Bus mishap kills 10

Seventeen others injured

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — Ten people on a 35-year-old converted bus carrying seven families to a Fourth of July reunion were killed Friday when the vehicle burst into flames. Seventeen others were injured, officials said.

The bus began smoking and burst into flames as the driver pulled onto the shoulder of Interstate 15 in the Cajon Pass, the California Highway Patrol reported. The bus, built in 1946 and later converted into a motor home, then began rolling backward downhill and crashed into a flatbed truck as screaming passengers kicked out windows and tried to j7mp to safety.

CHP officer William Snell said the bus originally had had a rear emergency exit, but that it had been barricaded when the vehicle was modified.

"Apparently those who remained behind and were trapped in the bus were throwing children and women out of the windows," Snell said at a news conference.

"I was sitting in the back of the bus listening to music, when all of the sudden there was a loud noise," said one of the passengers, Kimberly Garret, 16, of Riverside. "I turned around and there was fire everywhere except in the back of the bus.

"Everybody scattered, and I started banging on a window until it popped out. Then I jumped."

CHP spokeswoman Barbara Flick said the fire may have been started by exploding propane tanks, but police don't know if they had been used for cooking or for a refrigerator.

Robert Drake of Loma Linda, who was driving his car not far behind the bus, said it "was engulfed in flames almost instantly. I saw one man manage to get out the back window, but there were many still inside screaming and crying."

The flames were so hot that streams of molten metal ran along the four-lane highway and the asphalt was blackened for about a quarter of a mile.

Snell credited three supermarket truck drivers for turning their rigs sideways to block the road to oncoming traffic and radioing the highway patrol for help.

"It took about two hours before the bus cooled down enough for us to get inside," said San Bernardino County Coroner Harvey Castro. "Once we got inside, we found six children and four adults. They appeared to have been huddled toward the rear of the bus."

He said all the bodies were burned beyond recognition by the intense heat, "which just melted the bus."

Among the injured was a Long Beach couple traveling in a station wagon behind the bus.

The 25 people aboard the bus were on their way to a Fourth of July reunion at the home of Lois Elliott Rogers at Flint City, about five miles south of Decatur, Ala.

Mrs. Rogers said her eldest sister, Twilla Wiseman, 72, of Los Angeles, was among the fatalities. She said Mrs. Wiseman raised her three sisters and one brother, now deceased, after their mother died.

The coroner's office tentatively identified the other dead as Socrates Dredd, 40, Clint T. Robinson, 22, Keto Jackson, 5, Kila Jackson, 3, Jackie Jackson, 4, Lekeith Hill, 10 months, Pauline Robinson, 39, Lori Robinson, 18, all of Los Angeles, and Scottie Lindsey, 5, Palos Verdes, Calif.

Drivers behind the bus were terrified when the blazing vehicle began rolling in their direction. Then it veered off the road and into a small ravine.

"I'll tell you seriously, I was afraid," said Billie Jo Bellerue, of Valley Center, Calif., who had her two small boys in her car. "We were all trying to back up without crashing into each other, but there were several accidents."

As Mrs. Bellerue was backing up, she saw people running from the bus, one of whom was a 12-year-old girl later identified as LaDonna Hil of Los Angeles.

"She said, 'Mrs., I need a ride.' She obviously was in total shock. She was burned very badly," Mrs. Bellerue said.

Mrs. Bellerue, 35, said that after she maneuvered her car out of the path of the bus, she put the little girl in her car.

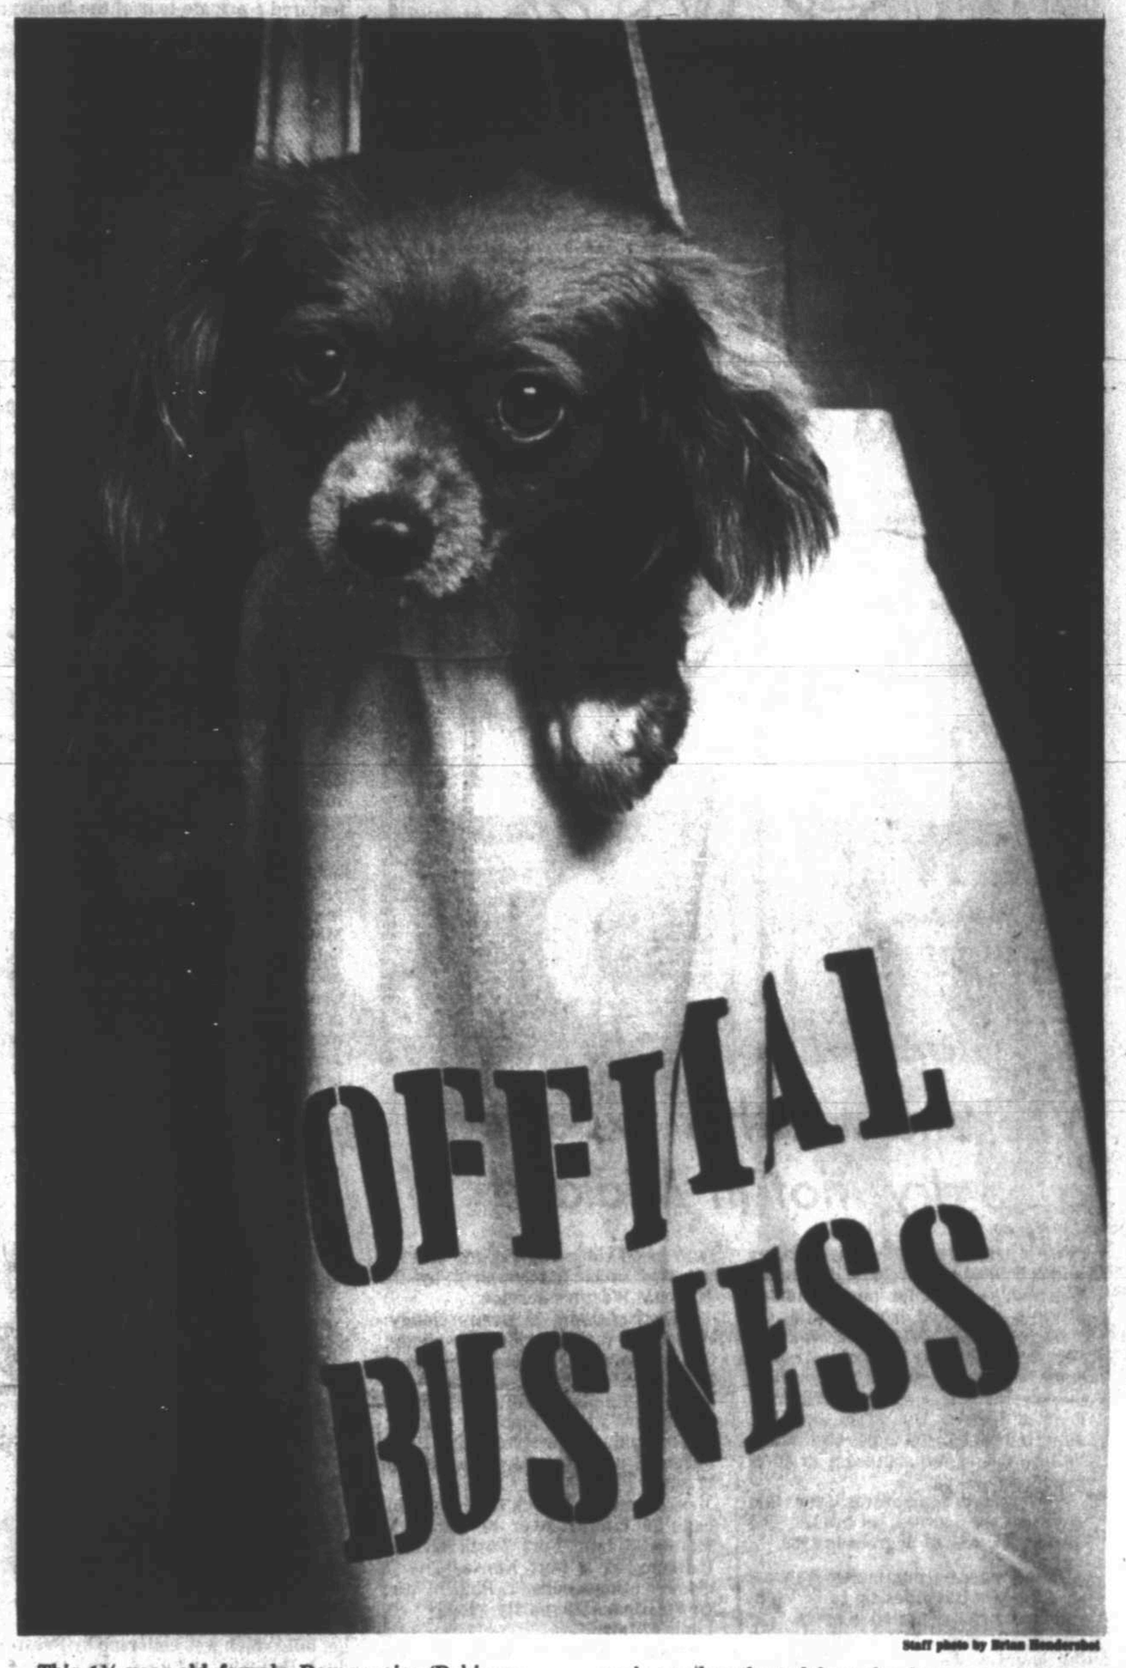

Hospital officials said LaDonna Hill suffered second- and third-degree burns over 20 percent of her body and was listed in critical but stable condition.

Investigators said the vehicle's problems began when the driver, Willie Battle, heard a loud popping noise. "He pulled over to check it out," said CHP Officer Dave Daniel. "The bus suddenly became engulfed in flames from the front. People started kicking out windows and jumping out onto the freeway."

The flames burned the brake line and the bus rolled backward, Daniel said, hitting a truck. The truck was pushed into a station wagon.

The bus kept rolling, resting on the side of the highway, Daniel said.

The accident, which took place on a steep grade 16 miles south of Victorville and just south of the Cajon Pass summit, touched off a small brushfire that firefighters limited to five acres, said Capt. Ernest Wasley.

MCH turned down again

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Health Facilities Commission has again turned down a request for reconsideration of Medical Center Hospital's application to purchase a linear accelerator.

The commission voted 2-1 Friday to deny a motion for rehearing sought by the Odessa hospital, despite arguments by Medical Center Hospital attorney Joe Webber that failure to approve the application would destroy the hospital's cancer treatment program.

The THFC voted June 5 to deny the application, which was protested by the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center. The commission later turned down petitions by some 45 local residents seeking reconsideration of the matter.

Fred Davis, attorney for the Allison Center, argued that the application should not be reconsidered because there was no new information to be brought before the commission.

Davis said the new equipment is not needed to serve the patients of Medical Center Hospital.

However, Webber blasted Allison Center officials for misrepresenting the intentions of Medical Center Hospital during hearings on the application.

Webber said the Allison witnesses indicated the Odessa hospital had no intention to continue its cancer treatment program, but that Medical Center officials had stated before Allison was granted a license that they fully intended to continue their program.

Webber said the hospital's existing equipment needs to be replaced and that denial of the application will "destroy the only facility that has been serving the local needs."

Commissioner Bolin Mahaffey was the only member of the panel who voted in favor of reconsidering the application.

Ruling pleases MMH officials

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

Word of Texas Health Facilities Commission's re-affirmation of its denial of Odessa's Medical Center Hospital's bid for a linear accelerator filtered into the celebration of the grand opening of the Allison Center Friday and Midland Memorial Hospital officials couldn't hide their happiness.

MMH President Ray Branson said Friday's ruling, which came on the same day as formal dedication ceremonies for the Allison Center, was "not significant and purely coincidental, but it was paradoxical.

"It wasn't a surprise," Branson went on, "because there was no significant new evidence introduced and therefore no reason for us to believe they'd (the commissoners) do anything but sustain their original denial of the 6 MEV (Million Electron Volt Accelerator)."

Midland and Odessa have maintained a continuous battle for the 6 MEV, state-of-the-art, cancer therapy machine since Midland first applied for a certificate of need in 1979. Since November of 1980, when Odessa applied for the same machine, the controversy has grown into a heated fight.

Hearings in Austin in April led to a THFC 2-1 denial of the application. Residents of Odessa appealed for a reconsideration of the decision and were again denied a certificate of need in early June. Friday, the board of commissioners upheld the 2-1 vote to deny the machine to Odessa when MCH officials appealed on their own behalf.

As for Odessa's current plans, Branson was unsure. "My information is that they (MCH officials) are proceeding through the district court," he said. "But, I honestly don't know what the procedure is. Whatever, we are still in opposition to the duplication of a 6 MEV in the Permian Basin and we plan on continuing to protect our interest. If, at some point in time, when the area can prove it can support two 6 MEVs, perhaps then we would feel differently.

"Our current goals are to provide the service with the 6 MEV, the simulator, the orthovoltage and see that that's a quality service," Branson said, referring to the Allison Center. "Next, we'll work to get the 20 MEV on line and functioning as intended. Then, I foresee the third step as being to bring medical oncology to the Allison Center for which there are already provisions."

Mickey Cappadonna, trustee and president of the Allison Center Regional Advisory Committee, said he was glad to hear the news and hoped it would mean an end to the battle between the cities.

"I hope that we can heal our wounds with Ector County and can treat cancer patients to the best of our abilities," Cappadonna said. "We need to work together to beat this thing (cancer). The last thing I want to do is pour more gas on that fire. My opposition all along has been one of timing and not of vengeance.

"They (MCH officials) say they're going to the courts now," Cappadonna continued. "We will probably oppose it (the application) until we think the economic feasibility and the patient load of this community is enough to sustain two machines. Hopefully, that time will coincide with their need for a new source (in the currently used cobalt machine). I have told them this publicly and privately.

"I hope we can put this fight to bed and get this Allison thing going," Cappadonna said.

THE fair opens today

LUCKENBACH, Texas (AP) — The Fifth Great, Sometimes Annual, World's Fair at Luckenbach returns today, after an absence of several years, for a two-weekend run at the Roy Petsch Ranch, a half mile south of this 100-year-old town, population 3.

Television actor Guich Koock, who sponsored the first mock fair here in 1969 along with the late Hondo Crouch, also is putting on this year's fair today and Sunday and July 4-5.

The first fair drew more than 15,000 people to watch and participate in such events as chicken flying contests, rattlesnake races and black powder shoot. But it was so successful the town's owners voted never to have it in the old dilapidated town again.

Three later versions of the fair took place at the fair grounds in Fredericksburg, Koock's hometown.

Koock, who calls himself the grand exalted ringmaster, predicted that this year's fair would be the biggest of all, emphasizing all activites were "rated G."

Along with entertainment on three stages and numerous humorous contests — such as a backdoor race in which men in long underwear race for exits on arrival of an irate husband or boyfriend — Koock is bringing what is billed as "the first and only known live unicorn."

The rare animal, a one-horned Angora goat owned by Otter and Morning Glory G'Zell of Los Gatos, Calif., has been featured on several television programs.

Koock said he also expects a visit from Gabe Kaplan, who will star with Koock on a new television series called "Gabe and Guich" this fall.

The television story is about a man who moves his family from New York to Luckenbach and opens a bar.

Odessa man shot near rest stop

An Odessa man was flown to Parkland Hospital in Dallas Friday night, and Midland sheriff's deputies were searching for a suspect who apparently shot the man without provocation near a Highway 80 rest stop five miles east of Midland about 2 p.m. Friday.

Thomas Boone, 59, was shot once in the head with a small caliber handgun by a man who, deputies said, walked up to Boone's car, looked at him, then pulled the trigger. Boone had been napping in his car at the time. He was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital by a passing motorist.

Deputies said they were unable to obtain a complete account of what happened because Boone kept slipping in and out of consciousness as they attempted to question him. He was treated at Midland Memorial before being flown to the Dallas hospital in critical condition late Friday night.

The suspect was described as black, in his early 20s, about 5 feet, 8 inches tall, clean shaven and having a short, Afro style haircut. Deputies are asking anyone with information on the case to call the Silent Witness number, 685-1190.

House gives Reagan spending cuts package

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan won a broad package of 1982 spending cuts Friday from the Democratic-controlled House as Republicans were joined by conservative Democrats to prevail in a series of dramatic parliamentary battles.

The House first turned back a renewed assault by Democratic leaders and approved by 217 to 211 a hastily drafted package of more than $5 billion in additional budget cuts sought by the president. That vote assured the final approval that came 90 minutes later.

There was a second procedural vote, with Reagan forces prevailing 215-212, and then a voice vote that turned aside a move to retain twice a year cost-of-living increases for federal civilian and military retirees.

Then came final passage on a 232-193 vote that was academic by that point.

The Democrats lost one last parliamentary tactic, 187-150, and the battle was over.

Reagan already has Senate approval of a $39.6 billion budget-cutting package. That action came just before midnight Thursday in the Republican-dominated chamber on an 80-15 vote.

Republicans said the House bill, including the various revisions made by the package Reagan pushed, would total about $38.2 billion in cuts.

Differences between the House and Senate versions still will have to be ironed out in a conference committee — a task made easier by adoption of the Reagan cuts in the House.

Combative House Democrats complained to the end that acceptance of the disputed measure, literally drawn up overnight, amounted to a "shameful charade of a legislative process gone mad."

But the president's package was approved on the cliffhanging vote, thereby assuring a revision to his liking of the overall budget-cutting plan endorsed by Democratic leaders. The victory came on the heels of a key procedural test a day earlier which allowed the Republican alternative to come to the floor.

Reagan, resting at his California ranch, hailed the 217-211 vote as a "major victory in the war against inflation."

In a written statement, Reagan called the vote a "profile in political courage and (it) should inspire the gratitude of us all. It will renew the faith of millions of Americans who have waited so long just for those in Washington to listen and care and take action."

Allison Center dedicated

Initial proceedings in the formal dedication of the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center Friday featured a private tour of the facility and recognition of some of the major donors for the new regional cancer therapy center.

Midland Memorial Hospital President Ray Branson acted as emcee for the affair. "The Allison Center is the result of the efforts of many people," he told the crowd of about 75. "But, we have come here today to particularly acknowledge the efforts of one lady. It was the late Mrs. Helon Allison's concern for her fellow man that started an interest in developing a regional center for cancer therapy here."

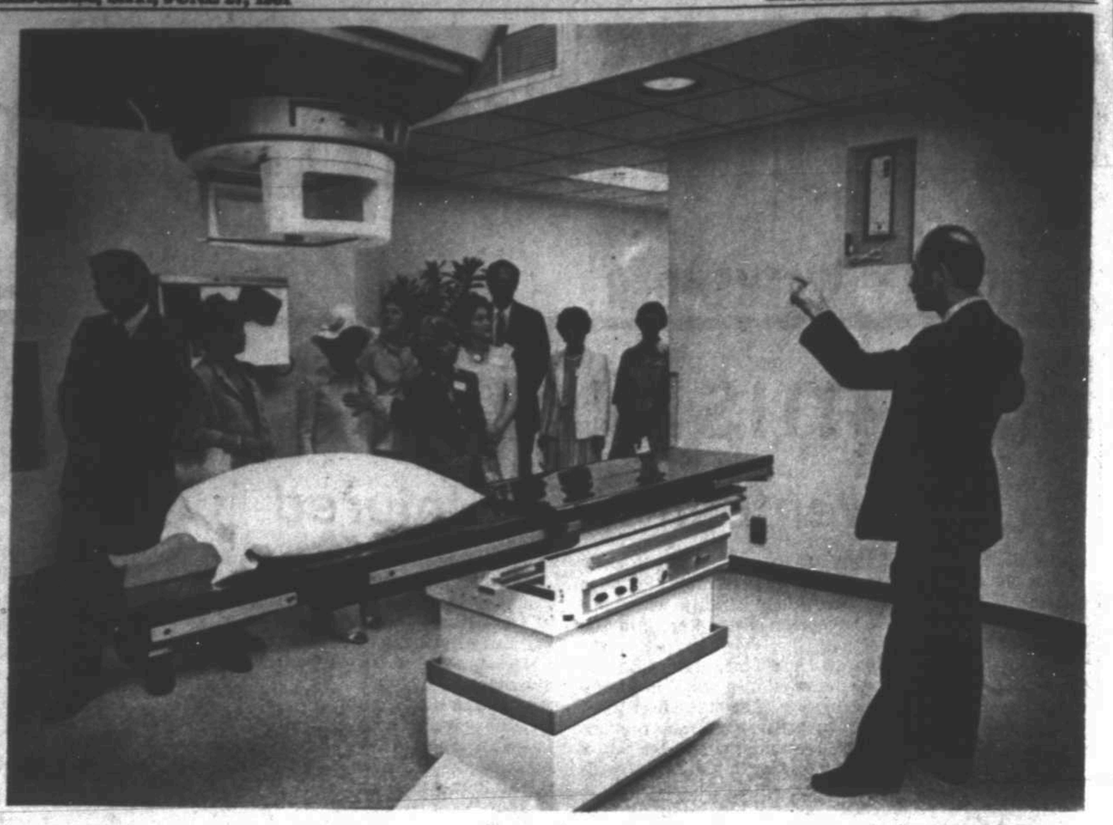

In addition to acknowledgement of Mrs. Allison's initial $2 million donation to the hospital for the center, MMH officials recognized six other major donators. Included in the six were the Dora Roberts Foundation, the Fasken Foundation, The First National Bank, the Davidson Family Charitable Foundation, the Exxon Company and the W.F. Scharbauer Trust.

Festivities marking the opening of the Allison Center will continue today at 1 p.m. opening to the public in the north parking lot of the Center.

Dr. Charles LeMaistre, president of The University of Texas System Cancer Center, M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston, will address the public on cancer treatments beginning shortly after 1 p.m.

Other speakers include Branson; John Redfern, president of the MMH board of governors; Ed Magruder, president of the MMH board of directors; Roy Campbell, president of the MMH board of trustees; Dr. A. Lee Schlichtemeier, radiation oncologist and medical director of the Allison Center; Mickey Cappadonna, president of the Allison Center Regional Advisory Committee; and Allyson Ann Allison, granddaughter of the late Mrs. Allison.

From 2 to 4 p.m., there will be an open house and tours of the Center featuring punch and cake refreshments.

MMH gets 2 years accreditation

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals notified officials at Midland Memorial Hospital Friday that the facility had received two years accreditation.

The JCAH stamp of approval sets a standard of excellence among hospital care nationwide. Last year, MMH had difficulty obtaining the accreditation, with more than 100 violations in almost all areas of the hospital. Finally, MMH did receive approval for one year, forcing another evaluation this year.

Hospital president Ray Branson said he was proud of the progress the hospital has made in the year. "This is exciting," he said Friday. "But it's even more exciting for me to get a two-year approval my first time out. This is the first time I have been through this as a chief executive."

Branson, who has been president of the hospital for eight months, previously worked with departments on meeting accreditation standards while he was assistant administrator of hospitals in Oklahoma.

"We're very pleased," he said.

The JCAH approval is necessary for Medicare reimbursements paid the hospital and to eliminate the need for federal government inspections of the hospital, Branson said. Some of the monetary reimbursements had been lost during the previous year for the unfavorable evaluation from the JCAH.

"If you're a non-JCAH hospital," Branson explained, "you are subject to annual surveys by the federal government and you are subject to losing third party funding, like Medicare reimbursements.

"In terms of meeting the accreditation standards, we reversed a situation that was certainly less than good," Branson continued. "There were 101 recommendations about a year ago. Although I don't know exactly how many there were this year, there was a significant difference in this survey than in last year's in terms of the severity of the recommendations."

Weekend weather expected to be dry, hot in Midland

With continued high temperatures and no rain in the forecast, this might be a good weekend for lounging under a tree with an iced drink in hand.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, skies will be partly cloudy through Sunday, with thermometer readings near 90 degrees. Overnight lows are expected to be in the upper 60s. Winds will be out of the southeast at 10-15 mph today.

The record temperature for this date was 103 degrees, set in 1972. The record low was 61 degrees in 1968.

Thunderstorms pummeled Kansas on Friday, with winds up to 66 mph and heavy rain reported in spots.

Rainfall across the remainder of the country was sparse. Thundershowers were scattered from the central Rockies into Nebraska, along the Atlantic coastline from southern Maryland across Florida and the Gulf Coast into western Texas.

Showers fell from the eastern Great Lakes into northern New England.

Skies were mostly sunny from the Pacific Coast to the Rockies and from the Tennessee Valley into the Great Lakes and upper Mississippi Valley.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from a low of 53 at Binghamton, N.Y., to a high of 109 at Palm Springs, Calif.

Saturday's forecast called for scattered thundershowers from the Intermountain region to the mid-Rockies and western Great Lakes. Thunderstorms were forecast for the Gulf Coast and Florida with showers in Maine.

Highs exceeding 100 were predicted for the Southwest deserts an-interior California. Elsewhere, highs in the 80s and 90s were predicted, with cooler 60s and 70s in the Northeast. It will be cool in the Great Lakes and much of the Northwest.

—East: Atlanta 87 partly cloudy; Boston 75 fair; Caribou 64 windy; Charleston, S.C., 89 hazy; Cincinnati 78 partly cloudy; Cleveland 65 fair; Miami 89 thunderstorm; Nashville 82 fair; New York 71 partly cloudy; Philadelphia 67 partly cloudy; Pittsburgh 66 partly cloudy; Washington 77 windy.

Scattered showers continued late Friday afternoon over much of South Texas and parts of north central Texas.

Gramm-Latta budget bill passes

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Phil Gramm of College Station walked off the House floor Friday evening, sat down wearily but happily in a couch and basked in what he considers his most satisfying hour since coming to Congress 2½ years ago.

"We have won on a piece of legislation that will go a long way to change the country," Gramm said.

Several Democrats who previously had supported the Gramm-Latta budget bill, which was endorsed by President Reagan, switched their votes Friday.

"But we lost some others," House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth conceded. "We did our best. I thought we were going to pull it out. I don't have any regrets. I thought we had the right side and that we fought an honorable battle."

Meanwhile, even as the budget debate was taking place, Rep. Mickey Leland of Houston released to newsmen the text of a Saturday speech in which he calls for discipline of Gramm and two other Texas "turncoats" for their leadership roles on Reagan economic battles.

The vote on Friday's victory was 217-211 for Gramm-Latta as a substitute to the budget bill adopted by the Democratic controlled committees. Texas congressmen supported the measure, 13-11, with all five Republicans and eight of its Democrats backing it.

Rep. Ralph Hall of Rockwall, who supported the president's position in key votes Thursday, switched and backed the Democratic leadership Friday.

His vote Thursday had been considered somewhat of a surprise, even though he's a member of the Conservative Democratic Forum that has provided the swing vote on the issue. Hall indicated he had committed to support the Democratic position earlier in exchange for a gas bill important to Texas.

Joining Gramm among Texas Democrats supporting Gramm-Latta were CDF chairman Charlie Stenholm of Stamford, Kent Hance of Lubbock, Marvin Leath of Marlin, Richard White of El Paso, Jack Hightower of Vernon, Sam Hall of Marshall and Charlie Wilson of Lufkin.

"I'm tired. It was hard work yesterday, and it was just as hard today," said Gramm, who spent his day running in and out of the House chamber.

The full budget bill, a substitute for the Democratic version, wasn't available for perusal until about noon Friday, and Democrats complained they didn't know what was in it. They kept attacking provisions in the proposal.

"Whenever a charge was made, I went out and researched the facts and then came back and straightened out the different members with the facts. It wasn't a day in which I was at the microphone all day. I was going back and forth, but it was something that had to be done to get it passed," Gramm said.

Wright said at least one member, Rep. Ronnie Flippo, D-Ala., got a call from President Reagan four minutes before the roll call vote began.

"He was with us, but then he got the phone call. He voted for Gramm-Latta and then disappeared. I tried to find him to talk with him, but he was gone. I don't know what happened to him," Wright said.

Asked what he did to get Ralph Hall to switch and voted with the leadership, Wright said: "I talked with him, and he seemed to see that we were making sense."

An elated Republican leader commented that the Democrats no longer had the majority in either the House or the Senate.

"That was a comment!" Wright said when the remark was relayed to him. "We didn't have it on this issue. I think that's incontrovertible."

After Thursday's vote, a number of Democratic loyalists renewed their cry that members of the party who defected should be punished by being stripped of key committee assignments or their chairmanships of committees or subcommittees.

Leland's attack, scheduled before a meeting of the Texas Coalition of Black Democrats in Amarillo, concentrated on Gramm and Hance, although he was critical of Stenholm also.

Gramm spearheaded the bipartisan effort on Reagan's budget proposal, while Hance heads the bipartisan tax cut bill.

The two, Leland said, "have crossed the line of acceptable political conduct by actually sponsoring the Reagan budget and tax programs."

He added, "Although I have no patience with those members of the Texas delegation who vote with Reagan — or especially those like Charlie Stenholm who appear with the president and reap the personal attention and publicity, and would like to see them defeated — Hance and Gramm deserve a forceful immediate response from the Democratic Party. They should be punished."

He called Hance, Gramm and Stenholm "three evil men" and "flakes" who should be denied party funds and organizational support.

Leland said he will ask the Texas Democratic Executive Committee at its next meeting "to censure them and officially deny them any future party assistance of any type, including campaign funds."

He said he will seek "real" Democrats to oppose them and will encourage the Democratic Caucus in the House to strip them of their important committee assignments.

GAO study cites shortages, lack of training

WASHINGTON (AP) — The armed forces have only half the active-duty and reserve medical personnel they would need in event of a full-scale military mobilization and many of those people lack skills or experience in caring for casualties, the General Accounting Office says.

The GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, said in a newly released reoort that because of the all-volunteer force and the likelihood that a future conflict would begin with little warning, "critical wartime medical personnel shortages are probable, especially in physician, nurse and enlisted medical personnel categories."

Although they have embarked on several programs to recruit and retain physicians in the service, Defense Department officials do not expect to fill already-authorized slots "until the late 1980s and expect shortages in several specialty categories to continue after that," the report said.

While the overall shortage for full-scale mobilization amounts to 50 percent, the greatest need is for surgeons, especially in the Army, it added.

In its contingency planning, GAO investigators said, the Pentagon has concentrated on long-range goals and has not completed plans for coping with medical needs "if the nation went to war tomorrow."

And the report said that while emergency management planners believe the nation has enough civilian medical personnel to meet most needs during a major non-nuclear war, "a reliable assessment of how (they) should be used to meet both military and civilian commitments after mobilization has not been made."

The Selective Service System also has not determined the rate at which medical personnel could be drafted for military duty, it said.

The report noted that the Defense Department has developed plans to use Veterans Administration medical centers and certain civilian hospitals to provide care to troops in case of war.

In another section, the GAO study found fault with the training and proficiency of Army medical personnel.

Analyzing the results of proficiency tests in four major Army commands, the report said some essential tasks were failed by more than half of the field me-ics and clinical, operating room and laboratory specialists in the enlisted ranks.

Medical "officers are also ill-prepared for combat operations," the study said. It pointed to a June 1979 memorandum by the Army surgeon general that said most military doctors "had no training or experience on the realities" of living and working in the field.

Five executed in Kurdistan; Bani-Sadr still hiding

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Firing squads executed eight Kurdish "counterrevolutionaries" in the northwest Iranian town of Urumiyeh on Friday, Tehran radio said.

The pre-dawn executions brought to 52 the number of death sentences carried out in the past week in a crackdown on opposition following the dismissal of moderate President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

A five-day nationwide manhunt for the fugitive ex-president failed to produce any clue to his whereabouts.

An official at the office of Tehran revolutionary prosecutor Assadollah Lajavardi told The Associated Press in Beirut by telephone that authorities had had no word on Bani-Sadr since an arrest-on-sight order was issued last Sunday.

All of the eight executed in Urumiyeh were convicted of "armed uprising against the Islamic Republic of Iran and opening fire on defenseless people," according to the radio broadcast.

It was not clear if Friday's executions were related to an attack by Kurdish insurgents on a funeral procession in the city of Mahabad, 30 miles southeast of Urumiyeh in a region where Kurds are seeking autonomy from the Tehran government.

Six mourners were killed in that attack. The city's governor and six revolutionary guardsmen were wounded. The funeral was for a city dignitary killed Tuesday by Kurdish rebels, Tehran radio said.

The government has been accusing guerrillas of the Kurdistan Democratic Party of joining forces with Marxist, Leninist and Maoist anti-government groups in an "anti-Islamic counter-revolution under the pretext of supporting Bani-Sadr."

Bani-Sadr was fired as president by revolutionary leader Ayatollah Rubollah Khomeini on Monday, one day after the fundamentalist-dominated Majlis, or Parliament, overwhelmingly voted for Bani-Sadr's impeachment.

In several parts of Iran on Friday voters cast ballots in by-elections to fill 10 Majlis seats and complete the Parliament's 227-deputy membership.

Elections for a new president will be held July 24.

Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, around whom the clergy-led fundamentalists of the Islamic Republican Party rallied in the year-long power struggle with Bani-Sadr, is generally considered the front-runner.

It's the act, not the age, that counts

By MIKE HENDRICKS
Associated Press Writer

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The backyard argument over a bicycle was the kind of dispute 15-year-olds have all the time.

But this disagreement turned to tragedy with the appearance of a .22-caliber rifle: Chris Butler died of a bullet wound to the chest, and Bill Allen is charged with murder.

Despite his age, Allen is no juvenile in the eyes of the law. Under a new state statute, the teen-ager will be tried as an adult. Armed with a "get tough" approach to juvenile crime, New York prosecutors may now treat children as young as 13 as adults when they are accused of violent crimes.

Before Sept. 1, 1980, a case like Bill Allen's would have been handled in family court, where his interests would have been the judge's guiding concern and a five-year confinement the harshest possible sentence.

Now Allen, who has been held on $10,000 bail since his arrest in November, faces trial before a judge accustomed to grownup defendants. Prosecutors will not consider him a boy, but a defendant accused of taking a life. If convicted, he could receive a sentence of three years to life in prison.

Since September, the cases of 177 teen-agers have been adjudicated in adult courts in New York state; 22 ended in murder convictions.

Several other states have made similar changes in the treatment of juvenile criminals in recent years. The American Bar Association wants the states to enact uniform laws that would change the legal system's traditional parental approach toward young defendants.

"The trend seems to be to get tougher with the kids who are most violent and more lenient with the kids who are least violent," said David Gilman, who was head of the ABA's juvenile justice project before taking on the job of revising New York's family court laws.

Traditionally, juvenile offenders have been treated as delinquents rather than criminals. In sentencing, judges took into consideration the accused's best interests and background — not what the youngster did. And their names were generally not made public.

Now, "the trend is to make the practice proportionate to the seriousness of the harm the child has caused," said Gilman.

Hunter Hurst of the National Center for Juvenile Justice in Pittsburgh said the revisions are being made out of frustration and what he called "an ill-defined need to do something.

"New York state's laws were not passed out of any sense of optimism that they would be effective, but out of a felt need to do anything about the inadequacy of the existing system," he said.

It's not that there's been a surge in violent crimes by juveniles in recent years — the FBI Uniform Crime Reports actually show an 11 percent decrease in juvenile arrests from 1975-1979 — but that there is more frustration with juvenile crime, Hurst said. "The general mood is to get tougher."

But putting juveniles into adult courts does not necessarily result in stiffer punishments — the youth brought into adult court often receives a lighter sentence than he might in family court, he said.

"The seasoned criminal kid, and there are such kids, has his prior criminal record read in juvenile court, but in adult court he's just a fuzzy-cheeked kid and there is less inclination to bring the world crashing down on his head," Hurst said. "We talk tough, but we don't want to follow through."

John Gormley, the assistant district attorney handling Allen's case, said adult court is the place for minors accused of violent crimes. "You ought to get into the adult system if you commit adult crimes," he said. "Absent some compelling factor, if a juvenile is responsible for the death of another individual he should be treated as an adult."

In this upstate New York city of 180,000, a jury has convicted a 15-year-old male prostitute of manslaughter for killing a businessman. After meting out a three- to 10-year sentence, Onondaga County Judge William Burke said, "There is no question in my mind that if he were an adult, I would have leveled the 25 years on him."

In other cases here, a pregnant 14-year-old got a three- to 10-year term after pleading guilty to manslaughter in the stabbing death of a neighbor girl. A similar sentence was ordered for a 16-year-old boy convicted of sodomizing a 7-year-old boy at knifepoint. The teen-ager was on probation for assaulting a 12-year-old girl at the time of the second offense.

Critics of the tougher new laws say teen-agers prosecuted as adults often must wait too long for trial and seldom receive harsher treatment than they would have in family court.

And other critics agree with Flora Rothman, director of the New York Coalition for Juvenile Justice and Youth Services.

"If 13- and 14-year-olds are too immature to marry or quit school or make contracts, do they suddenly grow up when they are accused of a crime?" she asked. "Treating them like adults may sound good, but it won't solve the crime problem."

Muggers get help from tourist maps

The Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — Muggers are getting some unexpected help in their chosen careers here by tourist maps that are sending unsuspecting visitors on a perilous walk between the downtown area and Golden Gate Park, a distance of two miles that on the maps looks like a leisurely four-block stroll.

The route takes visitors through a public-housing complex in the Western Addition that has one of the highest crime rates in the city. More than 75 street assaults were logged in the area last month, and police said that robberies so far this year are up sharply over 1980.

In effect, the victims are being unintentionally delivered into the hands of the muggers.

"Going in there is like going into a war zone," a pop8napatrols the area said. "And sending some innocent tourist in there thinking he's out for a walk to Golden Gate Park is like turning a kitten loose on the freeway."

The tourists are especially vulnerable because they are so visible as tourists, usually carrying cameras and dressed casually. Also, muggers know there is little chance of them returning to the city as witnesses in case of an arrest and trial.

So serious has the situation become that Police Chief Cornelius Murphy has asked one of the mapmakers to modify its maps to "more accurately reflect the scale, in distance, from which the various points of interests are located."

Murphy told the mapmaker, Color Coded Publications of San Francisco, that its maps are "somewhat misleading and may jeopardize the safety of visitors to our city."

But John Benus, editor and publisher of Color Coded Publications, said he had never had a complaint from a tourist about his maps and that he had no intention of changing them. "I don't think that many people are walking through that area," he said.

Another company, Tourmap Co. of Spokane, Wash., is reprinting its maps to include a warning that some areas of the city are not safe for walking and pointing out that distances on its maps are distorted.

The maps that the company now distributes include a greeting from Mayor Dianne Feinstein, who wrote that she hopes they "will be a valuable guide to you during your visit in discovering the many attractions which San Francisco has to offer...."

Tourmap official Richard Ingalls said he was "sorry if anyone has been misled by our maps. But our business is helping the visitor get around in an unfamiliar area."

The maps from both Color Coded Publications and Tourmap, which carry advertising from tourist-oriented businesses, are available at tourist outlets throughout the city and from the Visitors and Convention Bureau.

Getting most for savings dollars

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Trying to calculate the best return on your savings dollars is almost as hard as earning the money in the first place.

Bills passed by House and Senate committees this week make things even more complicated.

The legislation proposes a new tax break at the expense of an old one. It generally will help consumers in high-tax brackets with a substantial sum to deposit for one year. People trying to save a few hundred dollars a month, with no investments other than savings, could lose money.

The moves are designed to help the savings and loan industry regain customers who have been taking money from thrift institutions and putting it into flexible, high-interest, money-market funds.

The separate bills passed by the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee create a one-year savings certificate with tax-free interest of up to $1,000 for individuals and $2,000 for married couples. Under the Senate bill, the certificates could be offered by all banks, S&Ls and credit unions. The House bill would restrict the certificates to mortgage-lending institutions. The House bill also requires that the certificates be available in denominations as small as $500; the Senate bill has no limit.

The certificates could be offered for one year only, beginning Oct. 1. The maximum interest would be 70 percent of the interest rate on one-year Treasury Bills — now about 13 percent.

The proposed program has some drawbacks for small savers. Last year, Congress passed a bill letting taxpayers deduct $200 worth of interest and dividends — $400 for a married couple — from income for tax purposes. But that bill applies to 1981 only.

To make up for some of the tax money the government would lose on the new certificates, the House and Senate committees voted not to extend the interest and dividend deduction. In the future, the deduction would apply only to dividends and would be limited to $100 for individuals and $200 for married couples.

Here's what it means:

Suppose you have $1,000. Put it in a passbook savings account, with interest compounded daily, and you'll earn about $55 a year. You have ready access to your money. You may cut your earnings if you make a withdrawal, but your balance can fluctuate and, if you average about $1,000, you won't lose much. Under 1981 rules, you pay no federal income tax on the interest. It's less than the exemption.

If you keep your money in the passbook account next year, you'll pay tax on the $55. Suppose, instead, you put your money in one of the new certificates. With one-year Treasury Bills paying about 13 percent interest, the certificates would pay 9.1 percent. If interest is compounded daily, you'll receive about $95, tax-free, in one year. that's $40 more than you get with a passbook account, but the entire sum must be on deposit for the full year.

Now suppose you're trying to save $200 a month and you're in the 30 percent tax bracket. If you put $200 in a passbook account at the beginning of each month, you'll earn just under $75 in one year. With the existing tax exemption, you keep all $75. Under the finance committee plan, however, interest on savings is subject to federal income tax unless you buy one of the new certificates. You'll pay tax on the $75 at the rate of 30 percent; you get to keep only about $52.

Investors with more money have more options and tax bracket is a key factor in selecting the best one.

Take a married couple with $10,000. The current rate on $10,000, six-month certificates of deposit is just over 14 percent — about $1,400 a year if you renew the certificate at the same rate.

Levi Brooking may not be the lonliest repairman in Oklahoma City, but he has to be close. A breath of yesterday in a throw-away world, he repairs fountain pens and cigarette lighters. Here he's working on a 14-karat gold lighter.

Fewer purists mean less business for repairman

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Levi Brooking is a breath of yesterday in a throw-away world.

He shows up at his cluttered downtown shop at 7 a.m., five days a week — ready, willing and able to repair cigarette lighters and fountain pens.

That may make him the loneliest repairman in town.

"There was a time I'd have maybe 150 pens in here at a time to fix," he said. "Pens were sent in from eight states.

"Now, I get maybe eight or 10 people in the office in a week, a lot of times a lot less, and once in a while someone mails in a pen for me to fix."

But if you're a purist and don't hold with the new-fangled, throw-away ball points and felt tips, you take or send your pen to places like Brooking's Pen & Lighter Repair. Brooking feels there aren't too many purists left.

He didn't criticize people who use ball point pens, but noted crisply, "I've never used one." Then he reached into his desk and pulled out an envelope addressed in flowing script by his daughter-in-law in California. "You can't do that kind of work with a ball point," he said.

Brooking — a 76-year-old, curly-haired, elfin man who reels off joke after joke — said he got into the pen repair business rather by accident.

"When I got out of the Navy I bought a pen off a guy and it needed fixing. I took it to this other guy and he offered me a job. So I went to the factories and took their courses in pen repairing," he explained.

One section of wall, the only area not covered by antique guns or old photographs or tropical fish tanks or bowling trophies or darkened by the ivy that twines in masses across the ceiling and wall to wall in the back room, holds the certificates from the nation's major pen manufacturers. They are dated 1946.

He proudly pulled out tray after tray of antique pens. "How much do you think this one is worth?" he asked, holding a Parker pen more than an inch in diameter. "I just got off the telephone a little while ago with a guy in Michigan who wanted to know if I'd take $500 for it."

He chuckled as he showed other pens, then turned to some of the lighters sitting in his case, waiting for owners to return. One, a gold Dunhill, has been in his shop since March 21, 1978.

"A guy keeps coming in here and wanting to buy it," he said. "But I tell him, 'Well, the guy that brought it in said he was going to come back for it.' "

There was a time when he was at his bench all day, but now he readily admits his work is more of a hobby. He says he would retire and go home to Ludie, his wife of 56 years, "if I thought my gun collection would be safe at home and nobody would break in and steal it."

With that, he started taking down the guns and reciting their pedigrees.

"I'll bet you never saw one like this," he said with a grin. "Read what it says on top."

The inscription is Winchester Model 36, 9mm rim fire shotgun, Aug. 29, 1899.

"I went to the Winchester museum and I couldn't find one like it," he said. "Maybe they had one, but I didn't see it."

He opened the filing cabinet and pulled out an old cap-and-ball pistol.

"My granddaddy carried this in the Civil War," he said. "Over there is the rifle he carried and there is his powder horn and bullet case."

Guns began appearing more quickly than a visitor could comprehend: a Colt Peacemaker (the gun that won the West), a World War II German Luger, a double-barreled muzzle-loader, a pistol with a folding trigger, a Belgian shotgun, a 1911 Navy automatic.

Brooking chuckled and wondered aloud how much longer his business would continue. But then, he said, "They told us our marriage would never last.

"We were both working for an insurance company and we came in one morning, got our shoes shined, went to the Courthouse and took out a marriage license. We asked if anybody could marry us then. The judge was holding court, but he just stopped the trial, pulled in the first two people who passed the door as witnesses and married us. We went right back to work."

A pensive look crossed his face as he looked around the two-room shop, mentally cataloging a labor of love.

"They warned us our marriage wouldn't last," he said. "We're waiting to see."

Waste ban ruled unconstitutional

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Washington's ban on receiving nuclear waste shipments from other states was overturned Friday by a federal judge who said the voter-approved measure was unconstitutional.

Disposal of nuclear wastes "is a problem of such national concern that it cannot be limited by state boundaries," said U.S. District Judge Robert J. McNichols.

State attorneys said it was "more than likely" McNichol's ruling would be appealed.

Assistant Attorney General Ken MacIntosh said the initiative passed last November with "overwhelming support" and expressed the "will of the people."

"The judge's decision was very well reasoned," he said. "(But) I think the judge took a conservative position on the case.

"Our basis was that the state had the ability to exclude (nuclear) waste all along. After all, (the disposal sites) are located on state land," he said.

McNichols said the law violated the supremacy and commerce clauses of the constitution.

Initiative 383, which was to take effect Wednesday, called for a halt to all deliveries from outside the state of non-medical radioactive materials to a dump site on the Hanford nuclear reservation in southeastern Washington.

The disposal facility is operated by U.S. Ecology Inc., and is one of only three such sites in the country. The others are in Nevada and South Carolina.

The largest shippers of nuclear waste to the Washington site include Nuclear Metals Inc. of Concord, Mass., Metropolitan Edison, operators of the crippled Three Mile Island nuclear plant near Middletown, Pa., and Commonwealth Edison of Chicago.

Michael Gendler, lawyer for Don't Waste Washington, a pro-initiative group, said the judge "he has made a decision where other states will continue to burden Washington with almost the entire nation's nuclear waste."

But he said that unless the attorney general gives the case higher priority, "we are going to request that he not appeal at all."

"The state at the attorney general level and the governor's office lacked enthusiasm for enforcing the initiative and defending it," he said.

The federal government argued the ban restricted interstate commerce and might prompt the other sites to follow suit. The state contended the Hanford site was set up voluntarily and the state should not be forced to accept other states' wastes.

Michael Crutcher, a lawyer for a coalition of nuclear industry companies that joined the Justice Department in asking McNichols to overturn the initiative, praised the decision, but predicted the battle was far from over.

Crutcher said voters shouldn't think their ballots were cast in vain. Passage of the ban prodded Congress to take action toward solving the nuclear waste disposal problem, he said.

The federal government encourages the development of regional nuclear waste disposal sites by 1986, McNichols said. Until then, as a member of the "family of states," Washington should share the country's burdens.

"I believe that the actions being taken jointly by the Congress and the state's Legislature will result in a solution to the waste-disposal problem," he said.

Quality Makes Sense!
Homestead Ceiling Fans are the most finely crafted American made fans on the market today, with engineering advances most other manufacturers are still trying to copy. All Whisperfans come standard with variable speed control, reversible motor and 5 year warranty.

Quietness Makes Sense!
Through years of research, Homestead has pioneered the quietest ceiling fans on the market using a General Electric motor with patented Torsion-Flex® mount and our patented flywheel design.

Energy Savings Make Sense!
Most homes and businesses were not constructed with energy conservation in mind and do not use heating and cooling energy in an efficient manner. Ceiling fans are one of the most cost efficient means to supplement an existing air distribution system. Operating at less than 100 watts of power at full speed, the 52" Whisperfan I and Whisperfan II will provide year-round comfort and real energy savings for only pennies a day.

Whisperfan® III Makes Sense!
Homestead Products introduces Whisperfan® III, our most exciting model ever! This matchless six-bladed beauty looks dramatic even when standing still. Whisperfan® III had the lowest energy consumption of any American-manufactured ceiling fan, operating at full speed on less than 50 watts of power. The six blades provide more air with less air noise than similar size four-bladed fans at the same speed. Its handsome 38" span fits perfectly into bedrooms, kitchens, over dining tables and in other average size rooms.

1. First Ceiling Fan Manufacturer in the United States to design and build a quiet ceiling fan.
2. First Ceiling Fan Manufacturer to build a ceiling fan that uses less than 50 watts of power at full speed.
3. First Ceiling Fan Manufacturer to build a highly efficient six bladed ceiling fan.
4. First in quality and craftsmanship, because of extensive quality control inspections, we see very few fans ever come back for service.

Nutritional cancer therapy linked to bacterial disease

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — A rare bacterial disease has been linked to "nutritional therapy," a controversial cancer treatment used by the late actor Steve McQueen, the national Centers for Disease Control said today.

The disease-causing organism, dubbed an "opportunistic bacterium" because it only infects people who already are seriously ill, struck at least 10 people who underwent nutritional therapy for cancer at a clinic in Tijuana, Mexico, the CDC said.

All 10 cases were reported between January 1979 and March 1981 by the San Diego County Department of Health, which had not seen a single case in the previous two years, the report said.

Fewer than 20 cases of the bacterial illness are reported in the United States each year.

McQueen died of cancer late last year.

The nutritional therapy regimen consists of meals of freshly prepared raw fruit, vegetable juices and raw calf liver. Coffee enemas also are part of the treatment.

"Not only is there no evidence the treatment is effective, but is also causes a hazard," said Dr. Martin J. Blaser, an Epidemic Intelligence Service officer with the CDC.

"These people were pretty sick to begin with — they had advanced cases of cancer — and going to these treatment centers was a pretty desperate thing," Blaser said.

Savings institutions look for aid in Washington

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drained by dwindling deposits, the nation's savings and loan institutions are looking for help in the nation's capital. So far there is a lot of talk but little action.

Officials of the institutions — and regulators such as chairman Richard Pratt of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board — are reluctant to speak too dramatically of the S&Ls' problems for fear of shaking savers' confidence.

But they admit that help is needed.

Numerous savings and loan associations are reported to be losing money under current credit conditions, paying as much as 15 percent to attract deposits while holding old home loans with interest rates as low as 6 percent.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported Thursday that S&Ls suffered a record third straight monthly loss in new deposits in May — the first loss ever in that usually strong month.

Americans withdrew $161 million more than they deposited in May, the bank board reported.

If there was a silver lining for that dark cloud, it would be a comparison of May's net outflow with the record losses of $2.1 billion in March and $4.6 billion in April.

On the other hand, most of the improvement came from a big increase in the number of $10,000-minimum money market certificates — with the gain mostly due to the fact that the institutions were paying interest rates of 15 percent or more.

Still, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan says, "the problems of the thrift institutions are temporary and manageable."

On Thursday:

—The federal Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee agreed to phase out interest ceilings on all but passbook savings accounts by A7gust 1985. The action also included an easing in August of limits on the 2½-year "small saver" certificate, a move that could help the savings institutions compete better with unregulated money market mutual funds for savers' dollars.

—But the committee rejected the idea of restoring a quarter-point differential between the interest S&Ls and commercial banks may pay on some deposits. The S&Ls want to be able to pay the extra bit to lure money away from the banks, which, by most accounts, are faring better financially.

—The Federal National Mortgage Association — "Fannie Mae" — issued broad guidelines on the types of adjustable-rate mortgages it will buy from primary lenders, such as S&Ls. The wide variety of loans the agency will accept was good news for lenders.

—Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker told Congress he favors imposition of reserve requirements on private money market mutual funds, which can be used as checking accounts. But he said he does not want reserves required against funds that are used only as investments. Many S&L officials are hoping for a federal crackdown on their unregulated competitors.

Austin park considered

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An Oklahoma company specializing in carnival midways is looking at Austin as a possible location for a $10 million to $12 million theme amusement park.

Davenport, Iowa, is the other site under consideration by Murphy Enterprises Inc. of Tulsa, said company president Jerry Murphy.

Murphy said no decision would be made until the fall, and construction could not start before late 1982.

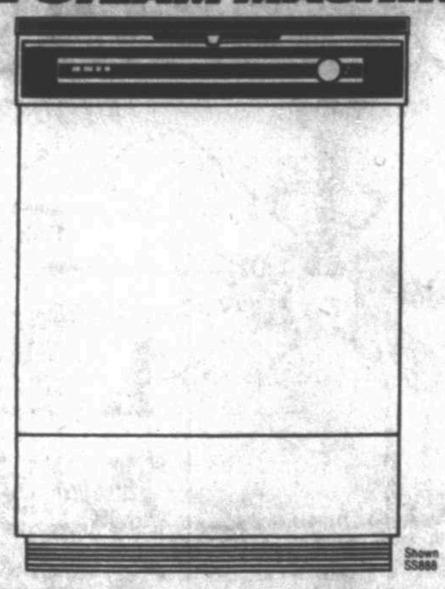

Murphy's company has operated carnivals here for the past three years, including one last May.

He said the park would cover 14 to 20 acres and feature rides such as a loop roller coaster and a log flume as well as musical shows. The park would be divided into areas with specific themes, he said.

Murphy has presented city officials a market feasibility study prepared by the company that did the preliminary survey for Six Flags Over Texas.

Communists' standing seemingly unclear in France

PARIS (AP) — Have France's Communists won or lost in the busy two-month electoral process just finished?

The facts are clear. The implications are not.

The Communist popular vote dropped in the elections from post-war highs ranging of 18-20 percent to about 16 per cent. The Communists lost about half of their seats in Parliament.

A crushing defeat? Yes, but for the first time in 34 years, there are Communists in a French government. And they are dealing with important sectors of French life.

The parliamentary elections gave Socialist President Francois Mitterrand an overwhelming majority — 285 out of 491 seats. The Communists, with only 44 seats, were relegated to the bottom of the main political groupings in Parliament.

Yet Mitterrand has named Communists to ministerial posts in charge of transport, health, professional training and civil service.

Bernard Pons, secretary general of the conservative Gaullist party, noted that although the number of Communists in the government is small, their posts "cover essential sectors of the economic and social life of our country."

Mitterrand's aides stress that the Communist ministers' influence will be limited domestic matters. Cabinet meetings rarely take up classified issues, and the Communist ministers will be excluded from all sensitive defense and foreign policy discussions and decisions, they said.

Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson said Friday a State Department statement earlier this week criticizing the appointment of Communist ministers in France was "surprising and unacceptable."

Vice-President George Bush said Friday that he had sought and received assurances from Mitterrand that the appointments will not compromise the NATO alliance.

"I just have a feeling ...there won't be the complications some might think," Bush told reporters.

Mitterrand probably could have governed with relative smoothness — in French terms — with the Communists on the sidelines.

But Communist Party leader Georges Marchais virtually demanded Cabinet seats. Noting that four million Frenchmen voted Communist in the election, he argued that Mitterrand owed both his presidency and large parliamentary majority in part to Communist support.

The president, his associates recall, has worked for years for unity of the Left and creation of a viable governing alternative to 23 years of right-center rule.

In addition, the Communists control France's largest labor federation, and Mitterrand could see the possibility of strikes if they were frozen out.

Mitterrand, among the most effective modern-day French political strategists, has neutralized the Communists by binging thm into his government, many French political commentators believe.

He got the Communists to sign a joint governing pact which made them retreat from some of their previous divergent views. This was particularly true on foreign policy, where the Communists agreed to call for withdrawal of the 85,000 Soviet troops from Afghanistan, where before they had backed the Soviet incursion.

In exchange, they received only four non-sensitive positions in the 44-member Cabinet.

The anti-Communist but leftist newspaper Liberation headlined: "The Communists Enter the French Government on Their Knees." The satirical weekly Le Canard Enchaine wrote: "The Socialists Have Nationalized the Communists," a reference to Socialist pledges to nationalize more of France's banks and industry.

Nevertheless, pre-election suggestions that Mitterrand would simply throw the Communists some crumbs does not appear to be the case.

Charles Fiterman, the No. 2 man in the Communist Party, has been named to head the Transport Ministry. This makes him the fourth-ranking Cabinet member, in charge of the railway system, airlines, urban transport and much of the shipping industry.

Communist ministers will also be responsible for 2.4 million civil servants and for operating the state health service that covers virtually every Frenchman. Their fourth minister will supervise the state scheme — to which all private industry contributes — under which all workers are entitled to training courses for professional advancement or to recycle them out of France's many dying industries.

Fiterman says he is insulted by American allegations that Moscow would have easier access to French state secrets through the Communist Cabinet members.

"Nobody has the right to question our loyalty to France. We are not delegates from the Communist Party. We are respectful of the Constitution," he said in a television interview.

Thus, the Communists, weakened in vote and parliamentary muscle, still are not "out in the Cold."

Soviet, Polish troops hold maneuvers

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Soviet and Polish troops were on maneuvers in southern Poland Friday, and Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Bulgaria sent messages to Poland's Communist leadership believed urging a crackdown on reforms sparked by the independent union Solidarity.

The official news agency PAP reported the joint maneuvers were held in the Silesia military district, had been scheduled long ago and were "traditional."

In London, senior Allied authorities said they saw no indication a Soviet-led military intervention was planned. A British source said Allied observations suggest the military situation in Poland is "not acute."

Extended maneuvers in Poland, Czechoslovakia and East Germany by 18 Warsaw Pact divisions concluded April 7 after three weeks of war games that raised alarm in Western capitals over possible Soviet-led military intervention.

President Reagan at that time sent a personal note of concern to Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev and U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. cut short a Mideast tour to return to Washington for consultations on Poland.

Pentagon officials and NATO military leaders said the "Soyuz '81" spring maneuvers also activated a sophisticated communications network linking the Red Army general staff with military headquarters in East Germany, Poland and Czechoslovakia. NATO officials said the exercises had enhanced the capability of the Warsaw Pact forces to intervene at short notice.

Although the Polish news agency said the latest exercises were long-scheduled, the announcement's timing coincided with word that messages were sent to the Polish Communist leadership from the leaders of Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Bulgaria.

Official sources said they had not seen the text of the latest messages. But they speculated they echoed the Kremlin line laid down in a letter sent to the Polish Communist Party Central Committee before it held a hastily-called session June 10.

The Soviet warning, from the Soviet party Central Committee, urged firm action against "counter-revolutionary" and "anti-socialist" elements and leveled direct criticism at Polish party leader Stanislaw Kania. Kania, accused of failing to contain the reform movement, survived an attempt by party hardliners to oust him.

Last weekend, the official spokesman for the Soviet Central Committee said in Moscow the time had come for "decisive action" to pull Poland out of a "catastrophic situation."

Western analysts in Moscow said the statements by Leonid M. Zamyatin could be interpreted to mean the Soviets were considering military intervention before the Polish Communist Party Congress convenes July 14.

But Western authorities in London said Friday the new exercises were probably an attempt to exert pressure on the Polish party, which will choose new leaders and is expected to ratify the social and political liberalizations that have swept Poland in the 10 months since the independent labor union Solidarity was formed.

Czechoslovakia's Communist Party had been warned before its congress in 1968 to stop the liberalization movement there; Warsaw Pact troops intervened in August, 1968.

PAP said the message from Hungarian leader Janos Kadar was "frank but friendly," expressing concern but also professing the belief Poland could overcome its crisis with its own forces. Bulgaria's Todor Zhivkov "expressed the conviction of Bulgarian Communists that the (Polish) party will do everything possible to lead the country out of the crisis," PAP said.

The messages were delivered Monday, PAP said. The agency did not report on the message from Czechoslovakia, the third received this week.

The 140-member Central Committee is scheduled to convene next week, after the grassroots selection of delegates to the July party congress is completed, an official source said.

With selection of the delegates nearing completion, Politburo member Tadeusz Grabski said some of local elections demonstrated "ideological unsteadiness," according to a report in the daily Zycie Warszawy.

In Geneva, the Swiss-based Intergovernmental Committee for Migration reported the number of defecting Poles arriving at a transit center in Austria was soaring this week. On one day alone, Thursday, the center recorded 203 new requests for relocation aid, the ICM said. The committee said there are about 5,000 Poles registered at the center and an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 additional Poles housed in private homes.

Charleston police officers seal off the area where two city policemen were shot after they stopped a car early Friday morning. Authorities said Lt. Delbert Roush and Patrolman Ed Duncan were killed after they stopped the car next to the white vehicle on the right.

Woman gives bandits own brand of justice

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — Mary Markham said she never thought she'd have to use the guns she stashed under the counter at her liquor store.

But when two masked bandits walked in, put a gun to her son's head and shot her husband, she killed them both in a hail of gunfire.

Several Mount Clemens police officers described it as "something out of the Wild West."

"Quick justice," said Lt. Max Patrick.

"I'm really sorry about what happened," Mrs. Markham said. "I saw a gun at my son's head. What more can I say?"

Mrs. Markham, 44, had been training in the use of firearms since a January robbery when her family was out of the state.

At 10 p.m. Wednesday, she was in Bob Davey's Wine Shop with her 13-year-old son, Chad, when two men walked in wearing ski masks and carrying pistols.

One put a gun to the teen-ager's head and demanded money. The other put a gun to Mrs. Markham's head.

"I said, 'I'll give you all the money, but leave my son alone,'" she recalled Friday.

She started to empty the cash register and had managed to set off the store's silent alarm when her husband, Richard, 41, came out of his office and demanded to know what was going on.

The bandits shot him, but it was a small-caliber bullet and he was able to grapple with one of the gunmen.

In desperation, Mrs. Markham reached under the counter for her .357-caliber Magnum handgun and .32-caliber pistol and started blasting away, one gun in each hand, as bystanders hit the floor.

Police rushed to the scene within minutes, but by then both gunmen were dead.

"One man was hit five times, the other three," said police Lt. Nick Rouns. "That's pretty good shooting from two hands — for anyone."

Macomb County Prosecutor George N. Parris said the incident was under investigation and he had not decided whether charges would be filed.

Suspect in shooting surrenders

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A man wanted in connection with the shooting deaths of two policemen who had stopped a car for questioning surrendered to police Friday evening, Kanawha County Prosecutor Mike Roark said.

Antoine Hickman, 22, of Keystone, surrendered to an investigator who had contacted him by telephone, Roark said. He would not say how the investigator learned where Hickman was.

The surrender came hours after several of Hickman's relatives made pleas on local radio and television stations for him to surrender.

Roark said a warrant ad been issued charging Hickman with two counts of murder. Roark said his office had asked the FBI for assistance.

Lt. Delbert J. Roush Sr., 61, and Patrolman Eddie R. Duncan, 33, were fatally shot after they stopped a car on Charleston's West Side early Friday morning, said Police Chief Harry Silverman.

"They were shot for no reason at all," a police officer said after the shooting. "There was no major crime, no reason."

The shooting occurred after a woman told police she wanted to swear out an assault warrant against two men, Silverman said. Police issued an alert for a green C$dillac she said the two men had driven off in, he said.

The car was spotted and stopped near an entrance to Interstate 64 by Roush and Duncan, driving separate cruisers, Silverman said.

"The next thing we knew there was a strange voice on the radio that said two police officers were down," said patrolman Ivan Neeley.

Silverman said one of the officers was talking to the driver of the Cadillac when there was an "altercation" on the passenger side, where the second officer was standing.

"Shots were fired at an officer on that side and when the other officer came around the front of the vehicle, he was shot, too," he said.

"Apparently, when the officers were shot Hickman ran one way and the driver ran the other way. Then the driver came back," Roark said.

"Both he (the driver) and a passing motorist apparently made calls that the officer had been shot," he said.

Silverman said the driver of the Cadillac, whom he would not identify, turned himself into police. Authorities said they did not know if he would be charged in connection with the incident.

The woman who first reported the two men to police was also questioned, but was not identified, he said.

Roush was a 31-year veteran of the city's police force and Duncan had been on the force for four years.

State Medical Examiner Dr. Irvin Sopher said Roush was shot once under the left rib cage and Duncan was shot twice. Both were rushed to hospitals but efforts to revive them failed, officials said.

Henry Winkfield, a coach at Northfork High School where Hickman was a student, remembers him as a pleasant young man who played on the school's football and wrestling teams.

Gary Dove, Northfork's sports statistician, said "This really takes me by surprise. He was a popular kid in high school. He was real easy-going. I remember he always had a smile on his face. To my knowledge he had never been in any trouble."

Murder suspect's work under investigation

ATLANTA (AP) — Investigators are studying the talent scout work of Wayne B. Williams, charged with murdering one of 28 slain blacks, for a possible link to other killings, sources said Friday.

Investigators from a special task force and the FBI have visited recording studios and interviewed youths who may have auditioned for a singing group that Williams planned to promote, sources close to the inquiry said.

Williams, also a freelance photographer, apparently passed out handbills at housing projects and shopping malls offering youths a chance to audition, the sources said. They asked not to be identified.

The task force is investigating the slayings of 28 blacks and the disappearance of a 10-year-old black boy since July 1979.

Williams, 23, was charged Sunday with murdering 27-year-old Nathaniel Cater, oldest and most recent of the victims. On Tuesday, his case was ordered held for grand jury action.

One investigator close to the investigation said Friday that authorities' interest in Williams' music promotion activities continues. He cautioned that it was only one facet of the inquiry.

"He obviously went to a lot of places and auditioned several kids. You're going to have some people saying they know that one of the dead kids auditioned for him just because they liked to sing," said the investigator, who asked anonymity.

Sam Butts, director of a youth program at the Thomasville Heights housing project, said Williams circulated flyers there last fall.

"He left some with us, but we didn't pass them out because we weren't sure how it worked or who was sponsoring it. The handbills he gave us didn't have a name on them or anything — just a number," Butts said, adding Williams told him he planned a city-wide talent show.

The youth director said one of the slain youths who lived at Thomasville Heights, 16-year-old Patrick Rogers, often sang, composed songs and appeared in talent shows. Butts said he didn't know if Rogers ever auditioned for Williams.

Patrick's mother, Annie Rogers, also said she didn't know if her son had ever met Williams or auditioned for him.

In a news conference June 4, Williams said it would not have been unusual for police to see him with black youths because of his work as a musical promoter.

Meanwhile, the widow of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. said she believed Williams' arrest brought some relief to the black community.

"I think there probably is less anxiety among the citizens of Atlanta because they feel some sense of relief that there is a breakthrough," Coretta Scott King said at a news conference.

Talk delays add pressure for new weapons

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In principle, at least, Ronald Reagan is for getting started on negotiations with the Soviet Union to cap the nuclear weapons race.

But it might take nine months — until March 1982 — to open formal talks, the administration's prospective chief arms negotiator told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the other day.

"As of this moment, I don't know anybody in this government, with whom I've talked, who knows what it is we want to negotiate about," said Eugene Rostow, Reagan's nominee as director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

NINE MONTHS IS a long time for the two superpowers to keep trusting each other to live up to the SALT II treaty, which the Senate never voted on and which Reagan wants ultimately to scrap.

The two countries are not legally bound by the treaty signed in Vienna two years ago by Jimmy Carter and Leonid I. Brezhnev. And the treaty's protocol, which bans the deployment of ground-launched cruise missiles and mobile intercontinental ballistic missiles and the testing of ICBMs from mobile launchers, expires at the end of the year.

The delay predicted by Rostow would eliminate any prospect of negotiating an extension of the protocol.

THE UNRAVELING already has begun.

The administration has authorized the Navy to build its new cruise missile for deployment on submarines and surface vessels sometime after the middle of next year. Deployment this year was outlawed by the protocol.

On the Soviet side, expiration of the protocol would remove a restraint on deploying the SS16, their one mobile missile launcher, although some U.S. analysts think the five-year-old program no longer interests the Kremlin.

An Analysis

As the Reagan administration prolongs the moratorium on negotiations, U.S. and Soviet political leaders face pressure to dust off weapons blueprints and try out new missile systems that are hemmed in by either the protocol or the treaty or both.

BESIDES THE Navy's Tomahawk missile, the Pentagon is ready with plans for deploying ground-launched cruise missiles, the type to be based in Western Europe beginning in 1983.

Congress is studying options for deploying the MX missile, even though President Reagan has made no final decision. The protocol banned deployment this year.

The Soviets, meanwhile, probably are eager to flight-test heavy SS18 ICBMs with more than 10 re-entry warheads, the limit under the treaty. Once tests are conducted, the Soviets could have a new capability that a new SALT treaty could not reverse.

THE TREATY PERMITS the two sides to add only one new ICBM. The Soviets are known to have two new types ready to go.

The delay predicted by Rostow does not mean the United States or the Soviet Union will rip up the treaty and stir up the nuclear arms race again.

The danger for arms control is that the longer it takes to get to the bargaining table, the longer it will take to conclude a treaty satisfactory to both sides.

Reagan declared last October that "I will make immediate preparation for negotiations on a SALT II treaty."

BUT, AS ROSTOW indicated at his confirmation hearing, the administration simply isn't ready to bargain yet.

"This administration, on this issue and others, does not intend to pick up where the other left off. We would rather start from zero," said a State Department official who deals with arms control. "The people here want to think all these things through from the beginning."

An execution in Iran hits home in America

By KENDAL WEAVER
Associated Press Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — When the United States erupted with joy and relief over the release of its 52 hostages from Iran, one family in Alabama felt instead a tightening vise of fear.

Instead of ending, the ordeal of waiting grew worse for the family of Habib Kayfan, a family with loved ones still in Iran.

Now the nightmare the American hostages escaped — trials on trumped-up charges and firing squad executions — has become real.

"We got the call about 10 at night," Kayfan said. "They said he was killed, our time, about 4 in the afternoon the day before."

The executioners' victim was Dr. Firoz Nai'mi, a medical doctor who for years had run a small clinic in Hamadan and taught at a university. He was married. He was 45. And he was a member of the Bahai religious faith.

His sister here in Montgomery, Mahfarid Nai'mi Kayfan, says he was executed for being a Bahai leader, one of seven such men shot in Hamadan on June 14.

The Kayfans say Nai'mi is one of scores of Bahais executed in what they view as a spreading program of terrorism against the estimated 500,000 Bahais in Iran and the systematic seizure and destruction of Bahai holy centers.

The Bahai National Assembly, in an appeal sent Thursday to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, says many Bahais have been routed from their jobs, had savings confiscated, had homes looted or burned, seen cemeteries desecrated, been denied basic rights, been imprisoned without recourse to a lawyer and executed — all because of their religion.

It is, said Kayfan, "a little holocaust."

The Kayfans were granted political asylum in America in 1980 when Kayfan, a 42-year-old Iranian air force colonel training at the Air War College at Maxwell Air Force Base here, was "retired" and ordered back home.

They ignored the order and stayed. They bought a small grocery store with a short-order grill and three tables in a rundown neighborhood on the outskirts of the city. It provides a living.

The Kayfans have two daughters and two sons. The youngest is in third grade. The oldest is doing a pre-med course at the local branch of Auburn University.

But their faith is their life. As Mrs. Kayfan talks about her slain brother, she speaks calmly of a martyr. She pulls out telegrams they've received from friends. They say much the same thing: "Congratulations on martyrdom of our beloved Firoz."

They remember the last time they saw Nai'mi. He and his wife, Akhtar, visited here at Christmas 1979. They remember the concern all felt over events unfolding in their homeland, including the taking of the American hostages the month before. But it was a joyous reunion.

"We went to Florida to see Disney World," Mrs. Kayfan said. "It was a good time."

"We knew there would be a change of government," said Kayfan, "but we didn't think they would do anything against the Bahais."

Nai'mi and his wife returned to Iran. "There was no reason for them not to go back," Kayfan said.

But within a year, he said, Nai'mi and six other members of the local Bahai spiritual assembly in Hamadan — five of them doctors — had been thrown into solitary confinement.

Kayfan said Nai'mi's clinic and home were confiscated. Nai'mi's wife, who had worked for an airline for 22 years, was "retired" and denied any retirement benefits. She moved in with Nai'mi's mother, now 82.

Eventually relatives were allowed to visit Nai'mi in prison, twice a week for 30 minutes. But soon he was returned to solitary. No visits. No word. The trial had begun.

It was a closed trial and Nai'mi was allowed no lawyer. Kayfan said the seven Bahais were charged with "being surrogates for Zionism or imperialism." In effect, he said, they were "charged" with being Bahais, which is viewed as being a "political enemy" of the Islamic republic.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Talented comedian-moviemaker Mel Brooks, who is married to beautiful actress Anne Bancroft, shares this birthday with you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A visit with a friend or relative may be the highlight of your day. Avoid discussing money matters. Someone shares a secret with you. Celebrate good news!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Distant affairs contain some problems but a relative or neighbor helps you come up with a quick solution. Show your appreciation in tangible ways. Influential may be hard to please today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Trips to the beach or countryside are best postponed. An out-of-towner will add an air of excitement to what looked like an ordinary Sunday. Show this person a good time!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be more diplomatic when expressing your opinions. Stepped-up communications will help improve your social standing. Do not accept the first invitation that comes your way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your social life continues to be very rewarding, particularly where distant contacts are concerned. Exercise care when traveling today. Love looks lively now!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make some long-range plans today. Travel enjoys favorable influences. Let your spirit of adventure take over! You and mate become closer. Map the ideal vacation or honeymoon.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An influential friend can help further your interests now. Your contagious optimism will help set the stage for an important romantic encounter. You could make a permanent commitment!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Some creative thinking in the financial department could boost your spirits today! Welcome loved ones' ideas. A candid talk with your mate may reveal the answer to a puzzle.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Household chores could delay your departure for a social engagement today. Once you are out, however, you will receive a very pleasant surprise. Share your good news.

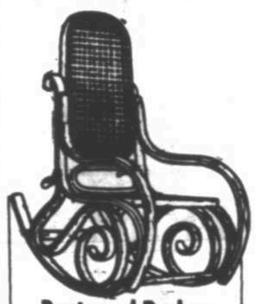

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not try to leap over a good friend in order to impress someone influential. Romance could turn sour if you act impulsively. Be more considerate of young person's feelings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An athletic event may be part of today's plan. Try not to take on more than you can comfortably handle. Showing off will not win you any points with the opposite sex.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An inspirational experience gives you insights that can help solidify family ties. Share your hopes and dreams with those closest to your heart.

French cowboy hangs tough

AP Laserphoto

Charles Beyssier sits on his saddle in the arena of a rodeo school in Mesquite where he is a member of Neal Gay's rodeo staff.

Beyssier is s full-fleged rodeo cowboy and a PRCA card holder for five years.

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — Charles Beyssier dresses like a cowboy, rides like a cowboy and, like all good cowboys, has a rodeo championship to his credit. But he still has a hard time convincing some people that he's a cowboy.

"I had to show one guy my (Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association membership) card this morning before he believed I was a bronc rider," Beyssier said.

What's the problem? It's his French accent — something not often heard in rodeo circles.

HIS NATIONALITY has set him apart from other cowboys ever since he earned his full-time professional status in 1976 — four years after he came to America.

Before that, when he was growing up in France, his only exposure to cowboys was on the television.

"I would see as many cowboy movies as I could," he said. "In France, Thursday used to be an off day in school. So all the theaters in town would show cowboy movies for the kids. Some would have French sub-titles; others would be translated into French."

WHEN HE WAS 22, Beyssier hitchhiked to Les Saintes Marie De La Mer in Southern France, where rodeos were held. It was there that he rode his first bull.

In 1969, he got a chance to study the riding techniques of American cowboys when Buster Ivory, a rodeo producer from Pampa, Texas, brought a touring company to Paris.

Ivory was unable to continue a European tour as he had planned and ended up selling all his horses to the rodeo in Beyssier's hometown.

FOR THE NEXT THREE years, Beyssier rode continually in the French rodeo.

In June 1972, he set out for America and went to El Paso, Texas, where he saw his first rodeo in the States.

"I got to talk to a lot of cowboys," he said. "I asked a lot of questions. It was just great."

He competed in rodeos part time, holding down other jobs, until 1976, when he won $1,000, qualifying him for full-time status.

In 1977 he won the season bronc riding championship at Mesquite, Texas, but the next year, after getting bucked off his first rodeo at the first major rodeo of the season, he started having doubts about continuing.

"I WAS RIDING terrible," he said. "I was doing nothing right. Mainly, I think I was just homesick. I hadn't been home about six years."

Go home, he did. But home wasn't as he had remembered.

"Nothing was the same in my hometown. The rodeo was gone. And mostly I found people not to be as friendly as I had become accustomed to in Texas," he said.

So in January of this year, Beyssier came back to Mesquite and began working at rodeo champion Don Gay's rodeo school.

He says he likes the work but has the same problem he's had all along: getting people to believe he's a real cowboy.

JUST THE OTHER DAY one of his students walked up to Beyssier with a dubious look on his face.

"You mean you're are a bronc rider?' he asked me. I think with my French accent I really had the guy confused," Beyssier said. "So I just had to prove it to him."

Asbestos dump sites concealed

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A company that dumped toxic asbestos wastes at about 30 sites in southern New Hampshire refused to notify nearby residents of the potential hazard because of a dispute with the government, the company says.

A Johns-Manville Corp. official told The Associated Press this week the firm has refused to release the locations of the dumps for at least six months because the government declined to promise it would keep the information from becoming public.

"SINCE January of 1981, Johns-Manville has offered to identify to state and federal officials the location of about 30 sites in the Hudson-Nashua area that contain asbestos-cement waste as landfill material," said Jerry Dukes, manager of the Nashua plant that produced the waste.

"The company has asked the government to provide protection for the privacy of the landowners involved," he said. "This assurance never came."

The Hudson-Nashua area is located in the southern tier of the state near the Massachusetts border where most of New Hampshire's residents live.

THE RURAL area has been plagued with other toxicity problems, including discovery of a large chemical dump. Earlier this year higher-than-normal levels of arsenic were found in private wells in Hudson. The source of the arsenic never was found.

Officials from the Justice Department and the Environmental Protection Agency refused to comment on Dukes' allegations, saying only "the matter is under investigation."

HOWEVER, Thomas Sweeney, head of the state's hazardous waste licensing and inspection unit, said the privacy guarantee had been mentioned by Johns-Manville representatives, "but they never told my office that a list was available."

"This is not the type of issue that anyone should play games with," Sweeney said. "Asbestos fibers are dangerous. If that company or any company know where people are living or working on asbestos they have a responsibility to let the people know."

Reagan 'finagled' his victory

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Chief, Washington Bureau
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — David Stockman conceded Friday that the Reagan administration indulged in a furious, last-minute round of old-fashioned wheeling and dealing Thursday to win, 217 to 210, a major budget victory in the Democratic-controlled House.

The words the director of the Office of Management and Budget used to describe the process of winning the votes of conservative Southern Democrats were "accommodation" and "adjustment". But they tended to support the contention of House Budget Committee chairman James Jones, D-Okla. that administration spokesmen were "making deals like crazy in the cloakroom" as the crucial vote approached.

"There was a highly unique, unusual, volatile situation on the floor (of the House)," said Stockman. "...all kinds of arrangements were made."

Although Reagan himself made a number of telephone calls to conservative Democrats, Stockman contended, "there is no reason for anyone to conclude that the president made any deals."

He acknowledged, however, that "there was a lot of talk on the Hill about how we might help each other later." Stockman also said that as accommodations were reached, "we were made aware of them."

While he conceded at a breakfast session with reporters that the administration reached accommodations with the southerners, Stockman charged that the Democrats "pulled out all the stops and used every intimidation possible."

When the final tally was taken, 31 Democrats — all but five of them from states of the old Confederacy — joined a solid coterie of Republicans in voting for the president's position.

There were indications on Capitol Hill that Florida and Louisiana congressmen were promised special consideration on sugar prices and that other southerners were assured their pet projects would find a safe place in the Reagan's austerity budget.

Stockman said that "to my knowledge" no accommodations were reached that would have a major impact on the Reagan budget. He said there were just "things along the margin that had to give way."

But Stockman noted that he had served four years in Congress and that most Washington reporters had followed Congress for years and understood its operations. He added: "There is no reason to think they (members of Congress) have turned into pure, public-minded spirits up there."

He said hundreds of adjustments have been made in recent weeks and that a few additional ones were made in the final hours before the vote.

The Thursday vote actually was on a procedural matter. The Democrats, led by Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill of Massachusetts, wanted the Reagan budget to be taken up in the House on six separate rollcalls. But the administration pressed for it to be considered as a single package with a single vote.

The White House feared that the administration would lose both Republicans and Democrats if they were forced to vote on specific budget proposals that included specific cuts in programs that might be popular with their consitituencies.

After winning the vote on that procedural matter, which assured House passage of the Gramm-Latta budget proposal advocated by Reagan, Stockman said "it will be easier to maintain the (conservative) coalition" on the upcoming Reagan tax cut.

Tax cut plans quite different

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tax cut proposed by House Democrats differs from President Reagan's plan in dozens of ways.

Many of the differences arise from Democrats' insistence that lower-income Americans be given extra relief. Reagan wants wealthier Americans to have a proportional share on grounds they will invest their tax cut in ways that will benefit the economy.

A comparison:

PERSONAL RATE CUTS: Reagan wants to cut each tax rate by the same average 25 percent over three years. Democrats propose an average 15 percent cut over two years, with bigger cuts going to the $15,000-to-$50,000.

STANDARD DEDUCTION: Reagan proposes no changes in the deduction, which now is called the zero-bracket amount. Democrats want a $200 boost for single persons, to $2,600, and a $400 increase for couples, to $3,800. This would benefit mainly those with incomes under $20,000 who do not itemize deductions.

EARNED-INCOME CREDIT: Reagan proposes no change in this credit, which is worth up to $500 a year for working couples with children and incomes under $10,000. Democrats want a $550 maximum benefitting those with incomes under $12,000.

CHILD-CARE CREDIT: Reagan proposes no changes in the credit, which now helps working parents pay babysitting and household-care services. Democrats want to increase the credit to 25 percent (up from 20 percent) of the first $2,400 of expenses (up from $2,000) for one child and the first $4,800 (up from $4,000) for two or more.

INVESTMENT INCOME: Reagan proposes that the current 70 percent maximum tax rate on interest, dividends and other investments be cut to 50 percent next Jan. 1. Democrats would cut it to 60 percent in 1982 and 50 percent in 1983. The change would cut the maximum tax on capital gains to 20 percent next year under Reagan's plan and in 1983 under the Democrats' plan.

RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS: Current law allows a worker not covered by a company pension to set aside up to $1,500 a year in an Individual Retirement Account. Such deposits are not taxed until withdrawn at retirement. Reagan's plan as amended by the Senate Finance Committee raises the annual limit to $2,000 and lets workers already covered by a company plan set aside up to $1,500 a year.

Democrats agree on the $2,000 limit for workers not under a company plan but would allow one covered by a company plan to deposit only $1,000 a year.

TAX-FREE SAVINGS: The Reagan administration does not like this plan, accepted by the Finance Committee and by House Democrats, but is not fighting it. It would allow a person to earn up to $1,000 tax-free interest in a special one-year savings certificate aimed at helping the svings-and-loan industry while spurring savings. The Senate plan would let any bank, credit union or savings-and-loan issue the certificate; House Democrats want it restricted to institutions writing home mortgages.

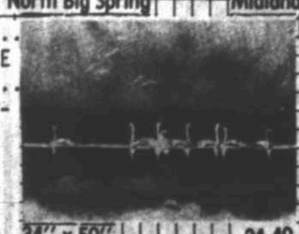

INTEREST-DIVIDENDS: Current law allows a person to avoid taxes on up to $200 worth of interest and dividends a year ($400 for a couple). Reagan's plan, as amended by the Finance Committee, and House Democrats would end the exclusion for interest after this year and cut it to $100 ($200 per couple) for dividends. The money saved would pay for the tax-free savings certificates.

ESTATE TAXES: Democrats favor some major changes but haven't decided how to make them. Reagan's plan would gradually increase to $600,000 the current $175,625 exemption from the estate tax. Only 2.8 percent of all estates are now taxed; this would reduce it to 0.3 percent. An estate of any size could be passed tax-free to a spouse. A person now may give $3,000 tax-free each year to an unlimited number of individuals; Reagan would raise that to $10,000 per person.

BUSINESS CUTS: Reagan would allow businesses a faster tax write-off for investments, generally permitting a firm to recover in 15 years money spent for a building, 5 years for most machinery and 3 years for vehicles.

House Democrats generally agree on the 15-year write-off for buildings. But most machinery and equipment could be written off entirely in the year it is bought. The maximum corporate tax rate would be cut gradually from the current 46 percent to 34 percent in 1987. In return, business generally would lose the existing 10 percent investment tax credit.

Tourism bonanza created by royal wedding

AP Laserphoto

Lady Diana Spencer is Prince Charles' girl. But the British nation has fallen in love with her, too. The couple will be married in London on July 29 and merchants throughout England are reporting record business from the tourist industry.

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Monks, brickmakers and even the bridegroom's mother are among thousands of Britons profiting from a $1.2 billion souvenir and tourism bonanza created by the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer.

Foreign visitors for the wedding July 29 are expected to spend more than $400 million, says Michael Montague, chairman of the English Tourist Board.

Ring up $800 million more in souvenir sales, according to manufacturers' estimates, and the wedding adds up to a welcome boost for recession-hit Britain, where one worker in nine is unemployed.

"BLESS THE BRIDE for this business bonanza," chortled the patriotic London Daily Express.

"It's a short-term but much needed boost," said Kenneth Burton, sales director of Crown Staffordshire, a pottery maker turning out souvenirs by the thousands.

Sales of tasteful mementos in glass and china are "beyond all expectations," says Harrods, the Knightsbridge department store where Queen Elizabeth II does her shopping.

Unlicensed vendors selling illegally out of suitcases along Oxford Street report the same. Keeping a constant watch for police, they hawk T-shirts, mugs, towels and other items carrying royal emblems or pictures of Charles and Diana.

AT QUEEN ELIZABETH II'S Sandringham estate, 90 miles northeast of London, visitors have a choice of 60 different wedding souvenirs. They range from pencils with a commemorative inscription selling for 20 cents to glass goblets bearing portraits of her son and future daughter-in-law at $70.

The shop, which employs 40 villagers, helps meet the upkeep of the estate. In an average year 200,000 tourists pay $2.20 to tour the house and grounds, but this year bookings are up 50 percent.

Press allegations that Diana's father, Earl Spencer, her stepmother Raine and her step-grandmother, romantic novelist Barbara Cartland, were "cashing in" on the wedding brought angry denials.

THE BRIDE'S RELATIONS said the "Barbara Cartland Romantic Tour of England," offered wealthy American women at $1,399 each not including air fares, was arranged two years before the engagement of Charles and Diana was announced Feb. 24. It includes tea with Miss Cartland at her home and lunch with the Spencers at ancestral Althorp Hall in Northamptonshire.

The wedding has brought many extra tourists to the 473-year-old Spencer estate at $2 each plus whatever is spent in the tea room, tourist and wine shops. As many as 900 a day now arrive on weekends.

There were nearly a million foreign tourists in London last July, and Montague said the wedding is expected to attract an extra half million this year.

Hotels and restaurants are organizing special events for the wedding day with traditional English roast beef, staff in period costume and yards of bunting. The Savoy Hotel is throwing a $300-a-couple "wedding ball" that will include a champagne reception, dinner, cabaret, dancing and breakfast.

THE MONKS AT THE Prinknash Abbey pottery near Cheltenham, 90 miles northwest of London, have $200,000 worth of orders for 30,000 commemorative plates, mugs and goblets. The profits go toward the upkeep of the monastery.

For $3, brickmakers Barnett and Beddows at Walsall are selling souvenir bricks in a tasteful blue inscribed "Charles and Diana 29th July 1981." They sold 1,000 in the first week of production and will gift wrap at no extra charge.

One count put the number of different souvenirs on sale at around 1,600.

THERE'S EVEN A FREE one — a foil milk-bottle top from Star Aluminium Co., printed with wedding bells and "Congratulations Charles and Diana."

Next cheapest is a box of matches which costs 10 cents and says on the label "The match of the year."

Among the most expensive is a silver jug for $5,500 by the royal jeweler Garrard.

One of the oddest is a baby-size Union Jack flag with a rattle in the stick.

Advertiser tells networks it cares about programming

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A company that spends $25 million a year on commercials for Contac and other products says it is worried about "gratuitous sex and violence" on television.

SmithKline Corp. President Henry Wendt has written to the presidents of the three major networks to express the pharmaceutical company's concern, citing complaints from "parents, physicians, educators and others who speak out forcefully on this issue."

Among the most forceful is the Coalition for Better Television. The national watchdog group led by the Moral Majority plans boycotts of companies that sponsor shows it considers offensive.

The Tupelo, Miss.-based coalition has scheduled a news conference Monday in Washington to announce the company or companies to be included in the boycott.

Wendt's letter said some of the complaints his company received "are in support of groups that censure advertisers whose products are (promoted on programs) considered to be offensive.

"While the threat of a consumer boycott is not an appropriate response, the complaints are not without justification and must be taken seriously and responded to sensitively by you and by the companies that reach their customers through you," Wendt said.

SmithKline, which spends more than $25 million a year to advertise products such as Contac and Dietac on television, revealed the contents of the letter Wednesday. It was mailed earlier this month to the presidents of ABC, CBS and NBC.

Ballet stimulates thought

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The British Royal Ballet presented the North American premiere of its unusual, interesting "Gloria" on Thursday night at the Metropolitan Opera House. The work stimulates thought.

Music is by Francis Poulenc, with a chorus and wonderful soprano, Jane Thorngren, singing the "glorias" and "have mercies" in Latin. The program contains a poem, "The War Generation: Ave," by Vera Brittain, who was a nurse in World War I.

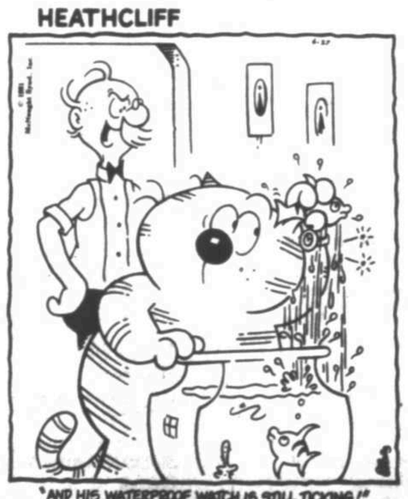

Images seem inspired by the paintings of Giotto. Kenneth Macmillan's choreography, movements and poses of the dancers contain elements of those religious paintings and of war. Even the headdresses, a hat with a small brim all around for the men, looks at the same time like those worn by saints in paintings and like World War I helmets.

Jennifer Penney, Wayne Eagling and Julian Hosking danced the leading roles. She was in a silver leotard, with wisp of skirt, a cloche hat or helmet and silver body paint. They lifted and carried her in many different ways — to look as if they deified her, as if she were flying, as if she were ministering to them like a nurse, as if she were a symbol like the Winged Victory.

Andy Klunder did scenery and costumes. The background was a slight slope up, on which male dancers often sprawled in attitudes of extreme weariness, as though on the edge of a foxhole during a lull in battle. Dancers' entrances for the six parts of the 25-minute ballet usually were made from that slope.

The evening began less well, with "Daphnis and Chloe," choreographed by Sir Frederick Ashton to Ravel.

Love Is An Eternal Spring-Time

Scriptures selected by The American Bible Society

For some it is!

But for others it can be a searing summer . . . an early fall . . . a chilling winter.

All depends on the two people who leave the church . . . and the road Donna and David Daugherty choose for their journey together.

For, when love comes to the altar, it is full of hope . . . and faith . . . and promise.

And, if love will return to the altar — week after week — it can discover God's unceasing renewal of those blessings which first endowed its sacred vows with eternal meaning.

But it isn't quite so simple as praying together and staying together.

It is a boy and girl's unending quest for every spiritual insight that will enable them to understand . . . to appreciate . . . to cherish . . . each other! And God!

Tiniest church built to fulfill the dream of greatful mother

By MARGY McCAY
Associated Press Writer

FESTINA, Iowa (AP) — The St. Anthony of Padua Chapel sits on the banks of the Turkey River, surrounded by nodding columbine, phlox and lilies-of-the-valley.

The picturesque setting is common to many rural churches, although St. Anthony's is most uncommon. It is, the souvenir postcards say, the "world's smallest church."

The 14-by-20-foot stone chapel was built in 1885 to fulfill the dream of a grateful mother, and each June her descendants gather for a special mass on the feast day of St. Anthony.

But the church's size and history are not its only distinguishing characteristics — there's also Vera Schneberger.

Mrs. Schneberger is the 87-year-old caretaker of St. Anthony's and a great-granddaughter of one of its builders. She mows and weeds the churchyard, crochets altar linens, sells souvenirs from a dilapidated stand and entertains visitors with a non-stop history of the area once known as Old Mission.

"I remember the masses," she said, recalling her childhood years. "There were at least 200 people; they just filled the yard. Mom would make beef, and they'd cook five setting hens and ham and lemon pie."

Mrs. Schneberger — clad in gray tennis shoes, a yellow dress and a bright orange cap — settled into one of the chapel's four short pews as she began the history lesson.

It was Mrs. Schneberger's great-great-grandmother who promised to build a chapel if her son, Johann Gaertner, returned safely from the Napoleonic wars.

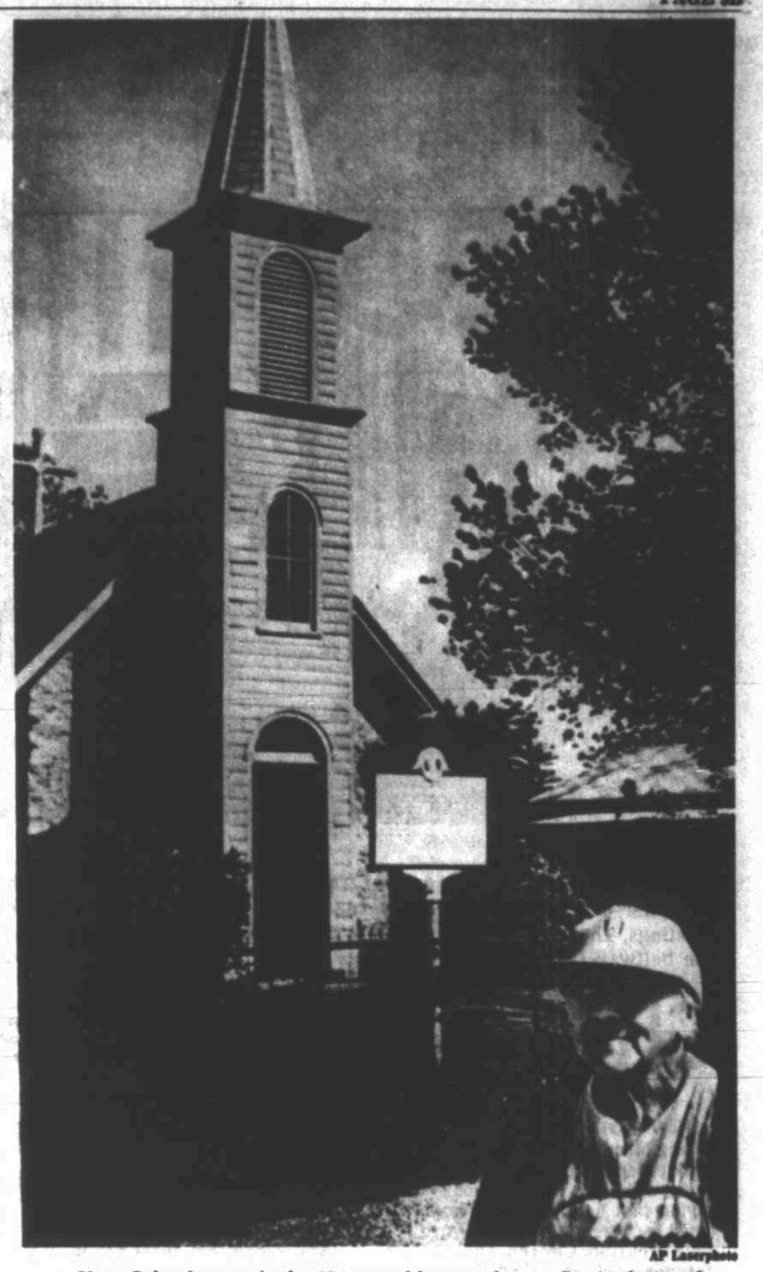

But the promise was unfulfilled until Gaertner immigrated to northeast Iowa and built the chapel with the help of his daughter and son-in-law, Mary Ann and Frank Huber. The Hubers' son was Mrs. Schneberger's father.

Festina is named for the patron saint of Padua, Italy. The town was built on the site of the first Catholic mission church north of Dubuque, a log structure erected in 1849 and destroyed by fire five years later.

"You can still see where the old church was," Mrs. Schneberger said as she pointed to the foundation marks during a stroll through the churchyard.

She stooped to pull weeds from the stone at her grandparents' graves. Her great-grandfather, husband and son also are buried in the churchyard, but her parents, who were the chapel caretakers for more than 60 years, are not.

"Mom didn't want to be buried here," she said. "She used to say, 'Who's going to look after it when we're gone?'"

Vera Schneberger is the 87-year-old caretaker at St. Anthony of Padua chapel, which is billed as the world's smallest church. The 16-by 20-foot stone chapel was built by Mrs. Schneberger's relatives in 1885, and each June members of the family gather for a special mass.

The Newspaper BIBLE

WOULD YOU LIKE A FAITH WITHOUT FRILLS?

While Paul and Barnabas were at Antioch, some men from Judea arrived and began to teach the believers that unless they adhered to the ancient Jewish custom of circumcision, they could not be saved.

Paul and Barnabas argued and discussed this with them at length, and finally the believers sent them to Jerusalem, accompanied by some local men, to talk to the apostles and elders there about this question.

After the entire congregation had escorted them out of the city the delegates went on to Jerusalem, stopping along the way in the cities of Phoenicia and Samaria to visit believers, telling them -- much to everyone's joy -- that the Gentiles, too, were being converted.

Arriving in Jerusalem, they met with the church leaders -- all the apostles and elders were present and Paul and Barnabas reported on what God had been doing through their ministry.

But then some of the men who had been Pharisees before their conversion stood to their feet and declared that all Gentile converts must be circumcised and required to follow all the Jewish customs and ceremonies. So the apostles and church elders set a further meeting to decide this question.

At the meeting, after long discussion, Peter stood and addressed them as follows: "Brothers, you all know that God chose me from among you long ago to preach the Good News to the Gentiles, so that they also could believe."

Pentecosts begin fourth year in embassy refuge

MOSCOW (AP) — Seven Pentecostalists being their fourth year in refuge in the U.S. Embassy in Moscow Saturday, with no sign the Soviet government will permit them to emigrate.

"The situation remains stalemated," a U.S. diplomat said Friday. "The Soviets continue to insist that the Pentecostalists return to Chernogorsk before their application for emigration will be reviewed."

Chernogorsk is the remote Siberian home of the seven Protestant sect members — Pyotr Vashchenko, 54, his wife Augusta, 51, and their daughters Lidiya, 28, Lyubov, 24, and Liliya, 21, and Maria Chmykalov, 68, and her son Timofei, 18.

They shoved their way past Soviet police guards into the embassy compound June 27, 1978, in a bid to emigrate to the west.

Describing themselves as victims of religious prosecution, the seven were granted "humanitarian refuge" in the embassy, and have been housed ever since in a basement one-room apartment.

Four Americans and five Canadians, back in London after being allowed to visit the Pentecostalists, reported the refugees were losing heart.

"They're beginning to lose hope after three years in one room," said the Rev. Ray Barnett, organizer of the group. "They're asking the American people not to forget them in that embassy, which they call their embassy tomb."

The North Americans have a petition signed by thousands of Britons which they plan to deliver to the Soviet Embassy in London on Saturday, Barnett said.

According to Western sources, there are about 500,000 Pentecostalists in the Soviet Union, half of them registered with the Official Council for Religious Affairs and the other half practicing their religion illegally.

About 30,000 Pentecostalists have applied to emigrate to the West, but only a handful have been granted exit visas, the sources said.

Methodist choir departs for series of concerts

First United Methodist Church's 26-member youth choir, directed by Ted Markle and accompanied by Mary Alice Henderson, has recently departed for a series of concerts in Methodist churches from El Paso to San Diego, Calif.

Each concert will contain four classical anthems of praise, three contemporary anthems and a selection of numbers from the musical, "Celebrate Life," by Buryl Red. In addition, the Youth Handbell Choir will present two selections as well as accompaning other songs.

The tour includes Asbury UMC in El Paso, Christ UMC in Tuscon, Ariz., San Carlos UMC in San Diego, St. Matthew's UMC in Hacienda Heights, Calif., First UMC in Fullerton, Calif., and Garden Grove UMC in Garden Grove, Calif. The Handbell Choir will also participate in a National Handbell Festival in San Diego for four days following the tour.

Sponsors accompanying the tour are Candace Markle, D.A. Harral, Maggie Artley, Becky Davis, Kay Watkins and Jim LaFontaine. Monta Jo Johnson and Marion Reeder will meet the group in San Diego for the Handbell Festival.

Texas gets temporary reprieve from complying with prison changes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court Friday gave Texas a temporary reprieve from complying with nearly every change mandated in a lower court's reorganization of the state's prison system until a full appeal of the order can be heard.

No date was set by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for oral arguments in the far-reaching January decision by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, but Friday's 3-0 decision indicated the hearing would be heard "at the earliest date."

The stays by three 5th Circuit judges came in a suit filed by David R. Ruiz and other inmates — they were later joined by the U.S. Justice Department — against the Texas Department of Corrections.

Ruiz, who recently was granted a parole, and the other plantiffs in the suit claimed TDC facilities violated their constitional rights because the prisons were, among other things, overcrowded, lacked adequate rehabilitation and medical facilities and adequate supervision.

Justice agreed and ordered sweeping changes, including a one-man, one-cell madate and told state officials they would have to build more prisons to house the state's 35,000 inmates.

But state officials, saying they already had taken steps to improve conditions, appealed the ruling.

The Legislature has appropriated $35 million for the construction of new prison facilities, ordered the work-furlough program to be expanded so inmates could be released earlier and approved additional parole officers.

Gov. Bill Clements said he was "delighted with the judicious, thorough and timely consideration" by the appellate court in granting the stay.

"As I have stated repeatedly," he said, "William Wayne Justice overstepped his powers and incorrectly assessed the facts presented him in the Ruiz case. I am grateful to the U.S. Department of Justice for its assistance in critical areas of the motion for a stay."

Attorney General Mark White said in Austin, "I am hopeful that after the court reviews the facts, they will reverse the lower court's decision, and I intend to exert every effort in preparing our case for out appeal before the Fifth Circuit."

The 5th Circuit temporarily delayed the following changes ordered in Justice's ruling:

—Placement of all inmates in single cells beginning Aug. 1, 1982, with extension of the program to all inmates by Aug. 1, 1983.

Church denounces probe of Moon

NEW YORK (AP) — Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church on Friday denounced a federal investigation of Moon's immigration status, saying that he, like Jesus, is persecuted because of his teachings.

Unification Church spokesman Jeremiah Schnee called the inquiry "another attempt to discredit the church," which claims it has 4 million members around the world and seeks to unite all people in one religion.

Officials at the Justice Department and the Immigration and Naturalization Service said the two-year investigation of Moon and about 1,000 of his followers was continuing and that no decision had been made whether to prosecute Moon.

A Justice Department source said officials were investigating whether to deport Moon and his wife for alleged irregularities in their permanent resident alien status.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said the allegations center on the controversial South Korean church leader's wife, Hak Ja Han, who was granted permanent resident alien status for occupational reasons. The source said she had told immigration officials she was a specially trained Korean cook.

The source said Moon was granted the same status as a spouse, and if the government deported Moon's wife, he would have to leave as well.

The INS said Moon entered the United States on Nov. 23, 1972, and his wife arrived Dec. 2, 1972. She was granted permanent resident status Feb. 26, 1973, and he got permanent resident status April 30, 1973.

ABC News reported Thursday that the Justice Department would begin legal proceedings soon to deport Moon "because of what one source said was 'improperly obtained residential status.'"

There was no official Justice Department comment.

Glenn A. Bertness, assistant commissioner in charge of investigations for the INS, said "many of them (Moon's followers) came as tourists and overstayed their visas. Others worked or raised money, which you're not allowed to do on a tourist visa."

He said some of Moon's followers already had been deported or had left the country voluntarily after INS inquiries.

Moon, who lives in Tarrytown, N.Y., entered the United States in the early 1970s, "the distant past," Schnee said.

"As far as I know it was proper. At least it's been proper for all these years," he said.

Schnee said the investigation and reports of possible prosecution were "an example of a situation created by people who would like to discredit the church." He would not identify the people involved.

Moon's followers have faced the same kind of persecution that was once focused on Mormons and Mennonites, he said, comparing Moon to Jesus Christ — "Look what happened to him."

Also, he said, Moon suffers racial prejudice: "Parents are saying, 'This yellow man wants to steal my children.'"

Parents of some of Moon's followers, claiming their children were unfairly or illegily lured into his camp, have in some cases seized their children from the church and placed them in the care of specialists in "deprogramming" cult members.

Asked why the church aroused such opposition, Schnee said, "Whenever there's been an introduction of a new and vital religious force, there's always a reaction."

In 1978, the House International Relations Subcommittee called for "a full scale investigation" of possible violations of tax, banking, immigration and foreign agent registration laws by Moon's followers.

Government announces anti-dumping probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration announced Friday it is investigating imports of steel wire nails from Japan, Yugoslavia and Korea for possible anti-dumping violations.

In announcing the investigations, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the action signals that the United States is enforcing the steel trigger price mechanism system, under which "fair value" prices are assigned foreign-made steel products to protect the U.S. industry.

At the same time, Baldrige announced the government is investigating 12 countries for fraud allegations relating to the trigger price mechanism. Baldrige declined to name the countries.

He also said the Commerce Department is looking at as many as 11 other countries for possible anti-dumping or countervailing duty violations. Most are European nations, including some members of the Common Market, said Baldrige. He declined to identify the countries.

Despite the number of investigations, Baldrige said he sees "no wholesale attempt (by foreign countries) to challenge the (trigger price mechanism) system."

The system "is a mechanism that will work as long as the major participants feel it is in their own self-interest," he said.

The investigations of the wire nails will determine whether the imports are being dumped — sold at less than their fair value price — in the United States.

Under the trigger price system, the fair value prices are assigned to basic steel products, based on the estimated production and shipping costs of Japanese producers, who are considered the world's most efficient. The Commerce Department monitors imports of those products.

The system, started in 1977, is designed to protect the domestic steel industry.

The fraud investigations, being conducted by the U.S. Customs Service, concern allegations of false description of merchandise, double invoicing, false damage claims and the use of false terms of payment, said the Commerce Department.

In Tokyo, Lionel Olmer, undersecretary of commerce, told reporters that the allegations concern 40 separate acts of criminal fraud.

In one such case, he said, a grand jury will probably decide whether to issue a criminal indictment agaist Japan's giant Mitsui Trading Co. "within the next 30 days."

Korea, Japan and Yugoslavia provide about 50 percent of the U.S. imports of steel wire nails, said F. Lynn Holec, director of the Commerce Department's agreements compliance division. Imports make up 50 percent to 60 percent of the total U.S. market, she said.

Last year, Korea provided about $36 million worth of the nails to th United State; Japan, $37 million, and Yugoslavia, $3.2 million, said Ms. Holec.

According to Commerce Department information, 44 percent of the Japanese nails and 99 percent of the Korean nails were imported below their trigger prices between Oct. 21 and March 31. All nails from Yugoslavia were below the price during that period, the department said.

These are the first investigations initiated by the Commerce Department since it was given jurisdiction over the trigger price system in January 1980, said Ms. Holec. Most investigations are initiated after a domestic company has complained of possible violations, she said.

The U.S. International Trade Commission will make an initial finding by Aug. 17 of whether the wire nail imports are harmful to the domestic industry. The Commerce Department is scheduled to make its preliminary anti-dumping finding by Dec. 8.

If the government finds the countries have dumped their products on the U.S. market and the action has harmed the domestic industry, then dumping duties will be imposed, said the department.

Baldrige also said the department is:

— Reviewing surges of alloy tool steel from West Germany and Austria for possible dumping violations or injurious government subsidization.

— Planning to start auditing next week three major importers of U.S. steel to the United States for possible circumvention of the trigger price mechanism.

— Reviewing requests from about a dozen foreign steel producers for permission to sell their products in the United States below the trigger price without fear of investigation.

Less than half would probably be granted their requests, said Baldrige. Nearly all seeking permission — or preclearance — are European companies, he said.

Japan trying to cut spending

TOKYO (AP) — Like the Reagan administration, Japan is plunging forward with a "last-chance" drive to streamline its bureaucracy and cut its massive deficit spending.

Schools, housing and the aged could still lose out, but the defense budget will be spared.

A special advisory board to Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, the Ad Hoc Administrative Research Council, is putting finishing touches on proposals that, much like President Reagan's economic program, would reduce the role of the central government and cast a hard look at once-inviolable welfare programs.

Suzuki claims to be "staking my political life on administrative and financial reform," and promises full backing for the conclusions reached by the nine-member council.

Spending cutbacks may be essential if Suzuki is to avoid imposing a heavy tax increase next year — a move that could be fatal to his ambition to retain leadership in the faction-torn Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) that rules Japanese politics.

The council's proposals, already outlined in preparation for formal submission to Suzuki July 10, have encountered a hostile reception from labor unions and leftists who opppose cuts in the government work force and in social benefits, and from Suzuki's own conservative colleagues, whose vote-getting power is tied to agricultural subsidies and public works projects threatened by the austerity plan.

The council proposes as a first step that the number of central government workers be cut by 5 percent, or 42,000, over the next five years. Local governments, with some 3 million workers, will be asked to curb new hiring. Plans to reduce the student-teacher ratio in Japan's crowded classrooms to 40-1 will probably be postponed.

The budget-trimmers call for an end to free medical aid to the aged, more local government contributions to the national health program, and a tightening of controls on child allowances. The council also recommends that the system of free textbooks be reconsidered and aid to private schools be reduced.

Public works spending would be held to current levels, and major projects would be postponed — including the extension of the high-speed "Bullet Train" line and the building of bridges linking the main islands of Honshu and Shikoku.

The nation's rice subsidy system, a "holy region" in the LDP's ties with farmers, should be revised, the council contends. The subsidies have led to high prices and overproduction of rice.

The council also calls for whittling down the number of executives in government corporations and gradually turning some of the enterprises, such as the telephone company, over to private interests.

In conjunction with the council's recommendations, the Finance Ministry has told other government agencies that in principle there should be zero budgetary growth in fiscal 1982. One exception is defense, which was given a 7.5-percent ceiling for increased funding.

Council Chairman Toshiwo Doko, former president of the powerful Japan Federation of Economic Organizations, called the proposals the "last chance for Japan to carry out government reform before it comes down with industrialized nation malaise."

But Japanese Socialist Party leader Ichio Asukata said the council, made up of doyens of Japanese industry, wants to "protect the profits of business, increase defense spending with money skimmed off from reform, and force sacrifices on the lives of the people."

Pressures from special interest groups may take the edge off some of the council's ideas. If Suzuki's support holds up, however, a special Parliament session on adminstrative reform in October is expected to adopt much of its plan.

Despite the concern over bureaucratic bloat, Japan's government remains enviably trim by contrast with some Western nations. There are 42 non-military public workers for every 1,000 people in Japan, compared with 65 in West Germany, 69 in the United States, 74 in France and 100 in Britain.

Since the 1974 oil crisis, Japan has relied heavily on public works spending to keep its economy growing. In 1974, government spending equaled 11 percent of the gross national product, and it now is 17.7 percent, a figure still lower than any other Western nation except West Germany.

But because of relatively low individual and corporate tax rates and huge public works outlays, Japan has had to rely heavily on bond issues to keep the state afloat.

In fiscal 1981, despite one of the largest tax increases in history, spending is expected to exceed revenues by 26 percent — the equivalent of $214 billion to $159 billion. Accumulated debt for bond issues now stands at $373 billion.

National Audubon Society convention set for July 2-5

ESTES PARK, Colo. (AP) — Russell Peterson, president of the National Audubon Society, will issue a "call to arms" to give battle to the Reagan administration when the society holds its annual convention in Estes Park July 2-5, a spokesman said.

Dick Beamish, communications for the Audubon Society, said from New York on Friday that much of the convention will be devoted to what he called "citizen mobilization."

"It's an all-out war right now" between environmentalists and the Reagan administration, he said.

The convention gets under way in earnest July 3 at 7:30 p.m. when Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt delivers the keynote address, which will be on the Sagebrush Rebellion.

On the morning of July 4, discussions will be held on the proposed MX missile project, energy conservation and the impact of synthetic fuels development.

At 2:30 p.m. July 4, Richard Ayers, chairman of the National Clean Air Coalition, will discuss the Clean Air Act and the effects of acid rain, and Peterson, former governor of Delaware and former chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality, will address the convention at 7:30 p.m.

Their possessions gone and their move from Michigan to California in shambles, Michael Papp and his wife Tammy hug each other as their van burns along Interstate 80 in Nebraska. Papp said he was driving when the van began to whip to the right just before going out of control. The Papps and their two passengers suffered only minor injuries.

Court hands second defeat to womens' rights advocates

WASHINGTON (AP) — A day after ruling that women can be excluded from the military draft, the Supreme Court decided Friday that divorced women have no right to share their ex-husbands' military retirement pay.

"It's been a tragic week for women," said Phyllis Segal, legal director of the National Organization for Women's defense and education fund.

By a 6-3 vote, the high court ruled that allowing state courts to award ex-wives part of their husbands' military retirement pay would frustrate the program set out by Congress.

Under the congressional plan, the retired member of the Armed Forces has the exclusive right to the money, the court ruled.

In other decisions Friday, the Supreme Court:

— Ruled that cities and towns cannot be subjected to potentially costly "punitive" damages in cases of alleged civil rights violations. The decision limits recovery by an individual to compensation for the actual harm done.

— Decided that federal employees who sue for alleged illegal age discrimination have no right to a jury trial.

— Upheld a $5,000 federal limit on annual contributions by unincorporated associations and individuals to any one political action committee.

In both the retirement pay and draft cases, the court made clear that it would defer to the congressional power over the Armed Forces even when equal rights claims are involved.

"We have very recently re-emphasized that in no area has the court accorded Congress greater deference than in the conduct and control of military affairs," Justice Harry A. Blackmun wrote, referring specifically to Thursday's draft case.

Blackmun expressed some sympathy for divorced military wives, who often are deprived of career opportunities as they move with their husbands from one assignment to another.

"We recognize that the plight of an ex-spouse of a retired service member is often a serious one," he wrote for the court's majority.

But he said it is for Congress, not the courts, to decide whether women should have any share of the retirement pay.

"This decision is for Congress alone," Blackmun said.

Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, called the decision "intolerable." A day earlier, she said, "the court ... held women to their traditional place, and some believed it was protection. Today, women who have maintained faithfully the traditional roles are penalized — there is no protection when sex discrimination exists."

Joining Blackmun were Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Byron R. White, Thurgood Marshall, Lewis F. Powell and John Paul Stevens.

The ruling overturned a California appeals court decision allowing Patricia A. McCarty a little less than one-half of her ex-husband's military retirement pay under that state's community property laws. That was in addition to the alimony she received.

Mrs. McCarty was divorced in 1976 from her husband, Army cardiologist Dr. Richard J. McCarty, after 19 years of marriage. He left the Army in 1978, when he began receiving $1,507 in retirement benefits each month.

Dr. McCarty, who was ordered to pay his ex-wife $500 a month in alimony at the time of the divorce, resisted her attempts to make a further claim to the military retirement pay.

The case arose under California's community property laws, which are similar to those in seven other states. However, the Supreme Court made it clear that the ruling will apply in other states with similar concepts.

Community property laws give both spouses equal shares of whatever property they've built up through their own work during the marriage.

The Friday decision does not preclude individual divorce settlements providing for voluntarily shared military retirement pay.

Justices William H. Rehnquist, joined by William J. Brennan and Potter Stewart, dissented, saying that states have the power over marriage and property$matters, in the absence of a specific congressional prohibition.

McEnroe clears path to finals

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — John McEnroe turned a dignified blind eye on questionable line calls Friday, reached the fourth round of the Wimbledon tennis championships and found no seeded rival in sight on his path to the final.

The sometimes fiery American left-hander, fined and threatened with expulsion earlier this week, was a quiet and uncomplaining figure as he beat compatriot Bob Lutz 6-4, 6-2, 6-0.

The 16 seeds had come down to six — and not a single one was left in McEnroe's half of the draw.

Sweden's Bjorn Borg, going for his sixth straight title, had four seeds with him in his half — American Jimmy Connors, Peter McNamara of Australia, Wojtek Fibak of Poland and Vitas Gerulaitis of the United States.

"There may be no seeds in my half, but there are still some good players there," McEnroe said. "I already have had some tough matches."

Borg was behind twice in the second set before overcoming Rolf Gehring of West Germany 6-4, 7-5, 6-0.

Connors, seeded third, rolled over American Tony Giammalva 6-4, 6-4, 6-0.

McNamara, No. 12, ousted South African-born Andrew Pattison of the United States 6-1, 6-0, 7-5.

Fibak, No. 14, outlasted Brad Drewett of Australia 7-6, 6-1, 3-6, 3-6, 6-4.

Gerulaitis had a long tough fight against Vic Amaya, the big American left-hander, but his backhand eventually enabled him to survive 4-6, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5.

The top five seeds in the women's singles — Chris Evert Lloyd, Hana Mandlikova, Tracy Austin, Martina Navratilova and Andrea Jaeger — all followed form, reaching the fourth round.

McEnroe said after his match that there had been some bad line calls. And the brash New Yorker got in a stinging jibe at one linesman.

"I have played tennis for most of my life, so I should know and see better than an elderly guy with glasses," he said.

The day's giant-killers were Stan Smith, who captured Wimbledon in 1972, and Paul Kronk, the tall 26-year-old Australian.

Smith, now 34, played a sound serve-and-volley game to beat Balazs Taroczy of Hungary, the No. 15 seed, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3.

Kronk was too powerful for ninth-seeded Jose Luis Clerc as he outlasted the Argentinian 2-6, 6-4, 6-1, 7-6.

In the women's singles, Lloyd defeated compatriot Lele Forood 6-2, 7-6. The match was played on the notorious No. 2 court, where a number of seeded players have come to grief in the past.

"The court was not fit to be played on," Forood said.

"I can't say it better," said Lloyd. "I understand why this is the upset court. It equalizes the match."

All singles matches, men's and women's, were scheduled for Saturday. The players wait until Saturday morning to know which of them would have to play on the dreaded No. 2 court, where the ball bounces unevenly on the turf.

The only one of the top five women's seeds who had any trouble was Czechoslovakian-born Martina Navratilova, who dropped her first set in the tournament. However, she still won, beating American Sharon Walsh 6-1, 2-6, 6-0.

Tracy Austin, down 2-4 in the second set, eliminated Susan Leo of Australia 6-4, 7-6, while Andrea Jaeger, bidding to become the youngest champion since Lottie Dod in 1887, crushed Leslie Allen 6-1, 6-2. Dod was 15 years, 9 months when she won the title. Jaeger turned 16 on June 4.

One women's seed was beaten. Claudia Pasquale, an 18-year-old Swiss player, upset 11th-seeded Dianne Fromholtz of Australia 3-6, 6-2, 7-5.

Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, the No. 2 seed, easily defeating Andrea Buchanan of the United States 6-3, 6-0.

Amarillo's Hardy sets swim record

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Amarillo's Heather Hardy recorded the only record set Friday in opening day competition of the West Texas Invitational Swim Meet being held at the Alamo Pool.

Hardy blazed to a 38.32 in the 11-12 girls 50-meter breaststroke to break the old pool mark of 38.39 and her own West Texas record of 39.23. The win in the 50 breaststroke was one of two registered by the young speed demon. She added a win in the 100-meter backstroke and was edged by teammate Rhonda O'Neal in the 50-meter freestyle.

Despite Hardy's record setting performance, the spotligh shined brightest on two young ladies on the City of Midland Swim Team.

MICHAELA HASEK, swimming in the 10 and under group, splashed to wins in the 200 free (2.33:13), 100 back (1.24:25), and the 50 free (33.23). Hasek, whom COM coach Gary Ilman calls "one of the top swimmers in her age group in Texas" just missed records in all her events by just a couple of seconds.

The other triple winner for COM was reliable senior swimmer Lori Thompson. Thompson, who has been having a great year, continued that trend Friday by sweeping to victories in the 400 freestyle (4:39.54), 200 back (2.34:57), and in the 100 freestyle (1:02.55).

Caroline Reed just missed a triple. She went 5:01.35 to win the 13-14 400 free, 2.50:73 for victory in the 200 back, but was nipped by teammate Jana Housman in the 100 free. Housman, who was clocked at 1:05.78 in winning the 100 free, also grabbed a second in the 200 back and a third in the 400 free for her day's work.

COM's only other victory in the girls' divisionwas turned in by Becky Simpson in the 11-12 400 free with a time of 4:51.31. Simpson also finished third in the 50 breaststroke and fourth in the 50 free.

The COM's senior girls turned in some sterling performances. Andrea Freeman, a strong 400 free contender, was upset in this event when she finished second to Thompson with a time of 4.39;65. She added two fifth place finishes — 100 breaststroke and the 200 back.

SUZI SIMPSON made it a sweep for COM in the 400 free when she grabbed the third place spot in 4:48.65. Simpson added fourths in the 200 back and the 100 free. Doreen McGookey and Bridgette Coon added scoring depth for the senior girls. McGookey claimed a seventh in the 100 breaststroke and Coon nabbed seconds in the 100 breaststroke and the 100 free.

COM's 11-12 girls, while able to take home only Simpson's first, picked up valuable points from the rest of the girls by placing in the top five in most events.

Laura Morse finished with thirds in the 100 back and the 400 free while adding a seventh in the 50 free. Tracy Delaney was clocked in 1.23:52 for a second place finish in the 100 back and added a sixth in the 50 free. Kelly Gosnell rounded out the 11-12 scoring with a seventh in the 50 breaststroke and an eighth in the 100 back.

Kristen Henry came up with some points in the 10 and under when she finished sixth in the 100 back.

In the boys competition, Hal Noelke of the San Angelo swim team was the only double winner. He nabbed wins in the 10 and under 200 free and the 50 breaststroke.

Most of COM's scoring in the boys division came in the 10 and under group. Seth Randle led the way with a fourth in the 200 free and eighths in the 50 breaststroke and the 50 free. Travis Sturdivant turned in a 3.00.26 in the 200 free for third and added a seventh in the 50 free.

Matt Seay and Christopher McLucas placed in two events. Seay was seventh in the 200 free an the 50 breaststroke while McLucas added a fourth in the 50 breaststroke and a fifth in the 50 free.

Additional scoring came from Brandon Dismerkess with a fifth in the 100 back; Kelly Delany a third in the 100 back; and Leo Oei with a sixth in the 100 back.

MIDLAND YMCA entrant Brian Phillips finished eighth in the 100 back in the 10 and under group.

In the 11-12 boys, Jay Green was the only COM swimmer to pick up points. He finished fourth in the 50 free and the 400 free.

Wesley Evitt was the only COM boy to pick up a first place medal Friday. Evitt churned a 3.03:59 to win the 13-14 200 back. He added a fifth in the 400 free an a sixth in the 100 free.

In the senior group, brothers Mark and Bruce Quenzer provided the fans with one of the most exciting races of the day when Bruce edged Mark for second in the 100 breaststroke. Bruce added a fourth in the 100 free for his day's performance.

Other senior boys to place were Mike Seay, one of the youngest senior boys in the meet, with a fourth in the 200 back and a fifth in the 400 free; Fred Hogan fourth in the 100 breaststroke; and Pat Rhamey was seventh in the 100 free.

In the relays, COM's 11-12 girls stroked to first with a time of 5.02:79 in the 400 free the 10 and under girls were third in the 200 free with a reading of 2:56.84.

The 10 and under boys raced to a 3.10:39 in the 200 free relay for a third place finish.

COM holds a commanding lead after the first day of action by splashing to 330 points Friday. Amarillo Aquatic Club, as expected, was second with 285 points, but held a slim lead over the Odessa Aquatic Club, which had 244 points.

Those were the only teams with more than 200 points after the first day.

Action resumes today at 9 a.m. with preliminaries and finals will be staged at 6 p.m. Action concludes Sunday with the same time schedule.

This meet is replacing the Allison West Texas Invitational that dominated the swimming scene in the past. None of the country's top teams were brought in to Midland this time around. Instead of the usual AA meet, this is an ABC affair.

Nastu keeps Cubs on track

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Phil Nastu once pitched in the major leagues and the way he pitched Friday, one got the impression that he'd like to pitch in the big time once again. If he keeps this up, he just may.

The 6-2 lefthander from Bridgeport, Conn., needed eighth inning relief help from Rob Blyth, but for a guy who has spent most of the season relegated to now-you-see-him, now-you-don't-see-him cameo appearances, Nastu looked like he could make a living as a starter in pitching the Midland Cubs to their third straight win and a 4-1 start in the Texas League second half with a 5-1 win over the Amarillo Gold Sox.

WHAT MANAGER George Enright had advertised all week as "Enright's Surprise" turned out to be "Enright's Delight" for 1,802 beer night fans. Nastu gave up only six hits in his 7 1/3 innings, the only time he has gone more than five innings since a 6 1/3 inning stint against Shreveport back on May 23.

For the second night in a row, first baseman Jack Upton supplied the game-winning hit, this one a two-run, $220 homer in the fifth that wiped out a 1-0 Sox lead. It remained a tense and taut pitching duel between Nastu and Amarillo's lefthanded counterpart Dave Drevecky that could have gone either way until the eighth, and almost did, until the Cubs pushed over three runs to take the pressure off Blyth.

Amarillo scored in the fourth when Aaron Cain walked with two out, swiped second and barely beat right fielder Joe Carter's strong throw to the plate after Frank Castro singled.

Midland held a 2-1 lead in the eighth when the Sox made their only other menacing gesture. Jerry DeSimone reached first on an error, James Steel singled and that was far enough for Nastu, who pitched more than two innings only once in his last nine appearances.

BLYTH CAME in and slipped into a pair of comfortable shoes by walking Ron Tingley to load the bases...relief pitchers always like to feel at home. Cain lunged at an outside pitch in an attempt to squeeze home the tying run and DeSimone was hung up between home and third for the second out. Blyth then whiffed Cain and picked up an easy sixth save when the Cubs scored three in the eighth.

Javier Fierro was on second when Upton lined his ninth homer down the left field line. He knew it was gone the instant it left the bat.

In the eighth, Dravecky, a one-time relief pitcher who has been so effective as a starter that they can't get him back in the bullpen, courted trouble as Frtiz Connally doubled to left with one out, Carter snapped an 0-for-8 slump with a run scoring single to left. Randy LaVigne beat out an infield hit, Carmelo Martinez fanned and Mike Diaz walked to load the bases. Dravecky's threw wildly to first on a pick off play and a run scored and then Craig Kornfield bounced a single over third for a third run.

The win was Midland's 10th in their last 13 games and gives the Cubs a 13-10 record under Enright.

Nastu's could be more significant than just a third win. If it means the sore armed hurler is ready to return to the form that brought to the majors for most of the 1979 season, it could be a big boost to Midland's second half pennant aspirations.

Nastu has been plagued by arm trouble and came to Midland this year as a gamble that he could come back as a part of the trade that brought Joe Strain to for Jerry Martin and Jesus Figueroa.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Cain went straight to the fence in center to rob Diaz in the sixth...Mel Hall's hitting streak ended at 11, but Fierro extended his to nine...

Eastern's Joe Reyes (8) lunges for first base, but North Central first baseman Johnny Hewitt already has the ball in glove for the out. This action came in the third inning of the city championship game of the American Little League city playoff tournament. North Central won the game, 2-0, and their first city title since 1974.

Jason Logi tames Eastern as North Central takes title

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

It was a classic baseball confrontation.

On the mound was North Central pitcher Jason Logi, carrying a two-hit, 10-strikeout shutout into the top of sixth inning, trying to wrapup the American Little League city championship.

Batting was Tommy Yorkman, who had hit four homers in the tournament including two grandslams, with two outs, a runner on first, and Eastern Optimists down 2-0.

The first pitch was high for a ball, and on the next two pitches an over anxious Yorkman swung and missed. On the fourth delivery, Yorkman hit a shot at shortstop Larry Smith, who gobbled the ball up and tossed to second baseman Jim Werner to end the game and give North Central a 2-0 win and their first city championship since 1974.

North Central had scored first in the second inning. After Joe Eldridge struck out, Gregg McGaha smashed a solid double down the right field line off Carlos Lazano, Johnny Hewitt struck out before Drue Reeves bounced a hit right over the pitcher's head into center field for a run. Reeves went to second on an error in the outfield but Jim Pannell went down swinging to end the inning.

North Central picked up its second run in the fifth inning. With one out, Werner reached second on Joe Rendon's miscue at second and went to third when Logi smashed a double to right-center. Rendon scored when shortstop Rocky Johnson misplayed Jeff Connally's grounder. Lazano then struckout Joe Eldridge and got Gregg McGaha to roll out to first.

Eastern mounted only one real serious threat against the hard-throwing Logi. He retired the first 10 men he faced, striking out seven — five in a row, before walking Lazano with one out in the fourth. Gapi Bernal followed with a single to put runners on first and second but Yorkman bounced back to Logi, who tossed to third baseman Eldridge for the force. Rocky Johnson scared the North Central faithful when he hit a long drive to right but Connally made a fine running catch to retire the side.

In the fifth, Logi struck out Jimmy Fennel and Joe Reyes before Joe Galindo reached safely when Hewitt couldn't find the handle on his bouncer at first. Rocky Sanchez popped to Hewitt to end the threat.

In the sixth, with one away, Lazano's bouncer took a bad hop over Hewitt's head for a single, Bernal was called out on strikes and Yorkman grounded to short to end the contest.

Lazano, who pitched a no-hit, 13-strikout game in his last start, lost his chance at a second no-hitter quickly as the first batter, Smith, dumped a Texas Leaguer into short center field. Lazano ended the game with a five-hit, eight strike out performance in the losing cause.

Perhaps Lazano's finest pitching came in the fourth inning. North Central's Eldridge was safe on an error and Gregg McGaha followed with a single to center. When the ball was misplayed in the outfield, the runners moved up to second and third with no outs. Lozano didn't panic, he just hitched up his britches and proceeded to strike out Hewitt, Reeves and Jim Pannell.

Class A game set for Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Wausau, Wis., Timbers and Burlington, Iowa, Bees have arranged to play a Class A Midwest League baseball game at County Stadium here July 15, it was announced Friday.

Al McFarland, general manager of the Timbers, said permission for the game has been granted by the American League and Milwaukee County.

He said it will be played whether or not the strike of major league players is settled by then. The Milwaukee Brewers, main tenants of the stadium, are not scheduled to play July 15 because of the All-Star break.

Plans for a minor league game in Cleveland were abandoned recently when players for the teams involved voted not to play there because of the strike.

Fans offer relief to striking players

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — With tongue — not tobacco — planted firmly in cheek, a Toledo radio station is urging listeners to donate items to an imaginary relief fund to help striking baseball players get through the summer.

Among the suggestions: Pine tar so players can get a good grip on picket signs and season tickets to allow millionaire players to see fans at work.

"I just started thinking of things the fans could do for ballplayers," laughed Buck McWilliams, co-host of a morning show on station WIOT-FM.

McWilliams said the ballplayers' relief pitch isn't for real, but has been a hit with listeners.

"Since we started talking about it (earlier this week), we've had great response. In the last two days, we've had 50 calls on it, and all of them are down on the strike. I haven't had one call from anybody who's in favor of the strike."

McWilliams has offered several suggestions he says might "ease the suffering" of baseball players who aren't working this summer. Some of his recommendations:

—Fan cards. "What we could do is put fans' pictures on the front, and on the back we could have the fans' annual salary rundown for the last 20 years. You know, 'Traded in 1967 from selling insurance to working for the city.'

"Then, instead of bubble gum, we could put in a chaw of Mail Pouch. But you know those guys — they'd probably just take the tobacco and throw away the cards."

—Tickets to see fans working. "This is a really good idea, I think," McWilliams said.

"We could give the ballplayers season tickets to watch coal miners for an eight-hour day down in Steubenville. We'll get 'em nice, shady seats and they can see what it's like for other people to work for a living."

—Pine tar. "This'll help them get a good grip — not on their bats but on their picket signs," he added.

Transition flows with ink

By WAYNE LOCKWOOD
Copley News Service

Only in Chicago. Only in a city where the written word has always enjoyed a special reverence would a newspaper presume to own a baseball team.

And not just any baseball team, either, but the Cubs — one of the oldest, most beloved, most ridiculed baseball teams in America.

As you may have heard, the Tribune Co., parent firm of the Chicago Tribune, has purchased the Cubs from their owners of 60 years, the Wrigley family.

Recent decades have not been kind to the Cubs, who have somehow managed to avoid the World Series since 1945. Their slump now spans two generations. Youngsters born in the shadow of World War II have achieved middle age without seeing a pennant fly over Wrigley Field.

Still, no one suspected it would come to this. Sold to a newspaper? Good Lord. Is there no shame?

The average professional athlete would sooner be paid in laundered mob funds than have his checks signed by the same comptroller who disburses admittedly smaller amounts to the wretches of sporting journalism.

Strange bedfellows are one thing. This is downright embarrassing.

Still, in Chicago they just may pull it off. After all, this is the toddlin' town of Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, of Carl Sandburg, Mike Royko, Studs Terkel and Irv Kupcinet. Chicago has always been a writers' town. Even the advent of television has not changed that.

In Chicago it is not considered the least eccentric to create plays about such enterprises as newspapers ("The Front Page") or the Cubs ("Bleacher Bums").

Perhaps the Tribune and the baseball team are not such an ill-suited match after all. Perhaps writers and athletes can coexist under the same corporate roof. But it certainly will be an interesting study.

Already, a number of literary types have begun to ponder what it might be like to have input into the operation of a major league baseball team.

There is no sportswriter who has not mused at some time, "If this were my team. ..." Well, in a sense, now it is. The Cubs and the Tribune are comrades in arms. Solidarity forever.

Tribune Sports Editor George Langford denies that his newspaper will in any way change its approach to covering the Cubs and the man no doubt is sincere.

Still, his publisher could do worse than poll Langford's sports staff for suggestions. These people have been in the front lines, after all. They have seen the disaster up close, and it is not a pretty sight.

The Cubs have not won a pennant for 36 years. They are in last place again. They have just traded their best pitcher (Rick Reuschel) to the Yankees in return for three magic beans.

Sportswriters may not be able to improve upon such a situation, but it is difficult to see how they could do worse.

Even at some distance from Chicago, it is possible to offer a few suggestions to the new management of the Cubs.

Get rid of the sullen "no comments" on the roster and bring in some articulate young men.

They may not play better (although it is hard to see how they could play worse), but at least they will sound a lot more interesting. This team belongs to a newspaper now. Let's get our priorities straight.

Employ only pitchers who work quickly. No more three-hour ball games. Deadlines, you know.

Finally, should there be a strike, ballplayers do not become a burden upon society. There is always a need for paperboys.

Tom Kite finds the Memphis heat hotter than his game Friday as he fell from the lead in the Danny Thomas Classic.

Mitchell, Strange, Pate share lead

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jeff Mitchell birdied two of the last three holes for a 68 that lifted him into a three-way tie for the lead Friday in the second round of the $300,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic.

Mitchell, 26, who scored his only pro victory in the Phoenix Open last year, had a 36-hole total of 139, five strokes under par for two trips over the 7,249-yard Colonial Country Club course.

He shared the top spot at the tournament halfway point with Curtis Strange and former U.S. Open champ Jerry Pate, each of whom had a second round 70 in the warm weather.

First-round leader Tom Kite, David Thore, Jerry Heard and Scott Simpson were all one stroke back at 140.

"I just played a very poor round of golf," said Kite, who slipped to a 73. "It's one of the worst rounds I've played in a long time. I'm a little disgusted with myself."

Thore, who needs to win $1,931 in this tournament to retain his PGA Tour playing rights, one-putted 11 times on the way to a 68. Heard chipped in for birdie on two holes in a no-bogey round of 66, the best score of the tournament. Simpson shot 71.

Defending champion Lee Trevino, a three-time winner of this event, had to rally from the water for a 71 and a 141 total that left him two shots back.

Trevino once got to within one stroke of the lead, then saw an errant shot bound off a gallery-rope stake and into the pond in front of the 12th green. It set up a double bogey, but he got back into the chase with birdies on the last two holes.

Bruce Lietzke, a three-time winner this season who was playing with Trevino and local favorite Lou Graham in the threesome that drew most of the gallery, also had a lapse. He bogeyed three holes in a row at one stretch, but fought his way back for a 71 and is at the head of a group at 142, three shots off the pace.

Graham, a former U.S. Open champ from Nashville, had an eagle-3 on the 16th hole in a 73 that left him at 143.

Mitchell said he "was a little erratic," off the tee but managed "to get about everything out of the round I could."

He dropped a 25-footer for birdie on the ninth, once saved par with a 15-foot putt then made the big move on the last three holes.

He chipped to 5-feet for birdie on the 16th. He drove into the rough on the 17th, couldn't reach the green but coaxed in a 25-foot, sidehill, wide-breaking par putt.

And he drove into trouble on the par-5 18th, had to play his second out, hit a full 1-iron third shot over the water to eight feet and made that birdie putt.

Pate said he was "not optimistic about the way I'm playing. I threw away a lot of shots."

But Strange made up for it.

"I made a couple of stupid mistakes, but the thing I like is that I'm putting better and better every day. It's the time of the year I start playing good and I feeh like I'm getting into that swing like I had last year" when he won two tournaments.

Lopez-Melton, Bradley tied for Coventry lead

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton, adding gloss to her already perfect record at the Locust Hill Country Club, fired a 4-under-par 69 Friday to tie Pat Bradley for the second-round lead of the LPGA Sarah Coventry women's golf tournament.

Bradley, 30, one of five first-round leaders at 70, shot a second-day 73 to match Lopez-Melton's 36-hole total of 3-under-par 143.

The 72-hole, $125,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association event concludes Sunday on the Locust Hill 6,-155-yard layout.

Jan Stephenson, another first-round leader, bogeyed the 18th hole for the second straight day and dropped a stroke behind the leaders at 144, while Catherine Duggan posted 75-70 to move into sole possession of fourth at 145.

Duggan, an eighth-year pro whose injuries and illnesses have held her career earnings to $50,696, parlayed an eagle-3 on the 447-yard eighth hole into a the second-best round of the day and a shot at her best finish since 1974.

Mardell Wilkins and Kathy Martin, who also shot 70 on opening day, hovered three shots off the pace with even-par 146s, while Kathy Whitworth, Judy Clark, Sandra Post, Marlene Floyd and Jeannette Kerr turned the corner at 147.

H.B. Duntz and Lenore Muraoka, who had 70s in the muggy opening round, shot 79 and 83, respectively, to fall out of contenion.

Seventy-four of the 76 golfers entered made the cut at 17-over-par 163, with only amateur Carol Lynn Donald, who shot 83-83—166, excluded from the final round after the original field of 73 pros and three amateurs was depleted by four withdrawals.

Sweaters, mittens and hats were prominent on early starters, who teed off in brisk winds and a cold, intermittent rain.

Lopez-Melton and Bradley finished 1-2 at last year's tournament — the second time in two tries the 24-year-old Lopez-Melton has won here.

She left little question that she was out to make up for lost time Friday when she birdied four of the first six holes. The spree and a sparkling front-nine score of 4-under-par 32 allowed her to wrap up a strong round with another birdie, a bogey and seven pars on the back nine.

Bradley, who played earlier in the day, was only 1-under for the tournament with three holes to go but birdied No. 16, a 331-yard par-4, and No. 17, a 450-yard par-5.

Two CART racers win partial victory against suspension

ATLANTA (AP) — Two racers on the Championship Auto Racing Teams circuit won a partial victory Friday in their fight against a 60-day suspension, but they cannot race in Sunday's Kraco Twin 125-mile championship car races at Atlanta International Raceway.

U.S. District Judge Charles Moye granted a temporary restraining order Friday allowing Tom Sneva and Dick Simon to race on the CART circuit, but the order takes effect after Sunday's contest.

The order will allow them to enter the remaining three races from which they were banned.

Moye said there is "substantial likelihood" that the drivers would prevail in their suit, but he would not allow the racers to compete Sunday for safety reasons.

The CART members are scheduled to qualify for Sunday's races on Saturday. They also will be given several practice periods during the day to acquaint themselves with Atlanta International Raceway's high-banked, 1.66-mile oval.

CART suspended Sneva and Simon and five other drivers for violating the organization's ban against racing in last Sunday's 500-mile United States Auto Club race at Pocono, Pa. The other five were Jim McElreath, Tom Bigelow, Geoff Brabham, Roger Rager and Dean Vetrock.

Wilson will join professional ranks

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Wilson, relieved but also disappointed to see the end of his college football career, announced Friday he will enter the supplemental draft of the National Football League and expects to join the New Orleans Saints.

"I'm relieved it's over," said Wilson of his court battles to continue playing for the University of Illinois, "but I'm disappointed, too. I wanted to play for Illinois for one more year. I loved Illinois."

Shortly after holding his press conference, which also was attended by Illinois Coach Mike White, Wilson departed for New Orleans to talk to the Saints. They have the No. 1 choice in the supplemental draft and have expressed an interest in Wilson.

Reminded the Saints have a pretty good quarterback in Archie Manning, Wilson said, "It will be a great experience to sit under Archie Manning for a couple or three years and learn the system."

But Wilson also admitted one more year of major college football at Illinois "would have been a great advantage for me in pro ball."

Wilson said he expects to sign with the Saints, but he also has the option of playing for Calgary in the Canadian Football League.

Wilson and White both said if they had to do it over again, they would have chosen the same course at Illinois despite the legal tangle which saw the brilliant passing quarterback play all the 1980 season under a court injunction.

"It was an unbelievable set of circumstances for this young man to play under," said White. "There were five successive weeks in which he did not know if he would be able to play. He has been a tremendous example at the University of Illinois."

"Now Tony Eason will have to do what Dave Wilson did a year ago," said White. "He'll fill Dave's shoes in a different way because there are not too many Dave Wilsons."

White refused to conjecture whether the Big Ten Conference might lessen the sanctions assessed against the university now that Wilson will be gone as a result of court ruling last Wednesday.

U.S. District Judge Robert Morgan refused to hold the Big Ten in contempt for violating an injunction issued last year that allowed Wilson to play.

Football players toss tributes as Bob Griese hangs up arm

MIAMI (AP) — "I can't think of a quarterback to top Bob, one who was more an overall benefit to his team, keeping them close, in harmony. He did it all," said Jim Langer.

The former Miami Dolphin All-Pro center was among National Football League figures paying tribute to Bob Griese in the wake of the stellar quarterback's retirement at age 36 Thursday.

"He was the consummate quarterback," said Roger Staubach, who retired as Dallas Cowboys quarterback last year. "When he had to throw 30 times, he would do it. When he had to throw eight or nine times, he would do it."

Langer, now of the Minnesota Vikings, centered for Griese 1971-'79, including in three successive Super Bowls beginning in 1972.

"When you think of the championship years and a lot of the great people, at the top of the list is Bob Griese," said Coach Don Shula, who combined with Griese for a close, successful coach-quarterback relationship probably best compartd to that of Vince Lombardi and Bart Starr during the Green Bay Packers' glory days.

Griese's career was ended by a freakish shoulder injury suffered last Oct. 5 when Baltimore lineman Mike Ozdowski hit him as he threw a pass. His right arm didn't respond to therapy, and he is still unable to throw.

"I'm a gunslinger without a gun," Griese said in announcing his retirement Thursday.

Club owner Joseph Robbie, sounding choked up at Griese's news conference Thursday, said the 14-year pro would earn the final year of his $400,000-a-year contract as a special assistant to Shula and through club public relations work.

"We will have Bob available in our training camp for consultation and observation," Shula said.

Leonard hurts hand, but will be ready

HOUSTON (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard came out of his junior middleweight title victory over Ayub Kalule with a banged-up left hand, but said Friday that the injury will not affect his scheduled Sept. 16 welterweight showdown with Thomas Hearns.

"I thought I at first fractured it," Leonard said of the injury he thought he suffered in the third round Thursday night. But X-rays proved negative, and the new double champion said a doctor told him he injured the third knuckle in the middle of the hand.

Mike Trainer, Leonard's attorney, said the hand would be X-rayed again after Leonard returned home.

"I don't think it will affect the figt in September at all," said Leonard the morning after he added the World Boxing Association junior middleweight title to his World Boxing Council welterweight championship by stopping Kalule in the ninth round.

The Leonard-Hearns fight, headed for Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, is shaping up as a very interesting and very rich one.

Both men had unkind things to say about one another after their victories Thursday night. Hearns retained the WBA welterweight title by stopping Pablo Baez in the fourth round.

Hearns then suggested that Leonard would quit in their fight as Roberto Duran did last November when Leonard regained his share of the welterweight title. "But you will know why he quit," said Hearns.

Leonard suggested that Hearns had no brains.

At a news conference Friday, Leonard, with a smile, said, "Tommy Hearns and I get along well."

The two fighters talked during the week about their match, Leonard said, adding: "He agreed that I will knock him out."

Hearns did not attend the news conference, but his manager-trainer, Emanuel Steward, did.

Leonard's performance "... was less than I expected," said Steward. "Based on what I saw last night, Leonard is still selling his speed, which he doesn't have any more."

"A guy who is mobile, a guy who can move will put Tommy Hearns in his place," said Leonard.

There was some controversy about the way Leonard's fight ended. Referee Carlos Berrocal of Panama stopped the bout after Kalule, an Ugandan living in Denmark, got up from a knockdown. The official time was 2:59.

"I have no complaints," Kalule said after suffering his first knockdown and first loss in 37 pro fights.

But Mogens Palle, Kalule's manager, complained that the round had ended and the bout should not have been stopped.

Leonard said he heard a bell, but added, "It was quite evident the fight was over. I really hope Kalule and his people don't disappoint me like some people in the past and make excuses."

Asked about his future plans, Leonard said, "I can see myself leaving the ring after a few more title fights."

One of those could be against Wilfred Benitez, the WBC super welterweight (junior middleweight) champion who lost the welterweight title to Leonard. Another could be against middleweight champion Marvin Hagler.

Valenzuela denies taking payment

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Pitching sensation Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers denied Friday he had accepted payment for playing in an exhibition baseball game in Tijuana, Mexico.

"I don't collect for exhibitions," the 20-year-old rookie told reporters here after arriving for a weekend of public appearances. He said he knew nothing about an investigation by the Dodgers that he violated his contract.

A report from the United States said Valenzuela got $3,000 for last weekend's exhibition, in which Dodger teammates Pepe Frias and Pedro Guerrero also took part. The players are idled by the major league baseball strike.

A native of northeast Mexico, Valenzuela became a national hero while winning eight straight starts for the Dodgers this season.

Ed Garvey praises baseball players

CHICAGO (AP) — Ed Garvey, executive director of the National Football League Players Association, said Friday the football players "are proud of the way baseball players have shown solidarity" in their strike against the owners.

Garvey was sidetracked with questions concerning the baseball strike.

"We support the baseball strike," said Garvey. "We are watching the situation closely. What happens in one sport usually happens in another. There is cross ownership and some of the same problems emerge."

Although baseball players are on strike because of free agency compensation, Garvey insists "free agency will not work in professional football.

"Let me give you an example — the New Orleans Saints," said Garvey. "They had a 1-15 record and the Oakland Raiders won the Super Bowl but John Mecom received as much money as Al Davis did. You don't have to win in the National Football League to make money."

Garvey said in any other business this would be a conspiracy but in the "NFL it is cooperation among the partners who admittedly do not compete. There is no incentive for winning."

Garvey said "NFL owners are more unified than owners in other sports. There are 28 owners and 28 general managers who have decided to pay the players so much and no more with a purpose of holding down escalating salaries."

As for free agency not working in the NFL, Garvey gave as an example quarterback Vince Ferragamo who left the Los Angeles Rams for the Canadian Football League.

"Vince is 28 and in the prime of his career," said Garvey, "Do you mean to tell me he is not worth two first-round draft choices? But there were no offers within the league. Don't tell me a Walter Payton isn't worth two first-round draft choices. But there is no movement."

Claiming the owners don't have incentive for winning to make money, Garvey said the same is not true of the athletes, coaches and even the general managers whose jobs depend on winning or losing.

Garvey said when the NFLPA and owners go into their next bargaining session, the players association is going to ask for 55 percent of the profits to go into a jointly administered fund from which the players will draw their salaries.

Garvey said that figure was reached because when their was competition between the National Football League and the American Football League, salaries amounted to 52 percent. He said baseball players are getting over 50 percent of the revenue and basketball players up to 60 percent.

Goetz leaves Spiders

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — University of Richmond basketball Coach Lou Goetz, who had turned the Spiders' basketball program around in three seasons, unexpectedly quit the job Friday to go into private business.

Goetz, 35, wouldn't say what his new business will be, but said it will be in North Carolina, where he was assistant coach at Duke when Richmond hired him to rescue its basketball program in 1978.

The hectic existence of a basketball coach, coupled with a desire to spend more time with his wife and their 2-month-old daughter, led him to a decision "to change my lifestyle," Goetz said.

"I'm at an age now that if I'm ever going to change my lifestyle, now is the time," he said in announcing he was ending a 14-year career in coaching.

Richmond Athletic Director Chuck Boone, caught by surprise by Goetz's resignation, named Goetz's three-year assistant, Dick Tarrant, as interim head coach.

"It all happened so fast that at this point we're not sure what we'll do about the future," Boone said. He said a decision would be made later on whether Richmond will retain Tarrant as head coach.

Gotz came to Rihmond folowing a 1977-8 season n which the piders poted a 4-22 reord, and n the three scceeding seasons built a winner. His over-all record here was 38-44.

Last season, the Spiders wound up 15-14 and advanced to the finals of the ECAC tournament.

Boudreaux just misses nationals

Reece Boudreaux, a Midland High sophomore, recently finished ninth in the national qualifying for the Junior PGA tournament.

The top eight finishers at the Brownwood qualifying advanced to the nationals, so Reece just missed the cut.

Baseball settlement may not rest on game's popular elite

By JOE STEIN
Copley News Service

Dave Winfield is losing more than $8,000 a day, Nolan Ryan $6,250. Even Detroit's Steve Kemp, not exactly acknowledged as one of the game's indispensable men, is out $4,000 a game.

Much has been made of the financial sacrifices some of the elite players are accepting in the name of baseball's strike. However, the determination of the Major League Baseball Players' Association to outlast the owners won't rest with Winfield, Ryan and Kemp, or Dave Parker, Reggie Jackson and Pete Rose.

For every Winfield, there are many Juan Bonillas and Chris Welshes — young men who are getting their first real chance to play big league ball and earn decent money. There are marginal veterans who never really have been able to build up much in the way of cash reserves.

There are athletic entrepreneurs who already have pumped their salaries into investments and now find themselves dangerously overextended. There are big spenders who live from paycheck to paycheck because they have become accustomed to fancy lifestyles.

The real test of the players' association will be the willingness of its rank and file to endure hardships for a principle.

Cincinnati catcher Joe Nolan speaks for most of the players when he says, "We have bills to pay and responsibilities to our families. We're not happy about it. ... Naturally, nobody can stay out long — unless the big guys can, but those other guys can't."

He's hoping that construction work will tide him over until the strike is settled.

Another catcher, Atlanta's Biff Pocoroba, offers a more militant stance: "The players won't cave in, and they are going to stick together." That statement drips of bravado, not logic.

Most of the owners are just as adamant about not giving in, and they have millions of dollars in strike insurance and reserves backing up their hard-line approach.

With or without insurance, the owners contend they will lose millions of dollars if the strike drones on. But, while the owners stand to lose more money, most of them are so well off they won't have to worry about the rent and groceries.

It's their greed that will be tested. You can imagine the scowls in Los Angeles as Peter O'Malley and the Dodgers fret over the sellout crowds they will be missing.

Can you really see New York Yankee owner George Steinbrenner remaining a good sport as he sees his anticipated receipts slipping away?

Surely, there will be splits in the owners' ranks. But the pressure probably will be even greater among the players as bank accounts dwindle and debts grow.

The question is, will the passage of time be enough to soften both sides' resolve and bring about a compromise? Or will one or the other party smell blood and insist upon unconditional surrender? The length of the strike hangs in the balance.

From Cincinnati's Dave Collins: "Nobody wants to be out of baseball. I'm sure the owners didn't want a strike, the players don't want a strike and, of course, the fans don't. And everybody's being hurt by it."

So why is there a strike? The same reason there are wars. The owners are convinced they are in the right and will be overrun if they capitulate. The players are certain the owners will keep chipping away at all their hard-earned advances if they relent now.

The fans are the unknown factor in the equation. Will they eagerly pour back into the ballparks when the strike finally is settled, or will they discover they didn't really miss the game as much as they thought they would?

Both the players and owners better pray that the latter isn't the case.

The peacemakers, in the final analysis, might be the players' wives. Perhaps they will be able to make do without incomes, but can they tolerate having their men underfoot all summer?

Owners score against unhappy umps

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Major league baseball owners, negotiating to end a players' strike, scored against unhappy umpires in federal court Friday when a judge dismissed a temporary injunction that had stopped payment on a $50 million strike insurance policy.

U.S. District Court Judge Donald Van Artsdalen threw out the temporary restraining order issued Wednesday by Philadelphia Common Pleas Judge Stanley Greenberg.

"I can see no legal basis, either under federal or state law, to issue an injunction in this matter," Van Artsdalen ruled from the bench.

Van Artsdalen acted after the case was shifted from Greenberg's courtroom to federal jurisdiction under a motion by attorney Michael Gallagher, representing Lloyd's of London, the insurance firm that is the principal underwriter of the policy which pays team owners $100,000 for each game not played. The policy went into effect after the first 153 canceled games, which occurred on Wednesday.

IT WAS also on that day that the Major League Umpires Association, represented by attorney Richie Phillips, filed the lawsuit claiming his clients would suffer irreparable damage if the walkout isn't swiftly settled, and that the owners weren't in any great hurry to come to terms with the players since they were collecting strike insurance.

"What legal theory do you have to bring this lawsuit?" asked Van Artsdalen.

"By paying on that policy they are encouraging continuance of this strike, and interfering with my clients' contractural rights with baseball," Phillips answered. "If this strike continues the way it is the entire season will be lost."

"You're seeking to aid one side of the strike? Or are you trying to hurt one side?" the judge asked.

Referring to 1979 when umpires struck at the start of the season and players crossed picket lines, Phillips said, "The umpires have no great love for the players."

But the attorney also said the umpires "have no great love for the owners, either.

"We don't care who wins or loses in this dispute (over free agent compensation). We want to keep the scales on equal balance and not let the owners get this large amount of money which gives them a great advantage and an incentive not to settle quickly."

VAN ARTSDALEN didn't see it that way.

"We all know when there is a major strike, like those affecting utilities, public employees, and even baseball players, that there are some people who are going to get hurt," said the judge.

"The umpires are being paid, and will be paid at least for the next 15 days and are incurring no damages, whatever, except that they are on a forced paid vacation. So at present there is no irreparable harm."

Gallagher, in his successful argument, pointed out that Lloyd's has no agreement with the umpires, or with baseball fans, and that it wants the strike settled quickly so its payments can stop.

"But until there is a settlement, we want to meet our obligations under the policy," he said.

Phillips, displeased that he lost, asked Van Artsdalen to remand the case back to Greenberg on grounds that it belongs in the state court. The judge set a hearing on that motion for 9 a.m. Monday.

Greenberg, who told a reporter he was "an avid baseball fan," reluctantly gave up the case to the federal court, but not without a parting shot that highlighted his interest in the matter, especially in playing a role to end the strike.

"I never dreamed that in my courtroom I would have not only one umpire but a whole umpire's association, and maybe I could say 'you're out,'" the judge said, as he made the thumbs out gesture used by umpires to call a player out.

COMMON PLEAS Judge Bernard Goodheart, who joined Greenberg on the bench for a hearing that never occurred, at the same time signaled "safe" by crossing his two hands palms down, amid smiles from the spectators, most of them reporters and cameramen.

"The intent of this court in issuing the injunction was never to interfere with the negotiations between players and owners, but to stimulate them, and I think they have been," Greenberg said. "They have increased the time spent at the bargaining table, and both sides appear more serious than ever before."

Mounted on the bench in front of the two judges were two Philadelphia Phillies baseball pennants.

Greenberg said they weren't placed there for the hearing, or the television cameras, but had been put up last summer "to help the Phillies win the pennant and the World Series, and they achieved their purpose."

Talks are fruitless again

NEW YORK (AP) — Talks aimed at ending a 15-day-old major league baseball strike broke off after approximately two hours Friday with no indication there would be a meeting in the near future.

"We're no closer now than we have been for two weeks," said Rusty Staub, player representative of the New York Mets.

Representatives of the 26 teams' owners and players began talks at 2:30 p.m., EDT, just hours after the dismissal of a Philadelphia lawsuit that management had warned could become an impediment to talks.

Federal mediator Ken Moffett said the negotiations probably will be recessed for several days, but he couldn't say just how long.

"If there's an opportunity to meet tomorrow, we'll meet tomorrow. But I don't that will occur," Moffett said.

Saying "both sides are locked in" to their bargaining positions, he said the reason the negotiations broke off Friday was "probably both sides just ran out of gas."

"We spent far too much time discussing items that have no bearing on a settlement — statistical rankings, etcetera," said pitcher Steve Rogers, Montreal Expos player representative. "We're (both sides) still avoiding the issue on who's going to pay compensation and how much.

"The owners are still insisting that a team signing a free agent be punished. Since there has been no movement, we're waiting until they (the owners) have some new proposal on the issue — who pays compensation and what level that compensation is."

Staub said, "It's becoming more and more obvious that they (the owners) must have some kind of timetable. Everytime we try to discuss the issues, they go off on tangents."

"They asked us was our pool system (of compensation) set in granite, and we said no," Staub said. "But we asked them to give us something that is not detrimental to the signing clubs.

"It's been a take-it-or-leave-it proposal from the beginning."

The talks began one hour later than had been scheduled.

Although the delay of Friday's negotiations was not explained, it almost certainly resulted from a federal court hearing in Philadelphia that sought to block payment of $50 million in strike insurance to team owners.

They're selling fun down on the farm

By The Associated Press

While the big guys sweat out a strike, the farmhands are having a field day.

Hello, minor league baseball! You're the only game in town now.

With the major league baseball walkout entering its second week, the unsung summer heroes from teams such as the Columbus (Ohio) Clippers, Tidewater (Va.) Tides and Reading (Pa.) Phillies are getting a few rays of the spotlight that usually shined on the Valenzuelas, Roses, and Winfields.

Flick on the all-sports cable network, and there they are — Triple A players running around the bases, chasing foul balls and slapping each other at the plate when somebody pounds one into the stands.

Flip open a big-city newspaper and chances are a minor league story has gotten some ink. The Oklahoma City Times said it has expanded local minor-league coverage, and so have newspapers in Richmond, Va., Atlanta, Baltimore, Kansas City, Chicago and San Francisco.

For Clippers outfielder Mike Patterson, the major league strike has taken some of the sting out of being a minor leaguer.

"I'm glad I'm down here, because that way I'm getting paid still," said Patterson, 23, who plays for the New York Yankees' Triple A farm club in the International League.

A RECENT series between the Clippers and Tidewater, the New York Mets' top farm club, attracted writers from New York and was shown on the sports cable network.

"We made a little money on it, but that was not the important thing," said George Sisler Jr., Clippers general manager. "Here was the first opportunity the minor leagues ever had to get national exposure for their product — the first time.

"To me, a lot of people out there saw minor league baseball, saw a beautiful facility like this, saw well-played baseball, saw talented players. I think it raised the level of charisma, if you want, of baseball," Sisler said.

IN MARYLAND, the Hagerstown Suns are drawing spectators from the Baltimore area, 70 miles away. Even Wild Bill Hagy, the unofficial cheerleader for the Baltimore Orioles, turned up for a recent game, which the Suns lost 6-3 to the Salem (Va.) Redbirds.

Hagy said he went to the game because he was addicted to baseball and the Suns seemed to be the answer to the problem.

Don Hollinger of Baltimore decided he, too, would try the Suns.

"Baseball, this is like mom's apple pie," he said. "This is where it is at. You gotta watch baseball in the summertime."

In a move to fill the gap left by the strike, KYW-TV in Philadelphia announced it would broadcast games, on a weekly basis, played by the Reading Phillies, the Eastern League farm team of the Philadelphia Phillies.

"Baseball is important to the Delaware Valley and the Reading Phillies are the future stars of our own Phillies," said Pat Polillo, general manager of KYW. "I think it's a great idea."

"They're hungry for baseball," said Joe Buzas, general manager of the Reading Phillies. "It's going to help us a lot. I'm not getting rich off it. I'm just doing it for the exposure."

Manager Frank Robinson of the San Francisco Giants called the strike a "blessing in disguise" because "it gives us a chane to see som of our (minor league) players in game conditions."

FOR THE duration of the strike, Robinson and several other major league managers are working with their team's minor league club.

While the Cleveland Indians are out of work, the team's public relations office is "trying to hype our minor league teams," said spokesman Bob DiBiasio. The club is planning a media bus trip to Toledo, to watch the Mud Hens play the Indians Triple A club, the Charleston Charlies, on Friday.

The Charlies, meanwhile, stand to lose between $20,000 and $40,000 because the players voted not to play a regularly scheduled game Thursday at Cleveland's Municipal Stadium, according to team owner Bob Levine.

Board to try law's legality

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A state board is going to court to try to keep Bear Bryant from coaching the Alabama football team past his 70th birthday.

The board of the state Teachers' Retirement System voted Friday to challenge the legality of a bill passed by the Alabama Legislature in May to allow University of Alabama trustees to exempt any of its employees from the state's mandatory retirement age of 70.

The bill's sponsor, State Sen. Finus St. John of Cullman, told the Legislature he intended the bill only for Bryant.

Bryant, 67, needs nine coaching victories to pass the late Amos Alonzo Stagg's record of 314.

Polyakov soars past world mark

MOSCOW (AP) — Vladimir Polyakov of the Soviet Union set a world record in the pole vault Friday, clearing 19 feet, three-quarters of an inch during a meet against East Germany in Tbilisi, Tass said.

The 21-year athlete bettered by a half-inch the mark of 19-0¼ set by france's Thierry Vigneron last week, the Soviet news agency said.

Soviet television showed tapes of Polyakov clearing the bar, and leaping up and down joyfully after his record vault in the Soviet Georgian capital.

Polyakov is the first Soviet to hold the world pole vault record, Soviet television reported.

"He cleared five meters (16-½) four years ago and each year added to his personal best mark," a commentator reported on the evening news.

Polyakov won the 1979 European championship and was runner-up in 1980. he was listed on the 1980 Soviet Olympic team but did not compete in the event.

Bill Anthony made an eagle three on the 445 yard, par five No. 4 hole at Hogan Park this week. Witnessing the eagle were playing partners Bob Lockhart, Mark Guinan and Elmer Brimberry.

Kermit's Winkler County Country Club, under the direction of host pro Dick Weston, held a Pro-Am tournament Monday with 24 professionals and 72 amateurs competing for $5,200 in merchandise.

In the Low Pro Division, Wiley McIntire won first place with a score of 69. Tied for second were Terry Wilks, Roland Rudosky and Terry Lester with scores of 70 while third was a tie between David Gage, Weston, Dave Hand and Bryan Hargrove with scores of 72.

In the Pro-Partner Division, Frank Johnson and John Slaughter won first with a 63. Tied for second at 66 were Rex Worrell-David Teichmann and Weston-Mike Emmerson. In third were the teams of McIntire-Harold Freiga and Rudosky-Craig Summers with 67.

In the Team Division, Gage, Britt Lindsay, Jim Stevens and Calvin Dunlop took first with a 56. Worrell, Teichmann, Bill Hutson and Jack Arnold had a 57 to tie for second with Bill Keys, Craig Adams, Wayne Richardson and Bobby Herricks. Gidd Faircloth, Ron Jumper, Tom Lankford and Bill Petty tied for third with Johnson, Slaughter, Kelly Creager and R.P. Foster at 58.

Slaughter won the Low Amateur Division with a 65 while David Jennings and Lindsay tied for third with 69. Emmerson had a 70 and Teichmann had a 72.

Thursday the Hogan Park Women's Golf Association held a Blind Partnership with putts event. Ella Heath and Lois Guthrie shot a 67 to tie for first with Jo Ladaga and Maurine Phillips in the 18-hole division. In the nine-hole group, Ernestine Browing was the winner in their playday event.

18-Hole Division: Naomi Colson, Maureen Phillips, Nell Kimball and Charlie Culbertson; Florence Malley, Jane Wagner, Lois Guthrie and Lucia Haskins; Marilynn Philpy, Jo Ladaga, Margaret Mills and Bernice Webb; Gene Velten, Polly Mackey, Dorothy Meiser and Ella Heath; Bernice Cox, Ginny Piette, Annelle Mack and Dottie Turk; Margaret Stricker, Jane Gill, Merla Ketner and Charlotte Marburger; Wilma Cox, Gloria Dellenback, Gerry Fesmire and Jeanne Allen.

'Magic' Johnson becomes richest professional athlete

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Call it a publicity stunt, call it extravagant, call it whatever you want. Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers is the proud owner of the longest-running, richest contract in the history of professional sports.

Johnson, a two-year National Basketball Association veteran although still only 21 years of age, has signed a 25-year contract that will pay him $1 million a year, according to Los Angeles Lakers owner Jerry Buss.

The contract begins in 1984 and runs through 2009. It begins when Johnson's current five-year, $500,000-per-year contract runs out.

Dave Winfield reportedly signed a 10-year, $24 million contract with the New York Yankees before the start of the now-interrupted baseball season. That was believed to be the most lucrative sports agreement ever signed before the Buss-Johnson deal, which was made public late Thursday.

Buss was asked if it was a coincidence that Winfield reportedly gets $24 million and the Johnson contract is for $25 million.

"Entirely an accident," said Buss, laughing. "Sheer coincidence."

"It sure is," replied Buss.

Johnson reportedly becomes the third NBA player who will earn $1 million or more per year, joining teammate Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Houston's Moses Malone.
