'Desperate, evil'

NEW YORK — The list of adjectives used to describe Woody Allen, from "New York genius" to "neurotic existentialist," received two new ones Saturday: "desperate and evil." In the latest public relations salvo in a custody battle that may rival the Donald and Ivana Trump divorce for the media attention it receives, Maureen O'Sullivan, the mother of Allen's companion, Mia Farrow, issued a statement through her spokesman criticizing Allen. The statement says that Ms. Farrow has been forced "from the privacy that she so treasures."

U.S. to provoke Iraqis

Official: Bush OKs convention-week showdown

■ Plan could lead to renewed bombing, evacuation of U.N. personnel.

By Patrick E. Tyler
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — The United States and its allies have decided to provoke a confrontation with Iraq on Monday morning over the right to inspect Baghdad's most closely guarded ministry buildings, American officials familiar with administration planning said on Saturday.

The plan could lead to renewed bombing in Baghdad in coming days and the evacuation of U.N. personnel in Iraq. Some U.S. government officials said that the timing appeared calculated to give President Bush a boost during the Republican National Convention, which begins on Monday, and could damage the credibility of the United Nations, which is carrying out weapons inspections in the name of the 15-member Security Council.

Campaign and administration officials said the report was "ludicrous."

After a series of interagency meetings in Washington last week, and consultations with British, French and U.N. officials, Bush and his national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, approved a plan on Thursday calling for U.N. inspectors now in Baghdad to demand access to Baghdad's Ministry of Military Industrialization, government officials said. The chief of the U.N. special commission that supervises the inspections, Rolf Ekeus, was said to have left for Bahrain, where inspection teams are based.

This ministry, which was not bombed during the Persian Gulf War, supervised Iraq's once-secret program to develop weapons of mass destruction under the management of President Saddam Hussein's son-in-

GOP gathers; nation shifts eye to Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — Republicans flocked to their sprawling convention city Saturday for a blend of politics and partying designed to invigorate President Bush's drive for re-election.

92 REPUBLICAN CONVENTION HOUSTON

GOP chairman Rich Bond predicted the four-day convention program — carefully scripted by party leaders — "will balance things out" in the polls. A nationwide survey for Newsweek showed Bush trailing Democrat Bill Clinton by 17 points, in line with other recent soundings.

In an interview with Time Magazine, Bush said his decision to embrace higher taxes in 1990 in violation of his 1988 "no new taxes" pledge was a political and economic mistake. The president's decision infuriated conservatives, and he said in the interview "the pluses did not

Years-old land flap entangles Navajos, Hopis

By Jason DeParle
N.Y. Times News Service

THE GAP, Ariz. — This may be the only place in America where the federal government routinely forbids people to install electricity or running water.

It is part of a 1.5 million-acre stretch of empty high desert claimed by both the Navajo and Hopi tribes. Attempting to negotiate a settlement, the government in 1966 imposed what was meant to be a short-term ban on development, including improvements to the area's many dilapidated homes.

The dispute, now in its 18th year in a federal court, has dragged on longer than anyone had imagined. As a result, so has the ban, amounting to what the Navajos call a policy of government-enforced squalor.

About 5,000 people are affected, virtually all of them Navajos. Among them is Huston and Gynell McMillen show off treasured snapshots of Elvis Presley taken when the couple lived in Killeen and the King of Rock 'n' Roll was stationed at Fort Hood.

Couple spin firsthand memories of Elvis

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

■ Related story/1F

Gynell McMillen will never forget the time she missed Elvis Presley playing at the Andrews High School auditorium.

And she'll never forget the time Elvis asked her to dance.

It was September 1958 and Gynell's husband, Huston, was stationed at Fort Hood near Killeen. So was Elvis Presley.

"At that time, everyone was an Elvis fan," Mrs. McMillen said.

"Some of the girls in the apartment complex and I wanted to go see Elvis and none of their husbands would take them," she said.

"Huston said 'C'mon I'll take you,'" Mrs. McMillen said.

"I didn't think anything about going up and talking to him," McMillen said.

"We thought we'd go by the house and maybe he'd be there and we'd be lucky," she said.

"We went and rang the doorbell," he said.

The King of Rock 'n' Roll answered.

"He knew exactly what we were doing there ... and invited us in," she said.

Presley had been practicing his music and was accompanied by his bodyguards and a few other people, the McMillens recalled.

And so the fans talked and visited and listened to music at Presley's rented home that evening.

"He had no air about him. He was down to earth," she said.

Elvis' openness wasn't forgotten.

"He said come on back and the next day ... they wanted to go again," McMillen said.

And so they did. And that's when Mrs. McMillen danced with the King.

"He came over and asked me to dance and that was a surprise," she said.

Saudi Aramco President Ali I. Naimi

Saudi Aramco chief fields oil queries

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Slight, polite, soft-spoken and fiftyish, Ali I. Naimi, president of Saudi Aramco, does not impress one as a world mover-and-shaker who rides herd over 25 percent of the world's oil.

Without an entourage of aides and public relations flacks, neither does his appearance belie his position as the president of the world's largest oil company — a company that each day takes 10 million barrels of crude oil from the ground, puts it into pipelines, delivers it to tankers and sends it to customers around the world who rely on Saudi oil to fuel their vehicles and heat their homes.

'Our ... role is very clear — to provide the world an abundant, secure source of energy at a fair price.

— Ali I. Naimi

He jokes about his lack of entourage: "Normally in these situations, I listen and delegate someone else to respond." On this day, however, he has agreed to a one-on-one interview.

Naimi has been to Midland many times, usually slipping in quietly and unnoticed. A longtime friend of Sam White, president of Champion Technologies, he is passing through. Following his speech to the Permian Basin Petroleum Association on Friday, the White and Naimi families were on their way to Alberta, Canada, for a fishing trip.

Asked what it takes to produce such large volumes of oil, he said it is not much different than running any other big oil company. "We are no different from Exxon, Mobil or any other large oil company. The one thing we are blessed with that makes it easier is high reserves and high-producing wells, averaging 15,000 barrels daily."

PROVOKE: U.S., Allies seeks confrontation with Saddam, officials say

law, Hussein Kamel Hassan.

If Iraqi officials bar inspectors from the building, as they have threatened to do to protect Iraqi national security and sovereignty, American carrier-based aircraft would bomb the building in short order, the officials said, in a demonstration of American resolve that would have an inescapable impact on the political gathering here.

But the action would not necessarily end there. After an attack on the Military Industrialization Ministry, the United Nations would demand access to Iraq's Ministry of Defense, the heart of its national security apparatus, which was relocated to the Ministry of Petroleum building after the 1991 allied bombardment of the capital destroyed the original structure.

Again, any refusal by Iraqi officials to allow access to this building would lead to its destruction by U.S. aircraft, officials said, adding that the confrontation and bombing could continue through a list of nine targets.

Other U.S. officials said the Defense and Military Industrialization Ministries were selected not because American intelligence has identified specific documents hidden there, but because these buildings are so important to Saddam's overall survival that he is certain to refuse access.

One official complained that "we are going to stage an incident" that relates less to the importance of any documents that might be found in the targeted buildings than to the conviction that the steps will provoke a confrontation that will serve as the pretext for military action and "to help get the president re-elected."

The White House on Saturday refused to comment on the planned inspection, or on what steps might be taken if the Iraqis do not cooperate. An administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, disputed any suggestion that the timing was related to the convention.

"I would remind you that this is a United Nations inspection team that is organized and implemented by the United Nations and the timing is that of the U.N.'s," he said.

Bush appeared to be calculating he has a strong mandate from the allies to confront Iraq's broad challenge to U.N. authority this summer as well as a political green light from his Democratic challenger, Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, to take a tougher line against Saddam.

Iniially, Bush has selected a set of military options that pose the least risk to American military forces, the government official said, though the loss or capture of any American pilots could deal Bush a damaging political blow. The success of precision bombing strikes against highly defended Iraqi targets was among the strongest aspects of American military performance in the Gulf War.

And, though more risky steps might have to be considered if Bush exhausts a target list and finds Saddam still defiant, he also can hope the humiliation of renewed bombing will embolden internal Iraqi dissidents who staged an unsuccessful coup against Saddam in late June.

The Bush administration telegraphed its planning last week when a senior administration official, speaking in a background session with reporters, said U.N. inspectors would demand access to Iraqi ministry buildings "within the proximate future."

One reporter was encouraged beforehand to ask the senior briefer about planning against Iraq, and the official replied that if the Iraqi leader "decides we can't inspect certain places" U.S. military forces in the region "can respond sharply."

"I think it might be useful to demonstrate that he had to obey the United Nations sanctions," the senior policymaker told the reporters, but declined to provide further details. In subsequent days, other officials, troubled by the rush with which the White House asked the State Department and Pentagon to prepare for simultaneous relief and military operations in Somalia and Iraq during the Republican convention, provided additional details about the planned sequence of confrontation and the primary targets.

As in earlier military operations threatened against Iraq, the critical element of surprise would be assured by uncertainty as to the exact timing of the raids against the ministry buildings.

It was not clear whether Saudi Arabia was willing to allow its bases to be used for any new bombing operations. The Saudis are known to be pushing for a much broader attack on Iraq "to finish the job" as one Saudi official recently put it, and may not be willing to publicly support more limited action that is carried out exclusively by U.S. forces.

Likewise, Britain and France, which strongly support punitive raids against Iraq, were not poised to participate due to the narrow scope of the anticipated missions but were expected to lend their full political support at the United Nations.

U.S. military planners have worked in recent months to refine plans to knock out Iraq's reconstituted air defense capabilities.

outweigh the minuses on the economic side."

Still, he added, "I'll be making some proposals regarding the economy that I'm not going to discuss now that I think will take care of it."

In a separate interview with Newsweek, Bush noted his deficit in the polls, and said, "I think it's the economy." He added, "I think there's a fair amount of evidence that there's frustration with me. ... But I'm going to turn that around."

Bush has been urged by several conservatives to call for sharp tax cuts, both as a way of stimulating the economy and as a way to display leadership.

In the Time interview, Bush also said a candidate's private life, including the issue of marital infidelity, should be off the agenda. He said he would fire anyone on his staff who raises such questions about Clinton.

Clinton, campaigning in California, criticized Bush for choosing "politics over foreign policy" by moving James Baker out of the State Department to head his campaign.

Taking a shot at Baker's comment that a second Bush term would "target America," Clinton said he had been "concentrating on your problems for a dozen years, and if you give me a chance to serve as president, you won't have to worry about us targeting America."

Clinton also promoted his plan for health care reform and said, "Contrary to the assertions of our opponents, it will not be a bureaucratic nightmare."

His campaign dispatched a handful of aides to Houston to counter any Republican assaults. "They're going to hit us pretty hard," the Arkansas governor predicted of the Republicans. "We'll just see how we do."

Patrick Buchanan, who once taunted Bush as "King George" during a feisty conservative challenge in the primaries, was subdued as he arrived for the convention. "No speeches until Monday," he told supporters who turned out to greet him.

As delegates arrived, there was surprising agitation within the ranks.

Republicans favoring abortion rights bristled at the platform's call for a constitutional amendment to ban such operations, and were seeking support for a separate convention vote on the issue. First Lady Barbara Bush irked conservatives by saying the subject should have been left out of the platform.

The president was spending the weekend at Camp David, his renomination secure for Wednesday night. Half a continent away, delegates filled the hotels in his adopted hometown, arriving for a convention tinged by pessimism over the Bush-Quayle ticket's re-election changes and spiced by controversy over abortion.

On that topic, the party's split was mirrored in the streets. About 200 anti-abortion activists and roughly an equal number of abortion rights demonstrators held simultaneous protests at an abortion clinic in south Houston, then migrated across town and restaged their protests at a second facility.

For the convention goers, there was plenty of nightlife to contemplate. The California, Florida and Texas delegations were planning to whoop it up at a so-called "Coast-to-Coast" party. Some 3,000 people were expected in historic Antioch Park, where a giant cactus will dispense margaritas to cool down such spicy delights as chili, Tex-Mex, barbecue, crayfish and venison.

New Yorkers looked forward to a Saturday night barbecue. The Rhode Island delegation scheduled a Dutch treat dinner — by invitation only.

With the opening gavel set to fall in less than 48 hours, the transformation of the Astrodome from ballpark to convention complex was nearly complete.

Clouds to part with mid-80s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the upper 80s and southeast winds at 5 to 15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-60s.

Monday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the upper 80s and a less than 20 percent chance of rain mainly in the afternoon.

After an overnight low of 63, Saturday's high was 82 compared with the record high for that date of 104 set in 1969. The record low for today's date was 62 set in 1969.

STATE

A fall-like August will wear off by the beginning of the work week, with lower than normal temperatures still expected for today, the National Weather Service says.

Most of North Texas enjoyed an unseasonably cool Saturday with little rain. As of the mid-afternoon Saturday, temperatures ranged from the upper 70s and mid-80s. Skies were partly to mostly cloudy.

Breezes also swept across the region, with gusts reaching as high as 20 mph in Wichita Falls.

The lower temperatures should continue through Saturday night, but slowly warming by the beginning of the week. Today should be partly cloudy, with a slight chance of thunderstorms in the evening and Monday.

Record lows in the upper 50s to low 60s could be recorded, with today's highs between 82 and 88. Tonight's low will be around 61 to 66. Temperatures could hit 90 by Monday.

A weak cold front across the Hill Country triggered strong thunderstorms Saturday afternoons. Scattered thunderstorms also occurred along the gulf coast.

The rest of South Texas was under cloudy skies, except the Corpus Christi area. Mid-afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 80s, with Cotulla recording an area-high of 93.

The region can expect partly to mostly cloudy skies through today, with a chance of showers and thunderstorms. Highs should be in the 90s and lows in the 70s.

West Texas will be partly cloudy until Monday night, with the best chance for storms coming before daybreak today. Temperatures will reach the lower 90s, with lows in the upper 60s.

NATION

Rain and storms spread across the South and up the East Coast on Saturday, and temperatures fell to record lows across the Plains and Great Lakes.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over much of Texas, the lower Ohio Valley and the southern and central Atlantic coast states.

A tornado was reported at Knotts Island, N.C., on the state's northeastern corner, but no injuries or major damage were reported.

More than 4 inches of rain fell during the morning in Florida near Inglis and Yankeetown, on the gulf coast north of Tampa, and local flood warnings were posted, the National Weather Service said.

Heavier rain during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT included 1.33 inches at the Pensacola Naval Air Station, Fla., and 1.10 inches at Alma, Ga.

Heavy rain during the night in southern West Virginia caused flooding Saturday along streams in Fayette and Boone counties. High water forced evacuation of four families, washed out two or three small bridges and a secondary road and cut some power and gas lines, residents and county authorities said. No injuries were reported.

Unseasonably cool air spread over much of the Plains, the Mississippi Valley and the upper Great Lakes.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms extended across the central Pacific Coast.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

QUERIES: Saudi Aramco CEO fields questions

(From 1A)

What are the most prolific wells?

"We have had some wells produce as high as 85,000 barrels per day. Our lowest producers will make about 2,500 barrels daily." He adds that the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia has about 60 oil fields with 250 reservoirs, but is producing from only 12 to 15 of the fields.

How long can it last?

"Our decline curve keeps changing, because we keep adding to production by bringing on new fields. But I would say that we will not begin to see a decline curve until the year 2035 or 2050."

Naimi is not shy when talking about the oil reserves of Saudi Arabia. He is proud of it, and often uses the word "blessed" when referring to his country's share of crude oil.

He is especially proud of the role Saudi Aramco played during Desert Storm, when the oil company was called upon not only to fuel the entire war effort, but to compensate for the lack of Kuwait and Iraq oil in the market.

"In a span of four months in 1990, we brought our production up from 5 million barrels a day to 8.5 million barrels. To do this we had to take approximately 1,000 shut-in wells out of mothballs and put them on stream," he said.

He gives credit for the effort to the international staff of Aramco and its dedication. "They were willing to do whatever it took to get the job done," he said.

If not for the haste with which Saudi Aramco increased its production by 3.5 million barrels, there could have been gas lines in this country and the price of gasoline could have soared. As it was, prices flared only briefly in 1990 before stabilizing again under $30.

Naimi said the war pointed out the wisdom of having a country like Saudi Arabia, who could maintain a production cushion and plug the supply gap. He said that in exchange for its willingness to maintain such a cushion, that Saudi crude oil should receive fair treatment from consuming nations.

The memory of Saudi Arabia using its giant oil reserves for political posturing and creating gas lines in this country still lingers, but from Naimi's tone and comments, one gets the impression that those days are past and Saudi Arabia has chosen a new role.

"Our perception of our role is very clear — to provide the world an abundant, secure source of energy at a fair price. In this global economy, crude oil must compete with coal, nuclear, natural gas and other fuels. If it cannot, other fuels will step in to take its place. I would hope the days of threats and boycotts are behind us," said Naimi, who speaks with fervor of the free market approach to world energy.

"We believe in free markets. The kingdom policy is one of moderation. As producers we want a fair income from our product in exchange for providing an abundant and secure supply of oil."

He emphasized that Saudi Arabia does not want oil prices to contribute to worldwide inflation during the next decade and said the real price of oil will probably see no growth for the decade. When Kuwaiti and Iraqi oil come back into the market, he said Saudi Arabia would make whatever adjustments are necessary to maintain moderate oil prices.

For the rest of the decade and beyond, he predicts increasing demand of 1.5 percent per year, adequate supplies and moderate prices.

Naimi received his bachelor's degree in geology from Lehigh University and his master's in hydrology and economic geology from Stanford University in 1963. He has spent many years in the U.S., and has many friends here. His eldest son lives in Beaumont, where he is finishing an 18-month assignment with the Star Partnership between Texaco and Saudi Aramco.

His American associations have made him acutely aware of the concerns of the independent oilmen who remember the devastation of 1986, when the Saudis took oil prices below $10.

"It is not our policy to put any other producer in the world our of business. Predatory pricing is a good way to go out of business. We do not want to destroy the industry with predatory pricing. We have a common interest with other producers: We want oil and gas to be a commodity for as long as possible."

He said he did not have any concerns about U.S. efforts to clean up its air with natural gas. "Everyone is for a clean environment. We have no argument with the objectives of using natural gas to clean-up the air. Natural gas is a hydrocarbon, we sell hydrocarbons and that includes liquefied natural gas. We encourage the use of all hydrocarbons."

He is opposed, however, to artifical taxes and trade barriers to increase the price of crude oil, discourage its use and back foreign oil out of the U.S. market. "Such actions are counter to all wise efforts to liberalize trade and open new markets. They create artifical market values and harm industry and consumer alike."

He said Saudi Arabia had not flared natural gas, which is primarily associated with oil production, since 1981, when it went to considerable expense to gather and compress natural gas.

"We use methane and ethane to fuel our desalinization plants and we sell the rest," he said.

Naimi said Saudi Aramco is environmentally sensitive and tries to operate in a environmentally prudent manner. He recalled that in addition to increasing oil production by 3.5 million barrels, his company had to clean 1 million barrels of oil out of the Persian Gulf at a cost of $13 billion.

Naimi said Saudi Aramco plans to be around for a long time and looks forward to doing even more business with the U.S., which is its No. 1 trading partner.

ELVIS: Midlanders recall visiting the King's house

(From 1A)

"I was the only girl in the room he asked. Of all the girls in the room, he asked me to dance and that's the only dance he did when we were there," she said.

"Any girl would have liked to have been in that position," she said.

The next evening the McMillens visited the rock 'n' roll musician again, his last night before being shipped out to Germany.

"It was an exciting time. We enjoyed it," Mrs. McMillen said.

During their visits, the McMillens took some photographs and got Elvis to autograph an album.

Several years later — in the 1970s — the McMillens saw Presley in concert in Odessa.

Although it was the only Elvis concert they attended, it wasn't their first chance. McMillen had invited his wife to see Elvis once before.

"When he was first getting started, we were living in Andrews and he came to Andrews High School auditorium and I didn't want to go. At that time, I wasn't that carried away with him," Mrs. McMillen said.

In the two years between Presley's Andrews appearance and his Army induction and stationing at Fort Hood, Elvis had gone to the top of the music business "and she regretted every moment of not going," McMillen said.

But Mrs. McMillen became a true fan.

"At one point I had every record that Elvis had released," she said.

And 15 years after his death, the music of the King still lives.

"We're still Elvis fans," she said.

Presley's lifestyle in his later years hasn't affected the McMillen's opinion of the man.

"I think just as much of Elvis today as when I first met him," McMillen said.

"I'd seen him on base there a few times and ran into at the PX (post exchange). He was just like us. He'd stop and talk. He always had a lot of people around him," he said.

Elvis is a hard person to forget, even those who never met him in person.

"He's probably the most popular entertainer that ever was," she said.

TRIBES: Dispute has dragged on for 18 years

(From 1A)

Larry Yazzie, an Army veteran who works in a gas station.

The vast Arizona sky shines through the cracks in the one-room, scrap-board house that he shares with his wife and eight children. Without indoor plumbing, the Yazzies travel more than 30 miles to take a shower. With only a gasoline-powered generator, they cannot refrigerate food.

But with the land dispute in court, Yazzie is now required to get permission from the Hopi Tribe to build a new home, or he must win an appeal to the Interior Department. The Hopis denied his plans for a modern, three-bedroom home, arguing that it would help entrench him on the land.

After an expensive appeal involving a team of Washington lawyers, the Interior Department granted part of the request: the house will have two bedrooms, not three, and it will have running water but no hookup to the power lines that run several hundred yards away.

When pressed, the federal official who made that decision denounced its results.

"To have yourself looking at a power line 600 or 700 yards away and not being able to tap into that — that's intolerable," the official, Eddie Brown, the assistant secretary of interior for Indian affairs, said in a recent interview.

When asked about the ban, Brown alternates between defending it as an inevitable result of the land dispute and denouncing it as inhumane.

The Hopis defend the ban on development as their only means of protecting themselves against the Navajos, a larger and richer tribe that the Hopis say has expansionist designs.

"They're like squatters," Clayton Honyumptewa, director of the Office of Hopi Lands, said of Navajos. "They'll come, do a cardboard house. The next thing you know the tribe will build them a house, and then they'll say they've been there for 30 years. That's just how they work."

Peterson Zah, president of the Navajo Nation, would not criticize the Hopis, complaining instead that the government ban is writing a new chapter in the history of Indian mistreatment.

"If there were white people involved, there would never be a freeze," said Zah, who believes that Congress should repeal the ban or the courts should lift it, and that the Interior Department, meanwhile, should approve more exceptions.

Brown of the Interior Department, himself a Native American, sometimes sounds as outraged as Zah at the ban's effect.

"It's become totally intolerable in terms of living conditions, the safety and well-being of those people," he said.

But arguing that he must attend to both Navajo and Hopi interests, Brown said he sees no immediate alternative. "If it goes on much longer I'm going to have to sit down and look at this a little more," he said.

Most scholars agree that the Hopis arrived first in the northern Arizona desert; one village is thought to be nearly 1,000 years old. But Navajos also have been in the area for hundreds of years.

Socially, most Navajos and Hopis are cordial, and their children attend the same school in Tuba City, the region's hub.

The disputes grow in part from differing ways of life. The Navajos have historically lived as mobile herders of sheep and cattle, encircling the less numerous Hopis. A landmark federal court ruling found a historical Navajo "proclivity to commit depredations against the Hopi," including cattle theft and occasional acts of individual violence.

The Hopis farm and congregate in villages, but they claim rights to the outlying lands, which they have used for grazing and religious ceremonies.

The land covered by the development freeze is part of an area that Congress set aside in 1934, for "the Navajo and such other Indians as may already be located thereon." A Hopi village, Moenkopi, was in its midst, and the Hopis claimed they had historically used much of the surrounding land.

Trying to negotiate a settlement in 1966, Robert Bennett, then the Indian commissioner, first imposed the freeze. Negotiations broke down after several years, and the Hopis filed a lawsuit in 1974 that lingers in U.S. District Court in Phoenix.

In the early years, many Navajos built despite the freeze. But in 1980, Congress put the ban into law, requiring concurrence of the Hopis for any new development. A 1988 amendment allows for appeals to the Interior Department based on health and safety.

Since no one disputes the Hopis' rights to Moenkopi, the village is exempted from the freeze, and as a result virtually no Hopis are affected.

Glen Renner, a Tuba City lawyer who represents the Navajos, said that only a handful of cases have been appealed as far as the Interior Department, since the process is long and expensive.

She said several hundred requests have gone to the Hopis in the past few years, and that hundreds more are backlogged, awaiting the staff to handle them.

In the meantime, many Navajos continue to suffer.

Bell Zahne, 75, does have electricity and water in her home in The Gap. But her daughter, Fannie Begay, who lives with her six young children in a one-room neigboring shack, does not.

Ms. Begay, who said she recently left her husband because he beat her, explained that she has been waiting several years for the Navajos to process her application.

Asked what kind of house she would like, Ms. Begay shrugged defeatedly. But her 8-year-old daughter, Cynthia, said, "a trailer!" adding, "It's so big!"

At the age of 80, Huskie Littleman is fighting a case of tuberculosis in a rotting shack. His application for a new home is among those rejected by the Hopis, who suggested he renovate the old one. Littleman says his house is too dilapidated for renovations to have much effect.

"We almost froze this past winter," said Littleman, explaining that temperatures go below freezing and the home has no insulation. "Suffering is always visiting us, and that's not to be taken lightly."

Diane Hu, an Indian Health Service doctor based in Tuba City, said that decrepit housing, which is common even in areas not affected by the construction ban, can create serious health problems.

The lack of sanitation nurtures shigella bacteria, spreading dysentary infections that have made severe diarrhea endemic. The lack of refrigeration promotes a canned-good diet with high levels of fat, sugar and salt that drive up rates of diabetes and hypertension. And severe overcrowding, she said, generates depression, family violence and addictions to drugs and alcohol.

In April, Judge Earl Carroll of U.S. District Court in Phoenix, issued the first ruling in the case, concluding that the Hopis had no claim to at least 1.3 million of the 1.5 million acres covered by the development ban.

But Carroll did not lift the ban. A ruling on the remaining 200,000 acres is expected soon, but the Hopis said they will oppose any effort to suspend the ban until their appeals are exhausted, which could take many years.

Among the areas the court has found to be exclusively Navajo, though still covered by the ban, is Yazzie's home in The Gap.

Living with his eight children in a house with dilapidated walls, a dirt floor, and a leaking roof. Yazzie in 1990 sought Hopi approval for a bigger house with running water and electricity.

When the Hopis suggested that Yazzie patch the roof and put in a tile floor, Yazzie appealed to the Interior Department, which upheld the Hopis.

"Many families, Indian and non-Indian alike, safely reside in rural areas in good health without such improvements," Brown's office wrote, informing Yazzie of its decision.

With a second appeal to the Interior Department , Yazzie won the right to indoor plumbing but lost again on the power lines.

Although Brown had presided over the appeal and had personally met with Zah, the Navajo president, to discuss Yazzie's appeal, he said in an interview, "I did not know it was denied."

Honyumptewa, the Hopi land official, estimates that the tribe has approved about three-quarters of the 200 applications it has received from the Navajos in recent years. He said the tribe's policy is to allow Navajos to replace deteriorating homes with new ones of the same size, but to deny improvements that might bolster the Navajos' legal claims to the land.

Denying that the policy imposes hardships, Honyumptewa said many Navajos lack water and power on areas of the reservation that are not covered by the ban, and that Hopis sometimes do, too.

"I've lived under those conditions: carry water every day; go to an outhouse every day," he said. "That was no hardship to me."

But Zah, the Navajo president, said the ban makes his tribe's situation unique.

Convoy arrives in besieged Bosnian town; Sarajevo falls under attack

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Despite crossfire and land mines, a U.N. aid convoy reached the besieged city of Gorazde on Saturday, and United Nations officials said the safe passage pointed to Serb willingness to cooperate in order to head off wider military intervention.

But Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, was under heavy shelling at nightfall. Sarajevo radio said more than 150 mortar shells hit the city and its outskirts.

Also, heavy new fighting was reported around Gorazde, 30 miles east of Sarajevo, and more refugees were said to be fleeing "ethnic cleansing" in northern Bosnia.

European-sponsored peace talks broke down again in Brussels. In Italy, Pope John Paul II announced he had sent an envoy to Bosnia.

The delivery of aid to Gorazde came a day after NATO refused to commit large numbers of troops to protect U.N. relief convoys. But some nations pledged limited forces, and the aircraft carrier USS Saratoga headed for the Adriatic Sea.

Gorazde, like Sarajevo, has been under heavy siege by Bosnian Serb forces, but has received hardly any relief shipments. Since the fighting began, Gorazde's population is believed to have swelled from 15,000 to 100,000 as refugees from neighboring towns sought a haven in the city.

Both Serb and Bosnian media reported heavy fighting around Gorazde. Sarajevo radio said Serb forces were shelling the city with tanks, mortars and other artillery.

"In the name of humanity we are once more sending an appeal from the besieged town of Gorazde for intervention," the radio said. Four children were wounded when mortar shells struck as food was being distributed, Sarajevo radio said.

In Sarajevo, surgeon Faruk Kulenovic at Kosevo hospital said at least three people were killed and 27 wounded Saturday.

Meanwhile, a children's charity in Sarajevo said another convoy of women and children was expected to leave the Bosnian capital soon.

Tanya Bojic, an official with the Children's Embassy in Sarajevo, said the convoy would probably carry 500 children and their mothers to Serbia. On Wednesday, 315 Muslim and Croat women and children left Sarajevo for Croatia and then Austria.

Serb forces are fighting Bosnian Croats and Muslims and have captured two-thirds of Bosnia-Herzegovina since the republic voted for independence from Serbian-dominated Yugoslavia in February.

The Geneva-based U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees intended Saturday's Gorazde convoy — and shipments later to other towns where Muslim civilians are under siege — to test whether Thursday's U.N. Security Council resolution authorizing use of force to ensure aid delivery will bring more cooperation from the Serb side in letting shipments through.

Greece fears intervention could bring it conflict

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The growing possibility of international military intervention in Bosnia has kindled Greek fears of an uncontrolled war raging at its doorstep.

"This is Greece's nightmare — that Yugoslavia could turn into another Lebanon and suck others into the conflict," Thanos Veremis, director of the Greek Foundation for Defense and Foreign Policy, said in an interview Friday.

The Greek government has said it is opposed to any kind of military intervention in former Yugoslavia.

It worries that the U.N. Security Council's decision Thursday to authorize military action to help deliver food and medicine to Bosnia could lead to a shooting war with Serbia. Greece and Serbia, both predominantly Orthodox Christian, have strong traditional ties.

And Greek leaders fear that the war could spread to the former Yugoslav republic of Macedonia, on Greece's northern border, where there is a large ethnic Albanian minority.

Foreign Minister Michalis Papaconstantinou said Thursday the government will try to convince its NATO and European Community partners that use of force "will not solve anything but only make things worse."

"If we can't stop this decision, then Greece will not take part," he said.

Government sources did say Greece will provide logistics support for NATO troops and aircraft operating from its airfields. Greece is participating in a United Nations embargo against Serbia and a NATO naval task force in the Adriatic.

But in a rare show of political unity, Greece's Socialist, leftist and Communist opposition parties backed the conservative administration's decision not to get involved in Yugoslavia.

Sicily lives with 'plague' of bribes, extortion; Mafia maintains hold

By Dennis Redmont
Associated Press writer

CATANIA, Sicily — After four helmeted motorcyclists riddled Inspector Giovanni Lizzio with bullets last month, they placed three 1,000-lire notes on the body slumped over the wheel of an Alfa Romeo.

The message was unmistakable: Don't mess with the Mafia.

Lizzio, head of the anti-extortion squad in Sicily's second-largest city, had just sent a gang of 14 to jail for loan-sharking, extortion and drug dealing.

Anyone who challenges the mob that strongly becomes a prime target for retaliation.

From tomatoes to condominiums, Italians are stung by blackmail from both organized crime and unscrupulous public officials. Shopkeepers and businessmen feel it the most, but the average Giuseppe also suffers because the cost of corruption is inevitably passed on to the consumer.

Payment of protection money by store owners, generally around $100 a month, is reported to be widespread. Firebombs are the price of refusal, and Italy leads Europe in such damage to businesses.

Bribes grease the palms of officials or politicians for everything from an espresso-bar license or building permit to avoiding tax inspections.

A nationwide study called "Sick with Payoffs," published in July by the national trade confederation, said more than half the shops pay bribes to someone and one-third of the money goes to public officials.

It put the total amount at more than twice the $2.2 billion a year estimated by the national statistics bureau.

"All of a sudden, because of some prominent arrests, Italians have uncovered an open secret," said Sergio Bille', president of the trade group, known as Confcommercio. "But it is a plague that has been growing by giant steps for the past decade."

In Milan, commercial capital of Italy, more than 70 politicians and leading businessmen have been charged with corruption the last two months. They include officials of Fiat-controlled companies and one of Italy's leading builders.

The bribes allegedly were paid to secure contracts for expansion of the two Milan airports and construction of a third subway line, a theater and the city's World Cup soccer stadium.

Judge Antonio Di Pietro heads Operation Clean Hands in what Italians have begun calling Tangentopoli (Bribesville). Di Pietro became a folk hero when he caught a wealthy Milan politician and businessman pocketing a $20,000 bribe from someone seeking a service contract.

The attack on bribery has been accompanied by a new campaign against organized crime, prompted by the murders of two judges who convicted more than 300 Mafia figures in the 1980s.

Early in August, the government sent more than 7,000 soldiers to Sicily. Their mandate is to guard buildings and protect investigators, but they also are meant as a sign that the government means business.

The growing strength of Mafia gangs has become a crisis within Italy's larger crisis of unstable government and economic recession.

"The clans now operate throughout the republic from the Alps to Agrigento," said Franco Cazzola, a political scientist at Catania University who just published "Italy of the Bribe, Phenomenology of the Daily Payoff." His book is a bestseller.

Sergio Pininfarina, former president of Confindustria, the national business association, estimates Mafia extortions amount to a 20 percent surtax on the earnings of industry in southern Italy. Some economists believe the mob's global activities equal 20 or 40 percent of Italy's gross domestic product of $1.3 trillion.

U.N. official blames harshness of famine on faulty organization

BAIDOA, Somalia (NYT) — The famine in Somalia could have been mitigated if the United Nations had dispatched relief experts months ago instead of relying on a small crew of junior staff members in the country, a senior U.N. official has said.

"It's so bad because we've let things simmer without paying proper attention," said Trevor Page, the newly-appointed head of the World Food Program, in Somalia. "We've had inexperienced people who don't know what they are seeing, who don't know what the implications are, and didn't blow the whistle."

Page, who has worked for the U.N. food agency for 30 years, and who directed all emergency programs in the 1980s, said he had not seen such human suffering since the Biafra famine of the late 1960s and the Bangladesh crisis of 1971. "But in those places, we were much better organized," he said.

The World Food Program made its first airlift to Baidoa on Saturday on a C-130 Hercules transport packed with 17 tons of high-protein biscuits for the more than 8,000 seriously malnourished children being fed at four centers.

More than 20,000 hungry adults are served one meal a day here at outdoor kitchens by the International Committee of the Red Cross.

The U.N. plane, which had Page on board, was met by Anita Ennis, one of two nurses who runs the feeding centers on behalf of Irish Concern, a relief agency based in Ireland.

"The biscuits are really important, we had a limited supply," Miss Ennis said as she watched the cartons being unloaded from the plane onto trucks. "We can use them fairly freely now that we know we will get a good flow."

Page said the U.N. airlift would continue until arrangements could be made to protect truck convoys from the wartorn Somali capital, Mogadishu, to Baidoa. The trucks have come under fire from heavily-armed looters.

The town has attracted tens of thousands of hungry people from the bush, many left bereft by gangs who have stolen their animals in the anarchy that has enveloped Somalia since a civil war intensified last November.

In addition to the war, the country on the Horn of Africa has suffered the effects of a long drought. Its population, estimated variously at between 4.5 million and 6 million, is made up largely of nomadic peoples.

Relief workers say children are dying daily in the feeding centers and bodies are still seen strewn on the roads leading into Baidoa, even though food deliveries by the Red Cross started here last month.

The question of how to get food to starving Somalis amid continuing violence has suddenly seized the attention of both Washington and the United Nations.

Page said that the World Food Program planned to airlift 5,000 tons of food to rural centers in most need. The country needed 400,000 tons of food this year.

Japanese defy court, worship at Shinto shrine

TOKYO (NYT) — Defying a recent high court ruling, almost the entire Cabinet marked the anniversary of Japan's surrender in World War II by worshiping Saturday at the Yasukuni shrine, a Shinto institution once regarded as the soul of Japanese militarism.

Government ministers and some prime ministers have made sporadic appearances at the Yasukuni shrine, which is dedicated to the souls of Japan's war dead, but the visits this year struck a particularly nationalistic note, coming so close to the July 30 court ruling. The Osaka High Court ruled that Yasuhiro Nakasone's 1985 appearance at the shrine, the first official visit by a postwar prime minister, violated the constitutional separation between religion and the state.

Apparently in an effort to avoid angering the Chinese and other Asian neighbors, who tend to criticize any signs of militarism in Japan, Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa did not visit the shrine, the 47th anniversary of Japan's surrender. He was quoted as saying he intended to go soon.

But 15 of the 20 Cabinet members worshiped at the traditional wooden edifice near the Imperial Palace moat in central Tokyo, as scores of old soldiers in uniform and legions of young rightists marched in the searing heat, vowed devotion to the emperor and, after a moment of silence to pray for the war dead, shouted "Banzai!" to celebrate the emperor's reign.

The Shinto shrine has played an important role in Japanese politics. In the 1930s, when militarists rose to power, it became the center of a government-sanctioned cult that helped instill a fanatical spirit among the military.

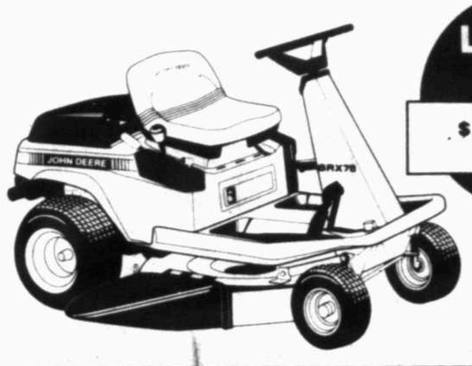

A military museum on the grounds of the shrine recalls that spirit vividly, with flags and letters painted in blood and several displays venerating the suicide units that used planes, speed boats and one-man submarines as human bombs throughout the war.

Most of the Cabinet members who visited Saturday followed the traditional practice of declaring their visits private, and thus unofficial, an ambiguous device that has been followed for years to try to avoid criticism. But one, Health and Welfare Minister Tokuo Yamashita, defiantly insisted that his visit was official and that he did not feel bound by the ruling.

U.S., Switzerland fight over funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Swiss authorities are refusing to surrender $10 million to the U.S. government from the Reagan White House's secret arms sales to Iran — and there's a fierce court battle in Switzerland over who owns the money.

The funds have been frozen for the past 5 ½ years in Swiss bank accounts. The Justice Department argues it's stolen property and should be given to the United States.

But the Swiss Federal Office for Police Matters turned down the U.S. request, pointing out that no one in the Iran-Contra affair has been tried for allegedly defrauding the U.S. government.

That Feb. 3 decision, which the U.S. appealed on June 23 to Swiss federal court in Bern, has never been made public. A copy of the ruling and other documents in the case were provided to The Associated Press by a lawyer for retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord.

Secord, who handled the Iran arms deliveries for the Reagan White House in 1985 and 1986, has filed a claim in federal court in Bern for the $10 million.

And Secord's ex-business partner, Albert Hakim, claims he's entitled to some of it, as does Swiss-based money manager Willard Zucker, who moved funds for Secord and Hakim in the Iran-Contra affair.

"The charges associated to the diverting of public funds have indeed been dropped ... against Messrs. (White House aide Oliver) North, Hakim and Secord. ... We feel compelled to deny your request for the handing over of the funds," Pascal Gossin of the Swiss division of international mutual judicial assistance-Central Office USA wrote in his Feb. 3 decision. It went to Richard Owens, associate director of the U.S. Justice Department's office of international affairs.

The office of federal police where Gossin works is Switzerland's equivalent to the U.S. Justice Department.

The Reagan White House enlisted Secord to ship TOW and Hawk missiles and spare parts to Iran, and the U.S. government got the amount it demanded for the weapons before they were delivered. Secord, Hakim and North marked up the price, stored the extra proceeds in Swiss accounts and funneled $4.5 million to North's secret Contra supply network.

Theft, fraud and conspiracy charges in connection with the Iran arms sale proceeds were brought in 1988 against Secord, Hakim and North, as well as national security adviser John Poindexter. But those charges never came to trial because the Reagan administration and U.S. intelligence agencies intervened in North's case, blocking the use of classified material that North needed for his defense.

That step forced Iran-Contra prosecutors to abandon those allegations in the North case, and then later against Secord, Hakim and Poindexter.

Owens of the Justice Department in April urged the Swiss to reconsider.

"Stolen property in the hands of a thief retains its character as stolen property irrespective of whether the theft is being investigated or prosecuted," Owens wrote to Gossin.

In May, after consultations with Iran-Contra prosecutors and Justice Department lawyers, Gossin issued a highly unusual order permitting the United States to become a civil, private party in Swiss federal court in Bern.

Coup failure leaves Russia cynical

By Celestine Bohlen
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — The tanks that rolled into Moscow last Aug. 19, only to roll out again two days later, changed Russia and the other states of the old Soviet Union forever.

But the failure of the August coup also gave rise to a series of myths that one year later continue to cloud popular understanding of what actually happened.

For an increasing number of Russians, memories of the glorious defense of democracy at the barricades around the Russian Parliament building, where President Boris N. Yeltsin led the resistance to the coup, have faded, replaced by a mood of apathy and cynicism.

"I have stopped believing in anything," said Irina Putilena, a 32-year-old housewife, "I have become apolitical. All my attention is now directed toward my family. I hoped that we would live better, but many have become poor. Many."

Now, more people talk about the need of a return to law and order. These are not just the truck drivers who used to keep portraits of Stalin on their dashboards.

Some of the most ardent opponents of communism are alarmed about the disintegration of society, of the economy and of Russia itself, and are appealing to Yeltsin to display a stronger hand.

These calls, curiously, mirror what the coup-plotters were saying a year ago, and what they are still saying from their cells at Sailors Rest, the Moscow prison where 11 of the 14 men charged are still being held, after the release of the three others.

One of the 11, Anatoly I. Lukyanov, the former head of the now-defunct Soviet Parliament, described the coup in a recent interview as a desperate attempt "to prevent the country from sliding into the abyss of economic crisis, inter-ethnic strife, poverty, lawlessness and bloodshed."

After a year that has brought a steep drop in Russian living standards, a rise in crime and corruption and a mounting death toll from the wars raging on Russia's perimeter, such goals do not sound so outrageous to some people.

"Using the tanks was an extreme measure," said Nina Vasilevna, a 50-year-old engineer who did not give her last name. "But the putschists and the democrats want the same thing: to bring order so that people can live in peace."

For all the grumbling, none of the Muscovites interviewed in Moscow last week said they now wished that the coup-plotters had succeeded. The horrifying image of tanks on the streets of the capital is still too fresh in their minds, and the old system that the tanks were sent to save is mourned by very few.

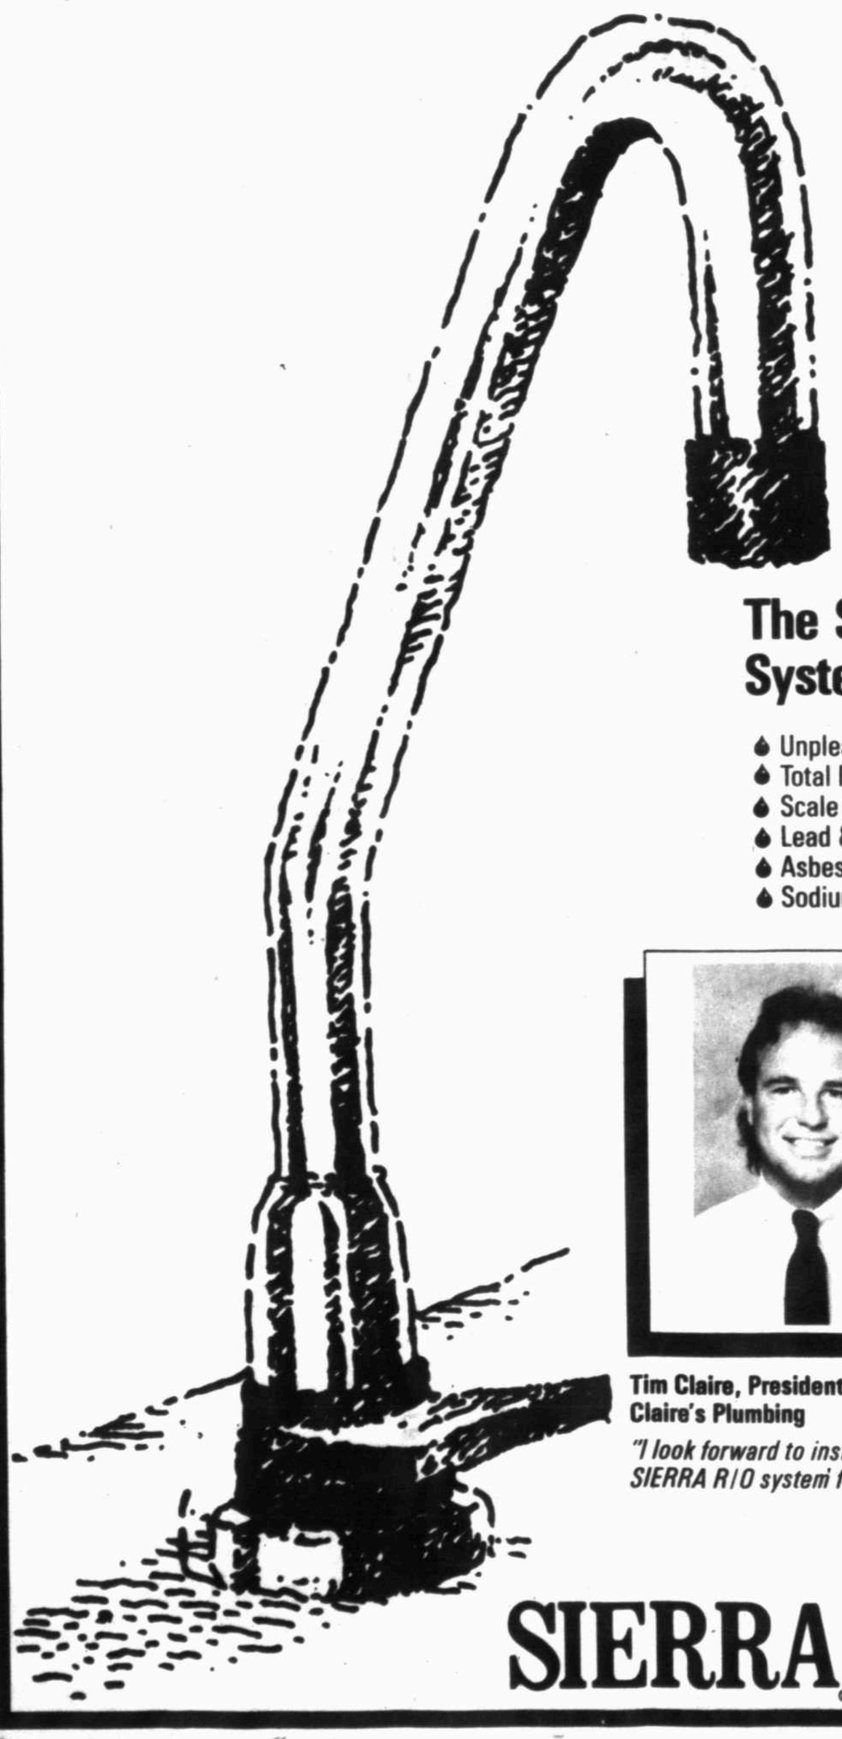

Mostly, the disillusionment comes from the view that for all the trumpeting self-congratulation to be expected in this week's anniversary celebration, the democrats' victory was tenuous and to some extent even cosmetic.

Shooting erupts at Jamaican club

MIAMI (AP) — Bullets showered the dance floor of a crowded Jamaican nightclub during a birthday party early Saturday, killing four people and wounding at least 18, police and hospital officials said.

Several gunmen, possibly linked to Jamaican drug gangs, opened fire at Taste of The Islands at about 3:30 a.m. while about 75 people celebrated a young woman's birthday, police said.

Police didn't immediately release the names of the victims, but family members said one of those killed was Hilda LaToy Reynolds, who had been celebrating her 17th birthday.

"She loved people, she just wanted to go out and have a good time," her sister, Natalie Reynolds, said in a tearful interview with WTVJ-TV in Miami.

The dead included the one woman and three men whose ages weren't available, said an investigator with the Dade County Medical Examiner's office.

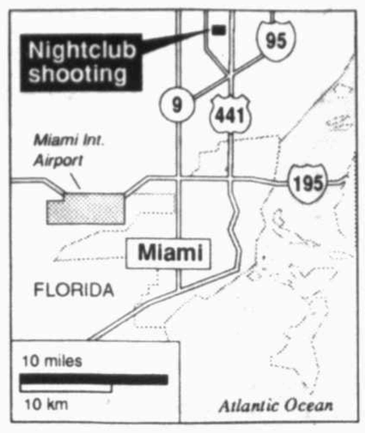

Two of the wounded were in critical but stable condition Saturday, while two others were undergoing surgery at Jackson Memorial Hospital, said spokesman Bruce Fresco. The other victims suffered less serious injuries.

Natalie Reynolds said the large group at the party tried to take cover on the ground when the shooting started.

"I started running and I tried to get out, and I see some guys holding a gun, so I just dropped and put my hands over my head," said Rene Zelaya, another person at the party. "Some people started running over me. I thought I was going to die."

"It's a mess," said police spokesman Patrick Brickman. "Glass is shattered, chairs overturned ... there were 70 to 100 people scurrying with bullets flying."

Two people died on the dance floor. One man died after staggering outside and another died at Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami. Metro-Dade police spokesman Don Blocker said at least 18 others were taken to hospitals. Still others, with minor wounds, were believed to have left in private cars.

Former mayor seeks office, promises no voodoo

FLORALA, Ala. (AP) — Former mayor H.T. Mathis was impeached in 1988, but he's running for the office again, this time with a new promise: no more voodoo.

During his term, Mathis accused his police chief of being a witch, sprinkled a supposedly mysterious dust around City Hall and called a midnight news conference — wearing a white turban, red bathrobe and a rubber snake around his neck — to proclaim National Voodoo Week.

"I had some bad advice when I did that," said Mathis, 89.

Mathis is one of seven candidates on the Sept. 8 ballot for mayor of this sleepy town of about 2,000 on the Florida-Alabama line.

He was elected mayor in 1984 and became unhappy with the police department. One police chief quit. The next chief was 60-year-old A.V. Patrick, a 17-year veteran of the Florala department.

The mayor accused Patrick of corruption, then of being a witch.

"The black folks told me he was," Mathis said. "He'd leave this town and be gone three or four days at a time, and I found out where he was going. . . . He was going to the biggest witch in the state of Georgia."

Mathis started sprinkling "voodoo powder" in the fall of 1987. He said he was told "to sprinkle some kind of starch these witches can't stand. I got some flour or something that would do the same thing.

"I made a mistake. I thought that if I just poured it everywhere, it'd work even better. So I went down there early one morning and just spread it all over the place."

Patrick didn't leave, and the news media began referring to Mathis as the "voodoo mayor." The state attorney general began an impeachment case on charges ranging from improper pardons of convicted drunken drivers to wearing pajamas at a court appearance and threatening a city councilman with a pocket knife.

Divers find ledge that snagged QE2

BOSTON (NYT) — Federal divers Saturday found the rocky ledge where the Queen Elizabeth 2 damaged her hull a week earlier, and they said it was uncharted.

Divers aboard a National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration ship, the Rude, discovered "an expanse of pulverized rocks" this afternoon within a tenth of a mile from where the QE2 had reported running aground on the night of Aug. 7, said a spokesman, Brian Gorman.

Given the location of the ridge and the condition of the rocks, Gorman said, the divers believe they have found the previously "unknown obstruction" that the QE2, the flagship of the Cunard Line, hit off the southeastern coast of Massachusetts.

"It is obviously the track the ship took when it ran aground," Gorman said in a telephone interview from his home in Washington. He said the rocky ledge was in the same area where divers on Friday reported finding a rock with paint on it. He said the paint-covered rock was probably the first of a series of rocks on which the ocean liner severely damaged its hull.

The discovery of the uncharted ridge led the Coast Guard to send a notice to mariners Saturday to warn them about the rocky area, 2½ miles south of Cuttyhunk Island, and it prompted the oceanic administration to speed up its regular update of charts of the area.

No one was hurt and little or no fuel oil was spilled in the accident.

Shoppers turn out for opening of 4.2 million-square-foot mall

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press writer

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — It seems like all of America is lined up in Mall of America.

Crowds at the 4.2 million-square-foot mall-cum-tourist attraction are causing some happy little problems for the nation's largest theme park and shopping center combo — a 15-minute wait for miniature golf; a half-hour to find a parking space; up to an hour for lunch; and more for the roller coaster.

"It's kind of frustrating," said Joe Winebarger of nearby Lakeville as he waited in the 20-minute line at Wolfgang Puck's Pizza Restaurant. "You just have to make up your mind that it's going to take a little longer."

Although an inconvenience for visitors, it's precisely the kind of annoyance the mall's developers hoped for when they spent $625 million to build it.

Melvin Simon & Associates predicted 40 million customers and sales of $1 billion when the phenomenon hits full steam in 1996. But until it opened Tuesday to an estimated 150,000 people, doubters dismissed the nation's largest mall as a fancy way of taking shoppers for a ride.

One newspaper that questioned its staying power mocked a plan to rent cellular phones to shoppers.

All 50 phones were rented by noon on opening day. On Friday, a customer service agent said parents were taking phones with them shopping and sending their children into the seven-acre amusement park Camp Snoopy with beepers, enabling them to page the kids when it was time to go.

The gala opening was barely over before thoughts turned to the 1 millionth visitor. With an estimated 500,000 in the first four days, that should happen this week.

Retailers won't release sales figures, but some say they're running out of merchandise.

Although some of the 350 stores looked a bit deserted, all the big ones — including Macy's, Nordstrom, Bloomingdale's and Sears — were packed.

You couldn't swing a Sylvester the Cat at the Warner Bros. Studio Store without hitting a customer. And at Oshman's, a "try it before you buy it" sporting goods store, there were lines at the batting cage, hockey rink, golf simulator and other tryout areas.

"It's crazy ... every day, until we close," said Oshman's assistant manager Heather Watson, who said sales were 5 to 10 percent better than expected. "We thought we ordered twice as much as we'd need, but we're running out."

More phones, wastebaskets and parking lots are being considered, said mall spokeswoman Maureen Hooley. The 13,000 free spaces have been filling up, forcing people into pay lots across the street.

Because of the crowds, the mall has shelved for now a tram that was supposed to run along the third level to rescue weary shoppers.

John Olson, who rested on a bench after three hours of window shopping, could have used it.

"We'll see it (the mall) now but we'll shop later," he said. "As soon as they get rid of all the people."

Hooley is thrilled with the first week's success, but looks forward to a quieter time so she can shop.

"One of the people in our office has an expression: 'You don't build a church for Easter Sunday, you build it for a regular Sunday,'" she said. "Things will settle down."

Clinton gains nurses' endorsement

NATIONAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Bill Clinton on Saturday capped his last campaign swing before the Republican National Convention with a swipe at President Bush for having James Baker leave his State Department post to head his campaign.

"Mr. Baker left the Secretary of State's job and went over to the White House to choose politics over foreign policy," Clinton told a crowd at a Hispanic festival in this San Diego suburb.

"He said, 'Well, in our second term, we'll target America.' Today he's quoted in the press as saying it's remarkable what Mr. Bush can do when he concentrates on a problem," Clinton said.

Earlier Saturday, Clinton won the endorsement of the nation's largest nurses group, and he pitched his health care program as a crucial element in trying to revive the economy.

"Every day the rising cost of health care is breaking your back," the Democratic presidential candidate told a largely union crowd outside a Los Medanos Hospital in Pittsburg, Calif.

The current system doesn't help people without coverage until "it's too late, too expensive," he said, "and the bill is passed on to the rest of us."

Clinton spoke after receiving the endorsement of the 2-million-member American Nurses Association.

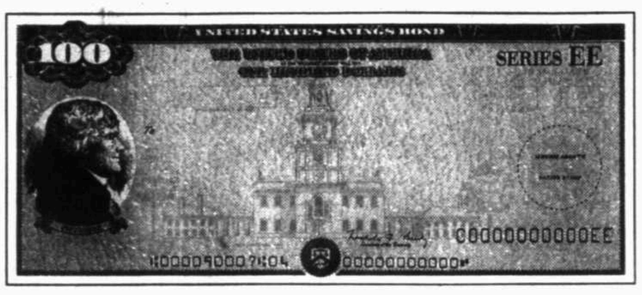

On the last day of a three-day swing through critical California, he told reporters he was bracing for an assault from the Republicans at the GOP national convention this week in Houston. In advance of the convention, polls showed Clinton still with a large lead, about 20 points, but Bush gaining slightly.

"I always thought this was going to be a tough, competitive race," Clinton said. "They're going to hit us pretty hard this week, and we'll just see how we do."

The nursing group's president, Virginia Trotter Betts, said her group had compared the Clinton plan with President Bush's proposals and found Clinton's "amazingly similar to nursing's plan for health care."

"ANA knows that Governor Clinton and Senator Gore are committed to health reform," said Betts.

You're Welcome, Zada.

Zada Cave was working out in her cotton field when she saw the dark pillar of cloud on the horizon, She jumped in the pickup truck and headed north, to the mobile home where she knew her daughter-in-law was alone with two small children.

"It was bad. Barns were scattered. Tin everywhere. The Flower Grove Gin had been hit pretty bad," she recalled of the tornado that struck near Ackerly in June, 1991.

The family was OK. But when they all went back to Zada's's home, the electricity was out. Power lines were down for miles, and Zada told her family not to expect power to be restored for days.

But only a few hours later, the lights came on.

"I don't know how those guys did it. They must've worked all night long. But they got the power up and running, and it sure made life easier for us," she said.

Teachers plan to scold Sen. Specter

■ At annual meeting, educators call for alternative schools for violent students.

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The head of a major teachers union promised Saturday to scold U.S. Sen. Arlen Specter for his conduct at Clarence Thomas' confirmation hearings, but said his group's endorsement of the senator would stand.

Albert Shanker told 4,000 delegates at the annual American Federation of Teachers meeting he would send Specter, R-Pa., a letter that "expresses in no uncertain terms the anger" many members feel about his role in questioning Anita Hill at Thomas' Supreme Court confirmation hearings.

"Despite . . . your long history of support for education, labor, civil rights, women's rights and family issues, I feel compelled to convey to you the depths of displeasure and dissatisfaction felt by our membership because of your insensitive behavior toward Anita Hill during the Senate Judiciary Committee's hearings," Shanker said the letter would begin.

"This behavior, which bordered on hostility, was insensitive to a serious charge of sexual harassment which she was raising," he read.

In other action before adjourning their four-day meeting Saturday afternoon, the delegates approved a proposal to create alternative sites for dangerous and disruptive students, establish a student code of behavior, and develop anti-violence studies and violence-prevention training for school staff.

"Students have the absolute right to learn and teachers have the absolute right to teach in an environment where there are no knifings, shootings, muggings, unruly students or other assaults on the educational experience," said Sandra Feldman, president of the United Federation of Teachers, the New York City affiliate that submitted the resolution for debate.

The Justice Department reported last year that 9 percent of students ages 12 to 19 were crime victims in or around their schools, and 16 percent of students surveyed claimed that one of their teachers had been attacked or threatened by a student.

Shanker announced the Specter action after the delegates defeated a proposal that called on the AFT to censure all the Senate committee members and withdraw the union's support of Specter.

On Aug. 6, Shanker sent Specter a letter of endorsement and a $5,000 campaign contribution for his re-election bid against Democratic challenger Lynn Yeakel.

Yeakel has strong backing from the union's Women Rights Committee, which has harshly criticized Specter's treatment of Hill.

The Aug. 6 letter noted Specter's work on the Labor and Education Appropriations committee and his support for legislation to prevent the permanent replacement of striking workers.

It also applauded him for bucking the Bush administration's efforts to use federal funds to subsidize private schools. The so-called private school choice issue is one of President Bush's key education initiatives. The AFT favors granting parents the right to select among public schools.

In other action, delegates approved resolutions that:

■ Urge school boards and other elected officials to make schools safer by implementing the Occupational Safety and Health Administration's blood-borne disease standards.

The AFT said the incidence of hepatitis B in schools is increasing in part because of the number of children coming into schools from long-term care institutions and the rising number of immigrants who already are infected.

■ Urge the federal government to consider $10.5 billion in emergency aid for sick and needy children by diverting money from the military and applying it to existing health care and education programs, including Head Start and programs for disadvantaged and handicapped students.

■ Urge the federal government to fund comprehensive school health programs that would include school-based or school-linked mental health and counseling services, health screening, immunization programs, parent skill instruction, crisis intervention, child care and health and social support programs.

Hidden psychological troubles may risk heart health, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The price of hiding psychological troubles can be a heart that overreacts to stress, and that might mean a higher risk of heart disease, a new study suggests.

Researchers found that people who were hiding psychological distress even from themselves showed an unusual jump in heartbeat and blood pressure when doing stressful tasks.

Other studies have linked such overreaction to an elevated risk of heart disease, said researcher Jonathan Shedler. Heart disease sets the stage for heart attacks.

"We know that being emotionally distressed, being constantly anxious or constantly depressed isn't so healthy," but the new work suggests that suppressing distress may be even worse, he said.

It is not known what percentage of people who consider themselves psychologically healthy have hidden distress, although it was common in the non-random samples he studied, he said. Such hidden problems are hard to detect in oneself, but they may appear in indirect ways such as unexplained headaches or stomach aches, or friends might notice that a person appears anxious or unhappy, Shedler said.

Shedler is a professor of clinical psychology at the Institute of Advanced Psychological Studies at Adelphi University in Garden City, N.Y. He spoke in an interview before presenting his work Saturday at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association.

Dr. Redford Williams, a behavioral medicine researcher at the Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C., said he found the proposed link to heart disease "quite plausible." He said it follows previous research linking heart disease risk to lack of social support, hostility and "job strain," which is the experience of having little control over a demanding job.

The new study adds more credibility to the idea that psychological factors can promote heart disease, he said in a telephone interview.

Williams also said that the link between heart disease and cardiac overreaction to stress has not yet been proven, although he considers it a strong hypothesis. Shedler said he considers the evidence convincing.

One experiment Shedler reported involved 58 University of Michigan students and staff, with an average age of 21.5 and no known history of heart disease. They filled out assessments of their psychological health as well as a test that probed their earliest memories. The early-memory test was later used by a psychologist to look for signs of emotional distress.

From these two tests, researchers identified nine participants who appeared truly healthy, 18 as having "illusory mental health" as defined by hidden distress, and 11 who reported themselves distressed. The other participants were not classified, often because their responses to the early-memory test were too sparse for analysis.

All participants were hooked up to devices to check their blood pressure and pulse rates in response to stress. Their stressful tasks were to do mental arithmatic while being timed with a stopwatch, make up stories about ambiguous drawings and to say the first thing that came to mind when they heard certain phrases. The drawings and phrases were designed to raise themes that some people find psychologically threatening, Shedler said.

Their responses to stress were analyzed with a measure that combined elevations in blood pressure and pulse rate. People with hidden distress were found to be twice as reactive to stress as genuinely healthy people, Shedler said.

U.S. cautions Bobby Fischer on Yugoslavia chess match

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Treasury Department has alerted an lawyer representing Bobby Fischer that the reclusive chess master would violate American economic sanctions against Yugoslavia if he goes ahead with his planned return match with Boris Spassky beginning Sept. 2.

A Treasury Department official said Saturday that if Fischer decided to "disregard the law and regulations, we would then have to take appropriate enforcement action."

Fischer, who is said to be in Yugoslavia, could potentially face fines or even imprisonment.

American sanctions, part of a broader United Nations effort, prohibit travel for business purposes, the official said, and the $5 million match would be considered a commercial transaction under Treasury regulations.

The Treasury Department has been in contact with Fischer's lawyer for two weeks, but the official said he did not know whether Fischer had been alerted to the warning.

Maradona still out

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Diego Maradona on Saturday rejected Napoli's reply to his conditions to return to Italy following his 15-month suspension for cocaine use.

"At this time there is no chance that Diego will return to Italy," Maradona's manager, Marcos Franchi, said Saturday upon his return from Europe. "At this time there is no chance that Diego will return to Italy. Several clubs are interested in his transfer, including Spain's Seville, France's Olympique Marseille and Portugal's Oporto."

Maradona was suspended after testing positive for cocaine following Napoli's match against Bari on March 17, 1991. The suspension, extended world-wide by FIFA, ended June 30.

Maradona is demanding that Napoli write off $270,000 in fine and pay him $5.4 million to complete his contract, which runs through June 1993. He also wants a luxury villa and a personal trainer.

Napoli accepted only one of Maradona's 21 conditions — to allow him to return to Argentina as often as necessary to continue his drug treatment.

Franchi said Napoli must either cancel Maradona's contract — which the club has so far refused to do — or that a club from a different league must request his transfer. In the latter case, FIFA would seek arbitration.

Angels rally in ninth

■ Midland pinch hitter Dan Rumsey doubles and scores on a pair of San Antonio errors as the Angels widen their first-place lead in the Texas League West.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

It seems like only yesterday that the Midland Angels were scratching their heads, wondering what the problem was and hoping the San Antonio Missions would just hurry up and leave town.

But the way things have been going the last couple of games, the Angels are scratching no more. Nor do they wish to see the Missions in such a hurry to go.

In the blink of an eye Saturday night, the Angels went to hardly having any breathing room atop the Texas League West pack, to expanding their lead to 2½ games over the second-place Missions.

The Angels earned their second straight win, a 6-5 decision over San Antonio, when pinch hitter Dan Rumsey doubled and came home on back-to-back San Antonio errors on the same play in the bottom of the ninth.

Midland High opens its '92 football practices Monday

■ New head coach Ronnie Reeger begins his first fall at MHS.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

New Midland High head football coach Ronnie Reeger has already been introduced to his 1992 Bulldogs during spring training drills, but Monday the relationship gets back into full swing.

MHS opens fall drills at 9 a.m. Monday and the 'Dogs will hit the field again at 5 p.m. Reeger says those workouts will be around two hours each.

"We're in shorts and helmets for the first four days and we are going to review a lot of what we did in spring training," Reeger said. "We'll put in our offense and all of our kicking game and work on some things we just didn't get around to during the spring because of time limitation."

Reeger felt a lot was accomplished during spring drills, but feels some major work lies ahead.

"We felt like we got the kids in the right spots during the spring," Reeger said. "Now we've got to give them a lot of work in those positions so they will feel comfortable with what we are doing."

The Bulldogs will not don full pads until Friday, but when they do, the players (and some of the coaches) will literally be in for a rude awakening.

"Teachers have in-service Friday and that will involve our coaches," Reeger noted. "So, we're going to have to workout at 6:30 that morning.

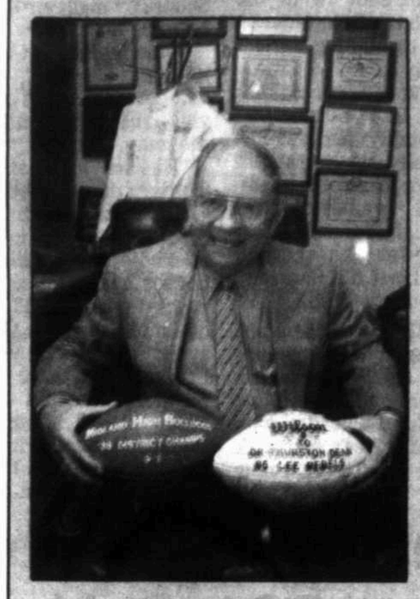

"I've been up that early during the summer and I say that there is enough daylight to work out, but some of my coaches, who haven't seen that time of day, aren't so sure."

Reeger had his entire coaching staff in place for spring training, so there will be no surprises for the MHS athletes Monday.

Charles Lipsey and Robert Sexton came with Reeger from Greenville. Lipsey is the offensive coordinator and coaches quarterbacks. Sexton works with the defensive secondary and offensive receivers.

Buster Barnes joins Reeger from El Paso Coronado and is the defensive coordinator and works with linebackers. James Johnson, who played football at Texas Tech when Midland AD Jack Tayrien was there, comes to Midland via Temple and will coach defensive ends and running backs.

Junior varsity coaches, who all have varsity duties, are not new to the Bulldogs. Roy Blair, Monty Stumbaugh, Craig Raughton and Rene Cordova return from last year. Stumbaugh was recently named as the new head coach for boys track. He has been the girls track coach for the past three years.

ST. LOUIS — In a third-round showdown between Nick Faldo and some hopeful but uncredentialed Americans, the English owner of the British Open title blinked first.

In fact, it was more like a grimace as Faldo all but blew himself out of the PGA championship Saturday.

Sauers

The world's top-ranked player, who seemed to have the deck stacked in his favor, fretted and fussed his way to a 5-over-par 76 in the third round and finds himself eight shots behind Gene Sauers going into today's final round.

The placid Sauers ran in a 20-foot eagle putt on the 17th hole as the highlight of a gritty 70 that gave him a 206 total, seven under par and two in front of the pack at the three-quarter mark of the last of the year's Big Four golf events.

Richardson does Cowboys in again with late touchdown

Associated Press

IRVING — Former Texas A&M quarterback Bucky Richardson threw a 22-yard touchdown pass to Wade Hopkins with 31 seconds to play to give the Houston Oilers a 17-16 exhibition victory over the Dallas Cowboys on Saturday night.

The game gave Houston (3-0) a sweep of a two-game exhibition slate against the Cowboys. The Oilers beat Dallas 34-23 in Tokyo two weeks ago.

Richardson took the Oilers 72 yards in six plays, consuming only 1:11, for the winning score.

Brad Daluiso's final-second 67-yard field-goal attempt for Dallas was blocked.

It appeared the Cowboys (1-2) were poised for a 16-10 victory over their cross-state rivals after Troy Aikman passed for 140 yards in the first half and the defense stuffed Houston's run-and-shoot attack for most of the night.

Cowboys safety James Washington, who ended his contract holdout this week after coach Jimmy Johnson gave his starting job to Robert Williams, intercepted Cody Carlson's pass at the Dallas 5 and returned it 30 yards with 6:47 left in the third quarter.

Backup quarterback Steve Beuerlein then led the Cowboys on a 65-yard drive that ended with a 10-yard touchdown pass to Kelvin Martin that made it 16-7 with 4:04 remaining in the third quarter.

Beuerlein, who also completed passes of 20 and 16 yards on the drive, was 5 of 7 for 61 yards after relieving Aikman in the second half.

In the fourth quarter, the Oilers mounted a 14-play, 60-yard drive but settled for Al Del Greco's 37-yard field goal with 5:11 to go.

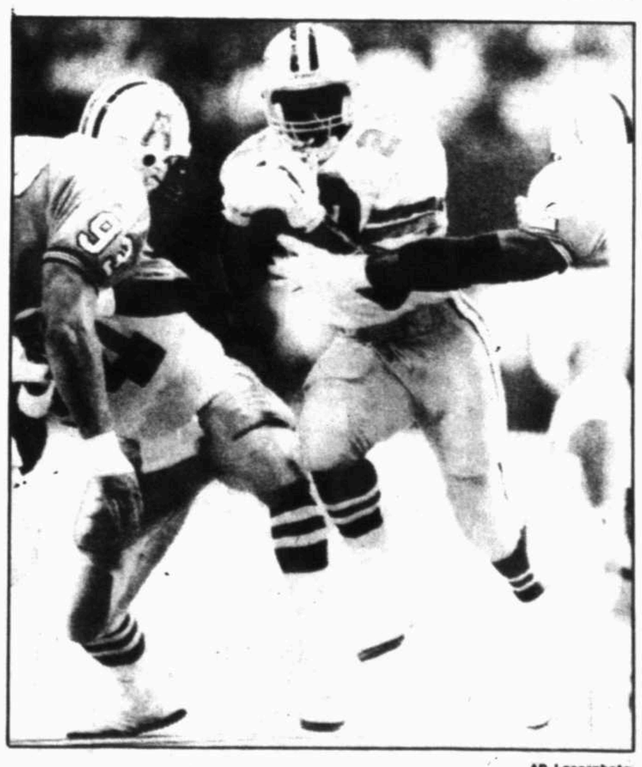

Dallas drove to the Houston 16 to start the first quarter, but was forced to settle for Daluiso's 39-yard field goal with 9:03 remaining after the Oilers' George Bethune sacked Aikman on third down.

Houston countered with a 12-play, 80-yard drive that ended with Warren Moon's 14-yard touchdown pass to Ernest Givins, who beat Dallas safety Ray Horton in the corner of the end zone.

Moon completed 6 of 7 passes for 74 yards on the drive. He was 8 of 11 for 87 yards before Carlson replaced him late in the first half.

The Cowboys took a 9-7 lead with 1:11 remaining in the second quarter on Aikman's 30-yard scoring

Midland Triathletes compete at state

SAN ANGELO — Midland's Karen Hagner brought home a first-place finish in her age group here last Sunday in the state championship Wool Capital Triathlon.

Hagner covered the course, which combines swimming, bicycling and running, in a time of 2:27.12. Other Midlanders making top five finished in their divisions were Rhonda Grubb (3rd), Robin Dobler (5th) and Spencer Roberts (4th).

Here are last Sunday's Midland results from the state championship Wool Capital Triathlon at San Angelo:

WOMEN — Class D: 1. Karen Hagner, 2:27.12. Class E: 5. Robin Dobler, 2:59.18. Class F: 3. Rhonda Grubb, 2:50.10.

MEN — Class D: 4. Spencer Roberts, 2:08.07; 17. Jay Pulte, 2:31.02. Class E: 10. Dave Smith, 2:13.33; 17. Jay Kelly, 2:28.49. Class H: 6. Dee Simmons, 2:31.50.

Foursome wins Olds scramble

The foursome of Larry Snyder, Don Bishop, David Childress and Jack Swallow qualified for the sectional playoff by winning the Midland Country Club round of the Oldsmobile Golf Scramble Saturday at MCC.

The quarter shot a gross score of 59, out-dueling Lynn Conine, Bill Wallace, Terry Duffey and John Kennedy, whose 64 earned second place.

The sectional qualifier will be either Aug. 31 or Sept. 1 in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Faldo's stumbling score a rarity

By Jim Litke
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS — Which of the following is true?

a) The earth is flat.

b) You can always fry an egg on a St. Louis sidewalk in the middle of August.

c) Anheuser-Busch is closing down its breweries for lack of customers.

d) Nick Faldo shot 76 in the third round with the PGA Championship his for the taking.

The answer is d).

This has been a strange PGA Championship in a number of ways, most notably perhaps because this usually steamy Mississippi River town has seen unseasonably cool weather and unexpectedly high scores. But few things as strange as what the best golfer on the planet did Saturday at Bellerive Country Club.

Faldo began the day at 4-under, tied with two men whose names wouldn't strike fear in the hearts of most miniature golfers, and just two strokes behind a leader who climbed into the driver's seat with one eye glued to the rearview mirror.

By the close of business, however, the only person Faldo had managed to scare was himself. And the only thing surprisingly plucky third-round leader Gene Sauers could make out of Faldo in the distance was the smoking wreck the Englishman had made of his game.

"I just lost it," Faldo muttered to a PGA official as he left the scoring trailer at 214, now trailing Sauers by eight strokes and par by one. "I don't know."

Some measure of Faldo's reputation was salvaged when Sauers, who shot 70, came into the interview room and called him "still the man to beat."

"He has all that experience," Sauers added. "He's still there."

But that was mistaking shadow for substance. Faldo coaxed a pair of birdies out of his bag, but six bogeys also jumped out when he popped open the lid. And that was one more than the total he carded at St. Andrews to win his second British Open three years ago.

Indeed, to find the last time Faldo played so miserably with something on the line, you either have to turn back the clock — to 1988, when he lost a playoff and the U.S. Open to Curtis Strange by shooting 75 — or cross the ocean — to Ireland, where in June he squandered a five-stroke lead on the final day before appropriating the national title in a playoff against somebody named Wayne Westner.

If Faldo had a clue Saturday that he was an accident waiting to happen, he didn't let anyone else know. And even if he did, like the proverbial performer up on the high wire, he wouldn't have been able to hide it for long. A minute or so after introductions were out of the way on the first tee, Faldo hooked his tee ball into the left rough and set his jaw square for what he must have known would be golf's equivalent of a death march.

He saved par at the first with a chip to six feet and made an even more impressive escape at the second. After driving under a stand of oak trees on the left side of the 437-yard, par-4 dogleg left, he threaded an iron through the woods and into the front bunker, exploded to four feet and coolly sank the putt.

But the nerves — even Faldo's nerves — can endure only so much.

At the sixth green, his first stab with the putter was 15 feet below the hole, his second a good seven feet past. Bogey.

On the fringe at the 10th green, he was 35 feet away with his first putt and still six feet from home when he tried to negotiate the second. Bogey.

On the 13th tee, he stretched an iron across his shoulder blades and practiced his full swing when what he should have been working on was his putting stroke. Bogey.

On the 14th tee, he started twirling his 3-wood like a baton after yanking the tee ball way left. Again. Bogey.

At the 15th green, he had a 90-foot putt — for par. Bogey.

At the 18th green, he had a two-foot putt — for par. Bogey.

"It will be a hard day," Faldo said about Sunday after leaving himself 11 golfers to climb over. "It's not impossible, so I just have to find out what I'm doing wrong."

With that, Faldo headed in the direction of the practice tee which, considering what had gone before it, seemed like the best idea he'd had all day.

PGA: Maggert shoots 65

(From 1B)

Six others are ahead of Faldo, including Nick Price, who holds a certain responsibility for the emergence of John Daly as one of the game's most colorful and controversial characters, and Jeff Maggert, tied for second at 208.

Maggert, a graduate of the Ben Hogan Tour, came from seven strokes back with a bogey-free 65, the best round of the tournament on the long, difficult Bellerive Country Club layout.

Price, whose withdrawal from this tournament a year ago provided Daly with a place in the field and set it up for his eventual victory, dropped a monster, 35-yard birdie putt on the way to a 68.

Jim Gallagher and John Cook, the latter victimized by Faldo in the British Open, were next at 210. Cook shot 67 and Gallagher had a 72.

Mark Brooks, who chipped in for a birdie on the 17th hole, was the only other player under par after 54 holes. His 68 put him at 211.

Gil Morgan, with a 73, was at par 213.

The distraught Faldo, three times the British Open winner and twice winner of the Masters, scattered eight 5s across his scorecard and was in a large group at 214 after squandering a position two strokes off the lead.

"I just played badly," he muttered after missing a pair of putts from less than six feet on the last two holes.

"I just lost it," said Faldo, who was the only contender with extensive major-tournament experience coming into the day's play.

But there's still a glimmer of hope, he said, of becoming the first British-born player in 62 years to take this title.

"It's not impossible," Faldo said. "I've just got to go for it. I have nothing to lose. I'll just see if I can play well enough to go for it and make it happen, let it happen, or whatever."

But there was a certain lack of conviction in the brave talk. He shrugged and walked away, turning his back on a sad and sorry Saturday.

It was ugly.

His radar drives developed a glitch and his putter got a twitch. It all went wrong.

He strayed into the rough with remarkable frequency. He slashed and hacked out of rough, flailed away in bunkers and a couple of times twirled his driver around his head as still another one headed for the hay.

He three-putted the sixth, 10th and 12th.

And he even had to sprint down the fairway to catch up after making a hurried visit to a comfort station.

While Faldo was falling victim to one of the worst days of his golfing life, Sauers was handling the pressure of his first lead in one of the game's major events with remarkable aplomb — and a display of clutch putting that would have pleased a young Ben Crenshaw.

"I kept leaving myself those 4-5-foot second putts, but I kept on making them and that helped my confidence," Sauers said.

"I was having trouble getting the ball close to the hole, but I told my caddy we just had to be patient and keep trying to get it, oh, 20 feet away, where I had a chance.

"That happened on the back," he said.

He broke in front alone with a 25-footer on the 15th, lost a stroke when he missed the green on the 16th, then went two in front with a curling downhill 20-footer for eagle on the 17th.

Steinhauer's 67 worth front spot at LPGA du Maurier

Associated Press

WINNIPEG, Manitoba — Sherri Steinhauer shot her second 67 in three days Saturday to take a one-stroke lead into the final round of the $700,000 LPGA du Maurier Classic.

Steinhauer mastered winds gusting to 25 mph and fired an eagle and four birdies on the 6,257-yard St. Charles Country Club course.

Her 54-hole total of 207, 9 under par, left her one stroke ahead of July Dickinson, who also shot 67 Saturday.

Tammie Green, the 1989 du Maurier winner, had a 70 and was in third place, four shots behind Steinhauer.

Steinhauer was one of five golfers to share the lead with 67s Thursday and was two off the pace after shooting a 73 Friday.

She was undaunted by the stiff winds, which have been picking up as the tournament continues.

"I think it's a challenge," she said. "It makes you think. You have to hit a lit of different kinds of shots. It's fun to play in because you need an imagination."

Steinhauer said things have been going her way, and that was apparent on No. 5, where she chipped in for an eagle, and on No. 12.

Archer leads Bruno's seniors

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — George Archer shot a 68 on Saturday to overtake faltering first-day leader Jack Kiefer and build a one-stroke lead over Jim Colbert after two rounds of the $700,000 Bruno's Classic senior golf tournament.

Archer's 4-under round left him at 10-under 134. Colbert, with the day's best round, a 65, was at 135.

Kiefer, who shot a course-record 63 in taking a three-stroke advantage on Friday, stumbled to a 76 on Saturday and was five shots back of Archer heading into Sunday's final round over the 6,992-yard Greystone Golf Club south of Birmingham.

Mike Hill and Dick Goetz, each with consecutive 68s, were at 136, Rockey Thompson shot 69 for 137 and Gene Littler was at 138 after a 67. Joining Keifer at 139 were Jim Albus, with a 69, and Chi Chi Rodriguez, who shot 71.

"We ought to have a good shootout Sunday," said Archer, who overcame two bogeys with six birdies.

"I never had a game plan in my life," he said. "I hit the ball, find it and hit it again. Hopefully, I find it in the fairway.

"I like shooting 66s and 68s," he said.

Colbert missed only one green, the par-3 seventh, during a 7-under-par round.

Would-be Giants owner makes public appearance

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The man who would assume control of the San Francisco Giants if the team moves to Florida made his first public comments on the deal Saturday and said he was cautiously optimistic of approval.

Vincent J. Naimoli, who on Aug. 6 signed an agreement in principle to purchase the Giants from Bob Lurie and move the team to the Florida Suncoast Dome in St. Petersburg, held a news conference in the ballpark Saturday with three others from the proposed six-man ownership group.

Naimoli said his group wasn't concerned by reports detailing how much money the Giants have been losing in San Francisco, where attendance has been a problem in windy Candlestick Park. He said his decision to buy the team was based on research on how the team would fare financially in Florida.

"Consequently the economics of the San Francisco Giants are important from a historical standpoint but really don't have a lot of effect on what our economics would be here," Naimoli said.

The Tampa Bay Baseball Ownership Group signed an agreement in principle to buy the Giants from Lurie for $111 million, but the proposed deal faces opposition from San Francisco city leaders. The sale and move must be approved by 10 National League owners and eight American owners, but commissioner Fay Vincent said a vote during baseball's September quarterly meetings is unlikely.

"This ownership group has done everything by the rules ... and we believe that there's every good reason that we should be and will be approved," said Jack Critchfield, a Tampa leader who helped broker the deal.

"We have a code of rules to live within," Naimoli said. "We believe living by those rules will influence the owners and the commissioner to approve the relocation."

About 500 fans attended the news conference. Critchfield told the crowd that he hoped the next such gathering will be on the day the group's bid is approved.

"Obviously that's in the hands of the owners, but we hope they will act in the best interests of the San Francisco Giants and our best interests," Critchfield said.

Naimoli, chairman of Anchor Industries International Inc. in Tampa, was joined at the news conference by Tampa lawyer J. Rex Farrior Jr. and Vincent Piazza and Vincent N. Tirendi, who share ownership of Phoenix Technologies Inc., a computer company at Valley Forge, Pa. The other two investors did not attend: R. Mark Bostick, president of ComCar Industries in Auburndale and Lance Ringhaver, a Tampa-area businessman.

Naimoli said his group would take out loans to buy the team but was capable of paying cash.

"I am told by bankers who I've been talking to that this is a sterling loan," Naimoli said.

About 21,000 season-ticket reservations were sold during St. Petersburg's unsuccessful campaign to win a NL expansion franchise. Another 5,000 reservations have been sold since the agreement to purchase the Giants was announced.

Anderson not worried about Tigers sale

Associated Press

DETROIT — Sparky Anderson says he has nothing to lose from the sale of the Detroit Tigers. A guaranteed contract gives him financial security and his reputation likely would make any job search a short one.

Anderson

But if he were fired after the sale is complete, "it would be the greatest disappointment of my career," Anderson told the Detroit Free Press in Saturday's editions.

Major league owners this week are expected to approve Mike Ilitch's purchase of the team from Tom Monaghan. Monaghan, the Tigers' owner since 1983, recently fired president Bo Schembechler and chairman Jim Campbell, apparently to begin clearing the decks for the ownership turnover.

The 58-year-old Anderson, who has managed for 22 seasons in the major leagues, has been cautious in discussing his future. His contract is guaranteed for two more seasons and he has suggested he would have little trouble finding another job if the Tigers let him go.

But Anderson, the Tigers' manager since June 1979, said he has "grown attached to Detroit."

"The way I feel about Detroit is difficult to explain to someone who hasn't been to Detroit," said Anderson, who lives in Thousand Oaks, Calif., during the offseason.

His 14-year tenure in Detroit has included veto power over any player moves, a "special deal" Anderson says he had with Campbell. That agreement was not in his contract and could be rescinded under the new regime.

In an interview with Free Press columnist Mitch Albom published Thursday, Ilitch said he has made no decisions on the manager.

"I haven't got any thoughts on Sparky yet," said Ilitch, who owns the NHL Detroit Red Wings and Arena Football League Detroit Drive in addition to his pizza empire, Little Caesars Enterprises Inc.

"If I get the team, I'm gonna sit down and make some judgements."

Anderson conceded that could be an indication his future in Detroit might be in jeopardy.

"I know you can read it that way," he said. "But the way I read it — and maybe I'm wrong — is that Mr. Ilitch doesn't want to say anything until he officially gets the club."

Before he was fired as manager of the Cincinnati Reds after the 1978 season, Anderson won two World Series and finished lower than second in the NL West only once in nine seasons. He won a third World Series with the Tigers in 1984 and is among the winningest managers in major league history. His career record was 1,976-1,585 through Friday.

If his days in Detroit are numbered, Anderson says he will move on quietly.

"You won't hear a word from me about it," he said.

Teams already thinking free agents

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Although the weather is hot and the season still has seven weeks to go, agents and general managers already are looking at the list of potential free agents.

Need a hitter? How about Barry Bonds, Ruben Sierra, Kirby Puckett or Cal Ripken? Need a starting pitcher? How about David Cone, Greg Maddux, Doug Drabek or Greg Swindell? Looking for a reliever? There's Jeff Russell or Tom Henke.

As of Saturday, 183 players on 40-man rosters were potentially eligible for free agency following the World Series. It's a group that has the potential to be strongest free agent class ever.

The list of potential eligibles includes 28 players whom clubs have options on for 1993, and 38 (including four with options) covered by the restriction against repeat free agency within five years.

The latter group can file for free agency only if their current clubs don't offer salary arbitration in the five days following the World Series. The rest can file for free agency in the two weeks following the World Series.

Only a few players — most notably Wally Joyner of Kansas City and Dennis Eckersley of Oakland — have signed extensions during the season, partly because teams would then have to protect them in the Nov. 17 expansion draft. Once a player files for free agency, he is off his former team's roster and doesn't need to be among the 15 players protected in the expansion draft's first round.

The key dates remain the same this winter as in recent years. Clubs have until Dec. 7 to offer salary arbitration to their former players who become free agents or they lose signing rights until May 1.

Players who receive arbitration offers have until Dec. 19 to accept or reject them, and those who reject offers may still re-sign with their old teams through Jan. 8.

Liberal, Kan., takes NBC semifinal victory

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Toby Smith hit two home runs as Liberal, Kan., beat Anchorage, Alaska, 6-0 in the semifinals of the National Baseball Congress World Series on Saturday.

Jay P. Roberge also had two hits for Liberal, which took a 5-0 lead after two innings. Smith's second homer came in the eighth inning, and ended the game on the six-run rule.

Winning pitcher Brian Carpenter struck out six while giving up nine hits and three walks, but Anchorage stranded 12 runners.

Kelly Wunsch started for Anchorage but left after facing four batters in the second inning as Liberal scored three times.

Relief pitcher Danny Choi held Liberal to only two hits in six innings, but one was the home run by Smith that closed the game.

ANGELS: West up for grabs

(From 1B)

Just moments before Rumsey crossed the plate with the winning run, the Angel outfielder who was pinch hitting for Mark Wasinger, felt he had ended the game with a routine long fly ball to centerfield.

"I though he caught it," Rumsey said. "I saw the ball hang up and I held up once."

But Rumsey's hit smacked not into center fielder Vernon Spearman's glove, but off the wall. By the time Spearman retrieved the ball, Rumsey had pulled into second. Shortstop Tim Barker fielded Spearman's cut-off throw, spun and threw wildly home, trying to nail Bobby Jones, who had singled earlier and represented the Angels' tying run.

When Barker's throw went wild, Rumsey broke for third as San Antonio catcher Hector Ortiz tracked the ball down. Then it was Ortiz's turn to throw wildly, trying to throw out Rumsey as he pulled into third. But the throw by Ortiz rolled down the third base line into left field and Rumsey came home to give Midland the win in one of those dramatic come-from-behind affairs the Angels made a habit of winning last month against Shreveport.

"I saw the cut-off throw go offline and I went to third," Rumsey recalled. "Thank God they threw it away."

Midland manager Don Long couldn't fault the Missions for their two errors that ended the game. Not after his own team had made four errors, two of which led directly to San Antonio runs.

"In that situation," Long said, "as long as they've already allowed the tying run to score, you might as well be aggressive and make the throw to third to try and get the winning run."

In the Midland fifth, Angel right-fielder Garret Anderson hit a rare inside-the-park homer, which scored three runs. Anderson echoed Rumsey's feelings after the game by saying he felt Spearman, the San Antonio center fielder, had caught the ball.

"When I first hit it," Anderson said, "I thought he was going to make the catch. But when I got off first base, I took off as hard as I could."

It was when he rounded second that Anderson said he knew he had his first home run of the year as an Angel. His hit rolled all the way to the wall and Anderson crossed home standing.

Both starting pitchers were roughed up, but neither received a decision. San Antonio's Mark Mimbs threw five innings, allowing four earned runs on eight hits. Midland's Paul Swingle also allowed four earned runs on eight hits, but in just three innings pitched.

Midland reliever Troy Percival (2-0) pitched one inning for the victory; San Antonio's Todd Williams (5-4) was the loser after allowing two hits and two runs — one earned — in 1⅓ innings. San Antonio reliever Steve Allen left early after straining a shoulder muscle.

With just 16 games left in the regular season, the Angels find themselves in a heated four-team battle for the division's second-half title. But Long said he would rather be in a tension-filled battle than not at this stage of the season. And with his team's attitude apparently on the mend from the first two games against San Antonio, Long looks forward to the stretch run.

"We've talked about it (being aggressive), and they've been approaching it (differently)," Long said. "We've got 16 games left and everybody in the division has a chance."

Witt walks 10 in Ranger loss

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Bobby Witt tied a Rangers record by walking 10 batters in 4 2-3 innings, and the Detroit Tigers took advantage and beat Texas 10-3 Saturday night.

AL Roundup

Travis Fryman drove in three runs and the Tigers drew a total of 13 walks in winning for the fifth consecutive time in Texas. The Rangers have lost six in a row overall at Arlington Stadium, and 10 of the last 11.

Witt (9-11), matched the club mark for walks that he set in 1990 and which was tied by Charlie Hough later that season. Witt gave up six walks in the the first three innings, and eventually allowed six runs on six hits.

John Doherty (4-2), a career reliever until 10 days ago, pitched six innings and gave up three runs. Mike Munoz worked three innings for his first career save.

Tony Phillips drew a walk to start the game and later scored on Mickey Tettleton's sacrifice fly. Tettleton walked with one out in the third, leading to an RBI single by Scott Livingstone and a sacrifice fly by Gary Pettis.

Witt walked two batters in loading the bases in the fitth, and then walked Lou Whitaker to force home a run. Edwin Nunez relieved and gave up a two-run single to Fryman.

Detroit scored four times in the seventh on a throwing error by Nunez, a sacrifice fly by Whitaker and RBI singles from Fryman and Cecil Fielder. Fielder leads the majors with 99 RBIs.

Texas scored single runs in the bottom of the third, fourth and sixth innings. Jeff Huson had a sacrifice fly, Fielder made an error at first base and Geno Petralli singled for the runs.

Athletics 9, Angels 5

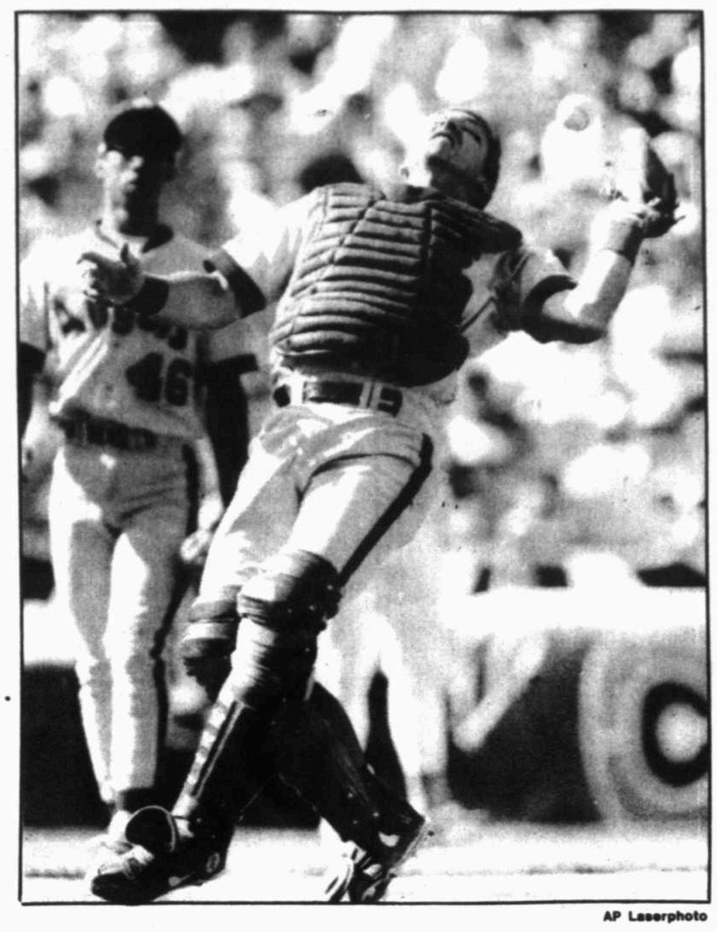

OAKLAND, Calif. — Rickey Henderson and Jose Canseco homered in a six-run eighth inning as the Oakland Athletics rallied from a five-run deficit and beat the California Angels.

Lance Blankenship's RBI double off Julio Valera and run-scoring singles by Harold Baines and Canseco off Mike Butcher started Oakland's comeback in the seventh.

Walt Weiss singled off Chruck Crim (6-5) leading off the eighth and Blankenship reached on a bunt single when third baseman Damion Easley looked toward second before throwing on a sacrifice attempt. Henderson followed with his 11th homer of the season for a 6-5 lead, only his fourth hit in 31 at-bats against the Angels.

Oakland padded its lead off Steve Frey on Mark McGwire's sacrifice fly and Canseco's two-run homer, his 20th of the season and first since July 17.

Jim Corsi (2-1) pitched 1 1-3 innings for the victory, Oakland's 16th in 20 games.

California catcher Mike Fitzgerald drops a ball popped up by Oakland's Mark McGwire, allowing McGwire to reach base.

Angels starter Julio Valera allowed two runs and five hits in six-plus innings. Ron Darling gave up five runs and seven hits in 5 1-3 innings.

California took a 2-0 lead in the third after an error by second baseman Mike Bordick, Oakland's first error 62 innings. Ken Oberkfell and Junior Felix followed with RBI singles.

Darling walked Lee Stevens with the bases loaded in the sixth and Mike Fitzerald hit a two-run single.

Yankees 4, White Sox 2

CHICAGO — Rookie Sam Militello made his second straight impressive start and Bernie Williams homered for the third time in nine days as the New York Yankees beat the Chicago White Sox.

Militello (2-0), a 22-year-old right-hander, allowed one hit in seven shutout innings against Boston last Sunday in his major league debut. This time he allowed two runs and six hits in eight innings, struck out four and walked three. Steve Farr finished with a one-hit ninth for his 17th save.

Charlie Hough (5-9) gave up three runs and eight hits in seven innings, struck out three and walked three.

Williams, recalled from Columbus of the International League on July 31, put the Yankees ahead with a home run in the third. Roberto Kelly then singled, stole second and scored on a double by Danny Tartabull, who was activated Friday. Mel Hall's single made it 3-0.

Chicago got a run in the fourth when Frank Thomas walked and scored on singles by George Bell and Dan Pasqua. Dale Sveum, acquired Monday from Philadelphia, hit his first home run for Chicago in the seventh.

Williams hit a run-scoring single in the eighth off Terry Leach, his third hit of the game.

Royals 5, Orioles 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Wally Joyner singled home the tying run and George Brett followed with a sacrifice fly as the Kansas Royals scored twice in the ninth inning and rallied past the Baltimore Orioles.

Struggling relief ace Gregg Olson (1-5) took over to start the ninth and Curtis Wilkerson singled on the first pitch and David Howard walked on four pitches.

After Gary Thurman bunted into a forceout at third, Joyner singled for his third hit of the game and Brett hit a long fly to left field. Olson has blown six of his last 15 save chances, and seven of 35 this season.

Rusty Meacham (6-3) gave up six hits and one run in 3 1-3 innings.

Red Sox 3, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Danny Darwin pitched a four-hitter for his first complete game in two seasons, and Wade Boggs hit a two-run single in the ninth inning as the Boston Red Sox beat the Milwaukee Brewers.

Two errors helped the Red Sox load the bases in the ninth against Bill Wegman (10-10). Jack Clark was safe when shortstop Pat Listach bobbled his one-out grounder up the middle. Jody Reed then singled in the hole between third and shortstop, and Tony Pena hit a bouncer that third baseman Kevin Seitzer dropped while attempting to force pinch-runner Tom Barrett at third.

Henry stops Cubs cold

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Rookie Butch Henry scattered eight hits for his first career complete game as the Houston Astros beat the Chicago Cubs 5-0 Saturday for their fourth victory in five games.

Jeff Bagwell and Juan Guerrero drove in two runs each for the Astros, 8-11 on their 26-game road trip caused by the Republican National Convention.

NL Roundup

Henry (4-8) struck out eight and walked none in his first victory in six starts since July 12. It was his 24th start of the season.

Jim Bullinger (1-3) made his first major league start after 30 relief appearances this year and was hurt by three errors, including two by second baseman Ryne Sandberg, a nine-time Gold Glove winner. Bullinger allowed three runs — all unearned — and five hits in 3 2-3 innings, struck out one and walked two.

Houston went ahead in the first when Steve Finley reached on shortstop Jose Vizcaino's fielding error, stole second and scored on Bagwell's single. Bagwell took third on a single by Eric Anthony and scored Ken Caminiti's groundout.

Henry reached on Sandberg's second fielding error in the fourth, Craig Biggio walked, Steve Finley sacrificed and Bagwell hit a sacrifice fly.

Houston made it 4-0 in the fifth when Luis Gonzalez, who had four hits, tripled off Ken Patterson and scored on Guerrero's sacrifice fly. Guerrero single in another run in the ninth.

Reds 5, Padres 4

CINCINNATI — Joe Oliver's sacrifice fly scored Dave Martinez in the bottom of the ninth inning and gave the Cincinnati Reds a victory over the San Diego Padres.

The Reds scored twice in the eighth to tie it, then beat former teammate Randy Myers (2-4) in the ninth to hold onto second place in the National League West.

Darnell Coles opened the ninth with a double and took third on Paul O'Neill's ground out. Martinez pinch ran for Coles, and Myers chose to pitch to Oliver, who hit the first pitch to Tony Gwynn deep in right field. Martinez scored standing up.

Rob Dibble (2-4) pitched a perfect ninth for the win.

Padres starter Craig Lefferts took a 4-2 lead into the eighth, but his bullpen let it get away.

Joe Oliver and Bip Roberts singled to end Lefferts' performance, and Jose Melendez gave up a two-out RBI single to Barry Larkin and a pinch-hit single to Jeff Branson that tied it.

Branson's hit left him 10 for 21 with a team-high eight RBIs as a pinch hitter.

Until the eighth, all the Reds could manage was a pair of solo homers by Reggie Sanders. Lefferts gave up eight hits and just one walk in his 7 1-3 innings.

The Padres scored their four runs off Tom Bolton, who continued to struggle as the fifth starter. Bolton has a 5.23 ERA in six starts.

Tony Fernandez opened the game with a single, stole second and continued to third on Oliver's wild throw, and scored on Gwynn's ground out.

Sanders' first homer tied it in the bottom of the first, but Kevin Ward hit his first homer since May 17 in the Padres' second for a 3-1 lead. It was his third of the season.

Sanders led off the Reds' fourth with his eighth homer, cutting it to 3-2. Bolton gave it back in the fifth, when the Padres loaded the bases on a single by Fernandez and a pair of walks. Bolton's wild pitch let Fernandez score.

Three Reds relievers held the Padres to one hit over the final four innings.

Braves 7, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH — The Atlanta Braves built an early six-run lead, then held on for a victory over Pittsburgh as Orlando Merced's baserunning blunder cost the Pirates the tying run in the sixth inning.

Pittsburgh, 15-0 losers Friday, lost both manager Jim Leyland and All-Star left fielder Barry Bonds to ejections in just their third loss in 15 games. The Braves won for the 26th time in their last 33 and are 50-17 since May 27.

Steve Avery (10-8), unscored upon in two NL playoff starts against the Pirates last October, won his fifth consecutive decision against Pittsburgh, including those postseason games.

Cardinals 6, Expos 4

MONTREAL — Andres Galarraga hit a grand slam in the eighth inning against his former team, rallying the St. Louis Cardinals past Montreal and stopping the Expos' six-game winning streak.

Galarraga drove in five runs against the club that traded him to Montreal last winter for Ken Hill. Galarraga connected against John Wetteland (2-3) for his sixth home run of the season and third career slam.

Phillies 4, Mets 3

NEW YORK — Stan Javier singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning and the Philadelphia Phillies went on to beat the New York Mets.

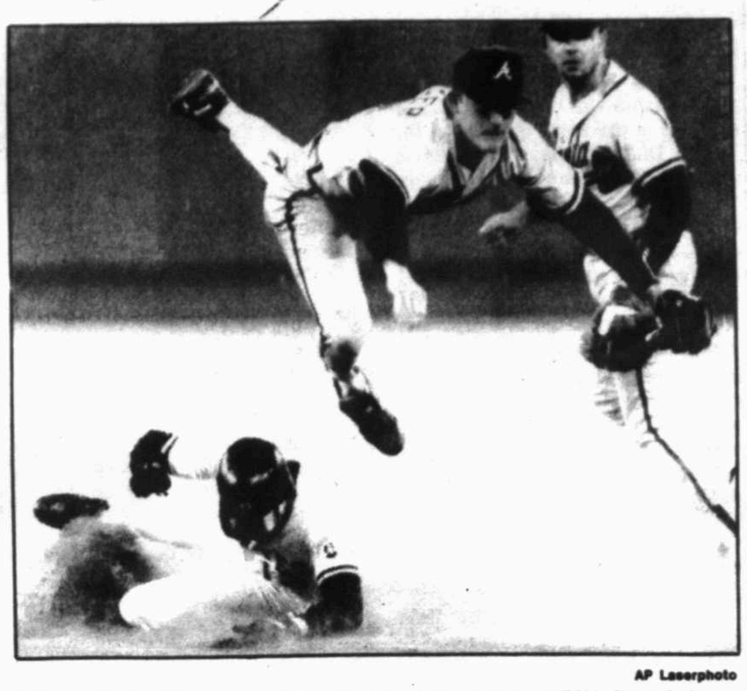

The Mets have lost three in a row and 10 of 11.

With the score tied at 3, Jeff Innis (5-8) walked Wes Chamberlain with two outs in the eighth and hit Darren Daulton with a pitch. Anthony Young relieved and gave up Javier's hit.

Giants 2, Dodgers 1

LOS ANGELES — Willie McGee a last-minute replacement in the lineup, hit a two-run single in the fifth inning and the San Francisco Giants beat the Los Angeles Dodgers.

McGee, starting because Chris James was dizzy with an inner ear infection, helped drop the Dodgers to 13-30 in one-run games. Los Angeles leads the majors in one-run losses.

Lenzi dives to win

THE WOODLANDS (AP) — Olympic gold medalist Mark Lenzi defended his U.S. 3-meter springboard title Saturday in the National Diving Championships and three-time Argentine Olympian Veronica Ribot-Canales narrowly won the women's crown.

Lenzi, 24, also won the 1-meter title on Friday. Earlier this month at Barcelona, he won the gold medal in the 3-meter event.

Ribot-Canales, 30, who holds dual American and Argentine citizenship, won her first U.S. women's 3-meter title. She was a platform and 3-meter finalist at Barcelona and also competed in the 1988 and 1984 Olympics.

Dolphins down Broncos in Berlin

Associated Press

BERLIN — Scott Mitchell threw two touchdown passes within 88 seconds in the third quarter as the Miami Dolphins beat the Denver Broncos 31-27 Saturday in a sloppy, mistake-filled NFL exhibition game.

NFL Preseason

The contest featured 10 turnovers and frequent penalties, with starting quarterbacks Dan Marino of Miami and John Elway of Denver plagued by mistakes.

Mitchell threw touchdown passes to James Saxon and Tony Martin. Marino passed to Mark Clayton for a touchdown, and Aaron Craver added a scoring run for the Dolphins.

Pete Stoyanovich added a field goal for Miami (2-1).

Denver got a pair of scoring passes from rookie Tonmmy Maddox — to Barry Johnson and Cedric Tillman — and a TD pass from Shawn Moore to Jeff Alexander.

Tracy Bennett and David Treadwell added field goals for the Broncos (1-2).

The 60,813 fans who paid up to $86 per ticket may have spent the opening quarter wondering if they'd stumbled upon a game between two amateur German teams.

Marino was intercepted on the first play of the game. Three snaps later, the teams combined for an amazing four penalties on the same play — Denver for an ineligible receiver downfield and for Elway passing from beyond the line of scrimmage, Miami for offside and pass interference.

Bennett then kicked his 35-yard field goal to give Denver a 3-0 lead, but chaos soon returned.

Saxon went in motion the wrong way on one play and was shoved back in the other direction by Marino. Another Dolphins rusher, former Bronco Bobby Humphrey, let a pass go through his hands and departed shortly thereafter with bruised ribs.

Marino also was intercepted twice more by the midway point of the second quarter.

There was a brief flurry of decent football in the final few minutes of the half.

Alexander caught a 5-yard touchdown pass from Moore to give Denver a 10-0 lead with just over five minutes left. Then Marino finally had some success, capping a 70-yard drive with a 38-yard scoring toss to Clayton with just under two minutes left.

Eagles 27, Bengals 17

PHILADELPHIA — Randall Cunningham passed and scrambled like the Randall of old in an early touchdown drive and the Philadelphia Eagles went on to beat the Cincinnati Bengals.

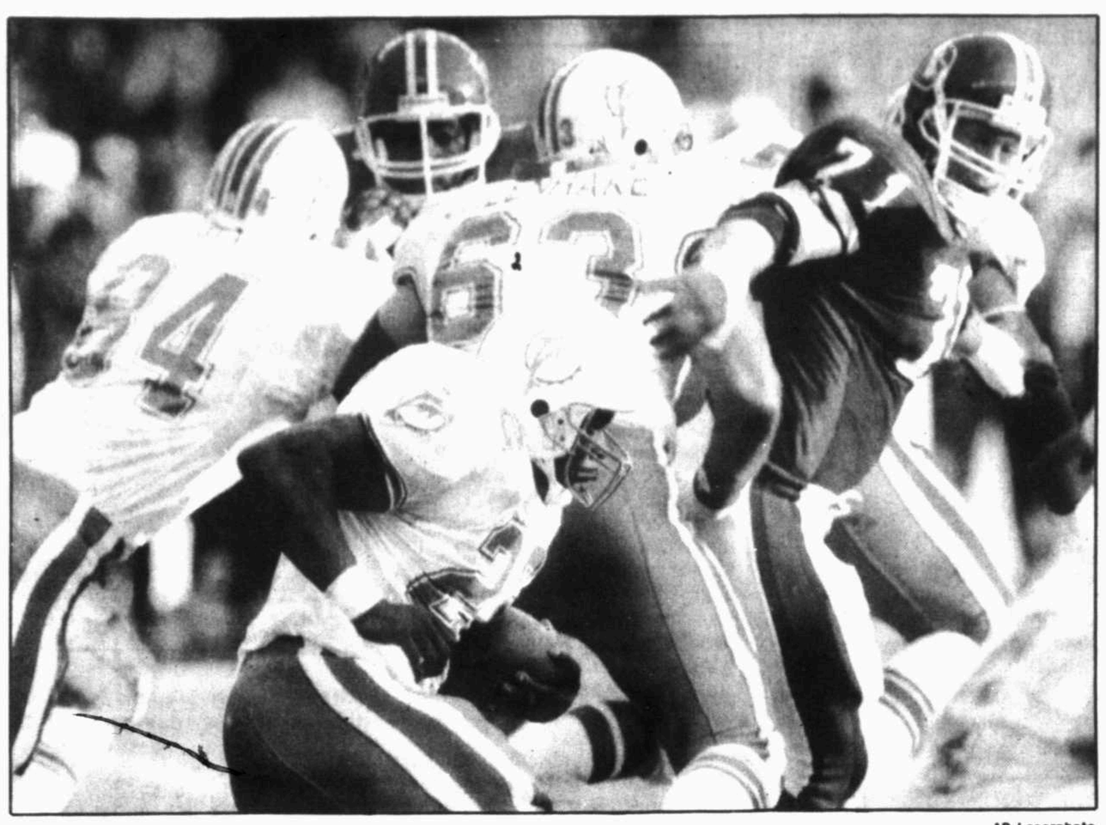

Cunningham completed 7 of 12 attempts for 66 yards and scrambled for 7 yards on his only run, a key third-down conversion in the opening drive. He played 20 minutes, his longest since sustaining a season-ending knee injury in last year's regular-season opener.

He didn't play in the first exhibition game and played two series in the second.

The Eagles are 2-1 in exhibition play, while the Bengals lost for the second time and are still winless under new coach David Shula.

Bengals backup Erik Wilhelm completed 9 of 17 attempts for 92 yards and a touchdown in the first half. Don Hollas played the second half. Starter Boomer Esiason didn't play.

The Eagles took a 7-0 lead the first time they got the ball on a six-play, 48-yard drive capped by Herschel Walker's 1-yard dive 5:55 into the first period. Cunningham completed passes of 7 and 9 yards to Floyd Dixon and 22 to Kenny Jackson, moving the ball to the Cincinnati 4.

Miami running back James Saxon (22) tries to turn the corner against Denver Saturday in Berlin while teammates Greg Baty (84) and Jeff Uhlenhake (63) provide blocking.

Bucs 40, Falcons 28

TAMPA, Fla. — Steve DeBerg delivered the go-ahead touchdown, but Vinny Testaverde squashed a budding quarterback controversy by throwing for 119 yards and three touchdowns in the Tampa Bay Buccaneers' victory over the Atlanta Falcons.

DeBerg, signed during the offseason as a backup for the inconsistent Testaverde, threw a 1-yard touchdown pass to Kirk Kirkpatrick with 5:17 to go to put the Bucs (1-1) ahead for good after Atlanta (0-2) scored three quick touchdowns to take a 28-24 lead.

Reggie Cobb raced 53 yards to set up Tampa Bay's final touchdown, Testaverde's 1-yard throw to Tyji Armstrong with 2:11 remaining.

Giants 16, Browns 7

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Matt Bahr kicked three field goals and the New York Giants limited Cleveland to 86 yards in the opening three quarters in posting a preseason victory over the Browns.

Bahr kicked field goals of 34, 45 and 50 yards to give New York (2-0) a 9-0 third-quarter lead before Kent Graham gave the Giants' offense its first touchdown of the preseason with a 41-yard scoring pass to fellow rookie Charles Swann.

Cardinals 20, Bears 17

TEMPE, Ariz. — Timm Rosenbach threw two first-half touchdown passes, and Phoenix held on with a tough defense and a strong running game for a victory over Chicago.

It was the second straight, 3-point loss this week for the Bears, beaten 34-31 in the final seconds by New Orleans last Monday night.

The Cardinals, 2-0 in the exhibition season, led 17-0 at halftime as Rosenbach continued his hot spell since recovering from a knee injury which kept him out last season. He threw touchdown passes of 53 yards to Ernie Jones and 23 yards to ex-Bear Johnny Bailey.

Chicago, unable to move behind starter Jim Harbaugh the first two quarters, rallied in the final period.

Running back Darren Lewis turned a short throw from Paul Justin into a 68-yard TD romp as he threaded his way down the right sideline on the first play of the quarter.

Vikings 30, Chiefs 0

MINNEAPOLIS — The Minnesota Vikings' defense had its second successive superb exhibition game, sacking Dave Krieg six times in the first half and holding Kansas City's first-string offense to minus-4 yards passing.

The Vikings, who opened the exhibition season under new coach Dennis Green with an impressive victory over Buffalo, have outscored two 1991 AFC playoff teams by a combined 54-3.

Kansas City, meanwhile, has lost to expected NFC Central also-rans Minnesota and Green Bay by a combined 51-13. In Marty Schottenheimer's first three years as coach, the Chiefs were 29-18-1 in the regular season but 4-8 in the preseason.

Seahawks 27, Colts 10

INDIANAPOLIS — Robert Blackmon returned an interception 48 yards for a touchdown and Kelly Stouffer, battling for a starting position at quarterback, passed for two touchdowns as the Seattle Seahawks beat the Indianapolis Colts.

Stouffer replaced starter Dan McGwire after a 10-10 tie at halftime. A fumble by the Colts' Ed Toner gave Seattle possession at the Indianapolis 30, and the Seahawks moved to the 9 before Don Silvestri's 27-yard field goal put them ahead 13-10.

Seattle, 1-1 in the exhibition season, regained the ball after an Indianapolis punt just over a minute later. Stouffer passed 21 yards to Chris Warren and 5 yards to David Daniels, setting up a 30-yard TD pass to Doug Thomas for the score.

49ers, Redskins hit London fog

Associated Press

LONDON — It will be football — not soccer ... American football — at Wembley Stadium today.

The Washington Redskins take on the San Francisco 49ers, not Manchester United versus Liverpool.

Even though most British sports fans have turned their attention to the beginning of the English soccer season, close to 60,000 football novices are expected to watch the Super Bowl champions and the 49ers battle.

They'll see quarterback Mark Rypien's return to the Redskins after a 23-day holdout, watch Amp Lee and Ricky Watters battle for the starting running back slot in the 49er backfield, and wonder when Joe Montana will be healthy enough to quarterback San Francisco.

Mostly, they'll hear terms they're slowly becoming familiar with, thanks to the World League of American Football's London Monarchs. Terms such as punt ... pass ... offside ... touchdown ... spike ... placekick, and the more-obvious unneccessary roughness.

They will also get a treat — the teams on the field will more closely resemble the final, regular-season product than the versions of these teams that played in the first week of preseason.

By this time in the exhibition schedule, choices are being narrowed and decisions are closer, even if coaches swear that's not true.

San Francisco coach George Seifert said he will go with Watters and second-round draft pick Lee at running back, just as he has done throughout the exhibition schedule. Both are hoping to become the explosive back the San Francisco offense lacked in 1991.

If Michael Carter plays at nose tackle for the 49ers, he'll start; that means that Ted Washington will move over to end.

At quarterback, Seifert said Steve Young, the perpetual stand-in for the still-injured Montana, "will go a quarter, a quarter-and-a-half."

But he won't be throwing to electrifying wide receiver Jerry Rice, who remains embroiled in a contract squabble.

The Redskins might see about the same amount of action from Rypien, who ended his holdout just in time to make the London trip. He has looked sharp in practice.

Look for Redskins coach Joe Gibbs to give him almost two quarters of action, with No. 2 man Cary Conklin coming in after that.

The game features the winners of seven of the past 11 Super Bowls. The Redskins, of course, are preparing to defend the NFL crown they won with a 37-24 victory over Buffalo last January.

Big changes in store for college football fans

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

A two-division conference, a preseason bowl bid and a postseason bowl alliance.

College football fans will be introduced to all three novel concepts this season, part of the seismic shifts that are altering the landscape of the game.

With the addition of South Carolina and Arkansas, the Southeastern Conference will split into a pair of six-team divisions. The Eastern and Western winners will meet Dec. 5 in Birmingham, Ala., with the SEC title and a Sugar Bowl berth on the line.

"I don't think any of us knows what to expect because we've never gone through anything like this before," Georgia coach Ray Goff said.

Penn State knows exactly what to expect if — and there's very little suspense here — it beats the six Division I-A opponents required for postseason play. The Nittany Lions, playing their final season as an independent before joining the Big Ten, locked up a Blockbuster Bowl bid in May because they feared being left out of the New Year's Day mix.

Most of those Jan. 1 matchups will be determined by the new bowl alliance, which includes Notre Dame and the champions of every major conference except the Rose Bowl-bound Big Ten and Pac-10 winners.

The coalition is designed to improve postseason matchups and increase the likelihood of a No. 1 vs. No. 2 national championship game. It also will eliminate the shady backroom deals and last-minute scrambling that plagued the old selection system.

"There's no pickin' n' choosin' anymore," said Jim Brock, executive vice president of the Cotton Bowl. "It's all determined. You're going to know your date before you get to the dance."

The first date to circle on the calendar is Aug. 26, when Bill Walsh makes his return to college coaching at the Pigskin Classic in Anaheim, Calif. The season opener matches Walsh's Stanford squad against Texas A&M, a Top 10 team in most preseason polls.

Walsh, who coached Stanford in 1977-78 before leading the San Francisco 49ers to three Super Bowl titles, has already made a big impact on his players.

"He definitely is a legend," running back Glyn Milburn said. "It's an unreal feeling at times when he walks by at practice and instructs us like he does."

Speaking of unreal, how about Miami's mastery of college football over the past decade? The Hurricanes, who shared the national title with Washington last year, will be seeking an unprecedented fifth championship in 10 years.

Despite a harder-than-usual schedule that includes games at Iowa, Penn State and Syracuse, Miami has a legitimate chance to become the first repeat AP champion since Alabama in 1978-79. The core of last year's undefeated team returns, including quarterback Gino Torretta, a fleet of dangerous receivers and possibly the best linebacking trio in the nation.

"We may have a better team than we did a year ago, but our schedule is much tougher too," coach Dennis Erickson said.

Torretta and another Sunshine State quarterback, Shane Matthews of Florida, are among the players being touted as Heisman Trophy contenders. The long list includes QBs Rick Mirer of Notre Dame, Elvis Grbac of Michigan and Eric Zeier of Georgia; running backs Marshall Faulk of San Diego State, Jerome Bettis of Notre Dame and Russell White of California; and all-purpose stars Qadry Ismail of Syracuse, O.J. McDuffie of Penn State and Kevin Williams of Miami.

Several successful coaches will be at new schools this season.

Bruce Snyder, who guided California to a 10-2 record and a Citrus Bowl victory over Clemson last season, has switched to Pac-10 rival Arizona State. Bill Lewis, who led East Carolina to an 11-1 season and a Peach Bowl win over North Carolina State, is now at Georgia Tech. And John Mackovic, who coached Illinois to four bowls in four seasons, has replaced David McWilliams at Texas.

The 1992 season will feature new rules as well as new coaches. The most noteworthy change: Defensive players can pick up a fumble and run with it.

Conferences continue to shuffle teams, with Florida State joining the Atlantic Coast, Fresno State leaving the Big West for the Western Athletic, Akron becoming part of the Mid-American and Nevada moving up from Division I-AA to join the Big West, which lost a member when Long Beach State dropped football.

The California Bowl, which matched the champions of the Big West and Mid-American, was dropped from the postseason lineup because of financial problems.

COUGARS: UH hopes to rebound from 4-7 season

(From 1B)

Douglas, who felt shunned at Florida, started two games for the Cougars last year and expects to win the starting assignment this season over Jimmy Klingler, brother of David, and Kyle Allen.

It's been a long time coming for both players, even measuring the time they spent sitting out 1990 to become eligible with the Cougars.

"The year we had to sit out, we'd go out in the parking lot maybe 11 o'clock at night and play catch," Gilbert said. "We have a good relationship. He's my best friend on the team."

The best friends hope to help the Cougars rebound from last year's free fall from a 10-1 record in 1990 to a 4-7 record. They've each absorbed enough of the run-and-shoot complicated system to feel comfortable.

"He (Douglas) threw me a pass the other day before I even made my cut," Gilbert said. "He told me 'I knew what you were going to do before you did it.' He really understands the offense this year."

Although coach John Jenkins won't name a starting quarterback before workouts begin, Douglas may have an edge over Klingler and Allen because of his scrambling ability.

"There's a different confidence level for me this year," Douglas said. "I know what to do and it's just a matter of doing it. This offense can be even more explosive. I think we feel that we can run-and-shoot."

Douglas likes his reputation as a scrambler.

"When somebody calls me that, I say 'thank you' because I take it as a compliment," Douglas said. "I feel I get respect because defenses feel they can't just run in on me."

Douglas completed 37 of 59 passes for 520 yards and four touchdowns last season. He started two games and played part of the Arkansas game in place of the injured David Klingler.

Douglas originally planned to go to Houston but switched to Florida. Now, he prefers not to look back.

"Who knows what could have happened," he said. "When I was recruited out of high school I was told that David would be transferred to free safety.

So who knows? That didn't happen so you have to go on."

Gilbert burst on the national scene last season after languishing at UCLA and sitting out one year after his transfer. He averaged 9.6 catches per game last season. He gained 957 yards and scored seven touchdowns.

He had 16 catches against Miami and Texas Tech and surpassed 100 in receiving four times.

"I feel more like a leader this year," Gilbert said. "Being the national leader in receiving, I think people will listen to me if I make a suggestion."

Gilbert feels especially comfortable with Douglas.

"It's like fate brought us back together," Gilbert said. "We have a special connection. He knows me like a book and I know him. The other quarterbacks are capable of leading us to the Cotton Bowl but Donald has the added dimension. He can scramble and buy you some time."

Douglas and Gilbert are ready to make up for lost time.

"We always talk about what happened at UCLA and Florida being a misfortune. Now it's time to correct misfortune. Now's our time to make their heads snap to let them know that we can play."

A&M natural pick for SWC title

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — This was supposed to be the year the Texas Aggies were going to fold, spindle and maul their Southwest Conference opponents IF a quarterback could be found.

Since the Aggies waltzed through the league unbeaten and unthreatened last year, it would stand to reason they would be runaway threats this season. The big question mark was at quarterback.

There was a little matter of no experienced quarterbacks until U.S. Olympic baseball coach Ron Fraser gave A&M coach R.C. Slocum an early Christmas present.

Fraser cut left-handed pitcher Jeff Granger from the Olympic squad. The same Granger who had helped defeat Cuba only days earlier in an exhibition game.

Granger was stunned. Slocum was stunned.

SWC football coaches were horrified.

Granger, who was an exciting backup behind Bucky Richardson last year, then told Slocum he had changed his mind and decided to play football.

The Aggies had runners in Greg Hill and Rodney Thornton but didn't have an established passer. Enter Granger.

Enter the Aggies as prohibitive favorites to do it again:

The Freeman SWC line:

1. Texas A&M, even money. The Aggies return a speedy defense and Bob Davie, the man who knows how to coordinate them. Although Fraser is retiring as baseball coach at the University of Miami, Texas A&M fans can still probably get their thank you cards to him via the Hurricane sports information office.

2. Texas Tech, 4-to-1. The Red Raiders keep looking better every day. If Spike Dykes' up-and-coming bunch can ambush Oklahoma in their nationally televised opener at Lubbock, look out for this surprise team. Tech plays the Aggies Oct. 3 in College Station. It could be the SWC Game of the Year.

3. Texas, 7-to-1. The Longhorns will start slow under John Mackovic's offense but should finish strong as things start to click. Remember, Texas can still play tough defense under Leon Fuller and it will keep them in a lot of games.

4. Baylor 10-to-1. A miracle on the Brazos in Grant Teaff's last year. Unlikely because of the inexperience on both lines of scrimmage. However, the Bears will be playing with a lot of emotion.

5. Rice, 25-to-1. Any team with Trevor Cobb on it has a chance. If Rice plays reasonable defense, the Owls should post their first winning season since the early 1960s.

6. Houston 35-to-1. John Jenkins should get the Cougars back on track offensively. The key will be whether one of college football's worst defenses in 1991 will bounce back.

7. TCU 45-to-1. A new day is dawning at Texas Christian under Pat Sullivan, who has changed everything but the Horned Frog mascot. The Frogs will be ground down by lack of depth although a healthy Leon Clay could produce some interesting fireworks.

8. SMU 150-to-1. The Mustangs haven't won a conference game since they came back from the death penalty. Tom Rossley's crew probably won't win one this year either although he has a senior dominated team. They may be seniors but they don't run fast and aren't very big.

Bowl alliance boon for WAC

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — A Western bowl alliance is great news for the Western Athletic Conference, which will benefit from the added national exposure it will provide, according to Wyoming coach Joe Tiller.

While the WAC's regular-season champion will continue to receive an automatic bid to the Holiday Bowl, the alliance announced last week calls for the runnerup to go either to the Aloha Bowl or the Copper Bowl.

The Aloha Bowl, one of only three bowls without a conference tie-in for the 1992 season, will get first choice of WAC teams that don't win the league title and the Holiday Bowl berth.

The Copper Bowl gets second choice at any WAC teams if the Aloha Bowl passes, or it could take a third team if the Aloha Bowl chooses the second-place WAC team.

"That's good. That's good for our league," Tiller said Friday. "Anytime we have a locked-in spot for anybody in the league it's a positive."

The Wyoming coach also said it makes sense, geographically, for the WAC to be tied to the Copper Bowl, which is played in Tuscon, Ariz., and the Aloha Bowl, which is played in Hawaii.

"I think it's a natural for our conference and I think it's a benefit to our conference to be assured that we're going to have that," he said. "I think instead of the league typically being in two bowls, occasionally being in three bowls, I think it almost guarantees you that you're (the WAC) going to be in four every year."

The deal still must be approved by the WAC Council and Presidents' Council.

Tiller also said he was happy to see bowl officials across the country agree to place restrictions on teams seeking post-season games.

"One good positive thing the bowls have done is they've eliminated this I-AA win stuff. If two or more of your wins are against I-AA teams, you can't go," he said. "I think that's a positive."

Now the Wyoming coach wants to see a requirement that teams win at least seven games to qualify for post-season play.

"I don't see justification for bringing a 6-5 team to a bowl," Tiller said. "And it might happen ... you might now see where they'll say 'Hey, you've got to win seven or you won't go.'"

Hadnot denies contacting Coogs

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Is running back Butch Hadnot staying at the University of Texas, or is he soliciting a scholarship elsewhere? He was, but now he isn't. Or is he?

Hadnot is denying the latest report, that he contacted University of Houston coaches about transferring there.

Hadnot, the 1990 Southwest Conference newcomer of the year, was suspended last week by UT head football coach John Mackovic for contacting Texas A&M coaches about switching schools.

Friday, Hadnot denied the report he had sought a transfer to Houston.

"I did not call Houston," Hadnot told the Houston Chronicle. "Someone is trying to frame me. I did not call Houston, and I'm staying at Texas."

However, he must pass the summer school finals he took on Thursday and Friday to retain his eligibility. Before he could transfer to another school, he would have to get a release from UT allowing him to do so. Then he would have to sit out a year before becoming eligible at the new school.

Two Cougars assistant coaches, who requested anonymity, said they received a phone call on an answering machine from someone identifying himself as Hadnot.

Fans spend $3 million at Foyt sale

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — By the time the gavel fell for the final time Saturday at A.J. Foyt's auction, racing buffs, entrepreneurs, fans and investors had shelled out approximately $3 million for pieces of history.

"It's been a good three days, but it's tiring," Foyt said. "I hope they enjoy the stuff they've bought."

The auction began Thursday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, where Foyt, 57, made a record 35th consecutive start in the Indianapolis 500 in May. His future as a driver has been in doubt since he sustained serious injuries to both legs and feet in a 1990 accident.

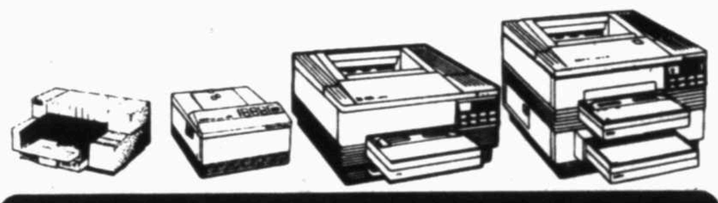

Foyt said he was selling the memorabilia to get it out of the way.

"I'm busy with my racing team and that's why I haven't had time to keep this stuff in good conditon."

"I really didn't do it for the money," he said. "I did it because I needed to get the stuff out of my shop and get it to somebody who would take care of it properly."

On Friday, Speedway President Tony George laid out $410,000 for the car Foyt drove to a record fourth Indy 500 victory in 1977. It was one of 28 vehicles Foyt sold that day for a total of more than $1.6 million.

Bush faces crucial GOP convention

All eyes will be on Houston and the Republican National Convention there this week to see what the Grand Old Party will mount as an offensive against the popularity surge of Bill Clinton and the Democrats.

President Bush, suffering a sobering decline in popularity polls since the close of the Persian Gulf War in early 1991, has been attempting to revitalize his re-election effort: As expected, he tapped longtime friend and confidant James A. Baker III last week to serve as chief of staff and senior counselor; the president will rely on the popularity of First Lady Barbara Bush to invigorate convention delegates; and Bush said in a press conference late last week, "We must ensure that the United States is unquestionably safe and strong at home and abroad," indicating he will concentrate his efforts of domestic affairs now rather than attending to international concerns to the detriment of Americans.

But already skeptics are questioning whether he can recoup enough lost support to pull him past Clinton in the November balloting. What's more, whereas the Democrats appeared to present a unified front at their convention, there has been a rift between the right wing of the GOP and moderates over Bush's failure to hold firm against the tax-and-spend lobby in the Congress.

In recent days Bush has reaffirmed his opposition to abortion and his commitment to family values, two critical issues for conservatives. With his stated intention to concentrate on domestic affairs, he potentially could keep the GOP's right wing in the fold with an indication that he, too, is convinced now that tax increases must be avoided at all costs and the federal deficit must be addressed. Once burned, however, Bush may find support from the right-wingers conditional.

To make his political troubles worse, Bush was elected from the "Oil Patch" and while no one expected him to provide unqualified support for the oil industry while in the Oval Office, oil is important enough to the security and future well-being of this nation as a whole that those in the business rightfully believe he should champion the domestic oil industry in Washington. Bush should realize how dangerous it is to allow the domestic oil industry to fall to its present state of inactivity, even in times when a major foreign crisis or war does not threaten the United States.

This is possibly the most important GOP convention George Bush has ever attended. It won't be easy with pro-gay and pro-choice demonstrators in the streets of Houston, but they will only be fuel for the fire inside the Astrodome. The Republicans will be talking about matters that could well determine whether Bush will continue to occupy the Oval Office after January.

ANOTHER VIEW

It's time for spending cuts

Some say the budget-balancing plan drawn up for one-time-near-candidate Ross Perot by a former U.S. budget director was so tough Perot knew Americans wouldn't buy it.

Credit card living is certainly easier than living on what you earn and paying your debts. But we Americans must face facts: It's time for the federal government to pay its bills and get out of the habit of borrowing for luxuries.

That's going to take spending cuts — real ones — and perhaps higher taxes.

... Here are three ideas that those in Washington should look at to save us a few hundred billion.

■ Index Social Security and Medicare benefits according to income. If you make over a certain amount of money in retirement, then your benefits should be reduced proportionately. If you make over, say $100,000 a year from any sources, you get no Social Security and no Medicare benefits.

■ End the 20-year military retirement program ... Military retirement benefits should start at age 59. But anyone who's already been in the service for 10 years should be exempt.

■ Ask veterans with small disabilities to give up their monthly benefits — and make it easy to do so. Allow them to retain their disability ratings for tax purposes and future medical-care eligibility. But let them give up the $70 to $200 monthly payments for 10 to 20 percent disabilities if they are gainfully employed.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Aug. 16, the 229th day of 1992. There are 137 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Aug. 16, 1977, the "king of rock and roll," Elvis Presley, died at Graceland Mansion in Memphis, Tenn., at the age of 42.

On this date:

In 1777, American forces won the Battle of Bennington, Vt., in the Revolutionary War.

In 1812, Detroit fell to British and Indian forces in the War of 1812.

In 1829, the original "Siamese twins," Chang and Eng Bunker, arrived in Boston aboard the ship Sachem to be exhibited to the Western world.

In 1858, a telegraphed message from Britain's Queen Victoria to U.S. President James Buchanan was transmitted over the recently laid trans-Atlantic cable.

In 1861, President Abraham Lincoln prohibited the states of the Union from trading with the seceding states of the Confederacy.

In 1896, gold was found at Bonanza Creek, Alaska.

In 1948, baseball legend Babe Ruth died in New York at the age of 53.

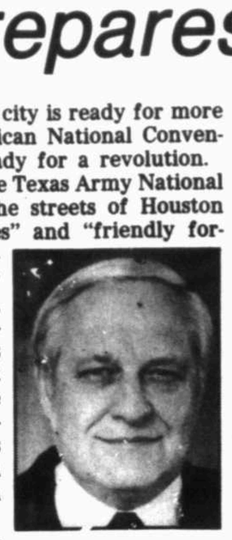

In 1956, Adlai E. Stevenson was nominated for president at the Democratic national convention in Chicago.

JACK ANDERSON

City prepares for convention, revolution

HOUSTON — This city is ready for more than the Republican National Convention. It's also ready for a revolution.

For the next week, the Texas Army National Guard is delineating the streets of Houston between "enemy forces" and "friendly forces." According to confidential contingency planning documents, "enemy forces" are defined as the "citizens and special interest groups" that "have been authorized to conduct demonstrations during the Republican National Convention ..."

Anderson

"Friendly forces" include state and local law enforcement and "city of Houston officials."

The war-planning comes in the wake of officials' fears that embers from the Los Angeles riots have not been completely extinguished, and could re-ignite with the right political fuel. In fact, the plan was forged after consultations with the California National Guard on their L.A. riot experiences. One Texas National Guard briefing paper we obtained warns:

"Members of our staff have attended briefings by the Secret Service, the FBI, the Department of Public Safety, the Houston Police Department and numerous other agencies on plans for the convention. Obviously, many national figures will be in attendance. Our primary concern surrounds those demonstrations that could trigger violence by gangs and dissident citizens."

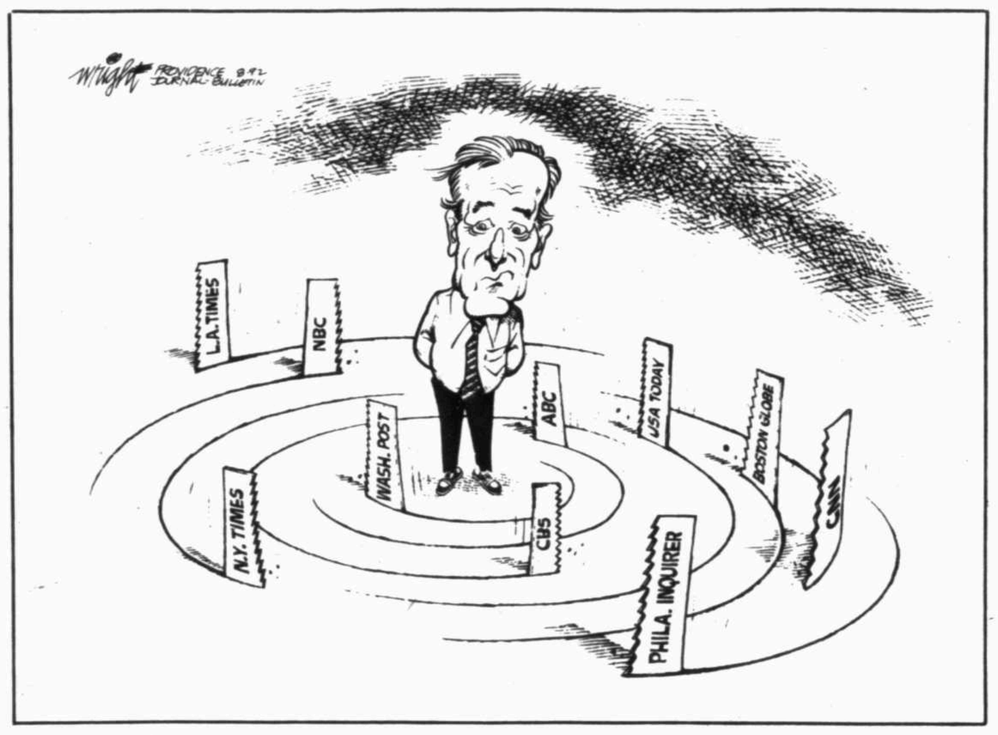

This state of alert is more than routine, according to Texas law enforcement sources. It certainly represents a higher state of alert than New York observed last month — or for that matter any political convention perhaps since violence marred the Democrats' Miami gathering in 1972.

Although a premium is put on keeping a low profile, the Texas National Guard is armed to the teeth, poised to mobilize approximately 2,500 troops on the streets within 16 hours. If need be, they would arrive with M-16 rifles, shotguns, .45-caliber pistols and more than 1,000 hand and smoke grenades. Each guardsman would carry 71 live rounds of ammunition. In addition, to help maintain command and control, 40 cellular telephones would be rented.

Moreover, the Texas Air National Guard is ready to provide C-130 airlift support. Nearby Rice University football stadium would be used as a staging area if forces are committed. If required, city buses would be taken over for military transportation. "Inoperable military vehicles and equipment will not be abandoned except in life-threatening situations," advises one planning document, reviewed by our associate Dean Boyd.

Inside the Houston Astrodome, Republican officials have strived to present a healed and happy party. But the side-show outside could overtake the main event inside. Every open sore in American politics will be on display. From Queer Nation to Lambs for Christ to the Ku Klux Klan, from the National Abortion Rights Action League to Operation Rescue, some 30 warring interest groups — representing up to 30,000 people — threaten to crash the GOP's gala.

Republican platform shows conflicting ideas

HOUSTON — A committee has been called a cul-de-sac into which ideas are lured to be quietly strangled. Not so with the Republican platform committee. Its handiwork shows clearly the conflicting ideas in the party's divided mind, and the nation's past.

Will

The secret of being a bore is to tell everything and the platform is, in vast stretches, chloroform in print. It covers (among many other subjects) the Hobbs Act, mortgage revenue bonds, Cyprus and the U.N. trusteeship in Palau. But beneath the tangled underbrush of little details lurks a large contradiction that reflects the mingling of the Republican past and present.

Republicans are for less government, except when they are for more. They are for less taxes, spending and regulations, all three of which have increased a lot during the tenure of the president who will run on this platform. But this platform prudently does not challenge the national consensus that contemporary government's primary function is to provide entitlements that fulfill a still-expanding array of economic "rights."

Republicans are hot to have government stop the moral rot that, amazingly, is sending the country to wreck and ruin in spite of many stern Republican presidencies. Now, let us not make light of Republicans' admirable earnestness about serious issues. But also let us not neglect the impulses pulling their party toward opposite aspirations.

Abortion is only the most obvious example of the party's libertarian and moralizing impulses in conflict. The platform demands strong government action to outlaw this practice that women have resorted to approximately six million times in the past four years. And the platform contains many other examples of the party's contradictions.

For example, the platform laments the nation's litigation explosion, but it also says: "We endorse Republican legislation allowing victims of pornography to seek damages from those who make or sell it, especially since the Commission on Pornography, in 1986, found a direct link between pornography and violent crime committed against women and children." That idea of victimization, derived from that "direct link," should generate interesting litigation.

The Republican platform rides off in several directions because the party, like the Republic, got to the present from several directions. In fact, the Republican Party was the great "nationalizing" force and the architect of modern energetic government.

America's Founders learned (from John Locke, among others) that government exists for the modest purpose of protecting liberty, understood primarily as freedom from government. But the Republican Party's commitment to minimalist government could not survive the first Republican presidency.

Until well into the 20th century, writes Michael Barone, Republicans were "the national, activist, even busybody party," while Democrats, professing Jeffersonian defense of localisms, respected regional mores, "from segregation in the South to the saloon in the North." In the 1920s and 1930s some Republicans — Robert La Follette, George Norris, Fiorella La Guardia — were among the strongest congressional advocates of government policies of nationalization and redistribution. It was a Republican administration — Eisenhower's — that undertook the simultaneous construction of two of the most ambitious modern public works, the St. Lawrence Seaway and the Interstate Highway System.

Republicans formerly, like Bill Clinton today, called their activism "investment" — spending money to stimulate money-making. So if the Republicans' platform, shot through with strange silences and ambivalences about modern government, seems like a small portion torn from a large map of a long and winding road, it is.

SPEAKING OUT

Soup kitchen needs your support

By Jonathan Pylant

Pylant

Jonathan Pylant is employed with a local sign firm. He was born and raised in Midland.

Have you noticed the demolition of the old Midland Dorm out on Rankin Highway just north of I-20? Have you been wondering what is going on?

The dilapidated structures are being torn down to make room for the new Midland Soup Kitchen Ministry.

Take just a minute to read this article and allow your imagination to work as I attempt to paint a word picture of the vision and ultimate goal of this community-minded organization.

Imagine, if you will, two brand new block buildings, one that's long and rectangular and another one in the shape of a cross. Envision a dove-shaped fountain just to the right of the entrance.

Inside you'll hear a kitchen busy with volunteers and see a dining room filled with hungry children and adults enjoying a hot nutritious meal.

Look to the eastern wing and see the kids playing basketball and other games in the recreation area. Think of a warm summer evening with the community action group meeting in that same wing, planning and setting goals for the neighborhood.

Walk through the north and south wing counseling rooms where hurting people find out that somebody really cares. Look at the shower and dressing rooms to help the person on the street take care of his/her hygienic needs and a first-aid room where minor medical problems can find attention.

But don't stop there, let's move to the 24-room hostel next door with rooms designed to provide temporary shelter for the man that made some mistakes in his past but who is now seriously seeking real answers and new direction for his life.

See the room set up for the family seeking shelter from the storm. Imagine a young mother nursing her little baby while her toddler plays on the floor as they wait for daddy to get home from his new job. A job found with the help of the Soup Kitchen's Job Bank.

Can you see the picture I am trying to paint?

Maybe so . . . maybe not.

Let's look at another picture. One called reality. One that doesn't take any imagination at all. One that can be actually witnessed within a short drive, maybe even walking distance from your home.

I urge you to go look at the reality of those same men, women and children. People on the street with no food or shelter. People desperately hurting with no place to go.

Drive through the streets of southeast Midland around dusk (if you've got the guts) and watch the teenagers forming gangs instead of basketball teams.

Check out one of the many homes with no utilities and no running water. Get to know the family that lives there. Open the broken down screen door and watch the flies buzz around the empty can of dog food on the supper table.

Climb through the weeds of a vacant lot and set down at camp with two or three homeless men. Ask them about the Soup Kitchen and what purpose it serves in their lives.

So you say, "What's the point?"

The point is that the Midland Soup Kitchen Ministry is a vital and very necessary community organization that is in desperate need of expansion to meet the expanding needs of the poor and the homeless in our city.

Please search your heart. Can you afford the cost of ONE BRICK (approximately $2.50) to help meet the needs of your neighbor. You may want to give more than ONE BRICK and that is a welcome prospect. For a donation of $500 or more your name will be included on a memorial plaque.

Think of it this way. The Soup Kitchen is giving every Midlander a unique chance to get involved in a very worthwhile community project. There will be a grand return on your investment and the dividends will certainly prove beneficial for the whole community.

Ponder the words of this age-old proverb: "He who gives to the poor will lack nothing."

READERS' VIEWS ON: Closing of veterans' service office

Our veterans' office is benefit to Midlanders

I am very concerned about the article "Commissioners debate closing of veterans' office," which appeared in the newspaper on Aug. 6. I understand that some commissioners want to close the office. One commissioner emphasized the convenience of the toll-free number as opposed to the prompt service that is now provided to the veterans and their families at our local Veterans Service Office.

This office should remain open for many reasons. Forms are readily available without delay, and (Travis) Pipes can answer most questions on the spot which reduces valuable time on both sides. Also, when medical help is needed or death occurs, the personal touch and moral support that our local office provides is invaluable and incomparable with an 800 number.

I called that toll-free number and found their service most inadequate. After being placed on hold for a lengthy period of time, I was told to call back the next day. At that time, I was told that a form would be mailed to me which arrived four days later. I needed an answer right away, not three to six weeks later, so I contacted Pipes at our veterans office who answered my questions within five minutes. Instead of saving time by using the 800 number, which I thought I was doing, I wasted valuable time.

Our community deserves a service that only this office can provide. Should veterans be inconvenienced with delays? They didn't delay when asked to serve their country. They served with pride while losing limbs and lives. Why make them suffer more by this thoughtless act?

The cost of operating our veterans office is $24,400 per year compared to the $5 million in assistance to more than 12,700 local veterans. Let's face it! A big percentage of this $5 million is going right back into our economy which benefits all Midlanders.

Wake up citizens of Midland County! Let's keep the doors to this facility open. Contact your commissioners to stress the importance of our local Veterans Service Office.

Local office supports dependents, widows

Regarding the article in the Midland Reporter-Telegram on Aug. 6 about closing the County Veterans Office, this office should stay open — at least on a part-time basis.

The current office provides information to veterans who must keep in touch with the national office which handles their insurance policies; but, more importantly, the local office must help veterans' widows and dependents file claim forms for insurance to be paid to them upon death of a veteran.

Most widows, on account of their age, and lack of knowledge in filing claim forms and designation of beneficiary forms, need assistance which is now available through the county office.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

READERS' VIEWS ON: Abortion

Pro-lifers should be given more respect

I admit up front that I am a pro-lifer. To some that makes me a shame and a disgrace. However, I am proud to be one willing to join others in standing up for the rights of the most innocent, most unprotected member of our society.

The pro-abortion people tell us that we care only about the unborn and no one else. I have yet to meet a pro-life person who was not involved in some other area of a social nature to help make this a better world. We are constantly accused of not having all the answers. We don't, nor do we claim to. We are individuals with faults, limitations, and mistakes the same as anyone else. We are criticized for not having solutions to child abuse, poverty, low education levels, homelessness, and all the ills of society. Pro-abortion people say that we should be solving them all before we can fight abortion. Imagine this scenario: You see a homeless man being beaten in the street. You rush to intervene. Someone stops you and asks if you are able to take full responsibility for the man's future happiness and well being. You answer no. Then you are told that unless you can guarantee the man a perfect world and solutions to all his problems, you have no business saving his life. Surely, we can see the absurdity in this.

Why is it that pro-life people are the only ones expected to have all the answers to our problems? No one asks the celebrities who protest against homelessness how many of the homeless they house. Or how many AIDS patients Elizabeth Taylor shelters and personally cares for. How many death row inmates do death penalty opponents personally invite to their home? These people are patted on the back and given accolades while the pro-life populace, with much less to offer and nothing to gain, are ridiculed and called names.

If I am a disgrace to you, so be it. I answer to a higher judge anyway.

To choose abortion is hypocritical alternative

In response to Gary L. Warren's pro-lifers being a "shame and disgrace," (Letters, Aug. 9) what shall we protest? Would the genocide of prairie dogs on Fairgrounds Road be acceptable to him? Or the rights of smokers at Midland International? Or perceived injustices in our tax code? Alternately, neither can it be affirmed that all pro-lifers refuse to protest questionable nursing home care, hospital bills, or Medicare regulations.

Warren's cry is more accurate if one remembers the single issue and periphery activities we protest are not the single issue and periphery activities he holds dear. Or perhaps he is upset at our "success." But the next person is upset at the "success" of the ACLU and the next person is upset at the "success" of the NRA. I happen to believe the issue I advocate will have more impact for the improvement of our generation yet born than the other issues named above, including Warren's. So saying, this does not exempt me or anyone else from the responsibility to uphold what is right and oppose what is wrong.

It is easy to suggest for Warren to support us, and that interaction may soften his attitude and may let us handle truth-of-living more accurately. But the realities on time constraints work both ways. I suppose until I am able to discard current time constraints, I will hold my single issue and periphery activities dear, including a weekly visit to a nursing home and jail both local to Midland. Perhaps I'd rather be involved in softball or housecleaning or parenting my kids. But the "shame and disgrace" is not my single issue. The shame and disgrace is that we must stoop to communicate our gripes in the press but do not communicate to each other.

Contradictory issues are common. Pro-life and, even improved quality-of-life are contradictory. To choose abortion is the hypocritical alternative.

A pregnant woman has made her choice

I would like to respond to a letter published Aug. 6 about Americans deserving to have a choice.

I believe that any woman who gets pregnant has already made her choice. If she, for whatever reason, does not want the gift that God has chosen to give her, she can give that gift to someone who does.

America has absolutely slaughtered the meaning of the Constitution and the rights that it was meant to keep, as well as the Divinity that God intended for family and life.

Abortion is disgrace to American, society

Abortion is a disgrace to American society.

In Gary L. Warren's letter entitled "Pro-lifers are a shame and disgrace to society," (Letters, Aug. 9) he expressed his concern about defending the quality of life and the needs of Americans with disabilities. I commend him for his altruism. Let me urge him to also extend his concern to include the most helpless and defenseless segment of our society — the unborn child.

It's a disgrace that in America we have laws protecting a woman's choice above protecting the life of an unborn baby.

What is this choice for which so many fight? It is the right for a pregnant woman to choose: a) to continue her pregnancy and give birth to a precious child, or b) to have an abortion and kill the living but as yet unborn child.

No other group of individuals has this power, this right, to choose to kill without facing lawful penalty.

I believe, as do other "pro-lifers," that a woman should only have the right to choose: a) to become pregnant, or b) not to become pregnant.

Once a woman is pregnant, killing her unborn child should not be a lawful means of solving an unwanted pregnancy.

Yes, I have heard the argument that these children will be born into difficult situations, to parents that don't love them or want them. Is our answer to this problem the right of women to have their unborn children killed? This is the solution one might expect from countries where individual human life has little value, but abortion is a disgrace to American society!

Pro-abortion, pro-life are best terminologies

Pro-Choice warriors everywhere please respond.

Where are you when government mandates the speed you must drive on the highway?

Where are you when you have to buckle up or wear a helmet?

Where are you when children can't get aspirin in school without parental consent?

Where are you when people can't do drugs in their private lives?

Where are you when alcohol is outlawed in public parks?

Where are you when smoking is prohibited in restaurants?

Where are you when women are restricted from selling sexual favors?

Where are you when people are prohibited from bungee jumping?

Where are you when post-abortion trauma sets in on your unwitting patients?

Where are you?

Fighting for abortion, not choice.

I believe you know the correct terminologies are pro-abortion and pro-life, not pro- and anti-choice.

Pop, 1863 — 1951: 'The Song of the River'

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NORTH SALEM, N.Y. — Day before yesterday was the 41st anniversary of the death of my dear father. For more than 20 years, I have devoted this Sunday column to Pop on the day nearest to Aug. 14, the day on which he passed away in 1951. I have done so by publishing each year Pop's epic poem "The Song of the River," written at his summer place in the Northern California foothills of Mt. Shasta.

Hearst

Last Friday was a sad day for me as I mourned the deaths of a kind, considerate and generous father and of my beloved wife, who died June 23, 1991, after a long, excruciatingly painful battle against lymphoma cancer. Austine and I enjoyed many happy times at our Snow Hill Farm home here, where I am now continuing to make slow but steady progress toward recovery from the heart attack I suffered last Feb. 7.

"The Song of the River" was written by Pop at Wyntoon, a secluded, pinewood-mountain paradise several hundred miles north of San Francisco. It was there that my father built an incredible Bavarian village consisting of a picturesque Cinderella House, Fairy House and Bear House in which our family and guests lived and still spend vacations.

Pop wrote "The Song of the River" not long before his death, but it was not printed in his San Francisco Call-Bulletin until after he died in Beverly Hills. The inspirational verse follows:

"The Song of the River"

The snow melts on the mountain
And the water runs down to the spring,
And the spring in a turbulent fountain,
With a song of youth to sing,
Runs down to the riotous river,
And the river flows to the sea,

And the water again
Goes back in rain
To the hills where it used to be.

And I wonder if life's deep mystery
Isn't much like the rain and the snow
Returning through all eternity
To the places it used to know.

For life was born on the lofty heights
And flows in a laughing stream,
To the river below
Whose onward flow
Ends in a peaceful dream.

And so at last,
When our life has passed
And the river has run its course,
It again goes back,
O'er the selfsame track,
To the mountain which was its source.

So why prize life
Or why fear death,
Or dread what is to be?
The river ran its allotted span
Till it reached the silent sea.
Then the water harked back to the mountaintop
To begin its course once more.
So we shall run the course begun
Till we reach the silent shore.
Then revisit earth in a pure rebirth
From the heart of the virgin snow.
So don't ask why we live or die,
Or whither, or when we go,
Or wonder about the mysteries
That only God may know.

Brother's death weighs heavy on Allison's mind

Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Davey Allison, driving with a heavy heart and struggling to keep his concentration, will try to focus on racing today in the Champion Spark Plug 400 at Michigan International Speedway.

Allison's younger brother, Clifford, died Thursday from injuries received in a crash earlier that day in practice for a support event on the same two-mile Michigan oval. But Davey, a 31-year-old NASCAR Winston Cup star, still managed to qualify third in the 41-car lineup, behind only pole-winner Alan Kulwicki and Mark Martin.

Allison comes into the event trailing series point leader Bill Elliott, who starts starting, by just 17 points. Kulwicki and Harry Gant, who starts 24th, are third and fourth respectively in the standings.

Allison is hampered this weekend not only by the mental weight of his brother's death, but also by his still knitting injuries and the aches and pains from his own brutal crash last month at Pocono International Raceway. In the two events since the spectacular accident, Allison has needed relief help. This time, however, Allison insists he will try to go all the way, although Jim Sauter will be standing by during the 200-lap race.

Davey, who said he just didn't want to talk about the death or his mental condition, did say he has to work on getting back the good feeling he had in his race car prior to his crash.

"Honestly, I don't have a lot of self confidence right now," he said. "I need some time to get myself tuned back up."

Larry McReynolds, his crew chief, said, "Our hearts, our thoughts, our feelings and our prayers are with Davey, his entire family, Clifford's family. I heard Alan Kulwicki say this morning that it was hard for him to celebrate his pole yesterday knowing what was going on ... but we all have a job to do, and nobody knows that better than Davey.

"It's just like when his dad (Bobby Allison) got hurt in 1988. He didn't know anything about his dad's condition, but Davey went on and finished in the top five that day. Then he went on and poured out his emotions after his job was done, and he took care of what needed to be taken care of.

"That's what we're here to do this weekend," McReynolds said. "We're going to try to win this race and, when it's over, we're going to Alabama and pour our hearts and feelings and hopefully our help out to the Allison family."

Allison ran away with the Winston Cup race at Michigan in June, his third victory here and one of four wins this season. Elliott, who has seven Michigan wins and also has four victories this year, figures Davey remains the man to beat.

"We're decent, but as good as Davey was up here last time, and the way he's running this weekend, he's going to be hard to beat," Elliott said. "You get on a roll like he's on and it's hard to stop it, even with what he's been through."

Another driver who has had a difficult weekend so far is two-time defending Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt, who will start last today.

Earnhardt had only the 27th best lap Friday in the opening session of qualifying. He improved on that considerably in second round qualifying Saturday, apparently leading the session with a lap over 176 mph. But the speed was disallowed after NASCAR inspectors found the roof of his Chevrolet Lumina was too low.

Gary Nelson, NASCAR's technical director, said no intent to deceive was found and that the speed was simply disallowed, forcing Earnhardt to use a provisonal start to make the lineup.

"We were low," said Richard Childress, the owner of Earnhardt's car. "We don't know how or why we got low, but we're not going to make any excuses.

"They saw a little red on the (measuring device), and red is no good. ... These cars run well on minimums and that's why they really check them.

"It's very obvious that it was unintential. Any other year it wouldn't have happened, but it's just been that kind of year for us. We're just going to keep working hard and working together to try and make up for it."

Rudd's strategy pays off with IROC crown

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Ricky Rudd gave Al Unser Jr. a bump in the right direction Saturday, sending Unser on to a race victory and helping himself to the championship of the 1992 International Race of Champions series.

Rudd, an IROC rookie, came into the 50-lap race of indentically prepared Dodge Daytonas on Michigan International Speedway's two-mile oval trailing Dale Earnhardt by 1½ points in the standings.

In a scramble off the final turn on the last lap, Rudd — with the race-smart Earnhardt still visible in his rearview mirror — had to choose between going with Indy-car driver Unser, the Indianapolis 500 winner, or fellow NASCAR stock car driver Rusty Wallace, who made an inside move in an effort to win the race.

"It almost scared me because Rusty and Al got to bumping together, and if we're all driving side-by-side out there, that could have given Dale a chance to catch back up to us," Rudd said. "I had been trying inside and outside lines earlier in the race and I knew if I went inside, I'd probably wind up going right to the back and Dale would have gotten back by and beat me.

"So I stayed on the outside, where I knew I could handle better, and I gave Al a good hard bump to the front and went with him. I would have liked to have won the race, but it just didn't work out that way."

Unser, whose six IROC race victories is a record, led the last 49 laps.

"I have to thank Ricky there at the end," Unser said. "He gave me a tap and saved me.

"Rusty made his move and got inside me and Ricky had a chance to either bump Rusty past me or bump me. He gave me a hard enough bump to get me almost completely sideways.

"Then he got up next to me and I thought for sure I was in trouble. But I got it back together and held on."

Unser beat Rudd to the finish by a car-length, with Wallace third, Indy-car driver Scott Pruett fourth and Earnhardt fifth. That gave Rudd the series points title, 68½-63, with Unser jumping from sixth to third at 59. Rudd also took home a check for $175,000, the winner's share of the $670,000 series purse.

Indy-car star Arie Luyendyk started up front with the field in reverse order of the standings and led the first lap before Unser, who started sixth in the 11-car lineup charged to the front to stay.

Rudd and Earnhardt started from the back and the latter was all the way up to fifth by the end of the first lap. Rudd struggled with handling for several laps before his tires got heated up enough to allow him to race hard, then moved up right behind Earnhardt on lap six.

The first key move of the race came on lap 44 when Pruett, who stayed among the leaders the whole race, went with Rudd on an inside move. Both barely managed to get past Earnhardt, who never was able to recover.

"I could get up to Earnhardt, but there's no way I could have got around him without Scott's help," Rudd said. "Of course, it helped him, too."

Earnhardt, who picked up $65,000 for finishing second in the series, said, "The car pushed real hard. I had to have someone behind me to draft back up to them. ... I don't think Rudd was playing with me. I think he knew he had more motor in his car and he just decided it was time to drive off and leave me."

Unser averaged 158.800 mph in the race run totally under a green flag.

NASCAR's Harry Gant finished sixth Saturday, followed by IMSA road racers Pete Halsmer, Davy Jones and Geoff Brabham — who won the IROC race at Michigan two weeks earlier. Luyendyk was 10th, with road racer Hurley Haywood last.

Davey Allison, who drove in the first two IROC events and won at Talladega, withdrew from the series after being injured in a stock car crash last month. He was credited with last-place points and still finished seventh in the series. Earnhardt won the IROC opener at Daytona.

Rudd joined longtime Indy-car star A.J. Foyt as the only drivers to win the IROC title without winning a race. Foyt managed that feat both times he won the championship.

Todd Bodine wins Gasket 200

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Todd Bodine ran away from Dale Earnhardt and then held off Hut Stricklin to win the Detroit Gasket 200 on Saturday, the first-ever Busch Grand National race at Michigan International Speedway.

Bodine, the youngest of three racing brothers from Chemung, N.Y., held the lead for the final 31 laps of the 100-lap event on the two-mile, high-banked oval, dominating a field top-heavy with drivers from NASCAR's elite Winston Cup series.

Earnhardt, the two-time defending Winston Cup champion, tried to make a run at the leader in the late-going, but eventually lost ground, finally giving up the runnerup spot to Stricklin three laps from the end.

Stricklin, another Winston Cup regular, appeared to have a strong run going at the start of the final lap, briefly moving right up behind Bodine's Chevrolet. But Bodine pressed a little harder on the gas pedal coming off the second turn and pulled away from the other Lumina on the backstretch, going on to win by 28-hundredths of a second.

Earnhardt held on to finish third, followed by three more Winston Cup regulars, Bill Elliott, Harry Gant and Dale Jarrett.

Bodine, whose brothers Geoff and Brett also are regulars on the major circuit, came up with his second victory of the season and the third of his Grand National career.

He vaulted past Robert Pressley — who finished 30th — into second place in the standings.

McEnroe keeps dodging retirement questions

By Tom Coyne
AP Sports Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Like a booming serve, the retirement question keeps flying at John McEnroe. He returns it deftly each time, keeping the answer just out of reach.

This might be his last Volvo International and his last U.S. Open. Maybe not.

At age 33, McEnroe knows the end is coming, he's just not sure when.

"It's not easy for me," he said. "For any athlete it's always a tough time when you start considering the possibility of doing something else."

McEnroe is tired of all the traveling and practicing. With three children at home, he's more concerned with being a good father than a great tennis player. But he's not ready to retire either.

The question for McEnroe isn't whether he can still play. It's whether he wants to.

Making it to this year's Wimbledon semifinals showed he still has some very good tennis left. But he's just not interested in devoting the time needed to keep him among the sport's elite for another few years.

"It's an extremely selfish sport," he said. "I could make more sacrifices, but I feel like I don't want to do that because I want to grow as a person. I don't want to go back to being 20 years old and acting like a kid."

But what if he makes a run at the U.S. Open? What if he wins it? Does he go out while he's on top, wondering what else he could have accomplished? Or does he stick around another year or two?

"It really depends on some factors that I can't really answer right now. Let's see how I feel, how much time I want to play next year. I don't see myself going cold turkey from the professional year," he said.

McEnroe enters the Volvo International, which begins Monday, ranked No. 17 in the world and coming off a right foot injury that kept him out of the Volvo Los Angeles tournament two weeks ago. Also included in the field are No. 2 Stefan Edberg, No. 4 Goran Ivanisevic, No. 6 Petr Korda, the defending champion, No. 8 Andre Agassi and No. 11 Ivan Lendl.

Despite his looming retirement, McEnroe said he feels better than he has in recent years. His hair is thinner and flecked with gray, and it takes him a little longer to get stretched out and ready to play.

And some days his game just isn't there. He said he has to work harder to get less results, "but hopefully you get the results at the right moment."

The changes for McEnroe have been more than physical. He's changed his mental approach as well, putting less pressure on himself. He's enjoying himself a lot more than when he reigned as the world's No. 1 player from 1981 to 1984.

The fans are different, too. Like Jimmy Connors, McEnroe is finding that fans are more appreciative of players after they've peaked.

"I think in a certain way they understand you a little bit more, and they accept you. And when they realize that you're not going to be around for that much longer I think they show their appreciation," he said.

As his playing days dwindle, McEnroe finds himself getting more reflective. He said he'd like to be remembered as a player who emulated Rod Laver's style of play and advanced it; a player who came in with attacking style when the game was loaded with baseliners; a player who was both a great singles and doubles player.

He doesn't want to be remembered only for his tantrums, although he hopes people will remember him as someone who brought life to the game when stoical players such as Bjorn Borg dominated.

"There's no question that some people will talk about the fact that I have had a lot of run-ins with umpires and how I reacted on the court sometimes," McEnroe said.

Sampras advances to ATP finals

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Pete Sampras advanced to the finals of the $1.4 million ATP Championship with a 6-2, 6-3 victory Saturday over Stefan Edberg.

Sampras, the third-ranked player in the world, will play the Ivan Lendl for the title today.

"I was really pumped up and motiviated to beat him," Sampras said. "I returned a little bit better than he did. I served really well ... and I put a lot of pressure on his service. I think I made him feel that if he missed his first serve I'd be all over his second serve."

Edberg, ranked second in the world, had played well all week but couldn't get untracked Saturday.

"I got off to a bad start and never really caught up to him again," Edberg said. "He picked up some really good shots, even some half-volleys — he was flicking them for winners."

Like a self-fullfilling prophecy, Edberg's serve failed him. He had said Friday that he didn't know how long he could continue serving as well as he had in his first three matches.

"I've been playing some good tennis; today I wasn't playing well," Edberg said.

"Obviously, Pete is a better player than the ones I played before. When I play a guy like Pete, I need to play my best tennis or I get beat."

Edberg, a two-time ATP Championship winner, had not lost a set in three matches prior to Saturday.

"Even on his first serve he was playing back," Sampras said. "Right there I knew he wasn't really on today."

Sampras has never won the ATP Championship, but has made it to the finals two straight years. He lost the title to Guy Forget in 1991.

He struggled early in the week, twice needing three sets to advance, and survived a match point against Mark Woodforde.

Against Edberg, Sampras said he was as lucky early in the match as he was good in the late stages.

"I was getting line calls, getting the breaks," Sampras said. "Everything was going my way today.

HOW THE VOICE ENHANCER WORKS

BOOSTS ONLY HIGH SOUNDS LIKE VOICES

is a new hearing enhancement device that boosts only the sounds you want to hear, like voices, not the lower frequency noise and background sounds that interfere with hearing speech. The open-canal design allows you to hear clearly, naturally and comfortably.

CLEARVOICE & CLEARVOICE K

uses a new advanced automatic noise reduction microcircuit to filter unwanted background sounds and help you hear clearly. It's custom fitted to the inside of your ear and can be customized to your personal noise environment. ClearVoice is designed to help you hear more clearly and comfortably than you ever thought possible, and the continuously self-adjusting Clearvoice K-Amp microcircuit is unique because it only amplifies the soft sounds.

County officials agree on nepotism policies

■ Although Painter did not adopt the county policy, his own policy will provide legal protection according to the County Attorney.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Midland County officials are in apparent agreement that nepotism works against effective government, productivity and morale.

Texas law, in an effort to squash favoritism in government, expressly forbids elected officials from hiring any of their relatives.

The Midland County Commissioners' Court on July 27 went beyond the state law, adopting its own county policy prohibiting all relatives — not just those ofelected officials — from working in a supervisor-employee capacity.

Dettman

However, the policy does not prohibit hiring relatives to work together in non-supervisory roles.

The anti-nepotism policy automatically applies to appointed supervisors and other employees under control of the five-member Commissioners' Court.

To reject or to ratify the policy was optional with the remaining 15 elected Midland County officials.

Of those, only Sheriff Gary Painter did not endorse the policy by the Aug. 7 deadline set by County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer.

Seltzer viewed adoption of the policy as "just a matter of good management." Once in force, "it would stop a lot of disputes and a lot of petty bickering," Seltzer said earlier.

"They (other elected officials) could or could not take part" in the policy, Commissioner Durward Wright said Saturday. "It would be nice if (all) the elected officials wanted to go along, but if they didn't, that was their prerogative.

"And the fact that all of them did but (the sheriff) is fine. They didn't have to," Wright said.

Painter adopted a written policy against hiring relatives on Aug. 27, 1990, in response to a conflict.

Painter said in a letter last week to Seltzer that he was "disturbed" by newspaper comments that he was "the only elected official in Midland County not agreeing to or ratifying the nepotism policy as adopted by the Midland County Commissioners.

"You are aware," Painter wrote, "that I initiated and established a written nepotism policy for the Midland County Sheriff's Department in 1990. I am in total agreement and compliance with state law regarding nepotism," the sheriff said, "and I am in total agreement with county policy on nepotism as it is enforceable under state law."

But, the sheriff claimed a clause on legal representation in the county policy was designed to be coercive and intimidating. "That's what it sounds like," Painter said.

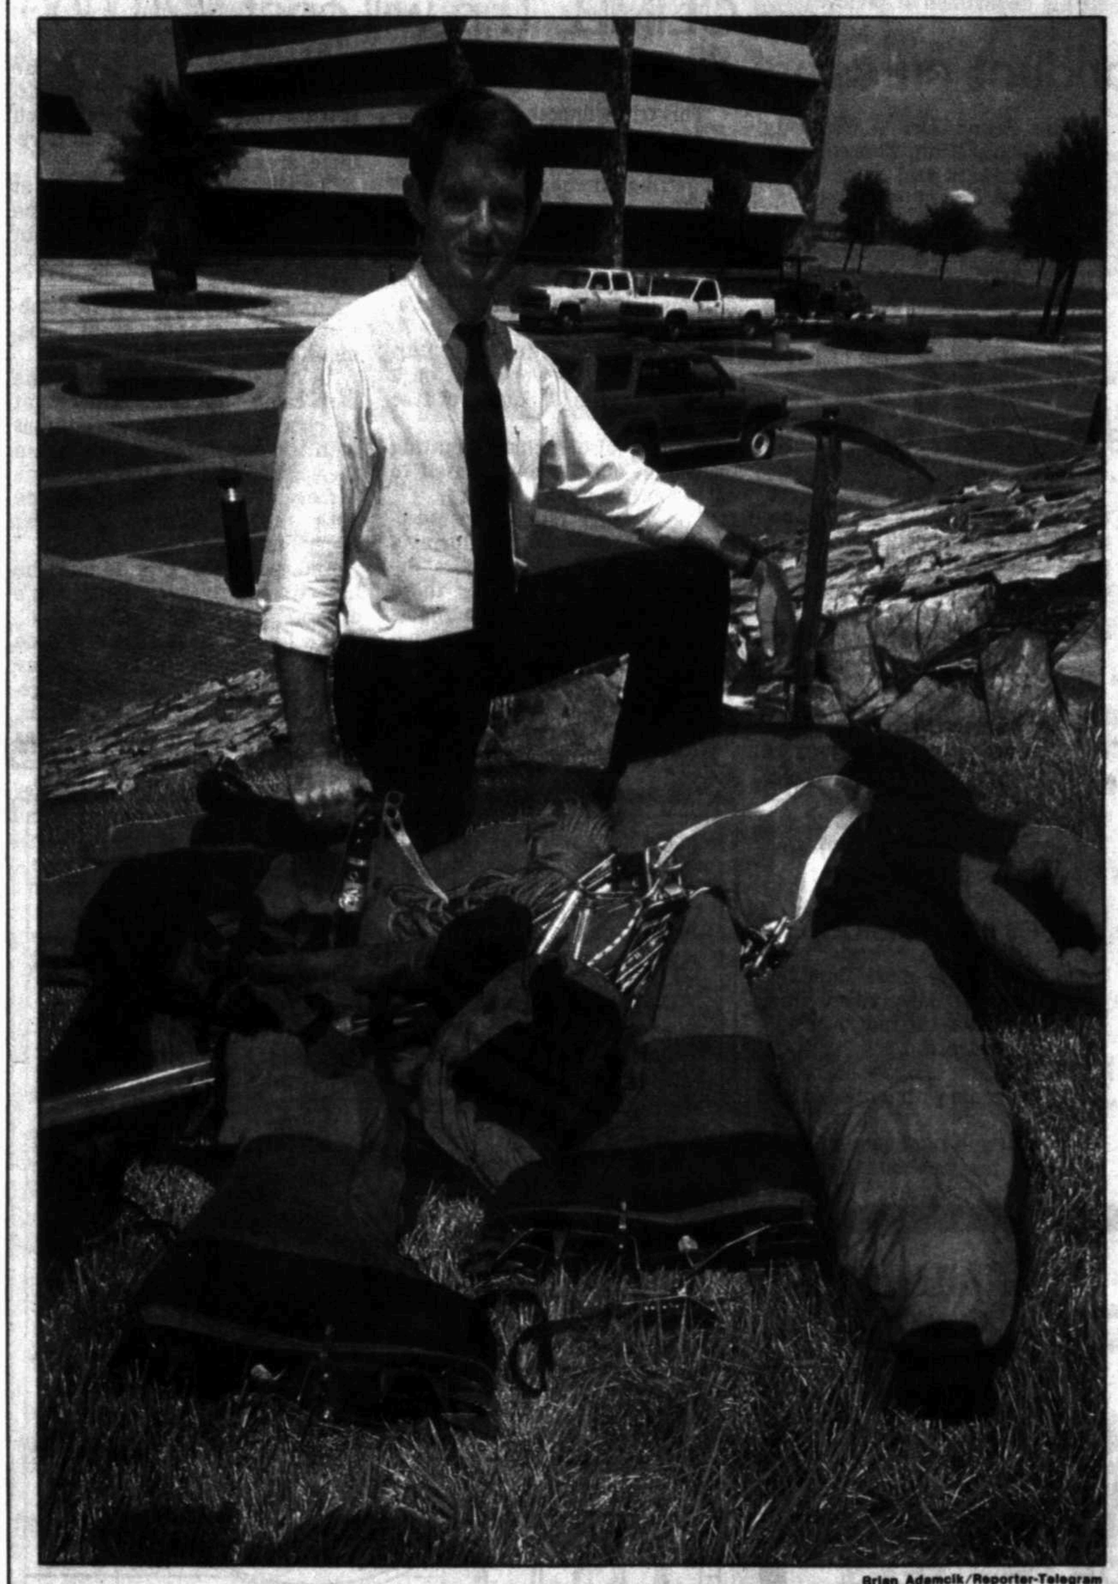

The county policy says that if an elected official opts not to adopt and enforce the nepotism policy, then the Commissioners' Court will "expressly deny any and all legal responsibility" for the elected official's actions that might be in violation of the policy.

"The county policy says if you don't do what we tell you do to, then we are not going to defend you in any lawsuit," Painter said. State law, the sheriff said, says otherwise.

An endorsement form, signed by most county officials who accepted the nepotism policy, said if an officeholder rejects the policy and is sued for failure to comply with the policy, then that officeholder "will not be represented by the County Attorney" in any litigation. Further, the county will not pay for private counsel for the official and will "deny and disclaim any responsibility" for any mone-

Kurt Cox may not have climbed every mountain, but come this fall, he will have climbed "the mountain."

"For every mountaineer, Mount Everest is out there, just waiting," said the 31-year-old Chevron geologist. "You are always looking toward it."

Cox's wait will be over today as he and a team of 15 other climbers board a plane headed for the tallest peak in the world, a journey that started nine years ago for Cox.

"I was at the Enchanted Rock near Fredricksburg, just to hike and stuff, and I saw these technical rock climbers," he said. "I thought 'I can do that.' I started bumming equipment until I could get my own. I was hooked."

Cox started as a technical rock climber, scaling the sides of steep rock mountains. He then went into mountaineering, which includes climbing on rocks, snow and ice.

He now climbs higher altitude mountains, a move that requires a lot of commitment from the climber.

"You are in colder temperatures and miles away from help, sometimes for days," Cox explained. "It's a big commitment, because you had better be ready and able to help yourself."

Cox will be in the icy temperatures of Mount Everest for approximately two and a half months this fall. However, his trip was almost postponed for three years.

"I was originally contacted by another group who were planning to go in 1995 up the Tibet side," Cox said. "However, I was contacted two months ago by someone in the group I am going with, to tell me that one of their members had dropped out and would I be interested."

Cox said he was pleased with this group because they would be scaling the mountain on the Nepal side, the same side the first climb up the mountain was made 39 years ago by Sir Edmond Hillary of New Zealand.

The current trip is also costing him less.

City Council to review pot-bellied pigs plight

■ City Council will review the current policy involving pot-bellied pigs at their next meeting.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

The presence of pot-bellied pigs has politicians pondering their plight.

Pet or predator? Or livestock, perhaps?

Proponents of the pet theory believe the portly pigs are primarily passive.

Others believe if the city allows pigs in town — no matter how large or small — then they should allow horses, goats, sheep and other animals as well.

The current city ordinance states that pigs are indeed livestock and therefore, prohibited in town — unless they are in a livestock show, a zoo or on a remote city farm.

Bob Lanham is seeking a change in that ordinance arguing that pot-bellied pigs are not sold for food.

For the last two months Lanham has fought for the right to board and sell Vietnamese pot-bellied pigs at his Midland garden-and-feed store.

"They (Animal Control) came to our store and threatened to fine us $2,000 per head to keep swine in the city limits," Lanham said.

Lanham had sold the pigs for about $200 each.

The ultimatum forced Lanham to bring the issue before the Animal Control Board.

The board, led by director Coy Willis, agreed to let the pigs live in the city limits, but only after setting numerous guidelines.

At the next City Council meeting, Lanham plans to present a petition that has over 1,000 signatures supporting his cause.

"If it passes, it would restrict the pigs to 95 pounds and under, and no taller than 18 inches," Willis said.

The city pigs would also have to be neutered, permanently identified with a microchip, vaccinated, certified by the health department and kept in single-family dwellings.

But Midland naturalist Midge Erskine has a few problems with the proposed ordinance.

"Most people want to keep them small and cute," she said. "And to do that they will feed them about a cup of food a day. That's inhumane and there is no other way to keep their weight down."

Pot-bellied pigs can reach 130 pounds.

Mrs. Erskine believes an ill-fed pot-bellied pig could become

Center reports population gain of stray animals

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Cats and dogs are running amok in Midland.

Between Oct. 1, 1991 and July 31, 1992, the Midland Animal Control center put 3,500 dogs and cats to sleep. Yet the stray animal population continues to rise, officials said.

"Right now our fastest growing problem is cats," said Animal Control center director Coy Willis. Indeed, 1,779 felines were put to sleep during the same time period, 200 more than last year.

Animal Control workers roam the streets every day to stifle the movement of strays.

"We have tons that can be adopted here. The obvious problem is there are not enough homes for the number we have," Willis said.

The center currently has a long list of residents who have asked for cat traps.

"Cats can transmit 35 different diseases to humans. People who garden have serious problems with this," Willis said.

Cat and dog owners are urged to spay or neuter their animals to help curtail strays. "And I would encourage anyone wanting a pet to come here. The problem is huge," Willis said.

GARY OTT

The thrill of victory, and the agony of lost childhood

It happens every four years.

The world gathers for the Olympics and after two weeks of intensive television viewing I am left with mixed feelings, especially when it comes to the female gymnasts, who, I keep reminding myself, are really just 14-year-old girls who have given up their childhood years for a chance at international glory.

Ott

Is it worth it?

That's the question that keeps bouncing around in my head.

Are these little girls doing what they truly want to do, or are they simply fulfilling the dreams of their parents and coaches?

The debate is an old one, and it extends far beyond the Olympic Games. There is professional tennis, for example. There, you have teen-agers — again usually young girls still wearing braces — who suddenly find themselves thrust into the harsh realities of super-stardom, competing on center stage in front of millions of adoring fans for hundreds of thousands of dollars, often before they reach the ripe old age of 17.

Yes, there is much glamour involved. And fame, too, not to mention great wealth. These children become household names. Their faces show up on merchandise throughout the world. By simply endorsing a particular product, they can command a fee of six figures.

They are "stars" in the truest sense of the word, worshipped by the masses.

Not unlike the great rock 'n' rollers of years gone by, they travel with huge entourages . . . financial advisers, media advancemen, bodyguards. They want for nothing. With the snap of their fingers, the world is at their feet. They become instant millionaires. With the proper marketing effort, they can be transformed into highly profitable conglomerates overnight.

They are, for lack of a better phrase, bigger than life.

But are they really happy? That is the question that won't go away.

The reason all of this is so fresh in my mind right now is television. The Olympics brought the little girls into our living rooms. They became a part of our families. We rooted for them as though they were our own daughters, sharing their glories as well as their disappointments.

When they cried for joy, so did we. When the tears turned to sadness, so did ours. We endured their pain, subconsciously embracing them, like any loving parent would, in an effort to make the hurt go away.

It all makes for wonderful drama. The images, both happy and sad, will remain with us for a lifetime.

But what about the children? Are they content with the life they were dealt? Do their scars heal quickly? Once the games are over, are they able to put the past behind them and move forward, or do they forever live in their memories? Do they face the same problems and worries that other normal kids do . . . acne, boyfriends, fear of not being invited to a Friday night dance?

I'm reminded of an interview I saw several years ago involving a young American gymnast. She couldn't have been more than 14 at the time. She had red hair pulled back into a tight ponytail. There were many freckles and she obviously was self-conscious about her braces.

In others words, she looked like any other 14-year-old.

But was she?

"I grew up differently than most kids," she said. "While they were doing normal things, I was practicing. Sometimes I wanted to be with them, but I knew I had to practice. That's just the way it was. If I wanted to be the best, I had to practice."

So true.

That's the case with anything in life. If you want to be the best, you have to be willing to pay the price. Nothing comes easy. You work hard and you reap the rewards.

That's good, sound advice.

But, somehow, it seems a bit harsh when it comes to children. Do 14-year-olds really belong in the limelight? Should their lives come crumbling down just because they commit a tiny error during a gymnastic routine? Is that enough to brand them a "failure," a "disappointment," or, worse, a "choker."

Sure, their feats provide the rest of us with excitement, but is it fair to them? Is the trade-off in their best interest?

Perhaps. But every once in awhile I get a sick feeling that these little girls would really rather be back home blushing and giggling about some cute boy in their algebra class.

After all, kids will be kids.

If we let them.

DEATHS

James Montgomery

BRECKENRIDGE — Services for former Midlander James B. Montgomery Jr., 70, of Moran are set for 2 p.m. Monday in the First Christian Church of Albany with the Revs. Steve Edwards and Tom Anthony officiating. Burial will follow in the Moran Cemetery under the direction of Melton Funeral Home.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home in Breckenridge from 5-7 p.m. today.

Montgomery died Friday in Dallas.

He was born March 18, 1922, in Breckenridge.

He received his bachelor's degree from Texas A&M University and was a U.S. Army veteran of World War II.

He played professional football with the Detroit Lions.

He married Betty June Elliott on Aug. 29, 1945. She preceded him in death on March 21, 1977. He married Camille "Penny" Wilde on April 10, 1979, in Midland.

Montgomery retired in 1982 as West Texas marketing manager for Exxon in Midland.

He was an elder and former chairman of First Christian Church of Midland and was a trustee of the First Christian Church of Albany at the time of his death.

Survivors include: his wife; three sons, Ross Montgomery and Robert Montgomery, both of Moran, and Dr. James B. Montgomery of Dallas; two stepdaughters, Melody Giammalva of Fort Worth and Connie Kuehl of Belton; one sister, Mildred Logan of Lake Buchanan and one brother, Ted Montgomery of Caldwell; and 10 grandchildren.

Alfredo Espinoza

Rosary for Alfredo Espinoza, 60, will be recited at 7:30 p.m. today at the Thomas Funeral Home Chapel. Mass is set for 2 p.m. Monday at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Bill C. Thomas Funeral Home.

Espinoza died Saturday at his Midland home after a lengthy illness.

He was preceded in death by a daughter, Virginia Montoya in 1990.

Survivors include: his wife, Maria Espinoza; three sons, Gilbert Espinoza, Alfredo Espinoza Jr., and Rodolfo Espinoza, all of Midland; four daughters, Blanca Espinoza, Florenda Espinoza, Marcie Espinoza and Martha Espinoza, all of Midland; and 21 grandchildren.

Larry D. Huff

Services for former Midlander Larry D. Huff, were Saturday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Joe McAfee of Ovalo officiating. Burial followed in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Huff died Thursday from injuries he received in an accident while working with a trailer.

Pallbearers were Bruce Harris, Steve Molbery, Larry Pipkin, Jeff Copeland, Jerry Sublett, Rodney Huff, Vann Pipkin and Paul Huff.

Honorary pallbearers were Kirby Locklar, Gary Locklar, James Locklar, Lynn Huff, Roy Mize, Jayson Huff, Tony Huff, Kyle Huff, Russell Huff and Brian Windham.

Eleanore Kersey

Services for Eleanore Bernice Kersey are set for 3 p.m. Monday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Cletus Beights of St. Luke's United Methodist Church officiating. Graveside services are set for 3 p.m. Wednesday at Westlawn Memorial Park in Grand Island, Neb. Arrangements are with Ellis Funeral Home.

Kersey

Mrs. Kersey died Saturday at a local hospital after a lengthly illness.

She was born in Wolback, Neb. in 1925 and raised in Lincoln and Grand Island, Neb.

She married Duane C. Kersey on Dec. 28, 1942, in Kansas. They moved to Midland in 1975 where she was a co-founder and owner of Tall City Uniforms.

She was a member of St. Luke's United Methodist Church.

Survivors include: her husband Duane C. Kersey of Midland; three sons, Duane J. Kersey of Midland; David C. Kersey of Albuquerque, N.M., and Darryl L. Kersey of Dallas; one daughter, Cathy E. Gandy of Greenville, S.C.; three brothers, Jimmy L. McHugh of Shelton, Neb., Ernie A. McHugh of Colorado Springs, Colo., and A. Virgil McHugh of Chicago, Ill.; and nine grandchildren, and numerous nieces and nephews.

Harold Heckathorne

Services for Harold Wendell Heckathorne Jr., 38, are set for 10 a.m. Tuesday at First Presbyterian Church with the Rev. F. Ray Riddle, chaplain of Hospice, officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Heckathorne died Thursday at his residence in San Antonio.

He was born Nov. 12, 1953 in New Brighton, Pa. and was raised and educated in Beaver, Pa.

Heckathorne moved to Midland with his family in 1963 and he graduated from Midland High School in 1972. He attended South West State University in San Marcos and Austin College in Sherman.

He was preceded in death by his father, Harold Wendell Heckathorne.

Survivors include his mother, Maneeta Heckathorne of Midland, and one brother, Robin W. Heckathorne of Peach Tree City, Ga.

NEPOTISM: Sherriff adopted policy in August

(From 1C)

tary judgment against the official.

County Attorney Mark H. Dettman has warned commissioners that that disclaimer in the policy likely would not hold up in court.

Neither Dettman nor Constable Ron Rice signed the endorsement form but both, by letter, agreed in principle with the policy.

"I can assure you," Dettman said, "if a suit is filed against a county official, whoever is filing suit is going to sue the county also."

Commissioner Wright agreed: "The county is going to be sued, not just the officer. They will be sued jointly and separately."

Dettman said he understands "what the commissioners are attempting to do" by their policy. "But if the county is sued along with the individual (official), I have no doubt that all proper steps are going to be taken to protect the taxpayers' money."

Members of the Commissioners' Court are "trying to protect their own interests in case somebody sues the county because they weren't hired," Dettman said.

For example, in a sex discrimination suit or a race discrimination suit, a complainant could charge that he or she wasn't hired but "a relative of another person was."

Dettman said that there is a legal concept whereby "counties are liable if it is their official policy to engage in such action. And I think the commissioners are making clear that that is not the official policy of the county."

The Commissioners' Court is "looking out for the taxpayers' dollars," Dettman said.

Dettman said, "In my opinion, it is a poor business practice to have relatives working in the same office. It just leads to too much conflict. And things are hard enough as it is."

The more lenient Texas law on nepotism, Dettman said, says that "An elected official is prohibited from employing a relative in his office. That's it. Doesn't apply to anybody else but the elected official.

"As long as they are not related to me, everybody in this office could be related to each other," Dettman said. "I wouldn't do it, but it's not illegal."

Since Painter took office as Sheriff in 1985, he has hired relatives of supervisors, including a captain whose sons work for the department, and married couples.

But Painter said he has not hired relatives of any department since Aug. 27, 1990, when he adopted his departmental policy.

That policy reads: "Effective immediately, any person related as spouse, brother, sister, father, a grandparent, or in-law in the same category to a Midland Sheriff's Department employee will not be eligible to be employed by this agency." The sheriff's policy does not mention mothers, sons, daughters, uncles or aunts.

The Sheriff's Department and the Constable's Office do employ married couples but, in at least two instances, the couples were married after they were working for the county.

Painter said he drafted his policy after a married couple, working in different department offices, fell into a minor conflict.

"We've never encountered a problem, as far as a relative supervising another relative," Painter said. At least, Painter said that he is not aware of any problems arising out of a supervisor-employee relationship within his department.

"There are some (relatives) in the same department, but they are cushioned by two other supervisors," Painter said. "Our people all have acted professional and grown up."

Seltzer, who became county judge in 1991, said that the Commissioners' Court got "off of dead center and started formulating a policy" on nepotism this year following a new hire within the Road and Bridge Department.

The newly hired man, George Williams, would be working for his father-supervisor.

The Commissioners' Court, which has direct control over the Road and Bridge Department, feared that conflicts might result from workers' perception of the father-son relationship. The Commissioners' Court encouraged the man to apply for a job within another county department.

"It's not good management to have relatives who are supervising relatives," Seltzer said earlier, "or being in charge of operations where they could possibly influence the promotion of a relative or where it is perceived that they could influence the promotion of a relative."

The nepotism policy has a grandfather clause that protects employees hired before the policy was enacted, Seltzer said.

The county policy states that "the practice of nepotism is detrimental to good order and discipline" in county government and is "contrary to good morale in the work place and frequently results in unnecessary conflicts, disruptions, and jealousies."

VanHorne to conduct classes

Staff report

Former Midlander Larry Lee VanHorne will conduct Master Classes Monday through Thursday at Cherry Jones Studio.

VanHorne began his dance training at Texas Tech University. He has performed with Festival Ballet in San Antonio, Atlanta Ballet and various New England companies. He is currently a member of the Zenon Dance Company, Minneapolis, Minn. The company uses modern and jazz in its repertoire.

VanHorne, the son of Midlanders Mr. and Mrs. C.G. VanHorne, also spends his summers teaching and dancing in Portland, Maine.

For more information call Judy Coleman, 694-0358.

Symphony Chorale to host auditions

Staff report

Auditions for the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale are set for the next three Tuesdays.

Auditions will be conducted by Rob Hunt, Chorale director and associate symphony director for the MOSC. They will be held at the MOSC Rehearsal Hall, 3100 La-Force Blvd.

Each 10-minute audition will cover sight-reading, both melody and parts, tonal memory testing and a performance of the song of the singer's choice.

Interested singers need to call the symphony office, 563-0921, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday to schedule an appointment.

CLIMB: Trip will cost $20,000

(From 1C)

"This trip will cost approximately $20,000," he said. "The first group would have costed $40,000. I'm getting off cheap for Everest."

Getting into shape for the trip wasn't a problem for Cox, who has kept in shape through exercise. In preparation for the trip, he began climbing the Guadalupe Mountains every weekend with 70 pounds strapped to his back. During the week, he works out on a stairmaster with 70 pounds of free weights.

Training also included putting on weight and forcing himself to eat when he wasn't hungry.

"The average climber loses approximately 30-40 pounds during a climb like this," Cox said. "Because of the high altitudes, there is not enough oxygen to digest your food. You spend a lot of time nauseous and not wanting to eat. So, I've gained 25 pounds and I try to eat at times when I'm not hungry, so I'll be used to it."

Cox's trip will mix a little work with the pleasure of climbing. He will be doing research for the Explorer's Club of New York, which promotes scientific research in remote areas.

"I will be sampling snow at 21,000 feet to measure airborne pollutants, particularly any fallout from the Persian Gulf oil fires," said Cox.

Cox's group will also be the subject of a National Geographic segment to run in the spring.

"A camera crew will be at the base camp," he said. "They want to compare modern expeditions with the early ones. It will run in the spring, which is the 40th anniversary of the first climb and the 30th anniversary of the first American climb."

And, what will Cox do once he has climbed every mountaineer's dream?

"I'd like to think that it will be out of my system and I'll spend my next vacation at the beach," replied Cox. "But, I know better. There are always other mountains to climb."

STRAYS: Ordinance is being considered

(From 1C)

However, pet owners may soon be restricted to five animals per household pending approval of a proposed city ordinance.

"Pet owners will have to register with us within 30 days of the second reading," Willis said. "But people who have more than five will be able to keep them. Once the animals die off they won't be able to replace them."

The ordinance, if passed, would apply to people with indoor pets as well.

City Council members will consider the measure on August 25.

dangerous.

"I worry about little children. Pigs are meat eaters," she said. "A hungry pig could push over a small child and try to eat it."

Mrs. Erskine, who still supports the pig proposal only if other exotic pets and livestock get the same designation, also believes the Animal Control center will have a tough time corraling escaped pigs.

"Animal Control has enough problems catching cats and dogs," she said.

But to help catch stray pigs, the center has asked Lanham and Jerry's Perfect Pets — another seller of pot-bellied pigs — to pay, Lanham said.

"They're throwing a hitch into the deal. They want $7,000 (for) equipment that they claim they need to deal with the pigs," Lanham said.

The equipment includes a gun that shoots a net, scales, a special trailer to lift pigs as heavy as 95 pounds and a "scanner" used to read the microchips.

Lanham believes the $1,250 price of the scanner is warranted but questions the necessity of the other equipment, which he says will not be limited to serving the pigs.

"It will serve a dual purpose. I think they're pawning off what they can use for the cats and dogs," he said.

City Council will consider the issue on first reading Aug. 25 during regular session.

Millions spent on airborne drug war yield no arrests

Editor's note: First of a three-part series by the Houston Chronicle that reveals the meager results of the federal government's multi-million-dollar effort to intercept airborne drug traffickers. The series is the result of a five-month investigation.

By Bob Sablatura
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Federal authorities spent more than $500 million last year trying to catch airborne drug smugglers, but the program did not result in a single arrest or drug seizure along the southwestern U.S. border.

The U.S. Customs Service, in conjunction with military authorities, operates a controversial $2 billion high-tech radar and surveillance system designed to detect and apprehend air smugglers. The majority of the system is deployed along the U.S.-Mexico border, an undisputed hotbed of drug smuggling activity.

A five-month Houston Chronicle study of federal drug cases filed along the southwestern border during 1991 found that the Customs air interdiction program played an almost non-existent role in bringing air smugglers to justice last year, despite the fact that federal anti-drug officials say air smuggling continues to pose a significant national threat.

The Chronicle reviewed every federal drug case filed during 1991 by law enforcement officials in five federal court districts stretching from Brownsville to San Diego, Calif. Every case involving more than 5 kilograms of cocaine or 200 kilograms of marijuana was studied.

Not one of the almost 2,500 federal drug cases was the direct result of the Customs air interdiction program or the military's "radar fence" of radar-equipped blimps, known as aerostats.

CUSTOMS OFFICIALS also were unable to provide a single instance where the air interdiction program directly resulted in a drug seizure or arrest.

But while critics say the high-tech system wastes hundreds of millions of dollars each year and was doomed to failure from the start, Customs officials claim the taxpayers' money is being well spent.

John E. Hensley, assistant Customs commissioner for enforcement, did not dispute the air program's lack of success in making direct seizures or arrests, but said he was not troubled by the results of the study.

Hensley says the air program has effectively sealed off the border against air smuggling by deterring would-be traffickers and forcing drug organizations to turn to riskier and more costly ground transportation as a means of bringing drugs into the United States.

"I believe it has more than achieved what we hoped," Hensley said.

But while describing air smuggling activity in the region as "minimal," he conceded that — due to gaps in radar coverage — the surveillance system only detects about 80 percent of the air traffic over the border, and smugglers may be exploiting those weaknesses.

"CERTAINLY WE ARE not 100 percent effective," he said. "But no law enforcement agency is."

While the Department of Defense is the lead agency for detecting and monitoring international drug smuggling, Customs is charged with the responsibility of tracking and apprehending airborne smugglers after they cross into the United States.

Along the U.S.-Mexico border, the U.S. Air Force operates four radar-equipped aerostats, which provide the primary radar coverage for the air interdiction system. Two additional blimps assigned to the region are currently out of commission.

The radar information from the aerostats — as well as data from radar facilities operated by the Federal Aviation Administration and the Defense Department — is relayed to a Customs communications center in Riverside, Calif.

There the information is sorted to determine which flights are part of the legitimate international air traffic and which flights may be involved in air smuggling activity.

To track suspect airplanes and apprehend offenders, Customs operates a fleet of 130 aircraft and a force of 960 full-time employees located at Customs bases across the southern United States. Ten of those facilities are located along the southwestern border.

AMONG THE AIR fleet is a force of 18 Black Hawk helicopters designed to transport specially trained "bust teams" to the landing sites of drug-laden airplanes.

These teams are stationed across the United States and are on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

One member of a Customs "bust team" said his air unit has not been involved in a legitimate operation inside the United States in more than three years. He and his fellow team members spend most of their time sitting around playing cards.

Things have gotten better in the last year or so, the employee said, because the airplanes are now being used to fly missions outside of the country.

But before that began, the Customs employee said, they were told to get into their aircraft and fly up and down the Gulf of Mexico coast — at more than $1,000 an hour — to make it appear they were doing something.

The Customs air program started in the late 1960s with just a few planes and less than 50 employees. It remained a small operation until the mid-1980s when the political furor over drugs reached a crescendo.

Within the past six years, it has tripled its air fleet and increased the number of employees sixfold.

LAST YEAR, THE Customs air program cost taxpayers almost $200 million.

And while exact Defense Department spending on air interdiction is not available, military officials estimate that more than half of the department's $750 million interdiction budget goes to thwart air smugglers.

Since 1987, federal spending on the air interdiction system has exceeded $2.2 billion.

Paul H. Boeker, president of the Institute of the Americas in San Diego, said the high-technology interdiction system is a waste of money because it employs a "needle in a haystack" approach.

The only effective interdiction, he said, is based on prior information that a drug shipment is under way.

"They don't have the capability to do anything with that haystack of information," he said. "The only time they can really go after a needle is when they have a very different kind of intelligence on a shipment — which is not 50 blips on a radar, but a very precise report from a paid informer."

Customs officials — having no real evidence of success — are reduced to touting drug seizure statistics and misrepresenting the benefits of the air interdiction program to protect its budget, Boeker said.

"CUSTOMS WILL FIGHT for every penny of this and will try to obscure the fact that it is not achieving anything," Boeker said. "It's a big chunk of their payroll at this point and if it's cut back, they will have to lay off people and bosses don't like to do that."

"The only thing that is not involved is cold analysis and fact."

Boeker is a member of the Inter-American Commission on Drug Policy, a private group of U.S., Canadian and Latin American experts on drug control policy.

After the study of federal drug cases failed to turn up a single seizure or arrest made as a direct result of the Customs air interdiction program, agency officials in Washington were asked to produce specific seizures made directly by air interdiction personnel.

After weeks of searching, Customs supplied details of two drug seizures the agency said were made as a direct result of its air interdiction program.

One of the seizures was an October 1990 case — a 798-pound cocaine bust — described by Customs as a "direct intrusion" by an air smuggler, who was arrested after the shipment landed at an airfield in Wharton County, 60 miles west of Houston.

Details contained in the court file, however, show that the cocaine was seized from the trunk of a Lincoln Continental at a truck stop in Houston as part of a joint Customs-DEA operation.

THE COCAINE SHIPMENT, according to court papers and attorneys involved in the case, was actually flown into a Houston airfield, rather than to Wharton as Customs records indicate.

The court file also revealed that the cocaine was smuggled into the United States by DEA and Customs employees, who flew to Guatemala to pick up the drugs using a government-supplied airplane.

After the cocaine arrived in Houston, Customs undercover agents loaded the drugs into the truck of the Lincoln and then delivered it to the individuals who were later arrested and charged with the cocaine's importation.

"It was their airplane and it was their pilot," said Houston attorney John Mendoza. "They knew where the airplane was headed before it even left (Guatemala)."

The other case provided by Customs — a 51-pound marijuana seizure in Arizona — turned out to be a Border Patrol case in which the marijuana was brought across the border by backpack.

Customs spokesman David Hoover later conceded his agency was not the primary agency involved in the bust, but only provided "assistance" to the Border Patrol. He could not explain the nature of that assistance.

But despite the agency's apparent lack of success in apprehending drug smugglers, Customs officials delight in displaying the agency's aircraft and equipment as a public relations tool.

BLACK HAWK HELICOPTERS — which have become the unofficial symbol of the high-tech drug war — are often displayed to schoolchildren and loaned out to assist local law enforcement officials conducting air searches for fugitives and missing children.

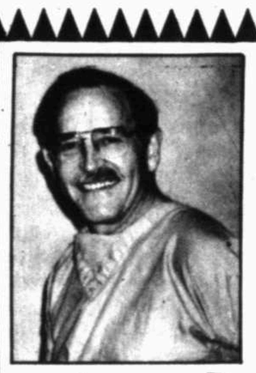

Houston defense attorney Kent Schaffer said that every time he has seen a Customs Black Hawk helicopter used in a drug bust, it was to impress the news media.

"It would be a terrible job to be the pilot of a Black Hawk helicopter — it's sort of like being the Maytag repairman," Schaffer said. "You sit around and wait for the phone to ring so you can go to work, so the first time you have some excuse to jump into your helicopter and take it up, you do it."

Hensley agreed with critics and said that seizures are most often the result of intelligence activities by the federal drug agencies rather than "cold interdictions" at border crossings.

Part 2 will appear in Tuesday's edition.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Chaparral Corps to host first orientation session

By H.A. Tuck

Midland College would like to utilize your time and talents. The Chaparral Corps is a new group that will have its first orientation session at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium.

Tuck

If you've been looking for an organization that needs your help, look no further. Volunteers for The Chaparral Corps will be utilized in student tutoring, clerical, good will, landscaping, and other avenues of service. Training will be provided and volunteers can spend a few hours or quite a lot of hours, according to what time they have available. All types of skills are needed and volunteers will be assigned where they feel most comfortable.

Stan Jacobs, associate dean of instruction, is serving as coordinator for The Chaparral Corps.

If you'd like to become a charter member, or just wish to learn more about the organization, please come to the orientation session Tuesday for an hour. If that isn't convenient at this time, call Jacobs at 685-4551 to learn more.

This is the final week to obtain a registration time permit before the official enrollment days. The time permit assigns each person a specific period to report on Aug. 25 or 26 for registration. You may obtain a time permit by visiting the Student Services Office in the Student Center Monday through Thursday between 7 a.m.-5 p.m.

Those who don't obtain a time permit won't be able to register until the last couple of hours of the second day or until late registration begins ... with the cost of a late registration fee added to regular tuition and fees.

Fall semester classes start on Aug. 31, but students get a holiday the next week when the college is closed Sept. 7 for Labor Day.

A seven-week Small Business Seminar Series has been scheduled by the college's Business and Economic Development Center. Starting Sept. 15 and meeting each Tuesday evening through Oct. 27, the sessions are designed to assist small business owners/operators and would-be entrepreneurs in assuring the success of their enterprise.

Topics will include legal forms of business, bookkeeping, financial statements, business financing, worker's compensation issues, payroll issues, and income taxes.

If you'd like to register or get more information, call Jim Flores and his staff at the BEDC, 685-4639.

Two Midland College publications are inserted in this issue of the Reporter-Telegram. One of them is the bulletin of fall Continuing Education Department courses being offered. The other is a report from the college president David Daniel to the community about the college. We hope you will take the time to look through both publications. They contain a wealth of information.

A regular meeting of the college's Board of Trustees is slated for 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Board Room, Administration Building. This is the meeting when the Trustees usually adopt the operating budget for the coming year. Trustees approved a draft of the budget for 1992-93 at their June meeting, so only minor changes are expected to be made for the final budget figures.

Also planned for Tuesday is the regular monthly Small Business Breakfast, which begins at 7:30 a.m. in the Student Center's Chaparral Hall. Cost is just $5 per person. If you'd like to attend, call 685-4639 Monday and give Jim Flores your name. The breakfast is a chance to meet other small business owners and operators, plus an opportunity to learn how small businesses can get on bid lists for major business and governmental agencies in the Midland area.

Summer Session II ended last week, to the great relief of both faculty and students. There's a slight lull this week, just before everything begins again on Aug. 24. That's when faculty members return for the start of a week of in-session training, division meetings, committee meetings, and two days of registration. Quite a number of faculty have already been around, serving as advisors for students who have been registered the past few weeks.

Registration for those fall Continuing Education classes starts tomorrow. After looking through the schedule at all the new offerings, we'd suggest you register now. Many of the classes fill up early and we'd hate for you to be disappointed. Also, if there is sufficient interest, extra sessions sometimes can be added.

Just visit the Continuing Education office in the Administration Building to register. If you'd like, you can even register by mail with the aid of an enrollment form in the course bulletin. And, should you have questions, just call 685-4518 to obtain answers.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

Trinity School to register 475 students this fall

Staff report

Some 475 students are expected for opening day of classes, Sept. 8, at Trinity School, 3500 W. Wadley. Trinity, an independent, coeducational, day school, enrolls students from age three to grade 12 from throughout the Permian Basin.

Trinity was founded in 1958 as the Episcopal Day School and became an independent school in 1966. Presently, the school holds membership in the Independent Schools Association of the Southwest (ISAS) and the National Association of Independent Schools (NAIS).

Trinity is the only ISAS school in Texas west of Fort Worth with an upper school program.

It is comprised of four divisions: preschool, which includes classes for three- and four-year-olds and kindergarten; lower school, for primer through grade five; middle school, grades six through eight; and upper school, grades nine through 12.

The upper school was established in 1988, and there have been two graduating classes.

Graduates of Trinity historically have attended some of the nation's most prestigious colleges and universities. Currently, graduates are attending such schools as Bowdoin College, Reed College, Vanderbilt University and the U.S. Air Force Academy, as well as the University of Texas at Austin and Southern Methodist University.

An almost 9,000-square-foot building for the upper school was completed this past spring.

Trinity is situated on a 20-acre campus. More than 70,000 square feet of flor space is contained in 14 buildings.

For additional information concerning the school, contact the director of admission at 697-3281.

LORD....Let us thank you for the marvel that this man (Grandaddy, Husband, Father & Friend) was. That we can say good-bye to him without shame or regret, rejoicing in the blessed years he was given to us. Knowing that his bright life, his many gifts, have not truly been stilled or wasted, only lifted to a higher level where the rest of us can follow yet.

Separated? Yes. Forgotten? Never!

For his spirit will be with us always.

Navy Lt. J.G. Thomas D. O'Keefe, whose wife, Melissa, is the daughter of Beauford and Mariane Slay of Midland, is currently participating in a major maritime exercise aboard the amphibious assault ship USS New Orleans, homeported in San Diego.

Exercise Tandem Thrust is being conducted off the Coast of California and ashore in Southern California and Arizona. O'Keefe is one of 20,000 sailors, airmen, Marines, soldiers and Coast Guardsmen taking part in training operations that employ approximately 19 ships and submarines and 200 aircraft.

The 1983 graduate of Boston College High School, Dorchester, Mass., and 1988 graduate of Northeastern University, Boston, Mass., joined the Navy in December 1988.

Four Midland children return from Lions Camp

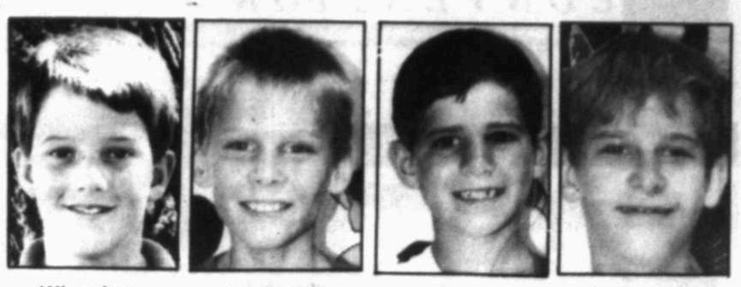

Staff report

Four youngsters sponsored by local Lions Clubs have recently returned from Texas Lions Camp at Kerrville.

The camp provides a variety of challenging programs for children between 7 and 16, who are visually or hearing-impaired or have physical disabilities.

The camp has provided more than 40,000 handicapped youth with an opportunity to learn from and enjoy the outdoors since it was founded in 1949.

Insulin-dependent diabetic youngsters at the camp are given the opportunity to learn how to manage and understand diabetes.

Wheeler McQuitty Scott Mills

This summer's campers included: Charles D. McQuitty, 9, son of Charles and Sandra McQuitty, sponsored by the Midland Lions Club;

Garrett Scott, 9, son of David and Emily Scott, sponsored by the Midland Northside Lions Club;

Carl Mills, 12, son of Kathy C. Mills, sponsored by the Midland Suburban Lions Club; and, Chad Martin Wheeler, 10, son of Billy and Donna Wheeler, sponsored by the Midland Downtown Lions Club.

Non-Profit Resource Center to host workshop

Staff report

Non-profit organizations face a monumental task in planning to maximize their effectiveness and enhance services in response to community needs.

Agencies in West Texas are encountering difficulty providing services with minimum staffing and declining funding, according to Laura Walker, interim executive director of the Non-Profit Resource Center in Midland.

Agencies that fail to plan discover that their service delivery becomes reactive and fragmented, she said. Proactive, specific planning practices are central to every organization's success.

The center is sponsoring a workshop "Eating the Elephant . . . One Bite at a Time," to help non-profits define and strengthen their planning processes. The workshop, led by Lauri Barber, vice president of fund distribution for the United Way of Lubbock, is set for Aug. 31 from 9 a.m. until noon at the American Red Cross office at 120 E. 2nd St.

The workshop is designed to provide non-profit managers and volunteer board members with the skills and techniques required to develop and define their agencies' strategic plans for future growth, Ms. Barber said.

Lee cheerleading squads bring home awards

Staff report

The varsity and junior varsity cheerleading squads of Lee High School brought home more than new T-shirts and dirty laundry from the 1992 Universal Cheerleading Association (UCA) Training Camp.

Vying against more than 1,200 participants, the two Lee squads brought home a gold ribbon and trophy in the pom (dance) routine category. The varsity squad also earned a gold ribbon and trophy in the sideline chant category while the junior varsity squad earned a gold ribbon and trophy in the sideline cheer category. The camp was held Aug. 3-6 in San Marcos.

The squads and individuals also garnered 13 blue ribbons and three red ribbons. School mascot, James Faircloth, was awarded a plaque and gold ribbon. Jennifer Loftis was selected to the UCA All Star Varsity team, qualifying for participation in the Lord Mayor of Westminister Christmas Parade in London; and Kristi McBride was selected to the UCA All Star Junior Varsity team, qualifying for participation in the Foley's Thanksgiving Parade in Houston.

Judging was based upon technique, originality, projection, spirit and crowd appeal.

Varsity cheerleaders are: Katherine Bishop, Rachel Divine, Kevin Edwards, Neil Geismar, Danielle Grubb, Darren Grubb, Alex Hernandez, Jennifer Loftis, Bryan Lofton, Candice Maynard, Kim Owen and Denver Renfro.

Junior varsity cheerleaders are: Stephanie Foppiano, Brandy Harmon, Mandy Jeffreys, Kristi McBride, Vicky Ramirez, April Rice, Gina Salcedo, and Carol Scott.

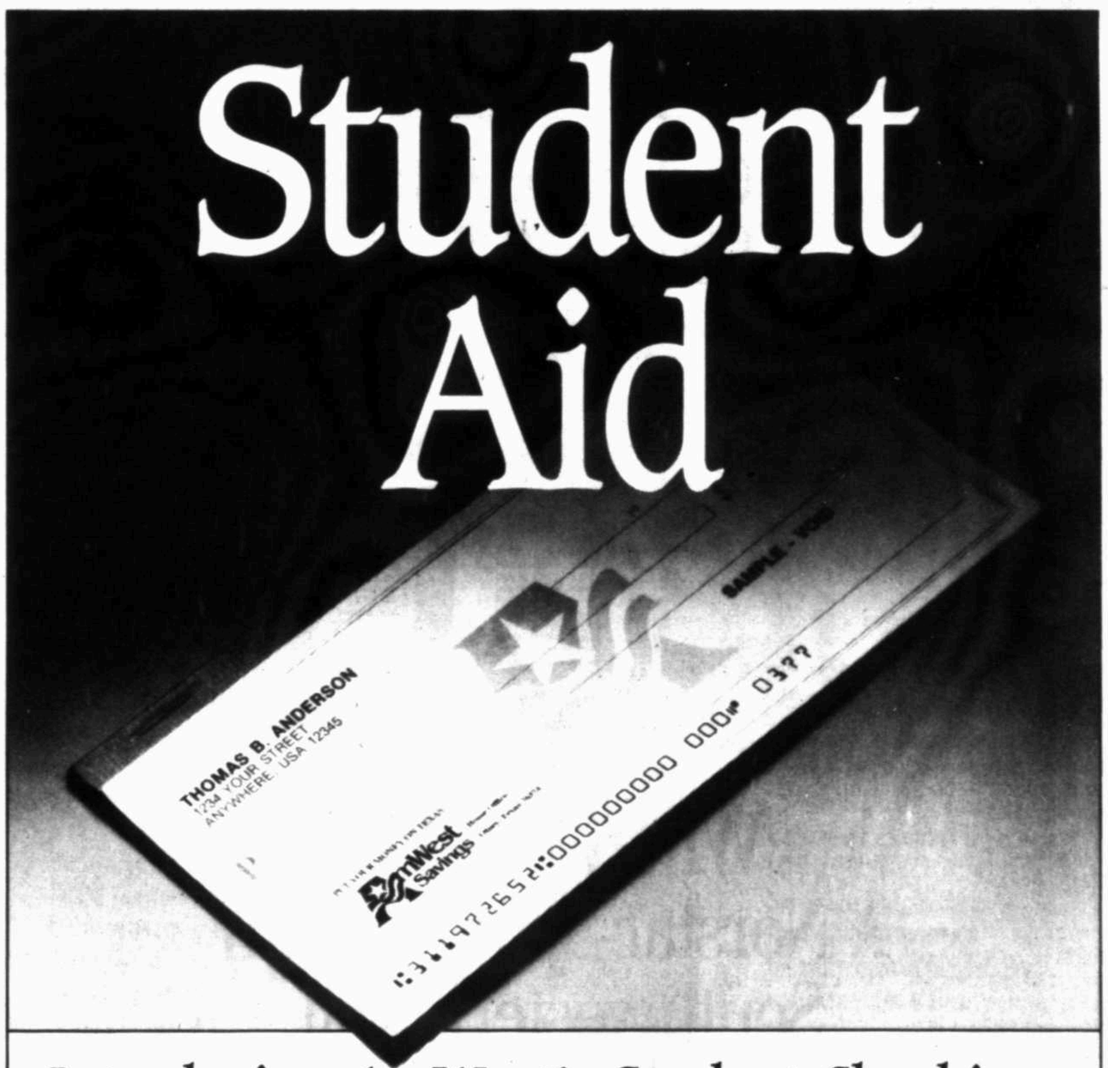

Cheerleader sponsor is Bruce Wilson.

Bush camp confident in Texas

By Max B. Baker
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — President Bush's chances of carrying Texas are good despite a double-digit deficit in the polls and a re-election effort that has suffered from a lack of hand and eye coordination, his campaign staff said on Saturday.

By tapping his deep reservoir of political connections in his adopted home state — and by clearly defining the differences between the two parties — Bush will erase any lead now held by Democratic candidate Bill Clinton in Texas.

But senior aides in the Bush campaign also reminded statewide Republican Party leaders at a meeting in Houston on Saturday that they will have to work the phone banks and knock on a lot of doors since a Texas victory is crucial.

"I think we are in good shape here," said Charlie Black, a senior adviser to Bush. "But it is just common sense, you don't have to be a genius to know you need Texas to win."

Black described Texas as "an anchor of our electoral strategy."

A poll published in Sunday's Houston Post shows Bush, on the eve of the Republican National Convention in Houston, is trailing Democratic candidate Bill Clinton in Texas by 17 points.

Of the voters surveyed, 53.4 percent said they supported Clinton while 36 percent favored Bush with 10 percent saying they supported neither candidate or were undecided.

Texas is considered an important state by both the Democratic and the Republican parties.

But Black and Jim Oberwetter, head of Bush-Quayle' 92 in Texas, said Clinton's lead will disappear with a rousing acceptance speech by Bush and by redefining their message to voters.

Bush is spending the weekend at Camp David writing the speech and, while they don't know what it contains, Black said the speech would contain some surprises that will win him supporters.

The president may propose a tax cut to win back those voters who have felt betrayed by a 1990 tax increase, U.S. Housing and Urban Development Director Jack Kemp was reported as saying.

When asked what has hurt Bush the most in Texas, Black said the economy. "We have a problem with jobs — there just aren't enough jobs," he said.

But they said once Bush starts hammering on Clinton's record as governor in Arkansas as well as his campaign planks — he is pro-choice, supports a tax increase for the rich and is opposed to voters will pick Bush.

"George Bush still has this huge reservoir of good will and popularity on a personal basis in Texas," Black said. "The issues on which we will be running, the agenda that we will develop to contrast on between the Clinton agenda and the Bush agenda works particularly well in Texas."

The appointment of Houstonian and former Secretary of State James Baker as Bush's White House chief of staff, where he will have control over the campaign, will energize an effort that's lacked cohesion, Oberwetter said.

"He is from Texas and he knows Texas very well," Oberwetter said. "He is a master of Republican presidential politics."

Gramm primed for GOP spotlight

By James R. Owen
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — When Sen. Phil Gramm takes the podium Tuesday night to deliver the keynote address of the Republican National Convention here, his immediate task will be to breathe life into President Bush's sagging re-election bid.

But in taking potshots at Bill Clinton and the Democrats, Gramm also will set the stage for his own presidential ambitions for 1996 — one of Washington's worst-kept secrets.

With his nationally televised, prime-time talk, millions of Americans will get their first close-up look at a brilliant, ambitious and forceful senator who is described by both friend and foe alike as egotistical and difficult.

Former Texas Rep. Marvin Leath once said that in dealing with Gramm, "There are two things you've got to remember: No. 1, he's smarter than you are. No. 2, he's meaner than a junkyard dog."

Asked about his presidential hopes in an interview last week, Gramm, speaking with the thick drawl of his native Georgia, insisted, "I'm focusing only on getting George Bush another four years in the White House."

Still, Gramm agrees that his keynote talk will be an important opportunity for him.

"There's only one better speech you can give at the convention," Gramm said, referring to the speech Bush will give Thursday night accepting the GOP presidential nomination.

In 1988, Gramm made the speech nominating his fellow adopted Texan for president.

Gramm, who holds a doctorate in economics, was elected to Congress in 1978 as a Democrat from College Station, home of Texas A&M, where he was a professor. At A&M, he met and married another economics professor, Wendy Lee, who now is chairman of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission. They have two sons.

> 'I'm going to define the choices we face in this election. Both parties are for change. The debate's not about change, it's the direction of that change.'
> — Sen. Phil Gramm

Now 50, Gramm made headlines in 1983 when he resigned from the Democratic Party after the congressional leadership disciplined him for collaborating with the Republicans to design and pass Reagan's tax-cutting and spending-reduction agenda.

In 1984, Gramm won a bitter contest to become a Republican senator from Texas, and he has been on the GOP fast track ever since, emerging as a leader among party conservatives, particularly on fiscal issues.

In his first year in the Senate, Gramm was the driving force behind the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction law.

In 1990, he easily won a second term, and was named by his GOP colleagues to head the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, raising millions of dollars for the party's candidates and collecting valuable political IOUs.

Gramm has stumped doggedly for Bush across the country this year, dutifully touting an incumbent president who some analysts believe holds a more moderate political philosophy than Gramm's.

Gramm's name is near the top of any list for a 1996 GOP White House bid. But at the convention he will have to compete for attention with other would-be contenders, including Vice President Quayle, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp and former Education Secretary Bill Bennett.

"Each one of the men on the Republican short list for 1996 has got a crack at it in one way or another," said Stephen Hess, a presidential scholar at the nonpartisan Brookings Instituiuon in Washington, D.C. "Still, he gets the best shot, an awfully good showcase on national television."

Republican conservatives are delighted that Gramm will be giving the keynote address.

Gramm declined to give much of a preview of his speech, which he's been polishing for weeks now. He said only that he would lay out the differences between the two candidates, invariably casting the Democrats as the "tax and spend" party unlikely to reinvigorate the nation's faltering economy.

"I'm going to define the choices we face in this election," he said. "Both parties are for change. The debate's not about change, it's the direction of that change."

Known as an engaging, downhome orator who lards his speeches with wry references to his mother and to Dickie Flatt, a printer from Mexia, Gramm said the keynote speech would be a serious one.

"I don't know that there's a joke in the whole speech," he said. "This isn't a funny speech. We're down 22 points in the polls, so this is a 'tell it like it is' speech."

Is Your Child Too Small?

Growing up always has its hazards, but for some children just the process of growing can be difficult. For these children, a normal growth rate does not occur because they lack an essential hormone.

By three years of age, children should grow at least two inches a year until they are 10 to 14 years of age, when they experience an even faster growth. If children are not growing at this rate and are smaller than children their own age, they may have hormone deficiencies.

Odessa Women's and Children's Hospital is offering a FREE Growth Screening for children. By taking an accurate measurement of height. We can determine if their height is normal for their age group. And, if below normal, further evaluation and assessment will be recommended.

Haunting stories of detention camps reach press

■ Centers play major role in Serbian strategy.

By Stephen Engelberg with Chuck Sudetic
N.Y. Times News Service

ZAGREB, Croatia — The first images of emaciated men peering through barbed wire in Serbian detention centers in Bosnia-Herzegovina riveted the world's attention. In the week since, a clearer picture has begun to emerge of the scope of the camps, their conditions, and the role they play in the larger Serbian military strategy.

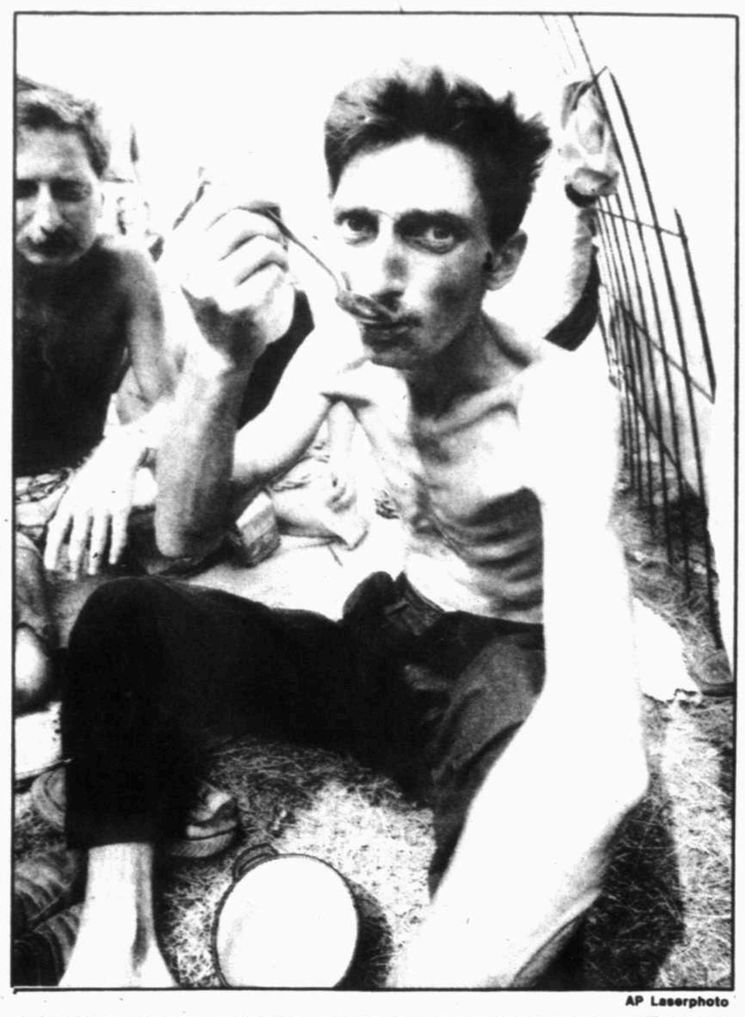

Interviews with officials of international relief agencies and dozens of Bosnians — some of them still held in the camps, others living as refugees in Croatia — establish these major points about a conflict that has created Europe's worst refugee crisis since the end of World War II:

■ Conditions at the detention camps were described as brutal, but there is little evidence as yet that the Serbs were using them to carry out a policy of mass killing. Witnesses said repeatedly that death was usually more of a random event, resulting from beatings by drunken guards, disease and revenge shootings by Serbian irregulars whose friends had died in combat elsewhere.

■ The camps were only one of the instruments of terror, and by no means the most deadly, in the arsenal of "ethnic cleansing," the campaign to drive Muslims and Croats from their homes in large swaths of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

■ The Serbian efforts gathered momentum in mid-May, after Western aid workers and journalists were temporarily driven out of most of Bosnia by a series of lethal, premeditated attacks. The "ethnic cleansing" operations were largely complete by early July, when Western aid workers returned to the area.

■ The existence of the detention centers, and the possibility that summary executions were taking place within them, was made known to Western governments and aid agencies at least a month before the first extensive press report on the subject appeared in the newspaper Newsday on Aug. 2. It was only after that report, and the first broadcast of film from the camps several days later, that President Bush announced that he had ordered American intelligence to use "every asset available" to investigate the conditions at the camps.

AP Laserphoto

A Muslim prisoner-of-war eats in the detention camp of Trnopolie, near Banjaluka, 112 miles northwest of Sarajevo.

The interviews have shed little light on the assertions of the combatants themselves, which are wildly divergent. The Serbian forces who control 70 percent of the country say, for example, that they are holding no more than 8,000 prisoners in a handful of camps; but their beleaguered Bosnian government foes say that the number is 105,000 people in 94 locations. Bosnia estimates that 17,000 have died in the camps. Refugee interviews, representing only a fraction of the camps, can account for only a few hundred such deaths.

THOUGH THE INVESTIGATION did not substantiate assertions that the camps had once again brought genocide to the heart of Europe, it has turned up ample evidence of mistreatment, beatings and abuse involving thousands of prisoners. Some have spoken of dozens of inmates being taken away, never to be seen again, and others have told of an incident in which more than 100 prisoners were machine-gunned when they rioted for lack of water. Those accounts cannot be directly confirmed. But their credibility is bolstered by the consistency of testimony from refugees and prisoners in disparate places who have had no chance to coordinate their stories. Taken together, the interviews lend credence to a story that Bosnian officials publicly and privately tried to bring to the world's attention for more than two months.

More damaging evidence may still be hidden, for even as they let Western reporters into the region to visit the camps, Serbian officials were shuttling prisoners out of sight and dismantling the most notorious camps. Moreover, Western reporters and officials of international relief agencies have been allowed to visit only four Serbian detention camps in Bosnia; the Bosnian government lists 94 such sites.

Western aid officials say that Croats and Muslims are, to a lesser extent, setting up their own prison camps. As of last week, the International Committee of the Red Cross said it had visited 13 detention centers or prisoner-of-war camps in Bosnia-Herzegovina: 7 Croatian, 4 Serbian and 2 Muslim.

Bosnia-Herzegovina was the most ethnically mixed of the six republics that made up Yugoslavia after World War II. Muslims, Slavs whose forebears converted to Islam during the centuries in which Bosnia was ruled by the Ottoman Turks, were the most numerous group in Bosnia-Herzegovina, with 44 percent of the population of 4.5 million, as measured in the 1991 census.

Serbs, an Orthodox Christian Slavic group that predominates in the neighboring Serbian republic, were 31 percent of the Bosnian total. Croats, who, like the others, are Slavs and speak Serbo-Croatian but are Roman Catholics and did not fall under Ottoman rule, comprise 17 percent.

The remainder identified themselves to the census-takers as Yugoslavs, embracing a non-ethnic nationalism that today is all but crushed.

Those groups were interspersed throughout Bosnia, with many towns and villages having no majority ethnic group and many Muslims, Serbs and Croats living literally next door to each other.

Slovenia and Croatia declared independence from Yugoslavia in 1991, but the Bosnian leadership was leery of following suit, having watched neighboring Croatia plunged almost immediately into vicious fighting with the Serb-dominated Yugoslav armed forces. But the Sarajevo leadership scheduled a referendum on independence for Feb. 29 of this year. The Muslims and Croats voted yes, while Serbs boycotted and insisted on the division of the country into three ethnic cantons.

THE BOSNIAN GOVERNMENT refused to accept cantonment of the country, and war erupted in early April, after the European Community officially granted recognition. The Yugoslav army and Serb irregulars quickly overwhelmed the lightly-armed defenders, who were predominantly Muslim but included Serbs and Croats.

The plan, it is evident now, was to seize enough territory to forge links between the Serbs in Bosnia, the Serbs in Serbia, and the Serbs in neighboring Croatia. As many as half of Bosnia's 2 million Muslims live in the areas slated to be corridors between the various Serbian regions. They were to be exiled forever in the policy the Serbs call ethnic cleansing.

The accounts of the Serbian policy are so similar from so many parts of Bosnia-Herzegovina that they seem to indicate the workings of an overall plan.

In village after village, it begins with local Serbs politely suggesting that their Muslim or Croat neighbors hand over their weapons. That is generally followed by the cutoff of electricity and water and an ultimatum. Shortly after, Serbian soldiers, backed by armor, roll through the town, shooting a few people, dynamiting houses, and driving men, women and children first into fields and then into camps.

Dozens of witnesses said that they were startled by the attitude of their Serbian neighbors, saying that in some instances the Serbs had clearly helped the invading forces prepare lists of prominent local citizens to be arrested.

"We were surprised by how the Serbs changed," recalled Emir Medjedovic, a store owner from the northern Bosnian city of Bosanski Novi. "One day everything was fine, the next day they said: Why haven't you left yet?"

The detention centers play a major role in the Serbian strategy. The intention, it seems, is that a few days' or weeks' incarceration in grim conditions will solidify the civilians' desire to give up their

Red Cross: 'Death camp' label doesn't apply here

N.Y. Times News Service

The Bosnian president has called them "death camps," but most Western leaders have avoided the term, or rejected it, when referring to the detention centers run by Serbian forces in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

In generally accepted usage, a death camp is devoted to the factory-like, systematic killing of virtually all the prisoners sent there, and most historians reserve the phrase for some of the camps operated by Nazi Germany in occupied Poland. Perhaps the most notorious example was Birkenau, part of the Auschwitz complex, which held the gas chambers in which an estimated 1.5 million people were killed.

Neighboring camps in Auschwitz, as well as those elsewhere in Nazi-occupied Europe, and Stalin's gulags in Siberia, were labor camps, where conditions were appalling and often deadly, but where an inmate had a chance of surviving.

The Bosnian government says that 17,000 people have been killed at the Serbian camps, refugees from Bosnia have spoken of mass executions in the camps, and a few inmates, interviewed by foreign reporters in recent days, have whispered of such killings when their guards have been out of earshot. These reports are unconfirmed.

The U.S. State Department and the International Committee of the Red Cross have said that their information suggests that the "death camp" label does not apply in Bosnia.

President Bush and former Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Great Britain, among others, have referred to the camps in Bosnia as "concentration camps." That phrase was coined by the British in the Boer War to describe their tactic of rounding up Afrikaners from the countryside in an effort to separate the Boer guerrillas from their civilian base of support.

The phrase has since come to be applied to any prison reserved for ethnic or political outcasts, including the gulags and many of the Nazi camps.

Notice of Public Hearing on Tax Increase

The GREENWOOD INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT will hold a public hearing on a proposal to increase total tax revenues from properties on the tax roll in 1992 by 6.8329 percent. Your individual taxes may increase at a greater or lesser rate, or even decrease, depending on the change in the taxable value of your property in relation to the change in taxable value of all other property.

The public hearing will be held on August 20, 1992 at 6:00 P.M. - School Administration Building.

AGAINST the proposal: James R. Brooks
PRESENT and not voting:
ABSENT:

The statement above shows the percentage increase the proposed rate represents over the effective tax rate that the unit published on August 12, 1992. The following table compares taxes on an average home in this taxing unit last year to taxes proposed on the average home this year. Again, your individual taxes may be higher or lower, depending on the taxable value of your property.

	Last Year	This Year
Average home value	$51,655	$51,640
General exemptions available (amount available on the average home, not including senior citizen's or disabled person's exemptions)	$15,330	$15,330
Average taxable value	$36,325	$36,310 (proposed)
Tax rate	1.0517/$100	1.07100/$100 (proposed)
Tax	$382.03	$388.88

Under this proposal taxes on the average home would increase by $6.85 or 1.79831 percent compared with last year's taxes. Comparing tax rates without adjusting for changes in property value, the tax rate would increase by $.0193 per $100 of taxable value or 1.835 percent compared to last year's tax rate. These tax rate figures are not adjusted for changes in the taxable value of property.

Muslim and Croat POWs sit in the sleeping room of the detention camp of Manjaca near Banjaluka, 112 miles northwest of Sarajevo, as journalists toured the camp during a photo opportunity allowed by Serbian authorities Friday. Friday, Serbians and Croats exchanged hundreds of prisoners captured during the war between the two former Yugoslav republics.

property and flee their ancestral homes forever. Indeed, thousands of Muslims have accepted release from the camps in exchange for their signatures on documents "voluntarily" relinquishing all their goods and property.

THE STORY TOLD by Safija Aljucic, a 26-year-old Muslim refugee in Croatia, was typical. She said she had lived in Vlasenica, an ethnically mixed town of 33,000 about 30 miles northeast of Sarajevo, but her account was similar in nearly every detail to the experiences related by Muslims in northern Bosnia, hundreds of miles away.

She said that Serbian forces rode into Vlasenica on April 21 with a few armored personnel carriers and an unruly gaggle of soldiers. Mrs. Aljucic and other residents said that life under Serbian control was quiet but tense until mid-May, when Serbian irregulars blockaded the roads and began burning Muslim houses. When her husband went off to fight in the local Muslim militia, she joined the thousands of people lining up at the bus station in hopes of getting a ride out of town, but soon decided it was hopeless.

She then hid in a nearby village at the home of a friend for 10 days, before Serbs arrested her at the beginning of June and put her on a bus bound for a camp in the nearby town of Susica. As the bus bumped along the country roads, they were told to keep their heads down. Mrs. Aljucic said she peeked out the window anyway, and saw corpses lying on the roadside.

The camp was in a warehouse in a pine forest that was once used to store weapons by local territorial defense forces. Mrs. Aljucic said she was there for three days and three nights.

Each evening, at 2:30 a.m., she said, 15 to 20 men were picked out at random and taken outside.

"They said, 'You, you, you, come with me,'" she said. "We could hear cries and shots. None of them ever came back. The next day, we would see bulldozers with fresh earth on their blades."

For three days, she said, the Serbs drew up lists of people, mostly old men, women and children, who were free to leave, conditional on signing away all their property. When one woman balked at this, she said, a guard told her: "Anyone who doesn't sign this document will be shot."

Even as the Serbs were moving in on Vlasenica in mid-May, they were tightening the noose around the Muslims of northern Bosnia in a similar operation. Those people had the misfortune to live along the roads that connect the Serbs in Bosnia to a Serbian enclave in Croatia.

Witnesses said that Serbs arrived at the villages around the city of Kozarac on May 24, 13 days after local Muslims ignored an order to hand in their weapons. One week later, Kozarac was overwhelmed in a battle that Serbs say left six or seven Serbian police officers dead. The Serbs gave no figure for Muslim casualties, but one Muslim man, who said he was later detailed by his prison-camp guards to collect corpses in the town, said 610 bodies had been picked up.

After the Serbian attack, the people of Kozarac and the surrounding villages were herded into camps. One of the most brutal of those — said by Serbs to be reserved for Bosnian soldiers and criminals — was at Omarska, an iron-ore-processing installation.

WHEN WESTERN JOURNALISTS arrived at Omarska last week, only 175 men were still there. Crude attempts had been made to clean up the camp. Bunk beds were lined up in a room in which inmates said as many as 1,300 men had slept on concrete a few days before. Food was distributed at Omarska intermittently, and the thinnest of the prisoners shown in the first television footage had been incarcerated there. Beatings at the camp were daily and witnesses said the men, some blood-soaked from their wounds, were crammed into cavernous buildings and a cage-like device that was once used to store iron ore.

In nearby Prijedor, a ceramic-tile factory called Keraterm was used as a prison. A half-dozen witnesses who are now in another camp said last week that a riot over a lack of water ended with the machine-gunning of dozens of inmates on or about the evening of June 23. Others were said to have died of asphyxiation in the crush trying to escape the attack.

Five witnesses described hearing what happened through the walls of adjoining rooms. One said he helped carry out corpses the next day and that he had counted 130 dead.

A 49-year-old Muslim from the village of Rakovcani, which is near Prijedor, said he was in the room when the riot erupted.

"They did not give us any water that night," he said. "The men went crazy. Our clothes were wet with sweat, even our underwear. We wanted them to open the windows."

He continued: "The men started singing a patriotic Serbian song trying to get the guards to open the windows. About 10 guys passed out. One of the Muslims broke open the door. Another jumped through the window. Some of the men were crushed and died of asphyxiation.

"The guards shot through the door."

On their first visit to the camp, Western reporters were not shown the room where the shooting was said to have taken place. But a return trip last week found the doorway and outside wall of the room where the shooting was alleged to have taken place pocked with what appeared to be bullet holes, just as the witnesses had described. New panes of glass had been installed on the window frames, which still had their masking tape across them.

Some of those who had been imprisoned in Omarska were moved to Trnopolje, a nearby camp in a school that was said to house another 2,500 to 3,000 men, women and children.

Unlike Omarska, in which prisoners showed clear signs of starvation and beatings, those kept at Trnopolje appeared well fed. Inmates said they had been allowed to pick vegetables from nearby gardens, and relatives and friends were permitted to bring food in to the captives.

STILL, WOMEN WHO said they were held at Trnopolje said in interviews that their stay included at least one evening in which drunken Serbian soldiers came into the hallway in which they were sleeping, picked out young girls, and took them out to be raped. Two men who said they had been in Trnopolje and are now in separate refugee camps in Croatia said that one night at Trnopolje they heard the screams of women being raped.

Serbian officials insist that the camps were set up solely to hold prisoners of war, criminals and refugees who might otherwise be at risk from local vigilantes. They have attributed the conditions in the camps to bureaucratic confusion and theft of food by the guards, not an overall plan to terrorize civilians. The leader of the Bosnian Serbs, Radovan Karadzic, said that Trnopolje, Omarska and Keraterm were all under the authority of the local police chief, Simo Drljaca.

"Why are these guards so much better looking?" Karadzic said after visiting the camps with Western journalists recently and comparing the skeletal prisoners with their overseers. "It indicates that distribution was wrong. If there was bad food distribution it is because the guards were eating much better than the prisoners. Obviously, there was a problem."

On May 18, the newly-named chief of the Sarajevo delegation of the International Committee of the Red Cross, Frederic Maurice, negotiated his safe passage through Serbian positions just outside Sarajevo. Shortly after his convoy, clearly marked with Red Cross emblems, moved ahead, it came under a withering mortar assault that lasted for more than half an hour. Maurice was fatally wounded and two assistants suffered lesser wounds.

On May 20, two days later, the Red Cross pulled out of Sarajevo and on May 27, just as the Serbs were poised to move into Kozarac and its environs, the International Red Cross pulled out of Bosnia-Herzegovina entirely. European Community monitors had already left the country a week earlier after they, too, had come under fire. At that time, most Western journalists also decided to pull out of Sarajevo after a photographer was killed by a mortar shell.

The effect of those attacks was to drive Western observers out of Bosnia at the crucial moment when the "ethnic cleansing" campaign was about to turn nasty. While the Bosnian government held on to Sarajevo, Serbs seized 70 percent of the country, and Croatian forces took control of most of the remainder.

Reporters returned within a few weeks to Sarajevo, and the Red Cross resumed operations on July 7, but the full story of what was happening in May and June in the rest of the country has only become publically known in the last few weeks, as refugees have been expelled or allowed to leave.

BUT MEMOS SHOW that international agencies operating in Yugoslavia had a solid idea of what was going on by early July.

A July 3 memo written by an official with the U.N. peacekeeping forces in Croatia specifically identified Omarska, Keraterm and Trnopolje as "reported concentration camps."

The memo, based on interviews with refugees, spoke of "frustration" about "our inability to do anything other than write reports and stand by." The document, which was later released by the Bosnian government, noted that the U.N. peacekeepers had authority to operate only in Croatia.

Aid officials here say that a meeting was immediately convened in Croatia to discuss the matter. It included the International Red Cross, which had returned to Bosnia in mid-June, and aides to the U.N. high commissioner for refugees. European Community monitors in Croatia were also included, thus putting all European governments on notice of the possible concentration camps in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

On June 28, President Francois Mitterrand of France made a dramatic visit to besieged Sarajevo and was told by the Bosnian president, Alija Izetbegovic, that "information is reaching us of the existence of concentration camps in which the civilian population is being subjected to torture and murder."

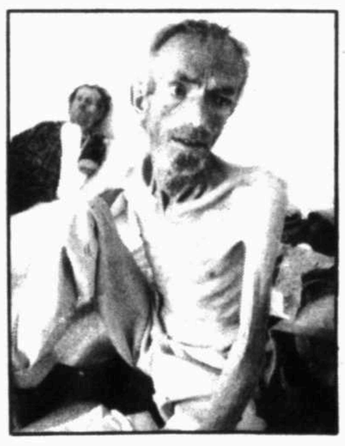

On July 2, Izetbegovic wrote to Boutros Boutros-Ghali, secretary general of the United Nations, about human-rights violations in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

On July 9, Izetbegovic said at the Helsinki summit meeting of the 54-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe that his country had identified 27 Serbian-operated concentration camps and that "schools and sports stadiums have become places of torture and mass killing."

The Bosnian government said that on July 19, Izetbegovic wrote to Bush complaining of "genocide" in the violent attempt to redraw the map of his country.

Yet it was only when the story appeared in the press two weeks later that Bush publicly directed American spy agencies to train their full resources on the question of whether there were concentration camps in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

"If you ask me," Izetbegovic said recently, "it was a question of naivete on the part of the West. They simply could not believe such things are happening in our country, in Europe, in the last 10 years of the 20th century."

The Serbian forces who control 70 percent of the country say, for example, that they are holding no more than 8,000 prisoners in a handful of camps; but their beleaguered Bosnian government foes say that the number is 105,000 people in 94 locations.

How to make money in three easy steps.

Step 1.

Sell a solution! Your old rattle trap is a teen's dream machine. That old set of golf clubs is sure to be a big hit with a beginner. Here's the point: Your former treasure can bring another pleasure. And if you've got a skill to market or service you'd like to provide—there's someone looking for you in classified.

IS LIFE almost perfect for you? Are you not into the bar scene(at keast for meeting women)? Are you financially secure? Can you balance career, family and find some special times for us alone? Are you a gentleman between 38 and 48 years old? Well if these character traits apply to you get ready for the friendship of a lifetime..and let's see what happens. I'm an acheiver and desire a companion who is also capable. I'm a firm beleiver that working together in a business and towards common goals can bring challenge, exitement and togetherness fo a long, long time. I'm very happy being single and have learned to be alone. I can accumulate more property, business, money. But the one thing I want to experience is that one friendship that might lead into a lifelong companion. If you have had ups and downs in your life but are standing on your feet, good memories and busted dreams, enough life in you to still dream with enough faith to still acheive them. Wrire and send a picture! We might just have a good time. MP 471

Home Sweet Home

Photography by Brian Adamcik

By Sonja Merrick

This Mamar Terrace home exudes a sense of old-fashioned warmth and whimsy. At the same time, it's filled with modern, convenient-minded amenities. Surrounded by a well-manicured lawn and mature landscaping in a coveted, established neighborhood, it's an ideal family home.

The entry foyer is graced with a slate floor rich with muted color variations. To the right of the foyer lies a splendidly large formal living/dining area. The living area has a sparkling bay window. The dining area boasts chairback railing, high windows and lots of space for formal entertaining.

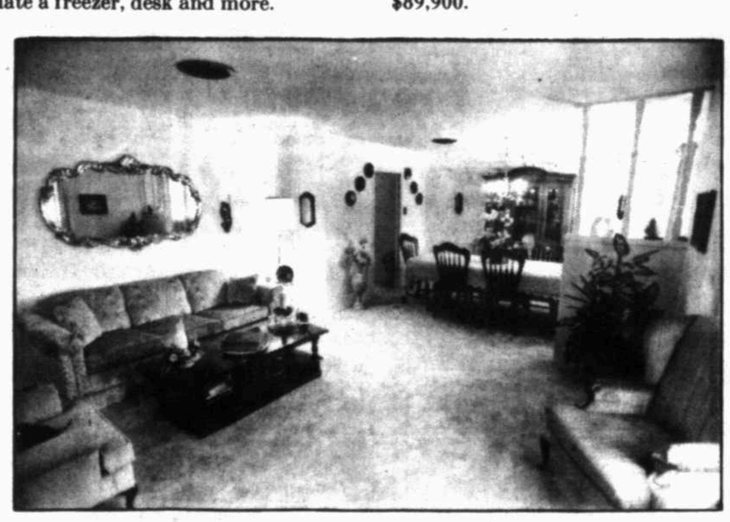

A left from the dining area leads to a large kitchen with lots and lots of cabinets, double oven, dishwasher and disposal. To the right is a charming, self-contained breakfast room. It's sunlit, very large and has lovely, convenient corner built-ins. Behind the informal dining area is a sizeable laundry room, with enough space to accommodate a freezer, desk and more.

Situated to the right of the kitchen is a large family room. Its focal point is a large brick fireplace with a hearth that extends the length of a full wall. Double French doors lead to a white-painted, wood-paneled solarium behind the family room. It, in turn, looks out to a patio and large backyard. Mature landscaping abounds.

A left turn from the entrance leads to a hallway. The first door on the right, opens to a large master bedroom. Connected to it is a dressing area with double closets, a large vanity with tile top and a mirrored wall above. This leads to a master bath with oversized shower.Farther down the hall find two sizeable bedrooms, each with a walk-in closet, and a full bath.

The home has lush ecru carpeting throughout. Other amenities include two-car garage with automatic door opener, fireplace screen, cement title fence and an outside storage building.

The home is being offered by Century 21 Mid-Tex Real Estate for $89,900.

Making your home safe for children

By Pat Paxton

Toddlers can be a real joy, whether they're your own children, a neighbor's, or a nephew, niece or a grandchild. Although you may be prepared for upcoming visits by young children, is your home? The Midland Association of Realtors has a few safety suggestions to prepare your home for a young child's curiosity.

Check the following to prevent accidents and injuries:

■ Furniture — Children get hurt by falling on hard surfaces or cutting themselves on sharp edges. You can prevent mishaps by getting corner protectors, which are available at hardware and furniture stores. Remove fragile tables and plant stands that can tumble easily.

■ Cabinets — Cabinets can be locked with either inside or outside latches. Lock away any dangerous substances such as detergents, bleaches, solvents, other cleaning supplies and insecticides. Keep all medicines and cosmetics out of reach and in the original containers with child-proof caps.

■ Kitchen — Again, lock up all chemicals agents and place knives out of reach. Remember, children can turn on faucets and scald themselves. The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends that parents adjust their water heater so that the temperature does not exceed 120 degrees.

■ Stairs — gates can be temporary stair barriers, but some toddlers learn to climb over them. The traditional accordion gates are particularly easy to master. Gates made of plastic or solid wood frame and strung with polyethylene mesh provide a more effective barrier.

■ Electric Fixtures — Dangling electric cords can be fascinating playthings. You can reduce temptation by buying cord shorteners at a hardware store. These are strips of plastic around which the excess cord is wrapped. Cords that are thin or frayed should be replaced immediately. Also, you can buy small, flat covers to insert in outlets not being used. This will prevent children from putting fingers or other objects into the outlet.

In addition, you may wish to close bathroom doors to keep children from climbing and slipping into the bathtub. Pick up small objects that could be swallowed and get plants out of reach — some are poisonous. Also, rugs can be tacked down to prevent falls.

Never let toddlers play in the garage or basement, especially unattended. There are too many hazards that could lead to serious injury.

Children are inquisitive by nature and are eager to learn how things feel, smell and taste. By following the above tips from the Midland Association of Realtors, you can safely allow children to investigate your home with minimal risk and leave yourself more free to enjoy their visit.

Paxton

Pat Paxton is president of The Midland Association of Realtors. The Association is one of more than 1,800 local boards and associations of Realtors nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors (NAR). As the nation's largest trade association, NAR is "The Voice of Real Estate," representing nearly 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

Pointers in selecting a Realtor right for you

Buying and selling real estate requires professional and competent guidance. Selecting a professional and aggressive Realtor can be difficult.

For the buyer, there is a new breed of Realtors, the buyer/broker. The buyer/broker represents only the buyer. Texas requires Realtors to officially disclose who is representing whom. According to the rules of the Realtors Multiple Listing Service (MLS), when a property is listed for sale, all of the realty agents in the transaction are automatically expected to represent the seller's interest unless special arrangements are made. Due to consumer awareness, there are now buyer/brokers who solely represent the home buyer in a sale.

In either case, whether buying or selling a house, the Realtor you select should be aggressive. There are many different Realtor designations that reflect how aggressive a Realtor is. A Realtor that has a Certified Residential Specialist (CRS) designation is considered to have the highest degree a residential real estate professional can attain. To acquire a CRS designation a Realtor has hours of advanced study in several areas including listing, selling, taxes and investment. Realtors with Certified Relocation Professional (CRP) designation must complete a rigorous self-study course, pass a written exam and have a minimum of two years Corporate Relocation experience.

These designations are a definite plus in selecting a Realtor, but there are other considerations as well. Referrals and references are the best way to select a good Realtor. Check out the Realtor's references. Select a realtor who is familiar with the area and is knowledgeable of previous sales in the area. Make sure the Realtor has access to MLS. If you are selling your home, ask the Realtor how they plan to market your home. If you are buying a home, make sure the Realtor is representing you and not the seller. Choose a Realtor with a reputable real estate company. Check your local newspaper for advertisements, articles, etc. on good Realtors in your area.

Dried flowers, herbs make colorful decorations

By Beverly Bundy
N.Y. Times News Service

You can fashion colorful, affordable decorations from ingredients readily available at supermarkets and grocery stores. Following are some of Lucinda Hutson's entertaining suggestions for a Southwestern or Mexican-accented get-together.

Dried herbs and flowers, chile pods, cactus pads and dried corn husks can combine into an inexpensive natural table runner. Throw in some fresh peppers (red, green, yellow and orange) to perk up the color.

Don't forget doo-dads you might have bought while traveling. A black Oaxacan bowl full of dried chile pods or a basket group filled with fresh peppers can be a strong focal point.

Pots of fresh herbs, displayed in a large basket, form a natural centerpiece. Cover the plastic or clay pots with wood shavings to carry out the earthy effect.

Use "found" objects like antlers, feathers, animal skulls, arrowheads and pieces of wood for an outdoorsy Texana look.

Fill a terra cotta or other ceramic plant drip tray with stones or dried beans to anchor an assortment of candles.

Group tall colorful religious votive candles (available in Mexican grocery stores) on the table.

No matter the season, string chile pepper lights around doorways for a light-hearted touch.

For a sit-down dinner, mark each guest's place at the table with a miniature terra cotta pot of fresh herbs; inscribe a garden marker with the guest's name. Treat the pot as a party favor so guests will remember a sweet-smelling evening.

TRANSAMERICAN Natural Gas Corporation

KENT OIL, INC. KENT KWIK CONVENIENCE STORES

WHY KENT OIL COMPANY?

Kent Oil (operating Kent Kwik convenience stores) is a West Texas-based company, thirty five years old and still growing. We offer many benefits to our employees. These benefits include:

- Company-assisted medical, dental and life insurance
- Paid vacations
- Sick pay program
- Tuition reimbursement program
- Special incentive programs for all employees
- Profit-sharing and retirement plan
- Intensive new hire training
- Structured continual management training
- Flexible scheduling
- Full and part time hours available
- Work close to home
- Affiliation with Odessa 66 credit union

We attempt whenever possible to promote from within. All of our current store managers, middle and upper management started with the company at the entry level. It is possible to move up quickly based on your experience and level of education.

Working in a convenience store is both exciting and challenging. You have to be outgoing and enjoy serving the public, while at the same time be a self-starter, as you receive very little on the job supervision.

If you are considering a career in the retail industry, give Kent Oil your consideration. Please apply (and be ready for interview) at the Kent Oil office Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. 3314 N. Loop 250 in Midland.

Rigs increase

A roughneck making hole on a Grace Drilling Rig in the Dollarhide field. The rig count was up four this week from 98 to 102, while the U.S. count was up 19 to 709. A year ago the Basin count was 100 and the national was 796.

CNG network

Argentinian government energy officials this week inspected Energas Co.'s compressed natural gas public refueling facility in Lubbock this week.

With nearly 200,000 natural gas vehicles, Argentina has more NGVs than almost any other country in the world, and is looking to add more.

"The Argentinian officials came to Lubbock to learn more about Energas's compressor station and dispensing units," said John Malkut, international business consultant who is representing DVCO, the natural gas dispensing firm that sponsored the visit.

Energas operates a network of CNG refueling stations in Amarillo, Lubbock and Odessa. The network was constructed by CNG Services of Midland.

Oil prices

Oil tanks glisten in the Powell field. Oil prices this week slipped slightly below the $21 during the week amid rumor of oversupply, but rebounded by weeks end because of technical factors in the market. Prices closed at $21.34 on Thursday. This has been four weeks that oil prices have hovered around $21.

Oil report

A special report, detailing the downturn of the oil industry will be presented Monday night on the MacNeil/Lehrer News Hour on PBS, according to sources in Houston. The report, set to run the evening of the opening of the Republican Convention in Houston, will look at 30 stacked rigs in Sabine Pass and other stacked rigs and closed oil businesses in the Houston area.

Asset sale

FORT WORTH — Morrison Petroleum Ltd. of Calgary, Alberta and Union Pacific Resources Inc. (UPRI), the Canadian subsidiary of Union Pacific Resources Company (UPRC) of Fort Worth, Tx, announced that they have signed a letter of agreement for Morrison to acquire UPRI's interests in certain oil and gas producing properties, undeveloped acreage, and an extensive seismic database located in Central Alberta.

The transaction, approved by the Boards of Directors of Union Pacific Corporation, Bethlehem, PA, and Morrison, is subject to the completion of a purchase and sale agreement.

The purchase price, $50 million (Canadian), is subject to elections on rights of first refusal that exist on a number of the properties.

Independents may find new opportunity

■ Independents may want to join majors overseas says geologist.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Without question, major oil companies have played a large role in Midland's oil industry.

But as the majors increasingly leave the Permian Basin — and the U.S. — for overseas opportunities, independent producers are stepping in to fill the void, buying properties that are not cost-effective for the majors to operate and doing a large share of the exploratory drilling.

However, one Houston-based expert believes it's time independent producers joined the majors in setting their sights overseas.

Robert Bertagne, who visited Midland in April during the meeting of the Southwest Section, American Association of Petroleum Geologists, said that "with people with the right expertise, an independent can go overseas and stand a chance of finding decent production."

He noted that only 15 attended his talk on the subject during the AAPG meeting, which he attributed to a sign of the economic times. But he added that "the bottom line is, unless they get out of the situation they're in, they've got to go overseas."

He cited as the most pressing reasons for looking overseas is "the economies of scale. In the U.S., we've drilled all the big fields, and the small ones cost more. The cost of finding a barrel of oil is more expensive. Plus, there's shrinking acreage. Third, there's diminishing prospect availability and less quality prospects. Then there's cost control — the majors no longer control the cost of crude."

He added that markets are becoming internationalized. "The oilfield has been globalized. The positive consequence is it doesn't take a lot of money to find oil if you know what you're doing."

Not only U.S.-based majors but state oil companies from other nations are moving overseas, he pointed out, citing as examples Brazil, Ecuador, Colombia, India, Thailand and even Kuwait.

In considering overseas exploration, Bertagne said the most important thing is do homework on the area of interest. "Do a study of the area; look into prospects. You'll need approval of the host government, but do it. Use a spiral study — start with the regional geology, then the trends, then one prospect.

"The main point is, overseas you do not deal with individuals but directly with the government. Mineral rights, except in Canada and a small part of Colombia, are owned by the government and under the direction of the ministry of energy or hydrocarbons or the national oil company entrusted with mining. You need to prove to them that you have the financial and technical capacity to fulfill the program they ask you to propose to them, usually consisting of seismic plus one well. Seismic is more expensive overseas and a well can cost from $2.5 to $3 million. But the reward is much greater; even though you expose more money at the start, you stand a chance of finding larger reserves and making more money."

A seismic program, he said, is usually 300 to 400 kilometers, costing anywhere from $5,000 to $12,000 per kilometer or $8,000 to $16,000 per mile.

He added that "contrary to popular belief among many independents, the host government will help you. Do not

Midland's far flung influence

■ Midland influence is far and wide in the domestic oil industry.

By Joe Dominey
and Ellen Hopkins

Midland started as a headquarters town for the Permian Basin, but over the years that role has expanded with the oil industry.

Today Midland is headquarters for divisions that account for production in many states. No one knows for sure what the percentage is, but it is well known that a majority of production in the lower 48 states is operated out of Midland, and that thousands of workers in other areas reports to Midland.

Following are synopses which outline the scope of responsibilities of some majors and large independents with offices in Midland.

PARKER & PARSLEY PETROLEUM COMPANY

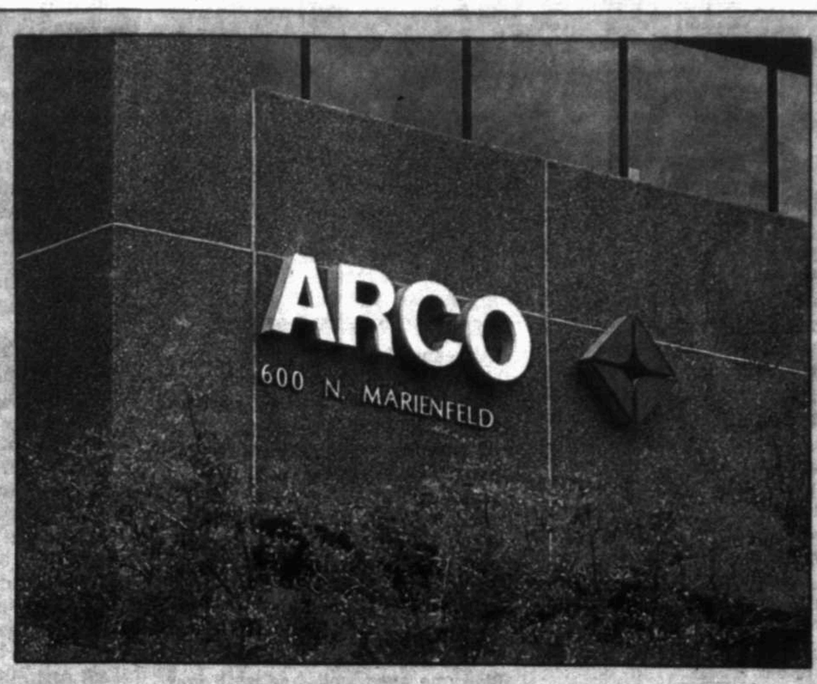

Parker & Parsley Petroleum Company, Midland's largest publicly-owned independent, has over 4,000 wells in eight states. They produce 28,000 barrels of oil and 116,000 MCF of natural gas per day (expressed as operated volumes, not net).

P&P's commitment continues to be to "concentrate in our own back yard," according to James D. Moring, Senior Vice President, Operations.

He reported that Parker & Parsley has been divesting a number of properties in areas removed from West Texas. The company has already sold off all its properties in Montana, North Dakota, Wyoming, Mississippi, and Indiana, and is in the process of divesting properties in Louisiana and Alabama.

Moring explained that the great

Gas prices sign of turnaround?

■ A study points to natural gas turnaround, but real price may not improve over 1989 levels.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

The firming of natural gas prices could be the first signs of a turnaround, says a joint study by Arthur Andersen & Co. and Cambridge Energy Research Associate. But a report by a consulting firm says the real price of natural gas is likely to remain below 1989, despite a turnaround.

The study Natural Gas Trends says the first signs of turnaround in natural gas markets are being created by fundamental changes in the marketplace and regulatory changes that will drive the natural industry toward increased price volatility and competitive realignment over the next few years.

The primary marketplace factor driving the industry is increased demand. "Demand growth, which has increased 20 percent in the last five years, is the most important factor tightening the market," says Everett Gibbs, director of natural gas industry services for Arthur Andersen.

The illustration here notes how the average natural gas price to the end-user sector has changed since 1978. Producers took the biggest loss from 1985 to 1991.

At the same time demand is expected to increase even more in the coming months from new markets such as natural gas vehicles, exports to Mexico and natural gas cooling.

The sweeping changes of FERC Rule 636 are also seen as having a profound impact on natural gas markets, because the rule is expected to result in a more competitive realignment of the industry and increased price volatility yearround.

"The pace of competitive restructuring and price volatility still depends on a number of market and regulatory factors," says Gibbs, "but the industry as a whole has clearly entered a new cycle that includes increased consumption, growing supply constraints, new competitive pressures — and for some producers a return to profitability."

The study says new transmission capacity, and the natural gas futures market will play a role in pricing, while increased storage will serve to buffer price shocks.

Gibbs notes that FERC Order 636 creates two commodities: natural gas and transmission capacity. This will reduce the customer's need to use interruptible transportation, place greater cost and risk pressures on distribution companies and end users and create more opportunities for gas merchants, concludes the study. It also concludes that distributors and end-users will need to adopt new

Laguna Quatro foes brace for showdown

Pitts

The "Incident at Laguna Quatro," a western adventure which pits unaware oil companies against hostile bureaucrats in a rage of environmental overkill, could become a bungle of epic dimensions. And, the bureaucrats portrayed by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in Dallas could end up as classic bunglers if the facts as presented by the oilmen prevail.

This is an incident whose ripples are spreading far and wide and will probably not go quietly away. In addition to a possible lawsuit, all the political guns the oilmen can muster will be aimed at EPA.

An independent consulting firm in Washington D.C. is already looking into the matter for the Department of Energy, and as the facts roll in they do not appear to favor EPA. A Washington insider told me confidentially that the perception was that EPA was not well-informed on this issue of the lakes and may have bungled it.

It is a notion that gets much support from those operators affected by an EPA action that levelled $4 million in administrative penalties against 38 producers in Southeast New Mexico for alledgedly discharging produced water into salt lakes.

First, the EPA alleges that the companies were in violation of the Clean Water Act because they did not have a general permit and are therefore responsible for discharging produced water into "waters of the United States."

But there is substantial evidence to support the contention that Laguna Quatro does not affect interstate commerce and therefore does not give EPA jurisdiction over these dry salt lakes. If EPA goes to the court house on this one it will be awfully difficult to explain to a judge how these pitiful, briney New Mexico pot holes should be declared "Waters of the United States."

It might also be hard to convince a rational, fair-minded judge that oilfield brine is killing birds, when in most cases the produced water dumped into the lakes are of higher quality than the brine water that was in the lakes before producers started using them 50 years ago.

If anything, oilfield produced water may have improved the water quality of the lakes, says Frank Yates, an indepenent producer from Artesia, New Mexico who is heading up a producers task force to confront EPA on their pollution charges. He notes that EPA charges about oilfield brine killing migratory birds are "pure conjecture."

There is also the question of legality. All of the producers charged with discharged waters into the "waters of the United States" did so through a trucking company that was duly licensed and permitted by the State of New Mexico and the Federal Government (Bureau of Land Management). Did EPA know the water was being discharged under legal permit?

Also, the high-handed, roughshod manner in which EPA handed out its "administrative penalties" with much fanfare and without warning or notification to producers, who were publicly condemned and heavily fined may not sit well in a court room. The New Mexico Oil & Gas Association has called play politics overseas; overseas, who you know doesn't mean anything. If the small companies do their homework and are willing to learn, there's no reason why they shouldn't successful overseas."

OVERSEAS: Holds potential for small firms

Bertagne advised hiring an expert on overseas exploration. Born and raised in France, he came to the U.S. in 1950, joining Conoco in 1955, and worked there for 20 years before going on his own. Working for independents and as a consultant, he has 15 years experience overseas, and proudly noting that he has worked in 75 sedimentary basis and been physically present in 44 countries.

"Talk to people with foreign expertise," he suggested. "Together, review areas available and tailor the desires of the independents to available areas and arrange a match. Don't look at just the technical but at the human factor and the political side."

A problem independents have had in trying to go overseas, he said, is relying on people they know. "Most of the people who work for independents are U.S. generators, engineers who know U.S. production problems. Production problems may be somewhat different overseas."

Even though he has 35 years experience, Bertagne said, "If I tried working domestically, I wouldn't know where to start."

He observed that independents, being individualistic by nature — a trait he quickly added that he respects — "don't always understand that overseas there is a certain way to proceed. If you're dealing with a government, do it their way."

While there are many opportunities overseas, Bertagne advised independents to avoid Russia for the time being.

"The problem with Russia is legislative risk," he explained. After the Soviet Union dissolved into independent countries, companies from the West were welcome but Russian bureaucrats were working with a petroleum code for the first time, he added.

"The civil servants responsible for enforcing the code have no experience; they don't understand the risk. For a period of time now, whenever they see an infringement, they'll tighten up and penalize the entire oil industry. It's a human process; but overreaction in Russia will affect the little operator. A big company, whether it's Conoco, Chevron or Elf, has staying power and can weather the storm. An independent can't."

Because it may take five years to drill a first well overseas, and an average cost of $1 million per year, Bertagne said independents who might not be comfortable on their own might consider putting together a group of three or four operators. Any more than that, he said, and the host government might not approve the proposal.

Or an independent can ask the government for a smaller concession or to accelerate the program. "If you're an independent and you find one good well, one is all you need," he said.

There are over 5,000 independents in the U.S. who Bertagne said can invest overseas and make money. And with his extensive international experience, he said, "No matter where I've gone, I can always find an enterprising American able to make money where someone else was not. I have great faith in enterprising Americans; they'll always be there.

"If Mickey Mouse can go overseas," he concluded, referring to the new EuroDisney in France, "so can independent producers."

it a "media event."

Play-for-press is a motive not to be discounted lightly. Because of formula stories and media mindset, any "environmental expose'" is guaranteed big exposure. And those doing the exposing are almost guaranteed to come up heroes. It is a "white hat" and "black hat" formula that works every time, and is used frequently by government agencies to garner favorable publicity.

It matters little what the facts are or how stong the case, only how inflammatory the rhetoric accompanying the charges.

Accustomed only to having their rhetoric printed and not accustomed to being challenged, an EPA spokesman I interviewed last week about Laguna Quatro, was noticibly disturbed that a reporter would try to hold his feet to the fire and ask him to explain and document EPA statements. "You sound like someone from an oil and gas newspaper!" he accused. I confessed that bias worked both ways.

Did the EPA act before they had their "ducks lined up?" Did they bungle this one? I expect that will be the theme of this incident, as it heats up in the weeks to come. It may also be the conclusion.

GAS: Price points to natural gas turnaround

methods for buying, pooling, balancing, transporting and storing gas, and notes that this will create new opportunites for gas marketers, brokers, producers and other middlemen to provide new, rebundled services.

However, once all is said and done, the real price for natural gas may be lower in coming years than 1989, when industry experts say prices hit bottom.

DAR & Co., a natural gas consulting firm predicts that sufficient gas supplies will be forthcoming at "far lower prices than most people forecast in 1989."

The consulting firm predicts that the real price of gas in 1995 will be no higher than 1989 and that the real price in the year 2000 could be even lower. DAR & Co. points out that the average wellhead price a decade ago was approximately $2.50 per MMBtu, and explains that the average 1992 price would have to be about $3.70 per MMBtu to offset a decade of inflation.

While real gas prices are now less than half what they were a decade ago, no deliverability collapse has occurred, and consultants attribute this to the ingenuity and determination of the producer who has offset the decline in prices.

MIDLAND: Oil town with widespread influence majority of its properties, approximately 1,900 wells, are in the West Texas Spraberry District and another 645 are west of Midland and in southeast New Mexico. The Spraberry wells account for 20,000 BOPD, with the West Texas/New Mexico wells adding 4,800.

The company operates 259 wells in its San Angelo District, 112 in the Texas Panhandle, 83 in South Texas, eight in Louisiana, 211 in Oklahoma, 61 in Colorado, 37 in Kansas, 674 in Pennsylvania, and 43 in West Virginia.

The Pennsylvania and West Virginia wells are strictly gas wells.

P&P operates nine gas plants: Seven in Texas, one in Colorado, and one in the Oklahoma Panhandle. In addition, it owns two gas treating facilities in South Texas and gathering systems in North Texas.

With a total roster of 700 employees, about 300 work at the Midland headquarters with another 100 in the 11 gas plants and treating facilities, and the rest are in field operations. District offices are located in San Antonio, San Angelo, Oklahoma City, and Breckenridge.

By the end of this year Parker & Parsley president and CEO Scott D. Sheffield expects the present value of its reserves to rise to $700-million.

Last April P&P raised about $50-million through a new stock offering, reducing long-term debt and increasing its unused available line of credit to about $100-million.

"We are taking advantage of the exodus of most of the major oil companies leaving the lower 48, and by staying in our back yard we are able to stand with a very healthy balance sheet. We're able to make further acquisitions of key properties by adding very little overhead," Sheffield explained.

MOBIL OIL CORPORATION

Larry Bohot, Mobil Oil Corp.'s Midland North Area producing manager, said "Midland is important to Mobil, without a doubt. We have seven floods on CO_2 now, and will have the Salt Creek coming on in mid-1993."

Even though Mobil last year sold off some of its Spraberry holdings to Parker & Parsley, it still has 5,000 operated wells in its region. Of that number 3,000 are oil wells, 300 gas wells, and 1,500 injection wells used to inject water or CO2 into flood zones.

The region managed from Mobil's headquarters in the Texas Commerce Bank building includes the Permian Basin, all of New Mexico, and the Anath Field in southeast Utah.

Daily volume for the area is 80,000 BOPD and 500,000 MCF. Another 500,000 barrels of water per day are reinjected into waterflood zones.

About 10 percent is primary production. Another 75 percent is secondary waterflood, and 15 percent is CO2 enhanced oil recovery.

Mobil operates four gas plants in West Texas, located in the Pegasus Field southwest of Midland, the Waha plant south of Midland, the Salt Creek plant in Kent County near Jayton, and one at Coyanosa. A fifth plant is operated in the Anath Field in Utah.

The company operates two pipelines from Denver City, one extending to the Slaughter Field south of Lubbock, and the Este pipeline extending to the Salt Creek Field.

About 650 employees are in the Midland region, with about 300 at company headquarters.

MARATHON OIL COMPANY

Marathon Oil Co.'s Mid-Continent Region, headquartered in Midland, spans all of New Mexico, the Permian Basin and Texas Panhandle. It operates about 2,500 oil, gas, and injection wells throughout this vast territory.

The break-down is approximately 1,820 producing oil wells, 320 producing gas wells, and 360 injection wells.

Daily gross liquid hydrocarbons produced total a little more than 60,000 barrels per day. Daily gross gas volume is a little less that 117,000 MCF per day.

Joe Bush, Finance Administration Manager for the Mid-Continent Region, said there are 210 Marathon employees in Midland, and another 260 throughout the region. Other offices are in Iraan, Hobbs, McCamey, with several field offices in Northwest New Mexico and the Texas Panhandle.

The company operates two gas plants, one in the Yates Field, and one in the Indian Basin Field in Southeast New Mexico.

In assessing the company's long range commitment to Midland, Bush stated, "We are strategically located in Midland to supervise our diverse operations. Midland has served us very well for nearly 50 years, and will continue to be an important business center as we maintain our presence in this vital oil and gas region."

EXXON COMPANY, U.S.A.

Exxon Company U.S.A.'s Southwestern Division, headquartered in Midland, crosses numerous state boundaries. The division has responsibility for leases in West Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Nebraska, North Dakota, Wyoming, Montana, Nevada, Utah, and recently began stewarding onshore California operations. The Division's activities are staffed by approximately 1,000 employees.

The Division operates three gas plants. The Pyote Gas Plants is near the town of Pyote, and Cordona Lake Gas Plant is approximately 13 miles southwest of Crane. The LaBarge Gas Plant is located in Wyoming.

In addition to gas plants, Southwestern Division operates over 6,000 active production and injection wells. Exxon should realize production levels, including leases operated by others, of approximately 92,000 BOPD crude and condensate, 320 MMCFD natrual gas, and 230 MMCFD CO_2 by year-end 1992.

ARCO OIL AND GAS COMPANY

Arco Oil and Gas Co.'s Western District office in Midland employs 505 people with an addtional 445 Permian Basin field employees and 82 staff. The District's operational area covers properties from west of Ft. Worth, to California and up to Michigan. It is essentially considered the western U.S. Although another production office is located in California, support is received from the Midland office.

In the Permian Basin alone, Arco operates 3,400 wells and is involved in a total of 19,000 wells. Approximately 70 percent of ARCO's wells are oil producers.

John Whitehead, manager of Arco's Odessa Asset Team, said, "The Permian Basin operations are an integral part of the ARCO Oil and Gas Co. and its future in the Lower 48. We still have many high quality assets with significant potential future development."

Doug Eisele, business financial planning analyst for the Permian area, said ARCO's production amounts to 46,000 BOPD, 120,000 MCF of natural gas and 15,000 barrels of liquids per day for the Permian Basin.

Two major gas plants are operated by the Western District, Block 31 and Crane, and one CO_2 processing plant, Willard Unit, near Denver City.

"We feel the combination of existing infrastructures, prolific fields, undeveloped horizons, focus and new technology such as 3D seismic will keep Permian Basin Exploration and Production profitable for many years to come," said Jack Lybrand, manager of Arco's Midland Asset Team.

CONOCO INC.

Conoco Inc. has 219 employees in its Midland office and a total of 367 in the Permian Basin. The local office operates 2,980 wells.

The Permian Basin is divided into eight Operational Units: Carlsbad, Maljamar, Hobbs, Odessa, Big Lake, Forsan, Post & Hamlin, and San Juan.

Gross Conoco operated production amounts to 34,865 BOPD and 141,500 MCFD of natural gas.

"The Permian and San Juan Basin are two important core areas for Conoco Upstream North America, currentaly and in the forseeable future," said Conoco management on behalf of Mark Mosely, Midland division manager.

CHEVRON U.S.A., INC.

The number of Chevron U.S.A., Inc. employees based and working out of the Midland office amounts to 570. The office is basically a production office; Chevron also has a refinery in El Paso that is handled by another office.

Ron Jackson, senior financial analyst with Chevron, sakd the company has 6,450 active producers, 3,100 active injectors (service wells), and 3,200 inactive wells which are either shut in or plugged. The local office's geographic region includes three counties in New Mexico – Chaves, Eddy and Lea – and 35 counties in Texas.

Full stream production from this area on Chevron operated wells is approximately 84,000 BOPD and 425,000 MCFD of gas.

TEXACO

Texaco's Midland Producing Division (MPD) covers the Permian Basin and San Juan Basins with production from Texas, New Mexico, Utah and Colorado. The area is handled by 1,000 Permian Basin employees, 362 of which are in the Midland office.

Texaco's active wells, including injectors, in these four states total 9,628; most of these – 8,504 – are oil wells and 1,124 are gas wells. One-hundred percent production from these wells amounts to 85,000 BOPD and 440,000 MCFD.

The Division currently has seven drilling rigs running and should be up to 16 by the end of August. MPD has drilled 67 wells to date and plans to drill over 200 by year end.

Injection began at Texaco's Mabee CO_2 project in January. Approximately 30,000 MCFD of CO_2 are currently being injected, extending the life of this field an additional 15 years.

Helen Pattison, assistant division manager in Texaco's MPD Assets Division, said the MPD has excellent waterflood potential. "Four new floods have been started in the last two years and Texaco's current plans are to start four more next year," she said. "In addition, the company has a strong inventory of projects that will carry this activity well beyond the year 2000."

Pattison said Texaco considers Midland a core asset and a hub for its Permian Basin activity.

"This year MPD will spend approximately $160 million in capital and $150 million of expenses in the Permian Basin.

"Texaco is committed not only from a business perspective but is also committed to the community," she said. "Our ongoing philanthropic program includes a major effort by Texaco and its employees for the United Way. We have also participated in a wide variety of community organizations with our employees dedicating about 2,600 hours of volunteer service so far this year. We're also very proud that Texaco, through the outstanding efforts of our employees, was named the Corporate Volunteer of the Year in both Midland and Odessa for 1992."

SANTA FE ENERGY RESOURCES

With its recent purchase of Adobe Resources Inc., Santa Fe has become one of the larger independents in Midland, which has just become the company's Central Division. With 150 employees in the Division and 70 in Midland, the company operates properties in the Anadarko Basin, Rocky Mountains and Midwest. Permian Basin production amounts to 11,000 barrels daily of oil and 20 million cubic feet daily of gas.

BLM publishes regs

Staff report

Senator Pete Domenici (R-N.M.) has announced that the Bureau of Land Management has published the final regulations on a reduction of royalty rates on stripper wells that should result in an increase of oil production.

The new regulations, which become effective Sept. 10, change the way the Bureau of Land Management assesses royalty fees to well operators, Domenici said.

"These new regulations should prove to be an important benefit to oil producers," he said. "The operators of small stripper wells have suffered serious setbacks in recent years and many wells have been forced to be shut down. These changes may help over 400 wells which may otherwise have had to shut down over the next five years."

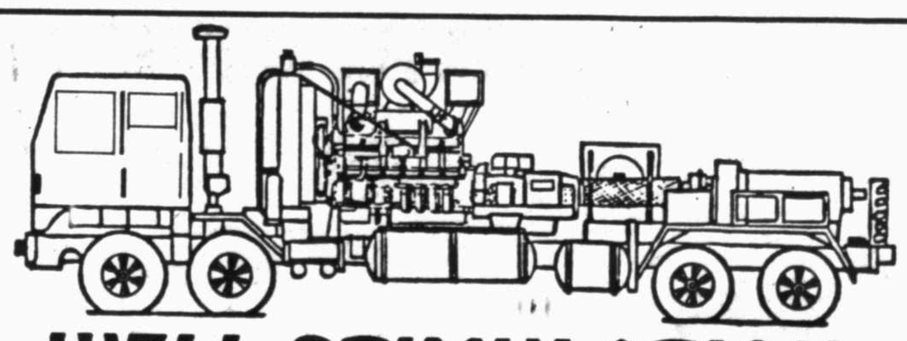

The BLM published the final rulemaking on royalty on stripper wells in the Federal Register. Copies of the regulations are available at the Senator's field offices in Albuquerque, Roswell, Santa Fe and Las Cruces.

The goal of the BLM rate change is to encourage well operators to return marginal or uneconomical shut-in wells to production and to boost domestic production of oil.

WELL STIMULATION
Few wells in the Permian Basin produce without some form of artificial stimulation. The August 27th issue of the PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT will look at the current technology in well stimulation. It will include stories about acidizing, fracing, and the volumes, rates, and various types of chemicals used. Do not miss this issue!

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Reentry nets San Andres discovery

Staff report

An abandoned well has been reentered and completed as a modest San Andres discovery, two miles northwest of San Andres production in the Suniland field of Garza County, a half-mile southwest of Southland.

MARSHALL & WINSTON INC., Midland, reentered the No. 1 Basinger, completing it to pump three barrels of 38 gravity crude and 15 barrels of water from perforations 3,824 to 3,849 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,500 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

Originally drilled to 9,845 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 5,400 ft.

The well topped the Woodford at 9,319 ft., Ellenburger at 9,350 and Granite Wash at 9,687 ft. on ground elevation of 3,016 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and 477 ft. from west lines of Section 1267, John H. Gibson survey, Abst. 308.

The well was originally drilled by Superior Oil Co. and abandoned in November 1981.

Fusselman gas find tested in Crockett

Crockett County has yielded a Fusselman gas discovery, six miles east of Sheffield.

MERIDIAN OIL INC. potentialed the No. 4101 Gulf-Millspaugh for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.31 Mmcfd and 29 barrels of 59.6 degree API condensate from perforations 7,824 to 7,842 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons of 15 percent HCL.

Permitted as an 8,200 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,050 ft. and plugged back to 7,974 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,038 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,173 ft., include the Cretaceous at 512 ft., Yates at 608, Seven Rivers at 776, Queen 952, San Andres at 1,404, Clearfork at 2,624, Spraberry at 3,860, Dean at 4,970, Wolfcamp at 5,114, Canyon Sandstone at 6,524, Strawn at 7,410, Devonian at 7,642 and Fusselman at 7,800 ft.

Location is 5,090 ft. from north and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 41, Block 1, I&GN survey, Abst. 592.

Canyon extension flows 42 barrels

Middle Canyon production has been extended in the Zan Zan field of Irion County with completion of activity in the field, 5.5 miles northeast of Mertzon.

CASS ENERGY CORP. finaled the No. 17 Joan Crews Hoyt to flow 42 barrels of 42 gravity crude, 34 Mcfd and two barrels of water on a 30/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 180 psi. The well flowed from perforations 6,002 to 6,037 ft., which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons of 7.5 percent acid and fractured with 18,000 gallons of gel and 43,800 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Permitted as a 6,700 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 6,575 ft. and plugged back to 6,533 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,574 ft.

The well topped the Upper Canyon at 5,870 ft., Middle Canyon at 6,000 and Canyon 'K' at 6,349 ft. on ground elevation of 2,157 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from north and 230 ft. from west lines of Section 18, Block 3, H&TC survey.

Runnels field gets fifth King producer

A fifth King producer has been added to the Little Boot field of Runnels County, extending the pay south, two miles west of Winters.

NOVO EXPLORATION CORP. completed the No. 3 Kurtz to pump 12 barrels of 41.8 gravity crude, 1 Mcfd and 23 barrels of water. The well produced from perforations 2,704 to 2,707 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of 15 percent acid and fractured with 4,700 gallons of gel, 3,000 lbs. 20/40 sand and 1,000 lbs. 12/20 sand.

Drilled to 2,770 ft., the well was plugged back to 2,736 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 2,765 ft.

Location is 2,205 ft. from east and 363 ft. from south lines of Joe Warner survey 76, Abst. 928.

Reentry adds well to Kent County field

A reentry has netted Glorieta production in the Spalding field of Kent County, 12 miles south of Clairemont.

SPALDING ENERGY INC. reentered the No. 1 D.M. Cogdell "D", testing it to pump 10 barrels of 35.8 gravity crude and 1 barrel of water from perforations 1,888 to 1,893 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

The well was drilled to 1,950 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 1,447 ft. from south and 2,384 ft. from west lines of Section 713, Block 97, H&TC survey.

The well was originally permitted as a 1,999 ft. wildcat under the name No. 3 D.M. Cogdell.

The next step in ramp blending.

We offer total blending control with the most complete microprocessor-based ramp blending system in the industry.

Smith Energy Services developed the APAC/ALAC (Automated Proppant/Liquid Additive Control) Blender in conjunction with Stewart & Stevenson Services, Inc., to not only deliver the most precise proppant addition, but also complete liquid additive control and monitoring.

Precisely. As scheduled. Even during rapid proppant stage or rate changes. So our fluid is fully crosslinked and buffered and the correct amount of breaker is added.

Which ensures that you will receive the cleanest fluid and highest conductivity fracture. And optimum well performance.

Otherwise, we wouldn't be the choice of some of the country's finest oil and gas operators.

So if you're concerned about how your well performs and the next step for unearthing your profits, take the first step.

Smith Energy Services. We work best under pressure.

1992 PERMIAN BASIN OIL SHOW

OCT. 21-22-23

When it comes to advertising for the 1992 Oil Show the Permian Basin Oil Report is your most logical choice.

Distributed to every oil and gas company and service company in the 54-county area of the Basin, it is the most widely read energy publication in the nation's largest oil and gas producing province.

With a staff of award-winning oil and gas writers that include petroleum engineers and geologists, the Oil Report also provides the most extensive and comprehensive coverage of oil and gas news in West Texas and New Mexico.

During the Oil Show the Permian Basin Oil Report plans to publish the largest edition ever produced for an oil show. Additionally, we will publish an update edition each day of the Permian Basin Oil Show.

We have a highly professional staff of advertising representatives available to assist you in planning and creating your Oil Show advertising.

Abandoned field yields new production

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Oil has been struck in an abandoned field in north Louisiana, which could spark a revival of oil and gas exploration in eight parishes and four Mississippi counties, said a Louisiana State University researcher.

"It's a sign that there could be a lot of oil down there that was bypassed in the earlier explorations of the 1940s and 1950s," said John Echols, director of the LSU Basin Research Institute.

The oil was found in two different areas of the lower Wilcox Trend, near Monterrey in Concordia Parish, Echols said.

The Wilcox Trend is a basin that includes Avoyelles, Caldwell, Catahoula, Concordia, Grant, LaSalle, Tensas and Winn parishes, and the southwest Mississippi counties of Adams, Franklin, Jefferson and Wilkinson.

The upper two-thirds of the basin has produced nearly one billion barrels of oil in the Louisiana and Mississippi fields since the 1940s, Echols said.

The new strike could yield 70,000 to 80,000 barrels, based on average yields from the upper levels, he said.

LUBRI-SEAL® PRODUCT DATA

NM-91
ENVIRONMENTALLY SAFE - METAL FREE
Tool Joint And Drill Collar Compound

PRODUCT DESCRIPTION: NM-91 contains no lead, zinc, copper, aluminum, or any other metal powders. The compound is designed for rotary shouldered connections as well as all other threaded connections. NM-91 can be used in all applications where thread compounds are used for protection of threads or scaling. NM-91 has excellent water resistance, good corrosion resistance and adheres well to metal surfaces. It contains corrosion and H2S inhibitors, as well as extreme pressure additives, NM-92 is manufactured to AP17-A1 recommendations. It has a friction factor correction value of approximately 1.2. This product contains no hazardous ingredients per OSHA 29 CFR 1910.1200.

FOR USE ON: Tool joints, drill collars and rotary shouldered connections.

LOS-MODIFIED
ENVIRONMENTALLY SAFE-METAL FREE
(API Modified Replacement)

PRODUCT DESCRIPTION: LOS-MODIFIED is designed for easing, tubing and line pipe. It provides excellent service characteristics in the areas of lubricity, sealing properties, make-up and breakout torque and long-term corrosion protection during periods of storage. It contains corrosion and H2S inhibitors as well as extreme pressure additives. LOS MODIFIED is recommended for threads being hydrostatically tested. It meets or exceeds all performance specifications of API bulletin 5A2. It has a friction factor correction value of approximately 1.2. In addition, LOS-MODIFIED meets the objective of eliminating hazardous heavy metals in the workplace. This product contains no hazardous ingredients per OSHA 29 CFR 1910.1210

FOR USE ON: Casing, tubing, line pipe, any threaded connections.

MEETINGS

Basin porosimetry topic for WTGS meeting

The West Texas Geological Society will meet Tuesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Philip Mariotti of Houston. He will speak on "Porosimetry in Reservoir Studies: Examples From the Permian Basin."

According to Mariotti, modeling drainage curves from ultra-high pressure, equilibrium, mercury porosimetry of Permian Basin reservoirs has shown that total porosity may have nothing whatever to do with a rock's hydrocarbon storage capacity, pore network variations produced by gradational facies transitions may explain apparent changes in regional OWC hydrodynamics, and vertical variation of pore network characteristics in a given reservoir can cause rapid fluctuations in So and Sw that transcend variations in porosity and conventional thinking.

Mariotti is supervisor of the Houston Geotechnical Center for Chevron U.S.A. He holds a doctorate in geology from Michigan State University.

Cost is $7 per person and reservations should be made by calling 682-1573.

Shell Oil to explore Romania

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — A subsidiary of the Royal Dutch-Shell Group of Companies has signed an agreement to explore for oil and gas in central Romania, officials said.

Shell is the fourth western company to sign an exploration contract this month. Four of the 15 blocks offered by Romania to foreign companies have been contracted.

Chicago-based Amoco Corp. set the trend with a contract to invest $20 million over a period of two years, followed only days later by the British Enterprise Oil Exploration Ltd.

Canadian Occidental Petroleum Ltd. agreed to invest $25 million in offshore drilling for gas and oil over the next five years.

Shell Romania Exploration BV said it is prepared to invest $40 million over the next five years to carry out seismic work, exploration drilling and geological studies.

The company plans to start drilling in 1994 in an area covering 2,460 miles between the rivers Mures and Somes in Transylvania, about 200 miles north of Bucharest.

"If oil is found, an important share of it will go to Romania," said Ovidiu Calinescu, director of Rompetrol, the Romanian oil company.

Calinescu said that the agreement provides for access to modern equipment never used in Romania before, training for Romanian oil workers and transfer of technology.

Rig activity

According to the Smith Tool Activity Tracking System for the week ended August 7, provided by Smith International Inc., U.S. total rotary rig activity for the week fell three from last week, to 797. Drilling rigs rose five to 698 while rigs rigging up or otherwise engaged fell eight to 99. A year earlier there were 9.4 percent more rigs, 880, active. For the same week in 1991, there were 8.3 percent more rigs, 761, drilling, and 16.8 percent more rigs, or 119, rigging up.

Kentucky-Virginia gorge site of feud over drilling plans

By Allen G. Breed

ELKHORN CITY, Ky. (AP) — The Grand Canyon of the South, all agree, is one of nature's marvels — a gorgeous gorge along the mountainous Kentucky-Virginia border. But in some ways, it may be too blessed.

"This is a beautiful place, but it's also right in the middle of a producing (natural) gas field," said Mike Edwards, president of Abingdon, Va.-based Virginia Gas Co.

Edwards' company wants to drill four new gas wells near the gorge. Officials at the Breaks Interstate Park are fighting the drilling; the wells would be outside the park's boundaries, but on land the park covets.

Carved over millennia by the Russell Fork of the Big Sandy River, the gorge is among the deepest east of the Mississippi. Locals say the view — with an imposing rock tower as its focus — is probably the same as Daniel Boone saw it when he made a reported trek through the area.

Edwards has leased mineral rights on a tract of the Jefferson National Forest near the southwestern edge of the park. A U.S. Forest Service study concluded the wells would have "no significant impact" on the park, which is jointly managed by the states of Kentucky and Virginia. The federal government approved the drilling application in February.

But that angered park officials, who say the depressed communities on both sides of the border rely on the 400,000 visitors who come to the park each year to marvel at the natural beauty.

"I'm no expert in the field, but I do know from places I've seen — there will be water runoff and there will be erosion," said Gypsy Cantrell, secretary of the two-state board that runs the park.

The park's commissioners have joined area attorneys and other concerned citizens in appealing the application to the Forest Service. Park supporters have vowed to tie the case up in courts for years if necessary.

Local, state and federal officials met last month to discuss the possibility of designating the Breaks and surrounding area a national park or national recreation area. U.S. Rep. Chris Perkins, D-Ky., introduced legislation earlier this year asking for a study into establishing a national recreation area in the disputed portion of the national forest.

"I completely underestimated the ferocity of the opposition this would create," Edwards said.

Drilling the wells, with an estimated production life of 50 years, would require the clearing of 10 acres of vegetation in addition to cutting a 28-foot-wide, 1.9-mile strip for an access road. Edwards said there were already about 100 wells within a five-mile radius of the park — including two within its boundaries.

"I know where they are, and I have a hard time seeing them," he said, arguing that his wells would be shielded from the park's overlooks.

But Gene Counts — a Haysi, Va., educator who helped file the appeal — said the park plans to construct a wilderness trail upriver within the next five years. He said hikers on those paths would be able to see the roads and at least one of the wells.

"I'm saying it would impact the scenic beauty of these nature trails as the park expands," he said.

Edwards countered that the park's master plan calls for a golf course, lodge, convention center and aerial tramway for an undeveloped area in the western portion of the Breaks. He said any eyesore his wells create would be nothing compared to that.

But Cantrell said there are differences between gas wells and those projects.

"We're wanting to develop in a manner which people can enjoy . .. and blend it into the natural beauty of the area," Cantrell said. "We're not wanting to go on in and rob something from it and leave."

A former U.S. Forest Service ranger, Charles J. Saboites, contends the park has only itself to blame for failing to acquire the land already.

Saboites, who left the forest service in 1989, said he began working on a land swap eight years ago. In a letter to a Virginia newspaper, Saboites said his agency "did its darndest to consummate the exchange" but got no action from park officials.

California oil and gas industry may get some regulatory relief

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The state's oil and gas industry, which long has lamented the impact of increasing regulation, might have found an ally in California's Department of Conservation.

With little fanfare, the state agency has commissioned a study that its director says could lead to regulatory relief for the beleaguered industry.

Conservation department director Ed Heidig said the study will examine obstacles and costs threatening the industry and steps needed to develop a more "workable" regulatory code.

The study was prompted by the increasing number of environmental regulations that can "strangle" businesses, Heidig said."I believe the people of California, and the oil and gas industry, deserve a regulatory system that is predictable and consistent," he said.

Two energy trade associations — the California Independent Petroleum Association and the Western States Petroleum Association — lobbied for the study, claiming it might help eliminate duplicate regulations. The industry is regulated by seven agencies, five state and two federal.

In recent years the growing cost to the industry of juggling increased regulation has been compounded by an oil price collapse.

Oil companies and related businesses are mired in recession and beset by rising production costs and low crude oil and natural gas prices.

Nationwide, the industry has lost nearly 350,000 jobs — about half the work force — in the last 10 years.

Not surprisingly, oil industry officials welcome the study.

"It is a landmark study because it will examine the regulatory burdens placed on producers," said Daniel Kramer, spokesman for the California Independent Petroleum Association.

"Almost every phase of the industry has been affected by regulation and the industry has long been urging reform," said Albert Greenstein, spokesman for Los Angeles-based Atlantic Richfield Co.

And now the industry has gotten the attention of Heidig, who was named to head the conservation department by Gov. Pete Wilson in February 1991. He formerly was on Wilson's U.S. Senate staff as an environmental and energy adviser.

Ground work for the study was set in motion earlier this year and Heidig outlined it in detail earlier this summerduring the petroleum association's annual convention in Rancho Mirage, Calif.

At that time he promised to be an advocate for changing the state's stifling business climate.

The current state and federal government rules aren't necessarily bad laws but their cumulative effect can be a hindrance, said Heidig.

Heidig has built a reputation as a conservationist by his involvement in such things as the Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area Advisory Commission, but the zeal he's expressed for the oil industry study concerns environmentalists.

Darryl Young, a state legislative representative for the Sierra Club, said that he is surprised the conservation department is administering the study.

"The Department of Conservation typically doesn't deal with this type of issue," he said.

"I think its good that they're doing a study like this but I hope its done in a fair and balanced manner," Young said. "If they know what end result they want to reach the the study will be nothing but a crutch."

Young disputes claims that the oil industry is suffering.

"We don't believe the oil industry needs relief. The oil industry in California is doing just fine. We don't think we need to make life easier for the oil industry," he said.

Heidig disagrees.

"The industry was hurting very badly when (California crude) oil was selling earlier this year for $10 a barrel and we have seen a rise in the abandonment of wells as a result of that. It was just uneconomical to produce oil," he said.

The conservation department has issued a $150,000 contract to Foster Associates of San Francisco which will conduct the study's first phase, scheduled to be completed later this year.

It will focus on exploration and production and identify areas where there is legal or regulatory overlap between agencies regarding such things a permits and fees.

Heidig said that he will use the study's findings to make recommendations to Wilson and the legislature on ways to improve the business climate for the oil industry while ensuring that the environment remains protected.

The study's second phase, which has not yet been funded, will cover pipelines, oil and gas transportation and refining.

Today, people around the world will mark the 15th anniversary of the death of a man who many believed shaped the history of modern music, and created a musical sensation that left the nation "All Shook Up" — Elvis.

Elvis Presley, born Jan. 8, 1935, in Tupelo, Miss., to Gladys Love Smith Presley and Vernon Elvis Presley of Tennessee, exploded into the music scene and the American conscious in the mid-'50s and became "The King of Rock 'n Roll." His music was joyous and free and spoke to an entire generation — while completely befuddling their parents — and we loved him for it. His influence on rock singers and musicians who came after him was immense.

Dennis Grubb of Wemus Entertainment in Midland and himself a former member of a rock 'n roll band, has been involved in music all his life. "I think as a musician, he (Elvis) was the original, he was the best, he became 'The King.' He was the one we wanted to be like," he said.

His millions of fans were loyal to The King. Billee Welch of Midland has been an Elvis fan since 1955, as well as a collector of Elvis memorabilia. What is her favorite Elvis memory? "There's so many of them," she said. "I've seen him (in concert) five times, but I think probably the thing I remember most was his movie, 'Wild in the Country.' It was the only one of his movies that showed his real potential for acting."

AS THE ONLY young superstar of the mid-'50s, Elvis was a natural for the movies. In the later half of that decade he made several films, but his acting career was put on hold for a couple of years while he fulfilled other, more pressing, obligations.

In spite of his fame and fortune, Elvis was just another young American male in the eyes of the U.S. Army. And like other young American men of his generation, in the late '50s, Elvis was drafted.

He served two years in Germany with the Army. When he returned, the entire country welcomed him back. Once the celebrating settled down, Elvis went back to Hollywood.

Elvis' post-Army films followed a certain pattern. During the '60s, Elvis made a series of almost identical and completely forgettable movies, most of which featured him as the "singin', fightin', lovin' " hero. The movies looked as if they had been stamped out of the same cookie cutter — only the sets and the costars were different. The music he made in the movies just wasn't as alive as his songs had been before. As his music became more vanilla, his popularity waned.

In the late '60s, Elvis began a come-back tour which brought his music back to the top of the charts. Staunch Elvis fans still loved him, and many younger people "discovered" him.

Although many of his fans remained loyal through good times and bad, Elvis was not always "hot." As with many other performers, his career followed a pattern of peaks and valleys.

But Elvis was not like other performers — he was The King — and as an American institution, he was never totally out of the public eye or the hearts of his fans.

By the '60s, American rock 'n roll had spread all over the world, and Elvis' musical influence became world-wide. In his book, " 'If I Can Dream:' Elvis' Own Story," Larry Geller wrote that when the Beatles, who started a musical revolution of their own, were in Los Angeles for a concert in August 1965, "Everyone in town wanted to meet the Beatles, but the only American they expressed the vaguest interest in seeing was Elvis."

What exactly did Elvis have that other entertainers don't? "Elvis was energy, Elvis was natural talent," said Dave Perkins, co-owner of radio station KCDQ-FM. "He wasn't the least bit interested in 'making a statement' (with his music). Elvis was ... magnetic and magnificent, and he didn't have to try. ... He was a natural talent that ignited the whole world."

Although still a loyal Elvis fan, Ms. Welch cannot explain his appeal. "The only person they had (as a superstar) before (Elvis) was Frank Sinatra during the War years," she said. "I guess the kids were just looking for somebody, and he (Elvis) happened to be in the right place at the right time." Of course the way he looked and moved, and the way he sounded electrified his audiences, but that alone does not explain why Elvis became the phenomenon he did.

Ric Elliott, program director and morning show host for radio station KBAT-FM, experienced that phenomenon firsthand. "I saw Elvis in Odessa in 1976 (when he

Festivities preceed couple's wedding

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Congratulations and best wishes to Kay Miller and Tom Brahaney, who were married Saturday evening at St. Ann's Catholic Church.

McKnight-Harrison

Immediately following the ceremony, the couple hosted a brief reception in the church parlor. Guests included students from Midland High School, where Kay is choral director. After cutting a tiered wedding cake, Kay tossed her bouquet to a waiting group of young ladies.

To further celebrate their marriage, Kay and Tom then hosted a reception at the Petroleum Club. Balloon bouquets in champagne glasses decorated the tables. Guests enjoyed a buffet dinner and wedding cake. Music was provided by Clinton Barrick, pianist, and David Gaschen, soloist, both of Lubbock, and soloist Paula Olsen of Midland.

Pre-wedding festivities for the couple began with an engagement party hosted by Lynn and Kelly Cox at the Racquet Club. Deana (Mrs. Frank, Sr.) Brahaney, hosted a luncheon in Kay's honor at the Plaza Club, and his aunt, June (Mrs. Vernon) Pettis, gave a brunch for Kay at Green Tree Country Club.

Tom's parents, Mary Brahaney and Frank Brahaney Jr., hosted the rehearsal dinner at Midland Country Club.

Nickie (Mrs. Les) Oppermann and Diana Daugherty honored the bride with a manicure party at Backstage on her wedding day.

After a trip to New York to see the latest Broadway plays, the couple will live in Midland.

Among the out-of-town wedding guests were former University of Oklahoma football teammates of the groom, and Steve Jones of St. Louis, Mo., who played football wtih Tom for the St. Louis Cardinals. Also, former Midlanders, including Tom's sisters, Carolyn Brahaney of Dallas, and Mary Ann and her husband, Mike Christian and their children, Will and Lauren of Houston, as well as Roseann and Ches Herndon of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Janice Strickland of Anchorage, Alaska.

Kay is the daughter of Ruth and S.T. "Buddy" Miller of Midland.

FOLLOWING THEIR WEDDING Saturday evening at Trinity Presbyterian Church, Kim Goddard and Ted Ray left for a 10-day honeymoon to the Florida Keys. They will make their home in Beaumont, where Ted will be employed by the law firm of Strong Pipkin Nelson and Bissell.

Kim is the daughter of Linda and Richard Goddard of Midland and Kay and Lee Stine of The Woodlands. Ted is the son of Sandra and Smith Ray of Midland.

Pre-nuptial festivities began with a kitchen shower in Dallas given by four of Kim's bridesmaids, Jennifer Atlee of Lubbock, Rhonda Dillehay and Anna Brining of Dallas, and Wendy Vandiver of Oklahoma City, Okla.

A display shower was held in the parlor of Trinity Presbyterian Church and hosted by Margie (Mrs. Wayne) Barton, Joy (Mrs. Dave) Boes, Diane (Mrs. Steve) Comstock, Ver Nelle (Mrs. Denny) Fidler, Esta (Mrs. Cary) Geron, Brenda (Mrs. Billie Jack) Perryman, Darlynna (Mrs. Buddy) Rush and Glenda (Mrs. Bill) Yanko.

Wedding week festivities began on Thursday with a Summer Mummers party, which Kim and Ted arranged for out-of-town friends and members of their wedding party.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted Friday evening by the groom's parents at the Petroleum Club for the wedding party, out-of-town guests and family members.

The wedding day began with a breakfast and manicure party honoring Kim and her attendants at Panache Salon. Hostesses were Jean (Mrs. Homer) Hensley of Mineral Wells, Shawn McWilliams of Austin, Donna (Mrs. Ed) Omar of Midland and Kat Stine.

Other events that day included a swimming party and barbecue luncheon honoring Ted at the home of Linnie and Art Donnelly and a luncheon for Kim and her attendants in the home of Peggy (Mrs. Jim) Trott.

A champagne reception was held after the ceremony at Green Tree Country Club, with Darryl Knapp providing piano music.

Today, Dr. Thurston Dean and his son, Chris Dean, of Houston, are hosting a brunch at the Dean home for members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

ELVIS: Memories of 'The King' linger gave a concert there). We camped out for four days in the parking lot of Ector County Coliseum," where the concert was performed, just to buy tickets.

Elliott and three other DJs for the former KOZA-AM radio station in Odessa took turns waiting in line for tickets to the concert. Each bought 10 tickets — for a total of 40 — for the station to give away as prizes.

"The whole grassy area in front of the coliseum was full of people. It looked like Woodstock — it was "Elvisstock!"

Elvis was The King while he was alive, but he didn't become a Legend (with a capital L) until his death Aug. 16, 1977. He was 42.

"I was at KOZA when Elvis died," Elliott remembered. "It was a very sad time. In my whole career, I can say it was the most I've had to answer the phone. We were getting 300 to 500 calls per hour from people who wanted to know what was going on."

Ms. Welch said she was talking on the telephone with a friend who also was an Elvis fan. "I was on the phone, talking about him — can you believe that? Her son came in and said Elvis was dead. ... I turned on KCRS (radio) and there was dead air. Then he (the announcer) came on and said that was a moment of silence for The King, and I knew he was dead."

PERKINS ALSO remembered exactly where he was and what he was doing when he heard about Elvis' death. "It was the week of my 16th birthday when he died. I was driving home from school when I heard about his death. It was my first car. I just pulled over to the side of the road and sat for about 30 minutes and thought about him."

Elvis' continuing — and even growing — popularity is exemplified by the number of television specials, magazine and newspaper articles, and planned performances and events on this, the 15th anniversary of his death.

In fact, some of his fans still think about him today and even refuse to believe that Elvis is dead. Through the last 15 years, Elvis sightings have been reported almost as much as UFOs. He has been reportedly seen in 7-Elevens and discount stores all over the nation.

Midland is not without its own "Elvis." KBAT's Elliott said, with tongue firmly in cheek, that " 'Elvis' calls us in the mornings on Friday about 7:30. Elvis, being very topical, has always got something to say. The latest thing he talked to us about was the Ector County sheriff riding around with a boat attached to his (official) car."

"Elvis" always calls the station from the donut shop, Elliott continued, and says the only problem he has is finding a parking spot at that time of the morning. "He says that since he's dead, he could probably get away with parking in the handicapped spot."

KCDQ's Perkins too has a connection with Elvis — the real one. "I went crazy for Elvis and thought he was the coolest guy in the world when I was about 10," he said. "When I was 14, I discovered I sounded like him when I sang. I did Elvis impersonations when I was alone."

TODAY HE DOES his "Elvis" voice in some on-air commercials, but has never done The King on stage. "I can sing on stage, but I can't do Elvis on stage because I'm real clumsy."

Perkins learned more from Elvis than just a singing technique. "To me, he's a lesson because I'm a born-again Christian, and I recently came to realize a keen understanding of what it means to be a person and what God made me for.

"One thing Elvis' life taught me is that man is not the center of the universe," and if he believes he is, his life becomes more difficult because he has nothing to believe in. "Elvis came to believe he was the most important thing in the world because that's the way the world treated him.

"His talent caught on long before he was prepared to deal with the way it would make him feel to be a superstar."

Ms. Welch is bothered by persistent rumors that Elvis is still alive. "I wish they (writers and rumor-spreaders) would let him die in peace," she said. "Let the man go, and enjoy his music. Generations are going to know him (through his music). A hundred years from now, people are going to be singing Elvis' songs."

Grubb, of Wemus Entertainment, was inspired by Elvis and sings his songs today. "He lived the American dream — that (for) anyone who's got the talent and a little luck, anything can happen, even in the music business. His being able to do that inspired me as a kid. I got to taste a little of that scene ... all because of him."

THIS WEEK Grubb performed in Good Rockin' III in Memphis, Elvis' home town, with other musicians, including some members of Elvis' original band such as D.J. Fontanna, drummer; Scotty Moore, guitar; and the Jordanaires, backup singers.

When asked what he thought about the persistent rumors that Elvis is still alive, Grubb said, "If Jim Morrison (lead singer of The Doors) was alive, that would be scary. Only Elvis could get away with this.

"The bottom line is, everyone wishes Elvis was alive.

"He was an original. There'll never be another one like him."

The island nation of St. Vincent has issued a set of nine stamps in honor of Elvis Presley.

Island of St. Vincent issues set of Elvis stamps

Staff report

ST. VINCENT, British West Indies — Elvis has been sighted in St. Vincent.

The island nation of St. Vincent has just released a set of Elvis Presley postage stamps, beating the U.S. Postal Service by several months.

"While the post office was trying to decide between the young and the old Elvis, here you have this tiny nation that's issued nine different stamps showing Elvis at every stage of his career," said Scott Tilson of The International Collectors Society in Baltimore, Md., who is distributing the stamps in the United States. "Still, I don't see the Postal Service getting 'all shook up' over this."

Each of the nine stamps is about four times the size of the proposed U.S. Stamp, and each stamp has a face value of $1. "They're really quite stunning with all the colorful images printed together on the same commemorative sheet," said Tilson.

The U.S. will issue only one Elvis stamp in 1993 — the younger Elvis — based on the outcome of the national vote taken by the postal service. According to a postal service spokesperson, at least 300 million U.S. stamps will be printed.

"When you compare that to the St. Vincent issue which is a limited edition of a few thousand sets worldwide, rather than millions, you can see the appeal that the St. Vincent stamps will have to stamp collectors and Elvis fans," said Tilson.

The St. Vincent issue is legal for postage in St. Vincent and recognized by postal authorities throughout the world.

St. Vincent Elvis stamp sets are available for a short time at the face value of $9 (plus $3 for postage and handling) for a complete set of nine stamps. Write The International Collectors Society, 111 Water Street Suite 300EP, Baltimore, Md. 21202 or call (800) 873-2003.

Elvis still has golden touch, after all these years

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifteen years after his death, Elvis Presley can still do one thing just as well as when he was alive: sell records.

"Elvis: The King of Rock 'n' Roll," a boxed CD set of the original masters of all his 1950s recordings, shipped gold this summer despite a suggested list price of $79.99. RCA Records, Presley's longtime label, plans on issuing similar compilations for his songs from the next two decades.

"There was a need to eliminate the fake stereo, a need to identify the master tapes," said project coordinator Don Wardell. "He's been constantly repackaged, offered on television and in special commemorative editions. Prior generations of executives perhaps have not paid as much attention as they should have."

Presley, who died Aug. 16, 1977, at age 42, is the most popular recording artist in history, with more than 100 gold and platinum records, more than 100 Top 40 hits and estimated sales of more than $1 billion worldwide. Between 1957 and 1963, 24 consecutive singles were certified either gold or platinum.

While Wardell stresses the seriousness of the project, the boxed set includes a "Limited Edition Stamp Sheet" of the King's '50s record covers. There is also a survey card asking purchasers what TV shows they watch that feature music and what they would like to see on the next Elvis release.

Vacation lesson: Don't ever leave home at all

By Erma Bombeck

Every time we take a vacation, I send a card to our house to remind us what a good time we had. I need to know this in order to deal with our re-entry.

Bombeck

In our absence, the lawn dies, the newspapers cling to the shrubbery like ugly wallpaper, the mail is laced with second notices, the bananas by the sink turn black and the houseplants turn to compost.

The moment we leave the house, gale winds blow down our TV antenna, our kids give a party attended by more patrol cars than a bank robbery in progress, the electricity goes off on our freezer, and a leaking garden hose floats our house into a new ZIP code.

The house is like a spoiled child who can't stand to see us having a good time and seeks revenge.

This week we came home to view the results of a break-in. Sometime between the time our secretary left for the weekend and her return on Monday, a fox fell down the chimney of the fireplace in one of the bedrooms and had the run of the house. The odds of this happening are the same as Jay Leno guesting on the Arsenio Hall show.

We know little about the fox except he did not suffer constipation.

The mammal from hell had a good time, leaving tracks on the white carpets, scaling mantels, leaping on beds and breaking candlestick holders.

You learn something when a fox invades your domain. First, you find out that every agency listed in the Yellow Pages claiming to deal with animals has a recording that self-destructs as soon you hang up. Second, you learn that whenever you are hiring someone to clean your house, make sure he lists "the heart of a Marine" on his resume.

It was the cleaning man who spotted the fox trapped on its back behind the dryer. He threaded a lamp extension cord through a pipe, donned hip boots and heavy gloves, and proceeded to drop a noose over the fox's neck and walk it like a dog on a leash to the patio and freedom.

I have two weeks of vacation left this year, but I don't know if I'll take them or not. What if a pregnant snake comes up through the drain of the bathtub and stakes out a condo under my bed? What if an earthquake moves some plates around and our fruit tree ends up on our neighbor's property? What if one of our kids volunteers our home for an indoor roller blades competition? It could happen.

The card to myself arrived Saturday. "It says we had a good time," I said, reading it to my husband.

He looked up tiredly, "That's nice. What's the postmark?"

"Mexico."

"I mean what year."

Botulism is serious illness

NEW YORK (AP) — The traditional suspect in cases of botulism has always been the consumption of home-canned food.

But it may masquerade as various other diseases before a positive diagnosis is made, according to medical authorities.

If abdominal distention, constipation, fixed and dilated pupils or dryness of the mucous membranes persist for days on end, it's time to test the symptoms.

If botulism is confirmed, prompt treatment with an antitoxin is essential.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Mari-mums offer color relief in heat

By Deborah A. Benge

Well, summer heat has finally arrived and it is making up for lost time. This extreme heat is hammering lots of our favorite annuals and your landscape may be crying out for some color relief. At this time of the year, there isn't much to set out that will tolerate the heat and give you a good return on your dollar ... except mari-mums.

Benge

The name mari-mum is derived from a combination of the terms marigold and chrysanthemum, and denotes large-flowered American marigolds. These flowers are very similar to the flower form and use as a fall crop like chrysanthemums. Thus you get the mari-mum concept, a new and superior way of utilizing marigolds. The marigolds that fit this use best are hybrids characterized by earlier blooming, larger flowers and impressively high levels of uniformity.

Several years of testing by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in several areas, including the Permian Basin, has revealed many desirable attributes exhibited by mari-mums. They (1) are very low maintenance for a summer blooming annual; (2) are extremely easy to grow in home landscapes; (3) produce more blossoms and retain better blossom color when employed as a fall crop; and (4) possess tremendous visual impact even at a distance.

These special fall-planted marigolds can satisfy your craving for fall color by giving a sustained flower show from mid-August until the first frost at which time you can put in cool-season transplants like bluebonnets, pansies, dianthus and snapdragons. Gardeners often make the mistake of planting pansies in the late summer when it is still much too hot, now you can have the tremendous color show of mari-mums until the weather gets perfect for planting pansies ... late October and early November.

Compared to fall-planted chrysanthemums, mari-mums will bloom 2 to 3 times longer and their open blossoms are more resistant to wind and rain. And they are less expensive to purchase than fall planted mums.

At this point you are probably wondering about a spider mite problem with these fall wonder flowers, since all marigolds seem to have a tremendous problem with mites and leaf hoppers. Not to worry, fall planting of mari-mums during a time when the weather will be cooling will discourage the reproductive rate of spider mites. In just a few short weeks our temperatures will have cooled enough to keep mites from becoming a problem during the next several months. Just think, no spraying for spider mites on marigolds.

The large-flowered hybrid marigolds which will be sold in local nurseries as mari-mums should be transplanted as soon as possible to ensure a prolonged period of spectacular bloom (they transplant and establish very well despite the summer heat).

Only transplants should be used since the hybrid seed is so expensive and time is of the essence. Properly conditioned transplants should not be in bloom at the time of buying and planting. To get the best performance from your mari-mums it is very important that they not be in flower at the time of planting so that they will establish and grow some before they begin to bloom. Once mari-mums start blooming, that is all they know until frost.

There is more than one variety of mari-mum available, but the one local nurseries and garden centers have is the "Discovery Yellow." Blossom color of this mari-mum is brilliant and non-fading. Few other garden flowers are more colorful or durable, particularly under adverse weather conditions. These large-flowered marigolds approach zinnias in flower diameter and surpass many cut flowers in the number of blossoms per plant.

Mari-mums grow so easily that they are the logical choice for large sunny beds. For a traffic-stopping display, plant mari-mums in large groups or drifts. They are also great in containers for lively accents of color on the patio or porch.

Next week, we will take a look at how to prepare the bed for planting your outstanding display of mari-mum color. If you should plant before that time ... plant in full sun and where the soil drains well. Mari-mums will give you extra special late summer and fall color and give your heat hammered landscape a rest.

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

DEAR ABBY

Man returns to family, leaves woman heartsick

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column faithfully for years, but I never thought I would be writing to you — but here I am.

I will get right to the point: I am 20, and separated from my husband because he was doing drugs and cheating on me.

Van Buren

Well, I met a very nice man who is 33 years old. He recently left his wife because he caught her in their bed with another man, so we had something in common right away.

I was called back home to another state because my mother was critically ill. I got there in time to see her ... but she died three days later.

When I returned from that trip, two weeks later, my boyfriend gave me the news that he and his wife are back together again! I couldn't believe it.

I really love him, and I know he loves me. What went wrong? He said he went back because he and his "ex" have three young children, and he has to consider them.

I know he still loves me, and I am going crazy. Please help me. — HEARTBROKEN IN ILLINOIS

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Having three young children to consider is a legitimate reason for a man (or woman) to try to make a marriage work. I think he is to be admired.

Do your best to go on with your life without him. See a therapist, and join a support group. People in the same boat can be wonderfully helpful for someone who's hurting as you are. Get going — and don't look back. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY: I have been following your column for 30 years and have learned a lot from your answers. Here is my problem:

My neighbors have a swimming pool which they use year-round, as we live in Los Angeles. They have two children, and the girl is around 8 years old. She and her friends are very, very noisy in the pool — which they use every weekend.

They scream and shriek, and it is so shrill that we are unable to sit in our garden when they are outdoors! The boy, who is around 11 years old, also has his friends over, but they make the regular "happy noise" that children do, and we can easily tolerate that.

What can we say to the parents so we can enjoy our garden and also continue to get along well with our neighbors?

If you print ,the answer in the paper, we will give it to them. Thanking you in advance. — SCREAM, SCREAM, SCREAM, LOS ANGELES

DEAR "S.S.S.": The next time the children are raising cain in the swimming pool, tape record the sounds they make. (If you don't own a tape recorder, borrow or rent one.) Then, call the neighbors and make an appointment for a friendly chat, and bring along the tape recorder to make the point that a screaming child can not only be nerve-wracking over the length of an afternoon, but screams could also be the sound of a child (or children) in distress.

Their daughter and her friends should be taught to enjoy themselves while still having consideration for the neighbors.

DEAR ABBY: List this one, please, in the "Dear God, thank you!" category.

Our 2-year-old son, Raoul, regularly wakes up at about 5:30 a.m., toddles into our room and crawls into bed next to his mom.

Two nights ago, at about 3:30 a.m. — two hours earlier than usual — he repeated this procedure.

And about half an hour later, my wife and I were jolted awake by a very loud crash. Running into the children's room, we saw all the contents of one of those bolted-into-the-wall shelves, including several sharp-cornered boxes, splayed all over Raoul's bed. There had to be 50 to 75 pounds of stuff on that shelf. At best, my son would have been seriously injured.

Please, Abby, tell your readers to make sure that anything above their child's bed is secured. Or, better yet, just remove it.

We still get the shivers thinking of what might have been. — DENNIS HEVESI, NEW YORK CITY

DEAR DENNIS: Thank you, thank you, thank you!

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the cashier making change brought a chuckle as I recalled the two cashiers faced with a disabled cash register who were trying to cope with the problem I had created by offering $1.11 for a 61-cent quart of milk.

As they were attempting to work a hand-held calculator, I said, "Just give me 50 cents."

She did so, with the comment, "I never was very good at geometry." — LOUIE IN FREEDOM, CALIF.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long (business-size), self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: DEAR ABBY, WEDDING BOOKLET, P.O. BOX 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054. (Postage is included.)

WAR:

Ed Rowland, bottom left, and Jane Phares, stand in front of a display case in the "War: Its Impact on the Oil Industry" exhibit. Rowland and Ms. Phares were instrumental in creating the exhibit. Historical information, top left, tells the reader how long oil has been important to man. Pictured in the exhibit in books and photographs are numerous faces associated with war including, above right, Adolph Hitler, the dictator of Germany from 1935 to 1945 who turned Germany into a powerful war machine and started World War II in 1939, and bottom right, Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein, whose invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2, 1990, triggered the Persian Gulf War. The exhibit, designed in honor of the Confederate Air Force relocation to Midland, closes Sept. 13.

Its Impact on the Oil Industry

By Georgia Todd Temple

Oil, Black gold. Petroleum.

Whatever name it's called, this natural resource has played a significant role in human history. In the 20th century it is considered the lifeblood of industrialized countries, providing nearly half the energy used in the world.

It has also been a major resource during war.

Thus, when the Confederate Air Force moved to Midland, the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum staff decided to celebrate the relocation by designing an exhibit around oil and war.

As Jane Phares, director of programs for the Petroleum Museum, began researching the subject, she discovered that oil had been important to mankind for far longer than she had thought.

"It seems like such a 20th century thing, and it really isn't," she said.

"Oil was used in Babylonian times. It's mentioned in the building of the Ark. It's mentioned in Homer's 'The Iliad,' and how they used oil on their battleships. All the way up through our Civil War the oil may not have been used in fighting the battle, but it was used in lighting the tents because there was no electricity."

Mary-Chapin Carpenter salutes quiet heroines, average women

N.Y. Times News Service

Average women seldom steal the fire. It's the ones with all the drama, the warriors and the victims, who end up in the newspapers, the television movies and the country songs: the battered women, the thieves and adventurers, the defiant ones.

But Mary-Chapin Carpenter's fourth album, "Come On Come On" (Columbia CK 48881; CD and cassette), is a testament to the women who don't usually make headlines. Her characters are the housewives, the car-pool drivers, the kid sisters, the drugstore counter girls and others who live out their lives on linoleum instead of on stage or in battle.

Ms. Carpenter herself is a model of modesty. The winner of a Grammy for the song "Down at the Twist and Shout," from her 1990 album "Shooting Straight in the Dark," she has risen through the country ranks without flash or bravado: no big hair, sequined gowns, teary performances.

It's hard to imagine her in a tabloid. When she sings, she doesn't flirt with the notes but addresses them directly; her voice is framed by a smile and wink, not a grimace of operatic angst.

Enriched with Ms. Carpenter's subtlety, "Come On Come On" grows stronger and prettier with every listen. The songs (mostly written or co-written by Ms. Carpenter) are succinct but deeply emotional narratives, country more in attitude than in design.

The upbeat tunes, like the opening "The Hard Way" and a version of Lucinda Williams's "Passionate Kisses," sparkle with folk-pop guitar; on a few sparely arranged ballads Ms. Carpenter opts for piano and upright bass over pedal, steel and synthesizers.

It's the quiet heroines, though, who give the album its distinction. In "Only a Dream," a woman remembers the admiration she felt for an older brother, how he sheltered and protected her while she was growing up; in "I Am a Town," the attachment a woman feels to her small Southern hometown is consuming and infinite.

The character in "I Feel Lucky" is the kind of person who gets up in the morning and reads her horoscope first thing. She winds up winning an $11 million lottery jackpot and goes to her favorite bar, where her most outlandish dream comes true: "Dwight Yoakam's in the corner trying to catch my eye/Lyle Lovett's right beside me with his hand upon my thigh."

"He Thinks He'll Keep Her" is the story of a wife who fulfills every expectation without complaining or questioning her life's worth: "When she was 29, she delivered number three,/And every Christmas card showed a perfect family."

By refusing to belittle or patronize the character, Ms. Carpenter achieves in her a dignity most corporate lionesses could never match. One day the character decides she has had enough, and the confrontation with her husband is typically understated: "When she was 36, she met him at the door/She said I'm sorry, I don't love you anymore." In that moment, an average woman finally steals a piece of the fire to call her own.

OIL: Each war emphasized oil in different manner

(From 1G)

In addition to Ms. Phares, Ed Rowland, director; and Carey Behrends, then deputy director of the Petroleum Museum who is now in charge of the restoration of the fort at Fort Stockton; were particularly involved in the creation of the "War: Its Impact on the Oil Industry" exhibit.

Following this exhibit, which closes Sept. 13, will be one featuring color photographs of the Kuwait oil fires. The upcoming exhibit, called "The Fires of Kuwait," opens Sept. 19, with a members preview party planned for Sept. 18.

"The continued possibility of military action in the Middle East just reaffirms the strategic economic and political role of oil," Rowland said.

The "War: Its Impact on the Oil Industry" exhibit includes a synopsis of the uses of oil during wartime prior to the 20th century before moving into a discussion of the uses of oil during this century's wars, including World War I, World War II, the Korean War, Vietnam, Middle East crises and the Gulf War.

"In each one of those wars there was a different emphasis on the part that oil played," Ms. Phares said.

"For instance, World War I was a war of horses and calvary until the diesel-powered engine became important. They first started using tanks in World War I and suddenly the whole scenario changed. We had gone from animal power and man power to machine power which had to use oil."

Ms. Phares acquired the background information for the exhibit from the oil department at Midland County Library and from the Petroleum Museum. Her resources included, among others, "Men, Oil and War" by Thomas Curtin, "The Prize" by Daniel Yergin, "Fundamentals of the Oil Industry" by Robert Anderson, "Oil for Victory" and "The Secret of Sherwood Forest."

During her research, Ms. Phares found the most information on World War II, discovering that it was "one of the first times that it became so evident that you actually had government and oil leaders working together in a controlled situation to see how they could win this war."

Harold L. Ickes was the Petroleum Administrator for War.

"He invited oil men from all branches of the industry to come to Washington to work out an energy strategy for winning the war," Ms. Phares said.

"A general committee was formed with four smaller committees: production, refining, transportation and marketing. Our exhibition shows the significance of the roles each of these four committees played in winning World War II."

Researching this project made Ms. Phares aware of the dependence man has on this resource.

"We are so dependent on oil. I wish there was another source of energy not non-renewable. And, boy, do we use a lot of it in everything.

"For instance, it's used in tires, in all plastics, medicine, cosmetics, fuel, different kinds of fuel — gasoline, kerosene, aviation fuel, diesel."

Ms. Phares feels it would be next to impossible to live a day in the United States without using some product that had to do with oil.

"I might be able to go over to a Third World country, and maybe I could do it for a day. Maybe."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Forget old wounds and look forward to new triumphs. Partners offer valuable suggestions and support in the fall. November brings a promotion or raise. Think twice about relocating if loved ones are strongly opposed. Creative efforts bring rich rewards early in 1993. Be prepared for a business boom next March. A special real estate property comes on the market in June.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Robert Culp, megastar Madonna, sportscaster Frank Gifford, singer Edyie Gorme.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Refuse to be bulldozed by someone who wants a quick answer. Follow a doctor-approved diet and health regimen to the letter. Replacing bad habits with good ones will double your energy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can expect considerable activity around your home due to visitors, a removal or other unusual developments. Proceed with caution to prevent gossip or mishaps.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do all you can to widen your circle of friends and acquaintances. Consider joining a club in which you can play a big role. Home life has much to offer. Reduce discord.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Several weekend trips could prove more revitalizing than just one vacation. Consult a travel agent. Family members could question a recent decision. Avoid acting in haste.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Establish a code of conduct that will keep you high on the list of those who can use your services. A partnership may be under discussion. Keep your spending within reasonable limits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone may be trying to pull the wool over your eyes. Keep a tight hold on your pocketbook. Do not paint yourself into a corner and then complain about feeling confined.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are inclined to look askance at sports that call for expensive equipment. Try swimming or track. A homemaker with young children feels a growing interest in returning to work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If home feels confining today, get out and mingle, if only for a few hours. Talking shop at a social gathering could lead to a job offer. Just be careful not to bore people.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your stamina may not be as strong as usual. Evening is the best time to socialize — why not take things nice and easy until then? Small gatherings are favored over larger groups.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are probably on your own today. Having specific goals will keep you from squandering precious time. Put off expenditures that can wait and pay any bills that are overdue.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day for getting together with friends or contacting a pal who has been out of touch. A world of experiences awaits you — do not shy away.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have a sixth sense about money now; do some serious thinking, planning and shopping. Run errands in the early afternoon. Tonight, a tender moment gives you new hope for a romantic relationship.

Opening lead: Four of ♠

If there is a key element in planning the play of the hand, it can be expressed in one word: Count. You would be surprised how often counting your tricks can point the way to the winning line.

North's raise to game was optimistic by any standards. With a flat hand and little in the way of intermediate cards to give the hand body, a raise to two no trump would have been ample by our standards.

West led a low spade, dummy's three was played and, when East produced the ace, declarer could count six fast tricks. The obvious place to find the three others was in diamonds, provided the king was well placed. However, to land four tricks in diamonds declarer might need to finesse three times. Finding East with the king singleton, doubleton or tripleton was not an odds-on prospect.

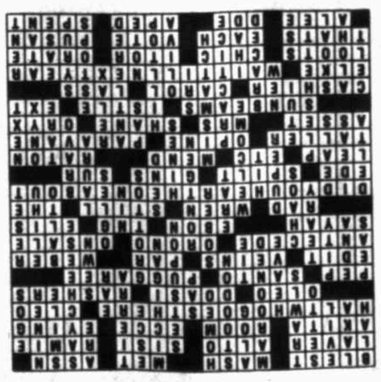

Two entries were in dummy in the rounded-suit aces. From where was the third going to come?

Uncovering the problem made the solution easy to spot. Declarer dropped the king of spades under the ace! Dummy's J 10 of spades assured another entry regardless of which defender held the queen.

East could do no better than continue with spades. With the diamond king favorably located, declarer had no trouble raking in nine tricks. And it was all done without mirrors—or even computers.

Comedy clubs thrive in tough Houston market

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The business is comedy, and laughter is the currency.

But comedy clubs are facing tough audiences, thanks to the proliferation of standup on television.

Flipping cable channels on a Saturday night you may find nine stand-up comedy shows on at the same time, said Lynn Karnes, owner of the two Spellbinders, Houston's largest comedy clubs.

"Audiences are more educated to comedy. They want better comedy," said comedian Danny Martinez, who owns Comedy Showcase.

Clubs compete for nationally recognized names with TV credits, making life tough for local comics struggling to break in. There are more comics but fewer clubs willing to give the local acts a shot.

It's parallel to what happened in pop music when radio stations started playing Top 40: Many good bands suddenly found themselves screened out of their hometown radio stations. Cable TV has created a sort of Top 40 of comedy.

With stand-up saturating television and the economy struggling, Houston club owners are not laughing all the way to the bank, but they aren't crying either.

At least most of them are still in business, while many of the country's top clubs are either scraping by or closing.

There are more than a dozen comedy clubs in Houston, including some in hotels, restaurants and even a billiard hall. Most are standup; a series of comics alone at the mike, working the audience.

Other forms include the hit comedy revue at Radio Music Theater and the competitive team humor of ComedySportz, which splits its time between the River Cafe and Dave & Buster's. Next month, a semi-regular talk show parody will kick off at Rockefeller's nightclub.

Until then, the newest comedy shop in town is the Hip-Hop Comedy Stop, at the Ramada Inn on Interstate 45 at Crosstimbers. Owners and comics Rushion McDonald and David Raibon think they've got the right angle for success.

"There's an explosion of black comedy," said McDonald, a Houston comic now based in Los Angeles. "People are realizing minority dollars are not being pursued."

McDonald, an accountant who decided he'd rather count laughs than someone else's money, said it would be too tough to compete as just another basic comedy club.

"You need gimmicks and the ability to sell a quality package," he said.

If comics are not enough, McDonald and Raibon — a Houston police officer — offer a buffet before their early show and a dance party with a disc jockey after the late show.

"Sure it's hard times, but we have a niche, a game plan," McDonald said. "This is the 'In Living Color' of comedy clubs in this city. It's much more aggressive and party-oriented."

One recent weekend it attracted a sold-out, racially mixed audience. While everyone is welcome, McDonald sees a need for clubs aimed primarily at blacks.

"Black humor is much more animated. It's high-energy, in-your-face comedy, very physical, much louder." He jacks up his pitch and pumps up the volume: "'What's up, what's up? What y'all people doing over there?"

Sometimes the audience is a show in itself, McDonald said.

"They move in their chairs; they'll stand up, give high-fives. It's really funny.

"It's like a black church is different from an Episcopal church. They are just into the show. White crowds are much more sedate. You never see them jump up and down. It's a different culture base."

The Hip-Hop enters the market at a time when many clubs, even in Houston, are just trying to hold on to their corner of the market.

Karnes blames the explosion of local clubs and cable comedy shows for the dwindling crowds.

"There are more Houston comedy clubs than ever. When we opened up eight years ago there were only four, The Comedy Workshop, The Comedy Showcase, The Good Humor Bar and the Laff Stop. You're taking an audience and spreading them among more locations," she said.

"Our crowds are down 20 percent over last year."

Where her customers once needed reservations for weekends, now they usually can call the day of the show.

Many clubs "paper the house," or give out lots of free tickets to get people in, so the club can make money off drinks and snacks. It's a common practice that becomes vital in a tough economy.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Craft fair to be held

RANKIN — Arts and crafts people from West Texas are invited to participate in the Rankin Chamber of Commerce's Arts and Crafts Fair Sept. 26.

The fair will be held at the Rankin Swimming Pool Park, south of the junction of Highways 67 and 349.

Booth spaces, measuring 10 by 10, are available for $10. Those participating are requested to be set up by 9 a.m. Registration is due by Sept. 20. To receive a booth, send checks made payable to the Rankin Chamber of Commerce, attention Carolyn Shankle, Box 551, Rankin, Texas 79778.

Participants must supply their own tables and shade covering. The fair will be held outdoors where limited shade space is available.

Activities planned for the day include a parade, volleyball, a dance featuring music from the 1950s, games for the children and homecoming meetings for Rankin Exes. The classes of 1942-43, 1952-23 and 1972-73 will be recognized.

The Rankin Lions club will have a barbecue at the Swimming Pool Park at 5 p.m. Cost for adults will be $4.50 and for children $3.50.

■ Photo exhibit slated

ODESSA — On display at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin through Sept. 27 is "One Man's War: A Believer Who Cannot Believe," an exhibition of photographic and poetic images of the Desert Storm War by L. Gene Richardson.

Richardson, a lifetime military man, served in the Desert Storm combat.

"Much of my writing was done under unusual circumstances, in foxholes, on long journeys across the desert, on the battlefield, isolated from my men and sometimes late at night with the use of a penlight," Richardson said.

"The result is a powerful and poignant exhibition dealing with varied aspects of the conflict in Kuwait," said Brenda Wharton, Art Institute staff member.

He photographed soldiers leaving for the conflict, preparing for battle and engaged in combat. As the Iraqi soldiers began to surrender, he came to feel compassion for them, said Ms. Wharton.

Now a resident of the Dallas area, Richardson graduated from Odessa High School, attended Odessa College and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin before graduating from the University of Texas at Austin with a bachelor of arts degree in English. As an Army Reserve Master Sargent, he was attached to the Marine Corps Central Command working with the 1st and 2nd Marine Divisions in Kuwait.

Richardson will give free public talks at the Art Institute at 7 p.m. Sept. 14 and at 2 p.m. Sept. 15.

For more information call Ms. Wharton, 1-550-3811 or 1-368-7222.

■ 'Phantom' preview set

FORT WORTH — Casa Manana brings its 34th summer season to a close with the North Texas premiere of the all new musical thriller "Phantom" Aug. 25 through Sept. 6.

A special sneak preview is set for Aug. 20 through 23.

Tickets range from $14 to $21 and are available by calling 1-817-332-CASA.

"Phantom" made its world premiere in 1991 at Theatre Under the Stars in Houston shattering box office records with $1.3 million in advance sales.

Playwright Arthur Kopit and composer-lyricist Maury Yeston, creator of the 1982 Tony Award-winning musical "Nine," adapted "Phantom" from the 1911 Gaston Leroux classic novel, "The Phantom of the Opera."

■ 'Jesus Fest' slated

Desert Rose Ministries is presenting the "Permian Basin Jesus Fest '92" at the Malibu special events center next to Water Wonderland Saturday.

The Christian festival features live entertainment, food and drinks and booths representing area churches and Christian organizations.

The festival is free and open to the public.
