LOUISIANA TOWN FALLS BEFORE FLOOD WATERS

LEVEE BREAKS SUDDENLY AND MANY TRAPPED

FEW HAVE CHANCE TO SAVE ONLY LITTLE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY

(By The Associated Press) NEW ORLEANS, May 17.—Melville, La., fell before the onslaught of the Mississippi flood today. Striking swiftly in the early hours of the morning, the gorged Atchafalaya river tore aside levee barriers and turned its full force upon the town, driving residents from their homes into the streets and in night clothes. Within an hour the town was engulfed in its foundations and tossing it aside to make residences adrift.

Warnings Sounded

The fire whistle and the Standpipe Oil plant shrieked warnings as levee guards sped through the streets firing pistols and rifles and shouting "Cretaceous" "Cretaceous". Women aroused from slumbers, frantically clasped children in their arms and fled before the waters to basements and upper floors of buildings.

Practically All Is Lost

Swiftness did the waters come and few persons had opportunity to save even the most precious personal belongings. In the flight property was abandoned and the effort to save lives.

CARDS AGAIN TOP PIRATES WHILE GIANTS HOLD UPPER HAND

HAINES HOLDS PHILLIES AS BUCS LOSE 9-5

LEADERS IN AMERICAN CONTINUE FAST PACE IN HOT CHASE

(By Associated Press.)
That duel of champions—between the winners of the world crown in 1925 and 1926, was on today in the national league with the St. Louis Cardinals again in the second place and the Pirates back in third. The Cardinals still lead the parade as New York retained its monopoly on the top rank of both leagues.

The Cards renewed their bid to repeat their triumph of last year by knocking off the Phillies, 2 to 1, while the Pirates were losing to the Brooklyn Robins 9 to 5. One was a pitcher's battle, the other a slugger's.

Haines Is Hero

Jesse Haines' pitching cunning and steadiness finally swung the scales to the side of the Cardinals. Although his edge over the rival hurler, Alex Ferguson, was slight, the best the Phillies could do against Haines' slants was seven hits, while the Cards could get only eight, bunched them better. No hit for more than two bases.

The Pirates met the defeat that cost them second place in a game an entirely different type. They strangled Jess Petty for 13 hits and the Robins countered with 11 of their own, most of which were off the bat in the first three innings in which the home team tallied six runs.

Robins Advance

As the Buccaneers dropped back to the ranking column, the howling Robins went up at their expense, taking sixth place above the return of Red and Braves. After a bad beginning, the Robins seemed to have their way to a place among the contenders.

In the American league all three of the leaders won their latest games and widened the gap between themselves and the rest.

New York stayed well out ahead of the field by beating a strong Detroit team, 6 to 2, to the collecting man of "Columbia" Lee, Gehrig's bat. The youthful ensouler of his name, Ruth, made two doubles and another while the Babe clipped in a single when a hit meant a run.

Red and Gehrig now are tied for the run-homes with eight apiece.

Red Lyons' fastness in the class of the red hose and the Lyons featured by the pitching of Lyons who thereby won his victory of the season for the Robins.

Greatest Dive of All

IT WAS LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT, so they dove right in matrimonial seas! That explains why June Apperson and Helen Wainright, diving champions traveling with Gertrude Ederle through Texas, were married recently in Texas after knowing their husbands only one day. Miss Apperson was charmed by Jesse Richards, a "sub" reporter on a Dallas newspaper, and Miss Wainright listened favorably to the matrimonial pleas of Leonard Holland, an organizer at a Dallas theater. "And we'll say we're happy now," added the two famous divers.

Chicago club, 5 to 2

Four home runs helped the Athletics to their 10 to 8 decision over the Browns. Half that number went down to the credit of the slugger, young outfielder, Simmons, while Ty Cobb and Cochrane made the other two.

In The Realm of Sport

African Caddies Use Golf Clubs of Iron

BLIEMFONTEIN, South Africa—Native caddies in South Africa become crack golfers with improvised clubs made of heavy iron wire bent at the business end into the correct lie. The club head is a short piece of iron pipe, the shaft is of old rags or cloth wrapped with fine wire.

With only one club of this crude nature, Joseph, a native caddie at a Bliemfontein club won a caddies' competition by playing a nine hole course measuring 3,000 yards in 44 strokes. Many for the nine holes hit 28.

The native caddies often return better scores than do the players who carry the regular assortment of clubs and irons.

The secret of it is that the native boys play the game from the time they can walk; they have fine, natural swings and, having only the one home made club, learn to use it to perfection.

DEMPSEY NOT FIGHT JULY 1

Proposal Rejected Because Fears Will Not Be In Condition Then

NEW YORK, May 17. (AP)—The latest shuffler of the heavyweight boxing cards by the dealer, Tex Rickard, today revealed Jack Dempsey's come-back postponed a month and his first major opponent slated to be the victor in next Thursday's battle between the Boston title aspirants, Jack Sharkey and Jim Maloney.

Dempsey, Rickard disclosed, has rejected a proposal to fight Paulino Uzcudun around July 1, because the former champion feels he will not be in condition by that time. He has definitely agreed, however, to fight the Maloney-Sharkey winner under Rickard's auspices at the Yankee Stadium, probably during the first week in August.

Making this announcement in connection with the testimonial dinner tendered him by the "6000" "Millions" of the Madison Square Garden club, Rickard added that if Dempsey fails to fulfill his present intention to return to the ring, either Maloney or Sharkey will be Gene Tunney's opponent in the next championship match. The title fight probably will be held the last week in September.

NOBLEMAN OF BRITAIN GIVES SPORT VIEWS

LORD DAVID BURGHLEY SAYS U. S. WILL WIN NEXT OLYMPICS

By LORD DAVID BURGHLEY
(Son of the Earl of Essex and British Hurdles Champion)

I SHOULD like to say right here before I write anything at all about international sports, that my opinion of America are not favorably prejudiced by the affection I hold for my friends here but because I honestly believe that I am about to write.

One month ago I competed in a track meet in Athens, Greece. A few weeks later I was in England and then I ran at the Pennsylvania relays. So really I have an up-to-the-minute start, as you would say, of the world's sports.

I predict right here that the United States will win the 1928 Olympics.

I predict that immediately afterwards there will be a world-wide stimulation of international contests.

I should like to see a vast army of Canadian athletes swarming across the border on regular visits of competition in the United States. I should like to see more English athletes visit America and vice versa. In the future I think this will be true.

German sprinters, I found on my visit there recently, are keen to compete with those of the English hurdlers, naturally, but are anxious to match our strides with the Olympic stars. Norway, and Sweden's scotchboys read accounts of the prowess of Ovin Anderson, Edvin Wide and remember the triumphs of Paavo Nurmi, and they dream of similar visits.

The healthy growth of golf, football and soccer is my basis for the prediction of startling changes in international sports relations. The Uruguay and Mexico soccer teams are the pioneers, I believe, of troupes of players who will soon tour each other's countries.

Each time I attend the Penn relays my eyes widen in surprise at the wealth of star athletes America has.

His salary was fixed at $4,000.

His resignation, given the commission February 2, which had been taken effect May 15, last Sunday under request made of the officials that he be given this time in which to finish up as far as possible an improvement program launched the first of the year. He is to continue following his re-election and acceptance, and his outlined program will go forward.

It was the sense of the commission that Mr. Perkinson has outlined and carried on a real program of work since he came here, gradually pulling the city utility lines and organization out of a slump into a taxing proposition; and with his experience, the commission felt that no better man could be secured to hold the place.

Mr. Perkinson came to Lubbock from Durant, Oklahoma, and has had similar experience at Chicago, Denison, and other places. He left last night for Dallas following acceptance of the appointment on a business trip, and will visit his family in Durant, Oklahoma, before returning here in the next few days.

Medics Would Lift Liquor Restrictions

WASHINGTON, May 17. (AP)—Abolishment of legal restrictions on prescription of whiskey by physicians, and the importation of opium as a hardship to the medical profession, and a reflection on its integrity was advocated today before the house of delegates, of the American Medical association, in session here preliminary to the opening of the convention of the association itself tomorrow.

Dr. Wendell C. Phillips, president of the organization termed the present regulation of the amount of liquor that may be prescribed an "injury" to the profession.

Repeat of the amendment to the Harrison narcotics act, which prohibits importation of crude opium was asked in a resolution introduced by Dr. S. M. Blackshear of Louisiana.

Extension Given To Ban On Ex-Kaiser

BERLIN, May 17. (AP)—The Marx government's bill providing for a two year extension of the federal statute for the defense of the republic, which expires in July, was whisked through the Reichstag quickly, today by a vote of 323 to 31.

By this measure the return to Germany of former Emperor Wilhelm can be effectively barred under the new penal code, which it is expected will make his return permanently impossible, can be completed and adopted.

STROKE SAVERS

By BOBBY CRUICKSHANK
You hear a lot about the "v" grip meaning when the two hands are together there will be a V pointing up over the right shoulder.

That's all very well and true, but there is a tendency of most golfers to emphasize this too highly. As a result the left hand turned over too far, interferes with the wrist action at the top of the swing.

Notice in this picture how my hands seem comfortably, loosely fit at the top of the club. I keep the right thumb snuck up against the palm. The fingers are together. Too many get careless and lose the delicate touch of the grip, forgetting first lessons. This gives you better club control and enables you to hit crisply and cleanly.

The Lesson

EVER watch the rain drops running down an unwashed window pane? They trickle around and over the dirt. Soon the glass is streaked because some of the dirt managed to hang on.

Now turn to the map of the United States and imagine that to be a window pane with all the tributaries of the Mississippi river rushing into it and it in turn rushing to the sea.

That is a pretty picture. Great industries, cities and towns by the river banks, beautiful parks and playgrounds for children. Nature seems to provide everything. At the headwaters of the streams were forests. In the winter heavy rain and snow comes. In the spring the warm sun releases the rain and it cuts down the forests on the spots where Nature put them.

Two hundred million dollars are washed away by steady erosion every year because we have no forests where forests ought to be. Many lives and millions of dollars more in ruined crops and demolished homes. Stealing of soil by erosion occurs where run-off waters are not obstructed by forest growth. Still, sand and every other kind of soil are swept from their natural positions and spirited away by the foaming waters as they surge down the steep slopes.

The carrying power of a stream is increased 64 times when its rate of flow is doubled. If the flow of a river is speeded up ten times, the river torrent will be able to carry one million times as much foreign material as it did when it was flowing at a normal rate of speed causing irreparable damage and destruction of life and property.

The great part of forests play in the development of our country according to Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree Association, is seen in the fact that from the streams of the national forests over 700 western cities and towns, with an aggregate population of nearly 25,000, obtain their domestic water supply. The forests include 1266 irrigation projects and 325 water-power plants, in addition to many other power and irrigation companies which depend on the government timberlands for water conservation and the regulation of rain water run-off and stream flow.

The Mississippi river sweeping ruin on its way to the ocean gave America a terrible Forest Week lesson. This lesson is one of the fourteen in the million and a half forestry Primer of the American Tree Association has just given to the schools of America to arouse the coming generation to the importance of reforestation. We must plant saw-holding and rain-retarding trees at the headwaters of our rivers and streams as a result of this terrible lesson. In this lesson we must have a counterpart in the floods of the Yellow River which the Chinese call the River of Sorrow.

We must have forests at the head waters of streams to help hold back the water for a time. Watch the snow in your own yard hold longer under a tree and you get the idea. Just look at the window pane the next time to rains and you will get a lesson in what Nature is doing all the time because man cuts the trees and puts no new ones in their place.

Good Luck?

WHAT is good fortune, anyway? When you stop to consider you'll agree that it depends on circumstances.

An Arkansas man, fleeing the flood, reached Kansas City the other day with every bit of property he owned in two little basket-board boxes. He had lost his home, his stock, everything—he was flat broke and the savings of a lifetime were gone.

But he announced, "I'm lucky." Why? Because he had escaped with his life. The other losses seemed small to him. He was living, and that was enough.

It's all a matter of circumstances—good fortune.

America is a country where murder trials are covered by sports writers.

THE PLAINSMAN

Says:

Tabloid newspapers of the east are having a lot of fun out of a photograph of Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon, one of the richest men in the world, taken while he was lighting an inch long cigar butt. Maybe that's why Mr. Mellon is one of the richest men in the world. Maybe he learned years ago, when he was laying the foundation of his vast fortune, that unnecessary expenditures are not only useless and foolish but also hide matter in keeping a man from getting ahead. There's nothing funny about Mr. Mellon smoking a cigar down to the end. It's just sensible of him, that's all.

Considerable comment has been raised recently because of the many suicides among young people, particularly college students. Various opinions have been advanced as to cause, chief among which is one which calls attention to the fact that many highly educated people, upon leaving college and entering the fields of business, are paid less than persons in some walks of life which demand only physical labor. The Plainsman is inclined to agree with this theory but at the same time points out that merely because a man has a long string of degrees behind his name is no reason that he should be paid accordingly if his services are not worth as large salary or if they are not in demand. Teachers, generally speaking, are too poorly paid but even they should be rewarded for their abilities to pass on to others their own knowledge and not because they have spent many years in preparation for a work in which they might be entirely unskilled.

The church-going season seems to be over for too many of us. You'll find a lot of people who'll go to church religiously on Easter and Mother's Day and will let the rest of the Sundays take care of themselves. The Plainsman has always felt that mother would probably appreciate our going to church several times per year rather than just once on her day and that perhaps that Saint Peter would chalk us up more white marks if we went on some ordinary Sundays rather than just on Easter.

Washington Letter

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of three articles telling just what happens when the president of the United States decides to go on a railroad trip.

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, May 17.—When Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge are traveling by rail, the president invariably occupies a drawing room and his wife a compartment adjoining.

The drawing room has a couch and the president like to lay down for an hour or two during the afternoon enroute. He is asleep soon after he stretches himself out. Mrs. Coolidge hardly ever follows his example.

Both drawing room and compartment are just like other drawing rooms and compartments. There are five of them, the other three being occupied by the president's physician, aides and secret service men. It is an observation car like others, except that it is a new type with olive green and gray color scheme and wash stands of porcelain instead of nickel.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge walk through the station to the train— heavily guarded by railroad and local police and secret service operatives—ten or fifteen minutes before it pulls out.

The Coolidges sit in the observation section, the president generally reading. There are wicker chairs rather than leather and plush, and the railroad officials provide large baskets of fruit and roses. In Mrs. Coolidge's own compartment one would find a dozen or more specimens of the First Lady's favorite flower—the Coolidge rose. Very often the railroad finds that the president has brought along his own fruit. He is partial to apples, but does not neglect bananas or any other common fruit.

A music store in Washington furnishes a huge victrola with records and Mrs. Coolidge often selects and plays some of the latter, winding the machine herself if the porter doesn't happen to be within reach. The records are of varied types, including some jazz, and mostly orchestral pieces.

The railroad official in charge of the train comes in on each trip to inquire if everything is as the president would have it, but a special porter who has had long experience on private cars with the great and the wealthy tends to the immediate needs of the Coolidges. He sits up through the night and spends an immense amount of time dusting.

To bed at 11:30 At night, returning from an affair such as the recent New York Press dinner in New York, the Coolidges sit in the observation section for perhaps an hour, chatting with Dr. Coupal, the president's physician. The three comment on events of the evening and Major Coupal is apt to tell a few stories.

At 11 or 11:30 Coupal sends the president to bed and Mrs. Coolidge always retires to her compartment a few minutes afterward. Then the show is over for the select few standing on the platform outside. Assuming that the train is to arrive here at 7 a. m., the president arises at 6:30. He doesn't get eight hours of solid sleep, but his afternoon nap makes up the difference. It is to be assumed that the president sleeps soundly instead of tossing wakefully about in his bunk as so many of us do, for no one has ever heard any complaint from him.

GROWING TOWN

Quitque is growing by leaps and bounds, so say men who have visited here during the past few days. New buildings, stores and residences, are rapidly being erected and of the better kind. Quitque is situated in a wonderful valley and in our opinion there is no prettier spot in Texas. Situated at the foothills of the Plains, water in abundance, a new railroad under construction and a farming territory as productive as any. Quitque is going to make a name for the folks of the Lower Panhandle. Will be proud to tell about—Quitque Post.

The president always eats a steak or chop in the dinner, and, true to his old love, his last trip passed off the baked tomatoes stuffed with crab meat, the individual homeless chicken pie, the roast leg of spring lamb and the 75 cent vegetarian luncheon for the best tenderloin steak the company had been able to locate in the east. All kinds of fresh vegetables, of which the president is fond, rolls, coffee and the inevitable pie were the rest of the meal.

IN NEW YORK SEE-SAWING and DOWN BROADWAY

NEW YORK, May 17.—Casting an eye over the annual internal revenue office report and noting that 5,000 new millionaires have appeared on the scene, it becomes easier to understand why the old aristocracy of wealth disappears in Manhattan.

"The 400," identified for so many years with the last word in social standing, has become little more than a phrase. Perhaps there still is a "400," but it means little today.

The "social register" is crushed annually by new names, and there has been more than one bit of newspaper talk concerning figures in "society scandals" who continue to be on the list of "who's who."

Apparently it is no longer particularly difficult to get rich. Dowagers of yesterday continue in a small and exclusive circle, but no longer are they looked to.

The younger generation of society gives little heed to the match makings for "social benefit" or for the wedding of powerful families.

I have seen the daughters of the richest families dancing about the night clubs. As a matter of fact the old type of aristocratic café has become even as the do-do. With so much easy money ready to be spent few places can become truly exclusive.

George Rector, proprietor of one of the most famous of the old time gathering places of the "exclusive," writes wistfully in a recently published diary of those dear old days. The younger generation of society like the younger generation of all classes, is far too curious concerning life and the world. It will dance at Texas Guinn's as quickly as it will dance in a brownstone ball room—indeed, far more quickly.

Constance Mackay, before she kicked over social traditions to marry Irving Berlin, wrote for a sophisticated Manhattan weekly an article revealing as bores and dull companions the average young man of the ritzy ball room dances. She deplored the hosts of "gate crashers" and "dance cutters" at affairs that are reputed to be fashionable. She found them far from stimulating intellectually.

At the foot of Fifth avenue, in the shadow of the Washington arch, where tradition broods in the old "red brick row," each year finds the invaders closer to the citadel. Giant apartments rise at every corner bringing merchants, salesmen, real-estate brokers, who, not as next door neighbors of white haired old ladies who still, of Easter mornings, step into their coach-and-four.

Up Fifth avenue, once the impregnable fortress of wealth, Benjamin Winter, an immigrant from Poland, has proved himself stronger than the mighty Rockefeller.

Winter, having successfully taken over the mansions of an Astor and a Vanderbilt, tilted with the Rockefellers over the encroachment on once sacred soil of commercial property, and won. He can, and will, have the shadow of an apartment building cast upon the exclusive Rockefeller neighborhood. This barrier removed, the multi-millionaire belt will find itself gradually more helpless.

For wealth becomes more and more a commonplace. If there are 5,000 more millionaires, there are ten times that many more people with sufficient income to crash through once socially hallowed gates.

ECONOMY CRY HOLDS SWAY IN HOUSE DEBATE

COTTAGE FUNDS FOR STATE HOSPITAL AT ABILENE PASSED

(By The Associated Press). AUSTIN, May 17.—The "Economy bloc" felt a clash with its own ranks as the house hung threateningly over recommended appropriations for state institutions in some of its adherents' home districts.

Representative E. S. Cummings of Abilene, who manipulated a pencil in the "Economy bloc" caucus Saturday, lost a fight for a $30,000 employees' building to the appropriations committee, but won over the economy faction for a $50,000 cottage for patients for the Abilene state hospital.

Less than Printed Bill Representative W. R. Poage, leader of the retrenchment group, had tried to allow the $30,000 structure and knock out the other. As passed, the budget carried $67,350 for the biennium, or $48,000 less than the printed bill.

Ninety five thousand dollars was chopped out of the budget of the Austin State hospital, second of five institutions reached today as the house began cutting its $10,000,000 biennial budget. The consolidated home budget was pared $11,500 to $359,329 and the Austin state school lost $10,000, while the patent institute budget of $7,300 stood untouched. A total of $165,400 thus was eliminated today from the bill. Committee amendment reported to the house all savings totaling about $471,000 in the whole measure.

Employees are sleeping in the laundry room in places while the institution has a waiting list of more than 300 epileptic patients he said.

Championed by Representative M. C. Parrish, Austin banker, the Austin insane hospital budget withstood efforts to cut out $30,000 for three new porches.

Fifty thousand dollars for a new convalescent building was pruned out, however, as also was a $15,000 fund for special treatment of acute cases. A general repair fund of $65,000 was slashed $10,000, in accordance with an agreement affecting all of the insane hospitals, the $20,000 item for purchase of fresh vegetables was eliminated.

$931,800 For Biennium As passed, the budget calls for $931,800 for the biennium. In the Abilene hospital budget, the house reduced total traveling expenses to $600 over protests of Representative C. T. Sheats. A $14,000 fresh vegetable item also was cut from this budget and the special treatment fund was reduced from $7,500 to $4,000.

The fresh vegetable item of $14,000 was the only elimination from the Austin state school for the feeble minded.

SAINT AND SINNER

COPYRIGHT 1926 NEA

BY ANNE AUSTIN

OLD PHILIP Schultz, the beggar, it seemed the pitiful wretch on whom Faith and Bob were spying was Phil the beggar, had evidently suffered stroke of paralysis, which had paralyzed his left foot and knee grotesquely, twisted his hip and withered his left arm, which hung useless from the shoulder.

"Poor old devil!" Bob whispered. Faith, a little shame-faced, "So that's the murderer?" we have been seeking! Pretty poor deaths aren't they, honey? He couldn't kill a cat, such less wield that heavy Chinese axe and crack a skull with it."

"Bob, please get out and give him something," Faith pleaded. "I feel we owe him something for having suspected him."

Bob vaulted willingly out of the car, but before he approached the apple he stopped at the newspaper by old Kelly, who had promised to notify Bob immediately if the apple appeared at his corner.

"Is that Philip Schultz?" Bob asked in a low voice, as he offered three pennies for a paper.

"Yep, that's him all right," the newspaper mumbled out of the corner of his mouth. "Did you get a message? I saw one of the messengers to the courthouse at half past ten. Been looking for you."

"No, I didn't get the message," Bob told him.

Faith, watching her sweetheart, as he acutely pined of the tall spinster body that looked so strong and graceful as it swung up the grotesque wreck of a man, the beggar bobbed his head for thanks as Hathaway dropped a large coin into the pencil box.

"Why, Bob, what's the matter?" Faith demanded, when Bob was again at the wheel, his face stern and thoughtful.

"It's Phil, all right," Kelly says so, and his metal license tag is hanging on a dirty cord around his neck."

Faith looked and saw the crippled beggar beckoning to a taxi which was cruising past, apparently in search of a fare. The driver of the cab alighted, and almost lifted the horribly twisted body of the beggar into the tonneau of the car.

"I'm going to follow that cab and try to solve at least one phase of the mystery—find out where he lives," Bob said grimly. "Odd that a beggar should travel by taxi."

"I believe he recognized me as the chap who had been on his trail and decided to beat it before I called a cop," Bob told her rapidly as he shifted gears. "Someone in Peach Tree Hollow must have tipped him off that I've been making inquiries for him."

"Remember the number of that cab!" Bob commanded Faith grimly. Twice during the next few blocks Faith and Bob were sure they had caught sight of the cab. It proved a real will of the wisp, but at last, about ten blocks from the corner of Math and Columbus, a clear half block granted them a convincing view of the pursued cab, which, as they drew up close behind it, pulled up to a curb before a tall office building to discharge a passenger.

By Gilbert Patten

Looking through the transom, Jack beheld a scene that horrified him. Henry Darmon was struggling with a man who wore a long black raincoat and a wide-brimmed hat. Some sort of broad scarf, wrapped around the man's neck, muffled his features to the eyes. With a hand fastened like an iron claw on Darmon's windpipe, the assailant hurled him backward upon the bed.

Jack used his head. Swiftly getting out his pocket-knife, he held it like a pistol and pointed it at the ruffian. "Hands up or I'll shoot!" he cried.

The knife, which had a silver handle, must have looked like a pistol to the scoundrel, for he relinquished his hold on Darmon and lifted his hands.

With a choking cry, the courageous old inventor scrambled up and flung himself upon the intruder. "Help! help!" cried Darmon huskily, as he wrestled with his antagonist again. Dropping down to the floor, Jack backed off from the flimsy door and then hurled his body against it with all his force. Again and again he did this, and presently the door crashed open, with shattered panels.

PURNELL CASE IS UNDER WAY

Michigan Seeks To Recover Property Alleged Taken By Fraudulent Means

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., May 17. (AP)—The state's suit to break up the House of David and wrest from Benjamin Purnell, its leader, millions of dollars of property he is alleged to have fraudulently accumulated, opened in the Berrien circuit court Monday with sharp interchanges between counsel.

S. H. T. Dewhurst, defense attorney, charged that ex-members of the colony are seeking to break it down and blackmail its officers, and are attempting "to use the attorney general of the state, to consummate their selfish purpose."

"The accusers in this case are former members, disgruntled by their failure to carry out their own selfish purposes. They have stooped to the basest charges against Benjamin Purnell to accomplish their nefarious purpose. No character guilty of such base atrocities could retain the quality of the hundreds who remain loyal to Benjamin," Dewhurst asserted.

George E. Nichols, chief counsel for the state, retorted with the allegation that the House of David colony is "a cancer in society, that the courts should and can remove."

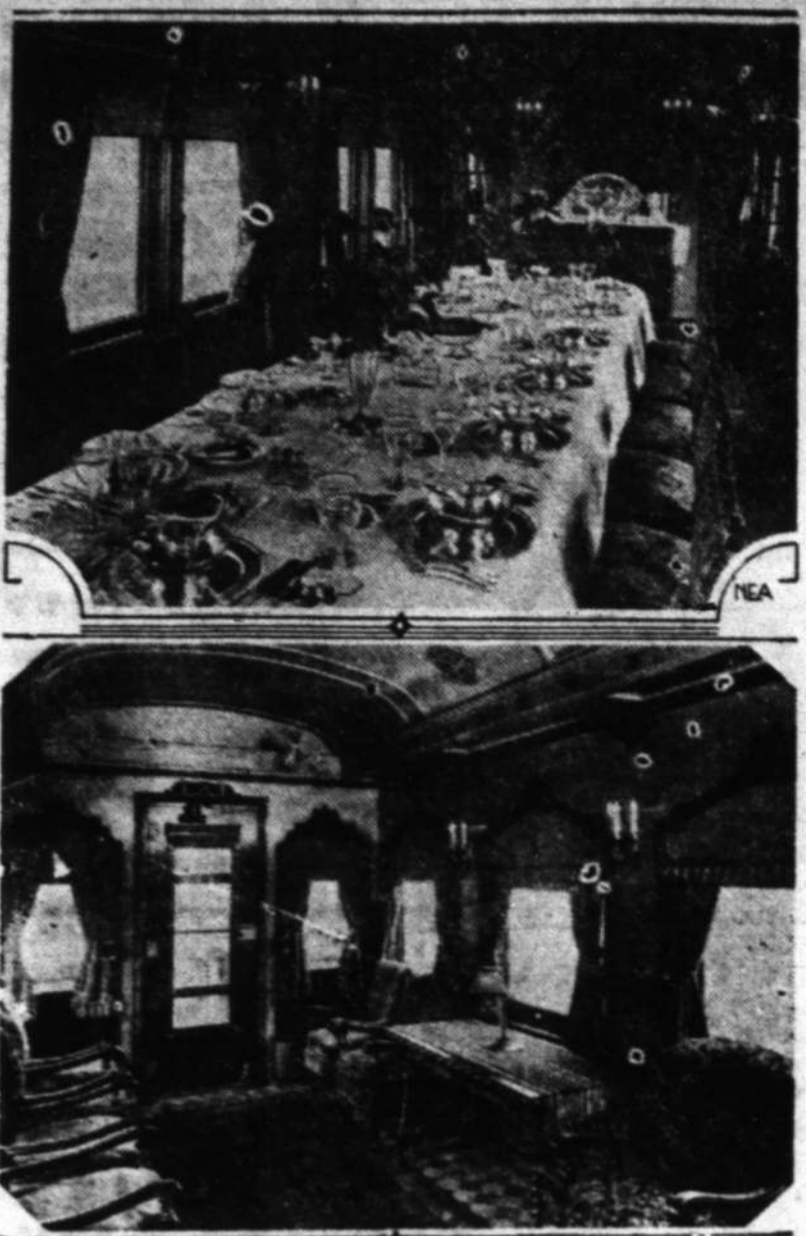

"We are not attempting to debate the basest charges against Benjamin Purnell and his officers. They may wear their hair long and believe in everlasting life if they want to, but if Purnell and his officers have set up the colony as a religious association, merely to throw the protecting cloak of religion around illegal activities, then the organization is violating the statutes regulating religious associations and is violating the constitution."

"The state is not attempting to persecute Purnell or any one else."

A long legal argument as to the state's right to charge the colony with being a public nuisance engaged the attorneys.

"King" Benjamin did not appear today.

The President's Train—In Mexico

Here are two interior views of the luxurious special train in which President Vales of Mexico rides when he travels. In splendor and the richness of its fittings, the train contrasts remarkably with the plain railroads which President Coolidge prefers.

bureaus of the state government are useless and should be abolished. It reaffirms the organization's stand on agriculture and the livestock industry; it again urges reduction of cotton acreage and intensive diversified farming; encourages the storage of storm and flood waters for irrigation purposes; recommends continuation of the topographic and hydrographic surveys in West Texas; favors congressional aid in the development of potash potentialities; favors a reasonable limit to consolidation of public utilities so as not to discourage individual development.

Some Recommendations

The report urges limited reforestation in West Texas including wind breaks on farms; commends the state federation of women's clubs for its efforts toward cleaning up Texas; confirms its stand on educational institutions; urges further railroad extensions in West Texas; compliments Arthur P. Dunham, president, Homer D. Wade, manager and the working staff of the organization; refers to this convention as "the most noteworthy gathering in the history of the organization, and thanks the people of Wichita Falls for hospitality extended."

As to taxation, the report will say that West Texas has long suffered from "our present Archaic Tax Laws." It will congratulate the legislature adoption of the resolution calling for a tax survey and the appointment of a committee and recommends that the West Texas Chamber of Commerce take no action of its own on this matter pending the final report from the tax survey commission.

Message Brought From Flood Belt

WICHITA FALLS, May 17. (AP)—A message from out of the flood regions of the Mississippi valley came to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention here Tuesday through R. H. Ellis of Memphis, Tenn., vice president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

A disaster, such as the great flood, makes all the nation skin just as commerce destroys sectionalism and makes the country one in a union of development, said Mr. Ellis.

In a speech featuring the morning session described some of the flood conditions he had seen with his own eyes, and declared that the problem of the floods must and will be solved. Every section of the country is affected by the disaster, and every section must come to the rescue through the United States government, he told the convention.

"The American people are rich enough, the American people have the intelligence and the will power to put a stop to such disaster, and they will do so, but they need the aid of such organizations as the West Texas Chamber of Commerce," he declared.

World War Veteran Hanged In Oregon

SALEM, Oregon, May 17. (AP)—Albert Brownlee, World War veteran, was hanged today in the state penitentiary for the slaying of Edson Hooker, deputy sheriff of Lane county, February 27.

Hooker was a member of a posse searching for Brownlee after the robbery of a pool hall, near Eugene, and the shooting of John McDougall, proprietor.

Judging from speeches, laudatory and testimonial ceremonies a man can't be successful without a faithful and loving wife and the ability to get up in the morning. That sure makes it tough on the bachelor, and the folks who like to pound their ear beat between six and nine.

Seeks Dismissal Of Purnell's Charges

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., May 17. (AP)—A plea by defense counsel for modification or dismissal of the state's complaint against the House of David colony was denied by Judge Louis Fead, when court opened today. The court ruled that the state has the right to use a receivership suit as a means of abating an alleged nuisance.

The receivership and distribution of property would be merely incidental to the main objective of abating a nuisance, he ruled.

The court said, however, that testimony must be confined to the charges the colony constituted a nuisance.

The first meeting of the new board of directors will be held in Memphis tomorrow. Mr. Lea will then announce the names of his associates and plans regarding the future policies and development of the papers will be made public.

C. J. P. Mooney, former publisher of the Commercial Appeal and widely known, died recently.

MIDDLETON, Va., May 17. (AP)—Major Harold Geiger was killed today when his plane was wrecked and burned as he was taking off for a return trip to the Aberdeen proving grounds, Maryland, at the United States air intermediate depot here.
