Moving out of Wellington next week, these custom combine operators and a dozen or more others doing business on the same scale, will go into the area from Knox City to Burk Burnett to begin harvesting one of the nation's largest wheat harvests. The four combines at top are part of a fleet owned and operated by Caison and Sons. Below are nine combines that are the combined units of Johnny Crawford of Wellington and Pete Nipper of Dodson. They will follow their usual routes through Kansas, Colorado, Nebraska, and the Dakotas. All local operators stop at the Canadian boundary. With favorable conditions, wheat harvest will start here next week.

Two Bruised as Car Overtakes

Phillip Cobb and Leroy Blew were painfully but not seriously injured early Sunday, May 25, when their car went off the road as it approached a culvert, crossed the draw and crashed into the opposite bank, Sheriff John Rainey reported.

The accident occurred four miles northwest of Dodson on FM road 338.

Sheriff Rainey said that Cobb, who was driving, apparently went to sleep. Both young men were hospitalized at St. Joseph's Hospital for treatment of bruises and cuts. Blew was released later in the day, Cobb on Wednesday.

The sheriff estimated that the car, a 1950 Chevrolet sedan, was a total loss.

Wheat Experiment Tour Slated for Friday Morning

A tour of fertilizer experiments on wheat will be held Friday, May 30, at the Jim Wood farm in the Rolla community, when growers will have the opportunity to observe this work first-hand.

Dwayne Scott, demonstrator for on-farm experiments, and County Agent Bob Lynch will direct the tour.

Those wishing to attend are to meet at the south side of the court house at 9 a. m. and go in a group.

Thirteen combinations of fertilizer, along with the check plot, are used, with each plot 10 x 50 feet in size. In order to check results further, each fertilizer combination is repeated three times, giving 39 plots altogether, Lynch said.

There will be a discussion of the plots and the effects of the different rates of fertilizer application will be pointed out.

This was planned as a demonstration in irrigation as well as fertilization, but spring rains eliminated this part of the project.

Later the wheat will be harvested and the yields determined with references to the effects of the fertilizer.

Two Registered Palominos Killed

Two registered Palomino quarterhorse mares owned by Orville Cunningham, Samnorwood school superintendent, were killed instantly when the trailer in which they were being hauled broke loose from his car and overturned.

The accident occurred on Elm Creek Hill about 6:30 a. m. Saturday, May 24.

The mares, one and two years old, were sisters and from the Sitters Ranch and El Centro stock at Abilene. They were almost identical and Cunningham was preparing them for the summer horse show circuit.

The two were valued at $1,800.

Crops South of Dodson Damaged

Some damage was reported to wheat and row crops in the area south of Dodson from high winds Tuesday night, May 27, but in all other sections, growers report that while some of the wheat is leaning, they believe it is not damaged.

The Wellington area got only wind and a sprinkle.

Only a shower fell at Dodson, but south of that town as much as an inch fell, with a little hail in the Arlie section.

Bob Tabor reported that he received some damage to wheat south of Dodson, and John Sherman said he had hail damage to young cotton.

A. V. Lowrie said he will have to replant all his cotton and also his feed. He had finished godelving Tuesday.

Civic Improvement and Beauty Aim of Clean-Up Week June 2-9

Mayor Hiram Cudd has proclaimed the week of June 2 through 9 as "Clean-Up Week in Wellington" when a concentrated effort will be made to clean up and beautify the town.

This is a co-operative enterprise, led by the city and the Wellington Chamber of Commerce, but dependent on the full co-operation of the people for its effectiveness, Mayor Cudd and N. M. Higdon, chamber of commerce manager, pointed out.

In charge of active arrangements are the co-chairmen of the C-C beautification committee, Mrs. James Sullivan and Mrs. A. J. Fires.

All citizens are urged to clean up their premises, removing rubbish that may have collected in garages and storage houses, that they cut all weeds about their places and conduct the clean-up drive in their homes as well.

All trash and rubbish should be placed in alleys or garbage cans, where it will be picked up by city trucks which will operate through the week, giving garbage collection service each day from Tuesday through Friday.

"But trash must be stacked in the alleys," Bura Handley, city manager, emphasized. "We do not have the personnel or the time, especially at this season, to go onto your premises and make collections."

The city also is putting its mowing equipment at the disposal of the clean-up campaign, and anyone who has a vacant lot where weeds need mowing may leave his name at the Chamber of Commerce office.

After the weeds are cut, Cub Scouts, with the owners' permission, will sow flower seed on the vacant lots.

Handley also announced that the city fogging machinery is ready for operation and the entire city will get its first spraying for insects some time during Clean Up Week.

The residual spraying equipment also is on the garbage collection trucks, and trash barrels will again be sprayed.

"We are working for 100 per cent co-operation in this campaign. It is the only way we can make Wellington a cleaner, healthier, and more beautiful town," Higdon declared.

Mrs. Fires also suggested that many women of the town will probably use this week to clean out closets and basements and will collect clothing and items they wish to dispose of. These should be given to the Red Cross or the individual's favorite charity, she urged.

June 1 School Transfer Deadline

June 1 is the deadline for transferring students from one school district to the other, B. W. Beard, county superintendent, announced this week.

Any parent who lives in one district and whose children will attend school in another district, should make the transfer in Mr. Beard's office.

Colored children living in the Samnorwood, Dodson and Quail districts also must be transferred, it was pointed out. Those living at Dodson and Quail usually attend Wellington school, while those at Norwood go to Shamrock.

Templeton Lists Cost of Surplus Commodity Plan

County Judge R. L. Templeton this week released a report of the cost of the surplus commodities program for the first five months of the year, saying he wished to make this public since the City has withdrawn from its part of the sponsorship of the program.

The figures he released on the cost are:

January, $250.00.
February, $349.61.
March and April, $690.28
May, $294.03.
Additional Butter in May, $5.40.
Total $1,589.32.

The part of each sponsor was $794.66.

Judge Templeton also said that the $294.03 for January was for setting up the program, and no commodities were received for that period.

March and April were lumped together, he said, because the March commodities did not reach here in time to be billed in that month.

The $5.40 in May was for storage on 2,200 pounds of butter the county received, according to Judge Templeton.

He explained that the surplus commodities program is set up on a six-months basis and the local program is set up through August.

There's Enough Room and Enough Water For Two Dams on Salt Fork

A few days ago a group of county men organized to take another step in the county's water development program. In this, they made application for the water rights on Salt Fork River within Collingsworth county, and their final goal is a second dam across Salt Fork—this one in Collingsworth county—for recreation and irrigation.

First of all, it is to be said that the proposal is not in competition with the Greenbelt Dam to be built on Salt Fork just over the Donley county line. The men who helped to organize the Collingsworth county water authority said plainly and unanimously they are in support of the Greenbelt project.

At the same time, they saw no reason why there cannot be two dams on Salt Fork, backing up two lakes, each serving its own purpose.

Wellington is an integral part of the Greenbelt Municipal and Industrial Water Authority which already has the water rights on Salt Fork for its proposed dam. This involves only the water rights above the proposed dam site.

Collingsworth county water rights on Salt Fork are still intact, and it is these water rights, plus the overflow water rights from the Greenbelt Dam, that the Collingsworth County Water Authority is asking for.

To date, no one in Texas has asked for these rights, but Western Oklahoma towns, already needing more water for municipal use and irrigation, have their plans set up to ask for them, and once this is granted, there is no chance for the Collingsworth group, leaders of the Water Authority say.

There is no proposed site for the new dam. That will have to be worked out by engineers, and it could be almost anywhere along the river.

Another thought regarding Texas future water supply was brought out this week in a Dallas News editorial: Texans must set their water aims, keeping in mind that there will be future droughts. But they must keep in mind, also, that the per capita use of water is rising fast. When any city or county sets up its water program, it must realize that a water program adequate for the drought that has just ended, may be entirely inadequate for needs when the next drought comes.

Though somewhat obscured these past days in the news of the world by the report of the consolidation of the Russian government under Krushchev, three great issues continue to loom paramount in importance:

1. the negotiations on summit talks
2. the race for outer space
3. the recession.

The thinking citizen of Mission like his counterpart elsewhere in the world, cannot afford to be ignorant of the development and significance of these major issues.

Although the struggle for the absolute power which Stalin took more than a decade to consolidate came to formal conclusion only a few days ago when Nikita S. Krushchev moved to the summit of both government and party in Russia, actually the political situation in that country is little changed, Krushchev only took over in name the authority he had long since wielded in fact.

Therefore, although the change gave his name new prestige in international affairs, Russia's international policy remained essentially the same: to make communism the dominant influence in the world.

The first move Krushchev is expected to make in carrying out this policy is to take unilaterally a step—the suspension of nuclear tests—which has been a major issue in the East-West maneuvering on summit talks. Such a move would cost Russia little for the moment, since she has just completed a series of nuclear tests and presumably will study the results before undertaking any more.

Nuclear testing is the one major issue on which there have seemed to be prospects of fruitful discussions at the summit. In sincerely crying, "Let us be done with such horrors, comrades," Russia has much to gain propagandewise at the expense of the U.S. just now.

Dear Editor:

I see where a Harvard economist says the auto is losing ground as a means of calculating a citizen's social standing.

My frugal neighbor says maybe so in some places but not around here. The older his car gets, the fewer people laugh at his jokes and stop to hear about his grandchildren.

Says driving an old paid-for car takes lots of nerve these days, like taking a bath on the front porch, and the worst thing about it is not getting to watch your neighbors squirm when you come out in a fancier head-sweater than theirs.

Foreign aid advocates are always saying same is not actually an expense to the taxpayers, on account of the money comes right back into U. S. trade channels.

My doubting neighbor says this principle might work out on an international scale, but folks around here don't take to it.

Says he tried to borrow a twenty from his grocer neighbor the other day and promised to spend it all right there in his store, but the man it seems like don't believe in this modern method of booming his business.

My bleeding turnip neighbor says he got a letter from the Internal Revenueurs a while back, saying he was undoubtedly a cheater, but they were sending an agent to see if he could maybe squirm out of the consequences.

Says he appreciated the warning, but just after the inquisitor entific Advisory Committee headed by Dr. James Killian, Jr. has issued a report on what projects the U.S. could undertake in this realm and in what order.

President Eisenhower received the Killian report with enthusiasm, ordering the following day the Defense Department's new Advance Research Products Agency to start work on "lunar probes"—preliminary expeditions to the vicinity of the moon.

As pertains to the alleged recession here at home, President Eisenhower said in a recent news conference: "There are many factors that would imply that the bottom (of the recession) is certainly close, or possibly even now reached. . . My own feeling is that we are going through the worst of it right now."—Mission (Texas) Times.

came and water hauled, there was another glassine-eyed letter staring at him from his mail box.

Seems the head taker was congratulating him on winning that round, but before he could get the letter open he had aged ten years without getting any closer to social security.

I see where a columnist agrees with the Pentagon that we ought to have more soldiers, but he also figures we could get the same results by having fewer enemies.

Seems Washington is working on this idea, too, and has been trying to thin out our enemy crop with big doses of money and good intentions, but mostly has just wasted this taxpayer blood and paving material.

My discouraged neighbor says buying friends is a whole lot like buying haircuts. No durability about what you get for your money.

I see where talking irreverently about a referee has got a big Southwestern college basketball team put on probation by its Conference overseers.

My observing neighbor says it seems like Authority is getting mighty sensitive these days, and very short-tempered with people who question its holiness out loud.

Which he thinks maybe accounts for our bureaucrats' tenderness toward the Fifth Amendment which authorizes keeping the mouth shut, and their distaste for the First Amendment which makes it legal to say what you think.

I see where some people over in Lebanon burned down a couple of libraries that our U. S. do-gooders had set up for their enlightenment.

Which is horrifying to many bookwormy Americans who figure that book-burning is nearly as sinful as voting a split ticket.

But my sucker-list neighbor says he has seen reports on what is put in these libraries for the ignorant foreigners, and claims that he burns better literature every day when he clears the bulk rate stuff out of his mail box.

I SAW . . . by Virginia Robey

Earl Hunter, who stepped over from being vice-president of First National to vice-president of Wellington State, recalls he would have been with the former bank 38 years on August 1 . . . And he further recalls that the first job he was given to do was to send out statements, under the direction of Howard Riggs, a Mr. Brewster, and the late Charles Glenn. He had a feeling of pride in the job he had done—until the next day. First National customers began coming in to say they had received the wrong statements, they didn't get all their cancelled checks, they didn't get checks they didn't know they'd written, etc., until, as Earl remembers it, almost everyone he'd sent a statement to was in to complain.

Until a few years ago, Wellington was familiar with the 1929

Buick which Mrs. Mellie Foster had driven since that year. She preferred it to all later models, and granddaughters Alene Nix and Donnitta Blaine and her great-grandson, Jerry Nix, learned to drive on it. Some years ago it was stored in the family garage. But last week Mrs. Foster was out riding in the 29-year-old Buick, great-granddaughter Carol Blain at the wheel.

Word comes that Jeanne Way Andrews and her new husband, Harold Andrews, will probably be in Salzburg, Austria, another year before returning to the United States. They recently had a reunion with her brother, Tommy, who just got to Augsburg, Germany, with the Army. Harold teaches in Salzburg University. Lucy Way of Muskogee, Jeanne's mother, goes back to Maine this summer as counselor in a children's camp.

Wages and Prosperity

The automobile union leaders have pin-pointed one of the major causes of the business recession. They have offered to forego any wage hikes for the next three months—if prices of automobiles on show window floors and in Detroit warehouses are lowered $200 each. In other words the union leaders now recognize that the slow-down in buying has been due, in substantial measure to the constant increase in the price of products which in turn was due largely to constantly increasing wage rates. Wages and salaries are by far the biggest item in the production cost of almost any product manufactured.

To put the situation into a capsule: In many of the major industries in recent years wage hikes engineered by tremendous union pressure upon the manufacturers, and made to apply industry-wide, have used up all the benefits of rising productivity per worker. The consumer did not benefit by the improved productivity—a situation contrary to the normal operation of our American economic system. The stockholder who put up the money for the tools and plants did not benefit. The auto workers have virtually monopolized the benefits of the whole advancement in the industry, an advancement brought on mainly by management ingenuity, better and more expensive machine tools, new production techniques and more effective merchandising operations.

Hitting One Group

Now the auto union leaders want to stimulate auto buying by lowering the cost of the automobiles—but they want to lower it wholly at the expense of the stockholders who must be enticed year after year to put up the money for the whole operation. If their plan were to be adopted, then three months hence, they clearly state, they would put in their demand for wage hikes which would, if granted, almost certainly boost the cost of autos again.

American prosperity, our incomparably high living standard, came through expanded production and constantly improving productivity per worker. The rule has been that all elements in our society benefitted in this advancement—the workers, the factory owners, and the consuming public. Our competitive system makes it necessary for the factory ownership to take a small profit so that lower costs can be passed along to consumers, and it also requires that the workers benefit but not take all the benefits of the advancement.

The Ford Story

Henry Ford's first Model T cars were manufactured with this nation's first major mass production technique. The first Model T's on the market sold for $950. In 1909 this was much lower than the cost of other cars but it still was a lot of money, and the average American family couldn't afford to own one. Ford continued to perfect his pioneering manufacturing techniques. Year by year he brought about increased worker productivity. He got the Model T down to $350 by 1918 and to $295 by 1922. By lowering the cost to the consumer, he boosted his volume tremendously.

Ford made thousands of new jobs, and every time he improved the efficiency of his manufacturing technique, he passed along benefits to his workers. Ford workers were the highest paid in industry at the time. They received more when the car sold for $295 than when it sold for $950. They couldn't have remained so well paid if the improved productivity constantly engineered by Ford and his managerial staff had not passed along a substantial part of the benefits to the consumers—in lower prices.

Blueprint for Progress

The foregoing pretty well tells the story of American progress—why we've all been able to buy more with the fruits of our labor than any other people on earth in all history. . . rising productivity in which we've all shared. Each job in the auto industry today requires an investment of approximately $15,000 for tools, plant and working capital. By unreasoning demands upon the industry by some labor leaders, the flow of investment capital could be drastically retarded, the market for the products gradually smothered, and our great production giant crippled and slowed down permanently.

Nobody wants to deny to the working man a reasonable compensation for his efforts. But it is of vital importance to the working man, just as much as it is to the consuming public and the people who invest their savings, that the true nature of our American system be allowed to assert itself. Wage raises should follow increased productivity, but the consuming public, and the owners must have a share of the benefits too. Any coercive power employed to disrupt this equation strikes finally at the foundation of prosperity for all Americans and should be resisted.

Awards Made to 15 Outstanding Band Students

An appreciative audience attending the spring concert of the two school bands, heard a program of lively music directed by Doyle McElroy, then saw 15 thrilled youngsters as their names were called for the first special awards ever given band students.

The top honor went to two youths who tied for the outstanding student title, Tommy Akin and Larry Ware. They jointly received a trophy, with their names engraved on it, but which will remain property of the school. These two were chosen by the band at large.

Seven sectional winners in the Skyrocket band and eight from junior high received medals. From high school they were Akin, cornet section; Ware, drum section; Robert Weir, clarinet; Roland Roberts, low brass; Terry Bouchelle, saxophone; VaRue Sweat, french horn; and Joy Hartman, flute and bass clarinet section.

Lace extended into deep points in the bouffant skirt, and below this were rows of tulle ruffles. A filigree headpiece held her fingertip veil, which also was applied with lace flowers. The bride carried a cascade arrangement of white butterfly roses showered with lilies of the valley.

AUSTIN, Tex. — At least one segment of Texas economy — highway construction — is booming. One reason: the Texas Highway Department isn't letting grass grow under its feet in getting federal emergency projects under way.

Low bids tabulated at the Department's May letting totaled $19,187,933. State Highway Engineer DeWitt C. Greer, in opening the May letting, said that about $25,000,000 in road projects would be up for bids next month.

This figure, if reached, would set a new record.

A big chunk of this upsurge comes from Texas' $36,000,000 share of the Federal Emergency Fund, authorized by Congress this year to get extra money into the economy fast and provide needed roads. All of this work must be put under contract by December.

Texas Highway officials hope to beat the deadline by several months. Greer announced that $8,000,000 of the May lettings represented the first of the extra federal projects. He noted with quiet pride "the speed with which the projects were made ready." Bids were taken just four weeks after the federal bill was signed. Department officials expect all the $36,000,000 to be under contract by the end of the summer — bringing record or near-record lettings for the next few months.

A short time back monthly highway lettings of $9,000,000 to $12,000,000 were about average. Time was, too, when the emphasis was mainly on the need for fine, new roads to accommodate the growing stream of fine, new cars. Today, there's also emphasis on the number of people who'll be put to work, the money they'll spend on groceries, cars, clothes.

HIGH TENSION — With millions involved, the highway lettings are scenes of high tension. Sunburned, sport shirted contractors, plus materials men and insurers flock to the Department's hearing room where the sealed bids are opened and read, item by item.

Department personnel have an electronic computer to add up the item bids and determine the low bidder. Results are announced later in the day. But contractors or their representatives take down the bids on the spot and make rapid calculations.

It isn't hard to spot the man who's just realized he missed a million-dollar job by bidding a few hundred dollars high. Typical muttered comment: "He can't do it for the money!"

BUMPY ROAD — Through the mammoth highway building program is moving forward, top speed, there are problems along the road.

Chief bone of contention, now in the courts, is whether cost of relocating utilities to make way for new construction should be borne by cities and utility companies or the state.

A law passed by the last Legislature authorized the state, with 90 per cent federal aid, to pay for utility re-location on the federal projects.

Atty. Gen. Will Wilson has ruled that part of the law invalid in "donating public moneys to corporations and individuals . . . for private and individual purposes." Wilson filed a test case in an Austin district court.

City officials, through the Texas League of Municipalities, take the opposite view. They contend that in other states cities get this money for utility moving and that Texans through federal taxes, contribute to the cost. Besides, they add, it'll cost the cities some $20,000,000.

HOSPITAL OFFICIALS — The Texas Board for State Hospitals and Special Schools has a flock of new names topping its roster of officials.

W. W. Heath of Austin was named chairman of the Board. He succeeds Dr. Raleigh Ross, also of Austin. Howard Tellepsen of Houston is the new vice chairman.

Raymond W. Vowel was appointed executive director of the hospital system. This post has been vacant nearly a year.

Banking

Banking is a person's PERSONAL CONFIDENTIAL BUSINESS, and we regard it as such.

Banking by mail is convenient for some of our customers who cannot conveniently come to the bank during banking hours. We are pleased to offer you this service.

Loans are common in banking. When you are in need of a loan, come and see us. We are always glad to discuss your loan needs, and our LOW INTEREST RATES make it profitable for you to get your loans here at the CITY STATE BANK.

Banking is considered by many as a place to receive information concerning TRENDS, MARKETS, etc. Of course, many of these questions can only be answered by an expert. WE KEEP FOR YOUR USE a Doane Agricultural Service Digest showing trends.

Another of the many services we offer TO THOSE WHO DESIRE TO HAVE THEIR LOANS INSURED is Mortgage Cancellation Insurance. For those insured, in the event of death from any cause, our insurance payment plan pays off your entire loan up to $5,000.00. Ask us about the low rate.

Each day brings new problems in agriculture. This being an agricultural county, we believe that it is important that your bank be familiar with the problems of agriculture to better serve your needs.

To our old customers, we want you to know that we consider it a privilege to have you as one of our customers.

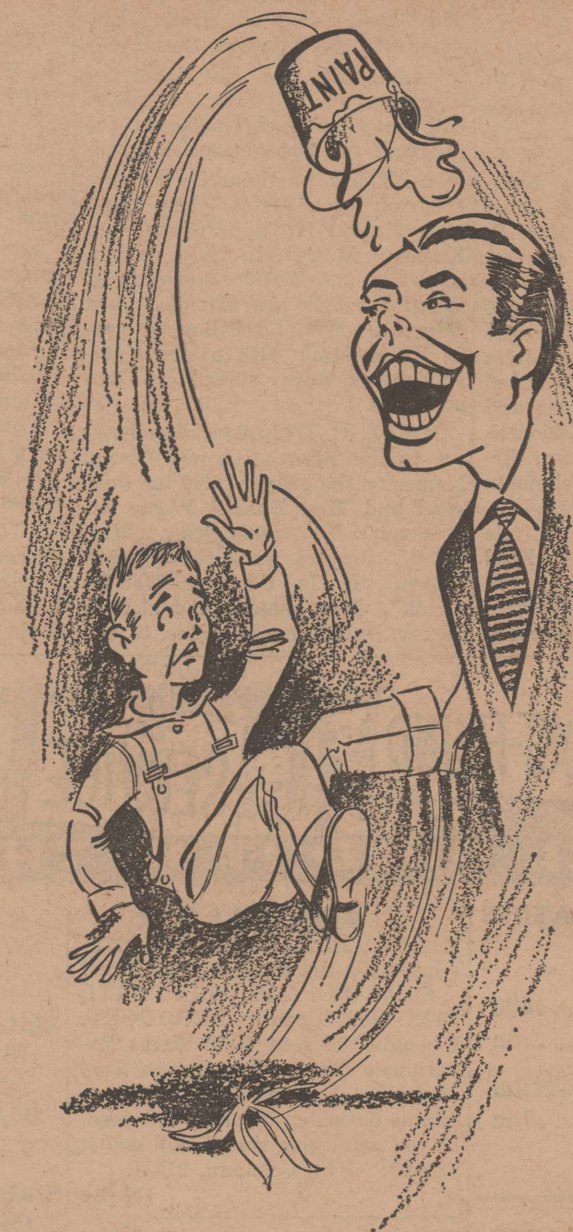

To those of you who are not a customer at the present time, we wish to extend to you a personal invitation to become one of our cherished customers. Our modern banking facilities will assist you in many ways in handling your banking needs.

One of the most important things concerning banking is a SAFE PLACE TO KEEP YOUR MONEY. Each account here at the CITY STATE BANK is insured to $10,000.00 by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; and, besides being insured, our bank is STRONG.

If it's a Joke, who is it on?

There are some folks who do not take very seriously the many good arguments in favor of buying at home. Appeals to patronize home enterprise instead of the stores and service establishments in other towns and cities are often met with derisive kidding, and the matter treated as something of a joke.

But it's no joke. Or if it is, perhaps it's really a joke on the fellow who would be getting a bigger pay check if his neighbors were giving more of their business to his employer. Or maybe it's a joke on the citizen whose property would bring in more rent money if he and the rest of us put more of our community-prospering trade into home channels. Or could it be a joke on the home town business man who would be more prosperous if so many of us didn't follow his lead and spend a good deal of our money with roving peddlers, city stores and mail order houses?

But the real joke may be on those of our children who grow up to find we have no place for them here . . . because we don't keep our trading dollars at home to make jobs for them.

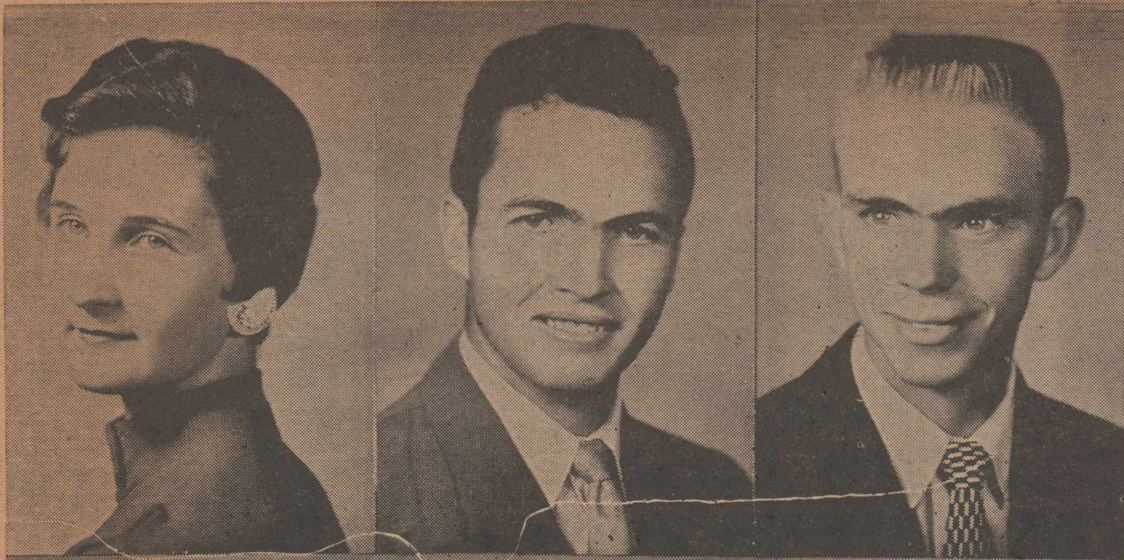

It takes a great sense of humor to see the joke in a protest against the city-shopping habit . . . which costs us progress and costs our children opportunities at home.

Lem D. Bartlett, Former Resident, Dies at Olton

Lem D. Bartlett, 89, oldest resident of the Olton area, died May 21 of a heart attack while en route to the Medical Center Hospital in Plainview. Since becoming ill five weeks ago, he had lived with a daughter, Mrs. J. T. Gibson, but prior to that he had lived alone since the death of Mrs. Bartlett in 1940.

He and his family lived two miles north of Wellington from 1907 until 1928, when they moved to the Plains.

Funeral services were held Friday at First Methodist Church in Olton.

Mr. Bartlett was born January 21, 1869, in Buffalo Valley, Tenn., and came to Texas with his family at the age of 8. He spent his childhood and young manhood in Fannin, Grayson and Wise counties, and began breaking horses on ranches of the area when he was 16 years of age.

He was married to Miss Amelia Reeves December 23, 1890. He was known as a shrewd trader in horses and land, and often said there was no particular system to his shrewdness. "I just knew what I wanted and stated my terms," he said.

He owned farming interests at Olton.

His memory remained bright throughout the years, and he enjoyed chatting with customers in the building supply store operated by a granddaughter.

He was a member of the Olton Methodist Church and had planned to take part in the program at the formal opening of the new sanctuary in June.

Survivors are 5 daughters and two sons: Mrs. J. E. Fuller, Mrs.

Demonstrations on Shinnery, Sage Brush Set Up

Farmers having land infested with shinnery and sage brush will watch two on-the-farm demonstrations laid out during the last week, both using ferunon pellets, a product not tried previously in this area.

The shinnery oak demonstration is on a James Doneghy farm in the Lillie community, approximately a mile and a half north of Highway 203, while the sand sage demonstration is on the Richard Fourmentin place, five miles east of town.

Both are directed by Dwane Scott, demonstrator for the joint Experiment Station-Extension Service demonstrations, and County Agent Bob Lynch.

Two-tenths acre plots, each 66 chains long and two wide, are used for the Shinnery demonstrations, which are applied at three rates: 12 pounds per acre, 24 pounds per acre and 36 pounds per acre.

"The pellets were scattered by hand, but any type fertilizer distributor can be used, or pellets can be distributed by plane," Lynch said.

"The advantage of this method, if it works out, is that it can kill shinnery oak next to cotton, and there will be no drifting of poisonous residue."

Fenuron has been used with good success in three states, especially in Oklahoma, for the control of other species of the oak family. Due to dry weather in recent years, results at Spur Experiment Station were not as successful.

"We are not recommending fenuron yet, we're just experimenting," Lynch warned.

The same size plots are used for the sand sage experiments, and the same rate of fenuron application also was used.

One other known control method for shinnery was outlined by Lynch, but it is poisonous to cotton and comes under the new herbicide law, he warned.

This is a mixture of 1/2 pound of 2-4-5-T mixed with three gallons of water and one gallon of deisel oil per acre. It is to be applied three consecutive years.

"Now is the time to get the best kill if you use it in isolated areas," Lynch said. "Ground equipment is safer than airplane spraying. Leaves of the shinnery are now grown and becoming hardened, but will not burn before the herbicide gets in to the sap and down to roots. But remember to check your herbicide law."

Mrs. W. W. McClaskey is spending several weeks in the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Richard McClaskey, in Richardson. The latter family who has been living in Dallas, recently bought a new home at Richardson.

Three Bindweed Control Methods Told by Lynch

The spring rains have brought stepped up interest in bindweed control, and in the experimental work being carried out in the on-the-farm experiment program.

Three methods of control were outlined this week by county agent Bob Lynch, one of them enabling farmers to continue cultivation of their land, the other two sterilizing the land up to 5 years.

"If there is a thick infestation that is getting serious, it would pay to lay the land out and treat it with sodium chlorate at the rate of five pounds per square rod," Lynch recommended. "Any kind of spreader can be used, but after use, care should be taken to clean it so no sodium chlorate will get on land where it is not wanted.

"This treatment will sterilize the soil for two to three years."

Results of the on-the-farm demonstration using Karmex W on the George Lewis farm southeast of Wellington were good, according to Lynch. After the applications last year, nothing is growing on the experimental plot.

Karmex W would be applied at the rate of 3/8 pound per square rod. Karmex will sterilize the soil for approximately five years, and Lynch added that the sodium chlorate application is recommended.

For the farmer whose bindweed infestation is not too bad, and who wants to keep his land in cultivation, Lynch outlined the recommendations made by Dr. Alan Weise of the Amarillo Experiment Station, which he termed the best, most economical long-range control method.

A combination of cultivation and herbicide control is used, in which the infested land is plowed with sweeps to a depth of 4" through the summer, plowing each time the bindweed emerges.

The land should then be planted to small grain such as rye, wheat, barley, in the fall and controlled with 2-4-D at the rate of one-half pound per acre. It should be controlled again in the spring with 2-4-D before cotton planting time.

The grain may be harvested or plowed up according to the farmer's plan, but he should keep plowing the land through the summer.

"Two years of this normally will eradicate the bindweed," Lynch said.

The course of study will include advanced, intermediate and beginners band; stage band, fundamental marching, class brass, woodwind and percussion, twirling for advanced, intermediate and beginning twirlers.

Aphids on Shrubs, Plants Continue

Aphid invasion on ornamental shrubs and plants remains high, according to County Agent Bob Lynch.

"If you are not getting control with nicotine sulphate or benzene hexachloride, you can use malathon," he said. Lynch recommended a 4% dust, or if a spray is preferred, 2 teaspoonsful of 25% emulsion to a gallon of water is the correct proportion.

Mrs. Vaughan Lists Method

Growers May Save Rose Buds for Local Show

County rose growers who would like to exhibit varieties now blooming in the Wellington Garden Club Flower Show Saturday, June 7, can cut buds and preserve them to be in full bloom on the show date, Mrs. Henry Vaughan, club president, said this week.

Mrs. Vaughan has given these instructions for dry storage of show roses.

1. Cut in bud, preferably in late afternoon. If there is much spray residue, wash leaves and stem on bush before cutting. (Use a liquid detergent used for dish-washing.)
2. Spiral a strip of folded wax paper or tissue around stem to protect leaves from thorn damage.
3. Lay rose on a strip of Saran-Wrap about 3" longer than the bloom. Using "drug store wrap", fold edges together, sealing with gentle pressure, fold and seal top with tape. Gently smooth some of the air downward from package and seal bottom.
4. Place AT ONCE in refrigerator at temperature of 31 to 35 degrees. A cushion of shredded newspaper should be placed under the roses, as an aid against cold burn. Lay flat with a pillow of paper just back of the "neck" to avoid crushing blooms; reverse each row of blooms.
5. About 6 hours before judging is to start, or the night before, whichever is the more convenient, remove from refrigerator and open the bottom of packages only, cut 3/4 inch from stems, exposing about 2" of stem only. Stand blooms still wrapped in 2" of warm water (110 degrees F.) for 20 minutes, then plunge into cold water. Or roses may be opened the night before for a local show and stand the entire lot in 2" warm water in a vessel. Carry them to the show in this container without disturbing them.

6. At show, open top of package — groom and place in show containers.

7. A show rose may be kept 8 to 10 days in dry storage.

Work Plymouth Cemetery May 30

All persons who own lots in Plymouth Cemetery are asked to gather there Friday, May 30, not only to clean the plot, but to help identify the many unmarked graves.

A map has been made of the cemetery, and all lots with markers have been identified, but it is the unmarked graves to which attention is being given now, Tom Cunningham of that community said.

Those coming to work are asked to bring power and lawn mowers if they have them, and if not to bring hoes, rakes, or other necessary equipment for the work.

This will be an all day affair, and those coming are asked to bring a picnic lunch.

And we make it simple for you

The average man today should carry several kinds of insurance. He's foolish not to — the cost is so little, considering the protection it gives.

His house, his place of business his other possessions, his family . . . all call for insurance of various kinds.

He should have insurance against loss by fire, theft and lawsuits. He should be protected against accidents to himself and family. He should be protected in case he or his family causes accidental injury to others.

There are at least 100 kinds of insurance protection today. The subject can become quite complex. But we eat, sleep and dream insurance, and it's simple to us.

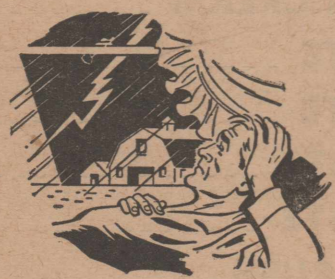

We can keep it simple for you.
