief that it would help him consolidate his own power.

At an hour-long news conference in Mogadishu, Aidid repeatedly portrayed the American proposal as a move that would help him govern.

"We believe that the new initiative announced by the government of the United States, together with the political platform developed by the SNA, can put Somalia on solid ground from which to prosper economically, politically and socially," Aidid said.

He referred to the Somali National Alliance, a shaky coalition of four clan groups and militias which Aidid controls in the south of Somalia.

Aidid's forces occupy southern Mogadishu, while those of Ali Mahdi Mohamed, the self-styled interim president, hold sway in the capital's north. After collaborating in the overthrow of former dictator Mohammed Siad Barre in January 1991, the two warlords turned on each other in a four-month battle that left more than 30,000 people dead and wounded early this year.

Their rivalry also destroyed any semblance of central government, left the country divided into clan fiefdoms and helped turn a severe drought into a horrifying famine.

A U.N. official suggested Aidid was simply seeking to curry favor by welcoming the U.S. involvement.

"Aidid wants to build his power base, so he may realize that making a quick ally of the United States won't hurt him," said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity. "He and Ali Mahdi don't really control the streets and the areas of the country where the aid convoys are being attacked."

The U.S. offer, extended Wednesday, came amid mounting calls for protection for the relief effort in Somalia.

Haunting television images of starvation and suffering in the Horn of Africa nation have brought an international outpouring of aid — but clan warfare has prevented much of it from being delivered to those who desperately need it.

Some aid workers think up to half all the food and other aid sent to Somalia this year has been lost.

The United Nations estimates 300,000 people have died from war and famine in Somalia and 2 million more are at risk of starving.

Iraq: Knew U.S. would react to Kuwait invasion

NEW YORK (AP) — The Iraqi government did not take U.S. Ambassador April Glaspie's July 1990 comments as a green light to invade Kuwait a week later, Iraq's deputy prime minister said in an interview published Friday.

"We didn't have any false illusion about the position of the United States," Tariq Aziz told USA Today. "We knew the United States would have a strong reaction."

Saddam Hussein did not expect Washington to "sit and watch" the invasion, Aziz added.

Administration critics said Glaspie's remark to Saddam that the United States took "no position" on Iraq-Kuwait border and oil disputes as evidence President Bush misread the situation in the days before Iraq's Aug. 2, 1990, invasion of Kuwait.

Angolan cease-fire holds; reports of military buildup

■More world news/ 12C

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — A cease-fire between government and rebels appeared to be holding Friday, but U.S. diplomats here reported military buildups in some provinces and warned the situation remained close to the flash point.

The rebels are unhappy over Sept. 29-30 election results.

Joseph Schreiber, spokesman for the U.S. liaison office in Luanda, said the agreement reached at Namibe, Angola, on Thursday to respect a May 1991 truce — while welcome — did not lessen the danger.

"Opposing armies are so concentrated in contested areas, and communication is so poor ... that field commanders may not receive — or obey — cease-fire orders," Schreiber said.

He said reports spoke of both the government and Jonas Savimbi's UNITA rebels positioning troops for possible action east and northeast of Luanda, the capital.

Moving troops into offensive positions would violate the Namibe accords, which sought to reinforce the shaky peace agreement that ended this southern African nation's 16-year civil war in May 1991.

The peace pact held until September, when Savimbi lost in his race for president against President Jose Eduardo dos Santos of the ruling MPLA party —the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola.

International observers said the elections in this former Portuguese colony were generally fair, but Savimbi's National Union for the Total Independence of Angola refused to accept electoral defeat and threatened to renew the war. At least 2,500 people were killed in Luanda alone when fighting broke out Oct. 31.

U.N. special representative Margaret Anstee said the Namibe agreement specified that UNITA would take part in both a multiparty parliament and a government of national unity.

Fire guts Vienna's historic Hofburg Palace

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Fire swept through a historic wing of the Hofburg Palace on Friday as police, historians and passers-by rushed to rescue priceless books, crown treasures and the city's famous Lipizzaner stallions.

Flames flared into the night sky when the roof collapsed an hour after firefighters arrived. Gusts of wind spread the blaze to adjacent buildings but firemen quickly doused those flames.

Worried grooms chased 69 Lipizzaners out of their stalls at the Spanish Riding School across the street although they were never directly threatened by the blaze.

Passers-by caught the white stallions as they went skittishly through a pedestrian zone and led them to a park on the Hofburg grounds. One woman had her teeth knocked out by an agitated horse.

Three of the highly trained horses suffered superficial scrapes, apparently from jumping over park benches, riding school director Jaromir Oulehla told Austrian TV.

AP Laserphoto

Flames shoot up from a historic wing of the Hofburg Palace in Vienna, Friday. Gusts of wind spread the blaze to adjacent buildings but firemen quickly doused the flames. The fire threatened priceless books and the city's famous Lipizzaner horses.

By dawn more than 350 firefighters from Vienna and surrounding towns had brought the fire under control. But smoke and soot continued to billow over Josef's Square.

Charred roof beams balanced precariously over the gutted wing built in the 18th century on commission by Emperor Charles VI. Sheets of metal hung twisted like stray curtains down the facade and water gushed down inner walls.

A gaping-roofed ruin was all that remained of the ornate, recently renovated Redoutensaal that saw the waltzing splendor of imperial balls and historic milestones in the East-West detente that culminated in the end of the Cold War.

Former U.S. President Jimmy Carter and the late Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev signed the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty II under its brilliant chandeliers in 1979.

An East-West Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe that helped fuel the anti-Communist revolutions which swept Eastern Europe in 1989 met there. The offices of the secretariat were completely destroyed, said Peter Mikl, a secretariat spokesman.

The blaze occurred just a week after flames engulfed historic Windsor Castle in England, destroying the St. George's banquet hall.

Schott's slur

NEW YORK — A member of baseball's executive council said Friday that he intended to ask the group to take action against Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott.

The council member, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said the group hadn't yet discussed Schott, who has been accused of making racist and anti-Semitic remarks. The council meets next on Dec. 7 at Louisville, Ky.

"I don't think we can let those statements go and brush it off," the council member said. "I'm not not sure exactly what will be done. I don't like it because it reflects on all of baseball."

Toon retires

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — Al Toon has proved he is one of the more intelligent players in football by getting out of the NFL.

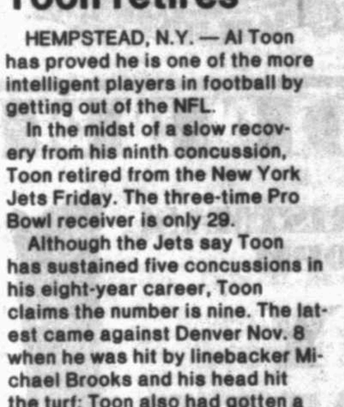

In the midst of a slow recovery from his ninth concussion, Toon retired from the New York Jets Friday. The three-time Pro Bowl receiver is only 29.

Although the Jets say Toon has sustained five concussions in his eight-year career, Toon claims the number is nine. The latest came against Denver Nov. 8 when he was hit by linebacker Michael Brooks and his head hit the turf; Toon also had gotten a knee to the head a few plays earlier.

Toon was the Jets' most valuable player in 1986, '87 and '88. The team's No. 1 draft choice in 1985 — he was taken 10th overall, the first receiver chosen in a draft that also included Jerry Rice — Toon finished his career with 517 receptions for 6,605 yards.

Permian, San Angelo host playoffs today

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Odessa Permian's record setting Panthers and San Angelo's tip-toeing Bobcats are keeping the District 4-5A state football playoff fires burning, but the road appears to be getting tougher in Playoff Week III.

Permian (10-1) will host Lewisville (10-1-1) at 2 p.m. today in Ratliff Stadium's Class 5A Small School region contest where all tickets at the gate will be $8. San Angelo (8-4) will host a 5A Big School quarterfinal match against Euless Trinity (7-5), also at 2 p.m., in San Angelo Stadium. Not only are the playoff fires burning, but the home fires are also in the corner of the 4-5A powers.

Permian vs. Lewisville

Mojo is on a record tear through the 1992 playoffs, scoring a record 122 points in two outings. Each week Permian has put 61 points on the boards, a school record tied by the 1992 team.

However, Lewisville comes into the game with eight straight victories after a tie to Plano East and a loss to Grapevine way back in September. There is also the fact that the Farmers have been quite respectable against Mojo in two past playoff meetings.

In the last game ever played at old W.T. Barrett Stadium in Odessa, Lewisville tied Permian, 14-14, in a 1981 bi-district game and advanced on penetrations. Lewisville turned around and lost, 15-8, to Fort Worth Eastern Hills the next week.

Permian defeated the Farmers in a tough 17-7 bi-district contest in 1978 in a game played in Abilene's Shotwell Stadium.

Lewisville also defeated Abilene Cooper, 13-10, in a Texas Stadium bi-district meeting in 1979 and went all the way to the semifinals before losing to Temple that year. The Farmers own an overall 1-1-1 record against 4-5A in the playoffs.

Since playing Lewisville in that tie game in Odessa, Mojo has posted a 16-1 playoff record in games played at Ratliff Stadium. This is the deepest playoff penetration for Lewisville since 1986 for the Farmers when the school was hurt by the opening of two schools in the Lewisville area, Lewisville Marcus and The Colony.

■ Nebraska's 12th-ranked Cornhuskers dress down Oklahoma, 33-9.

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — It took a while, but Nebraska's offense finally got rolling Friday afternoon. Once that happened, Oklahoma was in serious trouble.

The 12th-ranked Cornhuskers, behind the running of Calvin Jones, scored 23 second-half points to beat Oklahoma 33-9 and keep alive its hopes of winning the Big Eight championship.

Jones had 137 yards and two touchdowns as the Cornhuskers — held to 6 yards in the first quarter — rolled up 400 overall. Derek Brown added 88 yards, putting both him and Jones over 1,000 yards for the year.

Nebraska only led 10-9 at halftime, but scored a touchdown on its first possession of the second half and took control from there.

"Our first drive of the second half was a big momentum shift for us," coach Tom Osborne said. "Our strength up front began to show. I was really pleased with the way we played."

Mustangs add state title No. 2

■ Midland Christian routs Fort Worth Southwest Christian 46-0 for its second straight TAPPS six-man championship.

By Jeff Wilson
MRT Correspondent

ABILENE — James Blake knew he had something special about midway through Midland Christian's football season.

When his Mustangs upset 6-man powerhouse Christoval in week five of the 1992 season, Blake knew all the pieces had fallen into place.

Blake added the final piece to his puzzle Friday night as the Mustangs rolled over Fort Worth Southwest Christian 46-0 to earn their second-straight TAPPS 6-man state championship.

"We didn't expect this," Blake said after his team posted a perfect 11-0 season. "We knew we had something special after we won our first ballgame. We just wanted to improve each week, but the Christoval game was the turning point. That game proved that we could play with anybody."

The problem now is if anyone can play with Midland Christian.

Rankin playoff road ends

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

SEMINOLE — Bryan Welps joined the Hart football team after spending most of his youth in Grandfalls, a District 8-A school that knows all about losing to Rankin.

Now the 230-pound Hart move-in knows the other side of an outcome with Rankin.

Welps contributed a 26-yard field goal and — more importantly — a pair of momentum-ending sacks in the fourth quarter as the Hart Longhorns pushed the seventh-ranked Red Devils out of the state playoffs with a 24-7 regional win Friday night at Wigwam Stadium.

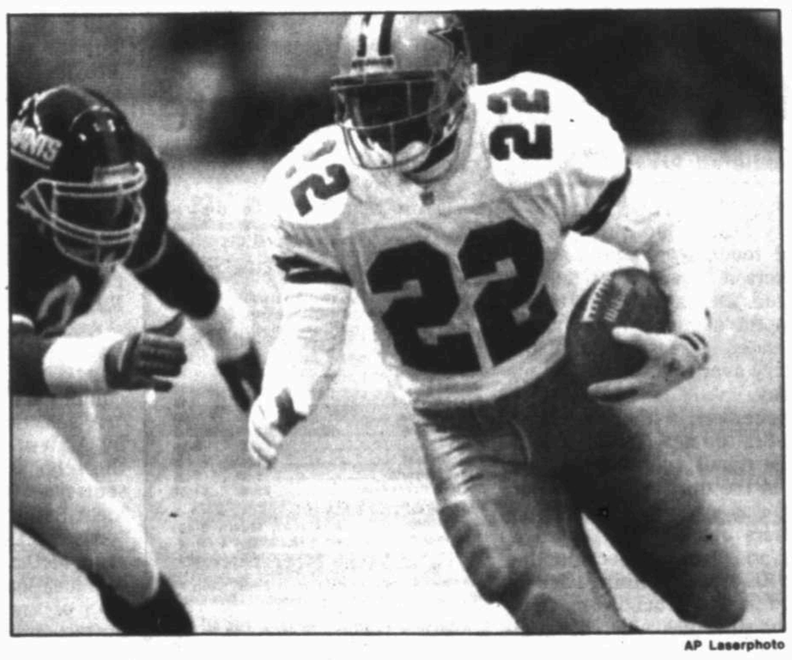

"I've lost to Rankin plenty of times. This is the first time I've ever beat Rankin and it feels pretty good," Welps said after the 'Horns moved to 12-1 to advance to the quarterfinals against Sudan.

Rankin, which smashed Anton 55-6 in the area round last week, failed to win what would have been a third straight berth in the quarters, ending the campaign with a 10-2 mark.

"This football team grew up a lot this year and I'm proud of how these kids exceeded our expectations," said Rankin coach Raul Sanchez, whose squad boasts just five seniors. "We knew Hart was going to be tough. They're big, they're physical and they run to the ball well."

The Longhorns also run with it well. Quarterback Jason Aven rushed 16 times for 156 yards and tailback Cesar Salas carted it for 123 yards on 25 tries as the 'Horns piled up 354 yards on the ground.

Emmitt Smith is fast gaining a reputation as the NFL's best back.

Smith compared to Payton

By Denne H. Freeman

IRVING — Better than Walter Payton? Leonard Marshall thinks Emmitt Smith has reached greatness equal to or better than the former Chicago Bears star.

Although Marshall was upset because he thought the Dallas Cowboys ran up the score in a 30-3 Thanksgiving Day victory, the Giants defensive end praised Smith, who scored two touchdowns and rushed for 120 yards against a stacked defense.

"I was impressed with Emmitt," Marshall said. "I think he could be the best of all time. Better than Walter Payton."

Chaps suffer twin killing

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

ODESSA — Ever get that deja vu feeling?

The last time Midland College played the Friday following Thanksgiving, it was 1991 at the Odessa College Classic. The team the Chaps played — and lost to — was Connors State.

Take two: MC fell to Connors 94-89 Friday, the day after Turkey Day, in — you got it — the OC Classic.

Last year, MC was forced to contain a 7-0 center named David Dean.

This year, take two.

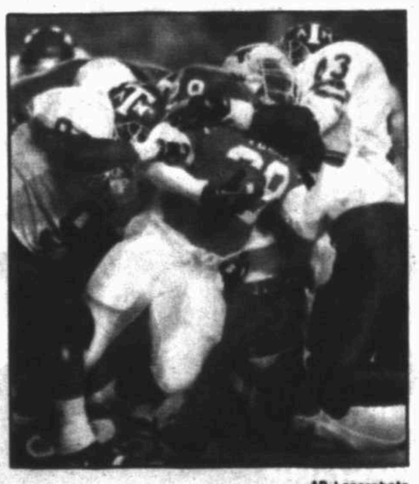

That's two, as in twin 7-0 brothers Sammie and Simeon Haley, of South Carolina. If the two were looking for a nickname, they could call themselves The World Trade Centers.

MC, which trailed the entire game, finally closed the gap to within one, 81-80, after scoring eight unanswered points, and had a chance to win had Connors not repeatedly made down-the-stretch free throws to keep the win out of reach.

After MC had closed it to one, Connors made 8-of-13 shots from the line in the final 3:43 of the game.

MC's last legitimate shot at winning came with Connors holding an 93-89 lead with six seconds left. But when Chap guard Dominique Coursey inbounded to Texas A&M's 'Wrecking Crew' defense tackles Texas' Phil Brown.

A&M revelry gets under UT's skin

Associated Press

HOUSTON — In beating Texas, fourth-ranked Texas A&M left the humbled Longhorns with a mixture of admiration and anger.

The Aggies, hoping their second straight trip to the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day will be a national championship matchup, defeated Texas 34-13 Thursday night, improving their record to 12-0.

As the game ended, most of the Aggies players ran to mid-field and did a taunting dance toward the Texas side of Memorial Stadium in one final act of disdain for the Longhorns.

"They didn't show a lot of class," Texas quarterback Peter Gardere said.

"I don't think that dance they did was very appropriate. You would think they would represent the university better."

During the pregame show, the Aggies players ran through the Texas band as it left the field. At the half, the Texas band returned the favor, running through the Aggies team as it returned to the field.

"I didn't appreciate the way they treated our band," Gardere said. "They didn't show us much respect."

Gardere and the Longhorns didn't question the Aggies skills, however.

The Aggies, with the best record among the three unbeaten and untied teams in the national rankings, beat the Longhorns on the ground and in the air with a three-touchdown performance by running back Rodney Thomas and a strong passing show by Corey Pullig.

"Their talent level is unreal," Texas safety Lance Gunn said. "They are the high water mark in the SWC (Southwest Conference). They have the talent stockpiled. I don't know how they decide who's going to start."

The Aggies have only five seniors on their two-deep roster. Tailbacks Greg Hill and Thomas are sophomores and Pullig is a freshman.

Thomas and Hill shared time at tailback and both did damage to the Texas defense. Thomas rushed 78 yards and had touchdown runs of 6, 6 and 2 yards. Hill gained 100 yards on 23 carries.

Hurricanes test waters at SDSU

Faulk could play in possible Heisman showdown with Torretta

By Dick Brinster
AP Sports Writer

San Diego State had hoped to play a bowl game in its home stadium. It didn't work out that way, but the Aztecs won't have to worry about a lack of incentive when they wrap up a disappointing season tonight.

The opponent is top-ranked Miami (10-0), whose season would be destroyed by a loss to San Diego State (5-4-1), the failed favorite to win the Western Athletic Conference title and make the Holiday Bowl. But the Aztecs, who will watch five other conference teams go to bowls, have a chance to do something nobody has done in 28 straight games — beat the Hurricanes.

And, if they need additional motivation, how about the Heisman Trophy race? The battle between San Diego State's Marshall Faulk and Miami's Gino Torretta could be settled in the game.

Could is the key word, because Faulk has a sprained knee and his status is in doubt. But the Aztecs' running back won't get caught up in the Heisman hype even if he plays.

"This is just another game," he said. "I don't take it as a personal duel to prove anything to anybody."

Torretta, the Miami quarterback, virtually echoed that sentiment.

"We don't play against each other," he said. "I'm on the sidelines and I won't even be watching him."

Elsewhere today, it will be No. 6 Florida (8-2) at No. 3 Florida State (9-1), No. 5 Notre Dame (8-1-1) at No. 19 Southern California (6-3-1), Georgia Tech (5-5) at No. 9 Georgia (8-2), No. 16 Mississippi State (7-3) at No. 24 Mississippi (7-3), and No. 18 Tennessee (7-3) at Vanderbilt (4-6).

On Friday, No. 12 Nebraska — getting 137 yards and two touchdowns from Calvin Jones — beat Oklahoma 33-9, meaning the Cornhuskers (8-2) will win the Big Eight and gain a berth in the Orange Bowl with a victory or tie next Saturday against Kansas State. The loss cost Oklahoma (5-4-2) a berth in the Aloha Bowl, which went to Kansas, and gave the Sooners their worst finish since a 3-7 in 1965.

■ COLLEGE FOOTBALL SATURDAY

The Thanksgiving weekend began Thursday when No. 2 Alabama (11-0) beat Auburn (5-5-1) 17-0, and No. 4 Texas A&M (12-0) also stayed unbeaten with a 34-13 victory that kept Texas (6-5) out of the Hancock Bowl.

Miami coach Dennis Erickson has prepared his defense for a battle with Faulk.

"I think Marshall will play," Erickson said. "He's going to gain his yards because he's a great back. Bottom line for us is winning the game, so we have to keep him out of the end zone."

The Hurricanes did that last season in a 39-12 victory at Miami, despite Faulk gaining 154 of his 1,429 yards. This season, as he tries to become the first sophomore to win the Heisman, Faulk has rushed for 1,630 yards.

Torretta has completed 209 of 367 passes (56.9 percent) for 2,750 yards with 18 touchdowns and seven interceptions. He will oppose a defense ranked 79th of 107 teams against the pass.

The senior quarterback passed for a school-record 485 yards against San Diego State last season.

No. 6 Florida at No. 3 Florida St.

"I would think it's to our advantage to catch them when we're catching them," Seminoles coach Bobby Bowden said of the Gators, who must play Alabama next Saturday for the Southeastern Conference title and a berth in the Sugar Bowl.

"We want to beat Florida State, and we want to beat Alabama," Florida quarterback Shane Matthews said. "Hopefully we can start both this week."

No. 5 Notre Dame at No. 19 Southern Cal

"We all are sick of it," Trojans coach Larry Smith said of Notre Dame's nine-game winning streak — five on his watch — in the series.

Irish coach Lou Holtz can understand Smith's frustration.

"We've won six games against them since I've been at Notre Dame, and they could have easily won five of them," he said.

Georgia Tech at No. 9 Georgia

Yellow Jackets coach Bill Lewis doesn't think either Torretta or Faulk deserves the Heisman. His candidate is Georgia running back Garrison Hearst, who leads the nation with 18 touchdowns and has rushed for 1,378 yards.

"I think that this season he is the best college football player on the field today," Lewis said.

No. 16 Mississippi St. at No. 24 Mississippi

The Bulldogs are going to the Peach Bowl, Ole Miss to the Liberty. The last time both made the postseason simultaneously was 1940. But neither won the state's bragging rights because they played to a 10-10 tie.

The game — long played at a neutral site — is being staged at Oxford for the first time since 1972.

No. 18 Tennessee at Vanderbilt

This will be the final regular-season game for retiring Volunteers coach Johnny Majors, 14-1 against Vanderbilt. Defensive tackle Alan Young of the Commodores would like to give him something to forget.

"I've got nothing against coach Majors personally," Young said. "I just hate Tennessee."

Lee Rebels win twice in Northside tourney

Staff report

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland Lee Rebels climbed to 4-0 on the young basketball season here Friday with two victories, beating Uvalde 94-55 and San Antonio Clark 93-61 in the Northside Invitational basketball tournament.

Lee has now busted the 90-point barrier in three consecutive games. Lee defeated Uvalde last Saturday with 90 points and turned around Friday for 94 more points as Martin Lattibeaudiere led the way with 20 points.

Ryan Tucker made his Rebel debut in that game with 15 points while David Wilson had 13 and Undra Graves 12.

Against Clark in the second game Friday, Wilson bombed in a season high 33 points to lead the Rebels. Wilson's 13 points in the first game was a season low, but came back big.

Lattibeaudiere had a season low 16 points and Corodon Watson had 11 points.

Lee meets San Antonio Churchill at noon today. The winner will advance to the 8 p.m. championship game while the loser will play at 5:30 p.m. in the battle for third place.

"We're playing for a medal no matter what," said Jon House, Lee coach. "We're pretty pleased with the first day of the tournament."

Red Sox re-sign Hatcher, Toronto gets Coles inked

Associated Press

NEW YORK — While Barry Bonds and other marquee free agents continued to wait, Billy Hatcher re-signed with the Boston Red Sox on Friday and Darnell Coles signed with the Toronto Blue Jays.

Bonds, the former Pittsburgh Pirates outfielder, is the most prized free agent of the offseason and is expected to get a contract worth at least $30 million over five years. The Atlanta Braves, New York Yankees and Los Angeles Dodgers are expected to be the most interested teams, but serious negotiations haven't started.

"It's like everybody's sparring," said Bonds' agent, Dennis Gilbert. "Nobody's taking full swings yet."

Juan Guzman's agent, Barry Meister, said that the pitcher may not sign until next week. Meister, who says he is talking seriously with seven teams, originally said Guzman intended to sign by the end of the week.

In the meantime, Hatcher and Boston agreed to a $1.4 million, two-year deal. Toronto and Coles agreed to a $1 million, two-year contract.

Hatcher, who made $1.65 million last season, was acquired by Boston from Cincinnati in July for Tom Bolton. Hatcher hit .238 in 75 games with one home run and 23 RBIs. He has a lifetime batting average of .263 in 1,004 major league games.

Hatcher, 32, gets a $100,000 signing bonus, $700,000 in 1993 and $800,000 in 1994. He can earn an additional $250,000 per year in performance bonuses.

Boston had declined to exercise a $2.1 million option and instead paid him a $400,000 buyout.

Coles, 30, hit .312 for the Cincinnati Reds last season with three home runs and 18 RBIs in 55 games. He sprained his right ankle on Aug. 25 and spent the rest of the season on the disabled list.

Coles has spent parts of 10 seasons in the major leagues and has a .247 average with 63 homers. His best season was with Detroit in 1986, when he hit .273 with 20 homers and 86 RBIs.

He made $395,000 last season. Under his new deal, Coles gets a $200,000 signing bonus and $400,000 each for the next two seasons. He can earn an additional $100,000 a year in performance bonuses.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Barry Lunney Jr. threw a 39-yard touchdown pass to Ron Dickerson Jr. and E.D. Jackson scored 2½ minutes later to blow the game open as Arkansas ended its season with a 30-6 victory over Louisiana State on Friday.

Dickerson, with his father Ron Sr., the new Temple coach in the stands, scored with 10:29 left in the third quarter to put Arkansas on top 16-0. Orlando Watters quickly intercepted a pass and Jackson became the first Razorback running back to run for two touchdowns in a season since 1990 when he went in from the 1 with 7:59 remaining.

Arkansas expected to name new coach soon

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas athletic directrr Frank Broyles said Friday that he expects the university to name a football coach by Monday, but was evasive about who would get the job.

Broyles said Joe Kines, named interim coach one game into the season, has "proven he is trusted and has the confidence of the players and most of the fans."

He made the remarks shortly after the Razorbacks ended a 3-7-1 season with a 30-6 victory over Louisiana State.

"Does the program need Joe Kines or is Joe Kines right for the program?" Broyles said. "We'll decide in the next two days."

"I've done all I can in trying to get this job," Kines said. "Things will work out for the best. A decision will be made and Arkansas will move forward. I am hopeful but it's out of my hands. Coach Broyles will make the best decision and I will support it, whatever it is."

Kines had never been a head coach in college before this year and Broyles talked about the proven track record of former football coach Lou Holtz, former basketball coach Eddie Sutton and current basketball coach Nolan Richardson.

Asked if Kines had established a track record, Broyles said: "That's what I will evaluate and tell the committee."

A selection committee, headed by Al Witte, a law professor and the school's NCAA faculty representative, reportedly is going to meet Saturday.

Also on the committee are Roderick McDavis, dean of the college of education; Robert Bacon, chairman of the faculty athletic committee; and Keli McGregor, the assistant athletic director for student life and academic support.

Witte said during Friday's game that the committee planned to meet on Saturday, but he expected nothing definitive to be announced that day.

"I wouldn't want to close the door on some 100-to-1 shot or some 50-to-1 shot," he said.

Still believed to be a frontrunner along with Kines is Danny Ford.

Kines, the Razorbacks' defensive coordinator in 1991, was promoted to interim head coach when Jack Crowe was fired after a season-opening loss to The Citadel. A couple of weeks deep in the season, Kines called Ford, the former Clemson coach and an old coaching buddy, for help. From the outset, Ford has said he is on the staff to help Kines land the head coaching job.

Broyles said recently that he had put together a short list of candidates. He said that Kines was on the list and that Ford was not.

HUSKERS: OU's worst season since '65

(From 1B)

Eight) will go to the Orange Bowl as conference champs if they beat Kansas State next weekend in Japan.

Oklahoma (5-4-2, 3-2-2) dominated the game early, then got run over by the Cornhuskers. By losing, the Sooners lost their chance to go to a bowl and concluded their worst season since going 3-7 in 1965.

"Our team, they're not disappointed in themselves," coach Gary Gibbs said. "They know they played hard. We've just got to continue to build."

The Sooners outgained Nebraska 142-6 in the first quarter, limiting the Cornhuskers to just one possession. But they trailed 7-3 when the quarter ended. The touchdown came when linebacker Ed Stewart intercepted a pass from Cale Gundy and returned it 50 yards for a score.

The Sooners were not able to score a touchdown despite moving the ball well in the first half. Drives stalled at the Nebraska 16, 5 and 26-yard lines, leading each time to field goals by Scott Blanton.

"You always want touchdowns because of the power and abilities of Nebraska," Gibbs said. "Even at that time it's a heck of a ball game. We had some opportunities."

Tommie Frazier ended Nebraska's opening drive of the second half by hitting tight end Gerald Armstrong on a 24-yard touchdown pass.

Jones said that drive "was a big help. We had lots of emotion. The line did a tremendous job of kicking them out. We knew it was important to go down and score."

Oklahoma threatened immediately after that, driving to the 22 before Gundy was intercepted again, this time at the 1.

Oklahoma stopped Nebraska and forced a punt, but Dewell Brewer failed to field it and the ball died at the 7-yard line. Three plays later, Gundy was sacked in the end zone for a safety and Nebraska had a 19-9 lead.

Jones scored on a 14-yard run to give the Cornhuskers a 26-9 lead. His 2-yard run late in the fourth quarter finished the scoring.

Nebraska's defense did its part. After giving up the 142 first-quarter yards, the Cornhuskers only allowed 91 the rest of the way.

"At times, just like during the season, we didn't get the breaks we needed," Oklahoma linebacker Reggie Barnes said. "We met some adversity and weren't able to overcome it."

Gundy was booed loudly on the two possessions after the safety. He refused to be interviewed after the game.

Blanton's three kicks gave him 14 field goals in a row, breaking the Big Eight record of 11 straight set by Dodge Schwartzburg of Kansas in 1984 and Tim Lashar of Oklahoma in 1985.

Brown suffered a shoulder separation and will not play against Kansas State. Osborne said he expected Brown to be ready for the bowl game.

Indiana wins title over Pirates

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Calbert Cheaney bettered his career-high for the second straight game by scoring 36 points and No. 4 Indiana beat No. 6 Seton Hall 78-74 Friday night to win the preseason NIT.

Cheaney, a 6-foot-6 senior forward, scored 34 points Wednesday night in the Hoosiers' semifinal win over Florida State.

They prevailed in the championship game despite not scoring a field goal in the final 4:59.

Indiana (4-0) led 61-57 with 6:35 left and Cheaney scored its next eight points, the last two coming on two free throws with 4:16 left that gave the Hoosiers a 69-60 lead.

Terry Dehere then hit a 3-pointer with 3:44 left and Arturas Katnishovas added a free throw 42 seconds later to get the Pirates (3-1) within five. Indiana, usually one of the better free-throw shooting teams in the country, then struggled from the foul line, but Seton Hall couldn't take advantage.

The Hoosiers made just 9 of 18 free throws in the last 2:26, but the closest Seton Hall could get was three points, the last time at 77-74 with 13 seconds to play on a tip-in by Karnishovas. Greg Graham then made one of two free throws with 10 seconds left.

Cheaney, who averaged 18.8 points over his first three seasons, was named the tournament's most valuable player. Graham added 14 points for the Hoosiers and Henderson had 11.

Karnishovas finished with 24 points and Dehere had 17 for the Pirates (3-1).

Indiana made its first six shots of the game and jumped to a 15-3 lead. The Hoosiers extended it to 29-16, but Seton Hall closed the half with an impressive defensive performance to trail 37-33 at halftime.

No. 21 UCLA beat No. 7 Florida State 86-83 to take third place.

NEW YORK — UCLA scored four points in the final 4.3 seconds Friday night and the 21st-ranked Bruins came up with a wild victory over No. 7 Florida State to take third place.

Fourth-ranked Indiana met No. 6 Seton Hall for the championship.

A 3-pointer by Bob Sura with 4:51 to play gave Florida State (2-2) an 81-73 lead with 4:51 to play. Except for two free throws by Doug Edwards with 1:30 left, Florida State would not score again as the Seminoles committed six turnovers and missed four shots from the field.

UCLA (3-1), which led 15 points early in the second half, got within 83-82 with 1:13 left on a 3-pointer by Shon Tarver. Those were the last points scored until the final wild seconds.

Florida State called its last timeout with 10 seconds to play to avoid a 5-second call on the inbounds. When the ball was finally inbounded it was stolen by Tyus Edney of UCLA. His long pass found Mitchell Butler, who laid it in and was fouled with 4.3 seconds to play. Butler missed the free throw, but Richard Petruska of UCLA tipped it in.

Rockets win 7th of last 8

■ NBA ROUNDUP

MIAMI — Hakeem Olajuwon took advantage of the absence of three Miami centers by hitting 16 of 20 from the floor and scoring 33 points Friday to lead the Houston Rockets to their seventh win in their last eight games, 101-93, over the Heat.

Olajuwon added 17 rebounds and eight blocked shots, as Miami played without pivotmen Rony Seikaly and Alec Kessler, who each have the flu, and John Salley, who has a pulled right hamstring.

Olajuwon scored eight of his points during a crucial 20-3 run that put Houston up 70-53 with 4:36 left in the third period.

Miami responded with a 21-8 spurt to close to 78-74 with 9:36 remaining, but the Rockets used a 9-2 run to go up 91-80 at the 5:03 mark and put the game out of reach.

SuperSonics 127, Mavericks 104

DALLAS — Gary Payton scored a career-high 31 points — his second straight career-best game — as the Seattle SuperSonics cruised past the hapless Dallas Mavericks.

Dana Barros added 26 points, two off his career-high, and Eddie Johnson scored 20 as the Sonics improved to 8-3. Seattle notched its first back-to-back wins since Nov. 14.

Derek Harper scored 21 points to lead Dallas, the worst team in the NBA at 1-8. Harper has scored at least 20 points in four straight games.

Bucks 115, 76ers 111

PHILADELPHIA — Blue Edwards made 10 of 15 shots, including a crucial jumper with 39 seconds left, leading the Milwaukee Bucks to a victory over the Philadelphia 76ers.

Edwards finished with 26 points and Alvin Robertson added 18 for the Bucks, who won their fourth of six road games. The Bucks had a road record of 6-35 last season.

Jeff Hornacek had 14 points and 16 assists for Philadelphia, which saw its home record drop to 1-4 with its third straight loss.

Cavaliers 122, Hawks 101

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Gerald Wilkins outscored his brother Dominique 20-13 and Cleveland made its first 11 shots in the second half as the Cavaliers beat the Atlanta Hawks.

Cleveland ended the Hawks' three-game winning streak and beat Atlanta for the sixth straight time. The Hawks went 0-5 against Cleveland last year, losing the five games by an average margin of 23 points.

Celtics 111, Hornets 102

BOSTON — Robert Parish scored 24 points and held Alonzo Mourning to 5-of-18 shooting as the Boston Celtics ended a five-game Charlotte winning streak by beating the Hornets.

Xavier McDaniel added 25 points and 11 rebounds for the Celtics, who have won two games in a row for the first time this season.

Magic 130, Pacers 116

INDIANAPOLIS — Scott Skiles scored 32 points and Shaquille O'Neal had 21 points and 11 rebounds in front of a rare sellout crowd at Market Square Arena as the Orlando Magic defeated the Indiana Pacers.

Timberwolves 102, Bullets 83

BALTIMORE — Chuck Person scored 17 of his game-high 26 points in the first quarter as the Minnesota Timberwolves took an early 12-point lead and stayed comfortably ahead throughout in a victory over the Washington Bullets.

Suns 121, Warriors 107

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley carried Phoenix in the first half and Danny Ainge scored 16 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter, leading the Suns past the Golden State Warriors.

Nets 112, Jazz 110

SALT LAKE CITY — Sam Bowie had 27 points and 18 rebounds as the New Jersey Nets broke an 11-game losing streak to the Jazz, extending Utah's baffling home-court drought.

Lakers 98, Trail Blazers 90

PORTLAND, Ore. — James Worthy scored 19 points and Los Angeles frustrated Portland's sputtering offense with a big lineup as the Lakers beat the Trail Blazers.

The Blazers, who lost their second in a row after opening the season with eight straight wins, trailed throughout after the opening minutes and were down by 15 with four minutes to play.

Nuggets 109, Clippers 106

LOS ANGELES — Chris Jackson made a 3-point shot from midcourt at the final buzzer to give the Denver Nuggets a victory over the Los Angeles Clippers.

Jackson, who finished with 19 points, made the Nuggets' only perimeter basket in the final 8½ minutes after the Clippers' Danny Manning missed his second shot in the final minute at the other end.

CHAPS: Drew hits 29 points in MC loss

(From 1B)

Richard Edwards at mid-court, Edwards bobbled the throw, turning the ball over to the Cowboys.

Earlier, with just two minutes gone in the second half, MC trailed by 15 but then outscored the Cowboys 12-2 over the next five minutes to close the gap to 59-54.

The Chaps' run came after the team upped its tempo and forced Connors out of its slower, preferred style of play.

"They finally got aggressive," MC head coach Steve Green said of his Chaps. "We didn't play at all in the first half."

Whether it be from point guard Frank Harris, who shot 13-of-24 from the field, or the Haley brothers, who combined for 12 points and 14 rebounds, the telling tale for the 10-2 Chaps was how the Cowboys beat them repeatedly underneath.

"They (the Haley twins) really intimidated Ari (Rodriques, MC's 6-8 forward)," Green said. "They just had their way at the point. (Harris) was shooting it from the paint all night."

Connors State, now 10-1, shot 52.2 percent from the field, compared to a mere 40.5 percent for the Chaps.

"Maybe people will take a look at us now," said Connors State head coach Bill Muse, who feels his team is worthy of a Top 20 JUCO ranking. "We do have a great shooting team. I thought we executed well, which is something we had to do. Midland had a chance to break us but they didn't.

"We knew coming in that Midland was a good team, so I told our guys to play like they were down 10 points the whole game."

Demeitreus Drew led the Chaps with 29 points and 10 rebounds. Rodriques also had 10 rebounds, but was just 4-of-12 shooting from his low post position. Luis Cambraia had his most complete game as a Chap, hitting 4-of-10 three pointers for a season-high 20 points. And Kelon Haynie, lost since the first game of the season with a knee injury, returned to pitch in six points and six rebounds. Haynie started the second half when Terrance Rone replaced first-half starterShawn Morris at the point in the second half.

"It doesn't take a brain surgeon (to figure out what went wrong)," Green said. "Look at some of the guys who have been contributing who didn't tonight.

"It (point guard) is the weakness this team has. I'm moving Terrance there. At least he's got guts and will give you his best."

MC will close out the OC Classic with a 6 p.m. game today against Lamar, the same Runnin' Lope team the Chaps struggled but beat earlier last Monday.

Other Saturday scores from the Classic had Ranger defeating the 'Lopes, 137-118, and Odessa College downing the Abilene Christian junior varsity, 111-69.

Connors State College (94) — Frank Harris 13-24 5-10 32; Cyrus Jones 6-14 5-7 21; Kermit Blakely 7-9 1-1 17; Simeon Haley 3-7 2-2 8; Saddrick Daniels 3-4 0-2 6; Shorron Woodley 2-5 0-0 4; Sammie Haley 2-6 0-0 4; Demetrius Turner 0-0 2-4 2. Total: 36-69 15-26 94.

Midland College (89) — Demeitreus Drew 9-19 10-13 29; Luis Cambraia 7-15 2-2 20; Terrance Rone 4-14 3-4 13; Ari Rodriques 4-12 3-5 11; Kelon Haynie 3-7 0-0 6; Shawn Morris 1-1 0-0 3; Steve Walston 1-2 1-2 3; Kirk Ford 1-4 1-2 3; dominique Coursey 0-0 1-2 1. Total: 30-74 21-30 89.

Halftime score: Connors State 49, Midland College 39. Three-point goals: Connors 7-9 (Jones 4-6, Blakely 2-2, Harris 1-1), MC 8-20 (Cambraia 4-10, Rone 2-6, Morris 1-1, Drew 1-3). Total fouls: Connors 21, MC 45. Rebounds: Connors 39 (Si. Haley 8), MC 45 (Drew 10, Rodriques 10). Assists: Connors 10 (Jones 4), MC 7 (Cambraia 2). Fouled out: Drew, Daniels, Sa. Haley). Technical fouls: Drew, Harris.

UConn faces Purdue in Tipoff Classic

Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — After sitting out a season because of academics, Glenn Robinson gets his first test today when Purdue faces No. 16 Connecticut in the 14th annual Tip-Off Classic.

"He is a rising young star," said Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun, who last saw Robinson play in the 1991 McDonalds High School All-American game here. On that occasion, Robinson teamed up with Michigan's Chris Webber, with whom he is often compared, to lead the West All-Stars over an East squad that featured Connecticut's standout sophomore forward Donyell Marshall.

"Obviously we will do everything we can, but you don't stop really good players and Robinson is in that category," Calhoun said. "You just hope to be able to contain them and deny them the ball."

Robinson was ineligible to play for the Boilermakers last season because of low college placement test scores. But the 6-foot-9 powerhouse with a delicate shooting touch came into his own during a summer tour of Europe with a group of collegiate all-stars. He also contributed 33 and 31 points in Purdue's two exhibition victories.

"Those were just dress rehearsals," Purdue coach Gene Keady said. "So far we are looking good, but Saturday will be the real test.

"Connecticut's a lot like us in that they have some good young players."

Golfers gather for Skins game today

Associated Press

PALM DESERT, Calif. — Two million dollars in winnings for one season is not far off, four of golf's leading players agreed before the start of the Skins Game.

"No question about it," Greg Norman said before a practice session Friday for the two-day, 18-hole, made-for-television event. The four-man field plays nine holes of the popular event today at the Bighorn Golf Club.

"Somebody is going to break the $2 million barrier, and it might happen soon," Norman said. "And when they do, they'll suck some others right through the barrier with them."

U.S. Open champion Tom Kite agreed.

"Look at Freddie (Couples). He went over $1 million at the Masters. And that's in April," Kite said, turning toward the Masters champion.

"You played, what, 20 tournaments this year?" he asked, and was told the number was 21.

"If he'd played 30," Norman said, "He'd probably have hit $2 million."

Couples, who led the PGA Tour in official money winnings with $1,344,188 this year — second behind the record $1,395,278 Kite collected in 1989 — had a different candidate.

"Davis (Love) could have done it, too," Couples said. "He won three tournaments, and then, after the official season is over, he wins three more, the World Cup, Kapalua and with Tom (Kite) in the Shark Shootout."

It seemed appropriate that the conversations of Kite, Couples, Norman and defending champion Payne Stewart turned to money on the eve of the 10th Skins Game.

Because the Skins Game is all about money.

A total of $540,000 will be up for grabs for the four players, $20,000 on each of the first six holes, $30,000 for the middle six and $40,000 for the last six.

Each hole is a separate tournament, with the winner getting the prize money designated for that hole. If two or more players tie for the low score on a hole, the prize money is carried over until one player wins a hole outright.

"There are two things you're trying to do," Kite said. "You're trying to win the most money, and, maybe more importantly, you're trying not to get shut out."

Stewart, however, said he had a different goal.

"I'm just trying to get the year behind me," he said. After winning the 1991 U.S. Open, Stewart went into a slump, finished 44th on the money winning list this season and was not in title contention at any time.

"The only reason I'm here, is because I won the Skins last year," he said. "It sure wasn't because of my sterling play.

"This is my last event of the year, so I'd like to make it a good one," Stewart said, then jokingly added, "Since these other three guys have won so much more money than I have this year, I think it'd be nice of them to take it easy, let me catch up a little."

Kite, Couples and Norman just laughed.

Grady leads at Australian Open

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Wayne Grady of Australia surged into a four-stroke lead in the Australian Open on Friday by shooting a 6-under-par 66 in the second round.

Grady, the 1990 PGA champion, birdied six holes on the 6,791-yard The Lakes course and completed the two rounds with a 131 total.

Steve Elkington, another Australian, moved into second place after shooting a second round 68.

American Raymond Floyd was third, five strokes off the pace, after he too, shot 68.

One stroke behind Floyd were American Peter Teravainen, who lost the first-round when he shot a 71; Australian Peter McWhinney, who had a 72, and Vijay Singh of Fiji, who shot a 69.

"I'm not out of the tournament yet, but I've been playing with a gentleman who is playing awfully well and putting beautifully so I'm going to have to move it up a notch or two over the weekend," Floyd said of Grady.

The Australian missed the cut in the last three tournaments he had played, but has rediscovered his putting touch.

"I made the cut!" Grady said.

While Grady and Elkington played well, former British Open champion Ian Baker-Finch was among five Australians who missed the cut.

O'Donnell to start

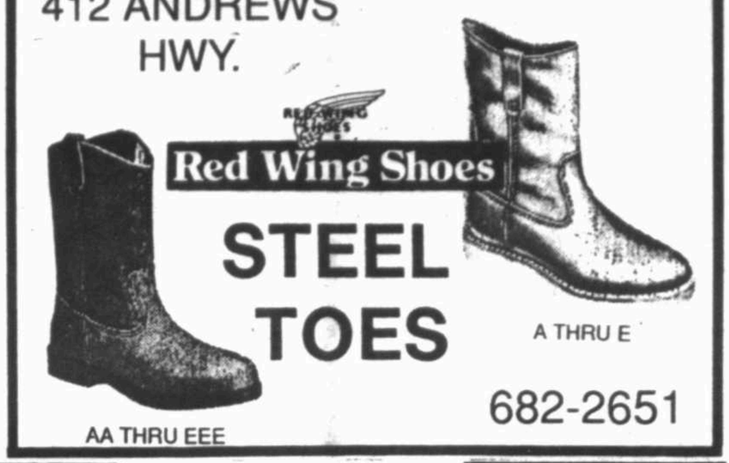

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Neil O'Donnell is expected to start Sunday's game in Cincinnati.

O'Donnell was upgraded Friday from questionable to probable. He sat out last week's 30-14 victory over Indianapolis with a pulled hamstring.

O'Donnell resumed running Tuesday, and he's taken most of the snaps in practice this week. Bubby Brister started against the Colts, but passed for only 109 yards.

Cornerback D.J. Johnson bruised a knee in practice Friday.

MC: Plans for title No. 3 to come quickly

(From 1B)

Junior running back Clay Gunter scored four touchdowns as the Mustangs became the first ever TAPPS school to win back-to-back state titles.

"We just played our game and hung in there," Gunter, who rushed for 145 yards, said. "We just ran on them like we wanted to. Everyboby had their blocks."

Gunter, who transferred to MC this year, got his first taste of a championship season, but for others, like linebacker/running back Kyle Jackson, this one was a little bit better.

"This one is a little bit sweeter because I'm one of the older people on the team," Jackson said. "This one was unexpected but that makes it more exciting."

The Mustangs, who boast the top rated offense and defense in the state, have now posted a 49-4-1 record against private schools and completed it's first-ever undefeated season and have won 19 straight games.

"I think this is a special bunch of young men," Blake said. "We are very proud of our young people. I'm tickled to death (with winning it all). We tried to be low key all year."

Midland Christian wasted little time in raising the level of play as Lane Hill took the opening kick off 55 yards to set the Mustangs up at the Southwest Christian 18-yard line. Six plays later, Gunter scored from a yard out to give the Mustangs all the points they would need.

The Mustangs scored 20 points in each of the first two quarters and added it's final score 3 minutes into the third period. Gunter's fourth score took Midland Christian past the 45-point limit and ended the game with 6:39 remaining in the third quarter.

"We knew if we came out and played our game, we could (win by 45 points)," Jackson said. "I didn't really expect this but Coach Blake came in and did a real good job."

The Mustangs did just about anything that wanted to offensively, rolling up 364 total yards, 274 coming on the ground. The MC defense held the Eagles to just 100 yards, 93 of that coming on the ground.

Defending state champion sprinter Todd Guhn, the Eagles' top offensive threat was slowed by cracked ribs and rushed just eight times for 56 yards.

"We knew we had to stop him and I think we did a pretty good job of that," Jackson said.

Gunter was the star of the night, scoring on runs of one, 60 and 13 yards and caught a 60-yard TD pass from quarterback Andy Awtry. Jackson added a 4-yard scoring run while Awtry dashed 10 yards for a score and connected with Wes Adams for a 4-yard TD pass.

"Todd Guhn is defenitely a great sprinter," Blake said. "But tonight was Clay's night.

"I don't think this will really set in until we play a basketball game next week."

But don't think that the past two seasons will be forgotten about.

"I guess next week we'll start looking toward next year," Blake said.

SMITH: Shoes the difference against NY

(From 1B)

do his fancy footwork against the Giants.

"I changed shoes at halftime because I was slipping around," Smith said. "In the second half, I think I showed what I could do. They had me stopped good for a while."

Smith caught a touchdown pass and ran 68 yards for another score.

Smith, the NFL's leading rusher last season, carried 17 times for 120 yards and caught six passes for 41 yards. He turned a short pass from Troy Aikman into a 23-yard touchdown, the first of his two scores in a 2:50 span of the third quarter.

Dallas is 10-2 with 10 days off before its next game at Denver. The Giants are 5-7.

"We're 10-2 and I think we would have been excited to have that before the season began," Aikman said. "We've had a hard schedule and we've handled it. Now we have a tough test of three straight road games coming up. The home field advantage would be nice.

"I think we can talk about the playoffs now. It's close to a cinch that we are going to be in them."

Dallas, which earned its 300th team victory, can clinch a playoff spot Sunday if Tampa Bay ties or beats the Green Bay Packers.

Lin Elliott kicked three field goals, including a career-long 53-yarder, as the Cowboys virtually ended the Giants' playoff chances.

"I had to hit the 53-yarder but I hit it perfect," said Elliott, who now has a club record 12 consecutive field goals.

Marshall said the way the Cowboys blitzed rookie quarterback Kent Graham late in the game was "unprofessional."

"We didn't do that when they (the Cowboys) were struggling a couple of years ago," Marshall said. "It's like kicking a dog while its down, but that's OK. We'll remember it next year."

Giants coach Ray Handley praised Smith, calling him "one of the best, if not the best back in the league."

RANKIN: Hart advances

(From 1B)

Rankin, meanwhile, struggled on offense. The Red Devils managed just 85 yards rushing. They did have 104 passing yards, but 52 of those came in hurry-up form in the fourth quarter.

Still, after Hart manufactured a 17-0 lead, Rankin responded.

The Red Devils uncorked a sudden 64-yard drive that Roy Abalos capped with a five-yard TD run as time expired in the third quarter. Jo'El Armendarez kicked the extra point to narrow Hart's lead to 17-7 with a full quarter to play — on the same field where the Red Devils posted 29-fourth quarter points to beat Sudan in last year's area tilt.

But after Rankin forced Hart to punt from its own 30-yard line, the Red Devils ran into a brick wall built in the form of Welps. Welps dropped Jo Jo Guerra for a nine-yard sack, then leveled his replacement, Joey Varela, for four more negative yards to put the 'Devils in a fourth-and-23 situation at the Hart 43. When Varela faked a punt and ran with the ball, Hart stopped him a good 21 yards shy of the first down marker.

"We thought we had the momentum after we scored the touchdown, but those consecutive sacks were probably the ball game for us," Sanchez said. "But you have to give them ('Horns) the credit."

That credit accompanies the regional trophy that Rankin has carted home each of the last two seasons.

But the Red Devils never did give up against Hart, and they pulled off a bit of a Houdini act in the first half, escaping with a mere 7-0 deficit despite trailing by a sizeable 183-50 margin in total yards.

And the Longhorns, which penetrated the Rankin 20-yard line four times in the game while allowing no Red Devil penetrations at all, enjoyed a hefty 9-2 edge in first downs at the break.

Rankin's deepest offensive thrust of the first half ended on the mid-field stripe, a position awarded the 'Devils after Hart was flagged for a late hit with no time showing on the second-quarter clock.

But Hart's dominance in yards was negated by Rankin's defense, which turned away one possible penetration when Jeff Jones intercepted Aven at the Red Devil 15-yard line, ending Hart's initial drive.

Later in the first quarter, Keith Braden smothered Salas for no gain on a fourth-down try at the Rankin 14. Only Avon's 31-yard TD run dented the scoreboard in the first half.

Welps increased the lead to 10-0 when his line-drive field goal barely cleared the crossbar. And Salas upped the ante to 17-0 with a four-yard TD burst.

That's when Rankin answered the call. Guerra hit Jones for completions of 32 and 28 yards en route to the Red Devil TD.

"We played hard, but they have a good team and they beat us," said Jones, who caught four passes for 82 yards. "They adjusted to the pass after we scored. When they started to get to Jo Jo, that was it."

Guerra was sacked four times and Varela once.

Rankin got a chance with 5:55 left in the game, but Anthony Washington intercepted Guerra to set up Hart's final drive. Harvey Robledo's three-yard plunge capped an eight-play, 38-yard drive as Hart thrust the final stake into Rankin.

Red Devil seniors are Jimmy 'Low, Eugene Lance, Carlos Garcia, Jones and Varela.

PLAYOFFS: Trinity 1-2 vs. 4-5A

(From 1B)

San Angelo vs. Euless Trinity

This is the first meeting between the two schools, but Trinity has a 1-2 playoff record going against 4-5A. Trinity defeated Odessa Permian by an 8-7 bi-district margin in 1982, but lost to Permian by a 34-0 region margin in 1984.

Trinity also lost a 17-0 bi-district decision to Midland Lee in 1976. That was the first playoff win ever by Lee and it came against John Reddell, who coached the preceding year at Midland High.

Of course, San Angelo's playoff life has been quite tough since losing quarterback Ben Montgomery in bi-district play. When Montgomery went to the bench, he took 3,000 yards of offense with him. Still, a Bobcat win would place San Angelo in the Big School semi-finals for the second consecutive year.

San Angelo and Trinity are two of the four third place teams left in the Big School playoffs. Arlington and McAllen are the other two. McAllen seems destined to exit this week since it meets Big School favorite San Antonio Judson, which scored 63 points last week.

In the Small School bracket, only two third place teams remain in contention with Victoria and San Antonio Madison. One will fall this week since they play each other in the region round.

Here's the picks this week while carrying a perfect 5-0 playoff pick 'em mark.

Odessa Permian 34, Lewisville 14: Mojo will win easily, but the record 61-point pace won't continue from here on out.

San Angelo 21, Euless Trinity 17: The Bobcats are playing with mirrors, but they live to play one more week. Being at home is the difference this week.

Glen Rice denies charges

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Heat star Glen Rice on Friday denied charges that he hit a man in the face with a beer bottle during a Thanksgiving brawl in a topless bar.

"I only got one thing to say, and that's that Glen Rice wasn't involved in any altercations, none whatsoever," Rice said.

Miami coach Kevin Loughery said Rice would start Friday night at home against the Houston Rockets.

Faithful man claims Houston is chosen for Mary's message

By Steve Brunsman
Associated Press Writer

Hundreds of people have showed up three times a week at a northeast Houston church in the wake of a report that Mary, the mother of Jesus Christ, has been appearing to a 31-year-old man.

HOUSTON — First it was angels. Now it's the Virgin Mary.

Hundreds of people have showed up three times a week at a northeast Houston church in the wake of a report that Mary, the mother of Jesus Christ, has been appearing to a 31-year-old man.

The new vision comes two months after a reported sighting of angels hovering outside a young girl's bedroom window in southeast Houston. Thousands of folks showed up there, too.

Augustine Halverson, a member of St. Philip of Jesus Catholic Church in the El Dorado subdivision, was walking a dog near the parish prayer garden on Nov. 7 when his first vision occurred, said the Rev. Peter Mastrobuono, the pastor.

Halverson claims that he saw the Virgin Mary clothed in a white dress and a blue mantle with a visible heart. The apparition appeared the next day, saying it would appear to him on Monday, Wednesday and Friday if rosaries were said.

Since then, about 200 people have gathered with Halverson at the 500-family church to recite Hail Marys and the Our Father three times a week. Others meet nightly at the church to pray — one of Mary's reported requests. The apparition has appeared five times so far to Halverson in a church crying room, according to the priest.

The visions last 15 to 20 minutes, he said.

"I think he's seeing a true vision," said Mastrobuono, who does not allow Halverson, a college student, to be photographed or interviewed outside church settings. The 53-year-old priest led daily prayer sessions in September at the so-called Angel House on the city's southeast side where a 9-year-old girl had said two angels hovered.

Both angels have now reappeared there with the Virgin Mary, Mastrobuono said.

Both visions have a deeper meaning, he said. "The Blessed Mother has chosen Houston as one area of the world where she wants her messages to be heard," he said. Mary has called for more prayer, fasting and penance, the priest said.

Mastrobuono has reported the events to Galveston-Houston Diocese officials. Monsignor Daniel Scheel said Thursday that Halverson's visions would be deemed an unofficial "private revelation" like others at this time.

Halverson, who is single, was raised in the subdivision of brick, 3-bedroom homes. He is highly regarded by parish and community members. "I believed him immediately. It didn't come as a surprise," said Dolores Salazar, 49, who has been inside the church during each reported vision.

"It's not something that we expected but we're not surprised it happened to him," she said. Parish members expect church attendance to increase since news of the apparition has leaked out.

Unverified apparitions often draw thousands of visitors. In August 1988, one such apparition drew about 20,000 people to St. John Neumann Catholic Church in Lubbock where a sign from heaven was predicted to occur.

People stared into the sky and some said they saw visions of Jesus and Mary.

Midlanders take recent tour of Israel

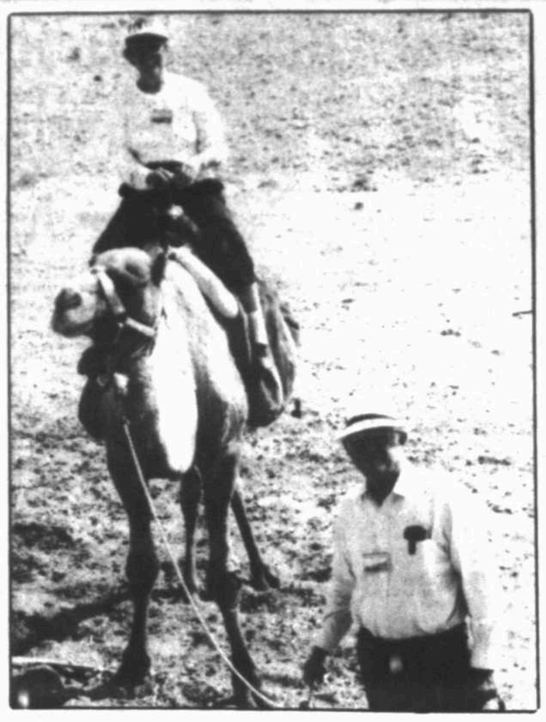

Riding a camel in the desert was one of the adventures experienced by Midlanders Margaret and Courtney Cowden and Judy and Jack Stone on a recent tour of Israel.

Getting a taste of how the patriarchs Abraham, Isaac and Jacob lived also included a meal, minus eating utensils, in a Bedouin tent. While at the southern point of Israel, in the resort city of Eilat, they snorkeled on the coral reefs in the Red Sea.

These events ended a two-week tour of the Holy Land sponsored by Bridges for Peace, a Christian organization headquartered in Jerusalem. Also in the 45-member tour group were Midlanders Helen and Brutus Hanks and their daughter and son-in-law, Mary Jane and Stanley Saikin, former Midlanders now living in Austin.

The Stones are local representatives for Bridges for Peace, which is involved in building relationships between Christians and Jews and helping Christians understand the Jewish roots of their faith. On the local level in Israel, they Bridges for Peace helps with the absorption of the hundreds of thousands of Jews who have migrated in recent years.

With the assistance of their Israeli guide and with the Bible as a guidebook, the group saw religious, historical and ancient archaeological sites. They also toured Israel's only food bank, which is operated by Bridges for Peace. Russian and Ethiopian immigrants received "Welcome Home to Israel" gifts of kitchen utensils, blankets, heaters and food. These gifts are funded by donations from Christians from all over the world.

Margaret and Courtney Cowden recently took a tour in Israel. Here, Margaret rides a camel while Courtney walks along side her.

The Israeli government sponsors each immigrant for a year, which includes daily Hebrew classes for five months, a place to live and money for food and other necessities.

The Stones will co-host a March 1993 tour, which offers an optional seven-day Red Sea cruise to visit Petra, Cairo, Luxor, Mount Sinai and St. Catherine's Monastery after the two-week tour of Israel. For more information call 694-3090.

Church holds services in bar

By Cecile Holmes White
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Presbyterian minister Doug Ensminger holds church in a bar, and his congregation includes people whose sexual preferences threaten to polarize mainstream Christianity.

A series of experiences led Ensminger, 48, a married heterosexual and the father of two daughters and two sons, to found an inclusive church community where God's people may be heterosexual or homosexual.

"My sense is what we are is a parallel to churches in the early 1960s which felt a need to be biracial, intentionally," Ensminger said. "It is an artificial thing, but an important step."

The new independent church calls itself the Community of the Reconciling Servant and draws 20 to 30 worshipers — both straights and gays, families and singles — to a 10 a.m. service each Sunday at Ovations, a jazz club in Rice Village.

Among the new church's board members is the Rev. Earl E. Shelp, executive director of the Foundation for Interfaith Research, which ministers to people with AIDS.

He said the board is a short-term organizing entity; the new church should soon become self-governing.

"The name, Reconciling, was probably as much my proposal as anyone's," said Shelp, who remains a member of South Main Baptist Church.

"When we began to try to serve people with AIDS, one of our real commitments was the reconciliation of populations estranged by illness or lifestyle choices," he said. "What we found was that this could, in fact, be achieved ... I think the same is possible through this community."

Ensminger resigned the pastorate of Central Presbyterian Church in Houston in May to found the new church.

He remains chairman of the budget/finance committee of New Covenant Presbytery, the regional governing body of his denomination, the Presbyterian Church (USA).

As provided for in church regulations, the presbytery voted to validate his ministry outside the denomination. That moves allows him to remain a minister in good standing with membership in the presbytery, but it does not mean the denomination or the presbytery endorses the new church.

"One of my hopes would be that this would continue the constructive dialogue between the heterosexual and homosexual communities," said the Rev. Jack Boelens, executive presbyter of New Covenant.

Ensminger had worried about the status of homosexuals in society and the church for more than 20 years.

In Ensminger's life, the call to work for social justice came first when he learned, as a seminary student, that homosexual orientation probably was not a matter of choice.

Next came his commitment to gays' civil rights and an openness to gay Christians as a matter of Christian compassion. Personal experience came later.

In May 1991, he lost a beloved younger brother, who was gay, to AIDS. His brother, Morgan, died in Ensminger's arms.

A brief passage from Morgan's written farewell to family and friends helped spur his older brother into a new ministry to which he had long been drawn.

"One pompous request to everyone I've touched," Morgan Ensminger wrote. "Stop the hate where and whenever you can. It is too hurtful and hateful to be silently allowed anymore."

Other Christians see an increasing need for cooperation and dialogue between gay and straight believers. Some want to worship in a congregation committed to social and economic justice whose members embrace simpler lifestyles.

Graham's crusade in atheist-grounded Moscow encourages record response

By George W. Cornell
Associated Press Writer

Billy Graham, once criticized as being used by the former Soviet Union, seems now to have instead swung many of its people his way — toward Christianity.

Back from his first public crusade in the ideologically shaken, economically struggling land hardened by decades of atheist indoctrination, Graham said he was pleased by his reception.

"I didn't think many people would respond at all. But boy, how they came."

He drew crowds that broke records at Moscow's Olympic Stadium, and he said a bigger percentage of them indicated decisions for Christ than had ever done so in his half century of ministry around the world.

The unusual impact seemed to justify the evangelist's past trips there, including his speaking at a Soviet peace conference in 1982 despite U.S. State Department objections.

"If we hadn't gone in '82, I don't think we would have been going now," he said in an interview. "It was a sort of pioneering that opened the door. A lot of people in the West criticized. But I felt God wanted me to go.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

■ Outreach planned

Shekinah Glory will be the guests for the Midland Outreach Aglow Tuesday meeting at St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason.

A buffet dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. Reservations are a must as the meal will be catered by O'Neil's.

The meeting will be at 7:15 p.m. Men will be allowed to attend this meeting.

For more information and reservations call DiAnn Edwards, 694-4791.

■ Church plans musical

Kelview Heights Baptist Church is presenting a series of musical events in the coming weeks in celebration of Christmas.

Kelview's Teen choir will present "Deck the Mall," a musical drama about a teen choir's experience presenting a program in the mall, at 6:30 p.m. Dec. 6.

During the 9 and 11 a.m. services Dec. 13, the first and second grade choirs will provide the music. The Preschool Choir will provide the music during the 6:30 p.m. service Dec. 13.

The musical "A Merry Christmas Mission" will be presented by the third through sixth grade choirs at 9 and 11 a.m. Dec. 20. Then, at 6:30 p.m. Dec. 20, the Adult Choir will present "Love's Pure Light," the story of the incarnation and the death of the dominion of darkness, accomplished through the birth of the Light of the ages.

A nursery will be provided for all services. The public is invited to attend.

■ Guest to speak

The Rev. L.L. Stevens of Lake Jackson is the guest speaker for a prophecy seminar and revival at the First United Pentecostal Church, 5110 W. Illinois Ave.

A release from the church said the speaker will be relating events in our world today, especially in the Middle East and Europe in relation to prophecy. The books of Daniel and Revelation will be explored.

Stevens will include slides taken on his trips to Israel and the Middle East and show his interpretation of the relevance of these areas to prophecy.

For 12 years, Stevens has preached in Canada, Italy, Mexico and throughout the United States. He often speaks at camp meetings, prophecy conferences and churches.

Service times are 6 p.m. Sunday and 7 p.m. Monday through Wednesday. For more information call 697-4007.

■ Girls spotlighted

Community service was spotlighted Nov. 21 when nearly half a million teenage girls in 138 nations and territories reached out with a variety of projects benefiting their communities.

This worldwide celebration, called "Walk in the Light," was sponsored by the Young Women organization of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The Young Women program is designed to promote spiritual growth, personal achievement and the development of leadership skills in girls ages 12 to 18.

Locally the celebration was held in Odessa. In attendance were youth and their leaders and parents from Odessa, Midland, Big Spring, Big Lake, Monahans, Fort Stockton, Seminole, Pecos, Andrews and Alpine.

Stake Young Women president Karen Weidman organized and conducted the meeting.

■ Revivals planned

MONAHANS — Jerry B. Walker will be leading "The Praise Celebration Crusades" revivals Sunday through Thursday and Friday through Dec. 6 here.

The first revival will be held at Ward County Coliseum, 1 mile south of 120 on Fort Stockton Highway. The second revival will be at Monahans High School Auditorium, 809 S. Betty. All services will be at 7 p.m. All seats are free.

Walker has been a featured speaker for the Full Gospel Business Men's World Conventions and was the first to be invited to conduct Miracle Services in St. Paul's Anglican Cathedral in Toronto, Canada. He has been called the "20th Century Billy Sunday."

For more information call Grace Fellowship, 943-4447.

■ Forum scheduled

The Unitarian-Universalist Church of Midland will have a forum at 9:45 a.m. Sunday entitled "What the Men's Group Has Meant to Me."

This forum will feature personal experiences from the "Clan of the Frog Pond Men" men's group. Excerpts from writings and ideas of leaders of the men's movement will be presented including those of Robert Bly, Sam Keen, Warren Farrel, Herb Goldberg and Marvin Allen.

Also, personal stories and poetry from the local "Clan of the Frog Pond Men" will attempt to explain what it means to "explore conscious manhood" in today's world, said a release from Bruce McPherson, church publicist.

The public is invited to attend. Children's religious education is held during the forum with the Sunday service following at 11 a.m.

In addition, the church is completing its adult religious education video tape program and discussion on "The Transformation of Myth Through Time" series by Joseph Campbell at 7 p.m. Monday.

Each program is complete in itself and lasts an hour followed by a 30 minute discussion.

Child care will be provided. For more information call McPherson, 570-8118.

■ Bible study planned

Community Bible Study, a multi-denominational Bible study, is studying the book of Hebrews.

The study meets at Midland Bible Church, 2800 N. A St., Tuesdays from 7 to 9 p.m.

Members first meet in different "Core Groups" to discuss weekly lessons and later assemble for a short lecture given by a teaching director. The first lesson will be an overview of Hebrews given by Alan Meyers, evening class area instructor.

For more information call Bob Houser, 563-0465, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. or Bill Holmes, 687-4822.

Golden age of Catholicism may be illusion

By Peter Steinfels
N.Y. Times News Service

Sometimes a single statistic sums up a whole era. Then along comes a different look at the same statistic and, click, the era suddenly looks quite different.

For many Roman Catholics, nothing better captures the idea that the 1950s and early 60s were the Golden Age of American Catholicism than the number of priests serving the church. Then came the Second Vatican Council in 1962, and, by 1967, two years after it had ended, the number of priests in the United States reached a high of 59,892. From that point an exodus from the priesthood began.

By 1992 the number of priests had declined by 6 percent while the Catholic population grew by 36 percent. By 2005 the Catholic population is projected to grow by another 20 percent and the number of priests shrink by another 30 percent.

No other development poses a more severe threat to the leadership and sacramental life of American Catholicism. So it is easy to see why some Catholics would lay the blame on the Vatican Council. For them, the drop in the number of priests represents the passing of an era of crowded Latin masses, new suburban parishes and nuns in habits ruling over students drilled in catechism answers.

But what if the dwindling number of priests began not in 1967 but in 1942, two decades before the Council?

That is the startling claim advanced in a recent article in America, the weekly journal published by the Jesuit order of priests. The article was written by Dennis Castillo, who teaches at a church-sponsored training institute in Orchard Lake, Mich.

Veternarians head dogs' rights for a full-length tail

By Karin Davies
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Defying the strong views of Princess Anne, the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons on Thursday called for the government to protect every dog's right to a full-length tail.

The college said the routine snipping of poodles' and bulldogs' tails for cosmetic reasons is "disgraceful conduct," and threatened to lift the licenses of vets who do it.

Cutting dogs' tails is "an unjustified mutilation and unethical," except to treat or prevent disease or injury, the college's 40-member council said.

The council's president, Judy MacArthur Clark, said the college does not have the power to ban the practice, known as docking, but said the group plans to ask the government to do so.

"In the meantime, we are giving members very, very strong guidance that the vast majority of the profession wish to seek an end to docking," she said.

The college, with a worldwide membership of 16,500 veterinarians, issued the guidelines because only qualified vets will be permitted to crop or remove dogs' tails in the United Kingdom beginning on July 1.

About 1.3 million of Britain's 7.5 million dogs have been docked — in most cases by breeders. About 50 of the 185 breeds registered with the Kennel Club traditionally have their tails snipped, including corgis, boxers, Dobermans, old English sheepdogs, poodles and rottweilers.

The college's patron, Queen Elizabeth II, owns a bevy of the stubby corgis, and The Times of London reported Thursday that her majesty "is thought privately to oppose" a ban on docking.

But her daughter, Princess Anne, recently barked at the British Veterinary Association for "getting so uptight" about docking. She argued that a wagging tail is vulnerable when a dog is in brambles or brush.

"My own experience of working dogs suggests it is sound preventative treatment in the first place to remove the bit that is going to get damaged," she told the association's annual meeting last month.

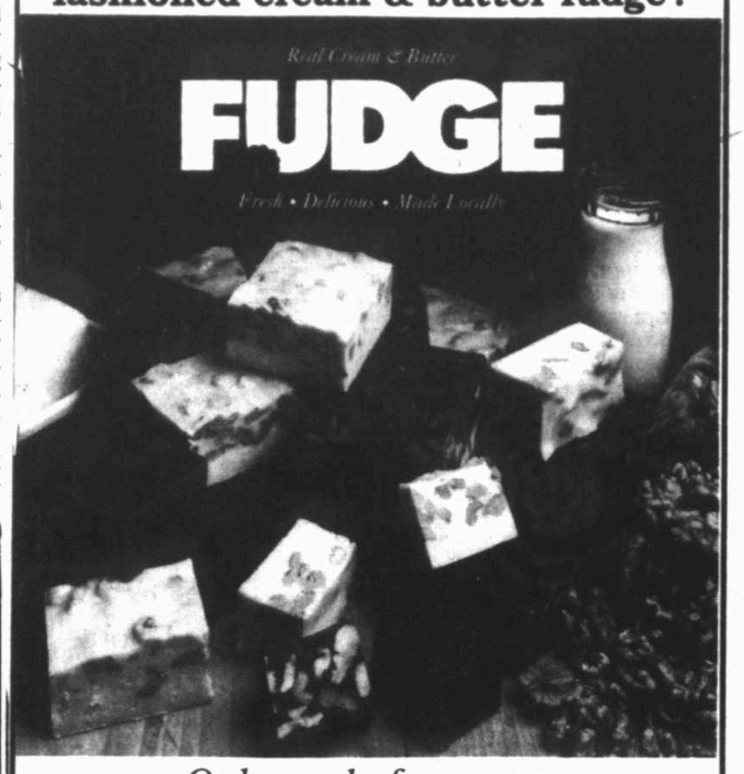

Docking began with the Romans' mistaken notion that it prevented rabies, and has persisted for reasons of fashion and safety.

Breeders say it is painless, improves hygiene in long-haired breeds and protects working dogs from injury.

Robert Killick of the 3,000-member Council of Docked Breeds accused the veterinary college of

Clinton visits Reagan, shopping mall

By Karen Ball
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — President-elect Clinton chatted with former President Reagan on Friday about Washington's last major power shift. He said Reagan advised him to use Camp David often because it would be the only place he could walk alone.

Clinton, 46, and Reagan, 81, met for more than an hour in Reagan's Century City office. Afterwards, Clinton said that they had talked about Reagan's first year in office and the attempt on Reagan's life, holding down government spending and the deficit, the former Soviet Union and foreign policy, and dealing with Congress.

The two men who most recently have presided over a change in political parties at the White House "enjoyed a warm and friendly visit," said Reagan's spokeswoman Cathy Goldberg. Clinton called it "a good visit."

Clinton said Reagan was pleased that he was supporting a line-item veto.

"He said that he hoped I'd have more cooperation from Congress than he did, and he thought I might. And I said was working on it hard," Clinton told reporters.

Reagan said Clinton and his family should make ample use of Camp David, Clinton reported before leaving to visit a suburban shopping mall in Glendale, Calif., to meet everyday people.

Thousands of screaming shoppers greeted Clinton at the Glendale Galleria in the middle class and racially mixed Los Angeles suburb. He arrived to squeals from women and chants of "We want Bill."

The visit came on the busiest shopping day of the year, and Clinton said he anticipated consumers would buy more this holiday season.

"I think they're very hopeful," Clinton told a crush of reporters and camera crews outside a J.C. Penny store. But he added that they don't expect miracles from him. "They understand that there's only so much that one person can do."

Clinton visited a sporting goods store, rode up an escalator, and worked his way through the 270-store mall, shaking hands as he went.

Earlier, Clinton said Reagan described Camp David, the presidential mountain retreat in western Maryland, as "about the only place where you can really walk free, you know, and be alone, virtually unencumbered."

"He said it will help you keep your peace of mind," Clinton said. "He talked to me a lot about that. He said he felt very strongly, that that was important, in terms of keeping ... me focused on the job."

Clinton has complained since the election about being constantly followed by photographers and reporters.

Although Democrat Clinton spent much of his campaign assailing Republican economic policies begun by Reagan, he requested the meeting.

Both Reagan and Clinton rode into office on the promise of change, and Clinton indicated, even before leaving Little Rock, how impressed he was with Reagan's first year in office, when he won approval of his major economic measures from Congress.

Clinton said the Reagan team that took over the White House from Jimmy Carter "gave it a lot of thought."

"They went after their agenda pretty hard," Clinton said.

Reagan had a jar of red, white and blue jelly beans for Clinton when the Democratic entourage arrived at Reagan's Century City office. Clinton, often late, was 15 minutes behind schedule.

"My history with jelly beans is what prevented me from becoming a cigarette addict," Reagan said, posing for pictures with Clinton.

"What a wonderful gift," Clinton said, laughing.

Reagan brushed off a question about what advice he had for Clinton.

"I don't think we need to be answering any questions right now," Reagan said.

In Reagan's office, Clinton told photographers "We've been talking about the movie set and the ranch." Reagan has a ranch in Santa Barbara, not far from where Clinton was spending the rest of the weekend.

Reagan and Clinton each brought an aide. Senior adviser Bruce Lindsey came with Clinton, and Reagan had his chief of staff, Fred Ryan, who helped on the Reagan transition and was the White House scheduler during the Reagan administration.

Clinton has borrowed a tool from the Reagan transition — clusters of advisers assigned to oversee the takeover in each federal agency.

Clinton met with President Bush in Washington 10 days ago and also has talked with former President Carter several times. He hasn't talked to former Presidents Nixon or Ford, but aides said he might.

Clinton was joined on his California trip by his wife, Hillary; their 12-year-old daughter, Chelsea; and Hillary's parents. Chelsea brought a friend, too.

They were staying in the shore community of Summerland at the rented, 4-acre beach estate of Harry Thomason and Linda Bloodworth-Thomason — two old friends and Hollywood producers who helped film an up-by-the-bootstraps biography of Clinton shown at the Democratic National Convention.

The Clintons were staying there through Monday. It is Clinton's first vacation of the year and he hopes to play golf and relax.

The Clintons plan to go to Pasadena today for a party.

Fugitive attempts suicide at ex-wife's grave

MILFORD, Conn. (AP) — For more than 13 years, Joseph Florczak lived on the run as a fugitive in the stabbing death of his ex-wife.

Last week his flight ended when he returned, not to the scene of the crime, but to the small cemetery where Dorothy Florczak is buried.

There, beside her simple, gray headstone that reads "Forever In Our Hearts," he shot himself in the chest. Then, police say, he staggered 30 yards and collapsed on the sidewalk outside the main gate, where a passing motorist saw him and summoned help.

Florczak, now recovering at a hospital, was charged Sunday with murder and unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

Authorities say that since the slaying, Florczak, now 66, had eluded a nationwide manhunt, crisscrossing the country, using at least 15 aliases, pulling off small robberies to support himself and periodically changing his appearance.

He had been living in Sacramento, Calif., for a year until August, when he was featured on Fox Television's "America's Most Wanted."

In a suicide note, Florczak did not confess to killing Mrs. Florczak, but said the crime-solving show made him fear police were closing in on him.

"He said after he saw his picture on TV, he knew he had to take off," said Stratford police Lt. Thomas Rodia. After the program, more than 70 people reported seeing Florczak in California, Florida, Nevada and Texas.

Police in Milford, where Dorothy Florczak was killed, sealed Florczak's arrest warrant and would not discuss the case except to say it is a continuing homicide investigation.

Florczak was a suspect in his wife's death almost from the beginning, but police did not have enough evidence to issue a warrant until 10 months after the killing. By then, Florczak had disappeared.

Dorothy Florczak's family always thought Joseph Florczak was the killer.

During the couple's 21-year marriage, she never talked about her husband mistreating her, but when they divorced in 1971 she told her family he had beaten and tormented her for most their married life, said her brother, William Krafick.

Florczak worked as a machinist at the Singer Sewing Machine Co. in Bridgeport, while his wife worked as a waitress and raised their three children — James, Debbie and Rob — in Derby.

An investigator who worked on the case 14 years ago said Florczak's children remembered their father terrorizing their mother.

"He would tell his wife she couldn't talk on the telephone today, then he would go outside, sneak back in the cellar and stay there all day to see if she talked on the phone," said the investigator, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"He would leave dolls in glass jars with nooses around their necks, just to terrorize her," Krafick said. "The jars were filled with water because Dorothy couldn't swim."

After she filed for divorce in 1970, Mrs. Florczak moved from town to town in Connecticut because she was afraid of her husband, who was enraged over the divorce, Krafick said.

On Oct. 24, 1978, Dorothy Florczak, 47, was found dead of multiple stab wounds on the front lawn of her apartment complex in Milford.

In July 1979, police in San Diego found Florczak's diary in a car abandoned near the scene of a fast-food restaurant holdup.

In an entry on Mother's Day 1979, Florczak wrote: "This day makes me realize all the more what I have done. Jim, Deb and Rob must suffer through this day and many of them in years to come."

Florczak was under 24-hour police guard this week at Bridgeport Hospital, where he was listed in good condition Friday.

Senator to undergo alcohol tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bob Packwood Friday said that drinking may partially explain his alleged unwanted sexual advances against 10 women. He promised to undergo tests for alcohol dependency.

"I realize I have problems and will seek professional advice in connection with my use of alcohol," the Oregon Republican said in a statement.

"If I take the proper steps I hope my past conduct is not unforgivable," Packwood said in the statement.

"Whether alcohol was a factor in these incidents, I do not know," Packwood said. "In any event, alcohol at best can only be a partial explanation, not an excuse."

Packwood also said he will cooperate with any Senate Ethics Committee investigation of the matter.

Matt Evans, a spokesman for Packwood, said the senator will be evaluated by medical professionals to "find out if there is a chemical dependency problem."

Packwood said that when he was interviewed about the women's allegations on Oct. 29 by The Washington Post, he categorically denied them because "I honestly believed these events had never occurred."

He said he also denied the allegations "to my friends, and to myself."

Reacting to Packwood's statement, Marcia Greenberger of the National Women's Law Center said, "I wish that the behavior never took place, and I hope both the nation and Congress learns from" it.

While he is no longer denying the allegations, Packwood is not admitting that he made unwanted sexual advances against the women, nor is he admitting that he has a problem with alcohol, said Evans.

Packwood's statement noted simply that some of the women who had made allegations made references to "excessive alcohol used by me when the incidents occurred."

Packwood "never consciously intended to offend any women," his statement said. "I, therefore, offer my deepest apologies to all those involved."

He said he takes "full responsibility" for his conduct, that he is "confident that I can address my problems" while remaining a U.S. senator and that he will take "such other steps as may be appropriate."

Books show Americans' craving for Italian food

NEW YORK (AP) — There was a time, only a few decades ago, when spaghetti and meatballs was exotic, and a time, a little later, when fettucine Alfredo was daring.

Today, Italian food could hardly be more American.

"We've come to the point in this country where Italian has become the most important cuisine," said Lynn Rossetto Kasper, author of "The Splendid Table," one of at least a half-dozen Italian cookbooks published this fall.

"It's the most democratic," she said. "Can you think of anyone who doesn't like Italian?"

Kasper, admittedly, is obsessed with Italian food, but there is plenty of evidence that Americans who may not have even a drop of Italian blood have embraced food that harks back to Italy.

A National Restaurant Association survey conducted in 1990 showed that 46 percent of adults had eaten Italian food within the last month, with only Chinese and Mexican food approaching that figure. And a third of adults said Italian food was their favorite ethnic food.

In 1990, Americans ate an average of 18.4 pounds of pasta each in 150 shapes, and 60 percent of all restaurants served pasta, according to the National Pasta Association, a trade group that is not surprisingly pleased by Americans' enthusiasm.

Many of the items that became standard American restaurant fare — fettucine Alfredo, pasta primavera and shrimp scampi — were unknown to the Italians who emigrated to the United States in the late 1800s, John Mariani writes in his history of restaurants, "America Eats Out."

Those dishes and, perhaps most of all, pizza, were adopted and adapted to American palates and ingredients. No other ethnic cooking, Mariani writes, "has come close to the all-conquering success of Italian-American food."

Even baseball stadiums sell pizzas.

"Look at Domino's, Pizza Hut — there's nothing Italian about them," said Victor Weingast, operations and sales manager at Bel Canto Fancy Foods, an importer in New York. "I don't think there's a supermarket anywhere in the country that doesn't have a frozen pizza."

French cuisine still sets the professional standards, but most people are not coming home from work and preparing even the easiest of French suppers. Pasta is probably the key to Italian food's blazing success in the United States.

"Pasta is the perfect food for the American mindset," Weingast said.

It's cheap, generally fat-free, easy, and can be simple or sophisticated. Anyone can make it, and it goes with just about any other ingredients.

Italian food seems to have moved simultaneously in two directions — becoming more Americanized in fast-food restaurants and supermarkets, and becoming more sophisticated, with restaurants and specialty shops offering regional foods.

Twenty years ago, Marcella Hazan, probably the country's most influential Italian cookbook writer and teacher, had trouble finding ingredients. Pasta always was overcooked and covered with too much sauce.

But not everything is better these days, said Hazan, in New York to promote her new book.

Too many dishes, she said, are made "for the sake of novelty." Sun-dried tomatoes, for example, are used like pickles in Italy. In the United States, "I find it in everything. Enthusiasm — without thinking about the taste."

Hazan, who now lives in Venice, is getting a chance to make her point with the nearly 500 recipes in "Essentials of Classic Italian Cooking" (Alfred A. Knopf), which integrates her popular books from the 1970s, includes 50 new recipes and revises many others to reduce fat.

Ice age not as serious as first thought, study says

N.Y. Times News Service

The belief that the Earth of almost a billion years ago was extensively covered with ice is being revised. A new study shows that if the early ice age had been as severe as thought, the Earth could never have thawed out and would still be a frozen planet.

The study, published in a recent issue of the journal Nature, is the first to account for the existence of carbon dioxide clouds and their impact on the climate of those times.

During the late Proterozoic Era when the most extensive early ice age occurred, the Sun's heat was 25 percent less than it is today.

If, as geologic history recounts, the ice had extended from the poles to the equator, the Earth's surface would have been so cold that carbon dioxide ice clouds would have formed, said Dr. Ken Caldeira the lead author of the study, published Sept. 17, and a researcher at the Earth Systems Center and Department of Geosciences at the Pennsylvania State University.

Dr. Caldeira and his co-author Dr. James F. Kasting, an associate professor of geosciences at the university, calculated that before the fainter Sun could have melted the surface ice, the carbon dioxide in the air would itself have condensed, forming clouds that would have caused the Earth to remain in an endless frozen state.

In the past, scientists had speculated that the Earth had recovered from its early ice age because carbon dioxide gas had acted as a greenhouse gas, heating and thawing the surface.

Retailers see dollar signs as shoppers mob malls, stores

By Marybeth Nibley
Associated Press Writer

They came. They saw. They spent.

When the dust finally settles after Friday's opening burst of Christmas shopping, retailers expect to see lucrative results they hope will carry on for the rest of this crucial season.

From the vast megamalls of suburbia to the swank stores of the cities, consumers interviewed at random on the busiest shopping day of the year expressed a willingness to do much more than just browse.

"I don't have a limit. If I see it, I buy it," said Mary Jane Obaker, 46, at the Towson Town Center in Towson, Md. "I just buy, buy and buy."

Although her attitude may represent an exuberant extreme, retailers are hoping customers will have some of that spirit.

It is widely anticipated that Christmas 1992 will be the industry's best in years. But that doesn't mean retailers will enjoy a bonanza. The bleak holiday business of 1989, 1990 and 1991, which hobbled many stores, will make moderate sales improvements look good.

Many shoppers said the outcome of the election influenced their holiday purchase plans, even those who didn't vote for President-elect Clinton.

Anita Rimmer, 39, of Columbus, Ohio, said she was spending a little more this year than last, about $300. Mrs. Rimmer said she didn't vote for Clinton and wouldn't credit him for her spending increase, but was keeping an open mind.

"For me, he's going to change some things, and I'm willing to give him a chance," she said, at the J.C. Penney in the Northland Mall in Columbus.

People elsewhere expressed cautious optimism that a genuine economic recovery is under way. That could translate into sales gains of anywhere from 5 percent to more than 10 percent over last year, industry analysts believe.

But unlike the shoppers of the free-spending 1980s, today's shoppers are bargain hunters, a habit developed during recent years when stores had to drastically reduce prices to move merchandise.

Macy's appeared to be capitalizing Friday on its day-after-Thanksgiving sale. Crowds clutching red Macy's shopping bags began exiting the famous chain's flagship store in Manhattan in the early morning.

Most stores opened earlier than usual to accommodate extra customers. The Wal-Mart in Atlanta welcomed patrons at 5 a.m.

The day after Thanksgiving historically has been the busiest single day of the year for retailers. But recently shoppers have learned to bide their time and await better prices.

"Retailers are really hurting themselves, because they've trained the customers to wait for sales. So Christmas sales are occurring later and later. The biggest day for us is not today (Friday). It's three days before Christmas," said Mark Hogeboom, 45, of Kerrville, who owns James Avery Craftsmen, a custom jewelry shop in Dallas' Galleria.

The bulk of a retailer's business usually is done between Thanksgiving and Christmas. A slow start can send shivers through the industry.

Retailers said Friday they don't expect any significant pause in the shopping sprint toward Christmas. The season is slightly longer this year; there are two more days between Thanksgiving and Christmas than in 1991.

Many retailers are planning for a "late" Christmas, with most sales coming in the final 10 days.

As always, some regions and retailers will fare better than others.

In southern Maine, news that the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard has asked permission for another round of layoffs threatened to dampen some shoppers' spirits.

Inaugural to be baby-boomer blowout

By Bob Dart
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Call it the Woodstock Inaugural, the biggest baby boomer blowout since that historic Sixties happening, as a generation ushers one of its own into the White House on Jan. 20.

Without slighting the dignity of the Oval Office, planners aim to make Bill Clinton's inauguration reflect the style of a fortysomething president who enjoys loading his 8th-grade daughter into his '66 Mustang convertible, popping in an Aretha tape, and driving to the mall.

"Governor Clinton has directed us to make it the most accessible, inclusive and diverse inaugural in history," said Richard Mintz, a spokesman for the planning committee. "It'll be something between a state dinner and an Arkansas state fair."

Presidents have long sought to use the words and symbols of their inauguration to set the tone for their fledgling administrations. John F. Kennedy's inaugural address contained the most memorable phrase of his presidency — "Ask not what your country can do for you..." Jimmy Carter's walk up Pennsylvania Avenue in his inaugural parade is among the most enduring images of his administration.

Exactly how Clinton will use his inaugural to preview his presidency hasn't been determined, said the organizers, who include Hollywood's Linda Bloodworth-Thomason and Harry Thomason, longtime Clinton chums from Arkansas. Creators of TV's "Designing Women" and "Evening Shade," this husband-wife team also produced the "Man from Hope" video biography of Clinton that was shown at the Democratic convention.

"The theme will be along the lines of trying to bring people back together," said Thomason. "We've got a lot of ideas, but whatever I told you now might be null and void by morning."

However, planners said the inaugural will definitely reflect the fact that Clinton is the first president born into the post-World War II baby boom. From Howdy Doody to rock 'n' roll to fuller-cut jeans, the tastes of this now middle-aged demographic group have dominated America's popular culture since the mid-1950s.

The inaugural, "in style and message, will certainly represent a new generation of American leaders," said Mintz.

There is talk, for instance, of Clinton favorites Fleetwood Mac temporarily reuniting for an inaugural gig. And in an interview with Rolling Stone, the president-elect said he would like to have '60s folkie Judy Collins perform. The inspiration for the name of the Clinton's daughter was the song "Chelsea Morning," which Collins sang.

"No talent has been committed to at this point," said Mintz.

But there is considerable speculation on which stars will shine in inaugural events.

Barbra Streisand sang at a big Hollywood fund-raiser for Clinton, for instance, and is expected to be invited for an inaugural encore. Other supporters from the movie community range from Richard Gere to Whoopi Goldberg. Soul singer Aretha Franklin and the Georgia rock band R.E.M. also performed for Clinton during the campaign and are likely to invited to Washington. Stephen Stills and Joe Cocker, actual veterans of Woodstock, have also been mentioned as inaugural performers.

Gossip columnist Marilyn Beck reported that music man Kenny G. has received a call from Clinton asking him to "keep Jan. 20 free" to perform at an inaugural gala. They played a saxophone duet of "Songbird" at a fund-raiser last summer.

In addition to the dozen or so traditional inaugural balls, the planners said there will be a number of free and public events — probably including concerts at the Lincoln Memorial or Washington Monument. MTV is also sponsoring an inaugural eve concert here that will be televised.

If the inaugural parade is to reflect his informal style, it's doubtful that Clinton will just ride up Pennsylvania Avenue in a limousine. He could either walk, as Carter did in 1976, or perhaps take a nostalgic ride in his campaign bus.

The baby boomers, the biggest demographic bulge in American history, have driven the popular culture largely though sheer numbers, and the trend is likely to continue at the generation's first inaugural.

"We're going to have the largest inauguration in history," said Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies.

It's been 12 long years since a Democrat occupied the White House, and Washington is a Democratic town. District officials predict 500,000 people will watch the parade.

Ford expects 250,000 ticketed spectators will watch Clinton sworn in as the nation's 42nd president. That's about 100,000 more than four years ago, when President Bush was inaugurated.

There are actually two groups of inaugural planners — one from Congress and the one composed of supporters of the incoming president.

The joint congressional committee is in charge of the actual swearing-in at the Capitol and issues the formal invitation to the incoming president to make an inaugural address.

"It's a publicly funded ceremony," said John Chambers, executive director of this committee. "The timing is set by the Constitution."

The outgoing president's term expires at noon, he explained. "Hopefully the hand of the new president is in the air at that time" and the oath of office is being administered by the chief justice of the Supreme Court.

The congressional committee builds the inaugural platform, distributes tickets, insures security and hosts a luncheon for officials from the three branches of government.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Blessed with a multitude of talents, you may try several different professions before finding your true niche. Late next month, you see a golden opportunity to make a sizable contribution either to the arts or to society as a whole. Capitalize on an unexpected chance to travel in early 1993. Romance will be particularly rewarding early and late in the year. Once you find the right outlet for your special skills, lasting financial security is assured.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Hope Lange, songwriter Randy Newman, conductor Paul Shaffer, ballet star Alexander Godunov.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An excess of caution could keep you from putting forward a good idea today. Have the courage of your convictions! Family plans may have to take precedence over your personal desires.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your weekend could include a change of plan and accompanying frustration. Take comfort from the fact that the final result will be worth any temporary delay.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Daydreaming is fine so long as you not lose sight of your immediate goals. Concentrate on developing your considerable intellectual gifts. A hobby could turn out to be a real gold mine.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your own interests are indirectly advanced by something you do for someone else today. You may feel that you are on a financial treadmill. Relief is close at hand.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your partner is with you or in your thoughts throughout the day. Skills are being improved through practice. A trip or move is best postponed. Get in touch with your inner self.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A thoughtful approach is essential. Do not jump to conclusions. Your social life will accelerate once you widen your circle of acquaintances. Be careful not to confide too much too soon.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are on top of the world in many ways — enjoying new prestige and the backing of important people. Loyal friends are willing to go where you decide. Keep spending within reason.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Powerful interpersonal connections occupy your thoughts. Discussions concerning travel and lifestyle changes are fascinating and informative.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep your attitude upbeat while tackling necessary tasks. Do not worry if chores take more time than expected. Later, the emphasis is on having fun, sharing an adventure with new friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You and a loved one discuss travel plans or a change of address. Both staying home and visiting new places sound good. The afternoon and evening hours favor socializing within a large group.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A financial decision you make now could cause tension on the domestic front. Be careful when making explanations. Someone's feelings may be more sensitive than usual.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friendships enjoy highly favorable influences this weekend. A pal's problems receive new attention. Keep an open mind. Being a know-it-all will not endear you to your loved ones.

Monaco's Princess Stephanie gives birth to 6.8-pound boy

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — There's a new member of the royal family of Monaco, a son born to Princess Stephanie and her former bodyguard boyfriend.

Louis, named for his great-great-grandfather, was born at 10:10 p.m. Thursday at the Princess Grace Hospital, weighing 6.8 pounds, the principality's press office said.

"Princess Stephanie and the child are doing well," the press office said Friday.

The boy will have little chance of ever taking power in this tiny Riviera gambling state, coming in line after Stephanie's brother, Albert, and her older sister Caroline's two sons, Andrea and Pierre.

Stephanie, 27, entered the hospital Thursday on the arm of her boyfriend, Daniel Ducruet, a former Monaco police officer who later became her bodyguard. He recently left the wholesale fish business to work in real estate and import-export.

The romance between Ducruet and Stephanie reportedly infuriated her father, Prince Rainier.

Stephanie has said she will probably marry Ducruet, 28.

NEW YORK — Model Iman wants to "put a face on pain" by getting her BBC documentary on the suffering in her native Somalia broadcast in the United States.

Iman

"Somalia is not a nation of beggars and looters. I want people to know what it used to be," Iman, 37, says in the December issue of Vogue magazine, in an account of her return to the war-torn, starving African nation with a BBC documentary crew.

"Most journalists and visitors to Somalia portray Somàlis as either hapless victims or violent thieves, but here I meet some unsung heroes — the Somali Red Crescent doctors, nurses and volunteers who have opted to stay and assist their people," Iman said.

She fled Somalia 20 years ago with her diplomat father, physician mother and four brothers and sisters when the former government under Siad Barre suspended the constitution.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Actor Jonathan Frakes says he doesn't mind if he ends up being typecast because of his role as Commander Will Riker on "Star Trek: The Next Generation."

"One of the reasons I enjoy directing is that, should I get so typecast that I don't get other work as an actor, hopefully I'll be able to continue to direct and even produce," Frakes said in an interview published Friday in the Nashville Banner.

"But then, Patrick (Stewart) and I felt that (William) Shatner and (Leonard) Nimoy haven't done too badly. I wouldn't mind Nimoy's career." Stewart plays Riker's boss, Capt. Jean-Luc Picard.

Nimoy, who played the Vulcan Spock in the original "Star Trek" television series and the movies, once felt so frustrated that he wrote a book of poetry called "I Am Not Spock." He also has directed. Shatner played Capt. James T. Kirk.

Frakes was in town for a Trekfest convention for fans today and Sunday.

INDIANA, Pa. — Jimmy Stewart's hometown on Friday renamed the street where the actor grew up to honor his contribution to the town's "wonderful life."

Part of Seventh Street was renamed Jimmy Stewart Boulevard "as a token of our appreciation for all that Mr. Stewart has done in remembering his hometown," said a proclamation signed by Mayor John D. Varner.

Stewart, 84, did not attend the ceremony, but was represented by a boyhood friend, Bill Moorhead.

Moorhead said the actor told him on Thanksgiving Day that he was happy and humbled to be honored.

Stewart last visited Indiana in 1983, when a bronze statue in his likeness was unveiled at the Indiana County Courthouse on his 75th birthday.

A theater group in Indiana is preparing to present a stage production of "It's a Wonderful Life," the perennial holiday favorite in which Stewart starred.

The rapper Marky Mark faces criminal charges if he does not negotiate a settlement within two weeks with a man whose jaw was broken in a fight.

Marky Mark, whose real name is Mark Wahlberg, and a bodyguard were accused of kicking and punching Robert D. Crehan, 20, in an August brawl, The Associated Press reported.

Wahlberg, Crehan and other witnesses testified behind closed doors for almost an hour Tuesday before Assistant Clerk-Magistrate David Underwood in District Court in Dorchester, Mass.

Underwood told The Associated Press that unless the two sides reach an agreement by Dec. 7, Wahlberg and the bodyguard will be charged with assault and battery.

"People will do anything for money," Wahlberg said of the case. "I didn't have anything to do with the altercation. I was present, but I didn't take part."

U.S. issues Libya warning

PARIS (AP) — France, Britain and the United States on Friday issued a stern warning to Libya for failing to renounce terrorism or help bring Libyan suspects of two airline bombings to justice.

The nations vowed to make punitive sanctions against Tripoli "even more effective," but gave no indication how they intended to tighten the U.N. embargo.

Libya contends the U.N. sanctions that ban air travel and arms sales and curtail diplomatic relations have cost the country $2.4 billion since they were imposed March 31.

In a joint statement made public by the French Foreign Ministry, the three allies urged Libya to "stop defying the international community."

It was exactly a year since the three nations demanded that Libya hand over two suspects in the 1988 bombing of a Pan Am flight over Lockerbie, Scotland, and cooperate with an inquiry into the 1989 bombing of a French UTA carrier over Niger.

American medicine ponders its own mortality

By David Briggs
Associated Press writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — A pair of large hearts on either side of her name announce Elizabeth to the world outside. Sounds emanate from the newborn intensive care unit — but they are not Elizabeth's cries.

Elizabeth — her tiny limbs and torso perfectly proportioned but on a frame weighing less than two pounds — cannot cry. The tubes that help her breathe block her vocal chords; a battery of machines monitor her heart and lungs, emitting a low-pitched whine that is the only sound from Elizabeth's crib.

The power and the glory of the American health care system are wrapped up in the high-tech world cradling this 760-gram baby.

Other nations would sacrifice babies such as Elizabeth rather than spend $100,000 to save one life, but at Yale-New Haven Hospital two-thirds of babies her size will live.

After a generation of dizzying technological advances that sent health care in the United States hurtling in pursuit of immortality — at enormous cost — Americans still cling mightily to the idea that health care is a basic human right.

Cheers continue to ring out when a child such as Elizabeth is saved. But a consensus is emerging among many surgeons, ethicists, economists, patients and advocates for the poor and disabled that the American medical system is in danger of spinning ethically and economically out of control.

The common good, they say, is ignored to sustain the "myth" that unlimited health care is available for the asking.

For starters, you need only look at the Third World-like infant mortality rates in some American cities or at the millions of uninsured Americans denied access to basic medical care.

"That's the major medical ethics issue that medical ethics hasn't dealt with," said George Annas, professor of health law at the Boston University Schools of Medicine and Public Health. "We argue whether some white, middle-class person should get an expensive bone marrow transplant. We don't care that 40 million people don't have access to basic medical care."

But the ethical dilemma goes much deeper than that, others say. In a culture that prizes the individual, the question of who makes the final decision — the doctor or the patient — has become the major issue. Few ask whether the treatment is morally justified.

And like the technological world it is struggling to keep up with, the world of medical ethics leaps unbounded across barriers once considered unthinkable.

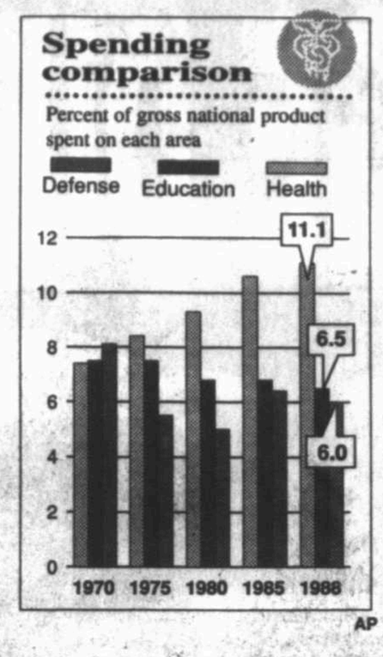

Consider that only within the last couple of years, the focus of end-of-life decisions has moved from pulling the plug on a comatose patient to the morality of physician-assisted suicide, barely stopping to pause to consider the ethics of withholding food and water from a terminally ill patient.

A general consensus has emerged that competent adults can make up their own minds, but who speaks for Baby Doe, Grandma Doe and all the others who cannot speak for themselves?

"The newborn and the severely debilitated aged do not have rights unless they have the power to exercise them. This is nihilism with a vengeance," said the Rev. Richard Neuhaus, president of the Institute on Religion and Public Life in New York. "People are right to be scared to death."

Of particular concern to many ethicists is that economics, not a sudden moral awakening, is driving the hard ethical questions in the United States today.

Economists say the day of reckoning is near for a nation that has avoided the hard questions other countries such as England, Canada, Ireland and Sweden already have faced. With only a limited budget, doctors in many European countries have learned to withhold care from infants with birthweights under 2¼ pounds or terminally ill patients who seek expensive treatments that promise only a limited chance of success.

AP

But not here. In 1960, the United States spent $27 billion, or 5.3 percent of the Gross National Product, on health care. By 1990, the nation was spending $666 billion on health care, or more than 12 percent of the GNP. When the nation faced its first tough choice in rationing health care with kidney dialysis machines, its solution was to buy enough machines for everybody.

"The American way has actually been to buy our way out of the tough decisions," said John J. Paris, professor of bioethics at Boston College. "We really believe that every individual is entitled to whatever medical care he or she wants."

In an Associated Press poll taken last year, 77 percent of the respondents said the government never should be able to refuse to pay for a life-prolonging treatment simply because it is expensive. Eighty-one percent said it is morally unacceptable to withhold a new, unproven cancer treatment because it is very expensive.

But corporations, insurance companies and the government have begun to say no more, cutting back on Medicaid, limiting health coverage and forcing employees to pay more of the costs.

Stopgap measures such as increasing insurance copayments will only delay a little longer the choices that must be made, economists and ethicists say.

"On a general level, people like to subscribe to the myth that value cannot be placed on life, that no price is too great to pay," said Earl Shelp, executive director of the Foundation for Interfaith Research and Ministry in Houston. "Sooner or later, the tinkering will come to an end."

In reality, even the current attitude at best is one of benign neglect, say many emergency room physicians who see the price paid by some Americans who are not welcomed into the health care system.

"I don't think the public really understands that we ration," said John Golenski, president of Bioethics Consultation Group Inc. of Berkeley, Calif.

Compare: Some middle-class parents don't have a second thought about getting a doctor out of bed if their child has a fever. But many poor parents "spike a fever" for days because they cannot afford a doctor's visit.

By the time they visit the emergency room, the condition has so worsened that some children contract meningitis or even die, Golenski said.

"I can see these children," he says in the plaintive voice of a healer who remembers consoling the parents of an 11-year-old girl who died for no reason "other than the parents had no insurance."

Richard Vieco of New York City doesn't have to imagine what it looks like from either side of the American health care system. He has lived for three years with AIDS with the help of a doctor who has put him on a variety of expensive drug treatment programs.

"AIDS has screwed up every single aspect of my life, but I go home and I hug and kiss my wife. Life is worth living," Vieco said.

Others with fewer resources have not been so fortunate.

"It's rough to see. I was laying in the bed and I had 15 doctors looking at me every day. The guy in the bed next to me, he was lucky to see a nurse," Vieco said. "I've seen it a million times. If you've got the money, you get the treatments. If you don't got the money, here's the AZT, and call me if you get worse."

Some philosophers and doctors would ration in other ways. They argue that proportionately less care should be given to the handicapped and elderly because, in general, they will require more medical resources and contribute less to the economy than others.

"There are some real functionalists out there" who would limit care to the disabled, said Rabbi James Rudin of the New York State Task Force on Life and the Law. "'They're not going to contribute to society. We'll give them minimal care.' You can only imagine what that is — 'maintenance' is the favorite word."

AP/Mark Lang

Rudin is not the only one revulsed by the thought. What many ethicists, economists, theologians and physicians are calling for is a national debate to set priorities and limits on health care based on values that go beyond technical expertise or the ability to pay.

They say values such as equal justice, fairness and compassion should be the yardstick when we decide whether to provide babies like Elizabeth with extraordinary services while others die from a lack of basic services such as immunizations and prenatal care.

Or when we decide how much another hug is worth to someone like Richard Vieco, dying of AIDS, while others could use the blood transfusions or funds for a life-saving operation.

"We need to see beyond the individual to the community," said Charles MacKay of the National Institutes of Health.

In an AP poll taken this month by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants, 61 percent of Americans surveyed said they would like to see government take charge of making sure those who need medical treatment most get it first.

But some would say that neither the individual nor the community is served by today's system. More and more, they say, decisions are made by default by insurance companies, corporations and caregivers on purely economic grounds.

Under this scenario, say economists like Lester Thurow of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and ethicists such as Arthur Caplan of the University of Minnesota, what will happen is a gradual slide from a two-tier to a three-tier health system, with the poor and uninsured being pushed down further as many in America's middle class no longer can afford all the health benefits they once took for granted.

In what Caplan calls the "immoral future," society basically writes off the poor and the children and the handicapped because it does not believe health care is a right.

"It's the fact that we don't have consensus on whether health care is a right, and the community has an obligation to fulfill that right, that, in the end, explains why we don't have some form of a national health care system," Caplan said.

All the technological advances in a medical system finally forced to confront its own financial mortality cannot obscure the basic moral questions facing American society, Neuhaus said.

"We're not in an entirely new moment," he said. "We're asking age-old questions: Who's my neighbor and what's my obligation to my neighbor?"

Medical ethics leaps into the great unknown

By David Briggs

BOSTON (AP) — Walk into any intensive care unit in America, says bioethicist John J. Paris, and you'll find at least two beds occupied by patients with no prospects for recovery.

"We ask them what they want, and the answer comes back: 'Everything possible,'" says Paris, a professor at Boston College. "It's another illusion we have — immortality through medicine."

But some inevitable forces of economics and ethics are bringing Americans face to face with their own mortality.

The billions of dollars spent on aggressive care for the dying is the first place ethicists are urging insurance companies, corporations and politicians to look as they seek to control skyrocketing health costs.

"That's a fairly stupid place to spend the money," sums up Thomas Shannon, a professor of social ethics at Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

And some patients, fearful that their last moments will be spent hooked up to a machine denying them any semblance of dignity, are demanding the right to die on their own terms.

Since California in 1977 gave legal force to living wills, all but nine states have passed laws spelling out right-to-die rights. A federal Patient Self-Determination Act that took effect last November requires all hospitals and nursing homes receiving Medicare or Medicaid funding to inform patients of their legal rights to refuse care.

And that's just the start. Last year, voters in the state of Washington nearly approved a measure that would have allowed adults to request and receive aid in dying from their physicians. Forty-six percent voted for Initiative 119.

Some say this debate is healthy. "It's absolutely unacceptable to accept the notion that just because we can treat, we must treat," said medical ethicist Stephen Post of Case Western Reserve University.

Others look at the lack of an ethical consensus that would extend even to giving doctors the right to kill as the first step on to a slippery slope toward eugenics, or the killing of the unwanted in society.

"Society has to support some individuals who are not productive," said Dr. Joseph Masdeu, a neurologist at Westchester County Medical Center in suburban New York. "I think that is the key issue: whether society is ready to take care of its weak and less productive individuals."

Source: The AP poll of 1,014 adults, with a 3-point margin of error, was taken Sept. 27 to Oct. 1, 1991 by ICR Survey Research Group Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants. This margin of error is larger for responses of age subgroups.

AP

In a 1991 Associated Press poll taken by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., 56 percent of the respondents said it is morally unacceptable to withdraw nutrition to hasten the death of a patient who has lost consciousness and has no hope of recovery.

Yet in what may be the greatest irony in the debate, a significant number of people who say they distrust their doctors to follow their wishes to withhold treatment would grant unto the medical profession the most terrifying power of all — the right to kill.

Ethicists also find themselves caught in the middle, generally agreeing that we are spending too much on the end of life but fearful of the speed at which medicine is crossing ethical barriers.

In Europe, a person diagnosed with terminal cancer may get comfort care. Here, said economist Lester Thurow of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, "We throw $200,000 worth of treatment at them, and they do, in fact, die."

Paris estimates there are about 10,000 patients, hooked to respirators without hope, in the nation's hospitals.

"You learn, in fact, we've created a high-tech hospice, an oxymoron if there ever was one," Paris said. "Are we really in the world of Kafka if what we're doing is futile actions and gestures?"

But who should decide when and how "the time to die" spoken of in Ecclesiastes should come to pass?

Dr. William McGee at Bay State Medical Center in Massachusetts didn't go to court to find someone to agree with him when he took a man in his 30s, dying of liver disease, off a ventilator. In so doing, he overruled the patient's wife. The man died the next day.

If treatment does not have any potential benefit from the doctor's point of view, "You just have to say we don't offer that therapy," McGee said.

In the best of all worlds, a patient would provide instructions for his or her care in advance. But David B. Clarke, director of Massachusetts Health Decisions, said that for religious and cultural reasons, the best that can be hoped for is that 15 percent of the population will do it.

As a result, the decisions are torturous.

"I don't know anything anymore," a mother sobbed in an Atlanta courtroom as a hospital sought to remove life-support from her comatose 13-year-old daughter. "All I know is I don't want my baby suffering anymore. I don't want to think I killed her. I don't want other people looking down on me as a murderer."

Dr. David Soule's family watched for months as his aunt grew totally disabled from severe Alzheimer's and Parkinson's diseases. Finally, they asked that her feeding tube be removed: "Whether she knew it or not, this was not the way she wanted to live," Soule said.

The nursing home and the New York State Health Department intervened on behalf of the aunt. Thirty-thousand dollars in legal fees later, the aunt was taken off life support.

But Richard Doerflinger remembers the minimal care his brother received after he slipped into a coma after a car accident 20 years ago. The two brothers still play chess, but his brother must do so from a wheelchair because of the lack of physical therapy he received during the weeks he was in a coma.

Doerflinger questions the relative cost to society of giving up on people in a persistent vegetative state.

"Is life itself, even in a state like that, to be seen as a positive benefit?" asked Doerflinger, of the Secretariat for Pro-Life Activities of the U.S. Catholic Conference. "I think, if we say no, if we say life itself does not have positive value, then we are opening up some ominous doors."

What some fear is that in the absence of any consensus on medical ethics, decisions increasingly will be made on the grounds of the ability to pay; the wealthy will have access to any care they desire, while financial pressures will force more limited care for the poor and middle class.

And those most at risk will be patients unable to speak for themselves — tens of thousands of elderly people suffering from dementia and other diseases in nursing homes, and the severely disabled of all ages, ethicists said.

In an AP poll taken in October, 69 percent of respondents ages 18 to 34 said they would favor a law allowing physician-assisted suicide of a terminally ill person. But less than half of those 65 and over favored such a law.

In a July 1949 article in the New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Leo Alexander wrote that the genocidal polices of the Nazis began with a campaign of active euthaniasia, or "the mass extermination of the chronically sick in the interests of saving 'useless' expenses to the community as a whole."

Shannon said the American culture has a dark side that tends to emphasize efficiency, productivity and perfection, and not to worry about the others.

"The United States was the home of the eugenics movement. Then we saw the practical application of it in Germany," Shannon said. "I get very nervous when one says who counts and who doesn't."

Doctors, patients, families negotiate 'a time to die'

By David Briggs

Dying wasn't always so hard.

A generation ago, seriously ill individuals would be brought to a hospital and treated. Either the treatment would work, or it didn't.

That was before the world of respirators and ventilators and sophisticated feeding equipment, which can prolong even the faintest of lives almost indefinitely.

"Now, when you go into a hospital and have a condition from which you are likely to die, it's more or less a negotiated death," said Ruth Fischbach, assistant professor of social medicine at Harvard Medical School.

And as the world of medical ethics tries to keep apace with the technological advances, the discussion already is shifting from the patient's right to die to the right of the physician or hospital to withhold life-sustaining measures.

Even some physicians who advocate patients' rights express frustration at hospital rules forcing them to provide aggressive care to the dying at the request of the patient or the patient's family.

"It's asking for treatment that doctors don't think is valuable. That's the new stage of this debate," said Daniel Callahan, director of the Hastings Center, an ethical think tank in Briarcliff Manor, N.Y.

Dr. William McGee at Bay State Medical Center in Massachusetts said doctors have a professional responsibility to make the decisions.

"I still think, as a physician, my primary responsibility is to act as a patient advocate," McGee said. "No layperson or no law can really tell me to do something that supersedes my professional judgment."

Others do not want to return to an earlier age when doctors presumed to decide when — or even if — to inform the patient his or her condition was terminal.

"If we are the total arbiters of what is futile, that is paternalism," said Michele A. Carter, former acting chief of the Bioethics Program of the National Institutes of Health.

The stakes already have risen, many ethicists say, as the discussion extends from removing individuals from high-tech machinery such as ventilators or respirators to the morality of no longer feeding comatose patients.

"If we were really straightforward about the language we use in some instances, you can't allow someone to die who is not dying. They're dying in the same sense that we're all dying," said ethicist Gilbert Meilaender of Oberlin College. "The proper way to say that is you're aiming to kill."

WHAT! NEWSPAPER ROUTES?

That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your "day job." Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: 95% of our Distributors NOW are ADULTS supplementing their income with Route Distributorships!

Fact: Our Distributors make from $400-$800 monthly AFTER expenses, some even more!

The catch? You've gotta be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING, or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

Call 688-2700 and start making that extra car payment today!
