MISD discusses school choice

Administrators present new plan to alter cluster system

■ Desegregation plan would eliminate forced busing, allow almost half of elementary students to attend stand-alone schools in their neighborhoods for all six years.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

School choice may be coming to Midland public schools with a new desegregation plan developed by MISD administrators.

"We want more continuity for kids and less forced busing. This plan gives people more choice and moves in that direction. This is a place to start," said MISD Board President Robin Hightower.

MISD administrators on Tuesday presented the new desegregation plan that radically would alter the cluster system. The new plan wouldn't eliminate busing, but it would eliminate forced busing. It would allow almost half of the elementary students in the district to attend a school in their own neighborhoods for all six years by attending stand-alone schools.

The other students would attend their neighborhood schools through third grade, then choose one of seven schools to attend for the next three years (grades 4 through 6). If too many students chose one school, a lottery would be conducted.

The plan eliminates busing students to three different schools in three different years (grades 4 through 6), components many Midland parents have asked for in MISD public forums. Busing actually would increase for students in the choice schools.

Trustee James Fuller said the costs of the plan and how choice schools would be integrated were in question.

Five of seven trustees said the plan had merit. Fuller and Adela Marmolejo, however, said the plan was flawed. "It should go back to the drawing board," Fuller said.

Baressi said he will send out letters to the members of the Cluster Advisory Committee, and alternates,

Dole on Clinton

LYNDHURST, N.J. — Under stormy skies, Bob Dole sharpened his criticism of President Clinton on Tuesday and promised to hit harder on the administration's ethical controversies in their next debate. "Bozo's on his way out," Dole said of his rival. Dole targeted Clinton's integrity in two fiery speeches before rains from storm Josephine cut short his New Jersey bus tour and chased the GOP nominee back to his Washington campaign headquarters.

CPS changes

EL PASO — The abuse-related death of a 3-month-old girl has led to policy changes for Child Protective Services that officials hope will help prevent future fatalities. Cassandra Garcia died after being shaken roughly in July, two months after she was first taken to the county hospital with a suspicious head injury her parents couldn't explain. Her father was charged with murder. "What happened happened, and we can't change the past. But we need to learn from situations like this one and figure out ways to do our job better," said Eddie Wilson, regional director for CPS.

Neighborhoods throw going away party for criminals

Neighborhoods and police were holding a "going away party for criminals" as Midland had its 13th annual Midland Night Out, Tuesday.

Along with traditional displays of outdoor lights and front porch vigils, neighborhoods celebrated with block parties, cookouts and visits from local police.

Midland Night Out is designed to heighten crime and drug prevention awareness and generate support for and participation in local anti-crime programs, said Tina Sanders, public information officer.

"Our goal is raise awareness and to unify the community," Police Sgt. David Garcia said. "These two go hand-in-hand and help the city and police by providing more eyes and ears."

"We can't be everywhere so we need our citizens, neighbors, looking out for each other," Sgt. Garcia said.

More than 300 neighborhoods were involved, an increase of more than 50 from last year, Sgt. Garcia said.

City Council awards contract for terminal

Officials hire MW Builders for the 2-year plus project that is expected to begin next month.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The City Council Tuesday awarded a construction contract for the new airport terminal building to the lowest bidder. The two-year plus project is expected to begin next month.

Temple-based MW Builders has been hired to construct the terminal at Midland International Airport at a cost of $34,509,890. MW Builders submitted the lowest bid among five bids that differed less than 2 percent between the highest and lowest.

Before the City Council approved the award, Mayor Bobby Burns sought assurance that there would not be any cost overruns and plans were on schedule.

"We do not anticipate any modification to the plan as far as adding anything in the future," said Kyle Womack, Midland office manager for the architectural-engineering firm of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper.

■ Related City Council story/4A

A contingency — for miscellaneous costs — of between 1.5 and 2 percent of the award amount has been set aside.

Following the council vote, Steve Lawson, MW Builders vice president of operations, said there shouldn't be any problems with completing the project within budget and on time. "I think the plans are a real good set of plans, some of the best we've seen," he said.

The construction award was reduced $1.18 million from what was originally contracted by modifying phasing of the work and construction of the covered parking canopy, officials said.

A notice to proceed with construction is expected to be issued in mid-November although the bulk of heavy construction will not begin until the beginning of the new year, Womack said.

At least 25 percent of the subcontracted work is expected to be to local companies and many other local workers are expected to be employed by outside subcontractors, Lawson said.

MW Builders has worked in and around airports in Texas and other parts of the country, Lawson said. The company recently completed building the control tower at Houston Intercontinental and several years ago constructed a tower-support facility at the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

City officials recently visited construction sites and completed projects of the company. "We were very impressed with the quality of work done by MW Builders," Director of Airports Ken Day told the council.

Kiwanis celebrates 50 years with memories, humor

By Joe Gaines
Staff writer

Midland Kiwanis celebrated its 50th anniversary Tuesday with some Texas flavor as it invited Tumbleweed Smith to share some Texas humor.

With a picture display, members remembered the club's past achievements like Kiwanis Park and the Gazebo at Wadley-Barron Park.

The chapter was founded Oct. 3, 1946 by the San Angelo Kiwanis Club, with the goal of helping children and insuring the supply of iodine around the world.

"You only need about a teaspoon of iodine for your whole life. In the United States, we receive iodine through our salt," Ken Morrison, secretary/treasurer said. "But there are many areas of the world that have a deficiency. The deficiency can lead to a number of diseases."

In Midland, Kiwanis helps to sponsor the Children's Miracle Network and has helped to fund the Children's Need to Read program and trading cards for police.

After the club inducted it new officers, Texas humorist, Smith presented stories he had gathered from around the state.

"I was doing a man-on-the-street interview in Fort Davis about ignorance and apathy," Smith said. " When I asked a man about it,

Arafat meets Israeli president; negotiators head back to table

CAESAREA, Israel (AP) — With Palestinian negotiators back at the table after walking off in anger, Yasser Arafat made his first public visit to Israel on Tuesday and pledged to keep his police from firing again on Israeli soldiers.

Sitting in garden chairs on the terrace of President Ezer Weizman's villa, Arafat and Weizman traded compliments, shook hands for the cameras and agreed there was no alternative to peace. The cozy exchange capped Arafat's transformation in two years from Israel's arch foe to its most important peace partner.

Tuesday's meeting came less than two weeks after deadly gun battles between Israeli and Palestinian security forces in the West Bank and Gaza Strip that left 78 people dead.

The cordial luncheon and Arafat's promises contrasted sharply with the deep discord evident to the south, at Israeli-Palestinian peace talks on Israel's border with Gaza.

On Monday, Palestinian negotiators balked at Israeli demands for improved security arrangements for Jewish settlers in the West Bank town of Hebron, where an Israeli troop pullout is long overdue. Only the intervention of U.S. envoy Dennis Ross brought the Palestinians back to the table that night.

Israel said it wanted to retain the right of "hot pursuit" of suspected Palestinian assailants into areas that will come under Palestinian control in Hebron.

Israel also wants to retain control over a broader area that links the Jewish enclaves with the Tomb of the Patriarchs, a site in the center of town that is holy to both Muslims and Jews.

Even considering the Israeli demands would be tantamount to renegotiating the terms of peace agreements signed with Israel's previous government, said Ibrahim Kreishe, a senior Palestinian negotiator.

Still, talks resumed at the Erez border crossing, with Hebron remaining the key item on the agenda.

Later Tuesday, Israel's army announced it would ease the complete blockade imposed on the West Bank and Gaza during the fighting and allow 10,000 Gazan workers into the Jewish state as of Wednesday morning.

Arafat said he was not discouraged by setbacks.

"The most important thing is that we began the meetings," Arafat said in this Mediterranean town, where he was flown by an Israeli air force helicopter from his Gaza City headquarters.

IRA claims responsibility for double car bomb

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility Tuesday for the double car-bomb attack on the British army's headquarters here, which wounded 31 and brought Northern Ireland back to the brink of conflict.

It was the outlawed group's first bomb attack in Northern Ireland since mid-1994. In February, it broke a 17-month cease-fire with a deadly bombing in London; attacks followed elsewhere in Britain and on a British army base in Germany.

A telephone caller using a verified codeword told RTE, the Irish national broadcasters in Dublin, that the IRA committed Monday's strike inside Thiepval Barracks, heart of the 18,000-strong military presence in the British-ruled province.

Prime Minister John Major said the claim showed the IRA had not changed. "It shows they still rely on terrorist violence and are indifferent to human life," he said.

Earlier Tuesday, telephone callers told news organizations in Belfast and Dublin that the dissident group "Continuity IRA" was responsible, but the callers provided no codeword to validate the claim.

The British government already had indicated it believed the IRA was responsible.

The bombings were "certainly consistent with a terrorist organization that declared an end to a cease-fire which it had proclaimed in 1994," Northern Ireland Secretary Patrick Mayhew told reporters.

Whether Northern Ireland returns to tit-for-tat bloodshed now remains to be seen.

From Major on down, politicians appealed to the province's pro-British paramilitary groups to refrain from striking back. The groups, known as "loyalists" have observed a cease-fire for two years.

"We must not let (the IRA) succeed," Major said. "I appeal to all loyalists not to fall into this trap."

Loyalists killed more than 800 Catholics during a 25-year period, a campaign they say pushed the IRA to stop its own offensive in September 1994.

A month later, the loyalist Ulster Defense Association and Ulster Volunteer Force, both rooted in militant Protestant areas, laid down their guns. Some members now feel obligated to return to eye-for-an-eye tactics.

"There's still a chance we can step back from this, but in realistic terms, it's a slim chance," said David Ervine, who leads an Ulster Volunteer Force-linked party in peace talks.

He urged the pro-British groups not to be provoked into action by the IRA. "The loyalists must not now do what their enemy wants them to do," Ervine said. "Don't do it."

Loyalists didn't strike back after two earlier IRA-style attacks in Northern Ireland were claimed instead by "Continuity IRA," which is believed to include disgruntled IRA members.

In the first attack in July, an 800-pound jeep bomb destroyed a rural hotel. Last month, a British army bomb squad defused a 250-pound car bomb abandoned near Belfast's bustling shopping district.

The latest strike, in which two explosives-laden vehicles were driven past unwitting guards into Northern Ireland's most heavily guarded military installation, left experts assuming it had to be the IRA.

"To get into the nerve center of the British army and leave behind not one but two massive bombs and get away with it is, by any standard, a massive breach of security. No ordinary Joe could have pulled this off," said Col. Mike Dewar, a former army veteran in Northern Ireland and an anti-terrorism expert.

Of the 21 soldiers and 10 civilian employees wounded, five soldiers and three civilians remained in Belfast hospitals Tuesday. The most seriously wounded soldier has a broken skull, burns over half his body and a mangled arm that may be amputated.

"Our general feeling was 'Here we go again'," said Dr. Laurence Rocke, one of the tired-eyed surgeons treating victims at west Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital. "All we can do is sit back and wait for what happens next."

Before the IRA claimed responsibility, Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams said such bloodshed was "regrettable" but inevitable unless his IRA-allied party was admitted to ongoing peace talks.

Nine local parties and the British and Irish governments began the talks in June. Negotiations continued without progress Tuesday at Stormont, the center of British administration in east Belfast.

Sinn Fein, which represents a third of the province's Catholic minority, has been barred from the talks because the IRA broke its cease-fire.

Yeltsin responds to rumors about his control with top-level changes

MOSCOW (AP) — It's a lesson his rivals never seem to heed: Don't write off Boris Yeltsin too quickly.

Roused by a new political threat from security chief Alexander Lebed and charges he wasn't really in control, the ailing president has made a flurry of top-level firings, promotions and maneuverings to show he still wields power.

His actions appear to have quieted his critics, for the moment. But it was only an early test for a delicate balancing act that Yeltsin will have to maintain for months to come: staying in charge while resting in a sanitarium or hospital.

Whispered speculation about Yeltsin's decline grew louder during his recent three-week hospital stay ahead of heart surgery, set for later this fall. In an attempt to allay concerns, Yeltsin made a series of taped television appearances, in which his voice was rarely heard.

He was barely functioning, the talk went. He was only rubber-stamping his aides' decisions. He had suffered a stroke. Rumors aside, even his aides acknowledged he sometimes worked as little as 30 minutes a day.

Lebed, who has waged a power struggle with other Kremlin insiders, complained it wasn't clear "whether we have a president or not" and called on Yeltsin to temporarily step down.

A haggard but clearly alert Yeltsin — irritated by what the Kremlin described as alarmist reports — moved to reassert his authority. In radio and TV broadcasts, he assured Russians he remains on top of things and warned them not to rush to take down his portrait in the Kremlin.

He complained of "petty intrigues" while he was hospitalized and publicly rebuked Lebed for arguing with everybody.

"He may work 15 minutes a day, or 30, or three hours, but he is still in control," Dmitry Pinsker, a political columnist for Itogi magazine, said. "That's the way he is made — he won't ever let power slip away."

This is, after all, the president often characterized as being intoxicated with power. His recent orders have served as evidence that he's still the boss.

In the last month, Yeltsin has:

— Deliberately bypassed Lebed to give aide Yuri Baturin control of military promotions as head of the new Defense Council. Lebed subsequently threatened to resign.

— Promoted new Defense Minister Igor Rodionov to full general, ensuring he won't have to retire when he turns 60 in December. Rodionov's rise also cuts into Lebed's potential power — a classic Yeltsin political tactic of playing underlings against each other.

■ Fired generals who had opposed military reductions.

■ Scolded parliament for not accomplishing more and urged them to better cooperate with his administration.

■ Fired Sports Minister Shamil Tarpishchev, who was tainted by a scandal surrounding a secretive fund-raising group.

In addition, the Kremlin appears increasingly to be using the media to wage battle against Lebed.

Journalists from the liberal daily Segodnya and independent NTV television have complained they are under heavy editorial pressure to portray Lebed in a negative light and show Yeltsin positively. The owners of both media outlets have close Kremlin ties.

Even if the maneuvering is being led by his iron-willed chief of staff, Anatoly Chubais, the president clearly is moving to "defang and declaw" the ambitious Lebed, as phrased by Ariel Cohen, senior policy analyst for the Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based think tank.

"While the presidency does not want to see Lebed fired in order not to create an underdog image, they would like to see him die a political death of a thousand cuts," Cohen said in a Moscow interview.

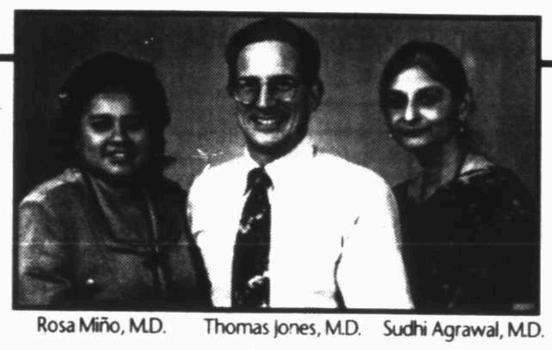

Chubais and Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, in the meantime, are gaining more and more influence over the daily affairs of the Russian government.

But that's no big change for Yeltsin, who admits to being bored by the daily drudgery of governance. With Russia showing more political stability than it has in years, he likely will remain content to delegate the bulk of his administrative duties — jumping in forcefully only on matters that threaten his authority.

WEATHER WATCH

Today to be sunny, high mid-80s

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies and a high in the mid-80s. Winds will be light and from the east at 5-10 mph in the late afternoon, according to the National Weather Service.

Tonight's forecast calls for clear skies and a low near 50.

Thursday's forecast calls for sunny skies and a high near 80.

The high for Tuesday was 74, compared to the record high for that date of 100, set in 1979.

Tuesday's low was 59, compared to the record low of 33, set in 1976.

STATE

A weak cold front moving through the middle of Texas on Tuesday triggered showers near Waco while high tides continued along the Gulf coast from tropical storm Josephine.

The nearly stationary front stretched from Texarkana through Waxahachie to Midland, bringing cloudiness to North and Central Texas, the Permian Basin and Concho Valley.

A coastal flood warning remained in effect for the upper Texas coast, with tides running two to three feet above normal.

Afternoon highs ranged from 87 degrees at Corpus Christi and El Paso, ahead of the front, to 73 at Lufkin and 60 at Midland.

Most temperatures behind the front were in the lower 60s under cloudy skies and gusty winds.

Winds were generally light and variable in the south and southeast at less than 15 mph and northerly to northwesterly at 10 to 20 mph behind the front across Northwest Texas and the Panhandle.

Forecasters expected decreasing cloudiness through Thursday with the front's passage through the state, with cooler temperatures moderating by the week's end.

Daytime highs should range from 72 to 84 with 90s in the Big Bend valleys. Overnight lows were expected to be from the 40s to 55.

NATION

The remnants of Josephine slogged up the Atlantic coast on Tuesday, dumping 3 to 5 inches of rain on parts of North Carolina and Virginia and carrying heavy showers and wind gusts into New England.

In eastern North Carolina, several tornadoes rolled out of severe thunderstorms. New Bern clocked a 96-mph wind gust. In Frisco, a twister knocked down trees and shoved trailers off foundations; one person was injured when a tornado destroyed a mobile home east of Washington, N.C.

A less severe line of showers and a few thunderstorms from Michigan to Illinois trailed a cold front moving south through the Ohio and Tennessee valleys, headed for the Gulf Coast.

A strong ridge of high pressure brought very unseasonably warm weather to with record high temperatures in California and Oregon. In Southern California, the heat wave raised the mercury to an unseasonable 102 degrees in Woodland Hills and 111 in Palm Springs. Thick fog kept things cooler close to the Pacific Ocean; it was in the 70s in Malibu.

Death Valley, Calif., had the nation's high of 112; the low reading of 25 degrees was shared by Alamosa, Colo., and Ironwood and Sault Ste. Marie, in Michigan. Southern Pines, N.C. reported 4.3 inches of rain.

Dole sharpens criticism on Clinton

LYNDHURST, N.J. (AP) — Under stormy skies, Bob Dole sharpened his criticism of President Clinton on Tuesday and promised to hit harder on the administration's ethical controversies in their next debate. "Bozo's on his way out," Dole said of his rival.

Dole targeted Clinton's integrity in two fiery speeches before rains from storm Josephine cut short his New Jersey bus tour and chased the GOP nominee back to his Washington campaign headquarters.

"His word's no good. My word is good and I'll keep my promises to the American people," Dole said, telling voters not to believe Clinton's line that the GOP ticket would cut Medicare to pay for tax cuts.

"Who is this guy? What does he know about it? What does he know about benefits? What does he know about Medicare," Dole demanded at a misty early-morning rally.

One man in the crowd shouted to Dole as he shook hands, "Please get Bozo out of the White House."

Dole called back, "Bozo's on his way out!"

Dole spokesman Nelson Warfield sought to play down the offhand remark as a "light moment along the ropeline." But it recalled the final weeks of President Bush's 1992 losing campaign when Bush referred to Clinton and Al Gore as "two bozos" who had less foreign policy expertise than a dog.

Clinton deputy campaign manager Ann Lewis took note of Sunday's civil debate between the presidential rivals and added, "I guess this means the era of civility lasted a day and a half."

She said Dole's remark was "particularly glaring" given that the GOP nominee had chided Clinton on Sunday for referring to Bush during the 1992 debates as "Mr. Bush" rather than "Mr. President."

White House spokesman Mike McCurry added, "It's not hard to imagine that Senator Dole might be feeling a little desperate at this point."

Dole's bus tour of this battleground state was designed to build momentum after his first debate with Clinton, in which the self-described underdog declined to question the president's ethical fitness for office.

In a radio interview Tuesday, Dole said he regretted not being tougher on Clinton by questioning his involvement in the acquisition of FBI files on prominent Republicans by former White House security chief Craig Livingstone.

"I mean, if the president knows so much, why doesn't he know who hired Craig Livingstone? We could have asked that question," Dole told radio host Don Imus. Dole also said he would press Clinton in next Wednesday's San Diego debate to explain his refusal to rule out pardons in the Whitewater case.

"He sort of ducked the question, so we'll go back at it again," Dole promised.

Dole's crowd of supporters in Lyndhurst numbered just about 300 but their spirits were high after being warmed up by remarks from former Senate Whitewater counsel Michael Chertoff, who served as U.S. attorney in New Jersey under Bush.

Holding aloft a Dole-Kemp sign, Chertoff asked, "How many members of this administration had to resign in disgrace? ... President Clinton wants to build a bridge to an anything-goes future where you can get away with it as long as you can talk your way out of it."

Dole spokesman Warfield joined in by evoking Clinton's former associate attorney general, Webb Hubbell, who was imprisoned for defrauding clients at his old law firm.

PARTY: More than 300 neighborhoods participate

(From 1A)

"But we want every neighborhood to have a neighborhood watch group," Sgt. Garcia said.

At Ashton Way Apartments, 2613 N. Midland Drive, the first apartment complex in Midland to have a neighborhood watch, residents were visited by the Low Patrol, McGruff the Crime Dog and other emergency crews.

"Crime is a difficult subject for people to talk about, even though every neighborhood has it. This fair is important because people need to know their neighbors," said Phillis Palmer, communication director of Ashton Way Apartments. "I think people are shy and this brings them out and provides a means of introduction."

The fair, sponsored by management and Power 106.7 FM, had food, a cakewalk, grocery give-away, miniature golf and crafts from residents.

Police were available to answer questions and visit with residents and police fliers were provided along with safety information on smoke alarms and fire extinguishers, Palmer said.

"I think it's good the cops are here. They can show us residents and the children how to be safe," Aida Canas, resident, said. "We need know who our neighbors are so we can tell who is supposed to be here and who isn't."

Since the complex has had a watch, Palmer said crime has been reduced in the 178-unit complex and residents agreed.

"I think it is safer and people do seem more aware," Billy Harvey, a resident said.

MISD: Officials offer desegregation plan

inviting them to an Oct. 29 meeting to discuss the plan. Committee members also can submit their responses to the plan in writing.

The plan designates Bonham, Bowie, Burnet, Emerson, Henderson, Houston, Jones, Lamar and Long as stand-alone schools. About 4,500 students (of 10,000) in elementary schools would attend those schools from kindergarten through six grade. Fuller questioned defining a school as naturally integrated when students are bused to it from outside the campus neighborhood. Some rural students would be bused to the stand-alone schools.

Ms. Hightower said those students who live a distance from the city limits will have to be bused no matter where they attend.

"If students were driving past schools to get to these schools, then I would agree with you," Baressi said to Fuller.

After designating the stand-alone schools, the plan divides the district into two "Choice Groups." Each group has seven schools. Students would attend the school in their neighborhood until fourth grade. Then they would choose one of the seven schools.

Choice Group No. 1 would include Fannin, Milam, Santa Rita, Scharbauer, South, Travis and Washington Elementary School (about 3,100 students with 50 percent majority and 50 minority).

Choice Group No. 2 would include Bush, Crockett, DeZavala, Greathouse, Parker, Pease and Rusk (about 3,200 students with 53 percent majority and 47 minority).

The plan suggests the schools be balanced ethnically with 75 percent of the students majority and 25 percent minority.

Trustee Dianne Anderson, however, asked fellow trustees to "get out of the box" and consider eliminating quotas.

Without a quota, a school could have 100 percent Anglo or 100 percent African American students attending. The question asked by some meeting attendees is: Would having a few racially identifiable schools be legal? "That's a good question," said Larry Lusby, MISD executive director of computer and pupil services. He said such questions are in the courts right now. The question pondered is: If students are not denied access to a school, the school district does not deliberately segregate a school, all students in a school are attending it by their choice, and there is no forced segregation, but the school is racially identifiable, is that segregation?

"What is more important, allowing students to go to the schools they choose or quotas?" Ms. Anderson asked.

Fuller said the percentage standards the district set of majority to minority students in each school were already too broad. He also questioned how schools would be made into magnets, or Centers of Enrichment to attract students. Previous Choice plans came with a price tag of several million dollars.

Administrators said increased busing for the choice schools also would cost more money, and could mean tax increases.

"We haven't looked at any type of choice system with less busing," said Wilson Heidelberg, MISD executive director of auxiliary services.

"The busing would be less efficient," Baressi said. "Buses would be going to more locations and would be less full. But the plan gives parents more choice and offers voluntary integration."

Lusby said there are too many students in the neighborhoods of at least two of the proposed stand along schools. So, some students might not get their first choice if they lived in those neighborhoods and chose those schools. However, adding the magnet component (of a school offering aerospace studies or performing arts) might draw students from their neighborhood school to another campus. Ector County ISD operates magnets for integration and some of the schools always have waiting lists.

Ms. Anderson said magnets work. "If you put a GEM (Gifted Education Midland) program at Washington (a large minority population school) then students from Greathouse (a large Anglo population school) would come," she said.

While the magnets would work to foster integration, if trustees decide to throw out the 75 percent majority/25 percent minority standard, then an enrichment program wouldn't be needed to draw students, since the schools wouldn't need to be integrated. If Choice schools weren't integrated, then the question is why have integrated stand-alone schools. Trustees said students in the stand-alone schools might want to transfer to other schools, and decisions would have to be made on whether to permit transfers.

Following the meeting, Midland parent Marta Rodriquez said, "If I had a student in a stand-alone school who wanted to go to a Choice Enrichment Center School that had Suzuki violins, then I think it's only fair to allow him to transfer. Otherwise we say: 'If your school is integrated, you have to stay in your own neighborhood, you don't get a choice about attending a school with a special program.' So, you get punished for living in an integrated neighborhood. You would have everybody — who had the money — moving into the choice school neighborhoods."

Whether students from stand-alone schools could transfer is another item trustees said should be considered.

The five trustees who said the plan had merit also said it needed fine-tuning. Baressi said the plan would be presented to the Cluster Advisory Committee for discussion, then presented to the community in a public forum before Thanksgiving.

Aeroperu crash raises more questions about 'glass cockpits'

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

BOSTON — Shortly before his Aeroperu Boeing 757 crashed into the Pacific Ocean, pilot Erick Schreiber complained that he had lost all of his navigation instruments. "The computers have gone crazy," he said.

"I don't have any instruments," Schreiber told the control tower in Lima, according to an official who heard the tape last week.

Moments later, he said: "What's happening? What altitude am I at? Why is my ground crash alarm on? Am I over land or sea?"

Schreiber tried to make it back to the Lima airport in the early morning darkness, but his plane crashed into the ocean about 28 minutes later, killing the pilot and 69 others on aboard.

It was not the first time air traffic controllers have heard such chilling words. Investigators believe that cockpit computers played a role in two other 757 crashes in the last year, claiming 349 lives.

In another incident last May, the pilot of a Martinair Boeing 767, a sister ship to the 757, was forced to make an emergency landing in Boston after his computerized instruments gave erroneous readings and then died. In that case, controllers at Logan International Airport steered the pilot, flying six miles up in sunny skies, to a safe landing.

Conditions couldn't have been more different for Schreiber and his copilot. Their 757, bound from Lima to Santiago, Chile, had taken off at 12:42 a.m. Oct. 2, surrounded by clouds and mist, and was in the air just five minutes when Schreiber reported problems.

While investigators still do not know what caused the trouble with either plane, there was a similar symptom: a breakdown in the planes' revolutionary "glass cockpit."

The computerized instrument panels — color television screens that inform pilots about their plane's course and mechanical functions — are used in most modern aircraft.

They have redundant electronics and are backed up with several tried-and-true manual instruments. But a sudden loss of the computerized images can stun pilots — much like what apparently happened to Schreiber.

Some critics say the electronics, which allow a pilot to plot his entire trip and even land his aircraft, also can cause pilots to lower their guard.

"What happens is guys get focused on the magic and forget the plane is still flying," said a veteran 757/767 pilot who spoke on the condition neither he nor his airline be identified.

"There is clearly a tendency when there is a problem with the magic for a guy to try to troubleshoot the magic, and that's not a good thing because your head is down and you're preoccupied," the pilot said.

Robert Hancock, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator leading the Martinair probe, said "it's too early to tell" whether there is any connection between the two incidents.

He said finding a problem with the 767 has been like locating trouble in "a long line of Christmas light bulbs."

Investigators removed about 20 components from the Martinair plane before allowing it to return to service. It now flies with a computer that is monitoring its electronics.

HUMOR: Humorist speaks at Kiwanis celebration

(From 1A)

he said I don't know and I don't care, but I know that isn't the same about the Midland Kiwanis."

Smith, wearing a jacket made of "genuine Texas roadkill," not "discarded polyester leisure suits" went on to share his encounters with fellow Texans.

Club members listened to a recorded hog call from Cowboy Wilham of Chapel Hill and to Smith play his nose flute, or snoot flute as he called it.

Smith, who likes to report on the obvious, gave a recording of a story of a two brothers, one of whom had put a butter churn on his head.

The brother couldn't get the churn off and was sent to bed, which he had to share with the other.

"It's hard to sleep with someone with a churn on his head," the other brother said.

After midnight, the boy's father came home and took off the churn with a few hits from a hammer.

"When it came off, his ears looked like a couple of bananas and his nose was flatter than a tack," the brother said.

Another story was of a portly woman who was stuck in revolving doors.

"The doorman told me to turn sideways. I told him I didn't have any sideways," she said. "I was so fat, the post office gave me my own zip code."

New, expanding businesses may be eligible for future tax break

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

New or expanding businesses that bring significant capital investment and employment to Midland may be eligible for a tax break in the future.

On Tuesday, the City Council passed a resolution that allows the decision-making body to grant tax abatements to businesses. Other taxing entities — the county and school, hospital and college districts — are expected to be approached about doing the same.

A joint policy among the entities to allow tax breaks in certain situations would be a selling point to attract large businesses to locate or expand in Midland.

"If we're going to be competitive, we have to have as many incentives as we can put together," said Marvin Wynn, president and chief executive officer for the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

In the competitive world of cities trying to lure manufacturing and industry type businesses, tax abatement policies are commonplace, he said.

Midland had a joint tax abatement policy for several years but that policy expired more than a year ago, Wynn said. About six months ago, representatives from local taxing entities discussed creating a new policy and appeared receptive to doing so, he said.

The city is the first to set up guidelines and criteria that will enable abatement of property taxes.

The council now has the power to reduce, eliminate or freeze property taxes for new or expanding businesses for a period of up to two years. Abatement would be considered on a case-by-case basis and only for new properties and not properties already on the tax roll.

"If you can't increase capital investment, employment or payroll, the tax abatement isn't proper," Mayor Bobby Burns said. "We're interested in tax abatement for manufacturing, distribution and professional service" companies.

The city would benefit by the investment/employment contributions made by a company during the abatement period then reap the benefits of any increased tax base after the abatement expired, Burns said.

BUILD: City awards terminal contract

(From 1A)

MW Builders is anticipated to finish the job by January 1999.

The completion of the terminal building, parking and access roads will be followed by construction of the terminal apron, the paved area that airplanes park on at gates. That job is expected to be contracted out next spring.

Apron construction — at a cost of about $3 million — will take about 10 months after the terminal building has opened.

Doctors remove pope's appendix, see no sign of tumor

ROME (AP) — Surgeons who removed Pope John Paul II's troublesome appendix sidestepped questions Tuesday about hand tremors and other health problems but predicted the 76-year-old pontiff would be "sitting in an armchair tomorrow."

The doctors did say they saw no signs that a benign colon tumor removed in 1992 had returned. The pope's vital signs held up well during surgery at Gemelli Polyclinic, and he came through it successfully, they said.

John Paul quickly regained consciousness after general anesthesia, greeting and thanking everyone.

"He should be sitting in an armchair tomorrow," said Dr. Corrado Manni, chief anesthesiologist for the 50-minute surgery.

"The appendix that was the cause of the pope's ills doesn't exist any more," said Manni.

The appendectomy aimed to cure what the Vatican said were recurring bouts of inflammation and fever that caused John Paul to cancel some public engagements this year. Frequently, the pope's energy flags and he walks with difficulty.

That image of the leader of the world's 950 million Roman Catholics generated concern that a bowel tumor, removed in 1992 and described as benign, had returned.

"This is the moment to demythologize these fantasies," said the chief surgeon, Dr. Francesco Crucitti. "I exclude it categorically. There is no secret."

A radiologist, Dr. Corrado Colagrande, added: "The doctors were happy. They are very fond of this pope."

But even as doctors called the appendectomy successful, they wouldn't discuss other aspects of the pope's health.

Journalists shouted out questions on whether a marked tremor in the pontiff's left hand is a sign of Parkinson's disease — a neurological disorder marked by tremors and a shuffling gait — and what the battery of medical tests showed.

Crucitti operated on the pope in 1981 after a Turkish gunman shot the pontiff in the abdomen during an assassination attempt and again in 1992 for the tumor.

On Tuesday, surgeons first had to remove adhesions, or scar tissue, from the previous operations before tackling the appendix.

Crucitti said the accumulated scar tissue helped keep the inflammation from spreading throughout the abdomen.

As a precaution, doctors decided to treat John Paul with antibiotics to help avoid an infection like the one that put him back in the hospital in 1981 weeks after his emergency surgery.

Bush showed us correct response

Why is it so surprising that the governor of Texas would actually show up when summoned for potential jury duty?

Well, one only need consider the response when the rest of us get that little card telling us our service is needed. Typically we start thinking of ways to get out of serving — or even showing up if we can avoid it!

And most of us probably think that people like George W. Bush who wield tremendous political influence and who have time-demanding responsibilities surely can merely explain to the court that they don't have time to serve.

Can't they?

Maybe, but that's not what Gov. Bush did.

In fact, he showed up for jury duty last week to the surprise of other potential jurors and was to be back at Travis County Court at Law this week where it will be determined whether he can serve.

Last week Bush underscored the importance of being willing to serve on juries when he said, "Jury duty is important." He went on to add that, "I don't know what impact it would have if I was selected."

He also speculated that he might not be chosen as a juror in a criminal case because he has pardoning powers, but said that in a civil trial "I've made some very strong comments on tort reform."

We salute Gov. Bush for showing Texans the way they should respond when called for jury service. It was a sign of good citizenship and supports the underpinnings of our judicial system — the right to be tried before a jury of one's peers.

A summons for jury service never comes along when it is convenient, but it still is one of the most important jobs any citizen can do for our system of justice. Gov. Bush did what he should have when he got his jury summons and in doing it, he showed every Texan what they should do.

Gulf War revelations need quick remedy

The Pentagon finally disclosed in July that during the Persian Gulf war U.S. Army engineers destroyed Iraqi munitions that contained tons of poison. ...

Now it has been revealed that some 250,000 U.S. troops vaccinated against chemical weapons in the Gulf War were not told they were given an experimental drug. ...

Both actions, in hindsight, appear reprehensible and foolishly risky. ...

But even worse has been the Pentagon strategy of keeping information secret while so many veterans, their families and doctors have tried to find the source of their health complaints. ...

President Clinton himself should order a quick-as-possible conclusion to this latest mess, including assistance to those with legitimate claims.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 9, the 283rd day of 1996. There are 83 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 9, 1888, the public was first admitted to the Washington Monument.

On this date:

In 1635, religious dissident Roger Williams was banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

In 1701, the Collegiate School of Connecticut — later Yale University — was chartered in New Haven.

In 1776, a group of Spanish missionaries settled in present-day San Francisco.

In 1930, Laura Ingalls became the first woman to fly across the United States as she completed a nine-stop journey from Roosevelt Field, N.Y., to Glendale, Calif.

In 1936, the first generator at Boulder (later Hoover) Dam began transmitting electricity to Los Angeles.

In 1946, 50 years ago, the Eugene O'Neill drama "The Iceman Cometh" opened at the Martin Beck Theater in New York City.

In 1958, Pope Pius XII died, 19 years after he was elevated to the papacy.

In 1967, Latin American guerrilla leader Che Guevara was executed while attempting to incite revolution in Bolivia.

In 1974, Czech-born German businessman Oskar Schindler, credited with saving about 1,200 Jews during the Holocaust, died in Frankfurt, West Germany; at his request, he was buried in Jerusalem.

In 1975, Soviet scientist Andrei Sakharov was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize.

In 1985, the hijackers of the "Achille Lauro" cruise liner surrendered after the ship arrived in Port Said, Egypt.

Ten years ago: The U.S. Senate convicted U.S. District Judge Harry E. Claiborne of "high crimes and misdemeanors," making him the fifth federal official to be removed from office through impeachment.

Five years ago: President Bush declared "total confidence" in his nominee to the U.S. Supreme Court, Clarence Thomas, who was accused of sexual harassment by former aide Anita Hill.

One year ago: Saboteurs pulled 29 spikes from a stretch of railroad track, causing an Amtrak train to derail in Arizona; one person was killed and about 100 were injured. An earthquake with a magnitude of 7.6 shook the west coast of Mexico, killing 51 people. Americans Edward B. Lewis and Eric F. Wieschaus and German Christiane Nuesslein-Volhard won the Nobel Prize for medicine for studies of how genes control early embryo development.

Official: Assassination drug-related

WASHINGTON — Mexico's most courageous former counter-narcotics official, Eduardo Valle, believes the unprecedented assassination of a Mexican presidential candidate was a drug-related hit.

Valle was a special adviser to two successive Mexican attorneys general from 1993-94, heading up an elite 31-man counter-narcotics team. Frustrated by government protection of certain drug traffickers, Valle resigned in May 1994, firing off a letter that was released to the press.

Anderson

Previously, Valle had been a leader of a famous 1968 student revolution, for which he was imprisoned for three years. Although he was a leftist, he has never been a liar — so Valle's charges against the government he served were widely reported.

"When will we have the valor and political maturity to tell the Mexican people that we are the victims of a kind of narco-democracy?" he wrote. He concluded with the following statement, made even more chilling because of his high-level view of the Mexican government: "Nobody can outline a political project in which the heads of drug trafficking and their financiers are not included, because if you do it, you die."

Valle became so highly visible as a crusader, naming names, releasing documents, that he thought it wise to relocate to the United States. As public enemy No. 1 of the Mexican drug cartels, Valle was described by the U.S. intelligence source who connected us with him as the man "most likely to be killed in the next six months."

Our associate Dale Van Atta flew to the American Southwest to meet with Valle, who seemed unafraid at the prospect of losing his life: "I am not a crazy man. But what can I do? Cry like a baby? This is a very important issue for my country; it's not for babies."

Valle is not part of the U.S. Witness Protection Program, nor has he accepted offers of protection from federal law enforcement officials. "I only have my car, my gun and my sensibility," he told us.

Valle turns less combative when speaking of his late friend, Luis Donaldo Colosio. Colosio had been selected by former Mexican President Carlos Salinas to be his successor.

Colosio was campaigning for president in 1994. He wanted a clean election, so he was earnest about his campaign appearances, pressing the flesh. Friends were concerned about his security, particularly since he had become outspoken about fighting drug traffickers.

They were right to be concerned. On March 23, 1994, while campaigning in Tijuana, Colosio was assassinated.

Mario Aburto, a young factory worker, was captured on the spot with a gun. He soon confessed, and has since been convicted of the shooting. But the lone-gunman theory put forward by the Salinas administration troubled many Mexicans, including Valle.

Valle told us he had brought Colosio sensitive counter-narcotics intelligence weeks before the assassination, warning him that two top members of his security force and other campaign advisers were linked to drug traffickers. Others were brutal ex-cops with questionable backgrounds.

'Asian connection' took heat off sweat shops

WASHINGTON — On April 12, 1993, Associate Attorney General Webster Hubbell received a call from the Indonesian businessman James Riady, a former client, and the Arkansas lawyer and Clinton golfing partner Mark Grobmyer. Both men had, a month before, been seen in Indonesia's East Timor, a human-rights hellhole.

Safire

Hubbell's log shows Riady called again the next day, this time from the Washington number 456-2684. That is the Office of Presidential Personnel, then supervised by Bruce Lindsey, Clinton confidential aide.

James Riady is the son of Mochtar Riady, the ethnic Chinese at the head of the Lippo Group, a $6 billion conglomerate with great commercial and political influence throughout Asia.

Both Hubbell and President Clinton knew the Riadys well. During the 1980s, the Riadys held an interest with the Little Rock financier Jackson Stephens in the Clinton-friendly Worthen Bank, which retained lawyer Webster Hubbell.

During the 1992 race for president, James Riady and his wife overtly contributed close to $200,000 in "soft money" to the Democratic campaign. The Democratic finance chairman, Marvin Rosen, tells me he was informed that Riady employee John Huang "helped a lot in raising money in '92."

The Riadys were then able to boast of placing their man in a position of influence in the Clinton administration. Huang, 46, was named deputy assistant secretary of commerce for international economic policy. Just before taking this job, Huang was paid almost a million dollars in salary, bonus and severance from the Lippo Group, $788,750 from Hip Hing Holdings, operator of a parking lot in Los Angeles owned by the Riadys.

Huang left the Commerce Department late last year to become a vice chairman of the Democratic Finance Committee. Clinton praised "my longtime friend John Huang" on July 22, 1996, for "his aggressive efforts to help our cause."

Aggressive is putting it mildly. Three months before, the Riadys' man Huang introduced Clinton to a South Korean magnate who made a $250,000 contribution to the Democrats through a subsidiary of a South Korean corporation.

Such a contribution is clearly against the law, which finance chief Rosen admits; only when The Los Angeles Times began asking about it was the quarter million hastily given back. Thus, for the first time, a president of the United States was personally involved in the solicitation of a major illegal contribution, but the Democratic Finance Committee has not had one call on this from the Federal Election Commission.

If foreigners want to slip U.S. politicians "soft money," the best conduit is a U.S. citizen or a resident alien. One of the largest Democratic contributions — $425,000 — is from an Indonesian gardener named Arief Wiriandinata, a green-card holder no longer in the U.S., whose wife's father helped run several Lippo ventures for the Riadys.

The Riadys gained much face in Indonesia in 1993, helping the Clinton administration lose interest in labor abuses in East Timor; in 1994, as an Asian conference was to be held in Indonesia's capital, they were eager to impress China's leaders with their American influence. Again they turned to Webster Hubbell.

By that time, the associate attorney general who had loyally kept Whitewater files hidden in his basement had quit justice because he was about to be indicted for defrauding law clients. Who would hire a man facing ruination at a time when his silence was golden to the Clintons?

The Riadys did. I'm told that between resignation and indictment, a Lippo affiliate paid Hubbell over $250,000. He went to Indonesia for them in October 1994.

One month later, at a conference in Jakarta, Indonesia, that included China's Jiang Zemin, Clinton surprised U.S. Embassy officials by holding a private meeting with James Riady. This duly impressed Asian leaders, who put great weight on connections in high places.

Clinton's foreign contributors are coming through for him in this campaign. Does Hubbell, his lip zipped in jail, expect to be sprung before his time? Will he then be made financially whole by the Clinton Asian connection? "Nobody's promised me a damn thing," the felon insisted at a Senate hearing. We'll soon see.

Yuppie puppies, latest import, having their day

Every so often, I see a tiny lady in my neighborhood walking her two big dogs. Actually, she doesn't walk them. She just hangs onto their chains and they sort of drag her along. Her feet appear to barely touch the ground.

Royko

Then it occurred to me that they were identical, so it was unlikely that they were mixed breeds, unless they came from the same litter.

So one day, as one of the dogs paused at the curb to moisten a subcompact auto, I asked the woman what kind of beasts they were.

"Akita," she said.

"Japanese."

So the clever devils make dogs, too, eh? Do they have microchips?

"Stick your hand in their mouths and find out," she said a bit snippily as they all loped away.

That was the first I had heard of the Japanese exporting their dogs to us, too.

But now I have learned that this particular breed has become the most "in" dog in America. At least among those who choose their dogs on the basis of status. Namely, the yuppies.

According to Success magazine, which knows about such things, the Akitas are so popular among yuppies that the dogs are often called "yuppie puppies." Ain't that cute?

Because I like to keep up with trends, I asked a local animal store owner about the Akita.

"Yeah, they're real popular now. I don't have any but you see ads for them in all the dog magazines. I think the cheapest you can get one for is about $500. They can sell for $2,000 or $3,000 or even more."

What makes them so valuable?

"Because people want them and are dumb enough to pay the price. To me, they look something like an overweight German shepherd."

Can they do anything special?

"They bark. They growl. They're like any other dogs. If it's a decent pup to begin with, and you train it right, you'll have a good dog. If you don't train it right, you're going to have a $2,000 dog grabbing food off your plate, dumping on your rug and biting the mailman. Oh, and there's one other thing about them. The people who breed them say that at one time they were used to guard the Japanese emperor."

I thought that the Japanese emperor was guarded by samurai warriors — little bow-legged guys in diapers who grunt a lot.

"I don't know. Maybe they walked the dogs for the emperor. But it's part of the mystique."

Well, I'm not impressed. For that kind of money, a dog ought to be able to do something besides guard one Japanese emperor.

Take the St. Bernard, which you don't see too often. Many fastidious people don't like them because they are one of the breeds of dogs known as the Droolers.

But the St. Bernards have a great history. With that keg of brandy strapped under their chins, they used to go into the Alps and find travelers stranded in the snow. You're shivering in the cold and along comes a dog to offer you a pop of good hooch. Now, that's a man's best pal.

Guarding an emperor is mildly interesting, but no Japanese dog can compare to the noblest and most efficient of all guard dogs — the Chicago Tavern Dog.

As I've said before, the true Chicago Tavern Dog has to know whom to bite and whom not to bite — which isn't easy on wild payday night, with people flying or falling every which way.

How would an emperor's $2,000 guard dog react if a dozen people were dancing a polka around him while somebody kicked the jukebox, somebody else threw a half-eaten sandwich at the TV, somebody was banging on the washroom door to wake up the occupant and a customer and the owner's wife were arm-wrestling for a round of drinks?

The mutt would probably have a nervous breakdown. Or, in the tradition of his homeland, throw himself on a corkscrew to end it all.

So when I see one of these $2,000 imports doing a job that many a $5 mongrel has done, I'll be impressed.

It might happen. With all the new yuppie fern bars, somebody will probably get a yuppie puppie and turn him into a tavern dog.

But I know what the result will be. Chicago thieves aren't dummies. They'll leave the ferns and steal the $2,000 dog.

American, British economists receive Nobel prize

NEW YORK (AP) — An American economist with unorthodox ideas — among them that "it's insane to try to balance the budget" — shared the Nobel economics prize Tuesday with a British professor.

William Vickrey, professor emeritus at Columbia University, and James Mirrlees of Cambridge University in England were cited for explaining how governments as well as consumers use incomplete data to make decisions.

Vickrey and Mirrlees will split the $1.12 million prize for innovative studies on "asymmetric information."

The theory, used to explain human behavior, refers to the way in which everyone — from governments and giant corporations to small businesses and consumers — makes decisions based on varying kinds and amounts of data.

Traditional economic theory held that all sides had the same information but different preferences, which influenced decision-making. "Asymmetric information" means one side knows something another side doesn't.

A person seeking medical coverage may have health problems, but the insurer won't know it. A buyer won't know as much about a used car as the seller. And government doesn't know the earnings abilities of taxpayers.

Although Vickrey and Mirrlees conducted separate studies decades apart, the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences in Stockholm, Sweden, said their work led to a better understanding of economic activity, including tax programs, auctions, insurance and credit markets.

"It's very gratifying, ... very warming," said Vickrey, 82, a naturalized American citizen and native of Victoria, British Columbia.

"I was amazed," said Mirrlees, 60, a native of Scotland. He told reporters at Cambridge he was skeptical when he got the call from the academy. "I wanted to make sure I wasn't being teased," he said.

The annual prize is the third of the six Nobels to be awarded this year. The Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science is awarded by the Swedish Central Bank in honor of inventor Alfred Nobel.

Vickrey told reporters he intends to use the windfall to "make the most of the opportunity to keep spreading some of my heretical ideas."

He has gone against popular wisdom by advocating the government take on more, not less, debt. "The insane pursuit of the holy grail of a balanced budget in the end is going to drive the economy into a depression," he said.

A bigger national debt, he said, will help those saving for retirement.

"The great increase in longevity has produced a surge in the desire to accumulate assets for retirement," he said. "It has outpaced the ability of the private sector to produce assets, so we need a larger government debt. ... It's insane to try to balance the budget."

For four decades, he has tried in vain to persuade New York transit officials to charge subway users based on the time of day and distance of their trips, to minimize congestion and set more equitable fares.

Vickrey's research on auctions, including sales of Treasury bonds, showed how they can be designed for economic efficiency. In the late 1940s, he drew up a model showing how income taxes could balance efficiency and equity.

An "absent-minded professor type," Vickrey sometimes roller skated to work while carrying a large plywood model of his economic theories on his head, said Ronald Findlay, chairman of the Columbia Economics Department.

"Even for New York, people used to take notice," Findlay said.

A quarter of a century later, Mirrlees revived interest in the model when he studied how high to set income taxes without discouraging workers and investors or fostering tax evasion.

Separate prizes for chemistry and physics will be announced today. The Nobel Peace prize-winner will be announced Friday in Oslo, Norway.

All the prizes will be awarded on Dec. 10.

Most Laser Vision Correction Looks The Same
Until You Consider Who's Focusing The Laser.
Undoubtedly, PRK or laser vision correction has set a new standard for correcting nearsightedness. Performed painlessly in minutes, with no incision, the procedure uses a laser to reduce or eliminate the need for glasses or contact lenses.
But before choosing someone to perform your laser vision correction, here's something to consider: the procedure is only as good as the doctors performing it. Zale Lipshy Laser Center for Vision was established by physicians who were among the first to perform it in our area. We also offer the newest generation of non-investigational excimer laser which provides a great degree of refractive capability.
All our affiliated physicians are trained and credentialed by The University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center. The faculty of The University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center is made up of some of the finest medical minds in the world, including four Nobel Laureates, eleven members of the National Academy of Sciences and eleven members of the Institute of Medicine. When you look at it from this perspective, the reasons for choosing Zale Lipshy Laser Center for Vision are becoming increasingly clear.

Gore, Kemp promise to make Clinton, Dole focus of debate tonight

■ Vice president, GOP hopeful say their matchup will closely follow themes of Sunday's presidential encounter.

Associated Press

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. — When asked about the possibility of running for president in four years, Al Gore hastens to end the line of inquiry. Jack Kemp shakes his head and wags an admonishing finger.

As they prepare for tonight's debate, the candidates for vice president are trying to keep the focus on Bill Clinton and Bob Dole. "It is not Al Gore vs. Jack Kemp," the GOP vice presidential nominee said Tuesday.

In pre-debate interviews with The Associated Press, Gore and Kemp predicted their 90-minute, prime-time debate would closely follow the themes of Sunday's encounter between Clinton and Dole. That exchange focused on tax policy and the state of the economy, on education, welfare and other social policies, and on the U.S. role abroad at the close of the 20th century.

Gore, for example, said he was determined to reinforce Clinton's argument that the GOP ticket's $548 billion tax-cut plan would require devastating cuts in Medicare and education spending. "The numbers do not add up," Gore said.

Kemp, for his part, said Dole had scored points in casting Clinton as a liberal hiding behind conservative election-year promises. Kemp promised to follow up by taking issue with a new Clinton campaign ad in which the president says he views his job as "taking care of the American people."

As they discussed their expectations for the debate and outlined their views of the vice presidency, the former House colleagues voiced friendship and respect for each other and predicted their encounter would be a civil affair.

"You can disagree without being disagreeable," Gore said Monday afternoon during a break in his debate preparations in Sarasota, where former New York Rep. Tom Downey was the Democratic stand-in for Kemp.

Kemp was interviewed Tuesday morning before a practice session in Bal Harbour, Fla., where New Hampshire GOP Sen. Judd Gregg was playing the role of Gore.

"I'm having trouble getting my answers down to 30 seconds," Kemp said. "I can go 30 seconds without using a verb."

With Clinton holding a comfortable lead heading into the final weeks of the campaign, Kemp and Gore are questioned frequently about the possibility that they could be competitors for the presidency in four years. Both dismiss such talk as a distraction they'd rather not deal with.

"In 2000, Bob is going to be running for re-election and I just hope he keeps me on the ticket," Kemp said.

Gore responds by telling the story of a dog holding a bone in his mouth while staring at his reflection in a pond. "He wants that other bone that the other dog has, so he opens his mouth to get that other bone and he loses both bones," Gore said.

"I am focused on 1996."

After watching Sunday night's presidential debate, and spending the past several days with campaign advisers, both Gore and Kemp entered their showdown with clear missions.

For Gore, it was to reverse any progress Dole might have made in selling his plan to cut taxes 15 percent across the board while balancing the budget by 2002 and preserving Medicare and other popular programs.

"All you need is a pencil and paper: The numbers do not add up," he said.

■ More national news/6B

Echoing Clinton, Gore said he would point to lower unemployment, a shrinking budget deficit and declining crime rates as evidence the administration deserved four more years.

Kemp was most animated in discussing the new Clinton campaign ad, and promised to make it an issue tonight as he seeks to build on Dole's efforts to paint Clinton as a big-government liberal.

"He was very proud of the fact that his job was to take care of us," Kemp said of Clinton. "It is an incredible statement. Bob Dole believes that we can take care of ourselves if we have more income after taxes, if we have better jobs, if we expand this economy the way we think it can be expanded."

Student expelled for giving Midol to friend returns to school in Ohio

FAIRBORN, Ohio (AP) — An eighth-grade honor student expelled for giving a Midol pill to a classmate returned to school Tuesday in a white limousine, her punishment reduced to the days she had already missed.

Clutching balloons and grinning jubilantly, Kimberly Smartt went back to Baker Junior High School, where a throng of cheering classmates waited outside the school for her to arrive.

"I feel really happy," Smartt said. "I'm just going to be in all the activities I was in and continue how it was and don't ever have to think about this again."

Smartt was allowed to return to the school about 10 miles northeast of Dayton after the school board decided late Monday to reduce her 80-day expulsion to the three days she had already served. The board upheld a 10-day suspension she had already served.

Smartt was expelled after she took two Midol pills from the school nurse's office Sept. 6 and gave one to Erica Taylor. Taylor, who said she didn't take the pill, was allowed to return to school following a nine-day suspension after she agreed to take part in a drug evaluation and counseling program.

Board members refused to say why they changed Smartt's punishment.

Their decision came the same day Smartt sued the school district in federal court, claiming she was punished more severely than the girl to whom she gave the pill because she is black. Taylor, 13, is white.

The district has denied the accusation.

Smartt's lawyer, Carl Lewis, said she will continue with her lawsuit.

On Tuesday, U.S. District Court Judge Walter Rice refused to grant a temporary restraining order requested by Smartt's attorneys in large part to get Smartt back into school — a goal rendered moot by the board's decision.

Attorney James Greene also asked Rice to bar the school from forcing Smartt to pay for the drug counseling.

"If she does not undergo drug counseling, it (the expulsion) will stay on her record," Greene said.

Rice refused, saying that if he later rules in Smartt's favor, the disciplinary action will be removed from her record whether or not she takes part in the counseling session.

He said he would rule in two months whether to dismiss the lawsuit, and scheduled a tentative Jan. 23 trial date.

Transplant specialists to visit city

Specialists to discuss latest advances for health-care professionals

■ Oct. 19 seminar to provide information for physicians, nurses, social workers, counselors and other health-care professionals.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Four prominent Texas organ transplant specialists will be in Midland Oct. 19 to discuss the latest technological advances in these life-saving procedures.

This one-day symposium is presented by the Midland-Odessa Transplant Education & Support Alliance (MOTESA), and sponsored by Memorial Hospital and Medical Center and the Southwest Organ Bank.

Because most transplant organ donors are multiple donors, 5,000 donors make more than 20,000 transplants possible each year.

Health professionals of all specialties, including physicians, nurses, social workers and counselors and others in related medical fields are invited to attend.

Speakers will include Dr. John Capehart, assistant director of cardiothoracic transplantation at Baylor University Medical Center; Dr. Jeffrey Crippin, director of hepatology, Baylor University Medical Center; Dr. Marlon Levy, assistant director of transplantation services for Baylor University Medical Center; and Dr. Christopher Lu, medical director of renal transplantation at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas.

There are almost 50,000 people waiting for life-saving organ transplants in the U.S. and nearly 3,000 of these are Texans, according to Southwest Organ Bank data.

While there are about 15,000 potential organ donors in the U.S. each year, only about 5,000 actually donate their organs.

Because most are multiple organ donors, however, transplant physicians are able to complete more than 20,000 transplants each year.

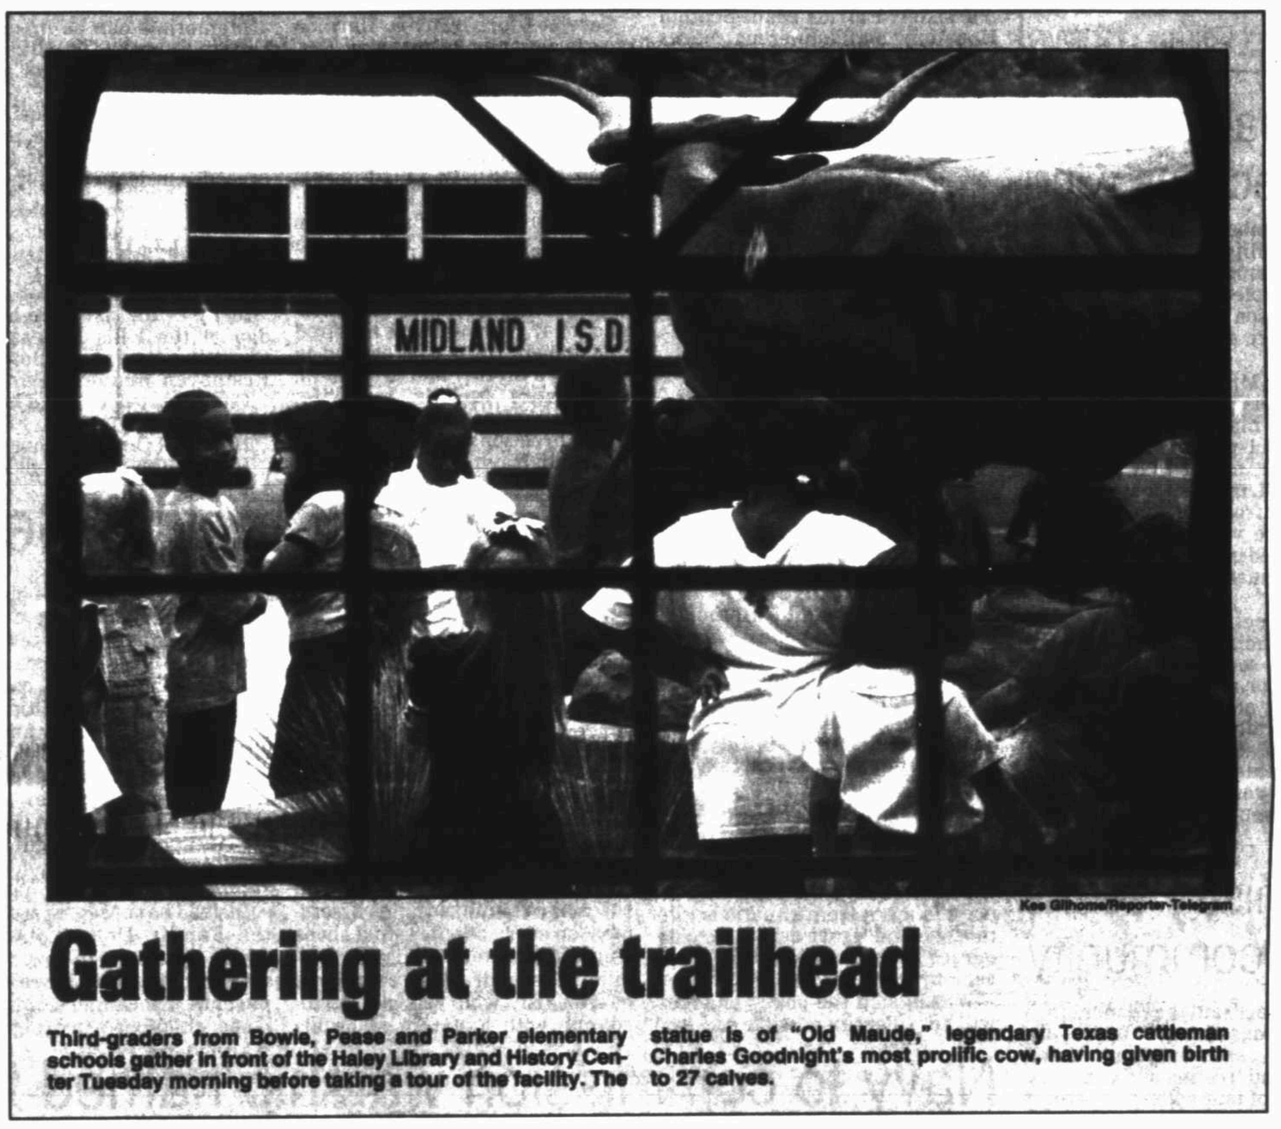

If all potential organ donors became actual donors, almost all of those on waiting lists could receive life-saving organs.

The one-day seminar is scheduled for Oct. 19 from 8: 30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Green Tree Country Club in Midland.

Although there is no registration fee for this seminar, the program counts for four Category 1 credit hours for healthcare workers requiring continuing education to maintain their licensure.

After completing the symposium, those in attendance will be able to discuss recent developments in transplant procedures and discuss other aspects of transplant surgery, according to seminar coordinators.

For registration or for more information regarding the seminar, call Memorial Hospital and Medical Center personnel at 685-1648, or 685-1602.

Judge grants retrial in civil case against Yale E. Key

■ Big Spring family learns of witness undisclosed in June trial; judge rules new evidence relevant and orders Midland contractor to pay retrial expenses for family of victim.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — A Big Spring district judge has ordered a civil case retried against the oilfield service company Yale E. Key, Inc., of Midland.

A Big Spring family was granted a retrial by Judge Bob Moore of the 118th District Court in that city.

The family is claiming Yale E. Key officials acted with gross negligence in the death of Roy "Gene" Strickland.

Strickland was repairing a "split-ring" truck tire in April of 1995 when the tire exploded, blowing the bead ring outward and crushing Strickland's skull, according to court records.

In the original trial in June, attorney for the plaintiffs Drew Mouton of Big Spring tried to show that the company was grossly negligent, since all of those who repair split-ring tires are required to be specially trained.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) requires that those kinds of tires only be repressurized within protective cages. The tire that killed Strickland was not in such a cage.

The jury in the original trial, however, did not find for the plaintiffs, determining that Yale E. Key, Inc., was not grossly negligent in the circumstances surrounding the death.

After the trial, however, the family learned of a witness with information relevant to the case that had not been disclosed in response to requests from the plaintiffs, according to documents filed in the 118th District Court.

After Mouton filed a motion for a retrial, Moore listened to this testimony and determined that it was germane to the case and ordered a retrial, Mouton said.

In addition, Yale E. Key, Inc., was ordered to pay more than $29,000 in legal fees to the plaintiffs in order to compensate them for having to retry the case.

This order was a sanction against the defendant company for not naming the witness in the first trial, Mouton explained.

The case is set for retrial in Big Spring on Dec. 16.

Groundbreaking for museum addition set for Thursday

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Finally, after years of planning and months of waiting, groundbreaking ceremonies for the new collection storage wing are set for 11: 30 a.m. Thursday at the Ellen Noel Art Museum, 4909 E. University.

"We just had to get together a ground breaking as fast as we could because all the little details came together at one time," said Marilyn Bassinger, director. "And construction could begin right away."

The construction company, Cooper Construction, which is based in the Permian Basin, started site preparation before the ground breaking.

"They started last Monday jackhammering up the old loading dock and ramp," said Mrs. Bassinger. "And, of course, we're thrilled."

The project actually began years ago.

"The project was the result of the board's long-range planning from three years ago," said Mrs. Bassinger. "And then we began the intense planning with Mrs. Noel last fall and working with architects and consultants and so forth, and then the gift was made in early 1996."

The gift, $1,225,000 from Ellen Noel, is specifically for a facility which will house a collections vault, a storage facility, a renovated loading dock and a new climate control, HVAC, system for all areas where art work is stored or displayed.

"Right now, we have no place really to store crates or to unpack our artwork that comes in for exhibitions except for taking it right into the gallery to unpack it," Mrs. Bassinger said.

A top priority is the new climate control system. Now a decade old, the dryness this past spring put a burden on an aging system.

"We had Old Masters' painting in the galleries, and we had to buy small portable humidifiers that had to be filled with gallons of water every day and then cleaned out twice a week so that they wouldn't form mold," said Mrs. Bassinger. "And all of that water had to be hauled, and the cleaning had to be done to supplement our old humidifier system. It just couldn't keep up with the dryness in the air."

Currently the outdated system is under yet another stressful time.

"This fall, we've had textiles, from the 'Vanishing Cultures' exhibit, which are very old textiles — the newest were made in the mid-1900s," Mrs. Bassinger said. "They go back maybe 100 years and are from all over the world. The humidity has been so high during the past month that we've had to purchase three dehumidifiers and they've been taking five gallons of water out of the air in each gallery every day and a half."

Proper climate control is vital to art work and a factor in being able to secure fine art exhibitions.

"You can have damage to canvases, paintings, works on paper are very dependent on a constant climate control,"

Soup Kitchen seeks help for Alternative to Halloween party

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland Soup Kitchen Ministry, which is entering its second decade of ministering to families, individuals and wayfarers in need of food, clothing and spiritual comfort, is itself in need of financial support especially in the wake of improvements and program expansions.

"The Midland Soup Kitchen needs monthly support," noted Kim Bogart, a Soup Kitchen volunteer who directs its children's ministry. "The need is so great. Many people cannot afford groceries and clothes."

Currently, the Soup Kitchen feeds more than 100 men, women and children, including families and transients, at noon each weekday throughout the year.

There is no bureaucratic red tape for people to go through in getting a meal day after day. No proof of hunger or poverty is required to eat meals at the Soup Kitchen at 1401 Orchard Lane on Midland's east side.

"They don't need to fill out any applications," noted Yolanda Spencer, who works with her parents, Mariano and Mary Rendon, in operating the Soup Kitchen.

The ministry was established on Terrell Street in southeast Midland in the mid-1980s as Blessings-for-Obedience Soup Kitchen. In recent years, it was relocated to a former YMCA gymnasium at Orchard Lane and Carver Street.

Recently, the ministry, which depends on freewill donations, grants, and volunteer help for its survival, fell into a financial lag. Grants did not materialize to pay for tiling 6,000 square feet of the 85-foot-by-120-foot building.

The ministry had applied for $32,000 in federal and private grants, which may be forthcoming but not until next year. And the need was for this year to make improvements to the building and to help fund operating costs.

"We really need consistent, monthly giving," Mrs. Bogart noted, to help finance the children's ministry, which sponsors seven annual events, including the upcoming "Alternative to Halloween" celebration, Kids Kickin' Karnival, which offers youngsters "a safe alternative to Halloween," on Oct. 31.

"We will be presenting the love of Jesus in practical ways," she said of the children's ministry. "We need (volunteer) workers from every race and denomination. We cross all racial barriers and denominational barriers (like a

■ Vice president, GOP hopeful say their matchup will closely follow themes of Sunday's presidential encounter.

Associated Press

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. — When asked about the possibility of running for president in four years, Al Gore hastens to end the line of inquiry. Jack Kemp shakes his head and wags an admonishing finger.

As they prepare for tonight's debate, the candidates for vice president are trying to keep the focus on Bill Clinton and Bob Dole. "It is not Al Gore vs. Jack Kemp," the GOP vice presidential nominee said Tuesday.

In pre-debate interviews with The Associated Press, Gore and Kemp predicted their 90-minute, prime-time debate would closely follow the themes of Sunday's encounter between Clinton and Dole. That exchange focused on tax policy and the state of the economy, on education, welfare and other social policies, and on the U.S. role abroad at the close of the 20th century.

Gore, for example, said he was determined to reinforce Clinton's argument that the GOP ticket's $548 billion tax-cut plan would require devastating cuts in Medicare and education spending. "The numbers do not add up," Gore said.

Kemp, for his part, said Dole had scored points in casting Clinton as a liberal hiding behind conservative election-year promises. Kemp promised to follow up by taking issue with a new Clinton campaign ad in which the president says he views his job as "taking care of the American people."

As they discussed their expectations for the debate and outlined their views of the vice presidency, the former House colleagues voiced friendship and respect for each other and predicted their encounter would be a civil affair.

"You can disagree without being disagreeable," Gore said Monday afternoon during a break in his debate preparations in Sarasota, where former New York Rep. Tom Downey was the Democratic stand-in for Kemp.

Kemp was interviewed Tuesday morning before a practice session in Bal Harbour, Fla., where New Hampshire GOP Sen. Judd Gregg was playing the role of Gore.

"I'm having trouble getting my answers down to 30 seconds," Kemp said. "I can go 30 seconds without using a verb."

With Clinton holding a comfortable lead heading into the final weeks of the campaign, Kemp and Gore are questioned frequently about the possibility that they could be competitors for the presidency in four years. Both dismiss such talk as a distraction they'd rather not deal with.

"In 2000, Bob is going to be running for re-election and I just hope he keeps me on the ticket," Kemp said.

Gore responds by telling the story of a dog holding a bone in his mouth while staring at his reflection in a pond. "He wants that other bone that the other dog has, so he opens his mouth to get that other bone and he loses both bones," Gore said.

"I am focused on 1996."

After watching Sunday night's presidential debate, and spending the past several days with campaign advisers, both Gore and Kemp entered their showdown with clear missions.

For Gore, it was to reverse any progress Dole might have made in selling his plan to cut taxes 15 percent across the board while balancing the budget by 2002 and preserving Medicare and other popular programs.

"All you need is a pencil and paper: The numbers do not add up," he said.

■ More national news/6B

Echoing Clinton, Gore said he would point to lower unemployment, a shrinking budget deficit and declining crime rates as evidence the administration deserved four more years.

Kemp was most animated in discussing the new Clinton campaign ad, and promised to make it an issue tonight as he seeks to build on Dole's efforts to paint Clinton as a big-government liberal.

"He was very proud of the fact that his job was to take care of us," Kemp said of Clinton. "It is an incredible statement. Bob Dole believes that we can take care of ourselves if we have more income after taxes, if we have better jobs, if we expand this economy the way we think it can be expanded."

Student expelled for giving Midol to friend returns to school in Ohio

FAIRBORN, Ohio (AP) — An eighth-grade honor student expelled for giving a Midol pill to a classmate returned to school Tuesday in a white limousine, her punishment reduced to the days she had already missed.

Clutching balloons and grinning jubilantly, Kimberly Smartt went back to Baker Junior High School, where a throng of cheering classmates waited outside the school for her to arrive.

"I feel really happy," Smartt said. "I'm just going to be in all the activities I was in and continue how it was and don't ever have to think about this again."

Smartt was allowed to return to the school about 10 miles northeast of Dayton after the school board decided late Monday to reduce her 80-day expulsion to the three days she had already served. The board upheld a 10-day suspension she had already served.

Smartt was expelled after she took two Midol pills from the school nurse's office Sept. 6 and gave one to Erica Taylor. Taylor, who said she didn't take the pill, was allowed to return to school following a nine-day suspension after she agreed to take part in a drug evaluation and counseling program.

Board members refused to say why they changed Smartt's punishment.

Their decision came the same day Smartt sued the school district in federal court, claiming she was punished more severely than the girl to whom she gave the pill because she is black. Taylor, 13, is white.

The district has denied the accusation.

Smartt's lawyer, Carl Lewis, said she will continue with her lawsuit.

On Tuesday, U.S. District Court Judge Walter Rice refused to grant a temporary restraining order requested by Smartt's attorneys in large part to get Smartt back into school — a goal rendered moot by the board's decision.

Attorney James Greene also asked Rice to bar the school from forcing Smartt to pay for the drug counseling.

"If she does not undergo drug counseling, it (the expulsion) will stay on her record," Greene said.

Rice refused, saying that if he later rules in Smartt's favor, the disciplinary action will be removed from her record whether or not she takes part in the counseling session.

He said he would rule in two months whether to dismiss the lawsuit, and scheduled a tentative Jan. 23 trial date.

Transplant specialists to visit city

Specialists to discuss latest advances for health-care professionals

■ Oct. 19 seminar to provide information for physicians, nurses, social workers, counselors and other health-care professionals.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Four prominent Texas organ transplant specialists will be in Midland Oct. 19 to discuss the latest technological advances in these life-saving procedures.

This one-day symposium is presented by the Midland-Odessa Transplant Education & Support Alliance (MOTESA), and sponsored by Memorial Hospital and Medical Center and the Southwest Organ Bank.

Because most transplant organ donors are multiple donors, 5,000 donors make more than 20,000 transplants possible each year.

Health professionals of all specialties, including physicians, nurses, social workers and counselors and others in related medical fields are invited to attend.

Speakers will include Dr. John Capehart, assistant director of cardiothoracic transplantation at Baylor University Medical Center; Dr. Jeffrey Crippin, director of hepatology, Baylor University Medical Center; Dr. Marlon Levy, assistant director of transplantation services for Baylor University Medical Center; and Dr. Christopher Lu, medical director of renal transplantation at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas.

There are almost 50,000 people waiting for life-saving organ transplants in the U.S. and nearly 3,000 of these are Texans, according to Southwest Organ Bank data.

While there are about 15,000 potential organ donors in the U.S. each year, only about 5,000 actually donate their organs.

Because most are multiple organ donors, however, transplant physicians are able to complete more than 20,000 transplants each year.

If all potential organ donors became actual donors, almost all of those on waiting lists could receive life-saving organs.

The one-day seminar is scheduled for Oct. 19 from 8: 30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Green Tree Country Club in Midland.

Although there is no registration fee for this seminar, the program counts for four Category 1 credit hours for healthcare workers requiring continuing education to maintain their licensure.

After completing the symposium, those in attendance will be able to discuss recent developments in transplant procedures and discuss other aspects of transplant surgery, according to seminar coordinators.

For registration or for more information regarding the seminar, call Memorial Hospital and Medical Center personnel at 685-1648, or 685-1602.

Judge grants retrial in civil case against Yale E. Key

■ Big Spring family learns of witness undisclosed in June trial; judge rules new evidence relevant and orders Midland contractor to pay retrial expenses for family of victim.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — A Big Spring district judge has ordered a civil case retried against the oilfield service company Yale E. Key, Inc., of Midland.

A Big Spring family was granted a retrial by Judge Bob Moore of the 118th District Court in that city.

The family is claiming Yale E. Key officials acted with gross negligence in the death of Roy "Gene" Strickland.

Strickland was repairing a "split-ring" truck tire in April of 1995 when the tire exploded, blowing the bead ring outward and crushing Strickland's skull, according to court records.

In the original trial in June, attorney for the plaintiffs Drew Mouton of Big Spring tried to show that the company was grossly negligent, since all of those who repair split-ring tires are required to be specially trained.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) requires that those kinds of tires only be repressurized within protective cages. The tire that killed Strickland was not in such a cage.

The jury in the original trial, however, did not find for the plaintiffs, determining that Yale E. Key, Inc., was not grossly negligent in the circumstances surrounding the death.

After the trial, however, the family learned of a witness with information relevant to the case that had not been disclosed in response to requests from the plaintiffs, according to documents filed in the 118th District Court.

After Mouton filed a motion for a retrial, Moore listened to this testimony and determined that it was germane to the case and ordered a retrial, Mouton said.

In addition, Yale E. Key, Inc., was ordered to pay more than $29,000 in legal fees to the plaintiffs in order to compensate them for having to retry the case.

This order was a sanction against the defendant company for not naming the witness in the first trial, Mouton explained.

The case is set for retrial in Big Spring on Dec. 16.

Groundbreaking for museum addition set for Thursday

By Georgia Temple

ODESSA — Finally, after years of planning and months of waiting, groundbreaking ceremonies for the new collection storage wing are set for 11: 30 a.m. Thursday at the Ellen Noel Art Museum, 4909 E. University.

"We just had to get together a ground breaking as fast as we could because all the little details came together at one time," said Marilyn Bassinger, director. "And construction could begin right away."

The construction company, Cooper Construction, which is based in the Permian Basin, started site preparation before the ground breaking.

"They started last Monday jackhammering up the old loading dock and ramp," said Mrs. Bassinger. "And, of course, we're thrilled."

The project actually began years ago.

"The project was the result of the board's long-range planning from three years ago," said Mrs. Bassinger. "And then we began the intense planning with Mrs. Noel last fall and working with architects and consultants and so forth, and then the gift was made in early 1996."

The gift, $1,225,000 from Ellen Noel, is specifically for a facility which will house a collections vault, a storage facility, a renovated loading dock and a new climate control, HVAC, system for all areas where art work is stored or displayed.

"Right now, we have no place really to store crates or to unpack our artwork that comes in for exhibitions except for taking it right into the gallery to unpack it," Mrs. Bassinger said.

A top priority is the new climate control system. Now a decade old, the dryness this past spring put a burden on an aging system.

"We had Old Masters' painting in the galleries, and we had to buy small portable humidifiers that had to be filled with gallons of water every day and then cleaned out twice a week so that they wouldn't form mold," said Mrs. Bassinger. "And all of that water had to be hauled, and the cleaning had to be done to supplement our old humidifier system. It just couldn't keep up with the dryness in the air."

Currently, the outdated system is under yet another stressful time.

"This fall, we've had textiles, from the 'Vanishing Cultures' exhibit, which are very old textiles — the newest were made in the mid-1900s," Mrs. Bassinger said. "They go back maybe 100 years and are from all over the world. The humidity has been so high during the past month that we've had to purchase three dehumidifiers and they've been taking five gallons of water out of the air in each gallery every day and a half."

Proper climate control is vital to art work and a factor in being able to secure fine art exhibitions.

"You can have damage to canvases, paintings, works on paper are very dependent on a constant climate control,"

Soup Kitchen seeks help for Alternative to Halloween party

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland Soup Kitchen Ministry, which is entering its second decade of ministering to families, individuals and wayfarers in need of food, clothing and spiritual comfort, is itself in need of financial support especially in the wake of improvements and program expansions.

"The Midland Soup Kitchen needs monthly support," noted Kim Bogart, a Soup Kitchen volunteer who directs its children's ministry. "The need is so great. Many people cannot afford groceries and clothes."

Currently, the Soup Kitchen feeds more than 100 men, women and children, including families and transients, at noon each weekday throughout the year.

There is no bureaucratic red tape for people to go through in getting a meal day after day. No proof of hunger or poverty is required to eat meals at the Soup Kitchen at 1401 Orchard Lane on Midland's east side.

"They don't need to fill out any applications," noted Yolanda Spencer, who works with her parents, Mariano and Mary Rendon, in operating the Soup Kitchen.

The ministry was established on Terrell Street in southeast Midland in the mid-1980s as Blessings-for-Obedience Soup Kitchen. In recent years, it was relocated to a former YMCA gymnasium at Orchard Lane and Carver Street.

Recently, the ministry, which depends on freewill donations, grants, and volunteer help for its survival, fell into a financial lag. Grants did not materialize to pay for tiling 6,000 square feet of the 85-foot-by-120-foot building.

The ministry had applied for $32,000 in federal and private grants, which may be forthcoming but not until next year. And the need was for this year to make improvements to the building and to help fund operating costs.

"We really need consistent, monthly giving," Mrs. Bogart noted, to help finance the children's ministry, which sponsors seven annual events, including the upcoming "Alternative to Halloween" celebration, Kids Kickin' Karnival, which offers youngsters "a safe alternative to Halloween," on Oct. 31.

"We will be presenting the love of Jesus in practical ways," she said of the children's ministry. "We need (volunteer) workers from every race and denomination. We cross all racial barriers and denominational barriers (like a

MUSEUM: Groundbreaking to be held Thursday for collections wing

(From 1B)

Mrs. Bassinger said. "If the humidity gets about 75 to 80 percent, you can have mold or mildew set into anything.

"So this will be a real Godsend because this new system will be very sophisticated. It will take every bit of humidity out of the incoming air and put in exactly the amount of humidity that is needed to maintain a constant level."

The new system will keep the galleries and storage areas at 70 degrees and the humidity at 50 percent, Mrs. Bassinger explained. "The most important thing is constancy. We are really, really pleased and grateful."

Mrs. Noel's gift is part of a "larger project," Mrs. Bassinger said, adding that the museum is currently conducting a fund-raising effort to expand the multi-purpose area, to again landscape the walled-sculpture garden and provide adequate drainage and to make the facility fully accessible to all members of the public.

The facility will be closed to the public during the summer of 1997 with completion due by September. Johnson Seefedt Architects of Odessa are designers of the project.

"It was Mrs. Noel's desire that we have a local architect, and they had done many civic and county and school projects," said Mrs. Bassinger, noting that the architectural firm was located across the street from the museum. "And then there were various consultants called in to look at the special area of museum design and construction."

Mrs. Noel, for whom the facility was officially renamed in January, has served on the board of trustees for many years and was a member of the long-range planning committee.

"She is active in the planning and implementation area as well as in her wonderful philanthropy to the museum," said Mrs. Bassinger.

Those who wish to volunteer their services and talents to the ministry may telephone Mrs. Bogart at 699-6515. Donations of money, clothing and food may be sent to the Midland Soup Kitchen Ministry at 1401 Orchard Lane, Midland 79701. The Rendon family my be telephoned there at 686-7687 (SOUP).

To support the "Alternative to Halloween" celebration, people may send donations to help buy tennis shoes for children. The Children's Ministry primarily serves children in the 3-through-12-age range.

"Most of the people coming to the Soup Kitchen feel safe here," Mrs. Bogart observed. "And they wouldn't normally go to church functions. That is why we want to take this opportunity to present the love of Christ in practical ways."

The Soup Kitchen Ministry, based in Scripture, often refers to John 21:17, in which Jesus says to "Feed my sheep" to demonstrate one's love of Christ.

To further help out with the "Alternative to Halloween" event, Mrs. Bogart said that donors may drop off bags of candy, apples and caramel, cases or packs of soft drinks, and frosting and cake mixes at one of four collection: Sam's Wholesale Club, the Midland Downtown YMCA, Albertson's Supermarket at Loop 250 and Midkiff Road, and Furr's Supermarket at Big Spring Street and Scharbauer Drive.

Events of the Children's Ministry include:

- Summer Boot Camp, a week-long event, similar to Vacation Bible School, in June.
- Back-to-School Bash, a one-day event, in August.
- The Alternative to Halloween's Kids Kickin' Karnival, 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Oct. 31.
- Thanksgiving family feed in November.
- The Christmas-time give-away to children of shoes boxes of toys.
- The Jesus-Loves-You Party on the traditional Valentine's Day, Feb. 14.
- The Mini-Boot Camp, which is a three-day event during Spring Break for school children in March.

Wilson sends resignation to Bush, Gingrich

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic Rep. Charles Wilson made it official Tuesday, ending 24 years on Capitol Hill by sending his resignation to Texas Gov. George W. Bush.

The 63-year-old Lufkin congressman isn't seeking re-election and is instead returning to private life, where he will start a new career as a Washington lobbyist. The resignation was effective Tuesday.

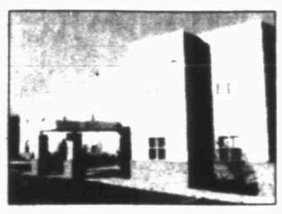

"I have tried to give the very best I had to offer," Wilson said in his letter. "If there were an opportunity to turn the clock back and start over, I would follow the same course.

"At this point of anyone's career, if he/she can look back and say, 'It was good,' the ultimate fulfillment has been achieved. I can truthfully say, it was good."

Wilson's letter also was copied to House Speaker Newt Gingrich and House clerk Robin H. Carle.

Death leads to Child Protective Services changes

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The abuse-related death of a 3-month-old girl has led to policy changes for Child Protective Services that officials hope will help prevent future fatalities.

Cassandra Garcia died after being shaken roughly in July, two months after she was first taken to the county hospital with a suspicious head injury her parents couldn't explain. Her father was charged with murder.

"What happened happened, and we can't change the past. But we need to learn from situations like this one and figure out ways to do our job better," said Eddie Wilson, regional director for CPS.

Wilson said the policy changes will help identify possible cases of abuse before they escalate.

The changes include:

- Assigning a caseworker full time to county-run Thomason Hospital to work closely with hospital staff on suspected cases of child abuse and neglect.
- Developing specialized training for CPS staff to improve investigative skills. Investigators probing Cassandra's case may have lacked the expertise to identify signs of child abuse.
- Requesting that a pediatrician check and submit a written assessment on every possible child abuse victim that enters the county hospital. Cassandra was seen by a neurologist, who was not forthcoming with a statement on his findings, according to police.
- Routinely having CPS program managers review cases involving serious injury.

In Cassandra's case, caseworkers did not do an investigation of the head injury in May and decided to return her to her parents. The girl died July 21 from severe brain trauma resulting from a rough shaking.

Critics of the system argued that caseworkers should have removed her from her home.

Instead her case was assigned to the Family Preservation Unit, whose mission is to keep the family together, and signed up both parents for anger-control and basic child-care instruction and marital counseling.

CPS is investigating the actions taken by agency employees.

Judge Patricia Macias, courtmaster of the Child Welfare Court, said she supports the CPS changes.

"Protecting the child always has to be the most important thing," she said. "If they can do it by not removing (children), that's good. But if there are any doubts, they should remove, then work toward reunification."

The case of Cassandra's father, Miguel Angel Garcia, 37, is expected to be presented to a grand jury this week. He has told police that he punched his daughter because he was stressed and frustrated.

Navy to commission warship named for Hispanic hero

The USS Gonzales is named for Marine Sgt. Alfredo Gonzales of Edinburg, who was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously.

INGLESIDE, Texas (AP) — A newly built, $1 billion destroyer will become the nation's only active warship named for a Hispanic when it is commissioned Saturday at Naval Station Ingleside.

The USS Gonzalez is named after Marine Sgt. Alfredo Gonzalez of Edinburg. He was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor for his heroic actions at Hue City, Vietnam, during the start of the infamous Tet Offensive.

Gonzalez, 21, was one of 37 Hispanic soldiers, sailors and Marines to have received the nation's highest award for valor.

The guided missile destroyer arrived at Ingleside late Monday after being delayed because of Tropical Storm Josephine in the Gulf of Mexico.

"I am overjoyed to be here," said Capt. Frederick D. Allard Jr., commanding officer of the Gonzalez. "This is a big event that I've been working for a year and a half now."

Thousands of Edinburg residents are expected to be on hand Saturday during the commissioning ceremony. Navy Secretary John H. Dalton will be guest speaker.

Navy officials have said they wanted to hold the ship's commissioning in Texas because it is named after a Texan. Commissioning is a traditional ceremony in which the Navy accepts a vessel from its contractor.

Gonzalez died Feb. 4, 1968, after saving more than a dozen lives.

Wounded three times in as many days, he refused treatment and continued to lead his platoon and rescue Marines until he was killed by a North Vietnamese rocket.

Marine Corps accounts of the battle say that Gonzalez, a platoon commander, led his men into the city while it was under heavy enemy fire.

He ran through a fire-swept area to rescue a wounded Marine and was wounded, but was able to carry the Marine to a covered area.

The ship will spend a week at Ingleside and then head for Florida for sea tests and trials, Allard said. Its home port will be at Norfolk, Va., and it is scheduled to deploy to the Middle East in 1998.

Power to pardon leads to Gov. Bush's dismissal from jury duty

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush would have been asked to answer questions under oath about his personal history of drinking and driving — a subject he has avoided — if he had been selected as a juror on Tuesday.

But Bush was dismissed from jury duty after the defense attorney in a driving-while-intoxicated case moved to have the governor struck because of his power to pardon convicts.

"I thought that there might be a conflict, but I didn't know it would be grounds for dismissal from the jury," Bush said. "I accept the verdict and I will go back to work, but I'm glad to do my duty.

"It's important for citizens from all walks of life to do their duty when called."

Bush was one of 18 potential jurors called for a driving-while-intoxicated case in which six jurors were to be impaneled.

After his dismissal, Bush was asked by reporters if he had ever been arrested for driving while intoxicated.

"I do not have a perfect record as a youth," Bush responded.

When asked if that meant yes or no, he said, "When I was young, I did a lot of foolish things. But I will tell you this, I urge people not to drink and drive. It's an important message for all people to hear. I don't drink, and I hope others don't drink and drive as well."

During his campaign for governor in 1994, Bush repeatedly avoided answering directly to questions probing whether alcohol consumption had ever gotten him into trouble.

"I thought that there might be a conflict, but I didn't know it would be grounds for dismissal from the jury.

—Gov. George W. Bush, after the defense attorney in a DWI case had him struck.

After Bush was dismissed Tuesday, Dawnita Wilson, an assistant Travis County attorney, and David Wahlberg, the defense attorney in the DWI case, asked potential jurors several questions related to drinking and driving.

Bush would have been asked under oath if he had ever operated a vehicle after consuming three or more drinks; if he had ever been asked to give a blood, breath or urine specimen for the purposes of determining intoxication; or if he'd ever been in an automobile accident where alcohol was involved.

When asked about the questions the governor would have been asked, Karen Hughes, Bush's spokeswoman, said that Bush hasn't had a drink in 10 years.

"He has consistently answered questions by saying that all of us have done things in the past that we now regret," Ms. Hughes said. "He stated during his 1994 campaign that he did drink in the past, as a younger man, and that on occasion he drank too much."

The governor spent much of the morning milling around the Travis County courthouse, talking to other prospective jurors. He was not in the courtroom when attorneys in the case met at the bench of County Court-at-Law Judge David Crain and dismissed him.

Wahlberg told the judge he objected to Bush's being on the panel because "he has the ultimate authority to grant clemency or pardon."

Wahlberg told the judge he didn't think Bush could make an unbiased decision if the defendant were found guilty and the governor ultimately had to make a decision regarding a pardon for the defendant.

Assistant Travis County attorney John Lastovica said he didn't oppose the defense motion.

In dismissing Bush, Judge Crain said, "It would appear to me that there is an inherent conflict."

Bush said he would donate the $6 that he received for jury duty to the Texas Crime Victims Compensation Fund.

Last week, when Bush first responded to his jury summons and was assigned to a jury pool at a specific court, he donated the $6 for that day to the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers Association.

Abrego Garcia attorneys rest case

HOUSTON (AP) — Unusually high dosages of anti-anxiety drugs given to Juan Garcia Abrego hours before DEA agents interrogated him likely impaired the accused drug kingpin's reasoning skills, making him easy to manipulate, final defense witnesses testified Tuesday.

"That's a huge dose, an enormous dose," psychiatrist Gloria Keraga said of the 20 milligrams of Valium given to Garcia Abrego hours before his first questioning by DEA agents in Houston.

Dr. Keraga, the final witness in the four-week trial, testified Tuesday that the 52-year-old defendant would have been "very susceptible to suggestion," because of the Valium and Xanax in his system.

Jurors were expected to begin deliberations as early as Wednesday after up to five hours of closing arguments from attorneys for both the government and Garcia Abrego. Each side was allowed 2½ hours to address jurors.

The short number of witnesses for Garcia Abrego included testimony designed to bolster defense claims that he was drugged by government agents and duped into making statements implicating himself.

Defense attorneys steered witnesses to Mexican doctors' records that revealed an assortment of hypertension drugs were given to Garcia Abrego on Jan. 15, the day after his highly publicized arrest.

As Garcia Abrego boarded a government plane in Mexico City to be taken to Houston, where he was to face 22 counts of drug trafficking and money laundering, he exhibited a "hypertension crisis" and what later was characterized by Keraga as a panic attack.

To combat a "hypertension crisis" as he was taken aboard a government plane to Houston to stand trial on drug charges, Abrego Garcia was injected Valium and Xanax.

To combat both conditions, doctors attending Garcia Abrego administered three hypertension drugs. Then, to calm the man once listed among the FBI's 10 "Most Wanted," doctors injected him with 20 milligrams of Valium and 1 milligram of Xanax.

That dosage, according to Keraga and forensic toxicologist Ernest Lykissa, was unusually high. A normal dose of Xanax for an average person was a quarter of a milligram, Lykissa said.

A Valium dose the size that Garcia Abrego received would have left an average person weighing 160-170 pounds with a "pronounced stupor," said Lykissa, an assistant professor of pathology at Baylor University. The stocky Garcia Abrego appears to weigh more than 170 pounds.

However, an earlier defense witness — Dr. Gary Coleman — testified when he examined Garcia Abrego upon his arrival in Houston, the man appeared to be alert and responsive and told officials that he felt well.

A DEA agent who testified Monday said Garcia Abrego appeared alert and almost arrogant. Joseph Dubois said Garcia Abrego talked for an hour to authorities after first waiving his right to have an attorney present.

In that interview, Garcia Abrego said admitted to drug trafficking but downplayed his role in the global marijuana and cocaine trade.

The man accused of overseeing tons of cocaine ferried across the Mexico-U.S border lightheartedly told DEA agents how he rarely moved more than 220 to 300 pounds of cocaine at a time into the United States.

Edwards Aquifer water levels on way back to normal, officials say

AUSTIN (AP) — Water levels in the Edwards Aquifer are steadily improving, and a few good rains should bring the levels back to normal, officials said Tuesday.

"The water levels in the wells are starting to come up, and we are just hoping for rain — big, intense rains in the right places ... in the recharge and contribution zones," said Steve Schriver, environmental analyst for the Barton Springs-Edwards Aquifer Conservation District. "And we need people to conserve."

The district, which includes southern Travis and northern Hayes counties, is in a Stage 2 drought alert declared last summer.

There are three stages of drought alerts. Stage 3 is the most extreme, with required reductions in consumption by up to 33 percent.

A couple of storms with up to three inches of rain each would be enough to get water into cracks and sinkholes to replenish the aquifer, Schriver said.

The aquifer is the sole source of drinking water for the nearly 1.5 million residents in San Antonio and some residents in south Austin.

"We've had some good rains, and the aquifer levels have come up," said Jeanne Janes of the Edwards Aquifer Authority.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will be asked to make a number of concessions. Be flexible but uphold your ideals. Your social life begins to accelerate rapidly next month. Make a timely investment in your future. A vacation you take in December could lead to a lasting romantic connection! New hobbies attract your notice early in 1997. You find a way to make money from a favorite pursuit. Form a business partnership if there is too much work for you to handle on your own.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: legendary musician John Lennon, songwriter Jackson Browne, novelist Belva Plain, "Broom Hilda" cartoonist Russell Myers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your involvement in a community project will win you new respect. Put your hard-earned money to work for you. Verbalizing your feelings of love will make a promising relationship burst into full bloom.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Taking an occasional break from your labors will actually boost your productivity. You return to your work with renewed vigor! Your keen intellect helps you connect with someone prominent.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Newcomers will be favorably impressed by your charm and easy manner. Guard against confiding too much too soon. Nitpicking will not endear you to your loved ones.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Follow-through is essential when you are assigned a task. Higher-ups will be impressed by your dedication. Although your stubbornness occasionally works to your advantage, avoid overdoing it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You and your mate should share certain financial responsibilities. Researching major purchases will help you get better value. Remain optimistic about investments.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not hold back. Seize the ball at work and run with it! You know how to bring out the best in others. A partner will need kid glove treatment for a while.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If a family squabble arises, be the peacemaker. Let others have their say, but insist they say it politely. Exciting developments boost your hopes for a new love.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Balance job demands with family fun. Although romance is not everything, it certainly can lift your spirits. Be patient if you want a raise or promotion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Jot down original ideas that pop into your head. Someone special deserves a second chance to win your heart. Urge your children or siblings to be more self-reliant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Investigate the cause of physical or emotional fatigue. A doctor or psychologist may be able to help. Reach a new agreement with your business allies.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You cannot be everything to everyone. Co-workers must learn to stand on their own two feet and face up to their mistakes. Leave any work worries at the office when you go home at night.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Help children find their place in the sun. Be willing to take a backseat today so that a loved one may shine. A business partnership will thrive if you show consideration.

Each year, The Bridge World makes an offer to readers of bridge columns. This year, there is an unusual twist to it. Everyone who orders their new booklet, "Challenge the Champs, Book 8," ($4.50 plus $2 postage and handling, 39 W. 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10024.) will receive a complimentary back issue of the magazine.

On this deal based on one from an earlier publication, both North-South pairs reached three no trump, not a very good contract with such tenuous holdings in the black suits. No game contract is sound, but the Moysian 4-3 heart fit offers the best play. It requires no worse than a 4-2 trump break and some luck in clubs.

Against three no trump West led a fourth-best spade. East won with the king and continued with the ace, and West had a problem. It was obvious from the play that declarer held the queen of spades, and could not have had an opening bid without the ace of diamonds and king-queen of hearts. It was vital, therefore, to get East to abandon spades in favor of a switch to clubs. What could West do?

The defender found the answer by dropping the jack of spades under the ace! East had no problem reading the situation — the jack denied the queen. One glance at the table was enough to convince East that the only suit that offered any promise was clubs, so the defenders netted the first five tricks.

Could Whoopi Goldberg play Pseudolus, a male slave in ancient Rome in revival?

NEW YORK — Whoopi Goldberg has played crooks, cops, psychics and space aliens — but can she play Pseudolus, a male slave in ancient Rome?

That's the funny thing happening in speculation about who'll succeed star Nathan Lane in Broadway's hit revival of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum."

The New York Post reported Tuesday that the actress is under consideration to succeed Lane, whose contract with the show expires in February. He plays Pseudolus, a slave who wins his freedom in a series of farcical misadventures.

The role was created on Broadway by Zero Mostel.

"We'll have a casting announcement in the next few days," Chris Boneau, the press representative for "Forum" said Monday, but declined to comment on possible replacements for Lane.

Other names floated by the Post were Eddie Murphy, Robin Williams and Jason Alexander, better known as George Costanza on NBC's "Seinfeld."

MOULTON, Ala. — High school students in Lawrence County can read Maya Angelou's revealing autobiography, but they won't have to.

High school students in Lawrence County can read Maya Angelou's autobiography, but they won't have to.

The county school board voted 3-2 Monday to keep "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings" on the required reading list for advanced placement classes. Students have the option of picking another book.

Superintendent Patrick Graham tried to keep the book off the list after several parents complained, contending that sexually explicit material in the book made it unfit for high school students.

The book includes a section where Angelou describes being raped as a child.

IRVINE, Calif. — More power?

"Home Improvement" star Tim Allen and his Saleen/Allen RRR Speedlab teammates wrapped up the amateur racing Manufacturer's Championship title over the weekend.

Allen, who plays Tim "The Tool Man" Taylor on ABC's top-rated sitcom, drove his Mustang to a sixth-pace finish, while teammates finished second and fourth.

Saleen/Allen RRR Speedlab accumulated 47 points in the nine-race Sports Car Club of America series that began in February in Florida and wrapped up over the weekend at Sears Point Raceway in Sonoma.

NEW YORK — Harlem's second renaissance is getting a helping hand from Hollywood.

Robert DeNiro's planned $3 million renovation of Minton's Playhouse got a $300,000 boost Monday in the form of low-interest loans from city officials.

Robert DeNiro's planned $3 million renovation of Milton's Playhouse got a $300,000 boost from city officials.

DeNiro wants to re-open the restaurant and jazz club was once a hub of Harlem's music scene, where greats like Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie and Thelonius Monk played in the 1930s and '40s.

Charles Gargano, Empire State Development commissioner, said the renovation of the 200-seat club would create 120 jobs and preserve an invaluable piece of Harlem history. It should open in about a year.

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia — For the second time, pop superstar Michael Jackson has been shut out of Malaysia.

Jackson's application for an Oct. 27 concert here was shot down by municipal authorities who cited "the effect it would have on the young," the Star newspaper reported Tuesday.

More than half of Maylaysia's 19 million people are Muslims and Islam is the state religion. Jackson's onstage dances, with their hip gyrations and pelvic thrusts, could be considered immodest by local standards.

Municipal president Mohamed Aini Tahib also said artists must also conform to a dress code, which Jackson may not have been able to abide by, the Star reported.

Jackson's HIStory World Tour has already sparked controversy in Russia and South Korea, where groups brought up 1993 claims by a 13-year-old American boy that Jackson had sex with him.

Pentagon spends hundreds of millions on construction at closing bases

By Karen Gullo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — San Diego's Naval Training Center opened a new $5.1 million chapel just in time to hold graduation for the facility's last recruit class. The base closes next year.

The Army's Fort Sheridan near Chicago officially closed three years ago. Yet, construction on a $3.3 million addition to classroom buildings used by the Navy is scheduled to begin soon.

And in Orlando, Fla., the Navy just spent more than $13 million to build a dining hall and personnel center on a base slated to close in two years. Sailors have never set foot in the mess hall; it was turned over to the U.S. Customs Service. And the city is slated to get the other building.

All across the country, even after the government made the tough decisions to close military bases, the Pentagon is spending hundreds of millions of dollars for construction on those very bases.

Critics contend many of the expenditures are just wasteful.

"They defeat the whole purpose of closing bases, which is to save money," said Sean Paige, spokesman for the group Citizens Against Government Waste.

The Pentagon notes that even while it officially terms some bases closed, portions are still used by the service that originally occupied it, by another branch of the military or by another government agency.

And the Pentagon's director of installations, Doug Hansen, defending the projects, said many were contracted before bases went on the closure list, the work was being done on land being transferred to other agencies or the Pentagon simply did not want to leave buildings half-finished.

AP Laserphoto

This is a June 1996 photo of the $5.1 million new chapel at San Diego's Navy Training Center, which was completed just in time for the base to close next year.

The Defense Department could not provide an exact figure on construction spending for largely defunct bases, but a Pentagon study last year of some of the projects — slated to cost $471 million — showed nearly $263 million of them were continued.

Comparing three years of Pentagon construction budget records with base closure lists, The Associated Press reviewed a sample of more than $70 million in construction on closing or officially closed bases. The projects ranged from new barracks and renovated gymnasiums to new sewage plants, fire stations and training facilities.

The Pentagon's base-closure guidelines require the services to evaluate construction projects at facilities slated for closing to determine whether they should go forward.

The Pentagon reported last December that some $974 million in Navy construction was canceled or suspended. Hundreds of millions of Army and Air Force projects also were canceled, officials said.

"We think the screening process worked pretty well," said Navy Capt. Larry Anderson, a Pentagon engineer who reviewed projects.

Hansen said it sometimes costs more to break contracts than to continue the work. Most of the axed projects had not yet been contracted out.

Experts say military contracts contain termination clauses that would make the government responsible for builders' costs for materials, labor and profit margin, but they questioned whether the costs would exceed the project's price tag.

"That sounds a little strange," said Paul Caggiano at the Coalition for Government Procurement, which studies Pentagon contracting.

The AP's review found dozens of projects that made it through the screening process.

■ At San Diego's Naval Training Center, the 33,000-square-foot chapel was four months from completion when the base went on the closure list. "They're going to have to pay for it anyway, so why not complete the structure?" said Lt. Jeff Weimann, a Navy spokesman in San Diego.

The facility was used for the base's last recruit graduation, but not for religious services — the base's World War II-era chapel still works fine for that. But Weimann said the new building is used occasionally for meetings, charity events and other functions.

■ At Grissom Air Force base near Indianapolis, which ended most operations in October 1994, a $5.8 million fire station and training facility will be built less than two miles from an existing firehouse. The old station works fine, but the Air Force wants a new one on a small segment of the base still used by reservists.

■ The Air Force is spending $7.1 million to renovate a gym, barracks and fueling system at a Homestead, Fla., base damaged by Hurricane Andrew in 1992. The base officially closed in 1994, but the facilities will be used by reserve units, officials said.

■ Since Fort Sheridan officially closed in 1993, large chucks of the base's lakefront property have been turned over to private developers or to a forest preserve. A training center, for local reservists, is nearly all that's left of the Army's operation. But a plan is being discussed to transfer that part of the property to a private developer as well.

Nonetheless, the Army plans to begin bidding for a $3.3 million classroom expansion soon, and probably break ground in the spring.

Congress, however, deserves the responsibility for some projects.

For example, lawmakers appropriated $6 million this year to pay for new ovens, lighting and other improvements at a propeller shop that is one of the few remaining facilities at the defunct Philadelphia Naval Shipyard.

The House tried unsuccessfully to terminate the funding. Defenders say the facility is one-of-a-kind.

Dems in tobacco country distance themselves from Clinton

DANVILLE, Va. (AP) — Candidate Virgil Goode stood in a sweltering tobacco warehouse and gave President Clinton the kind of tongue-lashing that plays well in Virginia's 5th Congressional District.

"If Bill Clinton and Albert Gore spent as much time fighting illegal drugs as they spent fighting tobacco, the illegal drug problem would be a lot less in this country," Goode snapped.

Across the state line, in North Carolina, Bob Etheridge, denounced the Democratic president for decreeing that nicotine be regulated as a drug.

Such attacks might be expected from Republicans. Etheridge and Goode, however, are Democrats seeking congressional seats deep in tobacco country.

It's hard to run as a Democrat when your party's president is attacking your constituents' livelihood, Democrat Joe Wright conceded during a Farm Bureau forum in Kentucky. He is challenging Republican Rep. Ron Lewis in Kentucky's tobacco-rich 2nd District.

Wright, former president of the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association, said he would be willing to fight government regulation of tobacco in court.

As a member of the Virginia Senate, Goode's voting record was more conservative than some of his Republican colleagues. He has been a tobacco ally and makes a point of telling voters that he is not beholden Clinton or liberal leaders within his party.

"You're not sent there to follow Bill Clinton; you're not there to follow Bob Dole; you're sent there to represent the people who brought you to the dance," Goode said during a recent debate at Hampden-Sydney College.

Clinton in August approved a decision by the Food and Drug Administration to classify nicotine as an addictive drug, giving the agency authority to regulate cigarettes and smokeless tobacco.

In rules aimed at curbing teenage smoking, the FDA is placing restrictions on cigarette advertisements, vending machines and promotions of sporting events.

Polls have shown widespread support for the crackdown outside tobacco states, but Clinton's move pits him against the tobacco industry, advertisers, farmers and Southern lawmakers.

"Nationally, the majority of candidates are embracing the president and his initiatives, which is a tremendous turnaround from 1994 when they avoided him like the plague," said Larry Sabato, a University of Virginia political science professor. "The one exception is the tobacco areas, where Clinton's name is poison."

That includes Democrats.

Republicans hold a 235-198 majority in the 435-member House; there is one vacancy and one independent.

Goode, a lawyer, can't even bring himself to utter the president's name when asked whom he will vote for: "I have always said that I will support the nominee from the convention in Chicago."

The 5th District's Democratic leaders were so worried about Goode's allegiance that they refused to back him until he signed a pledge to support the Democratic presidential candidate.

Nevertheless, tobacco-state Republicans benefit by merely by lumping their opponents in the same party with Clinton.

In North Carolina, Republican David Funderburk's television ads say that a vote for Etheridge inevitably favors Clinton and Rep. Henry Waxman, a fiery California Democrat who has relentlessly battled the tobacco industry.

Etheridge grew up on a tobacco farm, and his family still has an allotment to grow the crop.

Goode's Republican opponent, George Landrith, often tells crowds in Virginia, "Vote for Dole and Landrith, not Clinton and Goode."

When Vice President Al Gore visited Lexington, Ky., last week, Democratic Rep. Scotty Baesler stayed in Washington rather than appear in his home district with the vice president.

At the Democratic convention in August, Gore spoke intimately of the 1984 death of his sister from lung cancer. He said her death changed his personal and political views of tobacco, which his family has raised in Tennessee.

"Where Clinton is running ahead, in most cases they (Democratic congressional candidates) are embracing him," said Ron Faucheux, editor and publisher of Campaigns & Elections magazine. "In marginal districts, where Clinton and Dole are running close, they are staying away. I think it's purely the numbers."

Sabato said there are deeper cultural issues at work.

"Southerners don't like a lot of things about Bill Clinton, from his character to his history of draft evasion," Sabato said.

Goode said Clinton has never been popular in south-central Virginia, and his support for an increase in the cigarette tax and FDA regulation of tobacco "just made him more unpopular."

West Virginia race pits coal miner's daughter against former governor

By Jennifer Bundy
Associated Press

Charlotte Pritt, a liberal Democrat, is playing up her humble roots and hoping for a ride on the coattails of President Clinton, who is expected to win big in West Virginia. Cecil Underwood, a moderate Republican making his fourth attempt to return to the governor's mansion, is hoping to take advantage of a divided Democratic Party.

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — She is a coal miner's daughter, unafraid to be called a liberal Democrat. He, a moderate Republican, was once the state's youngest governor and may become its oldest.

Despite Democrats' 2-1 edge in voter registration, the latest poll indicates the race between Charlotte Pritt and Cecil Underwood to become West Virginia's next governor is a statistical dead heat.

Pritt is playing up her humble roots and hoping for a ride on the coattails of President Clinton, who is expected to win big in West Virginia. Underwood, making his fourth attempt to return to the governor's mansion, is hoping to take advantage of a divided Democratic Party.

Both insist gender and age are not issues — Underwood turns 74 on Election Day, while Pritt, 47, would be the state's first female governor. Observers think otherwise.

"We are going to see one of the largest gender gaps ever," predicted Neil Berch, assistant professor of political science at West Virginia University.

A poll conducted for The Herald-Dispatch and WOWK-TV, both of Huntington, in early September found women were more likely to support Pritt and men were most likely to support Underwood.

It's not the only marked difference in their camps.

Pritt is strongly backed by labor, particularly the still-powerful United Mine Workers, and says she is challenging the "good ol' boy" network of professional politicians and influential out-of-state coal and timber companies.

She plays up the coal miner's daughter image.

"Facing hardships early one was one of the reasons I have been able to survive and continue," she says. "It does make a difference that we have someone who comes from the people, someone with great compassion and common sense."

Underwood is supported by business and by those, including some Democrats, who fear Pritt would scare away new investment through her support of unions and stronger environmental laws.

She would raise taxes on natural resources such as coal and timber, restore workers compensation benefits reduced last year and support collective bargaining for state employees.

Underwood, a businessman who led drives to attract high-technology companies to the state, says he would use technology to improve education and create jobs.

Pritt tried to capitalize on her party ties with her first television ad of the fall, showing her with Clinton and Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., who also is expected to glide to victory in the state this fall. Pritt's pitch is that she is a part of a Democratic team and could better protect West Virginia from federal budget cuts.

But she has struggled to unite state Democrats since winning a brutal primary. Many legislative leaders and county party bosses, when asked if they support Pritt, say only that they support Democrats.

Even Gov. Gaston Caperton, who cannot seek a third term by law, is sitting out the campaign. Pritt ran a write-in campaign against Caperton after losing to him in the 1992 primary. Both deny there is lingering animosity, but Caperton's former chief of staff and counsel are supporting Underwood.

Berch says Pritt's problem is that conservative Democrats feel better about Underwood's moderate views than hers.

Underwood touts his work on bipartisan issues with Rockefeller and the even-more-popular Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D.-W.Va., since he left office in 1961. Byrd is a booster of Software Valley, a high-tech consulting company Underwood co-founded, and Rockefeller helped the merger of Salem College and Tokyo's Teikyo University. Underwood is a trustee of Salem-Teikyo University.

Unlike the state's past three governors, neither Pritt nor Underwood is a millionaire. Both grew up poor and were educated on scholarships.

Pritt, a former English teacher, is a writing and business consultant. Underwood is a former English and biology teacher and has served on many state and business boards of directors.

Attorney hopes officials will clear Jewell following 6-hour interview

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal agents returned his Disney videos, his Tupperware and his gun collection on Tuesday, but stopped short of publicly clearing Richard Jewell in the Olympic park bombing.

Jewell, the only publicly identified suspect in the July 27 bombing, was questioned Sunday by state and federal investigators for six hours. From the start, the former security guard has maintained he is innocent.

"I think this interview is a step with closure in mind," Jewell's attorney, Lin Wood, said Tuesday. "Now we hope they will indicate in some public fashion that he is no longer a subject or a target."

It was Jewell's first interrogation since July 30, three days after the early morning bomb blast that killed one woman and injured 111 people at Centennial Olympic Park in downtown Atlanta.

Spokesmen for the FBI, Georgia Bureau of Investigation and the U.S. Attorney's office in Atlanta declined to comment Tuesday.

Wood also said federal agents have returned all the personal belongings seized from the apartment Jewell shares with his mother, the Habersham County cabin he once lived in, and a shed in north Georgia.

CBS News reported that authorities also returned more than a dozen weapons Jewell has used for hunting and in previous law enforcement jobs, including a .357 caliber Magnum revolver and a 10 mm automatic.

U.S. District Judge Owen Forrester heard arguments Tuesday by Jewell's lawyers and news media outlets to unseal the FBI affidavits used to obtain search warrants against Jewell.

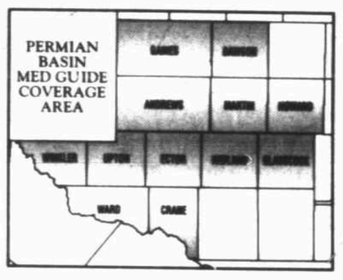

Forrester did not rule immediately, but CBS News quoted him as saying from the bench, "The investigation of Richard Jewell appears to be history."

Raptors hurt

BARRIE, Ontario — The Toronto Raptors will probably start playing their preseason schedule without forwards Marcus Camby and Carlos Rogers who were injured in separate training camp incidents.

Camby, the second overall pick in last June's NBA draft, had an MRI on his right foot Tuesday night that found no structural damage. However, the 6-foot-11 Camby is listed as questionable for the Raptors' first exhibition game on Friday.

Camby, the national college player of the year last season for Massachusetts, injured his foot Sunday when he stepped on teammate Acie Earl's foot during a scrimmage.

Abilene High mad about Ahmad

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

4-5A FOOTBALL

Abilene High's Ahmad Brooks is not you prototypical dropback quarterback. But when he accounts for three scores and totally transforms a team's appearance, who cares?

That is what the junior did for first-year football coach David Warren in AHS' 21-7 win over San Angelo Central last Friday and why he has brought a little "Showtime" to a program that has been looking for just that.

"He makes things happen when he touches the football," said Warren, who has taken the Eagles to 4-1 record in his first five games. "He's explosive."

Brooks took his first start for the Eagles last week. He threw a 30-yard TD pass and ran for 131 yards and two TD runs. His longest score came on a play where things got jammed up and it seemed that no significant gain would be made. However, Brooks reversed his direction and let his instincts and athletic ability take over. To say he made something out of nothing would not be giving him enough credit.

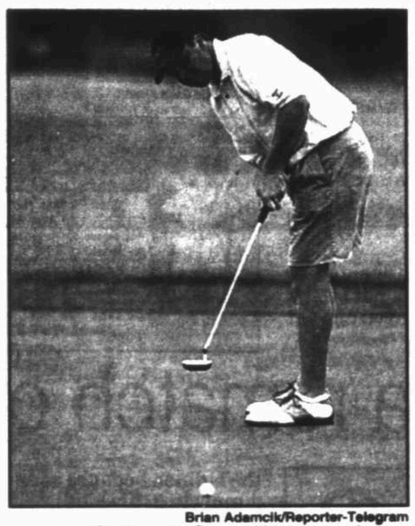

"It wasn't the play. It was Brooks being a good football player," Warren said. "He is a threat whenever he touches the ball."

Brooks, who took 85 percent of the snaps in Central game, said the fourth quarter touchdown was just him doing what he can for the team.

"I do what I can for the team and individual goals will follow," Brooks said. "My main goal is to win. I know what I can do. I could have pitched the ball but I just went the other way.

Warren's decision to put Brooks at QB was not without some question. The Eagles had two-year starter John Lackey returning after throwing for 900 yards in 1995. But to give his team more options, Brooks got some reps during spring practice last year and was given time at quarterback, running back and wide receiver to go with full time work on the defensive side of the

MC golfers defend title in Odessa

MIDLAND COLLEGE

There were questions about the Midland College golf team coming into this season.

After all, losing three players off a third-place team in last season's NJCAA national tournament might replace its quiet confidence and strut with some doubt and shuffling to find itself.

Then again, maybe not.

The Chaps, swagger and all, defended their title Thursday at the Odessa College Fall National Invitational held at The Club at Mission Dorado. In the process, MC set a record for the best 54-hole score at this annual tournament.

The Chaps' Gold team finished the three-round tournament at 865 (one-over par) and a 29-stroke victory over the second place Western Texas Green team. Odessa College's Blue team finished third 34 shots back.

"We are off to a good start," Midland College coach Delnor Poss said. "Talent-wise, this team resembles the year before last (the 1995 national title team). There just is not that much maturity. If we develop like the 1995 team, we could be as good."

MC, which placed second behind the University of New Mexico event two weeks ago in Ruidoso, N.M., went into the round with a 19-shot advantage, so winning wasn't really as much of the issue as the margin.

Poss said that leadership has made wins like this possible. Tuesday, alone, MC's first team had a 69 (3-under) from sophomore Steven Young, 70 from former Midland Lee Rebel Charlie Prince, and 73 from 17-year-old Fraser McLaughlin.

"I knew Charlie (Prince) would be good and he is," said Poss, who coached

LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES

Orioles, Yanks a washout

■ Game 1 of the American League Championship Series washed out by rain, rescheduled for this afternoon.

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — It all seems so familiar for the Yankees and Orioles: sitting around in the rain waiting for the start of a big series.

But at least they won't be arguing over whether to make up the game as part of a split doubleheader.

Game 1 of the AL championship series was postponed Tuesday by Tropical Storm Josephine and rescheduled for Wednesday, the first rainout in the AL playoffs in 25 years.

"To me it's not really a big deal," said Andy Pettitte, New York's Game 1 starter. "I'll have to do something to occupy time."

Pettitte, scheduled to pitch against Scott Erickson in the opener, spent Monday night finding things do, taking a little shopping trip with his wife.

"Same as last night," the 24-year-old said. "Maybe a movie. Something like that."

NL story: We're not nervous

By Ben Walker

ATLANTA — Listen to Greg Maddux or Dennis Eckersley or Ozzie Smith. They talk with ease, the kind that comes only with success in October.

No jitters here. No worries about making the World Series. Just a few jokes as the NL playoffs approach.

"Maddux and I argue about who gets the most called strikes that aren't strikes," Atlanta pitcher Tom Glavine said. "But in a way, we've earned that."

So they have, as have many of these Braves and St. Louis Cardinals going into Game 1 Wednesday night. All it takes is one look at the mound, in the bullpen, in the dugout to tell that this best-of-7 series features some of the best performers in baseball's history.

Lady Bulldogs pull off victory over Lee

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

The point which never came will most likely irrevocably determine the remainder of the season for the Midland Lee and Midland High volleyball teams.

Lee was one point away from claiming the second game of the intracity District 4-5A match Tuesday night at the Midland High gym. If the Lady Rebels could score only one more point, they would force a third game, the winner of which would hold at least a share of third place in the district and have a shot at making the playoffs.

The point tally in the visitor's column of the scoreboard never moved higher than 14, and Lee's playoff prospects will probably move no further either. Midland rallied to sweep the match 15-9, 16-14, not only completing a season sweep of the Rebels, but enhancing its chances for the postseason while severely crippling those of Lee.

It seemed like almost a bonus that Abilene Cooper stayed perfect in 4-5A by defeating Abilene, since it moved the Lady Bulldogs (14-9 overall, 4-3 in district) into third place alone in 4-5A. With a match Saturday at winless Odessa Permian, Midland is in prime position to claim a third playoff spot.

If the Bulldogs do make the playoffs, they can look back to the rally against

Homecoming, Cooper on minds of Rebels this week

The Midland Lee football Rebels head into Homecoming Weekend a bit like a teen with an annoying pimple on the face.

The Rebels are 13-0-1 in regular season games since John Parchman took over the coaching reigns a year ago. That means they haven't lost a regular season game in the young Parchman era, but there is that one facial blemish.

Williamson

That lone tie came at the end of the 1995 season, a 14-14 kiss with Abilene Cooper. Well, Cooper will come calling again Friday night at Memorial Stadium, the same site as last year's tie.

And just in case you are one of those superstitious followers of things that take place on the high school gridiron, note that last year's game was also the Lee Homecoming.

Homecoming is that natural disaster waiting to happen each and every year. Young minds tend to lean toward the size of the Homecoming mum rather than the size of the opponent.

Cooper has its own woes to worry about. The Cougars have already lost two games this season, both of the non-conference variety. Still, Randy Allen's Cougars are the favorites to haul in the district's third playoff spot behind No. 9 Lee and No. 7 Odessa Permian, the two league teams which carry the highly touted state rankings.

Cooper lost last week to Amarillo High, a team that Permian defeated earlier this season. The Cougars are in the stiff part of their schedule, playing Permian next week. With losses to Lee and Permian, the Cougars could own a 3-4 overall mark heading into the stretch run.

But, remember, Cooper went into the playoffs at 4-4-1 last year and went as far as Lee in the state playoffs. They also owned that tie with Lee. The Cougars appear to just love living life on the District 4-5A edge.

Even with the above stern warning, Lee is on the verge of putting another couple of entries into the record books. Tim McGraw, our weekly 4-5A historian, notes that Lee has back-to-back shutouts for the sixth time in team history, but the Rebels have never had three consecutive shutouts. In fact, Lee has never shutout three district opponents in regular season play in the same season.

Lee did post three shutouts of 4-5A teams during the 1983 campaign, the year the Rebels went to the state finals, but one of those shutouts was against Odessa Permian (20-0) in the state quarterfinals, a second meeting with Mojo that year.

Lee defensive back John Norman is also on the verge of stepping into the Midland city record books for most career interceptions. Norman has 16 picks (three as a sophomore, 10 as a junior and three this year) and needs one to tie Midland High's Dan Black, who had 17 career interceptions over the 1951 and 1952 seasons. Black did get his 17 picks in two seasons with the Bulldogs while Norman has had the luxury of being a three-year starter for Lee.

It would be fitting for Norman to take his next step into the record books against Cooper since last season he had one of his finest moments on the field of play with a record 101-yard interception return last season against the Cougars.

Norman will again be going against Cooper quarterback Michael Anderson, who tossed the interception to Norman a year ago. Anderson is still throwing the ball this year, completing 43 of 83 passes. That means that Norman should get his chance somewhere in the game.

The best Homecoming news Friday would be a pimple busting, record setting night for the Rebels. Will the Cougars cooperate?

Giuliani: Give Alomar silent treatment

By Clifford J. Levy
N.Y. Times News Service

AL Notebook

NEW YORK — Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, the city's most prominent Yankee fan, called on his fellow fans Tuesday to mute their reaction to Roberto Alomar, the second baseman of the Baltimore Orioles, when the teams play the first two games of the American League Championship Series at Yankee Stadium this week.

Some Yankee fans have promised a fierce heckling for Alomar, who outraged many fans when he spat in the face of an umpire in the final days of the regular season and then appealed his subsequent suspension, allowing him to appear in the playoffs.

Giuliani said he understood the anger of some fans, arguing that Alomar should serve his suspension during the playoffs. But the mayor said in a news conference Tuesday that people should take the advice that Joyce Purnick, the Metro Matters columnist for The New York Times, gave in her column Monday: Ignore Alomar.

"If you want to register your protest, be silent when he gets up," the Mayor said, citing the column. "Have the stadium be very, very quiet, and each time he comes up, make it clear that we don't acknowledge the fact that he is even in the game. Maybe that will send a message, the kind of message that baseball should have sent."

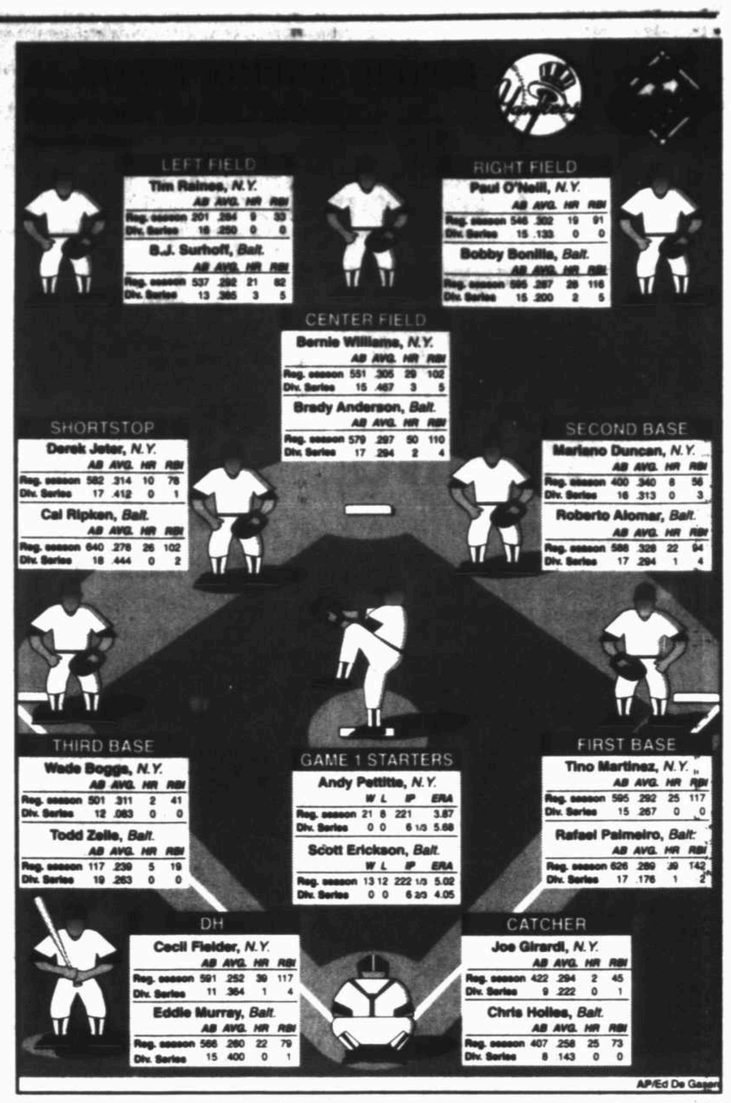

Giuliani issued a stern warning to fans who might be planning to hurl objects at Alomar during the series, whose first game at Yankee Stadium was postponed to 4:07 p.m. Wednesday from Tuesday night because of rain. Game2 is scheduled for 3:07 p.m. Thursday.

"If anybody even throws anything on that field, even attempts to do it, they are going to get arrested, and they are going to get put in jail," the mayor said. "You throw something at Yankee Stadium, as far as I am concerned, you are trying to kill somebody."

Game or no game, Alomar continues to draw attention in the postseason. Tuesday the Baltimore second baseman extended his Gold Glove streak when he earned a spot on the American League All-Star fielding team for the sixth straight year.

Alomar was also chosen from among American League second basemen for the Silver Slugger award for overall offensive performance.

Both awards are voted on by managers and coaches.

Not exactly as exciting as pitching in front of 57,000 people and a national television audience.

While some of the Yankees were at the ballpark when the game was called off at 3:30 p.m. EDT, 4 1/2 hours before its scheduled start, Baltimore remained at its hotel in midtown Manhattan.

With the rainout, the teams will lose Thursday's travel day. That means Yankees manager Joe Torre will start Kenny Rogers against rookie Rocky Coppinger in Game 4 on Saturday instead of possibly bringing Pettitte back on three days' rest.

Orioles manager Davey Johnson intends to flip his rotation, moving David Wells up a day to Game 2 on Thursday , when he'll pitch against David Cone. Mike Mussina drops back to Game 3 on Friday and will pitch against Jimmy Key.

"This will allow Wells to go on full rest and Moose to open at our place," Johnson said in a statement issued by the AL. "Wells has pitched well here and Moose has pitched well at our place."

It was less than a month ago, on Sept. 17, when the opener of a three-game New York-Baltimore series was postponed because of rain at Yankee Stadium. After the teams played five outs in a downpour, umpire Joe Brinkman finally stopped the game.

New York wanted to play a day-night doubleheader the following day. Baltimore blocked the move because the Yankees refused to let the Orioles play a split doubleheader at Camden Yards following a rainout on July 12.

Torre may have been one of the few people happy with the delay.

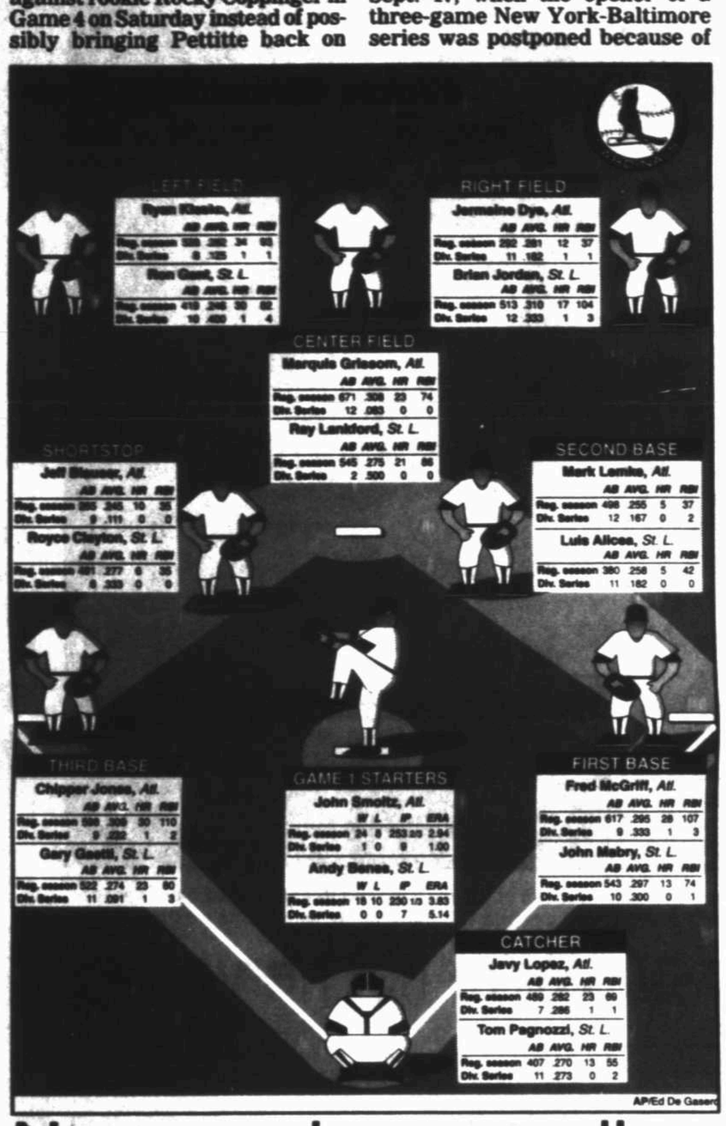

"We have some guys with colds," he said. "It will give them an extra day."

While some of the younger players may be anxious because of the delay, Yankees outfielder Darryl Strawberry said the veterans try to take the playoffs in stride.

"We've all been through it," he said. "You take it as it comes and don't make anything big about it. Early in our careers, it was so big, our first experience."

Rogers might have not gotten a start without the rainout and become baseball's most expensive middle reliever at a $5 million average salary.

"I'm sure everyone wanted to get it started," he said, "but I think you take rest whenever you can get it."

NLCS: This year a rematch of 1982 series

(From 1C)

World Series, and Maddux, the four-time Cy Young Award winner. Ozzie, of course, is a future Hall of Fame shortstop.

There's Tony La Russa, trying to become just the sixth manager to win pennants in both leagues, and Eckersley, third on the career saves list with 353 — not including three straight in the first round of the playoffs.

All together, perhaps for the last time.

"Hey, I'm 42 years old. This might be it for me," Eckersley said. "This is great for the young guys, because they haven't won before. And it's great for the old guys, because you don't know if you'll ever get back."

For the Braves, this fall represents a chance to become the first NL team to win consecutive World Series since the Cincinnati's Big Red Machine in 1975-76. In the postseason for the fifth straight year, Atlanta will send likely Cy Young winner — and former NL playoff MVP — John Smoltz to the mound for the opener against Andy Benes.

Maddux and Glavine will follow for the Braves, with Denny Neagle possible for Game 4. Steve Avery, another former playoff MVP, is in the bullpen because of an injury to a muscle in his side.

"The top three guys are great athletes," Braves manager Bobby Cox said after Tuesday's workout. "These guys are special people."

So are a couple of younger Atlanta players, particularly the Joneses.

At 24, third baseman Chipper Jones already has helped carry his team to a championship. At 19, outfield phenom Andruw Jones might get a chance to display his special skills.

"Unless you play in October," La Russa said, "most sports fans don't know how good you are."

The Braves and Cardinals showed their talents in first-round playoff sweeps. Atlanta, as usual, won with pitching in knocking out Los Angeles in three games while La Russa needed to make more moves in guiding St. Louis past San Diego.

Many of the Cardinals had a tough time adjusting to his blunt talk when he took over this season, at least until they saw that his ways worked. The Cardinals went from the second-worst record in the league last year to their first postseason appearance since 1987.

"I think Tony is a very intense person," Cox said. "They respect that he's won before."

As have many of the people in this series.

Seven St. Louis players own World Series championship rings — Smith and Willie McGee won them with the Cardinals in 1982, Gary Gaetti got his in Minnesota in 1987, Eckersley, Rick Honeycutt and Mike Gallego earned theirs with La Russa in Oakland in 1989 and Todd Stottlemyre got his with Toronto in 1992-93.

"The Cardinals have a lot of guys who've played the game a long time," Glavine said. "They can beat you in a number of different ways."

Most of the Braves won their rings last fall. Doing it again, as general manager John Schuerholz knows, may be more difficult.

"I think continuation is more of a challenge than getting there," he said. "There have been a number of clubs in the last 10 years built to championship status, even world championship status, but in the years thereafter, there is a diminishment in their productivity and success."

Padres' Caminiti to undergo shoulder surgery

By Bernie Wilson
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO — San Diego Padres third baseman Ken Caminiti is scheduled to undergo surgery on his torn left rotator cuff on Wednesday.

Team doctor Jan Fronek estimated rehabilitation will take five to nine months, which means it's possible Caminiti could be ready by opening day.

"A lot depends on the quality of repair, the quality of the tissue that we see there and how big a tear he has," said Fronek, who will perform the surgery with Dr. Lewis Yocum of the California Angels at Centinela Hospital Medical Center in Inglewood.

The switch-hitting Caminiti, one of the favorites for the NL MVP award, made some spectacular defensive plays and set club records with 40 homers and 130 RBIs despite the bad shoulder.

"He really put up with a significant amount of pain," Fronek said, adding that Caminiti learned how to position his shoulder to try to lessen the pain.

Fronek said the tear developed gradually over the last two to three years. The injury was revealed by an MRI at the beginning of the season.

"We talked about the best way of managing it, and he felt he wanted to continue to play," Fronek said. "In retrospect, it was a good decision. It was a decision we made together."

Caminiti, who also was bothered by hamstring, back and groin injuries, had two cortisone shots in his shoulder on May 1.

The NL West champion Padres are taking care of other injuries.

Seven-time NL batting champion Tony Gwynn had an MRI Tuesday on his right heel. Doctors are planning surgery on an inflamed bursa sac that began bothering Gwynn in April, although no date has been set. Gwynn also had a frayed right Achilles' tendon that sidelined him for 30 games.

No more house calls for Doc Gooden in '96

By Claire Smith
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden, tugged in different directions by disappointment and relief, learned Tuesday that his season was over, ending speculation that he might again ride to the New York Yankees' rescue.

Gooden will not be inserted on the active roster for the American League Championship Series against the Baltimore Orioles or on a World Series roster, the team announced Tuesday.

"He's done for the year," manager Joe Torre said after the 31-year-old right-hander was ordered to rest for six to eight weeks after a magnetic resonance imaging scan Monday showed inflammation in his rotator cuff, and nothing worse.

The next time Gooden toes a mound, it won't be before a playoff crowd, but at the Yankees' training complex in Tampa, Fla., sometime this winter.

Speaking at Yankee Stadium just moments after the first game of the series with the Orioles was rained out, Gooden appeared to have mixed emotions.

"Unfortunately, all of the stuff I had to do to prepare to get a contract has cost me in the end," he said. "But still, I'm very satisfied with the season that I had."

So are the Yankees. They know that Gooden's record — 11-7 with a pedestrian 5.01 earned run average over 29 starts spanning 170 2/3 innings — does not begin to tell the story of his contributions to the saga of the American League East champions' season.

When David Cone was lost because of surgery to repair an aneurysm in May, Gooden was given a reprieve from the bullpen duty to which he had been assigned after struggling to an 0-3 record as a starter. Reinserted into the rotation, Gooden went 11-2 in his next 21 starts, lowering his ERA from 11.48 to 4.22.

It was a huge burst, one that included not only an emotion-packed no-hitter against the Seattle Mariners on May 14, but also an emotional boost for a team that survived injuries to Cone and Jimmy Key.

"He did so much more than anyone expected, especially the way he started out," said Mel Stottlemyre, the Yankees' pitching coach.

"If you had looked at the year at the start of the season and said he was going to give you the number of wins and the number of innings, you would have said that would have been fantastic. He's had a great year, and it's something to build on next year."

Torre attributes much of the turnaround to a mechanical tune-up Gooden received from Stottlemyre just before returning to the rotation. "But I think that a big part of it was an emotional lift, the fact that he wasn't stepping on anyone's toes, that these were his starts," Torre said. "Then, he was a big part of this thing, pitching-wise."

The beginning of the end came last month for Gooden, when he was shut down with what was characterized as a tired arm. Though he did not pitch in the majors for 22 months after violating his drug-treatment agreement in June 1994, Gooden had been throwing almost nonstop since September 1994, he reminded reporters, chiefly because he needed to audition for teams in attempting his comeback.

His last pitching attempt came last Friday in Arlington, before the third game of their division series against the Texas Rangers.

DALLAS — Mike Modano had two goals and two assists, and Jere Lehtinen added a goal and two assists to lead the Dallas Stars past the Washington Capitals 5-3 Tuesday night.

Dallas took a 3-2 lead into the third period, then Modano gave the Stars some breathing room with a power-play rebound at 3:33. Greg Adams added his third goal of the season 2:11 later as the Stars moved to 2-0.

Andy Moog stopped 23 shots for Dallas for his 327th career victory, tops among active goaltenders.

Modano increased Dallas' advantage to 3-1 at 8:27 of the second, firing a sharp-angled shot into the top right corner of the net.

But Housley's power-play goal from out in front after a centering pass from Joe Juneau pulled the Caps within 3-2 with 2:48 to play in the second period.

After falling behind 5-2 in the third period, the Caps got a rebound goal from Jason Allison with 11:34 to play.

The Stars grabbed a 1-0 lead after two minutes of the first period when Lehtinen found space in front of the net and converted Derian Hatcher's pass from behind the net.

The win completes a successful sweep of a two-game homestand for the Stars. Dallas opened the season Saturday night with a win over the defending Stanley Cup champion Colorado Avalanche.

UTPB falls in Hobbs

HOBBS — The University of Texas-Permian Basin volleyball team fell to the College of the Southwest 5-15, 13-15, 8-15 Tuesday in collegiate action.

UTPB, 3-12 for the season, got seven kills, 12 digs and seven blocks from freshman Mercedes Alarado and 15 service points and five kills from former Midland Lee standout Casey Wolters. Wolters had eight straight in the second game. UTPB will play host Hardin-Simmons at 7 p.m. on Firday.

Rangers win V-ball opener

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood volleyball team defeated Kermit 15-2, 15-2 to open 4-3A play Tuesday.

Karen Gasch, the MVP of the Pecos Tournament earlier this season, slammed 13 kills and had six blocks to lead the Rangerettes (18-8, 1-0). Cassie Henkel added six kills of her own.

The junior varsity won 15-5, 7-15, 15-10 as did the freshman team 15-4, 15-5.

Blast win WT Blowout

ODESSA — The Blast under-19 girls soccer team captured the West Texas Blowout this past weekend.

The Blast went through the tournament with a 19-1 scoring difference thanks to the play of its defense: Meg Bennett, Kathy Cornelius, Mary Elizabeth Prentice, Kristin Gassiott, Sarah Duran, Kristina Farmer and keeper Tori Watson.

Thus far, the Blast has outscored its opponents 81-2 this season with wins in the Odessa and San Antonio. Future tournaments include the Storm Junior-Senior Showcase and Blast Coaches' Classic.

Other players on the Blast team include Jodie Mitchell, Reba Bellazzo, Sarah Buchanan, Nikki Smelser, Leslie Keel, Tara Marshall, Valle Shumaka, Jamie Nicholson and Heidi Moore. Mahu Sanon and Randi Watson are the coaches.

Black Magic has a Blowout

ODESSA — Midland's Black Magic '85 Boys won the Odessa Blowout Tournament with a 2-1 victory over the Odessa Force United. Jake Davis and Morgan Moody scored the goals for the Magic in the final game, which capped the tournament where it outscored the opposition 20-1.

Scores from GMFL play

Four teams in the Greater Midland Football League stayed undefeated with victories Saturday. The sophomore Broncos, varsity Eagles, junior varsity Oilers and sophomore Redskins all improved to 4-0 by winning.

The Broncos defeated the sophomore Colts 30-6; the Eagles beat the Chiefs 6-0; the Oilers routed the Redskins 42-8 and the Redskins defeated the sophomore Oilers 30-6.

In a varsity game, the Colts beat the Broncos 28-0. In junior varsity games, the Chiefs beat the Eagles 30-12 to improve to 3-1. The Eagles beat the Chiefs 6-0 in a sophomore game.

Cobras strike for 2nd place

BROWNWOOD — The Midland Cobras took second out of 13 teams in the under-12 boys division of the Central Texas Soccer Association this past weekend. The Cobras advanced to the quarterfinals with two wins and a tie on Saturday. The Cobras defeated the first two teams in the championship playoff but lost the third game in their first out of town tournament.

Baptist Temple defeats Trinity

Trinity's ninth grade volleyball team suffered its first loss of the season, taking Midland Baptist Temple to three games before losing, 15-10, 11-15, 15-11.

Renne Rougeaux had 14 service points for Trinity, while Becka Valles added 10 and Mechelle Comeaux had six.

Trinity is now 4-1. Its next match is against Lubbock Christ The King in two weeks.

The Trinity varsity volleyball team fell to Midland Baptist-Temple 11-15, 15-6, 7-15.

Roxanne Howlett had 11 points for the 5-8 Lady Chargers while Casey O'Neill had nine Kelly Hoose finished with seven. Trinity opens district play this weekend versus El Paso Jesus Chapel.

Cycling's Armstrong battling cancer

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Cycling star Lance Armstrong had a cancerous testicle removed last week and has begun chemotherapy to combat the disease that already has spread to his stomach and lungs.

"I'm entering this battle in the best shape of my life," he said Tuesday. "I want to stay in shape. As soon as the wounds heal, I want to be back on the bike."

Armstrong, 25, is the country's top road cyclist. He is the 1993 world road race cycling champion, a two-time Tour de France stage winner and two-time Tour DuPont titlist.

Armstrong said he expects to return to training as early as next week. Physicians have given him a 65 percent to 85 percent chance for full recovery.

"I won't be riding six hours, like usual, for now," said Armstrong, speaking by conference call from his hometown of Austin. "But I have been given approval to ride up to 50 miles a day to stay in some sort of shape. I'm going to race again."

He was diagnosed last Wednesday, underwent surgery last Thursday and began an aggressive 12-week chemotherapy program Monday.

Austinite Lance Armstrong, shown here during last year's Tour de France, has had a cancerous testicle removed and is undergoing chemotherapy to combat the disease that has spread into his abdomen.

Armstrong said in a statement that a CAT scan revealed that the cancer has spread to his lungs and abdomen.

"In terms of degrees of the disease, my condition is considered to be advanced," he said.

A spokeswoman for Brown McCarroll and Oaks Hartline, the Austin law firm representing the cyclist, said Armstrong might need more surgery and chemotherapy after his 12 weeks of treatment.

This year Armstrong was forced out of the Tour de France in the sixth stage with bronchitis and could finish only 12th at the Atlanta Olympics.

MHS: Final point in second match key

(From 1C)

Lee, when they were down 14-7 in the second game and reeled off nine unanswered points, as a springboard.

"I think it'll help us," said Midland coach Terri McColloch in an understatement. "We would have hoped we never got in this position, but if we were, that this would be the way to do it."

It certainly wasn't the way Lee (11-10, 2-5) wanted to do it. The Bulldogs had dominated the second game, trailing only once en route to a 14-7 lead. With LaSaundra Christian serving, LaToya Strambler landed a kill to build the lead to seven points and force game point. It stayed at game point for the next eight points as the Rebels suddenly were unable to do anything right.

"What's disappointing to me was that we had the match in control and we let them back in with unforced errors," Lee coach Connie Alexander said.

With Christian serving for game point, Midland's Alicia Kirk made a block of a weak kill attempt for a sideout. It was Kirk's turn in the rotation to serve, and it seemed all she had to do was hit the ball over the net to be successful.

Lee's Vanessa Mosely and Strambler both missed badly on kill attempts which resulted in two Midland points and Kirk also landed an ace during a 6-0 Bulldog run.

"We were out of rotation (during the 6-0 run)," McColloch said. "Our two big girls (Kirk and Brianne Elkins) were on the back line and to come back like that was just sheer determination."

Strambler finally landed a resounding kill to end the run and a sideout, but Mosely's ensuing serve hit the out-of-bounds antenna to give serve back to Midland. With Elkins serving, Christy Trautman scored a kill to tie the game at 14 before Strambler got another kill to reclaim the serve.

However, Strambler also got a case of the serving yips, serving it into the net.

"We weren't concentrating on each point the way we should have," Alexander said. "We worried about it instead of executing it."

Becky Salgado served the last two points to cap the Bulldogs' comeback. Midland's last two points came thanks to a pair of Lee hitting errors.

Trautman, Kirk and Kyleigh Griffin each had six kills for Midland. Tratuman had 10 digs while Becky Salgado had nine assists. Strambler had eight kills for the Rebels.

Midland won the junior varsity match 9-15, 15-1, 15-2 and is now in first place in the district at 5-2. Sara Holland had four kills and Ashley Hodge had three blocks. Michelle Acosta had 17 digs and Amber Dozier added 11 while Porsche Hill had 15 service points and Micah Holden had 10.

4-5A: Wilburn's 286 week's best effort ball this season.

(From 1C)

"We were going with Lackey into the third series and rotating," Warren said. "We had targeted then to bring Brooks in and see who was moving the team better.

"Moving him back (to a three-position player) is a strong possibility that we could go back to that. It is something different. It gives another team more to prepare for."

The movement has cause some problems. Brooks has rushed 316 yards and an 8.5 yard-per-carry average, caught two passes for 71 yards and passed for 60 yards. He 150 yards in total offense versus Cleburne and 95 yards rushing against Stephenville. That goes with his two interceptions on defense.

Playing a 48-minute game is something that Brooks can get used to and has him feeling like a player he models his game after.

"I can handle all the work because of conditioning from playing soccer," said Brooks, who had 75 tackles last season. "I show a little bit of "Prime Time" in my play. Deion (Dallas Cowboys two-way player Deion Sanders) is my idol."

4-5A A-list

RUSHING
(100 yards or Multiple TDs)
- Ja'Quay Wilburn, Permian, 286 yards and four TDs vs. MHS.
- Josh Norman, Lee, 211 yards and one 1 TD vs. OHS
- Sammy Powell, MHS, 146 yards and 1 TD vs. Permian
- Ahmad Brooks, Abilene High, 131 yards and TDs versus Central. Also had one passing.

PASSING
(200 or Multiple TDs)
- Michael Anderson, Cooper, 11 of 18 for 187 yards and three TDs. Also had one rushing.

RECEIVING
(100 yards or Multiple TDs)
- Miles Durham, Cooper, 7 catches for 125 yards and one TD.

SPECIAL TEAMS AND DEFENSE
- Gerado Diaz, Lee, recovered muffed kickoff in endzone versus OHS.
- Brian Evans, Lee, two field goals (21,27) to go with three extra points against OHS.

The coach and player feel the change is been for the good of the team is not that is a gimmick or quick fix. Warren also likes the possibilities of having the all-purpose player around not only for this season but the next season as well. Brooks is one of eight underclasssmen who start on both the offense or defense.

Brooks just wants success and to see his team play to his lofty expectations.

"We played a fairly good game (versus Central), but we haven't touched the surface," Brooks said. "We still want to come out and show what we can do and dominate on both sides."

Other big performances last week included Ja'Quay Wilburn's 286-yard rampage on 18 carries over Midland High's defense.

The senior Permian back has rushed for over 200 yards in his last two games, but Friday's game versus the district's worst statistical defense was almost record breaking. Wilburn, a senior, came within 18 yards of breaking the Odessa city record held by Shawn Crow (304 yards versus Central in 1987).

GOLF: Midland College wins by 29

(From 1C)

Team USA at the World University Championships in Switzerland this summer. "Josh (Jacobs) had two bad holes but played well, and Steven (Young) played sensationally."

The MC depth, a trademark of the program in past years, also came through.

The Green (No. 2) team had a 70 from Mike Garcia, 74 from Ryan Houge and MC's third best three-round score came from sophomore Shawn Reeves.

"It should be a good year. We will win as much as we did last year," said Young, who walked away with the medalist title after a two-hole playoff victory. "We can be good by nationals if the nucleus of the team comes along. We have eight or nine players that can shoot low. Last year we had three or four."

For the team to have success now and in the National Championships next spring, the Scotland-born Young might be the key. During the past two days, the Irish Youth champion tore up the Mission Dorado Course. On Tuesday, he had birdie putts on every hole of the front nine. That includes three makes from just six inches. He even showed the c...pability to come back from adversity. After triple-bogeying No. 12, he birdied three of the next four holes to finish the day at 3-under and the tournament at 7-under par.

Medalist

1. Steven Young, MC Gold, 69-209 (won in a two-hole playoff); 2. Clint Frost, Weatherford, 69-209; 3. Morten Vildhoj, Western Texas Green, 70-211; 4. Charlie Prince, MC Goldm 70-213; 5. A.J. Keipp, Odessa College Blue, 73-217.

MC Gold: Steven Young 69-209; Josh Jacobs 78-224; Charlie Prince 70-213; Fraser McLaughlan 73-224; James Clive 76-231.

MC Green: Ryan Houge 74-225; Shawn Reeves 76-220; Troy Bourassa 83-250; Mike Garcia 70-223; K.J. Sanchez, 82-250.

Young, the 1995 Region V champion, didn't quite blow everyone's doors off, having to go two extra holes with Weatherford's Clint Frost to decide the medalist winner. However, after sinking a 10-foot birdie on the par-4, second hole, Young won his first playoff at MC and grabbed his first title of the fall.

"I could have been 8-under on the front. I was just hitting fairways and greens," said Young, a four-time winner in 1996. "I am trying to shoot low as I can because news travels to the other guys. I have been hitting the ball good."

Still, Poss, was also very pleased out what he saw on the course. Probably the most pleasant surprise was Prince, who shot his way onto the all-tournament team with a 3-under-par score for 54 holes.

"There is a lot more competition at this level," said Prince, a freshman making his debut with the first team. "I knew I would play well because I qualified. I just didn't look back or ahead but stayed in the present. I have reached one of my goals (by making the first team)."

Midland College will continue its fall schedule this weekend at a conference tournament in Andrews.

Bashful Byron

Texas Tech running back reserves credit for everyone except himself

By Mark Babineck

LUBBOCK — Byron Hanspard's reaction to his 287-yard rushing performance against Baylor last Saturday mirrored each of his four straight 200-yard games, or his 11 consecutive 100-yard games.

First, the licensed minister thanked God. Then he turned to his offensive line, his Texas Tech coaches, his fullback and anyone else who might have helped.

To be sure, Hanspard would honor the waterboy and the mascot before basking in his 222.4-yard rushing average, which happens to be second best in the country.

"We knew going out there it was going to be a tremendous challenge for us," Baylor coach Chuck Reedy said after Hanspard romped for 347 total yards in a 45-24 Tech victory. "Byron Hanspard would have my vote for the Heisman Trophy, if I had one."

The Baylor exhibition moved him into second place among Texas Tech's career leaders in combined running and receiving yards, and his six 200-yard rushing games are two more than predecessor Byron "Bam" Morris, now of the Baltimore Ravens.

The junior speedster has added power to his game this season, something opposing cornerbacks have discovered in their ferocious sideline collisions at the conclusion of sweep plays.

"I had the opportunity, maybe the misfortune, in my days at Clemson to face Herschel Walker and George Rogers," Reedy said. "I don't think I've been on the other side of the field against a better back than Hanspard."

"If God has the Heisman for me, I will receive it, but my focus is making it to a bowl game," he said.

Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum, who has tutored star runners such as Darren Lewis, Greg Hill and Leeland McElroy in his tenure, appreciates the stress the Heisman hype can have on an individual.

"Ideally, you let the guys play and see who had the best year and give him the trophy, but I think we all know it doesn't work that way."

Texas Tech is mailing informational postcards to media and maintains an Internet web page devoted to Hanspard. However, both Hanspard and Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes have said awards aren't worth the effort if it takes extraordinary efforts beyond winning football games.

"I guess we could give each of the voters a Rolex watch with Byron's picture on it," Dykes said. "But then, I don't think he'd even want it."

George can't work deal; QB released by Falcons

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Jeff George won't become a Seahawk and probably won't be a Falcon for much longer, either.

The suspended quarterback remained with Atlanta on Tuesday as the NFL trading deadline passed without him agreeing on a new contract with Seattle. George and agent Leigh Steinberg had been talking with the Seahawks about a reported six-year, $30 million contract. The Falcons were prepared to trade George straight up for Rick Mirer, Seattle's former starting quarterback.

However, George and the Seahawks couldn't agree before the 3 p.m. CDT deadline, apparently leaving the Falcons with no choice but to cut the seven-year veteran.

"We still have a couple of weeks to decide what to do with Jeff," coach June Jones said. "But our options are limited, obviously."

The coach did rule out George rejoining the Falcons.

"I don't think Jeff is interested in that and I don't think we could have him back," Jones said.

"It's my understanding I'm going to be released," George told CNN on Tuesday night. "I'll deal with that when the time comes. When opportunity comes knocking I'll be ready for it."

George was suspended by the Falcons after a sideline confrontation with Jones during a Sept. 22 loss to Philadelphia. With Mirer struggling, the Seahawks showed interest, but no trade could be arranged.

"I just felt it was too rushed," George said of the negotiations, which intensified late last week. "I didn't think I would be in this situation, and I just wanted to make sure that the next (team) was the right one."

"So many numbers were being thrown around, I really didn't get into that," he said. "I just wanted to make sure that no matter where it was, it was the last place I went to. I said all along that this thing isn't about money. I wanted a clear mind."

The Falcons were downcast about the prospect of getting nothing in return for a quarterback who cost them two No. 1 draft picks in a 1994 trade with Indianapolis.

"Sure, I'm disappointed in it," said Falcons vice president of player personnel Ken Herock. "We've been able to pull off trades in the past, but this trade was unusual in the fact that I wasn't the one who could pull the trigger and Seattle couldn't pull the trigger."

The suspension, initially for one game, was extended to four games after George met with the media to explain his side of the dispute. Now, with two weeks remaining on the suspension, the Falcons' only option appears to be putting George on waivers, giving him total freedom to negotiate with a new team — and leaving the Falcons with nothing in return.

But Erickson said he's looking forward to the Seahawks' next game, Oct. 17 at Kansas City, when John Friesz will start his second straight game and Mirer, the No. 2 overall pick in the 1993 draft, will be his backup.

"All I know is I'm going to get ready to kick butt with John," Erickson said. "I'm happy with that."

The Falcons couldn't trade George unless he agreed to a long-term contract. George, who signed a one-year, $3.64 million contract with the Falcons in training camp, was hesitant to agree to a longer deal without testing the market as an unrestricted free agent.

"I wanted to be able to put my heart and soul into this decision, and I wasn't able to do that, because it happened so fast," George said. "Maybe now I can take a step back and make it right. I've made some mistakes in my career and I didn't want to make another one."

Several teams have said they won't pursue George, who gained the reputation as a selfish, immature player after he was chosen first overall by the Colts in 1990 and worsened his image by confronting Jones during a game.

"I know there are people going to say that," George said. "I'm sorry for what I did. I told Coach Jones I was wrong and I knew I made a mistake. I'm a competitor and it was just a situation where I wanted to compete. But I went about it the wrong way. I admit that."

"It didn't work out here. I wish it would have," he said. "If I'm released, that will be a big load off my chest, so I can just move forward."

Mavs banged up going into preseason

By Terry Wallace
Associated Press

DALLAS — The hubcaps are falling off the Dallas Mavericks' wheels as the team prepares for Friday's preseason opener with five of its top eight players on the bench with injuries.

But there was some very good news for coach Jim Cleamons and other Mavericks' officials late Tuesday: a test revealed no serious damage to Jason Kidd's right knee.

The starting point guard came up with soreness behind the knee after a defensive slide drill Saturday morning. An MRI Tuesday showed Kidd was suffering from a simple ligament strain.

It wasn't immediately clear when Kidd would be able to practice again. He hasn't worked out since Saturday.

"I wanted to practice, but they told me not to chance it," said the 1996 All-Star.

Rookie center Samaki Walker probably will be out until mid-November — two weeks into the regular season — after injuring the quadriceps muscle in his right leg during the first week of training camp.

Rookie forward Chris Gatling also will be out about two weeks after suffering a pulled groin muscle, also suffered on Saturday.

"We're the walking wounded right now," Cleamons said. "But you take a negative and make a positive, and that's what we'll do. Am I concerned? Yes. We've got to weather this storm."

Amid the rash of leg injuries, Cleamons has moved the rest of training camp from Moody Coliseum at Southern Methodist University to the team's practice facility at the Tom Landry Sports Medicine and Research Center at the Baylor University Medical Center.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Tuesday that unidentified players blamed the rash of injuries on the switch to Moody on Saturday after three days of two-a-day practices on Landry's softer court.

They also said the intensity of Cleamons' 2 1/2-hour workouts contributed to the aches and pains, the newspaper reported. But Cleamons noted that conditioning was a problem for some players.

Benoit to undergo surgery

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Nets forward David Benoit will undergo surgery Wednesday to repair a ruptured right Achilles' tendon, an injury that could sideline him for the entire season.

Benoit, who signed with the Nets in the offseason as a free agent after spending five seasons with the Utah Jazz, was injured last week when he was kicked by teammate Ed O'Bannon during the second day of practice at training camp in Florida.

Benoit underwent an MRI Monday and the diagnosis was made Tuesday. Doctors were expected to estimate his recovery time after performing the surgery.

"We are disappointed by the injury to David," coach John Calipari said. "We have some quality players at the position who we expect to step up and contribute."

Baylor tailback suspended after arrest

Associated Press

College Notes

WACO — Baylor has suspended backup tailback Anthony Overstreet following his arrest on a charge of assaulting his ex-girlfriend.

Overstreet posted a $2,000 bond Monday on the charge of aggravated assault causing bodily injury, a McLennan County sheriff's officer said.

The tailback will not practice or play during his suspension, which will last until the investigation into the misdemeanor charge is complete, coach Chuck Reedy said in a prepared statement Tuesday.

Waco police arrested Overstreet about 4 a.m. Monday at an apartment complex. Kimberly Morris, who said she is Overstreet's former girlfriend, filed charges against the player.

Along with Dexter Ford, Clifton Rubin and Shawn Washington, Overstreet has been responsible for giving the Bears backfield depth.

Overstreet played in all four Bears games this season, rushing for 49 yards on 11 carries.

USOC Coach of Year

WACO — Baylor's Clyde Hart, who coached Michael Johnson to two gold medals, is the United States Olympic Committee's choice for coach of the year in track and field.

Johnson, of Dallas, trained under Hart, who was his college coach at the Waco school, for this year's Olympics at Atlanta. Johnson, 28, became the first man to win the gold medal in both the 200 and 400 meters.

Hart, who just completed his 33rd year at Baylor, was one of 38 coaches the USOC honored in various Olympic sports. He was named to the highest level of USOC competition — the Elite category.

He has coached Johnson for the last 10 years. The coach offered Johnson a full scholarship at Baylor but felt he was somewhat of a gamble.

"He wasn't a state champion. He didn't have nationally ranked times," Hart said earlier this year. "But he was a good student and he had excellent character."

ISU Quarterback ready for Aggie Rush

AMES, Iowa — Todd Doxzon probably will feel some heat Saturday, regardless of the temperature.

The Iowa State quarterback is expecting a fierce pass rush from a quick, aggressive Texas A&M defense that has recorded 17 sacks in five games. The Aggies feature a front seven unlike anything Iowa State has seen so far.

"This is the biggest challenge we've had since I've taken the job here from a protection standpoint," Iowa State coach Dan McCarney said Tuesday.

"They have great speed up front rushing the quarterback. They've made some pretty good offensive linemen look silly in these first five games when they're lined up and pass rushing."

But if Iowa State is to win, Doxzon will have to play well, McCarney said, noting that running back Troy Davis won't be able to do it alone against a defense that ranks third nationally against the run.

Texas A&M is giving up just 60.4 yards a game rushing.

"We can't line up and hand the ball to Troy Davis 60 times and expect to win the football game," McCarney said. "We've got to be able to throw it and spread people out. Dox has got to have a real big game."

Although known more for his running than throwing, Doxzon is third in the Big 12 in passing efficiency, ranking ahead of such quarterbacks as Kansas State's Brian Kavanaugh, Texas A&M's Brandon Stewart and James Brown of Texas.

Doxzon has completed 60 percent of his passes, 47 of 78, for 563 yards and five touchdowns. With good protection, he could have some success Saturday because Texas A&M has given up 10 touchdown passes, although six came in a season-opening 41-37 loss to BYU, which has burned a lot of teams with its passing.

"They've given up a couple of big plays in the passing game," Doxzon said. "Especially in the first game there's quite a few post patterns that they got beat deep. We're looking at that. But lately, they've shored up a couple of things, so they're looking real good."

"Their front seven is going to be as good if not better than what we've seen thus far this season," Doxzon said.

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
PE: Price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's earnings per share for the most recent four quarters.
PPE: Projected price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's projected earnings per share for upcoming 12 months. PPE supplied by I/B/E/S, Institutional Brokers' Estimate System. Is a consensus forecast of all analysts following the company. Only companies with three or more analysts following them have a PPE.
How to use: In general, if PPE is lower than PE, analysts believe earnings will be going up. If PPE is higher, they expect earnings to fall. Dollar rises

New York — The dollar staged a late rally against the yen amid speculation Japan's top currency official wouldn't mind seeing it strengthen further.

The dollar ended lower against the deutsche mark, meantime, after Bundesbank officials suggested the German central bank will take a tough stance on the criteria for joining the European Union's single currency.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.5292 marks, down from 1.5313 in New York late yesterday. It was at 111.60 yen, up from 111.13 yesterday.

The British pound was little changed at $1.5626 from $1.5633 late yesterday in New York. The dollar slipped to 1.2540 Swiss francs from 1.2551 francs late yesterday in New York and to 5.1672 French francs from 5.1710 francs. The dollar was little changed at 1,517 Italian lire from 1,515.5 lire. And the Canadian dollar slipped to 73.87 U.S. cents from 73.89 cents yesterday.

Kicking cigarettes

American Brands Inc., once one of America's largest cigarette makers, wants kick the habit for good and concentrate on selling staplers, bourbon and golf balls.

The company said Tuesday it will spin off its British-based Gallaher tobacco business and change its own name to Fortune Brands. It would be the first major tobacco company to completely cut ties to the tobacco business.

FDIC rules

WASHINGTON — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. adopted rules to revive the savings and loan deposit insurance fund by having thrifts and some banks make a one-time payment of $4.5 billion.

The unanimous vote Tuesday by the five-member FDIC board came about a week after Congress passed bank reform legislation to rescue of the Savings Association Insurance Fund, or SAIF.

The law eliminated the possibility of additional taxpayer financing for the thrift crisis, which is expected to ultimately cost taxpayers about $481 billion.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average made another short-lived move above 6,000 on Tuesday as stocks, particularly technology shares, fell on some profit-taking in advance of the quarterly flood of earnings reports.

The Dow Jones industrial average dipped 13.04 to close at 5,966.77, having quickly surrendered an early 30-point gain that had lifted the blue-chip average just above 6,010.

Broader market measures slipped from record levels as interest rates rose slightly in bond trading, providing stock investors with an excuse to secure more profits on the market's month-long push into record territory.

The biggest losses among stocks came in the technology-laden Nasdaq market, which on Monday had closed at a new high for the first time in four months.

The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 2.70 to 700.64, and the NYSE's composite index fell 1.23 to 373.51. The American Stock Exchange's market value index fell 0.21 to 582.01.

Crude futures near 5 1/2-year high

■ Rising demand from refiners sends prices to levels seen during the Persian Gulf War.

N.Y. Times News Service

New York — Crude oil futures rose to a six-month high, approaching their highest price since the Persian Gulf War in January 1991, as soaring widening profit margins boosted demand from refiners.

Heating oil prices soared 40 percent during the past three months, reaching a 5 1/2 year high Monday, amid concern the leanest U.S. stockpiles in 20 years will run thin this winter. And gasoline has reemerged from a recent lag, boosted by a series of refinery closures for maintenance or unscheduled repairs.

While the surge in heating oil bolstered profit margins, it is the turnaround in gasoline — which represents more than half of the products yielded by a barrel of crude — that has added extra crude demand. Monday, the profit for refining crude into gasoline and heating oil leapt almost 70 cents to $4.20 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the highest since early August.

"Gasoline has stepped up and that's helping crude," said John Saucer, an energy analyst at Smith Barney Inc. in Houston. "Now you've got a situation where gasoline is contributing to margins as well as heating oil, so the overall outlook looks more positive. We're going to see refiners running harder than normal for the rest of this year."

Crude oil for November delivery rose 32 cents to $25.56 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the highest since Jan. 16, 1991, the day fighting broke out in the Gulf War. November gasoline rose 0.46 cent to 66.80 cents a gallon, the highest since May 15. November heating oil slipped 0.19 cent to 76.30 cents a gallon after Monday rising to the highest since Jan. 16, 1991.

Word that Petroleos Mexicanos, Mexico's state oil company, still hasn't reopened two of its three oil ports on the Campeche Sound in the Gulf of Mexico also boosted crude prices, traders said. Pemex shut the ports Sunday as a precaution against high winds and seas caused by Hurricane Josephine, which has since been downgraded to a storm as it moves up the U.S. East Coast.

Mexico, the third largest oil exporter to the U.S. after Venezuela and Saudi Arabia, ships 300,000 barrels of crude a day from the Dos Bocas terminal and 600,000 barrels a day from Cayo Arcas.

"That is a reason why we're seeing crude leading the move up today," said Gerald Samuels, managing director at ARB Oil Inc. in Los Angeles.

Also boosting crude oil prices, traders said, was the International Energy Agency's monthly market report today. Citing lower-than-expected non-OPEC production during the third and fourth quarters, the Paris-based agency today raised the amount of oil it expects the world will need from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries by 300,000 barrels a day during each quarter.

As a result, the IEA now expects the so-called call on OPEC oil to total 24.5 million barrels a day during the third quarter and 25.9 million barrels during the fourth.

The latter figure is more than OPEC currently is pumping. According to Bloomberg Energy Service, the 11-member group now produces 25.8 million barrels a day.

"The IEA report certainly helped crude out," Saucer said. "It implies we may draw inventories this quarter."

McDonald's shakes up management

Associated Press

CHICAGO — McDonald's Corp. named a new boss for its U.S. operations Tuesday, a shakeup that suggests dissatisfaction over sluggish sales despite heavily hyped new products like the Arch Deluxe cheeseburger.

Jack Greenberg, the company's vice chairman and chief financial officer, becomes chairman of McDonald's domestic restaurants.

Edward H. Rensi, McDonald's USA president and chief executive — who previously headed U.S. restaurants — will report to Greenberg instead of Michael Quinlan, the company's chairman and chief executive officer.

Despite denials from the nation's largest fast-food chain, at least one analyst suspects the shakeup shows Quinlan's unhappiness at sales declines for five consecutive quarters at U.S. outlets open at least a year.

"I think maybe in Quinlan's mind it's taken a little too long for McDonald's to get around to responding to the decline in sales," said Wayne Daniels at Schroder Wertheim.

The new line of Deluxe sandwiches — the Arch Deluxe cheeseburger earlier this year, and the Crispy Chicken, Grilled Chicken and Fish Filet added two weeks ago — have not immediately reversed the decline.

"This doesn't mean the Deluxe line has been the dismal failure that others believe," said analyst Janice Meyer at Prudential Securities Research. "I think it is basically meeting expectations, but other parts of the business have weakened more than expectations.

"The kids business has been weakened by Burger King, and their core hamburger customers have been chipped away by some of Wendy's new sandwiches," she said.

Rensi recently told the company's 2,700 U.S. franchisees in a memo that Arch Deluxe, which took two years to come to market, has done well but was "never intended to be a silver bullet."

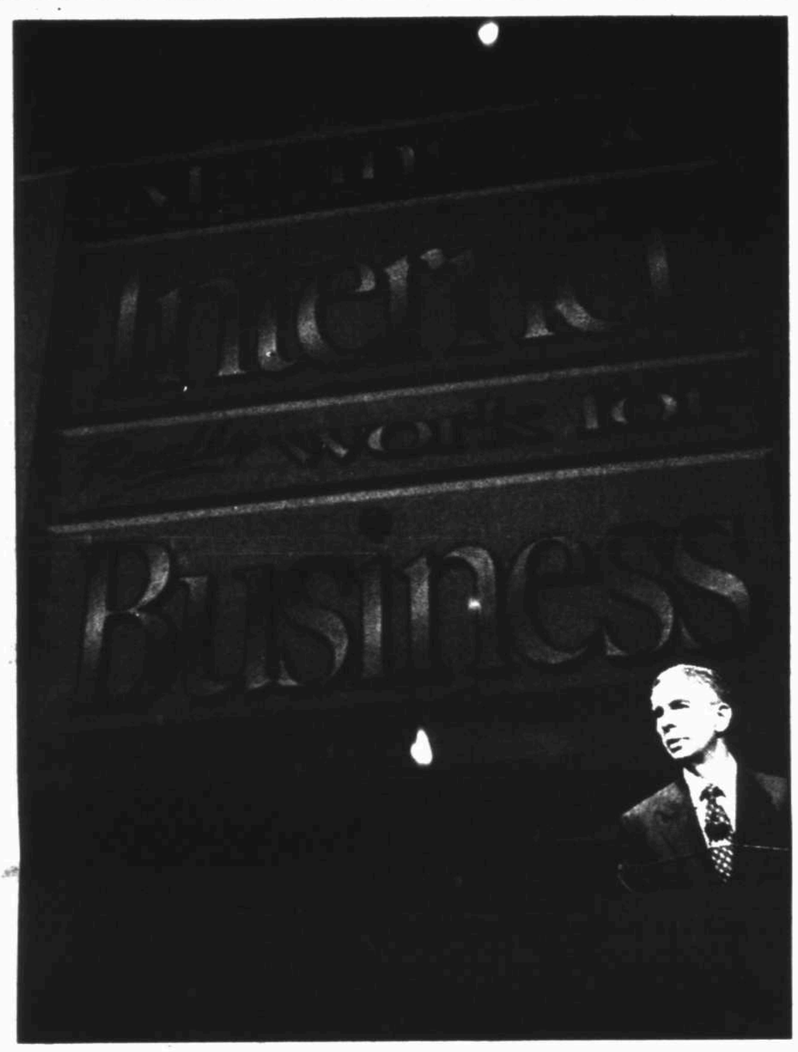

Burger King's brief alliance with the Walt Disney Co. for movie tie-ins also drew business away, analysts say. McDonald's recently signed a long-term movie marketing deal with Disney.

Wall Street took the news in stride. McDonald's stock was unchanged at $46.62 1/2 a share in late trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Greenberg plans to work with franchisees to tie them more closely to McDonald's strategies, the executive told analysts in a conference call.

That news comes amid reports of increasing franchisee dissatisfaction, particularly with rapid new store openings, often within a mile of an existing store. Most of McDonald's American restaurants are franchises.

'Net Commerce

AT&T Chairman Robert Allen speaks at a news conference where AT&T announced a program to increase commerce on the Internet by helping businesses set up and manage their Web sites, promising to protect them from missed orders and insuring buyers whose credit card numbers are stolen by hackers. The SecureBuy Service, introduced Tuesday, is designed to convince more businesses to hire AT&T to design, set up and manage their sites on the World Wide Web, the most popular section of the Internet. Internet services are part of AT&T's strategy to expand beyond its traditional long distance telephone business, which has been losing customers for years to competitors like Sprint and MCI.

BMW, Chrysler to build plant in Latin America

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Bayerische Motoren Werke AG and Chrysler Corp., announced Tuesday an agreement to jointly build a plant to make four-cylinder engines in a Latin America country that has yet to be selected.

"This joint venture will enable us to build 400,000 engines a year and will require an investment of $500 million," the two automakers said in a joint news release.

BMW and Chrysler will be equal partners in the venture. They said they expect the plant to begin operating at the end of 1999, manufacturing 1.4- and 1.6-liter engines based on a Chrysler design to be used in Chrysler compact cars and vehicles produced by Rover Group, a BMW subsidiary.

BMW President Bernard Pischetsrieder said in a statement: "Latin America in the future will be an important market for the BMW group."

At present BMW's largest operations in the region are located in Mexico and Brazil.

"The partnership with Chrysler Corp. will enable us to jointly produce a quality engine with a reasonable level of investment to outfit Rover products in a highly competitive market segment," said Pischetsrieder.

Chrysler President Robert J. Eaton said the development of new families of engines is costly, and that the partnership is the logical outcome at an economical and business level.

Motorola cost-cutting plan may include layoffs

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. (AP) — Motorola Inc. plans to take a large fourth-quarter charge to implement a cost-cutting plan that could include layoffs, company officials said Tuesday.

The cost-cutting will result in a fourth-quarter charge of "tens of millions of dollars," said officials, who declined to be more specific.

Most of the cuts likely were to be made on the semiconductor side of the business, which apparently contributed most to the 58 percent drop in third-quarter earnings.

The company in announcing a continuing slowdown in its core semiconductor and cellular businesses said Monday it will expand cost-cutting operations and work force adjustments begun early this year.

Spokesman Albert Brashear said Tuesday "one would presume" that work force adjustments include layoffs, although the company did not know yet how many of Motorola's 140,000 employees would be cut.

The company early this year began cutting costs by halting building expansion and new construction. It also reduced employee work schedules and began some layoffs, said Ed Gams, Motorola director of investor relations.

The new cuts should be completed by the end of the fourth quarter, Gams said. They likely will lead to a modest recovery in the semiconductor business in 1997, although investors should not expect double-digit margins in the chip business next year, Gams said.

Also on Tuesday, a Motorola division said it would begin exchanging embedded dram and microprocessor technologies with Mitsubishi.

The agreement will allow the two companies to provide a circuit component that allows configurations based on features and performance.

Malted Brownies and Chocolate Sugar Cookies are easy to make and sturdy enough for shipping. They will be especially appreciated by college freshmen who are away from home for the first time.

To college with 'care'

Associated Press

Amid a flurry of books, boxes and suitcases, the kids are off to college. Living away from home can be difficult, especially for a college freshman, so a "care" package of homemade brownies and cookies is always welcome. The following recipes for Malt Brownies and Chocolate Sugar Cookies are easy to make and ship.

MALT BROWNIES

1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
3/4 cup (1 1/2 sticks) butter, softened
1 cup granulated sugar
1/3 cup light corn syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
4 eggs
2/3 cup malted milk powder
1 tablespoon milk
2/3 cup cocoa
1/2 cup packed light brown sugar

In a large bowl, beat butter and granulated sugar; beat in corn syrup and vanilla. Add eggs, one at a time, beating until combined. Gradually add flour mixture until combined.

For a Columbus Day celebration, serve Grilled Sausage and Pepper Pizzas. The pizzas are made with individual Italian bread shells or split English Muffins. Green peppers, sweet onion and Italian sausage are toppers.

Associated Press

Pizza baked or grilled in a wood-fired oven is an Italian classic. Made with Italian bread shells or English muffins, Grilled Sauce and Pepper Pizzas is a quick-to-fix main dish for a Columbus Day celebration. The recipe is the creation of cookbook author Melanie Barnard.

GRILLED SAUSAGE AND PEPPER PIZZAS

3/4 pound lean hot or sweet Italian sausage links or turkey Italian sausage links
1/2 cup bottled Italian dressing
2 teaspoons chopped fresh rosemary or 1 teaspoon crumbled dried rosemary
2 medium green bell peppers, seeded and quartered
1 large sweet onion, such as Vidalia, cut crosswise into 1/2-inch slices
2 8-ounce packages individual Italian bread shells, or 4 sandwich-size English muffins, split
1 cup bottled marinara or pizza sauce
1 cup (about 4 ounces) shredded mozzarella cheese

Prick the sausages with a fork, then place in a skillet. Add about 3/4 cup water, cover the skillet and steam over medium heat, turning once, until the sausages are no longer pink, about 10 minutes. (The sausages can be steamed a few hours ahead and refrigerated. Return to room temperature before continuing.)

In a small bowl, combine the Italian dressing and rosemary. Split the sausages lengthwise. Brush the sausages, peppers and onions with about half of the Italian dressing.

Grill the sausages and vegetables over medium coals, turning once until the sausages are browned and the vegetables are tender, 7 to 10 minutes. About 2 minutes before the vegetables and meat are done, grill the tops of the bread shells or the cut sides of the English muffins until lightly toasted.

Remove bread, sausages and vegetables from the grill. Quickly slice the sausages and peppers into large chunks and separate the onion into rings.

Turn bread, toasted side up, spread with the marinara sauce, top with the sausages and vegetables, drizzle with remaining Italian dressing, and sprinkle with cheese. Return the pizzas to the grill. Cover and grill until cheese melts and underside of bread is toasted, about 1 minute. (If you don't have a covered grill, it will just take a bit longer to melt the cheese, or you can finish melting the cheese under the broiler.) Garnish with sprigs of rosemary, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

WHAT'S COOKING?

ELEGANT DESSERTS ARE WOMAN'S CULINARY SPECIALTY

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

When she was in junior high school, Melisa Sheward of Midland decided to make a Baked Alaska for her family's Thanksgiving dinner. It was a momentous decision and one that set her on the way to her culinary speciality.

"My family was shocked when it worked!" she laughed, remembering her first efforts at making desserts. That early success led her to a life-long skill in making desserts. And not just any dessert — she specializes in elegant desserts, the kind that are almost too pretty to eat.

"When I lived in Albuquerque (N.M.), I had a dessert company called Temptations," she said. "I made elegant desserts for restaurants and private parties." She still makes desserts like that, but serves most of them at home.

But building these sweets-lovers' masterpieces isn't something she learned overnight. As a matter of fact, learning these skills is something Mrs. Sheward began doing while she was still in school. "A lot of it I learned on my own," she said. "I had a little bit of training in high school when I worked at a bakery and they taught me how to make roses. I thought it was interesting, so I started working, myself, with different techniques. I took some classes but mostly I've learned by myself."

The fact that both her grandmothers were wonderful cooks helped a lot. Today, creating elegant desserts is what she likes to do best. "It's kind of my passion, designing desserts," Mrs. Sheward said. "It's really my niche."

But so is volunteer work, which keeps Mrs. Sheward busy too. And through her membership in Midland Medical Alliance, she has combined her work as a volunteer with her skills in the kitchen.

The alliance recently published "Collage of Friends," a cookbook full of members' recipes. The cookbook itself is a fund-raiser for Community Children's Clinic, which is a non-profit medical clinic in Midland that provides care for children of low-income families who might not receive needed medical care any other way.

Not only do alliance members help raise funds to support the clinic, but they also volunteer as doctors, nurses, interpreters and office staff there.

As a kick-off event for the cookbook sales, the alliance will host a luncheon and fashion show noon Oct. 16 at the Plaza Club. The ticket price of $15 per person will purchase lunch, a view of the latest styles and a copy of the cookbook.

Funds raised from ticket sales will go to the clinic, Mrs. Sheward said, "because the cost of the luncheon is being underwritten by Westwood Medical Center."

For tickets or more information about the luncheon, call 699-2440.

MELISA'S CHOCOLATE MOUSSE TORTE

CRUST:
2 boxes (8 ounces each) chocolate wafer cookies
3 ounces bittersweet chocolate, coarsely chopped
1/2 cup walnuts, toasted and chopped
1 stick butter, melted
FILLING:
3 ounces unsweetened chocolate, coarsely chopped
3 ounces bittersweet chocolate, coarsely chopped
1/2 cup butterscotch chips
1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese, softened
2 1/2 cups firmly packed light brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
6 egg yolks
1 stick butter, cut into pieces
3 egg whites
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
1/4 teaspoon cream of tarter
2 cups whipping cream, whipped

FOR CRUST: Combine cookies and chocolate in food processor and process for 30 seconds. Transfer to large bowl and stir in chopped walnuts and melted butter until well blended. Press mixture into bottom of 10-inch springform pan. Refrigerate crust while preparing filling.

FOR FILLING: Melt 3 ounces of chocolate in double boiler over simmering water. Stir in butterscotch chips and blend until chips are melted. Add remaining 3 ounces of chocolate, mixing well until melted and smooth.

Combine cream cheese, sugar and vanilla in separate bowl over simmering water. Using mixer, beat until creamy (about 5 to 7 minutes). Beat in egg yolks one at a time. Continue beating until sugar dissolves and mixture thickens (takes about 10 minutes). Remove from heat. Blend in butter one piece at a time until melted and well blended. Cool to room temperature, stirring often (about 30 to 45 minutes). Place in refrigerator to expedite process, taking care to stir often.

Using clean, dry beaters, beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Add powdered sugar and cream of tarter and beat until stiff. Fold in alternately with whipped cream to cooled chocolate mixture, combining well with each addition. Pour into crust and refrigerate overnight.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Melisa Sheward shows off a chocolate cheesecake, one of many dessert masterpieces she has created. She enjoys cooking and has shared some of her recipes in the recently published "Collage of Friends," a fund-raising cookbook compiled by the Midland Medical Alliance to benefit the Community Children's Clinic, a non-profit medical clinic for children of low-income families.

Garnish with whipped cream. Remove from refrigerator 10 minutes before serving.

CHOCOLATE DREAMS

COOKIES:
3/4 cup butter, softened
1/2 cup powdered sugar
1/4 cup light brown sugar
2 large egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 1/2 cup flour
FILLING:
1/2 cup cream
1 cup semi-sweet chocolate chips
1 teaspoon dark rum

In medium bowl, cream butter using medium mixer setting. Add powdered sugar and brown sugar, beating until smooth. Add egg yolks and vanilla. Mix at medium speed until light and fluffy. Scrape down into bowl.

Add flour and blend at low speed until thoroughly combined. Gather dough into ball and flatten into dish shape. Wrap dough in plastic wrap and refrigerate for 1 hour. Heat cream just to boiling point in small saucepan over medium heat. Add chocolate chips and stir until melted. Stir in rum.

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Using floured rolling pin, roll dough on floured surface to 1/4-inch thickness. Use 2-inch cookie cutter (circle) and place half of them onto lightly greased cookie sheet. Drop 1 teaspoon of chocolate mixture onto each circle. Top with remaining circles and seal edges completely with fork. Bake for 15 minutes. Transfer to cool, flat surface with metal spatula. Sprinkle with powdered sugar when cooled.

ROAST PHEASANT STUFFED WITH GRUYERE AND NOODLES

Salt
8 ounce package wide noodles
1 quart chicken broth
1/4 pound mushrooms
1/4 pound butter
1/2 cup freshly grated Gruyere
1/2 cup heavy cream
Freshly ground pepper
1/2 teaspoon dried sage
1 carrot, cut in 1/4-inch slices
1 onion, coarsely chopped
MORNAY SAUCE:
2 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup Gruyere or Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper to taste

Wipe pheasants with damp cloth and sprinkle insides with a little salt. Cook noodles 4 to 5 minutes in broth until half done. Wipe mushrooms with damp cloth, trim ends and mince stems with sharp knife. Slice caps thinly. Saute both in 4 tablespoons butter in large saucepan.

Drain noodles well, reserving broth, and stir into mushrooms. Mix in Gruyere and 4 tablespoons cream, adding salt and pepper to taste and sage.

Stuff pheasants with noodle mixture, scraping juices from pan. Skewer openings and truss legs and wings. Put remaining butter in roasting pan with carrot and onion. Heat until butter melts. Roll pheasants in butter until well coated, then put in roasting pan in oven at 450 degrees, adding a little hot broth from drained noodles from time to time.

When pheasant begins to brown (after about 15 minutes in oven), turn it to breast-side down and cover roasting pan. Reduce heat to 325 degrees and continue roasting 25 to 35 minutes, basting frequently with more hot broth and pan juices. Remove cover from pan. Salt and pepper pheasant lightly and cook about 10 minutes longer. Serve with Mornay Sauce.

MORNAY SAUCE: Melt butter in saucepan and stir in flour. Cook over low heat for 2 to 3 minutes. Stir in remaining cream and reserved broth. Heat 3 to 5 minutes, stirring until mixture begins to thicken. Add salt and pepper to taste.

CARRIE'S CHICKEN MEDALLIONS

1/2 cup red bell pepper, chopped
1/2 cup celery, chopped
4 scallions, chopped
4 tablespoons margarine
2 cups bread crumbs
2 eggs, beaten lightly
1/2 cup half and half
2 tablespoons dijon mustard
1/4 cup fresh cilantro
1 teaspoon garlic powder or 1 clove garlic, crushed
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 to 3 tablespoons vegetable oil (for cooking rounds)

In food processor, pulse chicken until finely chopped. Reserve. Saute peppers, celery and scallions over medium heat for 5 to 6 minutes. Add to chicken and mix with bread crumbs, eggs and remaining ingredients. Chill overnight.

Roll 2 tablespoons chicken mixture into ball. Flatten to 1/2-inch thickness between waxed paper. Repeat until all chicken mixture is used. Heat oil in saute pan over medium-high heat. Add chicken patties a few at a time. Saute, turning once, until golden, 3 to 5 minutes, using more oil as needed. Drain on paper towel. Serve with fresh chunky tomato sauce.

CRACKLING CHICKEN WITH SUGAR SNAPS

Whole boneless chicken breasts, halved lengthwise
Whole wheat flour for dredging
1 large egg, beaten with 3 tablespoons water
1 1/4 cup chopped almonds
2 tablespoons plus 1 teaspoon corn oil
2 tablespoons minced shallots
1/2 cup chicken stock
1 pound sugar snap peas, trimmed, strings removed, cut into thin diagonal slices
1 scallion, cut into thin diagonal slices
1 tablespoon minced fresh parsley
1 tablespoon minced fresh chives
1/4 cup sunflower seeds
4 whole sugar snap peas (for garnish)
Minced fresh chives (for garnish)

Using meat mallet, flatten each chicken breast between two sheets of plastic wrap. Dredge chicken in flour, shaking off excess. Dip in egg. Coat lightly with nuts. Heat 2 tablespoons oil in medium-sized non-stick skillet over medium heat. Add 2 pieces of chicken and saute 4 to 6 minutes or until golden, turning once. Transfer with tongs to ovenproof plate and keep warm in 200 degree oven.

Saute remaining chicken. Wash skillet. Heat remaining oil in skillet. Add shallots and cook for 1 minute. Add stock. Bring to boil over medium-high heat and boil until liquid is reduced by half. Reduce heat to low. Gently stir in peas, scallions, parsley, chives and sunflower seeds. Heat through for 1 minute. Pour over chicken. Garnish with whole sugar snap peas and minced chives.

Cookies packaged in green cost a lot of green

By Linda Anderson

Before I say another word, I want to comment on a strange phenomenon I have noticed in the supermarket: Whenever a company — any company — introduces a new "low-fat, low-calorie, healthy" product, it seems to be marketed in a green package. Why is that? It doesn't seem to matter what color the company's normal packaging is, if the product is "New!" and "low-fat," it comes dressed in green.

Anderson

Is it because of the success of Healthy Choice and all its products, and their green packaging? Or is it because SnackWells (and its green packaging) is so popular? Do the companies think that green is the only color allowed if the product is marketed as low fat?

(About the only exception to the rule that I can think of is Lean Cuisine, which has been around for a long time and has already proven itself to customers, so I guess there was no need to change the packaging.)

To quote the King of Siam from "The King and I": Is a puzzlement.

Now that I've got that said, I want to tell you about two new kinds low-fat cookies: Healthy Choice Fudge Creme and Pepperidge Farm Vanilla Creme Chantilly — both packaged in green. (Healthy Choice yes, but have you ever seen ordinary Pepperidge Farm products dressed in green? Neither have I.)

Both are marketed as being lower-fat and having no cholesterol. Both are pretty expensive too — each package contains only a dozen cookies; the Healthy Choice cookies cost $1.99 and the Pepperidge Farm cookies cost $2.19.

The Pepperidge Farm cookies have an elaborate advertising claim on the back of the package: "Treat yourself to the kind of extraordinary treats you expect from Pepperidge Farm, and spare yourself half the fat of regular sandwich cookies.

Healthy Choice's label advertising is a little more direct: "Healthy Choice Fudge Cremes...Crisp and delicious cookies filled with rich fudge centers. A great tasting way to Eat What You Like."

According to their nutrition labels, the Pepperidge Farm cookies contain 70 calories each with 15 of them from fat, and the Healthy Choice cookies have 130 calories per three-cookie serving (that's about 43 or so calories per cookie). and 15 of them are from fat.

The taste test was interesting. I brought both bags to the office and let the experts here check them out. Most preferred the Pepperidge Farm over the Healthy Choice, saying that the latter didn't really have much flavor. One of my co-workers and his young daughter (who is probably the real expert here) liked both.

I don't know, it seems to me that when you take out all the fat from cookies, you may also be taking out most of the flavor. And I don't want to spend that much on cookies that don't taste right.

Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

DEAR ABBY

Doctor needs prescription for silence

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago, my husband and I chose our daughter's friend to be our personal physician. Now a problem has arisen.

Van Buren

Whenever we visit our doctor, within a few days we receive a call from our daughter inquiring about our "condition." My husband and I are very private people. If we wanted our children to know the details of our health, we would tell them.

Should either of us learn that we have a fatal illness, we would want it kept between ourselves and our doctor. When the time comes to share the information with family and friends, we prefer it to be at our discretion.

Now we are concerned about the confidentiality that should exist between patient and doctor. He is such a personable young man that we hate to hurt his feelings. What do you think? — APPREHENSIVE IN AURORA, COLO.

DEAR APPREHENSIVE: If you value your privacy, find another doctor. And do this personable young man a favor by dropping him a note to explain why. The truth may sting, but he needs to know.

DEAR ABBY: Parents these days have an aggravating habit of telling their children what to do and then saying, "OK?" It goes like this: "Johnny, it's time to go to bed. OK?"

I don't remember getting a choice when I was a kid. When our parents told us to do something, we knew they weren't asking for our approval. By asking "OK?" they open up the subject for discussion when there should be none.

Today's parents seem more concerned with being their children's pals and not upsetting their kids than in saying what's what and then following through.

When I hear parents count to three while their kids decide whether or not they're going to do what they've been asked, I roll my eyes because usually the parents don't follow through and make their kids behave anyway. They just threaten them.

I'm sure glad I had parents who knew how to say the way it was going to be and then stuck to it. It sure made my life a lot easier. — MARY LOU CHILDS, EUGENE, ORE.

DEAR MARY LOU: Many parents seem reluctant to enforce their own rules for fear of traumatizing their little ones. An excellent way to ensure obedience is to state your wishes in a tone that lets the child know this is not something open for discussion. Effective parents are not only loving, but also firm enough to provide limits.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter signed "Perplexed in Garland, Texas" about the noisy next-door neighbors, I was reminded of our situation as newlyweds back in Buffalo, N.Y., almost 60 years ago.

We would be awakened early each morning by the newlyweds directly above us. Their bed shook so hard, we feared that the ceiling would one day come down on us.

We placed a note in their mailbox, suggesting they subdue their enthusiasm. They responded with a note suggesting that WE move to Forest Lawn Cemetery, where we would find everlasting peace and quiet. — LIVING PEACEFULLY IN SAN DIEGO ter; pour into prepared pan. Drop spoonfuls of malted-milk mixture over top about 1-inch apart; swirl with spatula.

Bake in preheated 350-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until brownies begin to pull away from sides of pan. Cool completely in pan on wire rack. Cover and refrigerate until chilled. Use foil to lift brownies out of pan; place on cutting board. Peel off foil; refrigerate. Cut into squares. Store tightly covered, at room temperature. Makes about 2 dozen brownies.

CHOCOLATE SUGAR COOKIES

1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter or margarine, melted
1 tablespoon water
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 1/3 cups all-purpose flour
3/4 cup plus 1/4 cup sugar, divided
1/3 cup cocoa
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
Peanut Butter Glaze (recipe below)

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly spray a cookie sheet with vegetable cooking spray.

Stir together flour, 3/4 cup sugar, cocoa, baking powder, baking soda and salt; stir into egg white mixture until well blended. Shape into 1-inch balls; roll balls in remaining 1/4 cup sugar. Place 2 inches apart on prepared cookie sheet; press balls flat with bottom of glass.

Bake 6 to 8 minutes or until set. Cool 5 minutes. Remove from cookie sheet to wire rack. Cool completely. Drizzle with Peanut Butter Glaze. Makes about 2 dozen cookies.

Peanut Butter Glaze: In a small microwave-safe bowl, place 1/2 cup peanut butter chips and 1 teaspoon shortening (do not use butter, margarine or oil). Cook in a microwave oven on high (100 percent power) for 30 to 45 seconds or just until chips are melted and mixture is smooth when stirred; use immediately.

Don't let the cookies crumble

Associated Press

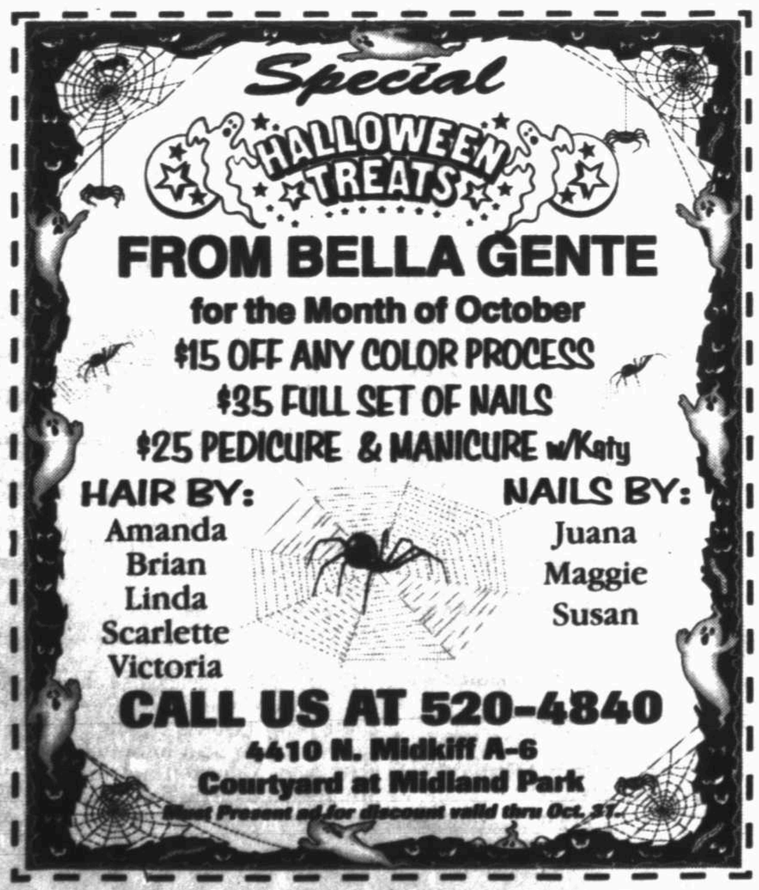

If you're sending cookies by mail, the Hershey Kitchens have the following tips for making sure your baked goods arrive intact:

- Pack your cookies or brownies in airtight containers that are unbreakable and sturdy. This will protect both the flavor and appearance of the baked goods.
- Pack containers into a box strong enough to protect the containers during handling and shipping.
- Cushion contents carefully with crumpled paper (old wrapping paper or newspapers), foam shells or unbuttered, air-popped popcorn.
- To prevent items from shifting, do not leave any empty space in the box.
- Include the delivery name and address on the inside of the package in case the package is damaged.
- Print the address clearly on the outside of the box, on one side only, with smudge-proof ink.
- Always include the zip code of both the sender and receiver.
- Wrapping a sturdy box with paper is not necessary.
- Do not use string or twine on your package; it can get tangled in the automated mail processing machinery.

140 Card of Thanks

I extend my thanks to the hostesses, family, & friends who attended my retirement celebration September 28, 1996. I will always remember the beautiful gestures of love shown me. In my own humble way, I have served this community and shall continue to serve as long as I am able. For your thoughtfulness, your kindness, for the sentimental as well as the practical value of your gifts, my sincere thanks. With love,
Myrtle C. Hall
