Permian Basin OIL & GAS LOG

Yates Finals Eddy Strike

Yates Petroleum Corp., Artesia, No. 1-EP Stonewall-State Communitized, has been completed as a Morrow gas strike in Eddy County, N.M., seven miles northeast of Carlsbad, and 1¼ mile northwest of Morrow production in the Burton Flat field.

Final flow gauge reported was for 17.6 million cubic feet of gas, plus 80 barrels of distillate daily, through a ¾-inch choke and perforations at 11,250-11,258 feet. No treatment was reported. Gravity of the distillate is 55.3 degrees.

The project was drilled to 11,478 feet, and has 5½-inch casing set at 11,380 feet.

Top of the Morrow was picked at 10,885 feet, and top of the lower Morrow zone was at 11,182 feet, under ground elevation of 3,283 feet.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 30-20s-28e.

Fisher Gets Strike, Wildcat Operation

Fisher County gained a field reopener, and site for a wildcat.

R. L. Foree of Dallas completed No. 1 Max Carriker to reopen the Carriker (Ellenburger) oil pool of East Fisher County, about ½ mile southwest of Royston.

It pumped 18 barrels of 40-gravity oil and 54 barrels of water on 24-hour potential test, from open hole at 5,799-5,818 feet. The pay section had been acidized with 1,500 gallons.

Top of pay was picked at 5,799 feet, under kelly bushing elevation of 1,929 feet.

Wellsite is 4,500 feet from north and 3,000 feet from east lines of R. H. Hibbitt survey 331, one location southwest of the depleted original opener, which was finaled in 1951.

Prospector Set

Fox & Ransdell, Abilene, plans No. 1 U. S. Gypsum Co., a 3,950-foot wildcat for tests of the Swastika, about three miles southeast of Longworth.

It spots 1¼ mile north of the La Paloma (Swastika) pool, but separated from it by a 3,835-foot failure.

Drillsite is 2,310 feet from north and east lines of section 9, block 1, HT&B survey.

Activity Reported In Runnels Areas

A wildcat and an offset to a strike have been scheduled in Runnels County.

Southland Petroleum Co., Abilene, will drill a 4,050-foot wildcat in Runnels County, three miles northeast of Crews, as No. 1 Ruby Jenkins.

It is ¾ mile west of the Fry discovery in the depleted Cree-Sykes, East field, but separated from that area by failures.

Drillsite is 3,450 feet from north and 1,300 feet from west lines of section 11, HT&B survey.

Midland Bank Deposits Hit Record $476-Million Level

Midland Bank deposits were at an all-time high of $476,017,754 at the close of business Tuesday.

The record figure is up $81,632,933 over the $394,384,821 reported on Oct. 15, 1974, and up $21,375,895 over the $454,641,859 recorded last June 30. The previous record high, $454,867,353 was established last Dec. 31. The present figure exceeds that by $21,150,401.

Statements of condition of the four Midland banks — Commercial Bank & Trust Co., The First National, The Midland National and Western State — at the close of business Sept. 30, came this morning in response to calls from the federal comptroller of the currency and the State Banking Department.

Loans and discounts of the four banks also were at a record high of $295,733,236, up $42,388,986 from the $253,344,250 reported a year ago, and up $6,112,616 from the previous record high of $289,620,620 recorded three months ago.

The increase in deposits is attributed largely to increased activity in the petroleum industry and to livestock and farm crop sales.

The First National had deposits totaling $304,370,216, compared with $237,215,529 a year previously and $286,533,426 three months ago.

The bank's loans and discounts totaled $179,655,446, compared with $156,008,426 at this time last year and $174,735,346 last June 30.

The Midland National Bank recorded deposits amounting to $123,098,683, compared with $113,682,371 on Oct. 15, 1974, and $119,038,379 three months ago.

Its loans and discounts totaled $82,511,718, compared with $66,631,717 at a similar date last year and $78,801,159 last June 30.

Commercial Bank had deposits totaling $40,409,770, compared with $37,375,925 a year ago and $41,000,831 at midyear 1975.

Its loans and discounts totaled $27,857,311, compared with $25,425,136 on Oct. 15, 1974, and $29,590,747 last June 30.

Western State reported deposits amounting to $8,139,058, compared with $6,110,996 a year previously and $8,069,223 three months ago.

Its loans and discounts totaled $5,708,761, compared with $5,278,971 at this time last year and $6,493,368 last June 30.

Officials Unsure Of Ruling's Effect

By LUANNA CROW

Midland school officials are uncertain how Thursday's ruling by Texas Attorney General John Hill will affect this district.

Hill's opinion, issued at the request of Education Commissioner Marlin Brockette, states that school districts cannot charge students for driver education, classroom supplies or extracurricular activities.

Dr. James H. Mailey, superintendent of the Midland public schools, said this morning he has not received the opinion and his only information on the matter has come from the news media.

Mailey said the district likely will receive the opinion in several days, whereupon administrators here "will take a good close look at our practices, evaluate the opinion and see if we're in compliance."

"This district charges relatively few fees," he said.

Among those charged are behind-the-wheel training in drivers education, which costs the student or his parents $30 to cover gasoline and driving insurance. According to Don Furgeson, business manager for the district, Midland schools collected $27,870 in driving fees during the 1974-75 regular school terms and summer school. No fee is charged for classroom instruction except in summer school, where all classes are offered on a tuition basis.

Dr. Douglas W. Brown, assistant superintendent for instructional services, pointed out the driver education policies of the Midland schools are "in accordance with current Texas Education Agency directives which authorize us to charge for driver education."

In the realm of classroom supplies, public schools here do require some expenditure on the part of the student. Shop classes such as wood work or metal work utilize a "revolving" fund in which a student deposits money to purchase supplies wholesale from the school.

Audrey Gill, Midland High School principal, said the fund averages $4,500 for an estimated 120 students at his school during a year's time. Projects created by the students are taken home.

He said the same system is in effect in the vocational agriculture courses and art courses. Participation by the student is optional.

School administrators point out that no laboratory fees are charged for any class, no supplementary workbooks are required and nothing is charged for classroom instruction.

Mailey said books are furnished either in the library or the classroom when supplementary reading is required.

The student may, however, purchase the reading material from the school if he desires, the superintendent added.

Regarding fees for extra-curricular activities, Brown pointed out that "many of these clubs are given as much autonomy as possible so the students have an opportunity to make those decisions."

"It's democratic action which determines what their dues will be or what they'll charge themselves."

Hill's opinion, however, did not exempt club memberships from the no-fees mandate.

Unlike many districts across the state, the Midland schools furnish band uniforms and instruments for all band students. The only exception, Brown said, is the twirlers' costumes, which they choose for themselves and

Abstract Sculpture Costs Taxpayers $15,000

By ED TODD

"It's an abstraction," John Queen quietly declared.

And the sculpture — the monument — he designed stands squarely tall, like an arrow piercing deeply and boldly into the earth.

Queen's monument is firmly lodged on the north side of the downtown Federal Building here. It is "dedicated to the American soldier." Queen, a sculptor at Texas Tech University, Lubbock, designed the cast aluminum and concrete art work for the General Services Administration (GSA).

The sculpture, which is costing taxpayers $15,000, is to more or less harmonize with and complement the Federal Building, which cost the GSA in the neighborhood of $3.5 million.

The building was completed in April 1974 and was dedicated in the autumn of that year. Queen's sculpture was pretty well wrapped up Sept. 13 when eight six-foot tall aluminum figures in a crown-of-thorns shape were welded into place near the crest of the tapered, nine-foot-tall concrete centerpiece.

"The sculpture ... is dedicated to the American soldier," Queen explained of his creation. By "soldier," he means "to encompass all of those who have sacrificed for our country."

"The concrete centerpiece represents strength and solidarity," he said. "The aluminum figures surrounding the centerpiece are used to represent unity."

Then Queen explained why he selected the Biblical verse II Timothy 4:7 to adorn three of the centerpiece's four sides.

"The use of the words from Paul's letter to Timothy was suggested by the inspiring faith and endurance of our POWs (prisoners of war) during the Vietnam conflict."

The words of the apostle were cast in molds, and the lettering is raised.

"To the American soldier," reads the upper-case lettering that angles outward and downward from its concrete slab mount. Clockwise, the east-, south- and west-facing plaques project Paul's words:

"I have fought a good fight,
"I have finished my course,
"I have kept the faith."

Three years or so ago, Queen was commissioned by GSA's Washington, D.C., officials to begin design work on an art object. The theme and symbolism were to be of his own choosing. GSA picked Queen as the project's sculptor after the building's architects had submitted to GSA names of three sculptors.

"We had nothing at all to do with it," a spokesman for Midland architects Neuhardt & Babb said of the idea behind the sculpture, its design and construction. "We just submitted the names of three sculptors. They (GSA) chose from what

Unemployment Rate Declines To 8.3 Per Cent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate declined from 8.4 per cent to 8.3 per cent of the labor force in September, although the jobless rate increased for adult men and heads of households, the government reported today.

The September report indicated there was no significant change in the over-all employment situation in the country.

The Labor Department said the number of unemployed in September totalled nearly 7.8 million, down only a few thousand from the August jobless total. The number of employed persons was slightly more than 85.4 million, also just a few thousand more since August, the department said.

The size of the nation's labor force also increased only slightly, to just under 93.2 million in September.

The rate of unemployment has shown little change during the last three months. The Labor Department said the rate was below the recession jobless peak of 8.9 per cent during the second quarter of the year.

Economists often pay more attention to what is happening to employment in different categories of the population, and the Labor Department gave this September unemployment breakdown for various groups:

—Adult men, 7 per cent, up from 6.6 per cent in August.

—Adult women, 7.5 per cent, down from 7.7 per cent in August.

—Teen-agers, 19.3 per cent, down from 21.1 per cent in August.

—Whites, 7.6 per cent, unchanged from August.

—Black and other races, 14.3 per cent, up from 14 per cent in August.

—Married men, 5.3 per cent, up from 5 per cent in August.

—Full time workers, 8.2 per cent, unchanged from August.

—Household heads, 5.7 per cent, up from 5.5 per cent in August.

The unemployment figures were released one day after the government issued another unfavorable inflation report. However, administration economists said consumer prices are unlikely to go through the roof again.

"Clearly we've got a problem. On the other hand, it's not a double-digit problem," said Burton G. Malkiel of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, referring to 1974's inflation rate that exceeded the 10 per cent level.

The Labor Department reported Thursday that September wholesale prices rose six-tenths of 1 per cent during the month and were up at an annual rate of 11.1 per cent during the three-month period ending in September.

Malkiel said Thursday that despite what the unemployment figures for any single month show, "we're absolutely convinced there will continue to be progress on unemployment."

The administration's forecast for unemployment is to reduce the rate to between 7 and 7.5 per cent by the end of next year.

Saudi Arabia Held Down Hike By Threatening To Quit OPEC

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabia at the recent meeting of the oil cartel kept the increase in crude oil prices down by threatening to quit the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, increase production and sell its oil cheaper, the Middle East Economic Survey said today.

The usually authoritative journal also said the 10 per cent increase voted by OPEC in Vienna last Saturday will be as low as 6.8 per cent for certain types of crude oil because of a reduction in surcharges for premium oils.

The Survey said that behind the scenes of the Vienna meeting "lay a renewal of the traditional contest between Iran and Saudi Arabia for the leadership of OPEC." It gave this account:

Iran, backed by Iraq, Libya, Nigeria, Venezuela, Indonesia, Qatar, Ecuador and Gabon, insisted on a two-stage, 15 per cent boost by next January with no freeze thereafter.

Saudi Arabia, with only the United Arab Emirates on its side and Kuwait and Algeria on the fence, set a 10 per cent limit with a period of freeze.

After a vote of 9-2-2, the Saudi oil minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, told the meeting that if the others "went ahead without Saudi Arabia, then Saudi Arabia (OPEC's biggest producer) would keep its prices frozen at current levels and let its production rise to wherever the market took it within the kingdom's formidable surplus capacity.

"The prospect of Saudi Arabia breaking away from OPEC and cutting into the markets of others with its 4 million barrels a day of surplus capacity was clearly too appalling for most of the members to contemplate."

The Iranian majority for a 15 per cent rise "quickly evaporated," and a Kuwait compromise calling for a 10 per cent increase with a freeze until next June was adopted despite last-ditch Iranian and Libyan opposition.

OPEC announced after the Vienna meeting that action had been postponed until November on a unified scale of price differentials on premium grades of oil. But the Survey said the Persian Gulf states—Iran, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar — agreed to cut the premiums they have been charging by more than half because their recession-plagued customers have been buying so much less of these grades.

They also agreed that a "sulphur penalty" would be introduced, lowering the price of lower quality crudes proportionately, the report said.

President Vetoes School Lunch Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford vetoed the National School Lunch and Child Nutrition Act today saying it would provide subsidies for non-needy children and "is worse than the programs we now have."

Ford suggested that Congress either extend present school lunch programs or act favorably on his proposal to provide aid for all children from families below the poverty level.

Exercising his 39th veto, the President said, "By extending aid to families not in need, this bill would add $1.2 billion to my budget proposals for the current year.

"I cannot accept such fiscal irresponsibility when we face the real danger that the budget deficit could reach $70 billion instead of the already high limit of $60 billion I set earlier this year."

Death Plot Alert Being Maintained

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Authorities are still watching the Canadian border for three persons who may have left Montreal bent on assassinating President Ford and Japanese Emperor Hirohito. But there is no evidence the trio has crossed the border so far, officials say.

The first alert was issued Wednesday.

The emperor, currently in Washington, is scheduled to visit Massachusetts and then New York City on Saturday.

Wednesday's alert was for a

Navy Chief Fails To See Humor In Dance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Others may think it was funny for a go-go dancer to perform on the deck of a submarine, but not the Navy's top admiral.

Adm. James L. Holloway III announced solemnly Thursday that Cmdr. Connelly Stevenson's conduct was "inexcusable" in allowing dancer Cat Futch to do her topless act on the deck of the submarine Finback.

Holloway, chief of naval operations, found the veteran skipper guilty of failing to exercise proper judgment, violating regulations and "permitting an action which could have distracted the attention of those responsible for the safe navigation of the nuclear-powered submarine."

Holloway softened the penalties recommended by Stevenson's superiors, but ordered a "punitive letter of admonition" entered against the 41-year-old commander.

Navy officers said they wouldn't bet much on Stevenson's chances for promotion or for another major ship command in the future because of this blot on his record.

But Joseph K. Taussig, Stevenson's lawyer, looked for the silver lining.

Taussig, a retired Navy captain who won the Navy Cross in the Pearl Harbor attack, told a reporter the letter of admonition "might slow him down a bit, but Stevenson has a lot going for him."

The lawyer cited Stevenson's master's degree in physics, his Legion of Merit medal for performance as the executive officer of a submarine and other outstanding service in a 19-year career.

Stevenson, who was relieved of the Finback's command, has been beached behind a desk at a Navy headquarters in Norfolk, Va.

The episode which got him into trouble came when his submarine was sailing out of Port Canaveral, Fla., on July 10.

According to Stevenson's lawyers, junior officers on the Finback suggested it would be a good idea to let the dancer ride briefly on the submarine before the ship submerged for a long cruise.

Miss Futch reportedly danced topless on deck and then went aboard a pilot boat after receiving a farewell kiss on the cheek from the submarine commander.

Originally, Stevenson's superiors sent him a letter of reprimand, which is considered more serious than the letter of admonition which Holloway ordered after reviewing the case.

Proposed Food Stamp Changes Would Provide Free Coupons

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major reorganization of the federal food stamp program proposed by a conservative Republican and a liberal Democrat would provide the food subsidy stamps for free.

The $5.8 billion worth of stamps distributed by the government this year are being sold to recipients on a sliding scale based on ability to pay. The program serves 18.8 million persons.

The bill introduced by Sens. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and George McGovern, D-S.D., will be the subject of full-scale hearings beginning next week before the Senate Agriculture Committee.

The bill automatically became the principal challenger to a long-pending measure cosponsored in both houses by about 100 conservatives. Senate sources said it is expected to become the working draft for the comprehensive revisions Congress intends for the program by next spring.

The McGovern-Dole proposal would:

—End the complicated system of itemized deductions from gross earnings that causes roughly half of the errors in determining eligibility and payments, as clerks and applicants work through an eight-page form and the backup documents required.

A standard deduction from gross after-taxes earnings for all eligible households of $125 a month, plus $25 if the family has an elderly member, would replace that. The average total deduction under itemization is between $55 and $80 a month, officials say.

—Tighten eligibility by placing a ceiling on maximum gross earnings to replace loophole-ridden net-income ceilings. For example, a single person would be flatly ineligible if he earned more than $4,080 a year after taxes, and a four-person family would be ineligible if earnings exceeded $7,776.

—End the automatic eligibility of welfare families, who now sometimes have more income from other programs than a poor working family without enough deductions to get under the wire.

—End the cash payments recipients must make each month to "buy" the federal aid.

For example, a family that now might pay $125 for coupons worth $275 at a retail food store would instead, if found eligible, simply get the $150 "bonus," cutting the number of stamps in circulation by half and reducing administrative costs by up to $100 million.

Spokesmen for the senators, whose staffs have been working on a mutually agreeable bill for two months, said USDA's estimates of the monetary impact of the measure "fluctuated wildly," but Dole was "hopeful" that $1 billion a year could be cut from the budget within two years.

Up to 1.6 million persons from the upper income levels of the present participant population would be cut or "dis-encouraged" out of the program by the measure, they said.

IRS Boss Admits 'Enemies' Harassed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Church groups and movie stars, senators and rock singers, civil rights leaders and the mayor of New York City were all targets of an IRS tax probe originally aimed at political extremists, the chairman of the Senate intelligence committee says.

In addition, IRS Commissioner Donald Alexander testified Thursday that last year alone IRS agents turned over 29,520 tax returns on 8,210 taxpayers to a dozen other federal agencies for one reason or another.

Alexander said that until he stopped it last year, a computer system had been fed information on 465,442 persons, including Alexander himself.

The IRS commissioner also agreed with Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, that the tax-collecting agency had no business complying with a 1967 CIA request to audit the tax returns of Ramparts magazine as a means of preventing or blunting its forthcoming expose about the National Student Association operated overseas as a CIA front.

"I can't imagine a more clear-cut instance of the CIA using the IRS for the purpose of getting a magazine that proposed to reveal activities the CIA wanted to conceal," Church said.

"The IRS has no business engaging in the use of its processes to harass so-called enemies," said Alexander, who became IRS commissioner in May 1973.

Among the names on the list were former New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay, former U.S. Sens. Charles Goodell, R-N.Y., and Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska; Rep. Charles Diggs, D-Mich.; columnist Joseph Alsop; writers Norman Mailer and Jimmy Breslin; rock singer James Brown; actress Shirley MacLaine; singer Joan Baez; and civil rights leaders Aaron Henry, Jesse Jackson and Coretta King.

Also listed were comedian Godfrey Cambridge and Nobel Prize-winning scientist Linus Pauling.

John Faulk Doesn't Plan Comeback

DALLAS (AP) — Former national radio personality John Henry Faulk said Thursday night after a network television dramatization based on his book "Fear on Trial" that he has no intention of using the show as a springboard for a return to show business.

"Louis Nizer is determined that I get back in network television," Faulk said on a nationally broadcast talk show which followed the TV movie. "I'd love to do my shows again but I'm happy on my farm in Madisonville (Tex.)."

Nizer is the lawyer who prosecuted Faulk's libel suit against Aware, Inc., the group that accused Faulk of Communist leanings in the 1950s.

Faulk, a native of Austin, was a fast-rising and well-paid radio performer who was host to a popular daily program on WCBS Radio in New York in the 1950s before he was accused of being pro-Communist.

Pressures were brought to bear which led to Faulk being dropped by CBS and ultimately blacklisted from show business.

Faulk's book and the CBS network movie told the story of the trial, at which Faulk won a large libel judgment which was never paid.

"It was a rather moving experience to relive a portion of my life that certainly was a tumultuous one," said Faulk, 62.

"CBS and its sponsors did their best to delineate a period of American history that affected everyone's lives, whether they realized it or not."

Faulk added it was "very significant" of today's times that CBS, which fired him, would tell his story 20 years later.

"Our constitution says a man can't be prosecuted for making a mistake or thinking wrong thoughts when they do no harm to other persons," he said.

Dear Abby

— By Abigail van Buren

Puzzled Mother Worries About September-May Affair

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow who is trying to pave the road smoothly for my 19-year-old daughter.

She is very pretty, and I have never had any trouble with her until now. It seems that she has a crush on a tall, handsome 44-year-old salesman who drinks rather heavily, lives an hour's drive from here and has stood her up on five dates already.

He always had an excuse the day after, but never let her know while she sat all dressed up waiting for him.

I feel that he is wrong for her, but I can't seem to get that idea through her head. She could date others, closer to her age, who live nearer to her, but she waits faithfully for this long-distance Romeo. Can you help me?

PUZZLED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Seldom does a 19-year-old girl listen to her mother in such matters. If it hasn't occurred to your daughter that this man is married—it should.

If she's wise, she'll find out more about him. He sounds like a bad apple, but don't knock him. It will only cause her to come to his defense.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing a Dear Abby letter, but I want to speak out in defense of PIANO LESSON HATER, to whom you said, "I've had thousands of people tell me they were sorry they quit piano, but not one ever said he was glad he quit."

Well, now you can retract that statement, Abby.

My mother was a piano teacher, and she made me practice an hour every day from the time I was 8 until I was 15. (I'm a boy.) I never was very good at piano, and I hated it. I finally talked her into letting me quit to take guitar lessons.

I worked at every odd job I could get to buy a guitar and pay for my own lessons—that's how much I wanted to learn. And nobody had to force me to practice, either.

I suppose I should thank my mom for having exposed me to music in the first place, but music should be "fun"—not drudgery. And when a kid gets to a certain age, I think he should be allowed to select his own instrument and his own kind of music. What do you think?

HATED PIANO

DEAR HATED: I agree, there comes a time when parents should allow their children to pursue their own interests and develop their own talents, but few 8 year olds are ready for that.

MUGGING THE MIRROR — Funny faces made by Diane Turner are exercises to, from left, help keep mouth area smooth, firm inner cheek muscles and prevent a sagging chin line.

Funny Faces Firm Muscles

By BETH MOHR
Copley News Service

Women's faces show signs of aging earlier than men's.

That is generally true, says Diane Turner, Chicago actress and model, who attributes it to the fact that men shave.

"Facial exercises tone muscles and stimulate the flow of blood to the surface of the skin, helping to delay the sagging that comes with age," Mrs. Turner said.

"If you'll notice, men's faces stay firm longer than women's do. That's because men exercise their faces every time they shave."

To even things out, Mrs. Turner has worked with a group of dermatologists and a therapist to devise a set of 12 facial exercises to help women ward off the signs of age as long as possible.

If Mrs. Turner is typical, the exercises work. She could keep her age a secret if she wanted to. There is no hint of drooping chin or jawline to announce that she is 38.

She has named the exercise routine Tone-O-Metrics.

"Women of all ages are becoming increasingly aware of the need of exercise to keep their figures in shape, without thinking of the more than 50 muscles of the face and neck that need the same attention," Mrs. Turner said.

Tone-O-Metrics exercises are designed to firm the chin, outer cheeks, inner cheeks, mouth and lip area, jawline and neck.

Mrs. Turner pointed out that exercises are relatively simple and require no equipment.

"You don't have to set a special time just to exercise your face," she said. "You can do all except one while watching television, siting at your desk or working around the house."

The exception is one of the neck exercises. You lie across the bed on your back with your head hanging over the edge. Then raise your head, turn it to the right until your nose touches your shoulder, then return to the original position. The same thing is done turning the head to the left, with five repetitions on each side.

"If hanging your head over the bed makes you dizzy, there is a neck exercise sitting upright," Mrs. Turner said.

For this one, tilt head back and stare at the ceiling.

Open your mouth wide, then close, raising lower lip in exaggerated pout, trying to reach the tip of your nose with your lower lip and pulling down corners of your mouth. You won't reach your nose, but you will feel the pull.

All of the exercises require that you make funny faces.

There are no exercises for the forehead, Mrs. Turner said.

"Exercise will not remove existing wrinkles," she said. "It will firm the area under wrinkles and help the lines from getting deeper. We can retard droop and sag with regular exercise."

Letters To Heloise

Keep Pertinent Iinformation Handy

Dear Heloise:

For several years, I was a volunteer in a hospital emergency room, and sometimes an unconscious person was brought in with no pertinent information in purse or billfold.

As you know, the staff in any emergency room cannot do anything until those forms are signed by the patient, or until a relative is contacted by phone.

Since then, I keep a card in my billfold, with my driver's license on the back. On it, I've listed my blood type and any drugs I'm allergic to, plus my doctor's name and phone number. Also, names and phone numbers of a couple of relatives to be contacted and my accident insurance company and policy number.

I just hope it will never be needed.

Volunteer

So do I! But it's good advice to all the rest of us.

Bless you for helping others by volunteering your time and energies.

Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise:

During the wee hours when I can't sleep, I think, "Today, I'll send you my bright hint."

The morning paper comes and, before my eyes, that wise idea of mine — lies!

(Laugh, but I know Heloise has E.S.P.)

L.E.

Dear Heloise:

With the newer, modern kitchens, there is often no place to put the old-fashioned food grinder.

When I use my grinder I open my bottom kitchen cupboard door, clamp the grinder to the middle shelf, and put a pie plate on the lower next shelf.

Works just great!

Lyn

Dear Heloise:

Guess what? A spot of vinegar on a tissue is the most spectacular thing yet to clean your spectacles.

I know that wouldn't surprise you at all, but my dad was a distinguished eye surgeon and I bet I could have surprised even him with the wonder of Heloise's vinegar!

Japan's Hirohito Thanks American People For Help

By GEORGE GEDDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japan's Emperor Hirohito says the prime purpose of his two-week mission here is to thank the American people for helping his country rise again from the ashes of World War II.

After White House state dinner Thursday night, featuring lobster and white rice, the emperor touched briefly on the war and hailed the American role in its aftermath.

It was a "most unfortunate war, which I deeply deplore," the emperor said in a toast to President Ford.

The monarch then paid tribute to one of the American government's most beleaguered programs — foreign aid.

"There's one thing in particular which I have hoped to convey to the American people," Hirohito said. "That is, to extend in my own words my gratitude to the people of the United States for the friendly hand of good will and assistance their great country accorded us for our postwar reconstruction."

In his remarks, Ford did not mention past differences between the two countries.

The President said the United States places "the highest possible value on our distinctive and mutually beneficial relations" and he stressed U.S. "determination to preserve and strengthen" these ties.

A semantic flap developed over the use, in the official translation, of the word "deplore" in characterizing the emperor's feelings about World War II.

Several bilingual Japanese and Americans said "deplore" connoted something much stronger than the original Japanese text warranted. The emperor spoke through an interpreter.

Japanese officials heatedly denied any suggestion that the official party was using one word for relay home and another for the American audience.

The highlight of the emperor's schedule for today is a Japanese state dinner to be given in Ford's honor — with the dinner flown in from Japan for the occasion.

The emperor, accompanied by his wife, Empress Nagako, leaves Saturday for New York, the third stop on their two-week U.S. tour.

Thursday's state dinner was the first formal party of the Ford administration—white tie—with the guests seated at an E-shaped table instead of at the more informal small round tables preferred by the Fords.

The royal couple stayed at the party until a few minutes after midnight. President and Mrs. Ford remained another hour to dance.

Spaghetti House Siege Ends With Surrender Of Gunmen

LONDON (AP) — The Spaghetti House siege ended early today with the release of the six Italian hostages and the surrender of the three gunmen who had held them captive for five days in a stinking, windowless 10-by-12-foot basement storeroom.

The hostages were unharmed, but Scotland Yard said the leader of the gunmen shot himself in the stomach. He was rushed to a hospital, and his condition was not immediately announced.

The Italians were checked at a hospital and then rejoined their families for tearful reunions.

Deputy Assistant Police Commissioner Colin Woods said they were "in remarkable shape, and I have nothing but praise for their courage and endurance, knowing the conditions they have had to tolerate."

The three gunmen were Franklyn Davis, a 28-year-old Nigerian released from prison last year after serving seven years for bank robbery; Wesley Dick, 20, a black militant born in London of Jamaican parents, and Tony "Bonzo" Munro, 22, believed to be the son of a wealthy West Indian family.

They broke into the Spaghetti House, headquarters for a restaurant chain, early last Sunday shortly after the managers of the establishments in the chain had pooled their receipts for the night. One of the nine Italians in the restaurant escaped and called the police, and at their arrival the gunmen herded the other eight restaurant men into the storeroom.

The gunmen released one of the hostages on Sunday and another on Monday. Claiming they were black activists engaged in a political act, they demanded a plane to fly them to the West Indies. But Scotland Yard said they were common criminals foiled in an attempt to rob the restaurant, refused to make a deal and sweated them out.

The surrender came without warning, the police said.

"The hostages are coming out!" Davis yelled through the stifling room's steel door to Police Cmdr. Christopher Payne.

"It was the first indication we had the gunmen had had enough," Payne told newsmen. "I shouted back, 'All right — send them out one by one.'"

The Italians staggered out, and the police hurried them down the short corridor. As they were helped upstairs, Davis yelled, "We're coming out!"

Payne ordered them to throw out their weapons, two pistols and a shotgun, and come out with their hands on their heads.

Dick and Munro emerged and were arrested.

"Then we heard a shot inside the room and Davis did not appear," Payne said. "We found him lying on the floor with a stomach wound. He'd shot himself. There were no police officers in the room at the time."

"After that long down there, one cannot be surprised they would give up," said Woods. "This was a highly dangerous situation, but a very satisfactory end. It was a criminal situation. Politics did not come into it."

12 Killed In Bloody North Ireland War

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Police rounded up suspected Protestant guerrillas in Belfast early today after 12 persons, most of them Roman Catholics, were killed in Northern Ireland's bloodiest day in nearly four years.

The toll was the heaviest of any day since "Bloody Sunday," Jan. 30, 1972, when British paratroops killed 13 Roman Catholics after a civil rights march in Londonderry.

The police refused to say how many persons were brought in, but all were believed members of the Ulster Volunteer Force (UVF), one of the biggest of the private Protestant armies.

Officials believed the UVF carried out most of the attacks Thursday in retaliation for 30 bomb attacks last week by the Catholic guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing.

The Catholics struck back Thursday night. The bullet-riddled body of a man believed to have been a Protestant was found in a Belfast street. Gunmen in South Belfast shot a 49-year-old Protestant man in the leg. Three stores owned by Protestants were bombed in Armagh, 35 miles southwest of Belfast, and three policemen were wounded. Four armed men bombed a Protestant garage in Coleraine, 60 miles northwest of the capital.

Thursday's toll raised the number of confirmed dead in Northern Ireland's Protestant-Catholic civil war to 1,331 since August 1969. This includes 176 killed since the IRA Provisionals declared a cease-fire on Feb. 10.

Police said there were 11 bombings and a dozen shootings in an 18-hour period Thursday. In addition to the dead, 38 persons were wounded, including a 3-year-old girl and five police officers.

Kidnapers Seize, Theaten To Kill Dutch Businessman

LIMERICK, Ireland (AP) — Kidnapers seized a leading Dutch businessman today and said he will be killed within 48 hours unless three top Provisional Irish Republican Army prisoners are freed, officials said.

Dr. Tiede Herrema, 53, managing director of the International Ferenka Co. in Limerick, was taken from his car shortly after he left for his office.

His captors telephoned the Dutch Embassy in Dublin and the Dublin Evening Press newspaper saying he would be executed unless IRA prisoners Jim Hyland, Kevin Mallon and Dr. Rose Dugdale are freed.

The kidnapers also demanded that Ferenka, a steel manufacturing concern, close its Limerick factory for 24 hours starting at 8 a. m. Saturday "as an act of faith."

Ferenka quickly announced it would comply with the demand.

But another demand by the kidnapers that no roadblocks be set up was ignored by authorities, and huge traffic jams formed in and around Limerick as police searched for Herrema and his captors.

The government met in emergency session to discuss tactics.

Herrema's car, with the keys still in the ignition, was found a few hundred yards from his home in Castle Troy, near Limerick.

He came to Limerick from Holland, where Ferenka's parent Akzo Corp. is headquartered, to help the factory over troubles after a series of disputes.

Sex Believed Slaying Motive

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Sex is believed to be the motive in the Aug. 5 strangulation death of Mrs. Emily Welty, 68, at her home, say homicide investigators.

Charles Glenn Jones, 19, a San Antonio truck driver, has been charged in the slaying and was questioned by police Wednesday. Bond was set at $100,000.

William, Emily Harris Facing Arraignment Today

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two Symbionese Liberation Army members, indicted with newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst on 11 counts stemming from a May 1974 crime spree involving kidnaping and robbery, face arraignment today.

The most serious of the counts in the Los Angeles County Grand Jury indictment returned Thursday against Miss Hearst and William and Emily Harris carries a maximum life sentence.

Meanwhile, Catherine Hearst said Thursday night that "the media have tried Patty and found her guilty, so why not everyone else?"

After she and her husband, Randolph, arrived at the San Francisco Bay area jail where their daughter is being held, Mrs. Hearst told newsmen:

"I suppose you people think all the problems of terrorism can be solved by pinning them on Patty Hearst. It's strange how she's caught between the radicals and the government. The radicals want to get out from under, and the government wants to pin everything on her and get rid of everything in one lump. But it's not realistic."

Trial for the Harrises could begin within 60 days. Miss Hearst is in the San Mateo County Jail near San Francisco awaiting trial on federal bank robbery charges and could not be arraigned today.

It was unclear whether she would be tried with the Harrises as the prosecution wishes.

The Harrises and Miss Hearst were indicted on two counts of kidnaping, six of assault with a deadly weapon and three of armed robbery. One of the kidnaping counts, kidnaping for the purpose of robbery, in California carries a maximum life sentence.

The Harrises are held in lieu of $500,000 bail each.

The indictments followed the defense's failure either to gain access to the jury's deliberations with the right to cross-examine and call its own witnesses or to block the hearings.

Meanwhile, in San Francisco, there were these other developments:

—A Justice Department spokesman said it was his "understanding" that a magazine article about Miss Hearst was essentially correct. The magazine, Rolling Stone, said among other things that Miss Hearst asked to be admitted to the SLA after being kidnaped by the radical group on Feb. 4, 1974, and that she later refused an offer to be taken home.

—Two of three court-appointed psychiatrists visited the jailed heiress. The panel's written reports on Miss Hearst's mental state were being prepared and could be submitted to the judge today or Monday.

—Justice Department public information officer Robert Louis Stevenson confirmed that a "memoir" containing a chronology of events including the Feb. 4, 1974, kidnaping of Miss Hearst was among evidence gathered at the Harrises' apartment. The Oakland Tribune reported Thursday that the manuscript, more than 13 pages long, indicates Harris was one of the men who kidnaped the newspaper heiress.

—The San Francisco Examiner said other evidence in federal hands shows that SLA members planned to infiltrate the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. and the Oakland Police Department.

In Sacramento, the FBI said it had learned that the Harrises lived in a rundown frame house near the state capitol from February until sometime in June.

During that same period, a murder-holdup occurred at a Crocker National Bank branch in nearby Carmichael and a Sacramento savings and loan was held up.

Authorities say they are investigating the possibility that Miss Hearst and the Harrises were involved in both robberies.

The FBI said it was still trying to determine where Miss Hearst stayed during the period the Harrises lived at the frame house in Sacramento.

The charges in Thursday's indictment cover alleged acts May 16 and 17, 1974, after William Harris reportedly was caught attempting to steal a pair of socks at an Inglewood sporting goods store and escaped during a shootout. The three also are accused of later kidnaping Thomas D. Matthews, 18, while stealing his van, and kidnaping and robbing Frank R. Sutter.

On Tuesday, U. S. Dist. Court Judge Oliver J. Carter is expected to rule whether Miss Hearst is mentally competent to be cross-examined in court. Her attorneys say she may be on the verge of a nervous breakdown and should be hospitalized.

It was uncertain whether a declaration of mental incompetence in federal court would prevent state prosecutors from proceeding with their cases against Miss Hearst.

Officials Believe Hoffa Informant Is Harry Hall

By PETE YOST

DETROIT (AP) — Federal and local officials believe the underworld informant who has attempted to direct investigators to the grave of James R. Hoffa is 56-year-old ex-convict Harry Hall, the Detroit News said today.

In a copyrighted story the News said Hall was described by government sources as a veteran underworld informer with some strong ties to the Mafia and the Teamsters union.

Hall, also known as Harry Haller and Harry Helfgott, has been written off in the past as a liar by top Justice Department officials, including former Asst. Atty. Gen. Henry E. Peterson, the News said.

Senate subcommittee investigators have been attempting to gain precise directions to a reported Hoffa gravesite from an underworld contact who they have never identified.

They say the contact last week gave them general directions to a site in Waterford Township about 15 miles from the restaurant where Hoffa was last seen. But they were unable to find the body of the former Teamster president.

At the end of 1974, Hall finished serving six months on a bank loan fraud charge.

The News said he has a long arrest record. The paper said his tips over the year have been considered credible partly because he has never accepted payment for them.

Meanwhile, sources confirmed Thursday that FBI agents were investigating whether Hoffa's body was stuffed in a trash compactor and hauled away by a Mafia-organized sanitation company.

The trash compactor is at the Raleigh House restaurant, less than five miles from the parking lot of another restaurant where Hoffa was last seen July 30.

The firm that picks up the trash every Friday at the Raleigh House in Southfield just north of Detroit is Central Sanitation Services Inc. of Hamtramck, incorporated last year by Raffaele "Jimmy Q" Quasarano and Dominic Corrado, reputed Detroit Mafia figures.

The incorporation papers fail to make clear which of two reputed Detroit Mafia figures, is involved in the company. The latest annual report dropped the names of Corrado and Quasarano.

FBI agents last month inspected the 40-cubic-yard compactor installed by Central Sanitation at the Raleigh House, said James Joseph, general manager of the banquet hall. Joseph told reporters the FBI said their inquiries were in connection with the Hoffa case.

Dam Leaks At Vernon

VERNON, Tex. (AP) — A leak in a dam on Santa Rosa Lake in southeast Wilbarger County today forced evacuation of about 75 persons.

A flash flood warning was issued after authorities said it appeared the dam would burst despite efforts to shore up the dam.

The 1,800-acre lake is on the vast Waggoner Ranch near the Kadane Corner and Kamay communities.

Water at the dam is 30 feet deep. Officials said should the dam break, it would take two to three hours for the water to reach Kadane Corner by which time the wall of water would have leveled off, probably causing only minor flooding.

The area is sparsely populated and the nearest communities are on high ground.

Federal Building Sculpture Costs Taxpayers $15,000

we submitted." Neuhardt & Babb and Odessa architects Covington-Shelton-Taylor were designers of the Federal Building and U.S. Post Office complex that spreads over the 100 and 200 blocks of East Wall Street. Area Builders, Inc., of Odessa was the general contractor.

Queen said he had submitted "about six" designs to the GSA before the GSA folks settled on his design that pays tribute to the American soldier.

"I'm very happy. This is what I wanted," Queen said of his net product.

"It's an abstraction . . . . It's what Washington wanted and it's what they got." Because of its abstract concept, Queen implied, the sculpture may be somewhat controversial. But, as he said, all he can do is leave it to rest "and hope people will like it."

Helping coordinate the Queen-GSA project was Bob Miller, director of GSA's construction management division in Fort Worth.

Miller, contacted in Fort Worth by telephone, said the GSA, by policy, gives the artist "freedom of expression. We don't try to tell them (artists) what to do."

He did say, however, that one of Queen's first proposals — "John's Cowboy" — was turned down by GSA. Queen offered the GSA other sketches of sculpture ideas after the GSA rejected the American West cowboy theme.

A year or so ago, the GSA settled on the American Soldier approach to the art work. (Since Queen was commissioned by GSA, the GSA has set up its fine arts committee to govern similar art work.)

Queen said an Odessa building contractor, J. W. Cooper Construction Co., poured the cement into the form he designed for the art object's centerpiece.

But instead of turning out marble-smooth, the surface of the centerpiece-base showed up with pockmarks. Numerous pockmarks. They were not planned.

And the gray look of the four 18-by-30-inch plaques singling out the American soldier doesn't match the gray tone of the centerpiece base.

They were to be poured from the same batch of cement mix to insure tone uniformity, a unity in texture.

The effect bowed out.

The pockmark effects of the many cavities and subtle two-toneness appear planned.

To create the six-foot abstract figures of soldiers, Queen shaped the molds out of brass rods and then carried them from his backyard at Lubbock 200 miles eastward to Wichita Falls. "We just rented a foundry," Queen said, and poured molten aluminum into the molds. His wife Avis was his helpmate on the project.

Aside from its lightness, aluminum was selected to cast the figures because, Queen said, "The government doesn't want anything that will rust."

Queen's project went pretty much as intended. But the GSA did not go for a gas light he had planned to burn atop the centerpiece base.

"The gas shortage came along," Queen said, "and they thought it wouldn't be such a good idea." Later, as he was finishing up on cleaning up the sculpture, particularly where it was stained with carbon from the welding, Queen threw in a comment on the reported gas shortage: "They need the gas up East; we can't spare it" here for the sculpture.

The GSA, according to Miller, has yet to formally approve Queen's finished product, but it's only a matter of time when approval comes and Queen gets the balance of his $15,000 fee.

"We just haven't gone out (to Midland) and taken a flying look at it," Miller said.

Expenses incurred by Queen in creating the sculpture are to be paid from that fee, Miller said. The GSA dealt only with Queen, he said.

Queen doesn't get to Midland too often. He's been on the Tech art Department faculty since 1960, and, as a sculptor and sculpture teacher, is an associate professor or art.)

But he appreciates what he, as an artist, sees in the city. He cast a considered glance toward the spreading, three-story Federal Building-Post Office complex and commented:

"This is a beautiful building —best I've seen."

Furr's Employes Remain On Job

Lubbock-based picketers passed out fliers Thursday at Midland's Furr's Cafeteria, but the manager, Charles Burns, said none of the restaurant's employes here are striking.

Members of Amalgamated Meat Cutters in Lubbock have been on strike since Sept. 17, according to Frank Orebalo, a Furr's employe from Lubbock and a member of the union's negotiating committee. He said a seniority system is the major issue in the dispute.

The union spokesman said they already had been to the Odessa facilities, but that employes had not left their jobs.

Mrs. English was born Aug. 8, 1919, in Mt. Pleasant. She came to Midland one year ago from Dallas. She was a Baptist.

Survivors include the husband, Clifton English of Midland; two brothers, the Rev. Walter Green of Albuquerque, N.M., and the Rev. Bobby Green of Midland, and a sister, Mrs. Thelma Byrd of Midland.

Autumn Cooler Than Usual

In case you hadn't noticed, autumn has started out to be cooler than usual in Texas.

The current cool spell brought record low temperatures for the date again this morning. One was a 39 at Abilene, three degrees under the previously chilliest Oct. 3 there in 1961.

Skies stayed clear nearly everywhere in the state and light winds fanned most sections. Forecasts called for no appreciable changes, The Associated Press reported.

As chilled air spread over more of South Texas, readings near dawn at other points again sagged into the 30s in the West Texas mountains. The range elsewhere was from 40 degrees at Texarkana in Northeast Texas up to 60 at Galveston on the coast and McAllen in the Lower Rio Gande Valley.

With dry air enveloping the state, forecasts called for fair and mild weather in all sections.

Weather forecast for the Midland area calls for fair conditions and a slow warming trend today and Saturday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

High temperature today should be in the middle 70s, with a low tonight in the upper 40s. High Saturday is forecast for the upper 70s.

The weather station recorded a high Thursday of 71, with an overnight low of 43. The low mercury reading was one degree away from tying the record of 42 set in 1961.

Air Conditioning Bond Sale Oct. 28

Midland public school trustees have set Oct. 28 as the date for selling $4.2 million in bonds to air-condition 22 buildings in the school district.

Meeting in special session Thursday afternoon, board members set the time of the sale at 2:30 p.m. They will receive the sealed bids in the board room of the district's administration building.

In the special session, trustees also evaluated and finally approved documents relating to the school district's financial condition which will be presented to two bond rating companies prior to the bond sale.

Bob Davis of Columbian Securities of San Antonio, the schools' fiscal agent, was present for the meeting.

Upon his recommendation, board members voted to incorporate in the notice of the sale of the 12-year bonds an option which would allow the district to call in the bonds at the end of 10 years in order to receive an improved interest rate for the last two years.

Davis told trustees he believes the Midland schools could feasibly get a 6½ per cent interest rate on the bonds when they are sold later this month.

pay for themselves.

"If the district were put in the position of providing them, I'm sure the costumes would not be as elaborate."

While not specifically covered in the Hill opinion, admission to school events such as athletic contests also could be affected by the ruling, some school officials across the state said.

"We could not afford to offer, I don't believe, as many activities as we now offer if we could not support them in some way through a 'use' fee, such as using facilities and materials."

Mrs. Wallace Dies In Hospital

Mrs. La Vera Wallace, 64, of Midland, died early Friday at a Midland hospital. She had resided at 3006 W. Ohio and had been ill for the past six weeks.

Services will be at 4 p.m. Saturday in the Newnie W. Ellis Chapel with the Rev. John Long, pastor of Memorial Christian Church, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. Wallace was born Jan. 24, 1911, in Carter, Okla. She lived in Vernon and Wichita Falls for a number of years before moving to Midland in 1935. She married Irvin Wallace in 1959.

Survivors include the husband, a stepson, James Irvin Wallace of Houston, a brother-in-law, Moody Rogers of Port Lavaca and a nephew, Wayne Rogers of Port Lavaca.

A spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service border station in Champlain, N.Y., said today there was no new information about the car, but the alert was still on. A U.S. Border Patrol spokesman said Thursday there was no evidence the three had crossed the Canadian border.

The source of the report has not been disclosed but the immigration spokesman has said officials have no reason to doubt its authenticity.

Hirohito met with Ford in Washington Thursday and will be in Washington today. After his trip to the Northeast he is scheduled to leave New York Tuesday for Chicago. Ford was not scheduled to accompany Hirohito after he leaves Washington.

Hill Knocks Down Lab, Workbook, Driver Training Fees

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The start of school usually has meant a number of expenses for most families. Five dollars for a workbook for the first grader. A $6 lab fee for the 12-year-old. Driver training for the high schooler—$35.

But Atty. Gen. John Hill issued a revolutionary legal opinion Thursday declaring that such fees charged by the schools are illegal.

The provision in the Texas Constitution setting up "public free schools" means that only fees authorized by the legislature may be charged, Hill said. And none of the common fees—from workbooks to band uniforms—fall in that category.

Parents of the 20,000 elementary school children in Austin alone pay out $100,000 a year for workbooks. Youngsters in higher grades often have workbook, lab and other fees adding up to $10 or more per pupil.

Now these costs will have to be absorbed by the school districts and their taxpayers.

Hill's opinion was requested by Texas Education Commissioner Marlon Brockette.

"In the absence of specific legislative sanction, a school district does not have the authority to impose tuition for driver training; charges for school supplies and instruction and lab fees in conjunction with normal academic, vocational or physical education classroom instruction or training; or fees for extra-curricular activities, such as band uniforms, athletic lockers and towels, and club membership," Hill declared.

The decision puts pressure on the legislature either to authorize the fees or to provide additional school funds. It would take an estimated $5 million a year in tax money to pay for the portion of driver education costs—$35 per student—now financed with fees.

Lawmakers will meet in January if Article III of the proposed new state constitution, mandating annual legislative sessions, passes Nov. 4. Otherwise, there probably will be demands on Gov. Dolph Briscoe to call a special session to help school districts cope with the new educational costs.

Brockette said he would not recommend legislation authorizing such fees.

"We've said 'free public schools' (in the Texas Constitution), grades kindergarten through 12, and it would be an inconsistency," Brockette said. "We've been contending all along that driver education ought to be paid for entirely by the state or eliminated from the curriculum."

He acknowledged that the decision confronts school districts "with a reduction of some programs or amending their budgets."

The attorney general did not say whether fees collected at the start of this school year should be refunded, and Brockette said he might ask Hill that question later.

Hill said that while the legislature had authorized such charges as tuition for a fourth quarter of schooling and fees for vocational training, it had not approved any of the fees mentioned by Brockette.

A 1931 Texas Supreme Court decision, he said, held that the only permissible deviations from the constitutional standard of free public education are those approved by the legislature.

"The legislature not having authorized charges in the area of your inquiries, and having specifically permitted charges in other areas, would argue for the conclusion that the legislature did not intend to authorize charges for those activities about which you inquire," Hill told Brockette.

In 1966, he noted, former commissioner J. W. Edgar ruled that a school district violated the constitution when it withheld a pupil's report card to force his family to pay a "supply fee" that had not been authorized by the legislature.

Hill declined to go into what kind of fees the legislature could constitutionally authorize and noted that there is "a significant difference of opinion among the appellate courts of other states as to what is required by a constitutional provision establishing a system of "free public schools."

Officials Call Decision 'Frightening,' 'Bombshell'

By The Associated Press

"Frightening" and "bombshell" were some of the words used by school officials throughout Texas late Thursday on hearing about Atty. Gen. John Hill's opinion declaring illegal school fees, ranging from band uniforms to work books and driver's education.

Estimates of what it would cost the school districts on an annual basis ranged from $60,000 at some small districts to nearly $10 million at Houston.

In the end, school officials noted, the money will have to come from the same source — the parents' pocket, perhaps in the form of higher taxes.

Hill said that the provision in the Texas Constitution setting up "public free schools" means that only fees authorized by the legislature may be charged by the schools.

"I think definitely we will have to challenge this," said Northeast (Bexar County) District Supt. Ivan Fitzwater. "Right off the top of my head, I think the Texas Education Agency ought to go to court."

Fitzwater and other school officials pointed out that one of the most seriously affected programs will be driver's education which, in most districts, is financed to a large extent by student fees.

But other programs could be affected also, said the Victoria school board president, Dr. Kenneth Mueller, pointing out that those would include elective programs such as art, typing, choir, dance, drafting and others.

Victoria district manager Bill Scheffield said Hill's opinion would mean additional cost to the district of approximately $100,000 a year.

School officials also regretted that the ruling came at a time when the school budgets are already in effect.

In Lubbock, school Supt. Ed Irons said he knew the opinion had been requested, but added: "It really came as a bombshell to us. We weren't expecting it."

The driver's education program fees alone, he explained, run to $63,000 a year.

Houston Supt. Billy Reagan, said there was "merit to his (Hill's) concern. We've reached a time when the time-honored free public education system is not a reality."

Linus Wright, Houston superintendent for administration and support services, called the opinion "frightening" and said its impact could be felt beyond the classroom.

Pasadena Supt. C. Lee Mayer said the opinion would mean "additional taxes if we intend to keep the type of program we have."

El Paso District Supt. J. M. Whitaker said it would mean an additional expense of about $400,000 a year.

In Amarillo, Supt. David Austin said, "For the most part, work books are purchased by students in stores, but we charge fees for other items such as lab and driver's education."

Canyon Supt. Jerry Jacobs said that in event the fees must be dropped, "the state will have to supply the funds. "We cannot do it on a local level."

In Dallas, school Supt. Nolan Estes said, "I just paid $15 for my son's band uniform. Almost every area of our schools has some kind of fees. In every area there are things parents provide — towel fees, locker fees . . . It seems like every day it is something else."

Today Last Day For Voter Signup

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Today is the last day to register to vote in the Nov. 4 general election on the proposed new state constitution, Secretary of State Mark White said Thursday.

Also, Monday will be the last day for individuals or organizations active in the Nov. 4 election to file their first campaign contribution and expense reports, White said.

Houston Reports Another Confirmed Encephalitis Case

HOUSTON (AP) — Health authorities now have reported 15 confirmed and 35 suspected Harris County cases of encephalitis since the outbreak of the disease last month.

One confirmed case and four more suspected cases were reported Thursday. Included was the transfer of a 46-year-old man from the suspected list to the confirmed list.

The 35 suspected cases include five deaths. Three of the deaths still are under investigation but health officials have said the exact cause of the deaths of two persons who died in August probably will never be determined.

Also released Thursday were the results of tests of blood from 65 birds collected at three Houston locations. Birds are carriers of the disease that is transmitted to humans by mosquitoes.

Health officials said they were encouraged in that the tests showed that only three of the 65 birds were carriers.

Bulldogs, Panthers Meet In District 5-4A Opener

BY TED BATTLES

What four years ago was one of the most-sided series in District 5-4A has developed into one of the choice rivalries and the Midland Bulldogs hope to keep the new look alive when the Purple Pack hosts Odessa Permian at 8 p.m. today in Memorial Stadium.

Unbeaten, untied, unscored upon and 5th ranked in Texas AAAA circles, Permian is a firm choice to raise its record to 4-0 against the 2-1 Bulldogs in the league opener. Still, Midland Coach John Reddell is optimistic.

"I think we can give them a good game," he commented, "The only thing that worries me is our inexperience. If we make a lot of mistakes, as a young team is sometimes inclined to do, like we did against Amarillo Tascosa and Eastwood, the game could get out of hand. You just don't do that against a team like Permian.

"If we eliminate our mistakes, as we did against Lubbock Monterey, we have a chance."

Permian Coach John Wilkins, despite the state ranking, isn't sure how strong his Panthers are this year. "We have better-than-average athletes, and good depth, but we have no super stars like Daryl Hunt and Grady Wilkerson. Our linebackers are good, but not as big as they have been in the past. They aren't the kind to turn your head when they stick you like Hunt."

To win, Wilkins feels "We must contain Ward (halfback Phillip Ward), who is a definite breakaway threat and Midland's defense, especially with James Zachery backing up the line, looks tough."

Permian has split its yardage between running and passing and Wilkins would like to see more productivity from his running game.

Pittman Starts

The Panthers will be quarterbacked this week by junior Curtis Pittman, who replaces senior Kris Howard, who will play, but an injury makes it uncertain how much. Pittman is perhaps a better runner and Howard a better passer. However, Permian eschews the flashy bomb for the high percentage pass and consequently both quarterbacks have impressive completion percentages.

Midland's Kevin Widner is a capable of throwing effectively, witness two touchdown tosses in three completions against Monterey.

However, the rivalry is such that it becomes increasingly more difficult to go by past performance records. In 1972, Midland snapped a 20-game Permian win streak, 21-8, in knocking off the defending state champions. Yet the Panthers rebounded to win district.

Last year, the Bulldogs appeared to have a second straight victory in this series that stands 13-3 in Permian's favor when a blocked punt in the last six seconds swung the tide to the Panthers 6-3.

Of course, Reddell's big problem this year is the fact that it's a young team and he never knows whether it will play like juniors, which many are, or seniors.

"We just didn't have a very big junior group last year," Reddell notes. "We had 20 juniors on last year's squad. One moved away, two quit and another got married, so we have 16 of that 20 back."

It's the first time in 23 years of coaching that Reddell has coached a football team with less than 100 players. Midland has a combined varsity-JV group of 95.

Midland will go with the same lineup that beat Lubbock Monterey, 18-14, two weeks ago. However, the defense faces a different challenge tonight. The Pack proved it could handle a Mad Bomber like Monterey's Scott Gardner, but tonight it will face the combination threat of the pass and run.

Key to Midland's offense, which also encounters its severest test, has been the blocking of the offensive line and the scythelike blocking of halfback Kim Madden,fullback Terry Whitaker and wide receiver Clellan Pierce, who spring Ward on the sweeps.

Rebels Gun For No. 4 At Odessa

By BOB DILLON

ODESSA — Midland Lee opens defense of its District 5-4A football crown against the small, but quick Odessa High Bronchos in W.T. Earrett Stadium tonight.

Lee shared the 1974 crown with San Angelo, but moved to the Class AAAA playoffs by virture of its 21-7 win over the Bobcats.

Tonight's 8 p.m. kickoff will feature two teams who have played against each other the past three or four years. Last year, Lee took a hard-fought 14-13 decision over the Bronchos and the Rebs expect another tough battle tonight.

If Odessa has anything going for it, the fact that the Red Hosses have won 10 of the 14 meeetings between the two rivals and another very good reason in quarterback Darrell Shepard who is a talented runner and signal-caller and only a junior.

OHS has shut out Lee on four different occasions since the heated series started in 1961. Since Jim Acree has been at Lee, his Rebels have won two and lost three, so wins don't come that easy against the Bronchos.

Both teams go into the game undefeated in three games. Lee has beaten Lubbock High, 27-16, Snyder, 7-3 and Plainview by the score of 25-6.

OHS, meanwhile, owns victories over Amarillo High, 30-18, Andrews, 28-0 and Hobbs, N.M., 7-6 and in that game Rick Boren's toe was the difference. The 225-pound senior can boot field goals from 40 to 50 yards out for the Bronchos. He had a 48-yarder against Amarillo in the season opener.

So Lee has its work cut out, especially on defense with Boren able to get the Bronchos some points with field goals and Shepard, who can score from anywhere on the field. His specialty is punt and kickoff returns. The speedy junior had an 85-yard TD run called back last week in the narrow victory over the Hobbs Eagles.

Lee's multiple attack is sparked by tailback Clyde Gary, fullback Bobby Humble and quarterback Brad Wright — all juniors, but Lee loses the services of Humble for next year, beacuse he is moving to Denver, Colo., after football season.

Add 6-6, 225-pound tight end Junior Miller, and the Rebels have lots of talent. Billy Skinner, 215-pound senior tackle, adds more size in the line for the Maroon Platoon.

Odessa Coach Dub Farris is optimistic about tonight's game. "We know we can give Lee a good ball game even though we feel that the Rebels are better than they were last year."

Acree and his staff are worried about stopping Shepard along with fullback Johnny Burleson. 'Shepard is a great back and as good as any in the state," said Acree.

Lee's offense perked up considerably two weeks ago when Gary returned to the lineup

UCLA Picked In 'Upset Special'

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Colorado and UCLA, themselves among the Top Twenty, get a chance this weekend to stick their two cents into the dispute over whether Oklahoma or Ohio State is the nation's No. 1 college football team.

While Barry "I'm Still Happy to Remain No. 1" Switzer's Oklahoma Sooners open defense of their Big Eight crown by entertaining Colorado, Woody "We Deserve to Be No. 1" Hayes' Ohio State Buckeyes will be in Los Angeles for a nationally televised game, ABC-TV, 8 p.m., CDT, against UCLA.

OU Looking Ahead

If Oklahoma was looking past Miami of Florida (20-17), what do you think the Sooners will be doing this week with arch-rival Texas next on the agenda?

"Most teams are up and down during a season, but if you're a good enough football team the polls will take care of themselves," says Switzer.

Despite some problems on the offensive line, the Sooners are a good enough football team to handle unbeaten Colorado . . . Oklahoma 28-17.

UCLA Coach Dick Vermeil, who may be slightly prejudiced in the matter, has his own opinion of the rankings. "I vote the Buckeyes No. 1. I'm afraid if our guys see the films, they may not want to show up."

Upset Special of the Week . . . UCLA 27-24.

Last week's score was 45 right, 21 wrong, three ties for a .682 percentage. For the season, it's 135-67-7—.668.

Steers Beady-Eyed For OU

'Holy War' Countdown Begins Despite Utah State

By The Associated Press

The countdown for Texas' "Holy War" with Oklahoma Oct. 11 has begun but Longhorn Coach Darrell Royal would prefer his team not get all beady eyed and leave the launching pad prematurely.

There is the matter of Utah State on the agenda Saturday in Memorial Stadium and the last two times the clubs tangled Texas had to struggle before prevailing 27-12 in 1972.

"I think it is a logical concern to fear that we would look past them (Utah State)," says Royal. "I have said that the biggest error you can make is to underestimate your opponent.

Should Win

"I think it is pretty obvious that we should win the football game, but I think it is also obvious that the best team doesn't always win. And I have seen countless times that big favorites have been extended so that they had to keep their first line players in all the way."

Royal would certainly like to rest his four-touchdown favorite regulars as much as possible with Oklahoma looming on the horizon.

Oklahoma has won the last four meetings between the rivals. There's also Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer's reference to coaches who would rather listen to guitar pickers than recruit and Royal's reply that he knew who Switzer was talking about.

UT Looks To OU

And there's the polygraph issue where both schools have announced they've had lie detector tests on recruiting. And Royal's challenge to Switzer—so far unanswered—to swap each other's polygraph experts.

"I am telling our players that we have got to play our next football game before we think about anybody else and as a coach I have got to do the same thing," says Royal.

Elsewhere, Arkansas is a 28-point pick over Texas Christian in a Southwest Conference joust at Little Rock; unbeaten and 11th ranked West Virginia is a six-point nod over Southern Methodist at Dallas; sixth-ranked Texas A&M is an 18-point pick over unbeaten Kansas State on the road; Baylor is a field goal selection over South Carolina away; and powerful Oklahoma State is a 10-point nod over Texas Tech.

Baylor's 18th ranked Bears are the only other unbeaten SWC team remaining—besides the "Horns and the Aggies.

after missing the first two games against Lubbock and Snyder.

Russell Kellner, who usually doubles at quarterback and safety, is being held out of tonight's game to give his knee more time to heal. He suffered a knee injury in the Plainview game in which he ran out of the tailback slot some too,

Boren, who handles the punting and kicking chores for the Bronchos, also starts on defense at a tackle slot. He along with offenseive tackle David Clark, are the only two starters over 200 pounds, but OHS more than makes up for the lack of size with quickness. "They (OHS) have a strong kicking game which should play a vital part in tonight's contest, " said Acree. Acree feels like his defensive ends will really get tested during the game.

On defense, Lee starts Miller (225), Skinner Billy Skinner (215) and Humble (205) and can also insert Brian Pope, another 205-pounder.

Shepard has scored six touchdowns for 36 points for OHS, but is not the leading rusher for OHS. Burleson has rushed for 186, yards in 53 carries for an average of 3.5 yards per carry while Shepard has rushed for 161 yards in 35 tries for a 4.6 average. Split receiver Johnny Morrison has been Shepard's favorite target with three catches for 105 yards and two touchdowns.

Iowa Commits Hari-Kari

By The Associated Press

For a suicide schedule, Iowa's has to be right up there among the Top Ten.

That's exactly where it is — Penn State, Southern Cal and Ohio State on three successive weekends.

As if things weren't tough enough for the poor relatives of the Big Ten, Iowa takes on No. 3 Southern Cal Saturday after spending a futile afternoon with No. 10 Penn State last week. Next week, it's No. 2 Ohio State as a playmate.

"They are out of sight," says Iowa Coach Bob Commings in referring to his next opponent, although it might be any of the three powerhouses.

The Nittany Lions took care of Iowa 30-10 last week for the winless Hawkeyes' third loss of the year. Southern Cal won its third straight game with a 19-6 victory over Purdue, Iowa's Big Ten colleague.

Iowa's slim mathematical chance will be compounded by Southern Cal's blinding quickness.

"No one in the country possesses the overall team speed these people have," Commings said.

How to stop the Trojans?

"We've got to hold the whole offense," pointed out Commings, who expects to have his hands full mostly with Ricky Bell, the nation's leading rusher with 560 yards. "Bell is as good as McKay has had — with the exception of O.J. Simpson. "And McKay says we're going to get a steady diet of him."

While Iowa readies its weak fortress for Southern Cal's assault, there promises to be more competitive games on Saturday's schedule involving Top Ten teams.

Top-ranked Oklahoma faces No. 19 Colorado in a tough test for the "Boomer Sooners." Ohio State plays in UCLA against the 13th-ranked Bruins in what shapes up as another bone-buster. Fourth-ranked Nebraska meets Miami (Fla.), a team that lost to muscular Oklahoma by only three points last weekend.

McKay Wants Super College Conference

Battle Scene

By Jed Battles

A lot of coaches have talked vaguely about the formation of some sort of super conference, but Southern California's John McKay is the first to suggest and name names.

McKay is upset over the NCAA's revenue-sharing suggestions that would subsidize smaller schools' football programs.

"The answer for us, UCLA, Michigan State, Ohio State, Nebraska, Texas, Notre Dame and a few others is to start our own negotiations with ABC."

In fact, McKay doesn't see why the top colleges even need the NCAA. He figures they could form their own league and negotiate their own television package if the NCAA goes ahead with its "silly and incompetent" decisions.

Of course, McKay ignores the fact that if it weren't for opponents like Oregon, Washington, Kansas State and other built-in victims, maybe the current super teams wouldn't be so super.

Even in an elite league such as McKay proposes, there inevitably would be winners and losers. And how enthusiastic would ABC be about carrying, say a 2-5 Alabama against a 1-6 UCLA?

And if USC were in such a conference, it sure wouldn't be fattening up on Iowa Saturday, a game the Trojans should win 35-7...

In the SWC...

Texas 42, Utah State 7 — Would the Longhorns really like to warm up for Oklahoma against Ohio State?

Baylor 18, South Carolina 17— Grant Teaff asks, "Are you sure there isn't a Super Conference already?"

Arkansas 36, TCU 10 — With UTA, Arizona State, and Nebraska behind, Jim Shofner answers, "Yes, Grant, there is a Super Conference...and, no, there isn't any Santa Claus."

Oklahoma State 21, Texas Tech 10 — Red Raiders add an Amen.

West Virginia 17, SMU 14— If Mustangs win this, they'll command more respect in SWC chase.

Texas A&M 28, Kansas State 7 — Aggies finally have an offense its defense can be proud of.

The Toughies...

Michigan 14, Missouri 13— If we had any nerve, we'd pick a tie.

Notre Dame 14, Michigan State 10— Beware of the upset.

Ohio State 21, UCLA 7 — Archie Griffin vs. John Sciarra, but Archie has more friends.

Oklahoma 35, Colorado 13, — Buffs pay for Miami's audacity.

In 5-4A ...

Midland Lee 27, Odessa 20 — Darrell Shephard will score, but Rebels will score more.

Odessa Permian 10, Midland 7 — Panthers are undefeated, untied and unscored upon.

San Angelo 17, Abilene Cooper 15— A tossup, but it's at San Angelo.

Abilene 21, Big Spring 14— Eagles' speed too much for Steers.

Littler, Courtney Tie For Kaiser Golf Lead

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — "I don't have that much longer to play this game, so I kind of figured I'd better play as much and as well as I can while I can," Gene Littler said.

And that, the 45-year-old veteran said, is the reason he's enjoying the best season of his two-decade career.

"There've been years I've won more tournaments but, from a financial standpoint, this is far and away my best year," said the slightly-built Littler, winner of three titles and $173,608 already this season.

"I think the reason is that I'm paying more attention to the game," he said Thursday after his seven-under-par 65 had tied Chuck Courtney for the first round lead in the $175,000 Kaiser International Open Golf Tournament.

"One year I'd won about $100,000 by the Masters and I was through for the year. I'd done all I wanted and I just didn't play much the rest of the way. Other times, I'd take, say, three-four weeks off and I wouldn't play the first two-three weeks I was home.

"That program don't get it.

"I think that's the difference now. I'm paying more attention to the game now even when I'm not playing in a tournament. Instead of fiddling with my cars (he's an antique car buff) I'll be practicing. I figure there'll be plenty of time to fiddle with the cars when I can't play golf."

Sox Seek Seven October Victories

BOSTON (AP) — The chalked message on the board in the Boston Red Sox' clubhouse says it all: "7 Wins in October."

That, of course, would mean the American League pennant and the World Series championship.

"Yeh, that seven sounds like a nice figure," Cecil Cooper said Thursday after learning he would play first base instead of being the designated hitter. "Now we have to go out and do it."

Heading into their best-of-five league championship series with the Oakland A's, the Red Sox figure they're starting a new, but shorter, season.

In other words, and coining a cliche, it's a brand new ball game. However, they're confident, without making open predictions.

"You just can't make any predictions," said veteran Carl Yastrzemski, who led the Red Sox to their last pennant in 1967. "Sure, I predicted we'd win in 1967, but that was when no one gave us a chance. It was one of those things. Now? I've been in this game too long and have seen too many things happen.

"The main thing now is to go on the field and win a pennant. Then we can think about the World Series."

Yastrzemski, 36 and completing his 15th season with the Red Sox, faces a new challenge in the showdown with the A's starting Saturday. The regular first baseman this year is returning to left field with the first two games set for Fenway Park and its chummy wall.

"It's no big thing," Yaz insisted. "What the heck, I played out there for 14 years before moving to first base. I'm not worried about the wall. I don't think I'll have any problems."

"We decided that we would be stronger defensively with Carl in left," Manager Darrell Johnson said: "He knows that wall like the back of his hand."

With Yaz going to left, Cooper will take over at first instead of playing his usual role as designated hitter. Juan Beniquez will lead off for Boston as the DH.

Less than two weeks ago, the Red Sox line-up for postseason action appeared set with rookie Jim Rice in left, Yaz at first and Cooper the DH. However, Rice was sidelined for the year Sept. 21 when he suffered a broken hand.

So the stage is set for the big series between the Red Sox, the East Division champs, and the A's, perennial winners in the West aiming for a fourth consecutive World Series victory.

Morgan Pays Respects To Pittsburgh's Bats

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joe Morgan, chief generator of excitement for Cincinnati's onrushing Reds, shivered in the chill of wind-whipped Riverfront Stadium Thursday and paid cool respect to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"Pittsburgh will hit you to death if they can," said Morgan as the Reds rehearsed for Saturday's opening game of the National League playoffs, adding that whenever you give the Pirates an opening "the next thing you know they have seven straight hits."

"We have to guard against getting one or two outs and than letting down, he said.

Morgan agrees that power will play a more dominant role than pitching, but he thinks Cincinnati's speed could prove a pivotal factor.

"Close games favor the Reds because we can steal on them," said Morgan, who has been the hub of the Big Red Machine attack since his arrival from Houston four years ago.

The Reds, who finished the season with a flourish by winning 10 of their last 11 games, have stolen 168 bases in 204 attempts during the season, a percentage of .800. Pittsburgh had 49 in 77 tries.

"People say these two teams are so similar on offense," said Morgan, a leading candidate for the league's Most Valuable Player Award. "I don't agree. We both do things different ways. The Reds get a lot of people on base with walks and steal more. We can beat people in so many ways."

The best-of-five series opens at Cincinnati with lefthanders Don Gullett, 15-4, and Jerry Reuss, 18-11, dueling in the dusk. Both games in Cincinnati are scheduled for 4 p.m. starting times, a fact that causes considerable consternation among hiters and fielders.

The Pirates arrive today for a workout in the tricky shadows and glaring sun that torments players.

"A lot is going to depend on the shadows," said Morgan, who hit .327 this year.

Chris Evert Rips Newberry In Mission Viejo Tennis Play

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — Chris Evert, aided by a series of costly errors by unseeded Janet Newberry, scored a 7-6, 6-2 victory Thursday night in the third round of the $50,000 Mission Viejo women's tennis tournament.

Newberry held a 6-5 lead in the opening set, which lasted more than an hour, and had a 40-0 advantage on match point before making four mistakes in a row to tie it at deuce.

After Evert hit a forehand into the net, Newberry had match point again but double faulted on her serve.

In all, Newberry had match point six times but was unable to score it against Miss Evert. Chris who won three quick points to go into the tiebreaker she won 5-1 with five consecutive points after losing the first one.

In the only other singles match Thursday night, Tine Zwaan of Holland beat Wendy Overton 0-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Lee JV Defeats Odessa

Midland Lee's junior varsity used three big plays Thursday night to capture an 18-10 victory over the Odessa High JV in Memorial Stadium.

Tailback Jerry Moore put the Rebs on top on the first period on a 25-yard touchdown run, but the try for the extra point failed.

Bill Willis got the Bronchos on the scoreboard with a 25-yard field goal in the first period to cut the lead to 6-3.

Moore zipped off a beautiful 70-yard TD scamper in the second period and once again the point failed, making it 12-3.

Jeff Holder, 180-pound tailback for OHS, raced 20 yards for a touchdown and Willis split the uprights to make it 12-10 at halftime.

Lee added a third period score on a 67-yard pass and run play from quarterback Tracy Rogers to Doug Guthrie. For the third straight time, Lee came up empty-handed on the extra point attempt.

Odessa rushed for 207 yards while Lee moved mainly through the airways with six completions out of eight attempts for 126 yards.

Brent Bates, Todd Clements, Mack McCrea and Charles Roseberry, all stood out on defense for Lee. Bates is a linebacker while Clements plays cornerback, McCrea nose guard and Roseberry safety. Roseberry was especially impressive on punt returns.

It was an especially good performance since Lee has five starters hurt. Clements is lost for four weeks after suffering a broken hand during the game.

Lee faces the San Angelo JV Oct. 9 in a 7 p.m. game in Memorial Stadium in its next game while OHS tries Abilene Cooper in Odessa, Oct. 11.

With the win, Lee stands 3-1 and OHS is also 3-1 on the year.

SMU Reverses Policy On Special Admissions

DALLAS (AP) — A faculty-student committee at Southern Methodist University has reversed a policy of a four-year-old policy that allowed scholastically-ineligible athletes to gain special admission to the school.

SMU's University College Council said Wednesday that all athletes must meet the same academic requirements as other students to gain admission to the school.

The council was urged in 1971 to approve a policy of special admissions because "substantial monetary gifts to SMU for the athletic program are available but are contingent upon SMU's adoption of the NCAA admission standard for athletes," according to minutes of a 1971 council meeting.

The council adopted the NCAA standard, which required a prediction that a student would be capable of achieving an average grade of 1.6 on a 4.0 scale during his freshman year in college. The prediction is based on high school grades and scores on standardized test. Later the NCAA increased the minimum grade prediction standard to 2.0.

However, both NCAA standards were below the usual academic requirements used by SMU in its admissions policy, according to Dr. Barbara Reagan, assistant to the president for academic services.

Dr. Reagan said that Athletic Director Dick Davis supported the council's decision because he had found the special admission system "unworkable."

In 1974, 23 athletes were admitted under the special category; in 1973, 16; in 1972, 17; and in 1971, 11.

Amy Grimes led the Pack in scoring as she hit on nine of nine attempts. Tish Madison had a perfect night in the set column and miscued only once on her relays. Staci Moore, Miss Grimes and Karan Graham played the entire contest without a mistake.

The Midland High junior varsity won 13-15, 15-4, 15-6 over San Angelo. Midland High's varsity is now 14-3 on the year and 4-0 in district play.

Midland Lee dropped a two out of three set to Big Spring to even their district mark at 2-2. Big Spring stayed in contention with a 3-1 record. Lee also dropped the junior varsity contest.

Odessa Permian JV Swamps Bullpups

ODESSA — Odessa Permian's big and talented junior varsity romped to an easy 40-0 victory over the Midland High Bullpups Thursday night at the Permian practice field before a large crowd.

Coach Roy Blair's outfit came into the game with a 3-0 record, the same as Permian, but could never get untracked and only managed one first down against the tough Mojo defense.

Permian scored once in the first and second period to lead 14-0 at halftime and took a 21-0 edge into the final quarter before erupting for 19 more points.

Mark Garves got Permian off to a good start with a two-yard run in the first period with Mark Newport booting the extra point and the second TD was a nine-yard run by Alan Swann in the second stanza. This time, Byron Taylor kicked the PAT.

Hayden Frost latched on to a nine-yard pass from quarterback Barry Badcock in the third period with Newport tacking on the extra point for a 21-0 lead.

In the final period, Permian put 19 more points on the scoreboard with Badcock racing 15 yards for one score and Paul Davis scoring twice on runs of 10 and five yards. Taylor booted the extra point after the final TD.

Midland's only first down came late in the final period when quarterback Joe Mowles hit Brentley Jackson with a 14-yard pass.

It was a hard-hitting game with Greg Caldeway, Bryan Booker, Joe Primera and Billy Walker playing well for the Pups.

Permian takes a 4-0 record into its next game which is with the Abilene JV in Abilene, Oct. 11. Midland takes on Big Spring's JV at 4:30 p.m. in Big Spring, Oct. 9 in its next outing.

Soundstage' Starts Season

By JAY SHARBUTT

EW YORK (AP) — This urday night, a great music les called "Soundstage" rts its second season on pub- TV with a rousing, occasion- poignant hour featuring er Barry Manilow & Co.

ome stations may air it an- er night (check your news- per listings to be certain), regardless of when it ap- rs, be sure to catch this w and the rest of the series.

'or my dough, "Soundstage," station WTTW in Chicago, is best weekly pop-and-jazz sic show anywhere in tele- ion, both in extent of fea- ed talent and in manner of oduction.

n its 14 new shows this sea- n — 13 are first-season re- ats — the artists range from ood, Sweat Tears to Benny oodman, from Three Dog ght to the Four Freshman, th Martin Mull in for comedy lief.

Judging from a preseason look at several new segments, the "Soundstage" camera work is as excellent as last year. And the sound engineering remains so good — and that of TV sets so bad — that we again suggest you rig a hi-fi set to your TV for maximum enjoyment of the series.

By starting with Manilow, the show opts for a high-energy musical opener, even though the star is best known for such easy-listening hits as "Mandy" and "Could it Be Magic," both sung in Saturday's show.

A lanky, puckish man who tolled as a commercial jingle singer and writer before gaining note as Bette Midler's musical director, Manilow, like Miss Midler, is what you'd call a glitter-performer.

His bag is lots of flash. Backed by three singers called "The Flashy Ladies," he bounds through a variety of tunes, many with the disco beat that is all the rage in four Fun City bars this year.

You may be tempted to dismiss him as just another disco hiz as he lip-syncs "Dancing in the Streets" while cavorting in a discotheque and then a street during a filmed segment at the start of the show.

But stick around for his work before the WTTW studio audience.

The efforts range from his "greatest hits" — singing commercials for Dr. Pepper and the like — to a hip, good-humored vocal version of the familiar "American Bandstand" theme.

Glitter abounds, but so does first-rate musicianship.

A fee of $2 per car, payable at the car wash, will be collected by band members. Clyde Wilson is MHS band director.

Ice Capades Has Something For All

By LARRY LOVELACE
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Ice Capades opened a six-day run in the Ector County Coliseum here Thursday night and kept our 6-year-old daughter, Lia, awake to the end.

Her big brother, Kenny, 9, didn't doze off either, but that doesn't prove anything, because he would stay up until dawn watching a test pattern if allowed. However, it takes something exciting, funny and colorful to keep our first grader awake until almost 11 on a school night.

And Ice Capades met those requirements with an energy that was almost exhausting to observe and that left several thousand palms chapped from two hours of applauding.

Near the end, Lia did start to nod occasionally. But before she could completely slip away, those clever Ice Capades folks would spoil her nap by changing the pace — with Freddie Trenkler, the durable clown, for instance. Several generations have enjoyed his special brand of tomfoolery, and he proved Thursday night the magic is undiminished.

Other comic eye-openers included "Nautical Monkeyshines," with Lucien Meyer and a pair of talented chimps, and "Robotautometronics" and "Pas de Deux Elegante" by Hans and Pepe.

The emphasis on goodies for the kids doesn't mean there was nothing for the adults. If nothing else, the sex appeal of the female performers made the show worth the price of admission. Nor did I notice the female members of the audience yawning at the male skaters.

Perhaps the most popular act was the exhibition of acrobatics by the Fentons, five youngsters from Detroit. The four younger Fentons proved also to be skilled and entertaining skaters.

The Ice Capades will run through Tuesday, with performances nightly at 8 and 2 p.m. matinees Saturday and Sunday. Children 16 and under will be admitted for half price the last two days. Although those are school nights, don't be deterred — the show will keep them awake. How they fare in school the next day is another matter.

More Music, Less Hokum

The Ronnie Kole Trio-plus-one brought its New Orleans club act to town Thursday night.

The show was about half jazz and half hokum-and-horseplay. The jazz was fine — forthright and well-played. The comedy routines tended toward staleness and seemed contrived. This rather long and drawn-out program for members of Midland Community Concerts Association would have been considerably shorter — and just about as rewarding, it seems to me — if the theatrics and the commercials had been curtailed considerably. Music is, after all (or, more correctly, before all) the name of the Kole group's game.

The group, which plays in its own club, Kole's Corner in the Crescent City when it's not out on the road, really does have a lot to offer listeners in its music. Members of the ensemble, joined by organist Ray Morvan, amply proved that fact in the concert here Thursday night.

Beginning with a Gershwin medley ("I Got Plenty O' Nothin'," "I Got Rhythm" and excerpts from "Rhapsody in Blue," among others), the instrumentalists provided a varied and fascinating feast of jazz delights. The offerings included "Big Noise From Winnetka" (which Bob Crosby and his colleagues also gave us in last season's "Big Band Cavalcade" presentation here, you'll recall), "Dark Eyes," "Yellow Bird," "Malaguena" and "Amazing Grace." One of the best numbers, to my way of thinking, was "R. K.'s Boogie Woogie," Ronnie Kole's own treatment of jazz-boogie rhythms.

Following intermission, the personable Kole, never at a loss for words, polled the audience on request numbers—and came up with a wide variety, ranging from "Lara's Theme" to "San Antonio Rose." The ensemble then proceeded to amalgamate them into a stylized, highly-listenable interpolative format. The audience was warmly receptive to the result, as it had been to the earlier numbers.

Other instrumentalists in the ensemble were Richard Taylor on drums and Everett Link Jr., bassist.

Thursday's program was the opening event of Midland Community Concerts Association's new season. Next week, the association goes even farther afield than New Orleans when it brings "The Little Angels of Korea" (the National Folk Ballet of Korea) to town for a Wednesday performance in Midland High School auditorium, where last night's concert was presented.

Judge Carter Resides In Nether World Of Undead

The Los Angeles Times

On the night of Aug. 6, 1930, a tall, heavy-set man wearing spats, a double-breasted suit and a Panama hat emerged from a Manhattan restaurant, flagged down a taxi and disappeared into history.

Judge Joseph Force Crater hasn't been heard from since.

Was he murdered? An amnesia victim? Or did he elope with a showgirl?

Although he would be 86 if he were still alive, his case — No. 13595 — still hasn't been closed by the New York City Police Department's missing persons unit.

Asked when the department last received a tip on the telephone, Det. Edward Gannon told The Los Angeles Times:

"About an hour and a half ago. We get them almost every day — crank calls."

Gannon, who has been working on the case for 13 years, said Crater's file is more than a foot thick.

Is he growing discouraged?

"Well, you never can tell what's going to happen," he said.

But for now, Crater resides in that nether world of personalities who, for us, have never really died — only vanished, leaving their lives forever maddeningly incomplete:

—Aviatrix Amelia Earhart, the "Lady Lindy" who ditched into the South Pacific in 1937 and probably was either killed in the crash or captured and executed as a spy by the Japanese.

A book entitled "Amelia Earhart Lives" (published in 1970) suggests a third possibility: She was released by the Japanese in a secret postwar deal and moved into a retirement community in New Jersey under an alias.

—WRITER AMBROSE Bierce, who left the United States for Mexico in 1913 ("Why remain in a country that is on the eve of prohibition and women's suffrage?") and reportedly was killed with Pancho Villa the next year.

Or did he drown with Britain's Kitchener in the North Sea in World War 1? Or was he that shaggy old gringo seen in the Brazilian jungle in 1930?

Bierce, who had always said that, in any case, death was not the end: "There remains the litigation over the estate."

—Skyjacker D. B. Cooper, who parachuted with $200,000 into a raging thunderstorm and subzero temperatures in the Northwest on Nov. 24, 1971.

To his death? Or is he somewhere now (dressed, perhaps, in a D.B. Cooper T-shirt), waiting for the statue of limitations to run out in 13 months?

—Bel-Air (Calif.) widow Mimi Boomhower ("gay, fun-loving Mimi Boomhower," as the newspapers inevitably called her), who vanished Aug. 18, 1949, leaving her front door open, lights burning and a houseful of her late husband's animal trophies behind.

The subsequent discovery that the 48-year-old matron was in financial trouble — the elephant head in her recreation room had bogus tusks — inspired one theory that she committed suicide.

—WEALTHY SOCIALITE Evelyn Throsby Scott, 63, who disappeared, so her husband said, on May 16, 1955, when he went out to buy her a tube of toothpaste.

The husband, L. Ewing Scott, was convicted of murder and recently refused parole. Some investigators believe Mrs. Scott is entombed beneath a portion of the San Diego Freeway that was under construction (and near the couple's home).

Different circumstances all — but still, the same nagging footnote for each: never found.

In the years after his disappearance, 3 million photographs of Crater were distributed, bringing him fame he had never achieved as a New York state supreme court justice.

"His case was of great interest because many people have this idea that if they could only start over again, they could find themselves," says Dr. Edward Stainbrook, chairman of the University of Southern California's Department of Human Behavior.

"And the idea of him giving up everything and leaving — like a suicide — is a kind of reproach to the rest of us. It would mobilize people's concerns over whether their lives were worth anything."

It was a shaky period, anyway — the Depression.

The judge's name became synonomous with disappearance — "to pull a Judge Crater." It was a notional joke to look under a bed or chair and explain, "I'm looking for Judge Crater."

CRATER JOKES still surface. Bob Orben, President Ford's gag writer, wrote one into a Ford speech recently but removed it when the President didn't recognize the name.

(Until her capture, Patty Hearst jokes were also in vogue. An industry-wide story in television held, for example, that Miss Hearst was alive and starring in an ABC show)

Crater's wife, who died in 1969, maintained he was murdered "because of a sinister something that was connected with politics."

Others believed that Crater, who was linked with Tammany Hall, committed suicide fearing a scandal; or, having eloped with a showgirl, changed his identity.

The police received sightings from all over. Crater was reported running a crap game in Atlanta, prospecting near Palm Springs, locked up in a Missouri insane asylum, sailing in the Adriatic.

As late as 1960, on the basis of a story told by a deceased butcher and confirmed by the visions of a Dutch clairvoyint, a backyard in Yonkers was dug up. No Crater.

FOUR YEARS AGO, when the department was making inquiries in the case, it couldn't find the man who first reported Crater missing, former U.S.-Judge Simon Rifkind.

So a typed letter bearing the stamped signature of Chief Inspector Michael S. Codd on department stationery was sent out to the "New York County Bar Assn.," which had ceased to exist years before.

Crater's and Rifkind's names were misspelled:

"The Missing Persons Unit of the New York City Police Dept. is still investigating the disappearance of Joseph Force Frater (sic), New York State Court Judge who was reported missing in 1930.

"We are requesting any information you may have on . . . Simon Rifkin (sic) . . .

Rifkind was found — logically enough — at his desk in the Manhattan law firm of Paul, Wass, Rifkind, Wharton and Garrison by the New York Times.

If they can't find me, how could they ever find Crater?" Rifkind asked.

Crater, incidentally, was over six feet tall, weighed about 220 pounds, had brown eyes and a prominent scar on his right index finger.

If he were alive today, he'd probably have white hair.

And a newer hat.

Uranus Mission Planned

By FRANK MACOMBER
Copley News Service

The federal space agency, beset with problems now that the shine of success is wearing off the U.S.-Soviet manned space effort, nevertheless is pushing ahead with a daring mission for 1979—an unmanned flight to Uranus, third farthest planet from the sun.

NASA officials insist the Uranus mission would not interfere with the first manned space shuttle flight, also scheduled for 1979.

BUT CONGRESS, which has not yet approved the Uranus project, is expected to ask some questions about the mission before it gets a green light money-wise.

Meanwhile, NASA already has invited scientists to propose experiments for the Uranus mission. The flight would use a Mariner-type spacecraft to fly past Jupiter, then continue on to Uranus and the far reaches of the solar system.

The Uranus flyby, NASA claims, would provide man with his first close-up look at the distant planet—a mammoth ball of poisonous gases, spinning on its side and described as one of the most bizarre planets in the solar system.

While the project still needs approval, NASA officials explain they need to select mission investigations and experiments easy so they can crank up scientific planning and development.

A TYPICAL Jupiter-Uranus flight, NASA says, would lift off Nov. 3, 1979. The spacecraft would arrive at Jupiter at a flyby distance of 245,000 miles on April 10, 1981. A closer encounter with one or more of the large, planet-type Jovian moons also is planned.

Using Jupiter's gravity like a slingshot to speed the Mariner and rechart its trajectory, the spacecraft would travel on to a mid-1985 encounter with Uranus, possibly coming as close as 15,000 miles.

Mariner's sensors even might peer beyond Uranus as an extended mission if it survives the rigors of unfriendly space for six years.

Booster for the Jupiter-Uranus mission will be the Titan IIIE-Centaur combination also to be used for the 1975 Viking mission to Mars and a 1977 Mariner-Saturn mission.

Space agency officials say the Uranus mission also could supply information needed to design spacecraft and plan even more far-reaching flights to the planets beyond Saturn.

NASA'S OFFICE of Space Science has assigned management responsibility for the Uranus mission to the agency's Jet Pasadena, Calif.

Uranus, 1.78 billion miles from the sun, has five known orbiting moons, ranging in size from about 200 to 500 miles in diameter.

The planet spins rapidly at an angle of about 90 degrees to the ecliptic plane and has a day of only 10.8 hours. Because of its unusual tilt, Uranus poles have long periods in the sun or in total darkness. Its diameter is about 30,000 miles, making Uranus the third largest planet in the solar system, after Jupiter and Saturn.

But NASA has other problems besides seeking funds to finance the Uranus mission.

NEARLY 1,800 specialists of the Apollo-Soyuz launch team have been laid off in the wake of the July mission. Though preparations for the next generation of U.S. manned spaceflight—the shuttle—are under way, its first mission still is five years distant, a year beyond the first 1979 test flights.

By the time NASA has funds to rehire many of the dismissed technicians and engineers, they will have found other jobs.

The Russians, by contrast, plan a continuing series of manned space missions. U.S. astronauts in the Soviet Union recently learned that from 75 to 80 cosmonauts are training for upcoming flights.

First Atomic Bomb Blast Site To Become National Landmark

By MARY J. GOODWIN

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. — Once a year you may drive along the Jornado del Muerta — the Journey of Death — to visit Trinity Site where the world's first atomic blast occurred. Ironically, the area on White Sands Missile Range, New Mexico, was known by the name long before the first atom bomb test July 16, 1945.

Saturday during the annual trek, Trinity Site will be designated as a National Historic Landmark. Open to the public, the ceremony will include the National Park Service unveilling the plague and presenting the certificate of designation as a National Historic Landmark to White Sands Missile Range, official Landlord of Trinity Site.

An aura of mystery still reigns 30 years after the first detonation test as the site is closed to the public except for one day a year when the visitor may enter with military escort. Limited access is necessary as Trinity Site is in the northern part of White Sands Missile Range that serves as an impact area and safety zone during missile firings.

The isolated mountain encircled valley of the Sierra Oscura Range was selected as the test site for both safety and secrecy. An ideal site for Project Trinity, its code name, the region was public grazing lands, sparsely populated and was being used as a bomb range by the War Department. Trinity Project, shrouded in secrecy, needed to be near Los Alamos only 200 miles away, where the test bomb and those later dropped on Japan were developed.

On that dull grey, misty morning in 1945 the atomic bomb, dubbed Fat Boy, blasted in the atomic age with a brilliant white light seen as far away as Amarillo, Tex., 450 miles. Shock waves shook the mountains and glass shattered 120 miles away in Silver City, N.M.

Newspapers carried stories of a munitions dump explosion somewhere in New Mexico as no information was released until after the atomic bombs were used as a weapon against Japan in World War II. People who knew the power of munitions explosions hinted something more powerful had been detonated.

In fact, an unusual mushroom cloud rose 41,000 feet into the sky. The 100-foot steel tower that held the bomb evaporated in the blast, leaving only stub-like concrete feet. Temperatures were close to 100 million degrees, energy released exceeded the electric power produced by the whole world.

When the blast subsided, it left a mile wide scorched crater fifteen feet deep at the center and a glaze of highly radioactive, jade-green crust. The terrible heat had fused the sand to glass. Immediately after the test, two lead-lined tanks carring measuring instruments scooped up samples from the ground. The glass, named trinitite, after the code name, Project Trinity, was plowed under. Although trinitite was thought by some to be new on earth, a similar type fusion of sand to glass has been made by lightning striking sand. Fragments of trinitite, no longer radioactive, can still be seen by visitors to the site.

Dr. Joseph M. Kibler who threw the key switch for the detonation and Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, a key developer of the bomb, were present and knew the power as indicated by the formular, but were astonished by the reality of the explosion's power.

Afterward, there were no rattlesnakes, rabbits or rats in a wide area. Even ants temporarily vanished.

Thirty years later, rabbits once again hop about low lying desert shrub, the winged shadow of a hawk scrounging for food zooms low and floats above the fenced area of Trinity Site. Today there is no more radiation than from a radium dial watch.

In the fenced area a pyramid shaped monument marks the center of the mile circle of the blast. It intervals since September of 1953, the first public showing attended by about 700 people, tours have been scheduled for the public by the U.S. Army.

Sponsored by the Alamogordo Chamber of Commerce with the cooperation of the Army, the trip will last approximately seven hours and the National Historic Landmark designation will highlight this year's tour.

Escorted by Miliary Police, the caravan of cars enters the Missile Range at two gates, one on U.S. 54-70 near Tularosa and the other east of San Antonio, N.M., on U.S. 380. Visitors leaving with the Alamogordo tour should be at Alamogordo Grant City parking lot at 9:45 a.m. or the Tularosa Gate at 10:15 and the Stallion Range gate at 11:15 on Saturday. The visitor doesn't need a reservation, only to show up on time, as no cars will be admitted after the caravan has entered the gates. There is no charge.

No weapons, pets or alcohol are permitted. Cameras must be locked in car trunks until Trinity Site is reached as photography is not permitted along the desert, lava strewn, 30 miles or so to the site. Cars have to be registered and visitors must stay on marked roads, should have plenty of gasoline, a spare tire, sufficient water and food for the five-to-seven-hour trip.

Visitors view the pyramid marking the center of the mile-wide circle where the first atomic bomb blast devastated the New Mexico desert in 1945.

Carpet, Tools Stolen

Carpet and assorted carpenter tools valued at $1,378 reportedly were stolen from the construction site of The Place, 3920 W. Wall St., Thursday, police said.

House Panel Subpoenas Kissinger Secret Memo

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has until Oct. 15 to turn over a secret memorandum subpoenaed by the House intelligence committee or face a new confrontation with the panel.

Chairman Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., said the committee voted 9 to 2 Thursday to subpoena a State Department memorandum alleging that the department mismanaged the Cyprus crisis last year.

Kissinger has refused to provide the memo and has barred lower-level officials from testifying on recommendations they make on U.S. policy decisions.

A former State Department Cyprus chief, Thomas D. Boyatt, told the committee he wrote the memorandum detailing his allegations of mismanagement but was prohibited by Kissinger's order from testifying on what his own recommendations had been during the Cyprus crisis.

Boyatt's recommendations have not been disclosed, but a former U.S. ambassador to Cyprus, Taylor G. Belcher, said some department officers tried to get Kissinger to intervene and head off the Greek coup that sparked the Cyprus crisis.

Meanwhile, the committee began the third phase of its investigation by looking into possible risks of U.S. intelligence operations, including the risk of war.

The committee went behind closed doors to question Navy intelligence officials about Operation Holystone in which U.S. spy submarines reportedly monitored Soviet missile activities for 15 years.

The New York Times reported that the operation led to several accidents and near-misses, including two known collisions with Soviet submarines, damage to a U.S. sub that surfaced under a Soviet ship in the middle of Soviet fleet exercises and the accidental sinking of a North Vietnamese minesweeper.

In one of the first tests of the effectiveness of a strict order from Pike not to make public any details of the meeting, all members refused afterwards to make any comments about it.

However, several members confirmed that operation Holystone had been the subject of the hearing.

Assurance By Ford May Speed Approval Of Pact

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's formal assurance that there are no hidden agreements in the Egyptian-Israeli peace pact may clear the way for congressional approval of the stationing of 200 American technicians in the Sinai.

Informed sources said Thursday that, as a result of Ford's assurance, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee may "declassify" four key understandings, three with Israel and the other with Egypt. The agreements already have been leaked to the press and published.

Until now, the administration has opposed publication, insisting that the Senate and the public be given no more than a summary.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who conveyed Ford's assurances to the Senate panel during more than seven hours of testimony Thursday, returned today for another round behind closed committee doors.

Meanwhile, the House International Relations Committee prepared to vote on sending the technicians to the desert surveillance posts.

But today's deadline set by the administration for final congressional approval will pass with the outcome still unclear.

Public testimony by Kissinger and 18 other witnesses before the Senate committee has been postponed until next Monday, dashing Ford's hopes for a favorable decision on the technician issue by today.

The President had told Congress that a delay past today could endanger the Mideast peace. Both Egypt and Israel have asked for the U.S. civilian technicians to monitor the peace in the Sinai.

The administration's drive for prompt approval has been stalled for three weeks over two related issues: whether Congress has been informed of all the understandings reached by Kissinger while negotiating the Israeli withdrawal and whether the secret agreements in the accord should be made public.

In the meantime, implementation of the accord has been delayed.

Ford, through Kissinger, assured the Senate panel that it has been given all documents containing commitments to Israel and Egypt.

The four documents already published involve:

—U.S.-Israeli understandings on future American aid and diplomatic steps in the Middle East, including promises to help replenish oil supplies in the event of a cutoff by Iran, the primary source after the return of the Abu Rudeis oil fields to Egypt.

—U.S.-Israeli understandings on coordinating a diplomatic approach to the eventual reconvening of the Geneva peace conference.

—U.S. military assurances to give positive consideration to an Israeli request for nuclear-capable Pershing missiles and F16 fighter jets still being developed.

—An unsigned memorandum of U.S. assurances to Egypt, including prospects of stepped-up economic aid and consideration of military aid.

Texas State Fair Swings Open Today

DALLAS (AP) — A salute to the U.S. Bicentennial is the theme of the 90th annual State Fair of Texas, which opened today with patriotic American history exhibits competing with Big Tex for visitors' attention.

Big Tex, a giant papier mache cowboy, as usual presides over the grounds but fife and drummer images abound in the official "Yankee Doodle Dandy" salute.

Before the fair closes Oct. 19, officials estimate three million persons will see the exhibits stressing panoramas of American and Texan heritage.

Today was designated Dallas Preview Day, with a relatively short list of activities including the Juliet Prowse Show at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Hall.

The exposition will get going full blast Saturday with a downtown parade at 10 a.m. and opening ceremonies at the Hall of State at noon.

Southern Methodist University and West Virginia meet at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in the first of a series of football games at the Cotton Bowl on the fair grounds. Texas and Oklahoma will play there Oct. 11.

The opening performance of the State Fair Championship Rodeo is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the State Fair Coliseum.

Idaho -- A State For Individualists

By HARLON BARTLETT
Copley News Service

STANLEY, Idaho — Why does Larry McCoy choose to live here, hundreds of miles from the toys, social posturing and modern conveniences most Americans can't live without?

He stood on the steps of his Stanley General Store on a sunny Sunday morning and didn't say a word. Instead, he swept his arm to the south and west in the direction of the tall, broad, jagged, inspirational Sawtooth Mountains.

That said it all.

While the population here on a summer day reaches several hundred, only 47 hardy souls tough it out through the winter.

Down the road, and Salmon River, a mile is Lower Stanley, smaller still, and a man stands on the riverbank behind his house explaining how he lives here eight months a year and in Huntington Beach, Calif., four.

"Our friends said the snow was still up to the edge of the roof March 15 this year," he noted. "It gets 30, 40 below here sometimes."

But it is the people who permanently populate Idaho who make it what it is.

To the traveler, it appears vast, in southern areas drab, to the north harsh, in western farmlands gentle and bountiful.

Idaho's towns and cities are mostly as junky as those anywhere else in the United States, bleak monuments to the efforts of man.

However, fewer than 800,000 people inhabit 83,500 square miles—they rattle around in the great expanses.

The land is farmed and mined and logged. Nearly 70 per cent of the state is in public ownership, and large segments of it are as natural now as when Lewis and Clark visited.

This is a noisy place; everywhere you go is the sound of running water. More than 35,000 miles of rivers and creeks and 2,000 lakes provide urban anglers with unaccustomed elbow room.

The Snake, the Salmon, the Payette, the Boise, the Clearwater, the Priest, the Lemhi. Large, clear, fast rivers.

Rubber rafts quickly are replacing the potato as the state symbol.

Each year more than 4,000 people float the majestic, wild Middle Fork of the Salmon.

Three years ago, the 175,000-acre Sawtooth National Recreation Area, which surrounds Stanley and includes the Sawtooth Wilderness, was created.

Stanley, believe it or not, is the largest town within those 175,000 acres. Its dirt streets and log buildings give it a rustic, unobtrusive charm. It even charmed Bill Harrah, the gambling magnate, into buying considerable property. He keeps a Stanley Steamer encased in glass out beside State 21.

Nothing Costs So Much As Small Gift

Nothing costs so much as a small gift from an opponent. You know that your opponent has only his own interest at heart; and you have every reason to distrust his generosity. This philosophy applies only at the bridge table; of course; because that is where you know who your opponents are.

Opening lead — ♣ 5

George Mittleman; of Montreal; bid as many suits as he could with the South hand in the hope of suggesting a slam to his partner. When North kept signing off, Mittleman settled for a game. The Canadian and his countrymen got to the semifinals of the recent national team championship in Miami Beach; and the play of today's hand shows that this success was well deserved.

The troublesome club lead went to South's ace, and the queen of spades forced out the ace. Back came a club, putting declarer in dummy before he could make good use of the clubs.

DEFENSE SLIPS

Declarer led the king of clubs to get rid of a diamond; and West ruffed with the deuce of spades, completing a high-low to show three trumps. The information was more useful to declarer than to East.

Now West made a bad slip when he led the ace of hearts. He thought the lead was safe because if South had no hearts he couldn't reach the dummy.

Mittleman ruffed with the seven of spades; cashed the king of spades and then led the three of spades, giving East a trump trick as a gift.

East had to return a club or a diamond; and in either case dummy would gain the lead to give declarer all the discards he needed for his game contract.

DAILY QUESTONI

As dealer; you hold: S-KQJ10973 H-None, D-A854, C-A10. What do you say

ANSWER: Bid one spade. The hand is not quite strong enough for an opening forcing bid; but it is far too strong for a shutout bid. Open with one spade and show your strength with a jump bid of some kind later.

TOPPING OUT OVER ATLANTA — The 70-story Peachtree Center Plaza Hotel became the tallest hotel in the world and the tallest building in the South as it was topped out at 723 feet above downtown Atlanta Thursday. The Atlanta structure replaces the 650-foot Ukrain Hotel in Moscow as the world's tallest. (AP Wirephoto.)

Social Worker Says Marital Violence Is Two Way Street

By SHERLEY GALLINA
Copley News Service

A husband comes home drunk. Naked, he chases his wife around the house, and then outside—trying to catch and beat her.

They are in their 50s, well-established and in a high income bracket. His rampages happen infrequently, but the threat is always there.

A newlywed couple has everything—education, a secure social background and family backing. But, the husband pries into his wife's sexual past and becomes jealous. He chokes her unconscious.

Another husband promises to take his wife out for New Year's Eve, but he doesn't come home until 6 in the morning.

He changes shirts, gets some more money and reaches for the car keys. His wife reaches for him.

He puts her in the hospital.

These are just three cases of wife beating Al Hoagland has handled among the thousands of married couples he has counseled over the years.

Hoagland, a licensed clinical social worker and family and child counselor, holds a master's degree in social work. He is executive director of the Pacific Coast Counseling Center in Redondo Beach, near Los Angeles.

He prefers the term "marital violence" to wife beating or battering.

"It takes two people to batter," he contends.

"Technically we call it 'complimentary interaction.' It's a combination of buttons being pushed.

"Only recently have I become sophisticated enough to discover marital violence. And by just looking, there is no way to tell the person who will become violent.

"You can know wife beaters for years and not know what happens behind closed doors."

Hoagland says wife beaters are found everywhere, and there is no specific outline. There is a whole range of education, religion and financial levels, and wife beating cuts across all lines.

"Often the wife is just as involved in the violence, and by her actions, she triggers her husband's violence," he explains.

He says there is no definitive answer as to why husbands beat their wives. He feels there are many causes.

"Violence is an expression of impotence from the man's point of view, and often the woman pushes the man's button and he gets violent.

"There's what I call a readiness to react aggressively.

"Today's society is very contained. There is no place to get normal aggressiveness out of one's system as there was in frontier days."

Hoagland says it's like a stick of dynamite, and the only place the man can release it is in the home. The man can't do it at work nor on the street.

Hoagland says there are many reasons for marital violence.

Some husbands become violent out of vengeance. They hurt their wives for a variety of reasons—such as her putting him down in front of friends.

Other husbands use violence to change the attitude of the wife—"I'll beat it out of her."

Some husbands beat their wives to punish them. A man may have gone into marriage idealistically, believing the wife is going to meet all his needs. She doesn't, and it spoils his dream, so he punishes her.

Sometimes, it's just plain contact. The only contact the couple has is this physical fighting.

The opposite is equally true. A couple can be so close in all areas—physical and emotional—he or she gets violent to achieve some personal space.

There are three times when violence seems most prevalent—after a sexual rejection, when one partner leaves and during arguments over money.

"The family can be viewed as a power system," Hoagland says.

"Power is involved in such issues as cleaning ovens and toilets.

"So what happens when the woman says, 'I don't want to be relegated to those chores,' and revolts?

"The power system is challenged and you get into physical power.

"You've seen a lot of this in the movies over the last 30 years," he says.

Hoagland sees wife beating as a big iceberg, and one can only guess its size.

He says it's not only a far-reaching problem, but the nature of the problem will keep it submerged because of pain in reliving any of these experiences.

"Because of the embarrassment, the pain and the shame, the women don't tell their neighbors, the police or anybody else."

Fall's Cool Air Can End Bug Pests For Motorists

HOUSTON (AP) — Southeast Texas motorists will have at least one good reason to welcome the cool air of fall—those black and orange bugs that smear the fronts of automobiles will vanish.

With the absence of the insects, Gulf Coast motorcyclists will be able to smile without fear of bug-stained teeth for the first time since May.

Plecia bicolor is the formal name of the insect that annually peppers moving automobiles and motorcyclists alike. The insect is better known as the love bug, March fly and May bug as well as several unprintable names.

Dr. T. E. Pulley, director of the Houston Museum of Natural Science, said this year's love bug crop has been exceptionally large because of a well-distributed large amount of rain during the warm months.

"The first hatch of the year generally occurs in May," Pulley said, "but there may be subsequent hatches all summer depending on temperature, ground moisture and rainfall."

"As everyone knows, they can come out in hordes," he said.

When the bugs are out, drivers are often forced to stop every few miles to scrape off their windshields. Windshields are just part of the problem because the insects' remains can eat away a car's paint.

Pulley said automobile aerodynamics force many love bugs over and around a moving car. But, he added, since no car's aerodynamics are perfect, the number of bugs on the front of an automobile is proportionate to its speed.

"Naturally, the faster you go, the more you'll mash flat," Pulley said.

And for next spring when the bugs descend along the highways again, most automobile dealers recommend mild soap and water, applied as soon as possible, as the best method for removing the insect remains.

Belinda Denies Plans To Divorce Muhammad Ali

CHICAGO (AP) — No divorce is planned by Belinda, the wife of world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, who says that she is prepared "right now just to move with the punches."

Belinda came back to Chicago after a quick trip last week to Manila which was prompted by reports that Ali was introducing model Veronica Porsche as his wife during pre-fight functions for his bout with Joe Frazier.

"Anybody can get a divorce," said Belinda when asked if the Muslim religion permits it. "But I don't plan to."

Attend The Church Of Your Choice

Our town philosopher calls our church "God's branch office." He means no sacrilege because he is a very religious man.

He puts into words the feelings that unite all Christians. Rituals may differ . . . doctrines may not always agree . . . denominational labels may seem to keep us apart. Still we share the wondrous knowledge that One Lord is the Savior of us all.

There is no time when this bond of faith is expressed more vividly than on Worldwide Communion Sunday. In our little church about sixty of us will gather. Around the world there will be millions. Together we'll join in an experience that began on the eve of Christ's crucifixion.

Be with us. BE WITH HIM.

Protestant Leader Says Americans Have Lost Faith

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — The man who is expected to become the new top leader among the nation's Protestant and Orthodox churches, William P. Thompson, says American society has lost much of its sense of faith, but that the dark hour may presage a dawn.

"It's a tougher climate for the churches," he says. "Commitment to serving God has ceased to be a popular 'in thing.' But whenever the churches have found the going difficult in a society, it has been a stimulus to greater strength and vitality.

"I think we're beginning to see signs of that now."

Thompson, a tough-minded, straight-talking lawyer from the Midwest and the chief officer of United Presbyterians, has been nominated to become president of the National Council of Churches, which includes most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations.

The election will be by their 250 representatives at a meeting of the council's governing board Oct. 10-12.

"Our culture has become increasingly secularized," he said in as interview. "There's less conscious dependence of God, less acknowledgement of his sovereignty. People have gone off on a kind of 'kick,' assuming they can run the show themselves. But recent experience has demonstrated they're not doing very well at it.

"The effect has been to sap society of a sense of direction and basic values, to leave it confused and floundering, lacking the uplifting vigor of moral understanding and purpose that comes from religious commitment."

In that kind of heavily nonreligious atmosphere, the churches today have to carry on their ministry, he said. But he added that they're responding to the challenge in a healthy and promising way.

They're not shrinking from the task," he added. "I see an increased loyalty on the part of active church members, in attendance, acts of mission and giving. The churches have geared themselves through reorganization into leaner, more rational structures to engage in their mission most effectively.

"All these are signs of health within the church, which I believe will be increasingly evident in relationship to society."

Thompson said the current spate of new, authoritarian-type religious cults outside historic faiths also indicates a growing awareness that something is missing, of a need for faith to fill the gap in values, although the answers the groups give seem "unduly simplistic," not very lasting and potentially harmful to individual development.

"In the long run, the churches are going to have to provide a spiritual strength that goes beyond the pat, ready-made answers given by the cults, that requires individual judgment informed by the gospel, that makes for personal growth and responsibility and fills the need for a dynamic kind of faith," he said.

Thompson, 57, a Kanas native, was a Wichita attorney for 24 years, including time out as a World War 11 Army officer, serving as a prosecutor in the international war crimes trials in Tokyo. In 1966, he was elected the chief executive of the United Presbyterian Church, a post he still holds.

Baptist Church Sets Bicentennial Theme

Churches Plan Rock-A-Thons

Young people of Midland's two Episcopal parishes, St. Nicholas' and Holy Trinity, are planning "rock-a-thons" as fund-raising measures.

They will be joining young people in parishes throughout the Episcopal Diocese of Northwest Texas in staging the marathon events, with funds raised thereby to be used to subsidize youth work in Episcopal churches in Texas, Northern Mexico, Honduras and Barbados.

Members of the Episcopal Young Churchmen (EYC) organization at St. Nicholas' Church, 2900 Princeton St., will hold their rock-a-thon Saturday and Sunday in the parish hall. The participants will put their rocking chairs in motion Saturday morning, continuing until noon Sunday. Persons wishing to sponsor a rocker contestant may contact the parish office.

EYC members at Holy Trinity Church, 1412 W. Illinois St., are making plans for their rocking chair derby on Oct. 11-12. The youths will begin their marathon at approximately 1 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 11, at conclusion of a dance which will follow the Midland High football game here. The contestants will continue rocking until Sunday. For the third year, the youths plan to have a "VIP" rocking chair available for important visitors who may drop in and rock for a while.

Persons who wish to sponsor a young person in his or her rocking stint are invited to contact Liz Montgomery, 683-7227 or 683-1909.

Bette Davis Says Films Half Right

LONDON (AP) — Actress Bette Davis, 67, says half the permissiveness which today's films exhibit would be just about enough.

"I wish we had had half the privilege they have today. We could have made more honest films," she said Thursday. "But I wish some of the films today also had half the privilege, because they go too far."

She is preparing for a month-long jour of England and Ireland.

White Says U.S. Could Kill Parts Of State Charter

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Secretary of State Mark White says that, under the provision of the U.S. Voting Rights Act Extension, the federal government could review the new Texas Constitution, if it is approved by the voters next month.

White said Thursday that, technically, the Justice Department could invalidate part of the constitution. He quoted Barry Weinberg of the Justice Depatment's voting rights division as saying the document would be reviewed if it is approved by the voters.

White said the Justice Deparment review would cover mainly the article of the constitution dealing with voting rights.

But he added that the the Justice Department "could throw out any other part that touches on election procedure."

White reminded groups involved in the campaign for or against the new constitution that Monday is the deadline to file their initial reports on contributions and expenses.

The 11,000 ton nuclear powered ship was launched Aug. 9 in ceremonies at Newport News, Va. It is the fourth Naval ship to bear the name of the State of Texas.

U.S. Charges Name Three Dallas Area Suburban Schools

DALLAS (AP) — Three suburban school districts have been accused of maintaining segregationist policies by plaintiffs in the Dallas school desegregation case.

The charges against the Carrollton-Farmers Branch, DeSoto and Lancaster school districts were made in motions filed in federal court here Thursday. The three are among seven suburban districts which the plaintiffs seek to include in the Dallas suit.

The plaintiffs contend that the three school districts maintained segregated schools in the past and still operate with vestiges of a dual school system.

They also contended that the schools diminished their number of black students by transferring blacks out of the district to attend one-race schools and permitted white students to transfer to attend predominantly white schools.

Evangelists Grow Here

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Witer

NEW YORK (AP) — Most of the time, they're on the road. They go from town to town for a stand of a weekend to a few weeks, and then move on. They preach to big crowds and small, in tents, churches or auditoriums. They're traveling evangelists, a growing company in this country.

They're of many types, of varied methods, the objects both of praise and denunciation in the churches and out. But under influence of some of their abler professionals, their general image seems to have brightened, and their ranks increase.

The expanding number of them is "part of an evangelical renascence, of which direct mass evangelism is only one aspect," says the Rev. Dr. Robert Coleman, professor of evangelism at the Methodist Asbury Seminary in Wilmore, Ky.

Estimates indicate there now are about 2,000 roving evangelists in the field, of various denominations, although no inclusive data is maintained. Southern Baptists list the biggest number of them, 900 evangelists, both preachers and musicians, up 200 per cent in 10 years, of whom an estimated 500 are in the business full time.

Ordinarily the evangelists function independently, without direct institutional oversight or backing, although many of the educated "new breed" have incorporated boards overseeing administration of their activities. Others, including many old-timers, operate on their own, financially and in booking schedules.

They run the gamut from highly trained, theologically astute preachers such as Presbyterian Leighton Ford and black Baptist Tom Skinner, to little-educated "pulpit thumpers," with an eye on the collection plate.

They include showy spellbinders and also sensitive preachers, the high-paid and those who earn little. They depend mostly on the crowds they draw and number of conversions — their "track record" — for bookings by churches to conduct revivals.

"Critics looking for caricatures can always find enough of the 'Elmer Gantry' types to make a case," Dr. Coleman said in a telephone interview. "But they're certainly the exception. Any honest appraisal leads to a high respect for these people."

Exile To Siberia Not Brutal Sentence It Once Was

By ROBERT C. TOTH
The Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW — Since Peter the Great invented it in 1710, "exile to Siberia" has been a punishment that has conjured up fearful images, from slave labor in Czarist salt mines to brutal deprivations in Stalin's prison camps.

Now, exile just means being set down in a Siberian village or town, forbidden to leave, and required to report to the police several times a month. All other rights remain.

But it was with anxiety nonetheless that a young Jewish dissident, Mark Nashpitz, 27, knowing nothing of Siberian life, found himself deposited in a primitive village on one-story cabins called Topek, which means "dead end," in far Siberia near the Chinese border. His case gives a look at modern "Siberian exile."

According to friends, Nashpitz spent 40 days en route—in train compartments designed for four but holding 21 prisoners; in the Sverdlovsk jail where wooden mallets, used to beat recalitrant prisoners on the small of the back, were intimidatingly visible; in Irkutsk prison where lice kept everyone from sleeping.

The diet was one piece of bread, three cups of water and one "rusty herring"—the herring skin becomes crusty red-brown after a long period in the salt barrel—each day. Nashpitz lost 35 pounds on his journey.

But he happens to be a dentist, and Topek's 800 residents, plus the 700 other persons spread through four hamlets in the vast region, had never enjoyed the services of any one qualified to extract teeth. The last tooth pulled at Topek's hospital had taken two hours.

When Nashpitz' first patient emerged after only two minutes, he became "instantly famous throughout the district," said other dissidents who recently visited him.

While he is de facto the dentist, officially he is a public health inspector for the hospital, checking toilets at kindergartens and dormitories, and kitchens at eating places.

But the hospital director reportedly wants him named chief stomatologist (dentist-oral surgeon) of the region, which would mean an increase in pay from his current 90 rubles to 150 rubles ($130 to $215) a month. Ironically, that would be more than Naspitz made as a dentist in Moscow.

"The director told his superiors that he was not interested in Nashpitz' past," said Alexander Luntz, one of the exiled dentist's most recent visitors, "but after two months he knows Nashpitz is a good specialist."

"Nashpitz' past" consisted solely of protesting Soviet refusal to allow him and others to emigrate to Israel. He was among protesters arrested last February for publicly demonstrating in central Moscow for about one minute against their "refusednik" status.

Of the protesters, he and Boris Tsitlonok, 31, a plumber, were sentenced to five years in exile. They were the first Jews prosecuted under the Soviet criminal code for public demonstrations. Previously, "administrative" punishment of up to 15 days in jail was the maximum sentence for such acts.

Tsitlonok was sent to Yenisesk, a traditional place of exile. Among its 35,000 people are large groups of former political dissidents—kulaks (well-to-do peasants) ousted from the Ukraine during collectivization in the 1930s, Volga Germans, Baptists. He found work in a lumber mill, for 70 rubles ($100) a month.

But unlike Nashpitz, who is an outgoing, good-looking man of easy disposition, Tsitlonok is said to be an introverted loner. Although he has had no formal education beyond high school, he is intensely interested in cultural and philosophical matters. His first request to those coming to visit was for books by Schopenhauer and Camus.

Visitors found him initially in an "emotional state," unable to make acquaintances and fearful of criminal exiles in his dormitory. They decided to find him other lodging.

After considerable searching they were told of a woman who rents rooms. "But you wouldn't want it, she's Jewish," it was added. He now shares half a room in her home, for 20 rubles a month, and at last report his spirits had revived.

"There are only a few Jews in Yenisesk," said Anatold Shiransky, a dissident, "but obviously anti-Semitism is known there."

In some contrast, out in Topek, Luntz added, "some people said they had heard that Jews are bad but they don't understand anti-Semitism because the only Jew they have ever seen is Nashpitz."

The two men, their visitors acknowledge, live no worse than others in the same places. The major complaint of these modern Soviet exiles, Luntz said, is that "they are literally starved for intelligent conversation — which you might think a small thing, but one should not underestimate its importance in their lives out there."

In the past exile usually was supplemental to terms in jail and labor camps. Under the czars, it could be fairly benign punishment. Lenin, for example, after 14 months in prison was allowed to receive financial support from his family, have his mistress (later his wife) with him and write many of his revolutionary books during his three years in Siberia at the turn of the century.

Under Stalin, exile was much harsher, certainly precluding a dissident from writing political tracts. Whole populations like the Kulaks and Crimean Tatars were dumped into Siberia and forced to become laborers.

Political prisoners, even after their release from prison camps, remained confined to the same area in which they had been in camps and often continued at the same jobs they had done in camps for want of other work there. Their families were exiled with them.

Most of the sentences under Stalin were handed out "administratively" extra-legally, without court trial or justification even under Soviet law —but this power held by the Interior Ministry was abolished in 1953 after Stalin's death.

In 1960, the new criminal code was adopted which largely limits exile to petty crimes of chronic thievery, hooliganism, chronic prostitution, "parasitism" (refusal to work) and the like.

Soviet law counts one month in jail equal to three months in exile. Since Nashpitz and Isitlonok spent four months in jail between arrest and arrival in exile, each has four years of exile ahead.

Rolling Stones Deny Rift Report

LONDON (AP) — The Rolling Stones say "absolute nonsense" to a report from Chile that they will play a concert on remote Easter Island off the South American coast and then go their separate ways.

"The Stones are not disbanding," Leslie Perrin, a spokesman for the rock group led by Mick Jagger that has been in the international spotlight for 15 years, said.

"They have no plans to play on Easter Island, and they have never heard of the three Americans who are supposed to be arranging a concert for them on Easter Island."

The United Way!

Most readers undoubtedly are aware by this time that Midland's annual United Way campaign is under way . . . and going full blast.

But some may not realize that United Way supports the operation of 19 community service agencies . . . or that an effort is being made to bring the campaign to a successful conclusion as quickly as possible.

Others may not know that a number of business firms and many individuals have stepped-up their contributions this year as a means of meeting the increased quota.

The goal, incidentally, is $605,000, the highest ever, but at the same time it must be realized that the quota is very much in line with the actual needs of the participating agencies. Inflation also has hit the agency ranks . . . in numbers as well as in increased costs.

But United Way leaders face the challenge with faith and confidence. They realize that the United Way is the Midland Way, backed by the fact that Midlanders believe in taking care of their own.

They also believe in conservation, particularly of time in conducting one instead of 19 separate finance campaigns.

United Way volunteers also point out that "The United Way Is An American Revolution . . . and, Thanks To YOU It Works . . . FOR ALL OF US in Midland."

There was a time several years ago when United Way finance efforts experienced difficulties in reaching the much smaller goals of those years.

But the situation changed in more recent years. Determined Midlanders made up their minds that United Way was here to stay . . . that it was the best and most efficient manner in which to do this particular chore of fund-raising. Once that decision had been reached, community-wide, the attitude changed, and goal-reaching became a reality.

In other words, United Way now is an established part of community life in the Tall City, which stands even taller as each United Way goal is reached year after year.

This is the reason the United Way people are confident of victory in the 1976 effort. And with a majority of the community's residents giving their Fair Share, the goal is well within range. Already, 29 per cent of the goal has been pledged.

Let's review the participating agencies, just in case some persons might have forgotten. They are American Red Cross, Boys Club of Midland, Buffalo Trail Council Boy Scouts of America, Casa de Amigos, Community Day Nursery, Council on Alcoholism, Family Services, Inc.

Free Tape Lending Library, La Florecita Day Nursery, Midland-Lee Youth Centers, Permian Basin Girl Scout Council, Permian Basin Planned Parenthood, Inc., Salvation Army, United Service Organization (USO), Washington Youth Center, Midland Y.M.C.A.—Alamo, Metropolitan & Outreach, Central, and Park Center.

The budget of each agency has been screened by United Way officials, and each is considered to be realistic in every instance.

So, it all boils down to YOU, actually, and your contribution to United Way for the coming year. Many of you already have given generously, but there yet are others who have delayed for one reason or another. Or perhaps, some haven't been solicited as yet. A call to United Way will take care of either situation. In other words, don't, hesitate. Remember, the volunteer workers also are busy people who need to get back on their regular jobs as quickly as possible.

Let's all get behind this United Way effort, wrapping it up promptly in typical Midland fashion.

CIA Reorganization Problems Reviewed

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The rapidly worsening impact both at home and abroad of congressional investigations is rushing White House reorganization of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), including sacking director William Colby, with grave obstacles immediately encountered.

The original plan had been to await recommendations of Senate and House investigators before moving into major reorganizations of the government's intelligence community.

That sensible timetable could not withstand the pulverizing impact of the sensational disclosures now being carried from congressional hearing rooms to every corner of the world. Thus, even as gory revelations continue, the White House is beginning its first effort to restore some credibility to the shattered remnants of American intelligence: a reshaping of the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board (FIAB). Even that first step, however, is confronted with monumental difficulties.

The most recent catalyst forcing the White House into a public start on reorganization was the recent front-page picture of Colby's poison-dart gun. The photo, carried all over the world, lent juicy credence to the CIA as a kind of International Murder, Inc.

"I was appalled," one White House official told us. Another presidential adviser said the fact that Colby was specifically asked by the Senate CIA committee, headed by Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, to bring the gun with him was not a mitigating factor. "Colby shouldn't have done it," the adviser added. "That picture alone just about doubled all the damage done to the U.S. since Congress started investigating."

Colby's impossible position as CIA director during the exhumation of every closet skeleton accumulated in the agency's 28-year history is fully recognized in the White House. Nevertheless, Colby's policy of "let it all hang out" boomeranged badly last week. His tenure as CIA director has accordingly been shortened and an active search is now underway for a successor from outside CIA ranks to start the awesome job of restoring some respectability to the shattered agency.

Indeed, Colby's original prepared statement for the Church committee last week included what higher officials thought was a blanket admission of agencywide culpability in failure to destroy toxic poisons. Colby agreed, in the statement actually given the committee, to narrow the blame to bureaucratic inefficiency.

The key political need in the reorganization now quietly underway by White House planners is to establish confidence and credibility. The first likely step will be a presidential order beefing up the moribund FIAB and giving it direct oversight over all CIA operations.

But even in this comparatively easy phase of the top-to-bottom reorganization, President Ford is encountering serious problems. His first choice to head a strengthened FIAB was George Shultz, former Secretary of the Treasury who now heads Bechtel Corp., an international contracting firm.

Mr. Ford wanted Shultz, now a FIAB member, to become its chairman for two reasons: first, his great prestige in Western Europe, where CIA dismemberment raises doubts about the sanity of the U.S. government; second, his acceptability to U.S. politicians.

As of this writing, Shultz is adamant in refusing to accept the post, held the past five years by retired Navy Adm. George Anderson.

Beyond Shultz' refusal is the lack of consensus outside the White House as to how much oversight authority should be given the new FIAB. Although a secret meeting of the nine-member board was never announced, it is no secret in the White House that board members are highly unenthusiastic about large, new oversight responsibilities. The main purpose of the all-day meeting was to discuss the new oversight role proposed by the Rockefeller commission on CIA activities.

Outside intelligence experts, for example, worry about harsh congressional reactions if Mr. Ford attempts to broaden the advisory board's role as a safety valve on the CIA's secret operations or even over its intelligence analysis. The mood of Capitol Hill is, at best, to keep its own tight control over the agency — or, at worst, to deny the CIA any future clandestine operations role at all.

Yet, Mr. Ford is convinced he cannot wait longer to begin the painful rebuilding of integrity in America's intelligence operations. One place he can start without seeking new legislation is the FIAB.

But while Congress continues to tear this nation's vital intelligence system apart, the administration is finding that putting it back together is excruciatingly difficult.

WASHINGTON—Each hunting season, the Northrup Corporation invites congressional and military bigwigs to its private preserve on Maryland's scenic eastern shore for some goose shooting.

The distinguished guests usually bag a least a goose apiece, but it's Northrup that winds up with golden goose.

Last year, for example, the company wangled a whopping $444.8 million worth of defense contracts from the Pentagon. Many of the goose hunters played a role in awarding the contracts.

Not that they would sell out the taxpayers for a goose chase. No one in the Pentagon would likely award a contract in exchange for the rustic bed, board and blinds which Northrup provides the hunters.

But the hosts know it is more effective to slap backs than to twist arms. A little booze and banter will go farther than a discourse on the company's merits.

Thus are public officials lulled until they slowly lose their sense of mission and feel a stronger loyalty to their corporate cronies.

We learned about these complimentary weekends-in-the-woods from secret Northrup memos, which specify even how many geese each participant killed.

The setting is incomparable. The goose hunting unsurpassed. Northrup also serves the hunters hearty bacon-and-egg breakfasts and pass-the-plate suppers, with plenty of liquor to take the chill off.

Between nips, the men swap stories and, according to witnesses, discuss military needs. Rep. Robert Leggett, D-Calif., for one, recalled hearing a lot of talk about defense programs.

Northrup's guest list includes more than 30 admirals and generals, among them Adm. Isaac Kidd, ex-Navy Material chief; Adm. John P. "Blackie" Weinel, former planning director for the Joint Chiefs; Gen. Clyde Box, former deputy Air Force inspector, Gen. Duwart "Pete" Crow, former Air Force comptroller; Gen. Horace Wade, former vice chief of the JCS; and Adm. Thomas McClellan, former chief of Naval Air Systems.

The guests from Capitol Hill include Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev.; Rep. Bill Nichols, D-Ala.; Rep. Robert L.F. Sikes, D-Fla.; ex-Rep. William Minshall, R-Ohio; Gordon Nease, then with the Senate Armed Services Committee; Earl Morgan, formerly with the House Armed Services Committee; Arthur Kuhl, Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Tom Scott, Senate Appropriations Committee; Chet Sobsey, assistant to Senator Cannon; and Len Kilgore, former assistant to Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

We placed calls to all the guests whom we had been able to place at Northrup's hunting retreat. Those who returned the calls generally portrayed themselves as overworked public servants getting away from it all for a weekend. Northrup refused to comment; the Defense Department also had no comment.

Footnote: Occasionally, an important guest, unable to slip away for a weekend, got a goose anyway. Northrup delivered a goose to Senator Cannon, for example, after he missed a hunting party.

BREAST CANCER: A startling study warns that X-ray screening, which is supposed to detect breast cancer in the early stages, may actually cause cancer.

This radiation detection method, known as mammography, has been widely publicized as a life saver. But in an unpublished study, Dr. John Bailar of the prestigious National Cancer Institute writes:

There seems to be a possibility that the routine use of mammography in screening asymptomatic women may eventually take almost as many lives as it saves."

The X-ray screening is part of a joint program which the National Cancer Institute and American Cancer Society set up three years ago in 27 centers across the country. More than 200,000 women, all over the age of 35, are participating in the five-year project.

Preliminary figures show this early detection program has located breast cancer in 3.4 per 1,000 women. But Dr. Bailar's study adjusts these figures, claiming no more than 1.0 and as few as.5 detections can be attributed directly to the X-ray screening.

He contends these results may not be worth the risk involved with radiation. He suggests instead that "screening by medical history and physical examination alone will probably provide much or most of the same benefit without risk from irradiation."

But Dr. Frank Rauscher, director of the Institute, insisted there is "no question" about the effectiveness of the mammography program. He gave Dr. Bailar credit for "drawing more attention to the hazards involved." But both doctors stressed that only the most minimal doses of X-ray are used in the screening.

Other sources charged that prodding by the American Cancer Society and College of Radiology (whose members may profit from the X-ray fees) had moved the mammography project ahead prematurely.

Dr. Bailar's study cited a report by a committee of the Canadian Association of Radiologists. "It is not justifiable," states the report, "to recommend screening for breast cancer in Canada except in high risk groups."

Footnote: Otha Linton, a spokesman for the College of Radiology, confirmed that the college was a major backer of the program. However, he denied the profit motive and added: "Radiologists are sufficiently busy and can make a lot more money doing other kinds of exams."

Let's Be More Realistic About Oil Prices

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — "We expected better, but it could have been worse" — that's the consensus of U.S. officials on the OPEC nations' decision to hike crude oil prices by 10 per cent.

Despite the increase by the oil cartel, American Canadian consumers will still be paying the lowest prices in the industrialized world for oil and gasoline. Our kiddy kars will still flow over the acres of concrete, and our homes will be cozy and warm. But we can all expect gasoline to go up a penny or two a gallon and heating oil to cost slightly more.

It was the Iranians, Venezuelans, Nigerians and Libyans who wanted OPEC to announce increases of 15 per cent to 20 per cent. It was Saudi Arabia that tried to hold OPEC's oil ministers to a "freeze" on prices, or no more than a 5 per cent increase.

Saudi Arabia, with the world's largest proven oil reserves, is of a mind to play the long-range game in oil production rather than going for the quick buck like Iran and Venezuela. The United States has no better friend in the Middle East than Saudi Arabia.

Besides using its considerable muscle to limit the price hike to 10 per cent, Saudi Arabia succeeded in persuading fellow OPEC members to freeze the increase until next June 30 instead of considering another 5 per cent hike in January, 1976.

Still, the air soon will be rent with cries about how the "Arabs" have outrageously hiked oil prices. In point of fact, the Arab nations were divided at the Vienna meeting on the size of the increase. Indeed, the non-Arab nations were more hawkish on the question of a price hike. The Arabs get stereotyped as the sole villains in these oil melodramas—despite the facts.

The principal fact is that today the United States imports 40 per cent of the petroleum it consumes. Which nations send us this oil? According to official U.S. sources, Venezuela is by far our chief supplier of oil, followed in order by Iran, Nigeria, Saudi Arabia and Indonesia. Canada is a major supplier, sending us its western provinces' oil but importing for its eastern provinces. Altogether, one-fifth of our imported oil comes from Arab nations.

There are nations in OPEC which have limited oil reserves, produce close to capacity and go for the high dollar now. Iran is a good example of this philosophy. Saudi Arabia, on the other hand, produces only 60 per cent of capacity, goes for the "good" dollar now and wants to stretch out production for decades.

Altogether, the OPEC nations control 85 per cent of the world's oil production, own 67 per cent of the world's reserves and are presently "shutting in" 13 million barrels of production a day, presumably to keep prices at a high level. Saudi Arabia alone "shuts in" 6.5 million barrels a day.

"It is clear that each OPEC member pursues its own national interest and yet sticks to OPEC because of the fear of going back to the "free market" system where big oil companies caused world "gluts" and commensurate poor prices for the producing countries.

A man like Frank Zarb, federal energy administrator, knows all these facts and also knows better than to cry that the most recent OPEC hike is "outrageous." But then he has a constituency like everybody else these days.

At most, the United States should be "disappointed" with the OPEC announcement. There is no world market justification for the 10 per cent increase. It is just an arbitrary show of muscle, and the authoritarian Shah of Iran knows it.

But we Americans should not play the baby game and blame all our energy problems on the OPEC nations or, as we more often do, on the "Arabs." The Shah of Iran and his functionaries are not Arabs, nor are the Venezuelans, Nigerians, Indochinese or, for that matter, the Canadians.

We Americans should take more seriously the national effort to conserve energy and thus deprive the OPEC cartel of the opportunity to sell us more oil at a higher price. Since 1973 the United States has broken the trend-line of an annual 5 per cent increase in the amount of oil we consume. We are now on a consumption "plateau."

But since we still are growing as a people, we are manufacturing more, consuming more, and, naturally, energy is included. So in order to be less dependent on higher-priced foreign oil, we must develop our own oil resources, and we haven't; domestic oil production continues to drop. And we're not making much progress on alternative sources of energy, either. Increases in production of natural gas, coal and nuclear energy are very small.

The scope and complexity of the energy situation are often too tedious a study chore for most Americans to take on. Thus, those with simplistic answers or scapegoats in mind can have a field day when people are bothered about rising fuel costs.

Blame it on the Arabs, blame it on OPEC, blame it on the big oil companies. Perhaps all three deserve some blame, but that's not the whole story. The Europeans and Japanese are far more mature and realistic about the world energy problem than we are - despite paying much higher prices for oil than we do.

Marshall Could Rate As Century's Greatest

By ROBERT J. DONOVAN
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Who is, or was, the greatest modern American? Who in the 20th Century, for example, possessed, pre-eminently, the character, wisdom, righteousness and personal force that the country could exalt as the ideals for contemporary leaders?

General agreement on a particular man or woman would be impossible, especially when the century is still only at the three-quarters mark. Nevertheless one man more than any other who comes to mind was perceived as being great, or being close to greatness, by his contemporaries, and he may well command the nearest thing there is to a concensus about the greatest modern American.

Before discussing him, it should be noted that such a momentous century as this has been has produced some remarkable Americans.

Almost uniquely, Theodore Roosevelt personified the energy and exuberance of the American people at the moment when the United States was moving into the front rank of the world's powers. For all his frustrations Woodrow Wilson had a touch of greatness, embodying and expressing, as he did, ideals that other men have struggled for ever since his time. Though often erratic and inconsistent and sometimes bewilderingly indecisive, Franklin D. Roosevelt was a towering figure in the world and left a mark on his era.

In fits and starts and with unshakeable determination, Harry S. Truman managed to guide the country through a period of upheaval as great as any the world has known, relying on qualities that were oftern scorned at the time but that have at last struck a deep chord in the American people.

Dwight D. Eisenhower, a military hero to begin with, had a unique appeal to his countrymen while he was in office, and his presidency is being upgraded by historians. It was hard to know John F. Kennedy without feeling that with a little Irish luck he would become a great President, but his lick ran out. Lyndon B. Johnson approached moments of greatness. Unquestionably he was a big figure in the 20th Century America, but a flawed one.

Because of the rise of the United States as a world power since 1900, the country has had a succession of formidable secretaries of state, beginning with Elihu Root and Henry L. Stimson. Cordell Hull was an important figure, not because of his performance — Franklin Roosevelt ran his own foreign policy — but because of the profound effect on American foreign policy of his views on world trade. Dean Acheson and John Foster Dulles were men of incalculable influence in world affairs, and Dr. Henry Kissinger is unquestionably one of the important Americans of this century, though his methods may not translate into the ideals that the country hopes for in its leaders.

No list of outstanding modern Americans could exclude Chief Justice Earl Warren. Also the peculiar torment of blacks in the last 75 years has probably produced more greatness than we shall ever know about. The name of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. naturally comes to mind, but so do the names of others, like A. Phillips Randoph, a of president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and Roy Wilkins, longtime head of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. An aura of greatness always seemed to surround Marian Anderson.

It has been a century of great feats by Americans in aviation, space exploration, science, technology, industry, education, engineering and medicine. The development of polio vaccine by Jonas Salk has blessed the world.

No colossus has descended from these fields of endeavor however, so we return to the question about the greatest modern American — raised for this reporter recently by Eric Sevareid's televised interview with John J. McCloy, long considered the high priest of the mythical American establishment. McCloy was at various times adviser to four Presidents, head of the World Bank, chairman of the Chase National Bank, assistant secretary of war, United States high commissioner to Germany and a member of leading New York law firms. One does not have to share his views and values to grant that in his 80 years McCloy has had about as close a look at many outstanding Americans as anyone has had.

There was one man, he told Sevaried, who "came as close, if not closer, to touching the mantle of greatness than anybody I've ever come in contact with. ..." Many distinguished persons have said much the same thing about this one man.

In 1947 the then President of Harvard, James Byrant Conant, said the only American who could be compared with the man was George Washington. Douglas Southall Freeman, the biographer, agreed. He put him at the top of the list "of all the men I have been associated with, including Presidents," by the late Charles E. Bohlen, who played high diplomatic roles under Roosevelt, Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson. When the man entered the room, Acheson recalled, "everyone in it felt his presence. It was a striking and communicated force." "The more I see and talk to him," President Truman noted in a diary, "the more certain I am that he's the great one of the age."

The man was George C. Marshall, soldier and statesman, who died in 1959. Hailed by Winston Churchill as "the true organizer of victory" in World War II, Marshall was general of the army, wartime army chief of staff, later secretary of state, secretary of defense and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize for the Marshall Plan, the program of American assistance that helped put Europe back on its feet after the war.

"Marshall," writes his biographer, Forrest C. Pogue, "not only helped to name or personally did name the key commanders of the Army and Army Air Forces in World War II, but he also carried the primary role in deliberations of the Combined (British and American) Chiefs of Staff and the Joint Chiefs of Staff councils."

Marshall stood for the strategy of concentration first against Germany and then against Japan, but so did Roosevelt. Perhaps Marshall's greatest single influence on strategy was insisting on the cross-channel attack on Europe that led to the Normandy invasion. So dogged were the battles he had to wage in Allied councils against the British, own choice.

Roosevelt feared that he could not bring the British to agree on a unified command for Europe under the stubborn Marshall. Marshall took the decision like a good soldier and from the pinnacle in Washington watched the glory go to his subordinates in the field, like Eisenhower and Douglas MacArthur.

Marshall's first great diplomatic role after the war was a failure, but a failure that was foredoomed. Reluctantly responding to Truman's appeal, he went to China to try to prevent civil war by bringing China Kai-Shek's nationalists and the Communists into a coalition government.

When Marshall set to work in 1946 he found unbridled distrust between the two sides, which had been in conflict for more than a decade. Each still hoped to control China. Chiang would not admit the Communists to the government until they abandoned their armed forces, but the Communists feared such a sacrifice without guarantees of their status in the government.

Under Marshall's guidance, a truce was arranged and a National Assembly called to adopt a new constitiution. The efforts came unravelled, however, in fighting for possession of Manchuria. Marshall could not control Chiang. Chaing was convinced he could defeat the Communists in battle, and the Communists would trust none of Chiang's offers. Marshall was recalled at his own request, and Turman appointed him secretary of state.

The Marshall Plan was a synthesis of ideas, shaped largely by George F. Kennan, William L. Clayton and Acheson, serving under Marshall in the State Department.

Marshall bequeated to the world no solutions for civil rights, civil liberties, inflation, crime, over-population, morality, pollution, housing, reading comprehension, energy, neurosis and other such concerns of the late 20th Century.

Perhaps the reverence for Marshall will be largely confined to those who shared in his efforts to defeat the Axis powers and to make the United States the leading nation of the world in the days that followed — a wicked goal to many intellectuals today. Why should anyone, except cold war warriors like Truman, Acheson and McCloy, be impressed by Marshall?

Only for a few simple reason. He was our greatest solider when we needed one. Furthermore he was a military man who disliked militarism and defended civilian supremacy. When Truman asked the advice of Marshall, then secretary of defense, as to whether he should remove MacArthur for insubordiantion, Marshall advised him to do so. In the political firestorm that followed, the public backing Truman received from Marshall and the Joint Chiefs help in preventing the capsizing of his administration.

Marshall was incorruptible, a man of great personal force, partly concealed by a calm manner and soft voice. He dominated cabinets. He moved allies. He was trusted by Congress as, in all probobility, no other man has ever been. He swayed Presidents, even though he never was one himself.

Elective office is the prime road to fame in democracies, but election is not necessarily a proof of greatness — too often the opposite. Most of the great men of history — philosophers, explorers, scientists, poets, teachers, composers, military leaders and founders of great religions — never ran for anything. If Marshall had wanted to be President, it is a fairly sure bet that he could have been. But lack of partisanship was one of his qualities.

TO SCARE OFF PIGEONS — Dar Willis, facilities coordinator for the Phoenix, Ariz., Maintenance Services Department, stands near a rubber snake which has been used successfully to scare off pigeons on the newly constructed police building. Blue Cross Rebuffs Texas Investigators

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Welfare Commissioner Raymond Vowell says Blue Cross has told the state it is "private business" how much it costs the insurance company to administer the Medicaid program for welfare recipients.

He testified before the House Health and Welfare Committee on Thursday. The panel is investigating the contract under which Blue Cross administers the $202 million a year Medicaid program.

Medicaid is financed by a combination of state and federal funds. The state pays the money to Blue Cross as a premium on policies for the recipients, and adds funds for administration.

The insurance arrangement was chosen over a straight payout in 1967 because it is more efficient, Vowell said.

Rep. Chris Miller, D-Fort Worth, asked him how much Blue Cross charges for its cost of administering Medicaid.

Vowell said $60,000 a month.

"What is their actual administrative cost?" she asked.

"I don't know that," Vowell said.

"Have you asked for it?" Ms. Miller pursued.

"We have discussed it from time to time, and they say this is their private business," Vowell said.

He said Blue Cross contends it would be harmed competitively—although it is a nonprofit corporation—to let out the amount of its administrative costs.

The welfare board recently extended the Blue Cross contract, but only for 90 days while it is reviewed for potential cost-cutting areas. The legislature did not appropriate enough money to fund Medicaid services at existing levels, he explained.

Ms. Miller also asked Vowell about the reserve for unpaid Medicaid claims that Blue Cross maintains. Vowell said Blue Cross was voluntarily reducing the reserve, which stood at $34 million on Aug. 31. He said it now is down to $18 million.

"They always have paid interest to the state) on it, ... at the same rate of interest as U.S. Treasury 18-week notes," Vowell said.

Jackce Cox, an Austin free-lance researcher and writer who has sued Blue Cross for access to its books under the Texas Open Records Act, criticized both Blue Cross and the welfare department in her testimony.

She contended there are interlocking directorships between Blue Cross and Republic National Bank of Dallas. Blue Cross' investments—including those made from the Medicaid claims reserve—have "an intersting way of flowing into the stocks, bonds and accounts of entities sharing officers and directors with Republic National," she said.

At one time, she said, federal examiners found large quantities of federal funds had been deposited by Blue Cross in noninterest bearing accounts at Republic.

She said there is a need for a stringent state audit of Blue Cross' administrative costs for Medicaid.

"Information gathered from Social Security Administration auditors who rub elbows with Department of Public Welfare auditors inside Blue Cross indicates that the state policy is not to bother Blue Cross for too much detail," Ms. Cox said.

The information obtained by the state does not give a clear picture of the actual administrative costs, she said.

"The equity or inequity of Blue Cross' administrative charges for handling the Medicaid program has a bearing on the company's competitive position within the health insurance industry. If Blue Cross uses state tax money from their Medicaid business to underwrite the costs of private operations, they will have garnered a tax-financed subsidy for an unfair competitive advantage," Ms. Cox asserted.

LTV Promises Response To Airport Board's Suit

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — LTV Corp. planned to disclose today its response to a $190 million suit filed brought against the company Tuesday by the cities of Dallas and Fort Worth, the D-FW airport board and eight airlines.

The company has approximately 20 days to file an answer in district court here to the suit alleging it failed to fulfill the terms of a $34 million contract for designing and building Airtrans, the airport's automated "people mover" system.

Airport board members turned down Thursday a proposal by LTV President Sol Love that it keep the Airtrans system running during the resolution of legal battles. The board members said they believed the offer proposed that they negotiate a new contract under which LTV would resume Airtrans operations.

"We are ready to resume operation of Airtrans and pay LTV anything we owe them under the original contract just as soon as they are willing to say they are operating under the original contract," said board chairman Erik Jonsson.

The Airtrans system can now carry only passengers and baggage between terminals at the D-FW airport. According to the original contract, it is supposed to also carry employes, mail and garbage.

The suit was filed after an agreement ran out Monday under which the Airtrans system had operated. Since Monday, buses have transfered passengers and baggage between terminals.

HEW Discrimination Action Charges UT-A

WASHINGTON (AP)—The University of Texas at Austin has been cited by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare for allegedly discriminating against a female professor who had filed a civil rights complaint against the school.

HEW also charged the university with directing "retaliatory actions" against the professor after she filed her complaint.

The citation was the first against a college or university for a violation of 1965 and 1967 presidential orders prohibiting sex discrimination.

If HEW's allegations are upheld before a federal hearing examiner and an appeals board, UT could be barred from the award of new federal contracts. The university has 14 days to answer the HEW complaint and request the hearing.

HEW says the university has refused to cooperate with the U.S. Office for Civil Rights in the case of Janet Rollings Berry, an assistant professor of art history, who filed a discrimination complaint against the school. The university also responded to the complaint by refusingto promote her or increase her salary, HEW said.

Mrs. Berry first filed the complaint charging sex discrimination in August 1971. The civil rights office notified the university two months later that it was in violation of the presidential order.

HEW said that in 1964 Mrs. Berry was paid about 36 per cent less than male faculty members hired at about the same time and had approximately the same qualifications.

In 1968, HEW said, the art history department paid a male faculty member without a doctoral degree about $1,000 more per year than it paid Mrs. Berry. In addition, a male faculty member was hired in 1970 who had no doctoral degree nor prior teaching experience and he was paid approximately the same salary as Mrs. Berry, who had six years' experience.

HEW also alleged that after Mrs. Berry filed her complaint, the university "directed numerous retaliatory actions" against her and her husband, also a UT employe.

Both their salaries were frozen by the university with the exception of across-the-board raises, HEW said. Meanwhile, other faculty members received salary hikes.

"Mr. Berry was the only assistant professor within the respondent's art history department who had not been granted a salary increment for three consecutive years. No assistant professor was paid a lower salary and, of all those receiving equivalent salary, none had as much teaching experience as Mr. Berry," HEW said.

Crisp Fall Air Covers Wide Areas

By The Associated Press

Crisp, chilly autumn weather spread over much of the eastern half of the country today, with frost or freeze warnings posted this morning in parts of 16 states from Maine to Arkansas and Tennessee.

Temperatures in the 40s — and some in the 30s — were reported from Maine to Iowa, Arkansas and northern Mississippi.

Other parts of the country had milder weather, with 60s stretching along the Gulf Coast and 80s in southern Florida. Cooler 40s in the northern Rockies changed to 50s and 60s farther south. Eighties ruled the desert Southwest.

Precipitation fell in the Pacific Northwest, where an approaching weather system triggered a few showers and thundershowers in Washington and Oregon. Earlier a few thunderstorms hit Florida's eastern coast.

With the exception of clouds over East and West Coast states, the nation had generally clear skies.

In the Atlantic, Hurricane Gladys still was severe, its center 300 miles southwest of Cape Race, Newfoundland, and moving northeast at 40 to 45 miles per hour. Forecasters said it could pass very close to southeast Newfoundland today, bringing heavy rain. Its winds ranged up to 120 miles per hour.

Temperatures around the country early today ranged from 28 at Watertown, N.Y. to 81 at Needles, Calif.

Some other reports: Anchorage 44 cloudy, Atlanta 51 clear, Boston 56 clear, Buffalo 37 clear, Chicago 41 clear, Cincinnati 37 clear, Cleveland 31 clear, Dallas 52 clear, Denver 48 clear, Detroit 34 clear, Honolulu 77 clear, Indianapolis 36 clear, Kansas City 43 clear, Los Angeles 68 clear, Louisville 39 clear, Miami 76 clear, Minneapolis-St. Paul 54 clear, Nashville 45 clear, New York 56 clear, Philadelphia 45 clear, Phoenix 76 clear, Pittsburgh 34 clear, St. Louis 41 clear, San Francisco 58 clear, Seattle 56 light rain, Washington 46 clear.

Liberals Propose, Gas, Oil Price Swap In Policy Fight

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to break the impasse over a national energy policy, Senate liberals are proposing to raise natural gas prices in exchange for a rollback of oil prices.

The Senate began debating the unusual proposal Thursday after Republicans and Democrats from energy-producing states won a vote indicating they may have the muscle to force graduai removal of all federal controls from natural gas prices.

The Ford administration is pressing for an end to controls that have held down the price of oil and natural gas. The majority of Democrats want to retain — and in some cases expand — controls.

The proposed amendment being considered by the Senate apparently would let both sides win.

Originally suggested by a panel of the Senate Budget Committee and offered by Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., the amendment would cut the average price of U.S.-produced oil from the current $9 to $6.75 per barrel, with a gradual increase back to $9 in five years.

At the same time, it would create a single nationwide price for "new" natural gas, which would be about $1.30 per 1,000 cubic feet.

That compares with the current 30-cent average for gas sold outside the state in which it is produced. Gas sold within the state where it is produced is now exempt from federal price controls and sells for the $1.30 average.

The Stevenson plan would continue federal controls on "old" natural gas — fuel already bought under a contract for sale outside the producing states — until the contract expires.

The proposal would authorize the President to change prices or eliminate controls, with congressional approval, after five years.

The plan to control oil and gas prices on the same basis is based on Federal Power Commission data indicating that a price of $9 for oil and $1.30 for gas is ample to provide incentive to the industry to find new fuel sources plus a 14 per cent return on investments, Stevenson said.

The Senate is unlikely to vote on the proposal before next week.

Last Barges Head For Prudhoe Bay

PRUDHOE BAY, Alaska (AP) — The last of 15 barges loaded with supplies for the North Slope oil fields has headed into Prudhoe Bay Thursday and the tugboats that towed them braced today for a voyage out of the Arctic icepack.

A spokesman for Arctic Marine Freighters said 10 barges carrying mammoth modular units docked Thursday and another was due shortly. Four others struggled into the bay Wednesday.

The 15 ocean-going tugs made a late dash into the ice last weekend, led by three Coast Guard ships acting under a presidential order to assist the flotilla.

In all, 25 of the 47 barges, which made up the largest civilian sealift ever, made it to the wellhead of the trans-Alaska pipeline. The operation was the eighth but most difficult yearly supply run to the North Slope. Those that were turned back last month by stubborn ice were unloading their cargo at Seward for shipment overland to Prudhoe Bay.

The barges that arrived brought equipment considered essential to developing North America's largest oil fields on schedule. Without it, oil companies said there would be an untold delay in boosting the pipeline flow to its initial peak of 1.2 million barrels a day in late 1977.

President Ford ordered the Coast Guard to assist the flotilla a month ago, when it appeared the Arctic ice would not retreat from shore as it normally does during mid-summer.

A favorable wind late last week and ice-breaking runs by the Coast Guard ships finally opened up a shipping lane.

Judge Turns Down Crude Import Fee Exemption Plea

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Dist. Court Judge Carl O. Bue has rejected a plea by four oil companies that they not be required to pay a total of $30 million in oil import fees.

Bue ordered the payment Thursday but directed that the Federal Energy Administration be prepared to refund the money should the U.S. Supreme Court rule that the fees are illegal.

Ashland Oil Co., Apco Oil Co., Coastal States Gas Corp., and Charter International Oil Co. and a subsidiary, Kern County Refining, had asked Bue for a temporary restraining order against FEA collection of the fees.

Apco was disputing $5.4 million, Ashland $15.9 million, Coastal States $7 million, and Charter and its subsidiary $1.9 million.

The fees for July and August amounted to $2 a barrel and the companies contended payments should not be required in that a Washington, D.C., appellate court had held the fees to be illegal. Bue ruled, however, that the appellate court had withheld the effectiveness of its decision pending an FEA appeal to the Supreme Court.

Coastal States Hearing Closes

BRYAN, Tex. (AP) — A district judge says he will announce Monday his decision on whether Coastal States Gas Producing Co. should get a new trial in a suit judgment favoring the Lower Colorado River Authority.

Coastal States concluded a three-day hearing on its motion for a new trial Thursday by arguing that there was "jury misconduct" last July when the jury issued a $26.2 million judgment against it.

Hurricane Gladys Starts Weakening

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Gladys, termed the most intense storm to cross the northwest Atlantic in 15 years, whipped past Newfoundland today and began to weaken.

Forecaster Gil Clark at the National Hurricane Center in Miami said the storm weakened from about 120 mile per hour winds to 100 m.p.h. and would weaken further.

But he advised shipping to avoid the storm.

Permian Basin OIL & GAS LOG

count, Inc., Abilene, staked No. 2-160 W. A. Ashton as a north offset to the Home Creek oil discovery in the Benoit field, seven miles northeast of Ballinger.

The project is slated to 3,000 feet, and spots 377 feet from north and 2,490 feet from west lines of section 160, J. H. Wilson survey.

Tompkins completed the discovery in October 1974. It was No. 1-160 Ashton, which produced 96 barrels of 42-gravity oil daily, on potential test through perforations at 2,798-2,802 feet.

Aztec Schedules Concho Venture

Aztec Oil & Gas Co. plans to drill a 4,000-foot Concho County wildcat, five miles southwest of the Paint Rock (Strawn) gas field. It is No. 1 O. H. Rozzelle.

Drillsite is 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 1, block 11, H&TC, 5½ miles southwest of Paint Rock townsite.

The firm staked site for No. 1 Rozelle late in 1974. That location, 2,310 feet from south and east lines of the same section, was abandoned last January.

Pool In Sterling Gains Stepout Try

W. C. Blanks, Midland, will drill No. 1-20 R. T. Foster as a ½-mile north and east stepout to Canyon gas production in the Conger field and 1½-mile southeast outpost to the Fusselman oil reopener in the WAM, South field of Sterling County.

Location is 990 feet from south and west lines of section 20, block 13, SPRR survey, six miles southwest of Sterling City. It is contracted to 8,500 feet.

North Martin Area Gets Test

RK Petroleum Corp., Midland, will drill No. 1 Mary Ann as a ¾-mile southwest outpost to production in the three-well RK (Devonian) oil pool of North Martin County.

It has a projected depth of 12,000 feet, and spots 660 feet from north and east lines of section 3, block 37, T-2-N, T&P survey, 2½ miles north of Tarzan.

Automatic Fuel Adjustment Cost Clauses Attacked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Provisions which permit electric utilities to pass fuel cost increases along to consumers automatically are unfair and unnecessary, a House subcommittee said Thursday.

"Automatic fuel adjustment clauses have accounted for nearly two thirds of the $8 billion increase in the price of electricity in 1974," said the House Commerce oversight and investigations panel.

Chairman Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., said consumers "have been overcharged significant sums" through a combination of "flaccid regulation and utility fast-dealing practice."

The committee recommended automatic increase clauses be abolished in the 43 states where they are in effect.

Decision To Be Made On Utah Power Plant

By DAVE CLEMENS

SALT LAKE CITY AP — The Department of Interior will decide soon whether a giant power plant for Arizona and California customers should be built in Southern Utah's picturesque desert country.

The decision, expected within the next few months, will center on a plateau north of Lake Powell called Kaiparowits, a Paiute Indian word meaning "Mountain of the People."

Three utilities — Southern California Edison Co., Arizona Public Service and San Diego Gas and Electric Co. — want to build an electrical generating plant that could produce enough power for a city of 1.6 million persons. The site is on federal land near the plateau's coal deposits.

The companies say growing urban areas of Arizona and Southern California need the electricity to run their air conditioners, light their streets and homes and turn the wheels of their industries.

They say the Kaiparowits Plateau provides the right combination of coal to burn — some three billion tons — and nearby water for steam to turn the turbines.

Opponents say the 3,000-megawatt plant would despoil wild areas with its stack plume, truckloads of supplies rumbling across Bryce Canyon National Park and 10,000-to15,000 new residents.

The region, with six national parks and a notional recreation area within a few hundred miles, is accustomed to environmental controversy. Conflict arose before construction of Glen Canyon Dam created Lake Powell and, more recently, when the lake began flooding Rainbow Bridge National Monument, site of the world's largest natural bridge.

Other environmental complaints have settled on the triple stacks of the Navajo power project at Page, Ariz., which can be seen for miles approaching the dam at Lake Powell's southwest end.

Utah officials and commissioners of the two rural counties that would be affected directly by the Kaiparowits plant are almost unanimous in supporting it.

"All the economic factors are in the project's favor," says Gov. Calvin L. Rampton, who has championed the proposal on grounds it would provide some 3,000 jobs, with 5,800 more jobs in associated commerce.

Rampton said at one of a series of hearings held in September in Utah, California, Nevada and Arizona that he believes a "great majority" of Utah residents want it built. He said a recent poll showed local acceptance of the project at above 90 per cent.

Sponsors say the project would mean $28.9 million a year in additional property taxes and increase Kane County's payroll $103.4 million by 1986.

But John McComb, Southwest field representative of the Sierra Club, say residents of Utah "are being taken.

"These power plants are being located in Southern Utah by default because the surrounding states have tougher regulation and because Utah is literally anxious to give away its resources," McComb said.

Libya Denies Exit For 230 Americans

NEW YORK (AP) — The Libyan government is denying exit to 520 non-Libyan employes of the Occidental Petroleum Corp., including 230 Americans and their families, the oil company says.

The reported restriction of the expatriate employes is the latest incident in a lengthy dispute between Occidental and the Libyan government over oil concession agreements.

"Occidental is taking immediate steps to bring notice of this restriction on the exit of American citizens to the appropriate branches of the U.S. Government and is exploring other possibilities to have this restriction on the expatriate men, women and children terminated," the Occidental statement said Thursday.

"Pending an amicable settlement, Occidental is preparing to relocate these expatriate citizens in another country so they may not be held as hostages."

Later Thursday, an Occidental spokesman said that the Libyans had agreed to the company's offer for further negotiations to settle the oil dispute and were sending a delegation here next week.

A State Department spokesman said, "We have asked the Libyan government on an urgent basis to clarify what is happening."
