Demonstrators march outside White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of protesters marched outside the White House on Saturday to start three days of demonstrations against President Reagan's military buildup and policies on South Africa and Central America.

Protesters massed on the Ellipse, the park outside the White House grounds, then swung up Pennsylvania Avenue toward the Capitol for a rally.

As they passed the White House, the Rev. Jesse Jackson dropped to the pavement and uttered a prayer that referred to Reagan's planned visit next month to a military cemetery in Bitburg, West Germany.

"Touch our president in some special way," the kneeling civil rights leader said. "Some place between Bitburg and Johannesburg, let him choose another way."

The demonstration, marking the 10th anniversary of the end of the Vietnam war, was echoed on the West Coast, where 4,000 protesters marched in downtown Los Angeles and others rallied in Seattle.

"What brings us here is the need to reverse the policies of the Reagan administration — the inhumane treatment of the U.S. public, especially the poor, and of people in Third World countries such as El Salvador," said Joel Koplitz, 25, a protester in Los Angeles.

U.S. Park Police estimated the size of the crowd in Washington at 26,000. March organizers claimed 100,000.

Viewed from the Capitol, Pennsylvania Avenue was packed solid with demonstrators for more than 12 blocks. The steadily moving crowd took an hour to pass the White House, park police said.

District of Columbia police Lt. William White III said at late afternoon there were no arrests and termed it "a very peaceful demonstration."

Jackson told the crowd at the Capitol that administration foreign and domestic polices are "madness." Noting a picture taken last week of the president with children at the circus, he said:

"We must say to the president, these children do not need Bozo. They need breakfast, lunch, scholarship, job training and a peaceful world."

About 100 counter-demonstrators assembled for an American Conservative Union rally near the Washington Monument and sang "America the Beautiful."

Busloads of anti-Reagan demonstrators from around the nation waved banners and watched mimes and "street theater" at a "Festival of Resistance" on the Ellipse that opened the "April Actions for Peace, Jobs and Justice."

Folk singer Pete Seeger strummed his banjo for demonstrators carrying signs that said: "Reduce the deficit — Put Reagan on Merit Pay" and "Rapid Food Deployment Force — Now."

"The more we show our numbers, the more the politicians are willing to support our stance," said Jim Penn, a 25-year-old University of Illinois student. He said he and friends drove their van all night from the Champaign-Urbana campus to reach the rally.

Gang believes law's treatment of them unjust

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Photographs of days past in the motorcycle gang are thumb-tacked to the wood-paneled walls of the house at 500 Spraberry. There are photos of the Murphy brothers and their wives, girlfriends and friends. Some are dressed in black leather jackets and some are garbed in jeans, vests and cowboy hats.

Inside the bright blue house are memories of motorcycle funerals down Andrews Highway for a friend and beer and barbecue parties that lasted late into the night.

But outside the house, there are no motorcycles. The last was sold at least a year ago to pay for jail bonds, posted after police harassment began, according to 40-year-old Jerry Murphy.

Saturday afternoon, hours after he was released from jail on a $10,000 bond, Murphy sat on the front porch with family members and friends drinking beer and soft drinks and talking about the events the night before.

THE GANG laughs at its reputation of enticing junior high school girls to the house, where they are given drinks and drugs.

The female members are said to go through elaborate initiation rites of having sex with all the men in the gang before earning their tattoos, which mark them as Murphy property.

"That's why I was always scared to come over here," said a 15-year-old who was introduced to the Murphys through her mother. "I'd heard if you mess with one you mess with all of them. But it isn't true."

"We don't take turns with nobody," Murphy said. And the tattoos are only done by other members at one's request. He acknowledges, however, that the group's tattooed-image makes it difficult to appear innocent in the eyes of the law.

A charge of sexual assault of a child a year ago netted one member of the gang a 10-year sentence. The man had been involved with a "13-year-old, but she looked 20," Murphy said.

"They offered him 80 years but they came down to 10 and he copped out."

CentennialFest participants needed

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

"We need more individuals, groups and businesses to enter and participate in CentennialFest activities," says Robin Jackson, executive director of the Centennial Commission.

Although a long list of entrants for the July 4th parade and the CentennialFest Fair to be held on July 6 and 7, have been received, it's not enough, insists Ms. Jackson.

"We need lots more parade entries — floats and bands," she says. "We're also looking for clubs, organizations and restaurants to sell food and beverages at booths at the CentennialFest Fair."

The parade is "the biggest and most unique parade in the history of Midland," according to Ms. Jackson, and will have a historical theme in chronological order.

Entries have come from groups such as Midland Angels, Midland Rodeo Club, Marshall Young Oil Co. which will enter a steam calliope, Southwestern Bell with its display of the switchboard from old times and today, High Chapparal Western Wear which is entering a stagecoach and covered wagon, several churches and banks, the Ballet Folklorico de Mexico and others.

Also included in the parade are four generations of the Courtney Cowden family.

Businesses may underwrite the cost of a float for non-profit groups who would like to have a float but do not have the funds, says Ms. Jackson.

"Also, businesses or groups who would like to have a float, but don't have the time or manpower may contact several groups from Lee and Midland High Schools, who have offered to make the floats for only the cost of materials plus a $200 donation."

Several groups have signed up for booths at the CentennialFest Fair, according to Ms. Jackson.

Already entered are Jumburrito, Frenchy's Catering (Cajun), Ocean's Seafood (homemade ice cream), Zack's Frozen Yogurt, Bryant Family (brisket), Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority (snow cones), COM Swim Team (eggrolls), Terrace Garden Nursing Home (ice cream and Centennial birthday cake), Midland Christian School (popcorn), Hindu Association of West Texas (Indian food) and more.

"The booths have already been constructed," says Ms. Jackson.

Fees for the booths are $150 for a restaurant and $100 for individuals and organizations.

Entrants are also needed for booths for Arts and Crafts, promotional items and displays, she says.

These booths are also pre-constructed, with a $100 entrant fee. Each booth may be shared by up to three people.

"No commercial booths are permitted and display-only booths are available at no charge," she says.

Entrants received so far include: Altrusa Club (old-fashioned bonnets and aprons), Midland Jaycees (Centennial Coins), Junior League of Midland (Centennial T-shirts and visors), Carolyn Williams (painted woodcrafts), Midland Women's Club (Centennial totebags), Mrs. Tom Linebery (authentic chuckwagon to serve cowboy coffee), Tall City Young Homemakers (Centennial cookbook) and more.

Local hospitals oppose 'sick tax' bills

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

The cost of staying in a hospital could increase, say local administrators, if several "sick tax" bills currently under consideration by the state legislature are approved.

A packet of house and senate bills, recommended by the Task Force on Indigent Health Care, a governor-appointed committee, includes two bills, SB 789 and HB 1843 which would levy taxes against hospital revenues to be placed in a general indigent care "pool."

The Texas Hospital Association has labeled the bills "sick tax" proposals, contending the costs would be passed along to patients when hospitals increase charges to offset the revenue loss.

"Amending one of the indigent care bills (HB 1843) currently before the legislature to include a one-percent tax on hospital net patient revenues...would, in effect, be a tax on those sick, injured or dying patients who pay their hospital bills," said a report from the Texas Hospital Association.

Locally, hospital administrators are supporting the THA in that group's lobbying efforts to kill the proposals in Austin.

"WE WOULD BE taxed twice," said Dick Liley, president of Parkview Hospital.

"We are a private corporation. And like other private corporations and individuals, we already pay money to the Midland County Hospital District that goes to their indigent care fund. I vehemently oppose being taxed twice."

Liley contended the tax is also unfair because Parkview does not have an obligation to provide hospital care to those who cannot afford it.

"It's no secret that Parkview has under-utilized beds," he said. "Two years ago I wrote letters to the MCHD, asking to participate in taking care of indigent patients here at Parkview. I offered the service as long as I would be reimbursed in the same manner that MMH is — through the tax fund.

Liley

Branson

"I was turned down," said Liley. "That tells me that we have no obligation to take care of indigent care patients."

Both Liley and Ray Branson, president of Midland Memorial Hospital, oppose the bills because of the costs that would be passed along to patients.

"We're in a business just like Safeway or Albertson's," said Liley. "Any increase in our operating cost has to be reflected in the rates we charge patients. If you carry that one step further, what is actually being proposed is a tax on sick people."

Branson agrees.

"It's called a sick tax because this is another cost being attached to hospitals," he said. "The only way to recoup that cost is to increase the patient charges."

The controversy over "sick tax" proposals centers around HB 1843, which calls for a 1 percent tax assessment on net patient revenues and SB 789 which would levy a 3 percent tax on hospitals' adjusted operating costs.

Woman resolves to rid lawyers of jargon

By KEN HERMAN

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — Whereas, most of us can't decipher the legal documents we use to end marriages, buy houses and sue each other.

And, whereas, Terri LeClercq sees no reason why lawyers should not speak the same English spoken by the rest of us.

Therefore, pursuant to instructions from the University of Texas Law School, be it resolved that Ms. LeClercq should embark on a mission most challenging — teach aforesaid lawyers to speak the brand of English unplagued by the whereases, pursuant tos, nulls and voids, have and holds.

"In law school, students enter speaking English. By the end of the first semester, they are speaking lawyerese. They pick up a lot of it through osmosis," said Ms. LeClercq, who teaches legal writing at the law school.

"We concentrate on simple prose, on convincing, stark, clean language," she said.

In addition to working with students, Ms. LeClercq writes a monthly column on legal writing for the Texas Bar Journal. April's column, her second, is titled "Jargon: Manure, Margarine and Moderation."

"No audience wants to trudge through pages darkened by repetitious phrases and stacked prepositions," Ms. LeClercq warns in the column.

Twenty words that should be forbidden are listed, including, aforesaid, forthwith, thenceforth, henceforth, herewith, witnesseth, to wit and, of course, whereas.

She also has a list of unneeded "coupled synonyms." Find your favorite and the one you like best among these: due and payable, fit and proper, give and grant, in truth and in fact, last will and testament, null and void, each and all, keep and maintain, have and hold, and the quadruple redundancy — in lieu, in place, instead and in substitution of.

"It's our job in the law school to convince them that clear, concise language will get the message across more effectively than jargon," said Ms. LeClercq.

Jargon is OK in limited circumstances — the courtroom or documents to be viewed only by lawyers, not regular people.

Where the legalese must be reduced is in wills, divorces and real estate transactions.

Could you have agreed to this deadly deed?

AUSTIN (AP) — Here are highlights of a standard warranty deed. If you own a house or property, you've probably agreed to one of these, including this 150-word passage:

"Lender at the special instance and request of the grantee herein, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, which advance represents part of the purchase price of the hereby conveyed property; said amount evidenced by the execution and delivery by the grantee herein of one certain promissory note of even date herewith in the principal sum of (amount) payable to the order of lender as therein provided; said note is secured by vendor's lien herein retained and additionally secured by a deed of trust of even date herewith to (named) trustee, all together with other good and valuable considerations, the receipt and sufficiency of which is herewith acknowledged, has granted, sold and conveyed, and by these presents does grant, sell and convey unto the hereinabove named grantee, all that certain land, lying, situated and being in the county of Travis, state of Texas."

Post office finds lease cancelled

DALLAS (AP) — Two uncompleted bureaucratic forms, the Christmas mail rush and a "communications problem" between landlords and the U.S. Postal Service have resulted in the Park Cities post office being evicted.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders issued an order Friday giving postal authorities 60 days to vacate the building, which it has occupied in the suburb of University Park since 1956.

Problems began last June, when John Jackson and Steven Chapman bought the office building and asked that the rent payments be mailed to Jackson.

Sanders noted in his order that the Postal Service required that the new owners complete two documents — "Change in Ownership of Leased Premises" and "Designation of Emergency Repairmen" — before the rent checks could be sent to Jackson.

Jackson and Chapman didn't return the forms, and for six months the post office didn't pay the rent.

The post office tried to explain its reasons for not paying, but "obviously, there was a communications problem," said Paula Mastropieri-Billingsly, the assistant U.S. attorney assigned to defend the post office.

During the Christmas rush season, an anonymous caller threatened "to padlock the building if the rent was not paid," Ms. Mastropieri-Billingsly said.

According to Sanders' order, postal officials sent a letter to Chapman and Jackson, warning that if the landlords had made the telephone threat, they could be prosecuted under federal law for "obstruction of mail."

Mail carriers stop work on memorial garden

HOUSTON (AP) — Mail carriers stopped work on a memorial garden for a slain co-worker after they were told the site for the garden had not been approved by postal officials.

"We are not surprised, but we are angered," said Vernon Wade, president of the local letter carriers' union, after the memorial for Debora Sue Schatz was halted.

Miss Schatz, 23, disappeared June 7 while delivering mail in a fashionable west Houston neighborhood. Her body, with three bullet wounds in the head, was found two days later in a remote wooded area northwest of Houston.

David Port, 18, was convicted last month of Miss Schatz's murder and was sentenced to 75 years in prison.

The case attracted media attention nationwide after Port's parents were jailed for refusing to testify against their son before a grand jury. Port's trial was moved from Houston to New Braunfels because of the publicity.

Postal workers began working last week on the 15-by-15-foot garden at the Westheimer Station where Ms. Schatz worked. The employees hoped to plant rose bushes and other plants in time for the anniversary of the slain woman's death.

But the gardening stopped Thursday after Postmaster Sam Green said the project had not officially been approved, a postal service spokeswoman said.

"The postmaster said there's not going to be a memorial," spokeswoman Ellen Stover said Friday. "We can't approve something without a written request being made — and we can't even approval it on this level, anyway."

Carriers said management at the station had approved the garden.

However, Ms. Stover said a written request for the memorial must be approved by the national postal officials.

"We're real restricted about the things we can do on postal property," she said. "Anything we do takes national approval. We didn't even get a written request."

The spokeswoman said the carriers may submit a written request to plant the garden, but the approval process takes several months.

Court will hear Cleburne case again

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Supreme Court will hear a second round of arguments Tuesday in a dispute over the authority of communities to ban group homes for mentally retarded people from some neighborhoods. The case has the potential to alter significantly the legal rights of the nation's mentally retarded. But its impact on a small Texas city already has been felt.

By RICHARD CARELLI

CLEBURNE (AP) — "It hurts knowing the people in my hometown don't want me living there," Kim Banks said, deliberating each word uttered in a rich Texas twang. "It hurts real bad."

Banks, 24, whose epilepsy has left him with learning disabilities, added, "I just don't understand why folks in Cleburne would want to keep people with just a little sort of handicap from learning to help themselves."

It is now up to the Supreme Court to decide whether this small city 60 miles southwest of Dallas violated the rights of Banks and mildly or moderately retarded adults by denying a proposed group home a permit to operate.

The court's decision, expected by July, could reach beyond the nationwide "home movement" aimed at removing the mentally retarded from large institutions, and affect, for example, the voting and employment rights of such people.

The court is being asked to determine how closely state and federal courts must scrutinize any law treating the mentally retarded differently than other people.

But no matter how sweeping or narrow the court's eventual ruling, the fate of a big, turn-of-the-century house at 201 Featherston St. in this city of more than 20,000 hangs in the balance.

Jan Hannah bought the house in 1980 to use as a group home for 13 mildly or moderately retarded adults. But that use was classified by the city as a "hospital for the feebleminded" requiring a special permit.

THE VACANT house sits in a neighborhood where apartment houses, public schools, nursing homes and most hospitals may locate without any special permits.

"We would not need such a permit for a hospital for the asthmatic or a nursing home for the feebleminded. But classifying the group home as a hospital for the feebleminded made the permit necessary," said Bobbie Northrop, who, with Mrs. Hannah, operates a group house in nearby Keene.

No complete public record exists of the Cleburne Planning and Zoning Commission's 1980 meeting at which Mrs. Hannah's request for a special permit was discussed. But according to those present, it was stormy.

An account was published in the local newspaper, the Cleburne Times-Review. The report said Mrs. Cash Zimmerman, a neighbor of the 201 Featherston house, told the commission, "I'm a coward. It's not a very pleasant thought to go to bed and know there's 13 demented, self-afflicted people across the street from you."

Dr. Larry Willis, a dentist whose office is close to the house, presented a petition signed by 29 families opposed to locating a group home there.

The Cleburne City Council, at a later meeting in which public comment was limited, denied the special permit. Council members cited concern over 13 people living in a home with only two bathrooms, with three and four residents in each bedroom.

The council also voiced concern over the heavy traffic generated by a junior high school just across Featherston Street, and noted that the property could be flooded by waters of nearby Buffalo Creek once every 500 years.

EARL LUNA, the lawyer representing Cleburne in the Supreme Court, believes the City Council had the best interests of the mentally retarded at heart when it denied the permit.

"Jan Hannah wanted to stack them in those rooms like cord wood," Luna told a recent visitor to his downtown Dallas office. "Our folks said that's not normal. The City Council went about preventing her from putting people in such a ghetto-like existence."

Luna said Mrs. Hannah and Mrs. Northrop have let their profit motive blind them to what is best for the people they seek to help.

The two women are co-owners of Community Living Concepts, a for-profit corporation that owns the Featherston Street house and group homes in the nearby communities of Keene, Rio Vista and Burleson.

Their "clients" — Mrs. Hannah said "residents" is a state institution term and that "patients" is an unacceptable term because "they are not ill" — pay to live in the group homes under a Medicaid program.

At least one of the 15 staff members stays overnight at each of the group homes every night, but no staff member permanently resides at any of the homes. "We don't want staff people to become parental figures," Mrs. Northrop said. "They're to be just good friends."

Both women say their corporation is heavily in debt.

LUNA NOTED that new Texas regulations, established after the Cleburne case reached the courts, allow no more than six adults to reside in each group home. "Cleburne has rendered a great service by sticking to its guns and saying we're not going to put up with this abusive practice of overcrowding," he said.

"We don't think anyone should be allowed to be inhumane to the mentally retarded," he said. "We've been on the wrong side of the publicity in this case but Cleburne is only trying to protect these people."

Kim Banks, who lives in the Keene group home, says it's "hogwash" to contend that Mrs. Hannah and Mrs. Northrop exploit the mentally retarded.

Inmates save taxpayers millions by transcribing records

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas prison inmates are used routinely to transcribe confidential information — including health and financial data about millions of Texans, the San Antonio Express-News reported in its editions today.

The prisoners, who make up a typing pool, transcribe records from schools, colleges, hospitals, state and local agencies and other government offices. The information is either typed onto a computer disc or reproduced on microfilm.

The for-profit typing pool grossed the corrections department $3.8 million in 1983 while saving taxpayers millions, the Express-News reported.

About 1,500 inmates at four prison units are involved in the project. They have access to drivers license applications, secondary school student grade reports, teacher certification records, police arrest reports, vehicle registrations and titles, tax information and mental health records.

Officials of the Texas Department of Corrections say they have imposed strict security measures to make sure the inmates do not misuse the information they see.

James Emert, who has worked 14 years in the prison records conversion operation, said security is tight.

"Our theory is that it's safer here than it is (at a private business) because we can search our inmates as they go in and out," he said. "Everytime an inmate leaves here, he is searched and that is (the procedure) at all our facilities."

Emert, plant manager at the Wynne Unit, took an Express-News reporter and photographer on a tour of the shop he oversees.

"What we are is a service bureau operation inside a penal institution," he said.

At the Wynne Unit, 500 inmates work around the clock using cameras and other sophisticated equipment worth $1.5 million, he said.

The most serious information leak that has occurred, Emert said, was when an inmate worker discovered information about a witness who testified at his trial. The convict sent a letter to the witness, Emert said.

However, the Express-News reported it had no difficulty obtaining confidential information from an unnamed prison unit.

The newspaper quoted Walker County jail administrator Harold Russell as verifying that microfilm the Express-News obtained from a prison was a copy of records he had sent to the TDC for duplication.

The records included arrest reports, personnel files of a prison guard and prison inmate files.

Russell said his office has used the prison transcribing service for about five years. But the sheriff's office decided to discontinue using the service because it has become too expensive, he said.

"I can definitely see where the inmates could use this type of information," he said.

Bexar County District Clerk David Garcia said his office sends only civil records for copying at TDC.

Larry Kyle, assistant director in charge of TDC's industrial division, said an inmate "is going to have to have a pretty good memory and he's going to have to have a use for it.

"Again, it's not impossible (to get information out of the prisons).

TDC processes paperwork from state, local agencies

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Here is a list of the state and local agencies having paperwork processed by the Texas Department of Corrections, according to the San Antonio Express-News.

HOW MUCH FOR DOWN PAYMENT?

If you're ready to buy a house for the first time or want to trade up to a more expensive house in a more desirable location, one of your most important questions is, "How much should I offer for a down payment?"

You may be better off in making as large a down payment as possible. For one thing, this means your monthly mortgage payments will be lower. For another, it means you'll be in a better position to qualify for a loan. Something else to consider is just how much of your monthly income should be used for mortgage payments. Most people keep themselves in a comfortable financial position by limited house payments to 20-25% of their monthly income.

A lot will depend on your present status and future income prospects. Getting the house you want will also make a difference in whatever decision you make. Whatever your situation, discuss the details with us so we can help you buy the home your want under the most favorable financial conditions.

IDEAS IN DECORATING
"THERE'S GOLD IN THAT OLD SOFA."

If your old sofa looks as though it's on its last legs, don't be too quick to bundle it out of the house. Resourceful home-owners are discovering that many old pieces have a value you can't buy today. And they are restoring them through reupholstery. The economics of reupholstery works for them, too. For dollars and cents it can be one of today's best buys.

THE VALUE IS IN THE FRAME. If your old sofa (or chair) has a good frame, it's well worth reupholstering. A frame is the essential element in the structure, and if it's solid there's no point going out and buying a new one. So, what's a good frame? One that's made of hardwood—Oak, or maple, for example. Hardwood is strong and has longevity. A clue is its weight: Hardwood is heavy. That's why furniture salespeople will often lift up one end of a sofa when showing it to a customer. They are demonstrating the frame's weight. And the frame is what your upholsterer can check out.

THE ART OF REUPHOLSTERY. Building on your old frame (where you save big dollars), the upholsterer re-ties the springs, puts in new webbing, all new padding and filling, and totally re-creates the sofa. This is all hand-work involving a high order of skills. What you get back is a piece of furniture in the class of a custom-made.

THE FABRIC ADVANTAGE. A significant advantage in reupholstering is fabric selection. You choose from a practically panoramic range of colors and textures. So you can find just about any fabric, at any price, to fit any decor.

All of the above advantages, are available at Hines Wood Upholstery Co. They have served the upholstery needs of the Permian Basin for the past 34 years. Come by 1105 N. Midkiff or Call 694-8891 for more information on solving your furniture problems.

HOSPITAL

"THE 'SICK TAX' plans would add $60 million to $75 million to the hospital bills of the paying sick in Texas," said the THA report. "Thus, paying patients would pay almost $65 per patient day to fund indigent health care."

An upcoming hearing on HB 1843 in a House subcommittee will pit health organizations against one another as they testify before legislators.

"We're having some problems in regard to HB 1843 from the hospital associations, but we have a lot of strong support from other health groups," said Judy Houchins, chief of staff for Sen. Chet Brooks (D-Pasadena), SB 789's sponsor.

Ms. Houchins named the Maternal and Health Coalition, the Texas Nurses Association and the American Association of Retired Persons as some of the groups scheduled to testify on Thursday.

Still more dissension has arisen between the hospital associations themselves.

According to a March 30 Associated Press article in the Dallas Morning News, the Texas Association of Hospitals and the Texas Association of Public Hospitals are "at loggerheads over the indigent care legislation pending in the Legislature."

Dr. Ron Anderson, chairman of the TPHA and head of Dallas' Parkland Memorial Hospital, said that "THA officials have misled legislators about the proposed bill (SB 789)," said the article. "They've lied to the lieutenant governor (Bill Hobby), they've lied to the speaker (Gib Lewis)," said Anderson to a group of West Texas county judges and commissioners.

Anderson stated that too many private hospitals have been "dumping" indigent patients on publicly supported hospitals such as Parkland.

But Jim Farnsworth, president of the THA, said in the article that "hospitals are already giving almost $1 billion to indigent patients."

THE PRIME BONE of dissension between the two groups, however, appears to be HB 1843. TAPH opposes the 1 percent assessment clause, but will accept the entire indigent bill package if nothing else can be worked out. The THA, however, will not budge in their determination to kill the 1 percent assessment.

"We're 100 percent behind the recommendations of the Indigent Care Task Force," said Greg Graze, a spokesman for Parkland. "We are concerned with the ultimate goals and objectives. The basic concept is to spread indigent costs over a much broader base."

But a representative of the TAPH is not so generous.

"I think everyone would like a different alternative," said Joel Allison, chairman of the Amarillo Hospital District, a TAPH member. "But if there is no other alternative and it is the only way, then we support it.

Branson, however, reiterated the THA's stand on the issue.

"The THA is not in favor of that package as long as that 1 percent is attached," he said. "There is a conflict there between the THA and the TAPH."

Legislators, themselves, appear divided over the bills.

"I don't think it will be much problem," said Ms. Houchins. "The THA is the only group really opposing the bill."

But Midland's state senator, Bill Sims, who is not on the committees considering the bills, is not so sure.

"I think there is a good chance that the bills will not pass as they are right now," said Sims. "They're not being accepted at all."

Although the hospital associations and legislators are split over whether the bills should be passed, they agree about what would happen should they pass — the hospitals would pay a lot of money to the state.

"We are already paying 3.5 percent of our gross patient revenues for bad debts (people who do not pay their bills)," said Liley. "That's roughly $210,000 to $250,000 per year. If we paid 1 percent of net patient revenue, that would come to another $50,000 per fiscal year.

"That's a significant amount of money for a hospital this size," he said.

Midland Memorial Hospital also reported a high indigent care budget.

"LAST YEAR WE paid $2.3 million for indigent care," said Branson. He estimated that a 1 percent assessment tax would cost MMH an extra $360,000 per fiscal year.

"It would place an extra burden on public hospitals like this one," he said.

Both Branson and Liley were doubtful of receiving funds from the indigent care "pool" that would be established from the 1 percent monies.

"What is the incentive?" asked Branson. "Pubic hospitals like ours already have a tax in place to take care of indigent care — we take care of our own.

"If our indigent care needs are already taken care of by our 'formula,' what would be the incentive to send extra money to us?"

Liley indicated the funds would likely wind up in public hospitals.

"If I were in their (TAPH) shoes, I'd be in favor of the bills too," he said.

Alternatives to the "sick tax" proposals have been suggested by the THA. Possible methods of providing a "pool" for indigent care, include an expansion of the state Medicaid program, more county participation in funding, state appropriations for all hospitals serving the indigents (particularly those that provide a disproportionate share of health care to indigents) and a state catastrophic coverage program to "offset the high costs of serious traumatic injuries, illness, conditions and surgical procedures," according to the THA report.

Still more revenue sources include earmark taxes (percentage of sales taxes) and excise taxes on alcohol, tobacco, drivers licenses and cigarettes.

A major complaint by the THA is the state's limited participation in the Medicaid program — state funds that are matched with federal Medicare dollars.

"Texas currently ranks 48th among the states in Medicaid participation," said the report. "Due to this fact, the burden is shifted to hospitals and the paying sick."

RECENT CUTBACKS by Medicare in a drive by the Reagan administration to reduce costs, has generated doubts the program could be expanded.

"I don't think they will expand the program," said Branson. "I think we pooped in our messkit, statewise, on that case.

"Philosophically, Medicaid should be expanded because we are so far under the national poverty guidelines for Medicaid," he said. "It's not a real useful program and is not meeting its intended design."

Still another concern by Texas hospitals is the precedent that such an "assessment tax" would set.

"Florida instituted a 'sick tax' program eight months ago requiring hospitals to pay a 1.5 percent tax" said the THA report. "Florida's governor is now proposing to increase the burden to 2.5 percent and reduce the state's participation in the Medicaid program by a like amount. The same could happen in Texas."

TAPH representative, Joel Allison disagrees.

"I would hope that there would be some sort of 'sunset provision' written into the bill," he said. "This would allow the situation to be reviewed, say every two years."

Branson and Liley believe that Florida's situation could be mirrored in Texas.

"I'm scared to death that this could happen here," said Liley. "Any time the government gets involved in ventures like this, it can do nothing but increase operating costs."

"Once you start that type of system," echoed Branson, "where does it stop?"

GANG

FOR THE SECOND time in 10 days, the house had been the scene of a shake-down by local law enforcement officers.

Armed with shotguns and revolvers, 15 officers converged on the house at 11:30 p.m. Friday to serve four warrants on "Murphys' Outlaws." April 10, six at the house were served warrants. During both incidents, the Murphys and their friends were outside drinking beer and barbecuing.

Their problems with police began a year ago and the Lubbock Bandido bust recently has fueled the fire.

"Six years ago we had 135 members," Jerry said. "We rode motorcycles and took trips and stuff. But it was a riding club, it wasn't a motorcycle gang. The only thing was we had tattoos and Harleys instead of Yamahas and Suzukis."

Years ago, the Murphy brothers, who were reared in Midland, said they had their troubles with police for public drunkeness and fighting. "We got barred from the bars," Murphy said. "That's when we started hanging out here" at the blue house which they bought.

HE SAID IN those days, when officers wanted the Murphys, they just called and the "Outlaws" went down to the station.

"I don't know when anybody's just called Jerry Murphy and had him 'just come down,'" said Midland County Constable Tom McGinnis, who headed up the past two warrant executions. "I know I never have."

McGinnis defended the method used during the last two raids. "It's just a precaution," he said. "We do it for our protection and for their protection."

But the Murphys feel the way the "Outlaws" are treated is unjust.

"The law gave us our names," Murphy said.

His son, Jerry Jr., agreed, "We're not the law so we're the outlaws."

McGinnis disagreed. "They tagged themselves with the name of Outlaws some years ago. In fact, they had the names on their vests."

Kenneth Kuykendall, 33, Murphy and his two brothers, Ronnie Cale Murphy, 29, and Larry J. Murphy, 38, were arrested April 10 in connection with the theft of a car from an Odessa dealership. The arrest, they say, was bogus.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Midland County Warrants Division Lt. Hugh Buzzell escorts Jerry Murphy to a patrol car during a Friday night raid on the home of members of the "Murphys' Outlaws." Gang members contend they have been the target of police harassment for the past year.

"They knew the cops have been sitting around," said Jerry's 18-year-old wife, Brenda, who was arrested Friday night on a bad check warrant. "He wouldn't have stolen the damn thing."

Murphy said a man had pulled up to the house at 4 p.m. before the first raid. He asked if Jerry was the mechanic who bought and sold cars.

"He said he needed to sell a car he'd bought two weeks ago," Murphy said. "He said he'd kicked the s— out of his wife and needed $500 to get out of town.

"The cops had already set up on this one," Murphy said. "That car had been stolen for 10 days when they got us."

Murphy said the man who sold him the car said he could drive it for two weeks before the finance company came after it. "Its paper plate expired in 10 days so I stuck some old tags on it."

Also arrested that night was Shelly Myers Murphy, wife of Jerry Jr. According to the warrant, Ms. Murphy was charged with a robbery March 6 of the La Quinta Motor Inn, 4130 W. Wall. She was released after posting a $50,000 bond, which she said she plans to pay off by getting another job at a pizza parlor.

According to police, Ms. Murphy was arrested at a nearby restaurant in a car that was used to run over a motel employee who was trying to stop the theft of a television set. Ms. Murphy said she stayed in the motel room while another gang member, now in Mexico, took the set and drove off.

"I DIDN'T even leave for the Kettle (restaurant) until five or 10 minutes" after the other woman left, Ms. Murphy, 17, said.

"She was hiding in the room scared," Brenda Murphy said.

"Those warrants were based on investigations by the police department," McGinnis said. "We're executing the warrants and, so far, none of them have been dismissed so they must be good."

The two counts of impersonating a peace officer, stemming from an incident at Love's Carnival last Saturday night, against Jerry Murphy were also valid, McGinnis said. "My understanding is there were eye witnesses other than the complainant."

Murphy said he and his wife were walking out of the carnival with a man they knew, who, after seeing two women leaning against a car smoking marijuana, said, "Watch this."

ACCORDING TO Murphy, the man ran up to the women, flipped his wallet open and onto the top of the car and told the woman to, "Spread 'em. I'm the police.' The women did, with the man kicking their legs further apart before he tore up the joint and told them he'd let them off this time.

"We were laughing," Murphy said. "We just kept on walking but I guess they saw our tattoos and the cops got us."

They got 38-year-old Larry Murphy, too, on a warrant for driving with a suspended license. According to Larry, his license was revoked for a driving-while-intoxicated conviction.

"How do they get him for driving without a license?" his brother asked. "Hell, he was in the bathroom when they came."

McGinnis said the warrant was based on information from the constable's office and police, who had seen Murphy driving a car.

While the gang protested the search of their house, officers denied opening drawers or using excessive force. Miranda warnings were not given, according to McGinnis, "because we didn't ask them any questions. All we did was tell 'em they were under arrest and that was it."

According to Murphy, that was it.

Without the money to hire a lawyer, Murphy said he, his family and their friends didn't have much choice to do anything else.

PROTEST

"Students, as much as they want to make money and get their job, they may be feeling guilty because they know they contribute to the system of apartheid and to the manufacture of arms," Penn said.

Eighty groups were listed by protesters as supporting the demonstration, including civil rights, labor, religious, antiwar, environmental, veterans and minority organizations.

The protesters urged a halt to U.S. intervention in Central America. Congress votes this week on $14 million in aid sought by the administration for Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government.

The demonstrators also blasted what they called U.S. government and business support for South Africa's white minority government and its racial policies. They called for a freeze on nuclear weapons and a shift in domestic priorities away from military spending and toward social and jobs programs.

At the American Conservative Union rally, on the Washington Monument grounds, the group's director, Jake Hansen, told reporters: "What we're after is contrast — not just shouting a bunch of negative slogans."

The group handed out balloons to tourists near the monument with the slogan "Celebrate Your Freedom — Pass it on."

"Peace isn't anything unless you've freedom to go with it," Hansen said. "We are strong supporters of President Reagan and we want his policies to succeed."

Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., who had been billed as the chief speaker by the conservative group, was unable to attend, Hansen said.

Conservative evangelist Carl McIntyre led about 30 pro-South Africa demonstrators outside that nation's embassy, the site of regular anti-apartheid protests since last November.

Among those marching in the anti-administration rally, Ethel Weisser of Washington, an organizer with the Grey Panthers, said she brought some 150 senior citizens to ellipse.

"There are war victims right here in this country, the poor," she said. "Our war policy is a direct attact on the standard of living of the American people."

Ernesto Jofre of New York, a member of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union, called the administration's budget "a very, very wrong allocation of money."

Rally organizers plannedtraining sessions today on nonviolent civil disobedience and lobbying. On Monday, the groups have scheduled a sit-in at the White House.

McLennan County DA: Rangers' investigation of Lucas 'unethical'

WACO (AP) — McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell said Saturday that much of the Texas Rangers' investigation into Henry Lee Lucas' murder confessions may have been "unethical or improper."

Feazell said the local grand jury investigation that he and Attorney General Jim Mattox initiated has uncovered instances in which the task force let Lucas have information about unsolved slayings.

That information, he told the Waco Tribune-Herald, led Lucas to confess to murders he could not have committed.

But Department of Public Safety chief Col. Jim Adams told The Associated Press Saturday night that Feazell "has not advised me of any specific unethical or improper acts on the part of the Rangers task force."

Adams labeled as "ridiculous" Feazell's assertion that federal agents may have tried to take custody of Lucas Friday because Rangers fear that the local investigation may prove embarrassing for them.

"Apply what I call the smell test," Feazell said. "Something stinks. These are the kind of things we are trying to get to the bottom of and we are being hampered at every turn."

But "this is ridiculous," Adams countered. "The facts clearly show that the task force has not denied access to Lucas to any law enforcement agency or district attorney's office desiring to interview him. The only time access has been restricted has been while he's been in custody in McLennan County."

On Friday, U.S. District Judge Edward Prado in San Antonio signed a warrant ordering Lucas to be transferred from McLennan County Jail to San Antonio to appear before a U.S. grand jury at 1 p.m. Wednesday.

But when federal marshals showed up with the court order, McLennan County Sheriff Jack Harwell refused to hand over Lucas. Feazell said Saturday he is standing by the sheriff.

Feazell said federal agents may try to jail him and Harwell for refusing the court order. But he said he is standing firm because he believes federal authorities may try to cover up the task force investigation of Lucas.

"(The U.S. marshals) weren't interested in this case back when Henry Lee Lucas was confessing to all these crimes he didn't commit.

'Legion of Doom' faces organized crime charges

FORT WORTH (AP) — Organized crime charges will be sought against nine suspected members of the Legion of Doom — a high school vigilante group accused of a series of violent acts against other students, police say.

A report sent to the Tarrant County district attorney's office Friday names nine suspects and includes about 35 offenses, police spokesman Doug Clarke said.

Police said the vigilante group includes honor students and athletes at Paschal High School. An investigation began three weeks ago after a student's car was pipe-bombed and another student's car was vandalized.

Messages declaring the high school "Nazi territory" and emblazoned with red swastikas were left by members of the group at vandalized cars and homes, investigators said.

Assistant District Attorney Bob Marshall, who will present the case next week to a grand jury, said the organized criminal activity charge is reserved for instances when five or more suspects are involved in a common criminal effort.

Marshall said the grand jury would have the option of pursuing specific charges against each suspect instead of the group.

Deputy Police Chief Charles Hogue said Friday that investigators "have been writing on it (the report) all week."

Two-alarm fire destroys blood bank in Lubbock

LUBBOCK (AP) — A two-alarm blaze that may have been sparked by a faulty chair motor decimated a blood blank early Saturday and caused more than $1 million damage, officials said.

United Blood Services of Lubbock lost its entire blood supply — more than 1,000 units — in the fire that broke out shortly after 3 a.m., said Carolyn Paulus, the blood bank's executive director.

But she said she anticipated no blood shortage in the Lubbock area because United Blood, owned by Blood Systems Inc. in Scottsville, Ariz., "is part of a very large system."

"We have 23 blood centers in 18 states and are receiving blood from Albuquerque and El Paso," she said. "We will begin drawing our own supplies in Lubbock on Monday, and we will be able to cover our own needs."

No one was injured in the blaze, but the downtown building and all its supplies and equipment are a total loss.

Fire department officials said the fire, which took 2½ hours and 20 firefighters to extinguish, may have started after a motor used to raise and lower an examination chair shorted out.

FBI figures show crime down 3 percent in 1984

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reported crime decreased 3 percent last year, including a 4 percent drop in murders, but rapes and aggravated assaults rose at the fastest pace since 1980, the FBI said Saturday.

The bureau's Uniform Crime Report, based on preliminary figures, said the overall decline in reported crime last year, compared to 1983, continued a downward trend that started in 1982.

But during the fourth quarter, from Oct. 1 to Dec. 31, reported crime rose 2 percent compared to the same three-month period in 1983, the FBI said. The quarterly increase was the first since 1981.

The figures are based on a compilation of crimes reported by nearly 13,000 state and local police agencies around the country.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III said "the drop in crime over the past three years is a significant achievement."

But Meese also said in a statement that "this is no time, however, to rest on our laurels. Neither the president nor I accept crime as an unavoidable fact of life."

FBI Director William H. Webster said: "The overall downward trend is encouraging, but the increase noted in the fourth quarter demonstrates that crime in our society must remain a concern of the general public and a high priority of the criminal justice community."

While there was a 4 percent decrease in murders and a 5 percent decline in the number of robberies reported last year, rapes jumped by 6 percent and aggravated assaults went up by 4 percent. Thus, the net overall rate of violent crime showed no change from 1983.

The 3 percent decrease in overall crime from 1983 to 1984 followed a 7 percent drop from 1982 to 1983 and a 3 percent decline from 1981 to 1982. But forcible rapes and aggravated assaults rose at a faster pace than at any other time since 1980.

Declines in the overall Uniform Crime Index, however, were recorded by each of the nation's four geographic regions, the bureau said.

The Northeastern states registered the sharpest decrease, at 6 percent, while the Midwest recorded a 5 percent drop and the Southern and Western regions each showed declines of 1 percent.

Cities with populations over 50,000 registered a 2 percent decline in overall crime last year, while those jurisdictions outside metropolitan areas reported a 5 percent decrease. The suburban and rural areas showed decreases of 3 and 5 percent respectively, the FBI said.

Some crime experts and Justice Department officials have questioned the reliability of the FBI's Uniform Crime Report in recent years, maintaining there are few controls to detect instances where local police might inflate or shrink crime figures.

But the overall decline in reported crimes last year did reflect the findings of a broader gauge of criminal activity — the Bureau of Justice Statistics' National Crime Survey — which includes the roughly two-thirds of the crimes that are never reported.

Colleges' tuition rates still head upward

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

If the worst of inflation is behind us, the news has certainly been slow in reaching America's colleges and universities.

Tuitions are headed up. Way up. Again.

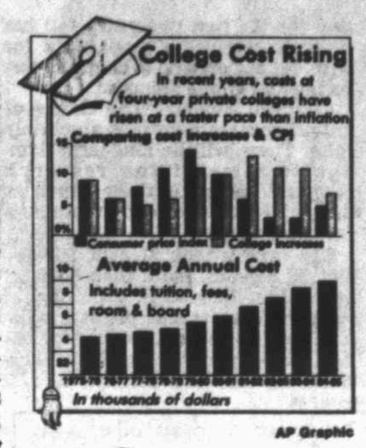
Colleges have begun announcing their rates for next fall, often with anguished explanations for why, for the fifth consecutive year, tuitions will increase faster than the national inflation rate.

A sampling: Carnegie-Mellon's tuition will rise close to 12 percent; Cornell, 9.4 percent; Barnard, 8.5 percent; Worcester Polytechnic, 11.8 percent; Stanford, 7.9 percent; Washington University in St. Louis, 7 percent.

It's likely, then, that the average annual cost at a four-year private college will increase by 7 to 9 percent to just under $10,000 — while inflation in the rest of the economy is expected to be no more than 4 or 5 percent.

This increase come on the heels of average cost increases of 7 percent at private colleges in 1984-85, 11 percent in 1983-84 and 1982-83, and 13 percent in 1981-82 — increases considerably steeper than the nation's inflation rate in each of those years.

The latest tuition hikes may make students and their parents wonder how much longer colleges will trot out their standard excuse that additional increases are needed to "catch up from the 1970s," when inflation raged.



AP Graphic

In 1977-78, the Consumer Price Index went up 8 percent, while the average cost of attending a four-year private college rose 5 percent. In the next two years, the inflation rates were 11 percent and 14 percent, while college costs increased by 6 percent and 11 percent.

John Phillips, president of the National Institute of Independent Colleges and Universities, a Washington lobbying group for private schools, insisted in an interview, "I think you're seeing the last wave of big tuition increases. There'll be a much more even balance ahead."

But some seem to want more. A month ago, the American Association of University Professors said average salaries for full professors rose 6.6 percent this year to almost $40,000 — good news, the group said, but still a long way from undoing the damage of inflation a decade ago.

Some higher education critics are openly wondering how wise a market strategy it is for colleges to continue boosting tuitions at the same time students face sharply curtailed federal aid under President Reagan's proposed budget.

"Pricing is really reaching the outer limits with no rational basis. It's simply, I think, being done in ways that sooner, rather than later, could begin to backlash," said Ernest L. Boyer, president of the Carnegie Endowment for the Advancement of Teaching and former head of the U.S. Office of Education. Boyer is now working on a study of higher education.

Boyer and others argue that it's one thing for a Harvard or Cornell to charge sky-high tuitions, because students will always line up 20-deep to attend. Such schools will certainly survive, though future student bodies could be wealthier, and whiter.

But less prestigious private schools, many of which already cost well over $10,000 a year to attend, may be gambling with their futures if tuitions keep going up. For one thing, as federal student aid becomes scarcer, such schools will have an even tougher time competing with richly endowed schools like Harvard or Yale to provide institutional loans and grants to needy students.

"Some schools will beat the system. Some may be confident they have a better mousetrap. But at some schools, consumer resistance is going to be felt dramatically," said Boyer.

Cornell University President Frank T. Rhodes nonetheless said in an interview that his school's latest 9.4 percent tuition increase, bringing total undergraduate costs to $14,100, is justified.

Not only haven't faculty salaries kept pace with inflation, he said, but a top school like Cornell must also compete with off-campus salaries in medicine, nuclear science and architecture.

Still, must ever-increasing tuitions and a top-flight education inevitably go hand-in-hand?

Rice University, in Houston, an undisputed leader in science and engineering education, challenges that view by charging students about half what it costs to go to schools of comparable ranking.

While Rice doesn't have many of the building maintenance costs that are helping push tuitions higher at many older, northern schools, the 94-year-old university has clung to a philosophy of devoting much of its huge, $500 million endowment to holding tuitions down, said Carl M. MacDowell, assistant to the president.

And Rice, not quite as generous as other top schools in its faculty benefits, tends to attract younger faculty who don't demand top dollar.

The average cost of a year at Rice will be about $8,500 this fall — roughly half the cost of MIT — and tuitions are going up just $200.

Arkansas students learn Vietnam vets' history

PARAGOULD, Ark. (AP) — When U.S. military involvement in Vietnam ended 10 years ago, Beth Caldwell, Todd Gazaway, John Honeycutt and Kelly Washington were in the first grade.

The students say they knew little of the war, which bitterly divided Americans, until a high school history project allowed them to view it through the memories of 30 Vietnam veterans.

"I didn't know hardly anything," Washington said.

"I thought of Vietnam as someplace far off that we fought a war and didn't win," Honeycutt said.

In the past few months, the juniors at Paragould High School have collected the names of 60 veterans, taped interviews with several of them and distributed questionnaires to the others.

The transcribed interviews and questionnaires have become a scrapbook. A map of Vietnam has been punctuated to show where the veterans served. The students also have borrowed pictures and medals and listed the names of the 12 men from Paragould County who were killed in the war.

The items comprise a project called, "We Also Served," which won the regional History Day competition.

One comment from a veteran read: "This is a part of my life...that most people will never understand. Thanks for shedding a little light and even maybe a little appreciation."

Congress may derail proposed sale of Conrail

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's proposal to sell Conrail to the Norfolk Southern Corp., began on a fast track in Congress, but opponents are making headway in a stubborn, time-consuming guerrilla war aimed at derailing the sale.

While Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole and Norfolk Southern executives continue to express optimism about congressional approval, opposition is intense and persistent from some members of both the House and Senate.

Sen. John C. Danforth, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee and a strong supporter of the sale, acknowledged last week that it may be "some time" before the issue reaches the Senate floor.

Although the proposal still has widespread support in the Senate, Danforth, R-Mo., said: "We're a long way from passing this bill."

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, promises vigorous debate on the Senate floor when the proposal gets there and hints of a possible filibuster by a small cadre of senators who have led the fight against Norfolk Southern's proposal to buy the government-owned freight railroad.

Executives of Norfolk Southern, which has offered $1.2 billion for Conrail, are becoming increasingly irritated by hurdles being erected on Capitol Hill.

"They're trying to chip away and to delay...The strategy of the other side is to make it not a good investment for Norfolk Southern," complained one senior executive for the Virginia-based railroad company. The executive spoke on condition he remain anonymous.

Opponents like Metzenbaum and Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., have managed to focus attention in recent months on several areas of concern, causing some of their colleagues to think twice about the issue.

For example:

— Members of both the House and Senate have questioned whether Norfolk Southern may be getting a tax windfall if it can use some of the $3 billion in Conrail asset depreciation to shelter Norfolk Southern income.

— Concern has been raised over whether two small regional railroads — the Guilford System and the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie — can provide shippers adequate competition against the huge and financially solid Norfolk Southern-Conrail combination, even after 1,700 miles of tracks are divested to the two small rail lines.

— Senators from the West and Midwest have complained that smaller railroads in those regions may be at the mercy of the a Conrail-Norfolk Southern.

Mrs. Dole and Norfolk Southern have tried to defuse these issues, but company executives are beginning to wonder at what point the deal would lose its shine.

During the opening round of House hearings on the Conrail sale last week, for example, Mrs. Dole said she would be ready to support legislative limits on how Norfolk Southern could use the Conrail tax benefits.

But that did not set well with Norfolk Southern, whose lawyers indicated such legislation would be fought on Capitol Hill since the railroad all along has intended to use those benefits.

Norfolk Southern also is known to be displeased by concessions it is being forced to make to other railroads.

Animal Liberation Front 'rescues' 250 laboratory animals

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The Animal Liberation Front claimed the "rescue" Saturday of 260 laboratory animals from a University of California research center, the latest in a series of raids by the anti-vivisection group in this country, Canada and Britain.

"Early this morning, (16 members of) the Animal Liberation Front rescued 260 animals" from the university's Riverside campus, Vicky Miller of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals said in a call to the Washington bureau of The Associated Press.

Campus spokesman Jack Chappell said university police and scientists were counting the number of animals missing from 25 to 30 laboratories in the basement of the four-floor campus life sciences building, but the number claimed by the anti-vivisectionists "is approximately correct."

The raiders "pried open doors to laboratories and removed doors from their hinges," he said. "They spray-painted slogans...I understand computers were vandalized. In some of the labs, test tubes and other paraphernalia were swept off counters and smashed on the floor."

Ms. Miller alleged the university "has been using animals in experiments on sight deprivation and isolation for the past two years and has recently received a grant, paid for with our tax dollars, to continue torturing and killing animals."

Chappell replied: "The claims of animal mistreatment are absolutely false. There will be long-term damage to some of the research projects," including those aimed at developing devices and treatments for blind people.

The raiders took 21 cats, 35 rabbits, 38 pigeons, more than 80 rats, more than 70 gerbils, nine opossums "and an infant primate who had been the victim of sight deprivation experiments since birth," she said.

Also taken were "graphic videotapes," which she said revealed the baby primate, a stump-tailed macaque named Britches, had been "kept in isolation with virtually his entire skull and face covered with surgical tape and electronic devices."

"The ALF liberated cats whose eyes have been sewn shut, rabbits who have been starved and mice who are normally vegetarians who have been forced to eat meat or starve in nutritional studies that cannot be extrapolated to human beings," Ms. Miller said.

Campus police dispatcher Judy Feaster said not all of the animals were used for research, and many were "pets for a lot of the students. You can walk down there and see cats roaming the halls that are nothing but pets."

Saturday's theft followed a pattern set in others across the nation in recent years, with People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals informing the news media of a raid by the Animal Liberation Front.

Man arrested after he fails to attend hearing

MIAMI (AP) — A man who failed to appear for a deportation hearing after being accused of directing a massacre in a Latvian village while an officer at a Nazi concentration camp has been arrested, authorities said Saturday.

Conrads Kalejs, 72, was alone in a Miami Beach hotel room, and was unarmed and offered no resistance when arrested Friday night, said Bill Dempsey, a spokesman for the U.S. Marshals Office.

Kalejs was arrested on a Feb. 22 warrant charging him with failing to appear for a deportation hearing, Dempsey said. In March, the U.S. Justice Department's Office of Special Investigations filed an order requiring Kalejs to show why he shouldn't be expelled from this country.

Kalejs is accused of being a senior lieutenant at the Salaspils concentration camp in Latvia, a formerly independent country on the Baltic Sea that is now part of the Soviet Union, according to an announcement of the arrest by Assistant Attorney General Stephen S. Trott and U.S. Marshals Service Director Stanley E. Morris.

They said Kalejis is accused of directing the destruction in 1942 of the Latvian village of Sanniki and its surrounding villages, in which the entire civilian population was killed.

Kalejs, whose last known address was in St. Petersburg, is said to have commanded a company of the Arajs Kommando in Latvia, which was used by Nazi forces to aid in persecution and murder, the officials said.

He immigrated to the United States from Australia in 1959, and became a permanent resident alien.

Crosswinds may have led to shuttle blowout

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronaut Karol Bobko's battle with crosswinds that pushed the shuttle Discovery 50 feet off course during landing may have caused its brakes to lock and a tire to blow, space agency officials said Saturday.

Discovery, pushed by 10 mph crosswinds, touched down 20 feet left of the runway's center line, and Bobko, the mission commander, applied the right brakes as a corrective measure. At one point, officials said, the shuttle strayed 50 feet from the center of the 300-foot-wide runway.

Ken Colley, chief shuttle mechanic, said one set of brakes on the right landing gear locked about 130 feet from the point where the shuttle stopped, and, about five feet before it stopped, the second set of right-hand brakes seized. The resulting pressure caused one right tire to blow out and the other to fray badly.

All four main landing gear tires were badly damaged, Colley said.

Inspection also disclosed "impact hits" on 123 of the nearly 30,000 thermal tiles that protect the shuttle from re-entry heat and a large hole, as wide as a dinner plate, in a wing flap, Colley said.

Launch director Bob Sieck said the flap may have lost one thermal tile and parts of three others during launching and as a result some of the metal underneath was damaged by re-entry heat that reached 1,200 degrees. An inspection will be made to determine if there is structural damage.

The damage was the most suffered by a shuttle in 16 flights.

Questions remain in David Kennedy's death

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The posh but obscure Brazilian Court Hotel, which gained unwanted attention a year ago when David Kennedy died in one its rooms of a drug overdose, is closed now, undergoing a facelift for its new owners.

As workmen pull apart the rooms, police continue to pull apart the case. There are still questions to be answered before the trial begins for two men charged with supplying cocaine to the 28-year-old son of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy.

Hotel owners Dennis and Elizabeth Heffernon had agreed to sell the block-long Brazilian Court before Kennedy's death, but the $6.76 million deal with the Hibiscus Hotel Corp. wasn't signed until two days afterward.

The new owners — three Texas investors — immediately began renovating the Spanish-style hotel, a watering hole and guest house for Palm Beach since the 1920s.

Laboratory tests found cocaine had been dumped in the toilet water of Kennedy's $250-a-day room. How it got there is unknown. Investigators have yet to determine if anyone entered the room and tampered with evidence before police arrived.

Police reports say David's cousin, Caroline Kennedy, daughter of the slain president, was among the last to see him alive and was seen in the area before police were called. She has denied entering the room.

Enough uncertainty remains to cloud the case against the two former bellboys charged with selling Kennedy cocaine, says a lawyer for one.

"In this case, there appears to have been some zealousness to arrest someone," Michael Salnick said. "They arrested first, charged blindly and investigated later."

Former bellhops Peter Marchant and David Dorr have pleaded innocent. They face up to 20 years in prison if convicted.

Circuit Judge John E. Born said the two may wait nearly another year for their trial because his 1985 docket is jammed.

Salnick cited unusual delays in the case — legal battles with the prosecutor, the Kennedy family and the media over releasing evidence, and problems with tracking down witnesses who have moved away.

Those early court fights and accounts of Kennedy's last days were the talk of the wealthy resort community where his grandmother, Rose Kennedy, has an estate.

But public attention has waned. At a national cocaine information hotline, calls from drug users have returned to normal after soaring as details of Kennedy's drug habits surfaced after his body was found last April 25.

"When the young Kennedy had his tragedy, there was well in excess of 2,000 calls a day," said Dr. Mark Gold, organizer of the hotline based in Summit, N.J.

Jurors will tour von Bulow's Newport mansion

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Three decades ago, a Newport mansion known as Clarendon Court was a backdrop in the movie musical "High Society."

This week, the manor will be the setting for a real-life high-society saga, as 16 jurors tour the home where the state claims socialite Claus von Bulow twice injected his wife with insulin in murder attempts driven by greed and passion.

The Superior Court jury will spend up to two hours in the house Tuesday as attorneys point out areas that will be discussed in court during von Bulow's trial, which is expected to last two months, said prosecutor Henry Gemma.

He said the jurors will be shown von Bulow's study and a closet where he allegedly kept insulin, drugs, needles and syringes in a black bag.

They will see the couple's bedroom where Martha "Sunny" von Bulow slept. And they will view Mrs. von Bulow's pink-marble bathroom where she was found unconscious on Dec. 21, 1980.

She has been in an irreversible coma at a New York hospital for more than four years.

Von Bulow, 58, a Danish-born socialite and former aide to oil baron J. Paul Getty, is charged with two counts of attempted murder. The state says he tried to kill his wife during the Christmas holidays of 1979 and 1980 so he could inherit $14 million from her estate and be free to marry his mistress, a former soap opera actress.

The defense maintains Mrs. von Bulow, 53, heiress to a Pittsburgh utilities fortune worth $75 million, caused her own condition by abusing drugs, alcohol and sweets, aggravating a low blood-sugar condition.

Von Bulow was convicted in 1982, but the conviction was overturned by the Rhode Island Supreme Court last year on state constitutional grounds.

The jury, which took nine days to be selected and is expected to be sworn in Monday, will be taken by bus to the opulent mansion on Bellevue Avenue, commonly known as "Millionaires' Row."

The judge, prosecutors, defense attorneys and sheriffs are expected to tour the house with the sequestered jury. Reporters are banned.

The von Bulows bought Clarendon Court in 1970, using it as a vacation retreat, with a 14-room luxury apartment in New York as their permanent home.

Under Mrs. von Bulow's will, her husband would inherit both the New York apartment and the Newport mansion.

He lives at the New York apartment with Andrea Reynolds, his new companion, who has accompanied him to Providence for the retrial.

The manor is used for vacations by von Bulow's stepchildren, Alexander von Auersperg and Annie-Laurie "Ala" Kneissl. They hired the attorney whose investigation led to the 1981 indictment against the man they called "Uncle Claus."

Opening arguments in the trial are expected Wednesday.

Police tighten noose around survivalists

THREE BROTHERS, Ark. (AP) — Police with camouflage clothing and blackened faces tightened their noose around the remote encampment of a band of self-styled Christian survivalists Saturday, searching some buildings and hoping to flush out their leader.

The officers moved cautiously to avoid a confrontation and out of fear the compound, belonging to the white-supremacist group called the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord, had been mined, an FBI agent said.

Less than 50 miles away Saturday, police arrested David Tate, ending an intense manhunt that began five days earlier with the slaying of a Missouri state trooper at a random traffic stop.

Tate, 22, was indicted in Seattle Monday along with members of a neo-Nazi group called The Order, and has been charged with first-degree murder in the trooper's death. Authorities here had suspected he might have been heading for the encampment.

Special weapons and tactics teams moved in and secured two clusters of buildings and searched them, seizing pistols, shotguns, detonator cord and blasting caps, said FBI agent Ray McElhaney. The buildings, small sheds and houses outside the main part of the compound, were not occupied and the teams met no resistance, he said.

"The main compound has not been secured," the FBI agent said. He said a search warrant for the main group of buildings and an arrest warrant for James Ellison, 44, spiritual leader of the group, had not been served.

"We want to execute the two warrants without any confrontation and we think we shall," he said. "We want to avoid confrontation."

He said officers were taking precautions because CSA members remained in the main buildings.

"We are talking about people who have announced they are well armed. There is good reason to believe there are explosives, mines and assault weapons on the premises, and the people that occupy the compound have adequate training in using them," he said.

During the night, caravans of police cars had patrolled dirt roads around the rustic headquarters of the white-supremacist group. State police crouched in the hardwood forest as officers toting automatic rifles manned roadblocks.

Late Saturday, carloads of police in grimy camoflage clothing, their blackened faces streaming with sweat, left the blockade to be replaced by reinforcements.

Ellison shed a Texas congregation in 1976 to lead a group to the woods here near the Missouri border and build a commune of Scripture-quoting, gun-carrying, back-to-nature soldier-survivalists.

As police encircled the 224-acre commune, agents continued negotiations to try to persuade Ellison to surrender.

Ellison is charged with felony conspiracy to manufacture, possess and transfer automatic firearms and silencers. U.S. Attorney Asa Hutchinson said he faces a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine if convicted.

Kerry Noble, a former pastor who is the group's spokesman, held a news conference outside the compound to say Ellison would not surrender.

Guarded by armed police officers as he spoke, Noble, who brought his wife and family from Dallas to join the commune, said Ellison had prayed for guidance and God had told him not to give up.

Asked how much food was in the camp, Noble said, "More than a couple of meals." He said there were 70 to 100 men, women and children in the compound Friday. Earlier, he had said there were 65 group members there.

McElhaney said no food would be allowed into the encampment, but he refused to characterize the police blockade as a siege.

People would be allowed to leave if they wished, but would not be permitted to return, he said. A woman and three children left the camp in a government van.

"We have every desire to resolve this matter in a peaceful manner," McElhaney said. "As soon as possible and as peacefully as possible. There are no plans for any assault."

Officials arrest reputed neo-Nazi, ending manhunt

FORSYTH, Mo. (AP) — Authorities Saturday arrested a reputed member of a neo-Nazi group, ending an intense manhunt that began five days earlier with the slaying of a state trooper at a random traffic stop.

David Tate, 22, linked to the neo-Nazi group called The Order and charged with first-degree murder in the trooper's death, was arrested unarmed and without incident in a city park, said Capt. Lee Thompson of the Missouri Highway Patrol.

Hundreds of police using camouflage, helicopters, dogs and road blocks had searched the rugged Ozark Mountains on both sides of the Arkansas-Missouri border since the trooper was killed and another wounded with a silencer-equipped automatic pistol on Monday.

"I'm glad it's over," Thompson said. "I'm ready to go home."

Tate was spotted at the edge of a city park by a resident, who then told officers manning a nearby roadblock, said Taney County Sheriff Chuck Keithley.

"Tate was ready to give up," Keithley said. "The man was getting hungry, he told us. He's been in the woods for several days without a whole lot to eat."

Officials try to re-enact conditions leading to crash

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Safety officials Monday are to fly a Lockheed Electra airliner with a small wing hatch left open, hoping to simulate conditions that led to an Electra crash that killed 70 people.

The National Transportation Safety Board, which will conduct the test, believes the open hatch may have produced vibrations that contributed to the Jan. 21 crash in Reno, Nev.

The four-engine turboprop will be rigged with two cameras to record what happens to the open hatch, said NTSB investigator Paul Turner.

Three crew members are to join at least five NTSB officials in a government-owned Lockheed Electra 188, a plane identical to the one that crashed, officials said Friday.

NTSB reports have suggested an open access hatch on the right wing of the Galaxy Airlines charter plane produced vibrations that prompted the pilot to cut power and crash shortly after takeoff. Most of the victims were Minnesotans, returning home from a gambling junket.

Six youths die in crash

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Six youths, including two brothers, died when their car crashed at high speed into a tree after skidding 166 feet, the Florida Highway Patrol said.

FHP spokeswoman Susan Gordon said the impact split the car in half, throwing two of the boys from the wreckage. She said police hadn't determined if alcohol was involved.

Dennis Barrington, who heard the car roar by his house Friday night shortly before it smashed into the tree, said, "It sounded like it was going 100 miles an hour. It sounded like drag racing."

F-111 lawsuit settled

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A lawsuit over an F-111 fighter crash that left an Air Force colonel paralyzed has been settled out of court two days before the scheduled start of a trial.

But James McCarthy of Los Angeles, attorney for the two Air Force men injured in the 1982 crash, called the amount "very, very substantial." The suit filed by the two officers sought more than $80 million in damages.

There were three defendants in the suit — General Dynamics Corp., McDonnell Douglas Corp., and B.F. Goodrich Co. The fliers charged that the ejection equipment they used to escape the crashing plane was defective.

Businessman to pay penalty

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service says a businessman who sold overpriced refrigerated food containers to 5,000 people as a tax shelter has agreed to pay a $350,000 penalty.

Spokesman Larry Wright estimated Friday the IRS could recover up to $68 million in lost tax revenues.

Bloody clashes bare deep rift between rival Moslem militias

By ED BLANCHE

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Bloody clashes in west Beirut have bared a dangerous rift among Moslem militias, heralding what many fear could be a new wave of terror and violence in the Lebanese capital.

Fighting this past week, which killed 38 people and wounded more than 160, rekindled a long-dormant power struggle among Moslem militias armed and bankrolled by rival Arab powers.

The Shiite Moslem Amal militia and the Progressive Socialist Party of Druse chieftain Walid Jumblatt emerged as the winners of the latest frenzy of factional fighting.

The losers were the Mourabitoun militia of the Sunni Moslems, outgunned by the two other factions. In the early days of Lebanon's 10-year-old civil war, all three were allies against Christian forces.

They began feuding a year ago, but in the midst of Lebanon's other troubles, the Moslem strife was never resolved.

The feud erupted anew last Tuesday. Amal and the Druse ganged up on the Mourabitoun — Arabic for Ambushers — when the Sunnis tried to gain territory claimed by Amal.

The Mourabitoun were badly beaten after 20 hours of fighting, leaving the Sunnis, the majority Moslem sect in west Beirut, dominated by their rivals.

Amal leader Nahib Berri boasted that, from now on, Beirut is his "town and crown."

Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a Sunni, tendered his resignation, vowing: "We will not permit any group or party other than the legitimate forces of the state to control the people or security of west Beirut."

Beirut's independent English-language Daily Star said in an editorial that the takeover by Amal and the Progressive Socialist Party "was a hollow victory."

"Amal and PSP militiamen may rule the streets of west Beirut, but they do so by earning the bitter enmity of the Sunni community and by splitting the ranks of the Moslems," the newspaper said.

Residents of west Beirut look over damage to their cars, parked in the main business district of the Lebanees city, Thursday after fierce street battles raged between Moslem militias earlier in the week.

Amal officials, seeking to justify the anti-Sunni move, claimed Palestinian guerrillas were using Mourabitoun strongholds to infiltrate west Beirut after being driven out by invading Israelis in 1982.

With hundreds of Mourabitoun driven underground, west Beirut again faces the threat of car bomb attacks and terror.

Scores of Mourabitoun activists were rounded up and held in "security houses." War-weary Beirutis stayed indoors, leaving streets to the gunmen.

Despite the crackdown, the Mourabitoun "ambushers" are likely to live up to their name and their military reputation. It wasn't until the Druse, yelling the war cries of their mountain sect, moved in to help Amal that the Mourabitoun were put on the run.

"We will return. It's only a question of time," a Sunni militiaman whispered to reporters as he watched Amal gunmen ransacking Mourabitoun headquarters.

"We'll get the weapons to beat all of those who are trying to control Beirut on foreign orders," he said, referring to Syria.

Beirutis fear that a Mourabitoun desire for revenge will plunge the city's western sector into street battles and cause the forging of new, volatile alliances.

The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio reported the formation of a "Sunni resistance to strike at those who pretend to be Moslems."

The trouble also looked like it could spread to the northern, predominantly Sunni port of Tripoli. There, a new Sunni group calling itself the Islamic Army vowed to take revenge against the Druse.

In Beirut, Amal and Progressive Socialist Party gunmen went on a rampage of looting in Sunni districts, dragging people from their homes at gunpoint.

South African mob sets woman afire, burns her home, killing boy

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A mob of blacks set fire to a woman of mixed race Saturday and then burned her home, killing her and her 3-year-old son and badly burning her two other young children, police said.

Arsonists elsewhere in the eastern Cape Province poured gasoline on a garbage truck Saturday and tried to set it on fire, but soldiers arrived and fired on the crowd, wounding one black man, a spokesman at police headquarters in Pretoria said.

The spokesman said those were the two major incidents reported in the riot-torn black and "colored" townships of the eastern Cape. "Colored" is the term used by the white-minority government for people of mixed race.

More than 300 blacks have perished in nine months of violence, sparked mainly from black anger over the government's policy of apartheid, or racial segregation.

The mixed-race woman and her child were killed in Bontrug township outside the eastern Cape town of Kirkwood in the early hours of Saturday morning, the spokesman said. A crowd of blacks came to her home, which houses both black and mixed-race families, seeking a black man. When the woman said she did not know the man, the crowd attacked her, the police spokesman said.

He said the house was then set ablaze, killing her three-year-old and seriously injuring her two other children, aged 6 and 7, who were still inside.

Assaults by blacks against other blacks considered collaborators with the white-minority government have increased in recent weeks, along with arson attacks against homes of black officials and policemen.

In Cape Town, a white man attacked by a black mob Thursday was reported in serious condition with burns over 70 percent of his body. The man, Erasmus Jacobs, 19, was transferred to Tygerberg Hospital near Cape Town on Friday night from Port Elizabeth Provincial Hospital in the eastern Cape.

Initially, police said the man was attacked in the white township of Uitenhage in the eastern Cape in the first recent reported attack against a white in a white area.

But on Friday a witness said he saw a white man set alight after emerging from an illegal bar in a black township outside Uitenhage, near where police shot dead 20 black marchers a month ago.

The attack on Jacobs occurred the same day that an inquiry into the police shootings of the marchers heard that 17 of the victims were shot in the back.

In Johannesburg, a mixed-race bus driver whose school bus plunged into a suburban reservoir three weeks ago, killing 42 white children, was in stable condition after being stabbed in his home on Friday.

Racial violence breaks out in Pakistan city

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — New violence hit Karachi on Saturday night, where riots, ethnic street brawls and battles with security forces have killed 51 people and seriously wounded 250 in six days.

Mobs of youths hurled rocks at police and then were driven off with tear gas and baton charges, police said. Two people were stabbed to death in clashes between ethnic groups, bringing the toll since Monday to 51, according to medical and civil government officials.

The violence in Pakistan's biggest city began Monday with a bus accident that killed two young women.

Police said youths on Saturday defied a 24-hour curfew to battle security forces in several parts of the city's west side. Authorities called for reinforcements to keep things in check.

New fighting between ethnic groups was reported in a poor, dingy area known as Orangi Town, when authorities relaxed the curfew for two hours so people could buy food. Besides the two stabbing deaths, at least six people were injured, according to doctors at Abassi Hospital.

Doctors at hospitals in this city of 7 million reported earlier in the day that five bodies from Friday's fighting had been brought in.

Military authorities immediately reimposed the curfew and armored trucks bearing heavily armed soldiers sped into trouble spots.

Reportedly, the death toll could be much higher than first thought, because people might not report killings of family members to avoid a police investigation.

The martial law government of President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq ordered troops into Karachi on Tuesday.

Orangi Town has been the scene of the worst rioting during the past six days. Members of rival ethnic groups have fought in the streets with guns, knives and axes. Doctors at local hospitals said more than 20 people have been butchered with daggers.

Peres: Israel, Egypt don't trust each other

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres said Saturday that both Israel and Egypt hold a lingering suspicion that the other side has not honored their 1979 peace treaty, creating an obstacle to improved relations.

Political sources in Cairo said meanwhile that Egypt's president, Hosni Mubarak, told his party last month he was no longer eager for full diplomatic relations with other Arab countries and considered a dialogue with Israel to be in the national interest.

Egyptian Prime Minister Kamal Hassan Aly flew to Amman, Jordan on Saturday to discuss efforts to form a proposed Palestinian-Jordanian delegation for negotiations with Israel.

Peres said in an interview on Israel Radio that he hoped a summit meeting with Mubarak could be arranged soon, but he added "the major obstacle is an air of uneasiness between our two countries" over each country's belief that the other has not properly honored their 1979 peace treaty.

Mubarak has offered to host talks between Israel and a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation. He has said Israel must fulfill three points of the treaty before relations can be improved — a complete withdrawal from Lebanon, agreement to international arbitration on a disputed border area, and progress on Palestinian autonomy in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Reagan needs to 'remember victims' of Nazis

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A Jewish leader said Saturday President Reagan could have spared himself "a lot of embarrassment" by originally including a visit to a former Nazi death camp along with a stop at a German military cemetery.

Werner Nachman, chairman of the Central Council of German Jews, made the comment a day after Reagan announced he would add a visit to a concentration camp in his itinerary. A week ago, Reagan said he would visit a German military cemetery but not a camp during his May 1-6 tour of West Germany.

In an interview with the newspaper Bild am Sonntag, Nachmann said White House aides responsible for Reagan's initial schedule "made serious psychological errors."

"One can only form the future from knowledge of the past," he said. "Without consciousness of this history (Nazi atrocities), the younger generation cannot guarantee that such tyranny will never recur.

"Therefore, we insist that the president, who is planning a gesture of reconciliation with his visit to the soldiers' cemetery, also remember the past there. Not to reopen wounds, but simply to remember the victims."

Chancellor Helmut Kohl said he understood Jewish concern over Reagan's plans to visit the military cemetery in Bitburg, where the bodies of some Nazi SS troopers are buried.

"I can fully understand that the victims of the Nazi barbarians cannot forget (what took place)," Kohl said.

Most of the 2,000 German soldiers buried at Bitburg died fighting U.S. troops and those of its allies in the December 1944 Battle of the Bulge. Thousands of Americans also perished in the battle.

Kohl welcomed Reagan's decision to add a concentration camp site to his agenda without cancelling the Bitburg trip.

He said Reagan's visit to Bitburg would be a "symbol of reconciliation" between the United States and Germany 40 years after the end of World War II.

"It was a difficult decision for the president (to visit the Bitburg cemetery) and I thanked him for it," the conservative chancellor said in an interview with West German television Friday.

Objections about Reagan's cemetery visit have been raised daily. The Israeli lawyer who prosecuted Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichmann said in an interview Reagan's visit to a German cemetery would hand Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler a posthumous victory.

Prosecutor Gideon Hausner, speaking on Israel Radio Saturday, said the visit "would be in our view a victory of Hitler from beyond his grave and a desecration of the memory of the Jewish victims."

Eichmann was the only Nazi tried in Israel. He was kidnapped from Argentina and charged with masterminding the transportation of Jews to Nazi death camps as an SS major. He was hanged in 1962.

Elan Steinberg, director of the American section of the World Jewish Congress, said of Reagan's decision to go on with the cemetery visit: "He shouldn't go to Bitburg. It's a bad decision. Maybe he had bad advice but he should be making the right decisions."

Steinberg made the remarks in an interview with The Associated Press in Frankfurt. He came to West Germany to attend a memorial service Sunday at the Bergen-Belsen death camp site.

"The right decision is to honor the victims of the Third Reich, not the participants," Steinberg said.

"The decision to visit the cemetery at Bitburg is almost insulting to the young German generation and to those who set Germany on the path of democracy."

Kohl addresses death camp survivors

BERGEN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl speaks today to survivors of the same Nazi death camp that President Reagan plans to visit along with a German war cemetery next month.

Kohl was scheduled to address a Jewish memorial gathering marking the 40th anniversary of the April 15, 1945, liberation of the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp.

He is the first West German chancellor to deliver an address at the site of a Nazi death camp. The site lies between the small towns of Bergen and Belsen in northern West Germany, about 36 miles north of Hannover.

Reagan is due to visit the site on May 5, along with Kohl. The White House added Bergen-Belsen to Reagan's itinerary after Jewish and U.S. veterans' groups said they were outraged by the president's plans to visit a German war cemetery that contained the graves of some Nazi SS troops.

Kohl's speech has been planned for several months and was unrelated to the controversy over Reagan's visit.

Some 800 people, most of them camp survivors and their families, were invited to Sunday ceremonies, according to a spokesman for the organizers, the Central Council of Jews in Germany.

But up to 5,000 people were expected, said camp caretaker Ferdinand Schneeweiss.

Schneeweiss added that survivors from all over Europe had been invited and several members of the Israeli Knesset were also expected to attend.

Bonn officials refused to give any clue as to what Kohl's remarks would be.

Bomb explodes at offices of NATO affiliate, injuring 3

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A bomb with the force of about 220 pounds of TNT exploded Saturday at the headquarters of a NATO affiliate, slightly injuring three people, police said.

A previously unknown leftist group, the Revolutionary Front for Proletarian Action, claimed responsibility.

The bomb was placed on a windowsill at the offices of the North Atlantic Assembly and detonated around daybreak. It ripped away part of a wall at the back of the 19th-century building, and touched off a fire in the archives room. The fire was quickly controlled, police said.

The blast also extensively damaged a nearby historical mansion, shattered windows and demolished a car. Three people living nearby were cut by glass but needed no medical attention.

The initials of the Revolutionary Front for Proletarian Action were sprayed in red paint near where the bomb exploded. Two hours after the explosion, a man claiming he represented that organization called Belgium's French-speaking RTBF news network. A network official quoted him as saying: "The 20th of April Unit has struck at the NATO Assembly this night."

Spokesman Richard Grant said: "The North Atlantic Assembly is an organization that brings together elected members of parliament of all 16 NATO nations. It is absurd to attack us."

The 30-year-old assembly is completely independent of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but it provides a link between the alliance and the parliaments of the allies.

Ten thousand commemorate camp's liberation

BERLIN (AP) — About 10,000 people, among them top Communist Party officials, commemorated on Saturday the liberation 40 years ago of the Nazis' Ravensbrueck death camp where 92,000 women and children perished, the state-run East German news agency ADN said.

A wreath laid at the Ravensbrueck monument in the name of President Erich Honecker said, "The courageous women of the anti-fascist resistance, the defenseless victims of fascist bestiality always to be remembered eternally."

ADN said Kurt Hager, a member of the ruling Communist Party Politburo, addressed the gathering.

Referring to "a new danger of extinction through atomic war," Hager called for a "new coalition of common sense to further common efforts between powers of...different world views" to preserve peace.

ADN quoted Hager as saying East Germany would "enter into any coalition that would forever ban fascism, racial hatred and war."

The Ravensbrueck camp held women and children only and was situated about 30 miles northwest of Berlin. More than 17,000 inmates were freed by advancing Soviet Red Army troops in April 1945, according to ADN.

"They (prisoners) remind us that we should spare no effort to prevent a return of fascist barbarity, and also to fight with all our might for peace and a happy future for all children," said Hager.

As in previous reports on East German ceremonies connected with the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II in Europe, ADN made no mention of the Jews who perished in Nazi death camps.

The 1933-45 Nazi German regime set up concentration and death camps mainly to exterminate Europe's Jews, killing an estimated 6 million of them.

Indian investigator: Bhopal plant had serious flaws

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A government investigator said Saturday there were major design flaws at the Union Carbide Corp. plant in Bhopal that leaked a deadly gas last December, killing more than 2,000 people.

"There are indications that serious design flaws were there. The plant was not made to handle such a calamity," a senior official of the Central Bureau of Investigation told The Associated Press.

The official, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified by name, said the bureau would issue a report after it has completed its investigation.

He said the plant "apparently was badly constructed because everything seemed to have failed" when the leak occurred.

But a report from Union Carbide's management in India to a one-man judicial commission in Bhopal disputed the official's account.

United News of India quoted the 20-page report as saying the plant's tank storing the deadly methyl isocyanate had been designed "in accordance with established international standards."

In its own report, released March 20, the Danbury, Conn.-based corporation said the leak was caused by the entry into the tank of about 240 gallons of water, and blamed workers in Bhopal.

Union Carbide chairman Warren Anderson has said he did not rule out sabotage in the leak.

Reagan claims Russian military personnel in northern Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, seeking support for his plan to send $14 million in aid to Nicaraguan rebels, said today his administration has "confirmed the presence of Russian military personnel in the battle zones of northern Nicaragua."

In his weekly radio address, delivered from the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., Reagan said his proposal would provide leverage to force Nicaragua's Sandinista government to the negotiating table and steer it "back toward the democratic and peaceful promises of their revolution."

Reagan has proposed to limit the aid to non-lethal supplies such as food, medicine and logistical equipment during a trial period while efforts are made to secure a peace settlement.

"The responsibility now rests squarely on the shoulders of Congress," he said. "A vote for humanitarian aid to the democratic resistance will signal the United States' resolve on this issue, and courage and resolve are the only way to convince the Sandinista communists to come to the negotiating table.

"A vote against our proposal, however, could mean the beginning of the end to all hopes of peace and democracy in Central America."

Reagan reiterated that followers of Libyan President Muammar Khadafy and the Ayatollah Khomeini of Iran "are in Nicaragua, about two hours by air from United States borders."

"And just this week," he added, "we confirmed the presence of Russian military personnel in the battle zones of Northern Nicaragua."

"The Soviet terrorist bloc nations know what is at stake in Nicaragua," Reagan said. "That is why, in the seven months since Congress cut off aid to the democratic resistance, they have been pouring in weapons and personnel to their communist allies, hoping to knock out the democratic forces while they are most vulnerable."

Reagan said an alternative proposal by House Democrats "would only provide assistance to the democratic forces if they abandon their struggle to liberate the Nicaraguan people."

Birth of non-aligned movement to be honored in Indonesia

By KENNETH L. WHITING

BANDUNG, Indonesia (AP) — The seed that grew into what is commonly known as the non-aligned Third World movement was planted here 30 years ago this week.

The 29-nation Afro-Asian Conference and the "spirit of Bandung" it was said to have engendered in 1955 will be commemorated in a two-day ceremony in Bandung starting Wednesday.

The conference's Bandung Declaration called for the right of all nations to freely choose their governments, an end to colonial rule and no military alliances with the two superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union.

Another declaration is to be issued Wednesday, said Foreign Minister Mochtar Kusumaatmadja of Indonesia. Western diplomats expect it to urge a dialogue between the rich and poor nations of the world on economic matters and to appeal for curbs on the nuclear arms race.

The original meeting in this West Java capital was sponsored by India, Burma, Pakistan, Ceylon (now Sri Lanka) and Indonesia. It paved the way for the 26-nation conference in 1961 in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, where the formal non-aligned, or Third World, movement was launched.

The outcome of the Belgrade conference came to overshadow the narrower concerns expressed at Bandung as fervor drained from the anti-colonial campaign with the granting of independence to many territories in Africa and Asia.

Indonesian officials said the Bandung conference brought together for the first time a number of pan-Asian and pan-African spokesmen who had been opposing colonialism for decades.

WORLD in brief

Indian police raid Sikh shrine, arrest three men

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Police raided the Golden Temple in this sacred Sikh city before dawn Saturday in an attempt to arrest Sikh militants who officials fear are once again using the complex as a hideout.

Local officials said three men were arrested and police confiscated a shotgun, a hand grenade and a homemade pistol at the 17th century complex, considered the holiest shrine of the Sikh sect. Police sources said many of the militants the police sought escaped.

Sikh leaders claimed six people were taken away.

Police and Sikh leaders said the troops searched the residential areas of the complex, and did not enter the holy places. Authorities did not identify the arrested men or say what they were accused of.

"The soldiers broke locks, stole office records and harassed pilgrims. It was nothing but pre-dawn banditry," Sikh religious council leader Prem Singh Lalpura said.

SWAPO, OAU reject plan

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The SWAPO guerrilla group and the Organization of African Unity have both rejected as unacceptable South Africa's plan to set up an interim government in South-West Africa, also called Namibia.

The official Ethiopian news media on Saturday quoted Mesaja Nyamu, a Central Committee member of the South-West Africa People's Organization, as declaring that guerrilla warfare would keep up in the disputed territory.

SWAPO insurgents "are determined as ever to fight until South Africa cannot bear the cost in both the blood of its soldiers and in the economic burden to its taxpayers," Nyamu told an Addis Ababa news conference on Friday.

The 50-member OAU, headquartered in the Ethiopian capital, issued a statement Saturday saying South Africa "will be entirely responsible for the bloody war which will surely follow its total disregard of Namibian independence."

South Africa has controlled the mineral-rich territory since World War I. It announced Thursday it was establishing a transitional government there while continuing to support a 1978 U.N. plan for Namibian independence.

Student dies after drinking

TOKYO (AP) — A 19-year-old college freshman gulped down one drink of liquor after another, collapsed and died hours later at a Tokyo hospital, police said Saturday.

They identified the student as Shuji Miyamoto and said his death followed a party he attended at Meiji University in Tokyo on Friday evening where, they said, he did the drinking.

Police said acute alcohol poisoning, from drinking liquor faster than the body could handle it, may have caused his death.

Gulping down liquor amidst chants of "Ikki, Ikki," ("One gulp") is common at parties in Japan, where drunken commuters are frequently seen in downtown areas and on city trains.

Tornadoes kill 21 Chinese

PEKING (AP) — A tornado killed 21 people and injured 382 in central China's Hunan province, the official newspaper China Daily reported Saturday.

The twister in Shaoyang county last week damaged 2,700 buildings and ruined crops, the English-language daily said.

A hailstorm in Hunan's Suining county last week killed one person and destroyed 20 houses, the report said.

Refugees leave voluntarily

HONG KONG (AP) — Fifty-five Vietnamese refugees left Hong Kong voluntarily in their two boats rather than be detained here indefinitely in closed camps, a government spokesman said Saturday.

The spokesman, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said the first boat, with eight Vietnamese, sailed on Thursday, its destination unknown. The second boat, carrying 47 refugees, left Friday, reportedly bound for the Philippines.

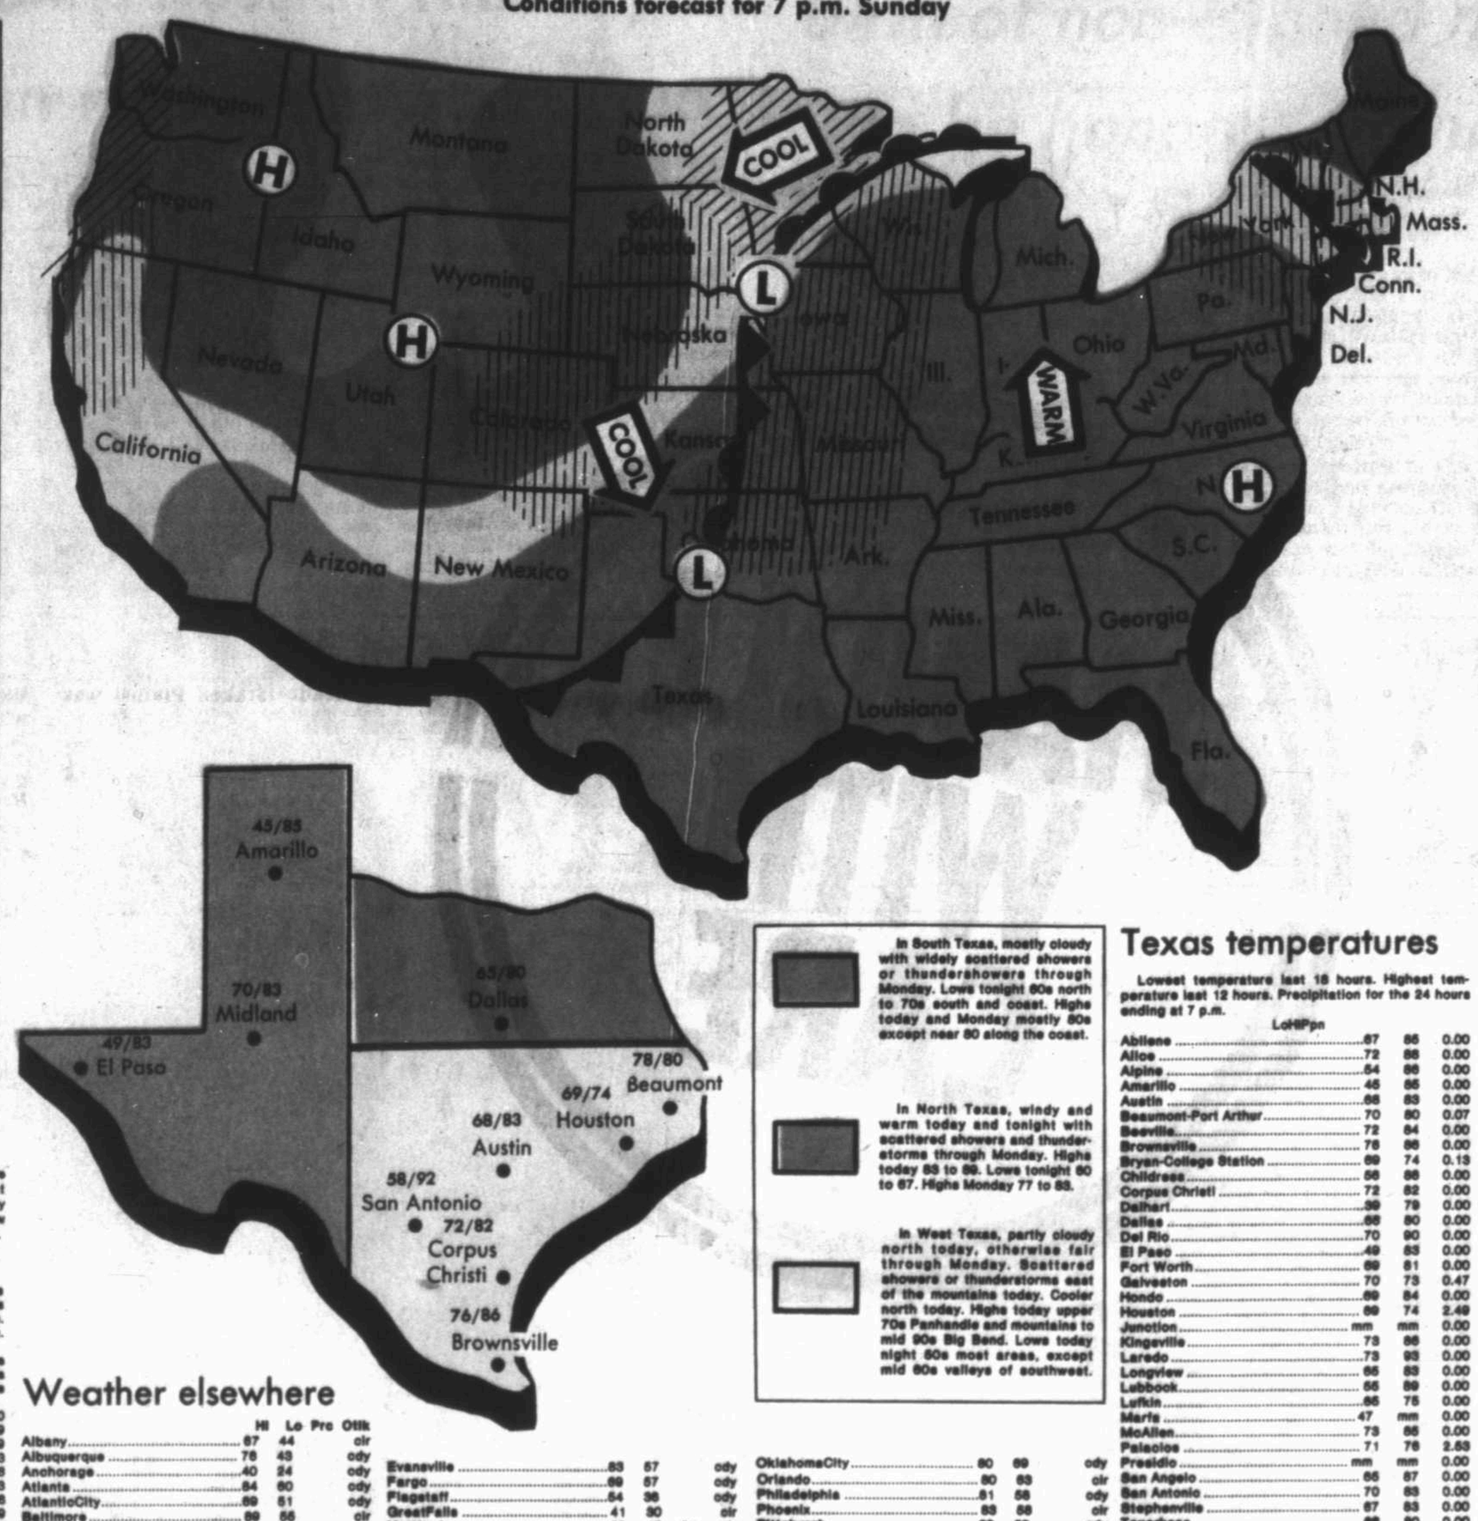
Conditions forecast for 7 p.m. Sunday



Today's weather will be cooler

From Staff and Wire Reports

After the mercury nearly equaled the record high for an April 20, Saturday's summer-like temperatures will cool down a few degrees today.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for partly cloudy skies today with the mercury to stop its rise in the upper 80s. Winds will blow out of the south and southwest at 15-25 mph and become gusty.

The mercury should cool down to the upper 50s tonight. Monday should dawn with partly cloudy skies and a high expected only in the low 80s, according to the weatherman.

Saturday's high of 92 fell slightly short of the record 93 set on that date in 1964. Saturday's overnight low was 58. The record low set on an April 21 is 35 degrees that was marked down in 1933.

No rain is in the forecast, leaving the year's precipitation standing at 2.25 inches.

STATE

At least two tornadoes, heavy rains, gusty winds and golf ball-sized hail pounded North and West Texas Saturday as much of the area went under tornado watches.

The National Weather Service said two tornadoes touched down east of Crane in Upton County shortly after 3 p.m., but a Department of Public Safety dispatcher in Midland said the funnels likely touched down in fields and caused no injuries or damage.

In Anson, a small town north of Abilene, high winds up to 80 mph howled through the area at about 6 p.m., according to Anson police officer Ralph Simpson.

The tornado watch was in effect throughout the night for more than a dozen counties in the Concho Valley and Lubbock areas of West Texas, and in the southern Panhandle and Wichita Falls areas of North Texas.

NATION

A sudden snowfall hit Colorado and Wyoming on Saturday as unseasonably warm weather broke high temperature records from the Great Lakes to the central Atlantic coast.

Heavy thunderstorms were scattered over southeast Texas, with more than 3½ inches of rain at Cuero, Texas.

Snow fell over northern Colorado and southeast Wyoming, and up to 8 inches was reported in high elevations. Travelers advisories were posted over the northern and central Colorado mountains.

Corporate craft now computerized

Midland's Memphis Aero has digital system

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The world's first corporate aircraft to convert totally to the computerized digital system from the conventional mechanical system is undergoing a four-month modification at Memphis Aero Corp. at Midland Regional Airport.

The $460,000-to-$470,000 conversion on a Dessault Falcon 20F twin-engine business jet includes the digital navigational system, radio gear, flight-control systems and instrumentation. It eliminates the electro-mechanical instrumentation.

"New technology is going to be the saving grace of the aircraft industry," said Jack Ballentine, vice president of operations for Memphis Aero-Midland.

His reference was to the cost reduction afforded by the new technology. Avionics constitute a substantial cost of aircraft.

"It's the space program that has brought all of this to us," said Don Everts, avionics manager for Memphis Aero.

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

The Falcon 20F corporate jet is undergoing conversion to a computerized digital system at Memphis Aero Corp. at Midland Regional Airport. In the foreground is Jack Ballentine, vice president of operations for Memphis Aero. Don Everts, avionics manager, is on the ramp.

"IT'S A WHOLE new world what we can do in avionics for the airplane," noted Everts. "We've come as far (in technology) in the last three years as we did in the 20 years previous to that."

Everts said some "advanced military aircraft" have the digital readout system, which for the military jets also affords a "heads-up display" — projecting the instrumentation on the cockpit windshield so the pilot doesn't have to glance at the instrument panel and take his sight off the target.

Everts said instrumentation on the 7-year-old Falcon 20F needed upgrading and increased capability.

The digital electronic flight instrument system (EFIS) by Collins General Aviation Division of Rockwell International promises to be more reliable than the electro-mechanical system and to have a failure rate five to six times less than the older system.

Midland started out as railroad car

By DIXIE MIMS

Dixie Mims is a native, fourth-generation Midlander who holds a bachelor of science degree from Hardin-Simmons University. She is a secretary and member of the Midland Writers Club.

New families to the Tall City may have trouble fathoming that at one time this area of the Llano Estacado (Staked Plains) was inhabited by the Tejas Indians. In the 16th century Spain and then England came into possession of Texas. As late as the latter 1800's there were antelope, prairie bears and buffalo here. But that all gave way to buggies, buckboards, hacks and wagons a little before the turn of the century.

At the time Midland (Midway as it was called then) was a railroad car which housed the post office, depot and trading house, and folks came from as far away as 100 miles to conduct their business, go to the doctor, shop, and put their children in school. They brought wool on oxen-drawn carts and drove their cattle here for shipment to other parts of the country by train. Some of the ranchers in those days were the Walcotts, the Dublins, Henry Halff, the Scharbauers, the Cowden brothers, Sanders Estes and O.B. Holt.

BETWEEN 1885 and 1900 farmers began to move into the area, and Midland residents started to build fences. During the earliest days of Midland, the family went to the boxcar depot to shop and take care of all their business. Eventually the housewife went to the grocery store and shopped in a different way than women do today. There was no fresh meat, only cured ham and bacon. She bought her meat fresh every day from the meat market, which would deliver all over town in a one-horse and two-car delivery cart. She had to buy flour in 48 pound bags, sugar in 100 pound sacks, and cheese from a big slab. If she wanted vinegar or molasses, it was kept in large wooden barrels with a hole into which a wooden spigot was inserted and the molasses or vinegar drawn into her jug. There were no cake mixes, paper towels, frozen foods or detergents, only occasionally bananas, apples, oranges and cabbage. Potatoes were a staple. She went up to a counter and told the clerk what she wanted, and he got it for her.

The chuck wagon came through to feed the cowboys two meals a day during cattle drives and roundups. When it came through, all the store's employees would drop what they were doing and fill the order and load the chuck wagon. They made 35 cents for an afternoon's work and $1 on Saturday.

FAMILIES USED kerosene lamps and wood stoves. Many a student in the Midland Public Schools studied by kerosene lamp. During the time of the wood stoves, one member of the family, usually one of the children, was assigned the job of cutting up the wood with a buck saw and ax and filling the wood boxes in the kitchen and every room that had a heater. He also had the chore of getting up early to start the fires.

My great-grandfather, J.H. Mims, was City Marshal in 1901 — the equivalent of chief of police. He helped raise funds to build the Old North Ward School. My great aunt, Mrs. Percy Mims, taught domestic science at Old North Ward.

WHEN SCHOOL was in session, the young people were brought into town to live with some rancher during the year. There were no parties on school nights, but on weekends they gathered in each others' homes to play the piano and sing. Often they would go to the old Llano Hotel and push the tables against the wall and have a dance. Students would also go to the Opera House west of the Llano, since movies were not yet popular, and watch the traveling stock companies present dramas and comedies.

Young people back then were just as full of pranks as the young people today are. On one occasion they deliberately aggravated the constable enough to make him chase them up a ladder and onto the roof of a building. When he got there, they quickly hurried down a ladder on the other side of the building, removing the first ladder and leaving him stranded on top of the building. On another occasion — one Halloween — they boosted a delivery wagon to the top of a pole.

MISD summer school to be expanded

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

In anticipation of a larger than average number of students enrolling in summer school courses, the Midland Independent School District will expand its course offerings for the 1985 summer session.

Secondary Education Director Maridell Fryar said, "We anticipate a larger enrollment than we've ever had because of the changes that resulted from House Bill 72."

House Bill 72 — a sweeping education reform package passed during a special legislative session in 1984 — specifies that students may not receive credit for a course if he/she fails to maintain a grade average of 70 on a scale of 100.

The bill also instituted statewide changes in curriculum standards as well as grading requirements in an effort "to get back to the basics."

According to Mrs. Fryar, the added requirements are expected to result in more student failures, thus a larger summer school enrollment.

To compensate, she said the district will expand its summer school program to include not only "basic skills courses" but also its elective classes.

Courses offered include English, mathematics, social studies and science. Also, electives such as speech, typing, vocabulary development, reading and physical education will be offered, Mrs. Fryar said.

Buzan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

Registration for grades 7-12 will be from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. May 31 at Lee High School. All secondary classes will be at LHS. First semester runs June 3-July 1. Classes for second semester will be July 2 to August 1.

Cost will be $70 per semester per course or $140 per full credit. Times will be from 8-11:50 a.m. and 1-4 p.m., depending on enrollment.

Elementary school students will register from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. at Bowie Elementary School. Classes will be offered from 8-9:50 a.m and 10-11:50 a.m. June 3 through July 12 at Bowie. Holidays will be observed July 4 and 5. Cost will be $65 for a two-hour class period including individualized instruction in reading, language arts and mathematics.

Special education program registration dates for students aged 6-21 have not officially been set, according to Frank J. Marlow, director of elementary education. "We are accepting registration at this point (at the home schools). But we're waiting to see if enrollment warrants hiring a teacher for the program," he said.

Marlow said special education is tentatively scheduled for 10-11:50 a.m. June 3-July 12 at Bowie. Cost is $65 for a two-hour class period.

In addition, MISD will offer multiple driver education classes in four summer sessions. Classroom instruction for Session I will be 5-7 p.m. or 7-9 p.m. May 27-June 21. Session II will meet 7-9 a.m., 9-11 a.m., 11 a.m.-1 p.m., 1-3 p.m. or 3-5 p.m. June 3-25. Session III will meet 7-9 a.m., 9-11 a.m., 11 a.m.-1 p.m., 1-3 p.m. or 3-5 p.m. June 27-July 18. Session IV will meet at 8-10 a.m. or 10 a.m.-noon July 29-Aug. 16.

Back in the early 1980s, before the bloom was off the oil boom, the City of Midland increased its area by almost 50 percent by annexing about 15 square miles of unincorporated land to the north and east.

Tremendous development was anticipated in these areas, and the city wanted to bring the land within reach of its zoning laws to ensure orderly growth. At the time of annexation, though, the lands were largely undeveloped.

Three years later, they're still undeveloped.

"It now looks like we've got a bunch of goat pastures out there," says City Councilman David Godfrey, whose District 2 includes the 6½ square miles of northwest Midland annexed in June 1980. Another nine square miles to the northeast and east were annexed in November 1982, and as with the first annexation, the City Council was acting at the request of developers who were platting and plotting to convert the empty pastures into an empire of subdivisions.

"It appeared prudent for the city to go ahead and annex those areas in order to have a little control," Godfrey says. But the boom went bust just about the same time, and many developers went bust with it. Since the city made its move, development has been "very small and scattered around," according to Godfrey.

"Many developers went bankrupt," says Max Richardson of West Texas Consultants, and the others "are holding back until the time is right."

"We're not getting the degree of development that we anticipated," concedes Planning Director Richard Hennessy. But Hennessy still thinks the city made the right move in annexing the land.

"If the city only annexed areas as they developed, you'd really have an unworkable situation. Development doesn't occur evenly around the perimeter of a community; it tends to kind of skip around," he says, and by having zoning laws in place before development trends are established, a city can encourage the kind of growth it wants.

"That is the way a city gets built," Hennessy says. "It is a planned process to stay somewhat ahead of actual development."

The original annexations were voted over the protests of some of the land's residents, who didn't think the services they would receive from the city would be worth it if their rural lifestyle was threatened by zoning ordinances.

But Godfrey says protests from the perimeter have been few since the land was annexed.

"There hasn't been any major organized effort. The main thing they were concerned about was being forced to give up their livestock," he says, but the city has left the land zoned for agricultural use.

Some residents of the annexed areas claim the city shortchanges them on such services as garbage collection and police protection.

"They're supposed to take care of the garbage but they don't do it," says Mary Beth Pliska, County Road 1160 North, and complaints to city officials "go in one ear and out the other."

But Hennessy denies that perimeter residents get less than their fair

Selling tough business; Rejection never easy to bear

When I answered the knock at my apartment door the other evening, the child who stood before me couldn't have been more than 12 years old.

He wore thick glasses, was beginning to show early signs of a potential acne problem and possessed a generous shock of wiry brown hair, something he will come to loathe as he grows older.

He was a budding salesman. And not a bad one at that. He pronounced his words clearly and looked me straight in the eye as he spoke, just like they teach you in those "How to Make a Fortune in Your Spare Time" courses.

He had learned his lesson well. He spoke quickly, not affording me the opportunity to say "no" until he had concluded his well-rehearsed spiel.

Which was fine, especially since I was not particularly busy at the time (as I recall, I was in the midst of an important commercial break from a "Leave it to Beaver" rerun.)

Nevertheless, the kid's sales pitch had one flaw. He was selling subscriptions. Magazine subscriptions.

He had all kinds for me to choose from. There were several about sports, others about high finance and even a few that catered to the up-and-coming businesswomen. Female yuppies, if you will. The kind of magazine that features a beautiful woman on the cover who also just happens to operate a multi-million dollar business on the side. The kind of woman you read about but never meet.

Unfortunately — at least for the young man who was trying his best to earn a few extra bucks at my expense — I am a very sporadic magazine buyer. I go in spurts. On any given day I might pick up six or seven from the drugstore rack and then go months before buying another. And, I never take subscriptions. That would be too sensible, too economic a way to spend my money.

As a result, my cordial, yet persistent, salesman was barking up the wrong tree. His chance of making a sale to me was about as good as Ronald Reagan and Tip O'Neill suddenly finding themselves in agreement on defense spending.

It wasn't going to happen. Still, I found myself not wanting to inform him of that fact. Selling is a tough business and rejection never comes easy, especially if you are young and just starting out. It can have a snowball effect, draining a person of initiative and self-esteem.

I admire people who can deal with that kind of pressure. They exude self-confidence. Salesmen — at least the good ones — know how to slap backs and tell jokes without being overbearing. It is a fine line and to be able to walk it successfully is indeed a gift.

It is also the precise reason I never became a salesman. Self-confidence and walking fine lines were never my strong suits. They don't fit my personality. In fact, the whole concept of buying and selling makes me a bit uncomfortable.

It shouldn't. The process is really quite simple. It goes something like this: I have a product worth X number of dollars. You want it and must determine if you can afford my price. If you can, you buy it. I then cover my expenses and anything left over is my profit. It is the American way.

But the point is, I don't like asking people to spend their money on something of mine.

If they want to come and make me an offer, that's one thing. But for me to initiate the process is quite another. People might get the wrong idea and think I'm being pushy, forcing something on them.

Silly?

Of course, it is. Our whole economic system is based on the selling of products. It is how I earn my salary, for that matter, although the actual exchanging of money is done by others.

More specifically, it is done by our advertising salesmen and local merchants, people who are experienced at that sort of thing. The merchant purchases space in the newspaper so readers will know what products he has available at a given time. The reader then checks out prices and decides if he wants to spend money in that particular store.

If all goes well, everyone is a winner. The businessman sells his merchandise, the newspaper makes a profit and John Q. Public gets a new toy.

But the fact remains that I'm not directly involved. I do my job and in return someone hands me a check twice a month. I like it that way. I get my money on a regular basis and I don't have to make a sales pitch. For someone who intimidates easily, it is the best of both worlds.

So, did I carry this line of thinking over to the young magazine salesman? Did I spare him the horrors of rejection that so often haunt me?

Of course not. I did what I normally do in a situation like that. I lied. I told him I was moving and, at this point in time, didn't know what my new address would be. But as soon as I found out I would give strong consideration to buying several subscriptions. I sincerely hoped it would be from him.

At least it wasn't an outright "no." I left the kid with some hope. He'll thank me for that some day.

DEATHS

Juan G. Flores

Flores

Juan Gabriel Flores, 20, died Thursday in an accident.

Rosary will be at 8 p.m. today in Thomas Funeral Home Chapel. Services will be at 10 a.m. Monday in Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church with the Rev. James R. Foelker officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Flores was born May 29, 1964, in Midland.

Survivors include his wife, Noemi; a daughter, Jennifer Flores; his mother, Ester Flores of Midland; five brothers, Mike Flores, Ray Flores, Gonzalo Almager Jr., Rubin Almager and Gabino Almager, all of Midland; and his grandmother, Manuela Sanchez of Amarillo.

Catarino H. Jurado

Services for Catarino H. Jurado, 16, of Midland are pending at Thomas Funeral Home.

Mrs. E. Ray McGee

Services are pending for Mrs. E. Ray McGee at Ellis Funeral Home. Mrs. McGee died early Saturday morning.

C.S. Hambright

Graveside services for C.S. Hambright, 76, of Midland were Monday in Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of Kentucky Street Baptist Church officiating. Thomas Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

He died April 14.

Hambright was born Nov. 9, 1908, in Birta, Ark., and had been a longtime resident of Midland. He had been an insurance agent since coming to Midland and was employed by American General Insurance Co. before his retirement. He was a Methodist.

Survivors include his wife, Alma; two sons, Richard Hambright of Waco and Jim Hambright of Amarillo; a brother; four sisters; five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Schorre asks for burglary trial dismissal

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

After hearing conflicting testimony from a surprise defense witness who was subpoenaed, District Attorney Al Schorre motioned for a dismissal in the trial Thursday of a Midland man charged with burglary of a motor vehicle and jailed since his arrest Jan. 9.

Kenneth Wayne Marion, 19, was charged with stealing stereo speakers from the car of Lester Young New Year's Eve night, according to the indictment. When arrested at his house a week later, Marion is alleged to have had a Percodan tablet in his possession, which brought felony drug possession charges against him.

However, when Young's former live-in girlfriend took the stand during the burglary trial after being subpoenaed by the defense, she testified she was with Young that night and that he told her he was going to make up the story implicating Marion.

"There isn't any point in going on with this deal," Schorre told 238th State District Judge Vann Culp.

"I certainly can't protest that," replied defense attorney Reagan Legg.

Young, a cook at the Cajun Seafood Specialties restaurant, testified he had worked New Year's Eve night at the restaurant and gone home alone for a quiet evening of reading.

His testimony indicated he heard a noise at 3 a.m. Jan. 1, and, thinking it was his sister, opened the door.

Young testified he saw Marion stealing the stereo out of his car.

But when Patricia Sullivan, 19, took the stand, she said Young and she had gone out to two night clubs New Year's Eve.

"Before we left Soul City, Lester's car had gotten broken into," she testified. "Someone had cut up the seats and put mud in it."

Ms. Sullivan then, under Legg's questions, said she and Young went home, where he told her he was going to call police and tell them Marion had burglarized his car.

"Why?" Legg asked.

"Because he didn't like the fact that I'd been seeing Kenneth Wayne some," Ms. Sullivan said.

Midland man dies in surgery after being shot five times

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A Midland man died shortly after 9 p.m. Saturday during surgery at Midland Memorial Hospital after he was shot five times in the chest and stomach at 7:45 p.m. outside a southside night club.

The death of Alvaro Rodriquez of 1110 Austin marks the second homicide in Midland in two days.

According to the 41-year-old bartender working the Club Moderno, 2409 E. Garden City Highway, Rodriquez, a friend of hers, was shot after he left the bar with three Hispanic males. His body was found lying next to his car, according to police.

Shots reportedly had been fired inside the club before the fatal shooting.

"They come out of the bar and I think they are going to fight and I followed him to warn him not to fight," said the bartender, who requested her name not be used. After the shots were fired in the eastside parking lot of the club, the men fled, she said.

"I asked him, 'Who shot you?' but he never did answer," said a 35-year-old customer. "I don't think he could and if he could, I don't think he would."

The customer said he reached the 35-year-old victim after "I heard all the commotion and everyone started running out" of the bar.

Alvaro was transported to MMH, where he underwent surgery. He was pronounced dead at the hospital by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry and his body was taken to Thomas Funeral Home, where services are pending.

Police were interviewing witnesses late Saturday night to obtain identifications of the suspects in the case.

share of city services, and points out that new fire stations have been built to serve the north and northwest parts of town.

"I think (the annexation) has worked out pretty well" for residents of the annexed areas, says Godfrey.

Things haven't worked out quite so well for the developers, but Richardson sees things turning around in about a year, after the current glut of housing lots has been absorbed.

"If things keep going the way they are, within a year we'll have a shortage of lots," he says, "so the time is fast approaching when it's going to be feasible" to develop the north and northeast areas. "The only thing that will keep it down is if oil prices continue to drop."

Richardson's firm is working on a project in the northwest which may break ground this summer. Called Montana Estates after the Montana tribe of Canada, which is putting up the money, the development might act as a catalyst for the area, making nearby projects more attractive to smaller developers, according to Richardson.

"It's the key one," he says.

And construction of Midland's new Air Park in south Martin County should stimulate growth in the northeast, according to Godfrey.

But it will be awhile before these areas are fully developed, and it will be even longer before any new annexations are needed in these directions. The next likely direction for expansion is to the west, says Hennessy — "I think we will continue to annex in that direction" — but that will depend to a large extent upon the plans of one family.

To the west, "you're looking totally at Scharbauer property," Richardson says.

cheaper down the road," he said. Compared with the simplified EFIS, the older electro-mechanical system has the appearance of a "Swiss sewing machine when you open it up," Everts said of the complicated mechanism. Labor on the mechanism is tedious and expensive, he said.

Still, EFIS is expensive — about 10 percent less than the conventional system but has 20 percent more capability. "It's not mass produced like the home computer," which has dropped in price due to its popularity, mass production, and the competitive nature of the market. The electro-mechanical Horizontal Situation Indicator (HSI), for example, costs about $15,500, while the digital HSI is priced at $14,200.

IN ADDITION, EFIS affords a weight saving, which is critical in aircraft, and tends to cut down on power consumption.

The 36 digital units "all talk to each other over a data-bus system," said Everts.

"A computer monitors the redundancy systems and alerts the pilots of a failure or discrepency between any two of the backup systems or between the main system and its backups," said Everts.

Display tubes include:

—Two Attitude Display Indicators (ADIs), which give gyroscope information, such as pitch, roll and yaw, and displays airspeed and all the computed flight data.

—Two Horizontal Situation Indicators (HSIs), which give compass information, horizonal navigation information, and displays navigation fixes — ways points.

—One Multi-function Display (MFD), a weather-radar indicator in four colors, red, yellow, green and magenta. "When it starts flashing red, you don't need to be there," Everts said of severe weather. The MFD reflects information from the other tubes and also displays preflight, take-off, descent, landing, emergency and other checklists, such as weight-and-balance and cruise.

"This (attitude-heading reference) will detect such things as wind shear, sudden updraft or downdraft which are hazardous to you on final approach," Everts said. The information is displayed on the ADI.

In a flight simulator, the digital autopilot has flown the aircraft through severe Tokyo wind shears without fail. However, more than 400 pilots in that same simulator without the digital autopilot in control repeatedly "crashed" in trying to fly through the wind shear.

The all-digital aircraft "can go from zero-to-zero (visibility) if the pilots and the airports are ready for it," Everts said.

THE FALCON 20F is owned by Dunavant Enterprises, an international cotton, coffee and silk brokerage company in Memphis, Tenn. "They buy a lot of cotton out of Lamesa," said Ballentine.

It is equipped with two General Electric CF700 turbine engines. The aircraft is a 1978 model valued at $2.5 million, compared to a new Falcon 20 that would cost between $5 million and $6 million.

Ballentine noted that Memphis Aero-Midland was the successful bidder on the conversion project and that Everts provided the inspiraton.

"His expertise and staying up with the trends in avionics is what got us into this thing," Ballentine said.

Everts, who has been into electronics since 1962 "after I left the farm" in Minnesota, holds a degree in electrical engineering from the University of Georgia and, on assignment with the U.S. Army, worked in research and development (R&D) and counter-intelligence with the U.S. Air Force. Later, he worked for a Beech aircraft distributor in Knoxville, Tenn., before he joined Memphis Aero.

The conversion project entails the replacing of miles of electrical wiring throughout the aircraft, Everts said.

"To meet the new (Federal Aviation Administration) requirements, it's a 100 percent new wiring job," he said.

Memphis Aero is a fixed-base operation (FBO) which specializes in aircraft fueling; aircraft hangaring and office rental; airframe and engine maintenance; repairs of crash-damaged aircraft; aircraft painting and interior refurbishing, and avionics work. The FBO overhauls reciprocating engines, does "hot section" work on turbine engines but farms out major overhaul work on jet engines.

Memphis Aero-Midland, which has 56 employees, is the largest FBO in terms of personnel and maintenance at Midland Regional Airport.

Behind the wheel instruction is divided into five sessions. Session A will be June 10-22. Session B will be June 24-July 6. Session C will be July 8-20. Session D will be July 22-Aug. 3 and Session E will be Aug. 5-17.

Behind the wheel instruction for sessions A, B, C and D will be from 7-8:30 a.m., 8:30-10 a.m., 10-11:30 a.m or 11:30-1 p.m. Behind the wheel instruction for Session E will be from 6:30-8 a.m., 8-9:30 a.m., 10:15-11:45 a.m. or noon-1:30 p.m.

Registration times and dates are from 8-9 a.m April 30-May 1 in the Lee Freshman High School activity room; from 8 a.m.-3 p.m. Thursday in the Lee High School cafeteria; from 11:40 a.m.-12:20 p.m. and from 12:45-1:25 p.m. April 29 and 30 in the Midland Freshman High School cafeteria; and from 8 a.m.-3 p.m. Wednesday in the Midland High School cafeteria.

Added registration will be from 2-5 p.m. May 13-29 at the Central Office.

To take drivers' education students must be at least 15 years old before their first day of classroom instruction. Cost for the course is $30 for classroom instruction and $60 for behind the wheel instruction which is due at the time of registration.

Stabbing suspect in county jail

From Staff Reports

A 17-year-old Midland youth, who officers say may have stabbed a 16-year-old Midlander in self-defense, was transferred to county jail Saturday, according to reports.

Edward Rodriguez Tucker, 600 S. Loraine, was arrested Friday morning in connection with the stabbing death of 16-year-old Catarino H. Jurado, no address available.

Jurado's body was discovered late Thursday night in a large pool of blood near an abandoned car in the 700 block of South Big Spring Street. He had been stabbed at least five times, reports said.

A knife believed to have been used in the incident was taken into evidence, as was a tire iron found near the body.

The death came after an apparent struggle, police said. The two families reportedly were involved in a feud.

Bond on Tucker was set Friday at $25,000 by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

A suspect in the aggravated sexual assault Thursday near a bus station of an out-of-town woman was transferred to county jail Saturday, according to reports.

James Robert Hatfield, 1403 S. Fisher, remained jailed on a bond of $65,000, set Friday for one count of aggravated sexual assault. He is alleged to have placed the Terrell woman in fear of serious bodily injury by choking her during the assault, which reportedly occurred in the back yard of a vacant residence near the Greyhound bus station, 1308 W. Front.

CHRONICLES

Jewell Driver had the first livery stable on Wall in the middle of where the Post Office is now. He and Brooks Lee, who played the fiddle, would entertain the pedestrians in front of the First National Bank on Saturdays, dancing and fiddling. Other buildings at that time were the Midland National Bank, Midland Grocery & Dry Goods, W.J. Moran Insurance, Dr. Edwin Calloway's office, Everybody's, Taylor Drug Store, The Midland Examiner, The Midland Reporter, Klapproth's Harness and Saddlery, a blacksmith shop, a bakery, a variety store, the courthouse and the jail. The courthouse was of the same sandstone quarried near Barstow which had furnished blocks for other courthouses in Texas.

At a Sept. 9, 1886, County Commissioners' meeting, the Commissioners voted to pay the judge $20 a year and the clerk $300.

ALMOST EVERY family had a windmill then. In fact, Midland was known as the Windmill City. T.D. Jones, who built windmills, was on a bus in 1918. He and a fellow passenger were talking, and Jones mentioned that he was from Midland. His fellow passenger said, "You're from the Windmill City." There were so many windmills in Midland during the World War I era that Midland was known throughout Texas by that name.

Shortly after Midland County was organized, Dr. W.E. Bailey took out a license to practice medicine — the first real doctor to set up practice in Midland. Dr. Edwin Calloway in 1902 wes called to see Mrs. B.A. Oden at Bar 2 Ranch. She had to be transported to Midland, so her husband had the ranch hands to cut mesquite brush and fill a wagon bed. Bed springs and a mattress were laid on top of that, then the patient. The patient was then transported to Midland. There were no nurses in those days, so Dr. Calloway used Bob Beverly, the sheriff, to administer chloroform. Before cars, doctors used horses and buggies. For long trips they hired teams from livery stables. Sometimes they even used freight trains. They made house calls.

When electricity was introduced to Midland in 1906, it was a luxury that could be afforded only by the very wealthy. The housewife could do her ironing and other tasks that required electricity only during certain times of the day, and all lights had to be out by 10 p.m.

THERE WEREN'T many cars, and therefore no paved streets or highways. The four blocks of Main Street were made of caliche, and every day the water wagon would sprinkle down the street.

Although the harsh winds, sandstorms and sudden rains caused problems then as they do today, Midland flourished and grew. New families arrived adding their courage and strength to those of the earliest settlers, helping to bring Midland into the phase of the Tall City that it is today.

Centennial Chronicles will appear on this page each Sunday through July 7 in observance of Midland's Centennial. The columns were contributed by local writers in cooperation with the Midland Centennial Commission.

Charles Vertrees

In the 1920's, when the Permian Basin was a two oil well territory and ranching kept bread on the table, geologists Charles and Eloise Vertrees left their post in Panuco, Mexico and moved to San Angelo, Texas.

"I would be the field geologist; my wife would do the paleontology," says Mr. Vertrees, charter member of the West Texas Geological Society.

In the early years, "you went from one pasture to another... There were no county roads," he recounts. "The only main road out West went to Monahans." It was narrow, unpaved, and sandy- a treacherous trap for field geologists. As Mr. Vertrees crisscrossed the Permian Basin watching wells in 56 West Texas counties and 16 New Mexico counties, that sandy road meant many delays. Finally, he says, Governor "Pa" Ferguson had a coat of crude oil put on the road. That was the first road improvement in the area.

Still there was no place to stay near most of the fields so Mr. Vertrees traveled with a cot and cooking equipment in his truck, working at well sites and driving until he was completely exhausted. Then he'd set up his cot out under the stars. "I'd be so doggone tired I didn't even star gaze much," says Mr. Vertrees.

Change came slowly. Roads were gradually improved, better recovery methods developed, more fields discovered, and new communities formed. Along the way, Mr. Vertrees left Conoco after 32 years as Regional Research Geologist and started a geological consulting office in Midland.

Today, there are few people like Mr. Vertrees who can give a first hand account of the Permian Basin's early development. That's why this former president of the West Texas Geological Society recorded the events that made the Permian Basin a "thriving oil empire" in History of the West Texas Geological Society 1926 to 1969.

This geologist is proud of the Permian Basin's history and is optimistic about its future. He says, "It's wonderful country to live in and has great possiblity in the future because of mineral development and other facilities it takes to make a good country."

Optimistic dreams, strong commitment, and action are why Charles Vertrees makes a difference in Midland.

Men's softball team begins third season

By H.A. TUCK

The Midland College men's slow-pitch softball team began playing its third season last week, complete with new uniforms that sport the Chaparral logo.

Don't know how much the uniforms might help the team's record, but at least the players will look very dapper.

Coach Will Morris thinks he's added some good players this year, so the team is expected to show some improvement, as it has in the past. In fact, we expect them to be at least up to the .500 mark this year.

MC President Dr. Jess Parrish is being honored as a Distinguished Alumnus of the Texas Tech College of Education. He'll be guest of honor at a dinner at Texas Tech Thursday evening. Parrish received all three of his degrees from Texas Tech.

The golf and tennis teams are headed for their respective Region V tournaments this weekend.

Golf Coach Delnor Poss is taking his players to the regional event at Weatherford Thursday and Friday. They are seeking a spot in the NJCAA tournament next month. McLennan County Community College from Waco is the favorite to win the regional tourney, but the Chaps or any one of several other teams from the Western Conference could pull an upset. Top two finishers in the regional tournament advance to the nationals.

Regional tournaments for the tennis teams are being held in Waco Thursday through Saturday and the Chaparrals will be strong favorites. Coach Joe Williams has a tough pair of teams this year, with players who marched through conference play with ease. The men's team probably is a bit stronger than the women's group, since No. 2 singles and No. 1 doubles player Kim Gidley went out with a knee injury.

Winners and runners-up in both men's and women's tournaments advance to the NJCAA tournaments next month in Ocala, Fla.

A seminar on "Business Survival in Difficult Times" is scheduled at MC Thursday, May 9. Deadline for registering is Friday, April 26. Fee is $15 per person, including lunch. Those interested should contact the Midland College Community Services Department to enroll.

Co-sponsored by MC, Odessa College, University of Texas at the Permian Basin,and the Small Business Council of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, the seminar is designed to provide information for creditors, debtors, and operators of small businesses who find themselves in financial difficulties.

There's a great group of speakers, including attorneys, accountants, financial planners, folks from the Small Business Administration and others. Heading one panel will be the Honorable Joseph Elliott, Judge of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Western District of Texas. A representative from the FDIC in Midland also will be present.

EDUCATION

Board favors youth work program

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — City directors will be hired in Dallas, San Antonio, Austin and El Paso to set up and administer summer youth employment programs under a grant tentatively approved by the State Board of Education.

If approved, salaries for the directors would be funded out of a $40,000 grant from the Texas Education Agency to Communities and Schools. Local education agencies in each of the cities would oversee the programs.

The board withheld final approval of the grant until it gets a detailed budget on how the money will be used.

Communities in Schools assists in-school elementary, junior high and senior high students who are likely to drop out of school or become involved in criminal activity.

In the summer youth program, participants will receive counseling, remedial instruction and health care, and participate in enrichment activities in addition to receiving placement in summer jobs. Parental involvement will be encouraged.

Additional funding for the program will be provided by the criminal justice system, community-development organizations, youth organizations and local school districts.

Communities in Schools has operated in Houston for the past four years, and its effectiveness is now being tested in Austin, San Antonio, Dallas and El Paso.

United Way volunteers recognized

From Staff Writer

Volunteers who contribute their time and efforts to the various United Way agencies are being honored this week during Volunteer Recognition Week.

Special recognition efforts include a printed brochure with photographs and biographical sketches of Volunteers of the Year and a photo display of volunteers in action, entitled "A Day in the Life of People Who Care."

These photos will be on display at the United Way office during Volunteer Week and at various other locations throughout the summer.

The Main Bank. Wall at Andrews Highway.

Texas American Bank is committed to Midland's economic vitality. That's why we've opened a second banking facility right in the heart of downtown at Texas and Colorado.

It's our new old-time "Banking Parlor." With furnishings and fixtures that hark back to the turn of the century.

It's where you'll find a special kind of service we call "Parlor Banking." Service that combines today's most modern banking skills and resources with the warm hospitality and personal service of an earlier era.

For many of you, Texas American's most convenient location will still be our main bank at Wall and Andrews Highway. There, and at more than 30 locations across Texas, the Texas American name stands for "home town" banking backed by combined assets of more than $6 billion.

But be sure you pay us a visit downtown. You'll enjoy complimentary refreshments in our special coffee room. You can take advantage of our old-time shoeshine stand. And you'll see what it's like to do business in West Texas' most beautiful banking facility.

Texas American.
You deserve a special kind of banker.

Introducing Texas American's new downtown "Banking Parlor:"
The special kind of banking you deserve comes downtown.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

MHS Industrial Arts Club will display work at regional contest

The Midland High School Industrial Arts Club will display its work during the annual West Texas Industrial Arts Contest to be held on Saturday, in the Midland High School gymnasium.

The purpose of the regional competition is to qualify students for the state contest in Waco May 4. Industrial Arts students from schools in the West Texas area will display their work from noon-3:30 p.m. Entered will be such projects as grandfather clocks, guncases, china cabinets, two- and four-wheel trailers, ceramics, jewelry, wrought iron furniture and scale models of homes.

Food service group holds banquet

The Midland School Food Service Association sponsored its annual Appreciation Banquet Tuesday, in the Santa Rita Elementary cafeteria.

Guests viewed a musical "Broadway Medley" presented by the Midland High School Choir under the direction of Don McCartney. MISD Superintendent, Dr. Joseph Baressi, presented information on the Midland schools' past and projections for the future.

Head of VOE committee chosen

The Vocational Office Education Advisory Committee for Midland and Lee High schools met April 11th at Cattleman's Restaurant with Dee Wilson, personnel manager, HCW Exploration Inc., as hostess.

Steve Holt, vice president of Midland American Bank, will serve as committee chairman for the 1985-86 school year, and Joyce Givhan, word processing lab teacher at MHS, will serve as secretary.

The VOE Employer Appreciation banquet is scheduled for May 7th, at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Baylor faculty members to speak

A "Baylor in West Texas" day has been set for April 28 in Midland and Odessa. Baylor University religion faculty members and administrators will speak in three Midland Baptist churches and in four Odessa Baptist churches.

In Midland, Dr. Glenn Hilburn, chairman of the religion department, will speak at First Baptist Church; Dr. James Landes, professor of religion at Baylor and former executive director of the Baptist General Convention of Texas, will speak at Crestview Baptist Church; and Dr. Gary Cook, director of denominational relations, will speak at Fannin Terrace Baptist Church.

In Odessa, Robert Feather, vice president for external affairs, will speak at First Baptist Church; Dr. W.J. Wimpee, university chaplain, will speak at Crescent Park Baptist Church; Dr. Russell Lester, associate professor of religion, will speak at Chapel Hill Baptist Church; and Jim Johnson, advisor for church-related vocations in Baylor's office of Denominational Relations, will speak at University Park Baptist Church.

VIPS awards to be presented

The West Elementary Parent-Teacher Association will meet at 7:00 p.m. Thursday in the school cafeteria. Volunteer in Public School awards will be presented to parents during a brief business meeting. Students from all grade levels also will present "Fitness Fun" under the direction of physical education instructor Cynthia Hunt.

Internship program offered

AUSTIN — Minorities interested in educational research and development careers may take advantage of a research internship program offered at The University of Texas at Austin.

The Research and Development Center for Teacher Education offers the program to ethnic minorities who have attained a bachelor's degree. Application deadline for fall 1985 is July 1.

The internships entail approximately 15 hours per week depending upon the academic or work schedule of the person. A stipend of $400 per month will be provided.

Appointments are made for one semester with priority consideration for a second semester. Participants are selected on a competitive basis and will be offered training through one or more major research programs at the center.

For additionl information concerning the grant program, including application form and intructions for applying, write Janet M. McCord, assistant to the director, R&D Center for Teacher Education, Education Annex 3.203, The University of Texas at Austin, Austin, Texas 78712, or call (512) 471-1343.

MAKING THE GRADE

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. — The Columbia Scholastic Press Association announced that the Quachita Baptist University 1984 "Quachitonian" received the 1984 Gold Crown Award. The announcement was made during the association's seventh annual College Convention.

Among the staff's members is associate editor Beth Morehart, a sophomore from Midland.

BEAUMONT — Laurie House, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John House of Midland, is the recipient of the 1985 Bess Gentry Award given annually to an outstanding senior woman at Lamar University.

Miss House, a finance major, will graduate in May.

House

GREENWOOD — Camey L. Turner has been named to the honor roll at Greenwood Elementary School for the fifth sixth weeks grading period.

Board OKs application of block grant

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Texas school children will benefit from $33 million in federal grant money under a application approved by the State Board of Education.

The Education Consolidation and Improvement Act of 1981 allows block grants for public and private, non-profit elementary and secondary schools.

At least 80 percent of the funds are allocated to local school districts on a formula basis, while the remaining 20 percent may be retained at the state level for special projects and educational improvement activities, technical assistance and administration.

A special committee appointed by the governor worked with the board and Texas Education Agency staff in devising the 80 percent funding formula, which awards funding to local school districts on the basis of general enrollment and the enrollment of "high cost students" in the free lunch, limited English proficiency and handicapped programs.

The application approved by the board on April 13 would provide approximately $26.4 million in general grants to local school districts based on the formula funding.

The remaining $6.6 million would be set aside for statewide basic skills improvement, higher education teacher centers, desegregation and various enrichment projects including a study of junior high and high school dropouts and a feasibility study of establishing a statewide high school for gifted students.

Rule would excuse students held at child care facilities

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — The State Board of Education gave first-round approval to a policy that would allow children who are removed from parental custody because of delinquency, abuse or neglect to receive excused absences for missed classes.

The Board in January began a study of the educational needs of children awaiting adjudication in detention or other child shelter facilities and found a large number of children had no access to meaningful educational services during their detention.

Because of a rule that denies course or grade credit to students who have more than five unexcused absences, those detained students were unable to receive credit for a semester if a school district chose to treat time spent in a detention or welfare facility as unexcused.

A rule adopted by the Board April 13 on first reading would allow students to receive excused absences for any missed classes if a probation officer verifies to the school district in writing that the student missed the classes because of his detention as a delinquent.

Likewise, excused absences would be allowed for abused or neglected students referred to the Department of Human Resources or a county or local welfare unit if a case worker verifies to the school district in writing that the student missed classes because of his detention in a welfare unit.

In both cases, the student must successfully complete all missed assignments to receive course or grade credit.

service from the Heart©
Quality health care goes beyond the correct dosage of medication given at the proper time. Health care is compassion, understanding and love, administered in generous proportions. Health care is service that comes from the heart.
We are a locally-owned health care provider that has been caring for Midland and Odessa under another name since October, 1973. Our experience and emphasis for the "care" in health care, are traditions of our philosophy and people who live here. We are still the same — nothing has changed but our name.
Our nurses, therapists and health care professionals provide the quality home and private duty care your physicians demand — but, we don't stop there. To us, "Service from the Heart" is more than a slogan; it's a way of life!
If someone you love needs home or private duty care, remember Healthcare Services of Midland/Odessa, Inc.

A leap backward

Representatives of the independent oil industry are up in arms about the proposed U.S. Treasury tax plan which, if passed as it is written, would have a "devastating effect" on the economy of the Permian Basin.

The proposal calls for elimination of intangible drilling costs and percentage depletion, which some oilmen characterize as mainstays of the energy industry. They are precisely that because, regardless what some Northeastern liberal congressmen and senators believe, drilling an oil well or a number of wells isn't as risk-free a business undertaking as countless others. In drilling a well, an oil man is walking out on a long, shaky limb which holds a promising "apple" at the end, but also is rife with pitfalls — such as dry holes, blow-outs and many others.

To characterize the independent oil industry as wholeheartedly opposed to the proposal actually is a little mild. Jon Rex Jones, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA) says of the proposal, "If the plan had been in effect last year it would have put 4,000 independent producers out of business and resulted in the drilling of 30,000 fewer oil and gas wells."

Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association headquartered in Midland, and former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock, who represented this district, have echoed similar sentiments. They agree the adverse impact resulting from passage of the current tax plan would be both significantly deep and damaging.

In Washington, D.C., Congressman Tom Loeffler is fighting to convince other congressmen that this plan would be extremely detrimental to the oil industry, according to his legal assistant, Nancy Dorn. Ms. Dorn said Loeffler believes that tax reform is needed but that no such reform should be enacted without first carefully weighing how it would affect key industries and the economy overall.

We couldn't agree more. Tax reform is needed. But to do so at the expense of the independent oil industry — the industry that helped pull this nation above the ravages of the oil embargoes and has been desperately striving to make it energy independent — would be to wipe out all the progress of the last several years and to place the nation once again at the mercy of foreign governments.

That isn't so much oil industry public relations either. As IPAA president Jones stressed when speaking at the Midland Petroleum Club earlier this week: "We are moving toward the peril point of 30 percent and could be back to 46 percent dependent on foreign crude. By 1990 we could be in a crisis state in terms of petroleum supplies again."

The oil industry has come too far and worked much too hard over the past several years to help give this nation independence from foreign oil to merely wipe it out with the stroke of a congressional vote. That would be the height of absurdity.

A vote in favor of any plan that will adversely impact the independent oil industry and push America toward additional reliance on imported oil is a vote for foreign control of American lives.

How long will it take for some congressmen and senators to realize that?

Poisons in the air

Protection against toxic air pollution in the United States is not much stronger than in Bhopal, India, where more than 2,000 people were killed last December by a sudden release of lethal methyl isocyanate. Few rules exist to control emissions of that and other hazardous chemicals, and thousands of tons of such poisons are released into the atmosphere every year. Those findings, contained in a recent congressional study, point to the need for quick federal action to control toxic pollutants.

Last month's survey, prompted by worry that a repeat of the Bhopal disaster might occur in this country, showed that America's air is more polluted than commonly thought. The study discovered that large chemical companies regularly spew tons of chloroform benzene, chlorine, carbon tetrachloride and other carcinogens into the atmosphere; hundreds of smaller factories release similarly dangerous substances. The survey found the worst pollution in states such as Kentucky, West Virginia, Louisiana and Texas, which have many petrochemical plants and refineries — and which also have higher-than-normal cancer rates.

Scientists have long warned that exposure to toxic air pollutants can cause cancer and other severe illnesses, but the Environmental Protection Agency seems reluctant to listen. Although the Clean Air Act directs the EPA to regulate toxic pollutants, in 14 years the agency has set standards for only asbestos, benzene, beryllium, mercury and vinyl chloride. A handful of other pollutants are regulated by states and local governments, but permitted emission levels vary widely. Dozens more known carcinogens are entirely unregulated. Instead of moving quickly to plug the loophole, the EPA seems to be doing the opposite: In addition to stalling in setting standards for currently uncontrolled substances, the agency now contemplates relaxing its rules for vinyl chloride, one of the few toxic pollutants it does regulate.

Congress can end the EPA's bureaucratic backpedaling when it reauthorizes the Clean Air Act later this year. Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House health and environment subcommittee, and Minnesota's Sen. Dave Durenberger both plan to introduce amendments to the law that would force the EPA to act within a few years to regulate toxic pollutants. Their plan recognizes that every year the EPA delays in controlling toxic pollutants means thousands of endangered lives. Breaking the bureaucratic logjam on toxic pollutants would be a major stride toward the Clean Air Act's basic goal: For all citizens, air safe to breathe.

Souped-up Backfire worrisome

WASHINGTON — The Soviets play a grim little game that periodically drives the U.S. Strategic Air Command to distraction — and causes the deployment of its defensive forces to meet the challenge.

Jack Anderson

The knight in this strategic chess game is the Soviets' TU-22M bomber, the one Americans call "the Backfire." The Soviets simply move a few of these nuclear missile-carrying bombers to their Arctic bases at Olengorsk and Severomorsk, putting them within striking distance of the United States. This requires an immediate countermove by the Strategic Air Command.

According to a secret National Security Council report, the Soviets pulled this vexing stunt twice in 1983 and once last year. With customary bureaucratic understatement, the NSC report says that such "temporary deployment ... is cause for concern and continued careful monitoring."

Why all the concern? The Soviets maintain that the Backfire is a medium-range bomber — but U.S. experts think it has been souped up and is now a long-range, strategic aircraft. As a top-secret report by the Joint Chiefs of Staff put it, "Detailed technical analysis indicates that the aircraft has intercontinental strike capabilities."

There are some sound reasons for this suspicion. Chief among them: The Pentagon has photographs of Backfire C, the latest model of the plane, which "clearly (show) refueling probes" attached. As the Joint Chiefs explain, "in-flight refueling, an option for which all Backfires are believed capable, wound enhance intercontinental operations." The only reason for having refueling gear would be to increase the planes' range to intercontinental levels.

Without refueling capability, the Backfire's range is more than 2,500 nautical miles — enough to reach targets in the lower 48 states and continue on to land in Cuba or Nicaragua. With refueling, the Backfires could fly twice as far, returning to their home bases.

In addition to the refueling probes and the forward bases in the Arctic, the Backfires are believed to have acquired "new or improved engines" — another cause for worry.

And if all that's not enough to keep the SAC awake nights, U.S. intelligence has discovered that long-range, air-launched nuclear cruise missiles have been tested from Backfire bombers.

The Soviets obviously attach as much importance to their Backfire bombers as U.S. monitors do: The Russians have been cheating on their 1979 promise to President Carter on the number of planes they would build each year.

Carter had gone to the Geneva SALT II arms-control talks that year smarting from an attack by the late Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash. Accusing Carter of appeasing the Soviets, Jackson went so far as to compare the president to Neville Chamberlain, the umbrella-toting British prime minister whose concessions to Hitler on the eve of World War II made him an enduring symbol of craven diplomacy.

The issue was so touchy for Carter, in fact, that when he arrived in Geneva in a light drizzle, he spurned an aide's offer of a brolly, muttering, "I'd rather drown than carry an umbrella."

Carter was determined to shake his critics' image of him as a latter-day Chamberlain, and the Backfire bomber gave him the opportunity to stand firm against the Soviets. The treaty as presented for signing contained no mention of the Backfire, but the Soviets had promised to provide a statement agreeing to limit production of the plane.

Seeing no such statement on the table, Carter coldly refused to sign the treaty until the Backfire agreement was forthcoming. There was a tense confrontation between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Finally, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev broke the stalemate, saying with an air of sweet reasonableness: "Thirty. It's 30 a year. There! Another Soviet concession."

In its secret report on alleged Soviet violations of arms-control agreements, the NSC recounted:

"President Carter stated that the United States enters into SALT II agreement on the basis of the commitments contained in the Soviet statement (on Backfire production) and that it considers the carrying out of these commitments to be essential to the obligations under the treaty."

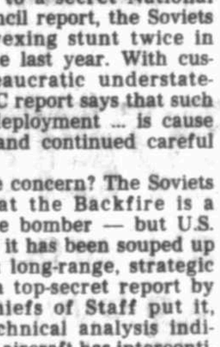
GEORGE F. WILL

Contra support vote crucial

WASHINGTON — This is the most important congressional moment since May, 1947, when Congress supported U.S. intervention-through-aid on the anti-communist side in the Greek civil war. Congress thereby transformed containment from a theory into a policy. If Congress now kills aid for the anti-communist side in Nicaragua's civil war, if Congress forbids even modest financial support for a mass movement prepared to do the dying to prevent consolidation of the second Soviet satellite in this hemisphere and the first on the North American continent, the evisceration of containment will be complete.



George F. Will

In 1947 President Truman told Congress: "I believe it must be the policy of the United States to support free people who are resisting subjugation by armed minorities or by outside pressure." Reagan's policy is the Truman Doctrine after 38 years of communist advance. An armed Nicaraguan minority, sustained by outside (Soviet, Cuban, East German, etc.) forces, is sovietizing Nicaragua in the way that was being done in Eastern Europe in 1947.

The Soviet Union's Sandinista clients have no more right to rule Nicaragua than Vidkun Quisling had to rule Norway. Yet the world continues to speak of Sandinista steps toward Stalinism as "failings." The Sandinistas are not somehow failing to implement democracy; those "failings" are premeditated successes.

FDR spoke of "quarantining" dictators, but an isolationist Congress resisted, until the big war arrived. If today's Congress spurns the contras, communist dictators on four continents will know that Congress will not permit even small inoculations, let alone quarantine.

The sum at issue — $14 million — is 12 percent of the sum ($117 million) the U.S. government had given to the Sandinista regime by 1981. Familiar voices are saying the usual things: that the United States "drove" the Sandinistas into Soviet clutches. But in their first two years, the Sandinistas received more aid from the United States than from any other country — five times more than the Somoza regime received in its last two years. (Someone should calculate the value in 1985 dollars of the aid France gave the American Revolution. It was, I will wager, much more than $14 million.)

During the Vietnam War, people eager to believe were encouraged by Hanoi to believe that South Vietnam was experiencing a "indigenous peasant revolt" and that the ferment in Indochina was only cosmetically communist. The Sandinistas deny their American protectors the comfort of that pretense. The Sandinistas do not deign to disguise their Stalinism at home, their "socialist solidarity" with the Soviet Union and its other clients, their "revolution without borders" against neighbors.

In 1947 Congress had fresh memories of the terrible price paid because of nonresistance to Hitler at the time of the re-militarization of the Rhineland. Today the historical memory of many members of Congress consists entirely of Vietnam and its putative lessons. But congressional management of U.S. policy toward Central America — too little aid, too late; pursuit of the chimera of negotiated settlement with a regime that does not believe in splitting differences — is a recipe for another Vietnam: another protracted failure.

Surely the Americans who should talk least about negotiated liberalization of the Sandinista regime are those Americans who, by trying to destroy the contras, are removing the only serious pressure on the Sandinistas.

Nicaragua's communist president, writing in the New York Times, says U.S. support for the contras is "contrary to American values." That is an odd complaint from someone who proclaims his detestation of American values, and it is an ignorant charge, given the long history of U.S. support for resistance to tyranny.

Today there are anti-communist insurgencies in Afghanistan, Angola and Cambodia. Americans opposed to the contras favor, in effect, a declaration of indifference to the only force that might enable Nicaragua to join Portugal, Spain, Turkey, Argentina and Honduras on the list of nations that have risen from tyranny to democracy.

Mikhail Gorbachev hit the ground running — right at Pakistan, threatening reprisals if Pakistan continues to facilitate aid for the Afghan resistance. If Congress spurns the contras, how long will Pakistan resist Soviet pressure? If Congress will not countenance support for the contras, the increasingly tinny voice of the United States will have decreased resonance in South Africa, the Philippines and other places where freedom is at issue.

It is said that an optimist is someone who believes his future in uncertain. Optimism about democracy, and not just democracy in Central America, will be irrational if, six months after a landslide reaffirmation of a President, Congress, acting in the name of fastidiousness, removes the keystone of his foreign policy: support for democratic revolutions.

ART BUCHWALD

'Caving-in' to trade differences

The last Japanese soldier from World War II was holed up in a cave on Okinawa. A team of Americans and Japanese with loudspeakers were trying to persuade him to come out.

Art Buchwald

"Corporal Nakajinko, it's all right to surrender. The war is over."

"How do I know if you are lying to me?" said a plaintive voice from the cave.

"I can assure you, Nakajinko," a Japanese official yelled over the speaker. "All hostilities have ceased."

There was about three minutes of silence and then the voice said, "Who won?"

The official yelled back, "The Americans. The Japanese laid down their arms 40 years ago."

"This could be a trick. Prove to me that the United States won."

"The Americans now have a trade deficit with Japan of $37 billion," the officer shouted.

"How can the Americans have a $37 billion trade deficit if Japan lost?"

"Because the Japanese rethought their strategy in 1945 and it made more sense to invade the United States with automobiles than with soldiers. The Americans are buying everything Japan produces, but the Japanese are not buying much of what the U.S. makes. It's all here in Fortune magazine if you want to read about it."

"Leave it at the mouth of the cave," the voice said.

A half hour later the rescue team was getting impatient.

"Nakajinko, are you now persuaded that Japan lost the war?"

"I am puzzled," the voice from the cave said. "If we lost, how can we export 25 percent more cars to the U.S. than we did last year?"

"Because we had a voluntary quota, and once it was lifted we decided this was the best time to flood the U.S. market."

The voice from the cave said, "Didn't Premier Nakasone realize this would anger the Americans?"

"He's trying to make up for it now, by asking all the Japanese to buy American goods."

Nakajinko yelled, "I'm not coming out if I have to buy American goods. I still remember Pearl Harbor."

"As a Japanese veteran you will be exempt from buying American goods. We want you to come out of the cave so we can declare World War II officially over."

"American goods aren't made as well as Japanese products," he yelled. "Every time I stole something from the U.S. Army Quartermaster depot, I had to take it back."

"Nakajinko. This is no time to discuss the merits of U.S. and Japanese manufactured goods. We have a trade mission in Washington trying to iron out things right now."

"Does that mean there is going to be another war?"

"Of course there isn't going to be another war. Countries don't go to war over trade differences."

"That's what the Japanese cabinet said on December 6th, 1941," Nakajinko cried.

The American liaison officer shouted through his bullhorn, "Look, if you don't come out in the next 30 minutes we're going to have to shoot you."

"Why? Because my country won't order any telecommunications equipment from you?"

"It has nothing to do with telecommunications equipment," the American yelled. "It has to do with your people's refusal to buy Alka Seltzer."

"I think I'll stay here until the Americans and Japanese resolve their differences."

"Why, Nakajinko? Why?"

"Because if they don't, I'll just have to find myself another cave."

BILL MODISETT

Governments often forget their original purpose

Bill Modisett

Governments are formed for a purpose.

This column will be mostly fiction. If one takes the time to research the supposed facts, he'll find that I am wrong on this incidental or that. That's because this column doesn't contain facts; it is a generalization of how Midland began — how most communities begin, in fact — and how government can and usually does over-reach its intended purpose.

About 100 years ago, the settlers of this area — people who came here when there was nothing but a dream — got together and discussed some of their mutual problems. There were certain tasks they could not perform on their own. There was, for example, a problem with crime, but they had no way to deal with it for the protection of decent, law-abiding citizens.

So a move was begun to establish official county government. A judge was elected as was a sheriff and they were each given certain powers to use in bringing the crime problem under control.

As most communities do, Midland grew and, as it did, the process of evolution brought new challenges, new needs and new wants to the people. As additional projects were pulled under the umbrella of government, the cost of government also mushroomed.

All of a sudden there is the realization that the original intent of the government was accomplished long ago and rather than merely sustaining the good qualities derived from it, the government has grown and become self-perpetuating.

Now, I said at the start, this is fiction. It isn't the truth. It is merely an example of how government can go awry and come to dominate lives. It's true Midland County is rapidly approaching its 100-year celebration, but in most other regards the information given here isn't really applicable to local government. We're fortunate here to have a citizenry that cherishes individuality and staunchly opposes government intrusion.

But apply it to the state government or the federal government or to some aspects of community government and you can see how the true intent of government — which is serving the people by helping them do as a group what they cannot do as individuals — is accomplished early, then forgotten when those interested in "empire-building" get involved.

That's where our society has evolved to today — and even beyond. At the federal level, many bureaucrats perform "busy work" jobs and then dream up additional duties — whether they're needed or wanted — just to remain on the public payroll. That's wasteful and detrimental to the concept of government.

There's a way to change this slide toward socialism, but in our form of government we — the individuals — are the only ones who can accomplish it. It's simple. We've given our public servants a particular job to do. If they are not doing it, have our elected representatives (who are our official stand-ins in government) fire the bureaucrats.

If the elected representatives do not want to do that "dirty job," vote them out of office in the next election and either replace them with someone who will do the job or simply do not refill the vacancy. Do you really believe the government cannot operate without one or two senators or representatives? If they're not in office, they sure can't think up ridiculous ways to spend your tax money.

Don't confuse this with the necessary functions being performed by elected officials — providing services unavoidable in our society. View it as what it is — a recommendation on getting rid of governmental waste so the necessary items will, in reality, be less expensive. This may be a radical approach to cleaning up government, but I propose it to make a point: We, not our elected representatives, have the power to control the future of this nation. We don't always flex that muscle, but if we get angry enough — en masse — we can make a definite change in the growth and direction of bureaucratic government.

Our biggest enemy is not the Soviet Union, the Chinese communists or human hatred. Our biggest enemy is apathy and, in that regard, our biggest enemy is ourselves.

Bill Modisett is editor of the Reporter-Telegram opinion pages.

LETTERS

Apathy real winner in recent city elections

The recent school board election prompts this letter. I was an ardent supporter of one of the candidates for Place 7, not only because he is an acquaintance but because I knew where he stood on certain issues facing the school district and I felt that he would best serve the people of Midland.

As fate or apathy would have it, he lost the election. Oh well, all's fair in love and politics. Right? Imagine my surprise when I learned that the two winning candidates had called the "loser," wondering if he might discuss with them some issues on which they might focus before the runoff election, as they really didn't have any of their own!

Now I'm wondering about several different things.

Why does a person run for public office if he has no real issues for which he wishes to fight?

Why do we, as taxpaying citizens, vote for whom we do? Is it because we really believe as he does or is it because we saw his name more often on yard signs or in the newspaper? Do we vote for the person and what he stands for? Or, and this was surely true last Saturday, do we just not vote at all!

I would like to encourage all eligible persons in Midland to vote in every election. As it happens, my favorite candidate will not be in the upcoming election. But I will, nevertheless, vote for the person who gives me the best reason to vote for him.

Joyce M. Whitley

Airport regulations belong in trashcan

I believe Victor White's proposed airport regulations are good, according to federal regulations and belong in a trashcan.

Does he think Midland Regional is Chicago O'Hare International?

As an ex-employee of one FBO (I note, one of the three mega-bucks) I feel regulations are needed but not to the extent as to jeopardize free enterprise. The city has an obligation, but this obligation should be limited to the airline industry not private aviation.

An operator of a flight school, radio shop or maintenance facility has enough red tape to handle without adding the city fathers on their backs. These people are all business and think aviation safety first. The FAA does not allow them to operate unless they meet standards adequate to insure safety and responsibility.

The city has no business inspecting facilities or monitoring prices.

The aviation family of Midland is a competitive group of professionals and needs to remain intact.

Columnist's ideas on jail are ridiculous

I find it hard to believe that the management of the Midland Reporter-Telegram actually allowed Ed Todd's asinine column to run on March 11. Mr. Todd believes the inmates and former inmates should be consulted as to the needs of the jail. He even had the nerve to question the expertise of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, our sheriff and the jailers. That's ridiculous!

Now let's look at the other side. Let's ask the inmates — they've probably got some terrific ideas. Ideas such as individual suites, jacuzzis, prime rib served nightly and no intervention from the jail staff.

Real smart, Mr. Todd! What would those amenities do to the tax dollar?

Why don't we leave it to the voters, they've been informed of the needs and, believe me, the prisoners will not lose. The Texas Commission on Jail Standards will see to that.

Because of the foolishness of its contents, I suppose the article could have been written with tongue in cheek. If this was the case, it certainly did not read that way.

Betsy Robinson has outstanding credentials

On April 6, the citizens of Midland had the opportunity to vote for people who were running for Position 7 on the school board. The candidates were Betsy Robinson, Michael Butler and Geoffrey Barnett. They are all to be commended for their interest in serving the citizens of our community.

However, one candidate I wish to acknowledge as having outstanding credentials is Betsy Robinson. She graduated from Wayne State University with a degree in education. She has taught at the junior and senior high school level. Betsy has devoted time also to PTA and VIPS. She is an active member of the Midland Crime Prevention Commission and Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs.

In preparation for running for school trustee, Betsy has participated in the following for 1984-85:

1. She has frequently attended school board meetings, City Council meetings, and PTA meetings.
2. She has visited all 29 schools and met with principals, teachers, students and parents.
3. She has talked to many people at Central Office — superintendent, coordinators and educators.
4. She has attended two drug/alcohol abuse seminars.

Additionally, she has talked to the following groups:

1. Midland County Republican Women's Club.
2. Teacher's organization.
3. Principal's organization.
4. Tall City Republican Women.
5. Toast Master's group.

To my knowledge, no one has prepared themselves or worked as hard as Betsy Robinson to qualify herself as a prime candidate for this job. I challenge you to find a more qualified candidate.

If you did not vote in the last election, you can still vote in the runoff on April 27. I'm voting for Betsy Robinson — she is too good to pass up!

High court brays out another jackass ruling

The Supreme Court of the United States has brayed out another jackass decision to tie the hands of the police and keep criminals on the street.

The concept that a fleeing criminal, once in flight, constitutes no further threat to the public is nonsense. He who runs away will live to rob, steal, mug and burgle another day.

How safe and secure the fleet-footed fleeing felon must feel. He now knows that at the order, "Halt, Police," he has only to turn his head, thumb his nose, and take off, without fear of injury to life or limb which he can now inflict on his next victim.

As M*A*S*H*'s Colonel Potter would say, "Mule muffins."

Girl Scouts honor their leaders Monday

The typical Girl Scout leader used to be thought of as a mother of small children and a fulltime homemaker. But not in 1985!

Today's Girl Scout leader can be a working mother or a senior citizen, a single career woman or an "empty nester" whose children are grown. She, or he, can hold a Ph.D. in economics, be a fulltime student or work at any occupation.

What all these women and men must be, however, is energetic, intelligent and supportive of the diverse group of girls who make up today's typical Girl Scout troop, including kindergarten-age Daisy Girl Scouts, members of Girl Scouting's newest age level.

To show their appreciation for all the love, generosity, skill and energy of local Girl Scout leaders, the Girl Scouts of the Permian Basin will join with sister Girl Scouts in thousands of communities across the U.S.A. on April 22nd to celebrate the fourth annual observance of Girl Scout Leader's Day.

Permian Basin Girl Scouts are planning all kinds of happy events to honor their leaders on this special day. And they hope the whole community will join them in this day-long salute.

I'm happy to oblige and to wish Girl Scout leaders, here in the Permian Basin and across the nation, a wonderful time on their day! I urge all your readers to observe this special day, too. On April 22, extend a warm hello and hearty congratulations to the Girl Scout leaders you know.

SPEAKING OUT

ACS takes active role in cancer cures

By Dr. J.E. MENDEZ

Dr. J.E. Mendez has lived in Midland since June 1979, moving from Jackson, Miss. He is president of the Midland unit of the American Cancer Society.

We know our society has changed dramatically since the turn of the century. We also know it is changing at an ever-increasing pace. View it in its totality and we may sum it up as being a gain or loss in our lives. One part of that whole process of change that is a gain are the strides that have been made against cancer: In this nation we have seen high mortality rates due to cancer drop from four out of five to one out of two, and this within a 50-year span.

In any process of change someone or some group must take an active role. The American Cancer Society has definitely been a part of that evolution of change. But the ACS is not an abstract esoterical organization. Without the volunteers and the donations from all concerned, the ACS could not have taken a concrete stand against cancer.

April is the designated Cancer Control Crusade Month. The goals of the crusade are to inform as many people in Midland as possible about cancer prevention and early detection and to generate funds for ACS's service, research and education programs. This triumvirate of programs is absolutely essential to keep eroding at cancer's voracious appetite: In 1985 the deaths due to cancer are estimated to be under one-half million, with new cancer cases at almost 1 million. In Midland the estimated deaths would be under 200, while the number of new cases would be over 300. These numbers do not reflect the estimated total of approximately 30,000 who will eventually develop cancer in Midland.

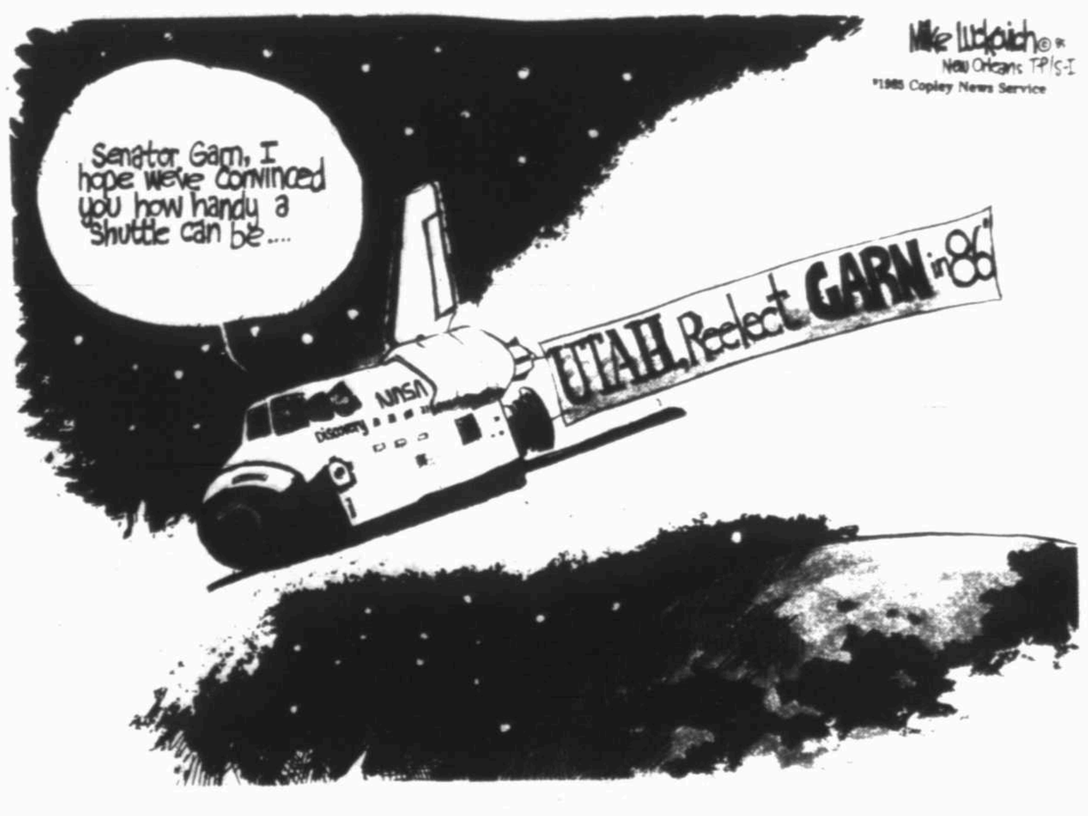
All physicians understand the historical perspective of where the progress has been made against deaths due to cancer. It lies in many fronts — from the pap smear screenings for cervical cancer before it becomes cancer (pre-invasive) to the treatments for certain lymph node diseases. But those same physicians also know when the diagnosis is still an open door for the Grim Reaper — such as lung cancer. The leading sites that contribute to those grim statistics are lung, colon and rectum, breast and uterus for women, and prostate for males. Uterine is the only one with a downward cure, due mainly to the use of the early detection system previously mentioned — the pap smear. The lung has its problems because of the smoking habits of this nation and its difficulty in attaining early detection. The breast, colon and rectum should be amenable to early detection but education must be emphasized. Therefore, the 1985 educational focus during the crusade will be colon and rectum, a possibly preventable as well as highly curable form of cancer.

The research being generated in detection and therapy literally consumes the ACS. The amounts of funds utilized in Texas are 29 percent of the 111 percent obtained, with public education being 28 percent and service and rehabilitation of the cancer patient being 25 percent. Twelve institutions utilize approximately $6 million.

Within this, Texas is allocated more than it raises to fund those institutions' research activities. The obvious question of what the ACS does for the people of Midland is not only answered by the services it provides directly and by its education programs, but also by pursuing that more seemingly elusive goal of "cure." As in all forms of research we cannot see the immediate benefit, but we have only to turn and see the technological advances in antibiotics, surgery, the aerospace program, computers, and so forth, to realize research's contributions to our lives.

I wrote of change earlier, but there is also a consistency in the American Cancer Society. It may be in the form of familiarity, as in the seven warning signals or the block walkers ringing your doorbell, but it is more in its persistent fight to attain that seemingly elusive goal of "cure." Midland is a city that embodies a people who also pursue extremely difficult goals — and attain them. In April, an ACS volunteer will be asking you to continue an alliance that has been the foundation in the Midland ACS Unit's fight against cancer.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.



Reagan's request for contra aid faces tough battle

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — It is with great concern that I call your attention to the vote scheduled in Congress this Tuesday on President Reagan's request for $14 million in aid for the Nicaraguan freedom fighters.

The aid is in support of the president's peace plan that calls for a cease-fire and church-mediated talks between the Sandinista regime and those fighting to restore democracy in Nicaragua.

The president's original plan provided that, as long as the peace talks were underway, the aid would not be used to supply the insurgents with weapons but only to provide them with medical and other humanitarian assistance.

Faced with almost certain defeat in the Democratically-controlled House of Representatives, the president is now being forced to consider a compromise that would take the teeth out of his plan. Without the threat of continued military aid to the freedon fighters, there is no incentive for the Sandinista regime to agree to the peace talks.

The proposed compromise would limit the aid to medical and other humanitarian assistance. Even this aid would be weakened by the Democrats. They want to reduce the humanitarian aid to $5 million and not allow any of it to go to the freedom fighters, but only to their families living outside Nicaragua.

Incredible as it may seem, House Speaker Tip O'Neill is insisting that before the House votes on a compromise, it must vote on the president's original plan, so that it can be defeated. That would send a clear message not only to the Nicaraguan communist dictatorship, but to the Soviets and Castro that Congress will block further military aid to the freedom fighters.

Not only does the president's original plan have the support of most of the Central American governments, but it was publicly endorsed in Washington by the president of Costa Rica last Monday and on the same day by Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, and James R. Schlesinger, President Ford's defense secretary.

The stakes at issue in next Tuesday's congressional vote are far greater than the relatively small amount of money involved. At issue is whether we allow the Soviet-Cuban aligned Sandinista regime to consolidate its ruthless power and signal a green light to Moscow for anti-American revolutionary conquest of Central America right up through Mexico to our own borders.

Make no mistake about it, if we do not continue supporting the Nicaraguan freedom fighters, it will be our boys who will eventually be fighting in Nicaragua or elsewhere in Central America. No administration, Democratic or Republican, can allow the Soviets to obtain another Cuban missile and submarine base in Central America.

Fifty-five percent of America's crude oil imports come through the Caribbean sea lanes.

Sixty percent of American reinforcements and resupply material for NATO forces in event of war in Europe are scheduled to leave from Gulf ports, passing by Cuba and through the Caribbean sea lanes.

Forty-five percent of our foreign trade moves out of Gulf ports.

Earlier this month, the president told a Christian-Jewish conference: "We face the risk that 100 million people from Panama to our open southern border could come under the control of pro-Soviet regimes and threaten the United States with violence, economic chaos and a human tidal wave of refugees."

High White House officials have been more blunt in warning that if we fail to support the contras, the time is sure to come when our own boys will have to do the fighting. One senior official said: "It's the last chance to obtain any kind of reasonable alternative to either the direct use of military force or the abdication of U.S. responsibility in the area."

It is all too reminiscent of those frightening days before World War II when a good part of the British Parliament, led by "peace in our time" Neville Chamberlain, was advocating appeasement of Hitler.

Every member of Congress who votes against $14 million for at least humanitarian aid to the Contras will be appeasing the forces of communist aggression in this hemisphere.

According to State Department information, foreign terrorists who are in Nicaragua training the Sandinistas' death squads include members of the Palestine Liberation Organization; the Basque ETA, the Italian Red Brigades; the Baader-Meinhof gang of Germany; the Tupumarus, who contributed to the fall of democracy in Uruguay; the Montoneros of Argentina, and the Red Guards of Japan."

How would we like those killers on the Mexican side of our southern border? If you wouldn't like them there, I hope you will get in touch this Monday with your representatives in the House, where the president was reported earlier this week to be about 30 votes short of victory.

Assault suspects remained jailed

From Staff Reports

Three men charged in the aggravated assault Thursday night of off-duty police officer Bobby Welborn remained in city jail Saturday night in lieu of posting $100,000 in bonds each.

The three California residents, Gregory Justin Preber, Gary Lynn Jackson and Allen Camar Cronk, were charged after an incident in which Welborn reportedly attempted to break up a disturbance at Dallas Nights, 1008 S. Midkiff Road. During the scuffle, Welborn's police baton was grabbed by one of the men, prompting officers to charge each of the three with a count of aggravated assault on a peace officer and a count of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Bond was set at $50,000 on each count by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

Police Saturday were investigating the burglary early that morning of a storage unit at 1700 McKenzie.

According to Michael E. Lauderdale, P.O. Box 30394, the latch was broken off the door-lock and a 40-gallon gas water heater valued at $390 was reported stolen.

Neighbors said they heard noises at 2 a.m. Saturday, leading police to believe the offense occurred at that time, reports said.

Bubba Long, 4212 Glen Eagles Drive, told police 10 small ceramic planter bowls, two ceramic hanging plants and a large planter box with flowers were stolen from his front porch area between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. Friday. Total loss was placed at $250, reports said.

Plumbing course offered

Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane, is offering a free course in entry-level plumbing beginning Monday, May 6 from 7:00 - 9:00 p.m. Students will learn how to use the principal tools of the plumbing trade, repair leaking lavatory, tub and shower faucets, and repair commodes and water heaters.

Thank You!

Words cannot express the appreciation I feel for all of you who supported me in my recent campaign for City Council. I am grateful to those of you who volunteered your time and energy, as well as your financial assistance.

I congratulate you and am proud of the results of our efforts in obtaining 2,163 votes in a field of five candidates.

I also wish to congratulate Katie Heck and Gordon Marcum. To all the candidates, I appreciate the manner in which you addressed the issues and your qualifications.

We are fortunate to have such a fine city and fine people interested in serving it.

Sincerely,

Manuel Carrasco

Closet Case or Closet Space

Avalanchephobia (av'a-lanch'a-fo-be-a): n. An acute fear of getting something into or out of the closet, caused by families who've outgrown their living space.

It's not an unusual disorder but it's easy to cure. The prescription is a Home Improvement loan from Petroplex Savings.

With a Petroplex Savings Home Improvement loan you can add more closets, an extra room or even convert existing space to something more usable. It can dramatically increase the value and versatility of your home, and prevent your closet space from turning you into a "closet case."

City Council will administer oath to new municipal court judge

A new municipal court judge and revisions in an ordinance regulating recreational vehicles will be considered by Midland City Council when it meets at 10 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall Council Chambers.

At 1:30 p.m., the oath of office will be administered to the new municipal court judge. Earlier, the council will consider setting the judge's salary.

At 2 p.m., the council will consider an ordinance that would amend regulations on recreational vehicles. About two months ago, several RV owners voiced their opposition to the current ordinance, which states what size vehicles can be kept in front of a house.

At 1:45 p.m., the council will hold a public hearing on a request by Racquet Club South Development Corporation for a zone change from PD, planned district, to Amended Planned District on Racquet Club South.

The level of sevices for MidTran, the public transportation system, and alternatives will be discussed.

Also on the agenda are a lease with Petro-Plains Campfire, Inc., to put up a new building next to the Parks Building, an ordinance to make the alley east of Big Spring between Neely and Big Spring one way going east and approval of a lease on city property to Henry Culp.

Student's trial set to start Tuesday

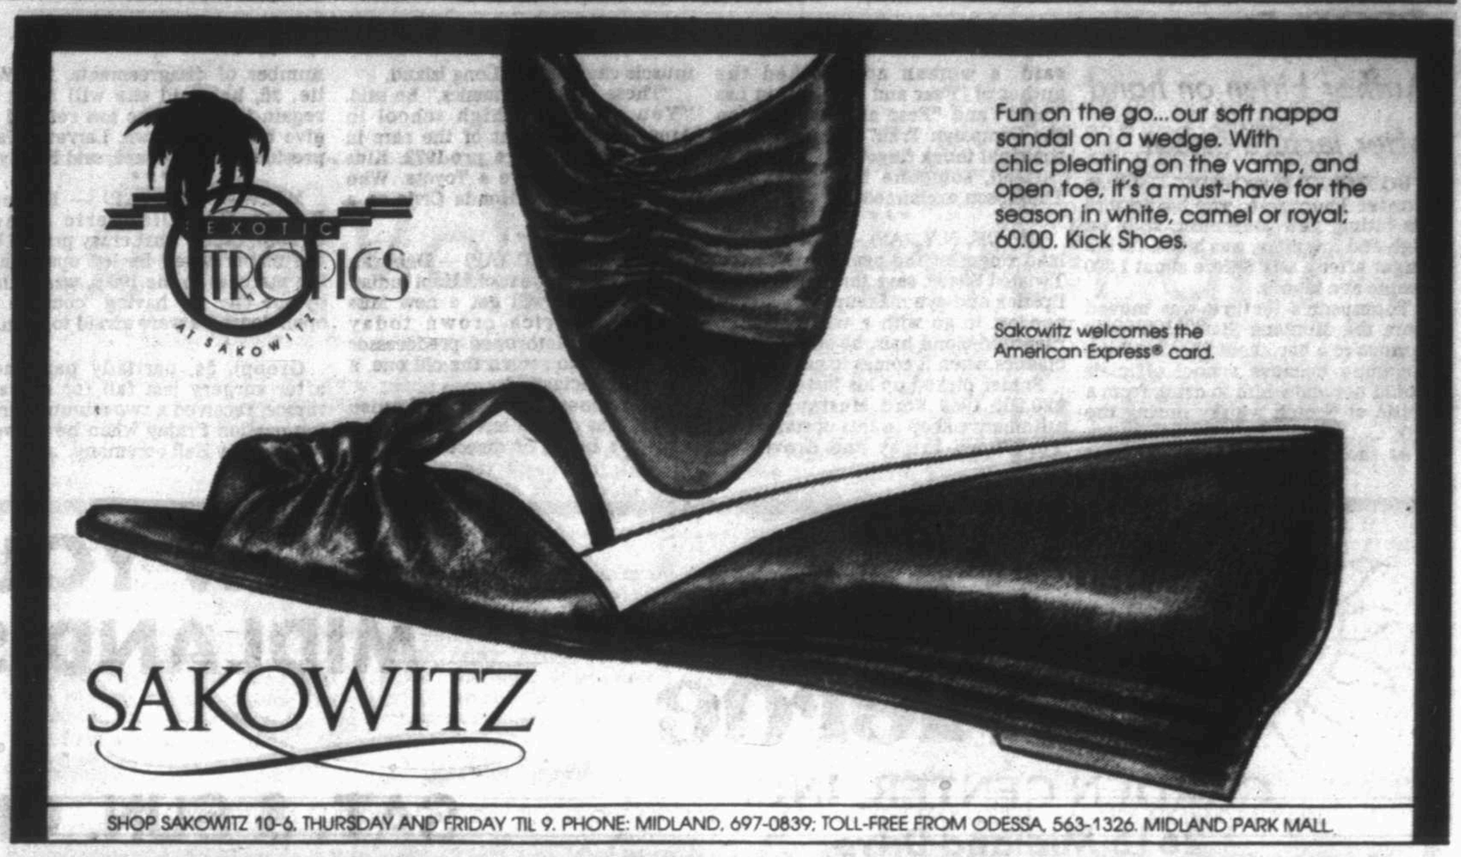
From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 17-year-old Permian High School student, unless granted a change of venue during a pretrial hearing Monday, is scheduled to face trial in 244th District Court Tuesday on a charge of attempted capital murder in the November 1984 stabbing and beating of the wife of Odessa's former police chief.

Robert Earl Horton, 1223 S. Lincoln, was arrested at his home early Nov. 6 in connection with the attack on Marion Lois Tomlin in her home at 1634 E. Everglade.

According to Odessa police reports, Horton allegedly forced his way into the Tomlin home, beat, stabbed and attempted to sexually assault the woman after demanding she give him money.

Mrs. Tomlin suffered a stab wound in the upper back and was hospitalized for some time at Medical Center Hospital.



ARE YOU LOOKING FOR A GOOD DEAL ON YOUR HOMEOWNERS INSURANCE?

Effective March 15, 1985, the State Board of Insurance reduced Homeowners Insurance rates 11.7%. Author bitten on hand after lecture in bar

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Author Hunter Thompson, who has turned his biting, new journalism style on high and low alike, was bitten on the finger after a talk before about 1,000 people at a tavern.

Thompson's lecture was moved from the Montana State University campus to a bar about 12 miles from Bozeman because school officials would not allow him to drink from a bottle of Scotch whisky during the talk.

At the end of the talk, witnesses said, a woman approached the author of "Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas" and "Fear and Loathing on the Campaign Trail" and bit him on the right index finger.

"God, someone bit my hand," Thompson exclaimed.

CLYDE, N.Y. (AP) — Dee Snider, lead singer of the heavy-metal band Twisted Sister, says that despite the lipstick and eye makeup he wears in concert to go with a wild shock of bleached-blond hair, he sticks to the classics when it comes to cars.

Snider picked up his just-restored, $20,000 1969 Ford Mustang at an automotive shop in this upstate New York town Friday and drove the muscle car home to Long Island.

"These cars are classics," he said. "You go to any high school in America, 20 percent of the cars in the parking lot are pre-1972. Kids don't want to drive a Toyota. Who wants to drive a Honda Civic or a Chevy Citation?"

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Deborah Secakuku, a 21-year-old Hopi Indian from Arizona, will get a new Miss Indian America crown today because her dethroned predecessor has refused to return the old one, a pageant official said

The former queen, Ann Louise Willie, was ousted last week by the pageant's board of directors over a number of disagreements. Ms. Willie, 25, has said she will fight to regain the title. She has refused to give back her crown, Larretta Hall, president of the board, said Friday.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Former Roman Catholic cleric James Groppi, called "that crazy priest" by the mayor when he led open-housing marches in the 1960s, was hailed by the city for having "courage to open doors we were afraid to open."

Groppi, 54, partially paralyzed after surgery last fall for a brain tumor, received a two-minute standing ovation Friday when he arrived for the City Hall ceremony.

WOODSTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Amy Carter, the 17-year-old daughter of former President Jimmy Carter, will attend Brown University, her father said.

Amy has said she was considering a studying physics and astronomy.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Television host Ed McMahon's apology for off-hand comments about Ohio's capitol city only rubs salt into wounded civic pride, say officials of the state's most populous community.

McMahon, 62, said in a statement that he mentioned Columbus in an April 22 Newsweek magazine story about "Star Search," a television show he hosts, only to make a point about small towns.

The magazine quoted him as saying, "There's always going to be that one kid who's stuck playing in some small club in Columbus."

Pat Baker, vice president for community relations for the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce, said people "think of it as an overgrown county seat."

Mother Nature came to bid farewell to Midland Lee head track coach Sam Volpe here Saturday night at the District 4-5A track meet, erupting with rain, a lightning display and finally a double rainbow just prior to darkness.

It seemed to be fitting, just short of a fireworks display, as Volpe ended his 24th and final season as his Rebels added a few fireworks of their own, outscoring Odessa Permian by a 151-108 margin to take the 4-5A title.

It was Volpe's fifth district title but this one will always be a special one for him.

"That's the way to go out," said Volpe. "This is as good a team as we've ever had at Lee as far as competing is concerned. I've never seen any team compete like this one did tonight. We qualified someone in every running event except the high hurdles. What more could you ask for in your last district meet."

In all, Lee qualified eight individuals and two relays for the Region I meet in Lubbock, which will be held in two weeks.

IT WAS also a meet in which both the Midland High and Lee girls began to show some competitive force in 4-5A track. Midland High placed a strong third with 84 points, a mere two points behind second-place San Angelo, and Lee was fourth with 81 points. Permian, as expected, won the girls team title with 132 points.

Both Midland High and Lee's girls qualified four individuals and one relay to the Region I meet. In all, the Tall City qualified 17 individuals and four relay teams, a combined city record.

It was also a historic moment for both the Lee boys and girls as Walter Jones became the first 4-5A trackster to win four first-places in the district meet. Also Lee's Diane White became the first Rebel girl to qualify for the region meet in three events.

Jones won the long jump (24-0, a new record), the 100-meters (10.68), the 200 (21.71) and ran the anchor leg on Lee's winning 400-meter relay, which posted a time of 41.98.

The record-setting performance of winning four first in one meet was made possible early in the afternoon when Jones' 24-0 in the long jump defeated favored Willie Blakey of San Angelo. Blakey jumped 23-3 ½ on his last jump and Jones, just shrugging his head, went out and got his record by jumping 1 foot-2 ½ inches farther than he'd ever jumped before.

"I knew it was possible to win four events after taking the long jump. The only other trouble I could see was getting the baton around in the sprint relay. After we did that, I knew I was going to win four. I don't think anybody could beat me tonight after we won that spring relay."

WHITE PUT on her own dazzling performance winning both the triple jump and long jump in record fashion. Her 39-9 ½ in the triple jump beat the old mark by two feet, four inches, and her 19-9 ¾ beat the old standard by a full eight inches in the long jump. She then got a chance to win her third region berth when Lee's 800 relay team placed second after favored Odessa High was disqualified for jumping the gun.

When told she had become the first Rebel girl to win three regional berths, she said "Are you kidding me? I wasn't even thinking about that. I do know I wanted to go out in style since I'm a senior and I didn't want those jumping records to just barely get by. I wanted to go all the way out."

Midland High's Amy Cumings was a two-event qualifier by winning the 3,200-meters with a time of 12:46.29 and placing second in the 1,600, 5:47.14. San Angelo's Cindy McClure defeated Cumings in the 1,600.

"I'm glad I get a chance to go to region in both events. I knew McClure was better, but not by that much," said Cumings after McClure posted a 5:34.48 for the victory.

JONES WILL have plenty of company with him at the region meet. Marq Brackens qualifed for the third year in a row in the 400, but was second to Ottoway Perryman of San Angelo, who broke Brackens' record of 48.43. Brackens ran a 48.91.

Cougs rap Dogs, 18-6

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

After Saturday's 18-6 squashing by second-ranked Abilene Cooper, it seems the season has stretched just a little too long for the Midland High baseball team.

Smarting from the recent loss of two front-line players because of grades, the Bulldogs were simply outmanned by the first-place Cougars and dropped their second straight District 4-5A game.

Cooper had its ace, Terry Suggs (12-1) on the mound and was ready, willing and able to take on all comers in anticipation of a fight with Midland Lee for first in the district. Cooper coach Andy Malone wasn't to find out the news that Lee fell, 7-6 in eight innings, to Abilene High Saturday until he got back to Abilene.

"It looks like it's going to be a playoff, but you never know what's going to happen" Malone said after the game. "We're not playing near as good as we can the last two weeks. Not to take anything away from anybody, but we've been playing to the level of the competition. We were terrible at the plate today.

As silly as that may seem coming from a man whose team just scored 18 runs, it was true. De La Garza and reliever Michael Gonzales struck out 11 Cougar batters. But indicative of the way MHS was playing, two of the strikeouts ended up on first base, one on a throwing error, the other on a wild pitch.

While Cooper had its ace going, Suggs, now 12-1 overall, was far from untouchable.

DESPITE STRIKING out nine batters, Suggs was clocked for six runs, including homers by Matt Sears and Mike Stanton in the same inning before he was lifted in the sixth.

But it wasn't nearly enough to stop the Cougars, not with the drop-happy MHS defense yielding seven errors and 13 unearned runs.

Junior righthander Kenny De La Garza got the call from Bulldog coach Tim Whalen and the junior ran into a truckload of tough luck, starting in the second inning.

De La Garza, 3-3, didn't help matters by setting his own table by walking two batters and hitting a third in the second, but a costly error by Robert Malacara helped to plate three runs. Malacara was far from the only Bulldog with fielding woes however.

The next inning, errors by Sears and catcher Greg Hatcher and two Cooper hits resulted in five more runs. MHS rallied for three runs off Suggs in their half of the third as Suggs walked three batters.

But in the fourth, errors by Jaime Salazar and Darren Thorpe and four Cougar hits later, six more runs had scored to make it 13-3.

"We did a lot of things today we haven't been doing much of, like not even being able to play catch," Whalen said. "When it gets so you can't even play catch out there you're in trouble. But they played a good ballclub today. I imagine we were a little tense going against them as good as they are."

Julian Gonzalez...where's this guy coming from?

Periscope starboard!

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Julian Gonzalez lists home as Puenta Plata, Domincan Republic. The way he pitches, he looks more like someone from Down Under.

Down Under, as far as opposing batters are concerned, doesn't refer to Australia. "Hey, Gonzalez, you should be in a Diablos' uniform." As far as they are concerned, one Dan Quisenberry in the American League is one too many. Now, here comes Gonzalez.

Gonzalez' wears you out just watching him throw. He's vintage Eldon Auker. He comes at the plate from somewhere just below his right knee. In comparison, a softball pitcher throws verhand. You never saw a softball pitcher with scratches on the back of his throwing hand.

Make fun of Gonzalez, if you dare, but don't do it around Joe Coleman, the California Angels' roving pitching coach. The 20-year-old is Coleman's pet reclamation project.

BEFORE JOE got hold of him, Julian threw legally. Sure, he dropped his arm, but not below the waist.

Like Bruce Sutter before Fred Martin and the split-finger fastball, Gonzalez' baseball future was behind him.

"I was managing at Peoria two years ago and Gonzalez was a pitcher who was struggling. He really wasn't much of a prospect," relates Coleman. "Then, one day, he dropped his arm and I liked what I saw. I conferred with Marcel Lachemann, the pitching coach for the Angels, and he said 'Go ahead. See what you can do.'"

Angel hits three homers in defeat

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

There is a strong possibility that Midland's Kevin Davis will never have another night like he had Saturday in the Angels' 13-12 Texas League loss to El Paso at Angel Stadium.

He'll likely improve upon his 4-for-5 performance that produced three runs and five RBI, but the hard part to match will be the three home runs he hit off three Diablo pitchers, all three easily over the left field fence. Tack on Friday night's blast and Davis has four round-trippers on the year, three more than he had in 1984.

"No, I've never had three in a game before," said Davis. "I did hit two in spring training this year so I've been hitting the ball well since then."

His hitting in spring training didn't escape Midland manager Joe Maddon's notice either. "He hit the ball so well in spring training this year, hitting home runs in bigger parks than this. What we've been trying to do is get him to hit line drives and tonight it just happened that he hit them up in the air a bit.

"He was struggling at the plate last year when we were trying to turn him into a switch hitter," continued Maddon. "This year we moved him back to the right side which is his natural side."

Both Maddon and Davis, as well as the rest of the players, were disappointed that their 18-hit, 12-run attack wasn't enough for the victory.

"It's a shame," said Maddon. "We hit the ball so good it's a shame we didn't win. We need an attack like that to take the heat off the pitcher but it just didn't work out."

THE MOUND is where most of the Angel problems came from. Add three defensive errors in key situations and 11 Diablo hits and it was too much to overcome.

After being tagged for three runs on an RBI single by Dan Purpura and a two-run homer by Joey Meyer (his sixth of the year) in the top of the first inning, Angel starter Ken Angulo started gaining some control over his pitches and looked to be settling down.

Then came an error by third baseman Juan Cruz on a Billy Joe Robidoux grounder in the third that cost an unearned run when Jesus Alfaro belted a two-RBI single up the middle.

Angulo got eight of the next nine batters out and was pulled in the top of the sixth for Eddie Delzer who took a seven-run beating, four of which should never have scored. Cruz could have ended a four-run sixth inning with no damage done, but booted a two-hop grounder by Dave Hubbard.

With the bases loaded, Delzer walked in one run, reliever Julian Gonzales walked in onother and then gave up the game winning hit to Robidoux, a two-RBI single to right.

"He did settle down but he'd thrown a lot of pitches, 120" said Maddon of Angulo. "I told him the sixth would be his last inning but that was on the condition he got them one-two-three. I felt good about bringing Delzer in with a comfortable lead (10-5 at the time). He just wasn't as sharp as he has been."

TRAILING 3-1 going into the bottom of the second, the Angels began taking advantage of Diablo starter Bob Schroeck's problems. Schroeck walked leadoff batter Greg Key, gave up a single to David Heath and an RBI single to Doug Davis before throwing a "slider inside" that Kevin Davis punched over the left field fence for a 5-3 Angel lead. Mark McLemore followed with a single, stolen base and scored on Cruz' double to left.

After giving up two in the third, the Angels made it 9-5 on RBI singles by Heath and Doug Davis to chase Schroeck. The Angels scored the third run on Joey Meyer's error at first. Kevin Davis made it 10-5 with homer No. 2, another "slider" off reliever Jay Aldrich.

Lee loses share of first place

From Staff Reports

Midland Lee fell from its perch atop the District 4-5A baseball standings Saturday losing a heartbreaking 7-6 decision at Abilene High in the eighth inning.

The Rebels, now 10-2 in district, fell a game behind Abilene Cooper, who stomped on Midland High 18-6.

Lee allowed the winning run to cross the plate after Victor Rodriguez doubled David Gonzales, who reached base on a walk by losing pitcher George Matta, around from first base to third. Second baseman Dirk Bergoon tossed the relay over third baseman Paul Colwell's head and out of bounds for an error. There were no outs when Gonzales scored the winning run.

In other District 4-5A action, Odessa Permian continued a hot streak with a 9-5 win over San Angelo and Odessa High nipped Big Spring, 11-10 in the completion of an earlier game and the scheduled game was called because of rain.

4-5A Roundup

THE EAGLES, 5-7, rallied from a 6-3 deficit in the sixth inning with a two-out, three-run rally. With Gonzales and Rodriguez on base, Brett Bourland doubled just out of reach of leftfielder Danny Gonzalez for two runs, and Mickey Russell followed with a two-bagger for an RBI and a tie score at six. Starter Mike Small then gave way to Matta who finished the inning.

Lee took an early lead in the first when Tuey Rankin tripled with two out and socred on a bloop single by designated hitter Greg Shaw. The Rebels lost the lead briefly in the second when Small lost his control and walked four batters and Rodriguez stung him for a two-run single to take the lead, 3-1.

Lee went back ahead with a pair of unearned runs in the fourth, and catcher Jimmy Phillips gave the Rebs a comfortable-looking 6-3 lead, when he poked his first homer of the season deep into left-centerfield with two runners aboard.

Permian was paced by a three-run homer off the bat of Jeff Wright, who drove in four runs on the day. Wright also picked up the win to improve to 2-6. Greg Lisewsky took the loss for the Bobcats, he is 4-5. Dan Peace double home a pair of runs for San Angelo in a losing cause.

Sandy Crenshaw rolls 300

It was bound to happen sooner or later, and for Sandy Crenshaw of Midland it was better sooner than later.

Crenshaw became the first woman to ever bowl a 300 game in Midland Saturday recording her perfect game at Tall City Lanes in the City Tournament.

"I didn't get too awfully nervous until I went up there for the last frame," Crenshaw said. "I was quite shaky and I didn't throw a good ball. I got a mushy Brooklyn, but I'll take it."

The 300 came as a late birthday present for Crenshaw, a bowler for more than 20 years. She turned 39 last Wednesday.

"It was a nice birthday present. The best part about it is I held myself together out there long enough to bowl a 712 series. I haven't bowled a 700 in about 10 years."

Crenshaw, a bookkeeper, bowls every Monday night in a scratch league at Tall City Lanes and has maintained a 174 average. Her highest game previously had been a 288.

"I'm really kind of numb, I don't think I've realized it yet. You always think you'd like to (bowl a perfect game), but you never think you'll really do it."

For Sandy Crenshaw, that dream is now a reality she'll always remember.

Dudley Dome considers adding excitement

One thing and another while wondering whatever became of Nelson Briles...

El Paso's Dudley Dome proudly wears its reputation as a hitters' paradise, but during the off-season there was some talk of remodeling the ball yard at the foot of the Franklin Mountains. Whether it goes any farther than talk is a matter for conjecture.

The plan calls for moving one wall back and moving another in and making it sorta of a Green Monster, like Fenway's notorious left field barrier, to add a little excitement to the game.

Midland second baseman Mark McLemore thinks Dudley is a tight little band box as it is. "That home run I hit in the series out there was my first ever."...

Mark last year stole 59 bases at Redwood and this year his goal is 75. "I don't know whether I'll reach it, but I always like to have goals at the start of the season."...

Incidentally, California Manager Gene Mauch labels McLemore as a future star, noting the only other rookies who impressed him as much were Dick Allen and Gary Carter...

And then there was Lionel Ritchie's reaction when asked what it felt like to continually be mistaken for Mark McLemore. "Who?"....

Doug Reibel, the Angels left-handed DH from Chicago, isn't a complete stranger to baseball in West Texas. "I went to St. Xavier on Chicago's South Side and a couple of years ago we came to Lubbock to play in the NAIA College World Series. We beat Lubbock Christian to take third place."...

"What I like about the Angels' Stadium infield," says Midland Manager Joe Maddon, "is that it's not only one of the smoothest I've ever seen, but they manage to keep it so soft in this dry climate."...

Jon Teischer, the UCLA grad who for years was the voice of the Diablos, is in Portland doing play-by-play for the Pacific Coast League team and will return to El Paso in the fall to do UTEP football and basketball.

Vince Cotroneo, the Brooklyn native who did the radio casts for the Mets farm at Lynchburg, Va., Carolina League last year, was on his way to Pittsfield, Mass., to do the games for the Eastern League Cubs, who last year were in Midland.

"Jim Paul (Diablos GM) gave me a call and said he needed someone, so here I am." Vince travels with the club and has worked Gator and Orange bowl games...

Counting playoff games and regular season, Ken Angulo, the Angels' starter Saturday night, was an 18-game winner last year...

Another Stottlemyre is on the way. Todd, Mel's son, was 10-4 at UN-Las Vegas last year....

California pitching coach Joe Coleman points out that through trades the Angels will get a surfeit of low round draft choices, including multi-first round picks, in June, which is good news for the future of the Midland Angels...

Like Rick Reuschel when the Cubs came to here in 1972 from San Antonio, Bob Kipper, 18-8 at Redwood last year with a 2.04, was ticketed for Midland, but failed to make it. He looked so good, he stuck with California. In 1972, Reuschel stuck with Chicago...

Montreal manager Bob Rodgers, who once managed the Angels' Texas League farm when it was at El Paso, says he isn't looking for a team leader to replace catcher Gary Carter, traded to the Mets. "Sometimes you get a leader on the team and all he does is lead everybody in the wrong direction."...

Nellie Briles? The ex-Cardinal pitcher is on the Seattle Mariners' broadcast team. I'll be he isn't any Gerry Coleman.

Dallas' Jay Vincent doesn't realize it yet, but his pocket is being picked.

Vandeweghe sinks Mavs

From Wire Reports

NBA Playoffs

DALLAS — Portland's Kiki Vandeweghe scored 27 points, including eight in overtime Saturday, as the Trail Blazers rallied to a 124-121 victory over the Dallas Mavericks to deadlock their playoff series at one game each.

The third game of the best-of-five series in the Western Conference will be played in Portland Tuesday night.

Vandeweghe, a 1980 Dallas draft selection, hit his last five shots and nailed two free throws with seven seconds to play to ice the game. He was booed by the Reunion Arena crowd everytime he touched the ball.

Dallas' Rolando Blackman, the hero of Thursday night's 139-131 double overtime victory, scored 41 points, including a three-pointer with three seconds to play that gave Dallas hope.

However, Portland's Darnell Valentine hit two free throws and Sam Perkins' wild three-point attempt at the buzzer missed.

The Blazers, trailing by 10 points with 2:06 to play, outscored Dallas 14-4 and tied the game at 110 in regulation on Mychal Thompson's dunk shot with one second to play.

Thompson scored 25 points, including four in overtime. Clyde Drexler had 19 points.

Mark Aguirre added 20 points for the Mavericks.

Portland overcame an atrocious start to trail only 45-43 at halftime. The Blazers fell behind 19-6 in the first period when they went almost six minutes without a field goal. Portland had one stretch where it was 3-of-17 from the field while Dallas was on a 15-2 run.

Celtics 108, Cavaliers 106

BOSTON — Larry Bird capped a 30-point performance with a layup with two minutes remaining to give Boston the lead for good as the Celtics took a 2-0 lead in the series.

Cleveland, which trailed by 11 points late in the third quarter, went ahead 102-101 on two free throws by World B. Free with 2:21 remaining.

Bird then got the ball underneath Boston's basket and, while being tightly guarded by several Cavaliers, made the go-ahead basket. Robert Parish, who had 18 points, then hit a short jumper with 1:22 to go to make the score 105-102.

But Cleveland wasn't finished. Ben Poquette hit a jumper from the left corner with 1:02 to play to cut Boston's lead to one point. Danny Ainge followed with a jumper to restore the Celtics' three-point lead with 45 seconds remaining.

A layup by Roy Hinson sliced Boston's lead to 107-106 with 22 seconds left. Ainge made the first of two free throws with 12 seconds to go, but Cleveland rebounded the unsuccessful second attempt and called time out with 10 seconds to play.

With three seconds remaining, Ainge fouled John Bagley, forcing Cleveland to take the ball out of bounds. The inbounds pass went to Free, Cleveland's leading scorer with 25 points, but his desperation heave from 22 feet missed as the buzzer sounded.

Lakers 147, Suns 130

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 24 points, 20 in the first half, as Los Angeles took 2-0 lead over the Suns.

The Lakers could end the best-of-five series with a victory in Phoenix on Tuesday night.

Bob McAdoo added 22 points for Los Angeles, as the Laker reserve corps again got a lot of playing time in what was mostly a one-sided contest.

Byron Scott had 21 points for the winners, and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 19 points and 12 assists.

Alvan Adams led the Suns with 28 points and Jay Humphries had 21.

The Lakers, who whipped the injury-riddled Suns 142-114 in the series opener Thursday night, took control this time with a 32-6 spurt that started with less than two minutes to go in the second quarter and continued after halftime.

Dick Poling, a guy who really knows the score

By GEORGE STRODE

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP) — When it comes to knowing the score, few people can match Dick Poling.

A former counselor at the Ohio State Reformatory, Poling, 77, has been college football score hound for half a century. He'll go to any length to chase down a score — even writing the school's president — and keeps tabs on every school from the Big Ten to club teams.

"I have individual notebooks on more than 800 college teams. I have their complete records from their first games," Poling said. "I still keep track of more than 600 teams."

Poling's attic is practically full of his records. He keeps his equipment — four typewriters, a telecopier and a mimeograph machine — in one room of his Mansfield house.

Such a hobby has brought Poling extra money and extra barbs from his wife, Lillian.

"I make expenses; in fact, enough I have to file an income tax report on it," he said. "For many years, my wife called it football junk. After 40-some years, a husband doesn't have too much of a comeback to that. But over the years, she finally has seen I have fun."

TO KEEP abreast of each season, Poling subscribes to six newspapers.

"I get 300 media guides on teams each year. And about half of those schools send me weekly releases. I get schedules from football magazines. And we have a little fraternity of researchers around the country — about 20 of us — that correspond," he said.

If he cannot locate a score, Poling fires off a letter to the school's sports information director.

"Eighty percent of the time they respond," he said.

Poling becomes frustrated when a score eludes him. He remembers a case with an Iowa college.

"I wrote them, 'You wouldn't send me that score if it would have released the (Iranian) hostages.' I still didn't get the score," he said.

Besides his collections of scores, Poling has been in the football ranking business since 1935.

He moved into ranking because he always wondered where his Ohio Wesleyan University team that beat Michigan and Syracuse in 1928 would have rated nationwide. He was a guard-tackle for the Bishops that season.

"I STARTED fooling around with a formula and still use it," Poling said. He ranked 683 teams for the 1984 season, including some Eastern club teams.

"I don't rank two-year junior colleges, and only teams that play at least six games a year," he said.

Asked to reveal his formula, Poling laughed and said: "Well, I can't very well. I'd have to sit down and explain it to you. It would take an hour and then you wouldn't know what the heck I was talking about."

Poling's Top Ten last year had Brigham Young first, Washington second, Oklahoma third, Nebraska fourth, Florida fifth, Oklahoma State sixth, Boston College seventh, South Carolina eighth, Southern Methodist ninth and Ohio State 10th.

"Don't push down Brigham Young," he said of the unbeaten Cougars, who also finished first in The Associated Press Top Twenty poll of sports writers and broadcasters. "Brigham Young didn't need to beat anybody in the Top Twenty. Many of the teams Brigham Young beat defeated teams in the Top Twenty."

Lee, MHS draw blanks

4-5A Tennis

ABILENE — The dream of a District 4-5A tennis title ended a little bit earlier than the players from Midland High and Midland Lee would've liked when three singles players from MHS and two doubles teams from Lee were eliminated in semifinals Saturday.

For MHS, Kevin Moore, who upset the third seed in Friday's opening round matches, Jill Bramlett and Laura Legg were all beaten in straight sets and lost the chance of making it to regionals — this year.

Lee, which placed the boys doubles pair of Walter Hickman and Jimmy Walker and the girls pair Lisa Fierro and Krista Harvey in semifinals Saturday, was also unable to move any teams into the finals. Walker and Hickman were eliminated in a tough three-set match by a team from Abilene High.

All three MHS singles players should be back next year and MHS coach Pete Barizon is already looking forward to that.

"I'm encouraged that we got three to the semis and with two of them sophomores and one a junior it looks real good for next year," MHS coach Pete Barizon said. "We played about as well as we could play so I'm very pleased."

Saturday's Semifinals
Boys

Singles: Justin White (SA) d. Kevin Moore (MHS), 6-2, 6-3.

MC claims WJCAC titles

Regionals at Waco await

From Staff Reports

LEVELLAND—Midland College nailed down the Western Junior College Athletic Conference men's and singles championship at South Plains College Saturday, winning eight of nine conference positions in the men's competition.

MC's men's team amassed 71 points to beat out Odessa College and South Plains, tied for second with 32.

The women also won easily, accummlating 51 points to 16 for OC and 14 for South Plains.

Regional is the next step to the nationals for Coach Joe Williams' racqueteers and also an opportunity to improve on its national juco rankings.

MC will be favored in both the men's and women's events at the regionals which begin Friday in Waco.

Fads and trends...in golf there's distinct difference

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press

There are fads in golf equipment. And there are trends.

The difference is in the numbers.

And the source for the numbers is The Spy.

There are no negative connotations to the term. As used by generations of golf's touring pros, the title implies acceptance and affection.

It's been handed down—over the past half-century, over hundreds of golf courses and thousands of professional tournament players and millions of miles — from Eddie Darrel to his widow, Virginia, to her successor, Susan Naylor.

Susan andor her brother, John Minkley, are on (or near) the tee at about 50 golf tournaments a year.

And, while they're not an official part of the tour — "neither fish nor fowl," Susan said — they're familiar figures to the game's tourists; recognized by almost all, close friends to many.

"I've cut their hair, hemmed their pants, minded their kids," Susan said.

Their job involves making detailed checks of the equipment used by pros and amateurs. The checks usually are on the clubs and balls.

But, at times, they've been asked for, and produced, figures on the use of various brands of visors, grips, shafts, shoes, socks, bags, sweaters, gloves.

From these raw figures come voluminous statistics that make up the Darrel Golf Survey.

Golf Trends

"It started back in the '30s, when Eddie, just like the pros, was out there scrambling for a living," Susan said.

From the scribbled notes the dour little Eddie kept in the days of the Great Depression, and attempted to peddle to manufacturers, the business has grown into the most respected source of detailed information about the use — not the sale, but the actual use — of various brands of golf equipment.

"We've been called 'the Gallup Poll of golf'," Susan said. And, like other accepted polls, hers is completely objective. "We have no ax to grind. We simply report," she said. The information is used in a variety of methods, particularly in advertising, by manufacturers, the principal clients of the Survey.

Not only are reports available on the equipment preferred by professionals, surveys have been made at boys' and girls' championships, at collegiate tournaments, at amateur and senior and women's events. Information is broken down by age and sex of players, the frequency with which they play, the age of their equipment, and so on.

From these figures, trends and fads are easy to spot.

"There have been phenomena in the last few years — graphite shafts, colored balls, potato-masher putters, Zebras, featherlites," Susan said.

"A lot of them come and go. Particularly putters. The featherlites are so new, we don't have enough information to judge.

"But there is a trend in the last few years. That's to the metal woods.

"Something like half the players we survey have a metal wood in their bag.

"The trend is even changing the language of the game. The manufacturer calls them 'spoons' and 'brassies' and 'cleeks', the old terms, and players are starting to use it again."

The two overwhelming favorites, numerically at least, of the pros are Ping putters and Titleist balls — "and five years ago Titleist was fighting for one ball," he said.

A typical pro's bag, she said, would contain a Ping putter, Titleist balls, a Taylormade metalwood, a MacGregor driver and either Hogan, Wilson or Ping irons.

(That is an overall, numerical preference only, she said. Some leading players favor something entirely different. Tom Watson, for example, plays Ram. Jack Nicklaus, the owner of the company, uses MacGregor.)

The typical amateur's bag would have Titleist or Spalding balls; a Ping putter; either Wilson, Hogan or Ping irons; Wilson or Taylor woods.

"With the amateurs, you can usually tell a good player just by going through his bag," she said. "If it's all shiney-new, all the same brand, he probably hasn't played that much and isn't that good. If he has a mixed bag, the clubs show use, you figure he may know what he's doing."

TCU, Arkansas divide in twinbill

SWC Baseball

FORT WORTH (AP) — An Arkansas error with two outs in the seventh gave Texas Christian a 4-3 win in the double-header opener, but the Razorbacks came back to win the nightcap 12-6.

In the opener, Arkansas held a 1-0 lead going into the fifth when TCU scored three runs on four hits and one error. The Razorbacks added one in the sixth and one in the seventh to tie the score.

In the seventh, TCU's Bernard Walker was on second base with two outs when Darrin Roberts struck out. But catcher Chris Lusker overthrew the first baseman and Walker came around to score and end the game.

TCU's Dwayne Williams, 6-3, 3-2, picked up the win in relief of starter Brian Ohnoutka; Fred Farwell, 7-1, 3-1, took his first loss of the season.

Sloppy defense and several controversial calls that got two TCU players ejected proved to be TCU's downfall as Arkansas scored 12 runs on 18 hits in the second game.

Rick Huntze, 5-0, 3-0, picked up the win. Sam Booker, 6-2, 0-2, took the loss.

TCU stands at 29-14 overall and 5-10 in conference play, while Arkansas stands at 32-10 and 12-5.

WACO — After a doubleheader split, the Houston Cougars, ranked 10th nationally, stand at 39-7 overall and 10-5 in SWC play. Baylor, ranked 19th, is now 40-10 and 12-6.

In the seven-inning opener, the Cougars made 14 hits off four Baylor pitchers, Three Houston players — Joe Simms, Mark Grimes and Guy Garibay — gave the Cougars a lead they never lost after the second inning.

Two Baylor players, Greg Dennis and Brad Douglas, notched up homeruns as well.

Texas 16-8, Texas Tech 15-2

AUSTIN — A bases-loaded walk to David Denny in the bottom of the final inning forced in the winning run in the first game, and Mike Poehl shackled Texas Tech on five hits in the second.

Texas is now 46-10 for the season. The Raiders, now 2-16 in league play and 18-30 overall, overcame an eight-run Texas lead in the first game to take a 15-13 margin into the bottom of the sixth.

Johnny Vidales drove in six runs with two homers and a single for Tech, and Eddie Anselmo added a grand slam. Vidales' second homer climaxed an eight-run fifth inning and put Tech ahead, 15-13.

SWC, NBA, TL, AL, NL, UIL...

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS — Let's see, down here in the Texas spring sports world we've got three teams in the National Basketball Association playoffs and the American League and National League baseball seasons have started.

Mickey Sullivan's Baylor Bears are the surprise leaders of the Southwest Conference baseball chase and spring football is just about over.

The professional tennis people have been on the scene at Dallas and Houston and the McDonald's High School All-Star basketball showcase game is history.

The Pro Bowlers have come calling and the Major Indoor Soccer League is finally in the books.

We've had the Women's Final Four and NCAA Swimming Championships in Austin and the Midwest Regional in Dallas and are currently "enjoying" United States Football League games.

Roy Martin ran wild at the Texas Relays in the 100 meters and there's more to come in May at the University Interscholastic Meet in Austin.

The storied old Texas League is underway and don't forget professional boxing that keeps drawing the national television cameras to our state.

There's a dizzying schedule of WCT, NBA, NL, AL, MISL, TL, SWC, UIL, PGA, PBA, USFL, etc...

But now we're finally getting down to the Texas event I've been waiting for all spring.

No, it's not Earl Strom refereeing a Dallas Mavericks game with glue in his whistle.

No, it's not abolition of the USFL.

What it is, is, Mickey Wright and Kathy Whitworth trying to beat the good old boys down at the Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf next week at Onion Creek Club.

Now folks this is intriguing.

It's not just one game in a 162 contest major league schedule.

Or just another NBA playoff game.

Or just another, yawn, USFL effort.

It's the two best women golfers in history (forgive me Babe Zaharias fans), breaking through the old stuffy traditions of men's golf to compete on an equal footing.

Get the lockerooms tidied up and the cigar butts in the trashcan, boys, the ladies are going to play for some of that $500,000 in cold cash.

Wright and Whitworth, both members of the World Golf Hall of Fame as well as the LPGA Hall of Fame, will bring these credentials:

Wright won 82 tournaments, including 13 in 1963. She once shot a 62 in Midland, Texas.

Whitworth was the first member of the LPGA to win $1 million, was player of the year seven times and won 85 tournaments, an all-time record.

No, Wright and Whitworth won't win the better ball tournament. (Each player plays a hole and takes the best score).

Not with such teams as Don January-Gene Littler, Arnold Palmer-Dow Finsterwald, Sam Sneed-Lee Elder, Miller Barber-Bob Goalby, Peter Thomson-Kel Nagle, Art Wall-Doug Sanders and Billy Casper-Gay Brewer in the tournament field of distinguished players 50 years of age and over.

But the course is not a long one. It demands straight tee shots and accurate seconds to the green and a deft putting touch. Professional women golfers have always had everything but the length off the tee.

Can they put a scare into the best men's senior golfers in the world?

Rampaging Bulls trample Renegades

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Ed Luther riddled the Orlando defense for four touchdown passes Saturday night to lead the Jacksonville Bulls past the Renegades 31-10 in the United States Football League.

Luther, formerly the backup to Dan Fouts of the National Football League's San Diego Chargers, played with mechanical efficiency, connecting with eight receivers for 397 yards. He finished the night with 26 completions in 33 attempts and one interception.

He was supported by the slashing running of Mike Rozier, who rushed for 126 yards.

ANGELS

The Angels lost a run in the seventh when Kevin Davis was thrown out at the plate on Mark McLemore's double to the center field fence. Diablo Glenn Braggs fielded the ball, threw to shortstop Kiki Diaz who relayed to Hubbard at the plate. Cruz followed with an RBI single to left to make it 13-11.

With two gone in the ninth, Davis got his final home run of the game off El Paso reliever Dan Burns, hitting a "fastball down the middle" into the night. McLemore then grounded out to end the game.

"We just don't have everything together right now," said Davis. "When we've got the pitching we don't have the hitting and when we've got the hitting we don't have the pitching. The main thing about tonight is we got our hitting going and we've got to keep it going."

If Davis keeps his hitting going the way he has the past two nights — 5-for-7 for four runs and six RBI — he might be the one that's gone: Onward and upward through the minor league system.

ANGEL NOTES: Lefty Juan Nieves, 1-0, will start for the Diablos in today's 2 p.m. game while the Angels counter with south paw Bryan Price, 0-1...The victory improves El Paso's record to 8-4 on the year while the Angels fall to 3-9...Meyer, former defensive lineman at the University of Hawaii, has hit four of his six homers against the Angels...Kevin Davis, incidentally, was named most improved rookie in the Angels spring camp at Mesa...

Tuition increase concerns Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas athletic officials say they are unsure of the effects of a dramatic increase in tuition and scholarship costs pending before the Legislature.

Under a bill already approved by the House and likely to be debated in the Senate next week, the long-time custom of allowing out-of-state athletes to pay resident tuition would be eliminated.

UT administrators said they can't begin to determine how much extra money they'll need for scholarships or where they may have to trim the existing budget to cover those costs until they get their budgets in early summer.

UT's men's athletic department is self-supporting and would rely on a fledgling fund-raising structure to make up the estimated $300,000 the new tuition rates would cost, Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds said.

Women's Athletic Director Donna Lopiano, however, said she must first determine how much the women's legislative allocation will be before any decisions on how to deal with the estimated $287,000 increase in costs.

Lopiano has told her coaches to cut back on scholarship offers until the full effect is calculated.

On Thursday, Gov. Mark White became the latest key figure to support the tuition increase proposed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

The Senate Finance Committee on Wednesday approved the proposal, which would triple resident tuition to $12 a semester hour and out-of-state rates to $120.

UH catches Arkansas

SWC Golf

LAKEWAY (AP) — No. 1-ranked Houston overcame Arkansas' eight-shot lead in the first round to pull to a two-point, second-round lead Saturday in the 60th Southwest Conference Men's Golf Championship.

Houston, which won the three-round tournament last year, tallied 594. Arkansas, the only team from outside Texas, had 596. The seven other teams placed far behind in the 600s.

Houston's Billy Ray Brown led all players with 142, while teammate Steve Elkington of Australia, who was top player last year, placed fourth with 148.

Tied with Elkington was Arkansas' Tim Crockett, who led all players with 71 after the first round but dropped to fourth after scoring 77 in the second round.

Because of intermittent rain and high winds, players scored high at the 28-hole, 3,864-yard Lakeway Country Club, where par is 70.

Team Standings-Houston 594, Arkansas 596, Texas 607, Texas A&M 621, Texas Christian 627, Texas Tech 636, Southern Methodist 640, Baylor 640, Rice 649.

Individual Standings

Billy Ray Brown, Houston 71-71—142; Bob Estes, Texas 71-75—144; Mike Grob, Arkansas 72-74—146; Steve Elkington, Houston 74-74—148; Tim Crockett, Arkansas 71-77—148; Ronnie McDougal, Texas 75-74—149; Paul Mayo, Texas A&M 74-77—151; Sean Pappas, Arkansas 76-75—151; Carlos Espinosa, Houston 77-74—151; John Sadle, Arkansas 73-78—151; Bobby Rucker, Baylor 77-75—152; Pete Jordan, Texas Christian 79-74—153.

Bobby Wadkins rocks back on heels after missing birdie putt in Heritage Golf Classic.

Watchful Langer keeping track

By BOB GREEN

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Bernhard Langer is one of the few touring golf pros who wears a wristwatch while he plays.

There's a reason for it.

Langer, the winner of the Masters last week, was fined for violating the PGA Tour's guidelines concerning slow play a month ago in the Tournament Players Championship.

With the wristwatch, he can check his own — and other players' — progress.

He put it to use on the first hole Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

One of his playing partners, Bobby Wadkins, drove into the woods and requested a ruling.

"It took a while for the official to get there. I knew that would happen. Then he dropped it two or three times. It took 15 minutes," Langer said.

So the West German star was armed with some facts when he was warned for slow play when his group went off the 10th tee.

"We were exactly 15 minutes slow — the time it took for the ruling — in making the turn. I don't think it's right that they should warn us," he said.

"We rushed every shot and caught up in three holes," he said.

The warning did not result in a penalty. And it didn't hamper his play. After playing the front in 38, Langer ripped the back nine — while officials timed his progress — in 31, including birdies on three of his last five holes — and established a one-shot lead going into Sunday's final round.

The burst enabled him to break a multiple-man scramble in which eight players led or shared the lead at one time or another during the day's play.

"One shot is nothing," said Langer, who had a rallying 69 and a 203 total, 10 under par, through the first 54 holes on the Harbour Town Golf Links.

"He's playing awfully well right now. It could be that he'll go out and shoot lights out and nobody else will have a chance," Wadkins said of Langer.

Danny Edwards, who combines his PGA Tour activity with a concurrent career as an auto race driver, had a 68 that moved him into second at 204.

Sheehan's birdie spree opens five-stroke lead

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Patty Sheehan made three birdies on the final eight holes Saturday to open a five-stroke lead after three rounds of the $200,000 J&B Scotch Pro-Am golf tournament.

Sheehan, who led by three strokes after 36 holes, shot a 1-under-par 71 over the Desert Inn Country Club course for a 54-hole score of 203.

A challenging Alice Miller, who could win a $1 million bonus with a victory here, ended the round in second place after carding a 73 for a 208.

Miller committed a mental error when she picked up her ball from the fairway of the 18th hole, which cost her a stroke.

Nancy Lopez, Pat Bradley, Beth Solomon, and Vicki Fergon, all were deadlocked in third place at 210. Lopez and Bradley each shot 72 Friday, while Solomon and Fergon carded 71s.

Seeking her second tournament victory of 1985, Sheehan saw her lead over Miller disappear after 10 holes on an overcast and windy afternoon.

At the eighth, Sheehan hit her drive into a pond, took a one-stroke penalty and then hit into a sand trap. She carded a double bogey six as Miller took a par four which reduced Sheehan's lead to one in her quest for the $30,000 first prize.

Playing in the same foursome, the two leaders found themselves on even terms when Miller parred and Sheehan bogeyed the 10th after hitting into a trap.

Sheehan, however, regained the lead by dropping a 25-foot birdie putt on the 11th while it was Miller's turn to hit into a trap and take a bogey four.

Sheehan added birdies at the 15th, when she hit the green of the par-5 in two and two-putted, and the 17th, where she sank a 10-foot birdie putt.

Sheehan's lead ballooned to five shots when Miller was charged the penalty stroke on the 18th when she inadvertently picked up her ball on the fairway.

Miller, winner of the Dinah Shore tournament, could win a $1 million bonus by also winning here.

Sheehan built her lead to four strokes after the first hole Saturday when she birdied with a two-foot putt.

Miller won that stroke back with a 10-foot birdie putt on the 157-yard fourth hole.

Sheehan then missed chances to boost her lead again as she missed birdie putts of five and seven feet on the next two holes.

Tulane considers self-appraisal

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tulane University needs to take a closer look at the academic ability of the athletes it recruits, its new athletic director said.

"I think it is not fair to bring in young men to the Tulane community that cannot possibly make it. We need to see where we stand on admissions," Mack Brown said after his appointment was announced Friday.

Sports Illustrated magazine reported last week that star basketball player John "Hot Rod" Williams was admitted to Tulane even though his Scholastic Aptitude Test scores were extremely low.

Williams was one of five players named in a point-shaving indictments handed down April 4— same day Coach Ned Fowlerresigned after admitting he had given money to players in violation of NCAA regulations.

The basketball program was abolished one day before Brown was appointed athletic director.

Brown, hired four months ago as Tulane's football coach, said he began his coaching duties by stressing academic improvement.

He said players whose studies improved got T-shirts proclaiming, "Tulane University. Putting the student back in student-athlete."

A dozen shirts have been handed out so far, said Sharyn Orr, the school's athletic adviser.

According to Sports Illustrated, Williams, a physical education major, had a grade-point average only slightly below a solid C, but the record contained many failures — including one in beginning golf.

Orr acknowledged that Williams had academic troubles, but added: "John's general attitude here was to obtain a degree. When something was required of him, he participated."

She also said that Fowler had a "more than adequate" attitude toward academics.

"He assigned a particular coach, Kirk Saulney, to check daily on how the basketyers were doing," she said. "He also made sure that the study hall and tutorial services were being used properly."

Saulney was the only one of Fowler's three assistants who did not resign with Fowler.

Brown said new NCAA academic rules will help schools like Tulane. The NCAA now requires a minimum score of 700 on the SAT or 16 on the American College Testing, plus a grade-point average of at least 2.0 on a 4.0 scale

"Our standards are already higher than what the NCAA requires, and the new rules will keep a lot of young men that the NCAA does not feel can do the work out of Division I," he said.

Coach's indictment upsets Vanderbilt trustee

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Vanderbilt University trustee said Saturday he would have "a bit of a problem" if strength coach E. J. "Doc" Kreis remained on the staff after being charged with illegally selling steroids to athletes.

Kreis, 31, has been on a paid leave of absence since January when the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation began the probe that led to a 97-count indictment against Kreis, area pharamacist M. Woody Wilson and a former employee of Wilson's.

Vanderbilt Athletic Director Roy Kramer and Chancellor Joe B. Wyatt could not be reached Saturday. Family members said they were attending meetings on campus, but would not say if the meetings were related to the indictment.

Kreis' attorney, Roger May, said neither he nor Kreis had been contacted by Vanderbilt officials about whether the 97-count indictment would change his client's status.

Hall Thompson, a member of the Vanderbilt board of trustees and a leading donor to the athletic program, said he would have a problem with Kreis's remaining on the university staff if the coach is not cleared of the charges.

Kreis, Wilson and Thomas Patterson, who worked at the pharmacy Wilson operated near the Vanderbilt campus until September 1984, were released on their own recognizance shortly after the indictment was returned Friday afternoon by the Davidson County grand jury.

The indictment charged that steroids provided by Wilson were illegally dispensed to students at Vanderbilt, South Carolina's Clemson University and Colgate College in Hamilton, N.Y., between June 1982 and January 1985.

Kreis was charged with eight counts, Wilson with 91 and Patterson with six. Each was indicted on one count of conspiracy and illegal possession of steroids, which require a prescription. The other counts involve the illegal dispensing of drugs.

Named as unindicted co-conspirators were 31 Vanderbilt football players, including 14 players on the 1985 roster; three weightlifters; one baseball player and one student trainer.

Head football coach George MacIntyre said no disciplinary action would be taken against the members of his squad named in the indictment. The team has undergone testing for steroids under a program begun after the TBI investigation and "we came out totally clean," he said.

Players contacted Friday night said MacIntyre had told them during a team meeting Friday afternoon not to comment on the indictment.

TBI Director Arzo Carson said his department's three-month investigation, which was begun in conjunction with a South Carolina probe into the death of a Clemson track athlete, revealed that 96,000 doses of steroid pills and 1,680 bottles of liquid steroids were distributed without prescription.

Expos' Gullickson finesses Cubs with control, 4-0

From Wire Reports

MONTREAL — At times in his major league career, Montreal Expos right-hander Bill Gullickson has been overpowering. But he used a different formula in beating Chicago Cubs 4-0 Saturday.

"I threw a lot of everything," Gullickson said after allowing only two hits before he was lifted in the eighth inning. "I kept the ball away from the middle of the plate, that's all.

"I got away with some pitches, and others were lined at someone."

Gullickson also held Bob Dernier and Ryne Sandberg, the fleet-footed Cubs at the top of the batting order, to one walk between them.

"Once those rabbits get on base, they can do a lot of things," Gullickson said. "Today, when the big boys like (Leon) Durham, (Keith) Moreland and (Ron) Cey came up, there was usually no one to drive in."

Expos catcher Mike Fitzgerald said it wasn't as much a case of Gullickson having his best stuff as his ability to pitch in clutch situations.

"When he had a 2-1 count, he was able to get the fastball over for strikes," said Fitzgerald, who had an RBI double, while Hubie Brooks, another ex-Met who came to Montreal in the trade for Gary Carter, contributed a two-run single.

Until Cey's leadoff single in the eighth, the only hit off Gullickson, 2-1, was a third-inning single by Steve Lake. Jeff Reardon got the final six outs without allowing a hit for his third save.

Steve Trout, 2-1, retired the first 11 Expos, finally allowing a single to Dawson in the fourth.

Tim Wallach opened the fifth with a double into center field and advanced to third on Jim Wohlford's fly ball. After the drawn in infield retired Razor Shines on a grounder, with Wallach remaining at third, Trout elected to pitch to Fitzgerald, the No. 8 hitter.

Fitzgerald lined a double down the right field line to drive in the first run.

Andre Dawson, who had neither a homer nor an RBI entering the game, made it 2-0 with one out in the sixth, sending a 1-0 pitch over the left field fence.

Brooks' two-run single made it 4-0 in the eighth.

National League

Reds 2, Giants 1

CINCINNATI — Eddie Milner led off the Cincinnati ninth with a double and raced home with the winning run on pitcher Frank Williams' throwing error.

Mario Soto, 3-1, fanned 11 in his second complete game, leading the Reds to their sixth consecutive victory.

Soto laid down a sacrifice bunt with none out in the bottom of the ninth to try to advance Milner. Williams, 0-1, fielded the ball and threw wildly to third base as Milner scored.

Soto allowed four hits and walked three. Soto blazed his way through the first five innings, fanning nine while allowing just two hits and a walk. Chili Davis drew the walk in the second inning, stole second, took third on a fly-out and scored on Scot Thomson's ground out.

The Reds tied it in the third against Jim Gott, who left the game in the fifth with a blister. The Reds loaded the bases on walks to Eric Davis and Pete Rose and Dave Parker's infield single, setting up Cesar Cedeno's sacrifice fly.

Rose had a single in two official at bats, leaving him 83 away from breaking Ty Cobb's all time hit mark of 4,191.

Phillies 7, Mets 6

PHILADELPHIA — Jeff Stone drove in five runs with two homers and a single as the Philadelphia Phillies ended a five-game losing streak.

Right-hander John Denny, 1-1, allowed eight hits, struck out three and got one inning of relief help from Larry Andersen, who short circuited a Mets ninth-inning rally during which they scored three runs.

Denny allowed a leadoff homer to Darryl Strawberry in the ninth, then gave up a single to Danny Heep and walked Howard Johnson, bringing on Andersen. Rafael Santana then grounded between the legs of Phillies shortstop Juan Samuel, who was charged with an error as Heep scored and Johnson went to third.

George Foster then grounded into an RBI fielder's choice, but Andersen fanned Wally Backman and Mookie Wilson to end the threat.

The Phillies scored four runs in the fourth to snap a 3-3 tie, aided by a close call by first base umpire Terry Tata. After Glenn Wilson and Steve Jeltz singled, Denny struck out. Samuel then grounded into what looked like an inning-ending double play, but Tata ruled Samuel safe at first.

Stone followed with a three-run homer off Ed Lynch, 0-1, and the Phillies added another run when Von Hayes singled and scored on Mike Schmidt's pop fly that fell between right fielder Strawberry and second baseman Backman.

The Mets scored two runs in the first. Backman lead off with a triple and Wilson walked. Backman scored on a wild pitch and Wilson eventually crossed on Gary Carter's sacrifice fly. New York made it 3-0 in the third on Keith Hernandez's RBI grounder.

The Phillies tied it in the third with a long ball display. Samuel tripled off the right field fence, missing a home run by inches. Stone then blasted his first homer deep to left-center, and Hayes followed with a long drive to right-center.

Phillies second baseman Samuel tied a major league record with 12 assists held by the Los Angeles Dodger's Junior Gilliam and Atlanta's Glenn Hubbard. The American League record is also 12, held by Don Money of Milwaukee.

Astros 8, Braves 1

ATLANTA — Craig Reynolds belted a solo home run and Jose Cruz a three-run double and run-scoring single for Houston.

Joe Niekro, 1-2, no-hit the Braves through the first five innings before Ken Oberkfell opened the sixth with a single to left.

Niekro, who allowed two hits, walked five and struck out one, was lifted with nobody out in the seventh when the Braves loaded the bases on third baseman Denny Walling's fielding error, a walk to Chris Chambliss and a pop-fly single by Rick Cerone.

Reliever Frank DiPino, who gained his second save, got pinch-hitter Gerald Perry to ground into a double play, with Bob Horner scoring from third.

Reynolds homered over the right field fence in the third inning, his first of the season.

The Astros then chased starter Pascual Perez, 0-2, with the three-run burst in the sixth.

Niekro opened the sixth with his second single of the night and took second on Bill Doran's single. Walling walked to load the bases one out later and Cruz drilled the second pitch from reliever Zane Smith to the fence in right center, clearing the bases.

Terry Puhl smacked a two-run double in the seventh after Reynolds singled, Niekro sacrificed and Doran walked. Puhl then scored on Walling's single. Cruz singled home the Astros' final run in the ninth.

Cardinals 4, Pirates 3

ST. LOUIS — Danny Cox fired a seven-hitter for seven innings and singled to trigger a two-run uprising in the third inning, leading the St. Louis Cardinals.

Cox, 1-0, outdueled Pittsburgh right-hander Lee Tunnell, 0-1, who yielded only five hits in six innings, but walked five.

The Cardinals took a 2-0 lead in the third when Lonnie Smith tripled home Cox and then scored on Tommy Herr's one-out grounder. The Pirates cut the lead to 2-1 in the fourth when Bill Madlock doubled, moved to third on Jason Thompson's groundout and scored on George Hendrick's sacrifice fly.

The Cardinals then went up 4-1 with a two-run sixth that produced their winning run.

Jack Clark walked, Andy Van Slyke was hit by a Tunnell pitch and an error by Pittsburgh second baseman Johnny Ray loaded the bases for the Cardinals. Ozzie Smith then singled home a run and another scored on the play when left fielder Doug Frobel fumbled Smith's hit.

In the seventh, Clark's two-out error on Ray's grounder wide of first base opened the door for two Pittsburgh runs. Joe Orsulak got them home with a double.

Cox, while improving his career mark against the Pirates to 6-1, struck out two and walked one and was charged with just one earned run before giving way to Andy Hassler in the eighth. Neil Allen finished up for his second save, working out of a bases-loaded jam that he had largely created himself.

Yanks' Ragtime holds off Tribe for Niekro's 286th

From Wire Reports

NEW YORK — The rallying cry of the New York Yankees' bullpen this year has been: "Come in, throw strikes, hold the lead and get to Ragtime."

That is exactly what the Yankees did Saturday, defeating the Cleveland Indians 5-2 behind a four-run first inning, capped by Mike Pagliarulo's three-run double. Starter Phil Niekro went five innings, left with a 4-2 lead and wound up winning the 286th game of his career.

Middle reliever Bob Shirley pitched three scoreless innings and, in the ninth, turned the ball to Dave Righetti, called "Rags" by his teammates.

"We do whatever it takes to win," said Shirley, who pitched out of a first-and-third, none-out jam in the sixth inning by getting Mike Fischlin on a short fly to right, striking out Otis Nixon and getting Brett Butler on a grounder to the mound.

"I could have pitched the ninth, but I did what I was supposed to do and Rags did what he was supposed to do. If I was facing Andre Thornton in that situation, things might have been different. But the guys I faced really couldn't hit the ball out of the park."

Righetti pitched the ninth and recorded his fourth save, but Pagliarulo's three-run double had made things easier for the Yankees pitchers.

"It appears that we are jelling, playing tougher as a team," said Pagliarulo. "The good defense we are playing is contagious, the infielders and outfielders are playing good defense and the pitchers seem to be enjoying it."

Pagliarulo's double off Jose Roman, 0-2, made a winner of Niekro, 2-1. Niekro's 286 victories tied him with Robin Roberts for 18th on the all-time list.

Omar Moreno started the Yankees first inning with a single, stole second, moved to third on a ground out and scored on Roman's wild pitch. After Don Mattingly popped out, Dave Winfield beat out an infield hit and moved to third on Don Baylor's single, with Baylor taking second on the throw.

Ken Griffey walked and Pagliarulo blasted a Roman fastball off the top of the right-field wall, scoring the three runners.

Rangers 5, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE Dickie Noles won his first game as a starter for the Texas Rangers by limiting Milwaukee to one hit over seven innings.

Noles and Brewers starter Moose Haas were locked in a duel through the first six innings. Haas retired the first nine batters he faced before Toby Harrah singled in the fourth inning. Noles retired the first eight batters he faced before Brian Giles was safe on a infield hit in the third.

Buddy Bell tripled to open the seventh inning for the Rangers, and he scored on Pete O'Brien's ground out to shortstop. After Cliff Johnson and George Wright ripped consecutive singles, Don Slaught hit a ground ball that third baseman Paul Molitor could not field for one eryor. Wayne Tolleson, who was running for Johnson, cored, and Wright raced home when left-fielder Robin Yount bobbled the ball on the same play.

Pinch-hitter Bobby Jones had a two-run single in the Texas eighth.

Bosox 12, Chisox 8

CHICAGO — Marty Barrett hit his first career grand slam, in the ninth inning, and Tony Armas drove in three runs as the Boston Red Sox pounded out four homers.

The Red Sox snapped a 5-5 tie with Rich Gedman's solo homer on the first pitch in the sixth inning from reliever Gene Nelson, 0-1, who took over for starter Tom Seaver after a 44-minute rain delay. The homer put Boston ahead for good and made a winner of reliever Steve Crawford, 1-1.

Boston and Chicago each scored two runs in the eighth inning before Barrett put the game out of reach with his grand slam, only the fourth homer of his career. The homer followed a walk to Jim Rice, Mike Easler's double and an intentional walk to Bill Buckner.

Greg Walker homered to lead off the Chicago ninth.

Boston scored twice in the eighth when Steve Lyons walked, stole second, continued to third on catcher Carlton Fisk's throwing error and scored on a fielder's choice grounder by Gedman. Glenn Hoffman doubled in the other run to make it 8-5.

The White Sox scored twice in the bottom half of the inning off Bob Ojeda. Ozzie Guillen singled and Julio Cruz walked, both runners advancing on a fly ball. Harold Baines drove in one run and, after Bob Stanley came in to pitch, another run scored when first baseman Buckner threw wildly attempting to start a double play on a grounder by pinch-hitter Oscar Gamble.

Seaver, who was racked for three runs in the first inning, also served first-pitch homers to Easler and Armas in the Boston fifth.

A's 6, Twins 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mike Davis hit his fifth homer, a two-run blast that gave him 16 runs batted in through 11 games, and Bill Krueger pitched the first complete game for an Oakland pitcher this season as the A's won their sixth straight game.

Krueger, 2-1, tossed a five-hitter and survived five walks in sending the Twins down to a ninth straight defeat. Krueger, a left-hander, gave up one run in the third, then held the Twins scoreless until Gary Gaetti hit a leadoff homer in the ninth. The losing pitcher was Mike Smithson, 1-2.

Davis homered with one out in the second inning, scoring Dwayne Murphy who had led off with a checked-swing double. Davis, the American League RBI leader, singled later and ended the day with a .385 batting average.

The Twins scored a run in the third but left the bases loaded when Mickey Hatcher grounded out and Tom Brunansky flied deep to center for the last two outs of the inning. Greg Gagne and Ron Washington opened with singles, Tim Laudner walked to load the bases and Kirby Puckett got the RBI with a groundout.

A double play grounder by Bruce Bochte in the third, following singles by Dave Collins and Carney Lansford, produced the A's third run. Davis singled with two out in the fourth and scored on Donnie Hill's triple into the right field corner to make it 4-1.

The A's scored two more in the eighth inning. Dave Kingman doubled and pinch-runner Rob Picciolo came home on an error by second baseman Ron Washington, who threw wildly past first on Murphy's grounder. Murphy went to second on the error, stole third and scored on a single by Mike Heath.

Mariners 3, Angels 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Ken Phelps hit a two-run homer, backing left-hander Mark Langston.

Langston, 2-1, took a two-hitter into the eighth inning when he gave up a leadoff single to Dickie Scho-field, a walk to Gary Pettis and, two outs later, a two-run double by Doug DeCinces. That brought on Edwin Nunez, and Ed Vande Berg got the final two outs for his first save.

Langston walked five and stuck out three before leaving. Pettis led off the first with a single, and Juan Beniquez singled with two outs in the fourth for only hits off Langston before the eighth.

Blue Jays 3, Orioles 2

TORONTO — Willie Aikens' sacrifice fly off reliever Don Aase with one out in the eighth inning scored Willie Upshaw and capped a two-run rally that carried Toronto over Baltimore.

Lloyd Moseby started the inning with a grounder to shortstop Cal Ripken, who fumbled the ball for an error. Upshaw then hit a game-tying triple into left-center field, and one out later, Aikens sent a fly to left-center that scored Upshaw with the go-ahead run.

Right-hander Ron Musselman picked up his first victory of the season while left-hander Gary Lavelle pitched the ninth for his second save. Tippy Martinez, who surrendered Upshaw's triple, dropped to 1-1.

The Orioles had snapped a scoreless tie in the sixth on Ripken's two-run homer against Totonto starter Luis Leal.

Orioles rookie right-hander Ken Dixon, making his first appearance this season and only the third of his major-league career, struck out seven and walked three. He was chased with two out in the seventh after Jesse Barfield stroked a single to left and raced to third when the ball eluded outfielder Mike Young for a two-base error.

Barfield came home on Tony Fernandez's infield single, and Damaso Garcia followed with a single to chase Dixon.Martinez came on for the Orioles and retired pinch-hitter Jeff Burroughs on a weak grounder to first.

Tigers 4, Royals 3

DETROIT — Lou Whitaker hit a one-out, bases-loaded single to cap a ninth-inning rally that lifted Detroit over Kansas City.

Trailing 3-2 going into the ninth, John Grubb started the rally with a single and Jim Weaver ran for him. Darrell Evans singled to center and Tom Brookens ran for him.

Royals reliever Dan Quisenberry, 0-2, got Larry Herndon to pop a bunt attempt to Steve Balboni for the first out. Then Chet Lemon singled Weaver home, and Quissenberry walked Chris Pittaro to load the bases for Whitaker. On a 1-1 count with both the infield and outfield drawn in, Whitaker laced a long line drive over Willie Wilson's head that landed near the warning track in center field to score Brookens with the winning run.

Willie Hernandez, 2-0, worked the ninth inning for the Tigers and picked up the victory.

Darryl Motley and Frank White doubled to spark a two-run second inning that put the Royals up 2-0.

Motley's second-inning double was a short pop fly behind second that fell between three players. Steve Balboni singled Motley home, went to third on White's double and scored on a bases-loaded grounder by Buddy Biancalana.

In the Kansas City fifth, Willie Wilson doubled off Walt Terrell, and George Brett was given an intentional walk with one out. Jorge Orta foiled the strategy with a single up the middle just out of the grasp of both Terrell and second-baseman Whitaker to score Wilson for a 3-0 Royals lead.

Darrell Evans hit a two-out solo homer, his first, off Gubicza in the seventh, and the the Tigers scored again in the eighth on consecutive singles by Pittaro, Alan Trammell and Gibson to make it 3-2.

JIM MURRAY

Extended playoffs mean 'real' baseball champ

It was Mark Twain who said, "Some of my biggest worries never happened."

But major league baseball is not buying. One of its biggest worries since the beginning of time has been that some unworthy team might one day wear the mantle of champion.

Look at the lengths the baseball guys went to guard against it. First of all, there was that season. It was 154 games long. No random sampling for them. When they picked a winner, they wanted it to stand up in the laboratory.

When the league expanded, people thought they might decrease the number of games played. Not baseball. It went to eight more — 162.

But, then, the powers-that-are put in five-game playoffs — and the purists needed smelling salts. The chances for a mediocre team on a roll to eliminate a classier contender seemed limitless to them, never mind that this putatively classless squad had prevailed over a 162-game season to get there in the first place.

BASEBALL WAS not like basketball, hockey or even football. Cinderella does not even make baseball's specs. This is no glass-slipper sport. There are no wild-card teams in baseball's Super Bowl.

Basketball plays 82 games to drive the ribbon clerks out — then lets the ribbon clerks back in. Only 3 of 11 teams are eliminated in one division, only 4 of 12 in another. Fourth-place teams have won the championship.

In hockey, the Stanley Cup is a lottery. And football has the — to a baseball man — obscenity of the wild card, i.e., spit-in-the-ocean football. Coin-toss championships.

BASEBALL HAD built-in integrity. It didn't pick its winner out of a hat. It picked it out of a caldron.

The game never recovered from the embarrassment of the strike year when the team with the best season record, Cincinnati, never even got into the postseason tournament. That's a recurring nightmare with the grand old game.

As other sports quickly proved, integrity is expensive. Under the old rules, baseball has had some "races" that were over by Labor Day. Some say Mother's Day. As it was last year in the American League East.

In the old Yankee hegemony, the Yankees used to clinch the pennant as early as Sept. 4, as they did in 1941. In 1936, they won the pennant by 19½ games. In 1939, in a 154-game season, the St. Louis Browns finished 64½ games behind the leading Yanks.

September was tilt month in old baseball. The weather was cold but the game was dead. You not only sold no tickets, you sold no papers or radio broadcasts. Baseball shrugged.

BASEBALL EVEN tinkered periodically with the World Series. Best four out of seven was not considered enough of a test. They went to five out of nine. In one of those years, 1919, they could have gone to best 99 out of 100 and it wouldn't have mattered. Arnold Rothstein was not interested in the duration, that year, just the outcome.

Baseball even gets nervous when one team leaps into a dot-on-the-horizon lead as Detroit did last year with its 35-5 start. The bulk of the evidence suggests that only a very good team could ever do that, but baseball's fear is that some team will win it unworthily by opening up a huge lead and then coasting in with inferior forces.

THE ONLY case in point that comes to mind is that of the 1970 Reds, who opened a huge lead on the strong right arm of pitcher Wayne Simpson, then had to back into the pennant when Simpson threw his arm out in the last half of the season.

When the pitchless Reds were able to win the postseason playoff that year, the game's philosophers never trusted the five-game playoff again. It was a crapshoot, not a tournament.

Baseball is a game so fine, it is measured in decimals, in thousandths of a point. It's not a game, it's an equation. It hates to be settled by coincidence.

It fears assault by the freakish, even though that has rarely been a factor in the equation. The team that won the most consecutive games in history, the 1916 New York Giants with 26, not only didn't even win the pennant, they finished fourth.

But baseball hates to take chances. The 1985 playoffs, and those following, will go to best of seven. The game cannot stand to see a 162-game season settled in less than a week.

At first blush, a simple addition of one win or two games does not seem that decisive. Unless you know baseball. Seven games permit the use of a star pitcher twice for sure, and maybe three times. History shows that great hitters may have four- or five-game slumps, but rarely more.

Does this detract from the World Series? Not for your genuine hard-shell baseball nut. He's never really trusted the World Series, anyway, to tell the truth.

If he had his way, a World Series would be 154 games. I mean, what do you want — a real champion? Or a fairy tale?

Fans oppose proliferation of 'disease'

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball fans responding by telephone to a survey conducted Saturday by NBC during its coverage of two games voted 38,432 to 27,676 against implementing the designated hitter in both the American and National leagues.

NBC conducted the poll during noon-2 p.m. with fans approving of the DH calling one 900 phone number and those opposing it calling another. Each call costs 50 cents.

An NBC spokesman said 70 percent of the viewers were watching the New York Mets and Philadelphia Phillies, a National League game without the DH, and 30 percent saw the Boston Red Sox and Chicago White Sox, an American League game with the DH.

The poll was conducted in response to Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's announcement before the season began that he would conduct a survey to determine whether fans approved of the DH rule.

Phils swap Holland for Kent Tekulve

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies announced Saturday they have traded left-handed relief pitcher Al Holland and a minor league player to the Pittsburgh Pirates for right-handed reliever Kent Tekulve.

Holland, 32, who was selected to the All-Star team last year, is 0-1 with one save this season. In seven previous seasons in the major leagues, he had a 32-25 record and a .269 ERA with 73 saves.

Tekulve, 38, is in his 12th major league season, all with the Pirates. The 6-foot-4, 185-pounder has no record this year, but in 722 major league games has 70 victories and 158 saves. All have been in relief.

Last year, Tekulve had a 3-9 record with a 2.66 earned run average and 13 saves in 72 games.

The Pirates also will get Frankie Griffin, a 25-year-old pitcher now with the Phillies' Class AA farm team in Reading.

Phillies President Bill Giles said the two teams had talked about trading Holland for Tekulve during spring training and again on Thursday.

"Holland did a super job in '83 and in most of '84," said Giles.

Tekulve is signed through 1986 with an option year in 1987, and Holland's contract expires at the end of this season, Giles said.

Giles said Tekulve, whom he had talked with, was elated about the trade.

The Pirates were in St. Louis on Saturday but Tekulve was expected to be in Philadelphia by Sunday, Giles said.

In 1984 Holland was 5-10 with 29 saves and a 3.39 ERA, but he was ineffective over the last third of the season.

The Phillies had been concerned about his weight and were trying to get him to shed some pounds.

Holland refused to leave the players' lounge Saturday to talk with reporters.

Eternal Prince all the way

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Migliore rode Eternal Prince to a second straight front-running victory Saturday in the $296,500 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct and said, "Today was his day."

Migliore hopes that the next big day for Eternal Prince will be Saturday, May 4 — Kentucky Derby day.

"It looks like Kentucky now," said trainer John "Butch" Lenzini Jr. after Eternal Prince romped home 2¾ lengths ahead of Proud Truth to bolster his status as a legitimate Derby candidate. He was timed in 1:48 4-5 over a track listed as good.

Wood Memorial

"He's shown he's a horse to be reckoned with," said Migliore of Eternal Prince, who is owned by Brian J. Hurst and George Steinbrenner III, principal owner of the New York Yankees baseball club.

"As far as the Derby goes, that's up to Butch Lenzini. I don't tell my trainer or manager what to do," said Steinbrenner, who has had a flock of baseball managers and has switched horses from trainer to trainer in the past.

Migliore said he had no doubts about the future of his colt, a son of 1969 Derby winner Majestic Prince who has won four of five starts this year and also romped wire-to-wire in the Gotham Stakes April 6 at

PERISCOPE—

The risk wasn't all that great. At Idaho Falls in 1981, Gonzalez was 0-2 with an 11.45 earned-run-average. In 1982 he improved to 0-1 with a 10.85 ERA.

Signs of the turn-around in a career were evident in 1983 at Peoria where the ERA dropped to 5.00 and there were even two wins in six decisions. Last year, at Redwood, Gonzalez was 8-6 with a 2.42 era and eight saves.

Going into Saturday night's game, Gonzalez had accounted for all three of Midland's victories out the bullpen.

STILL, Coleman doesn't feel, "you've seen the real Julian." He played winter ball in the Dominican Republic and since his team made the playoffs, he hasn't had any break in baseball and it shows. He looks tired."

Gonzalez relies on a fast ball, slider and a fork ball, which acts as a change up to a lefthanded batter. He also has come with a "riser", which he used to get the last strikeout in Wednesday's victory.

Coleman, a two-time 20-game winner while with the Tigers in the American League, showed Gonzalez the forkball.

"Before he went underhand, he really didn't have much future," says Coleman, "But now he's a prospect."

Although that delivery wears you out just watching him, Gonzalez says, it's "really easy on the arm. I never get tired."

Last winter, his manager was Terry Collins, who managed at San Antonio three years ago, and Gonzalez was his ace out of the pen.

The riser...where did he get it? "From Joe Coleman. He has taught me everything."

Last week, after successive relief victories, Manager Joe Maddon gave Gonzalez a night off. Because of the one-sidedness of the game the next night, Julian got another night off and by Friday he was chaffing at the bit. "I don't like more than a day off. I've got to throw almost every day to stay sharp."

Coleman, like Maddon, has been around this Midland team for several seasons, working with the pitchers, even managing them, and he has faith that the team's past credentials will catch up with it and fans here will have the kind of competitive team that was expected from the California organization.

Still, the waiting is getting on everybody's nerves...players, manager, coaches and, probably, the front office are all impatient to get the show on the road. So far, the fans are doing the best job of handling it. They learned patience with the Cubs.

COLEMAN, who broke into the majors as a 20-year-old, says the prospects in A ball are worth waiting for. "I'm going to Quad Cities (Midwest) from here. They have four pitchers over there who throw 90 mph-plus. They should be ready for Midland in a year or two. And we have some good strong arms again at Redwood."

Manager, pitching coach...how come he gave up managing and which would he rather do?

"I was the triple A pitching coach, and we had all these promising young pitchers in A ball, so they asked me to manage the team so I could work with them," explains Coleman. "The idea sounded great, but instead of being in the bullpen where I could work with the pitchers, I was in the dugout running the team. And I spent more time managing the team than I did working with the pitchers. I simply never had enough time.

"It wound up that I finally had to have a pitching coach to do what I was supposed to be doing."

Coleman had many of the batterymen who are on this year's Midland club, so he has faith in their abilities.

If Joe Coleman seems like a name you've associated with major league baseball forever, well, you aren't far off.

Joe Coleman first broke into the majors in 1947 as a 20-year-old with Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics. He spend most of his career with Mr. Mack, but did stints with the Orioles and Tigers as well.

"Funny you should mention Connie Mack. It was Connie Mack III who talked dad into moving from Boston to Florida to take over as Parks Director in Fort Myers. He just retired after 14 years and plans to spend his time fishing and playing golf."

Young Joe is almost as good a golfer as he was a pitcher, one handicap.

From 1971 to 1973 he was 20-19-23 winner for Detroit and as a pitcher for Billy Martin, he almost came to blows at Arlington Stadium. "Gee, that had to be six or seven years ago," he replied when asked about the incident.

The Tigers were playing like the Angels did last Sunday, errors all over the place. Martin came to the mound and there were words. And, later in the dugout, there were almost blows.

"I fielded a bunt and threw to first. Dick McAuliffe dropped the ball. Billy came out to the mound and accused me of throwing a sinker. I shouted back. It may have sunk a little, but it was a bang bang play. Then, he followed me from the mound, still on me. I dropped my glove and asked if he wanted to go at it right there.

"When we got to the dugout, Frank Howard had to keep us apart," recalled Coleman.

"Funny thing, and typically Billy, he got the reaction out of me he wanted and enjoyed every minute of it. A few minutes later, as far as Martin was concerned, it never happened."

Today Through Wednesday April 30 you may use STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE whenever you choose. Read the instructions below and see how convenient your stock information is available. On May 1, a new account code will be published each day in the Midland Reporter-Telegram's Business/Oil section. Each day this Code will change.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

1. Call the StockQuote Hotline number listed below. A computer voice will answer and ask you for the Account Code.
2. Enter the Account Code, then depress the star key (*) on your telephone. The computer will then ask you to enter your Stock Code.
3. Enter the Stock Code for the stock you wish quoted, the computer will quote the Ticker Symbol, Current Price and Net Change from the previous day's close.
4. After the stock is quoted, the computer will ask you to enter another Stock Code. You have two options:

A. You may request the quote for another stock simply by repeating Step 3, or...
B. You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more depressing the star key (*), in which case the computer will respond with the Price, Net Change, Volume, High and Low. The computer will then ask you to enter another Stock Code (repeat Step 3).

You may enter up to 10 requests per call.

STOCK CODES

All Stock Codes are based on industry standard Ticker Symbols provided by your broker or available from any Standard & Poor's Stock Ticker Guide. Codes are made up of a series of two-digit numbers, each representing one of the letters in the Ticker Symbol.

To determine the two-digit code for any letter of a Ticker Symbol, remember: The first key to be depressed is always the one on which the letter appears. The second key is always a "1," "2" or "3" indicating that letter's position on its own key (first, second or third position). EXAMPLE: "IBM" = "43 22 61"; "BX" = "22 92." Remember to depress the star key (*) after entering each code.

Brackens barely qualified as teammate Brad Cooper was just nipped at the wire.

Lee junior Quintus Hampton is going back to the region for the second straight year in the 300 hurdles, but lost his title as defending champion when he was beaten by Permian's Gerry Guster. Guster had a record 37.75, while Hampton had a 38.15.

Sophomore sensation Mike Garza qualified in both the 3,200 and the 1,600 as expected, but he was stunned in the 3,200 meters when he lost to Odessa High's Simon Martinez by a full 110 meters. Garza had never lost to Martinez before.

"I started too slow in the 3,200 but I wasn't going to let Martinez beat me two times in one meet. I just had to win the 1,600. I was a little embarrassed in the first race, I let it get away from me."

THE SURPRISE for Lee came from junior David Almand, who won the 800 in 2:00.64. "That was the first race I've ever won on the Lee varsity, but it was an important one. Everyone was saying I only had an outside shot, this victory makes me feel good."

The Midland High boys qualified only one individual for the Region I meet when Darrell Davis won the shot put as expected with a toss of 59-9. However, Davis was unimpressed with his own performance. He owns the state's best mark of 63-3 ¼ and wanted to bust 60 feet in this meet.

"I don't know what happened," said Davis. "The coaches were saying I was keeping by left shoulder down, but I've got another shot at the regionals. I'm way off my mark, but I can get this thing back."

The Lee girls' other region berths came from first-place finishes in the 100 hurdles from Tami Woodberry in 15.35 and Tangi Carter in the 100 with 12.34. Midland High's other berths came from Tina Knight in the long jump with a 17-7 ¼, giving her a return trip to the region meet.

BULLDOGS

AND WITH Mark Torres and Anthony Deande out for the year, Whalen was left manipulating a lineup that lists just 11 players total. With Gonzalesz already in the game pitching and De La Garza moved to short, when centerfielder Mike Stanton had to be removed because of back spasms in the seventh, Malacara, a shortstop was inserted into center.

"We're so limited to start with — flexibility-wise, when we lost those two it cuts us in half," Whalen said. "We just have to go beyond those limitations. We've gotten a lot out of these kids — more than I ever thought we could. I guess we just can't expect them to be wired up for all 22 games. These kids deserve a better fate than they've been getting lately.

"We've just got to play for pride now. We've got to get 'em picked up to play Permian Tuesday. We're liable to jump up and play somebody tough in these next two games."

Exotics take toll on domestics

BY RODNEY RIEHLE

Texas has more exotic big-game animals than any other state, and in some cases more than are found in the animals' faraway homelands.

The explosion of exotics, ranging from Addax to Zebu, has seen their estimated numbers grow to 120,000 animals of almost 100 different species, according to a Texas Parks and Wildlife survey.

While the influx of non-native animals has proven profitable to some landowners, who lease hunting rights or propogate the animals for resale, the impact of so many mouths to feed is proving detrimental to native wildlife and their habitat in many areas, says Charles Winkler, the TPWD big game program director.

Winkler contends any introduction of exotic animals should be undertaken with caution. "We have conducted studies on exotics and found that many of them, especially the more popular species, compete directly and effectively with native white-tailed deer."

While large animals such as eland, rhinoceros and cape buffalo may be a growing presence, the smaller deer and antelope may be having a greater impact, Winkler believes. "There now are about 18,700 black buck antelope in Texas along with 38,000 axis deer, 10,500 fallow deer and 7,900 sika deer. There numbers are growing by a higher percentage each year, and their overall populations are already at a level we had earlier expected for about 1990."

The problem of competition between whitetails and exotic deer was discovered during the 1970s in a study conducted at the Kerr Wildlife Management area. Three 96-acre pastures were used in the study. "One pasture was stocked with whitetails and sika deer, another with whitetails and axis deer, and the third with only whitetails as a control area. To sum up the results of the study, it could be fairly stated that both the sika and axis deer outcompeted the whitetails to the point that the whitetails were not able to survive."

Sika and axis deer and many of their kin prefer woody species of plants and also preferred by the whitetails, but they also have the ability to switch to grasses to supplement their diet when forbs and browse become scarce.

ATLANTIC SPADEFISH may be one of the Texas coast's most overlooked panfish. TPWD biologist Marshall Smith says the flat-bodied spadefish, often called angelfish, often congregate around piers and jetties and can usually be caught easily with a small hook baited with shrimp, cut bait and jelly fish.

"Spadefish inshore usually average about a pound, but larger ones can be found in large schools around offshore oil platforms. The state record spadefish, caught at Galveston jett in 1978, weighed eight pounds, 12 ounces...

Few anglers catch stingrays on purpose, but if you do happen to haul one into the boat or onto the beach, don't despair, count your blessings. TPWD biologist Art Crowe advises careful handling of the rays to avoid the stings from the spine-covered tail. "Once you have removed the tail, stringrays can be cleaned by filleting along the cartilage which runs parallel to the wings. Some people like to punch out round sectons of meat, which look and taste much like scallops."..

Spring time is coastal fishing time for many anglers. It also is a good time to be reminded of length and bag limits on two popular bay sport fish in Texas. The redfish limits are five per day, and only redfish between 18 and 30 inches in length may may be retained. Possession limit is 10.

Anglers may retain 10 spotted seatrout with a possession limit of 20. Trout must be at least 14 inches long to be kept.

TPWD's Jerry Rihn warns undersized or oversized fish should be returned quickly and carefully to the water. "If a fish swallows a hook, the best thing to do is cut the line. The fish has a much greater chance of survival than it would if you damaged its gills or intestines getting the hook out."...

Priceless resources being plowed, paved

By BILL SCHULZ

ATLANTA (AP) — America's wetlands, priceless nurseries and resting areas for the nation's wildlife, are being plowed under or paved over at the rate of 450,000 acres per year.

The resulting habitat loss will touch the lives of many Americans, depriving hunters and fishermen of their sport and seafood lovers of their table fare.

Nine million acres of wetlands were destroyed from the mid-1950s to the mid-1970s, and "we're fairly certain the major wetland losses have continued at that rate" up into the 1980s, said James Brown of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

That's a loss of about 450,000 acres of wetlands per year.

About 85 percent of the 9 million acres destroyed during the 20 years studied were in the Southeast, although that area has only 46 percent of the nation's remaining wetlands, according to a study done by Brown and John Hefner of the FWS.

WETLANDS, saltwater marshes, freshwater swamps and hardwood bottomlands along rivers, are vital parts of the natural food chain.

Coastal wetlands are the spawning grounds, nurseries and feeding grounds for 90 percent of the fish and shellfish taken commercially. The commercial catch of those fish was 2.4 million pounds, worth $500 million at the dock, in 1983, the lastest figures available.

Hardwood bottomlands can support two to five times as many game animals as surrounding pine uplands. The seasonal flooding of the bottomlands produces shallow, warm water areas vital to wildlife.

In the South, those bottomlands provide winter resting areas for the millions of ducks and geese which breed in Canada in the spring and provide game for hunters across the entire country in the fall.

Lakes and rivers near bottomlands usually have higher game fish populations and nearby lakes with no such natural nurseries, even when those lakes have been stocked.

The hardwood trees of those bottomlands provide the food, ranging from fruits and berries to acorns, to support larger animals, such as deer and turkey.

MOST OF the destruction is in the hardwood bottomlands and "the prime culprit is agriculture," Brown said. Flood control projects, paid for by taxpayers, are destroying wetlands, which are converted into soybean fields.

The loss of wetlands upstream creates the need for flood control projects downstream.

Hunters ignore obstacle course

GRAND JUNCTION, Tenn. (AP) — The path to Bob Milner's front door is a rough one, best travelled in a four-wheel-drive vehicle.

But the mud and potholes in the road to Wildrose Kennels don't keep hunters from bringing their dogs to Robert Milner Jr. to be taught obedience and the fine art of retrieving dead ducks.

And now Milner has written a book, "Retriever Training for the Duck Hunter," which is rapidly becoming a best-seller among outdoorsmen.

"I trained my first dog when I was 12," Milner, 38, said recently as he worked with a young Labrador retriever. "I'm not going to tell you how good he was."

REGARDLESS OF how that first dog turned out, Milner has earned a reputation among those who work retrievers — Labradors, Chesapeakes and goldens — for turning out obedient, tough dogs who make other hunters envious.

Milner grew up in Memphis, 50 miles west of his spacious log home near Grand Junction, graduated from college and served as an Air Force officer.

When he was discharged in 1972, he turned his hobby into a business and opened Wildrose Kennels, specializing in breeding and training retrievers.

"I like retrievers," he said. "Labs, especially. ... They're great dogs."

Milner spurns many traditional dog training methods.

"A lot of my techniques are based on a few psychology courses I had in college," he said. "There's a whole lot of erroneous training techniques out there that have been handed down from generation to generation."

MILNER SAYS many traditional trainers use too much force.

He prefers to use patience and an understanding of what the dog is about to do next.

"A dog works in the same terms as a wolf," he said. "There's dominance and subordination in the pack. Dogs aren't that far removed from the wolf."

So Milner quickly gains dominance over his charges, insisting from the start that they do as he wishes. The technique works with the most stubborn animals because Milner has plenty of patience.

The Labrador he was training recently balked at Milner's "sit" command, spoiling an otherwise good workout.

Milner fitted the dog with a pinch collar, a leather strap with a row of short spikes on the inside.

"It's not as painful as it looks," Milner said. "Dogs have a lot of fur and flesh on their necks. It's uncomfortable, but it doesn't hurt them."

As Milner ordered "sit," the dog again balked. He pulled up on the leash and waited. The dog wagged its tail, but refused to sit.

But Milner's patience was greater than the Labrador's. The animal finally lowered her rump to the ground and won release of the uncomfortable pressure around her neck.

"THE TRICK is to never let a dog deviate from your command," Milner said. "If your limits are too wide, sooner or later you'll get mad and beat the dog up."

Milner says he takes about three months to train a puppy in the basics of obedience and hunting behavior, including retrieving. A completely trained dog will require about five or six months at Grand Junction at a cost of $270 a month.

Old Man and Sea dream for real

ATLANTA (AP) — The pain's about gone. The skin, bill and other parts of the great fish are en route to a taxidermist. And Gary Merriman is beginning to realize that his "Old Man and the Sea" dream has come true.

Merriman landed a 1,649-pound blue marlin off Hawaii. If all the details check out, it will become the world record for any billfish and the fourth-largest fish in the record book.

Merriman, owner of The Fish Hawk, an Atlanta tackle shop, is an experienced angler. He said he knew he had a possible record fish, and that helped as the pain of fighting it built in his back, legs and arms during the 2¾-hour battle.

"My legs are still somewhat sore," he said last week after returning to Atlanta. "Heck. It's been 10 days "The main thing on my mind was I was incredibly nervous. I think everything that was going through my mind was, 'What can go wrong?' The hook could pull out, the line break, The fish could run under the boat and cut you off. You're looking at a lifelong dream. Losing it suddenly scares you.

"It's hard to realize the magnitude of doing it, even when you're a fisherman and have read about it all your life. I've seen 'The Old Man and the Sea' on television. Now, suddenly, it comes true."

Once the fish was landed, he said, "I just dropped the rod and fell back into the fighting chair and tears flowed for several minutes."

The record books contain only three great white sharks that are larger than Merriman's marlin, according to Mike Leech of the International Game Fish Association, the world-recognized fish record-keeper in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The largest fish ever certified as a rod-and-reel record was a 2,664-pound great white shark landed near Australia in 1959.

Merriman had to fight his fish alone to have it certified as a record, although the angler can have help landing the fish once the leader is out of the water.One larger blue marlin — the same breed involved now. The third day, I was pretty sore. I couldn't do anything the third day. It was my worst day.

in the struggle in Ernest Hemingway's classic novel, "The Old Man and the Sea" — has been caught. But that 1,805-pound monster was fought by several fishermen. The current record for blue marlin is 1,377 pounds; the record for black marlin is 1,560 pounds.

In addition, the fish may not be harpooned, shot or speared, even after it has been landed — meaning the crew must haul in a live fish weighing as much as a small car and packing more horsepower.

"It took six of us to pull the fish into the boat. It was dangerous," Merriman said. "The fish made a few flops and could have injured or killed someone."

Biggs scores TKO in sixth

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Olympic champion Tyrell Biggs, recovering from a bout with alcohol and drug abuse, scored a technical knockout in the opening round of a scheduled six-round heavyweight bout with Mike Perkins Saturday.

The undefeated Biggs, who weighed 228, posted his second straight professional victory when the bout against the 206-pound Perkins was halted at 2:50 of the first round.

Two other Olympic medalists, Pernell Whitaker and Evander Holyfield, also were victorious.

Perkins, of Hallandale, Fla., came out punching in the first round, delivering a left hand to Biggs' head and sending the Los Angeles Olympic super heavyweight gold medalist to the ropes.

But Biggs, a native of Philadelphia who now makes his home in Colorado Springs, Colo., came back with combinations to the head and body, driving Perkins to the ropes. Perkins took a standing eight-count before the fight was stopped.

Biggs, booed at first by the crowd because of his earlier reputation of not packing a heavy punch, got a standing ovation when the fight was stopped.

Earlier, Whitaker, the lightweight gold medalist in last summer's Olympic Games, used left jabs and combinations to score a unanimous decision over challenger Nicky Parker.

The 25-year-old Whitaker, a 136-pound southpaw, was the aggressor during the six-round bout, using right jabs to drive Parker to the ropes and corner and then following with combinations to the head and body.

Whitaker, from Norfolk, Va., increased his record to 4-0, while Parker, 134½, from Erie, Pa., dropped to 13-5-1 in the nationally televised bout.

Holyfield, a light heavyweight who won a bronze medal in the Los Angeles Games, scored a technical knockout over challenger Mark Rivera at 2:46 of the second round.

Holyfield, 176, of Atlanta, Ga., ran his record to 4-0 as he came out punching in both rounds and pounded Rivera with combinations to the head and body.

WITH THIS MACHINE, YOU CAN "...PEEL THE SKIN OFF AN AUDI 5000 TURBO..."

This impressive quote refers to the Volvo 760 GLE intercooled turbo and comes from people not easily impressed: the editors of Car & Driver magazine (see July '84).

In their tests, the 760 jumped from zero to 55 in a blinding seven seconds. A speed that places Volvo well ahead of Audi and Saab turbos.

The credit for this "warp speed," as Car & Driver describes it, goes to an intercooler which increases the engine's horsepower by 41 percent and torque by 35 percent.

But in the 760, power isn't only under the hood. There are power door locks, power windows, power sunroof, even heated power mirrors—all standard.

So come in tomorrow and test drive the Volvo 760 GLE intercooled turbo. And see what an Audi looks like from your power mirror.

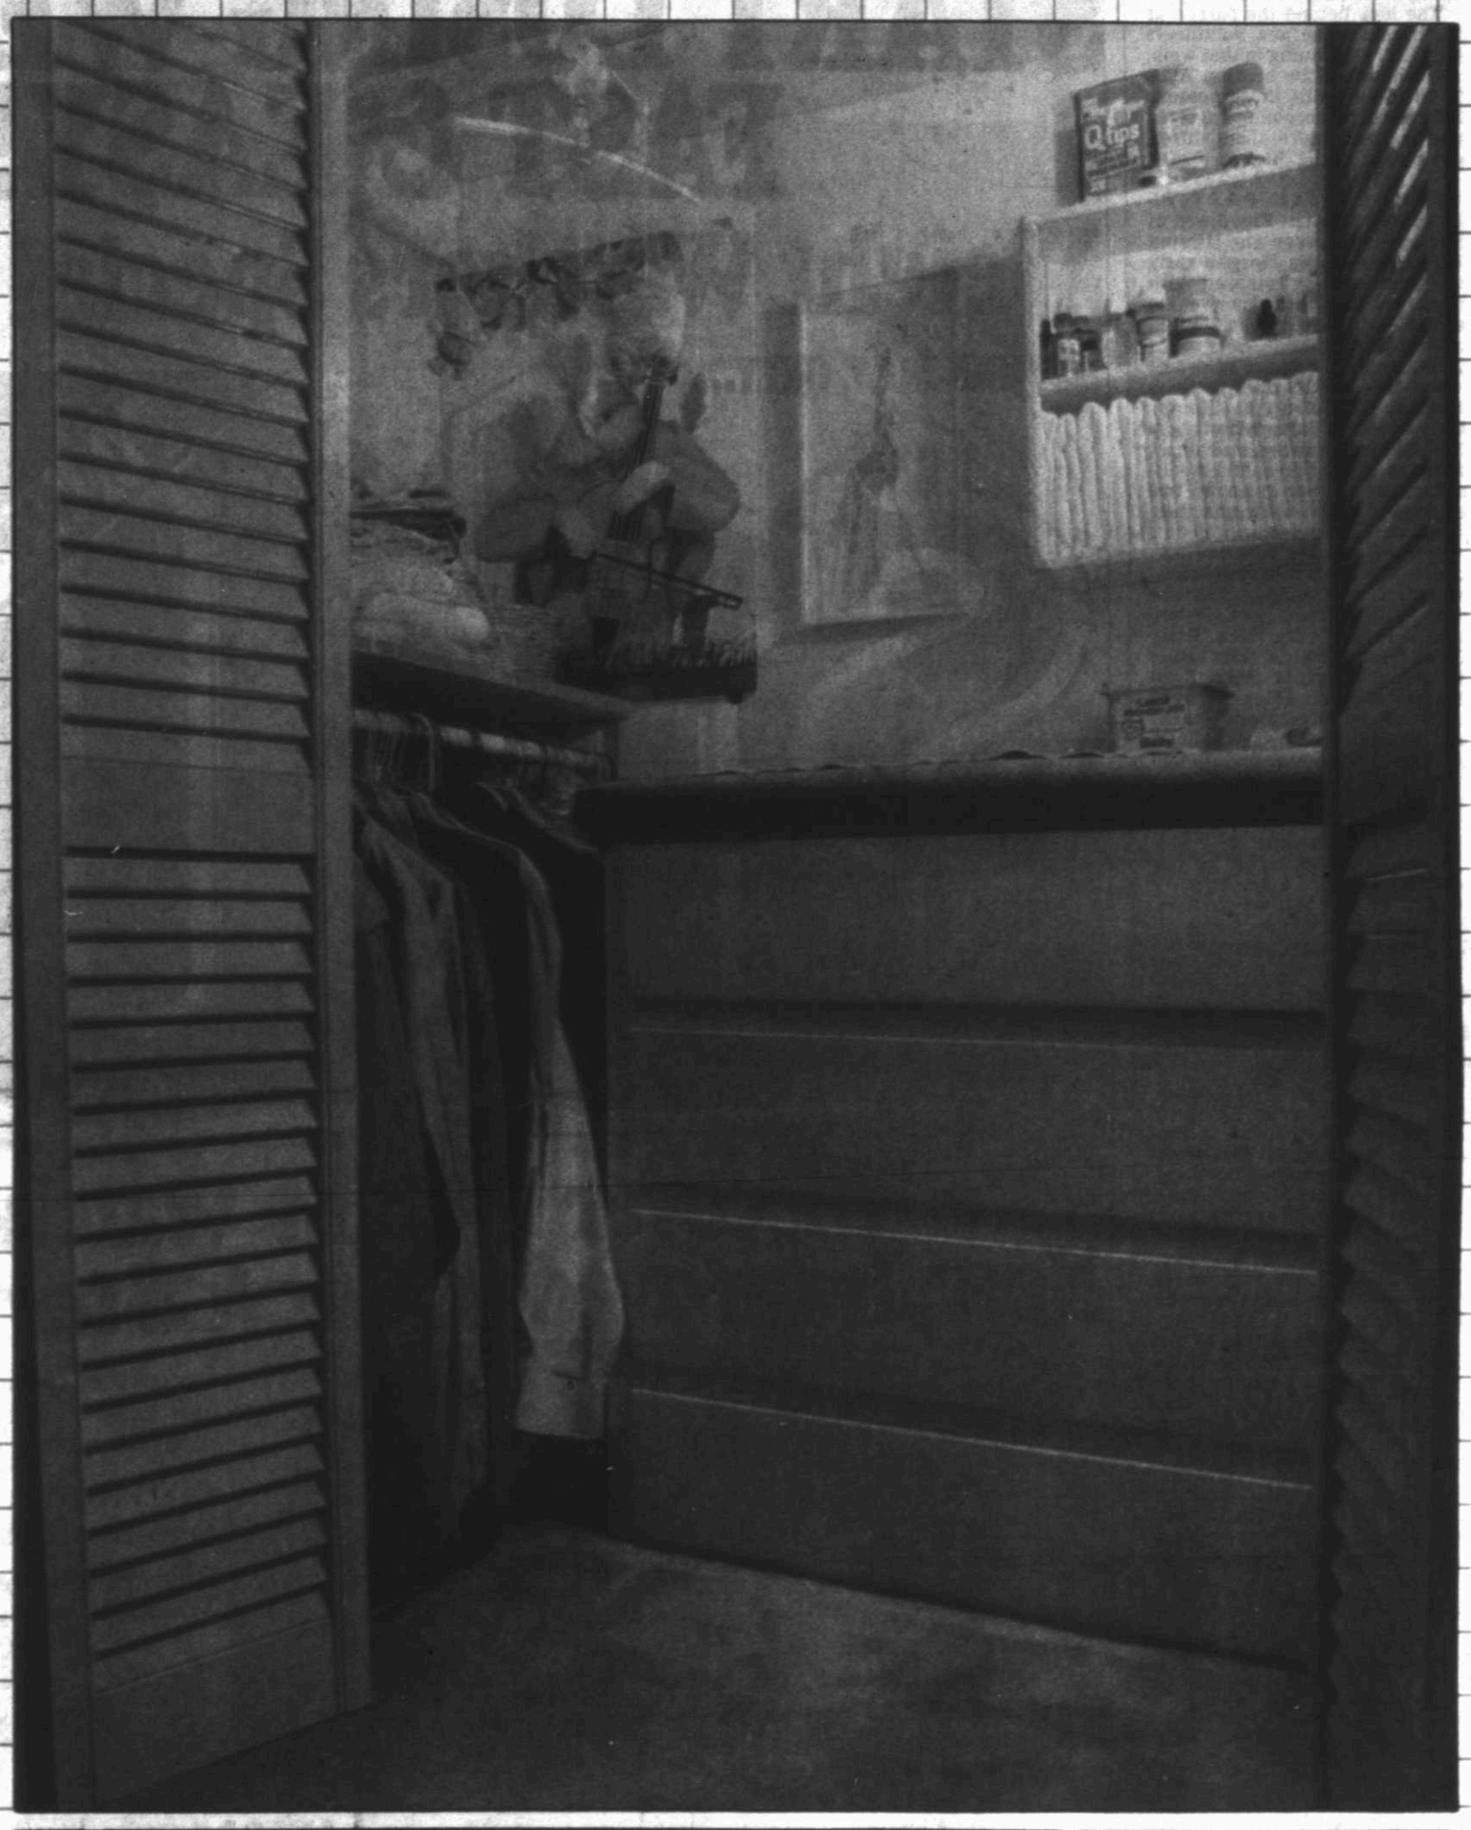
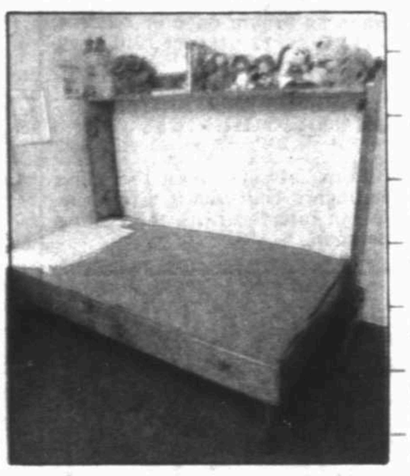
SPACE SAVERS

Making room for baby

Text by Linda Anderson



Emily Blonkvist converted the closet in her baby's room into a changing area, left photo, which opens more floor space in the room itself, bottom left photo. Midlander Ernest Schmeltzer deals with lack of bedroom floor space in a different manner. He invented a new bed, shown in the photo below, designed to store vertically against the wall during the day, and fold out into sleeping position during the night.



West Texans are proud of their area's "wide, open spaces." Unfortunately, this expanse of room is limited to outdoors, leaving many West Texans, like people throughout the U.S., cramped for indoor space.

In the average bedroom, there is no such thing as enough closet space, shelf space or even floor space.

But two Midlanders have figured out tricks to beat the space crunch.

Emily Blonkvist is the mother of 7-month-old Whitney.

The furniture needed in a baby's room can cover a nursery wall-to-wall. Mrs. Blonkvist decided to ease this crowding by turning the closet into a changing area for her baby.

The baby's dresser was combined with a changing table and moved into the closet. Two shorter clothes poles extend across the width of the closet at both ends, instead of one long pole running the length of the closet. All the equipment needed to change a baby's clothing, including diapers, diaper pail, lotion and of course clothing, have been arranged within easy reach inside the closet.

Mrs. Blonkvist, who credits her husband with the orginal idea, said she enjoys the extra room available through this furniture arrangement because "now I can have more things in the room that I enjoy having, like a rocking chair. I like to be able to close the doors off and have a more attractive room."

Much of the floor space is wasted in a baby's closet because baby clothes are so small and take up very little room on a clothes bar. This arrangement is also "ideal for those with toddlers because you can shut the doors and keep them out of things."

When the child is no longer a baby, the changing table area can be converted into book shelves or a television area or vanity table, she said.

Mrs. Blonkvist's advice for others searching for more room at home is: "First of all, clear out junk. Get organized; get rid of stuff. If you haven't worn something in two years, you probably arent't going to wear it."

Ernest Schmeltzer of Midland is solving his limited-space problem in a unique way. Prefering to be called a designer, because ""inventor' has such a little-old-man-in-wire-rim-glasses connotation," Schmeltzer is alleviating the problem by designing new furntiure styles.

Most families with limited interior space think their only options are moving or building on to their existing house, he said, when in reality they could have much more living space by changing their furniture.

Schmeltzer's project is the K-1 bed, a twin-sized bed which folds up against the wall when not in use. Constructed from oak and pine, the bed sets about 9¼-inches from the wall when folded into its daytime position.

During the day the bottom of the bed can be used as a cork board, a bulletin board, a chalk or drawing board, a mirror or possibly even have an attachment which will fold down into a vanity desk.

"It gives all the floor space use, all the wall space use, and there's shelf on top. This is not a bed a child will grow out of. The bed will always be a good usable bed," he said.

Schmeltzer, who has been "gadgeteering" all his life, said the reason for this new bed design was his daughter's small bedroom. "I couldn't fit a regular bed in the bedroom and still have room for her to play. I decided to build a unique bed. I always believe in functional furniture."

After designing the bed, receiving favorable response and deciding to market it, Schmeltzer said there were some problems to work out. "It was easy coming up the design. It was more difficult coming up with a design that would be accepted by the public. ... A designer has to remember you can't push on the public what you yourself like. You have to go with what they want."

The resulting bed has safety features required by law and requested by consumers, such as a safety latch to prevent a small child from lowering the bed by himself, and a counterbalance to prevent the bed from dropping into the night position too quickly.

The motivating force for the new bed is "for my daughter. She's been my inspiration. ... The other inspiration has been when people see it and are really excited about it."

Schmeltzer, a former geophysicist for Gulf Oil Co., is making his new design his career. "I believe in this project so much I live and I breathe it.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Amy Grimes, daughter of Sarah Lew and David Grimes, and her fiance, Bob Ehrlich Jr. of Austin, were honored at parties in Midland last weekend. They are planning a June 15 wedding in the First Presbyterian Church here.

Sarah Lew entertained for Amy with a beautifully appointed tea at their home on Saturday afternoon between the hours of four and six o'clock. The bride-elect's chosen colors, shades of pink, were reflected in the arrangements of spring flowers used throughout the party rooms and on the tea table. Bob's mother, Patsy (Mrs. Robert M.) Ehrlich of Austin, was a special guest.

Serving in the house party were the bride-to-be's sister, Anne Grimes; her aunt, Frances (Mrs. Jack) Matthews, and cousin, Susie (Mrs. Don) Howard, and the groom's sisters, Susan and Patty Ehrlich of Austin, along with a number of friends.

An "Old-Fashioned Brunch" last Sunday at the home of Elaine and Fred Gist honored the engaged couple. Co-hosting were Betty Jo Morgan, Edna and Mack Hibbitts and Schotzie and Charles Tighe.

Guests were served mimosas in the courtyard of the home as they arrived. Later they enjoyed a buffet of egg strudel, heart-shaped biscuits, tomato aspic with marinated asparagus, strawberries with fondue sauce and frozen chocolate mousse. At the expresso bar, they had their choice of Mexican or Brazilian coffee or cappuccino, served with whipped cream and various flavorings.

The home was decorated with large baskets of colorful flowering plants with Spanish moss.

MIDLAND HIGH SENIOR Shelly Stephenson, daughter of Nieta and Rod Stephenson, was honored recently with a graduation luncheon at LaBodega.

The hostesses were Cecelia (Mrs. Bob) Davis, Mary (Mrs. Ron) McFadden, Betty (Mrs. Bill) Sumner and Sandra (Mrs. Leroy) Wegner. They presented the honoree with a personalized toga towel wrap.

Special guests included Shelly's mother and her aunt, Judy (Mrs. Richard) Shelburne. Classmates attending were Kathe Arrington, Lisa Roper, Diane Harper, Stephanie Walker, Michelle Higgins, Tanya Davis, Kathy Jones, Billie Baker, Kristi Eaves and Jeanette Betteridge.

THE HAM HOCKS, Midland Community Theatre's organization for offstage workers, staged a most successful Volunteer Roundup last weekend.

The clever party, held at the historic Yucca Theatre, sported an Old West flavor. The "saloon" doors opened at 7 p.m., and the chuck wagon bell rang promptly at eight o'clock. "Grub" was served to approximately 175 hungry cowpokes from tables decorated with kerosene lanterns, cowboy boots and hats filled with flowers, and other western mementoes. The stage area was decorated with life-size cutouts of gunfighters, and a stagecoach with animated figures parked outside caused much comment. Red bandanas were given as favors.

Entertainment included a mock gunfight by the High Chaparral western store's "Texas Rangers" and an exhibition of country and western dance steps by Nancy and Billy Cook, followed by dancing.

Ham Hocks vice president Marilyn (Mrs. Neal) Allen was in charge of arrangements.

The idea behind the party was to "brand" some new volunteers for MCT. Continuing in that wein, workshops will be held on April 27-28 to acquaint those persons interested in becoming involved and learning more about different aspects of the theater.

PRENUPTIAL PARTIES began for Stephen Floyd, son of Midlanders Ginger and Jimmy Floyd, and Susan Morgan early in March and culminated with their wedding Saturday evening at St. Andrews Catholic Church in Fort Worth.

Beginning the series of events were two parties in Austin, a Mexican luncheon and "Honey-Do" shower at Jaime's hosted by Midlanders Frances and John Mills and son, Steve, and a miscellaneous shower given by two of Susan's bridesmaids and their mothers.

In April another round of parties began with a miscellaneous shower in the home of Raylene (Mrs. Dean) Smith here. Co-hostesses were Fuffy (Mrs. Billy Don) Green, Nelda (Mrs. Bill) Johnson, Virginia (Mrs. Bob) Jones, Martha (Mrs. Bruce) Pope, Gwen (Mrs. Don) Sparks and Marge (Mrs. Del) Woods. A kitchen-linen shower and 'Round the Clock shower followed in Fort Worth. Bachelorette and bachelor parties also honored the couple last weekend.

Festivities leading up to the wedding included a dinner party hosted by the bride's parents, Dorothy and Clyde Morgan, Thursday for early arrivals, the rehearsal dinner given by the groom's parents Friday at the Century II Club atop Texas American Bank, and the bridesmaids' luncheon at the Fort Worth Club on Saturday.

Out-of-town guests are being entertained today with a brunch at the Fort Worth home of former Midlander Kevin McCarter and his wife, Palmer. Co-hosting the party are Hallie and Dale McCarter and Harriet and Eugene Motter of Midland, Mary and Frank Sims of Shawnee, Okla., and Renee and Scott Rogers and Mrs. Betty Reynolds of Arlington.

After a honeymoon to St. Thomas, the newlyweds will return to Austin to make their home. Susan is engaged in fashion merchandising, and Stephen is an account executive with Malone-Hall Advertising Agency.

Americans clean homes often

Copley News Service

Where homes are concerned, Americans probably are the world's cleanest people, according to a survey commissioned by a manufacturer of household cleaning tools.

The 50-state telephone survey, conducted among a random sample of more than 1,000 adult women and men, revealed that eight out of 10 Americans wield a mop or broom at least once a day to clean their homes or apartments, while 37 percent use a mop or broom once or twice a week. Only 12 percent said they never use those tools.

Replacing windows requires cleanliness

Associated Press

If you use a glass cutter to cut glass to size for replacement in a window, always clean the glass thoroughly. Dust that is barely visible can interfere with the cutting operation.

Social kissing out of hand; rules necessary

By ERMA BOMBECK

I agree with Miss Manners. Social kissing is getting out of hand in this country.

What started out as an emotional embrace between families who had not seen one another in 20 years now has all the tenderness of a farsighted eagle feeding her young.

Everyone puckers and pecks these days. Starlets from the green room present their cheek to the talk show host whom they have just seen five minutes before. People at lunch hurriedly wipe crumbs from their mouths and bury their faces in your hair. Visitors to the sick in hospitals lean over long, white lifeless forms in short dresses and God knows WHAT they're embracing.

From sheer habit the other day, I nearly buzzed a man who came to change the thermostat in my oven.

The problem of kissing hello is twofold: First, we all do it or no one does it. Second, if we decide to do it, there have to be some rules.

There's a block of die-hard kissers who refuse to exchange lips with anyone but their mother and their dog. My husband is one of these. If someone wanted to give him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, he would refuse until he had been formally introduced.

I am shocked that kissing has continued so long without rules. This has created a lot of problems like stepping on feet, bumping noses, getting hair caught in braces, having glasses lock, lipstick in strange places and general confusion.

There is no need for this. If ships can pass in the night without radar, people can kiss without hurting one another. When you approach the kissee, give a quick appraisal of things that puncture: pens, credit cards with sharp edges, key rings, packages, etc., and mumble, "You look wonderful."

Then, stepping forward with your RIGHT foot to maintain balance, firmly grasp one another's hand and aim for the left side of the face. LEFT, that is important. Pucker the lips, close the eyes (to avoid foreign objects striking you blind) and whisper, "We must get together soon."

This is your standard greeting for someone you've never met before in your entire life and will probably never see again. If the kissee is someone you really care about, you'll know what to do.

ENERGY-SAVING WINDOW TREATMENTS

Once your windows are as weathertight as they can be, consider making an investment in energy-saving window treatments. A single pane of uncoverd glass can be expected to lose between five and ten times more heat than surrounding insulated walls. Even double and triple-glazed windows can still funnel surprising amount of heat from a home in winter. In summer, they act as a solar collectors and admit much unwanted heat. Fabric is an excellent insulator. It can cut winter heat loss through glass by up to ninety percent. Any type of fabric window treatment is better than none. A deocroator or designer can advise what would be best for your windows.

Time-sharing provides home away from home

Copley News Service

Owning a "slice of time" in a chosen resort condo unit is becoming an increasingly important segment of the real estate market in the mid-1980s.

Many people who thought they never would be able to afford their dream resort condo have discovered they can at least own a "time interval" in that dream.

In the United States, four states are leaders in the growth of time-sharing — Hawaii, California, Florida and Colorado.

Ski resort condo time-shares in Colorado have a strong appeal to a huge market of ski and mountain lovers. There currently are 47 time-share developments in Colorado — registered with the Colorado Real Estate Commission — and that number is growing.

"About 50 percent of our total subdivision applications now are being submitted by condo time-share developers," said Harry Reagan, deputy director of the state Real Estate Commission.

The time-share concept provides the opportunity for an individual or family to buy a specified time interval in a chosen vacation resort condo unit. The owner can use it, rent it or leave it to heirs like any other owned real estate.

It's a comparatively new and growing concept. Nationally, the dollar volume of time-share sales has mushroomed from about $50 million in 1975 to $1.5 billion last year.

It's a simple but workable premise: Vacationers could better afford to buy one or two weeks each year at a resort development than year-round ownership of a condo unit.

Today, most time-shares are being offered and sold at popular resort condo developments, such as Colorado's ski resorts.

Homes can be made more secure

Copley News Service

Like ball games, vacations and exotic foods, moving into a new home should be something to look forward to — the realization of an adventure you've been dreaming about for a long time.

Once last-minute emergencies have been resolved and you're finally unpacked and settled in, you'll probably want to rest and catch your breath.

Unfortunately, there's one more essential issue to resolve — security protection. Without adequate burglary and fire protection, your dream home could turn into a house of horrors.

Most home owners have items that would be economically and psychologically costly to replace if they were stolen or destroyed. Still, less than 9 percent of home owners own effective security systems, according to Jack Greenfield, a spokesman for ADT Security Systems, a company specializing in electronic protection.

"Given the additional facts that a residential burglary occurs every 15 seconds nationwide, and that those burglaries escalate into violent crimes 30 percent of the time when the home is occupied, security should obviously be the No. 1 priority upon moving into a new home," Greenfield said.

"Burglars do not enjoy challenge," Greenfield said, "so the immediate goal for effective home security should be four to five minutes of deterrence. A thief who hasn't gained entry within that time will probably abandon the attempt."

Following are a few simple steps that new home owners should take immediately:

— Install dead-bolt locks on all doors and windows. Spring-bolt locks can be opened easily with a plastic credit card.

— Secure sliding glass doors by driving a nail or bolt into the track or using crossbars or lift-off barriers.

— Replace glass-paneled doors with a solid door to prevent "reach-in." Be sure your doors aren't hollow or fragile, or a burglar could put his fist or foot through them. Replace doors in poor condition with solid-core doors at least 1¾ inches thick.

— To make sure windows can't be jimmied, fasten with screws or locks. Be sure to check basement windows. Use only window bars that are released easily from the inside in case of emergency but cannot be released from the outside.

— Use decorative or individual bars that fit around air-conditioning units to ensure that they cannot be removed by a burglar to gain entrance.

— Always keep garage doors shut. Place a padlock in the door's track and unplug electric door openers during extended periods away from home.

— Don't hide extra keys under the doormat or in any other place near your home.

Schools begin teaching home interior architecture specialities

Associated Press

You can draw a little, have a great sense of style and enjoy rearranging the living room furniture from time to time.

These skills once might have been enough for a successful career. Today they are a good start, but not enough. Though some individuals function without any particular educational credentials, today's emphasis on professionalism and cost effectiveness has created a need for special training in areas that once were lumped together as "the decorative arts."

As a result, college and post-graduate courses in interior architecture specialties are increasing. According to David Levy, dean of the Parsons School of Design in New York, today's challenge is to train specialists who can employ the most advanced technology in specific fields.

Parsons is one of the schools providing this training with a number of new programs.

Most recently, the school announced a new four-year marketing, merchandising and product development program that will prepare people for entry-level management positions in manufacturing and retailing of home furnishings.

Bright, easy-care teenager's room makes good use of attic space. Storage is plentiful in wall cabinets, baskets and a wicker trunk.

Attic functional for teens

What has four walls covered with posters, rock music blaring and clothing tossed in total disarray?

If visions of a teenager's room come to mind, guess again. Contrary to common conception, most teens today have very specific ideas about decorating their private rooms.

With this in mind, the parents of a teenage girl redesigned the unusual attic space of their home for her new bedroom. "The two key elements we concentrated on were function and flexibility," said Mary Dettle, home furnishings fashion coordinator for JCPenney, who coordinated the project. "This meant plenty of storage space and enough design flexibility to turn this into a guest room when the teenager goes off to college." The result was a bright, colorful room awaiting the personal touches of its occupant.

"Color can make or break a room," said Dettle. She selected a patterned but not overwhelming wallcovering and picked up the bright turquoise from the paper to paint the floors.

Custom-made reversible comforters, pillow shams and decorative pillows pull the youthful look together in coordinating print and solid color fabrics. Two fabric wreaths used as wall decor were fashioned from styrofoam balls and satin ribbons.

Twin brass headboards and brass floor lamps were probably the greatest single investment, but a wise one, according to Dettle. "Brass is a smart decorating buy because it is transitional — appropriate for this teen's needs now and charming when the room will be used for guests later on."

A doorless armoire takes on a fresh coat of paint and the personal touch of hand stenciling for a unique storage method.

Storage is of premier importance for children and teens. "Consider some relatively inexpensive ready-to-finish pieces you can paint in coordinating colors and decorate with stenciling. Wicker trunks and baskets are another economical way to tuck toys, books and even clothing out of sight," said Dettle.

Garage conversion makes compact but cozy house

No matter the size of the house, there are times when homeowners think it's too small.

And perhaps it is. Homes are built smaller these days in an effort to curtail costs. But in many cases the house is a comfortable size, but the owners are not making the best use of the space they have.

Making the best use of space was what the designers at Armstrong sought to illustrate in their conversion of a two-car garage into a small home or efficiency apartment for two people. Complete in every way, the garage-turned-home is full of space-stretching ideas that can be adapted to just about any kind of building or remodeling project by just about anyone.

This little home has nearly 700 cubic feet of storage space — as much as some homes three times the size. (The home itself retains the original dimensions of the garage: 24 feet by 22 feet.)

The home has an unusual diagonal floor plan. Its interior is divided into a kitchen, a living-dining-sleeping area, referred to as the "main living area", a den/office, a bathroom, and a utility room which functions as a pantry, storage bin and laundry.

Among its other attractions, the home has a fireplace, skylights, a greenhouse in a corner of the kitchen and every modern kitchen appliance. Manufacturers now make scaled-down appliances for just such situations.

There are two secrets to making a space seem larger than it actually is. One of them calls for creating illusions. In the garage home an open floor plan creates the illusion of extra space. Only the utility room and bath are fully enclosed with walls.

At night, a sliding partition (fixed to a track in the ceiling) screens the queen-size bed, which is in the main living area, from view. During the day it tucks up into its own closet or can be left out and fitted with a slip cover to serve as a sofa.

This garage-turned-home designed for two people is full of space-stretching ideas that can be adapted to many remodeling and building projects.

A dark color scheme and insufficient windows would have made the garage home seem unbearably cramped. The designers opened it up with skylights, a greenhouse, light blond and rattan furniture, mirrors and off-white walls, kitchen cabinets and counters.

A tile floor in a floral pattern flows throughout the entire home, drwawing together the various elements of the decor into a harmonious whole. Such unifiers are essential in decorating an open-plan home. Secret number two to strech a limited space is to make the furnishings serve double duty, such as the Murphy bed. Or triple duty, like the movable kitchen island.

The island has a pull-put chopping block for food preparation and 10 drawers for napkins, silverware, tea towels, etc. With the sides raised and two center leaves inserted, it's a 45-inch by 60-inch table for dining a deux (or even a quatre). Wheel it into the main living area — its own casters and it becomes a sewing or game table.

The supercloset contains shelves, drawers and clothes rods (six of them) for hanging, stowing and stacking an impressive number of garments. Even the doors have receptacles for stashing jewelry, scarves, handbags and other small articles. And the doors, mirrored on the inside, fold out and around to form a mini-dressing room.

The garage home is described in more detail in a free 12-page brochure, illustrated with numerous color photographs of the interior and diagram of individual projects like the kitchen island and supercloset. To obtain a free copy, write Armstrong World Industries, Dept. PYF17, PO Box 3001, Lancaster, Pa. 17604.

'Closetology' student offers cure for clutter

By ROB HOWE
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Some people earn degrees analyzing enlightened tomes in honored halls of learning. Neil Balter got his in a closet.

But his is a very special kind of degree. He's the first of a select corps of Doctors of Closetology.

Closetology is not the latest mystic sect; there are no brainwashed converts that worship small enclosed spaces. It's an attitude, an enthusiasm for creating order out of the chaos of the cluttered mid-American closet.

Six years ago, Balter started Creative Closets, a company that specializes in transforming standard single-pole closets into efficient, custom-designed storage areas. By segmenting the pole, the company's designs add a second, and sometimes third tier for hanging shirts or folded trousers. By creating compartmentalized bins and shelves for shoes and accessories, the designs introduce order and significantly increase the overall usable space.

Balter had been working as a handyman when one of his friends asked him to build some shelves in his closet. The design was apparently a success because word spread and he found himself reorganizing closets when he wasn't attending college classes. The turning point came when a professor convinced him to come out of the commercial closet and go public.

"I put this ad in the paper and, forget about it, all these people started calling," says the tanned, 24-year-old Californian. "I finally had to decide whether to continue school or go into business full-time."

Balter is one of those trim Southern California types you imagine hanging 10 and shooting the tube at Malibu, not renovating people's crowded closets. You even suspect that he's wearing paisley swim trunks underneath his dark gray pin-striped suit and white-collared, burgundy pin-striped shirt. He probably hasn't had a sniffle since he was five.

But good vibes and financial success aren't the only reasons this sun-bleached healer of cluttered corners is beaming. He's really high on closets.

Closetology seems to be an idea whose time has come. Balter, whose company, California Closets is based in Woodland Hills, Calif., has sold 54 Creative Closet franchises across the country, each staffed by trained closetologists.

"Trainees go through an extensive course in (spatial) design," he says. "Then they get a doctorate in closetology." He laughs at his own joke. He has perfect teeth.

"You've got to have a sense of humor in this business. ... Do you know what it's like to go across the country and spread the gospel according to closets?"

Though the Creative Closet company once constructed a $21,000 Lucite closet, it generally offers custom designs at reasonable rates; a seven-foot closet costs approximately $350 and takes only two or three hours to remake.

Since remodeling a closet for a friend in school, Neil Batler has founded a company with 54 franchises that specialize in transforming closets into storage space.

SHOP LONDON

BY JANINE GREEN

To me, shopping is an adventure.

There's little that matches the pleasure of seeing, smelling, feeling and wishing over the new things you'd like to make yours; of finding just the blouse to set off the print skirt you purchased at last year's end-of-season sale; of locating the perfect gift, something that says "I know you well enough to know you'll love it;" of comparing prices and knowing I'm getting the most for my money.

That domestic adventure, however, pales in comparison to shopping in one of the world's leading marketplaces — London.

Yes, London.

It's a royal place to shop, featuring not only noted department stores and the famous "shoppers' streets," but street vendors and old-fashioned marketplaces.

London is a place both old and young, modern and historic, fashionable and traditional. It's silk and tweed, loosely fabricated and closely woven, modern boutiques and businesses "founded in 1680."

From department stores like the famous Harrod's to Selfridges and Marks & Spencer, to marketplaces like Covent Gardens (arts and crafts) and Portobello Road (noted for antiques), London has it all.

And all is within easy reach of the visitor.

(Please see LONDON, Page 2F)

Portobello Road

LONDON

Whether you choose a downtown hotel, an out-of-the way inn or a bed-and-breakfast establishment, London is easy to navigate with its extensive bus and subway systems. Regular train service is available from outlying cities and, of course, a cab is just a hail away.

I was a guest at the Royal Lancaster Hotel, part of the Rank Hotels family. It is located on Lancaster Terrace, a short stretch of the leg from Oxford Street. Oxford connects with two other noted "shoppers' streets," Regent Street and Bond Street.

I managed to sandwich two shopping expeditions between sightseeing tours and side trips and managed thorough coverage of the Oxford Street shops. The time I spent in Regent and Bond streets was somewhat more superficial — great for color, not much for comparison.

AFTER BROWSING through several boutiques and specialty shops, I found my way into a fantasyland called Selfridges. I spent hours wandering the aisles of this department store, complete with bakery, grocery and butcher sections, coffee shop, confectionary and all the departments you'd expect of a major retailer.

If a "regular" department store was this much fun, how would I handle the legendary Harrod's? Only time would tell.

A plus for shoppers in England — and much of Europe, as well — is the American dollar's exchange strength. The first quarter of 1985, that rate has averaged $1.25 to the pound.

WHILE MY EXPERIENCE as a world shopper is not vast, I'd be glad to share some of what I learned:

— Do your homework. If necessary, sit down with a calculator before you shop. If you're looking for gifts in, say, a 10- to 15-dollar price range, be aware that's an 8- to 12-pound range. It will be less shocking when the credit-card statements arrive.

— If you're shopping for clothes, be prepared for sizing confusion. If possible, be armed with measurements or current American sizes. Most shopkeepers can "convert" them for you. But how can that shopkeeper help you find the perfect wool sweater for Aunt Sue when you have no idea of the size? (I confess. I bought a beautiful blouse with a cutwork tie that doesn't fit its recipient. It doesn't fit me, either.)

— Don't buy more than you can carry. If it won't fit in your luggage, you may find yourself carrying it through the airport. That's not a pleasant way to end a trip.

— Or, consider shipping large, fragile or gift items to your stateside address. Many stores will do this for you, some for a fee. You'll avoid both packing and airport problems. In addition, opening those packages when they arrive may well extend the pleasure of your trip.

— Buy British. I like knowing I'm boosting the economy of a country giving me the pleasure of visiting its shores. And, while fine goods come from many sources, I like having a "piece of the action," something "authentic," to give as a gift or keep as a souvenir.

— Pace yourself. Try to set aside time for shopping. Just like at the local mall, you'll find that comparison shopping is in order. These companies, too, offer similar goods at various prices. You might as well get your money's worth.

— Consider the cliche. While it seemed a little boring to bring everyone a wool sweater, it seems everyone I know wanted a wool sweater.

— Don't ignore the unique. Museum shops and craft centers, the china and linen departments of major retailers, galleries and boutiques offer a variety of items. Get a taste before you blow your budget.

— Try the outlets. London has them. Among the best known are the Reject China Shops, which feature slightly flawed but still beautiful china, crystal and cutlery. For others, ask at your hotel.

— Try the street markets. Few American cities offer a similar experience. Call it double duty, both shopping and sight-seeing.

— Wear comfortable shoes. I know that sounds pretty basic, but it bears repeating.

— Be prepared for the crowds. Londoners use their underground (subway) and sidewalks extensively. Listen for the "bobby's" whistle. Traffic is routed differently, and you wouldn't want to risk injury on foreign soil.

CAN YOU HANDLE one more confession? I never made it to Harrod's. I'd like another chance and would encourage you to try. Their annual sale is legendary.

When I actually started making purchases, I discovered that prices included a VAT (value added tax) of 15 percent. While that sounds a little steep by Texas sales tax standards, the prices didn't seem unusually high.

To attract your trade, the British government allows shopkeepers to supply a form stating the VAT visitors have paid. This form must be presented at British Customs as you leave the country and goods must be available for inspection. The British government will then forward you a sterling check, reimbursing your VAT expense.

"ALL IS NOT lost," says Susan Heneghan of the British Tourist Authority, "if tourists do pack items in their checked baggage." If they take store forms with them, British authorities will accept the stamp of a U.S. Customs officials or travelers may have the forms notarized on return to the United States.

In addition, Ms. Heneghan says, some stores deduct the VAT from credit card charges for users providing proof of foreign citizenship and intent to take the goods purchased out the country.

For a copy of "The Retail Export Scheme for Overseas Visitors: V.A.T. Refunds," which explains the regulations, send a stamped, self-addressed, buxiness-sized envelope to British Information Services, 845 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.

Let's be realistic. Would you ever go to London just to shop?

Probably not. But it is possible.

A STARRY-EYED COUPLE I met on the flight over planned to spend the weekend buying fabrics for wedding and attendants gowns. It seems the bride-to-be had seen just what she wanted while vacationing in the British Isles months before they set the date.

With overseas flights so easily available — American Airlines offers daily non-stop service from Dallas — shopping-oriented trips aren't as impractical as they might sound.

I'm ready if you are.

Flights to Iran, Iraq disrupted

By 'GENE BURKE
Copley News Service

TRAVEL ADVISORY: IRAQ — The State Department advises that because of warnings to international civil aviation issued by Iraq and Iran, air travel into and out of Baghdad may be disrupted. Some foreign flag air carriers have canceled their flights into Iraq.

Due to recent heavy fighting near one of the highways from Baghdad to Basra, the department recommends that people not travel to the Basra area. Travelers should also avoid traveling to any border areas with Iran and to certain areas in the north of Iraq where Kurdish insurgence has been reported.

Q: In a recent column you listed the type of documents needed to identify a passport applicant. Those listed included a U.S. passport, naturalization certificate, a government ID card and a valid driver's license. I am confused as I interpret this to mean a driver's license will be enough to obtain a passport. True?

A: No. A passport applicant must submit evidence of U.S. citizenship, in addition to a document of identity. In some cases, such as with a previous passport, naturalization certificate or certificate of citizenship, evidence of citizenship as well as identity is provided. An identity document must have either a photograph or physical description of the applicant and a signature.

If you wish personalized information about passport requirements, send your questions to 'Gene Burke, c/o Passport Agency, 11000 Wilshire Blvd., Room 13100, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024.

Burke is consultant to the assistant secretary for consular affairs at the State Department.

Shopping abroad not limited to rich

By BARBARA HUSTON
Hearst News Service

Buying clothes abroad is no longer just a jet-set privilege. With the dollar so strong overseas, travelers can almost justify the price of the ticket with clothing bargains found in London, Paris or Hong Kong.

For example, a cashmere jacket purchased in London for $120 in December can cost $400 when purchased here. Shopping in London can be a breeze, but Paris and Hong Kong can be difficult to navigate.

Language is a barrier in Paris, though more and more Parisians speak English. The two big department stores, Galeries Lafayette and Printemps, are easy to find, but the couture companies have so many different addresses in the phone book that it's hard to tell which one offers the best shopping.

Hong Kong has such a wealth of shops that the shopper may not know where to turn. In Hong Kong, even more than Paris, it is important to recognize good merchandise and be able to compare it with similar merchandise at home.

Some travelers love to search for bargains by shopping around on their own. But for the first-time or less-adventuresome shopper, there is a new wrinkle that's becoming increasingly popular: shopping tours abroad.

Such tours to France usually include visits to fashion houses that independent travelers cannot enter on their own. Also on the itinerary are Parisian discount shopping centers often overlooked by travelers.

This type of tour covers two kinds of French clothes, the expensive couturier fashions that run to four figures in America, and such things as well-made silk blouses that may cost $100 in a Paris shop but cost $50 to $75 at a Paris discount house.

Menswear is worth buying in Paris, too. A Pierre Cardin or Yves Ste. Laurent men's suit can be found for $150 in a Parisian retail store and for even less in a discount shop.

And most stores refund the French sales tax when purchases total at least 800 francs, which is less than $100 at the current exchange rate.

On the shopping-trip route are the following Parisian discount outlets which are open to the public: Stock Austerlitx, Mende's-Yves Ste. Laurent, Anna Lowe, BABS, Jean-Loured Schereer and Cacharel Stock. So are the couture houses of Christian Dior, Nina Ricci, Kenzo and Gres, the Hermes leather workshop and the Musee de la Mode et Costume.

If you have always wanted to shop Hong Kong but don't know the best places to go, a typical shopping tour can save time and money. In this city where major international designers do their manufacturing, shops are full of overruns, and some shops sell the manufacturers' left-over fabrics in the back rooms.

One popular destination is the Kaiser Estates on Kowloon Peninsula, which has three buildings of shops that include an Anne Klein outlet and sweater and leatherware shops. To give an idea of possible savings, a Helwin angora, lambswool and nylon sweater bought for $20 in Hong Kong costs $150 in the U.S. Ralph Lauren polo shirts for $5 sell here for $25.

What to expect at customs:

Every good traveler learns the U.S. Customs regulations before bringing foreign purchases back into this country. The first $400 worth of merchandise is duty-free, the next $1000 is charged a flat 10 percent rate. Anything over $1,400 is charged a 12 percent duty.

If you're going shopping abroad as an independent traveler in Hong Kong, buy the book Factory Bargains, by Dana Goetz, for sale in most hotels. Goetz, a Hong Kong resident, is preparing a second book, this one on bargain shopping in Paris.

DENTAL HEALTH UPDATE
Philip O. Warlick D.D.S.
A PARTIAL DENTURE

QUESTION: I have some missing teeth that should be replaced. What would you recommend?

ANSWER: A partial denture is probably the most economical way to meet the need to protect your natural teeth as well as your appearance. Missing teeth not only cause the adjacent teeth to drift, making them more vulnerable to decay, but they also create gaps in your mouth that may cause cheeks to sag as well as mouth and cheek wrinkles. When you opt for a partial denture the fee is usually based on the whole appliance and not on the number of teeth on it.

A partial denture is a removable appliance. You can slip it easily in or out of your mouth. It is made with metal clasps that attach to the nearest and strongest natural teeth on either side. It serves a very important need by filling gaps caused by missing teeth.

DEAR ABBY

Spouse's 'nose for news' 47 years too long

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: For 47 years I have been married to a beautiful, kind, affectionate, caring, concerned, bright and loyal woman.

On the other hand, for 47 years she has been reading all my personal mail, and never have I received a phone call that she has not listened to on the extension phone.

We have discussed this violation of my privacy many times in a calm and fairly amiable open discussion, but to no avail.

Please understand, her policing of my communications has nothing to do with jealousy or suspicion — it seems to be an extension of "what's new" — her keen interest in everything that's going on. No guile or meanness is involved.

What could I have done to improve the situation? I'm writing this at 4:10 a.m. — W. IN BOYNTON BEACH, FLA.

DEAR W.: If you had demanded your privacy, instead of discussing her violation of it in a calm and fairly amiable open discussion, perhaps you wouldn't be writing to Dear Abby at 4:10 a.m. 47 years too late.

How a kind, caring, concerned and bright woman can be so insensitive to the rights of her husband baffles me.

DEAR ABBY: Please warn people never to send cash to a charitable organization — even if it's only a dollar! (Small amounts are more easily pocketed.)

I worked for a highly respected charitable organization, and when I had been there a short time, I discovered that one of the employees who had been there for a very long time was taking money. Even though the giver received a receipt for the donation, a copy of that receipt to show that the organization had received the money was not kept.

There are many fine charities that are 100 percent honest, so I am not discouraging people from sending money; I want only to advise them never to send a dollar or two in cash — give checks or money orders.

I truly believe that if this letter is published, it will save a lot of money from going to places unintended by the giver. — EYEWITNESS

DEAR WITNESS: Most people send checks or money orders because they want a record of their contributions (for tax purposes), but it doesn't hurt to remind those who think it is more "convenient" to just stick a dollar or two in an envelope.

If this applies to you, Dear Reader, please don't stop giving — just stop giving cash.

DEAR ABBY: I have never seen this problem in your column, but I know I'm not the only person who has it. I have always been a very quiet person, and rarely talk unless I have something to say. However, my problem is not that I am quiet, it's people who introduce me and add, "She's very quiet" or "Maybe you can get her to talk." Then there are those who in the presence of others loudly ask, "Why are you so quiet?"

I would never ask a person who talks a lot, "Why are you so loud?" Yet, quiet people are constantly asked, "Why are you so quiet?" Abby, people who are quiet are usually shy and lacking in confidence, which is difficult enough to deal with without having it pointed out in public.

I am working on overcoming my shyness and am making progress, but nothing sets me back more than being asked loudly in a crowd, "Why are you so quiet?"

Please print this. We in the quiet minority will thank you. — THE QUIET ONE

Senior Citizen's Month planned

Midland Senior Center will celebrate Senior Citizens' Month during May, as part of a national observation.

Activities being planned will include:

— Senior Citizens' Appreciation Day from 9:30 a.m.-2 p.m. at Midland College. Midland Senior Center and Hillcrest Manor will participate as an exercise group. Varied entertainment will be provided.

— Open House at 10 a.m. May 10. Mayor Thane Akins will proclaim May as Midland Senior Citizens' Month.

— Dinner at 6 p.m. May 10 at First Baptist Church. Tickets will be sold for the event, which will be sponsored by Midland Parks and Recreation Department and Midland Senior Center.

— Second Assembly of the Arts Celebration. The Center will host an Open House from 9:30 a.m.-4 p.m. May 15. Crafts from the past will be demonstrated and displayed, including many nostalgia items. Visitors will be welcomed. LaVoe Peeler is chairman of the committee for this event.

In addition to special activities planned for the month, the regularly scheduled activities will also be available. For more information on any events planned for Senior Citizens' Month or events on the Center's regular schedule, call 699-5023.

Barber shop quartet to perform

The Permian Basin Chapter of SPEBSQSA Inc. Barber Shop Quartet and Chorus will perform following the 11:30 a.m. Friday luncheon of members and guests of the Ladies Association of Midland Country Club.

The singing group is headed by Mayor G. Thane Akins. Other officers of the chapter are William W. Collier, president, Kevin J. Schepel, executive vice president, and Tom R. Roberts, music director.

Midland's original chapter was formed in 1962, disbanded in 1979, then reorganized and was chartered as a new group last October.

There are two quartets within the chorus group. As a chorus under the new charter they are known as the "Sun Country Gentlemen." The Permian Basin Chapter, which includes Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Stanton and Andrews, is part of the largest singing organization in the world with more than 38,000 members worldwide.

Because of limited seating for this special performance, it is advised that reservations be made early by calling 682-4378.

Final exams 'care packages' sent

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP) — Pacific University has found a delectable and profitable way for parents to give their son or daughter away at college a boost to get them through their finals, while at the same time helping the Parents Club Scholarship Fund.

Helen E. Lewis, Pacific's director of university relations, sends an invitation to all parents of current students a few weeks before examination time suggesting they send $10 for a "care package" to be given out during finals week.

Mrs. Lewis and her crew assemble the packages containing home-baked cookies, as well as snack crackers, oranges, apples, caramel apples, peanuts, pepperoni, cheese, candy bars and fruit drinks.

The contents are purchased locally by Mrs. Lewis, who also buys attractive shopping bag-type containers for all the goodies.

The home-baked cookies come from the crew of volunteers, mothers of Pacific students living close to the campus, with Mrs. Lewis usually one of the bakers.

Rig counts taking an unseasonal beating

By MELLA McEWEN
Business-Oil Writer

DRILLING

The first quarter of 1985 has proven to be an exceptionally slow one for the oil industry, with both the national and Permian Basin rig counts taking unseasonal beatings.

Rig activity has fallen steadily since late last year, in its normal first of the year decline, which follows a year-end push to drill up budgets, but current declines are beyond seasonal and many are attributing it to the uncertainity over tax proposals in Washington. One drilling contractor calls it the worse downturn he has seen in the Permian Basin in 40 years.

Since the first of the year, the Permian Basin rig count has taken its sharpest drop since 1981, falling from 400 to 284, while the national rig count dropped from 2,787 in December to 1,898 last week.

Furthermore, Petroleum Information Corp. reports that permits for development drilling has fallen 21.4 percent in 1985. According to PI, 22,339 permits have been issued in the U.S. to date, compared to 27,013 permits to date in 1984.

Said IPAA President, Jon Rex Jones: "The declines in the rig count this year match the crash of 1981. Our records show a drop of 28 percent in the rig count since the first of the year. While some of this is seasonal, much of it can be attributed to uncertainity over tax proposals in Washington which would eliminate percentage depletion and intangible drilling costs for oil and gas exploration. Everytime we have uncertainity in Washington, it adversely affects the industry."

Ken Freeman, president Tahoe Drilling, said uncertainity in Washington was definitely the reason for the downturn in drilling.

Ed Thompson, executive vice president Permian Basin Petroleum Association, saod that even though oil prices have been rising it has not been reflected in drilling activity. He, too, attributes the dramatic downturn to the tax uncertainity in Washington.

Some like Ken Hedrick, operations manager for Cactus Drilling, plan on making hay during the downturn. "We're consolidating our Hobbs and Midland offices, buying equipment while its cheap and upgrading our equipment. We've been here since the 1940's, and we have seen downturns before. We plan on being here after this one."

Thompson said the tax question should be resolved by the middle of the year. He is cautiously optimistic, he said, that lawmakers will leave things the way they are.

Spraberry activity rides on quality prospects

Oil prices, flat tax proposal will affect trend development

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

ANALYSIS

Declining oil prices and a proposed tax plan in Washington that could eliminate up to 60 percent of outside venture capital for drilling has prompted recent speculation about the continuing good economics of the Spraberry trend, but one Spraberry operator says the trend will always be economical — to a degree.

While a loss of venture capital and lower oil prices would take its toll on the activity-generating Spraberry, as it would on other oil-producing formations and trends, Midland oilman Jim Henry, president Henry Petroleum Corp., says the trend will not roll over a die, as some might suspect.

Said Henry: "It will be as active as any other place in the Permian Basin by comparison, but activity may not be that high. It will be active to some degree, even at $3 per barrel, but probably not enough to notice." He said the availability of quality prospects, oil prices and events in Washington would be critical factors in continued development of the trend at present drilling rates.

"We will drill more wells in the trend this year than last, and expect to double that in 1986," said Henry, "as a result we intend to become more aggressive in the pursuit of good prospects."

A Spraberry operator since the early 1970s, Henry Petroleum completed 19 producers in 1982, 35 in 1983, and 47 in 1984, with a 94 percent success rate.

"We want to look at a lot more Spraberry prospects this year," said Henry, "because the more we see the more we can take."

According to Henry economic variables of the trend may change, but the constant that remains through it all is the need for a 3-1 return on investment. "We will have to get back $3 for every $1 invested, over the life of the field, no matter what the price of oil," he informed.

An index of economic variables produced by Henry Petroleum Corp. indicates that reserves must increase dramatically as the price of oil drops to sustain a 3-1 return on investment.

The firm currently drills about 40-50 wells per year in the trend, based on a current oil price of $26.70 (after trucking) and the availability of prospects with reserves of 80,000 barrels to get the necessary return. However, if prices were to escalate to $28-$30 per barrels, Henry estimates it could drill 50-60 wells, and would drill them on only 75,000 barrels. But, a decrease to $20 per barrel, would bring about devastating changes, causing the number of wells drilled to fall to 5-15, and needed reserves to jump to 110,000 barrels.

Please see SPRABERRY, page 3G

Industrial trade Show opens this week

The second annual Permian Basin Industrial Trade Show has been set for April 25-26 at the Holiday Inn Centre in Odessa.

Over 70 non-retail exhibitors are expected to display goods and services at the event, which is sponsored by the Permian Basin Purchasing Managers Association, according to George Elliot, association president. Several thousand are expected to attend the annual trade event.

"The purpose of the Show is to bring customers and suppliers together for the purpose of becoming better acquainted and exchanging useful information about products and services in the non-retail sector," said Don Perkins, publicity director. He said it would give many suppliers an opportunity to become acquainted with customers and to meet new customers.

Airlines, valve and pipe firms, office and business supply, communications, and publications, as well as various oil field equipment companies will be represented at the trade show.

In addition to exhibits and displays there will also be 17 seminars on a variety of topics ranging from a presentation on oil field tubulars, and effective presentations with visual aids to effect of deregulation on air freight industry. Several seminars on small business are also set for the two-day industrial trade show.

The trade show is open to the business public, and a business card is required for admission.

Saudia Arabia still power behind oil prices

AP ANALYSIS

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the United States recovers from the recession, oil consumption increases, and so do oil imports. They rose 7.7 percent last year, the first jump in five years.

Oil is still plentiful. According to Edward Murphy, director of statistics from the American Petroleum Institute, there are at least 10 million barrels a day in excess capacity on world markets.

Despite the glut, however, and as U.S. imports increase, Saudi Arabia remains a major influence on oil prices. They will fall if the Saudis decide to increase production and rise if the Saudis cut back further.

Once the principal foreign supplier, the Saudis now rank sixth, behind Mexico, Canada, Venezuela, the United Kingdom and Indonesia, in oil shipments to this country. But the Saudis are still a dominant force in the oil cartel and are not to be ignored.

More than a decade ago, the Nixon administration paid close attention to what the Saudis had to say about world events, particularly the Arab-Israeli conflict. At the same time, the United States tried to persuade the Saudis to use their influence in the Arab world to promote a settlement.

That process continues today. The Reagan administration, like its predecessors, is hoping the Saudis will promote negotiations between Israel and a mixed Jordanian-Palestinian delegation. The Saudis, in turn, hope to influence U.S. policy.

How the Saudis try to exert their influence is not very easy to trace. The rulers of the desert kingdom operate quietly, even within Arab councils. There they function mostly by consensus, taking middle positions and trying to nudge the other countries in that direction.

How they operate in the United States remains mostly a mystery. Unlike Israel, for instance, whose supporters are both persistent and vocal, the Saudis are usually low-key.

They have some experienced advisers, such as Frederick G. Dutton, a lawyer who was close to John and Robert Kennedy, and Gray and Company, the public relations firm headed by the chairman of President Reagan's 1981 inaugural committee.

Generally, though, the Saudis' style is very subtle.

According to a new book, "The American House of Saud: The Secret Petrodollar Connection," the Saudis have quietly translated their immense oil wealth — $661 billion in oil earnings from 1973 to 1984 — into immense political power.

The author, Steven Emerson, a former investigator for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, claims the Saudis, often through friendly oil companies and other firms eager for contracts, "spread the Arab message" with political donations, Mideast institutes and university programs.

The Saudis, the book contends, recruited "scores of illustrious former high-ranking government officials offering priceless prestige and legitimacy and an invaluable political platform."

Emerson says, for instance, the four major American oil companies that make up Aramco have conducted a secret multimillion dollar political campaign designed to sway public opinion against Israel.

The book quotes a fomer Aramco chairman, Frank Jungers, as saying the oil companies took political actions and funded pro-Arab groups because "it amounted to the price of doing business in the kingdom."

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Unusual alliance improves oilpatch influence

Odessa oilman Charles Perry, along with some other notable Texas Democrats, such as Kent Hance and Mack Wallace (both of whom may not be Democrats forever), deserve a stout pat on the back for their part in giving the oil industry a new dimension of influence in Washington that it has never enjoyed before.

All three of these Texans have been instrumental in the founding of the Council For a Secure America, an unlikely coalition of New York Jews and Texas oilmen.

"What this has done for us," said Charles Perry, president of Perry Management Inc., a local holding company for Perry's enterprises in oil and gas, aircraft and real estate, "is give us entrees into political areas we have never been able to penetrate before. "I have been going to Washington for many years and have knocked on a lot of politicians doors, but I feel this is about the most effective thing I have ever done."

PERRY LED a delegation of ten Permian Basin oilmen to Washington for a confab with Jewish leaders and congressmen from the Northeast to share viewpoints. The consensus of the returning Texans was that it was a very worthwhile trip.

Said Ed Thompson, Permian Basin Petroleum Association executive: "I thought it was one of the best organized and most beneficial meetings that I have ever attended. It gave us an opportunity to visit with a lot of people on the other side of the aisle."

Perry says the Council for a Secure America has a $300,000 budget, which will be used in a non-partisan fashion to promote the common goals of the group. Local chapters and broadened participation within the industry are the next planned steps of the group.

What are the common goals of the Council, and how did such a mismatched coalition of conservative Texas oilman and liberal, New York Jews, come into being?

According to Perry the common ground is a secure America through a strong domestic petroleum industry. The Jews are very much aware of what could happen to Israel if America becomes too dependent on Middle East oil from Arab countries, says Perry. "When America is put 'over the barrel' by the Arabs, Israel suffers. For that reason they don't want to support legislation that would cripple the domestic petroleum industry, and we strongly agree with them."

PERRY SAID the seeds for the Council were planted in 1982, when he received a call from then-Congressman Kent Hance, asking him to come to Washington to meet with Rep. Tony Coelho of California and talk over some mutual concerns.

Perry said he quickly learned in the meeting that Coelho, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, a position second only to Tip O'Neill, Speaker of the House, was on a political venture. He was searching for common ground or ways to bring independent oilmen back into the ranks of the Democratic Party, as it had been in the days of Sam Rayburn and Lyndon Johnson.

"I told him flatly that it wouldn't be any piece of cake because the Democrats had been putting the screws to the industry for too many years. He agreed that it was no easy task to keep a constituency when they have had the screws put to it, but nevertheless hoped there was some common ground," said Perry.

The common ground he finally found was the oilmen's and the Jewish desire for a strong domestic oil industry.

THE BONDS of a fledgling coalition were hatched in late 1984, when a group of oilmen, including Perry, and a delegation of Jews took a trip to Israel for a tour and first-hand briefing by Israeli cabinet members and the prime minister.

"I came away impressed that Israel is the only stabilizing factor in the Mid-East, and that the U.S. needs Israel there as an ally," said Perry.

Perry said the Jewish side of the coalition has three areas where it seeks support from the oil community. One is the continuation of $2.4 billion in foreign aid to keep Israel armed in the Middle East. Another is the establishment of a free trade zone for Israel and influence in restricting certain arms sales to the Arabs, such as the hand-held Stinger rocket launcher, which could have been used to shoot down airliners. He said he personally didn't have any problem with any of the items on the agenda.

In exchange the Jews will work with the Texans to shoot down legislation (such as the flat tax proposal) that could cripple the domestic petroleum industry.

THE JEWISH INFLUENCE will be most useful in the New York metropolitan area, which has traditionally been a liberal bastion of anti-oil sentiment. Approximately 75 percent of the nation's six million Jews reside in the area, and 14 congressmen there rely heavily on the Jewish vote.

Disabled miner says labor strife creates 'occupied zone'

MATEWAN, W.Va. (AP) — If you want to see what El Salvador is like, says Fred Deerfield, "just come down to Matewan."

"This is just like Central America," the disabled miner said as he played rummy with friends in a local restaurant. "Look at all those troopers out there."

Outside, a stream of gold-and-blue state police cars rolled slowly through the southern West Virginia community. On the other side of the Tug Fork, squadrons of Kentucky state troopers patrolled the highways.

Matewan, with a two-mile stretch of highway to Lobata, has become an occupied zone.

The troopers came in force several weeks ago, after violence flared between the United Mine Workers union and two A.T. Massey Coal companies targeted for a selective strike last October.

Since then, the people of rugged, isolated Mingo County, where the Hatfield-McCoy feud began a century ago, have become increasingly tense and polarized.

Almost everyone is armed, residents say. The local Massey manager says he never sleeps more than two nights in the same place. "Somebody's gonna get killed" is a phrase heard repeatedly in Matewan.

Many people have erected large posters in their yards, proclaiming their allegiance to the union, a major force in this area for 50 years. Meanwhile, the Massey companies — the Sprouse Creek Processing Co. and the Rocky Hollow Coal Co. — are under siege, protected by heavily armed guards who patrol behind 10-foot chain-link fences topped with barbed wire.

The highway between Matewan and Lobata, where the companies are located, is a "no man's land." Everybody seems to be watching everybody else; uniformed state troopers and striking miners with walkie-talkies stare at passing motorists.

Atop the coal company buildings, big motorized cameras watch the highway.

"It's almost like civil war," said Robert McCoy, the mayor of Matewan, the site of a legendary gunfight between union supporters and imported coal company guards in the early 1920s. "Everybody is sucked into it and a lot of people are caught in the middle; people are fighting for their livelihoods."

The UMW contends that Massey, with its network of subsidiaries, should negotiate a single contract. Union officials contend that Massey currently makes a practice of retaliating against subsidiaries that vote for unionization by shutting them down, then re-opening a nearby idle mine under a new name as a non-union operation. Employees of the old mines, forced to turn to the new Massey operations because of the region's 20 percent unemployment rate, are treated as new hires, with a corresponding loss of seniority and benefits, the union says.

About 3,000 miners are idled by the strike, which is aimed at Massey subsidiaries in West Virginia, Kentucky and Pennsylvania. The strike has affected about 40 percent of Massey's operations.

There have been no reports of union employees returning to work. Massey has hired non-union employees at some affected operations and has advertised its intention to hire strike-breakers in southern West Virginia.

Bob Phalen, an organizer with UMW District 17, said some Massey mines pay more than the wages called for in the UMW's national contract, others pay less. The contract sets the hourly wage at $12.77 for an entry-level miner and $14.41 for a top-rated miner.

"If they shut down a mine and a guy manages to get a job at another (Massey operation), his wages may come down. At some places they've offered as little as $4 an hour," Phalen said. "But the really big question is whether he will have a job at all."

McCoy said the dispute had touched every home, every business and every institution in this land of steep, scarred mountains, garbage-strewn streams and winding, crowded hollows. The mayor said he had tried to remain neutral but had begun leaning toward the union.

"Massey has been good to our community," he said. "The company has provided jobs and a big payroll; it has donated a fire truck and a ballfield. But, whatever Massey's motives are, whether or not it wants to break the union like people say, this situation simply has gone too far and has caused too much pain and hardship."

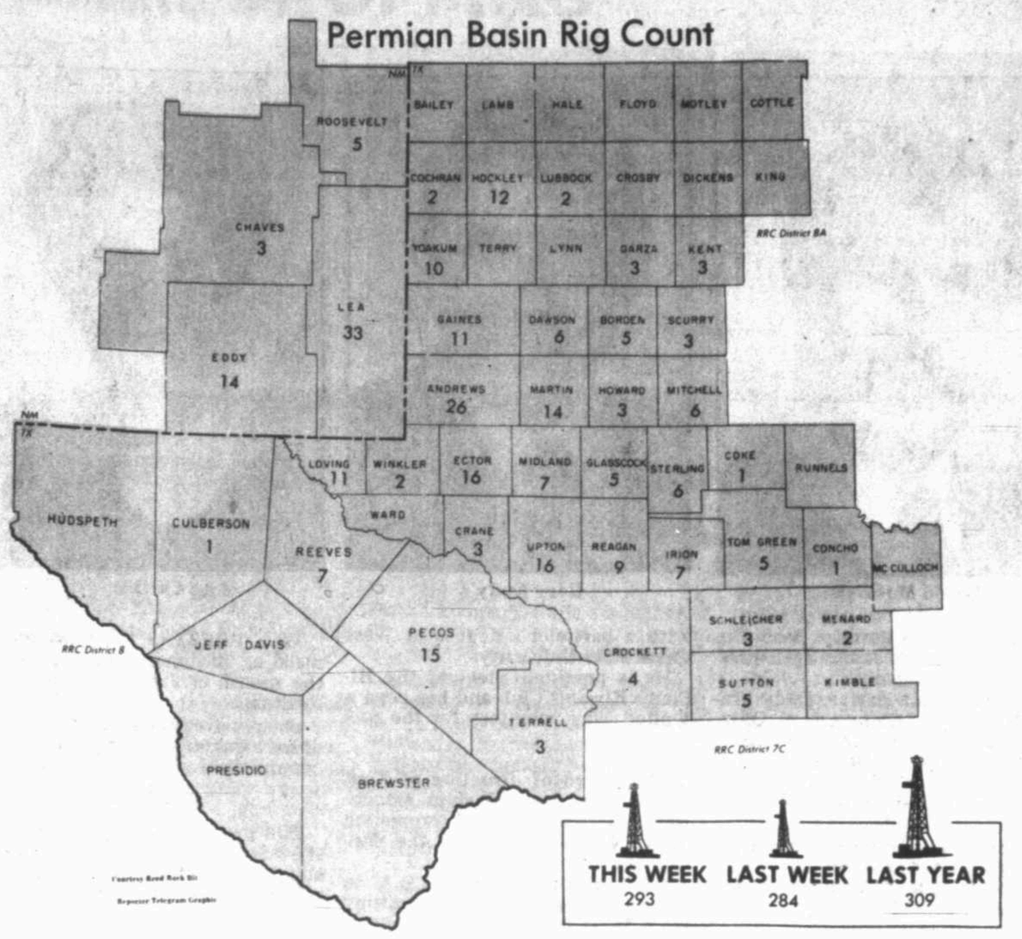
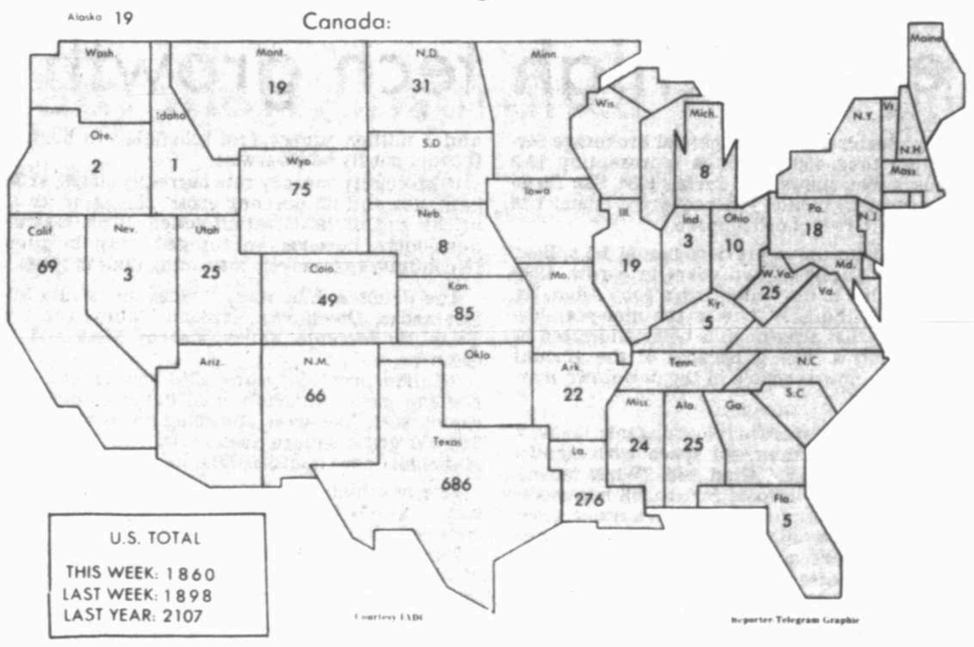
Permian Basin Rig Count



U.S. Rig Count



Permian Basin rig count rises

The Permian Basin rig count rallied this week while the U.S. rig count continued to slip lower.

In the Permian Basin, Midland County gained three rigs, putting the number of rigs at seven this week. Ector County held steady at 16 rigs for a third week. Glasscock County lost one rig, leaving five rigs at work.

Four rigs moved out of Andrews County, leaving a total of 26 rigs within county lines. Lea County, the most active county in the Permian Basin, added two rigs to the total, putting 33 rigs to work in the county.

For a second week, there was no activity in Ward County.

For the week, the rig count is 293. A week ago the count was 284. A year ago the count was 309.

While the Permian Basin rig count increased, the state of Texas continued to see rigs shutting down. This week, there were 686 rigs working in the state, three less than last week. New Mexico lost three rigs, putting 66 to work in the state. Oklahoma added seven rigs, putting the count at 278. Eight rigs shut down in Louisiana, leaving 276 working.

Alaska dropped two rigs, leaving 19 working this week. Four rigs shut down in California, for a total of 69 this week. Canada lost 53 rigs in the count, for a total of 121 this week.

For the week, the rig count is 1,860. A week ago the count was 1,898. A year ago the count was 2,107.

Six governors ask Washington for share of offshore revenues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six governors have asked the Interior Department for a 37.5 percent share of all offshore oil revenues from tracts adjacent to state waters, a proposal that would give seven states more than $2.4 billion from past production, the department said today.

The proposal is a counter to one made last year by then-Secretary William P. Clark to give the states one-sixth of the up-front bonus and annual acreage rental paid by oil companies, but nothing from the production royalties.

Seven states — California, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Alaska, and Florida — and the federal government have been trying to agree on the division of revenues from tracts adjacent to state tracts since 1978.

Before that, the states got nothing from those waters. Congress then decided they should get a share because oil fields frequently overlap the state-federal boundary. Congress never specified the split, saying only that it should be "fair and equitable."

As of last Sept. 30, $6.4 billion had accumulated in an interest-bearing escrow account in the Treasury awaiting an agreement. Thirty-seven and one-half percent of that would be $2.4 billion.

California Gov. George Duekmejian did not join the governors of the other six states in the 37.5 percent proposal.

No state-by-state breakdown of what each state would get under either the governors' proposal or Clark's proposal was immediately available.

Oil worker awarded $12 million

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston man who suffered severe brain damage when a helicopter rotor struck his head has been awarded an estimated $12 million in the settlement of a lawsuit.

The settlement, filed Monday in state district court, includes an initial $1.8 million for Otho Darrell Murphy, 41, who was injured on an oil drilling platform off Corpus Christi in March 1982.

Named as defendants were the helicopter's manufacturer, its owner and an oil exploration company.

Murphy, his wife and three children are expected to receive $12 million over the next 30 years, David L. Perry, a Corpus Christi lawyer representing the Murphy family said.

"He (Murphy) is for all intents and purposes a conscious vegetable," Perry said.

One side of Murphy's brain was removed surgically after the accident. He now uses a wheelchair, is paralyzed on the right side and cannot speak intelligibly, Perry said.

Defendants include Petroleum Helicopters Inc., Bell Helicopter and Transco Exploration Co., Perry said.

SPRABERRY

Henry said the 100,000 barrels prospects were few and far between. Of the 47 wells drilled by his firm last year only two were over 100,000 barrels, and so far this quarter only one has developed into a 100,000-plus well.

All of these estimates are based on a 2,000:1 gas-oil ratio, with gas sales helping with payout and operating cost.

"This is how oil prices alone will affect our activity in the Spraberry," Henry said, "if the flat tax bill is passed, it's negative impact would be on top of this, cutting activity by another 75-100 percent."

RIG COUNT

Now that April 15 has passed, and it looks like nothing is going to happen until later, say next year, investors should be more willing to invest in oil and gas.

Like Thompson, Freeman said he believes any changes in the tax code will be remedial, and he doesn't expect much happening between now and the end of the year. He predicted that activity should rise by May or June and be about like last year. "Of course," he observed, "we're playing a cat and mouse game. We don't know what's going on in Washington and the world scene." If something happens in the Middle East to affect imports, the Permian Basin could see another boom. Or, Freeman, noted, if oil goes to $20 a barrel, everthing could shut down.

IPAA head Jones said it would be interesting to see what happens to the rig count between now and the remainder of the year. "This is normally the time of the year we would expect some upturn in activity," he said.

Corporate profits off in final quarter 1984

WASHINGTON (AP) — After-tax corporate profits fell 0.5 percent in the final three months of 1984, marking the third consecutive quarter that profits edged lower, the government reported Thursday.

Bell Petroleum elects DeGough board member

E. E. Runyan, Chairman of the Board of Directors of Bell Petroleum Services, announced that at a regular meeting of the Bell Board on February 21, 1985, Kirby DeGough, Vice President of Operations of the Co., was elected to the Bell Board of Directors.

DeGough replaces Jack Simpson, a long-time Bell Director who recently resigned to devote his full time to his non-oil interests in the Austin area. Runyan stated that although the Company would miss the continued services of Jack Simpson, the Board was delighted to have a candidate the quality of Kirby DeGough available to fill the vacancy.

DeGough joined Bell in February 1983 and assumed operational control of Bell Petroleum Surveys. Even during the period of declining industry sales and profit, DeGough was able to not only return Bell Petroleum Surveys to profitability, but sustain a growth rate in excess of 60%. The performance of Bell Petroleum Surveys has been a major factor in Bell's ability to cope with the continuing slump, and enjoy strong sales and cash flow. DeGough's plan of selected expansion has led to successful new operations in Oklahoma, Texas and Illinois.

Prior to joining Bell Petroleum Services, DeGough worked for over thirty years with N. L. McCullough. He held positions of Area and Division Manager in both and open and cased hole logging services.

Pacific Texas signs contract for $150 million

LONG BEACH, CA. — Pacific Texas Pipeline Co. has awarded a $150 million contract to California Steel Industries, Inc., for supplying more than 500 miles of 42" pipe for its 1,026-mile California-to-Midland pipeline. The announcement was made by Pacific Texas Pipeline President Cecil R. Owens at its Long Beach, Ca., headquarters.

According to Owens, California Steel Industries will participate in a joint venture with Kaiser Steel Corp. in providing this pipe, which is one of the largest pipe contracts ever awarded a domestic steel supplier.

California Steel Industries will roll the steel for the pipe from its Fontana, Ca., plants, and it will then be transported to Kaiser's Napa, Ca., pipe fabrication facility.

The contract calls for California Steel Industries to provide approximately 50 percent of the total amount of pipe required for the pipeline. Total steel tonnage for the contract amounts to more than 270,000 tons.

Last December, Pacific Texas Pipeline announced a similar $150 million contract award to U. S. Steel, who will provide the balance of the pipeline required for the total project.

It is expected that both U. S. Steel and California Steel Industries will begin milling pipe for the project in the fall, 1985, with deliveries scheduled for late 1985 or early 1986.

The pipeline will provide transportation of up to 900,000 barrels per day of crude oil from a receiving terminal in the Port of Los Angeles. It will also accommodate oil from California fields. The pipeline will stretch from Los Angeles to Midland, Texas, where it will connect with other pipelines leading to Gulf Coast and eastern United States refineries.

The Pacific Texas pipeline will be completed in early 1987.

Five companies fined by RRC

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission fined five companies a total of $15,500 in administrative penalties for pollution violations. Action is pending against a sixth company involved in one of the cases.

The largest pentalty, $5,000, was assessed to D & D Producers of Post for illegal modifications to a saltwater injection well on its C. R. Scott lease in Garza County. Commission inspectors found required pressure observation valves were blocked off by steel plates welded in place. A subsequent test identified problems in the well casing that had been mased by covering the observation valves. The well was finally plugged after attempts to fix the problems failed.

Eurafrep, Inc., based in Denver, Colo., was fined $3,000 for allowing a company transporting low-chloride drilling mud to dump it along a roadway in Leon County instead of taking it to a proper disposal site. Some of the mud that was illegally dumped fell into a tributary of the Navasota River. Penalty action is pending against the company owning the transport truck that dumped the mud, Chem-Jet, Inc. of N. Zulch. Chem-Jet cleaned up the dump site.

Two companies were fined $3,000 each for saltwater pollution violations. Several Commission inspections of the G. E. Waters lease in Shackelford County, operated by Morris Tidmore of Albany, revealed saltwater leaking into a pit from tanks on the lease. A pump had been placed by the pit to drain the saltwater into a nearby creek. After several violation notices, the operator corrected the violation.

Another $3,000 penalty was assessed to Total Energy Co. of Texas, based in Amarillo, for saltwater spills on the Seven Johnson lease in Gray County.

Engineers to hear Chevron economist

The Permian Basin section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday, April 23, at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Guest speaker will be Mr. Thomas G. Burns, assistant general manager of the Economics Department for Chevron Corp. from San Francisco. He will present Chevron's "World Energy Outlook."

Burns received his bachelor's and master's degrees in industrial management from MIT. He worked in Europe for eight years before moving to San Francisco.

A social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m. with dinner at 6:30.

Murchison gets more time on debt list

DALLAS (AP) — A federal bankruptcy judge has given Dallas businessman Clint W. Murchison until June 16 to submit a list of his debts and assets for the Chapter 11 reorganization of more than 100 of his properties.

The list was due Monday, but U.S. Bankruptcy judge John C. Ford granted the extension after meeting with Murchison's attorneys and several of his creditors.

The creditors are seeking repayment of more than $250 million from Murchison, the former owner of the Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League.

Ford on Tuesday also approved Murchison's request to sell his stock in MRW Inc., a firm that holds 21 franchise outlets in New Jersey for Church's Fried Chicken. The sale will be used to retire at least $6.1 million of a total $11.7 million owed to backers of the restaurants, according to court documents.

San Diego looking toward more solid high tech growth

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

SAN DIEGO — Hardly a day goes by, it seems, that a city or region does not claim to be the "next Silicon Valley." San Diego, California's second largest city in both population and land area — is no exception.

Now it feels credence is given to its claim with the recent announcement by the National Science Foundation that the University of California, San Diego, is the site of one of four super-computers that will be built at a cost of $200 million over the next five years. (The other sites are the University of Illinois, Princeton University and Cornell University).

The selection should bolster the effort by California's southernmost metropolitan area to replicate the high-tech explosion of Silicon Valley, near San Jose, 50 miles south of San Francisco, according to Dan Pegg, head of the San Diego Economic Development Corp.

The super-computer center at UC San Diego in La Jolla, estimated to cost $100 million over five years, will be operated by GA Technologies, a neighboring research facility that specializes in atomic energy. GA Technologies is a subsidiary of Chevron Corp.

Pegg and others believe that San Diego's time as a major technological center has come. It is an overnight success that has been more than 20 years aborning, Pegg said.

Not surprisingly, much of the high-tech, research and development activity is taking place in the so-called Golden Triangle, east of the university, that is bounded by three freeways.

Among the major players in the Golden Triangle are Bren Investment Properties, Harry L. Summers Inc., the Naiman Co. and Ernest W. Hahn in the commercial segment, and Bren, the Mayer Group and the Douglas Allred Co. in residential construction.

"This year will see astonishing expansion in the Golden Triangle," predicts George W. Lattimer, executive vice president of La Jolla-based Harry L. Summers Inc. Summers is a Texas native with a long history of development in San Diego.

Lattimer estimated that projects valued at more than $300 million will be started in the Golden Triangle this year, with more than one million square feet of office space and about 1,650 new residential units in the nearly 5,000 acres that make up the area.

Further validating the success of the triangle will be the move by IBM to a new 105,000-square-foot building there.

A study by Grubb & Ellis Commercial Brokerage Services of more than 450 buildings representing 19.8 million square feet, shows that during 1984, San Diego County absorbed 1.9 million gross square feet and 1.73 million net square feet of office space.

This exceeds the county's previous best of 1.5 million net square feet absorbed two years in a row, 1982 and 1983, according to the realty firm's Tony Albin. He noted that this is the first time in the nine-year history of the study that absorption is being addressed in gross and net terms. This is because of the amount of sublease space now available in the downtown market.

"Many downtown tenants are relocating into the new high-rises and leaving their old space with significant lease term remaining," Albin said. "While technically this sublease space is 'paid for', it still is competing against the new space for tenants. As a result, gross absorption reflects overall move-in activity while net absorption takes into account more than 175,000 square feet of available sublease space."

Albin agrees that a tenant's market will continue to prevail in San Diego County; with 4 million square feet of new office space already under construction and 3 million square feet scheduled to begin soon, it could hardly be otherwise.

"The county vacancy rate currently stands at 26 percent net and 25 percent gross, the same as it was at the end of 1983," Albin added. "This means that developers, however encouraged, must be prepared to continue aggressively marketing their projects.

The Grubb & Ellis study divides the county into six key areas: Downtown, Mission Valley, the Golden Triangle, Sorrento Valley, Kearny Mesa and North County.

"Unlike previous years, 1984 saw tenant demand become more uniformly distributed throughout the region with five areas absorbing between 214,000 and 255,000 gross square feet each, and North County absorbing more than 500,000 square feet," Albin said.

Five new high-rises downtown recorded total absorption of nearly 500,000 square feet, according to Albin's colleague, Bill John.

However, the downtown market had net absorption of 214,000 square feet, down from the 300,000 in 1983, he said.

Mission Valley has an 82 percent occupancy rate, according to Vincent Botticelli, another Grubb & Ellis office specialist.

Xerox plans commercial park

LEESBURG, Va. (AP) — Xerox Corp. announced preliminary plans Wednesday for an $8 billion to $10 billion commercial and residential development, including as many as 20 separate corporate headquarters and about 1,800 upscale homes.

The Stamford, Conn.-based company said the development would be located on a sprawling tract of wooded land it owns in Loudoun County, 30 miles northwest of the nation's capital. Since 1974, the Xerox International Training Center has been located on the 2,267-acre tract.

The new development, the largest ever undertaken by the company's real estate arm, Xerox Realty Corp., also would include a large resort hotel with major recreational facilities and a conference center, and a large commercial hotel.

Construction of the project probably could not begin until early 1986 and then it would take at least 10 years to complete, officials said.

The development, which is so far unnamed, would provide more than 10,000 jobs, according to Xerox officials. They said the project would be financed in large part by private developers, but that Xerox would maintain ultimate control over all design plans.

Loudoun County officials, who must approve zoning changes if the project is to proceed, expressed support for the plan but noted that they expect Xerox to make major improvements to roads leading to the site, particularly Rte. 7.

"I'm almost ecstatic about it," said County Board Chairman Frank Raflo. "If it was any better I couldn't stand it."

Xerox officials said they have not yet contracted with a developer, nor do they know what corporations will occupy the commercial buildings.

Thomas C. Abbott, manager for media relations, said the project will be "a high-quality, high-cost development," with about 1,000 acres of landscaping threaded among the building sites.

There will be no effort to provide housing for middle- or lower-income residents, Abbott said. The starting price for single-family houses and town houses would be about $150,000, he said.

Tracor MBA begins production of its automized powder

SAN RAMON, Calif. (SWN) — Tracor MBA, a subsidiary of Tracor, Inc., recently began production of atomized magnesium powder at its Camden, Ark. facility, managed by James C. Scivally, vice president.

Don F. Carrier, group vice president for Tracor Aerospace, said initial output of the facility will be dedicated to Tracor MBA infrared flare production requirements, although, eventually, the facility wil have a 500 pound per hour capability, and magnesium powder will be offered for sale by the company.

Thomas C. Archer, president of Tracor MBA, said, "The atomized magnesium facility marks the conclusion of an internal atomized magnesium development program managed by Donald E. Davenport, PHD, Tracor MBA chief scientist, and James E. Harrington, manager of special projects at the Tracor MBA Arkansas Operations.

"The next phase of the research and development program will examine the application of the Tracor MBA process to rapid solidification of magnesium alloys. The objective will be to develop high strength, corrosion resistant alloys for use in structures requiring high strength-to-weight ratio alloys. The aerospace and automotive industries, in particular, require such alloys.

"Magnesium, two-thirds the density of aluminum, is a candidate for lightweight structures of the future. Studies indicate rapid solidification of aluminum alloys can make them lighter and stronger. Rapidly solidified lithium-aluminum alloys have attracted a great deal of interest from the aerospace industry. If this same success can be achieved with rapidly solidified magnesium alloys, they will be even better."

All share the same high level of over-the-road performance. All offer their drivers and passengers the solid comfort and secure feeling of a well-engineered car.

The significant differences among these cars, in fact, are cost (the Saab 900 has the lowest*) and carrying capacity (the Saab 900 has the highest). With its rear seat folded down, the three-door Saab 900 will carry 56.5 cubic feet of cargo, more than the others all combined.

First City National Bank Chairman Tony Martin and President Bill Franklin have announced two promotions in the bank's staff.

JEFFREY P. LONGBOTHAM has been promoted to vice president and manager of installment lending. Longbotham came to the bank in 1981. Soon thereafter, he was promoted to manager of loan collections and in 1982, was promoted to assistant vice president. In 1984 he became a personal banking officer in installment lending.

Longbotham is currently completing requirements for a business management degree from Tarleton State University. He is a member of the Optimist Club and is active in the American Institute of Banking.

BUSTER BARNETT has been promoted to personal banking officer in installment lending. A native Midlander, Barnett spent eight years in Houston managing a home building supply company before returning to Midland in 1982. He attended Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

A.E. SMITH has retired from First City National Bank of Midland after 33 years of service.

Smith was a vice president in the Instalment Lending Division. He started working at the bank in 1952 as a clerk and was later promoted to assistant cashier.

In 1961, Smith was made an assistant vice president in Instalment Lending and in 1968 was promoted to vice president. He served in the U.S. Navy in World War II and also served in the Korean War. Smith attended Texas Tech University. He has been active in the American Institute of Banking and has held numerous positions in the Morning Lions Club and Toastmasters Club.

WAYNE D. MILLER has been elected to the board of directors of USENCO Inc. at its annual shareholders meeting.

Miller has been vice president of exploration for USENCO since January 1984. He holds a BS degree in engineering geology from the University of Tulsa and a MA degree in geology from the University of Texas at Austin.

Prior to becoming employed by USENCO, Miller worked as an independent consultant and served as western region exploration manager for Cabot Petroleum Corp.

FRED G. BROWN and PHILIP M. IVERSON were also reelected to the board of directors.

WILLIAM H. JOWELL of Midland ranked fifth among all New York Life Insurance Co. agents last year, earning membership in the company's third "Summit."

William L. White, general manager for the Midland general office, said tht the top 100 earned their places from among 10,000 New York Life agents.

Jowell joined the company in Midland in 1966. He has been a qualifying and life member of the Million Dollar Round Table for 15 years. He is also a member of New York Life's Chairman's Council.

DAVID H. BURGARD has recently joined Renick, Anderson and Associates, a local geophysical consulting firm.

Burgard was formerly geophysical manager for Hilliard Oil and Gas and prior to holding that position was geophysical manager for Cities Service Co.

He is now a consulting geophysicist with particular interest in integrating seismic data and subsurface geologic data.

He has worked in the geophysical industry for 11 years and is an active member in the Society of Exploration Geophysicist, Permian Basin Geophysical Society and West Texas Geology Society.

Auto theft, insurance fraud bills introduced

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — Legislation aimed at curbing motor vehicle theft and insurance fraud, by ordering insurers to share information with law enforcement agencies, has been introduced by Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center.

HB 2305 would require an insurance company, or its agent, to report to law enforcement officials or the State Board of Insurance "any relevant information that the authorized governmental agency requests and that the insurer has relating to any specific motor vehicle theft or motor vehicle insurance fraud."

That information would include the identify of a person which the insurer "knows or reasonably believes it knows" to have been involved in a criminal or fraudulent act not reported to law enforcement officials.

Agencies could exchange information, and an insurer or agent furnishing such information could not be criminally or civilly liable for providing the information, "in the absence of fraud or malice."

Air Control Board holds a public hearing at 7 p.m. April 30 at its Austin offices (6330 US 290 E) on amendments to regulations intended to allow Texas to assume full responsibility for administering the Federal prevention of significant deterioration (PSD) program.

At present, responsibility is divided between the Environmental Protection Agency and the ACB, with ACB performing technical review for new and modified sources of pollutants, and EPA issuing and enforcing permits.

ACB says full delegation would simplify permitting requirements for air pollution sources by consolidating all review requirements into a single permit issued by the State agency.

ACB accepted the technical and administrative review authority for the PSD program in April, 1981, but chose not to accept the full program then, anticipating changes by Congress in the Federal Clean Air Act.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, hs filed a bill stating persons born outside the United States who are applying for a Texas driver's license must present a document from the U. S. Immigration and Naturalization Service showing they are naturalized citizens, or registered aliens.

Rudd's House Bill 2401 states "a person presenting a birth certificate or other official documentary evidence stating that the person was born in a country other than the United States of America must present ... a document issued by the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service indicating that the person is a naturalized citizen of, or is registered as an alien in this country."

Namedropping policy

Business Namedropping is intended to inform our readers of promotions, achievements, and changes among the professional business personnel and leaders of Midland.

New presidents, chairmen of the board, directors of major coporations or new officers of organizations are normally treated separately as free-standing stories.

Namedropping generally appears in the Sunday edition but may be published during the week if necessary.

Information for Sunday pages must be in the Business-Oil Department by the preceding Thursday at noon. Items published during the week should be in the department two days in advance.

All information must be submitted in writing and include the name and telephone number of the person submitting it.

If a photograph is included, the person in the picture must be dressed professionally.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Information for Namedropping may be sent to the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Business-Oil Department, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702

GAME RULES

1) The Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND Trivia game is based on skill in answering 10 Trivia questions each week. There will be 14 weekly Trivia Games beginning Monday March 18th and ending Saturday June 22nd, 1985. A total of $2,800.00 will be awarded to first place winners over the 14 weeks. Additionally, 2nd and 3rd prizes will be awarded weekly.

2) Questions for each weekly Trivia Game will be broadcast over AM 1510 KMND at least 4 times per day on the half-hour Monday through Friday, between the hours of 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM. Each question will be read at least two times during the week. The entire set of ten (10) questions each week will have been broadcast over AM 1510 KMND Radio by 6:00 PM Thursday.

3) Questions for each week's game will be numbered from 1 (one) to 10 (ten). The answer to each numbered question must be PRINTED or TYPED on the correspondingly numbered answer line in the official Midland Reporter-Telegram AM 1510 KMND Radio Trivia Game entry form for that week. Each weeks official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire official entry form also will be acceptable, but machine duplicated copies are prohibited.

4) Contestants may submit multiple entry forms each week. However, each entry form must be mailed postage paid to the designated address in a separate envelope with the number of the weekly game marked in the lower left hand corner of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week, and be received at the contest address by 2:00 PM of the following Tuesday to be eligible for the weekly drawing.

5) The $200.00 first prize will be awarded to the entrant with all 10 questions answered correctly each week. In the case of more than one entry with all 10 answers correct, a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd prizes will be awarded to the next 2 entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again, in the case of more than one entry form with all 10 correct answers, drawings will be held to determine the 2nd and 3rd prize winners. In the case of no entrants with all 10 correct answers, the prizes will be awarded to those with the most correct answers respectively.

6) Correct answers to each weeks Trivia Game Questions will be broadcast twice on AM 1510 KMND Radio Saturday morning between 6:00 AM and Noon. Trivia Game questions and answers will also be published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram each Sunday. Weekly winners will be announced by both AM 1510 KMND Radio and the Midland Reporter-Telegram each Wednesday.

7) It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the Trivia Game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

8) All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and AM 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize, and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won the cash or prize. If a winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prize.

9) NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. Only entries bearing the correct postage and cancelled by the U.S. Postal service or entries hand delivered to the contest address by 6 a.m. Saturday will be accepted.

10) Judges decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of his game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Backcor broadcasting and members of their immediate families are ineligible.

11) The Grand prize, a 4 night cruise on the Mississippi River on the Delta Queen or Mississippi Queen departing and returning to New orleans including round trip air travel to New Orleans. The winner will be chosen in a drawing at the conclusion of the 14 week trivia game. All weekly 1st, 2nd and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the grand prize drawing.

See tomorrow's MRT for week #6's official entry form and listen to KMND, AM1510 tomorrow morning for questions.

Drilling applications up over previous total

AUSTIN — A total of 3,162 drilling applications were processed by the Railroad Commission in March, according to RRC Chairman Buddy Temple. In February, the total was 2,725.

So far this year, oil and gas operators have filed 8,654 applications. Through the same period of last year, they had filed 9,039.

The March total included 2,301 applications for permits to drill new oil and gas tests, 81 to deepen existing holes, 345 to plugback existing holes, and 48 for service wells. Operators also filed 387 amended drilling applications.

Applications for new oil and gs holes in March included 295 in the San Antonio area (District 1), 90 in the Refugio area (District 2), 197 in Southeast Texas (District 3), 126 in deep South Texas (District 4), 59 in East Central Texas (District 5), 90 in East Texas (District 6), 314 in West Central Texas, (District 7B), 146 in the San Angelo area (District 7C), 385 in the Midland area (District 8), 198 in the Lubbock area, (District 8A), 317 in North Texas (District 9), and 84 in the Panhandle (District 10).

Texas oil and gas operators reported 102 gas and 62 oil discoveries in March. In February, a total of 89 gas and 51 oil discoveries were filed with the Commission. A discovery is an exploratory well that is completed in a previously untapped reservoir.

Gas discoveries in March included six in the San Antonio area (District 1), 15 in the Refugio area (District 2), 18 in Southeast Texas (District 3), 27 in deep South Texas (District 4), five in East Central Texas (District 5), 11 in East Texas (District 6), 10 in West Central Texas (District 7B), two in the San Angelo area (District 7C), one in the Midland area (District 8), three in North Texas (District 9), and four in the Panhandle (District 10).

Oil discoveries included three in the Refugio area (District 2), five in Southeast Texas (District 3), eight in deep South Texas (Disrict 4), two in East Central Texas (District 5), four in East Texas (District 6), 18 in West Central Texas (District 7B), six in the San Angelo area (District 7C), one in the Midland area (District 8), eight in the Lubbock area (District 8A), five in North Texas (District 9), and two in the Panhandle (District 10).

Those discoveries were included in the 1,331 oil, 447 gas, and 116 service completions operators reported in March. In February, operators filed 1,261 oil, 381 gas, and 76 service completions.

A total of 534 dry holes were reported in March, compared to 431 in February.

BankAmerica may announce takeover plans

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — BankAmerica Corp. of California has a team of its executives examining Orbanco Financial Services, the second-largest bank holding company in Oregon, and banking sources in California said they expected BankAmerica soon to announce that it planned to acquire Orbanco, or part of it.

"There's a lot of activity going on up there," said a BankAmerica official, who was referring to Oregon and who asked not to be identified. "They have a bunch of guys filling up every hotel room in Portland." No senior official of either bank would comment for the record, however.

If BankAmerica were to acquire Orbanco, it would have full-service banking operations covering the entire West Coast. It is by far the biggest bank in California, and in 1983 it acquired the then-failing Seafirst Corp. of Seattle, the biggest holding company in the Northwest.

Orbanco, which reported a $830,000 loss for the fourth quarter of 1984, announced earlier this year that it was for sale. Oregon has passed a law that allows out-of-state banks to acquire banks in the state. But the law does not become effective until July 1986, and the banking sources said that is causing complications in the negotiations. It is possible, they said, that a deal could be reached under which the takeover could be agreed upon now, but would become effective in 1986.

BankAmerica, the second-largest banking organization in the United States, had year-end assets of $117.7 billion. Citicorp is the largest, with $150.5 billion.

Orbanco's assets averaged $1.3 billion during 1984, considerably below the $6.8 billion in average assets of the United States Bancorp., the state's largest bank holding company.

"I question the wisdom of an acquisition of Orbanco by BankAmerica," said J. Richard Fredericks, a partner in Montgomery Securities. "I wonder if BankAmerica might be paying a lot to get a market share that isn't significant."

But Donald K. Crowley, senior vice president of Keefe, Bruyette & Woods, said that it would be a positive move for BankAmerica.

Chrysler, Samsung report plans for joint venture

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The chairman of Chrysler Corp. and South Korea's Samsung business group has announced plans for a joint venture to develop a South Korean supply base for automotive parts and components for Chrysler.

The announcement said the proposed joint venture "will continue studies to determine the eventual possibility of car assembly in Korea."

Lee A. Iacocca, chairman of the Chrysler Corp., and Lee Byung-chull, chairman of the Samsung group, made the announcement at a news conference.

Iacocca said Chrysler and Samsung each will own 50 percent of the new company, but refused to disclose the size of the proposed joint venture's capital.

"We will start modestly," Iacocca told reporters, adding that an office staffed by personnel from the two companies will be opened immediately in Seoul.

The new undertaking is subject to government approval.

Samsung operates a wide range of industrial plants and services, including high-tech electronics, shipyard and machinery.

Iacocca said the new joint venture will work with Korean companies, including Samsung, to procure automotive parts and components for vehicles assembled by Chrysler in North America.

Iacocca said the agreement resulted from a study the two companies began in June 1984.

"This is a significant step for Chrysler," Iacocca said."It will make Korea a major parts and components base for Chrysler, and keep us competitive in the world automotive marketplace — and staying competitive worldwide is the only way to protect the jobs of our workers in the United States."

In the announcement, Lee was quoted as saying that Samsung welcomed the "opportunity to join hands with the Chrysler Corp. and the opportunity for Samsung to play a key role in the U.S. automotive market."

He said it was "particularly rewarding for Korea, as our program calls for development of many of Korea's small and medium-size vendors."

Details as to what parts and components will be obtained in Korea were not given immediately.

Iacocca arrived Thursday at the invitation of Samsung, and has been holding talks with officials and visiting Samsung plants.

Speaking at a meeting of the Korea Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Iacocca said, "This is not just a shopping trip. We are here to establish a supplier base that will make Korean companies major participants in the American automobile industry.

"No one is more concerned that I am about the trade imbalance and its impact on American jobs," Iacocca said. "But as a businessman, I must be pragmatic."

Iacocca came to South Korea after a visit to Japan, where it was announced that Mitsubishi Motors Corp. had agreed with Chrysler on a plan to build Mitsubishi cars in the United States.

"Under America's current trade policies, there seem to be two alternatives involving automobiles," Iacocca said. "The first is simply to import more foreign cars and trucks which are completely assembled outside the United States. In that case, all of the labor and most of the profits go to the foreign producer. This heightens the trade tension because no American jobs are created, and many are lost," he said.

"But in the arrangements that we have struck in Japan and here in Korea, there is a sharing in the economic and employment benefits of our trade," he said.

Junk bonds newest financial investing tool

New York Times News Service

Ted Turner's multibillion-dollar bid for CBS Inc., would not have been possible in the go-go years of the 1960s when megabucks needed for large acquisitions could be raised only by giant corporations.

But in the deregulated climate of the 1980s, the Wall Street investment bank of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., developed a financing tool that makes it possible for selected individuals and certain small companies to launch hostile takeover bids for America's largest corporations. That powerful tool is the junk bond, a high-yield security dubbed "junk" because of the low or nonexistent rating it gets from the credit-rating agencies.

By selling these largely unsecured, high-yielding bonds to a group of wealthy investors, including some West Coast savings and loans that are comfortable with the risks they entail, Drexel has enabled Mesa Petroleum Co. Chairman T. Boone Pickens Jr. to launch raids on several oil companies. Until yesterday, when Turner announced that E. F. Hutton was representing him in his bid to acquire CBS, only Drexel had managed the major junk bond offerings.

The argument for investing in junk bonds is simple. Studies years ago concluded that over long periods of time, even after deducting for bankruptcies, low-quality bonds yield better returns than high-quality bonds. Some portfolio managers say they are overcompensated, through high interest rates, for the amount of risk they take; they are overcompensated, they say, because many institutional money managers do not understand the market and are afraid that if they invest in junk bonds and suffer losses, they will be sued for failing to be prudent managers.

Some portfolio managers in New York and Los Angeles are investing billions of dollars in junk bonds, confident that by taking advantage of market imperfections, they have found a way to consistently achieve superior returns. These bonds typically pay 300 to 400 basis points (100 basis points equals 1 percentage point) above government and high-grade corporate bonds.

Junk bonds also have been used to finance management buyouts of public companies. The managment of Metromedia Broadcasting Corp. used junk bonds to take the company private in a $1.3 billion buyout, the most ever raised in a junk offering.

While Wall Street's love affair with junk continues and Drexel continues to dominate what has become a $100-billion market, Congress and some investment bankers are voicing their concern about the enormous debt being added to corporate balance sheets as a result of these bonds. Observers are concerned that if the economy slows and companies are unable to make the high interest payments these bonds carry, many corporations will be in financial trouble.

One Wall Street investment banker who worries about junk bonds is Felix Rohatyn, a senior partner of Lazard Freres & Co. Rohatyn believes investors are failing to assess the high risk of junk bonds. He proposes that federally and state-insured financial institutions should be sharply limited in their ability to invest in junk bonds.

Union, firm have May date to file arguments

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Attorneys for striking copper unions, Phelps Dodge Corp. and a federal agency have until May 7 to file formal arguments following a hearing on union appeals to decertification elections.

Earldean V.S. Robbins, an NLRB administrative-law judge based in San Francisco, on Monday concluded a hearing after five days of testimony on how decertification elections were conducted at four Phelps Dodge plants in Arizona by the NLRB last year.

Ms. Robbins will file a recommendation to the NLRB in Washington after she receives the legal arguments from the company, the unions and the Phoenix regional office of the NLRB.

If the board rules against holding new elections, the unions may appeal rulings in the hearing just ended.

Hilton discussing sale of its unopened Atlantic City hotel

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Hilton Hotels Corp., whose application to operate a casino in its unopened Atlantic City hotel was rejected seven weeks ago, announced Thursday that it was discussing the sale of the property to Donald Trump, the real estate entrepreneur, for an undisclosed cash price.

A source close to the negotiations said that the price being discussed for the property, the Atlantic City Hilton, was between $320 million and $325 million. This source said the deal would be completed by early next week.

The 634-room structure, built in the gaming center's marina area, has cost Hilton $308 million to build.

Trump and a senior Hilton officer said in separate telephone interviews Thursday that the negotiations had no relationship to the offer by Golden Nugget Inc., the big casino operator, to buy 25 percent of Hilton's stock for $72 a share, or $488 million. On the New York Stock Exchange Thursday, Hilton's shares closed at $66, down $1.875.

Barron Hilton, chairman of the hotel company, has called the Golden Nugget offer "inadequate."

Some analysts suggest that part of Hilton's motivation for selling the Atlantic City hotel is a hope that it would discourage Golden Nugget's plans.

Reached by telephone Thursday, Stephen A. Wynn, Golden Nugget's chairman, said that a sale to Trump would "absolutely have no impact" on Golden Nugget's plans regarding the Hilton stock.

Thursday's announcement from the Hilton headquarters in Beverly Hills, Calif., followed widespread reports this week that the parties had actually concluded a deal.

However, Trump, who is half-owner of an Atlantic City casino hotel, and John Giovenco, Hilton's executive vice president and chief financial officer, said separately that negotiations were continuing.

Hilton said in a statement that it decided to consider the sale after the Feb. 28 decision of the New Jersey Casino Commission denying the company a license to operate a casino in the hotel. Hilton had planned to open the hotel on May 14.

The commissioners who voted against the application cited purported ties of some Hilton officials to organized crime figures.

Hilton said the company was "still prepared to demonstrate conclusively" its integrity and fitness to operate in New Jersey, but that it also has a duty to "protect the investment interests of our company and shareholders" by pursuing the negotiations with Trump.

He said the potential sale offers stockholders "a specific, strong option in the face of possible substantial dollar losses from a late start-up in our Atlantic City operation, and because we want to get on with our worldwide business."

Without a gaming license, the Hilton property, built in an area reserved for casino hotels, would have been "a white elephant," said Roy D. Burry, a hotel analyst with Kidder, Peabody & Co.

"Hilton wants to sell because of the rejection of its license application," Burry said, "and because this could be a way to thwart Golden Nugget."

Burry said that the proposed Hilton-Trump deal would prevent Wynn, should he gain a sizable chunk of Hilton stock, from putting pressure on Hilton to sell to Golden Nugget the Atlantic City property or one or both of Hilton's Las Vegas casino hotels.

Hilton's Las Vegas properties, the Flamingo Hilton and the Las Vegas Hilton, accounted for 39 percent of the company's 1984 profit. Golden Nugget already has a casino in Atlantic City and one in Las Vegas.

Donald J. Lupa, an analyst with Duff & Phelps Inc. of Chicago, said that Hilton's plan to continue to seek a gaming license is "a strategic tool that'll allow it to negotiate with Trump from strength rather than weakness."

Lupa said that Trump, a half-owner with Holiday Inns of the Trump Plaza casino hotel on the Atlantic City Boardwalk, would have good reasons to pursue the purchase.

Pan Am moves its facilities to smaller airport

HOUSTON (AP) — Pan American World Airways is cutting back its Houston personnel and moving its local facilities to a smaller airport, an airline spokesman said.

The New York-based carrier operated a 175-person reservation center and division office until last month at Houston's Intercontinental Airport.

But starting April 28, Pan Am will offer service from Hobby Airport, a smaller facility closer to downtown Houston, spokesman Mike Clark said Wednesday.

Pan Am had 10 flights to and from Houston ech day before the Transport Workers Union struck Feb. 28. The strike lasted 27 days.

Flight attendants, who had also threatened to strike the airline, settled April 1, but not before the airline pulled out of Houston, New Orleans and Chicago. Reservations centers in Chicago and New Orleans were closed in October, and the airline also plans to shut its center in Honolulu soon.

Of the 433 Pan Am employees in Houston before the strike, all that remain are an 11-person marketing office and eight managers, Clark said.

Communications equipment has been removed from Houston Intercontinental, 111 people have been transferred to Miami and the others have been laid off, he said.

In addition, flights out of Hobby — one each day to San Francisco, Miami and New York — likely will be serviced by ground crews from other airlines using the airport.

The airline has served Houston for more than 40 years and service to Houston peaked in 1982 when it had 32 daily flights. But financial losses prompted cutbacks.

Last year, the airline bid for a Houston-to-London route it suspended in October 1982. But the Department of Transportation awarded it to Continental Airlines, saying the Houston-based carrier had a local feeder system to support the route.

Pan Am has not made a profit since 1980 and lost $206 million last year.

Overweight trucks target in expanded state crackdown

AUSTIN (AP) — Shippers who overload their trucks will be the targets of an expanded crackdown that could bring the state $1 million in judgments this year, Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

Mattox said this week that the crackdown against overweight trucks that began in November has already wrought changes.

"The troopers out on the highway tell us that the attitude towards hauling on an overweight truck has dramatically changed," Mattox said, adding that the Department of Public Safety reports "substantially reduced" violations.

The beefed-up enforcement program has resulted in 37 lawsuits against trucking companies. The lawsuits seek civil penalties to help pay for the damage overweight trucks do to highways.

Mattox said the suits have brought $360,000 in judgments so far, adding that he expects the total to hit $1 million by the end of the fiscal year on Aug. 31.

The decision to file civil suits was made because the small criminal fines the law prescribes against overweight trucks were no deterrent to truckers, Mattox said.

"The firms were operating with virtual immunity," he said, adding that trucking companies considered fines "just a normal expense of business."

Mattox said, however, that many trucking companies have noted that truckers sometimes don't have control over their loads. Because of that, he said, shippers are the next target.

"Truckers are placed in a difficult position many times because of shippers and loaders overloading their trucks," he said. "These shippers must also accept responsibility for violations of the law."

The attorney general said four lawsuits against shippers would be filed within the next two weeks.

"The trucking industry itself cannot stop the problem if the people that load the trucks and ship the products — the grain, the concrete, the crushed gravel — continue to overload," he said.

Of the $360,000 in judgments obtained so far against 13 defendants, Mattox said $245,000 already has been collected and the remaining $115,000 will be paid over time, with the state collecting 12 percent interest.

Lillian Katz is head of the Lillian Vernon Corp., a mail-order empire.

'Queen of catalogs'

By KATHY LARKIN
King Features Syndicate

She's not your average housewife, this compact dark-haired woman who walks into the huge L-shaped room which is punctuated by islands of couches adrift in yards of space.

Lillian Vernon Katz is the woman who created what is now a $100 million dollar-plus catalog business from her own suburban kitchen table, using $2,000 as seed money.

She was very young then — 24, a recent N.Y.U. graduate. She was pregnant with the first of her two sons, Fred. (Her second son, David, runs the company's public relations' department). And she needed to supplement the $75 weekly check her first husband, Sam Hochberg, carried home from his Mt. Vernon, N.Y., lingerie shop.

When the first slender trickle of orders began, Lillian Katz moved her fledgling business into the back of her husband's store, hiring another woman part-time.

Lillian Katz, the German-born daughter of Herman and Erna Menasche, a couple who migrated to the United States from Holland in 1937 when she was 10, grew up with the work ethic. She learned more from it, she says, than from all her books.

"My grandmother worked. My mother worked. I worked. In my house, it was never 'My God! Women should stay home.'

"And I can't change myself now. I started before I was 16, lying about my age. My first job was as a movie usher, 10 cents an hour. I saw Rosalind Russell as Amelia Earhart at least 150 times and I loved the job because it helped me with my English. I do not have an accent. My brother, who was 13 when we came here, never lost his."

"I'm a good businesswoman...I know what makes this company tick. I know merchandising. I know what to offer people to make them want to buy. And that's a talent like dancing and singing."

— Lillian Katz

Ms. Katz then graduated to the counter of the local Barton's candy store, then to work at a fabric converter, selling at clothing chain and intermittent stints for her father, a leather-goods manufacturer.

Ms. Katz, who inadvertently founded a financial "empire," is smart, articulate, definite and often surprisingly frank. She has an odd but understandable conversational quirk. Occasionally Ms. Katz slips into a kind of shorthand, dropping unessential words which is an unconscious trait that any CEO trapped in the pressure-cooker of time can understand.

"Sam, my sons' father, had a store," she says now, leaning back against one of the many aubergine-patterened couches. "But we lived upstairs in what was really the attic of a two-family house. And I was pregnant. So I said to myself: 'Have to move. Want to make some money. Maybe with $50 extra, we could have a decent life. I could do something at home and still take care of my kid."

She could also ship orders from her father's factory in New York. Decades before the designer-label fad plastered initials over every wearable piece of clothing, Lillian Katz monogrammed a belt and a leather bag. She splurged on a $495 ad in Seventeen magazine with the theme "Be the first to sport your own initials" — and won big.

Her first marriage did not survive her own business success, but Ms. Katz does not blame the breakup on her achievement. "It's true, I worked with my first husband. And I always felt that was too much aggravation. You can aggravate somebody by day. Or you can aggravate somebody by night. But day and night, that's too much. You need...distance. You really have got to care about somebody to work with them...And I loved my first husband. Still, you can destroy what you've got."

But, she insists, working together on her new dream did not destroy her first marriage. "I think, in our case, it probably kept the marriage together a little longer because basically, I'm not sure we were really right for each other."

Ms. Katz shakes her head. "I never thought mail order would be that successful. I mean it was not a 'career thing.' It really is incredible, when I think back. How do you do it? I guess because you want to — and you must."

For her, that meant making the rounds of banks, cajoling them into loans because women just after World War II were not easily accepted as an executive customers, a fact Lillian Katz has never forgotten.

Today she is constantly in transit — over 10,000 miles a year counting three annual flights to the Far East, four to Europe. She makes so many buying trips that stops in Milan, London, Paris, Hong Kong and mainland China blur like the signs whizzing by a super-speed express. It's a journey cushioned by money and influence.

Hilton discussing sale of its unopened Atlantic City hotel

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Hilton Hotels Corp., whose application to operate a casino in its unopened Atlantic City hotel was rejected seven weeks ago, announced Thursday that it was discussing the sale of the property to Donald Trump, the real estate entrepreneur, for an undisclosed cash price.

A source close to the negotiations said that the price being discussed for the property, the Atlantic City Hilton, was between $320 million and $325 million. This source said the deal would be completed by early next week.

Hilton's Las Vegas properties, the Flamingo Hilton and the Las Vegas Hilton, accounted for 39 percent of the company's 1984 profit. Golden Nugget already has a casino in Atlantic City and one in Las Vegas.

Donald J. Lupa, an analyst with Duff & Phelps Inc. of Chicago, said that Hilton's plan to continue to seek a gaming license is "a strategic tool that'll allow it to negotiate with Trump from strength rather than weakness."

Lupa said that Trump, a half-owner with Holiday Inns of the Trump Plaza casino hotel on the Atlantic City Boardwalk, would have good reasons to pursue the purchase.

Pan Am moves its facilities to smaller airport

HOUSTON (AP) — Pan American World Airways is cutting back its Houston personnel and moving its local facilities to a smaller airport, an airline spokesman said.

The New York-based carrier operated a 175-person reservation center and division office until last month at Houston's Intercontinental Airport.

But starting April 28, Pan Am will offer service from Hobby Airport, a smaller facility closer to downtown Houston, spokesman Mike Clark said Wednesday.

Pan Am had 10 flights to and from Houston ech day before the Transport Workers Union struck Feb. 28. The strike lasted 27 days.

Flight attendants, who had also threatened to strike the airline, settled April 1, but not before the airline pulled out of Houston, New Orleans and Chicago. Reservations centers in Chicago and New Orleans were closed in October, and the airline also plans to shut its center in Honolulu soon.

Of the 433 Pan Am employees in Houston before the strike, all that remain are an 11-person marketing office and eight managers, Clark said.

Communications equipment has been removed from Houston Intercontinental, 111 people have been transferred to Miami and the others have been laid off, he said.

In addition, flights out of Hobby — one each day to San Francisco, Miami and New York — likely will be serviced by ground crews from other airlines using the airport.

The airline has served Houston for more than 40 years and service to Houston peaked in 1982 when it had 32 daily flights. But financial losses prompted cutbacks.

Last year, the airline bid for a Houston-to-London route it suspended in October 1982. But the Department of Transportation awarded it to Continental Airlines, saying the Houston-based carrier had a local feeder system to support the route.

Pan Am has not made a profit since 1980 and lost $206 million last year.

Overweight trucks target in expanded state crackdown

AUSTIN (AP) — Shippers who overload their trucks will be the targets of an expanded crackdown that could bring the state $1 million in judgments this year, Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

Mattox said this week that the crackdown against overweight trucks that began in November has already wrought changes.

"The troopers out on the highway tell us that the attitude towards hauling on an overweight truck has dramatically changed," Mattox said, adding that the Department of Public Safety reports "substantially reduced" violations.

The beefed-up enforcement program has resulted in 37 lawsuits against trucking companies. The lawsuits seek civil penalties to help pay for the damage overweight trucks do to highways.

Mattox said the suits have brought $360,000 in judgments so far, adding that he expects the total to hit $1 million by the end of the fiscal year on Aug. 31.

The decision to file civil suits was made because the small criminal fines the law prescribes against overweight trucks were no deterrent to truckers, Mattox said.

"The firms were operating with virtual immunity," he said, adding that trucking companies considered fines "just a normal expense of business."

Mattox said, however, that many trucking companies have noted that truckers sometimes don't have control over their loads. Because of that, he said, shippers are the next target.

"Truckers are placed in a difficult position many times because of shippers and loaders overloading their trucks," he said. "These shippers must also accept responsibility for violations of the law."

The attorney general said four lawsuits against shippers would be filed within the next two weeks.

"The trucking industry itself cannot stop the problem if the people that load the trucks and ship the products — the grain, the concrete, the crushed gravel — continue to overload," he said.

Of the $360,000 in judgments obtained so far against 13 defendants, Mattox said $245,000 already has been collected and the remaining $115,000 will be paid over time, with the state collecting 12 percent interest.

Lillian Katz is head of the Lillian Vernon Corp., a mail-order empire.

'Queen of catalogs'

By KATHY LARKIN
King Features Syndicate

She's not your average housewife, this compact dark-haired woman who walks into the huge L-shaped room which is punctuated by islands of couches adrift in yards of space.

Lillian Vernon Katz is the woman who created what is now a $100 million dollar-plus catalog business from her own suburban kitchen table, using $2,000 as seed money.

She was very young then — 24, a recent N.Y.U. graduate. She was pregnant with the first of her two sons, Fred. (Her second son, David, runs the company's public relations' department). And she needed to supplement the $75 weekly check her first husband, Sam Hochberg, carried home from his Mt. Vernon, N.Y., lingerie shop.

When the first slender trickle of orders began, Lillian Katz moved her fledgling business into the back of her husband's store, hiring another woman part-time.

Lillian Katz, the German-born daughter of Herman and Erna Menasche, a couple who migrated to the United States from Holland in 1937 when she was 10, grew up with the work ethic. She learned more from it, she says, than from all her books.

"My grandmother worked. My mother worked. I worked. In my house, it was never 'My God! Women should stay home.'

"And I can't change myself now. I started before I was 16, lying about my age. My first job was as a movie usher, 10 cents an hour. I saw Rosalind Russell as Amelia Earhart at least 150 times and I loved the job because it helped me with my English. I do not have an accent. My brother, who was 13 when we came here, never lost his."

"I'm a good businesswoman...I know what makes this company tick. I know merchandising. I know what to offer people to make them want to buy. And that's a talent like dancing and singing."

— Lillian Katz

Ms. Katz then graduated to the counter of the local Barton's candy store, then to work at a fabric converter, selling at clothing chain and intermittent stints for her father, a leather-goods manufacturer.

Ms. Katz, who inadvertently founded a financial "empire," is smart, articulate, definite and often surprisingly frank. She has an odd but understandable conversational quirk. Occasionally Ms. Katz slips into a kind of shorthand, dropping unessential words which is an unconscious trait that any CEO trapped in the pressure-cooker of time can understand.

"Sam, my sons' father, had a store," she says now, leaning back against one of the many aubergine-patterened couches. "But we lived upstairs in what was really the attic of a two-family house. And I was pregnant. So I said to myself: 'Have to move. Want to make some money. Maybe with $50 extra, we could have a decent life. I could do something at home and still take care of my kid.'"

She could also ship orders from her father's factory in New York. Decades before the designer-label fad plastered initials over every wearable piece of clothing, Lillian Katz monogrammed a belt and a leather bag. She splurged on a $495 ad in Seventeen magazine with the theme "Be the first to sport your own initials" — and won big.

Her first marriage did not survive her own business success, but Ms. Katz does not blame the breakup on her achievement. "It's true, I worked with my first husband. And I always felt that was too much aggravation. You can aggravate somebody by day. Or you can aggravate somebody by night. But day and night, that's too much. You need...distance. You really have got to care about somebody to work with them...And I loved my first husband. Still, you can destroy what you've got."

But, she insists, working together on her new dream did not destroy her first marriage. "I think, in our case, it probably kept the marriage together a little longer because basically, I'm not sure we were really right for each other."

Ms. Katz shakes her head. "I never thought mail order would be that successful. I mean it was not a 'career thing.' It really is incredible, when I think back. How do you do it? I guess because you want to — and you must."

For her, that meant making the rounds of banks, cajoling them into loans because women just after World War II were not easily accepted as an executive customers, a fact Lillian Katz has never forgotten.

Today she is constantly in transit — over 10,000 miles a year counting three annual flights to the Far East, four to Europe. She makes so many buying trips that stops in Milan, London, Paris, Hong Kong and mainland China blur like the signs whizzing by a super-speed express. It's a journey cushioned by money and influence.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q.Could you please tell us all about James Garner? We've enjoyed him so much over the years.

Joyce Payne
Buford, Ga.

A. James Bumgarner, as he was originally named, is 57, from Norman, Okla., and is the survivor of a pretty tough childhood: His mother died when he was 4, his father, Weldon, a carpenter, was too busy (he was married four times) to pay much attention to Jim or his two older brothers, and one of his stepmothers beat him regularly.

Finally, tired of the abuse, at age 15 he decided to leave home and worked at a variety of jobs — clothing salesman, carpenter, carpet layer, chauffeur — and eventually drifted out to Southern California where he got a job bagging groceries.

His aunt there thought he was destined for the movies, so she constantly sent talent scouts to take a look at him at the market. A friend, Paul Gregory, who was working as a soda jerk, thought he had star potential too.

James Garner

In the meantime, though, he went into the Army, was sent to Korea, where he earned two Purple Hearts. When he got out and returned to Los Angeles, he found out that Paul Gregory had become a producer and his friend got him into the touring company of the play "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial."

He didn't have a line of dialogue, but he did get to work with and watch the play's star, Henry Fonda, whom he later said taught him a great deal from and whom he admired tremendously.

A few years later, he got a role in a pilot for a series called "Maverick," which, of course, would make him a star, to be confirmed by later series such as "The Rockford Files" and various movies such as "The Americanization of Emily" (his favorite), "The Great Escape" and the more recent "Victor/Victoria."

Currently, he's filming "Murphy's Romance" with Sally Field, and you may have seen him in the recent CBS miniseries, "Space." He's also become more active in developing and producing movies for TV: He has four in the works — two for NBC, two for CBS.

He's married to former actress Lois Clarke, and they have a 27-year-old daughter, Gigi. When he's not working, he can usually be found passionately watching pro sports, notably football.

Q. I've heard that Catherine Mary Stewart is Canadian. Is that correct? Also, how old is she and how did she get started in acting?

D.Y.
Kingston, Ont., Canada

A. She is, in fact, from Edmonton, Canada, but was in London when she got her acting break, at the age of 18. She was studying dance there, heard that a rock film called "The Apple" was casting for dancers, so she decided to go along with a few classmates so she could get the feel of a professional audition.

She didn't get a job as a dancer, but the director liked her, asked if she could act (she said yes) and gave her the lead. The movie didn't exactly set off fireworks, but it did lead to other roles in the films "Night Hawks," "The Last Starfighter" and the current "Mischief."

On TV, she stayed for a while on "Days of Our Lives" and was in the much-publicized miniseries "Hollywood Wives." She is now 25.

Les Paul and Mary Ford

Q. Are Les Paul and Mary Ford still married and performing?

Albert Brunet
Austin, Minn.

A.Unfortunately, the two were divorced in 1964, but both have remained active — Les Paul, more visibly. He and his trio are still making appearances around the country and have established a residence of sorts at a club called Fat Tuesday's in New York City. If you happen to find yourself there, they perform regularly on Monday night.

Judy Collins

Q. I love to listen to Judy Collins sing — I think she has the voice of an angel. But I haven't see her perform in California since 1980. Will she be making any appearances here soon?

M. Elmore
Etewanda, Calif.

A. Most likely. "Judy always seems to be on tour every year," explains an associate, and she's heading in your direction soon. The only scheduled dates, as we go to press, in California are later this year: Sacramento on October 11-12 and San Francisco at the Fairmont Hotel October 15-27.

Before then, though, she'll be performing in Atlanta, in Canada at the Stratford Festival, in Virginia at Wolf Trap, in Saratoga in upstate New York and in Denver May 3-4. An appearance in Southern California is likely, according to her associate. In the meantime, she has a new album, "Home Again."

Jennifer Jones

Q. Jennifer Jones is one of my favorite actresses. What has she been doing of late?

J. Dogan
Egg Harbor, N.J.

A. She's been spending most of her time in her role as Mrs. Norton Simon — she married the multimillionaire industrialist in 1971 and they have become known for their magnificent houses, elegant parties and impressive art collection.

She has also been devoting a great deal of her time to charities, specifically the Huntington Disease Commission and the Jennifer Jones Foundation for Mental Health. She hasn't entirely ruled out acting. She has optioned various properties over the years with a thought to starring in them, but her private life has taken precedence.

KATZ

Years ago, a ride to the local bank often ended with Lillian Katz running an obstacle course.

Katz

"In those early days, as a woman, I had terrible loan problems," she says." Banks would loan me money if I gave them invoices. If I could prove I had orders worth $20,000, they would allow me $15,000. If I brought in my stocks and left them on the table as collateral, I'd get maybe 75 percent of that. I can't help believing a man in the same position wouldn't have had to go through quite that much."

Now it is almost a lifetime later and she is CEO of the Lillian Vernon Corporation; creator of a national mail order success story; founder of a firm that has mushroomed into a major company employing 750 people (over 1,400 during the Christmas rush). It is a firm still headquartered in the suburban New York town of Mt. Vernon, but with three other nearby divisions. It is a firm with sales vaulting steadily from $1 million in 1970, to $26 million in 1980, to well over $100 million in 1985.

Each day, in the pink-and-purple communications center in New York City, over 40,000 requests run through 18 envelope-opening machines and emerging as stripped orders to be typed by dozens of workers into the new (and sometimes still erratic) $1.75 million computer system.

In the nearby Port Chester warehouse, another 150 workers pick and pack from an assembly line of Lillian Vernon catalog buys. In 1985, some 75 million catalogs (a major catalog has over 144 pages and 800 products, including cosmetics, transistors, toys, baggies for onions and kitchen graters) will be zipped out to the 2,500,000 nationwide customers who have bought and bought from Lillian Vernon during the past year.

The total mailing list annually is 5 million. And to fill return orders this year, some 5,500,000 will go out, most within a week of the request.

Adds Ms. Katz flatly: "I think you're never really sure you're going to be a success. You always worry something will happen. And once you stop worrying, it happens. Get a little sloppy...and my God!"

She learned, she says, by hard experience. "I'm normally very tight. Last year I let go of some control. The company suffered. And I had to fire two executives. I live very lavishly and very well, but those are the rewards for taking care of what goes on in the business.

Teapot featured in Lillian Vernon catalog

"Last year, we had such a year..." She shakes her head. "We did tremendous growth but we didn't make all that much money. We were spending too much. If the publicity people didn't approve a picture, we took another. They said: 'This is not just another picture. It's going into 20 million catalogs.' So we did that..."

She adds: "It's great for kids to be first with the trendy move. I don't need that. I just want to be there longest. I don't want to go. I want to stay."

There was a turning point, an instant plucked from time when Lillian Katz sensed her company would expand.

In the late 1970s, it was a turning point affecting millions of other Americans. "The gas crisis," says Ms. Katz emphatically. "That's what really propelled us into the success story we became. America found a new niche it needed, a way to shop at home."

Once started, the mail-order business exploded. In the five years since 1980, Ms. Katz estimates her company has multiplied its orders five times over.

Now, if she can slow the drive to work, to success, maybe she will have more time for herself... I'm tired. Running an empire isn't all that easy."

In 1970, she had married her second husband, Robert Katz, a soft-spoken man with his own manufacturing business.

"I think I'm a fair, strong executive. I wouldn't hurt anybody. I am loud at times — and that's tough. That goes with the territory and everybody knows it. Most people at this point, people who know me, realize that when I'm in a pressure cooker, exploding is the only way I can survive. I think my temper is probably my worst weakness. But overall, I'm a good businesswoman. And that's my strength. I know what makes this company tick. I know merchandising. I know what to offer people to make them want to buy. And that's a talent like dancing and singing."

The Lillian Vernon fall catalog is a mammoth book, showcasing 900 items often jammed into 600 spaces, given multiple photos, and weighing in with all hort of your average Bible.

"I think the consumer, right now, is getting a little jaded," Ms. Katz says. "I think everyone is overbought. That's the big challenge of the late '80s — how to stimulate people with buying power."

And maybe, although she does want to cut back on her work hours to spend more time on myself, there might be a slight expansion for the company into the retail market and another challenge for the "queen of catalogs."

University drama program has talented graduates

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Two and a half years into her job of overseeing dramatic arts at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Milly Barranger says she's starting to see results.

"We can put a company out there," she said.

Ms. Barranger is chairman of the UNC drama department and executive producer of Playmakers Repertory Company, the university's performing company.

In the spring, Playmakers produced its first "Playfest" of three shows produced in quick succession. Playfest was both a marketing device and an attempt to establish an annual theatrical event.

The third Playfest show was the Southern premiere of "Dracula: A Musical Nightmare." The Playmakers' production had musical and stage direction by the play's composer and author, John Aschenbrenner and Douglas Johnson, and starred Joe Spano of television's "Hill Street Blues."

After its Chapel Hill run was extended due to high ticket demand, the production was taken west for a five-week run in San Francisco.

Ms. Barranger said UNC hired her in 1982 to create "a healthy educational symbiosis between the undergraduate and graduate programs and our professional theater."

UNC's drama program has three parts. There are the Department of Dramatic Arts' two degree programs — bachelor of arts and master of fine arts — and the Playmakers Repertory Company, which produces plays with full-time professional directing, costuming and technical staff and a mix of visiting professional, faculty and student actors.

The undergraduate program offers a liberal arts major in theater, with emphasis on dramatic literature and some courses in acting.

UNC's master of fine arts program offers three years of professional training in acting, costuming and technical production. Besides "solid training" at UNC, graduate students are placed in internships at regional theaters around the United States, enabling them to make contacts for jobs after graduation. All the M.F.A. students who have graduated in the last two years are currently employed theatrically, Ms. Barranger said.

The department recruits "the best teaching artists we can find" for its faculty, she said, through auditions in New York City, Chicago and San Francisco.

Drama at UNC began with the formation in 1918 of the Carolina Playmakers by Frederick Koch. Koch, a UNC professor, encouraged his students to write and produce "folk dramas" — original plays based on regional materials.

Madonna debuts in 'Desperately'

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

About half of the audience at a recent showing of "Desperately Seeking Susan," attended by the reviewer consisted of teen-aged and pre-teen girls.

Presumably, this is because pop singer Madonna makes her feature film debut in "Desperately."

Since Madonna is probably noted more for her penchant for baring her navel than for her singing voice, it's a little disconcerting to realize that she has such a substantial following among the training bra set.

Although Madonna is the cast member who is attracting most of the film's publicity, Rosanna Arquette is the movie's true star.

Miss Arquette plays Roberta, a young suburban New Jersey housewife living a very prosperous, secure but bland life. She dreams of adventurous romance and reads the personals advertisements in a Manhattan tabloid for vicarious thrills.

Madonna plays Susan, a New York New Wave-ish drifter who has apparently made promiscuity her part-time profession.

One of Susan's abundance of boyfriends regularly arranges meetings with her via the newspaper's personal ads. Roberta follows the ads and is so intrigued by them that she decides to go to one of the meetings to see what Susan and her beau look like.

Through a completely unlikely chain of events, Roberta and Susan end up trading places. Roberta inadvertently plunges headfirst into the fringes of New York's weird street life. Susan ends up gradually drifting into suburbia with Roberta's husband, a tacky hot tub salesman played by Mark Blum.

To complicate matters further, Roberta is being pursued by a mob hitman who is trying to kill her because he — like almost everyone else — has her confused with Susan.

The film is as much fun as last summer's adventure-romance with a female heroine, "American Dreamer," and is much more stylish.

Director Susan Seidelman displays an offbeat, clever sense of humor and manages to make amazingly smooth transitions between completely disparate scenes.

It would be hard to imagine two more disparate characters than Madonna's and Miss Arquette's.

Madonna has shown some screen magnetism in her music videos, which range from the fun "Material Girl" to the lame "Like a Virgin." In "Desperately," she doesn't advance beyond her sexy video persona at all, but that is more than adequate for her role.

Miss Arquette, on the other hand, is a surprise a minute. She is so beguiling that one really wants to believe this urban fairy tale despite the fact that it hinges on her outlandishly convenient case of amnesia.

Brassy, brazen Madonna may not exactly be the ideal role model for pre-teen girls, but perhaps some of Miss Arquette's quirky sweetness will rub off on the audience instead.

"Desperately Seeking Susan," rated PG-13 for some nudity, strong language and sexual innuendo, is now showing at Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

King's 'Cat's Eye' more funny than scary

"Cat's Eye," the latest film written by Stephen King, may disappoint many hardcore fans of King's supernaturally scary novels. His new effort actually goes for giggles more often than chills.

It will also give King's loyal readers a creepy sense of deja vu, since the first two-thirds are taken from his 1978 short story anthology "Night Shift."

King has raided "Night Shift" before for the screen. Last year's "Children of the Corn" was just a fleshed-out version of a short story from that book.

This new film is a collection of three separate stories loosely tied together by a stray cat wandering in search of a home.

The cat first awkwardly meanders into a twisted little tale about a company that goes to extremely drastic lengths to help smokers kick the habit. King fans will instantly recognize this as the short story "Quitter's, Inc." from "Night Shift."

From there our feline hero glides more gracefully into a mad mobster's weird wager, which is based on King's "The Ledge," also from "Night Shift."

The final segment is the only fresh part of the film's trilogy. It climaxes, however, in a less-than-epic battle between the cat and a troll who, oddly enough, is barely 6 inches tall.

In all fairness, though, he's the most gruesomely realistic 6-inch-tall troll one will ever want to meet. The dwarfish demon was designed by special effects wizard Carlos Rambaldi, who created the horrific monster in "Alien" and the gentler space visitors in "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

Rambaldi's tiny troll is believable enough that it might give small children nightmares. The troll and the cat are definitely the best performers in "Cat's Eye."

The whole film has the comic book-thin acting and garish exaggeration of 1982's thriller anthology, "Creepshow," which King also wrote.

"Cat's Eye" abounds with morbid humor and references to King's other works.

In the opening sequence, the cat is chased by the rabid dog from King's "Cujo" and nearly run over by the red 1958 Plymouth from "Christine."

At other points in the movies, characters lay in bed reading "Pet Sematary," or watch another King movie on television.

In one of the funniest throwaway in-jokes, a character quits watching "The Dead Zone" — a faithful film adaptation of yet another King novel — saying, "I don't understand this damn movie anyway. I don't know who writes this crap."

King's morbid humor and self-references continue throughout the film, reminiscent of Alfred Hitchcock's half-mocking approach.

The film is really too heavy-handed to be genuinely funny and isn't crafted well enough to be truly scary. Unfortunately, director Lewis Teague isn't nearly as skillful as George Romero, the director who managed to make "Creepshow" surprisingly good.

"Cat's Eye" is a pleasant enough Saturday matinee kind of movie, but the film's flaws are omens that King should probably stick to what he's best at — scaring the daylights out of his fans.

"Cat's Eye," rated PG-13 for violence and strong language, is now showing at Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

News competitors often socialize

NEW YORK (AP) — The competition among the network news anchors can extend, in a friendly way, to their wives on a tennis court.

Dan Rather's wife, Jean, has a regular tennis game with Tom Brokaw's wife, Meredith. Earlier this year, the two women and Kathleen Sauter, wife of Van Gordon Sauter, the CBS executive in charge of news, went to Florida for a week of tennis together.

One night last month, Rather, anchor of the "CBS Evening News," was not on the broadcast because he was in Germany on assignment. At first Brokaw was surprised when he saw substitute Bob Schieffer on a TV monitor in the NBC newsroom. But then he realized he already had the scoop on Rather's absence from his wife.

The Brokaws and Sauters are Park Avenue neighbors. Their apartments abut, and Brokaw said he leaves his kitchen door open so his daughter and Sauter's daughter can visit.

Several years ago, when Peter Jennings left his London assignment and moved to New York to take the anchor job on ABC's "World News Tonight," the Brokaws threw a party for Jennings and his wife.

ABC News President Roone Arledge's daughter, Patty, works as a production secretary for "NBC Nightly News."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Reservations being taken for annual Jazz Classic

Midland's ninth annual Jazz Classic is set for the Holiday Inn Country Villa Oct. 1-6. Some 20 well-known jazz musicians will provide the nightly entertainment.

Nightly performances begin at 8 p.m. and end at midnight. The Oct. 6 performance will run from 2 to 6 p.m.

Tickets are not sold at the door. They can be purchased from the Midland Jazz Association, P.O. Box 3790, Midland, 79702. For more information call Max Christensen, 682-5334. A limited amount of seats are available and reservations are now being taken.

Ticket price is $125 for the six performances. Single performance tickets are not available; however, it is possible to share a ticket if the ticket holder does not wish to come to each performance. Reservations for seating outside of the sponsor table area is sold on a first-come basis. Persons wishing to seat together need to make their reservations at the same time.

Musicians invited to attend the 1985 Classic include: Jack Lesberg (who is also the musical director for the event), Milt Hinton and George Mraz, bass; Dick Hyman, Dave McKenna and Ralph Sutton, piano; Butch Miles, Gus Johnson and Jake Hanna, drums; Joe Wilder, Jack Sheldon and Ruby Braff, trumpet and flugelhorn; Carl Fontana, Bill Watrous and George Masso, trombone; Flip Phillips and Scott Hamilton, tenor sax; Bud Shanks and Chris Wood, alto sax and flute; Johnny Mince and Kenny Davern, clarinet; Tal Farlow, guitar; and Red Norvo, vibes.

Jazz band to give concert

ODESSA — Odessa College's Jazz Band will present a spring concert featuring Peter Appleyard at 8 p.m. Friday at the Globe Theatre.

Appleyard, Canada's foremost vibraharpist, played with Benny Goodman for eight years. A native of England, Appleyard began playing the piano at age 14 and took up the vibraharp after he moved to Canada.

During his career he performed with the Benny Goodman Sextet at every major concert hall in the world. Appleyard recorded with Goodman in "On Stage," and "Benny Goodman Into the 70's." He was featured with Count Basie, Ella Fitzgerald and Frank Sinatra for a special engagement at the Uris Theatre in 1975.

Since 1976, Appleyard has hosted his own award-winning TV show "Peter Appleyard Presents," a weekly jazz show seen throughout Canada. He has also appeared on other TV shows such as "The Tonight Show" and "Andy Williams Show."

From his home in Toronto, Appleyard performs and contracts film scores for Henry Mancini, Robert Farnon, Maurice Garr, Percy Faith and Gil Mellie. He has recorded "Percussive Jazz," "The Vibe Sound of Peter Appleyard," and "Peter Appleyard Presents."

The Odessa College Jazz Band will perform with Appleyard and the concert will also feature the Odessa High School Stage Band.

Admission to the concert is $3 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens.

Kelton to address group

Texas novelist Elmer Kelton will be the next speaker at the monthly meeting of the Texas Nightwriters. The meeting is scheduled for 1 p.m. Saturday.

The meeting will be held at the Artificial Lift Efficiency School, 1162 County Road North and Loop 250, Midland. The school is located on the north side of the loop, just west of the Mays Ranch gate.

Kelton has won four Spur Awards, given by the Western Writers of America. In 1974, he won the Western Heritage Wrangler Award for "The Time It Never Rained." "The Good Old Boys" and "The Wolf and the Buffalo" were selected by "Reader's Digest" for inclusion in its condensed books editions. Kelton is associate editor of "Livestock Weekly."

The Texas Nightwriters, a group of professional writers, meets at 1 p.m. on the fourth Saturday of every month. The guest speaker is featured for the first hour of the meeting. After a break, members of the Nightwriters meet to read their works for critique. Only members are allowed for the critique portion of the meeting.

The annual membership fee is $15.

The group is composed of writers who are selling their works and those who want to learn how to write for profit.

Mails' exhibit to close

The exhibit "Thomas E. Mails: Artist and Historian of Native American Peoples" closes next Sunday at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

Mails' lifelong interest in North American Indians has led him to world wide recognition as a historian, artist and author. A partial listing of his books includes "Mystic Warriors of the Plains," "Dog Soldiers," "Bear Men and Buffalo Women," "The People Called Apache," "Sundancing at Rosebud and Pine Ridge," "Fools Crow" and "The Pueblo Children of the Earth Mother."

The latter is a two-volume work with more than 3,000 illustrations. Published by Doubleday in October 1983, it is one of the costliest publishing efforts in the company's history.

Mails is producing an illustrated history of the Cherokee Indians for Doubleday with a projected publication date of 1987. He is also writing a screenplay for a major motion picture that portrays the Crow Indians of Montana during the critical years of 1868-1877.

Museum hours are Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2 to 5 p.m. Admission is free. For more information call the museum at 683-2882.

Student's art on display

The 24th Annual Student Art Festival is open through May 19 at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 West Missouri.

Art work done by students in elementary grades is being featured through May 1. Work done by secondary students will be shown May 3-19.

The Festival is sponsored by the Museum of the Southwest, Midland Independent School District, City Council P.T.A. and Las Manos. Winners will receive awards May 14 at a reception at the museum.

Entries are from all public and private schools in Midland. The Student Art Festival hopes to stimulate student interest in the arts, to offer the public an opportunity to view student work, and to recognize outstanding accomplishments of students.

Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. There is no charge.

White Heart to perform

SAN ANGELO — White Heart, a contemporary Christian band, will be in concert at San Angelo City Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

White Heart is comprised of six multi-talented young men, and incorporates a versatile blend of contemporary pop, rhythm and blues and rock. The six piece band is acclaimed for their clear-cut lyrics, powerful vocals and fresh sound.

In the last 12 months the group has cut its second top selling LP, "Vital Signs," making its debut on the National Album sales chart at No. 8. The songs "We are His Hands" and "Following the King" are receiving heavy air play on Christian Radio stations nationwide.

Further information on concert details and tickets is available from Alpha Omega at 2457 Dena Drive, San Angelo, Texas 76904 or call 1-944-1771.

'Eccentrics' focus of display

BIG SPRING — The exhibit "To Stand Alone: A Gallery of Texas Originals" is hanging at the Heritage Museum in Big Spring.

Prepared by the Institute of Texan Cultures, the exhibit highlights the lives of 11 Texans who were considered eccentrics during their lifetimes but contributed to American society. For example, C.W. Post made a fortune in the cereal business and then planned colonization schemes and dryland farming experiments that changed the High Plains landscape. Post's rainmaking efforts, utilizing dynamite blasts, persuaded his neighbors that he was a crackpot.

The exhibit will be on display through the end of this month. The museum, located at 510 Scurry St., is open Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to noon and 1-5 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday from 1-5 p.m.

Admission is $1 for adults. There is no charge for children, students, youth groups and museum members.

Ballet troupe to perform

American Ballet Theatre II comes to Midland for an 8 p.m. performance Thursday at Lee High School Auditorium.

The evening of dance is sponsored by Ballet Midland.

American Ballet Theatre II, an activity of Ballet Theatre Foundation, has provided the first professional experience for many talented dancers and numbers many alumni among the dancers in American Ballet Theatre. Director for the 16-member troupe is Richard Englund. Jeremy Blanton is associate director.

Admission for the performance is $10.

Cartoons to be on display

Cowboy cartoonist Ace Reid will be in Midland Monday and Tuesday for the first public showing of his private collection of western and cowboy cartoons.

Reid's collection will be on display in the ClayDesta National Bank lobby, corner of Wadley and Big Spring streets, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Reid and his wife, Madge, will be present during the exhibition and copies of his books will be available.

Paging calls may be trivia

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Listen carefully to the paging calls and dialogue in "St. Elsewhere," and you might hear some trivia, a familiar name, or an inside joke from the people who write the MTM Productions show on NBC-TV.

Often paged in the halls of St. Eligius is Dr. Stevep Kiley, the character played by James Brolin on the old "Marcus Welby, M.D." series.

Once there was a reference that "Dr. Levine's wife needs another insulin shot." Producer Mary Tyler Moore, a diabetic, is married to Dr. Robert Levine.

Visiting police officers paged include Pete Malloy, once of "Adam-12" and Dan Matthews, the California Highway Patrol captain in the syndicated series.

Actor again cast as lawyer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Once again, Barry Newman has been tapped to play an attorney in "Murphy's Law," a pilot for 20th Century-Fox Television.

Newman previously played a lawyer who ditched city practice and moved to the Southwest in the NBC-TV series "Petrocelli." He also played a defense attorney in the television miniseries "Fatal Vision."

"Murphy's Law" is being produced for CBS Television Network. Newman will play a deputy district attorney in a large city, and the story of crimes and their resolutions will be seen through Murphy's point of view.

City orders tooth pulled

CARMEL, Ind. (AP) — City officials have told dentist Gerald M. Lande to pull the big wooden tooth that sits outside his office, saying it's an 8-foot ache they don't need.

Lande says the tooth is a work of art.

City zoning officials say it is an advertising device and thus falls under regulations limiting such signs to 5 feet in this Indianapolis suburb.

Lande said he will appeal the city's order to pull the tooth.

Set designer Nancy Stewart and set artist Paul Wecker work on the sets for Midland Opera Theatre's production of "Johnny Sneaky," which runs at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave. This production is adapted from Puccinni's "Gianni Schicchi." The costumes have become western, the setting has been moved to Midland circa 1925, the Italian names have been modified to ones with a twang and the opera is now titled "Johnny Sneaky." Tickets for "Johnny Sneaky" are $10. They can be purchased at Theatre Midland Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. or at the door the nights of performances.

PBS telecast examines two 'hereos' and how they fared test of time

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — In the summer of 1876, two Americans suffered personal defeat.

One of them, painter Thomas Eakins, submitted his now-famous work,"The Gross Clinic," to the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia, which rejected it.

The other, Gen. George Armstrong Custer, lost his life and his force of about 200 men at the Little Big Horn.

In 1876, Custer was perceived by the American public as the hero of heroes. Eakins was perceived by the few who'd ever heard of him as a nut, and perhaps an immoral one, because he insisted that his art students work with nude models.

On Wednesday, "Smithsonian World" will inaugurate its spring season with a PBS telecast called "Heroes and the Test of Time," examining the two men and their legends.

Today, Eakins fares better than Custer, since "The Gross Clinic," a dramatic portrait of the primitive state of surgery in his age, now is considered a masterpiece.

In fact, valued at millions, it's been called the greatest American painting of the 19th century.

Yet during his lifetime, Eakins sold only 20 of his works and couldn't give the rest away.

Custer, on the other hand, after graduating 34th in a class of 34 from West Point, had shown himself utterly fearless during the Civil War.

When he was 23 years old, The New York Times compared him with Napoleon.

He was the media darling and continued to be, even after death until, during the Vietnam period, the public began to cheer for the Indians.

In "Heroes And the Test of Time," host David McCullough visits the Little Big Horn battle field that, through the spades of modern archeologists and the magic of computers, has been yielding some of its secrets.

We do know now that some soldiers were mutilated, perhaps by squaws. And we do know that the Indians were more heavily gunned than we'd imagined.

We also know how Custer deployed his troops. But we still don't know exactly how he died.

During the telecast, McCullough interviews the grandson of an Indian described as "Custer's favorite scout," and a grandson of another Indian who fought against the seventh cavalry.

Measure proposes Constitutional English

Copley News Service

Once again tongues are being wagged to make English the official language of the land.

The concern is raised by Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., that we are becoming a multi-lingual nation whose English is unofficially deteriorating for lack of constitutional direction. So the senator is proposing an English Language Amendment.

That's perfectly all right, unless someone asks whose English we might be required to speak and write. We can see hours of lobbying and filibustering lying ahead to resolve that question.

Chances are slim that the King's English will become the linguistic norm here, but establishing the Constitution's English will be difficult. Do we all learn the slow drawl of a Southerner or the quick slur of a "N'Yawkr."

Because the movement is coming out of Washington, D.C., that factor alone could write us into the dangerous lexicon of bureaucrat's English, which takes an entire day in April to declare, "It looks like rain."

Meanwhile there will be sacrifices. Official English should embargo such foreign intrusions as french fries. Already many aficionados of the potato stick Americanize them to mere fries. No tacos, no pizza, no pasta, no quiche, not even a small hors d'oeuvre. Such abstinence could starve our stomachs even as it parches our tongues.

But maybe cinema would go back to being ordinary movies and the "theatre" would revert to the grassroots "theater" it once was.

Professionally speaking, doctors and lawyers, might be required to give up their fancy Latin terms, risking the possibility that they would not sound any different than the rest of us.

Carrousel horses being refurbished

ARLINGTON (AP) — The carrousel horse — with flowing tail, glass diamond saddle and immaculate gold body — inside the Six Flags Over Texas management office was just a side project for three of the park's artisans.

But the teasing beauty of the horse, enticing riders despite its helpless immobility, launched the most ambitious antique restoration project in Six Flags history.

A few years ago, Six Flags officials purchased a stable of carrousel horses as backups from Astrodome builder Judge Roy Hofeinz, who collected them as a hobby.

Discarded in a balcony of the park's Sign Department warehouse, the horses lay in a heap.

Then Ed Armstrong, 28, John Gavia, 41, and his 31-year-old brother, Dan, decided to refurhbish one of the horses — more for fun than anything else.

That horse was put in the management offices.

"They did such a marvelous job on that one horse that we said 'hey guys, we've got a valuable asset here. Let's make this carrousel what it should be,'" said park spokesman Bruce Neal.

All 66 of Six Flags' carrousel horses were scheduled to be restored to their glorious turn-of-the-century beauty.

So the Gavias, both wood carving hobbyists, and Armstrong took on the project amid their usual chores of maintaining and creating some of the 6,500 signs that fill the tourist attraction.

"It's a big challenge to reproduce a piece of art," said John Gavia, supervisor of the Sign Department. "You're missing a leg that was carved by one of the world's most famous carrousel carvers, and it's something that has to be done right, without any shortcuts."

The carrousel, the last one built by William Dentzel, carried endless lines of smiling children in Rockaway's Playland in Long Island, N.Y., during the 1920s.

Dentzel, considered one of the greatest American carrousel horse carvers, operated the ride himself for the 1926 and 1927 seasons.

When the city of New York condemened the property in 1937, the horses were stored until 1945. But Rockaway's reopened, and the horses known as "standers and jumpers" were in business again.

In 1962, Six Flags bought the ride from Rockaway's for $25,000.

Unfortunately, the first thing the maintenance department did to the horses was coat them in Fiberglas — a death certificate for the basswood carvings.

"When we finally got some of the horses off the line, we realized the damage the Fiberglas had done," Armstrong said.

Water had seeped into the horses through the legs, and traveled up the body. The Fiberglas transformed the horses into a veritable terrarium, and the fungi rotted nearly all the horses' legs.

Legless carrousel horses are scattered throughout the department in all stages of transformation: a gray torso awaiting the bedazzling paints; newly carved legs hanging from a wire; and a jet-black horse seemingly delighted by its new body.

Book chronicles U.S. history through inventions

"The Road to Colossus," by Thomas Kiernan; Morrow; $16.95; 332 pp.

By LEE DEMBART
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

A Review

A woman in her 80s was telling guests at a dinner party not long ago of an automobile journey she had made in 1930 from San Diego to San Francisco. The car was outfitted with a radio, and as the party came into the range of a radio station in Santa Monica, east of Los Angeles, they switched it on. Music filled the car.

"I thought," the woman recalled, "'What a miracle! Music in the car! I will never see anything more wonderful as long as I live!'"

She was right to be filled with awe and wonder, but her prediction of what was to come fell somewhat short of the mark.

In fact, the United States has been blessed for most of the last 200 years with an endless stream of amazing inventions that seemed wondrous at the time, and still seem wondrous if you stop to think about it. Thomas Kiernan has stopped to think about it, and the result is an engaging, highly readable account of the technologies that singly and jointly changed industries, America and the world.

Kiernan's book is a history of the United States that includes such events as the inventions of the cotton gin, steamboat, reaper and indoor plumbing. He pays thoughtful and original attention to the social consequences of the new devices he describes. The typewriter, for example, opened new jobs for women and was a key element in the start of their emancipation. Toilet paper was the first mass-marketed consumer product, and it helped launch the advertising and design industries. The completion of massive civil engineering projects such as the transcontinental railway, the Brooklyn Bridge and the Panama Canal imbued in the American mind the sense that nothing was too great for this remarkable country to aim for and accomplish.

Kiernan enlivens his story with capsule profiles of the inventors, who were rarely professional scientists. With few but notable exceptions, their inventions were almost always met with skepticism or public scorn. Eventually, the wisdom of their devices won out, and the sum total of all of the clever machines and organizational skills brought to bear on them has produced in the United States material wealth and comfort unequaled in the history of the world.

Essay book evaluates literature

A Review

"The Flower & the Leaf," by Malcolm Cowley. Viking. 392 Pages. $25.

By PHIL THOMAS
Associated Press

Over the past 40 odd years, Malcolm Cowley has written more than 500 incisive articles of comment on the literary scene.

It's unfortunate that they couldn't all be gathered together in this superb collection but the more than 50 that are here give a fine critical summation of the state of American writing from 1941 to the near present.

As editor Donald W. Faulkner points out in his introduction: "Few other writers of his time have made such a searching and continuous contribution to American letters. Few other writers have had the imagination and the energy to engage in such an effort."

Readers of Cowley's work also must have imagination and energy. While his sentences are incisive, they are not simplistic. The statements he makes about writers and writing in general are not overwhelming, but they do require the reader's attention first and then meditation on what has been said.

Do these things, and the rewards are great.

The book is divided into three parts: "The War Years and After," "The Usable Past," and "Assessments and Retrospections." In the first, Cowley discusses literature in general. He scores a good point, and one that is valid even now, in an essay discussing the books of World War II when he notes: "He (the critic) sees book after book manufactured on the assembly line — the 1943 models, reconditioned and stripped of chromium, but with the old dependable motors inside."

In the second part, he discusses the ways in which contemporary literature is influenced by that of the past. One of the essays included here, "Part of a Century," beautifully sums up American literature from 1900 to 1960.

The final section deals with writers, their work, and Cowley's evaluation of them. There are fine insights here and succinct summations, such as the one about John O'Hara who turned out a prodigious amount of work but: "In the end his output of words outran his considerable power of invention."

Plot anachronism, characters odd, plain

"The Noonday Devil," by Ralph McInerny. Atheneum. 306 Pages. $15.95.

WAKA TSUNODA
Associated Press

A Review

Some of those who read Ralph McInerny's "The Noonday Devil" would be tempted to doublecheck its publication date, not believing that it has just come out. The novel is that anachronistic, both in conception and execution.

A good suspense novel must have a good, strong, even shocking premise — something that would put readers on an instant alert and hold them there until the final resolution.

McInerny's premise might have met that criterion at one point in history, but not any more. How many people would gasp with shock today when they hear an urgent whisper, "Pss...Communists have infiltrated the church"?

The days when the communists were everyone's favorite arch-villains just because they were communists have long since gone. Evil forces in thrillers and spy novels today are far more complex, the better to suit the tastes of a more sophisticated readership.

"The Noonday Devil" revolves around the assassination of Kevin Cardinal Fergus, the archbishop of New York, and the tape he left behind, saying that, although he didn't know his identity, there was a KGB agent in the church.

The bishop's friend, Harold Packard, founder of The Free World Policy Center, a conservative think tank, hires a private investigator, Philip Knight, to find out.

No sooner has the search for the red priest begun, however, than the story loses direction, bogged down by McInerny's penchant for describing the idiosyncracies of various supporting characters, among them Knight's fat brother, Roger, an unemployable philosopher; and Matthew Hanratty, the self-important religion editor of a New York newspaper.

Had these characters been genuinely interesting, they could have given the novel some virtue but, unfortunately, they are just plain odd and without charm.

Author creates strange land, diverse peoples

"Maia," by Richard Adams. Knopf. 1,062 Pages. $19.95.

By CAROL DEEGAN
Associated Press

A Review

Richard Adams does an excellent job of creating the mythical land of Bekla and the people that inhabit it in his new novel, "Maia."

Maia is a beautiful young peasant girl, uneducated, at the mercy of her lecherous father and her jealous and suspicious mother. She has no particular talents, skills or interests, but she loves the water and is an expert swimmer, which serves her well.

If Maia hadn't been quite so beautiful, she might have led a dull and uneventful life. But Maia's mother views her as a threat, and she seizes an opportunity to sell her daughter into slavery. Luckily for Maia, she is befriended by a black slave-girl, the beautiful and mysterious Occula. Occula and Maia are sold into the same household — the household of the gluttonous Sencho, one of the most powerful men in the Beklan empire.

Under Occula's tutoring, Maia becomes skilled in her work, and might have been more or less content with her life. But there is considerable political strife in Bekla, and when Sencho is murdered, Maia's life is turned upside down.

Through a series of complex events, Maia saves the Beklan army and becomes a national heroine. She becomes known as Maia Serrelinda, saviour of Bekla and princess from Tonilda, with a house, money and servants of her own. To Maia, her life has become a dream.

But things are not idyllic. Maia's friend, accused of aiding in Sencho's murder, is missing and presumed dead. The whereabouts of Maia's only true love, Zenka, whom she betrayed to save the empire, is unknown. And Maia herself, because she is so popular with the people, is viewed as a threat by the Sacred Queen Fornis, who is struggling to retain her power and control over the land.

Adam has skillfully created a strange land of diverse peoples; a land of religion, myth and folklore. The novel is very long, but the author manages to hold the reader's attention.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

Monday, April 22, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your productivity rises when you find a way to reduce tensions at work. Emphasize the benefits that teamwork will bring. Welcome new responsibilities and expand your area of influence. Let your conscience be your guide in business dealings. This is no time to relinquish your authority within the family circle. Stay on top of domestic development. Experts help you make wise investments. Save money wherever you can. Romantic partner shares your goals.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A financial venture you undertake with a friend could become rather tricky. Be completely candid in all your dealings. Rely on conventional business methods when negotiating with conservative people.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Distant career or business interests look more promising now. Postpone signing papers. You do not want to make commitments you might not be able to honor. Do-it-yourself types save a bundle.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you go your own way now, stay informed on a former partner's actions. Real estate ventures look most promising. A close encounter with an attractive stranger leaves you walking on air.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Several job offers come your way. You might be better off staying put. Keep office politics to a minimum. You maneuver around any roadblocks you encounter.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Exercises release pent-up tension. Try to fit in a brisk walk at lunchtime. A budget revision will avert domestic squabbles. Be more tolerant of loved one's foibles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Working alone will bring better results than a team effort. Avoid depending on others. Loved one may not see eye to eye with you on an important question.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An excellent day for joint financial ventures. Just be sure to consult mate or partner before buying or selling! Keep a close eye on someone who tries to get something for nothing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An employer makes stiff demands on your time and energy. Reschedule appointments that are not that important. Stay calm and logical when dealing with loved ones.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may have to work overtime now. Mate could be resentful if you must change certain social plans. A compromise averts a major confrontation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be more patient with your co-workers. Your consideration for their feelings could avert a confrontation. Pay greater attention to details. Investigate matters before making decisions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid secret meetings -- they are sure to be misunderstood by higher-ups. Do not take risks with your money or reputation. Stick to conventional business practices.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your co-workers are more likely to see your side of things if you remain calm and logical. Avoid exaggeration. Investigate the possibility of taking mate along when traveling for business.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West

Opening lead: Two of ♡.

The Five of Hearts was strutting around as if he were top o' the heap. No one begrudged him that, for the incident in which he was involved was, to say the least, highly unusual. After all, how often can a singleton five of trumps win the first trump lead, especially when he is the fourth player to the trick!

"First, let me set the scene," related the Five of Hearts. "It was in a late round of the Vanderbilt Team Championship. I was held by a psychic bidder of renown, and our opponents were one of the world's great pairs.

"When North and East both passed, my owner decided that the hand belonged to the opponents so, naturally, he felt it was incumbent on him to open the bidding. His choice was three hearts!

"All this time West had been contemplating his collection of goodies and deciding how he planned to bid the hand. Suddenly he found that not only did he have to act at the three-level, but his seven-card suit had been stolen by the preemptor! Since he had no idea what to bid, he elected to pass after much thought. Even had East wanted to bid, his partner's hesitation barred him, and three hearts became the final contract.

"West chose to lead the two of trumps. Declarer played low from dummy and East, who did not have an inkling about what was going on, also played low—he wanted to preserve his queen of trumps to overruff dummy should declarer try to ruff a club. So I won the first trick!

"East did score his overruff, but our side made three tricks—in addition to me, declarer made the ace of trumps and a diamond for -300. In the other room, our side reached five hearts on the East-West cards, were doubled and made an overtrick for a gain of 13 International Match Points.

Artichokes seem to 'sing' if they're fresh

By PHILOMENA CORRADENO
King Features Syndicate

If you, like me, were taught not to squeeze vegetables to test quality, you would have been just as surprised as I was a few years ago when I asked a produce dealer if his artichokes were "nice and fresh." He looked offended.

"Of course they are," he said, and holding one up to my ear, squeezed it and said, "Listen how fresh they are. They sing. Hear 'O Sole Mio?'

"I really couldn't make out any melody but, honest, it did sing. It's true — a fresh, crisp artichoke hums, squeaks really, when you squeeze it. This is the only vegetable you may take such liberties with.

Though it has a strange, sturdy look, the artichoke is divided into three marvelous parts. The bottom (sometimes called the heart) is considered the greatest delicacy. For a rather expensive treat you may buy these ready to use, in cans or jars, packed in oil or slightly salted water.

The lighter-colored center leaves are just a little lower in prestige. These are available frozen, or in cans or jars in salted water or marinated in oil. Finally there are the rugged but delicious outer leaves that make artichokes a chic finger food.

Artichokes are most frequently cooked and served with a sauce or dip as a first course. In my family they were generally stuffed, then cooked, and were a main course. My mother's was a simple but filling bread stuffing: soft bread crumbs or dry Italian or French bread soaked in water, then squeezed and pulled apart, an egg or two, three-quarters to a cup of grated Romano cheese, lots of chopped fresh Italian parsley, a little olive oil, salt and black pepper.

Sometimes she would add to the cooking water a clove of garlic impaled on a skewer for easy removal. She would cut off the stems, stand them upright in a saucepan, weight them down with a heavy plate, add water to about halfway up the artichokes, salt, peppercorns, olive oil and more parsley, plus the cut-off stems. They would simmer, maybe an hour or so, till a couple of leaves pulled out easily.

Strangely, the flavors of fresh, canned and frozen artichokes differ from each other. I enjoy all three but am partial to the fresh. Available most of the year, they are reaching their peak season right now.

To prepare artichokes, cut off the stems and set them aside. If there are tiny leaves on the stem, pull them off and discard. Trim the thorny tips of the leaves. If you want a fancy look, cut about three-quarters of an inch from the top of each leaf.

Holding the artichoke upside down, press down on a flat surface to open up the leaves. Wash several times in cold water. Turn upside down to drain.

Now, if you plan to stuff them before cooking, proceed as described above. Otherwise, you may boil them whole or cut in halves or quarters, using ¼ teaspoon salt per artichoke, juice of 1 lemon and six or eight peppercorns. Drain and serve either hot or chilled with a sauce or dip.

• • •

Here is a quick but elegant dish for two that combines chicken and only the center light-colored leaves. You might want to boil the outer leaves till tender. Refrigerate them and serve at another meal with sauce or dip.

Artichoke Chicken Saute

ARTICHOKE CHICKEN SAUTE

1 medium artichoke
1 lemon, halved
Juice of 1 lemon
¼ cup butter or margarine, divided
2 tablespoons water
1 whole chicken breast, skinned, boned, cut into strips
½ teaspoon basil leaves, crushed
Dash salt, pepper
Grated Parmesan cheese

Bend back outer petals of artichoke until they snap off easily near base. Continue to snap off and discard thick petals until central core of pale green petals is reached. Cut off top 2 inches of artichoke; discard. Cut off stem; reserve. Trim off outer dark green layer from artichoke bottom and stem; rub all surfaces thoroughly with lemon half and dip in lemon juice.

Cut artichoke into eighths and stem into very thin lengthwise slices. Saute in 2 tablespoons butter. Add water; cook, covered, over medium heat about 5 minutes or until water has evaporated and artichokes are tender. Add 2 tablespoons butter; increase heat. Add chicken, basil, salt and pepper; cook and stir 3 or 4 minutes or until chicken is cooked. Squeeze juice of remaining half lemon over artichoke mixture. Serve with Parmesan cheese.

• • •

Here is another main dish. In this the boiled artichokes are stuffed and then baked for a short period.

TURKEY-STUFFED ARTICHOKES

4 medium artichokes, cooked
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 cup sliced mushrooms or 1 (4-ounce) can chopped mushrooms, drained
2 tablespoons flour
½ cup chicken broth
1 cup diced cooked turkey or chicken
1 cup cooked whole kernel corn or Mexican-style corn
Dash pepper

With a spoon, remove small prickly-tipped petals and fuzzy choke from artichokes. Melt butter in saucepan. Add onion and mushrooms and cook over low heat 5 minutes. Stir in flour. Gradually add broth and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add turkey, corn and pepper; mix well. Spoon mixture into artichokes, spreading center leaves. Place artichokes in baking pan; cover with foil and bake at 350F 20 minutes or until thoroughly heated.

• • •

Artichokes are an elegant accompaniment for a budget-priced flank steak rolled around a savory medley of fresh vegetables. Although an economical cut, it can be made almost fork tender by scoring the meat on one side. This breaks down some of the fibers and tenderizes the steak. It also allows the meat to expand so it holds its shape and maintains the pinwheel effect when the meat is sliced.

Prepare the artichokes a day ahead to allow time for them to soak in its tangy lime marinade.

VEGETABLE-STUFFED FLANK STEAK

1 (2-pound) flank steak
¼ cup butter or margarine, divided
½ cup finely chopped onion (1 medium)
½ cup finely chopped carrot
½ cup finely chopped celery
1 cup chopped, pared, cored apple
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground sage
½ teaspoon marjoram
1 cup fresh bread cubes
1¾ cups water, divided
2 teaspoons cornstarch

Lay flank steak on board; trim excess fat; score top side in a diamond pattern with sharp knife. In Dutch oven, melt 3 tablespoons butter; saute onion, carrot and celery until tender, about 5 minutes. Add apple, parsley, salt, sage and marjoram; cook 3 minutes. Add bread cubes; mix well.

Spread stuffing on unscored side of meat, leaving 1-inch margin all around. Roll up lengthwise; tie in several places with string. In same Dutch oven, melt remaining butter; brown meat on all sides. Add 1½ cups water. Cover. Cook in 350F oven 1½ hours, or until meat is tender.

Remove meat to heated serving platter; remove string. Blend together cornstarch and remaining ¼ cup water; add to drippings in Dutch oven. Cook, stirring, until gravy is thickened. Slice meat into 1/2-inch slices. Serve with hot gravy.

ARTICHOKES IN FRESH LIME MARINADE

4 fresh artichokes
1 lime, thinly sliced
2 teaspoons salt, divided
½ cup salad oil
⅓ cup vinegar
1 teaspoon grated lime rind
⅓ cup fresh lime juice
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh parsley
1 tablespoon dried leaf basil

Rinse artichokes in cold water. Turn each on its side; with sharp knife cut 1 inch off top. Cut off stem close to base. Remove any loose or discolored leaves around the bottom. Snip off sharp leaf tips with scissors. In large saucepan or kettle, bring 3 inches water to boiling; add lime slices, 1 teaspoon salt and artichokes.

Flank Steak and Artichokes

Simmer uncovered 30 to 40 minutes, until stem ends of artichokes are tender when pierced with a fork and leaves pull easily from the base. Turn upside down to drain.

In large bowl, combine oil, vinegar, lime rind and juice, parsley, basil and remaining 1 teaspoon salt; mix well. Add artichokes. Refrigerate 6 hours or overnight, if possible. Occasionally spoon marinade over artichokes.

• • •

ARTICHOKES WITH HORSERADISH SAUCE

1 (3-ounce) package cream cheese, softened
1 tablespoon milk 1 to 3 teaspoons prepared horseradish
¼ cup chopped parsley
2 artichokes, cooked and chilled

Combine all ingredients except artichokes; beat until smooth. Serve as sauce for artichoke leaves and heart. Makes about ½ cup sauce.

• • •

ARTICHOKES WITH FRESH TOMATO SAUCE

4 medium-size artichokes
1 lemon, sliced
1½ teaspoons salt, divided
2 tablespoons olive oil
½ cup chopped onion
2 cloves garlic, minced
4 medium tomatoes, peeled and chopped
¼ cup chopped parsley
2 tablespoons freshly squeezed lemon juice
½ teaspoon dried leaf basil, crushed
¼ teaspoon dried rosemary, crushed

Rinse artichokes in cold water. With sharp knife, cut 1 inch off top. Cut off stem close to base. Remove any loose or discolored leaves around the bottom. Remove sharp tips with scissors. In large saucepan or kettle, bring 2 inches of water to boiling; add lemon slices, 1 teaspoon salt and artichokes and stems. Cover. Simmer 25 to 30 minutes, until stem end artichokes are tender when pierced with a fork and leaves pull easily from the base.

Remove from kettle, turn upside down to drain. In large skillet, heat oil; saute onion and garlic until soft. Stir in tomatoes, parsley, lemon juice, basil, rosemary and remaining ½ teaspoon salt. Simmer over low heat 15 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Place artichokes on serving platter. Spoon tomato sauce around artichokes. To eat, pull off thick based outer leaves; dip stem end into sauce. Draw off flesh between teeth; discard remainder of leaf. After all leaves have been removed, cut away the fuzzy center.

Young girl finds that she too was given 'special gift'

By JESSICA MARTIN
King Features Syndicate

"I'm ugly and dumb, and I don't have any friends," Kathie said in a choked voice as tears poured down her cheeks. For weeks my husband and I had been concerned that something was bothering our 9-year-old, but until now had not known what. Today, coming in from school with the jeers of a girl down the street still ringing in her ears, Kathie was unable to hide her feelings any longer.

I held her in my arms and rocked her like I did when she was an infant and toddler. Unlike those times, however, my whispered reassurances and love pats didn't seem to be able to soothe the hurt she was feeling deep inside.

"But Kathie," I said pushing the hair out of her eyes and lifting her face to mine, "you're a pretty little girl. And you certainly aren't dumb."

"Jenny says I am" she sniffled. "She whispers mean things about me and everybody believes her 'cause...'cause what she says is true. I am ugly and dumb. And nobody likes me."

"I don't believe that, Kathie," I said as I reached to hug her again. She pulled away and threw herself down on her bed. Feeling inadequate and unable to help, I finally left her alone to cry through the pain of rejection and low self-esteem that I, too, had felt as a child.

Kathie's father tried to comfort her when he got home from work, but he didn't get any further than I had. After she was in bed for the night, we sat down to talk.

"I don't understand," Rob said, shaking his head. "Until lately Kathie has always seemed to be the happiest and best adjusted of our three children."

"Maybe that's the problem," I said. "Maybe we've assumed too much. I can see now that I probably don't pay enough attention to her. She's always been a good student and well-behaved. Without realizing it, I guess I've been investing more of myself in Tommy and Donna.They say that the middle child is often short-changed."

"Putting a guilt trip on yourself won't help," Rob admonished me. "Besides, if you didn't pay attention to Tommy, he'd tear the house apart."

I had to nod my head in agreement. Our 4-year-old was extremely active and precocious.

"And since Donna's entered the teen years," he continued, "it's been important for you to give her a lot of your time."

"I know that's true, but I still feel I've overlooked Kathie's needs. And," I said as I began to tremble, "now I don't know how to help her."

"The Lord will help us to know just what to do," Rob said as he drew me into his arms.

In the days that followed, we tried to build Kathie's self-image by giving her a lot of praise and affirmation. In addition, I took extra care to see that she went to school looking nice. And in the evening I made time to read and study with her even though she appeared to be doing quite well on her own.

It was the conference with her teacher several weeks later, however, that was the biggest eye-opener to Kathie's needs and the ways in which we could help her. I learned that Kathie had not been over-reacting to the taunts of just one child. She really didn't have any friends to speak of.

To my surprise, I also discovered that Kathie was constantly comparing herself to her older sister who is musically and artistically gifted. Kathie had convinced herself that she wasn't good at anything. Her negative feelings about herself were being picked up and reinforced by her peers.

"Why not get her involved in some after-school activities in which she can make new friends and perhaps find something she enjoys and can learn to do well?" the teacher suggested.

Rob and I discussed her idea. Kathie's birthday was approaching. Our financial resources were limited, but rather than waste money on overpriced toys, we decided to give Kathie a lasting and growing gift. We would give a gift of lessons that would nurture one of her interests. But which one?

"You know God has given each one of us a special gift," I said to her one evening as I observed her fingering the piano keys. "It's something you have to search for and work hard to develop. I know that you have a special gift just like your sister has."

"You mean you really think God has given me one?" she asked wistfully.

"Yes, I really do," I assured her as I read her the promise in Ephesians 4:7: "Christ has given each of us special abilities — whatever he wants us to have out of his rich storehouse of gifts."

"Lord, please help me to find my special gift," Kathie prayed that night. Meanwhile Rob and I also prayed for guidance.

We didn't have long to wait. The next week Rob was reading the newspaper and "just happened" to see an article about a figure skating competition which was being held nearby that coming weekend. We decided to take the children. But it wasn't until we saw Kathie — face flushed, totally absorbed — that we knew the Lord was leading us.

"Do you think I could ice skate?" she asked.

"I always said you have athletic ability," her dad said.

"Would you like to try?" I asked her.

She bit her lip and nodded her head.

Two days later I arranged my schedule to spend an hour just with Kathie at a nearby rink. We were both wobbly in our rented skates, but our shared daughter made the bumps and bruises of repeated falls worth it.

"Mom, can we come again?" Kathie asked breathlessly as she pulled off her skates. Pleased by her spunk and obvious determination to learn, I agreed.

Skating became the most-looked-forward-to event of the week for Kathie — and for me. Beyond the joy of doing something together, we both felt warmed by the friendliness of other skaters, particularly one lady who suggested that Kathie rent Micron skates to give her more ankle support.

While I had guarded against building up false illusions that skating was Kathie's gift, I became really excited by the immediate improvement the different skates made. As I shared my growing enthusiasm with Rob, we made the decision to give Kathie every opportunity to develop her gift.

Kathie's eyes shone when she came off the ice after the first wearing of her very own Microns, given to her by us for her birthday.

"Mom, did you see how good I skated!" she exclaimed.

We also gave her coupons for eight skating lessons. Those lessons were the first of many. It requires continuing financial sacrifices to help Kathie perfect what we now know is her special gift. But as we watch her gliding over the ice, and as we realize the tremendous transformation that has occurred in her personality since she started skating, we know it is worth it all.

Kathie is no longer withdrawn, depressed and lonely. It's been months since we've heard her say anything about feeling ugly or dumb. And now that she likes herself, she is finding that others like her too — both her new friends at the rink and her girlfriends from school whom she invites to go skating with her.

But beyond that, there's more to be unwrapped each day. An eye problem of which we would not have been aware has been discovered and corrected as a result of Kathie's skating. That, in turn, is helping her school work to come more easily.
