Gandhi site scene of more Durban deaths

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Fighting between Indians and blacks erupted today at the Mohandas Gandhi memorial complex in Durban's black townships, witnesses said, as the unofficial death toll in the Durban riots rose to 38.

Gandhi's Phoenix Settlement became a battlefield when Indians attacked blacks temporarily living at the center, said director Mewa Ramgobin.

The settlement was set up by Gandhi, the Indian independence leader, during the 21 years he lived in South Africa developing his theories of non-violent resistance and campaigning for Indian rights.

The Indians were apparently enraged by black attacks on Indian houses in three days of rioting in the Indian Ocean port city.

Ramgobin described the fighting at a community dedicated to Gandhi's memory as a "terrible tragedy."

He said he narrowly escaped death in the fighting when he arrived at midmorning. He said children as young as 5 or 6 were trying to carry furniture and other belongings away from the fighting.

"Whether Gandhi's house was burned, I cannot say. But a large number of buildings have been burned down" at the settlement, said Dr. Farook Meer, a leader of the Natal Indian Congress founded by Gandhi in 1894, the year after he arrived in South Africa as a young lawyer.

About 70 blacks, driven from their homes in previous unrest, were living in Gandhi's former printing press building at Phoenix. They were the target of the attack by Indians from the area, said Ramgobin. The complex also included a clinic, a library and a large homestead as well as Gandhi's own modest house.

Meanwhile, in Austria a top aide to President Reagan reportedly urged the foreign minister of South Africa's white-minority government to open a dialogue with all black leaders. Foreign Minister Roelof F. Botha met with U.S. officials Thursday and today.

Botha concluded his talks with American officials and flew to West Germany for contacts there, diplomatic sources said.

The United States has withdrawn Ambassador Herman Nickel, and South Africa has called home its ambassador designate in Washington in response.

South Africa's law and order minister, Louis Le Grange, met with Gatsha Buthelezi, the conservative chief of the Zulu tribe, in Durban on Thursday and announced that police reinforcements were being sent to the city's black townships.

Durban is in Natal province, home of 6 million Zulus, South Africa's biggest tribe.

White tosses out advice on no-pass, no-play rule

AUSTIN (AP) — Hard work and help in studying — not lower standards — are the secrets to success under the no-pass, no-play rule, Gov. Mark White is telling Texas students and coaches.

"No one ever said change would be easy. And we've got some big changes to make," White said Thursday.

"All we are requesting of coaches, teachers, students and parents is to give these rules time to work and a chance to work," he added.

The no-pass, no-play rule was a key element in the school reform law enacted by the Legislature last year. It forbids students from participating in extracurricular activities, including sports, for six weeks if failing any class.

Last month, two dozen high school coaches met with White to talk about the rule, which many coaches criticize as being too tough.

But the governor told his weekly news conference Thursday he is in no mood to bend.

"I made the point clear to the coaches at that time — and I would like to make that point again so that every citizen in Texas understands — we are not going to retreat from the standards that have been set by this rule," White said.

However, White said he promised the coaches "refinements," so Thursday he issued a five-page position paper detailing his recommendations for guaranteeing the maximum number of students stay eligible.

■ Recommended procedures outlined — Page 2A

The advice calls for planning by teachers and coaches, close monitoring of students' progress, extra tutorial sessions, a buddy system in which passing athletes help teammates who face academic trouble and a "mentor system" in which an adult would work with a student.

Coaches have said the six-week suspension is too long. They say it will discourage athletes from taking tough courses and may cause more to drop out.

But the governor voiced little sympathy for such complaints.

"I'm saying this is the law, and here is the way that we would advise you to have the greatest success in compliance with it and the least amount of difficulty as far as the number of students that would be lost by failure to pass," he said.

"Educational excellence is not a shallow dream and requires the deep commitment of all of our society. I am convinced that the coaches of this state share that commitment and will guide a team effort that will push Texas education across that academic goal line."

White said he has no doubt students can cope with the rule.

"I'll guarantee you if they spend 10 percent as much time studying the course as they do practicing on the field, they'll pass the course," he said.

White — who has taken to calling it the "pass-play" rule — said his advice wasn't just for football players, although this fall will be the first high school football season to come under the must-pass requirement.

"It focuses on all extracurricular activities that would be subject to the pass-play rule," he said.

"Our job now is not to debate the merit of the standards ... Our job now is to provide every student, in every classroom, in every school in Texas the kind of assistance and support he or she needs to be a winner in the classroom, on the playing field and in life."

AT&T begins fiber-optic installation

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

They're tearing into the streets again, and this time it's not City Hall doing the digging.

It's AT&T putting in the "backbone" of a new system that will be able to handle at least three times as many calls simultaneously as the system can now manage. When completed, it will be tied into the nationwide system, which will then connect Midland with the world.

Walt Muchowski, project engineer for AT&T in Midland, explained the sides of the streets are being dug up to install a conduit that will hold the optical cable to be installed later this year. Cost for the project in Midland is $750,000.

But Midland is only a small part of a system being installed coast to coast by AT&T, according to Muchowski. The installation in Texas alone is costing about $60 million, he said.

The network will stretch from Atlanta to Dallas to Los Angeles "and from there it connects to the whole world," said Muchowski. Odessa will connect into Midland through the phone lines. And Midland's cable will connect into lines being installed in Sweetwater and El Paso.

The work should be completed in Midland Saturday, he said. But the fiber-optic cable won't be pulled through the conduit until October or November, making the system operational by January 1987. By April 1987, the system nationwide should be ready for use, he said.

Big Lake man killed in collision; One-vehicle mishap claims one

From Staff Reports

Two persons were killed in separate accidents late Thursday, a Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman reported.

According to reports, A 23-year-old Big Lake man was killed when the motorcycle he was driving collided with a guard rail on Loop 250 about 3/10 of a mile south of U.S. Highway 80.

Wesley Clark Woodfin, 23, of Big Lake was pronounced dead about midnight at Midland Memorial Hospital by Peace Justice Charles Sprayberry. The extent of Woodfin's injuries was unknown, according to reports.

The accident occurred about 11:30 p.m. Thursday when Woodfin, driving a 1983 Kawasaki motorcycle, struck a guard rail and reflector poles as he was traveling south on Loop 250 apparently at a high rate of speed, it was reported.

DPS officials also reported a one-vehicle accident 20 miles north of Midland in Martin County resulted in the death of one person.

Accident reports were unavailable pending identification of the body.

Polls open at 7 a.m. Saturday

Polls will be open 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday for registered voters in the city of Midland to voice their approval or disapproval of a long-term contract to obtain water from Stacy Dam and Reservoir.

Residents who live in the rural precincts and outside the city limits are not allowed to vote.

San Angelo and Abilene are holding similar elections Saturday. All three cities are contracting to take 16.54 percent of the yield from Stacy Dam once it is constructed. Completion is scheduled for 1990.

Two terrorist groups claim air base bombing

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Leftist terrorist groups from West Germany and France today claimed joint responsibility for the car bombing of a U.S. Air Force base that killed two Americans and injured more than 20 people.

Following Thursday's explosion, Kurt Rebmann, West Germany's chief federal prosecutor, said the Red Army Faction, a West German extremist group, was suspected in the attack.

Police identified 12 terrorists being sought in connection with the bombing that killed a U.S. airman and the wife of another serviceman.

Explosives packed into a Volkswagen sedan with forged American license plates were detonated outside the headquarters building at the Rhein-Main base Thursday morning.

This morning, The Associated Press received a letter signed by Direct Action, a French leftist extremist group, and the Red Army Faction which claimed responsibility for Thursday's bombing on behalf of the "Commando George Jackson."

Cmdr. Tom Connor, spokesman for the U.S. European Command in Stuttgart, told The Associated Press he had no comment on the claims.

Jackson, who was killed in 1971 in what authorities said was a prison break, was a militant black activist in California. Jackson and two other prison inmates became known as the "Soledad brothers," and allegedly murdered a guard at California's Soledad prison in 1970 in the aftermath of a racial brawl.

He gained a reputation as a spokesman for black militancy through the book "Soledad Brother, The Prison Letters of George Jackson."

Hans-Juergen Foerster, a spokesman for the West German federal prosecutor's office, told the AP it was the first time the two leftist groups had claimed joint responsibility for a terrorist attack. He said investigators were taking the letter seriously.

The three-page typewritten letter, postmarked in West Germany, dated Thursday and written in German, said the U.S. Rhein-Main Air Base, is "the biggest military freight base of the U.S. forces outside the USA, is a turntable for war in the Third World directed from Western Europe."

Americans freed by Nicaraguan rebel band

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — An American peace group says 20 activists and 18 reporters were freed after a day of captivity by "independent anti-communist" rebels and not by the second-largest Contra guerrilla force, which it first had blamed.

Patricia Manning of the Witness for Peace group said in Managua that the American activists and the reporters accompanying them arrived Thursday night at El Castillo after spending the day sailing down the San Juan River that divides Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

She said the boat was to leave early today for San Carlos, a town on Lake Nicaragua at the mouth of the river 125 southeast of Managua.

"The group arrived without any accident and in a good state," Ms. Manning said, adding she could not learn more about the situation because of poor radio communications.

The Witness for Peace activists are in Nicaragua to protest the Reagan administration's support for the rebels and to campaign for peace between the United States and Nicaragua, the group's Washington office said.

On Thursday, President Reagan, who has hailed the insurgents as "freedom fighters," signed a $25.4 billion foreign aid bill, providing for a resumption of nonlethal U.S. aid to the Contras.

The peace group had blamed Wednesday's abduction on the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, an anti-Sandinista rebel group commonly known as ARDE. The rebel group's leader, Eden Pastora, had threatened that his guerrillas would shoot at the activists if they made their trip.

But Witness for Peace released a transcript of a radio conversation to The Associated Press late Thursday in which an activist aboard the boat said the abductors identified themselves as "independent anti-communists" rather than members of Pastora's group.

In Washington, the State Department said a spokesman for the group in Nicargua informed U.S. officials Thursday they had been held by an independent group and not by ARDE.

ARDE consistently has denied any involvement in the incident, saying it took place in territory held by the government, and that it was a "show" put on by the Sandinistas to discredit the rebels.

In San Carlos, local Sandinista authorities on Thursday gathered school children and teachers on the docks, saying they were to welcome the American activist group. The preparations began hours before the group announced the boat had been released.

Pastora and many of his men fought with the Sandinista Front to oust former right-wing dictator Anastasio Somoza, but later broke with the new leftist government and began rebel actions from bases in Costa Rica, on Nicaragua's southern border.

The largest rebel force operates out of bases in Honduras, along the northern border.

On Wednesday, another Witness spokeswoman, Sharon Hostetler, said the activists had radioed that Nicaraguan rebels were firing on their boat from Costa Rica.

Texas priest with captives

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Carmelite priest from San Antonio reportedly was among 47 people taken captive along the Nicaragua-Costa Rica border, then released 24 hours later, local religious leaders said.

The Rev. Peter Hinde, 61, was working as a freelance writer for Sojourner magazine when he and his companions reportedly were abducted Wednesday.

Hinde was among 18 journalists traveling with 29 volunteers for the Witness for Peace group when the travelers were taken captive, reportedly by U.S.-backed rebels.

Hinde's name did not appear on the initial list of captives released by Witness for Peace of Washington.

But Curt Wands, a spokesman for the group, said Thursday Hinde was one of the journalists on the trip. The names of writers among the captives had not been released.

Administration ready to resume aid to Nicaragua rebels

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is preparing to resume direct aid to rebels fighting to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist government amid renewed allegations that White House officials never stopped assisting the insurgents even after Congress cut off funds a year ago.

President Reagan on Thursday signed a $25.4 billion foreign aid bill for 1986 and 1987, saying he was "particularly pleased" that the bill provides $27 million in non-lethal assistance for the estimated 15,000 Nicaraguan Contra rebels — an aid resumption cleared by Congress last month.

The bill signing came as White House spokesman Larry Speakes denied that officials of the president's National Security Council had violated "the spirit or the letter" of laws restricting U.S. military aid to the Contras.

According to published accounts by The Associated Press and The New York Times, NSC officials provided advice on how the rebels could raise money.

DURBAN

A spokesman at Durban's King Edward VIII Hospital said 16 more people were dead on arrival at the hospital from Thursday afternoon to this morning, in addition to 19 the previous day, and another 157 wounded.

The Durban Daily News said other victims were dead on arrival at Prince Mshiyeni Hospital in Umlazi township or taken to mortuaries, bringing the total to 38 in two days of rioting.

The rioting erupted during protests over the assassination last week of prominent black civil rights lawyer Victoria Mxenge outside her home in Umlazi township. About 7,000 people attended a peaceful memorial service for her Thursday night in Durban.

Roaming gangs burned down government buildings, stoned cars and police patrols and looted shops in the black townships throughout the day and night, news reports said. Police responded with shotgun fire, rubber bullets and tear gas.

But reporters said that as soon as police dispersed a crowd and departed, the youths regrouped and resumed their attacks.

The unrest was the bloodiest in five months, and among the worst in nearly a year of rioting that has left more than 500 blacks dead. Durban's Natal Province had stayed relatively calm, and was not covered by a state of emergency proclaimed July 20 in 36 riot-torn cities and towns, until this week.

The government imposed nighttime curfews Thursday in 11 black townships of the eastern Cape Province and other restrictions in the Johannesburg area on school students to curtail boycotts.

Meer said about 1,500 Indian people had fled their homes in Inanda and Phoenix, buffer zones on the edge of the Kwa-Mashu black township about 12 miles north of Durban, during three days of rioting. The government ordered police reinforcements to Durban's townships Thursday.

Meer stressed that black rioters had not singled out Indians as targets in the rioting, and had also attacked and looted black homes and businesses.

"This is essentially the work of hooligans, criminals taking advantage of people's genuine protests over legitimate grievances," he said.

Meer, a senior member of the anti-apartheid United Democratic Front coalition, added that government supporters were trying to exploit the rioting to undermine the anti-apartheid movement and the growing solidarity between black and Indian foes of white rule.

Curnick Ndlovu, the national chairman of the front, was detained by security police Wednesday afternoon in Durban, Meer said, under security legislation allowing indefinite detention without charge.

BOMB

The letter continued: "The air base is a secret service nest. Here stand computers, airplanes, helicopters ready for missions by the Special Forces."

"We attacked the Rhein-Main Air Base today with the Commando George Jackson," the letter said.

The Red Army Faction is an anarchist group that has terrorized West Germany with bombings and assassinations for more than a decade. It frequently has directed attacks at U.S. facilities.

Police said they were looking for the terrorist gang's hideouts in the area, and security was tightened at the base, located about six miles from Frankfurt.

The West German Federal Criminal Office, in a telex to news organizations, identified 12 alleged Red Army Faction members being sought in connection with the bombing. It said the bombing may be connected to the theft of explosives from a gravel company in southern West Germany last month.

The U.S. military's European Command headquartes identified one of the dead as Airman 1st Class Frank H. Scarton, 19, of Woodhaven, Mich. The military said in a telex that Scarton, a member of the 437th Military Airlift Wing, was on temporary duty at Rhein-Main.

Scarton's father, Frank, said his son was a supply specialist who entered the Air Force after graduating from high school in 1983. He said he never imagined his son would be in danger.

"I really never gave it much thought," he said. "I'm just sorry it happened. I'm just glad he died serving his country."

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Maj. Richard L. Ziegler identified the other victim as Becky Jo Bristol, the wife of Senior Airman John R. Bristol, who is assigned to the Aero-Medical Airlift Squadron at the base.

Ziegler did not know how old she was, and said her last home of record was San Antonio, Texas.

The U.S. military said at least 20 people had been treated and released at the Rhein-Main clinic following the blast. It identified two who remained hospitalized as Senior Airman Mathias M. Reams, 22, of Goldsboro, N.C., and Barbara Reuter, a West German employee of the base.

Delta given outdated weather report

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The cockpit crew of Delta Air Lines Flight 191 never got a report that clouds associated with violent thunderstorms were seen near the airport where the plane crashed last week, an investigator says.

The National Transportation Safety Board team looking into the accident planned to question tower personnel today about weather information given the L-1011's pilot as the jet approached Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport last Friday, said Rudolf Kapustin, the staff investigator in charge.

Kapustin revealed Thursday that the Delta crew had received a recorded forecast that was more than an hour old from the airport's Automated Terminal Information Service before the crash that killed 133 people.

Pilots are instructed to tune in broadcasts from the service as they pass into airspace controlled by the local airport's tower, he said.

About 15 minutes before the 6:08 p.m. crash, an airport weather observer noted cumulonimbus clouds north of the airport, Kapustin said.

The clouds often are associated with thunderstorms, and investigators believe the one Friday may have contained violent downbursts of wind, called wind shears, that could have led to the crash.

Investigators have said the cloud was not of a typical shape that would automatically warn the pilot of its violent possibilities.

Kapustin, however, doubted that an updated forecast would have gotten to Flight 191's crew.

"They had changed over to approach control frequency, and even if it had been updated ... they would not have received it," he said.

The weather observer's remarks about the cloud formation reached the airport control tower at 5:52 p.m., after controllers there had begun to guide the jet toward Runway 17-L.

"If there had been any significant development of any weather that would concern the control personnel, they would have put advisories out or requested pilot reports," Kapustin said.

A routine advisory given Flight 191 as it was cleared to land four minutes before the crash only noted winds from the east at 5 knots with gusts to 15 knots, he added.

Farm worker union leaders to use ruling in fight for better conditions

AUSTIN (AP) — Farm worker union organizers plan to use picket power granted by a federal judge to step up their fight for higher wages and better working conditions in West Texas.

"It really opens up a whole new chapter in the struggle of the farm workers," union leader Jesus Moya said of U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson's ruling.

The Amarillo judge Wednesday threw out seven state laws restricting picketing. She said the laws violated free speech. Included were statutes barring "mass picketing" by requiring at least 50 feet between picketers.

The Texas AFL-CIO on Thursday called the decision "the most significant labor-management ruling in Texas in at least 20 years."

AFL-CIO Communications Director John Rogers said in Austin, "It probably gives service employees unions a major, major boost in organizing."

"We are going to see a lot more picketing and strikes," said Rebecca Harrington of Austin, Texas director of the United Farm Workers.

But growers and a major farm group criticized the ruling as giving too much freedom to union organizers. The result could be a "California" atmosphere in the fields, according to Keith Garrison, director of farm labor programs for the Texas Farm Bureau in Waco.

"That atmosphere contributed to a lot of violence. All kinds of violent acts resulted during organizing activities," he said.

"I was shocked," said Wes Fisher, a Hereford grower whose firm was a party to the court fight. "Good Lord, that leaves the door wide open for them to walk all over us. A lot of the growers are getting out of the vegetable business.

"It's going to screw up our right-to-work" guarantees, Fisher said in a telephone interview from his West Texas office.

Texas' right-to-work law forbids union membership as a condition of employment.

Ms. Robinson's ruling ended a bitter dispute between vegetable growers and union organizers that began five years ago in an onion field. Moya, now director of the International Union of Agricultural and Industrial Workers, was a key leader in the 1980 strikes that sparked the court fight.

"This is not just a victory for farm workers. It's also a victory for all other workers in the state of Texas," he said in a Thursday telephone interview from Hereford.

Soliciting lawyers 'should be punished'

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawyers who solicit business from the families of those killed in the crash of Delta Flight 191 should be punished, Gov. Mark White says.

"Should they violate our law here in Texas, I would urge the state bar to take prompt action to enforce it," said White, himself a lawyer.

The crash last week at the Dallas-Fort Worth airport killed 133.

The governor's comments followed a news reports Thursday that said the Dallas County district attorney's office and the State Bar of Texas were investigating a California law firm.

Quoting unnamed sources, the Dallas Times Herald said Melvin Belli's San Francisco firm — which set up shop at the hotel where victims' families are being housed — has been accused of seeking clients to sue Delta.

"We don't need to go out and stir up litigation. We don't contact people; they contact us," added Caesar Belli, an attorney and Melvin's son.

Under the 1973 Texas barratry law, attorneys are forbidden to solicit clients.

Without commenting on specific cases, the governor said it is fine with him if lawyers in Dallas were contacted by victims' relatives. But he said they better not try to drum up business.

"If they were called there at the request of the individual, then certainly that's the appropriate way for the relationship to be initiated. If these lawyers were the ones that initiated the contact, then there are ways in which they can be reprimanded," White said.

"I am closely monitoring the situation," he said.

If any lawyers are found violating the barratry law, White added, "I am hopeful...there will be prosecution involved."

White had visited the crash site on Saturday, and Thursday told his weekly news conference he was impressed with the job emergency workers did.

"I think that the public and private sectors responded swiftly," he said.

"One of the functions of the governor's office is to help coordinate emergency response. I am satisfied they did an outstanding job in responding to the emergency, minimizing death and injury, helping those who were injured."

Weinberger: MX missile will survive 'one way or another'

Weinberger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger doesn't think the MX nuclear missile program is dead, even though Congress recently cut in half the number of missiles the Reagan administration can build.

"We need more than 50 MX," Weinberger told reporters Thursday. "We've said all along that the minimum number of MX we would need would be 100."

Weinberger said, "I am hopeful that one way or the other," Congress "will agree to deployment of the full 100."

President Reagan and Weinberger said the weapons are needed for deployment in existing Minuteman silos to offset increasing Soviet land-based nuclear arsenals.

But Congress, unhappy with the basing plan, has limited deployment in silos to no more than 50 and said any others must be based in a different way.

However, more than 30 basing plans have been studied and rejected and congressional critics of the MX say the current cap means the program will end at 50.

"We're doing work on examining a number of different modes" for basing, Weinberger said during the luncheon session. "We will tell them some other mode."

NATION

Instead of giving the administration what it wanted on MX, Congress has ordered increased spending on the so-called "Midgetman," the single-warhead weapon designed as a successor to the much-criticized 10-warhead MX.

Weinberger noted recent limits on Midgetman's weight that have been set by Congress and said, "It's difficult to deal with congressional design of a missile."

Cost estimates for Midgetman are also rising, with some projections of $50 billion for the total program.

"It's fair to point out that it's an expensive missile," Weinberger said, "But I can't really give any kind of figures" because the weapon is still in its design stages. No deployment is planned until at least 1992.

Besides defending MX, Weinberger also stood behind the administration's "Star Wars" research program into a futuristic missile shield.

Many opponents "will say you can't do it because they don't want to do it and they think there's something wrong with it," Weinberger said, adding that he personally doesn't "have very much doubt that we can do this."

Reagan's program, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative, touched off a nationwide debate after its introduction two years ago. Some critics said it should be dropped because it was so technologically difficult that it couldn't be achieved.

Some opposition has also arisen recently on college campuses, where much of the work is being done by scientists bankrolled by the Pentagon.

Weinberger said "the fact that some people who play with computers say they don't think it can be done is not nearly of as much concern to me as it would be if Congress said you must stop all work on it."

"I suggest that a lot of the opposition is also on ideological grounds" rather than scientific data, Weinberger said.

He explained that "you also have a lot of people who think it's a very workable thing. I also can give you a very large list of predictions by eminent scientists that have not come true."

Bribes 'common' for agents of defense firms

By RALPH VARTABEDIAN
Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — John Power, who runs a small Southern California defense factory, has seen the military spending boom create new business opportunities in his industry — but not all of the type that the Pentagon has in mind.

Crooked purchasing agents at major aerospace firms have established their own growth industry, Power said, one based on taking cash kickbacks and expensive gratuities in exchange for awarding Pentagon subcontracts.

"There is a lot of corruption, both at the buyers and management level," he said. "There are a lot of honest buyers. But there are those who ask for money and those who quietly hint they'll not be offended by your offer."

Such outspoken remarks are unusual for someone in Power's position, but they confirm a growing perception in defense and law enforcement circles that kickbacks have become entrenched in the purchasing end of the defense industry and threaten the integrity of the military procurement system.

"Corrupt schemes in this area are a significant problem," Attorney General Edwin Meese III told the Los Angeles Times. "The problem is one of our principal areas of focus in...protecting taxpayers against predatory economic crimes."

Subcontractors have footed $25,000 liquor bills to keep buyers supplied. They have paid for buyers' European vacations and work-day golf outings at posh country clubs. One buyer's home mortgage was paid in exchange for an important contract award, according to industry officials.

In the most dramatic recent action against such illicit payments, 10 purchasing agents and executives at the Southern California defense firms of Hughes Aircraft, Northrop and Teledyne were charged in federal court with taking $100,000 worth of cash kickbacks over a period of several months. Within the last several months, nine of the 10 have pleaded guilty.

The 10 represent only a fraction of the more than half a million employees in the huge defense industry and only a small number of those involved in purchasing activities. Although many buyers are unswervingly ethical, U.S. Attorney William Bonner of Los Angeles said those charged represent only the "tip of the iceberg." The practice of paying outright cash bribes and kickbacks is "widespread" throughout the industry, he said.

Some industry executives believe that the problem needs to be faced head-on. "We fear that it is widespread," said Tom B. Carvey, Hughes vice president for corporate materiel. "We have had eight employees indicted....We are very concerned."

The Department of Defense is investigating alleged bribery schemes at seven other major defense firms, which are among 45 contractors under criminal investigation for various reasons, according to a list recently released by congressional sources. In addition, the FBI has an unspecified number of other bribery investigations under way.

Many industry officials say the recent activity in this area makes the problem appear more pervasive than it actually is. The recent indictments in Southern California and other allegations are exceptions in a business that is honest and committed to the public interest, they say.

"I resent the hell out of the allegation that corruption is widespread in this industry," said H. David Crowther, vice president of Lockheed Corp. "I maintain that absolutely is not the case....Everybody thinks this industry is fair game for their shots."

Industry officials note that their own firms in many cases are the victims of bribery and kickback schemes. "When a buyer accepts a kickback, it is Lockheed they are hurting," Crowther said. "The first and primary damage is to the corporation."

At the same time, corporations have a duty to protect the reputation of honest employees until proof of a crime is in hand, Hughes' Carvey said, noting that disgruntled vendors who lose contracts sometimes make false allegations that a buyer took a bribe.

"This is a very competitive business," he said. "A salesman who has lost a sale may tell his boss, 'Well, we lost that sale because that guy over at Hughes is taking kickbacks from the other guy.' It is very important to us to protect our people from false and spurious accusations."

Hughes has begun a major effort to ensure the integrity of its purchasing activities and was among the first contractors to cooperate closely with law enforcement authorities.

FAA adds sky marshals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stepping up efforts to foil terrorist hijackings, the Federal Aviation Administration has quietly assigned more armed marshals to ride aboard U.S. airliners, industry officials say.

For many years, the FAA's security agents were assigned to ride airlines only when officials had information about hijacking threats.

But since the June 14 hijacking of TWA Flight 847 in the Middle East, FAA agents "have stepped up their activity," John Mazor, a spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association, said Thursday.

Mazor said the association does not keep track of the frequency of air marshal missions. But another industry source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said, "There are some limited numbers that have been flying."

FAA spokesman John Leyden said new agents are being recruited and trained under orders issued by Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole following the 17-day hijacking ordeal in which 39 Americans were held hostage in Beirut.

In June, Mrs. Dole asked Congress for authority to spend more money to expand the air marshal program, Leyden said.

Reagan OKs $24.5 million for Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, hailing new funding for Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government, has signed a $25.4 billion foreign aid bill.

"I am particularly pleased that the Congress approved the renewal of aid to the Nicaraguan freedom fighters," Reagan said Thursday before he signed the measure, which authorizes $12.7 billion in foreign aid for each of the next two years.

Over that period, the bill authorizes $27 million in non-lethal assistance to the guerrillas battling Nicaragua's leaders. It also bars either the Central Intelligence Agency or the Defense Department from administering the money.

The administration will have to find another agency to handle the program.

At a brief Oval Office ceremony and photo session, Reagan said he found it "disappointing" that the bill provides less military assistance than he requested for U.S. allies.

He said the cuts, along with trimming of his requests for the Defense Department, will reduce U.S. effectiveness in the foreign policy arena.

But the president, noting the pressures to cut the budget and a "general lack of enthusiasm for foreign aid," applauded Congress' efforts in passing the legislation.

In his statement, Reagan also lauded the provisions providing for the repeal of the Clark amendment of 1976, which barred U.S. aid to anti-government guerrillas in Marxist-controlled Angola.

The bill marked the first time since 1981 that both houses of Congress were able to agree on foreign aid spending authority. Attempts at passage always broke up over policy disputes, forcing the Reagan administration to use stopgap financing measures for foreign aid.

The bill Reagan signed into law includes spending authority of $3 billion for Israel for each of the two years, plus a single injection of $1.5 billion in emergency economic aid. Egypt will get $2.1 billion for each year plus $500 million in emergency economic aid.

As approved by Congress late last month, the measure froze foreign aid spending at the levels approved for fiscal 1985, which ends Sept. 30. The administration had asked for $13.2 billion for each of the two years.

In an attempt to put pressure on the Philippine government of President Ferdinand Marcos, economic over military aid is emphasized. The $180 million aid package — $110 million in economic aid and $70 million in military help — is tied to continued U.S. use of Philippine air and naval facilities.

The bill also provides $5 million a year to the non-communist resistance in Cambodia.

The signing ceremony came after Reagan had lunch with Vice President George Bush.

Weighty book explains cut in paperwork

Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is letting Congress and the public know just what it's been doing to reduce federal paperwork — with a new 616-page government publication on sale for $21 a copy.

The book, called "Regulatory Program of the United States Government," marks the first time all the government's planned major regulatory actions have been gathered together under one cover, President Reagan said in submitting the document to Congress on Thursday.

The book is the result of an executive order Reagan signed last January giving the White House Office of Management and Budget the authority to review all proposed new regulations by federal agencies and to weed out ones deemed to be "intrusive and burdensome."

Existing government regulations on businesses and individuals fill 200 volumes — or 20 feet of bookshelf space — Reagan told Congress.

"My goal remains to have a government that regulates only where necessary and as efficiently and fairly as possible," the president said.

However, critics claimed that the new program — with the budget office passing advance judgment on regulations — vests too much authority in the agency.

"The new regulatory planning process allows OMB to control virtually all federal agency policies and activities without public knowledge or involvement," said Gary D. Bass, executive director of OMB Watch, a private, non-profit watchdog organization.

And Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, said that, under the new program, "the American people have been disenfranchised from the intended fair, open and honest process of regulatory government."

Vice President George Bush, appointed by Reagan in 1981 to oversee the paperwork-reduction process, told a news confernce he was "puzzled" by congressional criticism of the program.

Bush denied that the program usurped congressional oversight responsibilties. "Stripped to its essentials, the program does no more or less than improve the ability of an elected president to discuss what is going on in the executive branch with his Cabinet appointees," Bush said.

The thick book can be ordered from the Government Printing Office.

It contains a summary of regulations that 17 major federal agencies will issue within the next year — regulations that all bear the OMB's stamp of approval.

Sex-offender well traveled

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A well-traveled sex offender is back home in California after he was banished from Florida in a replay of a coast-to-coast odyssey that has rankled authorities in both states.

Weston Hill, 44, flew in Thursday with a promise to behave and his lawyer in tow to help him resettle in the state that exiled him in March.

Hill was sent to Florida by Police Chief James Keane of Santa Monica, who bought him a one-way ticket to Miami. He had been arrested several times, most recently Feb. 18 for investigation of lewd conduct in a woman's bathroom.

Shortly after his arrival in Florida, Hill was arrested on a charge of indecent exposure. The incident touched off a cross-country feud between the two states.

When Hill appeared to face the charge, Dade County Circuit Judge Gerald Kline gave him a choice of jail or a one-way plane ticket to Los Angeles. And back to California he went.

Hill arrived at Los Angeles International Airport and told waiting reporters he intends to lead a lawful life.

"Does Ronald Reagan get this much publicity?" he asked.

He said that the publicity he is getting "could work into something helpful and help me into stabilizing my life."

"I have a good singing voice and perhaps I'll feel it significant to my future to try to be a gospel singer," Hill said, adding that he also wanted to be a body builder.

"I am not a sick person or a criminal," he said. "I should have the right to relax in society...I have not had that possibility for many years."

Vote Saturday

Typically before an election, the Reporter-Telegram uses this space to urge Midland voters to be certain to go to the polls on election day to cast their ballots. Not uncommonly, the Reporter-Telegram also recommends the position it believes voters should take on any particular issue to be determined in the balloting.

In those editorials, we usually stress the importance of participation in the electoral process, citing the cherished role of the voter in keeping this shining example of self-government alive and smoothly functioning.

It isn't unusual when we bemoan the lackadaisical attitude exhibited by the majority of Americans in general or Midlanders in particular where the right to vote is concerned. It's simply our belief that this system of government should be safeguarded for future generations, so that our society will pass along to the next generation this sacred trust which once lost might well remain outside the common man's grasp for eternity.

Today we'll not stress the particular importance of Saturday's election to determine whether Midland will participate in the Stacy Reservoir project — and, thus, be eligible to receive 15,000-acre-feet of water per year from the impoundment. To do so would be futile anyway. Every Midlander aware of the world around him surely recognizes the vital importance to the future growth and stability of the city to have a plentiful and dependable supply of water. Water truly is the one natural resource no community of people can be without for any length of time without suffering dire consequences and if the city continues to grow and diversify its industrial base, as we all should hope it would, eventually it will need the water from Stacy.

The Stacy Reservoir project is a dream come true for Midland and all of dry West Texas. Yet the long years of waiting for this lake project to be approved could be meaningless to Midland if — for some reason — voters were to reject participation in the Stacy project.

Even as important as the upcoming election is, we'll not go so far as to classify it more important than any other election. Why? Simply because the right to vote and to have a voice in the operation of one's own government is the greatest of all liberties. Nothing exceeds it. Thus every election that is held in this city, state or nation has special meaning, and none should be considered of less importance than any other.

Please make plans to vote Saturday. It's your privilege and your duty.

Another View:
The third 'legacy'

Forty years ago, at 8:15 a.m., Aug. 6 became the best of days and the worst of days.

The best of days because in less than a week the first use of a nuclear weapon brought an end to nearly four years of war in which tens of thousands of Americans died threading their way across the Pacific to a point where the worst was yet to come — an invasion of Japan.

The worst of days because that was when the human race learned to play with fire, the fire of the sun itself — a monumental achievement of science that came to haunt the victory and taunt the survivors of what author Studs Turkel calls "The Good War." The worst of days because it is not in the nature of politics and science to let well enough alone, but to keep experimenting to make the fire hotter, as with thermonuclear warheads, and its application easier, as with missiles capable of spinning off as many as 40 of those warheads in a single mission. The worst of days because Josef Stalin simply nodded when Harry S. Truman said that he had a new and deadly weapon in the wings, never letting on that he had told Soviet scientists in 1943 to get cracking on a nuclear bomb of their own. The nuclear-arms race had started before the first bomb exploded.

It was not mere death that burned Hiroshima into the world's memory. Months before the Enola Gay flung open the doors of the gates of hell, as many people died in Tokyo in conventional firebombings as were killed by that first atomic bomb. Scores of wars and uprisings and police-state repressions since then have brought death as final and as agonizing as any at Hiroshima. What made Hiroshima different was the dreadful suddenness of it, and the knowledge that it could happen again, anywhere.

Looking back, there was an innocence about the command to use the bomb; about President Eisenhower's decision in the 1950s to expand the country's reliance on nuclear fire to preserve peace without building a military force that he feared would bankrupt the country; about America's belief that it had a monopoly on the weapon.

The innocence is long gone. The nuclear weapons are not, nor are the political animosities and the absence of the phrase "live and let live" in the Soviet Union's ideological lexicon that are the driving forces in the relentless pursuit of new nuclear technologies in the name of national security.

Hiroshima and the utter helplessness of victims who heard a mistaken all-clear siren one second and watched their world end the next is one legacy of World War II on which Americans agree. Not again, memory says. American memory also demands keeping the country's guard high enough to prevent a surprise assault like the one at Pearl Harbor that led inevitably to Hiroshima.

Both lessons have dictated the investments of science and resources in this country for 40 years, matched by the Soviet Union, step by painful step. They have produced military stalemate but no softening of an accumulation of political grievances and suspicion of motives that led to the investments in the first place.

This autumn, President Reagan and Mikhail S. Gorbachev will meet to discuss those grievances and suspicions. To be useful, the meeting must go beyond arms control to the political antagonisms that made the arms necessary in the first place. It may not be possible to find common ground. But the fact that the two leaders will make the effort is a third legacy of Hiroshima.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

Forty years ago — on August 9, 1945 — the United States dropped its second atomic bomb on Japan, destroying part of the city of Nagasaki. An estimated 74,000 people died either from the blast or its after-effects. Nagasaki was not the original target; heavy clouds prevented the bombing of Kokura in northern Kyushu.

On this date:

In 1974, President Richard M. Nixon's resignation took effect. Vice President Gerald R. Ford became the nation's 38th chief executive.

Today's birthdays: Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., is 64. Comedian-director David Steinberg is 43. Actor Sam Elliott is 41. Boxer Ken Norton is 40.

Thought for today: "The mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation." — from "Walden," by Henry David Thoreau (1817-1862).

Military malpractice suits still taboo

WASHINGTON — Recent disclosures might lead a cynic to say that military medicine is to medicine what military music is to music. Testimony before Congress not only has laid out cases of incompetence by military doctors, but has deplored the fact that members of the armed services are not allowed to bring malpractice suits against military physicians.

Jack Anderson

Legislation is now pending in the House that would overrule a 1950 Supreme Court decision, which forbade military malpractice suits in the absence of "clear" congressional approval.

The Defense Department is fighting the proposed law, on grounds that if service personnel are allowed to sue for bad medical treatment, the floodgates could be opened, allowing suits for virtually anything — from harsh words by a first sergeant to wrongful death caused by an incompetent officer's commands.

The result, Pentagon philosophers say, would be a breakdown in the discipline that is the bedrock of the military system.

But James Magill, assistant director of the lobbying arm of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, doesn't see it that way. The proposed law, he said, "will have no adverse effect on the morale of U.S. servicemen." The VFW doesn't see why service personnel should be second-class citizens concerning the right to file malpractice suits.

Two tragedies uncovered by our reporter Mark Woolley show why military men and women need the protection civilians have against medical incompetence:

— On March 1, 1984, Air Force T-Sgt. Albert Branch checked into the emergency room at Moffett Naval Air Base in California, complaining of dizziness, weakness and shortness of breath. Though he had a mildly tender abdomen, he was treated only for hyperventilation — given a suppository, made to breathe into a paper bag and sent home. Branch was told to go on sick call the next morning, but he never made it. He collapsed at home and was taken by ambulance to a civilian hospital, where he died shortly after admission.

An autopsy revealed that the previously healthy sergeant had died of an intestinal obstruction, caused by the bowel twisting around itself. An official military investigation concluded that Branch's condition was misdiagnosed by the emergency room doctor, and that this may have caused his death. But Branch's family never got a penny of compensation — and the physician was never disciplined.

— On Jan. 17, 1974, Jerry Meagher, a Navy electronics technician, went into the Balboa Naval Hospital in San Diego to have a cyst removed from his left arm. During surgery, complications developed and Meagher's heart stopped. No trauma unit was called until three hours later, and though Meagher was revived, he was given the last rites.

Hospital records show that Meagher was resuscitated within five minutes, which would normally mean that there would be no brain damage. But Meagher is now a severely brain-damaged quadriplegic. He gets 100 percent disability of $3,500 a month, but his parents pay an additional $800 a month for his 24-hour nursing care. No disciplinary action was taken against either of the two doctors involved in Meagher's operation.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., who is pushing the bill that would give military personnel the right to sue for malpractice, explained: "This bill is not an indictment of all military physicians. We just want to weed out the bad apples."

UNDER THE DOME: The recent House vote to lop $6.6 billion from the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp. came as no surprise to Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla. The longtime critic of the Synfuels boondoggle had a press release ready for distribution as soon as the vote was tallied. Actually, the lopsided, 3-to-1 vote against Synfuels wasn't as easy as it looked; Synar has been fighting for two years to get rid of the agency. The Senate must still go along with the death sentence, of course. If it does, it will be the biggest single spending cut approved by Congress this year.

POLITICAL POSTSCRIPT: Sources close to Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., say he's tired of the Senate after 23 years. The only big challenge left for him is the presidency. But he's much too shrewd to just plunge into the race. Intimates expect him to test the waters first. If he decides not to run, he probably won't announce it until after the 1986 elections. If he decides to make another bid for president, he'll keep quiet until late 1987.

Will city get water?

If Midland voters authorize our city government to enter into the Stacy Dam project, what if:

(1) Our partners in the project (which I understand will be Abilene, San Angelo, Odessa, Big Spring, Snyder, possibly other West Texas cities and the Colorado River Municipal Water District) can't agree on the details (mainly sharing of expenses and costs) of later constructing an expensive pipeline and water treatment facility in order that Midland can get any water from the dam?

(2) After the dam is constructed and we can't arrive at an agreement of sharing further costs, will our $11 million obligation (estimated) to the Stacy Dam construction be refunded by the CRMWD, or will such money be forfeited?

Also, if Midland voters authorize our city government to enter into the Stacy Dam project, are we obligated thereby to pay for 16.54% of the water from the dam even though we may find that we can't get the water because of our inability to arrive at some agreement with our partners in the project concerning costs?

Should Midland voters vote "yes" on the issue and then we have some dispute with out "partners" which results in our not being able to have actual access to the water in Stacy Dam, are we being "suckers" by then having to pay for water thereafter being utilized by downstream users and others that are able to obtain actual use of such water?

Perhaps Midland voters should hold up giving our city government a carte blanche vote until we are able to first make some type of binding agreement with our "partners" in this proposed project.

Ordination not covered

I wish to protest the poor news coverage of the July 26th ordination of Bishop Michel Pfier of the Catholic Diocese of San Angelo. Between July 25th and July 28th, only the Reporter-Telegram gave this story any notice. And even the MR-T's treatment of the story was poor.

On July 26th, the MR-T ran a reprint of the details of the Friday night ordination service found in last week's West Texas Angelus, the diocese's weekly newspaper, and one picture run on Page 13-A! Was the same which appeared in Saturday's, July 27th, San Angelo Standard-Times.

Now is that fair? If you think if any of Midland-Odessa's news leaders on TV thought Bishop Pfier's ordination was a big story then guess again. During the 6 p.m. edition of "Big 2 News" on Mike and Becky's show, the big story was a feature on a donkey. Nothing was said on News Center 7 or Eyewitness News either. So, Mr. Brian Olson, your station does miss a story of local importance.

I'm a good Christian and a student of the news industry, so I have an idea what is and what isn't news. I think that the ordination of a bishop merits more attention than a jackass. Can somebody prove me wrong?

Cyclists' deaths illustrate need

I feel there is a need for a campaign or a city ordinance against bicycling on main thoroughfares. While bicyclists may stay to the right, they are still far enough in the lane to cause a passing car to have to move into the left lane. This has caused many accidents.

A couple of months ago, I was visiting in your city and a biking event was being held, and prior to that one of the organizers and another person were killed on their bicycles, I believe on the loop. This was very tragic and sad. I know many people in Midland were deeply touched by this loss. However, it is also sad for a person to go through life living with the fact that they have caused someone's death. But all of us do know that the bicycles present a definite hazard on busy streets and should be restricted to residential areas for the safety of us all.

I have seen here in Austin this choice: Hitting a bicyclist or an 18-wheeler. What would you do?

CHARLEY REESE
Caribbean being readied as a 'war zone'

Here is the military situation in the Caribbean which you might want to file away in your memory as U.S. policy for that area is debated.

Charley Reese

Keep in mind when you hear donkeys bray that no Caribbean nation is a threat to U.S. security that they are playing lawyer games with your mind in order to confuse you. What they mean is that no Caribbean nation, including Cuba, has the resources to mount an invasion of the United States on its own.

That's true. Nobody has ever suggested otherwise. Cuba's military assets would become a threat to U.S. security only in the event of a war with the Soviet Union. Nicaragua's military assets are aimed at communizing Central America with the ultimate goal of communizing Mexico.

I would like to hear these donkeys claim that Mexico, with 75 million people, under a communist dictatorship allied with the Soviet Union would not be a threat to U.S. security.

Cuba, if you will glance at a map, lies like a Soviet aircraft carrier astride the entrances to the Gulf of Mexico. To get in or out of the Gulf of Mexico, ships must sail either between Cuba and the Florida Keys or between Cuba and the Yucatan Peninsula.

Forty-five percent of all U.S. foreign trade and 55 percent of all U.S. oil imports come through these narrow waters on either side of Cuba.

Now you may begin to see why the Soviet Union has shipped to Cuba over 430,000 tons of military equipment since 1970 and more than half of that since 1980. Inside Cuba, the Soviets have 7,000 civilian advisers, a 2,800-man combat brigade, another 2,800 military advisers, and 2,100 technicians at the Lourdes electronic intelligence facility.

Cuba has 160,000 active duty military personnel, about 135,000 well-trained reservists who could be mobilized in two or three days. This exceeds the active duty forces of Brazil, a country with 13 times Cuba's population. Cuba has more than 950 tanks and more than 200 jet fighters, principally MiG-21s and MiG-23s. Cuba also has a sizeable navy with frigates, submarines and missile/torpedo boats plus the capability of moving 15,000 combat troops anywhere within the Caribbean in a matter of days.

That's the stuff we know about. In addition, some of the first international terrorist training camps in the world were set up in Cuba in 1966 and have been operating ever since. Cuban forces are in Nicaragua, the Congo, Angola, Mozambique, Ethiopia, and South Yemen.

Soviet naval forces regularly deploy to Cuba for joint maneuvers and Soviet long-range reconnaissance aircraft fly out of Cuba to shadow U.S. naval forces, including subs.

When the Sandinistas took over Nicaragua they got all of Anastasio Somoza's National Guard equipment — three tanks, 25 armored cars, seven helicopters, and three artillery pieces. This gives you an idea of the normal Central American level of military armaments.

Today, the Sandinistas have 340 tanks and other armored vehicles, more than 70 long-range howitzers and rocket launchers, and 30 helicopters, including six of the world's fastest, the Mi-24/Hind D. Their armor force consists of 110 T-55 medium tanks and 30 PT-76 light amphibious tanks.

The Nicaraguan communists have 62,000 men on active duty. Costa Rica to the south has no army; Honduras to the north has only 17,200. The Nicaraguans with Soviet and East Bloc help are building major port facilities and major military airfields capable of handling any plane in the Soviet inventory.

Contrary to communist propaganda, Nicaragua's military buildup began before any significant opposition surfaced. You may verify this for yourself by reading the New York Times in your local library for 1980-81.

The Soviet Union is not led by idiots. They have a reason for moving so much hardware into our backyard. I suspect we will find out what it is in the not too distant future.

Jet pilot wanted clear landing site, but 'all he could see were houses'

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The pilot of a burning fighter jet that crashed into a house, leaving at least one resident dead, looked for a clear area to ditch the plane, but "all he could see were houses," officials said.

Searchers pulled one body from the charred rubble of a two-story house about six miles northwest of Tinker Air Force Base on Thursday and looked until after dark for that of a second person, said Tinker spokesman Gene Pickett.

He said the search would resume today. A third resident of the house was in good condition with burns, and the Daily Oklahoman reported today that she said both her mother and uncle had been killed.

The pilot of the A-7D Corsair was over a group of houses when the jet developed engine problems, said Maj. Gen. Richard Burpee, commander of the Oklahoma City Air Logistics Center at Tinker.

"He told me all he could see were houses. He looked further to the north and he put the airplane in a glide toward this area. He stayed with it as long as possible," Burpee said.

Wilbert Range, a witness, said he saw the plane "going into a dive, going real fast like it was going downhill. Then I saw the pilot eject, and his parachute opened up."

Ricky Lemaster, another witness, said that after he saw the plane crash into the house, "I heard this explosion, and found this lady trying to get out the back. I helped her out of the house."

The Air National Guard pilot was not injured, authorities said.

A supervisor at Midwest City Memorial Hospital said Anna Nauman, 46, who was in the house, suffered burns from the fire. She was in good condition today.

The identity of the dead person was withheld.

A member of the Tinker Air Force Base Crash Crew walks through the debris of a crashed A-7 military jet Thursday in northeast Oklahoma City.

Tinker spokesman Jonh Clabes identified the pilot as Maj. Denny D. Nielsen of Sergeant Bluff, Iowa.

Nielsen was on temporary duty at the Flight Test Center at Tinker and the fighter jet, which seats one person, was on a final approach to Tinker as part of a test flight, Clabes said. The Air Force plane had been sent to Tinker for routine repairs.

The pilot "realized he had a problem with the engine" while preparing to land at the base and was ordered to-eject, Burpee said.

Watch your step while playing Bovine Bingo

PIERZ, Minn. (AP)— When Betty the Holstein couldn't pass muster, May the brown Swiss brought relief to spectators eagerly watching a barnyard scene turned spectator sport.

The name of the game was bovine bingo, featuring cows that trotted around a parking lot and favored five-foot numbered squares with the sort of stuff you take care not to step in.

It was introduced Wednesday at Crazee Days, an annual sidewalk sale in this central Minnesota community of 900 residents.

To the suprise of Hartmann's department store, in whose parking lot the game was held, no one complained, said store spokesman Maurice Faust.

"Of course," he noted, "we're a completely rural farm area."

The rules were simple:

The squares were painted on the parking lot. Hartmann's customers got a ticket bearing a number for each item they bought, and well-fed cows trotted around and determined winners by depositing a little you-know-what on squares.

The first game was off to a slow start when Betty had a hard time getting anything going.

Doctors 'late' facing child abuse

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association's new guidelines for helping doctors deal with the estimated million cases a year of child abuse are commendable but late, says a spokesman for social workers.

"There has been considerable underreporting by private practitioners," said Rae M. Hamilton, a spokesman for the National Association of Social Workers, based in Silver Spring, Md.

"They haven't been fully trained to recognize abuse, and they're only beginning now to teach medical students the signs of abuse and the proper response to it," Hamilton said Thursday.

His comments came in response to publication of the guidelines for the first time in today's Journal of the American Medical Association. They were adopted at a meeting of the organization's House of Delegates in December.

The guidelines cite estimates that more than 1 million children are seriously abused annually, including both physical and emotional abuse, and that between 2,000 and 5,000 of them die as a result of their injuries.

Dr. Douglas A. Sargent, chairman of the AMA panel that drafted them, agreed that doctors have not taken an active enough role in combating abuse, saying, "The medical response has not been what it was imagined to have been."

The guidelines alert doctors to the main signs and symptoms of physical abuse, including bruises and welts, burns in certain patterns, certain types of fractures and bleeding caused by shaking.

They also say doctors should look for signs of neglect, such as malnutrition, fatigue, poor hygiene and for signs of sexual and emotional abuse.

NATION IN BRIEF

Subway rider shot in argument over seat

NEW YORK (NYT) — A passenger on a crowded East Side subway train Thursday morning suddenly rose to his feet, pulled out a small handgun and fired at least two shots at a rider with whom he had been arguing over a seat, the police said.

The victim was wounded in the neck and abdomen, and five other passengers were injured in the stampede that followed.

A spokesman for the transit police said Thursday night that no arrest had been made in the shooting, which occurred at about 7:45 a.m. as a southbound No. 5 express train was approaching the station at 86th Street and Lexington Avenue.

The victim, identified as 20-year-old Junior Besson of the Bronx, was listed in guarded but stable condition at Lenox Hill Hospital.

Five other commuters were treated at Metropolitan Hospital for minor injuries suffered when scores of passengers tried to flee the shooting.

MOVE bomb probed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The district attorney said Thursday he would conduct a criminal investigation following the disclosure that the powerful military explosive C-4 was used in a bomb dropped on the headquarters of the radical group MOVE.

The explosive device ignited a fire that killed 11 people and destroyed more than 60 homes at the end of a daylong siege May 13 as police sought to serve arrest warrants on MOVE members.

City Managing Director James S. White said Wednesday the police officer who constructed the bomb added some C-4, a plastic explosive used in military demolition projects, without telling his commanders.

Until that statement, Police Commissioner Gregore Sambor and other city officials had said that Tovex TR-2, an underground mining explosive, had been the only explosive dropped on the roof of MOVE's fortified house.

Only mutts need apply

DENVER (AP) — If the idea of pedigree doesn't agree with your pet, that pooch still has a chance to get its papers — through the American Diversified Dog Society.

"Most dogs in America are mutts," said Cliff Goff, an Ogden, Utah, dentist and the founder of the group. "But they rarely get the recognition they deserve."

Goff said recently that ADDS can "protect" a dog's name and supply a certificate for $10. His menagerie includes an American Kennel Club-registered cocker spaniel and a mutt named "Millie," part labrador, part beagle and "part traveling salesman," picked up at a swap meet.

Sub samples Superior

COPPER HARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Eleven scientists trying to unlock the secrets of Lake Superior are nearing the third and final leg of the first human journey to the depths of world's largest freshwater lake.

"It's almost time to get back to the labs," said David Long, a Michigan State University geologist who has collected sediment samples and videotape of the bottom of Lake Superior from a 22-foot research submarine.

Grand slam!

In golf, it's tough to do

Bobby Jones managed a grand slam of four top tournaments in 1930. Since 1934—when the slam became Masters, U.S. Open, British Open and PGA championship—only Ben Hogan has won as many as three in one year.

Cowboys vs. Packers

Dallas searches for running back

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys and the Green Bay Packers open their National Football League exhibition seasons in Texas Stadium Saturday night without their starting running backs.

A bitter Tony Dorsett, who says the Cowboys have "double-crossed" him on financial dealings, is a training camp holdout.

Packers running back Eddie Lee Ivery broke his right thumb in practice this week and will miss the next four to six weeks.

Dorsett will be replaced by his closest friend, Ron Springs, who started camp at fullback.

Harlan Huckleby will step into Ivery's spot for the 8 p.m. Salesmanship Club-sponsored game in Texas Stadium.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry had hoped to give James Jones some playing time but Jones has been experiencing some knee problems.

"The running back position isn't the most secure thing I've seen," said Landry.

Fourth-round draft choice Robert Lavette of Georgia Tech will also see heavy duty for the Cowboys, who plan to use a lot of rookies.

Green Bay Coach Forrest Gregg also has planned liberal substitutions.

"We want to win every game, pre-season or otherwise," said Gregg. "At the same time we want to play the people who are good enough to make this team. The only way you can do that is you've got to play them in games and give them an opportunity to express themselves."

Veteran quarterback Lynn Dickey was originally schedule to start for the Packers, but missed Thursday afternoon practice with back spasms. Gregg said Randy Wright, a second-year player from the University of Wisconsin, would probably start in Dickey's place and then give way to Scott Brunner, who was acquired from Denver in the off-season.

Dickey said he injured his back and right hip while doing some extra throwing Wednesday.

For the Cowboys, Danny White will start and play the first period and Gary Hogeboom will play the second quarter.

Third-string quarterback Steve Pelleur, a second-year veteran out of Washington, will see heavy second-half duty.

"Steve deserves a shot in the preseason," said Landry. "He's worked hard and been faithful and we believe that he's now an NFL quarterback. Now we need to find out what he can really do."

Dallas beat the Packers 31-17 in exhibition last year in Gregg's coaching debut and downed them 20-6 during the regular season.

A crowd of some 50,000 was expected with temperatures predicted in the high 90s.

Tewell scorches PGA

By JOHN MOSSMAN

DENVER (AP) — Journeyman Doug Tewell leads the PGA Championship, but an aching back and a trio of the game's greatest players were stalking him in today's second round.

Tewell, who hasn't won on the professional golf tour since 1980, erased a 25-year-old course record with a 7-under-par 64 Thursday for a two-stroke lead after the opening round over the 7,089-yard Cherry Hills Country Club layout.

Lurking just off the pace, however, were Jack Nicklaus, a five-time PGA titlist, and defending champion Lee Trevino, both at 66. Tom Watson, who needs this crown to become the fifth player in history to complete a career sweep of golf's Grand Slam events, was at 67.

Peter Jacobsen and Corey Pavin also shot 66s, and Hubert Green and Danny Edwards joined Watson at 67 as Cherry Hills, playing short because of its mile-high elevation, yielded 31 sub-par rounds. That was already more sub-par rounds than were shot in the entire U.S. Open here in 1978.

Temperatures in the 90s and little wind contributed to what Watson called "ideal scoring conditions."

Morris Hatalsky, who eagled the difficult 491-yard, par-4 18th hole, was at 68, while 1983 PGA winner Hal Sutton, Masters champion Bernhard Langer of West Germany, Calvin Peete, Tom Kite and Gil Morgan were in a group at 69.

Pre-tournament favorite Seve Ballesteros of Spain opened with a 2-over 73. Arnold Palmer, whose only U.S. Open title came on this course in 1960, had 75, and the tour's leading money-winner, Curtis Strange, slipped to a 77.

Doug Tewell ....reacts to birdie

Tewell's 64 broke the competitive course record of 65 set by Palmer in the final round of the 1960 Open. But Tewell likely spent a sleepless night pondering the giants who were chasing him.

"It was probably the best round I've had all year from the standpoint of hitting the ball," said Nicklaus. "It was certainly a step in the right direction."

Trevino recovered from a double bogey at the 16th hole with an eagle at 17, his approach shot skipping across the water onto the green. "I'm very enthused about my game," he said. "I didn't expect to play this well."

Watson likewise had struggled coming into the PGA, but said he was "closer to finding that perfect swing." He missed only one green, had four birdies and no bogeys, and said he had "good touch on the greens."

Tewell, 35, of Edmond, Okla., birdied six holes and eagled the par-5 17th to go 8-under, then suffered his lone bogey at the 18th when he drove into the rough and hit his approach shot into a greenside bunker.

"With the exception of one or two drives, it was a marvelous day for Doug Tewell," he said.

He said the turning point may have come at the 15th hole, where he was merely trying to get close to the pin from out of a bunker and instead holed the shot for birdie.

"After that, I knew nothing wrong was going to happen to me."

Tewell was diagnosed earlier this year as having a herniated disc, and said he had planned to make the PGA his last event of the year.

"I've had a lot of pain, and I wanted to take some time off to help it heal and try to avoid surgery," he said. "I take aspirin to dull the pain. But today I didn't feel a thing out there."

Tewell, whose best finish this season was a tie for second at Phoenix but who has missed the cut in three of his last five outings, said his putting has plagued him because of a tendency to recoil instead of accelerating through the stroke.

"I've worked very hard on that this week," he said.

Midland Lee season football tickets sold out

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland athletic office, located at the northeast corner of Memorial Stadium, ran out of season football tickets from the available list for Midland Lee home games Thursday.

The available list is those tickets that do not have options on them. Last year's season ticket holders have until 5 p.m. today to renew options for 1985. If those tickets are not renewed by today, they will go on sale at 8 a.m. Monday.

As of Thursday, there were some unrenewed options, but were being picked up quickly by option holders. The athletic office does not expect a great number of unrenewed options after today's deadline.

"Monday could be a wild day around here," noted Janelle Dozier, athletic office secretary. "A lot of people who own tickets on the available list will be wanting to switch for better seats from the unrenewed options. And a lot of people will be just looking to get a season ticket. It could really be a mess around here."

Dozier said that Lee had passed the 2,100 mark in season tickets for Lee out of a possible 2,812 being sold. That means around 700 option holders had not renewed by early Thursday. That number was expected to decrease rapidly before today's 5 p.m. deadline.

The fact that Lee has had back-to-back playoff seasons and have home dates with San Angelo and Odessa Permian in 1985 has lead to the ticket crunch.

This does not mean that there will not be tickets left for weekly purchase for all Lee home games. Only games that are a possible sellout will the crunch be felt during the season.

Midland High has also had an upturn in the last two days, climbing from 477 season tickets last Monday to over 600 on Thursday. MHS sold 951 season tickets last year.

MHS season tickets will remain on sale at the athletic office through Aug. 30. A season ticket costs $20 for five home games at both schools. MHS fans also have the option of purchasing an extra ticket for $5 to include the MHS-Lee game. Midland High is the visitor in that game for 1985.

It is almost certian that no Lee tickets can be purchased after Monday since officials think any unrenewed options will go quickly. As it is now, there are no tickets for Lee fans to purchase until Monday and that could be slim pickings at best.

Strike can't slow down Jays

Associated Press

The baseball strike certainly didn't have a negative impact on the Toronto Blue Jays, who simply continued Thursday the surge that has given them a nine-game lead in the American League East.

The Blue Jays swept the Baltimore Orioles, winning the first game of a twi-night doubleheader 7-2, and taking the nightcap 7-4.

Cardinals 8, Cubs 0

John Tudor, 14-8, pitched a one-hitter to win for the 13th time in his last 14 starts, and Andy Van Slyke and Terry Pendleton hit consecutive home runs to cap a five-run St. Louis first inning. Chicago pulled off the National League's first triple play in the eighth inning.

Mets 14, Expos 7

Keith Hernandez had five hits and drove in three runs, Darryl Strawberry and George Foster both hit their 16th homers and Gary Carter had his 14th as New York buried Montreal under a 20-hit assault. Wally Backman had two hits and three RBIs as the Mets ripped four Expos pitchers.

Phillies 7, Pirates 2

Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt hit his 18th homer, a three-run shot, to highlighted a four-run first inning against Pittsburgh's Don Robinson. Ozzie Virgil hit his 14th home run for the Phillies as John Denny, 7-8, got the victory. Don Carman worked the final two innings for his fourth save.

Braves 2, Giants 0

Rick Mahler, 16-9, pitched a four-hitter and drove in a run for Atlanta. A crowd of 3,557 fans saw the game in San Francisco — the third smallest crowd for a day game this season at Candlestick Park. Terry Harper also had a run-scoring hit for the Braves, who handed the Giants their 12th shutout of the season.

Reds 6, Dodgers 5

Pete Rose's two-out bunt single in the top of the 13th inning drove in Cesar Cedeno with the winning run in a marathon that lasted 4 hours, 14 minutes. Rose's single off left-hander Carlos Diaz, 2-1, was the second of the night for the 44-year-old switch-hitter, and the 4,170th of the player-manager's career. Ty Cobb holds the all-time major-league career record with 4,191.

Padres 6, Astros 5

Pinch-hitter Jerry Royster singled in the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning to cap a four-run San Diego rally built on four hits and three errors by Houston, which wasted a 14-hit effort. Steve Garvey and Carmelo each hit his 14th homer for San Diego.

A's 11, Mariners 2

Oakland's Dusty Baker hit a two-run homer, scored two runs and drove in two in an eight-run fourth inning in support of Chris Codiroli, 10-8. Baker now has 14 homers for the season.

White Sox 7-1, Red Sox 6-6

Wade Boggs drove in three runs with a homer and a pair of singles and Rich Gedman knocked in two runs with a homer and a double as Boston salvaged a split. Ron Kittle hit two home runs and Harold Baines doubled in the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning of the opener. Bob James got his 18th save for the White Sox and Tony Armas hit his 16th homer for Boston in the first game.

Yankees 8-7, Indians 1-6

Dave Winfield hit his 17th and 18th home runs and drove in six runs as New York's Marty Bystrom won for the first time in more than a year in the opener. games. Don Mattingly matched Winfield's season homer total with two of his own in the nightcap. The Yankees played without center fielder Rickey Henderson, who failed to show up for the games.

Royals 10-6, Tigers 3-4

Kansas City's Willie Wilson drove in three runs and Bret Saberhagen, 13-5, had nine strikeouts as the Royals broke a 12-game, two-year home losing streak to Detroit in the first game. Darrel Evans got his 25th homer for the Tigers. Hal McRae drove in three runs to lead Kansas City in the nightcap.

Brewers 7-3, Rangers 4-1

Ben Oglivie hit a two-run homer and singled in another as Milwaukee took the opening game and added two sacrifice flies in the nightcap. Oglivie's homer, his ninth, came in the seventh inning after Ted Simmons walked and padded the Brewers' lead to 6-3. Pete O'Brien hit his 14th homer for Texas.

Twins 4, Angels 2

Minnesota's Bert Blyleven, 10-12, recorded his 100th career victory as a Twin in his first start in Minnesota since rejoining the team in a trade Aug. 1. He pitched a seven-hitter. Ron Davis got his 16th save for the Twins. It was the first loss by California's Ron Romanick, 13-5, after five straight victories.

Wins without training

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — Tom Jager had nothing better to do, so he figured he'd try to swim in a meet without training.

He may be onto something.

Jager's lack of training didn't show Thursday night as he won the men's 50-meter freestyle in the U.S. Swimming Long Course National Championships. His victory also served to upstage the biggest star of the meet so far, Matt Biondi. Biondi had earlier set a world record in the 100-meter freestyle and an American record in the 200-meter freestyle, but on Thursday night he couldn't catch Jager.

"I didn't get the best start I've ever had," Biondi said. "Starts and turns have been my biggest problem."

Jager, of Collinsville, Ill., used a great start to reach the wall in 22.61 seconds, just ahead of Biondi, of Moraga, Calif., who finished in 22.73.

"I had to do that," the 20-year-old Jager said. "One of the best parts of the race for me is the start. It's a necessity for me to get out like that."

Jager has spent his summer working in a bank and getting engaged.

"I took the summer off. I wasn't going to swim anything," he said. "I only decided a week ago to come here.

Greenland trip a pure delight

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The overseas trip to Greenland was a success beyond wildest dreams or expectations, although those thoughtful enough to inquire usually turned aside and cupped a palm to hide a uncontrollable snicker.

Little was it suspected upon departure that when the plane touched down, I would find my personal Hawaii. The kayak trips, the whale-blubber snacks and liesurely sightseeing strolls in Godthaab, the Danes' version of the British Empire, where the sun never sets in the summer, didn't materialize as envisioned. Much to the Mrs.' despair.

Of course, as on any trip, minor problems began to develop early, like at Kennedy Airport when the tour group met for the first time. Where were the rest of the Texans? In fact, there were only 10 of us, which probably is to be expected when a "luxurious tour of Greenland" is dangled as "the-come-join-us" bait.

And then there was the lady, not at all like I remembered, who spotted the two Texans and exclaimed, "We went to college at UVM." It took me by surprise, but I'm still trying to recall whether her recognition was accompanied with an exclamation of glee or a groan signifying "Oh, no, not you."

More bad news when heavy summer fogs socked in Godthaab. Luckily, the Swiss Airliner was permitted to put down at Zurich and the group was bused to Luzerne where emergency shelter was found in a mountainside hotel overlooking Vierwaldstatter See. I still, think the detour was a sophisticated highjacking. Mais, c'est l'guerre. Merci Dieux.

The second day on the trip to Interlaken, Lautebrunnen and Grindelwald, it was already evident the rest— Oberammergau, Munich, Salzburg and Vienna, would be an anticlimax. Fortunately, they weren't, but if I ever get back again, the entire trip will be devoted to traveling Switzerland by E uorail.

BUT THIS is a year when Americans, thanks to the favorable currency exchange, are traveling to Europe, if not Greenland, in record numbers.

In Switzerland, the rate was 2.5 Suiss francs to $1; Germany, 3 marks to the $1 and Austria, 20-21 schillings to the $1. The latter is most disturbing. Every dinner tab was scanned with a sense of panic, prompted by the fear that it would require a trip to the kitchen to work it off. A tip: to the easily frightened. Take a handy pocket calculator to convert schillings to dollars and ease the shock.

AMONG other discoveries not found in tour brochures:

While the lakes in Austria and Germany are shallow, the lakes in Switzerland are gouged out by glaciers and are deep. The same glaciers also gouged out all the bath tubs in Europe. A mountain climber's gear is required to get out of them. And the showers in the tubs are hand held sprays, which are not really intended to make the maid's job easier by wetting down the entire bathroom. By the end of the second week, you begin to get the hang of it.

One of the appeals of old European cities is the trolley-cars, only don't call them trolley-cars. Trolley cars are buses that are attached to power lines. "Trolley-cars" are trams, street-cars that run on rails, and Undergroubds are subways.

And if you purchase a Tyrolian hat in Munich and ride the tram, beware. You'll be mistaken for a native. Une tres jolie fraulein said something to me on the tram back to the hotel and I immediately blurted out "das haus mit der attrakivsten Auswahl an feinen Schmuckstucken undererstklassigen...." I didn't get my face slapped so I guess it was the right thing. The Mrs. said all she asked was where to get off "and you gave her a sales pitch about watches."

I thought the hat was a bargain, compared to the price of the one just like it in Oberammergau, but then the sales girl stuck the feather on and the price doubled.

In Vienna, a planned tram trip to Schonbrunn Palace to visit the lavish Versailles-type gardens never included in the palace tour, ended, well, precisely where it started.

Every time a tram was stopped to ask which number to take, driver and finally even frantically gesturing passengers pointed to the Underground, accompanying the helpful directions with a stream of instructions that usually ended, when their hospitality seemed to fall on deaf ears, with a resigned Dumkopf.

Finally any old tram, that looked promising, was boarded and it turned off the Ringstrasse, the boulevard that circles the inner city where once the wall offered a haven against the marauding Turks and Mongols, and headed for the suburbs...and Schonbrunn. Oh well, when it comes to trams, it's not whether or not you reach the intended destination, but how you enjoy the ride.

Perhaps one of the trip's most susepenseful moments came in Lucerne, where access from lake front to hotel was by funicular. A Saturday night at the Festival in Old-Town, (where the reveler had a choice of any music his tastes dictated...all he had to do was squeeze through the tightly packed narrow streets to the square desired), resulted in a late hour. So late that it was discovered that two minutes later and the funicular would have been shut down for the night, requiring a long wee-hour hike up the mountain.

The festival began at 3 p.m. with music and outdoor booths that served six varieties of sphagetti, pizza, wieners, bier, wine and soft drinks. It looked like a super promotion to get folks into the shops, but precisely at 5 p.m. all the shops closed in Old Town and everybody turned to enjoying themsevles. As for music, we opted for U.S. Dixieland as played by Bourbon Streeters and jazz as played by the hour-on-hour-off Jungle Cats and the Saratoga Jazzmen. The latter played like Americans, but spoke German.

STRANGELY enough, there was No Sound of Music in Salzburg where the Sound Of originated and where summer musical festivals are sold out a year in advance. One needed a ticket to gain entrance to one of the concert halls. However, there was music on every street corner in Vienna's Kartnerstrasse, the inner city walking shopping area. It might be a solitary violinist or a five-piece band from Bolivia or a snappy French marching band in an impromptu concert outside of St. Stephen's kirche or a singing group from Rumania.

However, each night in the old city on the Danube was devoted to Strauss, the outdoor concerts in Stadtpark where one could dine, have a pastry and Kaffee mit

Ump removed on stretcher

NEW YORK (AP) — Home plate umpire Mark Johnson was hit in the groin by a pitch from Brian Fisher in the seventh inning of the second game of a doubleheader between the New York Yankees and the Cleveland Indians Thursday night.

Johnson, 34, was removed from the field on a stretcher.

The second-year umpire was hit on the left side of the groin on a 1-0 pitch to Brett Butler. The fastball glanced off catcher Ron Hassey's glove but it was not slowed down enough to stop the impact.

The umpire dropped to the ground, curled his legs and was removed on a stretcher in the same position.

"I hope it's not serious," said umpire Ken Kaiser, who replaced Johnson behind the plate, "but he was in a tremendous amount of pain. He did not lose consciousness but his eyes were rolling in his head. As it was, he had complained about not feeling well from the fifth inning on."

Gators beat Angels, 3-1

Slump stretches to four in row

From Staff Reports

BEAUMONT—The Beaumont Golden Gators used the combined six-hit pitching of Ed Vosberg and Mark Poston and a pair of unearned runs in the eighth inning to defeat Midland in Texas League action Thursday. It was Midland's fourth loss in a row.

Vosberg, 7-10, struggled in the first inning, but he escaped a two-hit, one-walk situation without yielding a run and pitched his way into the ninth before a line drive off his left foot put him out of the game.

Outfielder Reggie Montgomery was lost for the season when he suffered a broken ankle sliding into third in the first inninlg.

As far as loser Doug McKenzie (2-11) was concerned, they were no Angels this night. Johnny Tutt's single, a balk and McLemore's throwing error on Eric Hardgrave's grounder tallied the first run.

It was 1-1 going into the eighth when Eddie Miller and Mark Wasinger opened the inning with hits. Todd Fisher replaced McKenzie on the mound, but throwing errors by Billie Merrifield on Hardgrave's grounder on a play at the plate and Heath's wild peg resulted in the final two runs.

El Paso 5, Dodgers 2

El Paso won its sixth in a row, defeating the San Antonio Dodger 5-2 on the pitching of Scott Roberts.

It was El Paso's second win in a row over San Antonio, its sixth straight win overall and the 32nd Diablo triumph of the second half. The Diablos' record, 32-13, is so much better than the rest of the Texas League West Division, people are already talking in terms of magic numbers — with 23 games to go.

The lanky right-hander went the distance, scattering nine singles and a double and walking none on the way to his fifth straight victory.

"Tonight we got outhit (10-6)," El Paso Manager Terry Bevington said. "But we got good pitching."

Thursday was a night for records and improvement. Joey Meyer blasted his 33rd home run — a line smash that cleared the center field fence on the rise — to tie the all-time Diablo mark set by Mike Bishop in 1980.

The Diablos also turned a pair of double plays, giving them 125 and one more than all last season.

Travelers 9, Drillers 5

Arkansas' sixth run seventh inning broke a 3-3 and lifted the Travelers to a 9-5 win over Tulsa. Ten men came to the plate in the inning. The big blow was a single by Willie Lozado off pitcher Duane James' glove scoring two runs, and a bases loaded triple by Ed Tanner.

Arkansas got a solo homer in third from Gotay Miles. and a two run single in fifth by Lozado.

Tulsa got a solo home in the second by George Foussianes, solo runs in the fourth and fifth, and two runs in the ninth.

The winning pitcher was John Adams, 3-4. Duane James, 3-5, took the loss for Tulsa.

Captains 2, Mets 1

The Shreveport Captains scored their only runs in the first inning on the way to a 2-1 victory over the Jackson Mets in Texas League baseball action Thursday.

Todd Thomas walked and Paul Fryer hit a fielder's choice,letting Thomas advance to second. Mike Aldrete then singled, scoring Thomass. Alan Cockrell was hit by a pitch and Everett Graham singled to score Aldrete.

The Mets scored their only run in the bottom of the fourth when Jason Felice hit a sacrifice fly to drive in Keith Miller.

Crews improved his pitching record to 6-7. The Mets' Craig Weissman fell to 7-6.

The Mets are now 29-17; the Captains are 26-21.

Lauda undecided

MONZA, Italy (AP) — World Formula-1 champion Niki Lauda on Friday was quoted as saying that he will make his final decision about 1986 after the Grand Prix of Austria later this month.

Lauda, who is testing his McLaren racer at the Monza Autodrome in advance of the Sept. 8 Grand Prix of Italy, said in an interview with Milan's sports daily Gazzetta dello Sport that he was considering a wide range of possibilities — staying with McLaren, changing team or retiring.

"If I decide to give up, however, it will not be like in Montreal in 1979, when I thought of it in five minutes. I was wrong on that occasion."

About the 1985 world title Lauda said he already has been dethroned since he only has five points.

Verplank sets pace at Abilene

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Scott Verplank, who won the PGA Western Open last week, holds the lead going into today's second round of the La-Jet-Pelz National Amateur at Fairway Oaks Golf and Racquet Club.

Despite a three-putt par on the final hole, Verplank shot a 7-under-par 65 Thursday to take the lead over Douglas Thompson by a stroke and Jesse Trevino by two.

Blair Manasse and Arnold Salinas, the manager for pro golfer Lee Trevino, are tied at 68.

Verplank, 21, of Dallas, played the front side in 2-under in rather up-and-down fashion. Twice he saved par from off the green and he birdied the two par 5 holes by getting up and down from sand traps. On the inward nine, he shot a 5-under 31 and that included pars on the two par 5s, both of which were definite birdie holes in the hot, windless conditions.

"I started hitting my irons well, especially on the back side," said Verplank. "I played a lot better on the back, until I got to 18. I don't know what happened there."

Verplank's drive on the 562-yard 18th left him with 210 yards to the flag. He hit a 3-iron about 25 feet past the hole and then rolled his putt for an eagle about two feet past. His birdie putt hit the back of the cup and bounced out.

Twenty-six players in the field of 60 matched or broke par as the course, which is the host for the PGA event Southwest Golf Classic, played at its easiest.

"The course is in perfect shape," said Thompson, a recent Stanford graduate who shot a bogeyless round. "If you hit the fairways, you can go right at the flag. You can get a lot of spin on the ball out of the fairway and the greens will hold."

The tournament concludes on Sunday and the winner will receive an exemption into the Southwest Golf Classic, scheduled for Sept. 19-22.

Duran, Benitez down on luck

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — According to New York State boxing commissioner Jose Torres, the comebacks of former boxing champions Roberto Duran, Alexis Arguello and Wilfred Benitez are directly tied to financial need.

"My information is that all three are broke, in unbelievable financial situations," Torres said.

Benitez filed for bankruptcy in Puerto Rico, while Arguello has revealed his monetary woes. Duran, however, has denied reports circulating in Panama that he is in trouble economically.

"I've been told that it's only a matter of months before Duran will have to admit his serious economic situation," Torres said.

Plates, helmets top PGA souvenir hit list

DENVER (AP) — License plates and marshals helmets top the "hit list" of souvenir thieves at this year's PGA Championship.

"They're the two hottest souvenirs," said Bob Kelley, transportation chairman for the 67th PGA, being played at the Cherry Hills Country Club course.

Kelley declined Thursday to say how many of the red and white license plates that adorn courtesy and other transportation vehicles had been stolen this week, but noted, "We spent $3,600 on license plates alone."

Kelley said the hardtop, safari-like helmets worn by marshals on the course also had been disappearing at a steady clip.

"I understand 17 helmets disappeared even before the first marshals meeting was over," he said.

Kelley said each of the past PGA champions was assigned a personal courtesy car, complete with a license plate number that corresponds with the year in which he won the prestigious major golfing event.

"Jack Nicklaus had a choice of five numbers," said Kelley, referring to Nicklaus' five PGA victories.

Thurman in Oil Bowl

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Abilene Christian University signee Stan Stephens and Todd Hammel of Durant, Okla. will square off as starting quarterbacks in the 48th Oil Bowl football game on Saturday night.

Stephens, of Richland Hills, will call signals for the Texas high school all-stars. Hammel, bound for Stephen F. Austin, will quarterback the Oklahoma all-star team.

Texas coaches Gordon Wood of Brownwood, Joe Bob Tyler of Wichita Falls and Marty Criswell of Denison said Stephens and Midland Lee wingback Tyrone Thurman were the two offensive standouts in practices this week. Thurman is one of 10 players in the game headed for Texas Tech.

Coaches said the most impressive player on defense for Texas has been end John Fuller of Odessa Permian. Fuller, only 6-1 and 175, is the only player in the game not committed to any college.

Oklahoma lost two players this week to injuries. Flanker Terry Pritchard and quarterback Brent Cook, both of Moore, will miss the game. The Oklahoma team will carry only 26 players on the limited 27-player roster.

Oklahoma coaches Leodies Robinson of Oklahoma City Milwood, J.W. Emerson of Tulsa Union and Harold Park of Sayre said tackles David Shoemaker of Checotah and Herman Stevenson of Duncan were the most impressive defensive players this week. Shoemaker is bound for Oklahoma, while Stevenson is going to West Texas State.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, August 10, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Research new business ideas and your career will take a giant step forward. Be willing both to compromise and to experiment. You can no longer carry such a heavy load within the family circle. Let loved ones pitch in and help. Redistribute time-consuming duties. Romance becomes more rewarding when you treat mate as a full partner. Plan a special trip for two. Travel proves invigorating. Too much talk could undermine a special deal. Be discreet. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Leslie Stevens of "Search for Tomorrow," Eddie Fisher, tennis' Dianne Fromholtz, singer-sausage maker Jimmy Dean, basketball's "Red" Holtzman, Detroit Tigers infielder Tom Brookens.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A scholarship grant could still be possible for a deserving student. Those who excel in math and science get good news. A family gathering is a huge success. Past grievances are forgotten.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A program designed to strengthen a special skill will add excitement to your weekend. Be the best you can be! Everyone gains from a cooperative effort. Contact people who share your goals.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Set a larger share of your funds aside for creature comforts. A cross-country trip could mean important new contacts. Logic helps you solve a home repair problem. Think!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be modest when others praise you this weekend. A letter-perfect performance wins you widespread admiration. You enjoy giving more than receiving. Be fair to family and friends. Accept their gifts graciously.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Consider a pet when making weekend or vacation plans. Going into business with your mate can be wonderful if you agree to put all work aside on your days off. Be romantic.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do nothing that might jeopardize your reputation for reliability. Limit spending to avoid getting in over your head. A weekend adventure could lead to new romance. Go slow on making a commitment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Shine at a social event you attend and you could get some new business on Monday! It is especially important to meet deadlines and keep appointments. Put reminders where you will see them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A culinary project boosts your spirits. Do some baking and you will be ready for visitors or a family outing tomorrow. Outdoor activities hold special appeal this weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Buy things for your home that express how you want to live. Those looking for traditional furniture could find a real bargain. Take an afternoon nap if you feel your energy flagging.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Being with young people invigorates you. Travel brings good luck and new inspiration. Do not withhold funds from yourself. You work hard and deserve a few treats now and then.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Open your eyes and you will see solid proof of a child's love. A sure-footed friend makes walking or hiking safer. There is plenty of truth to what mate has to say.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A summer cruise is a dream come true for some of you. The way to relate to other people affects a new romance. A friend sheds light on a mystery.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Six of ◇.

We receive numerous letters that ask us how to play specific card combinations. It is impossible to answer in a vacuum. All too often you need to know how many tricks you require in the suit, as well as the availability of entries. Consider this hand.

North-South reached six no trump in quick time. North added his 18 points to his partner's announced 16-18, saw he had enough for a small slam but insufficient for a grand slam even if South held a maximum, so he bid what he expected to make.

West did not want to lead away from an honor so he chose the six of diamonds for his opening lead. Declarer wasted no time. He rose with the ace in dummy and led the jack of clubs. When East showed out, declarer was in trouble. With correct defense he could score no more than three club tricks, and that brought his total to 11. He was forced to rely on the heart finesse — down one.

Declarer's club play was correct if he needed five tricks from the suit — or three. Here, however, he had eight tricks in the other three suits, so he needed only four tricks for his contract. He could guarantee those against any distribution had he made his first club play by leading low from hand toward dummy.

If the clubs are 4-1 or 3-2, it makes no difference what declarer does. If East has all five missing clubs, West will show out and East can capture dummy's ten with the queen. But now declarer can take the rest of the tricks in the suit by taking the marked finesse of the eight of clubs. And if West has all his clubs, as in the diagram, he must play low. When dummy's ten wins and the position becomes clear, declarer simply returns to hand and leads another club toward the honor in dummy. He cannot be stopped from getting four tricks in the suit.

Ear surgery causes Nixon complications

NEW YORK — Former President Richard M. Nixon curtailed his public schedule after a complication arose from surgery he underwent last week to remove a large cancerous tumor from behind his left ear, his administrative assistant said Thursday.

John Taylor, the assistant, said that Thursday morning, Nixon's doctor, Dr. Philip G. Prioleau, told the former president to remain at home, to cut back his schedule and to return to the doctor's office at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center each morning for observation. Prioleau performed the surgery Aug. 1 at the medical center.

Prioleau said the cancer, a basal cell carcinoma, was similar to but much further advanced than one removed from President Reagan's nose last week. The doctor said the tumor was about an inch long and was removed in a four-hour procedure.

"This was a big tumor," Prioleau said. To cover the wound, Prioleau said, he removed a piece of skin from Nixon's left shoulder and grafted it over the area.

The complication arose because of an anticoagulant Nixon was taking for phlebitis, an inflamation of the veins that can cause blood clots. Prioleau said that as a result of the drug Nixon began bleeding under the skin graft.

Prioleau said Nixon had stopped bleeding by the time he examined him and changed his dressing Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Producer Lorne Michaels, who created the late-night comedy hit series "Saturday Night Live" 10 years ago, is returning to the show as executive producer.

"I'm tremendously excited that Lorne, who broke new ground as creator and original producer of 'Saturday Night Live,' has agreed to return to the show," said Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment.

Michaels left the show in 1980 after helping launch the careers of original cast members including Dan Aykroyd, John Belushi, Chevy Chase and Gilda Radner.

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Christa McAuliffe, chosen to be the first teacher in space, won't lift off until January, but she is finding one of the toughest parts of her mission dealing with the rigors of celebrity.

Mrs. McAuliffe, 36, a social studies teacher at Concord High School, has done 40 interviews this week, NASA media coordinator Edward Campion said, "and those are only the ones I know of. She does some on her own."

"Don't you get bored answering the same questions over and over again?" one interviewer asked.

"I couldn't tell you, with 15 years as a teacher, how many times I've answered the same questions," she said.

She said being excited about answering them is part of her job. How else would a teacher get a high school pupil interested in the Constitution?

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Fess Parker, who played Davy Crockett, Daniel Boone and a U.S. senator on television says he may enter the California senate race next year.

Parker, 59, who starred in the 1962-63 series "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," said Thursday that he considered the 1986 senate race his last opportunity at public office.

The actor said he had made no decision, but he's "done a lot of thinking about this and find I'm intrigued about it."

Parker made his movie debut in 1952 and appeared in such films as "Westward Ho the Wagons" before signing with Walt Disney studios and becoming a national institution in the 1950s with his television portrayal of frontier fighter Davy Crockett.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — You probably wouldn't recognize Dick Wilson from his role in "Mutiny on the Bounty," but if he squeezed a roll of toilet paper on TV, you'd know him right away.

"I was the fellow who was shot off the mast," Wilson said of his part in the movie classic starring Clark Gable and Charles Laughton.

Gable and Laughton traveled to greater movie heights than Wilson, but thousands of people would recognize his face — he's "Mr. Whipple."

Wilson, 70, one of the actors attending the annual four-day Memphis Film Festival, said, "The kind of pictures they're making today, I'll stick with toilet paper."

Wilson's big break came with his first toilet paper ad 21 years ago. He gets paid each time one of his 504 Charmin commercials is shown.

STE. GENEVIEVE

Near the Glass Mountains in West Texas, the perfect combination of soil and climate was found to produce the premium quality grapes necessary for the great wines of Ste. Genevieve.

The average rainfall in West Texas is only about 10 inches per year. The long warm days, cool dry evenings, and low humidity help moderate the fruit's natural grape sugar, and balance excellent varietal character in the grapes. The deep drainage from calcarious soils of limestone and silty clay loam produce deeper root growth, producing more varietal-intense characteristics in the grapes.

From budbreak through harvest, heat summations range from 2800 to 3000 growing degree days creating a microclimate of a region 3. Daily temperature fluctuations from May through July range from 75-90 degrees during the day, to 45-70 degrees at night.

The Glass Mountains act as a natural barrier, protecting the vineyards from severe thunderstorms and wind damage near harvest time.

Currently, no major pests or diseases exist in this part of West Texas which would or could hurt the vines or fruit.

The fractured subsoil of limestone composition facilitates good drainage. At about 8' of depth, a loose gravel continues to maintain great drainage so that no excessive water build-up occurs around the root area of the vines.

Ste. Genevieve was organized in 1983 through the foresight of a multinational ownership group to establish a Southwest regional winery to supply quality wines demanded by consumers. The first vintage release will be in late summer 1984.

Construction began in 1983 and has not stopped yet. Currently we have 150,000 square feet of the most technologically advanced equipment in the world. Combined with ages of European experience in wine making, we stand ready to compete with other wineries of the world to offer products of outstanding quality and character.

The experience of winemakers, planners, designers and leadership from around the world, have all joined forces here in Texas to establish this premiere wine company.

Ste. Genevieve Winery is located 25 miles NE on IH-10 outside of Fort Stockton, Texas near Bakersfield.

AS WEST TEXAS' NUMBER ONE WINE MERCHANT, PINKIES IS PLEASED TO ANNOUNCE THAT WE NOW CARRY WEST TEXAS' OWN WINE, STE. GENEVIEVE. WE INVITE YOU TO TRY ANY OF THESE FIVE OUTSTANDING VARIETIES!

FUME BLANC
This is a classic dry white wine. Medium-bodied, it has slightly straw color and a faint, smoky quality.

CHENIN BLANC
Light straw in color, this wine is slightly sweet with a crisp, clean finish. Reminiscent of apples, this light-bodied wine has a slightly higher acid. It is a great accompaniment to seafood, fowl and lightly oiled dishes.

ROSE OF CABERNET
This Rose wine has a salmon color with a fresh and slightly sweet finish. Its floral character compliments ham, veal, shellfish and light meals.

FRENCH COLOMBARD
This is a clean, crisp, dry and charming country-styled white wine, with slight floral overtones. Its light-bodied, pale straw color enhances chicken, light seafood dishes and mild cheeses.

SAUVIGNON BLANC
This dry, crisp white wine has a delicate, smoky quality. Flavorful, grassy overtones make it a perfect accompaniment to fowl, shellfish, veal, lamb, ham and cream sauces.

Schlage or drink wine or sip bier and waltz until 11 p.m. Only the shrieking peacocks, perched on a tree or on the roof overlooking the diners, spoiled the serenity and they only shrieked when the ochrestra took a break.

A TRIP like this can put jogging on a new level. In Munich, it's a 5:30 a.m. run through Englischer Garten around lake where mist still hung over the surface. All the ducks and swans congregated across the water from what looked like an outdoor restaurant when I passed. That night, on a walk through the park, it was discovered that the restuarant was a Bier Garten, biggest I've seen, offering visible proof that there are more bicycles in Munchen than people. No wonder the water fowl kept their distance.

The morning tour from the hotel on Franz-Josef Strasse, through Mirabell Park and up one side of the river and back down the other at 6 a.m. in Salzburg. When the solitary jogger approached from the other direction, a Guten morgen or Comment-vous, alley-vous, aujourdhui, monsieur, was expected. Instead, the jogger's greeting was a sobbering, disillusioning, "Hi, Mac."

FOR ANY one who likes old ball parks, Vienna is a delight, all those narrow winding cobblestone streets, the palaces and the baroque, rokoko kirches sometimes hidden just beyond a battered old door that fails to hint at what lies just beyond.

St. Stephen's with its colorful roof draws the hordes of sightseeers, but tucked away on obscure sidestreets the Dominican and the Ukranian kirches are hidden gems.

THERE IS something to be said for small groups traveling at a leisurely pace. One 7 a.m. at the hotel in Salzburg, a large group of tourists waited impatiently to get into the dining room for breakfast so they could board the bus and be off for Venice, or someplace. They had just arrived from Vienna the night before and were given an hour to "see" Salzburg. I mentioned to the tour director that that was no way to travel, "I like to be in a place long enough to get lost."

That afternoon she accommodated by getting lost while trying to locate the countryside palace where Kissinger resolved the Seven Days War. But it wasn't necessary. I was fully capable on my own. Getting-loss success was achieved at Oberammergau, one of the most beautiful towns in the Bavarian Alps, where a jog into the country ended up in the city dump. It surprised me that there was such a place, but as city dumps go, I've seen worse downtowns in the U.S.

At Munich, it was finding the tram back to the hotel and also finding the Deutsch museum, possessor of the biggest HO layout I've ever seen.

In Salzburg, it was getting to the Hohen Salzburg fortess perched above of the city and reached by a funicular. Since the line was long, it was decided to walk up the cobblestone pathway. Somehow we wound up in a convent where Marie Von Trapp had gone to school.

In Vienna, of course, it was the tram ride to Schonbrunn.

AMONG THE trips mysteries: a stop in the Salzburg outdoor market for hot dogs at noon each day didn't result in the weeklong protest of my stomach as is the case at home?

In Salzburg, the old town (700 A.D.) is located on one side of the river. We stayed in the newer part of town near the Mirabell Gardens. It was interesting, despite it's lack of tradition and history. After all, how much history can a place that's only been around since 1400 A.D. have? The Mrs. did discover one narrow street winding around the foot of a hill near the river. If you've never been to the Casbah, this is what you'd imagine it would be like.

The thing that made it different was that it was virtually deserted. No one knew about it but the residents.

That night we brought other members of the tour group to share the discovery, but they weren't nearly as impressed until we got well into our Casbah and spotted that red light. We hadn't noticed during the day, but it gave a certain gaudy charm to the ageless stone building. The sign said, Les Maisons des Pleasures. It was quickly explained to the Mrs. that it was probably a gaming casino.

BUT THE vision that perhaps lingers was the tour to Interlaken, up a lake or two from Lucerne, and the first glimpse of cloud-shrouded Jungfrau, a lofty snow-blanketed 13,000-plus feet. The thing that makes the Alps the Alps is that this is not 13,000 feet looking up from 5 or 6,000 feet. Lucerne is 1,400 feet. That's intimidation. Jungfrau, when cloud-shrouded, looms like and evil ogre.

Then later, riding the ski lift up the green slopes from Grindelwald, with the hikers and meandering cows below, the tattle-tell bells giving them away, one could look across the way at the Eiger's life-claiming sheer north face as it drifted in and out of the clouds. The snow-covered range included the Schrekenhorn, Wetterhorn, and half a dozen other jagged peaks and down below there was the glacier, slowly inching toward the peaceful resort village of Grindelwald.

It wasn't until we had left Switzerland, that it was discovered the railroad climbs up from Lauterbrunnen through the snow to the Jungfraujoch, the depression between Jungfrau and Monk, and there is indeed skiing in the summer.

But one wonders if the derpression upon arrival home is worth it. I look at my "neatly" stacked wood pile in the backyard and compare it with the works of precision seen in Switzerland and I realise I'm a hopeless slob. Maybe I won't go back to Switzerland, after all.

Dollar lower

LONDON (AP) — The dollar recovered some early losses but was still lower at mid-morning today against all major currencies in European trading. Gold bullion prices were also fractionally lower.

A Frankfurt dealer said rumors in the Far East that President Reagan had become ill pushed the dollar sharply lower early in European trading. But European dealers didn't take the rumor seriously, and strong buying support pushed the currency upwards in later trading.

Other factors, including the U.S. Treasury's relatively smooth record $21.75 billion quarterly auction, were generally neutral for the dollar, dealers said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business days, the dollar closed at 237.95 Japanese yen, down from 238.55 yen.

In London, the pound sterling gained against the dollar. It cost $1.3560 to buy one pound, more expensive than the $1.3525 price late Thursday.

Other midmorning dollar rates compared with late Thursday's:

—2.8300 West German marks, down from 2.8360.

—2.33925 Swiss franes, down from 2.3450.

—8.6475 French francs, down from 8.6600.

—3.1790 Dutch guilders, down from 3.1900.

—1,893.50 Italian lire, down from 1,899.00

—1.35825 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3609.

Texas mortgage foreclosures highest in nation

AUSTIN (AP) — The nation's leading mortgage insurance firm reports it had twice as many foreclosure claims in Texas as in any other state during the first quarter of 1985, and an official says adjustable-rate mortgages are a big reason for the problems.

Michael Carroll, Austin representative for Mortgage Guarantee Insurance Corp., said that of the $46 million in claims his firm paid during the first quarter, Texas led with 635 claims.

California was second with 330 claims and Florida was third with 191.

About 424 of the Texas foreclosures were in Houston. "Houston is leading everywhere. If Houston was a state, it would be our No. 1 claim state," Carroll told the Austin American-Statesman.

Real estate industry experts say the foreclosures point out the problems that led the National Federal Mortgage Insurance Association this week to announce tougher mortgage eligibility requirements.

The new Fannie Mae rules, which take effect Oct. 1, may hurt some first-time homebuyers because they cut out some of the deep buydowns and adjustable-rate mortgages that marginal buyers used to qualify for home loans.

Nationwide, Carroll said, his firm has seen foreclosure claims jump from $24 million in 1980 to $185 million in 1984. He blames adjustable-rate mortgages in part for the increase.

"I think what we've seen is is a lot of adjustable-rate loans that are now coming around," he said.

Carroll said foreclosures started increasing after 1981, when adjustable-rate loans were allowed by federal authorities.

"Historically our claims have always come because of unemployment and folks losing their jobs," he said.

"But now we're in a situation where the market isn't appreciating as much as the past. And with ARMs, it compounds the problem when that payment adjusts" to a higher rate.

Lee Fisher, senior vice president for residential production at Lumbermen's Investment Corp., said the slowdown in inflation has been a major influence in increasing foreclosures because homeowners no longer can depend on housing values to rise so they can sell their homes quickly if they get into trouble.

Fisher said he expects to see adjustable-rate mortgages still offered in the market, because lenders use them to hedge against future increases in their cost of money. But he said the ARMS will come with ceilings to prevent dramatic one-year increases.

De Lorean to build $30,000 sports cars

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — He has no financing and no factory, but John Z. De Lorean said Thursday he will assemble a high-speed sports car here as a successor to the defunct gull-winged, stainless steel De Lorean DMC-12.

De Lorean said he has no name for the new car, but expects to sell some of the cars by the first of the year, even though he doesn't expect to have any built by then.

De Lorean, 60, said he and Gordon Novel, a New Orleans entrepreneur, have agreed in principle to buy enough parts of the old De Lorean car from Marvin Katz, a local man, to build several hundred new sports cars. Katz bought the parts after the company that produced the DMC-12 went bankrupt.

De Lorean, a former GM executive, would not give a production goal for the new car, but said it would sell from more than $30,000 and would have a top speed of 180 mph — "faster than I want to go."

He called the car an updated, high-speed version of his original DMC-12 sports car.

A drawing of the proposed car, displayed at a news conference Thursday where De Lorean discussed his plans, closely resembles the De Lorean automobile with a spoiler added over the rear engine fender area.

De Lorean said a number of people are interested in investing in the new car factory, including some who invested in his old one, but he declined to name any of them.

He said he has chosen a firm that builds race car engines as the likely builder of the car's engine, but declined to name it. He would not say where parts would come from, other than the De Lorean parts he and Novel expect to buy from Katz.

Though he will build the car in Columbus, De Lorean said he has no site for an assembly plant.

De Lorean, acquitted of cocaine conspiracy charges in California in 1984, blamed the British government for the failure of his De Lorean production facility in Belfast, Northern Ireland, saying the government failed to live up to prior agreements. He did not elaborate.

After the De Lorean Motor Co. was forced into bankruptcy in 1982, Consolidated International of Columbus bought the last 1,800 cars and remaining parts. The parts were later sold to Katz' Kapac Co.

Mexico to test first nuclear-power plant

ALTO LUCERO, Mexico (AP) — Although it has large petroleum reserves it could use to generate electricity, Mexico plans to start testing its first commercial nuclear-power plant next year and put it into operation in 1987.

It will furnish electricity to thousands of homes and industries throughout the nation, be cheaper to operate than oil-fired plants and save oil for Mexico to sell on the international market, officials say.

Mexico is the world's fourth largest petroleum producer, turning out about 3 million barrels a day. It exports about 1.5 million barrels a day, half of that to the United States.

"Laguna Verde is going to be 60 percent cheaper to operate than an oil plant and taken in total the plant will save 10 million barrels of oil each year," Rafael Fernandez de la Garza, the plant's project director, said in an interview.

Laguna Verde, on the Gulf of Mexico shoreline 45 miles north of the major port city of Veracruz, is the sole survivor of a once-grand plan for building a network of nuclear plants generating 20,000 megawatts of power.

But a combination of work delays, changing presidential administrations, and, most of all, a severe economic downturn in 1982 scaled back plans until now. All that remains of the original plans is Laguna Verde, operated by the government through the Federal Electricity Commission.

"We had to slow down in part because of the lack of money. The main problem has been working in an ongoing fashion," de la Garza said.

"There was indecision on whether to continue to work. But now, the decision is very clear to move forward until this is completed."

One outcome of the delay, he noted, was the estimated cost of Laguna Verde increased from $1.5 billion in 1980 to a current estimate of $2.3 billion. He said Unit 1 is 87 percent complete while 42 percent of the work has been done on Unit 2. Each unit has one reactor.

De la Garza added that he is determined to have the plant's Unit 1 ready for testing in the fall of 1986 and in commercial operation in 1987.

In the testing phase, the unit will begin with 5 percent power, which will be gradually increased under close monitoring until it is operating at full capacity by June 1987, de la Garza said.

When completed, each reactor, designed to operate 30 years, will generate 657 megawatts each. Together, that is enough power to light a city of 1 million people, he said.

Major lines from the plant will run to Mexico City, the city of Veracruz and northern Mexico. The plant also will be tied into the nation's electrical grid so power could be sent anywhere in Mexico.

It is projected that Laguna Verde will furnish up to 10 percent of the nation's electricity needs.

De la Garza said 70 percent of the equipment was imported, including the General Electric Model BRW-5 reactors.

Each one will require 90 tons of radioactive uranium of which one-third will be replaced each year after its energy has been spent. Thus over a three-year period, the entire load of uranium will have been changed in each unit.

Currently, 198 tons of uranium are stored within the Laguna Verde complex where armed guards patrol the high fenced area enclosing the storage site. De la Garza said the uranium will not be put into a radioactive state until it is ready to be loaded into the units.

"We can store the old fuel in the reactor for seven years, then decide what to do with it. We can either reprocess it or find a place to store it," the plant director said.

Although the current store of uranium came from the United States, de la Garza said, "there is enough uranium in Mexico for the life of the two units."

De la Garza said the project presents no danger because it is being carried out under the supervision of a commission following the guidelines set by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Brief says RRC order unfair to Panhandle operators

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawyers for "white oil" operators in the Panhandle Field say the Railroad Commission led operators to invest hundreds of millions of dollars in wells and equipment, then adopted an order that could shut down the wells.

A 101-page brief submitted to State District Judge Harley Clark this week spelled out the operators' complaints about the May 13 commission order that requires white oil wells to be retested.

The brief was prepared by Austin lawyers Ivan Hafley and Lloyd Broussard. The deadline for the commission to respond is Aug. 19. The white oil trial is set for Sept. 6.

White oil is a water-white liquid that is produced by chilling vapor through the use of mechanical "LTX" units. LTX is an acronym for "low temperature extraction."

White oil operators in the 1.5 million-acre Panhandle Field count the liquid as crude oil to meet the test ratio for an oil well — one barrel to less than 100,000 cubic feet of gas.

Phillips Petroleum Co. challenged this procedure before the commission in September 1981 but it was not until May that the regulatory agency issued its order. "Oil wells" that fail to meet the oil-gas ratio would be sealed.

Phillips and "their allies" own gas rights in the field, the brief said, but the oil rights are primarily owned by families and individuals.

Phillips alleges that white operators are draining gas that belongs to them since an "oil well," under commission rules, also can produce up to 500,000 cubic feet of gas a day. Also, an oil well can be drilled on 10 acres, a gas well on no less than 640 acres.

"The oil rights owners are just as entitled to produce this gas through their oil wells, as the major companies are to produce the vaporized oil hydrocarbons through their gas wells," the brief said.

The Panhandle Field, northeast of Amarillo, has produced more than 26 trillion cubic feet of gas and more than 1.3 billion barrels of oil since it was discovered in 1918.

"Together, this cumulative production clearly makes the Panhandle Field the largest associated oil and gas field in Texas. Viewed separately, it would be the largest gas field and second largest oil field in Texas," the brief said.

It said operators have relied on the commission's "action and inaction" in investing perhaps $250 million on LTX wells since 1978.

The brief said the economic impact of the commission order on the Panhandle region would be "astronomic."

Millions of dollars a year in tax revenues would be lost to the state and local communities, and the order would create a "rippling effect of tidal wave proportions on the economy" of the Panhandle, the brief said.

"In sum, the commission has ignored the common law, misconstrued the statutes, ignored and violated its statutory duties, misconstrued its own rules, and applied an unlawful standards to plaintiffs by the order," the brief said.

It asked the trial court to reverse the commission order, hold it null and void, and issue a permanent injunction against its enforcement by the commission.

Soviets plan to boost production

MOSCOW (AP) — The ruling Politburo has approved a plan to boost oil and gas production in western Siberia and to increase construction in the region by 60 percent over the next five years, the news agency Tass reported.

Tass said the Politburo, headed by Communist Party Chief Mikhail S. Gorbachev, discussed oil production Thursday during its weekly meeting and approved a production plan for 1986-90.

"It is envisioned to put into operation adequate production units and to increase the scope of construction and erection work at the (western Siberia) oil and gas complex by 60 percent over the current five-year period," Tass said.

The agency did not say how much production would be increased.

The Soviet Union is the world's largest oil producer, but output declined in 1984 for the first time since World War II and the trend has continued.

Many money fund managers continued shortening the maturities of thei r funds' portfolio holdings in anticipation of rising short-term interest rates . This week's 40-day average maturity is the shortest average since April 19D, 1985. The taxable money fund asset decrease of $681.7 million was du e to an asset outflow of $1.0 billion from institutional funds which was pa rtially offset by an asset inflow of $800.9 million to the consumer funds."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Selling fee varies on mutual funds

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I own shares in a mutual fund. If I decide to sell some of my shares, what price will I get — the price in the "sell" column or the "buy" column I see listed in newspaper mutual fund tables?

Doyle

A. You'll get the price in the sell column, unless your mutual fund levies a redemption fee. The vast majority of mutual funds do not have such charges. But some do and newspaper tables note that with the letter "r" after the funds' names.

Redemption fees vary among the relatively small number of mutual funds that have them. If your fund does have that kind of fee, you should study its prospectus to learn the details.

A redemption fee can reduce the price a shareholder receives when cashing in shares by as much as 4 percent. The standard advice from this column has always been to steer clear of funds with those fees.

A mutual fund's "sell" price is its asset value per share — the actual dollar and cents value behind each share. The "buy" price is the asset value per share, plus maximum commission, if any commission is charged. For no-load funds, on which no commission is charged, the buy and sell prices are exactly the same.

The per share asset value of most mutual funds moves up or down, as the market values of the stocks and/or bonds in which the funds' managers have invested rise or fall. The per share asset value is calculated every business day, after the close of stock market trading.

There's an exception to this general rule for money market mutual funds. Those funds invest in short-term debt securities and use accounting methods that keep their per share asset values constant — at $1 a share, in most cases.

If you want to cash in some or all of your mutual fund shares, you don't actually "sell" them in the market, as you would stocks. You redeem your mutual fund shares by turning them back to the fund.

Q. Being retired, we need preservation of capital and high income. Mutual funds that invest only in U.S. government securities currently are yielding a bit more than short-term certificates of deposit at federally insured banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions.

Higher yields imply greater risk. How much more risk is there in the above mentioned type of fund?

A. There's no risk, as far as income is concerned. We know the federal government will never default on its securities and always will pay interest on them. A mutual fund holding those securities collects that interest and, after deducting its operating expenses, passes that money along to fund shareholders as dividends.

But there is "market risk." The market values of government securities rise when interest rates fall and drop when interest rates rise — taking the share values of mutual funds holding those securities up or down.

That market risk is not extra large and, over the years, most such funds have done well by shareholders. Nonetheless, there have been periods of time when share values of those funds have taken sizable falls.

Overall, the risk in those funds has to be considered "moderate."

Q. My income is from Social Security and $110,000 in CDs at three different federally insured savings and loan associations. I keep $7,000 in a S&L money market deposit account. I am considering putting $25,000 into a "high yield" mutual fund holding U.S. government securities. What is your opinion of this?

A. That move would increase your income and, because most of your money would remain in the rock-solid safety of insured CDs, you would take on very little risk. My opinion is that you would be doing a wise thing.

Let's hope the mutual fund you are considering is a no-load fund. If you go into a load fund, the commission charge could be equal to or higher than the income you get for the first year. Also read the fund's prospectus carefully, to be sure it doesn't have a redemption fee or a "12b-1 plan," either of which would hurt the value of your investment.

STOCK CODES

All Stock Codes are based on industry standard Ticker Symbols provided by your broker or available from any Standard & Poor's Stock Ticker Guide. Codes are made up of a series of two-digit numbers, each representing one of the letters in the Ticker Symbol.

To determine the two-digit code for any letter of a Ticker Symbol, remember: The first key to be depressed is always the one on which the letter appears. The second key is always a "1," "2" or "3" indicating that letter's position on its own key (first, second or third position). EXAMPLE: "IBM" = "43 22 61"; "BX" = "22 92." Remember to depress the star key (*) after entering each code.

Sakowitz sells Amarillo store

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The Dunlap Company of Fort Worth has purchased Sakowitz of Amarillo and will reopen the store under new ownership Tuesday, store officials said.

The sale comes one week after Sakowitz Inc., of Houston sought protection from its creditoirs under chapter 11 of federal bankruptcy law. Robert Sakowitz, chariman and chief executive officer, has said the company, which operates 17 stores and six boutiques in Texas, Oklahoma and Arizona, probably would attempt to sell some its operations for economic reasons.

"Dunlaps has wanted to be in this market for a great number of years," Sakowitz store manager Roy Fly told the Amarillo Globe. "Sakowitz opened the doors for Dunlap to come into this city. I hope the people of Amarillo will be pleased, because there has been a lot of talk about what would happen to Sakowitz."

Dunlaps officials signed an agreement with Sakowitz on Wednesday after several weeks of negotiation to purchase the Amarillo store and its inventory, the Globe reported.

Fly, who will manage the Western Plaza Mall store for Dunlaps, was in Fort Worth Tuesday and Wednesday to meet with Dunlaps' executives. He said new inventory will said.

There are "no plans for change of staff or mode of operations," he said.

Sakowitz's flow of inventory to Amarillo stopped several weeks ago as the company's financial problems deepened, Fly said.

The Dunlap Company, like Sakowitz, is one of the few remaining family owned and operated retail store chain in Texas. The company, founded in 1893 by H.G. Dunlap, in what is now Oklahoma, operates 32 stores in Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri and New Mexico.

Over 50 attend first DSA meeting

From Staff Reports

Over 50 people attended The Drillsite Supervisors Association first meeting Thursday night at the Holiday Inn Center in Odessa, said Ray Sharbutt, co-founder of the organization.

"We had a real good response from our supply company and service company management," he said, adding that the membership has almost reached 70.

He said one manager at the meeting offered a 4 percent discount for all DSA members for fill-ups at DeCicco's Gulf Station on the Rankin Highway and Interstate 20 in Midland.

T.R. Hendricks, co-founder of the organization told the audience what they can expect from DSA. He said he had a friend who had worked for a drilling company for 20 years and the company was unable to provide a retirement plan for him.

He said a professional organization could offer retirement planning, IRAs and credit planning.

Phil Graves, member of the board, said the association would also enable service companies to give training programs, which would be beneficial to both DSA members and the service companies.

"DSA would be very beneficial for the service companies. In fact, one member of the audience, Marvin D. Witcher with Drilco, asked what can the service company do to help promote the professional organization," said Sharbutt. He said the companies would lend their expertise to the organization and develop communication between members.

At the meeting, members also stressed that DSA is a professional association and not a labor union or a licensing authority. "So many industry standards are set by other entities and associations," said Sharbutt. "We're getting the opinion of the guys on the rig."

In other business, the group discussed having a fish fry at its next meeting in three months and agreed to meet quarterly. The organization also discussed changing the name of the organization from the Permian Basin chapter to the International Chapter or National Chapter to include people out of the Permian Basin.

Sharbutt said the organization also decided to conduct business by mail since not all of the members would be able to attend meetings because of work schedules.

Tenneco to buy Crown operations

HOUSTON (AP) — Tenneco Oil Exploration and Production announced Tuesday it will buy Crown Central Petroleum Corp.'s oil and natural gas production operations in California.

Details of the agreement were not released, but a statement released by Tenneco said the deal with Crown, which is based in Baltimore, Md., will probably be completed in the third fiscal quarter of this year.

Reed to speak on acquifers at WTGS meeting

A. Joseph Reed will be the featured speaker at the luncheon meeting of the West Texas Geological Society at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Midland Center, 105 N. Main.

Reed will speak on "Aquifers of the Permian Basin." The Permian Basin contains three major and seven indentified minor fresh water aquifers. Each of the aquifers exhibit different characteristics with respect to lithology, depth and productive capabilities. The quality of the water in the aquifers also varies both within the same geologic formation, and between different aquifers.

Because of the varied nature of the aquifers, well construction must change to fit the existing conditions. Well spacing also becomes a critical factor in the proper drainage and efficient recovery of the ground water reserves.

Effects of ground water pollution are different depending on the nature of the aquifer which has been effected. Aquifer restoration techniques are therefore dependant on the physical character of the aquifer.

Reed has been a hydrologist with Ed L. Reed and Associates in Midland since 1968. He holds a BS degree in hydrology and an MS degree in watershed management from the University of Arizona. He is concerned with hydrologic and geologic investigations, ground water contamination studies, aquifer modeling, and water resources evaluations. He is chairman of the Water Resource Committee, West Texas Chamber of Commerce and has authored numerous articles in ground water investigations and hydrologic studies.

Cost for the meeting is $7 and reservations should be made by calling the Society by 4:00 pm. August 9.

Dawson reports net loss of $200,000 for third quarter

Dawson Geophysical Co. has reported financial results for the third quarter and nine months of fiscal 1985, ended June 30, 1985.

For the quarter, Dawson reported a net income loss of $200,000, compared with a net income of $371,000 for the same quarter in fiscal 1984. This results in a loss of $.07 per share, down from a $.13 per share earning last year. Revenues for the company were $1,723,000, down from $3,040,000 in 1984.

For the nine months of fiscal 1984, Dawson showed a net loss of $299,000, down from a net income of $701,000 in 1984. This averaged to be a loss of $.10 per share of common stock, compared with earnings of $.24 per share a year ago. Dawson reported revenues of $8,021,000 for the first nine months of 1985, up from $7,467,000 in revenues for the same period in 1984.

Processing error slows July wholesale report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department, in an unusual move, postponed today's scheduled release of its monthly wholesale price report after "processing errors" were discovered hours before the planned announcement.

Officials said the July report of the Producer Price Index would not be announced until next week, probably on Monday.

Longtime department analyst Craig Howell said the problem was discovered in last-minute proofreading of the report.

"When I left yesterday, everything was fine. Apparently they found some mistake at the last minute and decided to withhold it," he said.

The July index will be the first in which the one-month lag in energy prices is eliminated.

Mary Nicholas, a local artist specializing in wax pencil drawings of Southwestern subjects, displays a current project in her studio at her West Midland home.

Son's art lessons lead mom to career

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Eight years ago Mary Nicholas decided her oldest son Daniel needed to take art lessons. It was a mistake.

"I enrolled him in a class that was teaching wax pencil art and he didn't want to go," she said. "So I decided to go and became intrigued from the very beginning."

Today, the walls of the Nichols' West Midland home are adorned with the fruits of her short-lived but productive lessons. The pictures, mostly portraits of Southwest Indians and carefully reproduced pencil drawings from antique photographs, have not remained hidden in the house.

Proudly displayed on one wall of Ms. Nichols' eclectic, but antique studio, are a rainbow of ribbons and medals attesting to her specialized talents.

"I won three medals in one show," she bragged, modestly, but proudly. Adding that she only entered five pictures, it is not hard to understand why Ms. Nichol's originals can sell for more than $1,000.

Nor is it a surprise to find out that one of her pictures was chosen by the "Art in the Embassy" program for display in an ambassador's residence — in Lesotho.

"In the program, the ambassadors can select any art work for their residence," she said.

Ms. Nichols, however, does not need to go to Africa to sell her artwork. A twenty-year resident of El Paso before her husband, Al, a Southwestern Bell employee, got transferred to Midland last year, she regularly held and participated in art shows and produced limited edition prints which sold widely in that city.

Her pictures speak for themselves.

A Sioux Indian brave, his long, black mane blowing in the wind, looks outward with expectation and wondering, clearly sketched in his eyes.

"I call it 'Waiting'," said the housewife-turned-artist. "Waiting" is typical of her art which recalls another era with sensitivity and immediate compassion. Her drawing of a Tarahumara Indian, from "a primitive people who live in caves," reflects the subject's harsh life. Deep furrowed lines in the face from an unforgiving climate, old eyes — eyes that have seen a lot and cannot forget — are Ms. Nichol's acknowledgement of a people "who are known for their endurance races each year."

Her subjects are always real people. They have skin — young and supple as in her portrayal of two carousing youngsters — and they have eyes.

"I asked myself, what is different about my pictures," she said. "I prayed and asked God to make a difference in my art."

The difference is clearly in the eyes. Her subjects are not passive decoration. They are seemingly breathing reminders of a vanishing people — the eyes of another era.

For Ms. Nichols, the accidental discovery of her latent artistic talents has been a godsend.

"When everything is going crazy, it really is my salvation at times," she said.

Closely intertwined with her mastery of the wax pencil, a subtle medium that requires great care since mistakes are not easily fixed, is her love of antiques.

"I actually began collecting antiques before I ever took an art lesson," she said.

Her fondness of portraying Southwest Indians from old photographs led to a steady commission of other subjects, such as photos brought in by patrons desiring their relatives in wax pencil. With painstaking care, "sometimes taking a year" but usually averaging 50 to 60 hours per commission, Ms. Nichols produces a work of art from a yellowed photograph.

Although she has been slow to enter the local art scene, Ms. Nichols has already won awards at art shows in Odessa and Andrews, and was approached by officials from a local bank who asked if they could hang her pictures in their lobby.

She also has students.

"I don't advertise," she said. "I was doing a show at Midland Park Mall in March and put out a sign that lessons were available." She currently has 10 students who meet for a three-hour lesson, once a week for eight weeks.

"I take them all ages, sizes, shapes and forms," she said.

"When people say 'I can't draw a straight line," I say, 'Who wants to draw a straight line? A crooked line is much better.'"

Man sentenced to 10 years in prison for death

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Edward R. Tucker was sentenced to 10 years in prison Thursday for the April 19 stabbing death of 16-year-old Catarino Jurado.

Tucker, 17, had been convicted Wednesday of voluntary manslaughter by the six-man, six-woman jury, which in effect split the difference between prosecution pleas for a murder conviction and Tucker's claim that he acted in self-defense. In the punishment phase, however, the jurors leaned more toward Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre, who urged them to ignore defense requests for probation and give Tucker 15 years.

"We've got to look at what your verdict is going to say to the rest of the community," Schorre said in his punishment summation Thursday. Tucker should be sent to the Texas Department of Corrections not only to protect society, but for his own good, said Schorre, who praised the TDC's rehabilitative programs. But defense attorney Chris McCormack scoffed at the idea that going to prison would be good for Tucker, and urged the jury to consider the "chance circumstances" of the incident and grant the defendant probation.

Tucker had testified he was riding his bicycle past Jurado shortly after midnight April 19 when Jurado, who was standing next to a car, threatened him. Testimony from both sides had indicated Tucker's older brother Frank had beaten up Jurado's older brother Raymond two days earlier, and Tucker claimed Jurado wanted to avenge his brother's beating.

"He said he was going to kick my ass, too. That's when I told him to come on," Tucker testified Wednesday.

Jurado was stabbed six times, including a fatal thrust into the heart, a pathologist testified. Tucker claimed Jurado attacked him with a tire iron before he pulled out his knife; Schorre suggested he planted the tire iron near the body after killing Jurado.

The 142nd District Court jury viewed gruesome photographs of Jurado's wounds before convicting his assailant, but they deliberated over 5½ hours Wednesday before agreeing on the manslaughter conviction. After hearing from character witnesses Thursday, they deliberated another 2½ hours before settling on a 10-year sentence. The penalty range for voluntary manslaughter is two to 20 years.

Tucker, who has been held in county jail on a $25,000 bond since April, will receive credit for time served, but must serve at least a third of his sentence because he used a deadly weapon, according to 142nd District Judge Pat Baskin.

"We're very pleased with the jury's verdict," said Schorre after the conclusion of the three-day trial. McCormack said the defense was considering an appeal.

TDWR to study extent of chromium pollution

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A nearly $1 million study commissioned by the Texas Department of Water Resources is expected to determine the magnitude of chromium pollution of underground water supplies in two Ector County areas north and northwest of the Odessa city limits.

The two Superfund sites have been designated Odessa Chromium I, a eight-acre area near the intersection of West 44th Street and Brazos Avenue, just west of West County Road, and Odessa Chromium II, located in the vicinity of 5329 Andrews Highway.

During a public hearing Thursday night in the Odessa City Council chamber, approximately 45 residents of the two areas, as well as several people from other areas using water wells for household water needs, were warned by TDWR representatives that, while excessive chromium contamination will color water a greenish yellow, chromium-tainted water that is unsafe for human consumption may not show any discoloration or bad taste even though contamination may exceed Environmental Protection Agency recommended standards.

Greg Tipple, project manager for the TDWR Superfund Unit, said the study being conducted by IT Corp., a Houston-based consulting firm, will attempt to determine the sources of the chromium contamination and how widespread the contamination is.

A fact sheet distributed to those attending the public meeting noted that preliminary analyses have revealed significant levels of chromium, zinc, nickel and copper contamination. The fact sheet also states "ground water and soil contamination may have resulted from the improper disposal of waste waters containing chromium from several small industrial facilities.

Bishop holds annual youth anti-crime rally

Youngsters encouraged to stay in school

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

An unexpected low turnout of youngsters greeted Bishop Louis Calvin Bishop at his annual anti-crime rally of the Youth Crime Prevention League, held Thursday afternoon at Washington Park.

Thirty-five to 40 children, Mayor Thane Akins and Midland Reporter-Telegram publisher Charles Spence met under the metal canopy of an outdoor picnic shelter to address the problem of juvenile delinquency and to encourage the youngsters to finish their educations.

Browning, who founded the Youth Crime Prevention League in 1956 in Temple, led the children, ranging from seven to 17 years of age, in a robust rendition of "My country Tis of Thee."

A small child recited the Lord's Prayer at Browning's request while the other children answered in antiphonal response.

Browning, a bishop in the Independent Methodist Church, then quickly launched into his tireless message.

"We're going to talk to you about a beautiful life," said the evangelist and former sidekick of Martin Luther King. "We're going to talk about building a beautiful life."

Browning wasted no time in telling the youngsters that "crime doesn't pay."

"They'll catch you out there and it can only get you in serious trouble," he said.

He also warned them against drug use.

"Stay away from drugs," he said. "They'll make you fly like an eagle but then you'll come down with a boom."

Speaking in the shaking vocal patterns reminiscent of King, Browning urged the children to repeat after him.

"I am somebody," he shouted. "I love everybody and I'll be able to produce a beautiful life."

Akins thanked Browning for his work with the league.

"I'm interested in people who are giving their lives to our young people," Akins said. "I think he's (Browning) a good example of someone who has dedicated his life to helping others. The best way to stay out of trouble is by helping others. That's the way to true happiness."

Following a few words of greeting from Spence, Browning then launched into his favorite topic — the 1960s when he was heavily involved in the Civil Rights Movement, befriending King and publicly denouncing black militants like Dick Gregory, H. Rapp Brown and Stokely Carmichael.

Recalling an era that happened 10 years before most of his audience was born, Browning seemed to lose the attention of many of the youth.

Browning, who travels the state in his red, white and blue "Crime Stop" van, complete with its own rear-bumper podium, lives in Fort Worth, where the league headquarters are located.

Delta Air Lines Flight 191 brought people together in tragedy

EDITOR'S NOTE: One week ago, Delta Air Lines Flight 191 plunged into the muddy Texas prairie, killing one motorist and 132 people on the plane. Thirty-one people survived. Hundreds were involved in rescue efforts. This is an account of the tragedy through the eyes of several individuals who lived it.

By SCOTT McCARTNEY

DALLAS (AP) — By 5:30 p.m., Charles Petty was home from work and had turned on the TV. Robert Katz was on vacation, holding his wife's hand in a plane 22,000 feet in the air. Benny Hopper was making her regular emergency room rounds.

About the same time, Matt Guilfoyle was picking up a repaired briefcase at Neiman-Marcus. The Rev. Richard Brown was working in his church near the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. Bob Sonnamaker was dropping a friend off at the airport.

It was a sunny Friday afternoon. None of them expected trouble.

But a jumbo jet carrying 163 people, including the Katzes, suddenly pitched and lost altitude in a rapidly developing pocket of severe weather.

"Oh, my God, Debbie, this is serious," Katz said to his wife.

Battered by severe winds, Delta Air Lines Flight 191 touched down in a field, bounced across a highway, careened into airport water tanks and exploded at 6:06 p.m. short of Runway 17L.

In less than 10 minutes last week, 133 people had been killed, scores of lives had been shattered and hundreds of people had responded to the disaster.

Katz unbuckled his seat belt, spotted a way to the ground through the shattered plane and jumped safely away. But where was Debbie?

Mrs. Hopper answered the phone at the Parkland Memorial Hospital emergency room. Was it true, a reporter asked, that a plane had crashed? "What?" she said. In a few seconds, a second caller provided the answer: expect numerous injured passengers.

SONNAMAKER, A trained paramedic, saw smoke at the north end of the airport. He drove toward it, parked, grabbed his trauma bag and started running. A Delta truck picked him up, but when he reached the scene, he saw no life.

Petty, chief medical examiner for Dallas County, saw a bulletin about a crash on TV. He telephone to tell his staff to enact the never-before-used major disaster plan. They had already done so.

Brown, a former American Airlines pilot and the closest clergy to the airport, went to the scene and began praying over bodies. Out of the corner of his eye, he saw a baby overlooked by rescuers. The baby was breathing.

And Guilfoyle, Delta's chief marketing executive at Dallas-Fort Worth, saw a bulletin on a department store TV monitor. He had carried his disaster manual for years in his briefcase, but he didn't have it now.

"I've worked for Delta for 25 years," he would say later. "You never think it's going to be you. It will always be the other guy."

In the rubble of Flight 191, Katz found his injured wife and Sonnamaker saved a woman by spotting a shiny wedding band. The baby Brown found died at a hospital. Mrs. Hopper assembled a medical team, and Guilfoyle worked 30 hours helping families and gathering information.

Petty had the grimmest job of all — piecing together the mangled bodies for positive identification.

"I've seen it in the next of kin and I've seen it in the people working on this," Guilfoyle said. "The human spirit is a great thing. It rises to occasions."

AS HE RAN toward the crash, Bob Sonnamaker was thinking only about the mud collecting on his feet, slowing him down.

"Before I knew it, I was amongst the devastation. I didn't see it until I was in it," he said.

Some bodies, mercifully killed on impact, were still burning. Most were strapped into their seats. And nowhere did he see anything moving.

"I looked over at a triple section of seats and I saw a reflection. It was a hand moving, and the reflection of her wedding ring caught my eye."

Sonnamaker hollered for help, cut the woman's seat belt and began administering first aid.

The woman was Kathy Ford of Fort Worth, who remains in serious condition. Sonnamaker talked with her husband and sister.

"They were anxious to know what happened," Sonnamaker said. "If someone receives word that their son was lost in war — that's not enough. They want to know more."

Robert Katz, an investment banker from Boca Raton, Fla., flies often, looking for investments. As Flight 191 descended sharply, he knew the Lockheed L-1011 was in trouble.

"We had a very big impact. We hit the ground and I said to Debbie, 'Just hold on. We're on the ground. We're OK. We're landing.'"

GOP congressmen draw hefty PAC contributions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five of Texas' six freshmen Republican congressmen drew substantial contributions — totalling between $32,550 and $77,350 — from special-interest political action committees, according to their latst campaign finance reports.

The reports cover the first six months of 1985.

Mac Sweeney of Wharton, who was working overtime to mop up a large campaign debt, attracted the most individual and PAC contributions in the delegation. He received total donations of $220,265 with $77,350 coming from PACs.

Beau Boulter of Amarillo received $47,100 in PAC contributions. Tom DeLay of Sugar Land received $39,900; Richard Armey of Denton, $34,650; and Larry Combest of Lubbock, $32,550.

Joe Barton of Ennis received only $6,000 from PACs. He was the only one of the six not to get a seat on a major committee and serves on Interior, and Science and Technology.

Sweeney is on Armed Services; Boulter on Budget; DeLay on Public Works and Government Operations; Armey on Education and Labor and Government Operations; and Combest on Agriculture.

Boulter had the biggest campaign debt, about $42,600.

Democrat Marvin Leath of Marlin won a seat on the powerful Budget Committee, and Albert Bustamante of San Antonio, the only new Democrat in the delegation, was appointed to Armed Services, but their reports were not available Thursday at the House records office.

Two Texas veterans, Democrat J.J. "Jake" Pickle of Austin and Republican Bill Archer of Houston, boasted the largest campaign chests while picking up the fewest contributions. Both have historically drawn little opposition.

Archer, who was elected to fill George Bush's River Oaks seat in 1970, had $401,893 in his cofers.

Pickle, who in 1963 won the seat once held by Lyndon Johnson, reported cash-on-hand of $358,705.

Pickle collected the smallest amount of contributions — $150. Archer reported contributions of $1,095.

Stereo speakers taken in burglary of local residence

From Staff Reports

Stereo speakers, valued at $600, were reported stolen during a burglary Thursday from the Eric Breden residence at 3101 N. Midland Drive, according to police department reports. The burglary is believed to have occurred between 12:30 and 1:30 p.m.

In other complaints, E.J. Walden, 1310 S. Main St., reported Thursday that a handgun, holster and piggy bank were stolen from his residence between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Wednesday.

According to police reports, the property together is valued at $245.

Also, Wanda Martinez, 4405 N. Garfield St., told police that a citizen's band radio was stolen from her vehicle either Wednesday or Thursday while it was parked in the 1000 block of S. Midkiff Road.

The theft occurred between 10 p.m. Wednesday and 2 a.m. Thursday. The radio is valued at $200, police reported.

A 26-year-old Midland man remained in Midland City Jail early today following his arrest Thursday on charges of unlawfully carrying a weapon, police reported.

The man, who was not identified, was arrested about 2:45 a.m. in the 3300 block of W. Illinois Ave. He is expected to be arraigned later today.

TRAGEDY

But the 500,000-pound jet slashed across Texas Highway 114 and hit a water tank.

"There was a tremendous ball of fire up in the front part of the plane," he said in a televised interview. "By some miracle the plane split in half and the fireball section went in one direction and where we were sitting went in another direction."

KATZ JUMPED 10 feet to the ground and suffered only minor injuries.

"I was looking for my wife and I couldn't find her. I looked and I looked and I looked. I found on the ground photos of my children that my wife had in her wallet and then I spotted my wife," he said.

Debbie Katz suffered a broken neck, a punctured lung and other injuries, and remains in Parkland hospital in serious condition.

Procedure called for Richard Brown to be the first priest called to an airport disaster.

"They had pretty well finished taking out the survivors and I just went around praying over each body," Brown said. "In one section I was praying over a mother and child, and out of the corner of my eye I saw the baby.

"I stared at him and his stomach was moving up and down gradually — he was breathing."

Brown summoned help and the baby, 2-year-old Kirk Sheehan, was taken to Parkland, where he later died. His parents, Ryan and Robin Sheehan of Danville, Calif., were killed outright.

As a B-52 pilot in Vietnam and a commercial pilot for seven years, Brown had witnessed crashes and feared crashes. But he had never "worked" a crash.

Brown stayed at the site until 9 p.m., then went to comfort families. He visited them for days.

"I've been telling the families I saw two positive notes out there. One was that there was some time before impact that they could sense something was wrong and say a final prayer or get things right with God if they needed to," Brown said.

"The other was that it looked like all the deaths were caused by impact, not fire. Those that went went very quickly."

BOWTIE-WEARING Dr. Charles Petty, a nationally known forensic expert, has been at the Dallas County ME's office 16 years. The disaster plan had never been activated.

The medical examiner's facilities had been designed with such a disaster in mind. The body storage area was built far larger than normally needed, and a loading area is easily modified to handle body-laden refrigerated trucks.

Last Friday's crash changed many lives. But by Thursday, Guilfoyle was back at his desk at the airport, answering phone calls on the first ring. Mrs. Hopper was making her rounds at Parkland. Brown, between meetings with victims' families, was preparing Sunday's sermon, Robert Katz remained at his wife's bedside and Charles Petty had all but three bodies positively identified.

Like so many others involved in the crash, Bob Sonnamaker returned to his daily routine — hustling freelance audio recording jigs.

"I can't get over it. It's like a slide show in my head," Sonnamaker said of the crash.

Prisoner's escape causes plane's diversion

DALLAS (AP) — One airplane was diverted and another craft had to taxi off a runway Thursday when an escaped prisoner raced across Dallas Love Field, authorities said.

The prisoner was recaptured several minutes after he fled a Bexar County deputy at the airport about 5:30 p.m., and headed across the airport's runways, said Dallas Police Lt. Danny Davis.

Bexar County Sheriff's Capt. M.R. Rose said Juan Rodriquez, 28, was being transported from Arkansas to San Antonio where he is charged with attempted murder. He escaped while he and a deputy were waiting for a connecting flight from Dallas to San Antonio, officers said.

Rodriguez offered no resistance when he was discovered beneath a bed in a home not far from the airport, according to Dallas County Sheriff's office spokesman Jim Ewell.

Ewell said Rodriguez was apprehended by Dallas Police officers Lisa Smith and Brenda Nichols and deputies Merle Nicholson and Kenneth Henson.

Nicholson and Henson, plainclothes warrant officers, were in the Love Field area when they learned of the escape, Ewell said.

Odessan arrested on indecency charge

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 41-year-old Odessa man, arrested by Ector County sheriff's deputies about 5:15 p.m. Thursday, was to be arraigned this morning on a charge of indecency with a child.

According to Deputy Troy Davis, he and Deputy Gloria Rico took the 41-year-old man into custody at his southwest Odessa home on a warrant alleging the offense was commited against a girl who was 12 years old at the time of the incident.

Davis said a hold has been placed on the man in connection with municipal charges expected to be filed. The man reportedly was on probation at the time of his arrest in connection with a similar incident, according to Davis.

Judge blocks execution

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has blocked the scheduled execution of Leon Rutherford King, one of two Texas prison inmates ordered put to death on Aug. 15.

U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling on Thursday granted a stay for King, 40, who was convicted in the 1978 bludgeoning death of Michael Underwood, 26, after Underwood and his 19-year-old girlfriend were abducted. The woman was raped.

Court papers filed Wednesday said there were errors in questioning of potential jurors at King's 1980 trial, in allowing certain testimony from police officers and in allowing King to be searched after his arrest.

King appealed his 1978 conviction and was granted a new trial two years later. He was convicted a second time and sentenced to death.

Odessa police seize narcotics

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Acting on a Crime Stoppers tip late Thursday afternoon, search warrant-armed Odessa police and Ector County sheriff's deputies entered a residence in the 800 block of Roxanna, seized a quantity of illicit narcotics and suspected stolen property and arrested a man and his wife.

Crimes against persons detectives obtained a search warrant from Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly and searched the residence, finding two ounces of a substance believed to be cocaine and suspected stolen property valued at about $5,000, police spokesman Rusty Baker said.

The 36-year-old man and his 34-year-old wife, arrested on charges of aggravated possession of cocaine, were to be formally arraigned and have bonds set this morning.

STUDY

Tipple said Woolley Tool & Manufacturing Co., in the 5600-block of Andrews Highway, is considered a "potential responsible party" in connection with the contamination in that particular area. A TDWR news release June 20 said suspected sources of contamination "are several now-defunct local industries that generated chromium-contaminated waste water from the plating of metals and the cleaning of radiators."

According to Tipple, studies in late 1983 and early 1984 revealed high levels of chromium contamination of 10 wells in one area and nine wells in another area.

Under the $938,916 contract awarded IT Corp. June 13, several alternative methods of resolving the pollution problem will be recommended, Tipple said. The cost of implementing the most feasible and cost effective method of resolving the problem will come under the EPA Superfund program created to clean up abandoned hazardous waste sites.

The scope of the cleanup operation, Tipple indicated, will depend on an evaluation of the results of the investigation, which is expected to last about 18 months.

The possibility of tying residents of the affected areas into Odessa's water supply has been explored, he said, but indications are that the two areas would have to be annexed by the City of Odessa. So far, residents have objected to annexation. Another solution may be to establish a type of community water system for the areas, utilizing uncontaminated underground water sources if that is possible.

Tipple said he doubted an excavation project would be utilized, should it be found specific soil areas are contaminated, because it would probably involve removal of massive quantities of soil. The contaminated soil would then have to be disposed of at authorized sites, making the cost prohibitive.

As to the possibility of installing water purification units to remove metallic elements from individual water wells, Tipple said he doubted this would be feasible because there would be ongoing maintenance costs involved. The necessary filtration process, he said, would not be as simple as putting in a water softener system.

Once the study by IT Corp. is completed, results evaluated and alternatives recommended, the TDWR will hold another public meeting to apprise residents in the affected areas of their available options.

New publication shows steamier side of Scripture, atheist claims

AUSTIN (AP) — "The X-Rated Bible" is a newly-released book showing that even the Bible talks of incest, rape and abortion, officials of the American Atheist Center said.

The book, released last week, is a compilation of the Bible's steamier sections which contain the same type of material condemned by some who support banning sexually explicit books and magazines, center officials said.

Jon Garth Murray, director of the Austin-based center, said the 428-page book should be studied by pornography foes and Bible supporters who condemn sex-oriented publications.

"There are examples of the same kinds of things in the Bible that the people who claim to be representatives of the Bible are trying to get out of our society," he said.

Murray said if pornography opponents are "going to condemn human sexuality, they're going to have to condemn it on some other basis than the Bible."

According to the atheist center, the Bible includes "incest, rape, fornication, homosexuality, mass-inflicted abortions, lasciviousness and adultery." It also contains "sado-masochism, pedophilia, lusting, bestiality, masturbation, lewdness, copulation and sodomy," the center said in a news release.

But pornography foes disagree with Murray's explanation.

Evenly Dee, executive director of Morality in Media, said if such actions are mentioned in the Bible, they "are mentioned as evil and usually punished as evil," whereas "in pornography they're represented as good, pleasurable and desirable.

Morality in Media is an anti-pornography organization based in New York.

Asked to name a specific sex activity condoned by the Bible but condemned by anti-pornography activists, Murray said, "I really don't know."

Despite its provocative contents, the book, compiled by Edward Ackerley, a California educator, might have a difficult time making it to the best-seller lists, said Murray, son of the center's founder, Madalyn Murray O'Hair.

No major book distributor or store chain has agreed to carry it, so "The X-Rated Bible" is available only by mail from the atheist center.

One story included in the book is about David, later king of Israel, and his friendship with Jonathan, son of King Saul. Quoting David's description of Jonathan's love for him as "passing the love of women," Ackerley contends they had a homosexual relationship.

Burial proposed for Alamo soldier's skull

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The skull of a young man believed to have been killed during the seige on the Alamo may find a final resting place only a stone's throw from the historic Texas battle site.

Robert M. Benavides, vice president of the William B. Travis chapter of the Sons of the Texas Revolution, wants to build a tomb for the skull on Alamo Plaza.

"We don't even know which side he was on," Benavides said of the skull, which now is the property of the state of Texas. "But it was suggested some proper burial should be given to this man."

Benavides said Thursday that his chapter is already planning ways to finance the tomb and a companion memorial consisting of a gas-powered eternal flame, the San Antonio Light reported today.

The tomb would salute the memory of the unknown Alamo soldier, while the eternal flame would symbolize the bloody battle's special role in the struggle for Texas independence, he said.

Now stored away in the archaeology lab at the University of Texas at San Antonio, the antique skull is believed to be the remains of a casualty of the March 6, 1836, battle when a Mexican army under Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna wiped out the Alamo defenders after a 13-day seige.

Benavides has already received tentative state approval for the skull's reburial, if the memorial is built as planned. Believed to be that of a 23-year-old male, the skull carries a slash mark that could have been made by a saber.

During a 1979 dig on the Alamo grounds near the old north wall, university archaeologists found the bones buried with other artifacts and debris that linked it to the famous battle. No other bones were found.

Meanwhile, Benavides is scheduled to ask the city's Historic Review Board on Monday to look over his plans for the tomb and a neighboring eternal flame memorial. He said he wants both to be at the southern base of the Cenotaph, which is itself a memorial to the fallen heroes of the Alamo.

Benavides said he hopes to have the project completed in time to have local dignitaries light the eternal flame on March 6, 1986, in accordance with scheduling already endorsed by the city's Sesquicentennial Committee.

College education becomes family affair

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Getting a college education is a family affair for Arthur Fennessey, his wife Cheryl and their daughter Angel.

The three Fennesseys have attended Our Lady of the Lake University for the past few years and all will graduate at ceremonies Saturday.

"My college graduation is the greatest event of my life so far and to share it with my parents will make it really special," said Angel, 23. "We're an extremely close family."

Angel is graduating with a degree in media communication arts and will be looking for a job, possibly in public relations, after graduation.

Mrs. Fennessey, who has been attending Weekend College at Our Lady of the Lake since 1980, will receive her degree in general management.

Fennessey, 44, will get his degree in management. He, too, attended Weekend College, entering at the same time as his wife.

He started college with some credits on his record, while his wife had not taken any courses prior to entering school.

"I just decided to start taking courses and I liked it so well, I just continued," he said.

Mrs. Fennessey, who had always loved books, said her supervisor at Lutheran General Hospital was taking classes at Our Lady of the Lake and he encouraged her to enroll.

"Sometimes I got tired and said I'd never take 12 hours again. But I was determined to finish and I never gave up," she said.

Going to school with her husband and daughter, she said, "enhanced our lives because we each understood why the other needed study time.

Woman convicted of murdering baby son

HOUSTON (AP) — A 19-year-old woman convicted of murder in the smothering of her 8-day-old son faces up to life in prison and a $10,000 fine after being found guilty by a Harris County jury.

A state district court jury deliberated about one hour Thursday before finding Leanne Pitts guilty of the April 10 suffocation of her son, Michael Dean Pitts.

The six-man, six-woman panel of jurors then began punishment phase deliberations, but adjourned without a decision, and was to continue deliberations today.

During final arguments Thursday, prosecutor Joe Magliolo said Ms. Pitts must be responsible for her actions.

"A person must be held responsible for their conduct, for the choices they make," Magliolo said.

But defense attorney Jimmy James argued Ms. Pitts, who became pregnant while unmarried, was torn between her parents and her former husband.

During the trial, jurors listened to a tape recording in which Ms. Pitts called a constable's office and told a dispatcher, "I've killed my baby."

New 'most wanted' lists on the way

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says that new "most wanted" lists of parents who do not pay child support have been prepared for Austin, Corpus Christi, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio.

The advertisements in Texas newspapers, each with 10 names of offenders and the amounts they owe, are paid for with federal funds.

"Since this program kicked off less than a month ago, nine persons on these five lists either have been apprehended by local law enforcement officials or have voluntarily come in to make arrangements for catching up on their arrearness," Mattox said.

Mattox said all of the 30 child support enforcement offices of his department over the state are preparing similar lists.

"So I would say to persons who don't want to see their names in the newspaaper that they should voluntarily contact the nearest child support enforcment office before they find themselves on the list," Mattox said.

Sears 1986 catalog to feature Capitol locations

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Capitol isn't for sale, but it may well show up right in the middle of the Sears catalog.

Austin and eight other communities will provide the backdrop for models in the women's fashion section of the Sears, Roebuck and Co. 1986 spring-summer catalog, the company says.

Sears, which is celebrating its 100th anniversary in 1986, picked the sites because they also are observing historic milestones, company officials said.

Health fraud cheats elderly, desperate, ill

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — "Moon dust," promoted as a cure for arthritis and other afflictions, cost $100 for three ounces — and turned out to be just plain sand.

The "miracle spike," a tube containing about a penny's worth of barium chloride, a chemical used in rat poison, was supposed to be worn around the neck as a cure for cancer and diabetes. It cost $300.

The "Congo Kit," billed as a cure for arthritis, was actually two hemp mittens.

These are just three of several hundred worthless, unproven and sometimes harmful products uncovered by a House subcommittee during a four-year investigation of quackery, completed last year. The subcommittee report, titled "Quackery: A $10 Billion Scandal," calls quackery the "single most prevalent and damaging of the frauds directed at the elderly."

"WE FOUND THE inventiveness of the quacks to be as unlimited as their callousness and greed," said Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., chairman of the House Aging Committee's subcommittee on health and long-term care. "We found promoters who advised arthritics to bury themselves in the earth, sit in an abandoned mine, or stand naked under a 1,000-watt bulb during the full moon.

"These suffering souls have been wrapped in manure, soaked in mud, injected with snake venom, sprayed with WD-40, bathed in kerosene and made to pay for the privilege of being afflicted that way."

Federal efforts to control quackery are "minimal" and "diminishing," the subcommitte charged, in the face of a quackery problem that is "growing at an alarming rate."

"In short," it concluded, "there is little risk and a tremendous amount of money to be made in selling hope to the desperate."

QUACKERY IS HARDLY new. "The first snake oil salesman was the snake in the Garden of Eden," says Dr. Victor Herbert, professor of medicine at Hahnemann Medical Center in Philadelphia and an expert on nutrition and health fraud.

The term "quack" dates back to the 16th century as an abbreviation for "quacksalver," a charlatan who boasts or "quacks" noisily about the curative or "salving" powers of a product without knowing anything about medicine.

"We are certainly in a time when quackery is epidemic again," says William Jarvis, chairman of the department of Public Health Science at Loma Linda University in California and president of the National Council Against Health Fraud. "It's happened before and it's happening again."

Experts say quackery is flourishing for many reasons, including increasingly sophisticated marketing efforts, the aging of the population (the elderly are especially vulnerable targets), growing interest in health (which is easily exploited by fad-promoters and quack advertisers), and lessening attention from federal regulators.

Food and Drug Administration

The FDA is an agency within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. It was created by the Food and Drug Act of 1906 to regulate food and drug safety. Responsibilities have grown to include cosmetics, medical devices, radiation and veterinary products. Among its responsibilities are:

- Regulation of the safety, effectiveness and labeling of all prescription and over-the-counter drugs for human use
- Evaluation and approval of claims for new drugs that are biological products [vaccines, blood, etc.]
- Standards on composition, quality, nutrition and safety of food, food additives, colors and cosmetics
- Safety, efficacy and labeling of medical devices and approval of applications for new medical devices and diagnostic products
- Programs to reduce human exposure to radiation and research on the radiation effects
- Standards and regulation of veterinary drug and food products
- Research into the effects of toxins on humans and animals

ALTHOUGH THE Food and Drug Administration (FDA) was established early in this century to crack down on fraudulent and unsafe food and drugs, its primary role shifted in the early 1960s after the thalidomide disaster. Congress amended the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act to require that new drugs be proven not only safe but effective, and since then, FDA has been largely preoccupied with testing prescription and over-the-counter drugs.

FDA devoted only about one-half of 1 percent of its budget last year to fighting quackery. It obtained 24 seizures and three injunctions and referred three cases to the Justice Department for criminal prosecution in 1984, says spokesman Bruce Brown, but has completed less than one criminal prosecution a year for health fraud since 1970.

"Okay," said then-FDA Commissioner Arthur Hull Hayes Jr. in a speech to the Pharmaceutical Advertising Council three years ago, "If this (quackery) is such a big problem, what is FDA doing about it? The answer, I'm afraid, is not much.

"We are ... simply overmatched. There are too many quacks, too skillful at the quick change of address and product name, for the cumbersome procedures of FDA regulation."

"In reality," admits an FDA pamphlet, "it's much easier for a swindler or quack to get his product on the market than it is for the government and others to take it off the market."

UNDER GROWING CRITICISM from inside and outside, FDA set up a Fraud Branch last September to process enforcement actions through its 150 branches around the country. The agency also stepped up public education efforts to "vaccinate" buyers against health fraud, and has included "increased activity against quackery" among its 10 top priorities.

But critics such as Herbert aren't satisfied. He supports proposed legislation to set up a federal Strike Force on Health Quackery, with members from FDA, the Federal Trade Commission and the U.S. Postal Service.

"The answer is, they (FDA) ought to get a bigger budget for their enforcement arm," Herbert says. "Fraud is crime, and when the fraud is organized nationally, it's organized crime."

THE MOST COMMON quack products, according to FDA, promise to help relieve pain, cure arthritis and cancer, reduce weight, eliminate baldness, restore youth and improve your sex life. Such products rip off up to $10 billion a year from the elderly, Pepper estimates, and as much as $25 billion from the entire population.

Quackery resists easy definition, prompting some officials to echo what Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart once said of hard-core pornography: I may not be able to define it, but "I know it when I see it."

To some, it includes any health product for which unsubstantiated claims are made. To others it is a useless treatment or product sold for profit by someone who knows it doesn't work.

"If you believe in chewing on old socks to cure your arthritis and you want to chew old socks in the privacy of your own home, that's fine," says Val Halamandaris, president of the National Association for Home Care. "If you get up on a soapbox and say chewing on old socks cures arthritis, I still don't have a problem.

"But when you start charging money to sell people old socks to chew on as a cure for arthritis, then I start to worry."

THE PEPPER SUBCOMMITTEE report focused on unproven remedies whose common elements are "conscious deceit," profit and disregard for scientific fact. But more than three-quarters of the unproven remedies reviewed by the subcommittee were also found to be potentially dangerous. And even "harmless" products can cause harm indirectly, by delaying or inhibiting effective treatment or simply wasting lots of money.

"This isn't a Mickey Mouse thing," Halamandaris says. "You add up millions of dollars and millions of dollars, and you get billions of dollars.

"It's easy to joke about some of these schemes because they're so ridiculous, but when you stop laughing, people are getting ripped off and injured and killed."

Increasingly, FDA uses the term "health fraud" instead of "quackery," because it is easier to define legally and not as emotionally charged.

"Quackery is not a legal term," says Clinton Ray Miller, lobbyist for the National Health Federation — a diverse, 17,000-member association of health enthusiasts dedicated to freedom of choice in health matters. "It is a pejorative term by which health bigots categorize people who don't belong to their inside group."

MILLER, WHO CALLS his federation "a Sherwood Forest for everybody who gets clobbered by the Nottingham of organized medicine," is sharply critical of the Pepper subcommittee for "closing its eyes" to what he calls "true medical fraud — unnecessary surgery, unnecessary drugs and unnecessary hospitalization."

But health fraud, by anybody's definition, is profitable and widespread.

"It goes from the ridiculous and the almost-funny to the tragic," says Sorell Schwartz, professor of pharmacology at Georgetown University. "It runs the gamut from people who don't have enough intelligence to void in the morning to people with M.D. degrees."

"To me," Schwartz says, "over-the-counter diet pills are a fraud, but they are also an accepted form of health fraud. Or a cream that is supposed to make your skin look 20 years younger.

"Anybody 60 years old who believes something he takes is going to give him the skin of a 20-year-old probably deserves what he gets."

MANY QUACK PRODUCTS today are distributed or sold through the mail. Consumers Union recently set up its own health food store operating in two states and ordered more than 300 products from about 70 companies. But instead of selling the products, Consumers Union took them to a seven-member panel of nutritionists, doctors and lawyers.

The panel concluded that 42 of the companies market or distribute at least one product violating federal law — either as an unapproved new drug or a misbranded product. The results were published in last month's Consumer Reports, along with a report highly critical of the FDA, which it said has "pretty much thrown in the towel" in the battle against health fraud.

FDA RESPONDED with a letter from Commissioner Frank E. Young and a two-page press release detailing recent enforcement actions and policy.

"FDA's policy against health fraud is to act immediately against life-threatening products, quickly against health-threatening ones and when resources permit against various forms of economic fraud," the release stated.

"If you buy that one," comments Halamandaris, "I've got a bridge in Brooklyn I can sell you real cheap. The FDA is a joke in terms of what they do in medical quackery."

He and other agency critics — including some on the inside — call for more prosecution of carefully chosen criminal cases as a deterrent to health fraud, much as the Internal Revenue Service tries to deter tax-cheating.

"Administrative remedies (such as seizures and injunctions) do not afford a sufficient punishment to fit the crime," says James Harvey Young, a leading historian of quackery in America. "Old-fashioned litigation, with the threat of major fines and of prison, even if sometimes cumbersome, is sorely needed."

BUT CRIMINAL prosecutions are the most expensive, labor-intensive and time-consuming way of cracking down on quackery, says FDA spokesman Brown. And with limited resources, the agency must go after dangerous products before non-lethal rip-offs.

"The economic frauds will always lose out to the life-threatening ones," Brown says. "A mix of enforcement and educational remedies is needed."

Both FDA and its critics agree that the most frequent victims of health fraud are the elderly and people with chronic, incurable illnesses, such as cancer, arthritis, heart disease, high blood pressure and diabetes.

Guidelines useful in spotting quackery

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Health fraud typically relies on several common elements. Here is a 10-point profile of quackery, compiled by Emory University history professor James Harvey Young, who has studied and written about the field for more than 30 years:

— Exploitation of fear.

— Promise of painless treatment and good results.

— Claims of a miraculous scientific breakthrough.

— Simpleton science: Disease has but one cause, and one treatment is all that is needed to fight it. Bad nutrition causes all disease; good nutrition cures it.

— The Galileo ploy: Like Galileo, we cult gurus are misunderstood by blind scientists, but are destined to be heroes to future generations.

— The conspiracy theory, also known as "The establishment is out to get us."

— The moving target: Shifts in theory to adjust to circumstances. Laetrile went from drug to "vitamin," from cure to palliative to preventive, from low to high dosages, from working alone to never working alone, from one chemical formula to another, and so forth. "B-15" ("pangamate") is any chemical or combination of chemicals the seller chooses to put in the bottle.

— Reliance on anecdotes and testimonials. They don't separate fact from fiction or cause and effect from coincidence.

— Distortion of the idea of "freedom." By distorting "freedom of informed choice" to "freedom of choice," snake-oil salesmen acquire freedom to defraud, and their victims can lose their money, their health and their lives.

— Large sums of money are involved.

Limit hospitality

By ERMA BOMBECK

My Mom has a plaque just inside her front door that reads, "If we get to drinking Sunday afternoon and start insisting that you stay over until Tuesday, please remember we don't mean it."

My Mother likes house guests as well as the next one, but let's be realistic. House guests should be regarded as perishables ... leave them out too long and they go bad.

It is rare when you can unite in holy wedlock two families in one house any longer than 48 hours without the hostess attacking her welcome mat with a steak knife. Some families eat at 4:30 in the afternoon. Others fall right out of the happy hour into bed.

Some guests consider a picnic in the park as a "forced death march" while others, if allowed to sit around and watch TV for more than an hour, whine, "We can do this at home. We want to see something!" It's a game.

Take Len and and Bernadine. Take their children Puberty and Sissy. Take their dog, Carl. Please.

We could hardly wait until they came for a visit. Hadn't seen them in six years. You forget a lot in six years.

We forgot that Bernadine was vegetarian and was allergic to 18 vegetables and nine fruits.

We forgot that when Len snored, cattle became restless 40 miles away.

We had not remembered that Carl drank out of the toilet and his nose was always pointed toward a crotch somewhere.

Somehow, we had forgotten that Puberty was light-fingered and you had to hide your purse in the vegetable crisper in the refrigerator.

There were a lot of little things. The fact that Sissy could bounce a ball against your bedroom window at 6 in the morning 5,786 times without missing.

It had escaped us that Len and Bernadine both smoke three packs of cigarettes a day and kept assuring us we'd get hit by a beer truck driven by the surgeon general before the smoke got us.

It had slipped my mind that Bernadine never touched a dish because "I don't know where they belong," nor a washer because "I don't want to break it," or came into the kitchen because "I don't want to get in your way."

It's a sandlot game. If you're hospitable you can't seem to get a hit. You get walked a lot. You strike out a lot. You sit on the bench helplessly and let it all happen.

And then on the last day of their visit, Len and Bernadine said, "You know, you should get a booster for your hot water. We've been taking cold showers since we got here."

They had forgotten something too. They had forgotten that my husband, in his infinite wisdom, had installed the hot water spigot on the cold water and the cold water spigot on the hot water.

Bendectin suits can be heard in U.K.

CINCINNATI (AP) — A group of English and Scottish families alleging that Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals' anti-nausea drug Bendectin caused birth defects can press their case in the United Kingdom, a federal appeals court said.

Merrell Dow agreed to have the cases against it removed from federal court in Cincinnati and handled in the United Kingdom and the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals approved the arrangement.

The foreign families alleged that the morning-sickness drug caused birth defects in their children. The drug was marketed outside the United States as Debendox.

An estimated 32 million pregnant women worldwide took Bendectin or Debendox from 1956 until 1983, when Merrell Dow voluntarily removed it from the market. Merrell Dow said the drug is safe and did not cause birth defects.

A consolidated suit involving about 1,100 Bendectin-related cases in the United States was heard in U.S. District Court in Cincinnati earlier this year. A jury decided after five weeks of testimony that the drug did not cause birth defects when taken in prescribed doses.

The appeals court also said two officials of the suburban Reading company can be sued over marketing of the drug.

DEAR ABBY

Many answers found for 'OK' question

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Begging to differ with your correspondent who stated that the term "OK" originated with Martin Van Buren, our eighth president, who approved bills by marking them "OK" — the initials of his nickname, "Old Kinderhook," after his birthplace of Kinderhook, N.Y.

This is pure folklore. It has been similarly termed an abbreviation of the semiliterate expression "Oll Korrect," slanderously ascribed to President Andrew Jackson.

Scholars, however, have established that "OK" had been used as far back as the American Revolution — long before anyone had heard of either Jackson or Van Buren (Martin or Abigail).

The source was likely one of the West African expressions such as "Yaw kay," meaning all right.

It is a major irony that this American term should derive neither from English nor from any other European tongue, but from the lips of slaves preserving a bit of their native language. — PRECISE AT PRINCETON

DEAR ABBY: With reference to "OK," Charles Berlitz, the famous linguist, thinks "OK" came from "Aux Cayes," a port in Haiti, famous for its rum. His theory holds that American sailors were so fond of the rum, that "Aux Cayes," which later became "OK," became their expression for approval. — J.McK., BALTIMORE

DEAR ABBY: The origin of "OK" has nothing to do with Martin Van Buren's nickname, "Old Kinderhook."

It comes from "Olla" and "Kalla" — the first letter of each word — which means "All Good," or "OK" in Greek. — JACK KRUSH, AURORA, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: I submit that the term "OK" originated in the early days of shipbuilding on the East Coast.

In building a ship, the first step was laying the keel. Subsequently all other parts were measured and installed, based on the keel. If a part was installed correctly, it was said to be "On Keel" — hence the term "OK." — NIC IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR ABBY: My best friend (I'll call her Ethel) intensely dislikes my sweetheart Max. When Max and I were living together, Ethel refused to come to our apartment, so if I wanted to see her, it had to be somewhere else.

I left Max two months ago, partly because Ethel convinced me I would be better off without him. She was ecstatic when I left him. I moved into Ethel's apartment building, and we were practically inseparable for a while until I realized I still loved Max.

I've started seeing him again and we're looking for another apartment. When I told Ethel it was on again with Max, she grew sullen and hasn't called me since.

Ethel is clearly jealous of Max. He's a charming man, but he's not interested in winning Ethel's approval. He won't even try.

Is there a way I can have Max, and keep Ethel's friendship, too? I love them both — even with their flaws. — IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: Your friend Ethel is a very controlling, possessive woman. While you may want to have both her and Max in your life, she is not about to share you. So, if you want Ethel's friendship, be prepared to say goodbye to Max — and to any other person who doesn't meet with her approval.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Deaf balloon enthusiast earned pilot's license from FAA

GOSHEN, Ohio (AP) — The drifting peacefulness of a hot-air balloon trip is a quiet experience, but it's always soundless for balloon pilot Clinton Glancy.

Deaf since birth, Glancy earned his balloon pilot's license from the Federal Aviation Administration, and takes to the skies when time and weather permit.

His biggest challenge is persuading his mother, Carrie Glancy, to keep her promise to go up with him to celebrate the 60th wedding anniversary she marked recently.

"I have never gone up. I've been afraid," she said, laughing. "They asked me when I was going up, and I said my 60th wedding anniversary. They wrote it down."

In fairness to Mrs. Glancy, her maiden trip has been postponed seven times since the anniversary date because of weather.

When he isn't off floating on a balloon full of hot air, Glancy, 39, runs an auto body repair shop. He keeps a watchful eye on a wind sock atop his backyard garage, well aware that it is inadvisable to take a balloon up in winds of 10 knots or more.

Glancy got interested in ballooning five years ago through a friend, and studied to pass the FAA written test for a private pilot's license. He then went to Lexington, Ky., to pass the FAA flight inspection test.

His family says Glancy was the first deaf person to earn an FAA balloon pilot's license in this region. FAA officials in Chicago were unable to say if there are other deaf pilots.

Glancy holds a private pilot's license, meaning he is authorized to take passengers for free rides. He is one hour short of a commercial pilot's license.

Urban-dwellers suffer more depression

New York Times News Service

Depression is twice as frequent among city dwellers as it is among those who live in rural areas, according to a report in the current issue of the Archives of General Psychiatry. On the other hand, alcoholism and drug abuse were found to be more prevalent in rural areas than in urban, the report said.

Depression, in general, was more prevalent among white females, and alcoholism more common among those with limited education. The lower average levels of education in rural areas accounted for the higher rates there of alcoholism and drug abuse, the researchers said.

The report is based on a survey of five counties in North Carolina in which 3,921 randomly selected residents were interviewed to assess their mental health. The research, part of a national epidemiological survey being conducted by the National Institute of Mental Health, was directed by Dan Blazer, a psychiatrist at Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C.

Nils Lofgren plays rock's odd man out

By EDWARD HILL
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — The image of musician Nils Lofgren is unmistakably rock 'n' roll — from the purposely frazzled hair and waist-length black vest to the bandana dangling from his neck with guitar picks from his most memorable gigs weighing it down.

His prized "jewel," though, is a button he wears "only on special occasions." It has a picture of the late Jimi Hendrix, the acid-laced guitarist who defined rock riffs for a generation of musicians.

Long considered the rock world's odd-man-out because he could never be put in a musical niche, Lofgren has been a favorite of critics and something of a cult idol with such tunes as "The Sun Hasn't Set on This Boy Yet," and "White Lies." However, during his 17-year career, he never reached commercial success.

But that's beginning to change since he joined Bruce Springsteen's E Street Band last summer, replacing guitarist Steven Van Zandt.

"I've never had a Top 40 hit," he said in an interview. "I don't like the word superstar, but I would like to sell more records. Reaching people is important."

Besides becoming the newest member of one of rock history's most successful road shows — Springsteen's "Born in the U.S.A." 92-stop megatour — Lofgren has revamped his solo act and released his 12th album, "Flip." It's his debut LP on the Columbia label.

"This new album," he said, "is the best thing I've ever done. Though the album is technically correct, I've taken a live approach. We put it together in six weeks. But the biggest difference is the use of the OB8 (synthesizer)."

The OB8 is the latest state-of-the-art synthesizer in the music industry. The use of it by the 34-year-old Lofgren marks a major change for a rocker who once proclaimed that his music had no room for anything artificial.

However, he now praises the ersatz music maker. "I'm all for anything that enhances the quality of my music," Lofgren said. Indeed, the OB8 would have been out of place amid the wild, frenetic rhythms he utilized in his earlier days.

AP Laserphoto

Guitarist Nils Lofgren, with a career full of critical accolade, still teetered on the brink of commercial success until he was chosen for Bruce Springsteen's 92-stop tour, when his exposure-level soared.

Lofgren, who produces better material when performing live than in the studio, hopes the "live" approach of "Flip" will propel it onto the charts. Though superstardom has eluded him, few rock performers have exhibited the staying power that Lofgren has.

Lofgren grew up in the affluent Washington suburb of Bethesda, Md. His musical background stemmed from his early classical study of the accordian and piano.

Though classical overtones still echo in his music today, Lofgren's biggest influence was Hendrix.

"I saw Jimi Hendrix perform as a boy," he recalled. "It was then that I committed my life to being a musician. Successful or not, it's my purpose in life."

While attending Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, Lofgren formed his own rock group called Grin. They were a hit on the local nightclub circuit for many years, but never succeeded nationally. Unable to find record companies willing to take them on, the group disbanded in 1974. But Lofgren went on to do solo work in Washington's underground club circuit.

It was around that time that Lofgren cornered and serenaded Neil Young in the dressing room of the Cellar Door, a Washington club.

"We spent the next three days together," Lofgren said. Young was so impressed that he had Lofgren tour and record with him. He also gave the youngster access to producer David Briggs.

When he went solo, Lofgren beefed up his touring schedule and released three albums which critics say defined him musically. Twelve albums and four record companies later, that sound persists.

For Lofgren, music is as important as sports. "Though I'm not very good at it I enjoy playing basketball and working up a sweat. You don't have to think, just react. It's really animal. I get the same sensation being on stage," he said.

He has incorporated his athletic stamina into his performances. During his act, he does several backflips with his electric guitar off his the mini-trampoline.

Lofgren met Springsteen 14 years ago on audition night at Fillmore West in San Francisco. He never thought they would end up working together. "We crossed paths on the road a few times since then," Lofgren said.

"Working with Springsteen is great. It's a very natural thing for me. All I thought about when I accepted the job was how much I loved that music. Having his vote of confidence provides the same driving force as having Neil's," Lofgren said.

New home video ranges from Italian opera to boppin' Cars

New York Times News Service

Some recent home-video releases; comments are by New York Times critics.

Viva Zapata!

Starring Marlon Brando, Anthony Quinn, Jean Peters; directed by Elia Kazan, 1952 Key Video 112 minutes. $59.95

An opportunity to see Marlon Brando at the peak of his powers delivering a passionate, mesmerizing performance as the Mexican rebel leader Emiliano Zapata is but one of the attractions of this film.

Chosen as one of the 10 best of its year, this story of a champion of exploited peasants also boasts a performance by Anthony Quinn as Zapata's brother that won him an Academy Award as best supporting actor; a splendid portrayal by Jean Peters in the role of Zapata's wife and an equally fine depiction by Harold Gordon as the weakling president, Madero.

The Cars Live

Vestron Video 59 minutes. $29.95

Slick and sullen, the Boston-based Cars have perfected an ultracommercial new-wave style of surprising substance. The best songs by The Cars' lead singer and chief songwriter, Ric Ocasek, evoke a hip teen-age fantasy world that is at once glamorous and hollow. Their ambivalence is conveyed in lyrics that suggest the language of Madison Avenue elevated and fractured into a cool semi-poetry.

In this handsomely produced concert video, Ocasek, looking like a cross between David Bowie and Mr. Spock, exudes a sepulchral detachment as he leads the group through a program that includes such hits as "Just What I Needed," "Drive" and "You Might Think." But the concert's outstanding moments are brooding songs like "Jimmy Jimmy" and "Jacki," in which the singer tries to find the vulnerable core under the fashionably cool surface of his songs' affluent night-world denizens.

Puccini's 'Boheme' A Royal Opera production featuring Neil Shicoff, Ileana Cotrubas, Marilyn Zschau, Thomas Allen; conducted by Lamberto Gardelli, 1982 Thorn EMI-HBO Video 115 minutes. $39.95

Should video-taped operas attempt to duplicate a live performance on the small screen? Or should they be considered works of art unique in themselves?

The producers of this "Boheme" — taped at London's Royal Opera House Covent Garden in 1982 — obviously subscribe to the former philosophy; this is one live performance of "La Boheme" captured for immortality complete with applause, occasional vocal imbalances, shots of the conductor entering the orchestra pit and even — curtain calls between each act.

Kuwaiti deportation discouraged

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Shiite Moslem extremist group believed to be connected with the hijacking of a TWA flight in June and the kidnappings of Westerners in Lebanon issued a warning to Kuwait today not to deport Lebanese Shiite workers.

Meanwhile, the independent Beirut newspaper an-Nahar said a new half-Christian, half-Moslem government would be formed soon to introduce political reforms aimed at ending the 10-year-old civil war. It said President Amin Gemayel and President Hafez Assad of Syria agreed on the new Cabinet during a meeting in Damascus.

The new Cabinet would have 24 members representing the Lebanon's main sectarian groups, the newspaper said. The current nineman Cabinet has been unable to meet for the last four months because Moslem and Christian ministers are afraid to cross into each other's territory.

Hezbollah, or the Party of God, issued a statement in the eastern Lebanon town of Baalbak that was published by Beirut's independent newspaper an-Nahar and others today.

It accused the Kuwaiti government of Emir Jaber Al-Ahmed Al-Sabah, who survived a car-bomb assassination attempt last May, of deporting hundreds of Lebanese Shiites in recent weeks.

Kuwait is holding 17 prisoners who were convicted of bombing the U.S. and French embassies in 1983, three of whom have been sentenced to death. It has refused to make any deals for their release, despite terror attacks, hijackings and kidnappings aimed at gaining their freedom.

Their release has been a pre-condition set by the shadowy Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, organization to free American and French kidnap victims it claims to hold in Lebanon. Islamic Jihad frequently has been linked in the Arab and Western media to Hezbollah's group in the Bekaa Valley.

Hezbollah's statement today called the alleged deportation "an intolerable repression of toiling Moslems."

"These practices should stop. We shall always be on the side of the oppressed in Kuwait and shall support their steadfastness," it said.

The Kuwaiti government has denied reports of mass deportation of Shiites.

However, Nabih Berri, Lebanon's justice minister and head of the dominant Shiite Amal militia, and other Shiite leaders insist that "hundreds" of Lebanese Shiites have been deported from Kuwait since the June hijacking of the TWA jetliner to Beirut by Shiites.

The hijackers were identified as Hezbollah members, but Berri's militia later took control of the TWA hostages and negotiated their release.

On Thursday, Canadian relief worker Robert P. Burkholder, 30, was abducted by gunmen in Nabatiyeh in southern Lebanon, held for several hours and then released.

Burkholder, of Markham, Ontario, works as administrator for the South Lebanon Project of the Mennonite Central Commission, a relief organization based in Akron, Pa.

Lebanon's state radio quoted Burkholder as saying after his release that his kidnappers "wanted to know about the nature of my work in south Lebanon, and I gladly told them. I think I was held for questioning, not kidnapped."

In Akron, a secretary at the Mennonite Central Commission read a statement saying the organization is the relief agency of North American Mennonites and the Brethern in Christ and has headquarters in both Winnipeg, Manitoba, and Akron.

It said the agency has more than 500 volunteers in Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America and the Middle East, where there are 28 workers involved in health care, education, community development and agriculture.

None of Lebanon's more than 20 militias claimed responsibility for Burkholder's abduction.

Reporters in Nabatiyeh, 37 miles south of Beirut, said Burkholder has lived in Lebanon for three years with his wife and children. In addition to Hezbollah, Nabatiyeh is controlled by Shiite Amal militiamen.

Fourteen of the 25 kidnapped in Lebanon are still missing. Two of the kidnap victims were found dead and the rest were released or escaped.

Among the Americans still missing in Beirut is Terry A. Anderson, the AP's chief Middle East correspondent. Anderson, 37, was abducted at gunpoint in West Beirut March 16.

Papal visit to Togo draws tribal priests from bush

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer

PYA, Togo — Tens of thousands of people in native costume, singing "Welcome Colonel" in Polish, greeted Pope John Paul II today when he arrived to talk with Togo's president and ordain 11 Togolese priests.

Native men with headgear carved out of buffalo and antelope horns shook their bodies to the rhythms of tribal drums, and women in multicolored robes and straw hats sang "Hallelujah" as the motorcade of the Polish-born pope left the airport for Pya.

In remarks in French to President Gnassingbe Eyadema, John Paul appeared to respond to the notion held by some Africans that Christian churches are a Western-run vestige of colonialism.

"The church is not an enterprise of purely human inspiration, it is alien to every kind of temporal competition," the pontiff said. The church's mission, he said, is to spread the "gospel of love of God" and to help guarantee individual liberty.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy, a Moslem, charged during a visit to Rwanda earlier this year that Christianity is "alien" to African values and that churches are a "threat" to Africa and Islam, the continent's largest religion.

Diplomatic sources said Eyadema insisted on the private meeting with the pope, who is his second day of his African tour.

From Pya, the pope drives to nearby Kara, where he was scheduled to ordain 11 Togolese priests representing all the regions of the country.

Following the ordination, the pope was scheduled to return to the capital and then visit a sanctuary in nearby Togoville, the country's religious center, dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

After praying at the shrine, the pope scheduled a unique meeting in Togoville with a group of high priests and sorcerers of Togo's traditional tribal religions, which are still feared and followed by 70 percent of the country's 3 Togolese.

The pope arrived Thursday at the start of a 12-day tour of Africa which will take him to the Ivory Coast Saturday, then to Cameroon, the Central African Republic, Zaire, Kenya and Morocco.

In Togoville, the elusive priests and sorcerers of ancient tribal deities were to emerge today from the sacred forest to greet the pontiff. The brief meeting was likely to overshadow the main purpose of the pope's visit to Togoville — to pray at a widely revered shrine to the Virgin Mary.

The pope was to sail in a newly painted white motor launch across Lake Togo, the country's largest lake, to Togoville, the major meeting point of the Catholic and tribal faiths.

In Togo, as elsewhere in Africa, Roman Catholic missionaries in the 19th century found a "live and let live" arrangement with the tribal religions. They set up their first mission station in Togoville because it was the main gathering point of the local tribal priests.

The Rev. Dovi N'danu of the Lome diocese said the peaceful coexistence of the two religions was possible because the sorcerers, like Catholics, believe in "a supreme being of peace, reconciliation and mercy."

"They have many local gods," he said, "but the one who is above them all resembles our own God."

The pope has often warned Roman Catholic priests and missionaries in Africa against allowing this coexistence to the point where African practices and superstitions spill over into the church. In particular, the pope remains opposed to polygamy, women priests or a relaxation of the vows of celibacy by priests, monks and nuns.

The tribal religions reject such rules as contrary to practices followed in Africa since time immemorial. This could explain why more than half of Togo's 182 Roman Catholic priests are European expatriates, 24 years after the end of French colonial rule.

The Rev. Paolo Corazza, from Verona, Italy, who has led the Togoville mission station for more than five years, said the priests live concealed in the sacred forest on the opposite side of the lake and rarely emerge, least of all in daytime, Corazza said, "Their appearance here is a very special mark of respect for John Paul II."

Weed control vital for pecans

By EARNEST KIKER

Weeds can damage pecans seriously and in many ways. In newly planted orchards, weeds compete directly with the young trees for soil moisture, nutrients, and even sunlight. The competition from the weeds being present can result in a decrease in the growth and development of the trees, which is eventually going to set the trees back in their projected time for economical production.

In established trees it is understood that competition from weeds is going to be less due to the shading ability of the trees. The established root system of the trees is also going to make the competition for nutrients and water by the weeds less serious than in the newly planted trees. Yet reductions in quality and quantity of the pecan crop are possible due to disease, and/or insects which use the weeds as an alternate host in their life cycle. The presence of weeds in an orchard at the time of harvest also results in loss in time and efficiency during the harvest.

In discussing weed control or management we need to consider two areas: First — weed identification — knowing the weeds to be controlled in the orchard. In most cases this can be done and ideas of the present year's potential problem can be based on what was seen the previous year.

Correct identification of those weed species in the orchard is essential. Not only should they be identified, but it is to the growers advantage to know certain characteristics about those weeds, such as: (1) Life cycle — is it an annual, biennial or is it a perennial; and (2) Reproduction — does it reproduce only through seed or is there some type of vegetative reproduction (rhizomes, roots, or stolons), as well.

The second area relates to the control or management of weeds in pecan orchards. In this area there are three options to select from: First, a total chemical approach, second, a total mechanical approach, and third, a combination of chemical and mechanical weed control.

With mechanical weed control, you can use one of the following implements: disk, spring-tooth harrow, orchard knife, or the mower. The advantages of cultivation is that the spectrum of weeds controlled is generally much greater than what one finds on the label of the herbicide. The disadvantages of using this competely would include:

- Inability to control the weeds near the trees, without damaging the roots of the trees, or even the young trees themselves.
- Cultivation tends to create favorable conditions for the germination of weed seeds near the soil surface, as well as bring new seeds from the deeper parts of the soil profile.
- Cultivation aids in the dispersal of the perennial weeds by breaking up their underground roots system and spreading them into new areas of the orchard previously uninfested.
- The final area of concern would be soil compaction, as it relates to water movement into the soil profile.

With mowing, many of the same problems associated with the mechanical weed control are realized.

The final option is to use a combination of chemical and mechanical means for controlling the weed problems in the orchard. With this option the herbicides are used in one of two ways:

1. In-row strip application — the herbicide is applied down the tree row and the area between the tree rows is either cultivated or planted to a ground cover and mowed.
2. Individual tree application — the herbicide is applied around each individual tree with the remainder of the area being cultivated or planted to a ground cover and mowed.

The advantages to such a system would include reduction in the amount of herbicide used, as well as decreasing the potential for injury to the trees through mechanical means.

Block knocks 'Mickey Mouse' plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says a milk diversion program approved by the House Agriculture Committee is a "Mickey Mouse plan" that is not acceptable to the Reagan administration.

"It's a wrong program, it's going in the wrong direction," Block said this week. "And I repeat, a dairy diversion program is not acceptable to this administration."

Block made his comments in one of several telephone-hookup interviews with broadcasters and others. He said something must give on Capitol Hill so that a workable dairy program can be designed.

"We cannot prolong this agony," he said. "The last five years taxpayers have put up more than $9 billion (for the dairy program), which is more than we spent in the 30 previous years. It all adds up to federal budget deficits."

The dairy program is one of the stickiest points in a new farm bill that Congress, now on a month-long vacation, will tackle again after Labor Day.

Under the House plan, all farmers would be assessed fees on milk marketed. Those who sign up to reduce production would get cash payments for cutting back. It would be similar to a 15-month diversion program that was in operation until April 1 this year.

"This dairy diversion program is nothing more than a tax, a tax on all dairymen, where only a few — maybe 20 percent at the most — are going to benefit," Block said.

Block favors the Senate version, which calls for a freeze in current milk supports in 1986 and then a gradual reduction in the support level if needed to head off further increases in U.S. dairy production.

But Block said even the Senate plan falls short by calling for a freeze instead of immediate cuts in the milk support for the 1986 fiscal year, which will begin on Oct. 1.

The diversion plan is part of a House package supported by the National Milk Producers Federation, which has been at odds with Block on new dairy legislation.

In a newsletter sent to members this week, the federation says opponents have decided to try a divide-and-conquer tactic in the legislative war being fought on the dairy portion of the farm bill.

"What these opponents are counting on is that dairy farmers and the Congress will get such confusing and conflicting messages that the only choice will be a straight price cut and ultimately an end to the dairy support program," said the federation's Jim Barr.

VOTE FOR WATER

Saturday, August 10, Vote FOR Water FOR Midland.

Midland Depends on Water, Lots of It!

Midland depends on water for its economic life. More than water to wash cars, water lawns or do dishes, water is essential to the quality of our life and our existing industry, plus, the key to new industry. Without water, and plenty of it, we could quite literally "dry up and blow away".

The Proposition.

On Saturday, August 10, you will have the opportunity to insure the uninterrupted water future of Midland for generations — by voting FOR the last renewable water source ever to be constructed in West Texas! By voting FOR Proposition One, you will authorize the Midland City Council to contract with the Colorado River Municipal Water District to:

1. Share in the engineering and construction costs to build the Stacy Reservoir on the Colorado River near San Angelo. Our share of the cost will be 16.54% or approximately $11,125,000. We would also share the same percentage of the administrative and operating costs of the reservoir.
2. Share in the project by receiving 16.54%, or 15,000 acre feet of water from the reservoir each year. That means that by 1991, the anticipated date of water delivery from Stacy, Midland could be assured of 4.8 BILLION gallons of water each year — well into the next century.

The Costs.

How much will this water independence cost? About fifteen cents per thousand gallons. That means for an average water bill (not including sewer and trash collection) of $37.70 per month, the proposed water contract would add $2.70.

Please Vote.

The Water For Midland Committee encourages all registered Midland voters to "Vote FOR Water FOR Midland" on Saturday, August 10. Participation in this last renewable surface water resource is vital to the future of Midland.

Relatives of atomic bomb victims bow to pray for peace during ceremonies marking the 40th anniversary of the destruction of Nagasaki.

Nagasaki marks anniversary of second atomic bombing

By SALLY SOLO
Associated Press Writer

NAGASAKI, Japan — Under rainy, lowering skies, 24,000 mourners and visitors fell silent for a moment this morning to mark the 40th anniverary of the second atomic bomb attack.

The pause at 11:02 a.m. commemorated the instant the bomb virtually leveled this western Japanese port city on Aug. 9, 1945.

Christian and Buddhist priests, and political leaders appealed for peace and prayed that Nagasaki never again be subjected to the horrors of nuclear weapons.

On that summer day in 1945, "Bock's Car," the U.S. Army Air Force B-29 that carried the plutonium-based bomb, was originally to strike Kokura, a city to the northeast.

But poor visibility sent it to its secondary target — Nagasaki.

Even here, cloud cover threw the bomber off course and the bomb, nicknamed "Fat Man," missed its exact target. But the blast, heat and radiation was enough to kill 27,000 to 70,000 people in the northern half of this mountain-ringed city.

It exploded directly above the Urakami Valley, one of the largest Catholic communities in Japan. The number of people living in Nagasaki at the time is unknown, but among the victims were 9,000 of the 12,000 members of the Catholic community.

Just three days before, Hiroshima had been laid waste in the first nuclear attack. There, 70,000 to 140,000 people died in the attack. Less than a week later, Japan surrendered and World War II was over.

"Nagasaki must be the last place on earth subjected to the horror of nuclear weapons," Mayor Hitoshi Motoshima said in a speech that was to be sent to the leaders of all the countries of the United Nations.

He asked of both superpowers: "It is my fervent hope they will make this ...a joyful year in which the dark postwar history of the nuclear arms race makes a sharp turnabout."

The day began with some 1,000 Catholics holding a daybreak Mass for the victims of the bomb. Before the Peace Memorial Ceremony, Buddhist and Shinto priests chanted in front of the Peace Statue, a stone figure holding his right arm to the sky and his left palm down.

The rhythmic monotone prayers blended into the background drone of crickets, a familiar sound in Japan's hot summers. Rains triggered by a typhoon off the coast drenched much of the crowd as the ceremonies began with the bang of smoky firecrackers.

About 24,000 Japanese, bomb survivors, and foreign leaders joined in prayer in front of the statue, where the names of victims are enshrined.

A special dedication was made for 2,414 survivors, or "hibakusha," who died since the 39th anniversary, bringing the total number of casualties to 66,600. In Japan today, 367,000 people hold hibakusha certificates that allow them free medical care.

WORLD IN BRIEF

American missing in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — An American minister of the Assembly of God has been missing since he was shot at by unidentified gunmen in eastern El Salvador, government sources said Thursday.

A source from the 2nd Justice of the Peace Court in San Miguel, who asked not to be identified, said Christopher Williams was last seen Wednesday near the town of San Andres, four miles southeast of San Miguel.

The source said Williams is about 35 years old, an American citizen, and a minister of the Assembly of God, a Protestant sect which has been active in helping refugees in the 5½-year civil war. He said no further identification was available.

West German aide disappears

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (AP) — The disappearance of a ranking government aide is being investigated in connection with possible espionage activity, the chief prosecutor's office said.

Jonja Lueneburg, 61, who served as secretary to Economics Minister Martin Bangemann from 1979 to 1984, failed to report to her office Monday, the prosecutor's office said Thursday.

He said Lueneburg had told colleagues she was leaving Bonn on a trip on Friday, and had failed to turn up on Monday.

Arab summit opens final session

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP) — The first Arab summit in three years convened its scheduled final session today, with a Syrian-led boycott thwarting efforts to unify Arab ranks behind a Jordanian-PLO plan for peace talks with Israel.

The host, King Hassan II of Morocco, on Thursday urged the 16 leaders present to take into account the views of five members who refused to attend the summit.

This made it likely the conference's concluding statement would say little about the issues dividing the Arab world.

Conference sources who spoke on condition they not be identified said the statement would deal with four issues: the Palestinian question, Arab unity, the Iran-Iraq war and a dispute between Somalia and Ethiopia.

Internment anniversary marked

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Supporters of the IRA hijacked and set fire to cars, threw gasoline bombs at police and built bonfires today in Roman Catholic strongholds to marked the 14th anniversary of internment without trial.

Britain, which rules the predominantly Protestant province, abandoned the policy of detaining terrorism suspects without trial more than nine years ago, but supporters of the Irish Republican Army continue to mark the anniversary of the day it was imposed.

Effects of Bhopal leak studied

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Indian government announced today it has appointed a high-level commission to study what long-term effects the Bhopal gas leak might have on people, animals and plants.

More than 2,000 people were killed and about 200,000 injured when poisonous gas leaked from a Union Carbide plant last Dec. 3.

The five-member commission will serve for two years and be responsible for corroborating research on human, animal and plant life done both before and after the disaster.

Studies also will be conducted on the effects of the gas on water and air.

Earlier studies by the government's agriculture research division had concluded there was no long-term damage to plants and that the air and water of Bhopal were safe.

Joint military exercise conducted

WADI EL-NATRUN, Egypt (AP) — U.S. warplanes, armored and artillery units participating in the "Bright Star '85" exercise joined Egyptian soldiers in destroying a mock enemy in a 20-mile section of the Sahara Desert.

Thursday's activity was the last involving large numbers of soldiers — about 2,500 from both Egypt and the United States. But the exercises, which began Sunday, will continue until Saturday.

Two U.S. B-52 bombers dropped strings of 750-pound bombs on the Sahara, followed by jets from the U.S. Navy and Air Force, and Egyptian air force. Among the Egyptian planes were MiG-17s still in use from the days when Egypt was an ally of the Soviet Union.

More than 9,000 U.S. personnel took part in the maneuvers, the largest of this year's "Bright Star" series, and the largest joint military exercise ever in the Middle East. Smaller joint exercises were held this year in Somalia, Jordan and Oman.

The lone fatality of this year's exercise was Michael L. Brown, a U.S. Army chief warrant officer who died Tuesday in a helicopter crash. An Egyptian crewman was hurt in the crash.

Alien smuggling ring cracked

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Police said Thursday they had put out of business a smuggling ring that operated out of a local hotel and charged Central Americans up to $500 each for secret passage into the United States.

Maj. Hernan Guajardo Garza, state judicial police director, said the arrest of Elias Giacoman, owner of the Roosevelt Hotel, and two alleged smugglers ended an operation that had operated from the hotel for three years.

Giacoman, the alleged smugglers, three Mexicans who were awaiting passage to the United States and 51 Central Americans, the majority of them from El Salvador, were arrested at the hotel Monday, Guajardo said in an interview at police headquarters.

The accused smugglers arranged bus passage for the undocumented aliens to the Mexican border cities of Reynosa or Nuevo Laredo, each about a 3-hour bus ride from Monterrey, Guajardo said. From there, they were transported to the Texas side of the border.

Soviet official missing in Italy

ROME (AP) — A Soviet official on a mission to Rome vanished without trace Aug. 1 and the Soviet Embassy has asked Italy to help find him, Italian officials said Thursday.

The Soviets identified the missing man as Vitaly Yurtchenko, a counselor of the Soviet Foreign Ministry, said the officials, who demanded anonymity.

Yurtchenko was said to have come to Italy on an unspecified assignment July 24 and to have been staying at a Soviet Embassy residence.
