Celebrity Auction set by health care board

BY SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer

Local and area residents will have the opportunity to enjoy a Celebrity Auction, a meal of brisket and beans, and have the satisfaction of knowing they are improving health care facilities when they attend the second annual Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation Celebrity Auction Saturday, May 10, in the HSD administration building.

"We have many unique items for the auction; it will contain things of interest for everyone," said Sylvia Khuri, executive director of the foundation.

The auction starts at 6 p.m. next Saturday. Participants will be able to look over the auction items and place their bids on silent auction goodies. A dinner of brisket, beans and cornbread will be provided for $3 a person, then the live auction starts at 7 p.m.

"It's a fun evening. Last time, people had so much fun," Khuri said.

The proceeds of the fund-raiser will be used to purchase a ventilator for the Hereford Emergency Medical Services (EMS) ambulance and Hereford Regional Medical Center, she said.

The ventilator is a portable, life-saving device which can be easily moved from the ambulance to the emergency room or elsewhere in the hospital, Khuri said.

"It's a very good investment. If we go on an ambulance, we want it to have the equipment," she said.

Also, the proceeds will benefit the scholarship fund. The foundation will present four $500 scholarships, two to hospital personnel who plan to pursue additional medical training and two to high school students who have been accepted into an ancillary medical program, Khuri said.

The scholarships are for such fields as lab technician, x-ray, respiratory therapy, physical therapy and nursing, she said.

"We hope they are people who are committed to coming back to work here to benefit this community," Khuri said.

The winning raffle ticket for a trip to Las Vegas and $250 cash will be drawn at the auction. Door prizes will be given out to lucky participants, she said.

"The foundation has been successful in its efforts, as new as it is," Khuri said.

Medical services are extremely important to rural communities. Besides providing health care, local medical services are essential to attract new businesses, she said.

"Tax monies and government monies is simply not enough to give Hereford the medical services people want.

"We need to pitch in if we want to be proud of this community," Khuri said.

If residents need medical services, they should be able to find them in Hereford. And to be able to find the services locally, the residents should support the health care foundation, she said.

"I believe the whole community is involved in caring for the viability of this community.

The auction will feature items donated from different countries, items donated from nationally-recognized celebrities and items donated by locally-recognized celebrities -- local businesses and artists.

The Hereford community showed a very cooperative spirit in the donations, Khuri said.

"So, the credit goes to the community," she said.

For more information on the Celebrity auction and raffle drawing, contact Khuri at 364-2141.

C of C Fun Breakfast scheduled Thursday

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce will host a spring Fun Breakfast Thursday at Hereford Community Center beginning at 6:30 a.m.

The quarterly breakfast meetings are held for chamber members as well as all interested residents. Upcoming community activities are announced at the event, and games, door prizes and drawings for Hereford Bucks are highlighted during the breakfast.

The coveted Bull Chip Award, recognizing an individual who makes Hereford a better place to live, work and play, will also be featured at the breakfast, said Cumpston.

Chamber members who are present have an opportunity to win a $100 drawing. If the member whose name is drawn is not present, $100 will be added to the pot for the next breakfast.

Officers move close to ROT headquarters

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer

FORT DAVIS, Texas (AP) - The uneasy standoff between authorities and Texas secessionists grew more tense Saturday as officers crept to within a quarter mile of the group's mountain hideout.

The move prompted what authorities called a shoot-to-kill directive from the Republic of Texas faction and a shortwave radio plea for help from the group's leader, Richard McLaren.

"Mayday! Mayday! Mayday! Hostiles are invading the Republic of Texas embassy," McLaren said in an appeal replayed by broadcast stations. "We have hostiles in the woods. This is a Mayday call for any nation in the world ... We are being invaded!"

Mike Cox, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety, confirmed late Friday that troopers had moved closer to the ramshackle group headquarters. He said it didn't mean an assault was imminent.

Asked if negotiations were still going on with McLaren, Cox said "there have been discussions, but there have also been a lot of reversals."

Earlier, McLaren had sent word that he and his six remaining followers would leave peacefully from their "embassy," a trailer and several other buildings at the end of a rugged nine-mile road.

"Everyone has chosen to stay and hold the sovereign soil of the Republic," said a group letter quoted by authorities. McLaren and four followers also faxed their wills to authorities, who didn't release their contents.

The other two holdouts - Richard Keyes and McLaren's wife, Evelyn - did not fax wills, Cox said.

In his shortwave plea, McLaren taunted authorities, saying, "I guess you boys didn't learn anything from Waco or Ruby Ridge ... and you fools are going to come here and kill me, huh, and overrun this mission."

Clinton, GOP come to terms on plan to balance budget

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - In a dramatic reach across party lines, President Clinton and congressional Republicans came to terms Friday on a plan that would remake the face of government by balancing the budget over five years while cutting taxes for millions of Americans.

At the last moment, a strong economy permitted the two sides to shield Social Security recipients, a change that was gladly embraced by Republicans and that prompted some Democrats to rethink their earlier opposition to the deal.

"I wanted a balanced budget with balanced values," Clinton said in a subdued appearance before reporters with congressional Democrats by his side. "I believe we got it today."

In contrast to the somber Democrats, Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott and other GOP leaders staged a celebratory, campaign-style rally in the Capitol Rotunda, packed with springtime tourists. An ebullient House Speaker Newt Gingrich later told the GOP rank-and-file the deal was "the completion of the 'Contract With America,'" the conservative manifesto that powered the Republican electoral triumph of 1994.

While dozens of legislative details remain to be worked out in the weeks ahead, the deal would affect virtually every American - citizen and noncitizen alike.

The plan would carve $115 billion from Medicare, for example, and lead to a modest premium increases. At the same time, it would launch a new program of health care for as many as five million uninsured children.

Tax cuts would total $135 billion over five years, partially offset by up to $50 billion in increases. Details were left to the tax-writing committees of the House and Senate, but the deal envisions a per-child credit, a cut in the capital gains tax paid by investors, liberalization of the estate tax and breaks for students in higher education. Expanded Individual Retirement Accounts are also part of the deal.

Congress will impose no change in the government's cost-of-living index. But the deal assumes the Bureau of Labor Statistics will continue to make changes based on technical factors, a step that will lead to smaller-than-expected inflation increases for Social Security recipients.

Politically, the agreement secured for Republicans two main goals of the revolution they launched after winning power in 1994 - a balanced budget and permanent tax cuts. Lott, R-Miss., said the agreement had been reached "without compromising our principles."

Clinton, too, had campaigned as a supporter of a balanced budget. In addition, the deal permits creation of some of his prized second-term initiatives as well as freeing billions of dollars for domestic programs ranging from the environment to transportation.

The agreement capped weeks of intense negotiations, and marked a startling turnabout from the past two years when Clinton and the GOP clashed repeatedly over tax cuts and spending priorities. Those battles resulted in two government shutdowns during the winter of 1995-1996, but no comprehensive agreement. Still, when Clinton was re-elected in last fall and the Republicans held control of Congress, the two sides decided to negotiate their differences.

In the end, neither side was completely satisfied.

Local man makes $3,000 donation for purchase of new EMS vehicle

By TOMMY WELLS
Managing Editor

Jack Bradley knows how important a well-equipped EMS vehicle can be. He knows by first-hand experience.

That experience, he said, is the main reason he took it upon himself to help make sure Hereford and Deaf Smith County has one of the better ones in the area.

Bradley, a local businessman who had his life saved a few years back by an EMS crew, made a donation of $3,000 to the Hereford Regional Medical Center to go towards the purchase of its new Freightliner ambulance.

"It's absolutely fabulous," said HRMC administrator Jim Robinson of the donation. "He's done a very generous thing in support to the EMS. We're very pleased that he's aware of the importance of emergency medical services in a community."

"We're doubly pleased that he was generous enough to support our acquisition of this vehicle,"

Robinson added.

The new Mobile Intensive Care Unit, which will travel an estimated one million miles and outlast a smaller EMS vehicle by a 4-to-1 margin, is costing the HRMC approximately $95,000. The hospital traded in two older ambulances as part of a swap deal.

The new unit increases the emergency medical technician's ability to care for their patients by giving them added space and reduced maintenance. According to one EMT, the new vehicle can easily accommodate up to three injured persons laying down, and at least two critically injured persons with its crew.

Bradley was happy to help the hospital's cause. His previous experience with an EMS crew came during his younger days when he was attending a horse auction in the country. While at the auction he began bleeding from the colon, and was forced to jump into a friend's truck in order to meet the ambulance.

"As soon as they got a hold of me, they started plugging things in and probably saved my life," he said. "They told me if I had lost one more unit of blood I would have probably gone into shock and died."

Bradley played down his donation, saying more people should get involved with donations for the vehicle.

"You never know when you're going to need something like this. But when you do need it, you sure want it to be as good as possible."

"When you need it, it doesn't matter what it costs. If you don't have it, that's when it's bad," he added.

What was Bradley's only wish? "I hope I don't have to ride in it very soon," he laughed.

Testimony by blast survivors visibly moves female jurors

DENVER (AP) - Capping a week in which their star witness testified that Timothy McVeigh told her he planned to blow up the Oklahoma City federal building, prosecutors asked survivors to describe the horror of the blast.

Bruce Lind, who worked for the Federal Highway Administration, recalled a brief lull after the explosion and "then the building started to collapse."

"I could see it," Lind said Friday. "It was sort of like rain. I could look over my left shoulder and I could see it coming down ... I could see sky."

The testimony from Lind and Brian Espe, an Agriculture Department employee, was the first from survivors since April 25 in the trial of McVeigh, who is charged with murder and conspiracy in the 1995 blast that killed 168 people.

Their testimony prompted tears from the families of several victims and visibly moved two female jurors. Espe described a rumble followed by a chilling silence from the blast that knocked out a wall and killed seven co-workers.

"I was in a room with no windows and the lights off," said Espe, who had been alone in a conference room preparing a slide show when the bomb went off. "Now, I could see across Fifth Street to the Journal Record Building."

Jurors were shown the widely broadcast TV footage of Espe, a man afraid of heights, gingerly walking down a ladder as a firefighter guided him out of the devastated building.

"I had a terrible fear of heights. I was very reluctant to go down the ladder," said Espe, who now takes doughnuts to the firefighters' station once a month.

After the trial resumes Monday, Jennifer McVeigh, the defendant's sister, is expected to testify about her brother's political views and his statement to her before the bombing that "something big" was about to happen.

Lori Fortier testified earlier this week that McVeigh told her his plans to bomb the federal building in Oklahoma City as revenge for the FBI raid on the Branch Davidian compound near Waco, Texas, in 1993.

Mrs. Fortier, the wife of one of McVeigh's Army buddies, gave prosecutors a framework for their case by detailing his quest for money and materials to carry out the bombing. She said he even used soup cans to diagram his plan.

The defense labeled Mrs. Fortier a drug-using liar hoping to sell her story.

Two of Mrs. McLaren's daughters, 33-year-old Lisa Rutledge and 29-year-old Julie Hopkins, both of Fort Worth, used the media gathered at the scene to beg their mother to come out.

"Please don't make us bring your 2 1/2-year-old grandson to your funeral," Ms. Hopkins sobbed. "Please, please don't let our mom die."

Meanwhile, Terry O'Rourke, who was McLaren's attorney until he was fired on Friday, pleaded for more time to negotiate.

"So far, you've got a lot of extreme political people in the woods. I'm not denying that. But they don't have to be killed today. They don't need to be killed tomorrow," said O'Rourke.

Cox said there was no specific deadline for the seven people to come out and there was no planned assault "at this time." But he said authorities intend to serve warrants.

TV movie presents Texas history, events from women's perspective

By EDUARDO MONTES
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Everyone knows the saying about a great woman being behind every great man. But finding out who those exceptional women have been down through history can be quite a chore.

Just ask Janice Woods Windle, who spent 10 years digging through records and anecdotes to learn the truth about her ancestors, then pulled their stories into the popular historical novel, "True Women."

Next month, TV viewers will be able to get a taste of what she discovered about the frequently overlooked pioneers who helped build Texas when a miniseries based on the book hits the screen.

Although the four-hour movie airing May 18 and 20 on CBS deals only with a portion of her 1994 novel, Windle said it captures the story's essence and keeps the spotlight squarely where it belongs.

"They went for the heart of every story and they interpreted that well," said Windle, an El Paso resident. "It tells the events that raised the awareness of American women of the importance of taking part in decisions in the world around us."

The movie focuses on three of Windle's ancestors: her great-great aunt Sarah Ashby McClure, maternal great-great-grandmother Euphemia Ashby King, and paternal great-grandmother Georgia Lawshe Woods.

The story opens on the girlhood days of friends Euphemia (Annabeth Gish) and Georgia (Angelina Jolie) and follows them as they are swept up in the Texas revolution, the Indian wars, the Trail of Tears and the Civil War.

Viewers will immediately recognize some events.

Others will be a revelation even to some Texans, such as when Sarah (Dana Delany) leads the flight of 5,000 women and children across Texas' rugged terrain and rough rivers to elude the Mexican army after the Alamo's fall.

The characters, too, are a mixture of the famous, the obscure and the unknown. Texas revolutionary hero Sam Houston mingles with Woods' ancestors, who likely won't be familiar to anyone who hasn't read the book.

Yet, the stories of those pioneer women are crucial, Gish said.

"I think it's sort of responding to people's need to fill in the holes in history," she said. "When you think about the Alamo do you think about the women who distracted the Mexican army, crossing the Brazos River, taking care of the kids and enduring the loss of children?"

Windle's forebears drive the story by allowing the audience to experience the unfolding events from the perspective of everyday people.

Rather than showing the heroic image of Davey Crockett fighting at the Alamo, Sarah's stunned and sorrowful expression is allowed to bring home the shock felt by Texans after the 1836 battle.

Another well-documented event, the Council House Fight in San Antonio, an ill-fated parley between Texans and a band of Comanches that ended in the death of some 40 people, also gets a fresh turn.

The film focuses on the abuse endured by the captive women the Comanches returned that day, instead of rehashing the battle that ensued when the Texans realized the tribe would not be bringing back all the white prisoners taken during raids.

Euphemia is reunited with an abducted friend, Matilda Lockhart, only to find the once carefree girl has been shattered, with a face scarred by hot coals and a soul scarred by the man who treated her as a "breeding animal."

Director Karen Arthur said depicting the women's resilience was important to her goal of making a movie that would carry affirming messages to female viewers.

"That was heavy motivation," Arthur said. "Any time we can empower anybody, I think it's our duty in the media to do so."

"For us to be able to give the women and children who watch this the understanding that (pioneers) worked out whatever their problems were without the help of their menfolk and they did fine, that's something that instills pride in another human."

Jolie said the film should not be pigeonholed as a woman's movie.

"I'm actually worried about how this story will be thought of because of the statement it makes for women," Jolie said. "To me, it set a lot straight in the history books about what happened to the Indians."

There was a time when it seemed those messages might not be delivered. Like its subjects, the movie had obstacles to overcome that almost proved tougher than the Texas landscape where it was filmed.

"True Women" went through two false starts because executive producer Craig Anderson's original partners thought the project too expensive.

"We were on location in Texas in preproduction and they blew the whistle on us and shut us down," said Anderson. "They brought us back and we regrouped. We were going to go ahead and we got the same whistle blown the second time."

Then last summer Hallmark Entertainment came on board and shooting got underway. The filming, done almost exclusively in Hill Country around Austin, where much of the real story took place, was completed in November.

"Actually, in hindsight, because of our stalls, I think we've made it in better time. It was better shooting for the crew and cast," said Anderson. "I'm glad we had those false starts because the look of the movie ended up being more special."

The final challenge is in attracting viewers.

Anderson sees "True Women" as being in the same vein with "Lonesome Dove." But it faces a real battle to gain similar ratings.

The miniseries, airing during the sweeps rating period, will have to compete with NBC's "The Odyssey," an adaptation of the classic Greek tale.

"We have our job cut out for us. NBC has the kind of publicity machine that makes you feel foolish if you don't watch," Anderson said. "But I think CBS' view was that we can overcome."

Government report says

Number of teens having sex down

WASHINGTON (AP) - Most Americans say teens should not be sexually active, but if they are, they should have access to birth control, according to a new poll.

The survey was conducted by the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy, which today begins its drive to cut teen-age pregnancy rates by one-third over 10 years.

The poll found that 95 percent of Americans say it is important for society to send teens a strong abstinence message. But just 22 percent of people said teens should not have access to birth control.

The seemingly contrary positions are much like Americans' views on drunken driving, said Gloria Feldt, president of Planned Parenthood Federation of America.

"You say, 'I prefer if you don't drink' or 'I prefer if you don't have sex,' but 'if you do, I love you enough that I want to be sure you don't hurt yourself,'" she said.

The government reported Thursday that for the first time in 25 years, the number of teen-age girls who have had sex declined. Researchers credited increased education on AIDS prevention and how to say no to sex.

In addition, more and more communities are creating programs to reduce teen pregnancy, including Cortland, N.Y., which cut its rate by 25 percent through a community-wide effort.

"I think that maybe education has helped. Awareness might be increasing," said Frannie Farrell, 17, a peer counselor in Cortland. "Some of my friends say, 'Oh, well, that really can't happen to me,' and that's exactly who we're trying to teach."

According to another new report, an estimated four in 10 women will become pregnant by the time they turn 20, the Alan Guttmacher Institute said.

In 1992, 11.2 percent of teen-age girls and women became pregnant, down from 11.7 percent in 1990, the report said. That is consistent with recent reports that teen-age birth rates are falling.

"Somewhere along the line, some attitudes have changed," said Susan Tew of the Guttmacher Institute, a reproductive health research firm.

Other findings on teen pregnancy include:

-State pregnancy rates, which are derived by adding births, abortions and estimated numbers of miscarriages and stillbirths, range from 15.9 percent in California to 5.9 percent in North Dakota.

-New York has the highest percentage of pregnancies ending in abortion (57 percent) and Utah has the lowest (16 percent).

-Nationally, 54 percent of teen-age pregnancies end in birth, 32 percent in abortion and 14 percent in miscarriage.

-Pregnancy rates are highest for blacks, at 22 percent. For Hispanics, the rate is 18 percent, and for whites, it is 9 percent.

Our bank is our people.

And that makes all the difference in the world.

At Hereford State Bank, we learned long ago that what really separates us from other banks is our people. People like Bertha Salazar.

Bertha started to work in our bookkeeping department in 1977 as a Hereford High School vocation office education student. And she's still there, behind the scenes, as our proof operator.

She and her husband Juan have three children; Brenda - a senior, Patricia - a sophomore, and Juan, Jr. who is in the eighth grade at Hereford Junior High.

The Salazars are members of the San Jose Catholic Church and stay busy attending their children's activities which include; band contests, soccer games and baseball games.

We're proud to have Bertha, and the many other employees of our bank who work extra hard to make your banking easy.

All banks say they do this - make your banking easier. Being able to do it better than anyone else is the definition of our success.

The grand opening of the new ALCO Discount Store is scheduled Tuesday morning at 1115 W. Park Ave., and opening activities continue through Sunday, May 11. The company has spent the last eight weeks remodeling and stocking the store.

We join others in the community in welcoming Duckwall-ALCO Stores, Inc., to our town. The ribbon-cutting ceremony for the new store will be held at 8:45 a.m. Tuesday.

Mark your date book and join in the fun as Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce holds another Fun Breakfast Thursday morning in the community center. Sue Hyer, A.G. Edwards & Son, will be the sponsor for the quarterly event.

There will be the usual fun, games, drawings and community announcement, and the presentation of a Bull Chip Award is planned.

It was an unusual April, no doubt about it! Just when we thought spring had arrived, the wind blew, rains came, ice formed and snow fell. The temperatures ranged from 19 to 84; we recorded a snowfall of 8 inches (up to 10 inches or more in some parts of the county); and KPAN officially recorded 5.2 inches of moisture.

The late winter snow resulted in a heavy loss of cattle in the county and area. There was a report this week that 8,500 dead cows had been picked up.

"Hospital Overflow Aided by Arrival of New Nurses" was a headline in the March 13, 1947 issue of The Hereford Brand.

The story reported that the hospital was overflowing with 27 patients in wards, rooms and hallways, in addition to a record number of 12 babies in the nursery.

The article added that four new registered nurses, all from Chicago, had arrived to work here. And the story was brought to my attention because one of those nurses was Vida Papish - who later became Mrs. Nolan Grady.

She was pictured in Thursday's Brand at a retirement party at Hereford Regional Medical Center. Mrs. Grady took time out to raise a family, but she still recorded 23 years of service at the hospital.

Insurance rates might be real low if everyone had the attitude and work ethic of the man described in a story from the Texas Workers' Compensation Insurance Fund.

An agent relates that when he started his agency many years ago, an elderly, self-employed cement contractor named Hugo bought a workers' comp policy that was required by a general contractor.

Later, after the project had started, Hugo called the agent and told him he had just cut off his finger at the second joint and wondered if this was covered by the policy. The agent assured him it was and asked if he needed transportation to the hospital.

Hugo said he could drive himself, but he couldn't leave the job anyway, since the concrete had just been poured and he had to wait for it to set. He put the severed digit in his pocket and after the concrete hardened, drove to the emergency room and had it sewn back on. He then returned to the job.

A few weeks later, Hugo called again and wanted to know why the insurance company had sent him a check for $1,000 since they had already paid all his medical bills. The agent explained that the Workers' Compensation Act specified a dismemberment benefit for cutting off his finger.

Hugo said he'd already cost the insurance company enough and didn't want the $1,000. The agent finally convinced him to take the check by saying he could sign it over to his church...which is what he did.

Focus on Your City

BY BOB JOSSERAND, MAYOR

One of the major concerns your city commission has been wrestling with is coming home to roost.

As you know from my past Focus On Your City columns, we have written repeatedly about our infrastructure and our need to update some of our service features for our citizens. Now the Texas Natural Resources and Conservation Commission has informed us that our waste water treatment plant permit is due for renewal in February 1998.

As many of you know, our waste water has been treated at our facility west of the golf course and then pumped to the city farm for land application on growing crops. It is the feeling of your City Commission as well as the feeling of our consulting engineers that we will be able to maintain this type of disposal for the water.

However, permits which have been issued recently in communities using the same type land application have all had stricter requirements for the purity of the waste water. This includes suspended solid and other waste material.

We will submit our application to the TNRCC following the same guidelines that we presently operate under, but do expect that we may have to adjust the water quality standards. If in fact this becomes a matter of necessity, then there will be considerable investment in redoing some of our treatment facilities.

At the next meeting, May 5th, in light of the potential for considerable cost for our waste water facility, your City Commission will consider increasing, across the board, the current charges for water, sewer and trash service provided to our residents.

Before anyone has heart failure, let me assure you that even the proposed increase of 10 percent across the board provides water, sewer and trash services at a bargain rate for Hereford residents in relation to surrounding communities of like size. For the most part, our costs are considerably under our neighbors.

We quickly ran a telephone survey of Canyon, Borger, Dumas and Pampa - all cities of like size - to find out their current cost for these services. I think you will agree with me that even with a proposed increase, we offer bargains for the most part for our citizens. All of these costs quoted are based on three use of 6,000 gallons of water per household.

Presently in the water area, Hereford is charging $10.30 and our proposed rate would be $11.28. In comparison, for the same 6,000 gallons of water, Canyon is presently charging $13.30; Borger $16.80; Dumas $12.80, and Pampa $17.49.

When it comes to trash removal, Hereford again offers a real bargain considering we are picking up trash twice a week as well as running several flatbed trucks through the alleys picking up tree branches, grass clippings and other items which can go to a Type IV landfill.

Our present charge is $10 per month and we are proposing to increase the charge to $11. This is in comparison to Canyon at $11.10 per month, Dumas at $12, Borger at $12.50 (with one pickup per week) and Pampa at $12 (again with only one pickup a week).

Our sewer charges are based upon usage of 6,000 gallons of water. Hereford currently charges $7.90 and we propose increasing to $8.72. This is in comparison to Canyon's charge of $7 per month; Borger $16.25; Dumas $8; and Pampa $14.75. Our new proposed rate will be higher than Canyon and Dumas and considerably less than Borger and Pampa.

Bottom line on the proposed new service rates is that if we are to accumulate some funds for waste water treatment plant, this is probably the fairest and most equitable for all the citizens of Hereford, rather than a property tax increase. We really do not have any options and in fact are forced to make major improvements to our waste water facilities.

In a more pleasant vein, I hope many of you are aware of the new businesses rapidly opening in Hereford. A real thanks go to all of you who have worked to encourage new business development. It is exciting to me and I hope it is to all of our citizens in Hereford.

Thanks again for being positive citizens for Hustlin' Hereford!

FDR programs touch every life

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - In statue and stone, the new memorial to Franklin D. Roosevelt celebrates the president whose monuments were built six decades ago, when the New Deal changed the role and reach of American government.

The memorial being dedicated Friday is a 7 1/2-acre expanse, in a waterside park a mile from the workaday Washington that was transformed in the quest for revival from the Depression. An alphabet of agencies born in that effort operates still, regulating stock markets, communications, banking, labor relations and more.

While economic revival faltered after Roosevelt's first term, stalled by recession in 1938, the New Deal was a done deal and a lasting one.

Echoing the philosophy behind the New Deal, Clinton's 1998 budget says:

"The right kind of government making the right kind of decisions can have a demonstrably better effect on the lives of millions of Americans."

Roosevelt-era federal programs touch every American life now, none more pervasively than Social Security - created 62 years ago this summer, expanded into medical care 30 years later, now paying benefits to more than 43 million people. Its budget next year will be about $380 billion.

There were programs that came and went with the economically troubled times - the Works Projects Administration, the Civilian Conservation Corps, the National Youth Administration, job-creation agencies that employed about 4.3 million people in 1938.

But other entries in the federal alphabet were permanent. TVA, the Tennessee Valley Authority, to bring electric power, flood control, economic development, conservation and resource management to a 800,000-square-mile region that includes parts of seven states.

Roosevelt said he wanted it to have the power of government but the flexibility and initiative of private enterprise. Conservatives called it outright socialism, and it remains a target, among Republicans who don't represent the area, and private utilities, arguing that its $5.7 billion power program gets unfair competitive advantages.

That initial burst of New Deal legislation also produced federal farm subsidies; home and farm loan guarantees; stock and securities disclosure requirements, expanded in 1934 with creation of the Securities and Exchange Commission to regulate the markets.

Then the Federal Communications Commission, unemployment insurance, the National Labor Relations Board, the Federal Housing Administration, ancestor of the current Department of Housing and Urban Development.

A 1935 law extended the authority of the Federal Reserve Board over the money supply and credit, powers that now dismay liberal Democrats who argue that the Fed is too prone to increase interest rates.

Those were among the specifics; more broadly, New Deal measures expanded the power of presidents and of the federal government to aid individuals with benefits ranging from pensions to electricity, and to regulate the marketplace and the workplace.

Conservatives opposed the transformation as it happened, and always have resisted the federal activism behind it. But the basic programs are ingrained now, and even as they are revised to deal with changing economic and political situations, the Washington role remains.

Federally supported welfare dates from FDR - in his era it was called relief. A 1996 overhaul shifts authority to the states, ending the federal guarantee of benefits, while easing but not ending federal guidelines and partial financing.

There is a financial crunch ahead for Social Security as retirement rolls swell; without changes, it is projected to run out of funds by 2029. So it will have to be overhauled, and there are proposals to let people invest part of their taxes themselves. But all within the federal framework.

Ronald Reagan came to the presidency saying that government was not the solution, government was the problem. His Republican revolution was to have reversed legacies of the New Deal and of Lyndon B. Johnson's Great Society.

But he also said Washington must maintain a social safety net to help Americans truly in need.

That echoes the premises of the New Deal. Since FDR, the debate hasn't been over the obligation to provide the safety net but, rather, over how widely and generously it should be spread.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

This poem enclosed appears in my wife's hometown newspaper every year in the spring, and I thought your readers might enjoy and remember it as they are attending sporting events this spring and summer.

So many times it is the supposed "grown-ups" who make watching a T-Ball or Little League game an unpleasant experience with their inappropriate comments, so maybe this will make them think twice about saying something negative.

If the Shoe Fits
By Mary Brill

Please don't curse that boy down there;
He is my son, you see.
He's only just a boy you know,
He means the world to me.

I did not raise my son, deaf fan,
For you to call him names;
He may not be a superstar
And these are high school games.

So, please don't knock the boys down there,
They do the best they can;
They've never tried to lose a game;
They're boys, and you're a man.

This game belongs to them, you see,
You're really just a guest;
They do not need a fan that gripes;
They need the very best.

If you have nothing nice to say,
Please leave the boys alone
And, if you've forgotten your manners,
Why don't you stay at home.

So, please don't curse the boys down there,
Each one is his parent's son.
And win or lose or tie, you see;
To us, they're Number One!

Dear Editor:

We are writing this letter to publicly thank our county commissioners for their wise actions during a recent meeting. Caviness Packing Company requested permission to cross a county road with a pipeline that will carry "low quality" wastewater to another site a mile away.

Although the commissioners have no control over what is run into the pipeline, they voted to table the matter until further applications are approved and public hearings have been conducted.

There are numerous reasons why this proposal should be investigated further and we would like to add additional facts that our first letter did not state.

1. The pipeline will be laid parallel to the railroad track. In the coming year, Santa Fe will be adding a new track beside the existing one. How will double track vibrations affect this pipeline? Any leakage in the line could cause the track to settle and endanger residents and highway traffic with a major train derailment.

2. The Caviness engineer assured all present at the commissioners' meeting that there would be leakage or danger to the Ogalalla Aquifer. How can anyone be 100 percent certain of no leakage? Ask any irrigation farmer or any pipe-laying company about leaks and they will assure you of the frequent damage.

3. The engineer also stated the pipeline was good for 35 years. Does he think our residents will not be living in Hereford in 35 years? (We may indeed be gone or dead after 35 years of this noxious pollution!)

4. This wastewater and its repulsive odor will drift and spray directly towards County Road HH, also known as Prisoner of War Camp Road. There is a historical landmark 1.5 miles south of this site. Will tourists be attracted to visit this site if it comes with its own pungent odor?

5. The continued application of this wastewater could pose a serious health threat to residents living in the area. Heavy winds and hard rains could cause this effluent to drift onto neighboring homesteads and farms.

6. The fly and mosquito problems will increase.

7. Premium prices were paid for the surrounding farmland because of the close proximity to town. What value will our land have now with a close proximity to an odor-filled dumpsite?

8. With the addition to this plant, does the Hereford EDC honestly believe new businesses will be attracted to our town?

These are some of the questions that need to be raised before our resources are ruined. We have been good stewards of our land, air and water and believe businesses should not be allowed to disregard the value of property and dreams of pioneers who love their livelihood. Please help us protect our right to stand proud of our land, legacy and health. Thank you.

Old saloon receives makeover for annual historic homes tour

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) - A tall, narrow house built of stout wood more than a century ago has survived hurricanes and developers and now is getting new life thanks to its scandalous past.

The 15-room Mollie Walters house, built in about 1886, is the last of the many bordellos and saloons that flourished in Galveston's infamous "red-light district."

Downstairs is the double parlor, divided by large pocket doors, where the prostitutes greeted customers. A pane of glass in a front window swings open as it did when the women "worked the windows," which was calling out invites to male passers-by.

Upstairs, off the long hallway and behind the shuttered windows, are the "working bedrooms," nine in all.

"I felt very strongly about the fact that this was the last bordello, and if it were destroyed, a whole piece of Galveston's history would go with it," said Lyda Ann Thomas, a fifth-generation Galvestonian who bought the house more than a year ago.

The house, its outside painted a watery blue, has gotten a quick makeover to open it for the city's annual historic homes tour, which began May 3. The work includes bringing in antique furniture and hanging a nude painting over the bar.

"We are decorating the house in turn-of-the-century bordello," Ms. Thomas said.

The bordello is described by the Galveston Historical Foundation as a "unique stop" on its tour of 10 Victorian-era homes. A ticket for the tour costs $15.

"We're trying to present a side of Galveston history that has tended to be ignored without glamorizing the situation," said foundation spokesman David Bush.

Author Mary Remmers wrote a booklet on the city's red-light district that the nonprofit foundation will sell. It includes information from the last madam to run the Walters' house.

During the 1930s, an estimated 1,000 prostitutes worked in at least 50 brothels. Galveston itself had a population of 52,900.

The prostitutes were "mugged and fingerprinted" when they arrived in Galveston and required to get medical examinations twice a month.

"(Prostitution) was illegal but tolerated," Ms. Remmers said. "Everybody knew what was going on."

Mollie Walters, a New Orleans transplant after the Civil War, built and ran the "female boarding house" on Postoffice Street after operating a couple of other brothels in the district, according to the historical foundation.

Her 1908 newspaper obituary would describe her as "an old resident of Galveston." Other madams ran the brothel until 1957 when the state attorney general shut down the city's prostitution and gambling.

The Walters house became what it had pretended to be - a rooming house. Its only tenants in recent history have been two men who live downstairs and look after the place, plus some birds that have squeezed nests behind the closed wooden shutters upstairs.

The capped-off gas lines that once lit the house's lamps tell when it was built. The many bedrooms and parlors signify its own particular history.

Down the hall from the house's double parlor is the madam's own parlor. It has a separate street entrance and a push-button bell on the wall - now silent.

"This was so that if the place was raided, the madam could punch a central bell and it would alert all the girls and their clients," Ms. Thomas said.

Ms. Thomas plans to restore the house as a for-profit business. It will include a tour and lectures on the bluish in Galveston's past that earned it the name of "Sin City."

Longhorns miss Big 12 playoffs

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Longhorns may have dominated Southwest Conference baseball, but they're off to a bad start in the Big 12.

Despite beating Nebraska 4-3 Friday night, Texas was eliminated from the new league's six-team postseason anyway when Kansas lost to Kansas State, giving Missouri the last spot. UT had qualified for the last 18 seasons.

Texas, in its first season under coach Augie Garrido, will suffer the worst conference season in school history.

The Longhorns have never finished below sixth in conference play and that hasn't happened since 1956.

Oklahoma 6, Baylor 5
WACO, Texas (AP) - Oklahoma took advantage of shaky defense to score four runs in the eighth inning and beat Baylor 6-5 in a Big 12 game Friday night.

Trailing 5-2 entering the eighth, the Sooners (34-13, 17-7 Big 12) got a leadoff double from Jose Montenegro and a walk to Derek Wathan. Wally Hill bunted but third baseman Preston Underdown dropped a throw on an attempted force play.

Reliever Jason Jennings (3-4) came on to strike out Javier Flores. Then he threw a wild pitch for one run, another scored on a ground out, the tying run came home on another error, and then Rick Park had an RBI single.

Chad Polk hit a two-run homer in the third inning to give Baylor (30-21, 16-12) a 5-1 lead.

Jeff Andra (9-4) got the victory and Geoff Geray pitched two scoreless innings for his seventh save.

Rockets devise plan for next playoff foe: Olajuwon

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Rockets have a plan devised for either of their potential second-round playoff opponents. No surprise: His name is Hakeem Olajuwon.

Whether Phoenix or Seattle emerges from their first-round playoff series to play the Rockets, Olajuwon will be the key, especially against the double-teaming SuperSonics.

"He has to do whatever it takes," Charles Barkley said. "If they (Seattle) double-team quick, he has to kick it out. But if the next team is Phoenix, they don't double Hakeem. So he has to kill his man."

The Rockets will have challenges against either the Suns or SuperSonics, who meet in the fifth game of their first-round series Saturday night. Olajuwon says the Rockets are ready for whatever happens.

"We have our system," Olajuwon said. "We play to our strength. They can double- and triple-team me, but then we pick them apart by finding the open man. The key is to take whatever they give us."

"They know what we're going to do. They have to adjust to us. We don't worry about them."

Coach Rudy Tomjanovich is ready to know who he'll be facing.

"Will it be Gary Payton (Seattle) posting up, penetrating by Kevin Johnson (Phoenix) or Shawn Kemp (Seattle) running the court?" Tomjanovich said.

Olajuwon feels comfortable dishing out if the SuperSonics bottle him up because outside men Mario Elie and Matt Maloney both rank in the top 10 in playoff 3-point shooting. Elie has hit 8-of-12 (.667 percent) and Maloney has hit 12-of-21 (.571) in three games against Minnesota.

"If they double-team me, the way Mario and Matt are shooting now, we have to make them pay," Olajuwon said. "If they relax with that, then we have to go to work. You don't mind playing the game that way as long as the results are the same."

The SuperSonics were able to contain Olajuwon while eliminating the Rockets from the playoffs last season. This year could be different, since the Rockets have added Barkley, Maloney and Elie, who was injured last year.

"Either series will be difficult, but we are ready and looking forward to the challenge," Barkley said.

The Rockets reported for Friday's workout only to be told the session was optional. Players worked out on their own and lifted weights. Barkley said the down time could work to Houston's advantage.

"This is great because they are going five games and we get the weekend off," he said.

Morgan leads Bruno's Memorial Classic golf

HOOVER, Ala. (AP) - Gil Morgan shot a 5-under-par 67 in windy conditions Friday to take a one-stroke lead over Jay Sigel, Tom Shaw and Bob Charles after the first round of the Bruno's Memorial Classic.

"It seemed like the wind was swirling today. It was changing all the time. I guessed a little on club selection today," said Morgan, 50, who won The Tradition last month for his second senior title.

Morgan, a seven-time PGA Tour winner, bogeyed the Nos. 3 and 4, but quickly recovered with a birdie on the par-5 fifth and an eagle on the par-4 sixth, holing an 81-yard sand wedge shot.

"I got off to a shaky start, but turned it around with the birdie-eagle run," Morgan said.

Isao Aoki and John Morgan opened with 69s on the Greystone Country Club course, while Gene Littler, Walt Morgan, Al Geiberger, Jim Colbert, John Schroeder and Bob Eastwood shot 70s.

Hale Irvin, who won the Las Vegas Senior Classic last week for his fourth victory in seven 1997 starts, topped a four-player group at 71.

Nelson Classic near sellout for first time

DALLAS (AP) - The Byron Nelson Classic, likely featuring the first post-Masters appearance of PGA phenom Tiger Woods, is on the verge of selling out for the first time in its 30-year history.

Nelson officials, concerned about overcrowding at the May 15-18 tournament at the Four Seasons at Las Colinas' TPC course, said they won't print extra tickets and won't sell tickets at the gate. Once the remaining 1,500 full-tournament badges and 2,500 one-day badges are sold, sales will end.

"I'm just concerned that our good loyal customers will not have a good experience if we don't cut off ticket sales," tournament chairman Frank Houseman said Friday. "I want to make sure we don't overtax our facility."

Ticket sales already were brisk when Woods said on March 16 that he would enter. Then Woods won the Masters by a record 12 strokes last month, and interest in the Nelson went through the roof. Woods hasn't played since the Masters, boosting interest even more.

Woods still hasn't formally committed to the Nelson, but he probably will next week. His father and agent both have said he'll be there.

Earlier this week, Houseman said the Nelson could have its first 100,000-spectator day, breaking the previous estimated single-day record of 75,000.

Last year's Nelson drew about 150,000 fans over five days. Houseman said Friday that the total should jump by at least 25 percent and possibly 50 percent.

"We want the fans to leave feeling that they enjoyed themselves," Houseman said. "We want them to keep coming back. If we just continue to sell tickets, it's not going to be good for our tournament in the long run."

The remaining tickets are one-day tickets. Since fans can use those tickets on any day they choose, Houseman said it is impossible to gauge how large the biggest one-day crowd will be. But he said that if every single-day ticket holder showed up on the final day, the crowd would be 150,000.

Overflow crowds could follow Woods across town the week after the Byron Nelson. Woods has indicated he will play in the May 22-25 Colonial Invitational in Fort Worth.

Colonial media relations director Jerre Todd said ticket sales are already brisk.

Marathon mystery: How did couple get to finish?

BOSTON (AP) - Race officials started scribbling the moment John Murphy crossed the Boston Marathon finish line.

Something was wrong. It could have been his number. 2001. Two thousand runners had qualified with faster times yet fewer than 200 finished before him. Maybe it was something else. Officials won't say.

A half-hour later, his wife, Suzanne, also crossed the line with a personal-best time. More scribbling.

"I can't tell you what the officials saw or drew their attention. You can sense when something isn't right," Boston Marathon race referee Steve Vaitones said Friday.

The Murphys' world-class performances on April 21 were good enough to win their age divisions - he is 64 and she is 59 - and unusual enough to prompt officials to take notes and trigger an investigation that led to their disqualification Thursday.

One day later, what the Murphys did and why they did it remained a mystery.

Suzanne Murphy told the Los Angeles Times that she and her husband, who live in Cypress, Calif., ran the entire race. But race spokesman Jack Fleming said Friday they did not show up on at least two surveillance cameras along the route.

"There was absolutely no possibility that we missed anybody," Fleming said.

So how did they get from start to finish?

"There are as many reasons why as there are runners," Vaitones said. "People are trying to relive glory days. They've become celebrities in their hometowns and something is expected of them. They feel a need to improve every year. We have no way of knowing."

Boston Marathon officials have become increasingly vigilant ever since Rosie Ruiz was stripped of the women's title for slipping into the race in 1980.

They won't tip off all their methods. They do say that all official entrants have computer chips in their shoes that register their times at the start, midpoint and finish of the race. Fleming said the Murphys showed up at all those checkpoints.

Did they take a shortcut, perhaps by running diagonally while others made the proper turns on the course? Unlikely, since the course is predominantly straight.

Did they do that in other marathons? At least one race official wonders.

John Murphy finished the Boston race in 2 hours, 43 minutes, 9 seconds, the second-fastest time ever by a U.S. runner in the over-60 age group. That was about 13 minutes faster than his time in the San Diego Marathon in January.

Suzanne Murphy's Boston time of 3:12:18 was the eighth-best ever among women in the 50-59 age group and more than 10 minutes faster than her San Diego performance.

Duval hopes to hold onto lead in Houston Open golf

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) - David Duval says his game plan on the golf course is to play to and from spots. He's in a pretty good one now.

Duval, looking for his first PGA Tour victory, so far has led all the way heading into Saturday's third round of the Houston Open at the TPC at The Woodlands.

"This course forces you to hit certain shots," Duval said after his 1-under 71 Friday left him at 8-under 136, one better than Craig Parry and David Ogriin.

"I try to play from spots on the course. I want to try to hit in certain spots."

And while not perfect - "a little left, a little right," he said of his success Friday - he was close enough overall to keep the field behind him.

Duval opened Thursday with a 7-under 65, two better than Curtis Strange. On Friday, he lost a shot on his first hole of the day with a bogey, made nine straight pars before another bogey on his 11th hole, then recovered with birdies on three of his next four for his 71.

"I feel pretty comfortable," he said. "At times, you'd love 10 pars in a row. The greens were very bumpy and made it difficult."

Parry, whose 6-under 66 put him in contention, picked up right where he left off a week ago when he won the Indonesian Open in Jakarta.

Parry who won $454,000 on the U.S. tour last year, started the day at 1-under and four shots off the lead. He had three birdies on his first five holes and four birdies in a stretch of seven holes on the back nine.

"I'm feeling confident, playing really well," said Parry who spent 24 hours in the air getting to Houston. He had few complaints about Houston's steamy weather, noting in Jakarta temperatures were in the mid 90s with humidity to match.

Fred Couples had his second straight 69 for a 6-under 138, leaving him tied with Jerry Kelly, who had a 68. Phil Blackmar and Strange followed at 139, with Blackmar shooting a 71 and Strange a 72.

Greens on the TPC were rebuilt following the 1996 tournament, with players saying the thin grass and bumpy conditions, along with swirling winds, contributing to high scores.

Ogriin, who grew up in Illinois but now lives in the San Antonio area, about 200 miles to the west, made a move with five birdies that got him to a share of the lead at 8-under, but a bad second shot wound up in a bunker at the final hole and gave him his lone bogey of the day.

"I'm a good old (municipal) course player from way back," he said. "So this is good old muni course golf. Let's go in the dirt and get after it."

Couples played college golf nearby at the University of Houston and is making his first appearance on the tour since tying for seventh at the Masters. He had six birdies and three bogeys en route to a second straight 3-under 69. He was two shots off the pace at 138.

Three-time Houston winner Strange, this week playing his best golf in months, followed his opening round 67 with an even-par 72 that included 14 pars, one bogey and one birdie, and a double-bogey offset by an eagle, his second eagle in as many days.

The event is sponsored by Houston-based Shell Oil Co.

The longest game in hockey history was two hours, 56 minutes and 30 seconds when the Detroit Red Wings beat the Montreal Maroons 1-0 in the sixth period of overtime at the Forum, Montreal at 2:25 a.m. in March of 1936.

Cub closer fails; Astros edge Marlins, 2-1

By The Associated Press
This wasn't exactly what the Chicago Cubs had in mind when they signed closer Mel Rojas to a $13.75 million, three-year contract.

Trying to protect a one-run lead, Rojas forced home the tying run by walking four in the ninth inning Friday. Tom Prince then hit a sacrifice fly in the 10th off Bob Patterson (1-2), giving the Los Angeles Dodgers an 8-7 victory.

"Mel's a tremendous closer," Cubs manager Jim Riggleman said. "He hasn't been getting a great deal of work because we haven't been in too many save situations. But they're human beings and they're going to fail now and then. Nothing's automatic."

Rojas, who has blown two of four save chances this season, walked Mike Piazza and Eric Karros leading off the ninth. The right-hander walked Todd Zeile with two outs and then walked Wayne Kirby, who flied out with the bases loaded in the third.

The last two walks came on 3-2 pitches.

"Mel's a professional and he's been in that situation many, many times," teammate Dave Clark said. "Some days, he's going to get the job done and there are going to be times when things don't go his way. But we believe in Mel Rojas and he believes in himself."

In other NL games, Pittsburgh beat Atlanta 3-2, Houston edged Florida 2-1, Philadelphia defeated Colorado 7-4, New York beat St. Louis 7-4, Montreal beat San Diego 5-4 and Cincinnati stopped San Francisco 6-2.

At Los Angeles, Tom Candiotti (3-1) pitched a perfect 10th with two strikeouts.

"Right now, everyone's frustrated," said Dave Clark, whose three-run double keyed a six-run sixth for the Cubs. "We felt like we had that ballgame in our hands, and we lost it. That's just typical of what's been going on with us all year."

Astros 2, Marlins 1

Derek Bell ended a string of nine consecutive games without an RBI with a sacrifice fly in the third off Pat Rapp (2-2) as Florida lost its 10th consecutive road game, a club record.

Shane Reynolds (4-2) won for the first time in six decisions against the Marlins. He allowed one run and seven hits in eight innings. Billy Wagner pitched the ninth for his sixth save.

Pirates 3, Braves 2

Mark Johnson singled home the go-ahead run in the ninth off Mike Bielecki (1-1). Atlanta, a major league best 20-7, lost for only the third time in 15 games at Turner Field, its new ballpark.

Chris Peters (1-0) retired the side in the eighth. Rich Loiselle got his first save when Andrew Jones lined into a game-ending double play with runners on first and third.

Phillies 7, Rockies 4

Rico Brogna hit his second career grand slam and Bobby Munoz (1-4) won for the first time in 12 decisions since July 27, 1994. The loss ended Colorado's five-game home winning streak.

Munoz gave up four runs - three earned - and three hits in six innings. Ricky Bottalico pitched the ninth for his sixth save. Mark Thompson (3-2) allowed seven runs and seven hits in seven innings.

Mets 7, Cardinals 4

Alex Ochoa beat out an infield single, allowing the go-ahead run to score in the seventh inning as New York stopped the visiting Cardinals' five-game winning streak.

With the score 4-0, Carlos Baerga doubled off T.J. Mathews (0-1) leading off, took third on Rey Ordonez' sacrifice and scored when Ochoa easily beat out the roller to third.

Butch Huskey had three hits, including a two-run homer. Greg McMichael allowed one hit in two innings, and John Franco pitched the ninth for his seventh save.

Expos 5, Padres 4

Chris Widger hit a go-ahead sacrifice fly in the eighth off Doug Bochler (0-1). Visiting Montreal won its third straight, while the Padres lost for the ninth time in 10 games.

The Padres, who stranded 13, advanced the potential tying run to third with one out in the ninth. Ugueth Urbina, who got four outs for his third save, struck out John Flaherty and got Chris Jones to fly out. Dave Veres (1-0) allowed one hit in two-thirds of an inning.

Reds 6, Giants 2

Pete Schourek (2-2) struck out eight in seven innings, and Terry Pendleton broke a tie with a two-run single as Cincinnati stopped a four-game losing streak by winning at San Francisco.

Cincinnati broke open the game against Osvaldo Fernandez (3-2) with a four-run sixth, helped by Glenallen Hill's drop of Eddie Taubensee's fly ball to right for a two-base error.

Red Sox top Rangers in 9th

Johnson wins 16th straight

By The Associated Press
Randy Johnson is feeling great, which means American League batters who face him are feeling lousy.

Johnson won his 16th straight decision - one short of the American League record - and Ken Griffey Jr. hit his major-league leading 14th homer as Seattle beat Milwaukee 8-1 Friday night.

Johnson, who held the Brewers to three hits and one run in eight innings, is 4-0 this season after spending 117 days on the disabled list last year with a herniated disk.

"I feel like I'm getting back to my old form," he said. "I worked extremely hard during the offseason and I'm being rewarded for that hard work."

Johnson, who hasn't lost in 24 starts since Aug. 1, 1995, struck out 11, and his fastball was clocked at 99 mph. It was the 70th time in his career that he has struck out 10 or more in a game.

"He looked like the old Randy," Seattle catcher Dan Wilson said.

If Johnson wins his next decision, he will tie the AL record of 17 straight shared by Cleveland's Johnny Allen (1936-37) and Baltimore's Dave McNally (1968-69). The major league mark for consecutive decisions won is 24 by Carl Hubbell of the New York Giants in 1936-37.

"Randy's the best left-handed pitcher in the league," said Milwaukee's Matt Mieske, who homered off Johnson in the seventh. "He can beat you even on an off-night."

Griffey, who set a major-league record with 13 homers in April, hit a three-run shot in the sixth.

Elsewhere in the American League, Baltimore beat Oakland 7-1, Minnesota edged Toronto 3-2 in 10 innings, New York defeated Kansas City 9-1, and Boston beat Texas 5-4. Anaheim-Chicago and Detroit-Cleveland were postponed by rain.

Orioles 7, Athletics 1

At Baltimore, Jimmy Key improved to 5-0 for the first time in his career by holding Oakland to four hits in eight innings. Mike Bordick hit two doubles and drove in three runs, and Eric Davis and Roberto Alomar homered to help Baltimore win its fourth straight. Key struck out five, walked one and retired 15 straight batters at one point in lowering his ERA to 2.21.

Twins 3, Blue Jays 2

At Toronto, Chuck Knoblauch drove in the go-ahead run in the 10th with an infield single as Minnesota snapped an eight-game losing streak. Todd Walker led off the inning with a single off Tim Lincecum (1-2), and Pat Meares moved him into scoring position with a sacrifice bunt. After Brent Brice's groundout moved Walker to third, Knoblauch hit a high chopper that bounced over third baseman Ed Sprague and scored Walker. Brad Radke (2-1) pitched nine innings, allowing two runs on five hits.

Yankees 9, Royals 1

Tino Martinez and Bernie Williams hit two-run homers as New York won at Kansas City. Martinez, who set a major-league record with 34 RBIs in April, gave New York a 2-0 lead in the fourth with his 10th homer of the season. Williams made it 4-1 with his homer in the eighth, and the Yankees added five runs in the ninth. David Cone (3-2) pitched seven strong innings, giving up one run on five hits.

Red Sox 5, Rangers 4

John Valentin singled home the go-ahead run off John Wetteland with two outs in the ninth inning as Boston won at Texas. Juan Gonzalez, returning after thumb surgery, went 0-for-5 in his first game of the season for the Rangers. Danny Patterson (2-3) walked Mo Vaughn leading off the ninth, and pinch-runner Jeff Frye took second on a groundout. One out later, Valentin singled to center.

CHL eyes expansion despite setbacks

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - As the Central Hockey League continued its southern expansion this season, its average attendance dropped dramatically and a franchise folded.

Despite those setbacks, CHL president Ray Miron feels strongly that the traditionally northern sport can thrive in the Sun Belt.

"We're looking to expand, we're happy with the quality of play," Miron said from league headquarters in Tulsa. "It all bodes well for the future."

The CHL, revived five years ago after the original Central League folded in the early '80s, added four new teams last season - Huntsville, Ala.; Macon, Ga.; Columbus, Ga.; and Nashville, Tenn. One holdover franchise, Memphis, joined the four newcomers to form the Eastern Division.

Slow early attendance in the new cities caused the CHL's average gate to fall to 4,394, a considerable decrease from 1995-96's average of 5,633. League officials point out that business in the expansion cities picked up over the second half of the season.

Defending champion Oklahoma City was again the runaway attendance leader with an average crowd of 9,750. Tulsa was second at 4,855, followed by Wichita (4,834), Memphis (4,340) and Columbus (4,303).

But the Oklahoma City Blazers, who dominated the regular-season standings, were knocked out of the playoffs in the first round by Wichita.

The Fort Worth Fire went on to win its first playoff title in its five years in the league, beating Memphis 3-2 Wednesday night in Game 7.

That gave Fort Worth its first hockey crown since the 1977-78 season, when the Fort Worth Texans beat the Dallas Blackhawks for the championship of the old Central League.

But the Fire has struggled at the gate, averaging 3,501 in a hockey market that is dominated by the Dallas Stars of the NHL. The Fire must also compete with the Texas Rangers, Dallas Cowboys, Dallas Mavericks and major college sports for the area entertainment dollar.

"We think eventually that Fort Worth will be a good franchise," Miron said. "Fort Worth never made the playoffs until this year and they won everything. Interest picked up, and the publicity was better this year."

The league lost one of its Western Division franchises when the San Antonio Iguanas went out of business at the end of the season. The Iguanas, who were locked in an attendance battle with the San Antonio Dragons of the International League, lost their lease with Freeman Coliseum and did not have a place to play.

Financial problems in Nashville are another worry, Miron said.

Miron and Chicago businessman Horn Chen own the four remaining Western Conference teams plus the Memphis franchise. The newest expansion teams have local ownership.

"We took a bath in San Antonio, that ate up a lot of our profits," Miron said. "Oklahoma City does very well, Wichita made money, we lost money in Fort Worth and broke even in Memphis."

Miron said the CHL has an oral agreement with Fayetteville, N.C. to enter the league next season, although owners of the NHL Hartford Whalers are reportedly interested in playing in the building.

If Fayetteville joins the CHL's Eastern Division next season, Miron said Memphis would be moved back to the West.

Expansion talks are underway with another unidentified city. Miron said the CHL would like to add a team in Little Rock, Ark. in 1998 and will expand to St. Charles, Mo., a St. Louis suburb, in 1999.

A new arena is scheduled to be completed in Little Rock in '98 and a 10,000-seat facility is due to open in St. Charles in '99.

Environmentalists attack Endangered Species Act

Clinton administration refuses to protect species, conservation group says

WASHINGTON (AP) - More and more, the Endangered Species Act as a regulatory tool except in crises.

The tactic got the administration in hot water this spring with three federal judges who felt the law should have been used to help protect jaguars in the Southwest, lynx in the Northwest and the Barton Springs salamander in Texas.

It also has drawn heavy fire from environmentalists, who helped President Clinton win his first term but have grown increasingly critical of his willingness to bargain away stringent protections they contend the 24-year-old law requires.

"We are seeing a very disturbing pattern here," said Mark Hubbard of the Oregon Natural Resources Council, a non-profit conservation group based in Portland, Ore., that has filed a half-dozen lawsuits against the government over alleged noncompliance.

"We have gone from surprised to disappointed to just plain angry with the Clinton administration over their refusal to protect endangered species," he said.

Architects of the administration's policy say negotiating with state and private land owners to save species makes sense in a political climate where property rights reign supreme.

The carrot works better than the stick, they say.

"It is not a win to see a species driven to the verge of extinction and then be able to save the last of that species by hammering someone with the Endangered Species Act," said Katie McGinty, director of the White House Council on Environmental Quality, in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

The administration is using the law "to its fullest and most creative extent and reaching out to save those rare ecosystems by working in partnership with people who own the land," McGinty said.

By the end of the year, the administration will have negotiated habitat conservation plans, known as HCPs, covering more than 18 million acres of state and privately owned land.

"I just hope the environmental community can keep the broader picture in mind," McGinty said.

The pragmatic shift epitomizes Clinton's rocky relationship with a host of traditional Democratic constituencies - labor, minorities and environmentalists - who consider him too quick to compromise and more talk than action on key issues.

"Essentially it is a new way to get around enforcing the Endangered Species Act," Sierra Club lobbyist Melinda Pierce said of the HCPs.

"It's just feel-good politics. They have junked the law," said Mike Bader of the Missoula, Mont.-based Alliance for the Wild Rockies, which has been trying since 1993 to win federal protection for the bull trout in the Northern Rocky Mountains.

Environmentalists biggest beef is with the HCPs "no surprises" clause, which promises land owners that if they meet outlined protection criteria, they'll be insulated from any future federal conservation requirements.

"It's the only way companies would ever enter into such agreements," said Chris West, vice president of the Northwest Forestry Association in Portland, Ore.

During a two-week span in March, federal judges in Arizona, Texas and Washington state chided the administration for its refusal to order ESA protection for the jaguar, Barton Springs salamander and lynx.

In the case of the jaguar, the Fish and Wildlife Service was ordered to declare the rare cat endangered and set aside land to protect it.

In Washington, the agency was told to review again its decision to keep the lynx off the list despite findings that only a few hundred of the cats remain in a few states.

"The Fish and Wildlife Service has consistently ignored the analysis of its expert biologists," wrote U.S. District Judge Gladys Kessler in Seattle.

In Austin, U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton ruled that Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt had violated the Endangered Species Act after "strong political pressure was applied to the secretary to withdraw the proposed listing of the salamander."

Babbitt declared the salamander threatened last month. But environmentalists were up in arms again when the National Marine Fisheries Service decided April 25 against federal protection for Oregon's coastal coho salmon, opting instead to give the state a chance to try its own $30 million recovery plan with support from the timber industry.

"This decision reflects the enormous and untapped flexibility of the Endangered Species Act," said Will Stelle, Northwest regional director of the fisheries service.

Environmentalists say the pledge by industry to use more responsible logging practices and to help restore damaged stream beds shouldn't serve as a substitute for listing the Oregon coastal coho, whose population has dropped from as many as 1.4 million in the early 1900s to about 80,000 today.

"Many of these coho runs are dangerously close to extinction and need protection right now," said Ken Rait, conservation director for the Oregon Natural Resources Council.

"The Clinton administration has surpassed the Bush administration in both their zeal to change the Endangered Species Act and their reluctance to implement it," said Bader, a former park ranger at Yellowstone National Park.

The criticism grates on some Western Democrats walking a fine line as environmentalists who must also look out for loggers, miners and ranchers in their home districts.

"These people, either they have no sense of history or no sense of shame," said Rep. Peter DeFazio, D-Ore.

"The Bush administration made every effort to undermine public support for the Endangered Species Act. To say the Clinton administration is doing worse than that is absurd," he said.

George Frampton Jr. offers another perspective as a former president of The Wilderness Society who served as Babbitt's assistant interior secretary in charge of the Fish and Wildlife Service the past four years.

"One of my great frustrations at The Wilderness Society was that the environmental community seemed to be so totally out to lunch on the Endangered Species Act," Frampton said.

"A listing alone, that and a quarter is going to get you a cup of coffee," he said.

The Supreme Court ruled last year that private lands are covered by the 1973 act's prohibition on habitat modification harmful to threatened species.

But Frampton said there are practical and political problems with that.

"The act never has really been enforced very effectively on private lands. The people who wrote it never imagined it would be a device to restrict land use over millions of acres of private land," he said.

Frampton said the fewest complaints about the HCPs are heard among conservationists in California, where wildlife habitat is threatened most by development.

"Environmentalists in Southern California know that anything we don't get protected today will be paved over in 20 years. So if we can save 300,000 or 400,000 acres of habitat for species and they look at that as a tremendous victory," he said.

"The fact of the matter is, more than 70 percent of all critical habitat is on private land," McGinty said. "Without HCPs, none of these species would receive protection until they are on the brink of extinction." And Clinton administration

WASHINGTON (AP) - Species that have been the target of recent and current court battles over enforcement of the Endangered Species Act include:

Jaguar - The Southwest Center for Biological Diversity, Tucson, Ariz., sued the government for protection of the largest cat in the Western Hemisphere, which formerly ranged from South America throughout the U.S. Southwest but now is limited to parts of Arizona.

U.S. District Judge Roger Strand, Phoenix, Ariz., ordered the jaguar declared endangered in March and a formal listing is pending.

Lynx - Defenders of Wildlife, the Northwest Ecosystem Alliance of Bellingham, Wash., and others sued the government for protection of the lynx, a brownish-gray cat about the size of a bobcat. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service decided against listing the lynx in 1994 despite warnings from its own field offices that only a few hundred of the cats remain in Maine, Montana, Idaho and Washington state.

In March, U.S. District Judge Gladys Kessler in Seattle ordered the government to re-examine its decision.

Barton Springs salamander - The Save Our Springs Alliance and University of Texas zoology professor Mark Fitzpatrick sued the government for protection of the 2½-inch salamander known to exist only in the springs of Austin's Zilker Park.

Senior U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton ruled in March that the administration was wrong to rely on a state-based plan for protection and ordered a review of the earlier refusal to list it under the Endangered Species Act. Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt declared the salamander endangered in April.

Oregon coastal coho - The Oregon Natural Resources Council has announced plans to sue for federal protection of the coho population off the central and northern Oregon Coast. The administration declared southern Oregon and California populations endangered in April, but said it would rely on state-based protections in Oregon to save the coho from extinction there.

Bull trout - Three Montana groups, the Alliance for the Wild Rockies Inc., Friends of the Wild Swan Inc. and the Swan View Coalition originally proposed the bull trout for listing in 1992 in Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Nevada. The government rejected the petition.

In November, U.S. District Judge Robert Jones ordered Fish and Wildlife to reconsider its refusal to list the fish. The administration has announced plans to declare at least parts of the bull trout's population endangered in June.

Northern goshawk - The Southwest Center for Biological Diversity in Tucson, Ariz., sued for protection of the goshawk in New Mexico and Arizona.

U.S. District Judge Richard Bilby of Phoenix ruled in February the Fish and Wildlife Service's 1992 decision that killed efforts to list the bird was "arbitrary, capricious and unlawful." The government currently is reconsidering the decision.

Umpqua River Cutthroat trout - The Steamboaters, an Oregon sport fishing group, and the Pacific Coast Federal Fishermen's Associations have filed a formal intent to sue the National Marine Fisheries Service for failure to protect the trout since it was declared endangered last year. They want the government to identify the fish' critical habitat and set land-use restrictions.

Alabama sturgeon - The small, shovel-nosed fish became the focus of legal wrangling in 1993 when the U.S. Department of Interior proposed listing it as an endangered species. When the Interior Department dropped plans to list the fish as endangered in 1994, a lawsuit was filed by an environmental group. The case still is pending.

officials defend their listing record.

So far they have added 305 species of fish, plants and wildlife to the list of threatened and endangered species, compared to 228 during the four-year Bush administration and 257 during the eight-year Reagan administration, said Interior Department spokeswoman Lisa Guide.

The HCPs are allowed under a section of the Endangered Species Act that was used only a half dozen times or so before the Clinton administration.

Nearly 400 HCPs have been approved or developed in the past four years. They affect tracts ranging from one-half acre to 2 million acres, last from one to 100 years and cover anywhere from one to 100 species.

Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., is one of environmentalists' best friends among Western senators, but she praises HCPs the administration has crafted with the state of Washington, Weyerhaeuser Co. and Plum Creek Timber Co.

"Too often, the Endangered Species Act has been relied upon as a tool of last resort for protecting species," Murray said.

The HCP program has been attacked recently by the Defenders of Wildlife in Washington D.C., the Southwest Center for Biological Diversity in Tucson, Ariz., and the Northwest Ecosystem Alliance in Bellingham, Wash.

They say most of the plans they have reviewed are not intended to benefit listed species, but to permit development while minimizing harmful impacts.

Pistol-Packin' Patterson takes aim on tough issues

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Colleagues call Texas Sen. Jerry Patterson, "Pistol-Packin' Patterson," and it doesn't take long to figure out why.

After all, he carried the bill in 1995 that ultimately gave Texans the right to carry concealed handguns. And there's his wedding last December in the Senate chamber.

Capitol officials suggested closing the chamber during the ceremony, fearing that if some crazed lunatics found out he was tying the knot, they might come in and take a shot at him.

"We'll just return fire," said the 50-year-old Patterson, who was carrying a small, .22 magnum revolver in his boot as he said, "I do."

When the minister greeted those assembled, he said, "It's a day for union and a day for concealed handguns." And the groom's cake included a chocolate replica of a Glock .26 revolver.

"A really accurate depiction of it, too," said Patterson, a Pasadena Republican who has been married twice.

Don't misunderstand. Patterson isn't so much a gun activist as he is an individual rights activist. Some have called him a Libertarian. He disputes that. But if an issue involves any question of the government intruding on citizen rights, Patterson will probably join the debate. He has taken issues that have been political liabilities in the past - such as the right to carry law - and found support for them in the Legislature.

This session he has successfully gotten a bill allowing second mortgages and a repeal of the motorcycle helmet law through the Senate, despite tough opposition.

He is also carrying a bill, approved by the Senate Education Committee, that would allow home-school students to take part in activities sponsored by the University Interscholastic League.

He lobbies support for his bills with the same philosophy he had as a navigator flying in the F-4 Phantom fighter jet in the Marines.

"The fighter pilot likes things to be simple. They like things to be easily understood and they like to have a clear mission. They don't like bulls--t," he said.

"That's kind of the way I viewed our home equity law and that's the way I viewed our handgun law. We've got too many impediments to citizens achieving their full potential."

Patterson says he doesn't consider political ramifications in supporting an issue, if he believes in it. He criticizes those in the Republican Party who shift on issues because it's politically expedient.

"We have a lot of folks who are kind of becoming baggage, for example the Texas Eagle Forum, a well-intended, clueless group of ladies who used to be credible," Patterson said.

Patterson said the Eagle Forum, a conservative, pro-family group, has worked to defeat his legislation that would allow Texans to take out second mortgages for almost any reason. Texas is the only state that places restrictions on second mortgages.

"You are the party of conservative philosophy, which is, 'Get the government out of my financial affairs,' and you are telling me I'm uniquely stupid because I'm a Texan and need your protection? I resent being told that I'm dumber than residents in 49 other states."

Kathy Adams, president of the Eagle Forum, said, "I think it's probably complimentary to our effectiveness if the senator is into name-calling, but I don't think he means it."

Sputnik Strain, the mohawk-sporting, leather-wearing chairman of the Texas Motorcycle Rights Association, testifies to Patterson's vigilance. Strain said Patterson wasn't interested in repealing the state's motorcycle helmet law when they first met about the issue in 1995.

"It took me three months to convince him that we were right," said Strain, who contends helmets impair sight and hearing and can cause neck injuries. "But once we convinced him, he has fought tooth and nail. He sure don't back off of nothing."

A picture of the clean-cut Patterson, who still wears his hair short enough for Marines, with a leather-clad Strain is prominently displayed in the senator's office.

"People probably think, 'My God, he associates with bikers?'" Strain said. "But he never had a problem with the way we look. With him, it was always about someone's constitutional rights."

Patterson won't ride on a motorcycle. "Too dangerous," he said.

Sen. Bill Ratliff, a fellow Republican, fought Patterson over repealing the helmet law.

"There are all kinds of ideologies on the Senate floor. I guess he's kind of a live-free-and-die advocate," Ratliff joked. "I wondered the other day, when he was flying jets whether he wore a helmet in that jet or not. He's a worthy opponent. We just disagreed about that issue, and he won."

Sen. Royce West, a Democrat from Dallas who was a vocal opponent of the concealed carry law, says Patterson is tenacious during debate.

"Jerry is an independent thinker," West said. "He champions those causes that he believes in and it's not related to party affiliation."

"Needless to say, with his background training in the military, he is a very capable adversary and he keeps coming and coming and coming."

From that standpoint, I really like it when both of us are on the same side of an issue."

The military has been a major influence in Patterson's life. His father flew in World War II and his great grandfather was a Confederate soldier.

Patterson, who attended Texas A&M, was on active duty in the Marines from 1970 to 1980 and served in the Marine reserves until 1993. He has 2,000 combat-free hours of flight in the F-4.

"I was only child, so all my brothers were the guys I flew fighters with,"

Patterson said. Patterson's father died of a heart attack in his 50s. Patterson, who has a weightlifting machine in his office, looks after his health by taking part in triathlons, constantly training by swimming, biking and running.

He recently got his wife, Jennifer, who is some 20 years younger than he is, interested in triathlons.

"My new bride is substantially younger than I am," he said. "I have a vested interest in staying healthy for as long as I can."

Texas town teaches students in below-ground high school

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
ASPERMONT, Texas (AP) - People in most Tornado Alley towns fret first about the local schoolhouse when violent storms brew. Here, folks wouldn't want to be anywhere else.

Aspermont students here have attended class "down under" for 30 years at their below-ground high school, possibly the most tornado-proof secondary institution in the state.

"My first year here we had a tornado come through town," said Superintendent Ray Miller, who arrived in 1995. "The principal said it looked like Noah's ark up here. Everyone had cats and dogs and everything else."

City fathers built the school in 1966 wary of Soviet nukes, not killer twisters. Since then, townspeople have nestled inside the building's three-foot thick walls whenever area storm sirens wail.

Miller, principal Robert Gibson and the sheriff hold keys to the building. In West Texas, major storms tend to ignite in the late afternoon or at night, meaning one of the three has to open the building for wary Stonewall County residents.

Gibson opened up the building six times his first year here in 1995. Drought conditions last year kept the sirens quiet, and the area hasn't faced terribly severe weather yet in '97.

"(A tornado) isn't going to knock anything down," Gibson said. "This place isn't going anywhere."

The only room with windows is Miller's office, which looks out onto the rooftop flagpole plaza. The flat roof rises about five feet off the ground.

The structure blunts the effects of more routine weather phenomena, too.

"I've been up here in the summer when they had the air conditioning off, and it's cooler than it would be in other buildings," Miller said.

Aspermont student Leah Dowell didn't grow up here, and she admits that the building took her aback at first.

"I thought it was really odd because I've never seen anything like it," said Miss Dowell, a senior. "I guess I've gotten used to it."

Students from both the junior high and the high school share both the underground building and the more traditional junior high across the street. All 365 pupils in the district share the cafeteria located there.

Fellow senior Amanda Walker said she's lived here all her life, so going below the surface to learn was nothing new for her.

"I just kind of hated it because in class, if you get bored or something, you can't look out the window and daydream," Miss Walker said. "You're just stuck there."

Sculptor creates bronze of world champion roper

EDNA, Texas - Sculptor Danny Stephens believes it's a safe bet that five-time world champion calf roper and two-time world champion all-around cowboy Joe Beaver will one day be inducted into the Pro Rodeo Hall of Fame.

And Stephens wants to be ready. So the Midfield artist is preparing to create a bronze of Beaver in hopes that when the big day comes, it will be his bronze that will represent Beaver in the hall.

"This is something I've wanted to do a long time," Stephens said.

Stephens met with Beaver to measure the roper last month in Edna during the slack portion of the Bad Company Rodeo. Beaver, who is recuperating from knee surgery, was in town only to watch his wife, Jenna, run barrels.

Stephens used a tape measure and caliper to measure the length of Beaver's leg, from hip to knee and from knee to ankle, the length of Beaver's arm, the width of the roper's shoulders, chest and even his face.

Accuracy is something Stephens always strives for in his work.

"Joe's got some action photos he felt like typifies his style of roping that I'll work from," Stephens said. "This will be a big, impressive piece. When we get through with it, we'll have Joe sign it on the base."

Stephens is determined to do the bronze of Beaver although it will be at his own expense, unless he can secure some sponsors. He is often commissioned to do bronzes.

For instance, Mack Altizer, owner of Bad Company Rodeo, commissioned Stephens to create a bronze of bull rider Brent Thurman, who suffered fatal injuries at the 1994 National Finals Rodeo.

Altizer wanted the likeness of the popular bull rider to award as a trophy.

"Mack sent me a photo of Brent riding a bull," Stephens said. "Brent was gapped open, really spurring. Everyone said that's how he rode. That's the action we used in the piece."

But the photo didn't show the details of Thurman's face. Stephens was able to secure a poster that not only showed the details of Thurman's face, but also his chaps.

Once Stephens got the sculpture to the foundry in Bastrop, he had one of the foundry staff help him put fringe on the chaps.

"Usually, when you see fringe on chaps, someone just made lines in the clay. But on bull riders' chaps, some of the fringe is 8 to 10 inches long. So this guy really worked with me," Stephens explained.

The foundry employee took little pieces of metal and welded them on to the chaps and then bent them to give the appearance of action.

2CARE for Kids stresses importance of regular medical, dental check-ups

Local 2CARE worker

Debbie Gaitan, local 2CARE of Kids worker in the Texas Health Steps program, tries to reach eligible Medicaid recipients to inform them of the importance of regular health check-ups.

Children can look healthy, yet need medical care.

That is why the Coalition of Health Services, Inc. launched 2CARE for Kids, an outreach and educational project designed to assist the nearly 22,500 Medicaid-eligible children that live in the Texas Panhandle, with medical and dental care.

Even when they don't look sick, children need to go to the doctor for regular health check-ups. Children need regular check-ups, especially when they are babies, to be sure they are growing right. Regular check-ups catch health problems while they are small.

Texas Health Steps is a program which provides free early and periodic screening, diagnosis and treatment for anyone under the age of 21 who has Medicaid.

2Care for Kids is funded by Texas Health Steps to provide personnel to inform eligible recipients of the benefits of regular health check-ups.

Debbie Gaitan is the local field representative who is based in the Women and Children's Medical Clinic.

"My job is to contact as many Medicaid recipients as possible in Parmer, Castro and Deaf Smith counties to inform them about Texas Health Steps and encourage them to make appointments for the free check-ups," Gaitan said.

Gaitan also explains to parents what happens at a Texas Health Steps medical check-up. Children get a health history and exam; a height and weight check; a growth and mental health check; immunizations (shots); tests for TB, lead, and other health problems; tips about health and safety; eye and ear tests (and glasses and hearing aids, if needed); eating habits checked; and help for good mental health, if needed.

"If a problem is found, your child will get extra care or referrals to doctors who can help," Gaitan said.

Local providers in Deaf Smith County include Dr. Stan Fry, Dr. Charles Hennessey, Dr. Bruce Clarke, Dr. Rodney Dotson, Hereford Health Clinic, Women and Children's Clinic, South Plains Health Provider and St. Mary Family Health Care Center.

Anyone who needs help can call Gaitan and she will assist them in setting up appointments, finding transportation or other problems which might interfere with the program.

Bone density is factor in addressing disease

By JAN HAMILTON
Ph.D., R.D.

At 35 a woman's battle against bone loss begins, and intensifies with menopause and throughout the life span. The process can begin earlier in families with a genetic predisposition to the disease or in cases where prednisone or other steroids have been a part of medical treatment.

However with new "user friendly" mobile units for measuring bone density and new methods of combating the disease, the motto of the National Osteoporosis Foundation for 1997 is "Kiss Osteoporosis Good-bye."

According to the National Osteoporosis Foundation, osteoporosis can be detected as early as teenage years and is a disease that occurs over the life span. Although we have always considered it to be a disease of little old ladies, it has been found in all ages and in men as well as women.

Fractures on the job can be seen in early life while the most obvious is the full blown disease seen in the elderly as with cardiovascular disease, diabetes and some forms of cancer.

Early detection is imperative. Osteoporosis is the number one killer of elderly females.

A fracture is often followed by surgery, rehabilitation in a nursing home and permanent residence in the nursing home is generally the outcome. Pneumonia often follows the fracture and the immobile condition leading to loss of independence and an altered life style.

The lifestyle change in elderly parents can be as much of an interruption in the workplace as child care. Early detection can increase the quality of life in the midlife caretakers. When the elderly parent needs medical attention, the child, who is often active in the work force is directly affected. Additionally, early bone loss can lead to increased fractures in the workplace.

We now know that early diagnosis of osteoporosis can be achieved through a low intensity x-ray in the heel. This reading provides a score to allow the patient to know their status with others their age and their bone density compared to a 35-year-old.

The reading "you are normal for your age" may be very bad news. In the past many of our elderly were victims of fractures which were felt to be inevitable.

We can now prevent and reverse osteoporosis through nutrition, exercise, hormone replacement therapy and with new pharmaceutical agents. It is now a curable disease if diagnosed early and treated.

In the U.S., one in four women and one in eight men over the age of 50 has osteoporosis according to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga.

In the past, osteoporosis was perceived as a relentless process that could not be reversed and that the best we could hope for was to slow down the rate of bone loss.

Therefore, women have done the things that are supposed to help, while hoping for the best. They faithfully take calcium supplements, do some aerobic exercise and agonize over whether the benefits of taking estrogen are worth the risks.

Despite these preventive measures, at least 1.2 million women suffer fractures each year as a direct result of osteoporosis and numbers appear to be increasing. The best defense has always been a good offense.

Therefore, being informed as to the status of the bone density is a major factor in addressing this hidden disease.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"Being tickled to death is a great way to live. Jumping for joy is good exercise."

Parents and teachers of History Day students will be tickled to death and will jump for joy when these students leave HJH at 7:00 Thursday morning with all projects and performances ready to present, all supplies packed and everything on our check list checked!

Michelle Bernhardt, McKenzie Tabor, Kali Hall, Kari Sherrod, Sabra Brownlow, Jessica Weishaar, Jessica Stubbs, Ashley Gonzalez, Camille Caperton, Wesley Reinart, Zac Davis, Trey Lusk and Ryan McCabe will represent HJH and HJSD at the State History Day competition in Austin Friday and Saturday. Do wish them well. They have worked long and hard.

The Junior Historian Court House Committee will present their project at Canyon on Tuesday. We appreciate all the help that we have received from the community. We will be eager to share these findings with clubs and organizations. Just give us a call!

Junior High cheerleaders were selected last week. Young ladies that will represent HJH next year include Shari High, Monica Brown, Monica Grajeda, Lisa Dominguez, Danna Brooks, Abby Caperton, Rebecca Artho and Amy Crox. Congratulations to each of these young ladies and to all those who tried out for this position. It takes much courage to perform before 300 of your peers.

Yes, we TAASed at least half of last week and we all survived! And we feel that students scores will be even better this year! Thanks to Mrs. Lawson and Mr. Saucedo for their hard work and patience in organizing this task and for helping us through the week.

Industrial Arts students who qualified for state will leave today for Waco for the competition there. Our students have always done well there and we feel they will bring home ribbons and medals again this year.

Although there are only three more weeks of classes, we invite you to visit us at HJH and observe the activities that are taking place. We will be busy until the last bell rings on May 23. Watch for announcements about Awards Assembly and yearbook signing day. There will also be some field trips and a Speech Class Play.

Physical therapy can assist in treatment of fragile bone disease

Physical therapy can help women who have been diagnosed with osteoporosis or who are at risk for the bone disease, according to Crystal Backus, PT, director of physical therapy at Hereford Regional Medical Center.

"Osteoporosis is also called fragile bone disease," she said. "It affects more than 25 million Americans, most of them women."

"What many women do not know, is that although there is no cure for osteoporosis, there are several things that can help prevent the disease or treat it once it is in progress. One of the more important parts of treatment is exercise."

Backus explained that properly supervised exercise by a physical therapist is combined with other treatments to provide a rounded course of treatment.

"For persons who have had a bone density measurement and know that their bone density is below normal, exercise should be limited to low to moderate activities where the person has a low risk for falling," she said.

"Activities recommended for this group include walking, stair-step machines, cross-country skiing, and hiking. For those who have extremely low bone density, activities should be limited to walking, water aerobics, swimming or cycling on an indoor cycle."

Persons who have already suffered a great deal of bone loss should avoid any exercise that involves twisting or unbalanced movement, such as golf, bowling, tennis or racquetball.

"Those who have already suffered fractures from bone loss or who are in this high risk group should consult a physical therapist before attempting any kind of exercise," she said. "A physical therapist can make recommendations that are based on the person's age, lifestyle, strength and agility. The important thing is that everyone needs to do some kind of weight-bearing exercise."

"Although exercise is an important ingredient in the management of osteoporosis and bone disease, women should always consult with their physician regarding nutritional requirements, dietary supplements and other aspects of the total treatment program," Backus said.

For more information about osteoporosis and exercise, call the physical therapy department at Hereford Medical Center, 364-2141, ext. 294.

The Successful Family

One out of five girls and one out of 10 boys is sexually abused. Not by a stranger. By an adult they know and trust...

Sexual abuse is not only rape. Anytime an adult or older teen uses a child in a sexual way, it is abuse. It may be sexual touching or kissing. It may be gentle or painful. Clothes may be on or off. But it is all sexual abuse.

Sexual abuse is never a child's fault, no matter what the adult made the child think. Children are too young to give permission to adults for any sexual activity.

An adult who uses kids this way is committing a crime.

To find out ways to protect your children from being victimized, join us for the final SUCCESSFUL FAMILY activity Tuesday evening from 5:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the HJSD Administration Building, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue.

This is the night for the drawing for the TV and VCR. You must be present to win. And we will hold a special drawing for those who have had 100 percent attendance.

Artho receives scholarship during Key Club banquet

Matthew Artho is the 1997 recipient of the Gene Brock Memorial Scholarship, according to an announcement by Mike McManigal, faculty advisor of the Hereford Key Club.

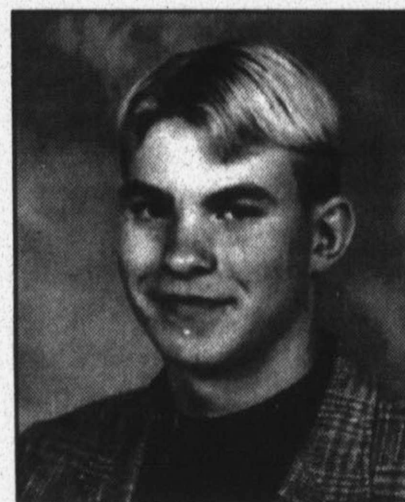

The scholarship was presented to Artho at the Key Club Banquet held May 1 at K-Bob's Annex.

In presenting the scholarship, McManigal stated that the selection of Artho was made easier because of his leadership abilities and contributions to the goals and objectives of the Hereford Key Club. Artho served as club president 1995-1997.

"We admire your dedication, leadership abilities, and your interest in serving the needs of your community," McManigal said.

He further stated that Artho's contributions to youth and community service would not end with his graduation from Hereford High School as his Key Club experience would serve as a springboard to lifelong commitment to community service, perhaps through a Kiwanis International affiliate.

"Matthew, we wish you the best as you begin a new phase of your life at Texas A&M," McManigal concluded.

MR. AND MRS. JASON GREGORY BODNER
...united in marriage

Ann Landers

Dear Readers: I have printed several letters in this space spotlighting weird decisions made by judges in America's courtrooms. I refer to them as "goofy judge letters." I promised a few weeks ago to lay off, but I came across one that is irresistible. Honestly, folks, I am not making this up. It was reported by Joan Jacobson, a reporter for the Baltimore Sun. Here it is:

Thomas J. Bollinger Sr., a Baltimore county circuit judge, wiped out a businessman's conviction for beating his estranged wife. It seems Charles Weiner needed a "clean record" to join a country club.

Weiner was convicted on a battery charge after a 1994 incident in which he beat his estranged wife's head into a tile floor, shouting, "I'm going to kill you." She suffered a concussion and other injuries.

In 1994, Judge Bollinger received a reprimand from a state's judicial disciplinary board for making insensitive comments during the sentencing of a 44-year-old man who had raped an 18-year-old employee after she had passed out from drinking. Judge Bollinger said the state's rape law was "too tough."

I wonder how many judges there are like Bollinger across the country. Despite Judge Bollinger, Baltimore has much to be proud of -- one of the nation's best newspapers, The Sun, and a five-star medical school -- Johns Hopkins.

And now hear this: A woman in Baton Rouge, La., sued a nightclub because she choked during a hot dog eating contest. Her complaint was "They shouldn't have contests like that."

Can you stand one more? This beauty appeared in the San Diego Union-Tribune:

The city of Stockholm, Sweden covers 14 islands which are connected by about 50 bridges.

Carol Roland dropped by to visit Karen Shortell, a neighbor in her apartment building. While the two women were chatting, Karen's pit bull attacked Carol, biting her on the arms and legs 27 times. Carol, an out-of-work bartender, was faced with medical bills totaling $40,000. She did not sue her friend, however. She went after the owner of the apartment building. Her claim was that the apartment owner knew the dog was "a dangerous menace" but did nothing to warn people about it. Roland was awarded $2.1 million by a New Hampshire jury.

Now for the closer and my all-time favorite. This also appeared in the San Diego Union-Tribune:

Thomas Passmore was working on a construction job in Norfolk, Va., when he thought he saw the number 666, the mark of the devil, on his hand. He remembered the biblical admonition, "If thy right hand offend thee, cut it off," and proceeded to slice off his hand with a circular saw. Passmore was rushed to the hospital but refused to allow the reattachment, saying he would go to hell if he were reunited with the offending hand.

As time passed, Passmore missed his hand and sued the hospital for $3.3 million for failing to reattach it. The 32-year-old man said that even though he refused to consent to the surgery, the doctors should have called his parents or his sister to overrule him.

I never did learn how this case turned out. If anyone in Norfolk knows, will you please drop me a line?

The bride's cake of white chocolate with cream cheese filling was decorated with fondant scrolls setting of monogrammed initials of the couple. White fresh flowers around the base finished the look.

— YOUR EYES —

Another Reason Not To Smoke

Smoking has long been associated with reducing oxygen supply to the eyes, thus affecting night vision and diminishing peripheral vision. It's been blamed for promoting cataracts, too. But recently scientists have discovered yet another danger from smoking: an increased risk of age-related macular degeneration, the most common cause of blindness among the elderly. The condition is usually untreatable, and it causes more cases of blindness than any other ailment among people 65 and older.

According to The Journal of the American Medical Association, the more people smoke and the longer they smoke, the higher the risk. Among women in a study, those who smoked a pack or more a day were 2.4 times as likely to develop macular degeneration as women who never smoked. Among men, the odds were worse. Even former smokers face a double risk years after quitting. Best bet to protect vision, say the scientists, is never to have smoked at all.

Editor's Note: The United Way of Deaf Smith County serves 12 local agencies. A different local agency that receives funds from the United Way will be featured in this column each week.

In 1973, a group of Hereford residents decided that with the growing number of single-parent families, Hereford needed a program to assist these families.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Hereford opened its doors in January 1974.

There continues to be a great need when children born in the 90s can expect that 60 percent of them at some time in their life can expect to live a portion of their lives in a single-parent home.

The children served in our local program are recommended to the program by the local school teachers and counselors.

"We feel we have a way of screening to serve the children who need our services the most," said Alva Lee Peeler, the local director.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Hereford is an affiliate of Big Brothers/Big Sisters of America. There are over 500 local agencies in the United States. Hereford is one of the smallest communities fortunate enough to have this "one-to-one" youth service available.

The local program maintains a case load of 40 to 45 children officially enrolled in the program. The real challenge in Hereford is finding enough men who are willing to be Big Brothers. The local program -- like most other programs -- always needs volunteers!

The volunteers are matched to a child with similar interests and compatible personalities. The volunteers include Little Brothers or Little Sisters in their routine by including them in a part of their activities at least once a week for a few hours.

"Our volunteers are the real heroes of this program," said Peeler. "Their friendships truly change lives and give some of these young people real opportunities to have brighter futures and success."

"Volunteers are screened very carefully. We want to make sure we do everything we can to provide positive role-models for our children. They go through interviews, home visits, police checks, reference checks and psychological testing before they can be accepted in our program."

Hereford is a special community, according to Peeler. The United Way provides about half of the operating costs of Big Brothers/Big Sisters. Clubs and individuals always come through with remaining funds.

Red Cross Update

Tri County Chapter has been asked to raise $1,243 as our part of the state-wide effort to raise $1.5 million in disaster funds.

We will be accepting aluminum cans as part of the fund-raising effort. We are also planning a garage sale as part of the effort.

These funds are needed immediately because recent flooding in North Dakota and Minnesota has created problems for many families there. As flood waters, we hope, begin to recede, over 800 of those people will leave temporary shelters and return home to begin cleaning up and putting their lives back together.

Many states are adopting a new policy of allowing workers to have a leave of absence during times when they are needed to serve as national disaster workers. This type of volunteer service has, in the past, been suited to people who did not have to work full time. It can be very difficult to find time to help your fellow man.

Offering the help when and in the way which it is needed is also very difficult. That is what makes gifts of money such a powerful tool. It fits all sizes and transports easily.

A gift of time is also a very valuable gift, and taking the time for training is a positive step. If you would like to train to be part of the American Red Cross disaster team, you can begin now.

There will be a class June 5 for Emergency Response Vehicle (ERV) operation. A national level instructor and the ERV will be coming from Pampa, where it is kept, to serve as a First Aid station during the upcoming "Walk for Life," scheduled for June 6 and 7. They will be here a day early, providing an opportunity for training.

Tri County Chapter's disaster instructor, Betty Henson, is certified to teach classes in "Introduction to Disaster Services", "Damage Assessment", and "Introduction to Mass Care." We would like to begin these classes as well. Please call the Red Cross office to have your name included on the class roster for these or other CPR/First Aid classes. The number is 364-3761.

Don't let late season storms and bad weather catch you unprepared. Arrange for emergency preparedness classes for your group.

This is the season for power outages in our area and the Red Cross recommends:

*Use flashlights to see. Do not use candles because they greatly increase the chances of having a fire in your home.

*Use a battery-powered radio to find out official information about the storm, power restoration, and road conditions.

*Turn off electrical appliance that was on when the power went off to avoid a power surge and possible damage to the appliance when power is restored.

*If power will be out for a long time, and roads are passable and authorities say it is safe to travel, consider going to a Red Cross shelter, a hotel or the home of a friend or family member.

Recent flooding in North Dakota and Minnesota has created problems for many families there. As flood waters, we hope, begin to recede, more than 800 of these people will leave temporary shelters and return home to begin cleaning up and putting their lives back together.

Red Cross assistance to date totals 27 shelters, 6,245 people sheltered, 10 service centers, 180,019 meals served and 2,720 Red Cross workers involved.

All Red Cross disaster assistance is free, made possible by voluntary gifts of time and money from American people. The Red Cross is not a government agency. To help victims of these and other disasters, call 806-364-3761, or 1-800-HELP NOW (800-435-7669), or 800-257-7575 (Spanish).

You may also contribute to the American Red Cross Disaster Relief fund by sending a check to your local Red Cross chapter or to the American Red Cross, P.O. Box 37243, Washington, DC 20013.

Internet users can get more information about Red Cross disaster activities and make a secure online contribution by visiting the American Red Cross World Wide Web site at <<http://www.redcross.org>>

The Red Cross is a United Way affiliate.

Banquet sponsors

A Mother's Day Banquet sponsored by the Sophomore Class of Community Christian School will be held following church services on May 11 at the church. The menu of salad, roast beef, baked potato, vegetables, dessert and drink will be served by the students, as mothers are personally escorted to their seats. Tickets must be purchased by May 6. Cost is $6 for adults, $3 for children ages 3 through 9 and free for children 2 and under. Tickets are available from, pictured from left, Brian Brookhart, Michael Hall, Rachel Chamberlain, Chris Hendershot, Amanda Bustamante, Toby Duncan or (not pictured) Sam Russel or by calling the CCS office at 364-8867. Proceeds will help defer the cost for a junior-senior mission trip.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent/FCS

If you are one of the 180 million people in the United States with a charge account, car loan, student loan or home mortgage, then information about you is probably stored in at least one of the several major consumer credit databases. The companies that maintain these databases are commonly referred to as credit bureaus. Your file in these databases is referred to as your credit report.

Most of the information in your credit report comes directly from the companies you do business with. Credit bureaus compile the data and then provide it to lenders when you apply for credit. Credit reports are also by landlords and potential employers.

The typical consumer credit report includes four types of information:

*Identifying information such as your name, nicknames, current and previous addresses, Social Security number, year of birth, current and previous employers, and, if applicable, your spouse's name.

*Credit information such as the credit accounts you have with banks, retailers, credit card issuers and other lenders. For each account, your credit report will list the type of loan (revolving credit, student loan, mortgage, etc.), the date you opened the account, your credit limit or loan amount, the account balance, and your payment pattern during the past two years.

The report also states whether anyone else besides you (your spouse or cosigner, for example) is responsible for paying the account.

*Public record information from state and county court records related to bankruptcies, tax liens, or monetary judgments. In some state, credit reports list overdue child support payments.

*Inquiries - the names of all credit grantors and potential employers who obtain a copy of your credit report for any reason. This section lists everyone who obtained a copy of your report for up to two years.

Almost as important as what is in your credit report is what isn't in it. Your credit report does not contain any information about your race, religious preference, medical history, personal lifestyle, personal background, political preference or criminal record.

Credit bureaus enter two billion pieces of data into credit reports each month. While every precaution is taken to make sure the information in your file is accurate, mistakes do happen. Financial advisors recommend that consumers review their credit reports once a year.

This allows you to make sure the information in your report is accurate and to have mistakes corrected. Checking your credit report before major purchases, such as a house or car, can avoid unpleasant surprises.

To receive a copy of your credit report, write the three major credit bureaus. They may charge you a fee, usually around $8. If you have been denied credit within the past 30 days (60 days beginning in October 1997), you can receive a free copy.

Also beginning in October, consumers who are unemployed, receive welfare, or victims of credit fraud will be able to receive one free copy of their credit report per year. When requesting a copy of your credit report, provide your full name; your current and previous addresses for a five-year period; your spouse's first name, if married; your Social Security number; and your year of birth.

Write the credit bureaus at the following addresses:

-Equifax Information Service Center, Attn: Consumer Dept. P.O. Box 740241, Atlanta, Ga. 30374. Phone 1-800-685-1111.

-TransUnion Corporation, National Consumer Disclosure Center, P.O. Box 7000, North Olmstead, Ohio 44070. Phone 12-408-1400.

-Experian (formerly TRW), Consumer Assistance, P.O. Box 2350, Chatsworth, Calif. 91313-2350. Phone 1-800-392-1122.

Once you have received a copy of your credit report, make sure it is current and error-free. Under federal law, you have a right to have incomplete or inaccurate information corrected by the credit bureau at no charge. If you find inaccuracies or incomplete information, follow these steps to get the problem corrected.

Inform the credit bureau of the problem in writing within 30 days of receiving your report. The bureau is legally obligated to correct the error and will usually reinvestigate the disputed information by going to the source of the information. If the bureau cannot verify the information, it is supposed to remove it from the file.

If the bureau fails to correct an error to your satisfaction, you have the right to write a statement of 100 words or less to present your version of the situation and have the credit bureau place it in your file.

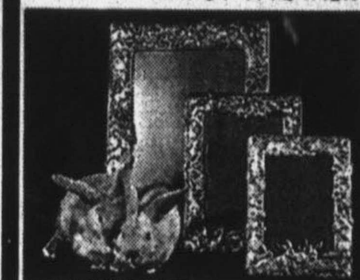

No one can erase a bad credit history. Financial information about late payments, foreclosure, and repossessions remains on your report for up to seven years, bankruptcy information for up to 10 years.

A Catholic school isn't just a place to learn facts and figures. It takes more than that to prepare a child for adulthood. It takes guidance, instilling a sense of purpose and reinforcing the values you teach at home. Only then can a student truly benefit from the classroom lessons.

A higher percentage of Catholic school students graduates from high school and attends college. They become successful students, but more important, they become exemplary adults.

Chart a bright future for your child. To see how a Catholic education could benefit your child both spiritually and academically, call or visit your local Catholic school.

Marketing to Women- How to be Gender Smart

(Part One of two-part series)

Amy is an attractive, mid-forties, working woman. Though a professional, she was wearing jeans and a sweater this Saturday afternoon as she and her teenage daughter drove onto the car lot.

The family had decided to purchase a new car and had selected the model and options they desired. All they had to do was visit a dealer or two and nail down a fair price.

After walking around the lot, Amy and her daughter found exactly the car they were looking for. Amy went inside to find a salesperson to discuss the purchase. Several salesmen (yes, they were all men) looked at Amy as she entered. Two went back to the football game they were watching, and another returned to his reading. No one on the showroom greeted her. She waited a few minutes, but no one offered to help so she left. A $20,000 gender-dumb mistake.

Jamie was still in her office attire when she entered the motorcycle shop. Her husband, Randy, wanted a new motorcycle and Jamie decided to show her approval by buying some accessories to go with it. She would let Randy pick the model he wanted.

Jamie browsed the aisles looking at helmets, gloves, jackets and accessories. The two young men behind the counter completely ignored her as she looked around. After looking up briefly, they returned to their conversation. Several minutes later the throaty rumble of a Harley grew louder outside the store. The two clerks both approached the entering rider and greeted him warmly.

Jamie frowned as she left. She felt snubbed. Randy wouldn't buy his bike here if she had anything to say about it. Randy agreed, and a dealer 100 miles away made the sale. Another gender-dumb mistake. This one cost the local dealer more than $15,000 in revenue not including accessory sales.

Gender Ignorance

The majority of the population in the U.S. is female. Today, there are nearly 60 million adult females in the U.S. work force. According to the IRS, almost half of Americans with investable assets of $500,000 or more are women.

Women are a formidable, market-driving force. Chrysler Corporation research reports that women account for two-thirds of all vehicle purchases either directly or by influence. California-based research firm, J.D. Power and Associates, pegs the percentage of women who are the "primary influence in new car purchases" at nearly 80 percent.

Women make more than 75 percent of all health care decisions, and hospital use rates are 37 percent higher than men. Females purchase 30 percent of all electronics, and are the primary influence in more than 60 percent of home appliance sales.

Forty-six million women color their hair, and they purchase more than 90 percent of all cosmetics. Females purchase 85-90 percent of all greeting cards, and in 1996 bought 37 million coats.

Women are a substantial and diverse market, and to ignore their presence in any business situation can be fatal. The two stories I shared earlier in this column are true. Though I changed the names, the women were ignored just as I described.

Amy found another dealership who treated her with respect. Her family purchased the car of their choice there. In Jamie's situation, the motorcycle dealer lost more than $2,000 in potential profit and a chance to create a solid, long-term customer relationship.

In next week's column, we will continue to explore the growing opportunity of marketing to women. We'll examine what women want, and how to market to them successfully. Don't miss "Marketing to Women" part two.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

I have waited a couple of days to start this article in hopes that a new inspirational topic would come to mind. The deadline is here and my writer's block is still here. So this week the focus will be on the new books coming out.

As you plan your garden and summer activities, you may want to consider what can be used now and later on. In the book Natural Crafts by Marilyn Tower Oliver, 72 easy projects are illustrated.

One is making a Mr. Potato Head complete with carrots, radishes and turnips to make the eyes, nose and mouth and grass seeds to have a continuous crop of hair.

Another project includes the leftover Easter basket and growing your own Easter grass. Making paper, corn husk dolls, door decorations, bird feeders and many other projects would be great summer fun.

The Complete Book of Gourd Craft by Ginger Summit and Jim Widess gives you instructions from planting and harvesting to cutting and decorating. You will be impressed with the beautiful results. There are several projects I wouldn't mind having in my house.

Now that these projects are completed the next book you need is The Crafter's Guide to Pricing Your Work by Dave Ramsey. Then all that is needed is a booth at the Town and Country bazaar and you're on the way to your first million.

Incorporate Your Business by Daniel Sitarz Attorney-at-Law will help you keep more of the money you make and soon you're on your way to your second million.

America's Top 300 Jobs contains the most widely used and respected career information available anywhere. Included in the job descriptions is a description of the working conditions, employment trends, job outlook earnings, related jobs, and much more. If you are ready for a career change or planning your first career, you may want to take a look at this book.

Tanya Tucker has written her autobiography entitled Nickel Dreams: My Life. Tanya's fame began at the age of 13 when Billy Sherill signed her up and she recorded the song "Delta Dawn."

Tanya has not lived a sheltered life by anyone's definition, and she has managed to survive and maintain her popularity. If you want to know the other sordid details, you will have to read the book.

Rosie: Rosie O'Donnell's Biography written by James Robert Parish is the first to present the complete story of the girl from Commack, Long Island. Rosie's mother died when Rosie was 10 years old and her relationship with her father wasn't the best.

However, Rosie has been able to establish a very successful career and win the hearts of many, just by making them laugh. "The Queen of Nice" at the age of 34 has dared to establish an anti-trash TV talk show that has an audience of millions. Her mix of sass, honesty and relaxed chit chat are making her the star of the nineties.

John Sandford's The Night Crew is here! With a new cast of characters John began a new level of suspense. Anna Batory and her night crew cruise the streets of Los Angeles with their video equipment looking for the news: accidents, robberies, murders, demonstrations, anything that can be sold to the local networks.

Anna loves this exhilarating life until the jumper. Five stories up, he's standing on the ledge of a hotel window, dark pants, white shirt; then he's gone, falling through the air toward the camera.

Deeply affected by the jumper, Jason, the camera man quits early that night. Later Jason's body is found on the beach. He had been shot in the head. Police assume the shooting is drug related, but Anna isn't too sure.

As Anna begins her own investigation, she discovers a connection between the jumper, Jason and herself. That is when the exhilarating life becomes one of terror.

Illusions by Janet Dailey features the beautiful security expert Delaney Westcott. Delaney is called to New York when rock star-movie actor Lucas Wayne is attacked and almost killed in his hotel room.

Rena Cole, the attacker, holds Lucas responsible for ruining her career. Delaney thinks keeping Lucas safe will be a straight forward case, until an anonymous fan captures her attention.

The fan sends Lucas three letters a day, and each letter holds a special gift. The psychological profile on the fan grows more disturbing with each letter.

Bomb Grade by Brian Freemantle is back to British agents in a Russia that is falling apart. With the Russian economy in shambles the police hold very little power, and the Russian mafia controls the streets, the militia and some say the government.

British agent Charlie Muffen goes undercover to unravel the mafia's smuggling operation and discovers the major heist of 250 kilograms of weapon grade materials.

To prevent the weapons from leaving the country, Charlie must pose as an arms trader and infiltrate the leading Russian mafia family.

VFW Auxiliary holds officer elections

Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary to Post 4818 held election of officers for the 1997-1998 year.

Elected were Bettye Boggs, president; Pixie Forbus, senior vice president; Winnie Tyler, junior vice president; Mildred Clements, treasurer; Anita Vardell, secretary; Peggy Oakes, chaplain; Erma Murphy, conductress; Earline Schneider, guard; Terrye Rhyne, patriotic instructor; Brenda Thomas, three-year trustee; Terrye Rhyne, two-year trustee; Ruth Morris, one-year trustee; and Peggy Oakes, historian.

Post Commander Robert Kubacak reminded Auxiliary members of the Loyalty Day Ceremony scheduled for 5 p.m. Saturday at the flag pole in front of the Post home. Part of the ceremony will include the playing of "The Stars and Stripes Forever," march by John Philip Sousa in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the first performance of the march. The actual date of the first performance was May 14, 1897. In December 19897 President Ronald Reagan signed a bill making this march the U.S.A.'s National March. The next Auxiliary meeting will be at 7 p.m. Monday. A meal will be served and will be followed by the installation of officers at 8 p.m., with Erma Loving as installing officer. All members are urged to attend.

AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Deaf Smith County ground water levels decrease

Deaf Smith County ground water levels decreased an average of 0.92 of a foot in 1996 in 89 privately-owned wells in the observation network maintained by the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 in its 566,400 acre service area within the county.

This represents a decrease of 78,163 acre-feet of water in storage in the Ogallala Aquifer last year in Deaf Smith County.

Ground water levels within the Water District's Deaf Smith County service area declined 1.13 feet annually during the 10-year period from 1987 to 1997.

An average annual decline of 1.37 feet was recorded during the five-year period from 1992 to 1997.

Ground water levels in the Ogallala Aquifer within the 6.8 million acre Water District service area declined an average of 1.49 feet from January 1996 to January 1997.

This decline is 0.42 of a foot less than the 1.91 foot annual decline recorded for 1995.

A network of 1,209 privately-owned observation water wells is used to determine the annual change in the quantity of water in storage in the Ogallala Aquifer within the High Plains Water District.

The depth-to-water measurements are taken in January and February of each year to allow water levels to stabilize from pumping during the previous growing season.

Armstrong County was the only county within the District recording an average annual increase in depth-to water levels in 1996.

The declines in the remaining counties ranged from 3.10 feet in Castro County to a 0.42 of a foot decline in Randall County.

Water conservation equipment loans available to local farmers

Under a new contract with the Texas Water Development Board (TWDB), the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 now has almost $2 million available for loan to area producers at 4.67 percent interest for the purchase of agricultural water conservation equipment.

Farmers in Bailey, Cochran, Hale, Lubbock, Lynn and Parmer counties, as well as portions of Armstrong, Castro, Crosby, Deaf Smith, Floyd, Hockley, Lamb, Potter and Randall Counties within the High Plains Water District service area are eligible to apply for an agricultural water conservation equipment loan from the district.

Irrigation systems approved for loans under the program are Low Energy Precision Application (LEPA) center pivot sprinklers; low pressure drip irrigation systems; low pressure center pivot sprinkler systems with drop lines no more than four feet from the ground; surge valves; soil moisture monitoring devices used to schedule the timing and/or amount of irrigation water applied; and furrow dickers to hold irrigation water or precipitation in place until it can soak into the soil.

Contractor services for land leveling or shaping land slope to improve irrigation application efficiencies are also eligible for funding under the loan program.

Under the district's guidelines, loans may be made for up to 75 percent of the cost of the agricultural water conservation equipment and installation, excluding any portion of the cost of the equipment cost-shared under a federal program.

Loans are secured by a first lien on the equipment. Additional security equal to the loan amount must also be provided by a Deed of Trust which gives the district a lien on the land; a letter of credit from a bank; or assignment of other liquid assets, such as a certificate of deposit (CD).

The payback period is based upon the amount borrowed from the water district.

"Under this contract from the TWDB, producers who borrow up to $9,999 will have a five-year payback period. Those who borrow from $10,000 to $19,999 will have six years to pay back their loan, and those borrowing $20,000 or more will have seven years," Becca Williams, water district director of administration, said.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

--Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Knots Landing: Cul-de-Sac nothing but a dead end

By David Migicovsky
©TVData Features Syndicate

TV-show reunions have a lot in common with car crashes: It's almost impossible not to watch, despite knowing the chances of seeing something entertaining are remote, at best. Knots Landing: Back to the Cul-de-Sac, a two-part TV movie that airs Wednesday, May 7, and Friday, May 9, on CBS, does little to change this perception of reunion shows.

Despite having millions of devoted fans, Knots Landing always was the neglected poor relation of the other prime-time soaps. The plots and acting were more realistic — no one ever mysteriously appeared in a shower — which allowed the series to remain on the air until 1993, after the others had collapsed from their own absurdities.

While only four years have gone by since the series ended, the producers thoughtfully have provided old and new shots of the actors in the opening credits, for those whose primary interest is to see how they have aged.

Once viewers have satisfied their curiosities about what the actors now look like, the plot becomes important. It is here that viewers may be disappointed — because there isn't much of one. Cul-de-Sac opens with Paige (Nicollette Sheridan, in an uncredited cameo) leaving Greg (William Devane) because she wants to have children and he doesn't.

Other than that, it's pretty much business as usual in the cul-de-sac. Greg and Abby (Donna Mills) are still up to their dirty tricks, although, unfortunately, they have mellowed slightly. Greg is being sued by the former employees of the factory he bought from Gary (Ted Shackelford) and moved to Thailand. He enlists Abby, who owes $1 million in back taxes, to steal a pivotal document that proves he agreed not to close the plant. Meanwhile, Anne (Michelle Phillips) has been persuaded she is gifted with psychic powers and her self-appointed mission is to save Greg from himself.

Mack and Karen (Kevin Dobson, Michele Lee) celebrate their anniversary in Part I, but their marriage is in trouble. Mack is going through a midlife crisis, feeling left behind because of Karen's personal growth — though viewers will have a hard time telling how she's grown. She's still the same annoying lecturer who takes everything too seriously. She and Mack clash over whether their daughter, Meg (Francesca Smith), should be told that Greg is her biological father, and while Karen rightly contends that Meg must be told, viewers are left wishing she were wrong for once.

Across the cul-de-sac, Gary and Valene (Joan Van Ark) are having problems of their own. Judging by her facial expressions, Val appears to be in a constant struggle to maintain her sanity. She has written a novel based on her experiences while kidnapped, and is now working with a hack screenwriter (Michael Woods) to develop a movie version of it. He is suffering from writer's block, and when the affliction proves terminal, Val is caught up in a murder investigation.

Kate (Stacy Galina) also returns to Knots Landing, accompanied by a 4-year-old daughter who looks suspiciously like Gary. Abby's son, Brian (Brian Austin Green), loves Kate and wants to be a father to her child, with no involvement from Gary.

Fatherhood is the running theme throughout the movie. Unfortunately, the different reactions of the male characters to their parental responsibilities are among the few true surprises viewers will discover.

Kevin Dobson and Michele Lee reprise their roles as Mack and Karen MacKenzie in Knots Landing: Back to the Cul-de-Sac, airing Wednesday and Friday on CBS. The two-part TV movie, which features several other series regulars, picks up where the popular prime-time soap opera left off four years ago.

ARIES -- March 21/April 20

The sun is shining on you at work. Everything is going your way, and you should revel in it. Now's your chance to get yourself noticed. Romance blossoms in your personal life. Someone whom you thought was just a friend reveals his or her true feelings for you.

TAURUS -- April 21/May 21

Strong and steady wins the race, and your personality fits the bill. When everyone else is frantic over a mistake at work, your calm nature will correct the problem and save the day. A loved one reveals a secret to you. Keep his or her confidence, and be supportive.

GEMINI -- May 22/June 21

You may feel like you have a split personality this week. Everyone will be pulling you in a different direction, and you don't know which way to turn. Take a step back, relax, and think about how you really feel. Do what you believe in, and don't let others pressure you. Aquarius plays a role.

CANCER -- June 22/July 22

You're in the doghouse at work this week. It seems as if everything you do is wrong. However, this too shall pass. Hold tight, and do your best. You'll be doing well again soon. As for your love life, it's just the opposite. You have suitors knocking at your door at all hours of the day and night. Don't be overwhelmed.

LEO -- July 23/August 23

Your outgoing nature wins you points with your superiors at work early in the week. However, remember not to get cocky. It can be a fine line between outgoing and obnoxious. A friend you haven't seen in a few months returns to your life. Catch up on the time you've missed with each other. Taurus plays an important role.

VIRGO -- Aug 24/Sept 22

Take a backseat at work this week. Let someone else get a chance to shine. Just because you're not in the spotlight doesn't mean that your work isn't good. You're still being noticed by superiors. A loved one needs your help at the end of the week. Give him or her support.

LIBRA -- Sept 23/Oct 23

Your time is a popular commodity this week. Between co-workers, family and friends, it seems that you have no time for yourself. Everyone needs your advice and help. Give what you can, but remember to take care of yourself. There comes a time when you have to look out for No. 1.

SCORPIO -- Oct 24/Nov 22

Don't be afraid to go out on a limb at work this week. Ingenuity is called for, and your crazy idea really does have merit. Don't hold yourself back from sharing it with your manager. A loved one is there for you when a relationship ends. Take him or her up on the offer of a shoulder to cry on.

SAGITTARIUS -- Nov 23/Dec 21

When you make a mistake at work this week, admit it. Everyone can see through your lies. A co-worker is there to help you correct the problem. As for your love life, don't worry — there are no mistakes in sight. That special someone you've had your eye on finally asks you out. Say yes!

CAPRICORN -- Dec 22/Jan 20

Put your nose to the grindstone at work early in the week. There's too much to be done to goof off. Besides, it's in your best interest to get a lot of work done; your superiors are watching. A family matter erupts into a huge fight later in the week. Don't choose sides.

AQUARIUS -- Jan 21/Feb 18

You're in over your head at work this week. Ask for help. It's not a sign of weakness; it's a sign of intelligence. A close friend needs your advice this week. Be honest, and don't let petty jealousy get in the way. Remember, this is a good friend who always has helped you.

PISCES -- Feb 19/March 20

Family matters take center stage this week. Give your support to loved ones, but don't get drawn into a family fight. Try to keep everyone objective. It will work out. As for your love life, you won't have to work hard at all. An old flame returns to rekindle your relationship.

Q: Did Angela Lansbury appear and sing in the old movie The Picture of Dorian Gray? Was it her first role? I saw the movie during World War II on a ship going to New Guinea. In fact, I saw it every night for more than a week. -Livia Baker, Clearwater, Fla.

A: No wonder you remember it. Lansbury was in her late teens when she made Dorian, in which she sang "Little Yellow Bird" and snagged an Academy Award nomination to boot. It was her third film, following her Oscar-nominated film debut in Gaslight and her role as Elizabeth Taylor's sister in National Velvet.

Q: I have a child who would very much like to write to Lorenzo Lamas. Can you provide an address? -J.J., Greenfield, Ind.

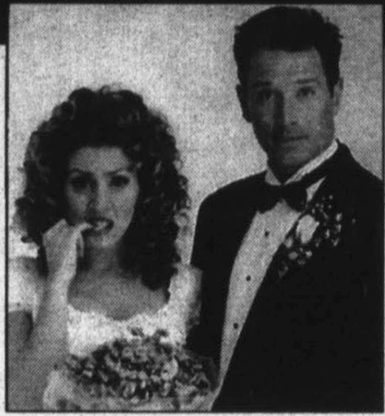

A: Write to Lorenzo Lamas, c/o Stu Segall Productions, San Diego, Calif. 92123.

HIGHLIGHTS

The Royal Opera House gives a behind-the-scenes look at a turbulent season in the prominent establishment. The six-part miniseries begins Thursday on PBS (check local listings).

PBS' Royal Opera House serves up champagne, shame

Mention the words "grand opera" and most people -- at least those who didn't flee the room screaming -- automatically will think in terms of elegantly gowned and coiffed society matrons, dripping jewels like Dom Perignon, taking a slow promenade at the latest opening night.

And, sure enough, The Royal Opera House, a six-part miniseries that airs Thursdays beginning May 8 on PBS (check local listings), does indeed remind one of two such women: Krystle Carrington and Alexis Colby of Dynasty, just before they tumble into a mud pit or slimy pool for one of their famous catfights.

Yes, Opera House is catnip for both opera lovers and those who only spell opera with no "e" and with a "y" on the end, an always informative, almost always titillating backstage glance at London's performing arts house in Covent Garden, home of both the Royal Opera and the Royal Ballet.

Opera addicts will love the insights into the complex planning and towering obstacles that figure into each presentation, where a multimillion-dollar production can hinge on a slender set of very fallible vocal cords.

But the real fun of this documentary series lies in its dirt-dishing way of telling backstage stories, including a battle over who will be cast in the title role of a major new production of Tchaikovsky's ballet Sleeping Beauty.

Most instantly addictive is the true story line involving Keith Cooper, the opera house's new director of public relations, who is handsome, dapper, articulate and Satan incarnate in the eyes of the staff.

In the premiere episode, we see and hear Cooper discussing an affable box-office manager's "lack of intelligence" and even see him call the poor man into his office to fire him.

When the series ran in England, those moments prompted indignant newspaper headlines throughout London.

Here's a classical villain we never truly expect to find -- except, of course, in grand opera.

Knots Landing reunion is all in the family

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

It's been four years since we last saw the gang from Knots Landing, but they return to television in the two-part movie Knots Landing: Back to the Cul-de-Sac, airing Wednesday, May 7, and Friday, May 9, on CBS.

William Devane (Greg), Kevin Dobson (Mack), Michele Lee (Karen), Donna Mills (Abby), Ted Shackelford (Gary) and Joan Van Ark (Val) have reunited to bring us a bit of the drama and a lot of the humor for which Knots Landing is famous.

"We've always tried to infuse humor into Knots," series creator and executive producer David Jacobs says. "Sometimes the stories get kind of heavy. We always tried to avoid the kind of humor that makes fun of the form itself. But this time we had the opportunity to at least refer back to the history."

In Cul-de-Sac, Mack is going through a midlife crisis at about the same time his adopted daughter discovers Greg is her real father. Kate (Stacy Galina) returns to town claiming Gary is the father of her daughter, and Abby returns owing millions in back taxes.

Meanwhile, Val is implicated in the murder of one of her writing associates, and Karen must deal with her husband and all her friends' troubles.

If you think that is high drama, try being the producer who brought the cast together again.

"It was tough," executive producer Michael Filerman says. "But the actors were all as cooperative as they could be. And we got it done."

Members of the series' supporting cast also return for the miniseries, including Brian Austin Green (Brian) and Kim Lankford (Ginger).

Returning to the set was very emotional for some of the actors.

"We've all gone through so much together, divorces, marriages and deaths," Lee says. "We truly are like a family. I had a bit of an emotional breakdown when it was all over because I felt like I was losing my family all over again."

CHITTER CHATTER

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) - Add Richmond to the list of places where shock-rocker Marilyn Manson isn't welcome.

City officials canceled a May 10 concert by Manson, a self-avowed Satan worshiper whose rock band is known for lewd on-stage acts and songs about murder, rape and self-mutilation.

The city said the contract between the band and the company that manages the city-owned Richmond Coliseum had never been signed and a deposit had not yet been received from the concert's promoter.

Add to that, the band "was just not consistent with our community standards," City Manager Robert C. Bobb said Tuesday.

Manson's latest release is titled "Antichrist Superstar."

The band's concerts have generated protests in Massachusetts, Nebraska, Texas, West Virginia, North Carolina, Wisconsin and Arkansas.
