LETTER FROM LEON H. DURST

Instructor in English, Robert College, Constantinople, Turkey.

Some Observations of One of Kimble's Sons in Foreign Lands.

August 4th, 1915.

Dear Clarence: After a most pleasant year of educational work in this city of palaces and of Oriental charms, and after a whirl through some of the countries of Europe I shall give you a brief sketch of it all.

During my year in Robert College I have come in contact with twenty one nationalities of Asia and Europe in the class room. These boys range from 15 years to 21 years of age and are in the College Department; however here is also a Preparatory Department; Robert College has probably the best Language Department in the world. In America languages aren't taught, but merely looked into. In Europe it is a standing joke as to how the American learns a language, just as we laugh at the Irishman's and German's brogue. But it is a fact that the European does learn languages—not a foreign language, but foreign languages. Especially is this true with the people of Eastern Europe. Here in Constantinople a child grows up speaking at least three or four languages and not uncommonly six or seven. I had a boy in one of my Berlitz classes who spoke nine tongues with ease. This lad was nine years of age. Here it is quite necessary for one to know German and French. I often feel belittled to find myself struggling with these when there are native people, even children, here speaking my own language and as well or better than I. But all this does not sound so incredible when one remembers that here is the cradle of languages. And today this city is the key gateway between Asia and Europe and because of its location, always has been.

The men who are doing things which tend toward the uplifting and development of the Balkans today, are graduates of this college. In the cabinets of the most progressive countries of the near East sit Robert men. And the countries of the near East have showed more wisdom than have the powerful nations of Europe. What have they done? They have held back from being coerced into a political war which is aimed at their destruction, and if the war lasts much longer these little countries will be stronger than their once powerful protectors. Watch for level headness in the Near East.

I spent six weeks of vacation in Germany, that Nation which today is standing against the entire world. Even America, for the sake of business, is lined up with others which are trying to defeat a people who should be their friends, a people whose worth we have long since recognized, a people whom we welcome quicker than any other to our fair land of liberty. I shall not discuss the well known merits of these people, for too often have we come to them to learn, as we shall see in the future. However jealous we have been of their progress, in the past, in these times when so many hearts in Europe are bleeding, we should give all people in this land their just due. 'Tis the English we had to fight for liberty. Ever since the days of the Revolution and 1812 they have watched their chance to incorporate us into their empire of the world. No man is better fitted to voice the expression of the American folk than is Price Collier. He says: "We Americans have never liked the English and don't today" (1908). Of course the English should have credit for what they have done. They have proved themselves the Romans of modern times by colonizing one fifth the world and for their wonderful Government and organization. But the point is: is it our duty as Americans to stand up for the English? Would Cuba today look to Spain for ourselves? It isn't that we love the English. We love business. History will tell of the chance we didn't take to prove ourselves the peace makers of the world. History will speak of the sacrifice we might have made by giving up business for regenerated Europe. Now leaving aside any political discussion to look at things as they exist.

The war in the world today is "great" for that instinct of sport and excitement in all American souls. I know how you must look forward to the reading of those scandalous headlines that I left in New York. I thought I had left them but they ooze through and are to be had here with any newsdealer who handles Punch, Kladderbach, Life, and other such literature.

But the war takes on other aspects when one is in touch with it. You think you realize the awfulness of it all, but you don't. Even with the wonderful stand which the strong and proficient Turks are making, one living here can get some idea of it all. I spent the last half of June and all of July in Austria and Germany. A month of this was spent in the city of Berlin. I am sorry that it is impossible for me to give anything like a thorough account of this trip now, but I may leave with you a few general impressions. The cities visited on this interesting whirl through Europe were: Adrianople, Sofia, Bucharest, Budapest, Vienna, Dresden, Leipzig, Munich, Berlin and Hanover. Every year the entire faculty of the college spend their summers abroad in the land. In ordinary times trips are made through Russia across to Norway, Sweden, and Denmark into Germany up to England and Scotland down to Paris thence into Switzerland back to Bosphorus by the way of Italy, and Greece. Often some of our bunch into the Caucasus Mts. and more popular is the tour of Egypt and Palestine. But this year it is difficult to travel at all. But you can imagine the interest in a present day trip in these parts. And so the most of us set out, the majority going to Switzerland, the most beautiful place in Europe. I saw place because it is so small a country. In fact one hardly hears of it these days except in connection with its fleet.

You are reading too much in your papers from professional journalists for me to elaborate on what I saw. But perhaps a few things will give you an idea of the condition of affairs. First of all I was impressed with the organization and cooperation of the German people. Every person in his or her place. I was impressed with the willingness of everyone to do his part. The soldier of course is on the job. I saw them in training. Then I saw them in the thousands marching to war. So many mornings was I awakened early by the drum and fife and that steady tramp. On looking out my hotel window in Berlin at these passing regiments I saw this: Ten thousand of Germany's freshest manhood is marching to war. Almost as many mothers and sisters and sweethearts are clinging to their sides—the life ceases and the hand bursts forth into strains they love so well. The very air is swelled with music, but the people are singing with the music and at once these loved ones marching with the soldier boys are keeping perfect step; and now The Watch on the Rhine fills

The soldier of course is on the job. I saw them in training. Then I saw them in the thousands marching to war. So many mornings was I awakened early by the drum and fife and that steady tramp. On looking out my hotel window in Berlin at these passing regiments I saw this: Ten thousand of Germany's freshest manhood is marching to war. Almost as many mothers and sisters and sweethearts are clinging to their sides—the life ceases and the hand bursts forth into strains they love so well. The very air is swelled with music, but the people are singing with the music and at once these loved ones marching with the soldier boys are keeping perfect step; and now The Watch on the Rhine fills the air; men, old men, business men, run to march with the boys. As they near the station where the soldiers, the sweethearts, the mothers cling closer, flowers are falling from the windows over the already profusely decorated men. And here comes another regiment. I see the same thing. Methinks all Germany is marching, and so it is. The equal pace. This same spirit is manifest throughout the land. I saw the same in Dresden as I saw in Berlin. One sees in Vienna the same.

There's the glory of it all, then there's the awfulness to behold. To see these same young men return is always sad. To see a once handsome boy being led blind, or without a nose or ears, by his sweetheart who is waiting him to realize that she still loves him; to see that mother waiting for the corpse at the Red Cross station. I used to go to a place in Berlin where a large bulletin board gave the names daily of the "Fallen for the Fatherland." Here the mothers and other loved ones come to get that word. I heard one mother say, as she turned around with tear stained face: "I would give them all for the Fatherland—but it is so hard!" In speaking to one of these mothers on the train between Dresden and Vienna, she asked me sincerely in an earnest, quivering tone, "Why can't America see that she is prolonging the war?" I could only say that there's nothing in International law to prevent it and it's a wonderful business opportunity that any nation would grasp, this sending of ammunition to the countries of Europe. She answered by saying that it's bloody business for which we will have to answer.

Just as the men are filling their places so are the women filling those capacities best suited to them. Tacitus has said in describing the early German people that the women among them are the best of housewives and are honored and respected by the men. Today is that true. Where woman's tender hand is needed today in Germany it will be found, and only during this war will one see a German lady in a man's place. Today many women may be seen doing work that should be done by men, but you may rest assured that it is quite necessary that they be there.

The first essential to good government and prosperity for any people is good home life; as has been said, the foundation of the state is the home. In this land which you may think I am idealizing for the fun of it, or because I don't know any better, first of all they have home life. The mother's highest ambition is to be queen of her home. We all know that is true with the Germans. There's the secret of their wonderful progress. America as a nation has made progress for the same reason; we have had so much of the same, only still better home life, as the Germans. I trust that our women are not so rampant about the suffrage question as they have been. This war will show Europe what is to be done in the home. Now is the time for nations as well as individuals to be taking notes on these significant points which some laugh away. I was more than impressed with the German woman's sense of what woman's place is in this world, and she is proud to fill that place.

Clarence, I saw so much of real live interest. So much I couldn't understand, so much that made me think, and left me more ignorant than ever. I could tell you of Vienna when I was there, for I was there at the time. I could speak of long Red Cross trains and of the wonderful Red Cross work in general. I could tell you of hundreds of French and thousands upon thousands of Russian prisoners which I saw. But know that you are reading so much of this that it will not be necessary for me to give my dope.

Constantinople is quiet. Here as in the remainder of the world they are tired of the conflict. But one sees no end. It's time for men to think and act. America is the one land that can be foremost in establishing a lasting Peace in the world—or she can rush the land of her fathers to total desolation and destruction. Willing business and national greed for commercial supremacy cover up all honor in our fair land of freedom?

My best and sincerest wishes to the people of old Kimble.

Leon H. Durst.

Some railroad men were in Junction this week securing some statistics from the tax rolls, and making a few general observations of our country. It wouldn't surprise us a bit if we were to live to see a railroad to Junction!

From what we learn of the great flood damage done and stock losses in the Kerrville country along the Gaudalope, the losses by Kimble people are very small in comparison. Our people lost some few stock, though not as great as at first reported, and a great deal of fence was destroyed. But a number of houses along the Gaudalope were washed away, and hundreds of goats and sheep lost. Below Kerrville a half a mile of the Sap R. R. track was washed out.

Heavy rains and floods of the past few weeks are responsible for the prevalence of mesquites and flies. Dr. O. M. Ball, Professor of Biology at A. & M. College, says that water holes should be drained, wherever possible, and that oil should be poured on flies that can not be drained. "Flies and mesquites are great disease carriers and with conditions as bad as they are in most sections of the State as a result of heavy rains and storms, every safeguard should be thrown around our people to prevent sickness," said Dr. Ball. "Clean the ditches, burn the trash, and the fly and mosquito pest will be greatly lessened. Other wise fever and other diseases carried by these insects may invade your home."

John A. Caplen Passes Away

In the Galveston News of Sunday, September 12th, appears the following item in regard to the death of Mr. John A. Caplen. Mr. Caplen has interests in our town, and has made numerous visits to Junction; the last was in February last, when he sold several lots here in his "Flag Mountain Addition" to Junction. He was well known by a number of our people who are grieved to learn of his demise.

John A. Caplen, aged 68 years died at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon at his home in Alta Loma. Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. E. H. Parker, corner Fifteenth street and Avenue N. Burial will be made in Lake View Cemetery.

Active pallbearers will be: J. W. Dickson, A. W. Schneider, N. E. Lepore, R. E. Tipton, Paul Leht, and R. C. Truitt. Honorary pallbearers will be: J. S. Montgomery, Robert Zamp, D. D. McDonald, J. J. Elliott, J. S. Parker and Courtenay Washington.

Mr. Caplen was born and reared in Galveston and lived here continuously until about ten years ago, when he removed to Alta Loma. He was married in 1881 to Miss Nancy J. Nicholson at Seabrook. He had been engaged in the real estate business for the past thirty years and was an enthusiastic worker for the upbuilding of Galveston and the east country.

While he has been in bed here for the last six months, his death, while not unexpected, came as a shock to his many friends.

Besides his wife, he is survived by three daughters, Mrs. E. H. Parker, Galveston and Misses Eddie Caplen and Louise Caplen of Alta Loma, and one son, Dr. J. E. Caplen of Columbus, Ohio.

TAX VALUATION.

The tax rolls as just completed by Assessor J. W. Ragland show quite a healthy increase over last year's valuation. We had the privilege of looking over the rolls Thursday, and he said they are very neat and well kept and show careful, painstaking preparation. This year's total valuation is $3,311,995. The principal items of this valuation are: Land, $611,334.45 acres, $176,976.66; Town lots, $191,890; Horses and mules $978, $128,169; Cattle $52, $82,526; Jacks and Jennets, $5, $31,70; Sheep, 74454. $219,480; Goats, 95330, $18,906; Hogs 28-58, $6324. The total valuation for last year was $2,820,431. This makes an increase for the year of $491,477 over last year's valuation.

The party was at Kerrville at the time of last weeks rains, and they bring back some "scary" accounts of the flood damage along the Guadalupe. Mr. Baker lost a fine saddle animal in the floods. None of the cattle were lost. Heavy losses of sheep and goats are reported from the Kerrville country.

The Citizen is $1.00 per year—and worth it.

"S. O. D. did it." Papered my home—painted it too. You bet it's a nice job!

If you want to go to Kerrville or any other place—phone Eastman and Tinsley, at Junction. Their service car will take you in any direction any time. When they start with you they take you there.

At a meeting of the Junction Baptist Church, last Sunday morning it was decided to call Rev. J. N. Campbell of Colorado City to the pastorate here. Rev. Campbell is to succeed Rev. R. T. Deas who resigned in order to enter college at Brownwood. It will be remembered he preached at the Baptist Church here some two weeks ago. He was well recommended as a man of splendid ability in his ministerial labors.

When you call up No. 11 usually get what you want and get it promptly, and of good quality. Why not phone them all the time.
