April's Artist To Be Honored

Donna Sullenger, Scurry County Artist of the Month for April, will be honored at a reception from 1 p. m. to 5 p. m. Sunday as her show opens in the Scurry County Museum at Western Texas College.

The public is invited to attend.

A graduate of Snyder High School, Mrs. Sullenger studied at Western Texas College with Warren Cullar for a year and then transferred to Baylor University. She has also attended North Texas State University and Angelo State University. She now gives private art lessons in her home and paints on commission.

She will be showing a group of portraits and one landscape in the Scurry County Museum.

Her husband, Billy Sullenger, is employed by Oil Dynamics in Snyder. The couple has two sons, Jeremiah and Jacob.

Information about the new exhibit may be obtained by calling the museum office at 573-6107. The show will remain in place through May 15.

Selection of a Scurry County Artist of the Month is a project of the Scurry County Museum and the Palette Club. The reception for the new artist is customarily held on the third Sunday of each month, but the April reception has been re-scheduled because the museum will be closed on April 19, Easter Sunday.

The SDN Column

Despite declines in recent years, Scurry County still ranks in the top 10 Texas Counties for oil production.

There was some confusion the other day as we looked at two sets of figures, one putting Scurry in fifth place and another ranking Scurry No. 8 in the state.

Figures supplied by the Railroad Commission prevailed and we decided that we are in the No. 8 spot now. Then, we discovered that someone had confused the 1980 totals with the 1979 figures, which accounted for the difference.

Anyway, Scurry County's 1980 oil production amounted to 39,377,274 barrels. This is considerably below the peak of more than 70 million barrels a few years ago when Scurry County was No. 1 in the nation. But it is still highly significant in the nation's oil picture.

Yoakum County is the state's leading oil producer now, with a total of 60,771,167 barrels in 1980.

The top 10 includes these counties, in order: Yoakum, Gaines, Ector, Pecos, Gregg, Hockley, Andrews, Scurry, Crane and Refugio.

Scurry County is No. 2 in production of casinghead gas, with a total of 56,528,902 mcf in 1980. Crane County is the state's leader with 117,962,779. This is the gas that comes out of an oilwell along with the crude. At one time, it was considered a nuisance, but now is a valuable resource.

Steps are being taken to enhance the recovery of oil and gas, now that crude oil prices have been deregulated and there is talk that controls may come off gas. At the same time, there have been reports of unusually large stockpiles of crude oil and gasoline. This points to another factor that is beginning to bear fruit in the country's efforts to depend less on imports for its energy supply. There were reports this week that consumption of gasoline in this country declined by almost 14 percent during the past year. Less than a year ago, there were those who were saying that these efforts would never produce enough results to be noticed.

Of course every expert had his own idea of the best method of getting motorists to cooperate, and so far, emphasis has been placed on several factors. It is encourging to note that some of them are working. Some think the high price of gasoline has slowed demands. Others believe that more use of smaller cars is the big reason for the decline. Others think that it is simply a case of Americans heeding the pleas to conserve and voluntarily cutting down on their trips. And there are even some who believe that the 55 mph speed limit has been a big help.

Whatever method, we think it is just one more example of how Americans can react positively to a problem when they finally are convinced that a problem exists.

Another harbinger of spring: A mass of wildflowers on the campus of Western Texas College. Our attention was called to them by Lee Presswood. "It's worth driving by the campus just to see them," he said.

Astronauts Eager To Go...

Shuttle Ready For Liftoff

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts John Young and Bob Crippen paid a pre-dawn visit to launch pad 39A today, inspected the shuttle Columbia and said they are eager to fly the revolutionary spaceship on Friday.

"The forecast is 100 percent good" for liftoff at 6:50 a.m. EST, according to a top space agency official.

The astronauts stopped by the pad at 5 a.m., shortly after a large service structure had been rolled away, leaving Columbia bathed in floodlights, perched on its historic launch site, glistening with promise.

Young and Crippen told the launch crew they are "ready to go" and then climbed aboard executive jets modified to handle like the Columbia to practice emergency landings at a nearby 15,000-foot runway. They would use the strip Friday only if their engines quit early and they can't get into orbit.

The countdown, on time, went into a planned 11 hour 50 minute hold at 4:30 a.m., providing rest time for the launch crews.

Weather conditions, which earlier in the week had been threatening, continued to improve. The Air Force today forecast good weather for Friday morning, with no ceiling; thin, scattered clouds, light winds and 54 degree temperature.

John Yardley, head of the space shuttle program for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration was asked early today about the chance of an on-time Friday launch? "They're looking just super," he said. "The forecast is 100 percent good," said.

Young and Crippen were to review flight preparations with launch officials later in the day and then retire in late afternoon. They have a 2:05 a.m. wakeup call on Friday.

"We look forward to the flight," Young said on arrival here Thursday. He then joined Crippen for an hour's aerial acrobatics, flying loop-the-loop aerobatic maneuvers to improve their proficiency for the orbital mission.

On launch pad 39-A, from which Apollo 11 left Earth for man's first walk on the moon, work crews were preparing to load, starting late tonight, more than 500,000 gallons of volatile liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen fuels to drive the shuttle's three main engines.

Young and Crippen flew here yesterday to meet with project officials and to make final preparations for a mission that is one of the most important in the U.S. man-in-space program. This nation's future in space — scientifically, commercially and militarily — is riding on this launching of the world's first reflyable spacecraft.

It is strictly a test flight, with Young and Crippen slated to exercise all of Columbia's complex parts — its flight controls, cargo doors, engines, computers, fuel and life support systems, and its ability to land back on a runway like an airliner.

They are to orbit the Earth 36 times in 54½ hours. But this is the first time a spaceship has been flown by men without first being launched unmanned. So the astronauts are prepared to bring the 80-ton Columbia back to Earth at any time if there is a mission-threatening problem.

Young and Crippen flew here in separate T-38 jet trainers Wednesday and were met by ground crews wearing protective masks to guard against passing along an infectious disease.

Young, the mission commander, told reporters, who were kept 100 yards away: "Bob and I are about ready to fly this thing. We look forward to the flight. We're hoping everything will allow us to go on Friday."

"Columbia is in great shape," Crippen added. "The launch team tells us it's almost ready to go."

Later, Young jokingly told Kennedy Space Center officials he had brought enough clothes "to last a month. Every other time I never brought enough and always had to stay longer. That'll make sure we can go on Friday."

School Board To Reorganize

Snyder School Trustees are scheduled to canvass returns from last Saturday's election, administer the oath of office to two new members and elect officers for the coming year at its meeting tonight.

The meeting is set for 7:30 p. m. in the board room of the school administration building.

Roy McQueen and J. D. Hinton were elected to Places 6 and 7, respectively, in Saturday's election. They will succeed Bill Eiland and Ted Crenwelge.

Crenwelge has served as president of the board the past year, and a new president will be elected when the board reorganizes tonight.

Representatives of the Scurry County Summer Recreation Program and parents of tennis players are scheduled to meet with the board to seek use of school facilities and to discuss tennis facilities.

The board also is scheduled to receive an amended budget of the Scurry County Appraisal District for study and cast a ballot to fill two places on the board of directors of the Region XIV Education Service Center. Candidates from Eastland, Breckenridge and Abilene are on the service center ballot.

The board is scheduled to go into executive session to discuss a personnel matter following action on the agenda.

Senate Gets Compromise Liability Bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A "compromise" product liability bill has been sent from the House to the Senate, but trouble could lie ahead in a Senate committee.

On Wednesday, the House passed on voice vote a bill described by its sponsor, Rep. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, as a "compromise" among competing interests in the defective products issue.

New Council Members To Take Office

Newly-elected officials will take the oath of office at a special meeting of the Snyder City Council set for 1 p. m. Friday.

The council canvassed the returns from Saturday's election at its regular meeting Monday night, which showed that Gale McPherson, Ed Thrift, John Wilson, David Holt and Rod Waller were elected to council seats without opposition.

Also during the special session Friday, the council will consider the second reading of an ordinance closing a portion of 13th St. and first reading of an ordinance annexing Block 15 in the Helms Subdivision. Request for closing the westernmost section of 13th St. was made by C. A. White Trucking Co. and P. P. L. T. Corp. The annexation has been requested by Marty Hammon.

Alliance Planning Holy Week Series

The Scurry County Ministerial Alliance has announced plans for its first annual Holy Week series of services.

Short worship services will be held during the noon hour at First Presbyterian Church on Monday through Thursday. The final service in the series will be held at 7 a. m. on Good Friday at First United Methodist Church.

Christians from Baptist, Disciples of Christ, Presbyterian, Assembly of God, Church of the Nazarene and United Methodist churches have joined this year to proclaim the death and resurrection of Christ through common worship services during the week preceding Easter. Christians of all denominations are invited to attend all services.

The brief noon-hour services will begin at 12:10 p. m., and there will be a different holy week theme each day. The sermon and music each day will be presented by local ministers and musicians. Following the service, lunch will be served so that working people may attend. First Presbyterian Church, the site of the noon services, is located at 2706 Ave. R., two blocks south of the square.

The series will be concluded with a Tenebrae service at 7 a. m. Friday at First United Methodist Church, located at College Ave. and 27th St. In this candlelight service, Christians are reminded by scripture reading and song of the despair the Disciples experienced during Christ's three days in the tomb. A continental breakfast will be served following this service.

Washington State Feels Quake

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A volcanic earthquake on Mount St. Helens was recorded on seismic stations all across the state of Washington, the University of Washington geophysics department reported today.

The quake, which occurred Wednesday night, "means it's still an active volcano," said geophysics spokesman A.B. Adams at the university in Seattle.

The university did not immediately have a magnitude for the quake, but Adams said that considering the area over which it was detected, the quake was about the largest such activity on the volcano in about a week.

Obstruction Bill Advances

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Representatives voted favorably on a bill to overturn a Texas Supreme Court decision that makes cities responsible for street-intersection visibility.

The bill by Rep. Frank Eikenburg, R-Plano, gained tentative approval on a voice vote Wednesday and was scheduled for a final vote today.

In a Midland case last year, the high court said cities must trim back trees or shrubs if they block visibility at an intersection, even if the plants are growing on private property.

Workers Want Airline

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Continental Airlines workers, declaring they have "sweat equity" in their employer, are banding together in a unique effort to buy control of the company and block its acquisition by Texas International Airlines.

"We have invested our lives and our energies in this company and as a result we have sweat equity," pilot Paul Eckel, chairman of the newly formed Continental Employes' Association, said Wednesday. "We think that sweat equity needs to be recognized. If ownership of the company is to transfer, it should be to the employees, not the speculators."

Spanish Seek U.S. Arms

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. reaffirms America's support for Spanish democracy and gets a bill for more than $3 billion in meetings today with King Juan Carlos and centrist Premier Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo.

More than $3 billion in U.S. arms is Spain's asking price for renewal of the five-year treaty giving the United States naval and air bases in the country, reliable sources said.

Reagan Free Of Fever, Having 'Best Day Yet'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, free from an evening fever for the first time in five days, is experiencing his "best day yet" in the hospital, his doctor said today.

Reagan, who has been working about two hours a day, is under doctors' orders to work no more than that when he returns to the White House.

His return now is expected between Friday and Monday.

The White House press office, which has cut its formal bulletins on the president's health to one a day, said this morning the president "had no fever last night when he went to bed or this morning" after he awoke about 6 a.m.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan's visitors today would include the minority leaders of the Senate and House, Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., as well as Treasury Secretary Donald Regan.

The president spent 20 minutes with his three top aides this morning, twice as long as usual, Speakes said, discussing foreign policy issues.

The three are presidential counselor Edwin Meese III, chief of staff James A. Baker III and deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver.

Speakes also said the president had been given an advance copy of a speech Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, will deliver in Chicago later today outlining the Democrats' tax cut plan, which would be an alternative to the administration's.

Rostenkowski, D-Ill., is expected to call for a tax cut that is both more complex and about $11 billion smaller than the administration version.

Speakes, relaying word from Dr. Daniel Ruge that "this is the president's best day yet," said Reagan was receiving on a daily basis a report from the State Department, and well as reports on White House mail, policy recommendations from his Cabinet councils and personnel recommendations.

In addition, Speakes said Reagan was being briefed "extensively" on the progress of his economic program in the House and Senate.

Asked about the president's appearance and whether he was looking drawn, Speakes said "there has been some weight loss."

welfare tread mill

Nancy and Leonard Bise and their two infant daughters have lived the past 12 months on $142 a month in food stamps and $263 per month from the Cuyahoga County (Ohio) welfare department. They are among 22 million Americans now receiving food stamps in any given month.

"By the end of the month I serve plain macaroni with maybe a little butter on it," 18-year-old Nancy told a reporter for the New York Times News Service in a story recently dealing with the effects of President Reagan's efforts to chop $1.8 billion from a proposed $11 billion food stamp program during fiscal 1981.

The story said that Bise, a machinist, moved his family to Cleveland from West Virginia one year ago and has been out of work since that date.

The story went on to paint the familiar, bleak picture of families tragically caught on the welfare-food stamp tread mill. It briefly alluded to "glaring abusers" of the program by "fiscal conservatives."

Unfortunately, the story gave too little a picture of how the Bise family found itself in such straits. Leonard's age, job skills, his education, his job performance level or why he lost his last job is not mentioned. We don't know any more about Nancy except her age and the fact she has two children by the age of 18. We don't know if Leonard lost his job in West Virginia and then migrated to Cleveland, or whether he moved to a job in Cleveland and then either quit, got fired or got laid off.

Of course, from the standpoint of Mr. and Mrs. Bise — and undoubtedly many others — all of the unanswered questions are hopelessly moot. The bottom line is that a family of four is hungry and shivering and jobless in Cleveland, and everything else is incidental.

Still, we think these are the sorts of questions on the public's mind when the federal government takes $11 billion yearly from the "haves" to give to the "have-nots."

No one has much time anymore for the view that we are responsible for ourselves. Politicians have spent almost five decades now telling us government will take care of us from cradle to grave, so perhaps that view is forgivable.

Still, ordinary horse sense often seems to fail people who — and not necessarily in this order — marry, have babies, leave school and look for that first job. By today's standards, any calamity along the way is society's responsibility and, so, programs like food stamps begin, grow, become a "right" and soon become a way of life. The program finally can't be cut without great upheaval to those in the program.

Food stamps were launched by the federal government with the best of intentions in 1962 and were designed to help the most needy put additional food on the table from their welfare checks. At the start, fewer than 150,000 were involved. Within eight years, the caseload was 4.3 million, and by 1974 the program was reaching 12.8 million persons.

To the public's great irritation, the several millions now included college students and just about anybody willing to apply and willing to stretch a point or two about their eligibility. Food stamps were suddenly as useful as money in exchanges not always involving food.

Eligibility was toughened in 1979, cutting program expenses sharply. Now President Reagan is proposing another belt-tightening which faces certain objections in Congress.

Given the usual waste and fraud in programs of this nature, a $1.8 billion cut is not going to eliminate the most needy families. It should also have the effect of forcing those now using stamps for something other than basic foods to consider more meaningful food buys. Reagan's cuts are the least that should be done.

government by the people

Even Alfred Khan recommends "Reaganomics" for what ails us. Khan, inflation fighter in the Carter administration, says this president has the right idea -- "but success will depend on the response of the public and the Congress."

He might have added that the response of the public and the Congress may depend in large part on news media emphasis.

If the media gives disproportionate forum to those opposed then the mandate of the last election could be shouted down.

On a recent edition of the Today show, OMB Director David Stockman was questioned by individuals from the audience.

One woman said she was an out-of-work nurse.

"What's going to happen to me?" she demanded. "What's going to happen to my ADC payments and my rent subsidy and my unemployment benefits and my food stamps?"

Mr. Stockman did not -- but should have -- responded:

"You are a nurse -- and unemployed!"

President Reagan, in the televised presentation of his Reaganomics formula to Congress, said nothing more significant than this line from his concluding paragraph:

"I ask only that the critics of this formula provide a viable alternative." So far none has.

I recall no peacetime in our nation's experience when "government by the people" faced a more supreme test.

An ABC-Washington post survey shows that Americans, two-to-one, applaud Reaganomics.

But that whites are generally more enthusiastic than blacks.

One black scholar says if that's true it's a shame.

Walter Williams, economics professor at Temple University, is one of the blacks most outspoken against government welfare because, he says, the bureaucrats administering the program are getting most of the welfare money.

He says the Washington bureaucracy is fighting hardest to perpetuate welfare so they can keep their jobs.

Mr. Williams calls them "poverty pimps."

He says if we'd fire all the bureaucrats in the welfare business there'd be enough welfare money available to give every family now on welfare $40,000 a year!

Williams says our country no longer has any "poor;" instead it has a large number of dependents."

And it's the business of the welfare bureaucrat to keep the dependents dependent!

Also, Mr. Williams acknowledges other opposition to Reaganomics coming from organizations outside of government which have been getting rich in the name of "helping the poor people."

He says most of them are "poverty pimps," also.

woman's world

by rusty brown

The world has always been fascinated by crimes of passion and unrequited love.

In the ballad, we have Frankie shootin' her two-timin' lover for doin' her wrong. In literature, Othello smothers his beloved Desdemona because he thinks she has been unfaithful.

In 1906, this country was electrified by the trial of wealthy businessman Harry K. Thaw, who shot architect Stanford White for dallying with Thaw's showgirl-wife.

Now add girls' school headmistress Jean Harris, sentenced to at least 15 years in prison for killing her diet doctor-lover, Herman Tarnower.

I hear that several books are being written about this "crime passionelle." Obviously, these authors and their publishers feel sure that the books will sell. Each author is going to develop a theory about what drove the well-bred, well-mannered headmistress to the ultimate violence.

Some see Mrs. Harris as the classic spurned woman. Others say she is one of those women whose self-esteem and sense of worth is dependent upon the love of a man. One columnist calls it a "sorry, common soap opera of a woman who hung on to long for too little."

I have a different hunch. I think Mrs. Harris is a victim of the New Morality. She is like a lot of women over 40 who thought they could handle the "uncommitted" live-together relationship so heartily endorsed as an alternative to bindng marital entanglements.

I'm not suggesting that affairs and eternal triangles are a recent invention, but people like Mrs. Harris would have shunned this kind of relationship unless the times convinced them that it was OK by everybody's standards.

The uncommitted affair seems to work for younger women. But for many of us, programmed in the mores of an earlier period, it presents a risk greater than we can handle emotionally.

Mrs. Harris had a 14-year romance with the "Scarsdale Diet" author. When they met and fell in love, it was 1966. She was 42 and just divorced. Women's liberation was beginning to have an impact on all of us.

Millions of women were awakening to broader concepts of themselves and how to spend their lives. The movement encouraged them to examine their potentials — to go back to school or seek careers as well as raise a family. I'm all for all of that.

Sexual liberation was another offshoot of the rebellious '60s. Sexual freedom for women as well as men — no more double standrads about sex. Women should be able to say "I do it" without first having to say "I do" at an altar.

Contrast that with the '40s and '50s, when "not before marriage" was the cornerstone of our adolescence. We were used to rigid rules.

Between my parents and the Methodist Church, my life had definite limitations. No roller skating or going to movies on Sunday, for example. It was considered a major breakthrough when square dancing was allowed inside the Lakewood Methodist Church. Social dancing was unthinkable!

I tell you all of this because Mrs. Harris and I grew up within a decade of each other in similar Cleveland suburbs only a few miles apart.

Is it possible for those of us reared in the "nice-girls-don't" era to make the leap to the world of the savvy, uninhibited, sexually free modern woman? I have my doubts. The case of Mrs. Harris reinforces those doubts.

The depth of her bewilderment and despair tumbled out when she said to police shortly after the shooting: "He slept with every woman he could. I have been through so much hell with him. I loved him very much. I had it. I wanted to die.

She had none of the supports of marriage — legal or emotional. She invested 14 years in a love affair, and when it was over, she wrote to him, saying she felt "like discarded trash." That feeling destroyed her.

Younger women, fortunately, seem to take loving and leaving more in stride. The question is: Will the New Morality wash as well 15 or 20 years from now, when today's 30-year-olds are nearing 50 and face the dilemma of a Jean Harris.?

The Wink Sink, the mysterious hole in the ground near Kermit, first started eating earth less than a year ago, on July 3,1980. During the first several days, great walls of dirt fell at intervals into the chasm until it was the size of three football fields.

No one really seemed to know what caused it but there was a great deal of speculation. Some said the hole was on the site of an old lake, others said it was caused by a salt dome being injected too heavily with fluids by the oil companies (the most logical explanation). Still others said it was a sign that the world was coming to an end.

Whatever the cause, the sinkhole quickly became a tourist attraction and sightseers climbed fences that had been erected to get a better look at the strange phenomenon.

Everyone said they had never seen anything like it.

But something a bit like that did happen once. The Colorado River broke its levees once in 1905 and flooded over onto a huge salt marsh in the desert in Southern California.

The water ate away at and finally dissolved large portions of the salt marsh. It took two years and a few million dollars to finally contain the new lake at 445 sq. miles, making it the largest accidental lake in the United States.

Now about half the lake has evaporated or simply disappeared but it's still bigger than the Texas Sink.

The name "Wink Sink" sounded original to West Texans. But California thought of it first. They named their salt marsh the "Salton Sink."

California's lake has since been renamed "Salton Sea" and its origins aren't thought of often anymore, but it beats Texas out for having the first sinkhole caused by mixing salt and water and it beat Texas at being the first to call their accidental lake a sink.

Worst of all, Californians can brag that they have a bigger Sink than Texas does.

Remember the acronym ARCH. A is Analyze the lead. R is Review the bidding. C is Count your winners and losers and H is How can I make or defeat the contract, depending on whether you are declarer or defender.

South plays dummy's nine of hearts at trick one. Maybe East will play the queen, but West holds it and East can't go wrong.

South counts three major suit winners and sees he needs six in the minor suits. He also assumes that hearts will break 5-3 so that he really needs a winning club finesse as a matter of timing.

He starts proceedings by leading his jack of diamonds and covering with dummy's queen. West starts an echo with the seven and East ducks.

Now South takes and wins a club finesse and leads a second diamond to dummy's 10. West completes the echo with his six so East knows he must duck in order to keep the rest of the diamond suit from scoring.

However, South is in control. He simply repeats the club finesse, cashes his ace of clubs and leads a fourth club to set up his last club as his ninth winner.

Note that if East takes the first or second diamond South gets four diamond tricks and three clubs to make an overtrick.

Dear Abby

Man's 'Conscience' Causes Others' Pain

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You recently replied to a young man who had contracted Herpes Simplex 2 infection from a sexual encounter. Your answer was brief and offered valuable informational help. However, I was disappointed that you did not react to his statement, "I have not had relations with anyone since — except prostitutes, which is all I deserve."

My question for him is, "Do the prostitutes deserve you?" Apparently this young man has a conscience so finely honed that he is "ashamed to set foot in his mother's house," yet thinks nothing of sharing his affliction with another unsuspecting human being. The old double standard rears its ugly head.

Well, perhaps his letter did some good. Some unfortunate prostitute may read his letter and decide she no longer wishes to be an "expendable commodity."

NURSE HRATH

DEAR NURSE HRATH: The young man's insensitivity did not escape my notice, but you are right, I should not have let it go without comment.

Herpes Simplex 2, for which there is no known cure, has assumed epidemic proportions, so I advised readers who want free, up-to-date information on this disease to write: Help, Box 100, Palo Alto, Calif. 94302. Please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

I am informed that since that item hit print, the organization has been inundated with mail. It's still pouring in, but every request will be honored as soon as possible.

DEAR ABBY: I am planning to marry this summer. My parents are divorced and my mother is remarried. I have my heart set on having a traditional church wedding. Who should give me away, my father or my stepfather? Both consider me their daughter, and I love them equally.

My mother says the one who pays for the wedding should give me away. (Probably my stepfather.) This is giving me an ulcer. I've even considered eloping so I wouldn't have to make a choice, but I really do want a church wedding. I have a 21-year-old brother who could walk me down the aisle, but he says he'd rather be an usher.

Please tell me what to do. I don't want any hurt feelings on my wedding day.

LISA

DEAR LISA: Both your father and stepfather could walk you down the aisle and jointly give you away. Perhaps an uncle (if not your brother) could walk you down the aisle and your father and stepfather could be waiting to present you to the groom. Discuss this with your clergyman. He may have other suggestions.

DEAR ABBY: This is in reply to NO. 2 AND HANGING IN THERE. Don't despair. I'm also a "No. 2."

The man I married was previously married to a delightful woman named Sue. For years my mother-in-law called me Sue. (My name is Joan.) She even gave me gifts on Sue's birthday. She loved Sue and she loves me, too.

I am now divorced, and my ex is presently going with a lady named Jean. I understand that my former mother-in-law is now calling Jean, "Joan."

JOAN, WHO ANSWERS TO SUE

Useful Travel Tips

PARIS (AP) — When travelling for business or pleasure, travel light. That's the advice of Guy Laroche, French fashion designer who says one suitcase and one carry-on bag should be enough luggage to handle.

Laroche's tips for looking good while travelling light include the following pointers:

—Limit yourself to three simple dresses, preferably in wash-and-wear fabrics.

—Take one blazer in a neutral color for daytime and evening.

—Take sandals that double as slippers and two pairs of shoes, one for walking and one for evening.

—Select a beach coverup that can double as a bathrobe.

—Keep makeup cosmetics to a minimum. Pack a small hairdrier and a tiny travel clock. And get a good haircut before you leave home.

Fat Defendant Won't Budge

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Seven deputies tried and tried but they could not budge a chubby murder defendant who refused to go to court.

Julian Dominguez, 25, would not budge. He weighs 300 pounds.

"He didn't fight the deputies. He just wouldn't move," said Assistant District Attorney Paul Canales.

It took seven deputies to lift Dominguez into a paddy wagon at the jail Tuesday and take him to the courthouse. They finally gave up and decided not to try to lug him into 144th District Judge Roy Barrera's courtroom.

After Probe, London Casinos Hit Losing Streak

LONDON (AP) — Lady Luck has quit London's casinos, along with many of the high rollers, after a three-year crackdown by Scotland Yard's Fraud Squad that has closed a quarter of the city's biggest gambling houses.

Two of the country's four major gambling chains, Ladbroke's and the Coral Leisure Group, have been forced out of the casino business in the cleanup campaign aimed at stamping out corruption, fraud and tax evasion.

Judge Gordon Friend of Knightsbridge Crown Court last week forced the shutdown of three of London's most lucrative casinos by rejecting appeals to restore licenses canceled last year because of violations of the 1968 Gaming Act.

Altogether, seven top casinos have been closed since the Yard's fraud specialists moved in.

Detectives last month raided the Playboy Club owned by Hugh Hefner's Chicago-based empire and seized financial records. The papers were returned after lengthy scrutiny.

The future of several of the surviving 17 casinos is now in doubt after the London police commissioner, Sir David McNee, blocked moves by big business to buy the closed casinos.

One of the nervous survivors is Crockford's, the capital's oldest gaming house which opened in 1831. The Duke of Wellington, victor of Waterloo, once headed a membership list that still includes some of Britain's elite.

Coral sold the club to a mining conglomerate, but police are blocking transfer of its gambling license because of what state attorneys termed "a four-year wave" of casino crime.

The crackdown marked the end of a gambling boom that had turned the British capital into a Las Vegas on the Thames. Three years ago, London had 24 casinos, more than any other city in the world except America's gambling capital. Two years ago, Britain collected the equivalent of $889 million in taxes on gambling and betting.

The ripples of the crackdown have been felt in the United States, where Coral had a 20 percent stake in a planned casino complex in Atlantic City, N.J., the only place in the United States outside Nevada with casino gambling.

Sources have hinted that Coral's difficulties in Britain could delay the Atlantic City project.

The Yard closed in after the government-sponsore Gaming Board voiced "grave disquiet" about gambling industry irregularities and fears that major crime syndicates, including the mob, were muscling in.

"If it wasn't for the board and its inspectors, there's no doubt that the gangsters would move in in force," board chairman Lord Allen of Abbeydale said recently.

"There has been a steady flow of crime in casinos....And there's an increasing need for vigilance....The more casinos spread and the more money is floating around, the greater risk of criminal infiltration."

Allen believes the cleanup has succeeded and noted: "We've really shaken up the industry....I hope that after this the operators are going to take much greater care about what they do."

The board has been pressing for tougher powers to control a gambling business that was legalized only 13 years ago, particularly since it boomed suddenly in 1975.

That was when oil-rich Arab sheiks, driven out of their usual gambling haunts in Beirut by the Lebanese civil war, poured into London with their petro-dollars.

It was bonanza time at the casinos and "the drop," the stake money exchanged for chips, soared from the equivalent of $450 million in 1973 to almost $2.2 billion in 1979.

One Kuwaiti sheik reportedly dropped $2.2 million in a three-day losing streak at the swank Curzon Club.

IRS Expects More Protest Returns This Year

By LEE MITGANG AP Urban Affairs Writer

The Internal Revenue Service says it received more than 13,000 "protest" tax returns in 1980, and it expects even more this year. An unknown number of others don't file at all — as their own kind of silent protest.

What tactics do these tax rebels use to try to penetrate the legal armor of the IRS? Do they ever get away with it?

Here, in question-and-answer form, is what usually happens when the IRS does battle with a tax protester:

Q. Are tax protesters right when they say filing returns violates the Fifth Amendment guarantee against self-incrimination?

A. The federal courts have repeatedly said no. Appeals courts have said there is no Fifth Amendment privilege allowing you to refuse to file an income tax return.

Q. Some argue that the Constitution, as framed nearly 200 years ago by the Founding Fathers, expressly forbade a direct tax on individuals. Is that true?

A. That has not been true since 1913, when the 16th Amendment cleared the way for a direct federal income tax on individuals. The amendment said such a tax could be levied "without apportionment among the several states, and without regard to any census or enumeration."

The courts have since consistently held that the federal government has the right to collect an income tax.

Q. What happens to protesters who still refuse to file income tax at all on the belief the tax is unconstitutional? What are the chances of getting away with it?

A. Not good, according to IRS investigators. Even if you try to hide your income and your spending from the IRS, it is almost impossible not to leave some kind of clue.

Anyone who willingly and knowingly refuses to file a return can be jailed for a year and fined $10,000, plus a penalty of 50 percent of the taxes due.

If the protester still refuses to pay, the IRS can do almost whatever it takes to get the taxes.

Q. What about protesters who take numerous additional exemptions on W-4 forms so that no tax is withheld?

A. Since March 1980, all employers were required to send all W-4 forms claiming 10 or more exemptions to the IRS. IRS investigators then give them an "eyeball exam."

If the number of exemptions seems excessive compared with the previous year's return, the IRS will send a registered letter to the taxpayer asking for an explanation.

If that letter is ignored, the IRS will notify the employer to disregard the exemption claim.

If the employer falsely verifies the extra exemptions, new regulations announced last month make him potentially liable for the employee's taxes.

Q. What happens if someone files a "protest return," with written objections, or one that claims affiliation with a church associated with the tax revolt movement?

A. IRS computers are programmed to "kick out" tax forms that display certain kinds of discrepancies. For instance, if a person claims he has taken a "vow of poverty" as a church minister, but files a withholding that states he has personal income, the computer will question such a return.

A special team of investigators at each of 10 IRS service centers around the country then will examine the return, and determine if it is an "ITP," the jargon for an illegal tax protest.

The suspected protest return is sent to the appropriate district office, with a note identifying the tax laws the return appears to violate.

From that point on, the return is handled like any other facing an IRS audit.

Protesters occasionally band together and hire a lawyer to take the IRS to court, either to argue the IRS is persecuting their "church" in violation of the First Amendment guarantee of feedom of religion, or on grounds the income tax itself is unconstitutional.

The government has yet to lose such a case, according to the IRS.

The penalty for filing a fraudulent protest return is one year in jail, or a $10,000 fine, or both. Anyone convicted of encouraging others to file false returns faces a three-year prison sentence, and $5,000 fine, or both.

Some 2,781 Americans — including protesters and non-protesters — have been jailed for tax fraud in the last four years.

Grim Search Continues At Site Of Explosion

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Search teams were determined to go back into the smoldering rubble of a burned outgrain elevator today to look for two men believed buried in the debris of an explosion and fire that demolished most of the structure.

Many of those helping in the search were inside the building when it blew up Tuesday and believed, at the time, that they were going to die.

Four men were killed in the Tuesday blast, triggered when volatile grain dust was ignited in the huge, 10-story elevator, investigators said. Another 32 men were injured and 20 of those remained hospitalized, hospital spokesmen said.

The structure sustained $30 million damage and must be be razed and rebuilt from the ground up, said Don Rodman, public information officer for the Port of Corpus Christi.

Israel Lopez, 24, an employee of the Corpus Christi Public Elevator, scrambled up a mound of crumpled concrete looking for one of the missing men as darkness fell Tuesday.

Huge chunks of the shattered concrete walls, held in place only by twisted steel reinforcing rods, hung precariously above Lopez' head as he searched, but he refused to seek safety.

"The guy taught me all I know," Lopez said of the missing man. "He's in here somewhere."

Lopez was transferred to another job in the elevator before the blast, else he would have been standing where the missing man was. But he still feared for his life when the dust blew.

"I knew I was going to get burned and all I could think of was to cover my face so that they could recognize my body later," he said.

Lopez will stay on the job but a half-dozen or so of his friends plan to quit because of the powerful explosion and the possibility that it could happen again, he said.

"It's sad that we have to put our lives on the line. I never knew how intense it could be until this happened. Grain dust is supposed to be 10 times as powerful as gunpowder," Lopez said.

"I got hit by a file cabinet that pinned me against the wall," said elevator superindent Bill Jackson. "It probably saved my life. I was holding my face against the wall and all I could think of was, 'I'm going to die.'"

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Lifestyle change may help

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My fiance has a bleeding ulcer which he refuses to take seriously. He is 24 and I know that he has been hospitalized in the past for vomiting blood. He doesn't have a diet, drinks beer and wine weekly and reaches for the milk bottle when he is in pain. He doesn't seem to think an ulcer is serious. I would appreciate any information you can supply as well as the type of diet he should follow.

Is it possible to arrest this condition completely through diet? I don't wish to spend my life worrying about him.

DEAR READER — It looks like you have already started worrying about him. And both of you must face the fact that once a person has an ulcer he is prone to recurrences for life. We really do not know all the factors that cause ulcers but we do know that most are related to acid digestive juices formed by the stomach.

There are many things you can do in your lifestyle to minimize the chances of recurrences of ulcer attacks and to promote healing of an ulcer if you already have one. There is a lot of debate about diet and ulcers. In severe cases, where bleeding is involved, special diets are definitely useful. In other cases the diet is not that important, as long as one observes commonsense rules such as not smoking, avoiding coffee, including decaffeinated coffee, tea and colas. Alcohol is a real no-no in any form as it stimulates the formation of acid digestive juices.

The things you can do for yourself for acidity and ulcers are discussed in more detail in The Health Letter number 15-10, Understanding Ulcers and Acidity, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Psychic stress is an important factor. The stress can come from family situations or the job. Often ulcer problems cannot be controlled unless the factors creating stress are relieved. Diet, antacids, avoiding bad habits and control of stress make managing ulcers much easier.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I was interested in your comments about sex after strokes and heart attacks. I don't agree with your statement that it is less stressful, hence safer with your mate. After 30 to 30 years of marriage a man does have much strain in reaching a climax with his wife. You see there is no longer the initial passion. With a new partner the whole thing goes smoothly and effortlessly. Working harder with your wife is a serious danger to older men. For gosh sakes, don't use my name.

DEAR READER — You are making the mistake of thinking your personal experience reflects every other man's experience. Your sample is limited to one, and that one is biased. Try to understand that some couples grow more comfortable and closer with time, which more than compensates for the changes in physical appearance that the years bring.

Good studies do show that a comfortable relaxed relationship, as in a good mature marriage, provides a situation that is less stressful to the usual man, although there are always exceptions. His measured blood pressure and heart rate, hence heart work, is less than during extramarital affairs. So I can't recommend extramarital affairs for men who have recently had heart attacks or strokes.

Dies At 88....

Bradley Was Last Of The 5-Star Generals

NEW YORK (AP) — Gen. Omar Bradley, the last of the nation's great World War II commanders and the last of its five-star generals, has died at the age of 88.

Bradley, a lanky, bespectacled Missourian who commanded U.S. invasion forces on D-Day at Normandy and was the first to chair the Joint Chiefs of Staff, suffered a heart attack Wednesday while attending a dinner at the 21 Club here and was pronounced dead shortly afterward at a hospital.

During his 69 years of active duty, the longest service of anyone in U.S. history, he commanded the largest force in U.S. history — 1.3 million men in World War II — and never lost a fight.

But, he once told a congressional committee, "as far as I am concerned, war itself is immoral."

Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr. called Bradley "a great patriot, a peerless military leader and an individual dedicated to the cause of peace in the world."

"With his passing, the army and our nation have lost one of the most devoted and selfless men to ever wear the military uniform," said Army Chief of Staff Gen. E.C. Meyer.

The Pentagon said Bradley would be buried in Arlington National Cemetery outside Washington, D.C.

Bradley, who had come to New York from his Fort Bliss, Texas, home for the dinner of the local chapter of the Association of the United States Army, collapsed in an elevator of the 21 Club, said Bruce Snyder, a club official. Accompanied by his wife, Kitty, and three aides, he was rushed in a private car to the emergency room of St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center, where doctors tried for 20 minutes to revive him. He was pronounced dead at 7:35 p.m.

A hospital spokesman said doctors listed the cause of death as "cardiac arrest." A Pentagon statement initially said Bradley died of a stroke, but officials later confirmed he had died of cardiac arrest.

Bradley was one of only five men to wear the five stars of a general of the army, a rank created during World War II and held by Gens. Dwight Eisenhower, H.H. Arnold, Douglas MacArthur and George C. Marshall. Eisenhower's death in 1969 left only Bradley still wearing the five stars.

The rank permitted the general to remain on active duty for life, but also to pursue outside interests. Bradley served for 15 years as chairman of the board of the Bulova Watch Co. after leaving the Joint Chiefs post in 1958.

Tors Looking For Loop Golf Title

ANDREWS -- Lamesa and Andrews are expected to duel out the District 2-AAAA boys golf championship at the Mustangs' home course here Friday, with little chance of any other loop members getting in on the act.

Lamesa, a state qualifier from 3-3A last year, leads the district team total with a 940 score. Andrews, passed up by the Tors just last week, is two strokes back at 942 heading into this, the final district meet of the season.

The only other team that has any chance is Sweetwater, but the red and white Mustangs are a full 33 strokes back of the leader and are not expected to pull off what would have to be considered a miracle.

The top two teams in the district advance to regionals, and since it would appear Lamesa and Andrews have those positions sewed up, all that remains to be seen is which will be crowned the champ.

Snyder is out of the running completely with a score of over 1,000. Competing for the Tigers this year are Barry Blackmon, Jim League, Steve Gressett, Kris Seale, Joe League, Jay Eiland, Steve Neeley, Lawrence McCown, John Sullivan and Jerry Bowen. Coaching the squad is Mackey Greene.

Kings, Spurs Victorious; Even Respective Series'

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - With guards Otis Birdsong and Phil Ford sidelined with injuries, Kansas City Kings Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said his team "had to play the cards dealt us" Wednesday night against the Phoenix Suns.

Subsequently, Kansas City relied on a "king" - forward Reggie King - to trump the Suns, 88-83, in their National Basketball Association playoff and square the best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal series at one game apiece.

King paired with guard Scott Wedman for 21 points in a pivotal fourth period as Kansas City recorded its first post-season victory at the Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum in six games over a three-year span.

The series shifts to Kansas City Friday night.

Phoenix hit just 29 of 43 attempts from the free throw line in the game and shot 39 percent from the floor in the first half in struggling to a 43-43 tie.

The Kings wiped out a 65-61 Phoenix lead in the opening minutes of the fourth quarter as King, Wedman and guard Ernie Grunfeld scored nine of the period's first 11 points for a 70-65 edge.

In the only other playoff game Wednesday night, the San Antonio Spurs got their running game going and beat the Houston Rockets 125-112 to tie their West semifinal at one victory apiece.

Snyder In The Running As...

District Tracksters Take To Blocks

By BILL MCCLELLAN

Sweetwater, last year's District 3-3A champion, is considered the favorite in the girls District 2-AAAA Track and Field Meet held Friday and Saturday in Andrews. Monahans should give the Lady Mustangs a run for the title however, and Odessa Ector and Snyder are in the running for top honors as well.

The annual meet begins Friday at 1 with the high jump, discus and long jump. At 3, running prelims will be held. Saturday's field events included the shot and triple jump, also at 1, followed at 3 by the running finals.

The projected finish is based on the top times (thus far this year) of the top six competitors in each event...and that may be its fallacy because upsets are not uncommon in track meets.

Sweetwater and Monahans hold the key because they have strength in numbers. Ector meanwhile, is dependant largely on doing well in all three relays, while Snyder - lacking in depth - must finish high in the limited events it has entered to place well.

SWEETWATER

Sweetwater is expected to finish 1-2 in the discus, where state qualifier Teresa West normally rules. West is also the choice in the shot, but she'll get competition here, especially from last year's runnerup Brenda Anderson of Snyder. The Lady Mustangs hope to garner 28 points from the weights alone, and are also strong in the 3200, the 400 meters and have good relays.

The relays - three of them in girls track - are the obvious road to the championship. Ector has run the fastest times in all three this season, but Sweetwater, Snyder and Monahans hope to change that.

In an effort to win the overall title, Mustang Coach Joel Nelson has made some dramatic switches in his normal lineups. He's reportedly taken out his fastest 100 and 200 meters girls, for instance - one of which had the district's fastest time - to shore up his relays.

But Sweetwater's strategy may be its undoing. If the girls do not do well in their "new" events - if they don't come through on the relays - they won't have their normal imput of points to fall back on and their point total could fall drastically.

Sweetwater's weaknesses appear to be the jumps, triple jump, long jump and high jump, and the hurdles and the 100.

MONAHANS

Monahans is knee deep in the distance events, figuring to pick up as many as 42 points in the 800 and 1600 meters alone. The Loboes also have strengths in the high jump and the relays. Numbers are an asset for Monahans, which will hope for a number of third, fourth and fifth places to make its point total bulge. Weakness are the the long jump, triple jump, shot, 100 and 200 meters.

ODESSA ECTOR

Ector could get 60 of its points in the relays alone. Obviously, a disqualification or a dropped baton will reap havoc with the Eaglettes. They are also strong in the 100 and 200 and will compete in the discus and triple jump, but are weak in the hurdles, shot, and distance races. Like Snyder, Ector is limited in numbers, and will have to finish high in several events to do well overall.

SNYDER

Coach Patty Grimmett's Felines have the potential to be extremely tough in the 100, the triple jump and the long jump. It's not inconceivable that Snyder could pick up 55 or more points in the three events together...though top times and distances turned from around the district indicate a more conservative 42.

Snyder has the fastest 100 meters runner in the loop with former state contender Pam Brown. She, Lisa Cobb and Anderson swept the sprint two weeks ago at the Canyon Reef Relays here. In addition, Snyder has discovered key jumping ability this season with Cobb and Kerstin Selmon, along with Anderson, a regional qualifier last season.

The Felines also have good strength in the shot with Anderson, as mentioned before, and hope for points from Penny Wolfe, as well. Their 400 and 800 meter relay squads are rated second and fourth in the district, and better handoffs could potentially shave previous bests even lower. Snyder falters in the 1600 and 3200 runs and discus, where it has no girls entered at all.

However, the Felines have some hidden talent that - if it comes through - could make a difference in the meet's outcome. Snyder has an opportunity to place well in the 200 meters with Michelle Townsel, Linda Walker and Andrina Kitchens, and could break into the running in the 400 with Sherry Spells, Patty Gleastine and Penny Wolfe. Gleastine and Walker are capable of bringing home points in the hurdles; ditto with Robin Huntsman and Deana Underwood in the high jump. Also, competitors can't count out Spells in the triple jump and long jump and Debra Cline in the 800 meters. Unprojected points in those events could place Snyder high in the overall finish, especially if the girls do well in the relays.

All in all, the meet promises to be one of the best girls meets in recent years, with super excitment promised in the 100 meters, the triple jump and long jump, the shot and the relays, among others.

Sweetwater's the favorite, but upset potential is there for Monahans and Snyder in particular. Don't be surprised if the Mustangs are tamed this time out.

SET FOR DISTRICT -- Snyder girls compete in the District 2-AAAA track meet Friday and Saturday in Andrews. The Felines are strong in a number of events and with a good showing in others, could possibly pull off an upset. Above, Michelle Townsel takes off in the 800 meter relay. She also runs the 200 meter dash. See related article, this page. (SDN Staff Photo)

Tigers Enter Crucial Game With Andrews

ANDREWS -- It's showdown time already in the District 2-AAAA baseball race where the undefeated Snyder Tigers take on the once-beaten Andrews Mustangs here Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Tuesday, Snyder outpounded Odessa Ector 17-13, Andrews popped Monahans 6-3 and Fort Stockton nailed Pecos 5-4 to set up the all-important clash Friday.

Snyder leads the loop with a 3-0 mark but the Mustangs are right behind at 3-1. However, losses to Ector, Monahans and Pecos have left all other district members with at least two defeats. Therefore, a Snyder victory Friday would put the Tigers ahead by two games with only two tilts left in the first round. An Andrews victory would give the Mustangs a ½ game lead over Snyder, still with one game remaining for Andrews, two for Snyder.

Snyder completes the season by hosting Pecos and traveling to winless Lamesa; Andrews by traveling to Ector.

Tuesday's outcomes leave the following slate for Friday:

Snyder (3-0, 12-7-1) is at Andrews (3-1, 9-9); Fort Stockton (2-2, 6-8) is at Lamesa (0-3, 2-12); and Monahans (1-2, 6-8) is at Pecos (1-2, 4-15). Odessa Ector (2-2, 11-7) plays non-loop foe Seminole in Seminole.

SWC Signing Top Basketball Talent

by The Associated Press

Texas Christian and Southern Methodist, two teams that struggled through the 1980-81 basketball season, both signed players to fill big gaps in their lineups on national letter of intent day.

TCU coach Jim Killingsworth signed 6-10, 230-pound post man Brian Christensen from Southwest Oklahoma Junior College in Oklahoma City.

Meanwhile, SMU coach Dave Bliss got the signature of 6-9 center John Koncak of Center High School in Kansas City, Mo. Bliss also celebrated the signing of heavily recruited Reginald Pink, a 6-4 blue-chip forward from Dallas Kimball High School who may be moved to guard in college.

Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers announced the signing of four players - 6-5 all-stater Vince Taylor of Hobbs, N.M., and 6-9 Quentin Anderson of Athens, Ala., along with 6-6 junior college All-America Charles Johnson of Midland College and 6-9 All-Stater Dwight Phillips of Levelland.

Taylor averaged 24 points and 17 rebounds and was named the Player of the Year in New Mexico in leading Hobbs to a 26-0 mark and the state championship. His older brother Jeff has lead the Red Raiders in scoring the last two years.

Baylor landed 6-5 all-state Russ Capps, who averaged 18.6 points per game in leading Clear Lake High School to a 38-2 record, 6-7 forward David Glover of Chapel Hill, N.C. High School, a member of that school's state championship team, and Waxahachie High School's James Sterns, a 6-foot guard who averaged 26 points a game while earning first team all-state honors.

Texas Coach Abe Lemons snared guard Jack Worthington who averaged 27 points, six assists and six steals per game for Spring High School.

The Houston Cougars collected a prize by signing 6-7 center-forward Gary Orsak of Alvin High School, a two-year all-district player.

Arkansas and Texas A&M did not announce any signings Wednesday.

Henry Medalist

HERMLEIGH

Hermleigh High School's Von Dale Henry took medalist honors for a second straight year last week and will compete in the April 21-22 Regional Golf Tournament in Levelland.

Henry, a junior, won the medalist spot as a sophomore last year.

Runner-up medalist was Rebecca Sipe of Trent. Trent, the only District 6-B school to field an entire girls golf team, will also represent the loop in the Regional Tournament.

Others competing for Hermleigh this year were Ann Fletcher and Melinda Roemisch.

Surprise Witness Angers Racehorse

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Austin psychiatrist Richard Coons sat perplexed on the witness stand, trying to make sense of a one hour and 20 minute hypothetical question posed by attorney J.C. "Zeke" Zbranek.

Meanwhile, attorneys carried on a battle of cliches over Coons' right to testify as a surprise witness in a child custody suit filed by Jean Daniel Murph, who is seeking custody of two children born to Vickie Daniel and the late Price Daniel Jr., the one-time Texas Speaker of the House.

"It's not only unusual, but it looks to me very much like a desperate, last-ditch attempt effort to gild the lily and put frosting on the cornbead," said Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, attorney for Mrs. Daniel.

Depression Cookbook Is Out

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Few modern cooks would return to the days of backyard hog-killings, wringing chicken necks or rending lard.

But for the curious and those who remember such once-routine, rural activities of the Depression, author Louise Blackwell Dillow has recorded them for posterity.

Her "Mrs. Blackwell's Heart of Texas Cookbook" recalls days of growing up on a farm near Corsicana when the only store-bought things were flour, salt, sugar, coffee and tea.

"My whole memory of my mother is her preparing food. She did that all day long," said the retired child welfare worker who was born fifth of nine children.

Published by Corona Publishing Co. of San Antonio, the book's first printing of 6,000 copies is being marketed only in Texas.

The project started strictly as a way to preserve family recipes.

Once on a trip home to Corsicana, Mrs. Dillow drove around to see the numerous homes she had lived in when her father was a tenant farmer. Hardly anything remained.

She and her sisters began reminiscing about their mother's well spread table and soon regretted that few family recipes were written down.

She took it from there, collaborating with an older sister, Deenie B. Carver, on the cookbook which combines anecdotes of growing up with recipes from a country kitchen.

"I don't expect people to try everything," Mrs. Dillow said during an interview on her beachfront condominium.

"Lye soap is one of the 'good ol' days' products that I've never had a hankering to go back to," she writes.

In a section on chicken, she adds, "The gizzard was a coveted piece of chicken in the Blackwell family until someone told us that eating gizzards would make a girl's breasts grow bigger."

The Blackwell family boasted seven girls and two boys.

Mrs. Dillow went off to Mary Hardin Baylor College in Belton for a bachelor's degree, attended the University of Chicago and earned a master's degree from Howard University in Washington. She worked in child welfare departments across Texas, married and reared three children in the Washington, D.C., area where her husband worked for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

They retired to this South Texas resort where he died less than a year ago.

She said she had to leave the cotton fields of North Central Texas to appreciate her childhood but she does not paint a rosy picture of the Depression.

"We knew we were poor and we didn't like it. My parents were always wanting to do better for us. We came out all right in spite of it, not because of it," she said.

Meals were cooked on a wood-burning stove and there was no electricity.

"If it got too hot in the summer, we'd get in the Model T, if we could afford the gas, and take a drive to let the breeze cool us," she remembered.

Beef could not be stored long and the family would can steaks.

"Can you imagine," she said.

Chicken was reserved for Sunday dinner. Pork was the second-favorite meat, often consumed with red-eye gravy.

Avowed Woman Hater Now Awaits Sentencing

DALLAS (AP) — A 42-year-old drifter who told horror stories of murder, necrophilia, mutilation and brutality while confessing to killing 12 women in the past nine years was found guilty of murdering three Dallas women.

Carroll Edward Cole, who testified he has killed more women than he can remember because he hated his mother, was ordered back into court today for sentencing. He faces a life prison term on each murder conviction.

Jurors deliberated just 25 minutes Wednesday before rejecting Cole's plea that he was insane when he killed Wanda Fay Roberts, Sally Ann Thompson and Dorothy King, three Dallas women he met in bars last November.

"It did not sell at all," jury foreman Betty Ann Smith said of Cole's insanity claim.

In closing arguments, Cole's attorneys described him as "a sick man ... asking for help" and urged the jury to disregard testimony from two psychiatrists that Cole was sane.

"He's not insane," countered prosecutor Mary Ludwick. "He knew exactly what he was doing ..."

Court records show the Dallas killings began one month after Cole was released from a federal prison at Springfield, Mo., where he was diagnosed as a sociopath — able to distinguish right from wrong and breaking the law by choice.

Cole told his grisly tale of a dozen murders in five states and two attempted murders when he took the stand Tuesday.

He testified about strangling women, having sex with their corpses and dismembering and cooking the flesh of a 1976 Oklahoma City victim.

Cole said he was 20 when he discovered his mother cheated on his father and that he developed the uncontrollable urge to strangle women.

"I think I kill her through them," he said.

He has also confessed to a total of nine killings in San Diego, Calif., Las Vegas, Nev., Casper, Wyo., and Oklahoma City.

In one instance, he said, he met a women in an Oklahoma City bar in November of 1976 but all he could remember was finding her dismembered body in his apartment the next morning.

"I had gotten out of bed and I was in the kitchen making coffee. Evidently, I had done some cooking the night before. There was some meat on the stove in the frying pan. I think it was human flesh," Cole testified.

"I had gone in the bathroom and found her in my bathtub and part of her buttocks was missing. The feet were gone, the hand, the arm. I found them in the refrigerator."

Cole said he cut up the body with a hacksaw and disposed of it in a dumpster outside his apartment.

Bill Requiring Tarps Advances

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texans hauling trash, rocks, sand, gravel or almost anything else in an open-bed truck would be required to cover the load with a tarpaulin under a bill that has gained tentative House approval.

The measure by Rep. Ed Emmett, R-Kingwood, advanced 108-34 Wednesday and final approval was expected today.

Emmett said anybody loading an open truck would have two choices under his bill — load it so nothing can spill out or cover the load with a tarp.

"Responsible elements in the trucking industry" support his bill, he said.

Opponents denounced it as costly but Emmett said the cost of tarping was small compared to the damage done by rocks, tree limbs and trash flying from the backs of uncovered trucks.

State law now lets trucks be loaded up to six inches below the top of the side boards, but Emmett said this is not enforceable.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said it would cost state and local taxpayers money to put "a silly old tarp" over loose loads and failed several times to amend the bill.
