IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN — This hopping bunny (or whatever) illustrates the byword for observing daylight saving time — spring ahead in the spring, fall back in the fall. Then like it or not, you'll be in tune with officialdom, timewise, at least. (AP Laserphoto Cartoon)

Daylight Saving Time On Verge Of Arrival

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most Americans will set their clocks ahead an hour tonight to get a jump on daylight saving time.

Officially, daylight time becomes effective at 1 a.m. CST Sunday, but the Department of Transportation, which regulates time zones across the country, suggests setting the clock ahead before retiring tonight.

If you usually go to bed at 11 p.m., you should move the clock ahead to midnight. The lost hour will be recouped on the last Sunday of October when the country returns to standard time, in another 26 weeks.

Exceptions to the time change are Arizona, Hawaii, part of Indiana and the Virgin Islands, American Samoa and Puerto Rico. Those areas remain on standard time the year around.

The law mandating semiannual time changes was enacted as the Uniform Time Act in 1966 and it permitted any state to exempt itself in whole or in part from the time changes.

Congress altered the act in 1973 with an emergency bill responding to the energy crisis brought on by the Arab oil boycott. That act called for year-around daylight saving time.

The emergency act was repealed Feb. 23, 1975, when parents protested their children were endangered going to school in the dark and amid claims that only a minimal amount of energy was saved under year-around daylight time.

Retreat From Jet Package Sale Hinted

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter formally submitted his Middle East jet fighter sale proposals to Congress on Friday as the administration apparently grew more confident of victory.

In wording aimed at soothing some senators annoyed by Carter's take-it-or-leave-it attitude on the sales to Egypt, Israel and Saudi Arabia, the administration offered the proposals in a way that recognizes the rights of both the president and Congress.

The administration's apparent confidence of victory stems from support for the controversial proposals in a key House committee which could block resolutions to reject the Arab jet fighter sales.

"Package" Insisted

Before Friday, the administration had continually referred to the proposed sales as "a package" and threatened to withdraw all three proposals if any one were rejected.

Israel's supporters in the Senate, meanwhile, insisted that they could and would consider each sale separately.

But before the sales proposals were submitted Friday, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, released a letter in which Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said the administration "is not attempting to place conditions or inhibitions" on congressional consideration of the sales.

To Reserve Judgment

Yet, the letter's last paragraph reasserted Carter's right to "reserve judgment on the ultimate action to be taken" after Congress completes its consideration of the proposals.

Later, Vance issued a statement saying "the administration is not attempting to place conditions on the scope of the congressional review."

But Vance again emphasized that Carter's responsibility in foreign affairs "requires that he reserve judgment on the ultimate action to be taken until he has had an opportunity to review the action taken by Congress on the proposals."

Confidence Indicated

The administration's actions in altering its previous stand indicated mounting confidence that the sales will be allowed to go through.

With receipt of the formal proposal, Congress has 30 days — until May 28 — to act on resolutions disapproving each transaction. If both the House and Senate refuse to disapprove the sales or don't act, the sales go through.

Carter's proposal is to sell 75 F-16s and 15 F-15s to Israel, 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia and 50 F-5s to Egypt.

Unless the administration alters the number of planes in its proposal, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is expected to vote overwhelmingly to reject the Arab sales.

The full Senate also is regarded as likely to support a resolution that would turn down the sales to one or both of the Arab countries.

However, Senate rejections would have no effect if the House does not take the same action and it appeared the full House would not get a chance to vote on the question at all.

Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House International Relations Committee, supports the Carter package and says he believes there now are 15 solid votes in the his committee in favor of the sales and 12 against them.

Zablocki said he can get the other four votes needed to kill any resolution that would turn down the sales.

If Zablocki is correct, the matter would end in his committee because there is no other way to get a disapproval resolution to the House floor.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will meet Monday to discuss the sales and schedule hearings. The House International Relations committee has not set a date for action, but a staff member said the committee will meet next week on the matter.

Several senators expressed concern about the deadline for congressional action.

"I think the 30 days need to be 90 days," said Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y. He called on the administration to agree to extend the deadline.

There is precedent for an informal extension of the deadline allowed under the arms sales law. During the administration of Gerald R. Ford, a proposal to sell HAWK missiles to Jordan was withdrawn twice to give Congress more time to consider it.

According to Javits and Sen. Clifford

Mahon, Burleson Cite Tempered Optimism On Nation's Future

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

TWO VETERAN congressmen Friday expressed optimism that the United States could weather any crisis, but they tempered that optimism by relating some of the problems they as legislators face.

U.S. Reps. George Mahon of Lubbock and Omar Burleson of Anson, who have served a combined total of 75 years in the House, told businessmen gathered for the 60th Annual West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention that the stability of the nation depends in large part on individual efforts of conservatives across America.

"The future is bright in my book," Mahon said. "And it will be bright indeed if we maintain our sense of balance and strength and stability.

"Big government is getting bigger," he said, despite the few successes conservative forces in Congress have had against federal control.

"The federal goverment intrudes on or affects the life of each citizen almost hour by hour," Mahon said. But he added that groups such as the one he addressed are indispensible in helping channel citizen concerns to the nation's leaders.

Mahon said that although many persons attempt to "sell the U.S. short," the economy is now experiencing "a booming upswing," especially in West Texas, and that similar problems facing the nation have been solved in the past.

"America's success will be determined largely by the quality of our people," the soon-to-retire representative declared, "and by the success which we achieve in our

Carter Sets June Panama Visit To Exchange Canal Documents

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will visit Panama on June 16 and 17 to exchange the diplomatic documents giving the Central American nation control of the Panama Canal, the White House said Friday.

In ceremonies still being planned, the president and Gen. Omar Torrijos, the Panamanian strongman, will exchange documents ratifying the two Panama Canal treaties each nation has approved and will sign protocols acknowledging the exchange.

It was expected that heads of state of other Western Hemisphere nations would attend the ceremony, although details have not been worked out.

The treaties, which guarantee the canal's neutrality and assure its full control by the Republic of Panama by the year 2000, were bitterly contested in the Senate, which approved each by a 68-to-32 margin, one more vote than needed, one month apart. The second treaty was passed on April 18.

The Panamanians ratified the treaties earlier in a national referendum.

"The principal purpose of the visit is to sign the protocol confirming the exchange of the documents ratifying the Panama Canal treaties," said Deputy White House Press Secretary Rex Granum, announcing the president's plans.

Granum, speaking at a White House press briefing, said that under a reservation adopted by the Senate, the exchange of documents would be effective on March 31, 1979, "unless Congress passes implementing legislation at an earlier date."

That date was immediately criticized by Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., who questioned whether Carter might not be trying to circumvent the Senate's desires.

Brooke released a letter to Carter in which the senator urged the president to make it clear that the ceremonial exchange "should not be given a formal, binding status."

Giving it such status, he said, "could be interpreted as an attempt to circumvent the intent of the reservation relating to the date of exchange and the date of entry into force of the treaties."

The provision attached to the treaties by the Senate provided that the instru-

Surge In Food Prices Signals Nine Percent Annual Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Meat, fruit and egg prices climbed sharply in March and helped boost consumer prices 0.8 percent during the month, signaling an annual inflation rate of more than nine percent, the government said Friday.

The latest figures, which government officials characterized as more bad news for the economy, likely will provide new pressure for the Carter administration to step up its anti-inflation campaign.

The Labor Department said overall food costs rose 1.3 percent in March on a seasonally adjuted basis. Beef prices increased 2.6 percent, pork prices rose 2.9 percent and fresh fruit costs jumped 4.7 percent.

Egg prices, which have dropped more than 10 per cent during the past year, shot up 15 per cent in March, largely because of problems delivering eggs to markets. Economists said the big increase was a one-month aberration since production usually picks up sharply during March and drives prices down.

Meat Prices Rise

Meat prices have been rising sharply all year because of reduced supplies and growing consumer demand. Agriculture Department economists and beef industry officials say shoppers haven't seen the end to those big prices jumps.

Fresh fruit prices also have been advancing sharply since late 1977 — except for a decline in February — partially as a result of severe winter weather which reduced harvests.

The cost of buying or renting and maintaining a home rose 1 percent in March after climbing 0.6 percent in February and 0.8 percent in January.

Annual Rate Given

The March consumer price increase, together with a 0.8 percent rise in January and a 0.6 percent increase in February, translates into a 9.3 percent annual inflation rate for the first quarter of the year.

That is well above the 6 to 7 percent inflation rate that the Carter administration has forecast for 1978.

Administration economists predict the inflation rate will moderate this year as it did in 1977. Last year, the inflation rate was over 9 percent during the first six months, but fell sharply during the second half to average 6.8 percent for the full year.

Deputy White House press secretary Rex Granum said the latest figures were "disappointing," but reaffirmed the administration's belief that price increases would slow later in the year.

Prices for food and beverages were climbing at an annual rate of 15.4 percent during the first three months of the year, but the Agriculture Department predicts

'Space Pearl Harbor' Feared Next Decade

COCOA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The United States has given up leadership in space to the Soviet Union and could be vulnerable to a "space Pearl Harbor" in the 1980s, a newspaper executive warned Friday.

Allen H. Neuharth, president and chief executive officer of the Gannett newspaper chain, called on President Carter to be a "space pioneer" by putting the nation back on the road to space leadership in the next decade.

"The tragedy of the abdication of leadership involves much more than just the worldwide image and reputation which were at stake during the space race of the late '50s and early '60s," Neuharth said in remarks prepared for a banquet of the Missile, Space and Range Pioneers organization. "In the '80s that space competition will be much more basic. It is called survival."

Neuharth said the Soviets have launched 26 missions in 1978, more than the United States plans all year. In the last three years the Soviet Union has sent 16 humans into space while the United States has sent none, he said, and in the past five years the Russians have averaged 108 flights a year to the 25 for the United States.

"The most chilling aspect of the Russians regaining their earlier space leadership is their obvious determination to use space for future military purposes," Neuharth added. "Unless we recognize how badly we are lagging behind the Russians and step up our own space priorities accordingly, the United States will be vulnerable to a space Pearl Harbor in the 1980s, potentially much more disastrous than the naval Pearl Harbor of 1941."

Neuharth acknowledged that the United States is anticipating a new era of space opportunity with the space shuttle. But he said the United States is spending less on general science, space and technology than it did a decade ago.

The country spent about $5 billion in 1969, and the 1979 figure will be about $4.4 billion, he said. When the 1979 figure is adjusted for inflation, it amounts to $2.5 billion, a 50 percent decrease in funding, he said.

"We must insist that Jimmy Carter put this country back on the road to space leadership in the '80s," Neuharth said. "The next decade will decide who shall ultimately be the space leader — and the world leader ... The way to achieve that goal is for the president of this still great nation to act like a pioneer — a space pioneer."

City Ordinance Role Seen In Political Sign Hassle

KENT Hance Friday called a charge by Morris Sheats that he ordered campaign workers to destroy Sheats signs "the silliest thing I've ever heard."

Hance, state senator and, like Sheats, a candidate for the Democratic congressional nomination, exchanged charges with Sheats Thursday and Friday regarding the alleged disappearance of 24-inch-square Sheats campaign signs.

Sheats, minister of Lubbock's Trinity Church, said 400 of 1,000 signs displayed on lawns in Plainview, Lubbock and elsewhere in the district had been purloined. He suggested Hance people may have had something to do with it.

Responded Hance: "The guy is evidently very desperate, and he's losing, and he's got to say something. I think they just realized how bad they're fixing to get beat."

Going a step further, he said "I don't know if he's pulling down his own yard signs to make an issue or what, but my people sure aren't."

Subsequent developments suggest that some of the signs could be in the trunks of cars driven by city zoning inspectors.

City Planning Director Jim Bertram said Friday that any sign, political or otherwise, will be removed by city inspectors if found on the right-of-way, that is, between the sidewalk and the curb.

A municipal ordinance regarding signs on public property is a longstanding one, Bertram said, and not one specifically for political seasons.

Bertram said inspectors do not hesitate to take the political signs down. Campaign workers, he said, have been "explicitly told" of the regulations.

Jerrel Northcutt, city zoning administrator, said zoning inspectors have picked up a probable total of 50 signs since their appearance on Monday.

And, Northcutt said, signs in the right-of-way are not the only offenders. He said only one sign is permitted in each yard and inspectors have "written up" numerous city residents about that.

"When the campaign started, I talked to all the local headquarters and told them what we were going to allow," Northcutt said. "But until last Monday, it never came up."

Northcutt said it would be unconstitutional for the city to prohibit political signs, but it can legally control them.

But "mainly," Northcutt said, "we're trying to stay out of it."

Sheats Thursday said the registration of a car seen where signs were being taken down in Plainview was traced to Hance campaign manager and senate aide Ricky Knox.

Knox denied complicity.

Sunny Skies Encore Due

THUNDERSHOWERS developed Friday through much of Central and North Central Texas, but Lubbock and the South Plains can expect more sunny skies today and Sunday.

The National Weather Service forecast temperatures in the mid 80s today and in the low 80s Sunday, with tonight's low in the mid 50s. Winds will be westerly, at 10 to 15 miles per hour.

Thunderstorms Friday were scattered but ranged over a wide portion of the state, from the Hill Country west of Austin and over the Eagle Pass area of South Texas into the Dallas-Fort Worth metro area and Wichita Falls back to Childress on the western fringe.

A tornado watch was in effect for parts of northwest and north-central Texas and a large part of Oklahoma from 2 p.m. until 6 p.m. Friday, but there were no reported sightings.

Skies were partly cloudy or sunny over much of the rest of the nation Friday — except over the Big Horn mountains of northern Wyoming, where a heavy snow warning was in effect.

Hospital District To Post $2.5 Million Loss In 1978

The Lubbock County Hospital District Friday revised its 1978 budget for the Health Sciences Center Hospital. The bottom line is that the new medical facility, open since Feb. 1, is projected to lose $2.5 million this year.

Still, that deficit is "more favorable than the earlier budget we adopted," Ben Robinson, chairman of the finance committee of the district's board of managers, said. The budget was approved unanimously by the board.

On a "cash-flow" basis, the hospital is budgeted to run up a "deficit of $5 million the first year," board member Jack Flygare said. At the same time, however, the hospital would be building up a total of $3.3 million in "accounts receivable" — bills that have been sent out but not yet paid.

Thus, when this anticipated income is accounted for, the actual deficit on an "accrual basis" is trimmed considerably, board members said.

The revised budget is based on the hospital's experience for February and March, its first two months in business. For those months, hospital officials said, the medical facility lost a total of $320,657.

The budget projects that the monthly deficit will be about $300,000 for April, $302,000 for May, $340,000 for June, $258,000 for July, $218,000 for August, $216,000 for September, $212,000 for October, $180,000 for November and $141,000 for December.

Earlier in the week, hospital administrators had projected cutting the deficit to $24,300 for January, 1979. Friday, however, they were making no such predictions, saying it's too early to say what may happen next year.

Originally the hospital district had a consolidated 1978 budget of $12 million — $9 million for the hospital and the rest for Emergency Medical Services and other functions.

The new budget totals more than $18 million — with $16.8 million for the hospital.

Robinson said almost all of the increase can be attributed to higher-than-expected patient loads and other factors at the hospital, which is affiliated with the Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

Under the original budget, the district was projected an average daily occupancy for the 245-bed hospital of 30 percent the first year. That has been raised to 51 percent.

The original budget also projected the hospital would have a "bad debt" ratio (the percentage of unpaid bills) of 21 percent. That has been revised to 11 percent.

The district will present the budget to the Lubbock County Commissioners Court. The hospital board has promised to keep commissioners current on the hospital's fiscal state.

Natural Dog Biscuits Popular

NOVATO, Calif. (AP) — Brandstone Bakery's baklava business went to the dogs — naturally.

For years, Marin County, north of San Francisco, had been enthusiastic about health food businesses.

But Rick Marks and Ron Hansen, partners in the bakery, noticed that the appeal of their baklava — a Greek pastry baked with nuts and honey — was on the wane.

One day, a dog food distributor stopped by and jokingly suggested that Marks start baking dog biscuits instead.

The idea rang a bell.

"I kept baking baklava for five months while Ron developed the formula. Then we started baking dog biscuits," Marks said.

Success followed. "Now we're the dog biscuit barons of Marin," he said.

And not just any dog biscuits.

Brandstone's contain no chemical preservatives or synthetic vitamins. They're made with whole ground wheat, meat and bone meal, red bran, dried cottage cheese, brewers yeast, cod liver oil and honey.

They fetch 50 to 65 cents a pound in pet and health food stores from Washington state to Los Angeles.

But how do they taste?

Marks picked one from a fresh batch and gnawed it tentatively.

"I'd say it tastes like a health food cracker," he said.

Federal Reserve Board Raises Rates On Short-Term Credit

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal government has moved aggressively against inflation for the second time in eight days by raising short-term interest rates, a move expected to result eventually in higher rates for mortgages and other consumer loans.

The latest action came Thursday when the Federal Reserve boosted to 7¼ percent from 7 percent its target rate on federal funds, uncommitted reserves that one bank lends to another that might be short of cash. The tightening action surprised Wall Street because it came earlier than expected.

But what exactly does it mean to the average working person and to his way of life? The following questions and answers may help.

Q — Why did the Fed take such an action?

A — The Fed, which sets the nation's monetary policies, was responding to a sharp increases in the nation's money supply in recent weeks and the expectation of more increases.

Sharp increases in the money supply are inflationary, and could affect the nation's already serious inflation problem. (The Labor Department announced Friday that consumer prices rose 0.8 percent in March, which translates into an annual inflation rate of nearly 10 percent.) When the money supply rises too rapidly, borrowing becomes easier and consumers spend more for goods and services produced by industry. Resulting shortages can push wages and prices higher.

Q — How does the Fed tighten credit?

A — By increasing its rate on federal funds, the money banks loan each other, the Fed placed sharp upward pressure on the banking industry's key lending rate. That prime rate is the fee that banks charge their most creditworthy corporate customers. When it rises, as it did Friday to 8¼ percent from 8 percent in response to the tightening, other lending rates, including those for mortgages and installment loans, usually rise too.

In tightening its credit posture, the Fed moves to dampen an inflationary economy by limiting the amount of money in circulation, making it more expensive and difficult to borrow. The higher cost of borrowing should mean a decrease in business activity and growth.

Q — How will the action affect consumers?

A — Because the federal funds rate is the key fee that other lending charges are based on, economists expect the tightening action to soon filter down to other lending fees, including those for consumers.

The process would continue with the Fed raising another rate, its discount charge (the fee that commercial banks pay to borrow from the Fed), which currently stands at 6½ percent. By raising this charge, which economists say is the next logical step, borrowing from the Fed becomes less attractive, thus hampering a bank's ability to add to its funds available for lending to consumers and corporations.

In addition, the action raised rates in the Treasury bill market above those at savings institutions. Thus, fewer funds will be deposited in the institutions, decreasing their lending capabilities.

The result of all this, they say, is that mortgage lending is likely to rise above the current level, about 10 percent.

Group Plans Protests At Sears Retail Stores

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) — The National Federation for Decency, an organization opposed to violence and sex on television, says it plans protests in front of Sears Roebuck stores next month.

The Rev. Donald Wildmon, executive director of the federation, said the purpose of the protests was to call attention to what it termed objectionable programs sponsored by Sears.

Gas Producer Hits Decontrol Plan

DALLAS (AP) — The president of the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association said Friday the proposed compromise legislation to eventually decontrol natural gas prices should not become law.

John Christmann, Lubbock, said Texas independents particularly object to provisions for control over intrastate gas production.

The full House-Senate conference committee is expected to consider the compromise proposal next week.

"We recognize the April 21 accord on natural gas regulation does represent some progress toward legislation which could enable the industry to intensify explorations and drilling to develop vast quantities of natural gas," Christmann said.

"However, it contains provisions which are counter-productive and contrary to the interests of our state and nation. We especially object to the retention of controls over the intrastate production."

Houston Police Chief Fires Five Patrolmen

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Police Chief Harry Caldwell Friday fired five officers for their involvement in the 1977 slaying of a Louisiana teen-ager.

Caldwell also requested and received the resignation of a sixth officer.

Those fired were William E. Byrd, 24; Danny H. Mays, 31; John T. Olin, 27, Norval W. Holloway Jr., 29, and Lt. Paul D. Dillon, 37.

A resignation was submitted by Officer James A. Estes, 28, who earlier had been suspended of duty with pay.

Byrd had pleaded guilty Thursday in federal court to a charge of concealing the commission of a crime.

Byrd said he provided a gun which officers left at the scene of the slaying of Randall Webster, 17, stopped by officers after a high-speed chase through the streets of Houston.

Three officers were fired Wednesday in the investigation of the 1975 death of Billy Keith Joyvies, 18, of Houston. Investigators have traced a .25-caliber automatic found in Joyvies' car to an officer who later was shot to death in a gunbattle with escaped convicts.

Caldwell said Byrd was relieved of duty the moment he entered a plea of guilty Thursday before U.S. District Judge John V. Singlton Jr. to a charge of willfully concealing an offense of providing a gun to be placed next to Webster's body.

Caldwell said he anticipates disciplinary action against all the principals in the Webster case.

"As soon as I establish the degree of culpability of any officers in any case, I'll take definitive action," he said.

He did not elaborate but said there may be "varying degrees" of disciplinary action.

The options range from letters of reprimand or days off without pay to indefinite suspensions, the city civil service term for being fired.

The .22-caliber revolver Byrd said he gave another officer at the scene of the Webster shooting has been traced to the police property room. Thursday's court proceedings did not reveal how Byrd obtained the gun after it was confiscated in a 1964 suicide investigation and was reported as having been destroyed in 1968.

The chase that ended with Webster's death began after a van was reported stolen from an automobile dealer.

A federal grand jury that has been investigating the Webster case is scheduled to resume its work Monday. Caldwell has said he expects the police internal affairs division to complete its investigation of the Joyvies case next week and that he will present the case to the U.S. attorney and to the Harris County district attorney.

Investigation Continues At San Angelo College

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — President Jerome Weynand of San Antonio College says he will recommend that an outside agency investigate allegations of improprieties by officials of the junior college.

The investigation will center on charges made by eight maintenance men at the college who said they were told to perform work at the homes of four SAC officials, Weynand said.

The maintenance men told The Ranger, the SAC student newspaper, they did plumbing, air conditioning and carpentry work for the officials.

The maintenance men said they did the work on college time and using college district equipment and tools.

Weynand, following his own preliminary investigation, said Thursday he would recommend to the SAC board of trustees next Wednesday that an outside agency continue the probe.

FBI Investigates Patrolman's Death

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The FBI said Friday "we are looking at several suspects," not necessarily aliens, in last weekend's slaying of a Border Patrol agent on the Mexico border near Quemado.

"No charges were filed today, and I don't contemplate any, at least over the weekend," Joseph O'Connell, special agent in charge of the FBI at San Antonio, said after several persons were questioned. He said a lie detector test was administered.

The body of Jose T. Gamez, 31, of Laredo was pulled from a concrete-lined irrigation canal near the Rio Grande Saturday morning, about 10 hours after he was reported last seen by another Border Patrol agent, Frank Lugo.

Lugo said he and Gamez came across five aliens trying to cross the Rio Grande illegally about 11:30 p.m. Friday and that they split up trying to apprehend them. Lugo said he lost the aliens he was trying to catch and lost track of Gamez.

After Gamez' body was found about a mile downstream in the irrigation canal, officers first theorized he had run into levers which operate the canal and had been knocked unconscious and fallen into the canal and drowned.

But Dr. Ruben Santos, Bexar County medical examiner, ruled after an autopsy that Gamez had no water in his lungs. He also found contusions on the head and armpits, and concluded Gamez was strangled by a board or similar object placed against his throat, then was dragged or thrown into the canal.

"We're not completely discounting the possibility he was killed by aliens, but we're just not concentrating our investigation at the present time in that area," O'Connell said. He indicated the FBI would complete its investigation in about a week.

Gamez' personal .357-caliber Magnum revolver was found in the canal about 40 feet from where authorities believe his body entered it. It had been fired one time. O'Connell said the weapon would be sent to FBI laboratories for tests.

The FBI entered the case because of laws prohibiting assaults on federal officers. Jack Richardson, deputy chief of the Del Rio Border Patrol, said the death is the first involving a Del Rio sector Border Patrol Agent.

Richardson said 221 agents patrol an area which includes 205 miles of the Rio Grande from Langtry to Carrizo Springs. Gamez was found on the Moody Ranch, about eight miles northwest of Quemado in Maverick County.

South Texas Labor Leaders Surrender In Manpower Probe

AUSTIN (AP) — South Texas labor leaders Don and Clarence Gray surrendered Friday to the sheriff's office and posted bond of $10,000 each, following their indictment in a local probe of state job training programs.

The Grays were accompanied by two lawyers, and one, Buddy Wright, said he expects federal indictments against the two brothers in early May.

The Grays were indicted in January in Brownsville on multiple charges involving alleged abuses of job-training funds.

The Thursday indictment by the grand jury here charges the Grays with conspiring to steal more than $10,000 in state manpower funds.

The indictment indicates that between April 1 and Dec. 1, 1977, more than $137,498 in checks were made out by the Texas Department of Community Affairs to the United Association of Journeymen and Apprenticeships of Plumbing and Pipefitting Industry (Local 823).

Steve Brittain, head of the task force which conducted the local manpower probe, said the payments did not go to the Harlingen-based union, but went instead into private accounts of the Gray brothers.

Don Gray is the business manager and financial secretary of the South Texas union, and Clarence Gray headed South Texas Building Trades Education Services, Inc., the organization that allegedly received the money intended for the union.

Jaworski Sees End Of Korean Scandals

HOUSTON (AP)-Leon Jaworski, special investigator in the Korean influence-buying scandal, said Friday if he could get testimony from former Korean ambassador Kim Don Jo, "We just might have this whole matter wrapped up."

Jaworski, principal speaker at a Houston Law Day, also told newsmen that he expected more indictments in the case on "possible perjury charges or other things."

Former Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., was the first congressional figure charged in the scandal and sentenced to serve six months to 30 months in a federal prison.

Also indicted was former Rep. Otto Passman, D-La.

Jaworski, the man who headed-up the Watergate investigation, said, "This is a highly different ballgame. In Watergate I had the process of justice available to me.

"I had the people where I could subpoena them and take them before the grand jury. In Koreagate, I simply haven't had the people in the country to subpoena or to testify.

"We did get Tongsun Park under a situation with no limits, no restraints and that did help," he said.

Park, a South Korean businessman, testified before a congressional committee recently concerning payments made to certain U.S. congressmen.

Jaworski said Park has insisted he was not a foreign agent, "but the record shows that he was just that."

The Houston attorney also said the Korean investigation "is my last, and this is it for me. After Watergate and after this, the next time they (the government) calls, I will be so far in the Hill Country of Texas that the pony express can't find me."

In his speech to the Houston attorneys, Jaworski referred to Watergate, saying:

"Still fresh on my mind is the sadness of seeing one of the great tragedies of modern history--men who once had fame in their hands sinking to infamy--all because eventually their goals were of the wrong dreams and aspirations.

"The teaching of right and wrong had been forgotten and little evils were permitted to grow into great evils--small sins to escalate into big sins," he said.

Jaworski said that during the Watergate years, the U.S. Supreme Court left no doubt that "no one, absolutely no one, is above the law."

McDonald's Nabs 'Hamburger Spy'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Mark Priegel was arraigned Friday on trespass charges, and a group of McDonalds restaurant executives say his intentions may have been more grave.

Priegel, 26, of Costa Mesa, Calif., is accused by the fast food leaders of being a hamburger spy. They say he presented false identification to sneak into a convention.

Texas 'Mother Of Year' Named

AUSTIN (AP) — Felma James of Iowa Park didn't sit at home after her six children, the oldest of whom is now 49, grew up.

The 1978 Texas Mother of the Year taught summer school in Dourado, Brazil, in 1974 and traveled in Europe. She has served as a Democratic Party precinct chairman the past 10 years.

Mrs. James, 74, was honored Friday by the Texas Mothers Committee, a private organization connected with American Mothers Committee, Inc.

"I always thought the things I've been doing are just natural," she said after accepting the award from Stephen Oaks, Texas secretary of state. "After all that I did in raising a family I thought I should have the option and privilege of doing these things."

The native of Waltrek, Ark., has 18 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. Her husband, D.O. James, was a dairy farmer who died in 1968.

She taught in Arkansas schools for eight years and after moving to Texas in 1929 became active in the local, county and district PTA, and the Baptist church. In 1970, she received the first annual Outstanding Citizen Award from the Iowa Park Chamber of Commerce.

Also honored Friday were six Merit Mothers of Texas. They were Mrs. E. O. Adams of Sulphur Springs, Mrs. George W. Black of Stephenville, Mrs. Milton Bohnfalk of Corpus Christi, Mrs. B. C. Campbell of Tyler and Mrs. Frank Wedig of Port Lavaca.

Mrs. Sharon Fowler of Garland was named Outstanding Young Mother of 1978.

Pipeline System Changes Owners

HOUSTON (AP) — Mitchell Energy Development Corp. and Tejas Gas Corp. announced Friday completion of the acquisition of the 328-mile Winnie Pipeline System.

The $4.5 million cash purchase was made from the United Texas Petroleum Division of Allied Chemical Corp.

Also involved in the transaction was a $2.5 million longterm lease of other Winnie facilities.

The intrastate natural gas pipeline runs from the east side of Galveston Bay to the Sabine River, through Galveston, Chambers, Orange and Jefferson coues. Operations offices are in Winnie.

The line will be operated by Mitchell Energy and Tejas as Winnie Pipeline Co. Southwestern Gas Pipeline Inc., a Mitchell subsidiary, will hold an 80 percent interest, with Tejas Gas Systems Inc., a subsidiary of the Corpus Christi-based Tejas, holding 20 percent.

The Winnie line transport between 90 and 100 million cubic feet of gas a day to industries, petroleum companies, and other pipeline systems.

Caves like Mammoth and Carlsbad Caverns were formed by the movement of water over thousands of years. Water absorption of carbon dioxide from the air and organic matter in the soil create acids that seep into the rock.

Panama Pacts Out On A Poll

IF PRESIDENT Carter and those senators who voted for the Panama Canal treaties thought the issue would fade away after the fact, then they are in for some rude shocks.

Instead of tamping out the widespread criticism, the final approval of the two-treaty package only set off a new round of criticism across the nation.

In phone calls and letters, thousands of Americans are continuing to show their displeasure over what they feel is a flouting of majority opinion.

MUCH WAS made in the final Panama vote showdown over a poll reportedly showing Texans, as well as others across the nation, favoring the pacts provided certain amendments were tacked on.

As it turned out, the amendments were added, along with another controversial proviso which later was watered down under protests from Panamanian dictator Gen. Omar Torrijos.

Now, as it turns out, and in the wake of the Panama treaty approval, the latest nationwide survey shows President Carter with the lowest overall job rating of his career.

SIGNIFICANTLY, THE poll shows that by a margin of 44 to 37 percent most Americans do not think passage of the treaties was a "good thing" for the U.S. and by a 56 to 33 percent negative rating a majority of the people fault the President for his handling of the treaties.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, answering numerous letters of criticism for his stand in favor of the treaties, cited a Texas poll claiming to show "a majority" of Texans in favor of the pacts, with the amendments added.

Several candidates running in the 19th Congressional and 28th Senatorial District races say that opposition to the Panama treaties, and to Sen. Bentsen's stand, may be running as high as 85 to 95 per cent. "I can't conceive that we are that much different from the rest of the state," one candidate observed.

ADDING TO THE white-hot fury over the pacts' approval was the statement by Gen. Torrijos on the day after the Senate vote that had the U.S. rejected the treaties the Canal would have been sabotaged.

And he further trampled on the agreement by saying that no U.S. troops ever would set foot on Panama soil to defend the Canal.

President Carter's reaction to this has been to make plans to go to Panama in May to sign the treaties. Sen. Bentsen, to our knowledge, has not commented on the new nationwide poll.

In the meantime, the citizens are still seething and making mental notes which may not be forgotten as soon as the President and some senators would like to believe.

Bumper Crop Of Know-It-Alls

WITH ASSISTANCE for higher education an issue of growing economic and political importance in the United States, along comes an international study raising a basic question as to the value of education's end result.

The findings could not be more discouraging.

"In fact, the (college) degree," reports the International Labor Organization, "may be fast becoming a ticket to nowhere."

The ILO notes that growing numbers of graduates are either unable to find jobs in their fields or must take positions beneath their qualifications.

INTERESTINGLY, there is some evidence that one group is not losing faith, and that group is American students.

An overwhelming 87 percent of the 712 men and 1,046 women queried by Toni Horne Waves in a survey on career, life-style and fashion said they were pursuing higher education either from personal desire or because they considered it a necessity.

The stinger is that more than half of the respondents said they are aware of the tough job market and are concerned about finding jobs following graduation.

THE ILO, meanwhile, estimates the number of "surplus" American university graduates between 1974 and 1985 at 950,000—with the outlook for women particularly bleak. Their unemployment rate in engineering and scientific fields, for example, is four times that of men.

U.S. graduates with job miseries have plenty of company in this international problem.

Even Western Europe and Japan, where access to a university education has been more restricted with degrees traditionally carrying greater prestige, are feeling the effects of excess graduates.

COMMUNIST countries, through strict curbs on admissions to universities, are less troubled.

But not so developing countries whose fragile economies make them even less able than the industrial powers to absorb bumper crops of graduates.

The problem, the ILO survey concludes, is in part the product of a worldwide birth rate surge in the 1950s and, to a lesser degree (you should pardon the expression) inadequate career planning.

Paradoxically, we know so much yet have control over so little.

Paper Work Still Feeds Bureaucratic 'Monster'

PRESIDENT CARTER, seeking election, promised to "cut Washington's red tape and needless paper work and reduce the White House staff." But he is now well into his second year and has the largest White House staff in history.

As for the paper work, President Carter broke these promises, too.

Apparently taxpayers have no idea that it costs about $40 billion a year and, in the light of President Carter's election promises, this is now a very hot subject—and getting hotter.

IN PRESIDENT Carter's second year it costs us around $8 billion a year merely to have the Washington Bureaucrats push their way through the paper work jungle. It also costs taxpayers an estimated $20 billion annually to reply.

I find that the Carter administration now has more than 6,000 forms and questionnaires. These involve 15 million copies. In 1965 the forms numbered 3,803. In 1971 they were 5,298.

The administration has assigned at least 100,000 bureaucrats to regulatory bodies. Each year the bureaus print more than 10 billion sheets of paper that U.S. business must fill out.

One bureau is issuing an order with 155 rules on climbing a ladder. Rule I states that you must first face the ladder.

I ALSO FIND THAT in one case Social Security is currently being collected by one individual under 144 names.

And the elephantine Interstate Commerce Commission's paper work alone makes this foot-dragging colossus so cumbersome that maybe the ICC should just give up railroad matters entirely and build libraries for itself.

Each year the forms themselves cost us about $15 billion; $1 billion for the forms, another $1 billion for the forms detailing how to fill them out, $1.7 billion more to store them, etc.

There are more than 3,500 government bureaus. These have about 8,000 separate record systems. And they are now installing data-processing computers at the astounding rate of about 500 a year.

In fact, the Defense Department alone lost $160 million by buying additional computers when ample were already idle in the Pentagon.

TODAY, MORE THAN 2,600 computers, their teeth bared like outraged orangutans, are spinning away. Their full-time potential each year is to supply the Washington bureau with a stack of records about 2,000 miles high.

The amount of paper shuffled annually by federal employes could fill Houston's vast Astrodome 50 times. Or, if you lined up the shelves end to end they would reach from Byzantium-on-the-Potomac to Salt Lake City.

My investigation finds that about 250,000 government employes chiefly spend their time (at taxpayers' expense) filing papers into cabinets. The cabinets cover about 25 million cubic feet of floor space—more than 12 times the entire rentable area in New York's immense, 102-story Empire State building—just for the paper-work jungle's filing cabinets.

Letters? Government employes in Washington's paper-work jungle bombard us and each other each year with about a billion. Incredibly, this averages 2,700,000 a day! And I find that it costs the government more than $3.25 to write each letter.

Brevity, in turn, is not a bureaucratic habit. A Carter administration order concerning the price of cabbage contained 26,911 words.

Bernard Shaw's Eliza Doolittle was impatient with Henry Higgins about "words, words, words." And you are reminded of the classic calculation that the Lord's Prayer contains only 56 words; the Ten Commandments, 300; Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, 260; the Declaration of Independence 3,000.

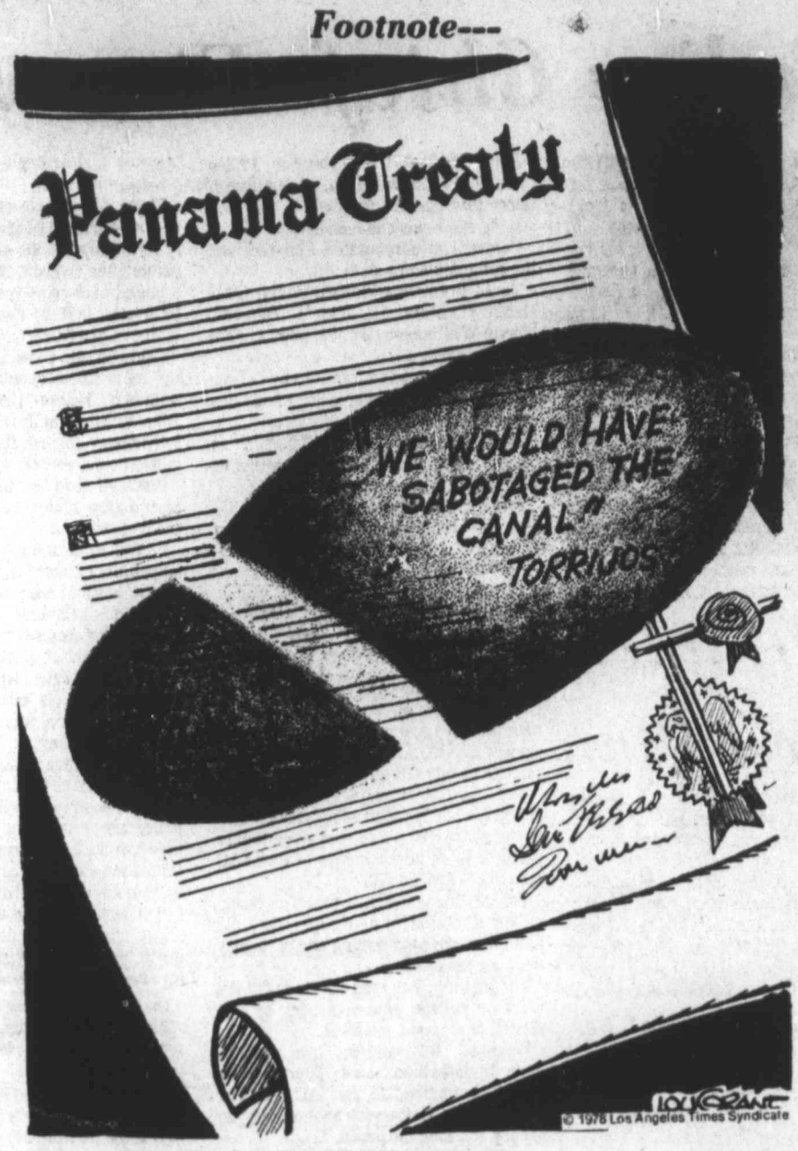

I FIND IT RELIABLY calculated that greater brevity alone would save us suffering taxpayers' at least $20 million a year.

In Washington, about 2,250,000 civilians work for the government.

In our government, or any enterprise, savings have a domino effect. You save here because you have saved somewhere else. And whenever you have extra hands with little to do, they will find something to do.

The result is a bureaucracy that operates as if the heads were wired to some master puppeteer. But the bureaucratic make-work seems lost on the Carter administration.

Carter Tide Ebbing

EVANS

SPRINGFIELD, Neb.—Voters of both parties in this farm hamlet have diagnosed what they think ails Jimmy Carter's presidency as follows: incompetence and indecision.

Whether this diagnosis points to terminal political illness, however, is an open question. The President retains a large measure of good will.

Thus, although only 16 of our 55 voters rate his presidential performance "good" or "excellent," and 39 say "fair" or "poor," fully one-half say they still have a "favorable" opinion of him as a person.

But the down-to-earth criticism of one retired farmer, a Democrat, hints that time may be running out. "I don't think Carter is big enough for the job."

One of 17 Carter voters in our survey of political sentiment here (25 backed Jerry Ford and 13 don't recall or would not say how they voted in 1976), this farmer says he now wishes he had voted for Ford.

FOUR ADDITIONAL voters who backed the President in 1976 now say they wish they had not, an unusually high defection rate.

Only one Ford voter who answered our questionnaire, prepared by Pat Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research, wished he had voted for Carter.

On one major issue after another—inflation, farm policy, handling the Soviet Union, defense spending—our scouting expedition produced failing marks for the President on general grounds of incompetence and waffling.

The sole exception: his efforts to settle the Arab-Israeli struggle in the Middle East, which gained solid 2-to-1 support.

Behind that praise for Carter's dealing with the Middle East may lie a lesson for the President: the political importance of follow-through.

RINGING DOORBELLS with three Caddell field representatives on a day of rain, snow and frigid winds on the bleak Nebraska prairie, we found high praise for Carter's "consistency" in trying to mediate between Arab and Jew.

On other issues, he is charged with lacking conviction, receiving less than 50 per cent approval even for "trying" to solve the energy crisis.

The dominant theme was struck by an attractive, 36-year-old waitress. "If the man would just say something and stick to it!" she blurted out. "That would make a difference." She backed Ford in 1976, but only "as the lesser of two evils."

A 35-year-old computer maintenance man, whose job is 30 miles east of here in Omaha, agreed. He voted for Carter and would vote for him again today but called him "too hesitant" on decisions.

"There are so many things he said he would do and he hasn't shown that he can do any of them."

BY FAR THE major worry here is inflation, along with other economic problems. Thirty-one of our voters listed inflation as the "most important" issue.

Indeed, the prevailing lack of confidence in Carter bodes ill for his new anti-inflation program and might turn Ambassador Robert Strauss's silvery hair gray. Only 19 voters "generally approve of the way Carter is trying to handle" the inflation disease (against 31 who disapprove and 5 who do not know).

But the President's new anti-inflation program, using Strauss's virtuoso jawbone as his principal weapon, appears singularly unconvincing in Springfield: only 4 voters think it will work, 22 say it will not work and 29 are dubious.

This is hawkish count, built on a farm economy. Thus, by almost 2-to-1, our respondents "generally disapprove" of Carter's handling of Moscow.

ON QUESTIONS whether he is "too tough" or "too weak" on the Soviets, and whether he is spending "too much" or "too little" on defense, an identical 31 voters say "too weak" and "too little."

As for the farm issue, there was some solace for the President in taking a hard-line position against the "emergency" farm bill defeated in the House 10 days ago under threat of presidential veto.

A surprising 24 voters commend him for that, against only 27 who condemn him (the unbalance unsure).

That is a far better mark than he gets on his efforts to cope with the farm situation, and serves to highlight the fact that even here the intractable problem of inflation is overtaking farm prices as an issue.

That shift can scarcely be called a political plus for a President who still has not proved his fitness to govern, at least as judged in this small farm community.

ANDREW TULLY:

The Dirty Seven...

WASHINGTON—On the subject of dirty words used on radio and television, my tame super liberal proffered a quotation from Thomas Hobbes, a 16th century master of the epigram:

"The secret thoughts of a man run over all things, holy, profane, clean, obscene, grave, and light, without shame or blame."

I'll buy that although there must be those who feel a little shame or blame for some of their thoughts.

But the Supreme Court might take a hard look at the operative word in Hobbes' observation. It is, of course, "secret," and unfortunately no word uttered on the airwaves is wrapped in secrecy.

The relevant case involves a program broadcast by WBAI-FM, a New York City noncommercial, listener-supported station operated by the tax-exempt Pacifica Foundation.

THE STATION played a recording of a monologue by satirist George Carlin, entitled "Filthy Words." Carlin used seven words that he said "you couldn't say on the public...airwaves."

Since the words crudely depicted sexual organs and excretory functions, I hope Carlin is right and that we will not suffer a similar barrage from the networks.

But I wonder at the tongue-in-cheek naivete of the man. After all, WBAI-FM does not use private airwaves, because there is no such thing; the airwaves are all public, all owned by the people.

At any rate, the Federal Communications Commission, which sometimes does its duty to the people's airwaves, declared the seven words —"deliberately broadcast (and) repeated over and over"—to be indecent.

THE COMMISSION ordered an absolute ban on use of such words at any time when children might be listening.

I had hoped the FCC's ban would be absolute, to protect grownups, too, but let it pass.

So one turns to the arguments before the Supreme Court. The Pacifica station's lawyer, Harry M. Plotkin, said the Carlin record had been played as part of an "educational program."

Chief Justice Warren Burger jumped him: "This is educational in your view?"

That, replied Plotkin, was not the question; the legal question, he said, is whether the government may ban the use of words on radio or TV when they are used in a way that suggests "artistic or literary value."

Justice Thurgood Marshall, a liberal of impeccable credentials, sighed heavily. "I'm not an expert," he told Plotkin, "but if that is artistic, deliver me."

THAT SOUNDED promising. But, curiously, the Justice Department submitted a defense for WBAI-FM in the interests of free speech.

Louis Claiborne, a Justice lawyer, argued that many juveniles—with or without parental consent—play radios after the cutoff time of 10 p.m. —and that the FCC order also censors radio for adults who listen to it only during daylight and early evening hours.

Claiborne did concede the seven words would be "indecent" if used "in a hostile manner so as to insult the audience generally or anyone in particular." Some concession.

Of such proceedings is the First Amendment made to seem a sick joke.

Coke's A Natural

IF WE REALLY want to be the head honcho in the scramble for world peace, we're wasting time sending Vance and Lance scurrying around the globe. We'd do better sending Cokes instead.

Granted, the soothing qualities of Coca-Cola syrup on belligerent dictators have not been medically documented. Especially since the government made the company leave out the cocaine back in 1900.

But who's to say it wouldn't work as well, and maybe even better, than the vodka and champagne that diplomatic negotiators toast each other with?

WALK SOFTLY and carry a big Coke? Why not? Lord knows we've tried everything else —from political assassination plots to private payoffs—and we still have wars.

Besides, in the world of cloak-and-dagger dealings, Coke's got everything you'll ever see in those old midnight movies: a mysterious secret formula; big money for undercover bribes; solid connections in high places.

Plus the extra clout of instant identification. Coca-Cola is recognized in countries that have yet to hear about indoor plumbing, not to mention Cyrus Vance, Bert Lance, Zbigniew Brzezinski or Amy.

And it's already got a worldwide network that stretches from the Pacific to the Middle East and all the trouble spots in between. As a negotiator in sticky situations, it's the real thing. Look at its track record:

COCA-COLA HAS already conquered Japan, where any native who isn't sipping tea or sake is probably drinking Coke. With 60 percent of the soft-drink market, Coke pulls in 10 percent of its earnings from Japan and expects to triple that in the next six years.

That makes it a natural for those ticklish trade talks coming up. It's got a toe in the Kremlin, too. Although its arch rival, Pepsico, Inc., persuaded President Nixon to help it wangle exclusive rights to sell Pepsi in the Soviet Union, Coke has the soft-drink concession for the 1980 Olympics bottled up. Now it's pushing for a more permanent deal.

And the President and secretary of state can wander all over Africa peddling American good will, but wherever they go, from Nigeria to Tanzania, Coke's gotten there ahead of them.

Not for nothing do Coca-Cola executives spend much of their time jetting from Moscow to Cairo to Riyadh.

THEN THERE'S the Israeli and Arab situation. While Carter is politicking to convince Sadat and Begin it's possible to work together, Coke's in there arguing that they can burp together, too.

The Arabs kicked Coca-Cola out of the Middle East because it does business with Israel. But if the U.S. can sell fighters to both sides, Coke figures it can do the same thing with soda pop.

Now it's trying to work its way off the boycott hook with promises of a new $15-million canning factory in Saudi Arabia and a $4-million concentrate plant in Egypt, providing those countries will cross Coke off the blacklist.

IF IT WORKS, maybe the President should start bartering with bubbles instead of bullets. And if a successful diplomat needs friends in high places, Coke's got those, too.

Beginning with Carter himself. He and Coca-Cola chief J. Paul Austin have been buddy-buddy ever since, as governor of Georgia, Jimmy used to go for free rides on company planes.

Ever grateful, the President has rewarded Coke with help in (1) the Olympics deal, (2) getting Coke back into Portugal after a 50-year ban and (3) killing a proposed two-cent duty on imported sugar (without which things just wouldn't "go better with").

NOW IF COKE can work wonders like that at home, think of the fizz it could create in foreign circles. Except in India, of course, where it is soda pop non grata.

Last year the Indian government, in a power grab that startled every corporation in the world with overseas franchises, ordered Coca-Cola to transfer 60 percent of its Indian interests to native shareholders. Then it wanted the formula, too.

Coke held still for the shares deal, but said nix on the formula—a secret known only to three men in the world and kept closely guarded in a bank vault.

Competitors have struggled for years to crack the Coke code, and the closest they can come is that it's 99.8 per cent water and sugar, plus a mysterious blend of coca leaf and cola nut which, along with other flavoring ingredients, produces a distinctive flavor.

The formula is worth billions and there was no way the company was going to hand it over to India. So Coke got booted out. But if there's trouble on the Ganges, we can always send in Pepsi.

Q. "Why is it more difficult for a dentist to extract lower teeth than uppers?"

A. Because the lower jawbone is the most calcified, the hardest bone in the body.

Q. "Can a 6-year-old child be punished by law for a crime?"

A. By law, no. Or at least it's highly unlikely. Common law decrees nobody under age 7 is capable of criminal intent, so can't commit crimes.

Q. "How big is a newly born black bear cub?"

Jury Sentences Kenneth Jaycon To 25 Years

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Kenneth Owen Jaycon was assessed a 25-year prison term Friday by the jury which convicted him of participating in the gruesome Christmas Eve slaying of William Drew Young III.

The seven-man, five-woman panel in Judge Thomas L. Clinton's 99th District Court deliberated about two hours and 10 minutes before returning the punishment.

Jaycon could have received anywhere from five to 99 years, or life imprisonment, for the murder conviction.

Prosecutors Tom Cannon and Jim Darnell asked for the maximum life sentence, arguing the sentence would fit both the man and the crime.

In punishment argument Friday, Cannon made a reference to what witnesses indicated was a ghoulish sense of humor displayed by Jaycon after Young reportedly was shot to death inside the back office of the Salt River Saloon at 2311 19th St.

"After the man had been shot and his life blood is dripping onto the floor, onto the couch, onto the wall, he (Jaycon) could play with his body and joke.

"And that was all before he (Young) was placed in the trunk of a car and doused with a flammable liquid. That's the kind of man you're dealing with," Cannon argued.

Prosecutors introduced testimony during the punishment phase of the trial showing the dark-haired defendant, 31, had been assessed a three-year probated sentence in 1972 after pleading guilty to receiving and concealing stolen goods.

Defense attorney Clifford Brown told jurors he was disappointed in the guilty verdict and said he believed a five-year term would be sufficient.

"I know and you know that you convicted my client on the law of principals," Brown said.

"But you also know Kenneth Jaycon didn't pull the trigger, didn't beat or slap William Drew Young, didn't make threats and wasn't in the room when the shot was fired."

Brown also argued that jurors should take into account the fact that three of the six persons charged with Young's murder had been promised they would not go to the penitentiary in return for testimony against Jaycon.

The body of Young, 28, was found by law enforcement officers in the trunk of his smoldering auto near FM 1585 and S. Avenue P about 10 p.m. last Dec. 24.

But accounts from three purported eyewitnesses — the three defendants who agreed to turn state's evidence — indicated Young had been shot to death about two hours earlier at the 19th Street club.

Charged along with Jaycon were Tico Lowrance, 27; her husband Homer V. Lowrance Jr., 37; Kenneth Wayne Herndon, 35; Jan Payne, 26, and Jim Gordon, 42.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowrance and Miss Payne were the three who testified for the state in Jaycon's trial.

Mrs. Lowrance — whose sudden illness forced a one-week postponement of the trial, which originally had been set for April 17 — gave the most dramatic account of Young's death.

The expressive witness, whose braided hair reached almost to her waist, said bad blood had developed after Young, a former bartender at the bar, left early Dec. 21 and was suspected of stealing $350 from the cash register.

Mrs. Lowrance explained she ran the club with Gordon as a partner.

She said that Young had been in the bar Christmas Eve and threatened to return later and cause trouble. According to Mrs. Lowrance, she had gone to the bar and requested others, including Gordon, to meet her there.

The witness said Gordon, Jaycon and Herndon arrived at about the same time. She said Young was eventually spotted outside the bar.

"Jim Gordon jumped up and told Ken Jaycon and Ken Herndon to go out and get him," Mrs. Lowrance said.

According to Mrs. Lowrance, the two left and came back through a side door holding Young at either side. She said Gordon began beating Young inside the bar and that it was suggested he be taken into the office in order not to disturb customers.

The physical assault by Gordon continued as Young sat dazed on a small couch, Mrs. Lowrance said.

The witness said that Herndon pleaded with Gordon to let him take care of the situation, saying that Gordon should not get into trouble because "you own the town."

"The next thing I know, Ken Herndon had the gun pointed at W. D. Young," she said.

"He said: 'I'll give you to the count of three to tell me where the money is or I'll blow your ... head off."

Mrs. Lowrance indicated the gun was cocked as Young remained seated.

"He counted 'one ... two ...' and then there was a BOOM!" the witness exhaled loudly into the courthouse microphone.

Accomplice testimony indicated that Jaycon was not present when the shot was fired. Mrs. Lowrance said she had asked him to go get drinks from the bar in an effort to reduce tensions.

She also testified that Jaycon had earlier apparently attempted to calm Gordon down by telling him that Young did not appear to be cognizant of what was taking place.

Defense attorneys argued Jaycon had not known Young was to be killed and did nothing to assist in the murder.

Prosecutors said jurors could deduce from his actions before and after the shooting that he had known there was intent to kill the victim.

Prosecutors pointed to testimony indicating that Herndon was seen with a gun in Jaycon's presence when Young was taken into the bar.

Testimony from law officers showed Herndon and Jaycon were stopped around 11 p.m. Dec. 24 after being seen about two miles east of where the burned auto with Young's body was found. Testimony indicated the two were watching a burning cardboard box full of clothing.

Records show Jaycon has been indicted twice for alleged attempted murder in connection with separate incidents in 1976 and 1977. Cannon said Friday those charges remain pending.

Furr's To Introduce New Marketing Plan

By RAY WESTBROOK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Furr's Super Markets has announced the introduction of a new marketing concept designed to lower grocery prices in its Lubbock trade area by the packaging under a generic label of both food and non-food items.

Scheduled to go on sale today in most stores in the South Plains area, the new items will be segregated in the grocery store from the firm's regular stock of national-name products.

While asserted to contain the equivalent nutritional value of regular-line foods, the generic labeled products are items considered by the food companies to be less appealing from a visual standpoint than those selected for a "name" label.

As an example of the pricing difference, a 29-ounce can of tomatoes displayed at a Furr's press meeting Friday was priced to sell at 41 cents under the generic lable, compared to 58 cents for the same size Food Club can. Sliced pears were 53 cents compared to 67 cents for the 29-ounce name brand item, and tea bags were $1.49 for a 100-count package, compared to $2.35 for the national brand.

A spokesman for Furr's explained the difference in "quality" of the various items. For example, a bag of rice under a national name brand might contain 30 percent cracked grains, compared to some 60 percent in the generic labeled item.

Robert Green, vice president of retail operations for Furr's, said, "Cost-conscious customers are looking for ways to offset the cost of living. Our generic products offer a reasonable alternative. All will be wholesome products with nutritional value comparable to higher priced nationally-advertised brands, but at reduced retail prices, enabling our customers to get more purchasing power for each household dollar."

The new products will be identified by a plain white label with black print. Instead of a four-color picture, the label will simply state the contents.

Green said that in most cases, the quality of the item will be of the "standard variety" rather than the more costly "fancy" grade.

The move is designed to serve a market where appearance is less important than price.

Labels will carry an explanation such as: "These peas may vary in color, size or maturity. They are suitable for regular home meals."

"While all of this is designed to provide savings for the consumer, we want our customer to realize that there are some limits we both must share," Green said.

He pointed out that the generic products may not be available in as many sizes and flavors as the branded merchandise.

"In addition, we may not have a particular item in stock every time the customer comes in. Customers probably will get accustomed to buying three or four cans... or a case... of beans, for example, realizing that we may not always have beans available on their next trip."

He added, however, that the particular merchandise would always be available in branded lines.

Combat Pistol Matches To Conclude In City

The final police combat pistol match of the semester will be conducted by the Texas Tech University Pistol Club today at the Marine Reserve indoor range, 2903 4th St., starting at 9 a.m.

Club officials said each relay will shoot three courses: slow fire, international center fire and rapid fire, with a possible high score of 400 points.

Marksmen will be divided into four classification groups based on their shooting skills.

Haiti's Two-Hour Divorces May Be Okay In U.S.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — With a checkbook in one hand and a failed marriage in the other, hundreds of Americans are flocking to Haiti for uncontested divorces that are ready in two hours of paperwork.

So many foreigners are coming to this sunny Caribbean island to sever their marital bonds that the Haitian government has opened a permanent office here to assist couples in getting the quickie divorces.

But officials caution that Haitian divorces have not been extensively tested in court and may prove worthless in the United States.

More than half the approximately 1,200 persons who sought divorces in each of the past three years were Americans, says Marie Ange Puzo, assistant director of the Office of Divorce for Foreigners. The other nationalities include Scandinavians, West Germans, Italians, Liberians and a scattering from Africa and South America.

U.S. Consul Donald B. Wallace, whose office authenticates the signatures of Haitian officials on divorce decrees, said that many Americans began coming to this poverty-stricken nation a decade ago when U.S. courts first started to void Mexican-obtained divorces.

The procedure described by Miss Puzo can cost as little as $575 — the $175 fee charged by the government divorce office and $400 for the legally required Haitian lawyer recommended by the government. The fee, of course does not include transportation or lodging in Haiti.

The divorce office is located near the cruise ship pier just around the corner from the U.S. Embassy and the Pan American office. Most customers seek uncontested divorces in which both sides have agreed to separate amicably, Miss Puzo said.

In these cases, she said, one member of the couple must appear in person with a notarized power of attorney from the other spouse and a checkbook. After two hours of filling out forms, the spouse leaves the matter in Haitian hands. The paperwork passes from the office to a judge who issues the decree to the U.S. consulate for authentication and back to the office, which mails the document to the former couple.

The paper, worded in French, is prettily gift-wrapped in ribbon.

Most of the customers fly in one day and depart the next, and some continue their vacation on another Caribbean island.

As for their authenticity, Haitian divorces "are recognized everywhere if they are uncontested," Miss Puzo said.

"Generally, Haitian divorces have been accepted because they are amicable — they aren't questioned in court," the U.S. consul added.

What can be a problem are unilateral divorces obtained by only one member of a couple, sometimes without the knowledge of the other spouse. Miss Puzo said only one of every 500 divorces is unilateral.

The divorce office charges $250 for its services and supplies a lawyer for $500 in such cases. The plaintiff reports to the office with checkbook in hand and a judge sends official notification to the other spouse that a petition for divorce has been filed.

The notification gives the spouse 12 days, or 20 days for European residents, to contest the divorce, hire legal representation in Haiti and begin a long procedure that can take months, Miss Puzo said.

If the notification isn't answered within the time limit, the judge issues a judgment by default and the plaintiff is divorced — at least as far as the Haitian court is concerned. But the U.S consulate has a rubber stamp for such decrees warning it accepts no responsibility for their validity and that they may be "voidable" in a U.S. court.

Wallace said: "A unilateral divorce decree, as far as I am concerned is not worth the paper it's printed on."

Small Bay Wanted By Both Sides

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Walvis Bay, an enclave less than half the size of Rhode Island on Africa's southwestern coast, has developed into a major sticking point in the plan drawn up by five Western nations for South-West Africa's independence from South Africa.

South Africa wants to keep Walvis Bay when South-West Africa gains independence, but the South-West Africa People's Organization, the leading independence force in the territory, wants it too. SWAPO leader Sam Nujoma says it must be a part of Namibia, the nationalists' name for South-West Africa.

Both sides want Walvis Bay because of its economic value. It is the only deep sea harbor in South-West Africa, the center of a big fishing industry and is a major export route for South-West Africa's rich mineral exports.

The five Western authors of the settlement plan — the United States, France, West Germany, Canada and Britain — apparently recognized the controversy could snag independence negotiations and left the future of Walvis Bay out of the independence proposals that were approved Tuesday by the South African government.

The plan said the future of the enclave would be negotiated between South Africa and the government of Namibia, when it gains independence.

But officials here have made it clear in public statements that they consider Walvis Bay an integral part of South Africa. The government has backed up its claim by stationing a garrison of soldiers there.

Walvis Bay, squeezed between the Namib Desert and the Atlantic Ocean, is inhabited by about 10,000 whites, 12,500 blacks and 4,500 persons of mixed race, called "coloreds." Its port, the fifth largest in South Africa, handles about 2 million tons of cargo a year, mostly ore and fish products.

Sea mists blanket the foul-smelling cannery town, and sand storms scour it regularly.

Annexed by Britain in 1878, the 434 square-mile enclave was never part of the German colony established in South-West Africa in 1884. It has been controlled since World War I by South Africa, which has administered South-West Africa since then under a now-defunct League of Nations mandate.

The Western plan could lead to the independence of South-West Africa this year, if SWAPO agrees to it. However, Nujoma has indicated he probably will offer a counter proposal.

His black nationalist guerrillas, based in Angola, have been waging hit-and-run war against the 15,000 South African troops in the territory.

The Western proposals for Namibia's independence envisage the holding of free elections under United Nations supervision in the territory of 99,000 whites and 722,000 blacks. The plan calls for reduced South African administration to prepare for the election of a constituent assembly and reduction of the number of South African troops in the territory.

UGANDAN CRIME

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin, who says he's alarmed over his country's rising crime rate, has ordered all civilians to turn in firearms and ammunition in their possession. Amin, in a Uganda radio broadcast monitored here Friday, also announced that he has decided to personally handle all affairs concerning police and prisons.

Italians Remaining Hopeful For Moro's Life

ROME (AP) — Five days of silence on the fate of kidnapped former Premier Aldo Moro encouraged hopes among Italian officials and police Friday that the Red Brigades may have spared the politician's life.

Moro's wife and children also interpreted the silence as a good sign, according to close family friend Sereno Freato.

"Aldo Moro's relatives are all hopeful," Freato said.

Observers said the kidnapping has focused such worldwide attention on the Red Brigades and their goal to overthrow the government that the urban guerrillas may want to exploit Moro's captivity and keep him alive as a bargaining chip for further propaganda purposes.

The terrorists also may want to keep tensions high in Italy as the nation moves toward the May 14th municipal and provincial elections.

The elections are widely seen as a major test of voter reaction to Italy's escalating terrorism. The Red Brigades have said that any shift toward a right-wing regime would suit them, contending it would help them gain more supporters for a violent Marxist revolution.

In recent days, the Socialists have been trying to soften Premier Giulio Andreotti's position about not negotiating with Moro's kidnappers. This prompted charges that the country's third largest party is using the Moro case as an issue in the election campaign.

Andreotti said Friday the government's refusal to bargain is "definitive."

In a national television interview, the premier said the no-bargaining stand is a "political and moral duty." He added that Italy is in contact with other nations to ascertain if the Red Brigades may have links with other similar organizations.

Since Italy's most feared terrorist group grabbed Moro and killed his five bodyguardsMarch 16, the Red Brigades have releasedeight communiques thought to be authentic by Interior Ministry experts.

The last statement was issued Monday when the Red Brigades threatened to kill Moro unless 13 leftist prisoners were released from jail. But the Christian Democrat government immediately rejected the demand and held fast to its refusal to negotiate with the kidnappers.

Since then, no more authentic communiques have been received, although anonymous hoax calls continue to pour in to police. Acting on tips, police combed vast areas of the port cities of Genoa to the north and Taranto to the south Friday in a vain search for Moro's kidnappers.

Rome police said they seized Red Brigades papers and documents during a search of a student's apartment in Parioli, one of Rome's most exclusive residential areas. The authorities said the apartment was inhabited by a former girlfriend of Valerio Morucci, one of nine persons wanted as alleged participants in the Moro ambush.

In a meeting with top investigators this week, Rome District Attorney Giovanni Di Matteo noted the 1974 case of Genoa District Attorney Mario Sossi who was kept captive by the Red Brigades for 35 days after they conducted a "people's trial" and sentenced him to death like Moro.

But the Red Brigades released Sossi after a Genoa court granted their demands for the release of eight jailed terrorists. The terrorists were never actually freed, however, because a magistrate later blocked the court order and kept them the in jail.

In other developments, the conservative newspaper Il Tempo reported Friday that the Red Brigades planned a widespread terror attack 24 hours after it kidnapped Moro to "bring the country to its knees."

The newspaper said the disclosure came in an exclusive interview with Cristoforo Piancone, 28, a Red Brigades member who was wounded and captured after the ambush of a prison guard in Turin on April 11.

"In connection with Moro's kidnapping, 24 hours later we should have carried out a subversive plan aimed at bringing the country to its knees, something terrifying ...," Piancone was quoted as saying.

"But those at the top level of the organization stopped it because it was felt to be politically inopportune at the time."

Details of the projected "terrifying" attack were not disclosed.

Finacone also told Il Tempo that Red Brigades receive "real and true terrorist training" outside of Italy. Previous reports have mentioned Palestinian guerrilla camps, Cuba, Czechoslovakia and Angola.

Afghan Coup Startles State Department

WASHINGTON (AP) — An apparent coup in Afghanistan this week surprised the State Department and left it with little idea as to what caused the rebellion or what the rebel leaders intend to do, U.S. officials said Friday.

The rebel leaders, who control the country's radio station, said in broadcasts Friday that they intend to follow a "progressive non-alligned and democratic course."

If they do, there will probably be little change in relations with the United States because Afghanistan has been following a non-alligned foreign policy under President Mohammad Daud.

The rebels, apparently led by Air Force Col. Abdul Qadir, said they had killed Daud after he refused to surrender during fighting Thursday in the capital city of Kabul.

State Department officials, who asked not to be identified, said they had not received confirmation of Daud's death or the success of the coup. "The situation is murky," one said.

The American embassy in Kabul told Washington that the fighting had not completely ended in the capital and no details were available about the situation in the rest of the country.

The embassy reported no deaths or injuries among the estimated 1,300 Americans in the country.

The embassy urged Americans not to travel to Afghanistan until the situation settles down. The rebels have closed down the airports and sealed off the nation's borders.

Robber Leaves Identification

DEAUVILLE, France (AP) — A man held up the casino in Deauville and got away with $75,000 — but he left his identity card behind.

Casino clients are required to produce identity papers when entering French casinos. The man identified by police as Norbert Loutrel, 25, living in Lisieux, forgot to reclaim his identity card. After losing $11 at roulette Thursday night, he claimed to have a pistol in his pocket and demanded the night's receipts.

But while authorities knew who the thief was, they still had not apprehended him early Friday.

Rizzo Rejects Honor From Ku Klux Klan

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mayor Frank Rizzo has snubbed a title bestowed upon him by the Ku Klux Klan — "racist hero of the month."

"I reject the KKK and all it represents," Rizzo said in a statement released Thursday. "It is foreign to everything I was ever taught." Rizzo was given the title in this month's edition of "The Klansman." Rizzo was cited for stating "publicly what klansmen have been saying for decades — namely that whites must join hands and unite for their common good."

At a City Hall press conference last month, Rizzo urged whites to "join hands" to get equal treatment.

MILAN STRIKE

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Tons of garbage piled up along Milan streets Friday as sanitation workers continued an off-again, on-again strike that began five days ago. Sanitation union leaders are demanding higher wages and better fringe benefits.

Tower Projects Halted During Scaffold Inquiry

WILLOW ISLAND, W.Va. (AP) — The company building a tower where 51 men were killed in a scaffolding failure said Friday it has halted work on three similar projects until the accident's cause can be found. Federal safety officials said that could take weeks.

Meanwhile, federal inspectors on the scene said they would test the concrete in the tower as part of their search for the cause of the collapse.

The Charleston, W.Va., Daily Mail said initial reports indicated that the concrete was not dry when the scaffolding was fastened to it.

The scaffolding peeled away Thursday from the highest completed level of a concrete cooling tower being built for a Monongahela Power Co. generating plant by Research Cottrell Inc., a Bound Brook, N.J., firm that builds environmental control structures.

The tower had reached 170 feet — about two-fifths of its planned height — when the scaffolding suddenly fell from the top.

All 51 workers on the scaffold were killed by the fall.

Dennis Carlton Jones, president of Research Cottrell Inc., said at a news conference in Willow Island Friday that until the cause is determined, the company has stopped work on three similar projects.

He would not say where they were, but in Berwick, Pa., the Pennsylvania Power & Light Co. said it had stopped construction on two cooling towers being built by Research Cottrell for a PP&L nuclear plant there.

"We stopped work on the cooling towers Thursday when we heard about the accident down south," PP&L spokesman Bob Compton said.

The Willow Island plant had been scheduled for completion in 1980. "Now we don't know," said Monongahela spokesman Lyle Corder.

Jones said Research Cottrell has used the same type of scaffolding at 36 similar towers over the last seven years without incident.

"With this backround of experience, the collapse that took place yesterday morning is all the more difficult to understand and its cause will not be easy to determine," Jones said.

Dr. Eula Bingham, assistant secretary of labor for the Occupational Health and Safety Administration, which is investigating, flew to Willow Island from Hawaii as eight OSHA inspectors poked through the wreckage.

"It's the worst accident since OSHA was formed in 1972," she said.

Meanwhile, residents began preparing to bury their dead — with some graves to be adjacent to the construction site, where a 428-foot cooling tower already stands near its unfinished twin.

The mayors of St. Marys and nearby Belmont declared Sunday a day of mourning, and Gov. Jay Rockefeller toured the disaster site with OSHA officials. Reporters were not allowed to accompany the governor but were taken on a separate tour.

One woman, Molly Steele, will be burying four sons. Six other members of her family also died.

Jack Hord, director of information for the Philadelphia region of the Department of Labor, said the last inspection of the construction site was in April 1977. He said there had been no inspection since then because there had been no complaints of safety problems.

A spokesman for OSHA said there had been 13 inspections of the site since 1973, but Research Cottrell's operations had never been inspected. However, Jones said the scaffolding system "has been inspected by OSHA at three sites over the past 12 months and in no case did we receive unfavorable comments with respect to its overall safety and integrity."

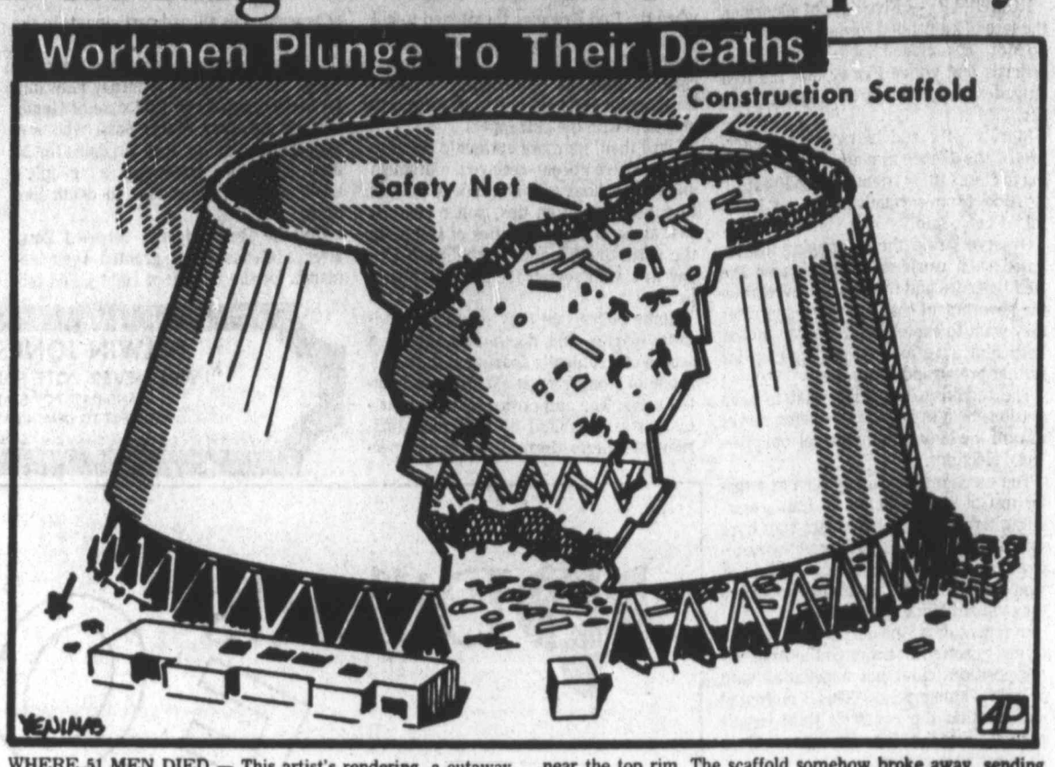

The 13 OSHA inspections showed "numerous violations, both serious and nonserious," said spokesman James Foster. But Andy Twyman, financial secretary of Iron Workers Local 787, said, "to my knowledge, there hadn't been any serious accidents out there until this one." Ten of 20 union members at the site were killed, he said.

There was some confusion about the authoritativeness of one Monongahela statement about the accident.

On Thursday, company spokeswoman Nancy Crow released a statement under Corder's name, describing the accident this way: "As it was being poured today, the 28th layer (of concrete) disintegrated and the bolts that were holding the scaffolding pulled loose away from it."

On Friday, however, Miss Crow said the statement had come from her, not Corder, and was intended not as a formal company statement but as an informal account from one witness.

"We really don't know what happened because it wasn't our project," she said. She also contended she had said Thursday that the bolts had pulled loose at the 27th layer, not the 28th.

WHERE 51 MEN DIED — This artist's rendering, a cutaway drawing based on the best information available at this time, shows the cooling tower where 51 men died Thursday at the electrical generating plant in Willow Island, W. Virginia. The men were working on a construction scaffold inside the tower, near the top rim. The scaffold somehow broke away, sending the men screaming to their deaths 170 feet below. A safety net attached to the scaffold fell with it. Parto of the net and parts of the scaffold are shown falling to earth. (AP Laserphoto)

Wife's Dream Predicted Spouse's Imminent Fate

PARKERSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — "I had this dream, and it told me that we would have only a week more together," said Debby Monroe, 25.

"I felt it somehow. I knew. It sounds unreal."

Mrs. Monroe drove to the Belmont fire station late Thursday to identify her husband's body. Clayton Monroe, 24, was one of 51 men who fell to their deaths when a scaffold inside a cooling tower under construction at a power plant collapsed.

Later, in her Parkersburg home, she talked about her dream.

"I felt something, and I told him," she said. "He said it was only a dream. When I told him, he didn't believe. And when I heard about the fall, I felt somehow that I had heard about it before."

As she talked, her 2-year-old son cried. She said she is pregnant.

"I've cried all day," she said. "But at the firehouse I was strong. There was so much pain there. I am not yet done with my crying. But there is the baby to take care of. That is what I must look ahead to.

"He was a good man, and now he is with God."

No new taxes. What has it meant for Texas?

The people of Texas like Dolph Briscoe's kind of government because they are getting more from state government now than ever before, but at the same time, they are keeping more of their hard-earned wages for their own use, rather than paying higher taxes for unneeded or ineffective programs.

But the people of Texas understand this, too: when something needs to be done, Dolph Briscoe gets it done.

• During the Briscoe Administration, we have put two and one-half billion additional state dollars into improving our public schools.

• During the Briscoe Administration, we have increased average teacher salaries 53 percent.

• During the Briscoe Administration, we have put new emphasis on vocational and technical education.

• During the Briscoe Administration, we have increased funding for medical education by 250 percent.

• During the Briscoe Administration, we have increased spending for mental health and mental retardation by 174 percent.

• During the Briscoe Administration, we have expanded programs for the aged by 200 percent.

• During the Briscoe Administration, we have protected our $35 billion investment in the best highway transportation system in the world by enacting the first comprehensive, long-range highway program since 1955 — and we did it without raising the gasoline tax.

Briscoe For Texas
John Hill For Taxes

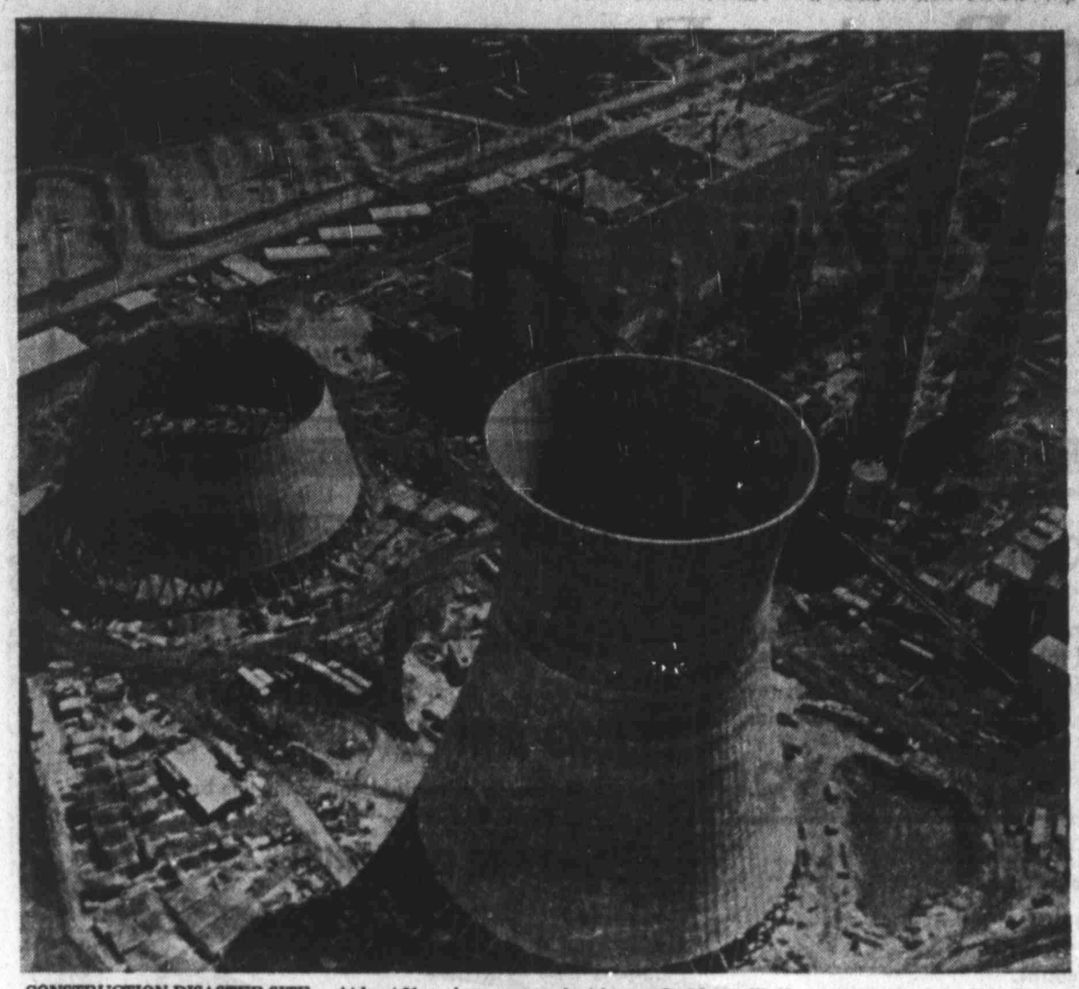

The choice is clear. Do we want to continue with Dolph Briscoe's style of leadership that stands on a solid record of prosperity without big government and without new taxes? Or do we want the kind of John Hill leadership that will promise anything to gain votes? The kind of leadership that will surely result in more governmental interference in your life and a state income tax next year.

Worker Credits Bruised Thumb As His 'Life-Saving Injury'

CONSTRUCTION DISASTER SITE — At least 51 workers were killed Thursday when the scaffold on which they were working in the unfinished cooling tower (left) collapsed. The power plant is near St. Marys, W. Va. on the bank of the Ohio River. (AP Laserphoto)

WILLOW ISLAND, W.Va. (AP) — "I was a believer that it would never fall," said James Miller, 29, who owes his life to a bruised thumb.

The father of two was preparing cement at the base of cooling unit No. 2 Thursday when a piece of plyboard smashed his thumb. Forty minutes later, while he was being treated at a hospital, 51 fellow workers plunged 168 feet to their deaths when scaffolding slipped from the top of the giant evaporation tower at the Pleasants Power Station.

"I would have been under it," Miller said Friday in a telephone interview.

He said he had worked atop the scaffolding 20 or 30 times in the past year "when we were short a man."

But Thursday, his $10-an-hour job called for "mixing up some grout" on the ground, readying a bucket of concrete for its trip to the top of the one-third completed tower beside the Ohio River.

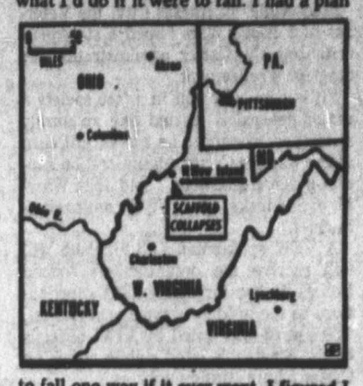

Officials of the Monongahela Power Co. theorized the weight of the scaffolding caused it to tear loose from mooring bolts implanted in concrete poured 24 hours earlier.

Miller, from nearby Elizabeth, said he and the other construction workers dismissed thoughts that the scaffolding was unsafe, although none discounted the dangers involved.

"To me it wasn't any different than working on the ground. That's how solid it was," he said. "Anybody who couldn't stand height couldn't hack it. Some guys would get up there, look down and grab the railing and freeze."

He said he always tried to plan ahead in case something should happen on the catwalk which encircled the mouth of the tower.

"Everytime I went up, I'd think about what I'd do if it were to fall. I had a plan to fall one way if it ever went. I figured I could grab some reinforcement bar and hang on. But it fell the other way. I always felt the inside scaffolding would fall down the inside and the outside scaffolding would go down the outside. But it all pulled over the top and went down the inside," he said.

Miller, who described himself as a "church man," said "I believe I was just spared. I kind of figure somebody is taking care of me."

He said he was in a Parkersburg hospital emergency room when he heard of the disaster.

"I called my wife to let her know I was all right. She refused to believe that it was me. She thought I was a gonner."

Despite the tragedy, Miller plans to return to work when the company calls. "I'm going back, but I'll be more careful. And I'll always be looking up."

Gen. Singlaub Agrees To Retire From Army

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outspoken Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, who publicly called President Carter's decision to shelve the neutron warhead "ridiculous," agreed Friday to retire after a meeting with top Army officials.

GEN. SINGLAUB

The announcement of Singlaub's retirement came less than 24 hours after he criticized Carter's defense policies in a speech to military cadets at the Georgia Institute of Technology.

Returning to Atlanta after meeting with Pentagon officials, Singlaub said, "I have no regrets for having spoken the truth as I perceived it ... I do sincerely regret, however, any embarrassment that I may have caused the United States Army."

Meanwhile, in Newark, N.J., former President Gerald R. Ford termed Singlaub's retirement "unfortunate."

"I feel it's extremely important for senior military officers to speak their own mind, to speak as their conscience tells them," Ford said.

For the blunt-speaking Singlaub, 56, it was a case of "two strikes and you're out." He escaped last year with only a transfer after publicly criticizing Carter's decision to withdraw U.S. ground troops from South Korea, where Singlaub then was staff chief.

This time, Singlaub was summoned to the Pentagon and his retirement announced less than 24 hours after he sounded off Thursday before Reserve Office Training Corps cadets at Georgia Tech in Atlanta.

In his speech to the cadets, Singlaub termed "ridiculous" Carter's decision not to produce the neutron bomb without gaining concessions from the Russians. He termed the decision militarily unsound.

Carter announced earlier this month that he would delay, at least temporarily, production of neutron weapons, which were designed to use radiation, rather than blast effect to stop a Soviet tank assault in Europe.

Although commonly referred to as a bomb, the weapons actually are designed as warheads for Lance missiles and artillery shells.

In his speech Thursday, Singlaub also publicly disagreed with the Panama Canal treaties, which will turn over control of the waterway to Panama at the end of this century. He said the treaties, ratified by the Senate last week after intense administration lobbying, were unnecessary.

Meanwhile, in Kansas City, the Veterans of Foreign Wars issued a statement criticizing the Carter administration for Singlaub's retirement.

"It is hypocrisy that in a free society a major general is treated like an unruly schoolboy whenever he voices criticism of the way the Carter administration handles defense questions," said John Wasylik of Sandusky, Ohio, VFW commander-in-chief.

A VFW spokesman said Singlaub will still receive the organization's Armed Forces Award for outstanding contributions to the military service next August. The award was voted by VFW officials before Singlaub's latest public attack on Carter administration policies.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Rex Granum said President Carter was in the position of "having been advised of the action" against Singlaub "rather than initiating it."

Asked if Carter approved of Singlaub's retirement under pressure, Granum replied: "I think it's safe to say that he could have turned it around" and decided not to retire him.

Granum said Defense Secretary Harold Brown telephoned Carter Thursday night to advise him that Singlaub was being summoned to the Pentagon.

Asked if Carter had read a full transcript of Singlaub's remarks, Granum replied: "I would suspect he's got a little better things to do."

A short time after Singlaub ended his meeting with Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Army Chief of Staff Gen. Bernard Rogers, Army information chief Brig. Gen. Robert Solomon read a statement saying: "Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub will retire from the United States Army."

Reading the statement, Solomon said Gen. Frederick Kroesen, Singlaub's boss at the Army Forces Command in Atlanta, had recommended that "Singlaub be permitted to request retirement" and "that recommendation was accepted." Earlier, Solomon had told reporters only that Singlaub had agreed to retire.

Solomon declined to give any details of what Singlaub told his superiors, but added that Singlaub is retiring after a 35-year military career "essentially because of what he considers an inadvertant disclosure of remarks he made" to the ROTC audience.

Solomon said he talked to Singlaub on Thursday afternoon and that Singlaub "appeared to be somewhat surprised that there were media present" during the ROTC address, although there were reporters and a television camera present.

When he was recalled from Korea after the previous incident he had also said he thought he was speaking off-the-record when he criticized the president's policies.

In his address on Thursday, Singlaub said: "I think the decision not to produce the neutron bomb without some compensating concession from the other side is like throwing your trump card away in a game of bridge. I think it's ridiculous."

The actual date when Singlaub will leave the Army is uncertain, Solomon said, and will be announced after "routine medical evaluation."

Singlaub, a much-decorated veteran of three wars, suffered wounds in battle and probably will claim some disability benefits.

Based on length of service, he is entitled to retire at about 75 percent of his active-duty military pay, which will come to more than $30,000 a year. According to standard policy, Singlaub will retire at his highest held rank, major general.

Under the law, he would have been required to retire anyway in October 1979 based on length of service and age.

Moscow Mayor Appeals For Neutron Bomb Ban

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Soviet Union has broadened its campaign against the neutron bomb to include an appeal from the mayor of Moscow to the mayor of Bonn to resist the weapon.

Bonn Mayor Hans Daniels, president of the Association of Capital Cities in the Common Market, disclosed Friday he received a letter dated March 30 from Vladimir Fiodorovich Promyslov, chairman of the executive committee of the Moscow city soviet.

Earlier this year Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev wrote leaders of Europe and North America calling for a ban on the high-radiation neutron warhead, which is designed to stop a Soviet tank attack on Western Europe.

On Tuesday, Brezhnev said the Soviets would not produce the controversial weapon if the United States did not.

Western members of parliament have said they also received anti-bomb letters from their counterparts in the Soviet Union.

Daniels said he was "astonished" Promyslov would make such an appeal to the city council and people of Bonn. It was unknown whether similar letters were sent to other mayors. The Soviet official has visited Bonn twice.

Daniels said the Soviet Union had weapon systems far more terrible than the neutron bomb, including "rockets which are already deployed and aimed at many tagets in Western Europe. The destructive power of these multiple-warhead nuclear weapons is monstrous."

He said President Carter's decision April 7 to delay production of the neutron warhead was a signal for Warsaw Pact countries to show their readiness to reduce their growing attack potential.

The Bonn mayor appealed to Promyslov to do all in his power as a member of the Soviet Communist Party central committee to reduce the offensive weapons of the Soviet Union.

WHAT'S UP

A Capsule View Of Tastes, Interests And Attitudes

What's up in golf

So what if your golf handicap is higher than Jack Nicklaus's average score? You can convince the gang at the 19th hole that you know what you're doing if you use the proper language.

Here are some examples of "tour talk" offered by Dick Haskell, executive director of the Massachusetts Golf Association, in Golf Digest magazine:

Hickories: Golf clubs.
H20'd it: Ball in the water.
In the spinach: In the rough or woods.
Juiced it: Hit the ball too far.
Knee knocker: Tough short putt.
Noodled it: Curved shot out of woods.
Ocean liner: Long putt across the green.
On the beach: In a sand trap.
Oscar Brown: Out of bounds.
Out on the fluffy: In the fairway.
Pill: Golf ball.
Rain maker: High shot.
Recovery room: Scorer's tent or 19th hole.
Shooting gallery: Easy birdie course.
Smoke City: Well-hit drive.
Van Gogh it: Artistic shot or round.
Worm burner: Ground-hugging, poor shot.

What's up in smoking

The United States seems to be one of the smokiest countiest in the free world, says a recent Census Bureau report.

Here are the average numbers of cigarettes consumed annually per person 15 years old and older in 13 countries:

|---|---|
| Austria | 2,330 |
| Belgium | 2,380 |
| Denmark | 1,690 |
| Finland | 1,850 |
| France | 1,830 |
| W. Germany | 2,500 |
| Ireland | 3,040 |
| Italy | 1,680 |
| Netherlands | 1,970 |
| Norway | 630 |
| Sweden | 1,620 |
| Britain | 3,050 |
| U.S. | 3,670 |

What's up with kids

If a youngster has a problem, he or she is more likely to go to mother than father for help. And most children will only confide in a principal, teacher or doctor as a last resort.

These are the findings of a recent General Mills polls, which asked 6- through 12-year-olds with whom they found it hardest to communicate:

|---|---|
| 1. Principals | 46% |
| 2. Teachers | 41% |
| 3. Doctors | 34% |
| 4. Clergymen | 32% |
| 5. Fathers | 27% |
| 6. Brothers | 22% |
| 7. Sisters | 18% |
| 8. Mothers | 16% |
| 9. Friends | 11% |

Obviously, many kids had more than one answer to the question.

What's up on television

American high school students prefer movies to any other kind of television entertainment. That's the word from an opinion survey conducted by "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

According to the poll, the teenagers, favorite types of TV shows, in descending order, were:

1. Movies
2. Situation comedies
3. Sports
4. News
5. (Tie) Documentaries, Varieties
6. Public television
7. Drama

Boys were more fond than girls of sports programs; girls were more apt than boys to select dramas and variety shows.

Midwestern teen-agers enjoyed situation comedies much more than did students from other regions of the country. Maybe that's just local pride; after all, nearly every sit-com from Father Knows Best to Laverne and Shjirley has been set in the midwest.

What's up at Sears

"That is a pretty high rating right after God Almight and well ahead of the Democratic party," notes Gordon Weil in "Sears, Roebuck U.S.A."

—The firm was launched as the R.W. Sears Watch Company in 1886 by a Minnesota freight agent with a talent for mail order sales. An Indiana watchmaker, A.C. Roebuck, joined the company a few months later.

—Chicago's Sears Tower, the company's headquartets, is the tallest building in the world.

—More than 15 million copies of the Sears mailorder catalog are printed five times a year. The catalog and related publications make Sears the nation's biggest publisher.

—One out of every 204 working people in the U.S. is employed by Sears.

—In 1975, Sears had 858 stores plus 2,918 other catalog sales outlets.

What's up in the law

The average American has run into 4.8 major legal problems in his or her lifetime. Here are the 10 such problems he or she is most likely to have encountered, according to "The Legal Needs of the Public."

1. Buying real property
2. Major property damage
3. Writing a will
4. Divorce
5. Dispute about a major purchase
6. Serious personal injury
7. Estate settlement
8. (Tie) Serious dispute with a landlord, Job discrimination
9. (Tie) Serious injury to a child,
10. Serious difficulty with a municipal service

What about the lawyers who are frequently consulted about many of these problems? More than two-thirds of those surveyed agreed that "most lawyers charge more for their services than they are worth."

The study, incidentally, was conducted by American Bar Association and American Bar Foundation.

What's up in boxoffice champs

"Star Wars" made more money for its distributor than any other film in history — at least until receipts are added up for "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

According to Variety, these are the "All-Time Boxoffice Champion Films" in terms of rentals charged theater owners:

1. "Star Wars" (1977)
2. "Jaws" (1975)
3. "The Godfather" (1972)
4. "The Exorcist" (1973)
5. "The Sound of Music" (1965)
6. "The Sting" (1973)
7. "Gone With The Wind" (1939)
8. "One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest" (1975)
9. "Rocky" (1976)
10. "Love Story" (1970)
11. "Towering Inferno" (1975)
12. "The Graduate" (1968)
13. "American Graffiti" (1965)
14. "Doctor Zhavigo" (1965)
15. "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" (1969)
16. "Airport" (1970)
17. "The Ten Commandments" (1956)
18. "Mary Poppins" (1964)
19. "The Poseidon Adventure" (1972)
20. "Smokey and the Bandit" (1972)

23. "Ben-Hur" (1959)
24. "Earthquake" (1974)
25. "King Kong" (1976)

What's up in junk food

You know junk food rots your teeth, pollutes your digestive tract and adds inches to your waisteline. Michael S. Lasky, author of "The Complete Junk Food Book," knows it, too.

But like most of us, he still indulges his craving for the stuff.

Here are Lasky's nominations to the Junk Food Book Hall of Fame — the foods he would most want in lifetime supplies if he were marooned on a desert island.

Milky Way, M&Ms, Snickers (M and M-Mars)
Mister Goodbar (Hershey Foods)
Mounds (Peter Paul) Oh! Henry! (Ward Johnston)
Payday (Hollywood Brands)
Original Cheese Cake (Sara Lee)
Capri, Milano and Orleans Cookies (Pepperidge Farms)
Biscos Sugar Wafers (Nabisco)
Haagen Daz ice cream
Fritos (Frito-Lay)
Thick Potato Chips (Granny Goose)
Vienna Fingers (Sunshine)
And to wash it all down Lasky prefers Seven Up.

Fleetwood Mac is tops in Canada, too.

Stock Market Displays Vigor Despite Unfavorable Tidings

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, in what many analysts considered a stirring display of resiliency, ignored generally unfavorable economic news Friday and surged to a hefty gain.

"It's the latest of a bunch of thunderbolts that have been thrown at the market, and the market survives," said Larry Wachtel, an analyst for Bache Halsey Stuart Shields. "The Fed tightens credit, the prime rate goes up, inflation is higher than expected, but does the market go down? No, it goes up."

Friday's developments were so unexpected that a spokesman for the American Stock Exchange, reversing the normal roles, called a wire service reporter late in the day and asked: "Does anyone know why the market's doing so well?"

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down most of the morning and up slightly through the afternoon, rose sharply in the last hour and closed at 837.32, up 10.40. The industrial average thus recouped from Thursday's 10.05-point decline and resumed a steady increase that began two weeks ago.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a 9-5 margin in the over-all tally on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume reached 32.85 million shares, down slightly from 35.47 million Thursday.

Basically, the analysts' surprise was over the fact that the market performed as well as it did despite economic developments that weeks ago would have been blamed as the latest reasons for steady losses.

An hour before the market opened Friday, the government announced that consumer prices rose 0.8 percent in March, a 9.6 percent annual rate of inflation. Analysts who had looked for a repeat of the 0.6 percent rise in February called the announcement disappointing.

And midway through the morning, several large commercial banks raised prime interest rates to 8¼ percent from 8 percent. Increases in prime rates rarely fail to depress the market.

But analysts said the underlying cause of the interest rise—moves by the Federal Reserve Board to retard money growth and the inflation that usually follows it —actually helped the stock market. Foreign traders who have been holding large amounts of cash because of the long-term decline of the U.S. dollar were pleased that the Fed was taking a newly aggressive role in trying to hold down money supply increases, the analysts said.

"They say, 'Hey, the Fed's doing the right thing.'" Wachtel said. "If you present it to somebody in a vacuum and you say, 'The interest rate is rising, what will the market do?' they'll say it's going down. But here, you're fighting inflation, so the onus is off it."

Standard Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks picked up 1.23 to 106.94, and SP's 500-stock composite index rose .97 to 96.83.

It was a good day for the Blue Chips, with General Motors gaining ⅝ to65½ near the close, ATT up ⅜ to 62¾, Du Pont up 1⅜ to 116¾, IBM gaining 3½ to 265 and Procter Gamble up 2½ to 84½.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was up .50 at 53.90.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .51 to 138.36. The NAS-DAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 115.18, up .59.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I'm a widow of 72. The life company which insured my late husband for $5,000 is offering me an annuity of $42 to $47 a month (depending upon which annuity contract I select). Is this safe? Is this a good deal?

A. The company is a reputable insurer, licensed to do business in your state. I would certainly call it safe.

For any comparison you would like to make, compare the roughly $500 to %560 a year this contract would get you vs. an 8½ percent yield on the $5,000 ($425 a year) you could get from top quality bonds with the capital kept intact.

Q. Why do you say a home is more salable with a mortgage than without one?

A. A mortgaged home may be easier to sell if the present mortgage is an old one and carrying a favorable rate — say, less than 7 percent — and if your state laws are such that a would-be buyer could elect to assume that mortgage and thus save himself money financing the house, instead of having to go out and arrange for a new mortgage at today's much higher rates — not to mention the initial expense of setting up a new mortgage.

Q. How can I defer interest on my savings accounts so as to avoid paying income taxes until I want the money?

A. You can't. Interest earned bys avings is taxable in the year earned, whether you withdraw the interest or not.

Q. I am 15 and have been putting my money into savings certificates earning 7½ percent. I have $500 to $1,000 more I can now invest. Would it pay to buy preferred stocks? Would a broker take so small an account?

A. Some preferreds sell in the $10-15 range and also trade in 10-share lots. You could, therefore, make a "round-lot" purchase with either $500 or $1,000. Whether you should go into preferreds or not is another matter. Generally, I'd think a young man would invest for capital growth over the years since he has so much time ahead of him and time is often the important ingredient of investment success.

I guess it's a topsy-turvy world, all right. Old men ask my opinion on $4 oil venture stocks and young men want to get under a security blanket with preferreds.

Q. My broker suggests I redeem my mutual fund shares which are yielding less than 4 percent and switch my funds to utilities, thereby nearly doubling my income. I'm over 70. Comments, please.

A. His figures may well be correct. most common share mutuals aimed at growth yield much less than 4 percent. And many good quality utility commons yield close to 8 percent. First, however, determine whether you can't make the switch into a related income mutual fund for a total few of only $5.

Q. We have $90,000 in three 6½ percent savings certificates. Should we buy H bonds and accept 6 percent plus the exemption from state and local income taxes? I don't want mutual funds or common stocks. I'm retired, living on Social Security.

A. Before anyone invests for state and local income tax exemption, one must determine exactly how much these taxes take out of income. Without knowing any of your exemptions I would have to guess that your state and local taxes represent only a few percent of the near $6,000 interest now generated by your savings accounts. I doubt it would come to $450 a year, which is what you would lose by shifting from 6½ to 6 percent.

Before you make any tax move, you should compute the possible tax savings and then compare that figure with what you would be giving up in income to effect that saving. If your only other income is Social Security benefits — which are not taxable — you should carefully consider any tax-shelter move before you make it. (It doubt that you are on the right track.)

And if you still move in that direction, direct your attention first to saving the federal tax.

Bible School Swap Shop Ready

The 15th annual Vacation Bible School "swap shop" will be held Monday night at Broadway Church of Christ, located at 1924 Broadway.

The workshop is expected to draw attendance of up to 1,400 persons. It has been held the first Monday night in May since 1963. A devotional at 7:30 p.m. will launch the various activities.

Ron Bailey, who has directed the "swap shop" since its beginning, has arranged 15 classes this year that are designed to meet the needs of Christians. In addition to 10 departmental classes for teachers of ages 2 through sixth grade, there are five classes for special interests.

Bailey said although the shop originally was designed to help teachers with ideas for teaching Vacation Bible School, it has grown to the point that more than half of the attendants do not teach in VBS.

The feature class this year is "What About Alcohol and the Christian." A panel of three persons will present ideas on how to deal with the problem of alcohol. On the panel will be: Ray Fulenwider, minister of education at the Broadway Church of Christ; Charles Mickey, director of the Church of Christ Student Center at Texas Tech; and Jim McGuiggan, a teacher in the Sunset School of Preaching.

LuCille Simons, visual aids consultant at Sentinel Bookstore, will present a class on "Creative Visual Aids." Roger Hawley and Gayle Napier, both teachers at Lubbock Christian College, will teach a class titled "Continuing Marriage Enrichment in the Local Congregation." They also will lead a "marriage encounter" program and will do counseling. Ray Pectol, education minister of Parkway Drive Church of Christ, will lead a discussion on "Creative Things for Christian Teens To Do." Palma Smiley's class will be "Babies Can Learn, Too."

Center of attention at the "swap shop" of ideas on Christian education and life, will be classes for teachers of ages 2 through sixth grade. Developing ideas from the series "Our God, He Is Alive" for teachers of ages 2 and 3, will be Glenna Burns of Lubbock; ages 4 and 5, Anne Nicholas of Olton; grades 1 and 2 led by Chris Kimbler and Sandy Holcomb, along with teen-agers from the Sunset Church of Christ; grades 3 and 4, Sharon Owens of Lubbock; and grades 5 and 6, Joan Myatt of Abernathy.

Persons who have worked up ideas for the series "Christ and His Cross" are Ann Baker of Lubbock; Patty Snider of Coahoma; Thomas and Evelyn McIntire of Plainview; Joyce Hunter of Dimmitt; and Coleen Bryant of Plainview.

Sessions of the actual "swap shop" will be 8 to 9; 8:50 p.m.; and 9 to 9:50 p.m.

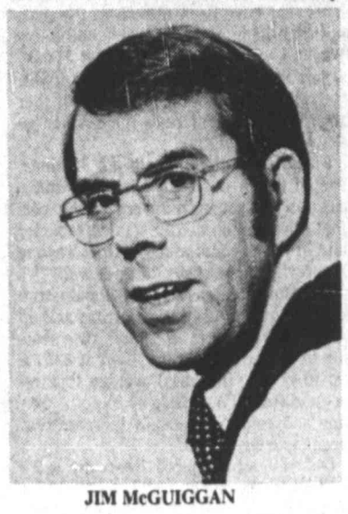

The public is invited.

CHARLES MICKEY

RAY FULLENWIDER

JIM McGUIGGAN

THE FITZGERALDS — The Rev. Bill Fitzgerald, missionary to Nigeria, and his family, will be at Lubbock's Agape United Methodist Church Sunday. A luncheon, following the morning service, will honor the missionary and his wife, Barbara, and their four children: Rachel, 6; Angie, 3; Joel, 2; and Suzanne, 4-month old.

State Religious Leaders Eye Gambling Referendum

EL PASO (Special) — Roman Catholic Bishop Patrick Flores of El Paso has joined a host of other religious leaders in the state — anglo, black, Mexican-American (Protestants, Catholics and Jews) — in urging Texans to defeat legalization of pari-mutuel gambling in the May 6 referendum, according to a roundup by Baptist Press.

"In my personal opinion, I don't believe that pari-mutuel betting would help the poor," Bishop Flores declared. Bishop Flores long has been identified as a champion of the needs of the poor.

He merged his influence with others, including a dozen religious groups across Texas, including four United Methodist bishops and leaders and representatives of Presbyterians, Jews, Church of Christ, Christian Scientists, Nazarenes, Seventh-Day Adventists, Baptist, and Assemblies of God.

"Pro-gambling forces have tried to popularize the ridiculous myth that only Baptists oppose pari-mutuel gambling," declared United Methodist Bishop W. Ferrin Stowe of Dallas, who said United Methodists actively are involved in opposing legalized pari-mutuels.

Other United Methodist Bishops on record against pari-mutuel gambling are Bishop Alsie Carleton of the Northwest Texas Conference, which includes Lubbock. Also, Bishop Chess Lovern of San Antonio, former pastor of Lubbock's First United Methodist Church, is listed as opposing legalized gambling.

The Rev. William J. Fogleman of Denton, general presbyter of the Presbyterian Church of Texas, and several well known pastors have urged Presbyterians to vote "no" on the pari-mutuel issue.

"The Church of the Nazarene holds that lotteries, pari-mutuel betting and all forms of gambling, legal or illegal, are practices detrimental both to the individual and to society," adds Dr. W.M. Lynch, superintendent of the Dallas District, Church of the Nazarene.

Dr Lynch said Church of the Nazarene district superintendents from Lubbock, Houston and San Antonio concur with him. (The Lubbock West Texas District Superintendent of the denomination is the Rev. Gene Fuller).

Leaders of seven major black church groups in Texas also have joined the forces opposing pari-mutuel legalization.

Rabbi Jack Bemboard of Temple Emmanuel of Dallas, said legalized par-matuel gambling is "contrary to the best interests of human beings."

VISITATION TEAMS FILLING NEED

Sixteen people came to the organizational meeting for our visitation project last Sunday night. It was truly exciting to see so much enthusiasm in one room. Those who were new to this game had their anxieties relieved. Those who were experienced at it were glad to get back into action.

A total of eight calls were made Sunday night, but many more will be made through the week by those whose schedule didn't permit them calling that night. Anyone interested or even curious about visitation is invited to be present again this Sunday evening at 7:00 for instructions and assignments.

THE WORLD GOD MADE

Small avalanches rumble in the distant mountains as the spring thaw advances. Every hemlock sprig is bursting with new growth. In the sky as in the river there is life and motion, restlessness and questing. Peace . . . without stillness.

Doesn't that tell us something about our own quest in the world God made? Peace without stillness is one of the supreme longings of mankind. It seems to HAPPEN when every thing or person realizes his mission and pursues it.

Next Sunday you'll have a precious opportunity to join your neighbors at church. That's where folks are seeking — and finding — their mission in the world God made.

Mart Posts Hefty Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, in what many analysts considered a stirring display of resiliency, ignored generally unfavorable economic news Friday and surged to a hefty gain.

"It's the latest of a bunch of thunderbolts that have been thrown at the market, and the market survives," said Larry Wachtel, an analyst for Bache Halsey Stuart Shields. "The Fed tightens credit, the prime rate goes up, inflation is higher than expected, but does the market go down? No, it goes up."

Friday's developments were so unexpected that a spokesman for the American Stock Exchange, reversing the normal roles, called a wire service reporter late in the day and asked: "Does anyone know why the market's doing so well?"

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down most of the morning and up slightly through the afternoon, rose sharply in the last hour and closed at 837.32, up 10.40. The industrial average thus recouped from Thursday's 10.05-point decline and resumed a steady increase that began two weeks ago.

Mahon, Burleson Warn Of 'Big Government'

schools, churches, communities and as individuals."

Burleson, who also will retire at the end of the present session and after his 31st year as representative for the 17th Congressional District, said he shared Mahon's faith and optimism. And, he observed, if federal government were less restrictive the job of maintaining the highest standard of living in the world would be easier.

"If the business community could just depend that rules wouldn't be changed in the middle of the game, you could cope with all this regulation," Burleson said of government reform moves.

But he said he thought President Jimmy Carter's tax reform bill may not be necessary.

"Probably, if we let tax reform alone," Burleson said, "we would cut the deficit in half and not have the inflation. There's really a little bit of a fraud in the bill."

But conservatives who are battling big government intervention, he said, are experiencing some advancements. Just last week, a group of liberal organizations met to discuss how they could counter the "conservative influence of right-wingers" on legislation, he said.

"There's got to be some encouragement there when you consider that (liberal groups) feel that conservatives have made advances," he said.

But he encouraged conservative forces to work even harder in this area.

"Our forces are beginning to circle up again and we need to send some riders over the hill," Burleson said. "But we don't because we're afraid we'll stir up dust and the environmentalists won't like it.

"But I'm sure the optimism that's inherent in Americans will lead us out again," he said.

Both Mahon and Burleson received as gifts of the area chamber Swedish crystal pieces, engraved with their names and years of service in the House. Mahon also was presented with the first copy of his biography, "One Honest Man," written by Wanda Evans.

Upon receiving the first edition, Mahon said "this is a day which I have long feared. I hope you won't think too poorly of my frailties revealed in this book, which I must inspect quite closely."

Friday night's banquet was the closing session of the convention. At a noon luncheon, Texas Instruments President J. Fred Bucy of Dallas blasted big government for creating many business problems by using business to carry out "federal social-engineering plans."

"These plans are meant to solve genuine problems," Bucy said, "but the solutions have gotten out of hand."

Bucy cited such "out of control" government remedies as hiring quotas, minimum wage laws, unionization of workers and specific legislative actions such as the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

He told the chamber members such governmental actions would not be necessary if businessmen took responsibility for correcting the problems at which such actions are aimed.

If all industries took this responsibility, he said, their products and services would satisfy the public so well that no one would demand government's regulation.

He challenged the chamber members to get individually involved in helping limit government control by electing candidates who favor a free enterprise system.

At the convention's opening session, three other speakers also leveled a strong attack against the federal government and the "left-wing Congress."

Lloyd Unsell, executive vice president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, accused the business and oil community of "sitting on the political sideline on its rump" instead of financially supporting candidates who will back up their needs in Washington.

Bill Stewart, executive director of the Texas Air Control Board in Austin, struck out at the Environmental Protection Agency, saying that if Texas does not come up with a clean air plan acceptable to EPA within the year, the state will lose $399 million in federal highway funds.

The existing EPA demands, Stewart said, will penalize areas initiating growth and reward those areas that stand still.

Harvey Davis, executive director of the newly-formed Texas Department of Water Resources, attacked federal land use regulations, saying the federal government has "the power to tell the farmer where to plant his pea patch."

He also explained the organization of the agency he took over six months ago and said his agency has as its philosophy "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

Nassau Shops Hit By Fire

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Fire engulfed a block of shops and apartments here Friday, causing $3 million to $4 million in damage. Two policemen suffered minor injuries in the blaze, which broke out in a furniture store on the city's main thoroughfare, Bay Street.

In that shop alone, $250,000 worth of merchandise was destroyed. Officials valued the building at $500,000.

Low water pressure and 25 mph winds hampered firefighters as they tried unsuccessfully to save 13 other buildings that were destroyed. Several more sustained smoke and water damage.

Officials said the island's fire crew was spread thin, fighting a fire in another part of the island when the alarm came in. Witnesses said it took 45 minutes for fire units to arrive.

Hundreds of residents were evacuated from four apartment houses and living quarters located behind shops. Residents lined up in bucket brigades, dipping into open wells for water to douse nearby homes as nine fire units battled the heart of the blaze.

Fire officials called it one of the three worst blazes of the century in the city. In 1929 the British Colonials Hotel burned down, and in 1942 fire destroyed the western end of Bay Street.

"The first thing I saw was flames shooting from Central Furniture and then the whole building was suddenly afire," said Audley Feaster, owner of a restaurant across from the furniture shop.

At one time, sparks were blown over half a mile to the south, setting the Ministry of Education building ablaze.

Jet Sales

Case of New Jersey, the senior Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, the key question in the Senate is the effect the sales to Egypt and Saudi Arabia will have on Israel's security.

The administration has argued that the sales to the Arab nations would meet legitimate defense needs and not endanger Israel. Administration spokesman also note that other countries, such as France, are ready to step in to sell their own equipment to Egypt and Saudi Arabia if the U.S. sale is withdrawn.

In "policy justification" statements sent to Congress, the Pentagon said the warplane sales to the three countries "will not alter the basic regional arms balance" but would permit Israel and Egypt to "continue with confidence negotiations for a peaceful solution to the Arab-Israel dispute."

Toppled Toilet Stirs Lawsuit

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — A man who said he was injured when the portable toilet he was using was pushed over has filed a $53,220 suit against the Mount Angel Oktoberfest in Marion County Circuit Court.

Robert Rispler, Portland, claimed the portable toilet he entered Sept. 18, 1976, at the annual Oktoberfest was pushed over by unruly patrons. His suit said he was "violently thrown about inside said portable toilet, became intimately mixed with the contents thereof and sustained a fracture of his right wrist as well as other contusions and abrasions."

The suit charged Oktoberfest with negligence in failing to secure the toilets so they could not be pushed over and failing to provide adequate security personnel.

FBI Probing 574 Corruption Cases

A-J News Services

WASHINGTON — FBI Director William H. Webster said Friday the bureau is investigating 574 cases involving possible corruption by past and present public officials.

Webster said the investigations date back three to four years and involve senators, congressmen, governors, state legislators, mayors and local police officials — both current and former.

The 54-year-old FBI director who took over the job last February said the volume of cases reflects the FBI's changing role and its new commitment to pursuing white collar crime and official corruption.

Shifting Emphasis

The bureau is shifting from its old emphasis on such crimes as bank robberies and auto thefts, Webster told reporters.

Webster declined to name the officials under investigation but presumably they include former members of Congress who allegedly accepted payoffs from South Korean businessman Tongsun Park.

Two former congressmen have been charged in that case, including one who pleaded guilty. Justice Department officials have said two more indictments might be returned in the future.

Other members of Congress known to be under investigation include Reps. Joshua Eilberg and Daniel Flood, D-Pa., whose roles in the funding of a Philadelphia hospital have been under review.

Kelley Credited

Webster credited his predecessor, Clarence M. Kelley, for redirecting the FBI's efforts toward public corruption and white collar crime.

On another matter, Webster said he does not intend to withdraw the nomination of James B. Adams as No. 2 man in the bureau despite published reports that Adams is unpopular with many FBI agents.

Webster said he has no reason to belive Adams was involved in illegal surveillance activities by the FBI in the early 1970s against the radical left-wing Weathermen.

The FBI chief said his most pressing problem was resolving disciplinary proceedings pending against 68 FBI officials in connection with a Justice Department investigation of the FBI's illegal wiretapping, break-ins and mail thefts.

Deadlines Set

Webster said he would try to resolve the disciplinary cases 30 to 60 days after getting files on the 68 individuals from the Justice Department.

Meantime, an FBI spokesman, Tom Coll, said some of the inquiries involve a number of targets, and the count of individual officials under investigation could run far higher. Coll would not reveal the exact number or identify any individuals involved.

"There are some current members of Congress who are subjects of investigations," Coll said in a telephone interview. "There are some fairly well-known former members of Congress.

"There are sitting governors and former governors. There are individuals serving as mayors of cities throughout the country. The investigations go all the way down the line."

As to present and former members of Congress, Coll said, "A very, very small amount has anything to do with the Korean bribery scandal." Again, he declined to give a specific number.

Coll said most of the investigations were started in the past three years, and are based on a 1970 amendment to the federal "racketeer influence and corrupt organizations" statute and a "corruption of public officials" statute.

"We have approximately 200 investigations going under the racketeer influence and corrupt organizations statute," Coll said. "What we have done is develop an expertise in using that particular statute around the country.

"Roughly 180 investigations are based on 'corruption of political officials.'"

Coll gave this summary of convictions obtained in federal criminal courts during the past three years:

—"We have convicted a former governor of Oklahoma; a former governor of Michigan; five members of the Macon, Ga., police department; two Pennsylvania state senators, 20 former magistrates of Allegheny County, Pa.

—"The president of the East St. Louis, Ill., school board and five board members; the sheriff of Whitley County, Ky., the former speaker of the Missouri House of Representatives.

—"The majority and minority leaders of the Massachusetts state Senate; a former Union City, N.J., police commissioner; four Maryland officials including a member of the House of Delegates.

—"A state's attorney and the head of the Baltimore General Services Bureau; also the entire St. Charles Parish, La., police jury (the basic parish, or county, governmental body); the mayor of Cahokia, Ill..

March Food Prices Surge, Signaling Inflation Rate Boost

the rise for the full year will be half that rate. Food prices have risen about 8 per cent in the past 12 months.

Housing prices have gone up at a 9.9 percent yearly rate during the quarter.

Steep price rises in the first two months prompted President Carter earlier this month to renew his anti-inflation campaign, which consists largely of voluntary cooperation from business and labor to hold down wage and price increases.

The Labor Department also reported Friday that despite the sharp rise in prices, average worker earnings more than kept pace in both March and in the past year.

The purchasing power of the average worker, after adjustments for higher prices, rose 0.2 percent in March due to a rise in both hourly earnings and the number of hours worked, the department said. Over the year, a worker's real spendable income, after taxes and Social Security deductions, rose 2.1 percent.

The Consumer Price Index stood at 189.8 in March, indicating that goods and services which cost $100 in a base period in 1967 cost $189.80 last month.

In addition to increases for meat, fruit and eggs, prices also rose in March for poultry, dairy products, cereal and bakery products, sugar and candy and fats and oil products. Prices for vegetables and coffee declined.

The price of houses rose 0.8 percent in March, double February's increase. Home ownership costs, such as mortgage interest and maintenance, also rose rapidly.

Fuel oil prices went up 1.0 percent, while gas and electricity rose 1.4 percent, the second consecutive month of large increases.

Clothing prices went up 1 percent after declining 1.2 percent in February. The cost of entertainment rose 0.8 percent, up slightly from February's rise.

Medical care costs increased 0.6 percent, but the rise was smaller than in January and February due to a smaller increases in fees charged by doctors and dentists.

Transportation costs rose only 0.2 percent, with new car prices edging up just 0.1 percent.

ments of ratification not be exchanged before March 31, 1979, the date Granum said would be the effective date of the exchange.

Brooke argued in his letter that exchange of the instruments of ratification "even if made only in a symbolic way ... would clearly be in contradiction of the intent of the reservation."

Heads of state from throughout Latin America attended ceremonies at the headquarters of the Organization of American States in Washington last September when Carter and Torrijos signed the treaties before the ratification process began. The pacts were reached after negotiations that began during the administration of Lyndon B. Johnson.

City Gains Round On Marshall

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

City Hall battler James Marshall plans to appeal to the state Supreme Court to block the sale of municipal bonds here.

"I intend to have every remedy of the law exhausted," he said, adding that he will carry his fight into federal court if possible.

Marshall's efforts to have the election authorizing $26.4 million worth of general obligation bonds invalidated received a setback Friday, when the city learned the 7th Court of Civil Appeals had rejected Marshall's claims.

In his suit before the appellate court, Marshall asked for reversal of a 99th District Court decision upholding the validity of the May 21, 1977, bond election.

Voters in that election approved the bonds, proceeds of which will be used for capital improvement projects.

City officials say they will begin preparing for an immediate bond sale. The first step will be to update plans and set project priorities, said City Mgr. Larry Cunningham.

Marshall said he could not contact his lawyer Friday but added he plans to talk with him within a few days about the next legal step, probably a motion for a new trial at the appellate level.

City attorneys said the appeals court almost routinely denies such requests. Marshall then could apply for a hearing before the state Supreme Court.

However, that court is very selective about only hearing cases that address broad issues, said James Brewster, city trial attorney. Brewster said he does not believe Marshall's case can be carried to the federal courts because there is no substantial federal question involved.

Still pending on the district court level is a lawsuit Marshall filed to block the sale of airport revenue bonds. He said he does not believe the recent appellate court decision will have a bearing on that suit.

He explained that the general obligation bonds were authorized by voters. But because the airport bonds were not, they don't "carry the vote of the people." That is the difference, he added.

In an official statement released Friday morning, Mayor Dirk West and city staffers said:

"We are delighted that the courts have again ruled that Lubbock is following state laws when we finance new facilities to serve our community. There has never been any question that we would win this appeal as we have won many similar lawsuits in the past."

The statement continues, "It is regrettable, however, that while city government is the winner in this case, the citizens are losers because of the unfortunate delays in building badly needed fire stations, extending vital water and sewer services and widening congested streets."

If there are no further delays, the city council will initiate a bond sale and "get on with the orderly development of Lubbock," the statement says.

Noting that Marshall repeats in his latest lawsuit against airport revenue bonds many of the points struck down in the appeal, the statement says, "For this reason, we hope this suit can be dropped in time for us to deliver the bonds and proceed with this project also."

Marshall offered Monday to dismiss the airport bond suit in return for city compliance with certain specified conditions, including the creation of specific funds and bookkeeping records. The city plans to sell $1.73 million in airport revenue bonds, with proceeds to finance airport parking lot expansion.

In an opinion written by Associate Justice Charles Reynolds, the 7th Court of Civil Appeals rejected all of Marshall's contentions, specifically addressing two.

Marshall claimed in his suit that ordinances authorizing the May 21 election are invalid because they are not specific enough.

And, the suit said, Judge Thomas Clinton of the 99th District Court erred in not granting a new trial when "newly discovered" evidence was offered by Marshall.

In rejecting the specificity claim, Reynolds cited a previous case in which the Supreme Court upheld a decision that interest rates on bonds are not required to be listed in the ordinance.

Marshall claimed in the suit that the city charter requires a specific rate of interest to be noted on the bond ordinance.

And, the associate justice wrote, there is "no legal requirement that the proposition (ordinance) must describe each project contemplated." He thus rejected Marshall's contention that the ordinances did not specify in enough detail the proposed capital improvement projects.

By saying that the bonds would be used, for example, to improve and extend the waterworks system, a "legal and sufficient purpose is stated," Reynolds wrote.

It is the voters' discretion whether to "acquiesce to a proposition which does not include a specification of particulars," he said in his written opinion.

The last specific point Reynolds addressed was Marshall's charge that Clinton erred by not permitting the re-opening of the evidence or granting a new trial because of newly discovered evidence.

The court ruled that what was claimed to be new evidence already had been submitted by the city and was included in one of Marshall's own exhibits in the case.

Therefore, Reynolds wrote, "There was no abuse shown on the part of the trial court."

The capital improvement projects that were included in the disputed election include:

—$16.7 million for initial development of a third water supply, a pump station in Southwest Lubbock and expansion of the water treatment plant's capacity;

—$3.3 million to upgrade the sewage treatment plant in Southeast Lubbock and to add sewer mains to developing sections of the city;

—$473,000 for drainage improvements downtown and near 50th Street and Avenue A, plus some money earmarked for new storm sewer inlets when state highways are built through the city;

—$4.7 million for 13 street improvement projects;

—$792,000 for a new fire station at 79th Street and Slide Road, the relocation of the central fire station and the addition of a ladder truck at the 4810 Quirt Ave. Station; and —$310,000 in case Northwest or Southwest Lubbock needs another fire station within the next five years.

The original bond sale was to be for $2.7 million, but Cunningham said he believes the lump sum will total more now.

12-Year-Old Girl Enjoys Pre-Med Work At USC, Eyes Presidency

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Mariel Aragon is in her second semester in a pre-med undergraduate program at University of Southern California. She hopes to be president one day.

She was 11 years old when she was accepted at USC, after one session at Johns Hopkins University in Washington, D.C.

"There was a lot of homework, about 100 pages a day in each subject," she said.

That wasn't too much. Mariel admits to reading 4,000 words a minute.

She is the great-granddaughter of Manuel Quezon, the first president of the Republic of the Philippines. Her mother, Mila, is Filipino and her father was Chinese.

She hopes to return to Johns Hopkins University to finish her undergraduate work and aim for degrees in medicine and law.

And she wants to be President of the United States.

"I want to be the first lady President," she said.

Among her current subjects at USC are chemistry and calculus. Is calculus difficult?

"No, I had it last semester," she laughed. "I've always enjoyed mathematics, ever since I was about two."

Her mother, a former Las Vegas dancer, confirmed that Mariel began simple arithmetic at that age.

"I was eight months old when I started walking and talking," Mariel said. She can talk now in a handful of languages.

"I'm fluent in English and Spanish, almost fluent in Filipino and I have some knowledge of Chinese, Japanese and French."

Mariel could have a show business career. She has made one movie, "The Gold Watch," for a Japanese production company, has appeared in television commercials, was featured on one segment of "Bionic Woman," and has taped another segment for airing later this year.

"But school comes first," she said. "It's always come first. In show business you have to retire sometime, but your brains are always with you."

A child like Mariel does not have a normal childhood, and adolescence is passed by entirely. She does not feel she is missing anything.

"The advantages are so great it doesn't compare one bit," she said, becoming serious. She is petite even for her age, dressed in a jeans jumpsuit with long beribboned pigtails.

It's difficult to keep her age in mind. "Look at it this way," she said. "A normal kid goes through school, puts on a cardboard hat and a gown after grade school, after high school and after college. I had my little share of the cardboard hat and dancing around at the end of the sixth grade.

"Okay, I say goodbye to the senior prom. Actually, I wish I could have skipped more grades."

Rip-Offs Net Truck, Motor, Skis

Two recent burglaries — one in the county and another in the city — netted break-in artists $17,882 in property and merchandise.

Larry J. Bounds of the Bounds Construction Co., 2311 56th St., said burglars stole a $7,450 pickup truck, outfitted with a winch, pressure tank, tool box and hydraulic jack, from a site at 3819 Idalou Road Thursday or Friday. Also taken, Bounds said, was an air compressor and hose, 1,000 feet of underground cable, chains and a roll of copper wire.

The loss for Raymond "Shorty" Furr of Rte. 1 Lubbock, was similarly high following a break-in early Thursday at Furr's Marine on FM 835.

Furr said someone apparently went under or scaled a seven-foot-high fence, then broke into the firm's warehouse. Taken were 21 pairs of water skis, ranging in price from $180 to $245 a pair. The total value of the skis, Furr said, was $4,455. Also stolen was a 1978-model outboard motor valued at $2,352, Furr said.

A teen-aged youth apparently didn't care for the stained glass windows at the First Baptist Church Thursday. A church building supervisor said he spotted the youngster on top of the roof at the church, tapping out windows with a hammer. The supervisor allegedly took a shot with a BB-gun at the youthful malefactor, who then descended and fled on his bicycle.

Damage to the church at 2201 Broadway was estimated at $1,200.

Herbert Edwards of Wichita Falls said someone stole an 8-track tape case from an office building in the 1700-block of Seventh Street Friday. The value of the case, and the 24 tapes inside, was estimated at $263.

Tim Long of 2416 23rd St. said someone broke into his residence Thursday or Friday and stole $600 worth of property, including a television, a clock and some jewelry.

Meanwhile, enterprising thieves raised a large, flatbed truck at the Superior Steel Buildings Co. at 91st Street and the Tahoka Highway early Friday, then made off with six tires and wheels valued at $850, according to Glenn Maness.

Tina Perez of 2624 2nd Place said her $200 television set was stolen Thursday, and Rhonda Beebe of 2117 9th St. said someone stole her $150 bicycle Thursday or Friday while it was parked on her porch.

A 48-year-old Lubbock man told police he was robbed at gunpoint by two men who helped him push his stalled car early Friday.

According to Joe Aguilar Lucero, after his vehicle broke down on Main Street about 12:45 a.m., two women pushed the car to the 100-block of Avenue P. While there, he said, two men began talking with the women and they pushed the car a block farther. At that point, reports indicated, one of the men pulled out a pistol and hit the victim above the left eye.

One of the two men then reportedly took Lucero's wallet, which contained no cash, and left the scene.

In recently reported break-ins, someone pried a press box office door and hauled away a $2,500 public-address system from wall mounts at Lowrey Field.

Rebecca Anne Bass of 2320 21st St., rear, complained that her front door was pried Thursday and several items including a television set, camera and stereo equipment were stolen.

Byron Scott Mansker of 908-A Ave. V told officers he lost his television and a clock after someone used a large rock to break through a window at his home Thursday.

Teenage Girl Named In Robbery

A 17-year-old Brownfield girl was charged with aggravated robbery Friday as the result of a holdup at a local motel.

Named in the charge was Stacy Staggs. The criminal district attorney's office recommended her bond be set at $5,000.

A 16-year-old male was also taken into custody after the 10 p.m. Thursday holdup of the Imperial 400 Motel at 910 Ave. Q.

Night clerk Larry Anderson, 31, said a young man and woman walked up to the counter. The man pulled a sawed-off shotgun and announced a holdup, Anderson said.

The young woman reportedly then went behind the counter and emptied the cash register, also allegedly taking a revolver.

A young man and woman were apprehended by police about 11:30 p.m. near Slide Road and the Brownfield Highway. Officers indicated a shotgun reportedly found in the duo's vehicle was not in operable condition.

Clements Claims GOP 'Electability'

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements said Friday the only issue in his campaign against Ray Hutchison is "electability" and Clements said he is the only electable candidate.

And, as if to prove the point, Clements produced two-time Republican gubernatorial candidate Paul Eggers, who lost in 1968 and 1970 to Preston Smith.

Clements made the comments at a barbeque for about 100 supporters held at the home of former Lubbock mayor and former Republican gubernatorial candidate, Jim Granberry.

Eggers supported what Clements has been saying throughout the campaign — the only thing lacking in Republican bids for the gubernatorial spot has been money.

And there's no doubt Clements, a Dallas drilling contractor and millionaire, has that ingredient.

Clements, a former deputy secretary of defense under Gerald Ford, has predicted he would spend close to $3 million in the primary and general election.

But Clements talk of money and wealth has been a sore spot with Hutchison, the former state chairman of the GOP.

But Hutchison's charges that Clements is trying to "buy" the election come from a "person who is jealous" and a person who knows he's losing, Clements said.

"What Republicans want to do is win," Clements said. "We've lost consistently by a narrow margin" because of a lack of finances to compete with the Democrats.

Hutchison's charges that Texans will not elect a governor who "helped write the Panama Canal treaty" Clements said "are the kinds of innuendo and insinuations lawyers are awful good at."

Clements said, as a member of the National Security Council while a senior defense official, he "had something to do with the treaty negotiations."

However, he said he was "vigorously opposed to Carter's treaty" because the security clause was inadequate and said he testified as such before a Senate committee.

Asked what he would do to combat crime if elected governor, Clements said he would first attempt to "stop the flow of drug traffic across the border from Mexico by expanding the Department of Public Safety's ranger force."

He also said he supports "tightening bail restriction so it's not so easy to jump bail and get out of jail. Now it's like a "revolving door," he said.

He said he is "totally opposed to the flagrant cases of police brutality" and pledged to be "a governor who takes more action in these kinds of situations."

Clements said Briscoe has "been down there six years, but doesn't want to take a leadership role in these matters."

He also charged Briscoe could not listen to what the people want because he's been absent from Austin so much.

Clements said his media campaign is aimed at building a base for the general election in November, since he believes the primary is already won.

And, in a preview of any John Hill-Clements battle, Clements called the attorney general "a liberal lawyer-politician — dirty words in Lubbock."

He charged Hill has gathered around him supporters of Frances "Sissy" Farenthold and Ralph Yarborough and "made love to labor. How can a man like that call himself a conservative?" Clements asked.

Clements released the results of a poll conducted by KRLD Radio in Dallas in Dallas and Tarrant counties which shows him leading Hutchison 85.7 to 14.3 percent.

Clements predicted he will beat Hutchison by a 60-40 margin.

Asked what kind of outside help will be available for the Republican nominee from national party officials, Clements replied: "You have to paddle your own canoe."

Hopefuls Intensify Effort As Party Primaries Near

By The Associated Press

Texas political candidates didn't say anything new Friday but they said it louder and faster as they approached the final week of campaigning before the May 6 primary balloting.

"John Hill's campaign is faltering," Gov. Dolph Briscoe said in a news conference in San Antonio.

"Governor Briscoe has spent over a million dollars in false advertising deliberately misrepresenting that I want a state income tax. This is a deliberate scare tactic," said Hill in San Antonio a few hours later.

"If John Hill's promises are kept, new taxes will be imposed on us in the near future and the only tax which would produce enough additional revenue to accomodate those Hill promises would be a state income tax. This would be a noose around the neck of every Texan and around the future of Texas," said Briscoe.

"Briscoe is trying to reverse the trend toward my victory with a last-minute, one-issue campaign. And that issue of taxes is a false issue," Hill said. Hill said he thought Briscoe's efforts would backfire by consolidating Hill's supporters with an increasing voter turnout.

Comptroller Bob Bullock, who has no opponent for re-election, took up for Briscoe saying that if Hill was elected "it will be turning the keys to the governor's office over to a Republican — John Connally."

Bullock reminded voters that Connally gave Hill his first taste of politics by appointing him secretary of state. "They've been close as stink on a skunk all these years," Bullock said.

San Angelo Man Held For Drag Race Death

STANTON (Special) — A 25-year-old San Angelo man was being held here Friday in lieu of $10,000 bond, following an alleged drag racing incident in which another San Angelo man was killed Thursday.

Charged with criminally negligent homicide before Justice of the Peace Martin Gibson was Bobby Glenn Jackson.

Jackson was brought here late Thursday after Randy Joe Miller, 27, of San Angelo was killed in a car-pedestrian accident on FM 2401 in Glasscock County.

Glasscock County does not have facilities for holding prisoners.

Miller died of massive head and internal injuries, a Department of Public Safety spokesman said. The victim's left leg was severed, the DPS said.

The incident occurred about 9:10 p.m. Thursday, the DPS said, as two cars allegedly raced at high speed along FM 2401, 14 miles south of Garden City.

One of the vehicles reportedly skidded 42 feet before striking Miller. The victim was thrown onto the hood of the car and carried another 280 feet, the spokesman said.

East Lubbock Wreck Kills One, Injures Two

An 81-year-old Vernon woman died about 8:20 p.m. Friday, following a two-car collision at the intersection of two access roads beneath the Loop 289 East and Idalou Road overpass.

Pronounced dead at Methodist Hospital was Gladys Stewart, a passenger in the late-model Mercury driven by her 51-year-old daughter, Hazel Stewart Henry, also of Vernon.

The victim was freed from the passenger seat of the vehicle in which she rode about 7:30 p.m., a quarter hour after the accident occurred. Firemen were called to scene with the "jaws of life" to free the critically-injured woman.

Mrs. Henry suffered minor injuries in the mishap, as did two men who rode in a second vehicle.

Injured and believed to be in satisfactory condition were Ronnie Ivey, 19, of 3906 E. Bates St. and Nick Hogan, 17, of 2125 71st St. A third passenger in the second car, Gary Green also of 3906 E. Bates St., was not injured, police said.

Witnesses said the late-model Mercury, driven by Mrs. Henry, was northbound on an access road and a 1969 Oldsmobile, driven by Ivey, was eastbound when the broadside collision occurred.

The woman's death marked the city's 11th traffic fatality of the year and the second within 42 hours. A Texas Tech student was killed early Thursday morning when his car struck the rear end of a 14-ton street sweeper.

Grand Jury Indicts Passman On Concealed Income Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Otto E. Passman was indicted by a federal grand jury Friday on charges of failing to report $143,000 income in 1972 and 1973 arising from the Korean payoff scandal.

The Louisiana Democrat, who was indicted on March 31 on charges he took $213,000 in bribes from South Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park, was accused in Friday's indictment of evading more than $77,000 in income taxes.

Passman, 77, is in a hospital in Louisiana and his lawyers contend he is too ill to stand trial. The ruling on that question is pending in the courts.

Friday's indictment charges that Passman concealed income by dealing in currency and by lying to Justice Department officials about his income.

The first count charged that Passman and his wife filed a joint return for 1972 reporting a tax due of $15,650 on a taxable income of $47,179 when the actual tax due was $38,908 on an income of $92,179.

The second count alleged that Passman's joint return for 1973 reported a tax of $20,069 on income of $56,018 when the actual tax was $74,752 on income of $154,018.

The earlier bribery indictment charged that in return for $213,000 in bribes from Park, Passman used his influence to have U.S. Food for Peace program loans allocated to Korea specifically for the purchase of rice. The indictment said Park received about $8 million in rice commissions as part of the alleged conspiracy from 1972 through 1975.

Passman has previously denied any illegal or improper conduct in the Korean influence-buying case.

He was the second former congressman to be accused of a crime in connection with the scandal. Former Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., pleaded guilty to conspiring with South Korean officials and Park to defraud the U.S. government and was sentenced to from six to 30 months in prison.

The income tax indictment carries up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine for each of the two counts of tax evasion. The bribery statute under which he was indicted carries a maximum 15-year sentence for conviction.

Park has been named as an unindicted co-conspirator in the Passman bribery case and has been cooperating with federal authorities.

Park reportedly has told Justice Department investigators he paid $750,000 to some two dozen congressmen over the years.

Munition Explosion Ruled Accidental

CLEBURNE (AP) — The Johnson County medical examiner ruled Friday that the four persons who perished in the GOEX munitions plant blasts April 20 died from "dismemberment due to explosion."

Dr. Arthur Raines also ruled the explosion accidental.

Raines said the identities of the four GOEX Industries employes could not be determined by laboratory analysis. However, based on family identification of clothing and body parts, statements by other employes at the plants and a small amount of physical evidence, Raines listed the four dead as Bobby Troha, 20; Rosemary Sauble, 32; Billy Gene Clanton, 26; and Elwin Brende, 62.

Raines heard testimony by plant supervisor John Herron which placed the four employes in the RDX processing facility moments before a series of three explosions rocked the munitions shortly after 4:30 p.m.

Raines also accepted evidence that the four victims had signed in but had not signed out that day.

Herron was asked by Johnson County District Attorney John MacLean if he had any idea what might have caused the explosions.

"No, sir, I do not," Herron replied.

Rock Music Now Successful Industry

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Who would have imagined 20 years ago that anyone would devote serious study to the evolution of rock and roll music? For that matter, who would have predicted it would even last for 20 years, let alone assume its many musical and sociological roles? The time has now come to take a close look at the music, the stars, the people behind the stars, and the rock music industry. In this first of a six-part series from his book "The Making of Superstars", author Robert Stephen Spitz traces the development of rock from "Bandstand" in the 50s to the multi-billion dollar industry it is today. The series will be published each Saturday through June 3.)

By ROBERT STEPHEN SPITZ

Excerpted from the book "The Making Of Superstars", (c) 1978 by Robert Stephen Spitz, published by Doubleday & Company, Inc.

No one predicted the extent or magnitude that rock music would have in the 20th century. We should have. The clues were there: the daily lines of teenagers down Market Street in Philadelphia, waiting to be admitted on "Bandstand," the small groups of kids who jammed in the tiny studio while Allen Freed played the newest diet of 45's, words like bop and stroll and hand jive, sock hops, short shorts, ducktails — and the necessary ingredients of rebellion and pandemonium. Rock and roll had it all.

But few envisioned what has today become such a vast financial empire upward of $4 billion a year. Or the musical genius (and credibility) of a Lennon and McCartney, Aretha Franklin, Elvis Presley, or a Stevie Wonder. Or that hundreds of thousands of young people would make an attempt to formulate careers as composers or vocalists or executives from a music which had become the ground swell of a common teen-age identity.

An intelligent music with a definite form and permeable boundaries for creative experimentation. A respected music boasting its distinguished contributors. An exciting music which has introduced countless innovative instruments with which to create its multidimensions. A competitive music demanding integrity, patient listening, and superior quality.

The rock industry has sprouted from small, family-operated businesses into finely tuned corporate assembly lines on which thousands of employees concern themselves with such diversities as the quality of plastic (and, coincidentally, the price and politics of the oil industry — necessary components for its manufacture), mass media technology, million-dollar accounting practices, the temperament of the country, public and artist relations, marketing and long-tem experimentation and development.

Excess earnings, made from extraordinary rock profits, are very cautiously counseled into shrewd investments by rather staid Wall Street banking houses which, only years earlier, spurned its bankability.

Today, rock music is considered one of the most stable and durable industries, and those same banking houses have even gone as far as to place their own capital behind managers' and artists' existing contracts in an attempt to gain a quick return on their investment.

Today, successful touring acts can gross up to $150,000 a night playing at arenas and sporting complexes across the country. Coupled with healthy royalty percentages of hit albums and songwriters' royalties, it is plausible for a super-star-ranked artist to earn upward of a million dollars a year.

Managers and agents, at 15 per cent of the take, respectively, don't fare badly either. And even within the bureaucratic levels of the major recording companies, executives in various departments earn in excess of $40,000 a year; highly respected promotion men can demand incomes exceeding $50,000 and $60,000.

Rock music has, indeed, outlasted and usurped its former age and reckless identities. It is no longer specifically a teen-age music or, necessarily, restricted to younger audiences. It is no longer characterized by physical gyrations and unintelligible lyrics. It is no longer a phenomenon.

Rock and roll is a way of life.

It has given us new heroes, new thoughst and philosophies through well-constructed lyrics and — on yes — new musical inspiration. And in the end, all good music lives forever.

During my years in this business, I have had several opportunities which afforded me a unique vantage point from which to observe the superstar process. That process, I found overwhelming — days, months, even years spent grooming the artist, creating a public image, selecting the right manager and producer to suit the artist's talent and personality, establishing the artist's own or aligning him with a music publishing company that will exploit the full potential of his catalogue, choosing an agent to book tours and convince promoters to spend a thousand dollars on an unknown act — an agent who will "get behind" the act.

As the general manager of Dick James Music, Inc. (a variegated British company which had represented aspects of the careers of the Beatles, Gerry and the Pacemakers, the Hollies, Spencer Davis, and other constituents of the early British invasion), I found myself in the midst of one of the most colossal music business phenomena with one of James's clients — Elton John.

Elton had exploded, although not in the usual rock "overnight monster" way — he had spent several years and albums traveling the world, playing ob-

Solar Satellites Hold Promise, Problems

By ADAM HOCHSCHILD
Pacific News Service

It's 1996 and you are traveling by spacecraft 22,300 miles above the earth. Suddenly you come upon a vast metallic field brilliant with reflected sunlight. It's a 72-square mile satellite solar power station (SSPS) constructed by 400 astronaut-builders.

Unhampered by the earth's atmosphere, it captures unfiltered sunlight with a billion panels and mirrors, then converts the sunlight to electricity and beams it by microwave down to Earth. Below, a five-by-seven-and-a-half mile receiving antenna catches the microwaves for a plant that converts them to electricity.

So goes the dream of the businessmen and visionaries at the Boeing and Grumman corporations and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. If they have their way, a prototype SSPS will be aloft in a decade, and more than a hundred more will eventually be built to feed humankind's energy hunger.

Several hundred scientists and engineers have worked on the idea, the Department of Energy is now is the act and some $12 million — most of it tax money — has been spent so far. And Americans are about to be asked to ante up the biggest sum yet.

The story of the SSPS involves a bureaucracy fighting for its life, an industry eyeing the best pork barrel since the arms race and minor characters including California's Gov. Jerry Brown, Whole Earth Catalog creator Stewart Brand, plus some people who want to mine the moon.

Critics point with alarm to signs that solar satellites might mean global disaster.

•They are colossally expensive. Boeing guesses that development of the technology would cost $40 to $80 billion. After that, mass-produced SSPSs would cost $7.6 to $15 billion each, according to the idea's inventor, Peter Glaser. That could mean up to one-and-a-half trillion dollars for 112 satellites envisioned by the year 2025 in a NASA scenario.

•They could also mean environmental catastrophe, say critics. Microwaves have been linked to cancer, cataracts, Down's syndrome (mongolism) and other afflictions. Birds flying through the heated column of air created by microwave beam would become heavily radiated. So might people in airplanes.

SSPS backers say aluminum fuselages of airplanes are good shields, but cockpits have laminated glass windows.

Even if people and birds were kept out of the beam, some radiation would spill beyond it to be dispersed by rain, clouds and hail. Even if the beam is 99.9 percent on target, five million stray watts of electricity will bombard people nearby.

An SSPS beam which goes awry accidentally — or on purpose — is a potentially lethal weapon. One critic, Dr. Aden Meinel, professor of optical sciences at the University of Arizona, compares the SSPS to a "giant microwave oven cooking all people, plants and animals caught by the wandering beam."

And SSPS will devour energy. According to Dr. Piet Bos, an engineer who worked on the space shuttle and is now a top official at the industry-funded Electric Power Research Institute, it would take each satellite seven to 10 years to pay the Earth back for the energy needed to build and orbit it.

•SSPSs would mean energy centralization. Utility monopolies would become even stronger than they are now. At a time when solar power promises decentralized energy emanating form rooftops and local windmills, the satellites would generate energy that could only be distributed centrally.

(Can Technology Solve Energy Crisis? Page 6, Sec. B)

Inventor Peter Glaser is aware of these criticisms and says he has answers.

Regarding microwave hazard, he says the beam can be focused so closely that any radiation spill would be not only below the U.S. danger standard but below the Soviet one, which is a thousandfold lower.

A 1976 Energy Research and Development Administration study indicates this level of safety might be possible, but only by excluding people from microwave receiving areas, each of which would be half the size of Rhode Island.

Glaser concedes that the problem of birds flying through the beam has not been solved and says entensive tests on the whole system are still needed.

On centralization, he argues that some degree of centralized electrical distribution will be needed indefinitely, even if all homes sprout solar panels.

Talking to Glaser in his office at the Arthur D. Little think tank in Cambridge Mass., you feel that if this friendly man had control over the whole system, something rational and human might result. Or that he would not build it if it proved dangerous. But one man cannot control a project that in NASA scenario for 112 SSPSs would cost more than half this year's U.S. Gross National Product.

Many aerospace companies are already involved, ranging from McDonnell Douglas and Martin Marietta to General Electric and IBM. Four firms have the biggest stakes: Raytheon, which makes microwave equipment; Grumman, which has worked on techniques for fastening the Solar Dam cells to catch the sun's rays; and

'Black Holes' May Provide Answer To Energy Problems

(c) 1978 Pacific News Service

If you think solar power stations sound like science fiction, you're probably not ready for this: the greatest potential source of free energy is not the sun, according to a British mathematician. It is gravity. And it might some day be extracted from black holes formed when stars die.

Two black holes could provide, at once, as much energy as a couple of dozen stars emit in their whole lifetime, explains Paul Davies, a mathematics lecturer at King's College, London, in his recently published book, "The Runaway Universe."

The potential he foresees is a bit far from tomorrow. It's a billion years away.

By the time, he figures, biological engineering will have reached such sophistication that no real distination will exist between machines and biological forms. Technology will be indistinguishable from the processes of the natural world. Intellignece will be a principle that organizes the universe as fundamentally as gravity does.

Stars — even star clusters — will have been tamed, their energy put to use in staving off entropy, the inexorable tendency of all things to wind down. And technology, extending to stellar dimensions, will perhaps find a way to tap the black holes formed by collapsed dying stars.

Stars that finish burning their nuclear fuel begin to collapse upon themselves, since no pressure now fights outward from their interior. If the star is not too heavy, the collapse will be stopped by the natural resistance of its material. But if it weighs more than twice the mass of the sun, the force of gravity on its surface will grow with compression. The velocity needed to escape from its surface will increase until it equals the velocity of light. Then nothing more can escape and everything nearby is sucked in. Even light is absorbed, without reflection. Hence, the term: black hole.

Black holes would make perfect energy storehouses because, unlike anything else, they could not possibly leak, says Davies. And, once a small one is found, it could be grown by simply dropping things into it.

"It is interesting to imagine ourselves in the far future, at the evening of existence, looking back over the history of the cosmos," writes Davies. "The time when the skies burned brightly with billions of untamed suns will appear as just another epoch of the primeaval big bang. The Universe we now know will be lost in the mists of the creation."

SPOTLIGHT ON... Colorful Characters Highlight Novel

Charmers by Hallmark

(THE GOOD OLD BOYS, Elmer Kelton, Doubleday and Company, Inc., 1978.)

Some western novels don't appear to have much hidden meaning. The "good guys" overcome the "bad guys" and halt their evildoing, then live happily ever after. Then ride, preferably into the sunset, as a final touch.

Elmer Kelton's latest book, "The Good Old Boys," is almost such a western. But not quite. The hero of the story, Hewey Calloway, a nearing-middle-age bachelor cowboy who returns to West Texas to visit his much more settled married brother, gets part of the Gary Cooper stereotype right, but somehow his rebellion gets in the way of the "classic" western.

Although the book begins by being slightly wordy, causing the train of thought to question the direction in which it is going, the descriptions may be appreciated by those familiar with West Texas. The novel is placed in a turn of the century time setting, when the monster ranches, some the size of entire states or countries, are disrupted by the entrance of farming.

The "nesters" threaten the open range by fencing in their property and plowing up the grassland. Hewey's brother is one of these settlers who lives under the shadow of foreclosure by the ranching mogul-banker C.C. Tarpley.

C.C. is one of the most colorful characters in the book. Although powerful and prominent, C.C. looks like a slightly worse-for-wear cowboy. His land holdings cover thousands of acres. He obtained his success by "hard work and attention to business," but perhaps there was more to it than that. Hewey remarks, "But he had always said he was not greedy. All he had ever wanted was that which rightfully belonged to him, and that which adjoined it."

The story goes on in the true western tradition, but it is interesting to observe Hewey's antics along the way. An embarrassing scene with C.C.'s son-in-law "Fat" Gervin; a wild buckboard ride when two bronc mules go out of control; a roping contest Hewey and his friend "Snort" Yarnell enter and after losing, rope an automobile instead; an encounter with a neighboring marshal; and ultimately, a turning of the tables on C.C. and his son-in-law when they try to force the Calloways out of business. All are entertaining episodes of "The Good Old Boys."

What is a 'good old boy?' That is not entirely clear. Perhaps a man who works for a living and doesn't hurt anybody when he isn't working, who is fairly good-natured and minds his own business. Several people, Hewey included, are referred to as such.

One of these is an old cowboy named Boy Rasmussen. Quite senile, the old man rides an old horse through the country, never stopping long, but always stopping. Once he stopped to accept the Calloways' hospitality, and later became a topic of conversation. Boy represents the past which is quickly changing with the advent of technology and the inpouring of settlers. Hewey considers him thus:

"Hewey had heard old stories about Boy Rasmussen. He had been a great cowboy in his prime, pushing herds up the trail from South Texas to the railroads in Kansas, and beyond to the Indian reservations in Wyoming and Montana. There had been a time before the years, and the bottle, had robbed him of dependability, when he had bossed herds and been a man of substance and repute. But the years had not been benevolent. Whatever might once have been was gone now. All that remained was a shell, a lonely and pathetic remnant, a burned-out relic of another time so far behind him that even he must find it unreal when the ghosts went roaming through his mind, stirring the dead ashes of old campfires, speaking in voices long silent."

Hewey's nephew, Cotton, represents the future. Cotton is consumed with the possibilities presented by the automobile. He earlier ran away from home to see an automobile first-hand in Midland because Hewey had told him there were some there. He constantly reads about the machines, and at one point, he fixes one for a man who has one, but knows nothing about an automobile's functions. His distance and resentment of everyone else is derived from his desire to live in a world evolving around automobiles rather than his father's farm. Cotton's chance comes when Hewey pleads the case with his mother, and considering the circumstances, she eventually agrees to let him go his own way.

The entire story is threaded together by Hewey who is the central character. Everything is colored by his thoughts, feelings, and opinions. Hewey is a wanderer, always wanting to do something different and see places beyond his immediate world. Toward the end of the book, it is questionable as to whether he will remain this way. His girl almost becomes a wife. His determination to help his brother retain his land may lead to becoming a farmer himself.

Hewey's love of freedom and fairness is typified by an episode in which he is severely harrassed by a marshal who insists he get off a residential street. Hewey ends up hitting the man, and so causing himself many problems. He expresses his resentment of the man's bullying by saying, "I'm a free-born American. I even been to war. I'd be a taxpayer, and proud to say it, if I owned anything to pay taxes on. I've to a right to ride down any street anywhere in this country that anybody else can. Somebody tells me I got to get off, and I do it, pretty soon I won't have that right anymore."

The sheriff explains, "Son, I'm a peace officer. It's my job to enforce the law. I'm not allowed to make the law; that's for somebody else to do. If I go to makin' it, I can make it anything I want it to be. First thing you know I'll use it to help me and my friends. I'll use it to hurt people I don't like. If that ever happens, I'm dangerous. That marshal up yonder, he was goin' beyond his rightful authority. That makes him dangerous. You let people like that get away with it, pretty soon they'll take you over."

That segment of the story has a surprise ending.

The story's most valuable trait may be its seemingly reasonable, accurate and realistic picture of the harsh Texas plains. It was written by a former newspaper man from San Angelo. The difficulties of the land and the times, the reciprocal hospitality of the pioneers, the struggling against physical obstacles, and the generosity found under brusqueness are present throughout the book.

"The Good Old Boys" is a delightfully entertaining narrative, much on the same order as "The Reivers" and "The Sting." Those interested in regional fiction should find this worthwhile reading. —

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Will you please tell your readers not to throw away their money? What I'm getting at is the utterly useless gifts young people select for older people.

I'm a widow, nearly 75. On my last birthday I received from my grown grandchildren (they are teenagers) a dart board, a tube of bright red lipstick and a chain belt like the young girls wear.

Older folks on a limited income can always use bedroom slippers or skin lotion or something in the food line. A canned ham, a turkey, or a fruit basket would be mighty welcome. Please tell them, Ann. I can't. — Silver Threads

Dear Silver: You DID — and I'm glad.

Dear Ann Landers: I did something really rotten. I betrayed the confidence of a close friend and I don't know why I did it. (Yes, I really do know. I was trying to build myself up and make it look like I was an "insider.")

This friend of mine has never actually said anything to me about my betrayal, but I think she knows I blabbed. Now, Ann, please tell me if I should confess all and apologize or would it be better to keep my mouth shut and hope she never hears? I'm afraid she will never trust me again.

I keep wishing I could transfer to another planet — or at least to another school — but that's out. Please give me some advice, Ann. — No More Miss Big Mouth

Dear Miss: Go to your friend and tell her what you did. Apologize. Far better to get everything out in the open than to trust to luck that the truth never surfaces.

And let this be a lesson to you. If you learn in your teens never to betray a confidence or carry tales, it will be quite an achievement.

Dear Ann Landers: I wrote you a letter last week and tore it up. After I read the darned thing I realized it was full of whining and self-pity. I've written you several letters that I haven't mailed but just writing them did me a world of good.

Today's letter is going into the mailbox. It's a long overdue expression of appreciation. You helped me when my children were small and you helped me when they were in their teens. You helped again when they married. (I clipped out your rules of "Do's and Don'ts" for in-laws.)

You cleared the air in our home when hurt and resentment and misunderstanding clouded our thinking. There were times when we just couldn't get together on this issue or that, and then you'd print something in your column that hit the nail smack on the head and set everybody straight.

Just keep on doing what you're doing. People need an impartial, clear-eyed outsider who can send them in the right direction. That's you, Ann. — Grateful In Kalamazoo

Dear Mazoo: What a sweet way to end the week. Thank you so much.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it true that some people cannot wear contact lenses? I do so want to switch to them, but I am fearful of having problems with reactions to them. Can you explain this for me? — Miss J.L.

Most people can use contact lenses without any reactions. A few can't.

Problems with the contacts can be laid to improper cleaning and, as reported recently by the American Optometric Association, to that old problem-maker — cosmetics. In this case eye makeup is the culprit.

Hands should be washed thoroughly before applying or removing lenses. Some matter can get on the lenses and cause irritation. In fact, eye shadow and liners are best applied before putting lenses in place and only after the hands have been thoroughly washed.

Eyelash cement, nail polish and remover, perfumes and colognes can damage the plastic lenses, so precautions must be taken. Some doctors suggest that lens wearers remove them before shampooing their hair. Close your eyes when applying hair sprays and other similar products.

It's doubtful you are one of the few who would react to the lens material itself. The lens fitter should determine this before you purchase them. Some offer trial periods for new lenses.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a blood test recently and the doctor said it showed signs of sugar and fats, which has distressed me. I am very much overweight and have a slightly high blood pressure. I did not ask him what causes all of this. Someone told me that food has nothing to do with this. I would appreciate your comment. — Mrs. W.C.

1. You have just enough information to worry you. Get more. What kind of fats? How much sugar?

2. It all could be related to your obesity, which you need to correct anyway. The sugar suggests diabetes. The fat abnormality (as with cholesterol) accompanies obesity.

3. Foods most certainly do have something to do with this.

4. Ask your doctor what he plans to do or have you do to correct the blood test values. My booklet, "How to Control Cholesterol Sensibly," discusses the general situation, and you may find it enlightening. For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You mentioned how helpful stroke clubs can be for the patient during recovery. I would like to contact one. I am 56 and am about 80 percent recovered from a stroke I had recently. I am working systematically to regain better mobility. How can I contact a stroke club? — Mrs. M.D.

First, congratulations on your recovery efforts. The question you ask has come up often since the publication of the stroke booklet you mention. I think it is a healthy sign.

I don't know of any club in your city. The most active stroke clubs I know of are affiliates of the American Heart Association. You can write to the American Heart Association Stroke Clubs of America, 860 N. Highway 183, Austin, Tex. 78781. Or contact a local unit. If there is no club in your area, you may want to take the lead in forming one. In answer to another question you ask in your letter, yes, supervised swimming is often fine therapy for many stroke victims during recovery. The water keeps one buoyant and off the feet while exercising.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MRS. O.T. — Bowing of infant legs is common and can be meaningless, because they usually straighten up with time and use. However, the condition you refer to (tibial torsion) is a special case in which for some reason the leg muscles on the internal side of the legs are under extra tension, pulling the legs into the bowed position. Surgical correction is the answer. Pediatricians are trained in detecting such abnormalities.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

"I ought to quit bridge," complained South. "Three finess wrong out of three. A lucky player would make a grand slam. I went down at game."

"It would suit me if you did," retorted North. "A lucky expert would make six, not seven. An unlucky expert would make the game in spite of all three finesses being wrong. He would lose all three, but he would eliminate the need to try the club finesse."

South had grabbed his ace of hearts and lost the diamond finesse. East cashed a heart and led back the jack of clubs and South had lost one trick in each of the three suits.

If South had just let West hold the first trick, he could win the heart continuation, ruff a heart to get to dummy, lose the trump finesse, but still be sure of his contract because eventually he would get to chuck two clubs on good diamonds. Of course, West could shift to a diamond at trick two. In that case, South would refuse the diamond finesse and still be sure of his contract.

Economic Woes Beset Leftist Jamaican Leader

By RICH HAYES
(c)1978 Pacific News Service

KINGSTON, JAMAICA — "It's bleak," said Dr. Carl Stone, head of the political science department at the University of the West Indies, in assessing Jamaica's economic future. "In the hills there's a return to subsistence farming, so at least they'll be able to eat. The rest don't realize what we're in for. Very soon they will."

Beset by economic reverses and internal division and flinching under the whip of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), the government of Prime Minister Michael Manley is having to backtrack on much of its program for building "democratic socialism" in Jamaica.

The economic situation has inflicted a heavy political toll on both the "far left" and the "Manley left" factions within the governing Peoples' National Party (PNP). Recent months have seen the resignation of left-leaning cabinet ministers and other officials, and newly appointed Finance Minister David Beil recently called for expulsion of all "known communists" from the PNP, a move aimed particularly at the Marxist-Leninist leadership within the party's Youth Organization.

At the same time a new hard-line stance is developing against the Rastafarian-influenced "I-Man" culture, composed of the throngs of poor, urban youth, with the rural poor, have helped constitute Manley's grass-roots support. In February, army and police units set up the "Green Bay Massacre," an ambush in which five unarmed West Kingston youth were left dead.

While denying prior knowledge of the ambush, Security Minister Dudley Thompson inflamed tensions between the government and the street people with statements regretting that "more of them weren't killed" and pledges to "destroy the mad dogs of society."

Much of the current turmoil is the result of the IMF's December 1977 decision to terminate a vital $74 million loan agreement drawn up just six months earlier. This threw the country's development program into a shambles, cutting hard into foreign exchange reserves and—of key importance—putting a halt to aid from the other world financial agencies that look to the IMF for its "seal of approval."

In lifting the loan the IMF claimed Jamaica failed to meet an agreed upon economic target, the "net domestic assets," which measures the relation between cash in circulation and existing foreign exchange reserves. The government protested vehemently, noting that the error—less than 3 percent off the agreed upon figure—was within seasonal variation and that all other conditions of the loan had been met. Suspicions were voiced that an anti-Manley civil servant within the Finance Ministry had deliberately delayed certain transactions so as to produce the off-target statistic.

The IMF officials in Washington, D.C., remained unpersuaded, and before even agreeing to open negotiations for a new loan demanded the third devaluation of Jamaicam dollar in nine months.

It also sent work that the terms of any new agreement would call for changes in the full range of government policy, including moderation of Manley's "socialist rhetoric," replacement of left-leaning cabinet ministers and reform of Jamaica's election procedures. As acknowledged in a major blast at the Manley administration by Edward Seaga, right-of-center leader of the opposition Jamaican Labour Party (JLP), "...the basic problems is not economic, but political and ideological."

New negotiations with the IMF are expected to conclude in May. The results, along with a comprehensive Five Year Plan for the economy, should be made public shortly thereafter. Still, prospects remain uncertain for the Manly administration.

"Even with the IMF, we'll need the other outside money" said only Manly advisor. "Without it we face a depression on the other of the '30s. What then? The army is extremely right-wing. The only course for the PNP may be to hold a coup against itself and change the rules of the game."

Other scenarios forsee formation of a coalition government with the opposition JLP; or it is possible Manley will call for a vote of confidence as early as September. Still others see Manley kicking himself up to some prestigious post within the United Nations or Third World community.

Most observers, however, believe that if Manley can get the IMF money he should be able to hold on through the remaining four years of his term. The IMF strategy appears more direct at strengthening the hand of the moderate factions within the PNP, rather than turning the government over to the JLP, which itself is bitterly divided between a moderate and a right wing, and which was not yet succeeded in capitalizing upon current public dissatisfaction.

Many of Manley's difficulties seem to stem from an underestimation of the middle class' hostile reaction to his leftist policies and an overestimation of the speed with which a broad base of popular unity and commitment could be built.

Despite repeated socialist declarations the thrust of government action has been comparatively tame. Many public enterprises, such as the sugar estates, banks and hotels had been running in the red before being nationalized, and such extreme measures as expropriation or renunciation of debt had never been seriously entertained by the government. Nonetheless the middle classes were dismayed at Manley's surprisingly strong re-election victory in December 1976, and panic set in after his angry 'Not For Sale' speech three months later, in which he lambasted the IMF and appeared to burn his bridges with the West.

'I was a riot,' said one observer. 'People were loading their furniture on the docks and everything. This really shook Manley, and he began back-tracking almost immediately.'

The reponse was not surprising, given the balance of forces within the PNP. According to a former member of the Manley administration, 'maybe 30 pecent of the PNP is Marxist. The rest are pretty moderate. So word went down the corridors that the left gave bad advice.'

A high official in the National Planning Agency, responsible for preparing the Five Year Plan, noted, 'The right shift was inevitable. We were elected without as strong a base in the mass organizations as we should have had. The PNP has a long way to go with popular education. Our main job now is helping Michael stay in power. He's all we've got.'

Other party worders stressed the difficulties caused by growing unemployment. 'our first need now is production in the communities. Chicken farms. Anything to get people working. It's desperate,' said one.

Despite the economic turmoil, most Jamaicans do give Manley credit for putting them on the road toward building a new society. 'Manley made us know we were Jamaicans,' said a young library worker. 'We didn't know that before.'

People proudly cite Jamaica's new leadership role in world affairs, such as its chairing of the 'Group of 77' developing nations in the United Nation. Improvements in housing, education and adult literacy are readily acknowledged. And while government and unions may quarrel over specifics of 'worker participation' and 'cooperative management,' few would suggest that the old plantations be restored.

But for the moment, new efforts at major institutional change have been stalled and existing ones slowed. The key signs for Manley's—and Jamaica's—future are being anxiously awaited in the terms of the upcoming IMF agreement, the shape of the proposed Five Year Plan and the continuing changes in the cabinet.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make an effort to improve your position in your community. Not a good day to ask an influential person for a favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to Juse 21) Plan time to study a project that could mean increased income in the future. Engage in recreational activities you enjoy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to please an irate associate so that you can carry on with mutual interests more harmoniously. Relax in the evening.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan how to complete your chores with fewer interruptions and increase efficiency. Take treatments to improve your appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Your mate is under an emotional strain that you can help to alleviate now. Don't do anything to jeopardize harmony at home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make sure not to react bitterly to remarks of a careless person and upset present harmony at home. Be more tolerant.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study your surroundings and make plans for improvement. Don't jeopardize your present security in any way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You could be tempted to conclude a present business arrangement and get into something new, but this would be most unwise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you analyze a new enterprise more carefully you will know how to be more successful. Make new friends in the evening.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't lose your temper over a situation that displeases you. This would only make matters worst. Sidestep a troublemaker.

Students Appeal For Home Cooking

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — It looks as though two Brown University sophomores will get their home-cooked dinners after all.

Harold Siden of West Bloomfield, Mich., and Michael Zuckert of Des Moines, Iowa, had little response when they first passed out leaflets on Providence's East Side asking for invitations to dinner.

But after a story of their venture appeared in the Providence Journal-Bulletin last week, the young men received about 20 invitations.

"We're sort of having a few problems scheduling them all," Siden said.

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Westmoreland Resources, a coal company, has notified the state Department of Revenue that its quarterly tax payment was being made under protest.

More Medicinal Use Of Cocaine Results In Serious Shortage

By MARK SHWARTZ
(c) 1978 Pacific News Service

Hospitals and pharmacies throughout the United States are reporting a serious shortage of cocaine-one of the most effective pain-relievers known to medicine.

While vast quantities of the drug are readily available on the black market, many physicians and dentists are having to wait weeks to obtain legal prescriptions of cocaine for patients who need it.

"There has been a shortage over the past year," said Michael Stolar of the American Society of Hospital Pharmacists, a Washington, D.C.-based organization that represents thousands of pharmacists and monitors drug supplies in over 100 U.S. hospitals.

'Pharmacists want to know why they can go to the street and get cocaine, but they can't get it from their wholesale distributor,' Stolar said

The American Pharmaceutical Association in Washington reports similar complaints from around the country.

Because cocaine is considered one of the most heavily abused drugs in the U.S., the Drug Enforcement Administration maintains a strict quota on the amount that can be manufactured here.

And although legitimate supplies of the white powder are running low, the federal government has no plans to increase its cocaine quota for the coming year.

One reason for the drought, according to Stolar, is the sudden popularity of 'Brompton's Cocktail'--a medicinally prescribed mixture of cocaine, morphine, alcohol and syrup given orally to dying cancer patients to relieve their agonizing pain.

"For about the last six months there has been a significant increase in demand for cocaine, both for surgical use and in 'Brompton's Cocktails'," said a spokesman for Stepan Chemical of Maywood, N.J., the only U.S. company licensed to extract cocaine from raw, imported coca leaves.

Last year, Stepan Chemical purchased over one million pounds of leaves from Peru, which grows 95 percent of the world's supply, and other South American countries--a five-fold increase over the amount imported into the U.S. in 1957.

The Drug Enforcement Administration told Stepan it could extract no more than 3,252 pounds of cocaine during fiscal year 1978. Things seemed to go smoothly, a Stepan spolesman said, until last fall.

"The upward usage of cocaine at that time," he noted, "left us without an inventory. We have since added another manufacturing procedure which has increased our output 30 to 40 percent."

Stepan is now producing almost as much cocaine as the quota will allow.

But the shortage has affected other drug companies as well.

Although Stepan isolates the cocaine alkaloid form coca leaves, other major pharmaceuticals--including Merck, Eli Lilly and Mallinckrodt--convert it into a commercially usable powder known as cocaine hydrochloride.

Roy Walker, spokesman for Merck's Rahway, N.J., headquarters, said his company mailed letters to all its wholesalers last October informing them of the production slowdown and suggesting they distribute their supplies "as equitably as possible." Since then, Walker said, the shortage has "lessened," although "security as well as competitive factors" forbade him from discussing all the factors that led to the shortage.

None of the pharmaceutical corporations would reveal how much cocaine hydrochloride they sell each year, although a representative for Eli Lilly and Co. in Indianapolis called it "an insignificant part" of their corporate sales, which totaled over $1.5 billion last year.

A spokesman for Stepan, who did not want his name revealed, said the company does not foresee a more severe cocaine shortage--"unless the 'Brompton's Cocktail' use increases."

Tests are underway at Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis, which has treated over 250 patients with Brompton's mix, named for the British hospital where it was first developed.

Tests Show Less Pain

Studies in England show that a Brompton's mixture, including heroin, reduced pain in 95 percent of the patients tested.

Because heroin is banned in the U.S., American hospitals use morphine as a substitute although research into heroin's effectivness is now being sponsored by the federal government.

'By balancing out the morphine and alcohol depressants,' says Methodist's clinical pharmacist K. Gregory Humma, "cocaine seems to relieve pain without totally knocking the patient out."

Humma acknowledged that Methodist Hospital has run out of cocaine several times.

Lutheran Medical Center in St. Louis, which also dispenses Brompton's to patients in a special "continuing care unit," has also felt the cocaine pinch.

"We've had a shortage for about one-and-a-half years," said Ray Doelling, Lutheran's chief pharmacist. "So far we've been doing alright by keeping extra bottles on back order."

Doelling pointed out that Lutheran uses Dexedrine ("speed") instead of cocaine in its Brompton's because it gets into the blood stream easier when swallowed.

Besides Brompton's, physicians as well as dentists continue to use cocaine for more traditional purposes--as a pain killer and to stop bleeding during ear, nose and throat surgery.

"It's more powerful than any other topical anesthetic," says Ed Mitchell, pharmacologist with the American Dental Association in Chicago.

Fred Willyerd, executive secretary of the California State Board of Pharmacy, adds, "No synthetic drug has been developed as a substitute. One drop of cocaine will anesthetize the cornea of the eye.'

While the Food and Drug Administration recognizes cocaine's medicinal use as a local anesthetic, "Brompton's Cocktail"--with or without cocaine--has not been approved.

'Somebody may be siphoning off cocaine and giving it to cancer patients,' said Dr. Edward Tocus, chief of the FDA's drug abuse staff. 'But there is no indication that people are using more than in the past.....We have no projections for increased "Brompton's Cocktail" usage.'

Tocus added that the FDA has no plans to recommend an increase in the cocaine manufacturer's production quota for fiscal 1979, saying that "the shortage was supposed to have been corrected by now."

But Willyerd countered, "If there is a change in the prescribing habits of physicians, it may be that the feds would have to alter their quota. The government wouldn't want to interfere with good medical practice."

"If you were a terminal patient," he said, "you would want the drug that relieved the most pain. You and I might be there some day."

One reason the DEA keeps such a tight rein on legal cocaine production is because of the incredible profits that could be found on the black market if the drugs were stolen or diverted.

According to Congressman Lester Wolff (D-N.Y.), chairman of the House narcotics committee, U.S. border agents probably intercept less than one percent of all cocaine smuggled in annually. If Congressman Wolff is correct, over 160,000 pounds of cocaine were available on the U.S. black market last year.

Voters May Get Liquor Health Warning Proposal

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — An initiative measure that would require a health warning label on liquor bottles dispensed by Washington state stores was filed with the secretary of state Friday.

If adopted, all bottles would have to carry a labeling reading: "Contents may cause brain damage, communication breakdown and family degradation."

The initiative was filed by June Riggs of Seattle and her daughter, Pam.

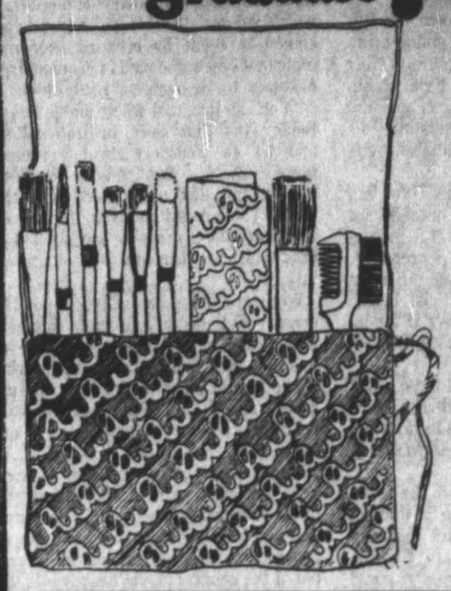

They have until July 5 to collect the valid signatures of 123,111 registered voters. If they are successful, the measure would be put to a vote of the people in the November general election.

Sen. Kent Pullen, D-Kent, has been a strong advocate of liquor bottle labeling and introduced in 1976 a bill that would have required a health warning. However, the bill was killed in committee.

CERTIFICATION OFFERED

Urban Affairs Expert Eyes Common Market For North America

By SANDY CLOSE
(c) 1978 Pacific News Service

Short of floating mines down the Rio Grande or maintaining a standing army at the border, there is no way, says New York City's financial boss, Felix Rohatyn, that the United States can stop the rising flow of Latin immigrants into this country — a flow he now estimates at one million annually.

As chairman of New York's Municipal Assistance Corp., the ad hoc organization of bankers and politicians that is managing the city's debt and fiscal problems, Rohatyn is often viewed as the most influential urban affairs official in the country. He is a senior partner at the international investment banking firm of Lazard Freres and Co.

"Who cares about borders these days? They're an anachronism when your're hungry and your cousin lives in Houston, Chicago or Los Angeles," Rohatyn said in an interview.

Rohatyn's solution is to turn the seeming burden into a potential asset through creation of a "common market" between the United States, Mexico and Canada. The free flow of labor across national boundaries, he believes, could at once serve as a bargaining chip for U.S. access to Mexico's vast oil reserves and help attract vital industries back to U.S. cities.

"It's a hardship to absorb these immigrants, it's true," Rohatyn said, "but there is no way to keep them out. The logical thing to do is to come to some arrangements with Mexico whereby there would be a free interchange not just of labor but of goods and materials" — particularly resources related to America's evergy needs.

"I start from the proposition that the flow can't be stopped," he said. "The American public is more likely to accept it if we can get something in return." Moreover, he added, access to American capital and technology would help reduce the immigration push by improving the economic situation in Mexico.

New immigrants from Mexico might also provide an inducement for industry to relocate in America's impacted cities as a source of hard-working and relatively cheap labor, Rohatyn believes.

But won't this create competition for those in the inner cities already seeking work?

It will, Rohatyn said, but he pointed to the urgency of addressing the larger problem — the crisis of our cities, which he described as "social nuclear bombs."

"There are two choices facing us in the next 50 years," he said. "We can abandon these enormous compounds of black poor which are our cities, or we can try to accomodate them by creating economic units that give some kind of economic opportunity to the people at the bottom.

"You can take that whole underclass of society that has been institutionalized and try to transport them to where there's work. But that's hopeless. They're unskilled and no one will take them. The alternative is to force feed work into these areas — and not public jobs, which are dead-end jobs with no futures."

Work will come, he believes, when the country embarks on a program to create a domestic energy industry capable of meeting the nation's full energy needs. An energy development industry, he suggests, may do for our economy what transportation and communications did in the 1890s.

If we have to be self-sufficient in energy in the next 10 years, it will require "the most extraordinary economic activity" that will have a major fallout in terms of generating jobs, Rohatyn said. For example, if the country moves heavily into the developent of coal, this will lead to major new transportation systems, coal gasification plants, railroad coal hopper cars. Federal funding for this construction would bring contracts with private firms that mandated at least 30 percent of their work be targeted to impacted areas.

Pressure on unions, he argues, would result in recruitment of urban minorities for at least 20 to 25 percent of the jobs — jobs that could be held as incentives for demoralized black and Latin youth to finish high school.

Rohatyn pointed to his own experience working with Independent House, a work-oriented project training young men coming out of Rikers Island and Attica penitentiary as proof for the success of such pipelines. "A lot of the guys we get don't last the first two or three weeks," he admitted. "Maybe we lose half. But with those who stay through and get some training we have a 70 percent success rate."

Does Rohatyn see any political pressure being exerted toward the creation of a major energy development program?

"No. I see no sign of it," he said. Nor does he see any real momentum towards it in the administration's controversial urban policy programs. "The one thing I've learned from my involvement in New York is that government is a pretty hopeless proposition. It's ineffiecient and institutionally cowardly."

Moreover, there won't be enough political pressure to prod government into this direction until the country falls into a deep economic crisis, an economic crisis which he insists is absolutely inevitable.

Carter's Sister Votes Male Ticket

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — President Carter's sister said Friday that if given a choice between equally qualified male and female candidates for president, she would choose the man.

"In places of stress and leadership, I would prefer to have a man," said Ruth Carter Stapleton at a Bismarck news conference.

Boeing Sees Answer To Energy Problem In Solar Satellites

By TOM TIEDE

SEATTLE (NEA) — Throughout the decade technicioans have insisted that the energy crisis is a short term discombobulation that science will eventually solve. The argument has been that the nation need only to set the goal, as it did for lunar travel, and organized knowledge will triumph.

Now the Boeing Aerospace Co. believes it has a plan to justify this optimism. The firm says the United States, indeed the world, can get all of the electrical power it will ever need by deploying gigantic space satellites to harness solar energy and send it to earth for power lines distribution.

The plan is startling in scope. so much so that Boeing is worried it may be ignored because of its "concept shock." Yet the company's executives contend that if the U.S. acts now to fill the skies with solar power satellites. the country could be all but energy sufficient by the year 2000.

Orbiting Spacecraft

By stages, the Proposal is this:

First, Boeing would have the nation construct a mammoth spacebase in orbit. Company scientists believe the nation has the ability, yet untested, to launch as much as one million pounds of construction material a year, and then bolt it together high above the weather and other vagarities of earth.

In this case the construction material would be bolted to form satellites of staggering dimensions. SPS manager Ralph Nansen says the satellites would be 20 miles long and nearly four miles wide-the area of a small city. On earth such structures would weigh between 88,000 and 110,000 tons apiece.

The satellites would be shingled with either solar cells or thermal engines-it's not now certain which would be the better. Either way, the devices would absorb power from the sun and convert it into "direct current" electricity. Nansen says the SPSS would, in effect, "be electrically alive."

This electrification process would be almost continuous. the solar satellites would sit in a geosynchronous (fixed) orbit at 22,000 miles above the oceans. In this position the satellites would manufacture power the year around, except for brief periods during the night in the spring and fall.

In Prodigious Amounts

Once manufactured, the SPS electricity would be sent to earth in the form of microwave energy. The microwaves would be transmitted in prodigious amounts, throughout much of the nation, but Nansen says they would be safe: "The maximum intensity would be well within standards established by law."

On earth, the microwaves would be received by rectifying antennas,also enormous. The antennas would look like chain link fencing, built on tall poles and they would likely cover as much as 60 square miles of ground. Nansen believes the land under the antennas could be used for farming or grazing.

And there it is. Boeing says a single 20-mile satellite could transmit 10,000 megawatts of power annually, enough to supply the city of Chicago or the state of Florida with present needs. Nansen adds that 45 satellites would provide as much electrical energy as is currently generated in the U.S.

Not that the system is ready to be deployed tomorrow. Though Boeing says SPS technology exists, and "there are no feasibility barriers to the idea," there is a decided lack of SPS experience. For one thing, the nation has not yet built Tinker Toys, much less satellites, in the reaches of the cosmos.

Then too, there is an absence of precedence for sending oceans of microwaves through space. Planners say the beams would be safe for birds to fly through-but what if the birds fly through 50 or 5,000 times? The truth is no one yet knows what the long term microwave impact would be on the earth.

Finally, there is the cost of the SPS proposal. Technicians believe it cost $84 billion to develop and construct one operational satellite. The rest of the stations would cost some $20 billion apiece, or $900 billion for 45 units. Total expenditures for the program: well over $1 trillion.

Clearly, there are sobering questions regarding the plan for solar power satellites. But Boeing's officers believe the idea is sound, safe and workable. The company says that if government and private industry work together, the first SPS could be in orbit and manufacturing power as early as 1990.

As for costs, SPS manager Nansen says the first satellite would pay for itself in 22 years, and others would do likewise in as little as 45 years. Besides, the cost would largly be an industry problem; the SPS plan is a commercial venture, and Boeing says only a minimum of tax money would be used.

Ralph Nansen insists the SPS is not science fiction. he says if the program begins now solar satellites could be lighting and heating American homes at about the time the world is due to run out of oil. Who knows, he suggests, maybe the Arabs would then have to import their energy from us.

Judge Rejects Seizure Request

ABILENE, Kan. (AP) — The humane society suffered a legal setback Friday in its efforts to halt a coursing meet in which jackrabbits are chased and usually killed by greyhounds.

Judge Tom Nold of Dickinson County District Court rejected the request of the Humane Society of the United States that he issue a warrant for the seizure of the rabbits, which are being used in the spring coursing event of the National Greyhound Association.

The humane society has been trying to stop the event since it started early in the week and challenged the program in court by alleging the jackrabbits were shipped illegally from Texas to Kansas.

Two humane society investigators had left Abilene by the time of the ruling by Nold, who based his finding on the origin of the rabbits.

The judge said there was no state law that prohibited transporting rabbits into the state for hunting or coursing. The law does prohibit shipping rabbits or hares from one part of the state to another for coursing and shipping Kansas rabbits to another state unless a license has been issued.

Disney Operates 'Fiefdom' In Florida

Peculiar Ordinance Aids Disney World Operation

By BECKY O'MALLEY
(c) 1978 Pacific News Service

If the world of Walt Disney is wonderful, the world of Walt Disney Productions is incredible. That's the conclusion reached by a former California county district attorney and mountain lawyer who has investigated Disney's on-again off-again plans for development of a 17,000 acre sports village at Independence Lake in the High Sierra.

To grasp the environmental and other effects which the development might have on neighboring rural communities, Harold A. Berliner flew to Orlando, Florida for a close look at the 44-acre Disney World, completed ten years ago. What he found sent him speeding back to California to write, print and distribute — at his own expense — a study entitled "The Real Magic in the Magic Kingdom — Disney World's Own Local Government."

What disturbed Berliner was not the environmental or social impacts of Disney World but that the resort's fantastic success came in large part because it had managed to create its very own government — an entity which has taxing powers and is exempt from most Florida laws governing individuals and corporations.

The Florida legislature, says Berliner, "created one of the most generous laws ever seen in the United States solely for the benefit of Disney."

"That law," which because of a legal technicality is not even printed in the regular statutes of the state of Florida, "abrogated nearly all state laws, environmental and otherwise, by means of an act which converted a simple drainage district to an improvement district with expansive powers — The Reedy Creek Improvement District.

"Behind the modest title 'Reedy Creek Improvement District,' said Berliner, "hides one of the most powerful governmental units this side of the Iron Curtain which is governed solely at the pleasure of Disney."

The boundaries of the Reedy Creek Improvement District happens to coincide with the 44 acres purchased by Disney and Disney associates. The district is governed by a board composed of five supervisors, elected by landowners who get one vote for each acre of land owned.

"Disney's almost complete ownership of the land gives Disney complete control of the District," says Berliner. An errant supervisor (there's never been one) can be subjected to recall proceedings by a mere 25 percent of the total district votes.

The little-known law creating the district exempts it from virtually all the zoning laws, land use laws and building regulations of the state or county. The district is also granted the right of eminent domain "for any of the projects of the district," and control over a wide assortment of functions such as water and sewer systems, waste disposal, sanitation, roads and transportation — functions normally subject to state laws.

Reedy Creek is also exempted from state laws regulating the levying of taxes, which the district is permitted to do, and from controls over district budgets and finances.

Revenues from tax-exempt bonds sold by the district ($20 million worth of bonds were issued in 1972) may be used to finance all projects of district, meaning the entire infrastructure of Disney World. Says Berliner, "Disney, in effect, is able in this manner to borrow money for up to 30 years in the five percent interest bracket because of the (tax) exemption, hardly competition to regularly charge interest rates in the 1970s."

The law also deals handily with any potential problems from conflict of interest between District supervisors and the Disney organization, which happens to employ the supervisors and the Disney organization, which happens to employ the supervisors.

The concept of conflict of interest is statutorially abolished — no board member can be deemed to have a conflict simply because he or she works for or owns shares of a company doing business with the district. Numerous contracts have been negotiated between the district and Disney.

The law also makes it a misdemeanor not only to violate the regulations adopted by the district, but even to talk about violating them — "to advocate, propose, suggest, use or exhibit a map, plat, survey or plan of subdivision or development of land except in conformity with this act and the rules...of the Board of Supervisor."

Says Berliner, "The nature of this Act is to set up a feudal domain...It is difficult to imagine an action more antagonistic to the American democratic form of government."

Miami lawyer Marshall Harris, who has neither met Berliner nor read his report, confirmed Berliner's analysis of the strange law and added some additional observations. Harris was one of only five state legislators who voted against the Act in 1967.

"Reedy Creek legislation really set up some sort of feudal barony in the state of Florida," he said. "It contains some very peculiar governance provisions."

Harris chiefly objected to giving the district the right to issue tax-exempt municipal bonds to finance the operations of a single private corporation. "The trick, basically, was that with tax-exempt money they were doing most of the infrastructure for Disney world — the roads, the electric lines, a whole bunch of things which regular developers had to get from private money sources like banks."

"It was a price for coming into Florida," said Harris. "I don't know what percentage of their infrastructure in the total area developed was met out of such funds versus funds Disney borrowed on the commercial market, but I assume a rather substantial percentage or they wouldn't have made it such a necessary quid pro quo for their entry into Florida."

Harris believes Disney was able to obtain passage of the law by presenting it as a "special act," copies of which are not published or even reprinted for all members of the legislature who must vote on them. To find out what's in a special act, legislators must go to the legislative clerk's office to read the original bill.

"Special legislation need only be advertised in the county in question, and generally the legislators never even see the text of such special legislation unless they're very curious," said Harris.

Harris also believes that Disney's threats to re-locate the Disney World complex in another state unless the law was passed were "nonsense." "They'd spent two-and-a-half years assembling the land package. They were locked into it," he said.

Copies of the Berliner study have now been distributed to a variety of environmental activists in California in an effort to head off any similar attempts to divert state and local law in Sierra County, where Disney wants to build its Independence Lake resort.

On March 8, Disney informed the county planning commission it was suspending its development plans because of bureaucratic foot-dragging and environmental red tape.

Said Project Director Wing Chao, "It is the irresponsible proliferation of delays, the never-ending request for more and more irrelevant information and studies, the bureaucratic sidtrackings and meanderings into unreasonable alternatives, and the ever-increasing attendant costs to the applicant..."

Berliner, now joined by the Sierra Club and the Friends of the Earth, sees the withdrawal as a ruse to obtain special permission for Disney to operate outside California law, just as it does in Florida.

"With the Reedy Creek experience in mind, it becomes easier to understand Disney's impatience with ordinary government it doesn't own or control," he says. "It has been so used to having its own way in Florida in every conceivable field, and immediately, that the slightest exercise of regulation drives its officials wild."

A statement distributed by the Sierra Club claimed, "Disney has made it clear that it seeks the same kind of above-the-law treatment it got in Florida."

Disney spokesman Wing Chao refused to comment on the charge.

However, Bill Press, director of California's Office of Planning and Research which coordinates the dealings with Disney, indicated his belief that red tape and delays on permit approvals are not the only reasons for Disney's announced withdrawal.

"The process has barely begun with Disney, and already they're crying wolf," he said. "Their charge of delay is totally unfounded — they're really just getting under way."

He pointed out that the state's environmental impact process has been radically streamlined since Dow Chemical Company cited it as the reason for pulling out of a multimillion dollor planned project near San Francisco a year ago.

In Berliner's view, what is at stake now is the sanctity of the law itself. "What I saw in Florida," he said, "convinced me that it is Disney's ideas about government that are the real issue facing California. What is at stake here is whether or not we can maintain the rule of law in small, rural counties faced with a huge corporation. If Disney is able to intimidate the state of California and Sierra County into ignoring the legally established procedures, Disney will become the effective government of Sierra County."

Vote Likely On Funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Armed Services Committee is expected to vote next week on a $38 billion weapons authorization bill that would restore funding for a fifth nuclear aircraft carrier.

Congress last year went along with President Carter in cutting money for another nuclear carrier after the administration argued that smaller and cheaper carriers can do the job. But supporters of large carriers say that without the huge ships, the United States will not be able to send jetfighters to support soldiers in land wars.

CRASH—PROOF AUTO?

DETROIT (AP) — The crash-proof car that Transportation Secretary Brock Adams has called "the ideal family car of the future" is not all it's cracked up to be, its builder says. Not only has the car never been tested but Don Friedman, president of Minicars Inc., says it would need further development to meet some of the safety claims made for it by Adams. Friedman told the Detroit News that the car was just a mockup.

Atom Probe May Change Sciences

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — A quest for minute fragments of matter someday may lead to a new understanding of the universe.

And with this knowledge, the laws of nature could be profoundly altered. Deadly diseases might become curable, life cycles expanded, and travel beyond the solar system an everyday occurrence.

In the vanguard of the search for the fundamental building blocks of the universe are physicists manning huge machines called accelerators, or atom smashers.

Changed Image of Atom

These machines already have altered the concept of teh atom, once considered the basic ingredient of all matter. within the atom physicists have found a strange world composed of new bits of matter.

Recently scientists at the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory in Batavia, Ill., discovered a new sub-nuclear particle, which they named "Upsilon." It is much heavier than previously observed sub-nuclear particles.

All this is astonishing considering that just a few decades ago the atom was regarded as a hard round object with a tiny nucleus consisting or protons and neutrons, orbited by varying numbers of electrons.

The atom smashers changed this simple model of an atom by beaming protons or other nuclear particles at high speeds at targets such as atoms of iron.

The resulting collisions broke open the protong and revealed an inner world of smaller sub-nuclear particles. More than 200 have been discovered in the last 15 years, but most live only for af fraction of a millionth of a second before decaying into more familiar and longer-lived particles.

The denizens of this growing "nuclear zoo" bear names like neutrinos, pions, muons, and quarks. Although quarks have not yet been isolated, most physicists agree they exist and probably are the fundamental building block of an atom's nucleus.

Reach Speed of Light

At Fermilab, protons traveling in a stream no wider than a pencil race through a tiny vacum chamber inside the magnets of an accelerator to energies of 200 to 500 billion volts. At that rate, they are moving at nearly the speed of light, circling the main ring of the accelerator 50,000 times each second.

Even this tremendous energy has been unable to isolate the quarks. A new machine now under construction at the laboratory will be capable of a trillion volts and may provide the strength necessary to pry the quarks loose.

This new, more powerful extension of the accelerator may not only isolate quarks, but establish how many kinds there are, and how they behave and interact. One thing is certain: Quarks represent an enormous amount of energy.

"Theoretically, at least, they would show a giant progression in the energy chain," says Dr. Timothy Toohig, a physicist in charge of one of the three experimental areas at Fermilab.

"There's a lot of difference between the power released by an ordinary chemical fire and that generated by a nuclear source," explains Toohig. "Similarly, if we could harness quarks, it would give us another energy leap, a step beyond anything now imagined in energy. We're talking about a source of energy more powerful than anyone dreamed just five years ago."

Panel Okayed To Aid Humans Used In Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee voted Friday to recommend creation of a national commission to protect the rights of human subjects of certain types of medical and psychological research.

The commission would have specific authority to review biomedical or psychological research by any government agency, including the Pentagon and the CIA.

The proposal, calling for an 11-member President's Commission for the Protection of Human Subjects of Biomedical and Behavioral Research, was approved unanimously by the Senate Human Resources Committee.

Congress established a similar commission four years ago in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, but the panel's jurisdiction is limited mainly to reviewing research conducted by agencies within the department.

The decision to give the new commission authority to look into certain types of CIA and Pentagon research resulted from testimony about abuses in past research projects.

One of the most publicized cases, made public last year, involved the CIA's admission that it conducted an experiment in 1953, giving the hallucinogenic drug LSD to an unwitting research subject, Dr. Frank Olsen. Olsen, an Army scientist, committed suicide as a result of his drug dose.

The bill, which has the support of CIA Director Stansfield Turner, will also give several agencies, including the CIA and Defense Department, a non-voting seat on the commission.

The legislation requires the commission to issue a report every two years on the protection of human subjects of biomedical and behavioral research conducted by the government.

In addition, the committee would have to conduct a study on defining death, including the possibility of writing a model definition of death.

High School Diploma Called Useless

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This article is part of an ongoing PNS series examining the roots, impact and future prospects of America's burgeoning "under class," the expanding nation-within-the-nation that is denied the prospects of mobility and consigned to what may be permanent poverty.)

By CAROL POLSGROVE
(c) 1978 Pacific News Service

High school dropouts are not alone at the bottom of the job ladder. They have the company of high school graduates who do not go to college.

Social scientists at the University of Michigan have concluded from an eight-year study that jobs held by male high school graduates and jobs held by male high school dropouts did not differ substantially in status or pay.

Unemployment was higher among the dropouts in the sample of more than 2,000 youths. But employed dropouts held jobs just as good-or bad--as the graduates did.

"While the high school diploma used to be a big thing a generation ago," said the study's director, Dr. Jerald Bachman, "now you need a college degree."

But those graduates who do go to college are not in for smooth sailing either, according to another study, issued earlier this year. A staff report to the Joint Economic Committee of Congress predicts continuing underemployment of college-educated workers. The "oversupply" of the college-educated "already is suppressing the monetary returns from college education," said the JEC's January report.

It predicted that the college-educated would keep moving down the job ladder, "bumping" those less educated to even lower positions.

It warned of possibly serious social discontent stemming from "the implied limitation on education as a route to economic advancement."

believe the certificate is worth as much as the diploma in the job market, according to Charles Benson, an education professor at the University of California at Berkeley.

Benson, who is working on a study to evaluate the exam, said that informal discussions with students indicate that even the "quasi-dropouts"--those with low attendance and poor grades--"seem to believe that the employer values the high school diploma," not as evidence of learning, but as "evidence of their ability to go through the hoops."

So strong is that belief, said an officer of a Retail Store Employees Union local, in California, that job applicants sometimes lie and say they have more education than they do.

In general, more education does lead to jobs higher in pay and in status for white males, according to the Michigan report, which will be published in May.

Other studies show that schooling does not pay off so well for women and members of minority groups.

Surveying a sample of 10th grade youths at intervals between 1966 and 1974, five years after high school graduation, the Michigan researchers found that those with college degrees, even two-year associate degrees, had a substantial edge over high school graduates.

But the "Great Divide" is now the college degree, not the high school diploma. After all, 80 percent of Americans finish high school today, compared to 6 percent in 1900. About half of those who finish go on to college.

Meanwhile, the job market has not kept up. Three out of five jobs created between 1950 and 1976 are "poor" in terms of wages and benefits, according to Eli Ginzberg, a Columbia University economics professor and chairman of the National Commission for Manpower Policy.

The Department of Labor predicts more of the same through 1985: high demands for farmworkers, custodians, secretaries and salesworkers.

"The automation revolution that was to increase the demand for skilled workers while decreasing the need for humans to do the worst jobs of society has not occurred," wrote a special task force to the secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in 1974.

What has occurred, instead, is "credential inflation." Employers have raised the paper requirements for jobs without significantly changing the jobs.

The result can be serious job dissatisfaction among workers who get jobs less interesting than the ones they had expected their schooling to bring them.

Said the JEC report, "Many of today's young graduates will meet with disappointment in their aspirations for advancement."

There are two possible responses to these disappointed expectations, at whatever level they occur, said Grubb, who is doing a study of "credentialing."

One, suggested by Richard Freeman, author of "The Overeducated American," is to give people more realistic expectations.

The other response, Grubb's own, is that "we basically have lousy sets of jobs and that rather than getting people's expectations congruent with the jobs, we should get the jobs congruent with people's expectations."

Scaffolding Blamed In Garage Mishap

ATLANTA (AP) — The failure of a piece of scaffolding is probably to blame for the collapse of a 1,600-square-foot section of an underground parking garage near a new federal building, the project's architect says.

About 30 men working on the street-level plaza covering the top level of the garage escaped injury Thursday when they jumped off the structure after feeling vibrations moments before the collapse. The garage is part of the Richard B. Russell federal complex being constructed in downtown Atlanta.

Architect Bernard Rothschild said the steel and wood scaffolding was supporting molds into which wet concrete was being pumped.

Revolutionary Health Ideas Appearing

Holistic Methods View Entire Human Being

(EDITOR'S NOTE — There is a new banner rising above the marshalled pills, hypos and knives of modern medicine. It is the holistic approach, which contends that the whole human is more than the sum of its parts and should be treated as such.)

By RICHARD SALTUS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A diverse band of crusaders from California is descending on the nation, flying the banner of holistic health and dedicated to treating the mind and spirit as well as the diseased body.

Their weapons against sickness are as new as biofeedback and as old as herb potions — as prosaic as massage and as occult as spiritual healing.

But there are reservations about the holistic movement. Critics point to its highly commercialized aspects and to the fact that the state has no guidelines for certification, no licensing for practitioners of holistic health, no medical degree needed although they purport to treat ill people.

The holistic approach is a rebellion from what some consider the "hard" methods — surgery, powerful drugs, costly therapy. Holists advocate a softer approach. They preach individual salvation.

In his book "Mind as Healer, Mind as Slayer," psychologist Kenneth Pelletier says of current health care: "People have been killing themselves by failing to alter self-destructive habits."

A patient's whole life is to be considered, some holists preach.aThus, at a typical comprehensive holistic health centern a patient — called a participant or partner — might consult a psychologist, diet adviser, social worker, physical therapist — and a doctor.

Treatment might be biofeedback, self-hypnosis, acupuncture, massage, nutritional counseling or body movement sessions.

But if the illness is acute, some holists throw holism out the window.

"If I'm run over by a truck, don't stick needles in me or tell me to meditate," says David Bresler, head of the holistically oriented Pain Control Unit at UCLA. "Get me to an emergency room." So far, holism doesn't have the approval of health care insurers or government insurance programs, but it's beginning to find support in important places.

Dr. James Gordon, a psychiatrist with the National Institute of Mental Health, says, "We're at a crisis point in our medical care. So many people have chronic diseases, and treatment is so expensive. We've reached the stage where we've dealt with the most obvious diseases but have come up against those that seem to be resisting.

"People are looking elsewhere and they're getting relief."

But are they?

While holists cite examples of cancer cases cured by visualization, in which the patient imagines his body beating away the disease, or an illness overcome by diet, not many of the techniques have satisfied scientists.

On the other hand, says Rick Carlson, a consultant to several government agencies on holistic matters, critics "are finessing the fact that very little of what physicians do now has ever been tested" in stringent trials "and if tested would prove inefficacious."

Some of the best results on the holistic front are reported in the treatment of chronic pain. UCLA's Bresler says patients who have failed to get relief for low back pain with conventional treatment "get longerlasting, more effective relief with an average of 10 or 11 acupuncture treatments, enrollment in a self-control class where they learn self-hypnosis, guided imagery, relaxation or nutritional therapy."

He says this costs $600 compared with $8,000 to $10,000 patients might have, or did, spend in a year on hospitalization, traction, drugs or surgery.

Those crusaders with a sense of the realities of the health care system are calling for studies to verify holistic methods, mindful that unless insurance companies and the government back the movement it will remain a luxury for the affluent.

Seminars or workshops in rustic retreats costing several hundred dollars are frequently advertised. One flyer advertised the "Voyage of a Lifetime" — a 14-day cruise to Greece, Egypt and Israel; an "adventure in psycho-anthropology and consciousness" to "experience new dimensions of knowledge and self-development while visiting the great cultural and spiritual energy centers of the world." Price not listed.

Dr. Marc Lappe of the California State Health Department, though an advocate of holistic treatment, testified at a recent hearing that "holistic health today, I believe, is mostly designed to aid the affluent few who already enjoy good health than to provide remedial treatment for those afflicted by stress-related illnesses" — poor people who may be more prone to hypertension, heart disease and cancer because of their environment.

How big the movement is hard to gauge. Leslie Kasloff, author of an upcoming directory of holistic services, estimates there are 100 to 500 centers and clinics specializing in holistic health and 5,000 to 10,000 practitioners who do at least some holistic work.

California, land of new movements and preoccupation with health, leads the way, and the San Francisco area has the densest accumulation of holistic centers.

Lappe notes that holistic medicine is a "stepchild of the ecology movement," attracting a homogeneous group of practitioners. "Some have traditional medical degrees, some are osteopaths, some are chiropractors. They share a homeopathic approach to medicine."

The American Medical Association has taken no official position on holism, although Dr. George Mixter, who answers public inquiries for the AMA, said: "It's like motherhood — we're for it, but what are you going to do about it?"

He says trying to understand a patient's lifestyle in an effort to ward off future disease may be the ideal approach to medicine, but a doctor's time is limited and "the results you get are so remote they're awfully hard to evaluate."

After the Los Angeles Times ran a lengthy article on holism, the newspaper received a letter from Dr. Samuel Bessman, chairman of the department of pharmacology and nutrition at the University of Southern California.

"Holistic medicine is non-medicine that tends to delay the patient in seeking proper help and feeds off psychological problems," Bessman wrote. "Judging from the financial success of its practitioners, it feeds well."

Bessman blamed the holistics for soothing pain without treating the cause. And he said, "The mystical emphasis on the mind as controller of the chemistry, growth and repair of tissues and organs has its basis in no objective fact."

The last statement sharply conflicts with views of many researchers — not just holists — that much illness is psychosomatic, that is, involves the mind as well as the body.

A large part of the holistic movement is devoted to finding ways of reducing unhealthy stress. (Some stress is not harmful and in fact necessary for health, researchers say.)

The techniques are various forms of relaxation, often aided by biofeedback, and rearranging of one's life to avoid situations that cause adrenalin to flow and blood pressure to rise.

Dr. Norman Shealy, a Wisconsin neurosurgeon, has converted to the holistic way, but he says he's concerned about the rush of unorthodox practitioners to get in the holistic parade. "If we don't do something to organize ourselves, it will die as it gets flakier and flakier."

Rock Music Counted Way Of Life Today

scure clubs and paying the proverbial dues — and it looked at though nothing was going to stand in his way. Nothing did. But it was not as though he had suddenly created something extraordinarily unique to take him to the heights of superstardom. Rather, he had succeeded in transcending the pedestrian innuendos of rock and had become recognized at a universal talent, not just a rock music talent.

Needless to day, the offices were besieged with calls about Elton John. But the curious thing about the majority of the calls (from fans and members of the press) was that they wanted to know far more than where Elton would be appearing next or his favorite color or his astrological sign.

They wanted to know how he managed to see his life within the context of the music he wrote and performed. How did he work with Bernie Taupin, his lyricist? What motivated him to create? From where were his influences drawn — not just musically, but philosophically as well? How was he able to cope with his success?

They wanted to know what went on inside Elton John's mind. What were his ultimate statements? Elton John the person had become as important to them as Elton John the performer. He was no longer just another-rock singer.

It has become apparent that there is a growing need to study the contributions of the rock music community. to go beneath the surface achievements and to determine why the people involved have had such a profound effect on millions of people using this music as their common denominator. Names of the industry executives are regularly cropping up in tones of familiarity in major press releases.

Producers and arrangers have deservedly drawn attention to their recording areas of television and motion pictures. Unrecorded songwriters are becoming personalities on nationwide talk shows because people have become aware that there are more people behind a hit record than just the recording artist. Managers' promotional tactics have become favorite stories of the fans.

In this series, we will examine some of these people, their lives and their music. This will be a behind-the-scenes view of why they were drawn to music, how they got into the business, and what happened once they got there. But more important, this series is a look at people who, in addition to creating musical expression, are intelligent, witty, compassionate, and philosophical human beings. Without those qualities (and without these people) the music might never have achieved the degree of success it enjoys today.

Millet Work On Exhibit

LONDON (AP) — London's Tate Gallery has put on a special show of works not seen at the gallery for many years, including the anecdotal "Between Two Fires," by the American artist Francis Davis Millet, a man who lived a life of adventure and of art until he was drowned in the Titanic disaster in 1912.

"Between Two Fires" shows a straight-faced Puritan sitting uneasily between two pretty women.

Millet, born in 1846, was a drummer boy with the Union forces in the Civil War, went on to enter the Academy of Fine Arts at Antwerp in 1871, and became a newspaperman, a writer and an artist of note, with works that are in many public collections, including the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

During the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-78, he was correspondent of the London Daily News and of the New York Herald, and in 1898 went to Manila as war correspondent for the London Times and Harper's Weekly.

Millet's friend John Singer Sargent, another American painter, is represented in the Tate Gallery show, which runs until May 14, by "Carnation, Lily, Lily, Rose," a scene of children at twilight lighting Chinese lanterns.

Both Millet and Sargent have had their works exhibited in the past at the Tate which, like other galleries, has too many works to show at one time.

Noteworthy also are Scottish artist William Strang's Edwardian scene, "Bank Holiday," in which a young man and his girl consider which wine to order under the condescending eye of a waiter, and Sir Alfred Munnings' majestic eight-foot canvas, "Their Majesties Return From Ascot," in which King George V and Queen Mary ride in an open landau through a lyrical English landscape.

Politicians Eye Solar Energy

Boeing and Rockwell, both eyeing the contract for the super shuttle that would have to shoot the satellites out into orbit.

Many other companies are eager to get into the act. The Brown Foundation, which is funded by Brown and Root, the huge Texas industrial construction firm, recently awarded a $100,00 grant to Rice University in Houston to study the SSPSs.

For another direction comes NASA, with 30 percent of its employees out of work in the wake of the wave of government spending that put a man on the moon. The SSPSs would mean a use for the current big NASA project, the space shuttle which, said Bos, has been "a solution in search of a problem." NASA has already spent some $8 million looking into SSPSs. Dr. Alan M. Lovelace, NASA's deputy administrator, has said, "The next decade hold a thousand policy challenges in the area of space applications, but the decision on whether to exploit the sun for electric power may dominate them all."

Aside form aerospace firms and NASA, the solar satellite project is being promoted by a bevy of futurists. Foremost among them is Princeton physicist Gerard O'Neill, who has been designing space colonies that would be built with materials mined from the moon, and allow humans to settle beyond the earth.

Some years ago, Gov. Brown met O'Neill at a Zen retreat and caught the space bug. He borrowed astronaut Rusty Schweickart from NASA and enlisted Steward Brand, editor of the Whole Earth Catalog.

Asked how he squared his newfound enthusiasm for space ventures with his previous "era of limits" philosophy, Brown said: "Small is beautiful on Earth, but in space big is better." California holds half the country's NASA contracts.

These futurists have been finding support with a growing number of congressmen. A dozen of them have introduced a bill asking $25 million next year for exploratory study of an SSPS program. Chief sponsor is Rep. Ronnie G. Flippo, D-Ala., whose district receives more than a half-billion dollars a year from NASA and the Pentagon.

Five of the 12 initial sponsors have received campaign contributions form Rockwill International. The biggest sum went to Olin Teague, D-Texas, chairman of the Science and Technology Committee and the most powerful member of the House high-technology lobby.

Meanwhile, work on the SSPSs goes on. At the Raytheon plant in Waltham, Mass., electical engineer William Brown displayed a thing that looks like an elongated spark plug with metal parts made of copper. He explained that the transmitting antenna in space will be made of "a million or so of these."

Brown flicked the lights off and the movie projector rolled. The scene was the desert near Barstow, Calif., 1975. On a mountaintop a mile from the camera a 12-by-24-foot flat receiving antenna and a panel of floodlights were fastened to a metal tower. The camera panned to a large radar-like dish and the lights on the tower came on. Then the dish was aimed away from the mountain and the lights went off. Thirty kilowatts of electricity, enough for 20 homes, were transmitted through the air, without wires. So it can be done. It is awesome.

Peter Glaser, when interviewed about his invention, raised a relevant question: if you don't like the SSPS, where are you going to get centrally distributed electrical energy?

Pressed, he conceded that decentralized solar energy has great potential, but said he believes that the problem is getting people to use it. "It's not a technology problem, it's a people problem," he said.

Tech Museum Hosts Display Of Shoes In Tiny Scale

Cinderella's glass slipper has its counterpart in miniature on display now in a collector's treasure exhibit on tiny footwear at The Museum of Texas Tech University.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Women's Council of the West Texas Museum Association.

The collection includes metal, glass and china slippers, shoes and boots made in miniature between about 1870 and the 1940s. The largest is 6.5 inches long and the smallest, a pair of French crystal slippers, 1.5 inches long.

A tiny pair of Delft shoes was made in The Netherlands. A Dresden slipper with a decorated toe, pressed glass slippers in a variety of colors and a pair of metal slippers—which once held matches—are among the collection.

Most of the slippers were for ornament only, but some were pin cushions and one is designed to hold a tiny bouquet.

The exhibit is open to the public during all Museum hours, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., every day but Sunday, when hours are 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. There is no charge.

City To Get Rebate On Drinks

As its share of the mixed drink tax rebate, the City of Lubbock will receive $52,826 from the state comptroller's office.

Lubbock County's share for this quarter will be $54,304.

The tax, which is collected by the Alcoholic Beverage Commission and remitted quarterly to counties and cities, represents 10 percent of all gross receipts from the sale of mixed drinks.

Counties and cities receive 15 percent of the mixed drink tax collected within their boundaries, and the balance goes into the state general revenue fund.

The tax collections for the first three months of 1978 totaled a record $15.3 million, said Bob Bullock, state comptroller.

He said that is an increase of 23 percent over the same quarter last year.

Checks totaling $4.4 million have been mailed to 198 counties and 335 cities for their share of the tax, he said. The balance—about $11 million—was deposited in the general revenue fund, he said.

The City of Houston received the largest check—$606,628. Dallas was rebated $388,420, and Fort Worth will get $91,965.

South Plains counties that received rebates include Andrews, $632; Castro, $411; Cochran, $86; Cottle, $86; Crosby, $46; Dawson, $240; Deaf Smith, $883; Ector, $28,703; Floyd, $254; Hale, $4,684; Hall, $204; Hockley, $1,187; Howard, $3,716; Lamb, $1,166; Midland, $20,278; Mitchell, $294; Scurry, $1,806, and Terry, $2,004.

Rebates for South Plains cities include Andrews, $632; Dimmitt, $128; Nazareth, $128; Hereford, $723; Odessa, $22,790; Plainview, $3,104; Memphis, $204; Levelland, $766; Big Spring, $3,298; Littlefield, $833; Slaton, $134; Midland, $18,158; Colorado City, $253; Snyder, $1,593, and Brownfield, $1,522.

New Garden Product Battles Fruit Bugs

By ALLAN AND SHELIA SWENSON
NEA GARDEN COLUMNISTS

Bugs enjoy tasty fruit as much as people do. If they begin bugging you and your fruit trees and bushes, it pays to be prepared to do battle with them. Fruit growing does require more attention to pest control than does vegetable growing.

Fortunately, home gardeners now have another useful weapon introduced this year to battle bugs. Insects that attack fruit plants in your garden are the same as those that raid commercial orchards and berry farms. In the past, effective insecticides like malathion and Sevin provide good control of harmful insects, along with other multipurpose pesticides. This year, a new product has been introduced for home garden fruit insect control, based on its proved success in commercial orchards for many years.

Called Imidan, this insecticide is now being packaged by a wide variety of pesticide manufacturers. It is a modern insecticide that is tough on major insect pests of apples, pears, peaches and other stonefruits. It also is biodegradable. Once it's work is done, it decomposes, so it poses no threat to the environment.

Before a new product is approved for commercial for home garden use, it must past extensive evaluation tests for its effectiveness and safety. New products must not only do the job intended today, they must be kind to the environment, unlike to the environment, unlike DDT and other chemicals used in years past.

Codling moth, apple aphid, peach twig borer, Oriental fruit moth and other insects must be stopped before they invade home fruit plantings. These are just some of the destructive insects that may attack from time to time when weather conditions are right. Plant diseases too; brown rot, scab, powdery mildew and others can infect fruit trees and fruit itself when warm, moist weather favors their growth. To control these problems, fungicides are practical and effective.

Local garden centers provide a variety of reliable pesticides. Some are premixed to control a wide range of pests. Imidan, approved this year for homeowner use, has a distinct pest-fighting advantage. After it controls the insects, it disappears from foliage, crops and soil. Mixed with a reliable fungicide like Captan to control plant diseases, the combination helps ensure clean fruit, free from insect or disease damage.

County agricultural agents in every county across the United States can provide guidelines and time tables for proper pest control in fruit gardens. You cna obtain these recommendations free of charge, designed for your specific area. These recommendations are based on test results at state agricultural experiment stations which verify the value of various pesticides.

Local garden centers too, can suggest the latest, best spray schedules that will assure you blemish-free, tasty, fruit from your home fruit planting.

Scientists Find Disease Linked To Excavations

ATLANTA (AP) — Scientists are trying to find a connection between the organism that causes Legionnaires' Disease and construction excavations, the chief of the special pathogens branch at the national Center for Disease Control said today.

But Dr. David Fraser said discovery of the connection between construction and outbreaks of the disease will require extensive controls and comparisons between cases.

"Several areas affected had excavation going on in a significant time period, but then there has been construction in many other areas not affected," he said. "This is where persistence on the part of researchers becomes essential."

He made the remarks in a speech prepared for the annual meeting of the Georgia Lung Association.

Fraser said researchers believe the organism is transmitted by air. "Although there is not what I consider positive evidence of airborne spread, the implication is there," he said.

"It is not spread from person to person, there is no identifiable common source of food, water, or object that those who got sick were exposed to and others were not," he said.

In one outbreak, Fraser said, "those downwind of an excavation project or sleeping under windows were affected."

Using serum banks from past outbreaks of unexplained diseases, CDC researchers have identified the Legionnaires' bacterium as the cause of an epidemic in Washington, D.C., in 1965.

Cases of the pneumonia-like disease have been reported in 37 states, and Spain and England have reclassified past "unknown disease" outbreaks as Legionnaires' Disease, Fraser said.

British Government Eyeing Tram Return

LONDON (AP) — The British government is looking into the possibility of reviving electrically powered, no-fumes streetcars and trolley cars to replace its famous, bright red double-decker buses.

But the Royal Automobile Club denounced the idea Friday as certain to "put road safety in jeopardy."

"If the government brought back trams in our already over-congested cities and towns, there would be absolute chaos," the club said. "When we used to have trams all over the country, cyclists and other road users frequently got caught in tracks and injured themselves."

Candidate Asserts Voters Undecided On Race

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Fike Godfrey of Abilene, one of seven Democratic candidates in the 17th Congressional District race this spring, said Friday in Lubbock that a poll of his early this month showed a majority of the voters still undecided in the election.

"There are a lot still uncommitted," he said, adding that his poll showed 53 percent undecided week before last. "A lot may still be undecided as they go into the voting booth. I think it's been an unusual race in that respect."

And Godfrey said the voters evidently have had a hard time distinguishing among them.

He criticized Rhodes and Stenholm, who he thinks are his leading opponents, by saying neither is as conservative as they have portrayed themselves.

He was particularly critical of Rhodes, an Abilene attorney, for the National Education Association endorsacent he got this week.

"He was the only candidate in the race who answered 'yes' to all their legislative demands," Godfrey said.

He also was critical of them for Rhodes spending an expected $292,000 in the race and for Stenholm spending an expected $143,000 in the primary campaign.

FIKE GODFREY

"We made the statement when we announced that we thought it would be ridiculous to spend $100,000 on a congressional race, that we didn't feel that was in the American Democratic spirit," the former longtime director of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce said.

"I think we should take sealed bids if that's what we're going to do, and I think the voters feel that way.

"If a candidate is going to throw his money around down here, I think you could expect him to do the same when he got to Congress."

Godfrey said his campaign will cost about $55,000 and that he could have raised much more "if we wanted to get real vicious about it."

He added that Rhodes "has a lot of people wondering why a man would spend that much money to get a $57,000-a-year job."

Godfrey fully expects the race to go into a run-off and hopes to be in it.

"We feel like we're the only people in the race who have still got momentum going," he said. "I think we have an outside chance if we keep it going."

He has walked the streets asking votes on most of the 96 towns and cities in vhe district, he said, handing out more than 10,000 pieces of campaign literature in the past four weeks.

"With seven people in the race," he said, "it's still very fluid."

Burkhalter Eases Into Two AA Track Finals

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Like fine wine—no, J.R., that doesn't include Ripple or Mad Dog 20-20— Bobby Burkhalter just seems to get better every year.

Take this year, for instance, and Friday in particular.

The Denver City senior qualified for the finals of the Region I-AA in two events, the 220 and 440, while also leading all participants in politeness—a rare commodity these days.

"Yessir, I think I have a solid chance of winning both events," the slender speedster said, following his 21.8 time in the 220. "I worked hard today, but I really wasn't pushed. That will come tomorrow."

Along with registering the fastest time in the 220, Burkhalter, currently the fastest quartermiler in the state with a personal best of 47.9, also waltzed to a 48.8 in his specialty — the quartermile.

Burkhalter said he really wasn't worried about winning the quarter, it is the 220 that might cause a grey hair or two before today's finals.

"I'll only have about ten minutes between races and that really isn't a lot of time," he said still huffin' and puffin' as he accepted congratulations from coaches and wellwishers.

The meet resumes today starting at 9:30 a.m. with the Class AA discus, followed at 11 a.m. with the Class AAAA shot put, high jump, pole vaultd AA long jump.

The running finals unfold at 1:30 p.m., starting with the sprint relay.

In other area Regional Meets, the Class AAA event gets underway at 9:30 a.m. in Odessa, while the Class B continues in Levelland at South Plains College. The Class A meet is also being held in Odessa.

Burkhalter, seeking his third journey to the state meet in Austin — only the top two finishers in each event qualify for the Capital City trek , believes his improvement in the blocks has helped him develop into one of the state's top tracksters.

"I've worked hard on my starts this year," he said. "I think that's why I've run so well. It really makes a lot of difference."

TWC Robs Texoma Title From Chaps In Opener

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Texas Wesleyan entered its four-game series with Lubbock Christian College hoping to win once. And the Rams accomplished that goal in a hurry, scoring 10 runs over the final three frames of Friday's opener and then holding off the Chaps 12-9 to capture their first—and last —Texoma Conference title.

And coach Frank Fultz showed his pleasure at winning the championship in his first year at the helm — and the last for the conference — and he gave first baseman Larry Zerante, the team's leading hitter, RBI and home run man, shortstop Keith Spreckles, the nation's leading base thief, and second baseman Billy Schell, the leadoff man and a .328 hitter, a rest in the nightcap.

Without that trio, LCC pounded Byron Thornton 13-1, scoring 10 times in the sixth frame to break open the lackluster contest.

The opener was a wild one, but afterwards Chap mentor Larry Hays admitted, "That's the worst our pitchers have looked all year." And none of the 400 Chaparral faithful on hand would disagree with that statement.

LCC moundsmen were touched for 12 hits, but issued a like amount of walks and uncorked six wild pitches, including four by Bob McNicol in 1 1/3 innings.

Oscar Acotsa suffered the loss, his third in four decisions after getting off to a 9-0 start. The split left LCC, ranked No. 7 in the nation, with a 41-17 mark going into today's 1 p.m. twin bill, which will be preceeded by dedication ceremonies for Chaparral Stadium.

Since TWC took the pressure off, Ram ace Jon Henke (9-0) will try to nurse an injured foot back to health for the District VIII Tournament in Arlington May 7-10 and will not throw today.

The Rams, now 44-21-2 and ranked No. 12 in the nation, got three hits from Carlos Cuervo and three more from Spreckles—all doubles including two ground-rule shots to right center—and that duo accounted for five RBIs.

Schell set the tone for the day when he ripped Acosta's first offering of the opener 380 feet over the right center wall.

LCC came back to grab a 3-2 lead on Dick Battle's first homer of the year, a shot over the 400-foot barrier in center in the third. But Wesleyan scored three times in the fifth and Tim Leslie's double and Steve Brigante's single knotted it after five. But the Rams tallied four times in the sixth with Cuervo and Spreckles doubling in runs, a wild pitch getting in another and Jim Ludka's sacrifice fly scoring the other.

Glenn Wilken's ninth homer narrowed the gap to 9-7 entering the seventh, but TWC struck for three runs on an error, Spreckles' third double and Chris Phillips' sacrifice fly and reliever Mike Childers weathered Brigante's RBI double and Clark Langdon's RBI single in the last of the frame to record his fifth save of the year.

The nightcap saw TWC break on top 1-0 in the third as Ludka doubled and scored when Gary Swann, who used only 73 pitches in tossing a three-hitter threw wild trying to get Cuervo at first for the third out.

But the Chaps came back in the bottom of the frame as two walks, a fielder's choice and Brigante's double gave LCC a 2-1 pad. Mark Lisle ripped his sixth homer of the year, a 320-foot shot down the right field line, with two out in the fifth.

Then the roof caved in on Thornton, last week's Pitcher of the Week in the Conference, in the sixth.

Kenny Toney led off with a single and Wilken beat out a hit off Gary Shippy's glove at third. Thornton then threw wild to third as Brady Brashear bunted and the bases were loaded. Pinch-hitter Bobby Doe singled to left center for two runs. Tommy Inman then blasted his 13th homer of the year, well over the 360 mark in right, making it 8-1.

Texas Drubs Raiders

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Okay, it was just one game. Maybe it was a trend-setter, perhaps not. Whatever, it had to make Cliff Gustafson feel a bit better.

Gustafson, who had expected his Texas team to be at least reasonably strong at the plate this season, has instead watched it slump to a .220 mark in conference play —worst in the league—and fifth place in the SWC.

But the Longhorns exhibited a sudden reversal of form Friday, rapping 18 hits —seven of them for extra bases—and pounding Texas Tech 14-4 in the opener of a regular-season-ending three-game series.

The clubs will battle in a doubleheader today, beginning at 1 p.m. at the Tech diamond.

"We looked good at the plate today," Gustafson admitted. "That's the best we've hit in a game in a long time. We were making good contact and hitting with power."

The hitting explosion and resulting victory kept the Longhorns' slim hopes for a berth in the SWC Post-Season Tournament alive. UT is 11-11 in league play, while fourth-place Baylor is 13-9 after a 14-8 win over TCU Friday.

Texas' only hope is that it can win two games today and that Baylor drops two. That would tie the teams for fourth place. In that event, a coin flip would decide which club gets the final spot in the four-team tournament.

Texas began quickly Friday, scoring two runs in the first inning, another in the second and then pulling away with six fourth-inning runs.

A walk and a stolen base by fleet left-fielder Joe Bruno and a single by first baseman Terry Salazar got UT on the board in the first frame. Designated hitter Dan Moody then doubled, and Salazar scored on the play when Tech first baseman Craig Noonan misplayed the throw-in from left field.

In the second inning, UT second baseman Andre Robertson—a 4-5 hitter in the game—singled and went to third when catcher Kevin Shannon reached base on a two-base throwin fielding error by Tech third baseman Rusty Laughlin.

Tech, meanwhile, was hitting Longhorn ace Keith Creel (12-1) hard. Creel allowed 11 hits in his five innings, but the Raiders didn't fully capitalize on them.

Randy Newton tripled to the right-field barrier in the first inning to score Johnny Vestal, and Laughlin ripped an RBI-single in the second to drive in Brooks Wallace. However, John Keller was thrown out at the plate on the play to end the inning.

Robertson and Shannon began the fourth inning with a triple and a walk, respectively, to chase Bryant in favor of David Bolton, who was quite ineffective.

Bolton allowed run-scoring singles to Burt Bu Burrows, Chris Raper and Salazar and a walk to Moody before Chuck Johnson relieved him. Johnson gave up a sacrifice fly to Scott Soden that scored Raper, an RBI-single to Chelette and a run-scoring double to Robertson before getting out of the inning.

Tech made the score 9-4 in the bottom of the inning when Keller hit a leadoff home run to the right of the scoreboard in left-centerfield and Vestal hit a sacrifice fly to score catcher Scott Leimgruber.

But the hosts could do no more damage, getting just three hits the rest of the game. UT reliever Hollis Weirusheske pitched the last four innings and allowed just three baserunners.

McCovey Lifts SF Past Bucs

By The Associated Press

Willie McCovey's bases-clearing double in the ninth inning lifted the San Francisco Giants to a 5-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Friday night.

The Pirates, who had won five in a row, led 3-2 entering the ninth. But with one out, John Candelaria, 1-3, walked Bill Madlock, Darrell Evans and Jack Clark to fill the bases. The 40-year-old McCovey followed with an opposite-field double down the left-field line that was fair by a foot.

Madlock and Clark had solo homers for the Giants while Dave Parker hit a 2-run homer and an RBI single for the Pirates.

In other National League games, right fielder Jerry Martin hit a 3-run homer and threw out a runner at the plate to lead the Philadelphia Phillies over the San Diego Padres 3-2.

Fred Norman and Manny Sarmiento combined on a three-hitter and George Foster and Dave Concepcion hit solo home runs Friday night as the Cincinnati Reds dealt the New York Mets their fifth straight loss 5-1. Pete Rose collected two hits, climbing within nine of the 3,000 career mark.

Tony Perez delivered a 2-run double and the Montreal Expos scored twice on a pair of controversial run-scoring balks by Houston reliever Tom Dixon in defeating the Astros 6-2.

Dusty Baker hit a homer and a 2-run double to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 7-1 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Heity Cruz hit his first two home runs of the season and pinch-hitter Larry Bittner singled home the winning run with two out in the 10th inning to give the Chicago Cubs a 4-3 triumph over the Atlanta Braves.

In the American League, Richie Zisk drove in 4 runs with a 2-run single in the sixth inning and a 2-run homer in the 11th as the Texas Rangers defeated the Boston Red Sox 5-4. Zisk has seven homers and 19 RBI for the season.

New York's Ed Figueroa fired a five-hitter to beat the Minnesota Twins 3-1 as the World Champion Yankees climbed above the .500 mark for the first time this season. New York, winner of three straight, is now 9-8.

Kansas City rallied for three runs in the eighth inning, the game-winner scoring on Pete LaCock's sacrifice fly, to beat the Milwaukee Brewers 7-6.

Eddie Murray's grand slam homer capped a 5-run eighth inning rally which helped Baltimore to a 6-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox and halted the Orioles' four-game losing streak.

AAA Region Meet Set

ODESSA (Special) — Lubbock Dunbar's Billy Don Hardaway will be shooting for his third consecutive trip to the state meet in Austin when the Region I-AAA track meet gets under way today at 9:30 a.m.

Hardaway, who placed second in the discus at the state meet as a junior, has posted a 173-11 this year, making him one of the favorites.

The meet has attracted Districts 1-3-AAA.

Since there are only six individuals competing in each event, no prelims were run Friday.

The running finals are set for 2:30 p.m. in Barrett Stadium for both Class A and AAA.

Hardaway will also bid for one of the two top finishes in the shot put. The 6-6 DHS senior has tossed the shot 55-10½ this year.

Other top individuals from Lubbock include Estacado's Michael Sims in the 100 and 220-yard dashes, Matador Rufus Connors in the 120 hurdles and Kenzie Burrell in the 220.

Estacado's sprint relay (41.9), anchored by Sims, and Dunbar's mile relay squad (3:23.0) are also expected to make strong bids.

In action Friday, Jimmy McIntyre of New Deal tossed the shot 53-10 to win the Class A event. McIntyre was the only South Plains tracksters placing in the top two.

Monterey, LHS Fight For Lead

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Two is the magic number today for both Monterey and Lubbock High baseball teams as they meet for District 4-AAAA supremacy in Mackenzie Park at 1 p.m.

In another district doubleheader, Coronado hosts Hereford on the CHS campus field at 1 p.m. But most of the league title ideas float around Mackenzie this afternoon.

The Plainsmen, 22-4 and winners of 13 straight games, can clinch their 17th playoff berth in 19 years under coach Bobby Moegle with a sweep against the Westerners.

Monterey, the outright first-half champ, stands 4-0 in the second half. Lubbock High, the only pursuer with a Chinaman's chance, follows at 2-0 while the other three teams in the league own at least two second-half defeats.

While two wins would send Monterey travelling again this May, a Westerner sweep would dangle several possible post-season plums before the eyes of Lubbock coach Vince Buffamonte.

The last man to stop Moegle from district dynasty doings, Buffamonte realizes a split of today's twin bill might not suffice.

"We can win one game and still be in it but I think Plainview's chances of winning against Monterey would be 1,000-to-1 next week," Buffamonte said.

Plainview ends Monterey's regular season at Lowrey Field Tuesday. Since MHS claimed all the first-half marbles, a second-half co-championship wouldn't help Buffamonte's playoff hopes.

In the first meeting between the schools, Monterey grabbed 8-0 and 10-1 triumphs though each game seemed close than the score indicated. In the opener, MHS led 2-0 until it erupted for 6 runs in the sixth inning. Monterey led 2-1 after four innings of the nightcap before scoring 5 times in the fifth and 3 in the sixth.The LHS coach feels his team can change that trend this time.

"I don't believe we'll have two games like we had at Lowrey, We didn't play too well and we've played real well, lately... better than I expected they could play," Buffamonte said.

The Lubbock coach will start senior righthander Abel Cardenas in the first game. Either junior David Rush or soph Andy Vasquez will pitch in the second one. Monterey counters with Ron Reeves and Derek Hatfield, though Reeves has missed his last two outings because of a pulled muscle in his throwing arm.

"He (Reeves) threw well yesterday at Lowrey Field when we worked out. I think he's well. He's pitching without any pain," Moegle said Friday. "For 15 minutes, he's full speed. That's as far as we've gone with him, though."

Meanwhile at the CHS field, Mustang coach John Dudley figures to start pitchers Gene Segrest and Russell Johnson "but not necessarily in that order" against the Herd.

West Texas Grabs Wayland Title

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

PLAINVIEW — About midway of the running events at the Wayland Baptist College-sponsored All-College Track Meet Friday, the PA man developed a decided stammer.

He kept hanging on the words West Texas State.

They tumbled from his mike and over the loud speaker regularly until he had brought the team totals to a championship halt.

Every time he would say the words, coach Bob Kitchens could click his portable computer, and the point totals would increase. When WT zipped across the finish first in the 1600-meter relay, the Buffs had amassed 216 points, almost enough to beat the combined total of runner-up Tech and host WBC which finished third. Tecy had 138 2/3 points, WBC 90 1/3.

Tech had grabbed a lead in the field events, but slowly, WT climbed. Even a dropped baton in the sprint relay where it was favored failed to slow the point accumulation much. But midway of the meet is where the race turned into a runaway. First, the Buffs went 1-4 in the high hurdles, then 1-2-3 in the quarter... Then 2-3-4 in the 100 meters... Then 1-2-3 in the 800 meters... Then, if that weren't enough, 1-2 in the 400 hurdles and 2-3-4 in the 200 meters. And 1-2 in the pole vault for good measure.

"It was our best effort," said Kitchens, after the powerful display was completed. "Now, we can rest and get ready for the (Missouri Valley) Conference meet (May 19-20)."

"West Texas did a heck of a job," admitted Tech coach Corky Oglesby. "I felt we did about as well as we could. Bobby Moeck (shot) had his best throw ever. And Greg (Lautenslager) had a great race in the 1500 meters. And who'd have thought (Robert) Lepard would run 1:52.2 and get fourth in the half?

The shocker of the program came in the 1500 meters, however, where Lautenslager overtook WT's all-America Joseph Kemei to win the 1500 meters.

The field of six broke into a sprint at the opening gun and came through the first quarter in 58 seconds.

But, with two laps to go Kemei grabbed the lead. On the final lap, Lautenslager began his drive on the backstraight, and as the two came off the final curve, the Tech sophomore went the outside and passed him on the curve. Kemei tried to regain the lead, but Lautenslater maintained his kick and won by 5 yards.

"It's taken me two years," said Lautenslager, who didn't even place in a meet at El Paso last week. "I felt I could beat him with my kick if I could catch him."

Lubbock Christian's Kim Mibey strided through to victory in the 3,000-meter steeplechase. The Chaparral was never pushed, and only when Wayland's Darry Reimer kicked in the final straightaway did the race tighten.

WBC won the sprint relay as Nigerian Chuk Abigide outdueled Raider sprinter-footballer Billy Taylor over the first 110 yards. WT dropped the stick on the second exchange.

Aggies Trip Hogs, Take SWC Lead

By The Associated Press

Texas A&M turned three Arkansas errors into four runs and beat the Razorbacks 6-1 Friday to take a one game lead in the Southwest Conference baseball race.

The Razorbacks got off to a 1-0 lead when Shaun Lacey cracked a home run in the bottom of the fourth inning against Aggie starter Mark Ross.

However, Arkansas' defense collapsed in the fifth.

Tim Feikert opened the Aggie fifth with a base hit and Buster Turner laid down a bunt, attempting to sacrifice. Razorback pitcher David Rhodes fielded the bunt and threw wildly to first, allowing Feikert to reach third.

Randy Woodruff then attempted a squeeze bunt and Rhodes threw home in time to get Feikert, but catcher Jeff Hemm dropped the ball.

Robert Bonner snapped the tie with a run-scoring single to right. First baseman Ed Wallace cut off the throw from the outfield and then threw wildly to the plate, allowing Woodruff and Bonner to take an extra base.

BAYLOR 14, TCU 8

Baylor slammed four home runs, including a grand slam by left-fielder Mike Johanson, to beat Texas Christian 14-8.

Fritz Conally, Manuel Ordones and Bill Crosby all homered for the Bears. John Perlman took the win in relief of Shane Nolen.

Ruben Tomlin took the loss for the Horned Frogs as TCU slipped to 17-27-1 for the season and 7-5 in the SWC. Baylor upped its record to 24-17-2 for the season and 13-9 in conference play, keeping SWC tournament hopes alive.

The Bears must win only one game of today's doubleheader to make the SWC tournament with a fourth place finish.

Burkhalter Qualifies

Owens, another one of the state's premier cindermen, anchored the Killeen sprint relay team which posted a record-setting 40.9 (the time bettered the state-leading 41.0 held by West Orange-Stark).

And that was just for warmups.

Owens then led all qualifers in the 100 (9.6) and the 220 (21.7). He has run a 9.4 and 21.0 in the races this season.

The Kangaroos also easily qualified their mile relay team for the finals with a 3:18.8, almost three full seconds faster than second-place finisher Midland Lee. Temple, a team which is supposed to challenge Killeen, was in the slow heat, running a 3:23.1.

Buck, the PD hurdling ace, captured the long jump, leaping 22-4¾, as well as garnering final spots in the 120-yard hurdles and 330-yard hurdles. Buck and Rick Thomas of Amarillo Tascosa lead the qualifers in the 330s with identical 38.3s.

Hawthorne was the only performer of the day able to tie or break a meet mark. He leaped 6-5¼ to match the high jump mark set by Buddy Ward of Crane in 1970.

The 1,500 or so fans spectating were also treated to a barrage of gunfire unmatched since the Vietnam War, as runner after runner jumped the gun. In the 120-yard hurdles alone, there were six false starts.

EP Coronado Wins; Northcutt Advances

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

As the El Paso Coronado and Odessa Permian golfers watched San Angelo Central blow a seven-stroke lead in the Region I, AAAA golf race at the Meadowbrook Country Club Friday, they begin to get a few ideas of their own.

And when the last golfer had completed the course Coronado was the new regional champion with a two-day total of 615. The T-Birds, paced by Craig Hyatt in the first round and Dave Hughes the second, shot a 305 Friday after finishing Thursday in fourth place with a 310.

Permian had the day's low score with a 302, which also gave them a 615 total and sent them into a sudden death playoff that Coronado won. Both teams will now advance to the state meet.

Meanwhile Central saw their seemingly invincible lead disappear when they closed out the day with a 315, for a two-day total of 616. Monterey also blew their second place position the Plainsmen had owned Friday morning.

However Bruce Northcutt was a bright spot for the Plainsmen winning second place individual honors and advancing to the state meet.

Actually Northcutt's two day 148 score was tied for second with Hereford's Kelly Kitchens. The Hereford senior had shot a dismal 80 in the opening round but turned in the tournament's lowest score Friday, a 68, to pull even with Northcutt.

The sudden-death playoff between Northcutt and Kitchens didn't last long though. Northcutt birdied the first hole while Kitchens shot an even par.

Mike Orren of Abilene Cooper was the first place medalist in the AAAA division with a 69-77-146.

In the AA division Friday, Kermit shot five strokes worse than the Yellowjackets did on Thursday but by that time it was meaningless. Kermit won the AA championship with a 625 score, 14 strokes better than second place Seymour's 641.

Winters, which had been tied for second with Seymour, at the end of the first round turned in a 325 for a total of 644 to wind up the tournament in third place.

Nonetheless Winters boasted the first place medalist in the AA division in Andy Barron. But Barron, who had a two Slaton's Mike White to claim the medalist honors.

Barron fired a 72 Thursday and a 76 Friday—for White it was just the opposite. He turned in a par 72 yesterday after an earlier 76 to end up even with Barron.

But the Seymour golfer took the first place honors with a sudden death playoff victory and both are now preparing for state competition.

Slaton finished well back in the team scores with a 667, Idalou also turned in a 667. But for the Wildcats it was a disappointing finish.

Idalou carded a 323 the first day and were only four points in back of Winters and Seymour in second place. But the Cats final round 344 ended any hopes of advancing to the state meet.

LCHS Rips Bulldogs

Gary Linn and Tim Perrin put on a two-man show as Lubbock Christian High School swept a doubleheader from Plainview 12-6 and 20-16 Friday at the LCHS field.

In the first game Linn blasted two home runs while Perrin went the distance on the mound for the win. In the nightcap Linn was the winning pitcher while he and Perrin both were three for four at the plate.

Coronado Duo Gains Trek To State Meet

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

An exuberant Robert Davis smiled, looked up in the sky and tried to explain an ordinary tennis shot which decided his travel plans for the May 12-13 weekend.

Davis, a Coronado senior, would journey with doubles partner Dale Anderson to the state meet thanks, largely in part, to this one ordinary shot which toppled over the net at a very extraordinary time.

"It just kinda nicked the tape a little bit," he said as he held his thumb and index finger about an inch apart, "It was a dream shot."

Davis punched a baseline forehand that cleared the net by an eyelash on the most crucial of points. Odessa Permian's second-seeded team of Mike Madden and Steve Ashley had won the first set 6-4 and the match had boiled down to the final point of a nine-point tiebreaker with games at six apiece in the second set.

"Ashley had hit a pretty good return on the point and I just got a good forehand down the middle," Davis said.

With that point, the Mustang netters had forced a third set in the class AAAA regional semifinals match. The pair also had escaped their third match point of the game. From then on, the Coronado duo seemed to gain momentum while the Odessans seemed to lose theirs and the Davis-Anderson team took the third set 6-1.

The victory lifted the unseeded CHS team into this morning's finals against Midland High's top-seeded team of Kirk Farquhar and Joe Love. All final matches in class AAAA and AA are set for Lubbock's Tennis Center (66th & Gary) at 10 a.m.

Davis and Anderson's thrilling comeback provided the only three-set semifinal match of any kind, AA or AAAA, singles or doubles. The remainder of the state meet bids were settled in quick dispatch and most of the semifinals revealed the region's coaches had done themselves a favor by meeting to seed the top players Thursday night.

Top seeds Jeff Bramlett of Midland High and Wayne Oppenheim of El Paso Eastwood meet for the fifth time ever in the AAAA singles finale. Top-rated Scott Haggard and Casey Karlik of Kermit battle second-ranked Clint Oden and Donald Minor of Morton in the AA doubles title. Lockney's top-seeded Howard Moore reached the AA singles final but second seed, Raymie Holly of Post, bowed to Morton's Joe Bob Wynn in the semis, 7-6, 6-1.

Bramlett and Oppenheim have played each other four times before today with the El Pasoan winning three of the meetings. Yet several of Bramlett's victims have handled Oppenheim in various matches.

"I guess I'm a little more consistent than he is," Bramlett said. "Sometimes he can't miss and other times he just blows it off, I guess."

The Midland High star figures two primary obstacles stand in his path today — a mean Oppenheim backhand and an unfavorable biorhythm chart.

"My biorhythm chart said I physically wasn't going to be sharp and that I was supposed to be in a slump. My dad had it hidden in his office and I was just messing around and I saw it. I looked at the arrow and it was going to straight down. I'll try to ignore it, though," he said.

"The wind never did bother me pretty much. It's never like this in Waco. I don't want to be making any excuses because Jeff's a great player," Gordon said.

Longshot Takes Lead

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — South African Gary Player, grimly seeking a fourth consecutive victory, fashioned a 5-under-par 67 that left him 3 strokes back of longshot leader D.A. Weibring in Friday's second round of the $200,000 New Orleans Open Golf Tournament.

"I'm can't say I'm even thinking about winning," said the bright, fresh-faced Weibring, a 24-year-old rookie whose 8-under-par 64 ranked as his best round as a pro.

Weibring, fighting to retain his playing rights, looked over his shoulder at the menacing figures of Player and Lee Trevino, then grinned and commented: "There's no way in the world you can say I'm favored. Let's just say I'm honored to be in such company."

His spectacular score, which matched the record on the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course, produced a 36-hole total of 133, 11 under par.

Player, 42 and playing the most spectacular golf of his career, could have been closer than his 136 total.

"I'm happy with a 67, certainly," said Player, the comeback winner of the Masters, Tournament of Champions and Houston Open in his last three starts and now seeking to become the first man in 26 years to win four consecutive titles. "I'm quite charged up. I know what I have to do to win. I have to take advantage of my opportunities and I really didn't do that today."

He said he failed on birdie chances on the 11th and 12th holes, missed a 10-foot eagle putt on the 15th, a five-foot birdie putt on the next hole and a four-foot par-saving putt on the next. "With a little better putting, I would have shot 63," Player said.

Pat McGowan, another rookie, trailed Weibring by a single shot at 134 after a 66 in the ideal playing conditions — warm, sunny weather with just the hint of a breeze stirring the moss dripping from the ancient oak and cypress that dot the course.

Trevino, the first-round pace-setter, was next at 135. He shot a 70 that, he said, "is like losing 2 shots to par. It was just one of those days when nothing happened. I played pretty well, didn't make a bogey, but just didn't get it close to the hole."

He was tied with Fuzzy Zoeller and Mike Shea, each of whom shot 63.

Player, who started the day in a tie for 18th and moved past 12 men, was tied at 136 with Phil Hancock, who had a 68.

Of the first seven players at the tournament's halfway point, only Player and Trevino have ever won.

Weibring, who must win $1,200 in the next six weeks to retain his tour playing rights, said his putting improved enormously today after he'd added some lead tape to the heel of his putter. "I'm sure it's all mental, but the putter felt good in my hands. I was very confident."

He dropped three putts in the 12-15 foot range to make the turn in 33 and got wedge shots to within 4 feet for birdies on the 11th and 12th.

Sandies Nab Title

AMARILLO (Special) — Amarillo High's baseball team clinched its third straight District 3-AAAA title Friday by defeating Tascosa 7-3.

The win gave the Sandies, the first-half champs, at least a share of the second half title. Amarillo ends its regular season Monday in a single game at Pampa.

Amarillo High also gets its third straight bidistrict playoff berth. The Sandies lost to Lubbock High in 1976 and beat Monterey two of three games last May. The Sandies were eliminated in the quarter-finals last year by Fort Worth Southwest.

Australians Head 'Legends' Play

AUSTIN (AP) — Australians Kel Nagle and Peter Thompson, calling upon the skills that twice propelled them to World Cup titles, closed with three birdies Friday to fire a six-under-par 64 and grab the first-round lead in the 54-hole $400,000 Legends of Golf Tournament.

Nagle and Thomson owned a one-shot lead over Americans Gardner Dickinson and Sam Snead, who shot 65 on the windswept par 70 Onion Creek Club course.

The 58-yard-old Nagle sank putts of six and four feet for birdies on the final two holes after the 50-year-old Thomson had canned an eight-footer for birdie on the 16th hole.

"We certainly haven't forgotten how to play tournament golf," said Thomson after the Aussies posted six birdies against no bogies over the friendly 6,594-yard layout carved out of the Texas hill country.

Nagle and Thomson won the World Cup together in 1954 and 1959, defeating Snead and Cary Middlecoff in the latter tournament by 10 strokes. Nagle won the World Seniors title in 1974 and 1975 and Thomson is a five-time winner of the British Open.

"We played very well and were never in trouble," said Thomson. "Kel played very well. He was three-under par on his own ball."

The best ball of each player is used in this unique tournament which has a $100,000 first-place prize.

Thomson sank birdie putts of 10 feet and 8 feet on the front nine as the Aussie duo turned in 33 and charged back with 31 on the backside.

Snead and Dickinson put together nines of 34-31, with Dickinson sinking a three-footer for birdie on the 590-yard par 5 finishing hole.

"We could have had a 61 or 62 if we had made some little putts," said Snead, who had four of the birdies. The duo was victimized by a lone bogey on the 420-yard No. 4 when both missed short putts.

Krueger Wants More Exports Of Farm Products

By KETH HENLEY
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

U. S. Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Tex., issued an agriculture position paper here Friday which calls for greater exports of U. S. farm products, along with higher farm prices and loan rates.

Krueger, U. S. Senate candidate in the Democratic primary, spoke at a press conference the Macon James farm northwest of Lubbock.

He predicted that new farm legislation, which will be considered by the House and Senate next week, will be approved and signed by President Carter.

"The new bill is not a sliding parity measure," Krueger noted, referring to an emergency measure that recently was defeated in the House. "It is within the confines of existing legislation."

Krueger co-sponsored the flexible parity section of the emergency farm bill which would have increased target prices for commodities according to the amount of acreage farmers voluntarily set aside from production.

The 21st District representative from New Braunfels said he is committed to passing farm legislation during the current session which will "aid and protect American farmers so that they are able to continue their tremendous contributions to this state and nation."

In the position paper, Krueger said:

"The case for higher prices is a persuasive one. Additional credit may keep farmers in business on a short-term basis but only increased prices can solve the long-range problems farmers face."

Krueger noted that he also has introduced legislation which would require that foreign meat be subject to the same inspection and labeling standards as domestic meat. He said the cost would be shouldered by the foreign producers.

"I don't think we can cut off beef imports but we can expect them to meet the same inspection standards," he said.

He said reform of European Community policies of variable levies and export subsidies are "crucial" if current practices, "too unfair to our farmers," are to be corrected.

"In a supply and demand economy, the only way to increase prices is to reduce supply or expand demand," said Krueger. "The demands of a hungry world are real and our export policies must be brought into line with the realities of present day international economics."

After the Lubbock meeting, Krueger continued his campaign swing through West Texas to Odessa and El Paso.

He is opposed in the May 6 Democratic primary by Joe Christie of El Paso, former chairman of the State Board of Insurance.

Farm Product Prices Climb In April

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices that farmers receive for raw products entering consumer marketing channels rose an additional 4 percent in April, the seventh consecutive monthly increase, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said that higher prices for cattle, soybeans, corn, broilers, wheat, tomatoes and lettuce contributed most to the increase. Lower prices were reported for hogs, oranges and eggs, however, which partly offset the gains for other commodities.

Before starting their seven-month climb last October, farm prices as a group had dropped for four months. Since September, the farm price index has gone up more than 19 percent.

For example, the farm price of wheat in April was reported at a preliminary price of $2.83 a bushel against $2.16 last September.

According to preliminary figrues for April, farm prices overall were also up 9 percent from a year ago. Farm expenses, meanwhile, rose 1 percent from March and were 6 percent above April of last year.

Although government analysts do not view farm prices as sensitive indicators of retail price trends from one month to the next, farm prices do have an impact when increases are as sustained as they have been.

Department experts forecast that retail food prices overall will average 6 to 8 percent higher this year, compared with a 6.2 percent gain in 1977.

Until recently, the USDA forecast a 1978 increase of 4 to 6 percent but revised its estimate after some major commodities jumped sharply in the first quarter of the year.

Earlier Friday, the Labor Depratement said that retail food prices rose 1.3 percent in March, including a 2.6 percent gain for beef and 2.9 percent for pork.

Richard A. McDougal, president of the National Cattlemen's Association, said retail beef prices have continued to rise sharply and that Labor's report next month for April will show another gain.

The USDA report said prices of meat animals as a group were up 4 percent in April and averaged 32 percent above a year ago.

Vegetable prices jumped 24 percent from March, including higher prices for tomatoes, lettuce, cucumbers, onions and green peppers. Prices were up 23 percent from a year ago.

The April parity ratio was 71 percent against 69 in March and 69 a year ago.

At 100 percent, the parity ratio theoretically would give farmers the same buying power they had in 1910-14. For example, the April parity price for wheat was $5.21 a bushel, but farmers received $2.83 a bushel. That translated into a wheat price of 54 percent of parity.

Exchange Cattle Futures Surge

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures rose 40 to 117 points, led by August, in another active trade of 23,213 cars Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

All contracts were lifted to new season's highs except for distant August, which equalled the high. Nearby June rose to 53.57, highest since 1975. Prices gained 350 points on recent lows.

Demand was touched off by the continued outlook for higher beef prices by industry sources in the months ahead. Traders also noted reduced kill and surging beef prices.

Deliveries total 191 thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged to up 1½ cents at 83 to 83½ cents per pound, a one-week high. The six markets expect 18,600 head on Monday.

Cash cattle were steady to up 50 cents, with the best top at $55.50 at Illinois direct. Slaughter was 142,000 head.

Hog fututres recovered from an early loss of 12 points and climbed 30 to 105 points, led by nearby June. Sales were 6,919 cars. Prices ended at highs for the day.

Short covering and other buying were prompted by light hog runs and higher prices, coupled with an eight-cent markup in cash hams this week, as well as strength in other meat futures. These factors tended to offset increased kill this week.

Deliveries total 13 thus far. Wholesale hams were unchanged to up one-half cent at 72½ to 75 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, a five-week high. The six markets expect 30,500 head Monday.

Cash hogs were steady to up 50 cents, with the best top at $48 per hundredweight. Slaughter was 322,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) fututes ended 112 to 170 points higher, led by February, which was up 180 points just before the close. Sales were 6,736 cars. The market rallied from an early loss of 30 points.

Some traders continued to look for heavy deliveries on Monday as they noted a sharp premium of futures to cash. Others felt rising cash bellies could temper deliveries as prices rose to 1½-week highs. Strength in cattle also was a factor.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO — Wheat and soybean futures scored good-sized gains on the Chicago Board of Trade Friday, but corn futures were narrowly mixed.

Reports that drought had affected half of China's provinces, threatening winter wheat crops, stimulated speculative buying in the wheat pit. In addition, a rumor that China had bought American wheat persisted.

Light deliveries against open commitments of May contracts also contributed to the gains.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A SURVEY BY SOUTHWESTERN PUBLIC Service Co. shows 4,373,050 fat cattle were produced in the SPS service area in 1977.

This production is the third highest in the history of the industry, according to Sam Thomas, SPS manager of agricultural development.

The survey, conducted annually since 1963, is quoted throughout the United States as an authoritative source on production of fat cattle in the southern Great Plains.

During 1977, the feedlot capacity was 2,734,740 head, barely below the peak of 2,742,250 in 1974. The low was 2.6 million head in 1976.

"Present indications are that 1978 will see a new peak in feedlot capacity," Thomas said.

THE TOTAL NUMBER OF YARDS SURVEYED continued to fall, with a reduction of six from last year. This reflects a consolidation, Thomas said, but is the 11th year it has occurred. There were 274 yards counted in 1967, compared with 153 in 1978.

"The total impact of the feedyard industry on the business community reached $8 billion in 1977," Thomas said, "and the farm sale value exceeded $3 billion."

Annual slaughter capacity of packing plants jumped from 4,990,680 head to 5.4 million and the number of plants increased from 17 to 20. Thomas said a 580,000-head portion of this capacity is not in use.

"The future of the feedlot industry appears to be the brightest of any period in its history," Thomas said. But he warned that excessive optimism "may not be good," citing the price being paid for feeder cattle as a case in point.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON COUNTIES are included, contrary to an earlier report, in the relaxed ruling on eligibility for cotton diversion payments.

The USDA now will grant the two-cent-per-pound diversion payment on an acreage not larger than his 1977-78 plantings to any farmer who had either:

— Planted before March 30 (when the initial diversion plan was announced) an acreage in excess of 90.9 percent of his 1977-78 plantings and filed before April 12 (about one week after the revised plan was announced) notice of his intention to participate in the farm program.

— Planted between March 30 and April 12 an acreage equivalent to up to 100 percent of his 1977-78 plantings, with the intention of participating under the initial program.

— Taken irreversible actions (such as the application of herbicides or fertilizers) within those dates to plant an area equivalent to his 1977-78 cotton acreage.

The third item is the only one of significance for the High Plains, although a few acres of cotton actually were planted in Gaines County in March.

Successful Songwriter Makes Debut In Movies

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Joe Brooks wrote a $50 million song and is cashing in on it to become a movie star.

Brooks composed "You Light Up My Life."

Debby Boone's rendition ranked No. 1 on Billboard's pop chart for 13 weeks, an all-time record, and accounted for 5.3 million singles and albums of the total 7.8 million sales.

Brooks says his movie, "You Light Up My Life," grossed $23 million and the records have accounted for $30 million.

Not in recent memory has a one song done so much for one man, a gangly, likable 39-year-old New Yorker with a prominent nose, spectacles and a slight speech impediment. He's also a show business comer.

Brooks wrote, produced, directed, scored and composed the songs for "You Light Up My Life." He raised the money for it himself and wrote the advertising campaign — "A movie you'll always remember, a song you'll never forget."

"You Light Up My Life" was filmed in Los Angeles on weekends during a four-month period in the fall and winter of 1976 with Brooks commuting from New York. His leading lady, Didi Conn, was tied up in a television series and couldn't work during the week.

Once he'd completed the film, Brooks failed to interest any of the studios in the finished product. He was turned away by all the major record companies. The record executives didn't think "You Light Up My Life" would be commercial enough.

"I took the movie around to every studio," Brooks said. "Finally Columbia agreed to release it after two previews based on my ad campaign on television.

"Believe me, I know about advertising. I've written hundreds of advertising jingles for television. I had 122 spots on the air at one time."

Brooks became a millionaire and something of a Madison Avenue legend after his conception of the "Pepsi Generation" campaign and music.

"I've written jingles for every soft drink, including Coke, Dr. Pepper, Canada Dry and the rest. I've done the same thing for airlines and hundreds of consumer products and services.

"All those jingles have made me extremely rich. The advertising people estimate $500 million has been spent on air time for my spots.

"I'd never written a hit song before 'You Light Up My Life,' but I like to think of all my jingles as hits."

Brooks sang a medley of the jingles he has written, the repetitive ones altogether too familiar to any American with a radio or television set.

Brooks invested $350,000 of his own money in "You Light Up My Life" and raised the balance of the $1 million budget among business friends in the east.

Now, emboldened by the runaway success of his first picture and its theme song, Brooks has completed a second film, "If I Ever See You Again," which he believes stands a good chance of surpassing "You Light Up My Life."

In addition to writing the script, producing and directing, composing, arranging and conducting the film's music, Brooks stars in the picture with Shelley Hack.

This time Brooks encountered nothing but smiling faces at the studios and record companies. Hollywood loves a winner, and the versatile Brooks is definitely a winner.

"I wrote four songs for the new movie," said Brooks. "I wouldn't be surprised if two of them become hits — the title song and 'When It's Over.' I won't try to compare them with 'You Light Up My Life' which is a hard act to follow.

"I sold the sound track rights to Warner Brothers Records for an advance of $300,000. I sold the releasing rights to Columbia which paid me an individual fee of $1 million cash.

"The budget on this one is $3.1 million. I got the money from the same backers who helped me produce 'You Light Up My Life.'"

The multi-talented Brooks likes to say that his versatility at movie-making is greater than Charlie Chaplin's. Chaplin didn't actually compose music, he said.

Group Scores CBS News 'Bias'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals was asked Friday to overrule a Federal Communications Commission rejection of a complaint by the American Security Council that CBS news is biased against stronger U.S. defenses.

Attorneys Gregory M. Christopher of the FCC and J. Roger Wollenberg of CBS told the court the council had failed to specify a controverial issue of public importance as required under the fairness doctrine. Instead, they said, the council lumped numerous unrelated subjects.

Robert T. Buenzle, speaking for the council's education foundation, said the FCC's action was "a shamelessly arbitrary and capricious avoidance ... of its clear duty to enforce the fairness doctrine."

In asking the court to order the FCC to hold a hearing on the council's complaint, Buenzle's petition said:

"Rather than even inquire of CBS to comment on the shocking bias revealed in the ... complaint the FCC has turned and run the other way with its administrative tail between its legs."

The council, with headquarters in Boston, Va., is a national private, non-profit institution concerned with defense and security.

Its appeal was heard before a three-judge court, Edward A. Tamm, Malcolm R. Wilkey and Joseph A. Danaher.

Buenzle said the complaint was based on a study of CBS Evening News in 1972 and 1973 by Dr. Ernest W. Lafever of the Brookings Institution and a followup study of all CBS news programs for two weeks in 1975 and a month during 1976.

Christopher disputed Buenzle's contention that "the fairness doctrine is dead" but said "is is very, very tough" in requiring a definite showing because the FCC must be very careful not to interfere in programming.

Christopher said "the FCC does not go out of its way to find violators" and a complaining petition "must clearly articulate a violation," which he said the council failed to do.

He agreed with Wilkey that the issues in the case did not involve truth or deliberate distortion.

Wollenberg said the council could have come back to the commission with a more definitive complaint after the FCC ruled March 15 but failed to do so.

The council, in filing its complaint Sept. 8, 1976 had made a point that "our complaint is unlike any that has ever come before the (FCC). We are not complaining about a single broadcast ..."

OPEC LOAN

VIENNA (AP) — The Vienna-based Organization of Petroleum exporting countries announced Friday it has approved a $7 million loan to Vietnam. The money comes from OPEC's special fund for aid to developing countries. OPEC said Vietnam will use the money for the expanson and modernization of its fishing fleet.

Public Television Probe Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office recommends that Congress try to determine how many public television stations may be wasting federal grants by using the money for unneeded equipment and personnel.

As an example, the GAO quoted the Corporation for Public Broadcasting as saying WETA-TV in Washington used its equipment only 37 percent of the time in 1974 and 39 percent in 1975 and that the same probably was true in 1976.

The GAO asked numerous questions about public television's accountability for spending federal funds, in connection with President Carter's proposed overhaul of the federal role in public broadcasting.

The chairman of the House and Senate communications subcommittees, Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., and Sen. Ernest F. Hollins, D-S.C., have introduced a substitute bill that makes major changes in Carter's bill and seeks to correct some of the problems raised by the GAO.

The questions asked by the GAO are included in a preliminiary report to Congress that contains no conclusions. The Associated Press obtained a copy of the confidential report which was not made public.

The GAO also questioned whether it is proper for public TV stations to use Community Service Grants to raise funds from non-federal sources.

The report said the law specifies that the grants distributed by Corporation for Public Broadcasting "may be used at the discretion of stations for educational television and radio programming."

The money raised from non-federal sources determines the amount of federal grants a station receives since it gets $1 for each $2.50 raised. Some in Congress want to change to that $1 for each $2.

Janis Joplin Fans Save Singer's Texas Home

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — A builder and a handful of die-hard Janis Joplin fans are credited with saving the blues superstar's first home from demolition by city crews.

City officials said the house Miss Joplin lived in until she was about 4 years old had deteriorated below city standards and was a health hazard.

The vacant, vandalized structure was only weeks away from being leveled when the city began receiving calls from concerned fans.

Finally, builder Howard Riggs of nearby Groves agreed to buy the home for $3,500.

"I plan to put it back in the original condition without any changes," Riggs said Thursday. His 28-year-old daughter, Jane, will live in the house when it's restored.

And, said Riggs, she plans to collect Joplin mementoes to decorate the home where visitors may someday be allowed.

"Of course, we'll be willing to allow a shrine or some type of marker because this is part of the city's history. But we're not thinking along those lines yet," Riggs said, although he said traffic has started picking up around the house and many sightseers have stopped.

She died of a drug overdose in 1970 at age 27. She had visited Port Arthur two months before her death for a class reunion.

Joseph and Blanche Mims bought the house from the Joplins around 1947.

"Janis was a darling little girl, I remember," Mrs. Mims said. "I can remember her playing with my two young girls, who were just a little younger."

"I'm going to have to go out and buy one of her records, you know. I've never heard her voice before — I'm sure she had a nice voice though," Mrs. Mims said.

The Mimses move out of the house in late 1974 and it was tagged as vacant in 1975 when it went on the market. Mrs. Mims said they never used the sales approach that the house had been lived by a famous person.

"It never occurred to me. I did think once though of just donating it to one man who was such a fan. But he sounded young and I knew it would take a lot of money to fix the place up."

She said the house sold cheaply because it will take a lot of money to repair it. The house has two bedrooms, a large living room, fireplace, dining room and porch.

Miller said repairs will tack another $15,000-$20,000 to the price of the house.

"But when it's finished it will be worth $60-70,000. It's on a full city block."

Music Lovers Remember Ellington

NEW YORK (AP) — Duke Ellington would have been 79 Saturday and — as when the famed composer-bandleader was alive — the occasion will be celebrated in big parties with friends, fans and family.

This year, four years after Ellington's death, a number of celebrations of the man and his music are planned.

His sister, Ruth, planned to give his seven-foot grand piano, painted his favorite color, blue, to the Songwriters Hall of Fame. A number of jazz pianists, including Dave Brubeck, Mary Lou Williams and Marian McPartland, dedicated the gift earlier in the week by playing Ellington tunes on it.

Ellington's son, Mercer, wrote a book, "Duke Ellington in Person: An Intimate Memoir," to be published the day of his father's birth by Houghton Mifflin.

And on Saturday night, the Duke Ellington Orchestra, directed by Mercer Ellington, was to play for a dance in Nashua, N.H.

Trombonist Slide Hampton kicked off the celebration last Saturday night by directing the 14-piece Collective Black Artists Ensemble in a concert in New York City of Ellington compositions.

On Monday night, the Ellington Society, formed in the 1950s, held a dinner in the bandleader's honor. Lyricist Edmund Anderson, an Ellington friend for 38 years, got a big hand when he told the society, "In terms of culture, Duke Ellington helped liberate the white American."

On Saturday, May 6, New York's midtown Community Church will present "A Celebration of Sacred Ellington." This is the second of three sacred concerts he wrote, the one based on the 150th Psalm and titled "Praise God and Dance."

SOPHIA HAS NO COMMENT ON ITALIAN ARREST WARRANT — Actress Sophia Loren leaves London's Heathrow Airport Thursday en route for Antigua. She declined to talk about a recent warrant for her arrest issued in Italy. ## Country Singers Handed Awards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kenny Rogers, who turned to country music when his high-flying pop career fizzled, swept the big prizes at the 13th annual Academy of Country Music Awards.

Rogers gathered awards Thursday night for Album of the Year ("Kenny Rogers") best male vocalist and best single record of the year for "Lucille." That song, the bittersweet saga of a marital desertion, also was named Song of the Year, an award for the song itself, as opposed to the record.

The sweep was the latest in a series of awards for Rogers, who picked up a Grammy earlier this year for best male country singer. "Lucille," a tune that became a hit in both the country and pop charts, was the first big success for Rogers since his pop group, The First Edition, broke up several years ago.

FILMETER
A capsule look at cinema

(FILMETER is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the N.E.A. staff in both Hollywood and New York.)

NEW RELEASES

STRAIGHT TIME (R) — Dustin Hoffman, Harry Dean Stanton. Drama. Gritty character study of an ex-con doomed to return to a life of crime. Marred by a vague point of view, it has interesting moments but the ultimate impact is that of a slow-moving Baretta. Caution: strong language, some nudity. GRADE: C-plus. (Handler)

THE MEDUSA TOUCH (PG) — Richard Burton, Lino Ventura, Lee Remick. Thriller. Detective investigates assault on a man who believes he has the power to trigger disaster. Story is repetitious and neither it nor the characters stand up to scrutiny, but it's a fairly effective scary evening. GRADE: B-minus. (Handler)

GENERAL RELEASES

THE BIG SLEEP (R) — Robert Mitchum, Sarah Miles. Mystery. Another try at Philip Marlow, the prototype private eye, but this one misses. The direction is heavy, the acting over-emotional and the plot so convoluted you'll need a road map to stay even. Still, Mitchum makes a fine Marlowe. GRADE: B.

RABBIT TEST (PG) — Billy Crystal. Comedy. This is Joan River's first shot at directing a movie, and there are many funny moments, as you would expect. It's about the world's first pregnant man, or something like that. Parts are wildly funny, but it is also undisciplined and some of it goes overboard. Caution: Very suggestive. GRADE: B-minus.

AMERICAN HOT WAX (PG) — Tim McIntire. Musical. The '50s, and the beginnings of rock 'n' roll are the setting for this small-scale offering. It is supposed to be the story of disc jockey Alan Freed, who first made rock 'n' roll big. If you like the music, you'll like this, because there are many musical numbers that really jump. GRADE: B.

THE BETSY (R) — Laurence Olivier, Robert Duvall, Katherine Ross. Romance. This is taken from the Harold Robbins novel about love and intrigue among Detroit automobile manufacturers. It's all pretty shoddy and not really very interesting. Olivier is wasted, but does his best. GRADE: C.

AN UNMARRIED WOMAN (R) — Jill Clayburgh, Alan Bates, Michael Murphy. Drama. The title is a misnomer, because the film is about a very-married woman and the tauma she goes through when her husband divorces her. A brilliant performance by Miss Clayburgh in a film that would have been better had it been cut a little tighter. Caution: nudity reigns supreme. GRADE: A-minus.

GRAY LADY DOWN (PG) — Charlton Heston, David Carradine, Stacy Keach. Adventure. A nuclear sub gets rammed and sinks and the problem is how to rescue the crew. It's a pretty good yarn, with nice underwater effects, but somehow never generates much real suspense of excitement. GRADE: B-minus.

THE FURY (R) — Kirk Douglas, John Cassavetes, Carrie Snodgrass, Charles Durning. Horror. This is an attempt to bring you another "Exorcist"-type of film, but it just doesn't have the stuff. It's about two young people who have supernatural power, and what they do to others, and what others do to them. Some pretty gory scenes, so be warned. GRADE: C.

JOSEPH ANDREWS (PG) — Ann-Margaret, Peter Firth. Romantic comedy. Tony Richardson's long-awaited successor to "Tom Jones," this is a bawdy, frantic, funny look at merrie ole England. Excellent vignettes by some of England's great actors enliven this, and the evocation of a long-gone period is fascinating. GRADE: B.

A HERO AIN'T NOTHING' BUT A SANDWICH (PG) — Cicely Tyson, Paul Winfield, Larry B. Scott. Drama. The seamy story of a city kid and his introduction to, and battle with, drugs. A fine look at the ghetto life, with some excellent characterizations, but it's all pretty heavy. GRADE: B-minus.

COMING HOME (R) — Jane Fonda, Jon Voight, Bruce Dern. Drama. One of the new wave of Vietman war pictures, this is a strong, emotional story about a shattered man, the woman who waited for him, and another man. It is very strong stuff, but will leave you quivering. GRADE: A-minus.

A SPECIAL DAY (PG) — Sophia Loren, Marcello Mastroianni. Romance. In World War II Italy, the "special day" is one on which Hitler visits Rome. And an unhappy housewife and her homosexual neighbor discover each other in a film that is tender and heartwarming. GRADE: A-minus.

SEMI-TOUGH (R) — Burt Reynolds, Jill Clayburgh, Kris Kristofferson. Comedy. With a pro football background, this tells the raunchy story of two grid stars and the girl they sort of love, after their own fashion. It has some good laughs, but it is awfully earthy. Caution: Bawdy in the extreme. GRADE: B.

COMA (PG) — Michael Douglas, Genevieve Bujold. Thriller. Somebody is killing patients in the hospital, and doing a thriving business in vital organs. It's all pretty ghoulish and will make you distrust hospitals even more, but this is one of those edge-of-the-seaters. Drags some, but still a good thriller. GRADE: B.

CLOSE ENCOUNTERS OF THE THIRD KIND (PG) — Richard Dreyfuss, Teri Garr. Science-fiction. The celebrated Steven Spielberg look at U.F.O.s. This has some dumb touches and the actual story is primitive, but the special effects are so extraordinary that the rest is overlookable. A masterpiece of special effects wizardy. GRADE: A.

STAR WARS (PG) — Mark Hamill, Alec Guinness. Science-fiction. Already a classic, this is the story of the space war and the heroics of a few to rout the bad guys. It's full of wonderful touches and everybody loves it, from the kids to grandparents. GRADE: A.

(Film grading: A — superb; B — good; C — average; D — poor; F — awful)

LIVELY ARTS

Texas Ranks Last In Funding Arts

NEW YORK (NEA) — Alaska, 186; Texas 3.

If arts funding were to be scored like basketball that is how America's best and worst states would look.

According to an American Council for the Arts annual survey of state agency legislature appropriations for fiscal 1978, Alsaka leads with cultural funding that comes to $1.86 per person, while Texas brings up the rear, by allotting less than three cents (actually, 2.9 cents) to be spent on the arts for each of its citizens over the 12-month period.

Nevertheless, the overall outlook of state arts support is marginally hopeful, with the total 1978 appropriations at almost $62 million compared with 1977's $57 million. Part of that difference is absorbed by inflation, reflected in increased costs, but it still ia a gain.

By comparison, the 1973 figure was under $27 million, increased to $54 million by 1975. Also heartening, the latest appropriations show an increase in 43 states, and a decrease in only six — Hawaii, Montana, South Dakota, Tennessee, Virginia and Wyoming (New Hampshire's budget not yet set).

National National Endowment for the Arts funds, which might be technically 'appropriated' by a state legislature, are not included in these figures. These are the actual amounts put up by the states from their own tax revenues.

It would be tempting to conclude from these figures that Alaskans are a cultured people while Texans are uncivilized, but that would be a long way from the truth. What is obvious is that Alaska's legislators are far more enlightened, cultured and probably intelligent than most of those of Texas, and this must reflect their constituencies, to some degree.

Nevertheless, Texas can boast some of the brightest, most energetic and creative arts people in the country, even if they continue to fight a losing battle, almost undauted, against their legislature. I cannot speak directly about Alaska, not having been there (my loss), but over the years I have come to know Texas moderately well.

Perhaps it is just that when I go there, I wind up amound culturally enlightened men and women, for both professional and personal reasons. Whatever the reasons, I have come to know some marvellously energetic and inspired artists in all the arts, as well as arts organizers, in Amarillo, Lubbock, Fort Worth, Dallas, Austin, San Antonio, Midland, Odessa and other communities.

No state has matched Texas in the building of art museums over the past seven years. One, relatively new, is the Kimbell in Fort Worth, which must be ranked among the most exquisite settings and select collections in the world.

As that comes from a private fortune, so have other Texan projects benefitted from individual citizens, or small groups of them. Algur M. Meadows has given a gallery of Spanish paintings and an outdoor court of contemporary sculpture to Southern Methodist Univerity in Dallas, both of which are treasures.

Opera — a vastly expensive and almost inevitably unprofitable box office operation — flourishes in Houston and Dallas. The Dallas Theater Center is among the nation's most significant developmental theaters, where playwrights can have a laboratory for their new plays.

Group Not Guilty About Hunger

NEW YORK (AP) — The subject of the gathering, world hunger, generally is considered grim, distressing and complex. But the people present were jolly about it. To them, it's going to end. They don't care how. They don't advocate nor apply any method for it. But they're sure it will happen.

"It's an idea whose time has come," they said over and over again, quoting Victor Hugo. "All the forces in the world are not so powerful as an idea whose time has come."

They're participants in what's called "The Hunger Project," and while it takes no position on how to cope with the problem nor sponsors any specific operations to ease the plight of the hungry, it recruits adherents and contributions with an evangelistic fervor.

"We're don't care about particular solutions," said Ellis M. Deull, a Manhattan attorney and president of the organization, citing its thesis that to favor any definite approach to the problem only bogs people down in arguments.

"What we're doing is to get a critical mass of people aligned toward the purpose, to create a climate of workability."

The seemingly rather nebulous idea — that the problem will go away if enough people are committed to it happening — is drawn from the controversial concepts of Werner Erhard, whose "est" training seminars, at $250 per client, uses authoritarian, confrontational methods intended to heighten self-awareness and self-responsibility.

The "est" foundation funded the formation of the project with a $100,000 grant and its leaders have been through the "est" process, along with many of the participants. But it also enlists others, soliciting their donations, with enrollees now reported totalling close to 100,000 across the country.

About 500 of them were on hand the other night in the Tower Suite of the Time-Life building for a "Passover Celebration" of what they see as the building up of the "context" — an "allignment" of attitudes and "space" for it to work — so that world hunger will end within two decades. That's their repeatedly asserted conviction, with how it's done, or who does it, considered beside the point.

All it takes is the "context," says Erhard, and "that makes things suddenly workable."

Declared Lew Epstein of San Francisco, the master-of-ceremonies and now preparing to be an "est" trainer: "Each of us creates the context of the idea whose time has come . .. We're rejoicing that the whole project is given to each of us."

The evening was suffused with smiles, nametags, assurances of mutual love, group-coached responses, much hugging and kissing, exhortations to the "family" to "acknowledge ourselves" and enroll others — all marks of the "est" process.

Also there were disvowals of any guilt about hunger, any blaming anyone, any shame about waste or feeling sorry for hungry people. Mere "gestures," Erhard writes, "cop-outs."

"We've dissipated all the guilt," said Broadway actor Raul Julia. "We're celebrating what's going to happen in the next two decades. It's crazy, it's wonderful. It's going to happen."

He, like others, repeated Erhard's list of what were termed mistaken attitudes that have perpetuated hunger, namely: misassumptions of scarcity, that food is lacking, that hunger is inevitable and will always exist, that there are no solutions, and fussing over them.

"In taking positions about hunger, you get stuck in defending those positions," Julia said. "We live in a world of abundance. What's needed is a transformation of the way we see the problem — the creation of a new context of sufficiency."

In a dinner-table conversation, Pat Meyers, a pretty former nun, an "est" alumnus and principal of a Montessori school, said the project's key to ending hunger is overcoming views that "it's impossible."

As Erhard puts it in a booklet distributed by the organization, "The hunger project is not about solutions ... not about fixing the problem. It's ... about creating a context — creating the end of hunger as an idea whose time has come."

The way that's done, says another booklet, is by "communication and enrollment, communication and enrollment, communication and enrollment." To do that, the project has scheduled a gala benefit May 24 at Manhattan's Beacon Theater, featuring various celebrities.

"We have this gift, this opportunity to make the world work," proclaimed Marty Lee project's New York chairman, urging participants to go out and enroll eight more people each.

"Yes!" they shouted back when asked if they'd do it.

A pair of folk musicians sang to the strumming of a guitar: "You gotta believe we can change this world around. You gotta believe there's a new world to be found."

Engineers To Host Pulsed Power Meet

Texas Tech University's Department of Electrical Engineering has announced it will co-sponsor the second International Conference on Pulsed Power Technology on June 12-14, 1979.

Co-sponsors will include the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers and several government agencies.

The first conference, helf in Lubbock in 1976, drew more than 200 representatives from throughout the United States, Europe, including Russia, and Asia.

Technical program chairman will be Dr. Arthur H. Guenther, chief scientist, Kirtland Air Force Base, N.M., who is an adjunct professor of electrical engineering at Texas Tech.

Dr. Magne Kristiansen, Horn Professor of electrical engineering is general chairman. Travis L. Simpson, associate administrator, Department of Electrical Engineering, Texas Tech, is local arrangements chairman.

Pulsed power refers to large burst of power over short periods of time. Applications include the development of accelerators for radiation therapy, for instance. One goal of researchers in this area is to develop a means to deliver massive power for less than a millionth of a second for possible use in fusion energy plants.

LIFE TERMS UPHELD

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The New Hampshire Supreme Court upheld on Friday the convictions of two Concord men sentenced to life in prison without parole in the killing of a 19-year-old man. Gary Farrow, 22, and James Smith, 21, were convicted of murder in the stabbing and beating death of Michael Stitt two years ago.
