South Africa warns of tougher measures

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government closed hundreds of schools Friday in townships around Cape Town, and said it would impose tougher measures there to quell a surge of rioting against white rule.

Questions arose about the health of Nelson Mandela, the black leader who has been in prison for more than 20 years for plotting sabotage. The prison service said only that he was examined Thursday by a urologist.

A lawyer for Mandela's wife, Winnie, said she was "frantic with worry" and wanted a family doctor to see her husband. The lawyer, Ismail Ayob, said Mrs. Mandela was "not reassured at all by this bland statement" from the prison service and he would seek a court order Monday for an independent examination.

A spokesman for the prison service said just before midnight Friday, "If a request is received for special visits or medical purposes it would be considered." Mrs. Mandela gets 30 visits per year, and five special visits.

Mandela, 67, "was in very good health" Aug. 9, the last time his wife visited him, the lawyer said, and Ayob had been assured after a similar examination three months ago that he did not suffer from kidney problems.

South Africa's battered currency, the rand, slipped again on currency markets. The government indicated it might lengthen a four-month moratorium it declared on repayment of prinicpal on loans from American, British and European banks.

The rand's difficulties reflect international concern after a year of racial violence in which more than 650 people have been killed, nearly all of them black.

Along with continued rioting in the black and mixed-race suburbs of Cape Town, violence also was reported Friday near the Indian Ocean port of Durban. Police fired shotguns and rubber bullets to disperse crowds of stone-throwing black students in Durban, according to witness Phillip Mzobe, a high school principal.

In Cape Town, 600 miles down the coast, police said they opened fire on three men who threw gasoline bombs at the home of Dennis de la Cruz, a member of the mixed-race legislative chamber established last year. They said one was wounded and all were arrested. No one in the house was hurt, police said.

Mixed-race and Asian politicians who were elected to the legislative bodies established for those minorities have been attacked as sellouts by blacks.

Police say 31 people have been killed and hundreds wounded since Aug. 28 in rioting around Cape Town against apartheid, which guarantees supremacy for South Africa's 5 million whites and denies the vote to 24 million blacks.

Closing the schools locks out about 360,000 students of mixed race, who are called coloreds in South Africa. A government official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said riots around the schools made it impossible to guarantee the safety of students and teachers.

Teacher: Rejections lowered self-esteem

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 61-year-old Midland teacher who was passed over several times in her ambition to become an administrator in the Midland Independent School District testified in federal court Friday that the rejections had caused her self-esteem to plummet.

"I didn't want to get up in the morning. I didn't want to go to work," said Dorothy Johnston, a sixth-grade teacher at De Zavala Elementary School. "This was completely unlike me. I enjoy my work."

The teacher, who described herself as energetic and "more qualified" for the principal's position and other administrative posts than others, is suing the school district, trustees, Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi and former Human Resources Director Ronald Whitmore in a sex- and age-discrimination lawsuit.

She has been in the Midland school district since 1973 and was president of the 400-member Midland Educators Association, which is an affiliate of the Texas State Teachers Association, a teachers union, in the 1982-83 school year. Mrs. Johnston chaired a Teacher Burn-Out and Morale Committee. She lives in Odessa. TSTA Austin lawyers Craig Deats and Linda Farin are representing her in the litigation.

In her apparent depression, Mrs. Johnston said her physician "offered me some Valium (a tranquilizer), but I would not take it...I do not believe in taking this kind of medication."

MRS. JOHNSTON, who holds a bachelor's degree in home economics and social studies and a master's degree in elementary education and reading, testified she was thwarted in several attempts to break into administrative work here since 1976. Between then and 1981, she was turned aside for such jobs as coordinator of the Carver Cultural Center for gifted and talented children, as assistant principal of Midland Freshman School, coordinator of kindergarten, principal of Pease Elementary School and director of migrant and federal programs. Those who were selected for promotion included both men and woman in their 30s and early 40s.

"I feel like I'm fully qualified," she testified. "I feel I have the qualifications and ability to be a principal."

The case is to be resumed at 9 a.m. Tuesday in federal court in Midland. Federal Judge Lucius D. Bunton is presiding over the case, which is being decided by a two-man, four-woman jury.

The thrust of Mrs. Johnston's teaching career in Midland has been in remedial reading and other elementary school teaching.

Mrs. Johnston characterized her "leadership style" as "democratic...and should include teachers...because they in the final analysis are going to be involved."

Mrs. Johnston said she has wanted to be an administrator since the late 1960s, when she received an administrative certificate while in graduate school.

"I would one day like to be a principal, so when the day came, I would be ready."

SINCE THE mid-1940s, her teaching experience has been in high school reading, kindergarten, first grade and remedial reading. She said evaluations of her work have been "above average," and that in the 1981-82 school year, she received a Performance-Base Salary Supplement (PPSS).

DC-9 jet crashes in Milwaukee, killing 31 people

Officials stand amid burned wreckage from a Midwest Express Airlines DC-9, which crashed Friday in Milwaukee, killing all 31 people aboard.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A DC-9 jetliner crashed and burned in a wooded area Friday moments after it took off from Mitchell Field and the pilot reported "I have an emergency." All 31 people aboard were killed.

"The aircraft was demolished-...Nothing was left of the airplane at all," said Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Marjorie Kriz in Chicago.

The crash of Midwest Express Airlines Flight 105, which originated in Madison, Wis., and was bound for Atlanta, added to a death toll of more than 1,400 that has made 1985 the worst year for fatalities in civilian aviation history.

Witnesses said the two-engine plane seemed to roll twice about 1,000 feet above the ground shortly after taking off in clear, sunny skies, then headed to earth nose-first where it burst into flames about a half-mile south of the runway.

There was no immediate indication what caused the accident.

Airline spokesman Jose Oller said 31 people were aboard the plane, which is designed to hold up to 60 people. He said the plane's flight recorder had been recovered.

Oller said most passengers got on in Milwaukee and he believed 10 were employees of Kimberly-Clark Corp., parent firm for K-C Aviation Inc., owner of Midwest Express.

Three victims were from Madison and the rest from Milwaukee, said Oller, adding that a list of those killed would not be released until families of all the victims could be contacted.

"The service is used frequently by Kimberly-Clark employees," said Kimberly-Clark spokeswoman Tina Barry from corporate headquarters in Irving, Texas.

At the crash site on the edge of the Michael Cudahy Forest Preserve, trees were scorched and part of a wing lay near charred debris. The smell of jet fuel was heavy in the muggy air.

The Rev. Joseph B. Frederick, a priest who walked through the smoking wreckage to administer the last rites, said the pilot died clutching the jet's controls to bring it out of the dive.

"All I could do was offer a prayer for them...commend them to God," said the Rev. Karl Acker, pastor at nearby St. Alexander's Roman Catholic church, who also went to the site shortly after the crash.

"There is nothing we could have done if we had been there right on the scene," said Richard Seelen, assistant Milwaukee fire chief. "It was total devastation."

Ms. Kriz said there were 26 passengers, four crew members and one person sitting in a jumpseat. That person "could have been from the airline, or the FAA, or the NTSB (National Transportation Safety Board), but was not a passenger," she said. Initial reports had put the number aboard as high as 40.

Mort Edelstein, a spokesman for the FAA in Chicago, said the plane took off at 3:25 p.m. and was flying across the airport boundary when the pilot called the tower.

"I have an emergency," Edelstein quoted the pilot as saying.

Midlander gets nine years for sexual assault

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A 17-year-old Midland youth was sentenced to nine years in prison Friday for sexually assaulting a 6-year-old girl who attended the small church where he was pastor.

After his sentencing, Abed Munoz said he might give up preaching but would continue to be involved in religious activities: "I will try to help the youth, especially."

A six-man, six-woman jury which had needed less than half an hour Thursday to find Munoz guilty deliberated more than six hours over his punishment Friday.

"I'm begging you for Mr. Munoz — let him have a chance," defense attorney Richard Alvarado told the jury, requesting probation for his client. But Assistant District Attorney Tom Morgan asked for the maximum 20 years.

"Abed Munoz preyed on the one of the weakest members of our society, a 6-year-old girl," he said. "And this happened in a church, a house of God — how low can you go?"

According to a statement Munoz gave the Sheriff's Office after his arrest, he induced the girl to perform oral sex on him in a church April 25 because he was depressed, and "just wanted somebody to boss around."

After several minutes, Munoz began to feel guilty and told the girl to stop without ever having achieved an erection, according to the statement, which was read into evidence Thursday.

The girl had testified Thursday by using two dolls, representing her and Munoz, to show the jury and 142nd District Judge Pat Baskin what had happened in the church that evening.

Defense witnesses testified not about the incident but about the girl's name, which was spelled very differently on the indictment than on her birth certificate. Alvarado claimed the names were so dissimilar they could not legally be considered the same, and said he plans to appeal the conviction on technical grounds.

Art Institute of Permian Basin officially open

■More local stories, Page 9C

From Staff Reports

ODESSA - The Art Institute of the Permian Basin will officially open to the public with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 11 a.m. today.

The Art Institute, located south of University of Texas of the Permian Basin on donated land at 4909 E. University, is the result of a 10-year effort that has seen numerous volunteers, including members of the Fiesta Del Arte Guild, the Odessa Art Association and the Odessa Junior League, dedicate endless hours to make the facility a reality.

Members of these three groups, as well as many private and corporate donors and sponsors, were honored for their contributions Friday night with a reception at the Art Institute. A grand opening of the facility is planned for Nov. 14, during which each of the institute's contributors will be recognized.

Funding for the institute came from a capital fund drive and the annual Fiesta Del Arte, which provided $1.5 million to cover construction costs as well as funds that will provide an endowment to support the institute. Fiesta Del Arte will continue to be a fund-raising benefit for the museum, which brings in about $60,000 annually.

Initially, plans call for the Art Institute to present traveling exhibitions, with as many as two each month. The first exhibits, scheduled to be open Sunday and remain on display until Oct. 13, will feature "Twentieth Century American Drawings," an exhibition of the Arkansas Arts Center's collection of unique works on paper by such notables as Andrew Wyeth, John Marin, Georgia O'Keefe, Thomas Hart Benton, Larry Rivers, Jim Dine and William DeKooning. Also to be exhibited will be "Western Landscapes" by Merrill Mahaffey, a contemporary Western realist, specializing in monumental landscapes and watercolors. This latter exhibition is made possible through the assistance of the Odessa Cultural Council.

The Art Institute contains 12,000 square feet, with two gallery areas, a sculpture garden, an auditorium, a museum shop, office area, shipping and receiving, two workshop areas and a storage area. The institute will be governed by a board of trustees.

Odessa mayor terms Presidio trip 'success'

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Mayor John Minor, one of seven business people and Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce representatives, termed Thursday's trip to Presidio and Ojinaga to explore establishment of trade relations "an outstanding success."

Minor said the group toured Presidio first, then were accompanied to Ojinaga, where they toured an industrial park being developed there near the river.

Minor and Chuck Bernhard, Odessa chamber industrial development vice president, said they viewed the bridge built between the two border cities, which Minor says will save about six hours travel time on trips between Odessa and Ojinaga because detours won't have to be made to border crossings at Del Rio and El Paso.

The only thing holding up use of the bridge now is construction of U.S. and Mexican customs offices. Mexican officials, Minor said, indicated they will have their facilities ready to open by the end of the year, while construction of U.S. Customs facilities are being delayed with no explanation given. It could be a year before the U.S. Customs offices are ready, although use of temporary facilities could expedite opening of this border crossing.

Bernhard said the welcome received on both sides of the border was very warm and the Odessa group received a lot of first hand information, much of which is slated to be discussed during a chamber retreat in Lubbock.

Minor said indications are that as Mexico continues to industrialize, there will be an increasing need for "machine technology and supply," and the Permian Basin is equipped to fill these needs.

The Odessa mayor said Mexican representatives are interested in establishing relations that would result in raw materials being shipped to Mexican plants, where raw materials would be turned into finished products and shipped back to the United States.

Bernhard said no deals were made, but the groundwork was laid for the beginning of a relationship in the future.

'White oil' judgment overruled

AUSTIN (AP) — District Judge Harley Clark on Friday overruled a motion for a judgment against "white oil" operators in the Panhandle Field and gave lawyers the weekend to prepare their final arguments.

Lawyers in the non-jury trial argued for five hours on preliminary motions, including what should be admitted into the record, before Clark called a halt to the proceedings.

The judge scheduled final arguments for Monday but said it was not likely that he would rule immediately on the case, which challenges a Railroad Commission order to retest white oil wells in the 1.5 million-acre Panhandle Field.

Both sides closed without calling any witnesses, after Clark refused to accept a motion that the operators had no cause of action.

The May order was considered a defeat for white oil operators, who use refrigeration, or LTX units, to chill vapor to a water-white liquid. The operators count the liquid as crude oil to meet the commission's oil well test of one barrel of oil to 100,000 cubic feet of gas.

Gas well operators, such as Phillips Petroleum Co., and the commission have noted there are advantages to classifying a well as an oil well rather than a gas well. An oil well can be drilled on 10 acres, a gas well on 640 acres. An oil well also is allowed to produce more gas than a gas well.

In many cases, too, operators own only the oil rights and could not produce at all if certain wells were reclassified as gas wells.

Following the commission ruling to retest the wells without figuring in the liquid produced by the LTX units, 10 independent operators appealed to state district court.

TEACHER

Mrs. Johnston is focusing her sex age discrimination claims on 1982 and 1983 when she was "passed over" four times for positions ranging from elementary school principal to assistant principal to administrative supervisor of the Carver Cultural Center.

Further, Mrs. Johnston claimed she "has consistently been passed over for promotion" within MISD "in favor of less qualified males and younger females." Ages of her successful competitors were in the 30s and 40s.

She indicated she was groomed for an administrative post by being in the MISD's Administrative Intern Program at Burnet Elementary School for 1982-83 but was not a successful candidate for a principalship or related post.

She testified that Burnet Principal Steve Cavender had suggested that she "drop out of TSTA now that she was an (intern) administrator" but said she rejected the notion.

She also said she ignored his suggestion that she apply for administrative jobs "outside" of Midland.

"I HAD A JOB in Midland," she said. "I like Midland and saw no reason for leaving my home and (used car) business in Odessa. I had no intention of seeking a job outside of Midland."

Mrs. Johnston noted that in cases MISD hired "outside" educators with administrative experience for posts instead of promoting Midland-oriented teachers.

"I think...it would be better for morale (to promote from "within" the system," she said under cross-examination by MISD attorney Bruce Williams. "I think we have qualified people in the school district. It would be better to hire from within." If none from "within" were qualified, then "we (MISD) should be looking at the people we're hiring as teachers.

"I would like to see the district...be the best it can be."

Mrs. Johnston indicated she would prefer promoting a Midland teacher with minimum administrative qualifications than hiring someone from outside the district with more qualifications.

"You can build their strength with experience," she reasoned. "People have to start somewhere."

As an administrative intern, Mrs. Johnston said she and others were told "with all things being equal, we (Midland teachers) would be given first choice."

However, she conceded that she was "not guaranteed" an administrative post, which pays more than her teacher's salary, which was about $35,000 last year.

In August 1983, Mrs. Johnston expressed criticism of the MISD promotion policy after she once again was rejected in a bid for promotion.

"The unrest that has been caused by the intern program is just the tip of the promotion-policy iceberg," she told The Midland Reporter-Telegram. "For many years, there has been deep concerns about the lack of a consistent and fair promotion policy that is clearly stated in writing and faithfully followed."

Late last year, just after Mrs. Johnston had filed the federal lawsuit, Baressi characterized her as a "good teacher" who still is welcome to apply for administrative posts. "She was not the best available person when we've had (administrative) vacancies."

TRIAL

After the verdict, the girl's father expressed satisfaction that Munoz received a prison sentence, but seemed disappointed that the pastors of several local Hispanic Protestant congregations had testified as character witnesses for the defendant.

"I would like to have seen the church people back up my family instead of the criminal," he said.

Munoz became acting pastor of the Templo Siloe Asamblea De Dios (Assembly of God) Church, 907 S. Terrell, in September 1984, when he was 16 years old. According to his statement, his mother was angry because she wasn't asked to be pastor, which was one reason he was depressed at the time of the incident. When he took the child from her parents' home the evening of April 25, he told her mother they were going to practice for a Mother's Day program, the statement said.

Munoz, who was then a sophomore at Midland High School, turned 17 on April 13, less than two weeks before the incident for which he was indicted occurred.

His congregation, which only numbered 12 in April, has since disbanded, and the church has reorganized under a different name, according to the victim's father.

Even if Munoz's appeal is successful, the District Attorney's Office is considering other possible charges against him, according to District Attorney Al Schorre.

Munoz, who lives with his mother at South Lamesa Mobile Home Park, 2200 S. Lamesa Road, was expected to remain free on a $7,500 bond pending the outcome of his appeal.

"God's going to help," he said.

Midlander reaches settlement with banker

AUSTIN (AP) — A settlement has been reached in a partnership dispute between Midland investor J. Hiram Moore and Austin banker Ruben Johnson, attorneys said Friday.

The settlement was announced Thursday in the state district court suit filed by Moore.

Moore accused Johnson of of accpting a "secret kickback profit" on the interior construction of an office in the United Bank Tower and of intending to sell a parcel of land held by the partnership at below market prices.

Johnson, chairman of the board of United Bank has been accused in suits by two other tenants of accepting payments from a contractor for interior construction work in their offices. One suit was settled when the contractor paid $250,000 to the tenant and the other suit has not been tried.

Investigator: Four deaths by arson linked to 'internal family problems'

DALLAS (AP) — An investigator in the arson case of a Rowlett woman indicted in the March fire deaths of her husband, two children and another man, said Friday the emotionally charged case involves "family problems."

Peggy Taylor, 32, was arrested Thursday on a sealed grand jury indictment that charges arson causing "serious bodily injury." She was released on bond later that day.

Assistant District Attorney Mark Hasse said the penalty of five to 99 years or life in prison is the same that a murder charge would carry.

Hasse and Gary Clifton, an investigator with the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, declined to discuss details of the case.

"It's one of those emotionally charged issues that involves internal family problems," Clifton said. He would not elaborate on the nature of the Taylors' domestic problems.

The ATF bureau, which normally does not investigate residential fires, was asked to participate by the Rowlett Police Department, an ATF spokesman said.

Rowlett Police investigator Bill Waggoner, who also headed up the probe, was not immediately available for comment Friday.

The fire in the one-story brick home in the Dallas surbub of Rowlett on March 8 killed Mrs. Taylor's 37-year-old husband, Eddie; her daughters by a previous marriage, Angela Michelle, 11, and Tonya, 9; and Earl Schultz, 51, a family friend and employee of Taylor's heating and air conditioning business.

Mrs. Taylor escaped with her 16-month-old daughter Alisa.

At the time, she told investigators they had celebrated the birthday of her daughter, Michelle. She said the children had gone to bed and she went to check the baby and take a bath when she found the master bedroom in flames.

Mrs. Taylor said she escaped with the baby by breaking out a window.

A neighbor said Mrs. Taylor was rolling on the ground, "just in hysterics...saying, 'Get my kids. Get my kids. Oh, God, this can't be happening to me.'"

The Dallas Times Herald quoted unidentified law enforcement sources as saying there was evidence Mrs. Taylor had moved the children from their bedroom before the fire started, but "the fire got away from her."

Judge orders probationers to repair ship

HOUSTON (AP) — The Battleship Texas will be getting a little scrubbing and repairing this weekend by probationers from the court of state District Judge Ted Poe, who ordered them to restore the ship as part of their sentences.

Poe, who has one Texas flag in his chambers and another framed and hanging on the wall behind his court bench, said the project is in observance of the Texas Sesquicentennial next year.

"It is important that we restore this symbol of Texas freedom," Poe said Thursday. "It is only fitting that those who have benefited by our freedom pay their debt to society by restoring this landmark."

The judge said 20 probationers with backgrounds in such areas as carpentry, electricity and welding, will work 20 hours a month on the project. He said the probationers all are first-time offenders of non-violent crimes.

The group's first task Saturday will be to scrape flaking paint off the ship and clean an adjacent park, said Carolyn Scheffer, regional director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission.

Poe said the cleanup project is in conjunction with the parks and wildlife department, which is responsible for the battleship. He said that department will furnish the equipment and he will furnish the manpower.

"We're not trying to get the ship battle-ready," Poe said of the vessel which has been docked near the San Jacinto Battlefield since April 21, 1948. "But it needs to be restored."

Denny Hair, a Houston police officer who is chairman of the Battleship Texas Advisory Board, said he contacted Poe several months ago to ask if the judge could supply "volunteer" help.

Poe, a patriotic cowboy boot-wearing Texan, admitted the ship's name has a lot to do with his desire to save it.

"I'd be hard-pressed to restore the Battleship New Jersey," he joked.

Ten Cuban detainees file lawsuit asking for release

HOUSTON (AP) — Ten of 24 Cubans who have waited in limbo for more than eight months in a Houston immigration detention center unable to legally enter the United States filed a lawsuit asking for their release.

Houston attorney Sergio V. Bello filed the suit in federal court Thursday to gain the release of 10 of the 24 Cubans. He is asking a judge to free the three women and seven men on bond until the government can determine where to send them.

The refugees being held are among a group of 77 Cubans who flew from Spain to New York last December. The group had hopes of a reunion with relatives in the United States.

Of the 24 Cubans in Houston, Bello said, 14 still have appeal hearings pending that could allow them to remain in the country.

Republican activist turns refunds against White

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican activist Rob Mosbacker says he has a new way to express his displeasure with Gov. Mark White sending a letter to electric utility consumers, along with refund checks by Houston Lighting & Power Co.

Mosbacher is endorsing his checks for $46.35 and $32.42 over to Kent Hance's Republican campaign for governor.

He said another rebate contributor is Harris County Treasurer Henry Kriegel.

"I know all too well how little the governor of the state of Texas and the Public Utilities Commission had to do with the drop in the price of crude oil and natural gas" which prompted the rebates, Mosbacher said in a letter to the Democratic governor.

TDH: Inadequate client education reason state can't meet standards

AUSTIN (AP) — Inadequate education for clients at state schools for the mentally retarded are the main reason Texas schools have difficulty meeting federal standards, a Texas Department of Health official said.

Eleven of 13 Texas schools have been warned during the past year that they are not meeting federal Medicaid standards, said Charline Stowers, spokeswoman for the Texas Department of Health.

None of the schools has lost Medicaid funding because of the warnings, but five have been found deficient enough to come close to a cutoff of the federal funds,

The Texas Department of Health, which is charged with surveying the state schools for Medicaid eligibility, has given "vendor hold" status to the schools at Austin, Fort Worth, Lubbock and San Angelo and is recommending vendor hold for the school in Denton.

Vendor hold is the punitive step before an institution could lose Medicaid funding until deficiencies are corrected. If a school loses Medicaid funding, the state is obligated to make up the difference until the problems are corrected.

But Stowers said the school's shortcomings don't necessarily lie in patient care.

"The major problem is active care treatment, training and education of clients. That's the area that appears to be the most difficult to comply with."

Stowers said the finding an "adequate staff" to educate the schools' clients is difficult

Almost half of the $250 million state school budget is Medicaid money — between $113 million and $120 million, Jaylon Fincannon, the deputy commissioner for mental retardation, said Thursday.

Six schools — Brenham, Abilene, Lufkin, Mexia, Travis and Corpus Christi — have answered to "compliance" actions in the last year, a less severe punitive action which gives the schools about one month to correct problems and comply with Medicaid regulations.

Only the San Antonio and Richmond schools have not been cited with punitive actions in the last 12 months.

The Denton State School is the only facility on vendor hold now, but it is the second time in a year that the school has been placed on the probation, the Eagle reported.

The Denton, Austin and Fort Worth schools also are the three named defendants in the ongoing federal court suit against the Texas Department of Mental Health Mental Retardation.

When the Denton State School was placed on vendor hold in August 1984, it marked the first time any of the state schools had ever faced that severe a punitive action over its Medicaid funding.

State officials concede that the sudden zeal of the federal Health Care Financing Administration, also charged with surveying facilities that get Medicaid, has led to the crackdown.

Many observers — including Bill Chandler, an Austin coordinator for the Texas State Employees Union, and Dick Johnson, the executive director of the state association for private mental retardation facilities — say that without the federal pressure the state might never have surveyed itself and risked the possibility of losing Medicaid dollars.

The HCFA began its survey of all the state's schools about a year ago with the addition of six new staffers in the Dallas regional office, said Bill Wallis, chief of the Medicaid-Medicare survey team.

Wallis also said he believed his surveys prodded the state survey teams into action. He said he could not disclose any of the federal surveys' results, but he said the findings of both state and federal teams differed little.

Wallis' office also oversees four other states — Louisiana, Arkansas, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

UIL band contests stage end run around rule

HOUSTON (AP) — Band students competing in University Interscholastic League marching band competitions this year are getting around the no-pass, no-play rule by having the contests before the first six-week grading report.

All marching students, regardless of how they are doing in school, may compete but it means extra pressure on students and band directors to polish their performances much earlier.

The 825 Texas high school bands are divided into 22 districts.

Dr. Richard Floyd, UIL director of music activities, says about half of the districts have scheduled their competitions at least two weeks earlier this year to beat the six-week deadline.

"It really put an extra burden on the band directors because it's so tough to prepare that early," Floyd said. "I think that by doing this, most of them thought it would let them use all their students for at least the first level of the competition."

After the first six-weeks, the no-pass, no-play rule will have a significant impact on the size and quality of the bands, Floyd said.

If last year's grades are any indication, said David Scott, assistant band director at J. Frank Dobie High School in Pasadena, his band could lose 20 percent of its 205 members.

Dobie's marching band contest is set for Oct. 12 — the last weekend before the six-week deadline.

Three black Texas colleges consider merger

AUSTIN (AP) — Huston-Tillotson College will be the site of a merger with two other historically black colleges if the top recommendation of a steering committee is approved by the schools' trustees.

The steering committee made the recommendation after meeting in Houston earlier this week with a consulting firm that had studied the merger possibility since April.

John Q. Taylor King, president of Huston-Tillotson, said he "wholeheartedly" agreed with the recommendation, and that the merger of the three small, private colleges could be in effect by next fall, "or certainly within two years."

The other colleges involved are Wiley College in Marshall and Texas College in Tyler.

A merger has been discussed by the colleges for years, but the possibility was increased early this year when the 13-member steering committee was formed.

Officials of the colleges have said a merger could help solve the problems of declining enrollment, dwindling finances, and competitive pressures, which have forced many small colleges to close in recent years. Huston-Tillotson has 700 students, and each of the other colleges has fewer than 600.

Austin officers like swinging in saddle

AP Laserphoto

Austin police officers Gary Buchanan, left, and Mike Carlson patrol a hike-and-bike trail as joggers run past. The six mounted officers have been warmly received by residents, which initially suprised the officers.

By TERRY GOODRICH

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Peculiar things happen when the City of Austin's mounted police swing into the saddle.

The officers find themselves surrounded by giggling kids, photographed by tourists, and given the thumbs-up gesture by downtown workers. Retirees fishing near the Town Lake hike-and-bike trail eyeball the officers and display their day's catch with broad grins.

Folks at Texas Commerce Bank supply the officer's thirsty steeds with a bucket of water. Avid runners forget the quest for "runners high" long enough to wave. Even transients, who traditionally have a no-love-lost relationship with the police, take the time to ask the horses' names.

It's taken awhile for the officers to get used to all this smiling and waving. After all, most of them are more accustomed to gestures other than thumbs-up.

But after the initial shock of being so warmly received, the six mounted officers and their sergeant are rather enjoying basking in the reflected glory of the horses.

"It's super PR," said Officer Ron Blackmore as he rode his horse, Brandy, through a downtown alley. "Everybody likes 'em."

For their part, the horses handle the attention with aplomb. Some, like Brandy, are veterans of concerts, rodeos and football games. He is unruffled by crowds, sirens and gunfire.

Then there are the horses like Officer Darrell Walenta's Miss Pepe. She has had less exposure to crowds and excitement than Brandy, and at 4 years old is "just a baby," Walenta said. "But she got into being a cop in a hurry."

He laughed as he pulled in the reins of the frisky horse.

"She's into it today," he told Blackmore. "She thinks the sooner she makes the circle, the sooner she can go home."

Blackmore guaffawed.

"That's not the way it works. Horse-Breath," he told Pepe affectionately.

The mounted patrol is an experimental program that began three months ago. Police in the program furnish their own horses, trailers and trucks. The city pays mileage to transport the horses and an allowance for the horses' food and upkeep. Officers patrol Sixth Street and the hike-and-bike trail; near the University of Texas; and in the 11th Street area east of Congress Avenue.

There's a saying that the Canadian Mounties "always get their man." While the Austin officers don't make that blanket claim, "You can see higher up and farther than a guy in a car," Blackmore said. "You can move a little quicker down the alleys, and go on the hike-and-bike trail and cut corners."

Elderly residents protest meals program change

BERTRAM, Texas (AP) — A dozen eldery Bertram residents are protesting a change in a hot meals program that now requires participants to be bused eight miles for lunch five days a week.

"I don't like it. I can't go in that old bus," says Ray Kincheloe, 91, a former deputy sheriff who has lost one eye to cancer and is nearly blind in the other.

Williamson-Burnet County Opportunities Inc., which has delivered cooked meals for the elderly to the Bertram American Legion Hall since 1978, recently dropped the service. The agency offered to bus the participants to Burnet.

But Kincheloe and the others say their friendship, which began in 1978 when the meals program came to Bertram, is being disrupted by an insensitive program administrator.

Program director Raleigh Elliott told the 12 residents in a letter dated Aug. 20 that meal service in Bertram was discontinued because program rules were broken.

Elliott said the rules were violated "when a participant took food from the center and when food which was not eaten was given to other participants," according to the Austin American-Statesman.

The newspaper reported that Elliott's letter mentioned "hostility" and an "unwelcoming" attitude shown by the 12 to visitors from the Capital Area Planning Council, an Austin-based organization that finances the meals program.

Mamie Kincheloe, one of the Bertram 12, isn't so sure about that.

"I want one of those people we've been ugly to to come up here and face this crowd and tell us what we did," she said.

Mrs. Kincheloe, 83, said she never was told it was against the rules to take scraps of food from the center to feed her chickens.

Although they are protesting the Elliott decision, the Bertram residents said they are grateful for the meals program.

Solar lobby sheds light on intriguing invitations

WASHINGTON (AP) — If senators or House members are spotted leaning out of their Capitol office windows this week, they may be studying sun crystals.

That's the only way they'll find the location of a party they were invited to attend by the Solar Energy Industries Association.

Members of the Senate Finance Committee and House Ways and Means Committee received the cryptic invitations, printed almost entirely in a disappearing "solar-powered" ink.

The invitations say the association "requests the honor of your presence at a" and then go blank. Fine print at the bottom advises that "Solar energy is the only means of revealing the contents of this invitation. Hold in direct sunlight."

Those who take the hint see the sun's rays turn invisible ink to blue print, and learn they have been invited to a Sept. 17 champagne buffet aboard the Sequoia, the former presidential yacht.

"We're getting a lot of RSVPs, so I assume people are figuring out how to read them," said David Gorin, president of the association.

"One of the things you really have to do in this city is catch people's attention, and the only way to do that is to do something different," Gorin added. "We hope our invitations are winding up on the top of the pile."

The inventor of the solar ink, Bob March, owner of the Robert Price Co. in Boynton Beach, Fla., said his "sun crystals" turn from white to blue, yellow to green, pink to purple or orange to black when exposed to sunlight.

"It's a very easy, inexpensive way to use the sun's energy," March said, adding he has deals in the works with T-shirt manufacturers and advertising accounts.

Gorin agreed that the unusual ink has "terrific potential" to attract attention. "We're planning to use a lot more of it," he said.

Wildlife officials hope for bumper crop of cranes

AUSTWELL, Texas (AP) — Wildlife officials hope a bumper crop of baby whooping cranes in Canada could boost the number of the rare birds that will winter in Texas this year.

The 16 chicks hatched this summer at a Wood Buffalo National Park could give the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge a population of more than 90 birds this winter, officials say.

Last year, the refuge had 84 of the endangered cranes, officials said.

Tom Stehn, a biologist at the refuge, said the young cranes at the park in Canada are "big and robust," with an average weight of about 10 pounds. He said an exceptionally wet spring at the park spawned plenty of minnows for the young birds.

"We expect a good survival rate from this point on," he said, adding that the birds were banded in mid-August to allow researchers and biologists to record sightings.

Stehn said 20 whooping crane chicks were hatched this summer at the Canadian national park, and the 16 banded birds are believed to be the only chicks that survived.

Fifteen whooping crane chicks survived the migration from Canada to the refuge last winter.

Stehn said the chicks would be beginning to learn to fly during the first week of September. They begin their winter migration in mid-October, and the majority of the birds will arrive at the refuge in November.

A second flock of whooping cranes, which is being established in Idaho and New Mexico, also is growing. Ten chicks were hatched in Idaho, raising the population in the western flock to about 40.

Stehn said all of the whooping cranes in the Southwest were hatched from eggs taken from nests in Canada and raised by sandhill cranes.

Beside the estimated 90 birds in the Canadian national park and 40 in the Southwest, there are also 40 whooping cranes in captivity. Stehn said the number of whooping cranes in the wild dropped to 21 in 1952.

"People are amazed when they hear how many whooping cranes there are, considering how critical the situation once was for the birds," he said.

Reagan likely to issue complaints accusing nations of unfair practices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seeking to ease the nation's huge trade deficit, President Reagan is likely to issue complaints accusing Japan, Brazil, South Korea and the Common Market of unfair trade practices against U.S. products, administration officials said Friday.

Reagan, in a brief nationally broadcast meeting with reporters, said possible trade sanctions were still "under discussion."

"As quickly as we have something to report, we will," Reagan said. He also urged Congress to join with him "to work for a freer and fairer trade policy."

But officials who spoke on condition of anonymity said that despite a delay in the announcement, the president was poised to unveil as many as five separate trade actions designed to help ease the nation's enormous trade deficit and to help quell rising protectionist fever in Congress.

The actions would all seek to open more foreign markets to U.S. products, rather than directly helping U.S. manufacturers who are battered by imports, the sources said.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes, who earlier had said that Reagan would discuss trade during his Friday appearance, said afterwards that the announcement would come later, possibly over the weekend.

At his Friday session with reporters, Reagan focused primarily on hailing the just-released unemployemnt figures showing that the jobless rate had dropped to 7.0 percent of the work force — its lowest level in more than five years.

The president will make use of a trade law — Section 301 of the 1974 Trade Act — that allows him to bring unfair trading allegations against nations that errect barriers to the sale of U.S. products, the sources said.

If the barriers are not dropped, the president has a wide variety of enforcement options to use under the law, including retaliatory tariffs or quotas against selected imports from those nations.

Shultz reassures Israel: No talks with PLO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz reassured Israel on Friday that the United States would maintain its policy of not negotiating with the Palestine Liberation Organization and said "those who perpetrate violence deal themselves out of the peace process."

Shultz's statement to reporters, after an hour-long meeting with Israel's finance minister, appeared to rule out talks between top U.S. troubleshooter Richard W. Murphy and Nabil Sha'ath, an adviser to PLO chairman Yasser Arafat.

In another development, congressional sources said the Reagan administration had tentatively decided not to offer to sell Saudi Arabia advanced F-15 fighter planes.

Arms packages for Saudi Arabia and Jordan are nearing completion. The Saudis bought 62 of the jets after a stormy fight in Congress in 1978. They have sought an advanced version of the American plane since 1981.

The sources, who demanded anonymity, said the administration would propose sale of Sikorsky helicopters to Saudi Arabia, among other weapons. Shultz said "it is clear to us that Jordan has definite security problems."

With efforts to promote Arab-Israeli peace talks stalled, Assistant Secretary of State Murphy and other Mideast experts were understood to have recommended that he be sent back to the Middle East to meet with Sha'ath and other Palestinians proposed by Arafat and King Hussein of Jordan.

U.S. policy since 1975 bars negotiations with the PLO unless it accepts Israel's right to exist and pertinent resolutions by the U.N. Security Council.

Shultz said the United States was doing "everything that we can to bring about direct negotiations between an Arab interlocutor who will be able to speak authoritatively, and Israel."

But, he added, "insofar as the PLO is concerned, our conditions for talking with the the PLO remain as they have been for many years."

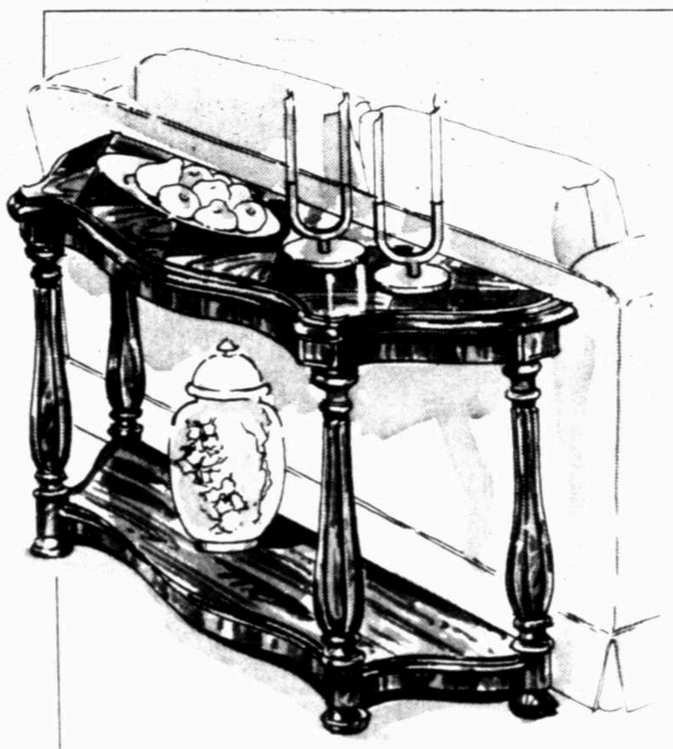

Apparently referring to reports of possible Murphy-Sha'ath talks, Shultz said: "I read in the rumor mill of what we are thinking, and I say someone is insulting us. They must think we've lost our marbles."

At the same time, Shultz issued an implicit warning to the PLO, which Israel has accused of stepping up violence against its citizens.

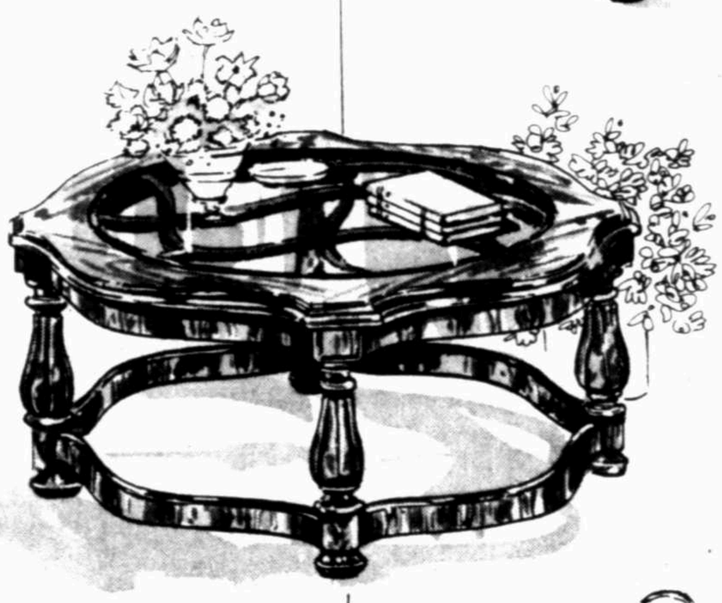

He said "we don't want to see radicals use violence as a technique to derail progress. They can't be allowed to stop progress by violence...It's very clear to us that those who perpetrate violence deal themselves out of the peace process."

Weekend holds promises of thunderstorms

From Staff and Wire Reports

This weekend holds promises of thunderclaps, isolated evening thunderstorms and rain.

But, according to the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport the chance for rain tonight an[illegible]nday is less than 20 percent.

The high today is to be in the mid-90s, and winds are to be southerly at 5 to 10 mph. Low tonight is to be in the mid-60s. The high Sunday is to be in the high 90s.

Friday's high temperature was 96 degrees, and the record high for a Sept. 6 is 104 degrees in 1948. The overnight low was 67 degrees, which hardly was close to the record low of 56 degrees for a Sept. 7 in 1984.

STATE

Showers fell across scattered portions of Texas Friday as a weak upper level trough and unstable air triggered rain and thunderstorms.

The showers, some of them heavy, occurred from the South Plains across North Texas into east and southeast Texas as well as along the Upper Coast.

Other showers and a few thunderstorms dampened parts of south central Texas, the Edwards Plateau and Stockton Plateau of southwestern Texas.

Partly cloudy to cloudy skies covered most of the state except for clear skies along the Rio Grande from Laredo to McAllen.

Winds were mostly out of the south and southwest, with speeds of 10 to 20 mph and some gusts up to 30 mph.

Temperatures were mostly in the 80s and 90s. The late afternoon extremes ranged from a rain-cooled 82 degrees at Mineral Wells and Stephenville to 100 at Laredo.

NATION

Heavy thunderstorms pummeled east-central Michigan on Friday, causing widespread flooding and damage, while scattered rain soaked much of the rest of the nation.

Along the central Atlantic Coast, temperatures were well above normal for the third straight day, with readings in the 90s in many places.

Higher elevations in Montana's northwest mountains received at least 2 inches of snow, and were under a winter storm warning for up to a foot of snow.

Michigan's Genesee and Saginaw counties and the city of Flint were hardest by the thunderstorms, which dumped up to 7.5 inches of rain and swelled the Flint River to 16.8 feet, 5.8 feet above flood stage.

The waters damaged some 10,000 homes and caused an estimated $4.7 million damage, officials for the counties and city said. Gov. James Blanchard declared the counties a disaster area, and said he would seek federal aid.

Hurricane Pauline heads westward

HONOLULU (AP) — Hurricane Pauline, packing winds gusting up to 105 mph, churned westward toward Hawaii's largest island Friday, and authorities advised 100,000 people to make emergency preparations.

Forecasters said Pauline, with sustained winds of 85 mph, would pass within 50 miles of Hawaii Island on Saturday night if it maintains its present course and speed. A hurricane watch was issued for the island.

At 8 a.m. HST, (2 p.m. EDT) Friday, the storm was 620 miles east of Hilo, Hawaii, moving at 14 mph, the National Weather Service said.

Residents along the east and southeast shores of the islands of Maui and Hawaii were advised to beware of gradually building surf forecast to reach 10 to 15 feet by Friday night.

Civil Defense officials on Hawaii Island met to prepare for the storm, a spokesman said.

Counties forecast

Midland, Ector, Crane, Upton, Glasscock and Reagan counties: Saturday, mostly sunny. High in the mid-90s. Wind south near 10 mph.

Saturday night, mostly fair with isolated evening thunderstorms. Low in the mid-60s. Chance of rain less than 20 percent.

Sunday, mostly fair with isolated late afternoon thunderstorms. High in the mid-90s. Chance of rain less than 20 percent.

Sterling, Coke, Irion and Tom Green counties: Saturday, partly cloudy with isolated afternoon thunderstorms. Warmer with a high in the mid-90s. South wind 5 to 15 mph. Chance of rain less than 20 percent.

Saturday night, mostly fair. Low in the low 70s.

Sunday, mostly sunny with high in the mid-90s.

SWC's Texas Tech, Baylor , UH, SMU all favored in football openers

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Texas Tech, Baylor, Houston and Southern Methodist are favored as Southwest Conference teams begin their 71st year of football competition Saturday night with an abbreviated schedule.

Three games are in Lubbock, Waco and Irving while the other matchup is in Tulsa, Okla.

Probation-stained Southern Methodist, recently slapped with some hard sanctions by the NCAA, was a 42-point favorite to take out its frustrations against Texas-El Paso in a 7:30 p.m. game at Texas Stadium.

Baylor was a seven-point favorite over Wyoming at Baylor Stadium in a 7 p.m. game Waco, Houston was a field goal choice over Tulsa on the road in a 7:30 p.m. clash, and Texas Tech was a 10-point favorite to get revenge in Lubbock in a 7 p.m. game against New Mexico, which has beaten the Red Raiders three straight years.

At Texas Tech, Coach Jerry Moore will be unveiling his new wishbone offense. Moore, yet to have a winning season as the Red Raider boss, is under fire to propel Tech back into the SWC title picture. The Red Raiders open with a rough regional opponent.

Baylor is also switching offenses, going to the Veer instead of the I formation as Coach Grant Teaff tries to find more striking power.

SMU can't go to a bowl or earn the SWC title this year but is still eligible to win the Associated Press national title.

"We expect SMU to try to pour it on and I don't guess you can blame them," said West Texas State Coach Bill Yung. "They've got to prove they are the best in the nation. About the only way we could stop'em is with heavy artillery from Fort Sill."

Yung, a former assistant at Baylor and head coach at West Texas State, looked on the bright side.

"This is a great chance for our kids to make up for what happened to us last week in Colorado," he said.

UTEP lost its opener 48-6 to Air Force.

SMU is the winningest team in the country the last four years with a 41-5-1 record and features a one-two backfield punch of Reggie Dupard and Jeff Atkins.

"The last time we played them was no pushover," said SMU Coach Bobby Collins.

SMU is 3-0 against the Miners of the Western Athletic Conference and has not lost a season opener since 1971.

Although Texas Tech holds a 23-5-2 advantage in the New Mexico series, which began in 1931, the latest result was a 29-24 victory in Albuquerque last season.

"We must overcome the stigma of losing to them three times in a row," said Moore. "They always play us very hard."

Baylor and Wyoming stand 1-1 against each other with the Cowboys winning the last meeting 7-0 in Laramie in 1950.

"We must win this game to set the tone for the rest of the season," said Teaff. "It's hard to get over early setbacks."

Tulsa always has special hate in its heart for Houston, which once ran up a 100-6 score against it.

It's the first of four games against SWC foes for Tulsa, a member of the Missouri Valley Conference, a conference playing its last football season.

There are six games next week with Baylor at Georgia, Miami at Rice, Texas Tech at Tulsa, Arkansas vs. Ole Miss in Jackson, Tulane at TCU and Texas A&M at Alabama.

Midland's Bobby Williams has pass get away as he leaps for ball against Moneterey Friday night.

MHS holds off Monterey rally

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland High Bulldogs were held at bay on the ground so they went to the air. And, in the air they were nearly unstoppable, throwing to 217 yards and a 27-19 season-opening victory over the Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen.

The trouble Midland High had on the ground came from a six and seven-man defensive front geared to stop the run and erroneous pitches from quarterback Matt Marcum to his backfield. However, there were a few bright spots from the running backs and Marcum shone brillantly with the pass.

"They came into the ball game planning to stop the run," said MHS coach Doug McCutchen. "We didn't throw the ball much in our scrimmage last week so they played to stop the run. They had six or seven players on the line all night."

The extra players up front weren't enough to hinder Marcum when he pased as the senior quarterback compfedte 12-of-22 attempts for 217 yards, one touchdown and one interception. His passing also set up three other scores.

"Bobby Williams was wide open," said Marcum of his tight end, who caught four passes for 96 yards. "He did a good job getting open. They were holding our receivers as they were coming off the line but they still managed to get open. Kenny De La Garza (five catches for 54 yards and a TD) also did a good job. Our split ends were open a lot but I couldn't get the ball to them. Monterey was playing us real deep."

Marcum also gave a lot of the credit for his success to the big guys up front. The offensive line didn't allow Marcum do be sacked once though he was hit a few times as he released the ball.

"The line did an excellent job all night," said Marcum. "They were holding out on pass blocking excellently."

Williams, who had one catch that went for 52 yards before he "ran out of gas," was also happy with the way the passing game went. "It was pretty good. We didn't make as many mistakes tonight as we did against Coronado. We were able to get the ball upfield."

THE BULLDOGS jumped out to a quick 8-0 lead in the first quarter. On their second possession, Marcum completed four big passes to keep the 12-play, 67-yard drive alive, the final pass going 17 yards to flanker Kenny De La Garza for the touchdown.

Gambling early, the Bulldogs went for the fake extra point kick. Center Robert Fortune snapped the ball to the left side of the field to Mark Johnson, who followed six blockers into the end zone.

Monterey countered in the second quarter when Bobby Leak capped a 51-yard drive on the 12th play, running four yards for the score. The Bulldogs held onto their lead when the defense swarmed all over quarterback Kyle Guerry for the sack.

After Marcum was intercepted on the next MHS possession, the Bulldog defense dug in and forced Monterey into a three-downs and punt situation. The 'Dogs took the ball on their own 43 and, three plays later, led 15-6.

Marcum started the 57-yard drive with a 13-yard pass to De La Garza and, after Jake Madrid was dropped for a one-yard loss, Marcum set up the draw play to Marcum and he went took the ball up the middle and into the end zone for a 45-yard touchdown. Bobby Williams kicked the extra point.

Monterey came close to a second TD in the quarter, but MHS defensive back Ben Grimes stole a pass from Monterey quarterback Kyle Guerry in the end zone.

MIDLAND HIGH increased its lead in the third quarter to 21-6 when Johnson scored on a seven-yard run to cap a eight-play, 91-yard drive. Marcum's 52-yard pass to Williams was the big play of the drive, setting up the final two plays from the 19, a 17-yard run by Madrid, a five-yard penalty and Johnson's scoring run. MHS missed the point after for a 21-6 lead.

Monterey scored in the opening seconds of the fourth quarter when Tray Jones took and 18-yard pass from Guerry. The drive covered 74 yards in 15 plays. Victa Edwards booted the PAT, cutting the MHS lead to 21-13.

As it turned out, the Bulldogs needed the last touchdown they'd score in the game. It came with 3:57 left on the clock on Johnson's one-yard run and was completed in 11 plays, covering 56 yards. The extra point kick failed.

The Plainsmen were unable to move the ball on their next possession and kicked it back to the Bulldogs. Midland High picked up one first down but was also forced to punt. Williams' 28-yard punt to the Monterey 25 was returned 75 yards for a touchdown by Brian Pierce as time expired.

When asked why he opted for the punt with only six seconds left, McCutchen replied, "The one thing we needed work on was our punting game. We wanted to see what we could do in a tough situation. We did a good job. It was a good snap and a

Rebels smother Coronado, 42-0

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK - Midland Lee's New Tradition Rebels looked like a professional team playing against a high school squad here Friday night at Lowry Field in a 42-0 romp over the hapless Lubbock Coronado Mustangs.

It was a laugher from the opening gun as the Rebels scored the first four times they had the ball in the first half. The only thing that kept them from scoring two more times in the half was a fumble and time expiring. It was an awesome display.

Lee scored only twice in the third quarter to complete the scoring parade as Lee coach Jack Tayrien went early and deep to his bench.

"I was really pleased with the effort our kids gave," noted Tayrien after the game. "We made some mistakes that we are going to have to work on, but for the first time out, I thought they played with a lot of intensity, especially since we were not able to have a scrimmage this year."

But even Tayrien's grin could not describe what the Rebels did in this one. The game statistics tell a better story.

The Rebs rolled out 355 yards rushing and another 101 in the airways, an uncharteristic total for the ground hungry Rebels. Lee had 201 yards rushing and 39 passing in the first half.

The first thing Lee offensive coach Van Tom Whatley asked after the game was, "How many yards passing did we have?" When told Lee had 101, he replied, "Whew-weee, 101 yards. We're a passing team. I told you we could pass."

No one mentioned the fact that Lee threw a meager six passes on the night. The total came mostly from two TD aerials of 39 and 50 yards. Quarterback Tuey Rankin, making his first varsity start, hit tight end Anthony Dickenson for a 39-yard first quarter TD while backup quarterback Rodney Johnson dialed Carl Long for a 50-yard scoring bomb in the third period.

With the absence of star backs of a year ago in Tyrone Thurman and Walter Jones, many wondered if Lee was going to have to rely too much on a veteran offensive line. However, the backs took that worry away in a hurry.

Rodney Sims scored three touchdowns and rushed for 103 yards on 15 carries. And he was taken out before the end of the third quarter. Rankin added 88 yards rushing and 51 passing, accounting for two Lee touchdowns. In all eight Rebel running backs toted the ball as everyone went out and had fun.

Still, Sims was modest about his accomplishments after the game. "I'm glad I got 100 yards, but when the line opens up the kind of holes I had, it makes things easy."

Sims has had a lot of weight put on his shoulders after the depature of the likes of Thurman and Jones, but he says he feels no pressure.

"Coach (Tayrien) told me I would have to carry some of the load, but I learned a lot last year by just watching Walter and Tyrone. They helped me a lot and we have the same line they ran behind," said Sims.

And the defensive side of the ball was just as impressive. Coronado ended up with a mere 38 yards rushing and 81 passing, much of which came in the fourth quarter against the Lee reserves, whcih were still stout enough to perserve the shutout.

There has been more concern expressed over the Lee defense than offense this pre-season, but the first test was passed Friday.

Middle linebacker Tony Brown was all over the field. It seemed like he was in on just about every running play. Coronado did complete five passes for 81 yards, but paid the price each time by the head-hunting tackles by Tracy Mayfield and Kevin Witt.

"This game got us off to a good start, defensively," said Brown. "We can feel comfortable with our effort tonight. We're going to enjoy this victory tonight and then start getting ready for Temple. We've still got a few things to correct and we all know it."

Todd Sparks, Chris Kenney and Eddie Mancha all recovered Coronado fumbles. It was Sparks' fumble recovery on Coronado's first running play from scrimmage that set up Lee's first TD. The Rebs had to move only 20 yards for a 7-0 lead as Kirk Thurman set up Sims' one-yard plunge with a 12-yard run on Lee's first play from scrimmage.

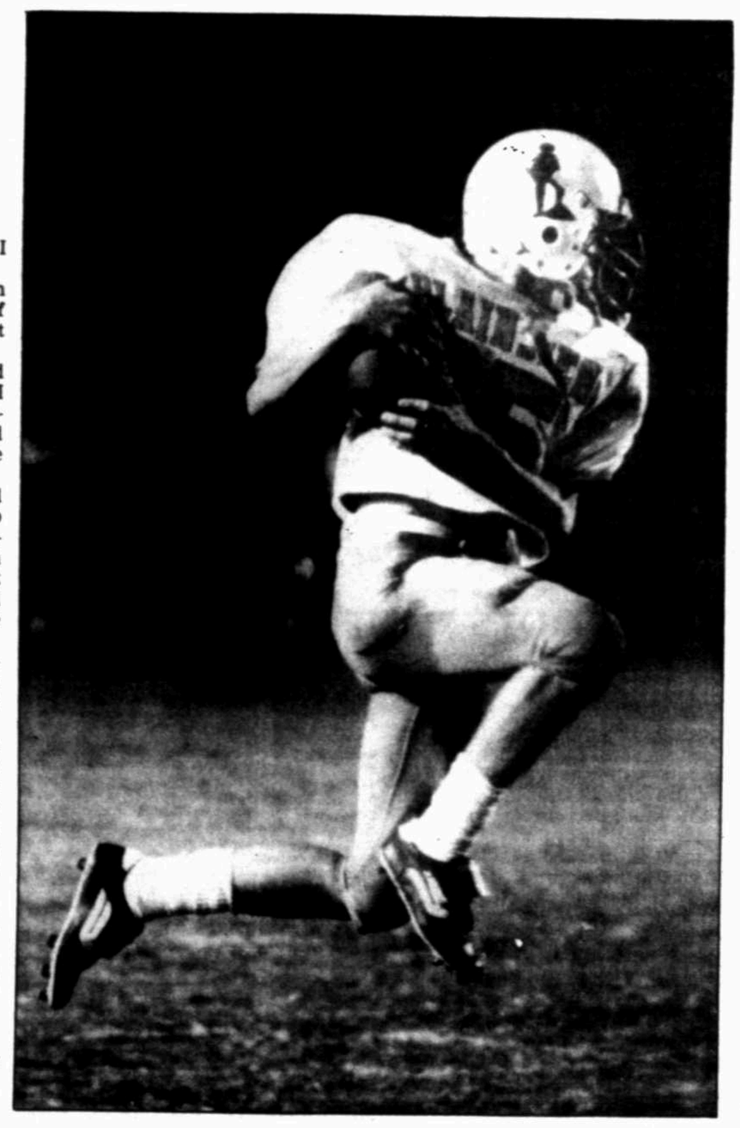

On Sparks' recovery of a loose ball from junior sensation James Goolsby, Coronado lost its fabled tailback. It was downhill after that.

"We were fortunate to get on them early in the game," said Tayrien. "We forced Coronado out of its game plan early and they got their tailback hurt on the first play. That made a big difference in the final outcome."

Lee scored 21 points in the first quarter alone. They had to march only 45 yards for their second score as Rankin ran 22 yards to end a nine play, 45-yard drive. The third TD was Rankin's 39-yard bomb to Dickens, who looked like he was at home on the basketball court, all alone for a slam dunk.

Lee's TD in the second period came after a 10-play, 84-yard drive when Sims got the final 17 with a waltz up the Coronado middle.

Monterey's Tray Jones steps for yardage against Midland at Memorial Stadium Friday night.

Greenwood rumbles over Ozona, 28-0

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

GREENWOOD—If it was a new backfield that coach Joe Longley of the Greenwood Rangers was looking for, it didn't take him long to find it Friday night as the Rangers drubbed Ozona, 28-0, in the season openers for both teams.

The Rangers, who relied on the fine running of Roger Smith, now with McMurry College, the past two seasons, received some big production from a pair of tailbacks to put the clamps on the Lions.

In the first half it was Brad Rose who did the damage, compiling 54 yards and a pair of touchdowns on seven carries before leaving with a bruised shoulder.

The injury barely put a crimp in Greenwood's ground game, however, as junior Mitch Russell countered with 88 second-half yards — 115 on the game — including one 48-yard dash that set up the final six points.

ALSO GAINING some backfield seasoning were junior Wes McDonel (33 yards) and Steve Popham (22 yards) helping Greenwood combine for 290 yards on the ground.

"I wasn't too worried when Brad went down because I've been trying

The College Top 10, from an underdog's view

Someone wanted to know if I had the intestinal fortitude—I think he meant guts—to pick a top 10 in college football.

I told him "of course not, it has already been done to death and most of the No.1s seem to have gone to Oklahoma.

"Besides, you know me,Al, if I were to pick a top 10, it would be with a sadistic twist."

Picking an elite list of teams hasn't been that tough in the last couple of decades. Just take Texas, Oklahoma, USC, Alabama, Notre Dame, Penn State, Georgia, Michigan, Ohio State, Nebraska, add a pinch of Arkansas, Pitt, Miami, and maybe Clemson, stir well baked to taste.

It hasn't been so much a case of picking a top 10, but more the order of arrangement.

But times are changing. Last year Brigham Young was No. 1 and such teams as Illinois, Oklahoma State, Southern Methodist, Iowa, South Carolina, Texas Christian, Washington, Illinois could be found in the Top 20 and this year Maryland and Florida State, Iowa are highly regarded. Some have done well over the last few years, but they are still comparative Park Ave. strangers.

It's more likely that one of the latter tupe teams will finish on top than one of the former, that group that dominated for so long.

It's more fun this way. So let's have a try at ferreting out a Top 10 of teams that really shouldn't, but quite possibly could finish No. 1.

So without further adieu: 1.Texas Christian. 2. Georgia Tech. 3.Virginia. 4. Air Force. 5. Brigham Young (it's very difficult for champions to repeat) 6. Navy (how did Napoleon wind up here?), 8. Rutgers, 9. Army. 10. West Virginia. Also receiving votes: Temple, Arizona, Washington State, Iowa State, East Carolina. Unfortunately, Rice , Northwestern and Columbia aren't ready to crack this select list as yet.

FOR THOSE who want to get serious , the weekend forecast:

SMU minus 40 over UTEP— The last team that could expect mercy from the Mustangs. Uknluckily, the Miners are the first chance for SMU to hit since the bad news.

Baylor minus 7 1/2 over Wyoming— Bears probably deserve recognition in my Top 10 list.

New Mexico plus 10 over Texas Tech— Joe Morrison is gone to South Carolina, but the Red Raiders' offense really shouldn't be giving anybody 10 points this early in the season.

Oklahoma State plus 3 1/2 over Washington, that's if it doesn't rain in Seattle.

Houston minus 3 1/2 over Tulsa— That shouldn't be too great a hurdle for the veteran SWC Cotton Bowl team of a year ago.

Penn State plus 7 over Maryland— No, the seven points they are making the Terps give isn't a misprint. Some like UM to win the national title.

USC plus three over Illinois— A Rose Bowl preview?

UCLA plus 6 1/2 over BYU— It's at Provo, so this defies form, in a way.

Nebraska minus 6 over Florida State— Cornhuskers in home opener. Seminoles must need the dough.

Northwestern plus 7 over Duke— Bet you didn't even know these teams were playing. This is the academic game-of-the-week.

Eldorado's O'Harrow sparks win over Devils

Allen Turpin
MRT Correspondent

RANKIN—The Eldorado Eagles used a combinaton of balanced passing and rushing along with a stingy defense to blank the Rankin Red Devils, 26-0, here Friday night.

Eldorado tailback Jay O'Harrow rushed 18 times for 74 yards and scored twice. Quarterback Martin Espinosa threw nine times with five completions.

Rankin threatened, recovering an Eldorado fumble with 5:05 left in the first quarter, Randy Fulton raced 69 yards for an apparent TD, only to be called back on off-setting penalties.

After a punt exchange, Rankin's luck seemed to change when, with 40 seconds left in the opening quarter, Rankin recovered an Eldorado fumble deep in their own territory. But The Devils fumbled on the next play.

The Eagles scored on a 10-yard run by O'Harrow early in the second period. The run failed and it was 6-0 at half.

Eldorado's Felix Ramos returned the second half kick off 45 yards and the Eagles pushed the remaining 40 yards with O'Harrow scoring from the two for his second TD.

Chris Beeman dashed 78 yards to the Eagle 10, but Eldorado held Rankin and took over.

In the fourth quarter, Eldorado scored when Russ Dacy scored from the 12 with 8:05 left.

With 2:22 left, Eric Cheetum blocked a punt and fell on the ball in the end zone. This time O'Harrow ran over for the two-pointer.

Chris Beemann led the Red Devils in rushing with 98 yards in eight carries.

Steve Saldivar, a guard and running back, was outstanding for Eldorado, gaining 64 yards on 11 carries.

ODESSA—Odessa High's Terry Powell sacked Amarillo quarterback Scotty Brown on a fourth and goal play in the first quarter to preserve an early 7-7 tie and the Bronchos responded with 13 second quarter points to lead Odessa to a 27-7 win over the Sandies.

Ed Lewis' three-yard run and a 12-yard dash by Tracy Blaylock gave the Bronchos their second quarter lead and the OHS defense closed the door on the Amarillo offense the rest of the way.

Powell, who scored the first OHS six-pointer, also led the Bronchos in rushing with 71 yards on the ground. For the Sandies, Timmy Smith paved the way with 113 yards rushing and a 71-yard kick-off return to set up its only score early in the first quarter.

RANGERS

to find some more backs," Longley said. "I think we might be coming pretty close to finding them. Our line did just an excellent job. We came out in the first quarter and moved the ball like we were in midseason form, I was surprised.

"You just don't replace a back like Roger Smith, but we knew we had some guys with potential, you just don't want to compare them. We've got guys who will be good in their own right."

Another Longley was a little less surprised with the fine showing of the backfield tandem — Chad, the quarterback and son of the coach.

"I WASN'T really worried. Although our backs didn't do too well in practice when we started two-a-days, when we began our scrimmages they realy came on," the younger Longley said. "I thought we might be throwing the ball a lot more this season because we lost our backfield, but it looks like we'll be pretty balanced."

Longley, a two-year starter at quarterback, was six-for-nine throwing the ball for 71 yards and one touchdown — a 36-yard connection to Abel Mireles in the third quarter.

The Rangers opened the scoring by marching the ball fron their own 32-yard line into the Lions' end zone on the seventh play, all on the ground, after the opening kickoff. Rose capped the drive with an eight-yard TD run at 8:09 while Chad Cottrell added the first of his four extra points.

IT WAS Rose again who punched in for six points just before the end of the first quarter from two yards out to cap a 74-yard drive. Rose, Russell and Popham all contributed gains of 17 or more yards as the Greenwood front line of Steve Heryford, Brian Underwood, Don Rose and Billy Malson manhandled the Ozona defense.

Ozona mounted an offensive in the middle of the second quarter that was fueled mainly by a pair of Ranger mistakes. First Greenwood was called for hanving too many men on the field as Ozona punted the ball, then a pass interference call pushed the Lions as deep as the Ranger 18-yard line.

But fiery nose guard Garrett Mattison squeezed into the Ozona backfield for a pair of sacks on Ozona quarterback Steve Sanchez, the second one on a crucial fourth-and-16 play, to kill the threat.

Mattison also score the game's final touchdown with 5:50 to go in the game. He gained 18 yards total.

ALMOST OVERLOOKED in the cakewalk was the fine defensive effort of the Rangers, who held the Ozona offense to less than 100 yards on the ground and just 108 total. The Rangers, led by three sacks by Mattison, a sparkplug at 135 pounds, and some fine secondary play by Chad Longley and Bobby Clark, who picked off one Sanchez pass, refused to budge.

"We played well, but we made some mistakes and I'm sure the film will show a lot more of them," coach Longley said. "It's the win we're looking for, that's all. These pre-district games are good for us. We're just trying to build up our depth. We started three sophomores tonight, we've got to get them some seasoning before we start district."

The Rangers continue next week with a game at single A opponent Water Valley.

Royals surge into first place

Associated Press

Darryl Motley homered and Omar Moreno tripled and singled Friday night, leading Kansas City to a 7-1 victory and a doubleheader sweep of the Milwaukee Brewers that put the surging the Royals into first place in the American League West.

Kansas City increased its winning streak to six games and, helped by California's 6-2 loss to Baltimore, knocked the Angels out of first place for the first time June 21. The Royals had not led the division since June 8.

Steve Balboni hit two home runs to lead the host Royals to a 4-3 victory in 11 innings in the opener. Balboni's second homer, a solo shot with one out in the 11th, tied the score and Kansas City won it when Motley reached base on an error and scored on John Wathan's double.

Moreno tripled in the first inning of the nightcap and scored on a single by Lonnie Smith. Motely homered in the second and Moreno added an RBI single during a four-run fourth.

In other AL games, Toronto beat Minnesota 8-3, New York ripped Oakland 8-3, Seattle downed Detroit 8-4, Chicago routed Texas 12-1 and the Cleveland at Boston game was rained out.

In the National League, St. Louis blanked Atlanta 8-0, Houston edged Pittsburgh 4-3 in 10 innings and Cincinnati beat Chicago 7-5. New York was at Los Angeles, Philadelphia visited San Diego and Montreal faced San Francisco in NL night games.

good kick. They just broke it.

"We talked about not punting but decided to do it because we were ahead and even if they returned it they couldn't beat us," said McCutchen. "You've got to credit Monterey. They didn't give up."

According to Williams, he found he was going to be the game's punter "in the pre-game warmups and I haven't worked on it all week. We'll work on it this week in practice and all that will be corrected by Andrews."

Andrews is Midland High's opponent next week as they host the Mustangs at 8 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

Burns takes Boston lead

N. Mass. (AP) — Veteran George Burns, winless on the PGA golf tour since 1980, fired a 5-under par 66 for a 36-hole total of 133 and a two-stroke lead Friday in the $400,000 Bank of Boston Classic.

Burns sank clutch birdie putts on three of the last four holes to break out of a jam of golfers and take the halfway lead as rain and fog enveloped the Pleasant Valley Country Club.

"It got easier as it got darker," the 36-year-old Burns quipped after bettering his first round 67 on the 7,102-yard, par 71 layout.

Burns' five birdies in a bogey-free round enabled him to grab the lead from 1978 Pleasant Valley winner John Mahaffey, Buddy Gardner and Greg Norman, who were tied at 135.

Mahaffey, seeking to become the first two-time winner here since the PGA's first stop 20 years ago, had to settle for a 70 after sharing the first round lead with Australian Steve Elkington and Brad Fabel at 65.

Gardner, who recently observed his 30th birthday while taking a three-week break from golf to rest an ailing back, started the day three strokes off the pace and immediately took a bogey on his first hole. However, he settled down quickly and collected five birdies without another bogey for a 67.

Norman, who had an opening 67, had "an uneventful day" as he shot a 68 with five birdies and two bogeys.

Fabel slipped to a 72 and into a five-way tie at 137. Elkington, playing with a foreign exemption while marking time before trying for his PGA card this fall, took a 73 for 138, five strokes back.

Wayne Levi, the 1980 champion here, fired a second consecutive 68 in the morning. That put him in a tie at 136 with Steve Bowman, Jodie Mudd, Frank Conner and Chris Perry.

Sheehan in front

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Patty Sheehan, returning to competition after a two-week rest, fired a 4-under-par 68 Friday to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the $175,000 Portland Ping Golf Championship.

Nancy Lopez, the leading money winner on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour this year, was tied for second with Cathy Morse at 3-under-par 69.

Stephanie Farwig and Sally Quinlan were two strokes back at 2-under-par 70.

Sheehan, a winner twice this year on the LPGA tour, chipped in from 57 yards for an eagle on the par-5, 500-yard 10th hole.

She also had three birdies and just one bogey on the par-72, 6,285-yard Riverside Golf and Country Club course. Lopez, whose gallery included her husband, New York Mets third baseman Ray Knight, finished her round before rain began to fall, while Sheehan had to deal with the intermittent showers that fell through the afternoon.

"I don't think the playing conditions were that bad," said Sheehan, a five-year tour veteran from Los Gatos, Calif., "even though it rained off and on and it was a little windy out there."

Sheehan, fifth on this year's earnings list with $217,631, said she never plays more than four tournaments in a row. Her play Friday surprised her.

KEEPING AMERICA ON THE GROW

Eddie Albert: Actor, Conservationist

America is number one in agriculture because of a simple idea.

In the past, we invested in our young people. Today, they lead the world in agriculture.

Programs teaching production, horticulture, processing, sales and service, natural resources, forestry and agri-mechanics are essential.

Through such educational programs, young people learn to use the modern technology of agriculture to feed our nation and the world.

We have to keep America on the grow. We have to invest in the people and technology that ensures our world leadership in agriculture.

That's why your support of vocational and technical education in agriculture, and the Future Farmers of America in your community, is so important.

Time to quit asking machines to make media decisions

Computers don't have all the answers. Cost per thousand is not a magic talisman.

You have to factor in some imponderables, because what do machines know about human emotions like trust and believability? Asked in which medium they found the advertising most believable, more consumers said "newspapers" than the other four major media combined.*

Believe in newspapers. They can work marketing magic.

Hana Mandikilova...scores stunning upset.

Mandlikova faces Navratilova today

U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova shocked top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd 4-6, 6-2, 6-3 Saturday to join Martina Navratilova in the women's singles final at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

The victory sends Mandlikova into the title match on the hardcourts at the National Tennis Center for the third time and is a measure of revenge. In both 1980 and 1982, she lost the final to Lloyd.

It also snaps at eight Lloyd's streak of reaching Grand Slam finals.

Earlier Friday, Navratilova, seeking her third consecutive crown here, secured her spot in the championship match by crushing 16-year-old Steffi Graf of West Germany 6-2, 6-3.

'Follies' a musical whose time has come

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — On a recent hot Sunday morning, a line of eager ticket buyers spilled through the doors of Lincoln Center's Avery Fisher Hall, trailed down the side of the building, turned and wound toward the Metropolitan Opera House.

In two hours and 50 minutes, the crowd had purchased all the tickets for a special concert version of "Follies," the Stephen Sondheim-James Goldman musical that was to be performed at Avery Fisher Hall Friday and today and recorded by RCA Records.

Their anticipation seemed justified for what could be one of the biggest events of a budding Broadway season. The concert leads are Barbara Cook, Mandy Patinkin, Lee Remick and George Hearn in roles played originally on Broadway by Dorothy Collins, Gene Nelson, Alexis Smith and John McMartin.

The four are supported by a cast that includes Carol Burnett, Elaine Stritch, Liliane Montevecchi, Licia Albanese, Betty Comden, Adolph Green, Phyllis Newman and Alfred Drake. The orchestra will be the New York Philharmonic, conducted by Paul Gemignani.

Overseeing the concert and the recording is Thomas Z. Shepard, the man largely responsible for making Sondheim the most widely recorded of any composer currently writing for the American musical theater.

Shepard, a division vice president of RCA Red Seal, is a veteran of Broadway recordings, having produced such Sondheim cast albums as "Company," "Pacific Overtures," "Sweeney Todd" and "Sunday in the Park With George."

"Follies" represents a tantalizing musical challenge for Shepard.

"It's an unforgettable show. Anybody who has seen it, never gets it out of his system," he said in an interview. "It burns into you some way."

In part, the show is a tribute to the American musical, an homage to various composers and lyricists including Jerome Kern, George Gershwin, Harold Arlen and Dorothy Fields, filtered through Sondheim's unique prism.

But it's more than that. "Follies" is also about the loss of innocence, the feeling that the times and the theater epitomized by that wonderful old music are gone forever. The score contains some of Sondheim's best and most heart-felt songs of self-revelation, such as "In Buddy's Eyes," "The Road You Didn't Take" and "Too Many Mornings."

Broadway buffs have never been happy with the original cast album produced by Capitol Records. There are 22 numbers in the show, and when Capitol recorded it, the company insisted the show be contained on one album. Less than half the score was recorded. Such songs as "Rain on the Roof" and "One More Kiss" were eliminated entirely. Others, including "Broadway Baby," were edited.

Now, Shepard has a chance to preserve the whole work, which, despite a 16-month Broadway run, was not a financial success when it was first done in New York.

" 'Follies' was a show that failed for the wrong reasons. It was ahead of its time. It's a very adult musical," Shepard said. "It's one of the first musicals I know of that relies heavily on a subtext which often runs in contradiction to what's being said. "The characters are saying one thing while they mean something else. And that's much more easy to accept today than it was in 1971."

The two female stars are veterans of a Follies-type show and are attending a reunion with other members of the old company. Their pasts and present collide on stage of their old theater which is being torn down.

The concept for "Follies" was born when its original co-director, Hal Prince, saw a photograph of Gloria Swanson in Life magazine. She was dressed in an evening gown and standing in the rubble of New York's Roxy Theater, which was being demolished at the time.

Goldman wrote a special continuity for the concert production which will be narrated by Drake who plays Dimitri Weismann, the Ziegfeld-like producer.

Shepard had been thinking about a new "Follies" album for more than two years. The record will cost under $180,000, the going rate for cast albums.

American actor star of British TV series

By MATT WOLF

LONDON (AP) — American actor Michael Brandon is coming home. His television series, "Dempsey & Makepeace," which was filmed and first seen in Britain, will finally be available to U.S. audiences.

"Dempsey & Makepeace," a lighthearted detective show, produced by London Weekend Television, is being syndicated by the Chicago-based Tribune Entertainment Co. to 30 U.S. TV stations with a potential reach of 60 percent of the country. The programs start running this month.

In the series, the Brooklyn-born actor plays Jim Dempsey, a streetwise New York cop assigned to a special undercover unit of Scotland Yard. Dempsey is reluctantly paired with Harriet Makepeace, played by Glynis Barber, an aristocratic British sergeant. The sparks and humor stem from the fact that this odd couple doesn't get along very well.

Last spring, Brandon came to London to do the series because, he said, he was "ready for the commitment." Brandon was the first American actor chosen to star in an action-adventure series in the 17-year history of London Weekend Television. The role marks the 39-year-old actor's steadiest employment so far.

An overnight celebrity with his performance in the 1969 film comedy "Lovers and Other Strangers," Brandon appeared with Al Pacino on Broadway in "Does A Tiger Wear A Necktie?" and has starred in numerous theatrical and television films.

Divorced from the star of TV's "Bionic Woman," Lindsay Wagner, Brandon said his marriage to a TV series veteran made him aware of the perils of series work. Prior to "Dempsey & Makepeace," Brandon rejected 24 series offers.

"I lived through a marriage where I saw the enormous commitment that a TV series can be," he said. "I saw it consume the person I was having a relationship with.

"But after years of turning down steady work and doing the occasional film or play each year, I decided, why fight? Something came in that was definite, and I was ready," he said.

Contracted to film 48 episodes, Brandon described the experience "difficult and exciting," and said that he is enjoying the change of locale.

"You get tired of seeing Los Angeles on television," he said. "How many times can you shoot the boulevard where the joggers are, or the bluff above the ocean where people walk by the palm trees, or the Santa Monica pier, or the Hollywood sign?

"In a city, you walk out the door, and you're in life," he said. "That doesn't happen to you in Los Angeles. You walk out the door and there's nobody around."

Brandon said he liked "being the only American on the show. I'm in a very prestigious, very nice position, because they treat me very well."

Brandon has gotten to know London well, since the show has filmed at such city landmarks as Covent Garden, Tower Bridge and the elegant street called Park Lane. The series has also shown its star some of the differences between British and American action programs.

"The British tend to be very linear in their caper," he said, "whereas we'll go off the beaten track for a little side story — a love relationship on the side, or something like that. But when the British say action-adventure, they mean it."

Brandon said that his character has not yet taken a romantic interest in his female partner, but said that might happen in the next season, when Brandon hopes to write and direct several of the episodes.

But despite his present success, Brandon readily admits that his career has not always looked so good.

Kimbell Museum thrives on taste, guts, money

By CANDICE HUGHES

FORT WORTH (AP) — The story of how the Kimbell Art Museum snared a major painting by French artist Nicolas Poussin shows how taste, guts and big bucks have established this young institution as a player in the art world's big leagues.

"It's a coup to get any Poussin. His paintings are extremely rare," said William Jordan, the Kimbell's chief curator and deputy director.

When the Kimbell acquired "Venus and Adonis" at the end of April for approximately $1 million, it restored the historical luster to a neglected work and put Poussin in a public collection in the Southwest for the first time.

"It's more than just an acquisition for the Kimbell. It's a rediscovery of an early composition," said Kimbell director Edmund Pillsbury.

The painting, which was done between 1625 and 1628, is a lush, luminously sensual work based on the Greek myth of the goddess and her doomed huntsman lover.

Pillsbury spotted it in May 1984 in a dimly lighted basement at Christie's in London.

For years, a major Poussin had been on the Kimbell's "wish list."

The Kimbell pursues its ambition to become what Pillsbury calls "a great museum for the Southwest" with $100 million, one of the largest endowments of any U.S. art museum. The museum annually spends $7 million to $8 million on acquisitions.

Although it has been collecting for only 20 years, the Kimbell is already considered the finest art museum of its size in the United States, according to Thomas Hoving, former director of the Metropolitan Museum in New York and now editor in chief of Connoisseur magazine.

The Kimbell has made some good choices, such as the Poussin and "Two Young Women at a Window," a 17th-century Spanish masterpiece by Bartolome Esteban Murillo, considered lost for 61 years until the museum acquired it last year.

However, the Kimbell also bought what museum officials thought was a 12th-century Romanesque fresco in 1971 for $330,000. It turned out to be a forgery, probably painted by a French art restorer no more than 50 years ago.

When Pillsbury first saw "Venus and Adonis," it was dirty. Its authenticity had been questioned in 1966 by the British art historian and Poussin scholar, Sir Anthony Blount, who had written that the painting was done by an anonymous Poussin imitator.

However, Pillsbury's discriminating eye told him differently.

"It looked as if it was by Poussin," said Pillsbury, whom the French government recently made a knight of the Order of Arts and Letters.

The authenticity question had to be resolved. And there were economic considerations. Inquiries of scholars or sellers by a major buyer such as the Kimbell can cause a work of art's price to suddenly skyrocket.

"We seldom go into the auction market. You wind up bidding against people who have no limits," Pillsbury said. "That's not a very good way to run a railroad."

In addition, Pillsbury didn't think it would be possible to finish researching the painting by the July 6, 1984, sale.

"So I decided that I would do what I have done in several cases. I would follow the picture. I would track it at the sale," he said.

The day after a group of dealers bought the painting for $365,000 — jointly rather than bidding against each other — Pillsbury was on the telephone to one of the dealers.

"I said to him: I want to reserve the Poussin. We didn't discuss the price," Pillsbury recalled.

He had the painting sent to the conservation laboratory at the Met, where X-rays showed that the composition was changed while the work was in progress. This demonstrated a "thinking artist" at work rather than a copyist.

Pillsbury was now sure he wanted the painting.

"So I basically went to the dealer and said I think I want to buy it. How much?" he recalled.

'Poltergeist' sequel cost $6.2 million more than original

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — "Poltergeist II: The Other Side," a sequel to the 1982 movie about a family whose lives are disrupted by unpleasant forces, cost $6.2 million more to make than the original even though it used the same cast and production values.

The original "Poltergeist," co-written and produced by Steven Spielberg, was made for $12 million. The sequel has been produced for $18.2 million.

"Steven was able to get a good deal for special effects from ELM (Electric Light and Magic, George Lucas' wonder factory) which was in an idle period at the time," said executive producer Freddie Fields in explaining the leap in costs.

"Inflation plays a big factor, the cost of materials as well as three union pay raises, also the additional cost of the cast."

Michael Grais and Mark Victor, who co-wrote the original with Spielberg and are producing the sequel, took a calculated risk and wrote the new script for the same cast. They hoped it would win them over. It did. However, the actors and their agents wanted more money to repeat their roles.

JoBeth Williams and Craig T. Nelson star as the parents and Heather O'Rourke and Oliver Robins play their children.

"It was worth what we had to pay them," Fields said in an interview. "They're a very close-knit group; they really act like a family. That's something that isn't easy to achieve with actors."

Spielberg is not artistically involved in "Poltergeist II," although the prolific filmmaker retains a financial interest.

Man convinced murder aided grad students

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Theodore Streleski says he'll walk free from prison Sunday without remorse, convinced that by hammering a Stanford University professor to death he helped publicize the plight of graduate students.

"I judged correctly that the notoriety would bring press coverage," Streleski said in a recent prison interview. "People may make a value judgment about me or the validity of my judgment, but still I think I'm getting some message out there. So it worked to that extent."

The former graduate student killed mathematics Professor Karel deLeeuw in 1978 to protest the way the university treats its graduate students. At 8 a.m. Sunday, the 49-year-old inmate leaves the state prison in Vacaville unconditionally after serving seven years and 20 days on a second-degree murder conviction.

Streleski said that not only does he feel no remorse for the murder, but that it would defeat his cause to claim remorse.

"If I committed a murder to criticize Stanford, if I express remorse, I just throw my whole argument in the wastebasket," he said. "I feel regret. Not remorse...regret as I see the tragic impact on people. I'm sorry. But if I had it to do over again, I'd do it the same way."

Streleski also said he can't rule out the possibility of killing again.

"I foresee no immediate, or long-term, necessity for it," he said. "But in theory, if someone treated me like Stanford did, I could conceive of killing. But I'm going to work very hard not to get bogged down in anything" resembling his 19-year quest for a Ph.D. in mathematics from the university.

Streleski, a certified electrical engineer with a bachelor's degree in engineering physics from the University of Illinois, said he will seek work in the electronics field in the San Francisco Bay area and will change jobs every year or so to avoid any "long-term involvements."

If necessary to get work, he will cut his beard and long hair, which is held in place by a black shoestring, he said.

He expects little or no help from friends or family. He is divorced and corresponds with no one, including his mother in Illinois.

He plans to sue state officials for up to $2 million for defamation of character for publicly questioning his sanity in parole hearings.

Streleski said his criticism of Stanford stemmed from the "administration taking tuition payments, but not supervising the professors."

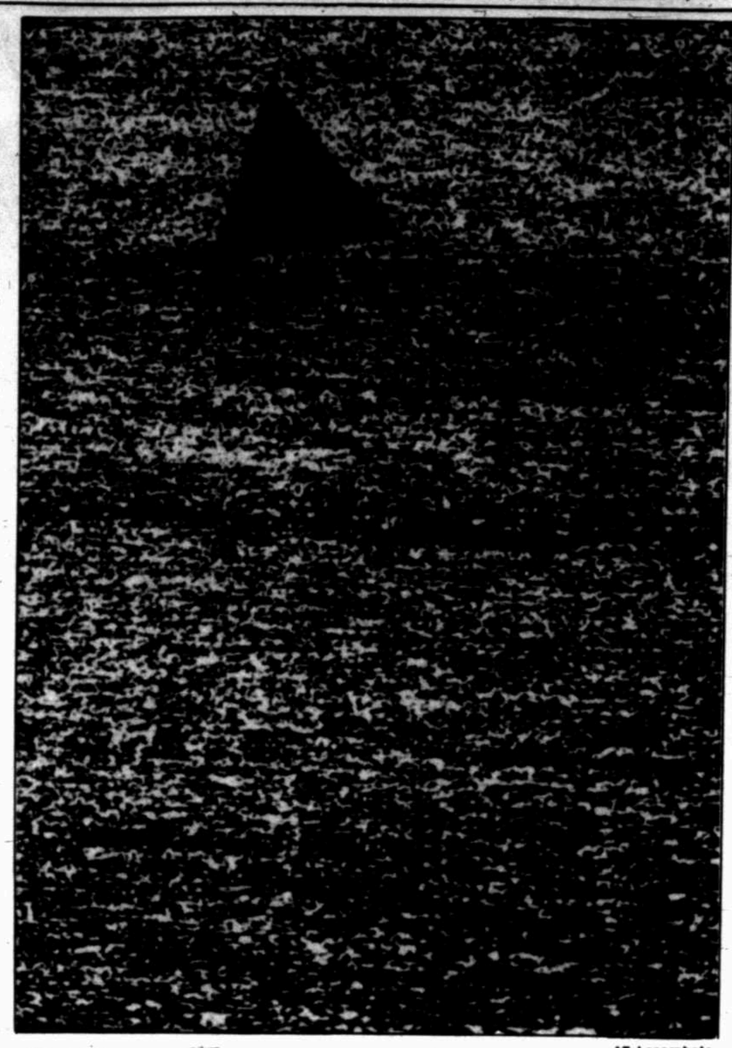

"The administration, rather, de facto, says to the professor, 'You're good. We've got to have distinguished people here. We've got you. We're both happy. Don't sweat anything,'" he said.

Streleski said that even though his criticism is directed primarily at the administration, he killed deLeeuw because he "was the most pointed and negative in his comments to me. He is the person I had the most contact with."

Streleski said that one time when he complained to deLeeuw, "his response, from very close up, was to say, 'Schoolboy,' at the top of his voice. I got his spit all over my face."

Once released, Streleski said he plans to carry out "a token exercise to prove that I am not violent," by visiting Santa Clara County and perhaps Stanford in the company of reporters. While in prison, Streleski refused to accept parole if it restricted his travel.

"I do intend not to be barred from Santa Clara County," he said.

Heat wave makes life miserable for nation

By LINDA WEINSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

The East Coast and Plains states sizzled Friday in the third day of a record heat wave that freed students from stifling classrooms, while snow fell in the Rockies and thunderstorms raked Michigan.

The mercury rose again into the 90s, or above, in the southern and central Plains and along the mid-Atlantic coast after a day of record-breaking temperatures. At least seven cities from Norfolk, Va., to New York City broke or tied temperature records for the date Thursday.

High humidity made the heat tougher to take, and Consolidated Edison in New York City reported record power use Thursday as people cranked up their air conditioners. Carriage horses were ordered off Manhattan streets as the mercury reached 94, breaking the record of 93 for Sept. 5 set in 1961.

Tom Grant, a National Weather Service meteorologist, blamed the East coast weather on "a typical Bermuda high sitting over the Atlantic states." The air aloft was dry and the sunshine intense, leading to the furnace-like weather, he said.

The Oklahoma Health Department issued a statewide heart alert as the heat index climbed above 105 on Thursday. When temperatures reach 100 degrees and the humidity exceeds 60 percent, the heat index — how hot it actually feels — is at least 105.

Schools were closed in some areas of the East and the central and southern Plains, and in many other districts, students were dismissed early to escape the afternoon heat. With temperatures expected to remain in the 90s Saturday, schools rescheduled athletic events from the afternoon to cooler morning hours.

But in North Carolina, Montgomery County schools Superintendent Larry Ivey questioned letting students leave early. "You have got to remember that we went to school when there wasn't air conditioning," he said.

Arthur Steller, superintendent of the Oklahoma City public schools, said teachers were allowing students plenty of water breaks and keeping outdoor play to a minimum.

In the northern Rockies, the problem wasn't the heat, but the cold, as the mountains got their first snowfall of the season. Some snow fell at the higher elevations in Montana and Idaho early Friday, and a winter storm warning for heavy snow was posted for Friday night for northwestern Montana's peaks. Forecasters predicted over a foot of snow above 5,000 feet, with heavy rainfall at lower elevations.

The cool, wet weather was a boon to firefighters battling the 31,150-acre Butte fire in east-central Idaho's Salmon National Forest. The dousing helped firefighters contain the stubborn blaze, which has burned since July 20, 24 hours early, allowing many of the weary fire crews to go home, said Jim Stone, a spokesman for the preserve.

Severe thunderstorms raked Michigan's Lower Peninsula early Friday, with heavy rain swelling the Flint River over its banks. The flooding prompted Flint authorities to evacuate 20 to 30 homes in the northwest section of the city, said Assistant Fire Chief John Bauldry. An undetermined number of others left on their own, he said.

The storms also knocked out power to 62,000 utility customers in southern Michigan, power companies said.

Young artificial heart recipient in urgent need of transplant

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The youngest man to receive an artificial heart remained in urgent need of a transplant Friday after suffering multiple strokes, as doctors waited for a response to their pleas for a human donor.

After Michael Drummond's setback, officials at University Medical Center listed him in critical and unstable condition.

But Drummond, 25, the sixth recipient of a Jarvik-7, was improved to serious condition late Thursday night, said spokeswoman Nina Trasoff.

The call for a donor heart went to local hospitals, regional transplant procurement agencies and two national organ-donor computer groups.

Three calls were received Thursday. An offer of an organ from a 46-year-old San Francisco man was declined because of his age. Officials also were notified of two other possible donors, from Phoenix and Oklahoma City, and were hopeful of the latter, though neither person had been declared brain dead.

But Friday morning, transplant coordinator Jan Copeland said, "The patient is not pronounced. I have no donor. It doesn't look positive at this point."

The transplant team, she said, was "just waiting." Mrs. Copeland, wife of implant surgeon Jack G. Copeland, said calls would go out to hospitals again.

A day earlier, Copeland said he was "fairly confident" of being able to transplant an appropriate donor heart within two days.

Copeland has intended from the time he implanted the device Aug. 29 to use it only temporarily, as a bridge to a transplant. But Thursday, he said the strokes, believed to have been caused by embolisms, or blood clots, in the left side of the artificial heart, had moved up the timetable for a second operation.

Neurological examinations and a brain scan indicated that Drummond did not suffer permanent brain damage, he said, but called the strokes Thursday morning "a major event in terms of changing our approach and motivating us to proceed with the transplant as soon as we can."

Drummond began slurring his speech and stuttering sometime after 7 a.m., and his right hand was limp and appeared paralyzed for a time, Copeland said.

Woman says phobia kept her from existing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A woman, saying she "just wasn't in the world-...wasn't existing" because fear kept her homebound for 30 years, said Friday that help is available for an estimated 13 million Americans with serious phobia problems.

Marjorie Goff of Washington said her message to phobia sufferers is "you can do it if you want to," stressing the availability of help. She also urged more government research and other assistance.

Afraid to leave home, "I just wasn't in the world. My body was here, but I wasn't existing," she said of the 30 years she spent suffering from agoraphobia, an abnormal fear of being in an open or public place.

"It's hard to believe I'm here," she said, crediting Jerilyn Ross of the Phobia Society of America, in Rockville, Md., with helping her. The society said the estimate of more than 13 million Americans with serious phobias was developed by the National Institute of Mental Health.

Ms. Goff, Ms. Ross and other cured phobics joined Rep. Michael Bilirakis, R-Fla., at a news conference on the National Mall near the Washington Monument — a site chosen because of the monument's significance in two major fears: heights and enclosed spaces.

Bilirakis is sponsoring a congressional resolution to designate October as Phobia Awareness Month. He said he hoped that getting Congress interested in the problem would focus more public attention, letting people with phobias know that they can be helped.

Ms. Ross, a one-time skiing enthusiast who developed a fear of high places, explained that phobias can be developed about virtually anything. She said one woman had contacted her because of a fear of hearing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

But phobias can be debilitating, she said, and most often involve situations in which people feel trapped, unable to get out if they want to.

The most common phobias, she said, include closed places, heights, public speaking, bridges, escalators, flying and tunnels.

She estimated that, like Ms. Goff, between 1 million and 2 million people suffer fear of leaving home.

In the past, this has most commonly affected women, she said, but there is a version found in men also, who force themselves to go to work, but then return home and don't leave until work the next day.

The cure for phobias involves therapy in which the person is helped to confront the problem a little bit at a time and then overcome it, she said.

Ms. Ross said she once was unable to visit friends in high buildings because of overwhelming fear that she would jump to her death — even though she had no intention of jumping.

People with phobias come to fear the fear itself, she said, and go to any lengths to avoid situations in which it occurs.

Rats lost muscle, bone on space flight, researcher says

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Rats experienced massive losses of muscle and bone strength during a week in orbit and returned to Earth limp "like dishrags," suggesting that astronauts on long voyages may need protection from the wasting effects of zero gravity, a scientist says.

Richard Grindeland, a researcher at Ames Research Center in California, dissected 24 rats flown on the space shuttle last spring and said Thursday that he found "very dramatic changes" in bone and muscle strength.

"Just after they came back, they (the rats) were limp, like dishrags," the scientist said. "They had no muscle tone."

The studies cannot be applied directly to humans, said Grindeland, but the research does suggest "we'll really have to address this as a serious problem for the astronauts."

Grindeland's findings were based on a microscopic examination of bone and muscle from 24 rats flown on the space shuttle Challenger last May. Twelve of the rats were 2 months old, comparable to the human age of adolescence, and the others were 3 months old, comparable to a human age of 25.

NATION IN BRIEF

Ex-Mafia leader sent to hospital for contempt

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Retired Mafia leader Joseph Bonanno Sr. left here Friday for a federal hospital in Missouri to be held on a contempt order for refusing to testify about organized crime.

Bonanno, 80, was checked out of a hospital and placed on a government-chartered air ambulance to be taken to the U.S. Medical Center for Federal Prisoners in Springfield, Mo., said U.S. Marshal's spokesman Felipe Rodriguez.

On Thursday, Bonanno had claimed he was too ill to answer a government prosecutor's questions about organized crime in New York. He was sent to a federal prison here, but was taken to St. Mary's Hospital in Tucson less than three hours later with complaints of chest pains.

Children want to help boy

Associated Press

Classmates of a Massachusetts boy given permission to attend junior high despite his case of AIDS responded Friday with support and a desire to raise money for a cure, while a New Haven, Conn., official said he won't allow children with AIDS to go to school.

Officials in New York, Florida and Indiana also considered the academic fate of students in their districts with the deadly disease.

In Swansea, Mass., 15 students approached the principal of Joseph Case Junior High School on Friday with plans for a fund-raising drive after officials confirmed that an eighth-grader with AIDS had been attending school since Aug. 27, the principal, Harold G. Devine Jr., said.

"I think we've weathered the initial storm," said Devine. "Kids, being kids, are now pursuing how they can help this victim. They are anxious to become active in some sort of activity that will be of some direct help to this youngster. Parents have expressed the same kind of concerns."

Train hits truck, sparks fire

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — A freight train slammed into a truck at a crossing in an industrial area Friday, sparking a fire that engulfed a lumberyard, authorities said.

Two people, both occupants of the truck, were critically burned, said Cynthia Nelson, a spokeswoman for the Englewood Fire Department.

The 3:30 p.m. collision between the southbound train and the tractor trailer in the southern suburb of Denver occurred as the evening rush hour was getting under way. All roads around the fire were closed, snarling traffic.

Firefighters from surrounding cities battled the blaze into the evening. Besides spreading to the nearby Alpine Lumber Co., the fire also swept through several of the train cars hauling coal from Wyoming.

Nutrasweet affects mice

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — An ingredient in the artificial sweetener NutraSweet has caused irregularities in some brain functions of laboratory mice, Utah State University researchers said Friday.

The report sent the stock of NutraSweet's maker down sharply on Wall Street, while the company discounted the research.

Roger Coulombe, a researcher in the USU Food Science Department, said aspartame induced changes in brain neurotransmitter levels controlling the pituitary gland, considered the "body's master gland."

Women run more colleges

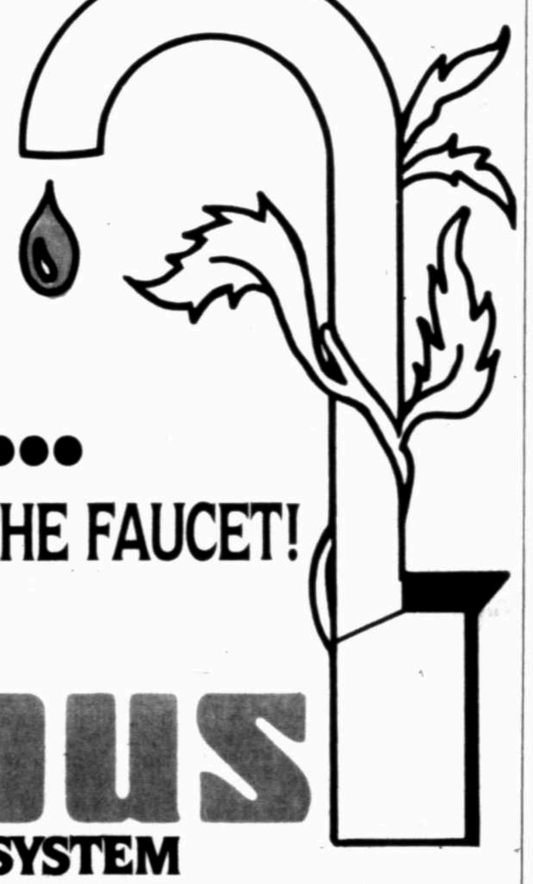

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of women college presidents has nearly doubled since 1975 and women now are running 10 percent of the nation's campuses, an academic group said Friday.

Seventy-one percent of the 286 women running colleges at the end of 1984 were in charge of coeducational institutions, according to the study by the American Council on Education's Office of Women in Higher Education.

Women also are running 84 of the 117 women's colleges, which marks a turnabout from a decade ago, when most of those colleges had men in charge, the study said.

Headlights streak "the drag" in the heart of Gainesville, Texas, as teen-agers drive the area to be seen, to see who is out and who is with whom.

Teens cruising on weekends cause jam-up of problems

By JEFF SIMPSON
Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Texas (AP) — On any given weekend night California Street and Grand Avenue leap to life, a seemingly interminable queue of headlights, fog lights, pickup trucks and overcrowded family sedans, all weaving their deliberate — and sometimes maddeningly slow — courses through the heart of the city, the area called "the drag."

This is the scene and the place to be seen, the focus of socializing and courting. With slight variations, it repeats itself in many cities and towns.

Just as much an event as a place, the drag is that time each weekend when we piled into Glenn's maroon Fairlane or Dave's silver Goat or Joan's black Camaro and crept through the same hamburger havens and taco stands week after week. We cruised to see who was out, who was with whom, pausing every so often to chat through open windows over a cacophony of rock 'n' roll cascading through midnight parking lots.

Gainseville's drag extends from the Safeway parking lot on the west end of California to the E-Z Food Store on North Grand. It is precisely 1½ miles from one turn-around point to the other. It takes 30 minutes to drive the three-mile round trip.

HOT SPOTS naturally include McDonald's on West California Street and Jack-in-the-Box on North Grand Avenue. Tom Thumb-Page sits at the center of the circuit. A dozen or so parking lots dot the drag. They are filled with cars and kids, pickup trucks and ice chests.

On his off-duty hours, Gainesville Police officer George Wintle works security at McDonald's. He has done that weekends for about four years and knows many of the locals by name. As he wanders through the crowded parking lot watching for possible trouble spots, kids call out, "Hey, Georgie! How's it going?"

Wintle answers and then saunters up to the various groups and chats. Just as he has for four years.

"We try to be real lenient," he said. "But when things get out of hand, you have to make a line somewhere." He said police have to uphold the law. That means, in part, clearing the parking lots that are posted closed after hours and checking flagrant law violations and rowdiness.

Wintle estimated that alcoholic beverages are in 98 percent of the cars cruising the drag during the weekend. As the parties leave the parking lots at the end of the evening, a night's worth of dead soldiers remain behind, shattered over the pavement, crammed into crevices and shoved into any place that will hold a drained bottle or empty can.

"WHEN EVER you have a large group of people, you're going to get loud and crazy," Wintle said. "It doesn't hurt anybody if you get loud or not, but it gets annoying to other people."

Salmon normally return to the river of their origin. But in Washington the salmon destined fror the Cowlitz River turned and went up the Kalama River. The explanation by state fisheries personnel was that they did this to avoid the volcanic hazards from Mt. St. Helens after the volcano there erupted.

Take Five

Ever notice the number of breaks a band takes while playing during an evening? Sitting out awhile refreshes them and brings them back eager to play more and better too.

By the same token, few of us can work around the clock at our best without pausing for rest and refreshment. As weeks turn into months, irritations and problems have a way of multiplying. We need a place where we can turn to renew our strength.

Just as there are band-stands, where musicians join together to perform music, the churches throughout our land serve as a central location where all may join together in the sharing of their faith. The Christian hope is the theme song, and our everyday lives are the unique instruments.

For a refreshing spiritual uplift, why not attend services this week?

Monks make wine for themselves

RELIGION

"The picking is the best part of wine-making. Well, drinking it is the best part, but the harvest comes right after that...Bugs, raccoons, deer — they all enjoy the grape, too."

— Brother Benjamin Brown, of St. Meinard Archabbey

ST. MEINRAD, Ind. (AP) — In a small vineyard on a hilltop overlooking this southern Indiana town, a few men are harvesting grapes for wines the wealthiest connoisseur can't buy.

"We like to refer to them as priceless," said Brother Benjamin Brown, who shares the vintages produced there with fellow monks at St. Meinrad Archabbey.

While many European monasteries operate wineries, St. Meinrad is among only a few in America to maintain the tradition.

"We're not the only one, but it is unusual," said the Rev. Gregory Chamberlain, a spokesman for the Benedictine monastery.

The seven-acre vineyard near the archabbey produces about 1,200 gallons of wine annually, most of which is consumed at daily Mass. The rest accompanies the monks' evening meal, when a visitor may occasionally be offered a glass.

Although the monastery's gift shop offers sausage, cheese and other food produced by the monks, none of the wine is sold.

"It's unusual for outsiders, for want of a better word, to have the opportunity to appreciate them," Brown said.

A compact, muscular man with a black beard, Brown, 36, has worked in the winery since he joined the order 10 years ago. Until then, he said, he preferred beer and had little knowledge of the grape.

Now, he rates the annual late-summer harvest as his favorite time of year.

"The picking is the best part of wine-making," he said. "Well, drinking it is the best part, but the harvest comes right after that."

The current crop has disappointed him with a poor yield, however.

"Bugs, raccoons, deer — they all enjoy the grape, too," he said.

Particularly hard-hit were the Rieslings and Steubens that are made into white wines, Brown said. "For the next year, we'll be able to have the whites only with our Friday meal of fish."

The Concord grapes used to make the monks' everyday table wine were more plentiful. Most Concord wine is syrupy sweet, but Brown makes a tart, bone-dry version. "It took some getting used to, but most of the monks have come to prefer it this way," he said.

He takes pride in the varietal wines he produces for feast days and special occasions.

Uncorking a barrel of 1984 De Chaunac, he siphoned out a glass of rich red nectar that could take a place in the cellar of a discriminating wine drinker.

"That's one we're particularly proud of," he said.

The winery was established soon after two monks from Switzerland founded the archabbey in 1853 at this town about 45 miles northwest of Evanston.

Some of the original casks still are used, but sophisticated new methods for testing sugar, acid and alcohol have been adopted. "We try to stay up to date with good wine-making practices," Brown said.

In the early part of the 19th century, Indiana led the nation in wine production. Hoosier vineyards were decimated by a root disease in 1845, and it has been only in the past 15 years that commercial wine-making has returned.

Brown has compared his product to that of the commercial wineries and finds it similar, but only once has a St. Meinrad wine been submitted to a judge for formal evaluation.

The 1980 vintage was rated excellent, but the monks have no interest in entering competitions.

"We more or less try to run a quiet winery," Brown said. "It's not something we try to advertise, since it's strictly for our own use. Besides, we might make a particularly fine wine and have only five gallons of it. That's one meal for us."

Brown downplays his own vintner's skill and does not label or give names to his wines. He is uncomfortable discussing them in terms of bouquet and finish.

"For me, the satisfaction is in making a product that's enjoyed by the rest of the community here," he said. "We could probably buy wine cheaper from the outside, but this way is more special."

The Newspaper BIBLE

AND THAT'S HOW IT ALL GOT STARTED!

When God began creating the heavens and the earth, the earth was at first a shapeless, chaotic mass, with the Spirit of God brooding over the dark vapors. Then God said, "Let there be light." And light appeared. And God was pleased with it, and divided the light from the darkness. So he let it shine for awhile, and then there was darkness again. He called the light "daytime," and the darkness "nighttime." Together they formed the first day. (Gen. 1:1-5)

How can we describe God? With what can we compare him? "With whom will you compare me? Who is my equal?" asks the Holy One. Look up into the heavens! Who created all these stars! As a shepherd leads his sheep, calling each by its pet name, and counts them to see that none are lost or strayed, so God does with the stars and planets! (Isaiah 40:18, 25-26)

"O God you live forever and forever! Don't let me die half through my years! In ages past you laid the foundations of the earth and made the heavens with your hands! They shall perish, but you go on forever. They will grow old, like worn-out clothing, and you will change them like a man putting on a new shirt and throwing away the old one! But you yourself never grow old. You are forever, and your years never end. (Psalm 102:24-27)

By faith--by believing God--we know that the world and the stars--in fact, all things--were made at God's command; and that they were all made from things that can't be seen. (Heb. 11:3)

Churches call for stiffer enforcement against pornography

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

An uprising is developing in the churches against what they see as immoral sex and exaggerated violence and profanity on television, along with a bias against religious values.

Calls also rose in various quarters for stiffer enforcement measures against the pornographic industry, with the U.S. Justice Department launching a year-long inquiry into that problem and how to control it.

Religious organizations were stepping up efforts on both fronts, holding hearings, gathering evidence, planning strategies.

In one maneuver, about 1,000 Christian leaders have pledged to promote a boycott of offending TV sponsors unless they modify the moral content of programming.

The networks are airing "an unacceptable amount of immoral sex, gratuitous violence and profanity which downgrades the dignity of human sexuality and disrupts peaceful social relationships," the signers said.

They included top officials of 67 denominations, including more than 100 Roman Catholic, United Methodist, Greek Orthodox, Lutheran and Episcopal bishops, as well as leaders of smaller evangelical churches.

They charged an "anti-Christian bias in many network programs," portraying Christians as either con artists and hypocrites or ignorant bunglers, and called for fairer treatment.

If changes aren't forthcoming to reflect the "realistic nature" of society by 1986, the signers they would promote a "well-organized boycott of advertisers' products supporting offending programs."

The signatures, reflecting an unusually diverse spectrum of religious leadership, both mainline and evangelical, clergy and laity, were gathered by the Mississippi-based National Federation of Decency.

At the same time, a National Council of Churches commission on sex and violence in film and television was preparing its report after a year-long study, including hearings in Los Angeles, New York and Washington, D.C.

A first draft of the report was to be ready in mid-September, with its final form the basis for a possible policy position by the 31 major Protestant, Eastern Orthodox and Anglican bodies making up the council.

The commission chairman, the Rev. James M. Wall of Chicago, says a key question is how to "protect vulnerable citizens," mainly children, from the TV "onslaught" without violating constitutional guarantees of free speech.

"We're patsies to the commercial enterprises until we say, 'Wait a minute, you also have a responsibility to children and you're not following it,'" he said.

Wall, editor of the ecumenical weekly Christian Century, says fear of federal censorship could lead to a voluntary reduction of TV sex and violence.

He says the motion picture rating system didn't come from any "altruistic feeling" of the industry, but out of fear of federal regulation, and that the same kind of fear could lead to voluntary restraints by the TV industry.

Among government witnesses, Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., calling for a better "balance between the profit motive and what will be tolerated in a free society," agreed that a boycott might be useful.

"Boycott is traditional and non-objectionable," he said. "To the extent that the churches could muster large groups to refrain from purchases — this is one of the most powerful restraints of all."

In another effort, the New York-based Morality in Media launched a grass-roots campaign against the proliferation of pornographic materials in theaters and bookstores.

At a kick-off conference in Denver in June, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop said he believes there is a strong link between pornography and some health disorders and anti-social conduct.

He listed some of the "grave and profoundly harmful outcomes" of pornography as sexual dysfunction, a rising rate of teen suicides, so-called "copy-cat" rapes, and violence.

Roman Catholic Cardinal John Krol of Philadelphia called pornography "a gross distortion of God's gift of human sexuality" that takes a destructive toll on society.

Meanwhile, a commission named by Attorney General Edwin Meese to make a year-long examination of pornography's "nature, extent and impact on society" held its first hearing in Washington.

A Southern Baptist ethicist, the Rev. Harry N. Hollis Jr. of Nashville, Tenn., urged bold measures to curb "not just a minor social irritation, but a major, far-reaching, influential malady" in the United States.

He told the commission that pornography harms both character and conduct, "not because it deals with sex, but because it exploits and degrades sex."

Country star Barbara Mandrell gives birth to boy by Caesarean section

Mandrell

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star Barbara Mandrell gave birth Friday to her third child, a 7-pound, 7-ounce boy named Nathaniel born in a Caesarean section, officials said.

Miss Mandrell's husband, Ken Dudney, was in the delivery room at the time of birth, said Jeanie Gent, a spokeswoman for the entertainer. The baby will take the middle name Mandrell. A hospital spokeswoman said mother and baby were doing well.

The birth comes one year after the singer suffered a broken leg, two broken bones in her ankle, a badly injured knee and a severe concussion in a traffic accident.

This week, she filed a $10.3 million lawsuit against the estate of the driver of the other car, who was killed in the accident.

Miss Mandrell, 36, is known for such hits as "I Was Country When Country Wasn't Cool," "Sleeping Single in a Double Bed" and "Only a Lonely Heart Knows."

ROME (AP) - Norwegian actress Liv Ullmann married an American real estate dealer in an unannounced civil ceremony Friday in Rome's city hall.

Photographers who were at city hall for another event surprised the newlyweds as they came away from the wedding, which was intended to be secret.

Miss Ullmann, 46, and Donald Saunders, 50, both of whom have been married before, were showered with rice by relatives and well-wishers as they stepped out onto the Piazza del Campidoglio, a hilltop square designed by Michelangelo.

Reached by telephone in her hotel room after the wedding, Miss Ullmann declined to answer any questions.

"Since (the city hall wedding) was private, we didn't feel we had to announce it," she told The Associated Press.

Miss Ullmann, known for her roles in the films of Swedish director Ingmar Bergman and Jan Troell, said there would be a religious ceremony on Sunday.

For the civil ceremony the bride wore an orchid in her blond, wavy hair and a light-colored suit with a print blouse, while the groom wore a dark suit with a white shirt.

Haggard

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Country-western star Merle Haggard, known for his songs about trains, will take a one-week whistle-stop tour from California to Illinois to promote FarmAid, the concert planned to benefit financially distressed American farmers.

The rail tour will start Sept. 16 in Bakersfield, where Haggard lives, and make 35 stops as it passes through Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma and Missouri before arriving in time for the concert in Champaign, Ill., on Sept. 22.

More than three dozen rock, country and blues stars are expected to perform at the 12-hour concert, which is patterned after Live-Aid, the extravaganza organized by rock musicians to raise money for famine victims in Africa.

KNOCKANDO, Scotland (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, on a tour of Scotland's distilling region, disclosed Friday that she enjoys an occasional Scotch after work.

But she appeared a bit daunted by the three-liter bottle of the whiskey she received during her visit.

"It's too good to drink," she said, holding the huge bottle. "It is such a rare bottle it will have to go down as an heirloom in our family."

Mrs. Thatcher said she enjoyed an occasional drop, "but perhaps not on the scale you would wish, because that would not quite become the office I hold."

ATLANTA (AP) — The son of TV magnate Ted Turner starts a new job this week in the Moscow bureau of his father's Cable News Network and says he hopes he won't be treated like the boss's son.

Robert Edward "Teddy" Turner IV will work as a researcher, tape editor and cameraman in the network's six-person Moscow bureau.

"I'll be disappointed if they go easy on me," said Turner, 22, who spent six hours a day learning Russian to prepare for his assignment.

While his goal is to work in the business end of his father's empire, Turner wants to learn all aspects of the operation — except reporting.

"I'd rather be on the other side of the camera," he said. "I don't think I have the voice or the looks for the on-air stuff."

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Patricia Ann Frustaci on Friday became the first of the family's three surviving septuplets to go home, as doctors declared her a normal child and handed her to her beaming parents.

"She's a healthy, beautiful baby," said Dr. Carrie Worcester, head of the four-doctor team at Childrens Hospital of Orange that cared for the babies born May 21. "She's overcome — without complications — the expected problems of prematurity."

"She looks fantastic," said mother Patti Frustaci, cradling the 3½-month-old infant adorned in a yellow dress and white sunbonnet.

Premature babies usually are kept in the hospital until they weigh 4½ to 5 pounds, and doctors said Patricia Ann now weighs 5 pounds, 2½ ounces. She had weighed just 1 pound, ½ once at birth.

Her brothers, Stephen Earl and Richard Charles, both weigh less than five pounds, and are expected to be released within two to four weeks, said Worcester.

Mrs. Frustaci, 30, a high-school English teacher from Riverside, had taken the fertility drug Pergonal before conceiving the septuplets.

She and Samuel Frustaci, 31, an industrial salesman, were already parents to 1-year-old Joseph Emanuel when the septuplets were delivered 12 weeks premature by Caesarean section. She also had used Pergonal before becoming pregnant with the first boy.

Frustaci smiled constantly Friday as he escorted his wife and daughter to the family car, which was festooned with balloons for the 35-mile ride home.

Doctors told reporters at a press conference that they preferred to discuss Patricia Ann's release than her brothers' conditions.

"She's developing as a pre-term baby," said Dr. David Hicks. "She's about like a two-week-old baby. She smiles, she makes noises and is able to focus."

The children were the first reported septuplets in the United States.

At birth, they weighed less than two pounds each and suffered from hyaline membrane disease, a disease that causes the lungs to collapse after each breath. One was stillborn.

The sickest and tiniest infant, David Anthony, nicknamed "Peanut," died 64 hours after his birth. James Martin died June 6 and Bonnie Marie on June 9.

Shamas Al-Khateeb, a Palestinian woman, wails in sorrow after gunmen killed two of her sons and wounded another in the Haret Hereik neighborhood near the embattled refugee camp of Bourj El-Barajneh near Beirut, Lebanon, Thursday.

Terrorist attack destroys radar equipment

NOHFELDEN, West Germany (AP) — Terrorists bombed a U.S. anti-aircraft missile site Friday, destroying radar equipment in the fourth attack on American military targets in a month. No injuries were reported.

Explosions destroyed three mobile radar units mounted on trailers at about 6 a.m. at the site near this town 30 miles from the border with Luxembourg, said Sgt. Bob Lentner, a spokesman at the U.S. Army headquarters in Heidelberg. He reported no damage to the missiles, which are conventional weapons.

Lentner said U.S. military personnel were on the missile site at the time, but no one was injured. He said three bombs exploded, but did not disclose their type.

Alexander Prechtel, a spokesman for the office of West Germany's chief federal prosecutor, said the bombers cut through a chain-link fence to get onto the site, and members of the leftist Red Army Faction terrorist group were suspected. Slogans used by the group were spray-painted on nearby buildings, he said.

Federal authorities believe the Red Army Faction carried out the Aug. 8 bombing at the Rhein-Main air base that killed two Americans and wounded 20 other people, and the murder of an American soldier hours before the bombing.

Leftist terrorists also are suspected in the bombing of an American forces radio antenna a week later, a failed arson attempt Aug. 12 in Frankfurt on a railway sleeping car reserved for U.S. military use, and the bombing Monday of a Dortmund computer firm that does business with the U.S. Army.

Prechtel said his office had taken over investigation of Friday's bombing. West German authorities already are hunting for more than a dozen Red Army Faction members suspected in the August attacks.

Lentner said the site that was attacked houses Hawk anti-aircraft missiles and belongs to the 32nd Army Air Defense Command.

Another Army spokesman in Heidelberg, Maj. Bob Dittmer, said: "The Hawk missile system is one of the U.S.'s mainstay air defense missiles in Europe. They are scattered all over on small sites."

The bombed missile site is near several villages in West Germany's southwestern corner.

Prechtel said 12 American soldiers were on duty and the damage was in the "millions of marks," — hundreds of thousands of dollars.

"There were two holes cut in the chain link fence, about 300 meters (300 yards) apart, leading us to believe that more than one person took part in the attack," he said.

Slogans sprayed in red paint on small buildings at the site included "Freedom for Guenter Sonnenberg," a Red Army Faction member who was convicted of terrorist activity and is serving time in a West German prison, Prechtel reported.

Riot police patrol Guatemala City as planned demonstration canceled

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Helicopter gunships chuffed overhead and riot police patrolled the capital, which was torn by riots for most of the week and paralyzed by strikes Friday. Organizers canceled a planned demonstration for fear of new violence.

There was widespread speculation about imminent changes in the military government. The Constituent Assembly, charged with supervising a return to civilian rule scheduled for January, met in secret session.

A report circulating among local journalists said the assembly would demand that a civilian-military junta replace the chief of state, Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores, who seized power in a 1983 coup.

Mejia Victores has set general elections for Nov. 3 and pledged to hand over power to an elected civilian government Jan. 14.

Labor and student groups had planned a protest march at 2 p.m. A labor leader said it was called off because "we do not want the army to say that we are provoking the security forces." He requested anonymity for fear of reprisals.

In advertisements repeated every half-hour on radio and television, the military government had called the planned march "unlawful" and urged people not to attend.

The organizers from the San Carlos National University student union, the Municipal Workers Union and the Guatemalan Labor Council had planned to route the march from the Municipal Building to the National Palace. They said a small rally would be held instead in the Civic Center, south of the National Palace.

Nicaraguan agents detain businessmen

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Security agents detained seven business leaders, prominent critics of the leftist Sandinista government, for more than two hours Friday without explanation, an opposition spokesman said.

Luis Rivas Leiva, general secretary of the Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinate, said the seven were taken into custody Friday morning at the office of the Independent Federation of Professionals while they were meeting with opposition leaders to plan celebrations for Businessmen's Day on Saturday.

The Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinate is a loose federation of business groups, student and labor unions, political parties and professional organizations who oppose the hard-line Sandinista policies.

"The agents showed an order for the arrest of the seven business leaders and took them to the State Security Prison. But shortly before midday, they were freed," Rivas Leiva told The Associated Press. "Right now we are waiting for them to return so they can tell us what happened."

A woman who answered the telephone at the State Security Office in the Interior Ministry said the office "knew nothing" about the arrests. She refused to identify herself.

Arrested were: Enrique Bolanos, president of the Supreme Private Enterprise Council; Ramiro Guardian, president of the Union of Agricultural Producers; Rosendo Diaz the union's general secretary; Ernesto Salazar, president of the Federation of Livestock Producers; William Baez, general aecretary of the Development Institute; Andres Zuniga, president of the Federation of Professionals; and Jaime Bengochea, president of the Chamber of Industries.

The detentions appeared linked to accusations by President Daniel Ortega that business leaders were receiving money from the CIA as part of a U.S. plot to overthrow the Sandinistas.

Palestinian guerrillas repulse Shiite attacks

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas firing mortars and machine guns repulsed a series of attacks Friday by Shiite Moslems on Beirut's Bourj el- Barajneh refugee camp.

The renewed fighting at the camp and night-long battles in which the Shiite Amal also battled Druze militiamen in West Beirut killed at least 22 people, police said.

Police reported that more than 85 were wounded in the fighting, the worst outbreaks in the Lebanese capital since April.

The Amal's clashes with the Druse ended at dawn and police put the casualty toll at 10 dead and 45 wounded. A few hours later, Amal militiamen launched assaults on the sprawling Bourj el-Barajneh camp in a new attempt to crush Palestinian guerrillas entrenched there.

There were no new casualty estimates for Friday's fighting. But police said earlier tlat 12 people were killed and 40 wounded in the camp battles overnight.

By police count, 19 people have been killed and 115 wouoded around Bourj el-Barajneh since the violence started Tuesday night. Friday's offensive on the shantytown marked a resumption of a five-week camps war in May and June. Bourj el-Barajneh is the only one of Beirut's three refugee camps to hold out in the May-June fighting.

The guerrillas put up a strong defense, firing mortars and rocket-propelled grenades and moving swiftly between strongpoints in buildings and behind huge earth mounds. Squads of fighters from each side battled with machine guns and 106mm recoilless rifles in the northeast corner of the sprawling shantytown.

Armored vehicles loaded with Amal fighters took positions around the camp, which has an estimated population of 35,000.

Heavy Amal anti-aircraft guns mounted on trucks hit deep inside the camp with long bursts down streets carpeted with thousand of cartridge cases sparkling in the sunlight. The thunder of 106mm and 75mm recoilless rifles fired from jeeps boomed out again and again.

Young Amal militiamen wearing black headbands emerged from the alleyways shouting "Amal strong, Amal strong" and vowing to "crush the Palestinians."

Police officials manning a roadblock near the camp said they believed the Palestinians have an estimated 2,500-strong force inside the camps.

Thousands of civilians huddled in basements and bunkers. Many have been there since the fighting was renewed Tuesday.

Amal's attacks provoked conflicting reports about mass killings of Palestinian civilians.

The Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Moscow-oriented faction, claimed in a statement that Amal fighters massacred 44 Palestinian civilians in an apartment complex on the edge of Bourj el-Barajneh Thursday night.

Amal officials denied the charges. But they said five Palestinians, four men and a woman, were killed near the camp by gunmen avenging the death of their leader's brother.

The officials said the gunmen were not Amal militiamen and were still at large.

The Democratic Front statement claimed that 33 men, women and children were gunned down in the three-building complex.

Four more people reported killed in Chilean violence

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Four more people were reported killed in violence spawned by communist-led protests of military rule, raising the toll to 10 in three days, and the army threatened harsh action to stop it.

Gen. Rene Vidal, commander of the Santiago military zone, said Friday that anyone "surprised in acts of vandalism, looting, sabotage and terrorism...will risk all the consequences of any measures the authorities feel obligated to take."

The warning, issued in writing and broadcast at midday, came as hospital authorities reported the death of a 6-year-old boy shot in a looting incident Friday morning in the southern neighborhood of La Cisterna. Details of the incident were unclear.

Three other people were fatally shot Thursday night and six were killed Wednesday, police said.

Army, air force and riot police patrolled this Andean capital of 4 million people for a third day. Except for the looting in La Cisterna, the city was reported calm.

Police officials attempted to ease political tensions by urging the family of at least one shooting victim to postpone his funeral and keep it private. Funerals of dissidents often turn into anti-government marches.

The demonstrations started Wednesday and paralyzed parts of Chile's largest cities. They were called by a communist-led labor group and a slum residents' organization.

Thousands joined in street protests that disrupted public transport. Mobs looted stores in poor neighborhoods of Santiago after dark.

Nixon still honored by Chinese leaders

By JEFF BRADLEY

PEKING (AP) — Richard M. Nixon's courtship of China, perhaps the high point of his presidency, has been rewarded this week by near-adulation in a nation that never understood Watergate.

His easy entree to the Communist hierarchy for searching, private discussions is almost unprecedented among the stream of official visitors to Peking.

The rapturous reception he received from 3,500 students and faculty at the University of International Business and Economics said even more about the esteem in which he is held, 13 years after he revived U.S.-China relations.

The university audience applauded him 10 times before he began speaking, gave him a standing ovation, played "America the Beautiful" and thrust out copies of his books for his autograph.

Even General Secretary Hu Yaobang of the Communist Party brought along a copy of a Nixon book — in Chinese translation — to show how much he respected the 37th president's views.

Greeted everywhere as "an old friend," Nixon, 72, is making his fifth visit to China as a government guest, with premier accommodations at the Diaoyutai state guesthouse in Peking and a Boeing 737 at his disposal.

The Foreign Ministry even assigned the head of its American desk, Zhang Wenpu, to accompany him on a three-city sightseeing tour concluding his visit.

As he left Peking Airport on Friday for the ancient capital of Xian and a glimpse of the 2,200-year-old terra cotta army of China's first emperor, Nixon said:

"Chinese hospitality is world famous and I was exposed to a great deal of it.

"What really made the visit memorable was the opportunity to meet with the top leaders and to have very full discussions in view of their heavy schedules."

They covered "all major issues" in the world, and were very frank, he said.

Nixon, who once described his 1972 visit as "the week that changed the world," was especially interested in Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping's Western-style economic reforms designed to unleash market forces. He met Deng Friday.

"I come away convinced: One, that the reforms are successful, and two, that they will continue. There will be no turning back," Nixon told The Associated Press.

Deng, China's 81-year-old paramount leader, was purged by leftists when Nixon first came to China and was still out of favor during the president's post-Watergate visit in 1976. But the two men met in 1979 and 1982 when Nixon returned.

Many thought the 1982 "nostalgia" tour, covering the same stops as his landmark trip 10 years earlier, would be Nixon's swan song, a media event covered by major TV networks and involving a large Nixon entourage.

This time he came with two aides and some of his engagements went unreported. He declined interviews and the Chinese media disclosed little of what went on in his meetings with Deng, party leader Hu and Premier Zhao Ziyang, the three most powerful men in the People's Republic.

Significantly, however, both Hu and Zhao had at their sides the two men regarded likely to succeed them following expected promotions this month: secretariat member Hu Qili and Vice Premier Li Peng.

Mao Tse-tung opened the door to Nixon because of his concern about the Soviet military threat. He told writer Edgar Snow in 1970 that he preferred men like Nixon to social democrats and revisionists. "Nixon might be deceitful, but perhaps a little bit less so than some others," Snow quoted the chairman.

Blast wounds man planting bomb

JERUSALEM (AP) — An explosion Friday in an outdoor marketplace filled with shoppers seriously wounded a man who witnesses said was trying to plant a bomb under a car.

It was the third attempted attack on Israelis since Tuesday and followed the stabbing on Thursday of an Israeli truck driver in the occupied Gaza Strip.

At least 13 Israelis have been killed this year in shootings and stabbings that have replaced the street riots previously common in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip seized by Israel in the 1967 Mideast War.

Two Palestinians were arrested Friday morning in the stabbing of the truck driver and the military command said they had admitted the attack. It said soldiers tore down the tar-paper shacks of the two suspects at the Rafiah refugee camp in the Gaza Strip.

A Palestinian source identified the suspects as Youssef Mohammed Abu-Armanah, 22 and Said Fahri Ibrahim Afanah, 23.

The army maintained a curfew in Gaza city, barring residents from leaving their homes, and in the West Bank city of Hebron, where one Israeli soldier was fatally stabbed and another was wounded Tuesday.

Armed Jewish settlers entered Gaza city and Hebron and Ramallah Friday for a second day and mounted street patrols. Some Israelis spoke of the rifle-carrying settlers as "vigilantes."

An army spokesman said troops would not stop the settlers' patrols.

Friday's blast occurred about noon near the office of New York-born Rabbi Meir Kahane, an anti-Arab militant who is currently in the United States. Dozens of his supporters rallied in the streets shouting "Arabs out!" before they were dispersed by police.

Police spokesman Rafi Levi told The Associated Press that police "presumed the explosion was the work of terrorists." He described the bomb as a "medium-sized package of dynamite" and said 20 Arab suspects were arrested.

Levi said only one person was wounded by the explosion at Mahane Yehuda market, but he refused to elaborate.

An ambulance attendant who treated the wounded man told the AP that the victim was "the terrorist himself. The device blew up in his face."

Eli Hershkovitz, a news photographer who arrived moments after the blast, said the wounded man's face and chest were "blown away."

A policeman who declined to give his name said "the explosion occurred when the terrorist tried to put the bomb either near or under the car."

The attacks have persisted despite a government crackdown on Palestinians that began last month, including four deportation orders and 68 jail sentences without trial. Three of the expulsion orders were appealed to the Supreme Court.

Leaders of 45,000 Jewish settlers in the West Bank and Gaza, inhabited by 1.3 million Arabs, blamed the escalating violence on a government freeze on settlement building since last year.

Arabs interpreted this "as a sign of surrender," said Otniel Schneller, head of the West Bank settlement council, in an Army Radio interview.

Underwater robot locates nose section of Air-India jet

CORK, Ireland (AP) — An underwater robot has found part of the nose section of the Air-India jetliner that crashed off Ireland in June, but an investigator said Friday it was too early to say what caused the disaster.

Canadian expert Terry Boyko, who has been assisting Indian investigators, said part of the nose showed up for the first time in photographs taken by the Scarab II robot about 10 days ago.

Boyko said investigators studying pictures taken by Scarab II had come to no conclusion yet on where or how the plane broke apart.

He dismissed a report in London's Daily Mail which said the nose was found more than 200 yards from the main debris, strengthening the theory that a bomb exploded the plane. The paper said the nose section broke away just behind the plane's forward door, indicating a blast in the forward luggage hold a few feet away.

"It (the nose) was found in the general location of other parts of the aircraft...," Boyko said in a telephone interview. "It would be premature to make any comment with respect to cause. We don't know what caused the crash yet."

"We've been studying the film and we're not sure what happened," he said.

The Boeing 747, bound from Toronto and Montreal to Bombay, crashed into the Atlantic Ocean.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Witnesses identify Sikh

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Three witnesses to the assassination of Hindu politician Arjun Dass have identified one of the gunmen as reputed Sikh terrorist Lal Singh, sought by the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation, a senior police official said Friday.

Police were interrogating four suspected Sikh extremists in connection with the killing of Dass, a city legislator who was shot with automatic weapons Wednesday at his office here. A fifth young Sikh arrested with them killed himself by taking poison Thursday in jail, police said.

Security around politicians and lawmakers was tightened and "drastic changes in security arrangements" were made after Dass was shot, the police official told The Associated Press.

He spoke on the condition he not be identified.

New Israeli play banned

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel's Film and Stage Censorship Board has banned the performance of a new play showing acts of brutality by Israeli soldiers in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, the board's chairman said Friday.

"We thought it would damage the army...and it could also incite not only Arabs but also Jews to violence," Yehoshua Yustman told The Associated Press.

He said the board wrote the management of Haifa's municipal theater that it felt parts of the play would outrage Jews by drawing comparisons between Israel's occupation of the West Bank and Nazi rule in occupied Europe.

Yitzhak Laor, author of "Ephraim Returns to the Army," was quoted by the Al Hamishmar newspaper as saying the play was based on documented historical reality and that the board must have misunderstood it.

Airline reduces exits

LONDON (AP) — British Airways is sticking to its decision to reduce the number of emergency exits on its fleet of Boeing 747 jetliners from 10 to eight, the state-owned airline's chief executive said Friday.

Colin Marshall said in a statement that the airline removed one exit door over each wing because they were unreliable and their removal gives passengers more room.

Argument over the changes, first made known late last year, was renewed after 55 of 137 people aboard a British Airtours Boeing 737 died in a fire at Manchester Airport on Aug. 22.

Young Saudi technocrats train on computers, part of the "new" that bothers many of the fundamentalists of Islam who wish to maintain the old ways.

New, old ways war in Arab world

By MICHAEL ROSS
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

CAIRO, Egypt — The hero of Suez sat behind a coffee- and ink-stained desk, surrounded by flies, followers and dusty stacks of old papers. His bony fingers picked absently at the frayed ends of a grimy plastic fly swatter as he lectured the young, eager men around him about God, politics, Egypt and Islam.

"He is our guide and our leader," said a bearded young man who had come all the way from Ismailia, on the Suez Canal, to hear Sheik Hafez Salama speak. "The government should listen to him. But it cannot because it is controlled by the United States."

In 1973, Salama stubbornly refused to leave the city of Suez before advancing Israeli tanks, thus earning himself the nickname "hero of Suez." Today, he stands just as stubbornly before his own government, demanding the immediate and full implementation of sharia, or Islamic law.

If Salama and other fundamentalists like him get their way, liquor would be banned, all women would be obliged to wear long dresses and head scarves in public and thieves would answer for their crimes with the loss of their hands.

Relations with Israel would be severed, Salama said, "because of its continued occupation of Arab lands." Relations with the United States, which last year provided Egypt with nearly $1 billion in aid, would also be broken, because of its support for Israel.

When asked during a recent interview what effect such drastic changes would have on the Egyptian economy, Salama replies, "Our income comes from God."

Salama is widely regarded as the most vocal of Egypt's militant — but internally divided — fundamentalists. The government calls them "an extremist minority" and says they are not representative of "the people's democratic views." An Egyptian political analyst estimates that all together, the fundamentalists command a following of not more than 300,000. "Not much," he added, "in a nation of 48 million.

But there is little doubt that the appeal of fundamentalism is growing in Egypt, as it is elsewhere in the Middle East, even if no one has come along yet to unite the movement.

"There is definitely a lot more religious conservatism in Egypt now than there was 10 years ago," a Western diplomat said recently. "And it's evident everywhere you look."

On the streets, more and more women are wearing Islamic dress — head scarves and long sleeves. Until early July, when the government banned them, religious stickers bearing Koranic inscriptions could be found on the windows of most cars, from clanking, Soviet-made Ladas to sleek new Mercedes-Benzes.

"The rich are scared of the stridency of the fundamentalists, and the poor don't understand the political and economic implications of what they preach," an Egyptian intellectual said. "But most people here, rich or poor, are religious. They are for Islam."

The government of President Hosni Mubarak is taking seriously the challenge posed by Islamic militancy. "It has looked, with something akin to horror, at what has happened in Iran, Sudan and south Lebanon," a Western diplomat said. "It doesn't want it happening here."

Most experts, Western as well as Egyptian, caution against taking the Iranian parallel too far.

For one thing, fundamentalism as preached by the Sunni Moslems of Egypt is far different from the fiery Shia Moslem militancy practiced in southern Lebanon or Iran.

"Egyptian fundamentalism is different from Saudi fundamentalism, which is different from Iranian fundamentalism," a Western diplomat said. "To lump them all togather, to confuse them as the Western press so often does, is like saying that the Moral Majority represents all Christians in the United States."

Mubarak's two immediate predecessors, Anwar Sadat and Gamal Abdel Nasser, tried to contend with fundamentalism by harnessing it to their own political purposes. Sadat openly encouraged the fundamentalists in order to check the influence of the Nasserites and other leftist opponents. But this soon got out of hand and helped lead to conflicts with Egypt's Coptic minority, which at the time was itself becoming more militant under the influence of activist Christian bishops led by Pope Shenouda III, patriarch of the Coptic Church.

When mounting sectarian strife finally erupted into full-scale riots in Cairo in June 1981, Sadat cracked down and arrested more than 1,500 opponents — Christian, Moslem and secular. But he failed to get them all. One Moslem extremist group evaded the dragnet, and on Oct. 6, 1981, five of its members assassinated Sadat as he reviewed a military parade.

Mubarak's way of dealing with fundamentalism, and with dissent in general, has been a bit different.

Like Sadat, he has on the one hand sought to appease the fundamentalists — in effect, to "out-fundamentalize" them — by acceding to some of their demands. Egypt Air, for instance, has stopped serving liquor on its flights, an expurgated edition of "Thousand and One Nights" has been banned on grounds of obscenity, and the popular American television series "Dallas" has been put aside in response to fundamentalist complaints.

Yet, while proffering his predecessors' carrot, Mubarak has also been a lot more lenient with his stick. Upon assuming the presidency, one of Mubarak's first acts was to release religious leaders from jail and to invite the opposition to the presidential palace for discussions on Egypt's political future.

The consensus that emerged from that meeting, which Mubarak has more or less followed, was that more democracy should be introduced into Egypt to break the cycle of violence and repression that was uniting radical religious elements.

On this score, Mubarak gets high marks from Western diplomats. Although there were opposition charges of ballot-rigging, last year's parliamentary elections were widely regarded as the freest in years. The press remains on a short leash, but the judiciary has been given a new degree of independence and has exercised it on several occasions, including last year's acquittal of 174 fundamentalists accused of trying to overthrow the government in the wake of Sadat's assassination.

But more freedom has also given the fundamentalists more opportunity to lobby more loudly for Islamic law. And, to varying degrees, their message is being embraced at all levels of Egyptian society.

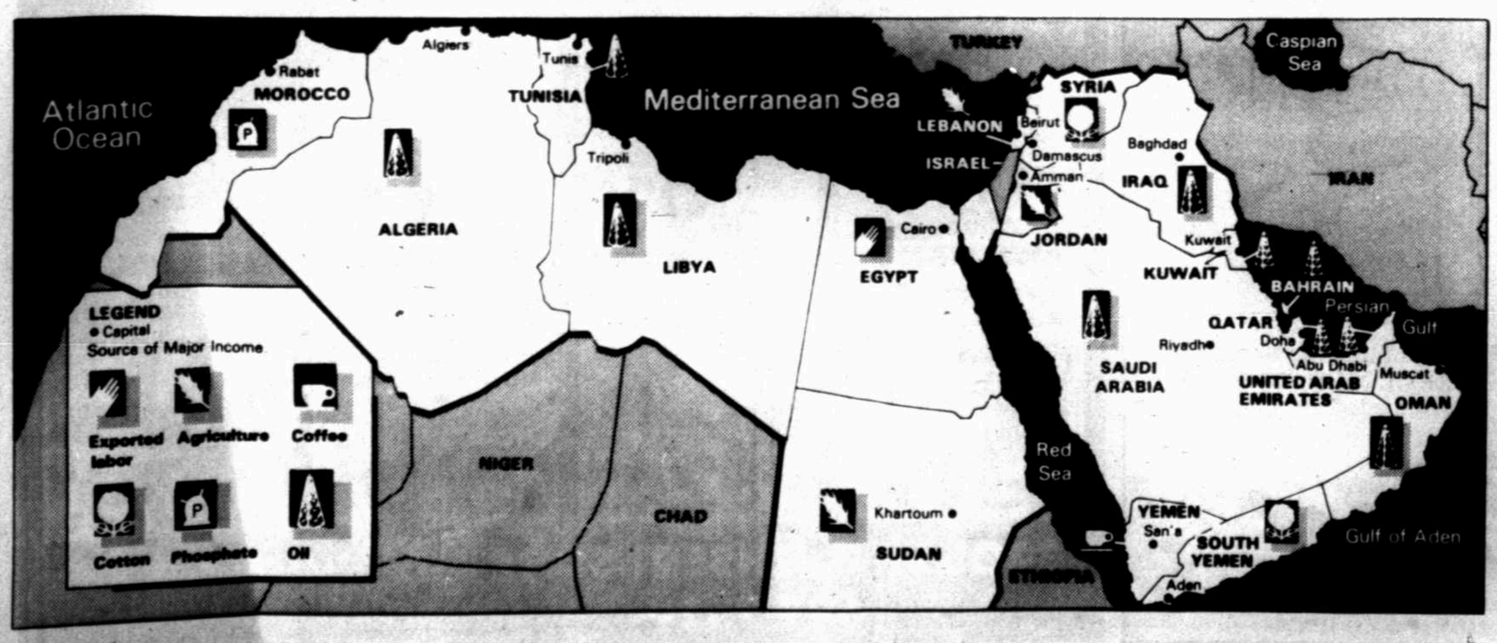

For the rich, there are now "Islamic chic" boutiques offering imaginative and brightly colored clothing for the fashion-conscious but respectable Moslem woman.

Among the educated, especially the students who have traditionally been involved in the Islamic movement, fundamentalism fills what one diplomat believes has been "an ideological vacuum" created in party by Mubarak's low-key, economy-oriented leadership.

"Nasser offered charisma and pan-Arabism," the diplomat said. "Sadat promised peace and reigned like a pharaoh. But Mubarak's is a very non-ideological government. Under Mubarak, the debate has been over the allocation of resources, not ideology. In a sense, he is Egypt's first non-pharaoh."

Among the poor, fundamentalism's hold is harder to judge. But its ability to "articulate social and economic grievances" has a powerful appeal, the diplomat said.

An Egyptian writer put it this way: "There is a momentous debate going on in Egyptian society at the moment. On the one hand, you have the government preaching about democracy and a prosperity that for most does not even exist yet. On the other, you have people preaching purity, piety and an end to corruption by the rich. You tell me who's likely to win that debate."

Texas couple gives restored village to Baylor University

WACO (AP) — More than 100 years of history will be moving onto the Baylor University campus.

Texas rancher, oilman and attorney Bill Daniel and his wife, Vera Faye Daniel, announced Friday that they are donating 15 buildings that have been part of their sprawling Plantation Ranch near the southeast Texas town of Liberty to Baylor's Strecker Museum.

The historical buildings are part of the settlement along the Trinity River that was colonized by Aaron Cherry Sr. for Spain in 1818, the oldest Anglo settlement in Texas.

All the buildings have been completely restored at a cost of about $2 million to the Daniel family, which has maintained them since aquiring the Plantation Ranch in the 1940s.

Baylor will be new home to a town hall, a two-story hotel, a one-room schoolhouse, a commissary (general store and post office), a blacksmith shop, a harness house and a saddlery, which once served as slave quarters.

The Daniels also are donating to the university the "Texana Hall of Memories," which was the village saloon, a livery stable, a dance hall, a hide house, a cotton gin, a log cotton house, a log barn and a planter's house.

The buildings are worth an estimated $3 million, said Charles Attal, president of the South Texas chapter of the American Society of Appraisers.

The couple is supplementing the gift with a $300,000 endowment to help maintain and operate the village and employ a full-time curator.

"We are giving this historic village and all its artifacts to Baylor, who we feel will carry on where we left off and guarantee its preservation," said Daniel.

The couple is supplementing the gift with a $300,000 endowment to help maintain and operate the village and employ a full-time curator.

"We are giving this historic village and all its artifacts to Baylor, who we feel will carry on where we left off and guarantee its preservation," said Daniel.

"It's a shame for this outpost to leave its original setting, but of all the proposals offered us from New York to Hollywood...we are happiest with the thought of its entering into the educational process," he said.

Daniel, who served as governor of the U.S. Pacific territory Guam during the early 1960s, attended Baylor.

The ranch buildings have served as museums for his own historical artifacts, which date as far back as 300 years. Some of the artifacts also will be donated to Baylor.

"Restoring Plantation Ranch and perpetuating this old village has taken tremendous effort and cost untold money through the years," said Mrs. Daniel. "The thousands of artifacts and accumulations date back to and include 10 generations of our own families."

Area state senators named to rural water task force

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, and Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, were named Thursday to a task force studying rural water quality by Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

The 28-member task force, which will be making the first comprehensive study of rural water quality problems in Texas, is headed by Hightower. Other members include farmers, water supply corporation officials, conservationists and consumers, a Texas Department of Agriculture spokesman says.

"Sen. Montford and Rep. Shaw are two of the Texas Legislature's most active and knowledgeable members on our state's critical water issue," Hightower said Thursday. "Their willingness to serve on our task force gives it the additional punch it needs to find solutions and implement them."

Hightower said that according to an Environmental Protection Agency study, two-thirds of rural water sources may be contaminated at levels above federal standards.

The task force was to meet today at Prairie View A&M University, with the focus of the meeting being health problems caused by improperly designed, installed or located septic tanks and water well systems.

"To most of us in Texas, getting a clear, clean glass of water simply means turning on the tap," Hightower said. "But over one-and-a-half million Texas farmers, ranchers, farmworkers and other rural residents still cannot take their water quality for granted."

Mattox: Photos can be disclosed

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Photographic negatives taken by police at the scene of an accident are subject to disclosure under the Open Records Act, Attorney General Jim Mattox has ruled in response to a question by Midland first assistant city attorney Keith Stretcher.

Mattox said in a legal opinion that publication of such photographs "would not infringe" on the accident victim's family since the right of privacy is personal. "The relatives of a deceased person may maintain an action only for the invasion of their right of privacy," Mattox stated. "No such action will succeed, however, if the information that is published does not refer to them."

In a letter to Mattox, Stretcher asked if negatives that have not been developed showing the scene of an accident are public records under the law, and Mattox replied that "public information" includes all information collected, assembled or maintained by governmental bodies pursuant to law.

"It has been suggested that these negatives are not 'public records' because they are not 'developed materials,' " Mattox wrote. "We disagree."
