Clinton: second term will rededicate old values

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inaugurated to lead "the world's indispensable nation" into the 21st century, President Clinton said today that his second term will begin an era of a "New Promise" of rededication to old values.

He pledged that government will be smaller, living within its means on balanced budgets, doing more with less.

"We must keep our old democracy forever young," Clinton said in his inaugural address from the steps of the Capitol. "Guided by the ancient version of a promised land, let us set our sights upon a land of New Promise."

The Capitol itself symbolized the divided government Clinton will lead, since Republican majorities rule there. Clinton said that must not intrude on the mission of redeeming "the promise of America" at the dawn of the new century.

He said that although they chose a Democratic president and a Republican Congress, Americans will not tolerate "the politics of petty bickering and extreme partisanship they plainly deplore."

"No, they call on us instead to repair the breach, and to move on with America's eternal mission," he said.

In the wintry sun, before throngs massed at the Capitol and the nation by television, Clinton wove the prospect of the new century through his speech.

It was broad, in keeping with inaugural tradition, an address of big themes and vows, but with room for some of the specifics that will be parts of his second term agenda, including a promise to balance the federal budget.

"Now, for the third time a new century is upon us, and another time to choose," Clinton said. "... At the dawn of the 21st Century, a free people must choose to shape the forces of the information age and the global society, to unleash the limitless potential of all our people, and form a more perfect union."

Clinton said he had vowed four years ago to set a clear course to renew America. "In those four years, we have been touched by tragedy, exhilarated by challenge, strengthened by achievement," he said. "America stands alone as the world's indispensable nation."

The president said the U.S. economy is again the strongest on earth, and promised that the nation "will stand mighty for peace and freedom," defending against the dark forces of terror and destruction.

"And the world's greatest democracy will lead a whole world of democracies," he said.

Despite political divisions, Clinton said, "We have resolved for our time a great debate over the role of government."

"Today we can declare government is not the problem; government is not the solution," he said, paraphrasing both conservative and liberal lines on the role Washington should play.

He promised "a new government for a new century," humble enough not to try to solve all Americans' problems, but strong enough to provide tools to let citizens solve them for themselves.

"A government that is smaller, lives within its means, and does more with less," he said. "Yet where it can stand up for our values and interests in the world, and where it can give Americans the power to make a real difference in their everyday lives, government should do more, not less."

On a day that also was the holiday honoring the slain Martin Luther King Jr., Clinton pledged unrelenting efforts to overcome the divide of race, "America's constant curse."

"With a new vision of government, a new sense of responsibility, a new spirit of community, we will sustain America's journey," Clinton said.

Senate panel approves Albright nomination, sends to full Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today voted unanimously to confirm Madeleine Albright to be the nation's first woman secretary of state. Full Senate approval is expected Wednesday.

The committee met briefly in the Capitol as a throng gathered outside for President Clinton's second inaugural. The 12-0 vote, with six other committee members expected to add their approval later in the day, was the first on new members of Clinton's Cabinet.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., ranking Democrat on the committee, said he expects the nomination to "sail through the Senate as it did through the committee. This is the first and most visible example of bipartisanship."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., committee chairman, has been referring to Albright as "secretary-to-be."

If confirmed as expected, Albright would be the highest-ranking woman ever in the federal government.

The first of President Clinton's second-term Cabinet nominees to go before the Senate, she earned support from many Republicans by advocating U.N. reforms, punitive measures against Cuba and other issues on the GOP agenda.

At a nearly eight-hour confirmation hearing Jan. 8, Albright repeatedly challenged Republican lawmakers to provide the money necessary for continued U.S. leadership abroad. She pointedly told them the State Department would not be able to achieve U.S. foreign policy goals "on the cheap."

Following the hearing, members submitted 215 additional questions in writing. Albright replied Friday.

Albright's responses indicated that any differences between her tenure as secretary of state and that of her predecessor, Warren Christopher, will be a matter of style rather than policy.

Because Christopher's resignation was effective with Clinton's swearing-in to a second term today, the post could remain open for a few days. Deputy Secretary Strobe Talbott will fill in as acting secretary of state.

Both at the confirmation hearing and in her written answers, Albright stressed the need for bipartisanship and cooperation with Congress in the conduct of foreign policy.

Jury being seated in trial

Jury selection was underway this morning for the trial of a man accused of injury to a child.

Raymond Martinez Jr., 40, is charged with the offense, a third-degree felony. He is being represented by local court-appointed attorney Isaac Castro. Prosecuting the case is District Attorney Dana Cooley.

The trial is being held in 132nd District Court, with Judge Ernie Armstrong presiding. Jury selection was to have begun at 9 a.m. but was delayed when a shortage of potential jurors responded to being called.

Martinez is alleged to have cut a juvenile female with a knife on Sept. 15, 1996.

STOCK SHOW QUEEN — Candance Sanchez, with the Ira FFA, was named queen of the Scurry County Junior Livestock Show held in the coliseum. To become queen, Miss Sanchez sold the most tickets for a $200 gift certificate to Bar-H-Bar Family Outfitters. The stock show ended Saturday with the awards and sale. (Staff Photo by Jo Ann Nunley)

Thousands gather to remember MLK

By The Associated Press

Thirty-seven years ago, Eddye Bexley and dozens of other blacks sat in silent protest at the lunch counter of the old Woolworth building in Tampa, Fla., enduring the curses of angry whites.

The goal was not hot dogs or hamburgers, recalls the Rev. Leon Lowry, now 83: "It was dignity, respect, consideration — to be recognized as human beings."

Because the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. did so much to advance those values, Ms. Bexley and about 60 others gathered at the site Saturday to recall the groundbreaking demonstration of 1960, part of commemorations across the country in honor of the slain civil rights leader's birthday.

"It took all I could do to come down here today," Ms. Bexley said. "When someone stands in front of you and says, 'Nigger, get out of the building,' you get a bad feeling."

In New York, Brazilian, harmonica and youth choirs sang tributes to King at a gala tribute Sunday night at Harlem's Apollo Theater. Earlier, dozens of people marched silently through Manhattan, the day before the national holiday observing King's birth.

Luis Maldonado, 39, of New York, who attended the march and prayer, said King's life and struggle had influenced his own life.

"It's because of him that Latinos today have a lot more freedom, opportunities and social acceptance," Maldonado said.

In California, King's oldest son is forming a group to fight for affirmative action in response to the state's efforts to do away with such programs around the country.

Insurance bids tabled by county

Scurry County commissioners opened three bids for employee health insurance this morning and chose to table action on the matter until Feb. 3.

Bids were received from American Stop Loss Insurance Brokerage, Insurance Marketing Resources, Inc. and Boone-Chapman.

IMR and Boone-Chapman are represented locally by Steakley Insurance.

The county chose to take bids on the insurance after receiving notice in December that the county's share of employee insurance premiums were to increase some 42 percent for the coming year.

The 1996 bill for the insurance was $354,000. The 1997 bill was tabbed at $517,000.

The court also approved another year of participation in the Texas Narcotics Control Program.

Sheriff Darren Jackson told the court that Scurry County's cost to participate would be $8,000, but the money has always been paid through funds from drug forfeitures.

"We have never had to come up with any local money for the program," said Jackson.

In other action, the court approved monthly reports from the county extension office and minutes form the January meeting of the County Welfare Board.

Precinct 4 Commissioner Jerry Gannaway presided. All commissioners were present, to include Howard Limmer, Roy Idom and Ralph Trevey. County Judge Ricky Fritz was absent.

Auditions set at Ritz tonight for Lil' Abner

Auditions for the Ritz Theatre spring musical, "Lil' Abner," begin tonight.

Auditons will be held from 6 until 8 o'clock tonight and 5 until 7 p.m. Tuesday at the theatre, located on the south side of the square.

A cast of approximately 35 is needed. There are eight solo parts and others will be part of various chorus numbers. All roles are for high school or adult performers.

Auditioners should be prepared to sing one number and provide accompaniment. A piano, tape deck and CD player will be available.

Sam Robertson will be the musical director. Call 573-4053 or 573-4892 for additional information concerning auditions.

"Lil' Abner," the popular musical comedy based on the Al Capp comic strip by the same name, is scheduled for production April 10-13 and 17-20.

According to The Washington Post...

Unabomber letters to reflect estrangement from family

WASHINGTON (AP) — A series of letters from accused unabomber Ted Kaczynski to his family over a period of years while he lived in isolation in Montana portray a tortured misfit with a fragile grasp on reality, according to The Washington Post.

The letters, which have been turned over to federal authorities, were discussed with the Post by David Kaczysnki, the accused man's brother, during a two-hour interview conducted last week and published in Monday's editions.

"Through the years, the letters have shown sudden and unpredictable mood swings, a preoccupation with disease, extreme phobias, compulsive thinking and an inability to let go of minutiae," David Kaczynski said. "One senses a psyche that feels itself terribly isolated and threatened in the world, tormented by its own complexities, unable to hold things in their proper perspective or to find comfort, security or rest for itself."

The Kaczynski family is urging the Justice Department not to seek the death penalty, citing mental illness as a "mitigating factor" against capital punishment.

In one of the letters shared with the Post, Ted Kaczynski pleaded for his brothers's help in severing all ties with his family, who he blamed in other letters for raising him to be a social misfit crippled by fear of rejection.

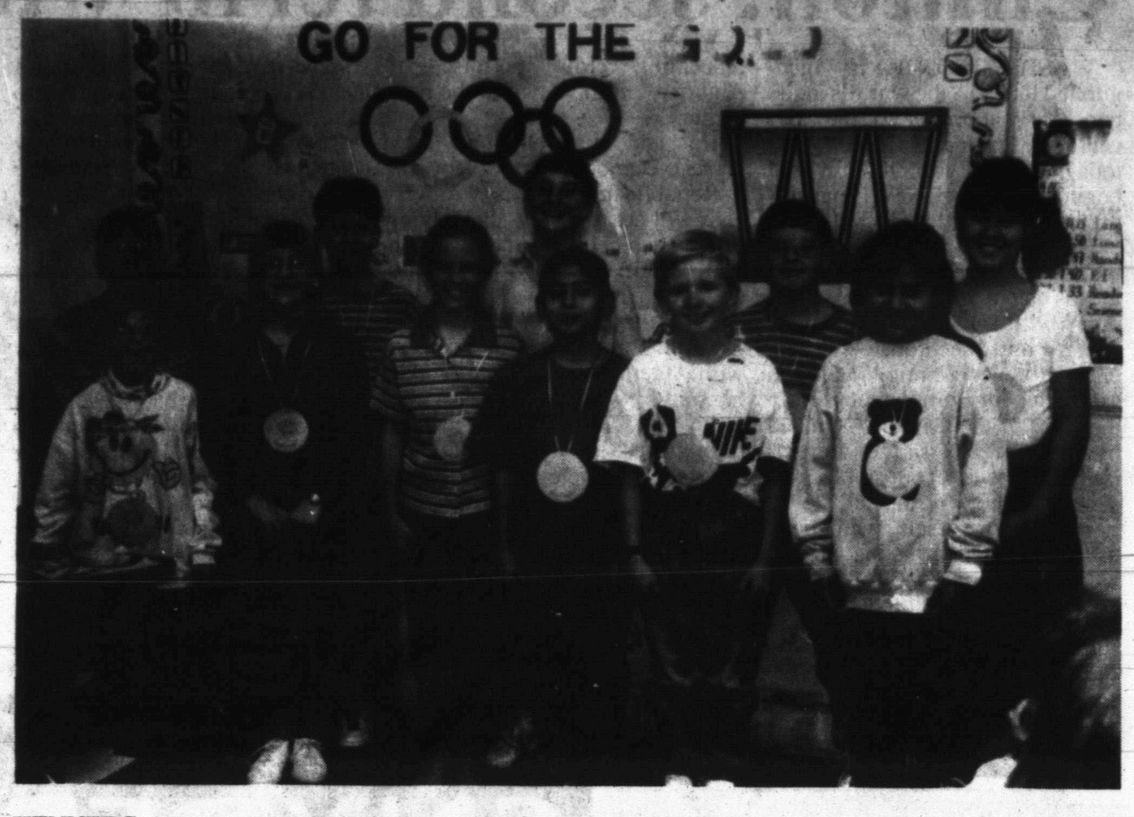

"It is a matter of life and death, and this is not an exaggeration," he wrote in one letter to brother David in the summer of 1991. "I seriously believe I will die if you can't accomplish this for me. ... I won't be able to eat or sleep or stop my heart from pounding until this whole thing is settled.

"I have got to know, I have GOT TO, GOT TO, GOT TO know that every last tie joining me to this stinking family has been cut FOREVER and that I will never NEVER have to communicate with any of you again. ... I've got to do it NOW. I can't tell you how desperate I am. ... It is killing me," the 10-page letter said.

The 54-year-old Ted Kaczynski, a Harvard-educated mathematician, is suspected of carrying out a 17-year bombing spree in which three people were killed and 23 injured. Grand juries in California and New Jersey have indicted Kaczynski on charges relating to the bombing deaths.

He was turned in by David Kaczynski, who thought he recognized aspects of his brother's thinking and writing in the unabomber's anti-technology "manifesto" published in 1995 by The Washington Post and The New York Times.

"Our interest from the beginning was to protect life and if this government were to process this like a cold and calculative machine, I would have to conclude my faith in that system was misplaced," David Kaczynski told the Post. "What would a future family member in a similar situation think if I were repaid with my brother's death? It would be the ultimate disincentive for anyone else to cooperate with our justice system."

With lights restored, power company trucks head home

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — The lights were on in the last few houses, so power company trucks headed back east on Sunday, one week after ice storms ripped down lines serving 40,000 southwest Louisiana residents.

Power also was back up around Beaumont, Texas, Entergy spokeswoman Yolanda Pollard said Sunday.

More than 2,000 workers from Baton Rouge, Mississippi, Arkansas, north Louisiana and as far away as Alabama and Georgia came to help after the ice storms early last week.

That wasn't enough to satisfy the thousands of people who spent days and days without power. They called newspaper and broadcast hotlines to complain that they couldn't reach a real person at Entergy Louisiana and hadn't seen any repair crews in their neighborhoods.

It was Saturday before the last few dozen houses were hooked back up to power lines.

Sulphur Mayor Charles Reed complained bitterly, many times, about the slow recovery.

And Dale Sittig, who represents southwest Louisiana on the state Public Service Commission and came to Lake Charles to watch Entergy at work, said it could have done much better.

He said he felt Entergy could have done more to anticipate the problem and have repair crews in place ahead of time, and could have done more preventive maintenance, such as trimming branches near power lines.

Furriers face flak over mink-clad Barbie dolls

HOUSTON (AP) — There's a new target for animal-rights activists war on fur — Barbie.

Mattel, the toy maker for whom Barbie has been a leading product since 1959, has told Houston furrier Sakowitz and at least three furriers elsewhere in the nation to stop marketing miniature fur coats and accessories for the famous fashion doll.

The demand came after complaints from People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals about Sakowitz and furriers in Boston, New York and Detroit.

"Barbie is an animal lover," said Lisa McKendall, Mattel's director of marketing communications in El Segundo, Calif. "We feel real strongly that Barbie should not wear real fur."

Sakowitz had been selling Barbies for $140 to $220 and was giving the dolls away to purchasers of fur coats for grownups.

Sakowitz owner Jerry Gronauer told the Houston Chronicle for Monday's editions that he only had a half-dozen Barbies left when Mattel officials contacted him about them.

"They were very nice," he said. "They asked me to take them off the shelf and I did. I'm waiting now for further instructions from Mattel."

The miniature furs have become prized by collectors who save them for possible future resale at a premium. Miniature mink coats draped over Barbies sold for $10 each in 1968 by Sears, Roebuck and Co. now are valued at $4,000 each by collectors.

PETA finds little charm in the items.

"Barbie dolls are fun for kids, but there's nothing fun about gassing, drowning, strangling and electrocuting animals to make them into little coats," said Jenny Wood, a PETA spokeswoman.

So intense was the furor raised against Boston-area furrier Yolanda Celluci for selling mink-clad Barbies that she pulled her $150 Barbies, fully outfitted in fur, off her shelves and sought police protection.

"It was unbelievable," Ms. Celluci said. "I have stacks and stacks of mail like you wouldn't believe. They threatened to blow us up. These people are wild, and they're getting stronger in every direction."

Farley's martial arts spoof topped weekend box office

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chris Farley's martial arts spoof "Beverly Hills Ninja" debuted with $10 million, kicking "The Relic" out of first place at the weekend box office.

Eddie Murphy's "Metro," another debut, grossed an estimated $9.3 million. In his first outing since "The Nutty Professor," Murphy plays a San Francisco police hostage negotiator.

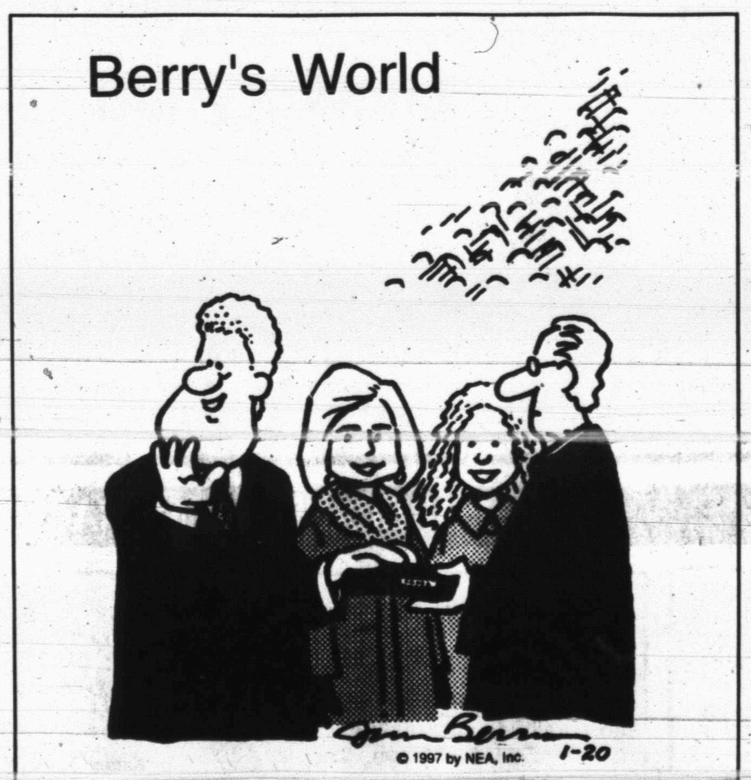

"Evita," starring Madonna, dropped to No. 3 over the weekend, followed by "Jerry Maguire," "The Relic" and "Scream."

Actor Kevin Spacey's directorial debut, "Albino Alligator," shown in 12 theaters in its initial release, took in $81,000.

Final weekend figures were to be released today.

The top 10 films and their estimated grosses for Friday through Sunday:

1. "Beverly Hills Ninja," $10 million.
2. "Metro," $9.3 million.
3. "Evita," $7.2 million.
4. "Jerry Maguire," $6.8 million.
5. "The Relic," $6.7 million.
6. "Scream," $6.3 million.
7. "Michael," $6 million.
8. "The People vs. Larry Flynt," $3.4 million.
9. "Jackie Chan's First Strike," $2.8 million.
10. "One Fine Day," $2.2 million.

'Evita,' Madonna top Golden Globe awards

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Bring on the Oscars.

Hollywood found out what the foreign press thinks is the best of 1996 cinema with the Golden Globe awards Sunday, as the Hollywood Foreign Press Association feted dramas with a definite foreign tone.

"The English Patient" was honored as best picture, England's Brenda Blethyn as top actress for "Secrets & Lies" and Australia's Geoffrey Rush for "Shine."

"Evita," the musical chronicling the life of legendary Argentine political figure Eva Peron, was a triple winner — taking honors for best musical or comedy movie, best musical-comedy actress for Madonna and best original song, "You Must Love Me."

"I have been so incredibly blessed in this past year," Madonna, who had her first baby last year, said in accepting her Golden Globe. "Making this picture has been a great experience artistically and spiritually. I will never forget it."

No movie swept the awards, which launch Hollywood's movie awards season and often presage the Academy Awards. The dark comedy "Fargo," which has won a trophy case full of critics' awards in recent weeks, went home empty-handed.

After years of struggling for respect because of claims of voting corruption, the Hollywood Foreign Press Association finally achieved a degree of respectability last year with a prime-time TV broadcast.

Golden Globes were also bestowed on "The People vs. Larry Flynt," with awards to director Milos Forman and writers Scott Alexander and Larry Karaszewski.

In the television categories, "The X-Files" was voted top TV drama and its stars, David Duchovny and Gillian Anderson, won top TV dramatic actor honors.

NBC-TV's "3rd Rock From the Sun" won for top TV musical or comedy series and its star, John Lithgow, won for best actor in that category. Helen Hunt of "Mad About You" was the top TV comedy actress.

Tom Cruise, the sports agent of "Jerry Maguire," was the musical-comedy actor winner.

Ms. Blethyn, who plays the mother of a black daughter she never knew in "Secrets & Lies," was virtually unknown to American audiences before the movie's release.

"I'm so happy to be in the building much less standing up here," she said in accepting her award.

Rush, who played the mentally troubled piano virtuoso of "Shine," was a hugely popular winner with the stellar Beverly Hilton Hotel audience, which gave him an unusual standing ovation.

"I'm very proud to be part of a film that has taken such a vulnerable, peculiar and very human character and placed him at the heart of a film," Rush said.

Forman was picked best motion picture director for "The People vs. Larry Flynt." Mel Gibson, last year's director winner for "Braveheart," handed Forman the trophy.

Veteran actress Lauren Bacall, who played the possessive mother of Barbra Streisand in "The Mirror Has Two Faces," and Edward Norton, the suspected killer in "Primal Fear," won movie supporting actor trophies.

"I'm in a state of shock. This is the first time I've been nominated for an award in any role," Ms. Bacall said.

The 72-year-old actress concluded her acceptance by saying, "It's taken a long time to get here and I'm not giving it (the Golden Globe) back."

The Golden Globe for best foreign language film went to the Czech Republic's "Kolya."

HBO's "Rasputin" won the top TV miniseries or movie award as well as top actor for Alan Rickman and supporting actor for Ian McKellen.

Helen Mirren won the top actress Golden Globe in a miniseries or movie for Showtime's "Losing Chase" and Kathy Bates won the supporting actress trophy in that category for "The Late Shift."

One Golden Globe was announced before Sunday's ceremony: Dustin Hoffman, the Cecil B. DeMille award for service to the cinema. Cruise offered a tribute to him during the show.

Elvis impersonators draw hundreds

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Twenty-four men, all decked out in finery ranging from sequins to purple velvet, came to the state capital wanting to be king.

Make that THE King.

Elvises were everywhere at a Springfield hotel ballroom, as the would-be kings of rock 'n' roll fired up a crowd of 700 at the Midwest Elvis Presley Impersonators Competition and Winter Jam Saturday.

Impersonators were asked to sing a handful of Elvis songs of their choosing and were scored by a panel of 10 judges. The winners of the first- and second-place prizes Saturday advanced to the Images of Elvis Competition, to be held in Memphis in August. That is the Holy Grail of impersonation contests, performers said.

Among the competitors, variations on the Vegas-era Elvis far outweighed the young Elvis version. Most players agreed the older, Vegas Elvis is more popular because it's easier to imitate.

"The young Elvis is hard to do," said 62-year-old Ken Pratt of Decatur, Ill., who wore purple velvet with a thigh-length cape. "You've got to have all the energy and the movement involved."

Of those competitors who favored the young Elvis, 19-year-old Tony Ciaglia of Plano, Texas, scorched the crowd with a rousing version of "Hound Dog." He feels Elvis impersonation is not a thing to be taken lightly, and Vegas Elvis impersonators sometimes make a mockery of the King's memory.

"When people see the young Elvis Presley, they enjoy the charisma, the energy they get from him," said Ciaglia, who recuperated from a severe brain injury at age 15 while listening to Elvis tapes.

It begs the question of what drives such performers to try to don the mantle of Elvis Presley.

"Elvis impersonation isn't something where you wake up one morning and go, 'I'm going to be Elvis,'" said Yoshi Suzuki, a 47-year-old impersonator from Chicago who hails originally from Tokyo. "It's kind of an accidental thing for most of these guys. They get up at a party and sing, they have a slight physical resemblance to Elvis, and people say, 'Why don't you do this?'"

Suzuki cradled an acoustic guitar and brushed lint from his blue sequined jump suit Saturday night, waiting his turn to perform. In a field largely dominated by white men, Suzuki had the distinction of being the only Asian-American Elvis showcased during the two-day competition.

Most of the competitors have made the pilgrimage to Graceland, where Presley lived and died, to get a touch of the one true King.

"It's like a shrine," said impersonator Travis DeVall of West Des Moines, Iowa. "I got tears just going up to the wall. He was a legend and still is."

Business economists say:

Growing momentum but little inflation pressure in new year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy moved into the new year with growing momentum but little inflation pressure, business economists said today.

"Demand (for products and services) increased significantly in the fourth quarter, more than offsetting the slowdown in the previous quarter," a survey by the National Association of Business Economists found.

Nearly 58 percent of the 127 association members responding to the survey in December and early January reported increased demand, up from 42 percent during the July-September quarter.

At the same time, demand fell at only 8 percent of the economists' companies, compared with 23 percent in the third quarter.

"These results ... indicate a pronounced rebound of economic activity in the fourth quarter, particularly in several of the service sectors," according to the survey summary.

Nevertheless, half of the respondents said they expected only average economic growth in 1997, while 41 percent forecast sluggish growth. Four percent predicted strong growth, the same number who anticipated a recession.

In a separate report last week, the consensus of 51 economists surveyed by the newsletter Blue Chip Economic Indicators called for economic growth of 2.3 percent this year, unchanged from the moderate pace predicted for 1996.

Your Birthday

Tuesday, Jan. 21, 1997

In the year ahead, you could be luckier than usual in situations in which a partner is not required. You have the talent to succeed in these areas, so make the most of your opportunities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You can profit today, but your ego could cause you to take unnecessary risks. Take extra time before making decisions. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Assessing developments realistically won't be a problem for you today. Trouble could begin if you go against your better judgment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You must be extremely careful in business situations today. Someone with whom you may have to do business might be a lot sharper than she appears.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You will have a great deal of energy today and you will be eager to get things done. Unfortunately, a lethargic associate might hinder your progress.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The work or service you perform today will be worthy of proper compensation, so ask for what you feel you're entitled to.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Regardless of how well you conduct yourself today, you will still be judged by the company you keep. Avoid individuals who have a knack for generating problems.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today, bear in mind that blood is thicker than water. If you must take the side of either a family member or an outsider in an argument, support your family.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Listen to your instincts today. You should try to cooperate with others, but do not lower your standards for any reasons.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This will be an unusual day, especially in regard to your finances. Substantial gains are indicated, but extravagance could eliminate your profit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You will pull your own weight in a group project today, but others might not be as dedicated. Remind them that there is no such thing as a free lunch.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today you might have to choose between doing business with a friend or buying what you need from a cheaper source.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep your priorities in order today. Beware of the inclination to reward the undeserving while ignoring people who have helped you a great deal.

How should the play go in four spades after West has led the club king?

North bid what he hoped his partner could make. Given West's values, a slam was unlikely.

When the dummy came down, South saw four losers staring him in the face. He won the first trick with dummy's ace and cashed the spade king. Then, "sudden a thought came like a full-blown rose, flushing his brow, and in his pained heart made purple riot."

At trick three, declarer led dummy's diamond to his nine.

West won with the 10 and, not seeing the danger, tried to cash the club queen. Happily, South trumped and led the diamond king from hand, ruffing away West's ace. Two more rounds of trumps were followed by the queen and jack of diamonds, on which two of dummy's heart losers disappeared. Declarer now conceded two tricks, one club and one heart.

East, sotto voce, said, "And still she slept an azure-lidded sleep."

"What did you say?" asked West.

"Well, you weren't watching. When declarer unwisely drew a round of trumps, I dropped the 10, my highest spot, to show values in hearts. If I hadn't wanted a heart switch, I would have played my lowest spade."

One thinking, one asleep

By Phillip Alder

This is the Eve of St. Agnes. John Keats wrote a long narrative poem of the same name. However, I'm not sure they are related as the poem, in an atmosphere of passion and excitement, describes the elopement of a pair of youthful lovers. Regardless, a couple of passages will be sneaked into my text.

Parcells will exit after Super Bowl

BOSTON (AP) — The Bill Parcells era with the New England Patriots, a four-year reign in which he took the team from a 2-14 record to the Super Bowl, will end after Sunday's title game, according to a published report.

In a story citing unidentified sources, Boston Globe writer Will McDonough said the situation between Parcells and Patriots owner Bob Kraft could end up in court.

Parcells reportedly is being targeted by the New York Jets for their coaching opening.

Before this season, Parcells asked to have the final year deleted from his five-year contract. Kraft agreed.

Parcells has refused consistently to discuss his future, saying he and Kraft would talk about it after the season. At a news conference Sunday night after the Patriots arrived in New Orleans, Parcells said his decision would not depend on the outcome of the Super Bowl.

Parcells would command a very lucrative salary if he left the Patriots.

"In the free agent market, timing is everything, so he'll be the high guy on everybody's wish list" if he leaves, Patriots offensive captain Bruce Armstrong said. "Whatever the top guy is getting, (Parcells) will be the new top guy."

After the Patriots beat Jacksonville in the AFC championship game, Kraft praised him as the greatest coach in modern football history. Parcells, standing nearby, appeared touched.

And Kraft may not be willing to let Parcells go without a fight.

Robert Fraley, Parcells' agent, said he was headed to New England over the weekend to try to resolve the situation, but that Kraft cancelled the meeting and, instead, sent him a letter informing him that he will seek compensation from any NFL team that tries to sign Parcells after the Super Bowl.

Kraft reportedly feels that language in the contract gives him first crack at keeping Parcells and that he can require Parcells to coach the Patriots next season for $1.3 million.

Fraley says there is no contract provision requiring compensation and that his client is free to do whatever he wants in 1997.

Parcells has expressed frustration in the past over not having final say on all personnel matters, including the draft.

Number 25 Tech rolls over Kansas State

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — It is a classic basketball combination — a powerful inside player coupled with an outside shooter.

It worked for No. 25 Texas Tech on Saturday in a 73-64 victory over Kansas State.

Kansas State kept sending big bodies — Gerald Eaker, Manny Dies and Shawn Rhodes — to muscle Tech's inside scorer Tony Battie. None of them could push Battie away from the basket, and he scored 26 points and had 13 rebounds for his 12th double-double of the season.

Meanwhile, Cory Carr was making 6-of-11 shots from the 3-point line, including one with just over three minutes left from the top of the key an instant before the shot clock expired that was the death knell for the Wildcats.

"That was the turning point," Red Raiders coach Jim Dickey said. "The key was we had possessions where we were able to score and didn't allow them to score. We rebounded and didn't allow them second shots after Cory hit that big three. Our defensive awareness was better in the second half.

"We remained patient and kept our poise when we got down in the first half. Then they had possessions where they didn't score and we got the rebounds."

Kansas State led by as much as 10 in the first half, but Carr helped lead Tech back into a 38-38 tie at halftime. He hit a 3-pointer at the buzzer to tie the game.

The Wildcats hung with the Red Raiders in the second half until Tech started pulling away late in the game.

Eaker, who had a strong game with 10 points and 10 rebounds while battling Battie, declined interview requests after the game and left without saying anything.

Wildcats coach Tom Asbury was remarkably upbeat after the homecourt loss.

"We just have to keep our heads up and get ready to play," he said. "We have a lot of basketball left and nobody is panicking.

"You feel good about the energy level. I mean, if we keep playing this hard all season, we'll win a lot of games."

Tech has a quick turnaround to play Oklahoma State at home tonight.

Rockets snap Bulls' streak

HOUSTON (AP) — The Chicago Bulls know precisely the problem they face with the Houston Rockets: Hakeem Olajuwon.

Olajuwon, who didn't drink liquids during the game because of his religious fast, had 32 points and 16 rebounds as the Rockets finished with a 19-2 run to defeat the Bulls 102-86 on Sunday.

The victory snapped Chicago's nine-game winning streak and Houston's four-game losing streak — dating to 1994 — against the Bulls.

"He's unsolvable," Michael Jordan said of Olajuwon. "He's tough and you've got to keep the ball out of his hands. He's a very agile center and that is something that we just don't have.

"So, we try to develop some defensive schemes, but when he's on, there is nothing you can do."

Olajuwon, a Muslim, is observing Ramadan, a period of fasting that includes no liquids between sun up and sundown, which makes it the most difficult for day games.

"It's a training process to teach self control and will power," Olajuwon said. "But I'm a professional. I don't use that as an excuse. I just do my job.

"I had some rice and also chicken (before sun up) and hoped that would stay with me. The hunger was not there, it was the thirst. I tried not to think about it. The thing is to control your desire."

Rockets forward Kevin Willis, who started for injured Charles Barkley, sees hope for the Rockets if they meet the Bulls in the playoffs.

"If we meet them down the road, we want them to know they don't have the upper hand, that we can beat them and that they have trouble matching up with Dream," Willis said. "We have to exploit that."

Olajuwon played the entire third quarter and after taking a brief rest, returned to help put down Chicago's final charge. He played 39 minutes.

"We have a team that can beat them, but you have to pay the price," Olajuwon said. "This is just one game but this is satisfying. We knew we could play with them. This is character-building for this team."

Houston's Clyde Drexler finished with 17 points, 11 assists and 10 rebounds for his 23rd career triple-double.

Olajuwon's gutsy performance and Drexler's complete game were a big part of the victory, but a technical foul against Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich also got some of the credit.

Jordan, who had 26 points, gave the Bulls their first lead since early in the first quarter when he drove for the basket with 7:12 to play and drew a foul from Sam Mack.

Jordan sank both free throws and also a technical foul called on Tomjanovich, who thought Jordan should have received the foul.

That gave Chicago an 84-83 lead, but Olajuwon made four straight free throws to start the Rockets' charge in the last six minutes.

The Rockets called it the turning point.

Bill Wennington scored 14 points for the Bulls, but Scottie Pippen was 2-for-14 from the field and finished with five points.

WTC to face South Plains

The Western Texas College Lady Westerners travel to Levelland tonight to face the Lady Texans of South Plains College.

The Lady Westerners are looking to improve their conference record after a 77-53 loss to Howard College last Monday night.

WTC's conference record is 1-5, while its season tally stands at 4-11.

The Lady Texans are ranked 16th in the nation and are looking to keep the ball rolling against the Westerners. South Plains was in conference action last Monday when it defeated Howard College 77-53.

The Lady Texans conference mark stands at 4-1, and their season record at 15-1.

Tip-off is set for 6 p.m. in the Texan Dome of South Plains College.

8th girls win Snyder tourney

Snyder's 8th grade girls' A-team won the championship of its own tournament while the Snyder B-team captured the third place trophy.

Snyder crushed Abilene Wylie, 37-27, in the title game. The hosts had led 20-8 at halftime, and Wylie was able to close the gap by two in the third period. In the fourth quarter, each team scored nine points and Snyder preserved the 10-point victory.

Ashley Delce led Snyder's scoring with nine points. Cary Brown followed with seven while Rina Geiger put in six. Callie Bane canned five and Kristen Murray added four. Cameron Mackey, T'Leah Eicke and Whitney Webb each contributed two.

In an earlier game, Snyder pounded Big Spring, 44-6, holding the visitors scoreless in the first and fourth quarters.

Delce led Snyder's offense with 15 points while Geiger put in 11. Eicke and Webb each nailed four while Mackey and Brown added three. Two points each were posted by Bane and Murray.

In the game for third place, Snyder 8th B-team nudged Sweetwater, 25-20. Sweetwater was unable to score in the opening eight minutes.

Leslie Hancock led Snyder's scoring with nine points. Jennifer Newman posted six while Amanda Clark got four. Shannon Barnes, Amber Bass and Angie Shoemake each added two.

Earlier, Snyder B-team bowed to Big Spring, 21-15, after suffering a scoreless third period.

For Snyder, Newman scored four points while Latisha Nichols, Barnes, Clark and Shoemake each managed two.

Birdie putt gives Irwin senior win

KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii (AP) — Hale Irwin figured the MasterCard Championship would come down to the final two holes. It did.

After an afternoon-long sparring session with co-leader Gil Morgan, Irwin rolled in a 28-foot birdie putt on the 164-yard 17th hole Sunday to capture the Senior PGA Tour's first event of the year.

Morgan, meanwhile, lost his concentration on the hole, leaving his second shot 50 feet from the hole and his par try 10 feet short.

The two-stroke swing was all Irwin needed.

"It was an interesting day, wasn't it?" said Irwin of his battle with Morgan.

They started the final round tied at 3-under 141 and stayed deadlocked from the fifth through the 16th holes.

"You had to be a participant to feel the excitement. It was like sparring. It was, 'Who's going to throw the first punch?' At the 17th, I told my caddy, it's time for one."

Irwin finished the final round with a 68 to complete the 54-hole tournament at 7-under 209. Morgan's 70 put him at 211.

Bob Charles birdied the final two holes on the 7,053-yard Hualalai Resort course on Hawaii island for a closing 69 to finish alone in third place at 212.

Morgan actually was in a position to take the lead on the 16th, but he butchered a 6-foot birdie attempt.

"If I could have made that putt, it could have been different," he said.

Freshmen win streak upped to 19

SWEETWATER — Snyder freshmen boys relied on their defense en route to a 43-37 victory over Abilene Wylie Saturday in the championship game of the Sweetwater freshmen tournament.

The victory brought Snyder's perfect season record to 19-0.

The Tigers led by three at the end of the first quarter but trailed by six at halftime. By the end of the third period, Snyder's defense had prevailed and the Tigers held a 31-29 margin going into the final period.

In the title game, Paul Camp led the scoring with 12 points while Josh Ward canned 11, including one shot from the three-point arc.

Sonny Cumbie was also in double digits with 10 points while Trey Gorman and Greg McAnaw each tossed in four. Jared Hester added two points.

In the tournament's earlier game Saturday, Snyder overcame a four-point deficit at halftime and rolled to a 48-40 victory over Lamesa.

Coaches said Justin Phillips, who scored four points, and Justin Rosson, who scored three, were instrumental in the victory.

Gorman led the Tiger offense with 10 points. Cumbie and Hester each nailed nine, including a trey by Hester. Ward also got a three and a total of seven points. Camp also contributed four while McaNaw added two.

The freshmen A and B-teams host Andrews tonight with games starting at 6 and 7:30 p.m.

South kicks to Hula Bowl win

HONOLULU (AP) — For a punter, Andy Russ isn't such a bad kicker.

The Mississippi State punter had not kicked a field goal since his days at Montgomery Bell Academy in Nashville, Tenn.

On Sunday, Russ booted a Hula Bowl-record four field goals to give the South team a 26-13 victory over the North in the final college football game of the season and possibly the final game for Lou Holtz, who ended his 11-year career at Notre Dame by coaching the North.

Kansas keeps slate clean

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Reserve guard Billy Thomas scored eight points during a late burst and No. 1 Kansas remained unbeaten with a 73-65 victory over undermanned Connecticut Sunday.

Thomas, who finished with 11 points, was a one-man 8-2 run that turned the Jayhawks' 57-55 lead with 3:45 to play into a 65-57 lead with 1:54 left.

Kansas (18-0) then closed it out from the free throw line by going 8-for-8 over the final 53 seconds to cap a second half that saw the Jayhawks make all 16 of their free throws. They were 18-for-19 from the line for the game.

The Huskies (11-4) played without starters Kirk King and Ricky Moore, who were declared ineligible during the week pending clarification of an allegation of extra benefits received by the two.

Execution set for Tison gang member

PHOENIX (AP) — The urgent call reached Sheriff Frank Reyes in the middle of a steamy August night in 1978.

Pinal County deputies were involved in a shootout south of Casa Grande with unknown assailants who had tried to run two roadblocks. Reyes was there within 15 minutes. It was hours before he realized the enormity of what he found.

Deputies had stopped the Tison Gang, two convicted murderers and the three sons who'd broken them out of prison 12 days earlier. Between escape and capture, they'd killed six people in two states and paralyzed Arizonans with fear.

Now, almost 20 years after the murder spree that spawned a television movie and subsequent book, one of three surviving gang members is set for execution. Randy Greenawalt, now 47, is to die by injection Thursday.

"He deserves it. I hope the hell they carry it out this time," said Bob Corbin, Arizona's attorney general from 1978-90. "If they executed him for his crime the first time, those people might still be alive today."

"Those people" were a young Arizona family of four and a Texas couple on their honeymoon when they crossed paths with the escapees. The Tison brothers — Donald, 20, Ricky, 19, and Raymond, 18 — had helped their father Gary Tison and Greenawalt break out of the state prison in Florence.

Greenawalt was serving a life sentence for murdering a truck driver in Flagstaff in 1974. Tison was doing life for killing a Phoenix jail guard in 1967.

Greenawalt was in on an escape plan hatched by Tison. As an office clerk at the prison's trusty annex, he had access to the facility's control room and was there July 30, 1978, when the Tison boys arrived for their usual visit.

Weekend visits to the medium-security prison offered an informal picnic setting in much laxer times, and the sons apparently had little trouble smuggling in an ice chest packed with revolvers and sawed-off shotguns.

The five men fled in Donald Tison's 1969 Lincoln Continental, setting the stage for a manhunt still fresh in many minds.

"I remember how scared people were," said Michael Arra, now a state Corrections Department spokesman and then a Phoenix TV reporter. "There were two killers on the loose and nobody knew where they were."

The next day, the Lincoln had a flat tire on a barren stretch of road near the California border, just south of Quartzsite. Marine Sgt. John Lyons, 24, of Yuma and his family stopped to help. Their bodies were found five days later.

Lyons was lying near the abandoned getaway car, close-range gunshot wounds in his head, shoulders, chest and wrists.

His 23-year-old wife, Donnelda, was in the back seat, cradling 22-month-old Christopher. She'd been shot in the chest and neck; the toddler took a shotgun blast to the head.

The body of the couple's niece, Teresa Tyson, 15, was found a quarter-mile away. She had crawled off, mortally wounded when a bullet shattered her thigh bone, fragments of which pierced her abdomen. She bled to death and was found with a leather dog collar buckled around her ankle, apparently in a misguided attempt to staunch the bleeding.

The Tison gang stole Lyons' orange Mazda and headed northeast. Police believe it was Aug. 8 when they ran across James and Margene Judge at a construction roadblock in southwestern Colorado. But the date's a guess at best.

The bodies of the Amarillo, Texas, couple, weren't found until November. They'd been shot to death and dumped at a remote campsite near Pagosa Springs, Colo.

No one ever was prosecuted in the Judges' murders, but Colorado authorities closed the case after the Arizona convictions.

The gang returned to Arizona. Police got their first break from a convenience store clerk in Flagstaff. Suspicious of a group of men who came in four times to load up on groceries and gasoline, the clerk gave police a description of the car the men were driving — a Mazda, spray-painted silver.

Pinal County deputies set up two roadblocks on Interstate 10, believing the Tisons would use it on the way to Mexico.

What police could not know was that the gang had ditched the Mazda and was now driving the Judges' van. It was loaded with guns and ammunition.

"So here comes this van with Texas plates and nobody has any idea the Tisons and Greenawalt are in it," said James W. Clarke, a University of Arizona professor who wrote "The Last Rampage" about the case. "The van runs the first roadblock and then the second as shots are being fired."

When the shooting stopped, police crawled up to the van and found the dying driver. "That's when they discovered they had Don Tison. It was dumb luck," Clarke said.

The others had run off into the desert. Greenawalt and brothers Raymond and Ricky were caught immediately. Gary Tison was found dead of exposure 11 days later, one mile from the shootout site.

Greenawalt and the surviving Tisons were charged with 92 crimes, including four counts of murder. All were convicted and sentenced to death in March 1979.

Thirteen years later, the state Supreme Court ruled the prosecution had failed to prove the brothers had shown reckless indifference toward human life, since their father and Greenawalt had done the shootings. They were resentenced to life in prison.

The 1983 made-for-TV movie about the escape, "A Killer in the Family," concentrated on the Tisons.

Police sort through tips in shooting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ennis Cosby was buried at his family's Massachusetts estate as police fielded tips received after releasing sketches of a suspect and a possible witness in his slaying.

The only son of entertainer Bill Cosby was shot in the head early Thursday as he changed a tire along a West Los Angeles road.

A description of the suspect, released late Saturday, depicted him as a white man, 25 to 32 years old, of average height and weight wearing a light-colored knit cap.

Police also were seeking a possible witness, described as a white man in his late 20s or early 30s with a mustache and goatee. He may have been driving a blue hatchback car with out-of-state license plates.

Police don't know if there is more than one suspect and if anything was taken from Cosby's car, Cmdr. Tim McBride said. Authorities still consider robbery the probable motive.

"We've received numerous calls since the composite was released," Officer Vincent Aguirre said Sunday.

KCBS-TV reported late Sunday that Cosby's death was "swift and instantly lethal." Quoting unidentified police sources, the station reported that Cosby was surprised and unable to defend himself. He was standing and still gripping a piece of paper in his right hand when he was felled by a gunshot.

The (New York) Daily News reported today that Cosby may have offered his killer a cigarette. Cosby, 27, had a blue pack of cigarettes in his right hand, and detectives speculate that he may have thought the stranger who approached him was a homeless person looking for a cigarette or some change, the News said.

Friends of TWA victims find solace online

NEW YORK (AP) — When his fiancee died on TWA Flight 800, Anthony Worster couldn't sleep. He walked for miles. He cried.

Searching web sites one sleepless night, he stumbled on the TWA Flight 800 Memorial Message Board. Suddenly, he was not so alone.

The World Wide Web site was filled with the emotional outpourings of people from all over the world who had lost loved ones in the July 17 crash.

"It brought me support," said Worster, 31, of Orono, Maine. "For the first time I realized that no matter how bad things got, everything was going to be OK."

Worster is one of the many people who have used the site created by Fredric Ableman, a 24-year-old from Long Island whose company, MacTrain, designs corporate web sites.

Ableman had no connection to the 230 people who died when the Paris-bound jet exploded shortly after takeoff from New York. He just wanted to provide a discussion forum for the public.

"It was really a surprise to me when the families started posting messages, but that makes it all worth doing," he said.

Many people have turned to the web site for solace, often finding it more comforting than friends or relatives. Relatives also correspond on a site called The Families of Flight 800.

"The hype has died down and now it's starting to hit you and there's nobody else to turn to," said Matt Ziemkiewicz, 29, whose sister was a flight attendant on Flight 800.

"There's times when you're wide awake late at night and you can just jump on the Internet," he said. "It can be very therapeutic."

On what would have been his sister's 24th birthday, Ziemkiewicz left a message: "HAPPY BIRTHDAY JILL. Dear GOD, how we miss you!"

Jeff Bohlin's 15-year-old daughter, Michelle, was one of 16 teen-agers from Montoursville, Pa., who died in the crash while on a school trip. A snowfall recently brought back memories of his only child. He turned to the web site to express them.

"Often after a snowfall one can hear the gleeful voices of the children sled-riding in the cemetery," he wrote. "Tonight, after dark, I went up to the cemetery to visit my daughter's grave ... In some small way, it made me happy to hear gleeful children enjoying the snow."

Thousands of people take a look at the web site every day. Most do not post messages but many do. Some offer condolences; others theorize on what caused the explosion or give advice on lawyers.

Acting as a vessel for grief, or a wellspring for information, is not unusual for the Internet.

Similar setups were established after the 1994 Kobe earthquake in Japan and the 1995 Oklahoma City bombing, and a service called GriefNet also organizes support groups for widows and people who have lost siblings.

"The Internet ... is serving the function that communities and families have served from time immemorial," said Therese Rando, a Warwick, R.I., psychologist.

Worster recalled seeing an anonymous message posted two days before Christmas by someone identified only as "I loved you so much."

"It's Christmas and you should be home with family laughing and smiling, the life of the party. But I had to insist on you changing your flight plans and I led you to your grave. I'm so sorry."

Bowles to monitor White House visitors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new White House chief of staff says he will try to do a better job of monitoring visitors to the executive mansion and kiss-and-tell books by presidential aides.

But Erskine B. Bowles, in his debut in Sunday television talk shows, said President Clinton will continue to invite whomever he wants for overnight stays in the White House.

Bowles, a low-key North Carolina investment banker, is replacing Leon Panetta, a longtime Washington insider who has been an aggressive spokesman for White House policies, as Clinton's chief of staff.

Bowles acknowledged that "some mistakes were made" by Democratic fund-raisers in inviting people, some of questionable backgrounds, to White House events. New procedures would be initiated "to make sure that some inappropriate people who had access to the president won't in the future," he said.

Asked on NBC's "Meet the Press," about a new book by former political White House strategist Dick Morris, Bowles said it was "wrong" for people working in the White House to write about their experiences and "it is something we will address."

But he said Clinton's practice of inviting big contributors, among others, for overnight stays at the White House would continue. Critics have charged that Clinton has been selling nights in the Lincoln Bedroom to the highest bidders.

"The president has had truly hundreds and hundreds of people stay in the Lincoln Bedroom. They've been family, they've been friends, they've been supporters, they've been people of every race, color and creed, rich and poor," Bowles said. "There's a big difference between perception and reality."

Bowles was praised by Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., who said earlier on NBC that the new chief of staff "will be somebody we can work with." Panetta, on the other hand "had the scars of the past," Lott said. "I thought he was not a positive force" in the budget talks of last year.

Bowles deftly fielded questions on the budget, White House scandals and House Speaker Newt Gingrich's troubles, and ended the interview with what appeared to be the invention of a new word.

Apparently referring to the muckraking and mudslinging activities that have tied Washington in partisan knots, Bowles said it was time to "move on and do the people's business and get away from the 'mudraking' and the like."

Dr. King's Words of Wisdom Still Ring With Truth Today

DEAR READERS: Today we celebrate the life of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., a martyr of the civil rights movement and a great American who was shot to death in 1968 at age 39.

His persistence in the face of violent opposition and his eloquent pleas for social justice propelled him to international prominence. In 1964, he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. Dr. King's principles of nonviolence were based on the teachings of Christianity.

His words of wisdom are even more meaningful today than they were in 1963, when he spoke from the steps of the Lincoln Memorial and said (in part):

"I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal.' ... And this will be the day ... when all of God's children will be able to sing with new meaning, 'My country 'tis of thee, sweet land of liberty, of thee I sing. Land where our fathers died, land of the Pilgrims' pride, from every mountainside, let freedom ring.'

"When we let freedom ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will be able to speed up that day when all of God's children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual, 'Free at last! Free at last! Thank God Almighty, we are free at last.'"

God bless our great country, the United States of America. And may we Americans, by our conduct, be worthy of God's blessings.

DEAR ABBY: I am an elementary school teacher in a suburban area of a large metropolitan city. I have a good student I'll call Judy who is in training to become a hypochondriac. This little girl misses approximately 25 percent of school days in any given month. She complains of migraines, stomach flu and colds, and has been plagued by numerous injuries. She stays home for minor ailments that I would send my own kids to school with.

Judy has learned to enjoy the attention she receives from her "illnesses" and "injuries" and plays them like an accomplished actress. Her parents seem to be conscientious about her schooling, and her assignments are always completed at home. Her stay-at-home mother dotes excessively on her daughter's complaints and encourages this negative behavior. This could well become a lifelong behavior trait for Judy. Should I continue to overlook the obvious as long as the child's assignments are completed, or should I bring up this subject with Judy's mother?

TEACHER IN TEXAS

DEAR TEACHER: Is it possible that something is going on at school that is causing Judy's excessive absenteeism — like teasing, bullying or some other social problem?

The mother should be made aware that her daughter's absences are excessive, if she doesn't already know it. You would be doing Judy and her mother a favor by bringing your concerns forward in a parent-teacher meeting.

Author of 'Deliverance' dead at age 73

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — James Dickey, a poet and author who explored the clash of modern male culture with wilderness in the novel "Deliverance" is dead at 73.

Dickey, who died Sunday of complications from lung disease, said he only wrote novels to pay the bills. His first love was poetry.

His collection of poems "Buckdancer's Choice" won the 1966 National Book Award for poetry.

Dickey's writing often dealt with man and nature. He felt that people long to cast off their modern frustrations for a more primitive life that had "more of the truth in it."

"I like the whole sense of reversion of the domestic animal to the wild state," he said in a 1994 interview.

Dickey said he got the idea for "Deliverance," about a group of men whose pleasure trip the Georgia hills turns into a fight for their lives, while living in an Italian village.

"I saw a figure standing at the edge of a cliff," he said. "And I thought: 'Who is it? What is he doing there? Did he come from the woods, inland ... or did he come up it? Why would he do that?' It all began to come together. Then I put a river down there. That's the way it was started."

The 1970 book received the French Prix Medicis in 1971 and in 1972 was made into an Academy Award-nominated movie.

His next novel, the little-noticed "Alnilam," was published in 1987. "To the White Sea," about a tail gunner shot down over Japan in the final days of World War II, was published in 1993.

Born in Atlanta, Dickey was raised primarily by his grandmother but spent a lot of time with his father, whose family was from the Appalachian Mountains.

He had two sons with his first wife of 30 years. After her death in 1976, Dickey remarried and had a daughter.

He served in the Army Air Corps in the ~~early~~ 1940s, then again in the 1950s, becoming a first lieutenant.

"I'm essentially a creature of the military, not that I was all that great a success at it," he said. "It formed a lot of my values. The main one is survival."

Dickey was inspired to write verse when he received an anthology of poetry during a stint in Okinawa, a place he later described as a "bloody and terrible stone."

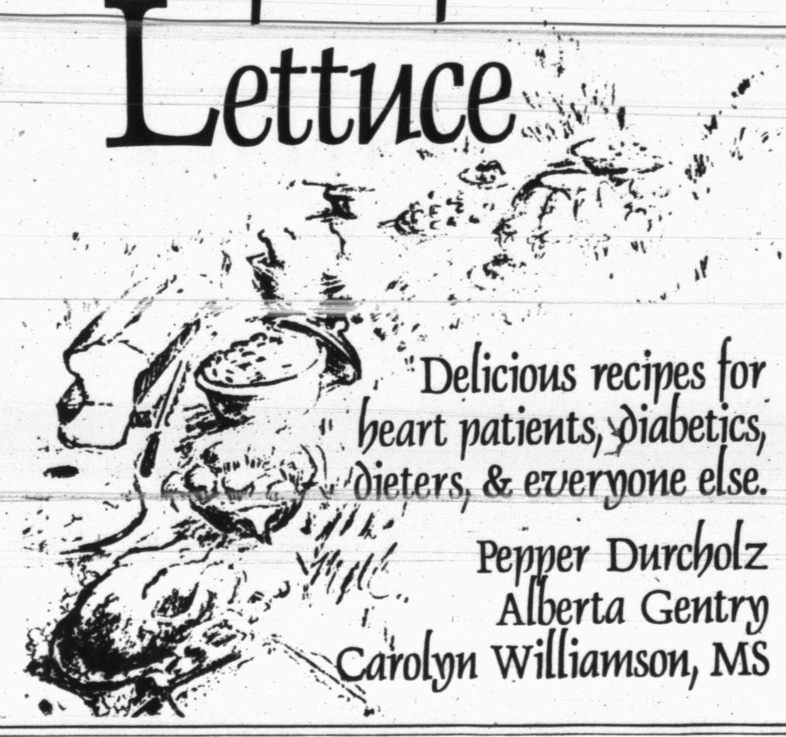

Dickey earned bachelor's and master's degrees from Vanderbilt University and taught English at Rice University from 1952-54. He studied in Europe under Sewanee Review and Guggenheim fellowships.

He became the University of South Carolina's poet-in-residence in 1968.

"One of (my father's) main vocations, or avocations, was cock fighting," Dickey said. "He was delighted when I affiliated myself with a school whose mascot is a fighting gamecock."

Did diet drug have lasting effect?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: During my mother's pregnancy 20 years ago, an amphetamine drug for weight-control was briefly prescribed for her. I now suffer the consequences: speech and neurological problems and a learning disability. I have seen many doctors, all of whom were unfamiliar with the relation between my mother's stimulant prescription and my present problems. How can I sort this out?

DEAR READER: Stimulants, such as amphetamines, used to be commonly prescribed for overweight persons to help them diet. The practice, which was harmful and addictive, has fortunately been abandoned. Amphetamine-like substances may cause hypertension, brain damage, heart disease, and other unsavory complications.

Infants born to amphetamine-treated mothers were often addicted to the drug and had to undergo withdrawal, which was an additional neonatal burden. Such withdrawal usually lasted several days, however, and the effects did not endure into childhood.

For this reason, I do not believe that your present health problems, including a learning disability, were caused by the drug given to your mother. It's more likely that you have a condition that would have been present regardless of your mother's medication. Of course, I don't have proof of this, and no one can know for sure.

Whatever it is that caused your difficulties, you really have to deal with the situation as it exists. Blaming your mother's prescription isn't going to enable you to get better. In fact, by descending into the role of a helpless victim, you may actually interfere with the healing process.

First of all, you should be examined by a neurologist and undergo extensive psychological testing to define, with more precision, exactly what it is that you have. Could you have attention deficit/hyperactivity disorder? Possibly. Are you experiencing some sort of brain damage, with resulting cognitive impairment? Maybe. Could you, through special training (speech therapy and so forth) or the judicious use of Ritalin (or similar drugs) be helped? I hope so. Once a diagnosis has been made, treatment should be relatively straightforward.

I'm sorry that your mother was given a medication that may have temporarily harmed her or you. But that's past history. Now, it seems to me, you should alter your focus and devote your energy to a strategy to improve your life. A neurologist can help you.

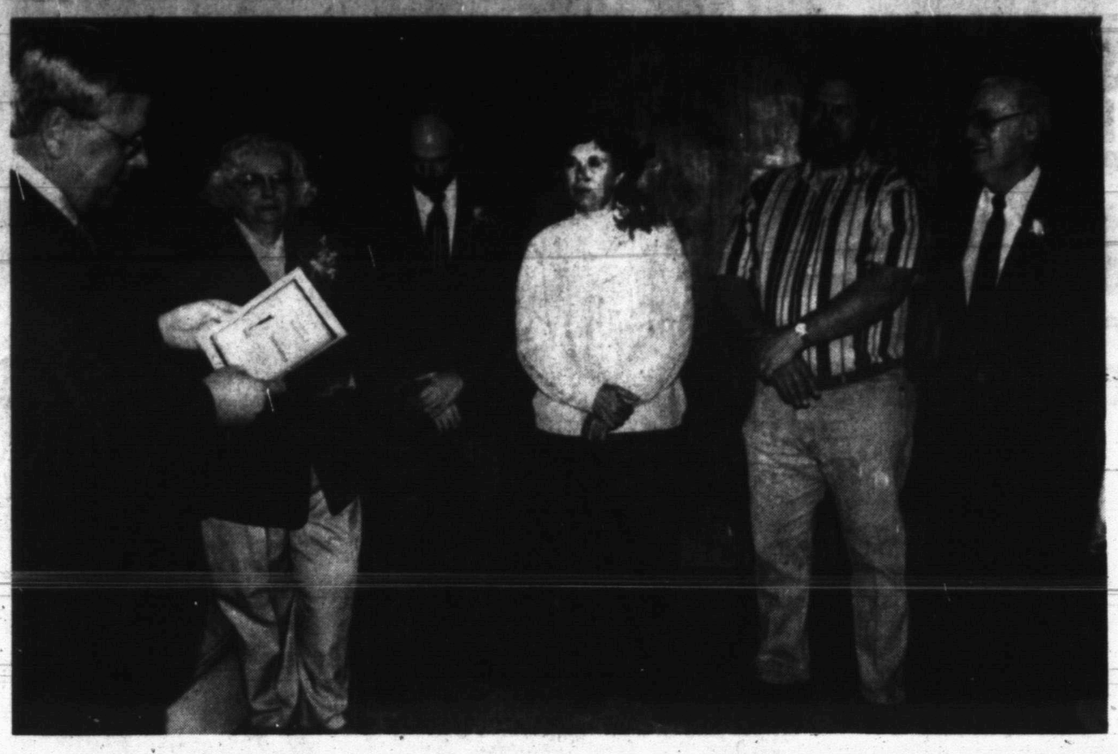

DEAR DR. GOTT: In the past, you recommended an herbal tea for the treatment of toenail fungus. What is the name of the product?

DEAR READER: Chronic toenail fungus can often be cured by using one of the newer anti-fungal, prescription pills, such as Lamisil or Sporanox.

However, LaPacho tea is also useful or this purpose. Brew the tea as directed; then, while it is steeping, soak the toes in the solution until it becomes tepid, usually about 15 or 20 minutes. Do this twice a day. (You may reheat the beverage and reuse it.)

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Fads II: Herbs and Other Healing Fads." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

Washington today: Clinton's second term search for legacy

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Advice for President Clinton as he begins the four years likely to determine his place in history: Think globally, learn from the two Roosevelts and be thankful your victory was far short of a landslide.

For Clinton, the phrase "four more years" takes on new meaning today, something more like "your last four years to make your mark."

Does finding a niche in history intrude on Clinton's thoughts?

"Actually, I read a book not very long ago ... on second-term presidencies," he told a news conference 10 days after his re-election. The news was not particularly encouraging. Any book about second terms is largely a study of failure.

"I'm very mindful of history's difficulties and I'm going to try and beat them," Clinton said.

"Everywhere you look, second terms have not been kind to people in American history," said Louis Gould, a historian at the University of Texas. "It makes you wonder why people run for second terms."

Historians generally rank Franklin D. Roosevelt with George Washington and Abraham Lincoln as the greatest of presidents. But Roosevelt endured what historian Robert Dalleck called "a pretty stumbling second term." His plan to restructure the Supreme Court collapsed under furious public opposition and unemployment rose again.

But unlike any other president, Roosevelt was re-elected to third and fourth terms. The onset of World War II gave him the chance to assert the leadership that assured his rank among the greatest of presidents.

His second term might also have reflected the curse of landslides.

Roosevelt's troubles began shortly after he was re-elected in 1936 in one of the great landslides in political history. He carried every state but Maine and Vermont.

Two years after the biggest popular vote margin in history, Lyndon Johnson saw his standing plunge as Vietnam War casualties rose. Richard Nixon suffered the biggest fall after a landslide re-election when the Watergate scandal forced him to become the only president to resign.

"Clinton may be better served by the fact that he got only 49 percent of the vote," Dalleck said. "He has to be very attentive to the political constraints on him. That's not a bad thing."

At the midpoint of the eight years allowed him in the White House, Clinton cannot yet claim a crowning achievement that would assure him a ranking among the near-greats, presidents like Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson, Woodrow Wilson and Harry Truman.

How do presidents achieve greatness?

Wars are a big help — the Civil War in Lincoln's case, World War I for Wilson and the Second World War for Franklin Roosevelt.

Clinton's awareness of the role of wars in presidential standing is attested to by former political adviser Dick Morris in his book, "Behind the Oval Office."

According to Morris, whose relationship with a prostitute forced him to resign his post, he offered Clinton his views on presidential greatness in a telephone conversation one Sunday morning last August.

"In the first tier are presidents who did great things but also did them in great times," Morris said he told Clinton. "I don't think you can get onto the first tier unless you have the right backdrop."

He quoted Clinton as responding, "You mean a war or something like that?"

Later in the conversation, Morris said Clinton asked him, "Where do I fit in?"

"Right now, to be honest," the consultant replied, "I think you are borderline third tier."

Dalleck, a professor of history at Boston University and a biographer of Lyndon Johnson, said the pattern among presidents who succeed during their second terms is to focus on foreign affairs.

"On the domestic side, I don't think historians are going to look back and see Clinton as heroic because the budget is coming into balance," he said.

Clinton has said he would like to be compared to Theodore Roosevelt, who compiled an enviable record on both domestic and foreign affairs. He pushed for anti-trust legislation and laws protecting the environment. The Pure Food and Drug Act also was enacted during his second term.

Officers recount finding twins in snow

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The sporadic breathing of a 3-year-old girl found laying face down in the snow as her twin sister kneeled next to here filled Officer Allen Wagner with dread.

The officer believed Jennifer Woracek was close to death as he raced to his squad car clutching her unconscious body on a bitter cold Friday morning.

"There was a certain sound, a breathing sound, that I have heard with people ready to pass on," Wagner said Saturday, his voice choked with emotion.

Jennifer was in serious condition today and remained on a respirator in the intensive care unit. She appeared to recognize her parents when she periodically woke up, said Dr. George Reynolds, director of Children's Hospital's pediatric intensive care unit.

"She was as close to dead as she could get," Reynolds said.

Her sister, Kourtney, was in stable condition.

The extent of the girls' frostbite and their long-term prognosis remains uncertain.

"We're more concerned about their lower extremities," Reynolds said.

The girls got up before sunrise Friday morning and went outside on a playful adventure in 10-below-zero temperature. Their father called 911 around 4 a.m. after seeing a light on, toys scattered in the living room and an open door.

Police arrived and about 45 minutes later found Jennifer face down in the snow. Her sister was kneeling next to her, and both were without shoes.

"It was shocking," said Officer Troy Kister, who carried Kourtney to the squad car.

Harley Bynum puts quality care first

When it comes to quality, professional photography and framing there is no limit to what Harley Bynum can do.

The only Master Photographer in the area, Harley Bynum has been serving Snyder for 18 years.

"We are quality and service minded. One hundered percent satisfaction is always guaranteed," Harley said.

Earning the title of Master Photographer is no small accomplishment.

Of the thousands of photographers in Texas, only 53 have earned the degree given by the Professional Photographers of America.

Harley and his wife, Judy, can add a special touch to any photograph with specialty decorative matting and custom framing.

"Judy is skilled and trained in framing, and we have attended various seminars to keep up to date with the latest trends and styles in custom matting," Harley said.

Harley and Judy can custom frame just about anything, including photographs, documents and diplomas.

They also frame cross-stitch, wedding invitations, limited edition prints and posters of all sizes.

"We sell western prints here, or you can buy prints elsewhere and bring them in for framing," Harley said.

Individuals can also bring pictures they have taken in for framing.

If you have keepsakes, medals or any type of memorabilia you would like to display, Harley and Judy also do shadow boxes.

The studio carries a large selection of frames, including western, rustic wood, ornate gold and metal frames.

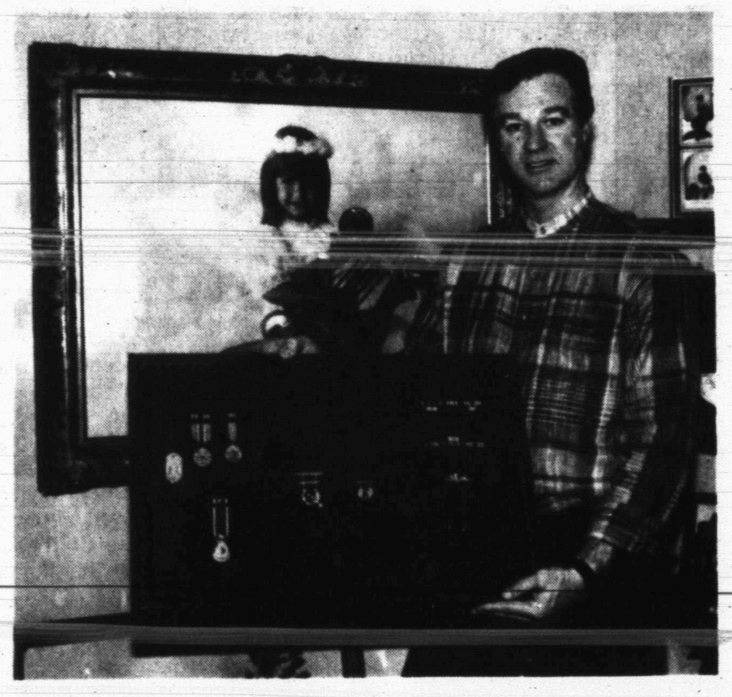

A variety of colors is available.

Harley Bynum is also a full-service photography studio. Although he specializes in children's photography, Harley also does family pictures, weddings, senior pictures and anniversary parties.

Harley adds a creative, special touch to each photograph he takes to ensure quality and satisfaction.

If it's an old photograph you need retouched, Harley has skilled copying and restoration services.

For quality and care in photography and framing, visit Harley Bynum Photography at 3403 Snyder Shopping Center or call 573-4190.

HARLEY BYNUM PHOTOGRAPHY is a quality and service minded photography and framing studio. Harley offers a variety of services including custom framing and matting. He can also display keepsakes and other memorabilia in a special shadow box or photograph your child in an adorable angel setting.

Daughter not allowed to watch TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Bette Midler can be seen on the small screen in the HBO concert special "Diva Las Vegas" by anyone with cable TV — except her 10-year-old daughter Sophie.

The singer-actress maintains a strict TV ban at home, she says in the Jan. 25 TV Guide.

"I won't allow it," Midler said. "I made a pact with myself a long time ago. Never watch anything stupider than you. It's helped me a lot."

"Diva Las Vegas," which premiered on HBO Saturday, isn't the only TV show about her mom that little Sophie seems destined to miss. Midler, 50, has a movie musical project in the works for NBC.

Rare 1954 sports car draws high bid

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — A rare 1954 sports car owned by Jerry Seinfeld drew a high bid of $82,950 at auction, a record price for a Porsche Speedster.

The buyer at Saturday's auction was Michael Kittredge, 43, owner of Yankee Candle Car Museum in South Deerfield, Mass.

The mint-condition white Porsche was expected to sell for between $60,000 and $70,000, Barrett-Jackson Classic Car Auction organizers said. The price included a 5 percent commission.

Seinfeld has been collecting Porsches since 1988. The 1954 Speedster was one of 17 classic cars in his collection.

The Speedster, once owned by road racer Skip Hudson, beat actor James Dean in two 1955 races, auction officials said. Famed driver Dan Gurney also raced the car that year.

Since it was restored in 1994, the car only has been driven 698 miles, said Sam Cabiglio, Seinfeld's automotive consultant.

Abortion clinic suffers minor damage

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The director of an abortion clinic firebombed twice this month is worried the blasts may foreshadow more violence as the 24th anniversary of legalized abortion approaches.

"I hope this doesn't mean that violence is going to flare up around the nation," Sherri Finik, executive administrator of Reproductive Services, said Sunday. "If a fanatic can do this to our clinic or any other family planning service, that puts all of our citizens in jeopardy."

The clinic, which closed down when two Molotov cocktails exploded there New Year's Day, was bombed again Sunday afternoon. Both explosions caused minor damage but no injuries.

On Thursday in Atlanta, two bomb blasts an hour apart rocked a building housing an abortion clinic, injuring six people who had rushed to the scene of the first explosion, including federal agents, rescue workers and a TV cameraman.

The explosions left the Atlanta Northside Family Planning Services clinic in ruins and blew out windows across the street. Police immediately tightened security at all other clinics in the city.

The FBI said it was taking over the Tulsa investigation in light of the Atlanta bombing and the upcoming Jan. 22 anniversary of Roe vs. Wade, the Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion.

Agents were at the site this morning.

"We have quite a few folks out here combing the area, trying to come up with clues and evidence. It's just going to depend on how quickly we're able to find things and how much was left behind by that person," said FBI Special Agent Brenda Entrikin.

Tulsa police did not know what kind of explosives caused Sunday's blast or whether the bombs exploded on the outside or inside of the building, which police Sgt. Wayne Allen said "had been rendered safe both inside and out."

There were no suspects and no one claimed responsibility. Police said it was too early to speculate if the Sunday bomber was the same person who firebombed the clinic Jan. 1.

Tulsa police Officer Michelle Markey heard the blasts from her patrol car across the street. She called it in on her radio, then rushed to the building. She did not see anyone flee.

Gloria Feldt, president of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, called the bombings acts of terrorism.

"It is time that all citizens, regardless of how they feel about abortion, join hands and speak out," Ms. Feldt said.

Lawmakers seek to direct lottery profits to education

DALLAS (AP) — Four years after the state lottery was created, some lawmakers — backed by Gov. George W. Bush — are pushing to scrap current law and dedicate all lottery money to public schools.

That's what many Texans want, says state Sen. Jane Nelson, who has filed a bill to make the change.

"I can't go to any meeting anywhere, whether I am talking about education, business issues or crime, where I don't get asked by the audience why the lottery money is not going to education," said the Republican legislator from the Dallas suburb of Flower Mound.

She acknowledges that prospects for her proposal are uncertain, chiefly because several key lawmakers don't like the idea. They and other critics say tying school funding to an unstable sources like gambling would be too risky.

Another objection is that if all the $2.2 billion generated every two years by the lottery went straight to education, programs now getting some of the lottery money would have to get it from elsewhere in the general revenue fund, which totaled $44 billion in the current budget.

The fund pays for state-supported programs such as health and human services, prisons, parks, public safety and education.

"It would be something of a shell game," said Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bill Ratliff.

"We would be telling the people of Texas we dedicated those proceeds to education, and then we would have to turn around and take out the same amount of general revenue. People would have every right to be incensed that we were playing games with them."

State law now requires that all lottery profits — money left over after prizes, retailer shares, contractor fees and administrative costs — go into the general revenue fund, the state's bank account. That amounts to about 35 percent of every dollar spent on the games of chance.

Bush is expected to recommend dedicating lottery funds to education in his State of the State address this month.

"He believes that lottery proceeds should be dedicated to our schools because that is what people were led to believe," said Karen Hughes, the governor's press secretary.

Gingrich to decide how to pay penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newt Gingrich will decide within two weeks whether to use personal funds, campaign money or some other method to pay a $300,000 penalty for his ethics violations, the speaker's attorney said today.

The method he chooses could prompt lawyers to seek advice from the ethics committee, Federal Election Commission or other agencies, possibly delaying payment for months, attorney J. Randolph Evans said.

"There are three criteria: what is legal, what is ethical, what is appropriate under the circumstances," Evans said in an interview. "All three will be applied in making a decision."

The House will vote Tuesday on a resolution to reprimand Gingrich for ethical misconduct and assess him $300,000 for extra work he caused the ethics committee with misleading statements. The committee found Gingrich should have known his statements were inaccurate when he denied involvement of his political organization in a college course financed with tax-exempt funds.

Evans said he expected Gingrich's decision "will not require more than a week or two," and his legal researchers would then decide whether outside advice would be needed.

"We don't want to end up with more problems," Evans said. "Whether the alternative is personal payment or a campaign payment or a legal defense fund or some other mechanism, all will require some investigation because it will be heavily scrutinized."

The chairman of the House Republican caucus says it would be a mistake for Gingrich to use campaign contributions to pay the penalty.

"It's going to cause another uproar" if Gingrich taps his campaign treasury rather than his own checkbook, said Rep. John Boehner of Ohio, chairman of the House Republican Conference.

Karen Carmichael

1958-1997

SAN ANGELO — Funeral service was held this morning in St. Luke Methodist Church for Karen Carmichael, 38, of San Angelo. Burial followed in the Fairmount Cemetery.

Mrs. Carmichael, a former advertising sales representative for the Snyder Daily News, died early Saturday in a one-vehicle accident one mile north of Blackwell.

Mrs. Carmichael was a passenger in a car driven by Sandra D. Cantrell, 40, who also died when the car left the roadway and overturned several times after failing to negotiate a curve. The two victims were employees of a Robert Lee nursing home, and Mrs. Carmichael was a student nurse at TSTC in Sweetwater.

Mrs. Carmichael worked for the Snyder Daily News in the early 1980s.

Born in San Angelo, she is survived by her daughter, Jamie Carmichael of Robert Lee; a son, Chris Carmichael of Robert Lee; her mother, Dorothy Partin of San Angelo; two brothers, John Hoyt of San Antonio and Bill Hoyt of Dallas; a sister, Marshann Carlile of Hearne; and her grandmother, Mrs. M.W. Tillman of West Point, Miss.
