Texas Democrats make 'clean sweep'

By GARTH JONES
AP Political Writer

Texas Democrats shattered Republican dreams Tuesday for another four years in the governor's mansion and set back for years the GOP's hope for true two-party politics here.

Without exception, Democratic candidates defeated well-financed Republican nominees including Gov. Bill Clements, the first GOP Texas governor since Reconstruction.

Clements, 65, who liked to brag that he was a businessman, not a politician, fell before Democratic Attorney General Mark White, 42, who Clements called a career politician.

Also winning big was U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, 61, D-Texas, who got a third six-year term despite a $3 million challenge thrown at him by Republican Jim Collins, 66, a Dallas congressman.

Clements told a morning news conference he had not had a chance to study the impact of his defeat on Texas Republicans.

"When you take a shellacking, and we did, you lick your wounds and come back for another day," Clements said. "The Republican Party will rebound from this...they'll come back."

Clements also told the news conference he had no plans to run for any other political job. "I said when I ran the first time that I had no ambition for anything except this job, and I still don't."

Reports from the News Election Service indicated a turnout of almost 3 million, compared to the 2.3 million voters when Clements was elected in 1978.

"The Republican Party in Texas is now relegated to where it was 10 to 15 years ago," said former ov. olph Briscoe of Uvalde, who started White in state politics.

"The utility issue, I think, was the turning point," said White. He bore down heavy in closing campaign appearances on soaring light bills and blamed Clements for letting the Public Utility Commission favor the big power companies.

In an emotional news conference after midnight, Clements told supporters, "It looks as if we will indeed have a new governor of Texas. Rita and I wish Mark White success for all Texans. There is nothing else to say. That's the way it is."

Bentsen said:

"I have said all along that there is no Republican economy or Democratic economy. If we are to end the recession and get our country back on track it will require the highest degree of cooperation among business, labor and government."

With 98 percent of the state's precincts reporting, White had a 54 percent edge over Clements with 46 percent. Bentsen piled up 59 percent of the vote to 41 percent for Collins.

Clements carried Dallas County, but White got a good vote there. White carried Harris County, but Clements got a good vote too. Bexar went to Clements by a narrow margin along with Tarrant but White took Cameron, El Paso, Hidalgo, Nueces, Orange, Travis and Wichita counties.

Three thousand voters were surveyed as they left the ballot box in an AP-NBC poll, and 80 percent of those who said they voted for White said unemployment was the major issue in the race. Clements supporters said the top issue was President Reagan's economic program.

Clements contended throughout the campaign that the race was not a test of Reaganomics. He said Texas was in much better economic shape than other states.

White blamed Clements for all of Texas' troubles from the oil industry's price slump to the credit crunch, from unemployment to high utility rates.

Balloting could alter strategy

WASHINGTON — Republican strategists said today that Democratic House gains in the midterm election could force President Reagan to be more accommodating or face a stalemated Congress for the rest of his term.

The president declared himself pleased that Republicans had retained control of the Senate but struck a conciliatory note, saying he had compromised before and was prepared to do so again.

He vowed not to compromise on principle but said, "There have been concessions and compromises in both directions on all of the major issues (in the first two years) and we expect to continue to work with the Congress in that way."

It's still too early to discuss whether he'll run for re-election in 1984, Reagan said, but "we have every reason to feel good."

White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III acknowledged that the election of more House Democrats indicates "we may have to compromise some more" when the 98th Congress takes office in January, but he predicted the conservative coalition that enabled Reagan to cut spending and taxes would remain intact.

Baker held out hope that at least some of the new Democrats will "be the same kind of boll weevil Democrats that we've been able to attract in the past.... It's gonna be tougher to pull that coalition together in the House, but we've by no means lost that coalition."

Democratic House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. called the election "a disastrous defeat for the president." He said it "showed that America doesn't agree with the unfairness policy of the president."

"I think what the American people said was, 'Stay the course,'" said Republican Party chairman Richard Richards.

However, Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. worried aloud that the new Democrats in the House could give O'Neill the power to bottle up Reagan administration proposals.

"My greatest fear is that with an enhanced Democratic majority in the House and Republican majority in the Senate we may have difficulty in deciding what the legislative agenda ought to be, and that might end up in a year or so of stalemate," the Senate's Baker said.

But the official White House line was confidence. "The president's ability to govern and lead is still there, intact," said presidential spokesman Larry Speakes.

Disatisfaction with Reagan economic policies appeared to be a factor in several races but not enough of one to produce a Democratic landslide. The 10.1 percent unemployment rate and Social Security were the big issues in Democratic campaigns. Republican campaigners countered by citing lower interest and inflation rates and blaming Democratic policies for the economic problems.

Interviews with voters as they left polling places found a mix of displeasure with the results of the Reagan economic program — but also a reservoir of patience.

The impact of Reagan's personal campaigning also was mixed. Republicans won in Utah, Wyoming and Virginia and were leading in California — all states where the president appeared. Reagan also campaigned in Nevada, but it was a split decision there with Democrats capturing the governor's office and Republicans winning a Senate seat.

In New Jersey, Montana, Nebraska, Texas, New Mexico, and North Carolina, where he also campaigned, the Republican candidates lost.

The biggest political name among the losers was Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., twice a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, who was beaten by San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson in the California Senate race.

Democrats won 262 House seats and were leading in five others; Republicans won 163 and were leading in three. If that trend continues the Democrats would pick up 24 seats.

Watching and waiting

Angelo loses state senate bid

When the supporters and family of Ernest Angelo Jr. filed quietly out of his office at 410 N. Main St. at 1:30 a.m. today, the Republican candidate for state senate from the 25th Senatorial District had yet to concede in Tuesday's general election.

However, unofficial figures showed that the Midlander was trailing his Democratic opponent, Bill Sims of San Angelo, by a margin of about 49 to 51 percent. They were fighting for the senate seat that had been held by Midlander W.E. "Pete" Snelson, a Democrat.

Angelo released a statement this morning in which he praised his supporters and congratulated his opponent on the victory in the close race.

"I am very proud of everyone who worked so hard on my behalf in each of the 38 counties. I am particularly pleased about the overwhelming support in Midland," he said.

In congratulating Sims, Angelo pointed to "the responsible campaign which Sims and his supporters conducted. I wish Bill the best of luck in the Texas Senate."

"I had mixed feelings about the race" during the day, said Angelo shortly before closing down the office early this morning. "I was optimistic about a possible victory but I knew it would depend upon how the rest of the ticket went. It doesn't look particularly promising," said Angelo, noting the Republican losses in races across the country, and particularly the defeat of Texas Gov. Bill Clements.

But the outcome for Republicans nationwide may not be as bad as first predicted when the final tallies are made, he said. "It doesn't look like the Republicans will lose any seats in the (U.S.) Senate. And in the House, it looks more like 20 seats will be lost, rather than the 31 that TV commentators had been predicting earlier."

Although Midlanders turned out heavily in favor of the hometown candidate, and San Angelo for Sims, it was the rural areas that apparently had given the senate seat to the Democrat. Adding to that was a relatively high voter turnout during a non-presidential election year in San Angelo.

Asked shortly after midnight if he was declaring a victory, Sims replied, "I don't reckon so. I haven't won yet."

He had no idea when the final tabulations would be in. "You might as well go on to bed."

Voter turnout in San Angelo was good, said Sims, a rancher and former agriculture extension agent. Of 38,000 registered voters, almost 20,000 traveled to the polls.

IN MIDLAND COUNTY, which lists 42,000 registered voters, the turnout was slightly higher with about 22,000 pulling a lever at the polls. And they

County balloting ousts two incumbents

No one openly moaned the blues. But two Midland incumbents gracefully bowed out of politics, their challengers were elated in their victories, and one incumbent was pleased to get the voters' mandate to carry out his job for another four-year term in Tuesday's general election.

Stepping aside at the voting electorate's request were 14-year veteran Midland County Commissioner Charlie Welch, who was gently nudged aside by 84 votes, and two-term District Clerk Madge Wallis, who lost by a 570-vote margin.

Succeeding Welch, 56, a Democrat, in January will be Republican C. Wallace "Wally" Craig, a 58-year-old real estate broker who picked up 2,974 votes to Welch's 2,890 and who carried only three of eight voting precincts in Commissioner's Precinct 2 in northeast Midland and east Midland County.

Another Republican, Vivian Wood, 44, won 10,888 votes to Ms. Wallis' 10,318. Ms. Wallis, 58, campaigned under the Democratic Party's banner.

And Peace Justice Robert H. "Bob" Pine, 67, another Democrat, got the voters' approval to add another four years to his 18-year tenure on the bench by defeating Republican Party challenger Bob Coonce, 46, who lost by 2,360 votes.

Craig, who waged an amicable campaign against his friend, garnered 50.7 percent of the vote to Welch's 49.3 percent. "There is no animosity to begin with; there's none now," Craig said shortly after the polls closed and after he already had won 622 absentee votes and Welch had collected 306.

The election attracted 22,581 Midland independents, Democrats, Republicans and a smattering of voters attracted by Libertarian and Citizen's parties causes. All told, 42,409 Midlanders had registered to vote.

For more local election coverage, See Pages 1, 2 and 3C

"I THINK because we have respect for each other, it's a campaign we can be proud of; it's been honorable," Craig said of the commissioner's race. "Win or loss, I have no ill feelings. There's no guilt involved.

"To me, it (the campaign) demonstrates that each of the parties were positive in what we've had to say. We're different people.

"If you can't talk about yourself positively, you shouldn't talk about yourself at all," he said.

Craig said that he and Welch have a common interest in government and public service.

"We try to work for the community," he said. "We try to be reasonable people. We try to do what is best." However, Craig suggested that the people's preference for a candidate may be based on their "perception of approach" to problems. "People tend to see individual handling of problems in

Council approves annexation request

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

With little discussion Tuesday evening, Midland City Council approved on second reading the annexation of about nine square miles east and northeast of the city boundaries. Deleted from that reading was Skyview Addition, against the wishes of two councilmen.

The action taken by the council — meeting in a regular session in City Hall Council Chambers — completes almost a year of work by the city staff. The first request for annexation came in December 1981 from some developers for land northeast of the city.

The council also set up preliminary zoning for the land, approved a zone change for a walled-in townhouse development by Racquet Club South Development Corporation, increased fares for MidTran and agreed in concept to a plan for expanding the restaurant at Midland Regional Airport.

On the annexation question, the council was reminded by Richard Hennessy, director of planning and community development, that residents of Skyview Addition had been told the area would be deleted if a plat was submitted to the city. The residents complied, said Hennessy.

HOWEVER, THE COUNCIL didn't delete a tract of land across the highway that is now owned by Petroplex Land and Development Corporation and on which sits an asphalt plant. The tract was included in the original annexation request made by Goodrich Hejl. It was in early September that the city was asked that it be deleted. The council's decision to put it within the city limits makes it an involuntary annexation.

Councilman Jesse Hatfield requested that 349 Ranch Estates also be deleted, but the council disagreed, with the exception of Councilman Steve Davidson.

Explaining the differences between Skyview and 349 Ranch Estates, Hennessy said, "Skyview is a semi-rural development with large lots. 349 Ranch Estates lots are 50 feet wide.

"There is no water and sewer service being furnished by the city to Skyview. The city for several years has furnished water to 349 Ranch Estates. I imagine water was provided on the condition it would be annexed," he said. Later, Hennessy noted that Skyview is more fully developed than 349 Ranch Estates.

The 349 Ranch Estates, which is located on Highway 349 and will be bounded by extensions of Loop 250 and Fairgrounds Road, also brought some discussion during the move for zoning. When one resident said he opposed a move to make the land 1F-3, single family, rather than Agricultural Estates because he keeps horses, he was told that it was being zoned AE. Public hearings to switch the zoning to 1F-3 will be held later.

THE TOWNHOUSE development in Racquet Club South passed by the council on a unanimous vote after a

Democrats gain about two dozen House seats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats, harvesting votes on the unemployment and Social Security issues, swelled their House majority by about two dozen seats, a gain that could stymie President Reagan's pledge to stay his economic course.

"It was a disastrous defeat for the president," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., who led the nationwide Democratic charge against Reaganomics.

But White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III claimed, "We still think that we're going to be able to pull that coalition together to support the president's programs on selected issues...."

Tuesday's mid-term balloting allowed Democrats to tighten their hold on the chamber they have controlled for 28 years, regaining most of the 33 seats they lost in the 1980 Reagan landslide.

Early today, Democrats had won or were leading in 266 districts; Republicans in 167. The current House lineup is 241 Democrats, 193 Republicans with two vacancies in seats previously held by Democrats.

Thus, Democrats appeared likely to gain at least 23 seats. Before the elections, leaders of both parties had predicted the Democrats would pick up between 15 and 20 seats.

At least 21 Republican incumbents were turned out of office, and four were trailing. Only three Democratic incumbents lost.

But even beyond the numbers, Democrats did well in districts where Reagan's economic program was the focus of the campaign.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, who shepherded the administration's budget and tax legislation through the House, faced the toughest challenge since he first won election in 1956.

Michel's Democratic opponent, G. Douglas Stephens, a virtual unknown in the district, hammered at the economic issue and gave Michel such a strong challenge that Reagan devoted a full day to campaigning in the 18th District for Michel.

After a neck-and-neck race for most of the evening, Michel pulled to a thin lead and appeared headed for victory.

"For months, I and other Democrats have hammered away at two issues: Social Security and the need to create jobs," O'Neill said as the returns came in Tuesday night. "Today, the American people sent a message: set a fair course."

Michel, meanwhile, implied that it will be nearly impossible for Reagan to simply "stay the course," the theme of the president's fall campaign effort.

After claiming victory, Michel said that he will be going to Reagan and suggesting that the president may have to make a "slight modification" in his policies in order to achieve the goals he has sought.

Reagan's victories over the past two years have resulted from a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats.

Michel said there will be differences now, "the difference between a philosophical coalition and a pragmatic coalition."

"We'll flow with the tide," said a Republican aide who acknowledged the GOP will have to adjust to the new House lineup if there are to be any more victories.

O'Neill, who handily won re-election, also said he expected many of the conservative Democratic "Boll Weevils" who sided with Reagan in the current Congress, will be back in the party fold next year.

"Some of them received the message from home that they don't want them to be as strident with the president as they have been," the Massachusetts Democrat said.

With the exception of 1934, the party occupying the White House has lost congressional seats in every off-year election since the Civil War.

Since World War II, the president's party has lost an average of 19 House seats in the off-year elections of the incumbent's first term.

Voters were electing a newly reapportioned House of Representatives drawn to reflect a 10-year population migration to the Sun Belt.

At stake in the balloting Tuesday were 425 of the 435 House seats. Eight seats in Louisiana were decided in September — six won by Democrats and two by Republicans. And two Georgia seats, late in being redistricted, will be filled in an election Nov. 30. Republicans were not expected to win those seats.

In another race where Reagan personally appeared, North Carolina Democrat Ike Andrews won his re-election fight against Republican challenger William Cobey Jr. with 52 percent of the vote.

This year's redistricting also threw 10 other incumbents into races against each other in five districts.

Senate balloting leaves GOP in control of economy

Critical Republican victories in California, Virginia, Missouri, Wyoming, Nevada, Utah, Connecticut and Minnesota more than offset Democratic upsets in New Mexico and New Jersey.

Republican Sen. John Chaffee led by a narrow margin in the only undecided race, in Rhode Island. A GOP victory there would leave the Senate count the same as before the election, 54 Republicans and 46 Democrats.

Incumbency, more than Reaganomics, seemed the deciding factor in the 33 Senate races: 27 incumbents were re-elected and one leading, and two lost, one from each party. No incumbent was running in three races.

As the final, absentee ballots were being counted in the lone undecided race, Americans appeared to have given mixed signals on whether they want more of Reagan's economic programs or a change in course.

They re-elected eight Republican incumbents, but a big block of the president's biggest Democratic critics — including Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio and Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia — also were given new terms.

Republicans won two of the three open seats including California, where San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson beat colorful if enigmatic Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

After the 1980 conservative sweep, Republicans talked of widening their eight-vote Senate majority for generations to come. Although that clearly did not happen, Democrats had little success convincing voters to blame the recession and high unemployment on the president's economic program and turn out his backers.

The most obvious exception was in New Jersey, where Democratic businessman Frank Lautenberg, sought to link Republican Rep. Millicent Fenwick with Reagonomics and finally came from behind to win.

Although a moderate on social issues, Mrs. Fenwick supported Reagan's program of budget cuts, and Lautenberg's victory was a personal setback for the president, who made a campaign stop in New Jersey.

In Missouri, on the other hand, incumbent Republican John Danforth squeaked out a narrow victory over state Sen. Harriett Woods, a Democrat who also made an issue of Reaganomics.

Reagan made New Mexico, a wellspring of hardcore support for the president, the last stop of the 13 states in which he campaigned for congressional candidates.

But Schmitt, a former astronaut who had been considered vulnerable from the start, apparently made a tactical error in the last days of the campaign with television ads accusing Bingaman of recommending a pardon for a convicted killer and not pressing for conviction of inmates involved in a riot at the state prison in 1980.

Bingaman countered with documents showing release of the prisoner had been sought by the federal government in return for his testimony in a major case involving the murder of a federal judge. Bingaman also emphasized that he had headed an investigation of the prison riot and referred cases to the local district attorney for prosecution.

In the only other loss by a Senate incumbent, Nevada Democrat Howard Cannon, 70, was defeated by former state Sen. Chic Hecht, who succesfully exploited a split within the Democratic party in the state.

In Connecticut, incumbent Republican Lowell Weicker beat Democratic Rep. Toby Moffett in a battle of liberals in a liberal state.

Moffett sought to paint Weicker with the brush of Reaganomics, but Weicker ducked, saying his Senate battles on social issues like busing and abortion showed his liberal credentials were intact.

Marianne Bachmeier, 32, is surrounded by press photographers after entering the court room in Luebeck, West Germany Tuesday, where she will stand trial on charges of killing the alleged murderer of her daughter in a Luebeck court in March, 1981. State prosecutor Klaus-Dieter Schultz formally accused Ms. Bachmeier of entering the court and drawing a pistol from her handbag, then shooting Klaus Grabowski, a 35-year-old butcher with a record of molesting small children, to death. Bachmeier's daughter, Anna, was seven.

Trial of 'Anna's mother' sparks public debate in West Germany

LUEBECK, West Germany (AP) — Headlines, television and strangers on the street call her "Anna's mother."

Her story has fascinated a nation unaccustomed to crimes of passion and has stirred public debate about how the final chapter should end.

In March 1981, Marianne Bachmeier walked into a courtroom in Luebeck, pulled a pistol from her pocketbook and pumped eight bullets into the man accused of molesting and strangling her 7-year-old daughter, Anna.

Now, Marianne Bachmeier is standing trial for murder.

Judge Peter Bassenge closed the opening session Tuesday after eight minutes as more than 300 reporters, photographers and spectators vied for 200 seats. The trial, expected to last about six weeks, is being heard in a state building to avoid holding it in the courtroom where Grabowski was shot.

The 32-year-old defendant is being tried by three male judges and two lay assistants — a salesman and a male teacher.

Because of strict firearms control, gun violence is rare in West Germany, and Ms. Bachmeier has become something of a national figure.

Since mid-August, the weekly magazine Stern has run a series based on weekly interviews with Ms. Bachmeier during the 545 days she spent in jail awaiting trial.

The tale of her "ruined life" tells of rape, an alcoholic father, and a strict stepfather who kicked out the 17-year-girl when she had the first of three illegitimate children.

By the time Anna was born, the young mother had already given her first two children to authorities for care.

Ms. Bachmeier rejected Anna's father, married a Pakistani so he could stay in West Germany, and lived with a third man.

Tabloids and even national television have pondered whether "Anna's mother" should have killed Grabowski.

State prosecutors and the three defense lawyers expect testimony from psychiatrists to play the largest role in determining what sentence will be handed Ms. Bachmeier.

A urologist also plays a crucial role since he gave Grabowski hormone injections thought to have restored his sexual drive.

Some writers beg mercy — a pardon, perhaps — for the avenging mother. Others insist she serve all or most of the maximum life term for murder.

"Opinions, presentations and clearly stated demands to the court have piled up in a way never experienced before," this week's Der Spiegel magazine said.

On a TV program titled "I'd Have Shot Him, Too," parents were interviewed about the case.

"I wouldn't have just shot him. I would have cut him up into little bits," an elderly man declared.

West German sacrifices all to realize his dream

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

BISCHOFSHEIM, West Germany (DPA) — His relatives think he is crazy; his marriage is buffeted by crises; he has not had a steady job for years, and his bank account is practically empty.

All Butgereit wants is to realize his dream: to row across the Atlantic Ocean in the world's smallest one-man submarine.

He has already devoted 17 years, 16,000 hours of work and about $120,000, to the project.

"I could not give up now, even if I wanted to," said machine mechanic and welder, referring to the inner drive that keeps him going.

His motives are to confirm his manliness and to obtain money, plenty of money. Should he succeed in traveling in his 9.8 foot-long 2.5-ton submarine from the Canary Islands to Barbados in the Caribbean, Butgereit believes, he will be inundated with advertising offers.

After all, nobody has ever rowed for 60 to 70 days like a galley slave in a submarine, pulling the oars a total of 2.2 to 2.6 millions times.

Butgereit wants to make sure he does not share the fate of Czechoslovakian Jaromir Wagner, who succeeded in crossing the Atlantic strapped in a standing position on top of an airplane, but was greeted only by respectful handshakes rather than dollars.

For this reason, although Butgereit has rejected sponsors who have expressed a desire to use his vessel to transport drugs, he insists, "under no circumstances will I start without money-bringing preliminary contracts."

Before the long-awaited command "batten down the hatches" can be issued, the would-be world record setter has enough to do with the outfitting and trial runs of his mini-sub, as well as his physical fitness training.

In this regard, he is concentrating on strong nerves rather than muscles.

"What good are the strongest biceps if I get claustrophobia in the narrow submarine?" he says.

As a result, he occasionally sits in his living-room armchair for up to two weeks at a time or spends several nights meditating in the submarine's uncomfortable interior.

At the same time, Butgereit, who has never seen the interior of a real submarine, has succeeded in lowering his sleep needs to four hours at a time. This is the time he will have between rowing periods out at sea.

Germans evacuated

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (AP) — The 1,200 residents of a West German hamlet were evacuated today after a 20-ton U.S. Army Pershing 1 missile transport careened into four cars, killing at least one civilian and injuring two American soldiers, authorities said.

A U.S. Army statement issued in Heidelberg said there was no warhead on the Pershing, one of the surface-to-surface missiles deployed with U.S. troops in West Germany since the 1960s.

The missile was not damaged, the statement said.

If you considered this morning's temperature a little nippy — FREEZE that thought — and look out for tonight!

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, tonight's clear and cold temperatures are expected to lay the first light freeze of the season over the Permian Basin.

After a near 32-degree reading tonight, Thursday's mercury should clamber to the upper 50s by the afternoon.

Light and variable winds are expected to stir the cold temperatures tonight, becoming easterly 5-10 mph Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 67 was a far cry from the record high of 85 set in 1946, as the overnight low of 41 compared to the record low of 29 in 1951.

Governorship, other key state posts easily taken by Texas Democrats

Republican races:

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, 50, Democrat, won another four-year term to go with his 10-year tenure as head of the Senate. He defeated Republican George Strake, 46, former Texas secretary of state.

Comptroller Bob Bullock, 53, first elected to the job in 1974, defeated Republican Mike Richards, 45, a Houston state senator.

Democrat Ann Richards, 49, former Travis County commissioner, was the victor in a race with Republican Allen Clark, 40, former aide to Clements, for state treasurer.

Garry Mauro, 34, former executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, beat Republican Woody Glasscock, 42, former mayor of Hondo, for land commissioner.

Democrat Jim Hightower, 39, who ran a strong but unsuccessful race for the Texas Railroad Commission two years ago, defeated Republican Fred Thornberry, 45, a Texas A&M poultry expert, for agriculture commissioner.

Odessa man dies after train hits truck

An Odessa man has died of injuries suffered in a train-pickup truck accident at the Missouri-Pacific Coors Road crossing Tuesday morning.

Salvador Garcia, 45, died at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital shortly before 9 a.m. Tuesday, an hour and a half after his pickup was hit broadside by a 69-car Mo-Pac freight train.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Garcia was northbound on Coors Road and attempting to cross the tracks, which parallel U.S. Highway 80 west of Midland Regional Airport, when his 1971 Ford pickup was hit by the westbound train.

A Mo-Pac spokesman said the freight, which was traveling at 55 mph at the time of the accident, had left Big Spring earlier and was on its way to El Paso with a five-member crew.

No crew members were injured and Garcia was the only occupant of the pickup. His body was taken to the Easterling-Wilson Funeral Home in Odessa.

County balloting ousts two incumbents different ways. It's not a matter of right or wrong," said Craig who was standing by as the votes were being logged and tabulated in the Elections Administrator's Office Tuesday night.

Craig said he would work toward an "atmosphere" of cooperation with other governmental bodies in "attempting to solve some of the mutual problems."

The victor said he appreciated "Charlie for running his campaign at a high level." He said Welch telephone him to congratulate him for winning the race.

Welch, contacted at home after he had conceded defeat, said he was honored to have served the public.

"By golly, it's just one of the greatest honors for an old country boy to serve the people of Midland County for 14 years," Welch said. "I hope I've done the county a good job, and I know Wally is going to be just as good because he's sincere and effective, and I know he'll do a good job.

"I congratulate Wally; he's run a good, clean race."

"I called him and congratulated him," Welch said, "and told him anything I could do to help him I would be happy to do."

Welch, 56, said he appreciated "all the peoples' help and their money and their labors" on his behalf in his campaign for re-election.

Welch, who gave up his water-well drilling business after getting into office and whose farming has been cut back, said he is uncertain about his future, except "I'll go back to living my life" instead of working full-time for the public. The commissioner's job in 1983 will be paying $23,652.

"I don't know what I'll do," he said. "I don't know what the economy is going to make me do. I'm practically out of farming anyway."

Welch expressed no bitterness over his defeat.

"I DID THE best I could under the conditions (of redistricting and a mid-summer operation which set him back) and that's the best you can do. He (Craig) earned it; he won it."

Craig won three of the five city voting precincts in Commissioner's Precinct 2 by votes of 346-143, 413-276 and 836-418, while Welch carried central Midland voting precinct 209-170, carried a northeast precinct 560-114 and took the lion's share of votes in the rural areas. He picked up 408 votes to Craig's 187 in the Greenwood community and 449 votes to his opponent's 167 in southeast Midland County.

In a race marked by conflicts, Ms. Wood carried 15 of the 29 voting precincts and won the absentee balloting 1,427 to 1,160 to yank the District Clerk's job from Ms. Wallis by 10,888 to 10,318 votes.

"I just feel great about it," Ms. Wood said in a victory celebration Tuesday night. "I hope everyone does. It was just too close for comfort."

Ms. Wood expressed concern over the women deputy clerks in the District Clerk's Office and over their apprehension of having a new boss. "I know they have been real uptight," she said. "I don't want them to have anymore worries or problems. I've got some ideas about things that need to be done (in the office)."

Ms. Wood was a lead clerk for Ms. Wallis from January 1977 to October 1978, when she resigned. Today she is an assistant purchasing agent for a major oil company. She'll be making $33,168 in 1983 as district clerk.

AFTER LEARNING that she had been expelled from office in her eighth year as clerk, Ms. Wallis said that she might pack up and fly to Saudia Arabia, where her husband, Porter Wallis, works for Mobil Pipe Line Co. "I'm going to have to live with Porter seven days a week," she said.

"I lost the race," she acknowledged. "It hurts anybody's pride."

She said she had wanted to stay stateside "because of the job, but now I don't have a job. Nobody wants to be a loser, but I'm not a loser," she said. "The Lord has something better in store for me. I'll praise His name.

"When you get to be a strong Christian, you're prepared either way. You accept what God has in store for you. This (the election) was all in His hands. And I get excited; I can hardly wait to see what He's got in store for me."

In her door-to-door campaigning, Ms. Wood said that she, her family and friends "did a lot of walking, a lot of praying and a lot of talking. We walked a bunch of miles for the past few months. They (voters) asked me a lot of questions, because a lot of people don't know what the District Clerk does."

Once apprised of her loss, Ms. Wallis said she telephoned her Republican opponent. "I just congratulated her. You're supposed to do that; that goes with this campaigning."

PINE, A Democrat who has held onto his $29,340-a-year job, has been justice of the peace of Precinct 1, Place 2, since 1965.

"It was a tight race" which was won by "hard work by all my friends and family," he said at election headquarters.

"I appreciate all my friends that came out and went to the polls and voted for me," he said.

Pine picked up 11,680 votes to Coonce's 9,320 and carried 21 of the 29 voting precincts. In absentee voting, he barely — by four votes — beat Coonce: 1,282 to 1,278.

Pine said that he and his staffers and their manner of work is "up to date. Right now, we're taking care of the workload."

This morning, Coonce congratulated Pine on his win but with a forewarning about four years hence. "I'm certainly going to ask for a rematch in four years. I think I ran a good campaign and I made a strong showing."

Among public officials who dropped by the election headquarters were Commissioners Win Brown and Durward Wright, Sheriff Dallas Smith and District Attorney Vern Martin.

"I'm happy to see the Republican Party turn out and support their candidates," Martin said. "I'd be a fool not to. I sympathize with the people that lost, whether they be Democrats or Republicans," he said. "I know how both sides feel; I've been both places."

Fire of undetermined origin Tuesday night heavily damaged this vacant house at 611 N. Pecos. Six fire department units responded to the call and used nearly 30,000 of gallons extinguishing the blaze. Firemen were called out shortly after 9 p.m. and spent more than an hour at the scene.

Angelo concedes race for state senate

went for the former Midland mayor and petroleum engineer with 72 percent of the vote. The final count was 15,818 for Angelo and 6,210 for Sims. Angelo had expected to get 70 percent of the vote.

"I did not do as well as we had hoped in Tom Green County (San Angelo)," he added. The final count there was 6,985 for Angelo and 12,321 for Sims.

"I expected to lose in the rural areas, but I lost a little more than expected," said Angelo, who was leaving Midland this morning for a weeklong trip. "But we're getting more votes than expected from the Hill Country."

Overall, however, Angelo said voter turnout in the district was less than had been expected. He had planned on 110,000 voters while the preliminary figures showed about 100,000 went to the polls.

By 3 a.m., the unofficial totals were putting Sims ahead of Angelo with a count of 48,643 votes, or 52.19 percent, for Sims and 44,033, or 47.25 percent, for Angelo.

Even after talking to Sims on the telephone, Angelo said, "With the numbers that are still out, it wouldn't be proper to throw in the towel yet. We had an organization I'm proud of. They were organized throughout the district" and it wouldn't be fair to concede before the all the figures are in, Angelo said.

AS A MEMBER of the National Republican Executive Committee, Angelo also had been watching figures on races throughout the country, and especially in Texas. Although Republicans lost 20 seats in the House, Angelo said, "I don't see there's any way it could be interpreted as defeat for the Republican Party. In Texas, we took it on the chin, especially if we lost the governorship. That's a tragedy for Texas.

But he predicted the economy over the next two years will come back up and there will be major Republican victories in 1984.

The atmosphere in Angelo's office had been one of optimism as the evening began when the first numbers began rolling in and Angelo took the lead. But by 9:15 p.m., the lead switched.

Looking at the numbers as they were called in by his supporters and comparing them with a list of predicted numbers for each of the district's 38 counties, Angelo remarked about 10 p.m., "We ought to be able to tell something from these numbers but I can't."

Stationed at his desk in the center of his office with workers set up at each phone in adjacent offices, Angelo tallied the numbers, kept in touch with Bill Clements headquarters in Austin and the national Republican officials in Washington, D.C., while turning an eye occasionally to a television set in a corner of the room.

JOKING WITH A caller on the phone, Angelo said, "You dad-gum stockbrokers aren't any better on elections than you are on stocks." Afterward, he explained that the man had called in during the afternoon to say things looked great for Angelo in his county. The vote showed otherwise.

By 10:30 p.m., going over the figures with his top campaign workers, Angelo said, "The numbers just aren't there, folks."

At one point in the evening, the race was neck-and-neck with the tally showing Angelo with 49.87 percent of the vote and Sims with 50 percent.

While noting that he is realistic enough to know the votes weren't out there, Angelo added that he is optimistic enough to want to wait until all the votes are counted and tabulated.

This marked the second time Angelo sought the state senate seat. The first time he ran was in 1968. "There was no two-party system in the district then. I knew it was not a winnable race from the beginning. But that was not the case this time."

Democrat Fisher wins Ector County judgeship

Ms. Fisher received 14,563 votes and Howell 8,833 as 24,280 persons — 49.13 percent of the county's registered voters — trekked to the polls, making it one of the largest non-presidential-election-year turnouts in recent history.

"It's a very high (percentage)," said Ector County Clerk Lucille Wolz. "It's more than we've had in a long, long time."

In the race for Judge, County Court at Law, Democrat Carol Gregg gained a 3,000-vote margin over Republican opponent Rod Price. Some 12,972 Ector County residents tabbed Gregg for the seat, while 9,807 cast ballots for Price.

Lone Republican victor in local contested races was Bryan N. Henderson, who easily defeated Democrat Natalie Rothstein in the Commissioner, Precinct 2 race, 6,201-2,901.

Vote totals in uncontested races were:

County Clerk: Lucille Wolz, Democrat, incumbent, 17,678.

County Treasurer: Juanita (Susie) Allen Rippy, Democrat, 16,942.

County Surveyor: Sam Howell II, Republican, 14,545.

County Commissioner, Pct. 4: Willie Hammond, Democrat, incumbent, 2,918.

Rain, snow fall in Southwest U.S.

By The Associated Press

Warm temperatures spread across the East while much colder air invaded the central part of the nation, rain fell in Texas and heavy snow was reported in the mountains of New Mexico.

Skies were generally clear in the West, with cloudiness confined primarily to Washington state.

Showers and thunderstorms moved ahead of the advancing cold front in the nation's midsection, and were reported across southeastern Louisiana and Mississippi into eastern Kentucky.

Showers extended to eastern Ohio and the lower Great Lakes region.

Fog formed in the warm air ahead of the cold front, and was heavy in northern Florida, the Carolinas and New England.

Skies were clearing across the central and northern Plains.

two-hour discussion on the proposal which has been before the panel off and on for several years. The last time it was presented a few months ago, residents appeared en masse to register their disapproval to various items.

Steven Wisenbaker, the developer, said he had talked with the neighbors "and we've responded to all of their concerns." The plan was changed to include three exits and entrances, eliminate a central trash compactor and have trash picked up at each home and locate the maintenance buildings to a spot inside the wall.

To abide by city standards, Wisenbaker said the two-story townhouses on the east side would be designed with a common wall on the first floor, but with an angled, detached roof on the second that would allow at least 10 feet between the houses.

In approving the plan, the council required the developer to pave the street in back of the development — referred to during the meeting as No Name Street — and put in a sidewalk next to the wall.

MIDTRAN FARE INCREASE proposals rode through the council with barely a stop. Mayor G. Thane Akins questioned whether fare increases would help to add riders.

Director Jim Johnson said the overall increase totals 18 percent. "We feel this increase is justified. Fares haven't been increased since February 1981. There should be a minimum loss of passengers with this increase."

Later, he said MidTran has been operating at a deficit of about $22,000 a month, and he hopes the rate hikes would decrease it by about 10 percent.

The new fares will run as follows: Door-to-door pickup, $2, up from $1.75; handicapped, 50 cents, up from 25 cents; subscription service one-way, $21, up from $15.50 per month; subscription two-way, $35, up from $31 per month.

Senior citizens with the proper I.D. card will ride free. And flex-routes will stay the same at 75 cents each way.

Architect Jimmie Leath resurrected the plan for expanding the restaurant at Midland Regional Airport and relocating the Pliska airplane. It should give an additional 60 seats to the restaurant. Akins noted the plans had been put on hold about a year ago while the council made up its mind on how to expand the airport and parking areas.

After an executive session, the council voted to hire Robert Clements for six months on a contractual basis as an internal auditor. Councilman Gordon Marcum said the city's outside auditing firm of Main & Hurdman recommended the city hire someone to look at the organization and auditing procedures in each department.

The council rejected two zone change requests, one for retail store at the corner of Fairgrounds Road and Pecan Avenue and the other for a 7-Eleven at the southeast corner of Midland Drive and Wadley Avenue.

The council gave the go-ahead to advertise for bids on pump station equipment and electrical switching gear for the effluent disposal plan that involves pumping treated effluent to J. "Timber" Floyd's land southeast of the city.

The wreckage of the Cessna 210 piloted by evangelist Lester Roloff lies in a field three miles north of Normangee, Texas, following Tuesday's crash which killed Roloff and four passengers, who were en route to services in Missouri. Wreckage was found scattered over a mile from the fuselage.

Tapes reveal Chagra's suggestion to 'off' judge

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Narcotics kingpin Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra once suggested that his brother set up the killing of a convicted hit man to eliminate him as a witness in the slaying of a federal judge, according to FBI tapes played in court.

The tapes were played Tuesday in the trial of three people accused in the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Jimmy Chagra, already serving a 30-year prison term without parole, will be tried later on murder charges. He is accused of paying convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson $250,000 to kill Wood.

According to the tapes, Chagra also discussed with his wife Elizabeth an elaborate scheme to escape from the Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary and flee to the Orient.

Harrelson, 44, is on trial for conspiracy and murder in the killing of Wood, who was cut down by a sniper's bullet outside his San Antonio townhouse on May 29, 1979.

Harrelson's 41-year-old wife, Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, and Mrs. Chagra, 28, also are being tried on conspiracy charges.

Joseph Chagra, an El Paso attorney and younger brother of Jimmy Chagra, continued his testimony Tuesday as prosecutors played recordings of court-ordered electronic surveillance of the Chagras.

Joseph Chagra pleaded guilty to murder conspiracy in exchange for a prison sentence of not more than 10 years and his testimony in this trial. He testified Monday that both his brother and Harrelson told him they were involved in Wood's slaying.

The last of the tapes recorded at Leavenworth were to be played for the jury today during the 17th day of testimony.

Jimmy Chagra told his younger brother during a meeting at Leavenworth in the fall of 1980, "Off Harrelson. Off him, if we can get away with it," according to a conversation recorded in the prison visiting room.

Joseph Chagra then told the jury, " 'Off him' means to kill him."

Prosecutors also have alleged that the two brothers discussed killing Henry Wallace, a key government witness in the 1979 criminal enterprise trial that sent Jimmy Chagra to Leavenworth.

Wood, known as "Maximum John" because of his stiff narcotics sentences, was scheduled to preside at that trial when he was shot.

Joseph Chagra testified that on Jan. 19, 1980, while Harrelson was awaiting trial on state weapons and narcotics charges in Houston, Harrelson said he wanted to escape from jail and kill his wife and stepdaughter, Teresa Starr Jasper, 24, to prevent them from being witnesses.

Evangelist Roloff left legacy of homes for 'people in trouble'

NORMANGEE, Texas (AP) — Evangelist Lester Roloff, dead in a plane crash, once said that if he had 1,000 lives to live he would use 999 to run homes for wayward youths and adults and one more to be a lawyer and "keep me out of jail."

Roloff, whose eight-year battle against state licensing of his rehabilitation homes led to several stints behind bars, died with the four other people aboard when a Cessna 210 he was piloting crashed Tuesday.

The 68-year-old fundamentalist minister was en route from Corpus Christi to Kansas City, Mo. There were "very severe storms" in the area at the time of the crash, said George Burlage of the Federal Aviation Administration in Fort Worth.

Roloff used strict "Bible discipline" on his organization's farms, paid for through proceeds from radio broadcasts heard around the nation.

"Brother Roloff was a singularly dedicated and committed individual whose ministry and devotion gave productive new lives to thousands of wayward, neglected and underprivileged youngsters who had been literally written off by society," Gov. Bill Clements, a personal friend whom Roloff had campaigned for, said Tuesday.

Last year, Roloff won a long battle with the state over licensing for his homes for wayward youths. The state first sought to license the homes in 1973 after parents visiting their daughter at his Rebekah Home for Girls reported seeing a girl whipped.

The farms in Corpus Christi are "for people in trouble — with alcohol, drugs, you name it," Dave Walkden, communications director for Roloff Evangelistic Enterprises, said Tuesday. "We take ones no one else will have. We work with them from a Bible-based program."

"Everyone that comes in hates it," Roloff had acknowledged of the strict program of natural foods, Bible reading and no television or rock music. "...But you wouldn't know them 30 days later."

District Judge Charles Mathews of Austin ruled in Roloff's favor after touring the facilities.

"I came away from that place that day and I just said to myself, 'If all the facilities of this kind in the state of Texas were operated by Lester Roloff, we wouldn't need any state laws,' " Mathews said in April 1981.

State Attorney General Mark White, who obtained a court injunction in 1979 against Roloff operating the unlicensed homes, said the crash "was a great tragedy."

"He was a very dedicated man, and he worked very hard in causes he believed very deeply in," added White.

Lester Roloff

Tuesday's crash occurred after Roloff lifted the small plane off an airstrip at the farms, said Walkden. The other victims were identified as Susan Lynn Smith, 28; Elaine Wingert, 30; Cheryl Palmer, 24; and Enola Slade, 25.

Ms. Wingert was a friend of Roloff's, and the others worked at Roloff's Jubilee Home for Ladies, said Jubilee Superintendent Doug Haddock. The group was going to a service at Calvary Baptist Church in Roosterville, Mo., Walkden said.

Madison County sheriff's deputies said the aircraft smashed into the ground in a field just outside this small town about 110 miles north of Houston and 30 miles northeast of Bryan.

Bentsen aide dies

WASHINGTON (AP) — District of Columbia police are investigating the slaying of Kenneth R. Asbury, an aide to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who was found beaten to death in his apartment.

Asbury's body was found about 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in his high-rise apartment in southwest Washington, police said.

Police said they had no suspects or motive in the case and that the murder weapon had not been found.

Asbury, 34, a native of Glenoldan, Pa., had served on Bentsen's staff since 1973.

"This is a great tragedy. Ken was a faithful and longtime member of my staff," Bentsen said in a statment released from his Austin, Texas, office. Bentsen was in Texas Tuesday to vote and await the returns in his successful re-election campaign.

Inmate tells of death struggle with murdered prison warden

GALVESTON (AP) — A prison inmate says he begged a warden to take him back to the main prison unit as the two men panted near a creek during a break in their death struggle.

But Eroy Brown testified Tuesday that Wallace M. Pack ignored his pleas to take him "back to the house."

"He said, 'You're going back to the building all right, nigger.' And then he jumped me again," Brown said.

Brown, on trial for the second time in Pack's April 1981 drowning, said the warden tried to drown him first. But Brown said he threw Pack off and held his head underwater, then let him up and asked him to take him back home.

Brown and special prosecutor Mack Arnold re-enacted the battle on the courtroom floor. Pack's drowning followed the shooting of prison farm manager Billy Max Moore. Brown contends he killed the men because they were going to torture him.

"You intentionally held him under water, didn't you?" Arnold said.

"No sir," Brown replied. "My intention was to keep him off of me. I let him up once and he wanted to keep on fighting. What was I supposed to do?"

Brown said he did not know how long it took to drown Pack.

"I was acting out of passion," he said. "I wasn't keeping up with time. I just laid on top of him to keep him from putting me back up underneath there."

After being threatened, Brown testified he slapped the pistol away and it discharged, sending a bullet into Brown's foot. Brown testified that he got the pistol and started backing away, but tripped and the two officers jumped on him.

O'Neill says it's 'disastrous' loss for White House

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the end, the midterm elections matched the form charts and if voters meant to send President Reagan a message, the line was busy.

It will be busier as Reagan and his lieutenants set about lobbying to rebuild the Republican-conservative coalition that won the administration its economic program in the current Congress.

For the economic debate that dominated the 1982 campaign will continue now in a Congress more heavily Democratic on the House side, no change in the Republican Senate.

Tuesday's balloting added about two dozen Democrats to the House majority, enough to make Reagan's lot more difficult when he goes back to Congress to propose new installments on his budget-curbing economic plan.

An Analysis

Neither side got clear instructions to stay Reagan's course or to change it. But it will have to be tempered. "He may have to compromise some more, but I think we'll still be able to pull this coalition together," said James A. Baker III, the White House chief of staff.

All told, it was about as good an election night for the White House as Republicans could have hoped, given the historic trend of off-year House losses to the opposition party, and the added burden of a 10.1 percent unemployment rate.

"There's no landslide here, nothing out of the ordinary," Baker said.

Democrats, predictably, argued otherwise. "It was a disastrous defeat for the president," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. "Now he has to work with the Democrats."

Reagan always had to do that and — to O'Neill's dismay — he did it by enticing a bloc of them away from their own party floor leaders.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts said the message was "that there has to be an alternative to the Reagan economic program." Reagan argued all fall that the Democrats had no alternative but old-fashioned spending programs that would only make the economic mess worse.

The average off-year election loss to the party of a newly-elected president is lower than it was Tuesday. Since World War II, that average has been a dozen seats, 19 if the first off-year elections of presidents not elected to office are included. Counting all midterm elections in that period, whether in a president's first or second term, the average is 31.

Democrats went with the low average to magnify their gains. Republicans went with the high ones to minimize their loss.

Both sides could, and did, claim satisfaction. Republicans pointed to the fact that they held their Senate majority. "Altogether, it's really remarkable that we kept that majority and held it intact," said Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, the majority leader. Democrats had to win 20 out of 33 Senate races to stay even, and they did.

"I think what the American people said was 'stay the course,'" said Republican National Chairman Richard Richards. He said if the voters had wanted to tell Reagan to change course, they would have said so with votes against Republican senators. They didn't.

The major shift in party strength was in the ranks of the governors. Democrats gained at least eight governorships, and had a chance of winding up in charge in 36 of the 50 states. Those gains don't show as clearly and constantly as gains in Congress, since the governors don't function as a unit, and have only persuasion, not votes, to bring to bear on national programs.

But governors can be a big asset to their parties in a presidential election campaign, and there's one coming in two years. Baker said he believes Reagan will be in it.

That may hinge in part on what he is able to accomplish with his economic programs during the balance of his term. He would seem less likely to go campaigning for another term if hard times persist. Republican Chairman Richards said if things are still bad two years hence, the administration will have to take the blame. He said Republicans could blame economic woes on the Democrats this time and make it stick, but that won't work again.

To keep Reaganomics rolling, Reagan has to keep convincing the House to go along. Otherwise, the prospect is stalemate, with each side able to block the other but neither capable of enacting its own programs.

That will take compromise, some give on both sides, and cooperation in the two years ahead. Maybe that was the message.

Former spy wins in Nevada

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Democratic Sen. Howard Cannon and Republican Gov. Robert List both were ousted from office in Tuesday's election.

Republican Chic Hecht, a Las Vegas businessman and former military spy, stunned Cannon, denying him a fifth term by a narrow margin. With 81 percent of the vote tallied, Hecht led Cannon 102,711 to 95,165, maintaining the 51 percent-47 percent margin he held most of the night.

Attorney General Richard Bryan defeated List. With 44 per cent of the votes tallied, Bryan had 46,242 votes, or 52 percent, to List's 40,253, or 45 percent.

Cuomo wins New York gubernatorial race

NEW YORK (AP) — Vowing to "find new programs for jobs and for justice," Democrat Mario Cuomo today began preparing to take over the governor's mansion even as he faced a challenge to his electoral victory.

In the other major statewide contest Tuesday, voters overwhelmingly approved Democrat Daniel Patrick Moynihan's bid for a second term in the U.S. Senate.

Cuomo, New York's liberal lieutenant governor, defeated conservative Republican Lewis Lehrman in the race to succeed retiring Gov. Hugh Carey.

With 97 percent of the vote in — 13,893 districts of 14,262 reporting — Cuomo had 2,589,191 votes or 51 percent to 2,413,563 votes or 48 percent for Lehrman.

However, Lehrman refused to concede and obtained a court order late Tuesday night to have all voting machines sealed in preparation for an official tally. His aides claimed some votes were not being accurately counted.

While Lehrman was demanding an official review of the ballots, Cuomo began talking about his transition team, naming his 24-year-old lawyer son, Andrew, to direct the effort. Andrew had served as one of his father's top advisers during the campaign.

Lehrman, the 44-year-old former president of the giant Rite Aid drugstore chain, spent $13.5 million on the race — about $8.5 million of that coming out of his own pocket. Most of the money went for television advertising.

"We won because people and the passion of belief are still more important than money," Cuomo told hundreds of cheering supporters following his victory.

Cuomo, a 50-year-old lawyer, spent more than $4.5 million and put together a classic Democratic coalition of liberals, union members and minorities.

He had upset New York City Mayor Edward Koch in the state's Sept. 23 Democratic primary.

Kennedy wins with 60 percent of vote

BOSTON (AP) — With a roar of "84," "84," the crowd of wall-to-wall supporters gave Sen. Edward M. Kennedy a rousing re-election party and a message that he should run for president in two years.

Kennedy had a broad smile on his face as he walked across the ballroom stage, decorated with blue and white balloons, and kissed his three children, Kara, Patrick and Edward Jr., and other members of the Kennedy clan.

But he stopped short of throwing his hat in the ring. He sidestepped questions on whether the Senate race was a test run for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination.

"I'm eager to return to the Senate and will give consideration to future decisions in the future," he said later in an interview in his suite.

"I think we took this race seriously," he said. "I was the No. 1 target of the Moral Majority and radical right. They spent a million dollars in this state. I had a well funded and financed opponent who conducted a vigorous campaign..."

Kennedy defeated Republican Raymond Shamie with more than 60 per cent of the vote, which he termed a strong showing. Political observers said that anything less could have hurt him if he decided to make a bid for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984.

The Massachusetts Democrat spent $2.5 million in the campaign. He relied heavily on television commercials portraying him as a sensitive family man who cares about others. These were designed to offset the Chappaquiddick incident in 1969 in which Mary Jo Kopechne drowned after a car driven by Kennedy plunged off a bridge.

Kennedy said that he represented an alternative to President Reagan's economic program. This and the senator's proposal for a mutual and verifiable U. S.-Soviet freeze on development and deployment of nuclear weapons were the two major issues of the campaign, he said.

Haig couldn't be Deep Throat, official says

Alexander Haig

John Dean

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Alexander Haig wasn't close enough to the White House in the early 1970s to be the "Deep Throat" tipster in the Watergate scandal, says a former administration official, William Ruckelshaus.

Ruckelshaus said Tuesday that Haig "still was working for (then-Secretary of State Henry) Kissinger as No. 2 guy in the Security Council at the time 'Deep Throat' was talking to (Post reporters) Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein.

"I don't think he was close enough to the White House to have the information," said Ruckelshaus, now a senior vice president at Weyerhauser.

Ruckelshaus was Deputy Attorney General under Elliot Richardson until both quit in protest over President Nixon's firing of special prosecutor Archibald Cox.

Former White House Counsel John Dean, in a new book, said Haig has to be the "Deep Throat" who leaked information to the Washington Post because he was among the few people who knew enough about the inner workings of the Nixon administration.

On Monday, Haig dismissed the Dean conclusion as "absurd." Bob Woodward of the Post chuckled and said he couldn't comment.

SLIPPERY ROCK, Pa. (AP) — Although Dr. Rogers won't sound quite the same, Mr. Rogers of children's television fame will be awarded an honorary degree from Slippery Rock State College on Dec. 18.

Fred Rogers of Pittsburgh, star of the PBS-TV children's series "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood," will receive the college's first honorary degree in 93 years, officials said.

Rogers will receive an honorary doctorate for his work over the past 25 years "helping children grow intellectually and emotionally" through the popular program, college President Herb F. Reinhard Jr. said this week.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Members of singer Kenny Rogers' band escaped injury, but lost some costumes, when a fire broke out on their bus.

The blaze, which apparently began in the vehicle's electrical system, caused $20,000 damage but no injuries, fire officials said. Rogers was not aboard the bus.

The fire started shortly after the customized bus arrived at a hotel here Monday night, District Fire Chief J.O. Cantrell said Tuesday. Band members were checking into the hotel when the blaze began, he said.

Besides damage to the bus, some stage costumes were destroyed, he said.

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader says Americans should seize the power that will come from the new technology of home computers and cable television systems.

"With the telecommunications shift, there will be more power in the hands of people," Nader said. "They can fight City Hall and shape political campaigns."

The new technology will bring information that could either help citizens or be used against them, the consumer activist told 1,000 people at a Town Hall lecture Monday night.

Information could be secured by the FBI or CIA under the guise of national security, he warned. If people can bank, shop and respond to political polls by cable or computer, more information can be stored on their personal and political backgrounds, he said.

"We've never been able to say 'no' to technology, to stop it cold, except for the SST (supersonic airplane)," Nader said. "We're not at the point of saying it now. We have to make the best of it."

Accountants had trouble keeping up with Pulitzers

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Although their marriage was falling apart, newspaper heir Peter Pulitzer and his wife spent money so fast that their books couldn't be kept up to date, an accountant testified in the couple's divorce trial.

Everett Nowlen said Tuesday that as the 6½-year marriage crumbled, Pulitzer and his wife, Roxanne, spent $1.5 million on Alaskan elk-hunting safaris, skiing trips to Colorado, designer Christmas presents and other living expenses.

R. Pulitzer

Mrs. Pulitzer, 31, was expected to take the stand today as the fight for custody of the couple's 5-year-old twin sons and half of Pulitzer's fortune wound toward a close.

In the lengthy divorce proceedings, which resumed Monday after a three-week break, witnesses have traded allegations and denials of drug abuse, lesbianism, menage-a-trois sex, incest and extra-marital affairs.

Nowlen said so much was spent in the twilight months of the marriage that two teams of accountants can't agree on the total or where the money went.

Nowlen also claimed that Pulitzer, 52, used "unacceptable accounting methods" to camouflage his net worth and reduce it by $10 million before filing for divorce. Pulitzer set his worth at $2.5 million; his wife claims it is $25 million.

"He's living pretty high on the hog's back," Palm Beach County Circuit Judge Carl Harper remarked drily. Harper must decide how the fortune will be split and who will get custody of the twins, MacLean and Zachary.

The judge on Tuesday assured both sides that neither would emerge penniless from the marriage.

"No one's going to come out of this unscathed, but no one's going to end up going to the poor house," Harper said.

Nowlen testified that in 1980 alone, the Pulitzers spent $57,000 on vacations, not counting business trips abroad.

In 1981, the couple quarreled with increasing frequence about Mrs. Pulitzer's admitted cocaine and alcohol use and alleged dalliances with other men and at least one woman. Even so, the couple spent $31,000 on their vacation treks, Nowlen said.

He said Mrs. Pulitzer told him that during that period, $5,300 in checks written by her husband went toward cocaine purchases.

Pulitzer moved out of the couple's home in January 1981 and filed for divorce but then reconciled with his wife. He moved out for good in September 1981 and filed for divorce again.

In all, the accountant said, Pulitzer earns about $645,000 a year from his hotels, orange groves, oil and gas holdings, and stocks and bonds. Pulitzer's attorneys have said the silver-haired grandson of newspaper magnate Joseph Pulitzer spends every penny and that his net worth does not exceed $2.6 million.

But Nowlen, of West Palm Beach, said Pulitzer's holdings were reported to have a fair market value in 1979 of $12.3 million.

Nowlen said Pulitzer reached the lower figure by only reporting the actual costs in 1981. The accountant testified Pulitzer's Miami Beach Howard Johnson hotel actually increased in value from $3.1 million to $4.5 million from 1979 to 1981.

Earlier Tuesday, Dr. Steven Kahn told the judge Mrs. Pulitzer was not hooked on cocaine when she was forced by her husband, allegedly at gunpoint, to enter Miami's Highland Park General Hospital in May 1981 for drug treatment.

'Michillaneous' lists Michigan trivia

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — What do Thomas Dewey and a woman who rode over Niagara Falls in a barrel have in common with three ladies naked except for a slathering of mustard?

They're all in a fact-filled $7.95 paperback of Michigan trivia called "Michillaneous."

The book has 450 lists, ranging from the state's 16 worst toxic waste dumps to its oldest county jails and four crimes or misdemeanors committed by naked people.

Author Gary Barfknecht, 37, isn't even a Michigan native, although he lives near Davison. He hails from Minnesota.

"Not being from Michigan, my impression was of a nice, stable Midwestern state — certainly more interesting than Iowa — but a state where very little out of the ordinary happened," Barfknecht said.

But Barfknecht, a former paint chemist for Du Pont and once a director of several amateur hockey leagues, changed his mind after researching the book.

He said he got the idea after his wife Ann, asked one winter night in 1980, "What's the coldest it's ever been in Michigan?"

Barfknecht, who did most of his research at a public library over the next two years, published the book himself after he found no Michigan publisher wanted to print a "general interest-type book."

The book is selling well enough that Barfknecht expects to have a second printing out by Christmas. The first 5,000 copies were published in July.

The author declined to say how profitable "Michillaneous" is, but added he would not be going ahead with another printing if he was not making some money.

Under "Nude Crimes and Misdemeanors" are such tales as that of the three Lansing sisters arrested for joyriding in a delivery truck, naked except for a coat of mustard and hairdos of pickle relish.

Also according to "Michillaneous":

—Annie Edson Taylor, a Bay City schoolteacher, survived an Oct. 24, 1901, ride over Niagara Falls in a self-designed wooden barrel.

—Former New York Gov. Thomas Dewey, a Republican who ran for president and lost to Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman, was born in Owosso.

—And the lowest recorded temperature in Michigan was 51 degrees below zero at Vanderbilt in the northern Lower Peninsula on Feb. 9, 1934.

Man's death brought out in trial of baby sitter

PERRY, Fla. (AP) — A sheriff's officer says a baby sitter charged with killing three children under her care began working as a housekeeper for a 77-year-old man on the same day he died, then tried to hush up her presence.

Defense attorneys for Christine Falling, 19, had expected only routine pretrial comments Tuesday about one of the three child deaths from Sgt. Hugh Poppell of the Taylor County Sheriff's Department.

But Poppell, revealing an investigation into the Jan. 4 death of Wilbur G. Swindle, 77, said Miss Falling had asked Swindle's relatives not to say that she began working for him that day.

Poppell, listed as a potential state witness for Miss Falling's trial in the death of 8-month-old Jennifer Daniels of Perry, showed photographs of Swindle's body showing marks on the neck.

"He was laying face down (in his house)," Poppell said in his taped deposition. "His pockets were turned wrong side outwards. It was the only unusual thing about Mr. Swindle at the house that night."

Swindle, a cancer patient who also had a heart condition, was found dead about 15 or 20 minutes after Miss Falling returned to his house from a late-night trip to a local grocery store, Poppell said.

Human brain may contain two distinct learning systems

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

IRVINE, Calif. — We may have two separate learning systems, one for acquiring knowledge and the other for acquiring habits, a psychologist says.

If true, it could mean that both traditional psychologists and behaviorists were right in their long and bitter dispute over whether mind was necessary to explain behavior.

The conference, held in conjunction with the dedication of a center for the Neurobiology of Learning and Memory on the University of California Irvine campus, brought together leading investigators from as far away as Japan, Brazil and the Netherlands to assess the latest neurobiological research on learning and memory.

In addition to the possibility of our having two learnings systems, other theories:

—May have located the place in the brain where the memory for certain learned responses is stored.

—Suggested that an enzyme, which ironically might also be a culprit in some degenerative diseases, may play an important role in storing long-term memory. This process may provide a clue to why the elderly have more difficulty remembering.

Mortimer Mishkin of the National Institute of Mental Health neuropsychology laboratory and Larry R. Squire of the University of California, San Diego Medical School's psychiatry department described research that has led to the theory that we may have two learning systems.

It is based on observation of human amnesia victims, including a man identified only as H.M., and experiments on laboratory animals.

After H.M. underwent brain surgery in 1953 to relieve epilepsy, he retained his memories from before the operation but was unable to acquire new ones. However, similar profound amnesiacs were able to learn new skills and improve them with practice, even though they could not remember being taught them.

Mishkin theorized that the system for memory formation, which was damaged in H.M.'s case, is located in a different part of the brain from the system for habit formation.

This idea of two different forms of learning was challenged by some other conference participants, but it is gaining increasing acceptance in scientific circles.

Should this dual system theory prove true, Mishkin said, it would mean that both traditional psychologists and behaviorists were right in their long and bitter dispute over whether mind was necessary to explain behavior. The behaviorists held that mind, which coud not be seen or measured, had no place in the science of psychology and that learning occurred when a stimulus evoked a response that, if reinforced by subsequent events, was strengthened.

"Maybe the trouble was in choosing one or the other instead of both," Mishkin said, adding that evidence from amnesiacs indicates both are present in normal persons. Richard F. Thompson of Stanford University reported that he and his associates believe they have found that the memory mechanism for a simple learned reflex in rabbits is located in a small area deep in the cerebellum.

This particular conditioned reflex response can also be taught to man, and Thompson said in an inteview that he believed the memory trace for some movement sequences that improve with practice, such as playing tennis or the piano, would be stored in the same area of the human brain.

"My guess is we'll find a whole range of human skills in storage in the cerebellum," he said.

Locating this memory trace means that for the first time scientists will be able to analyze its physical and chemical basis in their attempt to solve the enigma of memory.

That, in turn, could eventually lead to improved treatment of learning disabilities and to the development of more efficient and complex computers based on physical models of the human brain's processing of memory, Thompson said.

Research on natural substances that improve memory, including hormones produced by the adrenal glands, and vasopressin, a peptide secreted by the pituitary, was also discussed.

But UC Irvine's James L. McGaugh, an organizer of the conference, cautioned in an interview, "I don't think the day is here yet in which chemicals can reliably and effectively be used to treat disorders of the memory.

Girls volleyball team headed for playoffs

By TERRI GOLASINSKI, MARILYN FERGUSON and TAMMY GARNDER

MHS girls volleyball team defeated Lee High School last Thursday and they were in the playoff game for the district championship last Monday night. They defeated the Bobcats, so will now go on to the bi-district playoffs, meeting Amarillo Thursday at 7 p.m.

The MHS swim teams beat Abilene High and Abilene Cooper last Thursday, downing the Cooper Cougars, 72-51, and Abilene High, 95-11. The girls defeated Cooper, 85-25, and Abilene High, 82-27. Congratulations to these first place winners: boys, Mike Seay, Pat Rhamey, Andrew Jordan, Brian A. Meel (diving), David Hartman, Drew Richards, Steve Davis, John Brenner; and girls, Suzi Simpson, Debbie Fleeger, Tina Stephens, Michele Craig, Rachael Fink, Brandi Schafer, Robin Blake (diving) and Rena Crutchfield.

The MHS Bulldogs defeated Abilene High last Friday, 21-0. Friday the Pack plays Lee at Midland Memorial Stadium in what will be a great game for all Midland fans.

District 4-5A boys and girls cross-country teams were both runners-up in the district cross-country meet last Saturday. They will advance to the regional meet Saturday in Lubbock. MHS junior Claire Hardy is district champion in the girls division and received the All-District honor in her division. In the boys division, Chuck St. Germain and Albert Lozano received All-District honors for their silver- and bronze-medal performances, respectively. Congratulations to all cross-country runners and good luck at regionals Saturday!

The MHS girls golf team won third place in the Plainview Invitational Golf Tournament. Kelle Mobley tied for third-place medalist honors.

Congratulations to Lennis Landry, who became a Rated Men's Gymnastics Judge Friday.

Junior class rings will be delivered Nov. 23 and 24.

College Forum is at Lee High School Nov. 4 at 7 p.m. Students interested in the four-year scholarship program at Stephen's College, Columbia, Mo., should refer to the Senior Bulletin Board or see Mr. Dennis for details.

Yearbooks go on sale for $16 and $3 for name stamping, one day only during third period Nov. 4.

He should've left home without it

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court agreed that a Houston man who never left home without his American Express card and ran up a $50,000 debt should serve an 18-year jail sentence for mail fraud.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Monday rejected Troy Gary Saxton's argument that the evidence against him was insufficient.

In upholding Saxton's sentence, the appeals court noted that he used his credit cards to fly from Houston to Dallas for dinner, and then return to Houston.

"We conclude that a reasonable person could...draw reasonable inferences that Saxton devised a fraudulent scheme," the court concluded.

The court said Saxton was hired as an executive for a Houston long-distance telephone and answering service in November 1977 and applied for an American Express card in the name of David T. Getty.

His application listed his employer as "Commonwealth Corporation" for the previous ten years, cited an incorrect Social Security number and sought cards for his secretary and her daughter, Fay Shy, as family members.

Between June and September of 1978, "Getty" applied for and received credit cards from Texaco, Exxon, Diners Club and Carte Blanche.

In each instance, he gave his secretary's telephone number for credit verifications and provided her with a copy of each application for corroboration, the court said.

"Claims made on the applications, such as length of residence, salary and the 'adoption' of Fay Shy were simply untrue. And the method of assuring the concealment of the misrepresentations was laid at the keel," said the 5th Circuit.

His Houston-Dallas supper flight was "whimsical," the court said.

"Saxton was accompanying a departing passenger in the Houston airport," the court said. "When told that only ticketed passengers could gain access to the airport concourse, he purchased two round-trip tickets to Dallas. He had supper there and returned to Houston."

Congressmen survive NCPAC attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Conservative Political Action Committee, which gained notoriety in 1980 for shooting down Senate liberals, missed nearly all its targeted incumbents for 1982 despite a multi-million dollar campaign of negative advertising.

Another well-financed conservative group organized by Republican Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina fared as poorly despite its equally impressive campaign chest, as 15 of 18 endorsed House and Senate candidates went down to defeat and two others were trailing in tight races.

NCPAC, known as "Nickpack," spent an estimated $4 million to repeat the controversial campaign technique it pioneered so successfully in 1980, tough political attacks on 34 Senate and House members targeted for defeat.

But the ploy seemed to backfire this time, and even some of the challengers who stood to benefit from NCPAC's independent campaign said their cause wal hurt.

Fifteen of the 17 senators on NCPAC's hit list were re-elected Tuesday night and one other clung to a narrow lead. Only one target lost, Democrat Howard Cannon of Nevada.

THE STORY was the same in the House, where 16 of 17 targets won re-election and the 17th was leading.

Surviving the NCPAC attacks, easily in most cases, were 13 Democrats: Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Paul Sarbanes of Maryland, Robert Byrd of West Virginia, Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York and George Mitchell of Maine, Jim Sasser of Tennessee, Donald Riegle of Michigan, Dennis DeConcini of Arizona, Quentin Burdick of North Dakota, John Melcher of Montana and Spark Matsunaga of Hawaii.

Republican targets Lowell Weicker of Connecticut and Robert Stafford of Vermont also were victorious in their re-election bids, while fellow Republican John Chafee of Rhode Island held a narrow lead.

Among the House Democratic leaders to best NCPAC attacks were Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas, Majority Whip Thomas Foley of Washington, Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie Whitten of Mississippi, Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois and Budget Committee Chairman James Jones of Oklahoma. NCPAC had spent more than $200,000 against Wright and more than $100,000 against Jones.

NCPAC, one of the most effective political fund-raising organizations in the country, spent more than $650,000 to defeat Sarbanes and more than $500,000 to oust Kennedy, but each won handily.

In fact, NCPAC's campaign against Sarbanes became a major issue in that race. Sarbanes repeatedly assailed the questionable tactics of an outside political force, while GOP opponent Lawrence Hogan disowned the conservative group, which had endorsed him.

"WE WERE victims of an unprecedented assault by extremist forces which came into this state trying to manipulate the voters," Sarbanes said in his victory speech Tuesday night.

In 1980, NCPAC spent more than $1 million in its then novel negative campaigns against six Senate liberal Demcrats and later claimed credit for the defeat of four of them: Birch Bayh of Indiana, John Culver of Iowa, George McGovern of South Dakota and Frank Church of Idaho. Targets Thomas Eagleton of Missouri and Alan Cranston of California were re-elected.

Flush from its victory and extensive media attention, NCPAC announced an expanded list of Senate and House targets for 1982.

NCPAC also ran a more traditional positive campaign on behalf of 62 House and Senate candidates. It fared better in this campaign, seeing the election of two of the five Senate candidates it endorsed and 28 of 57 House candidates it backed.

Helms' conservative group, the National Congressional Club, saw all four of its Senate candidates go down in defeat. Only one of its 14 endorsed House candidates was victorious, although two others were trailing by very slim margins.

Despite their poor performance in defeating or electing members of Congress, NCPAC and the Congressional Club proved to be the top fund-raisers in the country.

THROUGH JUNE 30, according to the Federal Election Commission, the Helms group raised $7.7 million for the 1982 campaign and NCPAC raised $7.3 million. Each group was expected to raise $10 million by the end of the campaign.

Other special interest groups had mixed success in their campaigns to elect friends or defeat enemies. Their level of success generally rose with the number of incumbents they endorsed, a trend resulting from the fact that only two senators and 20 House members lost re-election bids.

Here is a brief rundown on how some other inoerest groups fared;

8 organized Labor: The AFL-CIO's political arm, the Committee on Political Education (COPE), saw 19 of 29 endorsed Senate candidates and 235 of 368 House candidates elected or ahead in their races. Virtually all of the candidates were Democrats. Including unions that are not affiliated with the AFL-CIO, organized labor spent a record $17 million on this year's Senate, House and gubernatorial races.

— Big Business: The U.S. Chamber of Commerce saw five of eight endorsed Senate candidates but only 37 of 90 House candidates winning or leading their races. The Business-Industry Political Action Committee saw only six of 15 Senate candidates and 44 of 106 House candidates winning or leading their races. Government records show that business-oriented groups spent more than $45 million on the election, almost all of it on Republicans.

— Women's Rights: The National Organization of Women, which hoped to raise $2 million to $3 million on state, local and national elections, saw six of 14 endorsed Senate candidates and 60 of 94 House candidates winning or leading their races. The National Women's Political Caucus saw 13 of 22 endorsed House candidates on the losing side along with both of its women Senate candidates — Democrat Harriett Woods of Missouri and Republican Millicent Fenwick of New Jersey.

— Abortion Rights: The National Abortion Rights Action League, which planned to spend $400,000 to help elect members of Congress who support legalized abortions, saw three of six endorsed Senate candidates and 49 of 70 endorsed House candidates winning or leading their races.

— Nuclear freeze: A coalition of groups supporting a Soviet-American agreement to halt additions to each nation's nuclear stockpile planned to raise more than $2 million to elect friends and defeat enemies of their cause. Of 30 House enemies targeted for defeat, 12 either lost or were trailing in their races.

Brown's loss in California hurts presidential hopes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Republican Pete Wilson defeated Democrat Edmund Brown Jr. for the U.S. Senate Tuesday, delivering a severe blow to the two-term governor's presidential hopes. In the battle for governor, Republican George Deukmejian held a razor-thin lead over Democrat Tom Bradley.

With 4 million ballots yet to be counted early Wednesday, Deukmejian led Bradley by barely 16,000 votes. Deukmejian's lead narrowed steadily through the night, but a large number of uncounted ballots in conservative Orange and San Diego counties bolstered the Republican attorney general's chances of surviving Bradley's challenge.

In the Senate race, Wilson claimed victory, but Brown did not concede, although Wilson's lead held steadily at 5 to 6 percentage points.

With 57 percent of the vote counted, Wilson led Brown by 50.9 percent to 45.4 percent, and Deukmejian led Bradley by 48.7 percent to 48.4 percent, with three minor party candidates dividing the rest.

Wilson had 2,272,899 votes to Brown's 2,028,302.

Deukmejian led Bradley 2,123,253 to 2,107,964.

Voters following the returns on television Tuesday night were confronted with a frenzy of confusing and contradictory declarations of winners by the three national television networks and their California affiliates.

"The decision has been made by all the people of the state, and it's going give me the great privilege of being their represenative," Wilson told supporters in San Diego. "It's time to heal. I'm now going to be their U.S. senator."

Tom Hayden, the former radical student leader of the 1960s, was in a hotly contested race with Republican insurance man Bill Hawkins for a seat in the state Assembly. With 18 percent of the voted counted, Hayden had 50 percent of the vote to Hawkins' 46 percent. The tally was Hayden 12,808 to Hawkins' 11,822.

Pre-election polls rated Bradley, a three-term mayor, the narrow favorite over Deukmejian to be the nation's first elected black governor.

But Deukmejian, an attorney best known as the author of California's death penalty statute, made a strong late surge in the polls, trimming a 22-point Bradley lead in September to margins of 5 to 6 points in three late October polls.

Although Bradley and Deukmejian both have reputations as moderates with similar goals to cut state regulations and work closely with business, their campaign was noisy with repeated charges of distortions and lies.

Brown, whose mercurial eight years as governor included two campaigns for the Democratic nomination for president, a widely publicized romance with rock star Linda Ronstadt and politically bruising struggles with Proposition 13 and the Mediterranean fruit fly, had his political career on the line Tuesday.

While Brown tried to make the Senate race a referendum on President Reagan's economic policies, Wilson, the lesser-known Republican nominee, campaigned against Brown's record as governor.

Wilson topped Brown by up to 22 percentage points in polls last June. That lead evaporated over the summer, and Brown pulled ahead in an early October poll. But the final round of pre-election polls gave Wilson a narrow lead among California's 11.5 million registered voters.

Hayden, now 42 and graying, projected a more moderate image than that of the cofounder of the radical Students for a Democratic Society 20 year ago.

In an Associated Press-NBC exit survey taken of 2,972 California voters, 48 percent said Reagan's economic policies have been unfair to the middle class, with 40 percent describing them as fair and 12 percent saying that they were not sure.

In terms of their own personal finances, 61 percent said they preferred the government to fight inflation, with 34 percent preferring making the battle against unemployment top priority. The remaining 5 percent said they were unsure.

Fifty-six percent of those polled said they approved of affirmative action programs designed to provide more jobs for women and minorities, while 26 percent said they disapproved and 18 percent said they weren't sure.

Democratic candidates make clean sweep in Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma voters gave a strong nod to Democrats for statewide offices in results that saw state Treasurer Leo Winters win his fifth consecutive term in the position.

And it was a repeat victory Tuesday for Lt. Gov. Spencer Bernard, who said he owed his win mainly to "such a great leader, such a great guy," Gov. George Nigh who headed the charge that swept his party members into every statewide office possible.

"I look forward to another four years of working with him for the betterment of Oklahoma," Bernard said of Nigh, who became the state's first governor ever to win re-election.

Bernard had been expected to have a close race against state Sen. Norman Lamb of Enid. But it didn't turn out quite that way.

With 2,212 precincts of 2,043 reporting, Bernard was ahead 488,241 to 306,084.

It was even easier for School Superintendent Leslie Fisher, who was re-elected to his fourth term, and Muskogee County District Attorney Mike Turpen, who had upset incumbent Jan Eric Cartwright in the Democratic Primary and who won the attorney general's job.

The two Republicans who filed against them decided, for different reasons, not to even campaign.

Fisher had 470,699 votes to 256,736 for Charles W. Sandmann with 2,262 of 2,403 precincts reporting, while Turpen led Earl R. Donaldson of Oklahoma City 557,727 to 215,898 with 2,312 of 2,403 precincts in.

Donaldson said he would not campaign actively, accusing the state Republican Party of reneging on a promise of financial support, an allegation denied by Nancy Apgar, state GOP chairwoman.

Sandmann didn't campaign for a different reason. A former employee of the state Department of Education, he said he feared his friends still in the department would be subjected to pressure from Fisher and his associates if he mounted an active campaign.

Soviet military fights morale problems

By DAVID MINTHORN

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet military authorities are fighting a stiff battle against troop morale problems that could hamper the effectiveness of its armed forces.

Instances of fighting between soldiers of different ethnic backgrounds, alcohol abuse, poor physical conditioning among 18-year-old draftees and even cases of pacifism are some of the disciplinary problems discussed recently in the state-run media.

Some Western analysts have pointed to the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan as a possible cause for some of the tensions in the ranks of the 5.8 million-member military machine.

The Soviet media make only vague references to "a limited military contingent" battling Moslem "bandits" in Afghanistan and have never given casualty figures. But Western analysts estimate that 10,000 to 15,000 Soviet troops have been killed or wounded in nearly three years of warfare and that 300,000 Soviet troops have done six-month stints of duty there.

WESTERN EXPERTS SAY Soviet troops are a very formidable force in Europe — highly patriotic, accustomed to a rugged existence and armed with excellent weapons.

However, active duty in a "no frills" army is harsh even by the Spartan standards of Soviet society. For most draftees — two years in the army and three in the navy — food is poor and scarce and physical and mental abuse are commonplace.

Privates earn only 4 rubles (about $6) a month and get only 10 days leave annually. There's no changing into civilian clothes after duty hours for a night on the town. Troops are marched around in uniform during "free" time under the watchful eyes of officers and non-commissioned officers.

Harassment of troops is evidently a matter of some concern. Col. P. Goroshko, the assistant chief military prosecutor, warned this year against the practice in a military journal.

Some commanders assign subordinates "to jobs unrelated to military service or illegally release them from meeting certain obligations, assign officers and enlisted men to barracks duty under various pretexts and institute evening roll calls for them, deny leave to servicemen during holidays and restrict their right to social visits," said Goroshko in the June issue of "Communist of the Military."

As in other sectors of Soviet society, heavy alcohol consumption prompted by boredom is said to be widespread in military life. Racial discrimination appears to be the norm in service life, according to former Soviet servicemen who have described their experiences after emigrating or defecting to the West.

"INSTANCES OF DRUNKENNESS, attitudes toward fellow servicemen not condoned by regulations and negligence in performance of duties," were singled out by Gen. A.A. Yepishev, the military's chief political officer in a major speech last May.

Russians and Ukrainians in uniform are known to feel racially superior to Uzbeks and other ethnic groups of Soviet Central Asia, referring to them as "churka" — literally a wood chip or "dimwit" — and other contemptuous terms.

Ethnic disputes sometime break out into open fighting. Red Star, the armed forces daily, disclosed last month that a fistfight disrupted a soccer match between two Soviet military teams at a tournament in Lvov.

Reports of disturbances among servicemen are practically unheard of in the Soviet media, and the fact that the article was published at all suggested that ethnic problems among soldiers are widespread.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev alluded to the need for improving troop morale and combat training in a major address Oct. 27 to top officers at the Kremlin.

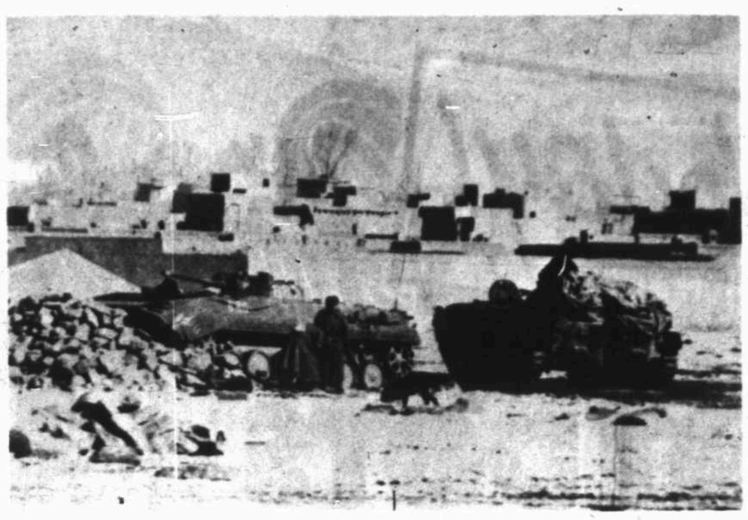
"The Soviet army should be up to the mark in all respects — equipment, structure and methods of training," Brezhnev said, adding that the need for "high morale" is greater today than ever before.

ONE REASON SOVIET authorities are concerned about discipline is the changing ethnic mix of the country whereby Russians and other Slavs will become outnumbered. This will be reflected in time in the armed forces, especially in the combat units.

Red Star frequently publishes pictures showing troops of different ethnic groups — there are 100 different nationalities among the 270 million population — smiling in harmony.

However, authorities acknowledge that many Red Army recruits can't speak Russian or lack fluency in the only language used by Soviet armed forces.

The "sacred duty" of military service is drummed into Soviets from childhood in school history lessons, Communist Party propaganda and the state media.



AP Laserphoto

Soviet military authorities are fighting against troop morale problems exhibited by contention between troops from different ethnic backgrounds and soldiers abusing alcohol. Some western analysts attribute the morale problems to the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, where troops, like those pictured in this 1980 file photo, endure long tours of duty in relative isolation and are faced with difficult conditions in a hostile environment.

All young men and women are supposed to get 140 hours of basic military instruction from the 10th grade on and are also encouraged to join military-sponsored sports clubs to learn flying, radio operation, parachuting and other paramilitary skills.

However, Soviet officers have recently lamented the physical condition of many recruits, saying that many are inducted without being able to swim, shoot a rifle or meet basic physical fitness requirements.

Soviet press reports indicate that soldiers are bombarded with atheism lectures by political officers from the moment they join the military. But Marshal Nikolai Ogarkov, the chief of staff, and other high-ranking commanders acknowledged this year that pacifism and "religious humanism" still persisted among some troops and had to be stamped out.

General claims arms control negotiations near deadlock

MOSCOW — A ranking Soviet military leader said Tuesday night that Soviet-American arms control negotiations in Geneva are approaching a "deadlock" because of calculated U.S. attempts to block any progress in the talks.

Col. Gen. Nikolai Chervov, who is head of the general staff department on strategic weapons and a member of the inner leadership of the armed forces, accused the Reagan administration of deliberately seeking to create an impression that some progress was being made at the two sets of negotiations in Geneva.

"Actually, nothing of the sort has happened," the general said in an interview distributed by the official news agency Novosti.

Chervov's comment was the most direct official statement on the progress of the superpower talks on curbing medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe and reducing strategic armaments. It seemed to be in line with a harsher tone adopted by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev recently. In two of his latest speeches dealing with foreign policy, Brezhnev had made no mention of the Geneva negotiations.

But Chervov appeared to go beyond all previous official pronouncements by asserting that the Reagan administration has put forward proposals "that they knew in advance cannot be accepted by the Soviet side" and that the Americans "remain wedded" to the positions in Geneva.

Dog owners should 'winterize' pets

More than the house and car need pre-winter attention, and people with pets should also remember to winterize the dog.

To start, it is a grand time to eliminate fleas. Once a frost has killed those outdoors, bathe the dog and have him dipped. Be sure to comb out mats where fleas can hide their eggs.

And if fleas have set up housekeeping in your carpets a commercial fogger or professional exterminator may be called for.

If your dog lives outdoors, remember to start adding more fat to his diet to help cope with the cold.

Club opposes choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Sierra Club says it opposes the expected nomination of Donald Hodel, a protege of Interior Secretary James Watt, for the post of energy secretary.

In a letter to President Reagan, Sierra Club president Denny Shaffer said Monday that Hodel would be a poor choice because of his record from 1972 to 1977 as head of the Bonneville Power Administration in Portland, Ore.

Since 1981, Hodel has been Interior Secretary James Watt's No. 1 deputy at the interior department.

The environmental group said Hodel has demonstrated a lack of foresight and judgment and hostility to energy conservation.

Administration sources say Hodel is the front-runner to become energy secretary when James Edwards leaves the Cabinet later this month to become president of the Medical University of South Carolina.

Acid rain reports 'incorrect'

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration says reports that Midwestern power plants are principal contributors to acid rain in the East are incorrect and irresponsible.

The administration attacked a report in Science Trends, a trade newsletter, on a draft study by 50 outside scientists that suggest that pollution from coal-burning utilities, primarily in the Midwest, is killing fish, destroying lakes, and damaging structures in the United States and Canada.

Interest rate falls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The interest rate on a government-backed loan program for college students has fallen from 14 percent to 12 percent, because interest rates on Treasury Bills have remained below 14 percent for a full year.

Education Department officials said Monday they hope the action will spur interest in the fledgling loan program, known as Auxiliary Loans to Assist Students (ALAS).

Students are charged 9 percent interest on regular Guaranteed Student Loans they can obtain themselves from banks. Students from families with incomes above $30,000 must demonstrate need to get those loans.

There is no family income ceiling on the 12 percent ALAS loans, but unlike the Guaranteed Students Loans, parents must begin repaying them in 90 days.

Limitations extended

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has extended for one year limitations on financial dealings with Iran that resulted from the hostage crisis.

The limitations, termed a government emergency, were set to expire Nov. 14.

In a periodic report to Congress, Reagan said Monday that the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal set up at The Hague as part of the settlement of the crisis had awarded more than $7.6 million in favor of U.S. claimants.

But, said Reagan, several thousand claims remain to be decided.

Ed Rollins 'doing great'

WASHINGTON (AP) — After spending 15 minutes visiting Ed Rollins, White House assistant for political affairs, President Reagan declared his aide is "doing just great" after a mild stroke.

Manson escape feared

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Charles Manson, mastermind of the 1969 murders of actress Sharon Tate and six other people, has been transferred to a maximum-security cell for fear he may try to escape from prison, officials say.

Manson was put in "administrative segregation" Monday because guards found a hacksaw blade and other evidence indicating a possible escape attempt, said Don Custard, spokesman for the California Medical Facility.

He said Manson, 47, and three other inmates were seen Friday in the prison chapel. Evidence was found in the chapel office and Manson's cell, including a catalogue for hot-air balloons, Custard said.

Man will testify

HOUSTON (AP) — A suspect in a $15 million bomb-extortion plot against a Gulf Oil Chemicals Co. refinery has pleaded guilty to federal charges and will testify against four co-defendants.

Timothy K. Justice, 30, of Durango, Colo., pleaded guilty Monday to interstate transportation of illegal explosives and using a long-distance telephone call to promote a felony. Prosecutors said 10 other counts would be dropped in a plea bargain which could still leave Justice facing a 15-year prison term.

Second firm reorganizes

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A second asbestos company has filed for reorganization to protect itself from creditors because it faces more than 10,000 lawsuits from workers claiming asbestos poisoning.

Amatex Corp. filed under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy code in U.S. Bankruptcy Court on Monday. In August, the Manville Corp. sought protection from what it said was a potential 52,000 asbestos-related lawsuits that could cost the company up to $2 billion.

Bridge now 25 years old

ST. IGNACE, Mich. (AP) — Former Gov. G. Mennen "Soapy" Williams was waiting as the Rev. Charles Danforth and his wife, Gloria, drove up in the 45,354,017th vehicle to cross the Mackinac Bridge.

At exactly 2 p.m. Monday, the bridge connecting Michigan's Upper and Lower peninsulas was 25 years old, and Danforth, a Seventh-day Adventist minister, said he and his wife, who had crossed the span about 100 times before, tried to time their arrival to the minute.

Williams, now a state Supreme Court Justice, was governor when the steel-and-concrete "Mighty Mac" opened in 1957. He called the bridge "a symbol of the unity of the people of Michigan."

Another border crossing slated

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The U.S. General Services Administration expects construction to start this spring on a new U.S.-Mexico border crossing five miles east of the present port of entry at San Ysidro.

Mary Filippini, assistant to the GSA's regional administrator, said Monday the new $13 million Otay Mesa facility will serve 24,000 cars and 2,500 trucks daily.

Motorists now using the border crossing, among the busiest in the world, currently face delays of at least an hour on weekends and holidays.

A confidence crisis

Halloween has come and gone in the Permian Basin amid fears that the worst would be realized as children, dressed up like ghosts and goblins, became the unwitting prey of sinister human demons.

The worst didn't come to pass, fortunately. Pins, needles and screws were found in candy passed out to trick or treaters in Odessa, but no lives were endangered and in Midland Halloween passed without incident.

Halloween is only one night, though, and many Americans surely are asking themselves when they can feel safe about consuming medications and other products recently discovered to be tainted with a variety of poisons. When will consumer confidence return?

Ironically, history attests that incidents like the recent rash of poisonings that began with the Extra-Strength Tylenol tragedy in Chicago don't shake consumer confidence too long.

No one blames McNeil Consumer Products Corp., maker of Extra-Strength Tylenol, for the recent cyanide deaths. In fact, the company has been widely praised for its efficient and dignified handling of the episode.

Restoring consumer confidence is a task that will face the various makers of all the involved products.

In 1959 there was another case that shook consumer confidence throughout the nation. It began with the disclosure that some cranberries grown in Oregon and Washington in 1958 and 1959 had been contaminated with aminotriazole, a weed-killer capable of causing thyroid cancer in rats. Bans on the sale of cranberry products were imposed in Ohio, Chicago and San Franciso, and many food stores in other areas voluntarily stopped selling them.

Now, a quarter-century later, consumers are not worried about tainted cranberries as the holiday season approaches, the cranberry industry's biggest time of year.

As we go about our daily lives, each of us should keep in mind that no matter what steps we take to ensure our personal safety, perhaps the safest course of all is adhering to that tenet of the marketplace, caveat emptor: let the buyer beware!

Shultz making sense

Secretary of State George Shultz practiced sound foreign policy by making Canada the scene of his first international talks since taking office in June and announcing he would go to Mexico soon.

Our neighbors to the north and south have not received the respect and recognition they deserve from every administration. President Kennedy offended Canadians with some careless offhand comments. President Carter's mission to Mexico could hardly be called a diplomatic success. Perhaps the Reagan administration, with its secretary of state as point man, can turn over a new leaf.

Shultz has just returned from two days in Ottawa where with typical candor he said he was a "great believer" in putting all issues on the table. It did not take him long to get down to brass tacks as he told Canadian officials:

"We're not trying to tell you how to run your country and don't you try to tell us how to run ours."

A number of issues were discussed that have strained relations between the two nations. An atmospheric pollution called "acid rain," which Canadians complain comes to them from the United States, was one of them. It was agreed that more information should be exchanged.

Other Canadian complaints include American domination of the Canadian economy and American restrictions on the sale of Canadian uranium. Fishing rights of the Georges Bank of New England have long been a sore point between Washington and Ottawa, but this dispute has been referred to the International Court of Justice at the Hague.

These and other topics surely were reviewed in an exchange of views between Shultz and two Canadian officials, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and the External Affairs Minister, Allan J. MacEachen. None of these international issues could be resolved with finality in 24 hours, but that was not the point of the talks. Shultz's goal was to establish good will and friendly lines of communications as a basis for solving problems in the future. That also will be his goal when he visits Mexico.

Another View:

Wearing U.S. uniform

The all-volunteer armed forces are operating smoothly as all of the branches have surpassed manpower requirements both in quantity and quality.

That is one of the findings of the Military Manpower Task Force which has been reported to President Reagan by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and other Pentagon officials.

Mr. Reagan also was advised to continue the registration of young men when they reach age 18 even though there is no apparent need for a draft for some years to come.

Some small but vocal segments of the population oppose the current procedure. Following in their misguided direction would be a reckless gamble that could expose this nation to grave danger. Continuing registration provides a note of security. The process would save more than a month and a half in mobilization time in the event of a military emergency. Actually, the current procedure of signing up is no great chore; the registration can be completed in a matter of minutes.

An important finding by the task force states that an adequate, capable all-volunteer force can be attained through 1987 "if necessary funding is provided" to keep military pay competitive with the civilian work force.

As of June 30, a total of 2,107,400 men and women were in the armed forces, comfortably above the 2,099,000 objective set by the Pentagon. The report also was highly encouraging in regard to the caliber of personnel joining the military — 91 percent of the enlisted force is composed of high school graduates, including recruits with some college. Only 77 percent of the civilian work force has comparable educational credentials. These statistics knock a large hole in arguments by critics who contend that the all-volunteer forces are composed of enlistees who often lack the necessary intelligence, education and self-discipline.

Certainly, the recession is one of the factors behind the large numbers of enlistees joining the services but there also are other far more positive developments, including improved military pay and educational benefits.

The biggest attraction for enlistment nowadays is that "it's an honor to wear the uniform again," according to Weinberger. That's a long overdue but highly welcome and dramatic turnabout a decade after Vietnam, when both the flag and the uniform became unjustified targets of scorn. The renewed respect for the colors and the military reveals that proper priorities again reign over the land.

— The St. Louis Globe-Democrat

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Prober took credit where none was due

WASHINGTON — The frontline troops in President Reagan's war on waste and fraud in the federal government are the investigators who work for the various inspectors general.

Jack Anderson

They are dedicated, savvy professionals who can follow a paper trail through the bureaucratic jungle and nab corrupt or extravagant officials in their swivel chairs. But sometimes these investigative infantrymen are painfully embarrassed by self-serving superiors sitting comfortably on their rear echelons.

Take the case of Richard Campbell, recently retired, who worked for the inspector general at the Environmental Protection Agency. In a progress report to Congress for the period April-September 1981, Campbell claimed credit for the indictment and conviction of two EPA employees and one ex-employee for cashing in $700 worth of phony travel vouchers.

"We devised a plan to arrest the former employee upon presentation of the false voucher and payment," the I.G. report boasted, adding perfunctorily that "assistance was obtained" from the Federal Protective Service, a police arm of the General Services Administration.

My associate Tony Capaccio tracked down the case file on the phony travel-voucher scheme and then read the EPA's proud claim to Leonard Hernandez, the criminal investigator who handled the case for the Protective Service.

According to Hernandez, the arrest of the ex-employee on May 1, 1981, was accomplished without any help from the inspector general's office. Of the inspector general's people, Hernandez said, "They did no planning of the arrest. They didn't know how to do anything." He said the inspector general's office did little beyond providing information on the former employee.

How, then, did the inspector general's claim of credit wind up in the report to Congress? A curiously frank message slip dated July 31, 1981, gives the answer. It was from James Conn, an official in the inspector general's office, to Ellis Cannady, the EPA investigator in the case.

"Dick (Campbell) wants to meet with us," Conn wrote his colleague. "At the meeting, he wants us to advise how he can get credit for three arrests, three indictments and three convictions based upon your work on the GSA cases. No use arguing. His mind is made up. Your 'arrest' etc. will be published in the annual report no matter what."

In obvious disgust, Conn concluded: "Hell. Don't ask me. I work for him too."

And so it was that the EPA's I.G. office took credit for someone else's "collar" so that a bureaucrat could look good to Congress.

When Conn's note was read back to him, he said, "Obviously, I have no comment." Campbell said that since his office gave an "assist" on the arrest, it was proper to take credit. An EPA source viewed it differently, saying, "It was a case of one-man egomania. That's clearly what it was."

Footnote: This is not the first time that the EPA's inspector general has stirred up controversy. The current inspector general, Matt Novick, has been accused of whitewashing several investigations, and Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., has formally called for his resignation. Novick, incidentally, was not at EPA when the arrest records were fudged.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?: A lobbyist by any other name smells sweeter. That's evidently the feeling of some of Washington's best-known special-interest pleaders when they make the required listing of their occupations on campaign-contribution forms.

My reporters Dorothy Wegard and Jock Hatfield checked hundreds of contribution forms submitted by dozens of lobbyists who made donations to members of the House Ways and Means Committee, and found only one who identified himself as "lobbyist." Some of the more imaginative euphemisms:

— Thomas Boggs Jr., whose law firm lobbies for more than 140 different interests, including most of the major oil companies and automakers, called himself a "self-employed convention planner."

— Ex-Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., the former Ways and Means Committee chairman who is a registered foreign agent with the law firm of Shea and Gould, listed "self-employed lawyer" as his occupation.

— Carl Arnold, a registered lobbyist who represents the American Petroleum Institute and the American Iron and Steel Institute, among other clients, used "self-employed consultant" as his job description.

The Federal Election Commission says the lobbyists' little name game is perfectly legal, since they are indeed what they say they are — in addition to being lobbyists.

BEST BUREAUCRATS: Giving a friendly image to the federal tax collector may be an impossible dream, but Harold M. (Man of La Mancha) Browning is trying to do just that. Two years ago, he became the Internal Revenue Service's first "problem resolution officer."

Since then, he and his Sancho Panzas have come to the aid of half-a-million unhappy American taxpayers. They even apologize when the IRS is wrong.

Some sample comments from the public indicate that Browning's office is succeeding.

"It is gratifying that someone in the IRS has the courtesy to respond to my complaints in a meaningful and positive way."

"I thought you would like to know that through your substantial efforts my problem has been satisfactorily resolved."

"We appreciate your gracious apology and hope that your network of ... centers will work successfully to help the taxpayer. We wish you good luck in your quest ..." When was the last time you heard of anyone wishing the federal bagmen good luck in their quest?

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Cuba may be stronger than U.S. believes

WASHINGTON — Cuban armed forces may be even stronger than the United States says, the prestigious, London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies indicates.

William Giandoni

The most recent report issued by the IISS, entitled "The Military Balance 1982-1983," estimates that Cuba's "total armed forces" number 127,500, but then says that the "ready reserves" total another 190,000. That adds up to 317,500.

The latest published U.S. estimate of Cuba's military prowess affirms that "Cuba's armed forces total more than 225,000 personnel — 200,000 army, 15,000 air force and air defense, and 10,000 navy — including those on active duty either in Cuba or overseas and those belonging to the ready reserves."

The institute's estimate of the number of Cuban "forces abroad" also was generally higher than, for example, that published in the September issue of the Department of State Bulletin.

The British group reported that Cuban military in Angola, in Africa, number 18,000; in the Congo, 750; Ethiopia, 13,000; Mozambique, 750; "other Africa," 500; in South Yemen, 800; in Nicaragua, 2,000; and in Grenada, 300. The U.S. figures on Cuban forces overseas were, for Angola, 20,000-25,000; Ethiopia, 11,000 to 13,000; Nicaragua, 2,000; South Yemen, 200 to 300; and Grenada, 30 military personnel.

The IISS releases only bare statistics on the composition of Latin American armed forces and their equipment. It leaves the commentary on and interpretation of the figures to others.

Military observers say, though, that the half-page of data that the IISS printed on Cuba bear out the U.S. contention that "Cuba has by far the most formidable and largest military force in the Caribbean Basin with the exception of the United States."

Only Brazil, whose population is nearly 13 times that of Cuba, has more of its citizens under arms.

Brazil's armed forces total 272,900. The army numbers 182,750, according to the institute, with an additional 400,000 reserves subject to immediate recall.

Brazil spent $1.344 billion, or as the Latins prefer it, $1,344 million, for defense in 1981, a sharp drop from the $2.019 billion of 1980. That moved Brazil down from second place in defense expenditures to fourth.

Argentina was Latin America's biggest military spender. The institute reported that the Argentines spent $10.084 billion in 1981, more than three times the figure for the year before. The institute cautioned, though, that "combat casualties, subsequent operational attrition, and reported replacements make this figure suspect." It applied the same warning to its estimates of the numbers of planes, missiles, armored cars, helicopters and other weapons the Argentines used in their ill-fated effort to reclaim the Falkland-Malvinas Islands from the British. The Argentine armed forces number 180,500.

The institute provided no dollar estimate of military spending for Cuba, but it did report that 8.5 percent of the Cuban gross national product went for defense. By comparison, Argentina spent 8.1 percent, Chile, 4.6, Brazil, 0.5 percent, the United States, 6.1 percent of its GNP.

Mexico, with defense expenditures of $1.403 billion in 1981, was next in line in dollars spent on its military. Mexican armed forces total 119,500 regulars and 250,000 "part-time" conscripts, according to the institute. Mexico added two more ex-U.S. destroyers to its navy and the air force replaced seven of its aging AT-33s with four U.S.-built F-5Es and three F-5Fs.

Venezuela increased its 1981 defense spending to $950 million, from $862.7 million in 1980. Size of its armed forces remained at 40,800.

Peru was another South American country with a large military establishment that reported a sharp decrease in defense costs in 1981. Expenditures fell from $575 million to $398.5 million. Total armed forces numbered 135,500, an increase of 5,500. Peru, the only nation besides Cuba that flies Soviet-built aircraft, acquired 16 more Su-22 ground-attack fighters, for a total of 52. Peru's 114 combat planes also include British Canberra light bombers, French Mirage fighters, and U.S. A-37 counterinsurgency planes.

All Cuba's 219 combat aircraft are MiGs.

None of the South American countries is so heavily armed as to constitute a real threat to its neighbors, military analysts say. Not even Cuba has "the ability to conduct an outright invasion of another country in the region except for the Caribbean microstates," the report on the Cuban armed forces published in the latest Department of State Bulletin says.

It warns, though, that "when supported logistically by the Soviet Union," Cuba "has both the capability and the will to deploy large numbers of troops and can be expected to do so whenever the Castro government believes it to be in Cuba's best interests." Cuba's military operations in Africa demonstrate that.

Renegotiating Polish debt is risky job!

One of the biggest deadbeats, as far as international loans are concerned, is Poland. The myth that Poland is not bankrupt is being kept alive by every Western bank, because no one wants to foreclose on it at this time.

Art Buchwald

How did Poland and the U.S. banks get into such a mess? It now turns out that the highest ranking Polish banker in the United States was also a Polish spy.

The banker's name is Andrzej Treumann and he has just defected to our side, and is now somewhere in the U.S. as a guest of the CIA. Mr. Treumann was ostensibly in charge of renegotiating the Polish debt with the banks in the West.

My source at CIA's headquarters in Langley filled me in on a few intelligence details concerning Treumann's defection.

"The Polish government's biggest mistake," he said, "was sending a top banker to the U.S. to spy for them. Our people knew that there was no chance of Poland paying back its debt to the Western banks, so the man had to be sent to the United States for another reason. You don't need a top banker to renegotiate a Polish loan with the Chase Manhattan Bank or Citibank. If you sent a teller from Gdansk Savings and Loan, Chase and Citibank would have to talk to him. We figured Treumann would have a lot of free time on his hands and he was probably up to no good."

"That was good reasoning, but you must have had more to go on than a hunch."

"We did. Every time Treumann went to see an executive of a bank to renegotiate a Polish loan he kept producing Poland's liabilities on microfilm. He once tried to open up a new account at the Bank of America and instead of a pressure cooker he asked if he could have an MX missile. Once he offered to pay back interest on the Polish debt to the Continental Bank of Chicago if the vice president would give his son a model kit of the Stealth bomber. But what really piqued our interest was when three checks he wrote against the Los Alamos Employees Credit Union bounced."

"When Treumann finally came over to our side he said it wasn't his fault. The Polish Minister of Finance kept bugging him to get Irving Trust off his back, and the Warsaw Pact commander kept badgering him on how many nuclear submarines were stationed in New London. The poor man never could keep his cables straight."

"Is that why he defected?"

"No, strangely enough it was a little thing that got him angry. The Bowery Savings Bank held an outstanding loan to Poland of $2 billion. When Treumann informed them he couldn't make the monthly payment, Bowery repossessed his car. Treumann sent a message to the Minister of Finance asking him to settle up Poland's debt with Bowery Savings so he could get his car back. But the Minister cabled back, 'Impossible to do. From now on take the subway.'"

The CIA man continued, "Now, Treumann is no dummy and he lived in Queens long enough to know that riding the New York subway is far more dangerous than being a spy for a Communist country. So rather than risk his life on the IRT, he decided to come in from the cold."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 3, the 307th day of 1982. There are 58 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 3, 1534, England's Parliament transferred to King Henry VIII all judicial and political powers formerly exercised in the country by the Pope.

On this date:

In 1946, power in Japan was transferred from the emperor to an elected assembly.

In 1979, thousands of soldiers, policemen and civilians lined the funeral procession route of South Korea's assassinated president, Park Chung-Hee.

Ten years ago: The labor department announced that the nation's unemployment rate stood at 5½ percent.

Five years ago: It was announced that the Crown of St. Stephen and other ancient Polish relics held by the United States since World War II would be returned to their homeland.

One year ago: Secretary of State Alexander Haig charged that a senior White House aide was trying to undermine his position with President Reagan.

Today's birthdays: Actor Charles Bronson is 60.

Iranians try to export Islamic fundamentalism to Lebanon

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI

BAALBEK, Lebanon (AP) — Revolutionary guards from Iran, intent on exporting Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic fundamentalism, have set up a headquarters, hospital and sports center in this eastern Lebanese town.

Slipping into Lebanon during the confusion caused by Israel's June 6 invasion, an estimated 300 Iranians have renamed Baalbek's main plaza "Ayatollah Khomeini Square," hung Iran's red, white and green flags in the streets and painted walls with the same "Death to America" slogans seen in Iran.

"We are here for propaganda reasons and to guide the people to export Iran's Islamic revolution," said a bearded revolutionary in his early 20s who refused to give his name.

Baalbek, whose ancient Roman ruins attracted thousands of foreign tourists in more peaceful decades, is a town of about 25,000 people. An estimated 95 percent are Shiite Moslems, the same Islamic sect as Khomeini and most of his countrymen.

The Shiites reject most of the oral traditions, law and ceremony of the Sunni Moslems, who comprise about 85 percent of the world's Islamic population. Most live in Iran where the beliefs are intensified by strong feelings of Iranian nationalism.

AT THE HEIGHT OF THE Israeli invasion last summer, Iran dispatched a contingent of the paramilitary revolutionary guards to Syria, Lebanon's eastern neighbor, according to Western intelligence reports.

Some of the guardsmen now in Baalbek indirectly confirmed this, but they said their mission now was to spread the word of the Khomeini regime in Lebanon where many of the country's 950,000 Shiites regard the Iranian patriarch as their spiritual leader.

"We have no goal other than the Islamization of the place. As the imam (Khomeini) says, we have come here with the aim of serving the deprived Palestinians and the deprived Lebanese," said one guardsman in his mid-20s who said he was from Tehran, the Iranian capital.

Several Baalbek residents, declining to be named for fear of reprisals, said they are frightened by the fanaticism the Iranians are arousing among some Shiites.

"My friends and I stay at home and avoid going out on the streets for fear of being sworn at or assaulted by someone who thinks we are not complying with Islamic traditions," one Shiite woman said.

"They have just gone too far," said another Shiite woman. "Now we are afraid. We do not even feel easy walking with our husbands in case someone mistakes them for boyfriends."

IN KNOMEINI'S IRAN, the sexes are strictly segregated, except for close relatives.

In Baalbek, a more conservative place than Beirut and other Lebanese coastal cities, many Shiite women have worn headscarves and high-necked, long-sleeved dresses in public since 1979, when Khomeini's revolutionaries deposed the monarchy. But they have not adopted the chador, the head-to-toe veil worn by Iranian women.

Shortly after the Iranians arrived, a huge mural depicting a group of chador-clad women was painted on a wall near the revolutionary guards' main office. Some women viewed it as a not-so-subtle attempt at "guiding" their behavior.

Two foreign correspondents were followed througout Baalbek when they visited the town recently.

At the revolutionary guards' headquarters, a two-story yellow stone building, named "lovers of martyrdom," an Arabic sign urged local residents to enroll between 8 a.m. and 11 a.m. for classes.

A revolutionary guard at the office, where an Iranian flag flew from the roof, refused to say how many people had signed up for instruction. But he said classes were under way in mosques in Baalbek and nearby villages to study the Koran, Islam's holy book, and Islamic teachings including Khomeini's.

Several thousand Palestinians, most of them Sunni Moslems, live in refugee camps and shantytowns in and around Baalbek, about 30 miles from the nearest Israeli occupation forces.

DURING A THREE—HOUR VISIT to Baalbek, at least 30 revolutionary guards, wearing the same dark green uniforms they wear in Iran, were seen. Local residents estimated the total number of guardsmen in Baalbek at about 300.

Since the Iranians' arrival, the proliferation of pro-Khomeini slogans and posters and Iranian flags makes Baalbek resemble an Iranian town. The only big difference is that the signs here are written in Arabic instead of Farsi — two separate languages that use the same alphabet.

At one end of Baalbek is the newly built "Imam Khomeini Hospital," which serves as an office center for the revolutionary guards. Parked around the hospital are vehicles used by the guardsmen, all bearing Syrian license plates except one which had a plate from the southwestern Iranian city of Ahvaz.

According to one revolutionary guardsman, who said he was originally from Pakistan but spoke fluent Farsi, the hospital has a few Iranian doctors who treat only emergency cases.

Lebanese patrols move to take charge of militias

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese soldiers deployed in east Beirut today ahead of the first U.S. Marine patrols, setting up positions at key points and threatening to arrest any Christian militiamen who refused to lay down their arms.

The move appeared to be the first full-scale effort to take control of the eastern sector, run by the militias for the past eight years. It was not clear whether the Christian militiamen would cooperate with the disarmament demand.

In the Chouf mountains 12 miles southeast of Beirut, police said at least six people were killed and 15 wounded in another series of clashes between rightist Christian and leftist Druse Moslem militiamen in the villages of Brih and Kfar Nabrach.

The Christian-owned Voice of Lebanon radio station said 14 people died in fighting with machine guns, mortars and rocket-propelled grenades. Christian and Druse private armies have been battling in the Israeli-occupied area for the past four weeks.

Marines from the 1,200-man U.S. peace force contingent were to enter east Beirut for the first time today, along with French and Italian soldiers, said Marine Corps spokesman Lt. Col. Jon Abel.

He said the Marine patrols would carry unloaded weapons, but would have ammunition and were ordered to return any fire that is directed at them.

The Marines will conduct daily, four-hour patrols in two pairs of two jeeps each, he said.

Christian Phalangist militia leaders issued a statement Tuesday saying they would not oppose the entry of Lebanese soldiers and U.S., French and Italian peacekeepers into east Beirut, but said nothing about disarming.

Three Lebanese army armored personnel carriers were stationed opposite the Christian Phalangist militia barracks in east Beirut today. Army Capt. Saadallah Moula told The Associated Press any militiamen who refused to leave and disarm would be arrested.

An AP reporter and photographer also saw Lebanese army units setting up what appeared to be permanent posts in the neighborhoods of Himkeh, Bourj Hammoud, Sinn el-Fil, Furn el-Shubbak and Ein Rummaneh.

Poland steps up campaign against threatened walkout

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Threatened with a nationwide strike next week, the martial law regime has stepped up its anti-Solidarity campaign, mocking defiant workers for bringing home "dismissal notices and bruises" instead of salaries.

The government daily "Republic" said in a sarcastic front-page commentary Tuesday that the banned trade union called a general walkout for Nov. 10 to prevent peace in Poland, relieve boredom, keep shelves bare and please President Reagan.

Authorities tacked up posters around the capital bearing the slogan "Enough!" with a picture of a fist shattering a plate glass window.

The paper said Solidarity was in effect saying, "We must strike as our wives are begging us to bring home not salaries but leaflets, dismissal notices and bruises."

Saying Solidarity has no legitimate "reasons" for its action, the paper offered its own version of the union's "justifications."

"Striking is the only road to achieving anarchy in Poland," the article taunted. "And finally the last argument is this: The time has come to prove to the world that martial law cannot be ended. So long live the strike."

Angered by Parliament's Oct. 8 ban against the Solidarity, the union underground called for eight-hour strikes Nov. 10, the second anniversary of the Supreme Court order allowing Solidarity's registration as the Soviet bloc's first and so far only independent labor federation.

Demonstrations and a week of protests also are planned next month to mark the anniversary of the Dec. 13 declaration of martial law.

"Who and what will win?" the Republic asked.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban has said authorities plan "persuasive measures" against the strike. But, like other officials, he contended that Solidarity is too weak to mount any large-scale protest.

Pope John Paul deplores nuclear arms research

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Pope John Paul II, who made a stinging attack Tuesday on the incoming government's stand on social issues, turned his attention to another political debate today and deplored nuclear arms research as "a scandal of our times."

In a speech to Spanish intellectuals and professors at Madrid's Complutense University, the pontiff pleaded with his listeners to use their influence to stop the nuclear arms race.

"Consciences must be awakened," he said. "Your responsibility and the possibilities of influence on public opinion are immense. Make them serve the cause of peace...It is a scandal of our time that many researchers are dedicated to improving new weapons for war that one day could prove fatal."

Looking slightly tired on the fourth day of his 10-day visit, the 62-year-old, Polish-born pope spent a busy morning at the Vatican Embassy, greeting Spain's small Polish community, a delegation of Protestants and the Vatican press corps.

The pope also had his first meeting with a Jewish delegation since he granted Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat an audience in Rome Sept. 15. The group, representing Spain's 12,000 Sephardic Jews, asked the pope to speak out more strongly against terrorism.

On Tuesday, John Paul addressed what was believed to be the largest public gathering in Spanish history, attacking the newly elected government's pledge to liberalize laws on divorce, birth control and abortion.

"What sense is there to speak about the dignity of man and his fundamental rights if you don't protect an innocent or if you allow doctors...to destroy defenseless human lives," the pontiff declared, speaking in Spanish and nearly shouting.

Artificial birth control, he said, is "a falsification of the interior truth of conjugal love," and divorce is intolerable "according to God's plan."

The impassioned comments, some of the pope's strongest statements yet in support of traditional church positions, were made in the homily of a outdoor twilight Mass attended by an estimated 1.5 million people.

The Socialists who won last week's general elections, and will take office next month, campaigned on a platform calling for family planning centers in all public health facilities, relaxed rules on divorce and permitting abortions when a woman's life is endangered.

An estimated 82.7 percent of Spain's 37.8 million people are baptized Catholic. But attendance at Mass is dropping and Roman Catholic clerics complain the influence of the church is waning.

Last year, Spain legalized divorce, illegal since 1936. Birth control is believed to be widely practiced, and contraceptive pills are available by prescription.

Abortion is illegal, but pro-abortion groups say as many as 300,000 operations are performed each year, most of them on women who already have more than two children.

Mexico will open exchanges along border to sell dollars

MEXICO CITY (AP) — In a move to curtail black market currency trading, the government announced it would open exchange houses along the U.S. border that will sell dollars at free-market value to Mexican citizens and businesses.

In the capital, there was no sign of progress toward ending three-day-old strikes by more than 7,000 Mexicana Airlines employees and about 23,000 non-academic workers at the National University of Mexico.

Mexicana officials said Tuesday that their offer of a 25 percent wage increase and a 4.5 percent hike in benefits is not negotiable. The workers, who started their strike Monday, demand an increase of 43 percent to 50 percent to offset inflation. The strikers earned $170 to $645 a month.

The National University also stuck to its offer of a 25 percent increase despite a decision by the striking workers Tuesday to lower their demands from a 60 percent increase to a 50 percent hike in monthly wages of $214 to $442.

The national Bank of Mexico said in its currency trading announcement Tuesday that, effective today, people living in the 12-mile-deep free trade zone along the U.S. border will be able to buy up to $1,500 worth of pesos a month. Businesses will be allowed to buy all the dollars they need to make foreign payments.

Germany won't increase military spending by much

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BONN, West Germany — Defense Minister Manfred Woerner said Tuesday that the Reagan administration should not expect major increases in West German military spending in the near term under the new conservative Bonn government.

But, apparently eager to do something tangible to back up a promise to stabilize U.S.-German relations, Woerner hinted he would announce an expanded German contribution to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's infrastructure fund on a visit to Washington next week.

Touching on a wide range of alliance matters in an interview, the minister confirmed that unpublicized West German preparations to accept new U.S.-made Pershing II nuclear missiles at the end of 1983 were "on schedule." He reaffirmed Bonn's willingness to follow through with the deployment if U.S.-Soviet arms reduction talks fail, but said he expected more "serious protests" in West Germany before the missiles arrive

Commenting on recent calls by Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, the NATO commander in Europe, to pay more for expensive new conventional armaments, Woerner said he also favored greater alliance emphasis on conventional weaponry to lessen dependence on the nuclear deterrent. But this, he added, was a longterm proposition, and, stressing the continued importance of nuclear weapons to deter war, Woerner cautioned Rogers and others against raising public expectations that a prospective conventional buildup might alleviate shorter term needs to modernize NATO's nuclear arsenal.

West Germany, which commands the largest European conventional military force in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, has been a primary target of U.S. calls for more allied defense spending. Woerner himself, while in the opposition as a Christian Democratic member of parliament, frequently criticized the government of former Chancellor Helmut Schmidt for cutting the defense share of the budget from more than 25 percent in the late 1960s to 18 percent now.

Yet the 4.8 percent increase in the 1983 defense budget approved by the new Cabinet last week is barely enough to keep up with next year's projected inflation rate. It includes only a symbolic $40 million more than the Schmidt government had planned to spend before its ouster Oct. 1.

Woerner defended his new budget Tuesday, saying it is the largest spending increase any major Bonn department got and represents a particularly significant commitment in view of the government's fiscal austerity program.

"We'll do all that is possible to increase our defense efforts," the minister asserted. "But we inherited a financial situation that is absolutely desolate."

Citing a prolonged recession that has produced post-World War II records of unemployment and bankruptcies in West Germany, Woerner said it would be some time before the new center-right coalition could set about reversing past trends in defense spending. "Given the actual situation, it is impossible to correct it in one or two years. Impossible. Everyone will understand that," he said.

Reports by senior military staffers, leaked recently to German correspondents, have warned of serious deficiencies in national defense resulting from slowdowns in the purchase of sophisticated new equipment. But Woerner, 48, a longtime military affairs specialist who flies jets as an Air Force reservist, stated that procurement had in fact been overemphasized at the expense of certain personnel factors.

In the future, he said, training and what Woerner called "leadership and the social situation" of the German armed forces would be given higher priority. The 1983 budget, for instance, already reflects a shift in funds for promotions and for hiring more volunteer career soldiers.

At the same time, Woerner said he would postpone until the end of next year a decision on what to do about a threatened loss of military manpower as fewer youths become available for the draft. A special commission has recommended extending the period of conscription from 15 to 18 months or allowing women volunteers into the German armed forces, both politically sensitive options.

Woerner declined to specify what his government's new infrastructure contribution would be. "I'll bring it over there," he said, referring to his Washington visit.

Expansion of the infrastructure fund, a common NATO fund which pays for such operational facilities as airports, command posts and storage depots, was resisted by Schmidt's government. A U.S. diplomat here said a commitment to pay more by West Germany, which like the United States accounts for about a quarter of the total fund, would remove an "irritant" in U.S.-German relations and be "a good sign."

Chaps defeat Cisco, 69-62

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

It's still the height of the football season, but even the weatherman got in the mood for the Midland College Chaparrals' home opener Tuesday night.

With rain riding cold winds out of the north, it at least seemed like basketball weather and the largest opening night crowd ever formed long lines outside the Langford Chaparral Center to see the defending NJCAA champions defeat Cisco Junior College, 69-62.

Although it wasn't a vintage opener scorewise, Coach Jerry Stone was moved to remark, "If we had opened against somebody's JV, we might have won 109-52 and have thought we were real good. I'm not satisfied with our performance, but this was a good team we played. And it showed us what we have to work on."

He added, "And it's gonna be like that all year, team's coming at us like Cisco did tonight."

STONE NOTED that Cisco Coach Tommy Collins was happy, "just because they played us a good game. That's what comes with being No. 1. I think I'm going to request that they not introduce us as national champions anymore, just 'Chaparrals' will be sufficient." After all, there's no sense in deliberately stirring up the opposition.

After leading 33-31 at half, one in which 5-6 point guard Spud Webb, who picked up three quick fouls, viewed most of from the bench, Midland apparently blew it open in the first 10 minutes of the second half. After Nate Bufford converted three of four free throws resulting from technicals assessed Cisco Coach Collins, the Chaparrals led 57-36 after 8:40 of the second half. A contributing factor was a harrying defense that had caused the Wranglers to miss 11 of their first 12 shots.

Still, the Chaps retained one characteristic from last year's team, the tendency to dissipate big leads. This time it was done almost unobtrusively. Midland never appeared on the verge of losing, but with 16 seconds left, it was 66-62. The Chaps had converted only two of a potential eight free throws after leading 64-56 with 1:58 left and here were the Wranglers within upset range.

CISCO'S comeback, however, had begun long before.

With 5:00 left in the game, Cisco still had found bottom on only of four of 17 second half field attempts, but, nevertheless, had whittled Midland's lead to 58-49 simply by converting every free throw opportunity presented. For the night, Cisco made good on 24 of 28 from the line.

"They didn't let us break on them," said Stone. "They were dropping back fast on defense. We're going to see a lot of that this season."

HIGH POINT honors for the night went to newcomer Nate Bufford, the Auburn, Ala., sharpshooter who wound up with 20 points on eight-of-15 from the floor and four-of-seven from the line. Six-seven Chester Smith, a postman moved to forward this year, was next with 14, 10 coming in the first half. Six-four David Jones paced Cisco with 20.

One of the biggest adjustments for Stone as coach is working with a 15-man squad, instead of eight.

As for his early season philosophy, "Our first objective is to win. I'd like to use 10 or 12 players in the process, as we did tonight. Before conference, the objective is to find out a lot of things. I don't want to lose, but it could happen. We'll be playing in tournaments and we'll be playing a lot of people."

Stone feels there is a lot of work to be done before the early December WJCC opener with Clarendon. "Cisco pressured us effectively tonight and we didn't respond to it as we will later."

SOPHOMORE 6-5 Jerome Crowe was the fourth Chap in double figures, scoring 11 points, but his floor game is what stood out. He grabbed off a game-high 10 rebounds and started several fast strike sorties. "Jerome is the most improved player on the squad," Stone said.

But almost as big a story as the Chaps' 25th straight victory was the crowd. Not only was it the largest opening night turnout, but it was the kind of turnout the Chaps don't usually see until well into the WJCC season.

Athletic Director Delnor Poss estimated "2,500 to 3,000" showed up despite the less than ideal weather conditions.

Friday's game at Memorial has meaning

TERRY WILLIAMSON

The Fonz would love it. Week No. 10 in the high school football season and thumbs are skyward with a gusty "Heyyyyy!" There is a game with meaning Friday at Memorial Stadium.

We've had enough Midland Lee-Midland High matchups with only city bragging rights in the balance. Now we have one with state playoffs hopes — not for one team but for both. As the Fonz would say, "We've got a street war on our hands. Bring out the chains."

Of course, the MHS-Lee confrontation is not the only game of importance in District 4-5A this week, but thanks to the University Interscholastic League and Odessa Permian, the last week of the season has left open enough possibilities for several worm-laced cans.

THE FIRST thing one must notice is that if Odessa High wins Friday night, the Brochos take the district's No. 2 playoff berth. And the first thing all notice is that is some fat chance since the Bronchos have to face unbeaten, No. 1 state-ranked and cross-town rival Odessa Permian.

Jack Brewer, Odessa athletic director, is probably trying to find a way to make Permain coach John Wilkins toss in the towel. "Now John, it sure would be nice for two Odessa teams to be in the playoffs. We sure could make a lot of money. Now John, don't you think you might be able to lose one for the Gipper?"

Suddenly, Permian is not loved in Odessa. Only they stand in the way of OHS making the playoffs. So, how about it, John? The rest of the district loves you this week. One more victory and you have an unbeaten regular season. The only way Permian can lose to OHS is to throw the game. We know because we've seen Permian against all the other teams in the league, and Mojo destroyed all of them.

The fact remains, however, that Permian would rather take Tylenol than lose to Odessa High on any night, in any year and in any situation. Plus they know that OHS can still make the playoffs if a few more cards fall into the right places Friday. Permian would rather OHS get to the playoffs under those circumstances than risk an unbeaten season and the No. 1 ranking.

WHICH BRINGS us back to the MHS-Lee fight. If Odessa High loses and Lee wins, the Rebels go to the playoffs by virtue of a 5-2 district record. If OHS loses, MHS beats Lee and San Angelo loses to Big Spring, MHS goes to the playoffs with a 5-5 record by virtue of having beat both OHS and Lee in district play. If San Angelo beats Big Spring and the previous holds, there will be a four-way coin flip Friday night at Memorial Stadium to determine which of those four teams go to the playoffs.

Confusing? It's just what the UIL ordered to keep high school football the talk of Texas. "Maybe we should send a letter of thanks to the UIL," is the way MHS coach Pat Culpepper sees it.

Even with the UIL's help, it's strange to see both MHS and Lee with opportunities to make the playoffs. Neither were picked to challenge for the title. San Angelo and Permian were supposed to dominate. Permian did, San Angelo didn't.

Both the Rebels and Bulldogs deserve a lot of credit for staying alive until the final week of the season. Lee's chances seem to be the best. They will be favored over Midland High and they need only to hold on to that while hoping Permian beats OHS, something most feel is no worry.

But the Bulldogs have struggled to stay alive. They have been counted dead so many times this year that they were often called the "Graveyard Dogs." Still, they have won three of their last four games and are at the playoff threshold. City pride, playoff hopes and competitive spirit stir both local teams.

Midland High's victory over Abilene High last week and Lee's win over Abilene Cooper set up this showdown with an assist from Odessa High, who beat San Angelo to keep the Bulldogs hopes swarming. Now anything can happen.

MHS WAS 1-4 at one point in the season and can still earn a break-even record and a playoff berth. That takes some character.

Lee came into the season with no returning starters to earn its "No Name" tag. Now they are on the lip of the cup, needing only a six-inch birdie putt for an 8-2 season, a record they finished with last year for an uncontested second place.

So both teams can go into Friday's game with no regrets and that's what we wanted. If MHS had lost to Abilene last week, the Bulldogs would face a no-win situation much like Permian has this week. If they upset Lee under those circumstances, they would be

You can take the man out of baseball but...

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

You can take the man out of baseball but you can't take baseball out of the man.

Love him or hate him — as club owners did Monday in Chicago on an 8-18 minority ratio in refusing to renew Bowie Kuhn's contract — but no one can help admiring the moxie of the guy.

Through certainly what must have been the most trying ordeal of his life, the patrician one-time Wall Street attorney took it like a man. He didn't whine. He didn't whimper. He didn't strike back at the hard core handful who orchestrated his overthrow.

He refused also to run away and hide, a move which would have been perfectly understandable under the circumstances.

He faced the music, tight-lipped and without vengeance.

HE WAS back at his Manhattan skyscraper office at 5 a.m. Tuesday after a stormy airplane flight from O'Hare Airport, submitting to TV and radio interviews, answering ceaseless phone calls, accepting a parade of intruders, some offering regrets and others probing for hidden animosities.

"You must be very bitter — coming the way it did," said a visitor, noting a swing of two votes would have saved him.

Kuhn lowered his head and lapsed into deep thought. He sat beside a wide desk inundated with autographed baseballs and surrounded by baseball memorabilia, bats, books, Norman Rockwell paintings and layers of photographs, many with presidents and other distinguished personalities.

"Bitterness is a foreign word to me," he said. "Rancor and hatred — they're not in my vocabulary. Hurt? Yes. Disappointed? Very."

AS AN acting commissioner, Kuhn was inclined to be a bit stiff and aloof, at times seemingly unapproachable. It may have been the result of his upbringing — fashionable Washington, D.C., suburbs, Franklin and Marshall College, Ivy League Princeton and University of Virginia Law.

Some of the heaviest criticism hurled at him by the press was that he was often tentative, failing to make strong spontaneous decisions. He weighed every issue and seemed determined never to go off half-cocked and shoot from the hip.

Now, fired by small minority of his bosses, he acts as if some invisible bonds have snapped and he is free at last to communicate and speak his mind. The lame duck Bowie Kuhn, whom close associates always knew as a friendly and sensitive man, is showing a different face to the public.

One wonders if Bowie's baseball fate would have been altered if he had chosen to show this facade throughout his 14 years on the job.

Did his austere authoritarian veneer alienate such men as Atlanta's Ted Turner, New York Mets' Nelson Doubleday, St. Louis' Augie Busch, Houston's John McMullen and Cincinnati's William Williams, the guys who "done him in?"

Perhaps. Certainly some of the press corps found the commissioner an amusing target in such now celebrated episodes as the freezing Sunday night World Series game in Cincinnati in 1976 and the rain-interrupted sixth game in the World Series this year which went well into the morning.

The first has been dubbed the "thermal underwear" game. It was shivering cold. Everybody was complaining — umpires, press, players and perhaps fans. And the commissioner took his box near the dugout without a topcoat, without earmuffs, but apparently wearing thermal underwear.

At St. Louis this year, after a mid-game cloudburst, he waited 2½ hours to allow the game to be finished after midnight. In both instances, he invited heavy criticism.

The 1976 game had been scheduled for nighttime prime showing well in advance — meeting baseball demands for better commercial promotion — and Kuhn couldn't control the weather. In this year's game, the commissioner was governed by the tradition that never in history had a World

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Right-hander Pete Vuckovich, a model of consistency on Milwaukee's American League championship team, today was named winner of the AL's 1982 Cy Young Award.

The mustachioed pitcher, who had two eight-game winning streaks as he carved out a nifty 18-6 record, became the second successive Milwaukee hurler to win the award. Reliever Rollie Fingers was last year's AL winner.

The 30-year-old Vuckovich beat out Baltimore's Jim Palmer for the prize, recording 87 points to 59 for the Orioles' right-hander. Kansas City relief ace Dan Quisenberry was third with 40 points, followed by Toronto's Dave Stieb with 36.

With two writers voting in each AL city, Vuckovich had 14 out of a possible 28 first-place votes. Vuckovich also received four votes for second and five for third. Palmer had four firsts, 12 seconds and three thirds.

Under the voting system conducted by the Baseball Writers Association of America, a first-place vote is worth five points, second place three and third place one.

VUCKOVICH, A 6-foot-4, 220-pounder who was obtained in a multi-player trade with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1980, rattled off eight straight victories early in the season and then eight more from July 24 to Sept. 20 to help the Brewers' run for the East Division title.

Vuckovich pitched 223⅔ innings, compiling a 3.34 earned run average and hurling nine complete games. In the past two seasons, Vuckovich has piled up a 32-10 record for the best percentage in major league baseball.

A native of Johnstown, Pa., who currently lives in Conemaugh, Pa., with his wife, Anna, and their two sons, Vuckovich completed his sixth major league season in 1982. Before coming to Milwaukee, he played for the Chicago White Sox, Toronto Blue Jays and the Cardinals, where he won 39 games in three seasons. For the Brewers last year, he was 14-4.

PALMER, A three-time winner of the Cy Young Award, had a 15-5 record for the Orioles in 1982 and a 3.13 ERA. Quisenberry, accorded four first-place votes, had a league-leading 35 saves for Kansas City while Stieb, who received five votes for first, posted a 17-14 record with Toronto.

Cleveland's Rick Sutcliffe, the AL ERA leader at 2.96, got the remaining vote for first and finished fifth in the voting with 14 points.

Others receiving votes were California's Geoff Zahn with 7 points, Boston's Bob Stanley (4), Bill Caudill of Seattle (4) and Dan Petry of Detroit (1).

Dickerson, DeAyala earn SWC honors

AP Laserphoto

Senior end Kiki DeAyala of the University of Texas had two quarterback sacks and caused a fumble Saturday as the leader of the Longhorn defense that shut out Texas Tech 27-0.

DALLAS (AP) — It's just tough playing defense on the SMU team with Eric Dickerson.

Dickerson, Southern Methodist's All-American senior tailback, is The Associated Press Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week for the third time this season.

"Dickerson doesn't give us much of a rest when he breaks those 80-yard touchdowns," said SMU defensive end Russell Washington. "He would be a great challenge for OUR defense to play against."

Dickerson rushed 14 times for 200 yards and scored on runs of 9, 80, and 79 yards Saturday in a 47-9 victory over Texas A&M.

THE IMPRESSIVE victory by the unbeaten Mustangs shot them up to No. 2 in the country.

SMU offensive guard Joe Beard said he realizes the Mustang defense needs some long drives from the Pony offense.

"You can't really complain when your back breaks one for 80 yards, but your defense gets tired fast," Beard said.

For the season, Dickerson has rushed 168 times for 1,319 yards and 13 touchdowns. His per-carry average is 7.9 yards which would be a NCAA record if he maintains it.

The record for a minimum of 225 carries belongs to Billy Sims of Oklahoma at 7.63 in 1978 — 231 for 1,762 yards.

Dickerson needs just 291 yards to break the SWC rushing record of 4,443 yards by Earl Campbell of Texas.

"Now that people have had the opportunity to see him on TV, they know what we've been talking about all along," said SMU Coach Bobby Collins.

On his last scoring run, Dickerson appeared to be stopped at the line of scrimmage but broke several tackles.

"It was just another great game by Eric," said Collins.

TEXAS DEFENSIVE end Kiki DeAyala, who is closing in on the Longhorn record for quarterback sacks, took one away from teammate Eric Holle on Saturday.

Just as Holle, Texas' other defensive end, was reaching for Texas Tech quarterback Jim Hart, DeAyala slammed Hart to the ground.

It was probably just as well since last year the two ends collided, and DeAyala was knocked out.

DeAyala, a 6-foot-1-inch, 238-pound senior, has 11 quarterback sacks in six games, with five games to go. The unofficial team record for a single season is 15 by Kenneth McCune.

"When you hit a quarterback so hard that he loses his will to run or stay back there for the extra second before passing, that's a beautiful feeling for me," DeAyala told Texas Orange Power Magazine. "The crowd can't hear it from the stands but when he gets the air knocked out of him, the players on the field can hear him go 'ooooo-hhhhh.' That's like a 50-yard touchdown run to me."

DeAYALA WAS the team leader with seven tackles Saturday as the Texas defense shut down Tech, 27-0, allowing the Red Raiders only seven first downs and 134 yards total offense. For his performance, he was named The Associated Press' defensive player-of-the-week in the Southwest Conference.

DeAyala had two quarterback sacks, another tackle behind the line of scrimmage, pressured the passer six times, caused a fumble and broke up a pass.

"I don't think there's a better defensive end in the country than Kiki," said Texas coach Fred Akers. "He's quick, he's a great competitor, he's smart and he's got experience. He led our team in sacks last year (with 14) when we had (All-American Kenneth) Sims and a very experienced football team. This is his second year in a row to do that."

"I won't deny it," says DeAyala, "making All-America is definitely a goal of mine. ... It would mean an awful lot to me."

DeAyala sprained his ankle in the Rice game Oct. 2, and Akers said, "He was a shell of himself playing against Oklahoma and probably 70 percent against SMU. He's just now starting to get back into playing condition. I think he's got a little room to go, and even at that he's playing some brilliant football."

Permian, 4-5A runner-up meet 3-5A in Lubbock Saturday

hated for keeping a Midland team out of the playoffs and if they lost, there would be more flak to take. This way the best team can control its destiny without a flaw. For that we are grateful.

Permian, the district champs; and the second place team (whoever that may be) will travel to Lubbock Saturday morning to meet with the teams from District 3-5A to decide dates and sites for next week's bi-district crown. District 3-5A has the possibility of a three-way tie for first place between Lubbock Monterrey, Hereford and Plainview. All have one loop loss and none of those teams face each other Friday. It looks like a three-way coin flip there to decide the top two teams.

If District 4-5A teams sweep the bi-district games, they would then face two winners out of the El Paso area in the Area playoffs. Then they would have to go back toward the Dallas-Fort Worth area for the regionals. Two 4-5A teams could not meet again until the quarterfinals. Most, however, feel that both 4-5A teams (regardless of who they are) have an excellent opportunity to win at least two playoff games by staying in the western part of the state. Then only one game would stand in the way of another 4-5A matchup in the state playoffs.

Now John, it's up to you. And remember, we always loved Odessa Permian.

Lillis says Astros need changes to find 'right chemistry'

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Bob Lillis, armed with a one-year contract to manage the Houston Astros, says the club needs to make some changes, but he gave no indication of plans for a major overhaul.

"The real challenge is going to be to put together a team that will jell and have the right chemistry," Lillis said Tuesday after he became the eighth manager in the club's 21-year history. "But when all is said and done, it comes down to wins and losses."

THE ASTROS had more wins than losses under Lillis last season. The 21-year Astros employee took over as interim manager on Aug. 10 after Bill Virdon was fired. He led the Astros to a 28-23 record from there to the end of the season.

Lillis said he had learned a lot about baseball from his association with Virdon and other managers including Walt Alston, Grady Hatton, Leo Durocher and Harry Walker.

"I'll try to manage like Bob Lillis but I hope some of all of those managers will rub off on me," Lillis said.

Lillis said he didn't mind a one-year contract either.

"Walt Alston (who managed the Los Angeles Dodgers for 23 years) always did very well on a one-year contract," Lillis said. "I feel if I do well, I won't have to worry about it. If I don't, no one will have to tell me.

"I've been with this organization so long, I don't want to stand in the way of it's success. Actually, I'm looking forward to several years as manager."

LILLIS has been with the Astros since the National League expanded in 1961. He was chosen in the expansion draft and played for Houston, then called the Colt 45s, until he retired as a player in 1967 with a lifetime batting average of .236.

Lillis served five seasons in the minor leagues as a scout and then as a special instructor before being named to the Astros staff in 1973.

Personal and team goals will be a priority next season, Lillis said.

"When I took over last year, we asked the players to set goals and we'll take that same approach in 1983," Lillis said.

Cobb to face Holmes in Astrodome

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Randy "Tex" Cobb says he gave up a football career and quit college because neither had much to do with the real world.

Instead, he took up boxing to find out about life and on Nov. 22, after posting a 20-2 record as a pro, he will face Larry Holmes in an effort to lift his World Boxing Council heavyweight championship in the Astrodome.

Now that's reality.

Holmes, with a 40-0 record and a string of 30 knockouts, will be a heavy favorite to defend his title for the 13th time against the less experienced Cobb, but the challenger says he has an excellent chance to be champion.

"Larry Holmes is a great fighter but I don't think he's invulnerable," Cobb said Monday, after promoter Don King had announced the fight. "He's got a lot of ability, but he can be hit and he can be hurt and has been by most of the fighters he's fought."

Cobb said he was eager to get into the ring to "raise hell" against Holmes, but conceded he still had a few things to learn in the ring.

"It's too late for learning," Holmes said smiling. "You're going to see more than (Michael) Dokes, (Earnie) Shavers or (Ken) Norton. You're going to see one of the greatest boxers of all time."

Cobb's two losses were to Dokes and Norton and one of his biggest victories was over Shavers, a former heavyweight contender.

The fight will be televised nationally on ABC. E. Michael Crowley of Astrodome Championship Enterprises, co-promoters with Kings, said the fight would be moved to Nov. 26 if the National Football League players strike ends and the Monday night pro football telecasts resume.

Holmes will be fighting for the first time since he knocked out Gerry Cooney in June in his last title defense.

"I won't be taking Randy lightly because he's trying to take something that I've worked very hard for," Holmes said. "But it's not like I'm stepping backward to fight Cobb. I don't feel Gerry Cooney is a better fighter after all the low blows that he used."

Stadler, Floyd lead U.S. team in Japan Goldwin Cup

TOKYO (AP) — Craig Stadler and Ray Floyd, who finished 1-2 this year in earnings on the Professional Golfers Association tour, will lead an eight-man American team against a Japanese contingent in the opening round of the $440,000 U.S.-Japan Goldwin Cup golf tournament.

Stadler, the U.S. Open and World Series of Golf champion, topped the list with $446,462.

Floyd, who won the PGA championship, was second with $386,809. Floyd became the sixth player ever to accumulate $2 million in career earnings by winning the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic last June.

The match, which begins Thursday, will be held under a new format that calls for two days of four-ball stroke play by two-man teams and two days of singles matches.

In each match, the winners will receive two points and the losers none. In case of a tie, each player will get one point. The individual winner will be decided by total strokes.

Kuhn has deep baseball roots

Series game been called before its conclusion.

IN 14 years, Bowie Kuhn made hundreds of decisions — good, bad and indifferent. We have been among his severest critics. Yet, in retrospect, we wonder what were the alternatives.

After all, Bowie has deep baseball roots — first as a kid working for $1 a day as scorekeeper at Washington's old Griffith Stadium, later as a rabid disciple, 19 years as the National League attorney and finally in 1969 as commissioner.

There's no doubt he knows and treasures the game — far more than some of the guys who gave him the gate.

A's president has begun hunt for new manager

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland A's President Roy Eisenhart has begun interviews with a dozen possible replacements for fired Manager Billy Martin. And while Montreal Expos coach Steve Boros was first in line, the A's boss says he may not be the leading contender.

"I wouldn't put that terminology on anyone at this point," Eisenhart said Tuesday.

Former California Angels Manager Jim Fregosi is the only other candidate whose name Eisenhart would reveal. But he said he's received permission to talk to three others as well.

Angels quickly replace Mauch with McNamara

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The California Angels didn't waste much time in finding a replacement for Gene Mauch as their manager. John McNamara, like Mauch a veteran when it comes to the profession, will be running the club in 1983.

McNamara, who was fired last summer as the manager of the Cincinnati Reds, was named as the skipper of the American League West champion Angels on Tuesday. Mauch announced his resignation on Oct. 22.

"I'm very elated that I can come back to California with such a talented team," said the 50-year-old McNamara by telephone from Cincinnati. "I've had a number of jobs offered, but I'd hoped this (with the Angels) would be where I'd wind up."

The Angels said that club Vice President Buzzie Bavasi and McNamara reached agreement by telephone last weekend, while Bavasi was in Chicago for the baseball meetings.

The managerial job is the fourth for McNamara on the big league level. He also managed at Oakland and San Diego before taking over the job in Cincinnati at the beginning of the 1979 season.

Terms of the contract, believed to be for one year, were not announced. McNamara, who served as a coach for the Angels in 1978, is scheduled to travel West next week to sign the contract.

Mauch resigned after slightly more than 1½ seasons at the California helm. He guided the Angels to their best record ever, 93-69, this past season, but was criticized when the club lost the AL Championship Series to Milwaukee, dropping three straight games after winning the first two.

In the wake of the criticism, he was offered a new contract by the Angels. However, he turned it down.

McNamara, who never advanced beyond the minor leagues in his playing days, is a native of Sacramento, Calif., and still makes his permanent home there.

McNamara first became a big league manager when he replaced Hank Bauer at Oakland on Sept. 19, 1969. The following year his club placed second in the AL West, yet he still was dismissed.

Joining San Diego in 1974, he stayed with that National League club for four seasons, with two fourth-place finishes the best his clubs could manage.

After serving as coach of the Angels, McNamara was hired at Cincinnati to replace the fired Sparky Anderson.

McNamara never has taken a club to the World Series. Ironically, in 1981, his team posted the best overall record in the season which was split because of the players' strike.

The Reds finished second, to two different teams, in the two parts of the campaign. They had won the NL West Division title in McNamara's first season with them.

This year, the revamped Reds fell apart. McNamara was fired in midseason, with Russ Nixon taking over. Eventually, the club finished with a 61-101 record, the worst in the NL.

Known as a pitcher's manager, McNamara will have his work cut out for him. Although possessing such outstanding hitters as Reggie Jackson, Rod Carew, Fred Lynn, Don Baylor, Doug DeCinces, Brian Downing and Bobby Grich, the Angels did not have a particularly strong pitching staff.

Late in the season they improved that department by acquiring Tommy John, the veteran left-hander who proved a big help in the stretch drive.

"Like most clubs, if there is any place where help is needed, it's in the pitching," McNamara said. "But so far, I've only been an observer."

When Earl Weaver retired as manager of the Baltimore Orioles following this year's playoffs, McNamara was prominently mentioned for that yet unfilled position. His new appointment ended that speculation.

Penguins snap Islander home unbeaten streak at 30 games

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

As the clock ticked down to the final seconds, Michel Dion couldn't help but think back a half year. His Pittsburgh Penguins teammates were on the same wave length.

"Everybody was thinking back to April 13 and I said, 'Not this time, we came too close,'" said Dion, who performed spectacularly Tuesday night in leading the Penguins over the New York Islanders 3-1 at Nassau Coliseum. The defeat snapped the National Hockey League champion Islanders' regular-season home unbeaten streak at 30.

On April 13, the Islanders were less than six minutes from first-round playoff elimination. But they stormed back from a 3-1 deficit with a pair of late goals to tie the game and won the series in overtime.

This time, Dion and Co. stood firm and the Islanders were losers at home in a regular-season game for the first time since Dec. 29, 1981, when the Montreal Canadiens beat them 5-4.

Elsewhere, the Canadiens scored a 5-4 victory over New Jersey; Minnesota edged Hartford 7-6; Vancouver outskated Quebec 5-2, and St. Louis tripped Detroit 4-2.

"Every second is the turning point against the Islanders," added Dion, who made 35 saves. "It wasn't in the bag, even with 32 seconds left. Not for me after last year."

The Penguins grabbed a 1-0 lead on Paul Gardner's first-period power-play goal. Gardner banked the puck off defenseman Denis Potvin's skate and it went into the net off the side of goaltender Roland Melanson.

Pat Boutette scored his 14th goal of the season — his career single-season high is 28 — made it 2-0 when he tipped in Rick Kehoe's pass four minutes into the second period and rookie Dave Hannan connected with a slapshot to clinch it at 8:40 of the third period.

"We were really getting tired in the third period, but Michel kept bailing us out and we picked it up," said Boutette. "We've been struggling all year, one good game then three or four bad ones. This is just an excellent win for us, it will help our confidence."

Islanders Coach Al Arbour wasn't exactly shocked at the result.

"This has been coming. We've been playing against the grain. We've been lazy," said Arbour. "Some games you can get away with it.

"I'm glad it came, maybe now we'll smarten up. Everybody could see it coming but the players in there (the Islanders locker room)."

Canadiens 5, Devils 4

New Jersey lost its seventh in a row as Montreal rallied from a 4-2 deficit with a three-goal third period. Mark Hunter's second score of the night, on a 20-foot slapshot, clinched it with 4:46 remaining.

Steve Shutt, also with his second goal of the game, and Larry Robinson had pulled the Canadiens into a 4-4 tie in the final session.

North Stars 7, Whalers 6

Minnesota fired 59 shots at Hartford goalie Mike Veisor — the most ever sent at a Whalers netminder. The North Stars built a 6-2 lead after two periods but needed a third-period goal by Al MacAdam to clinch it as the Whalers scored four times in the final 16 minutes. Steve Payne (two goals and an assist) and Bobby Smith (a goal and two assists) each had three points to lead the attack.

"It was one of the craziest games I've ever seen," said North Stars Coach Glen Sonmor. "We got a lesson without losing a point.

"We could not have played better for two periods or worse for one. We overwhelmed them for two periods, then had to hope."

Canucks 5, Nordiques 2

After going seven games without a victory, the Canucks snapped out of their doldrums and now are unbeaten in five straight. Ivan Boldirev led the way with a goal and two assists as the Canucks shut down the Nordiques' vaunted attack, led by the Stastny brothers.

"We wanted to stop the Stastnys and especially their quick passing in front of the net," said Ron Smith, Vancouver's assistant coach who replaced Coach Roger Neilson behind the bench against Quebec. Neilson was in a Toronto hospital for treatment of a hernia.

"This was perhaps our best defensive game of the year," said Smith.

"It is clear that when the Stastny brothers don't score, we don't win," noted Quebec Coach Michel Bergeron.

Blues 4, Red Wings 2

Blues backup goalie Glen Hanlon stymied the Red Wings with 35 saves and Mike Zuke set up two goals for St. Louis, which had lost three in a row.

"A victory is special when it comes after three losses," Hanlon said. "You can't let the team get down anymore.It entered my mind that I had to play well. But it's stupid to say that because you want to win all the time."

Conflicts cause FB changes

Due to a conflict with the University Interscholastic League marching band contest and a volleyball bi-district match, some changes in the ninth and eighth grade and junior varsity football games have been made this week.

In the ninth grade, the Odessa Crockett-Midland Gold game has been switched from Saturday to Thursday at 6:55 p.m. at the Midland Freshman field. The Odessa Nimitz-Midland Lee Maroon contest, a game that will decide the Midland-Odessa conference champion, has been moved to 2 p.m. Saturday from the previously announced 10 a.m. time.

In the eighth grade, Odessa teams Hood and Crockett have been changed from Saturday at 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. the same day. Three games have been moved from Saturday to Thursday. Odessa Bowie will face Goddard at 4 p.m at Goddard field. Thursday and Bonham will face Ector at 4 p.m. in an Odessa matchup. The San Jacinto-Odessa Nimitz game will be played Thursday at 4 p.m. at Permian High School.

In another late change, the Midland Lee junior varsity will face the Midland High JV at 4:30 p.m. Thursday at Memorial Stadium instead of the regular 7 p.m. playing time.

The change was made because the Midland High volleyball team will be playing a bi-district playoff match with Amarillo Tascosa Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the MHS gym.

Garvey files free agency

SAN DIEGO (AP) — First baseman Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers formally filed for free agency Tuesday, according to his agent, Jerry Kapstein.

Garvey, who has played 12 full seasons with the Dodgers and has a career .302 batting average, notified the Major League Players Association of his decision.

"I felt we had to file because our next scheduled meeting (with the Dodgers) is not until Thursday afternoon, which runs us right into the deadline for filing," said Kapstein.

Eligible players who wish to be included in the Nov. 10 re-entry draft must file for free agency by Thursday, Nov. 4. The Dodgers still may sign Garvey up until midnight, Saturday, Nov. 6, or they may retain negotiating rights to him at the draft and then negotiate with him after Nov. 10.

The agent said he had talked with Dodger officials by telephone Monday night.

"We continued our detailed discussions," Kapstein said. "The conversation was businesslike and friendly."

Garvey has played 1,107 consecutive games for the Dodgers, the fourth longest such streak in major league history. He has played in eight All-Star games, compiling a .409 batting average.

Wilkins scores 30 to lead Hawks to 105-88 win over Bullets

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Rookie Dominique Wilkins is considered a potential offensive superstar in the National Basketball Association. Few, however, expect him to shine on defense.

Wilkins, known as the "Human Highlight Film" for his spectacular dunks at the University of Georgia, was brilliant in the Atlanta Hawks' 105-88 victory over the Washington Bullets Tuesday night, scoring 30 points and hitting his last nine shots from the field. He also held veteran forward Greg Ballard, an 18.8 points-per-game scorer last season, to six points.

"I was very pleased with the defensive effort that Dominique put out against a great player like Ballard," Hawks Coach Kevin Loughery said. "He also was hitting his jumper. He played a super pro-type game."

"Dominique had a sensational game," Bullets Coach Gene Shue said. "He played about as well as it's possible for a player to play. He did some spectacular things and he did well on defense, too."

In other NBA games, New Jersey beat San Diego 110-100, Detroit stopped Cleveland 128-119, Kansas City bounced Milwaukee 119-112, Dallas clipped Houston 113-103, Seattle bombed Utah 120-92 and Phoenix edged Portland 92-87.

Wilkins hit his last five shots in the third period and all four he took in the final quarter, when the Bullets never got closer than eight points. Things were going so well for him that he was sorry to see the game end.

"The way we were playing at the end, I wish the game could have continued," Wilkins said. "It got to be a lot more interesting late in the game when we opened things up. But we still have some more work to do."

Nets 110, Clippers 100

San Diego's Randy Smith tied the league record for consecutive games played with his 844th straight appearance, but New Jersey's balanced scoring, led by Darryl Dawkins, overcame the Clippers.

Dawkins, with 20 points before he fouled out, was one of six Nets in double figures. Otis Birdsong and Buck Williams both finished with 17, while Michael Brooks led all scorers with 30 for San Diego.

Smith, who hasn't missed a game since Feb. 18, 1972, can break the consecutive-games record tonight at Philadelphia. Against the Nets, he tied the mark accumulated by Johnny Kerr from 1954-1965.

Pistons 128, Cavaliers 119

Detroit handed Cleveland its 22nd straight loss over two seasons, an NBA record, as Isiah Thomas scored 30 points and John Long added 29.

The Pistons, unbeaten after three games this season, had lost their final 14 games of 1979-80 and their first seven in 1980-81 to hold the previous longest losing streak. The Cavaliers lost 19 in a row to end last season and are now 0-3 this season.

Detroit built 19-point leads on several occasions in the third quarter and had a 107-93 edge going into the final period. Rookie John Bagley and reserve center Paul Mokeski led a spurt that cut the deficit to five points, 124-119, in the final minute, but the rally fell short.

Kings 119, Bucks 112

Kansas City handed Milwaukee its first loss and stayed unbeaten after two games as Eddie Johnson scored a career-high 34 points and pulled down 15 rebounds.

Johnson, a second-year player from Illinois, had 13 points in the third quarter and five in the final 1½ minutes of the game to keep the Kings ahead after the Bucks had cut a 14-point deficit to three.

Sidney Moncrief scored 37 points and Marques Johnson 25 for Milwaukee, and Mike Woodson added 21 for the Kings.

Sonics 120, Jazz 92

Jack Sikma scored 24 points and Seattle never trailed, building leads of 20 points in the first quarter, 26 in the second and 34 in the third against Utah.

The Sonics also got 21 points from Gus Williams and 20 from David Thompson, while Adrian Dantley scored 29 points to pace the Jazz.

Suns 92, Blazers 87

The Suns led 52-34 at intermission, but fell behind 75-74 midway through the final quarter. But a 14-8 spurt gave Phoenix an 88-83 cushion with 1:33 left, and the Trail Blazers didn't get closer than three the rest of the way.

Walter Davis scored 20 points to pace the Suns, while Mychal Thompson and Jim Paxson led Portland with 15 apiece.

Mavericks 113, Rockets 103

Jay Vincent and Rolando Blackman scored 19 points each to lead Dallas over Houston.

The two teams were tied 52-52 at halftime and they traded leads until the Mavericks went ahead to stay at 68-67 on a jumper by Blackman with 5:18 left in the third quarter.

Caldwell Jones had 21 points to lead the Rockets.

Yankees may play some games in Denver next year

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees are considering playing their regularly scheduled home opener in Denver if improvements on Yankee Stadium are not finished on time, a club spokesman said Tuesday.

Bill Bergesch, the Yankees' vice president of baseball operations, said the team has talked with Denver officials, along with officials from New Orleans, about hosting the Yankees series' with the Toronto Blue Jays, beginning on April 11. The Yankees open the 1983 season on the road.

"We've had some discussions along those lines," Bergesch said. "Nothing is definite yet."

When asked if the weather might be too cold to play in Denver in April, Bergesch said: "That's a relative thing. What might be cold to them, might be freezing to us."

Bergesch said he did not know what improvements the New York City was making on Yankee Stadium. However, if the work is not finished on schedule, the team would be forced to play a home-away-from-home series.

The Yankees have received tentative approval from the American League to play in New Orleans, if Yankee Stadium is not ready. However, at the owners' meeting in Chicago Monday, owner George Steinbrenner hinted that the Yankees may opt to play in Denver.

"The city of New Orleans has changed its offer and improved its offer significantly, but I'd like to see what Denver would do for a championship series," Steinbrenner said.

Bob Fishel, assistant to AL President Lee MacPhail, said Tuesday that Steinbrenner has not received league permission to play in Denver. He added it was unlikely the league allow the Yankees to play one series in New Orleans and another in Denver.

A&M golf tournament scheduled

The Midland A&M Club is sponsoring a best ball scramble golf tournament to raise money for the A&M scholarship fund. It will be 10:30 a.m. Saturday at Hogan Park golf course.

Participants will be charged $20, which does not include a cart. The tournament is open to the public, and prizes will be awarded.

To make reservations before the 5 p.m. Friday deadline, call Larry Witten at 683-3111 or J.C. Raney at 683-2842.

SWTS' Jacoby named LSC player of week

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Ron Jacoby, a senior quarterback who rallied Southwest Texas State from a 24-point deficit to beat East Texas State 38-34 Saturday, has been named player of the week in the Lone Star Conference.

Levi Morrison, a 6-1, 211-pound senior linebacker for Howard Payne, was named defensive player of the week.

Morrison made 19 tackles, two unassisted, and recovered one fumble in the Yellow Jackets' win over Sam Houston State.

Morrison set three Southwest Texas school records in the Bobcat victory with 23 pass completions, 38 attempts and 57 total plays.

USSR beats Pepperdine, 116-111

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Voldemaras Khomichus scored 26 points to lead a balanced Soviet Union attack as the USSR National Team defeated Pepperdine University 116-111.

The contest Tuesday night was the opener of a 16-game tour by the Soviets, who return to action tonight at the University of Oregon.

Arvidas Sabonis added 24 points and pulled down a game-high 14 rebounds for the Soviets. Sergey Jovajsha had 18 points for the winners and teammates Valdis Valters and Alexandr Belostenny had 16 points apiece.

Dane Suttle led Pepperdine with 34 points. Orlando Phillips added 33 points for the Waves. Bill Sadler had 26 points and pulled down 11 rebounds for the losers.

Benirschke has surgery on wrist

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Chargers kicker Rolf Benirschke has undergone surgery night for a broken left wrist suffered in a game of tennis, according to a nursing supervisor at Sharp Memorial Hospital.

Benirschke, 27, booted 19 field goals for the Chargers in the last regular season of the National Football League.

There was no word on how he suffered the injury.

Midlander's home design wins

AUSTIN — Twenty-eight architectural projects, including one by the Midland firm of Frank Welch Associates, have been selected as winners from a field of 290 entries in the Texas Society of Architects' (TSA) 1982 Design Awards Program.

The awards, to be presented during TSA's 43rd Annual Meeting Thursday-Saturday in Fort Worth, represent the work of 24 firms from Houston, Dallas, Austin, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Midland and Fayetteville.

Austin-based TSA is a 4,000-member regional component of the American Institute of Architects (AIA), which is headquartered in Washington, D. C.

Entries in TSA's 1982 program were judged in three categories: general design/adaptive reuse, historic preservation and interior architecture.

Frank Welch & Associates won for its project in San Antonio, the Cliff Morton residence, located on a "table" at the highest point of 40 wooded, hilly acres near San Antonio. The home was organized in three parts, each a linear gabled form connected to one another by flat sections, which can be closed as galleries or opened as porches. One gabled form contains the garage, servant's quarters, kitchen and utility room; another the library and family room; the third bedrooms and baths. A game room faces the house across a pool and patio, which are encircled by a low stone wall. The structure is wood frame with native limestone, with a roof clad in standing-seam copper. Interior finishes board, limestone and cedar. Concrete columns support the porch and gallery roofs.

Landscape architect was H. Dan Heyn of Dallas.

Jurors for the general design/adaptive reuse and historic preservation categories were: Harld Fredenburgh, an associate partner with I. M. Pei & Partners in New York; William Houseman, Editor of Architecture Minnesota magazine in Minneapolis, Minn. Abraham Zabludovsky, Mexico City architect and educator. For interiors, the jurors were: Andrew Belschner, a partner in the San Francisco firm Robinson Mills and Williams; Kenneth E. Johnson, President of the Interior design firm, ISD Incorporated in Chicago, and Christine F. Salmon, FAIA, a patner in the stillwater, OKla., firm Salmon and Salmon Architects.

Optimism prompts rally

By The Associated Press

The stock market is rallying again amid optimism that interest rates will keep falling, and government reports show improvement in home sales and factory orders — two weak segments of the economy.

Stock prices rose across the board Tuesday in surprisingly heavy election-day trading of nearly 105 million shares on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, the best-known measure of the market, climbed 16.38 points to 1,022.08. At one point, the blue-chip average, which rose 13.98 points Monday, was up more than 26 points.

Sales of new single-family homes rose in September to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 464,000 from 375,000 in August, the departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development reported. It was the highest sales rate since May 1981 and private and government economists said it reflected recent sharp declines in mortgage interest rates.

The Commerce Department also reported new orders for manufactured goods rose 0.7 percent in September after falling 2.7 percent in August.

"Both reports obviously suggest the economy is strengthening," said Steven Dobson, a senior economist at Bank of America in San Francisco. "Neither figure gets me overly excited."

Dobson said he expects a weak recovery from recession, but Robert Ortner, chief economist at the Commerce Department, called the latest figures "a lot better than the uniformly poor reports we were getting earlier this year."

"A belief in lower interest rates continued to trigger investor action," said analyst Monte Gordon at the New York investment firm of Dreyfus Corp. "There is a sense the third quarter may be the bottom, the trough (of the recession), and we may see improvement in the economy."

In other economic news:

—Honeywell Inc., a leading computer company, said it will reduce its work force by about 1,850 employees through layoffs, early retirements and transfers. James J. Renier, Honeywell vice chairman and president of its information systems divisions, said the reduction is necessary to improve Honeywell's competitive position.

—A U.S. trade negotiator says no progress was made in three of four sets of talks with Japan in the last two weeks and warned that U.S. "frustration" with Japan's trade barriers has reached a "critical stage." The negotiator, who briefed reporters on condition he remain anonymous, said the United States won't agree to further talks on two of three topics — tobacco products and beef and citrus products — until it sees signs of "further movement on the Japanese side."

—Kaiser Steel Corp. has asked its steelworkers, already beset by widespread layoffs, to accept a 25 percent wage and benefit package cut. The company asked the United Steelworkers of America Local 2860 to take a $2 hourly wage cut and to eliminate other benefits amounting to $3.66 per hour, said Kaiser spokesman Joseph L. Clark in Fontana, Calif. For the first nine months of 1982, Kaiser has lost $31 million.

Japanese plan doesn't always work

By ANDREW JAFFE
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Quality circles — the Japanese technique of organizing workers in small groups to give them a voice in the organization of their workplace — are being introduced into companies all over Southern California. But they don't always work.

The idea seems foolproof: let a group of workers examine their own productivity, and they will come up with ways of doing their job better. But several California companies that rushed to establish circles found morale and productivity actually go down because the circles they set up were poorly led, lacked management support and took on tasks they were not equipped to handle.

"Although the promise of 'QC' may be great in U.S. companies," writes University of Michigan sociologist Robert E. Cole, "the pitfalls are formidable."

The classic model for failure most often cited is the experience of Lockheed Missile and Space Co. in Sunnyvale, Calif., the first U.S. firm to try to adopt a full circle concept.

In 1973, missile and space division manufacturing manager Wayne Rieker headed a Lockheed study team to Japan. They were so impressed that they returned to Sunnyvale and began introducing the circle concept to managers and supervisors.

The first Lockheed circle was started in October 1974. At their zenith in 1977 there were 30.

Rieker's figures were impressive: the company estimated the circles had saved it $3 million. And the number of defects per 1,000 hours caused by manufacturing declined by two-thirds. But when Rieker retired in 1977 and his aides left the company to start consulting firms specializing in the new concept, Lockheed's program all but collapsed.

"A lot of people dropped out," says Howard Tamler, a senior human factors engineer at Lockheed/Sunnyvale responsible for trying to salvage the program. "The major reason so many circles disbanded was that they were not getting results. They could solve problems in principle, but they were not able to implement solutions because of a lack of management support."

Tamler said the failure of the concept left a residue of cynicism among many Lockheed employees who had been involved in circles. "A lot of people feel they were duped by management. They were told that their circle would be given a lot of support, clout and money to get things done, but it wasn't," he said.

"Some cynicism and bitterness was directed at the concept of participative management. But in fact the QC didn't work because it wasn't supported. They have to be implemented correctly. The real issue is how do you change people's management style so they can work this way."

Tamler's group has been able to resurrect the concept to a limited degree. Today, he and his professional staff of social psychologists are available to managers who want to use the circles to solve workplace problems.

He admits the new Lockheed circles are not really quality circles at all, but ad hoc groups, with tasks and membership designated by management. In addition, Tamler says the new circles are often composed of people from different disciplines, rather than from a single work area. Virtually no special training is provided circle leaders, though Tamler does assign one of his behavioral scientists to each circle as a "facilitator."

In marked contrast to Sunnyvale's marred experience, Lockheed California in Burbank is starting up quality circles — or so-called "employee participation circles" — along more classic lines.

Monte Elchoness, circle coordinator, said in the year since he started the Burbank program, about 33 circles have been established. Of those, only two have disbanded, Elchoness said, both because of layoffs in L1011 jumbo jet production — not due to problems with the circles themselves.

Elchoness has insisted that all circle members be volunteers and that supervisors undergo a four-day training program before leading a circle. In addition, he assigns one of his own professionals as a "facilitator" to lighten the technical work of the circle (writing minutes, arranging technical studies, coordinating with other departments).

Don Dewar, one of the Lockheed counselors who helped to introduce circles to the Sunnyvale facility and then left the company when support for them dried up, noted that the tendency in the U.S. is to consider the circles as a means to increase productivity.

"It's important for companies to look on circles as a people-building process, not a people-using process," said Dewar, who now runs a consulting firm. "The first thing I do now when asked to come into a plant is get management's committment that nobody will lose employment because of a quality circle idea."

World's largest solar plant dedicated

"This technology is a piece of America's tomorrow," Rep. Jerry Lewis, R-Calif., said at the official dedication Monay of the Solar One power plant.

The brief ceremony, which drew about 500 invited guests to a blue-and-white tent pitched alongside the High Desert power plant 12 miles southeast of Barstow, was filled with phrases seldom heard since the energy crisis of the mid-1970s faded from the front pages of newspapers.

"This is a giant step toward energy independence," said William R. Gould, chairman and chief executive officer of Southern California Edison Co. "A world desperately dependent upon uncertain oil and gas supplies will learn from Solar One much about the promise of alternative and renewable resources, whose implications are enormous."

The $142 million demonstration plant was built over the past two years with $120 million from the U.S. Energy Department, $17 million from SoCal Edison, which also provided the 130-acre site, and about $4.5 million from the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, which gets 20 percent of the output. The plant's 10 megawatts of electricity would meet the needs of about 5,000 homes — at least when the sun shines.

Outside the tent, the 45-foot receiver atop the Solar One's power tower was glowing white hot Monday as 1,818 shiny mirror modules, each 23 feet square, concentrated the bright desert sun on the tower's water-filled tubes.

Heated to nearly 1,000 degrees Fahrenheit, water flashed to steam, raced along pipes to spin turbine blades on the desert floor and pour electricity into SoCal Edison's power lines.

The computer-guided mirrors, arrayed around the tower, began aiming sunlight last April to run electric lights, toasters and televisions in Southern California.

Jan W. Mares, acting undersecretary of the Energy Department, said Solar One, through its first six months, "has performed exceptionally well, meeting or exceeding its design goals with a minimum ... of the glitches that are inevitable" in the startup of an untested technology.

He pointed out that the giant laboratory, which will provide real-world data on the reliability, efficiency and cost of solar electricity, was largely provided by federal dollars. The next step is up to private utilities, he said, and "industry may use this system as a stepping stone to larger, more advanced solar energy systems."

Gould said SoCal Edison already is considering a new solar facility 10 times larger than Solar One with a capacity equal to about a tenth of a modern nuclear power plant.

Proposals already have been received and "the tests performed here will determine for Edison whether construction of an advanced 100-megawatt solar generating station will be a practical option," he said.

"The entire world is watching what we are doing here," he said.

Midland firm files bankruptcy

LHG Resources Inc., a Midland-based business involved in oil and gas exploration and development, has filed for voluntary bankruptcy in Federal Bankruptcy Court in San Antonio.

The company and its principals have been named defendants in more than 10 civil suits filed in state court in Midland.

"Our position is no comment," LHG's attorney, San Antonio lawyer Tom S. Hoekstra, told The Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Dollar trading mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar turned in a mixed performance against key currencies in early trading today, dipping against the Swiss franc, as money markets split over whether U.S. interest rates will go up or not.

Gold prices opened higher, but eased in what brokers called a "nervous profit-taking."

Dealers reported the U.S. mid-term elections so far have had little impact on the markets. But many believe a downturn in interest rates will continue after the polling and the Federal Reserve will lower its key discount rate in mid-November. This could prompt a decline in the value of the dollar.

The Tokyo market was closed for a holiday. The dollar was quoted in London at 276.225 yen, slightly up from Tuesday's late rate in Tokyo of 275.15 yen.

In London, the British pound opened at $1.6835, unchanged from Tuesday's late rate. It sagged later to $1.6820.

Other Europeas rates compared to Tuesday's late levels were:

2.5487 German marks, little changed from 2.5482

2.1895 Swiss francs, down from 2.19325.

2.7715 Dutch guilders, up from 2.76625.

1.22145 Canadian dollars, slightly down from 1.22245.

The price of gold opened in London at $435.25 an ounce, $1.75 up on Tuesday's close. The center's five main bullion brokers later set the recommended morning trading price at $433.50.

Canadian government enters labor dispute

OTTAWA (AP) — The federal government stepped into a wage dispute at seven major British Columbia ports Tuesday night, introducing legislation that would force an end to the lockout of 3,500 longshoremen.

The action came sooner than expected. Labor Minister Charles Caccia had said earlier that the legislation would be introduced Wednesday if the ports, under a two-week-old lockout, were not back in business by then.

He also said the government will impose federal wage guides if the longshoremen and the B.C. Maritime Employers Association have not negotiated a new contract by Monday.

It was the first time the government has threatened to use the federal wage guides in a strictly private sector dispute.

Wage guides for federal employees announced in the June budget call for two-year contracts with a 6 percent pay raise the first year and 5 percent the next.

Neither side in the dock dispute has come out with a specific wage proposal, but both reject the 23 percent increase over two years suggested by a federal mediator. Several non-monetary issues also are in dispute.

City Oks 47 new projects

The city of Midland issued 47 building permits in the week Oct. 25 through 29, for construction and alterations valued at $2,675,168. This brings the month's total to $7,816,752, and the total for the year to date to $240,523,885.

Topping the list of commercial projects was a permit issued to Area Builders for Casbeer & Associates, to alter a 25,100 square-foot, four-story office building at 401 E. Illinois. Estimated value of the project was $1,336,276.

Permits for new construction or commercial alteration also went to: Rod Stephenson, 123 N. Colorado, alter first floor for banking offices, $250,000; Brice Construction, 130 Spring Park Dr., lay foundation for two-story office building, $50,000; Dennis Swindle, remodel the old Sambo's Restaurant at 3201 Andrews Highway for a Grandy's Restaurant, $175,000; Royalty Homes, 3226 Dentcrest, field office, $10,000; Boschtex, 307 E. Texas, remodel for Planned Parenthood, $6,500; G. Haislett, 4B Imperial Shopping Center, $3,500; Claude Martin & Sons, 305 N. Pecos, office lease space, Hightower Building, $3,847; R. W. Barker, 1707 N. Big Spring, $8,500; Builders Interest, office lease space, 4305 N. Garfield, $52,800; RJR Enterprises, 4700 W. Dengar, construction shack, $10,000; G & M Pump, 5406 and 5408 Thomason, $2,000, install gas tank and pumps for Colonial Food Store; Tommy Service, 3015 Rankin Highway, $66,800; and Rod Stephenson, 2803 N. Big Spring, alteration, $7,000.

The city issued permits for 10 new single family residences with construction values estimated between $33,000 and $98,800, and for nine residential alteration projects.

Independent oilmen are just like J.R., right?

By MARK IVEY

DALLAS — Independent oilmen are just like J.R. Ewing on TV, right? Sinister, conniving, philandering, cigar puffing, hard drinkers raking in the cash, right?

Wrong. Well, they do make good money, according to a recent study by Texas A&M and Korn-Ferry International, an executive search firm. But the study also found that average independent oilman is a hard working, meticulous businessman who doesn't smoke and drinks only moderately.

The survey shows that the average senior-level independent oil executive makes about $137,000 a year, including bonuses, and is distinctly different in several ways from his Fortune 500 counterpart.

For example, compared to the average Fortune 500 senior executive, the oilman takes fewer vacations, retires later and grew up in smaller towns. They also come up through the ranks in a different fashion.

"We were struck by the fact that most of these men came up through technical areas, like geology, and then learned the numbers or business side later on the job," said Larry Snider, manager of Korn-Ferry's energy division in Houston.

"Whereas the Fortune 500 types were often whiz kids, who were run through professional management programs and groomed for management, the oilman actually started out in the field ... he had to start out often babysitting the wells, doing the dirty work."

Of the 1,630 independents polled in the survey, 794 responded, giving the pollsters a 49 percent response rate.

The survey sheds some light on the nation's 15,000 independent oilmen, who often are mistakenly described as similar to the usually more conservative executives who run the nation's major oil companies.

The image of the independent is further distorted, according to industry spokesmen, by the popular TV soap opera "Dallas," in which the star of the show, J.R., is a ruthless oilman.

That is an image the industry would like to see go away — but one that has become entrenched in the public's mind worldwide, said Gene Wright, an independent oilman and president of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

"We were in Johannesburg, South Africa, a while back and it was amazing how many of the people judged Dallas and oilmen by what they saw on that show," he said. "They wanted to know if Dallas and Texas oilmen were really like what they saw on the show. They wanted to know if we all drove Cadillacs and were rich and if everyone down here lived on ranches like J.R.'s.

But while the oilmen are not flourishing J.R.-style, they're hardly hurting either: of the 708 oilmen who responded to the survey concerning salary, about 31 percent (217) made a base salary of between $76,000 and $100,000 a year. Only 5 percent (35) made more than $200,000 a year. The average base salary was $110,000, while the average cash bonus was $27,300.

The survey shows that 53 percent of the oilmen grew up in towns of 25,000 or fewer people and started off in the business in geology (37 percent) or engineering (35 percent). Only 7 percent began in finance or accounting, and only 42 percent have worked for major oil companies — meaning the independents are growing their own crop of executives.

The survey shows that independents are a rather homogeneous group on the personal level: 99 percent are males, 98 percent are white, 92 percent are married and 80 percent are Protestants. Only 29 percent of the oilman smoke. The average executive drinks only eight drinks a week; 34 percent said they drink more often, however.

The average independent said he averages 53 hours of work a week, and about a third say they take their work home with them.

"Most of these guys are low-key, low-profile family men, and they've worked hard to get to where they are," said H.B. Juengling, oil analyst with Schneider, Bernet and Hickman in Dallas. "They may live in big houses and drive big cars, but they don't flaunt it ... There are exceptions, of course."

Among the other findings of the survey:

— The average independent oil and gas firm employs 384 people and has a median production of 900 barrels of oil a day and 6 million cubic feet of gas a day. The majority are exploration and production firms, with most of their operatios in Texas.

— The average executive is a 51-year-old, white male Republican who has three children and is conservative on both social and fiscal issues. He also has a larger investment in his own company and is more concerned with his employees on a personal level.

"They have to be more people-oriented," said Snider. "The success of their company depends heavily on the landman, the geologist, and all the way up the line."

— Sixty percent see their industry shrinking in size over the next five years as a major shakeout of weaker companies occurs.

— Only 12 percent of the sample have worked more that 25 years with their current company, compared to 31 percent for senior Fortune 500 executives. Moreover, 41 percent have five or fewer years with their current employer.

— Eighty-five percent of the independents say they are satisfied with their jobs, with 60 percent planning to work beyond age 65.

Nuke plant plans scrapped

GAFFNEY, S.C. (AP) — After spending $68 million on two of three nuclear power plants at the Cherokee Station here, Duke Power Co. scrapped the construction plans Tuesday.

The utility's board of directors ordered Units 2 and 3 canceled at the station, where limited construction continues on Unit 1. Only preliminary excavation had been done for the two units.

"The need for these units has stretched out beyond our current planning horizon," said W.H. Owen, Duke executive vice president in charge of engineering and construction.

The two units were delayed in 1980 and 1981 because of lower electrical demand expectations, difficulties in attracting capital, continuing high inflation and inadequate earnings, the company said.

The complex of three 1,280-megawatt units in Cherokee County was announced in 1974.

"Work on Unit 1 will proceed at a limited pace as we continue to evaluate expectations with regard to financing and regulation," Owen said. "We need the unit to meet customer demand for electricity in the mid-1990s but sound business judgment precludes committing the necessary financial and personnel resources at this time.

Square Deal Productions Inc. of New York computer-designed and privately minted the square quarter in an effort to dramatize the impact of current fiscal policies on the United States, according to a spokesperson for the product. The coin was plotted by computer and is minted by the Medallic Art Co. of Danbury, Conn. It is available in two sizes: one-quarter ounce of pure silver for $37 and one-half ounce of pure silver for $47.

Safety-minded door design has legal problems

Hearst Feature Service

PASADENA, Calif. — Brian Leahy has a bulletproof revolving door that will stop a terrorist in his tracks, but he can't sell it to American airports and banks because of U.S. laws against unlawful detention.

Leahy is chairman of the board of Ress International, which is manufacturing a weapon-sensitive revolving door that locks when a person secreting a gun or heavy metal object(s) enters. Banks in Spain and Italy have bought the doors to catch bank robbers on their way into the bank, but Europeans don't have to worry about laws and civil suits for accidentally detaining someone with a travel iron in a briefcase.

"Unlike Europeans who might detain and search you and later apologize profusely if they held you by mistake, here you'd get slapped with a lawsuit for $2 million," says Leahy. "But some disaster will change that here, I'm, sorry to say. And when it does, the technology exists to prevent it from happening again."

The company started in 1981 with three disgruntled engineers who simply wanted to modernize revolving doors. But once they started trying to computerize the doors, they realized the potential for using them as a security device. Ress president John Parcelle he said the company has 300 back orders.

The FBI has purchased seven Detectadors, Parcelle said, but the bureau is keeping secret, even from Ress, where they are to be installed. The doors also have been ordered for nuclear plants around the country and for some Air Force installations, Parcelle said.

The Detectador, which ranges in price from $35,000 to $350,000, has metal detectors in an entry area, much like airport metal detectors, that register when a heavy metal object passes between them. The doors then automatically lock, trapping the person in the entry area or in the revolving door itself.

For explosives, Ress has another detector, built into the ceiling of the door. When a person enters the door, it locks for 10 seconds while an overhead fan brushes the person with air. If the detector "smells" explosives, the doors will remain locked until security personnel take over.

Airports have shied away from the doors because of potential lawsuits, but Leahy said U.S. Customs might be able to get around this problem because the government has jurisdiction in customs areas which overrides normal protection against unlawful search and seizure.

"It's not that security isn't taken seriously in the U.S., but it's not taken as seriously as in Europe," Parcelle said.

The company makes another revolving door, called a Securitidor, already in use at the American Airlines baggage claim area in Los Angeles International Airport to prevent unwanted traffic. The door permits only one-way traffic, but has a breakaway system permitting free traffic in case of fire or emergency.

"The doors will save American Airlines about $1 million for the coming year in guard costs on the baggage area alone," said Leahy.

With the addition of more sophisticated equipment, such as identity card readers or devices that can sense a palm print, the Securitidor also serves as a control system to prevent non-authorized personnel from entering an area.

"During the day the door is a door," said Leahy. "After hours it becomes a one-way or card-access-only door. Add a metal detector, and you can trap a thief or someone with a gun."

Many shipping lanes run to, from Duluth

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Like the fingers of a hand, the railroads and truck routes stretch out from Duluth, the innermost seaport in the nation.

The hand reaches across the upper Midwest, giving the farms and taconite and coal mines a way to send their products abroad or to the East.

Grain comes from Minnesota and the Dakotas. Coal comes from Montana. Most of the port's business is shipping taconite pellets mined from the Iron Range of northern Minnesota to eastern steel mills.

"This is a grocery store port," said Duluth Seaway Port Authority Executive Director Davis Helberg. "We probably handle a greater variety of grains than any port in the country — wheat, corn, soybeans, barley, rye, flax, oats, sunflower seeds."

The Duluth-Superior ports also ship large amounts of dry milk in the Food for Peace program and stacks of baler and binder twine for Midwest farmers — imported from Brazil and Mexico — are stored in a sprawling warehouse.

The ports once imported coal. Now it's an export, with low-sulfur Montana coal shipped via the Midwest Energy Terminal in Superior to Detroit Edison's electric generating plant at Detroit.

Grain or other cargoes are shipped from many Midwest states, but about 55 percent of the grain originates in North Dakota and 30 percent in Minnesota, says Helberg.

Midlander wins place on board

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Midland County voted for its own in the State Board of Education District 21 race, placing J. Murphy Horton 7,605 votes ahead of William Jennings Teel of Big Lake.

Final results in Midland helped push Horton to the state board with 13,166 votes. Teel garnered 5,561 and Keen, of Mertzon, 552.

Horton carried 25 of the 29 precincts in Midland County in addition to the absentee votes, in which he captured 1,818 votes to Teel's 525 and Keen's 41. The four precincts he lost were Precincts 208, 304, 305 and 306, located in south and east Midland, which received heavy Democratic voting.

As votes were tallied late Tuesday night, an awakened Horton told The Midland Reporter-Telegram that if the margin he was building held, fine; if not, c'est la vie.

"God willing, I'll win," he said, sleepily. "If not, that's the way it was meant to be. But, I'd sure like to have the opportunity to serve (on the board)."

By 11:30 p.m. Tuesday, the Secretary of State's Election Central reported Horton with 52,078 votes and Teel with 40,464. With 250 of the 358 precincts in, Horton had 54.46 percent of the tallied vote and Teel had 42.32 percent.

According to Betty Cavness, treasurer of Teel's campaign, information obtained from Austin at about

J. Murphy Horton

3:30 a.m. today reportedly showed Teel behind by about 10,000 votes with 72 percent of the votes in.

"They told us there were about 13,000 votes still out," she said early this morning.

By 7:30 a.m. today, Horton was a little more alert, but still in the dark as to his position. The latest reports from The Associated Press did not include tabulations on the board of education for the 21st District, although results for several of the other 26 districts electing members to serve on the board had been reported.

When asked if the waiting was becoming tiresome, Horton replied simply, with a laugh, "No not really. If I win, I win. If I don't, I don't."

Tallying the vote

Lois Carpenter, a member of the League of Women Voters of Midland, waits patiently as a voter fills out one of the questionnaires at Jane Long Elementary School Tuesday morning. The questionnaires were part of a nationwide poll. The LWV collected data which was transmitted to network anchorpersons for use in their election coverage.

LWV helps get results to network TV

Voter opinions and balloting results from Midland and across the country coursed through the electronic veins of network television computer systems Tuesday, providing anchorpersons at NBC and ABC with ammunition as they attacked the task of election analysis.

In Midland, League of Women Voters (LWV) members staffed several key precincts scientifically defined by ABC, and relayed vote totals in the races for governor, U.S. senator and U.S. representative.

NBC also gathered results from Midland on the election for governor and U.S. senator, along with answers to a variety of multiple-choice questions designed to indicate voter attitudes and trends. The network conducted similar surveys, targeted at specific political races, in 12 other states.

Roan Conrad, NBC's director of special political coverage, said in a telephone interview Tuesday the network's election day voter polls would likely reach more than 36,000 people in an attempt to give network political analysts information necessary "to flesh out the raw results" of the 1982 election.

Depending upon the returns received, Conrad said survey results could have been used to predict victories in the gubernatorial and Congressional races. Conrad said, however, that no such prediction would be made prior to polls closing in Texas.

He said the NBC poll has a 3 percent margin for error, and network analysts weigh the numbers — along with past political data — carefully before calling a race.

Conrad explained that NBC anchor emeritus, John Chancellor, was assigned the task of explaining victories, defeats and trends in terms of demographic statistics, political allegiances and other contributing factors.

Midland voters were posed 37 questions, including queries about their preferences in the gubernatorial and Congressional races. Voters were also asked their opinions on bilingual education in state schools, import trade restrictions, the Reagan administration, defense spending and a nuclear freeze. Race, income, age, job category and gender also were covered in the survey.

He said combining results from key precincts across the state helped provide "a mosaic that's representative of the state of Texas." The findings could then be used for predicting winners and losers — and the whys and wherefores — long before ballot counting was officially complete.

In Midland, NBC polls were conducted in precincts 105 and 404, at Jane Long Elementary School and the Midland College Student Center.

LWV members worked two stints — one morning and one afternoon — at each precinct, approaching every seventh voter emerging from the polls with a questionnaire.

Midland, state OK amendments

Midland County voters avidly approved, as did voters statewide, all six proposed constitutional amendments when they pulled levers and closed curtains in the 29 polls scattered throughout the city and county Tuesday.

Favoring Amendment No. 1, voters approved repealing the state property tax by 11,183 to 3,954 votes. The tax, which had been used for funding new construction at 17 universities, was 10 cents per $100 valuation. By approving the amendment, voters eliminated the last remaining state property tax. Counties now will be allowed to retain any delinquent taxes collected after the repeal and the Legislature will distribute the balance of taxes collected before the repeal and will authorize the distributions of the tax receipts to be spent for construction or repair at the 17 universities.

Amendment No. 2 authorizes the Legislature to provide assistance through the appropriations process to needy persons and to place a ceiling on payments for needy dependent children at one percent of the state budget. Although the proposal does not mean there will be an increase in Aid to Families with Dependent Children, by tying the ceiling to a percentage of the state budget the program's limits may expand in proportion to the budget. If the federal government reduces or eliminates AFDC funding, the program still will be able to operate in the state. The amendment was approved by a 8,698 to 6,355 vote.

While families and individuals have been exempt from property taxes on the first $30,000 and $15,000, respectively, worth of farm and ranch equipment, Texans also voted Tuesday to apply the exemption to corporations and partnerships. In Midland County, Amendment No. 3 was approved 9,519 to 5,353. The amendment should have little effect on tax revenue since, according to a 1979 State Property Tax Board survey, farm implements accounted for only .2 percent of school districts' taxable property.

Amendment No. 4, authorizing the Legislature to provide terms not to exceed four years for members of governing boards of certain water districts and conservation and reclamation districts, was passed by Midland voters 11,630 to 3,119. Because terms for water district directors are not formally set, they generally serve two-year terms. Passage of this amendment authorizes the Legislature to set the terms to no more than four years, eliminating annual elections for the staggered, two-year terms, which should alleviate election costs and, hopefully, increase participation at the polls.

Voters in Tarrant and Bee counties will be allowed to eliminate the office of county treasurer and pass all duties on to the responsibility of the county auditor, due to approval of Amendment No. 5. By merging the offices, the overlapping of functions will be eliminated and money will be saved. Midland voters approved this amendment by an 8,734 to 4,187 vote.

Midland voters agreed with the majority of voting Texans to increase the maximum interest rate allowed on state general obligation bonds from a weighted average annual interest rate of 6 percent to 12 percent. By voting 9,217 to 5,148, Midland County citizens indicated they felt that in the current bond market, bonds could not be sold at 6 percent, and since interest rates are unlikely to fall, the interest ceiling was needed to continue financing needed programs already approved by voters. Bonds affected will be water development, water quality enhancement, park development

Tom Loeffler

Loeffler wins state House seat

Unlike many Republicans in Texas and throughout the country who saw the seats for which they were running grabbed out of their hands by Democrats, Tom Loeffler of Hunt sailed through this election as if he were on a sailboat with the right breeze at his back.

Although this will be the first term for Loeffler to represent Midland, which was shoved into his 21st District during last spring's redistricting plan, the Republican could easily have been mistaken for a native son as he took 15,072 votes in Midland County. With 20,038 votes cast in that race, 4,648 went to Democrat Charles S. Stough of Boerne and 318 to Libertarian candidate Jeffrey J. Brown.

Stough, however, discovered after the primary that he doesn't live in the 21st District; he lives in the 23rd

State norm not so in Midland

Republican leaders claimed they put up the best slate of candidates on state races, but the public didn't think so. And while some theorized this may not have been the year for anyone to run as a Republican, others said it wasn't that — it just wasn't the year for Republicans to win.

But Republicans who lost statewide campaigns could take solace in the results from Midland County as voters in this Republican oasis gave them a majority in every race.

Jim Collins, a congressman from Dallas who tried to wrestle the U.S. Senate seat from Democrat Lloyd Bentsen, grabbed two fistfuls of votes from Midland County compared to Bentsen's one fistful. The vote was 14,584 for the Republican and 7,119 for Bentsen. John Ford, Libertarian candidate, received 204 votes while Lineaus Lorette of the Citizens Party took 27.

Gov. Bill Clements, who four years ago won the race to become the first Republican governor in Texas in 100 years, lost to Democrat Mark White statewide. Midland voters, however, overwhelmingly endorsed Clements for a second term with 15,762 votes going his way. White garnered only 6,011 of the Midlanders' votes. Libertarian candidate David Hutzelman took 197 votes while Bob Poteet of the Citizens' Party clinched 35 votes.

George Strake, who lost by a wide margin to Democratic incumbent Bill Hobby in the lieutenant governor's race, carried Midland County with 14,232 votes. Hobby took in 7,039 while Libertarian Laurel Kay Freeman walked off with 255 votes.

In the attorney general's race, Republican Bill Meier took 13,178 votes locally while Democrat Jim Mattox garnered 7,226. Libertarian Katherine Youngblood took in 376 votes.

Mike Richards, who tried unsuccessfully to unseat Bob Bullock from the state comptroller's chair, won in Midland County with 14,301 votes. Bullock clinched 6,521 votes while Libertarian candidate Janet Tlapek walked off with 307 votes.

Allen Clark — a former banker, member of the governor's staff and Vietnam War veteran — took almost twice as many votes as his Democratic opponent, Ann Richards of Austin. The vote was 13,171 for Clark and 7,198 for Richards. Libertarian Alma Kucymbala received 278 votes. Clark, a resident of Austin, before entering the election was president of three businesses in Midland. He resigned those posts to become a consultant while campaigning for the treasurer's office.

Woody Glasscock, former mayor of Hondo, received more than double the votes for land commissioner as did his Democratic opponent Garry Mauro. The Republican clinched 15,532 while 6,258 votes wandered Mauro's way. Charles Fuller with the Libertarian Party received 382 votes.

Fred Thornberry, agriculture professor at Texas A&M University, barely got a majority of votes in Midland County as he outdid Democrat Jim Hightower by a tally of 12,241 to 10,034. Libertarian Stanley Keen took 204 votes.

Republican John Thomas Henderson did very little campaigning for the post on the Railroad Commission, but he took a plurality of votes in Midland County over incumbent Jim Nugent with a count of 10,760 to 9,382.

And John Bates, GOP representative for State Supreme Court, Place 1, took a majority with 13,277 votes to 6,133 for his Democratic opponent, Ted Robertson.

Ray Moses, Republican candidate for Place 1 judge on the state Court of Criminal Appeals, won Midland County's support by receiving 11,946 votes to Democrat Chuck Miller's 6,667 votes.

Area results unsurprising

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Tuesday's election was anti-climactic in most counties in close proximity to Midland, as the general absence of Republican opponents left the winners of last spring's Democratic Primary without opposition.

Only the Dawson County Judge's race produced a Democrat-Republican shootout, with Democrat Glenn "Bottles" White handily defeating GOP nominee Gerald Parsons, 2,261-1,574.

No Republican candidates were listed on the ballot in local races in Reagan County, but a write-in candidate upset the Democratic incumbent in the County Commissioner, Precinct 4 race. Thomas Strube polled 159 signatures to oust Wayne M. Dolan, who received 124 votes.

Another write-in candidate in Reagan County, Pauline Stout, won the Justice of the Peace post in Precinct 1 as no candidates were named on the ballot.

ANDREWS COUNTY

County Judge: Less Brown, Democrat, 2,245.

County Clerk: James Craddock, Democrat, incumbent, 2,322.

District Clerk: Imogene Tate, Democrat, 2,214.

County Treasurer: Reader Price, Democrat, incumbent, 2,274.

Commissioner, Pct. 2: W. G. "Dub" Hathcock, Democrat, incumbent, 860.

Commissioner, Pct. 4: Willard

DEATHS

Vernon A. Qualls

Rosary for Vernon A. Qualls, 75, of 3321 W. Michigan Ave. will be recited at 7:30 p.m. today at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. Funeral mass will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at St. Ann's Catholic Church with Fr. Cliff Blackburn officiating. Burial will be at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Qualls died Tuesday morning in a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born April 19, 1907, in Springdale, Ark. He attended school in Springdale and one year at the University of Arkansas. He served seven years in the U.S. Army Signal Corps. He married Marie Malaby Oct. 9, 1931.

He was employed in 1934 by the predecessor agency of what is now the Federal Aviation Administration. He served in many capacities as the federal airways system developed. He received many awards of outstanding achievements in electronics development. He moved to Midland in 1953 as district supervisor of airways facilities maintenance for West Texas and New Mexico until his retirement in 1962.

He was a member of the Midland Amateur Radio Club, served as president of the Permian Basin Repeater Club and was widely known throughout the world of amateur radio. He was awarded Life Member of the Pioneers of the Airways and was a member of St. Ann's Catholic Church.

The family has requested that memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, 79702.

Survivors include his wife, two daughters, Mrs. John Kropp of Dallas and Mrs. J.W. Clowers of Midland; two sisters, Ree Mills of Springdale, Ark., and Margaret Berry of Santa Barbara, Calif.; four grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Inez F. Phiffer

Services for Mrs. Inez F. Phiffer, 62, of 1610 W. Kentucky Ave. will be Thursday at 10 a.m. in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Rev. Cecil Maxey, associate minister of Kelview Heights Baptist Church, officiating. Graveside services will follow at 3 p.m. at the O'Donnell Cemetery in O'Donnell.

Mrs. Phiffer died Wednesday morning in a Midland hospital after a lengthy illness.

She was born May 21, 1920, in Niverro County. She was raised in O'Donnell. She married Bill Howard, who preceded her in death. She moved to Midland in 1955 where she was employed at Service Drug for several years. On July 19, 1967, she married Roy Phiffer. She was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Survivors include her husband, a daughter, Mrs. Linda L. Hill of Midland; her mother, Mrs. Fannie Farmer of O'Donnell; two brothers, Ronald Swanson of Midland and E.L. "Shorty" Farmer of O'Donnell; a grandson and several nieces and nephews.

Violet S. Foster

MULESHOE — Graveside services for Violet Sutton Foster, 82, of Canyon and formerly of Muleshoe, mother of Mickey Sue Heard of Midland, were to be at 2:30 p.m. today in Muleshoe Cemetery with the Rev. Joel Ware, pastor of Oklahoma Lane United Methodist church, officiating and directed by Ellis Funeral Home of Muleshoe.

Mrs. Foster died Monday morning in an Amarillo hospital after a lengthy illness.

She was born in Briscoe County and had lived in Canyon since 1975. She moved to Canyon from Muleshoe, where she had lived since 1929. She married Homer D. Jones, who died in January 1965. She was a Methodist.

Other survivors include three sons, two daughters, a brother, 17 grandchildren and 26 great-grandchildren.

Her grandsons were to serve as honorary pallbearers.

Paul H. Fuqua

ODESSA — Services for Paul H. Fuqua, 77, of Odessa, father of Jerry Fuqua of Midland, are pending at the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Fuqua died Monday at an Odessa hospital.

He was born Feb. 5, 1905, in Abilene. He was a retired welder.

Other survivors include two daughters, two sisters and five grandchildren.

Banoy Pruett

RANGER — Services for Banoy Pruett, 72, of Stephenville, mother of Mrs. Tiene Richardson and sister of Lawrence Billard, both of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Edwards Funeral Home chapel in Ranger. Burial will be in Merriman Cemetery in Ranger.

Mrs. Pruett died Tuesday morning in a Stephenville hospital.

She was born June 18, 1910, in Ardmore, Okla. She married Odie Pruett in 1952 in Eastland. She was a housewife and a member of the First Baptist Church in Carbon.

Other survivors include her husband, a son, a daughter, a sister, eight grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Democrats win posts

By The Associated Press

Democrats Ted Robertson and Chuck Miller, both Dallas judges, coasted to easy wins over Republican opponents in Texas' top judicial races, continuing the blockade of Republican victories in statewide court contests.

Robertson, a Dallas jurist for 18 years, garnered 1,350,290 votes in a powerful sweep over 60-year-old Waco attorney John Bates for a seat on the Texas Supreme Court.

Robertson, 61, maintained a 3-2 edge throughout the ballot counting. With 85 percent of all precincts counted, the Dallas Court of Appeals judge had 57.5 percent of the vote.

Democrat Chuck Miller ousted Republican Ray Moses with 60.3 percent of the vote in a low-key race for the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Both posts are six-year terms on nine-member courts at an annual salary of $71,400.

Society to meet

The Midland Archaeological Society will meet Thursday, Nov. 11, at "The Stable" in the rear of the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. This is a change from the usual meeting time of the first Thursday of the month in order to secure the speaker.

The program, "Analysis of Ceramic and Lithic Areas of the Floydada Country Club Site," will be given by Jim Word of Floydada.

Word has been honored for his outstanding work in West Texas by having been named "Amateur Archaeologist of the Year."

Police tell of theft

In a burglary complaint to city police, Charles Whitney of 500 N. Colorado Ave. said jewelry worth $9,000 was taken from his residence. There was no sign of forced entry, according to police.

Sheriff's deputies are continuing an investigation into a reported case of Halloween candy tampering. A woman who lives in the Elm Grove mobile home park on north Fairgrounds Road said her three children had gone trick-or-treating at about 10 homes Sunday night.

The woman said when the candy was later cut open prior to eating it, one of her daughters found a needle in a piece of jelly-like candy.

as a result of that redistricting plan.

Only three precincts in Midland County failed to support Loeffler in his bid for election to a third term. Those were Precincts 208, 305 and 306, which are polling places located on the city's south and east sides.

Precinct 208 voted at Lee Freshman High School and gave Stough 480 votes to Loeffler's 133. Precinct 305, which voted at Carver School, posted 292 votes for the Democrat to 22 for the incumbent. And Precinct 306 at Fire Station No. 3, 1710 N. Edwards St., favored the Democrat by 330 votes to Loeffler's 88.

Loeffler's strongest support came in Precinct 207, which was Fire Station No. 5 at Garfield Street and Golf Course Road, with 1,040 votes to Stough's 130. Precinct 403, Fannin Elementary School, gave Loeffler 1,171 to 120 for Stough while Precinct 407, Goddard Junior High, went for the Republican with 1,028 votes compared to 115 for the Democrat.

According to reports filed this morning by Texas' Election Central, Loeffler held a commanding 104,116-34,113 lead over Stough district-wide. That report, which was filed early this morning, included reports from 318 of 345 precincts.

Loeffler has served four years in Congress where, he is a member of the Appropriations Committee and serves as Deputy Minority Whip. Stough is retired from the military.

Unopposed candidates see Election Day through

Eight Midland County officials had nary a worry Tuesday about voters' rejecting them at the polls. They were unopposed in the general election.

Possibly their biggest concern was the degree of support by partisans and independents.

Attracting the most votes in Midland was Judge Barbara Culver, presiding judge of Midland's 318th State District Court, which places emphasis on family-related civil matters. Judge Culver, 56, a Republican and former (1963-78) Midland County judge, received 15,932 of the votes in Tuesday's election, which attracted 22,581 voters, including the 2,802 who voted absentee, to the polls.

More than half — 53 percent — of Midland's 42,409 registered voters cast ballots in the election. In the latest — 1978 — gubernatorial election, 18,393 Midland cast ballots. But the 1980 presidential-election year attracted 32,890 — 75 percent — of the more than 44,000 registered voters to the polls.

In contrast to Judge Culver's vote, Judge Vann Culp, 52, a Democrat who is presiding judge of Midland's 238th State District Court, attracted 9,305 votes — a third fewer than his counterpart. He has been the court's presiding judge since the court's inception in 1977.

Midland County Judge Bill Ahders, 66, received 15,031 votes; he's a Republican who has been in the judgeship since 1978.

But Midland County's Court-at-Law judge, Willie DuBose, 42, received a third less — 10,608 votes. DuBose, a Democrat, has been the court's presiding judge and the judge of Juvenile Court since 1978, the year the court was created.

County Attorney Scott Henderson, 34, a Republican who was appointed to the job last year, took in 13,984 votes.

County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry, a Democrat who has held the clerk's position since 1951, got 11,595 votes.

County Treasurer Dee Thompson, a Democrat, collected 10,997 votes.

Winfree Brown, 54, an independent landman and state Republican leader who is commissioner of Precinct 4 in northwest Midland and Midland County, received 6,571 votes.

LWV takes poll

the morning, they phoned in results to NBC's computer center in New Jersey. With 15 more replies in the afternoon, results were relayed again. The LWV received a stipend from both networks for their efforts.

Myrtle McMahon, a member of the state LWV and coordinator of the ABC election survey in Texas, said league members phoned in vote totals from five Midland precincts and 157 precincts statewide. She said ABC could also use its survey results to predict election winners.

Midland precincts included were 205, San Jacinto Junior High School; 207, Fire Station No. 5; 307, Central Fire Station; 403, Fannin Elementary School; and 405, Lee High School.

Moist Yam and Apple Bars are the perfect treat to serve at a holiday tree-trimming party. Accompany these tasty bars with a favorite holiday punch such as hot spiced cider.

Bars make decorating a treat

Trimming the holiday tree is a tradition enjoyed by many. For a special treat while decorating the tree, serve the family these tasty Yam and Apple Bars.

Their moistness comes from combining that favorite southern vegetable, the yam, and juicy apples. Sweetened with brown sugar, raisins and glaze, they're a delicious holiday treat.

YAM AND APPLE BARS

3/4 c. packed brown sugar
1/2 t. ground cinnamon
1/4 t. ground nutmeg
2 eggs
1/2 c. margarine or butter, softened
1 c. chopped pared tart apple (about 1 medium)
1/3 c. raisins
1/4 c. chopped nuts
1 can (18 or 23 oz.) sweet potatoes, drained and choppped (about 3 c.)
2 c. Bisquick baking mix
Browned Butter Glaze (see below)

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease rectangular pan, 13x9x2 inches. Beat brown sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg, eggs and margarine in large bowl on high speed, scraping bowl occasionally, three minutes.

Stir in apple raisins, nuts and sweet potatoes. Mix in baking mix. Spread in pan. Bake until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean, 30-35 minutes; cool. Drizzle with Browned Butter Glaze. Cut into bars, about 3x1 inch. Makes 32 bars.

BROWNED BUTTER GLAZE

3 T. margarine or butter
1 1/3 c. powdered sugar
3/4 t. vanilla
2-3 T. milk

Heat margarine over medium heat until delicate brown; cool. Stir in powdered sugar and vanilla. Stir in milk until smooth and of desired consistency.

'Mannan' dieters' manna?

Copley News Service

Starch blockers may be banned, but the dieting craze is still going strong.

What they're pushing now is "glucomannan," a pill derived from the tuberous root of an East Indian plant, said to absorb up to 98 percent of all the fat, protein and carbohydrate calories you eat.

It is available by mail from a Newport Beach, Calif., firm for $19.95 (for 120 tablets) or at health food stores.

Glucomannan comes from the Amorphaphallus Konjac plant. The Konjac plant is grown in Japan and valued for its large tuberous underground stems which are used in making flour.

GLUCOMANNAN ZIPPED into popularity several months ago when starch blockers, the kidney bean derivatives said to block action of an enzyme in the intestine thus preventing digestion of complex starches, appeared headed for trouble with the Food and Drug Administration. Starch blockers were declared a drug by a federal judge who ordered seven firms to stop producing the product and ordered them off the shelves of health food stores.

But sitting next to starch blockers still on the shelves, and prominent in health food store ads, is glucomannan. The ads announce triumphantly that "this fantastic diet tablet (called Mannan-Trim) is so unique it actually has been awarded two U.S. patents. One, (3,973,008) explains how it can help you lose weight incredibly fast. The other (3,856,945) documents its ability to lower your cholesterol level." That ad, by Nutritional Research of Newport Beach, offered the product with a double-your-money-back guarantee.

Joan Bisson, a secretary to the marketing director of that company, said that "Nutritional Research had been importing Konjac root from Japan for three months. Two 500 milligram tablets taken an hour before meals with 8 ounces of water would turn into a clear gel in the stomach and eliminate 98 percent of everything eaten, including medicines."

For that reason, Bisson added, the company recommends taking a multi-vitamin tablet about four hours "after taking the last glucomannan pill of the day to get some nutrition."

BISSON ALSO POINTED out that the glucomannan diet was "not as good as the Willpower Diet" which was heavily advertised by the same company in June. That diet consisted of a 1,200-calorie daily eating plan and cutting hunger with benzocaine tablets, said to numb the stomach and thus reduce hunger. That diet was a good one, Bisson said, because it did incorporate some behavior modification in eating. The glucomannan diet, she said, did not involve any behavior modification.

Glucomannan did receive two patents from the U.S. government, said a spokeswoman for the Los Angeles Public Library, where copies of patents are on file. Both patents were assigned to the Kabushiki Kaisha Shimizu Manzo Shoten company of Hiroshima, Japan. Patents often are assigned to firms from other countries when they ask for them, the spokeswoman said.

The "abstract for patent 3,973,008," she said, reported that it concerned "a method for reducing body weight in overweight Japanese humans fed with the general Japanese diet which comprises an orally administered therapeutically effective dose of purified water soluble Konjac-mannan." It was received by the company in 1976.

In 1974, the same company had received patent 3,856,945 which was listed as "a method of reducing the serum cholesterol levels in hypercholesteremic (excess cholesterol in the blood) warm-blooded animals which comprises orally administering a therapeutically effective dose of substantially pure water soluble Konjac-mannan."

Emil Korwin, information officer for the FDA in Washington, said that the agency issued a statement, "a talk paper to let people know what's going on," on glucomannan on Aug. 12 of this year.

"We had been getting a lot of requests for information. The people promoting glucomannan said that it's a powder extracted from the roots of the Konjac plant which, taken before meals with water, absorbs liquids and swells in the stomach to form a gel to cut your appetite.

"SINCE KONJAC ROOT is considered a food after it's cooked, they asked the FDA to agree that it's safe, on the 'GRAS,' or Generally Recognized As Safe, list. But we believe it's not a GRAS substance because it has no history in this country before 1958. That was the year of the food additive law, which said any substance has to be either GRAS or permitted under food additive regulations. We told this to the people who make glucomannan and said we'd be glad to hear from them, and if they could provide information, we would study its safety.

"We do know that methyl cellulose (a different substance) has been used to swell up in the stomach, which is the same idea. These bulk producers are supposed to work because they absorb up to 50 times their weight in water to give you that wonderful feeling of fullness. But our weight control panel had looked into this and noted that the mass was almost completely gone in 30 minutes. The panel in a report said that the value of bulk producers in reducing weight has not been established."

Chef gets dream

By MAUREEN CLANCY

At the age of 4, Michel Pasquet went to his first Mardi Gras masquerade party dressed in a chef's crisp linen jacket and towering white toque. The sizes have changed periodically over the years, but the costume is the same today.

Recently Pasquet toured America giving cooking classes under the auspices of the La Varenne cooking school of Paris.

Pasquet is a member of the new generation of young chefs — a generation that uses little flour but lots of butter, and places as much emphasis on color, shape and texture as on taste.

Pasquet insists, however, that the term la nouvelle cuisine is pass, and that a more appropriate term for today's approach to cooking is "inventive." Such inventiveness, of course, must be anchored firmly in tradition, hence Pasquet's stint in a Paris hotel school when he was 15 years old, and subsequent positions at Maxim's of Paris and on the S.S. France.

PASQUET OFFERS SOME practical tips:

— Skin and fillet fish with well-sharpened knives. Wipe all knives immediately after each use so that flavors don't "travel" to other foods.

— Cook broccoli and green beans in rapidly boiling salted water until still crunchy, then plunge immediately into a bowl of iced water to preserve their bright green color.

— For fish and meat stocks, saute bones and vegetables without fat, add liquid, and cook for 20 minutes only, otherwise the stock will become dark and cloudy.

— Let a souffle's milk-and-flour mixture "relax" in a warm place before baking in the oven. This causes the mixture to rise even higher as it cooks.

— Butter and sugar souffle molds carefully and completely so that the souffle will rise evenly.

— Keep black pepper for breakfast — "it looks nice on eggs" — and use only white pepper in stocks, stuffings and delicate sauces.

Here are a few recipes from a master of cuisine.

RED SNAPPER WITH SORREL CREAM SAUCE

1½ tbsps. butter
1 shallot, finely chopped
¼ of the fish stock (see recipe below)
Salt and pepper

SORREL CREAM SAUCE:
3 cups heavy cream or cream fraiche
3½ ozs. sorrel, washed, dried and stems removed
3 tbsps. butter

Fillet the red snapper and remove the skin. Reserve the head and bones for the fish stock. Wash the fillets, head and bones. Cut the fillets diagonally into about 5 ounce escalopes. Refrigerate until ready to cook.

For the sauce: In a large saucepan boil ¾ of the fish stock until almost reduced to a glaze. Add the cream and the sorrel, bring to a boil and continue cooking until thick enough to coat a spoon, about 15 minutes.

Heavily butter a shallow baking dish and sprinkle with the shallot. Place the red snapper escalopes on top and pour the remaining fish stock over them. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and poach in a 350-degree oven until the fish can be flaked easily with a fork, 7 to 10 minutes. Let cool slightly then lift out the fish with a slotted spoon and drain on paper towels. Keep warm until ready to serve.

To finish the sauce whisk the butter in gradually, working sometimes over very low heat and sometimes off the heat, so that the butter softens and thickens the sauce without melting. Taste for seasoning.

To serve set an escalope on each plate. Spoon over enough sauce to cover fish and bottom of plate. Sprinkle the chopped sorrel over the fish. Serve the rest of the sauce separately. Makes 4 servings.

Author comments on best, worst eateries

By ANGELO NATALE
AP Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Under the shade of an American tank in Paris, during the waning days of World War II, young Christian Millau feasted on packages of dry meats and other U.S. Army K-rations.

It was perhaps the most enjoyable meal of his life, the celebrated food critic says. And Millau has dined on gourmet delights in the world's best restaurants.

The controversial epicure and his colleague, Henri Gault, have written a series of volumes on the top dining establishments in France, London and New York.

The Gault-Millau criticisms are witty, sometimes barbed, sometimes lavish in their praise and always very readable, and they are written by two men who are former journalists. The book also looks at hotels, nightspots, shops, galleries and tourist attractions in what Millau and Gault call the "most electrifying city in the world."

Of another very elite spot, the devastating duo say: "Two dining rooms make up the most pompous restaurant imaginable. A maitre d'hotel ... greets you with utter contempt, doubtless thinking to appear distinguished. And the food? It's a feeble imitation of real French."

Born on New Year's Day in 1929, Millau was not yet a teenager at the start of World War II. His mother, half-French, half-Russian, was "a good cook by instinct," he says.

"She couldn't read recipes, she mixed everything up, but what came out was beautiful," Millau said. "My mother had a talent to make something good out of nothing. The war made things hard to find. But she worked with what she found, and we had things like carrot cake — and a lot of people coming to dinner."

Does the critic of epicurean eateries cook?

"Well, sometimes I do," he says. "I don't say I'm a good cook. I know how to prepare a few dishes."

Still, he is firm in his belief that he knows what is good and can write about it in the guides — "The Best of France," "The Best of London," "The Best of Paris" and "The Best of New York."

The series evolved from Millau's journalism days as feature editor of the Paris Presse when he got the idea for a weekly leisure page.

"This was something new for France," Millau says. "We were ready to start with food and gastronomy. Gault worked for me at that time. The first review was of a Paris restaurant. The impact was tremendous; the place was instantly packed. Then I had the idea to publish a guide to Paris."

Clouse named new director of center

Irene Davis Clouse has been named new executive director of the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

Clouse, 32, earned her BS degree at Sul Ross State University and took graduate studies at The University of Texas at El Paso. Immediately prior to assuming her new post, she was a counselor/caseworker at the Midland office of the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

She spent three years as a U.S. Prison System education specialist and counselor at La Tuna Federal Prison, where her innovative programs gained her recognition as an "Employee of the Month" within the full federal system. Clouse also served as a United States Army curriculum specialist at Fort Bliss, where she was named Outstanding Teacher, U.S. Army, Third Cavalry.

As director of the center, Clouse succeeds Sally Brammer, who served the center in that capacity from its inception in 1978.

The Center for Battered Women and Their Children offer protection and counseling to residents of the 17-county area. On the average, about 20 women, along with their children, are housed in the center each month. It is supported, in part, buy local donations. It was recently accepted as a Midland United Way Agency, and also receives some money from the Department of Human Resources.

"With the increasing support of the community, and with Irene's background and abilities, we're looking forward to expanding our programs, especially in the areas of education and counseling," said Charleen Rosebery, president of the board of directors for the center.

In addition to the director, the staff includes an assistant director, house manager, night manager and volunteer coordinator.

The center is located in Midland at an undisclosed location. For those who need further information, the hot lines, 563-0800 and 683-1300, are available at all times.

Getting most from food budget

By HARVEY STEIMAN
Hearst Feature Service

Keeping the food budget under control boils down to two rules: 1. Buy only what you like to eat and know you can use. 2. Learn how to use it efficiently.

That is easier said than done. It requires some savvy in the supermarket and at least a basic level of competence in the kitchen. You don't save money feasting on frozen dinners and Ding Dongs.

1. Shop at the least expensive source, usually your nearest supermarket, for basic groceries and the usual odds and ends.

2. Use speciality markets to their best advantage. A good meat market can sell you the exact amount you want, so you won't waste any. Farmers' markets often have the best produce at the best prices. Convenience stores are perfect for picking up one or two emergency items without wasting gasoline by going to the supermarket.

3. BUY FRESH and in season. This is true for produce, and, to a lesser extent, fish. Things are always cheaper and of better quality at peak season.

4. Preserve seasonal foods to eat out of season. Freezing saves the food and also preserves any work you've already put into it, such as trimming, seasoning and cooking.

5. Use coupons and buy specials on items you regularly use.

6. Figure your own time into the budget. It's no bargain if it takes you hours to prepare a meal unless the effort is worth it in taste and quality.

7. If you skip meat, poultry, fish or eggs, know how to combine grain and vegetable proteins to provide optimum nutrition.

8. SEASONINGS are cheap and they can make the difference between boring meals and delicious ones. Acquaint yourself with unfamiliar seasonings by sniffing, tasting and imagining them in combination with tastes you already know.

9. Beverages make a big difference. Fresh lemonade, good coffee and tea, and especially wine, are inexpensive, considering the satisfaction they bring.

10. Give it flair. Budget doesn't mean dull. Make it taste good.

THE MEAT MARKET

Meat, poultry, fish and seafood take the biggest bite out of most people's food budgets. The way to cut costs is to think in terms of cost per serving.

For instance, if whole fresh mackerel is 99 cents a pound and rock cod fillets are on sale at $1.79 a pound, which is a better buy? The whole fish has bones, skin, head and tail to lose, and works out to 1 1/2 to 2 servings a pound. Fillets are totally edible and work out to 3 or 4 servings a pound. So, whole fish is 50 to 66 cents per serving; the fillets are 45 to 59 cents a serving. The rock cod is a better buy.

BUT IF you want to make a fish stock, buy the whole fish and use the bones. The general rule is to buy only what you will use.

Similarly, turkey is usually a good buy. If you like only white meat, it's often worth the extra few cents per serving to buy just the breast instead of the whole turkey.

In buying poultry, the heavier the bird, the more meat there will be in relation to bone. Thus, a 4-pound chicken yields more meat per pound than a 3-pound chicken.

In buying meat, the more bone and fat you can see, the fewer servings you'll get per pound, a consideration when you compare prices.

Example: If boneless bottom round is $2.79 a pound, and chuck roast is $1.69 a pound, which makes the better buy for a pot roast? Well, you can get four servings per pound from the boneless cut, but more like two from the bony, fatty chuck roast. Cost per serving works out to 70 cents for the round and 85 cents for the chuck.

ONE OF THE best steals in the meat counter is a first-cut chuck roast on sale, usually from $1.39 to $1.69. The reason is that the oval-shaped "eye" at the bottom of the roast is actually the end of the rib-eye muscle, the very same that brings $4.29 a pound farther down the meat case as a rib-eye steak. It pulls out of the roast without a knife and grills into a lovely steak.

The rest of the chuck roast can be cut up into cubes for stew, the same cubes going for $2.29 elsewhere in the meat case. The bones collect in the freezer until there are enough to make stock. The fat trimmings can even be rendered, if you want every last bit.

PRODUCE

Fruits and vegetables are generally cheaper fresh when they are in season. Frozen vegetables are generally cheaper when the product is out of season. For quality's sake, it's best to stick to fresh.

The secret to buying vegetables is to choose those that are small to medium size, unblemished and lively looking. The smaller sizes are more likely to have better taste — and will be less expensive, too.

The secret to buying fruit is to buy things that are heavy for their size. That means they're juicier. And probably sweeter.

Fruits and vegetables that might seem expensive actually are cheap splurges when you compare their costs to meat, fish and poultry.

DAIRY AND EGGS

In the dairy department, margarine is a much cheaper alternative to butter, but does not compare to the flavor of butter. Where flavor is critical, it's usually worth it to splurge on butter.

If you buy a lot of yogurt, it's worth it to make your own. Use a natural commercial yogurt — not one thickened with gelatin or flavored in any way — as a starter. Yogurt-making directions appear in many cookbooks, and there are plenty of devices for making it.

Egg prices are based on availability within the various sizes. Generally, if there is less than 10 cents' difference from one size to the next, buy the larger size. There is more demand for U.S. Large eggs than for any other variety, so they are seldom the best bargain. But since many cake and pastry recipes call for large eggs, it's tricky to substitute a different size.

SAVING TIME

If time is money, there also are tricks for saving time in the kitchen, too.

The secret is to start with the task that takes the longest to do. A big pot of water takes a while to boil. If you plan to boil vegetables or spaghetti, don't wait until everything is prepared to put on the pot of water. Do it first.

Similarly, if you're going to poach a fish, don't wait to make the court bouillon until the fish is cleaned and the sauce is made. Get the liquid going, cutting and adding vegetables as they are ready. Clean the fish while the poaching liquid is picking up flavor. Make the sauce while the fish is poaching. That's efficient.

Pooling resources

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Since R. J. Reynolds Tobacco inaugurated a van pool program in April of 1980, employees have saved more than three-quarters of a million gallons of fuel.

In addition, 329 parking spaces per month have been eliminated at a savings to employees of nearly $120,000 based on $30 a month parking fees, and there has been a decrease of almost 8 million miles driven by its employees.

FANCY THAT!

We Can Give Kids An Edge On Survival

A major study, funded by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, is nearing completion. It shows that driver education graduates are more likely to wear safety belts, and that they account for substantially fewer drunk driving arrests. That's good news because 50 percent of our nation's traffic fatalities are alcohol related, and studies have shown that proper use of safety belts could cut automobile traffic fatalities in half.

This new study also shows that graduates of driver education account for fewer traffic violations and are more knowledgeable about community traffic safety problems.

Sprouts good with meat, fowl

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Some vegetables are mellow or downright bland, while others have a distinctive flavor. Brussels sprouts, miniature members of the cabbage family, fall into the latter category.

The brussels sprouts plant veers off on a different course from its cabbage cousins at an early stage. Instead of giving forth one large head, like the cabbage, it produces several rows of small heads where the leaves are attached to the plant.

By pulling away the lower leaves, these little heads can be given room to develop, attached as they are to the long stem of the plant.

Brussels sprouts are believed to have first been cultivated about 400 years ago. They are said to have originated in Belgium's capital of Brussels and by the end of the 18th century, the Belgians were doing a flourishing business exporting them.

Until fairly recently, brussels sprouts were considered a luxury vegetable, especially in Europe where tiny heads, no bigger than a fingernail, were prized for their delicate flavor.

The classic cuisine of France makes considerable use of brussels sprouts, often serving them with a light cream sauce or a richer dressing with a cheese base. They make a tasty accompaniment to almost any fowl or meat dish.

Today, this vegetable is popular in most countries of the Western World. Many cooks, especially in the United States, simmer them in chicken broth for added flavor. A tangy lemon-butter sauce is sometimes used just before serving to give the vegetable a fresh, rich taste. For a further fillip, add a dash of nutmeg.

Brussels sprouts should be simmered in a moderate amount of liquid and care should be taken not to overcook them or they will acquire a strong taste.

In America, brussels sprouts are at their best during the winter months, when they are firm and compact with a vivid green color. But they start appearing in the market in August.

Delicious Ranch Burgers taste of many cultures

By MERLE ELLIS

Everyone who talks about food is talking about "American cooking" these days. Everyone who writes about food is writing about it. Everybody is trying to get a handle on what it is.

American cooking is, to make the understatement of the year, difficult to define. It is as complex an amalgamation as are we, the American people. Ask me, for example, what nationality I am. If you want more than "I'm American," it gets complicated. There's some Scotch, Irish, English, German, French, and a touch of American Indian in my background. My very American wife is Chinese, Hawaiian, French, English, and Russian. Ask one of our daughters about their heritage and you're in for a long dissertation.

When it comes to getting any kind of a handle on what American food is, I think the same will be true.

Mrs. Eddie (Gerry) Snapp of Boise City, Oklahoma, made her contribution to what may one day be defined as "Classic Nouveau International American Cuisine" with a recipe for Ranch Burgers, which captured second place in the National Beef Cook-off this year in San Antonio. Her recipe could have sprung from any one of several American heritages. It could have evolved from Russian piroshki or perhaps from Syrian sheeha . It might even have come from China by way of Hawaii and be known (as is something similar around our house) as hum bow .

RANCH BURGERS

2 pounds ground beef
Dough
1 large onion, chopped
1 tablespoon chili powder
1-1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 8-ounce jar cheese spread with jalapeno peppers
2 15-ounce cans chili beans, drained
1/4 cup margarine, softened (you can use butter)

Prepare dough. Brown ground beef and onion in a large frying pan; pour off drippings. Add chili powder, salt, and pepper; mix well. Add cheese spread; stir in chili beans and cook slowly for 10 to 15 minutes.

When dough has risen, divide into four portions. Roll each portion into a rectangle, approximately 10 x 14 inches and 1/4-inch thick. Cut into 6 squares. Place approximately 1/4 to 1/3 cup meat mixture on each square. Pull up opposite corners and pinch together at center top. Place, pinched side down, on a baking sheet. Bake in a 400-degree oven for 12 to 15 minutes, or until golden brown. Brush with butter. Makes 24 burgers.

DOUGH

2 packages dry yeast
2/3 cup warm water
2/3 cup warm milk
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 cup shortening
2 teaspoons salt
2 eggs
4-1/2 to 5 cups flour

Dissolve yeast in water in a large mixing bowl. Add milk, sugar, shortening, salt, eggs, and 1-1/2 cups of the flour. Blend together at low speed on an electric mixer for 30 seconds. Beat 2 minutes at medium speed, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough of the remaining flour to make dough easy to handle. Turn dough out onto a lightly-floured surface; knead until smooth and elastic, about 5 minutes. Place in a greased bowl and turn greased side up. Cover and let rise in a warm place until double in bulk, about 1 to 1-1/2 hours.

Cookbook written by talented woman chef from California

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Editor

If epicures were stranded on a well vegetated desert island with an American chef, they would be lucky if the chef was Alice Waters. She is co-owner of Chez Panisse in Berkeley, Calif., a restaurant celebrated for its unique menus and dishes. Her passion is ferreting out the freshest and finest ingredients and making seductive use of them.

Alice grew up in Chatham, N.J., and went to Berkeley University around the time the flower children flourished. She majored in art, but when she spent a year in France she discovered she was as interested in exploring food as she was in exploring museums.

On her return to the United States, she taught herself to cook. Her guides — the distinguished cookbooks written by Richard Olney and Elizabeth David.

Now Alice has written "The Chez Panisse Menu Cookbook" and here's an utterly delicious recipe from it, "Red Potato and Red Onion Gratin." At the Chez Panisse restaurant, this dish is served with salmon baked with anchovy butter. When we tried the Gratin in our kitchen four of us gobbled it up as the main dish for lunch. We advise using a shallow, straight-sided 2-quart baking dish; the potatoes and onions will come up high in it at first, but they will sink as they bake. This way the top browns well. You may have to increase the baking time, as we did.

RED POTATO AND RED ONION GRATIN

2 pounds red potatoes, about equal size
3 medium red onions
¼ cup and 2 tablespoons light olive oil
2 to 3 sprigs thyme
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons unsalted butter

Peel the potatoes and slice them ¼ inch thick into a bowl with plenty of cold water. Keep them covered by 1 inch of water, changing the water as it becomes starchy. The number of changes depends on the potatoes; three to four times is usual.

Peel the onions and slice them ¼ inch thick. Cook them in 3 tablespoons olive oil with 2 to 3 sprigs thyme over very low heat. Cover the pan, but stir occasionally. The onions should be sweet, slightly softened, and still crunchy after 10 minutes. Remove from the heat, uncover, and set aside.

Rinse the potatoes in a colander and pat them very dry between tea towels. Toss them in the remaining olive oil.

Layer a lightly oiled, shallow, 2- to 3-quart earthenware casserole with potatoes slightly overlapping in concentric circles, and salt and pepper lightly. Remove the thyme from the onions and strew some of them lightly over the layer of potatoes. Continue layering and seasoning the potatoes. End with a layer of potatoes.

Dot with 2 tablespoons softened butter and bake in a preheated 425-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes until the potatoes are a deep golden brown. Serves 6.

Dining in San Francisco finest in world

By LOIS DWAN
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — I once stood with a friend at the top of the Chestnut Street steps watching for the flash of gold as the sun went down behind the Golden Gate.

"No one should live in San Francisco," he said. "It is too easy to be satisfied."

Surrounded by beauty even the builders cannot harm — except by getting in the way — San Franciscans are quite content with things the way they always have been. That their fine dining has been more of a reputation than a fact for some time has not occurred to them. Swathed in pomp and ceremony, the food of the "great," heard-about restaurants has been downright boring, and no one has noticed except the hoping stranger.

THIS COULD, OF COURSE, be merely the opinion of a disgruntled chauvinist from down under, and I will also admit that an occasional visit is no basis for an informed conclusion. It is true that San Francisco has many small and charming restaurants, some of them the genuine stuff of legends — legends are not supposed to change — but it is also true that, until recently, my euphoric returns have ended in dull thuds at some of San Francisco's best restaurants.

That this is changing has less to do with local dissatisfaction than with outside influences: namely, hotels and Chez Panisse in Berkeley. Possibly also the imminent arrival of Roger Verge. His Sutter 500 Restaurant and Cafe is now open and stunning, according to reports.

The hotels, principally the Stanford Court, the Fairmont, the Clift, possibly others, led the way to responsible luxury in their principal dining rooms, cautiously at first, but growing bolder, improving as they go.

ADVENTURE CAME from Chez Panisse, a phenomenon that did spring from discontent. Alice Waters could not find a good place to eat in Berkeley, so she bought an old house in order to cook for her friends. She and Jeremiah Tower, with little formal training, but with an extraordinary combination of talent, discipline and curiosity, created what Ruth Reichl (California magazine) has called the "Bay Area's most influential restaurant."

The timing was right. The ferment was beginning. It would eventually boil over into several million — or billion — words and a great deal of snobbery about food and wine. Chez Panisse retained its sanity and its direction, became a sort of symbol, nationally recognized, a refuge for traveling gastronomes from everywhere.

THE EMPHASIS was on freshness and unusual but well-founded combinations of tastes. The impetus was all they found available once they started looking. "Buy it and do something with it," Jeremiah Tower said. They found — sometimes grew their own — fresh vegetables, fruits and herbs. They found carefully bred meats and poultry, where to get the freshest fish....

(The same thing was also happening in Los Angeles, perhaps even more strongly coming from several sources, without the single focusing, symbolic restaurant, but in a city less complacent and more restless, perhaps more receptive.)

Jeremiah Tower crossed the Bay and alerted the city with the Balboa Cafe (3199 Fillmore St.) about a year ago, and is about to open Stars, near the Opera House.

WE HAD A RECENT lunch at Balboa, precisely satisfying the ebullient and slightly wistful mood of the one-day visitor, and followed that with dinner at Ernie's, where young chef Jacky Robert presides over a kitchen now worthy of that restaurant's repute.

The Balboa is housed in one of those marvelous, ageless building that could have been built 100 years ago and is as fresh as yesterday. The oak paneling, the fine long bar and back bar of polished oak, the cafe curtains in the big, street-side windows, the white tablecloths and waiters in white shirts and long aprons, all add up to the most reassuring restaurant look there is.

We ate lightly and randomly, including, for reasons I do not remember, an excellent hamburger, lightly constructed, finished rare, presented with sauteed onions and fresh tomatoes on very good crusted bread. Smoked chicken salad was also saved from the trite by the skill of its presentation, with spinach and pimientos, lightly dressed.

THERE WERE GOOD LITTLE steamed Ipswich clams (slightly sandy), but the stars in my memory go to the carpaccio and the fettuccine with sweetbreads and prosciutto, neither startlingly original, but both distinguished by care in details. Carpaccio is most often undone by its sauce, too much and too strong for the delicate slice of raw beef. This was exactly right, the beef of excellent quality, sliced paper thin, the mustard mayonnaise a squiggled undertone. The fettuccine was a rich, unctuous blend of tastes and flavors that, even in this time of remarkable pastas, seemed a new and superb achievement.

Ernie's (847 Montgomery St.) is a beautiful restaurant, mellowed in crystal and velvet, upholding tradition, almost more a distinguished club than a restaurant.

Tradition is wonderful, also necessary in a kitchen, but tends to go flat if left without the leaven of new thinking. Dining at Ernie's has become luxury with spritz.

It must have taken some courage for Victor and Roland Gotti to entrust their identity to the experimental kitchen of Jacky Robert. New restaurants can take chances. Established restaurants risk disorienting their best patrons.

It was an important step for them to take. Not only as a recognition of what is expected of today's eminent restaurant, it also gives more strength by introducing another influence, related to, but different from that of Chez Panisse.

WHATEVER THE San Francisco reaction, the out-of-towners approve. A group of skeptical restaurateurs reported with awe on an arranged dinner. One of the great experiences, they said, entirely comparable to a similar dinner at Jean Banchet's Le Francais in Chicago.

Our one dinner could do no more than confirm the rumors. Which it did.

Lobster ravioli was really lobster agnolotto, one big spreading envelope of ethereal pasta, ennobled with cream and the richness of lobster. Oursins en croute was an entirely satisfactory treatment of that lovely, elusive taste. There was a sharp vinegar contrast and the crispness of celery to offset the sometime blandness of a vegetable terrine. Goat cheese was melted over Boston lettuce.

Quail was exemplary, with shredded sweet peas as contrast and complement. Duck breast was thinly sliced, shining with juices, accompanied by tiny turnips and bits of confit hidden under a cabbage leaf. Kiwi was part of the presentation of scallops, but only for kicks and color.

Sauces were set to a two-color design for an elegant charlotte russe ... raspberries were in the sabayon....

It was a good day in San Francisco.

In ancient Egypt, nail color indicated a woman's social rank. Only the palest shades were permitted lower class women, and woe was the woman who painted her talons brighter than the Queen's.

Pollo Tonnato: Cold chicken dish delicious in all seasons

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

There's one cold main dish I find deliciously useful to serve during all seasons of the year. I call it Pollo Tonnato, and it's my version of the famous Italian dish named Vitello Tonnato — veal with tuna sauce. I began using chicken in the recipe instead of veal when that meat became so expensive.

I sometimes serve Pollo Tonnato for a Saturday company lunch or a Sunday night company supper. And I always accompany it with crusty Italian bread — preferably the whole-wheat variety.

POLLO TONNATO

3 pounds (18) chicken thighs
1 medium onion
1 medium carrot, pared
2 celery ribs with tops
Several sprigs parsley
2 bay leaves
7-ounce can tuna in olive oil, drained
1 cup mayonnaise
Juice of ½ medium lemon (about 1½ tablespoons)
2-ounce can flat anchovy fillets, drained
4 tablespoons drained capers
Garnish or Accompaniment: Shredded leaf lettuce or romaine; plum tomatoes (sliced) or whole cherry tomatoes; pared and scored cucumber (sliced)

In the top insert (with a solid bottom) of a steamer, arrange the thighs; tuck onion, carrot, celery, parsley and bay leaves among them. Cook over boiling water until thighs are tender — about 60 minutes. Strain; remove thighs; chill. Chill broth separately — there will be about 2 cups.

Skin and bone thighs; slice each in half horizontally — don't worry if there are some small pieces. Remove hardened fat from broth; measure 1 cup of the broth and reserve. (Refrigerate or freeze remaining broth for use in some other dish.)

In an electric blender whirl together the reserved broth, the tuna, mayonnaise, lemon juice and half the anchovy fillets (reserving the rest) until anchovies are pureed. Stir in 2 tablespoons of the capers.

In a large shallow serving dish (one that holds 3 quarts is a good size) pour a thin layer of the tuna mixture. Add a layer of chicken; continue layering, ending with the tuna mixture so the chicken is covered with it. Cover bowl with saran and chill.

At serving time, garnish the top with reserved anchovies (cut small) and remaining capers. Surround the edge of the bowl with the lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers or serve this accompaniment separately.

Pasta offers vegetarian pleasures

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

Surely the most widely used form of pasta in the United States is spaghetti, although there are many other types to choose from. Vermicelli, ravioli, macaroni, lasagne and egg noodles are just a few of the varieties available.

An interesting note: Italians insist that the only way to eat spaghetti is by twirling it on a fork. The widespread American habit of using a spoon to aid in twirling appalls them. So "when in Rome ..."

In cooking pasta, be sure to use plenty of water and never, never overcook. Pasta should be "al dente," which means literally "to the tooth." That is, the pasta should be cooked, yet still have some bite to it. There should be a definite texture, and it should never be left in the water long enough to become mushy.

Use six quarts water to every pound of pasta. Pour the cold water into a large, deep pot, add 1 tablespoon salt, bring to a vigorous boil, then add the dry pasta. Check for doneness by biting into a piece.

(There is also, of course, the popular method of throwing spaghetti noodles against the ceiling of the kitchen to see if they'll stick, but this often leaves strange snake-like marks on the paint job.)

BROCCOLI-PARMESAN PASTA

1 onion, chopped coarsely
1 clove garlic, minced
4 tbsps. vegetable oil
1 tbsp. margarine or butter
2 tbsps. flour
2 cups milk
¼ cup Parmesan cheese
1 bunch broccoli
6 oz. pasta, cooked
Dash nutmeg
Salt and pepper to taste

Saute onion and garlic in oil for around 5 minutes. Add margarine or butter to pan, and blend in flour. Stir in milk, a little at a time, and cook until you have a thickened sauce. Sprinkle cheese in and stir well. Chop broccoli into bite-size pieces and blanche in boiling salted water for 5 minutes or so. Drain well and add to sauce. Serve over cooked pasta, and sprinkle with additional Parmesan cheese. Garnish with tomato wedges and parsley. Serves 4.

EGG NOODLES ALMONDINE

12 oz. egg noodles
¼ cups melted butter cups slivered almonds
1 tsp. toasted caraway seeds

Cook noodles until tender, and drain thoroughly in colander. Place them in a bowl, and pour the melted butter over them. Sprinkle with slivered almonds and toasted caraway seeds. Serve hot. For 4.

MACARONI CHICKPEA SOUP

¾ cups vegetable oil
1 cups finely chopped parsley
3 cloves garlic, minced
2 cups cooked chickpeas
3 tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and chopped
2 tsp. dried rosemary
1 qt. water
1 lb. elbow macaroni, cooked
Freshly grated Parmesan or Romano cheese

Heat oil in large pan; add garlic and parsley. Turn down heat and simmer for 5 minutes. Add chickpeas, tomatoes, rosemary and water. Cover and cook over low heat, stirring often, for 30 minutes. Stir in cooked pasta and simmer 10 minutes longer. Garnish with grated cheese. Serves 6 to 8.

DEAR ABBY

Instincts ignore taboos

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Crushed," whose 16-year-old daughter became pregnant by her 15-year-old adopted son, made a point that few people are willing to acknowledge. All human beings are sexual beings — like it or not. We are born with the instinct to function sexually, so why all the denial?

How can people in this society be so technically advanced and so socially primitive? Why don't we teach our children the truth about sex?

Sex between siblings is taboo. It usually (but not always) occurs when the older person exploits the younger one out of curiosity or in search of sexual gratification.

When children are sufficiently mature physically to reproduce — and the sperm meets the fertile egg — pregnancy occurs. The egg doesn't know (or care) if the sperm is a relative.

Incest is far more common than most think. I know. It happened in our family. I was a 15-year-old boy (young man, actually) when my 9-year-old precocious sister came into MY bed one night while we were home alone.

Our parents were respectable, churchgoing, middle-class people. They never told us anything about sex. All we knew is what we'd picked up from the other kids.

What went on between my sister and me didn't last long, fortunately. But it did happen. The guilt and shame lasted a lifetime, although we never talked about it. I am 72, and my kid sister died last year at 66.

Why am I writing this? Because I hope some "respectable" parents who are too shy to tell their kids about sex will see this.

Most parents assume that their kids will "naturally" abstain from having sex with a sister or brother because they will "know" it's wrong. Not true. Kids will naturally explore and experiment unless they are taught NOT to. And even then, the opportunities for it should be minimized and all temptations removed.

I know this is much too long for your column, so go ahead and cut it to suit yourself, but please get the message across. — ANONYMOUS IN MINNESOTA

DEAR ANONYMOUS: It's long, but I'll not cut a word. It's well worth the space. Thanks for writing.

If you have any suggestions to make this parental cross more bearable, we'd like to hear them. — SAN DIEGO

DEAR SAN: You can thank your lucky stars she's not married to him. Or consider this: He may be a creep in your eyes, but in hers, he's the cream of the crop.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding "Thin on Top," who's worried about his appeal to the opposite sex, I'm surprised you didn't respond with my father's old adage:

If he's bald in back, he's a great lover.
If he's bald in the front AND the back, he just THINKS he's a great lover. — J. McG. IN SHENOROCK, N.Y.

Denmark famed for sandwich

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

It has been said that the favorite pastime in Denmark is eating, and it's a safe bet a top favorite is the famed open-face sandwich, known as smorrebrod.

In Copenhagen, festive capital of Denmark, most streets have a shop featuring bread slices laden with colorful toppings called paalaeg.

These sandwich shops are an institution in Denmark, where the custom of piling the bread base with a dazzling variety of foods has become a work of art.

Smorrebrod is the midday meal for hundreds of thousands of Danes. The bread is usually a moist, dark rye spread thickly with butter and piled high with meat, fish, fruit or vegetables.

One restaurant in Copenhagen at last report featured a formidable smorrebrod menu a yard long listing 177 entries.

Smorrebrod is available at most any place in Denmark — the little kiosks on street corners, on boats going to nearby islands, on trains and, of course, in most eating places.

These creations must be eaten with knife and fork and preferably with a napkin around the neck. To try to lift one to the mouth by hand could prove disastrous.

Some of the more popular examples of smorrebrod have names like "Rush Hour" and "Mussels in Bed."

Smorrebrod shops are usually run by white-garbed women who are as important a part of the national work force as the farmers and fishermen. These sandwich makers are skilled workers who have taken up to three years of apprenticeship to qualify.

3 medium cucumbers, skin removed
1 tablespoon salt
¾ cup white vinegar
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
2 tablespoons fresh dill, chopped

Slice the cucumbers thin and arrange in shallow dish and sprinkle with salt. Place 2 or 3 more plates atop the cucumbers to press out excess water and leave at room temperature about 2 hours. Remove plates, drain cucumbers and spread out on paper towels. Pat slices dry with paper towels and return to their dish. In small bowl, beat together vinegar, sugar, salt and pepper. Pour over cucumbers and sprinkle with chopped dill. Chill 2 or 3 hours and pile liberally over smoked salmon and onion lying atop the bread. Enough for at least 4 sandwiches. Good with a chilled, dark Danish beer.

Burnout strikes people at all levels

By ELIZABETH MEHREN
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Here are the symptoms:

Increasing irritability. Shortness of temper. Disappointment in the world at large. Alienation from close friends and family. Fatigue, lethargy and a low-energy threshold. Forgetfulness: a memory crisis that exceeds absent-mindedness as it blots out appointments, deadlines and the location of personal possessions. Crabbiness and a decided inability to take a joke. A feeling of ennui that comes out of nowhere; tears and sadness that strike at the strangest moments. More and more work; longer and longer hours; less and less to show for it.

These days, it seems like no one is immune. For most, it's a sure and steady path toward terminal frustration.

Indeed, said a panel of prominent psychologists and social scientists, addressing the American Psychological Association here recently, burnout is pandemic. It's a condition that travels like a mountain brush fire, blazing its way through the social strata and torching the professions, from cop to cardiologist, from banker to bricklayer.

"Burnout," said Dr. Whiton Stewart Paine, of Mercy Catholic Medical Center of Philadelphia, "is occurring across the board, all over society." Examining the phenomenon, Paine said, "What we know is that this is a burgeoning problem. The more we scratch, the bigger the itch seems to be."

Statistics on the phenomenon are difficult to come by, said New York psychotherapist Dr. Herbert J. Freudenberger, "but I would venture to say that about 10 percent of the population as I work with them claim they are 'burnt out.'" Another 10 percent to 15 percent, said Freudenberger, "talk of the symptoms," and as many as 75 percent say they experience "transitory symptoms" of burnout; that they feel burnt out from time to time, but that it goes away.

Freudenberger said, "In the last two to three years, I have become increasingly concerned with the issue of burnout as a societal issue."

It was 10 years ago that Freudenberger coined the term burnout. Freudenberger attached the phrase to a process that affected only certain individuals.

But Freudenberger has broadened his concept: "During the past 10 years, society has undergone significant attitudinal shifts." The evolving of the women's movement, for example, he said, has dramatically affected marriage, divorce, living arrangements and child-rearing practices.

Automation and computerization have increased efficiency in the work force, but have also added to feelings of rootlessness, and a sense for many, said Freudenberger, "that even their work identity was endangered." Computerization often leads to alienation, he said, and "by the 21st century, our American offices may become the modern equivalent of the 19th-century sweatshop."

Increasingly, agreed Paine, "we build burnout into a lot of our businessses and social organizations." Further, he said, deviation is discouraged: "Our organizations tend to say, 'You gotta work together well, you gotta get along.'" But burnt-out individuals tend not to do this well. "People are more and more frustrated, with fewer and fewer options to get out of the pressure cooker their job has become."

With the '70s and '80s, moreover, said Freudenberger, a subgroup of "urban nomads" has evolved: men and women who move from city to city in search of a better job, or to experience a different environment or new life style. Work ethics are changing; economic realities mean that many people have fallen prey to downward mobility, and will never achieve the material comforts their parents regarded as an assumption.

Freudenberger believes that burnout has swept beyond the individual and into the society at large. "Unless we begin to look at the value system within society regarding burnout, what is needed is a cultural revolution. Otherwise, 10 years from now we'll still be talking about burnout."

Even within the social sciences, said Paine, "We have not really conceptualized burnout as a social problem. The focus until now has been on the individual, the person suffering from giant and all-inclusive exhaustion."

As for an institutional approach, Paine was not sanguine. "This country does not have a good track record in terms of dealing with social issues."

Further, Paine expresses fear that in approaching burnout on a broad social scale, the individual may get lost in the fray. As a result, "The only solution that is going to work well is a combined organizational, institutional and individual approach."

Farber has completed a major study of teacher burnout — "a problem not for educators only," he says — and has concluded, among other things, that "The problem of teacher burnout is more than a faddish notion and has, in fact, reached serious proportions." Dissatisfied, many teachers are leaving the profession, Farber said; others are adding new magnitude to the problem by being "more and more open about how dissatisfied they are."

Acne treatment available

If acne is a four-letter word that's causing anguish in your household, take heart, help is at hand says Dr. Stephen Mandy, noted skin care expert and Clinical Professor of Dermatology at the University of Miami Medical School.

Teenagers can be emotionally and physically scarred by acne, he notes. The stresses of school and social activities contribute to acne flareups more so than in summer when outdoor activity in the sun tends to keep pimples dried up.

Don't panic when skin eruptions occur and don't make a beeline to the drugstore for the newest over-the-counter preparations advertised, Mandy advises. Such products may have their place in acne treatment, but only after a dermatologist ascertains the type of acne you have and what treatment regimen is best suited for the individual problem.

Dermatologists now have an arsenal that includes topical retinoic acid (Retin-A), benzoyl peroxide and topical antibiotics that do wonders for all but the extremely severe cystic acne cases, Mandy notes. A new potent oral drug, Accutane, is now available for very severe acne — only 5 percent of all cases — that resist other therapies, but Accutane does have side effect problems and shouldn't be used on those 95 percent of cases which can be treated very effectively with topical medications, he cautions.

LIVING TODAY

Conference tips

By SHARON A. HILLIS
Midland County Extension Agent Home Economics

As the fall school term progresses, both parents and teachers will begin planning for joint conferences which can be mutually rewarding. The skills of effective parent-teacher teams can build a quality finished product — an inquisitive, well-adjusted growing child.

Parent-teacher conferences can be a vital, constructive, learning situation for parents as well as teachers. The conferences should be planned for a specific time in a quiet, comfortable atmosphere. Serious pre-planning can help both parents and teachers make better use of their time.

Parents and teachers should agree on fair, reasonable goals that benefit the child and bring pleasure and learning to the youngster. Helpful dialogue about what parents want for and expect from their child — as well as the teacher's expectations and professional responsibilities to the child and class as a whole — can be a vital first step.

Other positive approaches to parent-teacher conferences may include:

Parents can provide two important tools — personal support and interest — that the teacher can use to help a child grow and develop while in school.

Together parents and teachers can figure out the strengths of a child. When you know what's right with a child and not what's wrong with him/her, school and home provide a complementary support system that tends to accelerate the talents a child possesses and play down poor school habits.

Plotting together in hopes of bringing about changed behaviors in a child is not fair to a child. Parents and teachers can identify necessary changes sought, but involve the child in choices, decisions and changes to be made for his own benefit.

Closing a parent-teacher conference is important, too. When a conference is treated like any other professional appointment, it begins and ends on time. Care must be taken not to spoil a good conference at the last minute by sudden and abrupt eviction.

A competent educator and an effective parent are like an accomplished musician...they devote years and effort to acquiring skills and techniques. Once acquired, they are unseen. Good communications skills between parents and teachers are the "silent force" behind good students.

FACTS & FIGURES

Many U.S. sales executives are finding a vast international market waiting for their products, and that much of it is in West Germany. A total of 435 days of trade shows was held there in 1981, representing more than two extra months of selling time for businesses as diverse as mining equipment and women's lingerie.

The German trade shows are hard-selling events. In Dusseldorf, for example, many exhibitors report that they write up to 50 percent of their annual sales in the exhibition halls during trade shows. Next year, the city will host AIRMEC 83, the international trade show for all phases of aircraft maintenance and engineering, for the first time, April 12-15, 1983. To find out more about the trade fairs in Dusseldorf, Germany write to Dusseldorf Trade Shows, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10110.

The Alsation wasn't sure what might be lurking on the other side of the car, but he heard a noise and thought he'd better be safe and check it out. It turned out to be two cats, who weren't at all pleased with their unexpected visitor, hiding in the wheel well. The animals were spotted near Zurich, Switzerland.

City not pleased with seasonal visitors

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Autumn is for the birds in this southwest Missouri city. Starlings, grackles and blackbirds — millions of them.

"I've been out there when you couldn't see the skies because of the birds," says Joe Dennis, health department sanitarian. "They'll mass so greatly in trees, they'll break four-inch-thick tree limbs."

The invasion is serious business to Dennis and his crews, who use propane cannons, aerial exploding shotgun shells and smudge pots to break up the flocks.

"These birds are responsible, one way or the other, for 25 different diseases," says Dennis.

Every year, the birds journey from Canada to spend the winter in and around Joplin. If they roost in an area long enough, the birds can contaminate it with urine and droppings, which can carry and spread several lung-damaging diseases, Dennis says.

About 50 million starlings spend the winter in Missouri. Three million have already turned up in Joplin, up from about 250,000 several years ago, Dennis says.

So each year, the city Health Departments sends its workers into battle, attempting to drive the birds away from residential areas. Last year's fight cost the city $8,500.

The Greening of West Germany not ecology-minded, but anti-democracy

Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — Roland Vogt, who is on his way to becoming a very influential figure in West German politics, claims there is little "moral or political difference" between America and the Soviet Union.

But, he, like other leaders of the Green Party which seems poised to play a critical role in the affairs of America's most important European ally, spends far more time attacking the U.S., demanding an end to its military presence in Europe, than he does Russia.

What may be most significant about the series of dramatic changes overtaking West German politics is not the downfall of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's Social Democratic coalition after 13 years in power, but the rise of the anti-American, neutralist and essentially anti-democratic Greens.

The implications of their rise for American foreign policy are stunning — the word is not exaggerated — and could be disastrous.

The recent election results in the big state of Hesse indicate that, after years of practicing marginal, street politics with open contempt for parliament and mainstream German society, the Green Party has become the likely power broker of Germany's future. The Greens were in the forefront of last year's anti-American, pacifist demonstrations in West Germany, as they have been of virtually all anti-NATO, neutralist manifestations of recent years.

In a telephone interview from Frankfurt, Vogt, a 36-year-old bearded teacher of sociology, made the point clear. "We are the new decisive factor in political life because we answer the German peoples' aspiration for something different," he said. "No future Social Democratic government can survive without us."

Many experts on Germany believe he may be right. Since 1969, the Social Democrats have ruled in Bonn in coalition with the much smaller, middle-of-the-road Free Democrats. The latter kept their senior partners from edging too far leftward at home or to a neutralist, even pro-Soviet position abroad, as many of its young supporters have wished. The Social Democrat-Free Democrat mix held West Germany firmly to the Western alliance notwithstanding a growing urge to increase the political distance between Bonn and Washington.

Rate change approved

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Public Utility Commission has approved an application by Lyntegar Electric Cooperative, Inc., to change rates for customers in 11 West Texas counties.

The co-op will receive $1,252,886 in additional annual revenues under the new rates.

The new monthly rates are:

—Residential, $7.50 with 30 kilowatt hours (kwh) April-September and 2.74 cents per kwh thereafter; and October-March, $7.50 with 30 kwh, with the next 770 kwh at 2.74 cents per kwh and 1.3 cents per kwh over 800 kwh.

—Small commercial, $9 with 30 kwh, with the next 970 kwh at 3.04 cents per kwh and 2.69 cents per kwh over 1,000 kwh.

TV channel sparks British concern

LONDON (AP) — Britain's first new television channel in 18 years debuted last week, despite a storm of controversy over a bill of fare that ranges from American football and "I Love Lucy" reruns to punk rock shows and shocking movies.

Chief Executive Jeremy Isaacs predicts Channel 4 will win a 10 percent share of the viewing audience in this nation of 56 million by the end of its second year.

But, the veteran 49-year-old TV producer adds: "I know there are banana skins on every square inch of the pavement ahead, and the television adage says 'If at first you don't succeed, you're fired.' "

A critic called it "one of the most shocking films ever seen on TV."

Launched with $177 million put up by Britain's 14 commercial TV production companies, Channel 4 has been charged by Parliament with the job of providing "a distinctive service."

But one marketing executive, criticizing the programming as being limited, claimed it was only "geared to punks, Rastafarians and the Irish."

Channel 4 is Britain's second commercial station. The other is Independent Television, or ITV. There are two non-commercial channels, BBC1 and BBC2, run by the publicly funded British Broadcasting Corp.

Channel 4 already has gotten a double dose of labor trouble.

Actors are pressing for more money to make commercials, forcing the channel to start out with fewer station breaks and an estimated revenue loss of $850,000 daily. Local technicians working on Channel 4 programs around the country are still negotiating for pay and work conditions.

Employee training program set for '83

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A training program will be intitiated next year to teach Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation employees across the state formal accounting procedures, says Bill Hines, acting director of the department's internal review division.

"We need to improve management controls throughout the department," Hines said. "It has been on-the-job training in the past."

For most of the state, one employee from each of the highway department's 25 district offices and 14 division offices will attend the course, which will probably last one week and be held in Austin, Hines said.

Training will encompass basic audit standards and report writing, he said, noting the idea of such a program has been kicked around for several years.

Earlier this year, the highway department received three proposals from accounting firms — two from Austin and one from Dallas — on setting up the training program and Hines said his division will recommend one of the proposals to the department later this month.

Two released from jail

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Two persons sent to prison from the West Texas area have been released on mandatory supervision by Gov. Bill Clements upon the recommendation of the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Reymundo B. Falcon, convicted in Reeves County Nov. 24, 1980, of driving while intoxicated, subsequent offense, two counts; and on Nov. 27, 1980, of burglary of a building, has been released to Reeves County after serving and earning four years of a four-year sentence.

Ray Stewart Marion, convicted in Midland County May 29, 1981, of possession of a firearm by a felon, and in Howard County June 9, 1981, of theft over $200, has been released to Midland County after serving and earning three years of a three-year sentence.

This graph indicates what's at stake in today's gubernatorial elections. Texas Gov. Bill Clements is among 16 incumbent Republicans nationwide. Vermont's current governor, Richard Snelling, is seeking his fourth term but has been facing charges of greed from his opponent, Democrat Madeleine Kunin.

Challenger contends Vermont needs change

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — In her uphill battle to become Vermont's first woman governor, Democrat Madeleine Kunin is resorting to a charge that Republican incumbent Richard Snelling is guilty of greed in seeking a fourth term as governor.

Making little discernible headway against Snelling's comfortable lead by attacking his record, the popular, 49-year-old lieutenant governor has lately taken to accusing Snelling of violating the Vermont tradition of the citizen-politician.

When he announced a year ago he was retiring, Snelling expressed "deep respect" for that tradition of private citizens who enter public service "but have never seen politics as the compelling force in their lives."

Snelling later changed his mind, thanks to a draft movement inspired by a newspaper editorial urging him to seek re-election. He deferred to the voters to decide how long is enough.

To Mrs. Kunin, he responds with his trademark self-confidence: "I'm in stride and I want to go on serving the people of Vermont."

Even Mrs. Kunin concedes that Snelling, 55, a millionaire former businessman who retired in August as chairman of the National Governors' Association, is entering next Tuesday's election well ahead in his bid to become the first man in 142 years to serve a fourth term as governor of Vermont. He won his first two-year term in 1976.

Suggestions that Snelling might have lost votes because of his protracted role in "new federalism" negotiations between state governors and the White House apparently have proved groundless

Mrs. Kunin has said the talks were a waste of time and indicated that Snelling was more concerned about national than state problems, but neither she nor Snelling has made much of the issue.

Snelling stresses his managerial approach to state government, which he says has brought economic stability to Vermont, with a 5.7 percent unemployment rate well below the national average and 26,000 new jobs in the past six years.

Mrs. Kunin concedes that Snelling has been a good state manager, but insists that it's time for "new energy, new ideas and new people."

Plan for ranking school construction projects OK'd

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, has approved a plan for ranking requested construction projects at public colleges and universities by use of a point system.

The plan was approved by the board at its regular quarterly meeting in Austin Thursday.

Higher Education Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth said the board's staff used past experience under the former "Title I Facilities Construction Program," which the board administered a decade ago, in drawing up the system.

The ranking system, Ashworth said, "divides the awarding of points between the relative need of different institutions and the relative merits of individual projects."

Since, he said, "we can assume" older campuses have greater needs for repair and rehabilitation work than newer campuses, some points are awarded based on the age and condition of the total campus physical plant.

Points also are awarded based on "the relative merits and needs of each of the individual projects," and points will be distributed to give greater weight to some items, Ashworth said.

"Tie-breakers" are provided in the system, he reported.

Ashworth also said the system includes provisions to allow the board to "depart" from the ranking system "if unusual circumstances exist" to move projects up or down the priority list.

After projects are ranked under the point system, they will be placed in order and submitted to the Legislature for consideration for appropriations.

Ashworth said the materials provided to lawmakers "will be purely advisory and...not binding in any way upon the Legislature in making appropriations."

The system has been cleared with the Legislative Budget Board staff and Governor's Budget Office, he said, and comments were received on the plan from eight schools.

The schools agreed with the concept, but suggested some specific changes in the criteria used for awarding points, he said, and some of those changes were adopted.

Swedish adults find education refreshing

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Every fall 2 million Swedes — a third of the adult population — go back to school to learn everything from porcelain painting to political history.

Titles available among the 340,000 courses, or "study circles," include "Getting To Know Albania" and "Mushrooms We Find in the Woods."

Peter Engberg, secretary of the National Swedish Federation of Adult Education Associations, said actual enrollment was about 3.2 million annually, but because some take more than one course, "we estimate the number of participants at 2 million."

The Swedish government finances circle leaders, study materials and administration.

"Study circles are good because you don't need any knowledge beforehand to be able to participate and there is no pressure on you. It's all up to you," said Marianne Jensfelt, a 33-year-old job counselor who has attended more than a half-dozen study circles.

She studied Spanish for several semesters, took an introductory course in weaving and attended a seminar series on energy resources. She also took a course on the political system of Albania, followed by a trip to that communist country.

Typically, informal learning techniques are used — no grades are given, no formal qualifications are required of leaders and a course's students may draw up their own plan of study.

By the same token, the terminology used in information brochures is designed to prevent association with traditional schooling — circle leader instead of teacher, member or participant instead of student, meeting instead of lesson.

Most circles meet at night, but there are also daytime courses for retired people.

PETROPLEX OFFERS IMPRESSIVE SERVICE TO NEW SAVINGS CUSTOMERS

Customers of Petroplex Savings' new Plaza Center branch office will receive the most comprehensive financial services offered by any bank or savings and loan in Midland, stated Petroplex president Jim Everett.

"We are anxious to meet with our new Plaza Center customers and personally discuss our many checking, savings and investment plans," said Everett. "We think they'll be surprised at just how many banking services Petroplex offers."

Petroplex services include a variety of interest bearing accounts and high-yielding savings plans and certificates, as well as special accounts designed exclusively for women, junior savers and individuals over age 55.

"Our customers find that we're the only 'bank' they need, "commented Everett. "And since we are the only locally owned savings and loan association in town, our customers know they'll always receive friendly, personal service from Midlanders just like themselves."

Petroplex also has two convenient auto banking centers located downtown at 510 N. Marienfield and Plaza Center at Wadley and Garfield open from 7:30 to 5:30 Monday through Thursday, and 7:30 to 6:00 Friday.

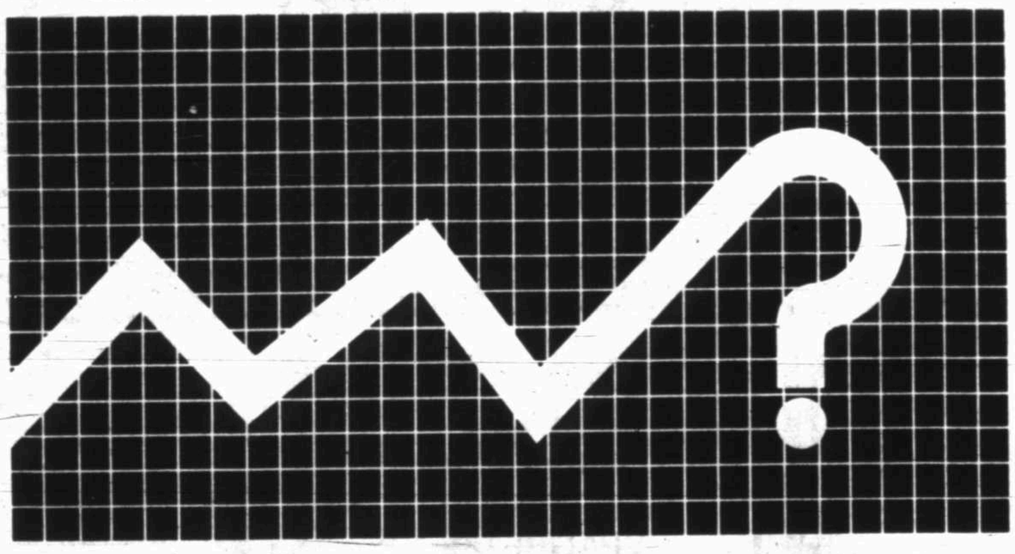
Petroplex also provides safe deposit boxes, direct deposit savings, and 24-hour banking services through the statewide Teller 2/Pulse automated teller machine network. Notary public services, cashiers checks, money orders, and travelers checks are provided free of charge to Petroplex customer.

Petroplex Savings was insured by the FSLIC on June 11 and opened June 21 of this year as the first savings and loan chartered in Midland since 1960. At the end of the first quarter assets had surpassed $8.5 million and deposits exceeded $7 million.

"We invite all our new customers to drop by our Plaza Center branch office at Garfield & Wadley or our downtown office at 510 N. Marienfield at their earliest convenience," added Everett. "Our savings counselors will be happy to answer questions and discuss the many high-yielding, liquid investment opportunities designed exclusively for Midlanders."

Petroplex lobbies are open from 8:30 to 4:30 Monday through Thursday and 8:30 to 6:00 on Friday. Free parking is available in both locations. The Plaza Center phone number is 686-7815; the downtown number is 682-0291.

Investment Uncertainty?



WITH A FIRST NATIONAL 6-MONTH CERTIFICATE, YOU CAN BE CERTAIN OF YOUR INVESTMENT.

The interest rates on money funds may appear higher going in, but there is no way to be certain what the rate may be at the end of the month, or even the next week!

At The First National Bank of Midland, the interest rate on a 6-Month Money Market Certificate of Deposit is assured for the entire 182 day term, as long as you maintain your deposit.

Current Rate
8.481%

This is an annual rate and is subject to change at renewal. Federal regulations prohibit compounding of interest during the 182 day term and require that the penalty for early withdrawal be collected from the principal if the prescribed penalty period has not been met. The interest rate changes weekly and the current rate is in effect through November 8, 1982.

Oil drilling shaky in Great Lakes

PORT MAITLAND, Ontario (AP) — Aboard the drilling rig Miss Libby, anchored about 10 miles off the Canadian shore of Lake Erie, workmen labor around the clock punching holes in the lakebed in search of natural gas.

Miss Libby, owned by Calgary-based Pembina Exploration Ltd., is one of four rigs active in the eastern end of Lake Erie, the only part of the Great Lakes where offshore drilling is permitted.

There are already 479 active wells in the lake, supplying about 6 billion cubic feet of natural gas. Pembina and the other company working on the lake, Consumers Gas in Toronto, plan to drill about 100 more wells this year, of which perhaps half will be productive.

Despite all the activity, the lake's potential for a major energy contribution is modest. Ontario gets only 2 percent of its natural gas from Lake Erie, looking west to Alberta for most of its supplies. Drilling of any kind is banned on the U.S. side of the lake.

Worry about the possibility of a disastrous oil spill led to a ban on drilling for oil in the lakes about a decade ago. The eastern end of Lake Erie was left open for exploration because the likelihood of hitting oil by accident is small. On the rare occasions oil is struck, the well is plugged immediately.

"A gas leak is not going to create any significant ecological problems," said Dick Moyse of the Ontario Energy Ministry.

There is some sentiment for lifting the oil prohibition, although such a move would certainly bring protests from environmental activists.

"We've been drilling out there since 1913, without incident," Keen said. "In today's energy scenario, it's natural to think, why not develop the oil reserves?"

But Jack V. Hill, a geological consultant in London, Ontario, whose business is advising companies on where to look for gas and oil, is doubtful.

"I can't see that drilling in the lake would be commercially viable," Hill said in a telephone interview. "You're not going to see a bonanza."

Except for Lake Erie, he pointed out, the Great Lakes are very deep and can be treacherous in bad weather. The gas under Lake Erie is worth pulling out in such modest quantities only because it can be found in water only 50 to 200 feet deep.

Ontario draws 1,112 megawatts from power plants at Saunders Dam and Niagara Falls, where there are also U.S. installations.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, November 4, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actor-comedian Art Carney, fashion designer Pauline Trigere, M*A*S*H actress Loretta Swit and actor Martin Balsam share this birthday with you. Also born on this day: Walter Cronkite and former baseball great Dick Groat. Investments contribute to your financial success in the year ahead. Once business people discover your special talents, you find yourself very much in demand. Although mixing work and romance could go against you, separately they bring you deep satisfaction. Extend your social circle to include more young people. A family member returns to the fold. Real estate becomes more affordable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Partnerships need to be re-evaluated. You come up with an idea that has great potential. Look for ways to put it to practical use. Recognition is given someone who has long deserved it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Friends rally to your side. The boss' promise may have a hollow ring to it. Try to get commitments in writing. A romance with a former colleague takes you by surprise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You feel trapped by daily chores. Break out of your regular routine and do something different! Refuse to give another chance to someone who never tells the truth.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Act on what you know to be true, not on what others tell you. Be decisive and you win big! Spend a quiet evening alone sorting out your plans.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some confusion over romance may be affecting your concentration at work. Clear up whatever questions are bothering you. Limit your social obligations and quit burning the candle at both ends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You will receive some excellent news in the next few days. Get a firmer grip on your emotions. A disruptive attitude will only bring you trouble. Consider a family member's special needs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep your options open. Consult an attorney before agreeing to terms. Partnership profits are up. Put romance aside until you get your business responsibilities under control.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do more things on your own. Greater effort at place of employment will bring handsome results. Take an advanced education course or go back to school and get your diploma.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your employer is in the mood to accept your suggestions. Those in insurance, bonds or savings and loans find ways to increase their income. Romantic confusion disappears.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stay close to those who have already found success. Your income depends on how well you can sell yourself to the public. Do not make any drastic changes today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A job you dislike could be a steppingstone to real success. Someone new enters your life. Take careful aim at your career goals. Group objectives may not be right for you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be consistent and you will soon get a promotion. Present a new idea long with an old one that has been repackaged. Romance helps you make an important decision.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♡.

Some people like the sound of their voices. But bidding simply because it is your turn can have untoward repercussions in the play.

East's decision to overcall one heart ranks among the worst overcalls we have seen this year. As it was, it propelled North-South into a slam they might not have gotten to under their own steam, and tipped declarer off to the winning line to make it doubly expensive.

Declarer won the heart in dummy and ran off five rounds of trumps. This reduced the hand to the following position:

♡ K J 2
♣ A 6

◇ J 5 4
♣ J 10 8

♡ Q 9 8
◇ K 6
♣ K 9

♣ Q 5

Declarer simply led a diamond to the ace and returned a diamond. East won the king, but was end played. A club would allow declarer to score the queen, while the heart would be into dummy's tenace, permitting declarer to sluff a losing club and leaving his hand high.

Note that it makes no difference how East discards—declarer can always make the slam by relying on East to hold the missing kings because of his overcall. Had there been no overcall, South could still come to twelve tricks by guessing everything right, but we wouldn't want to bet on that.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Brazil plans icy endeavor

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — This South American country, most of which broils under a tropical sun, is planning an expedition to establish research bases and facilities in the ice of Antarctica.

"We're ready for this expedition," said Luiz Filipe de Macedo Soares, the Brazilian Foreign Ministry's United Nations Division Counselor. "We've been planning it since 1975."

A SHIP, purchased from Denmark for $3 million, is en route to Brazil and the exhibition's departure is set for late December, Macedo Soares said.

December is summer time in the Southern Hemisphere.

Brazil and foreign diplomats say that the move to establish research bases and facilities will give the world's fifth largest nation a voice in the future of Antarctica.

Brazil waited until 1975 to sign the 1959 treaty calling for peaceful cooperation in the 5-million-square-mile area. The treaty also froze all territorial claims in Antarctica by France, Britain, Argentina, New Zealand, Australia and Chile.

"We delayed because of the money it took for the planning of our country," Macedo Soares said. "But last year we decided we couldn't delay anymore."

THE ANTARCTICA treaty is up for renegotiation in 1991.

"It is important that we are included in this group that decides," he said. But in order to be a part of that select group...Brazil must show that it has an active interest in the area and is doing something about it.

"We are planning one expedition each year in the summer."

"For our proximity, we have an interest in wanting a part in any decision that is made," Macedo Soares said.

Brazil has said it does not want to claim land, but instead wants the area used for peaceful studies and exchanges of information.

But some foreign diplomats in Brasilia, all of whom asked not to be identified, said Brazil's push to be part of the "Antarctica Club" is a step away from the nation's chosen role as a Third World country toward an acceptance of authority and influence.

"It's part of wanting to be a superpower in the Atlantic," said a European diplomat.

ANOTHER EUROpean diplomat said, "This is the first time they are able and willing to act as if they are on a higher level."

Macedo Soares says Brazil's interest for now is scientific, and the nation hopes to learn more about such things as how the Antarctic affects weather in the south.

Several countries, including the United States and Britain, have volunteered technical assistance or suggested partnerships in the upcoming expedition. Brazil, which has participated in Antarctic trips with Chile and Britain, says it will make its first voyage alone, however.

"Antarctica is a small club," Macedo Soares said. "Others see that we are serious and it will be an exchange of information."

A WESTERN diplomat said the U.S. offer to help is simply part of an existing scientific pact calling for exchanges between the two nations.

"If there is to be an Antarctic power struggle, we want them on our side," a British diplomat said.

There had been reports that Brazil was going to buy the British ship the Endurance, which was later used in the war between Britain and Argentina over the Falkland Islands.

"That was a mistake," said a British diplomatic source. "The Endurance was never really up for sale." The source also said Britain's fight for the Falklands and South Georgia islands was in part to keep its South Atlantic claim to Antarctica.

Democrats may win costly race thanks to Republican in-fighting

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The most costly congressional race in history is being waged in California's 43rd District, where bickering Republicans may squander their voter advantage and lose to a New Deal Democrat.

"Normally, this district would go Republican. I admit that," says Democratic candidate Roy Archer, a political science teacher at tiny Palomar College. "But we're going to take it because of the internal struggle in the Republican Party and because of the economy."

That struggle began in the June 8 primary, when 18 Republicans and three Democrats put $2.5 million into their campaigns. The largest chunk, $837,719, was spent by Republican Johnnie R. Crean, a 33-year-old Orange County travel-trailer manufacturer, who was criticized by local GOP groups for running a dirty campaign.

Crean won the primary by 92 votes over Ron Packard, a Mormon dentist and former mayor of Carlsbad, Calif. But Packard, declaring that thousands of people told him they didn't want Crean as their congressman, has waged an uphill write-in campaign that the Republican nominee says will only end in a win for the Democratic candidate.

Polls commissioned by Packard and Archer show Crean placing last in a three-way race, even when Packard's name isn't mentioned. But the margins of error in the surveys are greater than the differences among the candidates, and Crean is counting on a large block of undecided voters.

The total spent in the primary and general election campaigns reached $2.7 million by Oct. 1 in the district which covers northern San Diego County and southern Orange County. That exceeds the $2.6 million spent in the 1980 race between Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Santa Monica, and Carey Peck, son of actor Gregory Peck.

Packard and Crean are both fundamentalist Republicans who support President Reagan's policies. At most debates they gang up on Archer, ridiculing his suggestions for a pipeline to bring water from Canada to Southern California, and a draft that would put all high school graduates to work on public works projects.

Packard spends much of his campaign time explaining how to write his name on the ballot rather than arguing about issues. Although he says he has forgiven Crean for the way he waged his primary campaign, Packard won't let the voters forget.

In a recent appearance, Packard said Crean's election would be "sowing the seeds of a new scandal in Congress." He accused Crean of maligning blacks, embarrassing Jews and making false claims of support.

"That was the most vicious speech I've ever heard," said Crean, who says Packard's denunciation of him is like the pot calling the kettle black. Crean apologized in a half-hour television show for his primary campaign, and fired the Butcher-Forde Agency of Newport Beach, which handled it.

"My campaign I apologize for, but (Packard) gave his word to support the Republican nominee," said Crean. "There's a tremendous difference in making a mistake and not living up to our word."

Although the national GOP leadership supports Crean, Republican political action committees are giving their money to Packard. For the first time in its 13-year existence, the Fund for a Conservative Majority endorsed a write-in candidate. Robert Heckman, the chairman of the fund, said he's not bothered that the White House has taken pains to support Crean.

Clements campaign among more interesting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a rundown of some of the more interesting races voters will be deciding today: —Alabama: George Wallace, who once fought against black rights, is trying for a political comeback in a bid for a fourth term as governor. Wallace, who was crippled by a gunman during a campaign for president, has met stiff opposition from Republican Emory Folmar, mayor of Montgomery, in a southern state troubled by unemployment.

—Texas: This oil-rich state boasts the most expensive state campaign in U.S. history: Republican Gov. William Clements is spending $11 million — more than any state candidate ever — in his bid for re-election. His opponent, Attorney General Mark White, will spend about half as much.

—Mississippi: Robert G. Clarke is trying to become the first black member of the House to represent this former slave state this century, but he'll have to defeat the well-financed effort of Republican Webb Franklin to do it.

—New Jersey: Republican Rep. Millicent Fenwick, 72, is well-known to newspaper readers as the inspiration for a millionaire character in the comic strip Doonesbury. She shunned financial support from special-interest groups when she was running far ahead and now is running into trouble in her quest for a Senate seat against industrialist Frank Lautenberg, who has spent $1.5 million of his own.

Wealthy Republican, Democrat from New York City squaring off

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — One is the son of an immigrant grocer. The other made millions in the drug store business. Neither has ever won political office on his own. Now, Mario Cuomo and Lewis Lehrman are locked in a close contest for governor of the nation's second largest state.

Cuomo, 50, who was elected lieutenant governor four years ago as retiring Democratic Gov. Hugh Carey's running mate, sees the race as a classic battle between a liberal in the Franklin Roosevelt mold — himself — and a Republican advocate of "Reaganomics squared."

Lehrman, 44, says a Cuomo victory today would mean a continuation of Carey's policies, which he charges have turned New York into "an economic backwater."

Recent polls indicate a tight race, with Cuomo leading in traditionally Democratic New York City, Lehrman holding the advantage among the generally more conservative voters upstate, and neither claiming a substantial edge in New York's suburbs.

Lehrman, former president of the giant Rite Aid drug store chain, has outspent Cuomo by $10.8 million to $4.2 million. But contributions to the Democrat's campaign have picked up in recent weeks, and Cuomo now is matching Lehrman dollar for dollar.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Emulsifiers keep water, oil together in prepared food

Dear Dr. Solomon: I don't like to write to ask simple questions, but I'd like to know what an emulsifier is. I tried looking it up in the dictionary, but I can't make heads or tails out of what it says. Can you tell me what it is and what it is used for? — Lisa, Newark, Del.

Dear Lisa: Emulsifiers are used in food preparation to keep oil and water from separating. Oil and water generally do not mix, and without emulsifiers, bread would quickly go stale and cake would not be light and fluffy. One of the commonly used emulsifiers is lecithin, which is derived from vegetable oils.

Dear Dr. Solomon: How can I get my father to eat better? He is 87 years old and just doesn't seem to want to bother with foods that require any chewing. Can you offer any help? — Mrs. B.E., Des Moines, Iowa

Dear Mrs. E.: Many older people have difficulty with chewing, and the logical first step is to have your father checked by a dentist so that any dental problems he may be having can be corrected. If chewing remains a problem, there are some simple steps you can take to overcome it.

For example, hard vegetables, such as carrots, and tough meats can be chopped, ground, grated, steamed or stewed. This would make them easier to chew while at the same time preserving all of their nutritional value.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I started jogging a few weeks ago in order to lose weight and I was really congratulating myself for sticking it out. The more I hated it, the more I felt I was doing myself good. Then I read that if I jogged for an hour, I would only lose about 700 calories. Since I'm good for about 20 minutes before I feel I'm going to collapse, that means I'm only losing about 230 calories. What's the big deal about exercise if that's all you lose? Is it worth the effort? — Sandy, Tampa, Fla.

Dear Sandy: First of all, exercise would be beneficial even if it did not produce weight loss. Exercise helps tone the muscles and enhances cardiovascular functioning. But the value of exercise extends beyond the 20 minutes or so that you actually spend jogging.

Recent research has shown that exercise not only burns calories while you are engaged in the activity; it also results in an increased metabolic rate for up to 15 hours after you stop. In addition, exercise cuts down on the amount of fat the body wants to carry and suppresses appetite.

If you don't like jogging, try swimming or bicycling, but don't cut our exercise completely.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Are all fat children fat because they eat too much? — Lola, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Lola: It is estimated that about 95 percent of obesity in children is due to factors such as overeating, lack of exercise or a combination of the two. I find that about five percent of my fat child patients have some form of endocrine, metabolic, or chromosomal abnormality that accounts for their fatness. Fortunately, both groups can be helped with a proper specific program and/or correct medication.

'Dippy broads' stars during era of silent Westerns

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — They were leading ladies in the heyday of silent western movies, when cowboys like Tom Mix and William S. Hart rode the range.

Today they live five minutes apart in Southern California's San Fernando Valley. Jane Novak is 86, her sister Eva, 84. They are full of life and fragmented memories.

"We started out when it only cost 10 cents to get into a movie," Jane recalls with a small laugh.

"No," Eva says, "5 cents."

"All right, 5 cents."

They are seated in the Sherman Oaks area of Los Angeles home of Jane's daughter and son-in-law, Mickey and Walter Seltzer, talking about the past.

Seltzer, a movie producer for 25 years, refers to the sisters with affectionate good humor as "two dippy old broads from St. Louis."

THEY WERE indeed born in St. Louis. Their road to Hollywood began in 1913 when a studio head saw Jane's photograph on a relative's desk and offered her work in films.

Jane was 16 when she came west. She went to work immediately for $10 a week.

Eva, meanwhile, was still in St. Louis, working in a department store.

"My uncle Joe came up to me one day and said, 'Get out of this town as fast as you can and go to California.' I don't know why. He just didn't like St. Louis."

"I was at Universal then," Jane says. "You came two years after I did."

"You were living in those Virginia apartments," Eva reminds her.

"Was I?"

"Yes, so it must have been more than two years."

"OK, Jane sighs.

"I was 18," Eva presses.

"I said OK."

"Jane was showing me around when a director fell in love with my tiny little feet," Eva says. "I think I wore a size one shoe. What was his name?"

"I DON'T remember," Jane says.

"Sure you do!"

"No I don't."

"Anyhow, he asked me to walk up some stairs for a movie he was shooting," Eva says. "He just wanted to show my tiny little feet and my legs. I was very slim."

Jane is the more sedate of the two, tolerating with patience the feistier nature of her little sister.

Jane co-starred in five movies with William S. Hart and was engaged to him for about a year. They never married. She says she doesn't remember why.

EVA CO-STARRED in eight movies with Tom Mix.

Both sisters did many more movies with others — Jane made her last one in the early 1950s, Eva in the early 1960s — but they don't remember how many more. For Jane, there were films like "String Beans," "Redskin" and "Prison Girls." For Eva, "Wild Seed," "O'Malley of the Mounted" and "The Medicine Man."

"Tom said I reminded him of a baby sister," Eva says. "He liked working with me because I did the stunts with him."

"We all did our own stunts in those days," Jane reminds her.

"I was making $15 a week at the start," Eva says. Pause. Then, to Jane: "You were making 10."

"The most I made was $2,000 a week," Jane replies.

"I never made anything like that," Eva says testily. "My only point was that in those days they paid you in cash."

"I NEVER got cash."

"Well, I did."

"All right."

"Was that Victoria?" Jane asks.

"Was who Victoria?"

"His wife."

"Of course it was Victoria."

"THE CATTLE were stampeding and Tom said to lie down by the side of the horse, they would go around the horse and not harm us. I wasn't even scared. You're never scared when you're young."

"Didn't you do 'Riders of the Purple Sage' with Tom?" Eva asks.

"I don't know."

"I told a fan I didn't do it, Jane must have done it."

"I don't remember," Jane says. "I probably did."

"THE DAY before yesterday," Jane says, "I received a fan letter from Germany. I still get about 10 fan letters a week."

"Oh, I get some too," Eva says.

Sasparilla: Soft drink that won the West

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

TEMPE, Ariz. — The cowboy punches open the swinging doors. He swaggers up to the bar, where the bad guys are guzzling whiskey, and bellows:

"I'll have a sarsaparilla, bartender."

Sarsaparilla (for ease of pronunciation, the first five letters get shortened to just plain "sas") was the soft drink that won the West. Jim Colleary, 55, and Don Lindstrom, 49, hope that it will tickle the tonsils of the nation.

The two former beer wholesalers pooled their resources three years ago to buy out a small beverage company based here that makes and sells Ol' Bob Miller's Sas'parilla. So far, at least, they've had a measure of success. Sales have grown 3 1/2 percent since they took over.

A former Phoenix flavor salesman who is now in the import business, Bob Miller had worked for years developing a formula for the old-fashioned beverage, one of the earliest of soft drinks.

The original drink was derived from a tropical American plant that is a member of the lily family, but Ol' Bob Miller's uses artificial flavoring to achieve a hint of root beer flavor. It has the coloring of cherry coke and comes regular and sugar free.

Seven years ago Miller began marketing his sarsparilla at a few outlets in the Phoenix area. Now Ol' Bob Miller's Sas'parilla is being sold in 10 Western states, including California, Wisconsin, and even London, England. Cowboy steakhouses throughout the West feature it, as do some amusement parks like Knott's Berry Farm in Southern California.

In 1980, the first full year Colleary and Lindstrom owned the company, it had $240,000 in gross sales. Last year's sales totaled $800,000. While sales have risen, the company's profits have been squeezed by an ambitious ad campaign in English and Spanish in newspapers and on radio, TV and billboards.

A typical ad shows a prospector and his mule entering a saloon together, with the man proclaiming: "I'll have two sas'parilla. One for me and one for my mule, Sir Lostalot."

Governor-elect Mark White and his wife, Linda Gale, celebrated with supporters at a victory party in Austin Tuesday night following White's defeat of incumbent Republican governor Bill Clements. Texans voted overwhelmingly Democratic, as all major state races went to that party's candidates.

Hobby talks future

By The Associated Press

Fresh from a comfortable victory that sends him to preside over the Texas Senate for a fourth term, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said today he and other Texas Democrats are faced with rigorous challenges over the next few years.

"I am pleased with the past 10 years. Our triumphs have been many, but there is unfinished work ahead," Hobby said.

"Today is a new beginning for Texas, and each of us who has been given the privilege to serve in the coming years has a greater burden to make this state excel."

Results tabulated by the secretary of state's Election Central showed Hobby with 1,482,325 votes and Republican George Strake with 1,035,660 shortly before operations were shut down for the night about 2:30 a.m. today.

Hobby led by 58-41 percent over Strake, 47, who was campaign chairman for Gov. Bill Clements. The governor appointed Strake secretary of state, a job he held until resigning it earlier this year to run for lieutenant governor.

Hobby, 50, said a key to the Democratic landslide in Texas was a large turnout at the polls.

"The size of the voter turnout is evidence of a renewal of faith in our system of government. I have said many times that the quality of government is reflected in the interest shown by the electorate," Hobby said.

"As lieutenant governor, I renew my deep commitment to do all in my power to better the lot of all Texans and to help give them an effective and responsible state government."

Strake had linked himself closely to the policies of Clements and President Ronald Reagan. He tried to brand Hobby as a liberal and he promised a conservative turn in the Texas Senate if voters would turn Hobby out and put him in.

His first act as lieutenant governor, Strake had promised, would be the removal of Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, as chairman of the Jurisprudece Committee.

Hobby has favored a seniority system for committee chairmanships, a system that currently would assure several liberals a committee chairmanship.

Strake complained that Hobby had accomplished little as lieutenant governor. Hobby has contended his job is to moderate the Senate's proceedings, not to take the lead on legislation.

"There's the general appropriations bill, and all the rest is poetry, really," Hobby said.

Both Hobby and Strake are members of wealthy Houston families.

Hobby is the son of former Texas Gov. Bill Hobby and is president of the Houston Post.

Democratic tide takes Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — What appeared to be a gentle, incoming Republican tide in the Texas Senate has receded, leaving Democrats with the same control they had two years ago.

Republicans may have been victims of their own ambitions as four GOP senators ran for higher office, and all lost.

Voters even favored a dead Democrat over a live Republican by casting more votes for the late Sen. John Wilson of La Grange than Victoria family physician J. Everett Ware.

Wilson, 43, died Sept. 19 of lung cancer, one day after the deadline for substituting another candidate on the ballot.

By voting overwhelmingly for Wilson, however, Texans in that traditionally Democratic South Central Texas district forced a special election, which a Democrat would hope to win.

Republican candidates had apparent solid leads early today in only five of the 31 Senate races, compared with the eight seats they held in the 1981 Legislature, after Sen. Bill Meier switched to the GOP.

Incomplete vote totals indicated that Democratic incumbents had fought off the challenge of every Republican and a record number of 24 Libertarian candidates, as well as two Citizens Party hopefuls.

The apparent GOP Senate winners were Sens. O.H. "Ike" Harris and John Leedom of Dallas, Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown of Lake Jackson, and Reps. Don Henderson of Houston and Bob McFarland of Arlington.

Of those five, only Leedom had a Democratic opponent — Ada Smith of Dallas.

Republican Dr. John Jose "Andy" Andujar, a Fort Worth pathologist, trailed former Fort Worth mayor Hugh Parmer in his attempt to succeed his wife, Sen. Betty Andujar, who announced her retirement.

Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, had only minor party opposition in his bid to become the first black senator since Barbara Jordan quit to run for Congress in 1972.

In races for open seats, Rep. John Whitmore, D-Houston, took a strong lead over Republican Marshall Martin, former administrative aide to the late Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas; Rep. Ted Lyon, D-Dallas, was up by nearly 12,000 votes over Republican Leonard Davis of Tyler; Bill Sims of San Angelo led Republican Ernest Angelo of Midland by over 3,000 votes; John Montford, criminal district attorney of Lubbock County, widened his margin over Republican Jim Reese of Odessa; and Chet Edwards of Duncanville easily defeated Libertarian John Harris of Waco.

Democratic incumbents who were apparent winners included Ed Howard of Texarkana, Roy Blake of Nacogdoches, Carl Parker of Port Arthur, Kent Caperton of Bryan, Lindon Williams of Houston, Chet Brooks of Pasadena, Lloyd Doggett of Austin, Glenn Kothmann of San Antonio, Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi, Bob Glasgow of Stephenville, Oscar Mauzy of Dallas, Bob Vale of San Antonio, Tati Santiesteban of El Paso, Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls, and Bill Sarpalius of Hereford.

Brooks, Doggett, Kothmann, Mauzy, Sarpalius and Glasgow had GOP opponents, with Glasgow pulling away from Gary Hagman of Weatherford, half-brother of television star Larry Hagman, who plays J.R. Ewing on "Dallas."

Republicans lose out in House races

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Republicans, who hoped to pick up as many as eight seats in the state House, lost ground as a Democratic blitz spread throughout the state on Election Day.

Incomplete returns today indicated the GOP might lose three seats in the 150-member House. The Republicans now hold 37 seats.

Several Republican incumbents fell victim on a day that saw the Democrats regain the governor's mansion, thanks to a surprisingly high voter turnout. Democrats Bill Harrison of Corpus Christi and Jimmy Mankins of Kilgore won House races they lost to Republicans two years ago.

The House leadership is sure to remain in the Democrats' hands, with Gib Lewis of Fort Worth a prohibitive favorite to win his colleagues' nod for speaker in January. Lewis was unopposed in his re-election bid. Speaker Bill Clayton did not seek re-election to the House.

Mankins, D-Kilgore, beat former Gregg County Sheriff Mike Fetter, a Republican. Mankins, who gathered 53 percent of the vote, defeated Fetter earlier this year by 30 votes in a special election. That election was needed when Rep. Mike Martin, R-Longview, quit after pleading guilty in a self-plotted shooting scheme.

Mattox says Meier's 'anti-consumerism' lost race

By The Associated Press

Democrat Jim Mattox says he won the state attorney general's race by a wide margin because Texas voters were too smart to forget his opponent's "anti-consumer record."

Mattox and Republican Bill Meier, a state senator from Euless, both ran on a law-and-order platform.

But Mattox outpolled Meier by a roughly 3-to-2 margin, garnering about 60 percent of the vote.

"We managed to clearly show Meier was anti-consumer," Mattox said early today. "His anti-consumer record came back to haunt him."

The two-term U.S. representative said he also credits an "overall, unified, umbrella-type" Democratic ticket for his strong showing.

"The people on the 'down-side' of the ballot were good soldiers and they helped get the vote out," he said. "The voters rejected (Meier's) John Birch, ultra right-wing tactics."

Meier was not available for comment.

"Our polls showed us at a dead heat as late as two weeks ago," Meier's campaign press secretary, John Cozart, said late Tuesday. "That's why we're still cautiously optimistic it'll be close."

It wasn't. Meier later conceded defeat.

The spirited race for attorney general was peppered by name-calling — and highlighted perhaps by Meier actually taking Mattox to court over campaign advertising.

Mattox, 39, nicknamed Meier "Utility Bill," contended Meier consistently supported Texas utilities to the detriment of Texas consumers.

Mattox said today his first priorities in office would be to beef up his staff and wrangle with the budget. He also put the ferreting out of consumer fraud near the top of the list, and said he will revive the state's consumer protection division.

Mattox and Meier both entered the Texas Legislature in 1973, and Mattox was elected to the U.S. House in 1976. Meier switched to the Republican Party last year.

Both men promised to crack down on crime in Texas — even though the state's attorney general handles mostly civil cases — and each supports the death penalty. Mattox is a former Dallas County assistant district attorney.

Richards says women aided her victory

By The Associated Press

Democrat Ann Richards became the first woman elected to statewide office in Texas in 50 years by coasting to victory over Republican Allen Clark in the state treasurer's race.

But being bunched in the middle of a Democratic ticket that swept the state didn't hurt, she acknowledged.

Ms. Richards, 49, drew roughly 60 percent of the vote and never was seriously threatened by Clark, a veteran who lost both legs in Vietnam.

"We're certainly not downplaying the female effect," her campaign press secretary, Richard Paul, said in Austin late Tuesday. "A lot of women became active in politics for the first time through this campaign."

Clark, 40, had criticized Ms. Richards for her stance as a feminist, and the historical novelty of a woman elected to statewide office in Texas was fodder for the news media.

The last woman voted into a statewide office was Miriam "Ma" Ferguson, who was elected governor in 1932.

Your ERA Real Estate Specialist is now offering a worry-free way to buy and sell a home-the Sellers Security Plan.

First, the Sellers Security Plan can advance up to $100,000 on the equity in your present home to use as a down payment on your next home, providing you purchase that house through an ERA approved broker and your present home qualifies.

Then if your house hasn't sold after 210 days, ERA will buy it, at a price and terms you agree to when you accept the plan.

A minimal application fee and certified appraisal are required to see if your home qualifies.

The ERA Sellers Security Plan. Equity advance and assured sale at a price you can live with.

ERA® REAL ESTATE

*Some conditions and limitations apply. To see if you qualify, call your ERA Real Estate Specialist and review the Sellers Security Plan contract.
