Arid Candidates Named In Governor's Race

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 15. The G. O. P. race appeared so close tonight an official count may be necessary to determine result.

Returns from all but one precinct in the state indicated Myers Y. Cooper, Cincinnati, who carried the dry league endorsement has again received the Republican nomination for governor. These returns gave him a majority of 5,565 over Congressman James T. Begg of Sandusky, his closest rival.

Congressman Martin L. Davey of Kent, the league picked candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket, appeared to have won over Peter Witt.

PRYOR TO SEEK FREEDOM IN WRIT HEARING

Former Constable to Use Habeas Corpus Plan To Gain Bond

SHOOK IN HEARING

Former Police Chief In Not Guilty Plea On Murder Charge

A bond for Ed Pryor, former Electra constable, recently indicted by the Wichita county grand jury on three indictments of three counts each, probably will be sought Thursday by a writ of habeas corpus in 78th district court, Shields Meyer of Meyer and Hicks, counsel for Pryor, said Wednesday.

Pryor was arrested at Childress Sunday morning by Sheriff W. G. Bralley after he had been indicted by a special grand jury on bills charging burglary and robbery. On a previous burglary indictment, returned early in July, Pryor had made bond, set at $1,500 by Judge E. G. Thornton, of 30th district court.

The first arrest of the former Electra peace officer immediately followed the arrest of Henry Shumate a day after he had escaped the county jail. Shumate, officers said, was sleeping with Pryor, at that time constable, when arrested.

District Attorney Ben P. Allred declared that he would oppose any effort to secure bond for Pryor.

Shook Arraigned

Tom Shook, former Electra chief of police, entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of murder for which he was arraigned before Judge P. A. Martin of 30th district court Wednesday morning.

Shook is charged with the murder of W. G. Daugherty of Electra, who was fatally stabbed at the home of Ace Sperry in Electra Thursday night a few moments after Daugherty had entered the neighbor's house to use the telephone. Shook, who following the affray, had barricaded himself in his home, surrendered to Sheriff W. G. Bralley Friday morning. He was indicted for murder by a special grand jury summoned in 78th district court by Judge W. W. Cook.

Following the argument, trial date was officially set for Sept. 6, the date previously agreed upon by Judge Martin and Ben P. Allred, district attorney. A special venire of 150 names was drawn from the recently completed jury wheel. The murder trial venire is the first to be drawn from the wheel.

Greets Relatives

After his arrangement Shook passed in the hallway to shake hands with relatives who had come to Wichita Falls to see him. He also had a word of greeting for county and city officers who were at the hearing, men with whom he once cooperated in the enforcement of law in North Texas.

Mr. Allred declined at a conference with Shields Heyser, of the firm of Heyser & Hicks, defense counsel, to agree upon bond. Mr. Heyser said bond would not be sought in a writ of habeas corpus.

Following the hearing Shook was back in the county jail, telling his cell mates about the hearing.

ROY C. TOOMBS UNDER CHARGE OF LARCENY

New Warrant Issued For Arrest of President Of Insurance Firm

RESISTS ARREST

Authorization of Governor Demanded by Man Accused

CHICAGO, Aug. 15. (AP)—Roy C. Toombs, president of a Chicago stock brokerage firm and head of a St. Louis insurance company, was charged with grand larceny of $104,000 in bonds in a warrant issued in St. Louis today shortly after he had been dismissed in municipal court in Chicago because there was no complaint against him.

The warrant accused Toombs of taking the securities from his insurance company—the International Life—and converting them to his own use. He has not been rearrested and his counsel said the governor of Illinois would have to authorize arrest before Toombs would submit.

Firm In Distress

Toombs' discharge in court today was in connection with his arrest late last Saturday night when St. Louis authorities requested he be taken in custody after insurance examiners had found his company in distressing circumstances. Taken into custody without warrant, he was held by Chicago police under $10,000 bond until he obtained a habeas corpus writ yesterday and its sequel, his release today.

Toombs is accused of manipulating securities of the insurance company and his brokerage house. Toombs and Dailey, causing the brokerage firm to go into the hands of a receiver and leading the insurance company into a similar condition.

Assets Unaccounted For

Clarence Stelle, vice president of Toombs and Daily, petitioned for receivership of the brokerage house, blaming Toombs' stock manipulations for its failure to meet obligations. Stelle charged Toombs had purchased $2,000,000 worth of securities from his firm but failed to account for the purchase check and had the company affairs in such shape that only a receiver could straighten them out.

The insurance company also reported $3,567,000 of its assets are unaccounted for.

Toombs maintains the charges against him were part of a plan to "freeze him out" of his companies. His counsel said he would invoke the authority of the habeas corpus writ if he is again taken into custody.

10 Commandments Of Married Life Suicide's Bequest

NEW YORK, Aug. 15. (AP)—A pair of red dice with a seven up, a few poems and a sheet of paper on which had been typed the "ten commandments of married life" told the police today that 18-year-old Anna Green had gambled with a career and lost.

The young woman's body was found in a gas-filled room in Brooklyn last night. Dice and papers lay on a table. There was a pencilled note, too, that read: "I have nothing against anyone. Love to you all. Anna."

The commandments, apparently written by Miss Green, set forth rules for a successful marriage.

"Remember you are both human, you are not perfect, and you are liable to error," said one.

"Live within your means, do not strive to imitate your neighbors, relatives or friends," read another.

"Belong to the home of God—both of you—be active in it and God will bless you for it," was the last.

HOUNDS HUNT FOUR CONVICTS

Prisoners Escape From Texas Farm

HOUSTON, Aug. 15. (UP)—Armed posses, aided by a pack of bloodhounds, tonight were searching the Brazos river bottoms near Richmond, about 25 miles from here, for four or five convicts who escaped from Blue Ridge state prison farm number two late today. Four other convicts, who escaped in the same break, were captured.

Lack of communication means prevented a check of the number in the break. It was reported at Blue Ridge camp number one, about 10 miles from camp number two, that no one was hurt when the prisoners effected their escape.

It was believed the men were on their way to the mess-hall when they broke from the guards.

The break followed by a few hours a meeting of several hundred Fort Bend county citizens, gathered at Richmond to take steps toward driving the state prison from that section's fertile acres. A resolution was introduced calling upon the state to remedy the situation, which, it declared has become unbearable.

The three farms in Fort Bend county, the two Blue Ridge camps and the Imperial state farm, cover approximately 15,000 acres.

A copy of the resolution will be sent to Gov. Dan Moody immediately.

Republicans to Spend Millions In Efforts to Gain Edge in Senate

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15. (US)—The Republican party today began its quest of the second richest prize of the national election—control of the United States senate.

A national senatorial campaign headquarters was opened here in the transportation building, separate and independent of the vast Hoover-for-president headquarters of the Republican national committee which is running on all sixes with the machine-like efficiency.

A national pow probably in excess of $1,000,000 will be spent in the effort to secure dominance of the senate which will come into being with the new president. That will be supplemented by the many other millions to be raised and spent locally in the united campaigns for president, senators, national representatives and state officers.

Next to the presidency, the senate is the great stake for which the rival parties are vieing.

So great is the stake that Pennsylvania saw $3,000,000 spent in a single senate primary, while $3,000,000 was expended in the McKinley-Smith battle in Illinois, which resulted in the ousting of Col. Frank Smith.

COOKSIE ABSENT

Attorney Promises Client Will Return to Jail Thursday

BENJAMIN, Texas, Aug. 15.—Melvin Cooksie was indicted for the murder of his 19-year-old wife by a grand jury in 50th district court here Wednesday. Mrs. Cooksie died May 16, a short time after she had received a wound in the head, which Cooksie told investigators was caused by the kick of a mule.

About two weeks following the woman's death, Cooksie was released on bond of $7,000, and he had not been found to hear the indictment Wednesday night, according to Sheriff Jim W. Melton, of Knox county.

Cooksie's attorney, B. J. Brockerson, told Sheriff Melton that his client would return to the county jail Thursday morning.

Probe Starts Monday

The Knox county grand jury has been considering evidence against Cooksie since Monday.

Shortly before Mrs. Cooksie's death a physician was summoned. Upon examining the body he immediately called county officials, and Cooksie was placed under arrest. A bloodstained hammer was found in Cooksie's automobile, officers said.

Cooksie and his wife, a former Wichita Falls girl, lived about three miles north of Goree, L. O. Newton, judge of the 50th district court, announced that trial date would be set within a short time after Cooksie was located and returned to the Knox county jail.

Tells of Accident

Cooksie, in a statement given a reporter for The Record News a few days after the death of his wife, declared that he had been working on his automobile preparatory to a visit to relatives. His wife, he said, had been talking to him while he worked on the car. She decided she wanted a drink of water and attempted to slide under the door of the barn where the automobile was kept, Cooksie said.

He continued working on the car. Missing his wife, he told The Record News, he got up to look for her and found her half under the door, unconscious. He immediately called to a brother-in-law in a nearby lot, he said, and asked him to summon a doctor. His arrest followed.

Summer Weather Hard on Nerves

Long hot days and nights are a strain on the nerves, often causing headaches, sleepless nights and general fatigue.

The safest and quickest way to overcome pain and restlessness is to take two teaspoonfuls of Capudine in a little water. It gives delightful relief by soothing the strained nerves. Being liquid, it acts almost instantly. At all drug stores; 30c and 60c sizes.—Adv.

'NOT GUILTY,' IS WILKINS' PLEA

Murder Trial Set Here For September 13

Joe Wilkins, arraigned before Judge P. A. Martin in 89th district court on a charge of murder Wednesday morning, entered a plea of not guilty to the charge.

Wilkins was charged with murder following the death from gun shot wounds of Everett Horn at the Maryland hotel here on June 12, 1927. He was lodged in the Wichita county jail, from which he escaped shortly after indictment on the murder charge.

About a month ago Wilkins was recaptured in Memphis, Tenn., and returned to the Wichita county jail.

Following the arraignment the trial date was set as Sept. 13, and a special venire of 100 names was drawn for jury service.

Counsel for Wilkins indicated that his defense would be a plea that the fatal shot was fired in self-defense.

TRAPS CATCH RANGE FLIES

Stockmen Hear Report On Extermination

SONORA, Texas, Aug. 15. (AP)—Flies, which present one of the greatest problems to range men, are being coped with satisfactorily by traps staked out over the ranges, W. R. Nisbet, county agent of Menard, told delegates of the fourth annual ranchmen's round-up at the ranch experiment station here today.

Nisbet, who has been instrumental in popularizing the drive against the fly, declared that systematic trapping was perhaps the surest and most satisfactory manner in existence.

The traps, placed at various points, are baited with rabbits and other animals and millions of flies are trapped every day.

E. G. Baggett Jr., Ozona, today was elected secretary of the Texas Sheep and Goat raisers at a meeting of the executive meeting held here in connection with the round-up. Baggett is county and district clerk at Ozona.

Today's program, which concludes the round-up, included a lecture by O. G. Babcock, government entomologist, on "Experiments in the Control of Goat Lice," a talk by J. L. Lush, Texas agricultural station, on "Undesirable Heritable Characteristics in Goats"; a talk on "The Relation of Warehouse to the Systematic Marketing of Wool and Mohair," by J. M. O'Daniel, secretary-treasurer of the Wool Growers Central Storage company of San Angelo, and an address on "Beef Cattle Production on the Edwards Plateau" by George W. Barnes, extension service of A. & M. college. O. B. Martin, director of A. & M. college extension service, will speak on "The Development of Extension Service Work in the Sheep and Goa Section."

"Wayne Wheeler of Canada" Bitter Against Quebec Liquor System

Pastor and Dry Leader Claims Liquor Traffic Controls Canadian Government; Asserts That Booze and "Red Lights" Are Linked

Editor's Note: The United Press herewith presents the second of a series of three articles dealing with the liquor commission system of Quebec province. In carrying this series the United Press of course assumes no responsibility for the views expressed and seeks only to present in news form the results of its inquiries in Montreal and Quebec.—R. J. Bender, General News Manager.

By CARL D. GROAT

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 15. (UP)—Return of the saloon would be preferable to the present liquor commission system in Quebec province, according to Rev. E. I. Hart of the Quebec League Against Alcohol, sometimes known as the "Wayne Wheeler of Canada."

He told the United Press in an exclusive interview that he felt the present system of dealing with liquor in Quebec province has resulted in a situation where "the government has the liquor traffic and the liquor traffic has the government."

He declared that men representing the liquor interests are increasingly being sent to parliament while the commission, with good citizens attached thereto, is throwing a cloak of respectability around the traffic.

"The liquor dealer used to be a social outcast," Hart said, "but this is no longer the case. We now have men of good families attached to the liquor commission."

Dr. Hart declared that the triple evils of liquor, drugs and prostitution are linked in Montreal.

The center of the drug traffic on the North American continent is located here, he said, while the liquor trade and "red lights" go hand in hand.

He pointed out that under the old license system preceding the commission plan, there were only 400 licenses, whereas today there are 1,000 permits in Montreal alone for taverns, cafes, etc.

Wet municipalities have increased from 90 to 300 under the commission system. Hart pointed to the growing prohibition movement before the commission system was inaugurated and declared that the commission plan was put through parliament without reference to the people after a system for only beer and light wine had been organized.

"At that time," he said, "the liquor forces of the world were organized to discredit prohibition in the United States. Take last year as an example of the results.

Sales Jump

"Sales of beer increased five per cent over the previous year; wine increased 33 per cent; hard liquor, 16 to 17 per cent. These figures come from the liquor commission but for some reason, they have not included them in their annual report."

Hart said he did not believe this increase was due to smuggling of liquor to the U. S.

Not more than 15 per cent of these increases can be attributed to smuggling into the U. S. in my opinion," he said. "And you will notice that over six to 10 of the liquor stores cater to the American or English speaking trade.

"Beer and wine are merely an opening wedge for hard liquor. We have seen that in the history of the commission movement."

Hart believes, however, that despite the growth of the liquor traffic in Quebec, prohibition will eventually come throughout the world.

"American efficiency under prohibition set the world an example," he said. "Competition with this American efficiency will eventually put the world on a 'dry basis.'"

WAR "VICTIM" FOOLS WORLD

Wanted His Picture in All The Papers

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 15. (UP)—Hansel C. Williams of Dallas, Texas, who attempted to "fool the world" and did a pretty good job of it, has confessed to square himself with the susceptible public.

Williams, alias Harold Payton, and Lawrence Kesling, wanted to get his picture on the front page of every newspaper in America, according to a copyrighted story published by the Times-Union today, and just about succeeded. He posed as a war veteran suffering from loss of memory and was admitted to the National Military Home at Dayton, Ohio, on Jan. 13, 1922.

Wide publicity resulted for the "victim" and he managed to fool physicians and sympathetic visitors. Finally George G. Kesling of Lewiston, Mont., whose son had disappeared in 1916, visited the youth and recognized him as the missing boy.

Kesling, an oil operator, took Williams home with him and the faker remained there until he could no longer bear to deceive his benefactor. He ran away and visited Los Angeles, turning up six years later in Utica, according to the story.

A check showed the latest story of the youth to be substantiated by fact.

Children may not be seen in the streets of Bergen, Norway, after a certain hour, which varies with the season. The church bells of the town peal a signal for them to return home and the police see that they obey.

PAT DENIES BOLTERS' CLAIM

Says 'Certain Demos' Financed by Republicans

NEW YORK, Aug. 15. (AP)—Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, member of the advisory committee of the Democratic national committee, tonight issued a statement denying assertions made at a Republican meeting in San Francisco yesterday that Democrats in Texas and other southern states were deserting their party.

"The rainbow picture of possible Republican victory in Texas rests only in the imagination of those who hope to drive a wedge into the democracy of that state," Senator Harrison said.

"Every report coming to our headquarters indicates that Governor Smith and Senator Robinson will carry Texas by just as substantial a majority as the Democratic ticket there has in the past.

"It is true there is some defection in Texas growing out of the attitude of certain Democrats in that state who have been misled by Republican propaganda, carried on through certain organizations which are being financed by the Republican party, or Republican financiers. But that defection will only stimulate Democrats to greater efforts and insure more intense and effective organization.

"What is true of Democratic success in Texas is likewise true in North Carolina and all the other southern states."

People in some parts of Scotland believe the finding of a four-leaf clover denotes bad luck instead of good luck.

"EVERY PNEUMATIC TIRE OF OUR MANUFACTURE BEARING OUR NAME AND SERIAL NUMBER IS WARRANTED BY US AGAINST DEFECTS IN MATERIAL AND WORKMANSHIP DURING THE LIFE OF THE TIRE TO THE EXTENT THAT IF ANY TIRE FAILS BECAUSE OF SUCH DEFECT, WE WILL EITHER REPAIR THE TIRE OR MAKE A REASONABLE ALLOWANCE ON THE PURCHASE OF A NEW TIRE."

The manufacturers listed below, who produce over 95% of the tires made in America, guarantee tires bearing their names and serial numbers against defects for the entire life of the tires

Director General, THE RUBBER INSTITUTE, Inc.

Those familiar with tire history will remember the early experimental days when the only way a manufacturer could express his confidence in his product was by offering a definite mileage guarantee.

They will recall how, due to misuse, the definite figure inevitably was pushed beyond all sensible bounds.

As tires improved in quality the whole theory and practice of "definite mileage" commitments was pushed into the background and finally rejected by standard tire companies as unfair and uneconomical to the tire-user.

It had proved itself to be fundamentally unsound.

Its abuse by unscrupulous drivers confronted the manufacturer with the alternatives of higher prices or lower quality to meet the added costs of unjustified allowances.

Perhaps its most unfair feature was that it benefited the driver who misused his tires and misrepresented his mileage at the cost of the honest and careful driver who did not abuse his tires.

Its passing was welcomed by trade and public alike because it had come to be used as an unfair sales inducement rather than as a protection for the buyer.

The industry then shifted from the costly advertising of mileage claims to the building of real mileage into the tires.

As a result, tire values have steadily improved, to the benefit of all users alike, although prices are today the lowest in history.

The prevailing practice of these manufacturers, who produce over 95% of the tires in the United States, is expressed by the broadest standard tire guarantee in the history of the industry.

The members of the Rubber Institute, Inc., listed below, warrant tires bearing their names and serial numbers to be free from all defects of material or workmanship.

This warranty is unlimited as to time or mileage, the manufacturer's responsibility continuing throughout the entire life of the tire.

In case of the failure of the tire due to defect, no matter how far or how long that tire has traveled, fair and equitable adjustment will be made by the manufacturer on the basis of the tire's normal expectancy of service had the defect not appeared.

It is the intent and purpose of this warranty to assure the buyer a quality product capable of satisfactory performance, the responsibility for which the manufacturer of the tire hereby assumes.

—a guarantee broader in its protection to the individual, yet fairer in its operation to all, than anything now or ever placed before the public.

WHILE I am persuaded that it is poor form to call attention to mistakes in the press, still this one may prove a great deal of consolation to those who still believe in supernatural powers "The Miracle Undertaking company"—the day of miracles is evidently not yet past. Score one for the morning paper.

THE advertising staff of a local paper also made a mistake today—carried the advertisement of a horse among display advertisements instead of under the heading "Twenty Years Ago." Suppose it was a horse, that's what some of the staff said it was.

AT THAT fall can't be far distant, every day I see women in the downtown shops actually BUYING fall dresses while the bargain racks with what is left-over of summer clothing, get only slight attention. It looks like a hot occupation, this buying of autumn clothes where the thermometer is c a v o r t i n g around 100 degrees, but one must be fashionable if it kills 'em.

How do you keep cool?

THE POWER of women in politics will be determined at the coming presidential election. It has come to the point of discussing the wives of presidential candidates instead of the merits of the candidates themselves. That is not so bad as it sounds, either. Why should not the women citizens of America take pride in having the right to aid in deciding the type of woman who will be known to the world as the "first lady of the land"?

Debates among women political leaders concerning the type that first lady shall be, are taking the place of heated discussions on planks in the platforms.

And it will be difficult to persuade a woman to vote for a man whose wife she does not like.

Mrs. Smith Keeps Al's Schedule Up

By MARTHA DALRYMPLE

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 14. (AP)—Despite the gold fish bowl existence to which his position as a presidential nominee forces him to submit, Governor Smith is continuing his homely order of living.

The daily routine of his life is observed carefully.

With the help of Mrs. Smith, who keeps the household running on smooth wheels that will conform to the busy conference hours of her husband, the governor is able to do everything he wants to.

Campaign advisers are asked to meet the governor at the mansion, not at the capitol.

Smith is a later riser, seldom breakfasting before 11 a. m.

One of his rites daily is an early evening visit to young Mary Adams Warner, year old and youngest of his grandchildren.

CHIC CHERIE — Latest Fashions

It isn't so long ago that one couldn't find a frill in any company at all—now the only clothes that aren't frilly are the sports clothes. Meditating on such matters, Cherie has time to notice out of the corner of her eye that the tennis courts are decorated by a completely new and jolly looking young man. She's so glad she put on this most becoming hat of natural crin trimmed with twisted strips of colored silks. She also notes—she's a very noticing young thing—that the sleeveless dress to the left is made of pale pink crepe de chine with trimming bands of rose. The sport suit just in back is of plain and striped silk shirting. Both of them completely simple.

Also in the vogue of no frills is the costume worn by the young woman who seems to have a lien on the new young man—a pleated skirt of white crepe, a zephyr sweater of white spotted with red, and a white and red kerchief scarf. A new young man is what Cherie has been pining for—she wonders if there's any chance of meeting this one who's so nandy.

In fact, since the new man seems to be anchored to the tennis courts, she changes into tennis clothes—her white linen frock with a full-length printed coat (again the unfrilled fashions!)—and is about to drop balls recklessly in his direction when Ernest and Eustace and Edwin come trotting up. Now what chance has she to get a new young man?

Domestic Misfits Come in For Discussion by Dorothy Dix

The Intelligent Business Woman Who Is a Domestic Misfit—Straight Talk to the Girl Who Despises Her Fiance's Family—Advice to Worried Mother.

Dear Miss Dix—What would you do if you had the kindest husband in the world and the most adorable baby, both of whom you loved dearly, but you just couldn't make a go of your married life? I am a college graduate and was successful with my work. I am well and healthy. I love my home and want to be successful with that, but I am a rank failure as a housekeeper. I never get through with my work. I haven't any real interest in housework and the kind of interest I try to create doesn't help me, and I feel that my spirit is dead within me. I am just a machine that isn't functioning right, and I am tired and discouraged. I have tried to work out a system. I have tried to copy other women's budgets and plans. Nothing turns out right. I am a failure. My husband's people think so. Mine think so, too, yet I love my husband and want to work up with him. What can I do?—DESPAIR.

Answer—Inasmuch as you have made an honest and conscientious effort to be a good housekeeper and have failed at it, why not just accept the fact that nature did not endow you with domestic talents and devote your energies to some other calling?

Not every woman is a born cook, any more than every man is a born carpenter or bookkeeper or mechanic. There are plenty of men who never acquire the art of driving a nail without smashing their fingers, who never find out what ails the automobile when it goes blooey and who couldn't add up a column of figures at sight to save their lives, but this does not keep them from being eminent physicians and lawyers or from making fortunes in the grocery trade.

The men who fail in the world are invariably those who stumbled into doing things for which they had no natural aptitude—the preachers, the merchants who should have been doctors the doctors who should have been merchants or actors or farmers. Wherever you find a man who is doing his job badly and bungling, who is discontented and forever talking about changing to something else, wherever you find a man who is working with his eye on the clock, with no interest in what he is doing except what he earns by it, you will always find that he is miscast. He has the other fellow's job. He is a round peg in a square hole and he doesn't fit.

And, on the other hand, when you find a man who has found his appointed place and who is doing the work God fashioned to his hand, you will find a man who is on his tiptoes, who is alert and happy and interested and who is always thinking of new and better ways of doing his work.

Strange that we never think that women have just this sort of human reaction toward their jobs as men have toward theirs when the job happens to be housework. We think of women as being universally domestic, just naturally loving to cook and sew and clean and knowing by instinct how to do it.

But this isn't true. There are women who are born cooks and other women who are born office women. There are women who measure by the eye and season by the taste, whose bread is always light and whose angel food would win a blue ribbon anywhere. There are other women who never can cook anything that isn't a menace to life, but who know instinctively the kind of hats and gowns that other women will be crazy to buy next spring and who are crackerjack office women and can put their fingers on anything in a filing cabinet in the dark.

So, poor, dear, tired, discouraged housewife, vainly trying to do the work you will never learn to do well, why not go back to your old job?

Have a heart-to-heart talk with your husband and ask him if he thinks that he could succeed in some calling for which he has no talent and if he would be happy trying to do something which did not appeal to him in which he had no real heart interest and in which he always failed. Ask him at least to let you try the experiment of hiring a woman to put in your place. Let her do the cooking and washing and scrubbing while you earn the money to pay her outside of the home doing the work you can do well.

It will make for the good of the family. Your husband will have something fit to eat a well-run home and a wife who will renew her youth and charm because she will be happy. —DOROTHY DIX.

It will make for the good of the family. Your husband will have something fit to eat a well-run home and a wife who will renew her youth and charm because she will be happy. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a girl of 22, secretly engaged to a man of 30. My family oppose the match very much because we are aristocratic, while he belongs to very plain people. He is very handsome, dresses and talks well, has a high school education and good business ability, but I must admit that I wouldn't own his mother and father and two brothers. I would be ashamed of them before my friends. This young man's manners are not just what I would like them to be. Do you think it wise to try to change a man's ways after you are married? I love my fiance with all my heart and feel that we are meant for each other, but I do not know whether to marry him or not.—S. F.

Answer—I should say not, if you are going to take such a snobbish attitude toward him and his family. Unless you can say to the man you are in beauty spots on a nicomarry: "Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God," you will find small happiness in being his wife.

No marriage is ever a successful marriage in which the wife feels herself superior to her husband. There is something in the feminine psychology that makes a woman want to look up to her husband, not down upon him, and certainly no man enjoys knowing that his wife considers herself better than he is and that she regards him as a social inferior.

Nor are you playing the game if you marry a man whose family you are not willing to accept. Remember that after you marry him they will be your family also. You will bear their name and their blood will flow in your children's veins.

Furthermore, it seems to me that nothing could be crueler than for a girl to marry a man with the deliberate intention in her heart of separating him from his own people, of taking him away from the mother who bore him, the father who sacrificed to educate him and the brothers and sisters who love him and with whom he has all memories in common.

What if these people have not had the social advantages that your parents have and their manners are not as polished? What if they are not as well educated? Some of the truest and noblest hearts in the world beat under shabby clothes. Some of the finest ladies and gentlemen I have ever known lacked parlor tricks and wouldn't have known their way among the forks and spoons at a formal dinner. Some of the wisest men and women I have ever known expressed opinions that would have done credit to Solomon in shaky grammar. Most of the great men in this country have come from just such plain people as these you despise.

And I certainly don't think it wise to try to change a man after you are married to him, for few men take kindly to correction. Marry a man you don't need to change or accept the man you marry as he is. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—My husband has a fatal disease and cannot live long. I have two little children that I will have to support after he is gone, and my mother-in-law has offered to keep us so long as I help with the work. She has a large rooming house, but she is very fault-finding and stingy and would begrudge the children what they ate. I know I would be very unhappy there. What shall I do?—ANXIOUS MOTHER.

Don't go to live with your mother-in-law. If you do, you will be merely an unpaid servant. A slave to her. Why don't you start a rooming house of your own? Or if you cannot do that while your husband is still living and able to care for the family, why don't you study some trade whereby you can support your children and so be prepared to take care of them when the crisis comes?

—DOROTHY DIX.

FOOD FACTS

Fadists Called Humbugs By Scientist At Conference

CHICAGO, Aug. 15. (US)—"Beware of the 'back to nature' bug," declared Dr. C. Robert Moulton in rebuking the food fadist before a meeting of the American Chemical association today.

"The man who advises you to eat raw foods and to revert to natare's ways," said the doctor, "may be plain humbug. He may not know the first principles of nature. Generally the food fadist and back to nature exponent is using such talk to get you to swallow his propaganda, hook, line and sinker.

"Of course it is wise," said the doctor, "to eat some raw food each day on account of the vitamin C which is destroyed by heat. But the fadist fails to tell us about the parasites and bacteria of a harmful nature that may be eaten with raw foods."

The one food fad, the whits bread phobia, anti-meat foolishness, all came in for rebuke by Dr. Moultin in his lecture.

Singer Tells Of Operatic Tour

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 15. (AP)—All countries like their music delivered in just a little different manner, according to Josephine Lucchese, coloratura soprano, who has just returned to her home here after a successful concert and operatic tour of Europe.

"In Italy they want the artist to present the arias exactly as the composer wrote them," Miss Lucchese, who is really Mrs. Adolfo Caruso, said. "They do not care for any interpretations from the artist. In Switzerland they want the artist to stand stiffly in one position and avoid all acting and expression. Hollanders like individualistic interpretations, and Germans indicate their approval and enthusiasm of a number by their complete silence. Instead of sending only flowers to the stage they send the products of their region, apples, grapes and other fruits often take the place of orchids."

FEMALE IS WEAKER SEX

But Duration of Life Is Longer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15. (US)—The female of the species is an easier prey to disease than the male.

But despite this fact woman has a longer average duration of life than mere man, the United States public health service announced today.

It took two and a half years to establish this rather startling fact. To get the proof the health service kept under close observation the entire population of a typical small city in the middle eastern section of the country.

There were 8,000 white persons in the town. They never suspected that their various ills were under the scrutiny of health experts.

The results of the study were rather confounding.

Up to ten years of age, the boys had more stomach aches, colds, and were more subject to infectious diseases than the girls.

Sickness Rate Higher

"But as soon as the adolescent period of life began the sickness rate of the girls became higher than that of boys and the female rate for practically all diseases was actually higher than that of the males throughout adult life," said the report.

"Women suffer more than men from sicknesses due to the common types of respiratory diseases, to digestive and nervous disorders and to diseases and conditions of the kidneys and heart.

"This in spite of the fact that the death rate among older women is lower than that of older men."

Another peculiar fact was established. At every age of life man has more accidents than women. Boys between the ages of 5 and 9 had a much higher rate of accidents than girls of the same age. Thereafter, while the males steadied down a bit, and the ratio decreased, it still topped the list even unto old age.

Collie Dog To Be Electrocuted

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15. (UP)—A 13-year-old collie dog is to be electrocuted here today for the crime of loyalty.

His owners, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Matus, were drowned 10 days ago and the dog has been on a hunger strike ever since.

The drowned couple had instructed neighbors to kill "Pal" if anything ever happened to them, but there was no one with heart for the business.

They came with food instead of chloroform, but "Pal" would allow no kindness. Either they would kill him or he would do it himself.

So the animal rescue league was called in and electricity will be used by someone who does not relish the job any more than the Matus neighbors.

Man Perfects New Fire Alarm on Death Bed

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 15. (AP)—The week he died Clarence R. George, city electrician and for 13 years secretary of the International Association of Electricians, worked for two days on a new kind of signal transmission for fire stations.

The system, patented, is to be studied by representatives of a national firm alarm concern, according to Fire Commissioner Allie Anderson. Charles Marian, expert for the company, went over the plans with George while the latter was on his death bed, and said that his company probably would purchase the patent rights from George's widow.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—We all like to lift the curtain and peek behind the scenes, so when Mr. M. H. Aylesworth, the president of the National Broadcasting company, invited me to visit his studio at Fifth avenue and Fifty-fifth street, I felt like a baseball fan who had been asked into the club house to hear what the players really talk about. It is a big, new building full of artificially cooled studios from which the programs are broadcast. Adjoining each is a control room where there is a radio receiving set and a sort of director who listens to the program. This compartment is sound proof, but there is a large piece of plate glass in it through which can be seen the performers. In another part of the building is a large room filled with clicking telegraph instruments which are reporting how the various numbers broadcast are reaching stations in the different parts of the nation. For instance, there comes in a brief dispatch from Pittsburgh which says:

"Quality good. Two minutes interruption because of static."

Kansas City reports one of the singers' voices registered too loud.

I got two general impressions from spending an evening in this beehive of activity where everything is done on a more precise schedule than on the New York Central railroad. First, all hands seemed to be primarily cheerful, and everybody the leaders, the musicians, the singers, the directors and the announcers—appeared to be having a good time. Second, all had become pantomimists. Because of the necessity for absolute silence in the sound proof room where the broadcasting takes place, it is essential there shall be no communication in the ordinary way so the performers reminded me of Dummy Taylor, the old Giant pitcher when I wrote baseball, who had to do all his conversing on his fingers and with gestures.

Each director, who watches the various programs, makes careful notes on them and turns in his report for discussion at a meeting the following day at noon. Maybe some of these boys are sour and pan the artists, but all seemed so pleased with everything I couldn't imagine a note of criticism creeping in. I did hear one director crabbing about a tenor singer. This fellow evidently thought he was cast in the role of David Wark Griffith fudging by his remarks.

"He didn't do bad with that song," he said after the tenor had quit, "but he is too erratic, and he has no routine. He ought to go to a good teacher and get a decent kit of tools before he starts to sing. Lock that door, Joe, so he can't come in here and ask me how he done. I don't want to tell him how lousy he was."

All the singers bawled into the microphone with one hand up to the right ear which aroused my curiosity so I asked my guide and escort

"They do that," he explained, "so they won't hear the music too loud and can catch themselves singing."

The Fish Don't Matter

A GREAT many men who go fishing every summer would have a hard time explaining just why they do it. It isn't for the fish, exactly; some of the finest moments in a fisherman's career come on afternoons when his hook goes utterly unmolested. Except among the most hardened devotees, the success of a fishing trip depends in no way on the size of the catch.

Herbert Hoover, who took to the California trout streams to get in shape for the presidential campaign, has found the words to explain it.

Fishing, according to Mr. Hoover, is more an escape from a jazz-mad world than any positive enjoyment of angling in itself. Indeed, he believes that as many as seven-eighths of the men who go fishing go to get away from something rather than to get at the fish. It is the only occupation, he says, in which the average busy man can be alone and not be criticized or suspected.

Probably there is a lot to that explanation.

The city dweller these days finds life a pretty complex affair. One doesn't have to be a candidate for the presidency to learn that solitude and privacy can be almost unattainable. Modern life is restless, founded on never ceasing movement. From the time a man gets up in the morning until he goes to bed at night there is no escaping it. He hurries through his breakfast, races for a trolley or speeds off in his auto to get to the office or shop, works all day at top speed, snatches 20 minutes for lunch, hurries home in the evening—and gets, nowhere, any moments in which he can relax, commune with himself or take stock of his place in the general scheme of things.

It is from that sort of thing that fishing offers a relief. And, obviously, this relief does not in the least depend on the size of the fisherman's catch. The mere atmosphere of the fishing country, with silent woods, lonely streams, quiet dawns and lazy afternoons when the sunlight comes down in wavering patches through rustling leaves to rippled water, is a tonic and a relief. Getting the fish is only a minor part of a man's business there. The real thing is solitude and freedom. A man can rediscover his own personality and build up barriers against the ceaseless assaults of modern city life.

It was remarked, a long time ago, that one must not try to live by bread alone. Too many of us are trying to do it these days. The fisherman knows the remedy. The luckless trout or bass is only an excuse. The real job at hand is idleness and meditation.

A Forward Move

AMERICANS should have nothing but support and commendation for Secretary Kellogg's action in negotiating a new tariff treaty with the Chinese Nationalists.

Press dispatches intimate that other powers, notably Britain and Japan, may look with cool eyes on this move. But, after all, it was a move demanded by simple justice. China has suffered from the inequal treaties long enough. We can be proud that America has taken the lead in moving to make amends.

If other powers, less willing to give up special privileges obtained by force, protest against the American action, they should be given to understand that this nation is solidly behind the move, without reservations.

Hoover Holds His Peace

WE HADN'T thought it possible, but it begins to appear that there is one man in public life in America who is even less talkative than President Coolidge.

When Secretary Hoover visited the president at Brule, Wis., the other day, newspaper photographers swooped down on them and took a great many pictures. At last they asked the two men to engage in conversation.

And then—wonder of wonders!—it developed that, while President Coolidge could fill in quite nicely with small talk, Secretary Hoover was quite taciturn.

A man who can make Calvin Coolidge look loquacious is, indeed, gifted with the gift of reticence.

Enforce the Food Laws

DR. HARVEY WILEY, famous pure food expert, charges that the recent prevalence of food poisoning in various parts of the country is due in large measure to the fact that the pure food laws are not being enforced.

Executive orders, Dr. Wiley charges, have crippled enforcement officers from obtaining strict observance of the federal laws.

It is hard to tell, at this moment, how far Dr. Wiley's charges may be justified. But the matter should be looked into, at any rate. The pure food laws were put on the statute books only after a very long and very hard fight. It would be an outrage if they were being allowed to lapse now.

ANOTHER COTTON SEED PRODUCT

The lowly cottonseed, once the despised by-product of the cotton industry, has yielded another of its component parts, which may in turn out-rival the oil in value. This product, xylose, was discovered in the cottonseed hull, and previously had been valued at $100 a pound, according to the bureau of standards, and since cottonseed hulls contain about 40 per cent xylose, there is a possibility that these hulls will increase in value. By using cottonseed hulls as the basis for this rare compound, it can be manufactured for a few cents a pound.

The chemists in discovering xylose also found that the hull of the cottonseed also contains about 50 per cent cellulose, which is valuable as a basis for rayon cloth, lacquer paints, nitrocellulose explosives and other products.

And who can tell whether or not these products of the cottonseed may not rival the value of the cotton itself within the next few years? The worthless cottonseed of a few years ago have produced valuable oil and meal, and now the practically worthless hulls seem ready to pay their part of the cost of growing cotton.

POETRY AND PROWESS

One of the worst things that usually happens to anyone who accomplishes some great feat or exploit is the fact that a lot of poetry is written about them. Lindbergh, it has been said, has had more poetry written to him about his epochal flight than any other living person.

POPE DEPLORES NEW TENDENCY

Lack of Modesty In Homes Pointed Out

ROME, Aug. 15. (UP)—The lack of Christian modesty in modern homes was deplored by Pope Pius XI today in an address at a vatican ceremony in honor of the venerable Paoli Frassinetti.

A decree of the congregation of sacred rites was read proclaiming that the venerable Paola, founder of the Sisters of Saint Dorothy, exercised virtue to an heroic degree, and hence was worthy of honor at Catholic altars.

The pope remarked that the example of Frassinetti in devoting to God her virginal purity exemplified the beauty of Christian modesty in an epoch when woman seems to do everything likely to destroy the characteristics making her more worthy than any other thing—namely, purity, simplicity and decency.

His holiness remarked that the tendency is true not only among those classed as worldly, but among others who would be unwilling to renounce the name of Christ.

"Such blindness," the Pope said, "can only be explained with the recollection of the fascination from vanity of which the gospel speaks with scathing words.

The Pope, speaking of the modern trend of women to be independent of men and make their own way in the world, said that if it means independence in the sense of the respect due to every conscience, then the church has no objections to such a tendency. The history of women's religious orders, he explained, shows that women saints were "self-made" and independent of men, opened their own way towards goodness.

Week Generally Fair To Cotton Production

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15. (UP)—The week was generally favorable for cotton except for some damage by high winds and excessive rain in the eastern portions. In the Carolinas there was a moderate amount of damage, but otherwise progress of cotton was fair to good. Heavy rains damaged Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi.

Weekly advance was mostly fair, but moisture is needed in Western Texas.

Makes Her Own Skin Bleach

Known for having one of the most beautiful skins in New York, Miss Mildred Ball, favorite artists' and photographers' model, recently made the statement that most of the New York models use a skin bleach of their own making.

According to Miss Ball, "we get three ounces of Orchard White from the druggist and add to it the juice of two lemons. This makes a full quarter pint of a perfectly harmless yet marvelously effective bleach. Applied to face, neck and arms, it bleaches any dark or discolored skin a beautiful rosy white. It also makes any rough or coarse skin soft and smooth. Many of the girls use it, too, for a tan and freckle bleach. Nothing like this wonderful mixture can be bought ready to use because it acts best when freshly prepared. The cost for several weeks' supply is only a few cents."—Adv.

MIDNIGHT

The midnight is a tender thing,
Of inky black, on silver wing.
So fragile and so delicate
That it is always very late;
My heart goes out to tender things
Of inky black, with silver wings,
And that's the reason I contrive
To help each midnight to arrive!

Breckenridge Man Boomed for Post

BRECKENRIDGE, Texas, Aug. 15. (AP)—A young army of possibly 150 veterans and auxiliary members of the Bernice Coles Post, 191 of the American Legion will march on Texarkana, Aug. 27, with the battle cry, "We Want Dean."

It all comes about by a movement gaining in popularity throughout Texas, to elect Ben Dean, an attorney of this city, state commander of the Texas Legion. At the district convention of the American Legion, held here the latter part of May, the 17th district went on record as favoring the Breckenridge lawyer as the next American Legion commander in Texas. Since that time the idea has been transferred to posts in other parts of the state, and daily letters of approval are being received by local officials and members of the Bernice Coles Post.

The Bernice Coles Post is entitled to 15 votes at the state convention and so 15 delegates and 15 alternates have been named to carry on at Texarkana when Texas and Arkansas fight again the battles of the world war.

Medicine Rated as Performing Near Miracles

Former Sufferers from Stomach Trouble Laud Discovery.

The Discoverer of Gordon's

Thousands of former sufferers from stomach and bowel troubles, many of whom had given up hope of ever being well—unqualifiedly endorse "Gordon's" (formerly Gordon's Antiseptic), the discovery of a well-known Dallas pharmacist. Some go so far as to rate it as performing "near miracles."

"Gordon's," an internal antiseptic, stops and prevents fermentation (souring of food matter), which is the greatest obstacle to the successful treatment of stomach and bowel disorders.

"Gordon's" goes right to the seat of the trouble because it exercises a distinctly antiseptic as well as digestive effect. It will soothe and heal any irritated or inflamed condition and bring quick relief in cases of indigestion, gas, dyspepsia, heartburn, bloating after meals, excess acid, bad breath, constipation, sick headache, and nervousness, when caused by faulty digestion. It will tone up the digestive organs and stimulate the stomach and bowels to their normal functions. A few doses will convince you.

"Gordon's" is made in liquid form. A large 8-ounce bottle, price $1.50—less than 3 cents a dose—at all druggists.

Lockney Toad Found Buried in Cement

Special to The Record News.

LOCKNEY, Texas, Aug. 15.—Further proof that it is possible for a West Texas horned frog to live without food or air or water for a long period of years lies in the discovery by local plumbers of a half grown member of the species buried in the solid concrete fountain of a residence in West Lockney that was built by Uncle Frank H. Ford, pioneer plainsman, 14 years ago. When extricated from the mass the frog was as flat as the proverbial pancake and as he came in contact with the air his body and limbs began again to take shape. He seemed to yawn as a person aroused from deep slumber and within five minutes began to hunt for food. The frog is now on display in the local chamber of commerce office.

Favorite Jokes of Famous People

As Told by Them to
FRANK ERNEST NICHOLSON

By F. SCOTT FITZGERALD

F. Scott Fitzgerald, the famous author, was born in St. Paul, Minn., on the 24th of September, 1896. Francis Scott Key Fitzgerald is his full name—Francis Scott Key having been a brother of his great-grandfather.

Besides his many short stories and novels he has written one play: "The Vegetable"—a comedy.

As a youth, he yearned to be a famous football star and "King of the World." He has accomplished neither of the desires—but he still cherishes both of them. He is congenitally shy but the fact is efficiently concealed.

"I was playing a game of golf recently," Mr. Fitzgerald told me while we were talking of favorite jokes, "and while crossing to the seventh tee I came upon a dear old lady sitting squarely in the center of the fairway about midway between the tee and the green—right in the path of the balls.

"'My dear lady,' I warned, 'don't you realize the danger in sitting out here?'

"'Oh, it's quite all right,' she replied. 'I'm sitting on a newspaper.'"

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Mr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

MENTAL BARNACLES

The road to progress is uphill and unpaved. It is much easier for us to stroll along the well trodden trails of the past than to forge our way into the unknown.

We always try to avoid new problems of thinking. Every new thing has been condemned in its day and generation by those who did not wish to make the effort to understand its meaning.

When railroads were first introduced, many objected because they said that human beings would be killed if they traveled over 20 miles an hour. Today we have aeroplanes traveling at almost 200 miles an hour. When automobiles were first introduced, the pessimists cried, "Alas, the farmers will be ruined, for there will be no longer be a demand for horses."

Fifty years ago, because it was so difficult to obtain a bath in the city, many lazy authorities claimed it was unhealthful—that one would catch a cold through too much bathing. The daily bath is now recognized as one of our best health habits.

When the first cold storage meat was shipped from Brazil to France 78 years ago, the French would not let it land, claiming that the meat would be dangerous to health. It was finally landed in England, and no doubt this very broadminded attitude of the English has contributed much to the eminence of their nation. It is well known that the English are extremely fond of their roast beef.

The arguments that you hear today against meat eating are remnants of the same reasoning used at the time—that flesh would spoil soon after it was killed, and become poisonous if kept too long. Those who have dared to investigate have found that properly killed meat is actually more wholesome after being refrigerated for several months.

Many people still believe that acids and milk make a bad combination. I recently read an article by one health expert who said he had proved there was nothing to good or bad combinations because he found that patients could eat fruit and drink milk at the same time without any bad consequences. He did not know it, but he was simply stating a discovery made by practical dietitians many years ago that milk combined perfectly with acids, being more easily digested in this combination than if used alone. He apparently did not know that if bread were added to this otherwise good mixture, excessive fermentation is set up, often producing very serious consequences.

Even today many physicians teach that athletes die young because of taking too much violent exercise. The truth is that their deaths are not caused by continuing to exercise as often as discontinuing to exercise, or by exercising too violently after they had been overeating.

Some doctors are still advising weak patients to stay in bed and eat plenty of rich, nourishing food. The advanced idea is to encourage the weak patient to exercise to gain strength and, at the same time, to select food of a better quality, and reduce the quantity.

Only a short time ago it was considered very dangerous to breathe night air. Now we know that this is the purest air, and every one is advised to sleep out of doors, winter and summer.

There is a science of life for you to study just as surely as there are rules of chemistry or mathematics, and food science cannot be learned by intuition or inspiration. There is no magic with which you can change the rules of chemistry that govern your body. Foods are good for you or they are not good for you, and food combines harmoniously or it does not. All of these facts you can learn by study and experimentation, and your experiences with pain should be lessons to assist you in understanding the problems of life.

Questions and Answers

Question: K. L. asks: "What would cause one to have to take a deep breath every minute? If I don't I feel like choking. I am healthy otherwise and gaining weight, and have no pain whatever in my chest."

Answer: If you would take deep-breathing exercises two or three times a day I am sure you would lose the desire to take the deep breath every minute. It might be well for you to stop whatever you are doing several times during the day and inhale and exhale several times to the extreme. Your lungs no doubt want more air, and the deep breathing supplies this.

Question: Mrs. R. B. asks: "Does milk form a solid in the stomach?"

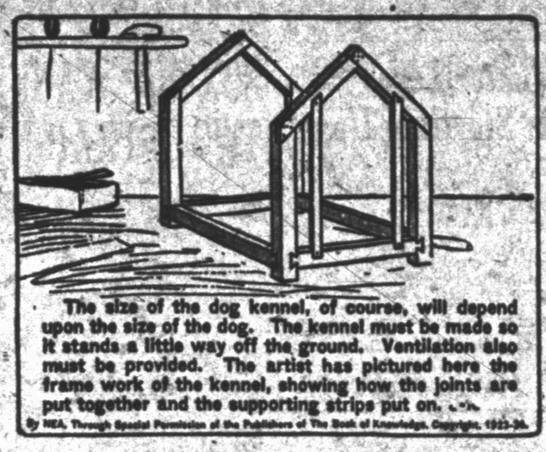

Answer: If milk is taken in large swallows it will form large curds in the stomach and is then not easily digestible. However, if small amounts of lemon juice are taken with the milk, or if the milk is taken slowly, the curds will be smaller, in which form the digestive juices can have a better effect in digesting these curds.

Question: G. H. Writes: "Please answer these questions through the column: (1) What does 'paresis' mean? (2) What was the cause of a pain around the heart when I carried a heavy load up a flight of stairs? Every time I tried to breathe or bend over I felt the pain. It lasted about two hours."

Answer: "Paresis" means a form of brain degeneration, and is a very serious and usually fatal disorder. The pain you tell me about may have been due to heart strain, or to the less serious but painful symptoms which come from an injury to the cartilages between the ribs. If you could feel the source of the pain with your fingers on your ribs, it was due to the latter cause and not to any heart injury.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE — (374) A Dog Kennel

The size of the dog kennel, of course, will depend upon the size of the dog. The kennel must be made so it stands a little way off the ground. Ventilation also must be provided. The artist has pictured here the frame work of the kennel, showing how the joints are put together and the supporting strips put on.

By NEA, Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge. Copyright, 1923-28.

Floor boards should be at least three-fourths of an inch thick for comfort. Lay them across from side to side on top of the lower frame pieces.

Sides are made of wood running from front to back, and in front and rear from side to side, as shown, with allowance made for the entrance.

The roof, as the drawing above shows, is plainly made. Where the boards meet, strips can be nailed lengthwise to make the roof shed rain. Five or six holes should be bored through the side walls just under the roof to provide ventilation. Dark green is a good color to use, since it is a serviceable shade.

CHAMPIONS HAMMER 20 HITS TO WIN SEVENTEENTH IN ROW

JENKINS BATS NO. 23 AND 24

Homers by Lamb, Swenson Aid 14 to 6 Victory

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

If the pitching doesn't hold up, the batters just go out and get more base hits and runs. Referring to the Spudders.

Joe Kiefer, who like the girl who had a curl and when she was good was very very good and when she was bad she was horrid, had an off-day yesterday. In other words, Joe's delivery was easy for the Cats to hit. But Wichita Falls athletes hammered Paul Wachtel and Lefty Johns for 20 knocks, which was more than sufficient to win the pastime, 14 to 6.

It was the seventeenth consecutive victory for the Spudders, who increased their lead over the Houston Buffs to eight games while the demoralized Bayou city tossers were sustaining their sixth loss in a row this at the hands of San Antonio.

Mr. Thomas Jenkins, the league leader in home runs, increased his margin by smacking a brace of circuit clouts, in the second and third innings. They were Tom's 23rd and 24th homers. Both were off Wachtel and the second came with a comrade on the base lines. Swenson, Lamb and Bischoff also smashed circuit drives.

The Heavy Hitters

Jenkins, Lamb, Stanton and Benton banged three hits each. Lyman whaled two doubles in addition to his homer; George smacked a triple, double and single, and one of Benton's drives went for two bases. Turgeon and Kiefer got two hits apiece. "Fig" Newton, the Cat rookie, got three hits.

Wachtel gave up seven runs and 10 hits and was relieved in the third inning after Jenkins and Swenson had clouted successive four-ply drives. Johns allowed an equal number of tallies and knocks.

The Cats scored six runs, their total for the day and nine hits off Kiefer, when Herbie Cobb went to the hill in the fourth with two out. Herb yielded five hits scattered along as many innings except in the sixth when the Atzmen bunched two. Cobb struck out three batters in the ninth.

Game Fast

Despite the heavy score, the game was exceptionally fast, being played in the fast time of one hour and 43 minutes. It was marked by fast fielding, the Spudders playing errorlessly while the Panthers made only one boot.

Turgeon again led Galloway's athletes in a display of brilliant defensive work, a continuation of superb play that has marked the starry keystoner's work in recent weeks.

A fast double play started by Benton and further efficient outfielding helped Spudder hurlers.

Cats Score in Second

Riley walked in the first inning after two were out and Bonowitz lifted to Fitzgerald. Benton started the Spudder half with a double to center but the next three batters went out.

The Cats scored one in the second and would have had more had it not been for Turgeon's flashy work. Bischoff hit over the left field wall. Turgeon threw out Richardson. Newton beat out a roller down the third base line but was forced at second by Ramage, Turgeon to Benton. Wachtel singled to right, Ramage going to third. Turgeon went far to his left to knock down Moore's harsh bounder.

Jenkins smote his 23rd circuit drive of the season and his 100th run to open the Spuds' half. Swenson skied to Bonowitz. Stanton speeded to first on a tap to Wachtel. Smith singled to center, Stanton going to third. Kiefer hit sharply past Riley, Stanton scoring and Smith reaching third. Smith scored while Benton was forcing Kiefer, Ramage to Richardson. Turgeon singled to center, Benton going to third. Fitzgerald singled to right, Benton tallying the fourth run, and Turgeon was out at third on Newton's throw on a close decision by Umpire Donahue.

Riley was given his second transportation in the third after one was out. Lamb came in for Bonowitz' fly. Bischoff was called out on strikes.

Spudders Tally More

The Spudders hammered Wachtel off the hill in the third and hit Johns hard. Lamb led off with a double to left. Jenkins bashed his second homer, this over the left field barrier, Lamb ambling in ahead of him. Swenson also hit over the left field fence. Johns relieved Wachtel. Stanton banged the right field wall for three bases. Smith's lift to Newton scored Stanton for the fourth tally in that round. Benton flied to Bonowitz. Rollings tossed out Turgeon.

Atz' men did some scoring on their own account in the fourth. Richardson and Newton singled to center. Ramage was called out on strikes. Johns flied to Fitzgerald. Moore singled to left, Richardson scoring and Newton going to third. Rollings bounced a sharp single to Stanton, Newton tallying and Moore going to third. Riley doubled past first, Moore scoring and Rollings stopping at third. Bonowitz singled to center, Rollings and Riley tallying the fourth and fifth runs that round. Herb Cobb went to the mound and passed Bischoff. Stanton retired Richardson on a grounder.

Jenkins' third hit drove home another run. Fitzgerald, first up, strolled. Lamb laid down a perfect bunt, Johns to Riley. Jenkins hit sharply to left, Fitzgerald scoring and Tom was out at first on Bonowitz' peg to Bischoff. Swenson rolled to Johns.

Newton started the fifth with his third hit, a double that bounded over Fitz' head. Ramage was called out on strikes again. Johns lifted to Jenkins. Moore walked. Lamb took Rollings' fly.

Benton Hits Again

Stanton hoisted to Bonowitz. Smith strolled. Newton was under Cobb's lift. Benton singled to right center, Smith going to third. Turgeon forced Benton, Richardson unassisted.

Riley and Bonowitz singled to right in the sixth. Benton started a fast double play, completed by Turgeon and Stanton, on Bischoff's grounder, Riley going to third. Richardson flied to Fitzgerald.

Ramage robbed Fitzgerald of a hit by ranging to his left for a low-built hopper. Lamb socked his homer over the left field obstruction. Jenkins was out on strikes. Richardson took Swenson's pop.

Lapan went back of the plate.

Cobb halted Newton in the seventh with a strikeout. Turgeon hauled down Ramage's high bounder. Johns singled to left. Moore forced Johns, Benton to Turgeon.

Stanton Crashes Double

Stanton again crashed the fence, this time in left and for two bases. Lapan singled to left, Stanton racing home. Bischoff threw wild to second on Cobb's bunt. Benton's tap to Johns filled the bases. Turgeon singled past Rollings, Lapan and Cobb scoring. Fitz hit into a double play, Ramage to Rich to Riley, Benton going to third. Lamb walloped the left field wall for his second double, Benton scoring the fourth run. Jenkins fanned.

Rollings rolled to Turgeon in the eighth. Riley grounded to Stanton. Bonowitz flied to Lamb.

Moore went back for Swenson's drive. Rollings threw out Stanton. Lapan walked. Cobb flied to Newton.

Bischoff's high bounder over Swenson in the ninth went for two bases. Richardson struck out. Newton also fanned. As did Ramage.

Bisons Drop Six Straight Before Small Crowd

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 15. (AP)—The Buffs today still had their damper down, and Frank Gibson's San Antonio Bears poured it on, 10 to 2.

It was the sixth consecutive reverse for the first half champions, and as the Wichita Falls Spudders won their 17th game, the Bisons are now eight games from the top.

Christian got by in fine fashion, while Boggess favored the small gathering with some fancy fielding.

Notes of the Game

Bill Shores probably will oppose Jimmy Walkup today in the final of the series, the last game here until Aug. 30.

Newton, a Cat acquisition from the Arizona State league, looks like a "find." In addition to his three hits, one a double, he fielded splendidly.

Riley, Bonowitz and Bischoff each banged a pair of blows.

Wally Swenson didn't have a fielding chance.

Turgeon accepted nine chances, some of them difficult, without a bobble.

Of the 34 hits, 14 were for extra bases, including five home runs, one triple and eight doubles.

Tilden Beaten and Hunter Loses To Texan in Startling Upsets

Bill Defeated by Fritz Mercur and Francis Trounced by Berkeley Bell in Straight Sets Each

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 15. (UP)—Two startling tennis upsets within one hour of each other in the eastern turf singles championships at the Westchester Biltmore Country club today left William T. Tilden, Philadelphia, and Francis T. Hunter, New Rochelle, N. Y., ranked No. 1 out 2 nationally, beaten in straight sets.

Fritz Mercur, Harrisburg, Pa., ranked No. 15 nationally, defeated Tilden, 6-4, 6-3, and Berkeley Bell, Austin, Texas, ranked No. 23 nationally, defeated Hunter, 6-4, 7-5.

Bell is 19 and a student of the University of Texas. He won the Southampton invitation tournament on Saturday and was runnerup to Julius Seligson, New York, for the metropolitan turf court championship two weeks earlier.

While either star had been figured to lose, credit cannot be taken from either Mercur or Bell for their consistently good tennis and court generalship. Neither winner ever played better in his life and while it must be conceded that neither Tilden nor Hunter was at the top of his game, the surprise of the gallery was more at the superlative tennis of Mercus.

Bell outplayed Hunter clearly in both sets, winning not only the match but the applause of the gallery, which was for him from the start.

First National Beats Wichita State by 21-10

A slugfest was uncorked in the Bank league baseball game Wednesday afternoon on the Junior College diamond when First National bank defeated the Wichita State bank by the score of 21 to 10. A home run with the bases choked by Pitcher C. Smith, of the winners, featured the day.

C. Smith had a perfect day at the bat with home run, two singles and a walk in four trials. Reiger also poled three hits and a walk for a perfect day. Hewell and Landis hit three for four to lead the attack of the Wichita State nine, both of them getting three baggers.

The league leading City National bank team will go after their fifth win in a row this afternoon on the Junior College diamond with the Wichita State bank team trying to hand them their first defeat. Score:

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

THE IVORY HUNTERS will be following our Spudders around the circuit when the news of George Stanton's phenomenal hitting is noised about. And it will be known, from Florida to California; indeed, it is known by this time. News travels fast in the baseball world, and the mysterious means of communication that was used by the people we stole land from, (which turned out to be oil), Lo, NOT the poor Indian, was no more speedy than the grapevine route of baseball.

◆ ◆ ◆

The way that boy is banging the ball is positively brutal. This was written before yesterday's ball game and doesn't include that pastime. But prior to that encounter George had hit safely in eight consecutive games. In those pastimes he banged out 14 hits in 26 times at bat. Included in those 14 hits were three home runs, one with the bases filled; one with two on and one with one on; one triple, five doubles and five singles. That is a total of 30 bases. With those 14 blows he drove home 12 runners and helped advance three other comrades. In those last eight games he scored 10 runs.

◆ ◆ ◆

THERE NEVER WAS any doubt that Stanton is a potential major league ball player in the opinion of this writer. A month or so ago in this column I called attention to the fact that he is a big league prospect; that his advance by next season was certain. At that time Stanton was not getting hits with frequency. But he was smacking the ball hard and I knew that eventually those drives would turn to base knocks. Well, judging from the way he's going now, the kid won't have to wait until next year to go up. I think he is the BEST prospect in the Texas league today!

◆ ◆ ◆

STANTON IS A BIG league fielder. He showed that to my satisfaction the very opening day of the season. The game was with the Shreveport Sports. Shreveport had a runner on second; none out. The batter bunted to George. Quick as a flash the boy grabbed the ball, and chucked it to third, to retire the surprised runner. That was perfect mental and physical coordination and could not have been accomplished by any but a great ball player.

◆ ◆ ◆

Stanton has all natural attributes of a star ball player. In addition to his physical qualifications he is intelligent. He isn't egotistical; is in fact, a mighty decent kid, with no trace of "swell head." But he has confidence, which all good athletes must possess. And while not a swaggering, aggressive type, the boy is plenty pugnacious and base runners aren't going to step on his toes and pitchers won't dust him off with impunity.

◆ ◆ ◆

THE FITTING IN of Stanton into the Spudder machine and his development as big league material is another proof of the sagacity of J. Alvin Gardner. A veteran baseball man recently made the observation that the president of the Spudders is one of the greatest club owners in the game. That's taking in a lot of territory, but such praise is well merited. The production of pennant winning teams and the sale of stars to big league clubs by Gardner is remarkable. He is a great club head, in the assembling of players for his club, and in the acquiring and sale of young players.

◆ ◆ ◆

STANTON CAME to the Spudders from the Virginia league, a class B circuit, now defunct. He supplanted George Lafayette, of the Dixie championship club of 1927, who was sold to Fort Worth. Lafayette didn't last out half the season with the Cats, while Stanton probably will be sold this campaign or not later than next year. That makes it unanimous for Mr. Gardner, doesn't it?

ROBERTI WINS ON RISKO FOUL

John Leading When Fight Ends in Sixth Round

By GEORGE KIRSEY
United Press Staff Correspondent.

EBBETS FIELD, BROOKLYN, Aug. 15. (AP)—Roberto Roberti, a strong man from Italy, took a long step up the trail which leads toward the heavyweight boxing championship when he defeated Johnny Risko, the Cleveland baker boy, by a foul in the sixth round of their scheduled 10-round fight here tonight.

Risko, rated as one of the strongest contenders for the heavyweight crown vacated by Gene Tunney, was leading by a wide margin over his heavier and more awkward opponent. He had won three of the first five rounds on points and another round—the third—was even.

Then, in the sixth round, when the spectators had settled back for a long fight with Risko almost certain to win on points, Risko landed a low blow to the Italian giant.

Roberti dropped to the canvas, writhing with pain, and the referee decided that Risko should lose by a foul. The low blow was a left hook, apparently poorly aimed.

Carl Mays Released By Cincinnati Reds

CINCINNATI, Aug. 15. (UP)—Carl Mays, veteran ball pitcher, was given his unconditional release by the Cincinnati Reds today. He has been ailing of several causes almost the entire season.

Mays was with the New York Yankees for four years, which club sold him to the Reds in 1924. He broke in the major leagues with the Boston Red Sox in 1915.

THE FORBIDDEN DOOR

— by Herman Landon

The butler executed a cramped bow, for he had grown old and rheumatic in the service of the Martenets, and withdrew. Ernest Mallingham was alone in the room that had been Winthrop Gaston-Martenet's library. A large room it was, cluttered with strange curios from many lands, most of them neither useful nor decorative, yet holding a certain charm for delvers into the quaint and bizarre. Only Winthrop Gaston Martenet, erratic and tireless explorer into the mysteries of life, could have massed together such an astounding collection of odds and ends.

"Old Winthrop's junk shop" was what Mallingham called the room. He had adopted this sneering designation partly as a matter of self-justification, for he was secretly a little ashamed of the morbid fascination the library held even for him. Old Winthrop had been dead these seven years, yet the room had never lost the mystical flavor of his personality. It hovered over the huge redwood writing desk, it was ingrained in drab tapestries and unsightly bits of statuary, it lingered in the shadows that were never wholly dispelled by the light of day.

It was a strange, vital and dominant personality, and Mallingham resented its hold upon him. This revolving ball of clay, for instance—

He paused in his wanderings over the room and with a dry and twisted smile contemplated Old Winthrop's handiwork, a white-and-blue globe suspended between antlers of steel and representing the revolutions of the earth upon its axis. Very slowly, at a pace scarcely perceptible to the eye, the ball was rotating. On it fell the red light of a hooded lamp which might have been abducted from some joss-house altar. Just now it was illuminating the outer edges of the sprawling continent of Asia. By and by the peaks of the Himalayas would be dipped in the shimmer of dawn.

The Old Scientist's Mysteries

The practical sense of Ernest Mallingham was baffled. The fact that the ball was only a trifling thing, one of the many quaint conceits which Winthrop Gaston Martenet had devised while resting from more serious labors, did not ease his bafflement. For all any one could see, it might be propelled by the same cosmic force that caused the earth itself to pursue its eternal voyage through the ether. But that was, of course, preposterous. It did not satisfy the materialist in Mallingham. His feelings were those of a small boy toward his watch; he wanted to pick the thing to pieces and see what made it move.

It was strange that, though Old Winthrop had been dead for seven years, nobody had ever suggested doing such a thing. People seemed reluctant to pry very far into the heritage of secrets which the erratic old scientist had left behind him. It was almost as if they feared to profane Old Winthrop's memory. Consequently nobody had ventured to expose the mechanism that made the globe revolve. It was Mallingham's firm conviction that a mechanism of some sort there must be. At one time he had thought that the supporting column, firmly rooted to the floor, might contain hidden wires which connected the sphere with the electric current in the house. But this theory had been shattered one night when there had been a mishap at the power plant which plunged this section of the city into darkness. Mallingham had chanced to be a visitor at the Martenet house that night, and he had received something of a shock upon discovering that the ball was still pursuing infinitesimal whirling motion.

He fixed a half resentful, half-humorous gaze on the sphere. Old Winthrop, a man long since dead, seemed to mock him with this wraithy contrivance of his. It was a sensation at once ridiculous and inescapable. Well, some day he would strip the mystery bare, and then he would probably laugh at the disgusting simplicity of it all. But not now. Julia Martenet might not like it, and it was just as well to humor her in trivial matters. Besides, he would have plenty of opportunities to gratify his curiosity later.

With a shrug he turned away and fell to pacing the floor. He was a large man, six feet tall and broad of shoulder and chest, yet he moved with a gait that was curiously light. There was the faintest tinge of gray in his black, crisp hair, which waved upward in a way that suggested the leashed impetuosity of the man. His features were dark, regular and impassive, but now and then there was a hint of mystery, of subdued drama in the slow flickers of the cold, gray eyes.

"Julia is late again," he mumbled, after a glance at his watch.

The Woman of It

He stood at the window, looking out over the East river, its muddy expanse spangled with the lights of a grotesque variety of craft. It was a curious location for a home, and especially for a home as large and pretentious as this; but then Winthrop Gaston Martenet, who had bought the ground and built the house, had always done curious things. The revolving ball was only one trivial sample of his variegated activities and erratic imagination. Yes, a man of queer impulses and strange deeds. And some of those impulses and deeds seemed to live after him. It was sometimes a little difficult to realize, even after these seven years, that Old Winthrop was dead.

An impatient chuckle escaped Mallingham. As always on his visits here, the atmosphere of the house was exerting a demoralizing effect on his nerves. The air was charged with a strange quality, something which the senses could not grasp but which formed distorted pictures in his imagination. Would it be possible to persuade Julia Martenet to leave her father-in-law's house and move into less depressing surroundings? This place, with its somber memories and dreary associations, was not a fit habitat for a young and vivacious widow—and deucedly charming woman into the bargain. It was a mystery to Mallingham why she had not escaped soon after the death of her husband, Old Winthrop's only son. It could not be that she was detained here by bonds of sentiment. Julia was not the sentimental kind. Mallingham recalled how buoyantly she had rallied from the shock of her husband's death. And today, he was certain, Maxwell Martenet was only a pale memory that recurred but rarely in the widow's thoughts.

For that matter, Maxwell had been the type of man doomed for early oblivion. His personality, unlike that of his eccentric and picturesque father, had been obscure and colorless, the kind that fails to impress itself on others and makes no appeal to the imagination. Whereas Winthrop Gaston Martenet had departed from life with all the clamor and brilliance of an exploding rocket, the passing of his son a few years later had been like the fading out of a film. The father had stamped his personality on every one and everything within reach; the son had been the neutral type of man whom one can meet a thousand times and instantly forget. Small wonder, then, that Julia Martenet had borne her widowhood so lightly.

Her Late Husband

Mallingham could not reflect upon the fates of the two men without a sense of philosophic irony. Seven years ago the elder Martenet had died a tranquil and undramatic death in his bed, yet his passing had been like the climax of an epic. The death of his son Maxwell, three years later, had been surrounded by many strange circumstances which would have created a sensation. There was even room for speculation as to where and how he had died. There had been a few mysterious hints, but they had been dropped quickly.

It had simply been impossible to conceive of Maxwell Martenet coming to a dramatic end. The dull and unheroic character of his life had silenced in advance any suspicion which might have arisen after his death. He had not been of the stuff that dramatic figures are made of.

Mallingham had often wondered about these things. He had wondered, for instance, whether Julia Martenet knew more about her husband's fate than she had divulged. He had no reason for believing that she did, but the thought came to him now and then. He had almost resolved to put the question to her bluntly some day. Julia had been Maxwell's second wife. His first wife had died some 25 years ago, a year or two after the birth of a son who was still living and who, it was said, possessed many of his grandsire's characteristics and none of his father's.

That second marriage had been a strange affair. It would probably have created something of a sensation but for the fact that people refused to become excited over anything that Maxwell Martenet did. He had been well advanced in the 50s at the time, and it was not apparent that he had anything in common with his youthful wife, who through the marriage acquired a stepson about her own age. Perhaps Maxwell had fallen a victim to one of those middle-age infatuations that sometimes turn out so disastrously. That could be readily understood, but it was not so easy to understand why the sparkling and vivacious Julia had consented to marry a man more than twice her own age. It could not have been love on her part; of that Mallingham had been certain since the beginning. It was more likely that Julia, looking at her wooer through the fancy-weaving eyes of youth, had imagined Maxwell possessed of some of the romantic glamour that had attached to his father, Old Winthrop. If so, she must have been quickly disillusioned.

A "Dangerous" Woman

Mallingham smiled, and it was the smile of a man who views life through the eyes of experience and cynicism. A woman still young and bereft of her illusion was an engaging phenomenon, even in this sophisticated age. Such a woman was likely to prove dangerous, but the dangerous quality was an added attraction in Mallingham's eyes. His smile lingered, mellowing ever so slightly the cold grayness of his eyes as he went from thought to thought. Yes, there were several matters of which he would have to speak to Julia. Among other things, he would have to scold her for keeping him waiting so long.

Gradually he grew impatient. He was resentful of the sombering effect which the room exercised upon his mood. Why did the old butler always insist upon ushering visitors into the library? The drawing room was less depressing, although the lingering spell of Winthrop Gaston Martenet was to be felt even there. The butler, of course, was an automaton enslaved by regulations. It had always been Old Winthrop's custom to receive callers in the library, and Huggles could not shake off the habit. He had earned a rest; Julia ought to dismiss him.

As if to turn his thoughts into more pleasant channels, he viewed himself in an old Venetian mirror. Without being vain, a man of 45 could indulge a justifiable sense of satisfaction in looking a man of 30. Not a wrinkle, not a superfluous ounce of flesh anywhere. He wore his perfectly tailored evening clothes with an air all his own. He was trim and straight, his face was firmly molded, there was an intensely vital gloss to his crisp, black hair. Ernest Mallingham could smile at the thought of how he was cheating the ravenous years.

Enter Julia

Yet, as he turned away, the smile became a grimace. There was the globe again, with its infernal and everlasting motion derived from a power secreted in a dead man's brain. The thing was almost ghostly. It was getting on his nerves. He wished Julia would order it removed. If she would not, Mallingham would smash it to bits some day. Perhaps then the spell that hung like a shadow over the room would be shattered. The spell of Old Winthrop, peeper behind the curtain of nature's mysteries!

Absorbed in his contemplation of the globe, he did not notice that another person had entered the room. He started as a voice, full-throated and musical, spoke:

"Hello, crystal gazer!"

Julia was standing beside him.

Julia Martenet's beauty had converted many an otherwise sensible man into a fool. Mallingham had long admired her, enjoyed her sparkling vivacity, refreshed himself with the tonic qualities of her intensely feminine moods, found relaxation in her bright and inconsequential talk—but he had kept his head. As for his heart, there were times when Julia was certain that he had none. The apparent absence of that organ made him a man of mystery in her eyes, and mysteries were tantalizing and attractive things.

"Worth Waiting For"

As she stood beside him now, her head with its bobbed pale-yellow curls reached barely to his shoulder. Her features were very small, yet there was something robustly vital in them. In contrast with the gauzy and ethereal blue of her eyes, her mouth seemed a trifle too vivid and too pronounced, and it often struck Mallingham as amusing that he alone of all men should have noticed this one defect. Instead of acting as a blemish, however, it only rendered her face all the more piquant.

Mallingham took out his watch. "You have kept me waiting exactly 45 minutes."

"Don't scold, Ernest. I returned only half an hour ago. Huggles told me you were here, but I remembered I was going out with you this evening, so I ran up and dressed. Imagine a woman dressing in 30 minutes! You ought to feel flattered."

Mallingham studied her critically. A dress of palest pink and light as the foam of the sea, with only a slight splash of rose at the waist, set off superbly the gleaming whiteness of her arms and shoulders. His frown melted, yet his admiration was impersonal and detached. In the same way he might have inspected an exquisitely chisled statue. As she stood beside him, Julia was a vision of delicate loveliness, a subtle commingling of the charms of tender youth and the florescent maturity of 26 years.

"O, I forgive you," he said carelessly. "You were worth waiting for."

She smiled in a pleased way. There was something about Mallingham which made his curt and infrequent compliments far more satisfying than the long and studied speeches of other men.

"I wish, though," he went on, with a scowl at the revolving ball, "you would tell Huggles to pitch this abomination out the window."

"What—that? Oh, I couldn't. It would be a—sort of sacrilege."

"Sacrilege?" Mallingham laughed shortly. "Do you hold the memory of your late father-in-law so sacred that you can't get rid of this piece of junk?"

"No; you know it isn't that. I just feel it belongs here. That's a foolish reason, but—Well, it's hard to explain." She glanced at the jeweled hexagon of platinum on her wrist. "We'll have to start at once or we shall be late."

"Sit down," said Mallingham. "I've changed my mind. We are not going out this evening. There are several things on my mind—things I have wanted to take up with you for a long time—and we are going to discuss them tonight."

A Serious Discussion

A little frown gathered over her eyes, but evidently her disappointment was mitigated by curiosity. She composed herself languidly on the sofa, forming a vivid touch against the drab upholstery.

"What a bear you are, Ernest! And you sound so dreadfully serious. Has anything happened?"

Mallingham crossed the floor twice before he replied. "Yes, but we'll come to that later. It has just occurred to me that it is about time I understood certain things that have been puzzling me. Julia, whatever made you marry Maxwell Martenet?"

"What a question! How should I know? I was very young. I suppose I acted on impulse. People do a lot of things on impulse."

"Was that all?"

Julia lowered her eyes in thought. Whenever she looked down her eyelids seemed very large, like elongated petals drooping over the corona of a flower.

"Mean to tell me," asked Mallingham, "that it was sheer impulse which made you marry a middle-aged widower with a grown son? Maxwell had no attractions, no personal charm. He was not wealthy, as wealth is measured in these days. He had no social or professional standing. Viewed in even the most charitable light, he was the nearest approach to a nobody.

"Yet you say you married him on an impulse. Expect me to believe that?"

"People sometimes commit suicide and murder on impulse, don't they? Why shouldn't they marry on impulse?"

Mallingham gave her a searching look. A half-smile, inquisitive and a little challenging, parted her lips as she snuggled against the cushions.

"I Want the Truth"

"Well, maybe so," he admitted. "That little word impulse covers a multitude of follies. We'll let it go at that. Here is another thing I have wanted to ask you about. Maxwell died four years ago—at least, it is the supposition that he died then. What do you know about his death?"

"Nothing except what I have already told."

"Which was nothing. I want the truth, Julia."

A little shudder shook the slight figure on the sofa. She sat up, her eyes widening. "I don't understand you. Why do you look at me that way? Why do you speak to me in this tone? I know no more than anybody else. Maxwell left home one morning and never came back. What else is there to know?"

"What else?" echoed Mallingham jeeringly. "If any other man had disappeared under similar circumstances, there would have been all sorts of ugly suspicions. But people could never imagine anything dramatic happening to your husband. When he disappeared it was merely supposed that he had wandered away and died. Does that supposition satisfy you?"

"Well, why shouldn't it?" Julia resumed her languorous position, resting her blond head on her shapely elbow. She seemed her own cool self-possessed self again. "What's happened, Ernest? You never talked to me about these things before."

"All the more reason why we should discuss them now. Will you answer my question?"

She tossed her head defiantly. "You have no right to ask it."

"Right?" He laughed. "No, perhaps not—but I am asking it just the same, and you are going to answer me."

"You Killed Him!"

He stepped in front of her and stood smiling down at her as one might smile at a willful child. Gradually her face changed. There was a look of resentment and mutiny, but a trace of dread as well.

"But I can't tell you anything, Ernest. All I know is what I have already told. Maxwell had no enemies. Nobody had a reason for—for harming him. He was happy and contented. I am sure he did not mean to disappear. Maybe he was taken ill—his heart was rather weak, you know—or maybe he met with an accident. Such things happen."

"Yes, I know—but it is rather curious his body was never found. Of course, he might have come to his death under circumstances that eradicated every trace of him. That's conceivable, but hardly probable. I wonder——" He broke off, his cold gray eyes regarding her more searchingly. "Julia, look at me!"

She lifted her eyes with what seemed a fierce exertion of will power. A faint, challenging, mocking smile was on her lips, but it faded away in a tremor.

As if she had seen something in his face that frightened her, her eyes fell again.

Mallingham laughed sarcastically. "Just as I thought. You killed him."

"No!" The short syllable burst from her lips in a little scream. She twisted her hands hysterically. "No—no! I didn't—I never—— You have no right to talk to me like this."

A Straight Story

Mallingham stood smiling down at her—a smile of amusement with no pity in it. "If you didn't kill him, what are you so excited about? There now—compose yourself. We don't want any hysterics. You know I have no interest in what happened to your husband. I am merely concerned on your account. Your denials aren't very convincing. Your acting is far from perfect. What you need is a few rehearsals."

"Rehearsals?"

Mallingham pulled up a chair and sat down beside her. "Yes, somebody else may ask you the very same questions I am asking you tonight. That's why I am urging you to get your answers in shape."

She gave him a long, trembling look. "You have something to tell me. What is it?"

Mallingham lighted a cigarette. His fingers were curiously fine and white for such a big man.

"Hannan is in town," he announced.

She lay rigidly still. "Oh, Hannan," she said dully.

"Yes, Hannan Martenet, your step-son. I happened to drop in at the Illington this evening and learned by chance that he is registered there. He will be surprised to discover what a youthful and charming step-mother he has."

Julia looked a little dazed. Her shimmering gown lay like a spray of ocean froth over her slender figure.

"Hannan in town," she whispered. "And stopping at the Illington. I wonder why he didn't come here. This is his home."

"Quite true, but perhaps he takes after his grandfather rather than his father. If so, he will naturally do the exact opposite of what is expected. You have never seen him, have you?"

"Yes, once. But I had only a glimpse of him. And that was years ago, long before I married Maxwell. I have no recollection of him at all."

A Potential Villainess

"That's natural. I understand he has been a rover ever since he left college in the middle of his second year. Too much wanderlust, I imagine, and that's why I suspect there is more of Old Winthrop in him than of Maxwell. Well, we shall soon see. Probably life has tamed him a bit. He must be—let me see—about 27 now—a year older than his fascinating step-mother."

Julia's fair head was resting among the pillows again. Mallingham's easy tone appeared to have quieted her.

"I wonder what has brought him back to America," she murmured.

"Hard to tell. Perhaps he needs money. Or maybe he is just curious about things. At any rate, since he is here you will probably see more or less of him. Naturally he will ask all sorts of questions.

"I understand that at the time of Maxwell's death he was hobnobbing with cannibals somewhere in the South Seas. The cablegram didn't reach him till months later. He will want to know a little about everything, of course. That's why I advise you to be prepared."

"You speak as if I had some dreadful secret on my conscience."

"Every woman is a potential villainess."

Julia could smile again. "Flattery and calumny in one breath! What shall I tell Hannan?"

Mallingham considered. "Don't dare tell him the truth. You must tell him a convincing lie—but be sure it is convincing."

A shadow that might have been a mask for thought passed over Julia's exquisite face. Her poise was deserting her again. There was both fear and appeal in the look she leveled at the man sitting beside her.

Mallingham, noting her vacillation, permitted himself a mephistophelian smile.

"Among other things," he suggested, "Hannan may ask you where Maxwell went the day he disappeared. Do you know?"

"No!"

Mallingham regarded her steadily.

"That was a little too emphatic, my dear. A righteous person doesn't find it necessary to utter words of one short syllable with such vehemence. So you have no idea where Maxwell went that day. Do you want me to tell you?"

"You? What do you know about it?"

"A great deal, perhaps. Isn't there a place somewhere in New Hampshire, in a valley in the White mountain ranges, where Winthrop Gaston Martenet built a summer home a number of years before his death? Yes, I thought so. It's called Valhalla Notch, I believe. Quite a picturesque place, I understand, miles from nowhere and difficult of access. Well, that's where your husband went the day he disappeared."

A moan sprang from Julia's lips. Half rising from the sofa, she stared at him out of eyes that seemed suddenly swollen with dread.

"How—how do you know that?"

"I didn't." Mallingham blew a puff of smoke ceilingward. "It was only a guess—but you have confirmed it."

He rose and wandered about the room. A film of pallor and a grim contraction of the lips had suddenly marred Julia's loveliness. Darkly tremblingly, with her breath coming in little gulps, she watched the movements of his lithe, trim figure.

Presently he stopped in front of the revolving sphere. There he stood, rocking slowly on his heels, silent, fascinated.

"Well," he inquired at length, without lifting his eyes from the magical globe, "don't you think you might as well admit that you sent your husband to his death?"

A hoarse groan made him turn. Julia had risen. She was swaying, her lovely arms clutching for support. It was as if a vandal's hand had touched her beauty, ravaging it.

Unhurriedly Mallingham went to her side and steadied her. Soon the faintness passed. With a deep sigh she sank back on the sofa.

"I—I can't stand it any longer," she moaned brokenly. "I want to tell you—everything!"

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 15. (AP)—After reacting from an opening advance, the cotton market firmed up again today on reports of eastern belt rains and increasing boll weevil activity in various parts of the south.

December contracts, which had sold off from 18.93 to 18.54 in earlier trading, advanced to 19.00 in late afternoon, or 27 points net higher and 89 points above the low level of Monday and closed at 18.93. The general market closed firm, at net advances of 20 to 33 points.

The market opened very steady, up 12 to 19 points in response to relatively firm Liverpool cables and reports of rains in the eastern belt. Initial demand was supplied by realizing of recent buyers for a rally, coupled with southern selling and probably some local selling for a renewal of the recent decline after a recovery of about 80 points from the recent lows.

Offerings increased after publication of the weekly report of the weather bureau, which was rather more favorable than anticipated. At any rate, prices eased off sharply, October selling down from 18.95 to 18.55 and January from 18.91 to 18.53, net declines of about 13 to 19 points on the general list.

Offerings subsided, and the market firmed up again in the afternoon when buying seemed to be stimulated by the official weather details showing heavy rains in Georgia and some other sections of the eastern belt. There were also reports of boll weevil infestation or increasing insect activity, and the market developed considerable strength. Some early sellers were covering or rebuying and there appeared to be broadening of commission house demand on the advance of 18.98 for October and 18.96 for January, net gains of 26 to 29 points on active months. The close was a few points off from the best under profit taking.

The census report showing consumption of 438,743 bales in this country for the month of July against 569,765 last year was without apparent effect on the market.

Exports today 7843 bales, making 112,172 for this season. Port receipts 3,541. U. S. port stocks 489,913.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 15. (AP)—Cotton prices were erratic and nervous today, advancing on unfavorable weather reports and a stronger technical position and reacting under selling induced by bearish weekly weather and crop reports and July consumption total. The close was steady at a net advance of 22 to 26 points.

December delivery closed at 18.44, or a net advance of 25 points.

Liverpool cables came in 9 to 13 points better than due and first trades here showed gains of 21 to 25 points. Prices continued to advance for a time after the start on trade buying promoted by reports of heavy rains in the eastern portion of belt.

In the second hour offerings increased when the weekly weather and crop summary proved more favorable as a whole than the trade expected. The census bureau's July consumption total of 438,744 was also construed as bearish. October sold off to 17.95 and December 18.06, or 39 to 45 points under the initial highs and 13 to 15 points below yesterday's closing quotations.

After mid-session early sellers rebought, probably prompted by the stronger technical position of the market. There was also some covering by shorts and trade buying inspired by reports of weevil damage. December recovered to 18.48 and January 18.51, or 37 to 42 points up from the lows. Prices eased off slightly in final trading on realizing and October closed at 18.32, net 22 points up for the day.

Receipts 3,541; for week 16,270; for year 45,214; last year 120,703. Exports 7,843; for week 33,147; for year 108,006; last year 107,331. Stocks 462,182; last year 931,055. Stock on shipboard 41,193; last year 67,539. Spot sales 14,430; last year 13,703.

Easing of Money Results in Bulge In Stocks On New York Exchange

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Aug. 15. (US)—Outstanding strength in American Can and material easing in money rallied the stock market today. Can was skyrocketed close to 7 points as the call rate dropped from a renewal of 7 per cent to 5½ per cent.

As a result, heavy covering developed throughout the list that put Motors up 8, Radio up over 10, Montgomery Ward 5, Steel more than 2½ and other industrials gained to a lesser extent.

There was less apprehension regarding the federal reserve meeting tomorrow although all indications continued to point to another advance in the rediscount rate in the not distant future. While trading remained largely professional, there was sufficient outside following attracted to permit of important liquidation in some of the pool pets that were outstanding favorites recently.

Can being a First National stock, its strength caused the erroneous belief that those banking interests were responsible for its rise. The buying responsible for the move, however, was for the account of the Detroiters who are an important part of the "Big Ten." They are after a big block of stock entirely for its long pull prospects and intend to put it away in investment trusts maintained for associates.

All manner of estimates, etc. regarding Can were circulated during its rise, most of which were exaggerated. The most the Can insiders expect now is a $1 extra dividend in December as they estimate the net for the year will be between $6 and $7 a share. The group in Continental Can were inspired to greater activity as they look for their company to show double per share earnings to American Can's.

The Chrysler pool came within a point and a quarter of attaining its price goal but members were satisfied for as a marketing group it had attained its objective with all the stock, taken when the Dodge merger was rumored to be doubtful, passed along at a profit.

It will be remembered that when rumors of that merger being in jeopardy were widespread with the stock at materially lower levels, the first report of the group operation was told of here with the exclusive forecast that the consolidation would go through.

The Chrysler operation was helped by the General Motors developments which proved an unexpected assistance. With the big short interest in Motors it was not difficult for a few floor professionals to take advantage of its technical position when money eased.

Scientists Now Claim Lipstick Contains Poison

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 15. (US)—Science is forever prodding Dan Cupid in the ribs and taking the joy out of life for those who experience the stinging throb of a love dart from the bow of the cherub of romance.

First, science shook its finger in warning. "Don't kiss; you may spread germs."

Science now holds that any kind of rouge or lipstick contains lead carbonate.

GRAIN REVIEW
By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Aug. 15. (US)—The frost scare in Canada, which caused a sharp bulge in wheat prices Tuesday, failed to materialize and as a consequence the local and Winnipeg markets weakened today. Closing prices here were 1⅝c to 2⅛c lower and Canadian futures finished 2⅝c down.

September corn again weakened and the deferred futures lost some of their early gains, with closing prices 2c lower to ⅛c higher. Oats were unchanged to ⅛c down and rye was ⅝c to 1⅛c off.

Wheat opened steady, but when reports and the action of the Winnipeg market revealed that the expected frost had not appeared the higher prices compared with a week ago attracted sellers.

Shorts, who had hurriedly covered at least a part of their outstanding lines in the previous day's trade also took advantage of the higher levels to again increase their lines.

Trade in wheat was not of very large proportions at any time. The ease with which prices dropped away was indicative more of the absence of short interest, due to the previous day's covering rather than to any real heavy pressure.

Corn was erratic with higher prices in the early trading. The deferred futures were strong on some complaints of firing received from Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska. Selling grew more free in the September delivery, due to some reports that country feeders are withdrawing from the market for old corn. The trade was reluctant to take up the offers of the near delivery and when its price fell, the deferred futures followed.

Commercial demand for the cash article was moderately active, with the basis unchanged to 1c higher and prices steady to 1c lower. Local shipping sales totaled 89,000 bushels and 96,000 bushels was booked to arrive. Charters were made for 100,000 bushels to go to Lake Erie.

Cause of Loewenstein's Death Is Disputed

PARIS, Aug. 15. (UP)—Medical experts were divided today over whether Loewenstein, Belgian financier, was poisoned.

Dr. Paul, who examined the body after it was brought ashore at Boulogne-Sur-Mer, said he found traces of toxic poisoning in the intestines.

Professor Kohn Abrest, director of the police laboratory of toxicology, who also examined the organs, said the stomach contained only the normal remains of a meal and some sea water.

OLD SETTLERS AT CROSBYTON

7000 Pioneers Assemble At Reunion

Special to The Record News.

CROSBYTON, Texas, Aug. 15.—The West Texas Old Settlers association meeting started off with a record breaking attendance for the first day, there being more old settlers on the ground this morning than at any previous meeting. The crowd is estimated at 7,000 people. The program committee has planned to feed 10,000 people at a free barbecue tomorrow.

The first day was basket dinner day and many old timers spread their dinners with friends whom they had not seen for years. Music for the reunion is being furnished by the Floydada band under the direction of Bandmaster A. T. Luggren of Floydada. Bob Smith, president of the association, and the oldest white native of Crosby county, has charge of the program and is being assisted by Judge Pink L. Parrish of Lubbock. Judge Parrish was the first president of the West Texas Old Settlers association.

Barbecue Day

The old timers are here to live over again the days when the steer was king of the South Plains.

Jack Armstrong of Floydada is putting on one of the best rodeos that has ever been put on in this section of the country in order that the olden days may be more forcibly brought home to the old timers. Thursday and the last day will be free barbecue day for everyone present. The chuck wagon crew is barbecuing 9,000 pounds of beef, pork, mutton and chicken for the old timers and their friends.

Historic Spot

This reunion is being held on the most historical spot in all West Texas. It is held on the old McKenzie trail which led from old Fort McKenzie to Palo Duro canyon and the site of one of their camps along that old trail. An American flag is hoisted over the remains of the olddugout in a small hill where the soldiers and civilians would take refuge in time of attack from the Indians. Near this spot Unkle Hank Smith built his home, in 1877, the first to be built in Crosby county, and his son, Bob, who lives in the old rock house, has deeded 23 acres of this old spot to the state of Texas and it has been christened the Uncle Hank Smith Memorial park in memory of the early family who settled it.

Dry Agents Fear Wizardry When Booze Weakens

CHICAGO, Aug. 15. (US)—Gin left for safe keeping in a police station loses its kick. Dry agents here say that a station house magician is responsible.

Prohibition Agents Robert Richardson and Willard Mogland say more than that. They declare that the magician is in for a lot of "grief" and they don't mean peradventure.

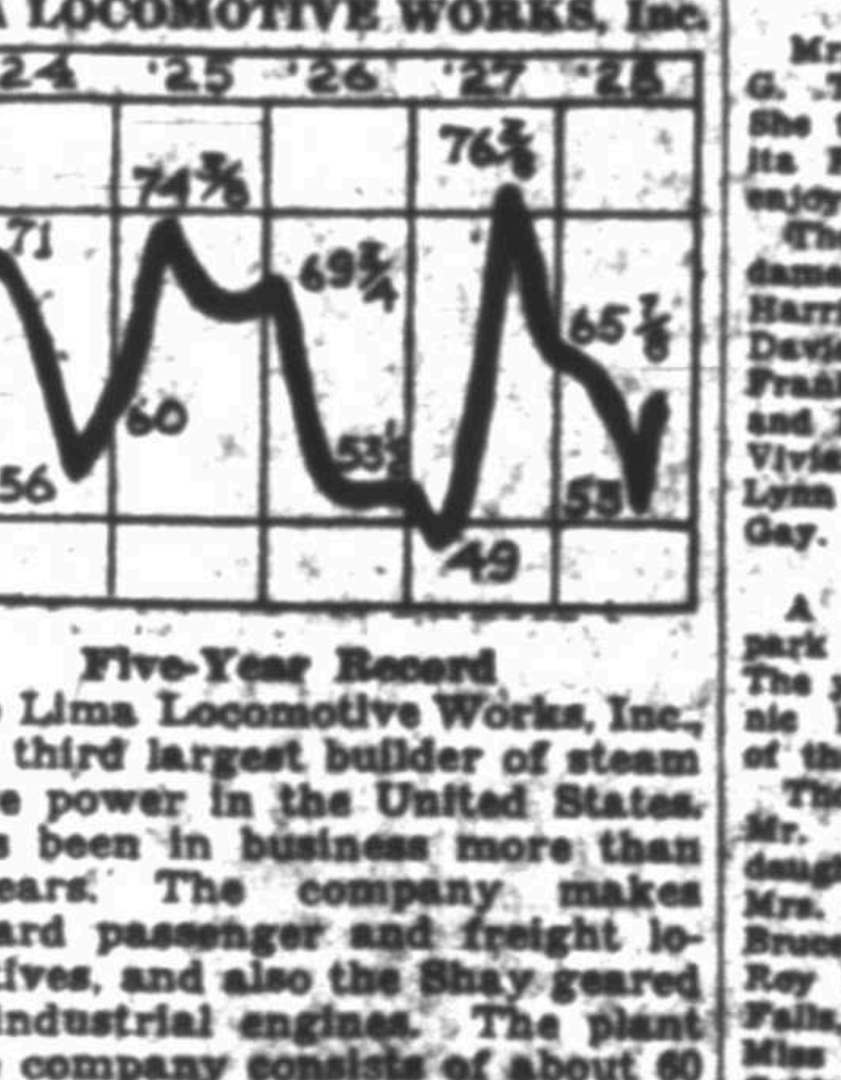

To be brief, four bottles of alleged liquor; tasted if not approved by Messrs. Richardson and Mogland, changed to four bottles of amber liquid over night. The agents will take an oath that it wasn't liquor when they looked at it and taste—well, smelled it today.

Five bottle of good and genuine gin, according to the agents, also became plain and unadulterated water.

"I don't know who is going to suffer for this but some one is," said Assistant District Attorney Edward A. Fisher, when he smelled the stuff. And Messrs. Richardson and Mogland looked very pleased.

Dry Favors Debate On Liquor Question

WASHINGTON, Aug 15. (UP)—Ernest H Cherrington, anti-saloon league official said today he would like to see a $10,000 prize offered for a real argument why the 18th amendment should be repealed. The only objection to the amendment is that it actually prohibits, he stated.

Five-Year Record

The Lima Locomotive Works, Inc., is the third largest builder of steam motive power in the United States. It has been in business more than 50 years. The company makes standard passenger and freight locomotives, and also the Shay geared type industrial engines. The plant of the company consists of about 60 acres of land at Lima, Ohio, with a factory and adequate equipment. Capacity of the plant was increased more than one-third in 1922 and 1923. The annual capacity is about 600 freight and passenger locomotives and 150 smaller industrial engines.

Earnings have been erratic. There was a net loss of $191,341 before dividends, in 1927. In 1926, $1,704,828 was earned, but in 1925 there was a deficit of over $800,000. The plant was closed late in 1927 owing to the extreme dullness of the railroad equipment industry. It was reopened, however, on the last day of the year with an excellent amount of business on the books.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding consists of 211,057 shares of no par common.

The present dividend rate is $4 a year.

As of January 1, 1928, total current assets were $7,222,607; current liabilities $150,143, and net working capital $7,073,464. Book value applicable to the no par common stock amounted to $53.21 a share.

Vigilantes Break Backbone Of Strife in African Diamond War

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, Aug. 15. (AP)—Ten thousand vigilantes under Jose Morbeck, called "The Cecil Rhodes of South America," have ended two months of guerilla warfare in Matto Grosso by driving 2000 disgruntled native diamond prospectors across the border of the state of Guyaz. Reports reaching here tell of fights in the jungle and uplands of the rich diamond fields, of night forays, the burning of towns and the wiping out of inhabitants of several communities.

Trouble started when natives found they had been paid in counterfeit money for weeks of prospecting work in the stifling hot jungles.

A period of lawlessness followed, rivaling the days of old time American Indian warfare.

The governor of Matto Grosso tried to control the situation with state troops but gave up the attempt after several disastrous engagements.

Then Morbeck, uncrowned king of the district, called on his adherents. Ten thousand rallied while the malcontents centered their cause under the command of a bandit chief known as "Carvalhinho," which is the Portuguese name for the sturdy water oak. Morbeck's force was too overwhelming and the bandit's 2000 were driven into the state of Guyaz, there they were given an asylum and the right to work in the diamond fields of that state after the governor had disarmed them and exacted promises of peaceful conduct.

Two Major School Additions Near Completion; Minor Repairs Made

The addition to the Franklin school will be completed by September 1, and the addition to the Austin school probably will be finished by the last of this week or the first of next, it was learned Wednesday night from W. W. Brown, business manager of the school board.

The Austin addition is an outside auditorium and cafeteria attached to the main building by a hallway. The laying of the cement floor is being completed in it. The painting, installation of hardware and other details is completed.

The space inside the main building of the Austin school which was used last year for the cafeteria, will be used for class rooms this year.

Repairs and repainting and general work is progressing at all the other schools of the city to put them in shape for the coming school term.

OILED CLOTH DEATH CLUE

Elastic Believed Garter Of Fire Victim

NACOGDOCHES, Texas, Aug. 15. (AP)—A bit of elastic, saturated with kerosene, was the clew which Nacogdoches county officers today thought might establish the theory that Miss Bertie Mae Spencer, 26, burned near Nacogdoches August 7, was murdered.

The elastic, found near Miss Spencer's home and thought to have been a part of her garter, indicated kerosene had been poured on her clothing before the flames enveloped her, officers said. They added, however, that they had as many circumstances supporting suicide as supporting murder but that they would make a thorough investigation.

DANIELS SAYS SOUTH 'SOLID'

Usual Demo Majority Is Seen by 'Dry'

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 15. (UP) The "solid south" will go to the polls for Alfred E. Smith, the New York governor was assured today by Josephus Daniels of Raleigh, N. C., secretary of the navy in the cabinet of President Wilson, but the usual Democratic majority below the Mason and Dixon line will be cut down if Governor Smith's acceptance speech is displeasingly pugnacious in the mater of prohibition.

Daniels would discuss directly with newspapermen his conference with the Democratic presidential candidate only insofar as to say that he would tell Smith of "conditions in the south."

But speaking to newspapermen of these same conditions, he used words freely.

He left not the slightest doubt with his hearers that he would urge Smith to soft-pedal the prohibition issue when he told newspapermen that he did not personally consider it the most important issue of the campaign by any means, and denied that the governor's affiliation with the Catholic church was the cause of much opposition in the south.

Doesn't Change Opinion

Daniels recalled the statement he made at Houston just after the convention, in which he stated that he thought Smith's telegram boldly setting forth his stand on prohibition, was a mistake.

"I see no reason now to change that opinion," said Daniels. "However, the governor's statement is not a repudiation of the Democratic platform on prohibition.

"There is more interest being manifested in the south on the governor's forthcoming acceptance speech than I have ever known before, and many in the south think that much depends on it."

As Dry Chieftain

Daniels' own attitude toward prohibition is well known. One of his important acts as secretary of the navy was to give the United States a bone-dry fighting fleet and his newspaper has waged an unremitting war for prohibition enforcement.

"Some people in the south who are bone-dry Democrats probably will vote for Mr. Hoover," said Daniels, "but there are more who are troubled over the question of whether they can vote for him in view of their attitude towards prohibition. That is th eattitude, of course, of those who think that prohibition is the only issue in the campaign."

In reality, said Daniels, the permanent issue in the campaign is that "there must be a change of administrations at Washington."

"We must," he said, "clean out the place where graft and favoritism have been dominant."

Assails Enforcement

Speaking for the Democrats of North Carolina, Daniels assailed prohibition enforcement by the Republican party and said that Hoover's enforcement pledge was a disappointment to dry North Carolinians.

"The opposition to Governor Smith in my state is due to the fact that North Carolina is very dry and the people there fear that Smith is not as dry as they wish he might be," said Daniels.

"It is a great mistake," he said, "to say that most of the opposition in the south to Smith is due to his church affiliation.

"Such a statement is a great injustice to the people of North Carolina particularly."

Straton Seeks Aid In 'Moral' Campaign

GREENWOOD LAKE, N. Y., Aug. 15. (AP)—The Rev. John Roach Straton in letters to Sen. Smith to "the moral and religious forces which will at last sweep the south."

Juvenile Admirer of Herbert Hoover Sends Candidate $2 for Campaign

PALO ALTO, Calif., Aug. 15. (UP)—The $3,000,000 Republican campaign goal is $2 nearer realization as a result of a contribution for that amount received by Herbert Hoover from Bob Taylor of Charleston, W. Va., a lad apparently about nine years old.

When George Akerson, secretary to the Republican nominee, was looking through the mail today he found the following letter from which fluttered a two dollar bill:

"The Hon. Herbert Hoover,

"Dear sir:

"My mother read in the paper where a little boy sent Alfred E. Smith $1 for campaign expenses. Please accept $2 for campaign expenses. I want to raise him $1.

"Sincerely your admirer,

"Bob Taylor."

The letter was scrawled in a childish hand, readily legible and with all the words correctly spelled. It was given to Hoover who dictated the following reply:

"My dear Bob:

"I am very glad to have your good letter with $2. I have sent the money to Mr. Nutt who is treasurer of the Republican committee. It will be spent to carry on the campaign.

"I like your spirit and like your picture—shows the kind of fellow it would be good to have on one's side in a scrap.

"Yours faithfully,

"Herbert Hoover."

NORTH CLAIMS 3 EXPLORERS

Bodies of John Hornby And Nephews Found

OTTAWA, Aug. 15. (AP)—The Hudson Bay country—home of John Hornby, explorer—has taken his life.

The bodies of Hornby and his two nephews have been found in a cabin on the north bank of the Thelon river west of Hudson bay, Canadian mounted police at Chesterfield inlet, on the bay, reported by wireless today.

The three died of starvation in a barren land where the fate of travelers depends on plentifulness of caribou. In 1926, when they set out in a canoe for Chesterfield inlet, and in 1927, caribou were scarce.

Trappers brought out last word of the party. A note, written in 1926 and found at an abandoned camp read:

"Traveling slowly. Flies bad. Shot a fat buck caribou. Hope to see you down the Hanbury this winter."

The party apparently did not survive the winter.

Search for them had been in progress since 1927.

Indentification Doubted

SASKATOON, Sask., Aug. 15. (AP)—Doubt was cast today on identification of the bodies found on the bank of the Thelon river as those of John Hornby, explorer, and his two nephews, by A. J. Bell, of Saskatoon, formerly commissioner of the northeast territories.

Hair-Raising Squeal Of Pig Is Valuable

CHICAGO, Aug. 15. (UP)—That the pig's squeal, which has hair-raising qualities in the barn yard, is instrumental in the production of soothing melodies, was told the American Chemical Society institute by Dr. W. Lee Lewis of the Institute of American Meat Packers today.

"Next time you listen to the plaintive wail of the double bass voice," he said, "remember that it is the inner self of some lowly pig exalted from the business of digestion and throwing off a shower of sublimated squeals in the gladness of a sacrifice for service.

"For orchestra strings are made, not from catgut, as is generally supposed, but from the intestines of sheep and hogs."

Dr. Lewis also said that man has entered on a new food era.

"From every elevated platform, every magazine and newspaper page, he is attacked by malted prunes, sublimated beans, irradiated codfish, energized oats, ferruginous raisins, osculated oranges and inflammatory soups, all eager to find his table.

"Man," he concluded, "is nature's greatest piece of unfinished business. His evolution is not at a uniform rate. He has surrounded himself by an astonishing complexity of problems."

Columbia Man Named K. P. Lodge Chancellor

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 15. (UP)—Alva M. Lumpkins, Columbia, S. C., was elected chancellor of the Knights of Pythias in annual convention here today. Leslie E. Crouch, Portland, Ore., was named supreme vice chancellor.

Among the curious regimental pets belonging to units of the British army at different times have been a chimpanzee, an ape, a lion, a sea eagle, a cheetah, a black bear and a lamb.

ANTI-SMITHS SEEK FUNDS

Call for Financial Aid Is Issued

An appeal for "financial support and help" was issued Wednesday by W. B. Coriett, treasurer, and M. L. Tittle, chairman of the executive committee, of the anti-Smith for president club of Wichita county, with headquarters at 611 Ninth street. The appeal, addressed to "Democrats of Wichita county" requests that contributions be sent to Treasurer Coriett in room 511 Waggoner building or to the campaign headquarters.

The statement embodying the appeal for financial support for the anti-Smith Democratic campaign said:

"To the Democrats of Wichita county:

"The fight is on in this state to defeat the election of Al Smith for president. A vigorous and aggressive campaign will be waged all over Texas and all over Wchita county. The welfare and moral standing of the nation is at stake. Texas did not vote for Al Smith's nomination and will not be charged with his election.

"Herbert Hoover has given the nation a great message that rings true to the ideals of Woodrow Wilson and Southern Democracy. Texas will be willing to indorse this message and to honor the man whom Wilson so greatly honored in the times of great national perial.

"But a vigorous campaign calls for financial support. We have no rich Republican Raskobs or Du-Ponts in our ranks. We represent the free and unterrified Democrats of Texas and Wichita county who would rather be 'right than regular'. It is to you that we send this appeal for financial support and help.

"If every Democrat who desires Al Smith rebuked for his repudiation of the Democratic platform and ideals will send in his contribution, whether large or small, it will mean Texas will defeat the champion of Tamany Hall—Al Smith.

"Therefore, we call upon the Democrats of Texas and Wichita county, opposing Al Smith for the presidency, to send in their contribution and help us wrest the grip of Tamany Hall and the liquor interests from the throat of the Democracy and of the nation.

In Zululand the atmosphere is so clear that objects can be seen by starlight at a distance of seven miles.

A free set of dishes awaits every woman in Wichita Falls who likes motion pictures, according to Charlie Morehead, manager of the Olympic theater. There is no contest or drawing of any kind connected with it, Charlie explained. Each Monday and Friday night, starting Aug. 27, a piece of china will be given to each woman attending the show. Every woman will receive the same kind of piece. This will continue with a different piece of china each week, until the entire 50 pieces have been given. There are no strings to the offer, and there is no advance in admission for these nights, Mr. Morehead announced.

The other day I was eating in one of those restaurants where the front end of the counter turns into a combination ice box and stove. The cook was short on meat and he called to the back room "Bring me some small steaks." He then looked into the ice box a little closer and said, "I also need some brains and pigs feet."

"Forgotten Faces" at the Majestic has a cast which might well be called "all star" cast, but it isn't. Most of these so-called "all star" casts have a bunch of hams in them and no real stars. This picture makes us think that the publicity man for the picture is a flat tire or else that Mary Brian, the female star, has an iron clad, holeproof and "everyone else proof" contract to put her name above all others. When seeing this picture, don't overlook Baclanova (and right now I prophesy she will be starred many times by Paramount in the next year), Jack Luden, William Powell, Fred Kohler and Olive Brook.

Ramon Navarro is billed in "Forbidden Hours," "a dramatic closeup of a human soul," to open Saturday at the Majestic.

Thursday is the day of the opening of Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall in "Ladies' Night in a Turkish Bath" at the Olympic. Mr. Walsh and his family were returning to Wichita Falls from a visit to his mother at Logansport, Ind., at the time of the accident.

His wife and children are returning to Wichita Falls immediately, but Mr. Walsh will remain to return the automobile.

'Country Store' Opens At Mission Aug. 29

Charley's country store, an old-time celebration amusement, is to open on the stage of the Mission theater Aug. 29, it was announced Wednesday by Charles Moorehead, manager of the Mission.

The country store will be in addition to the other attractions and pictures on the bill.

ABSENTEE VOTE STARTS TODAY

Ballots Ready Some Time Thursday

Ballots for use in the run-off primary of Aug. 25 will be ready sometime Thursday, according to announcement Wednesday from the office of E. C. De Montel, Democratic county chairman.

Delay in the printing of ballots has been caused, it was learned, because of failure of the Democratic state executive committee to notify Mr. De Montel of names which have been certified as candidates for state offices.

Telegraphic communication between Mr. De Montel and the secretary of the state committee Wednesday revealed that the certified list of candidates had been placed in the mail and should be in Wichita Falls Thursday morning.

Type for the ballots already is set, it was learned, and it is probable that only minor changes will be necessitated when the official list of state candidates is received. Employes of the county chairman's office were confident that ballots for distribution to Miss Elizabeth Hall, county clerk, would be ready by 9 o'clock Thursday morning for use in absentee voting.

The statutes provide that voters may cast their absentee vote from 10 to three days prior to the election date. Under this ruling Wednesday was the first day for absentee voting. There were no ballots and numbers of prospective voters were turned away from the county clerk's office. Thursday, according to information from Mr. De Montel's office, the ballots will be there.

In addition to those still in the city who plan not to be here on election day, 46 persons have asked that ballots be mailed them. The delay on the part of the executive committee in the certification of names of state candidates may cause some of the out of county Wichitans to lose a vote, unless they very promptly mark and return the ballots. Mail votes will be accepted through Wednesday of next week, Miss Hall said.

OPTIMISTS IN MELON FEAST

Members and Ladies Take Outing at Pool

One hundred Optimists and their ladies enjoyed a watermelon feast and swimming party Wednesday evening at the Westmoreland pool.

The party was arranged to take the place of the usual noonday luncheon at the Kemp hotel, the members holding that a cool swim topped off by an iced watermelon spread would be far more seasonable than a program of speeches in a hotel dining room.

The committee that arranged the party included Grover Monroe, Wm. McDonald and T. R. Glast.

Kay Warns On Zeal Of Political Campaign

"Hoover and Smith will pass from the stage, but we will live here a long time. Let us not make enemies of our neighbors. Let us be charitable and considerate of the opinions of others with whom we will live, associate and deal in the years to come regardless of which politician wins."

This was the gist of Judge John C. Kay's talk given at the Lions club luncheon Wednesday noon at the Kemp hotel. R. O. Kenley spoke on the advertising values in the zoo and the Spudders. Mr. Kenley was introduced as a new member along with Judge C. M. McFarland, Burl Bryant, J. P. Marrs, R. M. Wilhite and J. E. Zihlman, P. B. Curd, R. E. Carter, J. S. Pitman, Chas. Crowell and Bart Magee were named on the inter-city meeting committee. Miss Marjorie Hoenscheidt of Wichita Falls and Miss Josephine Rovello of Waco gave song and dance numbers accompanied on the piano by Miss Eleanor Pitman.

Panhandler Ordered to 'Dust' City After Defying Woman Charity Worker

A beggar claiming to be paralyzed, who was canvassing the homes of the city and who admitted he had a fully paid up insurance policy and responsible relatives, was ordered to "dust" Wednesday.

To him it meant he was an unwelcome visitor in this city and that the police and organized charities were not going to support professional bums who have available assets.

Insistinz that he was on his way to Hot Springs, Ark., and admitting that he had just been run out of Dallas, the man defied the police and also Miss Myrle Neely, secretary of the community chest, in the police station.

"The man's logic seemed to be that he would not accept 'charity' from his relatives or use any of his own assets, but that it was perfectly correct for him to panhandle, bum and beg from the people of Wichita Falls who are strangers to him," Miss Neely explained.

The police and the community chest both expressed doubt as to the necessity for the man carrying a crutch, and said they believed him to be a faker. At any rate, if he shows up here again, he is due for a term in jail, the police declare.

China's unused resources are said to be similar to those of the United States 400 years ago.

Indigestion
Immediate Relief!

What most people call indigestion is usually excess acid in the stomach. The food has soured. The instant remedy is an alkali which neutralizes acids. But don't use crude helps. Use what your doctor would advise.

The best help is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. For the 50 years since its invention it has remained standard with physicians. You will find nothing else so quick in its effect, so harmless, so efficient.

One tasteless spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. The results are immediate, with no bad after-effects. Once you learn this fact, you will never deal with excess acid in the crude ways. Go learn—now—why this method is supreme.

Be sure to get the genuine 'Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 90c a bottle—any drug store.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor, Charles H. Phillips, since 1875.—Adv.
