Rate Hike On Letters Approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Postal Rate Commission today rejected President Carter's proposal of a special "citizen's rate" for mail and recommended a 2 cents increase to 15 cents for all first class letters.

If approved by the Postal Service Board of Governors, the higher mail rate could go into effect within a month.

The administration had proposed increasing the first class rate from the present 13 cents to 16 cents for business mail, while retaining the 13-cent rate for personal, or "citizen's" letters.

The commission said its recommended increase in the first class mail rate and numerous changes in the rates for other classes of mail is designed to provide the U.S. Postal Service with $17.5 billion in annual revenue, including its congressional appropriations.

The 15 cents first class rates apply to the first ounce. Each additional ounce would cost another 13 cents.

The cost of postcards would increase from 9 cents to 10 cents. The commission recommended continuing existing discounts for pre-sorted bulk mail and for various classes of business reply mail.

The rate changes will increase postage revenue by 71.9 billion, the commission said. This is $57 million less than the Postal Service requested in a formal application for rate changes last summer.

"The proposed creation of a 'citizen's rate' for personal correspondence was rejected on a 3-1 vote, with Vice Chairman Simeon M. Bright dissenting," the commission said.

The commission actually leaked its decision earlier, saying it did not favor a two-tier mail rate for private and business mail.

There has been speculation that the Postal Service might be able to put new rates into effect before the end of May and at least by early June. Spokesmen have said the service is prepared to stockpile an adequute supply of 15-cent stamps within about that time.

"Second-class rates were pegged an average of 5 percent higher than those sought by the Postal Service," the commission said.

"Pre-sort discounts for second-class regular mail were extended to benefit more publications, but a proposed discount of 2 cents was reduced to 1.6 cents per piece,9' the commission said.

"Rates for third-class bulk mail were set lower than requested," the commission said. "Parcel post rates were modified to reflect costs more accurately."

While the Carter proposal seemed an attractive way to meet public protest over rising mail rates, the recent unofficial report said the commission disapproved of a "two-tier" rate.

Under the Carter proposal, a company would need a 16-cent stamp to mail a bill,but the customer could pay the bill with a 13-cent stamp.

The nation's business community, heaviest user of the mail service, opposed the idea.

However, some industry segments — the greeting card industry, for example — favored it.

The Postal Rate Commission was set up as an independent rate-making body in 1971 when the Postal Service was created as an independent agency to replace the politically controlled Post Office Department.

Terrorists Step Up Bomb, Gun Attacks

ROME (UPI) — The Red Brigades terrorist gang that killed former Premier Aldo Moro shot and wounded a Christian Democratic official today and a series of bombings wrecked buildings and cars in several cities.

At the Vatican it was announced that Pope Paul VI will make the unprecedented gesture of leaving the Vatican to attend the state funeral service for Moro Saturday in the church of St. John Lateran.

In Milan, comrades of the leftist terrorists who killed Moro Tuesday shot a Milan Christian Democratic Party official five times in the legs in their first claimed action since Moro's assassination.

It was the third "kneecapping" in three days in Milan and violence hit other parts of the nation as well.

Bomb blasts shattered the windows and entranceway of a justice ministry notary's office and five cars were burned out during the night in Rome, a state-owned Alfa-Romeo car showroom was blasted in Bologna, a gelignite charge wrecked an electric generator at Nuoro in Sardinia and dynamite wrecked a building company office and 20 cars at Messina in Sicily.

In Palermo, Sicily, there were scuffles between police and leftist youths and in Venice the 3,000 workers at the Breda navy shipyards abandoned work after an anonymous caller said a bomb was about to explode. A search by police turned up no bombs.

In Milan, wealthy ammunition maker baron Pietro Fiocchi, kidnapped more than six months ago, was thrown out of a car with his eyes taped shut following payment of an $800,000 ransom. He was unhurt, but weak from the long ordeal.

The terrorists — three men and a woman — shot Christian Democratic official Tito Berardini five times in the legs in a Brigades-style "kneecapping" as he walked to his car to drive to work, and then immediately claimed responsibility.

"This is the Red Brigades," said a woman caller to the Milan office of the Italian news agency ANSA shortly after the assault.

"We hit Berardini, a man of the Christian Democrats, this morning. A communique will follow."

In Rome, violence continued when a bomb shattered all the windows and a door of a Ministry of Justice office. Another bomb damaged a Bologna showroom of the stateowned Alfa Romeo car company and five cars were set on fire in the streets of Rome.

Short Critical Of Runoff Foe

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

State senatorial runoff candidate E.L. Short of Tahoka this morning accused his opponent, Don Workman of Lubbock, of a potential conflict of interest in a state bank charter application.

He also promised in a press conference at the South Park Inn to work for an additional district court in Lubbock County if he wins the June 3 Democratic runoff and the November general election against Republican Joe Robbins.

"We feel that we ran a clean campaign during the first primary, and we intend to do it again in the runoff," Short said.

"We will talk about the issues, but when we feel there are matters which the public has a right to know, we won't hesitate to bring them out.

"At this time I want to point out — and this is a matter of record — that my opponent in this runoff has an application pending before the State Banking Commission for a new bank here in Lubbock.

"Legally, there may be nothing wrong with that, but in my mind it represents a clear conflict of interest: just as sitting on more than one board or commission does."

Short said in answer to question about his reference to a board or commission that he was talking about "juvenile officers handling campaign affairs throughout the district," which was an apparent accusation pertaining to Workman's post on the Texas Youth Council.

His attack on the bank charter referred to a charter application for First Southwest Bank at 70th and Indiana Avenue. Workman is listed as board chairman in the proposal, which was filed last Nov. 18.

The former four-term state representative emphasized his legislative experience in opening his runoff campaign and said he had "better than a 99 per cent voting and attendance record" in his eight years in the House.

Taking questions after a formal statement, he said he had been in contact with the three senatorial candidates who did

Crash May Involve Secret Spy Plane

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — The Pentagon concedes a plane crashed, but everything else is hush-hush.

The plane is believed to have been a high-altitude spy plane under development, a successor to the U-2 and SR-71.

It crashed in a remote area of Nevada that the federal government has kept closed to the public as a secret weapons testing ground since 1941. The pilot, who was injured, gave his address as "general delivery, Las Vegas" and checked out of a hospital.

The Pentagon Thursday issued this statement:

"On May 4 there was an aircraft accident on the Nellis range in which the pilot was injured. His injuries were not serious. For security reasons that is all the information available."

Officials at Nellis Air Force Base Thursday denied any knowledge of the crash and said no Nellis pilots or personnel — the usual users of the range — were involved in any accident.

William Parks, 52, was admitted to Southern Nevada Memorial Hospital May 6, treated for multiple fractures and a concussion, and released Wednesday, a hospital spokesman said.

Parks gave hospital attendants little information when admitted, other than to list his occupation, pilot, his employer, the Lockheed Corp., and his address: general delivery, Las Vegas.

A Lockheed spokesman would not comment.

Lockheed developed the U-2 and SR-71 spy planes. Sources said Parks was a test pilot with Lockheed's Advanced Development Projects Department, nicknamed the "skunk works," and was transferred to another hospital, probably near his home in Los Angeles.

The triangle-shaped Nellis Range Complex covers 8 million acres, the largest military range in the free world, and includes 3.5 million acres closed since 1941 to civilian travel and overflights.

There have been unconfirmed reports recently that a new U.S. spy plane was being tested at a secret Department of Defense installation within the complex.

It reportedly is called the TR1 and utilizes high altitude "side-looking" radar, which would enable it to perform missions along borders without entering the target country's airspace, such as the overflights of Russia that brought on the Gary Powers U-2 incident, sources said.

The U-2, first of the modern spy planes, relied on its great altitude to escape detection or enemy attack. It was capable of making long flights at an altitude of 70,000 to 80,000 feet, and its narrow wings offered little target for enemy radar. It was very slow, however, cruising at subsonic speeds.

After Powers' U-2 was downed over Russia, reportedly by a new anti-aircraft rocket, the SR-71 was developed as a replacement. It was much faster than the U-2, yet retained high-altitude capability.

Tech Slates Graduation

Commencement exercises for some 2,000 Texas Tech University students will be at 7:30 p.m. today in Jones Stadium.

Speaker for the graduation rites will be Dr. Norman Hackerman, president of Rice University and chairman of the National Science Board, the governing body of the National Science Foundation.

The university will award 1,597 bachelor's degrees, 281 master's and 179 doctorates. The doctorates include 107 diplomas to graduates of the university's law school.

Various colleges within Texas Tech will hold individual commencement ceremonies Saturday morning.

Business Administration ceremonies are scheduled at 8 a.m. Saturday in Municipal Auditorium.

Agricultural Sciences and Arts and Sciences both will have exercises at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, the first in the University

Twisters Dip In Louisiana, Texas Areas

By United Press International

A violent 45-mile-wide line of thunderstorms pushed across North Texas during the night, spawning at least eight tornadoes, hail, high winds and heavy rain. Forecasters called for more of the same today.

Despite the battering by the storms, no fatalities were reported. There were at least a dozen persons injured, however, one of them seriously.

Tornadoes also swirled through parts of Caddo and Union parishes in northern Louisiana, but no injuries were reported.

Authorities said a twister touched down early today in the Caddo Parish community of Forbing, smashing trees in its path.

Union Parish sheriff's deputies said another tornado struck near Farmerville, moved to Rocky Branch and toward Sterlington late Thursday night.

High winds pounded the Caddo-Bossier area. Shreveport Regional Airport clocked winds of 58 mph late Thursday night.

Servicemen at Barksdale Air Force Base spotted two funnel clouds soon afterward and the base's flight line was cleared of personnel as a precaution.

Power failures were reported in south Monroe, Lincoln Parish and Bienville Parish.

Communication in parts of Northeast Texas was difficult through the early morning because of the wind damage.

Sources in Kilgore reported one radio station's transmitting tower had not had power restored, and police relied solely on walkie-talkies for communication after their radio tower failed. The city was blacked out for 3 1/2 hours and five persons were treated and released from a local hospital for injuries sustained in the tornado.

A sixth person was hospitalized in serious condition after high winds swept his mobile home from its lot into a road, the Gregg County sheriff's dispatcher said.

Heavy damage was also reported in downtown Longview, where powerful winds sometimes exceeding 80 mph broke 16 power lines. Five persons received minor injuries in the storm, police said.

"There has been extensive glass damage because the plate glass windows and signs in front of 13 businesses were blown out," said Longview Police Chief Ray Stone late Thursday. "We've also had a lot of trees and limbs knocked off."

One source at the Longview Journal said communications in the city had been reduced to citizens band radios since telephone lines were down.

"We didn't see a funnel cloud, but we're not sure what it was," the spokesman said.

In Hillsboro, north of Waco, a tornado reportedly hit a cemetery and collapsed a wall of a cinder block structure. In the area around Brownsboro and Canton, a tornado touched down and ripped limbs

West Texas Dry, Windy

A-J News Services

Gusty winds stirred patches of blowing dust across West Texas today, behind a Pacific cool front that had reached a line from Dallas to Del Rio by midday. Weathermen forecast a dry, cool weekend for Lubbock and the South Plains.

Northerly wind gusts to 33 mph raked Amarillo at 11 a.m., while Midland reported northwesterly breezes up to 32 mph at the same time. Lubbock, halfway between the two cities, recorded a northwest wind of 18 mph.

Weathermen give Lubbock no chance of adding to the 1.69 inch of rain it has recorded this month, but Saturday is expected to be cooler than today with temperatures in the high 80s today and low 80s Saturday.

The low tonight will be in the low 50s.

Ehrlichman Still In Dark

PARIS (AP) — Watergate coverup conspirator John D. Ehrlichman, who just finished 18 months in prison for his role in the scandal, says he still doesn't know whether the CIA had any role in the Democratic headquarters burglary.

EHRLICHMAN

"It's an unresolved question, and I just don't know the answer," Ehrlichman said in a show to be broadcast Sunday on French television. Taped on Thursday, it was viewed in advance by reporters.

Ehrlichman appears on the program with Robert Woodward, a Washington Post reporter who helped expose the coverup.

The reporting on Watergate of Woodward and fellow Post reporter Carl Bernstein won the Pulitzer Prize for the Post.

Woodward said he worked hard to find CIA links to the break-in but never found such evidence to be indisputable.

Skater Extends Contract

NEW YORK (AP) — When Olympic figure skater Dorothy Hamill read an Esquire magazine article that said she was exploited by her advisers she made her decision to extend the contract of her key business adviser.

MISS HAMILL

The 1976 Olympic champion, now a professional skater, says she has extended by three years a management contract she had with agent Jerry Weintraub. The pact was to expire next April.

"My action in renewing my contract at this time is an expression of my friendship and respect for Jerry Weintraub which I am proud to proclaim," Miss Hamill said.

Police Upset With Flynt

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. (AP) —Police have been short on clues in the wounding of Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt, and investigators say the paralyzed Flynt isn't helping their investigation.

"It's funny a reporter can get in to talk to him and we can't," said Gwinnett County Police Chief John Crunkleton in Lawrenceville, where Flynt was wounded March 6.

Flynt has said he will offer a $100,000 reward for information on why he was shot if police have no suspects by the time he is released from a Columbus, Ohio, hospital. Flynt is soon to begin lengthy physical rehabilitation treatments in the hospital.

Flynt of Columbus and attorney Gene Reeves of Lawrenceville were shot during a recess at Flynt's trial here on a charge of distributing obscene material.

Bergland Sees Russian Longhorns

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland went a long way to see some longhorn cattle. And the Soviet news agency Tass says Bergland was "impressed" with what he saw.

The American official toured the Soviet Union's breadbasket, the Ukraine, on Thursday, stopping at a modern state farm where 15,000 head of longhorn are being fattened for the Soviet market.

Bergland also visited the touring U.S. exhibition, "Agriculture in the U.S.A.," designed to promote U.S.-Soviet trade in agricultural goods, Tass said.

Guardian Reptiles

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — With his guard dog off the job temporarily, Joe Lahiff tried leaving four snakes to protect his tavern after business hours.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

They apparently did the job Tuesday when a burglar struck. Police said intruders appeared to have left hastily after opening a coin-operated machine.

Lahiff said the young boa constrictors, measuring four to seven feet, were really pets and have been around the tavern about a month.

"Anyone who knows them probably wouldn't be afraid of them," he said. "The customers play with them all the time."

BOMB EXPLOSION SCENE — Smoke pours from the window of an office building in Cary, N.C., where a Marine Reserve sergeant and his estranged wife were killed after a bomb strapped to the man's body exploded. Jerry and Ann Sowers died instantly in the explosion. No other injuries were reported. (AP Laserphoto)

Marine Reserve Sergeant Kills Self, Estranged Wife With Bomb

CARY, N.C. (AP) — A Marine reserve sergeant and his estranged wife who died when a bomb strapped to his body exploded were described as a quiet couple who kept pretty much to themselves.

But several neighbors said they heard an explosion at the couple's Garner, N.C., home earlier this week. And the couple's landlord said the Marine was upset about marital problems and was acting stangely.

Police said Jerry Ronald Sowers, 32, had a bomb of undetermined explosives wrapped around his body and apparently touched it off Thursday while alone with his wife, Ann, 36, in a small conference room of a lawyer's office.

Mrs. Sowers had an 8-year-old daughter, Susan Versailles, by a previous marriage.

The couple was in the office of attorney Thomas Earls discussing a legal separation. Earls said Sowers arrived at his office about 10:35 a.m. and opened the vest of his suit to reveal a 4-by 6-inch bomb. Earls said he contacted police while Sowers talked privately wih his wife.

Police Chief J.W. Boles said the building was evacuated and an officer negotiated for 30 minutes with Sowers, who the chief later said "had accepted some psychiatric care recently."

The chief said Sowers made no demands except to have time alone with his wife. He told police if given the time, he would take the bomb off.

"We agreed it was a reasonable demand," said Boles. "About 15 minutes later the bomb went off."

Royal Wallace Jr., who rented a house to the couple, said Sowers was acting strangely Wednesday night.

"I tried to find out what was the matter with him and he asked me, 'How would you feel if your wife just got up and left you?' He was upset about the separation all right."

One neighbor said the couple, married since last July 13, had reconciled after a separation earlier this year. She said Mrs. Sowers, a nurse at Wake County Medical Center in Raleigh, told her this week that things were getting "too bad."

"I didn't know either one of the Sowerses very well," said Brenda Carpenter, another neighbor. "They seemed to be quiet, and they kept pretty much to themselves. But I did hear an explosion at their house Tuesday night. And some of the other people around here heard it, too."

Diesel Fuel Plentiful, But Hard To Find

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil companies say they will have plenty of diesel fuel to fill up new diesel-powered cars rolling off assembly lines next year. The catch is that you may have trouble finding it at your neighborhood pump.

Only about 19,000 of the nation's 175,000 service stations now sell diesel fuel.

"It's clear that some change in those numbers will have to take place soon," said gasoline retailing expert Mark Emond.

General Motors Corp. President E.M. Estes said this week that GM would triple its output of diesel-powered autos, from about 68,000 this year to 190,000 next year. The firm now produces three models of automobile for which diesel engines can be ordered.

No other U.S. automaker plans 1979-model diesel cars, but trade publications say Chrysler has one under development for the early 1980s. In addition, a few foreign-made cars now sold in the United States run on diesel fuel and about 1.5 million trucks use it.

As to overall diesel supply, Ray Young of the industry's American Petroleum Institute says: "I don't think there's going to be any trouble at all in supplying the diesel market. We have ample flexibility in refining to move whichever way is necessary."

The assessment is echoed by major U.S. oil firms. "We do not anticipate any problems in meeting increased diesel demand," Mobil spokesman Ken Peterson said Thursday.

Oil-industry officials say less than 2 percent of the autos currently on U.S. roads are powered by diesel fuel. But by 1990 that figure is expected to jump to 6 percent, with 10 percent of the new cars sold containing diesel engines.

To meet that demand, Young and others predict, most gasoline stations eventually will offer diesel fuel.

"Now you have regular, unleaded and premium, but the stations easily could drop premium because fewer and fewer cars are needing it," Young said. "So before long, you'll be seeing stations converting their premium pumps to diesel."

In the meantime, however, a stranger in town might have trouble finding a diesel outlet. Some dealers of diesel-powered cars are providing lists of diesel stations in major cities. In most cases, the major outlets now are truck stops.

Although it may be difficult to find diesel-fuel retailers, the search might be worth it.

A 1978 Oldsmobile Delta 88 gets a federally measured average of 19 miles per gallon with a V-8 gasoline engine, but 24 mpg with a diesel engine. A Volkswagen Rabbit gets 29 mpg with a gasoline engine, compared with 45 mpg on diesel fuel.

In addition, diesel fuel is cheaper because it does not require as much refining as gasoline. The national average price of regular gasoline last month was 59.8 cents per gallon and unleaded gasoline was 63.8 cents per gallon. Diesel fuel was selling for an average 57.6 cents per gallon.

Waterfall Hurt By Drought

IGUACU FALLS, Brazil (UPI) — Three months of drought have diminished one of the world's most spectacular waterfalls to a dribble.

The Iguacu River normally sends 30,000 cubic yards of water over the series of falls each second, leaving the surrounding Brazilian and Argentine national parks cloaked in a perpetual cloud of mist.

The drought has dried up most of Iguacu's more than 40 falls and only the major waterfall, known as the "Devil's Throat," even approaches its former splendor.

Nevertheless, travel agents were trying to turn it to their advantage.

"I think this is an opportunity to see something that's never been seen — the geologic formation of the rocks," said Clemente Consentino Neto, head of tourism for the nearby Brazilian city of Foz do Iguacu.

Jose Antonio Cardozo, manager of the Hotel Cataratas, overlooking the falls, said foreign tourists are disillusioned.

"They tell me its like going to Rome and not seeing the pope," he said.

Former Tech Chief Named To AGI Post

Dr. Grover E. Murray, former president and now University Professor at Texas Tech University, has been elected vice president and president-elect of the American Geological Institute (AGI).

He will assume the post in November of this year and the presidency in November of 1979.

This marks Dr. Murray's election to his 4th national association presidency. He is the sole American Geologist to have been accorded this honor.

AGI, an umbrella organization for all national earth science organizations, represents more than 100,000 scientists. The presidents of the various earth science organizations compose the AGI governing board. Murray, as president of the Association of Professional Geologial Scientists, is a member of that board.

Murray also has served as president of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists and of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists. He also is a member of the National Science Board, which directs the activities of the National Science Foundation.

In 1966 Murray was named President of Texas Tech University and in 1969 became first president of the Texas Tech University School of Medicine. He resigned both positions in 1976.

"I am honored to be chosen by my colleagues for this position and pleased to represent Texas Tech. The stature of a university is marked, in part, by its provision of leadership to national professional scientific and other learned societies," Murray said.

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain and showers are forecast for the Pacific Northwest for Saturday, according to the National Weather Service. Rain also is expected in the Great Lakes region stretching along the Carolina's into the Ohio River Valley area and down along the Carolina's into Georgia. Health Director To Seek Large Budget Increase

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The new director of the City Of Lubbock health department says she will seek a substantial budget increase for next year to expand the city's maternity clinic, provide pediatric care and initiate other services.

Dr. Marjorie Orr also said she plans to beef up existing efforts by the department. Since recently taking over as director, she said she has found the agency to be lax in some areas — especially in the inspection of food service operations at local child-care institutions and private schools.

Dr. Orr made her statements in a presentation Thursday to the League of Women Voters. Also addressing the league's general meeting was Dr. Richard Lockwood, Texas Tech University vice president for Health Sciences Centers.

The city health department has an annual budget of about $800,000. "For a city the size of Lubbock, it should be $2 million to $2.5 million," Dr. Orr said.

She said she plans to work toward a full-fledged department by "asking for a 60 percent increase for next year."

That proposed increase would be used to expand or initiate services in several areas, Dr. Orr said.

She said the department's maternity clinic now is open only three days a week — and there is a six-to eight-week waiting period for the clinic to see new patients. Dr. Orr hopes to remedy that by keeping the clinic open five days a week.

In fact, she plans to begin the five-day schedule in July by shifting funds within this year's budget. Dr. Orr also said medical residents in obstetrical care will begin working with the maternity clinic in July.

For the next fiscal year, Dr. Orr said she hopes to set up a specialized child-health clinic, to complement the work of the local Well Baby Clinic.

Another idea in the mill is to have the city assume responsibility for family planning services now administered by the regional office of the Texas Department of Health.

"I would like to bring family planning back into the (city) health department so we can refer clients directly from the maternity clinic to family planning," Dr. Orr said. She said bringing the three services together — the maternity clinic, pediatric care and family planning — would be of "tremendous benefit" to clients.

Dr. Orr said other proposals for the municipal health department include hiring more sanitarians and instituting programs in home health care, dental care for young children and screening for hypertension, diabetes and cancer.

"We're certainly not meeting the need" of Lubbock with the services now available, Dr. Orr said.

She said some functions of the department have been neglected. Since coming aboard, she said she has discovered that the department has failed to inspect food service operations of the more than 50 private kindergartens, schools and day-care facilities here.

Dr. Orr said the facilities should have been inspected twice a year. (They also are inspected annually by the Texas Department of Public Welfare, she said.)

Dr. Orr said she made the discovery of the neglected inspections when her staff recently received a complaint about the food at a local child-care facility.

Lockwood told the League of Women Voters about developments in the university's medical school and local teaching facility, the Health Sciences Center Hospital.

He said the class entering the medical school will be enlarged from its present level of 40 students to 60 students this fall, 100 in 1979 and 120 in 1980.

OUR PLEDGE

We pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation, under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Where DA Action Is

JOHN MONTFORD himself credits his landslide mandate as Lubbock's next criminal district attorney to "a dissatisfaction with the crime situation in Lubbock County."

He thus recognizes "the spot" he will be on when he takes over from Alton Griffin as the county's prosecutor next January.

Between now and then, the voters' message perhaps will be sinking in on others who have responsibilities in the area of crime and punishment.

We refer specifically to Police Chief J. T. Alley and his officers, the City Council, Sheriff Choc Blanchard and the judges of the district courts, courts-at-law and justice of the peace courts.

THE COUNTY PROSECUTOR, whether his name be Griffin or Montford, and his assistants represent only one link in the chain of any war on crime.

They cannot secure convictions with any degree of consistency and even-handedness unless the officers who investigate crimes and collect the evidence do their jobs well.

Nor can the district attorney's staff drive hard bargains on pleas of guilty unless the juries, and judges, back them up.

The same voters who put Montford into office will, as jurors, have to face up to their responsibilities to assess stiff penalties when they find defendants guilty.

Judges, for their part, must give the prosecutors an equal chance with the defense lawyers to get a fair trial and a just verdict —and the judges must tighten up on courtroom procedures, on bail bonds, on trial delays and on penalties assessed on pleas of guilty.

THE FIRST responsibility, however, falls on the shoulders of the district attorney-to-be.

During his campaign, Montford told editors of The Avalanche-Journal and other voters that he would, if elected, work with the police and sheriff's officers to assure that the evidence he took to court would be the very best that could be obtained.

This requires close cooperation between those who gather the evidence and those who prosecute.

Montford also pledged cooperation with the City on cases which are appealed from Municipal Court, promised to organize the work of the district attorney's office well and to maintain a qualified staff, and said he will work effectively with the courts to keep the dockets moving and the jail doors slamming shut.

Voters liked what he said. It will be up to him to deliver.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Kenneth May

God's Last Gift

EVEN AMONG those who believe that God created the world and all that's in it, there's a widespread misconception that He completed His work in six days.

God rested on the seventh day, the Bible tells us, but His world was not complete until Eve's first child was born.

When He gave the world a Mother's love, God added a final touch which gave all the rest a special glow.

Can you imagine a world without a mother's love? What a drab and uninviting place it would be.

Without mothers to love us and believe in us and stand by us despite our faults and misfortunes, few of us could withstand life's problems and develop into stable maturity.

Those of us who have never been without our mother's love can but guess at how blessed we are.

AS THIS MOTHERS Day approaches, I wish I could brush aside my inhibitions and tell my mother, as I did as a child, how much I love her.

She knows, of course, but putting it into words is so awkward for most of us that we simply leave it unsaid. It is a fault that God forgot to correct before He rested.

Many of us, like me, have been doubly blessed. We have not only our mothers but our mothers-in-law to be thankful for. But the love stays in our hearts, seldom daring to let itself be seen lest the world label it as an emotional weakness.

Perhaps it really doesn't matter so much—we like to think, anyway—whether we ever put our feelings into words. Accepting love, and returning it silently, may be all that a mother really wants from a grown son or daughter.

Maybe. Now and then, though, at least once a year on Mother's Day, it wouldn't hurt us to let them know we're glad that God didn't leave us to explore His world without their love.

ANY OF YOU who voted for Jerry Sadler, Robert M. Campbell or Sam Houston Clinton on May 6 because you'd studied the candidates and made an informed decision can skip this section.

I'd like to address a word solely to those who voted for one or all of these three men out of ignorance: "Bah!"

Sadler, a snuff-dipping former officeholder, led in a four-way race and will meet John Poerner, a knowledgeable incumbent, in a June 3 runoff for a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission.

Campbell, a relatively unknown plaintiffs' lawyer from Waco, defeated an incumbent conservative, T.C. Chadick, for a seat on the Texas Supreme Court.

CLINTON, A cause-seeking lawyer in the mold of the American Civil Liberties Union, ousted Justice Jim Vollers from the the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Vollers was for upholding convictions after a man had received a fair trial rather than free him from jail on a minor legal technicality.

There's no way, in my opinion, that Poerner, Chadick and Vollers could have been beaten if the voters had taken the trouble to inform themselves.

If you don't know the candidates in a race, then —for heaven's sake—don't vote!

Holmes Alexander:

We Can't Afford To Be 'Normal'

WASHINGTON—The craze for "normalization" is taking "Zbig" Brzezinski, the President's top security adviser, to Peking, but this is Carter's roundabout way to a summit at Pyongyang with North Korean President Kim Il Sung.

Despite sudden announcement of U.S. troop withdrawal from the Korean peninsula, despite the firing of a general who protested and despite the reduced tokenizing of the pullout, Carter is determined to stand by his ignorant pre-election pledge to reduce, if not eliminate, the 33,000 U.S. occupation forces below the DMZ.

The United States also has 640 tactical nuclear weapons in support of the Second Division there.

CARTER'S MOTIVES are getting plenty of speculation, but he is going to be cagey about any public statement, recalling that it was Sec. of State Dean Acheson's exclusion of Korea from the U.S. defense perimeter which did so much damage.

Acheson's speech that day at the National Press Club cost us 33,629 American lives. It desanctified the godlike reputation of Douglas MacArthur. It involved us in a mainland Asiatic War.

It tied us up in a seemingly endless cease-fire negotiation which North Korea has violated 40,093 times, according to figures from Seoul.

To most officials in Washington, including Sec. of State Vance, CIA Director Turner and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, all these are reasons for avoiding Kim Il Sung like a rattlesnake.

But the only person who has spoken for President Carter is Anthony Lake, director of the policy planning staff at the State Department. Lake has come out in plain language:

"WE ARE PURSUING opportunities to normalize relations with Vietnam, Cuba, China and others. We are prepared to move toward improved relations with North Vietnam, provided North Korea's allies take steps to improve relations with South Korea."

There is no bigger "if" in Washington diplomacy.

But Jimmy Carter seems set to "pull a Nixon" by opening talk and trade with a long-time foe, as Nixon did in 1972 by going to Peking.

Carter's plan to "normalize" all hostile relationships takes us back to the 1947 "containment" policy offered by Truman's man George Kennan who proposed that the Soviet Union be surrounded by the forces of Western democracy and forced to keep within reasonable borders.

Who could have envisioned that 30 years later, the USSR would have an ally and a submarine base in Cuba and be dug in for keeps at the Horn of Africa?

The miscalculation, as we know how, was that we were thinking of Russia as a national power, insecure and distrustful, entitled for those reasons, perhaps, to a ring of buffer states for protection against future Hitlers and Napoleons.

Such a national state could be "contained" but the USSR as a world force for revolution can only be matched weapon for weapon, or ultimately destroyed.

North Korea, then, is a far-flung "Cuba" to Moscow. To reunify the Korean peninsula would not "normalize" even the Orient. It would put both American allies and American adversaries, notably Japan and Red China, under Russian guns. It would be a disaster.

Sylvia Porter:

Don't Aim At Pests And Shoot Yourself

NOW COME THE push and clank of backyard spreaders across the land pouring out a precision flow of pesticides, as millions of us try to protect our vegetable and flower gardens against the annual invasion of pests.

Along with baseball and barbeques, this is the beginning of the season for battling cinch bugs, mosquitoes and hordes of other unwanted invaders.

Despite the bitter controversy of the past decade over many home pesticides, these products perform a vital role in our abundant agricultural harvests and in our comfortable outdoor lives at home. Their benefits cannot and must not be ignored.

MANY INSECT-borne diseases—including malaria, yellow fever and typhus—have been brought under control by pesticides.

Millions of people in the Third World and underdeveloped countries owe their very lives to the use of pesticides which have enhanced their food production.

We never could have created so booming a do-it-yourself home gardening economy without the striking help of pesticides. Used discriminately, pesticides can be of indisputable value.

Used indiscriminately, they can dispense dangerous poisons not only to those who handle them but also bystanders accidentally exposed.

A new classification statement on pesticides will affect all farmers and home gardeners this year.

No matter how valuable these and other new classifications may become, take an extra precaution by reading and following all label directions and warnings before you use any pesticide.

If you're a suburban gardener, for instance, you'll find pesticide chemical dilution a mathematical headache.

To help you, manufacturers provide packaging of garden chemicals down to homeowner retail size, with the dilution rates on the label for the small quantities you will need.

MANY COUNTY agriculture agents are adapting a simple conversion rate to reduce the dilution rate to the size you need.

When directions call for two pounds to 100 gallons of water: as an illustration, a simple rule is to use two tablespoons to one gallon of water. If the directions call for four pounds to 100 gallons, convert to four tablespoons per gallon.

The Environmental Protection Agency, which is involved in the registration of all pesticide products marketed in the U.S., sets federal guidelines for manufacturers.

Producers of pesticide products must submit data showing that, when used as directed, the pesticide will not only be effective against listed pests but also will not cause serious adverse effects on the user, animals or crops or our environment.

EPA REQUIRES THAT certain statements appear on all product labels and reviews these before approving the pesticides for public sale.

In turn: it is against federal law to use a pesticide in conflict with the directions on the label. The EPA urges you to:

* Study the label first and follow directions carefully.
* Don't apply pesticides outdoors on windy days and avoid inhaling pesticides or spilling them on your skin or on the ground.
* Wash thoroughly with soap and water after using a pesticide. Wash clothing separately from the family wash.
* Never transfer a pesticide into a container —such as a soft drink bottle—that might attract children. It is illegal to do so and could be extremely dangerous.
* Dispose of all empty containers as label directs.

THE U.S. AGRICULTURE Department adds these safety tips:

* Never smoke while handling a pesticide.
* Before using a pesticide: remove all pets, their food and water from the area.
* Don't keep pesticides in places accessible to children and keep them away from food, dishes, pots and pans.
* Wrap containers before disposal.
* And if you spill a pesticide on your apparel: change your clothes immediately.

John D. Lofton:

It's Dumb To Say It Out Loud

EASTON, Md.—Are you a "redneck Wallaceite"? You say you aren't, or that you don't know, you're not sure?

Well, agonize over this question no more, because Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., has devised a rather simple litmus test that will allow you (in the privacy of your own home) to determine just exactly how much of a problem you have with crimson-around-the-collar.

The unveiling of Anderson's test occurred at a Republican issues conference organized by Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore.

SITTING AT THE table with Anderson and his wife, Keke, were: myself; columnist William Safire and his wife; Laurence Silberman, former U.S. ambassador to Yugoslavia, and his wife; and a representative from the British embassy in Washington.

What prompted Anderson's remarks was a question from the British gentleman who asked him about his tough primary contest with an outspokenly conservative opponent, the Rev. Don Lyon, a fundamentalist minister from the Open Bible Church.

On March 22, Anderson beat Lyon by a vote margin of 43,056 to 31,326. Lyon received support from, among others, the National Conservative Political Action Committee, the Committee for the Survival of a Free Congress, and conservative direct-mail fund-raiser Richard Viguerie.

Blasting his opponent and his supporters in general for lying and distorting his position on the issues, Anderson said that this "New Right" cabal had been very good at injecting "redneck" issues into the campaign.

Feeling my own neck begin to blush a little, I asked Anderson for some examples of redneck issues. He named three: opposition to gun control and abortion, and advocacy of voluntary prayer in the public schools.

NOTING THAT these three positions are all contained in the 1976 Republican Party platform, I asked Anderson if he considered Lyon to be a redneck. He said he did.

The next day, in an interview, I pressed Anderson for an elaboration on his redneck remarks.

Well, he said, when he used the word "redneck" he meant a person who has an "irrational or emotional approach to issues," a "Wallaceite"—type individual who appeals to "passion apart from the facts"—a person who has come to "play on the so-called social issues."

Fine, I say,—then I'm a redneck, since I'm against gun control and abortion and for prayer in the schools? No, you're not, he says.

PUZZLED, I ASK: Then how do you tell a real redneck from a non-redneck who simply holds redneck positions? Anderson replies that I'm not a redneck, because he's sure I wouldn't appeal to "fear and unbridled passion."

Expanding on the subject, Anderson explains that certain positions on only three issues do not a redneck make. He says that his opponent, Lyon, raised 20 issues in the campaign. And when taken together, these positions constitute the essence of redneckism.

And what are these positions? I quote from the issue sheet which Lyon circulated during his primary campaign. He criticized Anderson for having voted for:

A $9,000 congressional pay raise; negotiations that would surrender the Panama Canal; free legal aid for homosexuals; federal registration of guns; increasing the National Debt limit; $1.7 billion in foreign aid; an additional $3.2 billion for more foreign aid;

Also, $5 billion for food stamps; food stamps for strikers; federal land-use planning; forced busing of school children; the teaching of secular humanism in the public schools; the pardon of draft evaders; aid to New York City, and $288 million for research and development for the Environmental Protection Agency.

FURTHERMORE, LYON criticized Anderson for voting against:

Protecting small businessmen from OSHA; funding the B-1 bomber; a proposal to balance the budget; allowing prayer in the public schools; and cutting OSHA's budget by $6 million.

The accusation that he voted for free legal aid for homosexuals is one charge that particularly angered Anderson.

The morning after Anderson's remarks the night before, Mrs. Anderson told me that she, too, was surprised by what her husband has said. She said that never before had he made the redneck charges. Well, I believe her.

But I think it's good that the congressman said what he said. It shows what he really believes even though he now realizes it was not smart to say it out loud.

Populist Speeches Criticized

By United Press International

Following is a sample of what the nation's newspapers have been saying this week.

Memphis Commercial Appeal:

When Presidents find their ratings in the polls falling, they almost always try to divert people's attention from the problems that are troubling them by taking trips overseas or by taking to the road in the United States and making populist statements.

President Carter tried the overseas bit — twice. He went to Europe and he went to Latin America and to Africa.

Those trips didn't do much for him. His popularity continued to sink sharply. So last week he tried the populist tactic.

Swinging thorugh the West, where he had few friends even in 1976, he spoke sharply about lawyers and doctors. Never mind that inflation is what the nation is worried about. Never mind that Congress still is haggling over an energy program Carter sent to the legislators more than a year ago. Never mind about the falling value of the dollar or foreign affairs such as the proposed sale of aircraft to both sides in the Mideast, or the lagging SALT negotiations.

A lot of folks who heard the President on his Western trip or read what he had to say about the dastardly American Bar Association or the delinquent American Medical Association may have thought that was hot stuff. Lots of people have had their own troubles with lawyers and doctors, or felt they were overcharged for their services. Lawyers and doctors always are fair game for the populists.

But if those speeches don't bring up his poll ratings, what will Carter do for an encore? Attack Wall Street, or the monopolistic press, or the bankers or the "trusts?" How about the Cross of Gold? That used to wow them in the West.

The only trouble with all this is that those problems which the people were saying he wasn't handling very well still were there when Carter got back to the White House Friday. They are going to be there for quite a while, too, unless he finds some new ways to deal with them.

Hollow Attacks

Tulsa World:

President Carter's plan to "get tough" has started out with a bang. Having already alienated a large segment of business and industry, the President last week managed to offend the prima donnas of the national press and then all the lawyers and doctors in the nation.

He perhaps was innocent in snubbing the Washington Press Corps' big social event of the year and sending Press Secretary Jody Powell instead. (In fact, we have to confess to some amusement at the Capitol newsmen's huffing and puffing when the President politely rejected their invitation.)

But the attack on the lawyers and doctors appears deliberate.

While no one contends the legal and medical professions are 100 percent pure, the President's criticisms of them are largely invalid and particularly offensive — considering the actions of the Federal Government in both fields.

Carter criticized lawyers for protecting the interests of the privileged class and of obstructing progams toward civil rights and social justice. The charge comes at a time when the nation's judicial system is overloaded to the point of breakdown with all kinds of lawsuits flowing out of "civil right and socal justice" causes. It is particularly hollow.

Anyone watching the judicial system for the past 20 years knows that a major thrust of a large segment of the profession has been toward just those programs.

Doctors, according to President Carter, have been the major obstacle to the country having a better health care system.

That again is false. The American Medical Association has opposed Government moves to further socialize medicine, and many fair-minded people would agree that the doctors' position has some merit. The widespread excesses of existing Government health care programs have proven them to be at least partially correct in their opposition.

Regardless of the truth or untruth of the President's accusations, there remains the fact that his Administration proposes health programs and additional regulation (which would employ lawyers for implementation) that will add billions to the burden of taxpayers. To badmouth doctors and lawyers while pursuing such programs shows a lack of judgment and fair play.

Begin Criticized

Pawtucket (R.I.) Evening Times:

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin was hardly appreciative of the slow but steady switch of American public opinion away from the inflexible Israel posture on key issues, and toward a more flexible stand in the dispute with the Arab nations.

Now, though, that same change of view has taken root in another nation and Mr. Begin may find it difficult not to respond and react to it.

The nation is Israel.

Reserve officers and soldiers have organized a "Peace Now" movement. They are critical of Mr. Begin's adamancy about retaining control of the West Bank of the Jordan. They brand his attitude on this issue as a barrier to peace with the Arabs.

Today, particularly since Anwar Sadat's historic visit to the enemy country, the Israeli relationship with its neighbors has been substantively altered — and attitudes and policies should be altered, too, to conform to new realities.

The day of full security and of guarantee against peril from its neighbors has not been achieved by Israel, but the era when the Arab world roared its defiance and vowed to wipe it off the map is gone.

Eventually, Prime Minister Begin must begin listening to the rising chorus of voices in his own land. They fear Mr. Begin's tendency toward inflexibility can lead only to war. And that course has already been traversed four times.

Arms Sale Defended

Scripps-Howard Newspapers:

President Carter's proposal to sell $4.8 billion of jet fighters to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia is one of his most controversial foreign policy moves. Nevertheless, on careful examination it appears to be in the national interest...The sale of 50 F-5E lightweight fighters to Egypt...would be Washington's first supply of military equipment to Egypt, and Israel's friends are disturbed by the precedent.

The administration however, feels that President Anwar Sadat must be able to show his generals some fruits of his break with Russia and his reliance on the United States. Also, the F-5E is inferior to many Israeli planes and is not seen as changing the military balance.

Selling 60 long-range F-15s to Saudi Arabia is the most controversial aspect of Carter's initiative...Saudi officials say they will use the F-15 only as a defensive interceptor...

Some congressmen worry that in the passions of an Arab-Israeli war the Saudi assurances would be voided. Possibly. But those legislators overlook a key point: A country as wealthy as Saudi Arabia will get a modern air defense system no matter what Washington finally decides.

France stands ready to sell the Saudis an unlimited number of Mirage F-1 fighter-bombers — with no strings...If tha Saudis get F-15s, however, the United States would be responsible for training, maintenance, and spare parts. This country then would influence how and against whom the planes were used. Clearly that would be better for the Israaelis than if the Saudis had Mirages...

IRS At Fault

Los Angeles Times:

The federal government has botched its handling of a good idea called the Individual Retirement Account, and the Internal Revenue Service deserves much of the blame.

The account, a plan of tax deferrals created by Congress in 1974, is aimed at the 40 million Americans who aren't covered by a private pension plan where they work. Most of these people earn low or moderate incomes, and most have no retirement arrangements other than Social Security.

The law permits these people to channel up to 10 percent of their incomes, but no more than $1,500 a year in any case, into investments or savings without paying income tax on the portion that they set aside. The hitch is they can't ordinarily get the money back until retirement time. Then they pay the delayed taxes, but at a lower rate because of a lower income bracket...

Only two or three million people have signed up so far and few of these apparently are the workers of modest income for whom the program was designed.

The reasons: confusion, ambiguity, overlaps and delays by the government. The Internal Revenue Service has still not issued final regulations for Individual Retirement Accounts, and the epic turbidity of the interim rules has led many people to incur fines and tax penalties.

A Federal Trade Commission report last week documented some of the lapses and conflicts, showed that the scene is confused further by the involvement of many federal agencies, and called for clarifications. The IRS is working on a final set of rules now, and a House subcommittee is working on plans to put one agency clearly in charge of the retirement accounts.

The changes are needed. Too many people have been hurt, and not enough have been served so far by this very worthy tax plan.

Orchestra Leader To Work In China

TOKYO (AP) — Seiji Ozawa, the Japanese music director and conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returns to his native China in June for what he has called a long-held dream — eight days of working with the Peking Central Philharmonic Orchestra.

A spokesman for Ozawa said the 43-year-old conductor will go to Peking June 11 to teach and rehearse the orchestra and lead it in several concerts. He visited China 20 months ago.

Born in Mukden, Manchuria, to Japanese parents, Ozawa studied Western and Oriental music at the Toho School of Music in Tokyo. He brought the Boston Symphony to Japan in March and told reporters then of his plans to visit China.

Sen. Birch Bayh Urges Campaign Against Opponents Of ERA

By PEGGY SIMPSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Birch Bayh, a longtime advocate of the Equal Rights Amendment, says supporters must counter an anti-amendment backlash by campaigning directly against every state legislator who opposes it.

The amendment will expire on March 22 unless three more states ratify it or Congress grants an extension in the ratificatin process.

"I would encourage you to make the democratic process work — to raise money, to buttonhole and encourage and indeed if necessary to intimidate members of the state legislators to be for the ERA," Bayh, an Indiana Democrat, told an ERA fundraiser this week.

The fundraiser was sponsored by the National Women's Political Party.

Bayh said legislation will be introduced next week seeking to extend the ratification period. Bayh previously had opposed such an extension, but said he believes it now necessary.

The House civil rights subcommittee resumes hearings on the extension bill on May 17.

"We are in for a fight," said Ellie Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, "but we are moving again. Our support is growing daily and mail is coming in by the hundreds from the grass roots."

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., warned that the long debate over the Panama Canal treaties and the prospect of a lengthy upcoming debate on the labor law bill poses time problems for the ERA supporters.

The amendment has been ratified by 35 states — three short of what is needed. But three of thoe states have voted to rescind their earlier approval, an action that has been questioned as to its legality.

Supporters of the ERA now are waging major efforts to get the amendment ratified in Florida, Illinois, North Carolina and South Carolina — states where ERA proponents say changes in a handful of legislative seats could make the difference.

Princeton Think Tank Urges Oil Rationing

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

A new study to be published shortly by a highly unusual private think tank based in Princeton, N.J., contends that petroleum rationing is the fairest and most effective way to get the United States to cut down on its consumption of imported oil.

The author of the study is Carter Henderson, a former Wall Street Journal reporter and London bureau chief who later headed investor information activities for International Business Machines Corp. The growing U.S. dependence on high-priced foreign oil poses a clear danger to the nation's economic vitality and to its national security, he asserts, and the impending end of the oil Era will result in an upheaval in American national life second only to the transformation that occurred a century ago when the U.S. changed from a primarily agrarian to an industrial society.

Efforts to control consumption by increasing prices are doomed to failure, Henderson says. But, he adds, although rationing is the best answer, it has been virtually ignored in the energy debate because of lingering bad memories from the darkest days of World War II. These fears, he contends, are being played upon by special-interest groups that stand to profit by confining the debate within the traditional bounds of supply and demand. These, he says, are proving "far too simplistic to deal with the global complexities to today's petroleum crisis."

Six years ago, Henderson and his British-born wife Hazel, an internationally known writer and lecturer on ecology and economics and one of the organizers of Earth Day in 1970, established the Princeton Center for Alternative Futures Inc., a "deliberately small and independent" think tank and conference center designed to explore the future of industrial society.

The center — which may be the world's only "mom-and-pop" think tank — is supported solely by the income from their prolific writing and lecturing activities. Henderson takes pains to point out that his new 77-age study, "The Inevitability of Petroleum Rationing in the United States" (paperbound, $3.75), has not received any outside funding.

He maintains that rationing can succeed where the market-oriented system cannot for four main reasons:

1. The announcement of oil rationing alone would wake up the American people to the seriousness of the U.S. energy situation.

2. Rationing would enable the federal government to hold oil consumption to whatever level it feels the country can afford. (If price increases were used to do this, there would be a sudden surge of additional inflation.)

3. Rationing is the most equitable way to distribute supplies of a scarce resource (in contrast to higher prices, which favor the affluent at the expense of the poor).

4. Rationing would create no larger, more expensive nor more centralized bureaucracy than the one already being built to handle the government's market-oriented efforts to cope with looming energy shortages. (And the development of a black market could be averted by the establishment of a "white market" system by which rationing coupons could be legally bought, sold and traded.

Henderson says that despite its negative image today, rationing was used successfully during World War II to distribute equitably reduced supplies of gasoline and other strategic materials needed for the Allied war effort. The system met basic civilian needs for gasoline, was flexibly managed at the local level by neighborhood rationing boards and "came to be appreciated by the driving public who felt it guaranteed them their fair share of dwindling supplies at a price they could afford," he says. Black marketeering and counterfeiting did not become a serious problem, he adds, until late in the war when military demands for fuel increased and civilian consumption was slashed by 40 percent in just two years.

We asked Henderson how he came to make his study of rationing. "One of the alternative futures we're interested in examining at the center is the energy future," he told us. "In looking at all the options for solving the energy problem, I realized that one had been almost completely excluded from the debate — rationing. I couldn't understand that, because, upon examining the alternatives, it seemed so clearly superior. Nevertheless, it's never been seriously considered by those who have been hammering out our national energy policy."

"I hope my book will ruffle some feathers and provoke some debate," he adds, "because open discussion will bring home the point that when the U.S. energy problem reaches crisis proportions, the government must have a workable petroleum distribution system tested and ready to be put into operation nationwide. And the most effective plan available when this critical point is reached will be rationing."

Bell Testifies On Alien Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter Admnistration believes that millions of illegal aliens will come out of hiding and register with the government if the president's controversial alien act becomes law.

Included in the proposed Alien Adjustment and Employment Act is a provision that calls for establishment of a temporary resident alien status for any alien that entered the country illegally after 1976. The alien could remain "temporary" for a maximum of five years.

"While the bill does not specify what will happen to the temporary resident aliens after the five-year period, this is not intended merely as a postponement of a major decision; rather it is a part of a step-by-step approach to a major social problem," said Attorney General Griffin B. Bell during testimony Wednesday before the Senate committee considering the bill.

"The important underlying question that must be answered is whether, once the facts are presented, the undocumented aliens will decide that its worthwhile to come out of hiding," Bell continued. "We believe that they will because the advantages of the temporary status so outweigh the disadvantages.

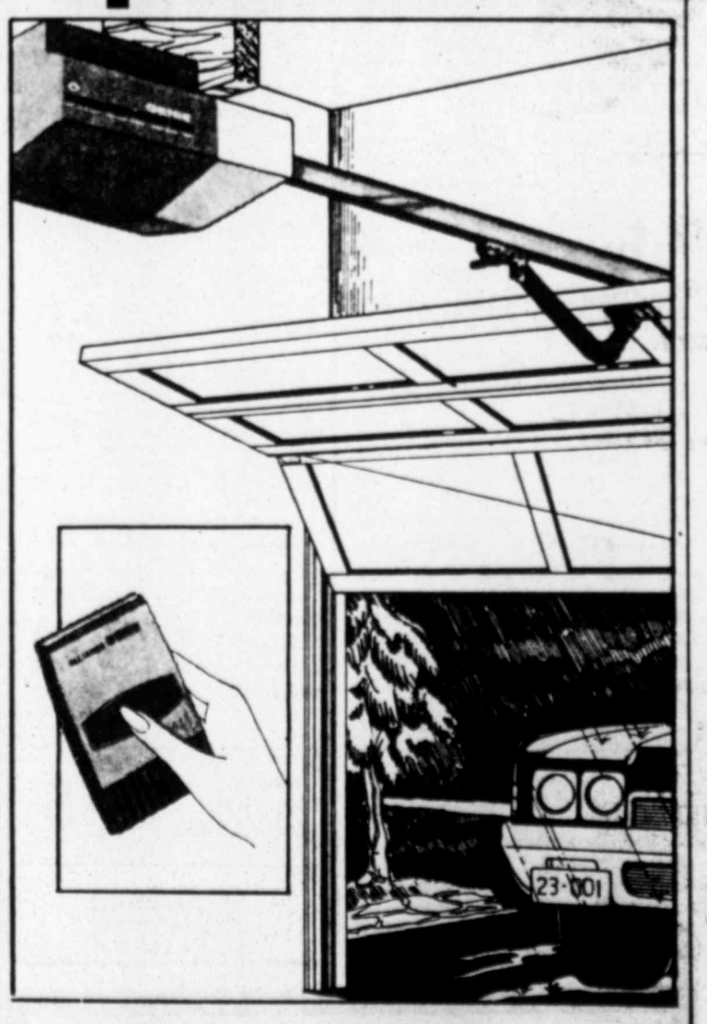

"The most important advantage is the right to live and work in the United States without fear of apprehension by the authorities and without being easy targets for exploitation by unscrupulous employers or landlords," he said.

QUAKE HITS SICILY

MESSINA, Sicily (AP) — An earthquake measuring six on the 12-point Mercalli Scale shook eastern Sicily Wednesday night, sending thousands from their homes to spend the night in the open. But there were no reports of injuries or major damage. The Messina Observatory said the epicenter was at sea.

Reptiles Ruled During Daytime

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Dinosaurs, the mightiest of reptiles, lived tens of millions of years before the first man appeared. But even if they had co-existed in time, the chances are that humans would have been able to thrive and survive.

They have already done so in science fiction films which cheerfully scramble the evolutionary time scale so that the handsome hero, armed with a spear, can bravely tackle the rubber model of Tyrannosaurus Rex.

Nothing that dramatic is available from scientists studying reptiles, but two reports from the most recent research postulate a wide gap in the dinosaur's domination of the era that opened 200 million years ago.

There is evidence, according to a report in the British magazine Nature, from scientists at the Harvard Museum of Comparative Zoology, that the reptiles only ruled during the daytime because, assuming they were cold-blooded, they became sluggish when the temperature fell at dusk.

No one knows whether they slept or not but the chances are that they did and quite soundly. A report by the Department of Biology of the University of Houston in Comparative Biochemistry and Physiology, says that crocodiles indulge in "quiet" sleep in which heartbeat, breathing and muscle tone all slow down.

Since crocodiles were around 180 million years ago their sleeping habits might have originated in the earliest days of the reptiles.

So asleep at night — if that's what actually happened to the dinosaurs — the way was opened for the first mammals to move about in comparative safety after darkness fell. All these primitives had to do then was slowly evolve over millions of years into the animals that took over in the Cretaceous era when the great reptiles mysteriously disappeared.

It is not known for sure, however, whether the dinosaurs were cold-blooded or warm-blooded. For much of this century, scientists assumed those great animals were cold-blooded with their body temperatures fluctuating with those of the environment.

Most living reptiles are dependent on external sources of heat, primarily the sun, and are not able to raise or lower body temperatures by internal processes.

In the last decade, there have been suggestions that dinosaurs might mave been steadily warm-blooded for whatever reason and might even have venerated their own heat internally like mammals.

But regardless of whether the dinosaurs were warm- or cold-blooded, scientists say the skeletons of the earliest mammals indicate they were well adapted to nocturnal living probably with acute hearing and sense of smell. They were small and probably lived on insects.

Once they were able to operate both day and night there was an explosion of mammalian species.

Electronic Gadgets Aid Blind Man

KETTERING, Ohio (AP) — Dave Koverman was blinded eight years ago. But he still can distinguish colors, tell whether the day is cloudy or sunny, compute math problems and run down the street alone without bumping into things.

He does these things with the help of several electronic gadgets for the blind — a path sounder, a talking calculator and a light probe.

Koverman, 28, lost his sight in 1970 when he was shot in the head while flying a helicopter in Vietnam. He said he accepted the handicap without bitterness but wanted to be independent.

"I used to walk around my neighborhood with my hand in the air feeling for tree branches," he said. "I'm fairly tall and I used to get hit in the face a lot by branches. But with the path sounder I know when something's ahead. It starts beeping as soon as it comes close to any object within six feet. It can even tell me what direction cars are coming from when I have to cross the street."

The sounder is a sonar device about the size of a small transistor radio and can be worn around the neck or carried by hand. It and the other devices aid Koverman in his full-time studies at Wright State University and clerical work in the Veteran's Affairs office there.

The Veteran's Administration helped Koverman acquire the gadgets and Heinz Hospital for the Blind in Chicago trained him in their use. He hopes to get a laser cane soon and has ordered an electronic book reader that uses a mechanical voice to read printed pages.

"Of all the gadgets, I think the talking calculator is my favorite," he said. "While other students compute math problems on the chalkboard, or paper, I find the answer with the calculator. It even has a little earphone so I don't distract other people."

The device tells the user which numbers are being punched and states the answer.

The light probe has been useful to Koverman when answering the multi-line office telephone at work.

"On a busy day the telephone switchbox lights up like a Christmas tree. I just point the probe at the little buttons on the phone, and when the lights start blinking my light probe starts beeping, and I know which lines to answer."

Koverman said the probe's tone varies with color shades and helps him match clothing and "see" pictures. By moving the probe over pictures he can distinguish shapes. Because he remembers how things look he can quickly determine what the shapes depict.

He says it also enabled him to catch his wife in a trick.

"A few months ago, my wife, Glenda, tried to trick me into thinking our garage was being painted my favorite color, yellow, when she had actually bought her favorite color, green. I thought something was funny when I tested by light probe on the paint and it beeped low notes, so back to the paint store went the green paint."

City Schools Honor Outstanding Students

Dunbar High School and Alderson and Matthews junior high schools honored students this morning in annual recognition assemblies. Students were cited for numerous accomplishments.

Dunbar High School

The Dunbar program involved senior students. An assembly last week honored sophomores and juniors. Several special awards were given at the senior assembly, one of them designed for other than a Dunbar student.

The "Friend of Dunbar" award was presented posthumously to Roy Davis. This award is given annually to show appreciation and recognize persons in the community who have given service to Dunbar. Mrs. Roy Davis accepted the award for her late husband.

Among the other special recognitions, Dan Boyd was presented the DHS Brotherhood Award. It is bestowed annually to a senior student who has exemplified concern for brotherhood, peace, and harmony among the races during his or her high school years.

Joey Roberts received the John Philip Sousa Award for outstanding accomplishment in music and a trophy for scoring the most individual points in the Learn and Live television program competition. Plaques were presented Donald Ross and Clyde Trotty for the National School Choral Award.

Alderson Junior High School

At Alderson Jr. High School, the Distinguished Hornet Award was presented to Gus Pena and Patrice Price. First runner-up honors went to James Johnson and Angela Davis. Daryl Wilkerson and Michelle Grant were second runners-up.

Freddy Martinez and Mary Torres won the Daughters of the American Revolution Award. The first runners-up were David Pheniz and Era Gail Swindle. Keith Breedon and Paula Berry took second runners-up honors.

The award for athletic scholarship was presented to Jessie Alamanaz and Denise Wilkerson. Jeff Kinney and Stephanie Peoples were honored as the outstanding athletes.

Matthews Junior High School

At Matthews Jr. High School, Rudy Robles and Ernestine Day received the Hall of Fame citation, the highest award presented at the recognition assembly.

Elias Rodriguez and Elvira Gomez were presented the Daughters of the American Revolution Award. Sammy Molinar and Yolanda Rangel received the DAR runner-up honors.

Theme for the Matthews programs was "Born Free."

Area Resident Pleads Guilty To Battery

HOBBS, N.M. (AP) — Juan Martin Sanchez pleaded guilty to aggravated battery in the beating of a Lea County man during a spree that started in Brownfield last Nov. 24.

Sanchez, 21, of Brownfield, faced a battery of charges in connection with the spree.

He was sentenced to serve 2-10 years in the state penitentiary by District Judge C. Fincher Neal.

Sanchez is wanted by Texas authorities in connection with the fatal shooting of Alfred Sixto, 30, in Brownfield Nov. 24.

Assistant District Attorney Ernest Carroll said the aggravated battery incident was the last in a series that began with a barroom brawl in Brownfield.

According to testimony during a preliminary hearing Jan. 25, Billy Ray Battles of Brownfield said Sanchez asked him for a ride then took him prisoner at gunpoint. Officers said Sanchez comandeered Battles and the vehicle after the fatal shooting of Sixto.

Police said Sanchez later took a second car near Seminole after shooting the driver of that vehicle in the leg. He retained Battles as a prisoner.

Battles said he was released near Arkansas Junction while Sanchez was heading toward New Mexico in the second vehicle.

Warren Allen of Carlsbad testified Sanchez flagged down the pick up truck he was driving between Hobbs and Carlsbad. Allen said he took the pistol away from Sanchez but said Sanchez grabbed his (Allen's) shotgun from the cab of his truck.

Allen testified he was severely beaten as he fought Sanchez for possession of the weapon. Sanchez was apprehended later while sleeping near a Carlsbad mine.

Sanchez entered a guilty plea to aggravated battery charges as part of a plea bargaining agreement in which a false imprisonment charge was dropped.

Shriners Slate Performance

Shriners from the South Plains and Panhandle area will stage an exhibition for the public at 11 a.m. Saturday at the west end of the South Park Inn parking lot.

The event will be part of the Shriners' "Spring Ceremonial" get-together. The public exhibition will include the the go-cart and motorcycle patrols, clowns, the marching foot patrol, the drum and bugle corps and the band.

Except for the Saturday morning public show, all other events at the ceremonial will be only for Shriners and will be attended by Potentate Creighton B. Lynch of the Khiva Temple at Amarillo.

Frontier Must Provide Oil

HOUSTON (UPI) — Half of all domestic oil and gas in 1990 must come from presently undeveloped areas, says a Shell Oil Co. executive.

"Much of this new oil and gas must come from our frontier areas, offshore and Alaska, where lead times to establish production are longer," said Charles L. Blackburn, executive vice president.

Blackburn told the annual meeting of the International Association of Geophysical Contractors a strong exploration effort is needed in view of the lead time required to get new discoveries into production.

Blackburn said oil imports are projected to rise.

He said delays in lease sales and threats of legislative action are among the factors which have created a climate of chaos and uncertainty inhibiting exploration in the frontier provinces.

Executives Urge Cut In Budget

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The nation's leading businessmen said today that government spending poses the biggest threat in the battle against inflation.

Executives of the Business Council, composed of the chairmen of the country's biggest corporations, said President Carter must cut his $60 billion budget deficit for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 if he expects to control prices.

They suggested that he also reduce his planned $25 billion tax cut to $18 billion to $20 billion as part of his battle against spiraling price.

At their semi-annual meeting, Business Council members were reluctant to criticize AFL-CIO President George Meany for his refusal to set a limit on union wage increases.

"I would take public statements with a grain of salt," said Irving Shapiro, chairman of E.I. du Pont de Nemours Co., and vice president of the Business Council.

"My guess is that if they see companies are holding back price increases within reason and they see the government reducing government spending, they will respond accordingly," he said.

Reginald Jones, chairman of General Electric Co., said businesses are "prepared to respond to jawboning and to demonstrate reason."

President Carter has had representatives of both labor and business to the White House to try to persuade them to voluntarily hold back wage and price increases because of a surge in inflation at the start of this year. Inflation in the first three months was at an annual rate of about 9 percent, The rate for all of 1978 was 7 percent.

Businesses indicated some support, and Meany promised cooperation but declined to guarantee lower wage settlements in coming contracts.

The business executives, at a news conference to announce economic forecasts, said the government's proposed deficits are too large at a time when the economy is expanding.

"Labor and management can do their part, but government will have to do its part also," said Shapiro.

He said the economy is growing more rapidly than had been expected six months ago and that the federal budget and Carter's planned tax cut must be pruned to bring inflation under control.

In their forecast, Business Council consultants predicted a growth rate of 4 percent to 4.5 percent for this year, about the same as the Carter administration is predicting. That would be more than enough to keep the unemployment rate down despite a sluggish first quarter performance, most economist believe.

The consultants said consumer prices will rise about 6.4 percent this year, well below the administration's new estimate of nearly 7 percent.

The Business Council economists agreed with the administration that the unemployment rate will average about 6.2 percent this year.

The council and its analysts supported the tightening of credit by the Federal Reserve Board and said "additional restraint may be both necessary and desirable."

Farm Leader Says Cutback Effective

HEREFORD (AP) — The 50 percent cutback by many farmers in Texas and other states has begun to have a noticeable effect, a spokesman for the American Agriculture movement said Thursday.

The spokesman, Mike McCathern, said the government has tried to suggest other causes for a reduction in U.S. wheat production.

"But the simple fact of truth behind the reduction in wheat production is that the farmers themselves have awakened to the fact that for the past three years they have been the ones who have been paying for the privilege of growing wheat for the rest of the world," he said.

A recent news release from the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported the total U.S. wheat production down by 16 percent "due to participation in the current farm program."

The same report, issued by the USDA's Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, said Texas wheat production is down an estimated 50 percent "due to the extreme drought conditions in the (Texas) Panhandle."

"We in the American Agriculture movement are not saying it has not been extremely dry in the Panhandle, but our 50 percent plow down, graze out program, coupled with the low prices for the finished product, has had an even greater effect on the estimated production in Texas than the government is willing to give credit for," McCathern said.

Wheat prices have risen in the past few months, he said, from 48 percent of parity in April of 1977 to 54 percent of parity last month.

But he said the farmer still has gained no ground. Farmers' costs rose an identical 6 percent over the same period, he said.

City Humane Society To Hold Meeting

The Lubbock Humane Society will have its biennial general membership meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Mahon Library.

Mrs. Phyllis Wright, sheltering expert for the national Humane Society, will be guest speaker. Her talk will be followed by a question and answer period.

Committee Votes For Arms Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's request that Congress lift its arms embargo against Turkey faces an uncertain future that has been underscored by conflicting votes in key Senate and House committees.

In a setback to the administration's plans, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 8-4 Thursday against removing the restriction. The House International Relations Committee voted 18-17 earlier this month in favor of removing the embargo.

The issue now goes to the floor of the Senate and House with the outcome still in doubt.

Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., a leader in the drive to keep the embargo, said the administration would be "ill advised to continue to press it. That doesn't mean they won't do it."

The embargo issue was part of a military aid bill totaling almost $3 billion. Proponents of removing the embargo can revive the issue on the Senate floor with amendments to the overall bill.

On other major issues in the bill, the Senate committee:

—Approved Carter's request for authorization to give South Korea $800 million worth of U.S. military equipment over the next five years as the United States withdraws ground combat troops.

An amendment was adopted to require that Carter give Congress a report on the military balance between North and South Korea 120 days prior to each phase of the withdrawal.

—Overrode administration objections and voted to ban sales of items such as police equipment and riot gear to countries engaging in "a consistent pattern of gross violations" of human rights. The president still could authorize such sales, however, by certifying that exceptional circumstances warranted the transaction.

The administration said the language of the ban would spark "unproductive debates" about what constitutes a consistent pattern of gross violations.

—Deleted military training programs for Nicaragua and Paraguay on grounds they are guilty of human rights violations.

Congress imposed the arms embargo against Turkey in 1975 after that country used American-supplied weapons to invade and occupy Cyprus. Turkish troops continue to hold 40 percent of the island, where Greeks make up about 80 percent of the population.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, one of only three Democrats to vote with the administration on the issue, said the embargo has not pressured Turkey to negotiate about Cyprus.

"We're as far from a just settlement as we were when we began (the embargo)," he said. "It's useless to persist in a policy that has clearly failed."

Church also said the policy has not helped U.S. relations with Greece, "where anti-Americanism is rising."

Arguing to keep the embargo, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., said the administration's proposal could weaken "the less than overwhelming position the Greek government has, which is a pro-U.S. position.

"I don't think we can trade off Greek good will for prospects and promises" of improved relations with Turkey, he said.

WOOD CARVER—The ancient art of woodcarving came to the fore in the arts and crafts show of a "May Fest" event held last weekend at Lubbock's St. Christopher's Episcopal Church. Harry Kinney, who has been carving five years, had an attractive array of birds in the show. He has just returned from Salisbury, Md., where he won third place with a pair of bobwhite quail in world championship wild fowl carving competition. He also won two honorable mentions in the competition. The two-day "May Fest" attracted more than 50 area artists and craftsmen. (Staff Photo by Dennis Copeland)

Encampment Begins On Monday

Attendance of 600 persons is expected at the fifth annual Senior Adult Encampment to be held Monday through Thursday (May 15-18) at the Plains Assembly encampment grounds in Blanco Canyon near Floydada.

Attending will be senior adults who are enrolled in Sunday Schools of 169 churches of five Baptist associations of this area, plus about about 200 persons who are members of seven travel-trailer clubs of Lubbock and four others of other West Texas cities.

The program promises a four-day vacation with "good food, good Christian fellowship, good preaching, good singing and good music."

Ten preachers will be preaching the gospel during the encampment. Music will be furnished by soloists, duets, quartets, plus congregational singing.

"Senior adults are increasingly becoming the largest group in many of our churches, and the pleasure and spiritual blessings they receive at this encampment are increasing," a spokesman said.

Expanded trailer facilities will be provided this year at the assembly grounds, which include 82 trailer spaces with water and electric connections, plus two dump stations.

Baptist associations participating include Lubbock, Staked Plains, Caprock, South Plains and Llanos Altos.

Officers of the encampment are: George D. Holland of Lubbock, president; Joe Breed of Levelland, vice president; Mrs. John Alford of Petersburg, secretary-treasurer.

Encampment directors are: Mrs. Louise Allison of Lubbock; Ray Smith of Post; R.E. Shedd of Post; Tommy Tinker of Lubbock; Mrs. Francis Gunn of Lubbock; Dr. M.M. Ewing of Lubbock; John Stapleton of Lubbock; Ford Stansell of Slaton; J.E. Richardson of Lubbock; Earl Miller, Lubbock; Bob Dennis of Lubbock; Mrs. Harmon Handley of Lockney; Mrs. James Lunsford of Plainview; Norman Hamilton of Floydada; Mrs. Mae Bomar of Silverton; Rev. Raymond Crow of Flomot; A.R. Lindsey of Morton; George F. Young of Brownfield; Harris T. Ray of Littlefield; Roy Phelan of Dimmitt; and Mrs. Lilly Weurflein of Muleshoe.

Local Man's Cartoons Brighten Episcopal Church's Newsletter

RELIGION

When Jerry Henderson does the newsletter "The Epistle" for his church, St. Paul's Episcopal of Lubbock, he gets Eric Barber, an artist to help him "brighten" it up.

Barber does this with a bright little cartoon called "The Pesky Palians." The drawings present situations that may occur within the church at services, or at other times to church members. Some are humorous, but some have sharp points to remind readers of Christian service.

They depict both clergy and laity situations.

Ralph Dorsett originated "The Epistle" and did it for 14 years. He quit and Jerry Henderson (as he described it) "walked in at the wrong time" and now he is the editor. He has edited the newsletter with a newspaper format about three years.

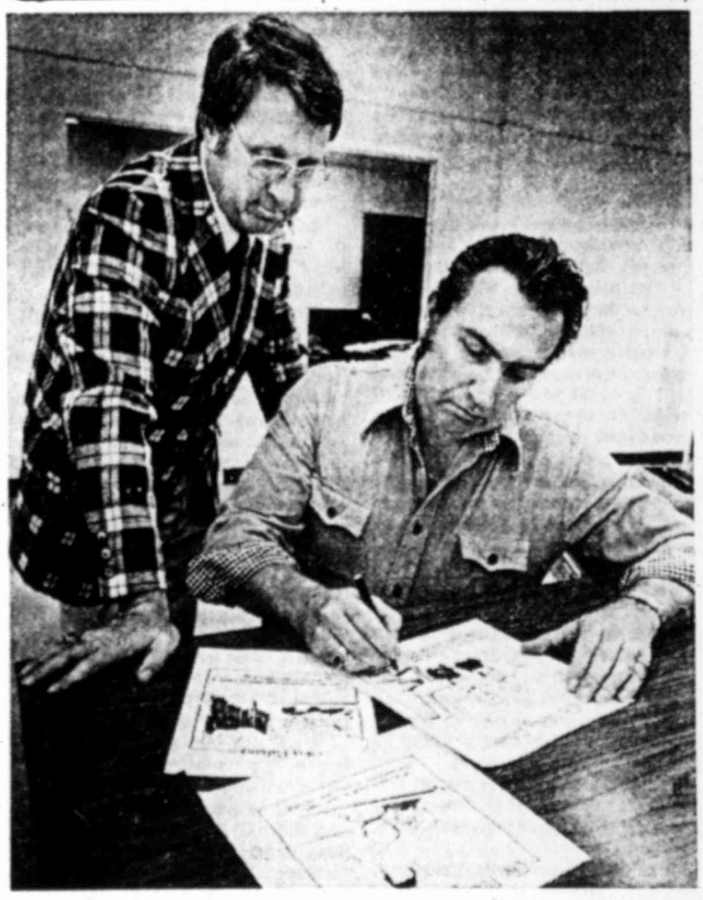

Henderson is experienced in communications. He presently is public information staff member of Lubbock's United Way.

The newsletter is a printed publication, published monthly. It is mailed to all members of St. Paul's.

Henderson does a column titled "Second Cup." Gertrude Hill does Women's News. The pastors do "Clergy Column," a regular contribution.

"The Epistle" presents church news, photos, announcements of interest, along with the church calenddar.

And, oh yes, each issue contains a new situation for "Pesky Palians" — a takeoff on Episcopalians.

TV Evangelist To Appear Here May 16

Plans are being finalized for the one-night appearance here May 16 of Jimmy Swaggert of Baton Rouge, La., one of the world's best known ministers and television evangelists.

Many Lubbock listeners are familiar with his 7:30 a.m. Sunday morning telecast on Channel 11.

All Lubbock churches are invited to participate in the service at 7:30 p.m. May 16 in Lubbock's Memorial Civic Center.

The Jimmy Swaggart telecast now is being aired on more than 260 stations across the nation.

Rev. Swaggart is founder of The Campmeeting Hour on a nationwide radio network each week. He is 43 years old and has been a full-time evangelist 21 years. The Campmeeting Hour is the fastest growing daily Gospel radio program in the world today and presently is aired over more than 600 stations daily, Monday through Friday.

Jimmy Swaggart has a total of 33 musical albums. The Jimmy Swaggart Evangelistic Association is a four-building setup.

"OLD FAITHFUL"—A windmill, created by welding done by Stewart Rice as a hobby, was one of the presentations in an arts and crafts show last weekend at St. Christopher's Episcopal Church's "May Fest." The fest featured an arts and crafts show, demonstrations, entertainment and refreshments. The windmill once was called "Old Faithful" in West Texas for its yoeman work in pumping water for thirsty people, cattle cattle and crops. (Photo by Dennis Copeland)

Area Teams Go Overseas

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (Special) —Two evangelistic teams from the First Baptist Church of O'Donnell and the First Baptist Church of Seagraves are working in The Netherlands through the World Evangelism Foundation of Dallas in The Netherlands-USA Evangelistic Partnership.

The two West Texas teams are among nine teams gathered here to share the message of Jesus Christ with people of The Netherlands.

Dr. W.H. Jackson, Jr., president of WEF, describes the two-week period as "a time of creative evangelism." Plans include evangelistic, institutional and church outreach activities during the two-week partnership.

Evangelistic emphases include worship services, Bible studies, coffees, concerts and fellowships.

Visits in schools, hospitals, nursing homes, prisons, and military installations make up the institutional encounters, while church outreach activities will be in the area of church growth opportunities developed through personal home visitation, testimony sharing and invitations to attend the church.

The two West Texas groups will return to the United States Wednesday, and welcoming ceremonies are being planned by the two congregations for the returning evangelistic team members.

The evangelistic teams arrived in The Netherlands May 4 and were guests of honor at a welcoming dinner that included a meeting with local and national government leaders and officials.

World Evangelism Foundation is a Dallas-based Christian non-profit organization which coordinates the involvement of American churches in evangelistic partnerships with churches overseas.

Lubbock Churches Honor Mothers

Sunday is Mother's Day.

She, in person or her memory, will be honored throughout the city, state and nation.

One of the traditional observances of Mother's Day is church attendance. And Lubbock churches expect overflow crowds on the special day.

Mother's usually are honored at churches on her "special day," with special sermons, programs, introductions and recognitions. Families usually sit together in church on Mother's Day.

Attendance at religious services is added to other observances, including the secular ones of flowers, candy, gifts of all kinds, the traditional breakfast in bed for mom, and others.

Some will observe the tradition of wearing a red rose or flower for mothers yet alive, and a white rose or flower, for mothers who are gone.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible©
Matthew 25:10-29A, The Living Bible

10 But while they were gone, the bridegroom came, and those who were ready went in with him to the marriage feast, and the door was locked.
11 Later, when the other five returned, they stood outside, calling, 'Sir, open the door for us!'
12 But he called back, 'Go away! It is too late!'.
13 So stay awake and be prepared, for you do not know the date or moment of My return.
14 Again, the Kingdom of Heaven can be illustrated by the story of a man going into another country, who called together his servants and loaned them money to invest for him while he was gone.
15 He gave $5,000 to one, $2,000 to another, and $1,000 to the last—dividing it in proportion to their abilities—and then left on his trip.
16 The man who received the $5,000 began immediately to buy and sell with it and soon earned another $5,000.
17 The man with $2,000 went right to work, too, and earned another $2,000.
18 But the man who received the $1,000 dug a hole in the ground and hid the money for safekeeping.
19 After a long time their master returned from his trip and called them to him to account for his money.
20 The man to whon he had entrusted the $5,000 brought him $10,000.
21 His master praised him for good work. 'You have been faithful in handling this small amount,' he told him, 'so now I will give you many more responsibilities. Begin the joyous tasks I have assigned to you.'
22 Next came the man who had received the $2,000, with the report, 'Sir, you gave me $2,000 to use, and I have doubled it.'
23 'Good work,' his master said, 'You are a good and faithful servant. You have been faithful over this small amount, so now I will give you much more.'
24,25 Then the man with the $1,000 came and said, 'Sir, I knew you were a hard man, and I was afraid you would rob me of what I earned, so I hid your money in the earth and here it is!'
26 But his master replied, 'Wicked man! Lazy slave! Since you knew I would demand your profit,
27 You should at least have put my money into the bank so I could have some interest.
28 Take the money from this man and give it to the man with the $10,000.
29 For the man who uses well what he is given shall be given more, and he shall have abundance.

MY PRAYER

"Dear God, he is so small and innocent. I hold him close to me, filled with my love for him, and, because this love is so great, I am terribly afraid.

"I want him to grow big, strong—yet I cannot bear the thought of all that means. I cannot bear the thought of the dangers, disappointments, anguish, even the agony, that inevitably will be part of his life.

"How powerless I am! If only I could feel his pain for him! If only I could shoulder his disappointments, face his perils, solve his dilemmas! I can't—so I ask You the question thousands of mothers before me have asked: What can I do for him, dear God? In Your love and wonderful mercy, show me the right way, please, through Yourself and Your Church."

Deaf Smith Keeps Fed Cattle Status

By JIM STEIERT
A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD——Drought and insects severely damaged area feed grain crops last year and put a bind on the agriculture economy.

Cattlemen continued to send their livestock through feedyards, however, and Deaf Smith County maintained its dominant position in the Texas cattle feeding industry.

The 1978 fed cattle survey by the Agriculture Development Department of Southwestern Public Service Co. (SPS), revealed that Deaf Smith County remained the leading cattle feeding county in Texas by a considerable margin, and the "Magic Triangel" counties of Deaf Smith, Parmer and Castro retained their top three positions in state.

The SPS survey indicated that a total of 664,800 cattle were fed in Deaf Smith County feedlots, an increase of 151,989 head over the 1976 figure.

The survey covers about 45,000 square miles served by the electric firm, including 30 counties on the High Plains of Texas, four in eastern New Mexico, three in Oklahoma Panhandle and one in southwestern Kansas.

According to Sam Thomas, agriculture department manager in Amarillo, 4,373,850 fat cattle were produced in the SPS service area for 1977.

"During the period, the feedlot capacity came to 2,734,740 head and is barely 10,000 head under the peak year of 1974, when a capacity of 2,742,250 was registered. This dro ped to a low of 2.6 million in 1976, and present indications are that 1978 will see a new peak in feedlot capacity use," Thomas said.

Parmer County, which finished fourth among Texas cattle feeding counties in last year's survey, replaced Castro County in the No. 2 position in this year's SPS survey, while Castro County was No. 3.

A total of 336,545 cattle were fed in Parmer county in 1977, compared with 282,000 head in 1976, an increase of 54,545 head.

Castro county ranked second among cattle feeding counties in 1974, 1975 and 1976.

The total number of cattle fed in Castro County for 1977 was 328,220 head, a decline of 35,180 head from the 364,000 head figure of 1976.

The three counties of the Magic Triangle also held down the top three slots in the state in feedlot capacity.

Deaf Smith County was No. 1 with a capacity of 280,500, Parmer County was second with a 274,500 head capacity, and Castro County was third at a capacity of 228,400 head.

"The survey revealed that the number of feedyards doing custom feeding in 1978 was one less than the preceding year, but this represented the consolidation of reporting yards," Thomas pointed out.

"The total number of yards surveyed continued to fall with a reduction of six from last year. This too, reflects a consolidation, but is the eleventh year it has occurred. There were 274 yards counted in 1967, compared with 153 in 1978," he added.

Thomas emphasized the considerable economic impact which the cattle feeding industry has on the area's economy.

"The total impact of the feedyard industry on the business community reached $8 billion in 1977, and the farm sale value exceeded $2 billion," he said.

The SPS survey showed that packing plant annual slaughter capacity jumped from 4,990,680 head to 5.4 million head, and the number of plants increased from 17 to 20.

According to Thomas, 589,000 head of this capacity is not in use, but the cattle slaughtering industry has made an estimated $8 billion contribution to area business.

"The future of the feedlot industry appears to be the brightest of any period in its history, but this may not be good," Thomas warned.

"Too many people believe the industry is at a bright stage, and with a great majority acting together, adverse reactions can occur. The price being paid for feeder cattle is a case in point," Thomas emphasized.

"Eventually, the customer must be considered as to what he will do, and we could have poor profits along with good prices if the customer refuses to go along with all this enthusiasm," he said.

Fat cattle prices in the area climbed to their highest level in nearly three years this spring, after a long dry spell for High Plains cattle feeders that stretched back to 1973.

Feeders made no mad rush to put more cattle in the feedpens this spring, however, electing to carefully weigh their options and eye the market outlook before putting more money in cattle.

"The price of replacement cattle jumped right along with the price of fat cattle this spring. In fact, it jumped more," a spokesman for a feedyard pointed out.

The acceleration in the price of replacement cattle slowed placements in feedyards here during the early portion of the spring, according to the spokesman.

Many feeders who had been "burned" before have been looking long and hard at whether they can pay the current high prices for feeder cattle and still expect to realize a profit at the end of the feeding period.

A cycle in the cattle industry was recently completed and cattlemen worked hard to pare down their inventories of cattle and bring about an upswing in the marketplace.

Dr. Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, reports that the long-run outlook for cattle points toward an improved price picture for the next few years, provided consumer backlashes or other misfortunes don't befall the industry.

"The cow herd has been severely reduced and the over-supply situation which plagued the industry from 1973-76 may be about over," he said. "Reduced beef production and improved demand for meat should provide cattlemen with much more favorable prices.

"The year's expected use of feeder cattle may be much more important to price levels than the relatively small change in available supplies. If cattle feeders continue to expand their output, the greater demand for feeder animals during the year should assure some sustained price strength," said Uvacek.

European Market Seen As Top U.S. Customer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite problems with its protectionist trade policies, Europe and particularly the Common Market countries which form its trade nucleus will continue to be the prime foreign outlet for American famrers, according to Agriculture Department analysts.

Japan and other Asian markets, as a region, have shown the greatest growth over the years as importers of U.S. farm products, but a new USDA report clearly defines Europe as the larger customer and one with future promise for expansion if world trade can be liberalized.

The report is in a current issue of FATUS — Foreign Agricultural Trade of the United States — published by the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service. It was written by Robert L. Tontz, a foreign trade analyst in the agency.

Farm exports have been a well-known factor in U.S. agriculture, highlighted at times by sudden, new purchases of grain and other commodities by the Soviet Union and China. Arrangements have been made with the Soviets in an attempt to put their buying on a more regular basis through a five-year grain-purchase agreement.

China still is an enigma in terms of buying U.S. products, preferring to buy wheat and other grain from traditional suppliers such as Canada, Australia and Argentina, and turning to the United States — as it has done recently — when those sources run into delivery problems.

Tontz pointed to the "phenomenal growth" in the value of U.S. farm exports in recent years, a record of more than $24 billion in the fiscal year which ended last Sept. 30. Higher prices have contributed much to the record values set since 1972 but the volume of farm exports also has set records.

For example, in 1977 it took the production of about one in every four acres harvested by farmers to supply the export demand. A decade ago the ratio was one in five acres, he said.

Tontz used 1972 as a beginning because that was when massive grain sales — including those to the Soviets — triggered an unparalleled drain on U.S. reserves and cause commodity prices to soar.

Looking from a general perspective, all regions of the world shared in the growth of U.S. export markets since 1972, Tontz said. The biggest grains were in Europe and Asia.

"Except for the North American region (Canada), Europe and Asia were the only major world regions with which the United States had a favorable balance of agricultural trade in 1977," he said.

Further, Europe and Asia accounted for four-fifths of the gain in total U.S. farm exports from 1972 to 1977.

Taking the 1976-77 fiscal year by itself, when total farm exports rose to a record of $24 billion, Europe accounted for nearly $10.5 billion and Asia more than $8 billion.

From 1972 through 1977, Europe accounted for nearly three-fifths of the U.S. export increase for oilseeds, oilseed products and feed grains; nearly one-third of the gain in animals and animal products; and more than one-fourth of the increase for wheat sold to foreign countries.

The Common Market countries represent "the mainstay of the European market, taking over two-thirds of the U.S. farm exports to Europe in 1977," Tontz said.

Those include the European Community's original six members: France, Belgium, Luxembourg, Italy, the Netherlands and West Germany plus three added in 1973, Denmark, Ireland and the United Kingdom.

As used in Tontz's analysis, Europe also includes the Soviet Union and the Eastern European nations, and other West European countries which are not part of the European Community. Altogether, those bought about $3.36 billion worth of U.S. farm products last year, including $1.06 billion by the Soviet Union.

Last year's exports to Asia of more than $8 billion included $3.8 billion to Japan, the single largest buyer of U.S. farm products. But Asia as a region — which includes more than 40 countries as customers — was the leading growth market from 1972 to 1977, Tontz said.

Sales included increases for soybeans and other oilseeds, feed grains, animal products and wheat, he said. Large gains were reported also in the Asian market for cotton, tobacco and fruits and vegetables.

"The Japanese market has been one of the major growth areas for U.S. agricultural exports," Tontz said. "These exports totaled less than $865 million in 1967, set a then $1 billion record in 1970, and accelerated dramatically from $1.2 billion in 1972 to $2.3 billion in 1973. The expansion pattern has been most pronounced since 1972, generally paralleling that of the U.S. export expansion pattern of the world."

Looking at future prospects, Tontz said that "per capita consumption of livestock and livestock products, which is relatively high, continues to expand" in the European Community.

"With further economic development but with a possible slowing of already high (European Community) crop yield gains in the future, a favorable potential for an expanded (European Community) demand for feed grains and oilseeds and products would exist," he said.

Although "progress has been made" in getting larger access to Japan's market, a number of impediments remain, Tontz said.

"In general, these include such items as the continuation of residual quotas under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), the use by the Japanese of state trading practices, import quotas on beef and veal, tariffs on poultry and pork, and their interpretation and application of certain health and sanitary restrictions," he said.

Talks in Geneva, Switzerland, are aimed at trade liberalization through multilateral negotiations, including requests for reducing agricultural tariffs and non-tariff barriers to trade expansion.

Foreign Investors' Land Dealings Hit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Critics of tax treaties with other countries say that foreign investors in U.S. farmland get such good breaks they often can afford to out-bid American farmers who want to expand their holdings.

An unpublished analysis by the Agriculture Department says that under certain conditions an investor from a country which has a tax treaty with the United States can legally dodge income withholding taxes. And it said that in some cases, the investor does not have to pay taxes on capital gains on the value of his U.S. land investment.

"The implication is that the foreign investor would be willing to pay 12 to 15 percent more for farmland as a result of the capital gains exemption," the report said.

A basic assumption is that U.S. farmland has been appreciating in value and will continue to do so.

"For a large investor whose capital gains would place him in a 60 percent tax bracket for ordinary U.S. income and a 30 percent effective bracket on capital gains, the incentive would range from about 12 to 15 percent if he expects farmland to appreciate at the rate of eight percent a year," the report said.

How a foreign investor is treated depends partly on whether he "is determined for tax purposes to be engaged in the conduct of a U.S. trade or business or acting merely as a passive investor," it said.

If a foreigner buys U.S. farmland as an investment, not as a business, and is in the United States less than 183 days a year, no capital gains tax will be assessed by the federal government. But if the land is operated as business the capital gains tax would apply.

The analysis was prepared by the USDA's Economics, Statistics and Cooperative Service as an internal working paper. However, copies of the report have been circulated among certain members of Congress and others, including major farm groups.

Although tax treaty benefits can also apply to other countries, the analysis uses West Germany as an example.

It said the treaty "provides the opportunity for a German investor in real estate to produce higher after-tax rates or return than a U.S. investor faced with an identical pre-tax rate of return."

Further, a West German investor in U.S. farmland has options available which enable him to be free of capital gains taxes by his homeland.

"Therefore, the German investor often posseses the advantage of escaping from all capital gains taxes and does not relinquish the privilege of being treated identically with U.S. taxpayers in other respects," the report said.

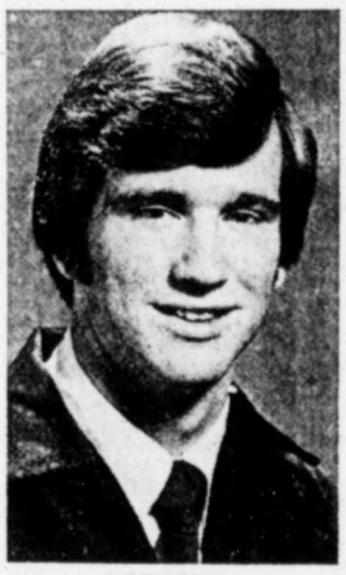

Investors from countries which have no tax treaties with the United States also have options of using such shelters by going through third countries which do have such arrangements.

The Senate is expected to take up soon a new tax treaty with the United Kingdom which farm critics say will speed up the foreign investment in U.S. farmland and serve as a model for similar treaties with other countries.

Reuben L. Johnson of the National Farmers Union says that the treaty, which was approved March 15 by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, "contains a provision which "would invite large-scale state income tax avoidance by foreign interests dealing in oil, grain, other commodities or investing in U.S. farmland."

Johnson recently testified before the Senate Commerce Committee that "one source has indicated that the foreign investment in U.S. farmland in 1977 alone may have been on the order of $800 million" and that the International Real Estate Institute in Brussels, Belgium, puts the total at $1 billion.

Further, Johnson said, "this may be just the tip of the iceberg."

ROB HOVIS

Ohio Officer To Be Speaker At FFA Meet

Rob Hovis of Helena, Ohio, will speak at the annual Area I Future Farmers of America (FFA) convention here Saturday at Coronado High School.

Registration for approximately 300 FFA members, advisers and parents from 96 area schools will begin at 8:30 a.m. Morning session will start at 9:30.

Hovis, eastern region vice president of the FFA, is a student at Ohio State University where he studies agricultural economics and agricultural education.

Area officers will be elected along with a sweetheart and FFA degrees will be presented at the afternoon session which begins at 1:30.

Winners of various awards and agricultural programs also will be announced.

Current Area I FFA officers are Bebo Terry of White Deer, president; Paul Hermesmeyer of Clarendon, Kirk Lewis of Muleshoe, Mike Anthony of Borger, Joe Whitfield of Levelland, and Jim Bob Sims of Happy, vice presidents.

Elvin Caraway of Spur is state FFA president.

Walter Labay, with the Texas Education Agency in Plainview, is adviser.

Soviet Union's 1978 Grain Goal Unrealistic, USDA Official Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department expert says the Soviet Union's 1978 grain production goal appears unrealistic but that livestock production has rebounded well.

Fletcher Pope Jr., project leader for Soviet agricultural situation and outlook, said Russia's cattle and poultry inventories were at a record high on Jan. 1 but that hog numbers had not regained their peak of three years ago prior to a 1975 drought.

"Soviet livestock product goals probably can be met," Pope said in a report. "Meat production is 1978 is expected to easily exceed the 1975 record of 15 million (metric) tons, but may fall short of the 15.6 million ton goal in 1978."

The Soviet Union's grain target this year is 220 million tons, up from 195.5 million harvested in 1977.

Pope, as he has before, said the goal "seems to be optimistic unless favorable weather boosts yields" throughout the Soviet grain area.

Live Cattle Market Climbs Back From Early Trade Loss

By REUTERS

CHICAGO — After recovering from an early loss of 22 points, live cattle futures ended 45 to 120 higher Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Distant August led the advance on a total volume estimated at 26,966 contracts. Most contracts set new highs for the season, with December up to $55.20 per hundredweight, highest since 1973.

Buying was sparked by continued strength in cash cattle and beef, despite heavy production this week. There also was buying ahead of today's USDA cattle-on-feed report.

Placements are expected to be down 2 1/2 percent from a year ago, while marketings may be up an equal amount and numbers on feed up 10 percent.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to up one-half-cent at 87 to 89 cents per pound, highest since June 1975. Cash cattle were steady to up 50 cents with the top at an August 1975 high of $57.50 per hundredweight.

An estimated 4,200 head are expected to arrive at the six markets today. Thursday's slaughter was estimated at 148,000 head.

Hog futures shot up 10 to 80 points, led by distant June and July. New season's highs were set an all contracts except nearby July and August.

Prices rose to the highest points since March 1977. Turnover was estimated at 8,121 contracts.

An early loss of 52 points on heavy hog runs was erased quickly as cattle futures foraged ahead and pork products continued to firm. Offset was the heavy kill this week.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to one cent higher at 76 1/4 to 80 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points, an eight-week high. Cash hogs were up 50 cents to off 25 with the top at Indianapolis of $50.50.

Kill was estimated at 315,000 head. Today, the major terminals expect receipts of 21,500 head.

Pork belly futures (bacon) were off 100 points to 30 higher before ending five to 50 weaker led by May and July. Sales were 7,849 contracts.

Heavy hog runs and kill exerted pressure as did stepped up storings. Advances on strong cattle and beef prices lacked follow-through even though cash bellies moved ahead.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1 1/4 at 65 to 69 cents per pound, f.o.b. river.

Agriculture Production Slash Seen

HEREFORD (UPI) — A spokesman for dissident farmers Thursday said efforts by growers to cut back production to drive farm prices higher are reflected in state and federal government wheat forecasts.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture this week estimated the 1978 winter wheat crop at 1.284 billion bushels, down 16 percent from last year.

Mike McCathern of the American Agriculture Movement's state strike office said a report issued by the Texas crop reporting service estimated the state's wheat production down 50 percent because of drought conditions in the Panhandle.

Claims Share Of Credit

"We in the American Agriculture Movement are not saying that it has not been extremely dry in the Panhandle, but our 50 percent plow down and graze out coupled with the low prices for the finished product has had an even greater effect on production than the government is willing to give us credit for," said McCathern.

The maverick farm movement has urged farmers to roll back production by half to drive crop prices to 100 percent parity, which would give them break-even prices.

Costs Wipe Out Gain

Despite a slight rise in the parity price of wheat, McCathern said, during the past year costs of production have risen 6 percent which balances out any gain.

"The simple fact of truth behind the reduction in wheat production is that the farmers themselves have awakened to the fact that for the past three years they have been the ones who have been paying for the privilege of growing wheat for the rest of the world and that price for that privilege has gotten too high," he said.

"It is no longer economically prudent to grow a crop for which there is no return."

Increase Noted In Wire Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers and ranchers who bale hay may be faced with higher prices and possible shortages in some areas later this year, according to the Agriculture Department.

Retail prices of baler twine averaged $14.50 per 40-pound bale in February, up 30 cents from last fall. Wire prices are around $25 to $27 per 100-pound box, depending on quality, up $2 to $3 from a year ago.

"With imports tapering off and inventories down, prices could even strengthen slightly later in the season," the department said Wednesday in a new outlook report.

Above-normal hay baling last fall in some areas reduced twine and wire inventories, the report said. Imports have been down since last October.

"If late cuttings of hay were fairly heavy again this year, these low inventories of twine could cause farmers some difficulty in finding baler twine supplies," the report said.

No Hog Cholera Found In U.S.

MISSION (UPI) — A U.S. Department of Agriculture veterinarian in charge of the hog cholera surveillence team in the Lower Rio Grande Valley said Wednesday no case of the disease had been found on this side of the Rio Grande despite an outbreak at Miguel Aleman, Mexico.

Dr. Joseph Morse said his survey team had made regular checks since the April 25 incident in which 25 swine at Miguel Aleman, across from Roma, Texas, was diagnosed as having cholera. He said 19 of the Mexican swine died and a veterinarian killed the other six infected hogs and imposed a quarantine on the area.

The United States was declared free of hog cholera in January, 1978, following a 15-year eradication campaign and Morse said no case of cholera had been recored in the Valley in the past five years.

"We have come up with nothing, but we don't sit back and become complacent about this," Morse said. he said spot checks o Valley hogs would continue at least the rest of this week.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Rainy weather and increased participation in a government acreage set-aside program boosted grain futures on the Chicago Board of Trade today.

As rains returned to the Corn Belt, where planting has been delayed due to an unusually wet spring, speculators bought corn futures on the idea that yields would be hurt by late sowing. The feeling that delayed corn plantings would result in more soybean acreage depressed 1977 crop soybean contracts.

Nearby soybean futures plummeted several cents in the final seconds of trading, as a prominent local trader sold heavily in the July delivery. Only the May soybean contract retained its strength, closing 6½ cents higher.

Farmers sold more soybeans at country points, also depressing prices in that pit.

The Agriculture Department reported a sharp pickup in farmer participation in a government program to set aside wheat and corn acreage. Farmers intend to divert 7.1 million acres of wheat land and 4.8 million acres of feed-grain fields, the report said.

At the close, soybeans were 6½ cents higher to 4½ cents lower, with May contracts quoted at $7.25½ a bushel; wheat was 1 to 4¼ cents higher, May $3.07½; corn was 3¼ to 4¼ cents higher, May $2.57½ and oats were 2 cents higher, May $1.41¾.

Trade Volume Excess Over Crop Size Puzzling To Futures Market Observer

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board of Trade

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — One facet of the futures markets in grains which apparently puzzles many people is that the volume of trading exceeds the supply of the actual commodity on hand.

As a example, in 1977, the volume of futures trading at the Kansas City Board of Trade on hard red winter wheat was just over 3 billion bushels. Hard winter wheat production in 1977 was just under 1 billion bushels.

Production on all wheats in 1977 totaled 2,025,793,000 bushels. And there was a carry-over of 1,112,000,000 bushels.

The volume of futures trading in wheat at the Chicago Board of Trade in 1977 totaled more than 9 billion bushels and at the Minneapolis Grain Exchange the volume was 945.6 million.

So, total volume at Chicago, Kansas City and Minneapolis was better than 13 billion bushels as contrasted to a total supply about 3.137 billion bushels.

Not all of the wheat on hand in 1977 has been marketed.

Since the volume of futures trading far exceeded the supply of wheat either on hand or that marketed, how could it happen?

The answer lies in the functioning of the marketing system. The futures market is used by the merchandisers of wheat, and other grains, to protect themselves against price fluctuations while they are moving the grain from the farmer to someone who eats it someplace around the world.

The process is called hedging. And the system includes speculators who are willing to share the risk of owning the grain in the hope of making a profit.

The examples of how trades in futures multiply almost exceed the imagination. But reference to some of the routine transactions will help explain how the volume is achieved.

A country elevator at harvest time (June or July) buys 50,000 bushels of wheat from local farmers. At the same time, it goes into the futures market and sells (goes short) 50,000 bushels for delivery in December.

This is hedging.

The elevator now has wheat bought and sold at comparable prices and it does not fear a drop in wheat prices. Also, because of the price protection offered through hedging, the elevator can go to the bank and borrow the money to pay the farmers.

Let's assume also that in June or July, an exporter sold a million bushels of wheat for delivery to Brazil in December. On the day the contract was entered into, the exporter went into the futures market and bought a million bushels of wheat for December delivery, including the 50,000 bushels the elevator had sold.

Now, the exporter has wheat sold and bought and he isn't worried about price changes. He also has hedged.

Sometime in November, the exporter goes out to buy the million bushels of wheat he needs to deliver to Brazil. Among his purchases are the 50,000 bushels in the country elevator. When the elevator sells the wheat to the exporter, it "lifts" its hedge by buying back its futures contract.

At this point the elevator has entered into two futures transactions, one when it sold and one when it bought back. Its hedge has now served its purpose.

Likewise, when the exporter bought the wheat from the elevator he lifted his hedge by selling his contracts back into the market. His hedge also had served its purpose. And, just as with the elevator, he had made two futures transactions.

So, in about the most simple transaction that could be imagined, four futures transactions are involved in the sale of this 50,000 bushels of wheat via the exporter to Brazil. In volume, therefore, the total futures trading is 200,000 bushels.

But suppose that when the elevator sold its original 50,000 bushels for December delivery, these contracts were purchased by a speculator rather than an exporter.

Two hours after the speculator bought the 50,000 bushels, the price went up a penny and the speculator took his profit by selling out to another speculator.

This time the price started down the next speculator decided he had better get out before he lost more so within-another hour, he too, sells the contracts.

An exporter knows that an importer is contemplating buying 2 million bushels of wheat. To have something concrete that he can offer in the way of price, the exporter buys (goes long) 2 million bushels of hard winter wheat futures at Kansas City.

Everything is O.K., he learns, except that the importer wants only 1 million bushels of hard winter wheat while he wants 500,000 bushels of hard spring and 500,000 bushels of soft red.

The exporter concludes the deal, but has to sell 1 million bushels of his hard red winter wheat futures at Kansas City and immediately buy 500,000 bushels of hard spring futures at Minneapolis and 500,000 bushels of soft red at Chicago.

A cooperative elevator has several farmers who have been watching the wheat price closely and they are of the opinion that when the price reaches a certain level, they will sell. As theis price is reached on the futures market, the co-op "pre-hedges" by selling several contracts for future delivery just seconds before the markets close.

Then it tells the farmers that afternoon that it can buy the wheat at the price they had been talking about. Some farmers immediately sell, but there is one with 20,000 bushels who decides at the last minute, he'll wait awhile longer.

The co-op has 20,000 bushels sold for future delivery which it wasn't able to buy. So, the next morning wen markets open, it immediately buys back the 20,000 bushels.

These examples are just part of the rountine marketing process. They demonstrate how trading volume balloons far beyond the size of the crop.

Computer Helps Police Narrow Crime Suspects

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Sherlock Holmes used his powers of deduction to make everything elementary. Hercule Poirot relied on his little gray cells. Sgt. Michael Fitzpatrick has his computer.

The computer file has fingerprints, color mug shots and descriptions of thousands of known criminals in St. Louis County, cross-indexed by features ranging from physical characteristics down to scars, nicknames and their usual area of operation.

The system, paid for by federul funds and in operation since the first of the year, allows Fitzpatrick to go through the crime file in minutes, discarding all possible suspects who do not fit a description provided by a victim or witnesses.

When the possibilities are down to a manageable number, officers working on the case can concentrate their efforts where they will do the most good, rather than having to work the scene of the crime, pulling mug shots out of their pockets to help find the criminal.

"The purpose of the system is to identify the unknown," said Fitzpatrick, a white-haired 17-year police veteran who says the computer is "like a dream" in working through the maze of possible suspects.

"We're just trying to move into the 20th century," Fitzpatrick said of the system that could serve as a model nationwide.

The computer has helped solve 31 crimes since it went into operation, but it could be used more often if more members of the county police department were willing to give it a chance.

"You have to see it in operation to appreciate it," Fitzpatrick said during a demonstration. "You can hear or read about it, but that doesn't show you what the system can do."

Sifting through 14,000 arrest records in the computer, he demonstrated how the system works. If the suspect were a white male, he said, punching the code on a keyboard, half the computer file would be eliminated, reducing the number to 7,724.

Height between 5-foot-9 and 6-feet left out more, making the number 4,072. If a criminal weighs between 180 and 200 pounds, only 693 possibilities fit, and if he has medium-length hair, only 173 suspects match the description.

If a sharp-eyed victim or witness noticed the hair was dark brown and parted on the right, the possibilities were down to seven — an easy number for investigators to handle.

Of course, the computer can't solve the crime by itself. It has to rely on two major factors — reliability of the description and the chance the criminal has a prior arrest record. Fitzpatrick acknowledged the limitations.

"It's not a miracle machine," he said. "We're not going to solve every single crime that occurs. I'd like to say we could, but let's be realistic. We'll solve about 10 percent of the crimes we handle."

The system had some defects at first, but they were worked out and further refinements are planned. One thing Fitzpatrick learned was that the coding of the different characteristics of the suspects cannot be too detailed.

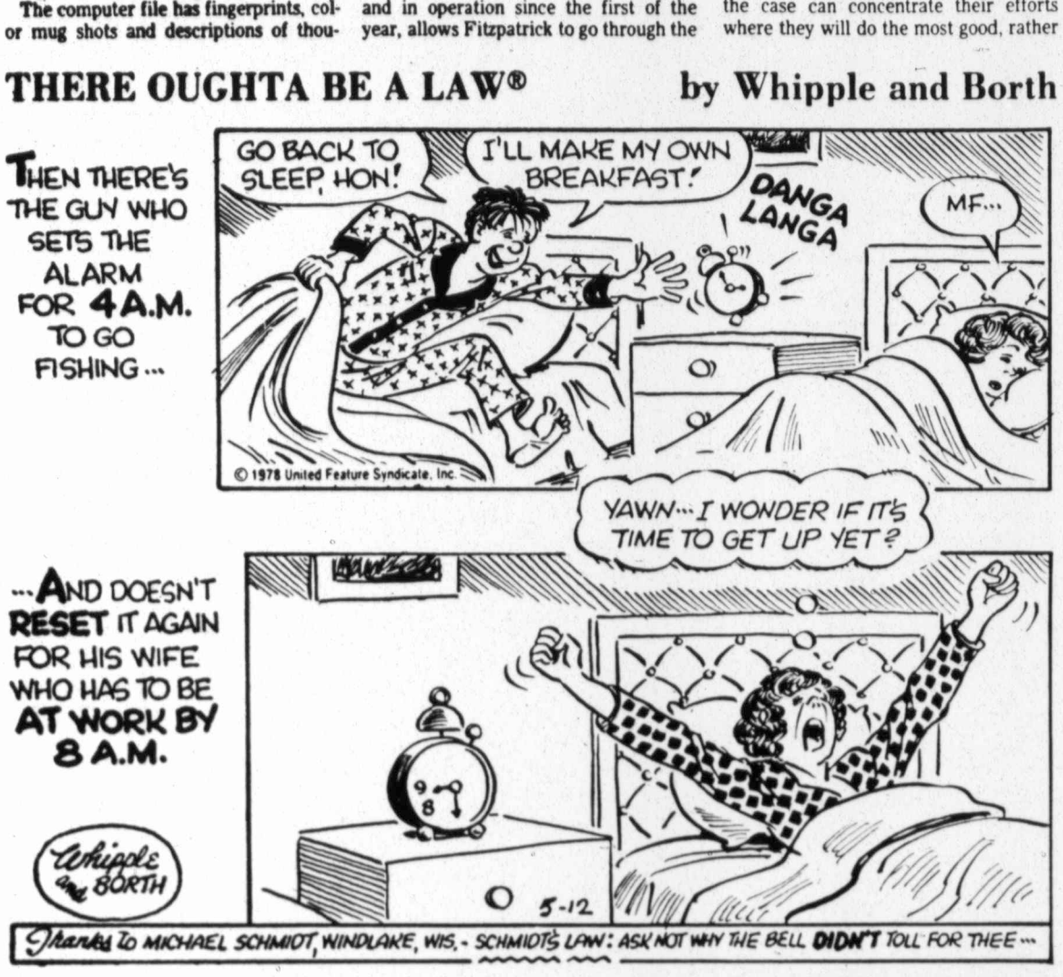

"We had mustaches listed as thin, medium and heavy, but we found that the size of a mustache is in the eyes of the beholder. So we scrapped that aspect of size and decided that a mustache is a mustache is a mustache."

Fitzpatrick also had a word for victims or witnesses who want to fight crime — keep your eyes open.

"Look for freckles, for scars, for missing teeth. Look them over real good. Because when it comes time to look over 30 or 40 mug shots, if you didn't get a good look, then you won't be able to identify the suspect, and the case won't be solved."

Two New York Papers Give Union Deadline

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of a Printing Pressmen's Union local says The New York Times and Daily News have given his union until the July 4 weekend to reach agreement on a new contract.

William J. Kennedy Jr. told a meeting of the Allied Printing Trades Council this week that the deadline coincides with the Times' plan to shift that weekend to "Letterflex" printing, which he described as replacing cast lead rotary plates with plastic plates made from photo-composition.

A Times spokesman said later that the newspaper planned to switch "from hot metal to cold type" during the holiday weekend to take advantage of reduced holiday press runs.

The News said it does not expect to switch to the new press technique before fall, but both papers have sent out memoranda to their staffs citing the need to cut pressroom costs in order to meet competition and survive.

The New York Post, involved in contract talks with the Newspaper Guild and nine craft unions, just as the Time and News are, said it did not join in the July 4 deadline "because we are preoccupied with the other negotiations."

Honesty Important When Death Near

By HAROLD BLUMENFELD

All of us have given some thought to the inevitability that someday we will die.

But will a curtain of silence rise between us and our families if an incurable ailment undeniably signals rapidly approaching death?

I recently learned a new word — thanatology — from Dr. Ben Littman, my friend who retired from a busy New York practice to do research in Florida on aging.

Thanatology is the growing study of dying and death.

Most of us realize — at least in the abstract — that death is one of life's normal processes. We should be realistic when we are touched by the final stages of mortality.

Dying people should have the right to know they are coming to the end of their days. They should be able to share the knowledge of impending death with friends and family.

That will enable the dying to make their last wishes known. At least, they will be afforded the comforting presence of loved ones who will listen to their hostilities, depression — and final acceptance of their nearing death.

Someone must be given the unpleasant task of telling a person that he or she will soon die.

That responsibility can rest with the attending physician, a nurse who has established good rapport with the patient, a member of the clergy or a social worker trained in thanatology.

Perhaps it would be best for the news to be conveyed by a member of the dying person's family or by a close friend.

However, some critically ill people wouldn't accept such bad news. Then, perhaps, the information should be withheld from them. Family and friends will be able to do no more than silently offer solace and support.

This is a trying time — even for those whose lives only peripherally touch that of the dying person. But trying to pretend death will not happen can only make matters worse.

Grief can be an outlet for pent-up emotions. Sympathy, while not a panacea, goes a long way to ease the hurt that accompanies the grim knowledge of imminent death.

Littman tells a true story about a clergyman who visited the family of a deceased congregant after burial. Family members expressed thanks for the medical attention that had reduced their aged father's suffering during hs final weeks. They were equally grateful that the fact he was dying had been kept from him.

Among the post-funeral visitors was a well-dressed black man, a stranger to the others. He introduced himself as an orderly at the hospital where the dead man had been a patient.

He told them the dying man frequently had asked him to stop by after work so that he could talk of this innermost thoughts about the illness and impending death.

He knew he had an incurable illness, but he didn't want to alarm his family. Instead, he discussed it with a stranger.

Would it have been better for the dying man and his family if they had been honest with one another? Close-knit families share life's other joys and sorrows. Might it not have been more comforting for this man and his family — along with his friends, clergyman and doctor — to have shared his final days on earth?

Doctor Says Jogging Not Fad

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — Dr. Kenneth Cooper, the "father of aerobic excercise," admits he initially thought jogging would be a fad, much like hula hoops and swallowing goldfish.

"In 1968 there were only about 100,000 joggers in America. As of last October there were 25 million. I thought jogging would be a passing fancy, but I ignored the psychological effect," Cooper said at the annual convention of the Kansas Public Health Association.

"It's very simple. When you run, you feel good. When you don't, you feel bad."

Cooper, a Dallas physician, has written four books on aerobics, which he defines as activity that improves the body's ability to use oxygen, strengthening the heart and the cardiovascular system.

"I've got nothing against reshaping things with calesthenics, but there comes a point when I have to tell my patients, 'What you need isn't a new paint job, but an engine overhaul,'" he said. "Otherwise, you can have a person who looks great and has fantastic muscle tone dying of a heart attack."

He said no one is too old to be fit.

"The capacity of the body is just amazing," he said. "I've seen people who didn't start trying to get in shape until they were 40 or 50 years old, and their body response was incredible."

Cooper founded and directs the Aerobics Center in Dallas, which includes a fitness development center, a medical exam facility and a research organization.

"We have over 800 people running daily at the center. It takes months to get a medical appointment and about a year to get into the health club — yet all we're doing, basically, is helping healthy people," he said.

Aerobics can be considered preventive maintenance, Cooper went on.

"If people would just do six things — maintain proper weight, watch their diet, exercise, avoid tobacco, get enough rest, and have regular medical checkups — they wouldn't be sick nearly as much," he said.

However, exercise is beneficial only to a point, he continued.

"We've found exercising every other day is helpful," he said. "More than that is too much. Less — say, two days a week — isn't enough."

He said a person's fitness level helps the frame of mind.

"People who are physically fit are happier people," he said. "Our psychological profiles taken at the center prove this."

He warned aspiring exercisers to check first with their doctors, then start slowly and work up to comfortable levels.

Foes Of Plane Sale Jolted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate and administration officials predict the Senate on Monday will reject attempts to veto President Carter's proposed sale of jet warplanes to Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Israel.

"I think that as of now the votes are there in support of the proposals," said Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.

Byrd would not say how large a margin supporters of the sales package might enjoy.

"I think that the votes on the Senate floor are probably a little more against the disapproval resolution than the tie vote in the foreign relations committee would indicate," Byrd said.

The committee's 8-8 vote Thursday was sufficient to reject a disapproval resolution. But the committee decided to send the resolution to the Senate floor without recommendation.

Byrd said the matter will be brought up in the Senate Monday. "I would hope we could debate the matter throughout the day and possibly have a vote in late afternoon," he said.

The majority leader also disclosed that one senator has asked for a closed session for part of the debate in which to discuss classified matters.

He also said the matter may be decided on a technical or procedural vote rather than a direct vote on the sales package itself. The disapproval resolution could be tabled and "that would be the end of it," Byrd said.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said President Carter "deeply appreciates the courage and statesmanship" of the eight senators who voted for the proposals in committee and expects the Senate to act "in a courageous and responsible manner."

A favorable Senate vote will ensure the completion of the sales; rejection by both the House and Senate is needed to block them.

The $4.8 billion arms package calls for selling 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 50 F-5s to Egypt and 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s to Israel.

In a search for an acceptable compromise, Carter has offered to sell Israel an additional 20 F-15s, giving that country a total of 60, the same number as Saudi Arabia.

He also provided assurances that the F-15s sold Saudi Arabia will not pose a threat to the security of Israel.

The arms sales will be considered by the Senate as a package as Carter has insisted it should. Warren Christopher, deputy secretary of state, said he believes that will enable the Senate as a whole to see the balanced nature of the sales.

But Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, who voted against the sales in committee, said that lumping them together strengthens the hand of opponents. As a package, he said, the proposal will draw the combined opposition of senators who fear a threat to the security of Israel, who view the proposal as an impediment to a Mideast peace settlement and who oppose all arms sales as a matter of principle.

The administration has long contended that the sales will not jeopardize Israeli security and, by bolstering the confidence of Egypt and Saudi Arabia in their own security, will enhance rather than impair chances for reaching a permament peace settlement.

"I think it is very much in the interest of the United States, very much in the interests of peace in the Middle East and very much in Israel's interests that these proposed sales go forward," Byrd said.

Meanwhile, an Arab-American lobby group, charging that Israel misused U.S. weapons in invading southern Lebanon, filed suit Thursday to block the Israeli sale until Israel withdraws from that newly occupied territory.

The National Association of Arab Americans contended in a suit filed in U.S. District Court that Israel's attacks into Lebanon last month violated an American law barring use of the weapons, except for defense or internal security.

Israeli officials have argued that the attacks into Lebanon were partly in retaliation for a commando raid into Israel and therefore were in self-defense.

Kissinger Says Carter Permits Russian Military Superiority

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Henry Kissinger said today he agrees with a statement by all 38 Republican senators that President Carter is permitting the Soviet Union to gain potentially decisive military superiority over the United States.

"There is a trend in the military balance that has many origins, including the war in Vietnam and budgetary stringencies, which is worrisome if we do nothing to rectify," said the former secretary of state.

Kissinger was interviewed on a national television program.

Asked whether he shared the fear expressed by the GOP leaders that the administration was allowing the Soviets to get ahead in the military field, he said:

"I agree with the statement ... I would generalize and say we have a national task to rectify the military imbalance."

Kissinger was careful not to give blanket disapproval of the Carter administration leadership.

"When you've been in high office, as I have been, you develop maybe greater compasssion for the problems of your successors," he said. "Particularly, when your successor is as distinguished a person as the incumbent secretary of state, Cyrus Vance.

"I have not agreed with all of the policies of the administration and I have said so when the occasion arose. I have not felt that I wanted to engage in a blanket condemnation across the whole range of policies.

"And, in fact, I've supported the administration when I though they were right."

Kissinger backed the administration on the Panama Canal treaties and has supported Vance's peace efforts in the Middle East.

Work Plan For Aliens Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Senate committee is considering a proposal that would allow Mexican laborers to come into Texas and other states "to work at a specific job for a specific length of time" to ease the plight of farmers trying to get their crops harvested.

Sen. James A. McClure of Idaho recommended the bracero program Thursday as an alternative to the Carter administration's illegal alien bill that would classify as "permanent resident aliens" the estimated 765,000 persons who entered the country before 1970 and as "temporary resident aliens" those who came between 1970 and 1977.

The Carter proposal would leave all aliens who entered the United States illegally after Jan. 1, 1977 subject to deportation.

McClure testified Thursday that Carter's proposal would leave farmers "high and dry at critical times of the year."

Without illegal alien labor, McClure said, farmers who rely heavily on irrigation would be unable to hire field hands and "the work just won't get done."

Under his proposal, McClure said, "Aliens would be protected under our laws and mandated to obey our laws."

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall testified on behalf of the administration's illegal alien program.

He called it part of a continuing effort "to bring those who are disadvantaged into the economic mainstream."

The presence of large numbers of illegal aliens in the country has led, Marshall said, "to widespread exploitation of these workers."

"Investigations often reveal that undocumented workers are not paid the minimum wages prescribed by the Fair Labor Standards Act, that many work under unsafe or hazardous conditions or are the victims of illegal discrimination," the Labor chief added.

McClure argued also for the states to be placed in charge of the flow of the laborers.

The Labor Department is empowered to issue visas to allow foreign laborers into the country for a specified time, but McClure said governors are in a better position to determine the realities of the labor market.

Marshall disagreed.

The federal government has officials in each state and has availabile data from the states' employment offices, Marshall said.

"The regulation of immigration affairs should be the responsibility of the federal government," the labor secretary said.

Airline Crash Draws Suits

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the four years since a Turkish Airlines DC-10 crashed near Paris, more than $62 million has been paid out of court to settle damage claims by more than 1,000 relatives, according to a judge's report.

The crash, the worst in aviation history up to that time, killed all 346 people aboard and resulted in 211 damage suits. They were filed by 1,123 family members of 340 victims.

According to a lengthy report prepared by U.S. District Judge Peirson Hall, who appointed retired judges to review the many suits, settlements ranged from $10,000 to $900,000.

Tornadoes

off trees and destroyed the roof of at least one farmhouse.

In other parts of the northeast section of the state, tornadoes reportedly felled trees and damaged some small buildings.

The line of storms moving east across the state also cut a path across Kansas and Oklahoma, spawning tornadoes and high winds in those states as well, but no injuries.

Heavy rains and some hail also was reported in some northeastern parts of the state.

Social Security Fight Brewing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Workers could find the government withholding less from their paychecks next year than they had expected if a partial rollback of higher Social Security taxes, narrowly cleared by a House committee, wins congressional approval.

But the rollback, approved by the House Ways and Means Committee Thursday, faces powerful opposition in the Senate, including that of Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

President Carter also supports the higher taxes, which became law last December.

If the rollback survives the long legislative road still ahead ot it, many higher-paid workers would find their paychecks $123 fatter for the full 1979 calendar year than they would be under the law Carter signed in December.

The committee voted 19-18 to use an estimated $14.5 billion in general income tax funds over the next two years to ease the size of the payroll tax hikes. Long opposes using general tax revenues to keep Social Security solvent.

For 1979, the proposal would even mean a reduction from this year's payroll taxes for low-and middle-income employees and their employers.

But the greatest benefit would go to higher-paid workers, some of whom have complained to their congressmen about the increases they face.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., who cast the tie-breaking vote as House Ways and Means Committee chairman, told reporters he thinks the proposal will pass the House, where the Democratic Caucus has endorsed the idea of general revenue financing. But Ullman predicted it would have rough going in the Senate.

If the committee proposal is enacted, the Social Security tax rate next year will be 5.85 percent instead of 6.13 percent, with a maximum wage base of $21,900 instead of the currently scheduled $22,900.

In 1980, the rate would stay the same with a base of $23,900 instead of the planned $25,900.

The maximum anyone would pay in 1979 would be $1,281 under the committee plan, instead of $1,404. In 1980 the maximum would be $1,398 instead of $1,588.

For a worker earning $10,000, the planned withholding increase would be rolled back $28, from $613 to $585.

The committee plan would be in effect for only two years, to give Congress time to study broader changes in Social Security.

Ullman and other backers of the plan said it was not intended to commit Congress permanently using income tax money for Social Security.

The plan would allow transfers among the various Social Security trust funds, drawing upon the relatively prosperous Medicare hospitalization fund, now financed through Social Security payroll taxes, and replenishing it with income tax revenues.

Here is how the House Ways and Means Committee voted on the partial rollback:

Democrats for the proposal were Gibbons; Fortney H. Stark, Calif.; Charles B. Rangel, N.Y.; Abner J. Mikva, Ill.; Martha Keys, Kan.; Ken Holland, S.C.; William M. Brodhead, Mich.; Ed Jenkins, Ga.; Richard A. Gephardt, Mo.; Jim Guy Tucker, Ark.; Raymond F. Lederer, Pa.; James A. Burke, Mass.; Harold Ford, Tenn., and Ullman.

Republicans for the rollback were Barber B. Conable, N.Y.; Guy Vander Jagt, Mich.; William A. Steiger, Wis.; Bill Frenzel, Minn.; L.A. Bafalis, Fla.

Democrats against the proposal were Dan Rostenkowski, Ill.; Charles A. Vanik, Ohio; Omar Burleson, Texas; James C. Corman, Calif.; Joe D. Waggonner, La.; Otis G. Pike, N.Y.; J. J. Pickle, Texas; William R. Cotter, Conn.; James R. Jones, Okla.; Andy Jacobs, Ind.; Joseph L. Fisher, Va.

Republicans against the proposal were John J. Duncan, Tenn.; Bill Archer, Texas; Philip M. Crane, Ill.; James G. Martin, N.C.; William M. Ketchum, Calif.; Richard T. Schulze, Pa.; Bill Gradison, Ohio.

Police Hunt Escapees

ADA, Okla. (AP) — An extensive manhunt resumed near here this morning for two Oklahoma prison escapees being sought as suspects in a Texas killing and abduction, authorities said.

Authorities found a stolen car the escapees were believed to have been travelling in abandoned on a county road at about 7:30 a.m. today near Roth, southwest of this Ponotoc County city.

Officials said the suspects fled a rural Johnston County home Thursday night when a woman slammed a door in their faces and began screaming.

Authorities said Mrs. Judy Clement has positively identified one of the men who came to her house north of Mill Creek on Oklahoma 7 highway in south central Oklahoma on Thursday night as escapee Michael Lancaster.

Lancaster, 25, and Claude Eugene Dennis, 35, escaped from the Oklahoma State Penitentiary in McAlester on April 23. They are being sought as suspects in the Wednesday night slaying of a Denison, Texas, convenience store operator and the abduction of his wife.

Mrs. Clement said two men knocked on her front door at about 8:45 p.m.

She said she had a conversation with one of the men, whom she later identified as Lancaster. Mrs. Clement said he kept trying to talk his way into her house and as she was closing the front door he produced a handgun and shouted, "Don't close it."

Officers said Mrs. Clement bolted the door, ducked below its window and started screaming for her children to get into a bedroom. Her husband, she said, was away playing in a softball game.

As the escapees fled without firing a shot, Mrs. Clement notified the Johnston County sheriff's office. She said a bad connection on her rural phone line made it difficult for the sheriff's dispatcher to understand her.

not make the runoff but was not at liberty to say if any of them will support him now.

Short came in second in the Senatorial District 28 balloting last Saturday on the strength of his support in the small town and rural counties of his old districts south of Lubbock.

He denied that he considers that area already "in the bag" and will shift to a metropolitan campaign in Odessa and especially in Lubbock to cut into Workman's support here.

"I'm not going to concentrate on Lubbock or Odessa," Short said. "I will be spending a lot of time there, but I will be concentrating on the whole district equally"

He said he expects to be equally well-financed with Workman in the one-month effort and that he does not plan "to spend very much more money in this campaign."

He said he could not accurately estimate how much he will spend.

Carter Slashes Tax Cut Goals

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill today indicated President Carter is scaling back his tax-cut proposal from $24 billion to $19.4 billion.

O'Neill said he had talked Thursday with Carter after the president met with the chairmen of the two congressional budget committees and that Carter told him he hoped Congress would approve a non-binding preliminary federal budget with a $19.4 billion tax cut.

Meanwhile, a White House spokesman today declined to comment on a report in the Wall Street Journal that Carter has tentatively decided to reduce the amount of his proposed tax-cut package and to delay its effective date.

The newspaper, citing unidentified sources, said the White House is likely to recommend that the tax cut be trimmed to about $20 billion from $24 billion and that it be made effective next Jan. 1 rather than Oct. 1, as Carter originally had proposed.

Rex Granum, White House deputy press secretary, declined to comment on the report today.

O'Neill, who said Carter would be "happy" with a $19.4 billion figure, said "the president was talking in a very optimistic mood" about the economy, citing the decline of the unemployment rate to 6 percent and economists' predictions of stable employment for the rest of the year.

Rep. Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has said he thinks any tax cut should not exceed $15 billion. Ullman, whose panel originates tax legislation, has cited concerns about the size of the federal budget deficit and inflation for his opposition to any larger cuts.

The Ways and Means Committee is currently considering income tax cuts.

The tentative budget is to serve as a guideline for tax and spending legislation through the summer.

Both the Senate and the House have adopted tentative federal budget resolutions calling for $19.4 billion in tax cuts.

The Senate budget resolution calls for the tax cut to start Jan. 1; the House resolution calls for the cut to go into effect Oct 1.

The House has the additional provision that $7.5 billion of the $19.4 billion would go to reduce Social Security taxes.

The Ways and Means Committee voted Thursday for a two-year, partial rollback of Social Security tax increases that are scheduled to take effect starting next year and to finance part of the Social Security program from general income tax revenues.

The committee's action would mean a reduction of $6.2 billion in 1979 and $8.3 billion the next year in planned Social Security tax increases.

Carter had urged Congress not to change the Social Security tax law this year.

Mines Help Some Birds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Strip-mining apparently benefits some elements of the environment. Certain types of birds are reportedly thriving on landscape that is reclaimed following the mining.

Other types, however, are being adversely affected, says the National Audubon Society.

The conservation organization, in its newsletter, "Audubon Leader," says studies show man-made changes in the landscape of Kentucky and West Virginia are changing the composition of the bird population there — harming some species but benefiting others.

Presidential Campaign Tempts Illinois Solon

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — To Rep. John B. Anderson, the 1980 Republican presidential campaign is tempting — and temptation now usually means candidacy for the White House later.

"I'm obviously thinking about it," said Anderson, acknowledging the obstacles that confront even a senior House member who has neither a national political identity nor a claim that anyone else is pushing him toward the presidential contest.

There's already a long list of prospects, but in Anderson's view that is less of a problem than the congestion at the top, where both Gerald R. Ford and Ronald Reagan are leaving open the possibility that they might run again.

Take out the two names Republicans know best, Anderson said, and the contest would be wide open. "You would have removed two of the sort of aging symbols of the divisions in the Republican Party... You would have a whole new climate.

"If those two decide not to run, it would be a classical open field," he said. "That might be enough to attract someone like myself into the lists.

"It's tempting."

Anderson has just emerged from a congressional primary that had him nervous. His Rockford, Ill., district had been targeted by conservatives in what Anderson called an attempt to purge a moderate Republican. He won nomination for a 10th term with substantial help from Democratic and independent voters who cast Republican primary ballots.

Now he notes that the Republican presidential nominee in 1980 is going to have to attract just that kind of support if he is to stand a chance of ousting President Carter.

Anderson, 56, is chairman of the House Republican Conference, the No. 3 job in the GOP lineup there. With a thatch of silver hair and a reputation as an orator, he looks and sounds like central casting's version of a presidential candiate.

But he would start with a major handicap, because most voters have never heard of him. Furthermore, some Republicans have considered him too liberal to be a House GOP leader, let alone a national candidate.

He'd be on a list of prospects that includes far better known Republicans, like Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr.; Sen. Bob Dole, the 1976 vice-presidential nominee; former Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally; and George Bush, the former CIA director and envoy to China.

Analysis

And there are likely to be more. For example, Anderson says Sen. Charles H. Percy of Illinois is starting to sound like a potential candidate.

"Well, so be it," he said.

By his reckoning, the more serious problem for a prospective candidate now is that of determining whether Ford or Reagan or both are going to run next time. All they have said is maybe.

Until their plans are known, Anderson said, "it's going to be tough" to start organizing and lining up financial support. He said the 1976 rivals still command the attention and the loyalty of substantial numbers among the Republicans who select GOP candidates.

"I don't think that either one of them would stand a realistic chance of beating Carter," he said.

Anderson claims he could, by presenting a moderate record and program to attract Democratic and independent voters to the Republican ticket.

But he concedes there is no way for him to prove he can stand out from the field before the 1980 presidential primaries begin. And he will almost certainly have to decide whether to enter them before there is firm word on what Ford and Reagan are going to do.

Anderson says he is encouraged by the 1976 Democratic experience, by the race of Rep. Morris K. Udall, who showed that the House is not an impossible launching site for a candidate, and above all, by Carter's campaign from relative anonymity to the White House.

"You could suddenly blossom the way he did," Anderson said. "... You would have to use kind of a building block approach." That means running, and winning, in early season primaries.

But there is another lesson in the Carter campaign. Carter started early, and did so before he knew whether he would be competing with the two biggest names in his party, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey.

Lending Bill Goes To U.S. House

WASHINGTON (AP) — A greatly simplified truth-in-lending law, which would tell borrowers in plain language what they're paying for a loan, faces an uncertain future in the House.

The bill passed the Senate Wednesday on a voice vote with only Jake Garn, R-Utah, voting against it.

Similar bills have been introduced in the House, but no hearings have been held, clouding chances for the legislation becoming law this year.

The measure would simplify requirements of the 1968 Truth in Lending Act, which required creditors to reveal exactly what their credit terms were.

But consumers said the disclosures, designed to help them shop around for the cheapest loan, were too long and difficult to understand. The disclosures now often are clothed in the legal language of a contract.

Meanwhile, creditors also were complaining about the law, saying they had trouble keeping up with administrative and judicial interpretations of the act. Small businesses often have to hire lawyers to draft disclosure statements under the current law.

Before passing on the latest bill, a Senate banking subcommittee heard testimony from psychologists who said the disclosure statements now given to consumers are ineffective because there is too much data.

As an example of the simplification that would be required under the bill, a car buyer would no longer be told the cash price, down payment and unpaid balance of the cash price. Instead, the buyer would be told only the "amount financed."

In addition, the bill would require that credit disclosures be separate from contract terms, making it easier to find them.

Another change would put descriptive phrases on the statements to explain them to consumers. For example, the "finance charge" would be accompanied by the explanation, "this is the amount the credit will cost you."

Senators from both parties, while calling for the simplification, said the original law has been a big aid for credit buyers. The senators cited Federal Reserve Board statistics that show consumer awareness of the interest rate they pay for loans has gone from 15 percent in 1969 to 55 percent in 1977.

The bill would make compliance with the law easier for creditors by requiring the Federal Reserve Board to issue model disclosure forms. Use of these forms would guarantee to businesses that they are complying with the law.

Another provision would extend the law to home mortgages, which were exempted from the original legislation on the theory that disclosure of the high amount to be paid in finance charges over the life of the mortgage would discourage people from buying homes. The finance charges for a 25 or 30-year mortgage can be as much as 50 percent more than the cost of the house.

The bill, by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., has the support of the Federal Reserve and the Federal Trade Commission, the two agencies most closely involved in enforcing the Truth in Lending Act. Consumer groups and lenders also support it.

Pupils Make Loch Ness Monster

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — State police received repeated reports of a shiny, sleek, grayish monster in a pond in Harrisville.

A trooper investigated the first call Thursday morning. Sitting on the still surface of the pond, surrounded by several unperturbed ducks, was Harry, the Loch Ness Monster of Harrisville.

It took a few hours for word to spread but by midday the townsfolk had learned the truth behind the beast in their village pond.

Harry was the masterpiece and secret project of 30 children at the Harrisville school.

For two months, the young schemers, pre-schoolers through third graders, skillfully molded chicken wire, plastic and wood, giving birth to 50-pound Harry.

The mystery project started during the winter as 9-year-old Kelli Ritter pored over books uncovering data on the notorious "Nessie" of Scotland's Loch Ness.

Precise details, from the exact shade of the gray skin to the specific blue-yellow tint of the eyes, were collected by the would-be biologist.

Like so many scientists, Kelli published her work and turned it into a slide show, which she narrated herself.

Once the academic duties were completed, Kelli and her schoolmates decided to have some fun with the monster.

Now that the secret is out, what is going to happen with the 25-foot-long buoyant beast?

"We're going to leave him in the pond for a while," said Dick Nevell, a volunteer teacher at the school.

"The ducks don't seem to be bothered."

White House Considers Release Of Lyle Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is pondering whether to release a report said to be critical of the top executives of the Civil Service Commission.

Presidential spokesman Jody Powell told reporters Thursday the report's allegations are unsubstantiated and that it is a "red herring" raised by opponents of the president's civil service revision plan.

Two Democratic congressmen, John Dingell of Michigan and John Moss of California, have threatened to subpoena the report if the president does not produce it voluntarily. They said in a letter to presidential counsel Robert Lipshutz that they need it "to objectively evaluate" the civil service plan.

They and some other members of Congress feel the report could raise questions about people who assisted in drafting the civil service legislation, and who are the probable choices to enforce it if enacted.

Powell said no final decision had been made about whether to release the report, despite administration concerns that release could violate the privacy of those named in it.

Copies of the full report, most of them now resting in a safe in the office of associate White House counsel Michael Cardozo, contain an assessment about whether disciplinary actions should have been taken against any of the top 20 staff members of the Civil Service Commission.

The report has come to be known as the "Lyle Report" after its author, Washington lawyer Edward Lyle, who is presently out of the country and not available for comment.

Lyle wrote it during the "transition period" before Carter took office, to brief the incoming administration about the so-called "merit staffing scandals" in which the Nixon administration violated civil service regulations in an attempt to hire people who were politically sympathetic.

A fragment of the report was supplied to The Associated Press through the office of Rep. John Moss, D-Calif, who obtained part of the document. The 35-page fragment notes that Lyle's report is based primarily on material made public during 1976 in hearings held by Moss.

After Moss' hearings into the Nixon staffing affair, Moss requested a Justice Department investigation into whether Civil Service Commission executives had destroyed documents or committed perjury to cover up their own alleged complicity in violating merit regulations.

A grand jury probe was conducted, but returned no indictments. Meanwhile the commission, now under the leadership of Carter appointee Alan Campbell, commissioned an independent investigation by Washington lawyer Mitchell Rogovin aimed at finding whether any disciplinary action should be taken against commission executives.

The Rogovin investigation is continuing. Campbell has promised to make public at least a "comprehensive summary" of its findings when the probe is complete.

Rep. Moss is also attempting to find whether the Lyle report was made available to the Justice Department during its grand jury probe. Benjamin Civiletti, then head of the criminal division, said in a letter to Moss dated April 5 that the report was reviewed by an FBI agent but wasn't shown to the grand jury and "has never been in the possession of the Department of Justice."

A Moss aide, Frank Silbey, said this appears to conflict with a letter Campbell wrote to Rep. Gladys Spellman, D-Md., on May 2, saying that when he first saw the Lyle Report a year ago, "I immediately took it to the Justice Department and inquired as to the status of their investigation."

Inflation Warning Aired

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Federal Reserve Board says if inflation is not checked it could go above 10 percent within a few years and bring about a serious recession.

Fed chairman G. William Miller's comments came as the board continued on Thursday to support high interest rate in order to combat inflation.

The Fed raised its discount rate on loans to banks to 7 percent, up from 6½ percent. The board in its announcement said the move would bring the discount rate into closer alignment with short-term interest rates generally.

Miller, who recently took over as the Fed's chairman, said the rapid growth of the money supply has contributed to inflationary forces and has made it necessary to tighten up on money supply.

Prices rose during the first quarter of this year at an annual inflation rate of 9 percent. However, the Carter administration predicts the inflation rate for all of 1978 will be 7 percent.

European Satellite Launched At Cape

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An experimental communications satellite owned by the European Space Agency has been fired into space with a Delta rocket eight months after the first attempt failed.

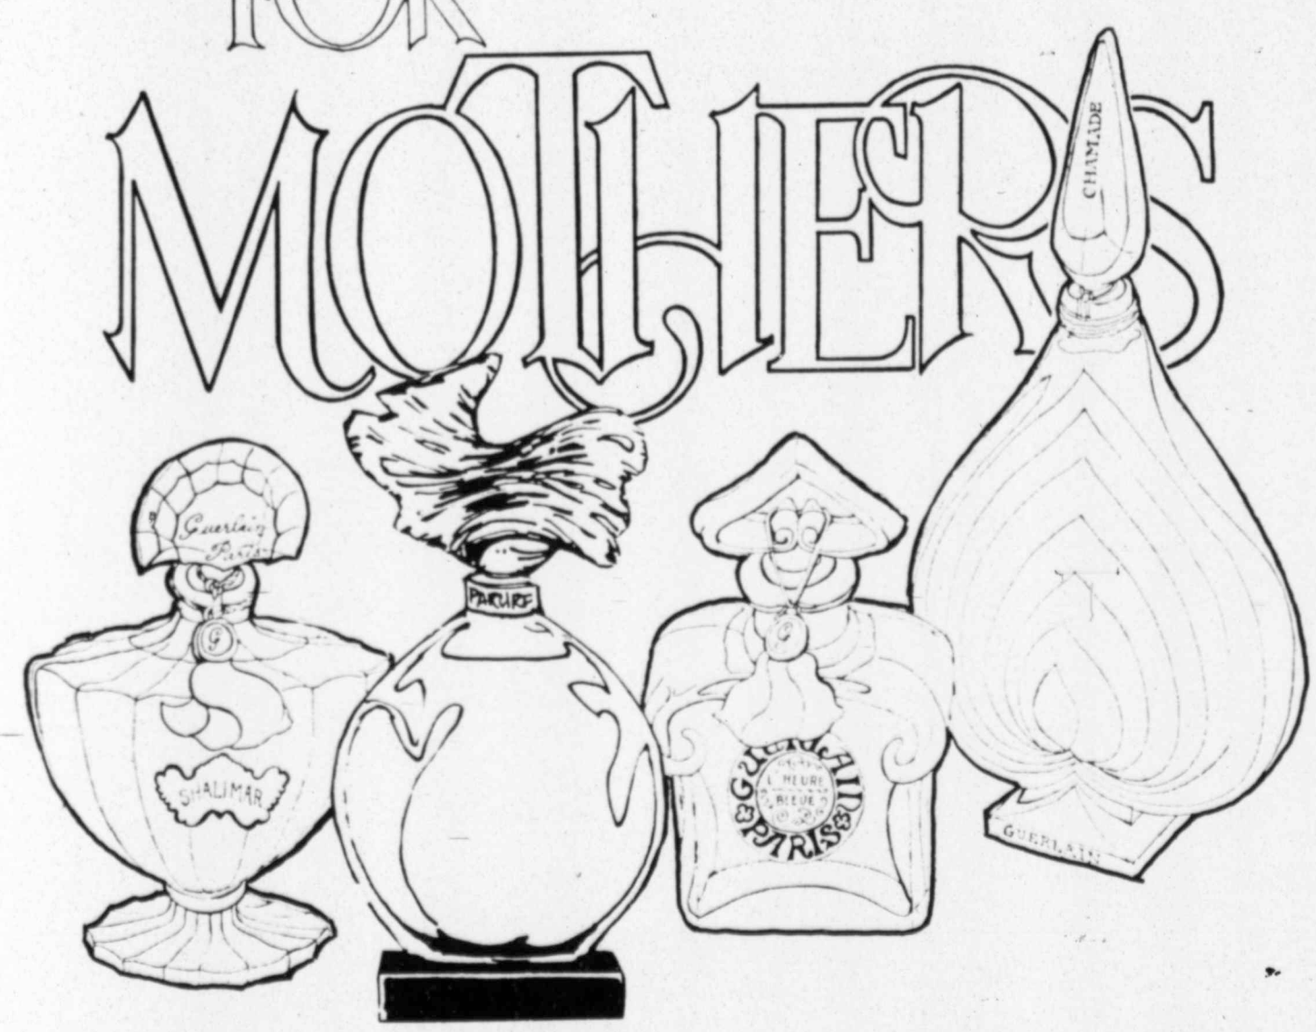

The 1,845-pound satellite, called Orbital Test Satellite, is the forerunner to test concepts for an operational satellite network planned for the 1980s. The satellite can handle two television channels and 5,000 phone calls simultaneously.

The first attempt to launch an OTS ended in failure Sept. 13, 1977, when the first stage of the Delta blew up 55 seconds after liftoff.

Highway Link Approved

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 370-mile interstate-type "connector" highway to run from Lubbock to Interstate 10 south of San Angelo Thursday was approved by the U.S. Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, who proposed the highway bill amendment, said the highway probably would follow U.S. 87.

It would also connect with Interstate 27, which is under construction now between Amarillo and Lubbock.

A second facet of the amendment is a similar highway to lead 485 miles southwest from Amarillo along U.S. 60 and 70 to connect with Interstate 10 at Las Cruces, N.M.

Funding would be on a 90-10 basis with the federal government paying 90 percent of the cost and the state picking up the rest.

Bentsen said no cost estimates are presently available, but the Lubbock-to-San Angelo road would cost about $440 million if built to current interstate highway standards.

The House already has passed its version of a highway bill, and a compromise will have to be developed by joint conferees of the House and Senate.

Final passage of a two-year highway bill is considered possible in August or September.

"We are talking about a limited-access, four-lane highways very similar to the roads on the national interstate system," Bentsen said. "These two highways will be demonstration projects for a new 'connector primary' highway program I have proposed which would allow individual states to use their primary highway funds at a 90-10 matching ratio to build highways connecting with the interstate system.

"The program would provide an extra incentive to the states to augment their interstate systems."

The amendment came to the environment and public works committee out of the Senate transportation subcommittee Bentsen chairs.

With the highway bill, it was ordered to be reported to the full Senate Thursday afternoon.

In Austin, Assistant Engineer-Director Mark Good of the Department of Highways and Public Transportation said it is impossible to predict when construction could start on the project if it were approved.

"You just couldn't make any kind of determination for some time yet without having more information," Good said. "We need to actually see it.

"But if it was just the 10 percent necessary for the state to match, we could handle that all right providing additional funding is provided over the normal funding. We're pretty well obligated under what we could anticipate under normal funding."

Good said he had heard nothing of the amendment before being contacted by The Avalanche-Journal Thursday afternoon and said the highway south of Lubbock has not been in long-range highway department planning because of funding limitations.

Even with prompt passage and adequate funding, he said, a start on construction could not be forecast "until we do a study on what's out there and try to determine the intent of the bill and the alternatives involved."

Bentsen aide Jack Devore said Inter-

Defense Funds Due

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly five percent of the proposed U.S. defense budget for next year is earmarked for Texas, according to Sen. John Tower.

The Texas Republican said the Senate Armed Services Committee recommendations include Defense Department expenditures in Texas of about $6 billion, with half going to civilian and military payrolls and the other half slated for defense contracts with Texas firms.

Manpower expenditures now represent over 55 percent of the defense budget, he said.

Tower said he was pleased that the committee had approved more than $1.3 million for 145 F-16 fighters manufactured by General Dynamics in Fort Worth and $194.6 million for 21 TA-7D training aircraft for the Air National Guard that, if Tower has his way, will be built in Grand Prairie by the Vought Corp.

Texas Instruments also received committee approval, Tower said, for $43.4 million for continued development of a highspeed anti-radiation missle program.

Tower said he anticipated no difficulty in obtaining Senate approval of the committee's recommendations.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

My son came home from college last week and gave me his usual greeting, "Hi, Mom."

I gave him mine: "Get a haircut."

He dropped in a chair and said, "Okay."

"Whatya mean, 'Okay'?"

"I mean I've been meaning to get one.

My hair is too long and hangs in my eyes and I'm always having to flip it back. Besides, it looks sleazy."

"And another thing," I said. "I hope you're going to shave off that ridiculous-looking beard. You look like Abe Lincoln with a case of the frizzies."

"You're right. Besides, it always smells like pizza. Tomorrow it goes."

"Don't fight me, but if your suitcase has those jeans with the hole in the crotch that is mended with white thread and the zipper has a pin connecting it, you can toss them out."

"I did that already. Bought a couple pair of new slacks."

"To wear with those diseased-looking tennis shoes, I suppose."

"Nah. Threw those out too. No one wears dirty gym shoes with a sports coat."

"A sports coat? The last time you wore a sports coat you dribbled milk on it from your Yogi Bear cup. I'm giving you fair warning, you aren't going to sleep every day until the crack of noon."

"No problem, I'm into jogging now and I go about five miles before breakfast."

"You are into jogging? You, who never took out the garbage until I organized a car pool?"

"I know, but it's really good for you."

"And stay out of my refrigerator and all my junk food. You're not having a chip dip orgy with the stuff I'm saving for Saturday night."

"All that rich stuff breaks out your face. I'm into milk and yogurt now."

The next morning, I opened his door and peeked into the room. He was at his desk studying.

"I didn't know you were here," I said. "I didn't hear the stereo."

"I keep it low. After all, why should I inflict my taste in music on everyone else?"

As I started to leave I saw a gum wrapper on the floor.

I let it lay.

He was going to be home three more days and we had to leave something to talk about.

GREEN BEANS MEDITERRANEAN

1 lb. fresh green beans or
2 pkgs. (9 oz. each) frozen whole green beans
2 tomatoes, peeled and diced
1 tbsp. onion powder
1 tbsp. basil leaves, crumbled
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. ground black pepper
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
2 slices toasted white bread, cubed

Trim ends of fresh beans. Cook fresh beans covered in 1-inch boiling salted water until tender, about 15 minutes. (Do not overcook.) Cook frozen beans as package label directs. Drain. Place beans in a serving dish. Keep warm.

In a medium saucepan, combine tomatoes, onion powder, basil, salt, garlic powder and black pepper. Bring to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, for 5 minutes. Stir in butter and toast. Spoon over hot beans. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Three months ago I finally accepted my yearnings to become a male and I began the necessary treatment in anticipation of having a sex change operation.

First I ended my affair with my boyfriend, and then I started the hormone treatments. Shortly afterward I felt that something was amiss; I was examined and learned that I was pregnant!

Determined to go ahead with the sex change surgery, I continued the hormone treatments, but being a devout Catholic I cannot consider an abortion. Yet, I don't want the child.

My former boyfriend is begging me to have the child, marry him, and forget about the sex change operation.

Abby, I was looking forward both physically and emotionally to a new life as a transsexual. What course should I take?

D.

Deac D.: Since abortion is out, give birth to the child, then reconsider having a sex change operation.

If you still fell like a male emotionally and want a body that corresponds with your feelings, resume your original plan. If the motherhood experience tips the scale in favor of living as a woman, follow that inclination. But do not marry a male unless you feel totally female.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think this is a stupid question for a 14-year-old girl to ask, but you are the only person I can ask who won't laugh at me.

Is it all right to kiss a fellow good-night on the first date?

B. IN BRANDON, FLA.

Dear B. That depends. The kiss itself is not as important as the motivation behind it. If a good-night kiss is a mutual sign of affection, I see nothing wrong with it — even on the first date. But if there is no feeling for the other person-only a device for self-gratification, it is cheap and meaningless.

A girl should never kiss a boy because she thinks she "owes" him something for having dated her. Neither should a boy expect a girl to kiss him for that reason.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: My wife is very careless about her appearance in the privacy of our home. She gets breakfast barefoot in her nightgown, with her hair uncombed, which is not very pretty. She knows better and can make herself strikingly beautiful if we're having guests or going out. It hurts to know she won't bother to make herself presentable for me.

Divorce is out because of the children, but believe me, it's crossed my mind. I start off my day in anger and disgust, and my mind (and eye) have begun to roam. She reads your column, Abby so maybe if you print this, she'll see it, recognize herself and take the hint. Thank you.

NO NAME PLEASE

DeaR No Name: I'll print it, but don't expect miracles. When something as important as one's marriage is at stake, the man who waits for his wife to read something in a newspaper column, "recognize herself and take the hint," may need more help than his wife. Lay it on the line, man, lay it on the line. Maybe she thinks YOU con't care how she looks.

Opening lead: Four of ♡.

A good declarer will guess right more often than not. An expert declarer will do everything he can to avoid facing a guess.

We are not enthralled with the auction. To our mind North has, at best, a doubtful opening bid. We sympathize with South. He had an awkward response to make, and two no trump was a practical solution to a difficult problem.

West led his fourth-best heart, East won the ace and shifted to a spade. That suggested strongly that he had no more hearts, for it had to be better to continue partner's suit than shift to a suit in which dummy held two honors.

Declarer took the spade finesse and, when it held, he appeared to have nine tricks—six diamonds, two spades and a heart. However when he led a diamond to dummy and East discarded a heart, declarer was back to eight tricks. It seemed that he would have to guess the club situation to make his contract, but he found a pretty good way out of that dilemma.

Declarer won the queen and ace of diamonds, crossed to the ace of spades and then continued with king of diamonds and another, discarding a heart from dummy and conceding a trick to East. Down to nothing but black cards, East had to present a trick to dummy in whichever black suit he returned. That would be declarer's ninth trick, since the king of hearts would furnish an entry to the long diamonds.

Note that it was essential for declarer to get the ace of spades out of the way. Otherwise East could simply have exited with a spade and left declarer with a club guess. Also, observe that East could have defeated the contract.

There was little future in the spade suit. Even if West held the ace, declarer had two stoppers in the suit. It would have been more profitable for East to shift to clubs at trick two. That way the defenders would have been assured of three club tricks, a heart and a diamond. East needed only to find his partner with an appropriate club holding, either Q-10-x, Q-x-x-x, or five low clubs, for that defense to succeed.

SALMON MOLDS

7 ½ oz. can salmon
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
2 tsp. flour
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. sugar
1 tsp. dry mustard
1 cup milk
¼ cup cider vinegar
2 hard-cooked eggs, diced

Drain salmon and flake. To the salmon liquid add enough water to make ½ cup; sprinkle gelatin over mixture and let stand to soften. In a medium saucepan stir together the flour, salt, sugar and mustard; gradually stir in the milk and then the vinegar, keeping smooth. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Off heat, stir in the gelatin until dissolved. Stir in salmon and egg. Turn into six-½ cup molds or 6-ounce custard cups. Chill to set. Unmold and serve with lettuce, sliced cucumbers, tomato wedges and French dressing. Makes 5 servings.

Male Girl Scout Leader Enjoys Working With Children In Area

By THOMAS NETTER

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) -Alfred Brown is a Girl Scout leader. Some people kidded about it at first, some acted surprised, and some were just curious.

The 26-year-old Brown is believed to be the only male field director for the Girl Scouts of America in the entire Midwest.

"My friends used to tease me about it," Brown said, adding that he didn't find it unusual or bothersome -"You're going to be teased."

But the kidding has stopped, and Brown says Scouts and their adult leaders accept him.

During one meeting a Girl Scout asked him what he was doing there. When he told her he was the field director, she said, "Oh, I was just curious," and they started talking about Scouting.

Since last October, Brown has organized programs for Brownies and Girl Scouts, gone to meetings with their leaders and is working on expanding Scouting programs for minority girls.

Brown joined the Boy Scouts in his native Vicksburg, Miss., but didn't stay with the program long. Rather, he says, he likes "working with kids" and that is the main reason he applied for the job and likes his work.

"I like kids, and I feel like I'm helping them get on the right track while they're young," he says.

Piano Cover Uses Easy Hook Design

The Piano Bench Cover pictured here uses easy latch hook design in a family project that will save you the best seat in the house. Your cover can double for a wall hanging or accent rug, as well, to add a specail kind of harmony to your interior decor. A symmetrical rose and violin/guitar motif is worked in a whole symphony of romantic coloring — lime on evergreen, russet with mahogany and beige shadings, and blossom pink and bright red — up against a smashing white background. And you can easily achieve a sculpted effect by planning your canvas in various lengths of rug-yarn. Music lovers and rug fanciers wil find some common ground in this piece of carpeting that brings together the very best in comfort and graceful knotting.

Rug making is as old as the Orient and materials have ranged from the finest silks of Persia to the dyed rags of Colonial America. Latch hook represents the very latest development in an industry that is based upon an array of manufacturing techniques. And latch hook, more than any other method, is made for at-home enjoyment. Knotting goes quickly and a deep, plush pile is attained with yarns that are economical to use.

Piano Bench Cover is available in a kit containinga 4-mesh cotton canvas, precut acrylic yarn, a color design chart, and complete directions for completing the rug measuring 19" x 36".

Order Piano Bench Cover No. 00550 for $29.99 plus $2.00 postage and handling. You can also order a latch hook No. 03029 for $1.29.

Public May Receive Break In Mail Rate

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

John Q. Public may get a break in the rates for first class mail.

It is only a possibility — but the U.S. Postal Service is contemplating holding the 13-cent rate (per ounce) for individuals while increasing the rate to 16 cents for business firms.

The proposed regulations for the new "citizens' rate" would include: The correct ZIP Code must be included in both the address and the return address; standard-size envelopes compatible with mail-handling machinery must be used for one ounce or less; postage must be with gummed stamps.

The "Carnival" in Dominica is an exciting event with colorful costumes, parades, dancing in the streets and much music. To honor this year's Carnival, Dominica has issued a set of six new stamps featuring various aspects of the "History of Carnival."

The lowest value depicts "Sousouelle Souris," a colorful costume worn by small boys. It is covered with bells and mirrors. The next stamp shows a "Sensay Costume" worn by men only. This costume indicates a strong African influence. The third illustrates a group of street musicians playing drums, accordions, maracas, flutes and other instruments. The fourth has a scene of the "Douiette Band". The Douiette is the national costume of Dominica. The highest value portrays the "Pappy Show Wedding," one of the major comic aspects of the Carnival as it mocks society weddings with funny costumes.

Each stamp bears the Queen Elizabeth II emblem in the upper right corner and the inscription "History of Carnival" at the bottom left.

A new U.S. commemorative postal card hailing the heroism of Molly Pitcher, who won fame and glory at the Battle of Monmouth, N.J., during the Revolutionary War, will be issued in September. The design of the new card will be displayed on June 25 during the bicentennial activities of the Battle of Monmouth.

"Molly Pitcher" was the popular name of Mary Ludwig Hays, who delivered water to the American troops in the battle until her husband fell wounded and she took his place in the cannon crew and kept the gun in action. The Battle of Monmouth, a bitterly fought engagement, was a significant victory for the American Army under George Washington.

Previously a 2-cent stamp honoring Molly Pitcher was issued in 1928 to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the Battle of Monmouth.

The 10-day international stamp show, "ROCPEX -TAIPEI 78," just concluded in Taiwan, proved a huge success — despite continuous rain during eight of 10 days. According to a note received from Jacques Minkus of Minkus Publications, who attended the philatelic event, thousands crowded the building to see the displays of stamp material from countries all over the world. Minkus was delighted that many of his own publications received medals of merit, including the Minkus New World Wide Stamp Catalog, The Complete Guide To Stamp Collecting, Medicine on Stamps, New American Stamp Catalog, China Stamp Album and several others.

Meanwhile in this country, at Stamp Expo '78, the theme was the 75th anniversary of aviation in America. The International Stamp Collectors Society issued a set of two covers with an unusual Postal Service pictorial postmark to honor the occasion. The cachet on one cover is a full-color reproduction of a painting showing a space capsule with an astronaut in front, heading toward the universe via the moon. On the right side Orville Wright points up to his first airplane with brother Wilbur at the controls. Above them is the Spirit of St. Louis, a Boeing 727 and the Supersonic Concorde. Collectors may send $3.95 for the set of two covers to: Aviation, International Stamp Collectors Society, Equitable Building, Hollywood, Calif., 90028.

FESTIVALS GALORE

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Nepal has more festival days than days of the year. The major festival, Bada Dasain, takes 15 days to celebrate. Others include Gai Jatra, an eight-day Cow Festival; Indra Jatra, also eight days long, featuring three parades with the living Goddess in Katmandu; Tihar, when all homes are illuminated; and Teej, a special festival for women.

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

Just two years ago, early in 1976, a deceptively simple photo contest originated to interest the country's amateur photographers. The idea was to invite all Americans with a camera to submit snapshots — not formal portraits — of friends, relatives, or even strangers, in 12 different categories from babies to grandparents. A panel of judges would then select the most representative face in each category to form a symbolic photographic "great American family."

No one at that time visualized the national enthusiasm that the Great American Face Photo Contest would generate. Who could have predicted that it would become an official Bicentennial project of the U.S. government and that it would be lauded by Senator Hubert Humphrey in the Congressional Record?

No originator foresaw that the 12 national winners — ordinary people like you and me — would wind up as subjects for professional portrait assignments by Arnold Newman, renowned photographer of the world's leading personalities.

Or that an estimated ten million viewers would see the Great American Faces Exhibition from coast to coast, at the United Nations in New York, at the National Visitors Center in Washington, D.C., as well as at museums, galleries, libraries, schools, state fairs and shopping centers.

Or that major cities would proclaim Great American Face Days to promote the project. And that it would inspire a popular song and lyrics.

Or that, two years later, "FACES U.S.A." would still be exhibited under the auspices of the United States Information agency in 125 countries on six continents.

And finally, that its complete story would make a compelling book.

Now that, too, has taken place with the current publication by AMPHOTO, Garden City, N.Y., of: "FACES USA" by Arnold Newman, with a foreword by Thomas Thompson (paperbound, $5.95).

It's all on record. We realize now that it was a unique contest, ingeniously attuned to the spirit of the nation as it celebrated its 200th birthday. Its appeal was at the grassroots level, asking people to get involved with their neighbors and themselves. The contest sought a mirror image of Americans with a rich variety of ethnic cultures and an individual emphasis on qualities of character, personality, strength, warmth and humanity. The country was taking its own family portrait with a self-timer.

As the contest gathered momentum with its mass appeal and public spirit, its continued success was assured by the low-key profile maintained by its sponsor, Kinney Shoe Corp., and the integrity and professionalism of Ruder & Finn, its guiding hand in the communications area. Their awareness of the larger purposes of the Great American Family concept, as it evolved, produced a contest that became a remarkable achievement for both photography and the American people.

Is it strange that a collection of amateur photos of ordinary Americans should capture the public's imagination? That interest became evident from the very first simultaneous exhibitions of "Faces" at New Jersey's Morris Museum of Arts & Sciences and at the California Museum of Science & Industry in Los Angeles. And audiences in other countries who have seen the USIA-sponsored exhibits also reacted, and are reacting, with similar fervor.

The key may well be in the high degree of self-identification that these photos stimulate. The faces are of ordinary people, like "you and me." We see in these photo families the parents and grandparents we were familiar with, the children we knew, the boy and girl down the street. We see ourselves. The response is different when we look at photos of famous personalities, however. There is an invisible barrier or gulf because we are separated by the differences of wealth, position, talent and distance. We can't identify with them personally. But "FACES" can be part of our own family albums.

When Arnold Newman — who photographed seven U.S. presidents, kings, celebrities, Nobel prize-winners and headline personalities — photographed the dozen "ordinary" Americans, he found they were not ordinary at all. Their achievements have a special yardstick. Their accomplishments are in living their own full, rich lives with integrity and dignity. And that is in itself a memorable accomplishment.

In addition, Newman achieved just as great a sense of personal satisfaction with the photographic results as any attained when photographing the most famous celebrity.

Today, the 1976 Bicentennial and its celebrations have faded from the American scene, but some rewards remain. Among them we count the Great American Faces project and its exhibitions. And one of its dividends is the book, "FACES USA."

Hot Tar Roof Requires Skill, Special Tools

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q. — During the next couple of months, I will be putting up another building near our house. It will be a small, one-story cottage. Since I have done some work of this sort before, I don't anticipate any trouble except for one thing — I have never covered a roof. Since this will be a fairly flat roof, I would like to cover it with hot tar and gravel. Any suggestions?

A. — Have that part of the structure done professionally — or consider a different type of roof. Putting on hot tar and gravel not only requires special skill, it requires special equipment.

Q. — I have a considerable amount of wood that has to be sanded. I do not have a power sander and prefer, in any case, to use steel wool. My wife has a large quantity of steel wool on hand that she uses for cleaning pots and pans. Can this steel wool be used on wood?

A. — Not unless it is a type that does not contain soap, as most do. You're better off using the type of steel wool that you can purchase in a hardware store. It does not contain soap or water, which can raise the grain of the wood and, in some cases, warp it. And you can purchase it in various grades of coarseness, enabling you to choose the proper kind for the job that has to be done.

• • •

Q. — In some wood finishing that I expect to do this summern please give me some advice about the use of a sealer. After removing all the old finish from furniture, I intend to apply a stain and then varnish. At which point during the operation is the sealer applied?

A. — The sealer usually is applied over the stain and before the final finish is put on. However, some wood finishers use a sealer both before and after the application of stain, a procedure which I also have utilized. When the sealer is put on before the stain, it helps the stain to "take" more evenly. However, there is a school of thought which feels this is an unnecessary step in most applications.

(The techniques of applying varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 35 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Carter Relative Cutting Costs

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House is gradually moving into the computer age. The man in charge is Hugh Curter Jr., special assistant to the president for administration, and a close relative of President Carter from Plains, Ga.

"I was kind of surprised at the lack of computers here," said the president's cousin. He said computers have been introduced for record keeping and bookkeeping, and also will be used to keep track of gifts to the first family, to trace the mail and to assist White House special task forces.

Carter was dubbed "Cousin Cheap" after the president put him in charge of cutting out the frills and the imperial trappings which were prominent in past presidencies. "I went through a phase when I though it was funny," he said. "Then I got so I didn't think it was funny. But now I realize I'm stuck with it for the rest of my life and it doesn't really bother me anymore. It was inevitable considering what my job was."

"The president wanted to make the White House an efficient, well-run, well-managed operation," Carter said. "I think everyone has worked together," he added, saying he had encountered little resistance in his role as efficiency expert.

The present White House staff numbers 351, Carter said, compared to 479 in January 1977 when President Carter, took over. However, the White House presently has some 13 aides detailed from Cabinet departments to work on special projects and there are many others available at the president's beck and call in the executive branch.

Analysis

The White House budget in 1977 was $17,162,000 , Carter said,"and we spent $16,657,000."

Rent is paid to the General Services Administration, the federal housekeeping agency, for the West Wing and the East Wing of the White House where official business is conducted. The National Park Services runs the executive mansion and keeps the gardens of the 18-acre spread.

Besides the first family, the only top assistant who has a White House limousine constantly at his disposal is National Security Affairs adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, who has portal-to-portal service.

Sometimes the Carter administration's frugality has reached unprecedented proportions, as when congressmen invited to breakfast with the president at the White House have gotten a bill for rolls and coffee. But that is no longer the case, according to Carter.

At present, Carter is working on a reassignment of office space in the West Wing and he may earn a few other nicknames from those who are bound to be upset by contemplated moves. In the White House, proximity to the Oval Office is the name of the game.

"I've enjoyed it a lot," says Carter, speaking of his job.

He also has managed to get to fancy Georgetown parties and adds, "I've been lucky to stay out of trouble."

Carter's father, Hugm Carter Sr., the president's first cousin, has written a book, "Cousin Beedie and Cousin Hot," about the Carter family in Plains, which has caused an uproar among some members of the family. "I haven't read it," Carter says. "I'm staying on the sidelines. Dad purposefully left me out of it."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll be fortunate in most situations tomorrow, with the exception of ones relating to your finances. Don't tempt the fates in that area.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Rather than try to run the whole show yourself, let others take the more active roles. This is your most profitable course.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's extremely important to think positively and see yourself as a winner. Try it. The results could amaze you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Intuitive feelings could furnish clues that your logic may not perceive. Hunches shouldn't be ignored.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) For the sake of your image, don't back down on agreements you've made. Things will work out provided you don't rock the boat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be a doer, not a rationalizer. Once you commit yourself, you may even startle yourself with your achievements.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Tomorrow is not a good day to try to squeeze people you're involved with socially for favors. The results could embarrass you as well as them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In an important family matter, if there's something you can do for everyone's ultimate good, do it regardless of their full approval.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Important plans shouldn't be implemented piecemeal. Keep your over-all objectives in mind at all times.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your potential for acquisition will be through your normal channels. Speculation could be disappointing for you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) With friends, your popularity is likely to be at a high point. With members of your own family you may not make such a big hit.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Early indicators may be a trifle negative, but they won't be indicative the outcome of tomorrow's events. You're lucky in the stretch.

Mayor To Bypass Confab

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mayor Gerald N. Springer will not attend the U.S. Conference of Mayors June 17-20 in Atlanta because Georgia is one of the states that has not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment.

"I would like to go, but since the city has taken a position to establish a formal protest against the non-ERA states, I don't believe that my presence there is so invaluable that the resolution should be circumvented for my purposes," Springer told the City Council.

The council has routinely refused to appropriate funds to city employees and officials to attend functions in such states.

Councilwoman Bobbie Sterne, a former mayor who proposed the original ban, said it has been profitable to Cincinnati.

"Our convention revenue this year is already over $5 million and will probably reach $11 million before the year is out because of other conventions canceling out of the non-ERA states and coming here," Mrs. Sterne said.

The resolution would permit Springer to attend at his own expense, but he said he would not spend his own money nor accept contributions from private organizatons to send him to the conference.

"The protest has no significance if there's no price to pay," Springer said.

South Florida's Top Business May Be Smuggling

(EDITOR'S NOTE — The figures sound impressive: Hundreds of millions of dollars of marijuana seized by agents in South Florida. Maybe 70 percent of the nation's total for the year. Yet it's only about 10 percent of what makes it past our shores.)

By FRED BAYLES

MIAMI (AP) — Dollar for dollar, drug smuggling may have already surpassed tourism as South Florida's No. 1 business.

Consider the following:

— A rag-tag collection of 70 ships and 10 planes crowding dockyards and airfields in the Miami area, all seized in connection with smuggling operations over the past year.

— Beer trucks plying the roads out of Key West carrying cargos of pot.

— Groups of "mother ships" lie off the coast, loaded to the scuppers with marijuana.

Customs agents recount the story of one smuggler, searching for his mothership off the coast of Fort Lauderdale one night during the busy Christmas season. He accidently rendevoused with another vessel — also carrying pot.

"That sort of sums it up," says Jim Dingfelder, a public affairs officer with U.S. Customs in Miami.

While national figures for the year aren't available, the Drug Enforcement Administration estimates that the 700 tons of marijuana seized by federal agents in the Southeast in 1977 represents at least 70 percent of the pot seized in the United States. Nearly 500 tons of that was taken in or off the coast of South Florida.

The statistics don't include what local authorities reaped. Officials say there's no way to estimate that.

Florida's proximity to the marijuana fields and coca groves of South America makes it a prime stop for smugglers. Other drugs, including heroin, PCP and LSD, are seldom brought into the state in quantity because their point of origin is far from Florida shores.

Trafficking in cocaine is more lucrative than pot and even more elusive. According to Customs officials, 485 pounds of cocaine were seized last year. At an estimated street value of $250,000 per pound, the cocaine seized cost smugglers $121 million. But officials say they have no idea how to gauge their success.

"Cocaine is such a portable drug, we could have boaters bringing in a fortune hidden in their thermos," says Dingfelder.

Since early December, the Coast Guard, working on tips from other agencies, has stopped nearly 20 boats in the Caribbean, confiscating more than 500,000 pounds of marijuana worth more than $135 million.

But the bigger question is how much pot is getting into the country.

Florida's proximity to the marijuana fields and coca groves of South America makes it a prime stop for smugglers.

"We just don't know," says Dingfelder. "It's illegal, so how do you get a handle on it?"

Congressional studies using a formula of supply and demand say only 10 percent of the marijuana smuggled into this country is seized. Based on that figure, a million tons could be coming into the country each year worth $6 billion.

It's an awesome figure considering South Florida's tourist industry brought in $1.75 billion last year.

"It's incomprehensible to me that 1.4 million pounds only represents 10 percent," says Dingfelder. "If that's the case, we have to ask ourselves what we're doing here. It just boggles the mind."

John Van Diver, who recently left his post as DEA regional director, puts it in a more graphic way: "If we're only getting 10 percent, that would mean enough pot for 8 to 10 billion marijuana cigarettes is getting through. I would hope we're getting 40 to 50 percent of it."

But whether 10 or 50 percent is being stopped, smugglers still make fantastic profits while facing minimal risks and losses even when a shipment is seized.

"Oh, I guess they could consider it a business loss," says Cmdr. Curt Ikens, head of intelligence in the Coast Guard's Miami office. "But if these guys send out three boats and one gets through, they're still $1 million ahead."

According to the DEA, marijuana can be bought in Colombia for $10 to $40 a pound. That same pound is worth at least $300 in this country, promising a 10-fold profit.

Take the case of the Jose Gregorio, a rusting ship of questionable origin that was carrying 10 tons of marijuana when spotted off the Bahama Banks in early January.

Officials say ship and cargo represented a $330,000 investment — and potential profit of $6.3 million.

Ikens says the Jose Gregorio's journey likely began at Colombia's Guajira Peninsula, then passed through one of three narrow straits: The Yucatan Pass between Yucatan Peninsula and Cuba, the Windward Passage between Cuba and Haiti or the Mona Pass between the Dominican Republic and Puerto Rico.

It's destination: Florida's 1,197-mile coastline which offers many secluded havens to transfer cargo to another ship or to one of several land vehicles, ranging from military surplus vehicles to decoy beer trucks.

But the Jose Gregorio's journey ended when a helicopter from the Coast Guard cutter Diligence, a 210-footer based in Key West, spotted the small coastal freighter. It was at anchor off one of the hundred of uninhabited bays which make perfect rendezvous points for the transfer of pot to smaller, faster ships for the run into Florida.

The Coast Guard, curious to it was anchored in the middle of nowhere, checked the ship's registration with Honduran officials and received permission to board.

The Gregorio carried a crew of nine Colombians, turned over to the Immigration and Naturalization Service for deportation. Crewmen are rarely prosecuted in this country.

"When we catch a ship the crews are usually sent back to their home countries and the owner loses his boat," says Dingfelder. "But in some cases, they would have to lose 75 shipments before we hurt them."

Federal agencies, including the DEA, Customs and the Coast Guard, sharpened many of their anti-smuggling skills during Operation Buccaneer, begun in 1973 in conjunction with the Jamaican government in an effort to stop drug traffic between the two countries.

"We were stopping most U.S. ships going through the Windward Passage for six months," says Ikens. "At the same time, we started identifying these motherships coming up from South America."

Spurred by the success of Operation Buccaneer, six federal agencies set up Epic, a nerve center in El Paso, where intelligence reports are shared and counter-measures planned.

Coast Guard and Customs also gained another weapon when an obscure law — the Hovering Vessel Act — was dusted off and put to use in 1975.

The law allows U.S. authorities to board motherships without awaiting permission from the flag countries when it is proven that there is interaction between the ship and the U.S. shore.

Despite inroads made, enforcement officials like Van Diver say the only way to stop the traffic is with tougher laws.

"We're not going to stop smuggling by catching them out in the ocean because it's a big ocean," says Van Diver, who is now at the University of Georgia on a federal exchange program. "Stiffer penalties and mandatory sentences are needed."

DEA officials say of 1,285 arrests in the United States last year, there were 237 convictions in federal courts, 99 in state jurisdictions. The rest of the cases ended in either dismissals or aquittals.

Most of those found guilty faced sentences of no more than 5 years.

"A lot of these people are getting out in 1½ to 2 years," says Van Diver. "In that time he can become a millionaire. What does he care if he has a criminal record?

"Pot has been portrayed as a harmless drug and the people we're fighting are seen as harmless little old pot smugglers. But what people don't realize is the big profits being made are going untaxed. It's staggering just in terms of its financial impact on society."

Deaths From Cancer Increase In 1976

WASHINGTON (AP) — The death rate for virtually all the leading causes of death fell in 1976 except for cancer and influenza and pneumonia, a government report shows.

The National Center for Health Statistics' final mortality report for 1976 said heart disease remained the nation's leading cause of death, accounting for 724,000 or nearly 40 percent of the 1.9 million deaths in the United States that year.

Cancer deaths were up 11,600 to a total of 377,300, or nearly 20 percent of total deaths. The death rate from influenza and pneumonia went up by 5 percent and claimed narly 62,000 lives.

The leading causes of death after heart disease and cancer were strokes, accidents, flu and pneumonia, diabetes, cirrhosis of the liver, arteriosclerosis, suicide, infant mortality, bronchitis, emphysema and asthma, and homicide.

Again in 1976, more Americans took their own lives than were murdered.

Harry Rosenberg, chief of mortality statistics, said suicides have outpaced homicides "consistently since the mid-1960s." Both categories were down in 1976.

Some 26,800 persons took their own lives, while 19,500 were homicide victims. Most of the victims in either case were men.

The infant mortality rate fell to a record low of 15.2 deaths per 1,000 live births, or 5.6 percent below the 1975 rate of 16.1 deaths. In 1970 the rate was 20 deaths; in 1940 it was 47.

The report said that both fatal motor accidents and homicides occurred most often on Saturdays, and least often earlier in the week. The fewest fatal accidents were on Tuesdays and the fewest murders on Tuesdays or Wednesdays. There was no pronounced variation by day of the week for suicides.

The death rate for 1976 was 8.9 deaths per 1,000 population, the same as in 1975. However, by another statistical method that adjusts the death rates by age, the death rate fell from 6.4 to 6.3 per 1,000, for the lowest level ever recorded.

During the year life expectancy at birth also reached a record 72.8 years, as previously reported.

French Teacher Given New Post

NEW YORK (AP) — A teacher who illustrated French lessons by showing nude pictures to his eighth-grade students has been reassigned to a non-teaching post following complaints from parents.

George Egholm, who had taught at Junior High School 142 in Brooklyn said Wednesday that he will not fight his reassignment because he likes his new job.

"There was a degree of shock when the children saw some of the pictures," Egholm said. "I had been away from the U.S. for a few years and I had forgotten that you have to censor a magazine over here. The French are somewhat looser."

He said some of the magazines he showed to students contained "full nudes," but added that the magazines are in general circulation in France and the nudes included "French girls advertising soap and other items."

Dye To Be Tested For Bad Dope

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Officials will soon conduct tests on a dye to determine whether it could be used to warn American pot smokers that the marijuana they smoke is contaminated with the herbicide paraquat.

The chief executive officer of the Attorney General's Office, Fernando Baeza, said that Rhodamani B, a non-toxic commercial dye, would be sprayed on marijuana fields in Oaxaca state along with paraquat.

The dye, when applied in high concentration, appears as red dots or streaks on marijuana peaves.

Baeza said it has yet to be determined how much Mexican marijuana exported to the United States is contaminated with the herbicide.

Doctor Distribution Worries Committee

By AL ROSSITER Jr

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation is expected to have far more doctors in 12 years than it now has but a National Institute of Medicine study committee says there still may be a shortage of primary care physicians.

At the rate medical schools are enrolling students, there will be 559,800 physicians in the United States in 1990 — 60 percent more than today, the panel said in a report released this week.

"Although we will have a dramatic increase in the number of doctors practicing in 1990, we are concerned that the distribution of those doctors between specialists and subspecialists and primary care physicians will not be adequate to meet the vurious needs," said Dr. E. Harvey Estes, the committee chairman from Duke University.

In an effort to encourage more doctors to become primary care physicians, the panel said income differentials should be reduced between those who provide basic, personal care and those who provide specialized services.

As a step to that end, the panel recommended that physicians be paid the same by insurers for similar services whether they are general practitioners and family physicians or specialists such as gynecologists and general surgeons.

Estes said at a news conference the panel recommendation would force a doctor to choose one role or another.

He said many specialists now enjoy both roles — providing specialized services as well as primary service. This dual practice, the report said, "might prove disadvantageous" because the specialist might not be as well trained in the primary role as in the specialty role, and because there may be a tendency to use specialty skills needlessly.

The committee said the patient should first go to the primary care doctor and only go to a specialist if the primary physician or a second doctor recommends that special skills are needed.

Another problem, the panel said, is that doctors are not evenly distributed among the population. It said there are an estimated 45 million to 50 million people in rural areas or low-income inner-city areas that do not have an adequate supply of physicians.

To deal with this, the panel recommended that government and private medical insurance plans discontinue geographic differentials in payment levels.

The Institute of Medicine is an arm of the private National Academy of Sciences. The study was financed by grants from two private foundations and the results have been sent to congressional committees and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare for their consideration.

Prisoners Mutilate Selves In Protest

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Hundreds of prisoners of Carabanchel Penitentiary slashed their wrists and legs Tuesday in a demonstration demanding pardons and prison reform.

Prison director Carlos Parada said all the injured inmates were treated in the prison and none appeared to be serious enough to warrant transfer to a hospital.

The mutilations were the latest in a series of protests and riots that have swept Spain's 74 prisons in past months.

Plastic Pipe Winning Approval

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Mention plastic pipe to anyone not too many years ago and the discussion quickly got around to its inability to handle hot water.

Today, the use of plastic pipe for both hot and cold water is approved in two of the three so-called model plumbing codes, 12 states and a number of local codes, with more communities permitting such usage every week or so. This approval is for chlorinated polyvinyl chloride (CVPC) pipe, which is rigid and bonded by a solvent.

A newer development for hot water applications is polybutylene (PB), which received its first model code listing two years ago. Because it is flexible, it is making strong inroads in plumbing for mobile homes and recreational vehicles, where rigid pipes usually are more difficult to install.

Another flexible plastic pipe is made of polyethylene, often used for such outdoor projects as underground sprinkling systems and water lines to patios and swimming pools. Normally available in coiled form, its flexibility allows it to be bent around curves and it can be cut with a knife. Connections may be made by insert or stab-type fittings which are inserted into the pipe, with stainless steel hose clamps tightened around the outside of the connection. A complete assortment of tees, elbows and other fittings is available for connecting to existing metal pipes.

Plastic pipe for drainage, waste water and venting is made from acriolitrile-butadiene-styrene (ABS) and polyvinyl chloride (PVC). The Society of the Plastic Industry says the major model plumbing codes permit the use of these plastic pipes above and below ground. These rigid pipes normally are assembled with a solvent cement that chemically "welds" fittings and pipes together. They can be cut with a fine-tooth saw or a tube cutter. Pressure-rated PVC and ABS pipes also are available for pressure applications, such as cold water lines.

Old and crumbling sewer lines are being renewed by "slip lining." In this process, sections of large and flexible plastic pipe are butt-fused into long lengths, then are snaked through existing metal or concrete sewer lines to add many years of life to existing sewer systems.

One of the reasons for the increasing popularity of plastic pipe, aside from its light weight and resistance to corrosion, is that it can be easily worked and connected. But that doesn't mean you can rush headlong into the installation of it. There are certain fundamentals that must be followed to make it secure. When you purchase it, be sure the dealer includes the manufacturer's instructions for the use of that particular type of plastic pipe.

Thailand To Start Education Plan

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Thai government is planning a four-year education program for some of the 102,000 Indochinese refugees in Thailand, the Interior Ministry announced today. It said about 5,000 children and 1,000 adults will be enrolled in the first classes.

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees is providing $640,000 to finance program for the first year, the ministry said. Classrooms will be built in all major refugee camps, Thai and refugee teachers will be recruited, and the Thai language and Thai culture will be among the subjects taught.

Strauss Anticipates Anti-Inflation Program From President

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

HOBBS — In six months, the American public may see a program to hold down the inflation spiral, Robert S. Strauss, President Carter's special counsel on inflation, said here Thursday.

"In this program, I think prices can be held to the prices of the past two years, and it will be the same concerning wages," Strauss, also the president's special representative for trade negotiations, told reporters during an afternoon press conference.

He added that the Carter administration didn't expect to reach zero inflation and that the public should not expect any miracles.

"It's going to be darn hard work for me, the president and the American public," he said. "But, I think we can show the American public a fair, equitable program that they'll respond to."

Strauss, formerly chairman of the Democratic national committee, said he felt the U.S. was not in a typical inflationary period, but more in a "price-wage push," adding "We've just got to cool it down a bit."

Concerning trade between the U.S. and Japan, Strauss said that earlier this year the Japanese had agreed to remove some of their barriers to U.S. exports to Japan.

"I think that's a good first step on their part," Strauss said, adding that he hoped they would live up to what they said.

"I think the Japanese are trying hard to hold down their exports to this country."

However, Strauss said that American businessmen must also learn how to export to Japan to balance the trade situation between the two countries.

On energy, Strauss said the Carter administration should have an energy bill ready for the public in 60 days.

"I think the bill is a good one, calling for the balance of conserving energy as well as searching for new energy sources.

"I don't think the bill will please any one sector, and if the public gives the bill (a grade of) C-plus, I think it will be a good one," he said.

When reporters asked Strauss if he had any presidential aspirations himself, he simply replied, "No," adding that he felt he did not have to cater to any certain constituency.

Strauss later addressed about 500 New Mexico state Democratic officers and party members, including Gov. Jerry Apodaca and former governors John Burroughs, Jack Campbell and Bruce King, himself now a candidate for a new term as governor, and U.S. Rep. Harold Runnels at a $100-a-ticket dinner in the Holiday Inn here.

"Bob Strauss Day" was sponsored by the Democratic party in Lea, Eddy, Chaves, Roosevelt, DeBaca, Curry and Lincoln counties as a fund-raising event to finance this year's elections.

Panel Approves Highway Link

state 27 between Lubbock and Amarillo is not an issue in the amendment because it has already been approved and is being built.

West Texans appearing before congressional committees have noted that Lubbock is the largest metropolitan area in the United States without an interstate highway system.

A four-lane, divided highway running down through Lubbock and downstate toward Houston has been a goal of South Plains business and political leaders for many years because of increasing Lubbock-to-Houston agricultural marketing traffic and other concerns.

Forty-five percent of the grain sorghum in the United States is produced in the Panhandle-South Plains, and such a highway is considered important partly because it would improve truck routing to the south.

Highway department engineers from Lubbock Tuesday night reported that 13 possible I-27 routes through the Hub City had been cut to three or four between Avenues A and H.

Engineers have been allocated 6.6 miles to build the interstate between North Loop 289 and South Loop 289.

Two Lubbock Men Charged In Theft

Two Lubbock men were accused Thursday of taking merchandise from a Lubbock supply company during their time as employees of the firm.

Charged with theft were 28-year-old Bob Gilyard of 2930 E. Bates St. and 25-year-old Layfette Robinson Jr., of 500 E. Broadway.

The two men were charged in connection with the alleged disappearance of three submersible pumps from Valley Pump Co. here in January.

Charges were filed after witnesses reportedly told investigators from the Hale County Sheriff's Office of purchasing similar merchandise from a Lubbock man named "Bob" and a man named "Junior."

House Damaged By Trash Fire

The Bill Stewart house about four miles east of Lubbock on FM 40 suffered almost $20,000 damage after a trash fire on the east side of the house raged out of control.

Mary Spain, who was staying at the house while Stewart was at work, said the small fire was whipped by the winds and ignited a pile of wood near by. The fire quickly spead to the attic and destroyed two bedrooms on the east side of the house.

Units from the Idalou and Roosevelt Fire Departments brought the fire under control about 45 minutes after it started shortly before 3:50 p.m. Thursday, but remained on the scene in case it broke out again.

The remainder of the house received heavy smoke, heat and water damage, according to Idalou Fire Marshal Weldon McKinney.

Singapore Airlines Places Record-Breaking Order

By MARK POTTS

NEW YORK — Sixteen years ago, Singapore International Airlines—then known as Malaysia-Singapore Airlines—bought its first jet aircraft. And now, the airline has signed the largest purchase order in the history of commercial aviation.

The order—placed with Boeing Co. for 13 747s and six 727s—easily surpassed a $780 million deal Eastern signed last month with Europe's Airbus Industrie. And it shows just how intent SIA is upon adding to its already remarkable record for expansion.

"You don't get responsible, serious organizations placing contracts just for the history books," J.Y.M. Pillay, chairman of the state-owned airline, said Wednesday at the signing. Pillay's airline has been doubling in size every four years lately and is now the second-largest intercontinental airline in Asia.

Since that first jet—a British Comet—was purchased in 1962, SIA's revenues have grown from about $6 million annually to about $463 million last year.

The revenues came from SIA routes throughout Asia and to the Middle East and Europe. Last month, SIA began cargo service to San Francisco via Honolulu, and plans to add passenger service to the route early next spring. Routes to other American cities are restricted by the Bilateral Pact on air routes, but SIA intends to appeal the exclusion.

The company attributes most of its success to one reason. "The most important factor is the geographical location of Singapore," says Managing Director Lim Chin Beng. Although Singapore itself is small, its central location offers access to the Middle East, Europe and Asia, with North America just a long hop over the Pacific.

SIA officials are counting on continued success to pay for the new planes. Twenty-five percent of the cost is expected to come from operating profits, with the remainder coming from loans from commercial banks and the U.S. Export-Import Bank and from the sale of the line's existing fleet of seven 747s.

"We do not envision any difficulty in selling our present fleet of 747s," Pillay said, adding that SIA already has had discussions with other airlines. When they are sold, some of the profits will be enormous: Because of the line's six-year depreciation policy, the book value of three of the jets will be zero, but the sales price will be the going rate.

The planes that will replace them will be an updated model of the 350-passenger 747 with a more powerful Pratt Whitney engine that will burn 3 percent less fuel than present models. The jet engine order, worth $120 million, will provide jobs for 1,000 persons at Pratt Whitney's Connecticut plant, according to Harry J. Gray, chairman of United Technologies Corp., Pratt Whitney's parent company.

The order also will provide jobs in Seattle, where Boeing is headquartered. According to Boeing Chairman T.A. Wilson, 22,000 workers will get two more months of work on the Boeing production line, which now has a two-year backlog.

OPEC Delays Next Meeting

VIENNA (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) said here on Thursday that a session of its finance ministers, scheduled to open next Tuesday, has been postponed by one week.

The announcement said that "due to unforeseen circumstances" the meeting will open on May 23 instead of May 16.

Hamid Zaheri, the official spokesman at OPEC headquarters here, insisted the change was routine, because some of the finance ministers could not make it on the original date due to other business.

The finance ministers' meeting is to discuss "financial and monetary matters." It is the third such conference.

Zaheri stressed it will not discuss oil prices nor the issue of keeping the U.S. dollar as the unit of payment for OPEC oil.

These issues are the sole authority of the OPEC oil ministers, whose next meeting was scheduled at Geneva, Switzerland, for June 17.

The OPEC finance ministers, according to Zaheri, will discuss such matters as OPEC aid to developing countries, stepped-up cooperation among the 13 OPEC members, the monetary situation generally, and administration.

Passengers Halt Plane Hijacker

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao (AP) — Passengers overpowered an armed Colombian who had diverted a domestic jetliner to this Caribbean island and demanded fuel to continue a five-hour, three-stop hijack journey, police said today. They said they detained an accomplice after questioning the 86 passengers.

The passengers included at least two Americans, Peace Corps volunteer James Edwards of Oxnard, Calif., and his grandmother, officials said. The woman's identity was not available. Edwards is stationed in Santa Marta, Colombia.

Three persons — the captured hijacker, the flight engineer of the Avianca Airlines Boeing 727 and a Curacao policeman — were wounded. None was in serious condition.

Curacao police identified the hijacker as 19-year-old Jose Luis Castillo Perez. Passengers said they had seen him carrying two pistols and a hand grenade.

Authorities suspected there was an accomplice after passengers reported hearing the armed hijacker telling someone over the plane's public address system to "protect him."

After interrogating passengers through the night, police detained a man they identified as Gilberto Blas Hernandez Martinez, also 19 and a Colombian. They said he had mingled with passengers leaving the plane.

The aircraft was hijacked at mid-afternoon Thursday with 113 passengers and six crew members aboard during a flight from Santa Marta, northern Colombia, to Bogota, the capital.

"Ten minutes before we were supposed to land, I learned we had been hijacked," said passenger Fernando Ramirez Flores, a Colombian. "The hijacker came into the passengers' cabin. He had a gun in his hand. He said, 'Nobody moves and if somebody moves he'll be shot.'"

The hijacker ordered the plane to Cali, 300 miles south of Bogota, and allowed three persons off. A spokesman at Cali airport said the hijacker threatened to blow up Avianca offices all over the country if he was not given $55,000. Co-pilot Carlos Antonio Torron said the hijacker sought "only money, he apparently had no political motives."

He then ordered the plane to fly to the Caribbean coast and east to the Netherlands Antilles island of Aruba, off neighboring Venezuela. At Aruba, 24 others were allowed off, including the flight engineer, who had been shot in the leg.

A woman passenger said the engineer had gone outside the plane to pick up food the hijacker had demanded. When the engineer came back, the hijacker asked if any arms had been provided, the woman said. When the engineer said no, she recounted, the hijacker shot him.

The hijacker then ordered the pilot to fly 65 miles east to Curacao. The plane landed there about 6:45 p.m. local time and was encircled by police under cover of gathering darkness.

Airport tower officials said the hijacker demanded fuel and asked for a map of the Caribbean. They said he did not mention money.

Authorities said airport workers wanted police protection before they would approach the aircraft. The hijacker responded that he would force the plane to take off in 30 minutes with or without fuel. During the exchange, three ambulances approached the airplane as a precaution and the hijacker ordered them away, police said.

Netherlands Antilles Justice Minister Leo Chance, supervising the emergency operation, then suggested to the hijacker that he let women and children off and the plane would be refueled.

Police said that about 7:45 p.m., passengers began jumping from the plane's service door to the runway. Police rushed the aircraft, and several shots were fired.

Officers said they found the hijacker pinned by one passenger while another had taken a gun from the hijacker, who sustained a light gunshot wound. Earlier reports said the pilot and co-pilot grabbed the man.

Spain Votes To Retain Monarchy

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — The Spanish parliament has rejected a proposal by the opposition Socialists to abolish the monarchy of King Juan Carlos and revert to a republican form of government.

The vote came late Thursday as new violence erupted in the restive Basque region. In a gun battle in the Basque "holy town" of Guernica, paramilitary Civil Guards shot and killed two suspected separatist guerrillas.

This brought the toll in the recurring violence between police and separatists to four dead and at least nine injured for the past three days.

The Cortes vote was in the committee for constitutional affairs of the lower house, which is debating the draft of Spain's new democratic constitution.

By a vote of 22-13, with one abstention, the committee rejected a Socialist proposal that the new constitution omit all references to the monarchy and the king, and define the chief of state as the "President of the Republic."

The pro-republic votes came mainly from Socialists. The Communists voted with the ruling Democratic Center Union of Premier Adolfo Suarez in favor of the monarchy.

The Socialists said they never expected to win the vote, but had to submit the proposal as a matter of principle.

After defeating the republican forces in the 1936-39 civil war, Franco installed a monarchy and appointed Juan Carlos heir to the vacant throne. When the dictator died 2½ years ago, Juan Carlos became king and proceeded to return democracy to Spain.

Once the draft of the constitution has been cleared by the Cortes committee, it will be submitted to the Congress and the Senate. Then it will be put before a referendum, probably next fall.

In Guernica, police said the two Basque suspects were killed after they opened fire on police pursuing their car, which had been reported stolen. No policemen were hurt.

But on Tuesday, one policeman was killed in San Sebastian and one in Vitoria when terrorists bombed and machine-gunned police vehicles. "Basque Homeland and Liberty" (ETA), the guerrilla arm of the Basque independence movement, has claimed responsibility for the attacks.

Several persons were injured Wednesday in street clashes between opposing political groups that followed the funerals of the two slain policemen.

Sun Bleaching Black Sheep

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — The black sheep of Victoria are turning white from sunburn — and it isn't only the sheep that are suffering.

The problem is that the black coloring of the fleece absorbs ultraviolet light, and sunlight is actually bleaching the fleece of black sheep, reducing their value, the newspaper Australian reported Thursday.

As a result, farmers are now "dressing" the valuable black sheep in light plastic cloaks to screen out the ultraviolet light.

"We have heard about wolves in sheep's clothing," the newspaper said in an editorial, "But sheep in plastic raincoats?

"It may not be wooly thinking ... but it's a yarn that rams home a lesson to us all. Including you ... and ewe ...," the paper said.

Soviet Dissident To Go On Trial

MOSCOW (AP) — Yuri Orlov, founder of a group agitating for Soviet compliance with the human rights provisions of the Helsinki accords, will go on trial Monday on charges of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda, dissident sources said today.

Orlov, a 52-year-old physicist, was arrested 15 months ago. He faces up to seven years in a labor camp if convicted of the charges against him.

Orlov and his lawyer, Yevgeny Shalman, asked that the charges be dismissed for lack of evidence, but the motion was turned down.

Judge V. G. Lubentsova will preside over Orlov's trial in a courtroom in the Lublino district six miles from the center of Moscow, said the sources, who refused to be identified.

Orlov is one of three members of his human rights group arrested early last year. The others are Alexander Ginzburg and Anatoly Shcharansky.

Dissident sources also reported that 18 Jewish women seeking permission to emigrate to Israel were detained briefly Thursday after a five-hour sit-in at the Ministry of Interior.

The sources said the women wanted to know why their visa applications had been denied and had been promised a meeting with an official of the ministry Thursday.

SALTY SEA

Southern California's Salton Sea, formed when the freshwater Colorado River overflowed from 1905 to 1907, is already more briny than the oceans. Agricultural waste waters carry more than 10,000 tons of salt into it every day.

Protests In Iran Spread To Capital

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Nationwide protests against the government of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi have spread to the capital, where at least 100 persons were reported injured in clashes with riot police in the bazaar district. Like the clashes in 25 other cities this week, the rioting in Tehran Thursday followed an anti-government meeting in a mosque.

Most of the demonstrators were Moslems campaigning for a return to strict adherence to Moslem law in the government. But in recent clashes members of the banned Communist Party and other left-wing organizations reportedly took part in the protests.

Cries of "Down with the shah" resounded through the teeming bazaar district as riot police charged demonstrators emerging from the mosque.

At least 100 veople were injured, some by police bullets, as crowds tried to flee the violence, said Dr. Karim Sanjabi, leader of the recently formed Iranian Human Rights committee.

Police refused to give an official estimate of the number of people injured in the riots in the capital. Press reports said 15 persons have been killed in the nationwide protests since Tuesday.

On Hashemi Street in southwestern Tehran, about 200 young persons, apparently students, carried placards emblazoned with the hammer and sickle and bearing phrases such as "Iran and workers and Communist fighters unite" and "Tribute to the martyrs of Yazd, Jahrom and Ahvaz," a reference to earlier clashes.

Travelers returning from Mashed in northeastern Iran said tanks were brought out Thursday after three days of rioting and took up positions in front of Ferdowski University, where most of the rioting took place.

But they said the rioting, after continuing most of the day, was quelled before the call for evening prayers.

The main scenes of the Tuesday and Wednesday clashes were the holy city of Qom in southern Igan, Tabriz, Kazeroun and Shiraz.

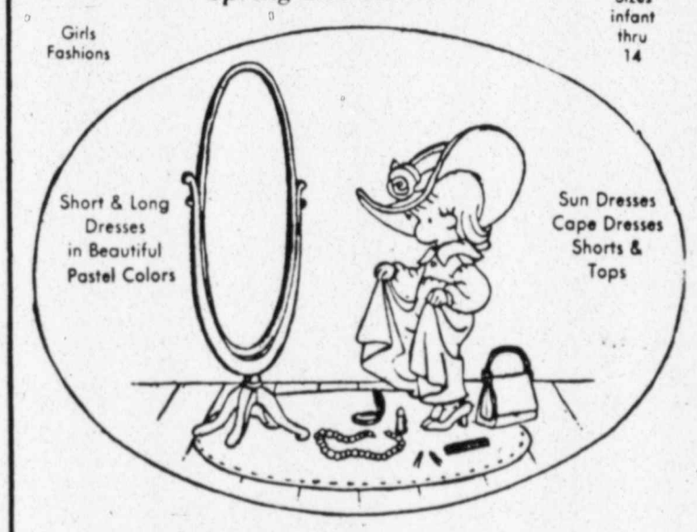

Reports reaching Tehran said armored vehicles patrolled the streets of Qom and other southern cities Thursday, but there were no reports of violence.

At least nine persons died and hundreds were injured in 10 hours of rioting in Qom Tuesday, where demonstators burned stores and attacked trains and buses.

The city was the scene of the year's first major anti-government violence in January, shortly after President Carter's visit.

Beavers Creating Problems In Idaho

By SUE MANNING

MOSCOW, Idaho (AP) — Beavers are a dam nuisance for the folks in Latah County.

A growing population of the creatures is blamed for dammed up creeks, plugged culverts, flooded pastures and fields, and treeless gardens.

County conservation officer Steve Agte estimates close to 1,000 beavers live in Latah county — approximately one for every square mile in the county of 28,000 people.

Agte said he could not put a dollar figure on damage done the past five years, but hundreds of trees have been felled by the dam builders. A beaver colony even plugged up a culvert last year causing a road to be washed out.

Bolville's main residential district also was hit last year when a colony of beavers started chomping down front yard trees. And County Commissioner Garry Morris lost an entire windbreak, more than 25 willow trees, to a colony.

"It's instinctive. They just dam up flowing water" even if it is in a farm or urban area, Agte said. "They go into a valley, dam it up, eat themselves out of house and home and pack up and move on."

Heavily wooded areas around Moscow and other towns are ribboned with streams, rivers, lakes and ponds. One beaver can chew down a 6 or 7-inch-thick tree every night, strip the bark clean, eat the fiber and chop what is left into sticks for its dam.

Agte says the problem has arisen because the county's human population has been on the rise, taking up open space that belonged to the beavers.

At the same time, the beaver population has increased because the price of pelts has dropped in the last five years and trappers have lost interest in stalking the animals. In addition, the beaver also has been placed on Idaho's protected species list so hunters must abide by state-controlled trapping guidelines.

Agte said fish and game agents trap the animals as fast as complaints come in, carting the beavers off to uninhabited areas of the county.

"Most people don't want the beavers destroyed, just relocated," he said.

Valuable Painting Returned To FBI

BOSTON (UPI) — A $100,000 painting by 19th-century American artist Fitz Hugh Lane, which disappeared from a delivery truck two weeks ago, has been returned to the FBI.

Special agent Richard Bates said Wednesday the seascape, titled "Brace's Rock," was brought to the FBI's Boston office "by an individual who identified himself to the FBI, but wished his identity to remain confidential."

Consultant Urges Care In Leasing

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Any firm renting large office space knows it needs legal and architectural advice, but it needs a lot more than that, says Kenneth D. Laub, real estate broker and consultant.

"It simply won't do to depend on lawyers or architects without special expertise in the complexity of modern leasing," said Laub, who has negotiated leases for blue chip clients in a number of cities for office space valued at several hundred million dollars in the nine years since he established his firm.

The 39-year-old Laub, who has offices in New York, Dallas and Beverly Hills, recently concluded a two-year, $200 million deal, one of the largest in New York City history, involving sale of Two New York Plaza and the leasing and financing of One New York Plaza.

Renting office space is a far cry from walking in and signing on the dotted line because the price and location seem right," he said.

"New quarters — ideally located, economical and efficient — will not be found by chance ... You will find yourself negotiating with landlords, and brokers who act as renting agents for landlords, who are skilled in the negotiation of a leasing transaction. They are experienced in representing their own interests when they negotiate".

In a booklet on the problems a corporation is likely to meet in the process of negotiating for space, Laub highlights the following pitfalls:

—Failure to get the space area count right. When the landlord says the space contains so many square feet, that usually includes some space that is shared partly with other tenants or is not really usable.

—Failure to interpret the escalation clauses in the lease correctly. This can lead to costly surprises.

—Not insisting on a clear formula for division of operating expenses. "Carelessness about this can make the real annual rent 75 cents to a $1 a square foot higher than the tenant expects."

—Failure to make a full study of the potential tax liability of the building and what effect that will have on the escalation clauses of the lease. The common failure is to overlook one of several taxes. Another is in not realizing that the age of a building has a great deal to do with how it is assessed for taxation.

—Cost of living clause. This often is a separate escalation expense that comes on top of operating expense and tax escalation.

—Remodeling. The cost of remodeling offices to suit new tenants has gone up enormously and unless the landlord's "workletter" defining his obligations in the matter is clear and definite, the tenant may find himself stuck for most of the bill.

—Failure to get the electrical rate. There are several formulas for office electrical charges in leases and not choosing the most economical for your business could be quite expensive.

—Not understanding the difference between subleasing rights and lease assignment rights and failure to obtain both rights in order to protect the tenant company from being trapped in a long, costly lease if business conditions change.

Town Hopes To Help Young Girl

CAMBRIDGE, Wis. (AP) — Like most other 10-year-olds, Jacki Behm wants to be pretty.

If the residents of towns in this area have their way, she will be.

This year's Jacki Behm Benefit Dance will mark the fifth consecutive year that Jacki's friends and neighbors have held the fundraiser to help pay for operations to repair the severe facial disfiguration she was born with.

The dance, scheduled for tonight at nearby London, is sponsored by the Jefferson County March of Dimes and usually raises about $1,000 for Jacki's hospital costs.

Jacki, the youngest of five children and a fourth-grader at Cambridge Elementary School, already has had about a dozen operations to remove a tumor on her tongue, shorten her jaw and reshape her chin and lips. Four more operations, including skin grafting to help correct discoloration, are scheduled for this summer.

"Everybody cares so much, it's almost easy," said Lois Febock, an organizer of the annual benefit. "All I have to do is mention the dance and people start saying, 'What can I do to help?'"

Local people donate their time to organize the dance, a band donates the polka music and the Cambridge Jaycees donate the door prizes.

Mrs. Febock said Jacki's playmates do not seem to notice she looks different.

"The doctors say when they're done she'll look a thousand percent better," Mrs. Behm said. "When the doctor tells her she's scheduled for surgery, she goes home and packs a suitcase."

She would say only that the operations have cost the family thousands of dollars. A friend put the cost at $7,000 to $8,000.

Because the Behms, who live north of London in Waterloo, own their home and land, they are not eligible for financial assistance available to other families with children like Jacki.

"But don't make it sound like a sob story," Mrs. Behm said. "What's important is the way everybody from all the towns around here chips in to help. The moral support is just incredible. When Jacki's in the hospital and I have to be away from home, they even bake bread and help clean my house."

Millions Of Americans Growing Plants

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press Writer

There is a swing toward growing pets — plants.

About half of the 75 million households in the United States have at least one plant, says M. Truman Fossum, head of Marketing Facts for Floriculture in Washington.

In April, Florists' Transworld Delivery (FTD) conducted a National Green Ribbon Pet Plant Contest with prizes, including a trip to Mexico. Forms were available at 16,000 shops to help contestants tell "What my pet plant means to me," and provide other information about their green friends.

Here is what some plant fanciers say about their botanical buddies:

Dr. Richard S. Bass, New York City podiatrist: "I must admit that plants are far less anxiety-producing than animals. I feel more relaxed around plants. They make more sense as pets, especially in cosmopolitan settings."

Baseball relief pitcher Tug McGraw, of the Philadelphia Phillies, has a hanging plant and says, "better it should hang than my curve ball."

All-Pro football defensive end Fred Dryer, Los Angeles Rams, has 200 plants in his apartment.

Tennis star Virginia Wade professes, "I wouldn't be without my plants. They're all my pets. As I travel so much, I always arrange for their care, and look forward to seeing their progress when I return home."

No doubt you've heard that many people talk to their plants, play music for them, keep them in the shower room where the humidity helps them. A Bronx resident takes a pet fern for walks in the rain.

The Brooklyn Botanical Garden reports that one-third of all calls received involve ailing plants and inquiries as to vitamins, food, and force feeding.

"If I bring the sick plant in can you take a look at it?" That's a common inquiry. So is, "What can I do to revive it?"

Some people have been known to take plants on flying vacations rather than entrust them to neighbors (and possibly endanger friendship because of lackadaisical care).

Plants make inexpensive pets, but some can be very expensive, such as rare orchids selling for $2,000 to $7,000. Some plants (just as are animals) are on the endangered species list. The most threatened group, according to the National Park and Conservation Magazine, is the cactus. It notes that more than 25 percent of the cacti native to the United States are in danger of disappearing.

Because of one endangered species, the Furbish Lousewort, described as a rather dowdy member of the snapdragon family, the Corps of Engineers may have to change site plans for the Dickey Lincoln Dam in an area of Maine where the Furbish grows.

Why do people select certain plants? Because, they say, they have specific personality traits. Comedienne Phyllis Diller's favorite is a rubber plant named Robert. We won't ask questions about it.

New Garden Book

"Greenhouse Grow How," by John H. Pierce (published by Plants Alive Magazine, Seattle, Wash.) was two years in the making and contains 30 years of practical experience by the author. The book, according to publisher Ted Marston, "goes well behind the pretty plants and fresh food and helps make it happen."

The well-illustrated book contains 400 illustrations in color and black and white, and will give the greenhouse hobbyist a lot of know-how about building and maintaining structures, basic botany, heating, cooling and care of plants.

Garner Ted Armstrong Will Quit TV Programs

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The half-hour television commentaries by Garner Ted Armstrong will be discontinued and the 48-year-old Worldwide Church of God evangelist will relinquish his executive titles in the church and its related Ambassador College, his father says.

Board chairman Herbert G. Armstrong also has announced that he has abandoned plans to move the College from Pasadena to Big Sandy, Tex., because the move would cost some $5 million dollars.

The four-year, liberal arts school is an arm of the Worldwide Church of God. The Big Sandy campus had closed last year, and students and faculty were moved to Pasadena.

The announcements came amid persistent rumors of a power struggle within the church and college. But Stanley Rader, the elder Armstrong's personal adviser, denied that there was a rift in the organization.

Rader said the younger Armstrong wanted relief from administrative duties in order to devote all of his time to radio evangelism.

"Mr. Armstrong wants his son to dedicate himself to that field and so, for the time being, we will drop out of television," Rader said.

Ex-Adviser Blasts Tax Reform Plan

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A former economic adviser to three presidents delivered a blistering attack on the Carter administration for what he called its "anti-business, anti-free enterprise" tax reform proposals.

Pierre Rinfret, former counsel to Presidents John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon, told members of the American Feed Manufacturers Association on Wednesday that Carter really wants a national redistribution of wealth.

He said Carter's plan to cut back allowable deductions and increase the capital gains tax exemplifies "a new philosphy" in the nation aimed at victimizing people in upper income brackets.

Rinfret, who directs his own international consulting firm, said the tax package probably will be approved by Congress despite criticism from Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means committee.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: What's this about Egyptian President Anwar Sadat coming out with a record album? — F.T.M., St. Louis.

A: CBS Records has planned such an album, titling it "44 Hours in Jerusalem." It covers Sadat's peace mission last November. While not yet available in the U.S., it is being sold in English in some countries, including Israel. Also distributed in Hebrew with an Arabic version being readied. Variety's Frank Meyer's comment: "It is a marvelous achievement and ought to be in the library of anyone concerned at all with the larger moments of history...However, Israeli reporters ask questions as stupid as some of their counterparts."

Q: What was Redd Foxx's chief gripe about the up-and-down ratings of his ABC show? — The Lauries, Trenton, N.J.

A: Foxx was "Redd" when he scanned the Nielsen ratings an commented, "Nielsen never gives a black show the right readings because they don't have those machines in black homes across America the way they should." He also went on to tell the readers of Jet magazine to write a letter, or card, or one word or anything to the network so he could show them there are at least 20 million blacks watching.

Q: How tall is Tom Jones? — Jo.A., Columbia, Mo.

A: This may be a tall story — but through the years Tom has been described variously as being 5-foot-6 to 6-foot-5, depending on the size of his shoes. The answer we prefer to believe was given to us by his press relations consultant in 1969, Chris Hutchins. "Tom Jones' height," he wrote from London is "5 feet 11 inches. He comes up to 6 feet with the small Cuban heels he has on most of the boots made for him. He usually wears ankle boots, rarely shoes."

Q: I hear that the warm way in which the Helen Hayes-Fred Astaire two-hour TV love story was accepted created talk that the two theatrical greats may be offered a monthly series. Anything to this? — Mr. & Mrs. R.B., Phoenix, Ariz.

A: Could be. If both are physically up to it and if the story line does not wear thin, it could develop into one of the most consistently high rated attractions on TV.

Q: What was Rodney Dangerfield's comment during a Miller's Lite Beer commercial filmed in Key West? — Danny W., Milwaukee, Wis.

A: "I never get respect on a beach," he complained. "When I was a kid, my old man would give the lifeguard $5 to keep an eye off me . . ."

Fred Astaire's pairing with Helen Hayes was so warmly received it could become a monthly series.

Q: Was Baretta (Robert Blake) once with an act called the Three Little Hillbillies? — Fran Platt, Syracuse, N.Y.

A: That was when the tough cop was only 2 years old! Since then he's run the gamut of roles; Mickey in the Our Gang comedies. Little Beaver the Indian sidekick of Wild Bill Elliot in the Red Ryder series. Moving from that Western into a small role (as a paperboy) with Bogart in "Treasure of Sierra Madre." He also scowled at John Garfield in "Harmony," and played Simon the Zealot in "The Greatest Story Ever Told." In "P.T.109," played Bucky Harris to Cliff Robertson's John F. Kennedy.

Florida Panel Passes Bill For Inmates

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A bill to compensate Freddie Pitts and Wilbert Lee for the 12 years they were imprisoned until someone else confessed to committing the murders they were convicted of cleared a legislative committee Wednesday.

After hearing a last-minute appeal from Gov. Reubin Askew, the Senate Finance and Tax Committee voted 7-5 to approve a claims bill awarding the men $150,000.

Claims bills for the men have been before the Legislature since 1976, but this is the first year a committee in either house has approved the measure.

Both Pitts and Lee, who were present for the committee vote, said they were pleased by the outcome, but worried that time might run out before the bill clears all hurdles.

The two men spent 12 years in prison, 9½ of them on Death Row, for the murders of two Port St. Joe gas station attendants.

Askew, in a written message read before the vote, said: "I consider this responsible legislation and I support it wholeheartedly."

Company Says FBI Memo Supports Claim

By PETER MATTIACE

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — An attorney for Resorts International Inc. claims an internal memo by the FBI's Miami office is the first major government document proving Resorts International Inc. has no ties with organized crime.

Joel A. Sterns, attorney for Resorts, which hopes to open Atlantic City's first legal casino in 2½ weeks, said the memorandum is "a significant document" that will help dispel rumors the Florida-based conglomerate has been connected to the underworld.

However, Bill Williams, special agent in charge of the FBI's Miami office, said the memorandum only applies to organized crime files in Miami.

Sterns revealed the FBI memo at the opening day of hearings by the New Jersey Casino Control Commission into Resorts' application for a temporary casino permit for its Resorts International Hotel Casino in Atlantic City.

The single-page document, written in October 1976, was released by the FBI in Washington last Thursday under a Freedom of Information Act petition by Rolling Stone magazine, Sterns said.

Sterns said Rolling Stone sought the FBI documents in defense of a libel suit filed by Resorts. Rolling Stone said in a May 1976 article that Resorts once had ties to the Central Intelligence Agency.

The first paragraph of the memo, circulated by Sterns, states: "A review of the files of the Miami office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation reveals that there is no indication that Resorts International, or Intertel Inc., a subsidiary of Resorts International, have any ties with organized crime."

Sterns said he didn't know what prompted the FBI memo, but he noted that Resorts was the major contributor to New Jersey's casino referendum in 1976.

Williams, in a telephone interview, said the "letterhead memorandum" was prepared "for a law enforcement agency outside the United States because they had some concern about an affiliate of Intertel."

Intertel is Resorts' super-secret security subsidiary headed by Robert Peloquin, former head of the Justice Department's organized crime strike force.

Williams would not say which government requested the information, but he said it was not the Bahamas, where Resorts operates two casinos and owns four resort hotels.

Sterns said he revealed the FBI memo because of recent statements by the New Jersey Citizens Casino Surveillance Coalition that it had "damaging information" about Resorts. The coalition is largely made up of clergymen who opposed gambling in the 1976 referendum.

Before the 3½ hour hearing, the commission approved regulations for slot machines that require at least 5 percent of all slots be nickel machines and 10 percent be quarter machines.

Laser Phones Studied

CHICAGO (AP) — An experimental laser-glass wire communications system will become part of Bell Telephone's regular communications network in 1980 after a year-long test showed that it "performed even better than expected," an official says.

Charles H. Elmendorf, assistant vice president for American Telephone and Telegraph, said this week, "This dramatic milestone in communications means ... we are much closer to eventual widespread use of individual private television channels, advanced undersea communications and improved long-distance service."

"We've proved the technology works," Elmendorf added at a news conference. "Now it's a matter of economics. The widespread use of the technology depends on demand, on how much people are willing to pay for the services that are available."

Residential video telephones "are still way out there in the distance, but we can see its potential more clearly now." He added that trans-oceanic use of the glass cables "is technologically possible, but still a long way from reality."

The experimental system in Chicago became fully operational on May 11, 1977. The system runs about 1.5 miles under Loop streets and carries voice, data and video communications on pulses of laser light transmitted through hair-thin glass fibers.

FAA Seeks Seatbelt Regulation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Administration wants to outlaw flying with your seatbelt unfastened, roaming the aisles of an airliner to stretch your legs or standing during the flight to chat or have a drink.

If the agency has its way, travelers will have to stay strapped in their seats from start to finish of any flight except for quick trips to the lavatory.

It's all in the interest of safety, says the FAA.

A National Transportation Safety Board official says the FAA proposal, far from being a new idea, is "something that's been kicked around for 25 years," almost every time an unbuckled passenger is injured by in-flight turbulence. Each time in the past, he says, the idea has been dropped as unreasonable.

Passengers now are required to sit and buckle up only during takeoff, on landing and occasionally in flight when seatbelt signs are turned on because of anticipated turbulence. Airlines, charged with enforcing the rule, have found it difficult to get full compliance with even that limited requirement.

"The (new) regulation is being proposed in an effort to prevent injuries caused by unexpected clear air turbulence or sudden aircraft maneuvers," an FAA spokesman said Thursduy.

"The only exception would be when a passenger goes to the restroom or when a crew member authorizes a passenger to unbuckle the belt and move about in the cabin."

Crew members would authorize a passenger to walk around during flight only in rare instances when they needed the passenger's assistance, a spokesman said.

The new regulation, if adopted, would apply to scheduled flights, charter flights and even aircraft operated by air travel clubs. The FAA gave the public and the industry until Aug. 11 to comment in writing on the proposal.

Safety board records showed 135 incidents involving turbulence and eight incidents involving evasive maneuvers that injured passengers or crewmembers from 1967 through 1976.

Safety board officials said more than one person was hurt in a number of the incidents, but none was killed. They said injuries ranged from bruises to broken wrists or ankles, cracked pelvises and head injuries.

The FAA said its proposed rules change was prompted in part by a request from the Air Line Pilots Association.

If the new rule is adopted, FAA officials said, passengers who fail to stay buckled up need not worry about fines or any other penalty more severe than the nagging of a flight attendant.

"As a practical matter, I don't think we have any way of taking enforcement action against passengers," said one official. "We'd rely on the airlines to keep them reminded. Most people tend to be law-abiding."

Ski Star No Longer Flattered By Rumor

By JURATE KAZICKAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Suzy Chaffee says she was flattered at first by stories linking her romantically with Sen. Edward Kennedy. But she now says the rumors were sexist — and untrue.

The feelings of flattery ended when the stories became so numerous they made her worry about Kennedy's wife, Joan, said Miss Chaffee in an interview Thursday.

"I really felt weird. Everything was so blown out of proportion," she said. "And I realized how sexist it all was. If there were more women involved in important issues of the day, no one would instantly assume that when you talk to a senator you're having an affair."

The rumors about the Democratic senator from Massachusetts and Miss Chaffee, an Olympic downhill and free-style ski star and women's sports activist, began when they were photographed skiing together at Aspen, Colo., last winter. Mrs. Kennedy had stayed home.

"When I skiied with President Ford in Vail nobody linked us romantically," she said. "But Americans love to project romantic fantasies about Kennedy. He has that charisma."

Miss Chaffee said their relationship was "strictly platonic" and that she had met with Kennedy to lobby for women's rights issues.

"You can't get things done in this town without the help of Kennedy," she said.

Kennedy has commented on Miss Chaffee's interest in legislation and said, "I wish her well." Joan Kennedy told Newsweek magazine that stories about her husband and Miss Chaffee were "a lot of nonsense."

Miss Chaffee, who still blushes at mention of Kennedy's name, said she was trying to be positive about the whole thing.

"I'm not going to let all this bum me out. I feel I can turn all this around to be a constructive force for all the causes that are important to me," she said between sips of carrot juice at a health food cafeteria.

It was an appropriate setting for someone who is firmly committed to good health for women through sports. Miss Chaffee, tall and lean, is 31 but says that biologically she is 15, according to test of her heart and lungs.

She has been lobbying for stricter enforcement of a federal law banning sex discrimination in public school and college athletic programs.

"I admired Betty Ford's gutsiness in talking about her problem with drugs and alcohol because that made people aware of the terrible health problems so many women have, but no one has been talking about solutions," she said.

With the federal law, "we can eliminate a generation of women who might have become hooked on drugs and alcohol because like men they will have sports to release tension, develop full potential and improve self-image," said Miss Chaffee.

"Kennedy heads the Senate Health Committee and I made him realize that (the law) affects the health of over 50 percent of the country — women." (Kennedy heads the Senate Human Resources subcommittee on health and scientific research.)

Miss Chaffee said she also has been working with Kennedy and his aides on the Amateur Athletic Act, of which he was a sponsor, and the Healthy American Coalition, which he heads with Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D. She also has been trying to organize a coalition of senators supporting ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

The indefatigable Miss Chaffee, who said she gets part of her energy from an hour's worth of running every morning, hopes to attend a world women's sports festival next year in Iran.

At a private dinner party in Washington Wednesday night, she cornered Iranian ambassador Ardeshir Zahedi to discuss her ideas for the event. Miss Chaffee skiied with Empress Farah in the Iranian Alps in January and calls the athletic wife of the Shah "one of the best role models for women interested in sports."

Probaby best known for her Chapstick commercials, Miss Chaffee is now working on a television pilot for a sports show "that will inspire people to get out there and do the sport."

"I've been called a visionary," she said, blushing. "But I really want to make a contribution to the world. I want to communicate sports and sell sports as a way to make the world healthier."

Attendants Eye Rule On Rafts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Flight attendants say federal authorities should stop letting U.S. airlines fly as much as 160 miles from land, sometimes over freezing arctic waters or shark-infested seas, without life rafts.

"There are too many variables involved to hope that if something goes wrong over water the plane will be able to make it safely to land," says Del Mott, safety director of the Association of Flight Attendants.

"We cannot become involved with wishful thinking when it comes to the safety of the people on those planes," she said.

Miss Mott recommended Thursday equipping all airliners with combination life raft-escape slides like those now carried in the doors of jumbo jets because "almost all commercial flights are over water at some point during the flight, expecially during takeoff or landing."

A Federal Aviation Administration spokesman confirmed that U.S. jets are allowed to fly as much as 160 miles from land without carrying rafts. But he said the planes are required to maintain a high enough altitude to get back to land in case of trouble.

The spokesman also said most rafts are designed for use only in planned "ditchings" at sea, rather than crashes, and must be hauled out of storage lockers in advance of a watery touchdown. The plane that crashed off Pensacola, Fla., was in the water before anyone knew anything was amiss.

There has not been a ditching at sea in the past 15 years, and international regulations allow airliners to fly as much as 400 miles from land without rafts, the spokesman said.

More conservative U.S. regulations generally require rafts on planes operating more than 50 miles from shore. The FAA has granted special permission for six airlines — Alaska, Braniff, Delta, Eastern, National and Western — to fly as much as 160 miles from shore without rafts on certain routes.

"The exceptions specify the type of aircraft, the route and the minimum altitude allowed," an FAA spokesman said. "Our whole point is that it's extremely unlikely for all the engines to go out and that in case of trouble they can get back to land."

The flight attendants' union said some of the routes on which exceptions have been granted, particularly those flown by Western and Alaska, take planes over icy waters where humans could survive for only a few minutes without rafts.

It said other routes pass over the Gulf of Mexico and other bodies of water where shark attacks are possible and where passengers without rafts might survive only a few hours in any event.

"While the chances of a plane going down in the water are slim, they do exist and muut be considered," Miss Mott said.

Florida School Wants To Pay Poor Readers

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Jacksonville's school system wants to use a federal grant to pay 102 poor readers from low-income families while they attend summer school.

"I think it is a form of welfare allowing a certain group of students to go to summer school that otherwise couldn't go because they need to help support their families with summer income," Superintendent Herb Sang said Thursday.

He said those 11th graders who scored the poorest on the initial statewide functional literacy tests last fall and whose family income is under $6,000 will have priority if the $80,300 grant is available.

Each pupil would be paid $2.65 an hour or a total of $477 for the six-week summer term. The grant also would provide salaries for six teachers.

Assistant superintendent Larry Paulk said there were protests that the payments appear to reward those who flunk.

School Board Chairman William Carter said he doesn't know all the details of the grant application and isn't certain how the board will react when it meets Monday. But he said it might be handled differently.

"If these students need a job and we want to give them a job after summer school, it's OK to pay them for that work. But I cannot see paying them while they are in school when we don't pay others to attend."

Sentence Set In Robbery

A 29-year-old Colorado man received a three-year prison term Thursday after pleading guilty in 72nd District Court to charges he robbed an East Lubbock drive-in restaurant in 1974.

Judge Denzil Bevers assessed the punishment to David Gonzales Lechuga of Bordoun, Colo., after Lechuga admitted robbing the Andrews Burger Drive-In at 1710 Southeast Drive on Jan. 10, 1974.

Lechuga said another man allegedly involved in that heist was carrying a blank pistol.

Authorities said the duo made off with about $30 after walking up to a indow of the firm and demanding the money from manager Mark Corley.

Corley told officers then one man wore a toboggan and a scarf around his mouth, while the second bandit wore a red ski mask. Police arrested Lechuga and another man soon after receiving a confidential tip about the heist.

Also pleading guilty Thursday was 20-year-old Jonita Tinney Harrell of Midland.

She received a four-year probated sentence from Bevers after pleading guilty to a credit card abuse charge.

Stipulated testimony indicated she used a card belonging to Suzanne M. Howell to make purchases from Sears on April 22, 1977.

Bevers ordered her to pay $1,846.75 restitution.

The spicebush is a North American deciduous shrub of the laurel family which grows from four to 20 feet high. Its twigs are smooth and aromatic and it produces bright yellow flowers.

Man Cites Theft Of Rocker

Disappearance of another assortment of goods boosted the city's property crimes losses in the most recently reported incidents.

J.B. Merritt of 4412-A 29th St. complained that someone stole a $700 160-year-old platform rocker from his front porch during a 1-hour period Thursday afternoon.

Jimmy Dayle King of 2002 68th St. was smarting over the loss of two saddles, two bridles and two blankets from a storage room in his barn at 7905 Oak Ave. The burglary reportedly cost the owner $745.

A landscaper, Michael Evan Crump of 3424 Frankford Ave., No. 1A, told officers someone stole a $200 lawnmower and a $228 trimmer from the 2300-block of 54th St. Thursday.

Fred C. Raschke of 5401 78th St. said $400 worth of lawn and garden equipment was stolen from the storage shed of a house he had for sale at 5221 25th St.

According to Jean Ann Estill of 2309-A 16th St., two television sets and a stereo, together valued at $400, were taken from her home recently. Reports indicated entry was gained by prying a door.

Elvin L. Kelley, a brakeman with the Arlington Railroad, told police that following an argument with a man at a club at the Tahoka traffic circle, the man threatened him with a "luger-type" pistol.

Kelley, who is from Quanah, said the man thrust the gun into Kelley's stomach and said, "It may not be me, but you're gonna die."

Nicolasa Garcia, of 2700 Fordham St. Apt. No. 32, also reported an aggravated assault to police. Miss Garcia said she and a friend were walking in the 2700 block of Fordham Street when a young man approached them, shouting obscenities and throwing rocks.

Miss Garcia suffered a gash on the left side of her head and a bruise on her right leg from the rocks. The man also struck her with a stick, producing a bruise on her left arm, she said.

An 18-year-old suspect was arrested in connection with the incident.

Buddy Gibson of 3506 E. Baylor St. reported that a man came to his home Wednesday afternoon complaining about some work Gibson had done on the suspect's car.

The man reportedly beat Gibson, leaving a small cut over his left eye.

Burglars Wednesday night and Thursday morning hit at least five homes and a business.

Burglars with a fancy for jewelry hit the Geneva Griffin home at 4601 10th St., taking with them a ladies' gold bracelet watch and a diamond ring. Total loss in the burglary was $800.

Burglars broke into both units of a duplex under construction at 4413 75th St., and took $816 worth of merchandise, including a fireplace mantle, smoke detector and a garbage disposal.

The duplex is owned by Ed A. Chauncey.

Burglars climbed the fire escape at Gardski's Loft restaurant at 2009 Broadway and took a door off its hinges to get inside that building. They took with them a reel-to-reel stereo system and about 42 bottles of liquor.

Restaurant owner Bob Skibell estimated the value of the goods taken and the damage to the building at $1,600.

Tools were the primary target of car burglars Wednesday night and Thursday morning as they hit three different vehicles and walked away with more than $1,300 in equipment.

Car burglars hit two vehicles belonging to South Plains Electric Co-op at two different sites, taking a combined total of about $600 worth of tools. One truck was parked at 4718 63rd St. and the other was located at 1917 60th St.

W.H. Womack reported that burglars pried open the vent window on the driver's side of his 1973 Chevrolet pickup truck and took $721 worth of tools from the vehicle. The truck was parked at his home at 5431 44th St.

John Deiffer told police thieves took his $1,300 sailboat and trailer from in front of his 2619 30th St. home. The trailer was hitched to his car.

Thieves also got a trailer loaded with caulking equipment from an eastside parking lot at the Health Sciences Center Hospital, at 4th Street and Joliet Avenue. W.B. Poe, a construction worker there, valued the loss at $300.

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

For the Andersons and Sasanos, graduation this year is a family affair. And it seems almost everybody wants to get in on the act.

The Anderson and Sasano families each have three members graduating this spring. The variety of degrees the "students" are receiving demonstrates the diverse educational opportunities in Lubbock.

Dr. Joseph Sasano and his wife Claire, 4520 Ninth Street, have a 17-year-old daughter, Caroline, who is about to graduate from Coronado High School. The Sasanos' 12-year-old son, Todd, will be getting his sixth-grade diploma from St. Elizabeth's Catholic School.

And Dr. Sasano himself, a cardiologist with the local office of the Veterans Administration, is a member of the Class of '78. He is receiving a master's degree in mass communications from Texas Tech University.

Meanwhile, across town, A.D. and Flossie Anderson of Route 7 have just enjoyed another kind of multiple-graduation rite. In ceremonies conducted by the Lubbock Independent School District, Flossie and the Andersons' son and daughter-in-law all received their General Educational Development (GED) certificates, the equivalent of high school diplomas.

Flossie Anderson is the head cook at the Alderson Junior High School cafeteria. She and her son, truck mechanic Jimmie Wayne Anderson, and his wife Theresa Ann — also of Route 7 — were among those honored at the school system's annual adult education recognition program.

Also honored was Freda Popejoy, Flossie Anderson's supervisor at the Alderson cafeteria and a classmate in the GED study program.

The Andersons and Mrs. Popejoy attended evening classes at Alderson since Christmas, working toward their certificates. To qualify for their GEDs, they each passed a battery of five tests, covering a range of academic subjects, administered last month by the school district's adult education department.

"I had been hearing about the adult education program for some time and thought it would be a challenge," said Flossie Anderson, who had left school at Sundown after the seventh grade when she and her husband married 40 years ago.

"My supervisor and I went to the GED classes one night and it was such a great experience, I asked Theresa why she doesn't come back to school to get her diploma. Well, Theresa got Jimmie interested and then we had practically the whole family involved. It was really a thrill for me," Mrs. Anderson said.

She said Jimmie had left school after the 11th grade and Theresa, the 10th grade. Both had attended Lubbock High.

Mrs. Sasano said life is somewhat hectic with her husband and two children receiving diplomas. "It's a lot of graduation ceremonies to attend," she said.

Her husband has been going to Tech for "a little over a year" to get his master's, Mrs. Sasano, a teacher at St. Elizabeth's, said. Dr. Sasano plans to use his new degree in mass communications to facilitate "better communication between doctor and patient," Mrs. Sasano said.

Dr. Sasano is among 2,000 Tech students getting diplomas in ceremonies today and Saturday at the university.

Caroline Sasano, Coronado student body president and homecoming queen, will graduate from high school later this month. She plans to attend St. Mary's University in Notre Dame, Ind., this fall.

Todd Sasano will get his sixth-grade diploma in ceremonies at St. Elizabeth's this month and will go on to Mackenzie Junior High next year.

The combined commencement sermon for Lubbock's five public high schools — Coronado, Dunbar, Estacado, Lubbock and Monterey — will be held at 2 p.m. May 21 in Municipal Coliseum.

On May 25, graduation exercises will be held at 8 p.m. for Estacado in Municipal Auditorium and Monterey in Municipal Coliseum.

On May 26, graduation exercises will be conducted at 8 p.m. for Coronado in Municipal Coliseum, Dunbar in Municipal Auditorium and Lubbock Evening High School in the Wilson Junior High auditorium.

On May 27, Lubbock High will hold its graduation exercises in Municipal Coliseum at 8 p.m.

CLASS OF '78 — Caroline Sasano, left, her brother Todd and their dad Dr. Joseph Sasano all are members of the Class of '78. Caroline is graduating from Coronado High, Todd is getting his sixth-grade diploma from St. Elizabeth's Catholic School and Dr. Sasano is receiving a mass communications degree from Texas Tech. Research Indicates Movies Relax Dental Patients

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Between the antiseptic smell, squirming children, out-of-date magazines and downright fear, a visit to the dentist is a nerve-wracking experience for many people.

But researchers at the University of Iowa College of Dentistry think they have found a way to help ease those tensions — movies in the waiting room.

In a recent study, researchers found new dental patients were less nervous after viewing video tapes while waiting for their appointments. Although it's not like watching "Gone With the Wind" or "Star Wars," the Iowa researchers say viewing a pleasant experience beforehand can make facing the dentist and his shiny instruments a lot easier.

"We're trying to relieve the anxiety people have due to the fear of the unknown," said Dr. Henrietta Logan, assistant professor in the College of Dentistry.

"Dental treatment is a very anxious time for patients. They don't know what's going to happen to them. There's also a fear of pain. The mouth is a very vulnerable area."

The study focused on three groups of patients ranging in age from 18 to 73. Two groups saw films and the third was used as a control group for comparison.

One group saw excerpts of a travelogue about Iowa City and the other saw a film that featured a patient having a good experience during a routine visit to the dentist. Dr. Logan said the anxiety levels of all three groups were tested and the two that saw the films were less tense than the control group.

The study also found the film on the visit to the dentist was preferred because it was more highly recommended by the study group for other patients to view. Dr. Logan said the group that saw the travelogue may have been less anxious becuuse it served as a diversion.

Researchers said the project was important because while numerous studies have been conducted on children during visit nto the dentist, little research has been done on anxiety in adults in a dental setting.

In addition, Dr. Logan said dentists who find ways to reduce anxiety in their patients may have fewer cancellations, adding future research will focus on that area.

"There appears to be a relationship between high anxiety and cancellation of dental appointments," she said. "Hopefully, as patient anxiety is reduced, the number of return-visit cancellations will drop."

Dr. Logan said the long-term outcome of the study may be viewing areas in dental waiting rooms, perhaps equipped so patients could select their own tapes. Possible subjects could include the education of dental students and interesting research projects in dentistry.

"I definitely think that it could be very useful to have patients view video tapes on their initial visits," she said.

Panda Shows Interest In Mate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hsing-Hsing, the male giant panda in the National Zoo, failed again this spring to mate with Ling-Ling, his female friend. But zoo officials believe he's no pussycat.

Up to now, Hsing-Hsing's reputation has been pretty much of a zero. Ling-Ling, at 7 years somewhat older and slightly bigger, had even appeared to frighten him with her mating screams.

This spring, the macho in Hsing-Hsing began to show up. He was much more aggressive and Ling-Ling did not intimidate him with her female ways.

"He was really worked up. We haven't seen that before," said William Xanten, the zoo's curator of large mammals who has been trying to breed the two pandas since they arrived from China in 1972.

"I think at this stage we're a little closer," said Xanten, but despite all the good intentions by both parties, they never did get their act together in a dozen or so close encounters.

"It looked like this year both animals were just fumbling around." he said.

This spring's efforts included a lovers' quarrel — followed by the pandas spending a weekend together for the first time.

To get started, zoo officials put Ling-Ling on a diet to slim her down from a fat 296 pounds to a svelte 278. On April 17, Hsing-Hsing, weighing 273, was allowed into Ling-Ling's enclosure for the first time.

Thereafter, twice daily encounters were undertaken on selected dates until last Friday.

With Ling-Ling reported "in strong heat, very receptive," the two got together and appeared to have a heck of a fight with "lots of roars, lots of screaming," Xanten said.

It turned out to be more noise then combat and neither was hurt. The two kept to themselves for a short while and then got back together and there was "this aggressive vocalizing," Xanten said.

Intrigued zoo keepers left them together for the whole night and after feeding them separately Saturday, they got a second night in the same enclosure.

But even that didn't work. Monday, zoo official determined the would-be mating season was over.

Xanten said Hsing-Hsing has trouble "orienting himself" and Ling-Ling "sits down too soon," making for the same frustration that has characterized previous efforts.

Mating pandas in captivity is no easy matter. It has been done only in Peking and so far Chinese technical assistance has been sparse.

Zoo officials will try again in the fall, if Ling-Ling goes into heat, or next spring.

"I think it is just a question of having to wait," Xanten said. "In any case, there's nothing we can do."

Bill Planned To Aid Soldier's Parents

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A Congressman says he is preparing an appropriations bill that could result in insurance benefit payments to an Ann Arbor couple whose son was killed on Guadalcanal in 1942.

A Marine Corps search of records indicated the soldier, Pfc. Robert B. Huff, had no life insurance, the office of Rep. Robert Carr, D-E. Lansing, said Wednesday.

Area veterans' groups have been lobbying for payment of benefits to Huff's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Huff, ever since President Carter threw his support behind a measure to compensate the widow of Pvt. Eddie Slovik, who was shot during World War II, the only American soldier executed for desertion since the Civil War.

Carr's bill would provide up to $70,000 for Mr. and Mrs. Huff, the Congressman said.

Orbital Test Satellite Launched

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — After one explosion and four postponements, the European and U.S. space agencies hava managed a successul launch of a test communications satellite for western Europe, the Middle East and North Africa.

The Orbital Test Satellite was launched on schedule aboard a Delta Rocket at 6:59 p.m. Thursday and 25 minutes later was kicked into an initial transfer orbit ranging from 115 to 22,420 miles above Earth.

"We were all very pleased," said David Grimes, Delta project manager for NASA. "I feel immense relief. The Delta turned out to be a perfect bird. The orbit of the satellite is exactly as planned."

The Delta had not always been perfect for the project.

The first attempt to launch the OTS failed last Sept. 13 when the first stage of the Delta blew up 55 seconds after liftoff. Then the launch was set for May 4, but had to be delayed three times by technical problems.

"We are all fantastically happy," said Dr. Rene Collette, manager of fixed services communications program for the European Space Agency.

"Success was deserved. This kind of technology is dangerous," he said after the launch. "We have called home and everybody over there at ESA is jumping up and down and opening the French champagne ahead of us."

The new satellite and its experiments are considered the key to establishing a space communications system in the 1980s. The first of four or five operational satellites is planned for 1981, using an Ariane, a European rocket now under development, as the launch vehicle.

The 1,845-pound satellite can handle two television channels and 5,000 telephone calls simultaneously.

The first unsuccessful mission, costing $42 million, was insured for only $29 million. The launch Thursday had $51 million in coverage, however.

Senate's Financial Disclosure Reports Provide Little Data

WASHINGTON (AP) — Going through the Senate's new financial disclosure forms — due to be released later this month — is like watching one of those strip teasers who used to work the Southern carnival route. When all the hollering is over, not much more is showing than when the show started.

But never fear. Like the carnival barker, who always promises an "extra special" private show for those willing to toss in another buck or two, the Senate says it will reveal more next year.

All 100 members of the Senate are required to submit a detailed statement of their financial holdings by Monday, and the data is to be publicly released several days later.

But unlike the recently released House forms, the Senate statements do not show how much income a member earned from his outside interests or how much he collected for speaking to various groups. The Senate decided not to implement those provisions until 1979.

The result is that the public is unlikely to know much more this year about the senators it elects than it did previously.

There are several areas where the forms can conceal as much as they reveal, as a glance through the 12 forms already filed shows.

For example, if you knew Sen. Clifford Hansen owned one of those big cattle ranches in his native Wyoming, then you probably figured it would be worth somewhere around a million dollars.

So it's not going to help much to find that Hansen says he paid somewhere between $500,000 and $1 million for the property — especially since the Republican senator inadvertently disregarded the instructions to state when he made the purchase.

If you wonder how much he paid for his apartment in the exclusive Watergate in Washington, forget it. He didn't say.

And if Sen. James O. Eastland's assessment of his home's worth is any indication of value, Washington real estate prices are in for a sharp decline. The Mississippi Democrat valued his home in northwest Washington at between $15,000 and $50,000 — the price he paid for it in 1954.

If he sold it at those prices today, the line of buyers would stretch from his doorstep for miles to the Capitol.

Sen. William Scott, R-Va., no advocate of deficit spending, lists his assets at between $70,000 and $180,000 and says he has no debts worth reporting. All debts of more than $2,500 must be reported.

Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., lists debts of less than $5,000 and assets between $230,000 and $525,000.

Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., a balanced budget advocate, personally plays it a little closer to the margin, according to his report. He lists assets of between $120,000 and $330,000 — and liabilities of between $115,000 and $320,000.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says he owns 10 rental properties worth between $380,000 and $815,000, has $34,000 in the bank and owns stock of unknown value in four companies.

Of the early filers, probably the richest are Hansen and Sen. Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla. Bartlett lists assets of between $615,000 and $1.4 million and liabilities of between $100,000 and $200,000. Hansen's assets are his ranch and his Watergate apartment. His liabilities total $275,000.

Local Debaters Seek Funds For Trip

Craig Haynes and Mark Lanier have qualified for the nation's toughest debate tournament. But before they go, the two Coronado High students must pass another test of fast-talking — this time, to raise money for the trip.

Because of school district policies, the pair is ineligible for district-paid travel to the National Forensic League's annual competition at Northwestern University, outside Chicago, set June 18-25.

So Haynes, Lanier and other local speech students are soliciting donations and planning various fundraising activities for Saturday to pay the duo's way.

The Saturday activities include a garage sale on the parking lot of the Gibson Discount Center, 5025 50th St.; a carwash at Monterey High, 3211 47th St.; and bake sales at the Redbud Square, 13th Street and Slide Road, and at Furr's Family Center, 4426 34th St.

The activities will last from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Lanier said several merchants have donated items for the sales, and members of debate teams of other Lubbock high schools are contributing. He said the effort is aimed at raising about $1,500 — enough to cover entry fees, travel, and room and board for the two students and their sponsor, Coronado speech teacher Jacquelyn Jarrett.

The National Forensic League divides the nation into 100 debate districts. The team of Haynes and Lanier is representing the West Texas district, which includes such cities as San Angelo, San Antonio, Abilene, Midland, Odessa, Amarillo, El Paso and Plainview, Lanier said.

The two Coronado students won their district competition in Abilene in March. They are the first team from Lubbock to qualify for the national tournament in debate.

At the national contest, the Lubbock pair will debate other participating teams on the issue, "Resolved: that the federal government should guarantee comprehensive medical care to all citizens."

Besides debate, contestants will compete as individuals in one other speech category — oral interpretation, extemporaneous speaking or original oratory.

Both Lanier and Haynes have picked the third event, which consists of delivering an original persuasive speech.

The school district policies prohibit paying the students' way because the tournament is scheduled after the school year and because it involves an organization that is not officially a part of the district's curriculum.

Child Center Requests City's Aid

Almost a month ago, the Texas Migrant Council's child development center at 600 Ave. D was gutted by fire.

The center, serving 72 three-, four-and five-year-old children, lost most of its contents to the blaze, which erupted the night of April 17.

"We're really in a bad spot right now because we had no insurance on the contents," Maye Constancio, area supervisor for the Headstart program, said. "Right now, we have to depend on the public to support us at this time."

Mrs. Constancio said that they were able to salvage a few items from the center but "we could use puzzles, books, toys, blocks, tables and chairs for the children."

Besides items for the children, she said the facility also could use lumber to build shelves and that a filing cabinet and desk for the office were needed.

"Since the fire, we have been trying to redo our files on the children, but we can't do much without filing cabinets to store them in," Mrs. Constancio added.

Used items are welcomed, she said.

Persons interested in donating items to the school may take them to Our Lady of Grace Parish Hall at 3118 Erskine St. or may call 762-4441 for someone to pick up the items. The program is being conducted at the Parish Hall.

"We did not stop the operation of the school after the fire because I know the needs of these children," Mrs. Constancio said. "If we stopped, they would be the ones that would suffer."

Parents Say They, Not Courts, Can Help Child

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Parents know best? Apparently not in the case of Chad Green, the toddler with leukemia. Over his parents' objections, and with Supreme Court precedent, a state court ruled that doctors should decide the best treatment for the boy.)

By DANIEL Q. HANEY

SCITUATE, Mass. (AP)— Two times a day, a nurse drives to a tidy house in this Boston suburb and gives Chad Green five white pills called Prednisone.

Two-year-old Chad is a blond cherub of a child. Though he looks healthy, he has acute lymphocytic leukemia, a form of cancer that preys on babies.

Doctors say the little white pills are Chad's only chance of surviving to age 3.

If Diana Green had a choice, she'd throw away the medicine. She thinks the pills are poisoning her son, and she feels a healthy diet along with some form of therapy on the fringes of accepted medicine would make him better.

Since the doctor and the Greens couldn't agree, the courts of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts intervened and ordered a nurse to give Chad his pills.

The case, on appeal, is a classic confrontation between the rights of parents to raise their children and the rights of children to live and grow.

Who should decide what is best for a sick boy — loving parents or professional physicians?

The Greens — Diana, 24, and Gerry, 27 — contend they should decide. But Guy Volterra, the Superior Court judge who ordered Chad's treatment resumed on April 18, sided with the doctors.

It's not the first time the courts have stepped in. The U.S. Supreme Court, for instance, has upheld compulsory vaccination and ordered blood transfusions for Jehovah's Witnesses children over objections of their parents on religious grounds.

"The Supreme Court has recognized family autonomy as worthy of protection from state intervention in some cases," Volterra wrote. "Yet there is a point at which parental prerogatives must yield to other considerations.

"The rights of parents inevitably conflict with the rights of a child when the parents seek to terminate potentially life-saving treatment. In such a case, the child's interests must take precedence over familial rights."

Chad still lives with his parents in Scituate, a coastal suburb south of Boston, but the state Welfare Department has custody of him in all medical matters. And he is receiving chemotherapy — the regimen of pills and shots accepted by most doctors as the only way to treat leukemia.

Mrs. Green, a calm, articulate woman, is still incredulous that the court could do this.

"Our argument is that we came to a decision not to go along with orthodox treatment after we had spoken to many doctors and other researchers and explored other possibilities," she says. "We felt that it was our right to make that decision. It was our responsibility, in fact, to find what we felt was the best thing possible and do that."

What Mrs. Green believes is the best possible medication isn't entirely clear, but it doesn't include chemotherapy.

Chad's mother puts high faith in food. She feeds him a "nutritional program" of fresh fruits and vegetables, goat's milk, cheese, homemade soup, distilled water, vitamins and minerals. She avoids sugar, meat, preservatives and artificial coloring.

She says she would like to take her boy to a doctor who respects nutrition and will help Chad's body to heal itself.

"There are people who believe you can change your body around to get to the root problem of why you got cancer in the first place," she says. "It's fine to try to kill cancer cells, but if your body was healthy, you would throw the cancer out."

If she could treat Chad without court interference, she says, "he will stay on his nutritional program, taking his vitamins and minerals. I would like to add enzyme therapy, possibly immune therapy and possibly Laetrile."

Chad's doctor, John T. Truman, a blood specialist at Massachusetts General Hospital, dismisses these alternatives as bunk.

"I absolutely maintain there is nothing whatsoever to them," he says.

The Greens' distrust of chemotherapy began almost as soon as doctors diagnosed Chad's illness last September.

The couple, living in Hastings, Neb., at the time where Gerry was a welder, was told by doctors at the Omaha University Medical Center that Chad had leukemia, cancer of the bone marrow, and recommended immediate doses of chemotherapy.

"They told us about the chemotherapy, that he could be sick, he could throw up all the time, he could have internal damage," Mrs. Green says. "They told us that the treatment itself could kill him.

"We decided that since we didn't know what else to do, we'd let them start the treatment. Meanwhile, I thought we'd investigate and see what other opinions people had."

By October, the disease was in remission, and the Greens decided to return to Massachusetts to live with Gerry's father. In Boston, they took Chad to Truman, who told them the boy had a 50 percent chance of cure if he took cancer-fighting drugs for three years.

For a month, Chad got shots of Vincristine and pills of Prednisone. Then began 1½ months of weekly spinal injections of Methotrexate. This was accompanied first by shots of L-Asparaginise and later by pills of 6-Mercaptopurine.

Chad was supposed to get the pills at home. But on Nov. 10, without telling the doctor, the Greens stopped giving Chad the medicine.

"He was on 6-Mercaptopurine, and we read that the effects of this were irreversible," Mrs. Green recalls. "When I found that out, I just threw them away. He still went in for his checkups. We hoped to put him under another professional."

Mrs. Green can't recall now where she read about the drug or its effects.

On Feb. 17, the Greens took Chad to the hospital with a cold. Truman found that the boy's leukemia had returned. When he learned that the parents had thrown away the pills, he tried for four days to convince them to resume the treatment. Then he went to the hospital's lawyers.

> "The rights of parents inevitably conflict with the rights of a child when the parents seek to terminate potentially life-saving treatment."

In a series of court proceedings, the treatments were ordered resumed, stopped, resumed.

Truman says Chad's chance of being cured was hurt when his parents took him off the medication.

"I think the honest thing for me to say is that his chance of indefinite survival is better than zero and somewhat less than 50 percent," the doctor says. "But it's real, even if it's only 5 or 10 percent. This is the only chance he will have."

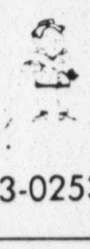

Without the drugs, doctors say he will die in one to six months.

The Greens' lawyers argue that the constitutional guarantees of privacy allow parents to raise their children as they wish.

"The family has a right to privacy," says George Donovan, one of the lawyers. "They have a right to educate their kids the way they see fit, to feed them what they feel like and to go on vacation when they feel like it."

John Remmington Graham, a law professor at Hamline University in St. Paul, Minn., also has been helping the Greens with their case. He says the parents did not neglect Chad by withholding his pills.

"As long as there are alternatives, the parents rather than the state should make that decision," Graham says. "To say the state should decide is Orwellian."

Pair Eats Expensive Dinner

AUSTIN (UPI) — It was quite a feed Lawrence Skloss put on, even if it was without the Texas staples of barbecue, beer and chili. For too long the outside world has considered Texas a state of "a bunch of cowboys and Indians," Skloss said, and time had come to upgrade the image.

And what better way to wipe out the western myth than partaking of a meal devoid of charred meat.

With the help of the proprieters of La Tour Restaurant, Skloss arranged what he called "The Most Exquisite Meal Ever Served in America" for himself and his wife.

After a champagne toast, the Sklosses chose from eight hor d'oeuvres, including Beluga caviar at $54 an ounce, coquille St. Jacques au champagne and Pate de Fois Gras Strasbourg.

Chef Robert Gregson's meal included escalopes de veau escoffier, boutquetierre des legumes, choufleur Polonaise, artichauts Bernaise, Carrotees a la Vichy, champignons aux fines herves, pommes a la Parisienne and asperges a la choron.

Among the eight wines for the eight-course dinner, the Sklosse sipped 1919 Chateau Filhot, a $450 sauterne.

The tab, not counting tax and tip, was $2,783. The dinner perhaps was not the most expensive ever consumed, but Skloss was certain it ranked among the top 10.

According to a New York Magazine article in 1977, the record may be held by restaurant owner Peter Cipolla and Jean Schaedle who spent $5,004 at New York's Palace restaurant. But that included a tip of $878.

But Skloss, advertising director for a local newspaper, said the inspiration for the exquisite meal was the highly publicized $4,000 meal at Chez Denis in Paris served to Craig Claiborne of the New York Times.

Skloss declined to say who picked up his tab.

License Approved For Woman Boxer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cathy "Cat" Davis' bid for the New York State boxing license has been approved, her manager said Wednesday.

New York State Athletic Commission regulations bar the licensing of female boxers, but a State Supreme Court decision overturned such a rule in December — claiming it was "prejudicial."

The athletic Commission announced it would appeal, but Davis' manager, Sal Algieri, said Wednesday the Commission has withdrawn its appeal and plans to issue Davis a license to box in New York.

He also said Madison Square Garden has expressed interest in a bout involving the unbeaten lightweight.

A spokesman for the State Athletic Commission would not confirm Algieri's comments and said, "No official announcement has yet been made."

Deposit Insurance Issue Arises

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State insurance for bank deposits — the issue that made Sharpstown a household word in 1971 — is back on the legislative docket.

But House Speaker Bill Clayton, who ordered a subcommittee study on the feasibility of a State Deposit Insurance Corp., said Thursday he is thinking only of protecting deposits over $40,000.

That's the limit per account owner that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) will cover.

The House subcommittee on state deposit insurance held its first hearing Wednesday, but generated no testimony from bankers or their trade associations.

State Credit Union Commissioner John P. Parsons described the state deposit insurance system created by his agency.

He said most credit unions chose a state insurance system over the federal one when given the choice in 1975.

State bank deposit insurance was intimately associated with the Sharpstown State Bank scandal.

The core of the scandal was an allegation that then House Speaker Gus Mutscher and two lieutenants received profitable stock deals from Frank Sharp in return for passage of two deposit insurance bills in 1969.

Gov. Preston Smith vetoed the bills, which the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission interpreted as giving Sharp a way out of Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. scrutiny of his Sharpstown bank.

Rep. Bob Maloney, R-Dallas, subcommittee chairman, told reporters any bill on deposit insurance would have to be "super legislation because the taint of Sharpstown would be there."

Asked what good such an SDIC might be, he said, "There may be a financial advantage to state banks in using state experience rather than national" as the basis for deposit insurance rates.

Maloney's subcommittee got its instructions from Rep. Nub Donaldson, D-Gatesville, chairman of the House Financial Institutions Committee.

"If we had an SDIC (State Deposit Insurance Corp.) it could relieve the dual (state and federal) layer of regulation. People have expressed to me some dissatisfaction with the regulations of the FDIC," Donaldson said in a telephone interview.

He said the idea for a committee study on deposit insurance came from Clayton.

Clayton said his intent was not to offer state banks an alternative to the FDIC banks but to provide coverage for large deposits.

"This would be no substitute for the FDIC....I think we want additional coverage. I might not have made that clear in the charge... I don't think we can get out of federal regulation anyway... I'll pull that charge this afternoon and make sure it is clear... I sure don't want people running around saying it is another Sharpstown," Clayton said.

Malpractice Insurance Rates Still Doctors' Top Concern

By RICK SCOTT

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Malpractice insurance rates will again be the top legislative priority of the state's doctors next year, according to the incoming president of the Texas Medical Association.

Dr. M.E. Durham of Houston, who will take over as the TMA president during the group's annual convention here this weekend, says proposals enacted by the last legislature have helped slow the rise in malpractice insurance premiums.

"But we're going back to get what we didn't get from the legislators last time," Durham said in an interview Thursday.

Among the changes still sought by the doctors is a "collateral source rule" to require health insurance payoffs, workmen's compensation and other payments be figured as part of any total malpractice award.

Durham said the TMA's other priorities include programs to voluntarily control the cost of physician and hospital services.

"But the question of rising health maintenance costs involves much more than the doctors," he said. "There are hospitals, insurance companies, the government — they all share responsibility."

Durham said the TMA plans to push for more state funding of hospital residency programs to train doctors for family practices, especially in rural areas where there are few physicians.

One problem in getting physicians to practice in rural areas, he said, is that often many of the patients are poor and must be treated under the Medicaid welfare program. Durham said the Medicaid program does not fully reimburse doctors for their charges.

"That takes away the incentive. If a doctor knows he's not going to be fairly paid, he's less likely to want to practice in those areas," Durham said.

About 3,000 Texas physicians are attending the convention here, which continues through Sunday. Some 400 physician-speakers are on programs which doctors may attend.

Dr. John Budd of Cleveland, Ohio, president of the American Medical Association, was the luncheon speaker Thursday.

In an interview before his speech, Budd labeled "ridiculous" charges by President Carter that the AMA has been the major obstacle to improved health care in the United States.

"The evidence is that we are doing what we can to cooperate with government," Budd said.

"We don't deny there are areas in professional medicine that could be improved, but to call the AMA a major obstacle is ridiculous," he said.

Budd said the president's comments last week were "unfounded, unfair and just simply not true."

Carter said, "Doctors are very serious about their patients, but you have doctors organized into the American Medical Association and they're interested in protecting the interests not of patients, but of doctors. And they've been the major obstacle to the progress in our country to having a better health care system in years gone by."

Hospital Group Discusses Plan For Paramedics

If the money can be found, Lubbock County's emergency medical technicians will be trained to the level of paramedics — a status that will enable them to administer drugs and perform other advanced life-saving services.

The administrative committee of the Lubbock County Hospital District board of managers Thursday discussed that proposal for the district's Emergency Medical Services (EMS) system.

Officials agreed that the district doesn't have the money to initiate such a paramedic program immediately, but they said they hope to find the funds in the future — possibly through a source other than the district.

Committee members mentioned the City of Lubbock and the Lubbock-Crosby-Garza Medical Society as possible contributors toward a paramedic program.

Stuart Haggard, EMS coordinator, said initial cost of the program would be about $50,000, which would pay for the necessary training and basic equipment. After the first-time costs, he said, the program would run about an $10,000 to $15,000 a year.

As paramedics, the emergency medical technicians could provide ambulance patients with higher-level care at the scene of an accident or enroute to a hospital, Haggard said.

Also at its meeting Thursday, the administrative committee voted to recommend that the full hospital board renew a lease for an EMS station at 48th Street and Avenue Q.

The committee also discussed, but tabled, a proposal to replace the chassis on three EMS ambulances. The committee asked the EMS staff to investigate cost alternatives.

In 1975, Georgia ranked second among the states in chicken production, with about 35 million that year.

CAB Chairman Lashes Out At Interstate Commerce Commission

ATLANTA (AP) — The airline industry should be returned to private enterprise, "entrusting the protection of the public to competition," the chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board said this week.

CAB Chairman Alfred E. Kahn, who has led the board in recent moves to deregulate airline fares and routes, told the Society of American Business and Economic Writers that if he is successful in the next few years the CAB will become a "mini Federal Trade Commission."

"Before I'm through I'm going to get this industry so competitively structured that you'll never get it back together again — I don't mean the industry; I mean the CAB," Kahn said.

Kahn said airline regulation, outside of safety matters, serves only to "protect the incumbents from competition."

In answer to a question later, he said he also would like to see the Interstate Commerce Commission dismantled.

"If I were not afraid of having my house bombed — and I mean that — I'd like to do the same thing to the ICC," he said. Asked who he fears would bomb his house, he replied, "Teamsters. I mean it."

"Observe that when we say the industry is in favor of regulation, industry includes the unions. I think the reason regulatory reform has concentrated on airlines has something to do with the fact that pilots are not as volatile as teamsters. It's as simple as that," he said.

The business writers elected new officers at their annual meeting here, naming Robert Corya, business editor of the Indianapolis News, president.

Other new officers are Thomas Dimond, business editor of the Washington Star, vice president; Ray Kenney, business editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel, treasurer, and Margaret Daly, money management editor of Better Homes & Gardens, secretary.

Elected to the board of governors were Roy Bertke, Tampa Tribune; David Dietz, San Francisco Examiner; Richard Gibson, Des Moines Register; Joseph Goodrich, Providence Bulletin; Chet Holcombe, Santa Barbara News Press; Gerald Heaster, Dayton Journal Herald; John Rumsey, Rochester Times-Union; Peter Silberman, Washington Post; Louis Uchitelle, The Associated Press; Tom Walker, Atlanta Journal; Walter Wingo, U.S. News and World Report, and Elizabeth Yamashita, Northwestern University.

Colorado's 'Sunset Law' Produces Mixed Reviews

DENVER (AP) — Two years ago, Colorado became the first state requiring its agencies to justify their existence periodically to the legislature and face summary execution should they fail that test.

This pioneer "Sunset law" was greeted as a breakthrough in the battle against needless bureaucracy, but so far it's hardly been a bloodbath — more nibble than bite, and a nibble that cost more tax money than it saved.

Under the Colorado statute, every board and agency is automatically abolished after six years unless legislative review determines that it serves a useful purpose. Sunset laws are a favorite objective of Common Cause, the Washington-based public interest lobby, and, by the numbers they've been a huge success. Since 1976, 24 states have followed Colorado's example, although the laws are operating in only a few so far.

In Colorado, most observers agree that Sunset needs time for a shakedown. After the first year of review, three agencies of the 13 scrutinized were eliminated. Their combined annual budget was $6,810. The cost of the review procedure to eliminate them was $200,000.

Sunset's cautious debut in Colorado has produced mixed reviews, and no one is more aware of that than Common Cause.

"The disappointment has been that the legislators have lacked the courage to stand up to lobbying efforts to retain or perpetuate these agencies," says Rosalie Schiff, director of Colorado Common Cause.

"But I think for the most part the Sunset law has been successful here, perhaps more in requiring the legislature to do the oversight work not done in the past, and in requiring accountability from state agencies. Maybe that's more important than getting rid of them."

Of the first 13 agencies reviewed in Colorado, three were eliminated — the State Athletic Commission, budget $5,750; the Board of Registration for Sanitarians, $375; the Board of Shorthand Reporters, $685. All were abolished on July 1, 1977.

Three agencies were combined with other boards or commissions and continued; committees are studying five, and two more are being continued. Meanwhile, the legislature has created a new board, the Hospital Charge Commission, and is considering a bill create another — to regulate insurance.

The largest of the three agencies eliminated, the Athletic Commission, was supposed to regulate professional boxing. Since there is virtually no professional boxing in Colorado, that was an easy one.

The other two were paper agencies, with a few parttime clerks.

All 41 state agencies are reviewed over six years. A third are up for scouting every two years.

It works this way: The state auditor's office reviews each agency, sometimes with help from outside consultants, then submits recommendations to the legislature, where they often undergo additional review by legislative employees and committees. The legislature makes the final decision.

Last year, all this cost $212,000.

Legislators at one point recommended scrapping the Board of Mortuary Science. They backed down after industry protests. It's still being thrashed out in the legislature, as is the fate of the other four agencies. All are expected to survive.

One man who has a dual vision of Sunset is Michael March, a public administration professor at the University of Colorado who helped prepare several reviews.

One of them, less than flattering to the Division of Insurance, got him into a hassle with J. Richard Barnes, its director, who at one point wrote the university demanding the reasons for March's adverse conclusions. March thought Barnes tried to get him fired March took and was less than pleased when his demand for a legislative inquiry produced only mild criticism of the insurance director.

"A sad deficiency," he says. As to the Sunset law, "the concept was good but its actual structure was poor in two respects.

"First, there was not enough time for completion of preliminary reports, but they've fixed that. Second, the criteria for continuation or discontinuation of agencies were and are too narrowly focused on accountability, not on the need for a program and its protection of the public.

"State departments are lacking in analytical talent and they cannot equip themselves in the future without money. Otherwise, they must rely on the state auditor, who did pretty well. But his expertise is too narrow to do a good job. Auditors are not equipped for that kind of orientation."

March says the legislative process was disorganized and the assignment of bills to different committees, almost by chance, was a poor way to handle it. He recommends that a single Sunset Review Committee — with an adequate staff — examine agencies and boards.

When Sunset was enacted, Rep. Carl Bledsoe was one of a handful of skeptics who didn't think the new program would provide the ultimate in governmental efficiency. But Bledsoe, a Republican, doesn't think the law has turned into the witch hunt he predicted it might.

And Senate President Fred Anderson, one of those who pushed hardest for the plan, thinks that overall, the concept has worked. He wants Sunset to be written into legislation for new programs, to assure they don't continue without review forever — with increased funding each year. He points out that legislators are now doing that.

"I honestly think it's a success," Anderson said. "I never said it was going to be a be-all and end-all as far as government is concerned. But its the first time we've had a positive effort to really review programs."

Acknowledging Sunset's slow beginning, Anderson says "I think it is wise to start with the smaller ones and work up, and I've told other states that.

Many States Have Adopted 'Sunset'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Common Cause, the public interest lobby sometimes denigrated by politicians as a bunch of head-in-the-clouds idealists with little feel for practical government, couldn't have been happier with the reaction to its so-calld "Sunset" laws idea.

Two years after Colorado enacted the first such law — which basically requires state boards and agencies to justify their own existence or be put out of business — 24 states have followed suit. And there are proposals for similar statutes in legislatures of most of the rest.

"We're delighted with the way it's moving," says Betsy Sherman of Common Cause's national headquarters.

While Sunset laws vary from state to state, the basic form is relatively simple: Over a certain specified period, each regulatory agency comes up for review by the legislature or an independent auditor, or both.

At the review, the agency must prove it is serving the public, and that if it is, it would not be more efficient to merge it with another agency. Thus, in the first year of Colorado's review, the Athletic Commission, the Board of Sanitarians and the Board of Shorthand Reporters were eliminated.

The Colorado law was shepherded through the legislature by Craig Barnes, a Denver lawyer connected with the state's branch of Common Cause. The lobby's officials in Washington say they're relatively happy with it, although some state officials have reservations about the bureaucracy it has created in the interest of eliminating bureaucracy.

But in other cases, Common Cause has urged states to slow down.

Gov. Robert Ray of Iowa vetoed — at Common Cause's suggestion — a Sunset bill that had no provisions for staff and a high first-year cost.

And Alabama reviewed 209 agencies at one crack, to the displeasure of the public interest group. "We thought that might be a little fast," says Ms. Sherman. "We thought they might start a little more slowly, particularly with regulatory agencies."

In addition to Alabama and Colorado, the following states have some sort of Sunset law:

Alaska, Arkansas, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Indiana, Louisiana, Maine, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah and Washington.

Man Assessed Fine In Money Scheme

NEW YORK (AP) — A New Jersey man has been fined $3,000 for his role in a conspiracy to embezzle about $100,000 from REA Express before it went bankrupt in 1975.

Judge Henry Werker imposed the fine Wednesday on A. Raymond Taintor Jr. in U.S. District Court. Taintor, former executive assistant to REA President Tom Kole, was the last defendant to be sentenced in the case.

Taintor, 59, of Ocean Grove, N.J., was convicted in February of secretly funneling the $100,000 to Kole from a political "slush fund" he maintained with REA money.

Kole, 47, has been sentenced to two years in prison and fined $5,000. Two other men also pleaded guilty in the case, but they were spared jail terms.

Canadian Ministry Opposes Concert

BRANTFORD, Ontario (AP) — The Ontario ministry of natural resources says a concert by the Boston Pops on an island in the Grand River in Brantford may interfere with wildlife on the island.

The ministry objected to the concert being held on Kerby Island in a letter to Arthur J. Kelly, a playwright who is arranging the event in August.

"The island, because it is isolated, provides excellent wildlife habitat and a nesting area for waterfowl," the letter said.

Kelly arranged the concert, which Arthur Fiedler is to conduct, to raise money to buy the 50-year-old Capitol Theater for the city.

British Industry Keeps Portuguese Town Going

(EDITOR'S NOTE — A little port after dinner is as British as a spot of tea at four. Britain's tea holdings shrank with its empire. Not so with port. An enclave of Englishmen, like five generations before, hold tight to this Portuguese industry, and tradition.)

By ANDREW TORCHIA

OPORTO, Portugal (AP) — "If I should die," wrote Rupert Brooke, "think only this of me: That there's some corner of a foreign field that is forever England. There shall be in that rich earth a richer dust concealed..."

This near northern corner of Portugal, where the rich earth brings forth a bounty of grapes, is haven to the latest of six generations of Englishmen who rule the port wine industry and measure their lives by English time.

For the 350 British, the cobbled streets, the camelia-covered courtyards, the tiled roofs, the Douro River and the lodges where port wine ages in oaken casks taller than a man, this is and has been home.

But they send their children to school in Britain, retain their British passports, speak English at home and cope with Portuguese only when necessary at the office.

The center of their social world is the Oporto Cricket and Lawn Tennis Club, an oasis among high-rise apartments, so conveniently sited that a wine executive, perhaps vaporous from a day of sipping port, can run it off for an hour on Portugal's only squash court before driving to his country home.

There is a sensitivity here to the dangers of remaining aloof and elite in a nation now dedicated to social equality. But the gap between the shrilling fishwives, the textile workers, the grape pickers and wine pressers and the British in their sceptered isle is wider than the distance from London to Lisbon.

"Sometimes it is difficult for people like ourselves because we are integrated and yet are still foreign. We are involved but we really have no right even to express an opinion," says Robin Reid, managing director of Croft and Co.

"Our club has 40 percent British members. We don't want more because if there were more than 50 percent foreign membership, we might one day lose the club."

Every Wednesday, British shippers and their guests meet near the docks for lunch in a musty 200-year-old building called the factory house.

On a table near the granite staircase is a current copy of The Times of London. Next to it is a library copy of the Times of the same date 100 years before.

Portraits of the ancestors of the shipping families line the walls. The kitchen with its rows of polished brass pots and ovens large enough to cook a whole pig on a spit is preserved but not used.

The Wednesday lunch became customary because formerly no mail arrived from London on that day and the traders were thus spared from correspondence in the afternoon.

But if there is anything that is the epitome of England in this vaunted hall, it is the once a year, member's only, treasurer's dinner.

"After dinner we have a sip of tawny port to help us survive the journey to an adjoining candlelit room where the table is laid with linen and silver," explains David Delaforce, a taster, marketing director and the fifth generation of his family in Portugal.

There is a sensitivity here to the danger of remaining aloof and elite in a nation dedicated to social equality.

The shipper's association membership is virtually all British. There is one Portuguese associate member because he is a director of a British company.

"We had a Spaniard in the trade, but he would accept full membership or nothing. So it was nothing," a member said.

"This is one of the most expensive clubs outside New York," explains Ian Sinclair, director of Sandeman and Co. "But it is good to get away from the telexes and telephones to a more leisurely style of life."

By tradition, the host of a formal dinner serves first to his right, then himself, then to his left. The bottle then proceeds around the table from right to left.

The uninitiated who passes the port from left to right is met with disapproving stares, as is anyone who thoughtlessly smokes before the toast to the British throne.

The error is not in disrespect for the monarch, but disrespect for the wine which must be tasted before the palate is spoiled by smoke.

Port was a British discovery, and so it may seem right that it sustain this small community. The British have been hereabouts for a while. Wellington defeated Napoleon's troops south of Oporto in 1810.

The wine is made from the grapes of the upper Douro Valley, about 60 miles east of Oporto. The dry, white port is drunk before dinner. The sweet red and tawny ports after.

But it is more than wine. Britain began importing wine from Portugal in the 17th century when its battles with France cut off its usual supplies. Only trouble was the wine often turned to vinegar before it got to Britain on ships bucking stormy seas.

So shippers began adding brandy to the casks to stop fermentation and keep the wine sweet. Port was born with natural preservatives.

Britain was nearly the total importer in the 19th century, both for the rich and the workingmen's pubs. They still remain at the heart of the industry, but France now imports almost 40 percent of the production, twice as much as the British. A bare 1 percent goes to the United States where domestic producers age their own blend of port.

Other things are changing besides British tastes, which forced Oporto traders to find new markets after World War II and made some firms merge to stay in business. It cut the number of firms in half, and today 21 Britons in six companies, including three family firms, control more than half the wine exports.

In 1977, things looked good. Exports were 48.6 million liters valued at $63.4 million, up from 41 million liters and $57.3 million the year before. It was also the fifth best year since the first shipment to Britain was recorded 300 years ago.

Things are changing, however, for the thin red line of heroes. The 1974 Portuguese Revolution led to tripled wages and worker absenteeism, new regulatory powers over the trade and threats of nationalization.

Other things, perhaps more important things, are changing too.

"There is beginning to be more intermarriage with the Portuguese than before," says Robin Reid, whose wife is Portuguese and whose family dates back almost to Wellington's victory.

"Judging by the activities of my daughters, the young today are completely international, which is an excellent thing."

The British community has shrunk from the port wine industry's heyday a century ago. Even "The New Street Of The English" was renamed "Prince Henry The Navigator Street."

Portugal remains western Europe's poorest country, but Oporto is no poorer than the rest of it. The little industrial town struggles on, and there is little public alienation between the foreign population and the native workers. "The British," says one local book dealer, "are the oldest and most respected foreign community in Oporto."

Joaquim Manuel Calem, director of his family firm, A.A. Calem and Son, Ltd., is president of the Association of Exporters of Port Wine. Of the British, he says, "I like them very much. I have many good friends among them and belong to the same clubs.

"As to their British habits, we Portuguese have our own habits. Everyone has his own habits. We are different, but that is not a problem."

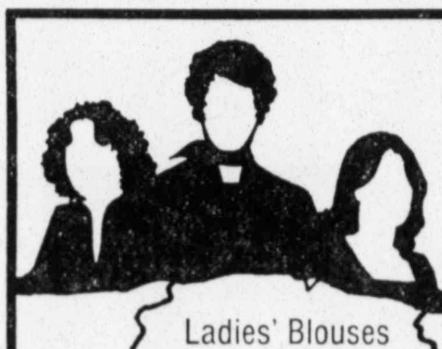

What doesn't change is that it takes two years to age ordinary port in the cask, and vintage port is aged five to 10 years in the bottle.

Bits And Pieces

HOUSTON IS THE only one of the four teams in this weekend's Southwest Conference Baseball Tournament that failed to sweep a season series from a league opponent. The Cougars finished fourth in the regular-season race . . . The tourney includes the league's top four hitting teams, three of the four best defensive teams and eight of the top nine individual pitchers . . .

Texas has won six straight SWC track championships and will be gunning for a seventh this weekend, which would be an all-time league record. However, Texas has won six straight twice before, and Rice snapped the string both times. Texas has won 12 of the previous 13 meets held in Austin, the site of this year's meet. Rice won the other meet held in the Capitol City. That win broke a five-year UT winning streak . . .

Dave Roberts, formerly the world-record holder in the pole vault, cleared the bar just once in his four years of competition in the SWC track meet. He won with a jump of 16-0 in 1971. The other three times, he passed until the bar was well above 16 feet and then missed on his three attempts at the height . . .

Texas Tech's long jumper, Jim MacAndrew, has a best leap of 25-7 this season. That is the eighth-longest jump in conference history . . .

DESPITE THE DESIGNATED-hitter rule in college baseball, three of the top six hitters in SWC play this season were pitchers—Arkansas' Tim Lollar at .423, Baylor's Shane Nolen at .374 and Baylor's Burl Coker at .346 . . . Texas A&M led the league in pitching and defense . . . Rice pitcher Allan Ramirez won the strikeout title for the third straight year . . .

Baylor led the SWC in batting with a .307 average. Houston was the nearest to the Bears with a .267 mark . . . Baylor's Mike Johanson topped the conference in at-bats, total bases, doubles, home runs and RBI . . .

Atlanta pitcher Tommy Boggs, an Austin product, on his first major-league home run: "I couldn't believe it because I hadn't even hit a ball in batting practice. I lost sight of the ball until I saw it hit the padding. When I saw that it was out, I nearly tripped over first base. I don't know what I hit. I closed my eyes." . . .

Some Japanese reporters interviewing Reggie Jackson last week at Yankee Stadium asked him if he would like to play in Japan. Jackson's reply: "If I did, they'd name a box of rice after me." . . .

NOTICED WHERE LAMAR running back Jeff Bergeron was drafted in the last round by San Francisco last week. Bergeron, of course, was formerly a blue-chip performer at Port Neches-Groves and originally signed with Houston. However, he has never performed up to expectations. While in high school, Bergeron rushed for 347 yards in one game in 1971—the second-best effort in history in Class AAAA—and gained 3928 yards rushing in three seasons. He was all-state in 1972. Speaking of the single-game rushing mark, the best total is 356 yards set by Ken White of Odessa against Borger in 1955 . . .

Randy Lightfoot, the former Plainview High School star hurdler, graduated from Wayland Baptist College this spring and will begin a job as sports editor at the Borger newspaper May 22 . . . Linda Kocurek of Tuloso-Midway, who threw the discus 117 feet to finish sixth in the Class AAA state track meet last weekend, is the sister of Wayland Flying Queen Marie Kocurek . . .

Texas third baseman Chris Raper's father is a minister . . . For the name file: Australia Hobbs, a former all-state basketball player at Odessa Ector; Rooster Rainbolt, a football and basketball player at Spur; Bam Bam Baker, an SPC long-and triple-jumper; and Cochise Guerrera, a sprinter at an El Paso high school . . .

ANYBODY NOTICE CLOSELY the cover of last week's Sports Illustrated? It showed Elvin Hayes stuffing the ball and a number of players watching from behind him. One appeared to be wearing a Washington uniform with the colors reversed. Actually, it was San Antonio's Mike Gale, whose uniform had been lost in an airlines baggage mixup. Thus, he had to wear a Bullets' uniform turned inside out . . .

Joe Bryant, Philadelphia 76er forward, was asked recently about the team's troubles when they were down 3-1 to the Bullets in their playoff series. "We're like a cornered animal," Bryant said. "We'll come out fighting." What kind of animals does the team have, he was asked. "We've got everything," was the reply. "We've got a whole zoo."

Melnyk Snares Colonial Lead

FORT WORTH (AP) — Steve Melnyk should have been a cat burglar. Or at least a pickpocket.

With the velvet touch of a safecracker, he one-putted 12 consecutive holes Thursday and escaped with the first-round lead in the $200,000 Colonial National Invitational golf tournament.

"I'm embarrassed to tell you how many putts I had," the former U.S. Amateur champion grinned after posting a 5-under-par 65 that broke up a five-way deadlock at 66.

Colonial Scorecard

Against a background of lightning, thunder and semi-darkness, Melnyk calmly dropped a 6-foot birdie putt on the final hole and beat a cloudburst by a long eyelash.

That putt was only his 22nd of the warm, windy afternoon and was the final indignity imposed upon the proud Colonial, which yielded a near-record 26 subpar rounds for openers.

Thus, Melnyk, 31, a non-winner in eight years on the tour, took a mere one-shot lead into today's second round of the 72-hole chase for a $40,000 top prize.

The quartet at his heels included Lee Trevino, the 1976 Colonial champ, who flirted with first place until he took a bogey at the 17th and then narrowly missed a tying 30-foot birdie putt on the final green.

"I'm hitting the driver so good, I gotta dial the operator for long distance after I hit it," he chuckled.

Also at 66 were Fuzzy Zoeller, Gil Morgan and Mike Sullivan. Sullivan, 23, was in the sunrise trio first off the tee while the other leaders were among the late finishers.

Former Masters champion Charles Coody, who played collegiately at nearby TCU, headed a group at 67 that included 1972 Colonial winner Jerry Heard and five others.

Tom Watson, bidding for his fourth title of the season, was within striking distance at 69 but Gary Player, also a three-time winner this year, fell back in the pack with a 73.

Defending champion Ben Crenshaw also toured the 7,170-yard Trinity River treachery in 39-34—73 and surrendered any serious hope of repeating.

Melnyk attributed a portion of his putting success to a lesson from Crenshaw and admitted the 22-putt performance was his best ever. He one-putted every green from the seventh hole through the 18th.

"I didn't hit any good golf shots I'd consider particularly memorable, but I didn't hit any real bad golf shots either," the former University of Florida ace said.

He strayed with a 5-iron on the par-three 16th and wound up within a whisker of going out of bounds. He took a scrambling bogey 4 and confessed with a sly grin, "It was a good bogey."

A TIME FOR FIRSTS — Mrs. Hurley Carpenter, left, wife of Texas Tech's first co-captain of the football team, and Sylva Wessendonk, from the Ex-Students Association, flank W. W. "Windy" Nicklaus at Thursday's ceremony at the Tech Museum. Nicklaus, who with the late Carpenter served as co-captains of Tech's first team, returned three letter sweaters to the Museum. The one he is wearing was the first issued by Tech, in 1924. See Story, Page 7, Sec. E. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis)

Conaway's Ambition: Win State

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

AUSTIN — What's that saying every coach has tatooed on his arm? Yeah, the one underneath the grinnin' rat without any teeth and the initials of their lost love.

It's something about the going and how when it gets a might hairy, the tough are right amongst the best.

Whatever it is, Curtis Conaway says he's got it.

"The mile is the toughest event is sports," the Monterey junior said. "You've got to be strong and in good shape. And you've got to be willing put out. I guess that means hurt a little."

All right, for those who meet those criteria, a mile run is forming outside. No shoving please. Women and children to the front of the pack.

Conaway, one of the state's top milers, leads a group of Lubbock and South Plains tracksters into the state high school meet, which started today in Memorial Stadium.

The meet, limited to the cindermen who placed either first or second on the regional level, started this mornning with the Conference B long jump. The Class AA and AAA running events are set for 7:30 p.m. tonight, while the running portion of the Conference B, A and AAAA meet starts at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Conaway says he has only one goal at the two-day affair and "that's to win."

"I think I've got a good shot at it (the title) , " he said. "I've been working hard

Carlton Enjoys Beating Seaver, Reds

By The Associated Press

If there's one team that Steve Carlton enjoys beating, it's the Cincinnati Reds. If there's one pitcher, it's Tom Seaver.

Carlton has been thoroughly enjoying himself in recent days.

For the second time in less than two weeks, the Philadelphia Phillies' left-hander tamed the Reds while facing Seaver. That inspired a genuine grin from the usually stoic Carlton.

"It was one of the sweetest victories of the year," said Carlton after pitching a six-hitter to whip the Reds 4-1 Thursday night. "I can't remember beating Tom very often."

It was only the second time he's beaten Seaver in their last 10 decisions. The first was last week, a 12-1 victory in Cincinnati. Until then, Carlton had an 0-8 record against "Tom Terrific," dating back to 1970.

Thursday night's victory also was satisfying because Carlton hasn't had much luck against the Reds since he came to the National League. His last two victories improved his record against Cincinnati to 7-9.

"They're a tough team on left-handers," conceded Carlton.

Greg Luzinski's home run and a two-run triple by Richie Hebner backed Carlton's pitching. In the third inning, Luzinski pounded a bases-empty homer, his seventh of the year. The Phillies knocked out Seaver in the eighth on Hebner's two-run triple.

In contrast to Carlton's euphoria was Seaver's dismay after losing his fourth game in five decisions.

"No matter what road you want to take," he told writers after the game, "I lost 4-1." The Cincinnati ace kept repeating the known fact in front of his locker: "I lost 4-1."

Nothing seemed to raise the spirits of the pitcher many believe to be the best in baseball. The only optimistic note he managed was, "I'm getting closer."

Cardinals 2, Dodgers 0

Bob Forsch fired a three-hitter for his third shutout of the season and Ted Simmons broke a scoreless tie with a seventh-inning home run as St. Louis defeated Los Angeles.

The Cardinals right-hander struck out four and walked three as he became the major league's first six-game winner. He has lost two.

Burt Hooton allowed St. Louis just one hit through six innings when Simmons hit his second homer of the season with two out in the seventh. The Cardinals added a run in the eighth on successive singles by Ken Reitz, Tony Scott and Mike Tyson, chasing Hooton.

Giants 6, Pirates 2

Left-hander Bob Knepper pitched a six-hitter and Jack Clark and Willie McCovey belted run-scoring triples, carrying San Francisco past Pittsburgh.

The victory was the Giants' fifth in their last six games, while Knepper — winning his fourth game in five decisions — lowered his earned run average to 1.87.

"I like the challenge of facing teams with great hitters," said Knepper. "They make me concentrate throughout the lineup. Except for maybe the shutout of Cincinnati earlier this year, I had my best stuff of the season today."

Cubs 4, Padres 3

Pinch-hitter Rudy Meoli stroked a ninth-inning, bases-loaded single to lead Chicago over San Diego. The Cubs loaded the bases as Bobby Murcer singled and stole second and Steve Ontiveros and Joe Wallis walked.

Reliever Dave Friesleben went to a 3-0 count on Larry Biittner before being replaced by Dan Spillner. Spillner then threw ball four to Biittner, scoring the tying run and setting the stage for Meoli's hit.

Mets 3, Expos 2

Bobby Valentine singled in the go-ahead run in the eighth inning, leading New York past Montreal. Winner Pat Zachry gave up six hits and two earned runs in seven innings of work.

Steve Henderson led off the Met eighth with a walk, moved to third on a single by John Stearns and scored on Valentine's single. Valentine also drove in the second New York run to tie the game at 2-2 in the sixth inning.

Red Sox 5, Orioles 4

A two-run homer by Jim Rice, his 11th of the season and sixth in the last 11 games, triggered Boston over Baltimore. Rice, who has driven in 19 runs while hitting safely in 10 of his last 11 games, connected off Dennis Martinez following a leadoff single by Jerry Remy in the third inning.

Fred Lynn scored on a sacrifice fly by Dwight Evans in the Boston second after hitting a triple. The Red Sox added two runs in the ninth in a rally keyed by Bernie Carbo's RBI single and they turned out to be crucial scores because Baltimore came back with a two-run rally of its own in the bottom of the inning.

Dick Drago finally put the fire out after giving up a sacrifice fly to Eddie Murray and an RBI single to Lee May.

Race Drivers Honor Mothers

Auto racing will resume at Lubbock Speedway tonight with a program that will be a special salute to mothers—in spite of the fact that one mother (Nature) last week tossed a curve at the southside asphalt track.

Events a week ago were canceled because of threatening weather, but drivers and the track will be making up for lost time, literally.

The salute? Mothers accompanied by their families will be admitted for half the normal $3 admission fee, and in addition the track has a complimentary gift for each mother attending.

The pits will open at 6 p.m., hot laps are set for 6:30, and the opening race will be flagged off at 8. Lubbock Speedway is 3½ miles south of the traffic circle on U.S. 87, reached via the FM 1585 exit.

Things No Longer 'Suite' For McCovey

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — How suite it isn't.

San Francisco Giants veteran Willie McCovey is upset with the way contract negotiations are going with team management. According to the San Francisco Chronicle in today's editions, the discussions have stumbled over whether the club pays for his hotel suite on road trips.

"I've talked with (Giants' owner Bob) Lurie three times in the past few days," McCovey said, "and I'm no closer to signing now than I was in spring training."

The newspaper said McCovey's attorney, Hal Silen, is urging McCovey to accept a 10-year package deal by which he would play the next two years with an option for a third, then spend an additional eight years with the club on a personal services contract.

With incentives, the 40-year-old McCovey could make about $150,000 per year for the next two playing seasons, and a total of $400,000 for the following eight years.

The hotel suite clause is the obstacle, the Chronicle said. If McCovey were to pay for it himself, as he has done for several years, it would cost him about $5,000 annually.

"It (the suite) is just a little thing — something I've had for the last six or seven seasons," McCovey said.

General Manager Spec Richardson said, "We were near the end of negotiations, writing the proper language into the contract, when the suite thing was brought up. Bob is bending over backwards to give McCovey a 10-year package. If it was my decision, I wouldn't give it to him."

"This might not be doing the right thing," McCovey said as he left the clubhouse Thursday, "but I'm still disturbed over something Lurie said to me, indicating the Giants did me a favor by signing me two years go. He said he didn't mean it the way it sounded, but once it's said, it's said."

Lurie argued, "If we pay the difference between a twin and a suite for McCovey, then other players — such as (Bill) Madlock, The Count John Montefusco) and Vida (Blue) could ask for the same concession."

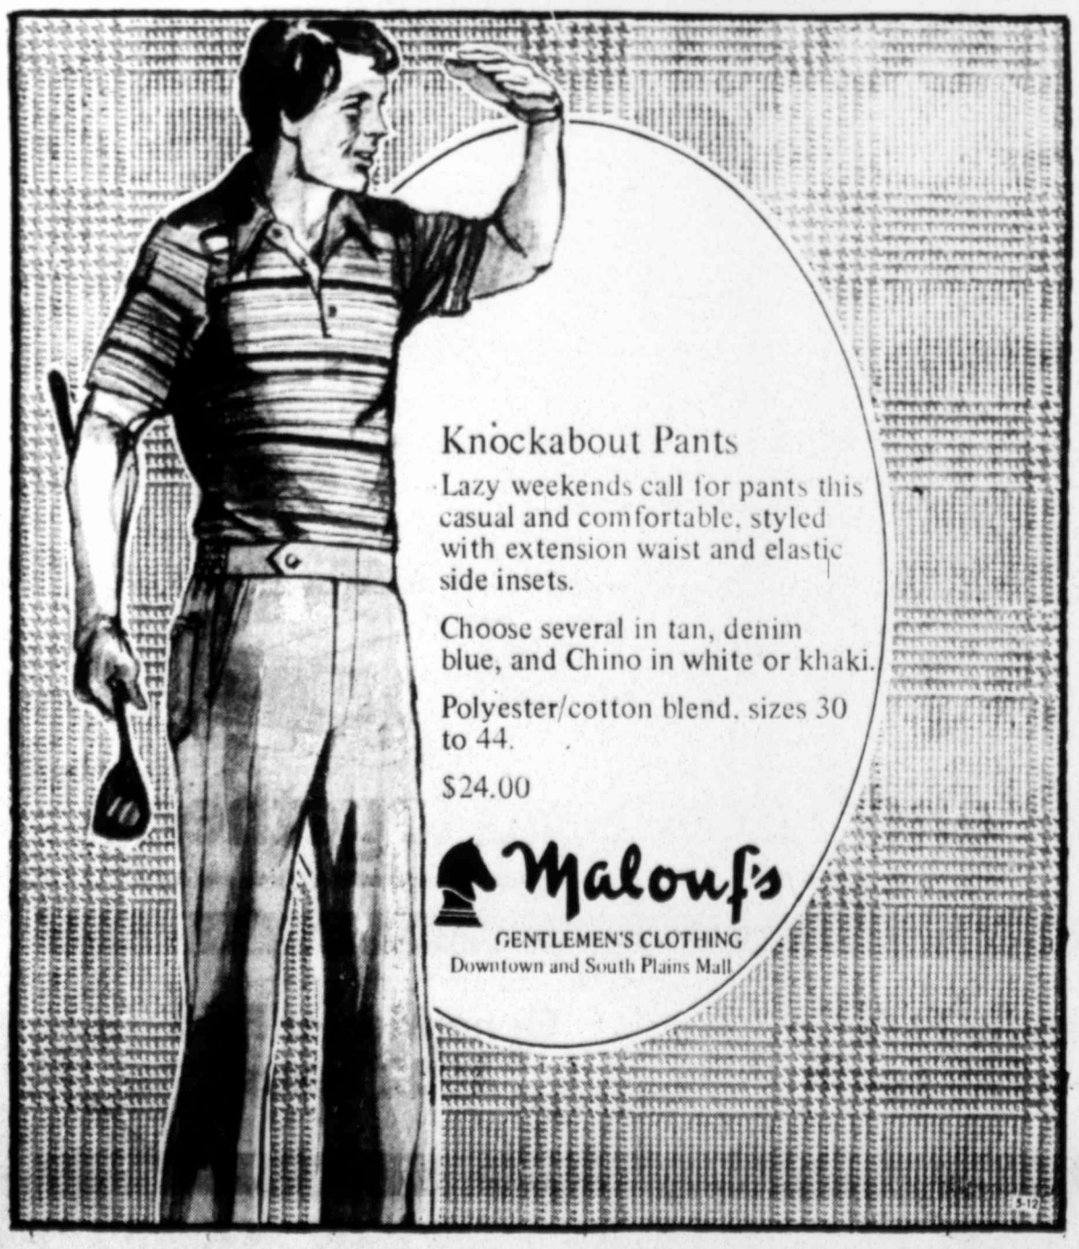

MHS Golfer Stands Third

AUSTIN (Special)—Monterey's Bruce Northcutt jumped into third place among individual golfers in the state Class AAAA golf tournament being staged here.

Northcutt, MHS's only competitor, fired a 75 over the Morris Williams Municipal Course to grab the third spot. The first-day leader is Mark Hendrix of Austin Johnson, as he led his team to the lead.

Johnson turned in a team score of 300, with Clear Lake (League City) second at 307. Stafford (Dulles) and Corpus Christi King are tied for third at 312, followed by Fort Worth Arlington Heights 313, Odessa Permian 316, Denton 323, and El Paso Coronado 330.

In 1904, Jack Taylor of the St. Louis Cardinals started 39 games and completed them all.

Briefly

TENNIS

PORTLAND, Maine — Ken Rosewall of Australia advanced to a semifinal meeting with Gene Mayer by defeating Gene Scott 6-2, 4-6, 6-2 in the opening round of the $15,000 Downeast Tennis Classic. Mayer defeated 21-year-old Billy Martin in straight sets, 6-3, 6-4.

In another quarterfinal match, Colin Dibley overpowered Bill Scanlon 6-1, 6-0. The Tim Noonan-Peter Fleming match was postponed to today because Fleming was in Dallas for the WCT finals.

DALLAS — Corrado Barazzutti of Italy defeated second-seeded Brian Gottfried 6-4, 2-6, 1-6, 6-1, 6-3 to advance to the semifinals of the World Championship of Tennis Finals.

DUESSELDORF, West Germany — The United States defeated Poland 2-1 on singles victories by Roscoe Tanner and Harold Solomon, and Australia beat Britain 2-1 on the fourth day of the Nations Cup tennis championships. In a completion of a suspended match Wednesday, Chile downed West Germany 2-1 to spoil the Germans' hopes of reaching the tournament finals.

Tanner disposed of Poland's Wojtek Fibak 6-2, 6-4 while Solomon turned back Tadeusz Nowicki 6-2, 6-2 for the American victory. The Poles captured the doubles as the Fibak-Nowicki combination outlasted Tanner and Bob Lutz 7-6, 0-6, 6-3.

GOLF

OKLAHOMA CITY — Jerry Pate shot a one-over par 71 to take the first-round lead over Brazil's Jaime Gonzalez in the Oklahoma City Open golf tournament. Wayne Peddy and Dick McLean tied for third with 73 and defending champion Tom Storey was among 13 players shooting 74.

HORSE RACING

CHICAGO — Mickey's Gal, $6.40, scored a three-length victory over Century Type in the $12,000 Abby's Crown Purse at Sportsman's Park.

BALTIMORE — Dancers Revelation, $14.20, beat only A Rose by a length to win the feature at Pimlico.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Drama Critic, $12.80, edged Sound of Summer in a four-horse photo finish to win the featured $25,000 Carson Purse at Hollywood Park.

NEW YORK — All Thats, $15.60, edged out Water Valone by a nose to capture the $25,000 Top Bald Purse at Aqueduct.

OCEANPORT, N.J. — Queen Lib, $8.20, won the $29,225 Brookdale Handicap by 3¼ lengths over Spunky at Monmouth Park.

Christian, Thetford Express Disappointment

By TOM HALLLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Larry Christian was taking a tough defeat as well as humanly possible while David Thetford was also trying to.

Christian and Thetford were the losers Thursday when Barry Arnwine and Craig Wells were selected head basketball coaches at Coronado and Lubbock High, respectively.

A pair of Hub City youths who played basketball in the local system, Christian and Thetford are the assistant basketball coaches at CHS and LHS, respectively. Each young man hoped for a promotion to the head post. Each reacted a bit differently to the announcements.

The 32-year-old Christian sighed numerous deep breaths as he discussed the disappointment. Expectations of receiving the job surfaced around April 5, when Jimmy Fullerton announced his resignation. Then the LHS grad hoped for good news when the Lubbock school board met last Friday in executive session.

"Last Friday I was told by Mr. (Max) O'Banion (CHS principal) that the board had met and had tabled its decision. When I wasn't chosen, I held out hope that I would still get the job," he said.

Christian held out until O'Banion informed him Thursday morning. While most JV coaches with .839 winning percentages would express bitterness, Christian tried to remain calm.

"It's a big shock. It's what I've worked for, but there's no bitterness, just disappointment. I won't be vindictive and yell sour grapes. Whatever decision they back good years, and he ought to do real well here. He's a proven coach. . . I'm thinking about getting out of coaching, but I haven't completely made a decision," Christian said.

A number of CHS faculty members felt Christian ranked at the top of the screening committee's list until last Friday's board meeting.

At that time, the committee submitted its candidates for the board's inspection. Rumors were that three of the supposed five finalists withdrew their applictions before the board meeting, leaving only Christian and one other applicant for inspection.

Lubbock athletic director Pete Ragus declined to comment on the matter, saying he could not discuss matters handled in an executive session of the board. Assistant superintendent for administrative affairs E.C. Leslie told the A-J late Thursday that the school board discussed "a number of names" at last Friday's meeting.

Ragus praised both Christian and Thetford as "fine young men and very, very good applicants" but pointed out that the Class AAAA head-coaching experience which both Arnwine and Wells possessed. Neither Christian nor Thetford owned any head-coaching experience.

Ragus indicated that Arnwine applied for the position "this week." The Lubbock athletic director also implied that Arnwine had made the first contact in applying for the job.

The Amarillo High coach confirmed that Thursday night, although he had told the A-J last month that he didn't intend "to initiate the contact" in seeking the Lubbock position.

Though the selection process seemed too painfully obvious, Christian accepted the setback "like a true champion," as one CHS faculty member stated. Thetford isn't sure he did the same on the Lubbock High situation.

"I don't guess I'm a champion then," he said, "because I wanted that job more than anything. I thought I had more support than it turned out I had."

The 24-year-old Monterey and Texas Tech graduate was disappointed in the lack of communication which he received during the selection process. The second-year assistant at LHS said he never heard the name of Craig Wells before Lubbock High principal Knox Williams informed him Thursday morning.

"I didn't know one name of anyone who had applied. As far as I had been told, they were going to go with me. I just wanted them to let me know whether I was competing with someone else or not competing. It's difficult to compete when you don't know who the others are. As far as I knew, John Wooden had applied," Thetford said.

Like Christian, Thetford also hopes to remain in the local system. It just won't be at the position he wanted.

"My No. 1 goal has been Lubbock High all along. There's no one around here who wanted it worse than I did," the LHS assistant said.

A quick check in the history books reveals the two local cage aides had reason to be considered. Basketball coaches have traditionally been promoted in the local system—J.J. Wood, C. E. Carmichael, Jimmy Fullerton, Jerry Hogue, Joe McWilliams, Joe Michalka, Gerald Myers and O'Bannion, to name a few.

Aggies, 'Horns Track Choices

AUSTIN (Special) — The University of Texas goes after its seventh straight Southwest Conference Track and Field championship today and Saturday, and the major factor for the Longhorns is the health of Olympian Johnny "Lam" Jones.

Jones, who hasn't been the same burnt orange blur since he pulled a hamstring muscle while playing wide receiver against Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl, has point potential in the 100, 200, and 400-meter dashes and 400 and 1,600-meter relays.

The Texas Aggies, with football sprinter Curtis Dickey, figure to be the toughest competition for the Longhorns and come into the meet as co-favorites at best.

Dickey has run a wind-aided, sub-10-second 100-meter and bested Jones the last time the two met.

Rice, Houston, and Baylor represent threats to nip the Longhorns. Rice is tough in the hurdles and distance races and the Owls return 71 of 92 points from last year's meet.

Houston has depth in the weights and pole vault and Baylor has a well-balanced squad. Tech will bid for points in the distances, the long jump and sprint relay.

Lam Jones was a double winner in the 100 and 220-yard dashes last year. The SWC is going to the meter races this time.

Texas has 66 of the 127½ points it scored last year returning for the meet. Texas has won 37 of the last 62 SWC track and field championships.

The Longhorns have returning champions galore in the individual events. Fourteen individual champions from 1976 and 1977 are back.

The 1978 championships will have three holders or co-holders of SWC championship meet records.

Baylor's Davey Duncan tied the 120 hurdles record of 13.7 seconds in 1976. Jones set the 220 dash mark of 20.14 in 1977 and Rice's Marty Froelick set a 3-mile record last year.

Football players could be heavy point producers. Besides Lam Jones, Texas has versatile Derrick Hatchett. The Aggies can boast of hurdler Mike Mosley, who is their No. 1 quarterback, Rice's Carlton Durrett plays football, and Duncan and Bo Taylor are Baylor gridders.

Preliminaries will be held in the field events and running events this afternoon.

Tech's Jim MacAndrew was the favorite to win the long jump until he injured a knee in an off-track accident two weeks ago. The knee is healed, but he has not been able to work out since the incident.

Now, the favorite is SMU's D.K. Perry who leaped 25-5½ last week. MacAndrew, the SWC indoor champ, has gone 25-7 this spring.

Tech will send Billy Stone in the high jump, where he has cleared 6-8 on a coulpe of occasions this year.

"Lep is due for a good race," said Oglesby. "He has been looking great in workouts and I think he's ready to bust out." Lepard has run 1:52.27 this spring.

Tech will be running the mile relay after it was first announced it would not be in the eight-team field. Tech had a better time for the mile than TCU and this dropped the Frogs from the field for Saturday night's finals. For the mile relay, a race 11 yards longer than 1600 meters. Tech has been clocked in 3:14.5.

SWC Baseball

AUSTIN (AP) — Burl Coker and Tim Lollar, two pitchers who have 15 victories and only two losses between them, collided at 2 p.m. today as Baylor and Arkansas opened the Southwest Conference double-elimination baseball tournament.

Texas A&M, which won the regular season, takes on Houston at 8 p.m. in today's other game of the league's second postseason tournament.

The first-round losers will vie in Saturday's first game with the two winners meeting Saturday night. The tournament could last until Monday night.

An NCAA regional tournament playoff berth is on the line for the four teams at Disch-Falk Field on the University of Texas campus.

Coker recorded an 8-1 record in pacing Baylor to its 15-9 SWC record, good for third place in the league. Lollar was 7-1 for Arkansas, which was runner-up over the regular season with an 18-6 mark.

The Aggies had a 19-5 record in leading the pack; Houston was five games off the pace at 14-10. Baylor is the defending SWC tournament champion.

The Aggies can go with either Mark Thurmond (8-0) or Mark Ross (6-2) against Houston's Billy Blum (7-2) in the nightcap. The Aggies won 22 of their last 24 games and had an imposing 16-3 record on the road.

WCT Finals

DALLAS (AP) — The hard-luck World Championship of Tennis Finals, stung when defending champion Jimmy Connors refused to return, faces a possible semifinals default tonight by top-seeded Bjorn Borg, who is suffering from a painfully infected right thumb.

Borg, seeking his second WCT title, is scheduled for a semifinals match tonight at 6 p.m. with Vitas Gerulaitis. But he told one Swedish writer on Thursday night that the odds were "50-50" he would play.

"Dr. Phil Berry, the tournament physician, has given Bjorn an injection and has advised him to practice tomorrow to see how it feels," WCT spokesman Bob Yates said Thursday night.

The 21-year-old Swedish star cut short a morning practice session Thursday and passed up a scheduled practice Thursday afternoon.

Swedish writer Rolf Svensson visited with Borg on Thursday night and said, "Tonight he couldn't hold on to a racquet. He said it hurt like there was a knife in it."

Borg was given two injections of penicillin to combat the infection, other officials said. The thumb on Borg's playing hand was reportedly swollen to twice its size.

WCT trainer Bill Norris said Borg rubbed a blister in a callous on the thumb while defeating Dick Stockton in four sets Tuesday night. The blister then became infected Wednesday, Norris added.

Meanwhile, unheralded Carrado Barazzutti wore down second-seeded Brian Gottfried with his airtight baseline play and withering passing shots in the quarter-finals Thursday night for a marathon 6-4, 2-6, 1-6, 6-1, 6-3 upset victory.

The slender, 140-pound Italian meets Eddie Dibbs in tonight's other semifinal match. Dibbs needed only 85 minutes to crush lethargic Ilie Nastase, 6-3, 6-3, 6-0, in a peaceful rematch of last year's volatile quarter-finals confrontation between the two.

The hot-headed Barazzutti, who slipped into the elite eight-man field when Connors and Sandy Mayer refused berths, was overwhelmed by Gottfried in the second and third sets. Barazzutti's concentration slipped during that time as he angrily chastized himself and a linesman.

Gottfried then won the first game of the fourth set and appeared to be on his way to clinching the match. But Barazzutti, squirting around the court like a waterbug, reeled off nine consecutive victories, breaking Gottfried's powerful serve four consecutive times.

"I guessed right on his passing shots maybe 20 percent of the time," said Gottfried. "He had a very good night with the passing shots. That was the difference. I think this is the best that he has passed."

Barazzutti clashed with the linesman again in the final set, angrily batting a ball and throwing his racquet to the ground.

"I was very angry. The linesman made many mistakes, against me, against him," said Barazzutti.

Dibbs and Nastase had not met since last year's confrontation here that was marred by curses, obscene gestures and shoves. The diminutive, 5-7 Dibbs kept his vow to ignore Nastase's celebrated antics this time.

Dibbs broke Nastase's first three serves and seized a quick 5-0 lead in the first set. He then broke the mistake-ridden Nastase three consecutive times in the final set.

Nastase lost 78 points because of miscues on his shots.

"I was really hitting the ball solid tonight," said Dibbs. "I didn't miss many shots and got to every ball."

"I was tired even after the first set, tired from practicing hard and the heat," said Nastase. "I sweated so much, I felt weak at times. I was just happy to see the last point."

Moe-Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Coach Doug Moe, who guided the San Antonio Spurs to their best record ever in the National Basketball Association this year, has signed a new contract with the club, team officials announced.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed Thursday, but Moe said he was pleased with the deal.

"I like this team and its future and I certainly like working in San Antonio where the city's support is just fantastic," he said. "I am ready for the season to begin right now."

Moe coached the Spurs to 52 regular season victories this year, the most the franchise has won its history in the old ABA or NBA. The Spurs won the Central Division title by eight games, but fell to the Washington Bullets in the playoffs.

Moe is beginning his third year as the Spurs' head man. He came to San Antonio in the summer of 1976 and the club finished its first season in the NBA with a 44-38 record before falling in the playoffs.

Moe, who has had one-year contracts in the past, said he has the players needed to win the NBA title. The team is led by George Gervin, who paced the NBA in scoring this year.

Angelo Drosses, Spurs president, said he was "confident Doug and his staff will continue to improve on their already impressive record in San Antonio.

"I am pleased with the agreement. I am most happy with Doug's work here, and I am positive the Spurs will rise to even greater heights in the coming season," Drossos added.

Tomjanovich

By The Associated Press

It was just like the old western movie scene . . . the soldiers arriving just in time to save the settlers from the Indians. Only this time it was the rain starting just in time to save Shreveport's Captains from a rally by the Jackson Mets.

The rain came in time to save Shreveport's abbreviated, five-inning 3-0 Texas League baseball victory over Jackson.

Jackson had runners at first and third with two out and the count was down to three-and-two on Bob Healy when the rain came . . . and came . . . and came. The umpires called the game, ruling it a complete contest.

The rain apparently didn't do too much to cool Jackson manager Bob Wellman, who protested the game on grounds that no effort was made to get a cover on the field and that there wasn't a ground crew around to help cover the field so that the game could be resumed when the rain stopped.

Bob Mazur gave up only four hits in taking the victory. Greg Harris took the loss.

In other less turbulent Texas League action, El Paso clipped Amarillo 11-4, Arkansas blasted Tulsa 10-4 and Midland edged San Antonio 7-6.

Bob Ewing and Danny Goodwin had two-run homers for El Paso. Joe Hicks accounted for all four Amarillo runs with a three-run homer and a solo homer. Ralph Botting went eight innings, giving up only six hits and striking out nine to raise his record to 2-1. Gary Lucas, who pitched for five innings, is now 2-4 with the loss.

Arkansas rode the home run hitting of Mike Calise and Gene Dotson to bop Tulsa. It was quite a slugfest with Arkansas getting 15 hits and Tulsa 13, including four doubles.

Mike Gatlin opened the second inning with a home run and later contributed a two-run double to pace Midland over San Antonio. Eric Grande also had a two-run homer for Midland in the second inning.

Texas League

HOUSTON (UPI) — It has been a harrowing season for Houston Rockets' Rudy Tomjanovich.

He has spent much of the past five months in hospitals for three operations to correct a concussion, a broken nose and jaw and eye damage.

Tomjanovich, who was leveled by a damaging punch by Kermit Washington in an early season game, underwent surgery Wednesday to restore a tear duct.

"That's it as far as surgery," said the All-Star forward said.

"My teeth feel a lot better, but they're a little loose. Lately they haven't bothered me, but occasionally there's some numbness," he said. "I just want it all over with. It's about time I'll be 100 percent healthy and get back to a normal home life."

The first operation realigned his jaw and wired it shut. On his second trip to the hospital the wires were removed.

"I've always had a pretty bad feeling about hospitals," said the 6-8, 250-pound Tomjanovich. "I just dreaded going there to see people. But they are good places. They try to help people," he said.

The completion of surgery could signal the setting of a date in federal court for the start of his damage suit against Washington's former team, the Los Angeles Lakers.

Attorneys for Tomjanovich are expected to file a petition soon specifying the amount of damages the Rockets' player seeks. Those attorneys were unavailable for comment Thursday.

Three months ago, when Lakers' attorneys sought to have the damage figure set, Tomjanovich's lawyer, James Kronzer, said, "The damages will greatly exceed $10,000. It'll be plenty."

The Rockets have filed a $1.4 million damage suit against the Lakers.

Washington was traded by the Lakers to the Boston Celtics soon after the incident.

Tomjanovich's actions just before he was hit by Washington are disputed. Tomjanovich said, as captain of the Rockets, he was moving to break up Washington's fight.

Chaps Put Five On Unit

Lubbock Christian College and Texas Wesleyan College dominated the All-District 8 (NAIA) team as selected by coaches at the recently completed district tournament at Arlington.

Those two teams supplied 10 of the 16 members on the 1978 team, the first step toward possible all-America recognition.

The Chaparrals landed first-baseman Tim Leslie, second-baseman Steve Brigante, outfielders Tommy Inman and Darius Copley and pitcher Oscar Acosta on the team.

TWC supplied catcher Steve Elliott, shortstop Keith Spreckles, first-baseman Larry Zerante, outfielder Chris Phillips and pitcher Jon Henke.

Both Midwestern and University of Dallas had two selections, Dallas Baptist and Paul Quinn one each.

Leslie currently leads all NAIA teams nationally in hits with 97 and RBIs with 79. Also, he has 16 doubles and 20 homers and is hitting .418. Copley, a first-team all-America as a junior in 1977, is hitting .353 with 36 RBIs, 13 doubles, four triples and five homers, and has stolen 44 bases in 48 attempts.

Inman is hitting at a .347 clip with 52 RBIs, 10 doubles, eight triples and 16 homers, and has 35 stolen bases in 36 attempts as the leadoff man. Brigante, like Leslie and Inman a sophomore, is hitting .344 with 12 doubles, five triples, six homers and 36 RBIs, and has 25 steals in 28 attempts.

Acosta, a freshman, has a 10-4 record after getting off to a 9-0 start, has allowed only 81 hits in 98 innings and had 91 strikeouts and a 2.14 ERA. However, he was injured in the first game of the district tournament earlier this week and is considered out for the remainder of the season.

The complete team:
CATCHER — Steve Elliott (Sr., .338, TWC).
INFIELD — Leslie, Brigante, Larry Zerante (Sr., .391, TWC), Keith Spreckles (Soph., .302, TWC).
OUTFIELD — Copley, Inman, Ronald Clayton (Sr., .411, Paul Quinn), Will Kelly (Fr., .339, Midwestern).
DESIGNATED HITTER — Donnie Watson (Sr., .352, University of Dallas).
PITCHERS — Acosta, Jon Henke (Jr., 9-1, 2.39 ERA, TWC), Daryl Frazier (Soph., 8-6, 3.12 ERA, Midwestern), Moose Coop (Sr., 10-2, 1.32 ERA, Dallas Baptist), Craig Watson (Sr., 8-1, 1.93 ERA, University of Dallas).

It took six generations of Beams to be satisfied that this is the best way to make 90-proof sour mash whiskey.

With 182 years of experience, you'd think we could make this whiskey faster than we do. We could, but we won't. We make 101-month-old Beam's Sour Mash Whiskey to be enjoyed, not guzzled.

We're not sure why slow-aging a minimum of 101 months is the secret of this whiskey. All we know is that at 90-Proof it yields a Sour Mash of truly exceptional taste.

Enjoy it without hurrying. Savor it the same way we make it. Slowly and leisurely.

Beam family members, Jerry and Booker, check a barrel of Beam Sour Mash Whiskey as it ages 101 long, slow months.

Lopez Heads LPGA Field

LUTHERVILLE, Md. (AP) — Nancy Lopez admits her grip is a "funny looking thing," but it didn't keep her from being a favorite as the Greater Baltimore Golf Tournament opened today.

Miss Lopez, of Roswell, N.M., the top money winner in the Ladies Professional Golfers Association tour so far in her rookie season, was expected to be challenged in the $65,000 tournament by Jan Stephenson, winner of the Women's International at Hilton Head, S.C., last weekend, and Jane Blalock, the defending champion.

In all, 78 professionals and four amateurs were slated to tee off in the first round at the Pine Ridge municipal course. The championship will be decided Sunday.

Miss Lopez, the winner of $56,698 in nine tournaments this year, says she is working on her swing, which Johnny Bass, the host pro at Pine Ridge calls "somewhat unusual."

"I'm sure I did a lot of things wrong with my swing," said Miss Lopez, who was taught by her father. "I know my grip was a funny looking thing. But I'm working on refining my swing. I feel like it has come a long way."

Conaway Feels Chances Of Winning Mile 'Good'

every day and I keep building my strength up. I guess I'm ready to go."

The muscular runner, who says his strength at the end of the race is his most valuable commodity, predicts a 4:12.0 could win the race.

"I know I can run a 12," he said. "I don't know about under that, though. But if everything is right, the pace is good and the weather nice, I might go a 4:10. That's been my goal all year and I feel like I can do it."

The second-place finisher at the state cross-country meet last year said he would like for one of his seven cohorts to set a "hot" pace, then let everyone have at it during the final 100 or so yards.

"My kick is strong," Conaway said. "And I think it could come down to a couple of us really running hard at the end. Whoever has the best kick will win the race."

Jerry LaBonte of Klein leads the group of milers with a 4:14.2. Jimmy Girardeau of Baytown Lee, LaBonte's arch rival, has posted a 4:18.0. That leaves Conaway in third with his 4:19.5.

"LaBonte's the one to beat," Conaway said. "I haven't run against him this year but I know he's the one."

When it comes to tough competition, Conaway has failed to see much of it. The only time this year he tackled a group of tough runners was at the Texas Relays. Incidently, he won the 3,000-meter run with an 8:40.1.

Conaway will be joined at the meet by teammate Chuck Perry, a high jumper. Also competing from Lubbock are Estacado's Michael Sims (100 and sprint relay) and Joseph Moore (440 and sprint relay), along with Dunbar's Billy Don Hardaway (discus and shot put). The Estacado sprint relay team, comprised of Sims, Moore, Robert Humphrey and Stanley Hall, also is entered.

Asked why he punishes his body, Conaway replied: "I really don't know. I guess I'm just hungry for success. It's what I'm best at, so I just keep it up. I'll just keep doing it until I reach my goals. That could be a long time, though."

The state meet this year, maybe more than in the past, will have more than its share of top sprinters.

Mitchell Bennett of Bonham heads the group of blazers with a 9.2 in the century. He's not the only one, either, able to pour it on as James Collier of Seagoville has posted a 9.3 this year. William Owens in the 220, as well as the 100, is also capable of a running a low time.

In team competition, Wortham should grab the Class B honors, if Mart can garner enough points in the field events it could capture the Class A title; Columbus —behind quarter-miler Charles Love—is a strong favorite in AA; Columbia—along with Odessa Ector—could threaten in AAA, and either Temple, Killeen or Houston Jones could emerge as the AAAA power.

Other top performers include quarter-miler Zeke Jefferson of Waco Richfield (47.9), halfmiler Kenny Schmidt of El Paso Austin (1:52.0), shot putter Michael Carter of Dallas Jefferson (71-1½), discus man Larry Adkisson of Lake Dallas (195-5), long jumper Willie Houston of Mt. Pleasant (24-10) and high jumper Spencer Sunstrum of Richardson Pearce (7-1½).

Richard Buck of Amarillo Palo Duro is expected to be one of the top performers at the meet. The Don is entered in not one, not two, but three events, the long jump and both hurdles.

Tech's First Letter Sweater Returns Home

W.W. "Windy" Nicklaus of Amarillo, captain of Texas Tech's first football team in 1925, returned his three football letter sweaters to the school in ceremonies Thursday.

Participants in the ceremony were Mrs. Magdalon Carpenter, wife of the late Hurley Carpenter, Tech's second football captain, and representatives of Tech, the museum, the athletic department and the Ex-Students Association.

Tech president Cecil Mackey accepted the three sweaters and other materials Nicklaus presented to the Tech Museum.

Nicklaus is a member of the class of 1928, which is observing its golden anniversary this year. He was an outstanding high school football, basketball and baseball player in Amarillo and played varsity football and baseball at Bucknell University in 1924, the year before he entered Tech.

In 1927, he was awarded a scholarship over and above the football grant, for having made the highest academic average of any athlete in school.

Nicklaus was associated as a coach, teacher and administrator with school systems at Tahoka, Amarillo, Borger, Altus (Okla.) Junior College, Oklahoma Baptist University, and Amarillo College.

He was a member of the West Texas State football coaching staff under Gus Miller from 1942-47.

He is a member of the Tech Athletic Hall of Fame and the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame.

Denver's Game Plan: Get Ball Inside To Issel

SEATTLE (AP) — It all looks so simple. Stop David Thompson and you've stopped the Denver Nuggets.

Actually, no one is going to stop Thompson, the Nuggets' 6-foot-4 guard and one of the premier shotmakers in the National Basketball Association.

But the Seattle SuperSonics, applying some old-fashioned chest-to-chest defense, have cooled off the Denver star and the Nuggets are feeling it.

Dennis Johnson, the Sonics' 6-4 guard, shadowed Thompson throughout Wednesday night's playoff game. Thompson wound up hitting just 6 of 19 shots and Sonics won 105-91 to take a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven Western Conference championship series.

Game 4 of the series is scheduled for tonight in the Coliseum, where the Sonics have won 18 straight — six in the playoffs. A loss tonight would virtually end the Nuggets' chances in the series.

Thompson and the rest of his Denver teammates know exactly where they stand.

"We're still in this series. But we've got to win one game here," he said.

"My shots just aren't dropping. I haven't been shooting the ball that well," continued Thompson, Denver's leading scorer in the regular season. "I missed a lot of easy shots (Wednesday night). If I'd made all the layins I had, I'd have scored 35 points.

"But Marvin (Webster) is pretty intimidating in there."

Denver's plan was to get the ball inside to Dan Issel, their 6-9 center. But Marvin Webster, Seattle's 7-1 center and a former Nugget, ruined that strategy.

"We dropped back and clogged the middle," said Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens. "When you drive and go up in the air and the middle is clogged, the only pass has to go out, not in."

Issel's sub-par performance underscored Denver's inside troubles. The Nuggets' leading scorer in the first two games of the series, Issel collected just 13 points on 6-for-17 shooting. He played 13 minutes in the second half after being called for his fourth personal foul early in the third period.

The Nuggets also must find a way to stop Fred Brown, who has bounced off the bench and bombed Denver in the final period of the last two games.

Brown tossed in 11 of his 17 points in the fourth period Wednesday night and teammate John Johnson scored 10 of his team-high 20 points in the final 12 minutes as the Sonics won going away.

"Brown made some unbelievable shots," said Thompson. "There's not much you can do on those one-handers. They either go in or they don't go in."

Despite Seattle's advantage in the series, Wilkens remains cautious.

"This is a good team we're playing," the Sonics coach said. "There'll be no easy victories. We feel confident we have a good ball club, but you have to keep mentally prepared. This will be no calk walk."

Webster, who came to Seattle in a five-player off-season trade with Denver that also made Paul Silas a Sonic, was a controlling factor in Game 3.

"I can be physical if I want to be, but I don't go out and try to beat on people," said Webster, who scored 14 points, grabbed 16 rebounds and blocked three shots. "We try to play the game hard. I'm just confident we can win the series."

Issel said Seattle was much more aggressive Wednesday night than in the first two games.

"You know that if you don't block out this team they're going to get two, three and four shots," he said. "Marvin played more aggressively than in the last two games. They were shutting down the middle quite well."

Nuggets starting forward Bobby Jones suffered a painful thigh bruise in a third-period collision with Seattle rookie forward Jack Sikma. He returned to play the fourth quarter, but his status for tonight's game was questionable.

Bullets Again Seek To Wrap Up Series

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Bobby Dandridge says if the Washington Bullets lose tonight's playoff game to the Philadelphia 76ers, the seventh game will have to be "our best game of the season."

Once again the Bullets, holding a 3-2 edge, will try to wrap up the National Basketball Association Eastern Division series — this time on their home-court. If they lose, the final series game will be played in Philadelphia Sunday.

"This is a must game, no doubt about it," Dandridge said. "Okay, we can still win all by beating Philly up there Sunday, but it would take our best game of the season to do that.

"This game tonight is the one we have to take. We have to be hungry, just like we were earlier in the series," Dandridge added.

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham predicts doom for the Bullets if they fail to conquer his club at the Capital Centre.

"If they don't win Friday, they're in trouble," Cunningham said. "They'll have the home-court advantage Friday, but they had better make the most of it because there's no way they're gonna win back in Philly if it goes seven."

The Bullets had a chance to clinch the series Wednesday, but Cunningham's team fought a tough battle for a 107-94 win.

Bullets Coach Dick Motta said the secret to beating the 76ers is to play as a team.

"There isn't any mystery to what we have to do to win. We can beat them playing one-on-one, playground basketball. But we can beat them playing better team ball. Every time we do that, we have been tough in the entire playoffs," he said.

"We want to push the ball up the floor and take the break when we have it. If we don't have the break, then we have to pull back and run our half-court offense correctly," he added.

Motta said his team was not sharp with Wes Unseld returning to the line-up Wednesday after being laid up with an ankle injury much of the series.

"It's good to get him back. I never thought he could possibly play so much Wednesday. Now I'm anxious to see what he can do with more work," Motta said.

"We worked hard in practice and I think we ironed out the wrinkles for him," he added.

St. Mary's Takes NAIA Playoff Series

HUNTSVILLE (Special)—Marty Zolkoski slammed a solo home run in the second inning and hit a two-run single in the fourth to lead St. Mary's to a 3-2 victory over Sam Houston and the NAIA District 4 baseball championship Thursday.

St. Mary's, which took the best-of-three series in two straight games, will compete in the Area II Tournament May 17-19 in Lubbock. It will play host LCC in the first round.

College Costs Not Tough For All

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

True or false: It's harder to put kids through college today than it used to be.

The answer: True AND false. Like a lot of other things, it all depends on your point of view.

Parents who have to put out $20,000 for four years at a private college will argue that it is much more difficult to find the money for education today than it was 10 years ago.

But the Congressional Budget Office says statistics show the cost of a year in college in 1976 actually represented a slightly smaller proportion of the median income of families with college-age children than it did in 1967.

Both sides are telling the truth. The stories about the high costs of college are accurate and so are the stories that reported the budget office's finding: "There is no evidence to indicate that the financial burden of sending children to college has been increasing."

"Part of it is a perception problem," said Elizabeth Suchar, director of Financial Aid Services of the College Scholarship Service, discussing the apparent contradiction.

Saving for college often used to be at the top of the list when a family set spending priorities, she said. Today that is not always true. Vacations, a new car or a second home may come first. "Living expectations are higher," Mrs. Suchar said.

The budget office noted something similar in its report, which was designed to measure the impact of various proposals to help the middle class meet costs for higher education. "Financial burden is a relative concept," the office said. "What is considered a reasonable financial obligation at one time may be considered an unreasonable financial burden at another time."

Rapid price rises also have affected the way people perceive saving and spending. Families are more aware than they used to be of the fact that inflation may erode the value of their savings; what is the point of putting $100 away toward a college education if, even with interest, it will be worth less than $100 by the time you need it?

Other factors that come into play include personal involvement. The problem is worse because it is happening to YOU. It is YOUR family that must make the sacrifices, not your neighbor's or your brother-in-law's. "Those people who have kids (ready for college) today, didn't 10 years ago," noted David Longanecker of the Congressional Budget Office.

The large numbers involved in paying the bills for college today can make the situation look worse than it really is — the perception problem again.

The budget office found, for example, that the median income of families with 18-to 24-year-old dependents was $7,923 in 1967. Total student costs — tuition, living expenses, books, etc. — for a year at a private college averaged $2,205. By 1976, the median income of the same types of families was $14,164 and student costs were $3,896. Income went up 78.8 percent; costs rose 76.7 percent.

People do not usually think in percentages, however. They think in dollars. When you multiply the annual college cost figure by four you get $8,820 for someone starting school in 1967 and $15,584 for someone beginning in 1976. The latter figure — nearly $16,000 — sounds much worse than the former — about $9,000 — even if it does not represent as big a proportion of your income.

But statistics still do not tell the whole truth.

The Congressional Budget Office used median income of American families with college-age children for its study. Median income means half the people earned more and half less.

But median income and middle class are not necessarily the same thing. The budget office itself describes middle income as $15,000 to $25,000 a year. The Labor Department said recently that the average urban family of four in the United States must earn $17,106 a year to maintain a middle-level standard of living. And a lot of people with incomes of more than $25,000 think of themselves as middle class, making ends meet but having nothing left over for the extras.

The statistics also leave a lot of things unmeasured. For example: How many of those families making the median income had two wage-earners? Other surveys indicate there are far more two-income families today than there were 10 years ago, but the budget office report does not include any breakdown.

And what about taxes? From 1967 to 1976, the Consumer Price Index — which does not measure taxes — went up 70.5 percent. A study by the non-profit Tax Foundation Inc. based on the median income for all families showed that federal taxes went up 141 percent in the same period. And, says the Tax Foundation, state and local taxes are rising even faster than federal levies. The statistics do not tell you what proportion of a family's disposable or after-tax income the cost of a year in college represents.

The Congressional Budget Office said the downturn in college enrollment rates for middle-class students during the early 1970s may have been a result of non-economic factors like the end of the draft and the temporary impact of the recession. The office said, therefore, that the middle class is not being squeezed out of higher education by rising costs.

That does not mean people are not suffering, said Longanecker of the budget office. They may be. And even if the problem is no worse than it was 10 years ago, "that's not to say it wasn't bad then."

True or false: It's harder to put kids through college today than it used to be.

The answer: True AND false, depending on your own circumstances.

Huey Newton Released On Bail Following Barroom Altercation

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Black Panther leader Huey Newton, arrested in a barroom brawl, was freed from the Santa Cruz County jail Thursday after posting $50,000 bail.

Newton, 36, and two other men were booked for investigation of assault with intent to commit murder after the melee at a bar in nearby Aptos, the Santa Cruz County sheriff's office said.

Arrested with Newton were Robert Heard, 29, and William Moore, 43. Moore later was released on $25,000 bond. Heard remained in custody in lieu of $25,000 bail.

Deputies said at least two shots were fired in the incident about 100 miles south of San Francisco.

A 26-year-old Aptos man, Kenny Hall, was treated and released at a local hospital for a minor head wound, officers said.

Bob Noonan, Santa Cruz County assistant district attorney, said Newton would probably be brought to court today for arraignment.

The slender Newton, a lightning rod of controversy since he co-founded the Black Panther Party in 1966, has been living here for several months and taking postgraduate courses at the University of California at Santa Cruz.

He ended a 2½-year self-imposed exile in Cuba last July to return to the United States to face trial on charges of shooting a 17-year-old Oakland prostitute who died after he fled the country. He also was accused of assault in the pistol-whipping of his tailor in a separate incident.

Newton had been free on $80,000 bail and resumed his active leadership of the party. Elaine Brown, who administered party affairs while he was gone, left Oakland a few weeks later amid reports of a rift between her and Newton.

Party headquarters declined comment on the arrest of Newton, who is the undisputed leader of the party that dropped its strident, gun-toting image in 1970 and has since emphasized community programs and ballot box power.

His attorney, Sheldon Otis, was unavailable for comment.

Newton's murder trial has been delayed by protracted legal hassles involving disclosure of government files Newton said would prove a conspiracy against him.

Newton said he returned from Cuba to clear his name and his party's reputation. He contended that Oakland police were fearful of the party's political clout and hoped to destroy it by discrediting him.

He served 22 months in state prison for voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death of an Oakland policeman, but the conviction was reversed on appeal in 1970. The charges were dropped after two subsequent trials ended in hung juries.

Last October, the prosecutor in the murder case against Newton, Tom Orloff, said in court that three gunmen had attempted to assassinate a key state witness. Louis T. Johnson, 27, who Orloff said was one of the gunmen and whose last known address was Black Panther headquarters, was killed in an exchange of gunfire in the incident.

Newton, through his attorney, denied any knowledge of an assassination plot.

Rail Safety Bill Approval Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation authorizing the Federal Railroad Administration to hire 600 safety inspectors next year is heading for almost certain House approval.

The bill, which increases spending authority under the 1970 Federal Railroad Safety Act to $37.7 million in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, was approved by a voice vote of the House Commerce Committee on Thursday.

The railroad administration is now authorized to hire 500 safety inspectors, but Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-Pa., said the agency has fewer than 200 inspectors on the payroll to examine tracks, trains and other rail equipment. Rooney said the agency cannot find enough qualified inspectors.

The committee action was prompted by accidents involving tank cars carrying deadly chemicals through Waverly, Tenn., and Youngstown, Fla., earlier this year, in which 23 persons were killed.

The Transportation Department is proposing a speedup in the installation of new safety equipment on railroad tank cars.

BALD EAGLE DIES

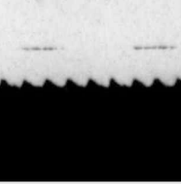

CINCINNATI (AP) — A bald eagle, born at the Cincinnati Zoo earlier this week, has died, zoo officials said. The bird died Thursday. Zoo spokeswoman Janet Ross said the cause of death would be investigated.

Many European Churches Attractive To Thieves

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Religious artifacts that adorn churches in Europe are disappearing at an alarming rate. Experts blame the thefts on a poor economy and a lack of security. Few treasures are recovered and even fewer cases prosecuted.)

By FENTON WHEELER

MADRID (AP) — The serenity that draws weary souls to the old cathedrals and churches of southern Europe is increasingly being violated by a different kind of visitor — thieves.

They are lured by the jewels, paintings and objects of gold and silvern many antique and priceless, that adorn these cool, dark sanctuaries, protected if at all by little more than glass cases.

"Looting is going on everywhere from the Alps to Sicily," says the Rev. Pietro Garlato, secretary of Pope Paul's commission for sacred art. Garlato has been touring the countryside teaching priests how to install burglar alarms and urging them to remove valuable objects from isolated, unguarded churches.

Italy records the highest number of thefts from churches — 12,000 items were stolen in that country last year, Garlato says — followed by Spain and France.

Minor thefts are discovered by the dozens, but others are spectacular.

In northern Spain last year, a lone burglar entered the cathedral at Oviedo. He felt so confident that he took time to eat a can of sardines. Then he left with an estimated $5 million in jewels from ninth century crosses.

It was the third burglary in six years at the cathedral and the 20th major church theft in Spain in the past decade. Archbishop Gabino Diaz called it an "incalculable historic loss."

This case was unusual. An arrest was made. When Jose Dominguez Saavedra was seized in Portugal several days later, police recovered the jewels that had been bashed out of the Cross of Los Angeles and the Cross of Victories, but church officials worry that the crosses may never be completely restored.

With a rare chance to prosecute a church theft case, the state is asking for an 18-year prison term.

At Oviedo's cathedral, however, not much has changed in the six months since the crime.

"We have protection plans," its dean says, "but no money yet."

This anomaly of owning art objects of great value but having no money to protect them is not isolated. Several years back priests of small town churches in Spain were found to be selling off their church treasures to meet expenses. Church officials say the practice has now stopped.

In northern Spain last year, a lone burglar entered the cathedral at Oviedo... Then he left with an estimated $5 million in jewels from ninth century crosses.

Growing concern over theft has prompted several efforts to halt it, with little success so far.

Parish priests in the Ossola Valley of the Italian Alps have issued a public appeal to police and parishioners to help stop the stream of stolen objects flowing across the Swiss border.

Parishioners were urged to watch for suspicious characters lurking about the churches and to jot down auto license numbers.

The pope's sacred art commission has urged the Italian parliament to require art dealers to certify the orgin of anything they sell, but "this has been in vain so far," Garlato says.

In Spain, art and antique dealers are required by law to notify the government if they come across something that could belong to the government. But authorities say thousands of expensive items go unreported, especially if dealers think they are unlikely to draw official attention. Police bear down on big robberies but can give only routine investigation to smaller ones, a church official says.

Italian authorities mail lists of all reported stolen objects to antique dealers in Switzerland, Germany, France, England and the United States.

At most, only a handful of stolen objects surface in the United States each year, according to Elizabeth Burns, director of the International Foundation for Art Research, which maintains lists of stolen items.

Generally only valuable paintings or other works of art reach the United States, she says. Items looted for their jewels or precious metals are usually broken up and remain in Europe.

The top works of art are usually recovered because they are instantly recognized by dealers, she says, and others are retrieved at customs or when they are sold to law enforcement agents posing as fences.

Despite attempts to turn the tide, looting continues.

In Piana Degli Albanesi, a Sicilian town inhabited by descendants of Albanian Christians who fled before Turkish invaders in the 15th century, thieves stole 19 ancient silver candlesticks, monstrances, large medals and censers (the vessels used to burn incense), thus depriving the town of rare examples of Albanian Christian craftsmanship.

In Sulmona, Italy, early this year, a 15th century mitre with precious stones was grabbed by burglars who hid overnight in the cathedral.

Garlato links the wave of stealing with economic conditions in Italy and Spain. "More jobless and needy means more thefts, and churches have become another target in a world where sacrilege is no longer feared," he says.

Church thefts aren't so widespread in northern Europe, where economic conditions are better, he says.

Images of the virgin are favorite targets of Spanish burglars because they usually are encrusted with precious stones priests say. Often the loss is more than monetary, as when a congregation, especially in a small town, loses the image of its patron saint.

Among the most valuable art stolen from churches in Italy are paintings by Tiziano, Giorgione, Mantegna, Tiepolo and Caravaggio. A 15th century painting by Anton Perez was lifted from the cathedral in southern Seville in 1972.

"Luckily, the most valuable items are usually recovered because they can hardly be sold, even on the clandestine market," Garlato says.

Yet "The Birth of Christ" by 17th century master Caravaggio, stolen from a small church in Palermo, Sicily, in 1969 has never been recovered.

Many stolen items end up in antique shops in Milan, Naples, Venice, Barcelona, and Malaga, or in flea markets in Madrid or Rome.

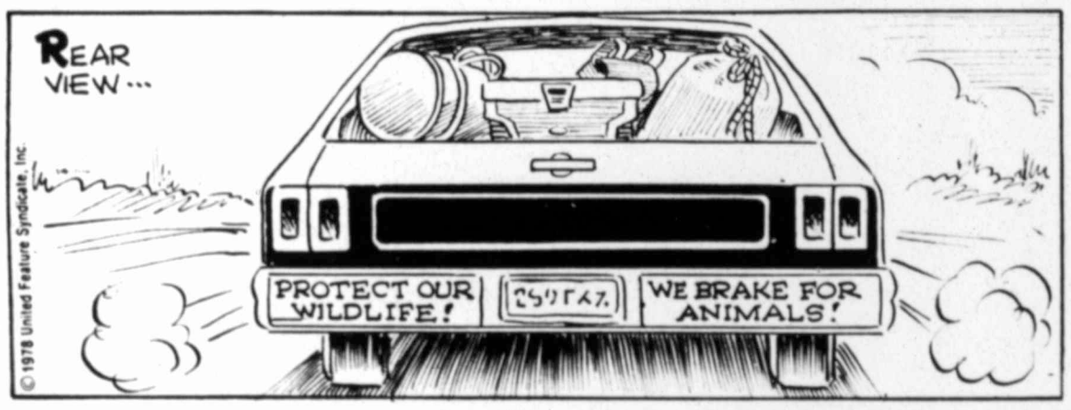

Candlesticks are in great demand in Italy, where antique dealers fit them with light bulbs and sell them as lamps for $50 to $1,100.

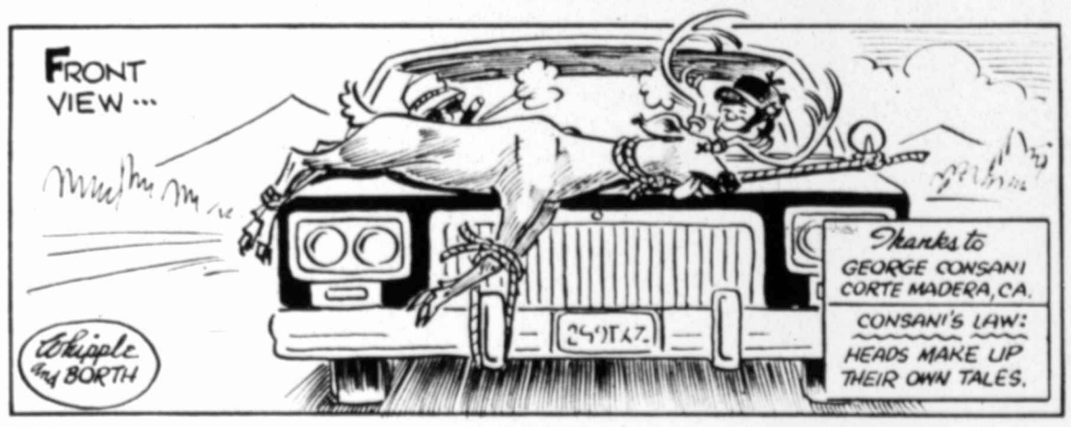

By the time a renaissance candlestick or a gold mass vessel from a Sicilian church shows up in Venice, police are virtually powerless to recover the object or find the thief.

The weekly publication of the Novara Diocese, which borders on Switzerland, rues that "it is no secret how easy it is to smuggle art items across the border and see them impudently displayed in elegant shopping windows."

Homes In Utah Town Sinking Into Ground

CEDAR CITY, Utah (AP) — Evelyn Dettamanti lies in bed at night listening to sounds that tell her that her $30,000 home is shifting and sinking, foundation and all, into the red-tinged soil of the Highland Park subdivision.

Neighbor Gary Jensen dug up a section of his basement to reconnect a sewage pipe that pulled apart when one side of his home tilted eight inches and ripped a thick crack along the length of the concrete floor.

Across the street, Kenneth Boren keeps the lawn around his brick-and-wood home well manicured, even though huge cracks along the home's foundation and throughout the finished basement and upstairs rooms are forcing him to move.

Upwards of 36 homes in this pleasant southern Utah town are sinking into soil that literally can't hold water. The Utah Geological and Mineral Survey calls it "hydrocompaction."

"When the soil becomes wet, it just falls apart. It doesn't have the strength to stand its own weight, let along anything sitting on it," said survey director Don McMillan. "Sort of like wet sand."

That's one theory.

McMillan says the area sits over a fault zone in the subsurface that could be cracking, allowing earth supporting the homes to settle.

Whatever the cause, homeowners are getting out. Since they can't sell their homes, they're taking them along. But, the costs of moving homes, buying other lots and pouring foundations are astronomical.

Los Angeles Hit By Mild Quake

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A mild earthquake shook the western Los Angeles area late Wednesday night. There were no reports of injury or damage.

The Caltech seismological lab in Pasadena said it was "a small quake, registering 2.8 on the Richter scale — not strong enough to set off our alarm — at 10:45 p.m., with an epicenter somewhere around Santa Monica."

The quake was felt mainly in the Beverly Hills, Santa Monica and West Los Angeles areas and was not noticed in other areas less than five miles away.

About 15 calls were received by police in Beverly Hills, three in West Los Angeles and four in Santa Monica.

ITT Stockholders Veto Further Disclosures

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — "There's no corporate purpose to be served" by further reporting on International Telephone Telegraph Corp.'s political activities in Chile, ITT President Lyman C. Hamilton says in arguing successfully against a proposal for further disclosure.

The proposal, made by church groups holding shares of ITT stock, would have ordered the conglomerate to report on its "political involvement, political contributions and questionable payments in Chile."

In the vote on the proposal, tabulated at the corporation's annual meeting here Wednesday, 87.5 million shares of stock were cast against issuing the report, and just 2.95 million shares were cast in favor.

"Most of our stockholders are just a little bit weary with this preoccupation with the past," Hamilton said. "This has been investigated and reinvestigated," both by the federal government and by the company.

"Now we are on the record as showing this company is not disclosing the facts," the Rev. Michael Crosby of Milwaukee, one of those who introduced the proposal, said in an interview after the vote. "As shareholders, we have the right to know what the company is doing."

Crosby said many questions remain about ITT political activities in Chile from 1960 to 1975.

It was disclosed in 1975 that both ITT and the CIA had funded election opponents of Salvador Allende, the Marxist who became president of Chile. ITT had millions of dollars invested in Chile.

ITT Chairman Harold Geneen said at the 1976 annual meeting of the corporation that "some $350,000 of ITT funds may have been sent to Chile in the year 1970 for the purpose of bolstering the democratic cause there...."

Hamilton told the approximately 400 shareholders who attended the meeting Wednesday that ITT has "established formal written policies designed to prevent the recurrence of any questionable payments in the future."

He said ITT subsidiaries paid $8.7 million from 1971-75 to foreign customers and government officials "in connection with their export sales."

He said ITT made no political contributions in the last year and has adopted "a tight code of ethics at home and in each host country which go well beyond any legal requirements."

Hamilton also told shareholders that the company's 1978 first quarter net income of $157 million, or $1.15 per share, was the highest for any first quarter in company history.

"We again expect to report record sales, record net income and record earnings per share" in 1978 "assuming only that there's reasonable equilibrium between the dollar and the major European currencies," Hamilton said.

In other voting, shareholders overwhelmingly approved the election of the 20 men, including Geneen, who were nominated to be company directors.

Foreign Banks Eye Japanese

TOKYO (AP) — A European Community commissioner said this week he had discussed with Japanese officials ways to liberalize Japan's monetary system and make it easier for foreign banks to expand here.

Speaking to reporters after winding up two days of talks, Christopher Tugendhat said Japanese officials told him the question of foreign banks branching out in Japan would "be treated with a high degree of flexibility."

He said he was impressed by the "strength and commitment" toward modernizing and internationalizing Japan's financial institutions.

"It is clear Japan has an objective they want to work toward," he added.

Asked when he thought certificates of deposit by Japanese and foreign banks would be introduced, he said, "It is certainly not a matter of weeks."

Tugendhat had talks with Japanese External Economic Affairs Minister Nobuhiko Ushiba, Finance Minister Tatsuo Murayama, Teiichiro Morinaga, governor of the Bank of Japan, and others.

Among the 66 species of North American birds that visit Ecuador in the winter are the Carolina rail, the red-eyed vireo, the rose-breasted grosbeak and the scarlet tanager.

DR. LAMB

Malignant Melanoma

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read The Health Letter on the care of the skin and noted what you said about malignant melanoma. I went to the doctor because of a mole on my back which had turned black. He said I had a mole which needed to be taken off. I went to the surgeon and he asked me if it ever bled or if I ever had any discharge from it and I said no. He removed it and sent it to the lab for study. The next day he called me and told me it was melanoma and I would have to go into the hospital because he had to go deeper and wider.

After that operation he assured me everything was fine and I was very happy about it.

In your article you said that skin cancer, other than malignant melanoma, can usually be completely cured. Are you saying that malignant melanoma cannot be cured? I'd really appreciate your opinion.

DEAR READER — No. Malignant melanoma can be cured if it is found early enough. That is why it is so important for anyone who has a change of any type in a mole to go see the doctor at once.

Malignant melanoma is more dangerous than most skin cancers. The more common form of skin cancers change slowly and are easy to catch early enough to effect a complete cure, but you can't fool around with malignant melanoma. It tends to spread much earlier so it is imperative that you get treatment as early as possible. Since so many people with malignant melanoma do not go to the doctor soon enough the cure rate for it is far below the cure rate for ordinary skin cancer.

Your case points out the value of early detection and it also points out the value of being informed and getting an annual examination to detect such medical problems that can be cured if found and treated early. Other readers who want The Health Letter number 7-10, Your Skin: Sun, Aging, Spots and Cancer, can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — For years my neighbor has shared her vegetables from her home grown garden with us. This year I discovered they have been using their "dog-droppings" as part of their fertilizer. Now I've lost my appetite for their vegetables. Would you? Is this safe? Or is it bad?

DEAR READER — I never cease to be amazed at what I find in my mail. My first question is, have you ever been ill after eating the vegetables over the many years you have been doing this? The answer is no.

Although there are diseases that can be spread by dogs this doesn't happen because the manure is used as fertilizer. The fertilizer should be under the surface of the ground and is just as good as cow manure which people buy to use and farmers have used for centuries. No, I wouldn't hesitate to eat the vegetables after washing them. And all vegetables from any garden should be adequately washed regardless of what garden they come fron.

I might remind you that the biggest danger in using natural fertilizers comes from human sources. That is because we are prone to pick up diseases from other humans. Many diseases of animals do not affect people and vice versa. The dangers from dog manure come from that on the surface of the ground, not that which is buried.

Acceptability 'Key' In Birth Control

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before commiting too much time and money to studying new birth control methods, contraceptive researchers should first consider whether the public will accept and use the new approach if it is perfected, says a leading researcher.

Dr. Sheldon J. Segal of the Rockefeller Foundation in New York City said that acceptability, along with safety and effectiveness, is a critical factor in the rise or fall of a contraceptive method.

Speaking at a National Academy of Sciences symposium on using animals in birth control research this week, Segal said animals probably wouldn't help much in determining acceptability.

Direct human observation is best, but contraceptives shouldn't get to the stage of human testing before someone thinks about practicality and acceptability, he said.

"We must keep acceptability in mind before designing a contraceptive," Segal told the researchers. "We must visualize how an agent is to be used, how it gets to its site of action.

"Consider this before launching extensive and expensive animal tests of new methods," he said.

Other researchers at the meeting said that safe and effective contraceptives that were inconvenient, clumsy or embarrassing to use would have low acceptance.

Soviets Look Forward To Railroad's Completion

By CHARLES M. MADIGAN

CHEGDOMUN, Pacific Siberia, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — It is a three-hour ride by bus from Chegdomun on a road cut from the Siberian forests to the small stream called Kycharanky.

Most of the ride is through wilderness, thick birch forest that stands in stark contrast to an unusually blue Siberian sky. The temperature is 45 below zero.

There is a fire burning on the banks of the frozen creekbed and the shadows of bulldozers and huge construction cranes seem foreign amid the birch trees and snowdrifts.

A team of workers is building a bridge here for a 2,500-mile railroad called BAM — the Baikal-Amur Magistral. When the railroad is completed, it will be the pride of the Soviet Union, about one fourth of the mileage is finished.

The statistics alone are staggering.

There will be $15 billion in investment, 200 stations, 3,700 bridges and culverts, 15 miles of tunnels and 70 million square feet of housing.

Nearly a half million people are said to be working on the railroad and they are hailed as heroes and pioneers in the nation. The Soviets have launched a campaign every bit as impressive as those from Madison Avenue to sell BAM.

Four years ago, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev called it the project of the century and set 1983 for its completion.

When finished, the line will wind across a land notorious for earthquakes, severe winter weather and summer bogs and swamps. It will slice through mountains plagued by avalanches and cross rivers that change their courses almost yearly.

The railroad, which is to run from Ust-Kut in south central Siberia to Komsomolsk-on-Amur, will be the key that opens the vast resources of the pacific region of Siberia to the Soviet Union.

Currently, the region is served by the Trans-Siberian railroad, a line that was constructed in Czarist times in the south and that is perilously close to the Chinese border.

The Trans-Siberian has served the Soviet Union well, but it has suffered from overuse. More importantly, it could easily be crippled by the Chinese. It is less than 80 miles from China for more than half its length.

BAM would solve that strategic problem because it is much further north. More important, its completion, if accomplished by 1983, will open vast stretches of Siberia to settlement and development.

At times, the problems seem insurmountable. Even the construction of the small bridge across Kycharanky stream is a special project that called for unique design and construction procedures.

Piles were driven deep into rock beneath the stream bed and then heavy concrete foundations were poured on top of them. Reinforced concrete towers that will hold the road bed are under construction.

Vladimir Zudilov, the chief of construction at the site, pointed to wooden compartments that seemed balanced on top of the concrete towers.

They held compressors and heating equipment. The concrete must be "cooked" and allowed to set at warm temperatures inside these compartments. Core samples of the concrete are tested to make sure the structure is setting properly.

The bridge construction started last June and should be completed during March, according to Zudilov.

He has been on the job in Siberia for five years, almost since construction began. He is paid well by Soviet standards, for living and working in the harsh environment of Siberia — 450 to 500 rubles ($630 to $700) a month.

He has 35 workers on the job and the average salary is 250 rubles ($350) a month, with higher salaries paid on a seniority basis.

Although no firm figure is available for the work force along the entire BAM project, various officials say there is a labor shortage. One said, "There will never be an unemployment problem in the region."

Brezhnev elevated BAM to one of the nation's most important building programs and challenged Soviet youth to volunteer to work in the bitter winter cold and boiling summer heat of Siberia.

The government has provided a number of incentives to lure workers, including salaries that double the national average of 220 rubles ($308) a month.

Workers who stay on the job for three years get a trip anywhere they wish in the Soviet Union. Their housing is cheap, about 12 rubles ($16.80) a month.

For the politically ambitious, there is the BAM battle stripe, an award that adds to prestige and position within the Communist Party.

In 1976, the Supreme Soviet instituted an award in the form of a bronze medal for BAM workers who stayed on the job for three years or more. It was only the fourth time such a medal has been designated.

The railroad has been criticized in the West, where its opponents say the combination of poor organization that marks many Soviet efforts and adverse conditions will mean its doom.

But the people in the cities that will stand to benefit most from the completion of BAM discount the criticism. They told western reporters during a recent tour arranged by the Soviet Foreign Ministry that Soviet planners were aware of the problems they faced.

In the city of Khabarovsk, which is not on the BAM line, but will be one of the main beneficiaries, Soviet engineers pointed out that the nation leads the world in experience in building and developing tundra and frozen regions.

"We have anticipated the problems and we are prepared to deal with them," said one engineer when questioned about the possibility that portions of the line will sink into the delicate permafrost in the region.

There also were questions about the cost and benefit of such an undertaking, which gobbles up the equivalent of 1 percent of the Soviet Gross National Product.

Supporters say the railroad will open access to one massive copper deposit with reserves estimated at 1.2 billion tons and another coking coal deposit at Yakutia with a reserve estimate of 40 billion tons.

In addition to those natural resources, the entire Pacific region is rich in coal and timber and has substantial deposits of magnesium, nickel, gold, molybdenum used in aircraft metals, bauxite, kaolin and nephelit.

And supporters point out that BAM completion will mean the development of Pacific Siberia and the opening of extensive trade with the West, particularly Japan, a nation rich in technology and capital, but poor in natural resources.

TRAVEL ON A BUDGET

Many Hotel Frills Often Unnecessary

By BARBARA McDOWELL

You visit Yellowstone Park to see Old Faithful. You visit Orlando to explore Disney World. You visit Nepal to admire the Himalayas.

You don't travel all that way just to sit in a hotel. So why pay for fancier accommodations then you need?

The more frills, the higher the rates. If you're not planning to go near the water, don't spend the additional dollar or two a night that a facility with swimming pool will cost you.

One good way to find reasonably priced accommodations is to use a travel agent. But if you prefer to make your own vacation plans, here are some tips that can save you money:

— Investigate hotel and motels outside the high-priced downtown and tourist areas. But make sure the money you save by staying off the beaten path will not be consumed by added transportation costs.

— If you will be driving, select a hotel or motel that offers free parking. This is especially important if you will be visiting a large city.

— See if a hotel or motel has a toll-free reservation number before writing a letter or making a long distance call. Check the yellow pages of your phone book and the toll-free information operator.

— When making reservations, specify how many will be staying in the room and how many beds you will require. Then request the cheapest room in that category.

— Inform the hotel or motel if you will arrive much past 6 p.m. Otherwise, your room may be given to somebody else. You may have to put up a deposit if you plan to arrive late.

— Ask for written confirmation of your reservation, including the rate. Also double check the rate upon arrival.

— Inquire about special rates, such as the bargain packages city motels frequently offer to weekend guests.

— Many hotels and motels allow children to stay free in their parent's room. But check the management's definition of "child."

— Many city hotels have ticket agents who can get you seats for the theater or symphony. But you can usually save money by buying tickets directly from the box office.

How can you find accommodations that are clean cheap? One way is to consult a directory of budget facilities:

— "Best Dollar Value Lodging" include more than 1,000 motels and hotels in all of the continental United States. Order for $1.50 from Budget Motels and Hotels of America, 1115 E. Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn. 55414.

— "1978 National Directory of Budget Motels" lists 1,450 facilities in 48 states. Order for $2.95 from Pilot Books, 374 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Eating out can cost vacationers as much each day as a hotel room. Here are a few hints for cutting meal costs:

— Don't order from room service. Prices are higher, selections are limited — and chances are greater your food will arrive cold.

— Eat the day's big meal before 2 p.m. Many restaurants charge more for dinners than lunches.

— If you want to eat at your hotel or motel, choose the coffee shop over the restaurant.

— Ask local working people to recommend restaurants that are both good and inexpensive.

— If there are children in your party be sure to ask about special menus.

And if all else fails, rest assured that there is a branch of your family's favorite fast-food restaurant nearby.

Russians Use Propaganda To Sell BAM

CHEGDOMUN, Pacific Siberia, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — With all the hoopla of Madison Avenue, the Soviet Union has mounted a campaign to sell the Baikal-Amur railroad to the people.

There are BAM buttons, BAM pictures and BAM postcards. There are BAM movies and the people who build BAM wear gray jackets with a BAM emblem on the sleeve.

Western reporters on a recent trip to the BAM region, which stretches from the northern tip of Lake Baikal to Khabarovsk, were shown two classic propaganda movies about the railroad.

One was shown in the hall of the city administration building in Chegdomun, a town of 16,000.

The hero was a nordic type who appeared to have been cut from a block of granite.

Commoners wearing fluffy shapkas and thick jackets followed his orders even through the raging Siberian snowstorms. However, he never wore a hat and always had his coat open.

The film's climax came when dynamite charges exploded at the beginning of the excavation of a tunnel.

The hero was shown standing in the wind while the narrator remarked it was an important day for him — "he has become a member of the Communist party."

The film also has lots of flagwaving, singing and hand clapping. Workers from warmer climates claim they have never been happier than in frozen Siberia.

You can buy a series of BAM buttons for three rubles ($4.20).

In sequence, the buttons show a railroad bridge with the line "This is a railroad bridge" beneath the picture, a railroad station with the line "This is a railroad station" underneath, a track layer, described, of course, as "A track layer" and on and on.

One of the most prized souvenirs is a chrome-plated railroad spike from Alonka, a tiny settlement that is a three-hour bus ride north of Chegdomun across frozen rivers and bumpy mountain roads.

It carries the date 1978 along with the letters BAM and the name of the region.

Newspapers of the Soviet Union have elevated BAM construction to regular feature and spot news coverage.

"It is called the project of the century, and rightly," said the Soviet magazine New Times.

Bird Deaths Blamed On Glass Siding

CHICAGO (UPI) — Deceptive reflections off the acres of glass lining the sides of the McCormick Place exposition center are responsible for the deaths of dozens of songbirds migrating to Canada, bird specialists say.

More than 50 birds have been found dead since Tuesday near the wall of the center facing Lake Michigan, said William Beecher, director of the Chicago Academy of Sciences.

The muge expanse of glass acts as a mirror, reflecting the sky and lake. The birds fly into it, believing they are continuing over the lake surface, Beecher said Wednesday.

The dead and injured birds included white-throated and song sparrows, yellow-and orange-crowned warblers, whippoorwills, ovenbirds, finches, brown thrashers and several varieties of thrush.

Sun Actions Blamed On Magnetic Stress

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Magnetic stress is causing the current high level of solar activity resulting in flares and spots, Joe Surtorik of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said.

When broken magnetic stress sets off the flares that shoot out thousands of miles from the skn's surface, he said. The sunspots are intense magnetic fields on the sun that become visible to the human eye.

The flares may disrupt radio communications and sometimes long-distance wire communications, Surtorik said, but no accurate data exists on effects caused by the sunspots.

He said Tuesday's flares would be the last visible for a while, but since the magnetic disturbances will continue more will be seen.

Nazis May Produce Governor Candidate

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — A member of a Nazi organization Wednesday said the group may run a candidate for governor this year.

John Randel of The Fourth Reich told KRMG Radio that a political announcement by the Tulsa-based group would be made soon.

"Our first objective, of course, will be recruitment and the dissemination of information concerning political activities," Randel said. "We're also considering fielding in the near future political candidates.

"We're considering the governorship of this state, for example."

Randel said his organization has members in Tulsa, Oklahoma City and Enid. He refused to say how many members it has.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Stock Gains Outnumber Losses, 3-1

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose sharply in heavy trading today, registering enthusiasm over reports that President Carter might be planning to tone down his tax-cut proposal.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 6.58 at 840.78 on top of Thursday's 12.04-point gain.

Advances outnumbered declines by about a 3-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume totaled 22.63 million shares by noontime.

A published report from Washington this morning said the President was likely to announce soon that he was trimming his proposed tax cut from $25 billion to about $20 billion. He was also said to be want its effective date pushed back from Oct. 1 to next Jan. 1.

Analysts said the report was greeted as a signal that the White House was adding fiscal-policy measures to the Federal Reserve's campaign to subdue inflation.

They noted that a smaller tax cut would tend to reduce the federal budget deficit, which is regarded on Wall Street as a primary source of inflationary pressures.

After an early 8-point rise, however, the Dow leveled off. Brokers noted that the average had again reached the 840-850 range, where last month's rally bogged down.

Glamor issues leading the advance included Texas Instruments, up 2 at 77½; McDonald's, ahead 1⅛ at 50; Polaroid, 1⅜ higher at 36⅛, and Xerox, up ⅞ at 50¾.

The NYSE's composite index rose .43 to 54.81. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .59 at 142.15.

Jackie Bisset Now Bankable Star

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The difference between a movie star and an actress, although the two are not mutually exclusive, is primarily money and a choice of parts.

At the moment the queens of film are Jane Fonda, Faye Dunaway and perhaps Diane Keaton. In a special category are Barbra Streisand and Liza Minnelli, both musical stars.

Generally it takes a breakthrough film to elevate a successful actress to superstar status. For Fonda it was "Klute." Dunaway turned the corner in "Network." Keaton broke the barrier in "Annie Hall."

They collected Academy Awards in their break-through films, although not all Oscar-winning actresses enjoy superstardom, e.g., Ellen Burstyn, Glenda Jackson, Louise Fletcher, who remain respected actresses but not "bankable."

Bankability is the key factor in distinguishing actresses from superstars.

When an actress attracts the public to the box office, she becomes a member of an exclusive sorority which enjoys the privilege of first look at scripts, a salary in the million-dollar bracket and perhaps even a piece of the action.

Most recently ascended to that lofty circle is Jacqueline Bisset, a breathtaking beauty who has not won an Academy award in her 30 films. Perhaps she never will. But then neither did Marilyn Monroe.

The vital element for Jackie Bisset is her break-through movie, "The Deep."

A potboiler of a film with little going for it, "The Deep" costarred Nick Nolte and Robert Shaw, neither of whom is reknowned for box-office magnetism.

Not the least of "The Deep's" promotional campaign was a photograph of Jackie in a wet T-shirt.

Due almost solely to the presence of Miss Bisset, "The Deep" was 1977's third largest boxoffice attraction, behind "Star Wars" and "Smokey and the Bandit."

Since then, Jacqueline has starred in the controversial "The Greek Tycoon," a thinly disguised story of Aristotle Onassis and Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. She also has costarred with George Segal in "Someone is Killing the Great Chefs of Europe."

The simple fact is that the English-born actress has become bankable. A producer with a script and Jackie's signature on a contract means he can finance his movie without mortgaging his house.

Jackie is being offered big parts in major movies that never came her way in the past, thanks to "The Deep."

Curiously, none of Jacqueline's roles were bravura characterizations calling for histrionic pyrotechnics. Until recently Jackie's parts were more decorative than dramatically demanding.

"I've finally broken away from playing victims," the blue-eyed beauty said, taking a rest between films.

"I've been limited to playing mysterious, regal women. I'm the least regal woman in the world. I don't want to be mysterious and interesting and pale.

"In 'The Greek Tycoon' I play a reserved, very womanly role with some depth to it. But in 'The Great Chefs' I get to be perky and sparkle for the first time on the screen.

"I want to play irreverent characters and comedy. There is a side of me in real life that is very mocking of myself and I'd love to play a character who doesn't take herself too seriously. I certainly don't take myself seriously."

Jackie, however, does ponder the opportunities that lie ahead now that she has become a bankable superstar.

She is assured of being offered more and better roles in prestigious pictures than she has in the past. Yet she doesn't anticipate playing excessively dramatic roles.

"I'm a lot better actress than I was 10 years ago," she said. "So I'm glad my very early pictures weren't really smash hits.

"I think I'm more interesting than I was and my work should become more interesting as a consequence. Now I'm more of an authority figure on screen and not a popularity figure.

"Great parts are easier to play because they carry you through. It's very difficult to play a role that doesn't have impact or a clear-cut attitude — the kind I've been doing.

"If a part calls for circles under your eyes and requires you to fall apart, people will say, 'what a fine actress she is,' just doing histrionics.

"Audiences react to mysterical roles, grubby characters, alcoholics, neurotics and prostitutes and the insane. Actresses get Academy Awards for playing those flashy roles.

"They aren't half as difficult as the roles that hold a picture together without flash because you don't have a fixed attitude to get into.

"My role in 'Greek Tycoon' was demanding because I play an elegant woman, very contained and with no extravagant gestures. I had to keep her right physically, too, which is quite a strain. They don't give awards for those roles."

But they do give money. Quite a lot.

Television Comedians Take Aim At Politicians In Two Programs

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Alan King points out that Jimmy Carter is always smiling, and asks in angry perplexity at the sad state of the world, "Doesn't anybody tell that man anything?"

Rich Little somehow melts into Richard Nixon before your very eyes and says with ponderous sincerity, "I may have done wrong as your president, but don't blame me — I voted for McGovern. Twice."

There'll be a hot time on television for politicians Saturday when Rich Little and Alan King perform on back-to-back ABC specials —Little from 8-9 p.m., King from 9-10 p.m., Central time.

"Rich Little's Washington Follies" presents impressionist-impersonator Little as every president since Harry Truman, aided and abetted by Suzanne Somers of "Three's Company," Dick Van Patten of "Eight is Enough," and Robert Guillaume of "Soap." They're all ABC shows, coincidentally.

Little, thinner than when he had his own show on NBC, delivers marvelous impersonations of politicians, and of show business personalities ranging from John Wayne to Truman Capote, and including Jack Benny, Jimmy Stewart, Henry Fonda and Carol Channing. His Henry Kissinger is hilarious.

Unfortunately, the writing is less hilarious — few of the lines are as funny as Little's impressions. At least one sketch, which pokes fun at Amy Carter, is in bad taste. All's fair in love and politics, but let's not visit the sins of the father...

The show ends with a touching and sincere tribute to the late Sen. Hubert Humphrey.

The transition is a natural into "Alan King's Second Annual Final Warning," since a lot of what King is warning us about is political — and there's Dick Van Patten again as guest — along with John Astin, Nancy Walker and Susan St. James.

The King show, with its futuristic set that looks like a cross between a missile silo and the deck of the starship Enterprise, opens with a series of natural disasters, from hurricane-churned seas to snowy avalanche to erupting volcano.

"And that's the good news," King says, and goes on to warn America about the perils of everything from politics to hospital care. Tongsun Park is more dangerous than Central Park; poor men who are arrested use their one phone to reach a lawyer — rich ones call their publishers and join the crook of the month club.

He points out that a "born again" former Nixon administration official may make $2 million on his book, while the Apostles never made $11 in their whole lives — they didn't have paperback rights to the Bible.

Economists' Group Hopeful On Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five economists interviewed by U.S. News and World Report say inflation can be slowed without getting the nation into a recession. But none of the five, including those who think President Carter is on the right track, expect quick results from the present anti-inflation program, the magazine says.

The five are Albert H. Cox Jr. of Merrill Lynch Economics Inc., Paul A. Samuelson of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Otto Eckstein of Data Resources Inc., John W. Kendrick of George Washington University and Saul H. Hymans of the University of Michigan.

Critic Terms New Play At Broadway Theater 'Musical Dud'

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — A musical dud called "Angel" descended on Broadway Wednesday, the woebegone victim of split theatrical personality.

The elaborately staged production at the Minskoff Theater is based on 1957's Pulitzer Prize play "Look Homeward, Angel," which in turn was derived from one of Thomas Wolfe's monumental bio-novels.

Repeating as the adaptor, Ketti Frings, a veteran Hollywood scripter, has teamed up this time with Peter Udell, who doubles as lyricist for Gary Geld's score.

The Geld-Udell team succeeded previously with "Shenandoah" and "Purlie" but this time fumbled badly with far greater plot and emotional complexities.

The creative threesome's tasks apparently were to retell the elusive, introspectively sentimental story of a 17-year-old boy and his family, and at the same time stick in a lot of slick, showbiz razzmatazz.

The results, under co-producer Philip Rose's wayward direction, are about two-thirds music hall hokum and one-third simplistic soap opera.

From an opening in which all the residents at Eliza Gant's North Carolina boarding house get together for a joyous singalong about "all the comforts of home," the proceedings capriciously topsy-turvy between nonsense and solemnity.

When eventually some effort is briefly made to reveal the Gant family's inner turmoils, audience confusion was clearly revealed by inappropriate bursts of laughter.

Geld's music includes a lot of old-fashioned hummability, and in other circumstances such numbers as "Make a Little Sunshine," "A Dime Ain't Worth a Nickel" and "Astoria Gloria" would be bright instead of vulgar.

The large cast, headed by Frances Sternhagen and Fred Gwynne as the unhappily welded parents, is generally commendable considering their assigned chores. Gwynne reveals a heartily comic baritone.

As the family's eager young hope, Don Scardino is boyishly vivid, while Leslie Ann Ray, the girl who runs from romance, is more pretty than persuasive.

Deficit Blamed For Price Hikes

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — "What we do in our pricing is not as important as a $60 billion budget deficit," said C. William "Bill" Verity, Jr., chairman of Armco, Inc., in response to a question on inflation.

Verity permitted no misunderstanding. In his view, steel pricing was not a cause of inflation but a response to it. The source of inflation, he indicated, was in Washington. In the budget deficit.

Armco president Harry Holiday Jr. agreed. In a conversation earlier, he had commented on the dangers of running such a deficit while the country was at the peak of its most recent economic expansion.

Holiday blamed the situation on President Carter and said he looked beyond to the day when a more decisive president would recognize that a deficit of such magnitude can only force prices higher.

"We have to balance the budget," Verity said again to the small audience of news people, gathered by Armco for a traditional annual dinner and presentation about steel and the economy's future.

"Washington's solution to everything is to spend more," he continued, after explaining that inflation is the top economic concern of his company. "The people will rebel," he said.

"In fact," he continued, proving by his emphasis that inflation and the budget were indeed of very great concern, "some of our economists tell us the deficit could be not just $60 billion but $80 billion."

Analysis

Asked how he would correct it, Verity suggested a moratorium on new spending, and a "good look" at existing commitments "until we can get inflation out of the system."

These weren't isolated views but rather indicative of much business commentary. Business tends to view the budget as the inflation engine and itself as the hapless victim tied to the railroad tracks.

The view suggests that public support for the president's anti-inflation efforts may be only a practical measure, not in comaraderie with the administration against a common evil.

The evil, business is saying over and over again, is the deficit. To blame business, they say, is to blame the victim for not breaking the shackles and getting off the railroad tracks.

Nation's Business, a monthly magazine published by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, tested the thinking of its readers and then produced an article for its current issue that begins:

"President Carter's plan to curb inflation with voluntary wage and price constraints gets a no vote from readers ...

"Many are blunt in saying the government should look to its own deficit spending actions as a big first step in halting inflation."

In a report just issued, Merrill Lynch Economics concedes that some of the increasing inflation pressures are typical of the latter stages of most expansions. But the chief culprit, it says, is government action.

Legislated cost increases, such as a higher minimum wage and higher social security taxes, have contributed, it argues. So have farm price supports, the "expensive" coal settlement and the dollar's slide.

Yacht-Buying Move Killed By Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government won't be buying back the Sequoia, the presidential yacht ordered sold by President Carter because it was a costly frill.

A move by Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif. to have Congress repurchase the boat was killed Wednesday by the House Interior Committee.

Burton wanted the yacht, used by chief executives since the Hoover administration, to become a floating historical monument with public tours.

His plan was defeated on a voice vote after Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., noted the private owners of the yacht indicated they would ask at least $1 million.

Coca-Cola Plans To Manufacture New Drink In Soviet Union

By BEVERLY J. MOORE

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Coca-Cola Co. says it is building a plant in Russia to manufacture Samson, a high-protein drink made of cheese whey which it claims the government barred from U.S. schools because it would compete with milk.

Samson — which comes in orange, pineapple and mango — is already being produced and sold in three Latin American countries, but the company said it has no plans to market it in the United States.

Coke spokesman John White said this week the drink is made from cheese whey, a liquid abstracted from cheese. He said it contains 2 percent protein, whereas milk has about 3½ percent protein.

"The whey processing plant is being installed in the Soviet Union on a pilot basis to test the technical and economic factors involved" in the development of the beverage, White said. The plant was located in Russia, he said, because cheese whey is readily available there.

The plant, he said, was originally scheduled to begin operations this month but has met with technical delays.

Coca-Cola Chairman J. Paul Austin discussed plans to manufacture the drink in the Soviet Union at a meeting of business and economic writers in Atlanta earlier this week.

He told the group that Samson had been tested in five affluent and five ghetto schools in the Atlanta area several years ago.

Austin said after the drink was added to the diets of students from lower-income families, their learning curve, which had been low, rose to match that of the students from upper-income families.

White said in 1972 the firm tried to get Samson included in school lunch programs in the United States.

"A deputy assistant secretary of the Department of Agriculture said that public policy dictated that the government support the national dairy industry since milk was a proven nutritional food and plentiful," he said.

A spokesman for the Agriculture Department in Washington said, however, he could find no record of any such action.
