Hundreds brave cold to pay last respects to Hubert Humphrey

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hubert H. Humphrey returned to Washington on Saturday, where he was mourned in death as he had been revered in life by his family, colleagues and countless Americans.

Hundreds of persons braved the winter cold to pay last respects to Humphrey. Many wept as they filed past his body, which lay in state under the soaring dome of the Capitol — the scene of many of Humphrey's victories, defeats and most memorable orations.

Humphrey, 66, lost his long and valiant battle with cancer at 9:25 p.m. CST Friday at his home in Waverly, Minn. A presidential jet transported Humphrey's body to the nation's capital on Saturday morning.

A 19-gun salute — the honor due Humphrey as a former vice president—was sounded as Humphrey arrived at Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Maryland and again when the body arrived at the Capitol at the head of a 14-car motorcade.

A military band played "God of Our Fathers" and "A Mighty Fortress is our God."

The body of Minnesota's senior senator was borne by eight uniformed soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines into the Capitol building that was the hallmark and symbol of his long Washington career.

Humphrey, who sought but never won the presidency, was lain on the black velvet catafalque first used in 1865 for the body of slain President Abraham Lincoln.

Many who passed Humphrey's flag-draped, closed coffin were crying. More than one said, "He touched my life."

"I don't think there's a more beloved figure in American politics today," said Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, who was Humphrey's vice presidential running mate in 1968.

"If the country had known him and thought of him in '68 as they do today, he would have won by an overwhelming landslide," Muskie said.

The spot in the center of the rotunda was first used for the state funeral of Henry Clay, a congressional statesman of another era. Humphrey is the 25th American to lie in state there.

President Carter, who hailed Humphrey as a champion of the poor, the oppressed, and the hungry, dispatched a presidential Air Force jet to return the body to Washington.

Humphrey's body will lie in state for 24 hours and then be returned to Minnesota and taken to the state capitol at St. Paul. The Capitol was to be open continuously for mourners desiring to pay their last respects.

West Texans join in homage to Humphrey

By JIM STEINBERG

"'I love this country, George. We have got to preserve it,'" recalled Congressman George Mahon of his last conversation with Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey.

"He was a charming and attractive man. He was one of the most attractive men I've encountered in my life... an eloquent speaker who no doubt wanted to serve the people he loved. Liberals or conservatives will mourn his passing," Rep. Mahon said in an interview with The Midland Reporter-Telegram Saturday.

Humphrey died Friday night at his Minnesota home. He was 66. He had been undergoing chemical treatments for cancer.

"My last recollection of him was on Dec. 19. The President asked about 12 people from Congress to a two-hour lunch at the White House. Senator Humphrey was there and sat at the President's right. He participated actively in the discussion and although he looked bad, he was just as buoyant as ever. I don't understand how he kept his sense of humor during this very trying period as he fought the losing battle against cancer," Mahon said.

Humphrey began his long bout with cancer in 1966.

"When the luncheon was over, he asked me to ride to the capital with him...he dropped me off at the House of Representatives. He said he wanted to rest a while before a 3 o'clock meeting. That was my final goodbye," Mahon said.

"He was a true patriot. That he was too liberal for Midland and George Mahon did not detract from his charm and sincere concern for fellow human beings," Mahon said.

"Mrs. Mahon and I were invited from time to time to have supper in the White House with LBJ and Lady Bird. And on many occasions Senator Humphrey and Muriel (Humphrey's wife) would be there. I have very pleasant memories of the senator. I join in paying tribute to this great American," Mahon concluded.

"He really set the standards for human needs," said Dallas J. Willis of Midland, president of the Odessa and vicinity AFL-CIO. "He was the greatest champion of people that we have ever had."

Willis said he met Humphrey many times and first became a supporter of his during his (Humphrey's) campaign for mayor in Minneapolis.

"The last time I met him was at a convention in Washington in early 1976. He looked like the old Hubert Humphrey. He made just a tremendous speech. It was one of the most exciting speeches I have ever heard."

"He set the standards and spoke up when everyone else was afraid to. He was a great man that came within an inch of being president," Willis said.

"We lost a really great man," said Mrs. Eva Dennis of Midland. "I saw him speak when I went to a War on Poverty meeting in Tucson, Ariz., in 1964. That meeting was the beginning of Head Start in Midland," Mrs. Dennis said.

"He impressed me. His thoughts were always on the downtrodden," Mrs. Dennis said.

"His death was the loss of a great leader who devoted his life to public service," said 238th District Judge Van Culp.

"He was a fantastic person," observed Midland County Commissioner Charlie Welch.

New office building set

February will be the starting month for construction on a new $6 million office building on the northeast corner of Wall and Big Spring Streets, William C. Blanks, oil and gas producer, announced Saturday.

The building will provide eleven floors of office space, plus a ground floor and lower level for retail establishments. There will be 112,250 square feet in all.

The exterior of the building will be sheer bronze aluminum and bronze double-pane insulating glass. It will have a spacious, two-level atrium lobby, three high speed elevators, carpeted office space with high ceilings and provisions for executive parking, Blanks said Saturday.

Design and supervision of the project is by Frank Welch Associates of Midland.

General contractor is to be Area Builders, Inc., of Midland. This firm built the Commercial Bank and Trust building, the Forest Oil and Coquina Oil buildings, and is presently constructing Trinity Towers Addition, the Midland Community Theater and Midland Memorial Hospital addition.

'No hope' for agreement—Sadat

By The Associated Press

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, in a gloomy appraisal of Mideast peace efforts with Israel, said in an interview published Saturday he has "absolutely no hope" for an agreement on principles that could lead to a settlement.

Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin responded to Sadat's comments by calling for a "cease-fire" on political statements.

"Sadat said what he said," Begin told Israeli state radio after a meeting with Israel's negotiating team. "I won't get involved in a dialectic about Sadat's statement," he said.

Sadat's pessimistic statement came just two days before Israeli and Egyptian foreign ministers open crucial peace negotiations in Jerusalem.

"I announce from now that I have absolutely no hope that such a statement (of principle) can be achieved," Sadat was quoted as saying.

Sadat has taken an increasingly tough tone in recent public statements on the negotiations. In the interview he seemed to stop just short of saying specifically that the entire peace effort was a failure.

If it does fail, he said, "we shall have another attitude."

Begin met for 1½ hours with his negotiators and top government ministers to map out Israel's negotiating strategy for the next round of talks with the Egyptians.

"We are engaged in direct negotiations between the sides," Begin said. "Let's give a chance to direct talks."

The interview with Sadat was conducted Thursday, a day after Sadat met Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman at Aswan, Egypt. Weizman was in Egypt for talks on the military aspects of a peace settlement. Those talks have been suspended pending developments in the political talks in Jerusalem.

Commenting on the hour-long meeting, Sadat was quoted as saying in the interview, "Weizman came and we discussed. He is a kind person, but the same old picture of everything has returned to Israel."

The statement appeared to underline Sadat's claim that Israel has not reciprocated with its own concessions in exchange for his bold diplomatic initiative, which began with a historic journey to Jerusalem last November.

HHH death brings Nixon to capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon returned to the nation's capital Saturday night, his first visit since he resigned the presidency in 1974, to pay tribute to one-time foe Hubert H. Humphrey.

Nixon, who defeated Humphrey in the 1968 presidential election, was expected to visit the Capitol Rotunda where Humphrey's body lay in state. The former senator's flag-draped coffin will be flown today to Minnesota for burial Monday.

Nixon flew by commercial jet. When he left the Los Angeles airport he was driven to the boarding ramp to avoid crowds at the terminal. He walked briskly past reporters and declined to respond to questions.

The former president has lived at

Vance postpones journey

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian-Israeli political talks were suddenly unsettled late Saturday with the postponement of Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's mission to Jerusalem and indications that Egypt is seeking to delay the start of the peace negotiations.

The talks were set to begin Monday in Jerusalem, but a snag over the Palestinian issue caused Vance to call off his flight just 90 minutes before his scheduled 10 p.m. EST departure.

At the same time, reports were circulated here that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat may instruct his foreign minister to hold off the start of deliberations.

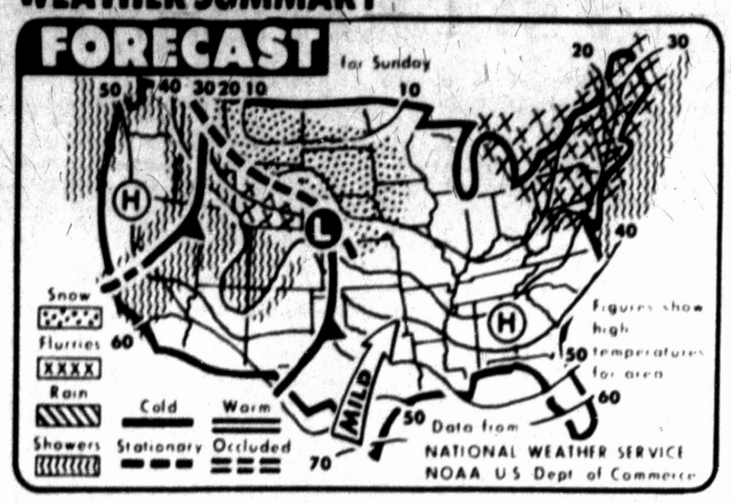

It was learned that in Cairo, Sadat had summoned Hermann Eilts, the U.S ambassador, to an early Sunday morning session at which the Egyptian leader presumably planned to relay his decision.

U.S officials emphasized, however, that they expected the negotiations to open at some future time, and some thought Vance might be on his way to Jerusalem as early as tonight.

The political talks are designed to find a framework for a settlement of the 30-year-old Arab-Israeli conflict. However, a snag developed over the agenda for the talks that U.S. officials said remained unresolved despite "intensive communication with the parties during the day."

That led to a brief announcement late Saturday that Vance was altering his plans because the two sides had failed to reach agreement on the agenda.

Association's handbook has advice for new grand jurors

By LINDA HILL SCHAFFRINA

"Be independent, but not obstinate."

"Listen to the evidence and the opinions of your fellow jurors, but don't be a rubber stamp."

That advice comes from the handbook for new grand jurors compiled by the Texas District and County Attorneys Association.

The grand jury listens to evidence in felony cases and decides whether there is enough evidence for a person to be tried. It does not decide guilt or innocence.

Most of the handbook is devoted to the history and procedures of the grand jury, which in Texas is selected by "commissioners" appointed by a district judge.

But a portion of the book is devoted to "practical suggestions" for the juror.

Jurors are urged to attend sessions "regularly and on time" and ask permission of the formnan if unable to attend. "The unexpected lack of a quorum causes a great inconvenience."

In order to underscore the need for truth from a witness, the book suggests that the oath be administered "in an impressive manner."

Several of the suggestions involve consideration of the other jurors: "Express your opinion, but don't be dictatorial." "Although your mind may be made up, if others wish to pursue the matter further, you have no right to dismiss the ness or shut off proper discussion."

Jurors should "pay close attention" to the proceedings, the handbook says. And, "do not keep silent when the case is under discussion and then begin to talk about it after a vote has been taken."

The vote of nine of 12 grand jury members is sufficient to return an indictment against an individual.

Although grand juries can conduct investigations, the handbook has some words of caution on the subject:

"Do not investigate matters out of the province of the grand jury or merely because someone suggested an investigation, without sufficient information."

Another note of caution urges the jurors to remember that "a reckless grand jury can do as much harm to the community and to law enforcement as a weak grand jury."

The jurors are cautioned never to try to force a defendant to testify before them because that could nullify the resulting indictment.

And a final piece of advice: "The grand jury should know the difference between sin and crime and act accordingly."

11 dead as tremors shake Japan

TOKYO (AP) — More than 120 earth tremors jolted Japan's eastern seaboard late Friday and Saturday, leaving at least 11 persons dead, 15 others missing and 14 injured. The upheavals carved a ribbon of destruction in this quake-prone nation.

Police said the casualty toll could mount as rescue teams searched affected communities on the Izu Peninsula, focal point of the quakes. The peninsula is 150 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Ten powerful shocks hit Saturday, including one that registered 7 on the Richter scale, a figure that indicates a potential for widespread heavy damage.

The quakes touched off landslides along the Izu Peninsula, a resort area popular for its natural hot springs. The area was last hit by a serious quake in May 1974, when 30 persons were killed and 77 injured.

Police said damage to roadways was hampering efforts to rescue several persons trapped in a bus buried under a landslide at Kawazu on the peninsula.

The strongest of Saturday's major quakes struck at 12:24 p.m. and was centered some 80 miles south of Tokyo. It was felt along an 800-mile stretch of coastline.

Numerous buildings and roads on the island, another popular resort area, were damaged by the quake. It also disrupted electrical power for more than three hours and forced authorities to close schools.

In Tokyo, frightened residents streamed into the streets as windows rattled and dishware bounced off shelves. No major damage was reported in the capital.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

Texans pay tribute to Hubert Humphrey

By The Associated Press

Hubert Humphrey "taught us a lot about living and loving and drying," said Lady Bird Johnson.

The Minnesota senator, who died Friday of cancer at age 66, served as vice president during Lyndon Johnson's term in the White House.

"The country met him as a bouyant young man and we watched him grow in grace," Mrs. Johnson said in a statement released in Austin.

"He gave us so much love and earned so much in return. I am glad we shared some 30 years with him in Washington and even since he has enriched our lives by visits here and to the LBJ Library," she added.

Mrs. Johnson was in Richmond, Va. for the swearing-in of her son-in-law, Charles Robb, as Virginia's new lieutenant governor.

George Christian, who was Johnson's press secretary, said "I never met a man in public life with more decency and compassion.

"The truth is, I've never known any political figure, here or in Washington, that I thought was a more decent man than Hubert Humphrey. I think he would have been a good president, and one of my deepest regrets is that he didn't get the opportunity to serve as president," Christian said.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said the "world has lost a blithe, ebulent spirit who reveled in the struggle for suffering humanity and never gave up hope in the essential goodness of the human race."

Wright went to Congress in 1954 and later served as the Texas campaign manager for Humphrey's unsuccessful presidential bid in 1968.

"He is perhaps the only man I know who never allowed defeat to change into defeatism or success to turn spoil into conceit," he said.

Cloudy, cool days forecast

Partly cloudy skies and temperatures in upper 50s and an overnight low near 30 degrees are predicted for today through Monday.

Saturday's high was 56 degrees and the overnight low Saturday was 27 degrees, according to the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Area towns reported cool temperatures, clear skies and a light breeze Saturday night.

Carter says HHH 'set example'

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter issued the following statement after the death of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey:

"From time to time, our nation is blessed by the presence of men and women who bear the mark of greatness, who help us see a better vision of what we can become. Hubert Humphrey was such a man.

"For 30 years, his voice was heard from one end of this country to the other — most often in defense of the oppressed, the hungry, the victims of poverty and discrimination. All of us will miss that voice. It was as familiar to Americans as the voice of a member of their family. And, in a sense, Hubert Humphrey was a member of every family in America.

"Hubert Humphrey was a fundamentally happy man, a man who really did love his fellow human beings and in victory and in defeat, he set an example of generosity, sincerity, and hope.

"The only thing more courageous than the way in which he led his life was the manner in which he left it.

"In our laws and institutions, his memorials will endure. The most lasting of them will be in our hearts. (First lady) Rosalynn and I extend our deepest sympathy to Muriel Humphrey (Humphrey's wife)."

Sen. Humphrey 'not a quitter'

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — "If will power could conquer cancer, he would have done it," Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's personal physician said Saturday.

Dr. John Najarian said Humphrey, who died Friday night, "was not a quitter. He did not know what the meaning of that word was."

Before the Democratic senator died of cancer, Najarian said, "He still had hope that there were many more tomorrows to come. He never knew the end was close — or never accepted it, anyway.

"He was just the kind of a man who wouldn't take pain medication," said Najarian, chief of surgery at University of Minnesota Hospitals. "He wanted to fight this thing in the way that he fought everything and he refused medication."

Najarian said Humphrey's final hours were "peaceful because in the morning the senator became quite comatose. He was arousable but was in a sleep.

Muriel Humphrey leaves the Capitol flanked by Senate Chaplain Edward L. R. Elson, Vice President Walter Mondale and members of the Humphrey and Mondale families.

Sen. Humphrey gestures over a cake presented him the day before his birthday last May. Also celebrated was the taping on NBC-TV's "Today" show. Humphrey died Friday at 66.

Depression shaped Humphrey's politics

By TERRY WOSTER

DOLAND, S. D. (AP) — Coming of age in the Depression in South Dakota shaped the politically liberal outlook of Hubert H. Humphrey.

"Many people think that what I remember most is politics," the Minnesota senator and former vice president once said in an interview. "But there are several other very vivid memories.

"I remember the Depression of the 1930s and what it did to people," he said. "That's left on my whole political, physical and mental makeup an everlasting mark."

Humphrey was born in tiny Wallace, S.D., and spent his school days in Doland, where his family operated a drugstore. When the Depression hit, the 19-year-old Humphrey had to leave the University of Minnesota and return to help out in the family store, then in Huron.

Two of Humphrey's classmates in the Doland High School class of 1929 said that although the Depression caused some people to wither, Humphrey seemed to grow because of the experience.

"He talked about it many times," Homer Krentz said Saturday, the day after Humphrey's death at age 66. "I was never willing to take a real chance or borrow much money after that. But Hubert wasn't that way. I think it made him appreciate people's problems."

"It (the Depression) gave him a real ambition," Deschler Welch said. "He sure learned how to work. Things were tough in Doland, and I think Hubert learned his good feelings toward all people during that time, and developed his concern that everybody should have a chance to live. The guy in business, Hubert wanted to see that he earned a buck."

Both Krentz and Welch are retired farmers and Welch said he, like Humphrey, has inoperable pelvic cancer.

Asked whether the Depression left any bitter marks on his famous classmate, Welch replied, "Hubert was never bitter about anything."

"Everything I do is based on his philosophy," Humphrey said. "He didn't scold me for staying out late, he just gave me more work to do the next day. He hoped that in this way I'd catch on to the idea that you couldn't do both.

"My father said everybody has something good about them. He was the happiest, jolliest man I ever knew."

Hundreds stand in cold to pay respects to HHH

Hope Presbyterian Church in Minneapolis.

Carter will speak at a memorial service for Humphrey at 11 a.m. Sunday. The invitationonly ceremony is to be attended by hundreds of members of Congress and past and present government officials.

Immediately after Humphrey's casket was laid on the Lincoln catafalque a private prayer service for the Humphrey family was conducted by the Rev. Edward Elson, chaplain of the Senate.

"Surely he was one who did justly, loved mercy, and walked humbly before Thee all the days of his mortal life," Elston said.

He spoke of what he said was Humphrey's condemnation of social evil, his compassion for the dispossessed, "his inclusive love of all mankind."

Mrs. Muriel Humphrey, the senator's wife of 41 years, was escorted by Vice President Walter Mondale and his wife, Joan.

Mrs. Humphrey, wearing a salmon-colored dress under a waist length fur coat, greeted many of her husband's mourners with a kiss, a hug, a smile.

The national and vice presidential flags stood at the head of the coffin. A floral spray of red and white carnations sent by Carter was at its foot. The Senate sent a large display of white chrysanthemums.

Mondale said Humphrey lived by the standard that life is not to be endured but to be enjoyed.

"I loved him for the special way he touched my life, but even more for the graceful way he lived his own life and the courageous way he faced his own death," the vice president said. "If there has ever been a man more filled with decency, compassion, tolerance and kindness, I do not know him."

Much the same thought was expressed by many czens who stood under gray skies and in chilling temperatures, waiting for an opportunity to pass by Humphrey's coffin.

"He had courage in everything," said a woman who could not contain her sobs and tears. "It just symbolizes all the people who are suffering in the world. He was just an inspiration to everyone."

Nixon was accompanied by his aide, retired Marine Lt. Col. Jack Brennan. Pat Nixon apparently did not accompany her husband, but daughter Tricia Nixon Cox was flying from New York to meet her father.

Nixon, in a statement after Humphrey's death Friday night, said the Minnesotan was a decent and honorable man who commanded "the genuine respect and affection of his political opponents and allies alike."

Nixon is to return to Los Angeles Monday, an airline spokesman said. Meanwhile, former President Gerald Ford told reporters at his Palm Springs home that he also plans to fly to Washington.

Ford said he plans to spend most of Sunday in Washington, then go to St. Paul, Minn., for services for Humphrey there Monday.

Mexico tries to halt baby boom

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican government is making its first effort to halt an explosion of the nation's population, which if left unchecked could equal or exceed that of the United States in 40 years.

A $130 million-a-year federal family program aims at reducing population growth from a record 3.2 to 1 percent annually by the turn of the century.

Officials from President Jose Lopez Portillo down say it is none too soon.

"We should have started 20 years ago; we are 20 years too late," says Dr. Jorge Martinez Manatou, 47, the health coordinator of the project, which includes the distribution of birth control pills and a wide-ranging educational program.

The present population of 64 million already is straining Mexico's resources. Housing is becoming increasingly scarce, especially in the big cities ringed by slums. Food supplies are dropping and unemployment is steadily on the rise.

Half the work force is either without work altogether or hold only part-time jobs.

As a result, millions of Mexicans have been migrating illegally to the United States. As many as 8 million Mexicans are believed living and working illegally in the United States.

The U.S. Border Patrol says it apprehended more than a million illegal Mexican aliens in 1977 and its officers believe that probably twice that number or more managed to get through undetected.

U.S. Ambassador Patrick J. Lucey describes the illegal migrations as the No. 1 problem between the two countries. It is also listed as one of the topics Vice President Walter F. Mondale expects to discuss with Lopez Portillo when he visits Mexico later this week.

The Mexican population has been rising most rapidly in rural areas where families of eight to 14 children are still the rule because of widespread poverty, ignorance and the lack of labor-saving machinery.

"Every additional child is another pair of arms to do the work," goes the saying in the Mexican countryside.

Because of that, Mexico's population has been doubling every two decades.

That means that if unchecked, Mexico by the year 2020 will match or exceed the population of the United States, which is now estimated at 216 million and has reached near-zero growth. Yet, Mexico is only one-fifth the size of the United States and has barely one-sixth its resources.

Nothing has been done up to now to control births in Mexico which is the principal world producer of birth control pill ingredients derived from barbasco, a wild-growing weed from the southern jungles known scientifically as "dioscorea floribunda."

The new program, supervised by a Cabinet-level committee of seven, has the tacit blessing of the Roman Catholic Church — so long as it does not include encouragement of abortions.

"Abortion is not being touched," says health coordinator Martinez Manatou. "On the contrary, widespread family planning will definitely reduce the incidence of illegal abortions because fewer women will get pregnant without wanting to.

"We have no problem with the church. In our educational and propaganda campaign we are teaching both the church's methods of natural birth control (the rhythm method) and other methods. We are teaching them all and we will let the users — the women themselves — choose."

Abortion is legal in Mexico only in cases of rape or when a woman's life is endangered by a pregnancy. Nevertheless, medical authorities and feminist groups estimate that 600,000 to a million abortions are performed illegally each year with 25,000 to 60,000 women dying because of unskilled medical attention or unsanitary conditions.

The project calls for the free distribution of birth-control devices — principally the pill — at a cost of $12 to $13 per woman annually.

The target is for 4.4 million women, a fifth of the female population of child-bearing age, to be using some form of birth control by 1982, when it is hoped the population growth will be down to 2.5 percent.

Some 14,000 state hospitals, clinics and first aid stations have been given the task of distributing the contraceptives along with birth-control literature.

Artists become No. 1 American urban pioneers

By LEE MITGANG
AP Urban Affairs Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — They live in shacks in Atlanta, abandoned storefronts in Chicago, an old railway express office in Dallas, a warehouse in San Francisco, the shell of a supermarket in Washington, D.C.

They are artists, mostly, claiming what may be America's last housing frontier — loft buildings no one else has the desire or ingenuity to turn into dwellings. What stands between these pioneers and their homes are bureaucrats, landlords, and a maze of city zoning laws and building codes.

These wilderness areas are in the hearts of a dozen or more American cities — abandoned tenements, factory buildings and even chicken coops that only the artistic eye and imagination could picture as a place to work and live.

This so-called "loft movement" had its spiritual start in SoHo in Lower Manhattan in the mid-'60s when perhaps 10,000 artists turned century-old abandoned factories into inexpensive, spacious dwellings and saved that neighborhood from the usual fate of the wrecking ball and the high-rise slum.

Artists are now creating loft homes in many other cities, and the movement is described in a recent book, "Pioneering in the Urban Wilderness," by Jim Stratton.

"There are converted loft spaces from Tampa, Fla., to Portland, Maine, to Seattle to Los Angeles. Many are isolated, and most seem isolated from the standpoint of their solitary residents, just as the New York pioneers before 1970 thought they were alone," Stratton says.

The experiences described in the author's interviews with loft dwellers in 23 cities range from heroic struggles to bitter ironies.

Most ironic, says Stratton, is that when artists finally win the right from officials and real estate interests to improve dilapidated buildings and save neighborhoods, they may ultimately lose their new homes to high prices created by outside demand.

The haven that SoHo artist-pioneers created out of the Lower Manhattan wilderness drew interest from the middle class, the chic, the greedy. "Vanity lofts" that appealed to the wealthy were built, boutiques and art galleries and restaurants were opened, and some pioneers are being driven out by soaring rents.

In the best circumstances, the host city will ignore the inevitable list of code and zoning violations when these urban pioneers convert a building never meant to be lived in.

"City zoning says we can't live here, but they are so happy about artists moving in that they leave us alone," says Richard Childers, an artist whom Stratton found living in an abandoned Railway Express office in downtown Dallas.

Zoning laws are generally ignored in Denver, too, where Beverly Rosen lives and paints in an 85-year old raccoon skinning factory.

In fact, urban pioneers seeking "alternative space," as Stratton calls it, have had little to complain about in several other cities where building renovation is in vogue, including Baltimore, Chicago, Los Angeles, Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

But in Kansas City it was a different story, says Stratton. Artists for some time had been moving into and improving the city's skid row, called the River Quay, not far from the stripjoint and gangland neighborhood. Then the city decided to build its convention center in the heart of the sleazy area.

The strippers and muggers had to move. They chose the emerging artist district, where gang wars blew up three buildings and scared many artists away, Stratton says.

More often, the problems the loft-pioneer encounters are inside the loft — problems that can defy the master plumber, carpenter, electrician or exterminator, much less the amateur. Stratton isn't kidding. The mayhem the urban pioneer finds in most loft buildings is as difficult to clear as the wilderness tackled 200 years ago by less urban-minded pilgrims.

"The ancient pipes which have been cut away, the rusty metal plates on the floor, the dangerous old electrical lines which buzz and sparkle on the ceiling, all of this is useful to someone — although that someone is probably not the loft dweller," says Stratton.

For the few who, after reading Stratton's book, still feel irresistibly drawn, hammer and eviction notice in hand, to the nearest rundown city factory, the author offers some tips to keep in mind:

—"The bureaucrat who knows least is the bureaucrat most anxious to prove it."

—"When a loft is renovated, things will take about twice as long and cost about twice as much as expected."

—"If something is not the way the code says it should be, redefine it so that it will conform."

—"In choosing a loft neighbor, discretion is the better part of value."

—"Anything which is not nailed down is mine. Anything I can pry loose is not nailed down."

Rome becoming terror capital

Agence France-Presse

ROME — Rome, the capital of Italy, the capital of Christianity, is now the capital of terrorism.

The Eternal City has replaced the industrial city of Turin as the haunt of fear and sudden death in Italy. Gangs of trigger-happy youths, at war with the world, prowl the darkened streets ready to shoot to kill in defense of obscure political beliefs of extreme right or left.

It is the youth of the killers and victims that appals most citizens of the ancient city which has seen so much violence in more than 2,500 years of history. They even talk of today's violence as a civil war between teenagers.

"Their political beliefs don't count. They are mad and they are children," said one workman. Anxious parents tell their children not to get involved with demonstrations when they leave for school in the morning. But the high-schools have become the scenes of bloody clashes between students of the right and left.

"In the old days, it happened in demonstrations, we knew what it was all about when firing started. Now we don't know. We don't understand any more," said a man selling newspapers heading the latest shootings.

Shots ring out at any time round the street corners. Two obscure right-wingers (aged 19 and 20) were gunned down last week on the road to Ostia, a quiet road in Appio district. No one and no place is safe.

The red brigades used to zero in on magistrates and big businessmen, journalists and, of course, policemen. Now almost anyone can be candidate for death.

Martin County girl raises champion steer

Miss Yates, a sophomore at Grady High School, is in the 4-H Club and in the Future Farmers of America chapter.

"We usually do pretty good at the county show," said Ricky Vestal, the vocational agriculture teacher at Grady. Miss Yates is one of his FFA students.

"We did all right," said Vestal.

Approximately 100 4-H and FFA youths from throughout Martin County entered 74 swine, 61 sheep, 33 steers and four heifers in the show, said Martin County Agricultural Agent Preston Faris.

Faris described the livestock show as "good, very good quality, I thought."

The show's reserve champion steer was by Sharalyn Holcomb of Klondike. Her steer weighed in at 1,215 pounds. Miss Yates' grand champion hit the scales at 1,260.

Carter accused of provocation

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ethiopia's Marxist government accused President Carter Saturday of provoking rebel warfare in the Ogaden region of eastern Ethiopia and hinted it might break diplomatic relations with the United States.

A statement by the Foreign Ministry was issued in response to Carter's remarks at a news conference Thursday. Carter said that Soviet involvement in the eastern Horn of Africa, including military support to Ethiopia, has contributed to the undeclared war raging between Ethiopia and Somalia.

"In view of the fact that the infatuous Somalia ruling clique has...unleashed a wanton and unprovoked aggression against Ethiopia, how can Mr. Carter doubt that the responsibility for the disturbances of peace and stability in the region is squarely with Somalia?" said the statement carried by Ethiopia's official news agency.

It added: "It was the (Washington) administration, and in particular Mr. Carter, that prodded the Somalia expansionists to launch their aggression against Ethiopia. Ethiopia, therefore, considers that the U.S. administration shares responsibility.

"Ethiopia believes that if the U.S. government continues its policy of interference and support for the Somalia aggressors, such an irresponsible act will inevitably force Ethiopia to reconsider the framework of her relationship with the American government."

The military government that overthrew the late Emperor Haile Selassie in 1974 has been fighting secessionist wars on two fronts — one against rebels seeking automony in the northern province of Eritrea and the second in the Ogaden. Ethnic Somali tribesmen are seeking to annex the Ogaden desert region to Somalia.

One student killed in fraternity fire

DALLAS (AP) — Although a newly installed smoke alarm system warned the students in a fraternity house, a Southern Methodist University sophomore from Missouri was killed in an early Saturday morning fire.

Some 35 others students, several of whom were nude, jumped out of windows onto concrete and bushes surrounding the three-story structure.

The body of Lewis, who was studying journalism and public relations, was discovered on the ground floor, authorities said.

TIME LIMIT FOR LOAN

People who try to sell their own homes often run into problems regarding the time factor. By time factor we mean not only the time required for the entire transaction, but also the period required for obtaining a loan.

The familiar story usually goes something like this: A person trying to sell their home finds a potential buyer. There are meetings, discussions, forms, more meetings, and finally an agreement is reached. Everything's fine except for the rather important matter of money. The buyer has to go out and try to get a loan, and this takes time. He assures the seller that he is trying his best to get a mortgage.

Days drag into weeks, and weeks go into months. Soon it becomes apparent that the buyer really doesn't want to buy the property and is using the finding of a loan as an excuse to stall.

In order to avoid this, a contingency clause in the contract should allow the buyer a certain time period to get a loan OR allow the seller to get a loan for the buyer!

Collyns to speak at Hodge program

BROWNWOOD — W. H. "Bill" Collyns, editor of The Midland Reporter-Telegram, will be the speaker at the inaugural dinner program for Mrs. Veda Hodge, also of Midland, who will be installed on Jan. 23 as president the Howard Payne University Board of Trustees.

Mrs. Hodge, a longtime friend and benefactress of HPU, will be installed as the first woman ever elected to the HPU board presidency, as well as the first woman ever elected to the board of any other college or university owned or operated by the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

The program will be held in the Brownwood Coliseum.

"All of us are delighted," HPU President Dr. Roger Brooks said, "to have Mr. Collyns appear on the program honoring our longtime friend, Mrs. Hodge."

"As a longtime Midland resident and immediate past president of the West Texas and Texas State chambers of commerce," Dr. Brooks continued, "Collyns is familiar with the many contributions Mrs. Hodge has made to the civic, religious and educational institutions and causes not only of West Texas, but of the entire state."

Mrs. Hodge was elevated to the Howard Payne University board presidency from the first vice presidency.

Salute to Jaycees!

And this is just what Midland Jaycees, an alert, hard-working group of civic-minded young men, have been doing ever since they were organized as the Midland Junior Chamber of Commerce almost 40 years ago.

Midlanders have every reason to be proud of their Jaycees and of their achievements through the years.

They have been active in so many areas of community betterment and development that it is not possible to list all of their achievements in this space. But the far-reaching benefits of their endeavors are evident throughout the city and vicinity.

The delivery of pre-ordered pecan trees Saturday, while working in cooperation with the Visual Improvement Project Committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, is an example of the kind of community services provided by the Jaycees.

Their multi-phased Christmas projects conducted during the recent holiday season and their assistance in the annual "Christmas in April" program are other examples of their good works in serving people as well as community improvement programs.

A sincere expression of appreciation from a grateful community is very much in order, and what better time to say "Thanks" to the young men involved than during JAYCEE WEEK, which is being observed in Midland and across the nation, beginning today.

Midland Jaycees opened their observance last Thursday night, when they staged their annual Distinguished Service Award and Bosses Night Banquet, with Congressman George Mahon as the speaker. Joseph W. Campbell was recognized as Midland's "Outstanding Young Man of '77," and Parker Humes was named "Boss of the Year."

The Midland Jaycee chapter, incidentally, is one of the largest and most active in Texas, with enrollment exceeding 300 members. The chapter is the recipient of numerous service and leadership awards won in recent months. David Howard is president of the Midland unit.

A chapter also was organized recently at Midland College.

Another major benefit of the Jaycee program is the training and development of young men in community leadership and good citizenship roles.

Young men between the ages of 18 and 35 who are not now Jaycees could serve well themselves and their community by becoming members of the young men's organization which "gets things done."

A snappy salute is directed to the Jaycees, along with all best wishes, as JAYCEE WEEK unfolds.

Livestock Show time

Once again, it's Midland County FFA and 4-H Livestock Show time in the Tall City, with the 1978 event opening today and continuing through Tuesday.

Members of 4-H Clubs and Future Farmers of America chapters have worked long and hard in selecting, feeding and developing their lamb, swine and calf projects.

And now come the time to show and sell their fine, fat and fancy animals. This is one of the greatest occasions in their yet young lives. They are as proud as can be of their steers, lambs and hogs and they want as many persons as possible to see and inspect them.

It is hoped that Midland and area residents in large numbers will avail themselves of the opportunity to do just that in the Midland County Exhibit Building on East Highway 80.

The animals will be placed today and judged Monday, with all of the stock to be on public display through Tuesday. The auction sale is scheduled at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Congratulations to the Midland County 4-H and FFA members and instructors, and may the 1978 show be the best ever.

CHARLEY REESE:

Fritz Mondale: just what country's dropouts need

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — Vice President Walter Mondale, who just visited Orlando, Fla., for a Democratic fund-raising affair, often has been compared to St. Paul — one of the dullest cities in America.

I think, however, he is just what the country's drop-outs need. There is no need to smoke pot or to shoot heroin into your veins to escape from reality. Just believe Fritz.

From his remarks in Orlando, we learned that Bert Lance who was tagging along with him, is a hero. Lance, you may recall, resigned as budget director while his private banking affairs were being investigated.

Mondale apparently has his own dictionary because I checked the three definitions in mine to see if Lance qualifies as a hero.

He hardly is a man of great strength and courage favored by the gods. He looks out of shape to me, and the gods of the Senate were not so kind to him.

Lance fails the second definition, too: any man admired for his courage, nobility or exploits, especially in war. As a matter of fact, Lance fails the third definition: any person admired for his qualities or achievements and regarded as an ideal or a model.

However, if the Vice President of the United States wishes to model his life after Bert Lance, that's his business.

As for President Carter, Mondale proclaimed the first year of his administration a success and the emphasis on human rights its top achievement.

Last and least, he said the U. S. dollar is undervalued. That statement alone qualifies him to be an honary Optimist. The dollar is so weak even the British pound has been kicking sand in its face.

As for Carter's emphasis on human rights, it has as much substance as a tub of cotton candy. The only major dissident in the Soviet Union who has been freed since Carter began his phony rhetoric is the one Chilean President Augusto Pinochet sprung by swapping a Communist for him.

In the meantime, Carter is all mouth. The three greatest oppressors of human rights in the world — the Soviet Union, Red China and Cuba are getting nothing but bouquets and coy winks from the supposed defender of the downtrodden.

Americans should get over this business of being impressed by titles and offices. Mondale and Carter are both lightweights. The only significant achievements in their lives to date have been successful political campaigns, which is to say they are competent bamboozlers of the public.

Carter's idea of diplomacy is to agree with the last head of state he talks to. Mondale's idea of diplomacy is to do what he's told by the gurus tucked away in the White House.

Anybody who says Bert Lance is a hero, Carter's first year was a great success, his human rights baloney a great achievement and the U.S. dollar is sound is bound to be either a fool or a liar.

It would be funny if so many human lives didn't depend on the leadership of the U.S. What passenger on a jet plane likes to joke about the pilot?

But how secure do you feel now that you know the leader of the free world cannot find a competent translator for his first official trip to Poland?

How secure do you feel when you realize the commander in chief of our military and intelligence establishments cannot tell the difference between a live microphone and a dead one?

A nasty Englishman once said that God looks out for drunks and the United States of America. I surely hope he was right.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

United States-Japan economics

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The roller-coaster economic relationship between the United States and Japan is plummeting downward at a rate that threatens to derail trade between the two countries. U.S. Trade Ambassador Robert Strauss has made some progress at solving the problem.

But members of Congress are in a simmering rage over past failures of Japanese government officials and business leaders to take steps to correct the gross trade imbalance — one that saw the U.S. economy take an $8.5 billion beating last year. This was the difference between what Americans bought from Japan and sold back to the Japanese.

The imbalance was brought on by cheaper Japanese labor costs and government subsidies. This is pushing down the value of the dollar internationally; it is also putting American firms out of business and American workers out of work. One industry after another has been forced by Japanese competition to cut back production, thus adding to our 6.8 million unemployed and our $27 billion trade deficit.

The bitter irony is that the American taxpayers helped to build up the industries that are taking our markets away. After World War II, we displayed a generosity unequaled by any other people in history. We were concerned neither with revenge nor with spoils; our concern was to get the world going again. We spent billions to help feed the world's hungry people and rebuild the free world's war-wrecked industries. Now our good deeds are coming back to haunt us.

Our income tax payments not only helped to finance our foreign competitors but provided them with more advanced equipment than our own. Though the AID agency has been perhaps purposely vague about the number of plants it has built abroad, a reported $2 billion of our tax money went to build or expand 179 foreign steel mills. This American generosity has helped to reduce our share of the world's steel market from 48 percent in 1950 to about 17 percent today.

We are actually importing eight million tons of Japanese steel annually at a time when Youngstown Sheet & Tube is closing its Youngstown mill at the cost of 5,000 jobs and Bethlehem Steel is shutting down an Ontario iron mine whose 275 Canadian workers will be idle. U.S. Steel also plans to close its Youngstown mills.

Especially noteworthy is the plight of the U.S. CB radio industry at a time that sales to consumers are booming. Americans buy 95 percent of all CB equipment produced in the world. Yet in this country, employment in CB factories fell by 56 percent last year and sales sagged off an alarming 38 percent. Industry experts traced this directly to Japanese imports, which gobbled up 73 percent of the U.S. market. And here's the topper: CB radios are banned in Japan.

For the textile industry, the Japanese competition has been disastrous. No one seems able to say exactly how many rival mills Uncle Sam has built around the world. But one official has admitted to us: "In our efforts to revitalize Japan as a bulwark against communism, we participated technically, financially and otherwise in creating a Japanese textile industry that (has threatened) our own with ruin."

Yet across the Pacific, U.S. products are being excluded by deliberate red tape and by the political power of Japan's farmers. Even American goods that get into Japan are exorbitantly expensive. A U.S. trade official was startled during a recent stay in Tokyo to find a small American melon at a market was priced at $12.50. U.S. beef is unheard of in Japan.

For every instance of Japanese trade hurting a U.S. firm, House Trade Chairman Charles Vanik, D-Ohio, says "a seed of resentnent is planted" in Congress. He cites some ominous arithmetic in the House: more than 200 House members are concerned about damage to the textile industry; another 130 are protective of the steel firms; 42 would come to the defense of electronics manufacturers; another 20 would take action on behalf of such products as shoes and tools.

Vanik has warned, therefore, that the House "is dreadfully close to a majority that could halt trade (with Japan)." Several leading Senate and House members recently served notice upon Japan's trade negotiator, Nobuhiko Ushiba: "Help solve the trade imbalance or risk serious economic retaliation."

The structure of a protectionist bloc is evident in the House chamber. Rep. John Dent, D-Pa., is plugging legislation to limit foreign imports to 10 percent of the actual total consumption of the product within the United States. Rep. James Mann, D-S.C., is accumulating broad support for a resolution that would exempt U.S. textile products as a topic for trade discussions with Japan at Geneva and bar any reduction of customs duties on rival textiles from abroad. Rep. Charles Carney, D-Ohio, is assembling a working group of congressmen from steel-producing districts to protect U.S. steelmakers.

In the Senate, one trade expert confided: "If someone were to lead a (protectionist) march, he'd find some soldiers to follow." No such leader has yet emerged on the Senate side. But Ohio's two Democratic senators, John Glenn and Howard Metzenbaum, are sponsoring trade legislation with a protectionist tinge.

For the moment, Congress is holding its fire with remarkable restraint, waiting for the Carter administration to negotiate some solution. But while the Japanese remain obdurate, a legislative fuse is sputtering.

Footnote: A delegation of House members, led by Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., traveled to Tokyo during the congressional recess to underscore the rising anger on Capitol Hill.

Mark Russell says

President Carter must be getting aloof. During his overseas trip, he didn't even spend the night with a Polish family.

With President Carter out of the country, Congress adjourned and Walter Mondale in charge, Washington became a shiny example of what Jefferson meant when he said, "The government which governs least governs best."

The list of possible FBI directors is narrowing. It is now down to Patrick Gray, John Ehrlichman and David Eisenhower.

Clarence Kelley will leave the FBI with a clear conscience, the sense of a job well done and the files on the sex lives of 200 congressmen.

NICK THIMMESCH

Who killed Nicaraguan newspaper editor Chamorro?

● Nick Thimmesch ●

WASHINGTON — A few weeks ago in Nicaragua, I had a talk with Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, the editor assassinated in Managua. He bore down hard on his lifelong political foe, President Anastasio Somoza, the strong man some people at first believed ordered Chamorro's death. These people are very likely wrong.

"The Somozas have been killing people since 1939," Chamorro told me on Dec. 16. "You must buy justice from him. He cannot reform because he has all the power and the business. His regime has a facade of democracy.

"Somozo relaxes repression now because the U.S. pressures him... the violence in Nicaragua comes from the top and generates violence at the bottom. When Somoza disappears, we will have democratization and pluralism, as in Spain. We can be democratic again."

I found it interesting that Somoza's own people helped me get the interview with Chamorro, whose newspaper relentlessly beats on the Somoza regime in lively, often exaggerated, fashion, with stories and photos.

Chamorro was also leader of the Democratic Union of Liberation, a coalition of anti-Somoza groups which probably would have installed him as president if Somoza ever fell.

But what could Somoza ever gain from Chamorro's death?

Somoza is under fire in Nicaragua by terrorists, Catholic priests, students, the political coalition, and lately, by elements of the business community.

Besides, his regime is pressured by the Carter Administration which sees it as a laboratory for the President's human rights policies.

Somoza, while smarting from Chamorro's daily vilifications, needed this famous editor alive as vital proof that he tolerated opposition and dissent.

Somoza cited Chamorro's paper, La Presenta, which has the largest circulation in Nicaragua, and certain radio stations bitterly opposing him, as arguments that he believed in constitutional guarantees, and curtailed them "only when people violate the Constitution with violence."

Still, Somoza, from time to time, made life miserable for Chamorro and his paper. Chamorro had been jailed many times by the Somoza regime, and he told me that in 1956 Somoza supervised his torture. "I was beaten, lights were shined in my eyes and I was denied sleep," Chamorro said.

Since I had heard that the two men were childhood playmates, although they supposedly had quarreled over their fathers' political views, I asked Chamorro whether he kept in touch with Somoza. "It would be undignified for me to talk to him now," Chamorro said, referring to the torture.

Somoza is 52, Chamorro, 53 at death, so they were contemporaries. Their fathers were also political opponents. Somoza's father was assassinated in 1956, and Chamorro was accused of being involved. He was under great suspicion because he was convicted in 1954 of conspiring to overthrow the elder Somoza, and was sent to jail for two years.

Chamorro later led an invasion force, based in next-door Costa Rica, bent on overthrowing his childhood chum, Somoza, who had succeeded his slain father.

Chamorro was captured, tried by a military court, jailed again for one year, released and banished to the provinces.

After escapting to Costa Rica, Chamorro returned home when Somoza granted amnesty in 1960. Soon thereafter he was back at the newspaper he owned, published and edited, attacking the Somoza regime as though it was his lifetime mission.

There is much to attack. Somoza's federal police are reported to not only kill the Sandinistas, the terrorists inspired by Fidel Castro, but also to ruthlessly crack down on any villages even suspected of sympathizing with them. Moreover, Somoza's ministers, several of whom he just fired, were generally regarded as corrupt and a detriment to Nicaragua's well being.

Altogether, the last thing Somoza needs is more trouble. He needed Chamorro as much as Chamorro needed him. Somoza wants to survive the three years he has left in his presidency, and doesn't want any family feuds or bloody vendettas to break out between the 18 Somozas arpund and the nine Chamorros left.

So who killed Chamorro?

Within 24 hours after the assassination the regime thought it had the answer with the arrest of three Nicaraguans whom Somoza described as "mentally unstable."

Before those arrests, some people speculated on other possibilities.

Could it have been the Sandinistas, most of whom disagreed with Chamorro's willingness to engage in national dialogue with Somoza? The Sandinistas would like to disrupt this dialogue which Somoza offered as an olive branch to his opponent. Or it could have been fanatical followers of Somoza's, operating without orders or reason.

Another speculation is that it could have been elements of a German terrorist group reported to be loose in Guatemala, or it might involve North Koreans recently admitted to Costa Rica, a haven for terrorists.

The assassination of Chamorro caused his followers to form a parade to carry his body from the mortuary to his home. It also caused charges of murder to fly at Somoza. And it caused Somoza to order a full-scale investigation, in pursuit of the killers.

Above all, it causes Somoza-watchers in Nicaragua, at the U.S. State Department and at the CIA to ponder whether a crisis will now erupt which will bring down the House of Somoza.

Clayton should have little trouble winning third term as speaker

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Back in January 1975, when Rep. Bill Clayton of Springlake took the gavel as Speaker Clayton, he promised House members that "the days of iron-hand rule are gone."

That announcement came after Clayton had defeated Rep. (now Sen.) Carl Parker of Port Arthur, 112-33 (with three members present but not voting) to win the much-sought prize.

By and large, Clayton has kept that promise — and hasn't resorted to the blatant arm-twisting tactics which marked some earlier regimes.

But Clayton also has indicated a desire to retain the coveted gavel for a third straight term — which would make him the first man in Texas history to wield the convict-made walnut thumping device (and all the power it symbolizes) for such a period.

That doesn't sit too well with some other members, who mutter that Clayton, by remaining so long as speaker, has too much opportunity to control the flow of legislation, and the destiny of legislation, in the House.

Chief among these critics has been Rep. Arthur "Buddy" Temple III of Diboll, who was one of the 33 who voted against Clayton.

Presumably, it came as no great surprise to Temple that he didn't get a committee chairmanship from Clayton that year. (None of the 33 did, but Rep. Pike Powers of Beaumont did get the number two spot on the elections committee.)

But even political wounds heal over time; there were three vice chairmen from those who voted against Clayton and returned for the 1977 session.

Nor would it surprise anyone that Clayton's committee chairmen are among his strongest supporters — that is, after all, the way the political system operates.

Campaign statements filed by Clayton show that two of his committee chairmen have been taking a hand in his re-election effort (an effort which is bringing in good-sized contributions from several areas of the state).

Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, Goliad, who headed the Constitutional Amendments Committee, and his wife are shown as having contributed $100 worth of barbecue (which apparently was enjoyed by a number of South Texans who contributed to Clayton's kitty).

And Rep. Tom Massey, San Angelo, is shown as having contributed $100 plus $84.50 for food and refreshments. Massey chaired the Public Education Committee this past session (and may have wondered at times if Clayton had done him any favor by appointing him to preside over that brouhaha).

Just in case anyone's wondering, it's perfectly legal for legislators to contribute to such a speaker's race — there is a ban, however, against members of the executive or judicial branches taking part — and there's been an attorney general's opinion saying state employees may contribute (and it appears that some have).

But if size of contributions is any criterion, Clayton's biggest fans are in North Texas. His statement filed for the period ending Dec. 31 shows four Wichita Falls residents — Charles Prothro, Ray Clymer, Gene Chambers and Rhea Howard — each contributing $1,000 to his race.

Most of Clayton's expenses have been for travel — with the lease of a Piper Navajo being paid for from those contributions.

Temple, on the other hand, has received few contributions — but has been willing to lend himself $11,500 for his race. He has spent somewhat over that amount.

Also filing reports are Rep. Tom Schieffer of Fort Worth, who's taken in some money in the Fort Worth area ($2,356) and Rep. Bill Sullivant of Gainesville, who has had one $1,250 contribution and a few expenses.

Those reports, by the way, are required under one of the so-called "reform" bills passed during the speakership of Price Daniel Jr. — whose decision to be a one-term speaker (because, he said, multiple terms give a speaker too much power) cleared the way for Clayton.

That bill passed 119-11, with seven members, including Clayton, voting "present."

Temple was absent for the vote.

Unless things change drastically over the next 11 months, Clayton should have little trouble becoming the first three-term speaker for Texas.

Four terms? Maybe — but that's another matter.

Clayton reportedly is eyeing the governor's mansion (having the examples of Price Daniel Sr., and Coke Stevenson as inspiration).

But those hopes could be hampered because, somewhat ironically, the decision by voters to give statewide officials four-year terms has resulted in the locking in of some incumbents.

And Clayton undoubtedly remembers the quip by one former speaker who, when asked who might be expected to be in the speaker's race, replied, "Oh, about 150 members."

POSITIVE THINKING

To find the best, seek it

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

A friend of mine had an amazing and uncommon attitude that won him lots of friends and took him to the top in business. His policy was "to put the best possible construction upon everyone and everything."

This man was no fool. He knew the score, and anyone would have to get up very early in the morning to take him in. Few tried and even fewer succeeded. But I noticed when a person was being discussed and perhaps taken apart, Harry would as likely as not come up with a remark like this:

"Well, maybe so. I just don't know. But I remember he did this or that good thing. I've known him a long time and perhaps we do not have all the facts. Somehow what I have been hearing doesn't quite jibe with his basic way of doing things."

This usually threw a douse of cold water on the criticism. Harry had a feeling that there is quite a lot of good in everyone and it is that quality that should be exposed rather than the seamy side. Naturally, Harry wasn't all that popular in some circles, for some people like to gossip and run people down and they couldn't comfortably do it with Harry around. But still he was highly respected and even loved because everyone knew that his or her reputation was safe in Harry's hands.

I knew quite a few men and some women who were for a fact off base, but the confidence expressed in them by this man served to bring them up to a higher level of conduct in their dealings with others. I've often thought that a good rule for having better personal relations is simply that principle of putting the best possible construction on everybody and everything.

Of course some one may let you down. What then? Well, Harry would opine that there must be some explanation or misunderstanding and he would have no hard feelings; at least he would never show them if he did. He might perhaps cool off on that individual but would never castigate him to anyone.

If subsequently, as often happens, such a person came around and admitted dirty tricks, Harry was always ready to forgive and forget saying, "So what? We all get off the beam sometime or other." And he made another lifelong, loyal friend. People I believe generally like the person who thinks they are okay.

The same attitude went for situations. When pessimists would say that we are heading into a recession or a depression, as likely as not Harry would start looking for hopeful signs in the economy.

Or when some started talking, as we all do at one time or another, about how much better the old days were than present times, Harry could come up with quite a few valid reasons why the country had not gone to the dogs and wasn't likely to do so. He was always able to do this in such a nice way that hardly anyone resented having his pet peeves exploded.

It got so that this man Harry was looked up to as a pretty wise and sturdy old boy with a head full of common sense. So whenever I think of people who made life better for everyone they touched, I always think of Harry, who put the best possible construction on everyone and everything.

I recall the story of the town bad man in the old days out West who finally succumbed to mortality and died. It was the custom that someone would speak a few words over the deceased. In this case none could figure out how any good could be said. But one old fellow, a kind of local philosopher, agreed to say something at the funeral.

Somberly looking down at the mortal remains of the local bad man, he said, "Well you've got to admit that he wasn't always as bad as he sometimes was." Which was, I suppose, putting the best construction on that situation.

Where have the TV watchers gone?

WASHINGTON — Something is happening in America. Television viewing is going down. Nielsen said viewing was off by 6.4 percent in the daytime and off by 3.1 percent at night. We're talking about millions of people now and the big question is: Where have these people gone and what are they doing if they aren't watching television?

I decided to call Plotnick, who heads the Bureau of Missing TV Viewers, an organization set up by the networks to find out what has happened to them.

Plotnick wouldn't tell me how he got the names of the people who weren't watching TV, but he hinted he has a very close connection with the CIA which knows exactly what every American is doing.

He had a list of names and addresses and said I could come along and see for myself how he operates.

The first house we came to belonged to a family named Peters. Plotnick was very polite.

"Pardon me, ma'am, but I understand your TV set is off. I was wondering if you could tell me why?"

"Who on earth told you that?" she wanted to know. "The children have it on right now. Come in and I'll show you."

We went inside and found four children in the living room. The set was on, but instead of a picture on the screen the kids were playing hockey with four dials.

"But they're not watching anything," Plotnick said.

"No," the mother said. "They haven't looked at a show since they got this TV game for Christmas. It's a marvelous invention. They can play hockey, tennis, tack-tack-toe, race automobiles, shoot down airplanes and sink submarines."

"But that wasn't what television was invented for," Plotnick said. "It was invented to transmit pictures and sell products to the American public."

"I know," said the mother. "But the kids saw the game advertised on television and insisted we buy it. Frankly it's a lot more fun than Kojak and it's been a lifesaver in our family."

Once we were out in the street Plotnick wrote some notes on a piece of paper. "This is going on all over America. The damn kids are using TV to play games. They don't realize there are millions of dollars of commercials at stake. They would rather play pinball on a TV screen."

The next house we went to belonged to the Strathmores. Mrs. Strathmore admitted they didn't watch television any more because their set was broken.

"Alfred threw a beer bottle at Howard Cosell one night and smashed the screen."

"Why didn't you have it repaired?" Plotnick wanted to know.

"I did, and the next Monday he threw another beer bottle at Howard. How many TV screens do you want me to buy?"

Plotnick was disgusted.

It was about 10:30 at night. We had visited houses where the neighbors said the inhabitants had either gone to "Star Wars" or "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," homes where one or the other person was in the process of getting a divorce and couldn't watch TV because they were spending all their time on the telephone, and several where people admitted they had gone back to reading books.

"Each household we've visited," said Plotnick, "represents one million people."

Our final call was at the home of the Pells (not their real name). It took some time for Mr. Pell to answer the door. He was in his bathrobe. Plotnick asked him why he wasn't watching TV.

"We used to be avid TV watchers," Pell said. "But then Judith bought 'The Joy of Sex' and you know something, we discovered it was more fun than watching television. We're on page 85, and I don't think we'll get through it until the summer reruns."

"And you'd rather do something dirty than watch TV?" Plotnick said bitterly.

"I guess," said Pell. "It's which 'Behind Closed Doors' you want to get involved with."

Educational opportunities boosted by today's computerized businesses

By DANIEL S. GREENBERG
Special to The Washington Post

A dog named Walter is a member of my household. That he possesses many admirable qualities is not relevant to present purposes.

What does merit notice, however, is that some time ago the name Walter Greenberg was deposited in a computerized data bank, apparently unaccompanied by any notation as to species. By whom, why and how this entry was made we do not know. But the result has been the electronic creation of a phantom personage whose patronage is sought by a wide array of business enterprises.

We try to be truthful with telephone solicitors who ask for Walter. As the case may be, we respond that "he's sleeping," "he's out," or "he can't talk now." This has cost him the opportunity to acquire credit cards, contribute to charities and compete for a vacation for two. When he was very young, he received a call from a rug-cleaning firm, which possibly had a clear understanding of who the prospective customer was. But we're not sure.

Walter also receives mailed solicitations. Computers are fecund when it comes to producing mailing labels. One day he received three separate invitations to become a subscriber to the Harvard Business Review. Acting on his behalf, I readily disposed of these. But it may be that the computers have marked him as a prime suspect, for on several occasions the solicitations, though unanswered have been followed by salesmen's house calls.

Walter has never shown any interest in acquiring further education. Nevertheless, he recently was the target of a concerted sales effort by a school of accountancy, which hinted that he might be eligible for a scholarship. After the arrival of several mailed brochures detailing the favorable conditions that exist for careers in accountancy, a salesman came to the door seeking Walter Greenberg, with whom, he said, he wished to discuss the accountancy curriculum.

Witnessing our puzzlement, the salesman asked, "Is he very young?"

When this was acknowledged, he diplomatically said, "That sometimes happens. He really wouldn't be eligible, would he?" And he left.

Though we discourage Walter's contacts with the business world, one recent offering was too attractive to ignore. The publisher of an annual directory of distinguished Americans wrote to Walter that he had been selected, for inclusion in the next edition, and requested completion of an enclosed form. Not only was no fee required, but moreover, inclusion in the directory was accompanied by an opportunity to purchase the volume at a reduced price!

So we filled out the forms, sticking to the facts as best we could. The entry for occupation posed a problem, but we resolved that with "dog breeding."

In any case, if you want to talk to my dog, I'm sorry, he's tied up and can't come to the phone.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Social Security woes

To The Editor:

The enactment of the new Social Security changes meets one problem but sweeps under the rug the really important problem — the built-in automatic increases in benefits, which over the long run may very well have a catastrophic effect on our economic, social and political system.

The automatic escalation of benefits provisions in the law reflect the Senate's proposals of 4 per cent annual increase for inflation and 5¾ per cent annual increase for assumed wage increases or a total of 9¾ per cent a year. This means a doubling of the Social Security benefits in about seven years, a quadrupling in 14 years, eight times in 21 years, etc. The new law will triple payroll taxes over the next 10 years, for both employers and employees, and the additional payroll taxes will be $22,700,000,000 a year. But the multiplication of these taxes will have to continue from there on.

With no increase in productivity, the increased employer payroll taxes will be passed on to the public in the form of higher prices, a clear form of inflation, while the employee's take home pay will be materially reduced. With a declining birth rate, advancing life expectancy and an increased tendency towards earlier retirements, the economic pressure on the smaller work force of the future will become unbearable.

What then is the solution? As Harvard Professor Hsiao recommends, the Social Security system should promise less in the way of future benefits now, and provide more later, "if future economic, demographic, and social conditions" permit. Even more importantly, we must demand that the government apply the same actuarial funding standards to the Social Security system that it demands of the private pension system.

If this were done, it would be obvious that, even with the proposed new taxes, we cannot afford tomorrow's benefits, except on a reduced basis. If we are to avoid intergenerational warfare, it would be far better for the government to admit its error now than to do so later with a far larger and potentially more dependent population.

Airport courtesy

To The Editor:

At a time when many people seem to willingly criticize the conditions and personnel at the Midland Regional Airport, I would also like to add my comments.

My 80-year-old father and mother flew here for the holidays and received outstanding service from both the police under Sergeant Carlton and also the terminal personnel of Continental and Texas International Airlines.

The police provided a security clearance and aided me in helping my father from a wheelchair from the plane into my car on the boarding strip. The airlines' personnel provided the courtesy and muscle in providing wheelchair and carriage service from my father's airplane seat to my awaiting car. The same was true of my parents' departure.

My parents, my wife, and I were extremely appreciative of these exceptional acts of courtesy. The cramped conditions of the airport and the hustle-bustle of the holiday season had no effect on these groups' dedication to service. We're glad they're here.

Job well-done

To The Editor:

I have read two letters about the bad situation and the inefficiency of our street department, especially along Golf Course Road and the street branching off of it. Personally, I could not disagree more heartily, for in my opinion this work was handled exceedingly fast and exceedingly well. When you go to digging and burying drain pipes as long and as large as these sections were, you have a job. If my memory serves me correctly, there was never more than one block completely closed at one time. To me this took good planning and good execution.

Clarification

To The Editor:

In a recent issue of your splendid newspaper appeared a nice article and fine picture of the handsome officers-elect to head the Midland Chamber of Commerce for 1978.

Now it's no earth-shaking matter, but for the record this article stated Harrell Feldt was selected to serve another year as president, being the first time in the history of the chamber for anyone to be so honored.

For several years I thought I was the first to be so honored in 1943-1944. However, your Centennial issue gave a historical resume of the Midland Chamber of Commerce showing several preceded me. Rechecking today with Mrs. Patti Galbraith at the Chamber office, records revealed the following:

Marvin Ulmer — 1932-33
Doctor Ryan — 1934-35
Marion Flynt — 1937-38
Paul McHargue — 1943-44
Harrell Feldt — 1977-78

There might have been others prior to 1932.

This letter is not intended to minimize Harrell Feldt's honor or dim his hour of glory, but to congratulate and wish him well. The important thing is that, in today's busy world, a man of his caliber is willing to give so much of his time and energy to this worthy civic function; and not whether it's the first, second or fifth time it so happened.

And as Addison Wadley used to say, "Midland always was a Good Town." In my opinion it will so continue.

Paul McHargue

Dirtying our image

To The Editor:

Having been a resident of Midland since 1949 we have seen this small town grow to a small city. I think we have a very serious problem with trash pick-up, particularly in the commercial parts of town, around shopping centers, Village area, etc.

For years we were proud of our clean city and the lack of trash and debris on our streets and alleys. Visitors have even remarked at the cleanliness of the city — but now it is to the point of almost being embarrassing to show people from out of town around our city.

Whether the fault is with the trash containers, city pick-up crews, lack of interest of all parties, or whatever, I feel that we are fast reaching a point where something must be done to preserve our image of a fairly clean town.

This past year we were requested to clean a vacant lot in accordance with city regulations, which we were happy to do, but I feel that the condition of the vacant lots around town was minor compared to the deplorable sights of our alleys as they are now.

Could it be that we are growing at such a rate that our city sanitation department is not keeping up? Where is the answer to this problem? I should hope that our city fathers will give this some serious consideration at an upcoming meeting. We do not want to be branded a "dirty city."

Turkey flies

To The Editor:

Now that our President, Jimmy the Mouth, has returned from his $2 million trip abroad, one wonders what it was all about.

Despite all the hypocritical expostulations to the contrary, it is obvious the President's real motive was to obtain television exposure casting him in the regal setting which the heads of the host nations provided. It buoyed his spirits, which have no doubt been weighted to discover that Congress does not consider the Carter Administration to be the resurrection and light for this nation.

While Mr. Carter likes to play God, he must be given marks for his modesty. He didn't try to duplicate God's work of making Heaven and Earth in six days, instead the President only tried to remake the world in nine days.

I am not one of those disrespectful people who believe that Miss Lilly's boy, Jimmy, would spend two million taxpayer dollars making such a trip just to prove a turkey can fly.

Current poll shows Panama treaty changes would win public's support

NEW YORK (AP) — Just one change in the Panama Canal treaties will flip Americans from overwhelming opposition to equally substantial support for the disputed pacts, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

That change would be a clear assurance that, no matter who controls the canal, the United States would still have the right to defend the waterway from attack, the poll found Friday.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., also wants such a change, he announced Friday. And he hinted that his Republican counterpart, Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., will support the treaties if such a change, guaranteeing the U.S. right to defend the canal, is added.

The poll found 62 percent of those who said they had heard or read about the treaties opposed ratification by the Senate. About 28 percent were in favor of Senate approval and 10 percent were uncertain.

The respondents were then asked if they would favor the treaties "if an amendment were added specifically giving the United States the right to intervene if the canal is threatened by attack."

With that amendment, the treaties won overwhelming support of those familiar with the agreements: 65 percent favored the amended treaties, only 25 percent opposed them with 10 percent not sure.

Of those who now oppose the treaties, 61 percent would favor an amended version. Only 33 percent would remain opposed.

A total of 1,604 adults, interviewed by telephone Tuesday and Wednesday for the poll, were also asked if they had heard or read about the treaties. About 77 percent said yes, while 22 percent said no and 1 percent were not sure.

Only those who said they were familiar with the pacts are included in the figures of those support or opposing the treaties.

The controversy over the proposed treaties and defense of the waterway centers on what happens after the year 2000.

Until that time, the United States has the clear authority to defend the canal, the first treaty says. After that, the Panamians assume full control under the terms of the second treaty.

Park calls no more names

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — U.S. investigators asked Tongsun Park about his relations with "dozens and dozens" of members of the U.S. Congress, officials of the executive branch and others in Washington Saturday, but there were only "one or two surprises" in the Korean rice dealer's testimony, the congressional observer at the interrogation reported.

"Yesterday was much more eventful in that respect," Rep. Bruce Caputo, R-N.Y., told reporters after Park was questioned for the second day about his alleged payoffs in Washington.

The investigators dealt with "any and all kinds of cash transfers, more complicated forms of transfer involving third parties" and the giving of gifts, said Caputo, who is observing the interrogation for the House Ethics Committee.

Asked how much money Park admitted distributing, Caputo replied, "hundreds of thousands of dollars." But he refused to go into specifics or to name any of the recipients.

The congressman said a lie detector was used both Friday and Saturday in the questioning. He said he believed "the initial stage of interrogation" was completed at the three-hour session Saturday, and the investigators from the Justice Department would go back to specifics in future sessions.

The men from Washington have said they expected the questioning to take about 10 days.

Park, 42, appeared tired and made no comment before or after the session at the Korean Prosecution Office Building in downtown Seoul.

He agreed to submit to questioning in Seoul by the Justice Department and to testify in U.S. court cases resulting from the probe into the influence-buying scandal in exchange for immunity from prosecution. But the agreement does not require him to appear before the House Ethics Committee or other congressional groups that are conducting their own investigations.

Chairman John Flynt of the Ethics Committee has issued a subpoena to be served on Park when he goes to the United States. This has raised the possibility that he might refuse to go.

U.S. may try to pressure Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will try to persuade Israel not to rule out the creation of a Palestinian state on the West Bank of the Jordan River, a senior U.S. official says.

The official said, however, that the U.S. delegation to the Mideast peace talks beginning this week will not insist on a commitment from Israel to withdraw from the territory.

Outlining the American strategy in the talks, the highranking official, who asked that he not be identified by name, said the objective is to reach agreement on a set of principles without requiring its implementation.

He called the agreement a "buffer of time" until Jordan and "acceptable" Palestinians can be brought into the negotiations.

Even Palestinian statehood, which the official acknowledged has virtually no chance of ever gaining Israeli acceptance, would not be foreclosed. Nor would Israel have to promise during the political negotiations to withdraw from the West Bank.

The idea is to leave all options open while working for a compromise between Egypt and Israel and the Palestinians and other key issues, the official said.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has insisted on "self-determination" for the 1.1 million Palestinians living on the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip.

Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin has offered them "self-rule" over their day-to-day affairs but retaining an Israeli security force in the areas.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who heads the U.S. delegation, is due in Jerusalem today before the talks open. He plans to meet with Begin and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and separately with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Kemal.

Potty stolen

HOUSTON (AP) — Restaurateur Charlie Angelo has placed an advertisment in a local newspaper asking readers to help him flush out a thief.

Half dollars, quarters, nickles and dimes were imbedded in the clear plastic seat.

The seat and cover has only $27.50 in coins in it but Angelo has offered a $1,000 reward to find out where it is.

Lawyer opens Hunt case defense

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A lawyer for the late H.L. Hunt says the oil billionaire denied ever marrying a woman who now is claiming bigamy and suing for part of the Hunt fortune.

The attorney, Ralph Shank of Dallas, opened the defense testimony Friday in trial on a U.S. District Court suit by Frania-Tye Lee, 73, of Atlanta. The trial resumes Monday.

Mrs. Lee is seeking a court ruling that she was Hunt's commonly accepted wife from 1925 to 1934 and is entitled to a share of the enormous estate Hunt left when he died in 1974.

Mrs. Lee testified Friday that rather than embarrass the man she loved, she accepted a financial settlement from Hunt in 1942 without fighting about it.

"That was my contribution to his life," she testified.

Her lawyers now contend that the document she signed in 1942, dropping all financial claims against Hunt in return for $100,000 in cash and an income of $2,000 a month, was invalid.

Don Case, a Dallas lawyer representing the Hunt estate, asked why Mrs. Lee, instead of demanding that Hunt acknowledge her as a wife, signed a document which did not mention marriage but merely stipulated that Hunt was the father of her four children.

"Women in love are not philosophical," she said. "I thought not only of him but of all the children... the money was not for me but to educate my children and feed them."

At that point, Case asked that the six-member civil case jury be sent from the courtroom. After they were gone, he asked Judge Tom Stagg to declare a mistrial, claiming prejudicial testimony.

The judge said no, ruling that Mrs. Lee was simply responding to questioning.

In addition to Frania's four, Hunt had six children by his wife Lyda. They were married 10 years before the day in 1925 when Frania contends he married her near Tampa, Fla., signing in as Franklin Hunt.

Mrs. Lee testified she paid little attention to her husband's business affairs and did not discover his true identity until 1934, when she learned he was shuttling between her and another wife in Texas.

"He told me specifically that H. L. Hunt was his uncle," she said.

It was the fifth day of a trial expected to last about two weeks.

When cross-examination of Mrs. Lee finished, Wright Matthews, 80, a retired lawyer from Palestine, Texas, took the stand. He said he represented Frania at the 1942 negotiations and every time he demanded that Hunt list his assets and liabilities, Hunt refused.

"He refused time and time again, saying there never had been a marriage or living together as man and wife and therefore no community (property)," Matthews said.

Shank, testifying later for the defense, said that during the 1942 proceedings Mrs. Lee's lawyers showed him a 26-page statement in which Mrs. Lee said she and Hunt had been married in a "hocus-pocus ceremony."

Mrs. Lee's claim on the Hunt estate has centered on the questions of whether she was legally married to him and, if so, whether she signed away her legal rights to his estate in the disputed 1942 agreement.

Carter's rating low in Middle America

By RICHARD E. MEYER

MASCOUTAH, Ill. (AP) — It was 6:30 a.m. Dark. But the coffee smelled warm and tasted like morning, and Jumbo Maue was drinking it black.

He pushed his cup across the bar top and asked for a refill. That was easy. Then he tried to defend the president. That wasn't.

Jumbo Maue and Jimmy Carter were outnumbered.

"I can't stand his smile," said Marlene Groennert, and she poured some coffee into Jumbo's cup. "It's deceiving. Besides, one of the things I don't like about Carter the most is he tries to make such an issue out of being so common. And he talks in circles. He talks around everything. He avoids what he's talking about."

Before Marlene Groennert's chili was hot and ready for lunch, one thing was clear: in Hund's Tavern, an all-day meeting place that renders telephones redundant and the Postal Service superfluous in Mascoutah, the population center of the United States, most of the people were less than ecstatic about Jimmy Carter's first year in office.

To this man, who has never visited personally but comes to them mostly as an image on the evening news, they awarded tall praise for honesty and effort. But they offered even heavier criticism of that image: He moves too slowly. He doesn't seem experienced enough to be competent. He grins even when he talks about the moral equivalent of war.

And when they were asked about his policies, nitty-gritty complaints came tumbling out: too much Social Security tax, not enough farm exports, overpriced gasoline, and his insensitivity to their needs for a regional airport and a local lock and dam.

Mascoutah, population 5,000, in down-state Illinois, is American Gothic. Green and white church steeples reach from corn-stubble fields to the prairie sky. A galvanized water tank on a steel tower presides over the town like a tin judge.

Main Street is less than a mile long. It has one stoplight. But the light doesn't turn red and green. It just blinks. Trees arch overhead. There's a Pizza Hut. And Moore's Family Restaurant. No movie house. But a 5-and-10 and an American Legion post with a sign still advertising a turkey shoot last Nov. 6.

This is Middle America.

The Census Bureau designated Mascoutah the population center in 1970. Just 5.3 miles southeast of town, bureaucrats from Washington buried a concrete stone bearing a bronze plate saying it is the official middle of the American people until 1980, when a new census will measure new population shifts.

"Mascoutah" is an Indian name. It means "prairie people." But the people of Mascoutah are mostly German. They are hospitable, thrifty, orderly, independent, some might even say stubborn.

They are as honest and decent and open and fair as Carter said the government should be. But on Nov. 2, 1976, Jimmy Carter, in his bid to become president, lost Mascoutah.

And Woots Linck, the Democratic precinct committeeman, says if things don't improve Carter will lose Mascoutah in 1980.

"In my travels, talking to people, hell, they don't even know what he's doing," worries Linck. "To me, he's moving very slow. I think he's not getting down to the voters.

"He's trying hard. He's just going the wrong way about it. He's got to do more work with the congressmen and senators, and they've got to get off their cans and start working for the people. It takes a hell of a lot to be the president."

At Hund's, some of the early morning coffee drinkers had returned for a late afternoon beer. They were playing a kind of German pinochle called Euchre. Down the street, Rube Yelvington had put his weekly "Mascoutah Herald" to bed.

He eyed his visitor wisely and said, but for the visitor's efforts to stir up Carter talk, the town probably wouldn't have paid much attention at all to the anniversary of Jimmy Carter's inauguration.

After all, nobody pays that much attention to the president in Mascoutah, Yelvington said.

Maybe that ought to worry Jimmy Carter most.

Council planning to raise $12,000 for 'Christmas'

The "Christmas in April" volunteer housing rehabilitation program will strive to raise $12,000 and repair 40 houses, according to Susan Edwards, executive director of the Human Relations Council.

The council coordinates the "Christmas in April" program, which will be held the weekend of April 29 through 30 this year, according to Ms. Edwards.

Purpose of the program is to utilize volunteers to repair generally substandard housing for the elderly and handicapped.

During 1977, a total of 58 homes were repaired by approximately 450 volunteers who contributed about 1,575 man-hours of work, she said.

WTCC seeks to help develop formula for state financing

ABILENE — The Board of Directors of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, at its mid-year meeting at Kerrville, voted to develop a dialogue between responsible segments of industry and government to devise a format that would result in a study to find viable answers to the problem of state financing which will be caused by declining tax income now coming from taxes paid by the Texas oil and gas industry.

E. Bruce Street of Graham, president of the regional chamber, said that "knowledgeable people are aware that the Texas oil and gas industry now pays about 50 percent of the state's taxes and that each year this amount will decrease as production continues to decline as reserves are used up. Now is the time to begin an orderly, expert, systematic and sophisticated study to prepare for a fair and equitable shift in Texas tax sources to replace this inevitable loss of state tax revenues."

Street challenged the West Texas Chamber of Commerce with the urgency of the matter. He asked for and was granted the necessary authority to proceed with the activiation of a broad based group to utilize all the resources of business, government, educational institutions and agriculture to begin a responsible and competent effort to develop a fair and workable plan to ease and facilitate this shift in Texas tax fund sources for the future.

ADA declares Congress flop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Americans for Democratic Action says the 95th Congress was a failure during its first session and the ADA's director cited the body's "inability to initiate desperately needed policies and programs."

The liberal political organization gave the House even lower ratings that the Senate, although 11 House members received a 100 percent score on 20 floor votes used as the basis. No senator received 100 percent although some got 90.

"While policies dribbled out of the White House," said ADA director Leon Shull in evaluating the scores, "the Hill sat on full employment legislation, welfare reform, reform of health delivery systems, and policies to aid blighted urban areas."

The overall House average for the 1977 session was 41 percent, compared to the a 45.6 percent grade for the Senate for the same term.

The 11 House members who scored 100 were all Democrats including one freshman: Reps. John Burton of California, Robert Drinan, Michael Harrington, Gerry Studds and Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts, Elizabeth Holtzman, Richard Ottinger, Charles Rangel, and freshman Theodore Weiss of New York, and Robert Edgar of Pennsylvania and Robert Kastenmeier of Wisconsin.

At the other end of the scale 36 House members scored zeros on the ADA test votes — including 10 Democrats from Southern states.

By contrast, the record of House Republicans, although still low compared to Democrats, actually rose on the ADA scale last year from 15 percent to 18 percent.

No House Republican got a perfect score by ADA standards, but Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., led the GOP with an 85 percent.

Ringing the bell

With BOB TIEUEL

The Black Experience: In the past several decades enough books have been written about the "Negro problem" to fill a good sized library. Many of them fail to make clear that the overall problem is not for blacks but a problem for all Americans. The problem is to make democracy a universal practice, rather than a system that whites will die to defend for themselves and fight to deny to others.

There are many aspects of this dilemma, some material, some psychological. In the former category are housing, health, political and civil rights etc. The latter area embraces social discrimination, segregation and the loss of pride and aspiration brought about by the denial to the Negro of equal participation in the American way of life.

Yet, by far the most important aspect of the dilemma to blacks is the economic one. Most blacks recognize this. Despite all the furor about civil rights and integration, a study made in the black neighborhoods of New York City disclosed that 54 percent of those interviewed listed economic complaints as being the "biggest problem that blacks have to worry about." Only 16 percent mentioned civil rights.

Voting rights, civil rights, being able to read a book in any library, eat in any restaurant, sit where one pleases on a bus, are essential to the Negro finding his rightful place in the mainstream of American life. Yet the impact of inadequate jobs is still far more serious for blacks not only in terms of dollars but in terms of poor health, broken home, high rates of crime, squalid housing and personal degradaton and misery.

There is a dire need throughout the nation for a more objective appraisal of the problems confronting black youth as they seek to find their rightful place in American life. They need inspiration. They need to be sold on the idea that there is a place for them in the economic scheme of things if they will equip themselves to fill that place. These black young people have been psychologically handicapped by their environment and, like physically handicapped people, they need special help.

To meet this need of black youth, the better black colleges have raised their graduation standards to a level comparable with the average white colleges, but their admission standards are far more flexible.

The better private black colleges are now diversifying their course offerings to train larger numbers of students for new and emerging job opportunities, at the same time continuing a vigorous drive toward academic excellence. The black colleges also actively participate in community projects designed to improve the academic background of elementary and high school pupils living in ghetto areas.

Why join the Church? The most important factor in choosing a congregation to join is the "fellowship and friendliness" of its members according to a survey conducted by the Lutheran Church of America. Ranked second was the quality of pastoral care for members and their care for one another. Third, was the quality of preaching. Coming in last place were the atmosphere of the church building and the congregation's status in the community. This correspondent has a sneaking suspicion that in the black church, some of these reasons for joining the church cited above, would be reversed.

Until later, Peace. Be a good neighbor. They come in all colors.

Mothers to march Jan. 27-30

Volunteers will be ringing doorbells in Midland to ask for donations to support the programs of the Midland County March of Dimes during the Mothers' March on Birth Defects, Jan. 27 to 30.

Earlier last week, members of the Alpha Omega Chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority stuffed 1,000 educational packets to be distributed to Midlanders during the march.

Mrs. A. K. Thorn, president of the Alpha Omega Chapter, urged all residents to give their support to the marching mothers in order to "help protect the unborn and the newborn."

She said the March of Dimes is seeking donations for two major reasons. They are: (1) to improve the outcome of pregnancy and reduce infant damage or death and (2) to enable the organization to continue research, education and medical service programs.

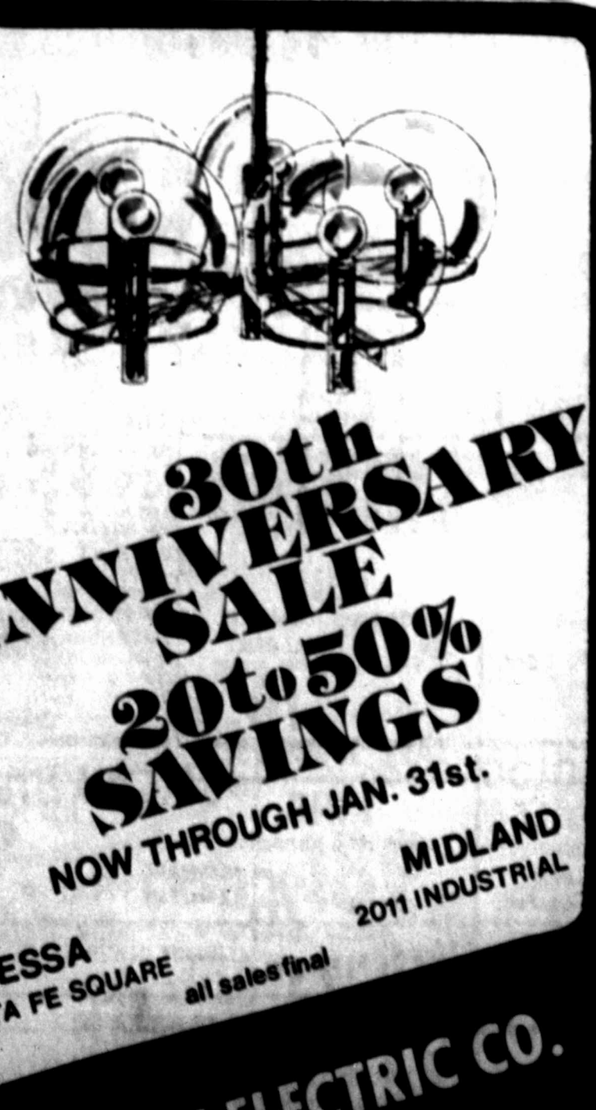

Volunteers still are needed to participate in the march. Interested persons are asked to call 682-2573.

Year fails to erase enigma of Gilmore execution

By BILL BEECHAM
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — One year ago, a Utah firing squad executed Gary Mark Gilmore, the killer who said he'd rather die than spend the rest of his life in prison.

Gilmore died strapped to a chair last Jan. 17. The execution, set for sunrise, was 18 minutes late after the state dramatically and successfully appealed an 11th-hour federal court stay.

The Gilmore episode — a death wish, two suicide attempts, a 25-day hunger strike, his love for a woman — even now remains an enigma to those who were close to him.

His was the nation's first execution in nearly 10 years. That alone made it unique. But because he asked to die — he personally appeared before the State Supreme Court to plead for death — the death watch drew international attention.

Some said it would open the doors to a legal bloodbath for about 400 people on death rows across the country. It hasn't. Nobody has since been executed, and an Associated Press survey showed that last week there were 421 persons still under death sentence in the country.

Others said it would be a deterrent to killings. There has been no clear evidence that it has. One lawyer says within days of the execution three homicides were reported in Utah.

Debra Bushnell now lives in Los Angeles and gave birth to a daughter, her second child, within weeks of Gilmore's execution. Jensen's widow Colleen teaches art in Clearfield, Utah, where she lives with a daughter. Neither will talk with reporters.

Some people say Gilmore's insistence on dying was "convict bravado," a bluff, and that Gilmore was a victim of his own ploy.

There has been speculation that Gilmore, hoping to be caught and executed, killed in retaliation for a soured romance with Nicole Barrett, the young divorcee who hitched rides to prison for visits with him and then joined him in one of his suicide attempts.

However, shortly after he was arrested, Gilmore asked one of his two court-appointed lawyers — later fired — what the maximum punishment would be.

"They might kill you," one of them said.

Commerce's proposal may be waste of time

By KRISTIN GOFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The idea has struck some in the business community as ludicrous at best and threatening at worst.

But there are indications that the Commerce Department's proposal to measure the social responsibility of corporations may simply prove to be unworkable. A waste of time. Of money.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps stirred up something of a hornets' nest last fall when she announced plans to devise a Social Performance Index (SPI) for corporations. It would, she said, measure a wide variety of items.

Among those she mentioned in her Oct. 19 speech were firms' contributions to higher education, affirmative-action hiring, minority business support, consumer complaints and such things as dedication to rebuilding inner cities and "the whole range of ways companies treat employees."

It has never been made clear just how the Social Performance Index would work. But Mrs. Kreps said its purpose would be to give credit to corporations for the positive things they do and also to prod those who are lagging in their social performance to do a better job.

The goal is applauded by such business organizations as the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the prestigious Business Roundtable, a group of executives from major U.S. corporations. But the method is not.

"The whole question boils down to who's defining what is corporate social responsibility," says Richard Breault, program director for the Chamber.

Breault and a variety of other business and public interest group representatives met with Commerce Department officials recently to discuss the idea. He says there was little consensus on just what constitutes socially worthy or unworthy action.

"One suggested component of the index was whether a company was doing business in South Africa. Others were whether there were public interest people on the board (of directors) and others on plant safety. Once you get into this kind of situation, you come back to the highly subjective notion of what it is in this country that a corporation is supposed to be doing," said Breault.

Although the Business Roundtable carefully notes that as an organization is has not taken a stand on the SPI, John Post, the executive director of the Roundtable, wrote Mrs. Kreps that most members believed the idea of a government index was "impractical, unworkable and unfair."

The Commerce Department, for its part, is still pursuing the idea of a Social Performance Index. But it is rumored that what may eventually result will be a far cry from the SPI originally conceived.

Commerce Secretary Kreps recently expanded on the original proposal by outlining guidelines that would govern the development and use of the SPI. It would, she said, be voluntary, would not be used to directly rank or grade companies for their individual performance and would not rely on information—available to the government—other than what was volunteered by the participating companies themselves.

But even with those watereddown guidelines, businessmen complain that simply by drafting social performance standards for a voluntary program, the government is bound to make value judgments that won't apply fairly to all.

In other business developments this past week:

—The United States and Japan reached agreement to work for a trade balance by the 1979 fiscal year and for equal access to goods produced by both countries. U.S. Trade Ambassador Robert Strauss carefully noted that the agreement wouldn't immediately cure anything, but he called it "a dramatic breakthrough" representing a new direction and philosophy for Japan.

Japan has an estimated $10 billion surplus with the United States this fiscal year and has been unyer pressure to reduce that and remove some import duties and trade restrictions on United States products. Partly because of the U.S. trade deficit, the value of the dollar has fallen dramatically against the Japanese yen. The dollar declined nearly 18 percent against the yen in 1977.

—Earlier in the week, worries over the declining value of the dollar and rising interest rates helped pushed the stock market's much watched Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks to its lowest close in more than two years. The Dow closed at 781.53 on Tuesday, its lowest finish since April 10, 1975.

—Prices of wholesale goods increased at an annual rate of 6 percent in December, down from the previous month's comparable rate of 8.4 percent, the government reported. Prices of processed foods and feed rose less than 1 percent, well below the level of price hikes in November. But prices of finished goods, which are those ready for sale to consumers or businesses, rose at an adjusted rate of .7 percent in December, nearly double the .4 percent hike in November.

—Unemployment in December dropped to its lowest in more than three years and the government revised its figures for recent months, showing a steady decline in the rate since August. The December unemployment of 6.4 percent was the lowest level since October, 1974 when it was 6.1 percent, the Labor Department said. Its previous figures showed unemployment stuck in the 6.9 to 7.1 percent level since last April.

Civil Service voices criticism of actions by CPS commission

By LARRY KRAMER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Civil Service Commission has criticized the Consumer Product Safety Commission for what the CSC said was continued favoritism, preferential treatment, misuse of consultants, promotion of unqualified applicants, manipulation of promotion procedures and misuse of appointment authorities.

The findings were part of a scathing report on the agency's personnel practices. The report, sent to the CPSC Thursday, was obtained by The Washington Post.

The Civil Service Commission cited 30 cases in which the CPSC "violated personnel laws, regulations and requirements."

The report specifically names CPSC chairman S. John Byington and other officials, although the report released to The Post had the names blacked out. Sources close to the investigation supplied the names.

"Most of the violations occurred," the report said, "as a direct result of actions taken or sanctioned by either Mr. Byington or Mr. (Albert) Dimcoff. Mr. Byington played a principal role in the improper competitive appointments of Mr. William McCarney and Ms. Jeanne Devers. He was personally responsible for the improper assignment of Mr. Richard Rapps to the schedule A position of director, office of the secretary."

In a telephone interview Thursday night, Byington called the accusations "hogwash." He said they were politically motivated because he was one of only two remaining Republicans in an agency top spot.

And Byington said, of the 30 cases cited, 15 are women and four are blacks (including one of the women).

"Part of the problem in the damn system that I have been screaming about," Byington said, "is the difficulty in getting women and blacks in. One mechanism of utilizing the services of competant women or blacks is in a consultancy or expert system. If you can't use them that way and they can't break into the bureaucracy, then you are effectively excluding them from government."

Byington has on several occasions criticized the Civil Service System. In one recent speech, he said one-third of all civil service employees were of no value to his agency.

The report by the Civil Service Commission specified the following violations:

—Preferential treatment and personal favoritism to certain individuals.

—Misuse of the "expert" and "consultant" appointing authority, "both to hire favored candidates who could not be hired through regular civil service processes and using to perform duties that are required to be filled through open competitive procedures."

—"Promotion of unqualified applicants, misuse of career promotions and manipulation of merit promotion procedures to reach favored candidates."

—"Manipulation and misuse of other expected appointing authorities in order to provide preferential treatment to certain individuals.

—"Improper classification of certain positions."

The reported also mentioned structural problems in many of the CPSC promotional and hiring programs.

"To understand fully the reason for the violations," the report stated, "one must realize that they occured against a backdrop of management unconcern for and, in some instances, outright contempt for principles of merit. Such attitudes not only condoned, but, in fact, invited merit system abuses."

According to a senior personnel specialist at the CPSC, in an affidavit to the Civil Service Commission:

"During the past year, I have watched our personnel program which had just begun to pick itself up from the inherent personnel problems of a new agency and to gain the support and recognition of top management, fall to what I consider a puppet function totally manipulated by management ...a management which operates under a 'might makes right' philosophy, where there is no regard for Civil Service rules or regulations and more tragically for the individual employees who suffer because of the inequities of such a philosophy."

In some cases, the report stated that Byington was told of improper activities in an earlier report, but the same type of activities were found to be occuring month later.

"Both Byington and Dimcoff have expressed concern," the report states, "over what they believe to be a lack of flexibility in the present civil service system. It is our perception that they used this concern as a basis for justifying their improper actions."

Byington said most of the accusations in the report concerned practices that were in effect in March, 1977, when the Civil Service Commission reportedly gave him a "clean bill of health."

"Of these 30 charges," he said, "10 require no action because there has been either a settlement or the action is moot or action is in progress."

"Eight more require just that we review them, and send some papers back to the Civil Service Commission," he said. "They were clerical problems."

Liability insurance crisis extent vague

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Board of Insurance officials say it will be the end of March before it's possible to tell to what extent the nationwide crisis in products liability coverage is being felt in Texas.

As one insurance industry spokesman put it, "Texas is usually blessed with being the last state to be hit with these problems" — but he feels Texas businesses will be, or may already be, experiencing some problems in getting products liability coverage.

However, lack of data makes it hard to tell how serious the problem may be in Texas.

Under the Texas MAP (for Market Assistance Program) Committee, businesses are assisted in finding carriers to place their products liability risk, after paying a fee and certifying that they are unable to get coverage on their own.

SBI members approved the MAP Committee's plan of operation last month, after Attorney General John Hill's office indicated the plan doesn't appear to be in violation of anti-trust laws.

So far, the committee (which has only held one meeting) has received 116 inquiries, sent out 800-plus questionnaires and received three completed questionnaires back — with one company already getting coverage.

The three companies are described as "small businesses" with "fairly unique" problems.

Because the program is just getting started, and because of the small number of requests handled, officials say it's much to soon to make any assumptions, or even guesses, about the situation in Texas.

But at the end of the first quarter, they expect to have a better idea of what's going on with products liability in Texas and the rest of the country.

The MAP Committee now is sending out questionnaires to insurance companies, in cooperation with the House Joint Committee on Products Liability, and the matter is under study on the Senate side as well.

Additional information on products liability may be provided if the National Association of Insurance Commissioners adopts a proposal recommended by the products liability committee headed by SBI member Ned Price at a recent NAIC meeting in Miami.

That committee suggested that products liability information be broken out seperately on companies' annual statements, as was done for medical malpractice liability.

The proposal will be carried to the NAIC Blanks Committee in April.

Five applications to sell a total $4,257,500 in securities in Texas were filed with the State Securities Board in the past week, Securities Commissioner Richard D. Latham reports.

The five included the application of MGF 78-A, Ltd., Midland, $2 million.

Six permits to sell a total $13,224,474 in securities were granted for the week, including El Paso Natural Gas Co., El Paso, for $6,250,000.

The board reports that for the first three months of the fiscal year, it processed $519,791,606 in securities, compared to $309,785,371 for the first three months in fiscal 1977.

Banking and credit union sources report as many as 90 credit unions throughout the country, including some in Texas, will be issuing Visa credit cards during the next three months.

State Credit Union Commissioner John (Pete) Parsons says Government Employees Credit Union, San Antonio, should be one of those involved in the program, and National Credit Union Administration officials in Austin say some federally-chartered unions should be taking part — but they aren't sure which ones will be involved.

Those credit unions are expected to offer the cards at 12-15 percent interest, below the 18 percent maximum charged by most banks.

RCC orders line closed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The railroad commission has ordered Champlin Petroleum Co. of Fort Worth to stop operating a residue gas pipeline in Montgomery County because of hazardous conditions.

The commission signed an emergency order Friday.

A commission hearing examiner found numerous unauthorized users of the residue gas in the Grangerland and Wigginsville communities had laid their own lines to the pipeline and those lines consisted of rubber hoses, water pipe and corroded gas line.

Blankets flown in

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — How cold is it?

It is so cold that an emergency order of 100 little electric blankets is being flown in from the West Coast to thaw out the balky, multimillion dollar farecard-vending machines of Washington's new subway system.

Because when it is cold, Metro's farecard-vending machines refuse to accept dollar bills.

"I can see what will happen when you reporter guys get hold of this," one top Metro official said Thursday. "You'll probably wrote a story that says "brrrr" in the first paragraph, or something smart like that."

Building permits hit $1 million mark again

The second week of 1978 in the City of Midland Inspections Department was a lot like the first: they both broke the $1 million mark.

Last week, 30 permits rolled up a total value of $1,174,950. And what were the big items?

Two permits for residential construction stood out. Both were issued to Dan Dalton for $175,000 each. One permit was for 907 Citation, while the other was for 801 Cananero.

Other permits for residential construction were to Palace Homes for $80,000, 4315 Arroyo Drive; Palace Homes for $70,000, 4307 Arroye Drive; Palace Homes for $29,000, 4527 Leddy; Palace Homes for $55,000, 4301 Arroyo; Palace Homes for $80,000, 4303 Arroyo Drive; Clyde White for $50,000, 4206 Nelson Road; Townsend Construction for $24,500, 520 Ruby Drive; Noel Construction for $70,000, 4408 Lenora Drive; Sampon & West for $40,000, 1703 N. Garfield; Palace Homes for $28,000, 419 Eastwood; Palace Homes for $28,000, 4525 Leddy; Jack B. Cook for $65,000, 5115 Davenberry Place; Jack B. Cook for $65,000, 5117 Davenberry Place; Glenn Pine Construction for $47,000, 4203 Vallery; Mid-America Builders for $52,000, 2827 Morris.

Permits for residential alteration were issued to Troy Pinkerton for $6,300, 303 S. Glenwood; James J. Johnson for $2,000, 4607 Wildon Ave.; J. McGill for $1,000, 2818 Dengar; R. K. Harton for $1,500, 3100 N. Big Spring; Troy Pinkerton for $6,300, 303 S. Glenwood; James J. Johnson for $2,000, 4607 Wilshire.

Permits for commercial alteration were issued to Seven-Eleven Food Stores for $4,500, 4302 Neely; Seven-Eleven Food Stores for $4,500, 3302 W. Illinois; Lexington Motor Inn for $6,000; Mountain Piping Service for $4,000, 400 W. Missouri.

business beattitudes

by Bill Beattie

It is not always true that what goes in one ear comes out the other. If idle talk is accepted as real, it clouds our thinking and may lead to poor judgment and careless ways of living. Thus gossip becomes thought pollution, making our thinking unclean and unwholesome.

Idle talk, from its very nature, becomes the most active cause of discord and the prime killer of reputations. The Turks have a proverb which says that the devil tempts all other men, but that idle men tempt the devil.

Ideas go booming through the world louder than cannons and thoughts are mightier than armies. Let's make sure that our ideas and thoughts expressed as conversation are not idle talk and do not harm the reputation of others.

Jerome P. Fleishman said, "Always there will be, along the sidelines of life, inferior souls who throw mud at those whose attainments they do not quite understand. The man who really accomplishes doesn't pay attention to such detractors. If he did, he would be on their level. He keeps his eye singled on the higher goal — and the mud never touches him."

We need to exercise the right to choose what enters our ears and remains in our thinking. We need not open our ears to the chatter of gossips and backbiters any more than we would throw open the doors of our homes to let dust, debris, and litter of the streets blow in. If we do, we are as guilty of polluting as the gossips are.

We hear much of air and water pollution these days, but what about ear pollution? Because of the facility and rapidity of communication, the ear is a target for much that is unwholesome. Gossip is the litter of minds; let's keep ours clean!!!

An empty brain and a GOSSIP tongue are very apt to go together.

Artists' competition nearing

All systems are "Go" — or soon will be — for the 16th annual National Young Artist Competition coming up here late next week.

For Mrs. LaDoyce Lambert, general chairman of this year's event, Mrs. James Stimmel, co-chairman, and members of their committees, the Jan. 27-28 competition will be culmination of a year's planning and preliminary work. Mrs. Lambert and her key personnel began laying plans for the 1978 event almost as soon as the 1977 contest concluded last January.

The National Young Artist Competition is sponsored each year by the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale Inc., and alternates between Midland and Odessa. The competition began in the early 1960s when Dr. Lara Hoggard, then music director-conductor of the Midland-Odessa orchestra, envisioned a competition that would allow talented young musicians to compete for recognition and financial rewards.

ENTERTAINMENT

Now one of the largest and most prestigious events of its kind in the nation, the NYAC has both college and secondary schools divisions. Competition categories within each are piano, strings and woodwinds. There is, additionally, a voice category in the college division.

The 85 contestants accepted for this year's competition will be vying for prize money contributed by Mrs. Raiford H. Burton, Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Ross and Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Bradford, all of Midland, as well as Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Noel of Odessa. The administrative expenses of the competition are met in part by a yearly grant from the Beal Foundation of Midland. New this year is a special monetary award, the Lara Hoggard performance Award, given by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Fullinwider of Midland. In all, prize money this year totals some $8,000.

The competition will open Friday morning, Jan. 27, with preliminary events in First Presbyterian Church. The preliminaries will continue throughout that day at the church, then will resume the following morning at Lee High School. Finals, at which winners and performing winners will be chosen, are scheduled for Saturday night, Jan. 28, in Lee High auditorium.

All finalists, winners and performing winners will receive cash prizes. In addition, the performing winners will return here in March to perform with the Midland-Odessa Symphony in season subscription concerts in the two cities. Adjudicating the contest events will be a panel of five distinguished musicians and musical educators. They include Elsa Ludewig-Verdehr, professor of music at Michigan State University. Jerome Lowenthal, internationally-known concert pianist; Aube Tzerko, head of the piano department at the University of California at Los Angeles and a renowned piano pedagogue; Tadeusz Wronski, professor of violin at Indiana University, and Janice Harsanyi, concert vocalist and a member of the voice faculty at North Carolina School of the Arts

Mrs. Lambert, general chairman of the 1978 NYAC, assisted Mrs. John Greer, chairman of the 1976 competition here, as co-chairman, and also worked in the 1977 event at Odessa last January, when more than 70 student musicians participated in the competition.

Mrs. Lambert is a member of the board of the Midland Symphony Guild, women's service and support organization of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale. (Traditionally, the symphony guilds of Midland or Odessa provide the actual "womanpower" in running the competition each time the event is held in that city). Mrs. Lambert also is a member of the board of the Midland Symphony and Chorus Association and is a director on the orchestra's joint management board, made up of representatives from both Midland and Odessa.

Mrs. Stimmel also is a longtime member of the Midland Symphony Guild.

In all, about 125 guild members are currently involved in some phase of planning or preparation for the 1978 contest. The NYAC Committee is made up of a number of sub-committees, each one with its own chairman and group of guild workers. The sub-units and chairmen are as follows:

—Registration, Mrs. Abbott B. Jenks.
—Transportation, Mrs. Robert Anson and Mrs. Donald Ewan, co-chairmen.
—Practice piano schedule, Mrs. Ben Hoffacker.
—Presiding officials and attendants, Mrs. C. Robert Winkler Jr.
—Social, Mrs. Marshall McCrea.
—Mailing, Mrs. Burgess Wade.
—Refreshments, Mrs. William D. Barnes.
—Physical arrangements, Mrs. M. E. Grimwood and Mrs. Robert Poer, co-chairmen.
—Student housing, Mrs. Ted Collins.
—Judges, Mrs. John Ochsner.
—Ushers, Mrs. John Hammett.
—Accompanists, Mrs. Ray Bristol.
—Publicity, Mrs. Russell W. Neisig.

A performing schedule committee is headed by women who directed the past four competitions in Midland — Mrs. John Greer (1976), Mrs. Howard Parker (1974), Mrs. Robert Boyd (1972) and Mrs. Robert Cowan (1970).

Mrs. Winfree L. Brown is secretary of the 1978 NYAC, and Mrs. Ernest Angelo Jr., is treasurer.

Mrs. Henry A. Tillett, current president of the Midland Symphony Guild, will serve as official hostess for the 1978 National Young Artist Competition.

Newman's first AM hit amuses, confuses many

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Randy Newman has long been a pop music gadfly, buzzing our ears with satires on the cruel and unusual ways of man, singing gruff-voiced novel songs that lampoon prejudice and ignorance and other bad things.

The outsized characters Newman makes are usually such complete buffoons that we have to laugh at them, in much the same way that Norman Lear would have us laugh at Archie Bunker.

Newman needled rascists with his "Sail Away" (in which a callous slave trader asks Africans to come to America where they can 'drink wine and sing about Jesus') and "Yellow Man," a bigot's raving about the inferiority of Asians. He ridiculed Yankee hypocrites with his "Rednecks," in which Southern blacks were invited to come up North where they'd be "Free to be put in a cage in Harlem, free to be put in a cage in Roxbury in Boston, free to be put in a cage in East St. Louis."

It all worked well, and Newman became one of pop's few major figures that could repeatedly get away with "message" songs, rare in this day of Shaun Cassidy. Each new album was eagerly awaited by the relatively small but hardcore group of Newman fans.

It worked, that is, until one of Newman's crazy tales became a hit.

"Short People" is Randy Newman's first real success in the AM market, and it's left folks both amused and confused with lyrics such as these:

"They (short people) got little baby legs and they stand so low, you got to pick 'em up just to say hello. They got little cars that go beep, beep, beep; they got little voices going peep, peep, peep. They got grubby little fingers, and dirty little minds, they're gonna get you every time."

Attorney to speak

LUBBOCK — Noted defense attorney Leonard Weinglass will speak on "The Politics of Crime" in a special program scheduled for 8:15 p.m. Thursday at Texas Tech University.

Weinglass currently is a lecturer in the University of Southern California's Law Center. He will be in residence at Texas Tech University Wednesday through Friday and will address various classes in addition to presenting the public lecture Thursday night. The lecture will be in University Center theater, with admission to be $3 for the general public and $2 for TTU students. The program is presented under auspices of TTU's cultural events of office

Kwahadi dance group's performances continue

AMARILLO — The Kwahadi Indian Dancers, Inc., an organization of junior and senior high school boys, is presenting annual "Winter Night Ceremonials" in a series of performances this month.

The winter show is a recreation of the ceremonial dances of the Pueblo Indians of Arizona and New Mexico. Performances, which began Jan. 7, will continue Friday and Saturday nights this week and Jan. 27 and 28 at the Kwahadi Kiva theater, Plains and Bellaire streets in Amarillo.

New dances this year include the Knife Wing Dance, a Buffalo dance from Santa Clara Pueblo, and the Eagle dance of Laguna Pueblo. Other dances include the Bow and Arrow, a deer and buffalo hunting dance, and butterfly, sunbasket, belt, rainbow and Comanche dances.

The cast of this year's show numbers approximately 42 dancers. Since the Kwahadi organization began presenting the winter ceremonials in 1968, hundreds of boys in Amarillo and surrounding areas of the Panhandle have taken part in productions. The '68 Kwahadi ceremonials had three performances and by 1976 the performance schedule had been expanded to include eight performances through January.

Performance time for the series of shows this month is 8 p.m. Tickets are priced $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for students under age 16. Organized youth groups may attend a performance at the special ticket rate of $1 each. Reservations may be made by telephoning 806-353-3213 evenings.

A check for $10,000 is presented to the Midland Community Theatre building fund by Mrs. Robert Koziol, president of ACT IX, women's volunteer service auxiliary of the theater. The check represents profits from ACT IX's "Christmas Galleria" held here last November, and is in partial fulfillment of the auxiliary's $25,000 pledge to the building fund for the new Midland Community Theatre under construction on West Wadley avenue. Accepting the check is Jim Allison Jr., chairman of the MCT building fund drive. (Staff Photo)

Could changes in Ford agreement with NBC mean political hopes?

By TOM SHALES
The Washington Post

LOS ANGELES — Is Gerald Ford running for president on the NBC ticket? It certainly looks that way.

At a recent press conference here NBC news president Les Crystal took pains to emphasize that Ford's original agreement with the network was revised in December and that in effect carte blanche has become carte gray. Ford will no longer be permitted a commentator pose but will participate in a series of four presidential "memoir" shows along the lines of LBJ's chats with Walter Cronkite.

Lyndon Johnson wasn't running again, however, whereas Gerald Ford has anything but ruled out the possibility. Political savants say that at the very least Ford wants to keep Ronald Reagan from becoming the 1980 Republican nominee, and prominent exposure on prime-time TV could be very handy.

And Ford is getting paid a bundle by NBC to boot.

The financial details of the agreement were never made public. But a knowledgeable industry figure says Ford will get $500,000 per show, with probably a four-show maximum between now and election year.

A spokesman at Ford's Palm Springs headquarters says that figure is "way too high," but won't be any more specific.

Crystal said here that the minute Ford's hat topples into the ring the deal is kaput: "Part of our arrangement is that if he becomes an active candidate then the program or the arrangement is terminated."

But isn't Ford behaving like an active candidate already? "I don't think so," Crystal said. "He says he might like to be president someday, but I don't think he's behaving like an active candidate." How does an active candidate behave? "An active candidate says he is running for office. He is out on the hustings constantly."

As it happens, Ford has hardly been Mr. Shy-boots since he lost the election. The Ford spokesman says that Ford "had traveled more since leaving the White House than he did while he was president." In just under a year he's been to 27 states and logged 250,000 air miles. On Saturday, he'll be speaking to the National Association of Wholesale Distributors.

Ford has been cagey on the question of whether he will run again — which figures, since when he says yes the NBC deal, and presumably the money, will go up in smoke. On Dec. 22, Ford told a reporter half jokingly that "By 1980, I'll be too old to ski, but not to be president." Obviously it's the first half that's the joke.

In the current issue of Fortune magazine, Ford is quoted as saying, "I would enjoy the opportunity to be president again. But it's premature to make any statement that I'll get in or stay out ... I'll be around, and just what role I'll play I'll decide later — sometime after the 1978 election."

Group sponsoring visit to art showing

Las Manos — "The Hands" — volunteer service organization at the Museum of the Southwest, is sponsoring a trip to Houston in early February, to visit a major exhibition of paintings by Paul Cezanne to be on view at Houston's Museum of Fine Arts.

The Feb. 8 one-day plane trip is open to any interested person in Midland and sorrounding area. A Jan. 22 deadline for making reservations for the trip is being announced. Full details on the trip and the schedule of activities planned may be obtained by calling the Museum of the Southwest office, 683-2882.

The Cezanne show, opening Jan. 25 at the Houston museum, has been organized by the Museum of Modern Art in New York City. The exhibition is considered to be one of the most complete and comprehensive displays of the late works of Cezanne, often described as "the father of 20th Century painting."

Minister critical of practices

By JULIE FREDERIKSE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. William Wendt is studying society's attitudes toward death, so he devised "a clinical training program" for himself at the start of a sabbatical from Washington's St. Stephen and the Incarnation Episcopal Church.

He apprenticed himself to an undertaker for a month.

"I thought it would be marvelous exposure to a group of very mysterious people — funeral directors — and to an elusive subject — death," Wendt says.

He picked up bodies at hospitals and homes and took them to the funeral home, assisted in funeral arrangements and embalmings and attended funerals.

He says he emerged from his apprenticeship with respect for funeral directors as hard-working professionals responding to the needs of society, "but I also say that they foster those needs through the practices and products they sell; they are not in the business of offering options.

"The funeral industry not only takes advantage of our death-denying society, it perpetuates the myth that death will always come to somebody else by discouraging an honest and open acceptance of the death of a loved one."

Hard-sell methods, he says, surprised him. In the casket room, for example, funeral directors "will prominently display the most expensive models. The cheaper caskets ... are in the back, often in unattractive colors designed to turn off the customer."

Wendt says people are frequently told that "This is the last gift of love you can give" or "I would want my mother buried this way." A person who didn't see the need for a casket with an innerspring mattress was chided with the question, 'Would you put your father to rest on anything that wasn't comfortable?'"

Wendt looks unkindly on the practice of embalming, which he contends manifests the "basic death-defying nature of the funeral industry." He doubts that the bereaved are aided by viewing the body in an open casket, and embalming "is no longer a prerequisite for an open-casket service, even if it's held several days after death."

Dick Gregory mixes politics with comedy

By RUDY MAXA
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Three times recently comedian and social activist Dick Gregory protested too close to the South African embassy in Washington, three times he was arrested and three times the charges against him were dropped.

That is frustrating for someone trying to garner publicity about the treatment of blacks in South Africa by forcing a court test of the law requiring protesters to stay 500 feet from an embassy.

"I'll be back," says Gregory, who knows how embarrassing a trial could be to both the U.S. and South African governments.

For Gregory, protesting has become a way of life since his rise to stardom as a comedian and civil rights activist in the 1960s. Now 45 and the father of 10 children, he incorporates his politics with his work.

He is a vegetarian who shuns most cooked foods as well as alcohol. When he appeared last month at Los iquor was served during his two-week, standing-room-only engagement. His routines are reminiscent of the late Lenny Bruce.

"I do a bit about the airlines — I think they get away with murder," Gregory says. "But because we want to believe the jet age is a new thing, we tolerate things we'd never put up with from, say, the bus companies.

"What if Greyhound made you walk as far to your bus as the airlines do? Course, maybe if people went on Sunday with their families and watched the buses arrive and depart from the station ...And you hear about those black boxes after a crash? I want to know what they put around that black box so it won't burn that they can't put around my seat."

For weeks now Gregory has been fasting, living on lemonade and maple syrup in protest of South Africa's apartheid policies. He spent part of that time between college appearances last month in Nassau with born-again Hustler magazine founder Larry Flynt, who conducted his own prayer-fast for cancer-stricken Hubert Humphrey.

Both men share a fascination with the assassination of John Kennedy, which Gregory thinks the CIA knows a lot more about than the spy agency has revealed.

Gregory has other theories about what's going on behind Washington's closed doors: he suspects the Korean influence-peddling investigation in the House might be the mechanism the CIA uses to dilute the House assassination probe, withholding evidence that could lead to wholesale indictments of congressmen in exchange for a reaffirmation of the Warren Commission report.

But any political stridency is camouflaged with much good humor; Gregory disagrees with some comedians who find the Carter administration provides a shortage of laughs.

"You know the East Coast establishment hates Southern white folks," Gregory cracks. "They proved it when they took away Carter's car at his inauguration, made him and his family walk up Pennsylvania Avenue. It's true, they took it away — you haven't heard of him walking anywhere else, have you? And Mondale, he rode."

Didn't former Washington Star editor James Bellows once threaten to quit the Star if the man who is now his boss at the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner was hired?

Yes, when the publisher of the Cincinnait Enquirer, Francis Dale, was considered about a year ago for the prexy's post at the Star, Bellows fought the appointment. Ironically, Dale became publisher of the Los Angeles paper that just hired Bellows.

Is the feud for real between Ralph Nader and Joan Claybrook, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and formerly Nader's very close friend? Or is it just a ploy to give her greater leverage with Transportation Secretary Brock Adams?

Nader is not bluffing. He was delighted when Claybrook traded her consumer affairs hat for a government one, but he feels she has soft-pedaled industry positions, though others say her stands have been politically shrewd. "Ralph attacks those who are least deserving and most vulnerable — those closest to him," remarks a former Nader associate. "He didn't understand she has to respond to the same forces as any administrator." Nader has gone so far as to request a copy of Claybrook's expense account and a list of her meetings during a trip abroad earlier this winter.

Entertainment was provided by a Russian circus on tour, and a trained bear was supposedly presented as a spontaneous gift by the trainer. What became of the bear?

It took a lot of calls but the women behind the event, Esther Coopersmith, eventually convinced the National Zoo to accept the bear from the circus. She, incidentally, is not stranger to animals. As a political fund-raiser known around Washington, Coopersmith once tethered a donkey at her home during Hubert Humphrey's 1968 campaign. And in one of Gene McCarthy's early Senate campaigns, she housed two white turkeys that were flown in from Minnesota for a fund-raiser.

Dallas, Denver seek Super Bowl crown

By HAL BOCK

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Denver's Cinderella Broncos, upset specialists all year long, bid for the championship of professional football today against the playoff-toughened Dallas Cowboys in Super Bowl XII, climaxing the National Football League's 58th season.

A sellout crowd of amost 75,000 fans will jam the Louisiana Superdome for the 12th game in the series between NFL conference champions which has become one of the top spectacles in sports.

The contest matches the two teams with the best records in the NFL this season. Dallas swept to the National Conference's East Division title with a 12-2 record and then eliminated Chicago and Minnesota to reach the Super Bowl for the fourth time. The Cowboys beat Miami for the championship in 1972 after losing to Baltimore the year before. Dallas also lost to Pittsburgh in the 1976.

For their fourth visit to the Super Bowl, the Cowboys drew a first-time playoff team in the Broncos, who stunned the NFL by capturing the AFC West with their own 12-2 record, Then Denver, which had never even reached the playoffs before, eliminated Pittsburgh and defending champion Oakland in post-season games to qualify for the championsip showdown.

THE GAME matches two intricately designed defenses—the Dallas flex which staggers linemen in a sort of gap formation that helped the Cowboys lead the NFL with the fewest yards allowed, and Denver's 3-4 which stacks four linebackers behind a three-man rushing line and enabled the Broncos to give up the fewest rushing yards of any team in the league.

The Dallas defense is constructed around end Harvey Martin, who led the NFL with 23 quarterback sacks and was name defnsive player of the year. Safety Cliff Harris also earned All-Pro honors for the Cowboys.

Dallas' quarterback is Roger Staubach, who led all NFC passers, throwing for 2,620 yards and 18 touchdowns. The Denver quarterback is Craig Morton, second among AFC passers with 1,929 yards and 14 TDs.

THE IRONY is that once they were teammates, competing for the same job with the Cowboys. Staubach won that battle and Morton drifted off, first to the New York Giants and then, this year, to Denver.

The acquisition of Morton was engineered by freshman Coach Red Miller, who moved to the Broncos season after 17 years as an assistant coach around the NFL. He got the Denver job after a dozen players complained to management last year that the team lacked leadership under Coach John Ralston.

Miller, who won coach of the year honors, is given much of the credit for turning Denver into a winner. Besides installing the 3-4 defense and making Morton his quarterback, he instituted a system of rotating ,running backs with five men, Otis Armstrong, Jon Keyworth, Rob Lytle, Lonnie Perrin and Jim Jensen, sharing the work. As a result, Denver's leading rusher was Armstrong with only 489 yards.

By contrast, Dallas' ground game is led by rookie Tony Dorsett, who rushed for 1,007 yards despite the fact that he did not become a starter until the season's 10th game. He was only the eighth rookie in NFL history to go over the 1,000-yard mark.

BESIDES DORSETT, the Cowboys start Robert Newhouse, who rushed for 721 yards.

Staubach's top receivers are wide receiver Drew Pearson, an All-Pro who caught 48 passes for 870 yards and running back Preston Pearson, who grabbed 46 for 535. Dorsett

Funtime in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS — The Dallas Cowboys and the Denver Broncos went through their final brief workout of the year here Saturday, and now lay in wait for today's 5 p.m. CDT Super Bowl game. All that can be done has been done, but SUPER fans, as their known here, are just beginning.

By now you know everything that is to be known about the Cowboys and Broncos, and maybe that is why this storied game is such a letdown on most occasions. It may be overblown by the media, but the fans keep coming back for more.

Few here really seem to care that there has been a threat on the life of Denver's Jon Keyworth, or the battle between Roger Staubach and Craig Morton. Even fewer are concerned over the decision not to use the giant instant replay screens in the Superdome. Fans on both sides are confident of victory. The details only get in the way. No one seems to care about the small outbreaks of flu on the two squads or how many times a player has to go to the bathroom everyday.

IT'S THE show and the pre-game parties that count here. They just want a show for their money. Some are still looking for tickets, and at present, there is a lot more money around than there are tickets.

When New Orleans put in their bid for Super Bowl XII, the city expected an influx of $15 million into the local economy. Today, that estimate was raised to $30 million, and that's a lot of local flavor — even in this land that invented flavor.

BOURBON STREET is a shoulder-to-shoulder mixture of idiots dressed as Orange Crush cans to acid heads who don't even know what's going on.

There is no chance to gain entrance to Pat O'Brien's or world-famous Hurricane, or to hear Al Hirt blow his brains out. Crazy Shirley's is packed, the French Market looks like the aftermath of a tidal wave and Sandy Beach, the local stripper, has seen better Januarys. No one seems to mind though because there are enough entertainers from Dallas and Denver to make the streets the best attraction of all.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

DENVER FANS seem to be the most vocal. They are either dressed in orange or they carry six-packs of Orange Crush. It's all part of an-

Why Cowboys will win . . .

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys will defeat the Denver Broncos in Super Bowl XII because of mobility, the prime reason Cowboy Coach Tom Landry chose Roger Staubach over Craig Morton six years ago

Landry has the fastest team both offensively and defensively in his 18 years at the Cowboy helm.

Staubach can dodge the Denver rush and the pocket-passing Morton, who has a hip injury to boot, can't escape Doomsday II.

Morton has been sacked 50 times which ranks 27th among the National Football League's 28 teams for futility in protecting the passer.

Staubach was caught only 33 times.

Dallas has the most prolific quarterback sacker in the NFL, defensive Player of the Year Harvey Martin, with 23 traps.

Roger Staubach

Staubach beat Denver's defense with two touchdown passes in an earlier game. And the Broncos must respect the explosiveness of rookie Tony Dorsett, who gained over 1,000 yards.

To do this, they must sacrifice on their pass coverage of three of the swiftest receivers in the league, Drew Pearson, Butch Johnson and Golden Richards.

Denver also has speed at the wide receiver posts in Haven Moses, Jack Dolbin and Ricky Upchurch. But Dallas doesn't have to respect Denver's below-par running game which gives Cowboy linebackers D.D. Lewis, Bob Breunig and Thomas Henderson an edge in dropping back to protect against Morton's sure-to-be-hurried passes.

The Cowboy flex defense is designed to stop the run but Morton knows his former teammates will be coming with the blitz. That's how they beat him five straight times when he played with the New York Giants. Dallas only has to shut down the big play, which it did in playoff victories over Chicago and Minnesota.

By JOHN MOSSMAN

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Emotion, hunger and the best linebacking corps in the National Football League. Denver has them, and Dallas doesn't, which is why the Broncos will win Super Bowl XII today at the Superdome.

FEW TEAMS faced tougher schedules this year than the Broncos and none overcame the odds more successfully. Triumphs over St. Louis, Oakland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Baltimore steeled the Broncos for the playoffs.

After the 12-2 regular season, Denver then beat playoff-seasoned Pittsburgh and Oakland again to reach the Super Bowl.

"As the new team in the playoffs, we were supposed to make the mistakes," said Coach Red Miller. "But it was the other guys who made the mistakes. We don't tighten up in the big games. We've played enough of them to know that."

Craig Morton

Miller gets his players emotionally aroused on game day. Broncos will be flying all over the field with an exuberance that rivals most college teams.

"I think football should be an emotional game," said Miller. "And it should be fun. I really think some of our guys would play for nothing."

DENVER WAITED a long time for this moment. The Broncos, an original American Football League franchise in 1960, didn't have a winning season until 1973. They reached the playoffs for the first time this season.

"DALLAS HAD BETTER be awfully damned hungry if they're any hungrier than we are," Miller said. "I like to characterize our team as a bunch of yard dogs backed into a corner and fighting like hell."

Despite solid contributions from the offense and kicking game, it is Denver's defense that deserves most of the credit

Knudson grabs one-stroke lead in Phoenix Open

PHOENIX (AP) — Canadian George Knudson birdied two of his last three holes, the final with an eight-foot putt, and took sole control of the third round lead Saturday in vast confusion that surrounded the $200,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

Knudson finished 54-holes over the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course with a 203 total, 10-under-par and one shot in front of Lee Trevino, defending champion Jerry Pate and Jim Simons.

All leader boards on the course — which show the relative position of the leaders — and the national television announcers indicated that Knudson, Trevino, Pate and Simons had finished the cool, cloudy day's play in a tie for the top at 204.

It wasn't until Knudson had signed and returned his card for a five-under-par 66, best round of the day, that it was discovered he was in sole control of the top spot going into today's final round of the chase for the $40,000 first prize.

Trevino, who has learned to play with pain since a back operation late in 1976, had a 67,, while Pate and Simons matched 70s.

A Trevino putt for a birdie that would have put him in a tie for the lead came was inches short on the final hole, and he stuck out his tongue at the ball. Still, he said, "It ain't bad for a crippled Mexican."

Rod Funseth, who started the day two strokes in front, hit a shot out of bounds on the third hole and took a triple-bogey seven. He regained a share of the lead, then blew it again with a bogey from behind a tree on the 16th and finished with a 73 and a 205 total, two shots back.

The group at 207, four strokes off the pace but still in the chase, included U.S. Open champion Hubert Green, Miller Barber, Bill Kratzert, Rik Massengale, Andy Bean, John Schroeder, Danny Edwards and Joe Inman. Inman had a 66, Edwards 67, Schreder, Bean and Kratzert 69s, Barber and Green 70s, and Massengale a 71.

That left 13 golfers within four shots of each other going into the last round of the second tournament of the season on the PGA Tour.

Arnold Palmer was another shot back at 208 after matching par 71. Tom Watson, the 1977 Player of the Year and a winner last week at Tucson, had a 70 and a 210 total.

Knudson, a 40-year-old who scored the last of his eight American titles almost six years ago, scored a "phantom" birdie on the 13th that threw the tournament into confusion.

His 25-foot putt for a deuce actually put him eight-under-par and only one shot out of the lead but — somehow — escaped detection by either television or the on-course scorers who relayed information to the leaderboards.

He went to nine-under-par, and a share of the lead, with a 15-footer on the 16th and, playing in the last three-some of the day, scored the go-ahead birdie on the final hole.

Knudson, who spent most of last season concentrating on play in his native Canada, held the first round lead with a 65 but slipped to a 72 over the second day.

"I lost my confidence a bit yesterday on the backside, but I got it back today, he said."

Why Denver?

for the Bronco success. That same defense will taunt, frustrate and ultimately overpower the Cowboys.

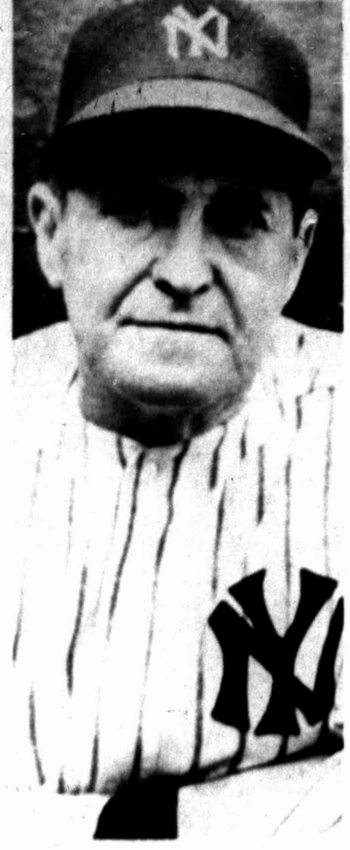

Denver was the best in the NFL against the run, yielding an average of just 3.3 yards per rush and 109.4 yards rushing per game. You don't run wide on Denver, and if you try the inside route, the Lyle Alzado gang is waiting to mug you.

When Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach throws, he'll be facing as many as eight defensive backs, since the four mobile Bronco linebackers all take deep drops into pass coverage.

All of Denver's linebackers are fast, and they hit. Randy Gradishar and Tom Jackson are All-Pros, and Bob Swenson and Joe Rizzo are sound, consistent performers.

IT'S NOT an easy task to move the ball against such a defense. Quarterbacks who have tried to force it, like Oakland's Ken Stabler in the first meeting with Denver, suffer. Stabler was intercepted seven times.

The Bronco offense is unspectacular, but it makes few errors. Denver will play it conservatively in its own territory, but will open things up past midfield. While the defense is busy yielding turnovers and good field position, Craig Morton & Co. are unexcelled at capitalizing.

'Super League' not so super

ATLANTA (AP) — If television isn't exactly wagging college football's tail, it is expected to be a major factor following the creation of a socalled "super division" within the National Collegiate Athletic Association that really isn't so super after all.

With Divisions I-A and I-AA now a reality, the current theme among NCAA members is "wait and see." But as far as one skeptic is concerned, it may only turn out to be the old Brooklyn Dodger war cry of "wait 'til next year."

Those football-playing schools from what has been known as Division I have 60 days to declare whether they want to be in Division I-A — the "majormajor" schools — or I-AA, which will have something of a second-class status.

If they opt for I-A, they must meet specified critieria within three years. But the three-year grace period also means there could be as many as 167 schools in I-A over that period — last year's 144 Division I teams, plus 23 others from Division II which meet the new criteria.

That, however, is unlikely — because of TV.

Under a new four-year NCAA-ABC television plan which begins with the 1978 season, most Division I-AA games will be selected for television on merit, although the limit of five appearances in two years still prevails.

To cite a hypothetical case, ABC will be able — within reason — to choose its games. The Notre Dames, Alabamas and Oklahomas will still be seen as often as possible, but if it's a matter of televising, say, Colorado-Iowa State or Tulsa-Wichita State, there is little doubt which one the network will pick.

However, the new plan guara tees Division I-AA 16 appearances in each two-year period of the contract. The money, of course, is considerable and the number of appearances could rise, depending on how many institutions go I-AA.

The only guarantee in Division I-A is one appearance every two years for each conference with at least six members. Other games will be selected on merit within the maximum appearance rule.

The restructuring of Division I did not go quite as far as the big-time football powers hoped — Division I-A apparently will not be as exclusive as planned — but everyone seems to be satisfied, for the time being.

"I'd say we got more than we expected, but it's a little tenuous at this point," said Bob Murphy, athletic director at San Jose State and a leader of the fight against the reorganization plan as originally proposed.

"I'd feel more secure if this convention took place every five or 10 years instead of every year. People are talking today about a three-year compliance period, but they discount the fact that we get together again next year. I think people will come out firing at us next year all over again."

While legislation that would have lifted some restrictions on the number of scholarships, size of coaching staff and recruiting visits was turned down by the NCAA membership, it is certain to come up again next year, especially if Division I-A turns out to be considerably smaller than last year's Division 1.

"The most important thing reorganization accomplished is that we now have four divisions in football," said Chuck Neinas, commissioner of the Big Eight Conference. "It provides for a more compact unit that can address itself to current and future problems more effectively.

"But I think it's somewhat premature to determine the numbers until the 60-day period is up. Because most of the TV guarantees are in Division IAA, anyone who wants to be IA will have to float with the big boys. If the Mid-American Conference, for example, wants to be I-A, they can expect to have their programs judged against the Big Ten."

"Basically, what happened here was fair," said Murphy. "It wasn't what we intended, but it wasn't what the top 79 schools intended, either."

What saved schools like San Jose State and its fellow members of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association — along with the Mid-American, Missouri Valley, Southern and Southland Conferences — was an alternative sponsored by the eight Ivy League schools, along with Colgate and William & Mary.

Under the original reorganization plan, these would have been the Division I-A criteria:

—A minimum of eight varsity Division I sports, including football.

—At least 60 percent of the schedule against other Division I members.

—An average home attendance of 17,000 over the past four years or a 30,000-seat stadium and an average attendance of 17,000 in one of ohe last four years.

Many of last year's Division I schools would have been unable to meet the requirements.

Why Cowboys will win

mitted just an average of 109 yards rushing per game, the Broncos are 12th in pass defense. Staubach has been getting sharper in his passing with each game and also has the patience to attack the 3-4 defense.

The intangibles loom large.

Landry has had two weeks to dissect the Denver defense. He's a genius at coming up with innovations.

Dallas has a playoff-hardened team. Four Super Bowls and 11 playoff games mean Dallas' butterflies in the pre-game won't loom as large as Denver's.

The Cowboys are not scared by the AFC's better overall strength. Dallas is 20-6 against AFC teams.

Las Vegas likes the Cowboys by 5½ points. That's about right—or it could be by more.

Mario Andretti gains pole position

Andretti, driving a Lotus, registered a time of 1 minute, 47.75 seconds Saturday around the 5,968-meter circuit, during Saturday's final time trials.

Carlos Reutemann of Argentina, the local favorite for the 53-lap race at the Buenos Aires Autodrome, had the second best time of 1:47.84, which he registered in Friday's trials.

Third was Andretti's Lotus teammate, Ronnie Peterson of Sweden, with a time of 1:48.39. John Watson of Ireland, driving a Brabham, finished fourth in the trials in 1:48.42, which he registered Friday.

His teammmate, Niki Lauda of Austria — the world driving champion — was fifth in 1:48.70, also recorded Friday.

"I am very happy with my car," Andretti said after learning of his winning time. "There was a lot of wind out there today, but my Lotus went like a thunderbolt. If the car goes tomorrow, like it went today, I have a pretty good chance of winning, but I expect a lot of trouble from Reutemann, Lauda and Hunt."

Reutemann was visibly angry after the Saturday session.

Saints, Eagles set exhibition in Mexico

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Saints and the Philadelphia Eagles have formally agreed to play their National Football League preseason opener in Mexico City next fall.

No NFL game has ever been played South of the Border.

Terms of the contract signed Friday were not disclosed. The agreement was signed by owners John Mecom Jr. of the Saints and Leonard Tose of the Eagles, as well as by Guillermo Lopez Portillo, director of the National Institute of Sports for Mexico.

Portillo predicted a sellout, whether the game is played in the 84,000-seat university stadium or the 104,000-seat Aztec stadium.

"You don't know it, and Mr. Mecom didn't know it, but we have much American-style football in Mexico," said Portillo. "We have hundreds of high school teams and 12-15 junior college teams.

"We have been playing football since the American oil companies began operating in Mexico about 1920 or so."

An NFL exhibition game was scheduled in Mexico City in 1968, but political unrest forced its cancellation. Chicago and St. Louis played an exhibition game in Japan last season, the first overseas game played by NFL teams.

"If things get any worse, if we have another year like this one, Mexico City may be our new home," said Mecom. The Saints finished 3-11 after preseason predictions that the team would have its first break-even year ever.

Tose said tha should the NFL decide to expand, Mexico City would be a logical choice.

Portillo said Monterey and Guadalajara also have stadiums large enough to accomodate NFL games.

"Soccer is the most passionately played sport in Mexico, but football has many fans," he said, adding that NFL games are regularly televised in Mexico.

Mecom said the Saints and the Eagles are being offered a flat fee to play Aug. 5 in Mexico, but he would not say how much money they are to receive.

"Let's just try this one out," he said. "If it works well, we'll go back."

On another matter, Tose said that reports he was having financial problems were overstated.

"Garbage," he said. "Garbage."

"Anybody who has any problems refinancing a loan with this new television package we have is dumb. I'm not too smart, but I'm not dumb."

Blown out by winds

WENGEN, Switzerland (AP) — Strong winds Saturday forced cancellation of downhill practice and a rescheduling of the men's World Cup ski races on the nearby Lauberhor.

Organizers said the downhill was now slated for monday while the slalalom race would be held today. Downhill practice is to be held between the two slalom runs.

Press likes to talk to Martin

HOUSTON (AP) — The predominant image of World Champion New York Yankee Manager Billy Martin is that of a fiery skipper charging the home plate umpire with clenched fist, blood vessels bulging from his neck and a few well chosen words on his lips.

Because of that image, Martin says he has to be careful what he says.

"I'll have 30, 40 or 50 guys from the press to talk to after every game," Martin said prior to a baseball appearance here Saturday. "And they're in the dressing room a lot quicker if we lose to see if I'll get mad or whatever.

"And if you say something, you have to be very careful or it will come out in the paper 'Martin rages.'"

Martin did not rage in Houston. He did, however, make an interesting statement con-cerning his much publicized temper and his flare for controversy.

Despite a nationally televised argument with Yankee slugger Reggie Jackson and bodily carrying a sports writer out of the Yankee dressing room last season, Martin added "They (the press) have never seen my temper although they talk about it a lot."

Martin, who guided the Yankees to the world championship last season, said he asked New York columnist Dick Young to leave the dressing room and when he didn't "I escorted him to the door. I didn't hit him or anything."

One accusation that at least raises Martin's eyebrow, if not his temper, is that the Yankees bought a world championship with high priced free agents.

"Yes it does irritate me when someone suggests that," Martin said. "You don't buy a pennant. If that's the case, California should have won it.

Longhorns upset Arkansas, 75-69

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — John Moore forced Arkansas into repeated mistakes and pumped in 20 points Saturday night as unranked Texas stunned the unbeaten, third-ranked Razorbacks 75-69 to maintain their lead in the Southwest Conference basketball race.

The victory, before a crowd of 16,288, largest in SWC history, gave Texas a 12-2 season record and upped its SWC mark to 4-0. It was the first loss for the Hogs, who entered the game with a 14-0 season slate and a 2-0 SWC record.

It was Arkansas' first SWC loss in the past two seasons.

The Razorbacks committed 19 turnovers, with the crafty Moore — fronting the Texas zone defense — causing most of them. Texas made only 10 floor mistakes.

The errors marred a sensational shooting performance by Arkansas, which hit all seven free throws and 31 of 53 field goal attempts for a 58.5 shooting percentage.

The score was tied 35-35 at halftime and the lead changed hands in the second half until Moore took a pass from Tyrone Branyan to put Texas in the lead to stay.

The Longhorns built their lead to 69-61 with just over two minutes remaining and went into a delay game against the tiring Hogs, who used only one substitute and were playing their fourth game this week.

Branyan added 18 points for Texas, while Gary Goodner had 13, even though he set out much of the second half with four fouls.

Sidney Moncrief paced the Hogs with 24 points, including nine of 11 field goals and all six of his free throws. Marvin Delph added 17 and Ron Brewer had 16 — with only two of those coming in the final half.

Kentucky rips LSU

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Mike Phillips scored 18 of his 23 points in the first half Saturday and led top-ranked Kentucky to a 96-76 rout of Louisiana State in a Southeastern Conference basketball game.

Phillips, a 6-foot-10 senior center, hit all seven of his first half field goal attempts and added four free throws as Kentucky, 12-0, settled the outcome by waltzing to a 55-28 halftime lead.

LSU, 8-6, held early leads at 2-1 and 6-5, but Phillips erased each with a layup. The latter basket began a string of 12 unanswered points that boosted the Wildcats to a 17-6 lead.

Phillips scored 10 points during an 18-6 spurt midway through the opening half that ballooned the Kentucky advantage to 40-19 and turned the regionally televised game into a rout.

Rick Robey finished with 18 points for Kentucky, while Jack Givens added 17, James Lee had 12 and Kyle Macy had 10. Guard Jordy Holtberg and forward Durand Macklin each had 16 for LSU.

The win kept Kentucky atop the SEC standings with a 4-0 record while LSU dropped to 2-3. It also continued Wildcat dominance of LSU in Lexington, where the Tigers have never won.

Kentucky's lead blossomed to 59-28 in the opening minute of the second half when Robey and Givens each hit baskets, and LSU could get no closer than the final margin.

LSU guard Kenny Higgs, a Kentucky native, was again frustrated before the Kentucky crowd. Higgs was limited to 10 points and fouled out early in the second half. It was the third time in Higgs' four appearances here that he fouled out.

Dallas, Denver battle today

caught 29 for 273 and tight end Billy Joe DuPree had 8 for 347.

For Denver, tight end Riley Odoms led the receivers with 37 catches for 429 yards followed by wide receivers Haven Moses and Jack Dolbin, who caught 27 and 26, respectively.

Essentialy, Denver's offense is a holding unit with the defense, nicknamed the Orange Crush, providing most of the team's big plays. Dallas is as efficient on the attack as it is on defense and led the league in both categories, generating 4,812 yards per game and allowing 3,213.

THE SUCCESS of the Broncos, after 17 years of futility, has captured the imagination of Denver and thousands of fans were swarming into this Bayou city, outfitted in orange, the color so closely identified with the team. Dallas fans, too, swelled the downtown area as excitement built for the game that rivals the World Series, championship fights and top golf and tennis tournaments for nationwide attention.

Islanders in easy win over Capitals

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Goalie Glenn Resch recorded his second shutout against Washington this season and Bryan Trottier became the first player to score 30 goals this National Hockey League season as the New York Islanders blanked the Capitals 4-0 Saturday night.

Bob Nystrom opened the scoring for the Islanders. He broke between two Washington defensemen, skated in alone on goalie Jim Bedard and lifted a backhand shot over the goalie's left shoulder at 11:56 of the opening period.

Wisconsin tops Indiana five

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Arnold Gaines, scoring a career high of 25 points, sparked Wisconsin to a 78-65 victory over 18th-ranked Indiana in Big Ten basketball Saturday.

The Badgers, winning their first conference game in four starts, handed the Hoosiers their third defeat in four league games. It was Wisconsin's first triumph over Indiana in Madison since a 94-87 double overtime decision March 2, 1971.

The score was tied 12 times in the first half of the regionally televised contest, including 37-37 at the intermission.

Wisconsin surged to an early second half advantage, but the Hoosiers fought back and grabbed a 55-54 lead on a threepoint play by Wayne Radford. Radford, who scored 10 of his 14 points in the second half, was largely responsible for Indiana's second half showing.

Larry Petty put Wisconsin ahead for good at 56-55 on two free throws with 9:38 left, and the Badgers then added seven more points to take a 63-55 lead.

Andrews pair on all-state

DALLAS (AP) — Booger Brooks and Mickey Munsell of Andrews were named today to the Class AAA all-state football team chosen by the Texas Sports Writers Association.

Brooks, a 5-11, 185-pound senior, was named on the second team along with teammate Munsell. Brooks quarterbacked the Mustangs to the state playoffs as Coach Tommy Watkins' team won the District 2-AAA championship this past season.

Munsell, also a senior center stands 6-3 and weighs 205 pounds. Both were also all-district selections in 2-AAA.

Randy Smith triggers Braves over Buffaloes

BUFFALO (AP) — Randy Smith scored 36 points, all in the first three periods, to lead the charge as Buffalo trampled Washington 130-93 in the National Basketball Association Saturday night.

With six players in double figures, the Braves accellerated to their most impressive victory of the season. Only one night earlier, Buffalo had been embarrassed by Philadelphia, 118-93, while Washington was rolling to its biggest win of the season, a 102-93 victory over defending champion Portland.

Washington took an early lead and was ahead by as many as 11 points, 41-30, midway through the second period. But Buffalo came back and scored the final 6 points of the half to take a 55-51 intermission lead.

The third quarter was all Buffalo's. The Braves played near-perfect basketball, hitting 17 of 27 from the floor and committing no turnovers. After three quarters, the Braves led 94-68.

Marvin Barnes, Mike Glenn, Billy Knight, Chuck Williams and Bill Willoughby all tallied in double figures for Buffalo. Willoughby had a season-high 19.

Bob Dandridge led Washington with 22 points. Elvin Hayes added 18. Kevin Grevey and Greg Ballard each scored 10 points. All of Ballard's points came in the fourth quarter.

Borg, Stockton in net finals

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden rallied from a 1-5 second set deficit Saturday to come on for a 6-4, 7-6 victory over third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis of New York in the semifinals of the Birmingham International Indoor Tennis tournament.

After Borg's defense had forced Gerulaitis into repeated errors in the first set, Gerulaitis came back to win 12 points for a 3-0 advantage in the second set.

The two held service the next two games and Gerulaitis broke on top to 5-1 in the sixth game.

Then Borg won 16 of the next 17 points to go from 1-5 to 5-0. From that point, each held serve to bring on the tie-breaker. Borg won it 7-3.

It was Borg's second straight victory over Gerulaitis. They last met in a five-set match in the semifinals at Wimbledon last summer.

For his winning, Borg will play Dick Stockton in today's finals. The two last met at the U.S. Open at Forest Hills, when Borg retired from the match because of a sore shoulder.

In an earlier round, seventh-ranked Stockton never let fourth-seeded Eddie Dibbs into the match as he served and volleyed his way to a 6-3, 6-3, victory.

Stockton broke to a 4-0 lead in the first set and hardly looked back. In the first set, he scored heavily with his serve with three aces.

Dibbs of Miami Beach, Fla., began coming to the net in the second set and it helped his cause some. But overall, Stockton had control of the net, scoring most heavily with volleys and an occasional overhead.

In doubles, Stockton and Frew McMillan rallied to defeat second-ranked Brian Gottfried and Mexico's Raul Ramirez 4-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Funtime in Super Bowl

nouncing their status. Dallas fans dress in blue for the most part, are less vocal and definitely seemed outraged at the all-out influx of Denver fans, who shout to the heavens their allegiance. Maybe the Denver group is why this Super Bowl has so much intensity. They don't want their status jeopardized. They're at this annual shindig for the first time.

Getting something to eat is the biggest problem, and that more than anything else, is the real trouble spot.

Brennan's, the world-famous breakfast house, is serving 2,000 meals a day with 300 to 400 people waiting for seats in the patio.

It's a five-hour wait outside for a 30 minute tour of the King Tut exhibit and the temperature dropped to the low 20's.

THE MANAGER of the Hyett-Regency Hotel, one of the largest in the city, said Saturday that he could have used 5,000 more rooms. He's sending people 80 miles to the north to find lodging.

The National Football League hosted its annual blowout Friday night, and for the lucky 2,500 people to earn an invitation, there were 600 pounds of shrimp, 40,000 oysters, 600 pounds of fried catfish, 6,000 lobster tails and 300 pounds of crab. Not to mention 10 varieties of cheese, 16 different types of bread, 14 varieties of French pastry and assorted meats too numerous to mention.

And just as a sideshow there were the Denver cheerleaders, the Apache Belles from Tyler Junior College, assorted jazz bands and singers.

Although the majority of fans could not gain or fanagle an entrance to the NFL party, everyone seemed happy enough. Just being here is the best part.

Only one group seems to be totally unhappy. Over 490 New Yorkers paid $489 each only to get to New Orleans and find out that the tour people couldn't come up with tickets for the game. Tickets were part of the package. Celestino P. Caruso, the New York travel agent, said a friend was supposed to supply the tickets from Las Vegas, but failed to come through. Caruso is directing all questions to his lawyers, naturally.

Only the Super Bowl remains now. Somehow you get the feeling it's going to be another big letdown. Just ask the New Yorkers as they watch with you on their hotel TV's.

NFL organizes new association

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The National Football League Players Association announced Saturday the formation of a new organization of player agents to be called the Association of Reprensentatives of Professional Athletes.

The target of the new group, according to Ed Garvey, executive director of the players association, is to eliminate abuses by attorneys and agents who represent athletes.

The NFLPA plans a directory of agents accepting a code of ethics established for athlete representatives and a uniform contract between athlete and agent, to protect the athlete and provide for full disclosure of the relationship.

Garvey also announced that defensive tackle Mike Barnes of the Baltimore Colts and offensive guard John Hannah of the New England Patriots have been named winners of the Bulldog Awards as the outstanding lineman in the NFL in voting conducted by the players association among NFL linemen.

The awards are presented by Mack Trucks.

Bulldog netters nab dual win over Steers

The state champion Midland High tennis team opened their dual season Saturday with a lop-sided 18-0 victory over Big Spring at the MHS courts.

It was the first action for the Bulldogs as a team since last November 5, when they defeated San Antonio Churchill in the finals of the State Team Tennis Tournament up in Wichita Falls, but they picked up right where they left off.

Coach Larry Burgin rested some of his top players, including boys' number two singles player Kirk Farquhar, and the Pack's top two girls' singles performers, Vicki Vasicek and Cary Garton. Joe Love was also missing from Saturday's lineup. He injured his knee in practice.

Tim Baird, Jeff Rea, Craig Aldridge, Duncan Kennedy, Kyle McDonnold and Kell Cahoon all won their boys singles matches, with only Rea's going three sets. Rea, the hero of that exciting victory over Churchill, dropped his first set, 4-6, to Craig McMahon, but bounced back to take the next two, 6-4, 6-4.

In girls action, Mary Morgan, Sherry Armstrong, Karen Farquhar, Amy Davenport, Julie Stoltz and Susan Cowden swept all six singles matches, with Farquhar the only netter extended to three sets. She downed Toni Cline, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Cowboy cheerleaders to have short stay

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — This picturesque old river city was jumping to the beat of a nonstop Super Bowl party this weekend, but one of the most celebrated groups in pro football was not here to enjoy it.

The Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders, who became a national sensation with their daring necklines and as the result of a hot-selling poster, were not scheduled to be flown to New Orleans until a few hours before game time today.

The reason? They are so popular they are difficult to protect in crowd situations. And New Orleans was one big, happy crowd.

"We couldn't provide convenient accommodations for the entire group," said Suzanne Mitchell, director of the cheerleaders. "We have so much going on already, we have to concern ourselves with the players."

So the 32 Dallas cheerleaders will have a Super Bowl trip of about 10 hours. Their bodyguards will be with them. "Always they have bodyguards," Mitchell said. "Always. They'll arrive (at the Superdome) two hours before kickoff, like normal, and after the game they'll be put promptly on a bus and taken to the airport."

The cheeleaders create a sensation wherever they go. They drew 5,000 people to the opening of a savings and loan office in Little Rock.

"In Wichita, Kans., we took all of them to a football game and performed at halftime," Mitchell said. "They were almost mobbed in the stands and we had to get about 50 highway patrolmen just to get them out of the stadium."

But the Denver cheeleaders, known as the Pony Express, arrived Friday and appeared to be having a good time mixing with the crowd of 3,200 at the National Football League's annual Super Bowl party Friday night at the Rivergate convention complex.

The Denver contingent wore cowgirl costumes that were stylish but not as daring as those worn by the Dallas cheeleaders.

The Denver girls stood up in long lines for plates of crawfish, shrimp, jambalaya, red beans and rice, catfish, hushpuppies, crab claws and oysters. They were entertained on three stages by groups playing country, Cajun, rock and soul music.

The bulk of the super weekend crowd, though, could be found in New Orleans famed French Quarter, elbow to elbow in such famous watering holes as Pat O'Briens and Brennan's. Most obvious were the Denver fans in their orange shirts, hats, coats and T-shirts, carrying orange glasses and passing out cans of Orange Crush soft drink.

The economic impact on New Orleans of the Super Bowl crowd had been predicted at $15 million, but Friday, Ray J. Liuzza, managing partner of the International Hotel and president of the Greater New Orleans Hotel-Motel Association, revised that to somewhere between $25 and $30 million.

The New Orleans Hilton reported it could have sold another 5,000 rooms.

Duke upends No. Carolina in big upset

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Mike Gminksi, playing a fine all-around game, scored a game high of 29 points as Duke upset No. 2-ranked North Carolina 92-84 Saturday in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game.

North Carolina, using man-to-man defense, gained its biggest lead, 18-12, after 6:30 minutes of play.

Duke's Jim Spanarkel then scored nine straight points to give the Blue Devils a 21-18 lead. Both teams settled into zones defensively as the game became a see-saw affair with North Carolina leading at halftime 47-46.

In the second half, Duke broke the game open, outscoring the Tar Heels 12-4 within four minutes. North Carolina came back to within seven points, 71-64, with 10:41 remaining.

North Carolina is now 12-2 and Duke is 12-3. Both are 3-1 in the conference.

Duke played its best game of the season in disposing of the Tar Heels in front of the capacity crowd.

"We came out four hours before the game to warm up," said Duke's Bill Foster, "and there was already a crowd. It helped psych our players up."

Duke forced Carolina into making 22 turnovers with their 2-3 zone. Carolina had trouble moving the ball inside and had to rely on Ford's shooting from the outside to stay in contention.

"I'm proud of our team," said North Carolina's Dean Smith. "I thought we played well. I've never seen a team put it together like Duke did today. I was impressed with them."

Foster said of the upset, "I don't think there was any secret to our victory today. The only secret we had was our eight players out on the court. I thought we move the ball well."

"We were able to hit the open man on offense. We able to go to the basket instead of dillydallying around outside."

Red Raiders top Rice by 75-63

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Tech forward Mike Russell scored a game-high 30 points, including 21 in the second half, as the Red Raiders held off a pesky Rice squad to defeat the Owls 75-63 in a regionally televised Southwest Conference game Saturday.

Tech, now 11-4 for the season, ran their record to 3-1 in conference play. Rice is now 1-3 in conference play and 3-10 overall.

Kent Williams added 13 points for the Raiders. Elbert Darden led Rice with 14 points.

Rice took an 8-5 lead in the opening minutes of the first half, but Texas Tech ran off 11 straight points to take a 16-8 lead. That occurred with 12:25 remaining.

The Owls, however, came back to tie the score at 20-20 with less than seven minutes left in the half on a 15-foot jump shot by Alan Reynolds. Darden followed with a basket a minute later to boost the Owls into a two-point lead.

Texas Tech, however, scored the next seven points and took a 29-27 lead at halftime.

The Owls grabbed their largest lead of the game at 33-29, but Texas Tech ran off the next seven points and were never headed. Russell scored 12 points in a row for the Red Raiders who took their 12th straight victory over the Owls.

"Rice played as hard as anyone we've played," Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers said. "For the amount of the ability, they are as good a team as we've seen.

"I am proud of the way our guys played on this road trip-any time you can win on the road in conference play. The big thing today is that we didn't lose our intensity when our free throws weren't falling."

Myers said the Red Radiers weren't necessarily trying to go to Russell.

"We were just trying to get the best shot possible and he was getting the best shots," Myers said.

Rice Coach Mike Schuler said "we were beaten by a better basketball team.

"Our kids play as hard as any team in the United States of America," he said. "We're going to the top of this league. We're going to win the championship before too damn long."

Virgina topples No. Carolina St.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The University of Virginia, hitting on key free throws, held off a furious North Carolina State rally Saturday and rolled to a 74-68 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory.

Holding their biggest lead of the game at 65-56 with 1:33, the Cavaliers fell victim to a Wolfpack full-court press which came up with three baskets and a fould shot in 28 seconds and cut the Virginia lead to 65-63. But Viginia settled down and held on to win.

Koesters led the Cavaliers with 14 points. He was followed by Mike Owens and Bobby Stokes with 13 points apiece. Owens hit three free throws during the last minute and Stokes got all his points in the second half.

Sophomore guard Clyde Austin led State with 26 points. State broke an early 10-point lead, 21-11, midway through the first half as Austin hit three straight baskets and Hawkeye Whitney converted a three-point play.

But Virginia came roaring back, while the Wolfpack went with a basket for over seven minutes, and took its first lead of the game, 25-23, on Koesters 21-foot jumper at 3:40. Koesters had three baskets during the Cavalier rally.

The teams traded baskets after that, with Virginia taking a 29-27 lead to the dressing room.

Virginia is now 10-1 over-all and 2-1 in the ACC. State fell to 11-2 and 2-1 in conference play.

Portland State wins, 124-81 with Williams

By Associated Press

Friday night, his figures added up to a nice, round number — 66.

"He shoots from so far out, he destroys a good defense," said Coach Sam Willard after the Portland State hotshot tore up his George Fox team with the college basketball season's greatest scoring performance and one of the best in history.

Williams took 62 shots and made 32 of them, leading the Vikings to a 124-81 drubbing of the Bruins and giving Portand State's ace some newfound confidence. Last year's national scoring leader has been experiencing a sub-par season so far.

"This is our confidence-builder," said Williams, whose team had lost half of its 14 games before Friday night. "This was the one we needed. Mostly I developed the shots on my own. I only passed off when I was double-teamed."

The 66-point output ties for seventh on the all-time college scoring list. Williams' 71 points against Southern Oregon last year is third on that list.

Elsewhere in college basketball, fourth-ranked Marquette edged St. Louis 56-54; No. 7 UCLA defeated the Oregon Ducks 90-72; No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas trimmed Illinois State 94-92; New Mexico whipped Arizona State 91-84; Oregon State turned back Southern Cal 89-82 in overtime; San Francisco walloped Portland 101-68; Columbia stopped Cornell 74-56 and Arizona beat Texas-El Paso 74-60.

SEVEN POINTS down with less than eight minutes to play, Marquette rallied behind center Jerome Whitehead and reserve Gary Rosenberger to nip St. Louis.

A 20-footer by Rosenberger gave Marquette a 55-54 lead with one minute to play for the Warriors' winning point. Earlier, Whitehead's dunk shot sparked a 10-2 Warrior drive in the homestretch.

"We were desperate," said Marquette Coach Hank Raymonds, "and I think why we won was the strength of our tradition. These kids, I don't know what it is, they just don't like to lose."

Whitehead seconds that motion.

"I never thought that we'd lose if we just stayed in there on defense and just kept our composure," he said. "In a game like that, the team that cracks will lose. Every mistake they made helped us."

Ray Townsend scored 23 points to lead UCLA's conclusive whipping of Oregon. "We came mentally as well as physically prepared to play," said UCLA Coach Gary Cunningham.

REGGIE THEUS scored 36 points to pace the Nevada-Las Vegas triumph; Marvin Johnson led New Mexico's scorers with 23; Oregon State whipped Southern Cal as Ray Blume scored 22 points; James Hardy and Bill Cartwright combined for 46 to power San Francisco over Portland; Mike Wilhite and Rickey Free each had 17 in Columbia's triumph and Kenny Davis scored 16 points and collected 10 rebound to pace Arizona's conquest of Texas-El Paso.

Trognitz signs

CINCINNATI (AP) — Willie Trognitz, who has been banned for life by one pro hockey league, has signed a contract to play with the Cincinnati Stingers for the remainder of the World Hockey Association season.

Trognitz, 24, had previously been with the Stingers on a 10-game trial and was released. In the trial period, Trognitz, a left-winger, had no points and 39 penalty minutes.

Earlier this season, Trognitz was suspended for life from the International Hockey League after being involved in a fight in Port Huron, Mich.

Navratilova is top seed

HOUSTON (AP) — Defending champion Martina Navratilova of Dallas is seeded first in the $100,000 Women's Professional Tennis tournament that gets under way Monday.

Billie Jean King is the No. 2 seed while Sue Barker is third, followed by Virginia Wade, Rosemary Casals, Betty Stove and Wendy Turnbull.

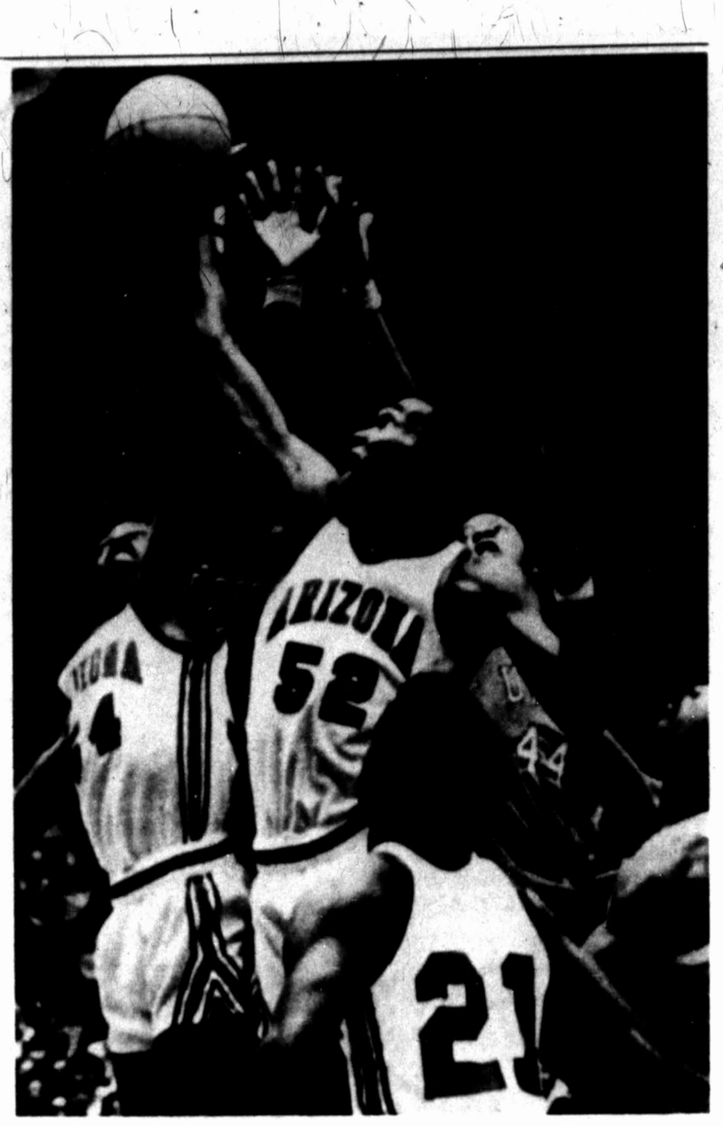

The tournament, which will be played at the Astro Area, is sponsored by Virginia Slims.

Navratilova, who has won the Houston tournament for the past two years, will face Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia in a first-round match.

King, winner of the second Houston tournament in 1971 and making her first appearance here since her celebrated 1973 Battle of the Sexes contest with Bobby Riggs, will meet Lesley Hunt in a first round match.

Wade will play Renee Richards in a first-round match. Richards, who lost to Wade in Washington and to Turnbull in Hollywood, Fla., both firstround matches, is fighting to stay on the circuit. Three firstround losses drops a player from the tour.

Also in danger of leaving the tour is veteran Francoise Durr, who lost to JoAnne Russell in Washington and to Virginia Ruzici in Florida. Durr is matced against Regina Marsikova, the 19-yer-old Czechslovakian who defeated King in Washington and forced Wade to three sets in Florida.

Eastern stars nab 26-10 win

TOKYO (AP) — The Eastern College All-Stars beat the West 26-10 Saturday in the third Japan Bowl football game, but probably the most satisfied player was Harris Matsushima of the West, because the crowd cheered him and he made his mother happy.

"I am very happy that I had the opportunity to play in the Japan Bowl," said the 6-foot-2 Matsushima, a Yonsei (fourth generation Japanese-American), after getting loud cheers from the crowd of 32,500, well below the expected 60,000, probably due to morning rain.

"My mother will be very happy because I got an autograph from Japanese popular singer Hiromi Go."

Matsushima, a defensive tackle from the University of Hawaii, could become the first Nisei to play in United States professional football since Wally Yonamine, also of Hawaii. Yonamine, now a coach for the Yomiuri professional baseball team, played with the San Francisco 49ers.

The first victory for the East in three Japan Bowls was sparked by two touchdown passes from quarterback Ken Smith of Boston College.

Smith hit running back John Skibinski of Purdue with a 5-yard touchdown pass in the first quarter. But the conversion attempt failed, and the West came back to take a 7-6 lead on an 88-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter from Arizona State quarterback Dennis Sproul to Randy Simmrin of Southern California and an extra-point kick by Jim Breech of California.

The East moved to 9-7 halftime lead on a 50-yard field goal by Bobby Moreau of Louisiana State University.

In the third quarter, the East clinched the victory on Smith's 15-yard touchdown to Keith Wright of Kansas State. Then, in the fourth quarter, the East scored on a 42-yard field goal by Moreau and on a 21-yard touchdown pass to Wright from Mississippi quarterback Tim Ellis.

The game was dedicated to Joe Roth, the star quarterback of the University of California, who died of cancer after playing his last game in the second Japan Bowl in 1977.

Notre Dame wins, 79-78

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Dave Batton and Bruce Flowers each scored a pair of baskets to trigger a 13-0 spurt midway in the second half and Notre Dame held on for a 79-78 victory over St. Bonaventure Saturday.

Batton, a 6-foot-9 senior forward, finished with 24 points as the taller Irish dominated the foul-plagued Bonnies inside.

Notre Dame, 8-3, also got 16 points from guard Rich Branning. Bill Laimbeer, their 6-11 center, scored 11 points in the second half after being held to one in the first half.

The Bonnies, 7-5, were led by guard Glenn Hagen with 24 points.

Behind the scoring of 6-6 senior Greg Sanders, the Bonnies tied the game at 58-58 with 13 minutes left. After 6-7 forward Delmar Harrod was called for his fourth fouls minutes after Sanders picked up his fourth, the Irish utilitized their height advantage to open a 71-58 lead with 8:30 remaining.

Creighton trips West Texas five

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Rick Apke connected on a 22-foot jumper and Randy Eccker sank four free throws in the overtime period as Creighton nipped West Texas State 64-60 in a Missouri Valley Conference game Saturday night.

With only 21 seconds left in regulation play, freshman Tony Ellis, who scored 21 points, stole the ball setting up a lastditch victory attempt for West Texas. But a Buffalo shot fell short and the game ended at a 58-58 tie.

John Johnson, a 6-4 guard for Creighton led all scorers with 24 points as he connected on 11 field goals in 14 attempts.

The Creighton Bluejays are now 7-3 overall and 3-1 in conference play while West Texas is 3-10 and winless in four Missouri Valley games.

Super Bowl becomes major social event

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Bernard Saltalamacchia Jr. doesn't get involved in academic arguments over the economic impact of the Super Bowl. To him, the National Football League championship game means an additional $30 per cab driver per shift.

"Sure, easy $30," said Saltalamacchia, a dispatcher for a cab company here. "You can go out and make another $100, or you can quit when you make $10. It all depends on how hard you want to work.

"This week, it's out there, if you want to go get it."

Dallas plays Denver in the nationally televised game today at 5 p.m. CDT in the Superdome in professional sports' biggest single day of the year. It's more than a game, it's a major American social event.

Ray Liuzza, manager of the International Hotel and president of this city's hotel-motel association, estimated that 60,000 visitors figured to spend $15 million during Super Bowl week. He said all 23,000 of the city's hotel and motel rooms were filled, and that he had received requests for 1,200 more.

Better than 1,500 rooms and apartments were listed for weekend rental by private individuals seeking to make a few dollars from the crowd.

The overflow spilled into Baton Rouge, 80 miles north, and to Biloxi, about 80 miles east. Dale Ray, president of the Baton Rouge tourism bureau, estimated that his city would realize $1.5 million from Super Bowl tourists.

Barbara Taylor of the Royal Orleans Hotel here said she was offered a $500 fee to find some rooms for the game. "It killed me that I couldn't find any," she said.

Tickets were equally scarce. To get around laws against selling the tickets for more than face value, many would-be sellers lumped them in a package with a worthless item — a 1960 automobile with two Super Bowl tickets for $700, for instance.

A waitress, who asked that her name not be used, said she averaged an increase of over $40 a night in tips during the 1975 Super Bowl here. She said she expected this year's earnings to be bigger.

Liuzza said the International Hotel ordered 21,000 additional plastic glasses for the weekend.

The plastic container is almost a symbol of night life in this city. Revelers roam the streets of the French Quarter, drinks in hand, moving from place to place in elbow-to-elbow crowds, sipping and gawking through open doors at strippers on stage or just listening to the music that spills onto the street.

University of New Orleans economist James Bobo argued that it is just because so much of the tourist dollar is spent on liquor that the Super Bowl can have little lasting impact on the New Orleans economy. He expects it to have no influence on an unemployment rate that averaged 7.8 percent last year.

"Liquor supplies have to be replenished, and that means the dollars go right back out of town," he said.

"Hotel, motels and bars may have to hire some temporary part-time help, but the unemployment rate will be the same the day after the Super Bowl as it was the day before."

But New Orleans is know as the City That Care Forgot, and such gloomy truths go unnoticed in the midst of a party watched by a television audience of 80 million.

The Fair Grounds enjoyed its biggest week in 105 years of horse racing.

As a gesture to King Tutankhamen, the Olympia Jazz band is scheduled to afford him a traditional Jazz funeral, usually reserved for old-time musicians.

"It don't bother us playing a funeral for somebody who's been dead 3,000 years. We play that old, traditional stuff anyway," said one of the Olympia musicians.

76ers capture win over New Jersey

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — Lloyd Free came off the bench to score 28 points and Steve Mix and Julius Erving added 27 and 23, respectively, leading the Philadelphia 76ers to a 136-120 National Basketball Association victory over the New Jersey Nets Saturday night.

The Sixers, winning for the eighth straight time, never trailed after the midway point in the second quarter and built a 20-point lead in the final period.

Philadelphia got good production from its centers as Darryl Dawkins scored 17 points and Caldwell Jones had 11 points and a game-high 15 rebounds.

Rookie forward Bernard King of New Jersey led all scorers with 30 points and guard Kevin Porter had 28 points and 12 assists.

Philadelphia was without forward George McGinnis.

Moore rolls 606

By RANDY ISENBERG

Janice Moore rolled the top series of the week for the women with a fine 606 on games of 207-191-208. Ray Bishop's 610 series and Nancy Martin's 244 game were other highlights among bowlers during the past week.

Ida Robinson, currently the president of the Midland Women's Bowling Association, was also the president of the association in 1954-55 when Midland bowlers bowled on 12 lanes and had a total membership of 78 women.

Each woman bowler pays an annual dues of $3 per year to belong to the Women's International Bowling Association. Of this, $1.50 is paid to the local association of which seventy cents is paid to the secretary, seven and one-half cents each to the president and treasurer, and sixty-five cents to the general fund.

Maximum salaries to MWBA officers are: secretary, $850; president, $100; and treasurer, $100. Current MWBA officers are Ida Robinson, president and Noretta Livergood, secretary.

Noreta has asked that each secretary submit to her the averages of all women bowlers who have bowled at least 21 games as of the 31st of December. Individual bowlers must use their highest league average ot 21 games or more as of December 31, when competing in the women's City Association tournament to be held the first two weekends of March at Super Bowl.

Tatupu sparks Pac 8 stars to 27-20 triumph

SEATTLE (AP) — Southern Cal's big Mosi Tatupu ran for two touchdowns and caught a pass for another score and Washington State's Dan Doornink set up two TDs with his running as the Pacific-8 All-Stars defeated the Big Ten All-Stars 27-20 in the inaugural Challenge Bowl football game Saturday.

The 6-foot, 220-pound Tatupu caught a 3-yard touchdown pass from Washington quarterback Warren Moon in the first period and scored 1-yard runs in the second and third periods.

The 6-foot-3, 209-pound Doornink, who was voted the game's most valuable player, carried 14 times for 142 yards.

Doornink's 67-yard run to the Big Ten 7-yard-line on the Pac 8's first possession set up Moon's scoring pass two plays later. His 11-yard burst to the outside to the Big Ten 1 in the third period set up Tatupu's second scoring run.

The other score for the Pac-8, coached by Jack Patera of the Seattle Seahawks, came on Stanford quarterback Guy Benjamin's 48-yard pass to fleetfooted teammate James Lofton that staked the West Coast team to a 20-0 lead midway in the second quarter.

The Big Ten, a conference not recognized for its passing, opened up its offense in the second half as quarterbacks Kurt Steger of Illinois and Tom McLaughin of Iowa began filling the Kingdome with footballs.

Wisconsin's Mike Morgan finally got the midwesterners on the scoreboard late in the second quarter on his one-yard plunge that capped a 78-yard, five-play march. McLaughlin completed three of five passes for 38 yards in the drive.

James Earley of Michigan State crashed in from 1 yard out with 8:38 left in the third period that cut the Pac-8's lead to 20-14.

Holman wins bowling title

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — A strike by Marshall Holman in the 10th frame of the championship game gave him a 221-218 victory over Jimmy Certain in a $90,000 Professional Bowlers Association tournament Saturday.

Certain, of Huntsville, Ala., fired strikes in the ninth frame and three times in the 10th to put pressure on Holman, a sixtime PBA champion from Medford, Ore.

But Holman, who was the runnerup in the tournament last year, this year threw the strike he needed to win the $12,000 top prize.

Holman was the No. 1 qualifier for the final and had to wait for the four challegers to eliminate themselves down to one. In the opening match, Craig Mueller of Union, N.J. defeated Dick Ritger of River Falls, Wis., 213-204, but Certain downed Mueller 231-214 in the second match.

Kansas batters OU in basketball tilt

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Kansas, bolstered by John Douglas' 11-point spurt in the first half, built an insurmountable lead Saturday night and sailed by Oklahoma, 91-61, knocking the Sooners out of a tie for the Big Eight Conference leadership.

The 10th-ranked Jayhawks, now 3-0 in the league and 13-2 overall, overcame an early game Oklahoma challenge when freshman Darnell Valentine exploded for 10 points in the opening minutes.

That, combined with Douglas' first-half barrage on the bucket, led the Jayhawks to a 40-23 halftime advantage.

Donnie Von Moore added 11 points in the first 10 minutes of the second half as the Jayhawks lengthened their lead. Five Kansas players managed more than 13 points, led by Valentine's 18.

Bing Crosby tourney set to open Thursday

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Bing Crosby's golf tournament lives on with the late entertainer's 16-year-old son, Nathaniel, as host and many familiar names in the playing field.

"But there's no other guy in the world like Bing Crosby," says Dan Searle, 75, the tournament director who spent many hours golfing, hunting and fishing with Crosby during the 50 years he knew him.

Crosby died last fall on a golf course in Spain and his family quickly made it clear that it wanted the Crosby National Pro-Am, to be played for the 37th time starting Thursday, to continue. The charity event benefits, among others, college students who need financial help.

As long as charities, which have received more than $3 million over the years, continue to benefit, the event will go on, Nathaniel Crosby said recently.

"Those were my father's wishes," said the teen-ager, a one-handicap golfer who wants to become a pro. "I know he didn't do it for 37 years to see it turn into a commercial enterprise."

Jack Nicklaus, golf's biggest star, again will be starting his season at the Crosby. His respect for the late sponsor is one reason the tournament is the only regular stop on the PGA tour that Nicklaus never has missed.

Nicklaus loves two of the Crosby's courses — Pebble Beach and Cypress Point — and like most of the golfers is willing to put up with the area's unpredictable winter weather, or "Crosby weather," as the worst of it has become known around here.

"We've been rained out, snowed out and blown out," Nicklaus said last year when the golfers had the unusual experience of playing on droughthardened fairways.

Tom Watson won the tourney last year when Spyglass Hill, definitely not among Nicklaus' favorite courses, was not used because of damaged greens. Normal rainfall this winter has helped restore it to excellent shape and Spyglass again will be tormenting the players.

Gerald Ford, one day after leaving office as President, was the star amateur attraction last year and is back to play again with Arnold Palmer. Show business celebrities who have become regular participants include Clint Eastwood, Glen Campbell and George C. Scott.

Figures from other sports who are playing this year include first-time Crosby participants Bill Kilmer and Willie Mays.

Nathaniel Crosby has the final say on decisions involving the highly sought invitations to amateurs and has learned, "You can make a lot of friends and a lot of enemies."

Houston downs TCU by 79-63

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Charles Thompson pumped in 22 points and Cecile Rose added 21 Saturday night to spark the hot-shooting Houston Cougars to a 79-63 Southwest Conference basketball victory over Texas Christian.

The Cougars, hitting 58 percent of their shots, grabbed a 42-35 halftime lead over the stubborn Frogs, who dropped to 0-4 in the SWC and 2-11 for the season.

The Frogs, who could manage only 39 percent of their shots from the field for the game, led briefly 19-17 early in the game. However, they shot an icy 33 percent in the second half.

The victory, Houston's second straight in the SWC, evened the Cougars' SWC mark at 2-2. They are 12-4 for the season.

Freshman guard Jim Hund hit 17 points to pace TCU, while Steve Scales added 14.

By ED TODD

Youngsters who are learning the fundamentals of livestock management by working with stock will be bringing their calves, swine and lambs into the Midland County Exhibit Building this morning for the opening of the 29th annual Midland County Livestock Show.

An estimated 250 4-H Club members and vocational agriculture students in the Future Farmers of America chapters here will be participating in the show.

"I'll tell you what: These kids are doing a helluva job," voc-ag youth booster Tommy Patterson said on the eve of the show's opening.

On Saturday afternoon, some of were seeing after their show animals before hauling them over to the exhibit building.

Meanwhile, some of the working directors of the sponsoring Midland County Livestock Association were setting up the pens, show arena, and bleachers in the exhibit building.

"This is a pretty good county show for the kids," said Patterson, who had dropped by to take a look and lend a hand with the setting-up work.

By mid-afternoon Saturday, show officials and "regular workers" had the exhibit building in pretty good shape for the show.

The dirt was hauled in and dumped on the concrete floor Thursday, and sawdust was brought in on the following night, noted livestock show director Albert Stewart.

"Stay around and you'll get to help," said James Crook, as he was linking pen partitions with baling wire.

After awhile, some of the hands, such as Lea, Roy Graham, Harry "Cobb" Coleman, Rusty Jones and Stewart, set aside their "regular" work and starting tinkering with the mobile weighing scales. Something was amiss.

Somehow, by accident or know-how or both, they got the scales working right.

The scales were working. He was weighed like a four-hoofed kid, or so he must have thought.

"How much did I weigh?" he asked the master of the show.

Lea told him 50 pounds: "25 pounds of boy and 25 pounds of bull."

The youngster is the son of Terry Bryant, who was there working, too. He's superintendent of swine show.

Lea, who was barrelling into work, took a brief break to talk about the show.

He said the show should be a good one. "Sure, expect that every year," Lea said.

"It'll be a good show," he said. "Countywide, it'll be as good as any in the country."

The show's first event will be the judging of mares and geldings at halter at 2 p.m. today. The horse show performance class event is to begin an hour later. Kenneth Lynch is superintendent of the horse show.

Monday's fare will include the judging of livestock: Lambs will be judged beginning at 8 a.m., swine at 1 p.m., heifers at 2:30 p.m. and steers at 3 p.m.

Probers seeking maker of combustible costume

DALLAS (AP) — Federal investigators are trying to find out who made the highly flammable fabric in a snowman costume that caught fire and injured a Dallas Cowboys fan during the National Football Conference championship game at Texas Stadium Jan. 1.

Jeanne Devers, director of the Dallas regional office of the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, said costume dealers around the country have been alerted to check their stock for similar fuzzy cotton-and-rayon fabric.

"We have no information that the fabric is commercially available at the present time. It's important to find out if any of it still exists in the market place and is still available to consumers," Ms. Devers said.

"It's rather' doubtful, because we're speaking of something 10 or 12 years old," she added.

Daniel Yoder, a 24-year-old Dallas advertising executive, suffered second-degree burns on his neck and legs while wearing the costume. He brushed against a vendor holding a container of canned heat and the costume burst into flames. A national television audience watched in horror as spectators helped put out the flames. He was hospitalized until Jan. 7.

Ms. Devers said tests at government laboratories in Washington showed the fabric was "in total violation of the Flammable Fabrics Act."

She said two other costumes made of similar fabric were located at Texas Costume Co., where Yoder rented the snowman suit. Ms. Devers said the costume company would not be liable as far as the government is concerned, but should have been able to rely on the fabric manufacturer to meet federal standards for wearing apparel.

She said the suits held no clue to the fabric content or maker. But she said efforts are under way to trace the manufacturer through company records.

The manufacturer, if located, could be charged with a misdemeanor violation, with the maximum penalty on conviction a $5,000 fine and a year in jail.

Congress expected to give taxpayer break

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 95th Congress, facing a familiar agenda as it opens its second session this Thursday, is almost certain to give Americans a tax break in this election year.

However, the lawmakers must still cope with the Carter administration's push for enactment of a comprehensive energy program. House and Senate energy conferees failed late last year to agree on a compromise that could have assured passage of the legislation by Christmas.

And the Senate faces what could be a protracted debate over ratification of the proposed Panama Canal treaty, which would relinquish U.S. control over the international waterway to Panama by the year 2000.

As in 1977, there will be efforts to restructure the welfare system, revise the federal criminal code, create a consumer protection agency and increase government price supports for farmers.

The success of some of these proposals may depend on how much time Congress spends debating taxes, energy and the treaty before adjourning for the election campaign.

Hunt's 'wife' offered money

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A woman claiming bigamy by the late oil billionaire, H. L. Hunt was offered $5 million to drop her lawsuit, the Shreveport Times quoted a Hunt family member as saying.

The Times reported Saturday that the family member, who asked not to be identified, said the offer was made to Frania Tye Lee, 73, of Atlanta, who is suing for a share of the Hunt fortune.

Attorneys defending the Hunt estate against Mrs. Lee's suit denied that there had been any offer for an out-of-court settlement.

"You better shoot that one down, because that's false," said Sidney Cook, a Shreveport lawyer helping in the Hunt defense, when asked about rumors of a settlement offer.

Mrs. Lee and her attorneys were unavailable for comment.

Mrs. Lee's lawsuit claims she was married to Hunt from 1925 to 1934, unaware that he had another wife and family. Mrs. Lee is seeking a court order that she was Hunt's commonly accepted wife, therefore eligible for a share of his estate.

The trial on Mrs. Lee's suit ended its fifth day Friday. Testimony is due to resume Monday morning in U.S. District Court.

The Hunt family member quoted as reporting the offer for an out-of-court settlement said the offer was good only until 5 p.m. Friday. "Then we're going to clobber her," the family member added.

The report of the settlement offer came after a meeting of Mrs. Lee, her attorneys, her son, and representatives of the Hunt estate. The principals would not reveal what was discussed at the meeting, which occurred Friday at the federal courthouse during a noon recess in the trial.

Adair's team contains well

LOVING, N.M. (AP) — A gas well near here that blew out and caught fire almost two weeks ago was contained Saturday by Red Adair and his team of firefighters from Houston, Texas.

"It is contained," said Eddy County Sheriff's Deputy Ervin Galloway. "The valves and the blowout preventer are in place."

The well blew out Jan. 3, and the gas spewing from it caught fire the next day.

Two of Adair's men blew the fire out with dynamite and deliberately reignited it two times as they tried to remove the pipe still sticking from the well.

They said all the pipe had to be removed above ground level before the well could be capped. They had to reignite the gas from the well each time to burn off the excess accumulating in the area.

Adair arrived last Tuesday to help in the effort to cap the well. The fire was blown out for the third time that day, and this time it stayed out.

The well spewed gas into the air the rest of the week as Adair and his crew worked to cap it, but were unsuccessful until Saturday, when they finally got the apparatus in place.

Some liberal groups upset by NEC report

By CLYDE LA MOTTE
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Some liberal groups have been surprised and somewhat upset by a report recently made by the National Energy Conference of the National Association of Colored People.

The gist of the report is that the Carter administration's energy plan is more likely to hurt blacks than to help them.

This is in direct contrast to the usual liberal position that domestic energy prices must be controlled to protect consumers, especially the blacks because they tend to be at the bottom of the economic ladder.

The NAACP energy group doesn't think blacks are being helped by a policy of price controls on new supplies of oil and gas.

"Those aspects of the plan which would perpetuate price controls on newly discovered oil and natural gas and extend those controls to new areas (intrastate sales) appear to be incompatible with the need for new supply development," the report states.

The thrust of the report is that blacks will fare better under an expanding economy because that will provide more and better jobs. "Energy supply development throughout our nation's history has been critically important to economic growth," the report points out.

"We find it very disturbing to contemplate a future in which energy supply would become a constraint upon our ability to solve these critically important social and economic problems which confront black citizens."

As this black group sees it, the Carter energy plan puts most of its emphasis on conservation and on a reduction in the growth of total energy demand and consumption. That is, the administration's approach would tend to slow or shrink the economy.

"This emphasis cannot satisfy the fundamental requirements of a society of expanding opportunities," the NAACP report states.

We think there must be a more vigorous approach to supply expansion and to the development of new supply technologies so that energy itself will not become a long-term constraint, but instead can continue to expedite economic growth and development in the future."

The authors of the report emphasize that they, too, favor efforts to eliminate energy waste and to improve efficiency in energy utilization. But, they say, "we cannot accept the notion that our people are best served

OIL & GAS

by a policy based upon the inevitability of energy shortage and the need for government to allocate an ever-diminishing supply among competing interests."

The black group also contends that overriding concern for protection of the environment may cause government policymakers to lose sight of more compelling economic and social objectives "that are more important to black Americans."

The report concludes that the basic approach of the administration's energy plan as it relates to energy supply "reflects the absence of a black perspective in its development." This is a polite way of saying that the Carter administration did not confer with blacks concerning the energy plan even though blacks will be affected as much or more as anyone else.

The report urges further development of nuclear power, another point of departure from the usual "liberal" stance. The NAACP group reasons that if we do not move ahead now with nuclear, "the next generation is likely to be sitting around in the dark blaming the utilities for not doing something this generation's officials would not let them do."

The NAACP is well aware of the importance of the timing of the report and its possible impact.

Congress will be getting back to work this week and one of its first orders of business will be the unfinished energy legislation.

The NAACP report is being circulated in Congress and among others who may have an input into the final determination in energy course of action.

Farm bureau federation head says incentives can cure ills

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — The head of the American Farm Bureau Federation says there is nothing wrong with the petroleum industry that the incentives of the market price system cannot readily cure.

"The public understands this better than Congress," says Allan Grant, Visalia, Calif.

In his annual report to the federation whose 2.8 million farm family members produce about 80 percent of the nation's commercial crops, Grant outlined a declaration of objectives that included continued support for a "rational energy policy."

He said such an energy policy should include deregulation of the petroleum industry and vigorous opposition to horizontal or vertical divestiture.

Grant said there is need for farmer concern over a trade deficit that now approximates $30 billion a year and raises the cost of all consumer goods, including food.

"Our continuing and growing imports of oil, now around 50 percent of all the oil we use, has contributed to this deficit," he said. "We spent around $35 to $40 billion on imported oil this past year and current estimates are that we will spend $45 to $50 billion on oil imports in the year ahead."

Grant said farm and ranch people find it incredible that no steps of importance have been taken by either the Congress or the Carter administration to increase domestic oil and gas production and supplies.

"We cannot tax or conserve our way out of the energy dilemma," he said.

Grant said energy consumption and the production of goods and services go hand in hand.

"Deregulation of the petroleum industry is the only sensible answer to our national energy needs," he said.

"I am convinced the general public is more concerned about energy, deficit federal spending, labor monopoly, regulatory excesses and the need for a strong business economy than is Congress."

Last year the federation produced three motion pictures on bird and coyote control and on "Fuel for the Food Machine."

Richard W. Owens, secretary and chief administrator of the federation, said the motion pictures were produced "because facts of extreme importance to farmers were either being distorted or ignored by other filmmakers."

"We made these films because others could not, or would not," he said.

"Often film writers are consumerist and environmentalist oriented and out of touch with farming reality. Most search for emotionalism and dramatic action rather than fact."

Owens said the energy film has been in circulation since July and to date has been shown to date by 150 television stations.

James L. Ketelsen, president of Tenneco Inc. and former head of a Tenneco subsidiary, J. I. Case Co., which has produced agricultural equipment more than a century, was among the speakers at the federation's 59th meeting.

Ketelsen told the farmers and ranchers the governmental response to the energy problem has been inadequate because of a lack of understanding or confidence in the market system and the importance of the buyer-seller relationship.

"All of us, whether in energy or agriculture, are both producers and consumers," he said.

Ketelsen said only one in five American workers is employed in agriculture but that American farms produce enough food and fiber for the United States and much of the world.

"You need energy to get the job, and you've stated your willingness to pay a fair price to be sure of getting all the energy you need," he said.

At the same time, Ketelsen added, it must be realized that bountiful supermarkets cannot exist without fair prices for farm products.

"We need a balance, with fair prices and profitability for producers on the one hand, and plenty of quality products at fair prices for consumers on the other hand," Ketelsen said.

"The market, where permitted to operate, is the best system known to us for serving the interests of producers and consumers alike."

Erskine Motors Leasing is now Erskine Blair

Erskine Motors Leasing recently was purchased by Truman Blair, a long-time associate and staff member at Erskine. Mr. Blair joined the staff there in 1954, and at this time he wishes to express his appreciation to Stanley M. Erskine for all the good will and experience he has enjoyed through their association over the years.

Erskine Blair Leasing is the company's new name, however, the old name will continue on all the previous leasing contracts until each one expires. The address of 223 E. Illinois (mailing address: P.O. Box 1722) and the phone number 683-3395 remain the same as before. The staff remains the same as well. Stanley M. Erskine and S. E. Mickey will continue to offer their fine services along with Mr. Blair as they have done in the past.

Mr. Blair also expressed his intention to continue operating with the same fair business ethics and principles which Erskine Motors has always adhered to. He is grateful to all the lease customers they have had over the years and asks for their continued business.

If you haven't already done business with the people at Erskine Blair, there are many advantages to leasing which you should consider. When you lease, your capital can be used for other purposes. It reserves your borrowing capacity, and it offers tax advantages. When leasing is used in a business, every check you write to pay for a lease item is a tax expense.

Erskine Blair Leasing handles vehicle leasing plus commercial and industrial leasing. More and more individuals as well as businesses are finding that leasing is the most convenient way to obtain the vehicles and equipment they need for personal or business use. Come in soon and talk with the experienced men at Erskine Blair Leasing. They will be pleased to help you.

Pork supply due to rise slightly

By BRIAN B. KING

WASHINGTON (AP) — The amount of pork entering the consumer market this year should be 10 percent greater than in 1977, an Agriculture Department analysis says.

That's less than was thought in the fall, but still enough to keep total red-meat production running 1 to 2 percent above last year, said a paper from V. Eldon Ball of USDA's Economic Research Service.

The prospects also are for a slower dip in the slaughter prices hog growers receive than first thought. Ball forecast averages for the winter near $40 per 100 pounds "before slipping to the middle-$30 range this spring," with the possibility of a drop below $30 between seasons.

Economist Glenn Grimes of the University of Missouri has predicted averages between $38 and $41 in the January-March quarter and between $36 and $39 in the spring.

They and others foresee lower prices in the spring and fall. As a recent Farmers Union newsletter put it, better prices than earlier expected "might keep farrowings climbing and lead to rather sick markets next fall and winter."

For consumers, whose demands have a major but not total effect on slaughter prices, Ball's analysis had mixed news: good supplies, but still a climb in overall meat prices in 1978 because of "the effects of inflation on processing and marketing costs" beyond the farm gates.

Retail pork prices may average 5 percent higher than a year ago though June, he said, although end-of-year declines should bring the year-to-year figures to a decline of 2 to 3 percent.

Quake recovery pace slow

ROME (AP) — Fifty thousand people in Sicily's Valley of Belice still live in "temporary" shelters 10 years after a devastating earthquake shattered their homes.

At the opposite end of Italy, in the northeastern area of Friuli, an equal number of persons are spending their second winter in makeshift housing after the May 1976 quake that killed more than 1,000 persons.

The first shocks 10 years ago in Sicily were felt on the evening of Jan. 14, and they increased in force throughout a night of terror. By dawn, 15,000 homes were leveled in 15 villages in the western part of the island.

The death toll was 351, even though the early tremors drove many from their homes before the big quake struck at 3 a.m.

The government has pumped more than $350 million into the region, but only a few new homes have been built. Critics blame bureaucratic bungling, corruption and neglect.

"The sports center of Santa Ninfa cost more than 1.5 billion lire (nearly $2 million) but the children are still studying in barracks," said the Rev. Rosminiano Antonio Riboldi.

He said the barracks where families are housed often have no water or electricity, the roofs leak, they have rats, and as many as 10 to 12 adults and children live in one room.

The barracks are cold in the winter and like ovens in the summer, the priest continued. The poor living conditions create hazardous health conditions, especially for the very young and the old, he said, and many have died because they were too weak to withstand the strain.

Engineer will speak at loggers meeting

Mickey Head, staff engineer with Go Wireline Services in Fort Worth, will be the guest speaker at the noon meeting Thursday of the Permian Basin Well Logging Society.

The event will be held at Ranchland Hill Country Club in Midland.

The meeting will begin at 6:30 p. m. with a social hour. The program will follow.

Head will present an illustrated summary of the new Direct Digital Logging System currently being introduced to the Permian Basin by Go Wireline Services.

His presentation will include a description of the system, its application in open-hole well logging and a summary of the wellsite computed logs currently available.

Introduced to the field in 1975, the DDL system is currently in use in the U.S., Canada and Venezuela.

In addition to expanded use in the U.S., it is anticipated that DDL units will be sent to Brazil, India and possibly to Europe this year.

The speaker's extensive field experience and his work as a computer log analyst provide him with a very practical approach to this new open-hole logging technique.

Halliburton research center work starts

DUNCAN, Okla. — Halliburton Services Division has announced the beginning of construction of a new research center in Duncan that will provide more than double the space available in its present research facility.

Cost of the new facility is expected to be $30 million.

E. L. Paramore, president of both Halliburton Services Division and the parent Halliburton Co., said "this important commitment is graphic evidence of our determination to maintain our position of leadership in oil field services and products research. It will extend substantially our capability to develop and provide the most advanced technological services for our customers around the world."

The complex will be built between the Halliburton Manufacturing Center and the Halliburton Energy Institute. General contractor is Brown & Root, Inc., Houston, another operating unit of Halliburton Co. Architects and engineers are Benham Blair & Affiliates, Oklahoma City.

The research center program includes a number of unique concepts. Rather than a single building, most of the facility will consist of a series of one-story modular structures connected by protected walkways.

Provisions will be made for solar heating systems if they prove practical on a large scale. Other energy-conserving considerations are included in the design.

The separate buildings will be almost 10,000 square feet in size and their modular design will afford flexibility for the differing research and development functions conducted.

"We are striving to create a pleasant but efficient working environment for our research community," Don Hathorn, Halliburton Services' vice president-Research, said. "This environment will include a nearby lake and surrounding landscaping integrated into the overall theme."

Hathorn said the Chemical Research and Development Department at the present research center will be the first group to move into the new quarters.

Time to complete the CRD portion at the new center is estimated at 12 to 14 months but Halliburton officials said they anticipate that some of the additional construction would begin before the first phase work is ended.

Following the CRD program, construction is expected to start on new quarters for a two-level research administration building, research library, auditorium, lunchroom, the Electrical Research and Development Department and other functions.

Other groups at the present research center that will move into the new facility later are Mechanical Research and Development and Tools Research and Engineering.

Paramore noted that construction of the new research center is part of a development program which ultimately will relocate all of Halliburton Services' operations in Duncan onto a 650-acre site owned by the company. Currently, the Manufacturing Center and the Energy Institute utilize only 250 of the 650 acres.

Landmen will meet

The January meeting of the Permian Basin Landmen's Association will be held Tuesday in the Midland Country Club.

The meeting will get under way with a social hour at 6:30 p.m. The buffet dinner will be served at 7:15 p.m. and the program will start at 8 p.m.

Joe E. Meroney, attorney with Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder in Midland will talk on "Recent Developments in Law Regarding Coal and Lignite in Texas."

Ray A. Diemer

Ray Diemer in new post

Ray A. Diemer has been promoted to manager of the Midland office of Peppard-Souders & Associates (PS&A) and Geomap Co.

Diemer has more than 30 years experience as a geologist. Prior to joining PS&A more than a year ago, he was an independent consulting geologist.

He earned B.S. and M.A. degrees in Geology from the University of Wyoming. He is a member of the West Texas Geological Society, the American Association of Petroleum Geologists and the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists.

Search steps up

STAMFORD, Conn. — The stepped-up search for new energy supplies by America's energy companies has intensified their search for college graduates.

A Continental Oil Col personnel manager said that the number of college graduates hired by his firm has more than doubled in the last five years.

"Our accelerated hiring of college graduates is a direct result of the massive dollar investments we are making to find and produce new energy reserves, primarily in the United States," said Robert Dorcheus, manager of organization, compensation and management development of Conoco.

Dorcheus reported that Conoco in 1977 hired 408 college graduates, compared to 200 in 1973. In the five-year period, Conoco hired 1,519 college graduates, he said.

Forecasting a long-term need for college graduates throughout the energy industry, Dorcheus said engineers "of almost every stripe" are being recruited.

In addition to the engineering fields, other academic disciplines providing new ranks of Conoco employees include physics, geophysics, geology, chemistry, computer science, oceanography, business administration, economics, and accounting, Dorches said.

Mobil Oil scientists unveil new process

By J.P. SMITH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Mobil Oil Co. scientists unveiled a new chemical process Thursday which they say could make the conversion of coal to motor gasoline commercially feasibly by the mid-1980s.

Claimed as a "scientific breakthrough" by Mobil, the new process utilizes a Mobil-developed catalyst that readily converts methanol — which can be produced by gasifying coal — into high-octane gasoline. Under current conditions, however, gasoline produced by this process would cost more than $1 per gallon, Mobile says.

"We'll be able to provide people with gasoline made from coal in the years ahead, long after crude oil becomes to scarce or too expensive," says Dr. John Wise, a Mobil vice president who directs the company's research and development effort.

Government and industry scientists have been working for decades to develop technology that converts coal to oil process on a commercial scale.

President Carter and Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger have assigned coal gasification a high priority in the Department of Energy's more than $3 billion a year energy R and D program. The United States now imports nearly half the oil it consumes, but has enormous domestic coal reserves. Perfecting coal gasification technology, similar to processes used by the Germans during World War II, would provide the United States with an alternative to costly oil imports.

DOE officials said that the Mobil process could be used to convert methanol, or wood alcohol, which can be produced from natural gas or coal gasification processes, into gasoline.

"It's a breakthrough, but not from an economic standpoint," says DOE's Harvey Weisenfield, who heads the department's division of coal conversion. He said that while the economic feasibility of Mobile's process still has to be demonstrated, "We do think it was a worthwhile effort."

The project, which Mobile spokesman Ken Peterson said the company spent "many millions on," was funded in part with a $675,000 research grant from the Energy Research and Development Administration, ERDA was folded into the DOE when it was created last year.

Peterson said that Mobile has patented the process and that the company will make it available commercially to its competitors. The company, in the meantime, has plans underway to construct a larger demonstration plant utilizing the new catalyst.

Often, private companies performing government-funded energy R and D are barred from securing patents on their discoveries, but ERDA's grant was given under conditions allowing Mobile to secure a patent on the process.

Wise said, "This is the only process that can convert methanol to gasoline, and we think it will be better and cheaper than any other coal liquefaction process we've heard of."

Methanol can be used as a fuel without further refining; however it corrodes engines and, depending on its use, can be highly toxic.

Peterson said that Mobil's researchers made the unexpected discovery while trying to develop new catalysts to convert crude oil into gasoline.

Monsanto closes plant

ST. LOUIS — Monsanto Co. has shut down for an indefinite period one of two acrylonitrile manufacturing units at its Chocolate Bayou petrochemical complex near Alvin, Tex.

The employees involved have been reassigned and the plant has been placed on standby status, ready for start-up when demand warrants.

The company said the shutdown of the 200-million-pound-per-year unit is the result of softness in worldwide demand, primarily in the synthetic fiber market where acrylonitrile is used to produce acrylic fibers.

In addition to the Chocolate Bayou plant that continues to operate, Monsanto also produces the petrochemical at Texas City, Tex., and Teesside, United Kingdom.

Institute scheduled

DALLAS — The International Oil and Gas Educational Center, a division of the Southwestern Legal Foundation, announces its 18th Annual Institute on Petroleum Exploration and Economics will be held at the Hilton Inn in Dallas March 8-9.

Robert E. King, Mamaroneck, N. Y., consultant, is chairman of the institute. He serves the foundation's Oil and Gas Center as chairman of the Exploration Committee.

Offshore prospects, seismic exploration and production methods, worldwide petroleum prospects and deep gas exploration are among the topics to be discussed.

Rent control fears spur condominium conversions

By DICK TURPIN
The Los Angeles Times

The appearance of rent control, talk about it or proposals to adopt such legislation have usually stymied or stalled planned new construction of apartments throughout the nation.

Builder-developers fear to tread where there is a possibility of rent control or, of course, where it already exists.

The paralleling irony is that existing apartments, if they are nearly full and are in a "desirable" area, are then converted to condominiums in countless examples throughout major cities. This obviously tightens the apartment occupancy rates and reduces the availability of rental units.

The current high rate of conversions—heaviest in Chicago, Houston, strong in Los Angeles, San Diego, Washington, D.C. — reflect local supply and demand factors in the revived national condominium market, coming back from the doldrums of 1974.

"U.S. Housing Markets," a survey of major housing markets by two affiliates of Citicorp, reports that the sum of condominiums started or converted from rental units should exceed 300,000 and may equal the 1973 record of 350,000.

The report noted that the 1977 production of new condos (starts and conversions begun) was twice as much as the 1976 output and five times the 1975 rate. Absorption of newly completed condos nearly doubled over the rate of two years ago.

There were about 200,000 condos produced last year of which 100,000 were multifamily units, about 50,000 single-family units and at least 50,000 conversions, according to Citicorp Real Estate Inc.

Grape Day events set this week for growers, others interested

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent

Small grains are making very little growth due to the lack of moisture and cold temperatures in the area. The drought conditions on the Plains and West Texas have left patures dry and dusty. Range conditions continue to deteriorate due to lack of moisture. Permanent pastures are short and dry while small range pastures are providing little or no grazing. Supplemental feeding of livestock is active in most areas.

The grape industry continues to look promising in Texas, and growers and other interested individuals will be learning more about the business at an upcoming program Friday and Saturday at the South Park Inn in Lubbock. The event will be the Texas Grape Days.

The first day of the program will feature several tours in the Lubbock area. These will include the reasearch vineyard at the Texas A&M University Research and Extension Center at Lubbock, the enology (wine) project being conducted by the Texas Tech University Chemistry Department and the McPherson Reed Vineyard and Winery at Lubbock.

The program on Saturday will be highlighted by several keynote speakers, including Jim Moore of the University of Arkansas and Phil Wagner of Boordy Vineyards, Riderwood, Md. Moore will discuss the development of French-American grape hybrids for the Southwest, and Wagner will talk about new French-American grape varieties.

Also appearing on the program will be specialists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and researchers with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. The annual Texas Grape Days is being sponsored by the Texas Grape Growers Association.

Is sewage sludge safe for home gardens? The short answer to this often-asked question is, "Not without some risks." Digested sewage sludge—dry or wet—still contains pathogenic bacteria and viruses. For that reason, the Texas Department of Health does not recommend the use of sewage sludge on any food crop which might be eaten raw. This includes ground-harvested orchard crops as well as gardens.

Sludge generally poses no problem on non-food crops. Direct body contact is probably the main risk. EPA researchers believe that sludge can ordinarily be used in gardens provided that is applied and plowed under in the fall ahead of spring planting. Sludge "connoiseurs" know that fewer pathogenic bacteria survive as additional treatment steps are added at the sewage treatment plant.

Ranked from most to least hazardous, types of processed sludges are as follows: (1) Raw (undigested) sludge, (2) anaerobically digested sludge, (3) aerobically digested sludge, (4) conditioned dewatered sludge (chemically treated, filtered, centrifuged, etc.) and (5) thermally dehydrated.

After soil application, pathogenic bacteria are eliminated from the soil rather quickly. During summer conditions, up to 99.9% of fecal coliforms and fecal streptococcus are killed within 40 days after soil incorporation. Insufficient research has been conducted to determine the survival of viruses through the sewage treatment plant or in the soil.

Heavy metals such as copper, zinc, nickel, lead, mercury and cadmium may present problems as well. These metals come mainly from industrial wastes and, to a lesse extent, from water pipes and fixtures. Municipal public water works departments should be able to provide a heavy metals analysis and some assurance of sludge "safety" before releasing the sludge for use on home gardens.

From an economic standpoint, it is doubtful if some gardeners really perform a service for cities in terms of lessening the burdens of respondible terminal disposal of sewage sludge.

Officer receives diploma

Barry V. Hilliard with the Midland Police Department was one of 250 officers receiving diplomas in December during graduation ceremonies for the 111th session of the FBI National Academy, Attorney General Griffin B. Bell said today.

Ceremonies were held at the FBI training facilities at Quantico, Va., and concluded eleven weeks of executive-level training for officers from the fifty states, Puerto Rico, the District of Columbia, the U.S. Virgin Islands and eight foreign countries.

The class was represented by the elected class spokesman, Dennis V. Scott-Herridge, staff inspector, Winnipeg Police Department, Winnipeg, Canada.

The FBI National Academy curriculum is designed to meet the needs of contemporary law enforcement in such areas as police management, ethics, recent court decisions, urban police problems and behavioral sciences, Bell said.

Approximately 1,000 officers are invited to participate in the academy each year.

Nutrition program provides hot meals for oldsters on weekdays

The Midland-Ector County Elderly Nutrition Program (ENP) provides hot meals weekdays for persons age 60 and over, according to program director Pat Wallis.

In Midland, meals are being served at noon at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

The program is part of a nationwide effort to provide the elderly with nutritionally adequate meals and "to break the isolation in which many older persons find themselves," Mrs. Wallis said.

"We want it to be a place where people can meet new friends, have some fun and also find answers to questions they may have about such subjects as legal aid, health, and social services," she said.

Only "a small charge" will be made for each meal. And each participant will determine how much he can afford.

Senior Services of Midland will provide an "escort service" for those who need transportation to the Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church Parish Hall, where the meals are served.

Additional information on the program may be obtained by dialing 682-8511. Number to call for the free escort service is 682-1451.

Jury watches old films

HOUSTON (AP) — The three-woman, three-man probate court jury in the Howard Hughes estate trial has seen hundreds of documents and heard dozens of witnesses in its five weeks of duty.

Now the panel is viewing old movies.

Friday it was "Hell's Angels," a 1930 film. Monday, it will be "The Outlaw," made in 1943.

Attorneys representing the co-administrators of the vast Hughes estate are attempting to prove with the Hughes' movies that the late mystery millionaire never intended to return to his native state of Texas.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Depression can become serious

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: The last month or so my brother has been terribly depressed, and none of us are really sure why. He is in his forties, he has a good job, and three very nice children who are with him just about every weekend—he was divorced about two years ago. I've been trying to cheer him up and so have several of his friends, but we are not having much luck. Nothing seems to work, and he refuses to see a therapist. Is there anything you can advise?—B.

DEAR B.: People like your brother often don't know that there are now safe and effective drugs with which depression can be treated. I don't mean that they should be the first thing a person turns to whenever he has the blues. Sadness, unhappiness, sorrow, depression are all an inevitable part of life. And I think most of us want to deal with them as much as possible on our own—with the help of family, close friends, a minister or a rabbi whenever the going gets too rough.

But depression is frequently quite stubborn. It may interfere with normal activities and not yield to traditional measures—and that is when drugs may be useful. Dr. Nathan S. Kline, Director of the Rockland Research Institute and a pioneer in this field, has summed things up in a recent issue of "Medical Tribuine." He says depression is rather like infection. Most patients recover without treatment, but the process may be long and painful—and some patients simply don't get well unless treated. And with both infection and depression, there are medications that work remarkably well.

Until about 20 years ago, Dr. Kline notes, only a limited number of things could be done to help someone who was depressed. There was psychotherapy and electroshock. But in the 1950s medications were discovered that releived depression through their biochemical action.

The chemical balance of the body seems to be upset by depression, and anti-depressant drugs appear to rectify this disturbance. One group of medications, called monoamine oxidase inhibitors (MAOIs for short), apparently work by increasing the amount of a chemical that carries impulses from one nerve to another. A second group, called tricyclics, has the same effect but through a different mechanism.

There may be 20 million people in the United States who are seriously enough depressed to need treatment, Dr. Kline says. But perhaps as many as 9 out of 10 are receiving no help—and the unfortunate thing is that so many people simply do not know that depression is treatable.

As Dr. Kline puts it, the depressed person feels overwhelmed with hopelessness. His depression, his withdrawal and irritation depress everyone around him. But the new drugs can break this vicious cycle.

Why not suggest to your brother that he talk to his doctor about the possibility of taking some anti-depressant medication? And, for that matter, just talking matters over with his own doctor whenever possible can often do a great deal of good.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Luz Zavala: "I just like working."

On being 69, looking a bit like Santa, and driving a bulldozer

Story and photographs by BRUCE PARTAIN

From all appearances, it seems as if Santa Claus is spending his off-season running a bulldozer at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Although his snowy-white beard has earned him a nickname, Luz Zavala's lean, flat stomach and floppy felt hat give him away.

Zavala pilots a Caterpillar dozer that scoops up six cubic yards of earth in one bite, making a hole that one day will be the basement of Midland Memorial's latest expansion.

But he won't be scooping much longer.

The soft-spoken Medina County native will work until he's earned $3,000, then he'll be through for 1978.

"If I work any longer, they cut off my social security," he explained. Zavala earns $4.25 an hour; with his social security benefits of $370 a month he's clearing just under $7,500 for the year. Working full-time, he'd make over $10,000. Why doesn't he go for the higher figure?

"I figure when the time is all over, I don't make that much more," he said.

"Besides, I've worked construction forty years. Now, I like to go fishing instead."

Zavala and his wife live in Odessa; her $40 a week doctor bills are one reason you'll find him pushing dirt for that extra $3,000 the government allows him.

The other reason you'll find him barreling around the site on his Cat is the way he does the job.

"The other ones don't move the loads like I do," he said. "The bosses want someone who can run the machine right."

Enrollment 1,800 at MC

When official enrollment ended Thursday night, 1,789 students had completed the registration process, an increase of about 120 students for the same period last January.

Registrar Dee Windsor said, "There are still a number of classes which have not reached their peak registration and could easily accommodate more students."

Students who wish to register late may do so, beginning Monday. Late registration will be handled from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 5 p.m. weekdays in the Office of Student Services in the administration building and from 5:30 to 9 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays in room 130 of the science-faculty office building.

The final date to register for five classes or less is Jan. 23, and the last date to enroll in three classes or less is Jan. 30.

"We are urging potential students to register as early as possible, since they are missing the important beginnings of all their classes if they aren't in attendance during the first week or two," Windsor said.

For more information, interested persons may call 684-7851.

Price winner

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Former Republican Congressman Bob Price of Pampa has been officially declared winner of a special state senatorial race in the 31st district of the Panhandle.

Secretary of State Steve Oaks said a canvassing board, which examined recount reports from 25 counties where paper ballots were recounted, showed Price the winner over Democrat Bob Simpson, Amarillo, by 232 votes.

Price will take the place of Max Sherman, Amarillo Democrat, who quit to become president of West Texas State University.

The recount, asked by Simpson, did not include the electronic ballots cast in Potter County, where Simpson had a majority.

Candidates seeing possibilities in probe

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gubernatorial candidates are beginning to see possibilities in the growing scandal over state handling of federal manpower money flowing through Gov. Dolph Briscoe's office.

One of them, Attorney General John Hill, is stuck in a dual role — investigating the alleged misuse of the funds on the one hand and running against Briscoe on the other.

Hill said Friday he has assigned veteran investigators Ray Bravenec and Gerald Carruth to help Austin District Attorney Ronald Earle probe possible wrongdoing in state agencies.

"They obviously will inquire into the operations of the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs (GOMA) and certain aspects of the Texas Department of Community Affairs (TDCA)," Hill said.

He said he wasn't ready yet to make a statement on the subject as a gubernatorial candidate.

"I'll make my own comment insofar as how I feel about the governor's responsibility but I will make it later. Let me just say that whatever happens in his office is obviously of interest and concern to the people," Hill said.

Not so hesitant was former Gov. Preston Smith, who said the manpower funding revelations will hurt Briscoe politically even though nobody has tied him directly to them.

"He's serving as governor. He's responsible for those programs. They pass directly through the governor... He's going to have to give some sort of explanation, I suppose," Smith told a news conference Friday.

Program to test pupils approved

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Board of Education approved Saturday a $707,499 program to test 100,000 Texas pupils on reading, composition, math and citizenship.

The achievement tests, authorized by the 1977 Legislature, will be given in April to groups of 25 or more selected at random from 1,100 elementary, 400 junior high and 400 high schools from every region of the state.

Data will be compiled on both a statewide and regional basis. There will be no district-by-district or campus-by-campus comparisons. Nor will information be collected on individual students or teachers.

The sampling will be at random after first designing it to reflect the ratios of ethnic groups in the state.

The purpose of the program is to determine levels of achievement region by region and for the state in comparsion with national averages. The data will permit the Texas Education Agency "to improve learning throughout the school system," said Education Commissioner M. L. Brockette.

In other action, the board:

—Appointed William H. Miller, principle of the Missouri School for the Blind in St. Louis, as superintendent of the Texas School for the Blind in Austin.

—Postponed action on an appeal by 22 top-level Houston Independent School District administrators from a ruling by Brockette on their contracts with the district. Though not entirely happy with portions of Brockette's decision to limit those contracts to five years, the district was prepared to live with that decision. However, the state board voted to allow the district's lawyer write the board's order and present it at the next meeting.

Vietnam says Cambodia wages attack

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam said Saturday artillery-backed Cambodian troops struck across the border in a seven-day counter-attack against Vietnamese positions stretching from the Central Highlands southward to the Mekong Delta.

But despite reports of Cambodian successes in the offensive, launched Jan. 4, intelligence sources here said the Vietnamese still control key border areas and seem to have no intention of withdrawing.

These sources said Cambodian units, reorganized after being badly battered by recent Vietnamese attacks, had inflicted some sharp losses on Hanoi's forces.

The Voice of Vietnam radio, monitored here, said the Cambodians attacked villages and military installations along much of the disputed 750-mile frontier between the two Communist neighbors. It said seven Vietnamese provinces were attacked.

The "most serious" attack occurred last Wednesday, the last reported day of the offensive, when two regiments penetrated more than two miles into An Giang Province in Vietnam southwestern corner, the broadcast said.

Intelligence sources here said the Cambodians were shelling the town of Ha Tien in that area.

The broadcast confirmed much of the information provided earlier by the Bangkok sources, who said the Cambodians apparently had been resupplied with small-arms ammunition and had made headway in recent days against the Vietnamese in the Parrot's Beak salient, a section of Cambodia that juts into southern Vietnam 40 miles west of Ho Chi Minh City, the former Saigon.

The Cambodian offensive also gained ground at the southern and northern ends of the frontier, the sources said.

Thai radio interceptions indicate that Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, is on full alert and that the city's defenses are being built up. But most analysts believe the Vietnamese, recently reported as close as 35 miles to Phnom Penh, do not intend to move on the city.

New president's installation set

CRANE — Robert "Bob" Anderson will be installed as the 1978 president of the Crane County Chamber of Commerce at the chamber's annual banquet at 7 p.m. Monday in the school cafeteria here.

Larry Sheppard is the out-going president.

The night's featured speaker will be Dallas humorist Gil Stricklin.

"His humor will have you laughing, his motivation will have you striving, (and) and his sincerity will have you believing that you, too, deserve more and can get more out of life," Sheppard said of Stricklin.

Highlight of the evening's fare will be the announcement of Crane's Outstanding Citizen and First Lady.

Directors to be installed Monday night will be Mrs. Griffin, Gene Cowden, Carlos Fox, Bill Harkins and Darrell Warren.

Holdover chamber directors are Tom Witt, James McDonald, Bob Lewis, Charles Blue, Hooper, Mrs. Smartt, Steve Holifield, Benny Phillips and E. L. Tipton.

Retiring directors are L. O. Burr, J. O. Coffey, A. T. Carroll and Bill Burch. Retiring associate directors are Mrs. Griffin, Gary Edmiston and Louis Stone.

Student mobs feared if Canal pact loses

PANAMA CITY (AP) — If the Panama Canal treaty is rejected by the U.S. Senate, seasoned political observers in Panama say it is inevitable that the student mobs will take to the streets.

The statement reflects the tenuous situation that Gen. Omar Torrijos faces in his own country if opponents of the treaty prevail when it comes to its expected Senate showdown early this year.

Torrijos, who ousted a newlyelected president in 1968, is no longer at the zenith of power, according to foreign diplomats and other observers. With Panama facing continuing economic miseries and heavy government debts, the canal treaty has proved a useful political issue for him.

The buildup to last October's national referendum on the canal treaty, says one American expert, brought a "blossoming of free speech" in which Torrijos purposely let the issue be vented by all sides. "It was a field day for the opposition," he recalled, until the last few days before the polling, when things tightened up a bit.

For Torrijos, who took power in a military coup and has the Guardia Nacional — Panama's national police — as his only organized power base, it was an important show of democracy in action. And his political standing got a boost of credibility when voters approved the treaty by a margin of about 2-1.

But by exploiting the treaty as an issue, Torrijos also has been running great risks. Some U.S. analysts here agree with exiled former President Arnulfo Arias, the man Torrijos ousted, who told two U.S. senators recently that if the treaty is rejected, Torrijos is finished.

MC trustee to take action on contracts

The Midland College Board of Trustees is scheduled to take action on contracts for the electric service and the operation of the tax office during its regular meeting at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the the college board room.

Also on the agenda are plans to discuss landscaping for the fine arts building and group insurance. The board is expected to look at reappointing the college foundation board members and approving the Texas Education Agency's contracts, applications and other communications.

Lamesa chamber agenda set

LAMESA — The Lamesa Area Chamber of Commerce will draft its "Plan of Action" in 1978 at the chamber's annual meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Forrest Park Community Center here.

Chamber members also will be discussing goals for the community within the next five to 10 years, according to Charles Bratcher, chamber president.

"Le Grand Tour" will be the theme of the annual invitational Charity Ball sponsored by the Junior League of Midland, Inc. The ball begins at 8 p.m. Jan. 30 in Midland Country Club.

Guests will enter the foyer, designed to portray a "VIP Lounge", the focal point of which will be a large globe of the world. Flags and emblems depicting faraway lands will be used to suggest "Le Grand Tour" is about to begin. The first stop of the tour will be "New York, New York", featured in the ballroom. Stops in the other rooms of the club will take the honored guests to Greece, Venice, Italy, Egypt, Mexico and the Orient.

Mrs. William U. Sumner is president of the league. Other executive committee members are Mrs. Glenn Rogers, vice president; Mrs. Paul Byrom, recording secretary; Mrs. Smith Ray, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Bob P. Young, treasurer.

Members of the board of directors are Mrs. Boley Embrey, Mrs. Frank Powell, Mrs. Tevis Herd, Mrs. Robert Mann, Mrs. Nini, Mrs. Norman D. Fry, Mrs. Ben Wolfe, Mrs. Dean Wolf, Mrs. Ferrell Davis, Mrs. Reid Caskey, Mrs. Kenneth George, Mrs. John Woodside, Mrs. Robert Hillin, Mrs. Parker Humes, Mrs. Beal and Mrs. Hissom.

Sponsors of the ball this year are Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Beal, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Blake, Mr. and Mrs. Rufe Sinclair Bynum, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Fasken, Mr. and Mrs. George Holt Glass, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hinkle, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Frederick Hyer, Mr. and Mrs. William Kleine, Cowden Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Eugene O'Saughnessy, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Pendleton, Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Redfern Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Glenn Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Samples, Jack Wilkinson Jr., Mr. and Mrs. John Corwell Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Libbey Wood and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Arthur Yeager Jr.

All proceeds from the ball and the Next to New Shop are returned to the community through league projects. Continuing projects of the league are Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation Instruction in Public Schools, Children's Dental Clinic, Directory of Community Services, Docent Program at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame, Exhibit and Docent Program at the Museum of the Southwest, Film Service and Audiometric Screening, Musical Therapy, Sara Wooldridge Clinic, Story Hour at the Midland County Public Library, Partners in Reading, Pickwick Players, Puppetry and the Student Art Festival.

The league has been contributing to Midland Memorial Hospital in many capacities since 1950 and for a number of years members have worked as volunteers with the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, Inc. The league participated with the Children's Service League in organization of the Children's Diagnostic Clinic. Also the financing of the children's isolation ward and Children's Dental Clinic and the creation of the Sara Wooldridge Maintenance Therapy Clinic for the hospital. Further contributions to the hospital have been donations of equipment through the league's Memorial Fund, which are designated for hospital purchases.

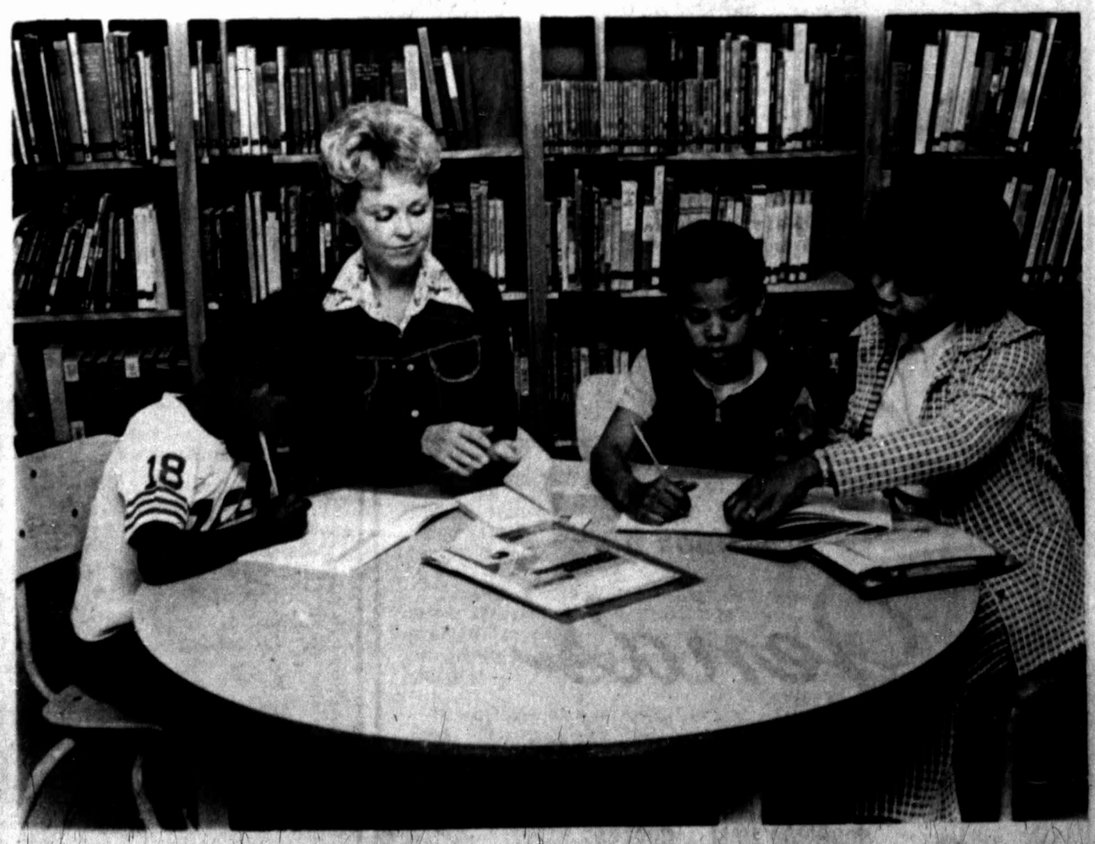

In May of 1977, the league voted to appropriate $30,000 for a new project in conjunction with the Midland Independent School District, the Midland City Council Parent-Teacher Association, Midland Alliance and The Reporter-Telegram. It is the Partners in Reading program currently in operation in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades of the Midland public schools. The league enlisted two member volunteers, Mrs. John Redfern III and Mrs. Edwin Watts, to write and compile the materials and learning packets for the program.

Partners in Reading is a program designed to improve reading skills in elementary school age children. The program incorporates several unique features, including total community involvement, work on a one to one basis with the children and the use of games in teaching.

The league currently is researching community needs in the area of "parenting." Because of her expertise in this field, Dr. Peggy Smith has been scheduled to speak to the league and Midland City Council PTA Tuesday.

Visit to gingerbread house dispells rumors

By BRUCE PARTAIN

Did you know there's a house in Big Spring that midgets built years ago, and now normal size people are trying to live in it?"

You don't say.

With such rumors bouncing about the Reporter-Telegram newsroom it seemed only fitting that a crack investigative reporting team should scour the Howard County town for munchkin dwellings.

With visions of Guliver-like people scraping their heads on doorways, tripping over doll-size furniture and cooking miniature turkeys in a Blue Star Suzy Homemaker oven, I journey down Interstate 20 at a breakneck 55 miles-per-hour.

Lilliput, here I come.

2504 24th Street; the address is etched in my head. Go south on Birdwell, east on Allendale, south on Cindy Lane then hook a quick right to 24th. 2500, 2502, 2506—wait a minute! Where's Snow White's place? Panic, get thee behind me.

Backpedaling, I spy gingerbread house on the horizon. It looks about six feet high by 12 feet wide. This must be the place. (Seems like they could have gotten one of the leprechauns to guide me in.)

Steadying myself, I approach the house. Placed on the back end of the lot, the green-and-red trim on white clapboard building speaks of droll, rosy-cheeked tinkerers. Small ones, I hope.

Knocking on a red door two feet wide by perhaps five feet high, I imagine a witch opening the door and asking if I'd like to check out the inside of her oven.

"Would you mind coming around the back?" a female voice inquires. Turning to face my questioner, I realize this long-haired young woman is no witch.

"Why, you're just a regular person!" I nearly blurt out. She leads me to a back door, also cabinet-size, and we enter.

Ike and Joyce Hare find shelter in Big Spring's "Gingerbread House".

Once inside, the illusions and expectations wither as the house reveals itself. It, too, seems "regular". The man of the house appears. Another regular fellow.

"Where are the munchkins!" I want to demand of him. We exchange greetings instead.

Ike Hare and his wife, Joyce, have lived in "The Gingerbread House" for the past five months. "One reason it looks so small," explains Ike," is parts are sunk in the ground anywhere from two-and-a-half to four feet."

The Hares are renting the structure from a Big Spring couple whose son pieced the house together out of scrap wood when he was in high school.

Hare spent seven weeks renovating the house before moving in. "It was in pretty sorry shape when I started," he says pointing to thirty patched holes in the ceiling.

"I don't know how he got this to hold without studs," says Ike, looking at a five foot long overhanging sheetrock section. As a union carpenter, Ike notes a multitude of building "sins" that have him puzzled.

"With the doors the size they are, and the water heater the size it is (big), they must've built the house around it," he surmises.

The Hares plan to keep renting the unique dwelling until they can build their own house nearby. They'd like to buy the gingerbread house if they could, though.

GS sale includes new cookie

The annual Girl Scout cookie sale in Midland begins Friday and continues through Jan. 29. Brownie, Junior Cadette and Senior Girl Scout troops will take orders for the various cookies and deliver them between Feb. 24 and March 4.

A new cookie, the Snow drop, devil's food covered with a marshmallow coating of white, will be sold this year, along with the chocolate thin mints, peanut butter sandwich, vanilla sandwich cremes, peanut butter patties and shortbread.

But Girl Scouting involves more than selling cookies. Through the organization, the scouts learn the importance of what it means to be a citizen and of protecting and improving the world around them through service to other people, environmental projects, international friendship and respect for their country and fellow citizens.

The girls earn money for their troop through the cookie sales and they also earn cookie patches. Proceeds from the sales are used to deliver council services to the community and develop and maintain the camps at Mitre Peak and Hat-A-Ranch.

The cookies sell for $1.25 per box. Of this amount, the troop keeps 15 cents. In addition, girls selling 48 or more boxes receive a cookie patch, while those selling 72 boxes or more will receive a patch and a set amount of cookie currency, which may be used toward camping and special event fees. Girls selling 125 or more boxes will receive a patch, currency and a T-shirt.

Cookie sale chairman is Mrs. Dorothy Westlake. Persons wishing to purchase cookies and who have not been contacted by a Girl Scout by the last day of the sale may dial the Girl Scout office at 684-6222.

Some recipes which use Girl Scout cookies are below:

APRICOT WHIP

3 tbsps. cold water
1 cup hot apricot syrup
¾ cup crumbled Shortbread Cookies
1 cup whipping cream
12 stewed apricot halves

Soften gelatin in cold water, add to hot syrup and stir until dissolved. Cool and chill. When slightly jellied and beginning to set, whip until light and fluffy. Fold in crumbled cookies and whipped cream. Place the apricot halves in bottom of mold and stand Shortbread Cookies around the edge. Pour in gelatin mixture and chill until firm.

HEAVENLY COOKIE CREAM

10 Girl Scout Vanilla Sandwich Cookies, plus extra cookies
1 cup well-drained crushed pineapple
½ cup chopped dates or drained maraschino cherries
½ cup chopped nut meats
1 cup heavy cream or 1 pkg. dessert topping mix
1 tsp. vanilla
½ tsp. lemon flavoring

Roll the 10 cookies between a fold of waxed paper to even crumbs (cream filling mixes with crumbs). Combine with fruits and nuts. Whip cream or prepare dessert topping mix as directed on package. Fold in flavorings and crumb mixture. Chill. Spoon into dessert dishes. Set a vanilla sandwich cookie on edge into each serving dish. Makes 6 servings.

CHOCOLATE MINT ICE CREAM

1 can condensed milk (sweet)
1 pint cream (2 cups)
12-20 Chocolate Mints—thoroughly chilled to make brittle

Whip cream and add condensed milk slowly mixing well. Put mints in a paper bag or between two sheets of oil paper and roll to crumbs. Stir these into the cream and pour into the tray of refrigerator. When practically frozen, remove from refrigerator and stir once more.

Critics condemn variety of food for breakfast

By ED ARMSTRONG
Copley News Service

They are picking on the cereal makers again for shortchanging the American people on their breakfasts — not really giving all the nutrition they claim to be giving.

The quality of the breakfasts most of us eat are deplored by nutritionists as well as by consumer advocates.

But I have a hunch all of those breakfast critics may be wasting their time, because the American people just aren't very concerned about breakfast.

There are a couple of reasons for that.

First, the schedules of most American families do not encourage the treatment of breakfast as a family meal. This is not limited to any one economic level; it applies to all classes from poor- to middle-class to well-to-do.

I'm sure the nutritionists who tell us of the importance of starting the day with a good, well-balanced meal, wish we could bring back the leisurely family breakfast — so long as they could prescribe the menu, of course.

But in most families today, so many of the members are going different ways at different hours that a real sit-down breakfast seems impractical. A couple of generations back, most working hours and school hours were roughly parallel. Relatively few mothers worked, so they could gear their home schedules to fixing breakfast for the family. That's no longer true.

In half or more of the homes now Mom and Pop are both working and, in many cases, different hours. With all the businesses and industries that have two or three shifts a day, work hours vary widely.

Some youngsters have to leave school at 7 a.m., others not until 8:30.

Besides that, social and entertainment patterns have changed. More people are out late at night or now they stay up and watch the late movie on TV instead of going to bed, and that affects the time they get up in the morning.

With all that, breakfast ends up as a catch-as-catch-can meal.

A second reason why Americans may not care much about breakfast is the criticism that all their favorite breakfast foods have come under, and I don't mean just the cereals.

Bacon and eggs, the old standby: excessive cholesterol, the food experts say. Some now warn people not to eat more than three eggs a week if they want to avoid heart attacks. In the old days, a lot of people ate a dozen eggs a week just for breakfast along with much fat bacon and biscuits and gravy both made with animal fats. Today all that's a no-no.

Sweet rolls and coffee: The sweet rolls are damned for the same reason as the prepared cereals — too much sugar. And coffee is bad for you because of the caffeine and acids it contains.

Pancakes or waffles swimming in butter and syrup: a lot of cholesterol in the butter, too much sugar in the syrup, and not much food value in the pancakes or waffles.

The nutritionists are fighting a losing battle. Mom and Pop don't have time to worry about their own breakfasts, and it's easier to buy that new cereal the kids saw advertised on TV than to argue with them about it.

Those people worrying about America's breakfasts would do better to concentrate on lunch and dinner.

Pass the Frosted Flakes, please.

Nursing loses with singers switch to music

By JACK WILLIAMS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — For Deniece Williams not to sing is for the sun not to shine, and for awhile there was a cloud over her future as unmistakable as a melancholy melody.

She tried to avoid it, this singing, but only for about as long and effectively as a fish avoids swimming, a dog barking and a bird flying.

Eventually, there was light. And at 26 Williams is basking in a career as a singer-songwriter, performing with a range and quality that has led some observers to label her as the best new female vocalist under the sun.

Five years ago, Williams was studying to be a nurse at Purdue University. Singing? Well, it was something you did in church.

"I come from a strict religious upbringing," she explained. "I was taught you don't sing outside the church. I tried to stay away from it for a long time."

Eventually, though, singing became her only means to an end — her education. She secured minor jobs as a singer to pay for her tuition. "It was all I knew how to do."

On the advice of a friend, Williams auditioned for a backup group being formed by Stevie Wonder (to be known as Wonderlove), and from that point she was inextricably involved in music.

"After my third year with Stevie," she said, "I decided I didn't want to travel anymore. I left the group to write songs. That's what I thought my future would be."

She offered some songs to Maurice White of Earth, Wind and Fire. "When Maurice heard me on the demo tape he said, 'You should be singing those songs.'

"Singing, you know, is a God-given talent and sometimes you take it for granted. I love songwriting and it took me awhile to get serious again about singing.

"Right now, though, being on the road, I'm a singer first and a songwriter second. In the summer, after touring, I'll have five months to be creative. There are about 200 songs in my head."

Williams' first album, "This is Niecy," was certified gold and her single, "Free," made noteworthy impact on both the American and English charts.

Williams has been compared with Minnie Riperton, Natalie Cole, Nancy Wilson and, most recently, Diana Ross and Barbra Streisand.

"It makes me feel honored," she said. "But I have a particular sound of my own and I think the public knows that now."

Her gospel roots are evident in her style, including a song called "God is Amazing," on her new "Songbird" release. She also writes love songs. Lots of 'em.

"I'm in love with love," she said. "I do my best writing when I'm emotionally involved with someone.

"The music comes easy. The lyrics take time. It's a challenge to say something in a way that is understood by every person in every walk of life. I've written songs in 10 minutes. Others take six months."

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of organza and Venise lace covering the Empire bodice, accented with a Victorian neckline. The sheer bishop sleeves ended in wide cuffs edged with Venise lace. The hemline of the bell-shaped skirt also was edged with Venise lace. Her fingertip-length veil of illusion was edged with Venise lace motifs and was held by a pearl encrusted Juliet cap. She carried a bouquet of pink Sweetheart roses, white carnations, baby's breath and stephanotis on a white Bible.

New abortion laws in New Zealand lead women to seek Australian aid

By DAVID ROBIE
Agence France-Presse

AUKLAND—New abortion laws in New Zealand, described by critics as being the most repressive in the Western World, have led to an airlift of pregnant women to Australia.

An organization called SOS—Sisters Overseas Service—was set up here recently to help ferry women across the Tasman Sea to seek abortions.

Since the new year about 100 pregnant women a week are believed to be making the flight, many of them doing the 2,600-mile round trip in one day.

Mrs. Mary McNish, SOS's liason officer from Population Services International—non-profit group running two abortion clinics in Sydney—warned "day-trippers" against the risks they were taking.

This is unlikely to deter women who have become the focus of New Zealand's biggest social crisis in years.

The contraception, sterilization and abortion act and several related laws were enacted last month after a controversial two-year study by a royal commission and months of bitter debate by the public and parliament.

Meanwhile SOS and other movements are getting on with the job of helping women who need abortions.

Hizzoner stays on

BIWABIK, Minn. (AP) — Robert Woods tried not to be mayor of Biwabik any more. Oh, how he tried.

But it didn't work.

Woods has been mayor of the Iron Range community for 12 years. He resigned. He refused to run for re-election. He snubbed a write-in campaign on his behalf.

But he won the 1977 race anyway, 381 to 195, all on write-in votes over a lone candidate who did file.

"And it makes me feel good. You bet it does," said Woods, 46, who is employed by a mining company.

DEAR ABBY

He was not real victim of seductive girl

By ABBIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Men are raised to scorn and fear any sexual activity with girls who are legally under age. This I can understand. But now I realize that in some cases the men are the victims and the girls are guilty.

First let me say that I am not a child molester. I lived 50 years without ever touching an underaged girl. In fact, the thought of it repulsed me. Then it happened, and I found myself totally helpless. There was no way I could resist her; and if she hadn't left town with her mother just after it started in September, I'd probably still be involved with her.

Our involvement lasted only three weeks, and at no time did I take advantage of her. She was the aggressor from the moment we met, and she was as mature physically and aware sexually as a woman of 20. Perhaps the fact that she was fatherless played a part in it, but she really went after me, and when she turned on the charm I forgot how young she was.

It will probably never happen to me again, but what bothers me is knowing that there are hundreds (maybe thousands) of innocent men who are behind bars because of girls like her. I'm sure the courts don't fully understand that a grown man can be the vicitm of an underaged girl. What is your opinion?—VICTIM

DEAR VICTIM: I don't buy your plea of "total helplessness." Knowing that she was under age, you should have resisted her advances, regardless of how aggressive, appealing and seductive she was. Worse yet, you missed a golden opportunity to help a mixed-up fatherless child straighten out her head and get off a collision course with disaster.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to know why every time I change my hair style, some ninny gives me a compliment, and then blows the compliment by asking, "Is that your real hair or is it a wig?"

Not only is this rude and ill-mannered, it is also none of their business.

To me it's like complimenting a lady on her teeth—then asking if they're false.

Please print this letter if it takes a year! I am sure I'm not the only person this happens to.—WIGGED OUT

DEAR WIGGED: You're not (according to my mail); but take it as a compliment. You're being told that your hair looks to good to be real. (And most things that do, aren't.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO DIXIE: You can tell a great deal about a person's character if you know how he spends his spare time.

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you knew how to get people to like you, my new booklet, "How to Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to ABBY, in care of this newspaper.

Baylor professor to discuss, show films that stress role of parents

Dr. Peggy Smith of Houston will be in Midland Tuesday to speak at an open meeting of the Junior League of Midland, Inc., at 9:30 a.m. in Midland Community Theatre and again at 8 p.m. to the City Council PTA in San Jacinto Junior High School.

Dr. Smith, a native of Dallas, presently is an assistant professor of obstretrics and gynecology at Baylor College of She will speak to the PTA about a series of video tapes she has developed on how to be a good parent, blending together discipline, nutrition, daily living styles and economics. These tapes are entitled "Middle Road Traveler" and are a series of 12 tapes developed for junior high schools.

The Junior League currently is researching community needs in parenting and Dr. Smith will speak to the league on different parenting techniques communities can set up.

The television series was shown to approximately 400 boys and girls in six Houston junior high schools. Dr. Smith 400 boys and girls in six Houston junior high schools, said Dr. Smith, and "The results have been astounding," she added.

The title of the series derives from the fact that adolescents are not yet adults, but are no longer children, either. They are in the "middle of the road," an in-between stage of growth.

The project is supported by grants from the Texas Department of Human Resources in cooperation with the Early Childhood Development Division of the Texas Department of Community Affairs and the Texas Education Agency.

The speaker graduated cum laude from The University of Texas at Austin with a B.A. degree and special honors in psychology, and M.A. degree in special education from The University of Texas at Austin in the area of mental retardation and a Ph.D. in special education from UT.

Her professional interests other than mental retardation include school age parents, early childhood education and early infantile autism.

Mrs. Smith's professional expertise includes serving as an intern teacher at Austin State School by planning, developing and implementing curriculum for personal hygiene of adolescent girls; an intern teacher at Austin State Hospital, where her job was facilitation and remediation of basic reading and arithmetic skills and as a visiting professor in the psychology department of Rice University, where she lectured in child psychology and exceptional children and learning.

She has written several publications and papers including "Hotline For Postpartum Teen Mothers" for the American Journal of Nursing, a controlled study on the medical impact of an antepartum program for indigent adolescents, which was accepted by the American Journal of Public Health; a five year study of postpartum services to the indigent adolescent that was presented to the Texas Council of Exceptional Children and an overview of the emerging vocation of parenthood. The latter study is pending with Child Welfare.

Spankings did hurt mom

By ERMA BOMBECK

It was always a throw-away line.

Somewhere between the time I caught the kid who was to be spanked, drew back my hand, and let it come to rest on his backside, I'd say, "This is going to hurt me worse than it hurts you." (Actually, it only hurt me worse once — and that's when one of my boys stuck a Frisbee down his pants and I nearly broke my hand.)

I got the line from my mother who used it to assure me that while she was switching my legs with a tree trunk, she really had nothing in her heart but love for me.

Disciplining children is tough. Child psychology books never deal with it realistically. They tell you funny things like, "Don't discipline your child in anger." (Merry Christmas . . . I'm going to punch you out.") "Discuss his punishment with him." ("What do you mean, you vote no?") "The punishment must fit the crime." ("Playing in the johns in your orthopedic shoes is a hitting offense.")

They never tell you about "runners." They're the children who are faster than a speeding bullet, more powerful than a locomotive and able to leap fences in a single bound. By the time you've caught them you can't remember why you wanted them.

There are the flinchers who act like they've been beaten every day of their lives for breathing. Get a room full of company and reach out to touch their cheek in a gesture of love and they recoil and threaten to call legal aid.

There are the hummers who want you to know they are unimpressed with your soliloquy. (I once had one who actually reached down and turned on the sweeper while I was doling out penance.)

There are the door slammers, the "I'm telling!" and the mumblers.

Actually, I lied. There was one other time when a spanking hurt me worse than it hurt the child.

My son had knocked over a planter lamp for the 50th time, spreading dirt and stones into the beige shag. I leaned over, planted a swift hand to his rump and said, "If you do that one more time I'm mailing you out of the country. I told you not to throw a ball in the living room and I mean it!"

He took the punishment, then in tears, looked around for someone to comfort him. In desperation, he threw both arms around my knees.

If he saw my tears as I held him close he didn't mention it.

Insulate to reduce loss

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Most homes built prior to the late 1960s when energy was cheap and plentiful were not designed for energy efficiency, says the Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp.

Pointing out that most government, utility and industry experts agree that new and existing homes should contain a minimum of six inches of attic insulation with an "R" value of 19, the company says that many homes today contain only a few inches of attic insulation while others have none.

Laurent ends fantasy flights; lands with modern collection

The Washington Post

PARIS — Yves Saint Laurent had ended his flights of costume fantasy which took him (and his customers) to Russia and China and has landed with a new collection for spring that is New York-inspired and as modern as the Concorde.

While the buyers praised the collection as being very salable, the show never roused the cheers and applause that heightened all those Saint Laurent costume trips.

In some ways the Saint laurent customer (and those who quickly imitate the look) will not look wildly different from other Paris designer customers this spring — with all the full scale sportswear. But at Saint Laurent it is carefully scaled down to a less full blouse and many of the pants and skirts are designed to be slim over the top of the hips.

He is partial to khaki and white and loden and has revived an earlier theme once dubbed very mandarin-like — of big blocks of color in sweaters, tunics and dresses.

His color combinations are never the expected—two shades of Navy blue in a costume, even two shades of white (and off white). Rather than looking mismatched, they look fresh.

When he abandoned his elaborate costume looks, he also gave up the colorful prints that adorned them. Now there are plaids and stripes, done simply and architecturally such as a stark black and white plaid used in a ruffle trimmed, almost see-through dress, with an uneven, cut-up hemline.

"After such an explosion of prints, the reaction had to come," said Gustav Zumsteg, the head of Abraham and Company where a large number of the fabrics come from.

Along with the stripes and plaids are several butterfly and dove prints, all small designs, in bright colors on dark backgrounds that look almost like book paper prints.

His solids are often a silk shantung tussah, a fabric that hasn't been used in a while that has a slight slub, and is really more rigid than many of the soft fabrics that have been so popular recently.

Saint Laurent may have chosen shantung not only for its apeparance but the fact that it has Chinese is Chinese and it is woven in China and dyed and printed in Switzerland.

Club elects same leader

Sharron Dunnam was re-elected president when Sand and Seed Garden Club met in the home of Frankie Stanley. Barbara McCown was co-hostess.

Other officers named were Nancy Ginzel, vice president; Mrs. Stanley, recording secretary and reporter; Joy Boes, corresponding secretary and treasurer; Diann Dow, parliamentarian, and Cel Wiginton, yearbook chairman.

Serving on the nominating committee were Jane Briscoe, Gretchen Parsley and Barbara Porsche.

Midland County Extension Agent Charles Green presented a program on "Plants Adapted to Midland."

THE VISIBLE WOMAN

Getting into business

By JANET LOWE
Copley News Service

It had been a busy Saturday, and not until I stopped for lunch in a coffee shop, one owned and operated by a woman, did the realization come as to how the day had been spent.

The morning began with a stop at a bookstore to buy a book of poetry. Next I'd visited a graphic artist to pick up a letterhead design. A stop at a letter press was last, to arrange for printing of the stationery. In each case I'd done business with a woman in her own shop. Even the book of poetry was written by a woman.

The bookstore had been chosen because it was in my neighborhood; the designer because her work was distinctive; and the printers because they'd quoted the most reasonable price. The coffee shop was handy, the prices and food good.

The Small Business Administration reports that only 4.6 percent of the businesses in the United States are owned by women. To combat that imbalance, the SBA has launched a nationwide campaign to encourage women to start their own businesses.

Their timing couldn't have been better, because women are already beginning to swarm into the field of self-employment. They are doing so partly because good-paying jobs are hard to find, and partly because jobs in the fields that suit them are sometimes scarce. The answer is often to create a slot for yourself.

Self-employment, as inviting as it sounds, is a rocky path for anyone who chooses it. Women, however, have special problems. Many times, women find themselves lacking management skills. While she may have worked long enough as a cook, waitress or hostess in a restaurant to consider the food service industry as a business venture, a woman may be sadly lacking in experience in managing people, business financing and time.

To combat these weaknesses, the SBA has been sponsoring a series of seminars around the nation, to educate women in these areas.

Most women's magazines now carry features on going into business, and the previously male-slanted business publications, including Business Week and Wall Street Journal are responding to the readership of a new crop of female managers.

Little or no financial backing has long slowed the progress of women as business operators. Though new credit laws have made it illegal to discriminate against women in the banking and loan-granting processes, these laws sometimes don't help much when starting new business. Leeway for prudent loan giving is sufficient to prevent women from receiving financing, which for small businesses is risky even in the best circumstances.

Last year, only 11 percent of the SBA loans went to women, but this year $100 million was earmarked especially for women to develop small businesses.

Here's easy way to write slogans

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Machine embroidery is pretty. In fact, it is very, very pretty, but it does take a bit of practice. While you are practicing, try a little fake machine embroidery.

Transfer line drawings onto your fabric. Stretch between hoops as you would for regular machine embroidery. Set machine for a wide zigzag with top tension a bit loose. Place a strand of pearl cotton or very fine yarn along the lines of your design. Zigzag over yarn as you follow the picture.

If you get weak in the knees thinking about cutting into $36 a yard suede, hang loose and follow me:

Selection of pattern: Pseudo-suedes were never meant to be thickly gathered, draped or shirred.

However, these fabrics will gather slightly, tailor beautifully and work up into pants, jackets, skirts, jumpers or coats. Choose a pattern of simple lines with few seams so your topstitching will show to advantage.

Alterations: Make all pattern alterations before laying out your pattern. Slight adjustments may be made at the first fitting.

Pattern layout: Lay all pieces the same way! There is a nap to suede which can change color intensity if reversed. If you pin, pin through seam allowance only or use transparent tape to hold pattern in place. Cut pattern on a single layer, then reverse pieces for second cutting.

Your shears should be very sharp and smooth-edged. Use long, steady strokes.

Marking: Use tailor's chalk on the wrong side of the fabric. Once you have determined the wrong side, mark it with a small strip of tape, since the right and wrong sides are very similar.

Stitching: Use a new, size 11 regular or leather-point needle. Set your machine for 10 stitches per inch. Tension should be balanced, but slightly loose. Be sure the pressure on your presser foot is not too heavy.

Most seams on pseudo-suede are overlapped, so there will be much trimming to be done. Use sharp, smooth-edged four-and-one-half-inch or five-inch embroidery shears for quicker and neater trimming.

Interfacing: Choose a lightweight fusible interfacing. Preshrink it by placing in a basin of very warm water for a few minutes, then smoothing on a towel to dry.

Questions may be addressed to Mrs. Betty Kinser, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

Spring shoes: flat or spikes?

By LUCRETIA STEIGER
Copley News Service

Synthetic leathers with their built-in memories just can't mold themselves to your foot, according to Marilyn Gould of New York.

She represents the Sole Leather Council, but says the folks there are concerned with the top of the foot as well.

Gould believes that American consumers should demand quality from American manufacturers by asking for all-leather shoes which "customize themselves" to the foot.

She also points out that increasing sales of imported synthetic shoes have caused some 500 American shoe manufacturers to close down plants.

For spring, Gould says American manufacturers are predicting really flat or really high-heeled shoes; flat sandals or skimmers (ballerinalike shoes tied at the ankle) with young clothes. There are some sensible walking shoes with two-inch heels in the collections, she said, generally in dove gray or neutral beige shades.

There will be lots of strappings, some stitched-front cowboy boots and lots of whites and pastels, along with the face-powder pales in shoe colors. And demi-boots, which come to mid-calf, are showing surprising new strength for spring.

Snakes differ widely

SILVER SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Poisonous snakes inhabit every state except Hawaii, Alaska and Maine, according to Andy Koukoulis, Curator of the Reptile Institute at Florida's Silver Springs.

Koukoulis, a reptile expert, recently published a chart showing the most common venomous snakes in color photographs. The chart, already in use at several hospital emergency rooms, shows diagrams of the differences between venomous and non-venomous bites and recommended first aid procedures.

One basic difference between poisonous and non-poisonous snakes is the shape of the eyeball: a harmless snake has a round pupil, a poisonous snake, an elliptical pupil, Koukoulis explains. However, by the time one is close enough to tell the difference, it is usually too late, he adds.

Working mothers: They must ration precious time

By MARGUERITE SULLIVAN
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Working mothers: you can't be super mother, super wife, super professional, super volunteer, super tennis player, super book reader, super socializer.

You have to "edit" your life, decide the two or three things which are most important and not worry about what you have to sacrifice.

"I would love to have been a great tennis player but it just didn't fit into my priorities," said Jean Sisco, a consultant on governmental and public affairs for the American Retail Association and formerly a vice president of personnel at Woodward and Lothrop, a Washington area department store.

"My husband and I did not socialize as much as we might and I did not travel as much as I could have," said Sisco, whose husband was undersecretary of state under Henry Kissinger.

"And several years ago I had to turn down an offer to be president of a company," she said. "My children were young. I simply couldn't be a mother and meet all the travel and other obligations the job would have required."

Friends are what Gail Winslow, senior vice president and director of Ferris and Co., Inc., a member of the New York Stock Exchange, has had to sacrifice.

"I miss friends, I miss coffee klatches and all the things I think nonworking women do these days," she said. "I made that sacrifice, but there are others, like my children, I am not willing to make."

Unwillingness to sacrifice at all was one reason given why there are so few women — less than 20 per cent — in nanagement today.

By being organized, women can better handle the demands of the working world, the women executives stressed.

"Allocate your time," said Debby Both, a research associate with the Rand Corp. "Do that by delegating authority, be a careful planner and make lists.

Foreclosure rate down

Contented 'widow' rare

By HARLON BARTLETT
Copley News Service

"My widowhood began with marriage. When we were first married I was shocked at how much he loved fishing and hunting."

The "widow" is Gerri Clunn, 29, who began life in The Great Indoors — the Bronx — and still feels no anguish when her activities don't bring her face to face with a largemouth bass.

For nearly every fisherman, there is a fishing widow. A woman who, according to legend, is stranded somewhere on shore, gnashing her teeth, berating hubby's shiftlessness.

Why isn't he home painting the spare bedroom? Doesn't he know we haven't visited my parents in three months? Can't he understand he's wasting his time and it's costing us a mint?

Unless that fishing widow is Gerri Clunn — confidant, wife and sometimes provider for Rick Clunn, two-time BASS Masters Classic champion and reigning king of bassing in America.

What we're dealing with here is a special case of widowhood, made special naturally by the principals involved. By their relationship together and, probably even more vital, by how they handle their time apart.

"I don't need his physical presence to be reassured, and I'm sure he feels the same way," says Gerri.

In other words, they don't need each other, just as long as they have each other.

Because Rick has been raking in the bucks (more than $60,000 in the last year) and because their daughter, Brooke, is 3, and not yet confined to a classroom, they have motored 60,000 miles in the last 12 months.

"Our car has been our family room," said Gerri.

Tripping off to Hawaii and other less exotic places where there are bass and, for Rick, cash.

His life has become so fast-paced, in fact, that when the phone is ringing off the hook at their Montgomery, Texas, home he must politely decline to accept the $100 people want to thrust in his hand for guiding them on a one-day fishing outing.

Ah, what a difference a year makes. And what a bigger difference four years have made.

Breast cancer has environmental causes

By HARRY NELSON
The Los Angeles Times

Many environmental substances should be studied as possible causes of breast cancer, according to University of California San Francisco researcher who has found that the breast fluid of women contains a wide variety of environmental chemicals to which they have been exposed.

Dr. Nicholas L. Petrakis recently found that the breasts of nonlactating — or nonmilk producing — women smokers contain nicotine. Previous studies have shown that the breasts of lactating women harbor nicotine as well as a number of other foreign substances.

But Petrakis believes that as far as breast cancer is concerned it may be more significant that nonlactating women collect environmental substances because lactating women get rid of the chemicals in their milk when they nurse.

Fluids secreted by nonlactating women, on the other hand, concentrate in their breast ducts, exposing the tissue to any harmful chemicals that may be in the fluid. Breast cancer originates in these ducts.

While there is no known connection between breast cancer and nicotine, Petrakis speculates that other products of cigarette smoke known to be cancer causing also may accumulate in the breast fluid.

"Adolescent girls now smoke like crazy. Suppose they smoke one cigarette every 30 minutes. That's like maintaining a concentration of cancer-causing chemicals in the breast fluid all day long," Petrakis said.

The scientist pointed out, however, that there is no evidence that women smokers have a higher rate of breast cancer than nonsmoking women. But one possible explanation is that cancer takes many years to develop and women have not smoked intensively until recent years, he said.

In addition to nicotine, Petrakis and associates have found traces of barbiturates, radioactive materials and certain other chemicals in the breast fluids of nonlactating women.

He said he believes it likely that the fluid contains trace amounts of a great many substances with which women come in contact, making it desirable to consider their possible role in causing breast cancer.

Using the so-called Ames test, the researchers recently began testing fluid of nonlactating women smokers for mutagenic (mutation causing) chemicals. He said he has found a few women whose fluid tests were positive for mutagenic effect.

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

Cooking contests seem to enjoy a never-flagging popularity. Each time one is announced, contest organizers are flooded with entries.

You can enter now through April 1. Top prize is $10,000, and there are other cash prizes for a total $20,000.

Recipes are judged equally on four points: taste, appearance, simplicity and interest.

Recipes should be written for about four servings, giving the exact amount of each ingredient used. Total preparation time should not exceed three hours.

Write your name, address and telephone number on your favorite chicken recipe (or recipes) and mail to: Chicken Contest, Box 28158, Central Station, Washington, D.C. 20005.

Push hard away from the table

By JACK WILLIAMS
Copley News Service

All those weight-reduction and fitness fads that proliferate these days like so many calories in a seven-course meal, are a bit much for Dr. R. Philip Smith to stomach.

Smith, medical director of the La Costa, Calif., resort spa, figures there are two things you've go to exercise to maintain health — muscles and restraint.

The latter should be summoned at least three times a day. Or every time you're confronted with a plate of food, he says.

And muscles? Well, even those of us who are deskbound with no spare time to deflate an incipient spare tire can fit into our schedules the 14 minutes a day Smith says is required to maintain minimal fitness.

For 12 years, Smith has devised regimens for the Hollywood types who come to his Southern California getaway in quest of rejuvenation and relaxation. Many leave pounds lighter.

Not that there's any shortcut to fitness. It's something, says Smith, of which you must be conscious every day of your life.

— We eat far too much protein, much of which winds up stored as fat.

— The key to staying young is being agile.

— The first thing you should do every morning is to thank God that you're here, then do something to improve your physical well-being.

"Most old people," said Smith, "are stiff in the joints and muscles because they don't use them. This causes them to stagger to the nearest chair where they spend every evening watching TV, then off to bed."

Well on their way to this condition are businessmen in their 30s who drive to work, take the elevator upstairs to the office, drive to a martini-drenched lunch, then get off at 4 or 5 p.m. and consume "three or four more drinks before going home and plopping in front of the TV."

The first mistake, says Smith, is to take the elevator instead of walking for two or three flights of stairs, at least.

Fun food that's good for you

Copley News Service

Most cocktail food is too high in saturated fats, but here are suggestions which can make your party fare safe for all diet-conscious partygoers.

Use vegetable sticks of carrots, celery, green peppers, squash, cucumbers, to scoop up dips. Cauliflower pieces, radish roses, cocktail onions, pickles and mushrooms are fine.

Cocktail rye bread, Rye Krisp, toasted tortillas, plain soda crackers, matzo crackers or melba toast make good fat-controlled dippers. The new polyunsaturated potato chips and corn chips are OK, too.

Even comic heroines carry on sexual revolt

By DAVID BEHRENS
Newsday

The sexual revolution has finally reached the land of Superman and Wonder Woman.

POWWWWWW! to male chauvinist heroes.

SCRAMMMM! to finicky, fussy, fooiish femmes!

Today, super heroes and super heroines fly faster than speeding bullets together. And when you look up, up into the sky, it isn't a bird, it isn't a plane, it isn't even a man. It's very likely to be:

—Wonder Woman, still young after nearly 36 years. With bullets still bouncing off her magic bracelets, her bosom as firm as ever, she is now an equal member of the Justice League of America, just like Katar the Hawkman, Batman and the other super guys.

—Black Canary, who became a crime crusader when the local police turned down her application. She lives with Green Arrow, but with her ultrasonic "Canary Chirp," she's no marshmallow.

—Shayera, another Justice League member. Her marriage with Hawkman is the envy of everyone in super land, even those with curious relationships such as Batman and Robin.

—Ms. Marvel, who in real life is Carol Danvers, editor of Woman magazine. Her tinted glasses give just a hint of Ms. Magazine's Gloria Steinem, but at the first sign of trouble, editor Danvers turns into caped and curvy Ms. Marvel, "a Cree Warrior with super power and a seventh sense for danger."

—Power Girl, Red Sonja, Spiderwoman and the Bionic Woman, all newcomers to the super set. Power Girl escaped from the doomed planet Krypton, just like Superman did. Red Sonja escaped from her homeland after she spurned the advances of a king and slew him instead, a sort of last word in assertiveness training. The Bionic Woman simply escaped from TV. And Spiderwoman, with her own magazine for the first time, isn't even related to Spiderman.

And then, there's Jenette Kahn. Except Jenette Kahn is real. Just 30 years old, less than a decade out of Radcliffe and the founder of Kids magazine a few years ago, Ms. Kahn recently became the publisher of DC Comics, one of the country's two largest comic book companies and the home office of such heroes as Superman, Wonder Woman, Batman, Power Girl, Plastic Man and more than 50 other titles.

When Ms. Kahn was growing up back in the mid-'50s, Wonder Woman was the only durable success in the field of super woman. Of course, there were other large-busted super heroines who quickly zoomed into oblivion after predictably short lives on the crime-fighting scene. (Does anyone remember such long-gone heroines of the 1940s and 1950s as The Girl Commandos, Kara the Jungle Princess, Marga the Panther Woman or Miss Fury?)

Only Mary Marvel came close to Wonder Woman in longevity, but her success really depended on strong patriarchal ties with big brother, Captain Marvel. And despite her long career, even Wonder Woman was too good to be true, at least for Ms. Kahn.

"Batman was my hero," she admitted. "Wonder Woman was an Amazon from an alien island, based on Greek mythology, not an ordinary mortal like Batman — like I could become." So when she was 10, she found Batman a far more exhilarating role model than stately Wonder Woman, even if she did work for the Pentagon.

Today, Ms. Kahn is especially fond of Black Canary. As Green Arrow's paramour and partner, Black Canary is a modern blend of tenacity and softness, as Ms. Kahn sees her. "Green Arrow tries everyone's patience. He's a thorn in everyone's side — so dogmatic, so pigheaded. But somehow, Black Canary can control him. And yet she's also very vulnerable. I think she's more easy to identify with than Wonder Woman."

But 30 years ago, Ms. Kahn added, it would have been difficult to keep Black Canary in business. Take this bit of recent dialogue, overheard at the Justice League's headquarters. On duty are Wonder Woman, Black Canary and Shayera, Katar the Hawkman's wife, who is furious.

Shayera: "This is absurd. Here I join the League to be close to my husband Katar and now he's gone off to a bachelor party for The Atom along with the other men, leaving us with monitor duty."

Black Canary: "Is it, Wonder Woman? Anything that segregates men and women isn't harmless! It may be tradition but it makes me mad!"

As it turns out, the three super heroines spend an entire comic book proving they can fight crime without the aid of the old super boys. As Black Canary put it, "The day we need your help is the day I retire!"

"Dames," Green Arrow grumbles to himself.

Black Canary actually comes from a long line of law enforcers, as Dinah Drake, the daughter of a police lieutenant. As a child, her father made her undergo strenuous exercises, in preparation for her career. "Please Daddy," little pre-pubescent Dinah pleaded, skipping rope, "Can't I stop? My legs hurt." Daddy answers: "I know you're tired, but will a crook care how tired you are when you're chasing him halfway across the city?" So as a young adult and a graduate in criminal psychology, she insists on joining her father on his most dangerous missions.

"I'm as much your partner as this rookie," she says, pointing to her farther's chagrined male sidekick. Daddy glows with pride. "My little bird has a mind of her own." It's only after her father's untimely death and her rejection by the police force that Dinah Drake decides to become Black Canary, a caped crusader just like Batman and the others.

Another new twist is the dreamlife of Lois Lane. One in constant need of rescuing, she adored only Superman, found Clark Kent's lack of macho just a step above contempt and in general, dreamed the impossible dream, that is, Superman. "She's a lot more independent today," Ms. Kahn observed.

The modernization of Lois Lane is also confirmed by Joanne Posner, 25, a former literature major and reviewer for the Comic Magazine Association of America. The association, which serves as the industry's self-censor, reviews more than 200 comic book titles a year. Mrs. Posner reads them all.

The job is actually less taxing than it was 25 years ago, when at least 600 comic book titles were published by more than 40 companies. Today's comic books are produced by DC, Marvel Comics and only three or four other smaller publishers. So while Mrs. Posner has fewer choices today, she is enjoying the new fanatasies more than ever. Lois Lane, for example, actually likes mild-mannered Clark Kent these days, Mrs. Posner reported.

"They really have a relationship, even if she still is in love with Superman," she said. And Lois doesn't simply tag along anymore, waiting to get rescued "or calling Clark Kent a ninny all the time." And then there's Black Canary. Mrs. Posner said. "She doesn't want to be totally dependent on Green Arrow. That's what I really like, all the sub-plots with personal feelings in all the stories now."

At DC Comics, Ms. Kahn believes that the population explosion of super heroines is not a matter of propaganda, just a reflection of real life. "I think there's been a change in the writers of comic books. For one thing, there's a whole new generation of writers, some as young as their late teens, some in their 20s. Half the comic books are written by people under 30 who have grown up in a period of — what shall I call it? — raised consciousness. I think a lot of them have reassessed themselves and their attitude toward women, and their writing reflects their own experience and attitudes."

She pointed to Steve Englehart, a Justice League of America writer, who has a very loving and independent relationship with his real-life wife. It's reflected, Ms. Kahn said, in the relationship between Mr. and Mrs. Hawkman. "They're each other's best friend," and their marriage is "very special," Ms. Kahn said. In the 1940s, when Hawkman first appeared, his wife was just a shadowy backdrop.

But will these female models change the little girls of today? Probably not, or at least not directly. "Most of our readers are between 10 and 15 years old, and the vast majority are boys," Ms. Kahn said.

In her view, boys are still more interested in super heroes, including Wonder Woman and her female colleagues. And girls are still more likely to gravitate to Archie, following the antics of Betty and Veronica, still as silly as ever in their eternal pursuit of the hero. No one in comicdom is claiming that the modern heroes and heroines are creating an instant new generation of liberated children.

Some doubts have been expressed, for example, by members of the National Organization for Women. Margalo Ashley Bennett, head of New York NOW's media image committe said, "We certainly don't want women to become supercops. We're not interested in having them become violent and super macho."

Still, she said, some children do seem to have a very positive view of Wonder Woman. "I remember Wonder Woman in the 1950s, but it was total fantasy. I knew that real women didn't do anything like that, that was so active. It was just tokenism." But just recently, she said, she was with a group of little girls. A 9-year-old asked: "Do you think girls can do anything when they grow up?"

"Yes," Ms. Bennett replied.

"Like Wonder Woman?" the little girl asked.

"I was floored," Ms. Bennett recalled. Wonder Woman, at least, reinforces what little girls are hearing about women, she said. "More than 'Charlie's Angels.'"

Joanne Edgar, a Ms. Magazine editor, agrees. Author of a tribute to Wonder Woman in the first Ms. issue five years ago, Ms. Edgar called WW "the only super hero we really had." She recalled reading the magazine secretly, pretending not to like it while trading "acceptable" Superman and Batman comics with the boys on the block. But Wonder Woman, she recalled, "was not only strong and gentle at the same time but she made her own decisions on right or wrong." It was not until adulthood, she said, that she realized why she liked her so much. Today, she said, supercops such as Charlie's Angels are "JUST Barbie dolls with careers on the side."

The fast-shooting, pretty-but-violent heroine is a problem, according to some feminists. Nowhere is the problem depicted more graphically than in Ms. Marvel. In a recent episode, Carol Danvers, editor of Woman magazine, is musing over her new apartment, a modest studio with a terrace. "I live alone and plan to stay that way," she thinks to herself. "I don't need that much. I never liked the penthouse and this place really feels nice. Peaceful. What more could a woman ask for?"
