TCB to buy First City

Texas Commerce wins bidding for 5 banks

■ Eleven other buyers to purchase the remaining 15 institutions, FDIC says.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Texas Commerce Bancshares has won the bidding for five of the 20 First City Bancorporation banks, including Midland. The rest will be sold in pieces to other buyers, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said today.

The sale marks the end of the crisis that shook up all but one of the 10 largest Texas banks and hundreds of smaller ones, and closes the book on a Houston banking dynasty.

"It is kind of ironic that Texas' banking problems, which became apparent with the failure of First National Bank in 1983, should come full circle 10 years later in Midland as the banking crisis comes to an end," said Ed Jones, president of Texas Commerce Bank Midland.

"There are no more big, troubled banks to worry about. The people in Texas can finally stop worrying about their banks and rely on them."

The merger of First City Midland with Texas Commerce Midland will make the new bank the second largest bank in Midland with assets just under $450 million. NationsBank Midland, no longer reports bank loans or deposits, but at last report by the FDIC had assets of over $500 million.

Chuck Cowell, vice president of First City Midland, said a group of Midland investors, headed by a management team of First City was disappointed that it was not the high bidder for the Midland Bank. As previously reported, the group thought it was only days away from having its bid for the local bank accepted, when the FDIC took over First City Bancor-

Court voids way judges are elected

■ At-large process of 8 Texas counties, including Midland, is unconstitutional, rules appeals panel.

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday the judicial election system in eight Texas counties is unconstitutional because it violates minority voters' rights.

The 351-page decision, approved 2-1 by a three-member panel of the court, struck down at-large elections for judges in Bexar, Dallas, Ector, Harris, Jefferson, Lubbock, Midland and Tarrant counties. However, the court upheld the way judges were elected in Travis County.

"... in Texas District Court elections, minority voters have less opportunity than white voters to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice," the appeals court said in an introduction to the long ruling.

The court, ruling on a case sent back to them by the U.S. Supreme Court, gave Texas officials 180 days to develop

Gabor shows appreciation, Hilton staff says

By Katherine Poteet

Although her opponents in court called her rude and arrogant, Zsa Zsa Gabor left nothing but an excellent impression on the Midland Hilton staff.

"She was just delightful," said Hilton General Manager Bill Dwyer. "She was nothing but friendly and appreciative to our staff. Of course, I may be a little bias toward her, having known her for six years."

Dwyer first had contact with Ms. Gabor while he was chairman of Easter's Child, a charity drive for adoptable children. Ms. Gabor was one of the celebrities who participated in the drive.

"She couldn't actually make an appearance, but she did all kinds of things for the drive," Dwyer said. "I think she has gotten this reputa-

Survey: 'Racial virus' infects high school students

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Racial discrimination and tensions exist among the nation's best and brightest students, according to a recent survey conducted by Who's Who Among American High School Students.

"We release this survey with great sadness because it shows that this next generation of Americans has not been inoculated against the racial virus that has divided previous generations," said Paul Krouse, Who's Who publisher.

"Both white students (14 percent) and black students (56 percent) say they have been victims of discrimination. Some of these students don't believe they are prejudiced, yet they continue to hold biased opinions about and

Many people seek unorthodox therapies, doctors find

BOSTON (AP) — A third of all Americans seek relief from aches and pains outside mainstream medicine, spending $14 billion a year on such therapies as relaxation techniques and herbal cures, a survey suggests.

The researchers estimate that Americans actually pay more visits to providers of these unorthodox treatments than they do to primary care physicians.

The work suggests that Americans often bypass conventional medicine when they want help for backaches, headaches, stress and other complaints for which doctors too often lack the skills — or the time — to cure.

"Some of these treatments are probably quackery," noted Dr. Edward W. Campion. "Some of them are just the American version of the health spa."

The most common of these therapies are, in order, relaxation techniques, chiropractic, massage, imagery, spiritual healing, commercial weight-loss programs, macrobiotics and other lifestyle diets, herbal medicine, megavitamins, self-help groups, energy healing, biofeedback, hypnosis, homeopathy, acupuncture and folk remedies.

The level of use of unconventional therapies revealed by the survey is far higher than experts had thought. And because some of these therapies can be risky, the researchers recommended that doctors routinely ask about them when taking medical histories.

The study was based on a nationwide telephone survey of 1,539 adults. It was directed by Dr. David M. Eisenberg of Boston's Beth Israel Hospital and published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

The study found that 34 percent of Americans said they used at least one unconventional therapy in 1990,

SCHOOL: Survey indicates racial prejudices exist among students strong resentment toward their peers," Krouse said Wednesday.

The Lake Forest, Ill., based publisher — which selects the nation's top 10 percent of students to include in an annual volume — has been surveying students for 23 years.

"We included an entire section of race-relation questions for the first time and were startled when we received the results," said Who's Who representative Andrew Weinstein.

Weinstein said the survey indicated "black and white youth are poles apart in their views of the world, pessimistic about America's racial problems, and divided by racial prejudice."

More than 2,000 students returned surveys mailed in a blind sampling of 5,000 students. Those who mailed in anonymous surveys indicated there were 81 percent Anglo, 7 percent African American and 12 percent listed themselves as belonging to other races. About 73 percent of the respondents were female.

"We survey the students on sex, drug use, study habits, and have always had a few questions on race relations. This year we had a larger sample," Weinstein said.

About 56 percent of the high-achieving black students said they have experienced racial discrimination, but only 12 percent of high-achieving Anglo students said they have ever made a member of a different racial or ethnic group feel uncomfortable.

"Clearly there is an enormous discrepancy between the number of students who are experiencing racism and those who perceive their behavior as discriminatory," publisher Krouse said.

"If almost 6 in 10 black students have felt themselves to be victims and only 1 in 10 white students acknowledge their complicity, then there is clearly a need to sensitize people about what constitutes a discriminatory act," he said. "Apparently, what some white students see as innocent, their black peers see as hurtful."

About 44 percent of the Anglo students said that at least half of the people they know are prejudiced against blacks. In addition, more than 43 percent of the black students surveyed and 29 percent of Anglos report that incidents of racial violence have occurred at their school.

Krouse said a social separation of groups was noted. During the height of the civil rights movement 20 years ago, the third Who's Who survey indicated almost 70 percent of both black and Anglo students were willing to date someone of a different race. The most recent survey reported that while 90 percent of black students would date someone of a different race, only 61 percent of Anglo students would do the same.

About 61 percent of black students applauded affirmative action plans and the vast majority (84 percent) said they have fewer opportunities due to bias and discrimination. More than 44 percent of Anglo students, however, said minorities have more opportunities than Anglos due to affirmative action programs such as racial programs. Only 12 percent of the blacks agreed.

Another surprising find, according to Weinstein, is that almost twice as many blacks as Anglos are confident that they will fare better economically than their parents.

"In economic hard times, with fewer jobs to go around — and kids who feel they won't do better than their parents — racial tensions grow," Krouse said. "We must be careful that our country's economic malaise does not lead to scapegoating and further racial polarization."

About 50 percent of black and 40 percent of Anglo students agreed that race relations in the United States are getting worse.

Only 35 percent of Anglo students, compared to 60 percent of black students thought race relations should be a priority in America.

More than 30 percent of the black students, compared to 8 percent of the Anglo, said their family income was less than $20,000.

In the higher income range, 41 percent of Anglo, compared to 17 percent of black students said their family income was above $45,000. More than 70 percent of black high achievers cited "availability of scholarships and other forms of financial assistance" as the most important consideration in selecting a college, compared to 54 percent of Anglo high achievers.

"In the wake of the Rodney King verdict, fully half (50 percent) of high-achieving black students surveyed have little or no trust in police, while 80 percent of high-achieving white students do trust the police," Weinstein said.

Other questions indicated far more black students than Anglo had experience racial violence at school and many more blacks than Anglos felt unsafe at school.

"We found out things haven't changed as much as we would have liked to have seen, and these are our best and brightest students as a whole," Weinstein said.

"How can two groups of high-achieving young people understand each other at all when they have no common reference point?" Krouse asked. "The black students we surveyed are growing up in a violent, economically and racially strained world, and their white peers don't even acknowledge their prejudice as a problem.

"This survey is a clarion call to the new administration and to community leaders around the country that we cannot afford to lose another generation to racial tension. We must heal our racial wounds and learn to stop blaming and start understanding one another."

Controversy over gays in military baffles some Europeans

LONDON (AP) — Gays have been openly accepted in the armed forces of many major U.S. allies without the controversy that now faces President Clinton. But many homosexuals in uniform still find it prudent to stay in the closet.

In the 16-nation North Atlantic Treaty Alliance, only the United States, Greece, Turkey and Britain still ban homosexuals in the military. Russia, Japan, and major Latin American nations also forbid gays in uniform.

In NATO nations France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Belgium, the Netherlands and ■ Related story/8A

Denmark, gays are allowed to serve, but are disciplined if their homosexuality enters the barracks. The same holds true in Finland and Israel.

Foreign experience with allowing gays in the military could influence eventual U.S. policy. Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Wednesday that the United States should give special consideration to how the issue has been handled by its NATO allies.

Australia ended its ban on gays in the military in November, and controversy over the move died down a month later.

To some Europeans, the uproar over Clinton's determination to end formal discrimination against homosexuals is baffling.

"Homosexuality doesn't create problems at all. We don't have the square view on the matter as the Americans have," said Capt. Michael Laustsen, a military spokesman in Denmark, where gays are allowed to marry.

But openly homosexual behavior still works against the gay soldier's acceptance, even in the most liberal countries.

"The Swedish system is built on the fact that the individual keeps it to himself," said Swedish military press spokesman Bertil Ternert.

In Australia, no uniformed gays have declared themselves despite their new legal status.

"I'm not surprised," said Brig. Adrian D'Hage, spokesman for the Australian Defense Force. "A lot of them are decent people who keep their private lives private and who want to get on with their job."

D'Hage added: "What people do off the base, off duty and out of uniform is their own business."

As long as the soldier doesn't disturb the atmosphere in the barracks or create a "problem" for colleagues, he can make the military a career, said an Italian Defense Ministry spokesman.

Homosexuals usually do not reveal their orientation and get by without problems, said Erkki Paukkunen, Finland's military press chief.

Technicality forces court to resume Honecker trial

BERLIN (AP) — Liver cancer allowed Erich Honecker to trade his prison cell for freedom in Chile just two weeks ago. But on Wednesday, prosecutors said they're resuming the former East German leader's manslaughter trial.

A technicality has forced the state to restart the former Communist boss' trial on charges that he issued orders to kill East Germans fleeing to the West.

Prosecutors will go ahead with or without him, and may issue an arrest warrant if he doesn't prove he can't come back to Berlin, Berlin court spokesman Bruno Rautenberg said.

Defense attorney Friedrich Wolff called the latest development "judicial shadow-boxing" and said he assumed Honecker will ignore the demand to return.

Rautenberg said the trial was ordered to resume because it wasn't stopped at a normal trial session.

The court will reconvene on Feb. 8. It was not known whether it would be stopped — this time in accordance with the law — at that time.

Honecker went on trial in November for the deaths of 13 of the estimated 350 East Germans killed at the Berlin Wall and other border points.

But from the start, the trial was dominated by questions about his health.

Forecast calls for rain

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for cloudy skies with a 40 percent chance of rain. The high will be in the mid-50s with southwest winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight will be cloudy and colder with a 20 percent chance of rain and a low in the lower to mid-30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday will be cloudy and cold with a 20 percent chance of rain and a high near 40.

After an overnight low of 36, Wednesday's high reached 60, compared to the record high for that date of 80 set in 1970. The record low was 10 set in 1948.

STATE

Much colder weather is expected in Texas today, with the chance of light snow in the Panhandle and South Plains, the National Weather Service said.

The colder temperatures will be felt farther south in the state on Friday.

"There is a chance of light snow in the Panhandle and the South Plains, light rain or freezing rain in the Permian Basin, and rain for the rest of the state," the weather service said in a statement.

After overnight lows ranging from around 20 in the Panhandle to the upper 30s in the Big Bend, temperatures will be in the 30s to the 50s on Thursday.

Across South Texas, a thick blanket of high clouds was in place, and was expected to remain through the weekend. Afternoon highs reached only into the mid-60s in South Texas.

Temperatures were mostly pleasant over North Texas on Wednesday, with readings generally in the 60s. Skies are expected to be mostly cloudy on Friday with highs ranging only from the upper 30s to the upper 40s.

NATION

Light rain dampened parts of the Pacific Northwest on Wednesday. Snow was scattered across the northern Plains, the Great Lakes region and the Appalachians.

A minor storm system moving southeast from Canada dumped light snow in North Dakota, Minnesota and Michigan. Temperatures were expected to plummet in the northern Plains today and Friday as the system moves south, the National Weather Service said.

Light rain fell across northwest Washington state as a cold front moved in from the Pacific Ocean.

Minor flooding from heavy rain earlier this week was reported from the southern Atlantic Coast states across the Tennessee Valley, the Gulf of Mexico states, Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Arizona and Washington state.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

BANKS: 2 Midland facilities would merge

poration in October.

Cowell said it was too early to tell how the two Midland banks might be merged, but he was hopeful that the impact on employees would not be too great. "We are looking forward to working with Texas Commerce Bank to build an even stronger bank for Midland." He said the purchase fo the bank by Texas Commerce showed a strong committment to Midland.

Jones said the two banks were a natural fit with similar lending philosophies and large retail and energy lending bases.

"The reason we spent the money to buy First City Midland is because we are comfortable with energy and want to do more." With the banks combined he said Texas Commerce would be able to have a larger lending limit in Midland and able to do more local deals. "And because of more capital, we can be more aggressive on smaller deals as well," he added.

Jones said First City had the most senior and most respected group of lenders in Midland and that he looked forward to working with them. He said the deal would be handled more as a partnership than an acquisition, and that no plans would be finalized until he was able to meet with the top executives of First City.

The merger, which becomes formal on Feb. 12, gives Texas Commerce three downtown locations, but Jones noted that eventually all bank operations would be at one downtown location.

First City was the largest bank failure in the nation last year, and while Texas has been troubled with bank problems for over a decade, First City Midland has never been in trouble financially and remained a strong bank throughout the turmoil.

FDIC officials said the sale would likely cost taxpayers nothing, a stunning development after they had projected it would take $500 million to liquidate First City.

"I would say this bid amount is absolutely astonishing," said Harrison Young, director of the FDIC's division of resolution. "We had no idea we would get bid amounts this strong."

The winning bidders will pay $434 million for First City's parts. The FDIC will hang on to $800 million of First City's most troubled assets, including problem loans and real estate, and will liquidate them later.

Texas Commerce bid $346 million to acquire First City's two biggest banks in Houston and Dallas, along with smaller ones in Beaumont, Midland and El Paso. The five banks have $6.6 billion of First City's $9.1 billion in assets.

Texas Commerce has $17 billion in assets, the third-largest bank in the state. With the First City banks, Texas Commerce will leap ahead of Bank One Texas as the state's second-largest bank in asset size. NationsBank Texas is the largest.

First City's remaining banks will be split up and sold to 11 other buyers.

Frost National Bank, a unit of San Antonio-based Cullen Frost Bankers Inc., won First City's San Antonio and Houston banks, the FDIC said. Those units have assets of $539 million.

First Commercial Corp. of Little Rock will acquire the Tyler and Lufkin banks, which have $382 million in assets.

Other successful bidders:

- Mercantile Bank, based in Brownsville, for the Corpus Christi bank with assets of $415 million;
- Victoria Bank & Trust Co. for the Bryan bank, which has $321 million in assets;
- First Heights, a Houston savings and loan, for the Orange and Lake Jackson banks, which have $213 million in assets;
- First National Bank of Lubbock for the San Angelo bank, with assets of $131 million;
- Alice Bank of Texas for the First City's Alice bank, which has assets of $119 million;
- FBOP Corp. of Oak Park, Ill., for the Madisonville bank, which has assets of $114 million;
- Citizens Bank of Kilgore for the Sour Lake and Kountze banks with assets of $99 million;
- First National of Olney for the Graham bank, which has assets of $88 million; and,
- Corpus Christi National Bank for the Aransas Pass bank, which has assets of $51 million.

The winners were selected from 111 bids from 32 companies submitted Jan. 15.

Jones said the successful bidders were not notified until 11 a.m. Wednesday.

"The bids to the FDIC and the diversity of bidders who won really make you believe in the market," FDIC chairman Andrew Hove said.

Analysts and First City employees for months have believed Texas Commerce, which is owned by Chemical Banking Corp. of New York, would emerge as the major buyer. Since Texas Commerce already has large operations in Houston and Dallas, many First City employees believe they will lose their jobs.

First City employs 5,000 people in Texas.

Texas Commerce was one of four banking companies that bid for all of First City, but Young said the FDIC's decision to break up the package netted $70 million more than the best combined bid.

A 10-day public review process of the deal now begins and the Justice Department must also approve it.

First City nearly collapsed in 1988 when it had billions of dollars in soured energy and real estate loans. But the FDIC injected $977 million to recapitalize the bank. Investors led by A. Robert Abboud contributed another $585 million.

The company was profitable for nearly two years but more bad loans began to take a toll. First City began losing money again in mid-1990 and started looking for a buyer in 1991.

However, its loan portfolio repelled others from considering a purchase without the government assuming some of the losses.

The company limped along until last August when executives announced a plan to raise $400 million in capital without government help.

First City was on the verge of completing a key step in that plan, the sale of 13 banks in smaller communities, when the FDIC shut it down.

The company was started in 1924 by James Elkins, an attorney who built it into one of the state's largest banks. The law firm he also started is the second-largest in Texas.

JUDGES: Officials must change the system

a plan that will no longer discriminate against black and Hispanic voters.

"The federal district court will have the power to devise a remedy only if the state of Texas fails to develop a remedial plan in a timely manner or fails to develop a plan that fully remedies the current vote dilution," the court said.

A San Antonio attorney aiding in a minority rights group's challenge of the at-large system of electing judges immediately urged Gov. Ann Richards and Attorney General Dan Morales to remedy the problem.

A rehearing of the case before the full court could be sought by the state of Texas.

"Again, the minority community calls on the Texas governor and the attorney general to settle this case so that the rights of minorities don't continue to be violated," said Rolando Rios, an attorney for the League of United Latin American Citizens plaintiffs.

"Both of those elected officials enjoyed the backing of 80 to 90 percent of blacks and Hispanics in their campaigns. So this is an area they could provide leadership."

Judge John Hyde of 238th District Court in Midland said he had not seen the opinion but generally speaking was critical of the ruling.

"Frankly, I'm disappointed about going to single member districts ... but if that's the ruling that's got to be the law," he said.

"I think single-member districts is a good concept for legislative bodies where people are represented by elected officials ... (but) judges are not really suppose to represent anybody," Hyde explained.

Hyde said he could not comment on solutions for the problem since he didn't know if the decision outlines a remedy or gives the legislature authority to work one out.

Senior Judge Pat Baskin, who previously presided over the 142nd District Court, said he could not comment without having read the decision.

Bill Cryer, Richards' press secretary, said, "The governor has supported single-member districts in judicial elections. If this decision moves us in that direction, which it appears to do, we're happy with it."

Morales said in a statement that his office had not yet received a copy of the decision. He said comment would be made after the decision had been reviewed, but added, "The Texas judiciary must fairly reflect the people of Texas."

The case now goes back to federal district court in Texas, where it originated.

In 1989, U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton ruled that the judicial election system challenged by LULAC diluted votes of blacks and Hispanics.

But the 5th Circuit had reversed that ruling, deciding that the Voting Rights Act did not apply to state and local judges.

Ruling on cases from Texas and Louisiana, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the federal law protecting minorities' voting power should apply to the judges' elections.

"We then went back to the 5th Circuit and asked it to rule on the merits," said Rios, former legal director of the Southwest Voter Registration Project.

The court said the evidence showed no "legally significant white bloc voting in Travis County judicial races."

"While the Hispanic-preferred candidate lost in each of the three 1988 primaries that were analyzed by the plaintiffs' expert, we conclude that, in Travis County, the pattern does not establish legally significant white bloc voting — especially given the success of Hispanic-preferred candidates in other judicial and legislative elections."

The court said the state of Texas must be given the first opportunity to develop a new election system.

After the state comes up with a plan, the court said, it will be up to the U.S. Justice Department to assess it, after which the District Court will check "to determine whether it rectifies the current vote dilution in those counties and whether it otherwise complies with the law.

GABOR: Actress enthralls Midland Hilton staff

(From 1A)

tion for being difficult and spoiled. Yeah, she can be tough, but there is a softer side."

Ms. Gabor arrived at the hotel Saturday and left Tuesday, leaving behind an appreciative and enthralled staff.

"I found her to be very gracious," said concierge Hazel Barnes. "She kept telling all of us how pleased she was with what we did. She asked for nothing special."

Ms. Barnes and assistant concierge Kathleen Chapman were basically in charge of "babysitting" the actress, according to Dwyer.

"Being a concierge in a hotel essentially means taking care of the person's every need and desire," Ms. Barnes said. "Kathleen took care of her in the morning and I took care of her at night."

A total of seven rooms on the concierge level were used by Ms. Gabor, her husband and her six lawyers. Ms. Gabor also had access to the concierge level parlor, where she conducted most of her interviews.

"I was surprised that she had no one with her, you know, no assistant or hairdresser or makeup artist, just the attorneys and her husband," Ms. Chapman said. "She called one morning asking for a hairdryer. I couldn't believe she was going to do her own hair."

Ms. Gabor's charm was even evident during her meals.

"We train and train our restaurant staff and they were impeccable during her visit," Dwyer said. "And, she was so gracious and appreciative of them. She always complimented the waiters and waitresses and they would walk away with a smile from ear to ear."

Dwyer said the hardest part of having the actress stay at the hotel was having to deal with the attention she attracted, from media to crank calls.

"We had "Entertainment Tonight" and CNN covering her, plus the local media," he said. "And, added to that, were people sending flowers and hanging around in the lobby to see her. And, we got the craziest calls. People would try to reach her by claiming to be agents and stuff. We screened and announced all of her calls."

"It was difficult because we just don't have celebrities in here everyday," he continued. "Our security had to work around the clock. Everyone had to work a little harder."

Ms. Barnes, who has honed a perfect imitation of the actress's thick Hungarian accent, said Ms. Gabor was very appreciative of the staff's attention and extra work on her behalf.

"I was truly surprised with her," she said. "I had expected my worst nightmare, after what I seen and heard about her. And, I got the feeling that she could have been that way. But, we gave her a little extra attention and tried to make it as easy as possible and she responded to that. She was just charming."

DOCTORS: Many people shun conventional medicine and a third of these went to providers' offices for their treatments.

The typical patient is a well-educated, well-off white American, ages 25 to 49, most likely to live in the West.

Among other findings:

- Those who said they had seen providers made an average of 19 visits per year. The cost of one session averaged almost $28.
- In all, Americans made 425 million visits to these people in 1990, compared with 388 million visits to all family doctors, internists and other primary care physicians combined.
- The cost of all this unconventional treatment adds up to $13.7 billion a year. People pay for three-quarters of it out of their own pockets.

By comparison, Americans last year spent $839 billion, about 60 times more, on all kinds of health care.

- Backaches are the No. 1 reason for alternative therapies, cited by 36 percent of those seeking help. The other most common complaints are anxiety, headaches, chronic pain and cancer.

Almost everyone with a serious condition, such as cancer or high blood pressure, sees doctors as well as alternative healers. However, three-quarters never tell their physicians about them.

"This failure to communicate is not in the best interest of the patients, since the use of unconventional therapy, especially if it is totally unsupervised, may be harmful," the researchers wrote.

The use and abuse of such therapies has caught the attention of organized medicine in other ways. Recently, the National Institutes of Health opened its Office for the Study of Unconventional Medical Practices.

In an interview, Eisenberg said his study is a first step toward learning what role alternative therapies should play.

"We can now begin the more difficult task of designing rigorous scientific studies to see if any of these therapies are effective, safe and could save money," he said.

Eisenberg said he did not want to speculate about why people seek unorthodox therapies. However, Campion, a depûty editor of the journal, said in an editorial that the reason is clear enough: "They want to feel better."

He noted that access is easy, it's cheaper than regular medicine, people get lots of time and attention, and they are invited to come back often.

Campion argued that doctors should try more to understand better what drives people to shop for relief outside the mainstream.

"The public's expensive romance with unconventional medicine is cause for our professional worry," he wrote. "We need to demonstrate more effectively our dedication to caring for the whole patient — worries, quirks and all."

Washington presses U.N. to take reins

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — U.S. special envoy Robert B. Oakley accused the United Nations on Wednesday of "dragging its feet" on taking over military command in Somalia from the United States.

He said the United States and other nations were pressing U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali to name a respected independent mediator to help Somalia's warring factions on the road to peace.

"There's a quiet, collective push to get Mr. Boutros-Ghali to do for Somalia what he seems to be comfortable with in Bosnia," said Oakley.

Boutros-Ghali appointed former U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance last August to seek a negotiated settlement to the war in Bosnia. Vance is working alongside Lord Owen, a former British foreign secretary who is the European Community mediator.

"It doesn't have to be Vance and Owen, but someone of independent stature," Oakley said in an interview. "It would make the United Nations a lot stronger ... and it would fit very nicely with the idea of having a military commander flying the U.N. flag."

The United Nations has had two special envoys to Somalia, a post currently held by Ismat Kittani, an Iraqi. It was not clear whether Oakley meant to imply criticism of Kittani.

Many relief officials also believe a commanding international figure is crucial to bringing a lasting peace to Somalia. An independent mediator would also help allay fears among many Somalis of another U.N. takeover of their country, which was a U.N. trusteeship from 1950 to 1960.

"I am all for it because I believe it's too big a job for the quality of U.N. personnel that are here," said Mike McDonagh, field director for the Irish relief agency Concern.

Oakley said the United States had restored enough security since the Marines arrived on Dec. 9 for a U.N. commander to begin taking power.

"But ... the United Nations is dragging its feet," Oakley said.

Boutros-Ghali, who rarely responds to reporters' questions, could not immediately reached at the United Nations on Wednesday regarding Oakley's charge. He has made no secret that he will resist deploying U.N. peacekeepers until he believes it is safe for them to operate.

Clinton should focus on helping economy

President Bill Clinton hit the ground running this week — wiping out 12 years of Republican policy on abortion with five orders that will make abortions easier to obtain and indicating he will attempt to quickly remove a ban on homosexuals in the military. While Clinton no doubt wants to show the American people that he intends to be a president of action, on those two particular matters he wasn't abiding by the mandate he was given by the electorate.

Elected because he made the economy — including vastly reducing the federal deficit and debt — his top priority, Clinton's mandate is to get the domestic economy running again and to attack the looming deficit-debt problem. He was not elected to bring about vast social change in his first 100 days in office.

On both the issue of his abortion orders and the military ban on homosexuals, there is sharp division among the public illustrated by abortion opponents marching through the nation's capital, the military experts who have told him that lifting the ban on homosexuals would not be wise, plus strong congressional opposition.

Clinton's clash with the nation's military establishment and potentially the Congress over the issue of removing the ban against homosexuals in the military threatens to divert his attention from the point on which it must be focused: the economy, including what could be a looming crisis over the federal deficit and national debt.

There's no question that Clinton — like all presidents before him — also has social goals he hopes to promote from the "bully pulpit." The tendency, however, is for a newly inaugurated president to attempt to bring too much change too quickly.

Earlier this week, Defense Secretary Les Aspin sent Clinton a five-page memorandum in which he told the president that a majority of Congress, in addition to top military leaders, would oppose any immediate attempt by the administration to lift the ban on homosexuals in the armed forces.

In the Congress, Republicans, along with a number of Democrats, reacted sharply to Clinton's impending move on the ban.

But more important than who opposes this move, or how we or former joint chiefs of staff feel about it, is the fact that important energy — on the part of the president and his White House staff as well as within the Congress — is being devoted to this issue when it should be directed to the reason the former Arkansas governor got into the White House — his resolve to direct his immediate attention toward and establish as his top priority solving the serious economic problems facing the country.

While we realize he is seeking to take advantage of the traditional presidential "honeymoon" to move on social goals, the division and opposition that is creating so early in his presidency threatens to impact negatively on those other serious issues when he and Congress confront them.

GEORGE WILL
GOP lost presidency, won election

COLUMBIA, S.C.— This state, the first to secede, seems vehement about its long memories of evergreen grievances. The capitol — yes, the building — is decorated for its war wounds: Brass stars mark spots where Sherman's artillery pitted the walls. A plaque on a statue of George Washington holding half a cane offers this austere explanation: "During the occupation of Columbia by Sherman's Army soldiers brickbatted this statue and broke off the lower part of the walking cane."

Will

But for all this backward looking, no state has changed more than South Carolina in 20 years. And inside the capitol sits a governor who is both an effect and a cause of some of the change.

Carroll Campbell, 52, was a Republican congressman for eight years, including 1981, the golden Year One in Republican remembrance. He helped forge alliances with conservative "boll weevil" Democrats, passing Reagan's tax cuts and getting a tantalizing taste of power. But futility is the norm for House Republicans, so he ran for governor. By virtue of educational and other reforms he has become, according to Michael Barone of The Almanac of American Politics, "an exemplar of governing conservatism for the nation."

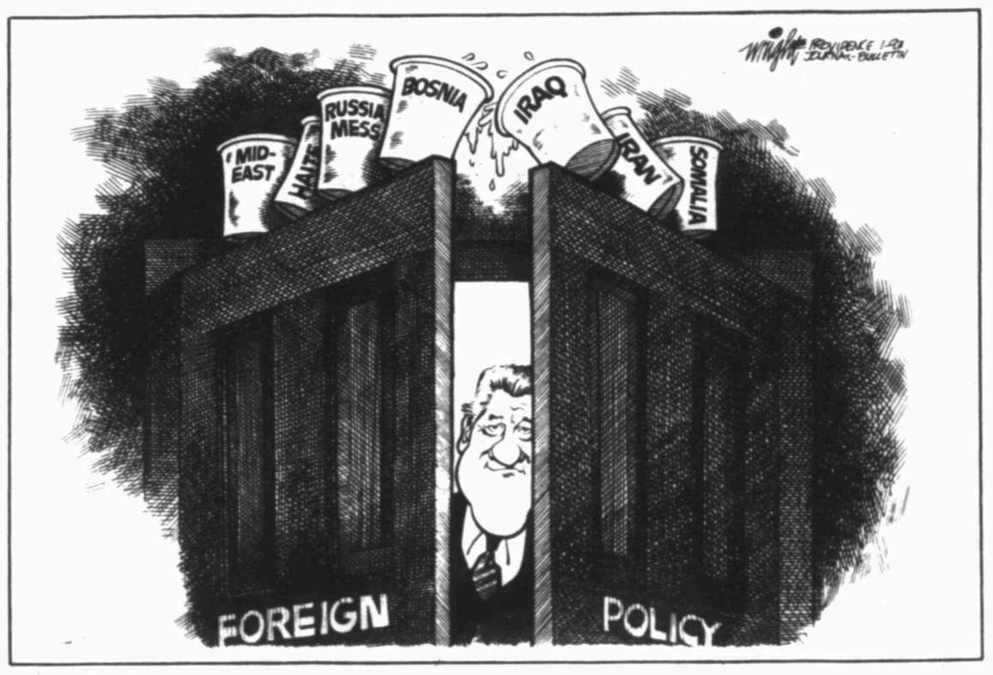

In 1973 South Carolina's anemic economy depended disproportionately on military bases produced by congressional seniority, and on low-wage textile plants. Today BMW's $600 million plant here joins international investments by Fuji (film), Mita (office equipment), Hitachi (television tubes), Nan Ya (industrial chemicals), Hoffman-LaRoche (pharmaceuticals) and others.

In a state once notoriously cross about the constriction of states' rights, Campbell practices creative federalism, competing with other states to produce an alluring business climate. Such competition is one reason why the South is growing. And, Campbell says contentedly, the South is growing steadily more Republican.

Campbell insists that Republicans nationally "lost the presidency but won the election." The Democrats were held even in the Senate and lost 10 congressional seats. Republicans made a net gain of 14 congressional seats in the South, which voted against the Democrats' all-Southern ticket. South Carolina gave Bush 48 percent, his second best total (second to Mississippi's 49.7). Arkansas gave Clinton his only Southern majority.

Of Clinton, Campbell says, "If he becomes a Democrat, he's in trouble." By "becoming a Democrat" Campbell means, primarily, making tax increases the administration's main topic of discussion. Already there is ample evidence that Democrats rampant in Clinton's Washington will fulfill Campbell's expectation.

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

ART BUCHWALD
Democratic victory can end friendships

You are probably wondering what happened to all the Democratic harmony and goodwill you witnessed on Inauguration Day.

The love feast is over, and people are snapping at each other's ankles.

Buchwald

Here's the problem: For 12 years the Democratic cultural elite gathered in each other's living rooms in Georgetown to cuss out the Republicans and their leaders. It was a contact sport, and everyone thrived on making patronizing remarks about President Reagan and President Bush. You didn't need a log fire to keep warm.

All you had to do was hear someone say "Sununu" and the blood rushed to your head and you developed goose bumps all over.

The choice of people to criticize for ruining the country was inexhaustible — starting and ending with Dan Quayle. As soon as the brandy was poured, it was open season on the Republican Party. As an opposition party the cultural elite was in fat city.

Then disaster struck. The country elected Democrat Bill Clinton to be President. By wresting power from the GOP and putting one of theirs in the White House, the Dems had taken all the fun out of American politics for themselves.

I know this because last week there was a gathering at George Stevens' house. Instead of being in a festive mood, people appeared to be uncomfortable and ill at ease. I sensed it when Winnie asked me what I thought of Clinton's inauguration speech.

I told her that I'd give it a B.

This enraged George who said, "Bill Safire gave it a B-plus on public television."

I responded, "She didn't ask me what Bill Safire gave it. She asked me what I gave it. Why are you so defensive?'

"If you go around telling everyone that Clinton only got a B, you could hurt his entire administration and sabotage his plans to save the country."

"I could?"

"When the cultural elite knock Clinton, how do you expect the rank and file to act? We should never discuss his flaws in public."

I asked George, "Are we allowed to criticize Clinton at all?"

"Sure," he replied, "if he's going to do something wrong, which he is certainly not going to do. I'm not saying that the administration is perfect, but it's awfully close to it."

"What about the hat?" I asked. "Can I talk about Hillary's hat?"

"What about the hat?" Harriet said. "I thought it looked very nice and it did match Tipper's coat."

"OK, forget the hat," I conceded. "But I think it's unfair for George to muzzle me for the next four years. I have to make a living, and just because we were all part of the golden age of Cap Weinberger doesn't mean that I can't be critical of the present White House. I'm sure that President Clinton wants us to point out errors when it's in his best interests."

The living room was divided between those who insisted that I remain politically correct about the President, and those who felt a gentle joshing would show people that Clinton supporters could laugh at themselves.

George led the PC group. "We've waited too long to have a person like you make light of the greatest leader in the free world. If you want to stoop to your juvenile media tricks, do it in someone else's home."

I left in a huff. It's amazing what one li'l old Democratic presidential victory will do to lifelong friendships.

LEWIS GRIZZARD
President reverses campaign promises

Clearing up Bill Clinton's campaign promise reversals:

— "I'll cut the deficit in half in four years."

What he really said was, "We have to cut the deficit." "Have" can sound a lot like half, especially when somebody with an Arkansas accent says it.

Grizzard

"I half to go to Hot Springs and speak to a lot of chicken people, and then I half to shake everybody's hand." You see? We simply misheard the president during the campaign on this one.

— "I'll give the middle class a tax cut."

The devil made Bill Clinton say that. Bill Clinton said to the devil, "I can't promise the middle class a tax cut now. What if I am elected and found out the country can't afford a middle class tax cut? How would that make me look?"

But the devil said, "Promise the middle class a tax cut or I'm going to stick this pitch fork right up your..."

— "A gas tax would be unfair."

Bill Clinton said that before he knew he was going to be elected and not have to pay for his own gas anymore.

— "My Cabinet will reflect America."

He was talking about the new cabinets Hillary is installing in the White House kitchen area.

— The Chelsea private school flap.

The president-elect still thinks if the public schools are good enough for your child, they're good enough for his. It's just that Chelsea is a lousy shot and would be at a huge disadvantage when a firefight breaks out in a D.C. public school.

— A surprise upturn in the economy despite all the ugly things Clinton said during the campaign about the Bush economic policy.

According to a Clinton aide, the president-elect didn't know the San Francisco Giants were going to sign Barry Bonds for $40 million plus, and the outfielder would single-handedly boost the economy by purchasing a jewelry store for his other ear.

U.S. shouldn't care about official's lies

I read with amusement — no, hysterical laughter — the Associated Press article in your Tuesday, Jan. 12, edition concerning the Senate launching an investigation into whether or not Secretary of State-designate Warren Christopher lied about his knowledge of Army spying on civil rights and anti-war protesters in the late 1960's.

The people of the United States elected an accused liar as president. Why should anyone care if the pending secretary of state tells a few.

Municipal Court may need system overhaul

On Saturday, Jan. 16, I received a notice from the Midland Municipal Court that I had not paid a parking ticket issued against me. The notice did not refer to the date of the parking ticket, therefore, I was not certain as to which parking ticket the notice referred to. However, I had kept records on every parking ticket I had paid. There had been three tickets issued to me since March 1, 1991. The notice in question referred to a ticket issued in January 1992.

I took my records to Municipal Court and asked the date the notice regarded. Comparison of my records with those of the court's, showed I had paid the fine in question and that the court had erred in sending me the notice. Had I not had a record of my payment, I would have had to pay an additional $10 fine.

How many of us citizens are required to pay this extra fine simply because we do not keep adequate records of every transaction with the Municipal Court and because we do not want to create a hassle between ourselves and the court?

If the Municipal Court, which is provided with ample record keeping devices, such as computers and personnel, cannot do better than this we need to overhaul the system and put responsible people in these offices.

The notice stated that if the matter was not taken care of in 15 days, a warrant would be issued for me or my car to be impounded. Now let's just imagine the embarrassment and inconvenience I would have suffered if for some reason I had not received the subject notice.

The citizens and taxpayers are not getting the services we are paying for. If the people working in the bureaucratic system cannot do their jobs correctly, they need to be let out.

Young man on bicycle helps neighborhood

I left Midland on a week-long trip, Jan. 6th and the next day after I was in Houston, one of my neighbors and friends called to say my hot water heater was leaking and water was all over the garage floor and alley.

A young gentleman, who was riding his bicycle through the alley, saw all of this water running from under the garage door and flooding the alley. He went to the front door and rang the bell. Since there was no response he went next door and rang that doorbell. Still no response. He heard a noise in the garage next door so he traveled on to that house and found that neighbor.

We are a close neighborhood as we have lived there together for 28 years and we have each others house keys. These friends went in and drained the hot water heater and looked for damage before calling me. They placed fans in the dining room to dry the carpet against the adjoining wall and called the plumber to replace the hot water heater.

I have thanked these "Good Samaritans." In the hurry to find the source of the water they did not get the name of the young gentleman. I would like to meet and be able to thank this young man for alerting my friends. I wish he would please stop the next time he rides through my neighborhood or call me at 694-8725.

Croats gain back garbage-strewn, looted territory near Zadar

NOVIGRAD, Croatia (AP) — Serb fighters who occupied this fishing village for more than a year were a ragtag bunch that looted, left piles of garbage and then melted away in the face of a surprise Croatian army offensive, residents said Wednesday.

"They were no army," peasant Ranko Vlatkovic said of the 10 to 15 Serbs who held Novigrad until a couple of days ago. "They were just armed people."

The village is part of the desolate landscape of plundered and charred houses, felled trees and rubble that Croatian forces have retaken since their offensive began Friday.

But their hold appears tenuous.

Plumes of gray smoke rose Wednesday over two recaptured villages, Pridraga and Islam Latinski, which Croatian army officers said had come under renewed Serb shelling.

Control over a third town was uncertain. Officials acknowledged that while they've pushed the Serbs back from the outskirts of the Adriatic port Zadar, it still was in reach of heavy artillery.

Before the surprise Croatian offensive, a truce had largely held for a year in the one-third of Croatia held by Serbs after the 1991 civil war.

The offensive, which pushed Serb forces back six miles or more from Zadar's outskirts, also brought widespread international condemnation.

About 10,000 people died in the 1991 war, which began when Serbs moved to stop Croatia from seceding from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

Vlatkovic, a 54-year-old Croat with a grubby gray beard, was one of five people who stayed in Novigrad, northeast of Zadar, when Serbs captured it in late 1991. The other 1,200 or so residents fled the village, which tumbles down a steep hill to a small port.

Serb forces, Vlatkovic said, came to Novigrad with trucks to cart away everything of value.

Houses along the harbor were looted, and some had the names of Serb families who intended to occupy them painted on them. Trash was strewn inside and out.

The roads east from Zadar through recently captured territory also were dotted with debris, from burned-out cars to decrepit lawn chairs that soldiers sat in as they passed the time on guard duty.

Reporters were taken by Croatian army officers to Novigrad.

Vlatkovic said there were tense times under the Serb occupation, but there was not a constant state of terror.

"You were always on a seesaw," he said. "One gave you food to eat, another would threaten to kill you with his knife."

Mara Coric, who also stayed behind, said she didn't know that Croatian forces had captured the town until she heard a knock on the door.

But then, she said, she opened the door to find the local butcher, who had returned.

Croatian army spokesman Maj. Ivan Ceko said refugees will be returning as soon as the area is cleared of mines, perhaps in 10 days.

In the meantime, fighting continued nearby. The thud of rockets fired by Croatian forces from multiple launchers could be heard.

Mayor Zivko Kolega of the Zadar region said his city was not totally safe yet from Serbs'.

Clinton to revoke ban on gays in military despite opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton will formally revoke the ban on homosexuals in the military within six months despite intense opposition from Congress and the Pentagon, Defense Secretary Les Aspin said Wednesday.

He indicated that Clinton, in the interim, would immediately instruct the Pentagon to cease asking recruits about their sexual orientation and halt prosecutions and ousters of homosexuals in uniform.

He said the president would proceed — perhaps as early as Thursday — to end military discrimination against gays and lesbians.

An administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton would announce a two-step process: formally revoking the ban within six months and putting into motion the interim steps.

The secretary said a formal order revoking the ban was being delayed to allow Congress to hold hearings and try to temper opposition. He left open the possibility that the temporary lifting of the ban could be overturned by Congress if a consensus is not reached in the interim.

He also said the military probably cannot legally continue to prosecute gay personnel during the six-month waiting period.

Standing before television cameras with Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., an opponent of lifting the ban, Aspin emphasized that the formal executive order would be delayed six months. He said that would allow time for congressional hearings and votes "before anything went into effect."

Aspin said the major question now is, "What is the status and how do we treat the issue of gays in the military during this six-month period?" He said there would be a "date certain" for lifting the ban when Clinton announces his policy.

"Maybe it won't work, because if it doesn't work then the votes aren't there and it won't happen," Aspin said. Speaking hypothetically, he added: "Bill Clinton will abide by his campaign pledge by doing an executive order and it will be overturned (if the votes aren't there to sustain him) but he abided by his campaign pledge."

"But that's really not what we're trying to do here," the secretary added. "We're trying to change the policy."

Aspin said the major question now is, "What is the status and how do we treat the issue of gays in the military during this six-month period?" He said there would be a "date certain" for lifting the ban when Clinton announces his policy.

Clinton had intended to release his policy Wednesday, but delayed it one day to give himself and Aspin a chance to speak further to Nunn and other senators.

Nunn said that any policy change must be the shared responsibility of the executive branch and Congress. The Georgia Democrat asked a series of provocative questions that he said the administration had failed to answer, including whether separate living quarters or changes in the law on sodomy would be necessary.

White House spokesman George Stephanopoulos said the president also intended to announce on Thursday a strict conduct code governing sexual behavior and harassment that covered both homosexuals and heterosexuals.

"I think it is important to draw a line between status and conduct," Stephanopoulos said.

City unemployment rate dips in December

■ The yuletide helped Midland's job force increase for the month but still above the average from 1991.

By Melia McEwen
Staff writer

Holiday hiring helped push Midland's unemployment rate down just more than a half-point during December, according to figures released Wednesday by the Texas Employment Commission.

The unemployment rate fell to 7.4 percent from November's 8 percent, but remains well above the 5.2 percent seen in December 1991.

"We are seeing slightly lower rates due to the holiday season," said Jacquie Mosely, manager of the Midland TEC office.

'Statistics indicate the improvement was due more to seasonal hiring than a change in economic conditions.'

— Jacquie Mosely
manager, Midland TEC

In Odessa, the unemployment rate dropped back into single-digit range, falling to 9.9 percent from 10.5 percent in November.

TEC statistics show 200 people joined the local civilian labor force in December, sending it to 50,200 from 50,000 in November; it was 49,700 a year earlier.

Of those in the labor force, 46,500 were employed, up from 46,000 in November but below the 47,100 employed in December 1991.

The TEC said an additional 300 Midlanders found jobs during the month, lowering total unemployment to 3,700 from 4,000; however, unemployment remains well above the 2,600 seen a year earlier.

Mosely cautioned that the statistics "indicate the improvement was due more to seasonal hiring than a change in economic conditions. There's a possibility unemployment will return to previous levels in January."

She said the office has been very busy since the holidays ended, and workers are seeing a large number of first-time claims.

Among the TEC's 27 metropolitan statistical areas, Midland ranked 16th, tied with Killeen-Temple and Tyler. Odessa ranked 23rd among the MSAs.

Bryan-College Station had the lowest rate in the state, 4 percent, followed by Austin with 5.1 percent, Amarillo with 5.4 percent, San Angelo with 5.8 percent and Lubbock and Victoria, each with 6.1 percent. McAllen-Edinburg-Mission had the highest rate, 16.4 percent.

Statewide, the unemployment rate fell to 7.4 percent from 7.7 percent. The TEC said the number of working Texans rose by 57,000 during the month, boosted by hiring in retail and health services. The construction industry lost 2,400 jobs during the month.

Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale conductor Don Th. Jaeger conducts a symphonic ensemble in concert following Wednesday's press conference in Odessa.

Symphony begins fund drive

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Inc. is looking for $250,000 to complete funding of its 1993-94 season.

"Last year the symphony came to both communities with a 'Save the Symphony' campaign and the communities were very responsive and that drive was extremely successful," said Ann Faulkner, campaign chairman and president- elect of the organization's joint board.

"Now the MOSC is fiscally sound and responsible; however, we need the community to support us every year in an annual fund drive so we can continue the services, like our Youth Education Project and our concert series — classical and pop, and our ensemble series."

The announcement of the 1993 campaign drive came Wednesday at a press conference at Odessa's Gonzales Elementary. The location was chosen because the MOSC's Chamber Orchestra was to perform at the elementary school as part of the organization's Youth Education Project. This project, which continues in Odessa through the first week in February before kicking off in Midland for two weeks, brings performing ensembles of the MOSC into the elementary schools in Midland and Odessa.

"All fourth, fifth and sixth graders in the Midland Independent School District and the Ector County Independent School District will hear an ensemble of the orchestra," Ms. Faulkner said.

The concerts will be repeated for the public in February at ClayDesta Plaza. The noon concerts are sponsored by ClayDesta.

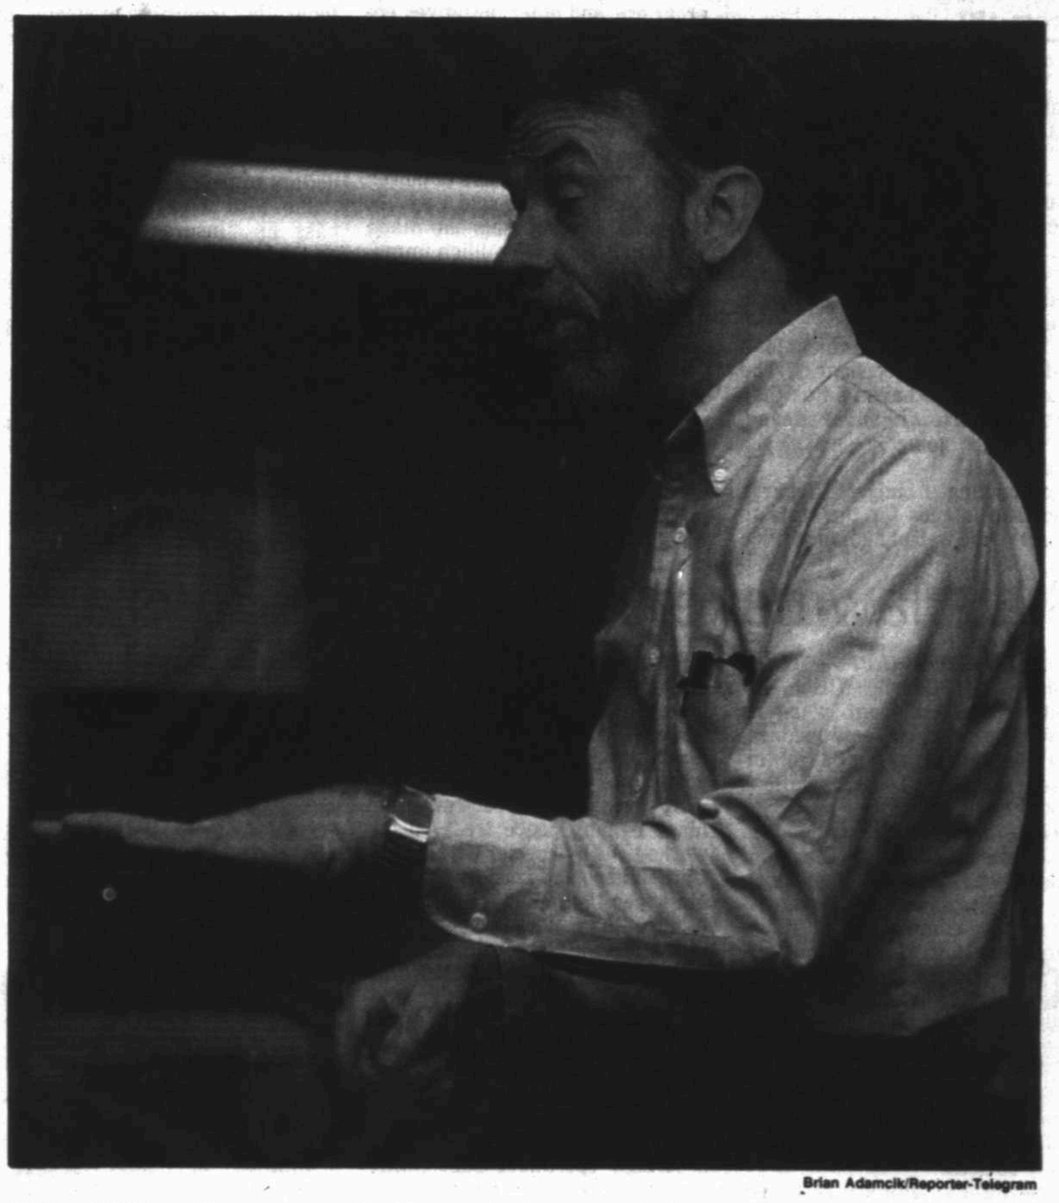

"Just as we invest our resources in the youth of the Permian Basin, we need your support each year to continue providing these services," Ms. Faulkner said. "Our organization provides a pool of musicians who teach your children. They perform all over the region at weddings, church services, receptions, business meetings and public events."

Most of the symphony's budget is spent in the Permian Basin, Mrs. Faulkner said. "Ninety percent of our total budget is reinvested in the community by providing jobs for our musicians, staff and support of local businesses."

The MOSC's annual budget is around $700,000, Ms. Faulkner said.

"That's not a little organization," she said. "That's

■ Kirk Fulton tries for aerobatic national team with Russian airplane.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

West Texas aerobatic pilot Kirk Fulton is charmed and impressed by the strength, speed, power and agility of the Russian-built Sukhoi Su-26MX aerobatic monoplane.

He is intent on winning a place on America's World Aerobatic Team in the Russian airplane for world competition in 1994 in Hungary.

"It is the strongest airplane in the world bar none, including our (McDonnell-Douglas) F-15 and everything else," said Fulton, a former Lubbock race-car driver and ex-banker who today is in the trucking business.

The airplane is stressed to withstand a force of plus or minus 24 Gs — forces of gravity, Fulton said. "The airplane is so far beyond human capability" for the pilot to survive the high G force.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Aerobatic pilot Kirk Fulton is determined to fly his Russian-built Sukhoi Su-26MX to a spot on America's World Aerobatic team.

Fulton, who is a member of the International Aerobatic Club (IAC) and IAC Chapter 71 in West Texas, flew his Sukhoi to Midland's Skywest Airport Wednesday to demonstrate the aircraft's aerobatic qualities, including its rate of climb.

Richards asks for no new taxes in address

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards asked lawmakers Wednesday to enact a legislative program that includes a no-new-taxes budget, immunizations for all school children and a guarantee of access to basic health insurance.

In her state-of-the-state address, Richards said Texas has made progress since she took office two years ago.

But the school finance crisis, with its threatened school shutdown on June 1, remains a dark cloud and is the 1993 Legislature's top priority, she said.

"If that (school closing) happens, I cannot imagine an excuse

Area authorities look for assault suspects

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Lawmen in Midland and Odessa are on the lookout for suspects in a pair of sexual assault cases that each occurred Wednesday morning.

In Midland, police are looking for two suspects who the victim, a 15-year-old white female, met at a friend's house about 1 a.m., according to a police report.

The two men offered the victim a ride home and she accepted. Instead of taking her home, the two took her to an apartment in east Midland where both suspects sexually assaulted her.

The victim was taken to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, but was not admitted.

Both suspects are described as white males in their 30s.

A 19-year-old Odessa woman was in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital after being sexually assaulted during an aggravated robbery.

According to the Odessa police report, officers were dispatched to the 7-Eleven at 2700 N. Dixie, about 2:30 a.m. on an aggravated robbery call.

Upon arrival, officers learned that the clerk, who is seven months pregnant, had been robbed and then sexually assaulted by two black males, after one displayed a black steel semi-automatic pistol. The victim told officers that one of the men placed a handgun to her head during the offenses.

When the suspects left the building, the victim said she saw a Maroon 1988 or 1991 Nissan car leaving the parking lot. It is unknown if it was the suspects' vehicle or a possible witness.

The first suspect in the Odessa crime is described as a black male, 19 years old, 5 feet, 6 inches tall, 140 pounds, with short black hair, wearing a gray knit cap, green pants and shoes. The second suspect is described as a black male, 20 years old, five feet, nine inches tall, with short black hair, wearing a brown derby hat, black coat, pants and shoes.

Senate candidate makes whistle stop

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Congressman Joe Barton unleashed a seven-point plan for economic prosperity during a Midland stop Wednesday while campaigning for U.S. Senate.

"I am running a campaign to win . . . I have never lost an election. I've never been in an election where I was suppose to win in the beginning," Barton said during a brief news conference at Midland International Airport.

Several other Texans have announced their candidacy for the senate position up for grabs in a May special election, as a result of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen being appointed Treasury Secretary. Bob Krueger resigned his position on the Texas Railroad Commission to temporarily fill the seat.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Joe Barton

In his bid for the opening, Barton, an eight-year congressman for District 6, is touting a "tremendous" seven-point plan to pull Texas from economic ruins.

The list includes:

■ A balanced budget amendment, where Barton calls for limiting tax growth in proportion to national income growth, and force spending reductions instead of tax increases.

■ The second proposal calls for less foreign aid and more free trade. Barton supports the North American Free Trade Agreement.

■ Of special interest to West Texans, the candidate backs an oil import fee.

On the same note, Barton opposes a gasoline tax. "It lessens the demands on one of our chief products (oil)," he said.

■ Barton's fourth measure is support of tort law reform, which proponents claim will spur small business by reducing the threat of "frivolous" lawsuits.

■ Another way to attract and keep jobs in Texas hinges on preventing a state income tax, Barton

PLANE: Area aerobatic pilot vies for national team

(From 1B)

The prototype of the Sukhoi Su-26, which Fulton said was developed at a cost of $24 million for the Russian government, was built by Sukhoi Design Bureau in Moscow and first flew in June 1984, according to Jane's All World's Aircraft, 1991-92.

"The Russians, before the coup, spent $24 million developing this airplane, so they could win the world aerobatic championship," Fulton said.

In 1992, Russian Sukhoi airplanes were in the first five places in world aerobatic competition in France, he said.

"The Russian Sukhoi has won more gold medals in world competition than any other airplane" in recent years, he said.

Today, in world-class competition, Fulton rates the Russian-built Sukhoi Su-26M, the German-built Extra 300, Extra 260 and Extra 230, and the French-built CAP 231, all monoplanes, as "the three hottest airplanes going" in world competition.

Fulton said that American-built aerobatic airplanes, such as the biwing Pitts and Christen Eagle, would be "left in the dust as far as competition goes in the unlimited category," which is the most demanding of IAC competition categories of basic, sportsman, intermediate, advanced, and unlimited.

"The Pitts is no longer competition in world championships," Fulton said. "It was one of the top (aerobatic) airplanes. But now, you either fly a Russian-made, a German-made or a French-made airplane if you want to be competitive at the world championships."

The Sukhoi, which has 25-foot, 7-inch wingspan, a 22-foot, 5½-inch fuselage length and an empty weight of 1,554 pounds, is powered by a 360-horsepower, nine-cylinder Russian radial engine, which drives a three-bladed, German-built Hoffman variable-pitch propeller. The propeller's diameter is seven feet and 10½ inches.

The high-tech airplane is built of the light but strong titanium and titanium alloy, carbon fiber and the fiber Kevlar instead of the aluminum and aluminum alloy which are the basic metals of many of today's aircraft.

The aircraft red lines at 320 mph, which is the aircraft's recommended top speed in a dive.

"It will go faster, a little bit, but you aren't supposed to," Fulton said. "It will stay together at 340 (mph)," he said. "I know that."

The aircraft's rate of climb at sea level is 3,540 feet per minute, according to Jane's All The World's Aircraft. Its normal cruise speed is more than 160 mph.

The Sukhoi's maximum aileron roll rate is 720 degree (two rolls) per second, and the snap-roll rate is "closer to 800 degrees" per second.

One roll is 360 degrees.

The Sukhoi Su-26MX ("X" for export) retails in America for $200,000 at the Pompano Air Center Inc. in Florida.

"If the airplane were designed and built and sold in the United States, it would be an $800,000 airplane," he said.

Midland's Ole Olsen, who flies the Extra 230 monoplane in aerobatic competition and who has won IAC championships in advanced competition, has switched to the monoplane from the biwing Pitts and Christen Eagle.

Initially, many aerobatic aircraft were biplanes, since two wings make for stronger airplanes than one wing.

Now, with the advanced technology of composites, the strength of two or more wings may be built into single-wing aircraft.

Since one wing creates less drag than two, a monoplane can fly faster and have a great rate of climb than a biplane with the same power as the monoplane.

Prior to the Sukhoi, Russian aerobatic pilots were flying Russian-built Yak aircraft in competition, Fulton said.

"The old (Yak) airplanes that the Russians were flying" were flown demandingly and sometimes beyond their limits, Fulton said.

"They (Russians) fly hard, probably more aggressively than any other pilots anywhere in the world. They were pulling the wings off of the Yaks all of the time. They were killing lot of their pilots in the Yaks."

Then, the Russians came up with the Sukhoi.

"As far as I know, no one has ever broken one of these airplane yet," Fulton said, though there have been crashes due to pilot error.

Tom Reneau, a Midland commercial pilot who is aiming toward aerobatic flying, said that the Sukhoi "is the greatest airplane in the world right now for aerobatics. It's just bad the Russians build it."

Fulton, who formerly competed in sprint-car races, said that "actually, aerobatics got me into flying. I used to drive race cars, and I always wanted to fly aerobatics."

At age 24 in 1981, he earned his private pilot's license.

"I learned to fly because I wanted to fly aerobatics," which, Fulton said, offer him the freedom inherent in flight, "freedom of expression, and the challenge."

STATE: Richards makes annual address or an explanation that would satisfy Texans in any district of this state," Richards told a joint House-Senate session.

"It is time for us to settle the court's concern about money and to be honest with ourselves how to spend that money well," she said.

The governor, who is offering several budget proposals to lawmakers, said voters don't want another tax increase.

"We must keep government lean and make smart decisions ... The people of Texas have told us they want us to live within our means, and we are going to do it," she said.

In enacting a budget, Richards said, she intends for the state to preserve the web of human service programs and other initiatives enacted in 1991.

"We stand firm behind those gains: stronger protection for the environment, stabilized insurance rates, government efficiency and consolidation, better nursing homes, opening the doors of power for all Texans," she said.

Among the proposals she made was a call for a $50 million immunization program that makes certain every child in the state gets access to shots for preventable childhood diseases.

"It is incredible to me that we can find the money to inoculate cattle but we have not found the money to inoculate children," Richards said. For 40 years, the Texas Animal Health Commission has provided free or low-cost vaccinations for heifers as part of a federally required program to eliminate brucellosis, a bacteriological infection.

"It is absurd for us to forego a $20 shot that can protect (children) against illnesses that needlessly cost lives and thousands of dollars to treat," she said.

She also urged lawmakers to pass an "insurance availability act" which she said would guarantee "every Texan access to an insurance plan that will provide basic health care — including primary and preventative care."

She called for limits on annual health insurance price hikes, plus pools for small businesses seeking to buy health coverage.

Richards asked lawmakers to add a new penalty — life without possibility of parole — for capital murderers who don't get the death sentence.

The governor said the state's economy is leading the nation out of recession, with national and international companies either relocating or expanding operations in Texas.

"We are literally becoming the geographic, intellectual and cultural center, not of a region but of a hemisphere," she said.

To accomplish her goals, the Democratic governor called on legislators of both parties to put political differences aside.

DEATHS

Lela Taylor

Services for Lela F. Taylor of Midland are set for 3 p.m. Saturday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Jerry Berry of Kelview Heights Baptist Church officiating. Rites of the Order of the Eastern Star will be conducted by Chapter 253. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Taylor died Tuesday in Midland.

She was born July 16, 1911, in Waco, where she grew up and attended school, graduating from Waco High School.

She married Bob Taylor on March 30, 1935, in Dallas. He preceded her in death in October 1989.

She moved to Midland in 1937. She was a volunteer for the local tuberculosis association, a member of the Order of the Eastern Star Chapter 253 and First Baptist Church.

Survivors include: two daughters, Roberta Sue Price of Midland and Sally Jo Reeves of Grand Junction, Colo.; three grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

State lawmaker returns from Bosnia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Congressman Charlie Wilson, recently returned from war-torn Bosnia-Herzegovina, said Wednesday that an arms embargo imposed by the United Nations should be lifted.

The embargo isn't hurting the well-armed Serbian forces, said Wilson, who spent five days meeting with Bosnian leaders and touring refugee camps.

Instead, it is keeping weapons out of the hands of Bosnians who are trying to defend their republic from Serb attacks, the Lufkin Democrat said.

"The people that are victims are the ones you are not allowing to be armed," Wilson told reporters, calling the U.N. sanctions "absolutely useless."

The Clinton administration is considering providing weapons to Bosnia's Muslims even while supporting international peace efforts, a State Department spokesman said Friday.

Wilson said he's unclear what action the United States should take. But, he added, "I think it is by far the biggest problem Clinton's foreign policy apparatus is going to have to deal with."

He predicted Serbs would not abide by any peace treaty being worked out by special U.N. envoy Cyrus Vance and Lord Owen of the European Community.

More than 18,000 people have died since the Bosnian conflict began when the republic's Muslims and Croats voted last year for independence from the Yugoslav federation. The Serbs, who want to stay with Yugoslavia, have captured about 70 percent of Bosnia.

Wilson, a member of the House Select Intelligence Committee and a foreign operations subcommittee, conceded that lifting the arms embargo isn't likely to bring peace to the troubled area.

"For once in my life, I don't have an answer," he said. "I don't know what to do."

The United States will face difficult political problems — particularly with Russian leader Boris Yeltsin — if it seeks to train and arm the Bosnians, he said.

"Anything we do militarily has a serious downside."

The East Texas lawmaker made a name for himself in the early 1980s as an ardent supporter of the Afghan rebels doing battle with the Soviets who had invaded Afghanistan.

"This is a much more confusing situation," said Wilson, who didn't meet with any Serbian leaders during his Jan. 9-13 visit.

Conditions are "absolutely horrifying" in Bosnia and the refugee camps near Zagreb, Wilson said.

"There's an enormous amount of suffering and dying," he said.

"The people I talked to were mostly young men in their 20s. They all had wounds and scars and evidence of torture," he said. "They are all desperate for their families."

said.

■ Turning to new ways to bring Texas to the forefront of the future, Barton said the state needs to concentrate on technology as it enters the 21st century.

"I'm an engineer and I believe our future in this state is based on high technology," he said.

■ Finally, Barton said prosperity must include all of Texas, including small cities and rural areas. To further that, he proposes a jobs ambassador for small-town Texas.

Barton has dropped that message off along his West Texas campaign trail that included Wichita Falls, Amarillo, Lubbock, San Angelo and Abilene.

Killer hopes to avoid execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A convicted killer facing execution next month for the rape-murder of an Abilene firefighter's wife said Wednesday he accepts responsibility for the crime but is hoping to get a life sentence rather than be put to death.

William Kitchens, 29, is scheduled to die Feb. 9 for beating, strangling, raping and shooting Patricia LeAnn Webb. The woman's body was found May 17, 1986 in a wooded area west of Abilene off Interstate 20. Kitchens, who took her car, credit cards, money and checkbook, was arrested the following day in Blanchard, Okla., his hometown.

"One thing I've learned through my experience here is that you've got to grow up and accept responsibility for your actions," Kitchens said.

"Yes I should be punished for what I did. I've battled with myself trying to decide if I should be executed for what I did. And I've not come up with an answer about that."

Kitchens said a new trial would not accomplish much but could be a way to get his sentence commuted to life. He said he then hoped to be able to use his time to teach young people about the consequences of leading an unlawful life.

"I believe I have made a lot of changes in my life," Kitchens said, noting he has taken numerous courses to become a certified paralegal and that he has found God. "I have a different outlook on myself and life. If God gives me the opportunity, I can be a help to someone else."

Kitchens would not talk in detail about his crime, saying his attorneys had asked him to not discuss it.

He did say, however, that he was hitchhiking through Texas on his way to California when he met the woman. And he blamed the incident and previous problems with the law on drug use and drinking, which he said he began at the age of 4 when his father and friends would get him drunk.

"I know I liked it and the attention I got," he said. "I thought it was what I was supposed to do. I turned to drugs and alcohol as an escape from reality."

State attorneys do not consider Kitchens' execution date a serious one. His appeals have not been exhausted.

Kitchens blamed the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals for much of the inactivity in his case, saying years went by before the court issued a brief order affirming his conviction.

Kitchens said the lack of movement in his case prompted him to consider volunteering to be executed.

"I've given that a lot of thought," he said. "But I don't think it's the real answer. I don't know it would accomplish anything, but it would keep me from committing another crime."

a pretty big organization."

The MOSC's impact in Midland and Odessa is felt by those who are not concert goers as well as by those who are, said Ms. Faulkner.

"Because of the payroll, we have an economic impact in the communities so it's not just a cultural impact, it's a business impact, too," she said. "The quality of life in our communities is improved by having the symphony and the excellence of our symphony is something to proud of. It affects our quality of life."

The main sources of income for the MOSC are ticket sales, foundation support, sponsorships and community support.

Tips lead to arrest of area suspects

Staff report

ODESSA — A Crime Stopper's tip led to the location of four Odessa teen-agers in connection with several reports of criminal mischief.

According to a police report, officers received multiple reports of criminal mischief from Dec. 20-21 in the 1000 through 1500 blocks of Coronado, the 2900 block of West 3rd and the 600 block of Eidson. The incidents involved rocks being used to break the windows of parked vehicles. Detectives, who were investigating the offenses, acted an a Crime Stopper's tip and contacted four males believed responsible for the damage, which is estimated at at least $2,500.

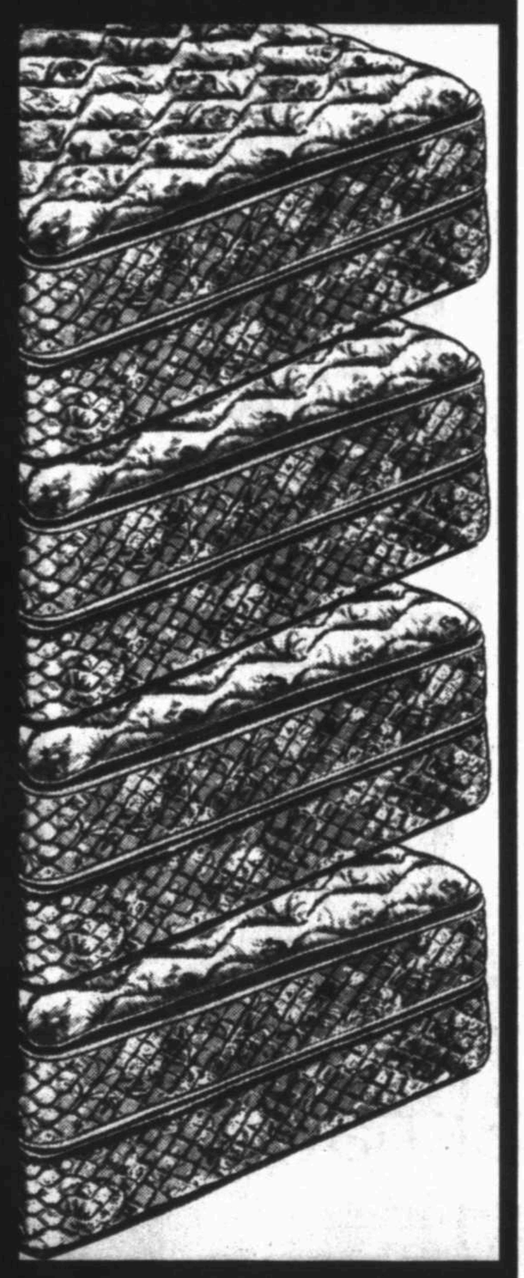

Charges are pending in Ector County's juvenile court against two 14-year-old white males, a 15-year-old white male and a 13-year-old white male. The investigation is continuing.

Lawmaker presents firearms bill to Senate

By Peggy Fikac
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — A lawmaker filed a bill Wednesday to require people who improperly store firearms to put in 100 hours of community service at a hospital trauma center.

Rep. Sue Schechter, D-Houston, said the measure is meant to reduce the number of children who are accidentally shot.

"It is a health-related bill for children ... It is not a gun control bill," Ms. Schechter said.

Her bill would target people who store a firearm in a place where an unsupervised child is likely to gain access.

The measure is co-sponsored by Reps. Kevin Brady, R-The Woodlands; John Hirschi, D-Wichita Falls, and Sherri Greenberg, D-Austin.

'It is a health-related bill for children ... It is not a gun control bill,'

— Rep. Sue Schechter

Bill Powers of the National Rifle Association had no immediate comment on the proposal. It has been endorsed by police departments around the state, including those in Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth, according to Ms. Schechter's office.

The bill was prompted by Dianne Clements of Houston, whose 13-year-old son, Zachary, was shot to death in 1991.

Ms. Clements said a neighbor boy found a shotgun under his parents' bed and, not believing it was loaded, killed her son during a game of hide-and-seek.

"I cannot bring Zachary back, but we can protect other children," said Ms. Clements, founder of Zero Accidental Killings-Texans for Gun Safety.

Statistics on such deaths aren't kept by the state, Ms. Schechter said. But her office said 63 children were killed in Texas from accidental shootings in 1991.

The bill would create a registry to record the number of injuries and deaths resulting from negligent storage of firearms.

It also would require gun dealers to tell customers about devices that inhibit accidental shootings, and post signs telling customers it is illegal to improperly store firearms where children can get to them.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 28, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Taking better care of your health will pay big dividends. Good nutrition and regular exercise bolster your stamina, allowing you to accomplish great things. Travel for business or pleasure in the spring. Both May and September are opportune for career advancement. Postpone a vacation until October. Your personal relationships will be especially fulfilling around Thanksgiving. Keep in close touch with your old pals even while making new ones.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Alan Alda, actress Susan Howard, author Susan Sontag, Cuban activist Jose Julian Marti.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Learn to cooperate with loved one and you will enjoy a much more satisfying relationship. Money questions hang over a business decision. Get the best advice available.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some of your associates are in an on-again, off-again mood. Do what you can on your own. Make the most of any unusual opportunities. Romance begins to intensify.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The people around you today are interested in your ideas. Your efforts will spark new career success. Afternoon hours favor business negotiations. Do not be afraid to take the lead.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Proceed with caution where financial dealings with friends or relatives are concerned. Use more tact when expressing your opinions. Temper criticism with praise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be willing to stay on the sidelines and tend to routine business today. Your patience will be richly rewarded. A promotion or raise is possible. Sprout wings as a social butterfly tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Original ideas receive a warm welcome from those in authority. Keep calm if mate becomes angry. Take advantage of sales if trying to enlarge your wardrobe.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It pays to shun the limelight today. Work behind the scenes to improve cash flow. Vague suspicions could hamper your ability to think straight. Reinforce your leadership role by raising funds.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can accomplish more than you think today. Something that has eluded you in the past moves within reach. Do not let a scheduling conflict affect a long-term relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Clever ideas can be implemented today. You get off to a flying start after meeting with a person of substance. Your mate's attitude gives you confidence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Excess is the only thing that can hold you back now. Spiritual insights help you reach a decision that will eventually improve the financial picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your intuition is right on the mark. By following through on a sudden hunch, you will walk away a winner. Do not be afraid to reverse your opinion if new data becomes available.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A feeling of uneasiness will soon disappear. It is important you act self-confident. An artistic talent could become a commercial asset. Freelancers will be especially lucky.

TODAY'S CHILDREN: These Aquarians feel strongly that they must maintain their independence in order to reach their full potential. Frequent periods of solitude are necessary for them to be happy and productive. They are affectionate but unpossessive, willing to give their loved ones the same emotional space that they want for themselves. An early interest in music or art should be gently encouraged. These Aquarians are not only artistic but highly original! They have a knack for turning the ordinary into something very special.

"The best way to learn to bid and play like a winner," writes Jeff Rubens in the "Introduction" to his Swiss Match Challenge (Lawrence & Leong, 234 pp, paperback. Available from The Bridge World, 39 W. 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025, $13.75 including postage and handling. Mention this column and receive an autographed copy!), "is to have a successful player sit down beside you and analyze your play of challenging deals. The next best way is to practice on a book of this kind." He could well be right.

On each of the 56 boards of the eight short matches you will be confronted with challenging bidding and play problems. The answer to each situation is given before you proceed to the next. This hand is typical.

Your first problem is what to do after South's one-club opening bid and we're sure our readers came up with the one-spade overcall on the four-card suit. That deflects the opponents from a cold three-no-trump contract and now you find yourself defending four hearts, with only the dummy and your hand visible. You cash three rounds of spades to complete the book. How do you continue?

There are two possibilities: a trump promotion, or cutting declarer off from dummy. The bidding makes it unlikely that a trump promotion can succeed. Therefore, shift to a diamond at trick four. That shatters declarer's line of communication and the contract must go down.

The book will provide you with many challenging hours.

JFK biographer didn't expect family to speak out against book

NEW YORK — John F. Kennedy biographer Nigel Hamilton says he's surprised that Kennedy's siblings have criticized his book, "J.F.K.: Reckless Youth," themselves.

"I expected this to be done by people on behalf of the Kennedys," he said in an interview published Wednesday in The New York Times. "I never expected it to be done by the Kennedys themselves."

The book, published late last year by Random House, paints a portrait of a dysfunctional family, with unflattering views of presidential parents Rose and Joseph P. Kennedy Sr.

The British author and the Kennedy siblings have been publicly feuding since the book's release, most notably in opinion pieces in the Times.

"Our parents gave us love, support and encouragement throughout their lives," wrote Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and his sisters, Jean Smith, Eunice Shriver and Patricia Lawford.

Hamilton accused the siblings of reneging on an offer to help with the book.

"Teddy introduced me to Eunice, and she promised to talk to me, to give me her collection of J.F.K. letters," he told the Times. "Nothing of what they offered came through. It's a bit late for them to complain now."

Melody Miller, a spokeswoman for the senator, told the Times that the family "clearly made their feelings known with regard to the book, and they're going to stand on that."

PHILADELPHIA — Stories about actress Barbra Streisand's inaugural week activities kee› surfacing.

A day after she knocked down a report that she planned to run for the Senate, the Philadelphia Daily News reported Wednesday on an Inauguration Day chat Streisand had with Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa.

"How do you Republicans feel now that you've lost everything and are all losers?" Streisand reportedly asked Specter.

"Well perhaps you haven't heard," Specter responded, "but I won."

Specter spokesman Dan McKenna called the exchange "lighthearted bantering."

"It was very cordial, in no way nasty," McKenna said.

The two were sharing a senators-only elevator at the time. McKenna said Specter invited Streisand and her son aboard.

That didn't keep Streisand from expressing her feelings about Specter's part in Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas' confirmation hearings, the newspaper said. Specter aggressively questioned Anita Hill, who accused Thomas of sexual harassment.

"I don't like the way you treated Anita Hill, but what is there to say?" Streisand was quoted as saying.

"After saying that, you've said it all, haven't you?" Specter replied.

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo.— Connie Chung's invitation to speak at a banquet here Friday was withdrawn after organizers of a boycott over Colorado's anti-gay rights amendment criticized her decision to attend.

Chung

CBS Sports President Neal Pilson will step in for the correspondent, the network said Wednesday.

New York Boycott Colorado, part of a national movement urging a boycott of Colorado to protest passage of Amendment 2, distributed thousands of leaflets in New York City criticizing Chung's scheduled appearance.

Joe Carriere, general manager of CBS affiliate KREX-TV, said Tuesday he wrote Chung a letter withdrawing the invitation.

"I didn't want to put her in a position of no win. If she came, she was taking one side; if she didn't she was taking another," he said. "She didn't pull herself out. I made the determination."

"The network has a longstanding commitment that we made to our affiliate to make this appearance (by a CBS representative)," said CBS Sports spokeswoman Susan Kerr in New York. Kerr did not explain how Pilson was chosen to take Chung's place, but said, "He is the CBS person who is going to fulfill the commitment made."

A spokesman for New York Boycott Colorado called the announcement a "slap in the face" of the boycott supporters.

"No one has called a boycott to cover stories in Colorado," said William Dobbs, "but public relations is no reason to violate the boycott. CBS is promoting Colorado tourism."

The amendment, which bars anti-discrimination laws against gays in Colorado, was approved by voters in November.

WASHINGTON — Pat Buchanan, who challenged former President Bush for the Republican presidential nomination last year, is returning to his old job as co-host of CNN's "Crossfire."

The network said Wednesday that Buchanan will end his leave of absence from the political talk show on Monday.

CNN said Buchanan will alternate with John Sununu in the conservative seat on the show opposite Michael Kinsley.

Thousands of Americans pay respect to Thurgood Marshall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of Americans, black and white together, visited Thurgood Marshall's casket as he lay in state Wednesday. The line of mourners wrapped around the Supreme Court building where he won his greatest civil rights victory and later served 24 years as the first black justice.

Many said they felt compelled to say goodbye to a man they never met.

"He was a man of courage, a man of dignity and a man of strength," said Erold Jean Francois, an immigrant from Haiti who attends a Miami high school. "He did the best he could for this country ... for blacks and whites."

Marshall's wife, Cecilia, and two sons, Thurgood Jr. and John William, led a procession into the imposing building on Capitol Hill.

"The battle done, the victory won ... the songs of triumph have begun. Hallelujah," said the Rev. Kawsai Thornell, canon of the Washington Cathedral, during a brief ceremony.

Marshall, who died Sunday at age 84, became only the second Supreme Court justice to be honored by having his casket lie in state at the court building. The other was Chief Justice Earl Warren in 1974.

His funeral will be at Washington Cathedral on Thursday, and a private burial is planned for Friday at Arlington National Cemetery.

In 23 years as chief counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Marshall established himself as the nation's greatest civil rights lawyer.

He argued the Supreme Court cases that led to the landmark 1954 decision outlawing racial segregation in public education, a ruling that broke the back of American apartheid.

Marshall was appointed to the high court in 1967 by President Lyndon B. Johnson. He retired 18 months ago.

As Marshall's casket was carried across a sunlit marble plaza, current and retired justices waited as honorary pallbearers atop the imposing steps.

They accompanied the casket through the building's main entrance, walking under the words carved into marble 58 years ago: "Equal Justice Under Law."

Brennan, Marshall's closest friend on the high court, needed help from Justice David H. Souter to join the others when they stood in silence as the casket was placed on the black-draped bier that once supported the coffins of Abraham Lincoln and John F. Kennedy.

By the time the building was opened to the public, hundreds were waiting in the chilly morning air to pay their respects.

Man opens fire in cafeteria, killing three

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A man wearing a business suit shot at his former bosses in an office building cafeteria during lunchtime Wednesday, killing three and wounding two, police said. "This is what you all get for firing me!" he reportedly shouted.

The gunman, Paul Calden, 33, was found dead about two hours later on a Frisbee golf course in a Clearwater park 15 miles away. Police said he shot himself.

Calden had been let go eight months ago from Fireman's Fund Insurance Co.'s local office, said Tampa police spokesman Steve Cole. He didn't know how long Calden had worked there.

Calden had visited a friend in the building several hours before the shooting, and appeared calm then, said police Major Ken Taylor.

Calden returned shortly before 1 p.m., went to the cafeteria, bought a soft drink and set it down. Then he walked over to a table where five people were seated, pulled a gun from beneath his suit jacket and opened fire, Taylor said.

Cole said all of the people shot were managers, supervisors or executives of the Fireman's Fund office. A spokesman for the company wouldn't immediately confirm that.

"It was not a matter of him going into the cafeteria and just spraying in every direction," Cole said.

At least two other people sitting with the victims escaped injury but were splattered with blood, Taylor said. Police said there were 30 witnesses.

A picture window behind where the victims were seated was shattered.

Later, Sarah Reid, 33, said the man was an arm's length away from her when the shooting started in the small first-floor cafe.

Two men died at the scene; another died en route to the hospital, Cole said. Two women were hospitalized in serious condition.

The office building, just west of Tampa International Airport, houses 25 companies with 700 workers.

John Kozero, spokesman at Fireman's Fund headquarters in Novato, Calif., wouldn't comment on the shooting itself. He said the company's first concern is helping affected employees and their families, and psychological counseling would be provided.

Management of Diabetic Foot Problems

Free To The Public

Thursday January 28, 1993 7:30 P.M.

Women's and Children's Hospital Auditorium presented by:

Dr. Glenn R. Stockbridge
Podiatric Medicine & Surgery

Diabetics may be at risk for developing serious foot problems that may lead to amputation. Studies have shown that 5-15% of Diabetics will undergo an amputation. Up to 85% of these amputations can be prevented by a good footcare program.

Doctor Stockbridge will lecture on identification, treatment and prevention of common foot problems seen in the diabetic patient. A time for questions and answers will be provided at the conclusion of the lecture.

For your convenience, free babysitting is available. Space is limited, so call 334-8297 today for your reservation for this informative, no-cost health lecture.

Baseball hits Midland

■ The Super Bowl is Sunday, but Midland turned its thoughts to baseball Wednesday at the Midland Angels banquet. Just ask Spike Dykes.

By Bill Price
Staff writer

It was not lost on Spike Dykes that he was the only football personality among the celebrities attending the 1993 West Texas Sports Banquet and Memorabilia Auction, sponsored by the Midland Angels baseball club Wednesday night at Midland Country Club.

Among such diamond notables as Whitey Herzog, Bert Blyleven, Mike Timlin and Randy Velarde, Dykes may have felt a bit out of place.

"All I ever did (in baseball) was load the batting machine," said Texas Tech's head football coach upon arriving at the fundraiser for Special Olympics.

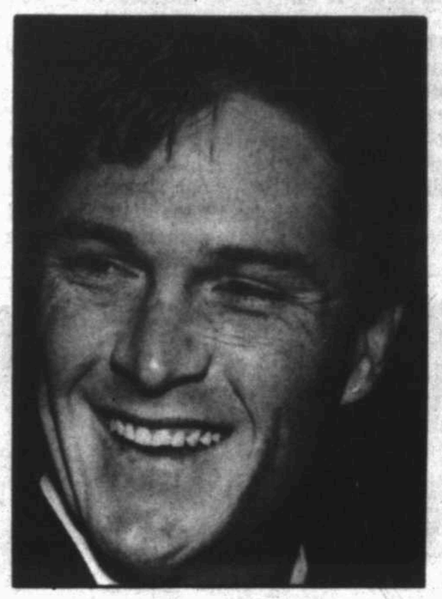

And though baseball teams usually practice with pitching machines, not batting machines, Dykes' heart was in the right place.

"It's great honor to be here for a great cause. I'm just thrilled to death to be here," said Dykes, who also is a former Midland Lee head football coach.

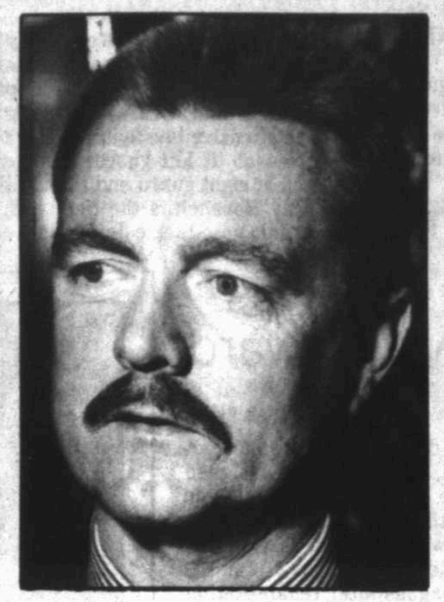

Dykes, widely known for his quick draw wit, probably soon found that he was indeed in his element when fellow quip-masters Herzog and master of ceremonies Bill Valentine stepped up to the microphone.

Valentine, who umpired in the American League in the 1960s and was also a college basketball official, is now the Banquet guests meet Fannin fans

Six-year-old Patrick Free sat in the middle of the jam-packed cafeteria at Fannin Elementary Wednesday afternoon. Patrick, a member of the Midland Independent School District's Students with Special Needs Program, knew something special was about to happen, but he didn't quite know what it would be, or when it would take place.

Then, a 6-foot-3, red-headed baseball player by the name of Bert Blyleven reached down and slowly rolled Patrick's wheelchair toward him. One set of eyes lit up, another set nearly filled with tears.

About 300 students in the Special Needs program mingled with their best friends Tuesday afternoon in an hour co-sponsored by the MISD, Special Olympics and the Midland Angels.

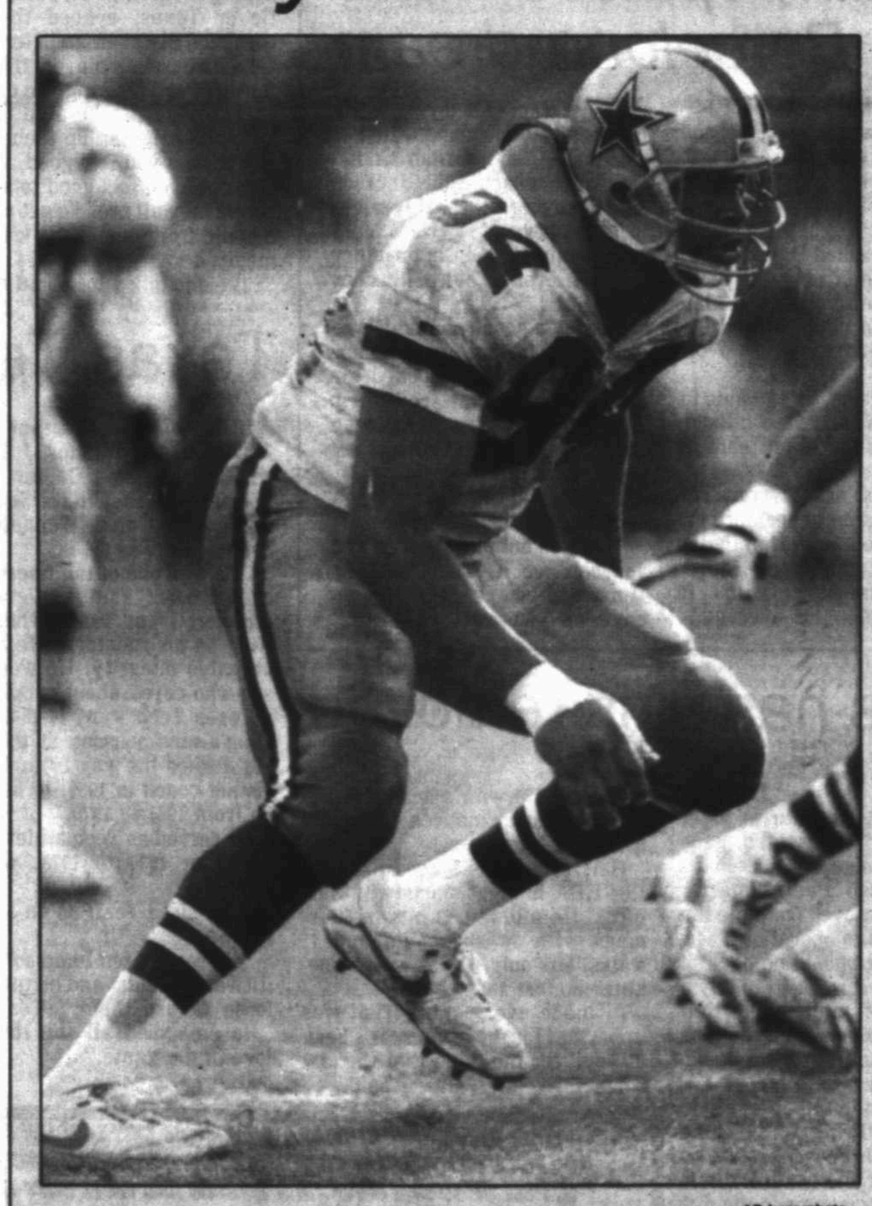

Blyleven, the former California Angel pitcher who signed with Minnesota earlier this month, pitched twice in Midland last year while on an injury rehabilitation assignment. The 41-year-old right-hander committed to the appearance while still a California Angel. But instead of declining to fulfill his commitment to the kids after changing teams, Blyleven returned to Midland and made yet another appearance with school-aged children. He did it on his own time, and he asked for no appearance fee. During Blyleven's rehab stay in Midland last summer, the veteran pitcher made numerous stops at local public schools.

When it comes to appearances like this one, or any that happen to involve less privileged children, Blyleven will find whatever time he can to help.

"Tears come to my eyes," Blyleven said, "thinking of the

Haley sacks NFL media

Dallas defensive end Charles Haley is one of the stars of the Cowboys' defensive line that faces the no-huddle Bills Sunday in the Super Bowl.

■ The Super Bowl hasn't changed Dallas' Charles Haley. He still doesn't like interviews.

By Dwain Price
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — By National Football League mandate, Charles Haley appeared at Super Bowl Photo Day here Tuesday. That's about as far as the NFL — or anyone — can push Haley without him pushing back.

Charles, after all, will still be Charles. His abject dislike for media attention is never far from the surface.

Haley, surrounded by reporters at Dodger Stadium, told a few jokes, declined to discuss things he didn't want to discuss and never answered a question more than once.

Cowboys players were scheduled to be available for an hour. Haley limited his audience to 15 minutes. That's an eternity for the enigmatic defensive end.

Haley joked that talking to the media yesterday was "the highlight of my whole career." Asked why he doesn't like the media attention that comes with the Super Bowl, he abruptly said, "Next question."

Haley, acquired from San Francisco early this season, helped the 49ers win Super Bowls XXIII and XXIV.

"Overall, this is going to be probably the one that I cherish the most," Haley said. "I'm just happy that when I got traded, I got traded to a quality team and they gave me an opportunity to go in and be able to help guys, which I really enjoy doing."

Haley said the difference between

Courier has flawless win

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Jim Courier played the most flawless match of his career, then recited a list of imaginary ailments as he goofed on a guy who incredulously wondered if he hurt like other Australian Open semifinalists.

"Back hurts pretty bad. Ankles are swollen. Got an ear infection and my wrist is ... y'know."

He paused for effect, holding his wrist, and smiled, a broad, satisfied grin as if he already could see his name on his second winner's trophy here. Then he added, "I feel great."

And the No. 1 seed played exactly that way Wednesday night, carving up No. 7 Petr Korda 6-1, 6-0, 6-4 so convincingly that the Czech seemed in shock. No one in the past two years, Korda said, had played so perfectly against

Schramm's heart still beats blue-and-silver

By Steve Campbell
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Twenty-nine years. He spent 29 long — but somehow not quite long enough — years making the world a better place for Dallas Cowboys to be.

He saw them through Eddie LeBaron and 0-11-1; through Dandy Don and so-close-yet-so-far; through Ice Bowls and Super Bowls; through the Cotton Bowl and The Hole in the Roof; through Roger the Dodger and The Shotgun; through the Man in the Hat and the Flex; through Hollywood and Hail Mary; through computers and "Cheerleaders"; through The Catch and the ensuing Dallas decline. He saw them through it all, and an exile of nearly four years can't change it.

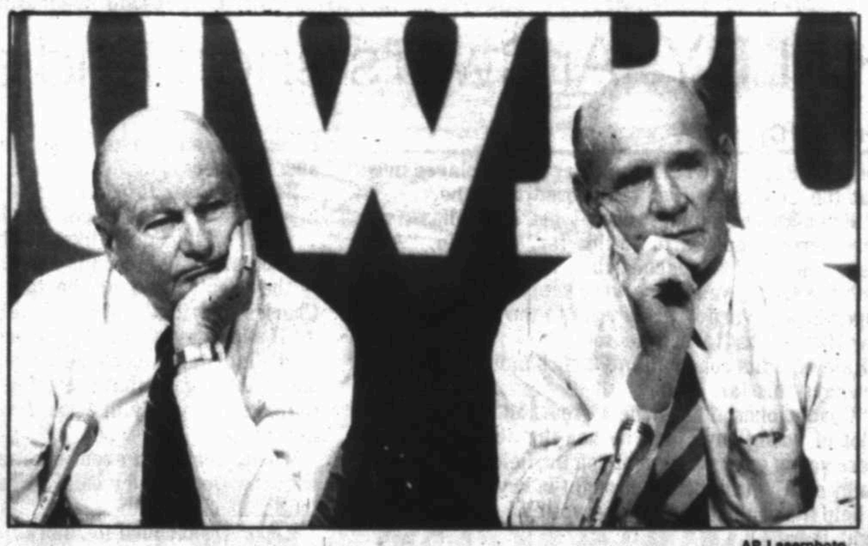

Any of it.

The Cowboys are America's Team — again.

Tex Schramm's team — still.

"When you look out there," Schramm says, "it's kind of like you're in a dream, and you're looking down on your home, and somebody else is living in your home. Living with your wife and children. You look at the Cowboys, and all of your 29 years of memories — it's

Chaps in Borger

The Midland College Chaparrals look to extend their Western Junior College Athletic Conference winning streak to two games tonight when they travel to Borger for a meeting with the Frank Phillips Plainsmen.

The Chaps (15-6 overall, 2-4 in conference) defeated New Mexico Military, 79-67 Monday to shake a four-game losing streak.

The first time MC met the Plainsmen (3-15, 1-5), the Chaps scored a resounding 133-95 win. The 133 points MC recorded set an all-time record for most points in a game.

No longer is travelling to Borger a "gimme" game in the league. Not after the Plainsmen beat South Plains by 10 in overtime last week. In that game, South Plains' Artie Griffin made four three-pointers in overtime, but FPC still won the game.

Should the Chaps win tonight at FPC, and South Plains (15-7, 3-3) lose at Howard (20-2, 5-1), MC would crawl into a tie for fourth place in conference with the Texans. Both would own 3-4 records.

Tonight's game can be heard on KCRS (550 AM). Tip-off is set for 7:30 p.m.

Offensive line turns from joke to NFL curse

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four years ago the Dallas Cowboys offensive line was a joke.

"What is as big as the wall of China and just as effective at keeping somebody out?"

Answer: The Cowboys offensive line.

Mirth-making about the Cowboys offensive line is as dead as the predictions that Jimmy Johnson wouldn't cut it as a pro football coach.

The 300-pounders who protect Troy Aikman and blast holes for Emmitt Smith have the NFL stamp of approval: Grade A, No. 1.

They've got two Pro Bowlers — center Mark Stepnoski and guard Nate Newton — and led the NFL in fewest yards lost to sacks.

"For the first two years we were shuffling guys in and out of the offensive line like wide receivers," Newton said. "It was embarrassing what people were saying about us. It's a good feeling to turn it around. To see us with a lot of respect."

Dallas finished second in the NFL in allowing only 23 total sacks. The line also paved the way for Smith to win back-to-back rushing titles.

"No unit on this team has worked harder than the offensive line," Smith said. "They just keep working and eventually open lanes for me.

"We were stopped pretty good in the San Francisco game, but in the second half my boys just wore the 49ers down."

Smith rewarded his offensive line with Rolex watches after last year's season.

"They'll get something nice again but that watch stuff got a little expensive," Smith said. "It will be something good, though. "

Smith and Aikman have already bought airline tickets for the offensive line and their families to take vacations. Aikman has also chipped in $500 personal computers and a case of French champagne.

The offensive line features Mark Tuinei at left tackle, Newton at left guard, Stepnoski at center, John Gesek at right guard and Erik Williams at right tackle. Jay Novacek is the tight end.

Buffalo nose tackle Jeff Wright said he saw films of Stepnoski and admitted, "It's got me a little bit nervous."

"I can't say enough about his ability. It should be a great battle out there. We have to stop the Dallas running game and Emmitt Smith and it all starts with their offensive line." Stepnoski said moving Wright is like moving a stump.

"He just takes root right there in the middle of the line and he's tough to move out," Stepnoski said. "It should be a fun day."

Buffalo safety Mark Kelso said, "It's amazing how fast those big guys can run. I think they'll try to run right at us behind those big guys."

End Bruce Smith said the Cowboys offensive line will likely double team him.

"Let's just hope they leave me single blocked, " Smith said. "I'll just leave it at that."

Linebacker Darryl Talley said the Dallas offensive line "presents a tremendous challenge. All they have to do is get a partial block and Emmitt can turn the corner and go. Emmitt takes advantage of any daylight."

Williams said Buffalo has a defensive line just as good as San Francisco's.

"We're going to be facing a quick, powerful defensive line," he said. "These guys have all the right tools. They have a history of stopping the run pretty good. It will be difficult to get Emmitt into his running lanes."

Williams said Smith's ability makes the offensive line go all-out.

"Emmitt is our dancing bear," Williams said. "He's something special. We know that all he needs is just a little ounce of daylight. "

Williams said the endurance of the Cowboys offensive line has kept the team going late in the fourth quarter.

"I think all the work we did in training camp in the Austin heat may have helped," Williams said. "We keep getting stronger the longer the games go on. We've controlled the line of scrimmage in the second half of our games this year."

BANQUET: Correia receives '92 Midland Angel MVP award

(From 1C)

executive vice president and general manager of the Arkansas Travelers.

He opened the ceremonies by saying "despite what you think of baseball umpires and basketball officials, we do have mothers and fathers." When asked for proof, however, he was unable to produce any.

Then there was Herzog, the senior vice president of player personnel with the California Angels. The former manager of the Texas Rangers, Kansas City Royals and St. Louis Cardinals reeled off a couple of anecdotes about playing for legendary Casey Stengal before turning serious about the state of baseball today.

Some Herzog observations:

■ "I think we're having some major labor problems in baseball and we may not have baseball in 1994 (because of a lock-out or a strike)."

■ "Baseball players are not over-paid. In 1929 the players made 35 percent of the gross income to the owners. In 1987 the players made 32 percent of the gross income. That means everybody's making money. Oprah Winfrey makes $42 million and Bill Cosby makes something like $94 million a year, and neither one of them can hit a curveball."

Speaking of curveballs, breaking ball wizard Blyleven, mustachioed but without his trademark beard, severed his stint with the California organization earlier this month by signing with the Minnesota Twins.

In his third go-round with the Twins, the 41-year-old right-handed pitcher (who will turn 42 on opening day) needs just 13 victories to reach to 300 plateau. He is third on the career strikeout list behind Nolan Ryan and Steve Carlton with 3,701.

"I was with the Angel organization for four years, but I'm excited about going back to Minnesota. In '87 I had the opportunity to be on a World Series team, but I think the biggest reason I left the Angels was that I was not offered the opportunity to go to spring training and make the club out of spring training," Blyleven said.

"They did not offer me salary arbitration, and in turn if I signed with the Angels I couldn't join them until May 1. That's the same thing I went through last year," said Blyleven, who was 8-12 in the major leagues after rehabilitating a surgically repaired shoulder with the Midland Angels last spring.

"I've worked too hard and I owe it to myself to go to spring training and make a club."

For former Midland High Bulldog Mike Timlin, whose Toronto Blue Jays faced fellow MHS alum Mike Stanton and the Atlanta Braves in the 1992 World Series, the homecoming was another stop on a whirlwind tour.

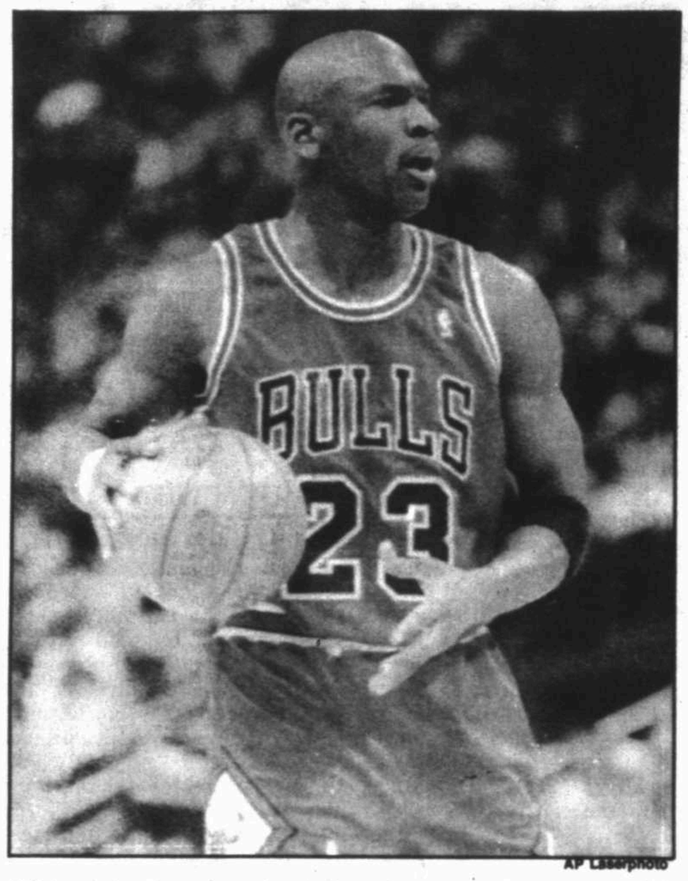

"I like these events because they're for a good cause, it goes to kids who need the money and they can always use it. My wife (Dawn) and I have been traveling around and hadn't really just sat at home for two weeks, but it's fun. Now I'd kind of just like to sit home for a while," said Timlin, the relief pitcher who recorded the last out in Game 7 against the Braves.

Velarde, a Midland Lee graduate who hit over .300 for much of the '92 season with the New York Yankees last year, played six positions (seven if you count catching in spring training) last year. He was also more than happy to be at the banquet. But when asked about his future as a Yankee, he was mystified.

New York acquired third baseman Wade Boggs in the off-season and now has packed its already crowed infield, where Velarde has played third, shortstop and second.

"The say that I am in their plans in a big way, but I just don't know how. We'll just have to see," said Velarde, who is starting his fifth season in the big leagues.

Award winners Wednesday were Midland Angels shortstop Rod Correia, named 1992 team MVP, Midland assistant director of community services Chuck Swallow, who received the Midland Sports Community Achievement Award, and 1992 Midland Angels Fan of the Year Al Kunkel.

Michael Jordan played only 27 minutes against the woeful Dallas Mavericks Tuesday night.

Jordan replaces Mavs with Barcelona dream

DALLAS (AP) — Michael Jordan sat out much of the second half against the miserable Dallas Mavericks and found his thoughts racing back to Barcelona.

Chicago crushed Dallas 123-88 Tuesday night in a blowout befitting the Dream Team as Jordan took a virtual night off and the Mavericks had their usual off night.

The Mavericks, threatening to displace the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers as the worst team in NBA history, fell to 3-34.

Dallas' first sellout crowd of the season came to see Jordan, but he played just 27 minutes and sat out the entire fourth quarter, finishing with 15 points, 17 below his average.

"I just wanted to do my work, come and sit down and watch us win the game," Jordan said.

Chicago coach Phil Jackson said playing the Mavericks brings a bevy of worries: fears beforehand of an upset or injury and concerns of false illusions afterwards.

"It was a good run and it was important for us," said Jackson, whose team opened an eight-game, 16-day road trip with a loss to San Antonio on Saturday. "We needed a win, especially on the road."

Jordan said the Bulls weren't deceived by the victory.

"They're not playing well and you can see it. They're struggling, and you can basically do anything you want on them."

FANS: Failed high five still produces smiles

joy that you get by making them smile. And the tears of sadness you get thinking of what their world is and what they are given in life."

Also at the program were Midland Lee graduate Randy Velarde, now a New York Yankee; former Midland Angel infielder Mark Howie; former Angel manager and current roving instructor Eddie Rodriguez; Midland pitching coach Kernan Ronan, and California Angel senior vice president-/director of player personnel Whitey Herzog.

Midland Angel owner Miles Prentice was also on hand. He was the one who could be found helping push some of the wheelchair-bound kids back to their buses after the program was over.

"It's a feeling almost like walking out of church," Herzog, a former Special Olympics chairman in St. Louis, said of spending time with the kids. "You feel pretty good when you walk out of church, and you feel pretty good anytime you can help these handicapped kids."

Howie, who spent the 1992 season in the Cincinnati Reds' farm system but who is now a free agent hoping to catch on with either Seattle or Texas, echoed the sentiments of Blyleven and Herzog.

"As a baseball player, this is the most rewarding thing you can do," Howie said. "To be able to come here and brighten up their day, it just makes you feel good all over. It makes you feel good to see how happy they all are. To get a hug or a smile from one of the kids, that means a lot.

"People talk a lot about athletes giving something back to the community. This is not giving something back. This is something you do because it feels good, and you could do it all year round."

Rodriguez, the Midland manager during the 1990 season, said he feels fortunate to be able to "brighten some lives."

"We worry a lot about hitting a baseball, and throwing a baseball," Rodriguez said, "but these kids prove there's a lot more to life than that.

"One little girl came up behind me, and I heard her mom tell her, 'Now, no kissing.' And another little boy came up and asked me what I was doing. Well, he knew what I was doing, he just wanted to say something to me.

"One of my goals if I ever make it to the big leagues is to share my time with kids like this."

Velarde said it is appearances like this one that make all the mandatory card signings bearable.

"Usually when you go to those card shows," Velarde said, "you'll sign something for someone and then they'll be gone. Here, these kids just want to rub elbows with you. They're more grateful than someone who's just there to get an autograph."

"You want a really high five?" Blyleven asked a boy with a big grin who looked to be about eight years old. "Let's do a really high five." The pitcher then stood up and extended his long arms into the air, his hands some eight or nine feet off the ground. Try as he might, the boy couldn't quite reach Blyleven to give him the high five. But that didn't stop him from smiling.

Texas Tech's King dies

LUBBOCK — Former Texas Tech athletic director J T King, who coached Red Raider football during its infancy in the Southwest Conference, died Wednesday of cancer. He was 80.

"He was one of the finest coaches in Texas," said Baylor athletic director Grant Teaff, who names King as his mentor. "He had impeccable integrity. He was a person who cared about people."

Texas Tech went 44-45-3 during King's nine seasons at the helm. He worked his way from Tech assistant coach in 1959, to head coach from 1961 to 1970.

He served as Tech athletic director from 1970 to 1978, when he retired.

King hired Teaff as an assistant in 1966.

"He recognized I had some qualities and talents, and he turned me loose to use them," Teaff said. "He embodied all the things we love in the game."

King, who was born in Wilmot, Ark., graduated from Reagan High School in Houston. He played guard at Texas, where he lettered and graduated in 1938.

King began his collegiate coaching career in 1946 at Tulane. He was assistant coach at Texas A&M in 1949 and 1950 under Harry Stiteler and Paul "Bear" Bryant, moving to the same job at Texas from 1950 to 1956 under Blair Cherry and Ed Price.

At Tech, he coached five All-America players and led the Red Raiders to the Sun Bowl in 1964 and the Gator Bowl in 1965.

King supervised improvements to the Tech athletic plant during the 1970s, including a new athletic dining hall, new track facilities and a new Astroturf surface in Jones Stadium.

Funeral arrangements are pending with Briggs-Gamel-Wilcox Funeral Home of Lampasas.

Two Gandys for San Angelo

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Kyle Gandy, the son of San Angelo Central High School football coach Dan Gandy, was named Wednesday night as the new head coach and campus athletic director at the city's other high school — Lake View.

The younger Gandy, 31, just completed his first season as head coach at Class 5A Angleton on the Texas Coast. He led the Wildcats to a 7-4 playoff season after they had finished 3-6-1 in 1991.

At Lake View, he succeeds Bill Hicks, who resigned midway through his third season. Hicks had won three of 25 games at the time he announced his resignation. Lake View is 12-48 over the last six seasons.

Dan Gandy was the head coach from 1973-82 at Angleton, and his son was the starting quarterback there in 1978 and 1979.

Kyle Gandy served as his dad's offensive coordinator at Central from 1989-91, overseeing the development of quarterback Shea Morenz, now a freshman at the University of Texas. Before that, he was an assistant coach at Class 4A Highland Park.

Harris has pins removed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The bandage on pitcher Greg Harris' right middle finger represented good news, for a change.

The San Diego Padres starter had two pins removed from the finger in a 30-minute operation Tuesday and said he should be back to full strength in a week to 10 days.

Injuries have interrupted Harris' last two seasons, and the pins were a holdover from his unluckiest impairment.

He fractured the finger trying to bunt last June 21, the day he came back from a three-week stay on the disabled list due to a back injury. He didn't pitch again in the majors for two months and finished with only 118 innings, a 4-8 record and a 4.12 ERA.

The pins are gone, and Harris said Wednesday he built up his arm strength with a series of outstanding performances in winter ball in Puerto Rico.

Harris had a 4-1 record and a 1.64 ERA in eight starts with Santurce. He allowed 53 hits in 66 innings with 34 strikeouts and 11 walks. His only defeat was a one-hitter he lost 1-0.

"I made every start. That was important for me because it's been difficult for me to do that the last couple of years," Harris said.

Texas reinstates Rencher

AUSTIN (AP) — Guard Terrence Rencher has been reinstated to the University of Texas basketball team.

"I am pleased with Terrence's work ethic over the past 10 days, and I believe he understands what is expected of him," UT coach Tom Penders said Wednesday.

HALEY: Answers short and sweet

(From 1C)

Sunday's Super Bowl and the other two he played in is that the Cowboys weren't supposed to be here.

"From the beginning, when I got (to Dallas), we were never supposed to go this far," he said. "And then, when you've reached this, it's really exciting. With the 49ers, we always were supposed to go to the Super Bowl. When we didn't get to the Super Bowl it was like we had a bad season."

Haley credits coach Jimmy Johnson for getting the Cowboys this far.

"Coach Johnson has done a great job of bringing in a lot of young guys, and he has the ability to make these young guys perform out on the field on Sunday," Haley said. "And then he brought in key veteran guys to help the youths. That's what you call a mastermind right there.

"Then, he's a disciplinarian. He has his rules and that's it. It's no guessing game on where you stand, because he's going to make sure everybody knows, and I respect that."

Haley refuses to compromise to accommodate the media, even at the Super Bowl.

"A lot of guys don't like me, because if I voice my opinion and my opinion is not what they want to hear — they don't like me," he said. "But I've got to be Charles and that's what it's all about.

"If a few guys don't like me because of the way I am ... it's inevitable, because we're all different. I'm not one of those guys that are going to sit around and try to make everybody like me. I don't even care if they like me."

When questioned about his memories from playing with the 49ers, Haley said, "Next question. OK men, that's enough."

Reporters pleaded for more time, but Haley got up and left, saying, as he walked away, "Thank y'all. We did good today. God, don't y'all love America?"

Hoosiers hold off Minnesota

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Damon Bailey scored 17 points, including a pivotal three-point play, as No. 2 Indiana extended its home-winning streak to 26 games with a 61-57 win over Minnesota on Wednesday night.

Top 25

Trailing 58-57, the Gophers had a chance to take the last shot. But Arriel McDonald was called for a five-second violation with 13 seconds to play.

Bailey hit one free throw with eight seconds left, and after Minnesota's Voshon Lenard lost control of the ball with two seconds remaining, Calbert Cheaney added two free throws for Indiana (18-2, 7-0 Big Ten).

Minnesota (11-5, 3-4) led the entire game until Bailey's three-point play with 4:14 remaining put the Hoosiers ahead 56-55.

No. 3 North Carolina 82, No. 19 Florida St. 77

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Donald Williams scored 17 of his 19 points in the second half as No. 3 North Carolina rallied from 20 points down to beat No. 19 Florida State and remain atop the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Tar Heels (17-1, 6-0) trailed 71-51 with 9½ minutes left after playing more than 15 minutes in the first half without 7-foot center Eric Montross, who picked up three quick fouls.

But North Carolina, winners of nine straight, finally found its 3-point shooting touch after missing its first 14 from long range, going on a 23-4 run to pull within 75-74 on a pair of Derrick Phelps free throws with 3:15 left.

No. 6 Cincinnati 78, Xavier 67

CINCINNATI — Nick Van Exel, chastened by his second benching this month, scored 15 points and polished off a decisive first-half run that helped No. 6 Cincinnati beat Xavier.

Van Exel hit a pair of 3-pointers, including a 30-footer at the first-half buzzer, to complete a 16-2 run that put Cincinnati (14-1) in line for its 11th straight win.

It was a familiar script for Xavier (12-3), which has lost its last three against its crosstown rival. The Musketeers lack UC's bench strength, and simply wear down as the game wears on.

No. 21 Georgetown 73, No. 9 Seton Hall 62

LANDOVER, Md. — The outside shooting of reserves Kevin Millen and Eric Micoud sparked a first-half surge that carried No. 21 Georgetown over No. 9 Seton Hall.

The Hoyas (12-3, 5-2 Big East) took command with a 23-5 run that gave them a 38-22 lead with 1:55 left in the first half.

Georgetown, which hadn't made more than five 3-pointers in any previous game, hit 6 of 10 from long range in the first half.

No. 12 Vanderbilt 82, Tennessee 65

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Ronnie McMahan scored 19 points as No. 12 Vanderbilt beat Tennessee to snap a 13-game road losing streak in the Southeastern Conference.

Vanderbilt (15-3, 5-1) got 18 points from reserve Frank Seckar, including four 3-pointers. Chris Lawson added 14 points for the Commodores, while Billy McCaffrey had 11 and Kevin Anglin 10.

Corey Allen led Tennessee (9-8, 1-5) with 18 points. But the Vols shot poorly, especially in the first half when they made only nine of 33 from the field.

Syracuse 95, No. 13 Pittsburgh 79

PITTSBURGH — Adrian Autry scored 31 points and Lawrence Moten had 25 as Syracuse buried No. 13 Pittsburgh with an 18-2 run late in the game, ending the Panthers' four-game winning streak.

Syracuse, which was off to its worst start in the Big East at 2-5, turned a 64-63 deficit into an 81-66 lead during a 5-minute run highlighted by the Orange's remarkable outside shooting.

Syracuse, only 36 of 118 (30.5 percent) from 3-point range in its first seven conference games, made 9 of 17, including Autry's 6 of 7. Autry had made only four of 17 3-pointers in the conference.

Wake Forest 75, No. 15 Virginia 73

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Randolph Childress scored 19 points and Wake Forest held off a Virginia rally, handing the 15th-ranked Cavaliers' their third loss in four games.

Wake Forest (12-3, 4-2 Atlantic Coast Conference) won its fourth consecutive league game for the first time since 1984.

Wake Forest made just one field goal in the final eight minutes, but clutch free-throw shooting was enough to help the Demon Deacons win at Virginia (12-3, 4-3) for only the second time since 1977.

Miss. St. 80, No. 16 Arkansas 76

STARKVILLE, Miss. — Mississippi State freshman Vandale Thomas scored all seven of his points in overtime as the Bulldogs beat No. 16 Arkansas.

Arkansas (12-4, 3-3 Southeastern Conference) led by as many as 14 points early, but ended up losing its third straight game. It is the longest losing streak for the Razorbacks since coach Nolan Richardson's first season in 1985-86.

Mississippi State (11-7, 3-4) has followed a four-game SEC losing streak with three straight wins.

No. 18 Ga. Tech 85, N.C. St. 74

ATLANTA — James Forrest scored 24 points and No. 18 Georgia Tech's starters shot 79 percent from the field in a victory over North Carolina State.

Forrest made 10 of 11 shots and freshman Martice Moore hit 9 of 10 for 18 points. The Yellow Jackets' starters made 30 of 38 attempts from the field.

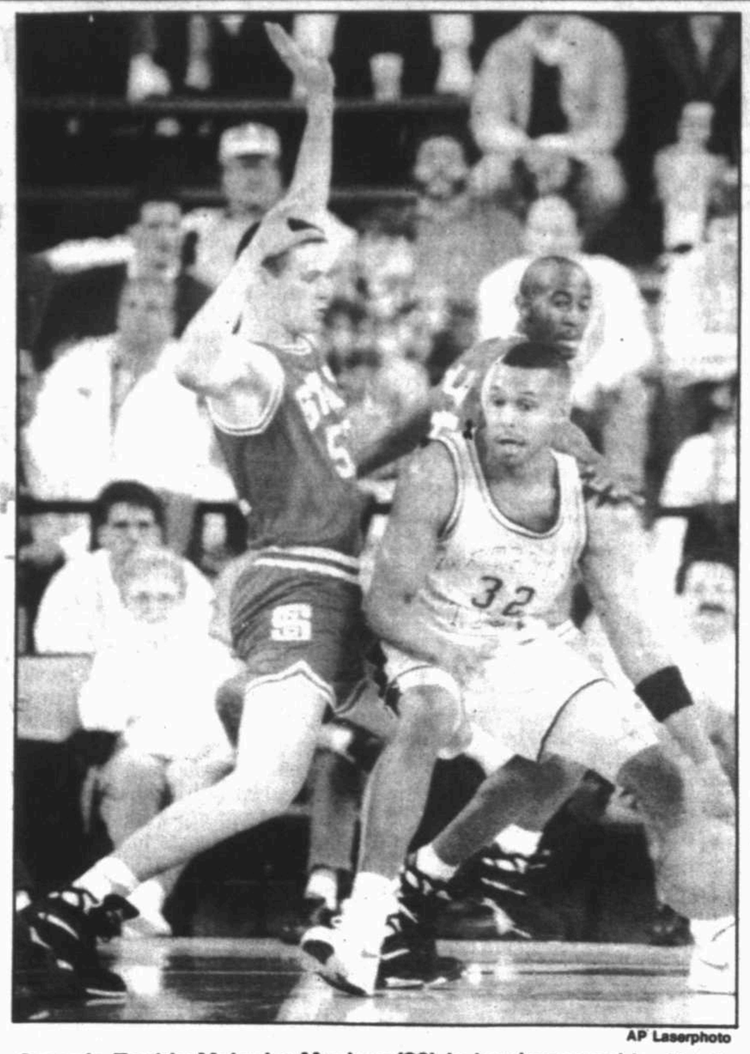

Tech (11-4, 4-2 Atlantic Coast Conference) led by 36 points before State (4-10, 0-6) went on a 31-6 spurt against Tech's reserves to make the final margin respectable.

No. 20 Okla. 146, Florida A&M 65

NORMAN, Okla. — Jeff Webster scored 32 points and Angelo Hamilton had 26 as No. 20 Oklahoma ended a two-game losing streak.

The Sooners (13-5) returned home for their final non-Big Eight game of the year and got little more than a scrimmage from the Rattlers. Florida A&M (3-13) committed 43 turnovers and shot just 37 percent.

The Sooners, coming off their lowest point total of the year in an 81-74 loss at Iowa State, had their biggest night of the season. The 146 points were the most since scoring 172 against Loyola Marymount in the 1990-91 season.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Rookie Alonzo Mourning scored all of his 23 points in the second half Wednesday night, keeping the Charlotte Hornets in control of a game they won 117-107 over the Sacramento Kings.

The Hornets also got 21 points from Johnny Newman, 19 from Dell Curry and 17 points and 15 rebounds from Larry Johnson to even their home record at 9-9 and their overall mark to 19-19. Charlotte won for just the third time in seven home games.

The Kings, losers of seven of nine games, were led by Lionel Simmons with 26 points, Mitch Richmond with 23 and Anthony Bonner with 18 points and 10 rebounds. Sacramento was playing without center Duane Causwell because of a sprained left foot.

Spurs 119, SuperSonics 99

SEATTLE — San Antonio made a shambles of Seattle's homecourt advantage while winning their 10th consecutive game for the first time in franchise history.

The Spurs got a season-high 24 points from J.R. Reid and improved their record under new coach John Lucas to 15-2.

The Sonics suffered their first loss of the season in 16 games at the Seattle Coliseum. They're 18-2 at home this season.

San Antonio also got 22 points from Dale Ellis and 17 points, seven blocked shots and 15 rebounds from David Robinson. Avery Johnson, who took over as the starting point guard at the beginning of the 10-game winning streak, had nine assists for the Spurs.

Shawn Kemp paced the Sonics with 24 points and 16 rebounds. Teammate Eddie Johnson scored 20 points.

Seattle, whose 27-12 record is second-best in the NBA, lost its second straight game for just the second time this season.

Pistons 103, Celtics 94

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Terry Mills scored 21 of his 25 points in the second half when Detroit ended a six-game losing streak with a victory over Boston.

The win was the first in 11 games for the Pistons this season without the NBA's leading rebounder, Dennis Rodman, who is out with a leg injury.

The Celtics led 47-44 at halftime, but Detroit started the third quarter with a 24-9 run that included 11 points from Mills, who also finished with 14 rebounds.

Suns 117, Timberwolves 116

MINNEAPOLIS — Danny Ainge, who missed a 3-pointer with 8.6 seconds to play, scored on a rebound with 0.7 seconds left in overtime, lifting Phoenix to its 14th consecutive victory over Minnesota.

Chuck Person missed a 20-footer at the buzzer as the Timberwolves blew a 21-point lead to lose for the 22nd time in 25 games since the start of December.

Charles Barkley had 35 points for the Suns, and his season-high 24th rebound followed Ainge's missed 3-pointer, giving Phoenix another chance. After Kevin Johnson missed a 15-footer, Ainge got the rebound in the lane and hit a 5-footer, just his fourth basket in 14 attempts for the game.

Pacers 127, 76ers 125

PHILADELPHIA — Detlef Schrempf scored 31 points and his two free throws broke a tie with 2.6 seconds remaining in overtime, giving Indiana a victory over Philadelphia.

With the score tied 125-125, the Sixers' Tim Perry blocked a shot by Pooh Richardson under the basket and Schrempf was fouled by Clarence Weatherspoon in a scuffle for the ball.

After the two free throws, Perry's desperate shot at the buzzer never had a chance.

A&M scares Mustangs before falling in OT

Associated Press

■ SWC Roundup

DALLAS — After missing two free throws, including one that would have won the game in regulation, guard Mike Wilson made both of his charity shots with 32 seconds left in overtime, lifting Southern Methodist past Texas A&M 68-65 Wednesday night.

Wilson and forward Tim Mason each scored 22 points for SMU (11-5 overall and 4-1 in the Southwest Conference). Point guard David Edwards scored 18 points to lead Texas A&M (6-10, 1-3).

After a 62-62 tie at the end of regulation, Mike Smith's two free throws at 1:01 pulled the Aggies into a 65-65 tie.

The Aggies, down by as many as 14 points in the early goings, climbed back into contention in the second half behind the play of Edwards and forwards Damon Johnson and Murry, who combined for 21 points and 17 rebounds.

The Mustangs hit six 3-pointers in the first half, including three straight by Mason in a 59-second span. SMU led at the half, 35-25.

Rice 72, Mississippi 67

HOUSTON — Brent Scott scored 11 of his 15 points in the final 11 minutes and Rice made seven free throws in the final minute as the Owls defeated Mississippi.

Mississippi cut a 13-point deficit to 63-61 with 1:58 remaining, but the Owls' accuracy at the free throw line spoiled the Rebels' comeback.

Marvin Moore led the Owls (10-5) with 21 points. Joe Harvell led Mississippi's Rebels (5-9) with 25 points. The victory was the 10th straight for the Owls on their home court and their seventh in their last eight games.

DePaul 72, Baylor 70

A pair of free throws by Baylor's Willie Sublett with 55 seconds left tied the game at 70.

DePaul's Blue Demons (10-8) then let the clock run down and Tom Kleinschmidt found Davis at the right of the key for the winning basket.

The Bears (11-4), who never led in the game, called time with 12 seconds to go, but Sublett's 3-point shot from the top of the key in the final seconds fell short.

Tulsa 88, Texas Christian 66

TULSA, Okla. — Tulsa had 10 steals and Gary Collier scored 20 points as the Golden Hurricane won its sixth straight game with a win over Texas Christian.

Tulsa (10-8) scored three points off two steals and got a jumper and a 3-pointer off two other turnovers during a 13-6 run earlier in the second half to build an 18-point lead.

The Horned Frogs (3-12) got 22 points from Jentry Moore.

SCHRAMM: Fishing now the game, but Cowboys are near his heart

(From 1C)

a strange feeling. You see other people in the places you've been a good part of your life."

The Cowboys are playing the Buffalo Bills in Super Bowl XXVII next Sunday in Pasadena, Calif. It will be a National Football League-record sixth Super Bowl appearance for the Cowboys — but their first in 15 years. The Cowboys appeared in five Super Bowls during a nine-year span in the 1970s, when Tom Landry was coaching and Schramm was conducting the off-the-field business.

Tex and Tom. They were the ying and yang of a franchise that strung together 20 consecutive winning seasons. Twice they won Super Bowls. Thrice they lost — by a combined 11 points.

"It's a great experience — the whole thing," Schramm says. "That's one of the things I wish I were a part of. I know how much fun it is to be a competing team getting ready to go there. Going there, enjoying the whole week there. I know what the Cowboys are going to be going through. I'm going to miss being a part of it."

Schramm will be a peripheral part of it, attending the game as the guest of Atlanta Falcons owner Rankin Smith. This week, the Cowboys' spotlight shines on owner Jerry Jones and coach Jimmy Johnson, the tag team that brought down the Schramm-Landry reign. Three seasons removed from 1-15, Jones and Johnson have risen to the top two — at worst.

The new-age Cowboys are seven-point favorites to establish themselves as the very best next Sunday. It's another generation of Cowboys now, with stars named Smith and Aikman and Irvin, but in them Schramm sees touches of the old Cowboys, too.

"They remind me of the way the Cowboys were when they were an expansion team," says Schramm, who stepped down as team president in the spring of 1989. "When you go down to 1-15, you are not far from being an expansion team. They've got the kind of team the Cowboys had in the mid-60s when we had a lot of young players. We had an exciting quarterback in Don Meredith. We had receivers like Bob Hayes. We were an exciting, interesting football team. I think it started the big following we had nationally."

The thing is, the Cowboys of the mid-60s couldn't quite get to the Super Bowl. They got within one game of the Super Bowl twice. And ran into the Green Bay Packers twice. And lost twice. The Cowboys had to wait until the 1970 season to get to the Super Bowl, only to lose to the Baltimore Colts, 16-13, when they got there.

A 24-3 victory against Miami in Super Bowl VI evened the Cowboys' record in the big one, but not the score. At least not in Schramm's mind, which tends to remember the ones that got away. The 21-17 defeat against Pittsburgh in Super Bowl X, when Lynn Swann caught four passes for 161 of the most acrobatic yards the football world has ever seen. The 35-31 defeat in Super Bowl XIII, when the Steelers earned the mantle of Team of the '70s by fighting off a late Cowboys comeback.

"The losses hurt a great deal more than the wins excite you," Schramm says. "You remember the losses. It has much more of an effect on you.

"I can remember the Baltimore game, and that game shouldn't have even been a contest. We had a fumble and recovered it, and the official couldn't see the play and we had the ball on the goal line. It was unbelievable. And I never forgave that official the rest of his career.

"I remember Lynn Swann making unbelievable catches. I remember Jackie Smith dropping the ball (in Super Bowl XIII). You remember a lot of those things."

In Super Bowl V, the Cowboys forced six turnovers, took a 13-6 lead into the final quarter and came away wondering how they found a way to lose. This is how: The Colts got a 75-yard touchdown play out of a tipped pass.

"As charming as 'Moonstruck' and 'Fried Green Tomatoes' –together." - Steve Kmetko, CBS THIS MORNING

Prices steady

NEW YORK — Oil prices finished slightly higher Wednesday after spending much of the session in negative territory in reaction to weekly inventory figures.

Near-month delivery of West Texas Intermediate settled at $19.66 per barrel, up 2 cents, in light trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Crude, unleaded gasoline and home heating oil started the day lower as traders responded to American Petroleum Institute statistics released after the market closed Tuesday.

The weekly figures showed gasoline stocks well above last year's supply and supplies of heating oil in the Northeast, the country's main consumer of the fuel, also higher than normal.

The figures for crude supplies were within expectations, but oil was hurt by the strong figures for refined products. Crude was down as much as 17 cents per barrel during the day, before rising.

Since the oil market rose sharply Monday on news that Saudi Arabia and Iran might be willing to cut production to push prices higher, the oil has been fairly steady. Traders are apparently waiting for further news before the meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in mid-February.

The API figures also showed refineries had increased their production to 85.8 percent of capacity, up one percentage point. That means more supplies of refined products would go to market.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar rose in listless trading Wednesday against all currencies but the Canadian dollar.

In New York, the dollar settled at 124.10 yen, up from 123.55 yen on Tuesday.

The British pound continued to get hammered following Tuesday's surprise one-point cut in interest rates by the Bank of England.

In New York it cost $1.5105 to buy one pound, less expensive than Tuesday's $1.5380.

Stocks slip

NEW YORK — The stock market pulled back a bit Wednesday as investors warily appraised the outlook for the Federal Reserve's credit policy in a new presidential administration.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off about 20 points at its afternoon low, closed with a 7.56-point loss at 3,291.39.

Declining issues outnumbered those advancing by more than 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Schlumberger fell 2⅛ to 57⅜. The company reported fourth-quarter earnings of 64 cents a share, down from $1.28 a share in the corresponding period of 1991.

The Nasdaq composite index dropped 9.26 to 697.90. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.42 at 410.18.

Greenspan: Economy gains

■ Country makes progress in correcting economic imbalances, Federal Reserve chairman says.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan delivered a mixed message to Congress on Wednesday, contending the country has made progress in correcting major economic imbalances but "we are not out of the woods yet."

Greenspan came under heavy fire from Democrats seeking assurances that the central bank will not jeopardize President Clinton's economic program by moving too quickly to push interest rates higher.

In his first congressional appearance in six months, the Fed chief made no commitments on future interest-rate decisions, although he was repeatedly pressed to cut rates further or at least refrain from pushing them higher.

Even without those assurances, financial markets rallied on Greenspan's comments.

"The markets have taken heart, not from any specific comment Greenspan made but from a belief that his overall remarks indicated he would be prepared to cut rates further if the economy remains subpar," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co.

Clinton spokesman George Stephanopoulos said the new administration viewed Greenspan's comments as a positive sign that the Fed will play a cooperative role in the implementation of Clinton's economic program.

"They share the goals of getting growth in this economy, increasing jobs," Stephanopoulos said of Clinton and Greenspan.

Clinton told reporters Wednesday he doesn't know if he can meet his goal of cutting the deficit by $145 billion by 1996 without raising taxes. But he promised an answer by the time he delivers his economic program to Congress Feb. 17.

"I've made no decisions yet," Clinton said at the start of a meeting with the chairmen of the budget, appropriations and tax writing committees as well as House Speaker Thomas Foley and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell.

Participants described the 90-minute session as a free-wheeling exchange of ideas, with Clinton giving no hints of where he was headed.

Foley said that when Clinton does come forward with an economic program, the Democratic leadership in Congress would be solidly behind the plan.

"We're going to have a rational and coordinated position in the administration and in the Congress," Foley said.

Democrats on the Joint Economic Committee charged that it would be unthinkable if the years of gridlock between Congress and the White House were to end only to be replaced by obstructionist policies at the Fed. They said that Greenspan and other Fed policymakers bore a large part of the blame for the 1990-91 recession and the current weak recovery because of overly tight interest rate policies. The Fed last cut rates on Sept. 3.

"This country has come through three nightmare years of recession, barebones growth, disappearing jobs and falling incomes," Rep. David Obey, chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, told Greenspan.

Obey and Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., both said the country was enjoying the best performance on inflation in 25 years and this should give the Fed room to cut rates further. But they said instead the Fed was sending signals that it was preparing to boost rates by tentatively deciding to lower the growth target for a key measure of the money supply for 1993.

Greenspan, however, insisted that a preliminary Fed decision last November to lower its target for M-2 growth was a "technical adjustment" and not a signal that the central bank was ready to start restricting credit in coming months.

On the overall economy, Greenspan said, "While we are not yet out of the woods on the various problems that we have been confronted with in recent years, there is no question we have made very substantial progress."

Among the gains, Greenspan cited an improving performance for the U.S. banking system, which he said "two years ago was in rather dubious shape."

He also said he was encouraged that the overall economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, grew at an annual rate of around 3.5 percent in the last half of 1992, more than triple the rate of the previous 15 months.

But he warned that job growth so far has shown few signs of improving and unless it does, the burst of consumer spending which powered much of the growth of the past six months would falter.

Former bank executive joins Dawson Geophysical board

Staff report

Retired bank executive Matthew P. Murphy has been elected to the board of directors of Dawson Geophysical Co. He will serve until the next annual meeting in January 1994.

Murphy

"We are pleased that Mr. Murphy has joined our board," said L. Decker Dawson, company president. "His depth of financial and management experience is a welcome addition."

Murphy, 63, was chairman and chief executive officer of First RepublicBank Midland from November 1986 until it was merged with NCNB Texas — now NationsBank — in 1988. He was president of NationsBank-Midland and was the holding company's regional executive for West Texas until his retirement in November 1991.

He previously served as chief executive officer of banks in Plano and San Francisco. He began his career with Citibank's Buenos Aires branch.

Murphy currently serves on the board of trustees of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center and the boards of directors of the Midland-Odessa Symphony, Community & Senior Services, and the Visiting Nurses Association of Texas.

Dawson Geophysical acquires and analyzes 3-D seismic data used in determining whether subsurface geological conditions appear favorable for the accumulation of oil and gas. Its clients are major and intermediate-sized oil and gas companies and independent oil operations.

Its common stock is traded through the NASDAQ national market system under the symbol DWSN.

San Antonio Light ceases publication

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Hearst Corp. closed the San Antonio Light after getting approval Wednesday to buy the rival Express-News, ending a 112-year tradition of competing daily newspapers in this South Texas city.

"It's over. They ceased publication," said Ed Rademaekers, executive editor of the Light.

A 14-page commemorative last edition put together by the Light was to be delivered to subscribers today. A copy of the Express-News was to be inserted inside.

The shutdown came shortly after the Justice Department announced it would not block Hearst, the Light's parent company, from buying the Express-News from Rupert Murdoch's News Corp.

Hearst, owner of the Reporter-Telegram, announced Oct. 6 it had agreed to purchase the Express-News for $185 million and that it would close the Light if a buyer wasn't found. Hearst said the Light had lost $60 million since 1987.

Hearst President and Chief Executive Officer Frank A. Bennack said then that the Express-News management and employees would be retained and Light employees would be offered severance benefits if the Light closed.

After almost four months of waiting, Light staffers said Wednesday they were sad but relieved about the closing.

Express-News Publisher W. Lawrence Walker Jr. said the Express-News would be hiring some Light employees.

Method of 'transfer on death' developing

By Bill Doyle

Q: A woman I know has purchased a five-year, 8 percent promissory note. She will receive interest payments semi-annually and will get the note's principal amount back after five years.

Doyle

The note is registered in her name POD (payable on death) to another person. She explained that if she dies before the expiration of the note's five-year term, the note will become the other person's property.

She was told the note could have been listed TOD (transfer on death), with the same meaning.

TOD seems to be a new and simple way of listing ownership. Can common stock be listed that way?

A: Permit me to hedge with a qualified "yes" and an explanation.

You are correct about TOD being a new method of registering securities. It's so new, in Navy terminology, it's still on a shakedown run.

So far, legislation approving TOD registration has been enacted in seven states: Colorado, Minnesota, Missouri, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon and Wisconsin.

However, its use is not limited to those states. The TOD form is authorized in any state where the issuer of the security is incorporated or its principal office is located, in any state where the security's transfer agent or other processor is incorporated, where the processor's principal office is located or the processor's office handling the registration is located and, finally, any state listed as the security owner's address at the time of registration.

Summed up, you can request that any stock or other security you own or are buying be registered in TOD form.

Now for a kicker. Even if you ask for TOD registration, the issuer or transfer agent just might refuse to go along with your request.

The Uniform TOD Securities Registration Act and similar statutes passed and pending in state legislatures permit, but do not require, securities to be registered in that form.

Issuers and transfer agents cannot be forced to go along with a TOD registration request. Some recalcitrants refuse to do so. Why is beyond my ken. As you so rightly note, TOD is a simple method. It avoids probate and reduces other paperwork and expense.

Q: What types of securities can be registered TOD?

A: Any and all types, including stocks, bonds, mutual fund shares, unit investment trusts and American depository receipts. TOD can even be used for book-entry accounts, such as dividend reinvestment plans, for which no certificates are printed and ownership is recorded on computers.

Q: What is the absolutely correct terminology for listing stock owned by John Jones and payable upon his death to Mary Smith?

A: "John Jones TOD Mary Smith, subject to STA TOD rules."

The initials "STA" stand for Securities Transfer Association, the professional organization of transfer agents and other securities processors that has been in the forefront of the TOD movement.

Q: We went to see our attorney, who is my nephew, about having the registration of our stocks put into TOD form. After a few minutes, it became obvious he knows nothing about TOD. Can you suggest any reading material for that young man?

A: My suggestion is for you to go one up on your nephew the lawyer by getting hold of Section 12, The Rules of The Securities Transfer Association Inc., "Transfer on Death."

That booklet is available at $15 a copy from STA, P.O. Box 3478, Church Street Station, New York, NY 10008-3478.

It's a handy guide, containing all the TOD rules, and provides further discussion in question-and-answer form.

No more 'hmms' about hems

By Bernadine Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Confused about what length skirt to settle into for spring? Do not worry. It is a decision you may not have to make.

Fashion designers, in their spring collections on and off Seventh Avenue last week, made no edicts. Sure, the emphasis continues on longer hems, longer being anything that covers the knees and stops above the shoe tops. The skinny calf-length skirt, so favored in the fall collections, has been supplemented by lots of fuller skirts.

The leading fall skirt silhouette was split at the front, sides or back, enabling the wearer to walk without feeling hobbled and providing what was deemed essential to the acceptance of longer hems: a view of legs.

The introduction of wider shapes for spring makes the slits unnecessary from a functional point of view — they offer no hindrance when a woman walks, even when she takes giant steps. The thin fabrics that dominate the new season with their translucent or even transparent qualities give a clear view of the legs beneath.

Many designers, including members of the avant garde as well as traditionalists, offered short skirts along with longer styles.

FOR THESE reasons, it is virtually impossible to work up any sense of controversy about skirt lengths. But there is an even more significant reason: the prevalence of pants.

Last month the ready-to-wear collections in Europe placed a strong emphasis on pants, ranging from Gianni Versace's bell bottoms and Giorgio Armani's sheer voile styles with matching overskirts in Milan to Jean Muir's calf-length culottes in London to Jean-Paul Gaultier's goofy pants with waistbands drawn up to the armpits in Paris.

Karl Lagerfeld at Chanel revived the nautical pants Gabrielle Chanel had worn in the 1930s, with their lightly flared or belled bottoms. Claude Montana, who showed one of the most acclaimed collections in Paris, also offerred moderately flared and chiffon pants.

Perhaps to no one's great surprise, American designers offered their own take on the pants movement. If anything, their interpretations were more diversified than the Europeans', since they often included shorts as well as longer pants, cropped at many lengths to show intricately strapped shoes.

"We didn't lengthen our skirts, but we did shorten our pants," said Geoffrey Beene, who also developed a rounded cut, based on the trousers fieldworkers wear in Asia. No designer here offered the petticoat pants Versace was enamored of (to exaggerate the bottom flare, the designer lined the bottom of pants with tiny rows of ruffles).

Donna Karan was one of those who did offer bell bottoms, as part of her allover fluid look. Some could be worn to work; others, for night, have beaded tops.

PERHAPS THE most popular aspect of the pants look for spring is the integration of pants with skirts. It can take the form of a separate skirt tied over the pants, a favorite motif of Calvin Klein, with both skirt and pants in a superthin fabric, or pants combined with a dress, a lightweight coat or a long jacket.

These combinations give a new spin to the idea of layering, a key aspect of sportswear dressing. Scarves and shirts can also be tied around the hips, as Marc Jacobs does in his collection for Perry Ellis inspired by the grunge-music phenomenon.

In quite another mood, dressy pants are offered for evening by designers like Bill Blass and Arnold Scaasi, offering a fresh way to dress for dinner and black-tie parties.

Pants are very much a part of another major development for spring, the baring of the midriff. The baring was accomplished on the runways in many different ways.

Frequently, sweaters or T-shirts stop short of the waist to reveal a few inches of skin. Jackets and coats are buttoned at the neck and then left to flow freely, offering a view of bared midriff. And trousers fastened with drawstrings can be tied loosely so they are secured just above the hipbones.

There is far more diversity to pants design this season than there is to skirts — and hem lengths are hardly an issue.

Pants answer to long skirt dilemma

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

Perhaps you like to be in step with a new fashion but have been defeated by the long skirt. Your reaction may not be as dramatic as that of a fashion editor who arrived at a recent Paris fashion show wearing old velvet leggings and a grin that stretched from ear to ear.

"At last, I'm free!" she exclaimed, kicking her legs in the air. "I thought of taking off that long, tight skirt in the middle of the Place Vendome and burning it as a symbolic gesture."

Dealing with the snug fit and accouterments — especially clunky shoes — that make the long skirt work has driven lots of stylish women to drop the whole thing. Yet, there is no question that a hemline conspicuously above the knee now looks demode.

What to do? Pants are an obvious answer. The newest ones, however, are bell-bottoms, which you need to experiment with to avoid looking like a leftover 70s teenybopper. The best solution is to stick with a longer skirt that ends just below the knee and is tapered on the sides.

Curiously, this length, which used to seem like the epitome of dowdiness, now looks absolutely a la mode. Furthermore, it works with all sorts of shoes.

Shirts 'savvy' style

NEW YORK (AP) — Fashionable women who knew the value of a dollar found Hanes T-shirts, under $10 in the men's department, were perfect with jeans and a navy blazer when the "boyfriend" look was in. Now that the look is menswear for women, can a man's dress shirt escape their grasp?

"The savvy female is fast catching on to the fact that what's good for him can be dynamite for her," says Mark Weber, president of The Van Heusen Co.

Not only are men's dress shirts well tailored, they often are less expensive than women's.

Crochet craze coverup for clothes

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

It's not too soon to indulge in the crochet craze.

Come spring, all manner of clothes will be fashioned out of crocheted yarn, a manifestation of the see-through style that will sweep through next season's fashions.

Some designers showed their crocheted creations over nothing, or mere bits of scanty underwear, a look better left on the runway. What is more fun — and far more acceptable — is something crocheted worn over something in a solid contrasting color or a striped pattern.

Pieces are now arriving in New York stores. At Barneys New York, a skullcap crocheted in black and white bands is already a big seller. It costs $32, and no one seems to mind that the winter wind will whistle through the open areas.

The store also has a knockout version of a midriff-tie flounce-sleeve crocheted shirt and matching hip-hugger bell-bottom pants. The two pieces come in cream or black, and the prices are right for experimentation: the shirt is $62, the pants are $50.

You can put the top half over a figure-hugging striped tank top and the bell-bottoms over bright or black leggings. Now you're talking witty avant-garde fashion.

Midriffs shown only demurely bare

By Bernadine Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

Arms have been out in the open for a long time. And thanks to deep slits at the front, sides or back of long skirts, along with the prevalence of sarong drapes and translucent fabrics, legs are now almost as visible.

But the newest area of exposure in fashion is the midriff. Baring the midriff still has the ability to startle, designers have found, even though this part of the body is not considered to be a particularly erogenous zone.

Ladylike versions of midriff-baring fashions showed up in 1930s movies starring Carole Lombard and Ginger Rogers. More raucous versions were prominent in the 1960s. Designers and retailers believe that midriffs will have another outing in the next few months, but most agree the clothes will be decorous.

Designers of clothes for young women are not the only ones who have rediscovered the midriff. Others say that mature women who have put in their time on the exercise machine and who have watched their diets are also candidates for this style.

"The woman who has concentrated on keeping her body in shape shouldn't have too much trouble," Bill Blass said.

Carolina Herrera believes the midriff "doesn't have to be completely bare; a veil of chiffon over the midriff can look intriguing."

Mrs. Herrera offers several variations on the open midriff look. The most obvious is a jeweled bra with evening pants or skirt. Other styles have sheer fabric over most of the bodice, including the midriff, and still others bare just a sliver of skin.

One way of showing the midriff that has proved popular with designers is simply fastening a jacket or vest at the neckline and letting it fall freely. When the wearer moves there is a flash of skin, but nothing startling.

Blass offered his version of this treatment by fastening a caftan over the chest and then letting it float over pants. Designed for resort wear, this style is already in the stores.

Of course, the bare midriff is more arresting in serious daytime clothes and for evening than it is in sportswear. Women have long been tying their shirttails in front, leaving a bit of skin showing before the skirt or pants take over.

New York retailers say many customers like the look. "The clothes are selling," reported Helen O'Hagan, a vice president of Saks Fifth Avenue.

The front-tied shirt-top, worn with bell-bottom pants, is selling well, said Kalman Ruttenstein, senior vice president for fashion direction at Bloomingdale's, indicating that it is being picked up by the fashion-forward.

A cropped black leather jacket and matching bell-bottoms by Isaac Mizrahi is one of these early success styles. Another is a cropped cashmere sweater by Marc Jacobs for Perry Ellis, which is meant to be worn with either bell-bottoms or straight leather pants.

"We feel so strongly about the look that we have just planned a bare-midriff outfit to kick off our spring promotion," Ruttenstein said. It is a long, soft jacket embroidered with butterflies, combined with a cropped vest and flower printed pants, all by Jacobs.

DEAR ABBY

Motorcycles attract unwanted attention

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The American Motorcyclist Association (AMA) is a national organization representing approximately 200,000 motorcycle enthusiasts.

Van Buren

In your answer to "Barbara in Dallas," you raised three issues. First, you properly assumed that motorcycles are insured so that any injury that resulted from a child playing on a motorcycle would be compensated by the motorcyclist's vehicle insurance. While it is true that a child's injuries may be covered by insurance, you seem to miss the point. Both senseless injury and needless insurance claims could be avoided if parents would supervise their children.

Second, you improperly defined a motorcycle as an "attractive nuisance." The "attractive nuisance" doctrine has traditionally been applied in situations where a child has been injured while trespassing on a landowner's property.

The doctrine is generally applied in carefully limited circumstances, where the possessor of real property knows or has reason to know that children are likely to trespass, and the condition is one that presents an unreasonable risk of death or serious bodily injury. In short, while a swimming pool might be correctly defined as an "attractive nuisance," a motorcycle likely would not.

Additionally, many jurisdictions do not even recognize the "attractive nuisance" doctrine. In any case, it is unlikely that most courts would accept a universal definition of motorcycles as an "attractive nuisance."

Finally, you observed that "owning a motorcyle is an awesome responsibility." Parenthood also imposes some great responsibilities. The primary responsibility for the supervision and protection of children should rest with parents instead of the burden being placed upon vehicle owners. — ERIC LUNDQUIST, ESQ., LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS SPECIALIST, AMERICAN MOTORCYCLIST ASSOCIATION

DEAR MR. LUNDQUIST: You're quite right to suggest that parents must properly supervise their children. And, I claim no legal expertise concerning the "attractive nuisance doctrine." However, some years ago, in commercial law class (Central High, Sioux City, Iowa), I learned that an "attractive nuisance" was that which attracted people onto the property of another. (Examples: a house under construction, a swimming pool, playground equipment such as swings, slides, etc.)

According to "You and the Law" (Reader's Digest), an attractive nuisance is "a condition, machine or other thing that is dangerous to young children and that may attract them onto the owner's property and expose them to risks for which the owner may be held responsible." A definition of the same term in Black's Law Dictionary mentions the doctrine in relation to a person "who creates such condition on the premises of another, OR IN A PUBLIC PLACE" (my emphasis).

Many readers accused me of disliking motorcyclists. Nonsense. The late Malcolm Forbes was a cherished friend. And my own dentist, Dr. Stan Golden, is a motorcycle enthusiast. I rest my case.

DEAR ABBY: We are overwhelmed! Never have we seen so many letters and Christmas cards in one place at one time! You can certainly consider Operation Dear Abby a success for 1992.

The crew of the USS John F. Kennedy from Norfolk, Va., and the ship's embarked nine squadrons that compose Carrier Air Wing Three; ate the mail up. Two weeks before Christmas, everybody was walking around the ship with an envelope addressed to "Any Sailor." I saw them in pockets, posted on doors and walls, and all over bulletin boards throughout the ship.

Thank you, Abby, for perpetuating the good cheer and public support that "Operation Dear Abby" demonstrates to servicepersons away from home. And thank you, America, for your good wishes during the holiday season! — CAPT. T.R. BEARD, COMMANDING OFFICER, USS JOHN F. KENNEDY

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who wanted to re-establish contact with an American airman stationed in England might be helped by the American Library in Norwich, England.

There were some 20 airfields in Norfolk County during World War II, with many friendships developing between airmen and local citizens, some continuing to the present. One result of these friendships was the establishment of the American Library, which contains many books, magazines and newspapers about the United States. In addition, the library serves as a clearinghouse for information about specific Air Force units and their contacts within different towns and villages. Newsletters of the units are posted there at the library. Visitors from the States are asked to sign in on a roster, with their wartime unit noted.

A visit to the library is recommended for airmen who are returning to England because the librarian may be unable to answer hundreds of letters. The address of the librarian is: Phyllis M. DuBois, Trust Librarian, Memorial Library, Central Library, Bethel Street, Norwich NR2 1NJ, U.K. Postage from the U.S. is 50 cents for the first half-ounce and 45 cents for each additional half-ounce, up to 24 ounces.

This year, there were several specific occasions related to the 50th anniversary of the establishment of airfields in England. —CHARLES L. SMITH, ASTP, 6TH CO. 6TH REGT., 343RD INFANTRY, F CO.

DEAR ABBY: Ogden Nash's poem is short, but it's not THAT short. The complete poem is:

A panther is like a leopard except it hasn't been peppered.
If you should behold a panther crouch
Prepare to say ouch.
Better yet,
If called by a panther,
Don't anther.

Parents divorcing children not bad idea

By Erma Bombeck

A friend of mine called the other day and said she was getting a divorce.

Bombeck

"I thought you and Frank were happy," I said.

"We are happy. I'm talking about divorcing my children."

"You can't do that," I said.

"If kids can divorce their parents, why can't it work the other way around?"

"On what grounds?" I asked.

"Neglect and incompatibility. Those kids don't know whether I'm alive or dead."

It's a trend whose time has come. Children never figure that their parents have expectations and are disappointed, or that they need something back in return for their love. They don't see their parents as vulnerable human beings who can be hurt.

Ruth Larkin is a reader from Merritt Island, Fla., who resurrected a poem she wrote some years ago to her adult son who forgot Father's Day:

TO HAL JR.
ON FATHER'S DAY

Sunday was Father's Day, you'll be surprised to hear,
They decided to have it again this year.
I just thought I'd like to prod you
About who it was you didn't send a card to —
He was the guy in hail, snow and heat,
Who pitched you the ball on Russell Street.
He was the guy, in case you forget,
Who lay on the ground in a tent yet,
With bugs and spiders in his ears and eyes,
So you could win some stupid prize.
And it was also him, in case you forgot,
Who helped you untie those thousands of knots,
On that boat he rebuilt with brave endeavor,
So you could look so very clever
Sailing around the Great South Bay,
While he took pictures of you — many a day,
He was the guy who took his life in his hands,
To teach you to drive on the highway
After hundreds of miles, he was all smiles,
You had finally driven out of the driveway.
I could go on and on with lots more data,
But it will only make me madder and madder,
You may have guessed this has bothered me a smidgen,
Do it again you're a dead pigeon!
— From your former friend and Mother

PUBLIC NOTICE OF MEDICARE TERMINATION OF PROVIDER AGREEMENT

Martin County Hospital District
610 North St. Peter Street
Stanton, Texas 79782

On February 13, 1993 the Medicare agreement between Martin County Hospital District and the Secretary of Health and Human Services relating to the hospital's participation in the Health Insurance for the Aged and Disabled Program (Medicare) is to be terminated, unless compliance with all Medicare requirements is achieved prior to that date. The cause for Medicare termination is that Martin County Hospital District does not meet minimum health and safety standards required for Medicare program participation. The hospital is not in compliance with Medicare Conditions of Participation relating to Governing Body, Quality Assurance, and Pharmaceutical Services.

The Medicare program will not make payments for hospital services furnished to patients admitted to Martin County Hospital District on or after February 13, 1993. For patients admitted prior to February 13, 1993, payment may continue for up to 30 days of covered inpatient services furnished on and after February 13, 1993.

WHAT?!? NEWSPAPER ROUTES?
That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your "day job." Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: 95% of our Distributors NOW are ADULTS supplementing their income with Route Distributorships!

The catch? You've got to be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

CALL 688-2700 and start making that extra car payment today!

A-1 VENDING- Strike it rich! $3K - $4K cash weekly possible. Patented. No competition. Prime routes for sale cheap. No $ down if qualified. Call Ralph 1-800-769-5816.

We are pleased to announce the association of Jeannie Printz. She has been in Midland Real Estate for 13 years. We invite everyone to give her a call.
Jeannie holds a broker's license, the GRI Designation, and has been one of the most successful property managers in Midland. She operates Printz Property Management.

GIVE JEANNIE A CALL...on this absolutely wonderful country property...this is the type of home that is so difficult to find...A beautiful, modern four year old home...Dream kitchen...Formal living and dining with double fireplace...terrific master bath with a jacuzzi tub. When you approach up the circle drive, you know that you have found that unique home that combines country property with elegant living...And the 10 acres are fenced and cross fenced with white pipe...You need to see this...call today...$129,900!!!

AFFORDABLE FORTY...If you are buying your first home and using all of your cash to get into a home, you need something that is in "move-in" condition without a lot of work and money involved after closing. This is just the ticket...super clean...3 bedrooms...2 baths...2 car garage...quiet neighborhood that is close to schools...First time Buyers check this out...$48,000.

COUNTRY ON A BUDGET...if you wish that you could afford this first house in our ad...but finances dictate something with a smaller price tag...then you need to see this charming country home. It is clean and "super sharp"...3 bedrooms...2 baths...just under one acre...$40,000 and the loan is assumable...Call us today for details!!!
