Holiday travel saved as strike ends

American, union still not in agreement

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The strike by American Airlines flight attendants ended Monday, just in time for the Thanksgiving holidays.

American Chairman Robert L. Crandall said President Bill Clinton telephoned him Monday to discuss the strike and said Clinton asked American to join the members of the Association of Professional Flight Attendants in binding arbitration to end the strike.

"I simply felt that it was incumbent on me to accept his suggestion, so I did," Crandall said.

Crandall spoke during a press conference Monday in Fort Worth to announce the end of the strike.

Members of the APFA went on strike Thursday because of a breakdown in contract negotiations with American.

The five day strike was scheduled to last 11 days before the agreement was reached Monday.

The arbitration will allow a third party to mediate between American and the APFA about the contract disputes.

Details of the arbitration are not finalized, Crandall said.

"My guess is an arbitration process would take perhaps 60 days," he said.

Flights will resume immediately and American agreed with Clinton to accept the striking flight attendants back into the company, Crandall said.

It will take several days for the company to completely resume normal business, but passengers flying on American during the Thanksgiving holidays should be able to reach their destinations, Crandall said.

"I think we will have a substantial number of our flight attendants back on duty tomorrow morning," Crandall said.

Julie Sedberry, a flight attendant for American who was on strike at the Lubbock International Airport, said she believes the strike helped the cause of the APFA.

"We want to get a fair contract," she said. "It's not just wages. It's work rules that they're implementing."

Crandall said he was glad a settlement had been reached, but said he would have preferred for American Airlines and the APFA to have settled the dispute themselves.

"In one sense, I'm disappointed," he said.

"In another sense, I'm relieved."

The strike will probably affect the company and its profits, Crandall said.

WORLD

Work remains on world trade accord

GENEVA (AP) — NAFTA is finally set to make the world's largest free-trade zone a reality. But an even bigger deal to open markets worldwide may remain a dream.

Seven-year-old talks sponsored by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade face a Dec. 15 deadline to reach agreement on what would be the most far-reaching trade liberalizing package ever.

The aim is to cut barriers to exports of everything from beef to beer and from textiles to telecommunications.

Potential economic gains are huge — more than $200 billion per year, according to some estimates — and optimism is high.

"I think we're going to make it," U.S. negotiator John Schmidt said after Congress cleared the North American Free Trade Agreement. "It's going to happen," said EC negotiator Hugo Paemen.

NATION

Retirement was Packwood option

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bob Packwood had decided to resign, but changed his mind after congressional staffers leaked his intentions to the Justice Department, prompting a subpoena for his diaries, a leading Republican lawmaker said Sunday.

"He was ready to resign, he wanted out," Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming said on CBS' "Face the Nation." Simpson accused staffers of the Senate Ethics Committee of thwarting the resignation by leaking word of it to Justice Department lawyers.

When informed of Packwood's plans, Justice Department lawyers scrambled to issue a formal request for the Oregon Republican's diaries, guarding against their possible destruction once Packwood left the Senate.

STATE

Food banks report dwindling stocks

With the traditional season of giving at hand, food banks across the state report dwindling stocks in the face of steady increases in demand.

Supplies are so low in Dallas that some groups say they won't be able to give out their traditional Thanksgiving baskets. One West Texas charity said the hard times are reminiscent of the oil-bust '80s.

"We're in a quandary as to what is happening," said Bob Moore, executive director of the San Antonio Food Bank.

"We've done a whole lot of brainstorming around here trying to figure our what the problem is," Moore said.

Moore said money donations are "down somewhat" from last year, but what is lagging most is actual food donation.

During an annual food drive the first week of October, the food bank collected 136,000 pounds at grocery stores, schools and other sites. That is down from 158,000 pounds last year.

Candidate wants smaller Treasury

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Treasurer Martha Whitehead announced Monday she plans to base her 1994 candidacy on her support for the downsizing and merger of the state's Treasury with the Comptroller's Office.

Whitehead said her number one priority after being elected will be the elimination of the Treasury department "as we know it."

"I hope to oversee its downsizing and ultimate merger into the State Comptroller's Office," she said.

"I am convinced that we can save three out of every four dollars we currently spend...on Treasury operations," she said. "I also think that the state of Texas is at a point where we can operate a high-yield investment system and a cash management function without the tax burden of an entire state agency to go along with it."

Whitehead said she believes state officials should be more responsive to taxpayers' messages.

Whitehead said she intends to draft and support the merging legislation in the next regular session. Any final action would be the result of voters' opinions about a proposed amendment that Whitehead is hopeful the Legislature will pass.

"I would hope that the Legislature would pass such a bill by the required two-thirds vote and then have the voters of Texas give us the final word on whether this agency is necessary," she said.

Whitehead's Press Secretary Steve Garven said the possible merger would benefit Texas taxpayers.

He said there are three functions of the Treasury that would be taken over by the Comptroller's Office in the event of merging that include cash management, a investment portfolio and the unclaimed property division.

Garven also said the Treasury Office employs about 250 people and said that number would "obviously reduce" if the merger takes place.

Whitehead said, "I feel very strongly that this is the right decision.

"I believe that we can do something here in Austin that really hasn't been done before.

"I think that the people of this state are desperate to see this kind of thing actually happen, so that's what I'm going to do," she said.

Assassination anniversary passes quietly

■ Campus flags not flown at half-mast Monday

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Monday marked the 30th anniversary of the assassination of former President John F. Kennedy, but several Texas Tech students noticed the lack of attention paid to the event on the Tech campus.

Ethan Everett, a senior advertising major from Dallas, said he noticed the flags were not flown at half-mast in honor of JFK in Tech's Memorial Circle and requested information about the policy from the President Robert Lawless' office.

Jerry Ramsey, associate vice president for operations, said there is a policy for requesting the flags be flown at half-mast.

"We have an operating policy for half-mast," he said. "We grant requests for some activities and the death of a student or faculty member."

He said some federal or state events also are honored if prior notification is given from the government.

Ramsey said the flags are flown at half-mast with markers that state for whom the flags are honoring.

"It is possible for anyone to request flags to be flown at half-mast in honor of an event or individual," he said.

Requests should be made by sending a letter to the vice president of student affairs or to the provost, Ramsey said.

Everett said he believes many students are not aware of this policy and said that honoring JFK should have been expected and not requested.

Ramsey said the assassination anniversary has not been honored in the past and said neither has many other historical and political events.

"Many presidents have holidays celebrated in their honor, and a large number of people in history have contributed," he said. "We have not flown the flags at half-mast for them."

Matt Molina, a junior public relations major from South Lake, said he believes that, with the large amount of media attention given to the event, some form of memorial should occur on campus.

"It should be done out of basic respect for the fact that our president was shot 30 years ago today, " he said.

Anna Herndon, a junior political science major from Richardson, said she believes some people consider his death to be a part of the past that should be forgotten.

"It happened, and I think it affected everyone," she said. "It was a great leader that we lost."

Ramsey said if an organization had requested flags to be flown at half-mast in honor of JFK's assassination, it would have been considered.

Students uneasy about records check

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The fall semester is wrapping up for the first freshmen class admitted to St. Augustine's College under a requirement that students submit their hometown police records before they can even be considered.

Some students are uneasy with the records check; others welcome the effort to keep crime off campus after a year that saw one student shot dead, a child wounded outside a campus gym and four students robbed in their dorm room by a masked man.

But civil libertarians are stirring, saying the requirement is humiliating and particularly discriminates against black men. The enrollment of the small downtown college is historically black.

MMR clinic extended

The mumps, measles and rubella vaccination clinic being offered in Texas Tech's University Center has been extended until Wednesday.

The clinic, located in the old Faculty Club, is open from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. After Wednesday students will have to go to Student Health Services, located in Thompson Hall, to receive the vaccination.

Student Health Services officials will begin sending out non-compliance letters to students who have not adhered to the new regulation after this week.

Thanksgiving's here — do you know the real story?

LARA M. CAMPBELL

It's that time of year again. That time of year when the malls are packed and nerves are tested.

Tomorrow most of us will be traveling on crowded highways and airports on what is one of the busiest travel days of the year. Thanksgiving is the beginning of the holiday season, but few of us since grade school have been reminded of the origins and meaning behind the holiday.

What is important to remember is that from the moment the English settlers landed at Plymouth, they were intruders. They took land that did not belong to them. Worst of all, they killed the people who had been on that land for centuries.

In her book Massachusetts, Nancy Zaroulis describes the first "Thanksgiving."

It is a bittersweet tale.

Unlike what some think, the original celebration was not a celebration of a good harvest. How many crops do you think were growing in New England in the winter?

The Native Americans and the English sat down together to give thanks for a treaty between the two groups. Although the colonists were strapped for food, the natives and the foreigners joined together in a feast to celebrate their friendship. It was a celebration of survival, at least for the settlers.

The Native Americans taught the settlers how to cope with the harsh winters, how to plant crops that would grow (almost all the crops the settlers brought over died) and how to hunt and trap the animals of the region.

Basically, the natives showed them how to survive in a foreign land.

But, because the natives and the settlers were not united, less than ten years later, they were warring again.

So what exactly is Thanksgiving?

I don't think anyone believes we gather to celebrate the friendship between the Native Americans and the settlers. That ended ages ago.

During the past 300 hundred years, Americans have lost touch with our roots, and we refuse to look back at the European invasion for what it was — a violation. Europeans started on the east coast and slowly, during the next three centuries, moved across the continent with no regard for the rights of the natives.

Today Thanksgiving, for many Americans, is a time to give thanks to their God. It is a time to remember those who have nothing and be thankful for one's own fortune.

This Thanksgiving, take a moment during the day to remember those whose lands were stripped away from them, and remember that not everyone has something for which to be thankful.

Strikers didn't dampen bowl-bound spirit

JAMES DAVID

It all started when I received my plane tickets to San Antonio from the student publications office. I couldn't help but notice that the flights were booked on American Airlines, fully realizing they were threatening to strike during game week.

However, our astute student publications secretary, Mary, assured me and our illustrious photographer, Walter Granberry, that we would have alternate booking arrangements in the unlikely (or so we thought) event that American would cancel our flights. Well, Saturday came and we were at the airport on time. Walter looked up at the flight monitors and told me the dreaded words that I didn't want to hear — our flight had been canceled!

So, we began the process of switching everything over to Delta, and our alternate reservations came in handy. Unfortunately, though, we weren't able to leave Lubbock until almost 3 p.m., and we had a puddle-jumper prop airplane to contend with.

Oh well, to make a long story short, we finally got to the Alamodome — five minutes prior to kickoff. The only bad thing was getting up at 4 a.m Sunday for our return flight. Hey, ya' gotta love being a sports writer, right ?

The game was great, needless to say. The offense and the defense played like the team of preseason expectations, controlling every aspect of the game from start to finish, even our second stringers had no problem dominating the hapless Cougars. The Tech fans who stayed to watch Bam Morris get the all-time Southwest Conference single season rushing record were well rewarded with exciting football all the way around. The jubilant celebration in the Tech locker room after the game was capped with the Hancock Bowl official congratulating the team's return from a 1-5 start, ending what is one of the most remarkable turnarounds in Southwest Conference football history. Tech only has to wait until Thanksgiving evening to see who will win the Texas-Texas A&M matchup to find out when and where they play. If A&M wins, the odds are on a Christmas Eve matchup against USC, Colorado or Oklahoma, in the Hancock Bowl in El Paso.

There is really something special about this team's rise from the dead.

After starting out 1-5, most people didn't think Tech would bounce back. They did, showing everybody that if you don't quit on yourself, good things can happen. For the Tech supporters who stayed behind the team all year, they will now be rewarded with their first bowl game since 1989. National exposure can only help this team across the board, financially and with recruiting.

The defense has been improving every week since the bad start, and most of the defensive squad will be back next season.

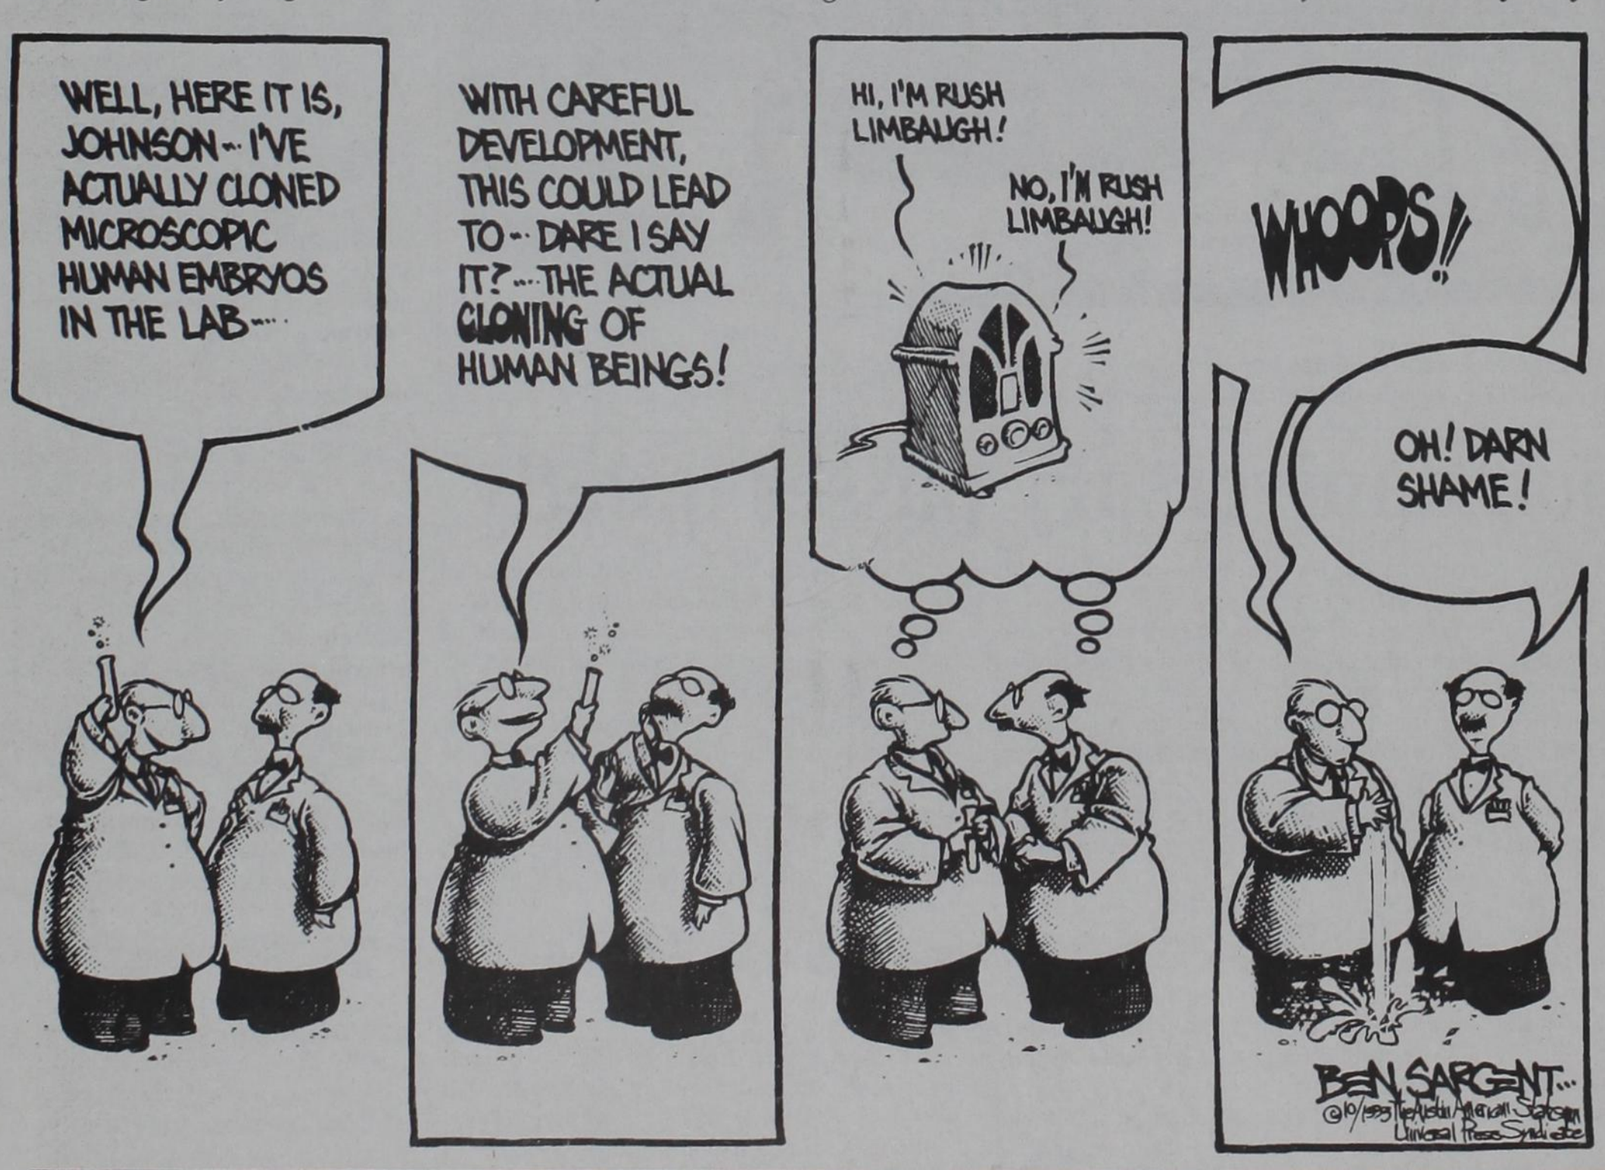

Coach Spike Dykes gives credit for the team's dramatic turnaround to the leadership of the teams seniors. "They have really been a special group of guys," Dykes said.

The Southwest Conference has been much maligned this season, and it would seem to put more pressure on the SWC teams to win in their respective bowl games.

Dykes agrees that the conference has to make a good showing in the bowls.

No matter which bowl game Tech goes to, give support and credit to a group of players and coaches who refused to die.

OFFICES NOT TO BLAME

To the editor:

In response to your editorial Nov. 10 regarding the poorly organized medical practices:

I agree with you that a visit to a doctor can be frustrating. However, I worked in the medical field for 10 years before coming to work at Tech. The main problem I have with your editorial is that like most people, you blame the business office personnel for the problems you face when seeing the doctor. I worked for a clinic that had 16 doctors when I left. Most doctors schedule at least one patient every 15 minutes. That's 32 patients a day times 16 doctors for a low estimate of 512 patients per day. Add to that charges for hospital patients visited during the early morning and late at night, plus extra patients seen daily for those doctors who booked two and three patients every 15 minutes and any emergency visits — we could have in excess of 700 patients to enter charges and payments on daily. Each patient would have anywhere from two to 32 charges on each visit. I spent numerous hours trying to decipher doctors' handwriting so that I could be sure the correct codes were used so that the insurance (company) wouldn't reject the claim. On top of daily charges, we had to file insurance claims, answer phones, deal with irate patients regarding their bills, answer correspondence, refile claims — the list goes on. Most of our insurance problems came from people like you who resent having to fill out forms. Most forms are barely legible, not to mention loaded with incomplete information. But this is not to be blamed on the poor, innocent patient. We're supposed to be able to read minds and know the correct insurance company and all the corresponding numbers. Ms. Casey, office personnel do not make the rules, but they must enforce them. If you think they enjoy digging through all your paperwork, think again. Our office employed only nine persons. I must point out that the vast majority of doctors each have one person for insurance and one person for bookkeeping. That put us 23 persons short to deal with those 512 patients a day. But try to suggest to a doctor to hire more staff. That would cut into his precious profit. I dealt with numerous patients that came to the business office to complain about the high prices. I told many of them to talk to the doctor since he set the prices, but the response was always the same: "Oh no, I couldn't upset him. He's wonderful." Most office clerks barely make minimum wage. Believe me, it's easy to get a bad attitude fast, but we always tried to be courteous and polite.

Don't get me wrong, some doctors treat their staffs like royalty, but that's the exception, not the norm.

Please have a little more compassion for the little people behind the scenes that know very well what you're going through. They are not privy to the free lunches the doctors and nurses get weekly — only to all the complaints about how bad things are. Next time you visit the doctor, try saying "Thanks" to the business office staff. They've earned it and would greatly appreciate it.

WRONG RESPONSE

To the editor:

Mr. Matt Jordan's response (Nov. 22) to Gene Biringer's column (Nov. 18) in The University Daily, deserves comment. The topic of both was meat production and consumption, and Mr. Jordan voiced some common misconceptions about environmental issues associated with raising cattle. Aside from the fact that Biringer is a faculty member of the School of Music at TTU and Mr. Jordan claims to have practical experience on West Texas ranches, Biringer's account was the more accurate portrayal of many facts. I believe that I am qualified to make such a great statement, because I was raised on a dairy and beef cattle production farm, and have since gained degrees in botany, zoology, biology and ecology.

Mr. Jordan correctly notes that it is unethical (and foolish) to destroy the environment upon which ranchers and farmers depend on making a living. However, few can argue that without a profit, ranches and farms would cease to operate. In fact, many owners of farms and ranches across the USA were forced into bankruptcy during the past decade. Such financial realities have long fostered non-sustainable agriculture practices in this country (and elsewhere). Clearly, farmers and ranchers must balance immediate and long-term considerations, and may not have the luxury of utilizing the most conservative of environmentally sound practices. If this were not true, the U.S. Department of Agriculture would not have found it necessary to implement the Conservation Reserve Program to reduce crop production on unsuitable lands.

Mr. Jordan also is mistaken in his beliefs that grazing is generally good for the land and vegetation, that there is little evidence that beef cattle are hazards to the environment and that overgrazing and desertification account for a very small percentage of the land in this country. These "facts" are grossly oversimplified and misrepresent reality. Such statements often are reported by organizations representing beef producers and associated industries, but are not true for most of our country's native ecosystems.

Mr. Jordan's letter ends on a gracious note, stating his respect for different opinions yet questioning Biringer's knowledge of the topic. Ironically, I must make the same statement regarding Mr. Jordan's qualifications and suggest that interested parties obtain as many facts as possible before forming opinions. To this end, I'd be happy to direct interested students to relevant scientific publications or to one of the many appropriate classes available on campus.

High Rider grievance under investigation

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A grievance filed by pregnant High Rider Jennifer Arbuckle is under investigation by Texas Tech's Dean of Students Office, said Trudy Putteet, the associate dean of students who is charging the investigation.

"I am still gathering copies of the relevant documents and talking to the folks involved," Putteet said.

Arbuckle was told by High Riders officers three weeks ago that because she was pregnant, she was in direct contradiction with their moral and Christian Standards policies, and therefore could not wear her High Riders letters or jersey in public.

High Riders is a spirit organization whose members support the men and women's athletic programs and support the university.

According to the High Riders constitution, a member must have "a positive attitude, high moral standards and a sense of responsibility."

Arbuckle said that, in the High Riders executive board's opinion, she no longer met those qualifications because she was pregnant and unmarried.

High Riders officers told Arbuckle, however, that she could still attend internal functions, such as Big Sis/Little Sis activities. Although Arbuckle withdrew from Tech Nov. 11, she said she filed the grievance because High Riders officers refused to amend the Standards Policy so that it could not be used in a discriminatory manner.

"The last time I heard anything, the Dean of Students Office called and said they had received my grievance and had started an investigation," Arbuckle said. "If I don't hear anything from them by the middle of December I am going to call them back and find out what is happening.

"But I have faith in the system at Tech, and I know that it will be handled in the proper fashion," she said.

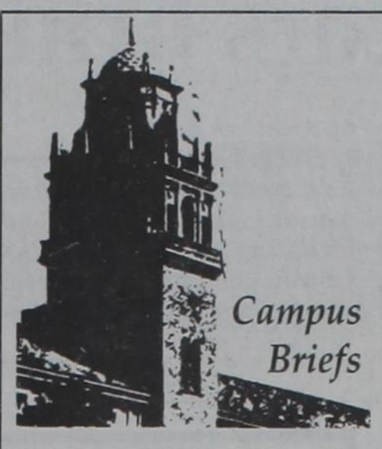

Dean of Students Michael Shonrock said his office is following proper procedures for investigating a student's grievance.

"We'll be contacting the individuals involved and following up through the Student Organizations Service Office and Tech's general counsel and, of course, we'll be speaking with the group involved," he said. "We are investigating all the bits and pieces."

Putteet said she does not know when the grievance will be resolved or if any action will be taken.

High Riders President Melissa Northcutt said she and two fellow officers informally met Monday to discuss the grievance procedure.

"After this gets under way, we will probably make some kind of formal statement," she said.

KKK grand dragon sentenced to six months in jail

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge Monday sentenced grand dragon Michael Lowe of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan to six months in jail for refusing to turn over records in an investigation of efforts to run black people out of the East Texas town of Vidor.

State District Judge John Dietz said Lowe could purge himself of the 26 counts of contempt of court by giving a list of certain members and other information sought by the Texas Commission on Human Rights. But citing his constitutional right to freedom of speech, he said he would go to jail to protect the information.

"I will never betray the trust of anybody who joined the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan," Lowe said.

Lowe also told reporters they should be concerned about the court seeking to force release of information.

"What is threatening to me should be threatening to you as journalists. The state should have no right to get those names," he said, adding that he knew of no one in his organization who had broken laws.

Dietz ordered Lowe to pay $500 and serve six months on each contempt count, with the jail terms all to be served at the same time.

A Service Provided by South Park HOSPITAL
Quaker Avenue & South Loop 289 • 791-8262

The Childbirth Network is a community service, designed to help you receive quality prenatal care and education early in your pregnancy, and to continue throughout your pregnancy. You'll receive personal service from dedicated professional staff members who will assist you in choosing a private physician to care for you and your baby's needs. Free pregnancy testing as well as classes in childbirth, recovery, and parenting are all part of the Childbirth Network services.

Our 24 Hour Childbirth Helpline - 791-8262 - is staffed by caring, licensed health care professionals, who can answer your questions or help you with your concerns at any time. When you need a little extra help, or a little extra support, don't hesitate to call the Childbirth Network. Our services are available at no cost and are designed just for you.

Magician of 20 years brings bag of tricks to Lubbock

by LARA M. CAMPBELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

If you happen to see a few Lubbock landmarks disappear on Dec. 2, don't be surprised.

The man who has made elephants, airplanes and the Statue of Liberty disappear will perform in Lubbock Dec. 2.

David Copperfield will perform shows at 5:30 and 8:30 p.m. at the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium.

Copperfield, who has been referred to as one of the greatest magicians of all time, is currently on a nationwide tour.

He has been thrilling audiences for almost 20 years with such magic feats as vanishing airplanes, levitating across the Grand Canyon, going over Niagara Falls and walking through the Great Wall of China.

At the age of 12, Copperfield became the youngest person ever admitted into the Society of American Magicians. In the Chicago musical "The Magic Man," he sang, danced, acted and created all the magic in the show, which was the longest running musical in Chicago's history.

Copperfield has even assisted other artists, including singer Michael Jackson. He helped design illusions and special effects for Jackson's "Dangerous" tour.

"It was an exciting project," Copperfield said. "Michael is at the very top of his field. I use music to enhance my magic; Michael used magic to enhance his music. It was great."

In addition to performing magic feats, Copperfield has used his craft to help others.

He has designed Project Magic, a rehabilitative program designed to strengthen dexterity and motor skills in disabled patients through the use of simple sleight-of-hand magic.

"It motivates a patient's therapy and helps build self esteem," Copperfield.

For his Lubbock shows, he will attempt live morphing, as well as several new tricks.

Williams up to par in new role

(AP)—When Robin Williams appears in material befitting his lightning wit ("Good Morning, Vietnam," "Aladdin"), he can be deliriously funny. When he is burdened with lesser stuff ("Hook," "Toys"), the luster fades. It is a pleasure to report that "Mrs. Doubtfire" ranks as prime Robin Williams.

Explosive comedy stems from the premise that an estranged husband, with makeup, wig and padding, could masquerade as a doughty English nanny and fool his wife and children. It takes a real artist to pull it off—Williams qualifies.

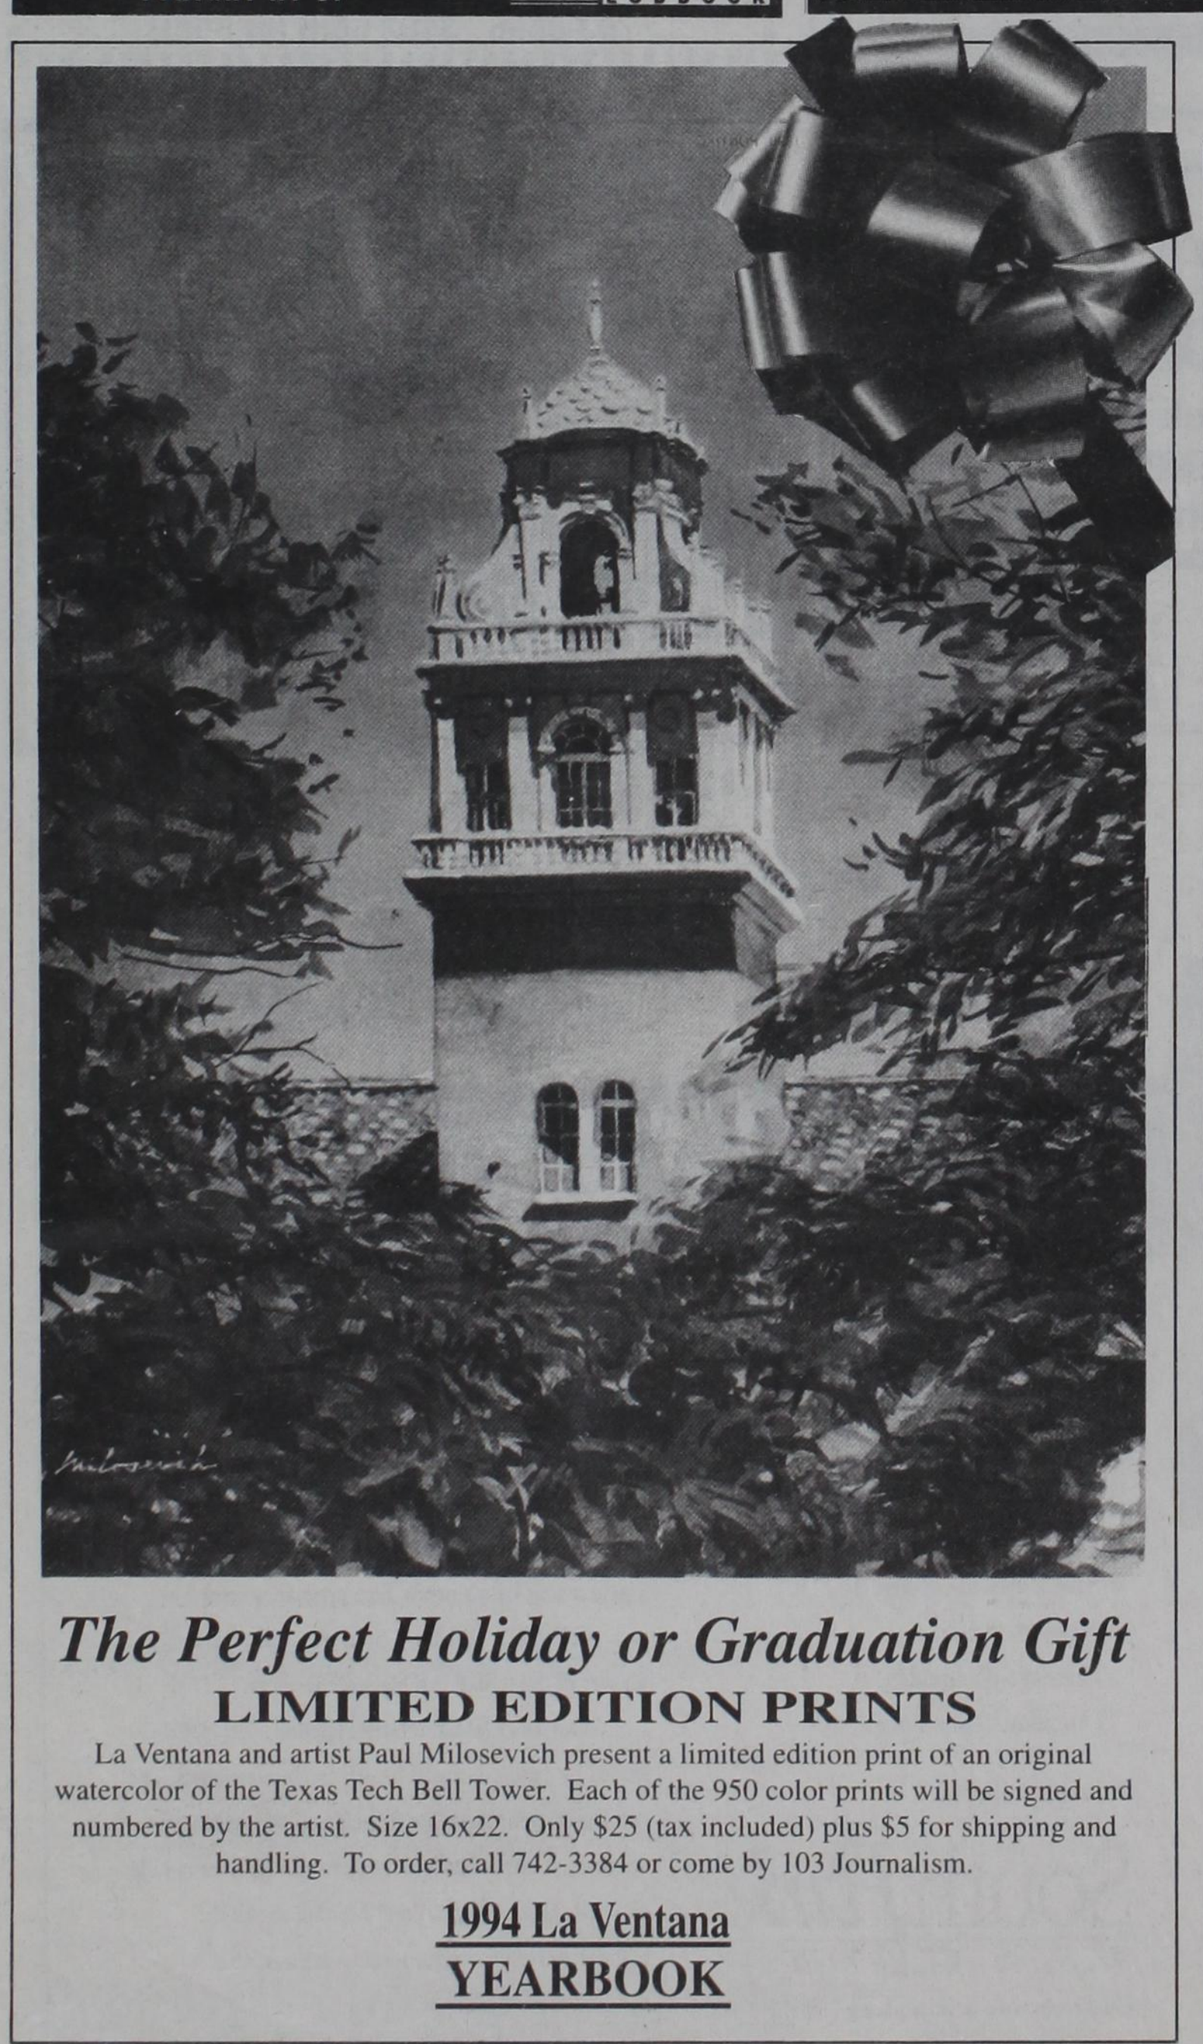

His wife, Sally Field, a successful interior designer, rails at his irresponsibility.

She wins a divorce. When Williams blows his visitation rights, he can see only one solution: hire on as housekeeper-nanny. With makeup help from his gay brother, Harvey Fierstein, Williams becomes Mrs. Doubtfire.

The transformation is miraculous. Mrs. Doubtfire has a sweet manner but tart tongue And when Field is wooed by a rich client, Pierce Brosnan, Mrs. Doubtfire becomes a tiger.

Robin Williams gives free rein to all his comedic powers. Sally Field matches him ideally and Brosnan is properly charming.

The excellent script by Randi Mayem Singer and Leslie Dixon was based on the book "Alias Madame Doubtfire" by Anne Fine.

Character helps spur win streak

LEN HAYWARD

Well, Texas Tech has done it.

The Red Raiders came back from what appeared to be insurmountable odds to win their last five games and finished the regular season with a 6-5 record.

Just six weeks ago, many thought the season was a goner, but the Raiders knew something that no one else did.

Whatever you want to say about this team, it had one thing that most teams would have lost during a similar bad stretch: character.

That character emanated from 27 seniors, who were redshirt freshmen the last time Tech went to a bowl game. Now the Raiders have fulfilled a team goal and are over .500 for the first time since 1991.

But what also helped was the schedule, which played in favor of the Raiders. No team Tech faced in the last six weeks of the season had a better than .500 record.

Some pundits might discount Tech's win streak against these less-than-impressive foes, but the Raiders handled each team like they were much better than their 1-5 record would indicate. Tech scored near or more than 40 points per game in those last five wins. Also, the defense began to gel. The Raiders forced 19 takeaways, while holding opponents to less than 400 total yards in each of those five games.

Still, some troubling questions linger.

Where, for example, was the character of this team during the first six games. Tech held double-digit leads against both Baylor and North Carolina State in the fourth quarter, only to lose both games.

The Raiders had 75,000 Nebraska fans stunned on a warm September day in Lincoln, Neb., but it was mistakes that took that one away.

Tech had trouble adjusting to the grass at Sanford Stadium in Georgia, but made a valiant comeback only to lose that one, too.

Now here it is six weeks after a tough last-second loss to the Wolfpack on Oct. 9, and the Raiders own a 6-5 record and a possible bowl berth.

Frankly, however, this team did not live up to expectations.

This was the same team, after all, that senior leadership was maybe going to propel to the Cotton Bowl. Instead, Tech will likely end up second in the conference for the third straight year.

The big question facing this program is when will it get over the hump? Twenty-seven seniors helped Tech to five wins in the last six weeks, but just like that they will be gone. Most of the receiving corps will leave, the quarterback will be gone and most of the offensive line has finished their eligibility.

Still, one of the strangest Tech football seasons is almost over, and much of the support that was lost during the 1-5 stretch was gained back with a convincing win Saturday in San Antonio. This was a good season in many respects because records fell, but also because during the five-game streak players were concerned more about wins than about individual accomplishments.

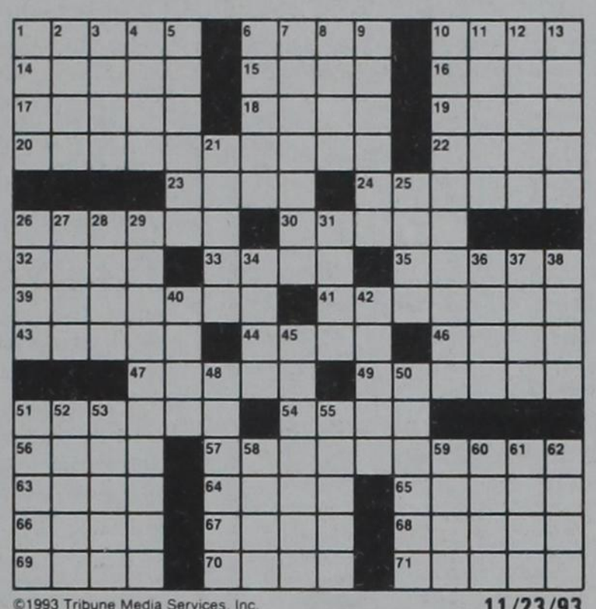

Should a team have to bottom out before it makes its run?

For the Raiders apparently so, and as a result, they appear ready to puncuate their bizarre season with a bowl berth.

For that, congratulations are in order. But, memories of what could have been will linger on for years to come.

Clark signs with Texas

ARLINGTON (AP) — Will Clark, unable to work out a long-term deal with San Francisco Giants, agreed to a $30 million, five-year contract with the Texas Rangers on Monday.

The deal means Rafael Palmiero, the other top free agent hitter available, probably will leave Texas to sign elsewhere. Both are first basemen.

Clark, who finished a $15 million, four-year deal this season, visited the Baltimore Orioles last weekend but his lawyer and agent, Jeff Moorad, couldn't work out a deal despite extensive talks.

Lady Raiders find identity after victory

by LEN HAYWARD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Before Texas Tech's 74-67 defeat of No. 2 Vanderbilt Saturday, the No. 14 Lady Raiders were searching for some sort of an identity.

The win Saturday at the Inaugural Hall of Fame Tipoff Classic in Jackson, Tenn., helped to identify the 1993-94 version of Tech.

"Oh, definitely," senior forward Janice Farris said before Monday's workout. "We proved that we could win after losing the three people from last season."

Farris was speaking of Sheryl Swoopes, Krista Kirkland and Cynthia Clinger, who were the seniors on last year's national championship team.

Farris scored 15 points Saturday, hitting five of seven shots from the field, along with two rebounds. Farris fell just short of the record for consecutive free throws with 24 straight dating back to last season.

"We've come down off our high a little bit," the senior from Lubbock Monterey said. "Like I told the guy with the newspaper there, 'We are used to being the underdog.'"

The Lady Raiders continue their season Wednesday in the first game of a doubleheader with the Tech men.

The Tech women start at 6 p.m., with the Raider men following at 8 p.m. Both teams will play the national teams from Latvia.

But Saturday the regular season begins again for the Lady Raiders, who will face their sixth consecutive ranked opponent, the Stanford Lady Cardinal.

Farris

"We have to stay focused for this game Wednesday," Farris said. "But against Stanford we have to execute like we did against Vanderbilt. We just have to do what coach (Marsha) Sharp tells us."

Saturday's game against Stanford will start at 2 p.m., with it being televised by ESPN2. KJAK-FM 92.7 will broadcast the game.

Tech forward Connie Robinson led the team in scoring against the Lady Commodores with 18 points and eight rebounds, while sophomore post Michi Atkins added 15 points.

Nine different players saw action against Vanderbilt, with seven of those playing 20 minutes or more.

"It is a big plus for us," Farris said of Tech's depth. "We have a lot of talent on this team and everybody has to pick up where they left off on the court."

Lady Raider notes

• At Saturday's Stanford game, the 1992-93 National Championship banner will be dropped prior to the game.

• The game with the Lady Cardinal will be on ESPN2, which marks the eighth consecutive appearance for a Lady Raider team on television, dating back to the 1993 Southwest Conference Post-Season Classic Championship game. The previous streak for television appearances was three during the 1991-92 season.

• It's inevitable that Connie Robinson and Sheryl Swoopes will be compared this season. So, just how did each fare in their first Lady Raider outing. Swoopes scored 14 points, hitting 5 of 15 from the field, with seven rebounds, two assists, six turnovers and eight steals in a 69-45 win over Memphis State. Robinson, playing against a team ranked No. 1 in some polls and No. 2 in others, had 18 points, hitting 7 of 19 from the floor, eight rebounds, one steal, two blocks and seven turnovers.

Tech ends exhibition season against Latvia

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech men's basketball team will end its two-game exhibition season Wednesday at 8 p.m. against the Latvian National team.

The Red Raiders are coming off of a 108-71 thumping of Fort Sill this past Saturday and are 5-0 in exhibition games under coach James Dickey.

The game is the second half of a doubleheader, with the Lady Raiders opening up at 6 p.m in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Dickey said Saturday that freshmen Brock Barnes and Jason Hamm will likely be redshirted this season.

Neither player saw playing time against Fort Sill on Saturday.

Joining the team after final exams will be junior college transfer Bernard Lloyd, who is joining the team after passing the TASP test and regaining his academic eligibility.

Dickey said he is expecting Lloyd to make an immediate contribution in the Brigham Young game on Dec. 17.

That particular will be televised on ESPN from Provo, Utah.

"We're looking forward to having Bernard in the lineup," Dickey said.

"I'm really proud of Bernard. A lot of guys would have taken the easier way out and gone to a lesser division. He did what he had to do keep his commitment to play for Texas Tech."

Dickey said that it's unfortunate that NCAA Proposition 48 has a lot of athletes stereotyped.

"I admire and respect someone who can do what he has done," Dickey said.

The Raiders will be spending their Thanksgiving holiday helping those less fortunate than them.

The team will be serving lunch to needy families and individuals from 10 a.m.-1 p.m. at the Mary & Mac Private School at 902 E. 28th Street and at the Lubbock Housing Authority on 515 N. Zenith Ave.

After their charity work, the team will resume workouts in preparation for the regular season opener against Arkansas State at 7 p.m. Monday in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Aikman, Smith still trying to heal from injuries

IRVING (AP) — Emmitt Smith could barely walk, let alone run, at Valley Ranch on Monday. But quarterback Troy Aikman has healed enough to start for the Dallas Cowboys on Thanksgiving Day against the Miami Dolphins.

"The flexibility is not there," said Smith of his severely bruised right thigh. "But I don't have the pain I did yesterday."

Smith's thigh was heavily bandaged after he received ice treatments for the blood which had filled the damaged muscle.

Smith was injured in Sunday's 27-14 loss to the Atlanta Falcons. Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said, "Emmitt is doubtful. He won't practice this week. I've got hope but I truly don't expect him to play. After what I saw this morning, I wouldn't expect him to play."

Johnson said Derrick Lassic and Lincoln Coleman will get all the snaps in practice this week, although Johnson added that "I won't rule Emmitt out until a few minutes before kickoff. He's one of those players who don't have to practice to play."

Aikman, who has missed the last two games, said his pulled hamstring was still "a little tender."

But, he said, "I'm confident I can go without worrying about it tearing or anything. I'm not confident I can take off in a scramble and outrun people. I have to be smart about it.

"Of course, for me to say I'm not going to scramble is easy to say. I just hope I have it in mind not to do it during the game."

Aikman said he believes the hamstring, which pulled in the third quarter of a 31-9 victory over the New York Giants, is related to his back problems. He underwent surgery in June to repair a herniated disc.

"I think it has something to do with the back and I'm going to have the back checked out," Aikman said.

Tech spikers prepare for tournament

by TARA HEARLIHY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Instead of going home for the Thanksgiving holidays, the Texas Tech women's volleyball team will finish out the 1993 season in the Albuturkey Classic in Albuquerque, N.M.

The Red Raiders, who have a 13-14 overall record and a 3-7 mark in the Southwest Conference, will play New Mexico (14-10) at 8 p.m. on Friday.

Tech will also take on Arizona (16-9) at noon Saturday, and Alabama-Birmingham (20-15) at 6 p.m. on Saturday.

"Last year when we went it wasn't as bad," junior setter Ginger carter said of their Thanksgiving trip last year to Stockton, Calif. "We were looking at going to the NCAA. Now there is just nothing to really look forward to."

Carter said the enthusiasm of the team is not as high this year.

"At practice (Monday) things seemed kind of low," she said. "There wasn't as much enthusiasm, but we will realize it is our last time and our last showing and things will be better."

Tech played in the SWC Tournament in Lubbock this weekend, losing in four games in the second round to Texas, which beat Houston to win the tournament. The Lady Longhorns are ranked No. 1 in the country in the Volleyball Monthly poll.

"We feel really good about the weekend and the way we played," Carter said. "Our confidence is up after beating Texas in a game. We played really well."

The Raiders beat Baylor 3-1 on Friday in the first round of the tourney.

Senior middle blocker Erica Ruegg was named to the All-SWC Tournament team and was a member of the All-SWC second team.

Carter said she expects tough competition in the Albuturkey tournament.

"Arizona is good," she said. "They beat Stanford and UCLA. They are a very strong team. New Mexico is going to the NCAA tournament. They are a tough team."

New Mexico returns three starters from last year's fourth-place team in the Western Athletic Conference. Arizona also has three returning starters. The Wildcats finished eighth in the PAC 10.

Wendy Huber, outside hitter for Alabama-Birmingham, is a top returner for the Blazers.
